Will you kindly tell me the name of the best wallflower for winter flowering? When should the seed be sown?

New Jersey.

If "Subscriber" wishes to make a specialty of these plants in winter, he would do well to send to Sutton & Sons, Reading, England. They list over 20 kinds of single varieties, and these are the best to grow under glass in winter. Perhaps the two best are Fire King and Yellow Phoenix. The seed should be sown in July and treated later as are stocks, for winter work—that is, keeping cool and sturdy in frames outside, and planted inside to follow a crop of early chrysanthemums. This can easily be done by protecting the young plants with sash in bad weather, transplant into flats from the seed box, later potting them up when strong enough, as wallflowers are like stocks in that they are very impatient of root-disturbance, but when benched from pots, go right on and flower in early spring, their delightful fragrance making them ever welcome at that season.

Piping New Houses.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

I am intending to erect three greenhouses, 31x100 feet, six feet high to gutters, 13 feet to ridge, all connected and running east and west. The boiler house will be on the northwest corner, and I would like to run the main flow and return on the west end. The thermometer falls as low as 25° below. How large a boiler would you advise installing? We do not want to have to force the boiler and we may add to the plant. How many runs of 2-inch pipe would be required to keep the houses warm enough? How should they be arranged? How large a main flow and return will be required? B.

The question does not state the class of plants to be grown in each of the houses, nor the temperature desired, but for 60 degrees, under the Growing Calla Bulble's.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you kindly inform me whether calla bulblets should be kept growing to obtain blooming bulbs next winter or should they be rested?

SUBSCRIBER.

The calla bulblets should be kept growing through the summer and ripened off for a short time in the fall just before potting for winter culture.

conditions named, use in each of the houses five 2½-inch flow pipes and eighteen 2-inch returns. For 50 degrees use five 2½-inch flow pipes and fourteen 2-inch returns. In case there is any exposed glass in the walls, use an additional return for each two feet in height of the glass.

Place one flow pipe under each ridge, another upon each plate, and the others on the purlins. About three returns should be on each side wall of the houses and the others under the benches.

The boiler should be rated for 6,000 feet of hot water radiation.

Use a 4-inch pipe to supply the north house and a 5-inch pipe for the other two houses. The returns should be of the same size as the flow pipes.

After Abolishing Replacing, What?

Paper read by J. R. Mayhew of Waxahachie, Texas, before the Western Association of Nurserymen at Kansas City, Mo., December 14, 1911.

When I tell you that for two seasons no wide-awake, thoroughly up-to-date nurseryman in my part of the country has practiced replace at less than full value, it will explain the liberty I have taken in changing somewhat the subject assigned me, but for fear some of my friends may think my ardor for this reform has cooled, I will answer the question, "Should we not abolish the replacement of nursery stock on all retail orders and under all conditions?" Yes, as emphatically and unequivocally as I did two years ago. I want again to say that we of Texas Association have, first by resolution and last by living up to the resolution, accomplished the impossible, as some of my friends termed it. It was an easy task after all, easy after conviction came upon us, and now I'll treat if you can find a self-respecting nurseryman in my state who is not heartily ashamed of this shyster method of the past. Somehow or other I am so ashamed of it for myself and for such men as I could name (but will not, for maybe it did not come out on them as it did me), that I intend to quit talking about it. It is a character of advertisement that will do us little good for the practice proved us poor business men indeed. One of my banker friends got hold of one of our trade journals that happened to have one of my articles on this question, and in wonderment he asked the question, "Have you nurserymen been in the habit of guaranteeing stock to live?" I have wondered ever since if my credit is as good at that bank as it was before this question was asked and answered.

My friends, this nonsensical policy is unquestionably the parent of many of our ills and the sooner we wash our hands of such criminally foolish methods the sooner we may expect the business world to respect us. As I have said on several occasions heretofore, the dollars and cents that we put into the deal was great, was a severe loss from this point of view, but greater still was the loss in that that goes to make all business great—confidence. It was destroying our confidence in the commodity we were producing, destroying the customer's confidence in the commodity purchased. It was a shyster idea conceived in the iniquitous brain of a shyster salesman, perhaps, and you and I permitted this policy to creep into our business because we thought we would go bankrupt if the salesman's wishes in the matter were crossed. Let me tell you right here, and I have amended my subject that I may pay my respects to him further on, if we don't get rid of this shyster element in get rid of this shyster element in salesmanship, if we don't get rid of this vicious salesman who is largely responsible for our unhealthy reputation with the retail buyer, we will never succeed. I am not one who would disparage all salesmen, a few of them are worthy and conduct themselves and their business along high business lines, but is it not true that the element I condemn loses you each year the money, and oftentimes more, the best ones make you? When we cast up accounts at the end of the season, I am inclined to believe this is pretty near true. What I plead for is that we may "acquit ourselves like men," and when the salesman tempts us with sophistry that we may quote him words of eternal truth.

But, back to the original question, for a member of your programme committee indicated to me that I was expected to confine my remarks largely to the subject appearing on the programme. It was my pleasure to prepare the resolution condemning this policy, which was adopted by the Texas Nurserymen's Association in 1909, also to introduce a similar resolution before the American Association of Nurserymen at Denver in June, 1909. Those of you who were present remember that this resolution was adopted unanimously, so it seems to me that we are making progress. I have received letters from nurserymen from every part of the United States thanking me for what I have written on the subject and assuring me of their co-operation. If, in my feeble way, I have contributed anything whatever that has tended to lift our business to a higher plane, I am more than repaid. I do not know how long it will take to outlive the evil results of this policy, for unstable policies in business, like sin in the human life, leave a scar, but I do know that the longer continued the deeper the scar and the harder to heal. I am glad that we in the great state of Texas have two years to our credit in this matter, and while I am not advised to speak for the large list of nurserymen of Texas, I can speak for one firm and for that firm I will say, "for me and my house we will serve the Lord." If I was confident my brethren in the trade held to a different view, it would make little difference, for rather than be confronted daily with requisition for replace on stock that I knew was the result of carelessness, unfavorable weather conditions, or a thousand and one conditions over which I had no control, I would elect to support my family in some other vocation.

There is not a man present but that feels the absolute necessity of certain and perhaps radical changes if we are to succeed in the truest sense, but that feels, to say the least, indisposed, and the need of a business tonic. I have received letters during the past month from friends over the country whose minds, like my own, are intent on some needed reforms, and I believe these reforms are coming quick. We must abolish the practice of replace, and I hope someone will introduce at this meeting a resolution to that effect, to which I promise not to speak, but, my friends, there are some other things we must do. We must eliminate the shyster salesman if he takes with him the good ones also. We must spy out and mark the "dead beat" who buys trees wholesale with no intention of paying for them, and in this matter our association is doing a fine work. We must keep pace with the Twentieth Century methods all along the line. But what will this profit us if we continue to sell our product at less than the cost of production?

We must raise prices. On no other commodity under the sun are the margin of profits so dangerously small, and it is also true that on no other commodity produced are the risks so great. The past few years of drouth over the southwest have fully convinced me of that fact. We are at the mercy of the elements even before stock is planted, and each day thereafter is one of anxious care. If the cost of production on a suit of clothes that you buy on the market today for $50.00 was as great as the cost of production on $50.00 worth of nursery stock, and your only chance of obtaining raiment was from the proceeds of your business, the nurseryman's garb the year around would resemble that of the pickaninny of the south in August.

I again say we must revise our prices, and the revision must have something of the republican tariff revision ring about it. I know what obstacles are here in the many farmer-nurserymen over the country, in that same shyster salesman spoken of a few moments since who buys as a dealer from said farmer-nurseryman, and who, by giving customer receipted stock for his board bill, which is never delivered, is able to sell cheap trees, and they are cheap; who continues to guarantee all trees to live for five years, etc., but whatever the obstacles they must be overcome. Prices of nursery stock must advance.

One other thing I want to mention and I close. We must take the business management out of salesman's hands. What do I mean? Simply this. We are being dictated to by the salesman who is often a dealer, and who buys stock at less than wholesale prices. You lend him your good name to do business with, borrow the money from your bank to finance his business, allow him to name practically the terms of contract, even to the prices of your stock, for what? The infinite pleasure of being his humble and obedient servant during the life of contract, and less than a gambler's chance for the money he owes you for stock and advances. "He who steals my purse steals trash, but he who filches from me my good name robs me of that which enriches him not but leaves me poor indeed." Our poverty in money is not serious, but our poverty in good name among the very people we are trying to serve is serious. Our good name has been and is being embezzled by this same worthy salesman who cares not a penny whether you succeed or fail. If he fails to rewrite a contract with me for another year he knows you will take him, and he goes back over the territory and explains the changed relations to the people who patronized him because he was operating under my name, in a way calculated to destroy the customer's confidence in me. I wish every nurseryman in the land would take a solemn oath to wage a united war of extermination on this character of salesmanship.

But I must close. Already I have presumed on your goodness and have taken more of your time than I should. My remarks have something of the ring of a pessimist, but in the matters discussed, as well as all other matters, I am an optimist. I believe with all my heart that your work and mine is blessing humanity, that the world is better and more beautiful because of your efforts in the world, but I also believe we should not stop short of our best. If a thing is not right it is wrong, and if wrong it is your business and mine to right it. I believe, furthermore, that the nursery business over the entire country, and over the great west and southwest particularly, is destined to grow by leaps and bounds. Today, as never before in the history of our country, it seems to me that opportunity knocks at our door.

I have talked plainly to you of certain conditions that should not exist in our special line of business if we are to make use of this opportunity, have endeavored to point out some weak places in our methods, not because I derive any pleasure in fault-finding, but because it is only after we recognize a weakness that there is hope for strength. These breaches in the walls of our business have become a reproach. "Then said I unto them, ye see the distress that we are in * * *, come let us build up the wall of Jerusalem that we be no more a reproach."

ILLINOIS STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION

The Joliet Meeting.

The seventh annual convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association was held at Joliet March 5-6. There was quite a large exhibition of excellent stock at the Sweetorr building, which proved quite inadequate for its proper display, especially noteworthy exhibits being made by Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet; Bassett & Washburn, Chicago; Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago; Frank B. Smith's Sons, Danville; J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet; E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., and A. C. Rott, Joliet. The details of these and other exhibits will be found in the report of the judges elsewhere in this issue. The novelties which attracted most attention were the Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association's white seedling carnation No. 140, an excellent flower with an unusually strong clove fragrance; the Chicago Carnation Co.'s carnations Washington and Herald, the E. G. Hill Co.'s display of Rose Sunburst and Gloriosa and Wodenethe carnations, Primula Malacoides from Vaughan's Seed Store and the A. T. Hey Floral Co.'s Shasta daisy Heyii, said to be unusually prolific. The Geo. M. Garland Co.'s exhibit of greenhouse construction models attracted much attention and E. H. Hunt made an extensive exhibit of supplies.

The annual meeting was held at the Monroe hotel March 5, and the fairly representative assemblage was called to order by President Washburn soon after the appointed hour. After a few introductory remarks by W. N. Rudd, the visitors were welcomed by Assistant City Attorney Wm. Mooney, on behalf of Mayor Allen, who was unable to attend on account of official duties, George Asmus responding. The president's address and reports of the secretary and treasurer having been presented, E. G. Hill was called upon and spoke at length upon the production of new carnations and roses.

Mr. Hill described the painstaking and costly methods of European rosarians to secure meritorious novelties and intimated that there were greater possibilities of gold bricks among new carnations than in the rose growers' field.

August Poehlmann followed, inviting those interested in new carnations and roses to visit his firm's establishment at Morton Grove, where many of the novelties are under trial. In the course of his remarks, Mr. Poehlmann suggested that even the originators of roses were hardly guiltless in the matter of gold bricks.

J. C. Vaughan and W. N. Rudd urged the adoption of President Washburn's recommendation that the association take space for a booth at the coming convention of the Society of American Florists, to be held in Chicago August 20-23, co-operating with that society in its work so far as possible and taking advantage of a great opportunity to extend its sphere of usefulness by acquiring new members and in such other directions as may be considered expedient.

A resolution covering the appointment of a Society of American Florists' convention booth committee was adopted and President Washburn announced that he would leave the apportionment of this committee to the presiding officer for the ensuing year.

A letter was read from T. A. Culp advising the association of the illness of Geo. A. Kuhl, of Pekin, one of its most interesting members, who greatly regretted his inability to attend.

Albert T. Hey, I. L. Pillsbury and Carl Rauth were appointed a committee on exhibits and Michael Barker and W. L. Palinsky a committee on the president's address.

This concluding the business of the session, adjournment followed.

The Evening Meeting.

On reassembling for the evening session Vice-President Loveridge in the chair, reports of various committees were read and adopted. Prof. H. B. Dorner presented an exhaustive report on the work in floriculture at the experiment station and was followed by Prof. H. W. Anderson, pathologist of the station, with an interesting account of his investigations of carnation stem rot. Prof. Dorner's paper was followed by a lengthy discussion, mainly on the use of fertilizers and the comparative merits of grafted and own root roses. We hope to publish both of these papers later.

W. L. Palinsky here made inquiry as to the effect of coal gas, frost and drought on greenhouse plants, provoking a lively interchange of views and bringing out considerable information, especially as to the extent of coal gas injury in greenhouses, which appears to have been quite extensive during the hard freezing weather of the past few months.

The meeting came to a close with the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

Chas. Loveridge, Peoria, Pres.
C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, V. P.
J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Sec.
F. L. Washburn, Bloomington, Treas.

The second day was devoted to sight seeing in and about the city, visiting the penitentiary and the establishments of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., the Chicago Carnation Co. and other florists, with a lunch at the last named place.

The next meeting place will be selected as usual by the executive committee, Champaign being favored by many of those in attendance.

President Washburn's Address.

The year of this association just closing has been an eventful one in several ways. We have passed through the hardest winter the florist trade has ever experienced in this state since our association has been in existence. The severe cold has cost all of us from forty to fifty per cent more for coal, while we have not received any increased price for our output. There have been numerous accidents resulting from this long, cold spell, such as boilers giving out, boiler houses burning down and stock being frozen; but we all live in hope that the season will soon change for the better.

One of the events to which our association has contributed quite largely has been the reduction in express rates in this state of twenty per cent, which has saved all of us quite a tidy sum. This reduction was brought about by the combined energy of several commercial associations in filing numerous protests with the State Railway and Warehouse Commission. The officers of your association were especially active in this work and take much pride in the results accomplished. There are several other matters, which probably will have to be attended to in the same way, one of which is the rumored advance in coal rates, which, we understand, the railroads will try to make effective this spring. This association will have to do its part in looking after the interests of the floral trade if such a step is taken.

An important problem which is now confronting us is the matter of obtaining good fertilizer. It is almost impossible to obtain a good natural cattle manure and we are liable soon to have to resort to the use of chemical fertilizers. I would suggest this matter be taken up by a committee and let them confer with our state testing association so that proper information in the shape of bulletins might be issued by the station, showing what chemicals are best adapted for fertilizer use; the quantities to be used and their method of application. Also, can chemicals be successfully used in combination with animal manures?

The testing station has done very valuable work with carnations and we are looking forward to their report on roses with a great deal of interest.

Our association is now seven years old and has proved itself a very healthy child. What we need is an increased membership, as the association would be much more influential if backed by a larger membership. Our dues are nominal—only $1.00 a year—while the field of its usefulness is so large that every florist in the state should become a member. Let us all appoint ourselves a committee to impress on our brother florists who are non-members that it is their duty to join with us and assume their share of the responsibility and work of this association.

The exhibition of flowers and plants at our meeting places gives good results to both the exhibitor and the members by acquainting both parties and showing what stock is grown. It also arouses the interest of the general public and has a wide spreading and beneficial effect. This feature of our meetings should be encouraged. The exhibition of new varieties occurring at this time is just the time of year for the trade to judge of their value and it would be a good idea if the introducers of these varieties could address us on their cultural requirements and the number of flowers that can be produced per plant under average condition.

Illinois is to be favored this year by the Society of American Florists holding their meeting in Chicago, and I would suggest that if our association could secure a booth for headquarters in the exhibition hall, where our members could make it a social meeting place, it would add to their comfort and also be a good advertisement for this association. Let us all do our share in helping make the S. A. F. meeting a grand success. The relations between the various officers of the association have been most pleasant and helpful and I wish to thank you cordially for the honor conferred upon me in serving as your president the past two years.

Secretary Ammann's Report.

I take great pleasure as your secretary in reporting a very successful year of our organization. The interest and the display of floral work shown at the State Fair held in Springfield last fall, which was directly due to the work carried out by this organization, was indeed a credit to us.

Another feature of the work of this association is shown by the liberal appropriation made for floriculture in the last general assembly. This is work, gentlemen, that this organization can be proud of. Full reports of this work will be given by others later on.

FINANCES.

The finances of our association are not large, yet I am pleased to report a balance to date of $234.01.

MEMBERSHIP.

We have increased our membership in the past year as follows: Annual members, from 153 to 175. Life members, from 18 to 32. Honorary members, 4, giving us at this writing a total membership of 211. So far as your secretary knows there have been no deaths in our ranks during the past year. I shall not dwell on the ever important question of new membership any more than to say the importance of this I am sure we all realize and the way to get the new members we all know, so just hustle.

J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet.—Six vases carnations, one vase of Gloriosa, highly commended.

Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Assoc., Morgan Park.—One vase of white seedling carnation, No. 140; a good, promising variety.

W. H. Gullett & Sons, Lincoln.—Two vases good carnations.

Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.—One vase St. Nicholas carnation, red, highly commended.

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.—Two vases carnations, one Gloriosa, one Wodenethe, very fine. One vase new rose Sunburst, a fine rose, highly commended.

A. C. Brown, Springfield.—Ten vases carnations, C. W. Ward and White Wonder, two very fine vases and well done.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove.—Five vases roses, very fine, Antoine Rivoire, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Melody, Dark Pink and White Killarney, all recommended, especially Melody, a very fine yellow.

Chas. Loveridge, Peoria.—Five large vases of excellent carnations, especially White Enchantress. One vase violets Princess of Wales.

Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet.—Ten good vases of carnations, Princess Charming, White Perfection, Scarlet Glow and Washington, especially fine; also four vases of seedling Nos. 78, 150, 94 and Herald. Herald and No. 150 highly commended.

Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale.—Three vases good carnations, one red and white seedling highly commended; also three vases roses, extra fine. Double White Killarney showed up in excellent shape and highly commended; also samples of fine grafted stock or roses and a fine display of Asparagus Hatcheri.

A. Washburn & Sons, Bloomington.—Three vases of very fine single violets, extra long stems and large flowers, variety Princess of Wales.

Frank B. Smith's Sons, Danville.—Miscellaneous exhibit of well grown cinerarias, cyclamens, pansies and Gov. Herrick violets; also three vases of violets, including one vase of a sport from Gov. Herrick lighter in color. Two vases seedling No. 108 and Crimson 6; also a large vase of mixed seedling carnations.

Geo. A. Kuhl, Pekin.—Miscellaneous exhibit of hydrangeas, spirea, Boston fern and lilies. Hydrangeas especially fine.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago.—Miscellaneous exhibit of ferns, crotons, palms and pot roses. Special mention to well grown pot roses, Phyllis and Tausendschon, and Primula Malacoides.

A. T. Hey Floral Co., Maywood.—Exhibit of new white primula and a new improved Shasta daisy, Heyii.

Carter Floral Co., Joliet.—Miscellaneous exhibit of pot plants, cut flowers and a beautiful floral design, a broken column.

A. C. Rott, Joliet.—Miscellaneous exhibit of cut flowers and a beautiful wreath of ivy and white roses.

E. H. Hunt, Chicago.—Fine display of florists' requisites including a complete sample line of fertilizers and insecticides; also a new cut flower sprinkler, by name German sprinkler.

G. E. Travis Co., Henry.—Exhibit of rocking grates.

Geo. M. Garland Co., Des Plaines.—Model of truss work, bench, gutter, etc.

J. F. Ammann Co., Edwardsville.—One vase mixed carnations and two vases mixed roses.

Aug. Jurgens, Chicago.—Three vases narcissus in variety.

I. L. Pillsbury, Galesburg.—Sample of carnation staples.

MARCH made its entry like a lion, and if there is any truth in the old saying, we may look for an early spring and fine weather for Easter.

GLASS, owing to the recent advance of the glassmakers, is 10 to 20 per cent higher than the price which has prevailed during the past two months. L. E. Partridge of the Sharp, Partridge Co., Chicago, says this is a good time to buy as the price will go higher as spring advances.

GRAFTED ROSES MOST PRODUCTIVE.—At the recent Joliet convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association, E. G. Hill stated that he had the information from a most reliable and competent rose grower that grafted indoor rose plants would produce an average of 61 blooms to 32 on own root plants per annum.

THE threatened coal strike April 1 appears certain according to the press. Greenhouse proprietors who passed through the strike of 1902 will never forget the difficulties and anxieties or the extra expense. The grower who housed his supply early was the envy of all.

Society of American Florists.

The meeting of the board of directors will be held in the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, Wednesday, March 13, at 10 a. m.

The following letter has been received by the secretary from the management of the Royal International Horticultural Exhibition in London:

Dear Sir:

I beg to thank you for your letter addressed to Mr. Geo. J. Ingram, and have been instructed to write and thank the Society of American Florists for their kind offer of three silver and three bronze medals to the exhibition to be awarded at the International Exposition in London for plants and flowers of American origin.

Our directors very much appreciate the kind gift, and have requested me to ask that the said medals be forwarded as soon as possible in order that they may be exhibited with cups and other trophies prior to the exhibition, and if possible, should they arrive in time, figure in the coming souvenir catalogue.

Yours faithfully,

T. GEORGEY W. HENSLOW, M. A.,
Organizing Secretary.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., offer for registration the following carnation. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

RAISER'S DESCRIPTION.

Commodore-Victory X red seedling, good compact habit; blue-green foliage of medium size; stiff stem; perfect calyx; velvety crimson scarlet; dazzling. Flower full; of good average size. Very strong constitution; one of the most productive.

JOHN YOUNG, Secy.

Royal International Exhibition, London.

Great interest is being manifested in the exhibition by continental horticulturists. A proof of this is afforded by the fact that the Secretary of the Societe Nationale d'Horticulture de France (M. Abel Chatenay) paid a visit to London on January 30, and interviewed the directors on the subject of arrangements for the French exhibits. Invitations to attend the exhibition have been distributed over the whole world, and official representatives of all foreign countries and of every colony have been invited to the various functions and conferences.

Since the issue of the last published list of presentation cups and other special prizes, the directors have been informed, through James Witton, one of the secretaries for Scotland, that the City of Glasgow will offer a silver cup for the best exhibit of hardy trees and shrubs suitable for planting in congested areas. The question of the suitability of various trees for cultivation in densely populated towns possesses great interest for every park superintendent, and for all who are engaged in public gardening.

Arrangements for the social functions in connection with the exhibition are nearing completion, and the reception committee, through the chairman, Sir Albert K. Rollit, has presented its report to the directors.

The Right Hon. W. Runciman, a member of His Majesty's government, will attend and speak at the lunch to be given in the exhibition grounds on the opening day to the members of the jury and administration.

Foreign press secretary.

Gladolus Bulbs Starting.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Our gladolus bulbs after being dug last fall were placed under a bench in the greenhouse. Many of them have started, some of them having sprouts from six to eight inches long. Will you kindly advise us what to do with them?

B. Z.

The bulbs have evidently been kept in too damp a location, which has caused them to start. They should be sorted at once and all showing signs of growth should be planted in a bench or in boxes and grown for early flowering. It is possible that some that have not started might be saved for later planting, but they should be removed to a drier location and carefully watched, for if the growing eyes have swollen and are then dried this would probably result in total loss.

"Everybody's Flower."

Paper read by Hugo Schroeter before the American Carnation Society at Detroit, Mich., January 12, 1912.

When the Ridgway Company sought a name for their magazine I presume they called it "Everybody's" because this one word covered its scope most thoroughly. This was the question which confronted me when your secretary bestowed on me the honor of addressing your society. He suggested that my paper deal with the "Divine Flower," the carnation, but requested that I choose my own title. After banishing from my thoughts a number of more or less suitable titles it occurred to me that in speaking of the carnation the most appropriate term would be "Everybody's Flower." In fact, of all the numerous flowers we have to deal with the carnation is the only one which can be rightfully called the flower for everybody.

Roses are conspicuous in most of the events where flowers are used, but even in the smallest decoration, if a variety of flowers are called for the carnation is sure to play a most important part. Often when offering suggestions for decorating the home for a small wedding the question will arise, "What flowers can we use on the piano, the side-board or what bright red flower is there which we can use on the table, the same not to be too costly?" In nearly every instance the carnation is called upon to fill the place. A customer may be somewhat disappointed in not being able to obtain violets, American Beauties, sweet peas or any other of the flowers in general use, but carnations in a flower store are as staple as nails in a hardware store. Last season during a period when carnations were extremely scarce a lady came in to our store and wanted two dozen rose-pink carnations. She was politely informed that carnations were very scarce and we had none in the shade desired. "Would not some other pink flower do?" "Yes," she replied, "I presume some other flower will have to do, but it seems so queer not to be able to obtain carnations." Retail florists advertise roses, chrysanthemums, orchids, etc., but only in case of a special sale are carnations advertised, simply because it seems to be understood that we always carry a stock of carnations except during the hot spell of July and August.

Now then, gentlemen, you will all agree with me that the carnation is everybody's flower, but being manufacturers and not selling agents, as it were, perhaps you have often wondered why the carnation is in such demand. Is it the price alone that makes for the popularity of this flower? Hardly. This might be the case with the middle and poorer classes, but how about those people who do not have to count their pennies?

No other flower adapts itself to all uses as does the carnation; no other is so easily arranged into an effective spray or bouquet or in a bowl to serve as a center piece. This, I believe, is the principal reason why, each year, the carnation sales amount to hundreds of thousands. The number used in the small inexpensive funeral sprays every year is in itself a big sum. The length and flexibility of stem, their keeping qualities and size make them most admirable for funeral spray work. For design work the carnation is almost a necessity. Here again its size is an important factor. White carnations, with the stem broken off and a toothpick in its stead, are the best flower we have for outlining a design or as a background for lettering. With the stem left from three to five inches long they are excellent for trimming a design, the stem being just stiff enough to carry the flower gracefully. It does not require the hand of an expert designer to make a loosely arranged wreath of all carnations, nevertheless such a design is especially attractive and lasting. For the sick room the carnation seems to be just the ideal flower. One or two dozen with a few sprays of Asparagus Sprengeri or a few fronds of a Boston fern are just enough for a vase and that spicy, every-pleasing odor is not an over-powering one to which the doctor or nurse will object. Carnations are naturally a graceful appearing flower and when given an especially artistic touch by some real floral artist are unsurpassed for decorative purposes.

I have enumerated only a few of the many uses for the flower which has done so much toward putting our business on a firm basis or perhaps 'twere better said, taking flowers out of the luxury class and causing them to be classed with the necessities of life. There are still more substantial reasons for their ever-increasing popularity. Take the colors, for instance. Not many flowers possess that beautiful shade of pink to be found in an Enchantress or Pink Delight or in their deeper sister, Winsor. In the poinsettia alone is to be found a red which surpasses the red of an O. P. Bassett carnation. Of course there are beautiful reds in dahlias, sweet peas and roses, but not that scarlet shade of red usually known as Christmas red and so necessary for decorative purposes. Then again, where is to be found the pure white of a carnation and in such abundance? In no other flower, while the delicate yellow tint of a carnation like Mayor Pingree places this flower in a class by itself as far as color is concerned. Sorry to say it is a rare case indeed when a yellow carnation is available in this market. Surely if more were grown they would in time meet with a more regular demand, as yellow flowers are always scarce, excepting during the chrysanthemum season. Another beautiful type of carnation, whose color is unexcelled, is Harlowarden. A magnolia wreath, trimmed with Harlowarden and a few lily of the valley, is a most beautiful conception. But what of the variegated varieties? These do not seem to meet with popular favor. We have some really good looking variegated kinds, still it is not often that colors are mixed in floral work and this, no doubt, accounts for the small use for variegated flowers. The price at which carnations are obtainable is, of course, also one reason why millions are sold annually. Even the wealthiest people often desire to spend but a few dollars for a funeral spray or for the sick wife of an employe and carnations are always acceptable.

When I started to write this paper my intention was to endeavor to obtain figures giving the total number of carnations sold at retail in this country during the past year. After conferring with others I have discarded this plan as it would have been almost impossible to arrive at anywhere near the correct amount. There are, nevertheless, millions sold annually at prices ranging from twenty-five cents per dozen to twenty-five cents per flower. In a former sentence I referred to the ever-increasing popularity of the carnation. Of course there is no doubt that more are sold each year, this being only natural, flowers becoming more and more in vogue and the country is growing, but is the carnation as popular as it was some years ago? Do the beautiful carnation blooms of the present day elicit the same approval as did the far inferior ones of twelve or fifteen years ago? It is a noticeable fact that each year brings more people who, while they will not deny the beauty of the flower, still say: "Oh! carnations are altogether too common."

In my opinion the carnation grower or, to be more exact, the carnation itself, is largely to blame for the existence of the street flower fakir, for without this staple article his activity each year would be of but short duration, and in time he would be compelled to seek elsewhere for a livelihood. With him, also, "Everybody's Flower" plays a most important part. Just how the street flower merchant affects the sales of the legitimate retail store is a matter in which opinions differ. Of course the retail store in closest proximity to these stands will be most affected as far as actual sales are concerned, but this is getting away from my subject. One thing is certain, the sale of thousands of carnations on the streets every year will, in time, seriously affect the favoritism of this flower. In fact, it would elevate our profession considerably if flowers were kept off the streets and out of the peddlers' hands and sold or disposed of through legitimate channels only.

In the first place, those sold on the streets are always more or less old, consequently their keeping qualities are very limited, then, the manner in which they are delivered to the buyer, wrapped in a piece of old newspaper, will certainly not tend to increase the flower's popularity. Neither will the street merchant hesitate in misrepresenting his wares, all of which has so cheapened the carnation in the eyes of

THE MARKET UNCHANGED.

The conditions of the flower market are but little changed from a week ago, there being a large stock of all the flowers received, and the buying is a little larger and stock is moving more freely, but the receipts have been so large and the increase in buying so small that it has made no perceptible difference in the market conditions. Some of the dealers say, however, that Saturday of last week was the poorest Saturday that the trade has had this year. There is an increase in the receipts of roses, with the exception of American Beauties and Richmonds, which have held their prices quite firmly and are having a good sale, but the other tea and hybrid tea roses are being quoted at little lower figures. Killarney and White Killarney are both being received in good quantities and the quality is excellent, the color of Killarney being much improved. Richmond is not in heavy crop and those that are received are quickly disposed of. Melody is now seen in splendid condition, some fine vases of these beautiful roses being displayed. Carnations continue to arrive in large shipments, and although there are large quantities sold, yet it is difficult at times to dispose of the stock as fast as it comes in, and some very low quotations on large lots are reported. Red seems to be in large over-supply and there are large vases of these left on hand with most of the growers; the lighter colors seem to find a more constant demand. With warmer weather and more people on the street there has been a little larger call for violets, but there are more than plenty on hand to meet the increased demand. Orchids are not in any too bountiful supply, for the receipts are comparatively small and it would take but a small awakening of the trade to cause these beautiful flowers to clean up. Lily of the valley is quite plentiful, as are lilies and callas. Bulbous stock is very plentiful, there being a great abundance of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths, both as cut flowers and in pots and boxes. Freesia is still to be had in fine quality and antirrhinums, mignonette, lupines, pansies, sweet peas in great quantity and of all colors, calendulas, stocks are all to be found in the daily receipts. There is good supply of Asparagus plumosus, but the branches of Sprengerii do not contain many of the long sprays, showing that the plants have been pretty severely cut. The hardy fern supply is growing short and the prices are correspondingly high. The plantmen are sending in some very fine specimens, the retailers having beautiful azaleas, primulas and bulbous stock. The supply houses are very busy with orders for Easter, which are reported very large.

John Michelsen, with the E. C. Anlin Co., says that during his 17 years of experience on the local market he has never known the condition of the market to be so unsatisfactory as it is at present so early in the season and such high quality stock sell at such low prices. W. P. Kyle, of Kyle & Foerster, tells the same story and no doubt both gentlemen agree with many others that a change for the better cannot happen too soon.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is still cutting heavily in fancy American Beauty roses as well as a fine grade of all other seasonable stock. The receipts of carnations the past week have been unusually large and a special price in large lots is attracting the attention of both the local and out of town buyers. This firm is now showing a fine line of supplies and is ready to book their customers' orders for anything that they may want.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a fancy grade of roses and carnations and are going to be particularly well fixed in white for St. Patrick's day. N. J. Wietor says that his firm is going to be in fine crop with both roses and carnations for Easter and that he will endeavor to give his customers the same quality of goods that they received during the holidays.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is offering large quantities of roses and carnations and J. F. Kidwell says that the fancy stock is meeting with ready sale. A special sale on bronze galax in case lots is attracting the attention of the local buyers this week.

Otto Wittbold attended a meeting of Edgebrook Country Club at the Hotel LaSalle on February 28 when the election of officers for the ensuing year was held. The Ray ticket, which Mr. Wittbold supported, was successful, although the election was very close.

Paul M. Bryant, the hustling manager at E. H. Hunt's, has returned from another enjoyable visit to Milwaukee and is again attending to his duties at the store. Clifford Pruner has started out on another trip with a fine line of samples for parts unknown.

Peter Reinberg is right in crop with White Killarney and Richmond roses and carnations and is offering some very choice stock in all lines. Tim Matchen says that Killarney is also coming into crop and that he expects to have a good supply from now on.

F. F. Scheel of Shermerville has secured the services of Martin Goerger, an efficient carnation grower, and is now going to produce some extra fine stock. Mr. Scheel consigns his stock to Kyle & Foerster, where it always meets with very ready sale.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are particularly well fixed on all kinds of seasonable stock, especially roses and carnations. Both the local and shipping trade are as good as can be expected under the existing conditions.

Peter Weiler says that there is nothing new around the Superior Machine & Boiler Works except that his firm has a large number of fine boilers on hand ready to fill all the spring orders that are likely to come in.

George Economopolis says that the Alpha Floral Co. is doing a fine business and that last Saturday, March 2, was the banner day of the year.

Only a few days more and the wedding bells will be ringing in Irving Park and Des Plaines.

U S Budlong's E Blue Ribbon Valley.

The A. Dietsch Co.'s new catalogue is now in the hands of the printers and will be ready for mailing soon. Carl Ickes, the efficient manager, will gladly furnish one to all the readers of this paper upon request.

Charlie Richter will be married to Miss Nellie Floyd next Wednesday, March 13, at his home at 1045 Milwaukee avenue. Charlie is also planning on going into the retail business at 1045 Milwaukee avenue.

H. Van Gelder has received another large shipment of tissue paper, and when the stock arrived last Monday the store looked very much like the shipping room of a good-sized paper factory.

The violets that the J. B. Deamud Co. is offering are of fine quality, as are also the lilies which are some of the best that we have seen on the local market.

Buchbinder Bros. have had such good success in selling florists' refrigerators that they are going into the business on a larger scale.

H. Munson reports business in the greenhouse material and supply line as good, with a large demand for cleaned and trimmed boiled flues.

PETER REINBERG,

30 E. Randolph Street,

CHICAGO.

E. E. Pieser, the Peony King, informs us that he has bought all the peony stock plants from the Chicago Carnation Co. for the fabulous sum of $10,000 and says that they will be offered for sale at the purchaser's price in the fall. The Peony King bought the stock with the intention of reserving one variety, Richardson's Rubra Superba, with which to stock his large peony plantation. Everyone far and near has heard of the Peony King and his gambling every spring is about as much talked about in the trade as Teddy and Bill are in the presidential campaign at present.

The Geo. M. Garland Co. is now making an addition to their office, the present quarters being far too small to properly take care of the ever increasing business. H. S. Garland was at Joliet with an exhibit at the Illinois State Florists' Association's meeting this week and had his hands full telling his many friends that his firm was not quite ready to give out any information in regard to their new invention. Whatever it is it has got the trade guessing and the only thing that the firm will deny is the rumor that it is building a revolving range.

Peter Sogoros, with the Chicago Florist, has had several very tempting offers for his property at Forty-second and West Harrison streets, but as yet has not accepted any of them. He is planning on building this spring and will either lease or occupy the building himself.

Attention, Florists! For St. Patrick's Day!

GREEN CARNATIONS GREEN

We have a very powerful coloring which will dye many white flowers a beautiful emerald green in a few hours by absorption, or instantly by immersion. The dye is combined with a powerful and harmless chemical agent which helps to preserve and color the flowers. We have the coloring in Red, Blue, Yellow, Orange, American Beauty and Green. Directions with each package, which will make two quarts of coloring. Don't be fooled with cheaper dyes, but get the real article cheap. R. C. Lund, head gardener for Sears & Roebuck, is busy getting his firm's premises at Harvard and Spalding avenues in tip top shape and when he is through he expects to have grounds that will be second to none in this city as far as beauty is concerned.

