SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Seeds for Present Sowing.

There are a number of plants that in order to obtain the best stock it is necessary that the seeds be sown during January. Centurea gymnocarpa is slow in making it growth and to have nice plants for edging the beds of geraniums and other plants an early start is required. Vinca rosea should be sown in January to obtain good blooming stock at planting time. Lobelia should be sown by February 1 that fine stock plants may be had. If it is proposed to reset the smilax beds next year this is the time to get the seed started. Begonia Vernon and the other summer blooming varieties, if sown early, make fine plants by May, full of flowers. Gloxinas and Tuberous begonias can be sown at this time and blooming plants had for the coming summer. Many growers have given up the propagation of verbenas from cuttings and depend upon seedlings and to have a nicely branched plant by June 1 the seed should be sown the last of January. Another useful border plant is Pyrethrum aureum (Golden Feverfew) and this should be sown early to get good sized plants at bedding out time. There are not many canas these days, grown from seed, but anyone intending to grow them in that manner should sow the seeds in January. These seeds will germinate much more readily and evenly if soaked in water for 24 hours before planting. Asparagus plumosus and A. Sprengeri should be sown now when there is good heat in the greenhouses, and these seeds, like the canas, start much more evenly if soaked.

Spireas.

The spireas are always a very useful plant at Easter, but they are classed among the cheaper plants at that time, so should be grown in such a way that they do not occupy valuable space any more than possible. They should be brought into a cool house by the middle of January and until the foliage begins to grow can be placed along the edge of the walks if room is not available, but they must not be left standing in this location too long, for when the leaves begin to unfold they quickly draw toward the light and a plant growing to one side of the pot will be the result. So as soon as growth starts they should be placed on the bench in full light. They can be grown quite close together for some time, but when the foliage begins to touch that of the plants beside it they should be spaced out and given room enough for the plants to grow shapely. Spireas require a large quantity of water during their entire culture, especially those that are potted in as small a pot as possible, which is the general custom with all growers. To make the large specimens two or three clumps are planted in the same pot when started. These will make large plants for church decorations at Easter. If the plants are grown in a house which is to be fumigated by tobacco smoke they should either be removed from the house or well covered with papers; the foliage quickly burns when subjected to tobacco smoke and the plants are blemished.

Cyclamens.

"What can we do with the old cyclamen plants?" is a question often asked by many growers. As a rule the answer is, "Throw them away," for a plant can be grown to a 6-inch or 7-inch pot size in 16 months. That is, seed sown in September will produce such a plant for Christmas the following year, and it is uncertain how the old plants will carry through the spring and summer. There is a limited demand for cyclamen plants in larger sizes than 7-inch pots and they must of necessity bring a good figure to make them remunerative. The best way to handle them is after they are through blooming shake the old soil out and pot them up in fresh soil, two parts loam, one part well rotted manure and one part leaf mould, with a good sprinkling of sharp sand. If the soil is inclined to be heavy and sticky add more sand. They can frequently be potted in a pot a size smaller than that in which they have been growing. Place them in a cool temperature, that is, in a house from 45° to 50° at night, so as to encourage root action and slow growth. It used to be the custom to dry the bulbs off so that they lost all their foliage, and start them in the spring, but growers have found that our springs and summers are too hot and dry and it is often difficult to make the bulb, after it has been dried off, break a good luxuriant foliage, and it far better to keep the plant growing all the time. As the warm, sunny days of spring come in, the plants should be slightly shaded and as early as possible placed in cold frames and the glass shaded. The shade should not be made too heavy or the leaves will become drawn and an unshapely plant be the result. After the plants have begun to grow care should be taken that they do not become pot bound, but shifted into large sizes as soon as necessary. The watering of this stock will require constant study and attention. They should never become too dry and it is very easy to over-water, so they will require looking after very closely until a good growth has been encouraged.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

For the large plants for next winter's flowering, we are placing the cuttings in the propagating bench now. The plants were selected before Christmas and strong, healthy specimens taken for propagation. The flowers were removed and the plants given a warm location that the best vigor might be maintained. Any leaf showing bluish is discarded, only clean, healthy leaves being used from which to raise the young stock. A warm propagating bed is chosen for these plants and the stems are inserted in the sand deep enough so that about half an inch of the leaf is below the surface. They are kept moist and warm until they are rooted, when they are potted in 2½-inch pots and placed in a warm house and shifted along as required. This may seem a trifle early by many growers to start the propagating of these plants, but there is always demand for some large specimens and fine leaves are obtainable at this time and they root easily during January and February when the propagating bench is warm. The plants will require considerable care and attention during the heated spell of July and August, but with plenty of ventilation and a light shade, they are easily kept moving and make fine plants for the holidays.

THE RETAIL TRADE

John T. Muir's New Store.

A NEW STORE IN AN OLD LOCATION.

The coming year will see one great change in the retail branch of the business when one of the oldest firms in the city, that has for years been established in the residential part, will open a new store at a location that has been occupied by a floral store for more than twenty-five years. This has been brought about by the removal of the building on the corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street and the erection of a large modern building to be known as the Goddard building and the leasing of the corner store and basement by John T. Muir for ten years and five months at an annual rental of $9,000. Old-time florists and visitors will remember this as the location of M. F. Gallagher for many years. This will make this corner a great floral center, for within one block of this store will be found five of the larger down town florist concerns, and this magnificent new store will no doubt draw a large volume of trade to this district which will be to the benefit of all.

No, the thermometer is not at zero everywhere and those who have plants, bulbs and seeds to sell should remember that the demand starts early in many sections. The early advertisement gets there.

The store will be 17 by 31½ feet fronting on Monroe street, adjoining the entrance to the building, and beside the show windows on the street will have plate glass windows inside facing the hall of the building and also an entrance into this hall. There will also be a basement space of 2,111 square feet, with a height of 12 feet to ceiling, with a marble entrance leading from the street and a five-foot mahogany stairway from the center of the store. In the basement will be a cold storage room 12 by 20 feet finished in tile and plate glass under the sidewalk, and a receiving room of like size with an opening in the sidewalk for freight elevator for receiving the stock. The store and basement will both have a mosaic floor, and a balcony will be built in the store to match the fixtures. Mr. Muir's long experience in the trade and the admirable taste which he has already shown in the fittings of his other stores, are a guarantee that this store will have fixtures that will be thoroughly up to date and in perfect harmony so that it will be one of the finest stores for florist's use that can be fitted up.

The firm of Muir is one of the oldest in Chicago, having been founded by the late Samuel Muir, the son of a Scotch gardener, in 1865. The business was first located at Thirty-third and Kankakee streets, the latter now known as South Park avenue, where the greenhouse and residence were located, and the retail store was located at 121 Lake street, being burned out in the great fire of 1871. After the fire the store was on Congress street, between Michigan and Wabash avenues; this was later moved to Wabash avenue and then to 2205 Michigan avenue, which location was later sold to J. T. Anthony, who conducted it for many years. The greenhouses had in the meantime been erected at Fifty-fifth street and Center avenue. The location at 3530 Michigan avenue was acquired in 1883, and here Samuel Muir continued in business until his death in 1895. Greenhouses were erected for the cultivation of plants and a full line has always been produced, but the cultivation of flowers has never been attempted on any extensive scale, the firm being one of the large buyers on the market. The following year John T. Muir, the present proprietor and son of Samuel Muir, took charge of the estate and business. As the city grew and the residential district extended southward Mr. Muir, in 1906, erected a building on Grand boulevard and Forty-seventh street where he opened and fitted up a magnificent store, and has built up a flourishing business. The down town store when it is opened will give him three stores and will give him plenty to do to keep them in the splendid manner which has always characterized the business push of the firm.

John T. Muir, the present proprietor, was born March 26, 1869, at the residence on Thirty-third street, and grew up in the business. At the death of his father he assumed the management of the establishment and under his directing hand the business has grown annually. He is a most amiable man, of most prepossessing appearance, and has that happy faculty of placing both a customer or acquaintance at perfect ease. He is very popular with the trade and although a very busy man always has time to treat everyone he meets in a most courteous manner. He is an ardent mason, being a member of Garden City Lodge, Oriental Consistory and Medinah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., and also a member of the Hamilton Club. There is no doubt that in the new location Mr. Muir will attract the best trade in the city and with his knowledge of the business and his social affiliations is sure to succeed in his new location.

SAN MATEO, CALIF.—W. E. Eglinton, formerly in charge of the orchids at J. A. Carbone's, West Berkeley, is now with the MacRorie-MacLaren Co. This firm is one of the largest growers and importers of orchids in the state.

WATERBURY, CONN.—The barn of Saxe & Floto was destroyed by fire January 7 together with the contents, the loss aggregating about $5,000. It is supposed the fire caught from an oil heater in a wagon used for delivering flowers.

SOME OF THE MEN THEY'RE TALKING ABOUT.

Violets in Midwinter.

The grower who has brought his violets in good health up to the holidays and has been able to pick a good crop of flowers has much to be thankful for, and has half the battle of the year won. It has been said that if one-half of the violet plants housed in the fall produced a good crop of flowers they would not bring a price that would be remunerative, and we really believe, judging from what we have seen in the several houses we have is a question of soil, but we have seen good violets grown on almost all kinds of soil. The plants, it is well known, grow best in a soil rich in humus, the violets all naturally grow in a soil that is composed chiefly of leaf mold, and they grow better under cultivation in soil in which this is one of the great constituents. But we have seen violets in the best of soil become badly diseased. When the bright, warm days of the latter part of February and early March come in the violets begin to make active growth and we have seen plants that were badly diseased grow out of it entirely and produce a wonderfully good crop of flow-

A grower that invariably produced fine blooms had a splendid lot in early fall with a fine promise for the holidays, but about the first of December the plants began to show disease. He began picking the leaves, but it was impossible to keep up with the inroad of the disease, and when we visited the houses about two weeks before Christmas they were a sorry sight. Imagine our surprise, however, to find the houses run at a good rose temperature, and upon inquiry were told that he was trying an experiment. We again visited the houses the last of January, and found the plants in splendid health with a magnificent crop of blooms, and he smilingly stated that to him the experiment had been successful. The warm temperature had induced new root action and when this was accomplished the disease disappeared. We have never had occasion to try this ourselves, but we have always believed that should the necessity arise we would give it a good trial. V. G.

visited in years past, that this is so. There is probably no crop that is grown under glass today that is more disappointing or that requires more constant care, on account of its being so subject to disease and insects, than the violet. The grower of violets, when he successfully harvests a good crop, like the growers of many other flowers, thinks he is but getting his just deserts, but when disease strikes his crop or the plants will not produce good blooms, he comes to the conclusion that when he does succeed he really has much for which to be thankful.

There is plenty of work even now, however, on a good violet crop. Beside the picking and bunching there is much routine work that must be attended to. During the short days there will be but little watering especially if the plants cover the ground but there will be many leaves which show signs of decay and these should be removed. The plants should be gone over often and all these decaying or spotted leaves picked off. If the soil has become hard it should be scratched over and lightened up, and this should be done carefully and the plant disturbed as little as possible. Ventilation is one of the great factors in growing violets, they revel in good air, and the ventilators should be opened on every possible occasion. These are the simplest directions to the grower whose plants are in good condition and it really seems about all that is to be done.

But how about the grower who is badly afflicted with disease? This is an entirely different outlook. The cause of the violet disease has never been fully explained and no sure cure has ever been found. Many think it ers. We well remember an old violet grower telling us of a young gardener who had experimented almost all the winter trying to overcome the disease, coming to him early in March stating that he had at last found a remedy, and, the grower added, "He didn't know that it was the elegant spring that had made the cure."

We have always believed that the primary cause of violet disease was poor root action, and if anything can be done to start the roots into activity the disease will be conquered. It was our privilege some years ago to see an experiment tried, with success as far as we know, for it was at a distance and we visited the place but twice.

Fire at Danville, Ill.

A disastrous fire destroyed the boiler-house and greenhouses of the Danville Floral Co., Danville, Ill., on the morning of January 7, the head house being entirely consumed, as is shown in the illustration; part of the greenhouse burned and both of the stacks falling. It was an exceedingly cold night, the thermometer registering 16° below zero, and as the heating system was entirely ruined the entire plant, including all the stock, was frozen and was a total loss. Arrangements are in progress to rebuild the plant at as early a date as possible.

W. R. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.

The greenhouses of William Nicholson at Framingham, Mass., have been celebrated for years for the high class products produced, not only the carnations, which have acquired a national reputation, but for other flowers which are acknowledged to be of the finest grade shown in the Boston market. During the last year the place has passed into the hands of William R. Nicholson, the son, and the illustrations show the splendid mignonette and freesia which were being grown at this establishment last Christmas.

THE CARNATION.

Care of the Young Stock. ✓

Now when the holiday rush is over, it is time to start planning for next year's planting of carnations. If there is some empty bench space, it cannot be used to better advantage than for young carnation plants.

The time is past when cuttings can be potted late in the spring and still by the end of the year have the bal-

Give the plants plenty of air and keep a night temperature of about 45°. If a special house cannot be given the plants, at least put them in the coolest end of the house and where they will get as much sun as possible. The right kind of cuttings do not need any shading at this time of year, even when first potted.

If one will follow these directions, namely, use good soil, keep the plants cool, let them dry out moderately between waterings, and fumigate once or Maine.

I expect Poehlmann Bros. Company, Chicago, Ill., are growing more carnation plants than any other firm in existence today. The statistics of the number of men employed, the average cut and the coal consumed I have not at my command. A large quantity of this firm's output is sold on the Chicago market and considerable shipping to cities throughout the western states is also done. The best commercial varieties are pink, Enchantress; white, White Enchantress; yellow, not any; red, Beacon; crimson, not any. 30-inch stems and 3½-4-inch diameter for the flowers have been about the limit so far. A good treatise on the carnation is the book called the American Carnation, written by C. W. Ward.

Carnation Rust.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

We forward you a leaf of carnation that is diseased. Can you inform us what it is and what to do to remedy it?

B. C.

Canada.

The disease on the leaf forwarded is what is known as carnation rust. This disease was at one time very prevalent with carnation growers, but good culture and selection of stock has nearly eradicated it. Pick off the leaves affected and burn them. Be careful in watering—water or syringe only in the morning on bright days, so that the foliage will not be wet over night and keep a dry atmosphere in the houses. Give the plants all the air possible and maintain the proper temperature. If the plants are badly afflicted it would be preferable to obtain new, clean stock. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture has been found very efficacious. In propagating, take cuttings from stock known to be free of the disease. W.

ance on the right side of the ledger. With labor, coal and all the other things necessary for the production of carnations, higher, and the price of blooms about the same as ten years ago, the only way that one can come out ahead is to produce more blooms and better blooms than were formerly obtained from the same amount of glass. To do this the cuttings will have to be started in pots early, and the little extra expense it takes to grow the plants a month or two longer will more than pay for the trouble. Of course, we have better varieties at present than we had ten years ago, but the man that waits until spring to pot up his cuttings has no chance with the man that does this work earlier.

When potting the cuttings use soil from some good pasture that has been ploughed under long enough to get thoroughly rotten. Do not run the soil through a screen, but work it over with a shovel until it is good and fine. (Providing you have not a soil pulverizer, which, by the way, is a good thing to have.) This kind of soil is best without any fertilizer and would be my first choice. If this soil is not obtainable, old soil from the chrysanthemum benches can be used by those who grow these plants, providing it has been spaded over and thoroughly aired about a month before using, but under no circumstances use soil in which carnations have been growing. Use 2½-inch pots and plant firmly, so they will not fall over at the first watering. Let the first watering be a good one. After that it will be found that they will not dry out evenly, so do not let the water run with too much force out of the hose when touching up the dry ones. If this is not done, the water is liable to get where it is not wanted.

twice a month, he will, when the time comes to plant in the field, have a batch of cuttings that will well repay for all the extra care given them.

An Amateur at the Detroit Conventions.

I am perfectly well aware that all the scribes of horticultural note were at the Detroit conventions, and we will unquestionably hear from them all, to the extent, at least, of having the prize lists accurately given, but an event of such importance deserves much more than a mere tabulation of first, second and third prizes, and what an amateur saw may be of interest. The horticultural world was well represented from every section of the Union, and from the sister, Dominion of Canada. I met men from all over and even men from California told me that they were glad they came, that they had seen enough to recompense them for the long journey, but there were many unfortunate ones who did not get there and they will be scanning your pages with interest to know what happened, eagerly looking for some inside information, so to speak, and as many men have many minds some may be interested to have even the opinion of a mere amateur, and if a few of the experts would sit down for half an hour and pen a few of their innermost thoughts I am sure we would all be benefited. Such an event as this deserves much more than a mere passing notice. You of the horticultural press, are no doubt giving us your best, as you see it, and you are giving us a mighty big dollar's worth at that, but you can't see everything. Let the other fellow contribute his share. I will no doubt leave myself open to criticism, but I welcome that, and will assuredly benefit by it.

First, the carnations. The experts were heard to say that they were not up to the average. We will let the average rest, however, and tackle the individuals.

First of all there was Gorgeous, truly and superbly gorgeous. Peter Fisher can raise carnations but he surely must have called upon Patrick O'Mara to pick the name, for it aptly and fully describes it. One merely had to stand in the background and listen to the experts. They were all there, picking flaws, of course, but there were obviously no flaws to pick in Gorgeous. Honest Fisher supplied the only flaw himself, he says it is not as free as he would like. How could it be? Such size and stems cannot be produced as quickly as they can in Enchantress. Killarney roses sell at Christmas for 15 cents each, and American Beauties for $1 each. The difference is the American Beauties are worth it. This is a Beauty amongst carnations. Put it on the market, Peter, we need it, and the world will not condemn you for it. It is a lovely pink hard to describe, but might be said to partake of Aristocrat and Afterglow, or intermediate between them. The flower is large and full. The stem three to four feet long, strong and rigid enough to hold the large flower erect. The judges awarded this the gold medal and we all said "Amen."

Next came President J. A. Valentine, from Dick Witterstaetter, a magnificent and glorified May Day, a worthy namesake for the genial president of the C. S. A.,—may their sun never set.

The bronze medal was awarded to Woodenethe—rather a difficult job to find a name with so many e's in it—but I heard some of the wisecracs say that being translated it meant White Beauty. Then why didn't they call it White Beauty, instead of keeping the rest of us guessing? It is a white beauty, all right, and Charlie Totty may be justly proud of it. He was also awarded the Hitchings' sweepstakes silver cup in Section A, for this variety, a cup of considerable capacity, and if all accounts be true, it was filled several times before the New York delegation reached their destination.

Dorner's Rosette, a pure dark pink, won the silver medal, in the S. A. F. class. This looks like a real bread and butter sort, and will no doubt become very popular.

The bronze medal in the same class was won by E. G. Hill Co. with a very intense scarlet, under number, which looked well.

Traendly & Schenck, New York, exhibited a salmon sport of Enchantress, which I heard some one say was to be called Salmon Queen. It looked a queen, stronger, fuller and larger than the parent, and if it is a non-burster, as the exhibitors claim, it will be a great acquisition.

Benora was not shown as well as it was last year, but it was easily the best variegated sort there, and is sure to make good.

The scarlet Wm. Eccles, shown by the Elmsford Nurseries, Elmsford, N. Y., which won the first prize in the 100 bloom class for red or scarlet, looked like a winner. It is of good size, fine form and color, and has a fine stem. It should fill a want in this color. St. Nicholas, also in this color, looks like a bread winner.

Seedling 23, shown by T. F. Brown, Greenfield, Mich., and awarded a preliminary certificate, struck one as the prettiest thing in a baby pink that I have ever seen. It is not large, but its color and form is grand and it is sure to be heard from later.

Poor old Enchantress was not much in evidence. Gloriosa and White Wonder seemed to fill the place, so long occupied by this wonderful carnation. This does not exhaust the list, but those mentioned appealed most to me. If I have left out anything of note I will be glad to let the other fellow fill in the deficiency.

The rose show was grand, and for excellence of quality and display outdid the carnations 50 per cent. It was a happy thing the conventions were together, they made a show worth while. Such displays as were put up by A. N. Pierson, Inc., and A. Farnwald were an inspiration, and the horticultural world is under a debt of gratitude to those men for their zeal. Such exhibits can hardly repay them in dollars and cents, but as Benjamin Hammond aptly put it, "Such a profession never degraded any man," but instead, tends to lift him to a higher plane. May the consolation of this thought be in part their reward.

There was not much new in roses. Killarney was queen, "The poetry of Ireland in a bouquet of flowers." Such color we seldom see, especially those from W. H. Elliott of Madbury, N. H.

Lady Hillingdon was fine, a grand yellow, but her ladyship will have to travel some yet. Sunburst was there, and looks as if it may supersede the other in a very short time. Princeton was also shown, a beautiful rose, partaking of the Bridesmaid color, but larger and fuller. If this is a free grower the other pinks will have to take a back seat.

This was not a chrysanthemum show, but they were there, a very creditable vase of Helen Newberry, a pure white pompon of fine form, which Fred Pautke says is just right for Thanksgiving and Christmas. One of our wholesale men was heard to say, "Can we ever shake them? If this continues we'll have to get out of business." Be that as it may, there is room for Helen yet, and she will become more popular when she is better known.

The meetings of both societies were well attended, and the interest unflagging. The only thing that struck me was the lack of discussion. More time should be given to this, and even some one appointed before hand to set the ball a-rolling. Robert Pyle gave us a very interesting lecture, illustrated by stereopticon views, on a trip to European rose gardens. After the expense and trouble this gentleman must have had it hardly would seem fair to criticize him, but to a mere amateur, something seemed lacking. If we had been shown fewer gardens, hedges, dwellings, etc., and more individual flowers, it would have been much more instructive. For example, if instead of seeing the jury standing over the Jonkeer J. L. Mock rose and examining it he had shown us a well grown plant with the flower in natural color we would have learned considerably more. We were all itching to know what they looked like, and I am sure it would have been a better advertisement.

Mayor Breitmeyer was invincible; he was everywhere; the right man in his proper place, and deserves the thanks of all. The Detroit Florists' Club did themselves proud and there was not a murmur of discontent from anyone. In such moments, and in such company, one feels proud to be connected in even a small way with such whole-hearted hospitality.

AMATEUR.

Pansies.

During the month of January is the best time to sow pansy seed for culture inside. While the great majority of these plants are grown from seed sown in early autumn and wintered outside in cold frames, yet often the germination of seed in the fall is poor, and the winter has been unusually severe which may result in serious loss. While the pansy will stand considerable cold weather, yet it can be frozen hard enough to kill it, and during very extremely cold weather will require protection of some kind. To guard against all loss it is oftentimes best to have another lot of plants coming on to replace any that may be killed. They can be grown on and take up but little room, until early spring, when it will be known whether they will be required or not. Seed sown during January will germinate readily and as soon as large enough should be transplanted to shallow flats about one and a half inches apart, and can be grown on shelves near the glass in a cool house and as early as possible transplanted to cold frames outside and fine spring stock can be obtained.

AUBURN, N. Y.—Fire under the office of the greenhouse of Dobbs & Son caused a small loss January 11, which was covered by insurance.

Roses in the Middle West.

Paper prepared by Irwin Bertermann for the convention of the American Rose Society at Detroit, Mich., January 11, 1912.

The practical theory of the production of roses is so often ably taken care of that it is well to note the standard a "Rose for every home and a bush for every garden," also the relationship between those who are so nobly laboring with the production of nature's wares and those who are benefiting mankind and themselves in using roses in their dooryards and adorning the homes of the middle west.

From the time the Wild Brier of Indiana graced the log-cabin of the settler until the limestone mansion became arched with Tausendschon, Dorothy Perkins and other ramblers has the rose held the highest place in the hearts of the people, for, as Jim Riley says so fittingly,

"The world is full of roses,
And the roses full of dew;
The dew is full of heavenly bliss
That drips for me and you."

His home in Lockerbie street is made more attractive by an old rose of the climbing variety which has been there for years and which is watched over carefully. Unfortunately many of the better kinds of roses do not withstand our climate as on either coast or in the south, but when additional care and attention are given, the results are most gratifying. Those varieties which flourish are well known and thousands of any new introduction which promises to withstand the climate are easily disposed of.

It is not the purpose to treat lightly on a subject of such commercial importance, and the highest compliment which might be paid your organization is the recognition of the greatness and goodness made manifest through your work in the heightening and purifying of American citizenship. Articles number one and two in the aim of the American Rose Society are not the least important in the production of either commercial or new varieties.

Article one reads: To increase the general interest in the cultivation and to improve the standard of excellence of the rose for all the people.

Article two: To foster, stimulate and increase the production in every possible way of improved varieties of the rose suitable to our American climate and requirements.

The people are always awaiting new roses and the space is wonderfully close between the distant public and he who daily watches over his houses of roses for their ultimate consumption. Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mrs. Taft, Lady Hillingdon, and even Sunburst through the press, have already won their way with the rose buyers. The good qualities of each are well known by regular patrons. Mrs. Ward keeps well, Mrs. Taft is an unusual pink most successful for table decorating, and Lady Hillingdon with its coppery shades is most suitable for the corsage. A full size cut of Sunburst in an Indianapolis paper this fall brought hundreds to see it, and many still inquire at that store for the new rose seen in the picture.

Spring flower shows argue well for roses and those who produce them. The writer, nor you, have not forgotten the wonderful display of indoor and outdoor varieties at the National Exhibition. The stimulus given the flower buyers in the vicinity of Boston was undoubtedly a lasting one. Chicago has undertaken an exhibition of this kind, as have several other cities, and the opportunity for educational work is great. The spring show should do more for the rose than the autumn ones did for the chrysanthemum, as they come at a time when the flower buyers may view elegant displays of forced roses and in turn have the same varieties planted in their gardens.

Your able secretary, Benjamin Hammond, in a recent letter stated: While in Indianapolis I saw many beautiful homes and no slums. How could there be slums with Hills, Dorners, Veseys, Coles and many others in close proximity to the Hoosier capital, who are putting forth a tremendous lot of energy in producing all that is beautiful for a community where there is plenty of room and gardens are plentiful?

An era of small roses is at hand. The large varieties fill a big place admirably, but let the rosarians become more interested in the smaller types such as Bon Silene. There is much need for them in corsage work, in baskets and for debutante bouquets where the small rose has a greater charm than larger kinds. A forcing rose bearing its flowers in clusters for winter use would be a wonderful addition to look forward to.

When our section of the land has reached the advancement of rose growing noticeable in France, Germany and England, when the love of them in the gardens is as great, and when the rose may be seen growing in all vantage spots and given the same enlightened attention, we will have ac-completed a wonderful and lasting work. America is a big country, with varying conditions, but there is a small portion not adaptable for some variety.

The large commercial firms with their millions of feet of glass, having beautiful stores in the larger cities as an outlet, are a stage upon which the rose plays the leading role. Exquisite baskets arranged with airy laces, bridal bouquets in elegant array and artistic decorations all show the possibilities of the indoor flowers, and such work may be seen by anyone at any time; but beautiful arches, groups and conventional outdoor designs are not so common a feature, nor is it nearly as probable for a beautifully trained bush to find itself 'mid the thousands and in the slums of the larger cities. It devolves, therefore, greatly upon the rose exhibitions to show the public what may be done in gardening effects and in helping beautify outdoor surroundings.

The advancement of the rose from season to season and year to year is not so discernible, but a retrospection of twenty, shows what has been accomplished and suggests vividly what earnest endeavor may do.

The scope of the American Rose Society is a broad and useful one, as it encourages not only the production of roses but goes further in endeavoring to teach through exhibitions and example, a love of them.

A Legendary Plant.

A pretty plant and its legend is Ramonda Pyrenaica, a tiny violet-like plant from the Pyrenees, which thrives only in entire shade, in barren, moist, rocky soil, though its leaves will not bear water. The plant forms a little clump three to four inches high, surmounted by five or six bright violet flowers, with orange stamens. Its legend dates back to the Song of Roland as follows: "When the great Charlemagne, 'the emperor with the flowering beard,' withdrew to France from Spain after fighting the Saracens for 12 years, he left the command of his rear guard to his nephew, Roland the Brave. Hardly had he crossed the mountains when he heard, thrice repeated, a long moan. He assembled his counts, dukes and barons and asked them its cause. Some thought it the moaning of the tempest, some a shepherd's horn, but the emperor, led by a sad presentiment, believed it the desperate call of Roland, and turned back. Arriving in the dark defiles of Roncesvalles, what was his despair to find Roland, his twelve peers and the entire rear guard of twenty thousand fearless knights, pitilessly slain by an ambuscade of Saracens, who from the rocks above had overwhelmed the French with boulders and missiles, against which there was no defense. The emperor returned sad-hearted to France, but in the black ravine which the sun never penetrated and where no plant had ever grown, in the 'sombre vale of Roncesvalles,' sprang from the blood of the twenty thousand warriors a little plant with purple-violet flowers that for centuries bore the name of Rolanda." Linnæus renamed it in the last century Ramonda after a French naturalist.—Le Maître d'Horticulture.

MINEOLA, N. Y.—Two large greenhouses on the estate of Benjamin Stern were destroyed by fire January 14, the loss being estimated at $10,000.

PEOPLE WE KNOW.

A. L. Vaughan.

Announcement was made this week that the firm of Vaughan & Sperry, one of the prominent wholesale houses of Chicago, had dissolved, Mr. Sperry having disposed of his interest to A. L. Vaughan, who will continue the business.

Among the men in this country in floricultural pursuits there are few who are better known to florists than A. L. Vaughan of Chicago, for in his short and busy life, covering less than 50 years, he has traveled across the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and visited the several greenhouse proprietors at their establishments and built up an acquaintance that extends into almost every state in the Union. Before this his love for travel and adventure had taken him into many sections and he has thereby acquired not only an intimate acquaintance with those in the trade and their wants, but also with the country at large.

A. L. Vaughan, Lon Vaughan, as he is familiarly known, was born at Bastrop, La., June 1, 1864, where he spent his boyhood, and at the age of 18 he started out, spending one year as clerk in a country store at Mer Rouge, La., and the following year made a contract to take charge of a plantation supply store near the Arkansas line. Having saved a little money he determined to see a little of the world, and decided to attend the Centennial Exposition held in New Orleans in 1884. This gave him his first ride on a railroad train, which was so exhilarating that after seeing the exposition he continued his journey to Jacksonville, Fla., where he spent the remainder of the winter, the stay being made so long principally for the reason that he had no money with which to purchase passage home. While here he sold pianos and organs, and when commissions were slow in coming incidentally sawed wood on occasions. He also developed histrionic aspirations, and had hopes of joining a theatrical troupe which was embarking for Cuba, but this troupe was lost in a gale on their voyage to the island about May 1 of that year.

At last, getting money enough together to go back to Louisiana, he went home with many stories of adventure, but rather short in cash, and served as deputy sheriff for Morehouse Parish until July 6, 1886. At that time he thought he would see the northern part of the country, so went to Grand Rapids, Mich., where he took a night course in stenography under a private teacher, and secured a position with the Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R. under the vice-president and treasurer. During the year 1888, while in the store of Henry Smith, he saw a catalogue of J. C. Vaughan's, the Chicago seedsman. The name attracted him, so he picked it up and looked it over and asked Henry about the concern. From what he learned he immediately had visions of exploring Chicago and entering the seed business under Mr. Vaughan, and after the passage of a letter or two secured a position. He came to Chicago and met the seedsman at 148 West Washington street, who after looking him over, quickly took him over to see E. H. Hunt, who had charge of the seed and wholesale cut flower store at 88 State street.

Shortly after this E. H. Hunt bought out the cut flower interest and moved to 76 Lake street, where after a few months learning the business, A. L. Vaughan started to introduce E. H. Hunt to the retail trade of the middle west. After two years' service with Mr. Hunt he again entered the employ of J. C. Vaughan and traveled from New York to San Francisco until the fall of 1887, when he entered into partnership with Chas. W. McKellar and E. F. Winterson under the firm name of Vaughan, McKellar & Winterson, which continued until March 1, 1899, when he sold his interest to his partners and entered the employ of Hagermann & Meyer of New York. This firm he represented until 1901 when he returned to the store of E. H. Hunt, who was then at 76 Wabash avenue, with whom he continued until 1904.

At this time taking a vacation he went south to visit his old home, intending to locate and go into business at Morgan City, but not liking the prospects returned to Chicago and formed a partnership with Fred Sperry as Vaughan & Sperry, and located at 61 Wabash avenue, and May 1, 1908, the firm moved into their present quarters at 161 North Wabash avenue, where a thriving business has been done up to the present time, both in the local and shipping trade. Mr. Sperry's health having failed during the last year it became necessary for him to move to a more congenial climate to recover his health, and Mr. Vaughan bought his interest January 20 of this year. The business will, however, continue under the firm name until February 1, when it will be known as the A. L. Vaughan Co.

Thomas Pegler.

Thomas Pegler, president of the Gardeners' and Florists' club of Boston, was born in Brighton, Sussex, England, and in his youth received a thorough training in horticultural work, both on private and commercial places. Leaving England in 1890, he secured a position as gardener for Lord Strathcoma at Winnipeg, Manitoba. From here his next venture was in British Columbia where he established himself as a landscape gardener and made good and located for two and a half years, but the climate not agreeing with him and being in poor health, he came east to Minneapolis, Minn., where he secured a position with R. J. Mendenhall. His next move was to the far east, taking charge of the estate of Anson Phelps Stokes, Lenox, Mass. In 1896 he came to Boston, leasing the greenhouses of Walter Butler at Readville, but these houses were soon given up on account of the railroad taking the land for new tracks.

He entered the Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Association, better known as the Boston Flower market, in 1903 as a salesman, disposing of the stock of growers who forwarded it to him at the market. In this capacity he has been very successful, being considered one of the best salesmen there, always looking out for the interests of both his customers and consignors, and among the latter he includes growers who are renowned for the high quality of stock they produce.

One of his largest carnation consignors being S. J. Goddard of Framingham. His thorough training stands him in good stead, for he knows the value of the stock and anything new in the market is likely to be found on one of the stalls where he and his two assistants are always busy.

He has a most sunny disposition, is a thorough optimist, always seeing the bright side of everything. And he has endeared himself to a host of friends in all lines of the trade, by whom he is always known as "Tom." He is a member of several of the Masonic bodies and of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and we feel that the club has acted wisely in making him its executive head for he is one of the coming men of the trade. Accompanied by his wife, he made a trip to Europe last summer, visiting the principal cities and noting the different crops and methods of doing business on the other side of the Atlantic. He is still in the prime of life and good health, and good luck is the wish of all his friends and

MAC.

John Morley.

SUPT. OF PARKS, SAN DIEGO, CALIF.

The many friends of John Morley, late superintendent of the Los Angeles park system, will be pleased to hear of his appointment to a similar post in San Diego. The post is an important one as San Diego is preparing a very elaborate system and much of this work has to be done before the opening of the exposition there in 1915. Mr. Morley is the right man in the right place. His long experience under the peculiar climatic conditions of Southern California and his wide knowledge of the species and varieties of trees and shrubs that will flourish here will stand him in good stead in his new position—a position that it would have been a great mistake to have given to an eastern man, or at least to a man with eastern experience only.

Mr. Morley is a naturalized American, having been born in Nottingham in England. He came to this country in 1885 and lived for a time in Massachusetts, gaining experience in several places around Boston. In 1887 he came to Los Angeles and after filling several other places he was appointed assistant superintendent of the parks in 1902. In 1904 he was made superintendent and this place he filled until 1910. His good work in the parks here speaks for itself and will remain a monument to his skill as a landscape gardener of the highest order. All will join in wishing him every possible success in his new and important charge.

A MUCH SHORTER SUPPLY.

To the observer the market is an enigma. The weather has been glorious, bright, warm sunshine during the day that has brought the temperature above the freezing point and has caused the snow to melt on the southern slopes and exposures. Still the flowers do not seem to be coming in any stronger, in fact, appearances are that the supply has dropped somewhat, especially in roses and carnations. The call for flowers is getting better and is again about normal, and the shipping business in flowers and greens is good. The supply of roses has fallen off considerably in all sizes and varieties, and as a result during the past week the offerings in this line have been cleaned up in a hurry. In carnations good stock is cleaning up nicely and much more could be used if it was on hand. In bulbous stock some lines are good while others are otherwise. Yellow and white narcissus while good still, move slowly. Jonquil offerings are still very limited but sell nicely. The same is true of tulips, but the stems of these are not very long as yet. The freesia offerings are elegant. Some liliun auratum were added to the list last week. These as well as longiflorum and Harrisii and callas are finding a very good market. Miscellaneous offerings include violets, lily of the valley and orchids. The single violets, Princess of Wales, sell well. The New York double violet market, considering all, has been fair. Good lily of the valley sells well, while seconds move slowly. The supply of orchids seems adequate. Sweet peas are becoming quite a factor, the supply, while not very large as yet, is regular and buyers can depend upon finding them. The demand for decorative and fancy greens of all kinds is good.

NOTES.

Geo. Murphy, the popular superintendent of the Flower Market, died at his home on Price Hill, Monday morning, January 22, at the age of 47. He was born and raised in upper Delhi. For a period of about eight years, part of the time with Chas. Murphy, part of the time alone, he conducted greenhouses there. He sold these when he accepted the position he held at the time of his decease. He leaves a widow and four children.

Wm. Murphy was very busy the early days of this week shipping Princess of Wales violet cuttings.

P. J. Olinger went to New Castle January 22 on business and expected to remain until Thursday.

Joseph Goldman has the sympathy of his many friends. His mother died recently.

C. E. Critchell was the first in the market this season to offer Dutch hyacinths.

Visitors: W. G. Matthews and wife of Dayton, O. H.

Philadelphia Notes.

At the recent automobile show in this city, commercial section, one of the features, was a five-ton Packard auto truck or van with the name H. A. Dreer, Inc., on the side. This will be of great assistance to their delivery service and is the first of three similar cars which will, before long, enable them to be independent of trains or boats for local or even quite long distance delivery, as it is proposed to send goods as far as New York in these cars when it is found best for quick delivery.

Robert Craig was laid up last week with a severe cold, but is out again. He is much pleased with the forced circulation at the new Norwood establishment which enabled them to keep the houses at a good temperature during the coldest weather of two weeks ago.

W. K. Harris is getting the large stock of azaleas in shape and many choice plants are seen just right for the market. Golden Spur daffodils are also a feature, a large house being filled and kept full until the southern stock comes in.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. appear to move enormous lots of flowers daily. Their branches in New York and Washington keep them in touch with a very wide market and has greatly increased their shipping trade.

Robert Riehs, who has been with his mother at Fifth and Girard avenue, has purchased the business of Mrs. Clause at Germantown and Norris streets, where he will carry on a retail establishment.

W. J. Baker is still confined to his bed as the result of the unfortunate slip on the icy street, which shook him up very badly. It is hoped he will soon be out again.

A splendid lot of cyclamen are now to be seen at the Robert Craig Co. establishment. Plants that did not quite make the holidays are full of flowers and very showy.

Joseph Heacock says they had but little trouble to keep up the temperature, but it played bob with the coal piles.

K.

Berger Bros. say they have no trouble to sell all of the Princeton roses they can get.

The Leo Niessen Co. are handling choice auratum and other Japan lilies.

OBITUARY.

Lars Eric Lindgren.

Lars Eric Lindgren, one of the foremost horticulturists and pioneer of modern horticulture in Sweden, died at his home, Bjorknas, township of Ronninge, November 17, aged 84 years. Eric Lindgren started in his chosen profession when a young man and by unbounded energy reached the very top of horticulture in his native land. In 1863 he was appointed director of the horticultural department of the Royal Agricultural Experiment Station, a school for gardeners, which position he held until 1900, when he retired from active duty. His traveling abroad enabled him to keep in touch with modern ideas and he introduced a number of valuable plants.

He was an author of rare ability and he wrote a number of books on gardening and also published a trade journal, "Tidning for Tradgardsodlare," for forty years, which ceased publication when he retired. In recognition of his great services in advancing horticulture, he was made Knight of the Order of Vasa by the government, being the first gardener to receive such a distinction.

Thomas Galvin.

Thomas Galvin, a florist of Newport, R. I., and one who has helped materially to make that city beautiful by his work as a horticulturist, died January 13 of pneumonia, aged 85 years. He was born in Ireland February, 1826, and came to America at the age of 10 years. He first entered business in New York, then going to Boston, and 60 years ago settled in Newport, locating on Spring street, where he has lived ever since, and erected his greenhouse plant. He has had charge of the grounds of the Casino and was the designer of many of the beautiful dinner decorations at this celebrated place. He was twice married. From the first union six children were born, three of whom are living. His second wife was Mary Nicholson of New York, who with two daughters survive him. Thomas F. Galvin, the florist of Boston, was a nephew. The funeral was held in St. Mary's church, of which he was one of the original members, January 16.

Andrew Deisler.

Andrew Deisler, a florist of Newark, N. J., died at his home January 10. He was a native of Newark, where he had resided all his life, and was a member of the Masons, the Orion Singing Society and several other organizations. He is survived by a widow and son. The funeral services were held January 13 and interment was in Fairmount cemetery.

Society of American Florists.

At the special meeting of the board of directors of the Society of American Florists, held in Detroit, Mich., January 11, there were present President Richard Vincent, Jr., Vice-President August F. Poehlmann, Secretary John Young, Treasurer Wm. F. Kasting and Directors W. N. Rudd, E. Allan Pierce, Harry A. Bunyard, C. H. Totty, John A. Evans and George Asmus. The invitation of the New York Florists' Club to hold the National Flower Show in New York in 1913 was accepted and the matter was turned over to the National Flower Show committee to carry out the necessary details. The board also authorized the offering of three silver and three bronze medals to be awarded at the International Exposition in London for plants and flowers of American origin, and the committee appointed by President Asmus to have charge of local arrangements in Chicago was continued with the name of George Asmus added. The committee now is August F. Poehlmann, J. C. Vaughan, W. N. Rudd and George Asmus.

The report of August F. Poehlmann, chairman of the committee on hall for the convention, was accepted and the committee empowered to lease the Coliseum building on the terms mentioned. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

National Association of Gardeners.

The executive committee of the National Association of Gardeners held its first meeting since the organization obtained its charter at the Herald Square hotel, New York City, on Friday, January 12. Although the weather was such as to keep most gardeners near their establishments, a good attendance was present at the meeting.

President Logan called the session to order at 3:30 o'clock and after the routine business was disposed of the invitation from Chairman Charles H. Totty, of the National Flower Show Committee, inviting the National Association to co-operate with the Society of American Florists in the holding of the international show to be held in New York City in 1913 was acted on and a resolution was passed pledging the support of the National Association to the international show, it being decided that the National Association would not hold any exhibition of its own during the coming year and that its members should make every effort to produce fitting exhibits for the big show.

The invitation from President Sim, of the American Sweet Pea Society, was next acted on and it was decided to hold a summer meeting in Boston at the time of the sweet pea show, as it is expected that many National Association members will be present at that time in competition for the liberal prizes which are offered by the Sweet Pea Society in the private gardeners' classes.

President Logan appointed the following committees: Essay committee, William Kleinheinz, Ogonts, Pa., and Robert Tyson, Convent, N. J. Exhibition committee, Xavier E. E. Schmitt, Philadelphia, Pa., and James Bell, New York, N. Y. The duties of these committees are to provide suitable exhibits and papers at the executive meetings of the organization, which it was decided will be held quarterly. The next meeting will be held in Philadelphia at Horticultural Hall April 15.

Among those present were Thomas W. Logan, Jenkintown, Pa.; John Shore, Harrison, N. Y.; John F. Huss, Hartford, Conn.; William Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa.; Carl Schaeffer, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.; James Bell, New York, N. Y.; Xavier E. E. Schmitt, Philadelphia, Pa.; Ed. C. Trethewey, Yonkers, N. Y.; Robert Tyson, Convent, N. J.; Wm. E. Maynard, New York, N. Y.; T. J. Kempton, Baychester, N. Y., and Pater Duff, Orange, N. J.

Horticultural Society of New York.

A meeting and exhibition of orchids and carnations will be held by the Horticultural Society of New York at the American Museum of Natural History, Saturday, January 27, and other interesting plants and flowers will be welcome. Schedules are ready for distribution and will be sent on application to the secretary. The orchid being one of the features of this exhibition, there will be a meeting of the orchid section at 3 p. m., followed at 4 p. m. by the general meeting of the society, which will include a lecture by C. A. Darling on "Grapes and Grape Culture." The exhibition will be opened from one to five o'clock.

The last meeting of the society was held December 16, and, in spite of the inclemency of the weather, was well attended. The attraction was a lecture by John K. M. L. Farquhar on "Gardens in Italy." Mr. Farquhar presented the subject in his usual interesting style, illustrating his remarks with numerous lantern slides, tracing the history of these gardens from their beginnings up to the present time, and showing the impress which they had made upon horticulture in various parts of the world. The lecture hall was filled with an appreciative audience. GEORGE V. NASH, Sec'y.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

President Charles H. Totty has appointed the following as the executive committee: Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.; David F. Roy, Marion, Mass., and William Turner, Oceanic, N. J.

Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., offer the following special premium for the society's exhibition for 1912: Best 12 blooms Chrysanthemum Manhattan shown in one vase on long stems; first prize, $15.00; second prize, $10.00. Open to private gardeners only. CHAS. W. JOHNSON, Secy.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

The ladies attending the Rose and Carnation conventions held at Detroit, Mich., last week, both visiting and local, were entertained at the Temple Theatre Thursday evening, January 11. Afterward all went to the Cadillac hotel and were served a luncheon. Friday afternoon, January 12, Mrs. E. A. Fetters and Mrs. Chas. H. Maynard held an informal reception at the home of Mrs. Fetters, 56 Burlingame avenue, at which there were over 35 in attendance.

At A Disadvantage.

"I suppose you miss your boy while he is at college." "Yep," replied Farmer Cornfossel. "I dunno what I will do without him. He got the live stock so they wouldn't move unless he give 'em the college yell, an' I can't remember it."

STOCK SCARCE.

For the past week the stock in the market has sold readily, bringing good prices. Roses at the present time are exceptionally scarce in all colors. The weather conditions have been very unfavorable for all the growers and the stock does not seem to make any progress, but as the extreme cold weather has eased up the market conditions will no doubt take a turn in the near future. Carnations are selling readily, the greater demand being for white and Enchantress. Violets also have suffered on account of weather conditions. There are enough greens to fill all orders. Stevia is practically out of the market.

NOTES.

Holton & Hunkel Co. is cutting a very fine line of stock with Killarney and White Killarney of A 1 quality. This firm is cutting heavily in lily of the valley and the quality is of the highest. Fred Holton says that business is very good and that the demand is more than equal to the supply with the possible exception of violets which are arriving in large quantities.

C. C. Pollworth Co. are cutting some fine carnations at the present time which are being disposed of readily.

M. A. McKenney & Co. are contemplating buying an automobile for delivery purposes.

R. Preuss reports business very good with lots of funeral work.

Chas. Menger is the possessor of a fine automobile delivery.

Kennedy, son of W. A. Kennedy, joined the benedicts last week.

The bowling scores this week were:

Holton	135	169	132	Zweifel	130	126	166
Pohl	126	170	166	Nobos	153	139	136

STOCK GROWING SCARCE.

The dark and cold weather has caused a shortage of stock. Carnations toward the end of the week were very scarce, and roses were easily cleaned up. Narcissi and Harrisii lilies are sought for funeral work. Violets and sweet peas are holding up well. Tulips, Paper White narcissi, jonquils and Roman hyacinths are the bulbous stock offered.

NOTES.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. are out with their trade catalogue. It is up-to-date and is well thought of by the trade in general. Copies of the same have been mailed in the city and adjoining territory.

The Florists' Union elected the following three delegates to represent them at the main body of Central Trade and Labor Unions: Julius Schaffer, Henry Duernberg and William Herdt.

George Wagner has returned to the employ of Grimm & Gorly after an absence of six weeks. Every one was glad to see him back and pleased that he is restored to health.

Fred Ryan Floral Co. are moving from their present location to Fourteenth street, where they will have a new and more up-to-date store.

George Walbart has a fine supply of blooming plants and his assortments of cut flowers are of the best.

C. Young & Sons Co. will have the decorations at the second annual Imperial Ball.

Morris L. Levine, representing Lion & Co. of New York, was with us this week.

E. P. Cykowski has opened up a store on Tenth and Cass avenue.

George H. Angermueller is receiving nice shipments of yellow tulips.

W. F.

Wichita, Kans.

The weather for the past three weeks has been the chief object of concern among the florists in this vicinity. Zero and worse for days at a time made steady work for heating plants, and light business for the stores. Funeral work constituted the bulk of the demand, and for the past two weeks has been cleaning up stock in fair shape. The weather during the past week has got back to normal again and trade is also improving. The snow blockade, which accompanied the severe weather, interfered some with the filling of retail shipping orders. The lettuce growers complain that it completely blocked business for them and that considering the extra fuel expense and the restricted sales, they stand to lose money on the midwinter crop.

NOTES.

Quality of stock coming to this market is very good. F. Kuechenmeister is getting some fine violets. These are from a stock which he has worked up from a plant which attracted his attention several years ago. He has installed fuel oil burners for his greenhouses.

The sympathy of the trade is with Geo. Bixby in the loss he sustains by the death of his wife, which recently occurred.

W. H. Culp & Co. and Chas. P. Mueller have both provided motor cycles for their quick cut flower deliveries.

C. P. Mueller is showing fine carnations and callas and some well flowered plants of orchids in his windows.

W. I. CHITA.

FITCHBURG, MASS.—George Leland of Keene, N. H., has purchased six acres of land on Ridge road and in the spring will erect greenhouses which will be devoted exclusively to the growing of carnations.

TRADE RESUMES NORMAL CONDITIONS.

The cold weather has passed on and business has resumed its normal condition. There is an abundance of stock on the market and much of it is of fine quality. Nearly all the retailers are having many calls for dinner and luncheon decorations and much fine stock is being used for these purposes.

NOTES.

On a recent visit to the greenhouses of the bureau of plant industry, Department of Agriculture, we were much interested in the carnations. It is the object of this bureau to give its own and other new varieties a thorough test. To this end they have a number of very promising seedlings of their own production as well as a number of plants of nearly all the new varieties that have recently been disseminated by commercial florists. Among these were noticed Princess Charming, White House, Pennsylvania, Apple Blossom, Wanoka, E. G. Gillet, Pocahontas, Pink Delight, Dorothy Gordon, Mrs. Clarence Mackay, Gloriosa, Admiration, White Wonder and Norwood. Florists visiting Washington would do well to call at the greenhouses of the bureau where the different varieties are grown side by side and their merits judged. The pink seedling, which originated with the bureau several years ago, has been named Mrs. Helen Taft. Quite a number of plants of it are being grown this season and it looks very promising to us. It is a healthy grower and prolific and the color is good and should attract the attention of the trade. The Enchantress types, Mrs. C. W. Ward and White Perfection, are also grown.

The monthly meeting of the club was held in the hall, 1214 F street, on the night of January 2. Considering the very bad weather the attendance was very fair. The feature of the meeting was H. A. Huston's lecture on "Food for Flowers." E. J. Reynolds was elected and M. J. McCarter proposed for membership. Among the interesting visitors was C. B. Knickman of McHutchison & Co., New York. We are always glad to see Knickman, his honest smile is inspiring.

A good way for a retail florist to attract attention to his business is to put new ideas into practical, striking and tasteful form. For a dinner decoration which he recently executed, Geo. H. Cooke had the ice cream served at each plate in an American Beauty rose. Well opened blooms were taken and the heart petals removed. The outer petals were turned down for effect. If this has ever been done before we have not heard of it.

Mayberry & Hoover executed a fine dinner decoration January 12, at the home of John Hays Hammond. The occasion was a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Hammond to Hon. Whitelaw Reid, ambassador to Great Britain, who is now on a visit to the home folks. Many fine American Beauty roses were used in the decoration.

Features of the market are the fine stocks Geo. H. Cooke is receiving from the Leo. Niessen Co., Philadelphia. This is very noticeable in the Killarney and White Killarney roses and snapdragons. All of these stocks are of an exceptionally fine quality.

W. R. Smith is now at his home in the Botanical Gardens. We regret to state that his condition does not improve, though he is under the care of a skillful physician and a trained nurse.

Z. D. Blackstone's new show windows are looking very handsome these days. Mr. Blackstone is not too stingy to put enough flowers in his windows to make them attractive.

At A. B. Garden's range large numbers of Rambler and Dorothy Perkins roses are being brought out of cold storage and started.

George C. Shaffer finds his new auto delivery a great aid to business; incidentally it is good advertising.

F. H. Kramer will have his usual large stock of good things for Easter.

TRADE SHOWS IMPROVEMENT.

The weather has warmed up a little and business shows quite an improvement over last week, and quite a number of social affairs are being booked for the near future. A fine supply of spring flowers is a welcome addition to the market, as is evidenced by the quantities of these flowers disposed of. American Beauties are scarce and other roses are none too plentiful. Carnations are not moving out as well as expected.

NOTES.

A. W. Smith Co. are cutting a large number of very fine cattleyas and they are being used effectively in window displays.

All the Sheridan public schools were closed January 16 in respect for Mrs. E. J. McCallum, who was buried that day.

G. & J. W. Ludwig state that funeral work has kept them very busy lately.

Roebler, of Fleischman's, Chicago, visited the city this week.

TRADE INCREASING.

With higher temperatures and weather that does not keep the people shut up in their heated houses, the condition of the trade has improved rapidly, and as society has begun to entertain and hold receptions, the greater demand for flowers has been noticeable, so much so in fact that stock has cleaned up quickly, with a reported shortage in some lines. Roses have had a good call and the supply is not large in any variety except American Beauties, which seem to be in magnificent crop with all the growers; but there have been some very good calls for this rose which has prevented any accumulation. Killarneys, with some of the growers, are showing the effects of the severe temperatures and short days and are not of so high a color as they have been. Yet some of the growers are sending in stock that is of a most beautiful shade. Richmonds are of high quality, but the quantity received is not nearly as large as it was a month ago. There is a good call for white roses and the market sells up clean every day. Carnations are now in good supply and the quality is of the best, some elegant Enchantress, White Enchantress, Beacon and the newer varieties Washington Gloriosa and White Wonder being received in all the shipments. Orchids are now quite plentiful and are being made a great feature by all the large retail stores, beautiful baskets and vases being shown in the windows and on the counters, and are also being largely used for personal decoration in corsages. The growers have been sending them in good quantities and some exceptionally low prices are quoted for larger quantities. Violets are very plentiful and are being offered at very low prices for this season of the year. The demand for lilies has been very good and the supply is not very large and the prices have held very firm all the month. A few L. auratum and L. rubrum are to be had and they add materially to the long-stemmed high-colored flowers. Bulbous stock is increasing rapidly and the quality is also improving. Tulips of white, pink, red and yellow are offered in quantities and the stems are longer and the flowers much better. Trumpet Major narcissus is also to be had in quantity and the flowers are of better substance. There is a great supply of Paper White narcissus and Roman hyacinths. Lily of the valley is having a very good call, and the supply is adequate. Freesia is now in good supply and some blooms of excellent quality are obtainable. Sweet peas are of splendid quality and the receipts are much larger, so that all the colors are obtainable and they are being freely shown at the retail stores. Mignonette of excellent quality, marguerites in small quantities and pansies are also seen. The greens are in none too large supply and are picked up quickly. The retail stores are showing a fine line of blooming plants, some splendid azaleas, cyclamen, primroses and winter flowering plants decorate all the stores.

AN ELABORATE DECORATION.

Henry Wittbold arranged a very elaborate decoration in the Elizabethan room at the Congress January 19, the occasion being the reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. McCormick to Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari, the composer. The ceiling was draped with southern smilax and large panels of the same material decorated the walls, through which American Beauty roses were entwined. The promenade to the room was similarly decorated, and with 50 large

NOTES.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a large supply of choice orchids and is offering some extra fancy Cattleya Trianae at very reasonable prices. The crops of these beautiful flowers are so large at present that the storekeeper can secure them at a very low price and use them to great advantage in his every-day work. John Poehlmann says that his firm will vacate their present quarters as soon as the new store is in such shape that they will be able to move in from the present location and go right on with the business.

The hard time party that was given by H. Van Gelder and Fred Wittbold, at the Wittbold home on Buckingham Place, on Wednesday evening, January 17, was a great success and the 60 people who were present all report having had a most enjoyable time. A colored orchestra furnished the music while the happy couples danced to their heart's content.

Peter Reinberg is particularly well fixed on American Beauty roses, and it is a pleasure to see the smile of satisfaction that passes over Tim Matchen's face when the shipments of this rose come in. Killarneys are also arriving in fair-sized quantities of exceptionally fine color.

E. J. Fancourt, S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.'s gentlemanly representative, is visiting the trade and renewing acquaintances this week. He will probably be with us again in August with his unrivalled line of goods. He reports trade as very good throughout the west.

The force at A. Lange's store have had their hands full all the week, notwithstanding the general reports of quiet business. Some very nice funeral orders have been executed and a number of social functions have kept all hands busy, both the day and evening help.

John Mangel has had his hands full this week with the sudden awakening of the social trade. He always has a splendid showing in the store and windows. His baskets of orchids and roses attract a great deal of attention in his beautiful windows.

Wietor Bros. are in full crop with carnations and have something exceptionally fine in red, white and pink to offer their customers for McKinley Day. Uncle John roses of fine quality are one of the leading features at this house this week.

The E. Wienhoeber Floral Co. are showing a very fine line of orchids with their other splendid stock. A case of cattleyas, with some magnificent sprays of oncidium, were a most attractive feature the last week.

J. R. Falkenstein of Naperville, who is growing a great many Washington, speaks very highly of this carnation and says that it is the best producer and the best money bringer that he has in his greenhouses.

Wm. Goddell is now filling the position of shipping clerk at the Kyle & Foerster store.

The Adams-Robertson Co. are having a very satisfactory business in their new store, and the proprietors are more than pleased with the trade that they have had all the season.

Joseph Brown, Winterson's traffic manager, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his mother, whose death occurred Saturday, January 20.

Miss M. C. Gunterberg is receiving large shipments of orange blossoms and would be pleased to take any reliable local or out-of-town orders for them.

Martin Reukauf is this week showing the local trade what a fine line of goods his firm, H. Bayersdorfer & Co. of Philadelphia, are handling.

It is rumored that several of the young ladies employed on the local market are to take advantage of 1912. Particulars later.

J. A. Budlong is now cutting from a new crop of lily of the valley and is again offering their famous Blue Ribbon brand.

Some people are wondering why John Sinner should advertise for help when he has such a charming next door neighbor.

John T. Muir's mother is quite ill and is reported to be in a serious condition.

Mr. and Mrs. William Winterson of 323 N. Oakley boulevard will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on January 28. They were married in Bristol, England, in 1862, and came to this city more than forty years ago. The anniversary will be celebrated by a family reunion at which three generations will be represented. Eight children will be present. They are J. J. Winterson of Tacoma, Wash., and E. F. Winterson, L. H. Winterson, Thomas B. Winterson, Mrs. H. M. Clark, Mrs. James Marshall, Mrs. Alfred Freeman and Miss Jane Winterson, of this city. The Winterson family is well known to the trade and their many friends hope that the gathering will be a most pleasant affair.

J. F. Wilcox and wife returned to Council Bluffs, Ia., on January 18 after having consulted Dr. Billings, the well-known local specialist, in regard to Mrs. Wilcox's health. Mr. Wilcox is planning building a new range of greenhouses on his land known as the farm and will commence building operations either this spring or next fall. The new range will consist of at least 100,000 feet of glass, divided into two sections, with houses 500 feet long on either side of the driveway and the boiler house.

Fred Sperry left for Los Angeles, Calif., last Saturday, January 20, after selling out his interest in the Vaughan & Sperry store to his former associate, A. L. James Curran, the Archer avenue florist, had an order this week from a baseball fan for a unique design, consisting of two bats and a ball of regulation size made up of lily of the valley, violets and carnations. The ball itself was made up of white carnations with violets worked in to represent the seams.

AN IMPROVEMENT IN BUSINESS.

The weather has moderated to some extent and business has taken a decided turn for the better. The demand far exceeded the supply toward the end of the week, when everything except white roses were cleaned up entirely. Carnations are improving in quality, some very fine stock now arriving daily, with stiffer stems and fewer rubber bands. Lilies are plentiful and in good demand, and callas clean up every day, while novelties always find a good call. Richmond roses are short of the demand and are mostly short stemmed; Killarney and White Killarney are in fine shape, both color and size of flower being excellent. American Beauties are not over plentiful, with a good call. Violets are again in better demand, as also is lily of the valley. Sweet peas are still a trifle short of the request, tulips are plentiful and stock is exceptionally good and a little stevia still appears. Paper white narcissus and Roman hyacinths are short in supply. Boxwood by the case is in demand, as many are using it in place of asparagus which is a little scarce during the dark weather. Smilax and adiantum are plentiful. It is high time now to advertise McKinley's birthday, Monday, January 29, so that a good demand for carnations will be created. This day is beginning to be a dead one, and must be advertised to keep it before the public.

NOTES.

T. Smith's wife and sister are on their way to California to visit Frank Smith, formerly of The Smith & Fetters Co., and now located in Los Angeles, Calif. They will stay until spring, and Mr. Smith expects to join them soon.

A new florists' store will be opened on or about January 31 by Geo. and Albert Wilhelmy on Lorain avenue near Fulton road. Geo. Wilhelmy was formerly connected with C. B. Wilhelmy and Albert with Wilhelmy Bros. They are all brothers.

ROSES IN SHORT SUPPLY.

For some reason nearly all the roses appear to be off crop and the supply is not equal to the demand. White are particularly scarce, the short or medium stemmed stock being bought up on sight. White tulips are largely used as substitutes in the cheaper work. Carnations are rather more plentiful and of very good quality. Daffodils are now to be had in quantity and are largely used. There is plenty of good white lilac. Sweet peas are much improved and good long stemmed stock is offered in all colors. Easter lilies from the storage-held bulbs now seem to be a sure crop and many are growing them as one of their staples. These flowers are now turned to for the funeral sprays when other flowers are scarce. Combinations of these with a little of almost any other suitable colored flower when nicely arranged are generally acceptable. Violets are in full supply. All kinds of bulbous stock, Roman hyacinths, tulips and narcissus, are plentiful and move slowly at buyers' prices; $1.50 to $2 a hundred is said to leave little if any margin for the grower, yet most of the stock will not bring this on the average. Cattleyas and gardenias are about equal to the demand, although gardenias are to be had in quantity if needed.

NOTES.

Those of the craft who were not able to attend the Detroit show, will be able to get a good idea of the new things by attending the next, or February meeting of the Florists' Club. Arrangements have been made with many of the introducers of the special and new varieties of carnations and roses to stage them at this meeting and have the club committee pass on them. All those who attended from this vicinity and also President Vincent of the S. A. F. will be present and give their impressions of the Detroit exhibition. Philadelphia, expressage prepaid, will be sure of being properly labeled and staged and figure in the report of the club. Shipments should arrive early on Tuesday, February 13. K.

New York.

A GOOD SUPPLY OF EVERYTHING.

Market conditions remain unchanged as to prices but there has been a let up in the supply. The extreme cold weather keeps the street men in and even though the supply is lighter there is an accumulation at all points. A great many shipments are still arriving in a badly frozen condition, in many cases the fault of the shipper in not using sufficient wrapping paper. While it is true there have been many very large orders for decorations and receptions there are not enough to affect prices. There is sufficient supply of almost all varieties of roses to meet the demand. Lady Hillingdon, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Prince de Bulgarie and what Sunburst are coming in still clean up at good prices. Killarney, My Maryland, Richmond and Mme. Chatenay are doing as well as can be expected. Brides and Bridesmaid are the poorest sellers of all, American Beauties are not so plentiful and clearing out nicely. In orchids cattleyas are very plentiful and while there has been a large call for these during the week it has not affected the price to any great extent. Cypripediums and Dendrobium formosum remain the same, but oncidiums are very plentiful with a tendency to lower prices. The great glut of gardenias seems to have disappeared and now prices on these should jump up considerably. Seldom, if ever, has there been gardenias of such good quality as at present. Lilies have advanced in price. Lily of the valley, tulips and the narcissi do not fluctuate much in price. Sweet peas, lilac, freesia and violets are very plentiful with no change in prices. Asparagus is doing well but smilax, even of the very best quality, is selling poorly. Yellow daisies are very scarce, there seems to be a constant call for these. Carnations are now of very good quality and in good supply, but the same cannot be said of the prices—even the novelties in these have dropped in price.

Monday, January 22.—Flowers of all kinds have shortened up considerably and prices have advanced on all kinds of stock.

NOTES.

The "Cauldy Wauldy" beefsteak dinner tendered A. Moltz on Saturday night was a great success in every way. The whole affair was in charge of Charles Millang, who evidently is a past master in that line. In addition to the very fine vaudeville entertainment provided Mr. Millang gave an up-to-date entertainment in soft shoe and clog dancing. It will be no surprise if "Charley," when tiring of selling flowers, horses and automobiles, may go on the vaudeville circuit doing a song and dance. It would be impossible to mention all who were there, but E. J. Polykranas, president of the Greek society, with many of Mr. Moltz's Greek friends, were very much in evidence. So was Vice-President Einsmann and Trustee Donaldson of the New York Florists' Club.

I. S. Hendrickson, chairman of the exhibition committee of the New York Florists' Club, announces that Monday night, February 12, has been designated carnation night, and any person desiring to exhibit will please forward the flowers to the committee, care of Traendly & Schenck, 131 West Twenty-eighth street, so as to reach there on that day, and they will be taken care of and properly staged by the committee.

Thomas Young, Jr., proprietor of the Beechwood Heights Nurseries, Bound Brook, N. J., will open a store at 113 West Twenty-eighth street for the better convenience of his many customers. This will be a salesroom in charge

The annual dinner of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will take place at Mouguen, Sixth avenue and Twenty-eighth street, Thursday, February 1, at 6:30 o'clock. All of John Meisem's friends are delighted to know that Mrs. Meisem is slowly recovering. For a long time her condition was critical.

Worcester, Mass.

Trade conditions continue favorable in Worcester, despite the cold weather experienced in these parts this winter.

NOTES.

The first winter meeting of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural Hall, January 11. A new variety of orchid, Calanthe Laselliana, produced by George McWilliam, was exhibited, together with a collection of other orchids. Mr. McWilliam, who is gardener for G. Marsden Whitin, Whitinsville, is attracting much attention from the horticultural world.

The employes of H. F. A. Lange have organized a bowling team and have bowled two games with the employes of H. F. Littlefield and two with the Adams Express Co.'s team. In both cases they split even.

At a recent meeting of the Market Gardeners' Association of Worcester County, the members voted to assist Mayor O'Connell's plan to establish a public market. A public meeting will be held in the common council chambers January 26.

Hail did much damage to the greenhouses of Mr. Richardson, a Grafton market gardener, recently Chicago Notes.

Chas. Zapfe and Miss Edith H. Lyman of this city were married at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. T. A. Mosley, at Kansas City, Kans., on Monday, January 15. Mr. Zapfe is well known to the trade in this vicinity, having formerly been in the employ of J. A. Budlong until he opened a retail store on South Park avenue. The happy young couple have the best wishes of their many friends for a safe voyage on the sea of matrimony. Charley says it is a difficult proposition for a man to turn down a young lady who proposes, especially when it is leap year.

John Risch says that Weiland & Risch will soon be cutting a large crop of gardenias and that he will soon be in a position to take care of a large number of orders for this popular flower. Killarney and White Killarney roses are arriving in good-sized quantities at this store, considering the general shortage noticed in some houses at present.

Otto Wittbold is so confident that he will succeed in having a road put in from Morton Grove to Edgebrook that he has already rebuilt a portion of his firm's greenhouses to make room for the same. The bedding stock at this place is in fine condition and a large assortment is in fine shape to be shipped out.

A. L. Vaughan this week purchased Fred Sperry's interest in the firm of Vaughan & Sperry and will after February 1 conduct the business under his own name. The genial southerner is well known to the trade in all parts of the country and has the best wishes of his many friends for continued prosperity.

Joseph Einweck, of the Bassett & Washburn force, left Sunday for Worthington, Iowa, where he will officiate as best man at his cousin's wedding. Joe expects to do a little hunting in the wilds of the Hawkeye state and has promised his friends that he will bring back some rabbits.

The Chicago Carnation Co. is offering a fine grade of carnations with Washington of excellent quality. Herald, the new comer, is attracting a great deal of attention at the store, where it is greatly admired and eagerly sought for by the leading retailers of this city.

A. I. Simmons, the enterprising West Sixty-third street florist, was very busy with funeral work this week, one order being for a blanket of more than ordinary style. The captain is a skillful designer and can properly take care of anything that comes his way.

Wm. Graff, of Columbus, O., was in the city this week on business and pleasure combined. He reports having had a banner Christmas trade and says that the stock he received from Wieter Bros. on that occasion was the best in the history of his firm.

Fred Nelson, Robert Ullrich and Chas. Rome were elected directors of the George Wittbold Co., at a meeting last week, to fill the vacancies which occurred by the withdrawal of Henry Wittbold and by the deaths of George and August Wittbold.

John Canger says that trade is picking up considerably at Canger & Gormley's and that he is now busy with table decorations and funeral work. Spring flowers are used mostly in the former and are appreciated by those who like a change.

Hoerber Bros. had a fire out at their greenhouses in Des Plaines last Sunday night, when the boiler shed and a corner of the greenhouses were partially destroyed. The loss will amount to about $200.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is offering a fine grade of red, white and pink carnations and expect Dwight L. Harris, general manager of the Pulverized Manure Co., is spending a few weeks at Boston, New York, Buffalo and other eastern cities.

John Michelsen says the E. C. Ameling Co. is experiencing much trouble with their violet shipments, the train from the east being many hours late.

Bassett & Washburn are supplying their customers with an exceptionally fine grade of long-stemmed sweet peas and American Beauty roses.

Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store presents a better appearance since the office has been moved to the front and other changes have been made.

The orchids that the A. L. Randall Co. is receiving from Chas. Bond are very beautiful flowers and deserving of immediate sale.

John Kruchten, the Gardenia Man, is filling some large orders for these flowers in addition to many for other lines of stock.

Warren Garland has evidently enjoyed a prosperous season for he has invested in one of the latest model touring cars.

T. E. Waters, with Poehlmann Bros. Co., has returned from a business trip to Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Philip L. McKee, with the John C. Moninger Co., has returned from an out-of-town business trip.

Zech & Mann are doing quite a shipping business in addition to a fine local trade.

Now, for a few pointed questions :

Are you going to build this year?

Are you going to take advantage of our special winter offer, and place your order with us now?

If you do, you will get the benefit of a lower price than if you wait until spring, when the big rush of work begins. Too many growers lose dollars, simply because they can't seem to get their nerve up to order a house until John Jones or Frank Smith or who not has ordered theirs. Then they want their house with a rush. And they get a rush job, and then rush all the year to make up for the extra price that rush jobs must always cost.

So, why not lead this year, instead of being lead?

Come right straight to your own decisions, and act

And act now, by sending for one of us to come and get right down to business doing figures with you.

COLD WEATHER RETARDS BUSINESS.

Cold, colder and coldest. Buffalo has been no exception; we have had all that was coming to us, even if it was a little late in arriving. Flowers have been in good supply and trade not rushing, owing to the cold weather. Some social functions scheduled for the week took place, the weather being no barrier. One notable ball given at a private residence was the season's event. The decorations were very elaborate, only the choicest cut flowers used for the tables, such as orchids, lilac, lily of the valley and Killarney roses, the rooms having palms, southern smilax, begonias, poinsettias and lilies. The verandas were enclosed with palms and laurels as a decoration. Another reception on the same day called forth another elaborate decoration, also a dinner given to one of Buffalo's prominent citizens gave the florist a chance to make a fine showing, no expense being spared in the decorations. So for a cold week some of the florists were very busy. Considerable difficulty was found in delivery the past week, many plants and flowers being frozen. Daffodils made their appearance the past week and found ready sale. Tulips are also on sale, but rather short stemmed. Roses are good and carnations are small.

NOTES

The sudden death of F. P. Baum of Kingsley street, about two months ago, was followed by the death of Mrs. Baum on Saturday, January 13. They were both well known and highly respected by the trade. The sympathy of the florists is extended to F. P. Baum, Jr., and sister.

The Buffalo florists to a man are actively engaged in furthering the cause of William F. Kasting as state commissioner of agriculture, for which position he is an active candidate and one who is certainly competent to discharge the duties of the office.

The February meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club should be a rouser, as nominations for the ensuing year will be on the calendar, also some talk of a fall show, which the committee thought best to postpone until 1912.

BISON.

Nashville, Tenn.

The extreme weather since the holidays has had the effect of causing a slight falling off in the bulk of trade. There have been fewer social affairs than usual at this time of the year. But on the other hand, there have been more funerals of prominent citizens and this, with the general run of trade, has kept things from getting dull. There have been some weddings, but none very large or what is called fashionable.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. arranged a pretty and novel wedding at which over five thousand violets were used. The bride carried lilies-of-the-valley and elegant orchids, made into a muff, and the bridesmaids carried violet bouquets. They have a plentiful supply of violets, and have had all winter. They went through the cold spell without any mishaps, although the coal pile melted away like snow in a summer sun.

While trade is somewhat dull, the echoes from the holidays are still gratifying. The Joy Floral Company sold out everything in the way of pot plants and decorated baskets. They had plenty of carnations and cut twenty-one thousand roses and sold them.

McIntyre Bros. were in the market house, Saturday, with some beautiful plants, the weather having moderated so far as to permit them to be taken out. They passed safely through the below zero weather.

Haury & Sons say the cold spell did them no damage and they got through beautifully. They report trade dull, as it was everywhere, but had picked up wonderfully as soon as the weather moderated.

Arnold Schmid says his lettuce and parsley are the finest ever and he has no trouble in disposing of his stock at wholesale. M. C. D.

Lancaster, Pa.

The second meeting of the Lancaster Florists' Association was held in the Chamber of Commerce January 18. It was decided to hold monthly meetings the third Thursday of each month with the exception of June, July, August and September.

Any one desiring to display novelties at these meetings will find an appreciative audience. At this meeting we had a display of carnations: Rainbow from the Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y.; Delhi from Wm. Murphy of Cincinnati; Rosette from F. Dorner & Sons Co., LaFayette, Ind.; Comfort from the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; a fine red seedling from H. D. Rohrer, Lancaster, Pa., and a vase of mixed seedlings from F. Bruckhart of Litz, Pa., in which was a very good dark pink and a fine maroon.

President Albert M. Herr gave a talk on the Detroit meeting which was followed by a lively discussion on the merits and demerits of various carnations. A. M. HERR.

THORBURN'S annual seed catalogue is in its 110th year.

The canners' convention will be held February 5-11 in Rochester, N. Y.