The Raedlein Basket Co., 713-717 Milwaukee avenue, is making a special price on plant baskets this week, and is giving the florist who handles a large number of plants for Easter an opportunity to secure pot covers at very reasonable figures.

John Kruchten is showing some very fancy stock in all lines and is especially strong on roses, carnations and bulbous flowers. White carnations for St. Patrick's day will be found at this house in quantity and the proprietor expects to fill all orders in full.

Large signs advertising the spring flower show can be seen well displayed over the doors of both the downtown retail and wholesale florists' establishments, and the posters are displayed in conspicuous places.

The E. F. Winterson Co. furnished the carload of wild smilax that was used to decorate the Dexter Pavilion where the American Bowling tournament is now taking place.

The Stuppy Florals, representing the Stuppy Floral Co. of St. Joseph, Mo., will bowl a picked team representing the local Florists' Club Bowling League at Bensingers Alleys, 29 West Randolph street, next Friday, March 8, at 8:00 p. m. The visitors come well recommended and it looks as if the local boys will have to go some to stand a show with Stuppy's crack team from Missouri. The Bullion State players will also strive for honors in the American Bowling Tournament, and are scheduled to appear in the Dexter Pavilion on March 9. The locals wish them much success in the tournament and sincerely hope that John Stuppy's team will come out on top.

The local bowlers have made arrangements to play a match game with the Milwaukee florists next Sunday, March 10, and will leave at 11 a. m. on the Chicago & Northwestern Railway. Everybody is cordially invited to accompany the teams and it would be greatly appreciated if all those who intend to do so would notify Allie Zech, at Zech & Mann's store, so the proper arrangements for all concerned can be made.

The coal strike called by the miners to take place April 1 is a matter of interest to the trade. R. C. Whitsett of the R. C. Whitsett Coal & Mining Co. states that the strike will in all probability be of short duration and that the greenhouse men may feel assured that they will be well supplied. He also says that the strike in England is causing a large demand for American steam coal, especially Pocahontas.

Bassett & Washburn's fancy lilies continue to attract the attention of the trade, and some exceptionally well developed buds are offered. The roses and carnations are also of their usual good quality and sell as readily as can be expected under the prevailing market conditions.

Chas. W. McKellar is now receiving regular shipments of Cattleya Schroederæ and the first of the season made its appearance on March 2. He is expecting a visit from Paul M. Palez, the Arkansas Traveler, who is due to arrive here some time next week.

A. Miller and Guy M. Reyburn of A. Henderson & Co. are in the city this week having returned from successful western business trips. Mr. Henderson reports business as good, with the outlook very encouraging for the coming season.

The dance given by the Chicago Carnation Co.'s baseball team in Adams Hall at Joliet on March 5 was well attended and all those that were present report having had a most enjoyable time. Sure, Princess Charming was there.

J. A. Budlong is cutting heavily in roses and carnations and the tables at the store are again well laden with very fine stock. This firm is also offering some fancy lily of the valley of their famous Blue Ribbon brand.

J. W. Lion says that they are having some very severe cold weather in Belvidere and that the thermometer registered 10° below zero last Saturday, March 2, and that it has been as low as 24° below this winter.

John Zech has been suffering considerably for some time past with severe pains in the back, and left last Tuesday, March 5, for Milwaukee to receive treatment.

Visitors: Geo. Blackman, Evansville, Ind.;—Koolberger, representing Koolberger & Sliedrecht, nurserymen, Boskoop, Holland; John Evans, Richmond, Ind.; C. E. Summerfield, Springfield, Mo.; J. U. G. Lambele, Jr., with Lena McCoy, Seattle, Wash.

Nashville, Tenn.

The Lenten season has made little or no difference in the trade, as all report good sales for the week. Roses are coming in fine again and carnations are at their best. Violets, too, are abundant. Geny Bros. have cut forty thousand in the past three days. They also have an abundance of sweet peas, the white, lilac and pink being the favorite colors. Trade has been good.

NOTES.

The most important piece of news of the week, in floral circles, is the announcement of the purchase, by the McIntyre Bros. of a valuable piece of West End real estate to be used as a floral store. The property is located on the fashionable West End avenue and is at present a residence, but will, as soon as the present lease expires, be converted into a floral store. The front will be extended to the street, and will serve as the sales department, having large plate glass windows in front. The building, which is a large two-story brick, will be thoroughly remodeled to meet the needs of the floral business, while the upper portions will be used as a residence by some members of the family. The lot is a very deep one, of 225 feet, and on this the firm propose to build a large greenhouse for palms and other things needed to be at hand. It will be invaluable for storage and such like conveniences. While waiting to get possession of the new property the brothers will push forward, as rapidly as possible, work on the new plant on Kilvington avenue, where they are erecting large up-to-date greenhouses, which will be fully ready for next season's trade. The old place on the Hillsboro road contains six acres and the new has thirty-six. The McIntyres are pioneers in the floral business in this city, their father, the late Dan McIntyre, having established the business more than fifty years ago. It is now being carried on by the four brothers, Dan, Will, Tom and Hugh, and their sister, Miss Nellie McIntyre. This makes a strong firm and every one, even the sister, Miss Nellie, being a practical florist, and it is her taste and ingenuity that makes beautiful the floral designs. By making this purchase McIntyre Bros. have shown fine business judgment. Rents in the business sections are enormously high, so as to be almost prohibitive. This puts them in a fashionable residential section and will, no doubt, be very convenient to purchasers. This is an innovation in this city and will in all probability be eminently successful.

The Joy Floral Company has an abundance of every kind of beautiful flowers and a demand which keeps their large force of clerks constantly busy. Their American Beauty roses are fine; also Richmond, My Maryland and other roses. They have an abundance of sweet peas and thousands of violets. The pleasant weather of a few days, after the severities of the season, caused violets to bloom very profusely.

Haury & Sons are doing a good business and have an excellent class of flowers, which meet with a ready sale. Their roses, carnations and bulbous stock are of the best.

BUSINESS GOOD.

Although the cold snap caused the plentiful supply of roses to hold up somewhat, it did not affect the demand for flowers, which has been good, and there has been considerable funeral work.

NOTES.

A large quantity of flowers was used at the funeral of Mr. Lanahan, a prominent business man of great wealth and noted for his charity and liberality. He was a great lover of flowers and his beautiful country home "Blenheim," was one of the beauty spots of Baltimore county. An exquisite lawn, flowers and well kept shrubbery made an ideal place. The Gardeners' and Florists' Club have been lavishly entertained there.

The greenhouses of J. P. King, Mt. Airy, are looking well. About 25,000 square feet of glass, planted with roses, carnations, sweet peas and a variety of potted plants, are well cared for. He has a large local trade in the community of Mt. Airy and is, as well, a shipper to the city.

O. Fiedler, of A. Fiedler & Co., reports a bright outlook. A good business is carried on from the South Charles street store; a large greenhouse has recently been added to their range. They have about 16 acres and 15,000 square feet of glass.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club held its regular meeting Monday, February 26. Return postals have been sent out announcing the banquet in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary to be held at Mt. Holly Inn March 11, 1912.

Morris Co. Gardeners' and Florists' Society

The meeting of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, to be held March 13, will be "Carnation night." Madison is getting to be almost as famous for her carnations as she is for her roses. This annual affair has for a number of years been a great success. The standard varieties will be well represented from around home, but the novelties we must get wherever we can. This year's introductions can count amongst them many of a very high standard, and the society would solicit from the introducers as many consignments as possible. All consignments in care of C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., will be well cared for and be staged properly. Three papers on the carnation will be read—"Propagation," by George Hubbard of the C. H. Totty establishment; "Culture," by G. F. Neipp, Chatham, N. J.; and "Carnations of Today," by John Downing of Morris Plains.

E. R.

ROCKY RIVER, O.—The Western Reserve Greenhouse Co. has been incorporated by R. N. Bradley and others with a capital stock of $17,000.

MIAMI, FLA.—The meeting of the State Horticultural Society to be held here in May will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization. Secretary E. O. Painter is now making arrangements for the meeting.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—At a meeting of the creditors of E. C. Campbell it was unanimously voted to dispose of the store at private sale for the payment of the employees, to be followed by assignment for the benefit of the creditors instead of bankruptcy proceeding. The outlook now is that Mr. Campbell will be able to pay all creditors in full without assignment or bankruptcy.

THE SUPPLY INCREASING.

While it is the consensus of opinion among the retailers that "Lent makes some difference," business continues to be very fair. There are many people to whom one day is as good as another, providing they can get some enjoyment out of it, and then, with headquarters open for four or five presidential candidates, including the formidable Colonel, something has to be done. The quantity of flowers is constantly on the increase and there does not seem to be a scarcity in any stock. Particularly noticeable is the profusion of sweet peas and carnations in both of which there is much fine stock. Reports received from various wholesale centers indicate that there is no shortage of good flowers in any part of the country within shipping distance of this city, and that, it will be readily seen, includes a wide area. The thoughts of growers are now dwelling on Easter and Easter stocks. The lilies, so far as we have learned, are coming on well and there are prospects of a good crop. While the weather is not at all springlike, there was considerable sunshine during the past week, which helped stock along.

NOTES.

Since W. R. Smith of the U. S. Botanical Gardens has been ill his place has been capably filled by John Clark, another venerable Scotchman. Mr. Clark is likewise an authority on plants and flowers and keeps right up to date on current events in the horticultural world. Just now he is greatly interested in the coming exhibition in London and it would not be surprising to his friends if he makes the trip.

John Robertson, who pays much attention to landscape work and trees and shrubs, calls our attention to the large number of shrubs that have been winter-killed. This is particularly true of the Azalea amena, tea roses and aucubas. It is also believed that much privet is killed, but that cannot be definitely determined for a time.

Alex. B. Garden has a fine lot of lilies coming on for Easter, as well as a large variety of other pot stock, noteworthy being Dorothy Perkins and Crimson Rambler roses.

L. Z. Blackstone is about to erect a row of houses in the Georgetown section of the city at an outlay of nearly $20,000. The contract has already been let.

J. H. Small & Sons will continue to operate both of their stores. Their fine new store is in the Woodward building, Fifteenth and H streets, N. W.

A feature of the Gude Bros. Co.'s new range at present is the remarkably fine quality of sweet peas, of which they are making a heavy cut.

James Pierce of the Bowen road, Good Hope, is sending in very fine primroses and mignonette.

STOCK ACCUMULATING.

The week ended with a very severe snow storm and Saturday was again a very poor day for transient trade. The market cannot be quoted; everything is plentiful and there is absolutely no demand; even funeral work is slack. Violets and sweet peas are accumulating; violets are quoted as low as five cents per bunch. What the grower realizes is something the least said about the better. The stores are now making quite a show in blooming plants. Ferns are now quoted at $2.50

A LARGE OVER-SUPPLY.

The market is more than loaded with stock of all kinds. Locally business is, owing to the advent of Lent, very quiet. This, combined with a large over-supply, has driven prices down to their lowest point for some time. Judging from the way flowers are continuing to arrive, this condition of the market will keep up for some time at least. Roses and carnations are selling best of all. Roses are again coming into crop and there are again enough to go around. The Killarneys and White Killarneys are fine and the offerings in Brides and Bridesmaids are all first class, both in respect to quality and quantity. Richmonds clean up every day. Good American Beauties of all sizes are in demand and sell well. The carnation glut continues and there is small chance of any help at the present time. The flowers are selling in many instances at buyer's prices and few if any bring what they should. Bulbous stock of all kinds is in over-supply and is not moving any too quickly. Tulips and daffodils seem most popular, but lilies have been hit hard. The call for them is small. Violets are receiving scarcely any favor with the buyers. It is only through the street fakirs that any quantities of these are being cleaned up. Their popularity has been replaced by sweet peas and of these only the choice sell quickly. The others ranging from good down to almost nothing sell only after the best are disposed of. The supply of lily of the valley equals the demand. The green goods business is good.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell reports that the demand for boxwood has been better and has held up longer than in past years. Harrie B. McCullough and family have gone to Florida for a stay. Visitors: Wm. P. Craig, of Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.; Joseph H. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; Louis Dilloff, of Schloss Bros., New York.

STOCK PLENTY. PRICES LOWER.

The market has been in rather a bad state the past week, the stock coming in plentifully and naturally the prices dropped considerably. Carnations are selling from $1.00 to $3.00 per 100. There are plenty of roses to fill all orders and an over-supply of bulb stock, sweet peas and violets, which sell for any price that could be obtained. There are plenty of lilies and callas coming into the market, and plenty of greens to supply all orders.

NOTES.

E. Welke Co. is well pleased with their business and have been cutting quite a number of carnations at their greenhouse plant. J. M. Fox & Son are making some fine displays in their windows of late which are attracting much attention. Mrs. John C. Rost was reported as being very ill during the past week, but is somewhat improved. Gust Rusch & Co. are receiving some very fine stock from A. Klokner, Wauwatosa. Holton & Hunkel Co. is receiving plenty of stock and are again cutting fine roses.

STOCK VERY PLENTIFUL.

Stock of all kinds, grades and varieties is very plentiful, with possibly a scarcity of long-stemmed American Beauties. There is a deluge of callas and Easter lilies, bulbous stock, violets and carnations. Lent and the weather are each partly responsible for a weak demand, even the street fakir refuses to buy at any price. Short roses and carnations for funeral work can be had at very low prices,

AMERICAN BEAUTIES STILL SCARCE.

Business moves slowly along these days, the demand not keeping up with the supply, which is increasing at a great ratio as the days grow longer. The quality is excellent, the higher grades being all that could be desired. There is only one gap, and that is the American Beauty. The stock of this rose is very short, a dozen choice salable flowers being considered a prize. Growers say that there will be a change soon, and that before long, as the new shoots are setting buds, and the crop promises to make up for lost time. White Killarney and Killarney roses are the leaders. None of the others are in the race with them. Bulbous stock is still very plentiful and cheap. The carnation stock is piling up a bit and prices are away down, particularly on quantity lots. There appears to be an unusually large percentage of blooms with split calices, but the general quality or standard of the carnation has been better this season than ever before and the flower has gained friends among flower lovers. Cattleyas are plentiful and quantity lots are sold much below the ordinary dozen price. Violets are more plentiful and cheaper, although in fairly good demand. Snapdragon is now to be depended on without booking ahead and is a popular flower for table decorations. There is plenty of good lilac.

CLUB MEETING.

The well prepared address on the work of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural college read by Joseph Heacock, and the account of Robert Craig's trip to Porto Rico were the features of the February meeting of the Florists' Club held last Tuesday evening. At the April meeting Alfred Burton will read a paper on soils. Mr. Burton, who is a graduate of the State College, has expert knowledge of this subject, and will give his experience in experiments that he has made in a practical way in his greenhouse work. Mr. Heacock's paper was very instructive and showed the great work that was being carried on by the state, the good results of which were open to all who choose to avail themselves of the information. Mr. Craig, after describing the wonderful climate of Porto Rico, showed how the invasion of the United States had helped the country, which had never before prospered as it has since the Americans have taken hold.

NOTES.

W. K. Harris met with a serious accident during his stay in Porto Rico, he being thrown over the front of an automobile when the steering gear broke. When picked up he was unconscious and remained so for twenty-four hours in a hospital. He now seems fully recovered, although showing the effects of a bad bruise on his head and side of his face. Mrs. Harris, his mother, and others in the car were thrown suddenly forward, but managed to hold on and were not thrown out.

Robert Craig, who returned with Julius Roehrs and Mr. Harris, is full of the beauties and practical advantages of this tropical climate, as a site for a nursery for many of the plants that are grown here in greenhouses.

Mr. Craig has had great success with dracena canes, particularly new and scarce varieties, which he had planted on the Isle of Pines, and he sees a greater future for an opening at Porto Rico where cultural methods are far in advance of the Isle of Pines.

The Leo Niessen Co. are solving the problem of handling surplus stock by making special prices on quantity lots in various lines that do not move, so as to induce their customers to in turn run a special sale of this or that flower and increase their business by offering stock at lower than usual prices. It is a good idea and successfully carried out by many in the trade.

Miss Fletcher is now the proprietor of the business of the late D. D. L. Farson at Overbrook and will run it as a branch of her Baltimore avenue establishment. Miss Fletcher is a business woman and will succeed as the new location is in a very good neighborhood for high class trade.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. are shipping quantities of carnations and other ferns at reduced prices for special sales; one lot of 10,000 carnations was shipped recently to a retailer for a Saturday special.

Berger Bros. are carrying a great stock of Easter lilies and will make a feature of them until after Easter.

The trade heard with regret of the passing away of Thomas Elder, whose death occurred on March 2. K.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society held February 27 was "Carnation Night," and for a long time, the center tables have not held such a profusion of blooming plants. Besides an abundance of carnations, the collection included cinerarias (hybrida and stellata) and Primula obconica. Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., exhibited his new variegated carnation, Benora, which seems worthy of his appellation of "a gem among carnations." President Huss staged, and waxed enthusiastic over, his numerous blooming plants of Primula malacoides and Primula Kewensis, which are among the rare recent acquisitions from northern China, brought to this country by E. H. Wilson. The judges were J. Alfred Weber, of Hartford; George B. Baker, of New Britain; and Walter Angus, of Chapinville. They recommended awards as follows: Certificate of merit to Elizabeth Park, Hartford (A. Cumming, Jr., head gardener), for cinerarias; diploma to J. F. Huss for Primula obconica; diploma to A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, for carnations; diploma to Peter Fisher for Benora; and certificates of merit respectively to J. F. Huss, William H. MacKenzie of Bristol, and John Coombs, of Hartford (Howard A. Pinney, head gardener), for carnations. Theodore Stout, of Rockville, exhibited one bloom of a new seeding carnation, which the judges deemed A1, but needed more specimens to judge of its value. He was tendered a vote of thanks.

A leading feature of the evening's enjoyment was the address by Walter Angus, on "The Chrysanthemum and Its Culture." He first briefly traced its history to modern times, and then with much clearness and instructiveness outlined its manner of propagation and culture. It was a masterly paper, and was listened to with great attention. He answered questions at the close, especially regarding the insect enemies of this "Golden Flower of the Greeks," as he called it. He received a warm expression of thanks for his address.

The evening of March 8 will be "Cineraria and Cyclamen Night," and we are promised an appropriate address by A. Cumming, Jr., on the most desirable annuals.

The society regrets the passage of a new state law, under which it will hereafter have its annual appropriation of funds from the commonwealth reduced one-half, or approximately from $200 to $100. Other incorporated agricultural societies expending much larger sums on premiums will receive relatively larger appropriations; the object of the new enactment evidently being to help the larger organizations more, and the smaller ones less.

GEORGE W. SMITH, Secy.

Pittsburg.

ALL STOCK PLENTIFUL.

Little improvement can be reported over that of last week; all stock is over-plentiful, including American Beauties, which have been exceptionally scarce since New Year's. A few pansies and lupines are now coming in.

NOTES.

Miss Katherine Friel has resigned her position with the Zieger Co., and is now with R. J. Daschbach. Jack Trampton has also severed his connection with the Zieger Co., and has taken a position with the G. P. Weaklen Co.

It is reported that Randolph & McClements expect to combine their two stores into one large one at the corner of Penn avenue and Whitfield street. The old building now occupying that site will be torn down and the erection of the new place started immediately.

The McCallum Co. are receiving large quantities of American Beauties of all grades. J.

A GLUT OF EVERYTHING.

There has been a decided chill since ex-President Roosevelt's visit, whether it was the hot air that surrounded the party or a vacuum caused by the swish of the big stick, causing the inrush of a cold wave, wise men can only tell. Of course, it isn't openly stated that his visit caused the glut in the flower trade, but there is a glut and a bad one on everything. W. N. Rudd prepared a paper last month which was read in Detroit, with the title, "Where Some of Us Are Lame." There are some lame ducks in Boston just now. "Talking about gluts," he says, "get a new slogan—How to make gluts profitable." Then he stops. Mr. Rudd is something like the average Scotchman. He tells something and keeps something back. Let Mr. Rudd come to Boston and give a lecture, and take "How to Make Gluts Profitable" for his subject. He will have the greatest gathering of florists and those interested in the flower trade that ever filled a hall. We have been waiting for a philosopher to answer, and the bright star of the west has shown its brilliancy. We need the advice now and need it badly, and the future race of flower growers will revere the name of Rudd and keep his memory ever green, and the present race will crowd round him and pronounce him the "greatest ever." We are glad another Moses has arisen. We are almost ashamed to talk trade—there is scarcely any. An increase in products and a decrease in orders places it in a bad way. Some of the bulb men had the nerve to arrive here last week for orders for delivery next fall. The way bulk stock is going it might tempt the grower to lay in wait with a savage dog for them or put up warning signs to keep them away. One was heard to remark after being presented with the facts of the market: "Never mind, they will buy my bulbs just the same." A salesman of that stamp is worth his weight in diamonds.

NOTES.

W. N. Craig, the sage of North Easton, has been lecturing on beans, etc. He advocates back to the land idea. The Scotch slogan some time ago was three acres and a cow; but friend Craig advises cutting the meat business in half and subsisting on the fruits of the soil. We expect there will be a large demand on the several congressmen for free seeds the coming spring, but Mr. Craig left out the advice, how to grow vegetables in a hot summer without rain.

The full bench of the Supreme Court ruled that a charitable corporation is not exempt from a claim for personal damages for injuries received by an employe. The decision of the Superior Court was reversed, and Tom A. Holder, an employe of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, was allowed $2,500 for injuries received in the fall of an elevator in Horticultural Hall.

We hope to have more pleasing news of the market next week. MAC.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Goldwood Greenhouse Co. of Goldwood township, Cuyahoga county, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000. The incorporators are Henry E. Asplin, William E. Asplin, Burton A. Hartje, Edith C. Hoag, Harvey O. Yoder.

Worcester, Mass.

A new corporation to be known as the Pine Croft Greenhouses of North Brookfield has been organized under the laws of Massachusetts, with a capital stock of $30,000. The officers are: Howard S. Hill of East Brookfield, president and treasurer; Walter E. Clark, Worcester, clerk, and Howard C. Webb of Worcester, third director.

Leonard C. Midgley's carnations look exceptionally good, especially his scarlet seedling, of which he has a large stock. He intends to put it on the market next year. While it is not quite as large as Beacon, the stem is as good and the color a good deal better.

At the meeting of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, held February 29, John K. M. L. Farquhar of Boston, one of the most prominent seedsmen of the state, delivered an MARKET INACTIVE.

The wholesale cut flower market is probably in as an inactive condition as it has ever been at this season of the year, and there is an over-supply of almost everything. American Beauty roses which were in short supply at high prices, are now very much in evidence and moving slowly at much lower figures. The top grade of Killarneys, Mme. Chateaus, Richmond, My Maryland, Prince de Bulgarie and other roses, which were in active demand a short time ago, are now much more abundant and prices are lower. Brides and Bridesmaids are accumulating and the best of these are seldom called for, and have to be disposed of at greatly reduced prices. The market is glutted with high-grade carnations. It would be an impossibility to make special quotations on even the novelties and high-grade blooms, as they are moving slowly. With orchids the situation is somewhat different, as the finer blooms are finding a more ready market. Gardenias are scarce and the demand is good. Bulbous stock and lily of the valley are selling much better; there is no change in the price of tulips and narcissi. Lilies are selling for all kinds of prices, but it must be remembered that there are all qualities of lilies in the market, and while those that are long-stemmed, with good flowers, sell readily, the short-stemmed have to be cleared out at about half the price of the regular values. It would be difficult to mention anything that is in short supply with the exception of gardenias. Violets are over-abundant. Sweet peas, lilac and mignonette are in sufficient supply to satisfy all demands. Asparagus and smilax are moving slowly, but the quotations on greens do not vary very much from week to week.

NOTES.

The interesting event of the week was the "Greek-American" Florists' Association ball held at the Terrace Garden on Wednesday. E. J. Polykranis, the president of the society, deserves much credit for the manner in which the affair was carried out. There was an attendance of over 23,000. Nicholas Christatos had charge of the decorations and they were a noteworthy feature of the occasion. The trade in all lines was well represented, all of the wholesalers being present. Too much praise cannot be given to the officers and committees for the generous manner in which they entertained their guests. Among the visitors were Frederick Marquardt, president New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association; Frank H. Traendly, vice-president American Rose Society, and Philip Einsmann, vice-president of the New York Florists' Club.

James Pettigrew and wife were found dead in their apartment, asphyxiated accidentally by illuminating gas. Mr. Pettigrew was a well known figure in the flower business in New York, being associated for years with the late C. W. Matheson at 673 Sixth avenue.

The dinner committee are much pleased to know that Patrick O'Mara will serve as toast master on the occasion of the club's 25th anniversary at the Park Avenue Hotel, March 23. Mr. O'Mara evidently could not resist being with the "bunch."

"Charlie" Millang was a visitor to the market during the past week. It will only be a short time before he is back on the "job." He is still very weak and somewhat upset as a result of the serious automobile accident.

The annual spring inspection trip of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will take place Thursday, March 7, when the members will travel from place to place in automobiles.

Traendly & Schenck will disseminate the new carnation, Salmon Beauty, introduced by F. B. Abrams, Bluepoint, L. I., and are much pleased with the impression this carnation has already made.

Ralph Voight of Chatham, N. J., met with a very serious automobile accident at his place on February 26. The machine ran off the bank and Mr. Voight had his leg broken.

Maurice L. Glass, formerly of A. Moltz & Co., will open in the wholesale business March 9 at 116 West Twenty-eighth street, in the store of J. J. Felouris Co.

Robert M. Schultz, Madison, N. Y., is confined to his home with rheumatism and would appreciate a call from any of his friends who are in the vicinity.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held on Tuesday evening, February 27. President Wittlinger in the chair, and a good number of members present. The prize offered by J. W. Smith for the best vase of roses was awarded to A. Weeks for a fine vase of My Maryland. W. Scott read an interesting and instructive essay on how to grow chrysanthemums for exhibition, which was greatly appreciated by the members present and was accorded a hearty vote of thanks. At the next meeting, to be held March 26, it was decided to hold a smoker, and a cordial invitation will be extended to the neighboring societies. A social and enjoyable evening is assured and a delegation from each is expected. G. M.

the public that even if the legitimate florist could meet the fakir's price the majority of people would not want them. This is particularly true when they can be purchased on the streets. Customers will look in disdain at the choicest carnation and remark: "No, thanks; no carnations for me. My friends may think I bought them on the street." In this way, gentlemen, has the value of the carnation suffered and the remedy lies in our hands. The argument has been advanced that many of the blooms sold on the streets find their way into the homes of people who are not in the habit of buying flowers, and their liking for nature's messengers is consequently stimulated. This is true to some extent, still, if these same people could be induced to come into a flower store and perhaps for a few cents more buy perfectly fresh carnations, properly done up, is it not reasonable to believe they will be still more apt to become flower lovers?

When there is a glut of carnations why not sell them to the retailer, who is your or your commission man's customer for three hundred and sixty-five days each year, at a low figure, say from fifty cents to one dollar per hundred, or at the same price the fakir pays? You will say the latter buys thousands at one time; true enough, but only when he can buy at a loss to the grower. When you are selling at a profit it is the storeman whom you sell; in fact, you are dependent on the legitimate retail flower merchant for your profits. Then why not assist the latter in upholding the standard of the carnation? Make it possible for him to send to his customers occasionally two or three dozen carnations gratis, the grower to bear part of the expense, for you will surely share in the profits as the results of such advertising. Right here occurs to me a suggestion from Mr. Elberfield of Kansas City. His idea being to advertise, that with each one dozen sold another dozen will be sent free of charge to some friend of the buyer. By selling them at fifty cents per dozen at this time you are really not cheapening the flower, but merely giving a few away. Mr. Elberfield's contention is that this will result in two sales eventually as the party receiving the flowers will want to reciprocate. Any such schemes will tend to relieve a glut without injuring our business.

My suggestions for partially relieving a glut may be rather vague fancies, appreciating the fact that the surplus in this city (Detroit) is naught when compared with the hundreds of thousands of carnations, violets and roses for which the commission man in New York or Chicago must each season find an outlet. Still the proportion of first class stores in those cities is correspondingly greater and I am sure a concentrated effort by grower, commission man and retailer combined would at least help some. The trouble is that there is too much animosity between the two factors. It would certainly be to the advantage of both if more harmony and more of an exchange of ideas existed. If only the producer of our wares were to enlist his services in a retail store for one season and there meet face to face the final consumer of the products of his thousands of square feet of glass I am positive he would be well repaid for his trouble.

As a final suggestion I would say: Do not resort to any more pickling of stock than is absolutely necessary. Nothing will so prejudice people against a certain kind of flower than the fact that it will not last long and pickled carnations or any other pickled flower will positively not last. Rose, violet and chrysanthemum growers will also please note these last remarks.

American Seed Trade Association.

Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, President; Marshall H. Duryea, New York, First Vice-President; Edgar Gregory, Marblehead, Mass., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary and Treasurer. Next annual convention at Chicago, June 25-27, 1912.

ONION SETS have advanced 15 to 20 cents a bushel the past week, with yellow scarce.

HOLLISTER, CALIF., telegram of March 6 indicates some conditions, probably rain, by which all the seed crops will be benefited.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, March 6, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $11 to $15 per 100 pounds.

ACCORDING to a prominent western dealer, the frost injury to seed corn has been such that many varieties will be at a premium.

TUBEROSE bulbs are scarce in Holland, where the largest American shipments go, because of frost injury enroute and somewhat reduced deliveries.

ONE wholesale western seed house is reported to have sold out their Alaska peas at $7.50 and Horsfords at over $8.00 per bushel, of the past season's crop.

FIRST sized bulbs of leading named kinds of gladiolus, as well as high grade, pedigreed mixtures of the same, have sold well and stocks will hardly last the season out.

PRESIDENT LEONARD H. VAUGHAN of the American Seed Trade Association held an average score of 193 March 6 in the tournament of the American Bowling Congress in progress at Chicago this week.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—The many friends of Frank Pelicano will be sorry to hear that he has had such a bad attack of rheumatism that he has had to go to the springs for a few weeks to recuperate.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—George Shima is reported as having cornered the potato market. He owns vast acres of potato producing land in California and has secured option on other large tracts, and his operations have extended, it is stated, into Oregon.

LENGTHY articles deploring a seed famine are appearing in many newspapers, stimulated in part perhaps by the "scare" talk in some seed catalogues. We believe such publicity injurious to the seed business and regret to see it.

French Bulbs.

Latest advices regarding French bulbs in the south of France are as follows: It is very likely that the Syndicate for the Defense of Agricultural Interests will try to maintain the same prices as last year. However, should the weather be favorable and the crop good a decline of a few francs on the Paper Whites may be expected in the course of the campaign or towards the end of the season, but the present outlook does not enable dealers to depend with any certainty on such possible reductions.

Figuring Costs.

At this time of the year when seedsmen are arranging the prices of seeds, etc., for the coming season, a few remarks on the subject of costing may not be out of place. The question of what amount is to be added to the cost price to cover "Fixed charges" (or indirect expenses) before the trader can arrive at the selling price, is one which ought to receive most careful attention. In these days of keen competition when the tendency is to cut prices, it too often happens that by adopting a rule-of-thumb method when giving a quotation, the trader simply adds to the cost price a very small and totally inadequate percentage to cover these charges. In nine cases out of ten he has sold the goods too cheaply, with the result when frequently repeated, the consequences are disastrous.

The writer had the opportunity some time ago of examining the tenders for the supply of garden seeds to a large public institution, and was surprised to find firms quoting prices that were anything from 25 to 60 per cent below the prices of others, and to the same man of business it must be evident that a large proportion of the firms are quoting prices that will show a heavy loss.

It should be borne in mind that not only when reduced prices are quoted but in ordinary competitive trading it is important that the trader should know his indirect expenses, or establishment charges as they are sometimes called.

Current selling prices tend to be—come established, and the difference between this and the total cost of executing the orders is the margin left to the individual trader, it may be greater or less than that realized by his competitors, according as his methods are inexpensive or the reverse.

In a purely selling business the cost price of an article is always a known quantity, and it is therefore the expensive item that baffles the retailer. The fact that every expense of a business comes out of the profit should not be overlooked. The difference between the cost of an article and the selling price is the gross profit. Out of that has to come the expense and what is left is the net profit.

HOW TO ARRIVE AT THE SELLING PRICE.

Figure out your total expense for the year (this amount can easily be ascertained by referring to the profit and loss account). Divide this by the total of your sales for the same period, and you have the per cent to add to invoice price to cover expense, then add your profit and you have the selling price. As an example, if your total turnover for the year is £50,000 and your management and all other expenses for the year is £5,000, then you must add 10 per cent to the cost price in addition to what you put on for profit. In figuring out the expense it should be noted that every business has, more or less, a number of accruing and unpaid charges which are only passed through the books periodically (usually when paid). For example—rent, rates, insurance, commissions, depreciation, interest on loans, water, light, etc. It is, of course, essential that all expenditures whether disbursed or not should be included.

The profits that can be obtained on different classes of goods naturally vary, and it is sometimes, therefore, not advisable to debit an equal percentage for establishment charges to each department, but a suitable percentage should be arranged for each, taking care that the total is spread over the business. For instance, to charge the same amount in this respect to grain as to garden seeds would make the sale of the former prohibitive.—J. L. in the Horticultural Advertiser.

We are the largest handlers of Cannas in the world. Our prices upon Cannas will bear comparison with any house in the Cnna business.

Our Cannas are true to name—two and three, sometimes four eyes—are sound, dormant, and are packed 250 in a box; two can be "cleated" together and shipped as one. One box of 250 sold at a thousand rate; it is cheaper for you to buy a box of 250 than 200 at 100 rate. Write for special prices for quantities.

If any Cannas are not found here, it may be understood that they are superseded by the foregoing. If selection is left to us, we will substitute or send only the best for all purposes.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, March 4.—Mushrooms, 15 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, 20 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches; rhubarb, 50 cents to 60 cents per bunch; lettuce, 25 cents to 27½ cents, small cases; cucumbers, $1.50 per dozen.

New York, March 2.—Mushrooms, 60 cents to $2 per 4-pound basket; cucumbers, $1.25 to $1.87 per dozen; tomatoes, 15 cents to 55 cents per pound; radishes, $1.50 to $3 per 100 bunches; lettuce, $1 to $2 per strap; rhubarb, 40 cents to 60 cents per large bunch and 60 cents to 90 cents per dozen small bunches; mint, 35 cents to 60 cents per dozen bunches.

Steam Heating of Cold Frames.

It is not generally known that cold frames can very well be heated by steam in underground fashion. We have experimented considerably along this line and have secured good results. The method has some advantages over any other way of heating, as we get the desired bottom heat without the labor and expense, and also have no danger of infection, of manure. Further, almost any quantity of frames can be prepared in the fall and gotten under way in the spring on short notice.

We use common 3-inch drain tile; lay these about 18 inches underground down one way and back the other, being careful to place them equidistant from the sides to provide uniform heat. One end is provided with a piece of one-inch pipe and elbow to admit live steam; the beds are arranged so that a main down a central path will be handy to serve beds to right and left. By using a piece of hose connections can easily be made and changed. The steam is used in daytime only, generally when the pressure runs up owing to cut-off circulation in the greenhouses. It takes a long time to heat a cold bed, but once heated such heat lasts for days; in fact, we have started up crops with one thorough heating. The tile, however, must be connected to some drainage system to relieve them of any water, as the steam on striking water condenses, causing a vacuum or suction, which speedily cracks the tile. Thus we heat and drain at one time and can control the heat at will.

Cyrtomium Falcatum Rochfordianum. The New Crested Holly Fern.

CYRTOMIUM FALCATUM ROCHFORDIANUM

The illustration gives a fair idea of a good 6-inch pot plant of this important novelty which will undoubtedly take the place of the popular Cyrtomium Falcatum which heretofore has been the best selling Fern we grow. The bright glossy-green foliage in this variety is even more pronounced than in the parent and besides this the pinnae, or leaflets, are wavy, or undulated and are also deeply cut, or toothed, giving the plant a very graceful and decorative appearance. It will prove valuable both as a Dish Fern, as well as for growing into specimens in 6 or 8 inch pans for apartment decoration.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen
J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O., President;
W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass., Vice-
President; John Hall, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Thirty-seventh annual convention to be held at Boston, Mass., June 12-14, 1912.

MARIETTA, GA.—This was once a great peach section, but owing to the failure of crops the nursery business here has been practically abandoned.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.—A systematic campaign has been started by the state moth department against the gypsy moth which is now established in 120 towns in the state.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The Lewis & Valentine Co. has been incorporated with a capital of $50,000 to carry on a general nursery business. The directors are Harold C. Lewis, Albert A. Lewis and Richard K. Valentine of East Rockaway.

CLINTON, MASS.—Edward W. Breed, president of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, addressed the members of the Lansdec club, February 20, on the subject "Our Civic Pride." The town officials were invited to attend.

THE executive committee of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents have decided that the next convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., about the third week in August, providing proper hotel accommodations can be made at that time.

THE report of the proceedings of the convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents, held at Kansas City, August 8-10, 1911, just issued, contains a verbatim report of the papers and discussions of that meeting, accompanying which is a list of members of the association.

BOSTON, MASS.—At the meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society held March 2 Wilfried Wheeler delivered an address on "The Fruit Question." An informal discussion followed, participated in by Prof. B. S. Pickett of Durham, N. H.; H. L. Frost of Arlington, and Prof. L. C. Sears of Amherst.

HAVANA, CUBA.—The National Horticultural Society of Cuba, Chas. A. Beatley, secretary, held its annual meeting in Havana February 14-16. Election of officers and other routine matters received attention. The event was of more than usual importance because of the horticultural and pomological display, in connection with the National Agricultural Exhibition of 1912, now on.

Two New Helianthus Hybrids.

The hybrid sunflowers have made for themselves a place among decorative plants, where comparative size, luxuriance of bloom and color are desired. Among recent introductions are:

H. Sparsifolius.—Nine to 12 ft. high, branching, pyramidal, foliage ample, the flower heads characterized by curling or twisted petals, which give the flower an especially attractive appearance. The flower stalks are very long and sparsely leaved. Blooms August and September.

H. H. G. Moon.—Three to 3½ feet. Stiff solid branches, good form and very decorative. Blooms in July, very freely; petals somewhat twisted as in sparsifolius, though less markedly.—Revue Horticole.

A New Grape Insect.

A new insect pest which is reported to have caused considerable damage to the vineyards in many parts of France is a small moth of the genus cochylys. The larvae cause the grapes to drop, and each grape in an infected plant will have one or two larvae in it, but the number may reach as high as eight or more. Many methods to exterminate them have been tried but with little success. A mixture of four parts benzine and one part poppy oil has been found to be sure death to the insect, and this is applied by placing a drop in each infected grape, which can be readily recognized by its appearance. This method, while it will not save the vines attacked, will destroy the larvae and prevent a recurrence of the pest.

Pests and Parasites.

Why we need a national law to prevent the importation of insect-infested and diseased plants and to prevent the United States from becoming a dumping ground for refuse stock is thoroughly explained in a pamphlet entitled "Pests and Parasites" issued by the Bureau of Entomology, Department of Agriculture. The introduction of insects and the damage annually inflicted by them on the orchards, forests and products of the country are ably described. Illustrations show the gypsy and brown-tail moths, the boll weevil and other insects and their devastating work. The loss to the country is estimated in the millions, and legislation by the national government to enforce a quarantine inspection law is declared to be a necessity.

PAINESVILLE, O.—The nurserymen of this vicinity already have their sleeves rolled up ready to dig into the spring business upon receipt of the signal to go ahead from the weatherman.—E. T. Mellen has purchased property at Mentor and is understood to be preparing to start a nursery.—The Mentor Nursery has recently added 60 acres to their property which it is intended to plant to nursery stock.—The Carl Hagenberger Co. have sold their Madison plant to Harry Taylor.

GREENWICH, CONN.—Mrs. August Bertolf, wife of the junior partner of Dehn & Bertolf, was seriously injured while riding in an automobile which crashed into a telegraph pole. She was thrown against the wind shield, and was badly cut with the broken glass.

TAKE THE HINT

The successful man in business keeps cool. Don't cry, don't worry about hard times, don't lose your head. Just keep calm and think of your old friend in Philadelphia. His name, Godfrey Aschmann, is not forgotten and is a name in the mind of every florist who dealt with him last Easter. He is more active than ever. He shall take care of you this Easter, 1912. His big stock of fine plants and his low prices will pull you through at all times.

Therefore Prepare for Easter

And Come Direct to the Factory. A Great Factory of Live Stock That Never Ceases.

Twenty-five years' experience in shipping Easter plants—well known, popular, from Atlantic to Pacific Oceans. Our shipments of Easter Plants reach every city and state of the United States, Mexico, Canada, and as far as Cuba.

All Florists should this Easter time
Come see my stock quite superfine;
My glistening Araucarias,
My Lilies strong and wondrous fair,
Ferns, big and green, no rivals know,
Bulbs of all sorts, the best I grow.
There's not a flower you now can need
But I can sell you cheap indeed.

Azalea Indica.

Is another specialty of ours, inspected personally by myself on my yearly trip to Europe at our grower's establishment in Belgium, who is a specialist in cultivating Azaleas over there. Only the best American sorts are raised and imported for me. What is the name of the best double pink Azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name; originated by the well-known Azalea specialist, Mr. Van der Cruyssen, of Ghent, Belgium. Millions are raised every year of this so world-wide known popular pink Azalea and are shipped out to every portion of the globe from Belgium. We are well provided and have a big stock of this so well favored variety in America, the Mme. Van der Cruyssen; covered with buds and flowers, ready for Easter trade, well shaped, round as an apple; in all sizes, 6-7-8 in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00.

Simon Mardner, double pink, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; De Schryveriana, double variegated, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Vervaneana, a well known double variegated variety, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Apollo, best red, $1.00 to $1.25; Niobe, double white, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Deutsche Perle, double white, 75c; a few good mixed varieties, such as Empress of India, Helena Thielmann and others, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50.

If we are out of the size and color ordered, we shall ship next size and color.

In connection with Lilies and Azaleas, kindly try to buy a few other plants.

Spirea Gladstone.

What is a home, what is a store, what is a church, what is an Easter present, without having a few of the so much admired and so greatly in demand Spirea Gladstone, the pride of Holland? O, those charming sprays of beautiful pure white flowers! And the foliage, of such a beautiful wax deep green is a jewel in itself! Mixed with beautiful lilies and other blooming plants they will complete the flower decoration for your happy, joyful Easter home of 1912. Knowing the great demand for these plants during past Easters, when not half the customers could be supplied, we are well prepared this year for the rush, and were fortunate in spite of the scarcity last fall in Holland. When other florists' supplies were cut short by Holland growers we obtained enough of the bulbs to fill two houses with the choicest, and we are able to supply all incoming orders promptly. Price: 5½, 6 and 7 in. pots, full of buds and flowers, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or more, the same price. Some are as big as a small washtub.

Cineraria Hyb. Grandiflora.

Readers, please, just a minute. I wish to call your attention to one of our biggest houses filled with a big selection of that so much admired Easter novelty, the Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora, which will have no equal in the flower market for Easter, 1912. If you are not fortunate enough to see them growing at our establishment, then just imagine you were promoted to a mass of flowers in a garden in Eden, standing before a paradise, to a garden in various beautiful colors. This is the condition one of our Cineraria houses represents at Easter-time. Our new improved strain, planted in 6-in. pots, of medium tall sizes, are unsurpassed in the size and color of the flowers. The flowers are about twice the size of the old ordinary varieties, has big heads of flowers and good foliage; some of the plants are as big as a small apple basket. Price: 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 per plant; dozen or more, same price.

Shasta Daisies, pure white hardy daisies, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100.

Chinese Primroses, 5¼-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.

Azaleas, like a plant on fire
With blooms that fill the heart's desire.
Choice Primroses, with colors chaste;
Palms grown to suit the highest taste.
The Springtime jewels are my flowers,
Pictures of life that brighten ours,
None fairer, better, you can find,
I have the best of every kind.

Lilium Multiflorum.

We have Lilies this Easter (1912) to burn, to burn; they are crackerjacks, to beat the band, the best in the land, the best in the land, the best in the land.

Three houses in Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japan Easter Lily, better than ever before. Our own importation from our general grower in Japan, raised from 9-10-in. bulbs started in 6-in. pots last October; have kept cold. Good, perfect foliage from bottom up. Plants medium size and in all heights, from 5 to 10 buds to the plant, 10c per bud; plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud. Just right for Easter. We have the finest lilies this year in Philadelphia and all over the country, is the town talk from florists and agents daily visiting our place. "We have never seen anything like it," said two well-known growers one day, when visiting our place together. We have three houses full in 6-in. pots nicely staked up, medium height, and can supply all applications.

Our Hydrangea Otaksa can't be beat; full of buds; right for Easter trade; every branch nicely staked up, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 heads to the plant, 6-in. pots, 35c to 50c; 5 to 7-in. pots, 75c; $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Hyacinths of our own importation, four best colors: Gertrude, best pink; King of the Blues, best blue; Grand Maitre, light blue; La Grandesse, best white; 4-in. pots, now outside in cold frame, covered with leaves; two weeks will force them out into bloom; in bud or bloom, $12.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, 3 plants in a 9-in. pan, edging of Asparagus Plumosus, 60c per pan; 10-in. pans, trimmed with Asparagus also, 75c.

Asparagus Sprengeri, 2½-in., 3c; 4-in., 10c.

Asparagus Plumosus, 10,000 on hand, April, 1911, savings, big stock plants 4-in., 10c; 3-in., 10 to 12 in. high, $6.00 per 100; large 2½-in., suitable for edging bulb pans, $5.00 per 100.

Ficus Elastica or Rubber Plants, in fine condition, perfect leaves, 7-in. pots, specimen plants, 28 to 30 in. high, $1.00; 6 to 6½-in. pots, 25 to 28 in. high, 50c to 75c; 5¼ to 5½ in. pots, 25c, 30c to 35c.

Araucarias Our Specialty.

We are the largest importers of these lovely decorative plants, the Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta Compacta and Glauca, the choicest last spring (1911) importation, ready for immediate shipment. It is of no use to look elsewhere for cheaper prices. We now control and will control the market of the Araucarias in the future.

Look! Bargains in Araucaria Excelsa. Such low prices as are quoted below were never known in the history of Araucaria Excelsa. Just think! 5½-in. pots, 3-4 tiers, 16 to 18 in. high, 50c to 60c; 6 to 7 in. pots, 4-5-6 years old, 4-5-6-7 tiers, 25-30-35-40 in. in height, for only 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. These prices are record-breakers—money-makers for you.

Araucaria Excelsa, raised from top cuttings, no seedlings. Plants, 5½-6-7 in. pots, 15-18-20-25-30 in. high, 4-5-6 tiers, 2-3-4-5 years old, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. We give big value for your money. Just think! An elephant, 6-in. pot, 4 years old, 4-5-6 tiers, 20-25 in. high, for only 75c; a jumbo, 6-in. pot, 5 year old, 25 in. and over, as wide as a bushel basket, 5-6 tiers, for only $1.00; and what do you think! a holy terror, 30 to 40 in. and over, 5-6-7 tiers, worth $2.00, for only $1.25 to $1.50.

We also have the nicest Araucaria Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, 3 to 4 tiers, 18 to 24 in. high, 25 to 30 in. across, 6-in. pots, a house full, perfect jewels, for only $1.25 to $1.50, worth $1.75 to $2.00.

Von Sion Daffodils (double nosed), best double yellow Narcissus in cultivation, three bulbs planted in a 5½ to 6-in. pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Our New Improved Begonia Erfordii has no equal as a constant bloomer, winter and summer, in bloom now, 5¼-in., 25c; 5½-in., 30 to 35c; 4-in., 20c.

Murillo, Tournesole and Red Tulips in 9-in. pans, 7 to 9 bulbs in a pan, Asparagus around, 60c; 10-in., 75c.

Tulips, Tournesole, double, red and yellow variegated, and Murillo, beautifully shaded rose pink, three bulbs in one pot (4-in.), $15.00 per 100 pots; $1.80 per dozen.

Ipomea Noctiflorum, our so well-known pure white, waxy Moonvine, bearing flowers very fragrant and as big as a saucer, 2½-in. pots; will make good stock for you to propagate from; $5.00 per 100.

Latania Borbonica (Chinese Fan Palms), 30 to 35 in. high, 6 to 7 in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; made up of 3 6-in. pots, 25 to 30 in. high, 50c to 60c.

Areca Lutescens, 3 plants in a 4-in. pot, 20c to 25c; 5¼-in., 3 plants in a pot, 30c.

Aspidium Tussimensense, large 2½-in., suitable for edging bulb pans, $5.00 per 100.

Cocos Palms, Cocos Weddelliana, large 3-in. pots, 15c, 20c to 25c.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 6-in. pots, 25, 30, 35, 40-45 in. high, 4, 5, 6 years old, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Kentia Belmoreana, single plants, 5½-6-7 in. pots, 5-6-7 years old, 25-30-35-40 in. high, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 25 to 30 in. high, made up of 3 plants, 6 to 7 in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; 4-in. 20 in. high, 20c to 25c.

Our Ferns this year are exceptionally very fine. Boston, Scottii, Whitmani and Scholzei, 5½ and 6 in., 35c, 40 and 50c, 7-in., large, bushy plants, 75c to $1.00. As big as a bushel basket, $1.00 to $1.25. 8-in., as big as a washtub, only $1.50, worth $2.00 to $3.00. Remember, all our Ferns are pot-grown, not lifted from benches.

Neph. Giatrasii, a new beautiful fern, an improvement on Scottii, much shorter and bushier than Scottii, 5½ in. pots, 50c; 3-in. pots, 20c; 4-in., 125c.

Ferns for Dishes, big assortment, 2½-in. pots, at $4.00 per 100.

Can You Grow Just as Good Cucumbers in Your House in the Fall and Winter Months as in the Spring?

SOME say they can't. This house is owned by a grower at Milford, Mass., who can. He also averages eight and nine struts of heavy fruited tomatoes to every vine. He recently told us two reasons that he thought were largely responsible for his business success. Don't you want to know what they are?

Write us and we will gladly give you full particulars.

THE APHINE MANUFACTURING CO.,
Madison, N. J.:

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of January 27th, will say that we have been using FUNGINE on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the APHINE for lice on lettuce, instead of — (a nicotine preparation) and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots. If so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this FUNGINE as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.

Yours very truly,

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Sweet Peas.

A sowing of sweet peas made in pots during the late March which can be transplanted outside as soon as all danger from late frosts is passed will give a crop of these flowers two or three weeks earlier than the seed sown in the ground. There is generally a time in late June and early July that the sweet peas in the greenhouses come very poor, owing to the excessive heat under glass and the infection of red spider and the early sowings outside are not yet in flower. Five or six seeds sown in a 3-inch pot and these placed on the sill or window ledge or on a hanging shelf will make nice stock for planting out after the middle of April and the advantage of those started in the greenhouse over the ones sown in the cold ground will be quickly seen upon trial. They can be grown so that they will take but little valuable room under glass and the extra expense of this and the labor in transplanting them will be more than recompensed by having fine flowers at a time when most of the stock is in poor condition.

The plants that are growing inside will require considerable attention as the sun increases in power, the growth is very rapid and the vines must be kept erect or crooked flower stems will be the result. They should be gone over every day, and where the growing shoots are getting away from the supports they should be fastened to them.

Cyclamens.

The plants of cyclamen grown from seed sown last fall will now be nice, stocky little plants if properly grown and should be large enough to transplant to 2½ or 3-inch pots. The soil should be live fibrous loam with about one-third leaf mold and in mixing a liberal sprinkling of sand should be included. In potting, the small bulb should be so placed that the soil just covers it, many leave the bulb out of the soil, but best results are obtained with the young stock to leave the bulb in the soil. Later after the bulb has grown large and mature, this is not so necessary. The plants should be placed in a cool house and if possible near the glass and where they can have all the ventilation possible. Just as soon as safe they should be removed to frames outside and plunged in the soil even with the rim of the pot. The cyclamen will not tolerate poor drainage and if anything happens to block the drainage the plant quickly sickens. This sometimes happens where the pots are sunk in the soil and is often caused by angle worms. Where these are seen and the appearance of lumps on the top of the soil denotes their presence, they should be removed at once. In the final potting, be sure and place plenty of crocks in the bottom of the pot.

Bedding Plants.

The plants for bedding out in the spring will take not only much of the plantsman's time, but will keep demanding more room, for the growth from now on will be rapid and unless constantly watched and cared for the plants will quickly get crowded and much of the stock injured. Where there is much Easter stock grown the disposal of that will give the much desired space in two or three weeks, but in other places it may be necessary to discard some of the carnation plants which may be thrown out, for from now on there is an over supply of these flowers with nearly all growers. The final shift of the geraniums in the northern section of the country may be delayed until the first of April, but the plants should not be allowed to get badly potbound, and they should be given plenty of growing room. The propagating bed should be full of cuttings of the more rapid growing plants and the seedlings will have to be potted as soon as of proper size. The cannas and other bulbs that have been started should be potted and given good location for growing on. Now is the time to take account of stock and see of what kinds there is going to be a shortage and of what there will probably be an over supply and obtain the first and dispose of the second. This is the time to buy, for the stocks are large and shipments can be guaranteed and the prices are low compared to what they will be a month hence. The amount of stock that annually goes to waste is large and a little foresight will prevent much of it. Every summer some growers throw away thousands of plants that have cost much in labor and should have made returns. Auction sales in some sections are the means of disposing of much of this stock, but this is generally at low prices. This stock can most all of it be disposed of by a little judicious advertising and letting the other fellows know where it can be obtained. An attendant at any plant sale in early spring will find many growers looking for all kinds of stock. It is often quite difficult to know just how much of each kind of bedding stock is wanted, but as soon as an oversupply is noted let the other growers know where they can obtain it, and place a price on it that will guarantee a sale. It is much better to move it at some price than to throw it away. The wide-awake, up-to-date growers clean up their stock every year.

Rambler Roses.

The plants of rambler roses that are intended for Easter blooming should now be showing color and if they are not, they will require quite a little forcing to have them in the best of condition for that date. If the plants are at all potbound, watering with liquid manure will be of great assistance to them and stimulate the flowers and make them much larger and an addition of soot to this will intensify the color. The plants will often when setting the buds make long growths from the base of the plants, these should be cut out, for they are taking much strength that should go into the flowers. These canes can be made into cuttings and propagated and will make small plants for next year's growing or can be planted outside and grown on for stock for the future.

There is always a good demand for well-grown pot ramblers for Decoration day and early June and plants started now will be in the best of condition at that time. They can be started in a cool house and frequently syringed until the eyes break, when they can be moved into warmer quarters and full sunlight. For June decoration there is nothing better in blooming plants than Crimson Rambler and the other rambler roses and hydrangeas; they make a beautiful combination and are also very decorative for porches.

Salvias.

There are few more popular plants for bedding purposes than the salvia and when properly grown they are a great ornament to a garden either as bed by themselves or as an edging for cannas or other tall plants, the dwarf varieties being especially adapted for this purpose. To make a showing in mid-summer the plants should be started early either by cuttings or seeds so that the plants at this time should be large enough for a 3-inch pot and should have been pinched back at least once and beginning to branch. These can be potted into 4-inch pots in April and will be showing bud by the time for planting them outside in June.

Such plants of course cannot be sold as cheaply as the late sown seedlings that are grown closely together, and allowed to run up to a single stem, but it will not take so many of the former plants to fill the same space and the bed will be in flower through the summer and fall while with the latter too often there is no bloom until just before frost, and when the first frosts are early the plants are not in bloom but a few weeks. The early plants are much more satisfactory to the customer and will cost but little more owing to the larger space which they will cover during the season.

What State Colleges Are Doing.

Paper read by Joseph Heacock before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia.

I enjoyed "Farmers' Week" at State College, Pa. (December 27 to January 3, 1912) so much that I wrote President Thilow that if your essay committee thought well of it I would be glad to tell the Florists' Club about it. I now realize that in so doing I bit off more than I can chew. I have not been able, with the time I have had at my disposal, to write up the matter as I should like to have done.

We arrived at State College about 8 o'clock in the morning, and after getting rooms at one of the fraternity houses, and registering at the college, compared with that of Pennsylvania. I subjoin a few figures:

	Receives.	Amt. per capita.
1 California	$2,729,553.35	$1.14
2 Wisconsin	1,664,854.53	.71
3 New York	1,643,792.25	.18
4 Illinois	1,443,792.06	.23
5 Minnesota	1,429,424.00	.68
6 Ohio	932,424.00	.19
7 Massachusetts.	883,528.74	.26

One is apt to think of the State College only as an agricultural, but such is not the fact. There is the School of Agriculture, School of Engineering, School of Liberal Arts, School of Mines, School of Natural Sciences, Department of Home Economics, Department of Physical Education, and the Institute of Animal Nutrition. There are 1,761 students registered at the college of which 783 were in the School of Agriculture and the Experiment Station.

There were about 800 farmers registered for Farmers' Week, a number of them being women. The mornings were divided into two periods, 8:30 to 10 and 10:15 to 11:45. The after-were ready to hear the greeting of the dean, Thomas F. Hunt. He told us how little the great state of Pennsylvania had done for her college in comparison with what the other states had done for theirs, and what the revenue from the land grant of the national government to the various states was noon into two periods, 2 to 3:30 and 3:45 to 5:15, and the evenings into one commencing at 8 o'clock. During these periods there were from two to six lectures being delivered at one time. There was a printed programme and you could take your choice, whether it was lime sulphur as a summer spray or commercial fattening of poultry, pork production or control of orchard enemies. With one thing I was particularly impressed. It was announced in the opening address that all lectures would be given on time. We found it so. Many of the buildings were a considerable distance apart and while there were 15 minutes between periods there was a hurrying time to get from one lecture to another, and if not on time to find that the lecturer had begun. I could not help but compare it with the lack of promptness shown in our meetings of the S. A. F. Most of the counties of the state were represented by farmers in attendance, and to show how it was appreciated by keen business men I mention that the Frick Coke Co. had three of their farm managers there learning of better methods of managing their farms.

The subjects were of great variety and embraced such subjects as Soil Analysis, Organic Matter, Beautifying the Home Grounds, Computing Dairy Rations, Hatching and Raising Chicks, Manures and Their Economic Uses, Energy Value of Feeds, Draft of Farm Machinery, Modern Household Appliances, Drainage, Tuberculosis, Advance in Asparagus Culture, Making Farm Poultry More Profitable, Alfalfa, Some Rural Life Problems, Garden Irrigation, Dairy Barn Construction, Apple Culture in Pennsylvania, Music for the Farm Home, Peach Culture, Harness and Saddle Horses, Meadows and Pastures, Potatoes and Potato Diseases, and many others. It was only possible to hear but a part of them and one had to take his choice. Many of the lectures were repeated so that if one did not get them at one period there was a chance to get them later. For one whole week they were being delivered and it was remarkable the interest shown in them and the attendance.

The cost of attending is but light, as $25 will pay all expenses for the week's outing. The information gained is invaluable and the rest and change from one's labors is of great benefit. It is an old saying, "It is well to get out of sight of the smoke of your own chimney." It is also well to have a change from such steady work as running a florist business.

So well was I pleased with the Farmers' Week at State College that during the last month I took in Farmers' Week at Cornell University, where 1,800 of New York's most intelligent farmers came to get new ideas of their business and went home better and wiser men and women. The man who today does not keep up with the procession of eager and active minds that are engaged in getting a living from the soil will soon be left out of the race.

BANGOR, ME.—Fred Morrill has purchased the cut flower business from Mrs. John Morrill, the latter retaining the pot plant business.

MACON, GA.—D. C. Horgan, of the Idle Hour Nurseries, is very busy, his business this season running 40 per cent higher than all previous records.

HARTFORD, CONN.—John Coombs has leased the store at 752 Main street and will move from the location he has occupied for 13 years. The new store will be opened for the Easter sales in conjunction with the old store, and then closed and renovated so that it may be occupied by April 30, when the lease of the old store expires.

The Newer Zonal Pelargoniums.

Although not cultivated to the same extent as they were some few years since, the zonal pelargoniums comprise some of the most showy of the winter-flowering plants available for cultivation in the warm greenhouse. The ease with which they can be cultivated and the length of time they will, under tion of the zonal pelargoniums than any other.

In the country, where the atmosphere is clear, and fogs are not prevalent, states a correspondent in the Gardeners' Magazine, they produce a bright display in the conservatory, and if this is a light structure and provided with a heating apparatus which careful treatment, remain in bloom, marks them at once as the most useful subjects for making a display in the houses. They are not so useful for the supply of cut flowers as some other subjects, the winter-flowering carnations, for example, but where a very bright display of color is required for a limited time only, they are of much value. In brightness of color, some of the varieties far surpass the carnations, which, it may be observed, have done more to reduce the cultivation of a little roof ventilation practically every day, they may be regarded as one of the permanent inmates for the winter, but where fogs are prevalent, and the atmosphere of the district more or less humid, it is not wise to place too great a dependence on them, as they might fail and thereby prove disappointing.

For a number of years H. Cannell & Sons have taken the lead in raising new zonal pelargoniums, and the sets they introduced some few years ago under the names of ships, mansions and towns have not, as a whole, been superseded. Since then, however, a few varieties of sterling merit have made their appearance, not the least prominent among these being three varieties raised by W. H. Page, of Hampton, and of these the finest is His Majesty, which may be described as one of the best crimson-scarlet zonals I have ever seen, its effectiveness being greatly enhanced by the white eye of the blooms. This variety is a good grower, and profuse in blooming, the flowers being produced throughout the winter. Fiscal Reform is another good variety, the flowers bright salmon-rose; they are not perhaps quite so large as those of the preceding variety, but they are most pleasing. Winter Cheer is very distinct, the flowers a bright cerise. It has the promise of becoming popular when better known.

Another novelty of much merit is the new orange-scarlet Maxim Kralesky. It is very striking, having more yellow in its flowers than any of the zonals I know. Prince of Wales is a very large-flowered variety, bright magenta, with a splash of scarlet in the top petals. Scarlet King, as its name denotes, is a very bright scarlet, and the plant has a good bushy habit, and is very free in flowering.

Rider Haggard is a form of flower much in the way of Sir T. Hanbury, the two colors in the top and lower petals being, if anything, more decided, and the flowers more effective.

Salmon Paul Crampel is a sport from Paul Crampel, and is an exact counterpart of its parent, except that it has rosy-salmon flowers. Another good new salmon zonal is Mrs. J. Ward, which has probably larger flowers than those of the variety immediately preceding.

In addition to the foregoing new varieties, the following is a list of the older zonals that may be thoroughly relied upon to produce a continuous display of flowers during the winter months, and, as the present month is the best time to root cuttings for an autumn display, it may help those who contemplate making a selection for next winter.

Salmon.—Ascott, Mrs. George Cadbury and Ian McLaren.

Blush.—Mauretiana, Cevic and Lady Roscoe.

White.—Snowstorm, Venus and Goodwood.

Pink and rose.—Hatfield, Caronia, Sydney and Mrs. Brown Potter.

Purple.—Frogmore, Lusitania and Royal Purple.

Orange.—Prince of Orange, Clevedon and Donald Beaton.

Crimson.—Leonus, Maris, St. Louise, Sir Thomas Hanbury and Aldenham.

Scarlet.—Naples, New York, Chatsworth and Lord Kitchener.

All the above are singles, and for the supply of cut flowers, the following semi-doubles are useful: F. V. Raspail, Improved Hermoine, King of Denmark, Lave, Pink Raspail and Fire Dragon.

Save Black Walnut Columns.

Four massive columns of black walnut twenty feet high and three feet in diameter, at Booneville, Mo., will not be sold with the rest of the structure when the old Cooper County courthouse is disposed of to wreckers today. Instead, the columns will be left to go into the new building. The courthouse is the oldest in Missouri. It was built in 1838.

Bridesmaid's or Matron of Honor Bouquet

While the bride's bouquet is the most important floral feature of the wedding ceremony, yet the bouquets for the bridesmaids and matron of honor should, and do, likewise receive the proper amount of attention, but they should always be less elaborate than those carried by the bride, and of different flowers and generally of different construction. If the bride carries orchids or lily of the valley, the others will have roses of a color to match the gowns, and if the bride has a bouquet of white roses the bridesmaids will carry bunches of pink roses, chrysanthemums or sweet peas according to the season. The round bouquet, which we illustrate, is one arranged by George M. Geraghty of Dunlop's, Toronto, Ont., Can., and was composed of sweet peas and adiantum in a chiffon holder with long bows and ends. The illustration shows how beautifully and yet simply these can be arranged and how effective they can be made.

Wedding Decoration.

THE INDIAN PAGODA.

A fair sized ball room may be beautifully arranged with the pagoda effects. Have two large circular wire frames made to resemble a flat plate. The top one should be the larger and be about 36 inches across, the other about 27 inches across; then for the third, use a wire frame forming a dome effect. Attach these to each other with stout rope or wire. Starting with the foundation, the frame should be well covered with a good quality of white silk to give it a good working surface. Sew pale pink, full-bloom roses on the inside and outside of the flat frames, using their foliage in between where necessary, using the smallest buds with their foliage to fall over the edge in a graceful manner. Make the second frame the same. For the dome effect cover this with lily of the valley placed upon it in an artistic way—a sort of loose cover arrangement. The white silk inside of the dome will not require any flowers but from its center suspend a large bunch of lily of the valley, allowing some to fall in a showier effect from the bunch. There should be three of these pagodas in the room. To enhance its effectiveness tiny electric lights can be arranged to advantage under each frame. The rope should be covered with satin ribbon, the shade of the palest pink rose used. Extend from each pagoda large, full streamers of asparagus.

To cut off the corners of the room, use the plate effect suspended with wide, pink sash ribbons attached to the wall above—about three streamers tied to the wall in a large rosette. On either side bank palms and ferns. However, the plate must be large enough and made to fit in at the corners. On the walls where ornamentation is necessary take white braided raffia and make it into triangular pockets. These should be about two yards across and one deep, the rough ends of raffia should be allowed to extend in uneven edge, and in these arrange a wall bouquet of pink tulips. A good plan is to have the pockets on either side of different shape. At the center of the raffia pockets have pink sash ribbon, tucking it in here and there in the center, allowing it to fall below the pockets in a large bow effect and at the end of each streamer tie a small bunch of lily of the valley. Construct garlands of asparagus between the pockets in which a bunch of pink tulips have been added where most effective. Green and palms should be used where tone effect is desired.

Where the bride is to receive a large plate effect can be used, made of pink roses or better still of lily of the valley. From the center, a bunch of orange blossoms can be artistically arranged. Bank at the back with palms. For the bridesmaids use raffia pockets filled with pink sweet peas suspended with streamers.

On the table use the dome effect, but standing bowl up on a tripod, made of lily of the valley. The outer body of the dome should be covered and then fill the dome with moss and in it arrange loosely a mass of pink sweet peas. Make a mat of maiden-hair for the tripod to stand on and scatter through this mat pink sweet peas. If a buffet arrangement is desired pink sash ribbon can be draped around the edge of table cloth and a shower of sweet peas arranged at each corner.

For the bridal bouquet one white orchid of good size surrounded with white sweet peas, using the sweet pea foliage, can be artistically effective.

"The Plums of New York."

"The Plums of New York," by U. P. Hedrick, horticulturist at the New York Agricultural Experiment Station, Geneva, is another important contribution to the pomological literature of the United States and North America. "The Grapes of New York," by the same author, appeared in 1908, and "The Plums of New York" has apparently much exceeded the other, in bibliographical research. This work might well be called "The Plums of The World," because it seems to us the whole range of any known varieties of plums at any period in the history of the world, wherever accessible records have been kept, has been investigated. The main purpose of the work, however, is the study of the adaptability of the numerous forms of plums to New York state, and their improvement. This volume is about the same size as the one on "The Grapes of New York." It is divided into four chapters. The first chapter is on "Edible Plums"; the second on "Plum Culture"; the third on "Leading Varieties of Plums," and the fourth on "Minor Varieties of Plums."

There are 89 excellent colored illustrations of standard varieties, and 18 illustrations of flowers and bark of species. In the chapter on standard varieties 217 are described or referred to. In some cases, as, for example, in the variety Myrobalan, which he refers to a group name, he includes under it all the forms of the cerasifera group. In the chapter on minor varieties the extraordinary number of 1737 are described, or noted more or less. This includes all varieties that have had any standing or notice in pomological literature, and, of course, many of these are now discarded or superseded. The bibliographical research that this entailed can be readily observed.

In the chapters on edible plums Prof. Hedrick gives a conspectus and key to 24 known wild species. Recent investigation in this country, however, have brought several new species to scientific recognition, and it is likely that more new species of wild plums will be discovered in the near future. The regions in different parts of Texas are believed to contain a number of species of unknown plums. Part 3 of Volume 2 of "Trees and Shrubs New Or Little Known," by C. S. Sargent, recently issued, contains descriptions of six new species of American plums, not included in Prof. Hedrick's conspectus. The author states that the standard and popular varieties of plums, of the present time, or any time, are forms or descendants of Prunus domestica, and he believes that only one species is involved. A number of the old botanists were inclined to believe that more than one species was included in the plums we know as domestic varieties. If only one type of specific character is impressed on the numerous progeny of domestic plums it is indeed remarkable, because the range of variability is extraordinary. We think, however, that Prof. Hedrick is right in his conclusions. He believes with Koch, that the original home of Prunus domestica is probably east of the Caucasus mountains and the Caspian sea. In the work he places about 1,500 varieties under Prunus domestica and di-forms the genus showed was for many years ascribed to variation or hybridity, but during the past 12 years it has been conclusively shown that they are distinct and true species.

The work of domesticating the wild species of American plums was begun about the middle of last century, and whilst several hundred varieties of American plums have been named; and many of them differing slightly, and only a few of them are meritorious; when it is considered that the

to this one species that if careful selection in seedlings was maintained for a series of generations, together with hybridization, excellent results could be obtained.

We are much interested in the description of Prunus Munsoniana in this volume. About nineteen years since we received two ornamental plums under the name of Prunus angustifolia from the Spath nursery, Berlin, Germany. It did not seem to agree with the true P. angustifolia of Marshall, and, moreover, P. angustifolia is not hardy in Western New York, unless coddled with special protection. In August of last year W. F. Wright, botanist of the United States Department of Agriculture, made some collections of plums with the writer at Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Wright has been making an investigation of the species of the plum section, of the genus Prunus for some years, and may publish a monograph on the subject in the near future. He collected specimens of the P. angustifolia in question. In a letter shortly afterward to the writer, he named this plum P. Munsoniana. It is a new species jointly named by Wright and Hedrick, and is separate from P. angustifolia, but much hardier, and its native range is said to be variously from Tennessee to Northern Texas. There is a most remarkable variation in the foliage of this species, between the leaves of the vegetative and fertile shoots. This is partly noticeable in the leaves of all woody species of plants, but the difference in this plum species is markedly so. The so-called Wild Goose varieties of plums Prof. Hedrick places under this species, and he credits about sixty varieties to its parentage, and says a number of them are meritorious.

The purport of this work is, of course, pomological, but we wish that Prof. Hedrick could have gone out of the way somewhat, and called attention to the highly aesthetic value of many of the wild species of American plums in ornamental plantations in private and public parks and gardens. Their showy flowers in spring, and their general characters in leafage and branching, render them excellent subvides them into six groups, as follows: Reine Claude, Prune, Perdrigon, Yellow Egg, Imperatrice, and Lombard.

The Bullace and Damson plums, which are varieties of Prunus insititia, he places second in importance to the domestica varieties, and states that this species has the oldest recorded history of any plum or group of plums. It is mentioned by Theophrastus 300 years before Christ. Prof. Hedrick says that whilst the Bullace and Damson plums were not kept separate specifically in the minds of growers from the domestica varieties, but were simply all regarded as European plums, the Bullace and Damson plums were no doubt the first kinds introduced to this country.

In his treatment of Prunus hortulana he regards it as a specific group, and differs from Bailey and Waugh who regard it as a "brood of natural hybrids" divided into four or more natural groups, and the result of hybridization between Prunus Americana and P. angustifolia. Prof. Hedrick states that since investigations were conducted by Bailey and Waugh, the specific identity of P. hortulana, and its geographical range has been widely placed through the middle west, and all of the hortulana hybrid forms, instead of as formerly alleged, "constitute a group so distinct from any other species that it is impossible to place them otherwise than in a distinct species." We agree with Prof. Hedrick, as we have seen Prunus hortulana growing in the Arnold Arboretum for many years, and much progeny has been raised from it, and we understand that nothing has been adduced to show that it is not a good species. Moreover, there is a great tendency amongst horticultural and botanical observers, whenever a knotty problem presents itself in establishing botanical character, or relationships, to place the difficulty on hybridization. Take the hundreds of new species of Crataegus for example. The numerous

European plums have been for centuries in the process of amelioration, there is no doubt that the field is very promising for the evolution of a choice race of American plums. Prunus maritima, the Beach Plum, of the Atlantic seaboard, a common inhabitant of sandy soil from Massachusetts to Virginia, shows a tendency to remarkable variation inside the limits of the species. The writer has raised hundreds of seedlings of this species for ornamental purposes, and incidentally, has observed remarkable variations in the progeny, in the size, color, flavor, and length of time in the ripening of the fruit, and in the shrubby and arborescent characters of the plants. Some seedlings producing fruits of most excellent flavor, and well adapted for edible and culinary purposes. It therefore seems hopeful that in regard

"The Plums of New York" is a splendid contribution to the literature of American pomology. With the work he has accomplished so far, Prof. Hedrick is entitled to a place in the front rank of pomologists in America and the world.