It is said that the demand for tuberoses is on the decline in France but that gladioli are increasing in popularity.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, January 24, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $13.50 to $15.25 per 100 pounds.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co. have issued an appendix to "Sweet Peas Up-to-Date," bringing the list of varieties of sweet peas up to the present time.

THE situation on early northern grown field corn is very bad and one prominent northwestern grower reports sales already at $4 per bushel. Low germination is the cause of the shortage.

VISITING CHICAGO: J. S. Michael, representing the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia., returning from the east. Mr. Michael reports the seed business firm in all leading eastern cities.

THE eastern early seed potato market is in much stronger position apparently than the western. There is, however, a tremendous demand coming from the farmers this year who sold their early stock at high prices last summer.

THE onion set demand has picked up quite a little during the past few days and we shall soon know now what to look for this spring. Around Chicago there are a great many less sets in growers' or independent hands than last year. What the large jobbers have is where the guesswork comes in.

LOECHNER & Co., New York, received their first importation of seed grain by the S. S. Luciana from Sweden this week. Farmers are looking for better quality in oats, barley and wheat, and it is certain the demand for imported stocks will increase in proportion to their superiority over the domestic product.

It is surprising how many grocers, feed stores, and even florists, use the low price grass seed mixtures. As one large handler of this class of goods says: "There is no longer any money in selling high class lawn grass seed."

New Zealand Pea Crops.

F. Cooper, Ltd., the well known New Zealand seed growers, write as follows December 1, 1911: "We have just made a first inspection of our growing crops of peas for this season. The winter and early spring were very rainy and some of our crops suffered through flood and subsequent wet condition of the soil. At present they are looking well, and although too early to give definite percentage of deliveries expected, we have every reason to be satisfied with the crop outlook. We have rather a larger area than usual planted (about 2,000 acres) and should we obtain a good crop it may help to relieve the extreme shortage in the northern hemisphere."

European Seed Crops.

A representative of one of the European houses reports that seed crops have been shorter in Europe than on this side of the water and that he has never known the price of seed, especially of vegetable seed, to be as high as it is now. Beet, mangel, celery and lettuce seed is especially scarce. Sugar beet seed is 400 per cent higher than he has ever known it before. One of the larger growers who usually sells 2,000 to 3,000 tons of this seed annually will have only 100 to 200 tons this year. A celery grower near Fountainbleau, who had a contract to supply nearly six tons of Self-Blanching, is unable to deliver more than 100 pounds and so on down the line. On account of the long, hot, dry summer the plantings (chiefly vegetable seeds) usually made in August had to be postponed until the end of October. Up to this time, however, there has been no frost in Paris, and only one very light frost outside of the city, so that it is thought these crops at present are pretty much out of danger from that source and ought to give the usual yield next season.

Asked why he did not import from America to cover shortages, he said the longer growing season in France and the different demands of the French consumer made the use of American seed rather impractical. He had tried it and mentioned Flat Yellow Danvers onion as an example, adding that the experiment had not been satisfactory to date. He had made a trip to England a few weeks previous, was through Germany, and reports crops as poor as in France so that importation from those countries will not help out much if any.

TRADE QUIET.

Trade in general is quiet, but the wholesalers are doing a good shipping business. Roses are having the call. Carnations are still low in price, and dark red does not seem to be much wanted. There is considerable bulbous stock in the market, but the call is light.

FLORIST CLUB MEETING.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club held their regular meeting Tuesday evening, it being the installation of officers and ladies' night. The following officers were installed into their respective offices: Thomas Pegler, president; W. J. Kennedy, vice-president; W. N. Craig, secretary; Peter Fisher, treasurer; Peter M. Miller, William Sim, William C. Patterson, Herman H. Bartsch, executive committee.

The elected officers all made speeches accepting the honor. President Pegler's maiden speech was well delivered and received with applause. The entertainment consisted of selections by the Emanuel church quartette and also solos rendered by the individual members. Mr. Williams, the tenor, and Mrs. McKeon being in fine voice. The singing of the latter has always been a feature of ladies' night. The Irving sisters, dressed in Highland costume, danced Scotch dances. A collation was served which was participated in by all. There were 400 present and all enjoyed themselves.

NOTES.

H. M. Robinson & Co. will open a branch store on West Twenty-sixth street, New York, and one of their Boston men will go on to take charge. They will carry a full line of flowers and florists' supplies. H. M. Robinson goes to New York with his ever present smile to open the store Tuesday, January 23.

The delegates to the show in Detroit all sound praises of the Detroit Florists' Club and Philip Breitmeyer. Nothing was left undone to give the visitors every comfort, and Detroit will be remembered for some time to come.

The second annual meeting of the New York State Vegetable Growers' Association will be held at the New York State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y., February 20-22. The speakers include Prof. R. L. Watts, State College, Pa.; Dr. H. J. Webber, Ithaca, N. Y.; C. W. Waid, New Carlisle, O.; R. H. Garrahan, Wilkesbarre, Pa. A programme may be obtained by application to Paul Work, secretary, Ithaca, N. Y.

Seed Testing.

It is a fact that the average American gardener does very little seed testing, depending upon his seedsman to do that. We must admit that while we have done quite a little seed testing in some twenty years, we have in all this time run across only one lot of seed which would not grow satisfactorily. The one in question was a half pound of cabbage from one of our leading seedsmen and when they were informed of the matter a fierce debate resulted. The matter finally ended by the seedsman offering to present us another one-half pound of seed, not replacing the other, as they could not acknowledge sending out worthless seed. So from our own experience it would hardly be worth while to test seed. However, when we consider that in ordinary cases, every superfluous seed planted is a weed, and has to be removed at expense, and next, that the first cost of such excessive seeding may be considerably more so this year when all seeds are higher than ever, then it appears well worth while to try each and every lot so we may know beforehand the exact vitality. This appears of further importance this season, as many seed last summer ripened prematurely, hence are weak and may even decline in vitality before being planted.

We like to divide our tests into several classes. We have learned from long experience that heat-loving subjects do not respond in low temperatures and vice versa, that cool subjects are so subject to fungus attacks if placed in warm quarters as to often render such tests worse than useless. This is readily understood when we consider under what conditions our seeds are expected to grow in the field. Therefore we test the following at a low temperature: Celery, parsnip, oyster plant, beet, carrot, lettuce, radish, spinach, onion, asparagus, parsley, cabbage, cauliflower, from 50° to 60°. In heat we place corn, beans, melons, cucumbers, squash, tomato, egg plants, peppers, from 70° to 75°. These are again sorted into slow and fast subjects, so as not to disturb the remaining ones. Thus the cool subjects should germinate in about this order: Lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower, radish, beet, salsify, onion, spinach, carrot, parsnip, celery, asparagus.

The common method is to count out 100 seeds of each lot and plant in soil or sand. We prefer the sand in winter and the soil in warmer weather. Great care must be used not to cover heavily as many seeds are lost by such treatment. Last year we discovered that some of our common incubators leave nothing to be desired as seed testing devices; we believe the widely distributed Prairie State machine par excellence for this purpose. Their sand-tray will hold all ordinary tests and the temperature, moisture and ventilation are under absolute control at a minimum of labor. A test to be of value must be accurate. We cannot permit a violent change of temperature or moisture to mislead us.

The Irish Potato Crop.

The potato crop in Ireland for 1911 is estimated at 3,694,856 long tons, or 137,941,290 bushels, an increase of 30,730,336 bushels over the previous year, states Consul G. E. Chamberlin of Cork. The acreage of the crop was 591,259, as against 592,985 in 1910. The largest results were obtained in the north and west of Ireland, where the ordinary yield was about 280 bushels to the acre. The average for the whole of Ireland for the 10-year period 1901 to 1910 was 174.46 bushels, so that the yield for 1911 was more than 30 per cent above the normal crop.

Effect of Drought Upon Conifers.

The unprecedented drought and heat of the past summer in Europe has brought to light some curious facts in regard to comparative resistance of varieties and surprises and disappointments are of course the result. A singular fact is that our Douglas Spruce almost invariably perished in dry localities, says a writer in the Revue Horticole, while the blue spruce forms, Colorado, glauca or Kosteri, were unharmed; in fact, all so-called "blue" conifers acquitted themselves well, giving rise to the conviction that the coloring matter which gives the foliage its peculiar shade acts as a protecting coat by reflecting the luminous and heat rays. The piceas seem to have suffered most, only the Servian P. Omorica being entirely unaffected; only the abies and pinus of extreme northern origin suffered, generally, although many conifers of Japanese introduction were totally lost, regardless of age and condition.

At Elysian Park, Los Angeles.

The usual notion of a park is a more or less circumscribed area of lawn and trees and shrubs, with seats for the weary, "keep off the grass" signs and other impedimenta. But Elysian park, near Los Angeles, is different. There is a dressed part of it with greenhouses, lawns and flowers, but its great charm is its wild, mountainous heights, its deep, cool canyons and magnificent scenic drives. From an elevation in the northeastern portion of the "park" there is probably the most beautiful view in all of beautiful Southern California. The great San Fernando valley lies directly in front. Back of it are the foothills and in the distance the far famed Mt. Lowe and Mt. Wilson. Away to the east is "Old Baldy," covered with snow the greater part of the year, while westward are the foothills flanking the great Pacific slopes. We saw this at sunset, such a gorgeous, indescribable glow that must be seen to be appreciated—the kind that makes men—and women—silent.

And in the planting and work generally that is going on in Elysian park this scenic feature is kept in mind. No attempt at ridiculous winding walks and "gardens" is being made. A whole mountain side is taken in hand—water is piped to it and it is planted to native trees. These are watered long enough for them to get a hold and then they are left to take care of themselves and hold their own with native vegetation, which they are quite capable of doing. Two sides of a ravine for instance have been planted out to the native fir or pine—Pinus insignis or Monterey pine, the others to yuccas. This is the right method, good for today, better for posterity. As showing how the Monterey pine takes care of itself it is interesting to see, where drives have been cut, the roots of the trees going away down in the crevices of the rock which here is only surfaced with a few inches of dry sandy soil, almost approaching gravel.

In the more highly cultivated part of the park there is a varied and interesting collection of coniferous and deciduous trees, but as these are cultivated, and in some cases irrigated, they cannot all be recommended as able to look after themselves here. The Italian cypress is fine here, keeping its columnar habit and growing to a great height. Cedrus Deodara and C. Atlantica thrive, but the Cedar of Lebanon does not seem particularly happy. There is a magnificent collection of ficuses here, not small plants but immense trees, while at the southern end of the park there is perhaps the most magnificent avenue of date palms in Southern California. A beautiful shrub, flowering here in winter, is Thevetia nerifolia. It is a native of tropical America and closely allied to the shrubby allamandas but thrives and flowers well here in a sheltered position. The flowers are larger than those of Allamanda nerifolia and deeper in color, a showy and beautiful thing. Tecoma stans makes immense masses 20 feet or more high and as much through covered with the bright yellow flowers. Several forms of the European laburnum also do well here as shown by the numerous seed vassils now hanging. This park is also the nursery for growing stock for all the other city parks and Foreman Lambert has great numbers of all kinds of stock to remove as other places need it. He has a big charge and a lot of work but evidently has it all well in hand. H. R. R.

28, 1911, on the occasion of the annual dinner given by Mr. Mills to the employes of the State Nursery Co. Covers were laid for thirty and full justice was done the bounteous repast provided. After several toasts were given and responded to the rest of the evening was given to song and story. A very amusing feature of the evening's entertainment was the singing of a verse of song into a phonograph by each one present; besides those sung in English, verses were sung in Highland Scotch, Irish, German, Swedish, French, Greek and Japanese. The records thus made will be preserved and from time to time reproduced for the edification of future generations. A flashlight picture of the scene was taken and with three hearty cheers for Mr. and Mrs. Mills a very pleasant evening was brought to a close.

Glorious New Plants from the Chinese Alps.

THERE has been nothing in recent years to surpass our wonderful introductions from China, through our collector, Mr. Forrest. As the introducers of several new species of Primulas, which have taken a remarkably high place in the estimation of experts, we occupy an enviable position.

Growing, as they do, close to the snow line in the mountainous region of Yunnan, China, these Primulas are exceedingly hardy, as well as beautiful; they are altogether unlike our European or American Primulas. The illustration shown gives but a very inadequate representation of the marvellous attraction of these novelties. Most of them have been awarded First-Class Certificates from the Royal Horticultural Society, London.

At the time of writing, another collector, Mr. F. Kingdom Ward, is working the Mekong-Salween divide. The Mekong and Salween rivers run southward from Central China through Burma and Siam, cutting through vast mountain ranges of immense altitude. It is on the slopes of these snow-capped giants that untold riches of the Chinese Flora flourish unseen and almost unsuspected. We are convinced, from the reports of our collectors, that the plants so far brought to light are but a "drop in the well." So trying is the climate, and so risky the intercourse with natives, that only a mere patch of ground has been covered after several years' strenuous work and the expenditure of considerable sums of money.

Besides these Chinese Novelties, you will be interested in our

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, on January 10, President J. F. Johnson in the chair. The Morris Seed Co. offered a prize for cinerarias to be competed for at our March show. Edward S. Smith was elected to active membership and there was one application.

The judges for the monthly competition were Messrs. Everett, Gray and Vert. Their decisions were as follows: Holloway's Special, 25 carnations mixed, Alex. McKenzie, first. Society's prizes, 25 sprays sweet peas, Alex. McKenzie, first. Six spikes snapdragon, Alex. McKenzie, first. One plant cyclamen, Robt. Marshall, first. Rhubarb, H. Gaut, thanks of the Society. Freesia Snowstorm, G. Robinson, cultural certificate. The members present were greatly interested in the freesia exhibit, the variety being new to many, and the flowers were exceedingly well grown.

The committee appointed to make arrangements for the annual dinner reported that it will be held at the Oriental Hotel, Glen Cove, January 25. Messrs. Cliff and Everett were appointed to represent the society at the dinner of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, January 18. The exhibits for February will be gardenias, mushroom and freesias.

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

A very interesting meeting of the Colorado Florists' Club was held January 15, at T. M. A. Hall, 1739 Champa Street. The principal feature was an exhibition of carnations, and it was one that would have made a creditable showing at any exhibition. Among the varieties shown were Princess Charming, Bright Spot, Washington, Ruby, President Valentine, Enchantress, White Enchantress, White Perfection, Winsor, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Beacon, and Scarlet Glow.

After refreshments, a three-round bout and several selections on the zither by Fred Wilke, an open discussion on the merits of the different varieties was freely indulged in by many of the members. Good and bad points alike were discussed, making it very interesting. Albert E. Mauff was elected to membership. Applications were received from S. R. Lundy, Claud E. Cartwright and August Cassier. DANVILLE, ILL.—A disastrous fire on Sunday morning January 7 destroyed the boiler house and greenhouses of the Danville Floral Co. The head house was entirely consumed, both stacks falling and part of the houses burned. The thermometer, outside registered 16° below zero and as the heating system was ruined the entire plant froze.

Davenport, Ia.

The coldest two weeks on record for many a year has put a crimp to all business and very little has been doing but shoveling coal with the glass down to 21° below. Few people have ventured out to do any shopping and in consequence the stores have seemed like so many cemeteries. But the weather is moderating somewhat and no doubt our worst winter weather is over. It is hoped so, at least. The coal supply is near running out, several factories have already shut down. But so far the florists have been well supplied, several having enough coal to last six weeks longer. So no doubt all will pull through.

CLUB MEETING.

Notwithstanding zero weather a goodly number attended the regular monthly meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club which met at the home of Henry Pauli on the evening of January 11, and a merry time was had. The topic for the evening was "Insects," and the use of the different insecticides for the various insects more or less destructive to plant life. During the discussion every insect seems to have a destroyer with the exception of the aster beetle which seemed to grow fat on all insecticides tried by any of the florists. As Henry Gaethe remarked, "There is only one way, get someone to hold the beetle down and then jump on him with both feet." Nearly every florist has given up even trying to grow asters outdoors on account of the destructive beetle, with no remedy in sight. After other routine matters the club adjourned to the dining room, where a fine oyster supper was in waiting and with plenty of the good things of this earth, a few jokes, the worried look of the florist soon faded away. 21° below and every boiler on the jump is enough to make the best of us a little uneasy. Voting Mr. Pauli and his family royal entertainers, the club adjourned to fight their way home through a gale and the glass 16° below.

NOTES.

We don't care to insinuate, but there must have been something wrong with the man who claims he saw a snake two feet long on New Year's day. We wouldn't like to mention any names, either. But Uncle John Temple knows whom we mean.

Proprietor Rohlfs of the Alta Vista Nursery has secured the help of an assistant who no doubt will be with him for some years to come. Sure—we'll take a cigar. Mother and son are doing nicely. A New Year's present—some class, eh!

The Davis plant is now in full running order and things are coming along in fine shape. Their heating plant

The back is a mottled green paper especially imported from Germany. The illustration is wonderfully life like in five colors. The pad sheets have an under printing of flowers and different greenhouse subjects.

One of These Calendars is Laid Aside For You.

LAST year, after we had sent out that rather unusual three-fold calendar of ours, with its beautiful brown photographic reproduction of a greenhouse at the top, and a five-colored rendering of a show house filled for Easter, at the bottom—we received a flood of complaining letters.

Not from those who received the calendars—but those who didn't.

When you walk into a friend's house and see one of our calendars hanging on the wall, and you haven't received one, naturally enough, as a good customer, you wonder why you have been left out. Some take it as a mistake and let it go at that. But others write in and act as if they thought we did it on purpose. The truth is, we wanted all of our friends and most of our enemies to have one last year. So this year we have taken extra pains to see that your name, along with the rest, is on the list to be sent our 1912 calendar.

But to make doubly sure, won't you kindly drop us a postal saying you want one and I will see to it myself that it is mailed to you. This will obviate all chances of your not getting one.

P.S. Its even better than last years and that's saying a good deal

Greenwich Horticulturists.

The regular meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in Greenwich, Conn., Friday, January 12, with President Stuart in the chair. In anticipation of J. K. M. L. Farquhar's lecture on "Gardens of Japan" 137 members were present, lacking only 10 for a full attendance, which speaks volumes of the great esteem all have for the lecturer, as well as the interest each takes in the welfare of the society. Two members were elected and two applications received.

Mr. Farquhar's fame as a lecturer is too well known to dwell upon, but the masterly way he handled his subject made us all feel as if we indeed had taken the trip through that wonderful garden of the east, with its untold treasures of horticultural products, and a rising vote of thanks was given the lecturer.

The judges for the night were Messrs. Adcock, Magee, McKenzie, Dealey and Addor, and their report as follows:

Begonia Agathe, certificate of merit to James Stuart for one of the finest specimens ever seen, also cultural certificate to Mr. Stuart for a grand vase of Euphorbia Jacquiniflora. Vase of stocks, Beauty of Nice, from James Aitchison, cultural certificate. A fine display of geraniums and begonias, made by Harry Wild, was highly commended. Honorable mention to Ad. Paterson for vase of Eucharis Amazonica. Vote of thanks to J. Aitchison for a well-finished specimen of chorizema, also to Th. Ryan for display of marguerites and vegetables. President Stuart's prize for best 18 carnations was won by Robert Stobo, with White Enchantress, and a vote of thanks accorded to all other entries for the same prize.

A smoker will be held at the February meeting, also a lecture on chrysanthemums, roses and carnations by our famous expert, C. H. Totty of Madison, N. J.

OSCAR E. ADDOR, Sec'y.

Chico, Calif.

Miss Josie Robbie reports a 15 per cent increase in sales during the holidays over last year. Potted plants of poinsettias and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine moved readily; carnations were scarce but of good quality; violets were plentiful and fine and these found a ready market. Funeral work and decorations kept all busy night and day for a week.

Henry Klappfer, propagator at the U. S. Plant Introduction Garden located here, says the recent frosts did but little damage at the garden. They are now equipped with five large greenhouses heated by hot water and Jack Frost has a merry time trying to get the best of Uncle Sam's introductions.

Double Glass Sash

Have Tomatoes

weeks ahead

Never mind the weather!

Your plants in hot-beds or cold-frames under Sunlight Double Glass Sash will not mind it

Between the two layers of glass in the Sunlight Double Glass Sash is an air space of $\frac{5}{8}$ of an inch in thickness

Above the glass is winter weather—zero perhaps. Below the glass is warm earth and plants growing like May

The secret of it all, is that the airspace between the two layers of glass being a non-conductor will not let the cold in or the heat out. It makes the Sunlight Double Glass Sash complete in itself. It needs no mats or boards. The only cover is the air sealed between the layers of glass.

You can have hot-beds and cold-frames with Sunlight Double Glass Sash far cheaper in the long run than your single layer sash with heavy, dark covers of mats or boards. You can save more than half the labor and worry and you can control your beds better and get earlier, stronger and far more profitable plants.

The Sunlight Double Glass Sash method comes right home to every gardener and florist in the country. It is good business to learn all about it.

Write us today. We will send our complete catalog, free. If you enclose 4c in stamps we will also send Prof. Massey's booklet on hot-beds and cold-frames. Be sure to write your name and post office plainly.

CUT FLOWERS SCARCE.

We have experienced a spell of very severe weather, with temperatures of 20° below zero being quite general and continuous for two weeks. It was a hard fight to keep the frost out, to say nothing of keeping the temperatures right, but we have pulled through without any damage being reported. Trade suffered somewhat under the adverse conditions. Cut flowers are scarce, especially daffodils, for which there is always a large demand when they first appear. There was quite a show of bulbous stock at Christmas, but the supply seems to have been limited, as there is very little to be seen now. Tulips are rather short-stemmed. There is a good demand for flowering plants and cut flowers for table decorations and a steady call for funeral work.

NOTES.

Wm. C. Hall, president-elect of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club, was unable to preside at the first meeting of the new year, being busy with a large table decoration at a dinner given in honor of the Scotch Curling Club. Ex-President W. R. Whiting took the chair and in a very able way gave a review of the work during the past year. John Walsh reminded the meeting that it will be twenty-five years in November since the club was formed, and that it was none too soon to make arrangements for the celebration of this anniversary in a worthy manner. From present appearances it does not seem possible to hold a chrysanthemum show this coming autumn, the negotiations for the hall have been broken off and as there is no other hall available it will have to be postponed for another season. The annual dinner will be held on Monday, January 22. All present at the meeting signified their intention to be there, and from present appearances there will be a record attendance.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Sweet Peas.

A bed or bench of sweet peas sown at this time will produce a nice crop of flowers in spring when the winter blooming plants are nearly through flowering and the blooms beginning to grow small and before any outside can be had. The newer Spencers make splendid varieties to plant at this time, and while they will not bloom as early as the winter blooming varieties, yet will flower before the warm summer weather, and the beautifully formed flowers make a welcome change. Select a bench with plenty of head room for these easily grow to a height of six or eight feet under favorable conditions. The seed can be sown six inches apart in rows, with about three feet between rows, and lightly covered. It is just as well to sow two or three seeds together and when they begin to grow thin out to one plant. The beds must be watered sparingly until the plants are large enough to twine on the supports, for they damp off easily even when five or six inches high if overwatered. As soon as the tendrils on the vines appear provide some support for them to twine upon and keep the plants growing erect throughout their culture or crooked stems and worthless flowers will be the result. A cool house is far better for these plants than one having a warm temperature. Aphids are often troublesome in growing sweet peas and a spray is far better with these plants than fumigation.

Chrysanthemum Stock.

This is the time to look over the chrysanthemum stock to see how the cuttings are breaking. There may be some varieties that are not throwing as many cuttings as they should or some that are not in good health and there are yet some growers that have stock plants for sale, so where from either cause it looks as if the supply might not be sufficient, new stock should be purchased at once. Where the stock plants are in good health but there are not enough to furnish the requisite number of cuttings, the early cuttings may be taken and rooted and these grown in flats until it is time to propagate the plants for blooming, and cuttings made from these. There are also some varieties of which good cuttings can be procured at this time, but after the first growths are removed, do not break satisfactorily. These should surely be taken now and grown on in flats, notably as one of this class is Miss Virginia Poehlmann, and some varieties, such as President Roosevelt, are short-jointed and slow in their growth, so early cuttings are preferred. It is a good time now to look the stock over and be sure of good plants and enough of them for another season.

Stocks.

The demand for flowers at Decoration day is in many cases for bunches or sprays to lay upon the graves of the departed relatives and friends, and as much show as can be made is often the object, therefore, the grower must have a quantity of what are called the cheaper flowers, and stocks are one of the best at this time, for they are large and prominent, make up well in bouquets or sprays, and are quickly and easily grown. The seed should be sown by February 1 to be sure to have them in flower by the end of May. The seed germinates quickly and as soon as large enough should be potted. Many grow them in flats but to have them early pot culture is better, for they do not receive such a severe shock when transplanted in the benches. The planting in the benches should be done in the month of March and the plants can be grown in two ways, to the single spike which will produce a much larger, handsome bloom or to eight or ten lateral spikes. The former method allows of planting from three to four inches apart, while in the latter the plants should be set eight to nine inches each way. Growing the latter way, that is to eight or ten spikes, is the culture most often practiced, and in order to cause the plant to branch, as soon as the terminal flower forms it is rubbed out, and the laterals will grow at once. To have these laterals in bloom for Decoration day the terminal bud should show by the last of April, which will allow about four weeks for the growth of the laterals and the finishing of the bloom. Constant fumigation will be necessary to keep the plants clean of aphid, which very rapidly accumulate on the succulent growth unless kept in check.

Ready Reference Ads.

Hydrangeas.

The plants of hydrangeas that are to be in bloom for Easter should be started at once, for it is much better to grow them along slowly than to wait and bring them in later and force them much harder. This will give the plants more natural conditions and they will finish with shorter-jointed growths, being not nearly so tall, and well furnished with large heavy foliage completely covering the stems. The plants started at this time should be first placed in a greenhouse having a night temperature of 40° to 45° and if the buds and stems look very dry, frequent syringings of the branches will quickly make the buds fill up. After the first leaves are fully formed the plants can be moved in a warmer house and they should come along nicely for Easter—a house with carnation temperature should bring them in bloom by that time, but if the buds are not well set early in March a still warmer temperature will be required. If grown in a warm temperature keep a sharp lookout for red spiders, which gather on the blooms and quickly ruin them.

Hybrid Roses.

Well grown plants of Hybrid Perpetual roses are always good property at Easter and they are very easily brought into bloom when the date of that festival is in April. Pot grown stock is surer of the best results, but dormant stock of many varieties will produce nice plants if properly handled. The plants should be cut back to two eyes on each growth and started in a cool house, one with a night temperature of 40° to 45° being preferred, from the first to the fifteenth of January. Frequent syringings will swell the wood and cause the breaks to open evenly. When the buds form the plants should be watered with liquid manure at least once a week. They will probably not have to be carried to a warmer house, but if it is found they are not going to be in bloom in time a little warmer temperature will hurry them along. There are a few varieties that make fine pot plants, those most generally grown being Magna Charta, Mme. Gabriel Luizet and Frau Karl Druschki.

TRENTON, N. J.—Articles of incorporation have been filed by the Blackmon Floral Co. which is to carry on a general nursery business. The capital stock is $20,000 and the incorporators are George W. Blackmon, Harry E. Blackmon and Robert W. Vail.

SOUTH BEND, IND.—The Northern Indiana Florists' Association held its quarterly session in this city at the greenhouse of the South Bend Floral Co., January 17. M. J. Vesey of Fort Wayne addressed the meeting on the subject "The Growing of Carnations." The different florists' establishments were visited and the visiting delegates exhibited specimens of cut flowers. The next meeting will be held in April probably at Elkhart, and the annual meeting in July at Winona Lake.

St. Valentine's Dinner.

THE HEART OF CARNATIONS.

Have a center piece of red carnations of good size and mounded. Around the edge arrange a garland of maiden hair fern from which small red carnation hearts should be extended, say about six in all. In the center of the mound place a bow and arrow. Make the bow of white carnations and the arrow of lily of the valley. The lily of the valley should be full and artistically arranged at the top of the arrow. The center piece should be large enough to extend about six inches beyond the bow. The string of the bow could be made of white ribbon.

Use double heart baskets rich red in color and arrange a corsage of lily

STICK

A farmer in Texas was asked what would be the money value of the crops raised in Texas ten years from now if the increase was proportionate to the past ten years, and he said: "There ain't no such money."

That's about the size of the growth of the florist business in the United States. If you want to get your share of a sum that is so big, "there ain't no such money," place your advertisement in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, and stick.

of the valley in these, tied with a shower of small ornamental red hearts and a rosette of red ribbon.

THE DOME CENTERPIECE.

Suspend from the chandelier or so as to hang directly over the center of the table, a dome of red roses using red satin ribbon about No. 60 width in four streamers tied to where it is attached with a very large rosette. The dome should be hung opening up so that the round effect can be utilized for suspending three large hearts made of red roses, and from each heart extend a red streamer to the table, on which a flower candlestick should rest, these to be made of red roses, using heart shaped shades of red satin. Make a mat of maiden hair fern for the center of the table.

RED SWEET PEAS AND RED TULIPS.

Take an oblong basket and arrange in it loosely maiden hair ferns in an artistic manner. Then take two big heart frames about 18 inches tall and cover them with red sweet peas. Place one on each end of the basket and attach them together with a ruche of red roses falling over the maiden hair ferns. Arrange a garland of red roses around the fern basket. Heart shaped baskets filled with red sweet peas tied with a lover's knot of red gauze ribbon are effective.

A center piece made of red tulips is attractive using a round basket. In the center place a pole covered with red satin on top of which place a heart shaped basket filled with white tulips. Use red and white wide satin ribbon of soft texture, making a ruche under the basket at the top and extend from this streamers to the table. These streamers should be wired so they can be bent away from the tulip basket. At the foot of the basket make another rosette effect and allow it to rest on and fall from the table. On either side of the ribbon resting on the table, use asparagus vines. Heart shaped bonbon boxes filled with violets, or lily of the valley are good if the red and white effect is to be carried out.

THE FLORAL CAKE.

Cover the St. Valentine's cake with a bower in this manner: Have a frame made which will cover the center of table well and under which the ornamental cake can rest. This frame can be mossed lightly and arranged with lily of the valley. Place around it a very thick, full garland made of American Beauty roses with their foliage. On the cake place three flower candles as follows: One of yellow rose buds indicating the past; one of white rose buds indicating the present; and the third of shamrocks indicating the future. Place on top of these tiny electric lights covered with catgut of the same colors as candle it is to light. Suspend from the chandelier garlands made of asparagus with an American Beauty here and there. Make heart shaped corsages of red roses for souvenirs. Or, one American Beauty rose with lily of the valley surrounding it. Tie with red gauze ribbon.

A. E. KLUNDER.

A Fan of Flowers.

A charming fashion has been started in Paris by the Duchess of Montebello, whose love for flowers is well known in Paris society, by the carrying of a fan made of natural flowers, according to a foreign correspondent of the daily press. The fan has been discarded of late in Paris ballrooms, but these are made of fresh flowers and last but one evening.

An ingenious arrangement of wires, deftly concealed in a foundation of green silk, receives the stems and holds the flowers so that there is no danger of their getting out of place. When not in use the fresh flower fan has the appearance of an ordinary bouquet and is attached to the wrist by a gold chain made so thin as to be almost invisible. They cost from $10 upwards, according to flowers used. At a recent function the duchess appeared with a fan of orchids, the colors of which matched exactly the pale shade of her gown.

Beautiful Wedding Decoration.

A beautiful wedding decoration was arranged by W. J. Smyth at the Strauss wedding, which was solemnized at the Blackstone hotel, Chicago. The space reserved for the bridal party was marked by eight pedestals surmounted by vases of pink roses, between the pedestals and reaching to the entrance were garlands of smilax and pink roses. The ceiling was festooned with asparagus plumosus and a bank of palms was arranged for a background to the bridal party. White doves and butterflies so arranged that they looked as if flying among the roses and palms was an added feature, the whole making a very pleasing effect.

A BEAUTIFUL WEDDING DECORATION BY W. J. SMYTH, CHICAGO.

Smilax Dying.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

We have a bed of smilax in the carnation house which starts well, but when the strings get from three to eight feet high the leaves turn brown or yellowish and the stem dies. We water only when we think it needs it and have given it some liquid cow manure. Can you tell us what is the trouble? ANXIOUS.

This trouble is generally caused by overwatering and the first sign noticed is that the foliage appears to have a wilted appearance, therefore, from the description given it would seem that the plants were troubled with red spider which will quickly and badly infest smilax. The strings should be syringed often and preferably in the early morning, if the house is warm, before the ventilators are open. A carnation temperature is a little too cool to grow smilax successfully; it will grow at that temperature but a house of 60° is better. Ordinarily when smilax strings attain a height of eight feet they are ripe enough to cut. W.

Tulps and Narcissl for Easter.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

We potted La Reine and Yellow Prince tulips, Dutch hyacinths and narcissi in November and they have been kept in a cool cellar. When should they be brought into a greenhouse with a night temperature of 50° to 52° to have them in bloom for Easter?

E. C. H.

All the bulbs mentioned should be brought into such a greenhouse three weeks before the time they are wanted in bloom during March and early April, provided they have been properly cared for. Some varieties of Dutch hyacinths may take a little longer. Allowances will have to be made for the weather when plants are desired in the best condition for a certain date. W.

The First Retarded Lily of the Valley.

There are millions of lily of the valley pips and large numbers of other plants placed annually in cold storage and their sleep prolonged that they may be had in bloom at any desired time of the year, and it was the fickleness of a queen, writes Edwin A. Seidewitz in the Baltimore Sun, who vouches for the authenticity of the following, that required the grower to rob nature of its force, by keeping the plant dormant, and reserving its power until called upon by the grower.

There was a much admired and adored sovereign of Russia, who, like the queen of the fairy tales, was most beautiful, and by reason of this beauty could make any request of her consort, the emperor. She had a favorite flower—the lily of the valley. 'Twas Christmas and her boudoir was filled with the fragrance of this modest flower, but she was sad. The emperor asked:

"What ails thee, fair queen, hast thou not all thou desirest, with this thy favorite flower about thee?"

"No, your majesty, I am thinking of my day of birth, in June, when the sun is hot, when nature has taken from me the last of my favorite flowers. How beautiful it would be if among the roses I could have my beautiful lilies of the valley."

"Thou demandest much, but if it be within the power of human effort to produce them, thou shalt have thy favorite flowers in June, on the day of thy birth."

Immediately the emperor commanded his head gardener to appear and demanded that a basket laden with the favorite flower of the queen be produced on her birthday, under penalty of losing his position of garden inspector of St. Petersburg, with exile from his native land. Sadly the gardener left the presence of the emperor and began to study how to bring about the impossible. That night he had a dream. He dreamed that he was exiled from his home into Siberia. It was the queen's birthday and some freedom was given the prisoners. They were permitted to roam about, and, as the gardener was strolling along, he found in a crevice, sheltered from the north wind, a clump of lilies of the valley in bloom. He plucked them and thought if he could only send them to the queen he would regain his freedom. Awakening with the dream still vivid, the gardener began to gather his thoughts together and soon figured that if he could keep the pips of the lily of the valley in a dormant state he could bring them into bloom at any period he might prefer. The icehouses were being filled, ice harvest was at hand, why not place the pips in the ice and keep them asleep till then? He acted upon the impulse and three weeks before the queen's birthday he brought them out and let nature bring them into bloom. So it was that Garden Inspector Regal kept his position with the Russian emperor, for he had fulfilled the demand by presenting the queen with a basket of lilies of the valley in June on her birthday.

THE GLADIOLUS.

THE "Book of the Gladiolus," by Crawford and Van Fleet, price $1.25 postpaid.

Two kinds of gladiolus have been named President Taft, one introduced from France, the other of American origin. The nomenclature committee of the American Gladiolus Society should make a note of this. The French houses also offer a Grenadier.

Forced Gladioli in 1911.

Some data with regard to forced gladioli on the Chicago market, which appeared in our columns last June, may be of interest to our readers at this time and we therefore reproduce these particulars herewith.

FORCED GLADIOLI AT CHICAGO.

Gladioli, forced for early bloom, have been quite a feature of the market this season and the spikes were remarkably fine. The varieties most generally employed for this purpose are America, Augusta, Mrs. Francis King and Shakespeare, and the season and prices (per dozen spikes) ran about as follows:

Variety.	Apr.	May.	June.
America	$ —	$1.50	$1.00
Augusta	1.00	.75	.75
Mrs. F. King...	1.00	.75	.75
Shakespeare ...	—	.75	.75

Gladiolus Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Jr.

At the exhibition held by the American Gladiolus Society at Baltimore a certificate of merit was awarded L. Merton Gage, Orange, Mass., for gladiolus Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Jr., which we illustrate, and a few days later was awarded a first class certificate of merit by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The flower is of the giant size, often measuring six inches across, of a delicate salmon pink with a distinct blood-red blotch in the throat, presenting a vivid contrast of pronounced attractiveness. It is of the Lemoine type and coloring effect and originated with A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind., who seems to have given it a gandavensis stem, enabling it to absorb a large quantity of water, so that it will open nearly every flower after being cut and placed in water.

The variety was first exhibited at Bar Harbor, Me., in 1909, where it was greatly admired and named for a well-known society lady who saw it there. The stock will not be sufficient to offer it in quantity for about two years, but judging from its popularity at Baltimore the demand for it will be enormous when it is offered to the trade.

Forcing Gladiolus.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly inform me when is the proper time to plant bulbs of Gladiolus Mrs. Francis King and other large flowering varieties to have them in bloom for Decoration day. C. P.

To have the large flowered varieties of gladioli that are more generally forced in greenhouse for early flowering in bloom for Decoration day, the bulbs should be planted from January 15 to February 1, depending upon the temperature in which they are to be grown and upon weather conditions. It should always be borne in mind that to have a flower in its best condition upon a certain day, that it is almost impossible to name a fixed date (making a hard and fast rule) at which the plant should be started for seasons vary, both in regard to temperature and the amount of light, and these two factors exert great influence upon the growth of plants and the production of flowers. It is therefore advisable to start the plants early enough to have them come in to flower on time in a backward season and then if they prove to be too forward have cooler houses where they can be retarded. The bulbs should therefore be planted in boxes or flats that can easily be moved from one location to another, for if planted in the bench it may not be possible to lower or increase the temperature without injury to the other plants in the house. Again gladioli are not like lilies and the Dutch bulbs which are planted early, and after being well rooted retarded, and then brought into the house and the whole lot bloom all at once. The blooming of these bulbs with a lot all planted at one time will extend over two or three weeks. The best way for all growers is to make

they are being grown for a certain date and then regulate the temperature accordingly, moving them into lower temperatures if too forward, or into more heat if they are known to be backward.

Gladioli are being more generally forced for cut flowers every year, the production of earlier varieties having greatly aided their culture. These varieties ripen their bulbs much earlier consequently giving the grower a more favorable start. The first plantings are made about December 1 and in order to have a succession plantings are made weekly until the first of March. Like the forcing of bulbs, the earlier plantings will take more time in producing their flowers than those planted later or nearer the natural season. They are planted ordinarily in the benches in good soil, there being no attempt made to have them at a certain date and grown throughout in the same temperature, being cut and marketed when in the best condition. Good strong bulbs should be selected for forcing, it does not pay to attempt growing the small bulbs for they invariably produce an inferior spike of bloom that will not sell at a remunerative price. The spikes are cut as soon as the lower flowers begin to open and held in water until enough flowers have bloomed to make a good looking spike. The flowers spot very quickly if any water gets on the petals after they have begun to open, so if grown in a house where syringing is necessary all the spikes showing color should be cut before the house is syringed.

The varieties grown for forcing purposes are America, a soft pink, Augusta, almost a white, Shakespeare, white with red and Mrs. Francis King, bright pink. For June flowering any of the best varieties can be planted the last of February or first of March and they will bloom in late June and early July before any of the outside flowers are fit to cut.

Gladioli For Cut Blooms.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

What are the best gladioli for forcing and outdoor cultivation? How should the open ground be prepared and what is the best space to give the bulbs or corms?

W.

The gladioli which have sold best as cut flowers in recent years are America, Mrs. Francis King, Augusta and Shakespeare, in the order named, both for forcing and outdoor culture. In field work the ground should be mellowed by deep plowing and thorough harrowing this fall, applying suitable chemical fertilizers, wood ashes etc., if necessary, before plowing where the soil does not wash badly in winter or early spring. Plow lightly and harrow thoroughly again in spring. Plant the corms in zigzag double rows at intervals of two to six inches, according to the size of the corms, the rows three feet apart to permit of horse cultivation. As the larger corms bloom earliest, it will be found economical of space and labor in cutting to grade the corms. Crawford and Van Fleet in their recent book, "The Gladioli," give much additional data of value to growers of this plant, price $1.25, postpaid.

Retaining Foliage Makes Larger Bulbs.

In an article which appeared in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, issue of October 7, page 504, under the title of "Gladiolus Bulb and Flower Spikes," E. Y. Teas & Son of Centerville, Ind., state that gladioli bulbs that had not been allowed to bloom, the spike being cut before any bud showed color, were found to be decidedly larger than those from which the spikes had been cut and the bulblets much more numerous. The following expressions of the opinions of the celebrated growers of this flower in regard to this matter are very interesting:

FROM M. CRAWFORD, CUYAHOGA FALLS, O.

That the production of the bloom in the gladiolus is a severe drain on the resources of the plant is a settled question with me. For this reason I aim to cut off the spike as soon as it comes out of the stalk, before it begins to show color, unless I want to raise flowers or seed. If seed is the object, one or two pods to the spike is sufficient. In that case I break off the young spike to the lower bud or two when it is very tender. At this time the plant is making vigorous growth, having to furnish food for bulb, bulblets and flowers—possibly seeds. Removing the spike early leaves so much more food to feed the bulb and bulblets. As the latter are produced late—about the time the spike appears—we might expect more of them, although we can not be sure of what might have been.

After many years' experience and observation I have reached these conclusions: Leaving the spike to produce flowers and seeds results in a thin, half-starved bulb and small bulblets; cutting off the spike when the first flowers open does little harm; cutting off the spikes before it shows demonstrates that the corms grew larger and produced more bulblets. Very large bulbs of the variety America are preferred by florists who want them to grow under glass, so if pinching out the buds makes larger bulbs, this would make them more salable for greenhouse culture.

color, without removing any foliage, results in a thick, well nourished bulb and strong bulblets. Any injury to the foliage during the growing season is an injury to the bulb, and for this reason we cut off only the two small leaves when cutting flowers for market.

M. CRAWFORD.

FROM L. MERTON GAGE, ORANGE, MASS.

Regarding gladiolus bulbs that have not been allowed to bloom, the buds pinched out before color showed being decidedly larger than those from which the spikes had been cut for market and that the bulblets were much more numerous, I wish to say that this does not settle the question as to whether the bulbs from which the flowering spikes were cut were injured by letting the spikes develop until they were marketable. It only

It is my opinion that the bulbs from which the flowering spikes were allowed to develop are just as good as the big ones from which the buds were nipped. I have noted that some varieties, that I have seeded, produced the following year equally as good flowering spikes.

Although I have not experimented extensively along these lines, I do not believe it makes much difference whether the buds are pinched out or allowed to develop a flower or two. Some varieties seem to do their best only every alternate year under the best of treatment. L. MERTON GAGE.

FROM E. T. BARNES, SPENCER, IND.

In regard to the question whether the cutting of the bud of gladiolus as soon as possible causes the increase in the size of the corms, I would say that it has for some time been a settled fact that taking the bud not only increases the size of the corm but also increases the production of bulblets as well, and it will not be long until the general public will realize the crime many seedsmen and growers are committing by selling the fully developed corms from which the vitality has been sapped by cutting the developed bloom spike. Growers generally know that the corms which have been grown to first size and then allowed to develop a bloom spike which is sold, will not produce a desirable bloom spike the next season.

Such corms can be easily distinguished by their flattened shape. Corms of blooming vitality approach more nearly an oval shape and no other kind should be sold for blooming stock, but I am sorry to say that many growers hold their corms until their vitality has been partially destroyed and then sell them.

The book, "The Gladiolus," by M. Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, is full of information on the subject of gladiolus and has practically no errors.

FROM E. S. MILLER, WADING RIVER, N. Y.

Although I have never tested it I am a firm believer in not cutting gladioli blooms for market. I think the bulbs are strengthened by leaving all the foliage on, and in cutting for market much of the foliage is cut, particularly on short spiked sorts. My custom has been to cut the spikes when the flowers were fading and before the seed was set, cutting above the leaves. It is the seed bearing that exhausts the plant. It is not practical to cut them before the flowers open. In the same manner I treat Hyacinthus candicans cutting the spikes when in flower. If left to mature seed the bulb is ruined.

Our experience has been the same as that of E. Y. Teas & Son.

Washing Gladiolus Bulblets.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Are small bulbs and bulblets of gladiolus injured by washing immediately after digging? H.

In regard to washing gladiolus cormlets when dug, will say that I have no practical experience, for two reasons: First, this would come at a time when the work is pressing to the utmost of our ability, and would add just that much to an already overcrowded task. Second, it does not appear to me to be an advisable method of treatment. It would necessitate the drying of the cormlets in order to prevent subsequent sprouting, and it would be somewhat difficult to determine the proper degree to be preserved for best results. The natural moisture of the cormlets, as dug from the soil, can best be assured by storing them, mixed with soil in about equal proportions, and in not too large bulk, lest heating ensue. Thus they can be kept in the best condition during the winter, and the fine soil can be sifted out at planting time, if thought best. Formerly, I was accustomed to washing the cormlets at time of planting, and this is most easily done by sifting them in a common sieve of rather fine mesh—say, No. 6—under water. Latterly, however, I have discontinued this practice, and sift only for the purpose of removing the very small cormlets, which I do not ordinarily plant. As the result of more than a quarter of a century's experience, I have chosen the method of wintering cormlets in a mixture of fine sifted soil, as I have described above, as the best plan I know.

WILBUR A. CHRISTY.

Color: Bright Pink.

No. We cannot see how small bulbs and bulblets of gladiolus would be injured by washing immediately after digging, if they are properly dried. We usually wait until we are through digging before cleaning and washing, but often when we have a few of some valuable sort we wash them as soon as dug, drying them on screens in a room heated by hot air. We always wash and dry all small bulbs and bulblets in this manner just as soon as we can get at them, and we have never had any bad results.

W. K. FLETCHER.

I do not think it would be advisable to wash bulbs and bulblets of gladioli immediately after digging, for unless they were thoroughly dried they would be very apt to mould and decay. The trouble usually is with growers to get the stock harvested in a dry condition, and I certainly can see no reason for washing the bulbs.

I. S. HENDRICKSON.

I have never had any experience in washing small bulbs or bulblets of gladioli immediately after digging, except in a limited way and I have not found that with such small lots any injury was done.

ARTHUR COWEE.

Gladiolus Bulb Sorting Machine.

W. Manger & Sons, of Guernsey, Channel Islands, England, have in use a bulb sorting machine which grades the bulbs in the several sizes without ever making a mistake. The bulbs are placed upon a table which is worked by an electric motor (and which is also used to light the premises) and by a rapid motion backward and forward the bulbs are carried along the under board. This is divided into ten sections, all of which except the first are perforated with different sized holes through which the bulbs fall. The first section clears off the rubbish, the second allows the smallest bulbs to fall through, the third the next size and so on until the largest fall through the last section. To prevent the bulbs from sticking in the perforations two rollers are constantly passing backwards and forwards which move any fixed bulbs. It does the work of half a dozen employees much more carefully and effectively.

Koerner's New Gladiolus and Dahlias.

The new gladiolus Early Bird, placed upon the market this year by H. W. Koerner, Milwaukee, Wis., has proved a great favorite with all who have handled it and a prizewinner wherever exhibited, having been awarded honorable mention by the Society of American Florists at Rochester in 1910, where it also received first prize at the exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society and again won first prize at the same society's exhibition at Baltimore in 1911. All these awards were made to this variety when it was exhibited under the name of Venus, but there being a variety extant of that name, it was changed to Early Bird. It is a very early variety, being, it is stated, two weeks earlier than America in blooming. The color is bright pink, beautifully veined, towards the throat becoming lighter and tinged with salmon, with a dash of yellow on the lower petals which forms a very attractive combination. It is a fine shipper and its earliness makes it desirable for forcing.

Mr. Koerner is also distributing this year four dahlias of exceptional merit which are described as follows:

Crimson Beauty, a rich, deep crimson of the decorative type, the flowers being about five inches in diameter on long, wiry stems well above the foliage and always fully double. It is predicted that this variety will be a leader for cut flower purposes.

Golden Nugget is of a new type resembling very much in its appearance a chrysanthemum. The flowers are light orange-yellow in color, borne on stems 18 to 24 inches long, not quite double but with long, loose, waving petals.

Snow Storm, a pure snow white of the century type, very large and on long stems. The plants are very productive.

Cream City, a giant single of a pleasing shade of buff and a leading single for cut flower purposes.

Winter Flowering Begonias.

The following descriptions of new winter flowering begonias which were given an award of merit by the Royal Horticultural Society are from the Gardeners' Magazine, the exhibitors being James Veitch & Sons:

Exquisite.—This is a splendid addition to the winter flowering race, as it produces quite large single blooms of great beauty; these are of the pretty pink shade, heavily flushed towards the tips of the segments with rosy carmine.

Acquisition.—In this fine variety the habit of growth is excellent, and the flowers of good size; the color is pale pink, a very pretty shade.

Her Majesty.—One of the three new varieties, this gives the most distinct coloring, its large flowers being yellow, with rosy suffusion, and giving an apricot effect of great beauty.

DUNDEE, N. Y.—Debert J. Hobart, a retired florist, was stricken with paralysis January 16 and is in a critical condition.

WITH THE GROWERS

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill.

The one magnetic point toward which all the visitors at the coming convention of the Society of American Florists to be held in Chicago next summer will be drawn, is the greenhouse establishment of Poehlmann Bros. Co. at Morton Grove, Ill., which has become renowned not only for the size of the plant, which is probably the largest devoted to the culture of cut flowers in the world, but also for the quality of the product, for at all the large exhibitions held in the west and also all shows of national character the name of Poehlmann Bros. Co. has appeared as one of the large winners of premiums. While this firm has been chiefly celebrated for its roses, carnations and chrysanthemums, for in those flowers have the large majority of premiums been secured, yet few people who have not visited this place know, that under the vast area of glass comprising 45 acres, are grown so many different crops, for here can be found growing in the highest state of perfection nearly every flower used by the florist during the year. It is doubtful if any establishment in this country, growing entirely for wholesale, houses such diversified interests, for beside the two great staples, roses and carnations, in which we are so apt to find the larger plants specializing, here are to be found in large numbers orchids, chrysanthemums, sweet peas, lilies and lily of the valley at all seasons, bulbous stock of all kinds, including tulips, hyacinths and narcissi, stevia, mignonette, as well as asparagus plumosus in both strings and sprays and large quantities of A. Sprengeri. It will thus be seen that this establishment will appeal to every grower in the country, for here he will surely find the crop in which he is particularly interested grown to the best stage possible.

This place has been described so often that it would seem that everything had been fully covered, but it would take columns of space to fully write of the details of this establishment so that the reader would get a thorough insight into the methods employed, and no matter how often one may visit this plant he is sure to be impressed with some new thing which will come under his observation. Expansion has been the great word in the growth of this establishment, for year after year have been erected additions which, though they may not appear large here, would make greenhouse plants of good-sized dimensions themselves if built in individual sections. The last year's addition for example, was the erection of thirteen houses 250 feet in length by 27 feet in width, the construction of which was very fully described in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, issue of March 18, 1911, page 370.

Mechanically this establishment is probably as perfect as it can be made, for here are to be found all the latest appliances of proved merit that in the opinion of the proprietors would assist either in the saving of labor or increase the quality or output, and it was with a smile that one of the employes answered the question, "If it had been difficult to keep the houses warm during the excessive recent cold spell?" "We didn't know in here that there had been any cold weather." The liquid manure tanks which cook the manure by steam before it is distributed are very interesting to all growers. The latest boilers are provided with automatic stokers fed by long coal chutes, and it was a pleasure to see the perfect system of the whole establishment, and to see how easily the directing hands of August Poehlmann at Plant A and Adolph at Plant B accomplish such a large amount of work.

To say that the crops are in a high state of perfection inadequately describes the beautiful flowers which are cut and sent to market. The carnations were bearing very heavily and the flowers were extremely large on exceptionally long, strong stems. All the leading standard varieties are grown and the novelties given a good test. Propagation is now in full swing and it takes many hands to place in the sand and pot the hundreds of thousands of cuttings that are raised, and they are all grown in pots, no flattening being known in their culture. The orchids are in prime condition and hundreds of Cattleya Trianae are being cut. It certainly was interesting to walk through the houses and see the various shades of color in the blooms on these plants. It almost seemed as if no two were exactly alike.

Sweet peas are being grown much more extensively, eight of the large new houses being devoted to this flower, four of them being now in full bloom and four with the vines just starting to climb which will be in bloom later. The flowers are very fine, being large and borne on 12 to 14-inch stems, many carrying three flowers. A bed of white which we illustrate was grand, and we were told it was White Blanche Ferry (?). Other varieties grown were Florence Denzer, Mrs. A. Wallace, Blanche Ferry and Christmas Pink. Thousands of lily of the valley were in different stages of growth and it was all up to the renowned Poehlmann quality. Lilies in all stages were sending forth their beautiful flowers and the large quantity for Easter were just being started. The different bulbous plants were to be seen in all stages of development, from those from which flowers were being cut to the boxes being brought in from storage.

The roses in Plant B are in splendid shape, and it is wonderful to note the controlling hand which brings house after house into successive flowering, for there are houses bearing heavily, some with strong shoots with the high colored young foliage which showed them to be in the best of health, just setting their buds to follow those that were now in flower, and the houses which had borne such a heavy cut during the holidays breaking their new eyes. All the novelties are to be seen and they are growing nicely, but it takes some little time to learn the requirements of a new rose and to have the variety adapt itself to new conditions. Melody was in grand shape and had produced a wonderful crop and was still in flower, the long, pointed buds on strong, stiff stems making a grand showing. This variety seems to have made itself at home at once and it would seem it was well thought of by the large number of young plants being grown. Propagation here is also taking up lots of room and both grafted and root stock are grown by the hundred thousand, and the young plants just potted are growing luxuriantly.

It certainly well pays one to visit this place and see what energy and system can accomplish in the greenhouse. The flowers are shipped as soon as in the best condition, refrigerators being at hand to harden off the stock, to the store at 32-36 E. Randolph street, where the wholesale store of the firm is located, and here is to be seen the same perfect system in handling the stock under the management and watchful eye of John Poehlmann, who, with his able assistants, dispose of the immense output of this vast expanse of glass.

Howard & Smith, Los Angeles.

While Howard & Smith are always spoken of as a Los Angeles firm, the increasing value of land in the city has driven them to look for more open quarters, and they have been long established at Montebello, eight miles out in the clear mountain air where stock of all kinds flourishes. Fred Howard was our pilot recently around the extensive nursery, both houses and greenhouses, and though getting on towards winter there were large quantities of interesting things in flower. To cater to its immense catalogue trade this firm grows hundreds of thousands of blooms are fine in color, produced in long spikes and excellent in every way. Gerbera Jamesoni again is a plant that gets a great deal of attention here, and there is a marvelous variety in the shape and color of the flowers of the hybrid forms. Gazanias are beautiful anywhere, but the magnificent hybrids here are like nothing in any other part of the country. It seems odd to think of such a tender plant as Fred Sander marguerite flowering outside at the end of November, but here it was in full beauty, showing the value of this fine novelty for cutting. It has a tendency here to revert a little to the single form, but probably that would disappear under pot culture or in less rich soil.

Climbing Cecil Brunner is a wonderful rose in this section. It is in growth and flower the whole time, and its flowers are slightly larger than the old form. In some places this rose is used for a stock to bud or graft indoor roses on and with considerable success. Rose growers in the east and in Europe would be astonished at the rapidity with which roses can be worked up here, and it is said that the old complaint against California grown own root roses, of going soft on arrival, can not be brought against plants budded on this and other stocks. The general collection of roses here is large and of fine varieties, but much too extensive to be more than mentioned here, only to say that the growth of the plants, both root and tops, is remarkable.

For all the largest sizes of palms grown in the lath houses, concrete pots are used—they look far neater than young stock of all imaginable varieties, but it is hardly necessary to say anything of these, as it would simply be a list. It is only fair to say, though, that healthier, more regular or finely grown stock could not be found on the Pacific coast or elsewhere, for that matter.

One of the specialties here is a strain of delphiniums that flowers practically all the year around. Winter and summer, whenever we have been here these have always been in flower and the tin cans so freely used in this section and are cooler than the ordinary pot. And in passing it may be well to note that the use of tin cans in this section of the country is not, as eastern growers imagine, entirely a matter of cost. It has been found that some plants, eucalypti of sorts especially, do much better in them than in pots, hence their use. To return to the palms, the stock here in all sizes, from immense kentias and seaforthias to tiny cocos and others in thumb pots, is in as fine condition as any grown under glass. The day for rusty, blackened palms here is past, and in order to keep up with the procession growers must have their stock first rate in every way, and this is the case at Howard & Smith's. Two pretty varieties must be mentioned before closing these rambling notes—one is the beautiful pure white Tecoma jasminoides alba, a form from which every turn of color has disappeared; the other, Yucca radiosa, a graceful, beautiful species with leaves as fine as those of a dasylium, of both of which there is a good stock here.

BUSINESS IMPROVING.

Business the past week has shown an improvement, although the weather has been very disagreeable and bad for transient trade. The supply of flowers has fallen off, all roses being scarce and white ones particularly so. Prices for the latter advanced 25 per cent, which is unusual for the time of year. American Beauties are very scarce, much of the stock that does come in is very poor, short buds and bull-heads being very much in evidence. Carnations, while not so scarce as roses, are sold up pretty clean every day. Mrs. C. W. Ward has grown to be a great favorite and is likely to become the standard of its color, as was William Scott and Mrs. Joost in their day. All the bulbous stock that grades up is selling well. Paper White narcissus, while in demand, is always in stock everywhere as nearly every grower has it on the side and with such a supply prices rule low. Sweet peas are as staple as the carnation and large quantities are sold. The quality and variety of form and color is getting better each year. Freesia is also a great favorite and moves off nicely. Cattleyas are plentiful and a shade off in price. Gardenias often take the place of violets for the corsage and some excellent long-stemmed stock is seen. Violets have been scarce, particularly the singles, but the growers say there will soon be a steady supply. White lilac has never been finer and is much used in dinner table decoration.

NOTES.

The event of the week was the Widener dinner and dance at the Bellevue-Stratford. J. J. Habermehl's Sons were given carte blanche and the cost of the decorations was variously estimated at from six to eight thousand dollars. All of which, we hope, is true. At any rate the best was none too good—orchids, gardenias, lily of the valley, the best of all kinds of roses, particularly Killarney, lilac, violets and spring flowers were used lavishly. All around the ball room small sections or cozy corners were spaced off and decorated, each with a different treatment, that made them very attractive. Every part of the large room and balcony was elaborately dressed, the stage where the orchestra was placed was a hower of tropical plants, all the electric lights shone through pink silk feather roses. The dinner tables were all decorated differently and it must have taxed the Habermehl forces severely to get up such a variety, with the comparatively limited assortment of flowers in the market. As a whole, the decoration was very beautiful, being one of the largest in point of consumption of flowers ever given in this city and in the manner of its execution a great credit to the house of Habermehl.

All members of the Florists' Club and others of the craft must not miss the next meeting of the club on Tuesday, February 6. There is sure to be a fine exhibition of novelties in the rose and carnation section, as well as other choice things. Aside from this feature President Vincent's address and the report of the rose and carnation meetings at Detroit from the lips of those who were there will make every minute of the meeting interesting and instructing.

Henry F. Michell Co. say their business increased 33 per cent in their new location, which, although twice as large as their old store, soon became crowded and they have been obliged to add another warehouse for storage and shipping purposes to enable them to properly handle their rapidly increasing business.

Dennis T. Connor, the Foley representative, is actively at the job and says he has several important contracts almost closed. He secured the contract for the houses for the large addition that W. A. Leonard of Lansdowne will erect as soon as the weather will permit.

Greenhouse activity, if the building of new houses may be so indicated, bids fair to keep the builders on the move the coming season. One of the "Darby Road" growers has laid in a large lot of glass, taking advantage of present low prices and quite a large addition is in sight.

The interior of the Century Flower Shop has been arranged like a street flower market, over the counters have been placed awnings and the counters divided into spaces like separate stalls from which the flowers are sold. The effect is novel and pleasing.

TRADE NOT UP TO EXPECTATIONS.

While the dealers are not complaining of the conditions of business there seems to be a general feeling that it might be better. There has been a considerable demand for decorative work, but the expectations of the early part of the season have not been quite realized. Then again, that gaunt spectre, the high cost of living, haunts every home; the weather is disagreeable and a state of unrest and dissatisfaction that is not conducive to good business is abroad. Just now the market is fairly well stocked with everything that is needed and a week or two of good sunshine would certainly bring in a surplus. There is already a good supply of roses and carnations and tulips are becoming more plentiful. The yellow narcissus is not yet on the market in great quantities but the supply is increasing. Callas, lilies, sweet peas and freesias are all in reasonable supply.

NOTES.

George H. Cooke has been having quite a rush of dinner and luncheon decorations during the past week. On January 25, at the home of Mrs. Hope Slater he executed a very fine dinner decoration entirely of azaleas. Prof. Wolters and Mme. Van der Cruyssen were the varieties used. The artistic arrangement of azaleas in a decoration is among Mr. Cooke's many qualifications for a high-class decorator. On the night of January 26 he decorated for a club dinner, the decoration being arranged to represent a hunting scene with miniature hunters on horseback. Dogs, the fox and hurdles were also a part of the plan, a wealth of choice gardenias and carnations adding color to the scene.

George Field continues to send in a good supply of orchids. A New York paper of January 28 gives a vivid description of the dangers of orchid hunting in South America. At George Field's there is no danger of being shot by Indians or bitten by snakes, so it stands to reason that it is a good place to buy. Apropos of this it would be interesting to know if half the stories told by the orchid collectors are true, or are they the work of clever press agents?

We recently noticed at the store of the Gude Bros. Co. a number of pots of very fine white lilac, which had come from their greenhouses. Their supply of American Beauty and other roses is well kept up, likewise gardenias, carnations and the great variety of other stocks for which their range is justly noted.

J. H. Small & Sons are doing a good business at both their stores. On January 25 they executed a fine decoration at Rancher's for the dinner given by Postmaster-General Hitchcock in honor of President Taft.

Harry McCabe, son of M. J. McCabe, the Good Hope grower, was rather seriously burned in an accidental manner some time ago, but is rapidly recovering.

St. Paul, Minn.

The Florists of this city held a special meeting Friday evening, January 26, at O. R. Eckhardt's wholesale house to decide whether or not a flower show would be held at St. Paul November next. With one or two exceptions every florist of the city was present. The meeting was called to order by N. C. Hansen, who with a few brief remarks stated to those present the object of this meeting. F. D. Willis, superintendent of Oakland Cemetery, was elected temporary chairman and he filled the chair with credit. S. Dysinger was elected temporary secretary which also met the approval of all present. The meeting now being open, the first business in order was for all to present their views regarding a fall show. Many speeches were made and a great deal of enthusiasm was manifest and various ideas advanced. But the main object was where and how to obtain the money to successfully hold a flower show which would reflect credit on the city, and be a financial success. Finally a motion was made and carried directing the secretary to receive guarantees from those present, stating the exact amount they would contribute in cash towards holding the prospective fall flower show. After the guarantees were all received, the secretary announced the total amounted to $3,000. Tremendous cheers poured forth from everyone present and the question was settled for we will have the fall show. The next in order was the forming of a permanent flower show organization for the purpose of preparing and conducting the show and the following officers were elected: L. L. May, president; O. J. Olson, vice-president; S. Dysinger, secretary; C. F. Vogt, treasurer. After the officers were elected Mr. Willis escorted President-Elect L. L. May to the chair and after being presented he accepted the office with a speech full of life and enthusiasm which brought forth applause from everyone present. Each officer elected took the chair with a speech pledging himself to fill the same and endeavor to co-operate so as to place on exhibition a successful show. A few committees were appointed and the meeting adjourned with a proud feeling for the evening's work which was a surprise to all present.

PASADENA, CALIF.—It is proposed to grow flowers on the city farm so as to provide against any probable shortage on New Year's day hereafter.

A WELL-ARRANGED basket of flowers makes one of the finest valentines, and a good showing of these before St. Valentine's day is sure to meet with demand.

THE Missouri Botanical Garden announces that two scholarships will be awarded prior to April 1 and the successful candidates will be started as pupils on that date. Applications must be received by Director William Trelease, Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, Mo., not later than March 1, who will furnish all necessary information.

THE preliminary list of premiums offered by the American Rose Society at the coming National Show at New York in 1913, for rose plants, has been adopted, and includes classes for climbing or rambler, polyantha, hybrid tea and hybrid perpetual roses, and gold and silver medal for novelties. Special prizes have been offered by Peter Henderson & Co., New York, for best plants of Rose Silver Moon and Dr. W. Van Fleet. Judging is to be done by the scales adopted by the society.

Correction.

The price of Boston fern clumps in the advertisement of Fred Hall, Montclair, Colo., in our last issue should have been $30.00 per 100, a typographical error making it read $3.00 per 100.

Important to Subscribers.

The date on the yellow address label on your copy of THE AMERICAN FLORIST will show when your subscription expires: Please renew subscription promptly on expiration to make certain of receiving your copy of each issue.

To Increase Interest in Agriculture.

In order to increase the interest in agricultural pursuits the Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with the Department of the Interior and the various state and county authorities, has proposed the plan where consolidated or centralized graded schools have been established, of donating or setting aside sufficient land adjacent to these schools to permit the platting of small tracts for planting. A course in elementary agriculture is to be taught and an actual demonstration of irrigation and cultivation is to be given with prizes for the best results. The Reclamation Service will furnish free of charge the water for irrigation and the Department of Agriculture and State Experiment Station will supply seeds and instructors.

Fungine A Remedy for Mildew.

We have received the following communication from L. C. Ebel, of the Aphine Manufacturing Co., in regard to the use of fungine as a remedy for mildew:

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Our attention has been called to the inquiry of "N. C. H." in your issue of January 20, as to whether there is any other remedy than sulphur for the control of mildew. Your correspondent replies that there is no other safe remedy than sulphur applied to steam pipes.

May we correct this to say that fungine is a specific remedy for the control of mildew on roses, and it is today being used by one of the leading Killarney rose growers of the country for the control of mildew on that particular plant. It is sprayed on the foliage and while its principal ingredient is sulphur, it is so treated that it leaves absolutely no stain on the foliage; in fact, many claim who use it that it benefits the foliage. In this respect it is a much cleaner material to use than the sulphur and lime and sulphur dusted on the foliage or painted on the pipes. L. C. EBEL.

American Rose Society.

Following the Detroit exhibition, the executive committee of the American Rose Society met in New York City to act upon the vote taken at the annual meeting, accepting the proposition of the National Flower Show Committee of the S. A. F. to join with them in the effort to produce in New York City a duplication of the great Boston show. The special business on hand was the preparation of the rose plant schedule. This was done by taking the plant division used at Boston and revising the same. The schedule, rules and regulations were forwarded to the national committee, thus giving early notice to all plant growers.

New York with its diversified interests and concentrated population is different from any other city—it is the greatest consuming center on the continent. The location of the building, its size, ease of access by every line of transportation, will probably bring tens of thousands of people to see the exhibition. At the exhibition held at the Museum of Natural History two years ago, the doorkeeper stated that only one other occasion had brought out such a number of visitors. BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

Florists' Club of Philadelphia.

ROSE AND CARNATION EXHIBIT.

At the next meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia to be held February 6, there will be held an exhibition of new roses and carnations and also of varieties now in commerce, and those disseminating novelties this year are requested to exhibit them at this meeting. Any who cannot attend the meeting in person can send their exhibits to the secretary, David Rust, Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, Pa., who will see that they are properly cared for and staged.

The recent rose and carnation show at Detroit will be the topic for discussion and it is expected that President Vincent of the S. A. F. will be present to talk on matters pertaining to that society. Any members of the trade from other cities will be cordially welcome. DAVID RUST, Sec'y.

Chicago's Big Spring Flower Show.

The Chicago spring flower show is close at hand and many promises of exhibits have been received. The show opens March 12 in the Art Institute. Every effort has been made to reach prospective exhibitors with preliminary premium lists and letters, but it is impossible of course to reach everyone, and every florist who is interested is urged to write for literature to J. H. Burdette, Secretary, 1620 W. 104th place, Chicago.

The spring show is an experiment, and one which every florist should desire to be successful. In being admitted to the Art Institute, where art exhibitions of the highest class are held, the florists have been notably honored. No other line of industry could hope to be allowed to exhibit its wares under such auspices. The Horticultural Society appeals to the florists all over the country, but particularly in the neighborhood of Chicago, to help make the exhibition one which will do honor to horticulture and be worthy of the Art Institute.

Elmer D. Smith, Adlan, Mich., writes that he will try to send some late chrysanthemums. Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., promises an exhibit of Benora. Jos. Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa., will send roses, orchids and kentias. Bertermann Bros. Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; H. N. Lown of Rhinebeck, N. Y.; W. J. & M. S. Vesey of Fort Wayne, Ind., and H. Eichholz of Waynesboro, Pa., are some of the others who have written that they will send exhibits. The final premium lists are being prepared. Write for one.

ROSES SCARCE.

With the continuance of dark weather the market conditions remain practically the same with the exception of the bulb stock, such as tulips and daffodils, which are commencing to come in more freely. Lilies are of fine grade and are selling well. Violets have suffered somewhat for the past few weeks but are beginning to sell again. The demand for McKinley day was not exceptionally strong, there being plenty of colored stock to supply all orders, the larger demand being as usual, for the light colored stock. Roses are a very scarce article and are cleaning out daily and bringing a good price. There are green goods enough to fill all orders.

NOTES.

Holton & Hunkel Co. are cutting some fine Killarney roses, but like all the other rose growers in this section, they find they could use many more to supply the orders received. The other crops are doing finely and the store trade is very satisfactory.

G. Rusch & Co. report having had a considerable amount of shipping trade the past week. This firm is receiving some fine lilies which are being disposed of readily.

Edlfsen-Leidiger Co. report business good, having had more than their share of funeral work for the past two weeks, which has kept them busy.

The Olympia, formerly owned by Nohos & Co., has been purchased by the Chimekas Bros., who will continue the business as before.

C. C. Pollworth Co. is cleaning up daily the large shipments of stock which they are receiving and are well pleased with business.

Ambrose Sonnenberg of the Sonnenberg Co., was married on Wednesday, January 24, to Miss Ella Tews.

A. B. Loofbourow is more than pleased with business for the past two weeks.

The bowling scores this week were:

FLOWERS VERY SCARCE.

The past week has been a very busy one for the florists, the demand has been large and everything sold quickly, stock of all kinds being scarce. Graduating exercises, the second Imperial ball and funeral work kept everything sold up clean. The only thing on which the prices dropped was violets.

NOTES.

A meeting of the officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club was held last week at the residence of J. J. Beneke. All were present and an enjoyable evening was spent. The object of the meeting was to formulate plans to make the meetings interesting for the members. The following programme was proposed and adopted: February meeting, discussion on pot-grown roses, by W. C. Young, F. A. Weber, C. E. DeWever and Jules Bourdet; March meeting, Easter plants by G. B. Windler, John Held, C. C. Sanders and E. Schray; April meeting, summer cut flowers by E. W. Guy, Chas. Hecht, I. J. Fillmore and W. J. Pilcher; May meeting, relations of the retailer, wholesaler and grower by J. F. Ammann, Otto Sander, W. C. Smith and A. S. Halsted; June meeting, relative value of overhead and sub-irrigation by C. E. DeWever, Jules Bourdet, G. Grossart and P. Schindler; July meeting, chrysanthem-mums, cut flowers by H. Emmans; pot plants by Carl Beyer, assisted by C. C. Sander, J. Held, H. C. Irish and A. H. Ahner. W. F.

Otto G. Koenig's resignation as secretary of the Horticultural Society has been accepted. An early meeting will be held to adjust affairs and straighten matters up. There has always been a bad feeling, and if they had joined with the Florists' club it would have been another story. An association of this kind must be upheld by florists and there should be no animosity between the members.

C. Young & Sons Co. had the second annual Imperial ball. The decorations were beautiful and expensive.

Harry Young & Son is building up a nice trade. J. P. Gadd, the designer, is up to date and doing all he can to help the place.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The State Florists' Association of Indiana met in this city January 18 and elected the following officers: George R. Gause, Richmond, president; Charles G. Pahud, Indianapolis, first vice-president; M. A. Barrick, Seymour, second vice-president; Herman Junge, Cumberland, secretary; Homer L. Wiegand, Indianapolis, treasurer. A display of carnations was staged at the convention and in the evening a banquet was held.

GOOD STOCK RATHER SCARCE.

There has been considerable change in the market during the last week for the retailers have been quite busy, having a good transient trade and also a large number of functions at which decorations were arranged and the receipts have not materially increased. The days have been cloudy, there having been but a small amount of sunlight and temperatures have been low, which has made the production of flowers rather slow, so the receipts have consequently been comparatively small, especially in roses. American Beauty of the long-stemmed grade are in good supply but there is a shortage in the medium and short-stemmed stock, and many of the blooms are showing the effects of the unsatisfactory weather conditions. Killarney and White Killarney are sold and shipped about as soon as they are received and Richmond is beginning to go off crop after the cut which the growers had during the holiday season. Carnations are in good crop and of excellent quality, but with the small receipts of the cheaper grades of roses they find an excellent market and the prices on the best have had an upward tendency. Bulbous stock is beginning to be quite plentiful and of good quality. In tulips there are to be seen La Reine, Yellow Prince, Coleur Cardinal, Proserpine, Belle Alliance and Kaizerkroon. In narcissi beside Paper White and Orange Phoenix in the polyanthas there are Trumpet major, Golden Spur and the first Von Sion were seen this week. The boxes and pans of tulips are displayed in the retail windows and are having a good call. Violets are quite plentiful and the quality is very good. Lily of the valley is quite plentiful, the extra demand of a few weeks ago evidently causing the growers to increase the quantity grown, for the call has kept up well. Lilies are of superb quality, some extra fine blooms being seen and the quantity is a little larger than during last month. Orchids are in good supply, the low prices at which they were offered last week was quickly taken advantage of by the retailers and some elegant displays were made and they were generally used wherever possible. The demand was so good that before the end of the week the prices were advanced. Freesia is of excellent quality and some extra quality mignonette is being shown. Greens are in good supply but the call is heavy and prices hold well. There is a shortage of moss, none of the dealers having a large supply and some of the retailers are using excelsior and other material to stuff their frames.

NOTES.

The new store of "Weilands, Inc.," at 15 East Washington street, is now in the hands of the contractors, who are remodeling and placing it in a first-class condition. The store, which has 1,600 square feet of floor space, will be beautifully equipped with marble top counters, an Orr & Lockett refrigerator and other necessary articles. It is expected that the store will be open for business about March 1.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s new store on the second floor of the building at 72-74 East Randolph street, is nearly ready for occupancy and the firm expects to move in in the very near future. The store, 40x168 feet, is being equipped along modern lines, so that the stock can be handled to the best advantage.

P. W. Peterson called on several of the greenhouse manufacturers here this week in the interest of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. of Joliet, who expect to enlarge its plant this season. Mr. Peterson says that the vacant space between the single houses will be filled in, in addition to the other plans that his company has in view.

The Chicago Carnation Co. is certainly cutting a fine grade of carnations and the stock seen at the store this week was of such high quality that it would easily win a prize if it was exhibited at this time. The Herald and Washington are doing nicely and promise to be heard from more and more in the future.

Fred Lantenschlager has returned from a business trip to Wisconsin and Michigan in the interests of Kroeschell Bros. Co. this week. He says that the boiler business is very good and that his firm has filled telegraph orders from Ohio, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Mississippi, Minnesota and Wisconsin this month.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is receiving a large supply of single and double violets and is going to be particularly well fixed on these flowers for St. Valentine's day. Otto W. Frese says the demand for stock is on the increase and that business is picking up considerably.

The Geo. Wittbold Co., at Edgebrook, is having a good call for bedding plants and is offering something choice in coleus, salvias, marguerites, achyranthes and Gnaphalium lanatum. This firm has a fine lot of lilies and will soon be cutting heavily in these flowers.

Frank Johnson and M. A. Leganzer of the A. L. Randall Co. are back from a successful eastern business trip. The supply department is having a special sale in prepared magnolia leaves this week and large quantities are sold daily.

George Reinberg is planning on putting up a block of flat buildings this year on Foster avenue opposite the new city park which was laid out last year. This is an ideal location and flats in this vicinity are bound to bring a good rental.

The Brant & Noe Floral Co., 5744 Brantwood avenue, is cutting some choice carnations in all the leading varieties. This firm has for the past 19 years been making shipments of stock to the retailers direct from the greenhouses.

Wietor Bros. are filling a large number of orders for rooted carnation cuttings from the best stock that the firm has ever offered. Business in general so far this season has been satisfactory and far ahead of last year.

N. J. Wietor was well pleased with the test that he gave his new auto last Sunday and was convinced that the manufacturer was right when he said it travels like a cyclone.

The Northwestern Floral Co. is shipping a fine grade of carnations in all the leading varieties to Kyle & Foerster's store where they are meeting with very ready sale.

The John C. Moninger Co. is now offering a pneumatic watering system and would be pleased to furnish particulars to all parties interested upon application.

The Goodyear Tire Co. presented each of the automobile show exhibitors with an azalea January 31, John Mangel supplying about 200 of the plants.

George Fisher and wife have returned from Kalamazoo, Mich., where they attended H. A. Fisher's wooden wedding celebration on January 28.

H. Van Gelder, of Percy Jones, had a big day on January 27, when several large orders for carnations for McKinley day were filled.

J. B. Deamud was called to Cairo, Mich., on January 29 by the serious illness of his father, who resides in that city.

Weiland & Risch will strike it lucky with their gardenias, for they will be in full crop for St. Valentine's day.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is going to install a new ice-box and expect to have it in readiness for the peony season.

Henry Smith, the well-known florist of Grand Rapids, Mich., was a most welcome visitor here this week.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is booking orders for Chicago-grown and eastern violets for St. Valentine's day.

C. L. Young, of C. Young & Sons Co., St. Louis, Mo., was in the city on business this week.

F. G. Hunt, of Hunt Bros., is laid up with an injured back. Too much coal shoveling.

At a farewell reception given in honor of Mrs. A. L. Brand in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel, A. Lange executed a very pretty decoration. There were 156 corsages made of the different flowers, six and eight of each kind being arranged. They were made of violets, hyacinths, gardenias, sweet peas, Sunrise, Mrs. Aaron Ward, My Maryland and Killarney roses, carnations, pansies and freesia all made up with beautiful accessories.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting a very large quantity of lilies, and some extra fine blooms can be seen at the store this week. The quality is much better than in former years, due probably to the fact that the bulbs were selected for them by a personal friend who deals largely in this class of goods.

The Killarney roses that Wendland & Keimel are cutting are of the first quality and have splendid color, foliage and stem. The entire output of this firm's large plant is consigned to the E. C. Amling Co.'s store on East Randolph street where it is meeting with ready sale.

Mrs. W. P. Kyle was taken to the Henrotin Memorial Hospital on January 26 and was successfully operated upon the day following. Mr. Kyle informs us that her condition is improving and that an early recovery is looked for.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are receiving a good supply of roses and carnations in addition to a full line of bulbous stock. Business this week has been very good and promises to continue so.

Guy M. Reyburn of A. Henderson & Co. is back from a western trip and will make the local office his headquarters for the next six weeks.

Some of the local florists are using hay and excelsior in their work during the scarcity of sphagnum moss.

Mr. and Mrs. William Winterson celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home at 323 N. Oakley boulevard last Sunday, January 28. They were married in Bristol, England, in 1862, and came to this city more than forty years ago. The anniversary was happily celebrated by a family reunion and three generations were represented. Twelve children, J. Winterson of Tacoma, Wash., and E. F. Winterson, L. H. Winterson, T. B. Winterson, Willie Winterson, Harry Winterson, Mrs. W. Peck, Mrs. H. M. Clark, Mrs. James Marshall, Mrs. Alfred Freeman, Miss Jane Winterson and Miss Harriet Winterson were present. Mr. and Mrs. Winterson were the recipients of many costly presents from a host of friends and acquaintances who sincerely trust and hope that they may live to celebrate their diamond wedding and that the occasion will be as happy an affair as that which was celebrated last Sunday.

J. M. Thompson, who has been more or less identified with the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., of Joliet, died a few weeks ago, and to our knowledge no mention of it was ever made in any of the trade papers. He was well along in years and never knew what it was to be sick until he recently caught cold and from which he never recovered. He was popular with all who knew him and leaves a large number of relatives and friends to mourn his loss.

A friend of C. E. Gullett's, of W. H. Gullett & Sons, of Lincoln, informs us that he was in the city this week on a shopping expedition in company with a charming young lady and that the automobile show and the theatres were visited after which the happy couple partook of a luncheon for two at the College Inn. If A. C. B. of Springfield does not act quick he will soon learn that he is the sole survivor of the bachelor's club of the Illinois State Florists' Association.

John E. Hopley, whom President McKinley appointed to a South African consulate, had a large quantity of carnations distributed to all who passed by the Willard Hall, Monroe and La Salle streets, on January 29 when the Moody Institute turned its activities to the observance of McKinley day. It was the anniversary of the martyred president's birth and the carnation, as is well known, was his favorite flower.

A. T. Pyfer has received a letter from W. C. Hodgen, industrial agent of the Joliet Commercial Club, in which the writer states that his organization will be pleased to have the Illinois State Florists' Association meet in their city and that they are welcome to use the Masonic Temple without expense as a meeting place on the dates of its convention. Thanks! Mr. Hodgen.

C. L. Washburn, C. Loveridge of Peoria and J. F. Ammann of Edwardsville, president, vice-president and secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association, are planning on attending the meeting of the local Florists' Club tonight and will extend an invitation to all members to attend the next annual convention of their society which will be held at Joliet on March 5-6.

A very handsome seedling carnation was received by the Chicago Carnation Co. last week from the Decorah Greenhouses, Decorah, Ia. It was a dark wine of good size and fine stem, and the color was particularly beautiful under electric light. W. T. Symonds, the proprietor, wrote that it was a grand producer and he thought it showed great promise.

Do not forget the Florists' Club meeting at the Union restaurant Thursday evening, February 1, when the officers elected at the last meeting will be installed in their respective chairs.

Chas. W. McKellar is receiving a large quantity of choice orchids, lily of the valley, violets, sweet peas and other desirable flowers for St. Valentine's day.

R. Karlstrom, representing W. A. Manda, Inc., South Orange, N. J., is calling on the trade here this week.

Visitors: Wm. Fenniger, Toledo, O.; Chas. Schwake, representing the corporation of Chas. A. Meyer, New York; Louis Bastings, of the Chapman-Dillin Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; Wm. Burt, Jackson, Mich.; H. A. Fisher, Kalamazoo, Mich.; W. R. Newman, Alton.

OUTING TO MORTON GROVE, ILL.

The Lake Forest Horticultural Society received an invitation to visit the Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s establishment at Morton Grove, January 24, and a large number of members availed themselves of the opportunity to witness things done in the best possible manner on the largest scale.

System is the word to conjure with these times, and it is a revelation to find how well it is carried out in this gigantic plant. Not an emergency but what is provided for, not a detail but has been worked out or a good and reasonable answer given for every cultural operation in reply to the many questions asked. The visitors could discover no secrets, but did gather a fund of information that will make food for thought for years to come, and all felt well repaid, and appreciated the kindness of Messrs. Poehlmann for the courtesy extended them.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—A meeting of the Syracuse Rose Society was held January 11, and a proposition to form a state federation of florists' clubs was discussed. John R. Clancy and Earl A. Bates were appointed delegates to the proposed federation, and to urge this city as a site for the convention. Dean Bray delivered an illustrated lecture on "Forestration in the Southwest," and a committee was appointed to prepare a list of nominations for the several offices to be elected at the next meeting.

STOCK SHORT OF THE DEMAND.
Stock has been short the entire past week, everything being sold out clean nearly every day, and the late buyers found it hard picking. Daffodils are coming in in larger supply and the stock is exceptionally good. A good quality of freesia is being received. Stevia, Roman hyacinths, and Paper White narcissus still hang on and help wonderfully. Tulips, La Reine and Prosperpine are good and plentiful, and sweet peas are arriving in larger supply. Violets and lily of the valley are in better demand. Adiantum and asparagus are abundant, lilies are a trifle shy and callas clean up daily. Roses of all kinds and grades are short of the demand, particularly White Killarney and Richmond and Mrs. Aaron Ward is short of the call. Lupines and mignonette are received in limited quantities and also a few calendulas. Carnations are most in request and although the growers are sending them in in large quantities, they fall far short of the demand, and prices have advanced a little. C. F. B.

JANUARY A DULL MONTH.

The market drags somewhat. Roses are off crop and for that fact they are moving fairly well, especially American Beauty and Richmond, a warm December and cold January is what tells the story. Carnations are getting more plentiful and have dropped below anything like market value. Bulb stock is being rushed in, narcissus can be had for $1.50 per 100 with few takers, violets are plentiful and orchid prices are downward. Gardenias are plentiful and on the same path, January has been a slow month, and with the continued cold weather trade does not show much brighter prospects at present.

MUCH BETTER DEMAND.

There is a decided improvement in the wholesale cut flower market and prices have improved all along the line. This is the case especially with roses. American Beauties are very limited in supply and there are not enough to fill the demand at good prices, even Brides and Bridesmaids are moving better than they have for some time. Carnations, too, have taken a jump in price, though the prices being obtained are considerably less than at the same time last year. Orchids are still very plentiful, especially cattleyas, only the finest quality blooms meeting with ready sale. Still the many calls for them for very large orders have enabled the dealers who handle them in large quantities to clear out the very large supply which had been accumulating. Cypripediums and oncidiums are in sufficient supply to fill all demands. Gardenias are not so plentiful and the prices on these are gradually getting to where they belong. Lily of the valley, tulips, Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissus do not vary in price from week to week as much as other flowers in this market. Trumpet Major and Golden Spur narcissus are very plentiful and the quality is exceedingly good. Sweet peas are arriving in quantities far in excess of the call and even the best, which are of the very finest quality, are at times moved with difficulty. The very cold weather has affected the sale of violets very much and with the exception of a few thousand specials which are tied one hundred in a bunch are carried over everywhere and will continue to be until the weather gets warmer, so that the street men can get out. Freesia, lilac, pansies, etc., remain the same as far as quotations are concerned. Liliun longiflorum, L. rubrum and callas are not doing as well. In greens smilax, asparagus and adiantum are very plentiful and moving slowly. The demand for Asparagus Sprengerii seems to have dropped off entirely. But taken as a whole, the market is in a much healthier condition and the demand for almost everything has been very brisk, much more so than it has been for weeks.

NOTES.

A. Moltz announces he has taken the whole floor formerly occupied by Moltz & Co. and the Manhattan Plant and Cut Flower market, and with possibly one or two exceptions all the present stand owners will remain occupying the same space which they have at present. Mr. Moltz intends to embark in the same line of business as heretofore, only on a much larger scale, and prefers to be a "speculator" for all that word implies, and will not receive any stock direct from growers. It speaks well for Mr. Moltz that even during his temporary "mix up" for a couple of weeks his business was not interfered with, but went on as usual. The name will continue as Moltz & Co., Maurice L. Glass retiring from the firm.

At the next meeting of the Florists' Club, February 12 (Lincoln's birthday), Chairman Chas. H. Totty of the National Flower Show Committee, will talk on the "National Flower Show." This matter is now under way in earnest and there will be no let up in the activity until the termination of the exhibition. President Richard Vincent, Jr., of the Society of American Florists will deliver his illustrated lecture, "A Trip Through the South," and will also make a short address on matters concerning the S. A. F. J. H. Pepper, chairman of the essay committee, will show a few slides of views of the Detroit shows, and J. A. Shaw will show some slides he brought from Bermuda.

H. M. Robinson & Co. of Boston, who came quietly to town and opened a very much up-to-date store at 46 West Twenty-sixth street, are receiving a full line of everything that is good in cut flowers. A shipment of Mrs. Aaron Ward roses seen here on Sunday was magnificent and met with ready sale. Manager Gilbert, who has charge, and associate Snyder are more than pleased with their success since opening. In addition to cut flowers they handle a full line of florists' supplies.

"Boss" Weir has been very much indisposed for several months but is delighted with the results of the so-called "Aerio treatment," which was recommended to him so highly by his friend, "Joe" Fenrich, and is telling all his friends with apparent joy that he is feeling much better than he has in the past twenty years.

The Greek-American Florists' Association will hold a ball at Terrace Garden Wednesday evening, February 28. President Polykranas and the committee of arrangements are exerting every effort to make this a gala night and cordially invite every one to bring his wife or sweetheart and enjoy the evening.

Several new shipments are noticed at Henshaw & Fenrich's. One of the latest is a full line of very fine bulbous stock from A. V. D. Snyder, Ridgewood, N. J. Charles H. Totty is sending to this house a fine lot of Wodenethe, the prize-winning white carnation.

Gunther Bros. are very fortunate in having at the present time, when business is good, very heavy shipments of carnations of the very best grade, and are also receiving a fine lot of lily of the valley, which is of superior quality and in great demand.

The officers of the American Rose Society met at the office of Vice-President Traendly on Wednesday to arrange their schedule for the National Flower Show. There were present: A. Farenwald, Benj. Hammond, Wallace R. Pierson, Robert Simpson and Frank H. Traendly.

William Bogart, the popular buyer for P. L. Bogart, has been laid up with rheumatism, but is about again. "Willie" is the life of the wholesale market in the mornings and there is no room for "dull care" while he is around.

The vest pocket judging scales sent out with the compliments of the AMERICAN FLORIST are in great demand by the members of the local club and are a great convenience, especially to the committee on awards.

William P. Ford is at present headquarters for lilac, both white and purple, and the quality is exceptionally good. This house is also receiving a grand lot of American Beauty, Killarney and My Maryland roses.

William H. Mallow and Charles A. McInerney opened a strictly up-to-date flower shop on January 27 at 640 and 642 Fulton street, Brooklyn. The store is fitted very tastefully and is most attractive.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co. have taken space in the Coogan building for the purpose of having an early morning market. E. J. Van Reyper will have charge of this branch.

Morris Co. Gardeners' and Florists' Society

ANNUAL BANQUET.

The annual banquet of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society was held Wednesday evening, January 24, at Piper's hotel, Morris-town, N. J., and was a notable success, more than 100 members and guests participating, among the latter being florists and gardeners from Yonkers, New York, and Floral Park, New York, Elberon, Asbury Park, Red Bank and other New Jersey towns. The tables were profusely decorated with roses, carnations and orchids, the new carnation Wodenethe being conspicuous, and after an excellent dinner was enjoyed and cigars had been passed, President Tyson introduced Charles B. Weathered as toastmaster who called upon William H. Duckham as the first speaker. Mr. Duckham reviewed the work of the society relating its trials and successes. The next toast was "The Society of American Florists," which was responded to by Secretary John Young, who urged all to join the society and help make the National Flower Show of 1913 a great event. Dr. D. H. McAlpin responded to the toast of "The Financial Supporters." Dr. Whitmore of Red Bank spoke on "The Cultivation of Flowers and Their Influence Upon Society" and Robert D. Foote responded for the society's honorary members. In his remarks he contrasted the gardener of today with his predecessor of only a few years ago, saying that today the gardener is an educated man and an educator of men. To the toast "The National Flower Show of 1913" Charles H. Totty responded, outlining the coming show. Other speakers were Mayor A. S. Pierson, F. H. Traendly, M. C. Ebel, Walter F. Sheridan, J. McIntosh, Benjamin Wyckoff, William Turner, I. S. Hendrickson, H. A. Bunyard, William Reid, Arthur Herrington and J. E. Clavey. J. A. Shaw read an original poem and Will McDonald of Yonkers and a baritone soloist from New York rendered musical selections. The evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all present and the meeting closed in time for the guests to take the 10:40 train for their homes.

Horticultural Society of New York.
A regular meeting of the society was held on Saturday, January 27, at the American Museum of Natural History. An interesting and instructive lecture was delivered by C. A. Darling upon "Grapes and Grape Culture," illustrated with lantern slides. Methods of preparation of the soil, planting, pruning, picking, packing and marketing were dealt with in a practical manner, which was followed by a full discussion.

The exhibition was devoted primarily to orchids and carnations. J. W. Goodier made a large exhibit of orchids from the famous collection of C. G. Roebling, Trenton, N. J., including a large display of cut cypripediums, and a promising new variety of Cattleya Trianae called Helen Roebling. There was keen competition in the carnation classes. Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, President; Marshall H. Duryea, New York, First Vice-President; Edgar Gregory, Marblehead, Mass., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary and Treasurer. Next annual convention at Chicago, June 25-27, 1912.

THE short crops of Europe had some good effect on the export of American beans this season. Loechner & Co., New York, are making extensive shipments abroad.

VISITED CHICAGO: E. J. Sheap, representing S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich.; L. M. Kimberlin, representing J. M. Kimberlin & Co., Santa Clara, Calif.; A. J. Brown, Grand Rapids, Mich.

WE are in receipt of an interesting bulletin on the "Production of the Lima Bean, the Need and Possibility of Its Improvement," by G. W. Shaw and M. E. Sherwin, issued by the College of Agriculture, Sacramento, Calif.

PETER HENDERSON & Co. have issued a booklet entitled "Garden Guide and Record" which contains useful tables and much information for planters and growers. The book has a number of blank pages for memoranda.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, January 31, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $13.50 to $15.25 per 100 pounds.—Vaughan's Seed Store is looking for more warehouse space to accommodate its rapidly extending business.

STURGEON BAY, WIS.—T. H. Hopkins is on a tour through the west, and more particularly Idaho, having gone from here to St. Anthony, where M. V. Cochems is located. The trip is made in the interests of the John H. Allan Seed Co. to investigate the conditions in that country for the growing of peas, it having been much advertised as an ideal place for the raising of this crop.

In a communication recently received from a traveler in Europe, we find the following: "Calling on the trade of Heidelberg, Germany, some time ago, the Dutch business methods were brought under discussion and a leading seedsman of that place said, 'The Hollanders leave no stone unturned about these parts to get business, and there is little chance for the local dealer to do a wholesale trade. The Holland representatives, hausieren von Haus zu Haus,' he said. This is in line with complaints made by American dealers.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.

OMAHA, NEB.—Mrs. Emma von Windheim, of the Nebraska Seed Co., died January 24, aged 82 years. Mrs. Windheim was born in Saxony and came to this country in 1852, sailing up the Missouri river in a craft propelled by poles, sails and oars, and locating here with her husband, the late Peter von Windheim, in 1858.

WATSON S. WOODRUFF, of the firm of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn., and New York, and ex-president of the American Seed Trade Association, was recently elected president of the new bank, the Orange Bank & Trust Co., soon to be opened at West Haven, Conn. The town of Orange, which includes in its borders the borough of West Haven, has a population of something over 10,000 and has never before had a bank. The stock of the new bank has been over-subscribed and it is believed that it will become a prosperous institution.

DENVER, COLO.—Mr. Sawdey has retired from the seed business of Sawdey & Hartner, having sold all of his interests and good will to Elmer G. Hartner June 21 last. Mr. Hartner, C. O. Byrne and Adrien Traverse have formed a new concern, with more capital, called the Western Seed Co., incorporated last December, with E. G. Hartner, president, Adrien Traverse, vice-president, and C. O. Byrne, secretary. The business of the old concern was very good last year and the members of the new firm expect to do still better this year. There is a large amount of snow in the mountains at present which will give plenty of water for irrigation. Snow is still falling today (January 27) and it is hoped that the farmers will be able to commence plowing early.

Canadian Seed Growers' Association.

The eighth annual convention of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association will be held in the Canadian building, Ottawa, Ont., February 8-9. The programme includes addresses by Hon. Martin Burrill, Ottawa; Prof. C. C. James, Toronto, and "Vocational Agricultural Education for Boys and Girls" by Rufus W. Stimson, Boston, Mass. Papers will be presented by Prof. L. S. Klinck, Macdonald College, Que., "The Improvement of Cereal Grains at Macdonald College;" J. H. Grisdale, Ottawa, "Cultural Conditions for Seed Growing"; Dr. C. E. Saunders, Ottawa, "The Distribution of Seed Produced at Experimental Farms," and G. H. Clark, Ottawa, "The Inspection of Seed Crops."

ROSES IN SHORT SUPPLY.

Flowers are still short but if the warm sun that is smiling on us today keeps up, it will soon be a different tale, as all the growers report an immense crop coming with only a little sun needed to bring it on. American Beauties are probably the scarcest article, very few of these being on the market. Good Killarney is probably the next. There is an abundance of tulips, jonquils and lily of the valley.

We are the largest handlers of Cannas in the world. Our prices upon Cannas will bear comparison with any house in the Canna business.

Our Cannas are true to name—two and three, sometimes four eyes—are sound, dormant, and are packed 250 in a box; two can be "cleated" together and shipped as one. One box of 250 sold at a thousand rate; it is cheaper for you to buy a box of 250 than 200 at 100 rate. Write for special prices for quantities.

If any Cannas are not found here, it may be understood that they are superseded by the foregoing. If selection is left to us, we will substitute or send only the best for all purposes.

KUNDERDI "GLORY"

WITH "RUFFLED" PETALS

The broadly expanded, wide open flowers, paired by twos, all face in the same direction, and are carried on straight stout stalks, fully 3 1/2 feet. From three to eight of these handsome flowers are open at one time. Each petal is exquisitely ruffled and fluted.

The color is a delicate cream pink, with a most attractive crimson stripe in the center of each lower petal, the shade of which is unique in Gladioli. The ruffling of the petals in this new strain has attracted much attention the country over.

Southern Truck Crops.

According to statement just issued by Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture the Bermuda onion industry last year amounted to over 1,000 carloads and has been developed in the last few years. A large cauliflower industry has grown in connection with the growing of celery in central California which places a product in eastern markets when they are not supplied by home growers. There has been a .50 per cent increase in the area devoted to celery in Florida during the last decade and similar extensions of the potato, tomato and strawberry interests. There has also been a very large increase in the acreage of truck crops the last few years in the vicinity of Norfolk and Portsmouth. The area devoted to spinach and kale has been greatly increased.

M'KINLEY DAY CAUSES LITTLE FLURRY.

Everything in the market is scarce and practically everything cleans up easily from day to day. Prices on some flowers have advanced a little while on others they are holding firm at the figures they have been for the past fortnight. Judging from the appearance and size of the shipments the growers all seem to be pretty well off crop on most everything. McKinley day caused little if any flurry in the carnation market. A little publicity by the florists in their store and a little press agent work in the papers might revive the interest in the day locally. As it is now it seems more or less a thing of the past. The shortage of roses of all kinds is very noticeable. Most of the offerings are up to their usual high standard of quality while some are otherwise. The stock is nearly all exceptionally clean. Carnations are also in short supply but the shortage is not as pronounced as in roses. The choice stock, especially white and Enchantress shade, moves quickly. The culls that are fresh are finding a fair market. Bulbous stock shows a great falling off, especially in the receipt of Lilium longiflorum and callas. To keep up with the call for the first the growers are forced to cut the blooms when they are barely sufficiently open to use and are hardly ready to cut. Somehow or other the wholesalers manage to get enough together for their orders. The smaller essentially spring flowers, such as tulips, jonquils, etc., are arriving in larger quantities and prove a very welcome addition to the offerings. The jonquils and freesia deserve special mention for their very good quality. Miscellaneous lines show a very fair business. The Princess of Wales and New York double violets are as popular as earlier in the season. The sweet pea offerings are some of the very best ever put on sale in this market. Choice lily of the valley is again in adequate supply and is proving a pretty good seller. Limited quantities of orchids come in regularly. The green goods supply is ample and the market good.

NOTES.

Denver, Colo.

"Rather quiet" is the general comment of the majority of the trade. Weather conditions have been more favorable, but there has been very few entertainments of any kind that called for any great amount of flowers. There has been no surplus of stock, however, and prices have remained firm. The supply of roses has fallen off to such an extent that the retailers have to hesitate before they take a good order for fear they cannot fill it properly. One retailer spent half a day trying to secure enough American Beauties to fill an order for a dozen. It is the same old story, letting everything come for Christmas and ruining business for January, placing the storeman in a bad position with his customers by not having the stock desired. Fortunately, the scarcity of roses has helped carnations and while the supply has been above the average there has been no surplus, the best grades selling well at $3.00 and other grades $2.00 per 100. Tulips and daffodils have made a better showing and have been in demand. Snapdragon and sweet peas are in good shape and have found ready buyers. Violets have improved some and are selling well.

FLORISTS' CLUB SPECIAL NOTICE.

A regular feature of the meetings of the Colorado Florists' Club, held the first Monday of each month, will be an exhibition of cut flowers and plants. If any florist having novelties that they would like to have shown to the Colorado florists will send them prepaid to E. P. Neiman, secretary, care Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo., they will be taken care of and placed on exhibition at the meetings.

NOTES.

All of those that attended the meetings of the American Carnation and American Rose societies at Detroit have returned and are enjoying the warm Colorado sunshine again after the cold weather they experienced while in Detroit. They all say they had a good time, however.

The regular meeting of the Colorado Florists' Club will be held February 5. A paper on "The Native Conifers" of Colorado will be read by William Horlacker of the Barteldes Seed Co.

Joe Ennegon, proprietor of the New York Floral Store, lost a wallet containing a good sum of money. Fortunately, he recovered it after a lively encounter with the finder.

It was stated at the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce held January 25 that the growing of flax in Colorado will soon surpass the beet industry.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen
 J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O., President;
 W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass., Vice-
 President; John Hall, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
 Thirty-seventh annual convention to be held at Boston, Mass., June 12-14, 1912.

Tennessee State Nurserymen's Ass'n.

The seventh annual convention of the Tennessee Horticultural Society and the State Nurserymen's Association, allied organizations, was held January 25-26 in the assembly room of the Maxwell house, Nashville, Tenn. Many being members of both organizations, remained through both days' sessions.

Chairman Robert Morris of Ridge-top opened the meeting in the absence of Hon. Percy Brown, president, and on behalf of the Board of Trade and the city of Nashville, Judge Robert Ewing delivered a stirring address of welcome. The first paper was by G. D. Hawks of Jackson on the "Culture and Care of Sweet Potatoes," which contained many useful suggestions. A paper on the "Winter Care of Sweet Potatoes" prepared by J. T. Allen of Fountain City was read by the secretary. A paper by C. H. Tritchler, who was not able to be present, on "Market Gardening for a Local Market" was also read by the secretary. Mr. Tritchler is the florist of the N. C. & St. L. R. R., and is a practical grower of vegetables as well as flowers. J. E. Converse of Cumberland City gave a brief impromptu talk on potato growing. "The Tomato as a Money Crop" was next discussed by Prof. C. A. Keffer of Knoxville, who stated that the successful grower as a rule mixed the Acme, Imperial and Truckers Favorite varieties.

At the afternoon session "The Organization and Management of Commercial Orchard Growing" was ably discussed by J. R. H. Hilton of Knoxville. Hon. John L. Jones of Columbia gave some of his experiences as a fruit grower which was full of interest. "The Year's Experience in Spraying" was discussed by J. D. Ellis of Dayton, I. C. Murphy of Columbia and Neal Varnel of Cleveland. The use of lime and sulphur for apple trees was advocated, and a general discussion followed, bringing out much useful information. C. E. Coleman of Knoxville gave a somewhat lengthy address on "Commercial Strawberry Growing." The address was very interesting and the speaker brought out facts on the growing of strawberries of which many of those present had never heard. Many questions were asked and answered by the speaker.

The feature of the evening session was an able address by Prof. H. A. Morgan, one of the faculty of the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, on "The Conservation of the Soils," which was both scientific and practical, and very helpful in many ways, as was shown by the many questions asked during and after the address. The following officers for the ensuing year were elected: J. C. Prewett, Union City, president; Henry R. Howard, Chattanooga, vice-president; Prof. C. A. Keffer, Knoxville, secretary-treasurer; A. J. Byrns, Sylvia, middle; Charles H. Coleman, Knoxville, east; Chas. Pennington, Rutherford, west, sectional vice-presidents.

On Friday morning, January 26, the State Nurserymen's Association began their session, being called to order by J. R. H. Hilton of Knoxville. The session was opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. James I. Vance, which was followed by an address of welcome by

T. F. Peck, commissioner of agriculture of Tennessee, which was read by his assistant, A. L. Garrison, Mr. Peck being out of the city. It was a very cordial welcome and contained many valuable and practical suggestions to the nurserymen. The response was made by J. H. Austin of Antioch. One of the best features of the programme was the address by T. B. Thackston, land and industrial agent of the Southern Railway, on "Co-operation in Selling Nursery Stock and Marketing Fruit." This proved very helpful. H. A. Clarke of Wartrace, read an interesting paper on "Grasses." In the afternoon "Soil Improvement" was discussed by J. E. Converse of Crossville. The "Federal Inspection Bill" was discussed by W. H. Stark of Louisiana, Mo. Prof. H. D. Tate, special agent of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, spoke on "Field Demonstration," and said "Our object is to try to get hold of the different farmers of the state." Robert S. Walker of Chattanooga gave an address on "Quiet Hours for the Nurseryman."

The following officers were elected: E. W. Chatten, Winchester, president; W. W. Twitty, Taft, vice-president; Prof. G. M. Bently, Knoxville, secretary-treasurer; Chas. Pennington, Rutherford, west; Joe Webb, Smithville, middle; A. I. Smith, Knoxville, east, sectional vice-presidents. M. C. D.

PRIMULA FORRESTII (Copyright.)

Glorious New Plants from the Chinese Alps.

THESE has been nothing in recent years to surpass our wonderful introductions from China, through our collector, Mr. Forrest. As the introducers of several new species of Primulas, which have taken a remarkably high place in the estimation of experts, we occupy an enviable position.

Growing, as they do, close to the snow line in the mountainous region of Yunnan, China, these Primulas are exceedingly hardy, as well as beautiful: they are altogether unlike our European or American Primroses. The illustration shown gives but a very inadequate representation of the marvellous attraction of these novelties. Most of them have been awarded First-Class Certificates from the Royal Horticultural Society, London.

At the time of writing, another collector, Mr. F. Kingdom Ward is working the Mekong-Salwen divide. The Mekong and Salwen rivers run southward from Central China through Burma and Siam, cutting through vast mountain ranges of immense altitude. It is on the slopes of these snow-capped giants that untold riches of the Chinese Flora flourish unseen and almost unsuspected. We are convinced, from the reports of our collectors, that the plants so far brought to light are but a "drop in the well." So trying is the climate, and so risky the intercourse with natives, that only a mere patch of ground has been covered after several years' strenuous work and the expenditure of considerable sums of money.

Besides these Chinese Novelties, you will be interested in our

Circulation in Buyers' Brains

It is the kind enjoyed by the American Florist. Its actual paid circulation we believe, is the largest in its class. The contents are of real present value and are preserved for future reference. Advertisers who realize this establish permanent business with the best trade in the United States and Canada.

Here Are Six Men's Opinions Of Our Iron Frame House.

Peter Olsen.

"Nine years ago Lord & Burnham Co. put up for us an Iron Frame House, 30 feet wide by 300 feet long. From that day to this we have not spent a cent for repairs. Today that house stands solid as a rock, and, as far as we can see, is as good as the day it was put up."

Fred Burki.

"When we get greenhouse material from the Lord & Burnham Co. we can depend on getting a satisfactory house that will stand up and is easy for our carpenter to erect, as L. & B. furnish detail plans for same each time. We now have six of their Iron Frame large houses."

Wm. Sim.

"I now have my fifth L. & B. greenhouse. From observations I find no other can compare with them. All things considered, I find they are easily built, more durable, and cost less."

Komitsch & Junge.

"Nine years ago we bought material from L. & B. for greenhouses. Since then we have erected both L. & B. Pipe Frame Houses and L. & B. Iron Frame Houses, sixteen in all. In that time we have become convinced that the L. & B. houses are A No. 1. Absolutely the best and most durable house that can be bought."

J. Van Lindley.

"In regard to the 42 ft. 6 in. by 200 ft. greenhouse, for which you furnished us material during the summer of 1910. This house is now in carnations, and has the best crop of anyone on the place. The fact that we are giving your Mr. Wright an order for a 300-foot addition is pretty conclusive evidence that we are pleased with same."

Jos. Heacock.

"Before giving out the contract we had an estimate from another construction company for a house of the same size. While there was over $3,000 difference between the two bids, we decided that the Lord & Burnham house was the cheaper at the higher figure. We see no reason to regret our decision."

Worcester, Mass.

At the meeting of the Worcester Horticultural Society held January 25, Dr. E. F. Bigelow spoke on "Haunts of Nature," and on February 1 Charles H. White, agricultural field agent, spoke on "Agricultural Development in Worcester." The new calanthe exhibited by George McWilliam at the meeting held January 11 was Calanthe Laselliana, the parentage being C. vestita oculata gigantea X C. McWilliamii.

Mayor David F. O'Connell's plan for a municipal market was given enthusiastic endorsement at a meeting of the committee on legislative affairs of the city council January 26. Prominent citizens, including Hon. John R. Thayer and others, appeared before the committee favoring the plan. The Worcester County Market Gardeners' Association also warmly endorsed it through President A. S. Wolf of Auburn. M. W. R.

GARDENERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

The regular monthly meeting of the Gardeners' Mutual Protective Association was held January 14 and the following officers were installed: Charles R. Panter, president; Wolfgang Orth, vice-president; John Parr, secretary; Isadore Meyer, treasurer; Valentine Zimmer, Joseph Steckles, and A. Klees, trustees. Committees were appointed to arrange for an exhibition of vegetables, flowers, etc., and to make arrangements for the observing of the thirty-seventh annual banquet and May festival to be held Sunday, May 19.

This association was organized thirty-seven years ago and besides assisting its members in better market ordinances and conditions has accumulated a good-sized fund, and has been an example for similar organizations through the state. After the installation a banquet at a restaurant was enjoyed, which had been prepared by the officers-elect, and a pleasant hour spent to everyone's advantage.

JOHN PARR.

Omaha, Neb.

At the meeting of the State Florists of Nebraska held at Lincoln January 10 the following officers were elected: Irvin Frey, Lincoln, president; J. W. Lawson, York, vice-president; Lewis Henderson, Omaha, secretary; J. E. Atkinson, Pawnee City, treasurer; C. H. Greene, Fremont, E. Williams, Grand Island, W. E. Davidson, Holdrege, trustees.

Escaping gas from the street mains that worked into the greenhouse of Paul Froth at Thirty-second and Burt streets, killed thousands of plants including 7,000 carnations, 2,000 lilies, 900 roses and foliage plants. The palms, geraniums and bedding stock were not so badly affected and can be saved. The smell of gas in the houses had been noticed for two weeks and when the plants began to die Mr. Froth notified the authorities who discovered two leaks in the mains.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—John H. Fredrick was chosen foreman of the grand jury of the superior court which opened January 22.

OMAHA, NEB.—Joseph Stainel, aged 68 years, for several years a resident of this city and Council Bluffs and at one time owner of the largest florist business of this section, died in his room on North Sixteenth street, January 8, after an illness of four days.

For Ornamentalness
No Greenhouse Equals The U-Bar

This is the U-Bar the bar that makes U-Bar Greenhouses the Famous Greenhouses They Are.

At a glance that's apparent. The reason is, the U-Bar. To put it another way; you can put a gold plated harness on a heavy draft horse and hitch him to a swell little runabout—but with all his trappings he ambles along draft horse fashion just the same. So by the same token, putting a curved eave on a greenhouse does not make it a U-Bar curved eave house. It only looks something like it from the outside. A U-Bar house is distinctly different and it's the U-Bar that makes it so. Send for a catalog and find out just why.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Pelargoniums.

While all the plants so well known as geraniums are pelargoniums, yet it is the show or fancy type called by many Lady Washington geraniums that are generally known under this name. The plants that are wanted in bloom in April and May will now be in their blooming pots and beginning to show their blooming growths, but for June and July flowering the plants should be now shifted to the blooming pots, five or six-inch as the plants may require, except with large specimens, of which few are now seen. They like a turfy, coarse loam, to which may be added one-fourth well rotted manure, and if the soil is heavy a liberal amount of sharp sand to keep it open, and the plants should be potted very firmly. A cool, well-ventilated house should be selected for growing them, and until the days grow warmer and brighter they should be watered sparingly. In early spring, when they are well covered with foliage and the blooming shoots begin to grow, more water will be needed. A little stopping may be necessary if the plants send forth strong, long growths, to make the plant shapely, but care and judgment should be used in this operation, which should cease upon the appearance of the bud shoots, which are easily distinguished by the different manner of growth. Do not attempt to take any cuttings at this time, for after the plants are through blooming is the best time for propagation, and any cuttings taken now are pretty sure to rob the plants of the bloom. These plants are very subject to attacks of both red spider and green fly, and should be fumigated or sprayed regularly. As the extremely hot, dry days of summer approach a slight shade will be found very beneficial to both the plant and flowers.

Verbenas.

The verbenas makes a very satisfactory bedding plant if properly grown, but the thin, spindly plants produced from late grown seed and planted in flats and baskets as closely together as is possible in order that they may be sold at a cheap price, seldom make any showing in the beds until very late in summer. The seeds should be sown early enough that the plants may be stopped and branched and grown in pots, and one plant so grown will make more showing during the season than half a dozen of the poor plants so freely offered at the spring sales. It is really better to buy the rooted cuttings of selected varieties that are advertised at this time than to sow seed after the middle of February. Seed sown up to this date, however, can be grown on to make fine plants. Care must be exercised in the germination of the seed, which is often blamed for the carelessness or lack of knowledge of the grower, for the seed damps off very easily when it germinates, being very sensitive to any change in temperature and moisture. Until they begin to make growth, the plants should be watched carefully, never allowed to become dry, or exposed to any draughts.

Antirrhinums.

The grower of antirrhinums has an opportunity now to select the best plants from which to propagate the stock for another year, as the plants are now producing fine spikes and it is possible to select the best types. Those that have fine large flowers set closely together on the stem, and yet not close enough to crowd, are to be preferred. The earliness of blooming is another matter to take into consideration. It will be found in raising these plants from seed that there is a great difference in their time of blooming, and for winter flowering the earliest that there are of good type should be chosen. There are plenty of good cuttings to be obtained now for the laterals which grow from the axil of each leaf make the best cuttings and the flower is enlarged by their removal. Plants that are in bloom will be benefited greatly from now on by feeding either with liquid manure or a strong mulch, and the next growth thinned to eight or ten shoots, which will insure a much better crop for spring cutting than to allow all the small shoots to grow. Keep the plants tied erect all the time, for it takes but a few hours' sun to draw the tip up from a stem that leans away from the center, with the result that a crooked stem is formed, which greatly impairs its appearance. These spikes of bloom should be handled very carefully, especially the long sprays, for they are very brittle and break easily. It is better not to cut too many at once. When cutting hold them with the heads hanging down, and when there are as many as can be easily held in the hand cut, take them at once to the flower room, trim off all surplus growth and tie the stems a dozen in a bunch, then loosely tie strings around the center and toward the top of the bunch, and place the stems in a deep jar of water. This prevents crooked stems, so often seen, for the plant continues its growth after being cut, and if allowed to hang away from the jar the blooms grow crooked.

Genistas.

The plants of genistas should now be making their blooming growth and no further pinching will be necessary except in the case of long, strong growths which sometimes break from the stem and thereby spoil the symmetry of the plant, and these should be cut back as soon as they grow beyond the other flowering shorts. They can now be bloomed in succession by moving some into a warmer house but those that are wanted at Easter are still better left in a cool house, one with a temperature of 45° being the one that will produce the best results. These plants are never partial to great heat, reveling in a cool atmosphere, and often when taken into the warm living rooms where the air is extremely dry will soon drop their leaves. Those that are being grown to certain shapes, such as the balls, pyramids or baskets, will doubtless require some pinching back yet, but this should be done with great care or the flowering buds will be removed. A close examination of the tip of the shoot will clearly show whether the buds are forming and when this occurs all pinching must be immediately stopped. Any blind wood or extra strong growths that are cut out may be made into cuttings and young stock obtained. These will root much better in a cool propagating bench than in one where the bottom heat is confined. When the plants are full of bloom they will require heavy watering, and do not place them in a dry warm location for any great length of time.

LEXINGTON, KY.—The flower store of John A. Keller, 236 West Main street, has been purchased by James P. Keller who has had the management of the store for the past 18 years. The extensive greenhouses of John A. Kelley on East Sixth street will be under the management of John Ferdinand Keller, who has been in charge for some years.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The date of the great flower show will be July 2-7, being called "Flower Week." J. K. M. L. Farquhar of Boston has charge of the arrangements at present and is preparing a premium list which will offer $5,000 given by the Garden Association, $1,000 by the city and $1,000 by the Horticultural Society. Two lots of land have been secured with an area 400x600 feet, on three sides of which lattice work will be built which is to be covered with roses and other vines.

McKinley Monument Decorated.

One of the noteworthy happenings of the observance of McKinley day was the decoration of the monument of President McKinley at Dayton, O., the statue being covered with pink and white carnations by W. G. Matthews, Dayton's well-known florist. A large wreath of carnations was hung on the face of the pedestal and a garland of the same flowers was draped around the shoulders of the statue and base, then extending down the pedestal to the steps upon which the statue stands. This might be an idea worthy of emulation in other cities where there is a statue of the martyred president to help in keeping alive the sentiment of the day.

JONQUILS AND LILY OF THE VALLEY.

Take an oblong basket six inches high and paint it a pretty shade of lavender, in which arrange four oblong rows of jonquils and in the center a row of their foliage. Fill in the sides with lily of the valley, using violet foliage for the edge. Instead of placing the usual ribbon around the body of basket make a Dresden garland of violets. Place a loosely-arranged, fair-sized bunch of violets in the central part of the garland and tapering it gradually and interspersing lily of the valley and violets to the edge of each side. Then lay large flat bunches of violets on the table, say two on the longest side to allow the center bunch of the garland attached to body of basket to be the predominating feature and spread maiden hair on the table as a foundation.

In case of a buffet decoration the Dresden garland can be effectively used around the edge of the table combined with maiden hair fern. In making the garland it is well to have the lily of the valley hang below the garland at different intervals where they are used in connection with the violets. Use a bow effect of maiden hair for the corner of the table. A few large leaves could effectively be used in center of garland, making them spread gracefully over the cloth.

Violet baskets or small baskets painted a violet shade filled with jonquils and valley are effective, and the small silver flagrec bonbon baskets filled with violets are also excellent. These small low silver baskets can be lined with the violet tinfoil and violet ribbon run through the top of the space in the center for violet candles. basket and tied with a bow, leaving a space in the center for violet candles.

A. E. KLUNDER.

The Calabash Pipe Gourd.

The advent of the Calabash pipe dates from the last Boer war, or from the earliest years of the present century, for it is really a fashion in pipes copied from the Boers and other residents in South Africa. The Boers are said to have tried hard to obtain a monopoly in the manufacture of these pipes, and to have been very jealous of the distribution of seeds of the plant which produced the gourds. Seeds have, however, been distributed widely of late years, and other countries, including the United States, are now in a position to produce all the gourds required for home manufactured pipes.

The plant producing the Calabash Pipe Gourd is a variety of the variable Lagenaria vulgaris, commonly called the Bottle or Club Gourd, a species widely distributed through the tropics. The Calabash Pipe variety appears to have first created interest in South Africa, and to have been widely grown there for many years, though whether it originated there appears to be doubtful.

In countries where a fairly warm summer is experienced, states a correspondent in The Garden, it may be grown out of doors with success, and it is probable that fairly satisfactory results would be obtained in the south of England. The United States Department of Agriculture published an illustrated circular, No. 41, in 1909 on "The South African Pipe Calabash," giving details of its cultivation in the United States. The details of culture as set down there would be applicable to the warmer parts of this country, while in other quarters greenhouse or frame culture would undoubtedly give satisfactory results. Hot beds are made almost level with the surface of the ground, and in these seeds are sown about April. The young plants are protected from frost by means of hand lights until danger from that source is past, when they are allowed to run freely over the ground. Plants grown on the ground are found to produce more gourds suitable for pipes than those grown against trellises. In common with all members of the large gourd family, rich soil is a necessity. Vigorous specimens may produce from ten to twenty gourds, but all are not suitable for pipes, for some grow too large and others too straight. A little may be done towards shaping the narrow neck of the gourd when the fruit is very young by tying or pegging into shape, but the task is a very delicate one on account of the young fruits being very brittle. A fair percentage of gourds assume suitable shapes, however, without any training.

The fruits are allowed to remain on the vines until the outer parts are quite hard, for if gathered before they are thoroughly ripe, difficulty is experienced in seasoning. On the other hand, they must not be allowed to remain long enough to be subjected to frost, for a severe frost is likely to cause injury. Dry, sunny weather is more favorable to the development of fruit than wet weather, for although the plants will take plenty of water, more satisfactory results are obtained from watering by hand than from the plants being subjected to an excessive amount of rain. The past summer, with its long continued heat, has been ideal for the successful cultivation of these gourds in England, providing they were well watered at frequent intervals. Seeds sown here on a slight hot bed and the plants allowed to grow until they had filled a frame, which could be lifted off about mid-June, would probably give the most satisfactory results. If grown throughout the whole of their career in a frame or greenhouse, however, arrangements ought to be made for a free circulation of air at all times. Apart from the utility of the fruits of this plant, it is quite ornamental enough to receive attention from a decorative standpoint, either indoors or out. Trained against a pillar or trellis it quickly covers a wide area, and though many of the fruits will probably be too straight for pipes, some will assume the requisite shape. In any case, its cultivation is well worth undertaking on experimental lines. In the majority of gardens room could be found for the few plants that would be necessary to determine whether they could be successfully grown in the open or not. A pergola of gourds, such as may be found in a few gardens, might well include some plants which, if they succeeded, would be of interest to both visitors and owners. It is highly improbable, however, that the cultivation of these gourds on commercial lines is ever likely to prove successful in this country.

The Prevention of Hail.

The Comte de Beauchamp, a distinguished physician, is hailed as one of the greatest benefactors of agriculture that France has ever known, owing to his discovery of an efficacious hail destroyer. Some time ago the count discovered that hail cannot form when there is no electricity in the air. In the course of a long series of experiments, in which he was assisted by Gen. De Negrier, he has perfected an instrument, like a lightning conductor, which drains the atmosphere of any electricity with which it is charged. For some time past this hail destroyer has been working with success in rural districts formerly particularly subject to hail storms, which, it is estimated, cost the farmers and fruit growers of the country not less than $40,000,000 a year.

Convinced by these results, the Paris municipal council has decided to install in the capital a system of hail destroyers. They will be placed at three of the highest points of the city—namely: at the summits of the Eiffel tower, the Sacre Cœur and the Pantheon—forming a vast protective triangle.

The provinces are following the example of the capital and before long, it is expected, the entire country will be provided with the count's invention, which has the enthusiastic support of the Academy of Sciences.—Chicago Tribune.

Easter Lilies.

The term Easter lily is now heard throughout the floral year, for with the retarding of Lilium Giganteum by cold storage, blooms of the different varieties of Lilium longiflorum are now produced every day of the year, but still the largest number of blooms are grown to be in their prime at Easter, and these should really be called the Easter lilies. At this time of the year we often hear the question "When shall I bring my lilies into heat in order to have them in bloom for Easter?" so it is plainly evident that with all that has been written upon this one important feature of lily growing, that everyone has not fully had impressed upon his mind one of the necessities in successful lily culture. The invariable answer by all growers to this great question is "It will take thirteen weeks from the time that the plants are brought into a house at a temperature of 60°." But it must always be remembered that to have a crop in perfection at a certain date that more than one thing is necessary to produce this result. No two years are exactly alike; one may have throughout January and February many mild, sunny days which force the plants along very rapidly, and the weather another year may be just the opposite when day after day will be dark and cloudy and the night temperatures very cold. It must be plain to anyone therefore that the plants will require different treatment one year than would be necessary in the other.

This is where a thorough knowledge of lily growing is required. We have seen growers who never seemed to really know whether their plants were going to be in bloom at the right time or not, and were continually worrying, moving their plants back and forth, first forcing them a little harder and then moving into a colder temperature and retarding them, with the inevitable result that they were just a little too early or too late. But the grower who fully understands producing a crop of lilies at just the right time seldom worries at all, for he knows just where his lilies are all the time and fully understands how and when to successfully retard them if the season is favorable and when they will require a little extra forcing if the weather has held them back. It takes study and observation, but the one who attempts to bring any crop in at a certain day, when the plants are so much influenced by the weather, must make a study of his crop, and if he cannot remember, write it down in a notebook where he can easily find the information required.

The lilies that are to be forced for Easter should have been potted when received in the fall and buried outside safe from frost, and in a severe climate should as soon as well rooted have been brought into a coal house, where they would be firmly established and make a strong growth for a foundation. After the first of the year, and the Christmas sales have emptied many of the benches they should be brought into a house having a night temperature of 60° with a rise of 10° during the daytime. The plants at this time should be just pushing above the ground or about three inches high. If in this condition there will be no difficulty in bringing them in on time in any ordinary year at this temperature. It is far better that the pots be placed either upon coal ashes spread on the bench, or on soil, than to stand on a wooden bench, for under the latter conditions the pots are apt to dry out quickly, and the lily must not suffer for lack of water during its early stages. They should be in a good light location for it takes but little shade to cause them to become drawn and a weak, thin stem is thereby produced. The plants should be gone over occasionally after the growth begins, and the shorter ones placed on the front of the bench and the taller ones to the rear. This will prevent any of the plants from becoming too shady. As soon as they have attained good height, they should be staked and tied, and this should be done before any of the plants bend over, for if this happens crooked stems are the inevitable result and the plants are worthless.

Under this treatment the buds should begin to show six weeks before Easter, and this is the generally acknowledged time that is required to bring the blooms to perfection. It is well known, however, that the flowers can be brought out easily in five weeks and even in four by very hard forcing, but the blooms do not have nearly as good substance as those that take six weeks to mature. And even should the weather be unusually warm and bright during March it is a very easy matter to retard the plants after the buds have attained full size by placing them in a cool house shaded from the midday sun, and the flowers will be greatly improved by this treatment.

No one can ever speak of growing lilies without mentioning the necessity of keeping the plants free from aphids throughout their culture. They are grown in a temperature in which these insects thrive most rapidly, and if once firmly established on a lily they are extremely difficult to entirely kill. The plants should be fumigated every week, and when the buds form, a careful watch kept that they do not congregate in the top of the growth where it is almost impossible to kill them. If this happens, it is well to syringe a little nicotine extract into the center of the growth, being careful not to make it too strong. It has been thought that one of the great causes of the lily flowers splitting, as they sometimes do, is the damage caused by the aphids when the bud is forming, and also many of the malformations that are so often seen.

In stating that it will take thirteen weeks to bring a lily into bloom from the time that it is brought into the warm house, we fully understand that there are great quantities of these plants that are forced into flower in a much shorter time, but we know that those that are of the best quality are invariably given this amount of time and also that those that are grown more rapidly often produce many poor flowers and of much inferior quality. The lily grower must continually bear in mind a few cardinal principles; keep the plants at a good even temperature; be careful about watering; the plants should never be allowed to be dry nor should they be over-watered; keep them clean from aphids throughout their growth; have them staked up as soon as necessary, and study their growth that the knowledge of the necessary conditions may be acquired. Lilies Not Growing.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

We potted Lilium Harrisii last August and L. longiflorum the latter part of September and placed the pots under benches in a lettuce house. On December 15 we found some were showing growth and they were moved to a carnation house. January 30 about one-half are through the ground, a few being three inches high, one-quarter just breaking through. In looking for roots we find about one to four in sight and the balance of the soil the same as when potted. Can these lilies be brought into bloom for Easter? J. T.

Colorado.

The Lilium Harrisii that have made growth if they have good roots can probably be brought into bloom for Easter, but will have to be given good heat at once, and the *L. longiflorum*s that are three inches high could probably be flowered by Easter if forced very hard.

Having had some experience in a climate similar to Colorado, we should say that these lilies had been too dry, for they were planted early enough to have them further advanced than they were January 30; and the pots should be fairly full of roots. The climate of Colorado is extremely dry and a pot standing exposed to the air dries out very quickly, and if the soil around a lily bulb becomes dry there is nothing to induce root action, and good roots are necessary in growing lilies for Easter. It would have been better if these lilies had been thoroughly watered when potted and then buried in moist soil, the top of the pot about three inches below the surface, and the ground covered with straw, over which should be placed boards to protect them from the sun and prevent evaporation. We had no trouble in producing good roots by January 1 by this method in a dry climate. If there is danger of freezing before that date the covering may be made heavier, or they can be moved into a cool house in November. By January 1 they should all be through the ground, and thirteen weeks in a temperature of 60° will bring them into flower. A carnation house is too cool for lilies after January 1 to have them in bloom April 7, the date of Easter this year. W.

THE CARNATION.

Propagation of Young Stock.

The propagation and care of the young stock are among the most important parts of the carnation grower's routine work at this season of the year, for an early start with thrifty and well cared for stock will count for much toward the success of the coming year. Early propagation of healthy, selected cuttings helps much in the quality and vitality of the plants, and the more cuttings one can get before New Year's the better it is, the late cuttings requiring more care in the propagating house and also more attention after they are potted in order to get them established.

Clean, fresh sand in the propagating bench is another essential to success, and by using such material in a bench that has been kept free from fungus, there is seldom trouble in rooting the cuttings, provided that they are kept moist and protected from the sun. A regular night temperature of 50° with but a slight rise in the day gives the most satisfactory conditions in regard to temperature, for in such a temperature the cuttings do not make top growth before they are well rooted. Too much heat is liable to start the tops and to make the cuttings soft, the result of which is to make the young plants more difficult to establish, thus losing valuable time after they are potted from the sand. Thorough watering of the cuttings at the time they are put in the sand helps much in keeping them in condition, from the fact that the sand becomes thoroughly settled around the base of the cutting, protecting it from the air and encouraging it to callus and ultimately to emit roots.

Cuttings should not be disturbed until they are well rooted, and those intended for shipping may well be given an extra day or two in the sand, in order to ensure a good body of roots, for some of the roots are quite likely to be broken off in transit. Poorly selected cuttings that have been planted in dirty sand and insufficiently rooted before shipping are the cause of much dissatisfaction among growers each season, and particularly so when the cuttings in question are from some high-priced novelty that one may be particularly anxious to give a fair trial. Over-propagation has much to answer for in regard to the failure of some of the novelties, and it would sometimes be better to defer the introduction of a novelty for another year rather than to over-work the stock to such a degree that the young plants prove a disappointment to the purchaser.

The young plants of the earliest propagation will be ready for planting out on benches before this article reaches the press, but for the benefit of those not entirely familiar with these details it may be again stated that the young plants should not be allowed to become stunted by having too little root space, and the easiest and most satisfactory method of overcoming this difficulty is to prepare some bench space with three to four inches of fresh soil, in which the young stock may be planted out, spacing the plants 3x3 inches in the bench, and there to remain until the season is advanced to that period at which it is safe to plant them out in the field. After the young plants are established in the benches the temperature may be lowered to 42° to 45° at night, thus ensuring a sturdy and short-jointed growth that seldom fails to give a good account of itself after the plants get in the field, unless the season is a particularly unfavorable one.

There being always a possibility of insects among the young plants, it is a safe plan either to spray or to fumigate regularly with the nicotine preparations, this taking care of thrips and aphides, while an occasional spraying with salt solution will do much to discourage red spiders. With all of these insects an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, so it is profitable to attend to these matters early and often.

Topping will soon demand more attention on the part of the grower, for these young carnation plants should all have one topping before they go to the field, if possible, thus laying an early foundation for a stock of strong and well-branched plants for next season's crop, and in addition to this, it is much less laborious to top the plants while they are on a bench than to do it after they are out in the field.

The potting off of the cuttings has been several times alluded to, and this is still the practice of many growers, while others with a view to labor-saving, have adopted the practice of planting out the cuttings from the sand right into the benches, without any potting whatever. This latter plan presents no special difficulty, for cuttings so treated soon established themselves when properly cared for, and the young plants start away just as well in the field, the only possible advantage for the potted plants being found in the fact that they hold a better ball, when lifted from the field, for transplanting to their blooming quarters, and the writer confesses to a possibly old-fashioned prejudice in favor of a plant with a ball rather than one with bare roots. Carnation Houses.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

In building houses in which to grow carnations, would it be preferable to have them running north and south or east and west?

nations can be produced in a house running north and south as one running east and west, but all modern commercial houses are erected at present extending in the latter direction. With the beds or benches running east and west, the walks give an opportunity for the sun to reach the soil, which would not be possible with those running north and south, the plants keeping the soil shaded all the time. With the ordinary grower no doubt better results would be obtained in the house running east and west.

Carnation The Herald.

The new seedling carnation, The Herald, which is being grown by the Chicago Carnation Company at Joliet, Ill., and which we illustrate, is a very bright scarlet, the result of a cross between two scarlet seedlings, Nos. 50 and 49. Seedling No. 50 was a seed parent of Harlowarden which was originated by the late James Hartshorne, and was an exceptionally strong robust grower producing very fine flowers on short stiff stems. It was such a fine free bloomer that instead of discarding the variety it was given to a small florist to see what it would do in a small commercial place where it did so well as a commercial carnation that Mr. Hartshorne again secured some of the plants, which were still in his possession at the time of his death. No. 49 was a bright scarlet on long stems, therefore The Herald favors its seed parent in every particular except it has a longer stem and a brighter color. It was among the first carnations produced by Peter Olsem. The growth is somewhat on the order of Enchantress; very strong and a darker green with thinner grass; a much faster grower, producing fine large flowers on strong, stiff stems which develop much quicker than Enchantress. The plants make a good growth in the field; lift easily and establish themselves in a remarkably short time after lifting. All the stock is perfectly healthy and it will not be necessary to cut back any of the stock to get enough cuttings to put the variety on the market the beginning of January 1, 1913, therefore there will always be blooms at the houses and the most critical carnation buyers are invited to give it an investigation at any time. The firm had orders on their books for two years from parties who have seen the variety growing and insisted on having their order booked at that time as it did not matter when the variety would be put on the market, they wanted it.

The Herald will be disseminated next season

FLORISTS' PALMS.

Palms in Midwinter.

Mid-winter is a comparatively quiet season to the commercial palm grower, for after the holiday demand has been supplied there is seldom much trade in this line of stock for a few weeks, the shipping trade being especially dull at that period. Those growers located within easy reach of a large city are enabled to find some trade among the stores even at such a time, for the retail man must carry some stock of this character all through the season, but the orders are usually for small lots, and wagon-loads are the exception. It is at such a time that the grower gets a good opportunity to go through his stock and get rid of insects, if any such are found, and there are few palm growers who are unable to find any infested plants among their stock. This cleaning being in preparation for the spring potting, and if carefully done will save much time at that busy season.

Fumigating with nicotine paper will keep down thrips and kill any aphids that may appear on the young growth of the palms, and spraying with nicotine solution will kill young scale and mealy bug, provided that the spray reaches the insects, but the mature scale being covered with a hard shell, are not easily reached by an insecticide unless it be a soapy or greasy solution. Sulpho-tobacco soap has been proved to have merit in the fight against scale insects, and has been used in considerable quantities for this purpose, the most common method of application having been in the form of a dip. But after dipping the plants in any strong soapy solution, they should be laid down to drain, in order to avoid soaking the soil with the solution, and there is less danger of injury to the foliage if the latter be protected from the direct rays of the sun for some hours after the dipping. This latter precaution is the more necessary at this season from the fact that there is now but little shading on the glass, and on some of these winter days the sunshine is very strong, and especially so when the ground is covered with snow.

Watering and syringing are best done in the morning throughout the winter, the syringing being particularly helpful to the plants after they have been in some measure enervated by the strong fire heat and resulting dry atmosphere of a winter night. As much ventilation as the weather will allow without exposing the plants to strong draughts is a good rule to follow, though keeping in mind the fact that the temperature should get up to 70 degrees at least from the action of the sun before it becomes necessary to open the ventilators, and that the air should be taken off before the house gets chilled in the afternoon. Extremes of temperature either by night or by day are not good practice on the part of the plant grower, and this rule applies to the grower of palms in particular. Weakened growth, foliage of poor texture and a generally drawn out appearance are the results of keeping the palms in too high a night temperature, while a generally stunted look with a general indisposition to grow are usually fair indications that the night temperature has been too low and irregular.

The small number of species that comprise the list of palms handled in quantity by the trade has been noted in these columns before, and the list does not show any notable increase as yet, it being probably safe to say that about one per cent. of the palms known to botanists are grown for trade purposes. But there is this to be said on the part of the wholesale grower, that he grows the species that he can produce in quantity within a reasonable period, and that he can not afford to handle such slow subjects as erytheas, chamaerops, and some of the cocos, even though they may be handsome plants and enduring in character. Cocos brings to mind usually the favorite dwarf palm, C. Weddelliana, or reminds some growers that they used to see an occasional plant of C. nucifera, or C. plumosa, but does not always recall the fact that there are still other species of this highly decorative genus, and among them one that is particularly decorative is Cocos australis, a native of Argentina. Some the belief, for only a few days since the writer was offered fair plants of Phoenix Roebelini in six inch pots for $1.89 each, in one of the large department stores of Brooklyn. I say fair plants, advisedly, for all were not good in the lot, though there were a number that should have brought $3.00 each at retail. The lot in question was most likely the clean-up of someone's stock, and thus did not represent regular prices, but the grower did not get a large return from that transaction.

Rare Palms in Los Angeles.

Those who think the west is still "wild and woolly" and a desert as far as horticulture of high class is concerned should pay a visit to the splendid Doheny collection of rare palms, cycads and similar plants located at Chester place, Los Angeles, Calif. If they could also, as the writer did, happen to catch Ed. Howard and make the visit with him, the interest would be idea of this graceful, though rather slow growing palm being had from the accompanying illustration, which shows a fair sized specimen growing outdoors in Southern California. The plant in question is about 12 feet high or rather was at the time the photograph was taken, and is only just beginning to make a stem, though in mature specimens the straight trunk is frequently 20 feet in height.

It has frequently been remarked that the profits from palm growing are not great enough to tempt many growers to take up that specialty, and from a recent occurrence it would seem as though there was some foundation for much greater. Mr. Howard has collected practically the whole of this unique collection in sections for Mr. Doheny. He knows the plants and has something of interest to say of practically every specimen in the collection. He has just returned from a trip and has a big lot more coming which will necessitate the building of another large structure for their growth, for, while many of the plants here are already large specimens in full beauty, there are others that have hardly as yet begun to show their true character. The new house will be 90x190 feet and the dome 50 feet high.

whole collection is a magnificent Dioon spinulosum. This remarkably beautiful cycad has a spread of 15 feet and is 12 feet high and every leaf on the plant is perfect. The color is a deep green, but soft, and the plant has none of that hard, varnished set appearance common to so many cycads. The collection is rich in *Chamaedorea*s, these interesting and distinct palms being universally admired when in such condition as here. To give an idea of the work entailed in bringing such specimens home we may note here that C. elatior is 30 feet high, the lower part of the stems looking like bamboos, while the leaves are bright, deep green with broad, wide defined pinnæ. C. desmoncooides is almost climbing in habit, its stems 40 feet high. The leaves are two to four feet long, the pinnæ pendant and dark green. The way some of these palms drop their leaves is very singular. Looking at them from a little distance one would imagine the petioles were broken and the leaf falling, but a closer inspection shows this to be a natural habit of the plant. Other *Chamaedorea*s are grown, notably C. stolonifera and some others, probably new to the collection, which have not yet been named. These give a tropical appearance to a house and though so graceful and elegant, take up little room literally in comparison with their more spreading compeers.

Those who know arecas only as small market plants would be interested in a noble specimen here of A. triandra. This species is noted in botanical works as attaining a height of about 20 feet, but the fine specimen here must be nearer 30 feet and well proportioned. The betel-nut palm, A. catechu, is also represented here by a fine piece, as is the green stemmed A. lutescens by a plant 30 feet high. The true latanias are represented by some rare forms. L. Cochinchinensis, a plant probably unique in the United States, has immense leaves eight feet across and almost perfectly circular in outline, the division at the end of the petiole having almost entirely disappeared. A plant like this needs room, as does L. Commersonii (rubra) and L. Loddigesii with its great petioles eight feet long supporting the glaucous, deep green leaves. Livistonia Hoogendorpi has rich, deep green leaves and most formidable looking spines and this is also true of L. rotundifolia, the specimen here being 32 feet high. Another of these spiny palms, but a very beautiful one, is Martinezia caryotafolia; the specimen is 30 feet in height, in fine health and vigor and a notable specimen in every way. Here, too, it may not be out of place to note the difference between imported specimens of Phœnix Roebelenii and those grown in greenhouses. We have seen many fine plants of this species eight or ten feet high, but with the stem the same thickness throughout. In the naturally grown plants the stem is thickened below and tapering, the leaves almost touching the soil instead of being in a whorl or two at the top and the latter are certainly much more graceful and pleasing.

Verschaffeltia splendida is about 14 feet high and the specimen here is healthy and well established. A peculiarity of this species is that it never touches the ground at the base, the trunk being held up by the roots. Hypophorbe Verschaffelti and H. amari-caulis (the barrel palm) are both represented by fine plants, as is the peculiar climbing palm, Desmoncus major, a plant which Mr. Howard says grows to over 200 feet in length in its native habitat. Veitchia Johannis is a distinct and beautiful palm and there are many more here we would like to describe did space permit. The peculiar Testudinaria elephantipes (not a palm of course) is to be seen here with its great rough bulb like the back of a tortoise from which the small twining shoots emerge. But we cannot close these notes without a word of commendation to the great work that Mr. Doheny and Mr. Howard are doing to help the cause of horticulture in southern California. No doubt Mr. Howard could make far more money if he associated himself with his brothers here in their flourishing nursery business, but the money question does not enter either into his calculations of those of Mr. Doheny's. Both are in it for the pure love of the thing and this accounts for the remarkably successful outcome of their joint efforts. H. R. R.

Philadelphia.

A GOOD DEMAND.

Another spell of near zero weather has made large inroads in the coal piles and growers say they are afraid if there is much more of this in store for them that all their profits will go up in smoke. There has been a good demand for all the choice stock that came to market the past week, at fair prices. The demand for special stock of all kinds has encouraged the pinching of almost all rose growths, so that while much long-stemmed stock is seen, a great deal of it is very weak, and there is a dearth of shorter lengths for which there is a good market. While Killarney has been picked up quickly, there not being enough to go around, at very good prices. American Beauties are more plentiful, but the market seems to take all desirable stock and calls for more. Carnations are in splendid shape and are so moderate in price, $4 per hundred, that they move off lively, a few of the special Mrs. C. W. and Alma Wards bring a little more. Bulbous stock is much more plentiful. Golden Spur narcissus coming from all directions are very popular with buyers of flowers and are sold as low as $1.50 per hundred for very nice stock. There are plenty of tulips. The ever popular La Reine, the white that can be "pinked" to such a nice shade, seems to be a failure this season. One grower, who has made a specialty of this variety for years, says he has thrown out over 50,000 bulbs, all of which were forced carefully, but not five per cent. of which were salable. This is a great loss and he attributes it to some fault in the bulb, as his treatment has been the same as other years when his results were fine. Violets are plentiful, but the cold weather has been against their use for street wear and so they move slowly. Cattleyas are more plentiful and are selling for half the price of two weeks ago. Gardenias, fine flowers, are also hard to move, as it should be said, there are too many, much too many, for the demand and they are priced in some of the shop windows at 20 to 25 cents each. Good asparagus and maidenhair are scarce and sell at sight. There is a demand for flowering plants. Azaleas are now in good flower and some very well flowered Primula obconica and cinerarias are seen.

CLUB MEETING.

The February meeting of the club was without doubt the largest in point of attendance ever held, and those who were fortunate enough to be present saw the finest exhibition of cut flowers, roses and carnations, ever staged at a club meeting. Nearly, if not quite all the novelties of the Detroit meeting were there. Large vases of the Wodenethe, and they were gorgeous carnations, were staged, as were many other seedling and well grown flowers of all the rarest sorts. Generous sized vases of all the new roses were also staged, flowers that showed up wonderfully well, and the growers thought so well of them and the importance of the meeting that for the most part they staged them themselves. Wallace Pierson of the A. N. Pierson Co., Cromwell, Conn., was kept busy telling about how they grew such magnificent Killarney Queen and Double White Killarney and Prince de Bulgarie, or Mrs. Taft and Lady Hillingdon. The Sunburst from E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., was a much admired flower, as was the Princeton, Stockton & Howe's new pink, which the Robert Craig Co., staged for them. Of the old favorites Mrs. Jardine and Double Pink Killarney were shown in fine shape by John Stevenson. J. W. Young had a vase of Double Pink Killarney, superb flowers. The Robert Scott Co. had a novelty in Irish flowers, a bright pink five petaled rose, a florist rose of Bon Silene class but better, also Double Killarney. The Joseph Heacock Co.'s Killarney and Double White Killarney were superb and kept pace with their reputation.

NOTES.

Wallace Pierson, who gave a witty and at the same time, good rose and carnation talk, said that while many new things sent out were worthless, yet it was necessary to have variety so that the business would grow, and the good things that stayed more than made up for the failures. There were from twelve to fifteen roses that were to be included in the paying list for forcing. The retail florist was after all, the important factor in the business, he made the consumer, and money was returned through him. Europe was where, as yet, all the new varieties originated, but many valuable sports were found here and growers should always be on the watch for such variations. He spoke enthusiastically of the great Detroit show and the great benefit to the allied industries. He modestly mentioned that they had eighteen acres of glass, grew 125,000 roses, one million chrysanthemums and other plants in proportionate quantities. Everybody was invited, they had no secrets, thinking that if everybody grew flowers better there would be more demand for them.

Adolph Farenwald spoke of the Detroit meeting and what a grand success it was, particularly from a rose standpoint, and how much the Philadelphia growers did to help it along and make it what it was. He spoke well of the united societies and predicted a wonderful show in New York next year. Peter Fisher's son spoke in an enthusiastic and modest way of their Gorgeous and Benora and the still newer seedlings and the way in which the new ones were being tested before being sent out. Leo Niessen told of his experience as a judge and praised the new pink carnation Gloriosa as the coming pink. E. A. Stroud spoke of the many new sorts seen at Detroit and picked out those he thought were meritorious. Joseph Heacock, S. S. Pennock, and Robert Pyle followed with pleasing remarks.

The Dingee & Conard Co., at West Grove, Pa., met with a serious loss by fire on Monday morning, February 5. The fire started in the large connecting house and spread rapidly, entailing a loss of from five to eight thousand dollars, including stock, the centre house or shed and the ends of the houses being burned. Owing to the excessive cold weather, the local fire companies found extreme difficulty in getting water to fight the flames, which spreading over such a large space under a high wind, soon got beyond control. The houses are well insured, but the stock is a total loss.

President Vincent of the S. A. F. was loud in his praise of the show and put in an oar for the national society, urging everyone present who was not a member to join and all hands to push and push hard, to at least get one more to join. He urged the conjunction of all the societies into the mother one which he was sure would be a great stride forward.

Preparations are going on for St. Valentine's day business, which it is thought today will be greater than ever. The supply men are there with their heart-shaped baskets and fancy hampers. Both H. Bayersdorfer & Co. and M. Rice & Co., are offering unique receptacles for flowers for this floral holiday.

The trade was much shocked at the sudden death of "Dan" Farson. He was about town on Saturday and died the following Thursday of pneumonia. Everybody liked Dan, he was a prince of story tellers, quick at repartee and was always able to instill good humor and leave pleasant recollections of his visit.

W. H. Wyatt of Thirteenth and Vine streets has cut an opening into his ice box which admits the outside air direct, and says he finds it a great advantage in the saving of ice and his carnations keep much longer in the fresh air.

Robert Craig and Daniel Donoghue of this city, and Julius Roehrs of Rutherford, N. J., sailed for Porto Rico on Saturday, February 2, where they will spend a month looking about and enjoying that tropical climate.

Charles H. Grakelow of Fifteenth and Cumberland streets has enlarged his store by the addition of the adjoining property on the east, which was required for his rapidly growing business.

OBITUARY.

Daniel D. L. Farson.

Daniel D. L. Farson, a well known and popular member of the craft of Philadelphia, Pa., passed away February 1, aged 61 years. His death from pneumonia followed an illness of only a few days and his sudden demise was a shock to his many friends both of this city and throughout the country where he had very wide acquaintance. Selecting the business in the early seventies, as a healthy employment, he erected greenhouses at Fiftieth street and Westminster avenue, which ten years later he sold to Herman Zimmer. Shortly afterwards, in 1888, he was elected secretary of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and was appointed superintendent of the hall, which position he held until 1895, when he resigned and opened a retail cut flower store at Fifteenth street below Sansom, which was discontinued after a time. He also conducted a similar establishment at Ardmore, Pa., until two years ago, when he bought the Flower Shop on North Sixty-third street in Overbrook, which he carried on at the time of his death. He leaves a wife and adopted daughter. The funeral services were held at his late residence, 2048 North Sixty-third street, Monday, February 5, at 2 p. m., and the interment was at West Laurel Hill cemetery.