Cinerarias for Summer Blooming.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you kindly inform me if Cineraria grandiflora and C. stellata can be bloomed in summer? When should the seeds be sown to have them in bloom in July and August? V. C.

It is doubtful if the cineraria grown by florists, which was evolved from C. cruenta, could be successfully bloomed during July and August, for the plants require a very cool treatment with plenty of ventilation during their flowering period. Seeds sown in March and April will bloom in September and later, and seeds sown in August will bloom in early spring.

Shade for Greenhouses.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

We desire to shade a house containing palms and ferns from April to November, and we do not like lime or whitewash. What is the best medium to use and how is it mixed and put on?

SUBSCRIBER.

A shade that is used by many growers is a mixture of kerosene and whitening. This can be made of any consistency required, and where the shade is to remain on from April to November a small amount of linseed oil can be mixed with it, a two-inch pot full of oil to 10 gallons will keep the whitening on the glass. If too much linseed oil is placed in the mixture it will be very difficult to remove it in the fall. This can be spread on the glass with a spray pump or to make it more even and a more finished job, painted on with a brush.

Chicago Spring Flower Show.

The beauties of nature vied with the artistic work of man at the spring flower show of the Horticultural Society of Chicago which opened in the Art Institute Tuesday, March 12, and continued through the week, closing Sunday, March 17. While the building is not in some ways an ideal one for the holding of such an exhibition, for the spaces which can be given to the staging of plants and flowers are small, which divides the show into many parts, yet the surroundings and beautiful architecture of the building are exceptionally fitting backgrounds for the several displays. Though the works of art which adorn the walls and the beautiful statues and pieces of sculpture are great attractions, yet during the show the splendid plants and lovely flowers were the attraction of the week, and the attendance on the opening evening was large and quite satisfactory.

Entering the building, directly in front of the door is the grand staircase and this was adorned by a large exhibit from the West Parks, which extended around the balcony on both sides. Palms, dracenas, ferns and other decorative plants were arranged on both sides, and intermingled with these were beautiful azaleas, cinerarias, genistas and bulbous flowers which gave the walk a beautiful setting. This was a very large exhibit and added a great deal to the magnificent display. On the balcony toward which the staircase tends was a grand display of lilies that were so arranged that they surely rivaled the glory of Solomon. The ceiling and staircase were draped with southern smilax, which completed the setting for the beautiful flowers. Behind this beautiful showing of flowers was located the Goldsmith band and orchestra, and throughout the afternoon and evening the patrons sat and enjoyed the beautiful products of nature and the strains of music.

In the east room at the head of the stairs was a grand display of blooming and decorative plants from Vaughan's Seed Store. At the farther end was a large display of rambler roses that was beautifully grouped along the entire width of the room. This included all the best varieties of these popular spring blooming plants and many of the novelties. Crimson Ramblers were finely finished and splendid specimens of Tausendschon, Newport Fairy, Dorothy Perkins, Baby Rambler, Wartburg, Hiawatha, Phyllis, Jessie, White Dorothy Perkins and a large plant of Vielchenblau, the renowned blue rose, occupied a prominent place in this room. A case containing tiny ramblers in the smallest of pots, each bearing a cluster of blooms, attracted considerable attention. Other beautiful plants shown in this room by the same exhibitor were splendid rhododendrons, wall flowers, large specimens of Cineraria stellata of beautiful colors, a strain of Primula oboconica with extra large flowers borne on strong erect spikes and well-bloomed plants of the new Primula malacoides. In this room was also the exhibit of orchids from Charles Bond of Naperville, which contained extra large and highly colored blooms of Cattleya Trianae and C. Schroederiae of the finest varieties.

At the other end of the building was a large collection of splendidly grown plants exhibited by Frank Oechlin, which contained azaleas, rhododendrons, hydrangeas, genistas, marguerites, cyclamen, prunus, backed with specimen palms, dracenas and cibtiums and intermingled with the flowering plants were asparagus, ferns and other decorative plants. This exhibitor also displayed elegant pans of tulips, hyacinths and narcissi which were the recipients of many prizes, and he was the winner in the class for Primula obconica with finely grown plants bearing large spikes of bloom of the English colors and also for well-grown cyclamen. Other exhibitors of bulbous stock were August Juergens, who showed nicely grown pans of tulips, hyacinths and narcissi and large pans of lily of the valley and well grown Lilium Giganteum. Fritz Bahr was a large exhibitor of bulbous flowers, hyacinths and narcissi of extra fine culture, and well grown plants of ericas and acacia. H. N. Bruns was the winner of the prize for lily of the valley in pans with splendidly grown stock.

An exhibit that attracted considerable attention was a display of exceptionally well grown amaryllis by E. G. Uihlein. These beautiful flowers of so many bright shades, with their spike of large, magnificent color, are seldom excelled at any exhibition. A case of orchids which contained many rare specimens was filled by this exhibitor. John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., exhibited a number of plants of Richardia Elliottiana, the yellow calla, which were greatly admired. The golden yellow blooms were especially set off by the beautiful foliage. A vase of the same flowers was shown by John Reardon of the Iowa State College, Ames, Ia.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., made an exhibit of the newer nephrolepis, which contained some very fine specimens of these decorative ferns. R. J. Southern, Highland Park, showed splendid plants of cyclamen that were well flowered. John J. Wolniewicz had a group of begonia of different varieties that were well grown and a lemon tree bearing extra large fruit.

The cut flowers were not displayed the opening day, but an exhibit around which was always gathered an interested group was the table upon which were arranged the display of pansies and sweet peas shown by William Sim of Cliftondale, Mass. This grower has gained renown in his culture of these flowers and seldom have better blooms of these favorites ever been staged than those shown at this exhibition, and they fully deserved all the attention which they received. A display of roses made by the Metairie Ridge Nurseries Co., New Orleans, plainly showed that the statement so often made that roses could not be grown in the south was a fallacy. The flowers were splendid specimens of large size and the stems and foliage compared favorably with the best grown in the north, and they made a most creditable showing after their long journey and were a credit to Harry Papworth, who brought them to show the northern growers what could be done in the warm and sunny clime.

In one of the side rooms H. J. Stockman has arranged two miniature gardens which plainly demonstrate how an estate may be laid out. They entail a great amount of labor and are very instructive to one planning a suburban home. During the evening, lectures illustrated by stereopticon views were delivered in Fullerton Hall, by W. N. Rudd and Prof. H. B. Dorner.

Wednesday was "Rose day" and in the east room was staged the large vases of magnificent blooms exhibited by Poehlmann Bros. Co., Wiator Bros., Peter Reinberg and Bassett & Washburn. The American Beauties shown by both Poehlmann Bros. Co. and Wiator Bros. were elegant but unfortunately the receptacles in which they were placed did not show them off to the best advantage. The former firm were the winners of the blue ribbon as they also were in the classes for Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Dark Pink Killarney, Double Pink Killarney, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Melody and Prince de Bulgarie. But though victorious in so many classes they were closely followed by the vases of splendid blooms exhibited by Wiator Bros. and Peter Reinberg, and the entire exhibit was a great credit to the growers of this section. Bassett & Washburn made a very fine display of smaller vases of roses that were greatly admired. E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., exhibited a vase of Sunburst.

The retailers were on hand with very artistic arrangements. The E. Wienhoeber Floral Co. showed a table decoration of spring flowers and a basket of roses. John Mangel arranged two very beautiful baskets of roses and the Bohannon Floral Co. showed a large vase of White Killarney roses that were well arranged.

The management are to be congratulated upon the fine exhibition of plants and flowers which they have succeeded in getting together for the inspection of the people of Chicago and for the admirable arrangement and fitting decorations.

New York and New Jersey Plant Growers.

The annual spring inspection tour of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association took place Thursday, March 7, the party being in charge of President Frederick Marquardt, Treasurer H. C. Steinhoff and A. L. Miller was master of ceremonies. In the party were Oscar Boehler, Hoboken, N. J.; —Lehnig of Lehnig & Winnifield, Hackensack, N. J.; J. H. Fiesser, H. Palmer, H. Schmidt, Henry Baumann, Hoboken, N. J.; Heber J. Ware of Maltus & Ware, George Scott, Flatbush; Gerard Dreyer, Elmhurst; H. Schoelzel, New Durham, N. J.; C. W. Scott, Whitestone, L. I.; Peter Wagner, Flatbush, L. I.; Anton Schultheis, Jr., College Point, L. I.; J. A. Shaw, J. H. Sperry and John Young. The party assembled at Gerard Dreyer's at 9 a. m., which was the first place on the list to be inspected, and then were taken in automobiles to the other establishments. At Dreyer's all the stock was in excellent shape, the place being devoted to lilies, hydrangeas, bougainvilleas, marguerites, azaleas, genistas, spireas, palms and three houses of ferns, the varieties of ferns most in evidence being Scottii, Giatrasi and Dreyerii.

Pankok & Schumacher as usual have a big line of all Easter stock. The ramblers, azaleas, hydrangeas, camellias and lilies being especially good. Mr. Schumacher is in Europe at present for the benefit of his health.

The Hinode Co. never have been in better shape than they are at present and in addition to the general line of lilies and Easter stock they have several specimen wistarias and other novelties. At this stop Mr. Scott acted as host and provided light refreshments and cigars.

At Louis Dupuy's everything was in keeping with the reputation of this place. All things were in first-class shape and preparations were being made for the largest Easter business in the history of the place. The oranges, heather, roses, hydrangeas, cyclamen were especially fine. Mr.

Dupuy could not join the party owing to the illness of Mrs. Dupuy who had a mild attack of la grippe. J. Harry Troy of the "Rosary" joined the party at this point and was delighted with the day's experience.

The plant of Anton Schultheis, College Point, L. I., is in the same general good condition as it always is. This was one of the largest places visited. More cut flowers are grown here for the wholesale market than at any of the other places, the specialties being cattleyas, gardenias and lily of the valley. There was house after house of the general line of Easter plants, all showing the result of careful cultivation.

John Meisem well deserves the name of the "Lily King," his place being practically devoted to lilies both in pots and planted out for cutting for the wholesale market, and the lilies here are very fine indeed. The stock cut here is consigned to Henshaw & Fenrich and Philip F. Kessler. Mr. Meisem could not join the party, and was somewhat downcast on account of the sudden illness of his son Charlie, but who is now much improved.

The next place visited was that of the president of the association, Frederick Marquardt, and to several of the visitors this place was a pleasant surprise. Mr. Marquardt is near the entrance to Lutheran cemetery and has a tremendous bedding plant business. Here is a most up to date attractive retail store presided over by Mrs. Marquardt and smiling Miss Marquardt, who took a snap shot picture of the group. In addition to carnations and bulbous stock grown here for home use there are houses after houses filled with bedding stock of all varieties, which is in the most excellent condition.

The party was here informed that H. Maenner, one of the members of the association, had been taken away that day to the hospital, having been taken suddenly very ill, being delirious at that time. The visitors were then entertained at dinner at Richard Neiderstein's Hotel, Middle Village, and everything furnished was all that could be desired. The tables were decorated with azaleas, ferns and vases of carnations and narcissus furnished by Mr. Marquardt.

The trip being resumed, A. L. Miller's place in Jamaica was the next stop. This establishment is a wonder in more ways than one. During the winter season several houses of carnations and lilies are grown, the cut being consigned to Traendly & Schenck. These are now being rapidly thrown out to make way for Easter stock. In addition to the greenhouse plant Mr. Miller has a most up to date nursery and prides himself on the great variety and specimen trees and shrubs that he has here. In frames are probably 50,000 pansies, and bedding stock of all varieties is here in profusion. There is house after house devoted to lilies, hydrangeas, heather, ramblers, oranges, Ponderosa lemons, spireas, genistas, rhododendrons, which it would be very hard to beat. George M. Stumpp was a visitor here selecting plants for Easter.

Peter Wagner, Flatbush, has two ranges—one devoted to palms and ferns and the other to blooming plants and lilies and the stock was all in very good condition.

John Scott's was next visited. This is the home of the Scottii fern. This establishment was never in better condition than at present and George Scott deserves great credit for making it so. This is a very extensive place and everything is done on a large scale. While a full line of palms, ferns, dracenas and Pandanus Veitchii are carried here, the whole place is now apparently devoted to Easter stock, which is in great variety and in magnificent condition. The one exception to Easter stock is the preparation that is being made for St. Patrick's day. Shamrocks are here by the thousands, probably 40,000 growing in all kinds and sizes of pots. One of the striking features was a bench devoted to shamrocks growing in clay pipes and each visitor was presented with one as a souvenir. Mr. Scott informed us that most of these were ordered and the call for shamrocks had far exceeded his expectations.

At Louis Schmutz's new place, formerly the Zellar greenhouses, everything was in good condition and as at the other places visited there was a full line of all blooming plants for Easter. Louis Schmutz, Jr., presides over this range and anticipates a very good Easter business. At the original Schmutz place the party met Louis Schmutz, Sr., but the hour was getting late and, as it was growing dark, not much could be seen, but as Mr. Schmutz can always "show you something" this time was no exception and he showed us the flats and apartments he owns and the site where the greenhouses stand with the sign attached, "These Lots for Sale." And it is only a question of a short space of time before they will be torn down and sold for the erection of fine residences.

At Alfred Zellar's the same general line of stock is grown, but it had grown so dark the stock here could not be seen at its best advantage. Mr. Zellar was unavoidably away, being confined to his home with a very bad cold, but he had thoughtfully provided cigars for the party, which A. L. Miller handed around as if they were his own.

Last but not least on the list was Frank Manker's. Here there is a fine conservatory and salesroom built on the boulevard with all modern improvements, with houses devoted to lilies, carnations and bulb stock grown for the cut flowers; also a general line of Easter stock. Mr. Manker is also a large owner of property and dwelling houses in this very fine section of Brooklyn and does not have to worry about coal strikes or "gluts" in the market. At several places visited some benches of very short lilies were seen. These are known to the members of the association as "Nana Compacta" and as Mr. Manker smilingly remarked, "Are just the thing for cemetery trade at Easter time, as they would not suffer from the wind so much if it should happen to blow a bit at that time."

It was a very enjoyable and instructive trip and the generous hospitality and good fellowship shown at all the places was much appreciated.

New York Florists' Club.

There was an attendance of over one hundred at the meeting Monday, March 11, which was "Rose and Orchid Night." Joseph A. Manda presided.

Charles B. Weathered, chairman of the dinner committee, reported that all arrangements had been made for the proper celebration of the club's twenty-fifth anniversary. Mr. Weathered also reported for the delegates who attended the conference for the organization or federation of New York State's florists' clubs, the meeting was held at Ithaca Friday, February 23. Secretary John Young read the minutes of that meeting, and the secretary was instructed to send the assessment of this club as provided in the constitution and by-laws adopted by the State Society. The dinner committee also announced that Patrick O'Mara would be toastmaster. I. S. Henderson, of the exhibition committee, announced that the April meeting would be "Sweet Pea" night and it was desired that there would be a good showing of spring plants at the same time. P. F. Kessler reported progress for the outing committee. The following were elected to membership: Peter Beuerlein, Elmhurst, Long Island; Oscar Boehler, Hoboken, N. J.; J. A. Valentine, Broadway, Denver, Colo.; F. W. Armitage, Elizabeth, N. J.; F. B. Abrams, Blue Point, N. Y.; Julius Chevalley, Blue Point, N. Y.; Wm. F.

Kasting, 383 Ellicott St., Buffalo, N. Y.; Wm. Nicholson, Jr., Framingham, Mass.; Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; Benjamin A. Snyder, 46 West 26th St.; New York City; Frederick Smith, 8th St., Woodside, L. I.; George Cotsonas, 127 West 28th St., New York City; William C. Otte, 4055 Boulevard, West Hoboken, N. J.; F. C. Scherer, New York Cut Flower Market, Coogan bldg., New York City; Max Richter, care Julius Rochrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.; Frank Witney, Fishkill, N. Y.; William Sefton, care Hitchings & Co., Elizabeth, N. J.; W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; Patrick Welch, 226 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass.; George H. Mustoe, Morristown, N. J.

The recommendation of the committee on awards that the rules governing the exhibits made in the club rooms, making the highest award the certificate of merit of the club was withdrawn. The legislative committee was directed to draw up a suggestive letter for the guidance of the members to send to their assemblyman to support the bill now pending in the assembly providing for an appropriation of $50,000.00 for greenhouses for experimental work in floriculture. Frank R. Pierson, Chas. B. Weathered and others agreed to go to Albany and personally appear in favor of the bill. Walter F. Sheridan, P. O'Mara and C. B. Weathered were appointed a committee to draw up suitable resolutions on the death of our late honorary member, W. Bayard Cutting. J. A. Shaw, Frank H. Traendly and James T. Scott were appointed a committee to prepare resolutions on the death of Mrs. Martin C. Ebele, and the secretary was instructed to convey to Robt. M. Schultz our best wishes and the hope that he would show a speedy recovery.

Wallace R. Pierson then read one of the most interesting and instructive papers that has ever been presented at our meetings, entitled "Roses." Mr. Pierson was accorded a standing vote of thanks, and several asked questions to which Mr. Pierson cheerfully replied.

Henri Beaulieu presented his complaint against the express companies regarding the difficulties he is having about the delivery of the seed bought by him in France, which was referred to the legislative committee with the suggestion that they make a report on the matter at the next meeting.

The club sent a telegram of congratulations to the Baltimore Florists' Club who were celebrating their 25th anniversary. A letter to the club was read from Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the S. A. F., asking the club to present some subject for discussion at the next convention.

The committee on awards made the following report:

Joseph A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; Plant Cattleya Schroederae Alba, certificate of merit. Charles G. Roebeling, Trenton, N. J. (James Goodier, gardener), collection of orchids, silver medal. A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Ct., vase Double White Killarney, scored 87 points; vase Killarney Queen, scored 88 points. Brant-Hentz Flower Co., Madison, N. J., White Rose Madison, vote of thanks. Duke's Farm, Somerville, N. J. (A. A. Macdonald, supt.), vase of American Beauties, cultural certificate. John Stephenson, Oak Lawn, Pa. (I. Geiger, grower), vase of Mrs. Jardine, cultural certificate. John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, L. I., plant Double Calla Elliottiana, honorable mention. Charles Barson, Ossining, vase Pink Carnation No. 3, vote of thanks. Charles Barson, Ossining, N. Y., vase Dark Pink Carnation No. 7, scored 85 points. Edward Towell, Roslyn, Pa., vase Richmond roses, cultural certificate. Edward Jenkins, Bellefontaine Gardens, Lenox, Mass., two plants Primula malacoides, certificate of merit. Julius Rochrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., Odontoglossum Edensii Oeseltoni Crisprim, certificate of merit. Y.

New York Notes.

C. C. Trepel, who conducts the plant and cut flower departments at Loeser's in Brooklyn and Bloomingdale's and Gimbel Bros., New York, has already placed large orders for plants for Easter. It is nothing unusual for Mr. Trepel to buy all the stock of a grower at this season of the year and no proposition is too large for him to tackle if suitable arrangements can be made. At present he takes out of the wholesale market two or three truck loads of cut flowers daily.

The unnamed new pink seedling rose which Charles H. Totty sends to Henshaw & Fenrich occasionally for exhibition is a beautiful rose, and as Mr. Totty is working up a fine stock of this variety it will be bought up quickly by those growers "who know" and have been fortunate enough to see it growing at Mr. Totty's greenhouses in Madison, N. J. This rose will be seen at the next meeting of the club Monday, March 11.

J. K. Allen is handling large quantities of moss pinks and sweet allyssum in pans, grown by Charles Hunt, Port Richmond, S. I., and will have regular shipments of flowering plants for Easter from the same grower.

The following scores were made on the bowling alleys March 8:

Chadwick	222	193	198	197	218
Scott	101	140	156	123	122
Shaw	87	99	122	123	102
Young	107	120	132	140	180
Nugent	135	131	145	122

Gilbert Ludwig.

Ten months ago Gilbert Ludwig, whose portrait is herewith presented, graduated from the academic department of the Pittsburg High School and became associated with the old firm of Gustave and J. W. Ludwig, Pittsburg, Pa. During that time he has assisted in the general business management and his interest has increased considerably, which would naturally follow, for the Ludwigs have for three generations been cut flower dealers.

Washington.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER.

Business continues fairly good. In addition to dinner and luncheon decorations, which are leading factors at this time, there has recently been much funeral work. Though the weather of the past week was not very cold, it was rather unfavorable to growers, there being but two clear days. On the night of March 9 a strong north wind ran the mercury down to near 20°, but the tenth was a clear day. American Beauty roses are not very plentiful and the wholesale price keeps well up to $7 per dozen. The quality of some of the "long stems" is very good. Orchids do not seem to be very plentiful, but they can always be secured from some market if the local supply falls. There is some excellent lily of the valley and lilacs on the market and there are other grades that are not so good. As a matter of course the good stock is quickly snapped up. Moral: It pays to grow good stock.

CLUB MEETING.

We will admit that some of our club meetings are rather prosy, but every little while the club "rises up to the emergency and caves in the emergency's head," as the lamented Artemus Ward used to remark. The meeting of March 5 was one of the record smashing events and is entitled to a red letter in the awards of the club. It had previously been announced as "carnation night" and in addition to many fine carnations there was a good sprinkling of roses and other fine stocks.

The officers nominated at the February meeting were all elected by the formality of the secretary casting one vote for each. They are David Grillbortzer, president; Otto Bauer, vice-president; O. A. C. Oehmler, secretary; W. F. Gude, treasurer.

Otto Bauer, vice-president, advises us that he was born in Baltimore, the city that has recently acquired considerable notoriety as the next meeting place of the Democratic national convention. Mr. Bauer has a brother who is a successful grower of Baltimore.

Professor Stewart of the plant bureau of the U. S. Department of Agriculture delivered a lecture on carnation breeding. Professor Norton of the same department spoke interestingly on asparagus for florists' use. A notable visitor at the meeting was President Vincent of the Society of American Florists, who made a stirring appeal in behalf of the society. Accompanying Mr. Vincent were James Hamilton and his representative, C. M. Wagner of Baltimore, both well known in the trade. Wallace Pierson of Cromwell, Conn., was another notable visitor. Mr. Pierson made an interesting talk. He is a man of ideas with the courage to express them.

One of his new ideas is that the president of the S. A. F. should be elected by the members mailing their ballots from their homes and not at conventions as now practiced. While at first sight this scheme may seem unique, the principle is sound. It would give every member an equal voice with every other member in the election of officers. At present there are worthy and intelligent members of the society who do not feel like spending two or three hundred dollars to attend a convention in a distant city merely to vote.

The flowers exhibited at the meeting were particularly fine and were greatly admired. W. E. McKissick, manager for a local wholesale firm, staged the following exhibits: Carnations—Gorgeous, magenta, and Benora, variegated, exhibited by Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.; Comfort, red, by S. M. Merwarth & Bros., Easton, Pa.; Wm. Eccles, by Scott Brothers, Elmsford, N.

Y.; Gloriosa, pink, by E. A. Stroud, Strafford, Pa.; Wodenthe, white, by Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; Princess Charming, Enchantress shade, by E. A. Stroud; Mrs. C. W. Ward, pink, by Dauphin Bros., Washington, D. C.; Enchantress and Gloriosa, by A. F. Faulkner, grower for Alex B. Garden, Washington; vase of seedlings, mixed colors, and White Seedling, 1909, from the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture; White Seedling No. 618, by Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y.

It has been erroneously stated in a contemporary that No. 618 was exhibited by A. F. Faulkner. George H. Cooke staged a fine exhibit of carnations, Alma Ward and Mrs. C. W. Ward; snapdragons, lupines and the Dark Pink Killarney roses. The rose exhibits were Killarney Queen and Double White Killarney, by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Golden

The Late Balthasar Stahl.

Gate and White Killarney, Gude Bros. Co., Washington; Cardinal, Washington Florists Co., Washington; Seedling amaryllis, Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

While all the exhibits were good, it is probable that Fisher's Gorgeous and Totty's Wodenthe attracted the most attention among the carnations. Pierson's Killarney Queen was notable among roses. Cooke's exhibit of lupines was novel and attractive because it is seldom that such good stock of these flowers are seen at a club exhibition. The yellow variety was particularly fine.

The flowers were left with the Gude Bros. Co. and by them sent the next day to the Franklin School, which is the headquarters of the Board of Education. They were there placed on exhibition for the benefit of the pupils of all the schools. Later W. F. Gude sent three hundred of their own Killarney roses to be distributed among the children. The local press has given liberal space to the whole matter and Mr. Gude's pet hobby, educating the people in the use of flowers, has received quite an uplift.

NOTES.

On March 5, the day of the club meeting, Adolphus Gude, W. F. Gude, Wallace Pierson and Geo. H. Cooke took an automobile trip and saw most of the glass in the district before they returned.

The orchids of C. W. Briggs of Mt. Pleasant, who started as a fancier, but is now selling stock, are attracting considerable attention.

Albert Schnell, manager of the Exchange, is handling a particularly fine quality of lily of the valley.

Jacob Mindes of Cottage Hill is sending in a particularly fine quality of lilac.

Violets are plentiful and cheap and the street peddlers have them.

OBITUARY.

Belthaser Stahl.

Belthaser Stahl, one of Philadelphia's oldest retail florists in point of service, died suddenly March 8 of uremia after only a few days' illness, aged 62 years.

Mr. Stahl opened business in partnership with his brother-in-law, M. La Roche, at 1319 Chestnut street, in 1876. After several years they moved to the corner of Thirteenth and Chestnut streets, where a large retail and wholesale business was carried on for sixteen years. A range of glass was erected at Collingdale, Delaware Co., which was a large source of supply. In 1896 the firm dissolved and Mr. Stahl opened his present store on Eleventh street above Chestnut, where he has built up a large business, which will be continued by his son, C. B. Stahl, as manager, who has been actively engaged with his father.

Mr. Stahl was a florist of the old school and a great worker. He was always to be found at the store and took great interest in meeting all his customers, seeing they were properly served. He was of a kindly disposition, popular with the trade and much liked by those with whom he came in personal contact.

He was buried on Tuesday, March 12. Quantities of the flowers he loved so well filled the room in which the body lay and many of the trade called to pay their last respects. He leaves a wife, three daughters and one son.

K.

Fred Miesel, Sr.

Fred Miesel, Sr., one of the older florists of Detroit, died Saturday night, March 9, 1912, at his late residence on Mock avenue, of heart failure. He had been ailing for the past few months and while his demise was sudden it was not altogether unlooked for. He was born in Germany in 1853 and came to this country in 1873. He has been in business for the past 37 years. He leaves a widow and eight children, two boys and six girls. The body was cremated Monday afternoon, several florists attending the funeral. He was a member of the Detroit Florists' Club, which sent a beautiful large wreath, and a card of sympathy to the bereaved family. Owing to Mr. Miesel's ill health the business was turned over to the two sons, Fred, Jr., and Robert, last fall. The whole family has the sincere sympathy of the local trade. J. F. S.

Joseph Heintz.

Joseph Heintz, one of the oldest business men of Jacksonville, Ill., died March 11. He was 74 years old and had been florist and nursery man there for forty-two years. He was wealthy and prominent in Masonic circles.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.—The Binghamton Seed Co. now owns and operates the Tulley greenhouses on Spring Forest avenue. The store has moved into new quarters at 135 Court street.

NEWPORT, R. I.—H. J. Hass has completed two Lord & Burnham houses; one, 36 x 100 feet, for the culture of carnations, and one 15 x 100 feet, for violets. The benches are of cement and iron construction.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 4.—Jerusalem cherries, the fruit of a small evergreen shrub (Solanum capsicastrum probably), used as a parlor decoration, were employed by Mrs. Ida Rose as a means for ending her life.

THE executive committee of the Society of American Florists is in session at the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, this week, President R. Vincent, Jr., Vice-President August F. Poehlmann, ex-President Geo. Asmus, Secretary John Young and Directors W. N. Rudd, Robert Craig, E. Allan Peirce, Harry A. Bunyard, C. H. Totty and John A. Evans, in attendance.

Personal.

Treasurer W. F. Kasting of the Society of American Florists is preparing for the spring rush of business by taking a brief vacation.

Robert Craig will celebrate his sixty-fifth birthday March 18.

W. A. Manda will again sail for Europe shortly.

American Gladiolus Society.

It is of utmost importance, if the work of the nomenclature committee and the committee in charge of the investigating of diseases of gladiolus at the trial grounds at Ithaca, are to be of any value to gladiolus culture that we all contribute towards this work by sending in our catalogues, samples of bulbs for trial, and specimens of diseased bulbs. In sending in varieties for trial, from three to five bulbs of each variety should be contributed and all packages should be sent by mail or express prepaid to Prof. A. C. Beal, Agricultural Dept., Cornell University, Ithaca, New York.
L. MERTON GAGE, Sec'y.

Society of American Florists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that H. W. Koerner, Station B, R. F. D. No. 6, Milwaukee, Wis., offers for registration the following gladioli. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from date.

RAISER'S DESCRIPTION.

American Wonder (Childsi X Gandavansis).—This gladioli has the exact shape, habit and size of America, except in color, which is a lavender. It has two little dashes of a little darker shade at the throat of the lower petals. The flower has good substance and good lasting quality. The growth is three feet high, strong, straight spike, with healthy green foliage; vigorous grower, free bloomer, with five to seven perfect open flowers at one time.

American Giant (Childsi X Groff's seedling).—A gladiolus of the giant flowering type, it will bear with high culture flowers seven inches across and with ordinary culture five inches, with five to seven perfect well open flowers at one time; very heavy and good substance with good lasting quality. It has a deep wine color with a few small dashes of brown at the throat of the lower petals. It grows three to five feet high with an extra heavy straight stem, dark green heavy foliage and free bloomer.

American Rose Society.

HARTFORD ROSE GARDENS.

The American Rose Society has received through President Farenwald a proposition from the head gardener of the city parks of Hartford, Conn., as follows:

"We are considering the feasibility of establishing, in connection with our rose garden here, a public trial or testing ground for hardy roses. The object would be to invite foreign and domestic growers to send new varieties for a test covering sufficient time to establish thoroughly the merits of the variety; at the conclusion of which the plants would be returned at the owner's expense, or if of sufficient merit, would be given a permanent place in the garden.

"The rose garden here has attained considerable prominence in this country and this, coupled with our climatic conditions, should make an ideal location for a test garden that could in time be made to assume national importance.

"If the American Rose Society would co-operate with us to the extent of judging the exhibits and making the awards, it would give the affair a wider scope and make its standing official.

"We are of the opinion that America needs an official trial ground and with the co-operation of the society, feel that the outcome of our efforts would be certain of success. If the matter were presented to your executive committee early and they should approve of it, we would have sufficient time to select some exhibits for spring planting."
ALEX. CUMMINGS, JR.

This proposition was laid before the executive committee and the idea was endorsed as a plan well worth supporting. There is such a garden in the city of Paris with thousands of varieties on exhibition in blooming time. Hartford has a climate well suited for the growth of roses. The guarantors of the prize awards for the exhibition held in Detroit, of whom there were thirty-four, paid up in full. Poehlmann Bros. Co. sent twice the amount requested and ex-President Elliott sent us four times as much as we asked; this sort of support speaks volumes for the solidity of the American Rose Society. The Ellwanger & Barry sweepstake prize has been sent to A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. The Alexander Montgomery cup for the best American rose originated during 1909-1910 was awarded and sent to Stockton & Howe of Princeton, N. J. The effort to do something to increase the interest of amateurs in the rose has met with some success. One gentleman sent in a check for $50.00, without any reservation to be used toward that end and four amateurs have bobbed up with an annual subscription, which we are very glad to have.

* Can anyone send me for record the name of roses originated in America since 1860? Is there any rose grower or plantsman having such record?

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

St. Louis.

LITTLE DEMAND.

The market is over supplied, all flowers are plentiful and there is but little demand. Funeral work is not plentiful and the call for flowers is injured considerably by the inclement weather. Violets, sweet peas and carnations do not move notwithstanding the low prices. Many American Beauty roses arrive bull headed and in poor shape. Lilies are very plentiful. Ferns are now quoted at $2.50 per 1,000 with probabilities of going higher.

NOTES.

After March 15 there will be no more funerals Sundays. This movement may perhaps cause a closing of the stores on Sundays among the retailers.

Will Osseck of the firm of Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., was all smiles Friday, and arrived at the store late. A fine bouncing girl was the new arrival.

J. J. Beneke has the Dunford store for sale, J. W. Dunford having gone to Sioux City with the J. C. Rennison Co.

A rose show will be held at C. A. Kuehn's Wholesale House after the club meeting and all visitors are invited.

Fred H. Weber was the recipient of congratulations. A little baby girl was born at his home.

Brenemann Floral Co. are building up a nice trade and are daily buyers at the market.

George Schrieber at C. A. Kuehn's has a new arrival at the house, it is a little girl.

MARKET IMPROVING SLOWLY.

There is a much better feeling throughout the market, for though there is plenty of all kinds of stock, yet the shipping trade has shown a decided improvement and the retailers of the city are buying more freely. The amount of stock received is, however, very large and the condition of the market is such that a stormy day which takes the transient trade off the street, puts a stop on the retailer and the trade at the wholesale market is immediately quieter and the stocks accumulate. But the lethargy which has been so noticeable for the last two weeks has given away to much brighter prospects which is reflected in the faces of all the dealers, and all are looking forward to Easter. Many orders for that great flower day have already been received and booked and promise is bright for a splendid trade. Roses are being received in larger quantities and some of the highest grade stock of the season can now be found on the growers' tables and at all the stores. American Beauty is in better supply with the exception of the longest stemmed grade, there being many more of the medium and short stemmed than there has been for a long time. Killarney and White Killarney are in splendid form, some superb stock being offered on long stems, with large, long, well colored buds. Richmond is in better supply but the shipments of this rose are not heavy. Melody is seen of magnificent quality and this is a most beautiful yellow rose when at its best, and it is proving a great favorite with the trade. Mrs. Aaron Ward is also of good quality and the copper yellow flowers never fail to attract attention. Carnations are in great supply and the stock is of the highest quality, some exceptionally fine flowers of all the standard varieties being shown. The fickleness of the market is shown by the way in which red carnations have been bought in the last two weeks. Last week there was but little demand and they accumulated quickly; this week they have had a good call and cleaned up well. Lilies are in good supply as are callas, but the demand is not large. Lily of the valley is of high quality and plentiful. Bulbous stock is in great supply, there being large quantities of tulips of all colors and narcissus of all kinds. There are some very fine blooms of Emperors and Bicolor to be had. Hyacinths are shown in all colors. Orchids are being received in little larger supply but the demand for these is about equal to the receipts. Violets are plentiful and are having a very good call, the best flowers selling readily. Sweet peas are of the best quality; some extra fine stock with long stems and large flowers to be had daily, and the retailers are displaying them to advantage in their windows. Antirrhinums of different colors of the finest quality are shown, and pansies, lupines, mignonette, calendulas and marguerites are the smaller flowers to be had in quantity. Greens are in good demand with ample supply, but hardy ferns are still quoted at good prices. The supply houses report a large demand for Easter and are busy filling orders; some large shipments being sent out.

NOTES.

Geo. A. Kuhl, of Pekin, who is at the Presbyterian hospital, this city, has been confined to bed for several weeks with a stomach trouble, the nature of which the doctors have not yet determined. Mrs. Kuhl is in attendance upon him and the patient's cheerfulness inspires the visitor with the belief that he will soon be out and about his duties again, as we are certain the couple's many friends here and elsewhere will be pleased to learn.

Otto Wittbold, superintendent of the Geo. Wittbold Co.'s establishment at Edgebrook, is receiving a large number of orders for lilies, azaleas, spiraeas, hydrangeas, rambler roses, lilacs, rhododendrons and other Easter blooming plants. The demand for bedding plants is also good and Mr. Anderson and his force of assistants are kept busy propagating enough stock to fill the many orders that are received.

Tim Matchen says that business at the Peter Reinberg store has picked up considerably the past week, especially the shipping trade which is now particularly good. Orders for rose plants and cuttings and carnation cuttings are coming in nicely, and two large ones, one for $737.00 and another for $497.00, were received this week.

Miss Gertrude Wallace, with the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, has returned from a most enjoyable visit with her friend, Miss Miller at Milwaukee, Wis. Miss Wallace now has charge of her firm's books and has also been provided with an assistant to assist her in managing these and the other office duties.

John Starrett arranged some very fine decorations at the Hotel La Salle this week when he decorated the Red room and the ball room with American Beauties and Killarney roses for the Taft Club, that entertained the president during his brief stay in this city.