Mr. Farson was always active in all affairs of the craft. He was a charter member of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia and served as secretary, holding this office in 1888 and 1899 and again in the years 1895 and 1896. He was of a bright, sunny disposition, a good story teller, being an excellent mimic, and was the life of every social gathering of the craft. At a special meeting of the club called to take action upon the death of Mr. Farson, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, The members of the club having heard with deep regret of the death of their old friend and fellow tradesman, who had been for so many years closely associated with them, not only as a fellow member but in the important capacity of a signer of our club charter, and therefore one of the founders and later acting secretary of the club for two terms;

Resolved, That we hereby express our deep sense of loss in the passing away of Mr. Farson, and,

Resolved, That we put on record our appreciation of the long and faithful service which he rendered the club in its foundation, and for long after, as an active, faithful, and conscientious member; and further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be made a matter of record in the minutes of the club, and a copy of same be sent to the family. K.

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Latham.

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Latham of the firm of Bridle & Latham, proprietors of the Navesink Greenhouses, Navesink, N. Y., died at her home there, January 19, after an illness of four months, aged 82 years, having been a subscriber of THE AMERICAN FLORIST since its first issue. Mrs. Latham was born Elizabeth H. Pettigrew in Kittery, Me., April 20, 1830, and in 1850 married Franklin J. Latham, a captain in the navy. They conducted a boarding house in New York City but Mr. Latham's health failing in the later 60's, they moved to Navesink. They first ran a chicken business but abandoned that to take up the florist's business and built greenhouses. Mr. Latham died in 1873, and she continued the business and in 1888 took into partnership William A. Bridle, an experienced florist of New York, and the firm have continually enlarged their greenhouse and added to and improved their holdings. Mrs. Latham was a remarkable woman, of a reserved nature, disliking any affectation, shrewd, clear-headed and calculating, but fair and just in all her dealings, and with an amount of determination and grit that would surmount most difficulties. She made a host of warm friends.

She leaves no family, the only child dying in infancy, and but two cousins are known to be living. The funeral services were held from her late home, Monday, January 22, the interment being in Bay View cemetery.

The business will be continued under the same firm name by Mr. Bridle and the employes who have been with the firm for many years. The foreman, William Devesy, has been associated with the business for twenty-five years.

The committee appointed by the American Association of Nurserymen, the Western Association of Nurserymen, and the National Horticultural Inspectors' Association met the representatives of the Department of Agriculture during the last month at Washington and formulated a bill for the inspection and quarantine of nursery stock, which was introduced in the House of Representatives, January 15, 1912.

Sec. 6. That no person, firm or corporation shall ship or deliver for shipment to any common carrier, nor shall any common carrier accept for transportation or transport from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia into another State or Territory or the District of Columbia, any such imported nursery stock, the case, box, package, crate, bale, or bundle whereof is not plainly marked so as to show the nature and quantity of the contents, the name and address of the consignee, and the country or district where such stock was grown.

Sec. 7. That the Federal Horticultural Commission be, and is hereby authorized to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary for carrying out the purpose of this Act.

Sec. 8. That whenever, in order to prevent the introduction from any foreign country into the United States of any tree, plant or fruit disease, or of any injurious insect, new or not theretofore widely prevalent or distributed within and throughout the United States, the Horticultural Commission shall determine that it is necessary to forbid the importation into the United States of nursery stock or of any class of fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, and seeds from a country where such disease or insect infestation exists, it shall promulgate such determination, specifying the country and district, and the nursery stock or the class of fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds, which, in the opinion of the Commission should be excluded, and, following the promulgation of such determination by the said Commission and until the withdrawal of the said promulgation by it, the importation of nursery stock or of the class of fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants or seeds specified in the said promulgation, from the country and district therein named, regardless of the use for which the same is intended, is hereby prohibited, and until the withdrawal of the said promulgation by the said Commission, and notwithstanding that such nursery stock, fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds be accompanied by a certificate of inspection from the country of importation, no person, firm, or corporation shall import or offer for entry into the United States from the country of importation, no person, firm, or corporation shall import or offer for entry into the United States from any foreign country specified in such promulgation any of the nursery stock or of the class of fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds named therein, regardless of the use for which the same is intended. Provided, That before the Federal Horticultural Commission shall promulgate its determination, that it is necessary to forbid the importation into the United States of the articles named in this section, it shall give a public hearing on the question at which hearing any party in interest may appear, and be heard, either in person or by attorney.

Sec. 9. That the Federal Horticultural Commission is authorized and directed to quarantine any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or any portion thereof, when it shall determine the fact that a dangerous plant disease or insect infestation new or not theretofore widely prevalent or distributed within and throughout the United States exists, in such State or Territory, or the District of Columbia; and the said Commission is directed to give notice of the establishment of such quarantine to common carriers doing business in or through such quarantined area, and shall publish in such newspapers in the quarantined area as it shall select notice of the establishment of quarantine; that no person, firm, or corporation shall ship or offer for shipment to any common carrier, nor shall any common carrier receive for transportation or transport, nor shall any person, firm, or corporation carry or transport from any quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, any nursery stock or any fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds, except as hereinafter provided; that it shall be unlawful to move, or allow to be moved, any nursery stock, or any fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds specified in the notice of quarantine hereinbefore provided, and regardless of the use for which the same is intended, from any quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, in manner or method or under conditions other than those prescribed by the Federal Horticultural Commission; that it shall be the duty of the Horticultural Commission to make and promulgate rules and regulations which shall permit and govern the inspection, disinfection, certification, and method and manner of delivery and shipment of nursery stock, or any fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds specified in the notice of quarantine hereinbefore provided, and regardless of the use for which the same is intended, from a quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory, or the District of Columbia; and the said Commission shall give notice of such rules and regulations as hereinbefore provided in this section for the notice of the establishment of quarantine. Provided, That before the Federal Horticultural Commission shall promulgate its determination that it is necessary to quarantine any State, Territory, district, or portion thereof, under the authority given in this section, it shall give a public hearing on the question, at which hearing any party in interest may appear and be heard, either in person or by attorney.

Sec. 10. That whenever in this Act the term "nursery stock" is used, it shall be construed as including field-grown florists' stock, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, grafts, scions, buds, fruit pits, seeds, or other plants or plant products for propagation, unless otherwise provided herein.

Sec. 11. That any person, firm, or corporation who shall violate any of the provisions of this Act, or who shall forge, counterfeit, alter, deface, or destroy any certificate provided for in this Act or in the regulations of the Federal Horticultural Commission, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court, and it shall be the duty of the United States attorneys diligently to prosecute any violations of this Act which are brought to their attention by the Federal Horticultural Commission or which come to their notice by other means.

THE New York Florists' Club has issued a call to all florists' clubs in the state to send delegates to a meeting to be held at the New York State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y., for the purpose of effecting an organization which shall properly represent the large floricultural interests of the state.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The following special premiums are offered at the exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America to be held in New York in 1912.

W. W. Wells & Co.'s specials—Gold, silver and bronze medal for three flowers of chrysanthemum Annie L. Angus.

C. H. Totty's specials—For six flowers Chrysanthemum Ramapo, first prize, $25; second prize, $15; third prize, $10.

CHAS. W. JOHNSON, Sec'y.

American Gladiolus Society.

Again does the nomenclature committee of the American Gladiolus Society desire to call the attention of its members to the fact that we must have their hearty co-operation by the contribution of bulbs. Not only are those desired which at present are being sold under more than one name, as well as the several varieties which bear the same name, but especially do we wish to try out those varieties which may be considered unworthy of retaining, and regarding which some of our members must know and possess in sufficient quantities to hardly miss the number required for our use. Five to ten bulbs would be sufficient, and by such assistance the work of your committee would be hastened and the growing of gladioli would be raised to a much higher standard. We know that the past season was most severe to growers throughout most of the country and that some varieties being tested for the first time may not have had a fair chance and will be further tested the coming season and as everything points to a good season for 1912, let us have your contribution early.

All shipments should be made via express, prepaid, consigned to Prof. A. C. Beal, Chairman on Nomenclature, American Gladiolus Society, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Chicago's Spring Flower Show.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, Monday, February 5, plans for the spring flower show in the Art Institute, March 12-17, were considered. Students of the Art Institute submitted several poster designs in competition for a prize offered by the Horticultural Society for an acceptable poster sketch. A manager will be engaged at once and plans for arranging the exhibition will be determined on. One suggestion is that a separate art gallery be used for each section of the exhibits, thus providing a rose room, a carnation room, an orchid room, etc., while the larger flowering plants and decorative stock can be arranged on the stairways and in corridors.

Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, Wis., Charles Knopf Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., with carnations; J. A. Valentine of the Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.; Manke Bros., North Milwaukee, Wis.; W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind., and W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., have written that they will send exhibits.

Much of the success of the Chicago flower shows of the past has been attributed to unconventional staging, and the management is desirous of obtaining the same result this year. The Art Institute offers a problem quite distinct from the Coliseum and suggestions on how to deal with it will be welcomed by J. H. Burdett, Sec'y., 1620 W. 104th place, Chicago.

Premiums have been added to the schedule for displays of orchids, window box and most novel and attractive exhibit not covered by other classes.

J. H. BURDETT, Sec'y.

Society of American Florists.

President Richard Vincent, Jr., has instructed the secretary to send the following to all florists' clubs and horticultural societies:

My Worthy Friends:

It is my earnest desire to make the forthcoming convention to be held in Chicago, in August next, a grand success, not only in numbers present but also in a business sense, and to make it profitable and interesting to all attending.

Therefore, I request that your local society consider, at its next meeting if possible, whatever subject for discussion at the convention it may be thought would help the greatest number engaged in horticultural pursuits and especially the members of the S. A. F.

If notice of a subject of this kind is given to John Young, secretary, 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, he will see that the subject is brought before the S. A. F. directors at their meeting in March, and if the suggestion does not conflict with other matters offered, the board will be pleased to place it on the programme for discussion during the convention.

I would also request that if any article or paper is submitted, your society name some one to discuss the same when brought before the convention.

Respectfully yours,

RICHARD VINCENT, JR., President.

Several letters have been returned and notices from postmasters received notifying me of the nondelivery of the proceedings of 1911, through wrong address being given. If any member has not received a copy of the proceedings of 1911 or the assessment notice for 1912 will notify me at once, same will be sent, and at the same time the correct address will be entered on the books of the society.

This notice is published through the courtesy of the trade press.

THE report of the Rochester Park Commission for 1911 is received and is an interesting document, describing the several beauty spots of the city and the manner in which the work of the commission is carried out. A careful record of the large collection of coniferous evergreens in Highland Park is carefully kept and it will be of great value in the selection of trees for ornament or lumber. The book is beautifully illustrated with halftones of the beauty spots.

Washington.A LARGE DECORATION.

The business of the past week was good along the lines of decorative work. While there is a reasonable supply of stock no surplus has developed. The continued dark weather makes it difficult for the local growers to keep up an average supply of roses and carnations and at this writing we are well in the grip of another blizzard. A very fair supply of tulips and jonquils is now coming in. Easter lilies and callas seem to be taken as fast as they come. One big decoration on February 1 called for a large number of Richardia Elliottina. A good quality of mignonette and sweet peas is now seen. There is a considerable trade in plants such as ferns, azaleas and daisies, the latter being quite popular this season

NOTES.

The most notable decoration of the season was executed by J. H. Small & Sons, February 1, for a reception tendered the Russian Ambassador by Edward B. McLean and wife. The entire scheme was in yellow, oncidiums and yellow callas being used. All the oncidiums available at George Field's were used and others were secured from New York. The whole affair was something of a dazzler as it was probably intended to be. The decoration, which is conceded to have been a very artistic piece of work, was supervised by J. H. Small in per-

Harry Payne took a trip to the country February 3 and immediately on his departure a lot of funeral orders came in. As a result Joseph and Louis Freeman were found up to their ears in work. Nearly every retail store was busy with funeral work during the first days of this month.

At the U. S. Propagating Gardens a great stock of fine bedding plants for park planting are being brought forward. Roses, gardenias, carnations and other cutting stocks are also looking well. The flowers for the White House are grown at the greenhouses of the gardens.

Albert Small of New York was in this city a part of last week assisting with the decorations at the McLean home. A. F. F.

Buffalo.COLD WEATHER RETARDS FLOWERS.

The extreme cold weather has retarded the growth of nearly all flowers, carnations being very scarce and small, and roses are very close and tight. All bulb stock is coming in in fine shape. Trade has not been very rushing, the cold weather keeping many people at home.

NOTES.

John Bischoff, who was employed by several different florists in Buffalo for many years, but for the past four years at Niagara Falls, died on Thursday and was buried Sunday. The business will be continued by his family.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The regular meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society was held Friday evening, January 26, President Huss in the chair, and in the absence of Secretary Smith, W. W. Hunt acted as secretary pro tem. The business of the evening was the adoption of the new constitution and by-laws. Two features of the by-laws were appointing of an employment committee to consist of five members, to aid gardeners in securing employment, and a relief committee, consisting of the president, secretary and treasurer, who are authorized to spend any sum less than $25 without a vote of the society for any gardener or member in distress.

A diploma was awarded J. F. Huss for display of evergreens, and certificates of merit to Alfred Cebelius for gardenias and William H. McKenzie for a display of narcissus, carnations and freesias, the judges being Alexander Cummings, Jr., J. Alfred Weber and Howard A. Pinney.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The sixth annual dinner of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at the Oriental Hotel, Glen Cove, January 25. The decorations consisted of fine specimen plants of cyclamen and primulas, also cut flowers arranged in large vases. Conspicuous among the latter was a fine vase of C. H. Totty's new Carnation Wodenethe.

The dinner commenced at 6:30 p. m., 75 guests being present, among whom were representatives of the trade, the local press, neighboring horticultural societies and members of the society. President J. F. Johnson welcomed the guests and after the dinner was served introduced A. Herrington as toastmaster of the evening and anyone who has heard Mr. Herrington preside on such an occasion knows what a capable toastmaster he is, his good stories and witty remarks kept the boys in great humor.

Among the speakers of the evening were J. Duthie, who spoke of the society and what it was doing. F. H. Traendly responded for the S. A. F., Chas. H. Totty gave an interesting talk on the coming national flower show to be held in New York in 1913 and asked the private gardeners to do their share in making it the best and largest show ever held in this country. The Rev. Mr. Gammack, a life member of the society, gave an able address on the conditions and improvements of the village of Glen Cove. Other speakers were Frank Boyne, President Willinger of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, Wm. H. Duckham, A. J. Shaw and J. Davis.

During the evening President Johnson presented S. J. Trepass with a diamond scarf pin in recognition of his services during his term as president. The speaking was interspersed with vocal music rendered by Messrs. MacNicol, Kimmer and Richards. At the finish all joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne." All agree this was the most successful dinner the society ever held and much credit is due Messrs. Trepass, Browne and Everett, who made all the arrangements.

HARTFORD, CONN.—As a result of a ruling of the judge of the superior court it is very likely that J. Albert Brodribb will have to move his greenhouses which the city claims are built upon land laid out for a street, but never opened.

son. While no exact figures are available it is estimated that the cost of the floral decorations ran near to three thousand dollars.

The Washington Florists Co. announce that on June 1 they will remove from Thirteenth and F streets, where they have long been located, to 1408 H street, N. W., which will bring them into the florist colony of that neighborhood. The building they will occupy was formerly the Hotel Elsmere, which is being remodeled, the upper floors being fitted up for offices.

Mrs. Leapley, the aged grandmother of Fred. Leapley of Leapley & Meyer, died on February 2. Mrs. Leapley was one of the oldest residents of the Anacostia section, being over eighty years of age.

John was well known by many in the trade, who were sorry to hear of his death. Several went down from Buffalo to the funeral.

A good meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club was held Tuesday evening, February 6. Nominations of officers and a paper by F. C. W. Brown on the retail salesman were the features.

It is expected that L. H. Neubeck will be able to bowl in another month. That over-exertion in Baltimore has put him out of commission.

Henry Weber of Main and Amherst streets has bought the greenhouses in Springville formerly owned by George Stafflinger.

ROSES IN SHORT SUPPLY.

That the rose growers have found it difficult to produce flowers during the long spell of low temperatures and dark weather which has prevailed in this section for the last month is very evident by the limited number that are being received by the different wholesale houses. There has always been a short supply of roses from the last of January to the middle or last of February, which no doubt is caused more or less by the endeavors of the growers to have an ample supply during the holidays and a large number of houses going off crop later, but this year the warm late fall followed by such severe weather has shortened up the crops of those houses which were intended for blooming during the period of general shortage. There has been a general advance in the prices of all grades of roses, American Beauty which has been in good supply, especially the long-stemmed grade, also feeling the movement and values are higher, and with the teas and hybrid teas the advance has been considerable. Carnations are in very good supply, but with roses so short there is good demand for all that are received, and the prices remain very firm. The stock is of very fine quality and is sold up very clean every day. Bulbous stock is in much larger receipt and is filling in during the shortage of other stock. Von Sion narcissus are now to be had in fairly good numbers and the quality is improving rapidly. There is promise of a very good supply of tulips and narcissus for St. Valentine's day and they can be used to great advantage in basket work at that time. Violets are in very good supply and some of the home-grown stock is of excellent quality, while there are also large receipts of eastern grown stock which will no doubt find good market during the coming week. Orchids are still to be had in quantity, but the call for these has been large enough to keep the price up. Sweet peas are now being received in good sized shipments, the cut gradually increasing from week to week and the quality is also improving, there being some fine long-stemmed flowers to be had. Lilies and callas are in a little larger supply, the prices of the former holding firm and the blooms being readily sold, the latter not selling so well. Lily of the valley has had a good call and the surplus which seemed evident a week ago has disappeared and the receipts are cleaning up nicely. Freesias are of excellent quality, some splendid stock being seen, and they sell readily. Narcissus Paper White and Roman hyacinths are also finding a good market and there is no surplus of either. Mignonette, pansies, lupines, antirrhinums, calendulas and marguerites are some of the smaller flowers offered. The demand for greens is very good and there is a good supply of asparagus and adiantum to meet the call and some splendid boxwood, but ferns are rather short and the price this week advanced. With moss and ferns both short the makers-up of funeral work will have to advance the price on the designs.

NOTES.

W. S. Garland who has consigned his entire cut to Percy Jones for many years, is no doubt one of the most successful carnation growers shipping to this market. When Mr. Garland does not use his profits in buying real estate he is buying automobiles. He has just purchased a new Buick touring car and has presented his son

The Civil Service Board of the West Chicago Park Commissioners will hold an examination for head florist on February 27, at the Garfield Park Pavilion at 9:00 a. m., and also for a florist. The head florist to have full charge of the Garfield Park conservatory and propagating houses and the outdoor gardens, and flower beds in all the parks in the system are also under his care. He is also required to prepare for and arrange special floral exhibits, the pay to be $140 to $200 per month. The duties of florist are general work in the conservatory and outdoor gardens throughout the system with pay $2.25 to $2.50 per day. It is not required that the candidates be residents of Chicago.

John Poehlmann says that if the painters and carpenters get through with their work on his firm's new store in time Poehlmann Bros. Co. will move into its new quarters next week. The stock that this firm is cutting is of its usual good quality and some especially fine sweet peas, orchids, tulips, jonquils and other flowers are among the daily offerings.

J. E. Jones and son, R. E. Jones, of Richmond, Ind., took in the automobile show and the florists' club meeting here last week. The latter says that if he is as successful in inducing his father to purchase a new auto as Fred Lautenschlager was to make him a life member of the S. A. F. he will soon have one of the latest model cars.

John Schillo says that the Adam Schillo Lumber Co. has already booked a few good sized orders for pecky cypress and that the outlook is bright for a banner year. The well known lumberman says that there is only one bad feature about his cypress and that is it lasts too long.

August Lange has insufficient room in his present quarters for the large force of employes, numbering about 35 on certain days of the week, and has leased additional space on the floor above his store which will be connected with the ground floor by an electric elevator.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are offering a full line of seasonable flowers with violets, double daffodils, tulips and sweet peas of unusually fine quality. Business has been very good with this firm the past week, both the local and shipping trade being exceptionally brisk.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is particularly well fixed on violets and expects to fill all orders in full for both single and double for St. Valentine's Day. This house is handling a large quantity of wild smilax, fancy ferns, Asparagus Sprengeri and Asparagus plumosus.

The stock that Hoerber Bros. are cutting is of fine quality and some fancy roses and carnations are daily arrivals at the store this week. F. C. Hoerber says the Killarneys are looking fine and that they will soon be in crop.

Wm. Currie, Benj. Gregory, Hugh Maxwell and John Pilsner of Milwaukee were some of the out-of-town Scotchmen who witnessed the curling match here this week.

John Poehlmann, Jr., writes that he is having a delightful time at Culver, Ind., where he is attending the well known military academy.

CHICAGO.

Max Ringier has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife, whose death was caused by tuberculosis Thursday, February 1. The deceased was 32 years old and leaves a husband and four small children to mourn her loss. The funeral was held from the residence last Saturday at 12:30 a. m. and interment at Oakwood cemetery. Mr. Ringier wishes to thank his many friends in the trade for the kindness shown him during his recent bereavement and for the many beautiful floral designs that were delivered at his residence on the sad occasion.

Otto W. Frese, speaking for the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, says that business is exceptionally good and fully up to his expectations. His firm is receiving some good-sized shipments of Killarney and White Killarney roses of fine quality in addition to a full line of all other seasonable stock.

J. B. Deamud has returned from Cairo, Mich., where he was called last week by the serious illness of his father. Mr. Deamud's many friends are pleased to hear that his father's condition is improving and that an early recovery is looked for.

Phil Schupp says that the stock in 16 of J. A. Budlong's greenhouses have suffered considerably from escaping gas, with the result that his firm is minus a large supply of roses when they are most needed.

John Starrett is kept pretty busy at the Hotel La Salle, arranging the decorations for the many social functions that are happening daily at this well-known hostelry.

Allie Zech and Michael Fink were pallbearers at the Ringier funeral, which was held last Saturday, February 3.

Ed Winterson is now living in his new home at Congress and Hamlin avenues.

J. Stuppy of the Stuppy Floral Co., of St. Joseph, Mo., writes that his bowling team is in fine condition and that it is going to trim up the local Florists' Club's picked team when it plays here during the American Bowling Congress in March. Mr. Stuppy says that his team has already won one pennant and that it is destined to win another when it plays here. The local boys wish the Missouri bowlers good luck in the tournament but say that as far as winning from their picked team is concerned that they will have a little something to say when it comes to carrying off the pennant.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. has a reputation for filling telegraph orders on short notice, but it is going some when it receives an order for a boiler at 10 a. m. and places it on the 2 p. m. train the same day. This was done one day last week when an out-of-town party reported having trouble with his heating system and stood in danger of losing his entire stock. It is needless to say that the boiler reached its destination in due time and that the grower saved his stock, thanks to Kroeschell Bros. Co.'s prompt action.

The many friends of Duncan A. Robertson, vice-president of the Florists' Club, not knowing his middle initial, were much interested to know if he was the Duncan C. Robertson who skipped one of the local curling teams against the Scotch curlers. They all thought they would like to see him whisk the little broom and accost his teammates with the "Hoot mon!"

Peter Reinberg is cutting quite heavily in roses and carnations and is indeed fortunate in having such a large supply as is seen at the store during the general shortage that is prevailing at present. Tim Matchen finds but little trouble in disposing of the stock and the way the orders came in last Monday shows that the out-of-town trade is buying quite heavily.

Bassett & Washburn are still receiving a large quantity of fine lilies and American Beauty roses in addition to a fine grade of Rhea Reid roses and O. P. Bassett carnations. This firm has met with much success in growing the two latter flowers and are experiencing much trouble in filling all the orders for this popular rose and carnation.

The A. L. Randall Co. is receiving a large number of orders for the splendidly prepared magnolia leaves that it is featuring in the supply department sale this week. Frank Johnson, the industrious manager, says that the next thing on the programme is a basket sale with a 30 per cent discount off on fancy and novelty baskets.

Wm. Graff and wife have returned to their home in Columbus, O., after having consulted Dr. Billings in regard to his health. The well-known specialist told Mr. Graff that he would have to undergo another operation for appendicitis before he could look for a complete recovery.

N. J. Wietor says that the stock in Wietor Bros.' greenhouses is doing nicely and that some large crops of roses are on the way. A fine grade of American Beauty roses and a large supply of choice carnations in all the leading varieties can be seen at the store this week.

H. Bauske has placed an order with the A. Dietsch Co. for the material for the four large greenhouses that he is going to rebuild this season. He has also placed a large order with the Adam Schillo Lumber Co. for pecky cypress for bench purposes.

D. D. Johnson, general manager of the United Fertilizer Co., says that everything is going along nicely and from present indications the Evergreen Brand Flower Fertilizer will be used more extensively than ever this year.

Louis Kreitling, father of Mrs. Chas. Kochman, formerly Miss Anna Kreitling, and the late Walter and Oscar Kreitling, died February 6, after four weeks' illness, aged 76 years.

H. Van Gelder, of Percy Jones, bought a new five-passenger Buick touring car at the automobile show in the Coliseum last week. Now bowlers, all aboard for Milwaukee!

The Chicago Carnation Co.'s stock is arriving at the store in large quantities where some fancy carnation blooms are nearly always obtainable.

Sprinklerproof Sam, Sidney Wertheimer and A. B. Marks, New York. 'Nuff said. The first named is still traveling without an umbrella.

Winterson's Seed Store, western headquarters for A. T. Boddington, of New York, is expecting a large shipment of cannabis soon.

Weiland & Risch are cutting quite heavily in Killarney and White Killarney roses, gardenias and carnations.

Gust Pappas has returned to Des Moines, Ia., after having enjoyed a three weeks' visit in this city.

Peter Nohos and E. J. Manos of Milwaukee, Wis., were in the city buying stock this week.

Bridesmaid roses of the best grade is one of Zech & Mann's stand-bys this week.

John Kruchten is featuring fine gardenias, snapdragons and carnations.

T. D. Long of Denver, Colo., was in the city this week on business.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is showing some of Klehm's fine novelty tulips.

Visitors: F. J. Farney, representing M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; Peter Nohos, R. J. Manos, Wm. Currie and Benj. Gregory, Milwaukee.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held at the Union Restaurant February 1. After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, Retiring President Philpott vacated the chair for President Foley. Fred W. Tredup, 1209 East Seventy-fifth street, was elected to membership and the following were proposed for membership: J. F. Potocka, 176 North Michigan avenue; Paul M. Bryant, 131 North Wabash avenue; J. Schriver, Twenty-sixth street and Western avenue; C. F. McCormick, 143 North Wabash avenue; Sprinkleproof Samuel Seligman, 565 Broadway, New York.

President Washburn and Secretary Ammann of the Illinois State Florists' Association told of the excellent work which this organization has accomplished and urged a large attendance at the annual meeting and exhibition to be held in Joliet March 5.

Secretary Burdett of the Horticultural Society spoke of the plans for the spring exhibition at the Art Institute March 12-17, suggesting among other things that the club members, by aiding a flower show at this place, would certainly promote their own interests.

George Asmus, who followed, said that all flower shows are helpful to the trade and that florists should do everything in their power to make them attractive and successful.

Fred Lautenschlager's many friends made an effort to have him endorsed for superintendent of the trade exhibition to be held here next August in connection with the annual convention of the Society of American Florists. As it was stated this position had already been filled, it was thought that he could be recommended as assistant to the superintendent and the matter was left open until the next meeting.

Chas. J. Bond, of Naperville, exhibited a number of vases of cattleya blooms, including some remarkably large specimens of C. Trianae. Anton Then exhibited Carnation No. 41, a good white which scored 80 points and doubtless would have scored higher if it had been better staged, as the blooms apparently suffered from lack of water.

President Foley announced the following standing committees:

Sports and Pastimes Committee—Allie Zech, Frank Ayers and Otto Goerisch.

Good of the Club Committee—Guy French, A. C. Kohlbrand and Ed Enders.

ADEQUATE SUPPLY FOR ST. VALENTINE'S.

This week opened with cold weather which seemed to put a slight damper on the enthusiasm of the buyers. The opening business was very good but all stock was not cleaned up as quickly as throughout the preceding fortnight. Indications point to an adequate supply for St. Valentine's day, of the flowers mostly in demand at that time. Shipping business is good. The amount of roses available is very short of what might be used, if they were forthcoming. American Beauties are getting back to normal condition and as a result orders are being filled in fairly satisfactory shape. Richmonds are in particularly good supply and are finding a good market. The carnation market has eased a little and at the opening of this week practically not one of the buyers was disappointed in not getting all he wanted of this flower. Out of town orders have been taking up many of these blooms. Bulbous stock still shows the same shortage in longiflorum lilies and callas. Tulips, jonquils and freesia are in good supply and have been proving very good property. Other offerings in this line are Roman and Dutch hyacinths, Paper White and Poeticus narcissus and rubrum lilies. Miscellaneous lines are well supplied, the supply of sweet peas is good and easily cleans up each day. Single violets are cleaning up well while doubles moved slowly for several days past and the opening of this week showed somewhat of an accumulation. Orchids, while selling, are moving none too quickly. The green goods market is well supplied in all lines.

NOTES.

A regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the club rooms on Monday evening, February 12.

Nic Weber, Jr., has been appointed superintendent of the Flower Market by the trustees:

P. J. Olinger has as his guest Mr. and Mrs. Fred Funke, his sister and brother-in-law from Emerald, N. D.

Ed. Schumann is wearing "the smile that won't come off." A baby girl arrived at his home the past week.

President Washburn of the Illinois State Florists' Association has appointed the following committees in connection with the forthcoming annual meeting and exhibition at Joliet, March 5:

Entertainment Committee—William Hartshorne, A. T. Pyfer and Peter Olsem.

Reception Committee—A. C. Rott, P. W. Peterson and John Goranson.

TRADE FAIR.

Continued cold weather and snow storms is what is being handed to us at present, but trade is fairly good considering such weather. Roses during the last week have had a good call, the increased demand for good stock being noticeable. Crops as a general rule are off, but the quality of all grades coming in is good. We noticed some good My Maryland and Mrs. Aaron Ward roses, and Radiance is in good form. This rose has proved to be a good winter as well as summer rose; its deep pink seems to take very well and its rampant growth makes it easy to handle. Carnations are coming in plentifully and as a rule of good quality. Bulbous stock still continues to endeavor to rule the market with its quantity. Violets and sweet peas are plentiful.

NOTES.

Mayor Fitzgerald has had plans drawn for a new city hall to cost $2,000,000, extending from School to Court street. If it were possible, why not have a central flower market in the building? The present markets are congested and not at all suitable for the purpose and the city would perhaps be glad to help along the cause and at the same time gather in a few shekels.

McKinley day passed without having much effect on the carnation market. An editorial in one of the papers stated that the florists were booming the day for their own trade. Coming down to the fine point, the editorial was perhaps right. The florists ought to set the example and wear a flower themselves.

The mid-winter flower show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall February 1-3. Among the florists who exhibited were James Wheeler, Natick, and S. J. Goddard, Framingham, who showed carnations, and F. J. Dolansky, Lynn, exhibited gardenias.

There is a reported shortage of both hard and soft coal in the neighboring towns, caused by the congestion of freight owing to weather conditions. In one town there are three large coal dealers without any soft coal. We have heard of no florists being caught with empty bins.

S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, R. I., are sending in some good My Maryland roses. This is the rose that received high praise some time ago and then got into a stormy sea and was buffeted about somewhat roughly. Those that we saw had good stems and clean, healthy foliage.

Valentine's day is almost here and this being leap year there are a few in the trade who ought to be married, that are shaking with fear that they will get caught in the meshes of the up-to-date 1912 woman.

An enormous amount of flowers were used last week for the Thanksgiving services in honor of Cardinal O'Connell, and in the decoration for the banquet given in his honor at the Somerset hotel.

The Mrs. Aaron Ward roses being sent in by McAlpine of Exeter, N. H., show good culture. This rose has to be pinched to make it a success.

Those who believe in ground hog day see six weeks more of winter, and at present writing their views may be verified.

Thomas Pegler took charge of the Flower Growers' Sales Co. as manager January 29. MAC.

Dutchess County Horticultural Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society was held at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., January 24, and had as guests James Scott and M. F. Ross. Mr. Scott gave a very fine description of the Detroit show, dwelling particularly on the new varieties shown there.

Scott Bros. of Elmsford, N. Y., exhibited a vase of a very fine crimson seedling carnation to which the societies' committee on seedlings awarded a certificate of merit. After adjournment the members spent a very enjoyable afternoon on the bowling alleys.

In the evening the annual banquet was held at the Nelson house, the principal speakers being Mr. Scott, Mr. Walworth and R. E. Cron. Conflicting dates prevented as large an attendance as is usual, but taken all in all the affair was a great success.

H. G. COTTAM, Sec'y.

New York Notes.

Undoubtedly one of the most magnificent decorations of the season was that carried out by the firm of J. H. Small & Sons on the occasion of the dinner and dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gerry at 1025 Fifth avenue on Thursday night. Mrs. Gerry was formerly Miss Mathilde Townsend, the famous belle of Washington. The dining room was decorated profusely with lilac and pink roses, and the ball room was decorated with lilacs, American Beauties and spring flowers. Pots of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine were everywhere and the entire house in every part had flowers of some kind in vases. It was certainly a wonderful sight, and Albert Small, who personally superintended the entire work, deserves great credit for the fine art displayed in the arrangements.

The fifth annual ball of the Greek American Florists' Association promises to outshine anything of the kind that has been held in the past. It will be held in Terrace Garden, Fifty-eighth street and Lexington avenue, Wednesday, February 28, at 8 p. m. The committee of arrangements are Nicholas J. Lales, James Carlaftes, Nicholas Lecakes, Constantine Cardacio, John S. Nicholas, James Saterlades, and Peter Velotas. Efforts are being made to secure Joseph Fenrich for floor manager. All of the wholesalers and growers make it a point if possible to be present, and this ball deserves the success which it will be.

Valentine Hamann, the well known carnation grower of Summit, N. J., met with a very deplorable accident at that place on February 1. Mr. Hamann was unconscious for several hours and at latest reports was in a very critical condition. Henry Wolf, who was in the automobile with Mr. Hamann, was killed.

Visitors: J. Otto Thilow, Wm. Gelger, superintendent for Stephenson's Son; Theodore Shader, superintendent Joseph Heacock's palm department, Philadelphia, Pa. Y.

NEW YORK.—The petition in bankruptcy filed by A. Moltz & Co. has been dismissed by the court on consent of the creditors, as Mr. Moltz claimed the firm is solvent. The partnership is dissolved and Mr. Moltz assumed the liabilities.

The annual meeting of the Nebraska State Florists' Society was held at Lincoln, Neb., January 16, 1912. The election of officers resulted as follows: Irwin F. Frey, Lincoln, president. J. W. Lawson, York, vice-president. Lewis Henderson, Omaha, secretary. J. E. Atkinson, Pawnee City, treasurer.

C. H. Green, Fremont, Edward Williams, Grand Island, and W. E. Davidson, Holdredge, trustees. The society recommended that the premiums for flowers at the state fair be increased about $200, making the total prizes about $700.

The annual banquet was held after the meeting at the Lindell hotel, there being about 100 present. C. H. Green of Fremont acted as toastmaster and the toasts and responses from the several guests were enjoyed until a late hour. L. H.

STOCK STILL SCARCE.

The market remains about the same as last week, the weather continues cold and stock is scarce, particularly in Killarney and White Killarney roses. Carnations have been a little larger in supply but not enough to cause a surplus, the lighter colors being short of the demand. American Beauties are in good supply both in short stems for funeral work and fancy large stock for display and decorations. Lily of the valley is plentiful and of excellent quality. Orchids are moving nicely, some very fine local stock arriving fresh every day. Violets have only a limited call on account of the extremely cold weather. Sweet peas are good and bulbous stock is plentiful. Formosum lilies are beginning to arrive regularly.

NOTES.

Peter Nichols and wife are the recipients of many congratulations. The stock left an eleven-pound baby boy at their house last week. Mr. Nichols is the possessor of "the smile that won't come off" these days.

A small fire at C. Reef's greenhouses at N. Olmstead caused the loss of considerable glass, but there was very little damage.

Milford Parks is the proud father of a baby girl which arrived very recently. Let the good work go on.

ROSES VERY SCARCE.

Stock the past week has been moving briskly, good carnations have been cleaning up right along, and roses of all kinds have been very scarce. Friday night a heavy snow covered all the surrounding country and caused the stock to shorten up considerably.

NOTES.

C. A. Kuehn is handling some very fine lily of the valley.

ROSES AND CARNATIONS SCARCE.

The market conditions for the past week remain as at the last writing, roses and carnations being very scarce with a heavy demand for both. There are a few more sweet peas arriving in the market and they are sold readily. Violets are still suffering from the extreme cold weather. There are green goods enough to supply the demand.

NOTES.

Mitchell Street Florists report business very good, having had wedding and funeral orders which kept them busy. At their greenhouses the carnation crops look very promising.

F. P. Dilger is cutting some fine bulb stock which are being disposed of at the local market.

Peter Nohos and J. J. Manos spent a few days in the Windy City this week.

William Currie and Benj. Gregory took in the curling games at Chicago.

STOCK A LITTLE MORE PLENTIFUL.

The wholesale cut flower market has not been so brisk as was the previous week. In some lines the shipments have been much heavier. This is especially so with bulb-stock. All dealers are receiving this stock in great quantities and of very fine variety. Shipments of carnations, too, are much heavier. There is a slight improvement in the prices of carnations on all the best varieties with the exception of white. These move slowly except in the case of novelties such as Wodene-the and one or two others. The novelties in roses still clear out satisfactorily, and there are not enough of the best quality Radiance, Prince de Bulgarie, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Lady Hillingdon to supply the demand. There is also a good call for the best Mme. Chateaux, Killarneys, Richmond and My Maryland. American Beauties have increased very much in number and have taken a decided drop in price. Brides and Bridesmaid are as usual only moved with difficulty. The few Sunburst that come in are still very short-stemmed, but are eagerly sought for by the critical buyers. Bon Silenes are still in limited quantity, but meet with only a fair demand. There is a scarcity of white and yellow daisies; but an over supply of sweet peas and freesia, even of the very best quality. Lilac, both purple and white, meet with ready sale. The prices on lily of the valley, mignonette and lilies remain the same. Orchids are handled now by several houses in great quantity, the quality is excellent, but with a downward tendency of prices. Some of the oncidiums are doing better, and the same can be said of the dendrobiums. Cypripediums are on the wane and even those that are in the market are of poorer quality, and not much called for. In greens, smilax is selling very slowly, but there is a good demand for Asparagus plumosus. It is noticeable that the asparagus from the south does not meet with such good sale as that which is home grown. Gardenias, which have been so very plentiful, have now shortened up in supply and even the shorter grades are selling for much better prices and the finest blooms find a very ready market. Violets are an uncertain quantity; the demand for these varies with the weather, while the finest grade flowers sell at a good price, the bulk of the large shipments coming to the market only clean up when the weather is fair, permitting the street men to be out.

Monday, February 5.—The extreme cold weather today has affected the market very much and the demand is only fair for the very best of stock.

NOTES.

C. W. Scott has been at home several weeks suffering with a severe cold and rheumatism, but is much improved and will soon be out again. Those that know say that the many newspaper reports of the arrival of four thousand yellow lilies at $2.00 apiece from England for the McLean ball in Washington, had much to do with his speedy recovery. Mr. Scott intends to get busy.

The committee having charge of the New York Florists' Club twenty-fifth anniversary and the annual dinner have been holding several meetings and are completing arrangements to have this the most interesting event in the history of the club. Charlie Weathered is chairman of this important committee and it goes without saying that anything he does he does well.

Henshaw & Fenrich have taken space in the Coogan Building from Moltz & Co., which they will occupy for an early morning market only, to accommodate their out-of-town customers who desire to get stock as early as 6 o'clock. Mr. Henshaw will have charge of the opening of this stand, but will only remain until the business is properly established.

The house of P. J. Smith is a very busy one and is truly called the "Home of the Lily," but in addition to lilies, Mr. Smith has a fine supply of roses, carnations, sweet peas, and other seasonable flowers. Mr. Smith thoroughly understands all phases of the wholesale business, having had over twenty-five years' experience in selling cut flowers at wholesale.

The Beechwood Heights Nurseries now have their salesroom conveniently fitted up at 113 West Twenty-eighth street, and "Smiling" Billy Sheehan, who is in charge, is delighted that he has a proper place to show the magnificent cattleyas and other orchids and gardenias which this house is handling exclusively at present.

The "Old Reliable" J. K. Allen has been away from his store for two or three days suffering from tonsillitis. It is so unusual for Mr. Allen to be away that his absence is immediately the cause of comment, but Miss Smedley and "Charley" Logan proved themselves quite efficient in keeping things going in a very satisfactory manner.

The New Jersey and New York Plant Growers' Association held their annual dinner at Mouquin's, Twenty-eighth street and Sixth avenue, Thursday night, February 1, and from all accounts it was on the same magnificent scale as those that have preceded it.

Siebrecht & Siebrecht of 136 West Twenty-eighth street are finding their present quarters much too small for their business, which has forged ahead so fast in the past few months. They have at present a fine line of orchids, lily of the valley and lilies.

The new carnation Salmon Beauty, exhibited by Traendly & Schenck at Detroit last month, is attracting much attention, and evidently has a bright future. It is grown by F. Abrams of Blue Point, L. I., who has worked up a fine stock of this variety.

It is J. C. Silbert, not Gilbert, who is managing the H. M. Robinson & Co. store in Twenty-sixth street, but Mr. Silbert says it matters not how you spell his name, business is going on booming ahead just the same.

Charles H. Totty will be in Pittsburg during the week on a business trip, and incidentally talk "National Flower Show" in 1913. The preliminary schedules for this grand exhibition will be sent out immediately.

Abraham Hanig, who for years has conducted the flower store at Fulton street and Red Hook lane, Brooklyn, now has charge of the cut flower department for C. C. Trepel at Gimbel Bros.

The introducers of the new rose Sunburst should be elated with the words of praise that it is receiving from all quarters.

John I. Raynor, who was a visitor to the "Street" on Monday, left February 1 for a six weeks' stay in Palm Beach, Florida.

Southampton, Long Island.

The regular meeting of the Southampton Horticultural Society was held in the Memorial Hall, February 1, President U. G. Ager presiding. The chairman of the show committee reported that the date for the summer show had been made July 24-25. W. H. Malcolm and Louis Ginnachia were elected to membership.

The members and ladies were entertained by a very interesting lecture given by W. H. Malcolm of the Shinnecock Golf Grounds. Mr. Malcolm was handicapped by not being able to show his very fine collection of slides of "Old English Gardens," as the meeting was held in the afternoon the hall could not be sufficiently darkened so that the pictures could be seen clearly. Mr. Malcolm received the hearty vote of thanks of the society for his instructive address and promised to show the pictures at the next meeting when the conditions would be more favorable.

THE proposed bill for the inspection of nursery stock, a copy of which will be found on page 119 of this issue, includes plants, bulbs, seeds, etc., and was introduced in congress January 15, 1912.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, February 7, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $13.50 to $15.25 per 100 pounds.—The W. W. Barnard Co. is now doing business at its new store, 231 West Madison street.

New Duplex Spencer Sweet Pea.

A new sweet pea, which is highly recommended for florists' use and is herewith illustrated, is offered to the trade this year. It is of the Spencer type, bearing flowers with twin or triple standards and has been named Duplex Spencer. This novelty is being disseminated by C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif., and W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and was described in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, issue of January 6, 1912, page 1340. The latter firm states that practically all the plants give flowers with twin or triple standards and in color both the standard and wings are a rich cream pink, with a beautiful lemon keel, which greatly enhances the flower. On the sprays of four flowers, the two lower flowers and sometimes three are double and the three-bloom sprays give one or two flowers with twin or triple standards. The flowers having only one single standard are magnificent, being all uniformly waved and crimped both in standard and wings. The vines are of strong, vigorous growth and bear the large flowers profusely on long, stiff stems.

French Bulbs.

The Syndicate for the Defense of Agricultural Interests, through its secretary, Albert Ordinaire, deplors the action of M. Lemoyne last season, charging him with crushing the narcissus growers, and predicts that the Roman hyacinth growers will be attacked now. He claims the syndicate valiantly brought up the price of narcissus from 12 to 18 francs and Roman hyacinths from 28 to 80 francs. [He does not excuse the syndicate or explain their serious error last season in putting a fictitious price on Romans which left a glutted market.—Ed.]

After calling Lemoyne an "exploiteur" and "menteur" he closes by an appeal to all members to meet January 20, under penalty of receiving his resignation. He says the Holland Dutch bloemen quakers (peddlers) use the French bulbs as a bait, sacrificing the prices and disposing of them at little profit in order to secure orders at good profits for their own bulb products.

Prices and Production of Lima Beans.

Some interesting data on the prices and production of lima beans are given in the recent lima bean bulletin of the Sacramento, Calif., Experiment Station, to which attention was called in our issue of February 5, page 84, as follows:

"Four cents a pound may be considered as an average price for the crop for years past, although frequently it rises to above five. This gives the average gross value of $45.00 per acre for the beans. Adding to this $1.00 per acre for the value of the straw, gives a total of $46.00 per acre. The total cost of producing a crop is from $20.00 to $25.00 an acre, depending partly upon whether or not irrigation is used. The average total cost of production is probably less than $20.00 an acre, leaving an average of at least $26.00 net to the grower."

Are true to name, have two to three good eyes, are well cured, sound and dormant, and give absolute satisfaction. Our sales last year were nearly 700,000, and not an overgrown kick. The Canna crop this year, however, is very short, and we advise placing orders early to secure stock. Delivery can be made at purchaser's option.

Our Cannas are true to name—two and three, sometimes four eyes—are sound, dormant, and are packed 250 in a box; two can be "cleated" together and shipped as one. One box of 250 sold at a thousand rate; it is cheaper for you to buy a box of 250 than 200 at 100 rate. Write for special prices for quantities.

KUNDERDI "GLORY"

WITH "RUFFLED" PETALS

The broadly expanded, wide open flowers, paired by twos, all face in the same direction, and are carried on straight stout stalks, fully 3 1/2 feet. From three to eight of these handsome flowers are open at one time. Each petal is exquisitely ruffled and fluted.

The color is a delicate cream pink, with a most attractive crimson stripe in the center of each lower petal, the shade of which is unique in Gladioli. The ruffling of the petals in this new strain has attracted much attention the country over.

Much interest was shown in the cultivation of cauliflower in the winter. Addresses were made by F. F. Walker, chairman of the State Cattle board, and Prof. F. W. Starting Vegetable Plants.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

We have used hotbeds for the purpose of starting vegetable plants for sale but owing to the losses incurred by zero weather we desire to start them in the greenhouse. When is the proper time to start vegetables in the greenhouse to have them in condition for sale to home gardeners in southeastern Wisconsin? U. W. I.

As a rule market gardeners figure six weeks as the proper amount of time to produce strong transplanted plants. This of course will vary a little as to season, soil and management; thus under very favorable circumstances five weeks may be ample and on the other hand seven weeks may be required. These calculations are for hotbed work and if anything a greenhouse should make better time than a hotbed; then one must consider that in a hotbed plants can be held back considerable in the hardening off process which is not the case in a house. Thus plants may stand practically still in frames while under greenhouse culture they would make most rapid growth.

We believe that for southern Wisconsin April 20 would be as early as advisable to plant out cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce and beets, while May 20 would answer for tomatoes, and June 1 for egg plants, peppers, cucumbers and melons out of soils or pots. For cucumber and melons we allow just 30 days as these develop remarkably in a warm place.

While there is no question that a greenhouse will produce the plants surer and easier, there is also no doubt that the plants will be inferior, as they cannot be hardened off the same as in frames. An excellent method is to dibble the plants into flats or berry boxes, then these can be moved out into cold frames and hardened off before sale. The common quart berry box will hold a dozen plants which can be sold at a reasonable price and at a handsome profit and such plants are very satisfactory to the buyer as he gets all the roots. We sell thousands of plants that way.

We have handled hotbeds and cold frames as far back as we can remember and our record is no failure; that is, we never froze out, not with 25° below zero. Such low temperatures mean extra work but often it is only one or two nights and the effort is well worth while. We always reserve a good pile of hot manure for such accidental covering, but last year we were hit hard late in the season after we had hauled our manure pile into the fields. The cold wave hit us at night and there was nothing left but to tackle the hay mow. We tore out several tons of timothy hay to mulch the whole hotbed yard—beds, walks and all. We saved everything and the hay was not hurt nor much of it lost. The point is here that after the season has advanced we can under no circumstances suffer a freeze-out.

 held at Boston, Mass., June 12-14, 1912.

FARIBAULT, MINN.—The Farmer Seed & Nursery Co. has built a modern nursery and packing cellar, which is equipped in the best possible manner,

The proposed bill for the inspection of nursery stock, a copy of which will be found on page 119 of this issue, includes plants, bulbs, seeds, etc., and was introduced in congress January 15, 1912.

MIAMA, FLA.—E. C. Harrison, wife and son, of Painesville, O., arrived at the Halcyon hotel January 20 to make a prolonged stay. As Mr. Harrison brought his motor boat with him, the party will enjoy the waters about Miami very much.

Federal Inspection Bill.

Abstract of paper read before the Tennessee State Nurserymen's Association at Nashville, Tenn., January 26, 1912.

After an introduction which stated his position and gave the history of the attempts at legislation on the inspection of nursery stock which was included in his address before the Western Association of Nurserymen at Kansas City December 13-14, 1911, an account of which appeared in the AMERICAN FLORIST, issue of December 23, page 1244, Mr. Stark related the results which the committee appointed at that meeting had at the conferences with the government officials, at which an inspection bill was drafted which will meet with the approval of the nurserymen of the country.

The committee consisting of Prof. S. J. Hunter of Kansas and myself were appointed to meet with the committee of the American Association of Nurserymen and the National Horticultural Inspectors' Association to formulate and secure the passage through congress a bill giving us efficient protection along sane lines against foreign insect pests and fungous diseases, and also to assist us in getting rid of those within our borders. The delegates were further instructed that the administration of this bill should be in the hands of a commission of five men to be appointed by the president, two entomologists, two pathologists and the selector.

We met the scientific men at Washington, and where for years it has been impossible for the department, scientific men, nurserymen and fruit growers to harmonize on legislation, at this meeting an agreement was reached and all interests are entirely satisfied. National legislation along practical and reasonable lines is assured, and without doubt more uniform legislation will follow. The national bill has been opposed by some on the grounds that it interferes with state rights. That, however, is a question for politicians. What we are after and what we need is efficient protection. There are phases that can be done best by the national government and there are other things that can be best done by the state. The contemplated bill will be a great step in advancement.

The proposed bill deals largely with the prevention of the entrance of insect pests and fungous diseases, and their control once they get within our borders. It is good as far as it goes but there is yet work to be done in standardizing or making more uniform the requirements of the various states. In the nursery business these requirements in many instances are as different as if each state were a separate nation. Each state has a right to make its own laws; however, if there were an efficient, practical, workable national law covering the inspection and interstate shipment of nursery stock, the various state laws would eventually conform to it, and that would give a uniformity of requirements and efficiency which is badly needed. For the future we must give some thought and time to this work. There may be a better way, but whatever it is, we should try to improve present conditions. We must not let the work rest here but work for that improvement and advancement which is necessary for the profit to the nurseryman, the orchardists and for increasing the quality and quantity and lowering the cost of fruit products to the public.

PRIMULA FORRESTII. (Copyright.)

Glorious New Plants from the Chinese Alps.

There has been nothing in recent years to surpass our wonderful introductions from China, through our collector, Mr. Forrest. As the introducers of several new species of Primulas, which have taken a remarkably high place in the estimation of experts, we occupy an enviable position.

Growing, as they do, close to the snow line in the mountainous region of Yunnan, China, these Primulas are exceedingly hardy, as well as beautiful: they are altogether unlike our European or American Primroses. The illustration shown gives but a very inadequate representation of the marvellous attraction of these novelties. Most of them have been awarded First-Class Certificates from the Royal Horticultural Society, London.

At the time of writing, another collector, Mr. F. Kingdom Ward, is working the Mekong-Salween divide. The Mekong and Salween rivers run southward from Central China through Burma and Siam, cutting through vast mountain ranges of immense altitude. It is on the slopes of these snow-capped giants that untold riches of the Chinese Flora flourish unseen and almost unsuspected. We are convinced, from the reports of our collectors, that the plants so far brought to light are but a "drop in the well." So trying is the climate, and so risky the intercourse with natives, that only a mere patch of ground has been covered after several years' strenuous work and the expenditure of considerable sums of money.

Fredericton, N. B.

"This is Candlemas day, bright and clear; there'll be two winters in one year." So the old saying goes; but we hope this will not prove true this year, for we have had the coldest January recorded for 40 years in New Brunswick, but February has started in more moderate. The weather the last month has caused a great consumption of fuel and held back the production of cut flowers, and the demand generally has exceeded supply, especially in funeral work, there being a general call for designs, etc.

NOTES.

Our provincial government and towns, including St. John, Fredericton and Woodstock, are boosting New Brunswick as favorable for farming and fruit raising, trying to induce English and Scotch settlers to come and take possession of the farms now unoccupied, for we can produce the best quality of apples, potatoes, etc., that can be grown in any part of Canada. Our own young men seem to move west or to the towns. It is claimed that we are on the eve of prosperity in having two railways along the St. John valley. We hope these anticipations will be realized and New Brunswick will see bright and happy days.

We have been favored, if it can be called a favor, before Christmas and since for the first time with no less than four Holland bulb men, and as there are only two commercial florists here it proved rather an unfruitful field for them. We ourselves have dealt with one old reliable firm for some ten years, but this year for the first time they sent their representative. We must say these Hollanders speak very good English and are nice fellows. We were sorry to have to say "No" to several of them.

J. B.

Louisville, Ky.

It was reported at the last meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists that Jacob Schulz was ill and H. Kleinstarink, Louis Kirch and H. G. Walker were appointed a committee to call on him. They found him well and jolly as ever, and he escorted them over the place. His carnations are doing remarkably well and some nice orchids were in bloom. His greenhouses are always kept in the neatest condition.

Wm. Walker's flower store was completely burned out with a loss estimated at $3,500. He has leased a store on Fourth avenue opposite the Mary Anderson theatre and will soon open again.

P. A. Reynolds, who was quite ill, is able to be out again. He lost two greenhouses of plants early in January by the fireman going to sleep and allowing the plants to freeze.

H. Kleinstarink invested $1,000 in an automobile company and is suing for the return of the cash, the company having failed.

Mrs. F. Walker met with an accident, falling and breaking both an arm and leg and is still confined to her bed.

Nelson Wooden, who started a store on Jefferson street, has left for parts unknown, leaving several unpaid accounts.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—The recently organized Florists' and Gardeners' Club held a meeting January 9 at the Smith college conservatory, when papers were read by Edward J. Canning, F. RANDOLPH VT.

Gentlemen:—

Your #7 Kroeschell Boiler rated at 15,000 sq. ft. of glass is carrying my entire range of 17,000 sq. ft. of glass. It might heat more.

We maintain a temperature of 50° and had no trouble to keep the proper temperature in the coldest weather.

During the recent cold snap I fired every 3 hours during the night. I find it a saving in coal to fire often. I have the KROESCHELL BOILER six years, and the only expense is one set of grates.

NO OTHER BUT A PLATE BOILER FOR ME.

Yours very truly

H. M. Totman.

ASBURY PARK, N. J.—The banquet of the Elberon Horticultural Society held at Deal Inn January 22 was a grand success, there being about 75 present. Propositions to hold shows during the year were made which will come before the society.

Important Purlin Facts

FOR years we have been using Angle Iron Purlins in our Half Iron houses, because we believe them to be better. Aside from their great strength, it is an advantage to have the bars accurately spaced in position by being screwed securely to the angle purlins.

If an angle purlin is best for a full iron frame house, why isn't it best for a Half Iron Frame one? Answer: It is.

Of course we admit that the purlins are but a small part of the house, and we may seem to be talking a good deal about them, but we are doing it just to show you that our Half Iron Frame house is a house built on reasons—every one of which we can back up by proven facts, proven by experience. If you want a reasonable house built on sound reasons—you want ours. Write us for further facts about the entire construction.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Early Annuals.

During the warm days of June the carnations deteriorate very rapidly and there is often a great need for some flower to take their place, and an early bench of asters is a great boon at such a time, especially for those who have a good call for funeral work. Seed planted during February and grown in pots or flats until after Easter can be then transplanted to the benches in which the Easter crops are grown and they will be in bloom at the time when most desired. A good strain of early flowering varieties either Comet or Victoria should be selected and with good care a paying crop is assured. A sowing of candytuft by March 1 will also produce plants that can be benched after Easter in the same manner and a good cut for Memorial day be had. The strains of white giant candytuft now offered make splendid spikes for the filling in of sprays at that great flower day. There are many annuals that can be grown for early spring blooming that are greatly appreciated by the trade among which might be mentioned calendulas, nasturtiums, scabiosa, sweet sultans and bachelor's buttons.

Marguerites.

As the warm days of spring approach the marguerite plants will bloom profusely and those in pots will have, to a great extent, exhausted the plant food in the soil, so to keep up the size of the flower and length of stem watering with liquid manure will be necessary. Liquid cow manure can be safely used in frequent waterings with no danger of any injury if the plants are in a healthy condition. The flowers should be cut daily and placed in water; they will keep much longer than if allowed to remain on the plants where they quickly fade if not picked when the warm spring days come on. This should be prevented for it not only gives the plant an untidy appearance but takes the strength of the plant and the following flowers are often much shorter in stem. A few well bloomed plants are very decorative at Easter, especially in churches where they make a splendid showing. Propagation for next year's stock should now be carried on, the cuttings root easily and there are plenty to be obtained at this time. As soon as rooted they should be grown on in good soil, and to secure the best results another year given the best of culture.

Dahlias.

The forcing of early dahlias has been practiced successfully by growers the last few years, and roots started at this time will produce flowers for Decoration day and during June. A good deep bench, in a house not too warm, should be selected, and while the plants are great feeders in the open ground, it is better not to have the soil too rich in the houses, for the plants grow very tall inside, and with a rich soil make a strong, rampant growth, which will not bloom as early. They can be fed when the buds begin to form by giving them a mulch of half-decayed manure, which will materially assist the flowering and also provide a covering that will prevent evaporation. They will require but little attention except that long, strong stakes will be necessary to keep the plants growing erect, to which they should be firmly tied, and then dis-budding to produce the better blooms. Any varieties that it is desired to increase the stock can be planted in the house and the young growths made into cuttings, which root easily at this time.

Azaleas.

The azaleas for spring flowering and Easter will soon need attention. If they have been in cold pits they should be brought into cool houses, and those that have been kept in cool houses will need spacing out and a careful going over. March and April being nearer their natural time of blooming than those brought into flower early in the winter, the plants will not have to be forced as hard and are much better brought along in a cooler temperature. The plants, however, that bloom later will require more attention, especially in regard to pinching out the soft growths that start around the cluster of buds. This should be done as early as possible and with great care, so as not to injure or break the buds. These soft growths grow very rapidly at this time and if they attain any length, quickly draw the nourishment from the stem and blast the buds, so it will require constant attention to keep them pinched off. They should be looked over at least once a week and all young shoots removed. Give the plants plenty of room so as to allow a good circulation of air, that the plants can dry off after syringing. These plants are often crowded together as closely as possible, but this invariably results in the loss of much foliage and the plant grows out of shape.

What to do with the plants that have flowered is often a question. Many growers assert that a better and earlier plant can be produced the second year than can be bought abroad and imported, but to do this the plants must be given good culture and not placed in some out-of-the-way corner where it suffers for lack of air, light and water. Whatever trimming into shape the plant requires should be done now, and the plant given an opportunity to start a new growth. As early as it is safe from all frosts the plants can be plunged outside in a frame and during the summer a mulch should be spread over the soil to prevent too much evaporation. Frequent syringings may be required during hot weather to keep down red spider, these plants being quickly infested with these insects in certain locations and they quickly ruin the foliage. Like all hard-wooded stock, be sure they do not get dry. They do not show it as quickly as the soft-wooded plants and often when it is seen it is too late to remedy the injury done.

Hydrangeas.

The greatest demand for hydrangeas is in May and June and to have them in the best condition at that time the plants should be started before March 1. While they may be started later and forced harder, yet the plants so grown are not as sturdy and do not give so good satisfaction after they are placed on the porches. Start the plants in a cool house and if the wood has become dry in their winter quarters, frequent syringing will assist in softening it. When they begin to grow do not crowd them. Crowding and too much heat are the principal causes of the long, ungainly plants so often seen. If they are grown in a cool house, with plenty of room, the plants will be sturdy and short-jointed, covered with beautiful foliage and shapely, and are a great ornament, which surely cannot be said of the tall plants with small foliage and bare stems toward the base. When the plants begin to grow rapidly they will require plenty of water and during the warm, sunny days of spring, when the houses are hot, all the ventilation possible, and at this time watch carefully for red spider, which gather in great numbers on the young growths and blooms and quickly spoil them. If they appear, syringe heavily until they are overcome. Keep the plants staked and tied as soon as required.

MENDHAM, N. J.—John Quimby is preparing to open a flower shop in the Coghlan store.

Food for Flowers.

Abstract of paper read by H. A. Huston before the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., January 2, 1912.

This country pays for commercial fertilizers over $100,000,000 annually, most of which is used on field crops, but some producers of truck and fruit are also beginning to use them as substitutes for the stable manure, which is constantly increasing in price. Where proper precautions are taken, it is found that such substitution for part of the stable manure saves time, labor and money. Truck and small-fruit growers have found that the money invested in suitable kinds and amounts of commercial plant foods yield very profitable returns. As we pass from field crops to those crops that yield very much larger returns per acre, the profits of suitable fertilization greatly increase.

Stable manure and the solutions made from it have always been considered of high value, and even essential by many vegetable growers; but investigations forced upon them by the difficulty of obtaining it and the inconvenience of handling, have shown that really the manure is more essential for keeping the soil in good physical condition and regulating its water-holding capacity than it is for supplying plant food. Only by supplementing it with commercial plant foods can the needs of special soils, special crops, or special market conditions be met to the best advantage. Another fundamental forms, and must be used in the right way at the right time. For this reason it is often better to use the materials separately. Various general plans or so-called theories of fertilization or plant feeding have been formulated. Probably the best of these, especially for horticultural purposes, is that generally credited to Prof. Wagner of Darmstadt which consists of supplying phosphoric acid and potash somewhat in excess of the supposed requirements of the crop, and adding nitrogen compounds in divided applications as indicated by the appearance of the crop. The reason for supplying an excess of the minerals, phosphoric acid and potash is that these materials are fixed rather firmly in the soil, and a single crop cannot recover all that is applied. A moderate excess of these has no bad effect on the crop, while an excess of nitrogen compounds tends to promote soft leaf growth and weak stems at the expense of bloom and fruit.

FERTILIZATION OF OUTDOOR BEDS.

The ground is prepared by working in from 10 to 15 pounds of stable manure per square yard. This may be repeated each third or fourth year. In addition to this each year apply one-half to one ounce sulphate of potash, one-half to one ounce sulphate of ammonia, one-half to one ounce acid phosphate per square yard. Instead of this we may use one-half to one ounce sulphate of potash, one to two ounces is that soil acidity be avoided and for this purpose the safest and best thing to use is finely ground limestone at the rate of 500 to 1,000 pounds per acre once every three or four years.

The plant foods that may be profitably used consist of compounds furnishing nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash. The mere presence of these substances in a fertilizer, however, is not enough. They must be present in the right amounts and in the right basic slag (Thomas meal), one-fourth to one ounce nitrate of soda. These fertilizer materials should be well mixed with each other, and preferably with an equal amount of dry earth evenly distributed over the bed and worked in before planting. Beds which will be planted in autumn should receive all the phosphate and potash, but only one-third of the sulphate of ammonia or nitrate of soda at that time, the remainder of these latter being applied after growth has started in the spring. For fertilization of bush and tree groups it is recommended that the above application be made after the leaves begin to fall in the autumn or during the winter. The above applications may be increased one-third on very thin land, or when fertilizing for the first time.

LAWNS.

The main fertilization of lawns is best accomplished in winter or early spring, and should consist of three-fourths ounce sulphate of potash and one and one-fourths ounces acid phosphate per square yard, or on very light, sandy soils, of three to five ounces kainit and two to three ounces basic slag.

When these fertilizer materials are applied in the spring they should be mixed with one-fourth to one-half ounce of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia per square yard, but if the potash compounds and phosphates are applied to the lawn in the autumn or winter, the nitrogen compounds should be held out and applied in the spring. Basic slag and kainit are best applied in the autumn.

After the lawn has been cut two or three times it should receive a further fertilization with one-fourth to one-half ounce of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia. The nitrate of soda will favor the growth of clovers and deep rooted plants while the sulphate of ammonia rather promotes the growth of more shallow rooted grasses. Care should be taken to dissolve the fertilizer applied to a lawn, by immediately sprinkling with a moderate amount of water.

HOTHOUSE BEDS.

Specially prepared earth is of course essential for hothouse work. In addition to this it has always been customary to use fluid decoctions made of various manures, the preparation of which was far from pleasant. These fluids really carry little plant food, and actual experience shows that with a good earth the liquid fertilizer can be quickly made from less offensive and more concentrated materials, or in large houses, the salts themselves may be incorporated with the earth, mixing one to one and one-half ounces sulphate of potash, one and one-half to two ounces acid phosphate and one to two ounces sulphate of ammonia with each cubic foot of earth, taking care that the mixing is very thorough. The solutions of food salts mentioned below are also frequently used in place of the liquids prepared from manures.

POTTED PLANTS.

As potted plants have at their disposal much less soil than those grown in the field, it is plain that the small supply of plant food in even the best potting earth will be used up in a comparatively short time, and the plant will suffer from lack of nutriment. Frequent repotting will furnish additional food, but at a high cost of labor. If this cost of repotting and the labor of preparing solutions from various animal manures can be avoided and at the same time as good or better plants can be produced, the matter is certainly worthy of serious consideration. After careful investigation Prof. Wagner of the Darmstadt station has shown that solutions of chemicals can be used even on those plants which do not respond favorably to the use of manure water.

PRECAUTIONS.

In making use of the solutions of chemicals, special precautions must be observed; first, the chemicals must not be the crude materials used in making fertilizers such as acid phosphate, kainit or tankage, which leave residues that are insoluble or contain side products that might injure the plant, but much purer materials such as nitrate of potash, phosphate of potash, etc., must be used.

Another matter that must receive attention in using these food salts is the leaves. Ordinary water should be used for the plants at other times, and it is recommended that shortly after the plants have received the food salts they should receive a heavy watering or flushing. This is especially desirable with the more sensitive plants.

We believe that florists will find it profitable to look into this question of nutriment solutions and that there is a good field for some supply house to develop a profitable business by duplicating the Wagner food salts in this country.

AZALEA SIMON MARDNER.

question of the concentration of the solutions as they are applied to the plants. When the food salts of the Wagner type are used it is customary to prepare from them a stock solution by dissolving two pounds of the food salts in five quarts of water. From this stock solution are made the dilute solutions for actual use. For such plants as grow naturally in light heath or moor soils, only the more dilute solutions are to be used; thus, azaleas, heather, camelias, begonias and orchids require a solution made by diluting three fluid ounces of the stock solution to ten quarts, while less sensitive plants may receive solutions made by diluting four and one-half ounces or six fluid ounces to ten quarts. These concentrations correspond approximately to two, three and four parts respectively of pure food salts in 1,000 parts of solution and care should be taken that no greater concentration is used. Freshly potted plants should not be treated with food solutions until after they become firmly rooted. The dilute solutions should be used once in each week and the quantity should be such as would be used in a moderate sprinkling. Care should be taken not to permit the solution to dry on the Fire at Gould Greenhouses, Lakewood, N.J.

GEORGE J. GOULD AS FIRE CHIEF.

The brick boiler house of the greenhouses of George J. Gould at Lakewood, N. J., caught fire on the evening of January 13, and was destroyed, the fire spreading to one of the greenhouses. Mr. Gould was dressing for dinner when he discovered the fire and hastily throwing on a fur coat called the servants, and with the assistance of his son Kingdon and a guest, aided and directed them in manning the hose cart kept on the estate for such a purpose, until the arrival of the volunteer fire department of Lakewood. He then assisted in the removal of the rare plants that were in danger of being injured. After the fire had been overcome all the oil lamps and kerosene stoves obtainable were procured and placed in the greenhouses and a telegram sent to a heating firm to install a new boiler immediately in a temporary frame boiler house. The firemen were entertained by Mr. Gould with warm drinks, food and cigars and he thanked them heartily for their efficient work.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

St. Valentine's Day at Chicago.

While St. Valentine's day has never been considered one of the great flower days, yet the efforts of the retail stores to present their wares in the most artistic manner has had an effect on the young swains in the selection of their valentines and the business has increased wonderfully on this day during the last few years. Beautiful boxes and baskets in the shape of hearts, the symbol of the day, are now freely shown and the artistic corsages that are arranged to be placed in the boxes, find many purchasers and are received with favor by the recipients of these beautiful gifts for a valentine. Many of the stores arrange special window displays for the day and attract many buyers. Large quantities of bulbous stock are used in basket work and they make a most timely offering. A visit to the several stores found all in readiness and special features and preparations had been made by most of the dealers.

A. Lange had an immense stock of all the flowers adapted to this purpose. A feature here was the diminutive Panama hats beautifully arranged with small flowers which were attracting a great deal of attention from the buyers. An abundance of fine bulbous flowers were offered, both cut and in pans, and a display of well grown lily of the valley in pans was very attractive.

The Fleischman Floral Co. had a very attractive window, the heart shaped boxes being very elaborate and beautifully arranged hats and baskets were features. The artistically arranged corsages for which the house is noted were also well displayed. The other window contained well grown hyacinths in pans that were ornamented with harmonious accessories. Orchids, violets and other corsage flowers were liberally shown.

John Mangel showed beautiful basket arrangements and the old-fashioned or colonial bouquets were a feature.

H. C. Rowe in his new store on Monroe street had an attractive window, fancy boxes and baskets being well displayed.

The Alpha Floral Co. were on the alert for the Valentine trade, heart shaped boxes in red and other colors attracting the passers-by and a display of seasonable flowers that was sure to please the buyers.

Canger & Gormley had a nicely arranged window at their store on North State street, the bulbous stock being very attractively displayed.

W. J. Smyth on the south side arranged a very beautiful window of artistically arranged baskets and fancy boxes, with a very attractive line of accessories.

The Adams-Robertson Co. had a nice display of Valentine baskets and a full line of seasonable stock to attract the customer.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—Myer Wax, who conducts the flower store at 676 Massachusetts avenue, was married, January 29, to Miss Susan Rosenberg.

Modern Methods of Salesmanship.

Paper read by Fred C. W. Brown before the Buffalo Florists' Club, February 6, 1912.

The florist of today finds many obstacles in the making of sales. He, therefore, should give careful thought and attention to the methods employed. Modernism and adaptability to existing conditions are most necessary. The first great and successful step in the changing of methods was when we began to realize that one must be on the plane of the prospective customer, so, to gain the confidence and respect of the buying public, we threw away our counters and met our customers on an equality that removed the store aspect, and in this we are pioneers in which I believe will be an almost universal method employed in the sale of the higher class merchandise.

Our salesmen are confronted by a peculiar condition in the judging of customers. There always has and does exist a feeling, even between florists, that one salesman is an adept at securing high prices; this feeling is often conveyed to the customer, when at some inopportune time they enter the establishment and are quoted flowers at a less rate than their regular clerk has been in the habit of charging; thus it is sometimes difficult to explain matters, particularly to the purchaser. The rise in price is justified, for we are dealing with people who want and can afford the now almost necessary luxury of flowers. Our man with modern methods somewhat overcomes this seeming raise of prices. He realizes that his purchaser is desirous of sending the best, and so he has by his ability to gain confidence in his superior knowledge of blooms, to his remaining trade, to take the blooms as they come, unless he has raised his price to merit the special selection.

The modern salesman also has a delicate and exacting task to perform when there is necessity for what is termed "switching." A majority of our prospective buyers enter the store with only a desire to purchase "flowers." It may be flowers for a friend, flowers to wear, or flowers for a funeral, but there is no set decision on variety. Naturally the first suggestion on their minds is roses, or if the purse is small, carnations. Roses and carnations are scarce or our stock is short, but spring flowers are in abundance; so also are plants. Our modern man suggests a plant, he suggests spring flowers, he shows roses and carnations, but by suggestion he leads to the articles he desires to move and so he satisfies a customer and disposes of that which might be a loss. This is sometimes called "forcing," but if heavy persuasion or arbitrary tactics are used he will, though perhaps making a sale, lose a regular customer through thoughtless, overbearing methods.

The most noticeable changes are to be found in our methods of selling designs and flowers for memorial purposes. We are breaking very fast from the cumbersome and freak set design and are each day greatly adding to the demand for the artistic and beautiful wreaths and clusters. In some sections of the country and even in different sections of the same city some of our florists find great trouble in satisfying their trade with other than the old set piece, but a word to so trained or directed his trade that instead of receiving an order for a dozen of this or that, places it for a box of roses or flowers at the amount the purchaser wishes to invest. By this method the price is elastic, the salesman is enabled to pick from a jar the choicest blooms and supply to an exacting customer that which is perfect, where if he were to sell at dozen rates he is in duty bound, if fair you, do not be discouraged, for remember that to which you were years in educating your public you cannot break them off in a day. Our modern methods are here waiting for some big strides in improvement and we must look carefully around to find if possible the best and safest means to prove to the buyer our contention that the "Gates Ajar" or "Broken Column" they have entered our store to order is not as artistic, elegant or suitable as the rich basket, bunch or wreath. In this day of competition it is up to us to "show" them. We have at our hand the means to accomplish this, though very few seemed to have availed themselves of the results of the camera, by which means we are able to place before the eyes of our trade positive proof of our contention, that we can produce something more suitable and more elegant than the old solid detailed monstrosity.

Our trade is being elevated to its sphere. The elevating is tedious at times, but by perseverance and persistence we will evolve from the old to the new method. We must evolve, for though our tools are the hands of man, our material is nature's highest form of art, and though by mistaken mercenary methods we have created a demand for the ridiculous, we are surely leading back to nature's arrangement and are fast driving to oblivion our first errors. The floral photograph plays a most important part in this educating as well as greatly aiding us to secure the highest amount a purchaser desires to spend. The old method of wire frames, or a play on the imagination with the assistance of a tape line, are giving place to the graceful and true delineation of the camera lens, so that many now are able to place before their buyers a reproduction of work far more subtle in its persuasion than any word description.

Above all, remember in our elevating methods, that we are in our positions to serve the requirements of the customer, and to that customer, whether they come in with five cents or five dollars, is due courteous treatment. Deference will ever remain the strongest lever in modern methods of salesmanship.

Scale on Palms.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

I have lately taken over a small house of palms, some being badly infested with scale. Will you inform me of a good remedy to eradicate them?

ANXIOUS.

Sulpho-naphthol soap is used by many growers in cleaning plants of scale with good success and aphine is also recommended by those who have used it. Whatever is used care must be taken that the insect is well covered with the insecticide, even the young that are often found clear to the tip of the growth and also concealed in the axils of the leaves, and it is doubtful if one washing will exterminate the pests.

Bachelor's Buttons for Winter.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you kindly inform me how to grow bachelor's buttons for winter flowering.

B. C. R. K.

The seed should be sown in September or October, according to how early they are desired to bloom. In procuring seed the best double dark blue should be obtained as that is the only color worth growing under glass. As soon as large enough the plants should be potted and later planted in a bench where there is plenty of head room, the plants growing to the height of six feet. The temperature of a carnation house, that is, about 50° at night, is ordinarily considered the best for producing a good cut of flowers.

W.

THE ROSE.

Propagating By Cuttings.

I suggested in my last article getting the cutting bench or propagating house in readiness for a ship-shape start. That is repairing the benches, cleaning up thoroughly, and giving the benches a good lime washing—hot, fresh slacked lime, to which always add some sulphur while slacking.

cuttings if one prefers good stock than to let them bloom, as the buds on all such growths should be removed anyway. Make the cuttings with two or more eyes and cut them with a heel, the heel being where the cutting is removed from the previous growth close in. The growth should be allowed to just come up to a ripened stage just as the red tint leaves the foliage which is about the time the buds show color.

IMPORTED TERRA COTTA POTTERY AT W. J. SMYTH'S CHICAGO.

The sand used should be medium fine and sharp. Quarried sand only should be used, and it should be absolutely free of vegetable matter if fungus is to be avoided. Three inches of sand is about the proper depth for rose cuttings. The benches should be filled full and given a good watering, then pack as firmly as possible, then level off, water again and pound it down again and the sand is ready for the cuttings. Before going further we would say be sure that there is enough bottom heat to bring the temperature of the sand up to 65°, and to be accurate place dairy thermometers about 30 feet apart imbedded within an inch of the bottom of the sand. Curtains, thin boards or building paper should be used to inclose the heat. This is very important. A barrel should be let down in the ground at the center of the house out of the way, so as to have tempered water to use on the cuttings if no water heater is used.

February is one of the best times to take rose cuttings, especially from the middle of the month up to four weeks after that date. At this time the plants usually have made excellent young growth and the plants can stand for a little cutting for this purpose. If the plants have not recovered from severe cropping at the holidays it would be better to wait until they are in vigorous growth before taking off any wood. The wood to select should be, in our estimation, flowering wood, using the short-stemmed buds for this purpose. There are many short growths that set flowers that can be used to better advantage as

Remove the wood, a good armful, say, and place it on some clean paper in a cool shady place and sprinkle, turning the wood at the same time to insure thorough spraying. Use a very sharp knife and do not trim off any more foliage than is necessary—none whatever if you have plenty of space in the propagating house, except, of course, the foliage about two inches up from the heel so there will be no foliage touching the sand. Keep the cuttings sprayed until they are placed in the sand but do not place them in water. Use a flat strip of wood three inches wide to lay off the rows and open up the sand to within an inch of the bottom with an old table knife broken off so as to cut the proper depth. Again, be sure that the sand is firm, place the cuttings about an inch and a half apart in the rows and pack firmly with the finger tips. Put in small batches at a time and water, also mark where you left off. Label plainly and date label, reading from left to right.

In bright weather spray daily and shade as soon as the sun strikes them, using screens made of cheese cloth tacked to light frames or so arranged on wires overhead to work easily and be out of the way. Later on or in about three weeks the shading need only be used say from the middle of the morning till about three in the afternoon. Ventilate sparingly and avoid draughts. The temperature of the propagating house should be about 60°, night temperature, and not over 65 in the daytime. Keep a steady bottom heat and a regular temperature for a successful strike; give plenty of water until the cuttings start to make roots, then slow up gradually. Preparations should be made for potting off, counting about 25 days or thereabouts for rooting. With the proper care as to dates there will be little difficulty experienced in making a good strike. American Beauty requires a little special treatment. Select medium canes, and as there are always runners at this season, wood is easy to obtain. Use the eyes through the middle section of the canes as the butts will be overripe and the tops too soft; the center section gives uniform results. Trim the foliage and run the cuttings in the sand with the foliage to one side of the row and be sure that one row does not overlap the other. It is also a good plan to slant the American Beauty cuttings slightly so as to raise the foliage side a little. Use two eyes for the cuttings and trim close to the bottom eye, using an extremely sharp knife to avoid bruising as the wood is quite firm. Use only clean healthy wood, free from spider, mildew, spot, etc.

Just a few hints regarding the plants—do not "hit back" too hard for grafts (scions) or cuttings. Keep them tied neatly but do not crowd under the ties; give them plenty of liquid manure, add a little soot now and then to increase the color and to stiffen the growth. Use a little sheep manure occasionally—half the quantity if good strong manure, as in using cow manure. At this season a preliminary mulch of shredded cow manure spread lightly over the beds will help the growth wonderfully. Avoid feeding plants off color or slow in recovering from heavy cropping. A little nitrate of soda used judiciously may help here—one pound to 50 gallons of water.

Syringing should be carefully done if one is to keep the spider down during heavy firing, and do not forget to keep a crack of air on the houses whenever it is possible to do so. Do not forget to have a little sulphur around on the pipes about all the time and as stated above, get in some good fresh soil and have it warmed up and in readiness for the cuttings. Look out for the grafting case; do not be in too great a hurry about airing, etc.

Blind Wood for Rose Propagation.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Can you tell me why it is inadvisable to use non-flowering wood in propagating roses? S. B.

As to the advisability of using blind wood in the propagating of roses, there are several technical reasons for poor results, but for plain facts after repeated trials we have come to the conclusion that blind wood will in time give much blind wood. The writer on one occasion planted a raised bench with stock propagated from blind wood—variety, Bridesmaid. At this time in order to get enough plants to stock the range the wood was taken quite closely and the blind wood kept separate from the flowering wood cuttings. There were 400 plants of the blind wood stock planted; in the same house on a table next to the blind wood stock were planted 400 plants of the stock propagated from flowering wood. When they started into growth in July there was a noticeable difference in the very first growth produced, very few buds on them in comparison to the flowering wood cuttings, and throughout the summer months there was at least five times the amount of buds removed from the better wood than from the blind stocks. In mid-winter to look at the non-flowering wood they looked grand, as the foliage was dense, the plants taller and more uniform; yet they did not produce one flower to ten on the flowering wood plants which was conclusive to us as both benches received the same treatment throughout the season. A few years later we grafted blind wood with even worse results as an experiment in a small way.

Let it be understood that what we term blind wood was wood that was perfectly healthy which was propagated, or soft wood rose cuttings with no sign of bloom or buds at the tips, whereas the flowering wood was cut-flowering wood for cuttings, but absolutely necessary for scions for grafting.

There may be some contention in regards to the blind wood being useless and we have heard the poor argument that most all American Beauty wood propagated is from blind canes. Yet we know of no variety of rose that throws less blind wood than American Beauty as these so-called blind canes will eventually throw a flower. So there seems to be very little foundation for argument regarding American Beauties. We think that when a rose is said to "run out" that its deterioration is chiefly due to carelessness in propagating. For proof of this the original plants of Bridesmaid bloomed profusely for years and years in the same bed, long enough, in fact, for the stock grown elsewhere to have the appearance of a has-been variety. We could write many convincing incidents showing the same results as stated tings taken with buds about the size of the finger tips—short-stemmed, too short, in fact, for the market. The cutting taken with a heel, the heel being the base of the growth where it joined the ripened growth. We never considered it necessary to use strong above. The principal reason for blind wood to in turn revert to blind wood is obvious. One would not think of propagating wood from a barren fruit tree with the expectation of having an abundant crop from the resulting trees.

Cutting Gladiolus Spikes.

The opinions of the growers of gladioli which appeared in the issue of February 3 of THE AMERICAN FLORIST are very interesting, but the experience of some does not coincide with mine, that is, in saying that the corms from which the spikes are cut for market are weak, exhausted and worthless. I have grown gladioli for 21 years and have sold nearly all the flowers, and of some varieties I have grown the same corms for ten successive years, cutting and selling the flowers, and they produced good spikes. I must add, however, that the spike must not be cut clear to the ground, for this would spoil the corm and it would be very small and worthless the next year, but by leaving two or four of the lowest leaves on the plant when cutting, these will continue to grow and remain green until frost, and these corms are better than those that have been grown to first size in two years by pinching out the spike and hastening their growth, which makes them oval or cone-shaped. Corms can be grown cheaper this way, and there are many of this kind on the market, but I much prefer the flat corms from which flowers are cut to the oval ones grown from bulblets. Nearly all gladioli will make flat corms after the second or third year, whether the spike is pinched out, grown for cut flowers or allowed to go to seed.

According to some of the statements it looks as if the florist who buys gladioli for cut flower purposes, should grow them but one year, cut the flowers and then throw the corms away. I certainly hope that brother florists will not have any such ideas, for if the spikes are cut as stated above, the corms will be good for many years. They can buy the full grown corms are the good, chunky, flat ones, about two inches in diameter. I do not think that florists will bother with bulblets; they can buy the full grown corm cheaper than they can grow them, for they have neither the time or the facilities to produce them.

One great feature in the culture of gladioli is not to grow them on the same ground year after year, for this would cause the stock to run out and so weaken them that they would be worthless. It is much better to change the place where they are planted every year, if it is possible. The planting can be carried back and forth so at least the same piece of ground will be planted to gladioli every other or every third year and this will meet with good results.

That the cutting of long stems and leaving no foliage makes the plant worthless the next year, is also true of peonies and if the plants are large the practice of doing this might injure them for many years or perhaps forever. The cutting of the foliage weakens the plant and it forces it to increase the number of eyes, consequently the weak plant has more growths to feed, and the shoots grow blind, but if one leaf is left on each stem when cutting the flower this will nourish the plant and it will grow just the same as if the whole stem were left on the plant, and it will produce good flowers every year. H. W. KOERNER.

Retaining Foliage Makes Larger Bulbs.

In an article which appeared in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, issue of October 7, page 564, under the title of "Gladiolus Bulb and Flower Spikes," E. Y. Teas & Son of Centerville, Ind., state that gladioli bulbs that had not conviction as to the beneficial effect of removing the flower spike, as to producing a larger corm, has been so pronounced that for years it has been my practice to remove the spike soon after blooming, so as to prevent the formation and maturing of seed. In doing so, however, I was careful to cut away only the bare spike, without removing any foliage, which is indispensable to the elaboration of the crude sap of the plant into its various forms of growth.

GLADIOLUS ROCHESTER WHITE.

been allowed to bloom, the spike being cut before any bud showed color, were found to be decidedly larger than those from which the spikes had been cut and the bulblets much more numerous. The following expressions of the opinions of celebrated growers of this flower in regard to this matter in addition to those which appeared in our issue of February 3, are very interesting.

FROM WILBUR A. CHRISTIE, WARREN, O.

As to the effect on the production of cormlets, of removing the flower spike of gladioli, I would say that while I have never conducted any direct experiments to determine this point, my

It is only common sense to suppose that if this supply be divided into two or three lines the net result in any one of these can not be so great as if the whole force of the plant were concentrated in that one direction. It is a well known fact that production of cormlets is greatest in young stock approaching the blooming stage, which yet do not bloom to any extent, and I have observed that the maturing of seed is much retarded in the case of individual plants, and in a general way, even of varieties, which produce a large number of cormlets. All considerations point to the conclusion that if the energies of the plant be confined to a single line, the net result, in that line, will be greater than if the fixed available forces be diffused in two or more directions.

It would be a mistake to infer from this that the cutting of flower spikes for market, as commonly practiced, is beneficial to the plant. On the contrary, I believe it to be injurious. The reason is that to secure the length of spike now called for in market, a very considerable portion of the foliage is removed with the spike. It must be conceded that this is a great, indeed an irremediable, loss to the proper development of the plant. The effect may not be apparent in one season, but if continued it must without doubt lower the vitality and lessen in considerable measure the normal development of the plant.

WILBUR A. CHRISTY.

FROM ARTHUR COWEE, BERLIN, N. Y.

I have made experiments in the matter of cutting spikes before blooming after the first one or two flowers have opened and after the spike had developed all of the blooms and the results were as follows:

Those bulbs from which the spike was cut before any buds showed color and those cut when but one or two buds were opened showed no marked difference so far as size of bulbs was concerned, quantity or size of bulblets. Those spikes which were allowed to finish flowering produced somewhat smaller bulbs and bulblets. I could not say, however, that the number of bulblets was less. It makes a great difference how the spike is cut. If this is taken from the plant without removing or injuring the foliage there is no question in my mind but what the bulb will develop as well as if the spikes were cut directly below the first bud and before color shows. If, however, the flowers are cut with a long spike and more or less foliage taken at the same time, I believe this is a serious injury to the development of the bulb.

ARTHUR COWEE.

FROM H. H. GROFF, SIMCOE, ONT.

A variety that will not stand cutting the spike long enough to mature the buds on it is not worth growing.

The absurd demand of florists, that cut spikes must be about three feet long, makes it impossible for a grower to supply them with the bloom of a variety that he values highly, as such practice is certainly injurious to the plant, and it is the plant that makes the corm.

Scientifically, blooming and seed bearing are the greatest possible stress that can be laid upon plants, and many die after exercising this function.

Simcoe, Ont., Can. H. H. GROFF.

FROM I. S. HENDRICKSON, FLORAL PARK, N. Y.

Regarding the cutting of blooms of gladiolus, I would say that I always consider it a benefit to the bulb if the bloom is cut off, providing some foliage is left. This tends to increase the size of the bulb, as the strength is not used up in producing flowers and seeds.

New York Florists' Club.

There was a fine attendance at the New York Florists' Club meeting Monday evening, February 12. This was carnation night and the members were entertained by President Richard Vincent, Jr., who gave a talk early in the evening on the benefits and importance of belonging to the Society of American Florists. Later he gave an entertaining lecture on "A trip through the South." A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Vincent. J. H. Pepper showed on the screen some fine pictures of the recent Detroit exhibition and J. A. Shaw showed some pictures he had brought from Bermuda.

There was more than 135 members present. Chas. H. Totty gave a splendid talk on the National Flower Show and reported that the contracts had now all been signed, sealed and delivered and the schedule was in the printer's hands and would be sent out at once. It was now up to every member of the club and every member of the S. A. F. to put his "shoulder to the wheel" to make this the grandest exhibition of plants and cut flowers this country has ever seen. Secretary John Young gave a detailed report for the executive committee as to the progress made in the "Organization of New York State's Floriculture interests." Several clubs signified their intention of sending delegates to Ithaca for a conference at the call of the New York Florists' Club. President Joseph Manda appointed Charles B. Weathered and John Young delegates to represent the club. Chairman Weathered reported that the annual dinner and anniversary committee had completed arrangements for the annual dinner to be held at the Park Avenue hotel Monday, March 23, and that already several tables for six and eight had been engaged, and as the banquet hall could only accommodate 250 it looked as if those making late applications for tickets would be disappointed. The decorations are to be on an elaborate scale and a handsome silver souvenir will be presented to each lady.

Chairman Philip F. Kessler reported that the outing would take place on July 2, that the magnificent steamer Isabel had been engaged and Witzel's Grove was the place selected to hold the outing.

Chairman I. S. Hendrickson of the exhibition committee announced that the March meeting would be "Rose" and a grand showing of roses was expected on that evening.

Chairman Frank H. Traendly, for the transportation committee, reported that his committee had performed its duties as well as possible; that the trip was a grand success in every way and every one returned well and happy. The committee was discharged with the thanks of the club.

The change in the rules governing exhibits in the club rooms was laid over until the March meeting, but it seemed to be the unanimous opinion of those present that the rules should remain as they are.

Harry A. Bunyard read the resolutions prepared on the death of Frank R. Peorkowsky.

A letter of appreciation was read from Wm. F. Kasting for the club's action in supporting his candidacy for Commissioner of Agriculture.

The resignation of A. Bergerow, Newark, N. J., was accepted. A. C. Miller had provided the new vases and a trunk to keep them in at the club rooms, so the troubles of the exhibition committee in this respect are at an end.

The amendment to the by-laws was adopted, which permits the junior president to become a member of the board of trustees. The following were nominated for membership:

Richard R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.; Oscar Boehler, Hoboken, N. J.; Peter Beuerlein, Elmhurst, L. A telegram was read from Benj. Hammond saying he had received fifty dollars in cash to help the amateurs to join the American Rose Society.

Native Trees and Shrubs.

Part of a paper read by E. Bollinger, Lake Forest, Ill., before the Illinois State Horticultural Society.

The Ohio Buckeye is another of our native trees, although the flower is not quite as attractive as the European Horse Chestnuts, I consider it superior in form, quickness of growth and especially in the liability of hardness and for a small cottage place where a somewhat formal tree is required the Ohio Buckeye is a good tree. America has the most wonderful collection of native hawthornes. Prof. Sargent, who has given a great deal of his time to the study of this beautiful and useful ornamental tree, I understand over 300 varieties have been found and most all of them hardy. Where the place is extensive, a collection of these thorns should be used either as single specimens in connection with shrubbery border or grouped in masses in front of taller growing trees. These small trees are beautiful the year around, their flowers, fruit and wood, and in winter for color effect it has no equal. Next to the hawthorne is the wild crab-apple. This tree works in well with the haw and grouped with it we accomplish a harmonious effect.

The American wild plum, Bird Cherry, Choke Cherry and Black Cherry should be used in large planting in public parks and large estates where natural planting is desired. Remember the birds must have a change of diet as well as you. The American Mountain Ash is next in order. These small trees are useful in planting of private grounds and parks. It is especially adapted to hillsides and banks and if planted closely the effect when the trees are in blossom and after it fruits is most striking.

The June-berry with its tall slender trunk and small spreading branches should be used for natural planting in parks and large estates. Redbud or Judas-tree is a beautiful small tree, grows well in partially shaded situation and for this reason it is most useful in the natural planting in front of other taller growing trees. The Honey Locust is one of those useful trees that enjoys city life and for this reason it is recommended as an ornamental tree in city parks and suburban lots. It is hardy and free from insect attacks; it is also useful to be planted along the country roads and for hedges. The Linden is another good street tree where the ground is not too hard and dry. It is a moisture loving tree and when planted near a lake, river or pond it will grow very rapidly and luxuriantly. The Black Walnut and Butternut for natural planting and larger estate and public parks are useful and elegant trees. These trees are disappearing very fast and farmers, gardeners and park superintendents should plant them; they grow as fast as the average shade tree after once established. They should be planted young, however. If you have a low wet spot to plant, remember the Pepperidge or Sour Gum (Tapele) will be at home there, but do not plant it in a too much exposed position; plant in a group sheltered somewhat from the north. The coloring of the foliage is superb in the autumn. This, together with Sassafras, Red Dogwood and Maple, present a beautiful color effect if planted in groups for that purpose. The Red Mulberry is another tree which should be more planted for its rapid growth where shade is required for the chicken yard or the hiding of rubbish yard, wood or manure pile and for undergrowth on the front of the larger trees, the mulberry should be used. In city parks where sandy soil and plenty of water is at hand the mulberry will grow very fast; it will do best if planted in masses. The willow family is too well known to dwell upon, also the poplar. The American Beach is another tree which has been very little used in ornamental planting. It is a beautiful tree, yet a very slow grower and perhaps for this reason it is not much used. This tree should be planted in company and in pure sweet soil; it grows well and is adapted for steep bank planting and yet when established once as single specimen in the lawn it grows into a well branched symmetrical tree. The Western Catalpa should find a place with the natural, ornamental and street planting. It is somewhat stiff, yet its heavy dark green leaves and large pencil of flowers and afterwards the beanlike fruit are a striking feature in ornamental gardening and if given plenty of space it grows very rapidly. The American Chestnut, Castanea dentata, although somewhat tender and slow growing in the eastern part of our state, yet if planted in a well protected situation it will live and thrive. The ornamentation of home ground and public parks in the Northwest owing to the fact that our summer season is so short and deciduous trees and shrubs are almost two-thirds of the season denuded of foliage, the up-to-date gardener the last few years has turned his energies to the winter effect, using mainly plants with bright colored wood or fruits and conifers.

The White Birch, the Red Dogwood, the Wahoo with its scarlet fruit, the Barberry, Indian Currant, Honey-suckles, Hawthorn, properly and artistically massed for color effect, brighten up the winter landscape most wonderfully. In natural planting we may use to very good advantage the Bittersweet and Clematis virginiana, the former with its wealth of red fruit and the other with its white mist-like seed tufts. The Hishbush, Cranberry, the various kinds of native Viburnum, Witch-hazel and Sumach are good for winter effect, but above all the various kinds of conifers and broad-leaved evergreens. The arrangement of the various kinds of Conifers is a matter of opinion. Personally, I would not recommend the Pine or long-needed Conifers to be grouped in the same group with the Spruce or Arborvitae and Cedar; it seems to me there is a disharmony. In grouping the long-needed Conifers, only such varieties are to be used that are perfectly hardy such as the White Pine, Red Pine, Jack Pine and Mountain Pine, and Bull Pine. The pine must be planted in groups, the White, Red and Bull Pine as base and the Jack and Mountain pines to the front of the prospective point. It loves sand and protection from heavy winds. White Spruce, Douglas Spruce, Concolor and Balsam Fir, Western Hemlocks, Black Spruce and Red Spruce, White Cedar, Red Cedar and Blue Spruce should be grouped if space will permit. The color effect should be of first consideration, care should be taken not to use too many colors in one place. The Colorado Blue Spruce should only be planted at the ratio of one to ten, no more, the Golden Arborvitae about the same, the green needle varieties should be more or less grouped, each variety by itself, the taller growing variety as usual for base, the smaller variety nearer the prospective point. Pyramidal Arborvitae should not be used very much only as a relief perhaps, back at some distance from a Hemlock or Weeping Spruce. On smaller estates and town lots, single specimens of spruce and one or two White Birch will make a pleasing winter effect together with a few bright colored shrubs. Conifers for park planting should be chosen and grouped according to the area of the park, as the larger the area the more trees it requires to be grouped together. No deciduous trees or shrubs should be planted in front of conifers nor grouped among them. These two classes of plants are distinct and should be planted each by itself. If you must fill up the space, you may plant shrubs behind the group. Plant conifers somewhat closer with the idea of shifting them to some other place. However, plant those that are to stand permanently first and plant others between them. A great mistake is often made in grouping trees too close and without system. As the years go by and trees begin to crowd, transplanting is required, and often the rearranging of the entire group. Our American conifers are by far the best varieties for the Northwestern States, the Norway Spruce, Scotch, Austrian Pine and Oriental Arborvitae I would not recommend for ornamental planting; that is, many of them. For wind-breaks they can be used with fairly good success.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—The bowling team of the Stuppy Floral Co. won the pennant in the Apex bowling league and now occupy first place in the Academy league. They will compete in the American Bowling Congress tournament in Chicago in March and will also bowl a match with a picked team of the Florists' league of that city.

OBITUARY.

Thomas Totten, Sr.

One of the oldest florists in eastern New York died on February 6 at Daytona, Fla., in the person of Thomas Totten Sr. of Saratoga Springs. Mr. Totten had spent several winters in Florida and went to Daytona about three weeks before he was taken down with pleuro-pneumonia with which he was afflicted for a few days before his death.

Mr. Totten was born in Saratoga Springs on June 26, 1853, a son of Joseph and Anna Burns Totten. He was educated in the public schools of the village and in the Christian Brothers' academy, Albany. He began to learn the currier's trade which he did not like and later took up carpentry and finally the florist business in which he spent a large part of his life. He started in a modest way in 1874 and the following year formed a co-partnership with Charles Ludwig, who sold out to John Schafer. The firm of Totten & Schafer did business for 10 years in Saratoga Springs and Ballston. About 1885 the firm was dissolved, Mr. Totten taking the Saratoga part of the business.

Mr. Totten was a prominent Mason, being a member of Rising Sun Lodge No. 103, the Chapter, Council, Commandery and Mystic Shrine and also a member of the Saratoga Ruling, Fraternal Mystic Circle.

He is survived by his wife, his father, a half brother, William J. Totten; a son, Thomas, Jr., and a daughter, Mrs. Andrew Dunlavey. The funeral was held at 1 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, February 11, from his home in Saratoga and was in charge of the Masonic fraternity. R. D.

Daniel D. Herr.

Daniel D. Herr, proprietor of the Fairview Nurseries, Lancaster, Pa., and a pioneer nurseryman and florist of that section, died at his home January 29 at the age of 67 years, having suffered a stroke of paralysis the week previous. He was born upon the property on which he died and started the nursery business in 1876. He was director of the Manor Township Fire Insurance Company and Farmers' Fencing Association, and for many years a member of the township school board. He is survived by a wife and four daughters.

Kentucky Society of Florists.

The regular monthly meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists was held Wednesday, February 7, at 8 p. m., at the store of H. Fuchs, with a good attendance.

As visitors, we had S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Van der Kolf, representing Keur & Son, Holland. Mr. Skidelsky gave us several pointers about the new roses and carnations he had admired at the Detroit Show, while Mr. Van der Kolf told us how the Dutch bulb growers are always trying to improve their strain of hyacinths, tulips and narcissus.

A very lively debate was held between President A. Rasmussen, and Vice-President H. Kleinstarink, about the relative beauty and usefulness of Danish and Dutch wooden shoes. So far it remains a draw. It was decided to wait another month before it will be voted upon if Louisville will endeavor to obtain the 1913 meeting of the S. A. F. H. Fuch's invitation to hold the next monthly meeting of the society at his store was accepted unanimously.

PROF. L. H. BAILEY will be the guest of honor at an early dinner of the Cornell University alumni in New York.

Personal.

E. H. Wilson, who has been connected with the Arnold Arboretum for the last 11 years, has been awarded the Victoria Medal of Honor by the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain in recognition of his distinguished services to horticulture.

W. A. Mandia has returned from Europe.

Honor for C. Harman Payne.

The French government in recognition of the many years' writing of C. Harman Payne in the French gardening press, has awarded him the honor of "Palme Academique," which carries with it the title of "Officier de l'Instruction Publique," being the first time the decoration has been bestowed upon an English horticultural writer.

Mr. Payne had already been twice honored by the French government, having been successively Chevalier and Officer of the Order of the Merite Agricole.

American Gladiolus Society.

Public notice is hereby given that the following varieties of gladioli offered by John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, New York, have been registered by the nomenclature committee of the American Gladiolus Society:

Gladiolus Alaska, 1911, now offered for the first time. A pure white variety, having a strong constitution and producing a long spike of well formed flowers. This variety was exhibited at the convention of the S. A. F., at Philadelphia, 1907, under number 27, and was awarded certificate of merit.

Gladiolus Silver Sheen, 1911. A fine white variety, the petals of which have the appearance of being overlaid with a coat of glistening silver. Very fine and effective.

A. C. BEAL, Chairman.

Parcel Posts.

That the senate committee on post offices and post roads will report a new and general parcel post law during the present session, is the opinion of W. A. Henry, Emeritus Professor of Agriculture, College of Agriculture, Madison, Wis., who has spent some time in Washington attending the hearings, and he further believes that the only way to get a general parcel post law from the present congress, is to have those interested, from this time on, pour in a steady flood of letters to their representatives in congress, pleading for the measure, for great interests, well organized, are bringing powerful pressure to bear against it. He states ten letters are worth a thousand petition-signatures and advocates the setting of some day in March or April to be called "Parcel Post Letter Day" when letters will be written to representatives in congress pleading for a general parcel post.

Chicago's Spring Flower Show.

George Asmus, who has been manager of the Chicago flower shows for years, will act in that capacity again for the spring show. He will open downtown offices this week.

Instead of competitive classes for retail florists the Horticultural Society has decided on non-competitive awards and placed the matter in the hands of a special committee.

A class for the best display of sweet peas has been added to the premium list, with $10 for first prize and $7 for second.

Inquiries for premium lists which have come in recently prove that the florists are awakening to the opportunities which the show offers them. The final premium list is on the press and will be put in the mails this week.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago has offered two silver and two bronze medals, and one grand silver and one grand bronze medal for competition in the National Flower Show to be given in New York next year.

Advance information as to the extent of exhibits in the Chicago show will be greatly appreciated by the manager, as he has no experience tables to guide him in anticipating space requirements. J. H. BURDETT, Secy.

Federal Inspection Bill.

We are advised by Curtis Nye Smith with reference to the Federal Inspection Bill printed in our issue of February 10, and said to have been introduced in the House of Representatives January 15, 1912, that we "are misinformed, for the bill (H. R. 18000) really filed on said day is radically different." The copy of bill reproduced in our columns was received from W. P. Stark, of Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., Louisiana, Mo., who has been prominently identified with this legislation in the interests of nurserymen. Copy of the bill actually filed can be secured on application to the reader's representative in Congress, requesting Bill H. R. 18000.

RECENT BOOKS.

*Commercial Rose Culture.

Of all the flowers produced at the present time for the florists' business there is no question but that the rose occupies the first position, and the culture of this flower has now reached a very high mark by the most successful growers. Among the growers Eber Holmes of Montrose, Mass., has been very successful and is regarded as an authority upon the cultivation of roses. He has just published a book entitled "Commercial Rose Culture" which fully describes the growing of roses for commercial purposes as well as the preparation required in conducting this business. It not only will be of great assistance to those now having a greenhouse plant but also to those intending to enter this branch of the business, for it includes the selection of location, styles and construction of houses, propagation and culture, insect pests and diseases, heating and business methods of cutting, marketing, etc. The seedling-inarch and nurse-plant methods of plant propagation adopted by the Bureau of Plant Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture are fully described. The culture of outdoor roses and the forcing and manipulation of Rambler roses is given in detail. The book is finely illustrated with halftones of the different varieties more generally cultivated, of the most desired styles of greenhouse construction for rose growing, and cuts explaining in detail the best methods of propagation. It contains 165 pages and 62 illustrations, nicely printed and bound in board, and is a valuable contribution to the literature of rose culture. Price $1.50, postpaid.

*The Beginner's Book of Gardening.

For the person with a small garden and with a limited knowledge of the culture of plants and vegetables, The Beginner's Book of Gardening, by Harry Roberts, will be a good hand book and guide, for it contains accurate information that will enable beginners to grow ordinary flowers, fruits and vegetables with understanding and success, the culture of each kind being well described. The book is of 86 pages and contains 16 illustrations, and the directions, if followed, will enable anyone to make a success of their garden.

*We can supply any books here noted on receipt of price quoted.

STOCK MORE ABUNDANT.

With the exception of roses all kinds of stock are coming in more plentifully, especially is this so of bulbous flowers and carnations. Roses still are quite short of the demand and all the stock cleans up very quickly. Most of that coming in is of the longer grades and short-stemmed stock has been at a premium for some time. American Beauties are in as good supply as any of the varieties, but a large proportion of the receipts of these are the specials and longer stemmed grades. Killarney, White Killarney and the other hybrid teas and teas sell on sight. Carnations this week have been received in much larger quantities and they are of superb quality, excellent Enchantress, White Enchantress, White Perfection, Beacon Winsor and Washington being offered, and some specials of Gloriosa. White Wonder and Mrs. C. W. Ward are among the offerings. The prices, however, hold up very well, notwithstanding the increase in supply, for with roses so short the retailers turn to the carnations and in all probability until roses become more plentiful it will be easy to hold the prices firm. Bulbous stock is now being received in large quantities and most of the stock is of excellent quality. Tulips of all the colors, narcissus, both single and double yellow, Narcissus poeticus and hyacinths are offered by all the dealers, and large quantities are disposed of, and the retail stores look like a spring flower show. Lily of the valley is quite plentiful, the growers having a splendid supply of excellent quality for St. Valentine's day, and some very fine pans of this flower are to be seen in the retail stores. Sweet peas are also in large supply and the quality is fine and a large variety of colors obtainable. Orchids are still in good supply and are sold at a price at which all the stores can afford to make fine displays of these exotics. Violets have been having a good sale and there has been enough to meet the demand, but the call for this flower was large for St. Valentine's day and as the shipments from the east on Monday were delayed, not reaching the city until late in the afternoon, many of the orders had to be shipped out without their quota of violets being included. Lilies are a little more plentiful and callas are to be had at all the stores. Freesia and mignonette of excellent quality are also offered. The supply of greens is none too plentiful, the bunches of asparagus, both plumosus and Sprengerl are picked up as soon as received. Hardy ferns are still very short; the stock on hand with the dealers is very low and the prices hold very firm. Spagnum moss is also very scarce, the stock on hand being entirely depleted and all shipments that are received are picked up as soon as the dealers hear of the supply.

NOTES.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. moved into their new quarters at 72-74 E. Randolph street February 10 and now have one of the finest equipped wholesale stores in the city. This makes the fourth large firm to locate on the east side of Wabash avenue within a year. Located on the second floor, they have much more light than formerly and the enlarged area gives them ample space to display their immense stock. The offices are located at the front of the store where the clerks have light and airy quarters. Tables extending across the store with an aisle on each side give plenty of room to sort the large daily receipts and convenient to transport the stock. Four large restore. The enlarged space will give them room to meet the requirements of their increasing trade and enable them to more expeditiously handle the immense output of the vast range of glass. The removal was very expeditiously carried out, a large force from the greenhouses at Morton Grove coming in to assist the store help, and in a few hours the firm was at home in the new store with no apparent stopping of business.

When "Weilands," Inc., open their new store in the Venetian building the later part of this month it will be with one of the finest equipped retail establishments in this city. The floor will be of stone and the interior will be beautifully set off with fixtures in white, marble top counters, mirror effects and plate glass wall cases. The office with a mounted brass railing will also be something out of the ordinary and is being built to harmonize with the magnificent appearance of the store in general. A 30-foot conservatory in the court east of the Washington street entrance will be used for display purposes in addition to the numerous cases in the main entrance. The store also has an entrance from the lobby of the building and is located in the heart of the retail shopping district opposite Marshall Field & Co.'s famous store. Merchants on this street say that there are more carriages and automobiles pass in this one block, between Wabash and State streets, than in any other block in any other city in the world.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association had a big St. Valentine's day trade and filled a large number of both local and out-of-town orders. Manager Frese says that the only disappointment was in the delayed shipment of violets from the east which made it necessary for him to cancel some of the shipping orders for these flowers that he had already booked. The shipments of roses are now much larger and some especially fine Killarney and White Killarney are the leading features this week.

The 15 bales of moss that Kennicott Bros. Co. received on February 12 proved to be such valuable property that the sergeant-at-arms was called to guard it against the many customers who claimed to be in great need of this stock. The entire shipment was sold shortly after its arrival.

Geo. J. L. Mohring, manager of the Edgewater and Rosehill branch of the Edward Hines Lumber Co., is well pleased with the results of his venture in the pecky cypress business and says that he has already filled some good sized orders.

Bassett & Washburn have a large assortment of fine bulb stock with red tulips showing up exceptionally well. Fancy Rhea Reid roses, O. P. Bassett carnations and a large quantity of choice Easter lilies are the chief offerings at this house this week.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a large quantity of carnations and are offering very fancy stock in all the leading varieties. N. J. Wietor is giving his new limousine a good test and is preparing for some long summer trips.

Henry Huffert had an order for a unique design this week, a large heart made up of red roses and lily of the valley, which was delivered to the home of a neighbor whose son was buried on St. Valentine's day.

Zech & Mann received an order from an out-of-town customer on February 12 that called for practically every flower that is in the market at present, or, as Allie says, everything mentioned on their bill of fare.

C. L. Washburn and A. T. Pyfer say that they are not yet quite sure whether Governor Deneen will or will not receive the visitors at the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Joliet on March 5.

Paul Bryant says that E. H. Hunt's salesmen are sending in some large orders for supplies for Easter and that trade in all the departments is picking up considerably.

Business at Peter Reinberg's the past week was good and kept Tim Matchen and his force of assistants busy filling many orders that kept coming in.

Wm. Lorman, A. L. Randall Co.'s hustling shipping clerk, has been doing jury service in Judge Barnes' court the past two weeks.

W. P. Kyle informs us that Mrs. Kyle recovered sufficiently so as to be removed from the hospital to her home on Monday, February 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Manke have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their eldest son, whose death occurred Wednesday, February 7.

The J. E. Deamud Co. is featuring fine tulips, lilies, violets and is receiving a large supply of greens of all kinds.

Fred Lautenschlager will leave soon to attend several meetings of trade organizations in the east.

Hans Yepson was operated upon last week at the Frances E. Willard Hospital.

CHICAGO.

The Geo. Wittbold Co.'s greenhouses at Edgebrook are completely filled with bedding plants, palms and ferns and every bit of space is crowded to the utmost with stock of all descriptions and sizes. The shipping trade is picking up and florists in all sections of the country are ordering bedding plants, rhododendrons, azaleas, lilac, spireas, japan maples and other forcing stock for Easter.

Curtis Kindler of the Raedlein Basket Co. has returned from a delightful visit to his firm's factories at Weidhausen and Ebersdorf, Germany, with 30 cases of florist's baskets in all shapes and colors. The goods are now on display at the firm's store at 713-717 Milwaukee avenue, and he extends a cordial invitation to the trade to call and inspect his line.

Adam Zender says that if the cold weather keeps on the growers in Rogers Park will find themselves without water, for the mains in some parts of this section have already frozen and it was with some difficulty that they were thawed out.

Herman Schiller says that one of the pipes in his firm's greenhouses broke one day last week and that the help had to do some tall hustling to make repairs before any of the plants were damaged by freezing. Fortunately, no loss was sustained.

Edgar Winterson is still hustling to get things in readiness for the spring trade and judging from the work that he is doing one would say that he is sure to succeed. Edgar is some stenographer and has a style of his own.

Weiland & Risch are offering fine quality gardenias, single and double daisies, lilies, carnations and Killarney roses.

H. R. Hughes has one of his characteristic window displays for Lincoln day. A life-sized statue of Lincoln by A. L. Van den Berghen, is surrounded by split rails, the axe of the "railsplitter" being prominently placed in one of them. It is certainly a very finished reproduction and Mr. Hughes regards it as one of the "classiest" he has ever arranged. The special St. Valentine's box is a beauty, and the nicely written folders describing both with catchy illustrations are bound to induce trade.

W. H. McCormick and Arthur Weatherwax, two of the W. J. Smyth force, have been absent from the store the last week, both being laid up with severe colds. A fine line of imported and domestic terra cotta and cement ware in new patterns occupies a prominent position in the store and attracts considerable attention.

Sam Slack, proprietor of the Edgebrook restaurant and rooming house, bought Otto Wittbold's cows and is going into the dairy business. Mr. Slack formerly had charge of a section in the Wittbold greenhouses, but resigned a few months ago when a rich relative in England died and left him a snug fortune.

The H. S. Morton store on East Thirty-first street was considerably damaged by fire on the morning of February 9 with a loss of several hundred dollars. The proprietor is planning on giving up the present store and moving into better quarters at Thirty-first street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Thos. Sullivan, of the Woodlawn Floral Shop, is still suffering from blood poisoning, but is on the job as usual, although both hands are encased in bandages. Mr. Sullivan blames Primula obconica for his misfortune and is advising his friends to stay as far away from these plants as possible.

Chas. W. McKellar is receiving a few Cattleya Mossiae in his large shipments of beautiful Cattleya Trianae. The shipments of Denbrobium Formosum are much smaller as this variety is now going off crop. Mr. McKellar received his first shipment of single and double stocks this week.

The George M. Garland Co. is pretty busy these days getting out material for the many orders that it has booked. The Garland Co. has made much progress since it entered into the manufacturing business and is known the country over as the manufacturer of the gutter with a reputation.

John T. Muir has a beautiful line of bulb stock and the manner in which they are displayed in the windows is very attractive. Tulips, narcissus and hyacinths in boxes and baskets decorated with harmonious accessories tempt the buyer, and are having good call.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are receiving a large assortment of bulb stock and the shipments contain some fine tulips and other desirable flowers. Mr. Vaughan says business was very good on February 9 and showed us that his firm filled four pages of shipping orders.

John Canger says that trade at Canger & Gormley's store is very good considering the present conditions and that the outlook is very promising. A neatly arranged window is always an object of interest to the public who pass by this store.

Wm. F. Schofield, the popular North State street florist, is a candidate for alderman of the Twenty-first ward on the Democratic ticket. His many friends in the trade wish him success and are already addressing him as "Alderman Bill."

John Sinner is pretty happy these days for the splendid Killarney that his firm is cutting are bringing top-notch prices. The stock that is seen at the store is of the first quality and is sold at an early hour.

L. R. Bohannon is the proud papa of a bouncing baby boy. The little fellow is a crackerjack, the finest in the trade, weighs 12 pounds and arrived last Friday, February 9.

The Chicago Carnation Co. is getting a lot of orders for rooted cuttings and is particularly well pleased to note that Washington is included in nearly every one that comes in.

Dwight L. Harris of the Pulverized Manure Co. is back from a successful visit in the east, where he talked with nearly all the dealers who handle Wizard Brand manures.

The E. C. Amling Co. experienced much trouble with their violet shipments from the east on Monday when the trains were delayed near Detroit several hours.

Hoerber Bros. take great pleasure in showing their customers their fancy carnations which Harry Manheim claims are the best in the market.

The Calvary cemetery greenhouses, under the watchful eye of Wm. Sauerland, is producing a fine grade of carnations.

Chas. Ussing, John Muir's right hand man, is out of the hospital and again is attending to his duties at the store.

Some of the growers are still experiencing much trouble in securing sufficient coal to heat their greenhouses.

Phil Schupp says that J. A. Budlong is now coming in crop with roses and will soon be cutting heavily again.

Emil Jehlik will leave soon for Hot Springs, Ark., to receive treatment for rheumatism.

George Reinberg has been suffering considerably the past week with rheumatism.

John Kruchten is receiving a large quantity of Marie Elise violets, the violets of royalty, as the eastern growers call them. The local trade is steering shy of this novelty and have not yet accepted it for its real worth, but it is sooner or later bound to attract the attention of the loop florists, who will likely feature it in their windows.

Frank Johnson says that the A. L. Randall Co. received so many inquiries in regard to the special offer of prepared magnolia leaves that his firm will extend the sale another week. A ribbon sale in the supply department is also attracting the attention of the local trade and some good bargains are being offered.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. had another rush job this week when it installed and connected a boiler in one of the greenhouses in this city three hours after one of the grower's boilers broke. Fred Lautenschlager says that his firm is always prepared for anything like this and is always on the job.

The Superior Machine & Boiler Works is preparing for a busy season and expects to sell a good many boilers this spring. A catalogue telling all the good points about their boilers will be mailed to anyone in the trade upon request.

Senator R. J. Barr, who secured the first appropriation for the Illinois State Florists' Association, and Mayor Allen of Joliet, will address the visitors who attend the annual meeting of the society in Joliet on March 5.

James Hartshorne has volunteered to escort the visitors to the Illinois State Florists' Association's meeting at Joliet on March 5 through the penitentiary and also promises to see that they get out safely.

Percy Jones and Henry Wittbold have taken a four years' lease on the entire second floor of the building that Percy Jones now occupies.

Chicago Bowling.

Allie Zech received a letter this week from Roy Currie of Milwaukee in which the writer invites the local Florists' Club Bowling League to play a match game in the Cream City when it finds it convenient to do so. The invitation will surely be accepted, for the boys have not yet forgotten the splendid treatment that they received at the hands of the Cream City florists on a previous visit. The club is now seriously thinking of appointing a committee to take charge of John Zech's bowling ball during the trip. Those who accompanied the team on its last visit will probably remember that he nearly lost one at the corner of Second street and Grand avenue just as the team was about to return home.

A picked team consisting of Allie Zech, Ernest Farley, Eddie Schultz, Chas. Balliff and Wm. Lorman trimmed up five of the North Side stars at a match game last Sunday at Bensingers' alleys and won two out of the three games played with a total of 111 pins.

The following table shows the number of games won and lost by each team to date:

A GREAT SCARCITY OF FLOWERS.
Flowers are scarce and retailers find it difficult to supply the demand, which is very good. Trade since the New Year has been all that could be desired; numerous functions, official and private, have kept everyone busy. The automobile show, which is going on at present, has created a large demand; one firm today cornered the whole available carnation output, that they might present a flower to every lady visitor. The growers are unable to even supply the demand for plants and the dealers are now for the first time shipping them in from the west. The greenhouses have not been nearly full since the holidays and bedding stock is being given plenty of room.

NOTES.

At the annual meeting of the Montreal Horticultural Society R. Burrows as chairman and the executive committee were re-elected. Three new members were added to the board of directors and it was decided to appoint a committee of three to confer with Prof. Blair of MacDonald College, St. Annes, with a view of holding in November a joint exhibition of all the allied societies in and around Montreal.

The annual dinner of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club was quite an enjoyable affair, about thirty-five being present. The talent was provided by the members and quite a few surprises were sprung. The speeches were all of an encouraging nature, especially those of the florists, who strongly urged every private gardener to go into business for himself. Wm. C. Hall made an able chairman.

Shamrocks for St. Patrick's day will be plentiful this year. Some of the vegetable growers have them by the thousands and some very good ones, too.

Construction gangs of electric companies are doing great damage to shade trees by wantonly butchering them beyond recovery. They claim that the right was given them by the legislature, but we think that the city gardener should be consulted and his men do the work.

The sympathy of the craft is extended to C. A. Smith, whose wife died recently. The funeral was attended by numerous friends, being by far the largest funeral ever seen in Lachine.

The committee of the Canadian Horticultural Association will meet in this city March 18 to arrange for the coming convention next August and transact other business.

Several elaborate decorations have already been ordered for St. Patrick's day.

Greenwich Horticulturists.

The regular meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in Greenwich with 114 members present and President Stuart in the chair. Visitors were Chas. H. Totty and M. C. Ebel of Madison. R. Marshall, E. Newbrand and P. Miller of Boston. All came to verify the truth of the glowing accounts heard of the growth of our society and went away perfectly satisfied. Mr. Totty's informal talk on novelties for 1912 proved most interesting to all; his perfect frankness in giving us not only the good but also bad points of new blooms has won for him our entire confidence, and growers will certainly find it to be to their advantage of following the same policy. Having been told of the magnificent prizes to be won at the great national show of New York, our boys are already getting busy for Fairfield and Westchester.

A smoker was in order and refreshments served, the whole well seasoned with appropriate songs, speeches and stories; words of cheer from Mr. Newbrand, of praise from Mr. P. Miller and of wonder by Mr. Scott; E. Mitchell was the star singer, followed by Messrs. Brown, Marshall, Foster, Wilde and many others.

Albany, N. Y.

At the February meeting of the Albany Florists' Club held on the evening of February 1, a communication was read from John Young, secretary of the New York Florists' Club, calling attention to the need of a state organization and asking the local club to send two delegates to a convention to be held at the New York State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y., to perfect plans for the proposed body. The club voted to send President Fred A. Danker and Frederick Goldring, former president, to the meeting at Ithaca which will be held at a date to be announced later. President Danker announced the appointment of some new committees as follows: entertainment—Louis H. Schaefer, Patrick Hyde and Frank Bilson; finance—Frank Williams, Frank M. Briare and C. A. Sullivan; sick—Samuel Goldring, Patrick Hyde and John A. Murnane, Jr. A letter was read from Mrs. John Ralph, Saratoga, thanking the club for a floral piece sent to the funeral of her husband who died on January 7. Mr. Ralph was a member of the club and a well known florist in Saratoga.

Fruit growers in the Hudson valley will meet in Poughkeepsie on February 22-23. The Masonic temple has been secured for exhibits of various kinds, including 150 boxes of apples from the State Experiment Station at Geneva. The list of speakers includes Prof. E. P. Felt, state entomologist, and others eminent in the field. A banquet will be held in connection with the gathering. E. C. Gillett, Penn Yan, is secretary of the organization.

The fire at the Dingee & Conard Co, February 5 was not so serious as at first reported. The sheds were damaged and ends of the greenhouses burned, but through the efforts of all hands much of the stock was saved and the business unimpaired. The construction of a new plant will be begun immediately in a new location nearer the railroad, of what will be one of the most modern greenhouse institutions devoted to the mail order trade in the country. Manager P. J. Lynch hopes to have a portion of the plant ready for occupancy by April 15.

CONTINUED COLD WEATHER.

There is no change worthy of note in the condition of business. The cold weather continues and continual care is necessary in packing and transporting stock, even for short distances. There is now quite a demand for jonquils, tulips and other spring flowers. Much of this latter class of stock is now being used in table decorations.

CLUB MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held in the rooms of the Association of Bank Clerks on the night of February 6, President Mayberry in the chair. The nomination of officers for the ensuing year was the principal business. David Grilbortzer was nominated for president; Otto Bauer for vice president; O. A. C. Oehmler was renominated for secretary, and W. F. Gude renominated for treasurer. As there is no opposition that we know of, these nominations may be considered equivalent to an election. A few lines concerning the nominees may be in order.

David Grilbortzer is a native of Alexandria, Va., but as a birthplace is one event in a man's life with which he has nothing to do, nobody has ever found fault with Mr. Grilbortzer for being born in Alexandria. Being born there, he thought he might as well stay a while and see how business turned out, for he came of that old Dutch stock that has always had the business instinct highly developed. To be as brief as possible, after he left school he worked a while for J. Louis Loose, the well-known florist. After that, just to show Mr. Loose that he had learned something, he went across the street and erected about 100,000 square feet of glass, where he now successfully grows all the staple varieties of tea roses and carnations.

Otto Bauer is manager for the Washington Florists Co. He was formerly in business for himself on Fourteenth street, N. W. He is an excellent store man and has brought popularity to the store of the Washington Florists Co.

O. A. C. Oehmler is the leading designer and decorator in the store of Gude Bros. Co. In his leisure hours he writes "little pieces" for some paper, the name of which we cannot now recall. He is a clever man and has been a good secretary.

Wm. F. Gude—but why proceed? Mr. Gude is so well known among the florists of the country that it would seem unnecessary to say a word about him. But, "lest we forget," it may be said that he is a past president of the Society of American Florists and the resident representative of that society. There is nothing of interest to florists but what enlists his sympathy and support. He has been president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce and stands high in the Masonic order, but he never forgets the boys that worked with him in the greenhouses when they all "labored much for little pay."

President Mayberry has appointed Wm. F. Gude, Otto Bauer and John Robertson a committee to confer with the school board in regard to naming a flower for the schools, to be known as the District of Columbia flower for 1912.

The Florists' club's meeting March 5 will be known as carnation and rose night. Many of the local growers have arranged to stage their flowers. The club cordially invites all growers to exhibit at this meeting. Shipments should be made so that they reach Washington not later than 6 p. m. of that date and should be addressed to O. A. C. Oehmler, secretary, 1214 F street N. W., Washington, D. C.

European Horticulture.

FROM THE FRENCH TRADE PAPERS.

How to Mulch a Flower-bed.—It is a general practice to cover the soil of a bed or border with a layer of manure, often with such bad results that midsummer comes before the plants have made a respectable growth. The cause of this seems to be the differing temperatures of soil and atmosphere. The earth, too often mulched soon after planting, before the roots have established themselves, and before it has become thoroughly warmed by the sun, remains cold, the covering prevents evaporation or penetration of heat and thrifty plants cannot result. The proper procedure is to wait until the bed is thoroughly established, then mulch lightly with a fine short manure, the coarse litter being too unsightly. After mulching, waterings should be given with discretion.

On Sacking Fine Fruits.—It is generally agreed by European growers of fancy fruits that protection by means of bags is a necessary operation. In the case of pears and apples, this should be done after one or two sprayings with a mild spray, and a small hole should be made in a corner of the bag for ventilation and drainage. In the case of grapes, if sacked when small, the bag must be provided with a wire ring to prevent contact with the berries, or burning may result, also the lower end must be left open. The sacks may be attached with soft twine or raffia, but best of all are small strips of lead which may be pressed around the bag and stem, and may be used repeatedly. This will prove much the speediest process.

New Pansy Forms.—Several years ago the Germania race of pansies was introduced, and is still remarkable for its large blotched flowers which have their petals curled and undulated in the most attractive and irregular manner. New sorts are being selected and propagated, such as Psyche, velvety violet blue, with wide white border; Hero, which resembled Beaconsfield, lavender and purple, but with the ruffled petals. The Globe is a dwarf compact plant bearing quantities of light or dark blue flowers, large and so ruffled that they appear double.

The Effect of Tarring Roads upon Vegetation.—A general inquiry into the possibility of the dust from tarred roads injuring the surrounding vegetation has just been made in Germany, to the conclusion that it has usually no unfavorable effects. A French writer comments that while it is undoubtedly injurious to certain plants, it exists in so much smaller quantities than common road dust that the effects on foliage do not differ greatly.

CARNATIONS IN GOOD SUPPLY.

The market has changed considerably since the last writing. Instead of being tight there is now enough of almost everything. A single line alone is really short of the call and that is roses. The supply of all sizes of these is far below requirements. American Beauties alone seem sufficient. It is this scarcity in ordinary roses that has enabled other flowers to attain the high prices which they have held. This is particularly true of carnations. Now this flower is coming in more abundantly every day and at the end of last week a sudden slump in the demand caused an unexpected accumulation. This week, although Monday took up more than an ordinary amount still the offerings could not nearly be cleaned up. There will be plenty of flowers for St. Valentine's day. The supply of sweet peas, and it might be added elegant ones too; violets, both double and single, and lily of the valley and orchids is large. Toward the end of last week these lines moved somewhat slowly. The supply of bulbous stock is easily adequate, a considerable part of the call for this line has shifted to carnations, since the latter have become so plentiful. The green goods market is enjoying a fine demand.

NOTES.

Ed Buschle, the popular clerk at C. E. Critchell's, has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade in his bereavement due to the death of his mother the early part of this week.

A. B. Murphy's home was visited by the stork last week, a baby boy arriving at the house.

C. E. Critchell had quite a run on Southern smilax last week.

COLD WEATHER DEPRESSES BUSINESS.

Zero weather continues in this vicinity and numerous are the shipments of flowers that are frozen in transit; 12° and 18° below are the reports from growers on the outskirts of the city. The cold has a depressing effect on business, also, and during the past week it has been a little slow up to Saturday, when a remarkably good day's business was done at all the stores. Killarney and White Killarney roses continue very scarce, and many a "bridal bouquet of roses" is eventually made up of something else, as not enough can be had for neither "love nor money." American Beauties are more plentiful and are used in place of pink roses in many instances. Carnations are very plentiful this week; Easter lilies and callas also are coming in large supply. Novelties clean up daily. Pink and white sweet peas are quite plentiful; lily of the valley and orchids move very nicely, some very choice stock coming in fresh every day. Boxwood is still being used in quantity and the stock is getting low with the wholesalers. Southern smilax was in good demand for decorations the past week. Bulbous stock of all kinds is plentiful and sells at lower prices than formerly. Advance orders for St. Valentine's day show up very promising. C. F. B.

ROSES SCARCE.

Stock has been coming in the last week in good supply, but everything has cleaned up nicely every day. Roses still remain very scarce and are held at premium prices. The weather was cold and snow has fallen, yet all of the retailers report a good trade. Prospects are bright for St. Valentine's day; all the retailers are looking forward to a good trade on this day, for the people seem to observe it more every year.

NOTES.

Geo. H. Angermueller is getting some very choice lilies and expects to have a big crop for Easter. These lilies are as fine as ever came into this market.

This was one of the finest winter flowering sweet peas, being remarkably waved and fluted. The seed houses were located some distance from the greenhouses, so the business will not be inconvenienced.

COLDEST WEATHER EVER EXPERIENCED.

Zero weather and below has been our lot the past week. In the memory of the oldest resident there has not been experienced such a continuous spell of cold weather. Water pipes three feet in the ground have been frozen, as have also gas pipes. Both have been broken by the strain and much damage caused by the escaping water and gas. The walking has been terrible on account of the slippery pavements and has had the effect of keeping shoppers within doors and interfered with the transient trade. There has however been a fair demand as the social season is in full swing with dinners, balls and other social affairs occurring nightly. Roses are in splendid shape, that is the Killarneys, white and pink. Four-fifths of the rose supply are Killarneys. They are the rose par excellence and there is nothing else in sight worth considering. American Beauties are very scarce. The specials are quickly picked up at good prices; the other grades are disappointing in every way. A few good Bridesmaids are seen occasionally which seem to find a market. Liberty is also offered in limited quantities and sells fairly well. Carnations are in splendid form and are as much in demand as usual for the season. There is an avalanche of daffodils, good flowers, which are sold at very low figures. Quantities are moved every day. Tulips have been a great disappointment. The bulbs, owing to the dry weather last summer in Europe, did not make a good growth and all growers say they will not get the cost price of the bulbs out of them. Orchids and gardenias are in full supply and are for the most part sold at fair prices. Violets have advanced on account of Valentine's day demand. Sweet peas of excellent quality are seen in large quantities and sell as well as anything. All kinds of greens are scarce and sell out clean daily. Potted plants are seen in variety but do not move very fast. Most of the stores have stocked up for Valentine's day, as a pretty plant in flower makes an acceptable gift for cupid's day. Heart-shaped boxes and baskets with arrows are seen in the

NOTES.

Eugene Bernheimer is proud of the products of the large houses at North Wales. He says no greenhouse stock ever looked better than it is seen here. Carnations planted in solid beds from fifteen to thirty feet from the glass are growing with as much vigor as they do out of doors. The vast expanse of glass in these houses has stood all kinds of rough weather, heavy snows, ice, violent and sudden wind storms and are as staunch as ever and easily kept warm in the coldest weather.

Mr. Meehan of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. says that all special stock sells up pretty clean and that they could use more medium roses as the growers sacrifice most too many of the shorter grade and get a lot of weak-stemmed long ones which do not bring any more than good flowers of shorter lengths.

Walter P. Stokes, who has been under the weather for some time, is recuperating in Bermuda. He is expected back in time for the spring rush, which commences in early March.

The Leo Niessen Co. say they can see an increase over last year and that all good stock in the various grades seems to find a market. They are handling a fine lot of Japanese lilies which are now a staple all the year round.

The active members of the Florists' Club are a bit proud of the last monthly meeting. It was a hummer in every respect and a few more like this and others of the past year should materially add to the membership.

Berger Bros. are doing well with the new rose Princeton. They like their new location and the increased room of their new quarters and say they could not have handled their present business in the old place.

Edward Reid says things are all right out of town. A large shipping trade enables him to keep his stock going out as fast as it comes in. A splendid lot of sweet peas are one of the features here.

W. F. Baker is getting about again slowly. His hard fall of two months ago jarred him badly. His first lieutenant, however, has things in hand nicely and says that the business is all right.

J. D. Eisele returned last Saturday from abroad and reported a very pleasant and satisfactory trip. The novelties will follow later.

COLD WEATHER HAMPERS TRADE.

The intense cold weather is still injuring trade to a great extent, although a few big jobs have been executed during the last two weeks. All the stock is now more beautiful, especially carnations. American Beauties are still very shy and violets are not over plentiful. Fine cattleyas are begging for buyers.

NOTES.

The Florists' Club held a very interesting and enjoyable meeting February 6. "Carnations" was the subject and many blooms were on exhibition. Chas. H. Totty of Madison, N. J., came on with a bunch of his "Wodenetha," which created quite a stir, for they were fine. The election of officers resulted as follows:

- E. C. Ludwig, president.
- E. C. Reineman, vice-president.
- H. P. Joslin, secretary.
- T. P. Langhams, treasurer.
- John Bader, T. P. Langhams and P. S. Randolph, trustees.

An appetizing lunch was afterward served and the meeting broke up about 11 o'clock.

M. T. Stafford, manager of the Randolph & McClements Penn avenue store, says he is glad the cold weather keeps his windows frosted, as he has been so busy he has had no time to arrange window displays.

Lorch & Hoffmeister have moved across the street, opposite Kaufmanns' department store. A new ice box is ordered and they expect to have a very neat store as soon as things can be arranged.

The Zieger Co. had several Valentine parties that called for some original decorations. Jack Trampton of this firm is back, having been compelled to be away on account of sickness.

Paul Randolph is growing some very nice sweet peas and single violets at his place in Verona, which find ready sale at both stores.

C. H. Puhlman, Carnegie, has taken his son in as a partner and the firm name now is Puhlman & Son.

Louis Beil is again back with E. C. Ludwig, having charge of his Diamond street store.

Boston.

COLD WEATHER DEPRESSES THE MARKET.

The city is in the throes of an arctic winter. The thermometer below zero has been the regular thing. The carnation market has gone to pieces. The flowers were never seen in better shape, but the weather man gets kicks and cuffs for destroying the market. From $7.50 per 1,000 to $2.00 per hundred are the present prices, with but few takers. We read about heroes, but it takes a hero to start with his flowers on a cold morning with an empty stomach and face the present market, not to mention the coal burning propensities of the average fireman. We are sorry to state these facts, but we like to give the plain, unvarnished truth. Roses are still scarce and are picked up upon their arrival in the markets. Everyone is waiting for something to turn up.

M. Howard of West Newton, the growers, deserve commendation. Mr. McGinty also handles the product of Wm. Morris of Wellesley, a recognized grower of good Killarney roses.

H. A. Stevens of Dedham showed Saturday, freesias which were not of the ordinary. It is a selected strain which he has raised, the stems are heavier than any we have ever seen, and the bulbs are larger, the bulblets being as large as other varieties. He expects to have them still better.

Neither dull market, cold weather or presidential year dampens the ardor of those talking building. The glass and lumber dealers report a large increased call for their goods. With prospects of a coal strike things look upward or downward. Time will tell.

CARNATIONS PLENTIFUL.

There is a complete change in the condition of the wholesale cut flower market. Probably at no time during the present season has business been so very unsatisfactory as it has been the past week. Carnations seemed to have suffered most in price, and while thousands have been disposed of at about one-half of the previous week's quotations, still large quantities have accumulated with all the dealers. One of the reasons for this is that the hotels which have used so many carnations for decorating their tables are now using bulb stock, which can be bought at such low prices, and as the weather is so severe the usual outlet through the aid of the street men has been cut off; and to add to the wholesalers' troubles all of the large carnation growers seem to be coming "on crop." Even the finer varieties and novelties are moving slowly. In bulbous flowers there is no question but what the market is greatly overstocked. The quotations are for only small lots as there is so much of the stock carried over from day to day that the average prices are very low. Of roses the prices on the finer grades of the novelties remain the same and the best stock of My Maryland, Mme. Chatenay, Killarney and Richmond clear out fairly well, but the No. 1 and No. 2 grades are moved with difficulty. American Beauties are not so plentiful. Mrs. Aaron Ward, Prince de Bulgarie, Melody and Mrs. Jardine are still in good demand. Orchids are not doing well; the several houses which are receiving them in quantity have heavy supplies of all varieties on hand. While it is true there have been many large orders that called for quantities of these, it did not seem to make much impression on the very large shipments that are being sent in. Lilies are doing as well as can be expected and the prices seem to be satisfactory to the growers. Lily of the valley is more plentiful; especially is this so of the new crop, but this is soft and is sent in without any foliage, and the prices for this kind of stock are very low indeed. Gardenias are doing much better and now that the market has cleared of all the large shipments that were coming in a few weeks ago, prices have advanced and will probably continue to do so, for the visible supply is not large. Lilac, both purple and white, is in good supply. Sweet peas have taken a decided drop, and even the best quality are moving very slowly at lower prices. Even though the quantity of violets coming into the market is much less than a week or so ago the prices have not advanced. The market is overstocked with smilax and adiantum, but Asparagus plumosus in bunches is selling well, but the same cannot be said of asparagus strings.

February 12—Business is still very quiet and the market glutted with carnations and bulbous flowers. The extreme cold weather is still the principal cause of all stock accumulating.

NOTES.

A very severe accident befell Charles Millang, while on his way home to Bay Side, L. I., in his automobile, February 7. Through an accident to some part of the machine it "turned turtle" and threw Mr. Millang to the road, which was covered with ice. He was picked up in an unconscious condition by a farmer on his way to market and taken to the Flushing hospital. At first reports his condition was thought to be critical, but his fighting qualities and will power displayed themselves and it is now said he is rapidly recovering, and will be able to leave the hospital in a few weeks.

No better line of roses can be seen than those at H. E. Froment's. The American Beauties, Killarneys, Radiance are of the very best quality. Mr. Froment also handles heavy shipments of violets and carnations. While it would seem that the output of L. B. Coddington's large establishment at Murray Hill, N. J., which is sold here, would keep a wholesale house busy, still there is ample salesroom and working force to handle efficiently the shipments of many other large growers which are received.

Frank H. Traendly was the host at Cavanagh's restaurant on Monday night at a little dinner given to Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the Society of American Florists, the guests being the officers of the club and a few of Mr. Vincent's friends, and it goes without saying that at any dinners given by any member of the New York Florists' Club the representatives of the trade press are always invited.

Charles Habermann, the well known and popular retailer of upper Broadway, has just returned from a two weeks' trip to Bermuda, where he went with the "Beethoven Singing Society," 250 in number. While at Hamilton, they gave a concert and realized $1,200; the proceeds were given to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home.

Robert E. Berry of "Osocozy" Farm, Great Neck, L. I., was a recent visitor. Mr. Berry is a regular attendant at the club meetings and only regrets that he is so far from the city that he cannot attend the meetings of the Bowling Club on Friday nights.

Walter F. Sheridan of this city and George Young of Clifton, N. J., were recent visitors to the greenhouses of A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., and were greatly impressed with the magnitude and completeness of this up-to-date establishment.

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, President; Marshall H. Duryea, New York, First Vice-President; Edgar Gregory, Marblehead, Mass., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary and Treasurer. Next annual convention at Chicago, June 25-27, 1912.

THE cold weather is affecting the early mail trade to a considerable extent.

NEW YORK.—Chas. Loechner, of Loechner & Co., will make a western trip shortly.

JUST what the onion set market is going to do no one seems to know, probably the worst, whatever that is.

J. C. VAUGHAN is democratic candidate for congress in the second Illinois district against James R. Mann, republican.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—S. G. Courteen is said to be planning the construction of a $200,000 seed warehouse on property on Reed-street.

THE small sum to which orders now amount, in former years comparatively large, give the credit men in the jobbing seed firms plenty to worry about.

THE genial California seed growers, returning to the west from their eastern invasion, report the "best ever." Only as an extra special favor will they book Globe onion seed.

CALIFORNIA seed crops have only had one-fourth the normal quantity of rain this season to February 12 and unless there is unusually heavy precipitation within thirty days all crops will be short.—W.

THE bean men are not experiencing any trouble in getting out contracts for the coming year, as colored beans withstood the rainy fall much better than the white ones. Prices are about the same as last season.

THE following pea growers are reported as planting acreages in the west: C. C. Morse & Co., Coulter-Adams, Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., D. M. Ferry & Co., Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., J. H. Allan Seed Co., and F. A. Wilcox.

VISITED CHICAGO: John C. Bodger and wife, Los Angeles, Calif., returning from the east; Robert Fulton, representing Henry & Lee, New York, from Yokohama, Japan, enroute to New York; Theo. Cobb, representing D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.

Braslan Seed Growers Co.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.

MIAMI, FLA.—Hughes & Co. are doing a good garden seed trade. The season is about over, but some late items, beans, etc., are selling yet. Yields of early potatoes, 75 or more barrels to the acre, are reported selling at $10 a barrel.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, February 14, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $13 to $15 per 100 pounds.—Peter Hollenbach has started work on his new building at 808 West Lake street, which is to be completed May 1, 1912. The building will consist of three stories and a basement and will be equipped with electric elevators and other modern conveniences. The firm will finish the season at its present location and move into the new quarters about June 1.

Seedtime and Harvest.

The dates of planting and harvesting the cereals and other crops is the subject of a bulletin issued by the Department of Agriculture. While it is natural to suppose that planting and harvesting always move northward, and as a fact such progress is in that direction, yet there are interesting exceptions. Spring sowing and harvesting always move in a northerly direction, while that of seed sown in late summer and fall is toward the south. The harvesting of corn and winter wheat progress northward, but that of buckwheat southward.

Corn planting begins in southern Florida and in southern Texas about February 15 in normal years. Fifteen days later it is in progress in northern Florida, southern Louisiana and central Texas, and by May 15 it has progressed as far as southern Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, central New York, northern Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota. A map is published showing sections wherein corn planting begins simultaneously. While these lines will run mainly from east to west, yet there are curious irregularities depending upon altitude, rainfall and character of the soil. The waters of the great lakes mitigate the severity of the climate, yet they delay seasonal changes and retard spring growth and the lines in this section are bent southward.

Relative to the rate of progress of corn planting the bulletin says that planting begins near Brownsville, Tex., on the average date of February 10 and reaches the Texas-Oklahoma line on the mean date of March 12, crossing Texas in 30 days or at the rate of 18 miles a day. Twenty-five days elapse until it reaches the Oklahoma-Kansas lines, about 220 miles, moving through Oklahoma at the rate of nine miles a day. The rate of progress through Kansas is 10 miles; Nebraska, 19 miles; South Dakota, 50 miles; and North Dakota, 44 miles per day. The air temperature at which corn planting takes place is believed to be approximately about 55°. Air records for 127 cities east of the Rocky mountains are given in tabulated form.

Federal Inspection Bill.

We are advised by Curtis Nye Smith with reference to the Federal Inspection Bill printed in our issue of February 10, and said to have been introduced in the House of Representatives January 15, 1912, that we "are misinformed, for the bill (H. R. 18000) really filed on said day is radically different." The copy of bill reproduced in our columns was received from W. P. Stark, of Stark Bros.' Nurseries & Orchards Co., Louisiana, Mo., who has been prominently identified with this legislation in the interests of nurserymen. Copy of the bill actually filed can be secured on application to the reader's representative in congress, requesting Bill H. R. 18000.

Congressional Seeds Good for Birds.

The consignment of congressional free seeds which western Tennessee and Kentucky congressmen had forwarded their constituents in the hopes of reaping a rich harvest of votes, were eaten up by birds. The pouches were thrown off the train and stored in a shed, and when picked up for transshipment it was found that hungry sparrows, made desperate by the cold weather, had picked holes in the pouches and eaten every grain out of the hundreds of packages.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Yes, Standardize the Hash Next.

The pure food board of the Department of Agriculture is trying to put a safeguard around our holiday diet by standardizing commercial mince meat. A draft has been sent out to state food commissioners asking for suggestions.

HUNTINGTON'S ASTER SEED

Though they're pretty good seed now, they're not at their best in February.
 Mr. Wideawake Florist, would you rather work a day than think a minute? A word to the wise should be sufficient. We are growers.
 The "add" below was published Aug. 31st last.

A WORD ABOUT ASTER SEED.

The proper time to talk aster seed is when the stock can be seen in bloom. About February first the buyer has to take the word of the catalogues in regard to the stock he is looking for.

Weather conditions here in Painesville have been just as unfavorable as elsewhere. Our asters are all strictly field-grown and without water. Steady use of the cultivator, our shading system and top feeding has given us a splendid crop. Below will be found a list of our favorites, with stem and flower measurements. We are prepared to convince the gentleman from Missouri if he will call, or we will be glad to send out a limited number of sample boxes of flowers. Enclose 50c to pay for packing and trouble. This will be deducted from the first seed order.

Lady Roosevelt, stem 30 in., flower 4 in.
Huntington's Giant Pink; shell pink sport from Lady Roosevelt; same tall, sturdy growth, flower more loosely built, and much larger, stem 24-30 in., flower 4½-5½ in.

Non-Lateral White (branching), stem 24-30 in., flower 4 inches.

Late Br. Mary Semple, purple, rose, lavender; stem 16-22 in., flower 3½-4 inch.

Crego, rose, purple, stem 18-20 in., flower 4½-6 inch.

Crego, shell pink, lavender, stem 14-20 in., flower 4½-5½ inches.

Vick's Rochester (Mikado Pink), stem 24 in., flower 4½-5½ inches.

Huntington's Improved Mikado Rose, identical in all ways with Rochester. More rank in growth, bright rose, stem 24-30 in., flower 4½-6 inch.

Lavender Gem and Snowdrift. Our strain of these cannot be beaten. Only three rogues taken from over 1500 plants. They showed as high as 16 salable flowers to the plant. Stem 12-22 in., flower 2½-4 in.

We are the largest handlers of Cannas in the world. Our prices upon Cannas will bear comparison with any house in the Canna business.

Our Cannas are true to name—two and three, sometimes four eyes—are sound, dormant, and are packed 250 in a box; two can be "cleated" together and shipped as one. One box of 250 sold at a thousand rate; it is cheaper for you to buy a box of 250 than 200 at 100 rate. Write for special prices for quantities.

If any Cannas are not found here, it may be understood that they are superseded by the foregoing. If selection is left to us, we will substitute or send only the best for all purposes.

MIAMI, FLA., FEBRUARY 3.—Tomato vines, trained to stakes and standing seven feet high, heavy with fruit, are seen in the open ground at the Royal Palm Garden in charge of Chief Gardener Andrews. The latter has a remarkable collection of tropical decorative plants and is equipped with two glass houses used mainly for propagating and growing on small stock.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, February 12.—Cucumbers, $1 to $1.65 per dozen; radishes, 12½ cents to 30 cents per dozen bunches; rhubarb, 25 cents to 35 cents per bunch; mushrooms, 25 cents to 40 cents per pound.

New York, February 10.—Mushrooms, $1 to $2.20 per 4-pound basket; cucumbers, $1.25 to $1.50 per dozen; tomatoes, 10 cents to 40 cents per pound; radishes, $1.50 to $3.50 per 100 bunches; lettuce, $1 to $2 per strap; rhubarb, 40 cents to 60 cents per large bunch and 60 cents to 90 cents per dozen small bunches; mint, 50 cents to 60 cents per dozen bunches.

Mexican Tomato Crop Damaged.

The large tomato crop on the west coast of Mexico, it is now learned, writes Consul Alexander V. Dye at Nogales, Sonora, under date of December 29, 1911, has been very badly damaged by frost within the last few days and consequently will not be nearly so large as expected. It was believed that the tomato crop this year had been planted far enough south to escape the frost, but unprecedented cold weather on the west coast caused damage to the crop just as the shipping season had begun. The first estimates were that 75 per cent of the crop had been destroyed, which is doubtless too large an estimate, but the loss nevertheless is very heavy.

Cress.

In no way is the contrast between Europe and America more apparent than in the love of variety of the Europeans and the all-pervading standardizing of the Americans. This is true in ornamentals, cut flowers and eatables. The European plants an orchard with as many different varieties as he has trees. If he loves roses, he will have as many varieties as he has plants. Thus one can account for the fact that European firms catalogue some 3,000 varieties of roses, or 250 of geraniums, etc. The same is true of their markets.