Robert Newcomb, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, returned on March 11 from a successful western business trip and is now taking in the flower show at the Art Institute.

A. J. Stahelin of Redford, Mich., proprietor of the movable range of greenhouses built by the Geo. M. Garland Co., is in the city this week. We are not quite sure whether he has anything to do with Garland's new stunt or not, but we would not be surprised to hear of a new creation from him in the building line.

A. Henderson & Co. are delivering their Mrs. Aaron Ward, Double White Killarney, Killarney Queen, Sunburst and other new roses that they have orders booked for this week. A. Miller is planning on making a trip through the south and visiting his home in Texas, returning here some time in June.

Philip L. McKee, with the John C. Moninger Co., is now ably assisted in the advertising department by W. M. Rupp, a son of N. J. Rupp, a member of the concern. Mr. Rupp is a graduate from high school and has had some little experience in a school paper, all of which will come in handy in his new vocation.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. sold a large quantity of stock this week when they filled some very good orders for carnations, roses and other seasonable flowers. Mr. Vaughan is building up quite a large shipping trade and the order book shows that his customers are pretty well distributed throughout the west.

Bassett & Washburn are still receiving large quantities of fine Easter lilies and expect to be in full crop with roses for Easter. Mr. Washburn says that business has picked up considerably and that the market in general has shown a decided improvement.

Kyle & Foerster's fancy sweet peas are attracting the attention of the local buyers this week and fine long stemmed stock in all colors is particularly noticeable. John Stezskal is the latest addition to the store force and is now filling the position of shipping clerk.

J. A. Budlong is again cutting quite heavily in roses and carnations and some particularly fine My Maryland roses is the leading feature this week. The other stock is also of high quality, especially their lily of the valley of the blue ribbon brand quality.

Arthur Peterson of Escanaba, Mich., is in the city this week on business and is also attending the spring flower show in the Art Institute. He reports business in the Michigan city as good, with a rosy outlook for a banner spring trade.

Sprinkleproof Sam took it good naturedly last week when some one tried to steal his trade mark and jokingly says that they may cut off his title if they will, but the memory of sprinkleproof will linger around it still.

George Balsley, of the Detroit Flower Pot Manufactory, Detroit, Mich., and Fred Hilfinger, of the Hilfinger Bros. Pottery, Fort Edwards, N. Y., attended the Clay Products exhibition at the Coliseum last week.

Mrs. E. E. Pieser will undergo an operation this week for the removal of gall stones, and her husband's many friends sincerely hope that it will be successful and that she will have an early recovery.

Clifford Pruner and F. A. Longren, E. H. Hunt's traveling men, are in the city now and will probably remain here until after Easter. C. M. Dickinson is helping Paul M. Bryant out with the office duties this week.

Lubliner & Trinz, the East Randolph street florists, delivered a beautiful casket cover of violets and lily of the valley to the Leweler home last week when the funeral of the well known hat man was held.

O. Johnson says that the Batavia Greenhouse Co. is going to try out some new varieties of peonies this season and that his firm has all told five acres devoted to the culture of these flowers.

Wm. Zimmerman, the popular Milwaukee retail florist, will bowl with the Cream City Eagles in the American Bowling Congress tournament at the Dexter Pavilion on March 19-20.

John Kruchten is headquarters for a fine grade of snapdragons and is offering in quantity some very choice roses, carnations, violets, lily of the valley and lilies.

John Fuhlbruegge, formerly employed in this city, but now in business for himself at Winona and Rochester, Minn., is renewing old acquaintances here this week.

F. C. Hoerber says that the stock in Hoerber Bros.' greenhouses at Des Plaines is in fine condition and they will be in full crop with roses for Easter.

Miss M. C. Gunterberg continues to fill a great many orders for orange blossoms and expects to have an abundant supply until Easter.

Weiland & Risch are cutting a large quantity of stock but the orders are coming in good and the stock cleans up well.

Sam Graff has returned to Columbus, O., after spending a week in this city.

The three teams, representing the local Florists Clubs' Bowling League, had a very pleasant as well as a successful trip to Milwaukee last Sunday, March 10, when they trimmed up the Cream City bowlers in some very interesting and exciting games. The Wisconsin city florists certainly do know how to entertain visitors and it was with much reluctance that the local boys took leave of their good-natured rivals in the beautiful Badger city. A return match will be played here after Easter and it is looked forward to with much interest, as there is a great deal of friendly rivalry existing between both teams.

Louis Visas is doing some heavy advertising in Duluth, where his store is located, and is carrying a quarter page and half page advertisement in several of the leading dailies. He had a special sale one day last week and quoted daffodils at 50 cents a dozen and it was found after the paper was run off that the zero had dropped out, making the price as it appeared 5 cents a dozen. The daffodils were sold at the last named figure and the difference agreeably settled up between the newspaper people and the proprietor.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is busy putting the finishing touches to their large new store and when they are completed it will have one of the finest equipped wholesale houses in this section of the country. John Poehlmann and his force of assistants are now quite at home in their new surroundings and take great pleasure in showing their customers around the store and their large supply of fancy stock.

The Chicago Carnation Co. was one of the large exhibitors at the flower show in the Art Institute this week and as usual had a fine showing and displayed some very fancy stock. Herald, the firm's new carnation, is doing nicely and promises to become as popular as Manager Pyfer's favorite Washington.

Michael Fink, with Kennicott Bros. Co., looked over the "Peony King's" purchase at Joliet, last week, when he attended the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association in that city and says that the 10 acres look pretty big and that his firm is sure going to have some peonies for this spring.

John Zech's many friends will be pleased to hear that he is improving considerably in the Sacred Heart Sanitarium in Milwaukee and that in the course of another week he will probably be able to return to work. Allie is keeping things humming at the store during his father's absence.

Edgar Winterson has returned from a most enjoyable visit to the upper peninsula of Michigan and to Milwaukee, Wis. Edgar was on hand last Sunday to help the local boys win out at the match bowling games in the Cream City and ably assisted his team to carry off all honors.

Frank Johnson has returned from Kansas City and is again seen at the A. L. Randall Co.'s store, hustling away as busy as a bee. He reports business as good and says that his firm's green dye is selling fine and that a large number of orders are being filled.

George Sykes, with the Lord & Burnham Co., says that his firm has booked an order for nine large greenhouses for John W. Duncan, superintendent of parks at Spokane, Wash.

Theo Tolerie, formerly in the retail florist business at Goldfield, Nevada, arrived here from San Francisco this week and is now on the lookout for a good paying store in this city.

H. Van Gelder, of Percy Jones, is showing some fine carnations and is indeed fortunate in having such a Frank M. Kidwell, eldest son of J. F. Kidwell, president of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, and Miss Mabel Dewey, were married at the home of the bride's parents in Downers Grove last Wednesday, March 6. The wedding was a quiet affair and only the relatives and most intimate friends were present. The happy young couple will make their home at the Kidwell residence on Wentworth avenue, which was formerly occupied by the groom's father, and they have the best wishes of the trade for a most enjoyable time on their matrimonial voyage.

W. A. Ward, vice-president and sales manager for the American Tag Co., 6133 State street, is having quite a number of inquiries from florists for tags and is at present printing some very fancy ones for Canger & Gormley of this city and the Joy Floral Co. of Nashville, Tenn.

George C. Weiland has already ordered his next season's supply of coal and is now assured of a sufficient supply to heat his greenhouses for a long time to come.

Harry Papworth, of the Metairie Ridge Nurseries, New Orleans, La., is in the city this week and has an exhibit at the spring flower show at the Art Institute.

Miss Mary J. Wittmer and her mother of Winamac, Ind., were in the city a few days this week on business.

Wietor Bros. are commencing to cut more heavily in roses and N. J. Wietor says that his firm will again be in full crop for the holidays and that it will have the same quality of flowers to offer for Easter that it did last Christmas. American Beauties of fine quality in all grades and Richmond, Killarney, White Killarney and Uncle John roses as well as fancy carnations, especially Winsor and Victory, are arriving in large quantities and in the best of condition.

J. B. Deamud Co.'s growers are all in grand crop and the receipts of the best of seasonable stock are large, with violets of high quality a specialty. No matter how quiet business is there is always something doing with the two young hustling assistants of this house, Wilder, the son of the proprietor, and Ernest Farley. If there is any chance to place the stock it is not overlooked for a minute.

The Atlas Floral Co. arranged the bouquets of flowers that the Bohemian school children presented to President Taft at the Bohemian school last Sunday, March 10. Two large bouquets of American Beauty roses and one of White Killarney roses artistically arranged in Bohemian colors were greatly admired by the vast throng of people that were present.

Schieden & Schoos of Evanston will after June 1, 1912, dissolve partnership, Mr. Schoos this week buying out his partner's interest for $4,000. Mr. Schieden has already purchased property on Asbury street, two blocks south of the present establishment, with the intention of starting work on a new range in the very near future.

The banquet tendered the executive committee of the Society of American Florists, in session here this week, will be held at the LaSalle hotel Thursday evening, March 14. Tickets may be secured at the wholesale houses of E. F. Winterson, D. H. Robertson and H. N. Bruns, committee.

August Lange is installing his fixtures and a large section of his working force in the new workshop recently acquired on the second floor of the Heyworth building, directly over his present store, and says the additional space, the same size as his store on the ground floor, is already fully occupied.

Wendland & Keimel, of Elmhurst, the well-known growers of fancy Killarney roses, will grow Killarney Queen quite extensively next season and they expect to ship large quantities of choice stock to the E. C. Amling Co., who handles their output exclusively.

The Superior Machine & Boiler Works received a very complimentary letter this week from H. Roth of Lafayette, Ind., who speaks in glowing terms of their No. 4 Superior boiler and says that it is the finest one that he ever had on his place.

J. T. Helbok sold his place on Wrightwood avenue this week to John Furmann and is now planning a trip to Europe this summer.

George Reinberg is filling a large number of orders for rose plants and is cutting a good supply of stock of all kinds.

Fred Lautenschlager, Kroeschell Bros. Co.'s hustling boiler man, is expected home from the east in a few days.

Vaughan's Seed Store has handled three carloads of sphagnum moss in the past two weeks.

Kohlbrand and A. T. Pyfer resigned the chairmanships of their respective committees and their resignations were accepted.

Attention having been called to the early meeting in this city of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists, to arrange for the convention here next August, it was decided to tender the committee a banquet and President Foley has announced E. F. Winterson, D. A. Robertson and H. N. Bruns as a committee to make the necessary arrangements. It is understood that the banquet will be held at the La Salle hotel Thursday evening, March 14. Tickets may be had at the wholesale houses.

A number of visitors were in attendance, including W. P. Craig, Philadelphia, Pa.; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville; Geo. Balsley, Detroit, Mich.; W. J. Heimbreiker, Lincoln; John DeBuck, New York, and Geo. Weinhoeber, Messrs. Ammann and Weinhoeber making brief addresses.

"Sprinkleproof Sam," the Werthemer ribbon man, will be Samuel Seligman on the club records, the pet name being eliminated by vote.

Chicago Bowling.

John Stuppy's crack bowling team, representing the Stuppy Floral Co. of St. Joseph, Mo., gave the picked team that represented the local Florists' Club bowling league a good trimming last Friday, March 8, at Bensinger's alleys on West Randolph street. A large number of people in the trade were present to witness the exhibition, and although they were a little bit disappointed because the home boys lost, they were pleased to see the visitors win. Mr. Stuppy wishes to thank the local people for the many courtesies that were extended to him and his team during their brief stay here and says that if any of the boys happen to stroll through St. Joseph, Mo., he would try and reciprocate. The visitors made a most favorable impression with the trade here and if they could have heard the pleasant things that were said of the St. Joseph boys, six young fellows would be wearing a much larger hat. Come again, boys, you are always welcome. The scores were as follows:

Milwaukee Bowling.

About 15 young fellows came up from Chicago last Sunday, March 10, and showed us fellows how to roll the balls down the alleys, or, in other words, how to knock down the pins. They were not satisfied with winning from the first or second teams but also carried off the honors from the third team. Some of the games were very close and exciting and a good deal of good-natured rooting by the enthusiastic crowd led some of the residents in the neighborhood for many blocks around to think that the teams were striving for international honors. Taken on the whole every one seemed to have had a most enjoyable time and the way the spread disappeared after the contest was enough to show that both sides had worked up a wonderful appetite and had done their best to win. It was quite late when the visitors left for home, and it was agreed on both sides that these enjoyable visits could not occur too often and it is with much pleasure that the local boys are looking forward to the return match in the Windy City. The ladies also bowled, and if some of their scores could be compared with the gentlemen bowlers it might be found that they clearly outclassed the masculine sex.

Cincinnati. SUPPLY STILL LARGE.

Last week the market was the lowest since the beginning of Lent. It was only toward the close that there was anything doing at all and that was not very much. The supply continues very large as far as the number of blooms is concerned. The sales are large. Most of them, however, are made at sacrifice prices. The stock generally is running good. In roses the offerings of Killarney and White Killarney are excellent, while some of the Brides and Bridesmaid arriving on Third street are some of the very best ever seen in the market. The offerings of real choice American Beauties is not large and some more good ones might easily be used. Carnations are still a big seller but the price on them is down at the very bottom. Absolute cleanups of this flower, owing to the large supply, are utterly impossible. Violets are not selling at all, while in sweet peas only the choice ones move nicely. The supply of bulb stock is not quite as large as it was, but is easily adequate. Neither callas nor Harisii lilies move very quickly; the supply of each, however, is large and good.

NOTES.

The general appearance of long-stemmed Bridesmaid at C. E. Critchell's last week showed that the rose is far from being entirely crowded out by Killarney. The blooms were among the best offered in this market for many a day.

STOCK INCREASES AND LESS DEMAND.

The market conditions are in bad shape. The bright weather that has prevailed for the past week has brought the stock in very plentifully and with the Lenten season on, the demand for flowers has decreased considerably, and this naturally helps to glut the market. Carnations are the most plentiful, the cheaper grade selling at any price offered when sold in quantities. Violets also suffered considerably, which was due to a great extent to the cold weather which has been prevailing for the past two weeks. Sweet peas also suffered the same way. Easter lilies and callas are plentiful, as the bright weather has brought these in heavily and with the few funeral orders on hand they moved very slowly. Roses are again in demand and selling at a normal price.

NOTES.

Holton & Hunkel Co. have their stock in their greenhouses in exceptionally fine condition and are going to have some choice rambler roses and Easter lilies to offer for the Easter trade. This firm has 14,000 lily plants all told and the majority of them will be marketable for the great lily day. The cut flower plants are also doing nicely especially the American Beauty roses, which are very fine now.

G. H. Hunkel says the asparagus seed business is good and that he is now looking for additional warehouse space. He says that the recent cold weather put quite a crimp in the business but looks for trade to liven up pretty soon.

C. C. Pollworth Co. is pretty well fixed on blooming plants, especially lilies and azaleas, and will have some nice stock to offer for the Easter trade. This firm is now cutting some choice cut flowers with carnations showing up exceptionally well.

Gust Rusch & Co. report business fair with the outlook a little brighter than it has been for some time past. Mr. Rusch says he will have a nice lot of plants as well as cut flowers to offer for his Easter trade.

Wm. Zimmerman will bowl with the Eagles in the American Bowling Congress tournament, now being held at the Dexter Pavilion in Chicago, on March 19-20.

Gustav A. Pohl has his stock in his greenhouses in fine condition and if the Easter trade is very good he ought to get some good returns for his stock.

Roy Currie entertained his friend Edgar Winterson of Chicago here for a few days this week. Everyone knows that Roy is some entertainer.

A. Currie & Co. report that business in the seed line is picking up considerably and that the prospects for the coming season are very bright.

Chas. Kamp has purchased the lease of Heiden's greenhouse from Wm. Eschrich. He intends growing stock for the local market.

Mrs. A. F. Kellner, secretary and treasurer of the A. F. Kellner Co., is taking the mud baths at Waukesha this week.

T. Plozcienzak and wife of the Mitchell Street Florist are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby boy.

PRICES LOW.

There are more flowers than there is business to use them up, which is the situation in a nutshell. While this is the case with the general variety of the stock coming in it does not hold against the extra or select grades, which do not seem to accumulate to any great extent, it being the lower or cheaper grades that are hard to clean up. American Beauties are much more plentiful, so much so that they are being pushed in the market at half the price or less than quoted a week ago. Five dollars a dozen will now get the choice, and very good shorter lengths are sold much lower. Exceptionally fine Killarneys are offered, the best ever seen on this market. Sweet peas in abundance, very fine stock, have been good sellers. Carnations are also very fine and rather more are offered than the market will take, so that prices rule low. Daffodils and tulips are very plentiful and are offered as low as $1.00 per hundred; lily of the valley sells fairly well, as do violets, although the shipments are very large. Greens are freely offered, the early spring growth having gotten hard enough to cut.

NOTES.

Judging from the amount of new houses and renewals that are only waiting the arrival of good weather for commencement the business must be in a healthy condition. The Joseph Heacock Co. have given the Lord & Burnham Co. an order for a house 72 feet 6 inches x 600 feet of even span. Mr. Heacock says that the first house erected last season was on the shadeless ridge plan, but they have found by experience that in the winter when the sun is low there is no shade, as the sun does not get high enough to cast a shadow, and in the spring when it does there is so much surplus light that it does not matter. So the new house is to be even span and the making it 20 feet wider than the first house is for economy, something over ten per cent saved in the cost of covering 72 x 600 feet as against 52 x 600 feet. The larger amount of table space showing a less cost per foot in the larger than in the smaller house. George Anderson will replace two of his old houses 30 x 125 feet with new ones. Dennis T. Connor, of the Foley Co. has the order for the lumber. Mr. Connor will also furnish John Burton with materials for a house 31 x 150 feet. Harry Weiss of Hatherso will erect a Lord & Burnham house 35 x 300 feet for carnations, with which flower they have been very successful.

One of the wholesalers says it will come to this: "That the wholesale men will have to get together and rent a store in the market street shopping district and there dispose of their surplus at retail." He is confident that there would be big money in it. Query: Was the man in earnest or having a dream? Would the C. M. buy the stock and stand the loss of any unsold, or would they as now, after the expenses of the venture, turn over the balance less commission to the grower???

Meehan Co., in fact, everything worth having is to be had in quantity here. "If a retailer wants to try a special sale we will surprise him with the reduction he will get from the small lot prices of the cautious buyer." So says Charles Meehan.

The trade were much pained to hear of the death of Belthaser Stahl, which occurred on March 8. A faithful, hard working member of the craft. The business will be continued under the management of his son, C. B. Stahl.

Adolph Farenwald is planning an important addition to his already large place and there are many more who are about to make additions when the rush of the Easter season is over.

The Leo Niessen Co. are getting strong on American Beauties and offer special inducements in this popular rose. They have been getting splendid stock in quantity the past week.

W. J. Baker was back on the job for a day or two. He will be about from now on, whenever the weather is favorable.

Boston.

A GREAT IMPROVEMENT.

Friday and Saturday of last week broke the glut which has held Boston in its grip, although there was no great advance in prices, but there was a clean up on almost everything. It seemed like going fishing and finding the fish biting good. The glum looks and anxious faces of many have given way to smiles, and many are shaking hands with themselves at the thought that the worst is over. Roses have had clear sailing all winter, but they were in the same boat and have been jostled by the plebeian stock on either side. Roses are good, there being very little mildewed stock seen. American Beauty is somewhat scarce, especially the long stemmed. Carnations are excellent, but strange as it may seem, with all the new varieties and well grown as they are, since Christmas they have not enjoyed their former popularity judging by the prices that have been received. Pink sweet peas are somewhat scarce; the white variety is overabundant. Yellow marguerites are sold readily. A gentleman well posted in the trade says: "It sells as well as anything we ever had."

NOTES.

The automobile show of pleasure cars closed Saturday night. The halls were decorated with paper roses. One firm had a nice vase of long stemmed Killarneys standing in a roped-off enclosure in front of their show car. One lady was heard to remark to her escort, "Why, those are real roses." It put us to thinking about the glut we had on them, and only one vase of roses in the show, where cars were selling from $1,000 to $6,000. Surely some of our enterprising flower salesmen missed connections here.

Penn the Florist had a sale of Killarney roses Saturday; the windows were packed with that rose; good stems and salable flowers. Weather spring like.

STOCK PLENTIFUL.

The conditions have improved some the past week, but stock continues plentiful and the prevailing prices are rather low. Callas are hard things to move at any price. Easter lilies sell a trifle better but at prices that are below cost of production, but in a few weeks more things will be reversed. Carnations remain in large supply, and while the demand is good, the prices realized are "rock bottom" for this time of year. Bulb stock is very plentiful. Tulips, La Reine, Proserpine and all singles are plentiful, but Murillo and other doubles are scarce. Paper White narcissus and daffodils, both single and double, still hold their own. Roses of all grades are plentiful and sell at prices within the reach of everybody. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are both in good supply, as is adiantum. Lily of the valley and violets were in good demand the latter part of the week. Retailers report an excellent plant trade.

NOTES.

There was one big time at Kirchner's on Tuesday evening, March 6, the occasion being a birthday party in honor of John Kirchner. There was a well filled table of good things to eat and drink, as one florist said: "Chicken to eat, and chicken serving the eats." Card games, songs and stories were part of the evening's entertainment, and everybody reported a most enjoyable time.

The Florists' Club decorated the rooms of the West Side Chamber of Industry for the Chamber's annual banquet, in return for the use of these rooms last year, when the club held their dance.

Mrs. Lincoln Brown has been ill at the Lakewood Sanitarium for two weeks with sciatica. She is a little improved, but still very far from being able to take care of her store.

Louis Koons, Jr., of the Smith & Fetters Co., has left for California to visit Frank Smith and will be gone about a month. T. Smith is expected home this week.

G. M. Naumann is contemplating a trip to Panama in a few weeks, combining business and pleasure.

MORE COLD WEATHER.

Another cold spell of weather has kept down the glut of flowers to a great extent, although they are still more than plentiful. White carnations clean up nicely, although prices are low.

CLUB MEETING.

The Florists' Club met at the Fort Pitt Hotel March 5. E. C. Ludwig, who had been elected at the last meeting, celebrated the event by giving in the names of seventeen new members and promised that he would still bring them in at a good rate. Neil McCallum gave a most interesting talk on Australian plants. He was right at home in talking on this line, as he spent seventeen years in that country. men of Primula obconica were exhibited by private gardeners.

NOTES.

The A. W. Smith Co. had a window that instantly attracted the attention of the amateur gardeners. It was a garden scene composed of real grass, lawns, gravel, walks, cement walls, blooming trees and finally beds of different varieties of tulips just reaching perfection. J.

St. LOUIS, Mo.—Articles of incorporation have been filed by Mullanphy Florists with a capital stock, fully paid, of $5,000, to do a general florist business. William A. Seeger, Nathaniel Kingsley and Willemene Seeger are the incorporators.

New York.

THE MARKET CONDITION DISCOURAGING.

Business could hardly be worse in the wholesale cut flower market than it has been the past two weeks, and probably the less said about it the better. Even American Beauties and orchids, which were doing well a week ago, are now in over-supply and prices very low. Carnations of all varieties have accumulated everywhere. Violets will not move at all and shipments of thousand lots have been cleared out at prices seldom heard of in this market. Sweet peas, too, even the best are in large supply, far exceeding the demand. The novelties in roses and high grade blooms of Killarneys, Richmond, Mme. Chatenay meet with more ready sale, but the same cannot be said of Brides and Bridesmaids, the quality of these two varieties being especially good at this time. In bulbous stock, lily of the valley remains about the same, daffodils selling a little better. The ordinary run of tulips are seen everywhere. There is an exception with some of the finer varieties, but even these do not bring the prices of former seasons. Callas are plentiful. Lilies sufficient to meet all demands, and the short-stemmed lilies are cleaned out with difficulty at very low prices. Lilac is plentiful, but gardenias are scarce and those that are fortunate enough to have a supply have no difficulty in getting good prices for the best flowers. Adiantum and asparagus are moving slowly, but good smilax which is in flower meets with a ready sale. As a whole, everything is moving slowly and the situation is very discouraging.

NOTES.

Thomas Roland of Nahant, Mass., was a visitor Friday. Mr. Roland is enthusiastic on National Flower Show matters and states that he will have more than a car full of his own exhibits and is making arrangements with the other exhibitors from the east to have special cars provided to come through with a special attendant to avoid delays, and to insure their safe arrival at the hall on time. In the evening Mr. Roland was entertained by his friend Louis Dupuy of Whitestone, L. I.

R. M. Schultz of Madison, N. J., is still confined to his house, having a mild attack of paralysis from his knees down, but is undergoing special electric treatment and hopes soon to be out attending to business. "Bob" is an enthusiastic worker in the New York Florists' Club and a member of the committee on awards. His cheering personality will be greatly missed at the meeting.

The board of control or local governing board of the National Flower Show in 1913 has now organized. Frank H. Traendly, chairman; Walter F. Sheridan, treasurer; Harry A. Bunyard, secretary. As much of the important work and responsibility falls to this committee, they will hold weekly meetings until the close of the exhibition.

There was an attendance of 2,300, not 23,000, at the Greek-American ball held Wednesday, February 28, but one could readily imagine, had they been present, the larger number mentioned were present. This society will have to provide a much larger hall for future affairs of this kind, which was the most successful they ever held.

Both Prof. John Craig and Mrs. Craig of Ithaca, N. Y., are patients in the Post Graduate Hospital, but Professor Craig still takes great interest in the organization of the New York State's floricultural interests and from his sick room sends requests to be kept posted as to how the movement is progressing.

The committee having in charge the arrangements for the Florists' Club's twenty-fifth anniversary dinner have everything completed and tickets will soon be mailed to those who have sent in applications. This affair promises to eclipse anything of the kind ever held in New York.

Charles H. Totty, Harry A. Bunyard, directors of the Society of American Florists, and John Young, the secretary, left here on the "Twentieth Century," New York Central, Tuesday, March 12, to attend the directors' meeting to be held in Chicago March 13.

The New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association made their inspection of the establishments of the New Jersey growers on Thursday, March 14, meeting at Hoboken at 9 a. m., and then taking automobiles, as was done in Long Island.

H. M. Robinson & Co. have had several large orders during the week for Mrs. Aaron Ward, Lady Hillingdon, and Waddell roses. This house does a large business in florists' supplies and this department of their business is increasing steadily.

Some of the finest American Beauties are seen at P. J. Smith's, 49 West Twenty-eighth street, received from Righter & Barton, Madison, N. J. It is to be regretted that the demand for American Beauty roses is so very slow at present.

Ex-President John B. Nugent of Young & Nugent made up the magnificent floral design sent to the funeral of the late W. Bayard Cutting, who was an honorary member of the New York Florists' Club.

This Budding Knife Free

The Unrivalled Henkel Knife Shown Above Ivory Handle and Fine English Steel Blade will be mailed absolutely free to anyone sending in Two New Subscriptions to The American Florist, the new subscribers being persons in the trade or trade employes. This knife cannot be bought anywhere for less than $1.25 and most dealers will probably ask more for it, as the price of ivory has been advanced recently.

Send Post Office Money Order or Express Money Order for $2.00 with the names and addresses of two New Subscribers (persons in the trade, as Florists, Seedsmen or Nurserymen, or their Employes) and we will send them the paper for one year after receipt of subscriptions.

With Canadian orders it will be necessary to send $4.00 with two new subscriptions and $5.00 with two new subscriptions from other foreign countries.

The request for the knife must be made when sending in the subscriptions, giving name and address of person to whom the knife is to be sent.

The knife will be mailed absolutely free if the sender of the New Subscriptions complies with the above instructions.

This offer is good now for present orders.

Wertheimer's Novelties.

Wertheimer Bros. of New York are showing an almost bewildering assortment of novelties in ribbons and chiffons for Easter. Among their latest creations are Ombre ribbons in all the effective shadings, including pink, blue, green, yellow, beauty, lavender and an especially effective Easter lily combination. Their Tutone ribbon is a rich double faced satin ribbon woven with a different color on each side. Among the combinations are foliage green and beauty, foliage green and orchid, foliage green and Nile, Killarney pink, and white, light blue and white, white and yellow and many other combinations. They are also showing a velvet ribbon with a taffeta back. The back is a different color than the velvet face. This ribbon is made in a large variety of combinations and ties beautifully owing to the soft taffeta back. The Jacquard gauze ribbons shown by this house are described as a combination of gauze and satin with small buds woven over the surface, producing an exquisite effect. The Crepon ribbons are especially dainty, having the effect of crepe paper, only infinitely more beautiful. Silverine ribbon is a new weave made in all colors. Its effect is that of a silver gauze ribbon, however, it is guaranteed not to tarnish and is much cheaper than the ordinary tinsel ribbon. In chiffons, this progressive house shows an enormous variety in every width, style and color used by florists. Their most popular creations are the Crepon Ottoman effects, also the ombre, gold and silver effects.

Wertheimer Bros. maintain a complete accessory department consisting of corsage pins, corsage shields, bridal bouquet scarfs, butterflies for decorations, corsage ties, etc. Their stocks are complete in every detail.

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, President; Marshall H. Duryea, New York, First Vice-President; Edgar Gregory, Marblehead, Mass., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary and Treasurer. Next annual convention at Chicago, June 25-27, 1912.

A. T. FERRELL, of Saginaw, Mich., is in Panama.

SOUTHERN France reports damage to the growing Roman hyacinth crop.

EARLY seed potatoes are soaring, eating stock at Chicago in carlots, $1.25.

REPORTS from all sections of the country indicate a very serious shortage of sweet corn.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.—The Binghamton Seed Co. has moved from 161 Water street to 135 Court street.

ONION sets are still advancing. At this writing Chicago prices to dealers are about as follows: Reds, $1.50; Yellows and Whites, $1.75 to $1.85.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. — Howard M. Earl, who has been confined to the hospital, is progressing favorably and it is expected he will leave for Atlantic City shortly.

VISITED CHICAGO: Kirby B. White, representing D. M. Ferry & Co.; Detroit, Mich., enroute to California; C. C. Massie, representing Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

CHICAGO.—Price on the Board of Trade, March 13, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $10 to $14 per 100 pounds.—Snow early in the week gave counter trade another setback.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Fred H. Hunter is now a member of the firm of Dunbar, Hansen & Hunter, 322 Drumm street, whose specialty is garden peas. Mr. Hunter, we are pleased to note, has completely recovered from his recent illness.

ROCKY FORD, COLO.—The J. C. Robinson Seed Co. of Waterloo, Neb., have taken over the wholesale business and stock of the Rocky Ford Seed Growers' Association. They will erect office buildings and a large fire proof warehouse equipped with modern machinery for the transaction of business on a large scale.

More Free Seed.

Washington, D. C., March 7.—Presentments of free seeds to constituents by congressmen at the expense of the government are to be continued. The house in one of the most turbulent sessions of weeks today refused to cut the $268,000 item for this gratuity out of the agricultural department bill. The last effort to kill it was an amendment from Representative Jackson of Kansas to have the distribution done by the department instead of by congressmen.

Rain Cheers California Growers.

Los Angeles, March 6.—We have had good rains during the past three days, with prospects of more to come. This has made the outlook for seed crops a little better, but we fear it has come a little too late to assure an average crop of sweet peas, unless we have a favorable summer with frequent showers in April and the early part of May. The rain has benefited the other flower seed crops as well as tomatoes and we are more certain of getting a good stand than on the land planted after irrigation. We have been running our irrigating plant for the past two months, but would have been unable to irrigate the entire acreage in time for crops to be growing in good season. The recent rains have also encouraged bean growing and will enable growers to plant their general acreage and not be compelled to rely on the comparatively small area under irrigation.—B.

San Diego, March 1.—After more than a month of dry weather the drouth was broken this morning by heavy rain. At 9 o'clock about an inch was recorded at the local station of the United States Weather Bureau. Last month was the only February in 63 years in which no rain fell in San Diego. More rain is forecasted for today. The ranges are brown, milk has gone up and cattle are being shipped to Imperial Valley for green feed.

Government Bulb Farms.

The importation of hyacinth, tulip, narcissus and crocus bulbs from Holland and European countries has constantly increased and this year amounted to more than a million dollars. In 1908, the Secretary of Agriculture leased a tract of 10 acres on Puget Sound near Bellingham, Wash., and the necessary buildings were erected to demonstrate whether or not the bulbs could be grown successfully. That year 170,000 bulbs were planted and the work has been continued until this year when $69,000 bulbs were planted. The increase is very gratifying, yielding the maximum number of young bulbs which were equal, if not superior, to those grown in Holland. A very interesting experiment was tried by the department at Washington, where 50 bulbs of like varieties were planted side by side with Holland-grown bulbs. Those from Bellingham bloomed from seven to ten days earlier, were of better quality in size of flower and in color, and were remarkable for the total absence of disease, while the imported bulbs showed a large number diseased and many failed to produce a flower.

It is believed that bulbs can be grown on the Pacific coast that will compare and in many ways surpass the imported article. The chief obstacles are the cost of production and marketing, but an effort is being made to overcome the difference in the cost of labor by the invention of appliances and the use of horses to replace the operations performed by hand in Europe. The expense of freight shipments across the country are a serious drawback, but upon the completion of the Panama canal it should be possible to deliver bulbs at New York as cheaply as they can be brought from Europe. The demand for bulbs on the Pacific coast is rapidly increasing.

The experiments are solely for the purpose of showing what can be done in growing bulbs in the United States. The gardens are always open and thousands avail themselves of the opportunity to visit them and enjoy the flowers. Careful records are kept and valuable information collected which will be at the disposal of anyone wishing to take up bulb growing. The demand for bulbs is increasing rapidly and bulb growing offers a promising field for the investment of American capital and the establishment of a new and profitable industry on the Pacific coast, which will keep at home a large amount of money now sent annually abroad.

We are the largest handlers of Cannas in the world. Our prices upon Cannas will bear comparison with any house in the Canna business.

Our Cannas are true to name—two and three, sometimes four eyes—are sound, dormant, and are packed 250 in a box; two can be "cleated" together and shipped as one. One box of 250 sold at a thousand rate; it is cheaper for you to buy a box of 250 than 200 at 100 rate. Write for special prices for quantities.

If any Cannas are not found here, it may be understood that they are superseded by the foregoing. If selection is left to us, we will substitute or send only the best for all purposes.

THE average value of potatoes on February 1, based upon prices received by farmers, according to the Crop Reporter, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, is 94.4 cents per bushel. The valuation for the same date in 1911 being 55.1 cents, and in 1910, 56.2 cents.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, March 11.—Mushrooms, 15 cents to 35 cents per pound; radishes, 20 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches; rhubarb, 40 cents to 45 cents per bunch; lettuce, 20 cents to 22½ cents, small cases; cucumbers, $1.15 to $1.50 per dozen; asparagus, $1.75 to $3 per dozen bunches.

New York, March 9.—Mushrooms, 75 cents to $2 per 4-pound basket; cucumbers, $1.50 to $2 per dozen; tomatoes, 15 cents to 40 cents per pound; radishes, $1.50 to $3 per 100 bunches; lettuce, 75 cents to $1.25 per strap; rhubarb, 40 cents to 60 cents per bundle and 60 cents to 90 cents per dozen bunches; mint, 35 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches.

Mint Raising in Michigan.

It may not be known to many that more than one-half of all the oil of peppermint, spearmint, tansy, wormwood, etc., of the entire world is produced and distilled within a few score miles of Chicago, in southwestern Michigan. The headquarters of the business are in St. Joseph, Van Buren and Allegan counties. An idea of the magnitude of the industry may be gained when it is known that over 40,000 tons of dried peppermint plants are carefully cultivated annually in this region. From these the volatile or essential oil is distilled. Each year about 14,000 acres are utilized for producing the plants for peppermint alone, besides the other oils mentioned.

In early spring the roots beneath the surface of the ground and creeping tendrils, or "runners," above the ground, which have multiplied from the planting of the previous year, are planted in furrows from two to three feet apart. The roots are carried in large sacks on the shoulders of the workmen, who string them along the center of the furrow, covering them with their feet at the same time. A good workman will plant from half an acre to an acre and a half, according to the condition of the soil, the distance between rows, and his ability, in a day.

About two weeks after planting shoots begin to appear above the ground. A little later the work of cultivation begins and is continued until the plants have grown so that the rows meet each other and cover the ground. The plants when in bloom are moved down and allowed to dry in the sun until nearly as dry as hay. They are then raked in piles and drawn to the distillery, which consists in its ordinary form of two large wooden vats connected with a steam boiler. The steam in passing through the plants causes the little cells in the leaves and blossoms containing the oil to burst and the fine particles of oil thus set free are carried off with the current of steam. After passing through a worm immersed in cold water, the condensed products flow into an open vessel, the oil rising at the surface, from which it is dipped into cans.