One can find any amount of material never met with in this country. For instance, the writer remembers in a certain city in Germany that chives in pots were an important crop all winter. These chives were field-grown clumps, potted as needed and forced continuously as the market called for them. They are pretty subjects and somewhat take the place of our green onions. Our subject, cress, is another such plant. Large amounts are grown of both; the curly cress or pepper grass, and the water cress. The curly kind is grown on shelves or benches; it is thickly drilled and cut when four or five inches high; temperature, 55°. The water cress is grown from seeds, or from young shoots, somewhat like violets, generally on benches which are kept very moist, as it can be done that way easier than providing a flooded bed.

Our American markets are gradually calling for many of these things, probably because the enormous travel to Europe each season serves as an educator. While we believe in specialties, we recognize the fact that there is often more money and surer ground in some of these minor crops. We are not growing cress at present, but we contemplate adding it to our lines as well as chives, leek and Cos or Romaine lettuce.

MARKETMAN

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

The article on seed testing by "Marketman" was very interesting and while we never test any seed that we buy for germination, as we obtain them from reputable seedsmen, but seeds left over and those of our own growing we test. We had this year five packages of muskmelon seed of uncertain age, and, in testing, two were found to be worthless from age and the other three germinated from 60 to 75 per cent., which we shall plant more to the hill. Some varieties of sweet corn and beans which we grow are always tested. Last September was very wet and the sweet corn was on the stalk until the middle of October, and this looked so bad it was culled closely, but the greenhouse test proved it was from 60 to 100 per cent of good strong growth.

Manure for Hotbeds.

The unprecedented scarcity of forage all over this country has caused quite a change in the quality or make-up of manure available for hotbeds. We used to have no difficulty in securing any amount of fresh horse manure of the proper nature, but this winter we find that nearly all barns have resorted to shavings and sawdust for bedding. Then, also, hay and straw are so high in price that these are fed very carefully, permitting of no waste. These conditions have so changed the resulting manure as to effect quite a change in its utility for hotbed heating. We think sawdust and shavings manure is most excellent for mulching against heat or cold or drouth, but for heating we do not like it. The bedding used is not organic matter in the same sense as hay or straw, hence does not heat like those materials. To cut the matter short, such manure will heat less violently and for a short time only, and growers who use hotbeds and have to use such material should make due allowance or losses will result. The beds should be made deeper, planted sooner after heating, and if anything should be started a little later so as to cut the time down between starting and warmer weather. A further precaution is to use only manure from highly fed animals, that is, where plenty of grain is used.

Asters for Early Blooming.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you kindly inform me what is the proper treatment for asters planted in the greenhouse? What is the best variety of pink and white?

T. P.

The seed should be sown in February and as soon as large enough potted and grown until bench room is available, which should be after Easter, and then transplanted in any good soil, not too rich, 10 to 12 inches apart. It is much better to grow the plants in pots for early blooming, for in transplanting they start much quicker than plants grown in flats which have to be disturbed.

The best early aster either for forcing or outside planting is Queen of the Market, being usually in bloom two weeks before other sorts begin to blossom. The flower is very large and the plant is of graceful spreading habit.

 President; John Hall, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

DETROIT, MICH.—A special meeting was held in the opera house January 19 for the purpose of interesting the people in the necessity of gathering the species of wild flowers which are fast disappearing and plant them in the parks.

W. VAN KLEEF, JR., has withdrawn from the firm of W. Van Kleef & Sons, Boskoop, Holland, and has established business under the name of Verkade Van Kleef, Nova Nurseries, at Boskoop. The specialties of the new firm are azaleas, buxus, clematis, conifers, magnolias, peonies, rhododendrons and roses.

HARTFORD, CONN.—The sixth annual meeting of the Connecticut Nurserymen's Association was held at the Garder hotel, February 6. The election of officers resulted as follows: W. W. McCarthy, New Haven, president; Charles Turner, Hartford, vice-president; Frank L. Thomas, Manchester, secretary; W. W. Hunt, Hartford, treasurer.

Federal Inspection Bill.

We are advised by Curtis Nye Smith with reference to the Federal Inspection Bill printed in our issue of February 10, and said to have been introduced in the House of Representatives January 15, 1912, that we "are misinformed, for the bill (H. R. 18000) really filed on said day is radically different." The copy of bill reproduced in our columns was received from W. P. Stark, of Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., Louisiana, Mo., who has been prominently identified with this legislation in the interests of nurserymen. Copy of the bill actually filed can be secured on application to the reader's representative in congress, requesting Bill H. R. 18000.

Insect Pests.

In an address before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, entitled "Insect Pests," Prof. Edson F. Hitchings, of the State Agricultural College of Orono, Me., states that the following factors in the control of insect pests should be practiced: clean culture; secure a vigorous plant growth; encourage bird and other friends; know our beneficial insects; learn the life histories of our insect pests; destroy all refuse material where insects hibernate; look out for wild food plants; use up-to-date methods to destroy the several stages of insect life. We need to know our friends as well as our foes. Our friends are the animals, such as birds, toads, skunks, moles and even snakes; and the parasites: predaceous bugs and beetles, tachanid flies, scavengers, etc. We are beginning to realize the importance of destroying all refuse material. Quite a number of our garden and orchard pests pass the hibernating period under cover of stones, pieces of board, piles of weeds, discarded vines, brush heaps, bark of trees, etc. Let us get into the habit of keeping things of this class picked up and destroyed. Another fruitful source of insect increase is found among the weeds that grow in neglected fence corners, along stone walls, in pastures, by the roadside and in too many of our gardens, and look for wild food plants where many insects pass through their first larvæ stage. Removal of these will greatly check the development of insect life. The necessity of the intelligent and persistent use of insecticides, fungicides, traps and baits is now beginning to be realized.

Some New Philadelphus.

While the older forms of the Phladelphus were mostly tall growing, suitable for background or screen, the new Lemoine varieties are mostly dwarf, graceful, suitable for clumps or foregrounds of shrubbery. Among the earlier sorts are: Boule d'Argent (1893), double; Gerbe de Neige (1893), large, pure white flowers; Candelabre (1894), little plant with frimbriated flowers; Avalanche (1896), superb six-foot plant, the branches long and slender, bent to the ground with the weight of flowers in season; Mont Blanc (1896), similar, but differing in season; Pavillon blanc (1896), very large flowering; Manteau d'hermine (1898), little dwarf clump with recurving branches. Later, by hybridizing the California P. Coulteri with the above sort, a new race has evolved, showing the trace of color inherited from P. Coulteri, one of which, Etoile rose (1908), alone being entirely hardy. Among newer white sorts Bouquet blanc (1903), long arched branches, free blooming; Couquette (1903), semi-double; Rosace (1904), imbricated flowers; Mer de Glace (1907), large double flowers; and finally Virginal (1909), one of the finest Philadelphus existing, of vigorous growth, erect branches, and a profusion of pure white double crested flowers. Neice blanche and Voie lactee (1905), are two excellent plants with broad flat flowers.—Revue Horticole.

Glorious New Plants from the Chinese Alps.

There has been nothing in recent years to surpass our wonderful introductions from China, through our collector, Mr. Forrest. As the introducers of several new species of Primulas, which have taken a remarkably high place in the estimation of experts, we occupy an enviable position.

Growing, as they do, close to the snow line in the mountainous region of Yunnan, China, these Primulas are exceedingly hardy, as well as beautiful: they are altogether unlike our European or American Primroses. The illustration shown gives but a very inadequate representation of the marvellous attraction of these novelties. Most of them have been awarded First-Class Certificates from the Royal Horticultural Society, London.

At the time of writing, another collector, Mr. F. Kingdom Ward is working the Mekong-Salwen divide. The Mekong and Salwen rivers run southward from Central China through Burma and Siam, cutting through vast mountain ranges of immense altitude. It is on the slopes of these snow-capped giants that untold riches of the Chinese Flora flourish unseen and almost unsuspected. We are convinced, from the reports of our collectors, that the plants so far brought to light are but a "drop in the well." So trying is the climate, and so risky the intercourse with natives, that only a mere patch of ground has been covered after several years' strenuous work and the expenditure of considerable sums of money.

Besides these Chinese Novelties, you will be interested in our

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Can you kindly tell me what quantity of cyanide it would take to do two houses, each 18x72 feet, 11 feet to ridge, seven feet to gutter. Also advise me how to use it successfully.

Montana. A. R. S.

There are 11,664 cubic feet of space in each house, and one jar containing one ounce of cyanide of potassium and two ounces sulphuric acid in four ounces of water will fumigate 3,500 cubic feet, so each house will require three jars. If the houses are not divided with a partition, it will take six jars, which should be of glass or earthenware—no metal jars should be used. Have the cyanide of potassium weighed out in ounce packages so that touching it with the hands will not be necessary, for it is one of the most virulent poisons and if by any means it touches the hands they should be thoroughly washed at once. Place four ounces of water in each jar and add two ounces of sulphuric acid. Then place the jars equidistant in the house. Start at the end furthest away from the door and drop the cyanide of potassium, in the paper, into the jar, and quickly pass to the other two jars, repeating the operation, and out of the house, closing the door and fastening it, and to prevent any person going in lock the door and post a sign warning them to keep out.

Under no circumstances tarry over the jar, for the gas is deadly poison to anything that breathes it, in fact, the best way is to fill the lungs before dropping the first package and then not breathe until out of the house. If it is necessary to fumigate both houses at once, as it will be in case there is no partition, it will require two men who work simultaneously. The fumigation should be done when the house is dry and the temperature not above 60°. Leave the house closed all night and in the morning open doors and, if possible, ventilators, before entering the house. This Florist DID Use a GIBLIN Boiler

Use our GIBLIN "STANDARD" GREENHOUSE BOILER

Will It Cost You $260 or $1200?

Study our illustrations—see how a certain greenhouse man paid $260.00 for his boiler and fuel during the winter—while his neighbor tried to save money by buying a "cheap" (?) boiler and sank $1200.00.

The man who spent $260.00 used our GIBLIN "Standard" Greenhouse Boiler.

It is the biggest saver you can put into your greenhouse.

Philip Warner Newtonville, N. Y., in August 1911, bought one No. 408 Giblin Standard Greenhouse Boiler. January 7th, 1912, the thermometer was 12 degrees below zero outside with a strong gale blowing. He fixed his fire at 8 P. M. and every part of the greenhouse registered 52 degrees, the temperature desired. Because of the wildness of the night, he arose at 2 A. M. and found every part of the greenhouse 52 degrees; and the fire in good condition. Because he was up, he placed a very small quantity of fuel on the fire and went to bed until 6 A. M. He then found the fire in splendid condition; the thermometer registering 52 degrees in all parts of the greenhouse, with conditions unchanged outdoors. The boiler that will heat a greenhouse ten hours without attention when the thermometer is 12 degrees below zero and a gale blowing, is the boiler every florist wants in his greenhouse.

Can you afford to disregard the importance of this showing.

You save money every year you use our GIBLIN "Standard" Greenhouse Boiler, by reducing your fuel consumption, repairs and labor cost to the minimum.

Not a "Cheap" Outfit.

Although we offer an extra discount of 25 per cent (in addition to our liberal regular discount) for the purpose of introducing our boiler in your neighborhood, this is not a "cheap" outfit. The price is right for the grade and quality of workmanship we put into it—the very best.

☞ You want a boiler that requires very little attention and leaves you free to devote your valuable time to more important things. Neither you nor your men relish getting up at midnight, 3 a. m. and sunrise to feed a hungry heater.

☞ The GIBLIN "Standard" requires attention only once in twelve hours in ordinary weather.

It economizes on repairs because of its unusually sturdy construction. All of the castings are tested at pressure of 65 pounds to the square inch—far more than they will ever undergo in actual use. Our boiler will last a lifetime, and once you've bought it your heating worries are off your mind for once and all. Can you say the same about your present boiler?

Wouldn't it pay you to "scrap" the outfit you now have and start saving by using a GIBLIN "Standard"?

Real Botanical.

Any book published by the American Lumberman, of Chicago, ought to have the sound of the pines in it; and this, at least, may be said of Douglas Malloch's "In Forest Land." Passing by the more serious poems and the dialect humor, take this bit of scientific realism, called "The Love of a Botanist":

I long for the land of the pinus palustris
Where the liriodendron is bursting to bloom,
Where taxodium distichum faithful, industrious
Is waving in sadness o'er Clementine's tomb.
'Twas under the spreading hickory pecan
We pledged our fond love by the light of the stars;
"If any be faithful," we whispered, "then we can,"
While leaning at eve o'er the franixus bars.
A flower from the sweet asimina triloba
She pinned on my coat as I bade her farewell;
But her love grew as cold as the far Manitoba
And my hopes like the frost-bitten autumn leaves fell.
They planted catalpa, the fair speciosa,
They planted the bush and the tree and the vine,
They planted a sprig of robinia viscosa
And, underneath these planted poor Clementine.

Spineless Cactus.

Luther Burbank, plant wizard, caused a sensation at the annual convention of the California Fruit Growers at Santa Rosa last month by unfolding the possibilities which he has learned exist in his spineless cactus.

Burbank declared that he has discovered that the leaves could be converted into paint and whitewash, that the fruit was more delicious than strawberries and that the spine of the plant had proved an excellent substitute for rubber in making automobile tires and for wood pulp in the manufacture of paper.

Some day his powers of invention
Will bring to light that Fourth Dimension;
He'll make it out of cactus.

The world's supply of nitrogen
Some day will peter out, and then
He'll make it out of cactus.

No longer trust the sporting dope
That finds in sight no White Man's Hope,
He'll make it out of cactus.

Look up, despairing eyes that blink
In vain, to glimpse the Missing Link!
He'll make it out of cactus.

The royal road to wealth and fame,
Which now is nothing but a name—
He'll build it out of cactus.

When Science ceases, baffled, checked,
Its search the atom to detect,
He'll find the thing in cactus.

When all the trees on earth have passed,
And Conservation stands aghast,
He'll make wood out of cactus.

So, when at last good men would rise
From earth to mansions in the skies,
Beyond the bounds of peace and time,
It follows that they'll have to climb
A ladder made of cactus.

—Chicago Tribune.

Some Ideas on Ventilation of Greenhouses

ANYBODY can arrange vent sashes so you will have air enough, but that's a small part of greenhouse ventilation. What you also want is that the hand wheels shall be placed in a convenient location, so as to save all time possible in operating the vents. If you can open and close both sides of the ridge from the same walk at practically the same time, it's a big advantage. If you can close them or open them without straining and twisting, it's also an advantage. If your apparatus does not require frequent adjustments or repairs, it's still another advantage.

If the firm you buy it of thoroughly understands solving all kinds of greenhouse ventilating problems in the most practical and inexpensive way for your particular house — then if their apparatus is right, you better buy of them.

Why not find out if Hitchings are not just the firm with just the apparatus you want? Better write them.

J. Frank Edgar,

"The house you erected for me last year has proven satisfactory in every way, and in this house I believe I have the maximum of strength, durability and light."

E. N. Kroninger,
Allentown, Pa.

"The things we know about and are enthusiastic about, are the things we take pleasure in thoroughly endorsing. That's the way I feel about the Iron Frame Houses that Lord & Burnham Company erected for me two years ago. I was slow in buying them, but now I am sure the buy was a right one."

Edward Brockmann,
Irondequoit, N. Y.

"The greenhouse material you shipped to me last spring is very satisfactory. The galvanized iron, ice-clearing eave plate and sash bar clasps make an everlasting job. The 1 1/4-inch columns set in concrete, in combination with the cross ties, give great strength to the giant arch. The entire construction has a neat appearance, in which we take much pride."

"I like your materials because they are so easy to erect, and that's why I gave you an order for that last house this fall."

Dell Titus,
Irondequoit, N. Y.

"I have at the present time eleven of the Lord & Burnham greenhouses, and I do not think there are any better."

Alban Harvey & Sons,
Brandywine Summit, Pa.

"The erection cost on your Sectional Iron Frame House is less than any other construction. With our own men we erected the entire iron frame of a house 42 ft. x 250 ft. in a little less than two days. Furthermore, anyone buying a house from Lord & Burnham Co. will be assured of pleasant and honorable dealing."

Stephenson Mortensen, Southampton, Pa.

"The fact that we gave your representative an order for a 300-foot addition to our first Lord & Burnham house, is pretty conclusive evidence how well we were pleased."

We have passed through the coldest January we ever had. For 24 days the thermometer was below zero, some of the time as low as 25° below. It has been simply to shovel coal and fight Jack Frost, but February 1 brought bright sunshine and milder. Flowers have been very scarce, but a few bright, sunny days will bring the plants into bloom.

The Mitchell Nursery Co. have had a good cut ever since October. A. Niel and T. Davis, two prominent florists of Stratford, visited the place last week. The firm now has a large stock of Asparagus plumosus plants.

The Insecticide that kills plant Lice of every species.

THE APHINE MANUFACTURING CO.,
Madison, N. J.:

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of January 27th, will say that we have been using FUNGINE on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the APHINE for lice on lettuce, instead of — (a nicotine preparation) and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots. If so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this FUNGINE as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.

Yours very truly,

Denver.

There has been some improvement in business the past week and also in the quality of stock, especially roses. Last week there were very few tea roses that could be classed as of good quality. This week there are some that have the ear-marks of specials. In another week there will be plenty of all grades and of better quality. American Beauties have been especially scarce, but they are coming now in better shape and of good color. Carnations are plentiful, but there has been considerable shipping which has helped to reduce the stock and keep the prices steady. Daffodils have had a good week and nearly all have been cleaned up. Sweet peas are of good quality, though the supply is a little short of the demand which is no doubt due to the cloudy weather. There is a good demand for violets. Daffodils, tulip and hyacinth pans are selling well.

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

The regular meeting of the Colorado Florists' Club was held Monday, February 5, and an interesting programme was arranged. Wm. Horlacker read a paper relating to the growing of cut flowers, plants and the gathering of seeds in the countries of the Mediterranean. His paper on native conifers was postponed to a later meeting, when John Berry of Colorado Springs will exhibit specimens of the different varieties in connection with this paper. A number of growers exhibited some of the newer roses and carnations at this meeting, among which were Killarney Queen and Double White Killarney by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Sunburst by E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; Benora and Gorgeous carnations by Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., and Rosette by F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind. All of these arrived in good condition. Benora and Gorgeous from Peter Fisher were shown six days after being cut and were in excellent condition. L. A. Kintzele of Denver exhibited some fine snapdragon, one variety of lavender pink being especially fine.

New Orleans.

Business has been very brisk this winter, the Christmas and New Year's business being far beyond expectations. The finest and most lavish decorations and choicest flowers were in demand, and the poor stock had no show. At the opera, America Beauties and orchids were the prevailing bouquets seen, with few Brides, Bridesmaids and My Maryland close seconds. The florists have their hands full now with the numerous balls given by the several mystic organizations, until Mardi Gras, which will close the season February 20, when Lent begins. The growers and gardeners have not prospered as well, for the weather this winter has been unusually severe; rain, sleet and low temperatures have caused much loss to growing plants and very little outdoor work. Our numerous gardens about the city do not show up as well as in former years. However, business prospects are very bright, as soon as the weather moderates.

NOTES.

The New Orleans city park never looked better than at present with its thousands of annuals in bloom. Frank Broker, gardener in charge, has a most beautiful collection of plants in the several greenhouses for spring planting.

Buchner & Krack have added several new houses to their range to meet the demands of their increasing business and have a large stock of seasonable plants and shrubs on hand.

Chas. Eble, the famous Baronne street florist, had the sad misfortune to lose his wife last December after a lingering illness.

U. J. Virgin and the Metarie Nursery Co. are doing a land office business in decorations and cut flowers.

Frabacher's Park, in charge of Henry Krack, is looking well, especially the Italian garden.

The J. Steckler Seed Co. reports business very good, having a large country trade.

C. W. Eichling has a fine collection of ferns, both nephrolepis and adiantums.

James Newsham is very successful with his orchid blooms.

Abele Bros. are quite busy with country orders.

BEDFORD HILLS, N. Y.—The property and greenhouses of the John Young Co. at Bedford Hills were sold at auction December 29 and bought in by R. O. King in the interest of the King Construction Co, one of the largest creditors, for $37,100. It was sold by Mr. King February 7 to Charles L. Roberts of Barking Ridge, N. J., for $48,000. The property will be managed and the product sold by Moore, Hentz & Nash of New York city.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Violets.

With the approach of spring the violet plants grow rapidly and quantities of runners will spring from the old stools and propagation of these runners at this time will save much time and room later in the season when the spring stock is insistently demanding space, and much better plants are procurable from cuttings taken now than from divisions in May, when the days are often warm and the plants more or less exhausted. And if the young stock is procured now the old plants can be thrown out as soon as through blooming, securing available room at once. These runners or laterals root easily at this time in a propagating bench or can be taken off with a few small roots and either potted or placed in flats and will take but little room, and as early as possible placed in a cold frame. Treated in this manner splendid stock may be obtained for planting out early, either in the field or in the houses, and with good strong stock to start with much better results are sure to be attained than by being obliged to plant small, weak stock later in the year.

As the warm days approach the houses will need to be shaded, for the sun bleaches the flowers, and a watering of liquid manure will greatly assist in maintaining the size of the blooms and also keeping up the color.

Mignonette.

The grower will always find some plants in his beds of mignonette that produce exceptionally large spikes of bloom, the plants are more vigorous in foliage or the blooms of better form, and these spikes that show special characteristics should be selected and the seed saved, and in this way the grower can procure a strain which after two or three years' selection will be far ahead of any seed he can buy. This seed should, however, be saved before the bees and other insects are flying around and attracted to the houses, for they will cross-fertilize the flowers with undesirable strains. The seeds of mignonette do not ripen all at once, and as the pod remains open, the ripe seed falls out and is lost, so special preparation must be made to receive it. Select the spikes that are to be saved for seed and tie them to strong stakes and mark them. The flowers should then be cross-fertilized by rubbing a camel's hair brush up and down the flowers. This should be done every bright day so as to secure a thorough pollination. To catch and hold the seed take a piece of heavy brown paper and roll it into a cone shape, and after winding a piece of cotton around the stem and stake below the flowers, tie the small end of the cone-shaped paper around the cotton, the paper spreading upward so as to catch all the seed that drops out of the seed pods. This can remain until all the seed has ripened and as the spike grows the cross-fertilization continued, but care should be taken that no water gets into the paper to wet the cotton, and seed must be gathered before the days become so warm that insects and bees are in the houses.

Easter Lilies.

The one important crop to the plantsman at this time is the lilies for Easter, for they must be properly timed to be at their best on that date. Easter this year comes April 7, and most growers like to see buds on their plants six weeks before that date, that is February 25. No doubt the exceedingly cold weather, in almost all sections of the country, has had its effect upon this crop and retarded it, and if such is the case the plants will have to be forced a little harder to have them in bloom on time. If the buds are not showing, the temperature will have to be increased to 70° at night. This will do the plants no harm if they have good sunlight during the day, and are given all the ventilation possible, but the ventilators should not be opened unless the sun is shining and the thermometer at least at the same degree as the night temperature, and avoid all draughts possible for the plants grown so warm are very tender. It is next to impossible to bring a lot of lilies in all together, so it is better to so grow them that the slowest ones will be in on time, and move those that are more advanced into a cooler house and retard them, but this should not be done until the buds are nearly full grown. A lily retarded when the buds are forming is very difficult to start into active growth again, but after the first buds begin to turn white the plants can be moved into a house of 50° or lower and they come on slowly and will be of better quality than those grown warmer. The plants should be all tied to a neat stake as soon as the buds form, if not already done, for the buds add considerable weight to the top of the stem and they bend over very quickly. When the buds form, if the plants are pot bound, a watering of liquid manure will increase the size and substance of the flower. It will be a continual fight against aphids from this time on and fumigation or spraying with nicotine will have to be regularly and continually practiced to bring the plants into bloom in the best condition.

Cannas.

One of the most decorative beds for summer, especially if it is of large size, is a bed of the blooming cannas, for they are very showy and will bloom throughout the summer until frost cuts them down, and the varieties have been greatly improved during the last decade. To make the best showing the plants should be started early enough to have good strong stock at bedding-out time in May and June. The plants should be started by March 1 and now is the time to procure stock of varieties of which the grower is short or which he has not on hand. The clumps when removed from the winter storage should have all the old soil shaken off, the dried up stalk and roots cut away. They are then cut up into small pieces and if the stock is plentiful two or three eyes can be left to each piece, but where stock is short they are cut up to single eyes but with single eyes many weak plants will be produced. Often the clumps have started into growth and where this has happened the eyes should be sorted, those already started being planted together and the dormant eyes by themselves. Have boxes already and place an inch of soil on the bottom and then place the divisions on this closely together and cover with light, sifted soil and then water thoroughly. Keep the varieties separate and properly labeled, each box to contain but one variety and the name plainly marked on the box, for labels are often lost or misplaced. Place the boxes in a warm location—where hot water heating is used they can be placed on the return pipes. In two or three weeks the plants will have made sufficient roots to be placed in 3½ or 4-inch pots when they can be grown on in a house with a temperature of 50° to 60°. In planting cannas outside it should always be remembered that they are very tender and should not be set out until all danger of late frost is past.

WINDSOR, CONN.—E. F. McDermott arranged a decoration for the banquet of the Windsor Business Men's Association, January 23, of flowers and plants that received much commendation.

Prices for Floral Work.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

We find that the arranging of floral sprays and other funeral work requires the employment of a large amount of asparagus and other greens and our customers are not in the habit of paying extra for these. Is it customary in the trade to charge only for the cut flowers used in funeral work or is a regular rate made including the work?

E. C. H.

It is customary in all florists' establishments to charge not only for all material that goes to make up funeral work but also for the labor required.

This is a question, although it at first may seem ridiculous, which probably every florist, especially those in the smaller cities and towns, has had to meet face to face. We have had be arranged, flower beds prepared and plants set out at the price at which they are sold by the dozen or hundred. Would one expect that the tailor or dressmaker would make a garment for the price of the cloth? Hardly, and this is one of the best arguments that we were able to present to the customer, for it placed the matter on perfectly equal footing. With the lady customer, especially, the expense of the trimmings of a gown are often more than the material, and this also brings up another point in floral arrangement. It is almost impossible to artistically arrange flowers and be restricted to a certain number. Very often it will be found that the addition of a few more flowers will be necessary to properly finish the piece, and this should be taken into consideration when accepting the order.

A case of this kind came under our observation once. A customer asking the price of roses was told they were $5.00 per dozen, stated that he would like two dozen, and added that they were to be tied in two bunches for presentation, and he would call for them. At the time specified the customer called and upon asking the price was informed it was fifteen dollars. He immediately protested, for he said he was told the price was $5.00 per dozen and he had ordered two dozen. The salesman very pleasantly explained that the roses had to be arranged with the proper amount of green, with a ribbon, and by the highest priced labor they employed, and then said, "Would you expect to buy an oil painting from an artist for the price of the canvas and the paint?" The customer saw the point immediately and willingly paid the bill. This is a matter that must be fully explained to the unthinking customer and also done in the pleasantest way possible, and if so done will be thoroughly understood.

With most establishments it is customary to have a regular fixed price for all floral arrangements, fully covering all the expenses of material and labor, the price being dependent more or less upon the cost of flowers at the time and the grade that is to be used, whether of the more expensive or the cheaper flowers.

DESIGNER.

Chicago Spring Flower Show Poster.

the customer come in and inquire the price of carnations, roses or some other flower, and then place the order as if it was simply the cut flowers that they wanted, then when offering to pay for them add that they wished them tied and delivered at a house or church where there was to be a funeral. For instance, a customer would ask the price for two dozen carnations, and upon being told that they were 75 cents a dozen would place upon the counter one dollar and a half and then request that they be tied in a spray and give the address of the place to which they were to be delivered. It is an anxious moment for the salesman or the proprietor, but it must be explained at once in the most diplomatic and gentlemanly way possible that the one who arranges flowers must receive recompense just the same as the one who produces them.

We do not recall any other business in which it is so often expected that work shall be executed without pay as it is in the several lines of the florist business. It seems to be understood by certain customers that flowers will Floral Scales.

The floral scales, which we illustrate, is a novel design with much more sentiment in its conception than is generally found in floral designs of mechanical character, and was arranged by the flower department of Cobb, Bates & Yerxa Co., Fall River, Mass., as a testimonial to a clerk who had been in the employ of the firm for many years.

As can be seen from the illustration it represents a set of scales or balances. On the left balance was a weight turned from wood and painted aluminum; on the right was a round ball of double daffodils to represent a ball of gold which has overbalanced the weight. The design was beautifully arranged and caused much favorable comment, both for the original idea and workmanship.

The firm has conducted a flower department for several years which has been managed by S. E. Studley with success and has assisted to increase the business of all the florists in the city by keeping cut flowers before the public at all times.

THE ROSE.

Two New Roses.

The two new roses, which we illustrate, are both pronounced excellent for cut flower purposes by M. Leenders, Steyl, Holland, by whom they were raised, one being named Jonkheer J. L. Mock and the other General-Superior Arnold Janssen. They have become renowned in Europe and will without question be favorably received in America and have a promising future.

Jonkheer J. L. Mock is very effective, especially when planted in lots, and is very striking even when seen from a distance. The color is grand, of a beautiful shining red; in fact no other variety has such brilliant coloring, and the large, silver-edged foliage give it a singular charm. It is of very strong growth and lasts well making it one of the best as a cut rose and especially suited for shipment.

General-Superior Arnold Janssen is a worthy companion for Jonkheer J. L. Mock, being of a dark, carmine red with long buds which develop nicely. It is a strong, luxuriant grower, and will undoubtedly take first place among roses for cut flower purposes. It is more showy than Jonkheer J. L. Mock and the plant bears a larger number of flowers.

Both are strong, luxuriant growers producing strong stems covered with large heavy foliage, and the flowers are very large and in continuous bloom. Jonkheer J. L. Mock grows beautifully in the greenhouses and General-Superior Arnold Janssen is equally as good in the gardens as in the houses.

Steam or Hot Water Heating.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Could you inform me which is considered the best manner of heating greenhouse for rose culture, steam or hot water?
J. W. E.

Illinois.

We consider steam heat preferable to hot water for rose culture, for the following reasons: Quick heating, less radiating surface, more latitude in the arrangement of coils, and a means of fusing the sulphur or obtaining the fumes strong enough to prevent mildew. The latter feature alone must not be overlooked if the Killarney and other varieties subject to mildew are to be grown successfully.
E.

Growing the Newer Roses.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you kindly inform me the requisite treatment to grow Mrs. Aaron Ward, Melody and Prince de Bulgarie roses? Will they succeed if grown with Brides and Killarney?
R. E. P.

Wisconsin.

In replying to "R. E. P." regarding the treatment of Mrs. Aaron Ward, Melody and Mrs. Taft (Antoine Rivoire) would say that, personally, I think that Mrs. Ward and the Mrs. Taft roses should do better grown in a house together, requiring more heat than Brides or Killarney. To be productive a night temperature of 60° to 62° should suit them. The cultural methods would practically be the same as for Killarney or the average hybrid teas. Many growers prefer to grow

ROSE GENERAL-SUPERIOR ARNOLD JANSSEN.

Mrs. Taft on own roots, also Mrs. Aaron Ward, especially where the soil is an ideal rose soil of a heavy texture. If the soil is rather light, a sandy loam, we should suggest a trial of grafted plants. The writer has not grown Melody, so cannot give cultural directions for same.
E.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you kindly inform us how to exterminate leaf rollers on roses? We have tried hand picking but are not able to check them.
I. F. F.

Nebraska.

The best treatment we have found for the extermination of the leaf roller is the vaporizing of nicotine liquid, also spraying same on plants with Bordeaux nozzle, using the liquid according to directions on the tins. At the same time the above treatment is principally a preventive and the hand picking is very essential and must be kept up as the rollers can not be destroyed after they become encased in the foliage or leaf unless destroyed by hand. We would suggest spraying at the very start in order to prevent the appearance of the rollers.
E.

Caladium Esculentum.

A plant that can be used with great effect in bedding, especially for large beds or where sub-tropical bedding is carried on is the Caladium esculentum or Elephant's Ear. They also make a fine outside row around a canna bed, and are used in urns, but in such a position will require copious waterings. The tubers should be started in early March so as to have good sized plants at bedding-out time. The simplest and easier way is to place them in flats or boxes quite close together in spagnum moss just covering the bulbs. This is essential for the roots start from the top of the tubers. Have the moss fairly wet and water carefully until the growth appears. Place the box in a warm location from 65° to 70° and when the growth appears through the moss, pot in 4-inch pots and grow in a warm house. After growth commences they will need plenty of water. The medium-sized bulbs make very beautiful plants and are much more easily handled than the larger sizes.

THE CARNATION.

Feeding and Propagating.

Now that the days are getting longer and brighter we can treat the plants to an occasional application of liquid manure or commercial fertilizer, but feeding should not be practiced to any great extent until the stock of cuttings for propagating have been taken care of, bearing in mind that each application of fertilizer, whether liquid or as a top dressing, stimulates the plant into quick growth action and the stimulation is carried to every part of the plant's makeup, greatly benefiting the plant as a whole, but having a softening tendency towards the shoots used for cuttings. The question of feeding should be governed according to the condition of the plants. If they have been producing flowers continuously since the first of October without any additional fertilizer, the flowers will now begin to run a little small, indicating that the soil is becoming exhausted and in need of more fertilizer. Now comes up the question in what manner and when, should the fertilizer be applied. We are governed in this matter according to the condition of the soil and the appearance of the plants, being guided by the record of what manures were used in the composition of the soil.

I must confess that I am partial to the method of top dressing as the best way of applying fertilizer at this season of the year, particularly if manure was spread at the bottom of the benches at planting time, it having given us much better results than when used in a liquid state. If the plants are in full crop, you will notice upon examination that the surface of the beds are covered with little white roots or feeders, and when the dressing is put on it gets to work immediately, and you can control its action to a great extent by using judgment in the watering, running a little to the dry side during a cloudy spell, and being more liberal when it is clear and bright.

The old method of mulching with coarse raw manure is now antiquated on most up-to-date places, and the mulching or dressing is now done with pulverized manures, which is much cleaner and easier to apply, quicker of action and more directly under control, not taking into consideration that very important point of being able to keep the soil open to the air. Pulverized cattle and sheep manure as advertised in THE AMERICAN FLORIST have been tried by us and we have found them both good, but we use the sheep manure more often than the cattle and back it up with an occasional dressing of Scotch soot, our soil being heavily charged with horse manure and rock phosphate from the beginning.

To those who prefer using the liquid manure at this time I would advise against using it in strong doses, rather apply weak and oftener but not more than once a week. Heavy doses of liquid manure will quickly cause the stems to become brittle and snap off with the least touch.

If the quantity of cuttings needed for next season's stock are not yet in the sand, attend to getting them in as quickly as they become available. It may seem to be a little early to sound a hurry-up call in this respect, but anyone who keeps a record of the plants grown from cuttings taken from the sand during February and of those from March or later, knows of the very much better results obtained from the February cuttings over the later ones. Look well to the cuttings now in the sand and do not allow them to get hard from being held there too long after they have become rooted, also do not keep them over dry so that they wilt, or carry them to the other extreme. They delight in a cool, top atmosphere and a sand temperature of about 56 degrees. As quickly as the cuttings become rooted they should be potted, using a live fresh soil that contains very little manure, and after potting give them a cool temperature, shading a little for a few days, until the roots start into growth again, after which they should be given full light and kept in active growing condition by watering only as they are in need of it.

This is the all important time with the plants in the benches. They should now be at their best, full of long-stemmed blooms with plenty of others coming up to follow on. Pay particular attention to the temperature; a variation of a few degrees will cause bursted calyces and weak stems. Another very important matter is to look well to the work of keeping down the aphid by regular fumigations, the heavy succulent new growths being especially susceptible to these pests. If red spider, becomes troublesome a syringing of the plants affected on a bright day will quickly dislodge them.

C. W. JOHNSON.

BEDFORD HILLS, N. Y.—Charles L. Roberts of the Somerset Rose Co., Basking Ridge, N. J., in connection with Frank L. Moore, Henry Hentz, Jr., and Jonathan Nash, of the firm of Moore, Hentz & Nash, 55-57 West Twenty-sixth street, New York, has acquired the property lately owned by the John Young Co., comprising 93 acres of land and 85,000 square feet of glass of modern construction, which will be conducted by the latter firm. Mr. Hentz looking after the growing part of the business.

A Maryland Garden.

The gardens of Frank C. Hargett of Frederick, Md., which we illustrate, have become famous in that section of the country and at a reception which was held August 30 there were on display twenty thousand plants including many flowering as well as a large collection of decorative and tropical plants. In the latter class were fine specimens of palms, ferns, ficus, crotons and other rare and well known species.

Where Some of Us Are Lame.

Paper by W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill., read at the meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, February 26, 1912.

It is said that a "knock is as good as a boost" and if the saying is true, there are going to be a good many boosts in this paper.

The growth of floriculture in our country during the past twenty years has been phenomenal—I believe unparalleled in the history of any other business. For many years the demand as a whole has kept abreast or ahead of the supply. Men all over the country have succeeded—have acquired wealth—through the growing and selling of flowers, whose crude and antiquated methods of business could only have spelled disaster in any other line. The signs are plain that this condition is not to continue and we must adopt the common-sense methods which are found necessary in all other business, or many of us are going to get hurt in the near future.

Perhaps the one thing in which more of us are lame than in any other is in slipshod methods of bookkeeping. How many keep careful records of receipts and expenditures week by week and month by month, posted up side by side, so that we can get a comparison between this week and this month and those of last and previous years? And yet there is nothing that calls our attention to errors, and also to successes, so easily and so surely as such a simple table.

The trade may be divided into three general classes:

1—The wholesale grower, disposing of practically all his product to other florists, either direct or through commission houses.

2—The grower, generally located in the residence districts, the suburbs or in the smaller towns, who grows his own plants and flowers and retails them himself.

3—The city store man who grows nothing, but buys in the open market the stock necessary to supply his retail trade.

We all know the grower with the dirty, sloppy, tumble-down houses. Does he ever succeed? It is hardly worth comment. The man who has not ambition enough to keep himself and his place clean is the one who is always complaining that there is no money in the business any longer, and there isn't—for him.

Perhaps the commonest mistake made by the wholesale grower is in attempting to both grow and market his own crop. The ability to sell well, and the ability to grow expertly, are not always found in the same person; and even if they are, the time lost in getting the goods to the market, dickering with the buyer and collecting the proceeds is often paid for dearly, by loss from lack of close attention to the growing end. Of course, if the extent of the business will warrant it, a well organized and efficient selling department distinct and apart from the growing end of the business pays, and pays well.

The wholesale grower with moderate or small areas of glass will do better to consign his stock to a reliable selling agency and put in all his time in growing it better, and growing more of it, and getting it in at the time when it is worth money. Does it not almost always happen, when you visit one of those men who peddle their own stock that he explains the miserable condition of some lot of stuff in the house by saying that the boys let it get a little too this, that, or the other, while he was away; and aren't the boys always doing it when the boss is away half the time? To be sure, there are some dishonest commission men, but as a class I venture the statement that they are as honest as the men who ship to them. The man who doesn't play fair with his commission man and then complains because the commission man does not play fair with him is a very foolish fellow indeed.

Many of us are selling carnations for two cents when good stock is bringing three cents. Our fuel, repairs, maintenance, and all overhead expenses are the same as the other fellow's and he is only putting a little more into labor and extra care—a very little more as a percentage on his other expenses. That extra cent is just 50 per cent more than we are getting, and that 50 per cent is nearly all clean profit—which we don't get. How many of us are growing back number varieties simply because it costs something to stock up with the new? And yet, how little the cost compared with the difference in receipts for a whole season—and the good new things always sell in the time of a glut for some price. Not that we are to plunge on new and untried things, but we must watch the first year and jump in the second year in the things which make good. Less than two years back, the writer saw Portia carnations shipped in to a Chicago commission house. Enough said.

Perhaps the slowest, the least business-like and the least up-to-date of our three classes are the men who both grow and retail their own stock. This is natural. In many cases they have been without competition. They have grown up with their surroundings and fallen into a good business among people who have had no chance to know what good stock is and meekly accept whatever is handed to them. They can force the sale of poor or ordinary stock and have gotten into the habit of growing that kind of stock and will tell you that "their trade won't pay for good stock." There is nothing more false than this. There is hardly a community in the land in which there are not a large class who will buy good stock and pay good prices when they are taught the difference. To be sure, there is everywhere a class who want cheap flowers, but with all our care, the best of us will have plenty of second grade stock and the markets from Maine to California are piled high with it, and through a good share of the year at prices less than the cost of growing. How these old mossbacks do squirm when a real live man opens up across the street, or in the next block, and how soon they find that their trade will pay for good stock and will go to the other fellow to get it.

The retail store man is, properly, not a florist at all, but a merchant, and if he adapts to his own needs the methods of successful retail merchants in other lines, he succeeds. If he doesn't he goes broke. The day of the man with a second-hand ice box, a cracked marble-topped pine counter, and a couple of bunches of flowers (bought on credit at double price by reason of the risk of non-payment), is gone. The retail flower merchant must have capital to-day. Good locations, fine fixtures and attractive conditions cost money. Ability to pay promptly is an essential in buying right. Advertising, no matter how it is done, costs money; and it is advertise, advertise and keep on advertising to get business; and do more advertising to hold it after you get it. No man can stand still in business nowadays. Every business must either grow larger or grow smaller and the man who finds his business stationary in volume must either mend his ways or get out while the getting out is good.

Much and endless discussion has gone on about the mournful subject of gluts in the market and how to avoid these direful calamities. Nonsense! They always have been and always will be, when dealing in perishable commodities. Why not put this old moth-eaten subject on the shelf and get out a brand new and live one, "How to make gluts profitable"? Here is the store fan's chance to even up with the grower for what the latter does to him at Christmas and other holiday times.

There is not a dry goods shop in the country that does not have a series of mark-down or bargain sales from year end to year end, and the bigger and more prosperous the shop, the bigger and more elaborate the sales. Have we not a great lesson to learn here? And how many of us have learned it? Few men are so wealthy as not to dearly love a bargain and no women. The bargain basement is found in all our "palatial dry goods emporiums." Why not in our palatial flower shops? Think about it.

Troubles That May Be Avoided.

The list of unavoidable troubles is a long one, but that of trials that may and should be avoided, and could be by proper foresight, is longer still. That "man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward" is true only in a measure, while some of the troubles and trials we have to undergo when looked back on in the light of subsequent experience prove to be wise lessons that we had to learn. All this and much more along the same line has been said many times before, of course, and the poor chap who is down and out or the other fellow who has made some serious blunder in his cultural detail is not always perhaps as thoughtful as he ought to be when he considers, or when sympathizing friends tell him that it is all for the best and he is simply learning a lesson that will be of incalculable benefit to him in the more or less dim and distant future. The future for him has such a cerulian hue that he doesn't need smoked glasses.

But to return to these troubles that can be avoided: Not so long ago we were called in to see a friend's batch of poinsettias that had "gone back on him." They were good plants in October, dwarf, leafy to the pots and very promising. But when we saw them again there was a cirlet of green leaves under the forming tracts and all the rest of the foliage had curled up and fallen. "Had they been allowed to get dry?" was the first question. "Well, they had been busy potting lilies" and "he guessed that Tom hadn't time to water them." There's the answer. Good stock that had taken four or five months of care and attention was neglected because a few 6-cent lily bulbs would otherwise have been in the boxes another few hours. Well, he has learned his lesson all right, but was certainly not very elated over it. Lubricating oil and water are not good mixers, and when they do partially mix and are pumped into a steam boiler in the form of returned condensation the effect on the boiler is not particularly good. This lesson cost a local florist $100 for repairs, but he has found out that waste oil and condensation water are better as far apart as possible. He was not nearly as thankful as he ought to have been at the time of the trouble. And so we could give instances in plenty of avoidable errors where a Mark Tapley-like attitude was not taken under the circumstances. But it would do no good and we would prefer advising readers to always keep a bright lookout ahead of time, and by constant care and watchfulness avoid the pitfalls in cultural business and other details that are always open to the unwary.

Forcing Lily of the Valley By Warm Water

Our attention is repeatedly called to the advantage of soaking lily of the valley pips in water of a temperature of 80° to 85° for 24 hours before planting. An advance of five to six days in the blooming period, as well as a far superior quality of flower and leaf.—Revue Horticole.

Scaline.

M. C. Ebel, head of the Aphine Manufacturing Company, is busily engaged in experimental work with a new product which his company expects to place on the market very shortly. He has named it "Scaline," the material being a combination insecticide and fungicide—a composition of oils and sulphur. It is intended for the destroying of the San Jose scale, the cottony maple aphid and other sap-sucking insects inhabiting fruit and ornamental trees, shrubs and hardy plants generally, and at the same time as a remedy for the control of the various fungi affecting trees and shrubbery. Mr. Ebel contends that his material can be applied as safely in the growing as in the dormant season. Tests made last summer on foliage and trees and plants in bloom showed no ill effects from the spray. If "Scaline" will do what is already claimed for it there is no doubt that a broad field is awaiting it.

The Motive for Orowing Flowers.

Paper read before the Nebraska State Florists' Association at Lincoln, Neb., by Lewis Henderson of Omaha, January 17, 1912.

Why we grow flowers, or what is our motive in growing them, has often puzzled my mind after a hard day's work with them, where the results seem so small, the leaves are dropping off, the sprouts coming blind with but few flowers, and outside the cold blasts are sweeping by, the elements rage with hail, snow and frost, and seem to have control of both heaven and earth. Why do we go to all this trouble and great expense for a few flowers? Of course you will say for the money which is received for them. But why do we obtain money for them? There is a much deeper sentiment in the cultivation or possession of flowers than the avaricious yearning for money.

The custom of using flowers at festivities or on other occasions for the expression of sentiment has existed for ages, but only during the last half century have they been cultivated to any great extent, for in former years they were gathered in meadows, dales and on hills where they were growing in their natural conditions in the several countries. Now we have plants that come from all parts of the world, gathered in the tropical, semi-tropical and temperate zones and under the same sun are brought out the beautiful lustre and colors that charm the eyes of man.

We remain awake all night to protect them from the cold blasts of winter that would freeze the tender buds; we feed them, we water them, we guard them against the attacks of insects and diseases. What do we do all this for? We do it to bring forth the beauty and fragrance of the flowers that they may express the sentiments we feel at the various occasions which occur during our life. There is nothing that appeals more to the heart of any man, no matter even if he be ever so hard a criminal, than a little flower in all its simplicity, beauty and fragrance as a token, for it is the most beautiful and innocent emblem of nature, recalling a mother's memory when she so dearly cared for him, or when he in childish glee tottered at her knee. There is a charm within the petals that speaks of a life beyond. From childhood's sunny morn to the mellow light of ripe old age, flowers are the token of love, the emblems of innocence and the ministers of happiness from the cradle to the grave. We use them to cheer the sick and those in distress, and many a time have I seen tears of joy and gratitude spring forth at the sight of a little bunch of flowers sent by a friend to one whose heart seemed to have been broken by sickness or life's struggle. As the poet says:

"Save not your kisses for my cold brow;
If you have favors, give them to me now."

We grow flowers to decorate and add charm to our homes, our parks, our boulevards, our drives, that we may receive inspiration from the most glorious and luxurious forms of nature. We grow them that we may scatter them to our friends. We grow them that we may inspire the wayward with aspirations to live a more beautiful life. There is nothing that inspires or induces one to commune more closely with nature and with God or softens the heart and soothes the wrath quicker or more than flowers. A young man and woman were courting, and as is usual had their love spat; they later met and she said, "I thank you for the flowers you sent me." She smiled and blushed and hung her head, and added, "I am sorry for the words that I spoke, but now that I know your heart is right I want you to forgive me." And of course he did, but as they talked, while walking under the shady bowers, he wondered who in the world sent her those flowers. Many another example of similar nature could be told where a bunch of flowers has softened the wrath and brought love, happiness and sunshine to the heart and in the home.

Go! gather a bunch of flowers,
Moist with the springs of crystal dew
That life's greeting will bring to you.

Bert Olney Canning Co.'s Greenhouses.

Every once in a while we run up against a new use for greenhouses. One day last week when we were visiting the Bert Olney Canning Co. at Oneida, N. Y., their superintendent said that they had just placed a contract with Lord & Burnham Co. for nine separate iron frame greenhouses each 33 x 150 feet, to be used for growing tomato plants in the spring of the year, and chrysanthemums in the fall. It seems that it has always been a difficult matter for the farmers who supply the canning company with tomatoes, to secure good sturdy plants early in the season. This has prompted the canning company to take the matter in their own hands and grow these plants for the farmers.

Five of these new houses will be erected at Albion, N. Y., and four at Medina. The sides of these houses are a special construction having a framework five feet high consisting of sash extending 28 1/4 inches below the eave plate and 24 inches of solid glazing below this, followed by six-inch base board below the solid glazing. It was constructed this way so that all possible light would be secured for young plants in beds. There will be two foremen in charge of the houses, one for growing tomatoes and the other for the chrysanthemums. T.

Society of American Florists.

I have been instructed by President Richard Vincent, Jr., to notify the directors of the S. A. F. to meet in Chicago March 13, at 10 a. m. The hotel where the meeting will be held to be announced later. The meeting is called for the purpose of making arrangements for the next convention which is to be held in that city in August and to transact any other business that may come properly before the meeting.

At this meeting of the board of directors, all arrangements, rules, rates, etc., are made for the next convention, and immediately after this meeting I will send out full particulars, diagrams, etc.

I publish this notice in reply to the many enquiries I am receiving regarding space. To the members outside of New York City I would say that if your secretary can be of any service to you in New York, do not hesitate to make any request. I will carry out any commission to the best of my ability.

JOHN YOUNG, Secy.

Interdiction of Italian Flowers in France.

Consternation reigns among the cut flower wholesalers of the Paris markets. Yesterday many of them were advised telegraphically by their shippers in the south of France and on the Italian Riviera that the French government had forbidden the importation of all cut flowers as well as all living plants from Italy. The fact was exact as inquiry at the head offices of the French customs administration showed, and the Paris and the southern, and indeed all European flower markets which usually provision through French shippers, are alike short of roses of the following varieties: Frau Karl Druschki, G. Nabonnaud, Louis Van Houtte, Safrano and Cecile Brunner.

The season has been far below normal in productiveness in southern France and the further shortage of a thousand to twelve hundred five kilo baskets in Paris and four times that quantity by the middlemen, or shippers, in the coast towns shows to what an extent Italy was a furnisher of roses which, to tell the truth, were usually sold as the product of the French Riviera. Attendant profits are likewise to be cut to a derisory level if the embargo is to continue. In 1910-11 a volume of affairs of something more than two and a half million francs was recorded, Germany (Berlin, Frankfurt and Hamburg) being the largest foreign buyer of cut flowers in French markets.

The interdiction has not only placed a ban upon the importation of Italian roses merely because of demands of "protection" by French growers for the very good reason that there is a commonly recognized shortage of the cheaper commercial varieties. For this reason supplies have for long been regularly drawn from the rose gardens of the Italian Riviera where their culture is on the same comparative intensive scale as is that of the carnation at Antibes and violets, narcissus and hyacinths at Hyeres, Ollioules and Toulon.

The "Service Physiologique" of the French Agricultural Department announces that the malady known as Diapres pentagona is supposed to have attacked most Italian vegetable, plant and flower products and that it is to prevent its introduction into France that all such are to be declared as contraband at the Italian frontier.

Chicago's Spring Flower Show.

The final premium list is being mailed this week. A new class has been added for the best display of sweet peas, silver and bronze medals being offered for first and second prizes.

President Richard Vincent, Jr., of the Society of American Florists, with the approval of Charles H. Totty, chairman of the National Flower Show committee, has authorized the offering of the silver and bronze medals of the Society of American Florists at the coming show for plants or flowers of American origin.

The executive committee of the Horticultural Society has decided to invite the directors of the Society of American Florists, who will be in session at Chicago during the flower show, March 12-17, to act as a jury of awards in judging all competitive classes.

An appropriation of $250 has been made for retail florists' exhibits, including table decorations, and its distribution, to be in non-competitive awards, has been placed in the hands of a committee consisting of George Asmus, Carl Cropp and Duncan A. Robertson.

Inspection and Quarantine Bills.

A copy of bill H. R. 18,000, introduced in the national house of representatives, January 15, 1912, by Representative Simmons, to regulate the importation and interstate transportation of nursery stock and the establishing and maintaining of quarantine districts for plant diseases and insect pests will be found on page 235 of this issue.

It will be seen on comparing this with the bill drafted by W. P. Stark and Prof. S. J. Hunter of the Western Association of Nurserymen, which appeared in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, issue of February 10, that it differs in many radical ways: The Federal Horticultural Commission is differently constituted; the United States and its possessions are included; instead of state or territorial officials, agents of the commission are to be advised and have control; the term "nursery stock" does not include "vegetable and flower seeds, bedding plants and other soft-wooded herbaceous plants, bulbs or roots," and the appropriation for the purpose of the act is materially increased.

The annual report of the Parking Commission of New Orleans, just received, briefly outlines the plan adopted for beautifying the city and contains the report of Superintendent Baker on the recently established nursery and care of the boulevards and trees of the city.

A. A. ARNOLD,

16-18-20-22 South Peoria Street,

CHICAGO.

Lancaster, Pa.

A meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Association was held February 15, with an attendance that filled the Chamber of Commerce rooms. H. D. Rohrer & Son exhibited some exceptionally fine white and yellow daisies and a vase of White Wonder that was far ahead of anything we saw in Detroit. Elmer Weaver and The Wheatland Aquarium & Greenhouse Co. each exhibited a vase of well-grown Mrs. C. W. Ward, which is a very popular variety in this section. Amos Rohrer of Strasburg exhibited a fine vase of Mrs. T. W. Lawson, a variety that he has grown continuously since its introduction, and with continuous success. Washington was shown in fine form by Albert M. Herr. The new daisy, Mrs. F. Sander, was exhibited by E. P. Hostetter of Manheim, and three extra fine vases of sweet peas by Chas. Weaver of Ronks, one vase being a selection of Earliest of All, a big improvement in color.

The paper of the evening by H. D. Rohrer was partly historical and partly cultural and was both interesting and instructive. He recalled their first investment in a new carnation, Heinze's White, in which they invested $20.00, at that time a big price, it proved a veritable gold mine, a later investment of $75.00 in Prosperity proved a veritable gold brick. In the cultural part he advised where it was not practical to change the soil each season in solid beds, to put a good coat of air slaked lime on the beds as soon as they are cleaned up and then allow them to dry thoroughly during the summer by this treatment he had used the same soil with success for ten years.

The paper brought forth a lively discussion. Beacon had some pretty hard raps for splitting, but as several were growing it without any splits it was decided that some did not know how to grow it. Mrs. C. W. Ward was declared very susceptible to an over supply of moisture either overhead or in the soil. White Wonder and Gloriosa were declared the coming carnations in their colors, and so on for several hours the discussion held forth, with a motion before adjournment to invite D. T. Connor to read a paper on greenhouse construction at the meeting of March 21.

Lancaster county has long enjoyed the distinction of being the garden spot of the United States; this association is going to try and make it the floral center of the United States for our specialties, carnations and geraniums, if we all have to get under the same greenhouse roof to do it.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Nashville, Tenn.

Trade has been more or less spasmodic since the holidays, sometimes coming on with a rush and then dropping down to almost dullness. St. Valentine's day helped out no little and the splendid stocks of flowers put on the market by the dealers met with a fine sale. Since the first of January sweet peas have been in the market. Violets are coming in more abundantly, while carnations and even roses have slacked up in blooming; but there is an abundance of all other kinds of stock. All the bulbous stock, hyacinths, both Roman and Dutch, narcissus, the Von Sion and Paper White and others may be had in abundance. Cinerarias, cyclamen and primulas are in their prime and blooming azaleas are gorgeous. The sale on St. Valentine's day comprised quantities of potted plants as well as cut flowers, and all the florists did a good and satisfactory business. Some of the prettiest conceits and combinations were made to please the fancy of the buyer. White azaleas threaded with lavender baby ribbons and the pots trimmed in a cover of the same shade were one idea and even the Primula obconica treated in this way was very beautiful. The windows of the floral stores were decorated in real valentine style with heart baskets, violet baskets and boxes, and a perfect riot of color mingling happily and artistically together. The uptown florists had all they could do in putting up and sending out their orders, and all say it was one of the best

St. Valentine's days they had ever had, far surpassing that of any previous year. There was an abundance of flowers and even some wholesaling was done to out of town florists.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Company had a superb stock on sale, everything one could think of or desire, and made splendid sales, calling in extra help to wait on the trade. Their display window was filled with potted azaleas, narcissi, carnations and even a vase of handsome orchids, the colors combined and arranged most artistically, with handsome gauze ribbons threading through all and looked like a large valentine ready to be sent out.

Leon Geny has taken possession of his handsome new home which he has just built on Twenty-second avenue, one of the fashionable thoroughfares of the city. It is a modern, up-to-date, two-story brick house with all modern conveniences, and has been handsomely furnished.

Geny Bros. cut ten thousand violets and sold them all, besides selling any quantity of potted azaleas and other plants. They had a fine supply of red carnations, a very popular valentine flower. Their potted azaleas were magnificent, and sold well.

Haury & Sons continue to prosper in their pretty new store and were well pleased with the valentine trade. They had, besides all the other various plants, Dutch hyacinths in pots that were very popular with their customers.

A MORE ABUNDANT SUPPLY.

The market begins to take on a spring like appearance, for with the warmer weather which has followed the long arctic spell the flowers have begun to come in in much larger quantities, especially the bulbous stock which makes the retail stores look like a spring garden. With the exception of roses, which are not yet in an over-abundant supply, all kinds of stock are being received in good quantities. Roses, however, have not yet responded to the warmer weather, and the receipts are easily sold. American Beauty is showing a gain and the receipts are larger, but Killarney, White Killarney and the other teas and hybrid teas are slow in coming into crop and the blooms that are received find a ready sale and the prices are held very firm. Carnations have quickly felt the warmer and brighter weather and the quantity has increased rapidly but the quality is superb, the counters at both the retail and wholesale stores being supplied with excellent flowers. Bulbous stock is beginning to be too plentiful, large quantities of tulips of all the leading varieties, both double and single, are received daily, and narcissus of all kind are in bountiful supply, the retail stores are featuring them in boxes and pans beautifully ornamented with harmonious accessories, one large window this week being filled with Von Sion narcissus which made a gorgeous display that caused every passer by to stop and admire them. Beside Von Sion there are Golden Spur, Trumpet Major and a few Emperors and Paper White and Orange Phoenix in good supply. Dutch hyacinths are also seen in quantity, both in pots and as cut flowers. Lily of the valley is also quite plentiful and the stores have some very finely grown pans of these nicely decorated on display. Lilies are in good supply and some blooms of splendid substance and size are to be had from the dealers handling them. Violets are a little too abundant and are offered at low prices. It is said that there were a million of these flowers received for St. Valentine's week, but many of the shipments were delayed and they reached the hands of the bargain hunters and were sold very cheap the last of the week. Orchids are in good supply and are featured extensively in all the best stores. Sweet peas have been received in large quantities and some beautiful long-stemmed flowers of all the different colors are to be had. Mignonette, marguerites, calendulas, Roman hyacinths, lupines, antirrhinums and stocks both single and double are now daily offerings. Asparagus and adiantum are none too plentiful but smilax is in good supply. Hardy ferns are still good property and the prices are held very firm. The supply of moss is very low, and the shipments are not large. The prices in some lines are not at all stable and some of the smaller buyers are wondering how the larger stores are advertising at less than they have to pay at wholesale.

NOTES.

The Fleischmann Floral Co. celebrated this week their twelfth anniversary by a grand sale of beautiful floral products. The store was artistically arranged with fine specimen plants of azaleas, nicely grown lily of the valley, bulbous stock and other plants were advantageously shown. The window displays were magnificent. One was an arrangement of miniature lakes with banks of moss and white limestones, among which were displayed beautiful orchids and other flowers and specimen blooming plants. The other window was a gorgeous display of finely grown pots of Von Sion narcissus nicely ornamented with harmonious pot covers.

Bassett & Washburn are still showing a large quantity of fine lilies and are commencing to cut more plentifully in Killarney and White Killarney roses. An automatic telephone has just been installed and the number is 47-314.

Johnson & Chronis' large plate glass windows were blown out in the blizzard of February 21.

E. E. Pieser the "Peony King," was surprised as well as delighted the other day when an acquaintance presented him with a Madam Calot peony that was nearly in full bloom, and which came from the Geo. Wittbold Co.'s greenhouses at Edgebrook. Mr. Pieser, as everyone knows, deals largely in peonies and his gambling every spring is the talk of the trade. He has for some time been seeking information in regard to a location where the conditions would be such that these flowers could be successfully grown so as to bloom in July. If any one knows for an absolute certainty of such a place he will find it to be to his interest if he would communicate with the Peony King immediately.

T. E. Waters, with Pochlmann Bros. Co., has returned from a successful business trip to New Orleans, La. Mr. Waters reports having had a most enjoyable time and feels highly elated over the fact that he had a special invitation from Mayor Behrman and U. J. Virgin of the southern metropolis to view the grand Mardi Gras festivities, which is being held this week, with the city officials and other notables.

The Des Plaines Floral Co. is filling a large number of orders for rooted carnation cuttings of Washington, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Beacon, White Enchantress, May Day and Sangamo. Blewitt & Prickett, the proprietors, have a justly-earned reputation for giving satisfaction and have every reason to feel proud of their long list of regular customers.

Buchbinder Bros., 518-20 Milwaukee avenue, manufacturers of florists' refrigerators, are receiving many inquiries from the trade in regard to their line and from present indications it looks as if the company is going to have a banner year.

Wm. Duntemann says that violets brought a pretty good price this season and that on the whole his returns were very satisfactory. Of course, this does not include the returns for the shipments of the present week.

The Alpha Floral Co. enjoyed a very brisk trade last Friday, February 16, when they furnished a lot of plants and cut flowers for the Chinese New Year decorations in many of the local chop suey restaurants.

Anthon Then and wife left February 20 for Magnolia Springs, Ala., on a four weeks visit. Mr. Then says that the mineral water at this famous resort is the best remedy obtainable for kidney troubles.

The Leedle Floral Co. of Springfield, O., has its spring price list well distributed in this city and many of the florists seem to think that their "Declaration of Independence" will bring them much trade.

H. Van Gelder is breaking in his new auto during his spare moments, and a magnificent maroon body Buick car can be seen scurrying around the wholesale cut flower district this week.

John Kruchten is offering something choice in gardenias, roses, carnations and lilies and is prepared to fill all orders in these and other seasonable cut flowers.

The Briggs Floral Co., a branch of the Briggs House Florists, sold their lease and closed their store on East Van Buren street Friday, February 16.

Paul M. Bryant says that E. H. Hunt's spring catalog is now in the hands of the printers and will be ready for mailing soon. Send for one.

Mrs. Louis Winterson and Mrs. W. P. Kyle, who were recently operated upon, are getting along nicely and early recoveries are looked for.

Chas. Balliff says that Fischer Bros. of Evanston are enjoying a fine business and that the St. Valentine's day trade was very satisfactory.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is offering a fine assortment of stock, with choice carnations and violets in very large quantities.

H. N. Bruns is still talking about that European trip, but has not yet decided on as to just when he will leave.

Mrs. Evans, accompanied by her husband, visited her many friends in the local wholesale market this week.

Ed. Vitter, formerly with the J. B. Deamud Co., is now with Paul Blome & Co., North Clark street.

H. C. Blewitt is cutting a fine grade of Christmas pink sweet peas and they are selling very readily.

Louis Visas says that he is going to open another store in Duluth, Minn., at 110 Superior street.

Winterson's Seed Store reports the arrival of a car load of cannas this week.

A sure sign of spring. Archie Spencer with a new straw hat.

Louis Wittbold took his first degree in masonry this week.

Fritz Bahr's youngest child is ill with typhoid fever.

CHICAGO.

The George Wittbold Co. is enjoying a busy season at its greenhouses in Edgebrook, where the demand for bedding plants, palms, ferns and Easter forcing stock is exceedingly heavy. The German ivies, achyranthes, ageratum, coleus, marguerites, pansies and chrysanthemum plants and cuttings are in fine condition and are ready to be shipped. Lilies, azaleas, rhododendrons, spireas and other stock for Easter forcing is having a good call and it is expected that the entire list will be ordered up before very long.

The American Beauties and other roses that Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting are of fine quality as are also the sweet peas, orchids and other seasonable stock. This firm is now quite at home in its new surroundings where it is much better prepared to take care of its ever increasing business.

A. Henderson & Co. have leased a room 40x60 feet in the old historic Fort Dearborn building and will use it for storage purposes. A. Miller has returned from a successful eastern trip and is now calling on his local customers.

N. J. Wieter, Joseph Trinz, W. H. Kidwell, Harry Lubliner and George Asmus have returned from Columbus, O., where they attended the funeral of Wm. Graff which was held last Tuesday, February 20.

The trade was greatly shocked and grieved last Friday, February 16, to hear of the sudden death of Wm. Graff, the well known and popular retailer of Columbus, O. It was only a few weeks ago that he consulted Dr. Billings here and then complained of being a very sick man and went so far as to tell his more intimate friends that he would not recover. He was a very heavy buyer in the local market and was very popular with the trade and leaves a great many friends to mourn his loss. Several prominent local florists attended the funeral, which was held in Columbus, O., last Tuesday, February 20.

Wendland & Keimel are all through with glazing their new range and are now making preparations for planting. Seven of the new houses will be planted to Killarney and White Killarney and it looks as if E. C. Amling Co.'s Killarney Kid will have to get an assistant to help him handle the large supply of stock from these and the other ten houses that Wendland & Keimel will have devoted to growing of these flowers.

Frank Johnson, the A. L. Randall Co.'s efficient sales manager, has returned from a few days' stay in St. Louis and is again seen at the store as busy as ever. Mr. Johnson is receiving some very complimentary letters from his customers, who say that the choice prepared magnolia leaves that his firm is handling are exceptionally fine and more than satisfactory.

The Chicago Carnation Co.'s baseball team, under the able management of Peter Olsem, has already organized for the season and is now framing up a schedule. The boys are going to entertain the visitors at the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association in Joliet with a dance, and cordially invite the trade and their ladies to attend.

One of Thos. McCauley's pet monkeys got out of the cage the other day and made things pretty interesting around the Riverbank greenhouses, besides swallowing his wife's gold watch. Mr. McCauley was seen in one of the local jewelry shops last Tuesday looking for a suitable timepiece to replace the lost watch.

Otto W. Frese, general manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association's store, was greatly missed on Monday when he was called home by the serious illness of his wife. Mrs. Frese is, however, feeling much better at this writing, with an early and complete recovery looked for.

J. B. Deamud's father-in-law, H. H. Wilder, superintendent of the mechanical department of the south park system, suffered a heavy loss on February 18 when his residence was almost totally destroyed by fire. J. B. and his son Wilder worked like beavers, but their efforts were in vain.

John P. Weiland of the firm of Weiland & Risch has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his mother, aged 64, whose death occurred last Friday, February 16. The funeral was held from the home of Peter Risch in Evanston, and the interment was in St. Henrick's cemetery.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are featuring a large assortment of bulbous flowers and are offering some exceptionally fine tulips, daffodils, lilies and jonquils. Mr. Vaughan says that business is very good and that both the local and shipping trade is very satisfactory.

C. L. Washburn, president of the Illinois State Florists' Association, and A. T. Pyfer completed the final arrangements at Joliet on February 21 for the meeting of their organization, which will be held in that city on March 5-6.

John Starrett says that the Hotel La Salle has built a 20-foot orchestra pit in the main dining room, and that he is now obliged to keep this looking beautiful with cut flowers and decorative stock.

Henry Wittbold is getting things in shape at his new store in the building which Percy Jones now occupies, and will now make this the headquarters for his decorating business.

Emil A. Danz says that he is a regular democrat and that he is riding in the Roger Sullivan wagon. His friends are advising him to be careful or he will soon be falling off.

Chas. H. Zapfe, who recently went into the retail business, arranged the decorations for a large wedding in the Florentine room in the Congress Hotel last week.

A. Lange, the busy East Madison street florist had his hands more than full this week with funeral work and some very artistic designs were arranged.

L. Hoekner, better known as "Stogie," is going to use the picture screens in the North avenue theaters for advertising his Clybourne avenue store.

Nick Munsen is very busy these days with funeral and wedding work.

Business the past two weeks has been exceptionally good, in fact you might say great, with just enough stock of first class quality to fill the demand. Everything in the way of flowers is selling well. There seems to be no favorites, violets, sweet peas, roses, carnations and bulbous flowers having many friends; in fact, there has been no oversupply of any one flower this season. Valentine business was no doubt better this year than ever before, and a great many calls came in for blooming plants, tulips and daffodils in pans sold well. Funeral work was also very heavy the past week. Every florist had just about all he could well manage. This is the season for clubs, societies and annual banquets, and many are using flowers this season that never thought of such a thing in the years gone by. One club spent $25 for table decorations that claimed they had never before in their history spent as much as a nickel on flowers before. Things seem much brighter than at one time last fall.

CLUB MEETING.

Uncle John Temple entertained the Tri-City Florists' Club at the Outing Club last Thursday evening in grand style, and many of the boys were on hand to partake of the goodies that were furnished. The meeting was made more interesting than usual by a number of the members bringing an exhibit of the newer sorts of carnations, seedlings and other flowers of the later introductions. Nominations of officers took place, and as there are now several members running for every office on the list, a lively time will no doubt take place at the next meeting. Greenhouse construction was the evening's topic, and a number of interesting facts were brought out as to the cause of bursting iron gutters, upheaving by frost, etc., etc, and to the latest and improved mode of building, the advantages gained, etc. The annual banquet was also a timely topic, and it was decided to hold this event at the Outing club, Davenport, on March 28, the committee of arrangements being C. O. E. Boehm, chairman, Wm. Goos, H. Pauli, John Temple and Theo. Ewaldt. The committee will try and secure a noted speaker for the evening, and dancing and other entertainments will be provided. The committee expects to make this the grandest affair ever attempted by the society. After other routine matters were disposed of the club adjourned into the dining room, where a hot supper was in waiting, the table being elaborately decorated with spring flowers and greens. A fine surprise was sprung on ex-President Wm. Knees when the manager of the Outing club presented him with a beautiful bedroom stein, filled to overflowing with the good old Mississippi bubbles. A jolly hour was spent. It surely does one's heart good to see the good fellowship displayed among the members. Henry Gaethje extended an invitation to meet with him on March 21, which was immediately accepted. Adjournment was then in order, and a happy bunch left for their many happy homes.

NOTES.

Several members of the club will make a trip into Chicago to attend the flower show, March 12. A. Anderson will head the delegation and will try and bring a few of the boys to our annual banquet.

Henry Pauli was so pleased with his auto delivery that he has purchased another, a much larger and more expensive one.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

At the meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society held February 9, much important business was transacted, including the preliminary acceptance of a new constitution and by-laws, which will not be effective until after confirmation at a subsequent meeting. The center table was filled with beautiful blooming plants of Primula obconica, grown by J. A. Weber, for which he was awarded a diploma; and of Cineraria hybrida and two plants of stellata, grown by Alfred Cebelius, for which he received honorable mention; the judges being Wm. H. MacKenzie of Bristol, Francis Roulier and Alex. Cumming, Jr., of Hartford.

Paul M. Hubbard, Bristol, and Ira H. Butterfield, Hartford, were elected to membership.

A leading feature of the evening was the address of President John F. Huss concerning conifers and evergreens, and their use in landscape gardening, as well as their propagation. This is a subject on which Mr. Huss is very much "at home," he having planted many thousands of these trees in New York, Lenox, Newport, Long Branch, Philadelphia, etc. Thirty years ago he came to Hartford, and planted, before the general awakening on this subject about here, the grand conifers, hemlock hedges and rhododendrons on the grounds of Dr. G. P. Davis, on Woodland street, and similar private places. He grows at present, on the sumptuous estate of James J. Goodwin, sixty-five varieties, specimen branches of which were exhibited on our display tables. The speaker eloquently set forth the value of this class of trees, especially for winter landscapes, when the dreariness and apparent death of the deciduous trees is so much in evidence. He paid tributes to the work of J. Wieder-mann, the noted landscape artist, who laid out our beautiful Cedar Hill cemetery, the Hartford Retreat grounds, and other important places in and around the Capital City. He also spoke appreciatively of the work being done by W. W. Hunt and C. S. Sierman, two Hartford nurserymen, in beautifying many private grounds by the growing use of various sorts of conifers or other evergreens. Concluding the lecture, Mr. Huss outlined the methods of propagation of this class of plants, mostly from seed, but sometimes from cuttings. This was the first opportunity that our members have had to be authoritatively informed on this interesting topic, and a warm vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Huss, who carried us into many parts of the world in our imaginations.

At our next meeting, February 23, we are promised an address by Walter Angus, of Chapinville, on the chrysanthemum and its culture. Mr. Angus has staged some of the finest specimens of this flower at our exhibitions, and we anticipate a valuable contribution to our stock of knowledge on the subject. GEORGE W. SMITH, Sec'y.

A GOOD ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

St. Valentine's day brought an unprecedented amount of business due to the growing importance of this annual event to florists. No considerable amount of advertising was done to attract trade, but all were well prepared with a variety of attractive effects, chiefly in flowering plants, daintily fixed with ribbon, pot covers and pussy willows. Heart-shaped boxes were used to some extent for small flowers such as sweet peas, violets and lily of the valley, and added much to the florists' efforts to distinguish the day, and popularize the use of flowers for this occasion. The growers, too, awake to the prospective demand of the day, were well equipped with sufficient stock, to meet all requirements. The weather conditions were largely responsible for the success of the day, for it signalled the break-up of the intensely cold weather by moderating to an extent that made it unnecessary for heated delivery wagons, a factor that greatly aided the abnormal amount of deliveries of the day. Of all flowers sold, violets were easily in the lead, and the immense stock on hand, disappeared completely with the end of the day's business. Some of the stores were also deluged with funeral work, that required the force to work nearly all night to complete. Happily, however, no scarcity of flowers, except possibly roses to some extent, was felt, which fact helped considerably in making the day the conspicuous success it was.

NOTES.

The Florists' Club meeting, Monday evening, February 19, was not as well attended as the subject under consideration would amply justify, but those

GOOD CALL FOR DECORATIONS.

The business of the past week, along the lines of decoration work, was very good. At some of the retail stores which do a large business in decorating it was said that it had been the best week of the season. There is plenty of good stock to supply all demands. It is true that occasionally a dealer has an order for something that he cannot immediately lay his hands on, but such incidents constantly occur in business and are rather a sign of providence or excessive caution in buying than of scarcity. At this time when there is much call for the very best stock in orchids and roses, there is sometimes a little inconvenience in filling a hurry order. The local supply of orchids is limited and it takes a little time to get them from New York or Philadelphia. One local firm of growers keep up a very fair supply of American Beauty roses, but first class stock of the Killarneys and Richmond is not grown in Washington or anywhere near it. This is not intended to belittle the work of the local growers; doubtless they do the best they can under existing conditions, but they cannot show the quality of bloom and stem produced by the northern growers. Thus, the prices of really first class stock may be at what would appear a high figure, while inferior grades are practically going a-begging. Just now there is great complaint about the quality of bulb stock such as tulips and jonquils. The growers say that it is not selling; the retailers say that it is no good. It is a fact that many of the tulips and jonquils are very inferior. Carnations and sweet peas are becoming quite plentiful and some stores are retailing carnations at 50 cents per dozen. Sweet peas are going very cheap. St. Valentine's day business was very good in cut flowers; nothing extraordinary, but a little above the average daily business. The cold weather has now broken, the temperature rising to 60°. A heavy rain began falling February 18.

NOTES.

J. H. Small & Sons had the decoration for the second Gridiron club dinner of the season, on the night of February 17. The decorations were elaborate, a very notable feature being a bunch of 300 American Beauty roses appropriately arranged around the "gridiron." Other features of the scheme were carried out in proportion. Among the guests at the dinner was Albert Small of New York, a member of the firm of decorators. Seen later at the store, Mr. Small was optimistic, as he always is, regarding the condition of business. Asked about recent daring robberies on the streets of New York, he was jocular and said that it was even getting unsafe for rich florists and newspaper men to walk on Broadway.

Among the many fine decorations which Geo. H. Cooke has recently executed at Rauscher's a very notable one was for the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Louis P. Seibold. In receiving, Mr. and Mrs. Seibold stood under a beautiful wedding bell, in the decoration of which oncidiums, tulips and other gold shaded flowers were used. Among those present was Chas. L. Seibold of Baltimore, a nephew of the principals in the event, and well known among florists.

The Australian government has sent forty boys to this country, presumably to have them imbibe American ideas. The Chamber of Commerce of this city has taken them under its patronage while they are here. William F. Gude, an ex-president of the chamber, took six of the boys to his home and entertained them on February 18. This

A LARGE ST. VALENTINE'S TRADE.

The business on St. Valentine's day was one of the largest this market has ever enjoyed. All flowers appropriate for this day cleaned up fairly well. About the only thing left over in any quantity was double violets and, considering the large number of these sold, the amount left on hand was not large. Sweet peas were cleaned up quickly and have been selling well ever since. The supply, however, has been coming in so strong that the demand can scarcely keep pace with it. The carnation supply, too, continues very strong, the white ones clean up regularly and the offerings of Enchantress are very large and have been selling nicely, but the darker shades do not move as well as the lighter ones. Roses continue on the short side of the market, but judging from the slow but steady increase in the cut they will, within the present fortnight, be in sufficient supply. American Beauties are already arriving in greater quantity and in good variety as to lengths. The supply of Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, February 11, President J. F. Johnson in the chair. A circular was read from the New York Florists' Club requesting the appointment of two delegates to attend a conference to be held at Ithaca. After some discussion J. F. Johnson and James Duthie were appointed to attend same. Walter Mackinley was elected to active membership and there was one application. The judges appointed to examine the exhibits were J. Ingraham, J. McQueen and A. McKendrie. J. Eversole was awarded cultural certificate for a fine specimen plant of gardenia and honorable mention for a vase of gardenias. Frank Petrocia, honorable mention for two plants of Primula malacoides. The society's prizes were awarded as follows: Six gardenias, George Augey, first; 12 mushrooms, J. Everatt, first; 25 sprays of freesia, J. MacDonald, first. It was decided to have the fall chrysanthemum show on October 29-30, and that the profits for the same be given to the Nassau Hospital at Mineola, L. I.

Mrs. Townsend of Oyster Bay offers a silver cup for best collection of outdoor roses, to be won six times, the same to be competed for at the fall shows. The thanks of the society were voted Mrs. Townsend. S. Trepass and E. Brown were appointed to represent the society at the annual dinner of the Yonkers Horticultural Society. The exhibits for next meeting will be roses, cauliflowers and cinerarias.

The society held a very enjoyable eucher and dance February 15, about 200 being present. It was a great success financially and otherwise, and likely to become an annual affair.

With a few days of sunshine and the weather moderating considerably, stock has come in in increased quantities. Roses of all grades are more plentiful, carnations are in larger supply and bulbous stock of all kinds is very abundant. Easter lilies and callas are moving nicely, the supply, however, exceeding the demand. Sweet peas are a little short of the call. Violets, lily of the valley and adiantum are in good demand for corsage work. Every florist reports an excellent St. Valentine's business; there were not enough violets and pink roses obtainable to fill orders on this day. Greens of all kinds seem more plentiful. Some very good Jerusalem cherries are on the market for Washington's birthday at very moderate prices.

NOTES.

The Jones & Russell Co. report a good run of funeral work the past week, in addition to several large receptions which required a quantity of long-stemmed Pink Killarney and American Beauty roses.

St. Valentine's week was marked by good weather, a fairly plentiful supply of stock and a demand which cleaned it up fairly well. The volume of business was as good and probably a little more than last year. Violets were in heavy demand and sold out clean. Good roses next in demand and carnations holding their own was about the way the trade ran. Daffodils, lily of the valley, etc., moved nicely. Potted stock in blooming plants found good sale, especially pans of hyacinths and daffodils. A fairly steady run of funeral work has kept the trade interested and stocks are pretty well cleaned up.

CLUB MEETING.

The regular meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held February 12, President Dunbar presiding. The invitation from the New York Florists' Club to participate in a conference of florists' clubs to be held at Ithaca was received and Fred Vick and E. R. Fry were appointed as delegates to attend the conference and W. T. Logan and E. B. Ogstend were named as alternates. George Arnold made an address on "Perennials" and A. Edwin Crockett reviewed the "Flower Shows of 1909 and 1910." After Mr. Crockett's address a committee of ten, headed by Charles H. Vick was instructed to report at the next meeting upon the advisability of holding a show next fall. Preliminary steps were also taken toward holding a banquet.

AN INCREASE IN SUPPLY.

There is a perceptible increase in the quantity of stock coming in, particularly roses, the crops seeming to feel the impetus of the increased sunshine of the past few days and the cut is much larger. Some very choice Killarneys and White Killarneys are seen, all of which seem to find a market at good prices. American Beauties are more in evidence, but still very scarce. The fancy sorts such as Mrs. Taft, Melody, Prince de Bulgarie, etc., are distributed in small quantities, but are not much of a factor. Carnations appear at their best, very fine blooms of Mrs. C. W. Ward, Pink Delight, Gloriosa and other newer sorts finding a ready sale. Mrs. C. W. Ward is now the standard dark pink and Gloriosa bids fair to hold the lead as the best light or shell pink. Sweet peas are next in importance, the supply is all that can be desired, long stemmed stock in all colors being seen in abundance and the commission men say there is a growing demand with all buyers for these lovely flowers. Violets, both single and double, are now at their height and find a fair demand. The lily of the valley production being in few hands, comes into the market ordinarily about as required, any extra demand, however, caused by several large funerals, together of which of course there is little notice, causes a great scurrying at the last moment and there is at times not enough to go around. Cattleyas are plentiful and gardenias scarcer, they seeming to be off crop. Bulbous stock, particularly daffodils, are too plentiful, the best price of these is $2 per hundred and in large quantities the price is considerably lower. All kinds of greens are scarce, adiantum is all sold before it arrives and the market cleans up every day on asparagus sprays. Mignonette sells up close as does snapdragon, which is scarce and high.

NOTES.

The plant men are keeping the stores well supplied with azaleas, rhododendrons, hyacinths and other blooming stock. At W. K. Harris' it looks like a little Easter, there is such a complete assortment on hand. All sizes and varieties of azaleas and choice rhododendrons are seen in fine flower. A feature here is the two large houses of shamrocks, over 70,000 pots, more we venture to say than is grown by all the rest of the trade in the country put together. A visitor March 20 would fall to see a pot of this stock so perfect is the system of selling and handling this novelty. The great bulk of this larger stock is grown to order for department stores who give it away to their customers and quantities are shipped out of town. Large orders are being forwarded even now to men who grow it on for their home trade.

The Leo Niessen Co. are getting quite a few American Beauties but which find a bunch of orders, always ready for the shipments before they arrive. Mr. Niessen says as he goes about their elegant new salesroom, he wonders how they did such a large business in their Arch street store, as here with twice the room, ten times the light and all the other added conveniences, they are at times cramped and find their tables all occupied when getting out orders, which only goes to show how their business is growing.

Since the reform city administration came into power, there was a readvertisement for bids for planting the city squares and on the one item of privet in the revised bids made by the original bidder, there was a cut from seven to four cents per plant which made a difference in the total of $16,000. Is it any wonder that city contractors grow financially mighty when such profits are annually handed out to be divided among the powers that be?

Wonder what there is new, down in Porto Rico, with W. K. Harris, Julius Roehrs and Robert Craig on the job? There must be something doing—a new dracena or perhaps a pandanus with thornless edges, or a lily that never shows disease, the latter would surely be a boon to the grower.

J. W. Colflesh's Sons have their work nicely systematized and a splendid stock is seen here. Azaleas are grown in quantity, cinerarias are also a feature, one large house being filled with a choice strain of these showy plants. Bulbous stock is also grown in quantity.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. say that although the business of February in the stores appears to have been rather druggy, yet they have found a market for all good stock at satisfactory prices, a good shipping demand keeping the market well balanced.

Edward Reid, whose motor is always on the job for early and late orders, finds his customers seem to appreciate the efforts he makes to get the best stock together and he has no kick coming. Choice sweet peas are one of his leaders.

Violets, both single and double, are leaders along with the Princeton rose at Berger Bros. Their business is expanding to fit the new store which grows more satisfactory to them every day.

Godfrey Aschman has a very fine lot of azaleas. Primula obconica and begonias, araucarias are as usual a feature, in fact, nowhere else can such a stock be seen. He looks forward to a large Easter trade.

Alfred Campbell is right in it with his adiantum, which is now about the scarcest thing in the market. K.

New York Notes.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are already planning to make more room in the building a part of which they now occupy. J. C. Silbert, who is the manager here, states that business has been so much larger than he expected that he has not had time to send out the announcements to the local trade as he expected to, but as this house is so centrally located and all the best dealers are all readers of the AMERICAN FLORIST and keep posted as to "Who's who," this is hardly necessary.

President Polykranus and the committee in charge of the Greek American Florists' Association ball are desirous that every one should remember the date and place, Wednesday evening, February 28, Terrace Gardens. Everybody is promised an enjoyable evening, so leave your troubles and shop and bring your wife or sweet-heart and have a dance is the request of the committee.

The approach of Lent no longer has the terrors for the commission men as in days gone by, and each year it becomes more noticeable that, with probably the exception of the first two or three days, no change is noticed and business is better if anything than it was before.

Philip F. Kessler, on the floor with the Cut Flower Exchange, has been receiving very heavy shipments of Golden Spur narcissus, one grower sending in about five thousand daily, and as the quality of these is very fine, they clean up quickly.

A. Moltz announces that almost all the available space has been taken on his floor in the Coogan building, the latest to acquire tables being Siebricht & Siebricht, John J. Perkins and James Hart.

Owing to the serious illness of a member of his family, Prof. John Craig of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., will be compelled to be in town a few weeks. Y.

Boston.

We are having quite a breathing spell of milder weather, the thermometer registering 40° above. This has made quite a difference in the market, although prices are about the same, yet there is a healthier tone and the glut which was experienced last week has passed. The quality of all the stock is still good, and with milder weather we may expect an increase in the cut, and hope that the increase in the sales will be in proportion. Glass, at present, is lower than it has ever been in this section. MAC.

A GOOD ST. VALENTINE'S TRADE.

From the severest zero weather to almost a balmy, spring day is the change which we have had the last week. Flowers have been as plentiful as trade demanded. The funeral of an ex-mayor last week gave several of the florists orders for very choice flowers; among them was a blanket of carnations, violets and lily of the valley, the latter flowers as a center. Valentine's day was good in every way for the florists who prepared for it. Each year the demand for flowers increases due to the energetic florists calling attention to the fact that flowers are a fit and proper thing to send to mother, wife or sweetheart, and this year was no exception, sales being, I think, larger than last year. It is not the box of cut flowers to the wife or the corsage to the sweetheart alone but the plant artistically trimmed or in a basket with proper lining that is a lasting gift to mother, sister, wife or sweetheart. Why should the hand painted valentine have a preference over nature in flowers when properly arranged? And to increase the sale it is up to the wide awake florist to let the people know what they can get, and it is surprising how the unthinking respond to the gentle reminder that Valentine's day is a good time to send flowers to anyone.

CLUB MEETING.

The last meeting of the Florists' Club was very interesting, the paper of F. C. W. Brown on "Salesmanship" was very instructive, more particularly to those in the retail trade, while the paper of President McClure on cypads was equally interesting to the greenhouseman and also gave the one with a store and greenhouse combined an idea of what can be done with plants planted in a greenhouse that will give effect and not in any way injure the plants. A visit by more florists, both greenhouse and store man, might be profitable, even if they think they know it all, they may get one idea at the meeting about arranging the plant in the greenhouse or the cut flowers in the store. A few hours once a month is not a loss if you get only one idea. The nominations for the officers for the ensuing year were made as follows: For president, Wm. Legg, W. H. Grever; for vice-president, F. C. W. Brown, Edward Stroh; for treasurer, Joseph Streit; for secretary, E. D. Savage; for financial secretary, Charles Sandiford; nominations were also made for trustees and all are eligible excepting those nominated for other offices. The communication from the New York Florists' Club was received and the secretary instructed to answer it, signifying the co-operation of the Buffalo club in forming a state organization, also the arranging of a committee from Buffalo to meet at the place designated for organization. The report of the committee for flower shows will be made at the annual meeting which will be held on the first Tuesday in March. The election of officers, banquet and a good paper will be the features. Should any grower have any flowers that he would like inspected by the craft he can send them to W. F. Kasting Co., 385 Ellicott street, where they will receive proper care and be exhibited that evening.

Lincoln's birthday is not looked upon as a busy day with the florists. This year proved the exception at least to one. He telephoned to the store and the only audible words which were heard was "Hi, there! It is a girl!" CONDITIONS IMPROVING.

Market conditions, while still very unfavorable, are not as bad as last week. Weather conditions have been much more favorable, permitting the dealers to clear out to the street men the great quantity of carnations, violets and bulbous stock which had been accumulating for a week or ten days. Roses have done decidedly better and there has been an increase in the call for lily of the valley and lilies. Smilax and asparagus are also moving better. Taken altogether, the market is in much healthier condition, though the advance in prices has not been marked. As usual the top grade of Mme. Chatenay, Richmond, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mrs. Taft, My Maryland and the finer quality of Killarney are quickly disposed of. There is still only a limited supply of yellow roses in the market. American Beauties have continued to advance in price, but the supply is limited; that is, the supply of good blooms that will be handled by the retailers who are willing to pay a good price to secure good flowers. All kinds of prices prevail on carnations, but outside of the regular orders, which use up only a small percentage of the receipts, the average prices obtained are very low. Orchids are still plentiful, but the prices have a downward tendency. There is probably an exception with Dendrobium formosum, for which there has been a heavy call. Gardenias are doing better, and those fortunate enough to have good quality flowers of these have no difficulty in finding a ready market for them. In bulbous flowers the yellow tulips, Golden Spur and Von Sion narcissus have done slightly better. Sweet peas as a general rule are not of as good quality as they have been, or the better quality are not so much in evidence, but as with everything else the shipments of short-stemmed, poor colored flowers are moved with difficulty. Freesia is coming in in large quantities, but meets with only fair sale. Violets are clearing out, but at exceptionally low prices. Lilac, mignonette, callas, adiantum and daisies are in sufficient supply to satisfy all demands.

February 19—The weather is all that can be desired and sales are very heavy, but there are no changes in quotations.

NOTES.

The annual dinner of the Greater New York Florists' Association took place Thursday, February 15, and was largely attended. In the absence of D. Y. it was not his first attempt as toastmaster. After the dinner the tables were removed and dancing was indulged in. There were a great many visitors, including Frederick Marquardt, president of the New Jersey and New York Plant Growers' Association, and President Joseph A. Manda, of the New York Florists' Club. Short addresses were made by Joseph A. Manda, A. L. Miller, J. H. Pepper, J. A. Shaw, A. J. Guttman, George Crawbuck, Charles Weber, John Young and others. The evening was a most pleasant one and a success in every way.

Alex. McConnell had the order Wednesday for the decorations for the wedding of the daughter of James B. Regan of the Hotel Knickerbocker. The wedding was held in the Cathedral and was the first marriage performed by His Eminence Cardinal Farley since his elevation. The decorations were on a most elaborate and generous scale, and thousands upon thousands of long-stemmed pink roses and lilies were used, the pink roses being mostly Killarneys. This was probably one of the largest orders of the season and was carried out in Mr. McConnell's usual good style. This order only gives an idea of the vast quantity of stock in this market. Andrew Scott, the buyer for Mr. McConnell, obtained all this stock in the open market, and yet it seemed to hardly make an impression on the visible supply.

By acquiring the large range of greenhouses of 85,000 square feet of glass at Bedford Hills, N. Y., Moore, Hentz & Nash will have a very valuable acquisition another year to their already very extensive business, and if the same quality of flowers are produced by Henry Hentz, Jr., who will have the direction of the plant, as he produces on his place in Madison, N. J., the wisdom of this purchase will readily be seen.

The condition of Charles Millang, who is in the Flushing Hospital, Long Island, suffering from a very serious automobile accident, is reported as being much improved, and his friends are anxiously awaiting his return to his business, where his cheerful disposition and entertaining ways have been greatly missed. Mr. Millang's business is being conducted by a very efficient force during his enforced absence.

It is surprising the great interest that is being manifested in the annual dinner and twenty-fifth anniversary of the New York Florists' Club, with the affair over a month off. Secretary Charles Schenck of the dinner committee announces that fifty applications for tickets have been received.

Wallace R. Pierson of Cromwell, Conn., was a visitor during the week, returning from his visit to E. Towell, Hillside, Pa., of whom he purchased the entire stock of Mr. Towell's new red rose. As Mr. Pierson's judgment is very keen in matters of this kind, this rose must be a good one.

Already the store and greenhouses of Wm. A. Kessler have the appearance of Easter, being well stocked up with a fine display of azaleas, marguerites, Dutch hyacinths, lilacs and lilies in pots. This house also handles small ferns in flats and pots by the hundreds of thousands.

Schedules of the coming National Flower Show are being sent out as rapidly as possible by Charles H. Totty, chairman, and John Young, secretary of the National Flower Show committee, and should be in the hands of all possible exhibitors this week.

M. C. Ford, 121 West Twenty-eighth street, in addition to the fine supply of carnations grown by Henry Hession, is receiving a fine line of roses, the American Beauties and My Marylands being especially fine.

Harry A. Bunyard covered himself with glory as toastmaster at the recent dinner of the Yonkers Horticultural Society.

BUSH LIMA beans are scarce, many of the canners planting them instead of peas.

SUCCEEDING some days of springlike weather, a blizzard raged in Chicago February 21.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. W. Scott and F. H. Henry, New York; S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia, Pa.

CALIFORNIA bean growers have withdrawn prices on contracts owing to the continued dry weather.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, February 21, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $12 to $15 per 100 pounds.

ALFRED J. BROWN, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who has been visiting Fred T. Barteldes, at Lawrence, Kans., returned to his home this week.

FLORIDA bean growers have had the poorest season in 10 years and its effect on the planting acreage for the coming season can not be estimated easily.

NEW YORK—William E. Marshall has returned from an extended business trip to the far west. He is so pleased with the results that he will make this a semi-annual affair.

HAVANA CUBA.—The firm of Alberto R. Langwith y Ca., seedsmen and plantmen, consisting at the present time of the brothers Alberto R. and John Henry, was founded by their father, John Langwith, about 1850. The latter was an Englishman, his wife an American. They have the leading garden and flower seed store in the city and in the heart of the best retail shopping district, 66 Obispo street. Alberto is not in the best of health and will go to Europe via New York in March to spend eight months in France and England. On August 30, 1911, Alberto drew, on lottery ticket No. 2334, the full capital prize (Cuban National Lottery) of $100,000. A little windfall like this seems even better for a seedsman than a big fire at the end of the season.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.

THE comparatively mild weather of the past few days has given a lively spurt to counter and mail trade.

P. K. NOTT, son of the originator of Nott's Excelsior pea and formerly of Rochester and Troy, N. Y., is now with Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—Martin & Co. have a good McFarland retail catalogue and do quite a jobbing trade as well.—L. Cameron, an old time plantsman, has a good seed business.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—This week incorporation papers were filed for the McVay Seed Co., with the following officers: J. B. Dolsen, president; John L. Parker, vice-president; Mrs. C. E. McVay, secretary and treasurer. The capital stock is $10,000. Mr. Dolsen is a brother-in-law of G. B. McVay and Mrs. C. E. McVay is his wife. John L. Parker is a prominent druggist here. It is given out that the new seed company will embark in the retail seed business. The G. B. McVay Co., which started last May in the produce business, is in bankruptcy, liabilities $11,000 and assets $6,000. The First National Bank is a creditor for $6,000. Failure is attributed to adverse speculation in cotton. A receiver is in charge.

Inspection and Quarantine Bills.

A copy of bill H. R. 18,000, introduced in the national house of representatives, January 15, 1912, by Representative Simmons, to regulate the importation and interstate transportation of nursery stock and the establishing and maintaining of quarantine districts for plant diseases and insect pests will be found on page 235 of this issue.

It will be seen on comparing this with the bill drafted by W. P. Stark and Prof. S. J. Hunter of the Western Association of Nurserymen, which appeared in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, issue of February 10, that it differs in many radical ways: The Federal Horticultural Commission is differently constituted; the United States and its possessions are included; instead of state or territorial officials, agents of the commission are to be advised and have control; the term "nursery stock" does not include "vegetable and flower seeds, bedding plants and other soft-wooded herbaceous plants, bulbs or roots," and the appropriation for the purpose of the act is materially increased.

END OF THE SOCIAL SEASON.

The cold weather still holds its grip upon city and country and snow and ice are piled high around us, but the bright sunshine of the past week has helped the roses—which had felt the effects of the excessive cold spell. The fires in the greenhouse boilers, which are usually banked during the day and especially in the sunny days of February, have been kept going full blast with the exception of an hour or so on some bright days. The coal bills in consequence are larger this year than usual. Carnations are plentiful and are selling well. Roses are not in such good supply and the demand is good and the prices are fair. The spring flowers are selling well, jonquils, sweet peas, narcissus, etc., are used for table decorations, teas and receptions. The social season closed Monday with the Monday German which was a large affair and many flowers were used by the debutantes and in the decorations. Lent was ushered in Wednesday, February 21, and a decline in floral decorations, weddings, etc., until Easter is probable. There was a good sale of violets and flowers generally on St. Valentine's day, many boxes of fragrant blooms in heart shapes and fancy baskets being delivered.

NOTES.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club held its regular meeting February 12 with a very large attendance. Several speakers representing the Civic League read papers on beautifying the city for the great convention which will be held in June. The ladies of the club who assisted at the S. A. F. convention last August were present, and by request of the president were asked to assist in making the twenty-fifth anniversary of the club, which occurs on March 11, a red letter day. A large banquet will be held at Mt. Holly Inn and everything in the way of amusement and entertainment, not to speak of the good things that appeal to the appetite, will be furnished.

Stevenson Bros.' new house of Killarney and White Killarney roses is looking very fine, and is just coming into crop.

Lehr & Fritze of Catonsville have a fine lot of Richmond and Killarney roses, though a little off crop just now.

Mrs. Fred Burger is fully recovered from her illness and out among her friends again.

Are true to name, have two to three good eyes, are well cured, sound and dormant, and give absolute satisfaction. Our sales last year were nearly 700,000, and not an overgrown kick. The Canna crop this year, however, is very short, and we advise placing orders early to secure stock. Delivery can be made at purchaser's option.

We are the largest handlers of Cannas in the world. Our prices upon Cannas will bear comparison with any house in the Canna business.

Our Cannas are true to name — two and three, sometimes four eyes — are sound, dormant, and are packed 250 in a box; two can be "cleated" together and shipped as one. One box of 250 sold at a thousand rate; it is cheaper for you to buy a box of 250 than 200 at 100 rate. Write for special prices for quantities.

If any Cannas are not found here, it may be understood that they are superseded by the foregoing. If selection is left to us, we will substitute or send only the best for all purposes.

New York, February 17.—Mushrooms, $1 to $2.25 per 4-pound basket; cucumbers, $1 to $1.25 per dozen; tomatoes, 10 cents to 40 cents per pound; radishes, $1.50 to $3 per 100 bunches; lettuce, $1 to $2 per strap; rhubarb, 40 cents to 60 cents per large bunch and 60 cents to 90 cents per dozen small bunches; mint, 50 cents to 60 cents per dozen bunches.

Soil Fertility.

At this time of the year the grower should carefully consider if his beds are well supplied with plant food—enough to carry the coming crops through successfully. Very often the last crop of lettuce comes thin and tough, generally the result of exhaustion. As the light increases and the days lengthen, growth is faster, more water is absorbed, which means a heavy drain on fertility. If we are sure of ample humus in our ground we use fertilizers heavily if needed; but if the humus is scant it is better to apply more manure. In the absence of well decayed manure we often use fresh manure by heating it moderately. Such heating, while wasting some ammonia, breaks down the coarse parts and renders the matter more pliable and available. Thus in spading up beds to be reset with lettuce we often have one man do the digging and another continually filling the trenches with this manure. To prepare this, we proceed much like reducing mushroom manure. Gentle heating, uniform moistening, repeated turning and compacting are necessary. It is surprising how a crop of lettuce responds to such treatment and the following cucumbers or tomatoes will find much to benefit them. Where lettuce is cut from dry beds the moisture must be replaced before planting and not after, for no amount of watering after planting seems to make up for any damage done by replanting into dry earth.

MARKETMAN.

Soil for Hotbeds.

Gardeners are this year experiencing extreme difficulty in obtaining soil for their hotbeds owing to the extremely cold winter, preceded by the long wet spell in the fall. In our case we could not prepare our usual soil supply owing to constant heavy rains, but we succeeded in plowing many acres in December. This rough land dries off quickly and we are now scraping off an inch or two in favored spots which helps out wonderfully. Whenever caught in this way we always resort to sand to relieve the moisture and denseness of such soils. At first sight the use of sand may seem expensive, but if we can prevent damping off of our seedlings and procure a good stand of vigorous plants such expense is justified. We have at times used a bushel of sand to each sash, but generally one-half that is ample.

As a last resort we use fire to secure a supply of soil. Either brush, rubbish or wood is used and enough to not only thaw out the soil but to dry it as well. We have used such soil together with the ashes with good results.

We sow all seeds in drills, either two inches, two and one-half inches or three inches apart, according to variety, and early in the season never cover them. The drills are made with a marker, very shallow, and after seeding the surface is well firmed with a piece of plank. In this way we always get a good stand.

Frost and Snow in Holland.

"A very severe frost with some two and a half feet of snow," writes Kalten & Lunnemann of Boskoop, Holland, under date of February 3, "has stopped the nursery men of that section shipping their export orders to this country which they had in general started. Those who expected their shipments in February will have to wait a little longer."

Inspection and Quarantine Bill.

A copy of bill H. R. 18000, introduced in the national house of representatives by Representative Simmons, January 15, 1912, to regulate the importation and interstate transportation of nursery stock and the establishing and maintaining of quarantine districts for plant diseases and insect pests will be found on page 233 of this issue.

It will be seen on comparing this with the bill drafted by W. P. Stark and Prof. S. J. Hunter of the Western Association of Nurserymen, which appeared in THE AMERICAN FLORIST issue of February 10, that it differs in many radical ways: The Federal Horticultural Commission is differently constituted; the United States and its possessions are included; instead of state or territorial officials, agents of the commission are to be advised and have control; the term "nursery stock" does not include "vegetable and flower seeds, bedding plants and other soft-wooded herbaceous plants, bulbs or roots;" and the appropriation for the purpose of the act is materially increased.

Diseases of Chestnuts and Other Trees.

In an address by Dr. Haven Metcalf, chief of the Division of Forest Pathology in the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled "Fungous Diseases of the Chestnut and Other Trees," delivered before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, Mass., the essayist stated that in forest pathology, we have to deal with trees under two cultural types: first, the trees in the forest; second, shade, ornamental and park trees. In the former preventive measures must be the means of combating diseases, but in the latter individual treatment may be accorded the trees, such as tree-surgery, pruning and spraying, which are successfully practiced.

While forest pathology is the newest branch of plant pathology, yet in the last few years the Department of Agriculture has made a disease survey of the national forests. Many fungi that are serious enemies of trees have been discovered. Good success has been attained in overcoming damp-off of seedlings by the use of soil fungicides, the white pine blister-rust has been controlled, and the heart rots, the mistletoes of the west and the pin-rots of incense cedar and cypress are being controlled in four of the six districts of national forests.

The chestnut bark disease was first observed in 1904, but had probably existed in the neighborhood of Long Island for twenty years. In the last seven years, it has spread from New York to Virginia and west to Ohio, causing a loss of $25,000,000 of property. If this disease had been discovered at its inception, it could undoubtedly have been controlled at small expense. The only practical method that has been proposed is, the cutting out of advance infections, until some other is discovered. The stake for which we are fighting, is nothing less than the total stand of chestnut timber in the United States.

That Cast Iron Centre Gutter of Ours

WHAT you are looking for first and always in a gutter, is that it shall be large enough to carry off the water without backing up, freezing on your glass and breaking it; and also that it shall last.

This cast iron gutter of ours is that kind.

It is 2½ inches deep and 7½ inches broad. The iron is a high grade tough kind that stands the racket. It will outlast six to one any steel channel gutter that's made. Steel rusts out in a short time, so what's the use of putting your money in steel channel gutters? Write us and get our prices on this gutter or any information needed in regard to building and heating greenhouses.

Here is a full-on view, with all the parts named.

Double-Glass Double Profits

The old single layer hot-bed sash are far better than none; but they must be covered with mats, boards or shutters every evening and uncovered every morning. They are wasteful.

The new SUNLIGHT DOUBLE GLASS SASH, with two layers of glass enclosing an air space, are COMPLETE IN THEMSELVES. They eliminate all extra covers; they wipe out half the labor cost; they admit all the light by day to store warmth in the bed and then save the warmth at night.

They make plants earlier and stronger. They double final profits.

Every practical gardener or florist will see the value of this.

And it is good business for you to get our free catalog for full information. Write your address plainly and send it today; the hot-bed season is not far off. Prof. Massey's booklet on Hot-beds and Cold Frames sent for 4c in stamps.

Aphine
The Insecticide that kills plant Lice of every species.

Grand Rapids, Mich., February 6, '12.
 THE APHINE MANUFACTURING CO.,
 Madison, N. J.:

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of January 27th, will say that we have been using FUNGINE on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the APHINE for lice on lettuce, instead of — (a nicotine preparation) and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots. If so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this FUNGINE as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.
 Yours very truly,

Owning Your Greenhouse What It Means

This is the U-Bar
the bar that makes
U-Bar Greenhouses
the Famous Greenhouses They Are.

You can talk about the things cold frames will do for you "until the cows come home," but if you want real flowers, real bedding plants that you can count on being top notch year in and year out—then a greenhouse is the only thing. The only thing because it is the sure thing. With a greenhouse your frames become double valuable, as then one helps the other greatly to the advantage of both. With a greenhouse you control temperatures and conditions and can have what you want when you want it. But don't allow anyone to persuade you that any other curved cave house is just as good as the U-Bar. It is not so. We want to show you exactly why. Send for the catalog as a starter.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Seeds for March Sowing.

The middle of March is the proper time for the sowing of the main crop of summer annuals. The seedsmen have seen that the growers have the catalogues, and the lists of the wants for the year should be made out at once, if not already done, and the seeds procured and sown. How often have we seen good growers spending valuable time during the busy days of May and June hunting for some small stock that could have been easily grown, but was neglected at the proper time. It is a good time now to look back at the sales of the last year or two and note what lines of stock were in short supply or were carelessly omitted. Such matters as this are the little things that count in a successful business, for the time taken in hunting up and procuring the cheaper kinds of stock during the busy season more than eats up all the profit received in handling it. The seeds that should be sown now are almost endless in variety, and they include asters, Phlox Drummondii, zinnias, marigolds, balsams, antirrhinums, begonias, calendula, celosias, cobæas, cosmos, gauras, mignonette, nicotianas, nasturtiums, petunias, salpiglossis, ricinus, salvias, scabiosa, stocks, thunbergias and others that may be demanded. With the exception of Cobæa scandens, mignonette and ricinus, which should be sown in pots, these can all be sown in flats and as soon as large enough transplanted to pots or spaced in flats, and good stock be had for summer bedding.

Spireas.

The spireas for Easter should now be throwing up the spikes of bloom from the foliage and will be in a good light location. While these plants are always regarded as one of the cheaper plants for Easter, and will not return enough for space occupied in a warm house, still there will always be a demand for them, especially for church decorations, and if they are not forward enough will have to be given a warm location to have them in bloom. They are rather slow in coming into flower, so will have to be well timed to have them in the best of condition. This plant requires plenty of water, no matter where grown, and in a warm house will need frequent waterings. Keep the plants well spaced out as they grow, for where crowded, poorly shaped plants and bad foliage is often the result and it is the glossy foliage of this plant that is greatly admired. Do not fumigate with tobacco smoke when the foliage is young, for it quickly burns the tender leaves, and if they are in a house that requires fumigation remove them or cover closely with papers. Spraying with nicotine solutions or fumigating with nicotine papers will not injure them.

Geraniums.

At the approach of spring the geraniums and other bedding stock will make rapid growth and from those which are large enough a top cutting may be taken now. While these cuttings will not make good sized plants for bedding out yet they can be grown on for stock plants for another year. It is time now to take account of the stock on hand and look over the amount that has been required in the past and if it is found that there will be a probable shortage of any varieties procure them at once. They can be obtained at this time, either small plants or rooted cuttings, at low prices. Many growers lose every year by putting off their buying too late when the prices have advanced to such a figure that there is no profit in handling them. It is seldom that one who has much bedding to do has geraniums enough especially of S. A. Nutt or Alphonse Ricard, and this is the time to procure the stock, and if a grower has any room to spare it is good business to stock up with these varieties, for there is a guaranteed sale for all well grown plants in May. The plants that are now in 3-inch pots will require going over often and spacing out, that a well grown stocky plant may be had. If crowded now a tall, weak, spindly plant is too often the result, and when grown in this way are neither fit to make a good showing in the bed when planted nor will they bring proper returns for the labor expended or the room occupied in their culture.

Tuberous Begonias.

For certain shady locations there is no plant that makes a better showing than tuberous begonias, and for the florist that has a greenhouse leading from the office, they make a most beautiful plant to have during the summer months to attract the attention of the customer at a time when greenhouses are not at their best. The bulbs should be started in 3-inch pots in a good fibrous soil with little manure, but a generous proportion of leaf mold if obtainable, the top of the bulb just even with the soil. Place them in a warm location and do not water too heavily until leaf growth starts; as soon as the leaves cover the pot transplant to 4-inch pots and the soil can then have a good amount of rotted manure incorporated in it. For bedding out purposes the 4-inch plants will be all right, but for inside growing they will have to be again shifted into 6-inch pots, being sure to give good drainage. An inch or more of broken crocks and charcoal is the practice of the best growers. Careful watering and shade during summer is all that is required.

Azalea Mollis.

One of the showy plants grown for Easter is the Azalea mollis, for the flowers are of those peculiar shades of red, yellow and orange that are not found in other plants. They can be forced very quickly, for the plants have stored up nutriment enough to produce their flowers, and they make but little foliage and but few roots. Three weeks in a temperature of 60° will bring them into bloom at this season, but the flowers will be of better substance and color if the plants are grown a little cooler and given more time. Careful handling of the plants is necessary for the buds are very brittle and easily broken off. Pot firmly in a pot just large enough to take the clump of roots, and water heavily. Frequent spraying until the flowers show color will be required, and when the blooms unfold, the bright coloring is better held and intensified, by moving the plants into a cool temperature and the watering reduced.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Floral Wreath.

Of all the designs made upon a frame by florists, the wreath has always had the largest demand, and in the hands of the best floral artists today, it is modified so much that they seldom make two alike, and it would be a revelation to the florists of 25 years ago to see to what the present design has been developed from the set, compact work of that time by the artistic worker of the present. The up-to-date designer of today will diverge from the frame to make his work artistic, especially in the background, allowing the flowers to show the form. The wreath which we illustrate was arranged by George M. Geraghty, manager of Dunlop's, Toronto, Ont., Can., and is a fitting example of the best work of the present time. It is made of red roses, gladioli and swainsona, the gladioli being arranged in spray form on one side of the wreath and the swainsona being mingled with the dark red roses to lighten any solid appearance which these might give. The breaking of the wreath with the cypas and sprays of Asparagus Sprengeri is a very artistic feature, the cypas leaves being extended at liberty, taking away much of the set form which so often is to be seen.

These arrangements immediately attract the eye by their boldness, and the materials must be handled properly to maintain the proper balance, but in the hands of the true artist startling effects are possible and they add materially to the capabilities of flowers in beautiful work. A study of this kind of floral designing is the duty of all in the trade, for it enables one to present the beautiful products of nature in a natural and artistic manner.

The Chicago Retail Stores.

The first week of Lent is generally marked by a falling off in the flower trade, for with many of the flower buyers social functions have, for the time being, ceased, and with many who do not observe Lent it is taken as a season of rest from the strenuous duties which the social season has demanded. Consequently with all the best stores there is a noticeable decrease in the calls for decorations and receptions for a short time, but this is often compensated for in remembrances and home decorations. The trade has generally enjoyed a splendid patronage since the holidays, there having been many elaborate decorations of which each of the dealers has had his share, and the St. Valentine's day business was in excess of any other year. The supply of flowers has been very good, the only shortage experienced being roses and these, although some little difficulty was experienced at times in procuring just what was desired and the prices were also rather high, yet there was a great improvement over the preceding year. The quality has, however, been exceptionally good. The large number of orchids obtainable has added considerably to the attractiveness of the stores and the window displays and they have been used in large numbers in the best work. The stores just at this time are very beautiful, the large amount of bulb stock making a great showing both in cut flowers and in pots and boxes, so that these with the finely grown plants which are shown make very attractive displays.

The Fleischman Floral Co. have been celebrating their twelfth anniversary the last week, and the beautiful store has had an extraordinarily attractive display of all the best that the market affords. A splendidly grown lot of plants were advantageously arranged and fine specimens were noted of azaleas, spireas, flowering almonds, marguerites, genistas, and the display of hyacinths, tulips and narcissi in pans and boxes beautifully decorated with papers and covers were productive of many "Ohs" and "Ahs" from the patrons as they entered the store. The pots of lily of the valley which they had were as finely grown as it was ever our pleasure to see, and they were very beautifully decorated. There was also a splendid assortment of cut flowers of all the seasonable offerings. The anniversary was extensively advertised and many bargains were offered their patrons and the public who took advantage of the sale and the magnificent display.

The Bohannon Floral Co. has enjoyed a very prosperous season, in fact, Mr. Bohannon says one of the best. This firm has for its patronage some of the best trade in the city, and there is always on hand a fine assortment of the choicest of flowers. An order received lately was for a wreath 54 inches across that was to accompany a body to Denmark, and among the orders received this week were two elaborate casket covers which with the other demands made a very busy week.

A. Lange has had a very busy season and even during this time when many are telling of light business the large force are very busily employed until late hours. Mr. Lange has made a great success of the one dollar box of cut flowers, for he not only places before his customers one but six assortments all made up for delivery, and he furnishes a varied choice. The box last week contained carnations, American Beauties, Richmond and other roses, sweet peas, daffodils and jonquils, and these are so nicely arranged that they are very seductive to the buyers.

Canger & Gormley report a nice seasonable trade; they have had many decorations and receptions, beside a large number of orders for flowers for the more solemn occasions. A very attractive window is always to be seen at the store on North State street and a fine patronage is the possession of the store.

John Mangel's attractive windows always contain a fine assortment of the choicest flowers and transient trade is always attracted by the beautiful displays. Dinner, reception and some very large wedding decorations have been arranged this season. Preparations for removal are now in progress and much of the proprietor's time is being spent in fitting up the new store.

H. C. Rowe is now firmly established in his new store and the fittings are all in his best taste. The window is particularly attractive in its arrangement and always contains some special feature in the seasonable stock which catches the attention of not only the transient buyers but also his large patronage.

John Muir's store on Michigan avenue has a very brilliant showing of bulbous stock grown in pans and boxes which are artistically ornamented with fancy pot covers and papers. Trade is reported as very satisfactory and many parties and receptions have been decorated and elaborate designs executed.

W. J. Smyth has enjoyed a very busy season and the beautiful store always contains all of the choicest flowers of the season and a stock of accessories that is thoroughly up-to-date. A line of terra cotta ware now occupies a prominent position and attracts attention. A large reception at which the decorations were elaborate was looked after this week, notwithstanding the lenten season.

C. A. Samuelson's window was beautifully arranged this week, the showing of plants beautifully decorated was particularly attractive, and some splendidly grown stock was displayed. Mr. Samuelson by his fine work and arrangements has succeeded in building up and holding some of the best trade of the city and his distinctive work has secured him a high place in the city's floral work.

Disease of Sweet Peas and Other Plants.

Under this heading G. Masee in the last issue of the Kew Bulletin deals with the disease that has become so closely associated with the sweet pea in recent years. Apparently the disease, Thielavia basicola, does not limit its attentions to the sweet pea, but will also attack asters, orchids and various other cultivated plants, more especially during the seedling stage. So far as the sweet pea is concerned, it is well known how very conflicting and confusing are the opinions of expert growers, a fact that was fully borne out in a recent conference held under the auspices of the National Sweet Pea Society. Mr. Masee states that it is practically impossible to cure a plant once it is attacked, and that the infection of a new area is in the majority of instances due to the use of manure, on which material the fungus flourishes and reproduces itself at a rapid rate. Commercial formalin (equal four per cent formaldehyde) is recommended as a most effective fungicide for sterilizing infected soil. When green manure is dug into land intended for seed-beds, it is advised that it should previously be thoroughly watered with formalin as above.

FREMONT, NEB. — Greene's Greenhouses made seven entries at the State Horticultural show at Lincoln and won five firsts and two thirds. Four of the first prizes were for carnations and one for roses. C. H. Green reports business as very good with the supply of flowers about equal to the demand. The weather has been very severe, the thermometer registering 31° below zero.

FLORISTS' FERNS.

Cultural Notes.

During the short days of winter there is but little that may be done in the way of repotting among the ferns, from the fact that ferns make but little growth at this season, and while the roots are comparatively inactive it does not pay to shift the plants into larger pots.

The nephrolepis family will continue to grow about as late as any of the ordinary trade species of ferns, but even these do not respond very readily when their roots are disturbed in December or January, and the chief things to be careful about in the culture of ferns of this class at this season are the routine matters of airing, watering and spacing out the plants from time to time. As much ventilation as the weather will permit in order to avoid condensation of moisture on the foliage, careful watering, especially in those dry corners of the benches that are likely to be found in any greenhouse where strong firing is needed to keep up a proper temperature, and as little water over the foliage as possible, are some of the cultural items that the careful grower will keep in mind. Syringing overhead is sometimes beneficial in hot, dry weather, but at this season the nephrolepis are better off without it. And in watering it will be found that those plants that have been repotted late in the season will not take up the quantity of water that the well-established stock will dispose of, and once the soil gets soured there is not much chance to make good plants from the stock.

That small brown scale insect, the young of which are whitish and very small, is by far the most troublesome pest the grower of Boston ferns has to contend with, and during the winter this insect seems to spread just about as rapidly as in warmer weather, usually appearing in colonies on the under side of the fronds, and soon causing light colored spots to show on the foliage. If any such discolorations of the leaves are noted, the plants should be carefully looked over, and all affected fronds cut off and burned, the stems being cut off close to the ground, for the insects often congregate on the stems as well as on the leaflets. This is a widespread pest, and is often overlooked until the plants become so infested that they are ruined, either for sale or for stock, and while the spread of the insect may be checked in a measure by the use of nicotine solution, yet it is no easy matter to get rid of it entirely. Thrips sometimes appear in the fern houses, and these also are not easy to dispose of, but an occasional fumigating with some nicotine paper will keep them down, and will do no harm to the ferns.

Adiantum Farleyense is still among the trade ferns, and doubtless will continue to be, at least until the Moor-drecht fern becomes more plentiful, but at this season Farleyense is not growing very rapidly, and under no consideration should it have its roots disturbed during the winter, for should any such disturbance take place the plants are almost sure to go wrong. And it should also be remembered that Adiantum Farleyense does not like exposure to drafts or low temperature, a night temperature of 60° to 65° being most suitable for this fern.

Cibotium Schiedei has well earned

CATTLEYA TRIANÆ.

its place among commercial ferns, for there are few plants more graceful than this species, and there are also few that stand the dry atmosphere of a store or dwelling so well as the fern in question. But in common with the majority of the arborescent ferns this Cibotium (or Dicksonia as it is now known) does not make much growth in winter, its period of most active growth being the late summer and early autumn, at which time it increases in size very rapidly. A temperature of 60° at night will answer for this fern, and when growing in a light greenhouse, as it should be, the plants will take a liberal allowance of water the year around.

Some nicely grown plants of Pteris tremula are again seen in some of the florists' stores, these ferns being offered in four, five and six-inch pots, and as a change from the ever-present nephrolepis, such plants sell readily. There are, however, several different forms of Pteris tremula, some being much more compact in growth than others, and consequently better adapted for pot specimens, and it is an advantage to pot up two or three of the seedling plants together rather than to separate them singly, and to get the best results the plants should be given sufficient space and light to allow of their full and symmetrical development. In short, if one wants to produce good ferns, they, too, need some attention, and while there is frequently a glut of ferns of poor quality in some markets, yet there is still an unsatisfied demand for good stock at fair prices.

ORCHID NOTES.

Cattleya Trianæ.

Wherever orchids are grown commercially for cut flower purposes, it is safe to assume that there are more of Cattleya Trianæ than any other, not that it is better than any of the C. labiata section, but because it is a midwinter flowering plant, often seen in bloom at Christmas, and continuing to flower freely for at least two months. It is also one of the cheapest kinds, costing less per case to procure than any other, and is also very apt to furnish fine forms that have a value for the grower apart from the flower's market value. I have been told that it would not pay a man to go out collecting plants were it not for the fact that fine forms found in the Andes always have a ready market on his return, the natives who get the plants and bring them in know this full well, and have been known to take flowers that were of light shades, bleach them over the fumes of sulphur and produce white flowering plants which the novice gobbles up with avidity on the spot. It is also true that there are localities that produce none but poor forms, plants are plentiful there and easy to procure, but a poor C. Trianæ is very poor, costs just as much to grow as a good one, and is distressful at all times.

It would seem, looking backward, that we do not get the fine strains from importations that used to be obtained 20 years ago, this was my impression after seeing many hundred plants in bloom recently, and then a few days afterwards was shown a set of flowers that were superb in every way; these were from another source of supply, proving that there are good orchids yet in Colombia for those who know where to go. The fascination of blooming for the first time newly imported plants is such that importers are kept busy and will be until all procurable plants will be collected, but the word procurable is an indefinite one, in the sense that if conditions of transportation were as good as they might be in Colombia, plants could be brought out to supply our needs for a generation to come, and in the meantime, seedlings will be raised from fine forms and sold as cheaply as the average imported plant costs the grower by the time it is established, counting in this same cost the fact that seedlings go on indefinitely increasing in vigor under intelligent treatment. In conversation recently with an expert grower as to the life of an imported cattleya, he put it at five years, without reservation. This was the first time the writer had heard it put so definitely and there is room for discussion, but while we know that certain forms go on for ever and can be increased by division, the majority of imported cattleyas, at least 90 per cent of them, are short-lived under our system of culture.

Under our system of handling cattleyas under glass, there are two ills that require pills to help the bills. Many have asked as to the temperature for cattleyas in winter, and the answer is, that of a carnation house both in winter and summer, giving air freely at all times, day and night, in the growing season, for it may be safely said that there is no need to cut off the ventilation from May until November, and there is no reason why artificial heat should be applied during those six months except in the event of wet dull days in October when the *C. labiata*s are coming into bloom. This leads up to the other ill, which is a glut in the market, and the grower has to hold back his flowers waiting for the time when they can be sold at a profit. In the meantime the atmosphere has to be kept dry at a time when the plants are undergoing the great strain. If water is used the flowers will become spotted with mildew and unsalable, and owing to this dry treatment the bulbs shrink; it will take weeks to get them plump again and the growth following is not as strong as should be. Speaking of cattleya culture in a general way, there is not a day in the year when moisture should be withheld, and during the hot summer months this must be applied just as the sun goes down.

If the grower will observe cattleya roots that have grown outside the pots during summer, they are articulated, and each joint is the result of the drying up of the growing tip between each watering. This drying is not enough to stop the growth of the root, but does check proper growth and development of the plant. If water is applied overhead every evening after a hot day, the moisture will find its way down to the growing tips and these in the morning will be softened to such an extent that it will be evening before they will be dry and normal again if the atmosphere is kept moist in the usual way during the day. Everyone knows that there is a something that makes the difference between water out of a pipe and that which we get as rain. Some of our scientists can diagnose this, but it never seems to get into print except as we see it demonstrated by the Skinner system of out-door irrigation as compared with all others. We know that water that goes up and comes down as rain is good; this, however, cannot be accomplished in the greenhouse because it is a greenhouse, therefore a little something in the water for orchids has been considered, and found good. There is more of this done than is admitted or seen from the road, and it has been found that just enough to make the difference between pipe water and rain water has made it possible to grow cattleyas from the growing point the size of a pin-head, to occupying barrels cut in half, with bulbs over four feet long, so there must be something in it. Manure water, as such, should not be considered for a moment. When visiting recently perhaps the most up-to-date establishment, and its method of handling and using manure with water, it was found that, after all, no way of testing the strength of same was applied except the old one of color and smell, in other words, a given amount of solids and a known quantity of water with a certain time for cooking—result, an odor not to be denied and color that could not be improved upon even by suggestion when we saw the results obtained by its use. This system, however, is still empirical and not applicable to orchid culture.

Cookson we all knew as a great orchid fancier, by profession he was an expert chemist, and one day he gave his grower some powders to be dissolved in water and applied to some plants known only to his grower. It is a matter of record that after a short time Mr. Cookson could pick out the plants so treated. Others had been experimenting in a roundabout way, but this drop of Cookson's crystallized the whole solution. His formula may be repeated here as given in the "Orchid Review," Vol. VII, p. 144: Three ounces potassium nitrate, two ounces ammonium phosphate, both dissolved in three gallons of water, one ounce of this liquid being added to each gallon of water applied to any orchids when making their growth or flowering.

The only exception that can be taken to the above is, that it should be applied all the time, and in the opinion of the writer there is no resting time here for a cattleya, the plants are all the time at work either getting ready to do something or recuperating therefrom. This theory works out well in practice. Figure out the contents of a storage tank, preferably in the house and filled with rain water, then add enough of the salts named and use a "Kinney Pump," an appliance to attach to the hose-bib costing 75 cents, and use the tank water with the regular hose pressure and water to dilute it on all cattleyas all the time. This has been done, and the results were surprising for a period extending over 10 years, certainly a fair trial and with no bad results.

Joseph W. Lawson.

Vice-President Nebraska State Florists' Society.

It is reasonably fair to assume that we shall in time get to where it is unnecessary to import new plants every five years in the case of C. Trianae; we would not claim this to be true of C. labiata which has proven untractable after the loss of its native vigor, and as this is becoming harder to get in Brazil each season, owing to the thousands that have been exported. If we wish to keep our plants they must be studied carefully in the future; it would seem that as their resting period comes in the depth of winter, their needs have not been properly supplied or cared for and deterioration is a natural result. These are the first to begin to grow, and the term resting must be considered advisedly, for, as before remarked, there is no rest and this may be the one thing we have not taken properly into consideration.

Cattleya Trianae has been most prolific in fine varieties, this may be explained partly by its geographical distribution which varies, and to the fact that we have known it for over 50 years. Good things come and go, and it is doubtful if a tenth of the forms named in the past are still to be found; they are duplicated, however, at intervals, as in the blue-lipped variety recently exhibited by Chas. Bond in Chicago, but until someone begins to raise these from seed we shall never see many at a time. Seedlings come true to a certain extent, there are always renegades as in other families, but there is also a measure of improvement that compensates for this, either in form or vigor or both. There is no more fascinating form of horticultural recreation than in orchid raising, and to the enthusiast the time taken to bloom the plants only adds zest by reason of anticipation. We saw this once well illustrated in the case of an artist who was a great orchid painter: he raised seeds in his studio and then painted the pictures of the flowers as they would look when they bloomed. For pure enthusiasm this is hard to beat, but a measure of it went into all his work and hence his success. All orchid growers need some of this same to accomplish good work.

Shading is necessary from the beginning of March onwards, a good deal depends on the season, but after St. Patrick's day there is always harm done to cattleyas by full exposure even if the house runs north and south, and if east and west it must be applied earlier. All the light possible is needed and a thin shade of white lead, thinned out with gasoline, may be put on early, and if necessary, later on in June put on another coat. These will gradually wear off before winter by the action of snow and rain, but a dry cloth will remove it at any time if so desired. Be careful that no oil is mixed with the lead or complications will ensue.

Just a word as to potting the plants. Use no moss, peat or leafsoil. Pot firm in osmunda root-fibre so that when the plants are lifted by the tops they do not come out of the pots; this will exclude the possibility of overwatering. When a plant must be repotted, soak it well a day or two before and the roots can all be separated from the pot without much injury. Repotting should always be done when the roots are not active, either before or after flowering, which means that most of it can be done in the winter months. If a plant gets sick shake it out the first time it is noticed, and recuperation is always more rapid if the plant is suspended. Orchids are long-suffering and hard to kill, and to be successful requires but the use of judgment and the observance of a few cardinal principles.

Ruggles Perfection Flue Cleaner.

There is nothing that impairs the heating capacity of a boiler more than dirty flues and one of the greatest losses of heat is caused by the accumulation of soot, scale and ashes in the flues of a boiler. The Scully Steel & Iron Co., Chicago and New York, have placed upon the market one of the best flue cleaners made. It is built on strictly mechanical lines and of the best material and is light, strong and simple. It has neither screws nor rivets in its construction and the knives are so made that they are always sharp and in direct contact with the metal of the flues and so constructed that they will override any imperfections. The heads and ends are of drop forged steel and it is the strongest cleaner made. It is easy to use and because of the long shearing cut of the knives runs easily through welded flues of the worst character. They have such confidence in this tool that it is sold on an absolute guarantee to do the work or the money will be refunded.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—George H. Sinclair made a large display of orchids in one of the down town stores during the latter part of January. He has a very fine collection of these plants embracing many rare specimens.

CLAYTON, MO.—The dwelling house of George Hecht caught fire and was totally destroyed February 9. With Mrs. Hecht he went to St. Louis in the morning and when they returned found the house in ruins. The loss is estimated at $2,000, with some insurance.

THE VIOLET.

Violets in Spring.

As the warm sunny days of later February and March come on the violet plants will be producing flowers rapidly and much of the time of the grower will be taken up in picking and bunching the blooms, but the same constant care must be exercised in their culture as has been followed through the shorter and darker days. The plants must be continually gone over and all decaying foliage removed and the soil occasionally scratched over to keep it light so as to allow the air to get into it and keep it sweet. As the plants begin to grow more rapidly more water will be required, and as the temperature grows warmer in the houses, the conditions for aphids are more favorable, and these quickly spoil the flowers, and are very difficult to exterminate. Tobacco smoke is out of the question for it will not kill the insects that gather in the young crowns, and it simply spoils the flowers, for they quickly absorb the smoke and the delicious fragrance of the flower is gone. Hydrocyanic acid gas is the most efficacious, but spraying with nicotine or some other insecticide will keep them in check. All the ventilation possible should be given from now on.

The bright sun quickly fades the flowers and as the days grow warmer the blooms also grow smaller unless the plants are given some stimulant. The glass should be shaded as soon as it is seen to affect the color, and liquid manuring begun as soon as the flowers deteriorate in size. Some years ago a circumstance came under our notice which we made good use of in after years. We had had splendid violets all the winter but toward the first of April they grew small very rapidly and light in color. Near us was an estate on which a colored man was man of all work, and he had some twenty cold frames in which were growing the finest violets we ever saw. His people being away he was desirous of obtaining a little extra money so he offered to sell us the flowers. Toward the middle of April an exceedingly warm week bleached them out badly and as he brought in the Saturday supply we looked them over and told him that we could not use any more. He wanted to know why and we told him the color was too light, and he immediately said, "I fix 'em, they be good color Monday." Sure enough Monday he brought them in as dark purple as they had been earlier in the season. We were only too glad to get them, but we said we would not buy unless he told us what he had done, so he took us up to his frames. Having no water pipe he was obliged to fasten the hose to the greenhouse some fifty feet away, but right beside the frames was the cesspool and into this, beside the waste from the house, came all the water that was used in washing, and he had dipped this water from the cesspool onto the soil in which the violets were growing, and in doing so had found it intensified the color in the violets. We have always kept our violets in good color until late in the season by the same method.

Propagation by cuttings can now be commenced, the runners are forming rapidly and they root easily in the propagating bed. A much better and stronger plant can be grown from cuttings rooted in March than from divisions made in April and May, and if stock enough is obtained in this manner, it will not be necessary to keep the old plants a day after they have become nonproductive, as is so often the case where the young stock is not taken off until it is time to throw the old plants out. This often happens to be in May when the days are warm and the young runners if they once get wilted in the propagation never make a good plant. The stock propagated now can be placed in flats as soon as rooted, quite close together, and they will take but little room until they are planted in the benches or in the open field whichever way the grower may select. We have always found that we obtained a much better plant by early propagation and good subsequent culture than from division of the plants later in the season.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Pot Chrysanthemums.

The demand for plants for house decoration invariably comes early in the fall when the city residents return from their summer homes and while the greater demand is for the decorative plants, yet there are constant calls for plants in bloom, and there are but few greenhouse plants that can be had in bloom much before December. The pot plants of chrysanthemums fill a much needed want during November, and small well grown plants are not only in demand for this purpose, but also can be used in decoration for the many fall weddings, adding color and brightness to the banks of decorative plants.

The selection of varieties for this purpose will demand the first attention, and those that are naturally dwarf in habit, close jointed and with good strong foliage are the most desirable for pot culture. Many of the older varieties make the best plants, for those that have been introduced in later years have been grown with the main idea of obtaining a large flower, irrespective of its growth as a plant, yet some of the later sorts also make very nice plants. The pompons almost all make the growth most desired, and many of the anemones also are of good habit. There are many varieties that can be grown shapely, but require considerable attention both in culture and in staking in the fall, but plants for general use are those that naturally grow shapely and do not require much tying out. A few of the better varieties are: Garza white anemone; Miss Clay Frick, white large flower; President Roosevelt, blush; Beatrice May, white tinted pink; W. H. Lincoln, yellow; Crocus, yellow; Geo. W. Childs, red; Cullingfordii, red; Mispah, single pink, small; Wm. Duckham, pink; Mayor Weaver, pink; Louis Boehmer, light pink. These are all of easy culture and will not need any great amount of staking if properly grown.

The cuttings should be propagated in March or April, and as soon as rooted potted in 3-inch pots. They will have to be shifted very soon for they rapidly fill a small pot full of roots, and they should not be allowed to become pot-bound, or the wood will harden. As soon as the plants become established in the pot they should be pinched back to make them branch, the first pinching should be done as low as three inches from the pot. In doing this it is far better to just rub out the tip of the growth than to allow the plant to grow until pinching back into the hardened wood is necessary. This should be continued until August 1, each shoot being rubbed out when three or four leaves have formed, when all stopping should be discontinued, and it is better not to pinch back at the same time the plant is repotted, going over the plants two or three days before potting and then wait until the plant has become established in the new soil.

The plants can be grown all the time in pots or planted out in a bench, cold frame or in the open ground. If they are grown in pots, constant shifting into larger sizes will be required and strict attention paid to the watering; a little negligence of this kind will quickly spoil all the work already done. If the pots are plunged in soil, they will not require so much attention. If they are grown in the soil, either bench, frame or field, they should be potted about August 15. For this, a good, rich loam, similar to that used in rose and carnation culture, is necessary, and if it is a little coarse, so much the better. The old soil should be carefully removed and the plant potted firmly in a pot large enough to carry through the season. Plants rooted in March and April will require from seven to eight-inch pots. As soon as potted they should be well watered and placed in a shady location, away from winds and draughts if possible for two or three days until the roots have formed in the new soil, when they should again be placed in full sunlight and watered when necessary.

The buds will set toward the last of September and they can then be disbudded or not according to the pleasure of the grower. Personally we like the plants that are not disbudded at all, for much of the stiffness so noticeable in chrysanthemum plants is thus obviated, but many growers like plants that carry but one flower to a stem. This is all very well with the varieties that produce a large flower, but the pompons and anemones are much more decorative if allowed to bloom in natural sprays. After the buds have formed watering with liquid manure every few days, either cow or sheep manure, will enlarge the flower, but this should be discontinued as soon as the flowers show color. A centre stake is all that will be required with most varieties if they are kept well pinched back through their early growth, but those that produce long flowering shoots may require more stakes and the tying in of the longer branches.

PLANTSMAN.

Warm Water for Chrysanthemums.

J. Boucaud, gold medal winner at a French chrysanthemum show last fall, writes with enthusiasm on the use of waterings with warm water in hastening the blooming of these plants. After bringing some sickly plants into good condition by the use of various sprays for rust and mildew, he found them so backward as to despair of more than 25 plants in bloom by November 10. As a last effort, he began watering with water warmed somewhat over lukewarm (which he tested by plunging his hand into the reservoir), in which was dissolved whatever chemical fertilizer he thought desirable. This process, repeated as waterings were needed, but without great regularity, brought the entire collection into bloom by November 10, and M. Boucaud is assured that it is to its use that he owes the honors accorded him.—Le Jardin.

THE CARNATION.

Carnation Cuttings Damping Off.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

We are having trouble with our carnation cuttings, they rot off a few days after being placed in the sand. The propagating bench has four to five inches of sand and enclosed underneath are three rows of steam pipes with valve at one end. We sprinkle cuttings on bright days and cover with newspapers. Can you account for cuttings rotting off? J. P.

My opinion of the trouble is that it is due to the cutting bed being too wet and to a lack of air. The essential things necessary for the successful propagation of carnation cuttings are first, a bench in a light airy house provided with enough steam pipes underneath to insure a bottom heat in the sand of 54-56 degrees, then a top temperature of 50-52 degrees. To be able to maintain the bottom heat it will be necessary to close in under the bench by tacking some sheeting to the side and let it fall to the ground. This will guard against more heat coming out through the house than is needed. It is a good plan to cover the bottom of the propagating bench with one-half to three-fourths inch of stone, then use about three inches of sand on the top of this; it will keep the sand sweet and allow for the heat to pass up freely. The sand should be pounded thoroughly and the cuttings watered well at time of putting them in, making sure that the watering is thorough enough to properly settle the sand around the base of the cutting so as to exclude the air and guard against the cut becoming hard. I also think that one of the causes of the cuttings damping off is the covering of them with newspapers. Allow me to suggest that a frame be fitted up about twenty inches above the propagating bed and some muslin sheeting stretched over this frame fitting it up so that it can be put on or off at will. This allows for a free circulation of air between the shading and the cuttings. Carnation cuttings are of a succulent nature and unless a close damp atmosphere is guarded against they will quickly spoil. I might mention here the way that we have fitted up the shading for our carnation propagating bed, but it must be borne in mind that the whole bench is used at this time for propagating purposes exclusively. The bench is six feet wide and above it are stretched six wires (lengthwise of the bench), two in the center and two at each side about 30 inches above the bench. For the top we have two widths of sheeting (which are a yard wide each), fitted with wire rings. All along both sides these rings are attached to the wires in such a manner that they can be slid backwards and forwards so that we can draw the sheeting to the ends of the bench when not needed for shading. These two overhead widths of cloth use up the two center wires and one of the wires at each side. To the other side wires we fit, by rings the same as before, one side of a width of sheeting allowing the other to hang down; thus we have a closed-in shaded bench but with a free circulation of air, and we are not troubled with any damping off or withering up. After the first waterings have been properly attended to extra caution should be used in regard to sprinkling of the cuttings. I find that when the directions of temperature and ventilation are followed up closely there is need of very little sprinkling, particularly so prior to March 1. In later propagating, on account of the brighter weather, it becomes more of a necessity.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Carnation Foliage Turning Brown.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

We have a bench of Beacon carnations which have done finely but the foliage at one end is now turning brown, some leaves of which are enclosed. We keep the house about 50° at night but the end where the trouble with the Beacons occurs runs quite a little warmer. Can you tell what causes this?

J. F. P.

Minnesota.

The enclosed specimens were very much dried up when received but we could plainly trace the ravages of red spider and bacteria indicating that the plants are being subjected to moist warm conditions that are not conducive to their well being. Run the soil a little to the dry side, then choose a bright morning to give the plants a good syringing.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Carnation Sport.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

We have a plant of Afterglow that produces a flower between dark and light pink, almost a salmon pink. The stem is much stronger and stiffer and the flower very fine, showing improvement this year over last. Is there such a carnation on the market? If so, will you tell me the name?

A SUBSCRIBER.

I do not know of any sport of Afterglow as described but there are several light pinks that are good. The standard is now of such a high order that to win recognition the newcomer has to be very fine. Afterglow's weakest point with many growers is the poor constitution of the plant; if this is overcome in the sport it is worthy of more extended trial.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Carnations Not Blooming.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

We have 22,000 carnation plants that do not seem to be producing as they should, lying in more or less dormant condition. The cut for Christmas week was only 1,500; last year on 12,000 plants we cut 3,000. The soil seems to be turning green and has been so for quite a while. What can be done to produce the blooms more rapidly?

ANXIOUS SUBSCRIBER.

An over abundance of water will cause the soil to turn green and also check the quick development of the blooms. Try running the beds a little to the dry side for a short while to hasten root action.

C. W. JOHNSON.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Frank W. Richardson, who was reported seriously ill, is convalescing and was able to be about the greenhouse early in February.

THE ROSE.

The young rose stock should receive the best of attention from the time the cuttings leave the sand until they are ready for planting, if one expects to have them cut profitably the following season. In the first place do not let the cuttings stay in the sand a day longer than necessary. The roots should be about half an inch long or a little longer, so that when potting them the pots can be filled nearly full of soil, then the roots can be placed without damage near the top of the pot. A good mixture of potting soil is three parts good heavy fibrous loam and one part well rooted cow manure, screened through a half-inch mesh sieve, pot firmly and do not thumb the soil too much but thump the soil in and around the roots. One cannot pot roses rapidly; and a good rose potter will not count his day's work by the thousands.

After potting (and too many should not be potted before they are placed on a bench and watered) the stock should be placed in a bright, well ventilated house, where they will have all the sunshine possible. For the first few days or until they begin to take root in the soil, they should be shaded and their foliage sprayed overhead. The plants should be placed on tables that have about a three-inch side board. This enables one to get at all of the foliage when syringing. When the sides of the benches come up higher than the pots it will be quite hard to keep down red spider. Half an inch of ashes after packing them good and hard makes a good medium to place the pots on. Be sure that there are no cracks or holes in the tables to let the ashes fall through and the layer of ashes should be of the same depth all over the bench. This has a tendency of course in keeping the plants from drying out in spots. The care of the young plants after they are first potted consists in keeping the plants shaded from the direct rays of the sun, using elevated shading screens made of cheese cloth, etc. Do not place newspapers over the tops of the plants, as we have seen done quite often; it is far better to make a small investment in some light wooden frames with light cloth tacked on them. They can be used in many ways during the season and when not in use they should be stored in some dry place. If made carefully they will last many seasons.

The young stock should be watered thoroughly after potting; they will hardly require more than a syringing overhead for a few days and great care should be used so as to not have them too wet until new roots are established. Rose cuttings will require 2½-inch pots. As a rule, all the varieties will go easily into these pots if the cuttings are not allowed to over-root in the sand. Keep them at a temperature of 58° to 60° at night and a day temperature of 65° to 75° according to the weather, on clear bright days at the latter temperature. Ventilate carefully, keeping a little fresh air circulating at all times where it is possible. Fumigate lightly before the fly gets a start and keep a little sulphur on the pipes all the time.

The grafted plants, as a rule, grow very rapidly and consequently they require a little more water. They should be gone over (after they are far enough advanced to stand the full sunshine) and retied, that is wherever the raffia has broken, and some of the early grafted sticks will soon become injured if the raffia is allowed to cut into the bark. Where the raffia is found to be squeezing, the tie should be removed and replaced, for the union should be protected from breaking, only remove the ties where they can be replaced by staking the plants. This should be done when shifting them for the first time into 3½-inch pots. The grafted stock soon becomes crowded if the pots are placed touching each other. As soon as they require it they should be allowed more room between the rows crosswise of the bench, keeping the pots touching in the rows. This will prevent the plants from falling over when syringing. The grafts coming from the case at this season will require shading for a longer period than they did a month back and it is a hard matter to keep them from wilting if they are placed on a bench where there is air on the house. A good plan is to have a few holed sash arranged so the plants can be tempered off before allowing them the regular temperature of the more advanced plants.

The houses will require lots of attention from now on. The old plants should be growing vigorously now, which means a great amount of tying for one thing and careful disbudding. It is also in order to put on a mulch of some kind, preferably half rotted cow manure. If fresh manure only is obtainable, it should be covered lightly with fine soil to prevent spotting of the foliage and flowers. Do not apply a heavy mulch just yet, and do not neglect to break up the mulch about once a week. If this is done one will get the full fertilizing benefit of the manure and at the same time it is essential, as it aids greatly in the evaporation of the soil. Do not be in too great a hurry to mulch unless the plants are vigorous and in full growth. The slow moving stock should get under way before mulching.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Would it be advisable in using lime for eelworms to place the lime in the liquid manure tank or would it be better to use the lime alone?

W. A. F.

District of Columbia.

We would advocate the use of a saturated solution of lime water used independently of the liquid manure, in "W. A. F.'s" case either for eelworms or earthworms, although if the plants are badly affected with club root caused by the eelworm they are practically past recovery and although the lime water would do no harm, clear water would probably do just as much good. Keeping the soil exceedingly wet is about all one can do for the plants. But for angle worms or the common earth worms the lime water will remove them.

We prefer to slake the lime and allow it to stand until it settles, then use the clear liquid. Lime spilled around on the soil has a tendency to form a crust, making it rather difficult to water evenly.

WHEN winter breaks be prepared to tempt the planter with green and growing things and make prices to cover coal bills.

DR. WM. TRELEASE, for more than 22 years director of the Missouri Botanical Garden (Shaw's Gardens) St. Louis, Mo., resigned his position February 19 and the resignation has been accepted with regret. Dr. Trelease desires to be relieved of administrative duties so that he can devote more time to research.

THE long excessive cold spell is causing considerable anxiety in some sections. Depleted coal bins, with trouble obtaining additional supply, frozen water supply and the long hours of incessant watching and firing have left traces of anxious moments on the faces of many growers.

LOSSES by fire this winter among greenhouse proprietors have been many and large. No doubt the long, heavy firing has developed every weakness in the heating appliances. During such times a careful inspection of wood-work near flues and chimneys should be maintained, for a fire during severe weather means a total loss of stock.

Third National Flower Show.

The National Flower Show committee announces that Mrs. F. F. Thompson of New York, whose beautiful estate at Canandaigua is one of the show places of this country, has contributed $500 to be used towards securing foreign exhibits.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

As no objections have been filed, public notice is hereby given that the registration of the new variety of orchid Lælia anceps, var. Lageriana, by Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., becomes complete.

New York Florists' Club.

The meeting of the New York Florists' Club to be held Monday evening, March 11, will be known as Rose and Orchid night. Any growers desiring to exhibit these two flowers will have an opportunity to do so, and if they cannot accompany the exhibit, it can be sent to the exhibition committee, care of Traendly & Schenk, 131 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, to arrive there before four o'clock Monday afternoon, March 11. The exhibition committee will see that they are properly staged.

I. S. HENDRICKSON, Chairman.

Parcels Post.

According to the data furnished by W. A. Henry, emeritus professor of agriculture, Madison, Wis., the United States has the lowest weight limit for parcels carried by mail and the highest rate per pound of any country having a parcel post system. Powerful interests are opposing a general parcel post system by every possible means, especially by flooding congress with petitions in opposition and by urging one cent letter postage. It is useless to expect congressmen to vote for parcel post when they are all the time hearing from the opposition and not a word from those desiring the measure. March 18 has been set apart as Parcel Post day and all those desirous of seeing a general parcel post law passed by the present congress are requested to write their two senators and representative in congress urging the passage of this law. Take the calendar and draw a circle around March 18 and on that day pour into Washington a flood of letters that will convince the members of congress that the American people are in earnest in their call for an up-to-date general parcel post.

Chicago's Spring Flower Show.

Final premium lists have been mailed and anyone that has not received one is urged to write to J. H. Burdett, secretary, 1620 West 104th place, Chicago.

Particular attention is called to the rules regarding time of entry, and the labeling of exhibits. Exhibitors are earnestly requested to notify the secretary or the manager in advance regarding the space they will need so an idea of the available exhibits may be obtained as early as possible.

No entry fees are required in any classes from private gardeners and several of the Lake Geneva and Lake Forest gardeners have promised exhibits.

In order to make a creditable display, all the exhibits it is possible to get are needed, and every florist in the Chicago neighborhood is urged to send something, whether he feels sure it will win a prize or not.

J. H. BURDETT, Sec'y.

Massachusetts Agricultural College.

At the meeting to be held at the Massachusetts Agricultural College the second week in March, the morning of Thursday, March 14, will be devoted to a consideration of market gardening problems and the afternoon and evening to floricultural subjects. H. D. Haskins will speak on "Fertilizers for Glass House Agriculture," Dr. H. H. Whetzel on "Plant Disease Problems for the Florist," and Dr. H. T. Fernald on "Some Recent Investigations in Greenhouse Fumigations." There will be a display of roses, carnations and other floral products, exhibits having been promised from A. N. Pierson, Inc., Peter Fisher, M. A. Patten, C. H. Totty, Waban Rose Conservatories, Eber Holmes, Bassett & Washburn, Chicago Carnation Co., W. H. Elliott and others. The college ranges will be inspected Friday morning, March 15, after which an observation trip will be taken to the ranges of the Montgomery Rose Co., Hadley, and H. W. Field, Northampton.