There are several hundred mint distilleries in this region, where the crude or "natural" oil of peppermint is produced by this simple process; the distilleries costing but a few hundred dollars each. In this form the oil is usually sent to market. It requires from 200 to 250 pounds of dried peppermint plants to produce one pound of oil, so that when the flavoring power of a single leaf or blossom is remembered it will be understood why the pure essential oil is so powerful. The yield per acre varies widely, owing to the soil, season and cultivation, ranging all the way from twenty to sixty pounds, and in some instances slightly exceeding the latter figure. The price has also varied widely, ranging during the last few years from $1.25 to $5 per pound in the producing districts for the crude oil, the average having been about $2.

The peppermint industry was first started in England about 150 years ago at Mitcham, but as late as 1805 no stills were built for distilling the oil, and the herb was marketed in London. About 100 acres only were cultivated up to that time, but in 1850 about 500 acres were under cultivation and a number of stills had been erected. Early in the present century the industry was started in Wayne county, New York, and in St. Joseph county, Michigan, and in 1864 the American industry had grown to such proportions that over four-fifths of the entire production of the world was distilled here, while in England it had decreased to 219 acres. Now over nine-tenths of the world's production is distilled in America, about two-thirds of which is grown and distilled in this region.

Shrub for Planting Under Trees.

Almost the only shrubby member of the order to which the Sarcococca belongs (Euphorbiaceae) is the box, which is well known to succeed fairly well beneath the shade of trees. In this respect it is, however, surpassed by its relative—Sarcococca ruscifolia
 —a comparatively new introduction from Western China, which was given an award of merit by the Royal Horticultural Society on December 22, 1908, and distributed last year by
 J. Veitch & Son. In their Coombe Wood
 Nursery, writes a correspondent in The Garden, its merits for furnishing a bank under trees has, during the past summer, been well tested, and it has behaved sufficiently well to show that in this sarcococca (what a name!) we have a valuable plant for this purpose. It forms a dense bush two feet or so in height, the branches being closed with leaves not unlike those of the Butcher's Broom, but larger, while they are of a deep, bright, shining green color. The white flowers are not at all showy, but pleasantly fragrant. Although of such recent introduction, this sarcococca is so moderate in price that its merits can be tested by anyone. A very small member of the same genus—S. humile —which is being distributed this autumn, is equally valuable for the same purpose, but the greater stature of S. ruscifolia will, no doubt, commend it to many.

Pedigreed Nursery Stock.

In a paper read before the New York State Fruit Growers, U. P. Hedrick, horticulturist at the New York Agriculturist Experiment Station, states that an attempt is being made to attach importance, as in the case of men, animals and seeds, to the pedigree of trees propagated from buds, scions, cuttings and off-shoots of plants. This has resulted in the advertising of pedigreed stock guaranteed to produce large crops or prize-winning products. If varieties of fruits can be improved by selection in propagation, the sooner the present practices in nurseries are changed the better; if not, such selection is worthless and it is unjust to taboo nurserymen who cannot give the ancestry of their stock.

There are two kinds of variations;
 one, where wholly new characters appear in plants by sudden leaps, and are transmitted from parent to offspring, which has been most clearly described by De Vries and has been named mutation; the other, much more common, is due to the effect of environment and is a question of "nurture" and not "nature." For example a Baldwin tree taken from New York to Virginia, Missouri or to Oregon will produce a different apple in each district, but if brought back to New York will again produce New York Baldwins. Several years studying the histories of varieties of fruits has resulted in the belief that there is nothing to gain in the selection of buds, scions or cuttings in propagation and that a fruit grower can-spend his time to better advantage than in attempting to breed fruit trees by bud selection.

The practical difficulties in growing trees from selected buds are almost insuperable. The following are a few of them:

(1) A bearing tree surpassingly good in one quality may be deficient in others. A tree bearing large apples might be unproductive, subject to fungi or insects, lacking in vigor or hardiness, or short-lived. Selecting for one quality will not do.

(2) The selected buds must be worked on roots that are variable. To have "pedigreed" trees it is necessary to have "pedigreed" roots as well as "pedigreed" tops.

(3) The cost of trees would be vastly increased if nurserymen were required to bud from or to go back every few generations to bearing trees.
 Opportunities for dishonest practices would be greatly multiplied.

(4) It is the experience of those who have taken buds from bearing trees that the resulting plants lack vigor and remain weaklings for several years.

(5) If pedigreed trees became the vogue, tree-growing must become a petty business. Climate and environment would permit of propagating only a half-dozen varieties of any fruit, for not more than this number is adapted to one geographical region so as to give good mother trees.

(6) Fruit trees are not sufficiently well fixed in their character to make selections from single "best" trees worth while, even should their character be transmissible.

(7) Heritable variations can be told only by growing the parts bearing them—by studying the offspring, not the ancestor; by looking forward, not backward. This is impossible in the nursery.

TAKE THE HINT

The successful man in business keeps cool. Don't cry, don't worry about hard times, don't lose your head. Just keep calm and think of your old friend in Philadelphia. His name, Godfrey Aschmann, He shall take care of you this Easter, 1912. His big stock of fine plants and his low prices will pull you through at all times.

Therefore Prepare for Easter

And Come Direct to the Factory. A Great Factory of Live Stock That Never Ceases.

Twenty-five years' experience in shipping Easter plants—well known, popular, from Atlantic to Pacific Oceans. Our shipments of Easter Plants reach every city and state of the United States, Mexico, Canada, and as far as Cuba.

All Florists should this Easter time
Come see my stock quite superfine;
My glistening Araucarias,
My Lilies strong and wondrous fair,
Ferns, big and green, no rivals know,
Bulbs of all sorts, the best I grow.
There's not a flower you now can need
But I can sell you cheap indeed

Azalea Indica.

Is another specialty of ours, inspected personally by myself on my yearly trip to Europe at our grower's establishment in Belgium, who is a specialist in cultivating Azaleas over there. Only the best American sorts are raised and imported for me.

What is the name of the Best Pink Azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name.

Originated by the well-known Azalea specialist, Mr. Van der Cruyssen, of Ghent, Belgium. Millions are raised every year of this so world-wide known popular pink Azalea and are shipped out to every portion of the globe from Belgium. We are well provided and have a big stock of this so well favored variety in America, the Mme. Van der Cruyssen; covered with buds and flowers, ready for Easter trade, well shaped, round as an apple; in all sizes, 6-7-8 in. pots, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00. On account of scarcity in Belgium of this variety, we only were able to obtain a limited quantity of the smaller sizes; therefore bigger sizes must accompany the order for Van der Cruyssen.

Simon Mardner, double pink, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; De Schryveriana, double variegated, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Vervaneana, a well known double variegated variety, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Apollo, best red, $1.00 to $1.25; Niobe, double white, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Deutsche Perle, double white, 75c; a few good mixed varieties, such as Empress of India, Helena Thielmann and others, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50.

If we are out of the size and color ordered, we shall ship next size and color.

In connection with Lilies and Azaleas, kindly try to buy a few other plants.

Spirea Gladstone.

What is a home, what is a store, what is a church, what is an Easter present, without having a few of the so much admired and so greatly in demand Spirea Gladstone, the pride of Holland? O, those charming sprays of beautiful pure white flowers! And the foliage, of such a beautiful wax deep green is a jewel in itself! Mixed with beautiful lilies and other blooming plants they will complete the flower decoration for your happy, joyful Easter home of 1912. Knowing the great demand for these plants during past Easters, when not half the customers could be supplied, we are well prepared this year for the rush, and were fortunate in spite of the scarcity last fall in Holland. When other florists' supplies were cut short by Holland growers we obtained enough of the bulbs to fill two houses with the choicest, and we are able to supply all incoming orders promptly. Price: 5½, 6 and 7 in. pots, full of buds and flowers, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or more, the same price. Some are as big as a small washtub.

Shasta Daisies, pure white hardy daisies, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100.

Chinese Primroses, 5¼-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.

Our New Improved Begonia Erfordii has no equal as a constant bloomer, winter and summer, in bloom now, 5¼-in., 25c; 5½-in., 30 to 35c; 4-in., 20c.

Asparagus Sprengeri, 2½-in., 3c; 4-in., 10c.

Asparagus Plumosus, 10,000 on hand, April, 1911, savings, big stock plants, 4-in., 10c; 3-in., 10 to 12 in. high, $6.00 per 100; large 2½-in., suitable for edging bulb pans, $5.00 per 100.

Our Hydrangea Otska can't be beat; full of buds; right for Easter trade; every branch nicely staked up, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 heads to the plant, 6-in. pots, 35c to 50c; 5 to 7-in. pots, 75c; $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Azaleas, like a plant on fire
With blooms that fill the heart's desire.
Choice Primroses, with colors chaste;
Palms grown to suit the highest taste.
The Springtime jewels are my flowers,
Pictures of life that brighten ours,
None fairer, better, you can find,
I have the best of every kind.

Lilium Multiflorum.

We have Lilies this Easter (1912) to burn, to burn; they are crackerjacks, to beat the band, the best in the land, the best in the land, the best in the land.

Three houses in Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japan Easter Lily, better than ever before. Our own importation from our general grower in Japan, raised from 9-10-in. bulbs started in 6-in. pots last October; have kept cold. Good, perfect foliage from bottom up. Plants medium size and in all heights, from 5 to 10 buds to the plant, 10c per bud; plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud. Just right for Easter. We have the finest lilies this year in Philadelphia and all over the country, is the town talk from florists and agents daily visiting our place. "We have never seen anything like it," said two well-known growers one day, when visiting our place together. We have three houses full in 6-in. pots nicely staked up, medium height, and can supply all applications.

Cineraria Hyb. Grandiflora.

Readers, please, just a minute. I wish to call your attention to one of our biggest houses filled with a big selection of that so much admired Easter novelty, the Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora, which will have no equal in the flower market for Easter, 1912. If you are not fortunate enough to see them growing at our establishment, then just imagine you were promoted to a paradise, to a garden in Eden, standing before a mass of flowers in various beautiful colors. This is the condition one of our Cineraria houses represents at Easter time. Our new improved strain, planted in 6-in. pots, of medium tall sizes, are unsurpassed in the size and color of the flowers. The flowers are about twice the size of the old ordinary varieties, has big heads of flowers and good foliage; some of the plants are as big as a small apple basket. Price: 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 per plant; dozen or more, same price.

Ficus Elastica or Rubber Plants, in fine condition, perfect leaves, 7-in. pots, specimen plants, 28 to 30 in. high, $1.00; 6 to 6½-in. pots, 25 to 28 in. high, 50c to 75c; 5¼ to 5½ in. pots, 25c, 30c to 35c.

Araucarias Our Specialty.

We are the largest importers of these lovely decorative plants, the Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta Compacta and Glauca, the choicest last spring (1911) importation, ready for immediate shipment. It is of no use to look elsewhere for cheaper prices. We now control and will control the market of the Araucarias in the future.

Look! Bargains in Araucaria Excelsa. Such low prices as are quoted below were never known in the history of Araucaria Excelsa. Just think! 5½-in. pots, 3-4 tiers, 16 to 18 in. high, 50c to 60c.

Plants, 5½-6-7 in. pots, raised from top cuttings, no seedlings, 15-18-20-25-30 in. high, 4-5-6 tiers, 2-3-4-5 years old, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. We give big value for your money. Just think! An elephant, 6-in. pot, 4 years old, 4-5-6 tiers, 20-25 in. high, for only 75c; a jumbo, 6-in. pot, 5 year old, 25 in. and over, as wide as a bushel basket, 5-6 tiers, for only $1.00; and what do you think! a holy terror, 30 to 40 in. and over, 5-6-7 tiers, worth $2.00, for only $1.25 to $1.50.

We also have the nicest Araucaria Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, 3 to 4 tiers, 18 to 24 in. high, 25 to 30 in. across, 6-in. pots, a house full, perfect jewels, for only $1.25 to $1.50, worth $1.75 to $2.00.

Von Sion Daffodils (double nosed), best double yellow Narcissus in cultivation, three bulbs planted in a 5½ to 6-in. pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Murillo, Tournesole and Red Tulips in 9-in. pans, 7 to 9 bulbs in a pan, Asparagus around, 60c; 10-in., 75c.

Tulips, Tournesole, double, red and yellow variegated, and Murillo, beautifully shaded rose pink, three bulbs in one pot (4-in.), $15.00 per 100 pots; $1.80 per dozen.

Hyacinths, 3 plants in a 9-in. pan, edging of Asparagus Plumosus, 60c per pan; 10-in. pans, trimmed with Asparagus also, 75c.

Hyacinths of our own importation, four best colors. Gertrude, best pink; King of the Blues, best blue; Grand Maitre, light blue; La Grand, esse, best white; 4-in. pots, now outside in cold frame, covered with leaves; two weeks will force them out into bloom; in bud or bloom, $12.00 per 100.

Dielytra Spectabilis (Bleeding Heart), hardy, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c and 50c.

Ipomea Noctiflora, our so well-known pure white, waxy Moonvine, bearing flowers very fragrant and as big as a saucer, 2½-in. pots; will make good stock for you to propagate from; $5.00 per 100.

Latania Borbonica (Chinese Fan Palms), 30 to 35 in. high, 6 to 7 in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; made up of 3 6-in. pots, 25 to 30 in. high, 50c to 60c.

Areca Lutescens, 3 plants in a 4-in. pot, 20c to 25c; 5¼-in., 3 plants in a pot, 30c.

Cocos Palms, Cocos Weddelliana, large 3-in. pots, 15c, 20c to 25c.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 6-in. pots, 25, 30, 35, 40-45 in. high, 4, 5, 6 years old, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Kentia Belmoreana, single plants, 5½-6-7 in. pots, 5-6-7 years old, 25-30-35-40 in. high, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Importer, Wholesale Grower and Shipper of Potted Plants,

When in Philadelphia

BE SURE TO LOOK US UP.

We are easily reached—only 25 miles from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming, when you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-in. pots to 12-in. tubs. We are strong in in 7-in., 9-in. and 12-in. tubs (made-up and single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

Rowayton Greenhouses at Rowayton, Conn.

Greenhouses

NOT those heavy, short-lived wooden ones—no, not that kind, but fine, light, enduring Iron Frame Houses that will grow the very best plants possible. Houses you won't have to spend a cent on for repairs, aside from painting, for years to come. Houses built right, ventilated right, and heated right—houses backed by over a quarter of a century of experience.

If you want your house to have curved eaves, we will gladly build it that way. Send for our supply book. It is a conclusive bit of evidence.

The Insecticide that kills plant Lice of every species

Grand Rapids, Mich., February 6, '12.
THE APHINE MANUFACTURING CO.,
Madison, N. J.:

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of January 27th, will say that we have been using FUNGINE on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the APHINE for lice on lettuce, instead of — (a nicotine preparation) and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots. If so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this FUNGINE as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.

Yours very truly,

A Greenhouse Layout with a Reason

This is the U-Bar the bar that makes U-Bar Greenhouses the Famous Greenhouses They Are.

Compactness was desired—the height of productiveness was required. Attractive it must be. Economical to heat and work were things the gardeners insisted on. The U-Bar plan, design and construction won out because it stood the test of all the requirements. The reason—the main reason—is the U-Bar—the Bar that makes the U-Bar greenhouses the famous greenhouses they are. No other curved eave house has the U-Bar, so don't be misled by houses that look like the U-Bar. Send for catalog. It gives another view and a plan of this particular house.

We had done as much as we could to give the plants all they wanted, but there were two things that we could not supply them with sufficiently—air and light

The excellent results that we obtained last year with our mums were to a great extent due to the extreme lightness, proper design and construction of this new house.

Gentle Annie.

The time approaches, Mr. Man, when you will take the sprinkling can and rake and spade 'and hoe, and blow yourself for sacks of seeds which will produce all kinds of weeds when they begin to grow. It is a strange, noteworthy thing that with the coming of the spring man yearns to delve the ground, to labor with the fragrant soil as Father Adam used to toil, to fuss and potter 'round. He dreams of finer cabbage heads and cucumbers and onion beds than ever man has seen, and he will raise the finest slaw and succotash, both boiled and raw, that ever wore the green. Experience might teach him that his visions will be broken flat, his garden be a fake, that all the harvest he will get will be a rippling rill of sweat, and fifty kinds of ache. But man forgets his former woes when Gentle Annie comes and blows upon her fairy pipe; once more the luscious soil he digs and plants again his thingmyjigs, his cauliflower and tripe. We've civilized the human race until there scarcely is a trace of old primeval man, save when the springtime makes us ache to tinker with the hoe and rake and spade and sprinkling can.—Walt Mason.

SUGGESTIONS FOR EASTER

Preparing for Easter.

Easter, the great flower day of the year, is now almost at hand and the growers and retailers must both be prepared to meet the demand that will probably tax all the ability and capacity possessed. The grower has, of course, been a long time making preparations to have the stock in the pink of condition and the retailer should also provide himself with all the necessary stock and accessories at as early a date as possible. The supplies should be procured at least two weeks before the great day, so that the energies of all the force can be expended upon finishing the product, waiting upon the trade and seeing that the deliveries are properly made and the decorations arranged in an artistic manner. The stock of baskets for plants, ribbons for decorating them and tying the flowers, paper, boxes and numberless other supplies should all be looked over and where necessary replenished. It is poor business to wait until the last minute and worry over these details which can be attended to early and take time that can be more advantageously spent with the other necessary work. There will probably be something called for, the sale of which cannot be foreseen, so it is best to get everything that it is known will be required as early as possible.

Whatever plants are to be procured should be ordered early, and wherever it is possible a visit made to the growers' houses and a personal selection made. The winter has been unusually severe and it has been very difficult in many cases to keep up the necessary temperatures, and even where the heat has been maintained the plants have been retarded, so that much will depend on the three weeks before Easter to have them in the best of condition and it will pay the buyer to look over the stock. This should be done early for the large buyers sometimes place their orders two months before Easter in order that they may be assured of the stock and of a good selection. No two plants grow alike and although as far as descriptions go they are the same, in pot, size and bloom, yet placed side by side one may be much more valuable than the other, so there is much in selection, and it is a great advantage to anyone to go and inspect the plants in the greenhouses and to pick out the ones desired and have them held until the proper time of delivery. If baskets of plants are to be made up, and this is one of the growing features of the Easter trade, a supply of small ferns, asparagus and other greens will be necessary to properly finish them and these can be obtained at any time and be on hand when wanted. To successfully conduct a business when such a large increase for a few days is expected, it is necessary to do everything that can be done previous to the demands of the customers and at as early a date as possible.

Flowering Plants.

Easter has become a great plant day, not only for church decorations, but it has also been a growing practice with the public to make presents of blooming plants to friends at this time. First among these are the lilies which are grown by the thousands for the day. With all the disadvantages of weather and temperature which the grower has experienced this year, it looks as if the supply would be good, and it certainly ought to be, for it is comparatively easy to have lilies in bloom the first week in April. The general reports are that most of the stock is of excellent quality, the only complaint heard is that many of the Lilium Giganteum are quite short in length. The prices quoted, notwithstanding the increased cost of growing, are about the same as in previous years. Next to the lilies are the azaleas, and these are in very fine condition. The reports last fall were that, owing to the poor growing season in Belgium last summer the azaleas might be poor, but although the prices were slightly advanced and there was a shortage in some of the popular sizes, yet the quality seen on the market this winter compares very favorably with what has been offered in previous years. The varieties grown are those which have attained the greatest popularity with the trade, Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Prof. Wolters, Empereur de Brazil, Niobe, Dr. Moore, Apollo, Bernard Andrea Alba, De Schryveriana and others not so well known. Bulbs are always grown in great quantities for Easter and thousands of pans of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths are annually bloomed for this great flower day. They make a gorgeous show and are emblematic of the awakening of spring which Easter symbolizes, and as they can be produced and marketed at a low price they are great favorites at this time. Lily of the valley in pans are one of the most popular Easter plants and these when well grown find a very ready sale.

Plant Baskets.

The sale of plant baskets at Easter is made as important a feature as it is at Christmas and they occupy a prominent place in the trade of the principal stores. They can be made up in beautiful combinations at this time, for there is a wealth of material for this work. The baskets can be procured at very low prices with metal pans in which the plants are placed, and by careful planning and buying, taking combinations can be put up at reasonable prices. A point that seems to be lost sight of by many growers is that in these plant baskets or boxes can be used much stock that cannot be disposed of in any other way. The most successful and careful grower of plants is sure to have some that are not perfect specimens, either growing more or less one-sided or having one part not well covered with bloom, and these can be used advantageously in their plant combinations, making the basket less expensive and at the same time getting good returns for what would otherwise be a loss. This is a line of the business which ordinarily requires a fair degree of salesmanship to properly show the advantages of these beautiful offerings, but when they are properly put up and well shown they are a valuable feature of the Easter trade.

Flowering Shrubs.

The flowering shrubs are forced in large quantities, lilacs especially being great favorites when the dwarf plants are to be obtained well covered with flowers. Both the white and purple are grown, Marie Legraye being the popular white and Charles X the purple. Wistarias are also to be seen and they make a beautiful decorative plant when well flowered, but they are among the most expensive offerings. The flowering prunus are forced by many growers and add to the great variety to be had at this season, and the metrosideros, or bottle brush, is always the cause of much comment and many inquiries by the customers if well bloomed.

The flowering plants are made very attractive, either by placing the pots in pot covers or by wrapping them in Porto Rican or raffia matting, or crepe paper, but care should be taken in the selection of colors that they are either in harmony or of decided contrasts, especially is this so with the shades of pink and red. Many plants are nicely ornamented by the use of ribbons, but here again the best of taste is required, for it is very easy to overdo this and also to injure the attractiveness of the plant by a poor selection of color.

Rambler Roses.

The rambler roses now occupy a very important place with the principal stores. The great improvement in varieties which has been made during the past few years has enabled the grower to present these beautiful plants in a great variety of colors ranging from the brightest crimson through the shades of pink to white and the Baby rambler produces a fine small plant well covered with bloom. The rambler roses are grown not only in bush form but in many grotesque shapes, being trained as ships, umbrellas and in basket form. Hydrangeas, if well bloomed, are among the most popular Easter plants and they are very decorative, either in church or residence. While these can never be grown and offered at low prices, for a plant with four to six large heads will require much valuable space for a long period, yet they last a long time in bloom and the purchasers get their full value if they will but take proper care of the plant. Spireas are one of the best low-cost plants of the time. The older varieties make a splendid show for a little money and can be used very largely in church decorations. In selling the plant or in placing it in a decoration be sure that it is well watered before it leaves the store or greenhouse. Genistas are grown in quantity for Easter and many growers have them in fancy forms, such as baskets, pillars, pyramids and balls. Another yellow flowering plant that is highly regarded in some sections is the acacia, beautifully grown specimens of these plants being displayed by the large dealers. Cyclamen in splendid shape are invariably offered for Easter and primulas, especially P. obconica, are grown extensively for sale at this time and many of the heaths are produced for the Easter trade. Another beautiful plant that is largely grown in the bougainvillea and splendid specimens are produced of this showy plant and they always attract attention.

The Great Commercial Establishments.

PROMOTERS AND PIONEERS.

Paper read by J. Otto Thilow, president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, before the Baltimore Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 11, 1912.

I am always pleased to look over an assembly of this kind, particularly because it is a gathering of horticulturists; it is like looking upon a bouquet of mixed roses, admiring some more than others, not because some are more attractive than others or better looking, but because they blend so beautifully. I tell you why they blend; it is because they are not all exactly alike, but their achievements are the same, and so it is with the florist and his wife and helpmeet. In no other vocation known to us is there a business or an occupation in which the husband and wife are so directly associated as in yours; and I am not saying this flatteringly; you know whereof I speak. I say the florist business appeals to the fair sex because it is in harmony with her inert nature, and because of this she seems to place herself as an important factor in her husband's business.

It may seem strange to you when I say that the first treatise on horticulture in this country was written by a woman. She was Mrs. Martha Logan, who lived in Charleston, S. C., the daughter of Robert Daniel, one of the last of the proprietary governors of that state. She was 70 years old when she wrote her treatise on gardening. She died in 1779 at the age of 77 years. Far back in the knowledge of the oldest of you, in the present days, and for the ages to come, woman has been and will be the chief admirer of your product and the one for whose especial benefit the richness and perfection of the flower is produced. It is therefore nothing extraordinary why the ladies are enjoying your anniversary with you, but it would be rather remarkable if they were not.

I cannot help but refer to the influence of horticulture upon the minds of those who are disposed to follow it as a vocation. This was forcibly brought to my attention when, during last summer and prior to the convention which was held in your city, several of your number were organized as a committee to conduct the details and affairs of such a convention. They were, as I hear, assembled in a meeting when, during that time, a terrific hall storm swept over your city and demolished glass and stock amounting to thousands of dollars, and which directly affected most, if not all of these here and met them individually, men who were devoted to the trust imposed upon them. When we came instead of greeting us with tears of sorrow and remorse, they had beaming smiles and cheerful advice for every one they met. Is there anything else besides the determination to suppress the effect of the stroke caused by an accidental happening of the elements? I believe I am right when I say that the man who is abreast with nature in his daily vocation gets a touch of the dealings of the Divine, and is well aware that the world was not made for him alone, but believes that Providence has good fortune in store for him, if by patience and close application he awaits the rewards which he merits. And so it is with the man in agriculture, who depends on the soil to unlock its storehouse of food for the crops, and upon the sunlight for its warmth and evaporating power of the moisture from the fields with crops, and the clouds to replenish that evaporation, yea, one constant activity is Dame Nature, as well as untiring and restless action of him who reaps the harvest; but sometimes the harvest is meagre and losses great, yet the hope that another year the elements may be contrary and give him a return greater than looked for. So it is with us, we who in our profession are touched and guided by nature's conditions, have realized that we are dependable beings, it is possible that our submissiveness is a touch of the Supreme, He who has much to do with perfecting the plant and flower with which we have fondled and tried to improve.

But is it so with the man who is wrapped in commercial greed, his mind so concentrated in what he might make purchase through the rise in stocks, his gains are not through honest, healthful toil, but often through the downfall of some other are his coffers replenished; and when calamity does come, and perhaps heavy, then his brain broods, his mind becomes a blank, and desperation often finds the easiest course, that of suicide.

I believe that the calling or profession called horticulture reaches out for men and women who are responsive. I believe, with but few exceptions, those in horticultural pursuits are fond of it and love their work. Why is it the florist will walk through his houses every day and Sundays repeatedly? The plants have not changed their location, but he is watching how they respond to the treatment he is giving them, and should he look upon them every minute of the day they are different every time he looks.

EASTER BASKET BY W. J. SMYTH, CHICAGO.

All Yellow, Genista, Yellow Hyacinth Tied with Yellow Chiffon.

Present-day horticulture has reached a standard which would seem hard to maintain in the future years. It is imperative to have the carnation and rose, and every flower grown for utility, with long stems, rich healthy foliage, and good color, instead of using the fern leaf frond for the basket or plateau, the whole plant is imbedded in moss to give it durability. The flower and ribbon harmonize in the decoration or design, the ribbon is made in colors, bearing the name of the flower it most nearly resembles.

What did most of you say when it was announced that a sweet pea society was to be formed? Later a dahlia society, chrysanthemum and peony society, carnation and gladiolus society? Did you not think some enthusiastic connoisseur has been a little aggressive? Not so with the rose society, for she still reigns as queen.

May I call attention to the room in your armory last August, where some of the new sorts of gladiolus were staged awaiting the judges' decision to crown them with the honors which quality and distinction claimed for them, as well as the display in the large hall? Have these societies not stimulated attention to these specific classes of flowers? From the gladioli we can now get even the Philadelphia colors, blue and yellow. And so has been the same marked advance made in the flowers in whose name like societies have been formed.

When we look around us and into our neighboring states and cities, to even beyond Chicago and St. Louis, and count the glass by the thousand acres for the present-day consuming market, flowers of higher prices as quality demands, than ever dreamed of 20 years ago. The demand of the private users of plants for the ornamental garden in perennials alone has set the world to thinking. Some of the standard varieties known to the most of you for many years, and grown in limited quantities only, in many cases are used in one private estate to a greater extent than were grown in the whole country in the days when your society was launched into existence. When we consider that not less than 25,000 species of plants are in cultivation, and each having its own requirements, there is no art probably in which the separate details are so many as in horticulture, and partly for that reason only the plant and flower lover is drawn into its ranks.

There are today, roughly estimated, 16,000 florists in the United States and doing business. These are not confined to any specific locality; they are in the extreme north, south, east and west. Nature asserts herself in her flora wherever the sun shines, and the refreshing dews in even a dry land is as a nectar to the thirsty rootlets.

In the city of Nome, Alaska, after the first gathering of the social set, it was found to be an apology for form without the flower and decorative to give tone and color, so a glass house was built and one who had the inspiration settled himself in the business of florist, who is now supplying the needs of all social events, yea, even in that ice-bound region, if fuel can be procured, the demands of the present day will support a florist even amid the rigors of an extreme climate.

It is not possible to give any more than a superficial glance at what is going on in our country today in commercial horticulture, or what we understand directly as the florist business. In enumerating some of the large establishments (as many will be overlooked), we might glance at the probable area of glass which the florists of this country keep busy. It is roughly estimated that from 49 to 50 millions of square feet of glass is the producing area for cut flowers and plants growing. West of the Mississippi the Colorado Springs Floral Company, Valentine at Denver, and the Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., at Independence, Mo., are the largest. There are no figures as to the extent of the commercial greenhouse glass in the vicinity of Chicago. The census of 1900 gave the then area as 5,461,030 square feet, and the glass area of Illinois as 8,461,541. The largest establishment of that time was approximately 600,000 feet. In the twelve years which have elapsed the glass area may be conservatively estimated as being doubled. These latter point to the fact that where the largest concern in 1900 had 600,000 feet of glass, there now are two concerns that may be credited with from 1,250,000 to 1,500,000 feet. Therefore, the largest concern has more than doubled and the growth of one of the smaller concerns has been so great that it has passed the establishment which was largest ten years ago. All the big places in Chicago are devoted practically exclusively to roses and carnations, with such minor crops as lilies, sweet peas, bulb stock and other cut flower crops. There are only two or three moderate-sized places that are growing pot plants, such as palms and blooming stock for the holidays. A large number of the small places are largely in Boston ferns and bedding stock. Some of the veterans of today and well known in the trade are Pehlmann Bros. and Peter and George Reinberg of Chicago; Bassett & Washburn, C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee; J. M. Gasser Co. of Cleveland; E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; J. Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit; W. J. Palmer & Son of Buffalo; J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs; E. H. R. Green, Dallas, Tex.; Randolph & McClements, Pittsburg; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Julius Roehrs, Charleston Hill, N. J.; L. B. Coddington, New Providence, N. J.; H. A. Dreer, Riverton, N. J.; The Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co., Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; Gude Bros., Washington; Bochove Bros., Kalamazoo, Mich.; Joseph Heacock, Jenkintown, Pa.; Adolph Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.; Thomas Roland of Nahant, Mass., and

Wm. Sim of Cliftondale, Mass., and many thousand feet devoted to vegetables also. We might note that there is an even distribution the country overcomposing this great area—and many confine themselves to specialties. I will ask pardon for the many not mentioned, but not having sufficient time in gleaning in detail, I submit this to you in part only.

The modern details of one of the large establishments may interest you, with just a glance, containing 900,000 square feet of glass, 18 acres; 250 acres in cultivation and grass land, 300 employes, 100,000 roses grown for cut flowers, 700,000 grafted plants this season, 300,000 own-root roses, 1,000,000 bedding plants, 1,000,000 chrysanthemums propagated, 200,000 chrysanthemums grown for flowers, 300,000 lily of the valley yearly, 45,000 carnations in flower, 250,000 cuttings sold yearly, 150,000 lilies flowered yearly, 75,000 lilies for Easter, three 300-foot houses with hydrangeas and Baby Ramblers for Easter, 25,000 orchids, 160 cows and other stock on the farm to produce the plant food, 25 horses and four automobiles to do the work and 8,000 to 9,000 tons of coal yearly. These are the details of a place of nearly 1,000,000 feet of glass at Cromwell, Conn., of A. N. Pierson Co. This will give some conception of the extent of the producing capacity of one of the large establishments of its kind.

Then again, we turn to one of another kind, with a half-million feet of glass: 300 acres used for bedding, over one million feet of lumber for packing boxes, 160 tons of paper for wrapping plants, 6,500 tons of coal. These are the accessories to the production of 3,500,000 ferns, 750,000 palms, 350,000 roses, in large pots; 300,000 dahlias, 150,000 perennials, and a proportionate amount of miscellaneous plants, to supply the retail catalogue demands and florist stock. You will accept this as an outline of the plant department of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Riverton, N. J.

It would be of great interest to a gathering of florists such as the one before me at this time, to give a detailed account of many of the large establishments in our country as they are equipped today, particularly the mammoth establishments of Chicago. That which is of great interest in connection with the now vast industry, which we can grasp only in part, is the demand for so enormous an output. We at once realize that the American people are determined to beautify their homes, enhance their surroundings and decorate lavishly with cut flowers.

Do you think for one moment that the Florists' Club—your club, and all others which have been formed in our land, are not the bulwark of this advancement, is there any other organization half as portentous with even a shade of unselfishness as that which is paramount among the florists? We foster no trust, for our product is too sacred; we only apply the means and conditions and the Divine hand does the rest. Our coming together year after year in the conventions is to consider methods for the best of ourselves; no, not altogether, but for the best of every inhabitant of this free land.

We cannot and must not forget those big-hearted men and women who have figured as the pioneers, and were it not for their intense love for their vocation would, through hard struggle and discouragements, have fallen by the way. Many of them coming from the mother country, where they had imbibed the training from the rudiments into the broad experience which enabled them to leave to us legacies from which we often draw to help us in our problems. Many of these are numbered with those who have gone beyond, and thank God for those who are still with us.

The first of the pioneers of Chicago were Samuel Brooks and Edgar Sanders. The latter built his first greenhouse in 1857 and opened his first retail store on Lake street in 1864. Following these the third establishment was that of William & Wittbold. This still is in existence as the George Wittbold Co. The oldest living florist is Andrew McAdams, who started at his present stand at Fifty-third street shortly after the civil war, and then he was miles in the country. Now the residence district extends miles beyond him.

An abbreviated list of names of our noted pioneers, whose names (though many have ceased their labors), will evoke from you memories of their activity, and to whom much of the success of the florists is due, and those who are yet with us, are ever active, and hold their ideal as their goal:

and a great host of others, many obscure in the public eye, yet active and vigilant in promoting their much loved profession. We pay tribute to many who in private life have enjoyed horticulture, and spent much of their wealth to promote the taste, viz: Hunnewell, Shaw, Dana, Egan, Frick, Busch, Sargent and others. Now, my friends, I cannot close without referring to one who is dear to you, and of whom you are justly proud. Were we to enumerate the great work and the long list of roses which have brought into the hands of those who have handled them untold wealth, we would present an exemplar whose great work many would be proud to imitate—a man modest and unassuming, but so thoroughly wrapped up in his art and profession that he forgets himself and still permits his nimble fingers to continue in the almost secret art, to produce perfection in new things, as all of his productions have been. Born in Freiburg, Germany, 1833, the birth-place of my dear mother, came to America at the age of 20, remained in New York but two years, then coming to Baltimore where he has been since. What he has done for horticulture I need not tell. I congratulate the Baltimore club upon having among them one who stands at the zenith of horticultural masters. I refer to our good old friend, John Cook.

Fertilizing Lawns.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

I want to replenish a large lawn which has given a great deal of trouble and desire to use sulphate of potash, acid phosphate and sulphate of ammonia. Would it be advisable to rake the lawn thoroughly and then apply the fertilizer before sowing the seed, or should the seed be sown and the fertilizer applied after it had germinated? L. E. Ohio.

If it is desired to treat the lawn soil chemically with the fertilizers named, and it may be necessary, they should be put on before the seed is sown that they may be washed into the soil some time before. It would be well even to sow on the snow or directly after its disappearance. There would surely be injury to the tender grass even if not the seed itself, if sown later. We have sowed many tons of bone this winter and even with this we like the first chemical change to take place before contact with the sod, so it is sown on the snow. The chemicals named would be much stronger and liable to burn unless distributed with a machine on the lawn.

Reseeding may be done as soon as possible after the sod has dried out, raking with iron rakes to stir the surface, then mix the seed with half-dry loam and half-pulverized sheep manure and sow broadcast. It is better, however, to use the "Velvetlawn" seeder, going over the lawn both ways and then spread the loam and manure, the seeder does good work and will pay for itself the first season by the saving of seed and its even distribution where large areas are to be cared for. Spring Floral Arrangement.

It sounds, perhaps paradoxical to say that white gives color. But take a pot of pink hyacinths and another of red tulips and put in between them a plant of a large white primrose, and you can then decide whether color is gained or lost. Use this combination in three rows in a long basket or box, adding low ferns as a finish. This can be used to advantage in any private house and is most appropriate and charming where there are large mirrors that come down to the floor. In foyers of theaters or in lobbies the box can be extended and used where gilded mirrors are well in place. This idea for boxes will give an indescribable brightness and springtime cheer to dark places which are to be decorated or to dimly lighted places. Care should be exercised not to crowd the boxes or baskets. A couple of pots of white primroses, a plant or two of crimson, and perhaps a little blue flower; these with the green leaves would be quite sufficient. White weakens color when in a vase or in anything where there is a little dab of one color and then an atom of white. Then there can be no real color, nothing but mud-diness which should be avoided.

The latest Parisian craze in flowers is the use made of green in everything and the immense effect thus produced. In the Easter baskets there is a lot of green and moss and perhaps but two plants in flower. Setting off one gem is far more the fashion than crowding which causes them to detract from each other's beauty. Each flower is thus allowed to be distinct. Things are on a large scale, one passes under a flower vase often in going to dinner—a tall vase on a side table, with really gigantic flowers, lilies, lilacs, with great roses and with such large green leaves that it gives the place an oriental and beautiful strangeness. Of course, all things of this kind must suit the room in which they are placed.

The best idea now in arranging vases of flowers is to show each flower separately,—let each flower repose quietly and calmly upon a bed of green, which is after all the natural view of flowers.

A pretty fashion for bouquets is the kind of fern-shaped spray of green down the bouquet between each little group of flowers. Take five or six separate bunches of green, arranged first separately—some fern, for example, or sprays of rose leaves, and then these sprays are fastened to the center, one after each little group of sweet peas or violets. The effect is exceedingly good, and all delicate foliage is exquisite for this purpose. Small pink rose buds combined with lily of the valley are pretty in this arrangement and so are cornflowers.

For a table center piece Selaginella denticulata, commonly known as lycopodium, raised in the center and combined with red roses and freesia is very effective. A. E. KLUNDER.

Bride's Arm Bunch.

A medium priced bridal bouquet is often desired by the customer and yet to be made of the more expensive flowers, and a bunch to be carried in the hollow of the arm can be arranged very artistically and not many flowers be used in its construction. The Louis XIV bridal bunch, which we illustrate, is a striking example of such an arrangement and is one of the beautiful pieces of work of George M. Geraghty, manager of Dunlop's, Toronto, Ont., Can. This bunch was made of white roses with a few sprays of lily of the valley intermingled, arranged loosely with Asparagus plumosus to give it a lighter appearance, tied with a satin ribbon with a bow of chiffon, the showers are sprays of swainsona tied with baby ribbon and it is a very effective arrangement which can be made at a moderate price.

In using roses in such an arrangement all the thorns should be removed or damage to the trousseau may result or the painful prick of a thorn may be the cause of an agonized moment to the bride. The size of such a bunch will sometimes be dependent on the stature of the bride, as will also the length of the bows and ends of the ribbons. A petite bride would look overflowered with a bunch that would be of appropriate size for one of larger proportions, and these small details are very often the features that give all floral effects the proper finish. A bunch similar to this can, of course, be made much more elaborate by using a larger quantity or more expensive flowers, as there is no limit to the arrangement, but it can also be made at a moderate price and be very effective.

BRIDE'S ARM BUNCH

A New Break in Begonias.

The introduction of B. socotrana in the eighties of last century was taken advantage of by the hybridist, and numerous varieties have since then been raised therefrom. Of hybrids between Begonia socotrana and the tuberous-rooted section the first was John Heal, which flowered in 1883. According to "Hortus Veitchi" only a single plant of this particular cross was obtained, and from that all those now in cultivation were derived. This variety was distributed in 1885. After the advent of John Heal a number of other varieties were raised, some with single, and others with semi-double blossoms, many of which are now exceedingly popular. Practically all of these have flowers of a carmine, scarlet, or rosy-carmine tint. It was, therefore, somewhat of a surprise, at the meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society, on November 7, to see three distinct varieties shown by J. Veitch and Son.

These varieties were obtained by the intercrossing of B. socotrana with a yellow-flowered variety of the tuberous-rooted class. This latter color was present to a greater or lesser extent in the flowers of each of these shown, while in addition the plants differed from the socotrana hybrids already in cultivation by their branching, sturdy habit, and particularly in the large size of the flowers. In this respect they were the equal of a good tuberous-rooted kind. The three varieties shown were Acquisition, pink, with an orange suffusion; Exquisite, deep pink, shaded with carmine towards the edges of the petals, and the centre of the flower lit up with orange; Her Majesty, warm orange, with a reddish tinge, especially at the edges. Such subtle tints are difficult to describe, and it is rare to find two who see eye to eye in such matters. There can, however, be no difference of opinion that these distinct and beautiful varieties are a decided acquisition for winter decorations.—The Gardeners' Magazine.

stairs and along the balcony on the right. This exhibit contained fine specimens of palms, dracænas and other decorative plants and cinerarias, cyclamen, and large quantities of bulbous stock. On the left balcony was a similar display from Lincoln Park. The balcony in front was covered with lilies, and the ceiling was hung with southern smilax. The effect upon entering was very beautiful. Back of the lilies was the orchestra which furnished a musical programme every afternoon and evening. At the other end of the balcony was a large display of blooming and decorative plants exhibited by Frank Oechslin, which contained marguerites, cyclamen, cinerarias, azaleas, rhododendrons, genistas, and pans of bulbous flowers backed and interspersed with palms, dracænas and ferns.

The prizes for flowering plants brought forth some keen competition from F. Oechslin, N. W. Harris, Peter Schilt, gardener for Kenneth Barnhart, R. J. Southerton, Fritz Bahr, Vaughan's Seed Store and J. Wolneiwicz. Frank Oechslin was the winner with azaleas with finely bloomed plants. The Cineraria stellata exhibited by N. W. Harris were beautiful plants of a splendid strain, the colors being exceptionally bright and of good form and the plants large and well grown. R. J. Southerton showed large cyclamen full of flowers and the prize for Primula obconia was closely contested by Peter Schilt, J. Wolneiwicz and Frank Oechslin, all three showing splendidly grown plants of the highest quality, the former winning. Fritz Bahr showed well bloomed plants of ericas. Vaughan's Seed Store were the winners in the rhododendrons with finely bloomed plants. The bulbous plants were a grand display of hyacinths, tulips and narcissi, the exhibitors being Frank Oechslin, August Jurgens, Fritz Bahr and E. G. Uihlein, and all displayed stock of excellent merit. F. Oechslin was the winner in hyacinths, showing finely grown pans

THE FIRST CHICAGO SPRING SHOW.

The Closing Report.

The first spring flower show ever held by the Horticultural Society of Chicago was opened at the Art Institute on Michigan avenue Tuesday, March 12, and continued through the week until Sunday, March 17, a preliminary report of the first two days appearing in our last issue. The Art Institute is open to the public on Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays, and on those three days of the exhibition the building was crowded with residents of the city, the attendance being so large on Sunday that guards were stationed at the doors of the room in which the roses were displayed denying admittance to more until some had passed out of the other side, and allowing them to enter only in single file. The attendance on the pay days, when the admission was 50 cents, was also very gratifying, considering that on three of the six days admission was free, the regular price for admission to the Institute on those days being but 25 cents. The total attendance amounted to over 47,000, the record for the several days being: Tuesday, 1,602; Wednesday, 9,022; Thursday, 3,109; Friday, a very stormy day, 1,888; Saturday, 14,171; Sunday, 17,406.

It being the first time the society had ever attempted a show in the spring the management was at a loss to know for what to prepare, but the growers responded manfully with plants and flowers that filled many of the rooms of the upper floor, and under the able direction of George Asmus the exhibitors arranged the displays in an admirable manner. The exhibits were rearranged each day, which, although it entailed considerable labor, yet gave the exhibit a different appearance to the patrons from day to day. While the building in many ways is not adapted to the holding of a flower show yet the beautiful architecture and the paintings, statuary and sculpture made a splendid setting for the plants and flowers. The adaptability of the halls provoked much discussion, many saying that the pictures and statuary took interest from the flowers, while others could not but admire the beautiful backgrounds. As one of the successful floral decorators remarked, "What a beautiful setting for these plants and flowers!" The great objection, however, was the dividing the exhibit up into such small lots, by which the entity of the show was lost on the observer, and the size of the whole exhibition was not fully appreciated by many of the patrons.

The Exhibition.

Upon entering the doors of the building on the main stairway, rising to the upper floor where the exhibition was held, was a large display of magnificent blooming and decorative plants from the West Parks which continued up the several flights of of Grand Maitre, L. Innocence, Gert-rude, Moreno and Queen of the Blues. The contest in tulips was very close, both F. Oechslein and A. Jurgens displaying beautiful pots of the bright flowers; particularly noticeable being Coleur Cardinal and Mon Tresor. In narcissi these two exhibitors found a worthy rival in Fritz Bahr and each got a share of the awards. The lily of the valley shown by H. N. Bruns were beautiful pots and an exhibit of amaryllis by E. G. Uihlein attracted considerable attention, the former being very large and of bright and varied colors. Poehlmann Bros. Co. were the winners in the Easter lily classes, receiving a silver medal. John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., exhibited Richardia Elliottiana, the yellow calla, in pots and John Reardon, Iowa State College, Ames, Ia., showed cut blooms of the same flower.

Ferns.

The premiums for ferns were contested by many exhibitors, prominent being F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; Peter Schilt, Vaughan's Seed Store, Schiller, and N. W. Harris. F. R. Pierson Co. showed some large specimens of nephrolepis, the display of the original Boston fern with 13 of its progeny or sports being a very interesting exhibit. This contained specimens of N. Bostoniensis, N. elegantissima, N. Peirsoni, N. Muscosa, N. viridissima, N. Giatrasui, N. Whitmani, N. elegantissima compacta, N. superbissima, N. Harrisii, N. magnifica, N. Scholzei and N. Scottii. This firm was also winner in many classes for specimens of the several varieties of the nephrolepis family. Peter Schilt captured first of N. Bostoniensis and N. Whitmani. Schiller was first for Cibotium Schiedeii and N. W. Harris for Stag Horn fern. Vaughan's Seed Store won first in crotons. E. G. Uihlein for palms and Schiller for best basket of plants. A display of orchids by E. G. Uihlein contained many valuable plants including Vanda cerulea and tricolor in variety, cattleyas, cyripedium and a hybrid cattleya C. gigas X Laelia purpurea, a very beautiful bloom. Frank Smith's Son of Danville made an exhibit of well-grown flowering plants that included primulas, cinerarias, cyclamens, calceolarias, metrosideros and pansies.

Pot Roses.

In the east room were displayed the rambler and other pot roses, where Vaughan's Seed Store made a large display of these beautiful plants, winning all the premiums in these classes. The large collection covering not less than 100 square feet, contained finely grown specimens of the older varieties as well as the novelties, splendid plants of Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon, Wartburg, Newport Fairy, White Dorothy Perkins, Hiawatha and the baby rambler, Jessie, Phyllis and Baby Rambler. This firm was also the winner in the single specimens, showing well-grown plants of Lady Gay, Tausendschon, Hiawatha and a plant of Vielchenblau, the celebrated blue rose.

Roses and Carnations.

There were not many cut flowers exhibited the first day but a magnificent table of cut Cattleya Trianae and C. Schroederæ displayed by Charles Bond of Naperville and a large display of sweet peas and pansies from William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., of the highest quality were both awarded a grand silver medal.

Thursday was rose day and a gorgeous display of the queen of flowers greeted the visitor in the east room. Poehlmann Bros. Co., Wieter Bros. and Peter Reinberg all showed magnificent roses of the popular and standard varieties. Poehlmann Bros. Co. made a clean sweep of all the first prizes winning first in American Beauties, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, as well as in the novelties, Dark Pink Killarney (Mrs. Roosevelt), Double Pink Killarney, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Prince de Bulgarie (Mrs. Taft), and Melody. These roses were certainly as fine specimens as one is often privileged to see, but they were closely pushed by the other exhibitors, Wieter Bros. scoring second on American Beauty, Killarney and White Killarney with splendid blooms, and Peter Reinberg was awarded second on Richmond. Bassett & Washburn made a fine display of an assortment of roses of standard varieties that were nicely arranged but not entered for competition. The Metairie Ridge Nursery of New Orleans, La., exhibited an assortment of well-grown roses on Monday, that were of fine quality, as Harry Papworth said to show what could be done in the south. W. E. Trimble of Princeton showed roses of Killarney and White Killarney of good quality. E. G. Hill Co. showed the new rose, Sunburst, which attracted a great deal of attention.

The devotees of the "Divine Flower" took possession of the floor on Friday and a great display of carnations was staged by exhibitors from all over the western country, the principal exhibitors being Chicago Carnation Co., Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, Poehlmann Bros. Co., Wieter Bros., W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind.; C. H. Totty, Madison N. J.; E. G. Hill Co. and F. H. Lemon & Co., Richmond, Ind.; Northwestern Floral Co., Grosse Point; Riverbank Greenhouse, Geneva; C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Richard Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, O.; H. J. Symonds, Decorah, Iowa, and Mrs. Deere (Arvid Anderson, gardener), Moline. The class for 100 white brought 14 exhibitors which included elegant vases of Wodenethe, Alma Ward, White Enchantress and White Perfection. E. G. Hill Co. and C. H. Totty winning first and second, respectively, with the new white Wodenethe, and C. C. Pollworth Co. third with Alma Ward, the old standard varieties being left at the post by the new comers. In flesh pink another novelty won first, Richard Witterstaetter receiving the blue ribbon on Pres. J. A. Valentine, Princess Charming taking second for the Chicago Carnation Co. and Pink Delight, by E. G. Hill Co., third. Enchantress was shown in good form but could not win. Gloriosa was shown by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association and E. G. Hill Co. and they both showed splendid blooms.

Mrs. C. W. Ward was the winner of all the premiums in light pink, Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association winning first. Rose Pink Enchantress and Winsor were starters but did not finish. In the dark pinks another novelty was first. Washington entirely outclassed Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson. The scarlets were a close contest, Beacon, Scarlet Glow, Victory, Herald and a seedling having a close race, the Beacon shown by E. G. Hill Co. winning first with Scarlet Glow from the Chicago Carnation Co. and Poehlmann Bros. Co. second and third, respectively. Baur & Steinkamp exhibited a fine vase of their new scarlet St. Nicholas on Friday and this looks as if it would give all the scarlets a good race. Two new ones were shown in the variegated class, both under number, the Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association winning first with No. 4405 A.

The seedling classes produced some very meritorious varieties, particularly noticeable being a large dark pink, No. 150, which was shown by the Chicago Carnation Co. and awarded the sweepstake prize, and Commodore, a bright scarlet exhibited by E. G. Hill Co., Wodenethe, captured both prizes in the white.

Miscellaneous Classes.

Sweet peas, violets and other cut flowers were the attraction on Friday and the exhibitors of these flowers staged very fine blooms. Frank Felke, Wilmette, and Poehlmann Bros. Co. were the winners in sweet peas, the Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association in antirrhinums, H. N. Bruns in lily of the valley and Poehlmann Bros. Co. with extra fine mignonette. The Des Plaines Violet Co. was first with fine double violets and Loeffler & Benke of Watertown, Wis., were first with the single variety. Hunt Bros. of Park Ridge made a fine display of cut flowers including antirrhinum, stocks, mignonette, calendulas and sweet peas.

The judges had three strenuous days and many knotty problems to solve that tested their ability, but their decisions were all accepted as final and with good grace by the earnest exhibitors. The executive board of the Society of American Florists being in the city they officiated in that capacity. They were Richard Vincent, Jr., president, White Marsh, Md.; John Young, New York; Robert Craig, Philadelphia, Pa.; Harry A. Bunyard, New York; Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; E. Allan Peirce, Waltham, Mass., and John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind., assisted the first day by E. O. Orpet, Lake Forest Ill.

The Retailers.

An opportunity that was lost was presented to the retailers of the city at this show. Here were small rooms that were beautiful in themselves, which, with a little artistic taste, might have been made beautiful with floral decorations and the 47,000 visitors might have been shown not only what beautiful flowers and plants are grown, but how beautifully they can be arranged in a drawing room. Here was an opportunity to place before 50,000 flower lovers the best in floral ideas and, at the prices at which flowers were sold during the week, at a very small price in comparison with the advertisement which it would produce. These small rooms hung with beautiful paintings and furnished as beautifully would have made just the setting that an artist would have desired to decorate in the best of taste, but the opportunity was unfortunately allowed to slip by, and the large assemblage which any dealer would gladly pay a large sum to have inspect his work saw but a small attempt at any floral work. Schiller made a large exhibit of plants and some artistic work, a bridal muff of lily of the valley and sweet peas, a bridal bouquet of white roses and showers of lily of the valley and a well-arranged basket of roses were artistically made and their exhibit was crowded all the time. The E. Weinhoeber Co. occupied another room and exhibited a table of spring flowers in French pottery, a basket of roses and decorative plants. John Mangel arranged two baskets of roses that were in the large gallery and the Bohannon Floral Co. showed a large basket of beautiful White Killarney roses. This was all that the enterprising retailers did for this show which meant so much to the trade and business of the city.

During the evenings of the show lectures were delivered in Fullerton hall illustrated with stereopticon views by W. N. Rudd on "The Planting of Home Grounds," and by Prof. H. B. Dörner of the University of Illinois on "The Planting and Care of City and Suburban Lots." On Sunday afternoon, March 17, President Vincent of the Society of American Florists gave an address on "European Nurseries, Flower Markets and Exhibitions," which was also illustrated with stereopticon views. The lectures were all attended by an interested audience.

The Awards.

Flowering Plants—Miscellaneous.

Azalea Indica, best specimen plant, pink or rose—F. Oechsli, Chicago, first.
 Begonia, flowering, best six plants—N. W. Harris, Lake Geneva, Wis., first and second.
 Chieraria stellata, best six plants—N. W. Harris, first; Peter Schilt, second.
 Cyclamen, best 10 plants, not less than 8-inch pots—F. Oechsli, first; R. J. Southerton, Highland Park, Ill., second.
 Cyclamen, best specimen plant, not less than 8-inch pot—R. J. Southerton, first.

CHICAGO SPRING FLOWER SHOW.

First Prize Lily of the Valley, Exhibited by H. N. Bruns, Chicago.

CHICAGO SPRING FLOWER SHOW.

White Killarney Roses Exhibited by Wietor Bros., Chicago.

Ericas, best six plants, not less than three varieties—Fritz Bahr, Highland Park, Ill., first.
Ericas, best, any species, best specimen plant—Fritz Bahr, first.

Rhododendrons, best six plants, not less than three varieties—Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, first.

Rhododendrons, best plant, any color—Vaughan's Seed Store, first.

Primula kewensis, best six plants—Fritz Bahr, second.
Primula obconica, grandiflora or gigantea in variety, best 12 plants—Peter Schilt, Evanston, Ill., first; J. Wólniewicz, Chicago, second; F. Oechslin, third.

Any other primrose, best six plants—Vaughan's Seed Store, first.

One specimen flowering plant, other than above—Peter Schilt, first; Fritz Bahr, second.
Lily of the valley, best 12 pans, 25 to a pan—H. N. Bruns, Chicago, first; Aug. Jurgens, Chicago, second.

Best 4-foot window box filled with vines, foliage and flowering plants—N. W. Harris, first.

Flowering Plants—Bulbs.

Hyacinths, best six 10-inch pans, distinct varieties—F. Oechslin, first.

Hyacinths, best three 10-inch pans, white—F. Oechslin, first; A. Jurgens, second.

Hyacinths, best three 10-inch pans, pink or red—F. Oechslin, first.

Hyacinths, best three 10-inch pans, light blue—F. Oechslin, first; A. Jurgens, second.

Hyacinths, best three 10-inch pans, dark blue—F. Oechslin, first; A. Jurgens, second.

Hyacinths, best 50 single pots, not less than 10 varieties—E. G. Uihlein, Chicago, first.

Best 20 Easter lilies, one bulb to pot—Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, first; A. Jurgens, second.

Best 20 Easter lilies, one bulb to pot—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, silver medal.

Narcissus, large Trumpet, six 10-inch pans, in six varieties—A. Jurgens, second.

Narcissus, best three 10-inch pans, Empress—Fritz Bahr, first; A. Jurgens, second.

Narcissus, best three 10-inch pans, Emperor—A. Jurgens, second.

Narcissus, best three 10-inch pans, Golden Spur—A. Jurgens, first; F. Oechslin, second; Fritz Bahr, third.

Narcissus, best three 10-inch pans, Double Von Slon—F. Oechslin, first; Fritz Bahr, second.

Narcissus, best three 10-inch pans, any other double—Fritz Bahr, second.

Tulips, early single, best three 10-inch pans, white—F. Oechslin, first.

Tulips, early single, best three 10-inch pans, pink—A. Jurgens, first.

Tulips, early single, best three 10-inch pans, scarlet or crimson—F. Oechslin, first; A. Jurgens, second.

Tulips, early single, best three 10-inch pans, yellow—F. Oechslin, first; A. Jurgens, second.

Tulips, early single, best three 10-inch pans, not less than three varieties any other color—A. Jurgens, first.

Tulips, early double, best three 10-inch pans, not less than three varieties—F. Oechslin, first.

Miscellaneous spring bulbs and tubers other than above, best collection—E. G. Uihlein, first.

Orchids, collection, to cover not less than 50 square feet—E. G. Uihlein, first.

Flowering Plants—Roses.

Best display in pots or tubs, any or all classes not less than eight varieties, to occupy not less than 100 square feet, arranged for effect—Vaughan's Seed Store, first.

Best six climbing, or rambling, three or more varieties—Vaughan's Seed Store, first.

Best Lady Gay, specimen plant—Vaughan's Seed Store, first.

Best Tausendschon, specimen plant—Vaughan's Seed Store, first.

Best Hiawatha, specimen—Vaughan's Seed Store, first.

Best climbing, any other variety, specimen—Vaughan's Seed Store, first.

One specimen rose plant, any variety—Vaughan's Seed Store, first, silver medal.

Ferns.

Adiantum, best specimen, any variety—Peter Schilt, first; Vaughan's Seed Store, second.

Chytium Schiedel, best specimen—Schiller, Chicago, first.

Nephrolepis exaltata and its varieties, best display, one of each, pots not to exceed eight inches in diameter—F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., first.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, best specimen—Peter Schilt, first; F. R. Pierson Co., second; Vaughan's Seed Store, third.

Nephrolepis Scottii, best specimen—F. R. Pierson Co., first.

Nephrolepis, best specimen—F. R. Pierson Co., first.

Nephrolepis Piersoni elegantissima, best specimen—F. R. Pierson Co., first.

Nephrolepis Whitmani, best specimen—Peter Schilt, first.

Nephrolepis, best specimen any other variety—F. R. Pierson Co., 1st, silver medal.

Stag Horn fern, best specimen, any variety—N. W. Harris, first.

Palms and Foliage Plants.

One specimen palm, any variety, size to be considered—E. G. Uihlein, first; Vaughan's Seed Store, second.

Crotons, 15 plants in varieties, in not over 6-inch pot—Vaughan's Seed Store, first.

Crotons, best six plants, six varieties—Vaughan's Seed Store, first.

Basket or hamper of plants—Schiller, first; E. G. Uihlein, second.

Roses.

Best 100 American Beauty—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Wietor Bros., Chicago, second.

Best 100 Killarney—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Wietor Bros., second.

Best 100 White Killarney—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Wietor Bros., second.

Best 100 Dark Pink Killarney—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

Best 100 Double Pink Killarney—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

Best 100 Mrs. Aaron Ward—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

Best 100 Prince of Bulgaria—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

Best 100 Melody—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

Best 100 Richmond—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Peter Reinberg, second.

Best new rose, not disseminated, scoring 85 points, certificate of merit—E. G. Hill on Sunburst; Poehlmann Bros. Co., on Double White Killarney.

Carnations.

Best 100 blooms, white—E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., first, with Wodenethu; Charles H.

Totty, Madison, N. J., second, with Wodenethe; C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis., third; with Alma Ward.

Best 100 blooms, flesh pink—R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, first, with Pres. J. A. Valenteo; Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., second, with Princess Charming; E. G. Hill Co., third, with Pink Delight.

Best 100 blooms, light pink—Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, Morgan Park, first, with Mrs. C. W. Ward; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, with Mrs. C. W. Ward; C. C. Pollworth Co., third, with Mrs. C. W. Ward.

Best 100 blooms, dark pink—Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Washington; Victor Bros., second, with Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson; Poehlmann Bros. Co., third, with Mrs. T. W. Lawson.

Best 100 blooms, red or scarlet—E. G. Hill Co., first, with Beacon; Chicago Carnation Co., second, with Scarlet Glow; Poehlmann Bros. Co., third, with Scarlet Glow.

Best 100 blooms, white variegated—Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, first, with No. 4405 A; Chicago Carnation Co., second, with No. 94.

Seedlings Not Disseminated.

Best 25, white—E. G. Hill Co., first, with Wodenethe; Chas. H. Totty, second, with Wodenethe.

Best 25, flesh pink—Chicago Carnation Co., first, with No. 78.

Best 25, dark pink—Chicago Carnation Co., first, with No. 150.

Best 25, red or scarlet—E. G. Hill Co., Bronze Medal, with Commodore.

Sweepstakes. Best seedling carnation entered in above classes, excluding such varieties as have been exhibited previous to this season, a silver cup valued at $25.00, Chicago Carnation Co. with 150.

Sweet Peas.

Best 100 blooms, white—Frank Felke, first.

Best 100 blooms, pink and white—Frank Felke, first.

Best 100 blooms, light pink or salmon—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

Best 100 blooms, lavender—Frank Felke, first.

Best 100, any other color, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second.

Best display of sweet peas—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first and second, silver and bronze medals.

Miscellaneous.

Best 50 spikes mignonette—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

Best 250 lily of the valley—H. N. Bruce, first.

Best 25 spikes antirrhinum, white—Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, first.

Best 25 spikes antirrhinum, yellow—Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, first.

Best 25 spikes antirrhinum, any other color—Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, first and second.

Best violet, bunch of 100, double—Des Plaines Violet Co., Des Plaines, Ill., first; Toeffler & Bauke, Watertown, Wis., second.

Best violets, bunch of 100, single—Toeffler & Bauke, first; Chas. McCauley, second.

Special Premiums.

Display of cut cactileys—Chas. Bond, Naperville, Ill., grand silver medal.

Display of pansies and sweet peas—William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., grand silver medal.

Display illustrating model garden and shrubbery arrangements—H. J. Stockmans, grand silver medal.

Display of roses—Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., New Orleans, La., special premium.

Visitors.

Mole Crickets.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

We forward you insects which are very destructive in Florida, working under ground viciously and destroy roots, also seeds germinating. Can you inform us what they are? Is there any remedy?

The insects forwarded are the changa or mole cricket (Scapteriscus didactylus) which is a most serious insect pest that the Porto Rican agriculturist has had to deal with, attacking tobacco, cane and small crops. It usually attacks the plant at the crown or junction of the stem and roots, but the whole root system and a good part of the stem are frequently devoured. In eating the stem it often remains below the ground and pulls the plant down as fast as it devours it; thus a plant four inches in height may appear only one or two inches high in the morning. The young seldom leave the ground but the adults may be seen hurrying over the surface during the daytime. The male adults frequently fly at night and are attracted to light.

Preventive remedies seem more advisable for small crops or limited areas than destructive remedies. The best means is to wrap valuable plants with a wire gauze sleeve with a mesh too small to allow the passage of the young changa; those made of galvanized wire will last several seasons and are small pieces six by 10 inches placed around the plants. Arsenic or Paris green sprinkled on chopped grass is the best bait; this poison should be distributed in small patches or narrow rows beneath the surface of the soil. Clean cultivation both before and after planting crops is recommended because a large proportion of the changa's ordinary food supply is cut off. Plowing during the winter will bring to the surface numbers of the eggs and young larvæ which are exposed to their enemies. Trap lights suspended over a receptacle containing water, when the adults are flying are recommended. A large lantern is necessary, for a dim light is nearly useless, and these with reflectors placed at the edge of the field will give best results. F.

The Spade.

Behold the spade, through countless centuries
The faithful friend of rich and poor alike.
By me upturned, the earth her fruits supplies.
I lay the road, and fashion well and dyke.

I give men homes. I dug the Egyptian clay
That Israelites of old were forced to bake.
And builders of huge shrines wherein men pray, Must with the spade their strong foundations make.

Though engines man contrives to till the soil,
I will be ever with him when he goes
To seek for southern gems with restless toil, Or tear a dreadful path through northern snows.

And when he dies, a grave I'll give to him;
Of all his godly gifts perchance the best;
He feels his blood grow chill, his eyes grow dim,
And takes from me his final transport—rest.

Leaky Valves.

We read at the present time of the efforts being made in all lines of business to cut down the running expenses to the lowest possible figures and to also stop all unnecessary leaks. It is the controlling of these leaks that is often the fundamental principle of a successful business. The ordinary man in his attempt to curtail expenses will overlook the small details and try to cut down the expense in the large items, when it is really the small things that are daily eating into the profits, in fact, it is this continual outlay every hour and every day, no matter how small, and oftentimes unseen, that totals in the year to a large amount and is in reality a great waste. This matter was forcibly brought to our attention one warm night when entering the boiler room we found that the fireman had a roaring fire with open draughts. We had had a week of extremely cold weather, the thermometer outside registering below zero for two or three successive nights, and the inroads on the coal supply was very marked. It had been necessary to use the entire piping system all the time. This was followed by a mild spell with the outside temperature just below freezing, and the piping system had been shut down to one pipe in each coil. We naturally expected to find a low fire with a reduction in the amount of coal used. We immediately turned to the fireman for an explanation and were informed that he was continually running cold water into the boiler, and consequently had to have a good fire to keep up the necessary pressure.

Now every ounce of cold water placed in a steam boiler while firing, means the combustion of more coal, and the question immediately arose as to where the water was going and what was the cause of requiring the running of cold water into the boiler. We knew that the piping system was tight, all the pipes being above ground where they could be seen and there were no leaky joints. It certainly for a time was unexplainable. This warm weather was followed by a colder spell which required the use of more pipes, when we found where the water had gone.

Upon opening the valves of the pipes which had been shut off, the water in the boiler immediately began to rise and the pressure drop, showing that the pipes which had been opened were full of cold water which was returning to the boiler, and before long some surplus water had to be drawn off.

We had now solved the mystery. The piping was arranged through manifolds, with the valves in the manifold, and these not closing tightly, all the pipes that were shut off during the mild spell had filled with water which, when again opened, had returned to the boiler. When the valves of a pipe full of steam is closed, as it gradually cools off, leaves a vacuum and unless the valve closes very tightly, the steam passing the valve with the pressure behind it forces itself through the valves and condenses into water and gradually fills the pipe. We had learned our lesson and took advantage of it and the next summer fixed up our valves so that they would close tightly with the result that we could see a saving in our coal bill.

The majority of greenhouse plants heated by steam are on the gravity system, and the piping installed by the owners. In purchasing the fittings the cheapest are often employed, and the owners cannot see why an expensive valve should be purchased, even if he knows that it will much better perform the work for which it is designed, than one which can be purchased for half the amount, and will, as he supposes, meet all the requirements. But in our experience the valve that will close tightly and prevent the leaking of steam and water will more than pay for the difference in cost every month.

The cheaper valves can be made tight and can be again reground, but they gradually wear by the constant opening and closing and will become so worn that they leak. These valves are all right on pipes that are seldom used, if they are tight when first installed, but in greenhouse heating, especially in a variable climate, the valves are being continually opened and closed and wear quickly. It therefore becomes necessary that a valve that will close tightly and will continue to do so is the most economical in the end.

While writing upon this matter another thing comes to our mind which is a great waste in the heating of a greenhouse and that is the continual leaks of steam in the piping. How often have we walked into greenhouses and seen here and there through the establishment jets of steam emerging from leaky joints and valves, with the packing worn out, so that the steam escapes around the stem. This is a continual waste, and the prudent business man will immediately take steps to see that the leak is stopped. During the summer the heating plant in every greenhouse should be repaired where it is necessary; the leaky places made tight, the valves repacked, and if necessary, reground, and if the leaks cannot be stopped, replaced with new valves that are tight. These are continual leaks not only in steam but in coal and eventually in money. It is well for the greenhouse man to fully understand that where he is continually pouring water into a steam boiler used for heating purposes only, that he has an expense in his business that is unnecessary and should be eliminated.

Primula Malacoides.

This interesting little primrose is just coming into general notice. It is related to P. Forbesi, grows in a dense low tuft of pretty foliage, from which spring numerous flower stalks each bearing two to three whorls of tiny rosy lavender primroses. It is a most decorative little plant, and has the advantage of a heliotrope-like fragrance. It is also remarkable for its rapidity of growth, a few months being sufficient to bring it to perfection.—Revue Horticole.

The Tropical Rain Forest.

Those who have botanized in the temperate zone, only, may be quite familiar with the tropical rain forest as it appears in literature, but they are not likely to have a very vivid conception of it as it really exists. In our parts of the world it is almost impossible to imagine the effect upon the forest where it rains daily, often in torrents, and where moisture and light are at the maximum. In such places the constant moisture makes it possible for plants to grow upon the branches of trees, the roofs of houses, stone walls and similar situations. The trunks and larger branches of trees in the rain forest are often so loaded down with epiphytes—principally ferns, orchids, wild pines, lycopods, mosses and lichens—that they can scarcely be seen. The rainfall that makes all this possible is also hard to realize, states the American Botanist. A recent rainstorm recorded in the Philippines resulted in a precipitation of more than 88 inches in four days. That is, enough water fell in four days to cover every square foot of surface in that region more than seven feet deep. Nearly three feet of water (34 ins.) fell in one day. This, however, is by no means the limit. In the Khasi hills at the head of the Bay of Bengal a rainfall of nearly ten feet (114.4 in.) occurred in five consecutive days in June, 1876. The record precipitation belongs to a small region in eastern Jamaica, near Silver Hill, where in November, 1909, eleven feet and a quarter of rain fell in eight days. The writer of this note has a very vivid mental picture of the spot mentioned, having botanized there some years ago. The most crowded conservatory in our cooler latitude but faintly represents the crowd of species there. Tree ferns vied with flowering plants for room to spread their leaves, the ground was one extensive carpet of selaginellas, mosses and ferns, and with every passing shower, water dripped from a thousand filmy ferns and mosses on the trees to fall upon and renew the verdure below.

Chicago Florists Dine National Executive.

The meeting of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists, held at Chicago March 13-16 to further the plans for the annual convention, to be held in that city next August, was made the occasion of a banquet in honor of the visitors, tendered by the Chicago Florists' Club at the La Salle hotel March 14. There was a large attendance, the visitors including President R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; Vice-President August F. Poehlmann, Secretary John Young, New York; Robert Craig, Philadelphia, Pa.; E. Allan Peirce, Waltham, Mass.; Harry A. Bunyard, New York; C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; C. C. Pollworth and wife, Milwaukee, Wis.; Walter W. Coles and wife, Kokomo, Ind.; Miss Tillie Meinhardt, St. Louis, Mo.; Fred H. Meinhardt, St. Louis, Mo.; W. H. Kennedy, Milwaukee, Wis.; P. G. Pearson, Moline, Ill.; Harry Balsley, Detroit, Mich.; J. T. Temple, Davenport, Ia.; W. E. Trimble, Princeton, Ill.; W. Hartshorne, Joliet, Ill.; John Fuhlbruegge, Winona, Minn.; E. H. Cushman, Sylvania, O.; S. W. Coggan, Battle Creek, Mich.; Joseph H. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; H. W. Pilgrim, St. Louis, Mo.; Arvin Anderson, Moline, Ill.; A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind.; Harry Papworth, New Orleans, La., and Henry Gaethje, Rock Island, Ill.

President Foley of the Chicago Florists' Club officiated as toastmaster and when the menu had been discussed he called on President Vincent, who spoke for the national society and made a strong plea for increased membership and united effort to make the coming convention the great success it ought to be at this central point.

Albert N. Butler, representing Mayor Harrison and the Chicago Association of Commerce, welcomed the visitors and assured them that every effort would be made by those he represented to make the coming visit of the trade pleasant and successful.

Robert Craig, the gifted orator of the American trade, was next called upon and made one of his old-time, vigorous, heart-warming talks, brimful of eloquence and humor, charged with the fire of youth and adorned with all his wealth of poetry and intonation. Not content with this, his enthusiastic admirers insisted upon a song and he came to the front with "Loch Lomond" and again responded to a hearty encore.

Chas. H. Totty, chairman of the National Flower Show committee, spoke of the satisfactory progress being made with the preliminary work of the great exhibition to be held in New York, April 5-12, 1913, and requested the aid of everyone present in making this the greatest horticultural exhibition ever held in this country.

Vice-President Poehlmann was the next speaker and gave a strong talk on the lack of co-operation in flower shows, urging growers to extend their aid to these institutions for the general welfare of business.

H. A. Bunyard spoke for the National Sweet Pea Society, reminding his audience of the great exhibition to be held at Boston, July 13-14.