A number of horticultural societies have been invited to participate in these meetings, and it is hoped that the same enthusiasm may be shown in the advancement of floricultural interests as is shown by others in their annual meetings.

E. A. WHITE.

Greed Kills McKinley Day.

The non-observance of McKinley day was the subject of much comment from many sections and in an editorial the Milwaukee News states that the day has been commercialized out of existence, and adds that the advancing of the price of carnations to such an extent that patrons who would gladly have worn the flower refused to pay the extortion demanded by dealers, has tainted the sentiment and the heel of greed threatens to crush it and kill the observance. It is the old story of killing the goose that laid the golden egg.

Big Money in Medicinal Crops.

The production of medicinal plants as farm crops is receiving some attention. Dr. E. L. Newcomb of the Minnesota University asserts that foxglove, from which digitalis is obtained, yields in his garden at the rate of $4,666 to the acre. He raised 100 pounds, worth $1.20 a pound, produced on 1,120 square feet, which the professor figures out at the rate per acre mentioned.

At Chicago Parks.

The midwinter season at the different city parks is always interesting, especially those that keep a show house full of blooming plants for the city residents to enjoy, and that they do enjoy them is evident if one will only visit the greenhouses and note the pleasure reflected in the faces of the thousands who visit these houses during the long cold winter season. Sundays especially are the greenhouses visited by large numbers who pass through the houses or sit upon the benches provided for their comfort and enjoy the most beautiful products of nature grown with the best of skill just as much as the more wealthy who are able to own and operate their own extensive conservatories. These elaborate displays that are continued throughout the winter entail an immense amount of thought and labor for a succession must be grown to keep up these beautiful displays of blooming plants for the arrangements must not only be such as to provide something to take the place of those that are passing, but also to have a continuous variety, and the plans are so perfected that the visitor from week to week is furnished with something new to make the visit enjoyable.

LINCOLN PARK.

The beautiful show house at Lincoln park now has a magnificent display of cinerarias in the center. The plants of Cineraria stellata are beautiful specimens, many being fit for the exhibition tables at the prominent spring shows held in some cities, and the plants of the hybrid cinerarias are splendidly grown, the large flowers of brilliant shades making a beautiful contrast with the larger plants of the stellata. On the side tables were well-grown cyclamen full of their odd-shaped flowers which attracted the attention of all the visitors. Orchids are a great attraction at these houses and very interesting and beautiful species and varieties are always to be seen. Cattleya Trianae are now displayed in large numbers and some very beautiful varieties are on exhibition. Calanthe Veitchii also is to be seen in quantity and adds to the interesting display. The cinerarias are soon to be followed by the azaleas of which there are some very large specimens just coming into flower. The stove house is always of interest for it contains a large number of varieties of anthuriums and nepenthes.

To keep up this beautiful display necessitates of course a number of houses where the plants are grown and brought into perfection. A large collection of orchids of all the different genera and species is grown, the different species and varieties of cattleyas all being found in splendid condition and a collection of seedlings are being nursed along with the hope of producing some startling new variety. These babies of Head-gardener Schiele are very interesting and the patience of the true gardener is manifest in waiting years to see results. A grand display of rambler roses is promised in the near future, the plants being very finely grown and luxuriant and just showing buds, and the lilies for Easter are timed to a nicety. Propagation for the summer bedding is now also in progress, some 25,000 plants being grown to set out the beds for this large park.

GARFIELD PARK.

The large houses at Garfield park are always an attraction for many residents of the city during the winter, for in this immense area covered with glass one might easily imagine he had been suddenly transported to a tropical clime, the large palms and other plants reaching thirty or more feet over his head. The show house here covers a large area and it takes a very great number of plants to keep this house in full bloom, and a large assortment is always on exhibition. A notable collection now in flower is large camellias in full bloom. Primula chinensis were nicely grown and were beautifully arranged by colors, begonias and cinerarias were also showy. A plant displayed here that is not often seen is Conoclinium celestinum which is closely allied to the eupatoriums, bearing large heads of violet blue flowers, in fact, it might be likened to an immense ageratum. A large number of narcissus added to the gorgeous coloring presented to the eye.

The preparatory houses are filled with well-grown plants to take the places of those which will soon be passing. The Easter stock is rapidly coming forward, the lilies seeming to be in just the right condition to have them at their best. Another novelty noted in these houses was a fine lot of Saintpaulia ionantha, a beautiful blue flower with yellow stamens. This flower has the appearance of the violet but is borne in clusters and the yellow center makes a most delightful contrast. The raising of the large quantity of bedding stock for the park system which is propagated and grown at this range occupies a large amount of bench space, about one hundred thousand plants being required.

The resignation of John Sells, early in the year, who has been head gardener ever since the houses were built, followed so recently by his death, has left this large range of glass without a head gardener at present, but this place will probably be shortly filled, the examination for the position taking place this week.

BLOOMINGTON, IND.—James H. Cain has sold a two-thirds interest in the Cain Floral Co. to Arnold Winkler and Sam Schemuk, and the firm has reorganized under the name of the Standard Floral Co. Messrs. Winkler and Schemuk will assume the active management and are now renovating the retail store and planning other changes.

THE MARKET DEPRESSED.

The first week or two of Lent has always been a time for prices to fall but the sudden change in the market the last week was the greatest that has been experienced, some of the dealers who have handled flowers for years say that a similar state has never existed at this time of the year. The stock of all the different flowers of the season has been increasing for the last two weeks, but there was no great surplus of anything, in fact, the market cleaned up well to the middle of last week. But the blizzard of last week placed a sudden check on the retailer's trade and this was followed later in the week by more unfavorable weather and the demand upon the wholesaler fell to almost nothing. In the meantime the receipts were increasing and the stock accumulating rapidly, and at the close of the week there was a large surplus on hand. It was hoped that at the beginning of this week there might be an improvement, but if anything it was worse; the stock kept coming in and there was no call for anything and the refrigerators and counters were well filled with splendid stock with but few buyers. Prices began to drop and sales are reported at almost as low figures as are sometimes asked in late spring and a great quantity of stock was sacrificed. Orchids are the only flowers that have been able to hold their price. This has been caused by the small receipts and there is no doubt but that the prices on these would have advanced had there not been such a large stock of everything else on which the prices had fallen so low. The receipts of roses are not large but with the call so small a lowering of prices of all except American Beauties and the novelties, is recorded. American Beauties hold up well. Carnations are at a standstill and the receipts are large with the stock not moving. Elegant blooms can be seen on the counters awaiting orders, and some very low quotations for good-sized lots are reported. Violets are a drug, the demand at fair prices is not large enough to clean up the fresh, home-grown stock, and the Eastern stock is sold to the bargain hunters. Bulbous stock drags and there is a great accumulation of all lines. Lily of the valley is overplentiful and vases of the finest quality are begging purchasers. The one article which is reported scarce is spagnum moss and any stock available is purchased on sight. With the return of milder weather, so that the people can get about, no doubt trade will resume more normal conditions.

NOTES.

The Kroeschell Bros. Co. made an exhibit of the Kroeschell boiler, heating system and generator at Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., at "Farmers' Week," February 19-24. Fred Lautenschlager was on hand to explain all the excellent features. W. L. Kroeschell states that business is starting in very early. Orders were received this week for four No. 14 boilers, the capacity of each being 36,000 square feet, which would indicate that large ranges are going to be built and in all likelihood this is but a mere trifle compared with what will follow.

By a reorganization of the South Park system of administration the office of assistant superintendent was abolished. H. S. Richards, former assistant, was appointed superintendent of maintenance and repair. Others affected by the change are Linn White, E. B. De Groot, W. I. Bell, J. L. Mitzenbuhler, J. C. Cavanaugh, T. C. Richard, and Fred Kanst. The heads of departments will in the future report direct to the general superintendent.

The spring show of the Horticultural Society is scheduled for March 12-17 at the Art Institute. Copies of the premium list can be had on application to James H. Burdett, 1620 West One Hundred and Fourth Place, Chicago.

George J. Newman, a gardener, 7628 Washington boulevard, aged 66 years, killed himself by jumping from the fourth story window of the Wesley hospital one morning last week.

F. J. Krauss, with the E. F. Winterson Co., entertained a number of friends at his home last Saturday evening, February 24, and the following people in the trade were present: Joe Welch, Otto Goerisch, Edgar Winterson, Miss Edmunds, Warren Johnson, Miss Elsie Winterson, George Pieser and wife, George Goebel, Nicholas Wastenburg, Arthur Meirik, John Loser and Leo Gannon. Several of the above entertained those present with vocal selections and Joe Welch and his fair companion gave an exhibition of the turkey trot and danced the latest society waltzes. Mrs. Krauss saw to it that the party did not go hungry and the table that was set for the crowd was fit for a king. That the young people had a most enjoyable time was certain, for a few were slow to leave, and from last reports it was heard that they had remained for breakfast.

The Geo. M. Garland Co. has got something new in the greenhouse manufacturing line but as yet we have been unable to find out just what it really is. Whatever it is, it has got the trade guessing and some of the growers are inclined to think that it may possibly be another range of greenhouses built on wheels or, better yet, an aeroplane range. The Garland Co. will have wall space at the Illinois State Florists' Association's meeting at Joliet next week, and it remains to be seen whether it will then inform the trade of its invention or not.

C. L. Washburn and A. T. Pyfer are devoting a great deal of time to the interests of the State Florists' Association and are endeavoring to make the next meeting in Joliet on March 5-G the greatest in the history of the organization. Both of the gentlemen have a large number of application blanks in their possession that need signatures and they would greatly appreciate it if the florists in this state that are willing to help a good cause along would enroll as members.

The Chicago Carnation Co.'s crack baseball team cordially invites the trade to attend the dance that it will give in the Adams hall next Tuesday, in honor of the visitors to the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, which will be held in Joliet on March 5. Better go, Herald and Princess Charming will be there.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. are showing fancy stock in all lines with a large quantity of roses showing up exceptionally well. American Beauty roses are arriving in much larger quantities and new stock, especially in the longer grades, is noted.

J. L. Goul, formerly connected with some of the large rubber concerns in the east, is now talking greenhouse hose with the growers in this vicinity in the interests of the N. J. Car Spring & Rubber Co. of this city.

N. J. Wietor says that the stock in Wietor Bros.' greenhouses is doing nicely and is looking very promising and that his firm still has a fine lot of rooted carnation cuttings to offer.

The Des Plaines Floral Co. reports that their carnation crops have been injured and set back considerably from the effects of gas entering the greenhouses.

Albert Lies of Niles Center is already to start work on the new greenhouse that he is going to build this spring.

Kennicott Bros. Co. has just received a shipment of 40 cases of boxwood.

Wholesale Cut Flowers and Green Goods.

E. J. Olsan of Ames, Ia., was in the city this week on business and pleasure combined. He placed a large order with the Raedlein Basket Co. for an assortment of all the latest novelties in both cut flower and plant baskets and visited his old friend Peter Risch in Evanston last Sunday. Mr. Olsan met his daughter, Mrs. Model, of Cincinnati, here, and she returned home with him.

Fred Strail, with the Briggs House Florist, arranged a very pretty decoration for Mrs. S. M. Frankland in the Francis Furst room of the Congress Hotel, Wednesday, February 27. Forty-four corsages of lily of the valley and orchids were included in the order.

Illinois State Florists' Association.

The Illinois State Florists' Association will hold its seventh annual meeting in Joliet, March 5-6. This is a call to every florist in the state to come to this meeting. We need you to help the good cause of the florist trade, and you not only need us but can see what the association has done and will do for you. The florists' industry is growing rapidly and its various needs, such as the standardization of grades—both of flowers and plants, should be made uniform all over the state. There is also a universal demand that introducers of new varieties should not only show these varieties to the florists but should explain their methods of culture and give the average number of blooms that can be cut from a plant under ordinary conditions. We need some uniform methods of determining the values of new varieties. Take, for instance, this new rose, Sunburst. E. G. Hill has promised to come to our meeting and give us some facts regarding it. These are what we want to know.

The association assisted very materially in getting the express rates reduced and stands ready to join with the other mercantile associations in the state in protecting our trade from unreasonable rules or rates.

Our association is recognized by the other trade associations as being an important factor in the general business of the state. This puts all florists on a good commercial basis and helps advertise the business as an important and prominent industry. Now, don't stand back and let some brother florist do your share as well as his own in looking after the interests of such a business, but come on along and help all you can. Bring a small exhibit if possible. The dues are only $1.00 per year. Illinois expects every florist to do his duty and attend this convention.

C. L. WASHBURN, Pres.

A. T. Pyfer, who has charge of the arrangements, makes the following statement: Trains leave Chicago on the Rock Island Railroad at 8:30 a. m. (which will reach Joliet in time for the opening Wednesday), and 11:45 a. m., and at 7:00 a. m. on the Chicago & Alton, returning at 6:00 p. m. and 8:27 p. m. on the Rock Island and at 7:00 p. m. on the Chicago & Alton. The fare from Chicago is 74 cents. The headquarters will be at the Hotel Munroe, with rates at $2.50 per day American plan. A number of applications for space have been received from the supply firms, the rate for which with a banner sign is $5.00. The hall is a large double store, centrally and favorably located only half a block from the Hotel Munroe and three to four blocks from all depots.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—The February meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst. W. H. Elliott of Brighton gave an instructive talk on roses. The March meeting will be held at Mount Holyoke college conservatories, March 5.

Omaha, Neb.

Business has been good since the first of the year and the florists in this vicinity have no reason to complain. The severe cold weather in January made stock scarce, especially roses, and they commanded good prices. American Beauties never were so scarce as in January and February, but from now on all roses will be more plentiful and of good quality. The trade on St. Valentine's day was large in all flowers, violets taking the lead. Carnations are plentiful, as well as bulbous stock of all descriptions.

NOTES.

J. J. Hess and wife with their two children and Miss Swoboda will leave for Europe May 1 on the steamer Pres. Grant. Miss Swoboda will stay one year in Berlin. Mr. and Mrs. Hess and family will return the latter part of September.

Four weeks ago a gas pipe burst near P. Floth's greenhouses and caused considerable damage to his stock. The gas company settled with Mr. Floth for a good sum which prevented a law suit.

The outlook for a good Easter trade is bright. The lilies are showing up fine as well as other Easter stock.

Denver.

The weather conditions for the past week have not been very favorable for business. Snowstorms have been the order all the week and at present one of the heaviest snowstorms of the season is in progress. The Lenten season too has had a marked effect on business, the result being a surplus of stock. Carnations are beginning to accumulate and though not many have as yet been sacrificed the indications point that way. American Beauties continue to be very scarce and the quality of what are coming in is only fair. Tea roses are in better condition and the supply is larger than it has been for some time. Sweet peas are of good quality, but the supply has been greater than the demand and some have had to be sacrificed. The prevailing cloudy weather will reduce this crop considerably. Violets have had a bad week and can be bought for 50 cents per hundred. A visit to the greenhouses finds the growers busy getting the Easter stock in shape. Lilies are coming along in nice shape and there will be but a very small percentage lost this year from disease. Hydrangeas are well budded and will be in excellent condition. Rambler roses are coming along nicely; there will not be so many of the larger sizes, the smaller ones being in greater demand. Bedding stock is being pushed along as fast as space will permit. The Park Floral Co. Elitch-Long Greenhouses, Mauff Floral Co., D. S. Grimes & Son and Newlander & Rollins have every available inch filled with stock ready to be shifted as soon as space can be secured.

A PROFUSION OF FLOWERS.

The bright sunny days of the past week have caused the flower market to be a mass of bloom—roses, carnations and violets in profusion. Roses are still bringing good prices, carnations and violets have dropped owing to over abundance. Violets are coming in very beautiful and many hundreds have been used and there was a large sale on St. Valentine's day. Washington's birthday did not create any demand for flowers.

NOTES.

The Maryland Automobile Show, held at the Fifth Regiment Armory, has been the leading attraction this week. The fine lighting of this big structure was quite a feature. A chandelier in the center of the ceiling looked like a mammoth sunburst with strings upon strings of electric bulbs, branching from it, intermingled with green and white bunting draped across the whole building. Tall palms were the principal decoration.

A glance through the range of I. H. Moss showed roses, carnations and lilies looking fine. Beacon has done very well here this season. Rambler roses and rhododendrons are being forced with bulbous stock for Easter. Cinerarias and primulas are in full bloom. Bridesmaid will probably be discarded next season, the popular Killarney taking its place.

The change or transfer of the superintendents of the public parks took place this week. We are very glad to know that James Boone still holds his position at Clifton park. Mr. Boone has excellent taste in the arranging of plants and the city has been beautified by his skilfully arranged beds and decorations.

At the democratic convention, which convenes in June, suggestion has been made to Chairman Crane that they use flowers more than bunting in decorating. It seems a very good suggestion and will mean a liberal use of flowers if carried out.

A jolly crowd in a big touring car have been visiting their fellow florists in Catonsville, Towson and Govans. The party consisted of Robert Graham, Robert Halliday, Geo. Morrison, Martin Lohr and — Fritzi.

The parks were crowded with people Sunday, many without overcoats or wraps. It looked spring-like, and one felt that Easter was not far off.

John Cook has a new seedling rose No. 380, which has proved a good bloomer. Formosum lilies and extra good hyacinths find ready sale.

HEAVY SNOWS.

We experienced during the past week one of the most severe snowstorms in years, practically tying everything up. Flowers have been coming in very plentifully, especially violets, sweet peas and carnations. There has not yet been an over abundance of roses, but there are quite a number of short American Beauties.

NOTES.

Dr. William Trelease, who has been director of the Missouri Botanical Garden since 1889, resigned his position February 26. Dr. Trelease is one of the best known botanists in America and will devote his attention exclusively to research work. His resignation will take effect May 1. He will spend the summer at his cottage in Wisconsin, and in the fall will go to Europe, spending some time at Kew Garden, London, also Berlin and Paris. He gives his staff much praise, crediting it with much of the success obtained at the garden.

RECEIPTS MUCH LARGER.

Flowers are coming in strong in most all lines. The quality, too, is good. The prices are getting down to such a plane where, if the retailer gets his price he can coin money. The only real shortage is still in roses. They are coming in slightly stronger and, judging from the condition of the stock, should get to the place where the receipts easily take care of all orders any day. The long-stemmed American Beauties are better in quality than they were and are cleaning up nicely. The short and mediums are not selling quite as quickly as the long, and usually there are a few left. Richmonds are selling well. The market is loaded with carnations of all kinds. They are mostly all of good quality and somehow or other a very large part of them are used, but, of course, not always at top prices. In sweet peas only the long-stemmed ones are selling. They are, in fact, in demand. The short-stemmed are usually not taken at all or at big sacrifices. What is true of the last is equally true of double violets. They are scarcely moving at all, while the single ones, though selling better than the doubles, are not going any too well. Lily of the valley is about equaling the demand for it. At times, however, when the request is unusual, it runs short. Bulbous stock is good and the supply of every kind is easily adequate. The sales are none too large, even lilies and callas which have been short are now abundant, and at the time of this writing it would have been no trick to fill the largest of orders with the stock on hand. The business in green goods is very satisfactory.

NOTES.

The auto show of the past week brought many visitors, including florists, to the city. Among them was the manager of the Buick Floral Co. of Washington C. H., who came with the expressed intention of purchasing a machine.

The heavy snow that piled up on the roofs of P. J. Ollinger's greenhouses at New Castle caused part of one of them to go down. The loss was about $1,500.

STOCK MORE PLENTIFUL.

Business has continued fair, considerable funeral work being done by many of the retailers. Stock is improving and is more plentiful in all grades. The supply of lilies and callas exceeds the demand, but good lily of the valley has been a little scarce. Violets are plentiful and meet with a fair demand, the Marie Elise violet also seems to gain favor, and some day will be in as good request as the older varieties. Orchids are selling a little slow, carnations of all varieties are plentiful and have dropped in price. Roses, too, are lower in price with stock enough to fill all orders with the exception of long-stemmed American Beauties which are short of the demand. Greens of all kinds sell well.

STOCK OF EXCELLENT QUALITY.

Business has been quieter since Lent came in but prices on all good stock are well maintained. A few mild days with increasing sunshine will, however, make a difference and lower prices will prevail, which in turn will revive the drooping trade. The penitential season has no longer any terror for the active florist, as with cheaper flowers, better displays are made, and this invariably draws business. That there is business to be had is evidenced by the large quantities of flowers that are handled by the street men just as soon as the weather permits them to open up their sidewalk stands. The stock in all lines now seen in the market is excellent. There are grand Killarneys and White Killarneys, carnations and sweet peas good enough for any exhibitor, in fact the select stock in all lines is all that could be desired. Easter lilies are perhaps a little overdone but they move fairly well at that. Bulbous stock, such as tulips and daffodils, also have to be pushed and the prices realized leave little for the grower. Snapdragon is a coming flower and will soon be offered in quantity in several grades. Gardenias are a trifle easier, as are cattleyas, the prices of which are made to meet a customer who can use a quantity. Greens of all kinds are still scarce and clean up every day.

NOTES.

The wind storm which visited the eastern coast last week was very severe in this vicinity; it was probably the strongest continuous wind storm ever experienced, lasting from six to eight hours in its fierce intensity and considerably longer before its force died out. Singular to say, however, there was little damage of any consequence to the greenhouse men, their greatest loss being in loose panes of glass, which were blown out by the force of the wind or sucked out by the vacuum. During such a storm all thoughts turn to the balloon houses of the Florex Gardens at North Wales. These mammoth structures we are glad to say stood the furious blow without the slightest damage except the loss of a few loose lights of glass. It is safe to say that they will never be subjected to a more severe test and their strength is a great card for the builders, the King Construction Co.

Walter P. Stokes has returned from Bermuda and is full of the beauties of those famous islands. The Easter lily as grown there is, however, not one of them and Mr. Stokes says that the field plants are for the most part a sorry lot. In a number of instances he saw the growers spraying them with some sort of insecticide. In contrast to this he recalled a visit there fifteen years ago when the stock seemed very luxuriant and there were few if any diseased plants to be seen.

Joseph H. Campbell has sold his large lot at Germantown avenue and Venago street, with his dwelling and greenhouses, covering three-quarters of an acre of ground, for $35,000. This is to be used as a theatre site for the Keith circuit. Under a portion of the theatre there will be stores, one of which has been reserved for Mr. Campbell, where he will continue the retail section of his business. The new purchasers take possession on June 1.

The Princeton rose continues to attract attention and many pilgrimages are made to that seat of learning to inspect it growing in the houses of Stockton & Howe, the originators. The Robert Craig Co. have secured the handling of the stock and under the skillful management of W. P. Craig, it is sure to reach all the rose centers of the country.

Joseph Heacock will address the Florists' Club at its meeting on March 5, his subject being an account of the "Farmers' Week at Ithaca," from which he has just returned.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. offer wallflowers, stocks and forget-me-nots. Pussy willows are also good sellers with them.

Ed Reid looks forward to a big Easter, as already he is having inquiries about stock and prices for this busy time.

Snapdragon is one of the features at Leo Niessen Co., an excellent assortment of this favorite being seen.

Callas and Easter lilies are seen in quantities at Berger Bros. Extra fine violets are also a feature.

W. J. Baker is coming round nicely and it is hoped will soon be on the job again. K.

New York State Floricultural Interests.

Answering the call of the New York Florists' Club, the delegates appointed by the different clubs and societies assembled at Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., Friday, February 23, at 2 p. m. It could readily be seen by the talk of the delegates the great interest that is being manifested in all parts of the state in this important movement.

Delegates had been appointed from New York, Albany, Buffalo, Syracuse, Rochester, Tuxedo, Glen Cove, and the societies who were unable to appoint delegates sent letters promising their support and expressing their approval of the proposed organization. Promptly at 2 p. m. the meeting was called to order by Charles B. Weathered, who read the call of the New York Florists' Club. Wm. F. Kasting was made temporary chairman, and John Young, temporary secretary.

Prof. L. H. Bailey gave a brilliant address on the necessity of organizing the floricultural interests of the state, and outlined what all other lines were doing, stating that up to the present time the florists had received no appropriations from the state for floricultural interests and it was all the fault of the florists because they had not asked for it.

Mr. Kasting also gave an interesting talk on the subject and urged the members to so organize that they would not only be in a position to ask for it, but to be in a position to demand it. Upon motion of Arthur Cowee it was decided to form a state organization.

A constitution and by-laws were adopted providing an annual meeting at Syracuse during State Fair week and a regular meeting at the New State College of Agriculture during Farmers' week.

The following were elected to serve until the annual meeting, to be held at the time of the State Fair to be held in Syracuse in September, 1912:

William F. Kasting, Buffalo, president; Dr. Erl A. Bates, Syracuse, vice-president; Charles B. Weathered, New York, vice-president; E. R. Fry, Rochester, vice-president; John Young, New York, secretary; W. A. Adams, Buffalo, treasurer; Prof. A. C. Beal, Ithaca, George Arnold, Rochester, executive committee.

President Kasting appointed the following committees: Legislative committee—F. R. Pierson, chairman, Tarrytown; Wm. T. Logan, Rochester; S. A. Anderson, Buffalo; Charles B. Weathered, New York; John Young, New York. State Fair committee—George E. Thorp, Syracuse, chairman; Wing R. Smith, Syracuse; A. Cowee, Berlin; Frank H. Traendly, New York; F. A. Danker, Albany.

Resolutions were passed pledging the support of the organization to secure a state appropriation of $75,000 for a horticulture building in Syracuse, and to support the bill introduced in the assembly by Mr. Wende to secure an appropriation of $50,000 for erecting greenhouses for experimental work in floriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Director L. H. Bailey and Prof. A. C. Beal received the standing vote of thanks of the delegates for providing the meeting room and many other courtesies extended.

There were present Wm. F. Kasting, W. A. Adams, Buffalo, George Arnold, E. R. Fry, W. T. Logan, Rochester; C. B. Weathered, John Young, New York; Dr. E. A. Bates, George E. Thorp, Syracuse; Arthur Cowee, Berlin, and I. S. Hendrickson, Floral Park, Long Island.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

PORT WAYNE, IND.—Frank J. Knecht has placed a contract with the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, for six new greenhouses, five 27x200 and one 29x200. Mr. Knecht was formerly superintendent of the W. J. & M. S. Vesey establishment.

MARKET WELL SUPPLIED.

We have again entered into a temperate climate such as was experienced during the cold snap, and florists are breathing easier; they agree that it was the hardest cold spell that we ever had. The empty bins and depleted coal piles show plainly what we have gone through. There is a general relaxation of the tense strain we have had, and with mild weather, reported robins and early spring poems, we have cause for thanks. At present the market is plentifully supplied with everything. Roses are somewhat scarce, but the call is not large enough to make a shortage. Brides and Bridesmaids are seen occasionally but not well enough grown to attract any attention. At present they are a thing of the past. Perle des Jardins is seen, crooked-necked and crumpled. As a winter rose it is, and always was, a distinct failure. Carnations are in first-class shape and low prices. There is a better outlet for them as the street stands can again handle them in quantity. Violets are good, the best we have seen in Boston are those grown by A. S. Parker of Stoneham. They are grown to perfection and the bunching is certainly ahead of anything we have seen. Each flower is placed to stand out individually. Enbous stock is plentiful, and some of it is beginning to show some wear. Trade in general for this season is good. Lent has not the terrors and blueness to the florist it used to have.

NOTES.

Isn't it about time we had some poetry from the Philadelphia poet? Probably his next lay will be his annual piece about the shamrock, and ending by officially making a declaration that spring is open.

Glass has taken a jump since the last report and some have been caught in the squeeze caused by the rise.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Chas. Boyle of T. F. Galvin's, whose wife died last week.

THE LENTEN GLUT.

The expected and much feared glut is with us, and with us good and strong. All kinds of stock is piled up in every corner of the wholesale houses, and the demand is what is ordinarily expected at the beginning of Lent. The bright weather of the past week was the cause and prices have dropped to a point too low to be quoted.

NOTES.

It seemed to be visiting week at the McCallum Co., Miss Tillie Kyle spending a few days at Cleveland, Jack Martin a few days at Waynesburg and Ross E. Adgate a few at Erie and Oil City.

Murray McGrew has resigned his position with R. J. Daschboch, on account of ill health, and thinks a rest down on the farm during the summer will fit him for the coming winter.

Bee Huscroft, Steubenville, has reformed, got married, and is running for sheriff. The popularity Bee enjoys makes his election as sure as Roosevelt's.

A LARGE OVER-SUPPLY.

The cut flower market is still in a very unsatisfactory condition and there is no active call for anything, with the possible exception of the high grade novelties in roses, American Beauties and gardenias. The carnation market has gone all to pieces and large lots are being sacrificed at very low prices. Small lots of the very best blooms are always called for but these orders are hardly noticeable on account of the heavy supply; the same can be said of bulbous stock, but these conditions have always prevailed at times. While it is true that the market is overcrowded with good stock just at present there is no question but when the grower figures up at the end of this year, and makes comparison with other seasons, he will realize it has been a very good year indeed. The cut flower market in New York as a general thing is in a growing condition in all directions and undoubtedly will continue to be so. Perhaps a few will not become "near" millionaires as rapidly as in years gone by, still there will be a great many that will make comfortable fortunes in all branches of this wonderful business. From talks with the retailers, the majority seem to be very well satisfied with the season's business thus far, and are already making extensive preparations for a large Easter trade.

NOTES.

John F. Huss, Hartford, Conn., president of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, was a recent visitor. Mr. Huss is state vice-president of the S. A. F. for Connecticut, and is working hard to increase the membership from that state. In addition to this, he is doing his utmost to arouse interest in the coming National Flower Show among the gardeners, and is much encouraged with his efforts along these lines.

Many New Yorkers have signified their intention of visiting the International Horticulture Exposition to be held in London in May. Among them will be Charles H. Totty, whose mission will be to interest foreign exhibitors in the coming National Flower Show to be held in the New Grand Central Palace in 1913.

D. J. Murphy, formerly of Chicago, has leased the John H. Taylor greenhouses for a term of five years, and has taken possession. During the coming summer, he will make extensive repairs and alterations. The cut from this place is consigned to James McManus, 55 West Twenty-eighth street.

during "Farmers' Week," W. R. Cobb, of the Lord & Burnham Co. giving an illustrated lecture on "Greenhouse Construction." I. S. Hendrickson and Arthur Cowee also delivered important and interesting lectures.

Monday, March 11, will be "Rose and Orchid Night" at the meeting of the Florists' Club, and a good display is already assured. Intending exhibitors are requested to send their flowers in care of Traendly & Schenck, 131 West Twenty-eighth street, on the day of the meeting.

A visitor this week was Fred Lautenschlager of Chicago, who has been attending "Farmers' Week" at Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., and incidentally selling the large vegetable growers in that section of the state a few Kroeschell boilers.

It is expected that many of "Shining Lights" will join the party going to Chicago, March 12, to attend the meeting of the Board of Directors of the S. A. F. and visit the spring show of the Horticultural Society of Chicago.

A bill has been introduced in the assembly for the appropriation of $50,000 for the erection of a range of greenhouses at Cornell university for experimental and teaching work in floriculture.

MUCH BETTER WEATHER.

The advent of Lent does not seem to have made great inroads on business, as there are daily reports of dinners and other social events. There is quite a change for the better in weather, there being several days of sunshine last week with the temperature ranging from 40° to 50°. Quite naturally the thaw is increasing the volume of stock, roses, carnations and sweet peas being more plentiful. There is some bulb stock moving. The Holland agents have been dropping in during the past week and have been hearing some straight talk from the growers relating to the quality of their wares.

band of visiting Australian boys, is enthusiastic over the intelligence displayed by the young lads, who ranged in ages from twelve to eighteen years. He says: "Much as I like our own American boys, I must acknowledge that these Australian lads were superior in general intelligence, ability and good manners to any like number of our own boys that I have ever met." He further stated that the young fellows were well informed on many features of the florist business.

An event of interest this week is a dinner on the night of February 27 given by Mrs. Draper in honor of Cardinal Gibbons. The Gude Bros. Co. had the decoration, which of course, was in red, many Richmond roses being used.

James Quinn, for several years past foreman at the J. B. Freeman, Brightwood, range, has resigned and is now at the plant bureau, Department of Agriculture.

Geo. H. Cooke decorated for a dinner on the night of February 24, and used 150 cattleyas and 160 Phaleopsis amabilis. A. F. F.

Alderman Mills, the florist, was initiated in the Scottish rites at the Masonic Temple the last week of February.

The comparatively new firm, Tomlinson & Key, are not novices in the flower trade, both having had long experience in growing and selling. Remote from glass, as they are here, it keeps them decidedly busy to provide a steady supply of cut blooms.

Some French Notes on the Use of Simple Insecticides. — When tobacco juice is not easily to be had, a decoction of the stems and leaves of the tomato in combination with a strong soapsuds is fully as efficacious as the tobacco decoction and has been used in France for many years. The extract of tobacco itself gives better results in combination with crystals of potash or carbonate of soda, or a strong soapsuds. These alkaline bases act upon the shell or varnish of the insects, making it possible for the toxin of the tobacco or insecticide proper to be absorbed into the tissues. A good petroleum emulsion consists of one pound black soap, one pint hot water, beaten together until smooth, cooled; one quart commercial ammonia, stir again and add, little by little, one quart of petroleum, then enough water to make 80 quarts. These recipes being inexpensive can be used in quantities sufficient for perfect success.

Ornamental Apple Trees. — While these are used somewhat for forcing, yet they are quite neglected in our gardens, though most desirable. The Malus floribunda, flowers bright pink passing to white; M. floribunda atrosanguinea, deeper rose and very showy; M. Angustifolia fl. pl., double pink flowers, large and fragrant; M. fl. Scheideckeri, carmine pink, and so free-blooming as to be preferred for forcing by the Hollanders; added to these is the new M. floribunda purpurea, certainly the reddest of the ornamental apples; the flowers are large, single, bright cerise; the bud blood red; the young foliage a purple bronze passing to a bronzy green. Vigorous of growth, very fine and early of bloom, it will be especially esteemed for forcing.

New Hybrid Clematis Montana.— V. Lemoine and Son are offering three hybrid clematis obtained from Montana grandiflora and Montana rubens, which are recommended for their freedom from disease, rich profusion of spring bloom and brilliant deep green foliage. They are: C. montana lilacina, similar to m. Rubens, but larger flower, bluish lilac. C. montana perfecta, flowers one-third larger than m. grandiflora; perfect form; sepals very broad, a fine bluish white. The appearance of the flower resembles Anemone silvestris grandiflora. C. montana undulata, flowers three to four inches in diameter, sepals very wavy, white tinted azure.

New Hybrid Abutilons, De Noter.— Hybrids obtained by Professor de Noter by fertilizing ordinary medium-flowering varieties with the pollen of the giant semi-double Abutilon Victoria. This race is prodigal of bloom, flowers one to two inches in diameter, colors from orange to primrose and rose color. Seeds sown in greenhouse or hotbed in February will give blooming plants in May, continuing to flower through the summer. If the best plants are selected, lifted, kept over winter and replanted in rich soil the following spring they flourish abundantly and are most decorative.

Clerodendron Fargesii. — Of Chinese origin, this new clerodendron, blooming in July and August. It grows 10 to 12 feet high, and may even form a very small tree. The wood is gray, the young shoots at first violet turning to yellowish-gray; foliage light green, rough to the touch, somewhat downy underneath. The inflorescence is terminal in clusters of 20 to 40 small flowers, consisting of a long tube terminated by five spreading petals of a rosy white color and jasmine-like fragrance. The fruit is a sort of blackish-purple grape surrounded by a persistent brown red calyx.

Tithonia speciosa.—An introduction of Vilmorin in 1910 as Sun of Mexico has proven a very decorative plant, growing 12 to 14 feet high, annual, with stems somewhat woolly, leaves alternate, dentated, often trilobate; flowers on long stems (18 to 20 inches), in the manner of the dahlia; blooming very freely as the season advances; coloring a scarlet red above, orange below, the flowers fading to orange. The plant is well adapted for backgrounds or groups, and being annual, should be started early and set out as soon as danger of frost is over.

A Rose Colored Salvia.—A half-forgotten and wholly charming plant is the Salvia Horminum, var. rose, a sage having its inconspicuous flower stalks tipped with delicate sprays of rose-colored bracts of the most attractive shade, lasting from June to August. It is biennial and if sowed in August or September will bloom the following season if kept over winter in frames. A bed of these plants, edged by the woolly Salvia argentea, would be as novel as charming.

Heliotrope Mathilde Cremeaux. — This variety, while not a novelty of this season, is proving itself a heliotrope of the first rank, not only for its beauty, but also for its resistance to unfavorable conditions; the summer of 1911, with its three months of extreme heat, hardly interfered at all with its continuous production of large fine flowers, and the cold wet season of 1910 left it equally unscathed. It has proven itself one of the brilliant recent introductions.

Dahlia, Queen Wilhelmina.—This has proven itself most valuable this past season for its immense number of pure white flowers; Dahlia Soleure, a dwarf sort, single white flowers with bright red forming a star, was also sensationally free-blooming; Dahlia Maurice Divoire, a fine rose, with double pure white collarette, has been a great success in England in 1911.

Primula Winteri.—A new hardy primrose from the Himalayas, remarkable for its curious appearance, stems and leaves having the appearance of being heavily powdered; its flowers

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, President; Marshall H. Durvea, New York, First Vice-President; Edgar Gregory, Marblehead, Mass., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary and Treasurer. Next annual convention at Chicago, June 25-27, 1912.

RALPH M. WARD says: "A lily to a live friend is better than 10 to a corpse."

DES MOINES, IOWA.—The Iowa Seed Co. writes that mail order trade is starting in lively and is ahead of last year.

SEED POTATOES are in good demand all over the country and especially in the west. Early Ohio, both red and white, northern grown, are in the lead.

JEROME B. RICE is making a health trip south. His friends, and they include everybody in the seed trade, earnestly wish for his speedy recovery.

FIELD seed corn, greatly injured by the severe weather, shows such low germination in many cases that better than double usual prices are predicted by well informed dealers.

SEDALIA, MO.—Archias' Seed Store reports mail order trade very satisfactory, the business for February 19 being the largest, both in number of orders and value, the firm has ever had in a single February day.

VISITED CHICAGO:—Chas. Loechner, of Loechner & Co., and A. Kakuda, representing Yokohama Nursery Co., New York; A. Colyn, representing C. Colyn & Sons, Voorhout, Holland; C. P. Gueff, representing Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.

TROY, N. Y.—H. W. Gordinier & Son have become incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000. The directors are Hiram W. Gordinier, George A. Gordinier, Clarence H. Gordinier and John G. Leversee. The corporation will succeed H. W. Gordinier, 357-359 River street.

CALLA bulbs are reported by some growers in California as not making as strong growth as usual. In general the number of growers seems to be increasing, with a tendency to plant more extensively than before. The new growers will have some bulbs to offer this year and a still larger percentage in 1913.

Braslan Seed Growers Co.

Lettuce, Onion, Sweet Peas,

SAN JOSE, CALIF.

THE condition of greatest concern to the seed trade just now is the continued lack of rain in the California seed growing districts.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, February 28, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $11 to $15 per 100 pounds.—The Leonard Seed Co. reports both wholesale and retail business good, with the outlook favorable for big spring trade.—A. H. Goodwin returned this week from New York.—J. C. Vaughan has returned from the south.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—For some time the Amzi Godden Seed Co. has been considering the question of discontinuing its retail department and devoting all of its capital and energy to its large and rapidly growing wholesale and mail order business. This firm has had several attractive offers and has finally traded with the McVay Seed Co., which will take over this department and cater to the retail trade of this city and vicinity. In this trade the wholesale business of the city in this line will be broadened and enlarged. For several years the wholesale trade of the Amzi Godden Seed Co. has been one of the largest in the south, but it is now the expectation of the officers of the company to make it one of the largest in the entire country. It is believed that with ample capital, experience and concentrated energy, the firm can reach every state in the south and make this city the home of the southern wholesale seed business.

Free Seeds—Municipal Nursery Stock.

Referring to the produce operations of Mayor Lew Shank of Indianapolis, the New York Sun says: "The private dealer must have lost money if he came down to Lew's prices and ultimately would have been ruined in competition with the mayor of Indianapolis, who was not trying to make a living but political capital out of the farce of cheapening the cost of living to consumers."

The Sun, as usual, has said something. May we not justly ask by what right can a city government or park commission establish a nursery and supply consumers with nursery stock at nominal cost to the injury of the business of the nurseryman and florist, whose tax moneys they are spending?

What right has the Department of Agriculture to buy and give away common garden seeds, causing loss to the business of tax-paying seedsmen?

We are the largest handlers of Cannas in the world. Our prices upon Cannas will bear comparison with any house in the Canna business.

Our Cannas are true to name—two and three, sometimes four eyes—are sound, dormant, and are packed 250 in a box; two can be "cleated" together and shipped as one. One box of 250 sold at a thousand rate; it is cheaper for you to buy a box of 250 than 200 at 100 rate. Write for special prices for quantities.

If any Cannas are not found here, it may be understood that they are superseded by the foregoing. If selection is left to us, we will substitute or send only the best for all purposes.

The color is a delicate cream pink, with a most attractive crimson stripe in the center of each lower petal, the shade of which is unique in Gladioli. The ruffling of the petals in this new strain has attracted much attention the country over.

Chicago, February 26.—Mushrooms, 15 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, 35 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches; rhubarb, 60 cents to 65 cents per bunch; lettuce, 27½ cents, small cases.

New York, February 24.—Mushrooms, $1 to $2 per 4-pound basket; cucumbers, $1.25 to $1.75 per dozen; tomatoes, 15 cents to 55 cents per pound; radishes, $1.50 to $2.50 per 100 bunches; lettuce, $1.50 to $2 per strap; rhubarb, 40 cents to 60 cents per large bunch and 60 cents to 90 cents per dozen small bunches; mint, 35 cents to 60 cents per dozen bunches

Pansies.

While not strictly a market garden crop, pansies can be handled to advantage by many a market grower. While the proper method of production may be fall sowing, we have always held that the spring-sown plants live longer and resist more heat. No doubt this severe winter has hurt many a fall sowing, hence we run no great chance of losing out on seeds put in now.

For a number of years we have sown pansies about February 1 in warm hotbeds as soon as the first character leaf forms we dibble in other frames 2½ x 2½ inches apart. These second frames we plan to have in the form of spent hotbeds where a crop of lettuce or radishes has been removed. As soon as the young plants have a good hold we remove the glass and substitute cheese cloth. When severe weather is over we remove the cloth. That way we produce sturdy plants, as good as one could wish for. About May 1 they are in bloom. To sell these we cut them out in square blocks with a knife in such a way that any four will fill a quart basket. If a little judgment is used in selecting colors these baskets are very attractive and when put on sale they are simply irresistible—people will see them, and buy them at sight, so much so that we have been unable to supply the demand. We have tried all ways of selling from the commission merchant to the market stand, and the most successful has been a department store. They handle them on small commission and each and every lot is sold as soon as exposed. We have also tried various strains of seed and considering cost and results, a good strain of German pansies leaves nothing to be desired. As compared with vegetables in hotbeds or frames, the money returns from pansies is like four to one.

The average city dweller does not know that pansies love cool weather, hence they delay planting until warm weather has come. Thus our sales run heavy from the first to the last of May and that ends it. After Decoration day any surplus is a loss, and for May sales the fall-sown plants get too large and scraggly.

MARKETMAN.

New Radish Pernot.

The favorite radishes for market have long been those having a brilliant scarlet or carmine color, set off by a small well-defined white tip, which must not shade into the body of the radish, but contrast brilliantly with it. Of recent seasons the Pernot, having at least one-third of its length of the pure white color, has led in the French markets; it is semi-long and does not lose in attractiveness by its larger proportion of white tip; its foliage is less abundant than that of many sorts, a virtue for culture under glass.—Le Jardin.

Success In Market Gardening

REVISED AND ENLARGED EDITION.

A new and larger edition of this well known work on market gardening. It contains everything a market gardener wants to know, and in a form easily understood. It is an invaluable guide to any one in the business from the beginner to the most experienced.

DREER'S FINE FERNS

Cyrtomium Falcatum Rochfordianum. The New Crested Holly Fern.

CYRTOMIUM FALCATUM ROCHFORDIANUM

The illustration gives a fair idea of a good 6-inch pot plant of this important novelty which will undoubtedly take the place of the popular Cyrtomium Falcatum which heretofore has been the best selling Fern we grow. The bright glossy-green foliage in this variety is even more pronounced than in the parent and besides this the pinnae, or leaflets, are wavy, or undulated and are also deeply cut, or toothed, giving the plant a very graceful and decorative appearance. It will prove valuable both as a Dish Fern, as well as for growing into specimens in 6 or 8 inch pans for apartment decoration.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—Brown Bros. & Co., Ltd., are reported to have sold lots for municipal purposes at South Vancouver to the value of $55,000.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—Articles of incorporation have been filed by La Habra Nursery Co. with a capital stock of $5,000. The directors are M. Taniguchi, M. Maruyama and K. Inouye.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—The J. W. Adams Nursery Co. has purchased 40 acres of land which they will plant to nursery stock, and which will treble its present capacity. Half a million trees and shrubs will be planted this spring.

TILTON, N. H.—The Boston & Maine R. R. management, following out its policy of retrenchment, has notified the station agents of the southern division that it will not furnish bedding plants or offer prizes for flower displays this year.

CLEVELAND, O.—The preliminary plans for the horticultural building to be located in Wade Park provide for a central structure 80 feet square for a show house with wings extending east and west with a frontage of 275 feet.

MIAMI, FLA.—The branch establishment here of the nurseries of Griffing Bros. Co. are offering real estate in the shape of grape fruit lands near Homestead, Fla., 40 miles south, and do the tree planting at nominal prices to those who buy the land.

WILLOWS, CALIF.—Articles of incorporation have been filed by the Sacramento Valley Nursery Co., with capital stock of $100,000. L. C. Rice, R. D. Banbury, W. W. Cannarn, John E. Finnall and F. W. BOSTON, MASS.—Plans have been submitted by the Art commission to the mayor, which were drawn by Olmstead Bros., for the removal of the statues now on Commonwealth avenue to the Public Garden, on the Charles street mall, and the planting of a higher hedge along this side of the garden.

DUNDEE, ILL.—The D. Hill Nursery Co. states that the past season was very hard on newly planted nursery stock and also on established trees, but believe they will make up for it in increased hardiness. This firm makes a specialty of young evergreen and deciduous seedlings and transplants as well as large specimen evergreens.

SACRAMENTO, CALIF.—The state horticultural commission has rescinded its quarantine order against fruit tree exportations from Santa Cruz, Santa Clara, San Mateo and Alameda counties, following the organized protest of the fruit men of these counties, and in its place a drastic inspection of all tree shipments will be made by the commissioners or their authorized representatives.

THE United States Department of Agriculture has issued a decision that when the amount of combined arsenious oxide is stated on Paris green labels, unless it contains as much as claimed, the department will consider the product misbranded. Another decision suggests that as the fungicidal properties of Bordeaux mixture depend upon the copper present, that the label contain the percentage of active ingredients of copper and the inert ingredients.

Buy Hill's Evergreens and Get Best Selections

Your standing with your customers depends on the kind of stock you supply them. If it's evergreens, you doubtless have to buy—very few general nurserymen can command the facilities necessary to grow evergreens right.

It's doubly important, then, that you get your stock from growers whom you know you can depend on—whose product you can recommend to your trade as confidently as though you had grown it yourself.

We have the facilities, the men, and the skill necessary to grow evergreens right—and you can depend on what we tell you as gospel fact. We are Evergreen Specialists—have been pushing that line for over fifty years, and are now growing millions of evergreens annually. No other American grower can offer nearly such a complete stock.

Rowayton Greenhouses

HERE are two thoroughly up-to-date houses. They are 58 feet wide and 450 feet long. The frame is of steel—the posts are wrought iron bolted to concrete footings. The sides are tile, cement faced. The eave plate is our patented Z-Bar, which is a combination of our regular galvanized plate with an angle drip gutter. It's the one simple, practical dripless plate.

You'll say so when you see it. There are only two rows of columns in these houses, wide as they are. The trussing is the safe and sound compression truss.

Don't you want some such thoroughly up-to-date house this year? A house that will stand the snows and blows; a house that will last for years and years to come? Then write us—get things started.

THE APHINE MANUFACTURING CO.,
Madison, N. J.:

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of January 27th, will say that we have been using FUNGINE on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the APHINE for lice on lettuce, instead of — (a nicotine preparation) and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots. If so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this FUNGINE as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.

Yours very truly,

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Lilacs for Easter.

A large variety of blooming plants can be grown for Easter, and dwarf, shapely lilacs are appreciated by all flower lovers, and the cut sprays have now become a standard winter flower. For the pot plants the imported budded stock is preferable, but for cut blooms any lilac may be lifted and they force quickly and easily in a warm house. The varieties most grown for pot plants are Marie Lagraye white and Charles X purple. Four weeks in a temperature of 65° will bring them into flower. The plants when placed in the greenhouse should be syringed several times a day in order to assist the buds to swell and kept in a dark place. As soon as the buds begin to open the plants can be placed in full sunlight. The common lilac can be forced in the same manner. A bush which is well set with flower buds, and these are easily distinguished from the leaf buds, can be lifted and planted in a bench and will furnish fine sprays of flowers. If the plant is kept shaded from the sun by spreading a heavy cloth over it the flowers of the purple varieties will be white when forced. The plants will require plenty of water for they make but little root growth and bloom upon the vitality which has been stored.

Iceland Popples.

A beautiful cut flower for summer use not often grown is the Iceland poppy. While it is a perennial, yet can be treated as an annual if the seed is sown early and the plants transplanted. Seeds sown in March will bloom the coming summer, and the varieties of color range through the yellow and orange to white. The petals have a peculiar satiny texture and are beautifully crumpled, and if the flowers are picked in the early morning they will stand in water for a long time and are very decorative. There are few annuals that will attract more attention than a vase of these lovely poppies arranged with appropriate green, and besides they have a delicious fragrance.

They are easily grown, and if the flowers are kept picked will continue to bloom all summer. Another poppy that can be grown for cut flowers is the Shirley poppy, but the flowers do not last as well as the Iceland poppies.

Camellias.

While it is a question if the camellia will ever become as popular as it was years ago, yet there seems to be a growing demand for the blooms of the "Japonica" as it was so familiarly known to the grandparents of the present generation, and the flowers are well adapted to certain classes of work or occasions. A few dwarf plants are now also seen in flower in some of the stores. They are easily grown, the prime requisite being a cool house, one with a night temperature of 45° to 50°, and the constant care throughout the year that all hard-wooded plants require. The large specimens which are grown for cut blooms may be planted in the ground of the house, first spading in a quantity of leaf-mold and rotted cow manure. The smaller plants are generally grown in pots, firmly planted in the same kind of soil, with plenty of drainage. They do not need repotting often and when done the shift should be to only one size larger, and this should be done just after the plant is through flowering, for it then starts to make its growth for another season. When the growth starts the plants should be given plenty of water and frequently syringed; in fact careful watering is the one thing necessary in their culture. They should never become dry, and during the hot days of summer frequent syringings are required, which also greatly assists in keeping down mealy bug and scale, the only two insects to which the plant is subject. The cause of the buds dropping, which will sometimes occur, can invariably be traced to the plant becoming dry sometime during its growth. During the summer heavy shade over the plants will be required and an abundance of air should be provided at this time.

See Page 353.

Caladiums.

During the summer months it is not so easy to keep a good display in the window or in the houses connected with the office, for the variety of plants is not large that can be used for this purpose. The fancy leaved caladiums are very decorative at this time and they are always very attractive. The tubers should be procured and started early in March. Place them closely together in boxes of chopped moss covered to the depth of about an inch; to have them covered is important as the new roots are made from the top of the tubers. As the largest bulbs start first it is better to sort them according to size. A good heat is necessary and the boxes should be placed in a temperature of 70° to 85°. As soon as a good lot of roots are formed the tubers should be potted in a soil composed principally of leaf-mold with a liberal sprinkling of sand in as small a pot as will hold the tubers. Keep the plants in good heat and water carefully until the leaves begin to grow. The plants will then need a shift to larger pots and a fair amount of well-rotted manure may be added. A position near the glass which can be shaded from strong sunlight is to be preferred. After the plants get well established frequent watering with liquid manure is necessary to their proper development. It is much better to grow them in small pots with constant stimulating than to put them into too large sizes. The highly colored leaves make a beautiful showing all summer.

Ericas.

While there are not many of the heaths grown in this country in comparison with the large number of varieties cultivated in Europe, yet there are some growers that are very successful in their culture, plainly showing that they can be well grown here. The selection of soil is of great importance, they requiring a good fibrous peat and no manure, and the summer culture is a prime factor. The cuttings are easily rooted in midwinter and early spring and should, as soon as rooted, be planted in small pots. The older plants should be severely trimmed into shape as soon as through blooming. They should be placed outside as early as possible, and the pots plunged in a good light location. Erica melanthera can be grown by planting in the ground and lifting in August or early September, but the roots are very fine and care should be taken that the ground does not become too dry during the summer. Careful watering is the important factor in the growing of all the ericas. They should never get dry or the plants will not flower, and with our dry summers the plants must be continually watched. A cool house ranging from 40° to 50°, with plenty of ventilation, is the location where the best results will be obtained.

EAST BRIDGEWATER, MASS.—J. K. Alexander is planning the erection of a building for shipping purposes.

LITTLE RIVER, FLA.—J. J. Soar succeeds Soar Bros. With a prodigal water supply, well piped, low muck soil, he can produce under lath freely most decorative plants which require careful greenhouse handling in the north. There should be room for growth on these lines.

Examination for Park Gardeners.

The writer having served as an examiner of candidates for the position of gardener in the West Parks of Chicago, and having been much disappointed, both in the number of applicants and the ability of most of them, has thought that perhaps many missed trying for these most excellent and desirable positions through a mistaken idea regarding the examinations, and a fear of not getting a square deal. It seems, therefore, that a little talk on the subject may be desirable.

All gardeners in the West Parks work eight hours only. They are now under civil service regulations and after their probation period of 90 days is over, can not be discharged without charges being filed and a regular trial be held, at which they may defend themselves and may bring in witnesses. The superintendent of employment, Mr. Heuchling, who is the backbone of the civil service board, which conducts the examinations and tries all charges against employes, is an expert in his line of work and is most successfully working to put the whole method of securing and handling employes on an honest and fair basis—that is, honest to the public and fair to the employes.

The position of head gardener pays from $140 to $200 per month and the working gardeners are paid $2.50 for an eight-hour day's work.

The examination was partly written and partly oral and consisted of:

1. A short written examination as a simple, general educational test. This counted as 10 per cent of the whole.
2. A record of previous experience and gardening education counting 30 per cent.
3. Two written and one oral examinations to ascertain the practical and scientific knowledge of the applicant, which counted 60 per cent.

QUESTIONS FOR EDUCATIONAL TEST.

Arithmetic—

1. (a) A laborer works 3½ days at a rate of $1.75 per day and 8¼ days at a rate of $2 per day. What amount is due him for wages?

(b) A florist, who is on duty 30 days in the month, is paid at the rate of $75 per month. If he is absent for 13 days what amount is due him for wages?

English and Letter Writing—

2 and 3. Assume that Mr. John Smith, living at 2834 Ogden avenue, Chicago, has written you asking for information as to the best method of caring for canna bulbs over winter. Write him a letter about 100 words in reply, signing the name, John Doe, to this letter.

General Information—

4. (a) What is a payroll for employes' wages and what information should it contain?

(b) What is a time book and what information should it contain? When should entries be made in a time book in order to make it a reliable record of the services of each employe?

EXPERIENCE TEST.

(Note: Any false statement in this paper is cause for removal from the eligible list or for discharge after appointment.)

1. What is your age?
2. Name all the schools and colleges you have attended, giving in each case the course of study you pursued, the length of time you attended and whether you finished the course.
3. Are you employed at present? If so, give the name and address of your employer, the salary you receive and the date you started to work, and tell briefly the nature of the work you do. If you have supervision over other employes, state the number and salary of the men under your charge.
4. Describe all the other practical experience you have had in floral or horticultural work. In each case give the names and addresses of your employers, the salary you received, when you started and when you left and describe the nature of the work you did.

CALADIUM ARGYRITES (HUMBOLDTII).

If you supervised other employes state the number of men under your charge.

5. Describe any special investigations or other work, not mentioned before, which you have done, that would tend to fit you for the position of head florist.

PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC TEST.

First paper—Time: 2½ hours.

1. Give a programme for displays in the conservatories throughout the year, beginning with the month of January.

2. When should the plants used in the above displays be started in order to be ready for exhibition at the proper time?

The propagating plant consists of 11 houses, each 16 feet by 175 feet, and the conservatory and show houses have a floor area of 68,000 square feet. State how many men you would require to carry on the work and outline briefly the duties of each.

4. (a) At what time, from what material and in what manner would you prepare your main supply of potting soil, and how would you subsequently care for it?

(b) How would you dispose of the surplus earth from discarded plants?

5. (a) Name fifteen orchids that are commonly grown under glass and give the time of blooming and time of resting period for each.

Second paper—2½ hours.

1. The weather being 20 degrees below zero, how would you proceed to deliver a wagon load of begonias and poinsettias at a point three miles distant?

2. (a) Name a good grass seed mixture for general use and state how many pounds per acre you would sow.

(b) How may good grass seed be judged by inspection?

3. Give a short list of hardy shrubs suitable for forcing.

4. (a) What is a day's work of eight hours for a man potting geranium cutting into 2½-inch pots?

(b) What is an eight-hour day's work for a man shifting geraniums from 3-inch to 4-inch pots?

5. Suppose the nights should turn very cold early in the fall and you were afraid of frost, how would you attempt to save the plants that were out of doors?

6. Name the important reference books on greenhouse plants with which you are familiar and state briefly the scope of each.

7. Describe briefly the methods of glazing greenhouses, the materials used, and how best to quickly repair breakage.

8. Name four kinds of fertilizers commonly used in greenhouses, state how and in what quantities you would use them.

9. What is meant by resting a plant? Name six plants requiring rest and give the customary time when each requires rest.

EASTER LILAC.

10. (a) Name fifteen palms commonly grown under glass.

(b) Name fifteen blooming plants, excluding orchids, that are commonly grown under glass.

In the verbal test 30 plants were selected from the conservatories—common plants, nothing unusual or rare—and each candidate was asked to name them. This test was marked on a scale of 100, 5 points being deducted for each error. The highest number named was 29 with a mark of 95, the lowest 6 with a mark of 0. The first oral question asked was: If you were appointed to this position what would be the first thing you would do. One candidate answered: "I would see what I could propagate." The best answer was: "I would study the work and get acquainted with the men and see what each could do."

Another question was: Suppose the commissioners should ask you to build a pond for aquatics, state fully how you would do it, how you would plant the pond, giving varieties of plants and methods of planting and how you would plant the borders. This was followed up by: "Are insects troublesome to water plants, and if so, what are the best ways of destroying them?" One candidate thought insects did not trouble water plants. One candidate recommended cement bottom for the pond and he was asked how to protect it from frost in winter. It will be noted that the questions all through were largely intended to give the candidates a full chance to show their practical knowledge, although, of course, a head gardener must know plants and be able to spell plant names reasonably well; and questions were given for testing knowledge in that line also. In these examinations all receiving a mark of 70 or over are placed on the eligible list, the highest one getting the first chance at the job and if he fails to make good or resigns then the next highest has a chance, and so on.

The astonishing thing to the examiners was that only one candidate was able to pass, and that so many should present themselves who were totally unfit from every point of view.

The examination for working gardeners was along the same lines but, of course, much simpler. One candidate was unable to name a single one of the 30 plants used for test. They were not marked down so severely for failure to name plants, the naming of 20 out of the 30 being considered fairly good.

In all cases the candidates were given numbers and were examined under number, their names not being given to the examiners.

The following notes made privately by the writer may be of interest:

Candidate A—Badly handicapped by lack of knowledge of English and lack of experience in charge of men. Displays no fitness for so responsible a position.

Candidate B—Not a bad type of man but not "big" enough for the job.

Candidate C—Probably a good foreman. No general ideas. Not a high class man.

Candidate D—Has evidently studied books and has a good memory. Superficial. Needs age and responsibility. Will probably make a good man in time.

The above, of course, refer to the head gardener candidates.

There were only seven men taking the head gardener's examination and nine of the others. This was most disappointing, as there are men everywhere competent to pass who are working in much less desirable positions and who would better themselves by getting into this park work.

WRITTEN EXAMINATION FOR GARDENERS.

(Note: The weight of this written paper will be 4. Each candidate will be given an oral test on his ability to recognize a number of greenhouse plants. The weight of this test will be 2.)

1. (a) What insects are most troublesome to palms and tropical plants, and what would you use to keep them in check?

(b) What insects are troublesome to soft wooded plants, such as chrysanthemums, geraniums, coleus, etc., and what would you do to destroy them?

3. (a) How would you know when a potted plant needs water?

(b) How do you know when a plant is over-watered?

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

John Mangel's New Store.

An event of interest to the retail trade of Chicago was the opening of John Mangel's new store at 17 East Monroe street this week, which we illustrate. The proposed demolition of the building at the corner of Monroe street and Wabash avenue of which Mr. Mangel occupied the corner store, necessitated his procuring new quarters and he leased the store in the Palmer house formerly occupied by H. C. Rowe. For the last month the workmen have been busy remodelling and decorating the store under the immediate supervision of Mr. Mangel, with the result that the public has the opportunity to inspect one of the finest floral stores in the city, located in the center of the business district.

The decorations are of Louis XVI. period and the elaborate cornice and dado, as well as all the furnishings, are of birch finished in natural color and ornamented with gold, the frieze being heavily decorated with gold figures so much in vogue at that renowned period. The color tone of the entire decoration is in light brown and gold. The walls are covered with beautiful oil painted canvas representing festal and wooded scenes by a celebrated artist. The ceiling is a series of small arches of cream color decorated with sprays of foliage. In the center are four large glass chandeliers enclosing a cluster of electric lights that cast prismatic colors throughout the store. There are no tables or counters in the front store, but three beautiful show cases provided at the top with receptacles for ice, will contain the choicest of flowers for the customer's inspection and a small office, all made of birch and finished like the other fittings. Two writing tables with chairs are placed on either side of the store.

Two-thirds of the way back the store is divided by two columns and in the rear are the refrigerators and work tables. A large mantel of the same finish as the woodwork of the store is placed in the rear and in this a large mirror reflects all the beauties of the store. Back of the mantel is a small room with an entrance to the hotel lobby, and this is filled with splendid specimens of blooming and decorative plants.

The front of the store was remodelled, a large plate glass window coming down to the floor, which is of tile, was built in, and two Roman lights of gilt containing four high powered electric lights, ornament each side of the store, surmounted by a large sign bearing the name, "Mangel, Florist."

St. Patrick's Day Favors.

There is a growing tendency among people of all nationalities in America to celebrate St. Patrick's day in some way and the usual dinner is the most popular. The following suggestions may lead to a few ideas of adding or emphasizing a touch of greenness by way of favors, or souvenirs for the occasion:

Take the brown or green earthenware baby jardinières and arrange them with shamrocks in the following manner: Fill with soil and in the center place a round stick about six inches in height and wind it with narrow green satin ribbon, the color of the shamrock. On top of the stick fasten a ball of moss about the size of the opening of the jardinière, which it is to ornament. Cover this ball with shamrocks in a flat manner; around the base, to cover the soil, stem small bunches of shamrocks and arrange them loosely around the base of stick. Lily of the valley could be used around the base if a touch of contrast is desired. The center piece for the table will look well with shamrocks in the center planted closely together, using border or garland effect of lily of the valley, with maiden hair fern in a thick ruche as a finish.

Shamrock-shaped dishes filled with shamrocks are as popular as ever. In the more expensive pieces these shamrock dishes are made of porcelain instead of earthenware and some are very elaborately decorated.

The small round Japanese baskets filled with growing shamrocks are effective, but the basket must be covered with a pretty shade of green satin to harmonize with the green of the shamrock. This should be on the handkerchief order, allowing the four ends to extend above and up to the shamrocks, tying it with a silver or bronze gauze ribbon to hold the satin in place. The small green split wood handle baskets look well filled with shamrocks and tied with lavender and green gauze ribbon. Small tripods with the gypsy kettle in the center can be prettily decorated with shamrocks in the center of the kettle, also ornamenting the tripod with them; in the middle, on top of the tripod, a green candle can be well placed. In place of filling the kettle with shamrocks cover the outside of the kettle with shamrocks and fill it with candy shamrocks. These can be arranged to advantage around a centerpiece made of shamrocks and maiden hair ferns, allowing the large leaves of the maiden hair to fall over the sides on the table and give them a wide sweep. Place the tripods at convenient intervals and when the candles are lighted they will make a pretty setting, emphasizing the green. Around the tripods a flat garland-shaped arrangement of shamrocks will look well. In this green garland, low green candlesticks, with candles of green, can be placed effectively, or even the ordinary brass candlestick can be used to advantage with the shamrock garland so made as to cover everything except the candle itself. This arrangement should be sufficiently low so as to not affect the other decoration.

A practical favor that is appreciated is the rustic green candlestick which can be decorated with a shamrock shade and a ring of shamrocks around the base. Or the taller green candlestick arranged with a shamrock shield, from which a shower of shamrocks can be effectively draped. These shields can be made of pasteboard in the shape of a shamrock and covered with green satin on which the shamrock can be sewed. From the stem of the shamrock shield which should be a little wide and straight at the end, attach three different lengths of a shamrock shower. These favors can be placed on a mat of shamrocks.

The new brass round metal finger bowls filled with growing shamrocks make a pretty favor. Some of the newest designs look like a miniature jardinière and have a deep greenish cast. The little shamrock hats are always popular and can be placed to advantage on a green mat made of shamrocks with rosebuds as a band for the little hat. The hats can be filled with mint candies in shamrock shape.

Those round receptacles used on polished tables for water glasses make a dainty favor. Those having a tile with a silver metal rim can be bought for 25 cents, and when filled with shamrocks, with a green satin ribbon run through the open metal part and tied in a pretty rosette, make an inexpensive and pretty favor as well as souvenir of the occasion. A little dexterity must be used in making the favors dainty as well as artistic. Small Indian canoes can be used as favors filled with shamrocks and ornamented on either end with a green silk flag. Or the body of the canoe can be made of shamrocks and filled with bonbons.

Flags made of shamrocks, using the green silk flags on which the shamrocks are sewed, will make an odd centerpiece where the basket foundation is of rosebuds and their foliage interspersed with shamrocks, using the maiden hair as a finish or asparagus sprays. Use shamrock bonbon boxes tied with a loosely arranged bunch of shamrocks and a pretty ribbon rosette finish. Or the tiny square covered Indian basket, fixing it so the lid will stand upright. Fill with shamrocks and tie with a green ribbon, making a rosette in the center of the body of the basket and a smaller oblong bow on the edge of the cover.

WITH THE GROWERS

J. W. Davis Co., Bettendorf, Iowa.

Without a doubt one of the finest ranges of greenhouses to be found anywhere in the United States was that built last summer by the Lord & Burnham Co. for the J. W. Davis Co. at Bettendorf, a suburb of Davenport, Ia. This range, which we illustrate, consists of three houses 34x600 feet with a propagating house 34x300 feet and as fine a boiler house and workrooms as can be found anywhere.

The houses are all steel, glass and concrete, and are devoted to the forcing of cucumbers. Compound vacuum steam heating is the system used, the steam being made by three 350 h. p. boilers, two steam pumps which raise the water from a 200 foot well, give ample supply, with all the force that may be needed. Provisions have been made in the building of the power house for the installation of three more boilers, still leaving room for the storage of three to five car loads of coal. A railroad siding enables them to throw the coal from the car into the boiler room, thereby saving hauling and expense. A smoke stack five feet in diameter (inside measurement) and over 100 feet high gives draft enough to burn anything with burn in it. Electric lights everywhere furnish plenty of light in case night work is necessary. There are 15 men employed in the place at the present time, all under the genial foreman, Mr. Ankney, a gentleman whom it does a whole lot of good to meet—and one worthy to be called a friend.

J. W. Davis, "the Professor," is well known to the trade, having been connected with the business at Morrison, Ill., Aurora, and later buying out the well known establishment of the late Chas. Dannacher at Davenport, which he still owns and conducts. He is no doubt the best posted "Cuke-Man" in the United States, making the growing of cucumbers his specialty for the past 25 years. He needs no boasting, for those that know him are mighty glad of his acquaintance. His work in this vicinity goes to show that he is a hard working painstaking man. Those that have worked under him know him as a fair, honest, kind-hearted employer. We know that Mr. Davis will be a success, and we can already picture in our minds one of the greatest establishments of its kind in the United States. Besides cucumbers, tomatoes, radishes and other vegetables are grown, and shipped to St. Paul, Milwaukee, Chicago, and the nearby cities. At the old place in Davenport bedding plants and ferns are also grown. Some 10,000 of the latter in 4-inch pots are now ready for the market.

The only thing that we can justly accuse Mr. Davis of is not being a member of the Tri-City Florist Club. But we have his promise to soon become one of us, and no doubt before this reaches the reader Mr. Davis will have handed in his application.

Dr. William Trelease.

Dr. William Trelease, whose resignation as director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, Mo., better known as Shaw Garden, was announced in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, issue of March 2, is one of the best known botanists of this country and his fame is by no means confined to America. He has now reached the age of 55 years and the reason for resigning the position which he has so honorably and creditably filled is the desire to pursue scientific research work without interruption from administration duties, and the resignation was accepted by the board of trustees with regret. He expects for the present to continue his residence at St. Louis where the garden that he has been so instrumental in building, offers facilities for his special studies that are not equalled elsewhere.

Dr. Trelease received his college training at Cornell university where he received the degree of bachelor of sciences in 1880. He then took a graduate course at Harvard university under Farlow, Hagen and Mark and received the degree of doctor of science in 1884. He was then professor of botany at the University of Wisconsin, leaving there in 1885 to accept the position of director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, founded by the late Henry Shaw, and he was selected by Mr. Shaw, on the recommendation of Prof. Asa Gray, the famous botanist. Under his administration the Shaw Garden has acquired a foremost position in its class in the wealth of material for exhaustive research. It has 12,000 species of living plants, 700,000 herbarium specimens collected from the flora of the world, and a library of 70,000 volumes, and has a world-wide reputation. Two grand prizes—one for beauty and the other for efficiency—were received by the garden from the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in 1904. Under Dr. Trelease's directorship it has been considerably enlarged and the plants greatly increased in variety and educational arrangement, and plans have been approved for making it the most beautiful garden in America and for building one of the greatest conservatories in the world, which is to be erected this summer.

As an editorial writer he has gained renown. Jointly with Prof. Asa Gray, he edited a sumptuous collection of the botanical writings of his predecessor in St. Louis, George Englemann. He has written the treatises of botany in the twenty-two annual reports of Shaw to their publication, has been a frequent contributor to American and foreign journals and for the last ten or twelve years has been editor in chief for this country of the International Reviewing Journal, Botanisches Centralblatt.

Dr. Trelease has received the honorary degree of doctor of laws from the University of Wisconsin, University of Missouri and Washington university. He is a member of the National Academy of Science, an honor rarely bestowed, and his scholarship has been recognized by honorary membership in nearly all the botanical organizations of the world. He was first president of the Botanical Society of America, has presided over the American Society of Naturalists, the botanical section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Cambridge Entomological Club and International Association de Geographic Botanique, and he is councillor of the American Philosophical Society.

In the organizations and civic affairs of St. Louis Dr. Trelease has taken a great interest, being honorary president of the Englemann Botanical Club and has served with marked distinction and efficiency as president and secretary of the Academy of Science. He was chairman of a committee of the Civic League that prepared a comprehensive plan for the development of the city, was appointed for a term of three years on the Municipal City Plan Commission and has served since 1889 as a member of the Special Board of Commissioners of Tower Grove Park. Socially he is well known and for more than 10 years has been secretary of the Round Table Club, and one of the organizers of the City Club.

He has always taken a deep interest in floriculture and in the florists of the country, having been a great help

State Societies of Florists.

The following has been received from Secretary Young of the Society of American Florists at the request of President Vincent, and is an address made by Mr. Vincent at the convention of the S. A. F. held at Providence, R. I., in 1897, upon the question "Would organizing state societies of florists be of any benefit to the florists or the Society of American Florists?"

Having been a worker for many years in an organization of the tillers of the soil, an organization that places its faith in the Giver of all things, and co-operation of all engaged in the cultivation of whatever can be grown in the soil, a worker and not a leader or lecturer, I feel out of place to stand before so critical an audience as I see facing me. But having only been asked for suggestions I simply give you my ideas on the subject; and if there is anything in them worthy of your attention you will, I hope, adopt them, or anything that will help the success of our association.

Yes; just as soon doubt the advisability of combination amongst other trades and pursuits. No vocation, no profession, but is promoted by the co-operation of those engaged in it. To say otherwise, to believe otherwise, would be to have the hands on the dial of progress moved backwards. Associations of those engaged in the same pursuits, with common interests and with mutual aims, is the watchword of the day, whether it is the laborer in the mine, the shop or the factory, the farmer in the field, physician, lawyer or whatever calling men may engage, the first step towards independence, advancement, self protection and defense is the union of segregated individuals into a compact and mobile force, whose vital influence and efficient power may be wielded as an energetic unit, for the good of all.

Should the florist be an exception? Hath not a florist eyes? Hath not a florist hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affection, passions, fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same summer sun and winter cooling breezes as any zations honored and applauded for good work throughout the land. Remember the fable of the bundle of arrows, each easily broken of itself, but once bound together beyond any force to disrupt. Let us recognize and remember that with gardeners and florists, as with every other profession and pursuit, however lowly or however exalted, "In union there is strength."

other tradesman is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? If you tickle us do we not laugh? If you poison us do we not die? And if you wrong us shall we not have revenge?

The effect upon the national society of a complete group of state societies, selecting the most advanced, intelligent and energetic members to send each year to its annual sessions, would be

(1) To give it a representative character, and standing equal in dignity and power to associations of other businesses, and an efficiency not now possessed.

(2) To enroll under its standard those who are at present inert, lukewarm, or positively unfriendly.

The influence upon the individual florist might be counted:

(1) To stimulate to larger, broader views; take him out of the local and provincial field, and widen his vision; to consider his vocation in its national, even world wide scope, and promote the interchange of valuable, experiences and inspire an esprit de corps in his class.

(2) To bring him personal gains by the advances necessarily secured where a thousand rivulets, bringing information, mutual aid, timely suggestions and friendly co-operation, will give value and momentum to the resultant stream.

Let us have a state society in every state, and a tributary local club in every town and neighborhood where numbers will allow—and all links in a sentient chain, each one necessary to the completeness and strength, to the efficiency and forces of the National body, which thoroughly representative in composition and character, material and aims, will give us a place eminent among other organi-