Secretary John Young, Ex-President Geo. Asmus, E. Allan Peirce, Joseph H. Hill, E. F. Winterson, H. N. Bruns, W. N. Rudd, Harry Balsley and others made brief addresses, while John A. Evans and Duncan A. Robertson sang songs, prolonging the proceedings to a late hour when all present joined in the singing of "America" and a most enjoyable event passed into history.

A number of well known professional artists entertained the participants with vocal and instrumental selections during the evening.

THE ROSE.

Preparing for Easter.

Easter being only a few weeks off now, there are several things to do in order to have A No. 1 cut stock for that holiday. This is the season of rapid growth and with the usual amount of extra spring work going on, the roses may get a lead on us. Syringing should be done more frequently and unless the flowers are kept well within bounds by careful tying, there will be many crooked stems resulting, and when the buds are allowed to become entangled it makes a lot of extra work and loss of time when cutting them. The thing to do at this time is to give the houses a good cleaning, or the plants rather, removing all yellow leaves and old foliage covered with red spider; then tie everything carefully and give the plants a good mulch of cow manure, not too heavy but a good root covering scattered on the soil loosely. Do not neglect to break up the mulch frequently by going over it about every ten days by hand, breaking up the lumps which will enable one to get about all the strength from the manure with the hose.

This does not mean a general let-up on the liquid manure, which can be continued after the first watering of the mulch. The liquid manure can from now on be used full strength and about once per week. These suggestions of course are based on the treatment of strong vigorous plants. Otherwise a lot of plants that have received a check of some kind are slow to respond to the change of season. Plants in this condition will have to be nursed along for a while until they begin to make healthy clean growth. Syringing perhaps will furnish them moisture enough at the root for a while; it depends of course on what has caused the check in the growth. If the plants have been chilled they must be rested up a bit, withholding the water and running the house at a slightly reduced temperature for a short time.

If the house has been quite cold the plants will drop a lot of foliage, and by running them on the dry side they may drop a few more, but this need cause no great alarm as they will recover rapidly at this season of the year if a little common sense and watchfulness is used. Plants slowed down by overfeeding, watering and heavy cropping will take about the same treatment. In either case do not resort to extremes; reduce the amount of water gradually and as the plants recover increase the water supply gradually and do not feed them until they have made some new foliage; new foliage means a new root growth.

See to it that the young stock in pots is kept watered evenly. This can only be accomplished by spouting the driest plants with the watering pot. It is a good plan to put a very careful man in charge of the young stock, or it is often similar to the too-many cooks etc. The pot roses usually require more fumigating than the stocks we are cutting from, as they are placed close together and heavy fumigating is necessary in order to have the fumes reach the under side of the foliage. Again it is a difficult matter to spray as thoroughly as in the case of the old plants. There is no time during the season that the green fly is harder to get rid of than during the month of March, and from now until the real warm days it may be necessary to fumigate quite often.

Bank the fires as early in the mornings as possible and let the plants get all the fresh air that can be safely given without reducing the temperature suddenly. The less artificial heat used from now on during the day the better for the plants. E.

HAVERHILL, MASS.—The local florists had a merry battle of prices the first week in March and the people reaped the benefit. Roses, carnations and jonquils were sold for 15 cents a dozen and violets for 15 cents a bunch.

Roses.

Paper read by Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., before the New York Florists' Club, March 11, 1912.

I have been invited by your committee to come here tonight to talk to you on the subject of roses. I accept the invitation because I enjoy talking on a subject that interests me, and roses are a big part of the flower business of the country. I realize that the subject of roses is broad, for it includes in it the relation of roses to the florists' business, and the figures of the florists' business are hard to obtain. Our florist directories and board of trade give us but a part of the names of those who are in the flower business; our trade papers' circulation reports give us a poor idea, for the trade papers are read only by a part of those who depend on flowers for a livelihood. It is almost safe to say that half of those who make a living by flowers never see a copy of any of our trade papers.

The rose stands in a place which no other flower can hope to usurp. It is in a class by itself, and we are to consider roses tonight, but bearing in mind the fact that roses are merely a part of the flower industry.

The growth of the florist business in this country has been wonderful, and it is on the increase. The glass market has caused a building boom, which means increased production, more roses in the market than ever before, and that we shall have to look for an increased outlet for the product or face a glut in the markets of the country, and consequent loss to those whose money is invested in the flower industry, and a greenhouse proposition which goes into decay for lack of management, or for lack of market for the product, represents as great a shrinkage in value as any business in existence, unless it be the retail store whose asset is the lease of the store, for everything that makes the business is perishable property, and a neglected greenhouse is a discouraging proposition.

CHICAGO SPRING FLOWER SHOW.

Display of Roses by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago (not for competition).

What are the essentials for success in the rose-growing business? Good soil, good houses, water, steam heat, good plants, good management, shipping facilities and a proper handling of the product and collection of accounts.

A good rose soil is one which has a clay body with enough root fibre in it to make it porous. It should be enriched properly by the addition of cow manure and bone meal (where tests have shown bone meal beneficial), and it should be composted not over a year for best results. It must have proper drainage for the reason that a soil improperly drained is lacking in air, and air is necessary to root growth.

Good houses for roses are houses that grow roses well. That is the story in a nut shell. The ideal house is a matter of opinion only, and the advisability of putting one style of house against another should be considered under the question of good management. Good roses are grown under small glass and big glass; in houses that run north and south and east and west, but considered as a whole the best winter roses are produced today in houses running east and west that are built with iron construction and big glass to make them light, and large enough to make them uniform in temperature, and not subject to quick changes as is the small house, owing to the increased outside exposure in proportion to the air space confined. The ventilation should be such that all sections of the house are affected by the opening and closing of the ventilators, and the length or width of the house is an item which is considered under the head of "management."

Water is an absolute necessity, and on the amount of water used, and the pressure under which this water can be had, a great deal of the success depends. I realize I am facing argument when I state that a rose coming into crop cannot be overwatered, provided there is ample drainage, and the house is not chilled or run cool, but I do not consider it good policy to water as heavily where a house is being run cool to retard a crop, or is being cut heavily and in consequence is losing feeding roots, for root growth is in proportion to the top, and these remarks apply to grafted roses, as we have no own root plants growing on our place except a few test batches, although we grow own root plants to sell.

Steam heat I consider absolutely essential. It is a quicker heat than hot water, for where heat is needed it is usually needed in a hurry, and the vaporizing of sulphur and nicotine preparations on the steampipes is, according to our experience, the best method of controlling mildew and insects. Hot water gives a uniform heat and a steady supply, and it may be of interest to tell you that every house on our place has both steam and hot water heat, which, worked in conjunction, we consider ideal.

The matter of plants will I know bring up argument, but a good plant is necessary to success, and the best is none too good. Consider that the average rose grower keeps his roses three years, and consider what he expects to take from these houses in the three years and there is little room for argument, as the proportionate cost of good plants above poor, grafted above own root, is trifling.

Good management is a broader subject, and one which could be the subject of a course of lectures which would be interesting indeed, but I wish to touch on only a few features of it. A wide house can be heated with nearly the same amount of heat as a narrow house, owing to the less outside exposure in proportion to the cubical contents of the house. New varieties properly selected are better paying propositions than older varieties. A steady cutting is better for the market than a cropping of houses. Proper consideration of these points, the handling of the help proposition, the keeping of supplies, the proper handling of the output and the proper meeting of obligations are signs of good management, which are essentials of success.

Let us for a moment consider the question of varieties, and what do we find in commerce? Not over twelve or fifteen at most that are being grown in quantity for cut flowers. We find the hybrid tea of the type of Mrs. Aaron Ward and Mrs. Taft with a tendency to sluggishness in mid-winter; we find the Killarney family that is entitled to a Roosevelt medal for the variety and number of its offspring, and the ever present American Beauty. (When it is in crop.) We find My Maryland, Richmond, Radiance, Bride, Bridesmaid, and the list is almost at an end, for the new yellow roses are not grown widely as yet. There is many a rose-growing establishment of less than thirty thousand plants trying to grow at least half of this list mixed in the same houses—Mrs. Aaron Ward that needs heat in winter to make it move side by side with Killarney, that owing to the extra heat which the other varieties need, are lacking in substance and suffer in the market. The solution is to grow varieties by themselves as far as is practicable, and treat them as they should be treated to get the best results. The My Maryland that we exhibited at Detroit on from four to five-foot stems were cut from three-year-old plants that had rested in winter when nature showed they needed the rest, and we may all wake up enough some day to realize that it pays to follow nature rather than to try to lead it, and allow some of our good roses to rest when it is natural for them to do so, and in this one instance it has paid.

In new roses this year there are but a few leading varieties which appeal to the commercial grower. Two of the new Killarney sports are here for your inspection. We believe them roses of the highest type, and believe there is room for them in the market, for the list of varieties is small. The output of new roses in Europe is large, and from Europe our best new roses have been introduced. There are undoubtedly more good roses that have never been perpetuated than the number that have been brought to our attention. It was my pleasure to visit H. A. Dreer's trial ground at Riverton last spring, and I look back to that visit as one of the pleasures of my life. There is a movement on foot to establish in connection with Elizabeth Park in Hartford an official trial ground for new roses, and I hope the proposition made the American Rose Society by the superintendent of parks will be accepted, for the rose garden there is one of the finest in existence, and the varieties properly grown and properly labelled are instructive to the masses, and make flower lovers of whoever may be fortunate enough to see them, and the rose garden there is visited by thousands, and notebooks are always in evidence among visitors, and a flower lover sooner or later becomes a flower buyer. For the flower business our parks are wonderful advertisements, and the building up of the business depends on the elimination of prejudice and the education of the masses to keep pace with the building of greenhouses, which means increased production.

To our retailer then we must look for the salvation of the business, and the man needed today in that branch of the business should be in keeping with the modern trend of business, and broadminded enough to realize that on him depends not only his own personal welfare, but the welfare of the florists as a whole. I have heard of the Retail Hardware Dealers' Association and their conventions, and discussions for the good of the trade, and have learned that in the opinion of these hardware men it is a wonderful help. I have read of automobile salesmen being called from the road to the shop to learn how things were built so they could sell them better, and in other lines the same, but have not heard of the retail florists' interest in the sources of supply, or their conventions for the building up of the flower trade in any city.

Walking down Fifth avenue one bright sunshiny afternoon about this time of year I took the opportunity to observe the varied line of millinery which these, the choicest of the millinery stores of America, have to offer, and the variety was almost beyond description in form and color. The newest models, and the height of fashion were on exhibition, and the whole merely catering to the fads and fancies of the feminine taste. The thought came to me that after all the wish to see and to buy these latest creations of the millinery art would be in a measure duplicated in the flower business when we can offer to each customer something that is different, and which appeals not to established precedent, but to individual taste. How to bring about such a situation is the problem that confronts the florists, and the salvation must come through the retailer and grower working in harmony, and each in turn may have to make some sacrifices for the good of the business.

During the past ten or fifteen years we have been able to teach the masses the names of about four or five roses. Some have learned to know Bride and Bridesmaid now that they are nearly extinct. They are learning to know Killarney and White Killarney as they grow older, but few would know Mrs. Aaron Ward or Lady Hillingdon by name, or identify them when they see them, because first of all their attention has never been called to the individuality of flowers, and the retail florist who neglects to educate his customers is throwing away the greatest business opportunity ever presented to florists, and in so doing injures not only his own business, but the grower and the trade in general.

Would not a neat display of something new in roses with a neat card in each box that goes out giving information regarding the variety bring back customers who can call a variety by name? I believe it would. Would not the story of Admiral Ward of our own United States Navy, being a flower lover (and for that reason Mrs. Aaron Ward was complimented by Pernet naming his favorite rose for Mrs. Ward), be interesting? I believe that it would.

How could we do it will be heard from the retailer, and there is the part which our wholesalers can play, and with advantage to all concerned with intelligent co-operation on the part of the grower. Advise your growers to become specialists, provided you have the patronage among the retailers that will give the movement the support it deserves. Figure on your growers as sections of one place. We plant twelve to fifteen varieties in quantities varying according to a prospective demand, and the wholesaler should do likewise, and plan to have among his growers the right assortment of roses to meet his demand. What a man can grow well he should grow, but it is never advisable to grow a large number of varieties on a small place for a wholesale market. Enough to be a figure in the market, and to keep a steady supply is the advice to the grower, and if it takes the whole place to do that grow only one variety, and let your neighbor who grows roses for the same market grow something different. From the standpoint of dollars and cents, and from all that I can learn, there is very little difference in the amount of money which can be taken per plant where the variety is properly grown and is up to date within a few years, and the roses that are paying big money to the growers today are all specialty roses or novelties. Mrs. Taft, (so-called), Radiance, Cardinal, Lady Hillingdon, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Melody, Dark Pink Killarney, Double Pink Killarney, have all made money when properly grown in quantity, but the steady supply is the salvation, for without it the retailer is at sea, and to build up a trade and lose it because he cannot secure the stock is discouraging.

It is a political expression to "look to one's fences," and yet it applies to the rose situation at the present moment. Were I in the retailer's position, dealing with a wholesale house in any city in this country I should demand definite knowledge of what was to be planted this spring, so that I could know what to count on for next season, and would place my business where the growers would supply the roses that the store trade requires. I know that this is plain talk, but it is not all theory. It is principally fact, and I value the opinion of a first-class retail florist as to the merits of a rose more than the opinion of a good grower of roses. There are prejudices in retail stores that are as foolish and unfounded as the fear of the 13th of the month and walking under a ladder, but not in many cases is this apparent. You would never hear such a remark as "My clerks don't like the rose, and so we don't buy it." In any line of business where there is a sale for an article which the public likes, and will buy, if the proprietor is up to date the goods will be there even though the clerks take an enforced vacation before accepting a new position where, as sadder and wiser men, they watch their former employer refusing to go into bankruptcy because they are no longer with him.

Sentiment is connected with flowers, and with roses in particular, and that sentiment should be used to educate love for roses, and admiration for the wonders and beauty of nature, but remembering always that business is just business after all, sentiment can, fostered and encouraged in the right direction, mean increased business.

I was reading the other day one of Richard Harding Davis' stories, "The Red Cross Girl," and when I read the line "We never see flowers in New York except on women's hats," I took up a copy of the "Florists' Directory" and wondered how three thousand New York florists would allow a man like Richard Harding Davis to put such a remark into the mouth of the city editor of a New York paper, and it struck me that if this story was really true to life there was a mighty small percentage of the gross sales of cut flowers spent for advertising, or the city editor who said that would have learned that such things could really be purchased in the city. Any big department store will allow a certain percentage for advertising; any up-to-date firm figures on advertising expense, and yet how many of our florists advertise in proportion? Very few, but those few are getting their full share of the business because they have learned the secret, or part of it, and figure it as an expense just as necessary as store rent, or automobile delivery.

I suppose that I was invited here tonight to talk soil and water, grafted and own root, hot water and steam, but I am more interested in the building up of the business in general than the incidentals connected with the growing of good roses. The successful rose business depends just as much on how the product is sold as it does on the growing. The more good roses that are in the market the better the demand for good roses will be year in and year out. We are facing a lot of good roses, and the good roses for all the year round is no longer fiction but fact. Such roses as Princeton and Christy Miller open up a wonderful field for the specialty grower. Killarney Queen is all alone in a class by itself as the highest type of a pink rose. Double White Killarney, considered for the year round, means advancement, and Sunburst, Lady Hillingdon, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Melody have brought yellow roses up to a standard of perfection never before equaled. In red roses the grower is weaker than in other colors, but relief is in sight, and a few years' time will show them on the same paying basis as roses of other colors.

To the grower let me say, consult your wholesaler as to what to grow, and plant the best stock that can be produced regardless of where you obtain it, for a few cents on the initial cost is trifling compared with two or three years' labor trying to obtain blood from a stone.

To the wholesaler let me say, advise your growers, and properly plan for your next season's business, and take into consideration the proportionate demand for varieties when you give such advice.

To the retailer I would say, build up your demand by properly educating your customers to know and distinguish varieties. Create a demand by showing them something new and different. Be alive to such opportunities as the National Flower Show will present to educate the public as to the use of flowers. Advise your source of supply as to what your needs will be for another season so that he can be prepared. Read a florist paper occasionally so that when you see something new in the market it will not be a total stranger to you. Help out the grower in glut times even if there isn't one hundred per cent profit in it for you, as it helps the business, and remember that retailer, wholesaler and grower are, after all, just men striving to make an honest living in a busy world which is, so far as we florists are concerned, sixty per cent roses.

Fuller's Rose Beetle.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you kindly inform us of the best means to exterminate aramigus fulleri in a greenhouse of 45,000 cubic feet, containing roses planted in benches.

A SUBSCRIBER.

The beetles are very difficult to destroy with insecticides, even hydrocyanic acid gas being powerless against them used at a strength that would not kill the plants. The remedy which has found the most favor is to search for and destroy the beetles and a good time for doing this work is during the months of November and December, when the beetles may be found congregating upon the plants. The grub may be exterminated by the use of bi-sulphide of carbon. Small holes may be made in the soil about two feet apart and a few drops of bi-sulphide of carbon dropped into the holes and then immediately covered with soil. The gas generated will permeate the soil and kill the larvae.

W.

FLORISTS' PALMS.

Spring Culture.

The bright weather that has prevailed lately brings to mind the subject of shading on the palm houses, the first light shading being usually required about the end of February or beginning of March. If the south side of the houses is shaded at this early date, it is sufficient for a time, for that will cover the plants until the sun gets higher, the object being to protect them from the strongest rays of the sun without making the houses too dark, there being a happy medium in the matter of shade that gives the plants a healthy color without making the foliage too soft.

Ventilation continues to demand close attention, from the fact that the houses sun up very rapidly in the morning, while the cold winds that may be expected at this season soon affect the temperature in the afternoon, and cold draughts are far from beneficial to the plants. It is generally safe to give some air when the temperature reaches 75° in bright weather, and to shut down when it drops to 65°, thus keeping a growing atmosphere at a period when the plants need it.

Thorough syringing is especially necessary at this time, for at the latter part of the winter and beginning of spring there is very likely to be found some colonies of red spider in spots where the water does not reach with much force, especially along the back of a bench, or in a warm corner over the pipes. This pest acts somewhat differently on some of the palms to what may be expected on many other plants, and to those unfamiliar with its peculiarities it does not always reveal its presence at once.

On pinnate leaved palms, such as arecas and kentias, the red spiders often attack the upper surface of the leaflets, this action causing the leaflet to turn up on the edges, owing to the contraction of the leaf surface caused by the perforation of the insects. Whenever such a condition is noted, namely, that a number of leaflets are found with a concave appearance rather than the convex surface they usually present, it is well to give them a careful examination and additional care in syringing, for in a majority of cases there will be found insects at work. On latanias, or on Livistona rotundifolia, the red spiders are more likely to appear on the under surface, and if they are allowed to remain there for any length of time, a permanent disfigurement of the leaf will result.

Yellow thrips are partial to the younger leaves of arecas, and are also found on the Kentias, the most effective treatment for this particular enemy of the grower being regular fumigations with nicotine paper, or spraying with nicotine solution, the fumigation sometimes reaching the insects when the spraying may fail. Aphis gives but little trouble to the palm grower where the nicotine treatment prevails, but is not an unusual visitor during the spring months. Mealy bug is sometimes troublesome when allowed to get established on the young foliage of palms, but proper syringing with a good pressure of water will dislodge this insect, and nicotine solution in the form of a spray will destroy them.

During the slack season of mid-winter there has been a good chance to dispose of the scale insects by the use of the various preparations that may be had for this purpose, and as the potting season is opening, it is taken for granted that this preparatory work has been accomplished, and that the stock is now in condition for repotting. As to how early this operation may be begun depends on the condition of the stock, and also to some extent on the kind of trade that is being followed.

There is not much gained by potting too early, as until the roots show activity they might better be undisturbed, but at the same time one needs all the time for growth that can be had in order to attain the best results. Arecas and ptychospermas start into growth early, and may therefore be among the first for repotting, the kentias follow next in order, and after them the phoenix, cocos, livistonas and others that may be found in less numbers in the palm houses of the trade.

Have soil under cover, and sufficiently dry to allow firm potting, keeping a sufficient supply of soil ahead so that it will be warmed through before using. Use clean pots, and have the plants in a proper condition of moisture before they are potted, bearing in mind the fact that it is almost impossible to water the plants so as to moisten them through if the old ball of earth is dry at the time of repotting. Then give the plants space enough to get some light and air, keep a moist atmosphere in the houses, and a night temperature of 60° to 65°, and the result should be active growth.

Native Trees and Shrubs.

Conclusion of paper read by E. Bollinger of Lake Forest, Ill., before the Illinois State Horticultural Society.

PLANTING OF SHRUBS.

The general rules for tree planting also apply to shrubs except that their use should be chiefly in groups or belts and should be very little used as specimen plants, plant only such shrubs that are perfectly hardy such as our American Viburnums. Wild roses, spirea, dogwood, rubus, ribes, hypericums, Indian currant, sambucus, lilacs, philadelphus, tart, honeysuckles, Weigelia, Forsythia, etc., combine them with taste in the shrubby border, do not mix them but plant them in groups of three to 25 or more, avoid colored foliage as much as possible, do not crowd shrubs, but combine in each group as much as possible the same family, consider well the size of foliage, flowering period, study well the various characteristics of each variety of plants, do not only consider the present but look to the future, keep before you the groups of shrubs how it will and should look in ten years.

For large grounds and public parks taller growing shrubs are more desirable while in smaller places the medium and smaller growing variety should be used. No home large or small seems complete to me unless the native perennial flower is found. It is said that the love of flowers is one of the earliest of passions, a bright boy or girl knows the season by its flowers. The flora of America we can call justly wonderful and would we give each variety a place in our gardens and parks it would require quite a space. In large estates and parks where a variety of locations are at hand such as ravines, bluffs, streams, ponds and low lands, etc., those beautiful plants should be planted in large masses for the natural effect from early spring until late in fall one may have the pleasure to have a wealth of those beautiful flowers. Hepatica if not native in your section, plant in masses. Triliums, Phlox, Jack in the Pulpit, Shooting Star, Campanula, Violet, Wild Orchids or Lady Slippers, Gentias, Wild Sunflowers, etc. In low lands plant the Lobellias, Forget-me-not, The Carolina Lily, Sedum, Eupatorium, Monarda, Asclepias, Veronica, Tradescantia, etc., along streams and ponds plant the Iris, Yellow Pond Lily, Arrow-Head, White Pond Lily, also some of the ornamental Grasses belong in the pond. Where space is limited the plants just named may not give the desired effect that one may look for and for such places I would not advise to plant them, but if at all select some of the best, Violet, Lady Slipper, Lobelia Cardinalis, Monarda, Asclepias ornamental grasses, and with them you may plant Lythrum, Phlox, Delphinium, Aquilegia, Pyrethrum, Rudbeckia, Stokesia, these planted in connection with the shrubby border are always pleasing and give the landscape a more or less lively effect.

The up to date landscape gardener realizes that our American plants, trees and shrubs should be given the place justly due them, nevertheless some of the foreign plants can and should be used but do not crowd your home grounds full of foreign at the expense of our equally as good, if not better plants and just because it comes from a far off country. On public school grounds native trees, shrubs and flowers should predominate the others, let us not do like the gentleman of New Hampshire who happened to be President of the Board of Education, he looked over the catalogues I presume and found that France was a very good country to buy for little money small trees and especially elms, he bought several thousand English elms for Arbor day and distributed among the children in the district and city schools, and afterwards spoke of his great heroic deed and advised other boards of education to do likewise, sure enough it is far better to plant a foreign tree than none at all, but it seems to me that such a man shows an un-American spirit, I would advise, first of all the use of all our home plants, make good use of them, cultivate them to the highest perfection and use foreign material only when you have a good and sufficient reason to use them, but give our American varieties the first and best place of honor, if you can do nothing else for this country do at least that much, for the benefit of American Horticulture.

Sawdust in Manure.

Much of the cow manure now obtainable in many sections of the country contains sawdust or shavings for bedding, especially this year, when the price of straw is so high, and there is a widespread feeling among florists and gardeners that this is harmful to plants, especially in greenhouses. The Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station has conducted a series of experiments which is published in Bulletin No. 158. Comparisons were made between (1) cow manure, with sawdust bedding; (2) cow manure, with straw or chopped corn-stalk bedding, and cow manure without bedding, this being from cows kept on a cement floor, without bedding. This was carried on for three years on roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and sweet peas.

That sawdust is not injurious to plant growth was evident in all the crops during the three years and in a majority of cases the number of blooms produced with such manure was larger than that with manure with bedding. The conclusions drawn from the experiments were that although the results show slight gains for the sawdust bedding plots over the other plots, its general use was not recommended. Observations of the plants and blooms of the different plots for three years indicate that litter bedding in cow manure is not the best material and that sawdust in cow manure is not harmful, but that everything considered, cow manure without any bedding material whatever is to be preferred.

WITH THE GROWERS

Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia, Pa.

These are busy times at Godfrey Aschmann's greenhouses, Ontario street, Philadelphia, for while there is always something doing here every month in the year, the holiday seasons of Easter and Christmas find the machinery running overtime getting ready and satisfying the great extra demand that is received from all parts of the country. Mr. Aschmann says: "It is not the selling or packing that bothers us; it is getting the stock ready, the finding room for the quantity we handle, a new house is added and we say now we have room, but soon we are just as crowded as ever. Look at this house of lilies. Did you ever see any better or healthier stock? Multiflorums, every one of them, all selected bulbs. It pays to get the best; there is then little if any loss. They can tell you about forcing too soon or all other bad cultural methods to explain failure with cheaper bulbs; but I tell you the fault in nine cases out of ten is in the bulbs. Buy the best and you will get good results." The house of lilies was a beautiful sight. Every plant healthy and strong and well set with buds just beginning to turn down. Lilies were also seen in other houses, as room could be obtained for them. Azaleas are a feature here and quantities of all the popular sorts in the quick-selling sizes. All nice budded stock filled several houses. Splendidly flowered spirea filled one house and temporary staging in several others. Mr. Aschmann believes in making the most of every foot of space in his houses and keeping them filled all the time. Elevated staging, one foot wide, is placed over many of the center tables in the larger houses, and similar shelves over the side benches are filled with all kinds of seedlings, bedding stock pricked off in boxes or small pots ready to take the place of the Easter stock. Much of this staging is temporary, on which is placed choice stock, which in this way, in the abundant light afforded, is given a finish that is much appreciated by his customers. A house of hydrangeas well budded was coming on nicely. There was another large house of cinerarias, a very large strain. Mr. Aschmann makes a specialty of this plant and grows it to perfection. There is bulbous stock galore, hyacinths, tulips, daffodils. A number of pans of hyacinths made up with asparagus looked very salable, to judge by the samples ready.

A house of araucarias and another of kentias, crowded aside for the present the remnant of the winter stock, but still in the running, looks remarkably well. The salvias, begonias, geraniums and other small stock that was seen everywhere on the hanging shelves and the quantities of ferns that occupied the narrow spaces along the walks, all go to make up such a collection as can be found in no place of the same size in the country. A private office has been added the past season and a recreation room for the employes. The shipping facilities are excellent, the express companies calling twice each day and generally finding a generous lot of boxes waiting for them. Mr. Aschmann looks forward to and is prepared for an extensive Easter trade, as orders are already pouring in. He is a great believer in printer's ink and one of the largest advertisers in the country. K.

The Green Floral Co., Dallas, Tex.

From a horticultural point of view Dallas was placed on the map when E. H. R. Green established in that city his great greenhouse enterprise and made it a wholesale cut flower center for the southwest. Dallas has long boasted some considerable wholesale importance along other lines for many years, but within the past few years this has assumed proportions that have challenged the attention of large northern and eastern manufacturers and distributors who look to this territory as an outlet for any part of their products.

Chicago still ships into Texas quantities of cut flowers and Kansas City, St. Louis and Denver also contribute their quota, but the Green Floral Co.

has found no difficulty at all in disposing of the entire cut of its 300,000 square feet of glass. Not only does this establishment supply the local retailers with the greater part of their stock, but an extensive shipping business is also done. Shreveport, La., on the east is an excellent outlet for this establishment, and El Paso on the west buys in Dallas. It is only natural that Houston, Galveston and San Antonio on the south should be tributary to this market, but when it is known that from at least two Kansas points there are standing orders here for cut flowers (thus entirely overlapping the fast growing communities of the state of Oklahoma) some appreciation is had of the Dallas market possibilities.

It may not be entirely trite in this connection to suggest the magnificent distances of this southwestern country by reminding THE AMERICAN FLORIST readers that Texarkana, Tex., is nearer Chicago than it is to El Paso, Tex., or than is Toline on the Texas-Oklahoma border to Brownsville down on the Rio Grande.

Back in 1904, Mr. Green had not the remotest idea of entering the field of commercial floriculture. The idea had its real inception in quite another enterprise. It was in that year that the governor of the state of Texas proclaimed a prize of $50,000 to be awarded the discoverer or inventor of an effective means of combating the boll weevil, that annual dread of all cotton growing communities. Mr. Green with his usual enthusiasm accepted the challenge and purchased 400 acres close to Terrell, Tex., for the experimental work he undertook. He not only grew cotton in the field, but his experts studied the cotton plant under a variety of conditions under glass. For this purpose six greenhouses were built. This Terrell enterprise became widely known as "Green's Experimental Farm" and was recognized by the United States government in the presence there of some five or six experts of the national Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Green soon found that he had more glass than was necessary for his experiments with remedies for the boll weevil, and so, being a great lover of flowers, tried out the culture of carnations. These not only did well, but attracted such attention from the nearer florists that a small shipping business was begun. The fact soon became apparent that the boll weevil was not to be readily conquered and another fact became equally apparent, viz.: that there was a big natural opening for a Texas establishment for the growing of cut flowers under glass.

That he might for this purpose have the natural shipping advantages of an established market, he instituted the Green Floral Co. in Dallas, in the year 1906. It was in this year and the following one that what is known as "The Kaufman Road Plant" was built. This comprises 300,000 square feet of glass and is devoted entirely to the production of cut flowers for the wholesale trade. At the same time, he bought the business and the property of the Haskell Avenue Floral Co. The 35,000 square feet of glass of this latter establishment is devoted to the cultivation of potted and bedding plants and in a general way to the firm's catalog business. Field-grown roses are also grown at this latter establishment for the needs of the catalogue trade.

With General Manager Eugene Corley, we drove out on a very windy Sunday afternoon to the Kaufman road place and there met A. Millar, who is responsible for the growing end of the cut flower business. Mr. Millar had his early training in the Kew Gardens, was later with J. Veitch & Sons at Chelsea, London, drifted to America and was for six years proprietor of the Rhode Island Greenhouses at Providence, R. I. In spite of his long experience, however, Mr. Millar insists that growing cut flowers under glass in Texas is quite a different proposition to that in any northern section.

Soil and water conditions enter into the problem to some extent, but the climatic conditions are the ones that most bother a florist used to conducting an establishment where the temperature is practically under control the year around. Here in Dallas, there are but a few days in any winter when the mercury hovers around the zero point, but there are other days in mid-winter when the thermometer will register 90° or over. The present winter has been unusually severe and so more to a florist's liking (excepting for the fuel bill). Under such conditions bursted calices are the least of his troubles.

However, with all the drawbacks, excellent cultural conditions are maintained and the plant is kept in excellent order and made a constant producer. One of the great difficulties experienced here is from the grub worms found in the manure, which burrow through the soil and cut off the rose stems just beneath the surface. About the only way so far found to overcome this evil is to cook all the fertilizer used. This may be considered rather expensive, but it is found cheaper than devastated houses.

The greenhouses are light and well ventilated. The houses need to be at present 12,000 plants of it in flower. Then there are 4,000 White Perfection and 12,000 Enchantress and White Enchantress. The old Queen Louise is still grown to a limited extent. Gloriosa and White Wonder are being tried out this season and well liked. White Wonder is so well considered that it will largely displace White Perfection, while Gloriosa is preferred to Rose Pink Enchantress.

Lily of the valley is successfully forced here during the winter months, there are 40,000 Dutch hyacinths grown under glass. Out of doors a little later 200,000 Spanish iris and 100,000 tuberoses will be brought into flower. The stored bulbs are kept even in winter in a room that is artificially chilled.

The orchid house is devoted to cattleyas, mainly C. Trianae, C. labiata, C. Schroederæ, C. Mossiæ and C. Gigas. The greater part of the cut is brought in for Christmas selling. A limited number of cypripediums are also grown. Twenty thousand chrysanthemums are grown in season, but there are very few brought into flower later than about December 1. Some 5,000 poinsettias are brought in for Christmas. A house of Kentia Forsteriana is a very good producer as these plants are naturally very thrifty in this climate.

The flowering plants at the Haskell Avenue Floral Co. greenhouses are in particularly good shape at the present time. This establishment is under the sole direction of H. Donnelly, one of the directors and executive committee of the Green Floral Co.

The Green Floral Co. was incorporated for $125,000 in 1909 and has been on a dividend paying basis ever since. The directors are: E. H. R. Green, president; L. R. Bergeron, vice-president; E. Corley, secretary and treasurer; E. M. Reardon, H. C. Coke, A. Millar and H. Donnelly.

FREDERICK, MD.—C. Hermann & Son have a fine assortment of plants in exceptionally good condition for Easter, lilies, cinerarias, clycamens and bulbous stock will all be ready for that day.

LYNN, MASS.—William Sim, president of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, delivered a lecture on "Sweet Peas and Their Culture" before the Houghton Horticultural Society March 6.

TRENTON, N. J.—The Blackmon Floral Co. has let the contracts for the erection of two new greenhouses, one 28x100 feet and the other 28x75 feet. The store on North Broad street will be remodeled and new fixtures installed.

shaded practically the year around on account of the direct rays of the sun and the clear atmosphere that prevails here. The greenhouses are mainly of Deitsch construction. They are heated by means of three Babcock & Wilcox Co. high pressure boilers fed by crude petroleum. During the present severe winter a car of oil has been consumed on the average of every two days. The plant consists of the following houses: 15 rose houses, each 28x200 feet; three rose houses, 28x100 feet; three American Beauty houses, 28x200 feet; seven carnation houses, 28x200 feet; six houses for asparagus, lilies and chrysanthemums, 24x150 feet; one orchid house, 12x100 feet; one kentia house, 12x100 feet; two propagating houses, 12x100 feet, and three fern houses, 12x100 feet.

The roses are all clean, thrifty plants. American Beauty, Bride and Bridesmaid are the leading varieties grown. Rhea Read is given the preference to Richmond. Killarney is not grown at all extensively as this climate demands a rose of more substance, one that does not burst wide open with the rapidity of Killarney. A few Dark Pink Killarney are being tried out as the rich color is well liked by buyers. Mrs. Taft is liked as a summer rose, but said to be inclined to rest in winter.

Carnations are in especially good crop at the present time. The 3,000 O. P. Bassett are good healthy specimens of plant life and are in particular favor here. Aristocrat is grown in the same quantity and is considered by Mr. Millar as especially good for the south. It is one of the freest flowering of the carnations grown here. Lawson-Enchantress is also well liked as may be seen from the fact that there are but only about 150,000 bulbs are stored annually as it is too hot during the greater part of the year to do much with it. At the present time the lily of the valley appears especially good. Twenty thousand Easter lilies are being forced for Easter and the young plants look particularly good. Just how well they can be grown in the southwest is shown herewith in our reproduction of a photograph of one of the lily houses taken just previous to Easter one year ago. Then

FROM THE BRITISH TRADE PAPERS.

Tuberous Tropaeolums.—Some years ago Mr. Filtzherbert came to the same conclusion as Mr. Arnott and others, that there was an earlier-blooming variety of Tropeolum tuberosum. In confirmation I will add my testimony that climate, at any rate, has nothing to do with it. I first knew the plant in Jersey, where it flowered in late autumn. Next, in a garden in Devonshire, I know where it bloomed (on a northeast wall) in August. My next experience of it was in Scotland, where I saw it in flower on a cottage by the roadside near Ayr in July, and on a cottage in Wigtonshire in August. Is it not probable that it, like many another plant, dislikes root disturbance, and that if one can leave it alone (covering up the tubers in winter) it will flower freely and early provided it is planted in poor soil—probably lime-rubble—the early Devon patch being planted in a north house-border among many other plants. I have here many tubers from the said Devon garden planted in various places, and after three years I am still without flowers—but I lifted the tubers. The growth last year was very strong, and a quantity of tubers formed. One bulb I gave away. This was planted on a little bank full of escallonia roots, and did produce one bloom last year. I think this all goes to show that position, a suitable rooting medium, and non-disturbance of roots are necessary to make the plants bloom.

New Rambler Rose Rowena.—Rambling roses continue to increase in popularity and numbers, and considering the trend of the taste of those who are specially interested in roses and the activities of raisers of new varieties, it may be assumed that the day is far distant when some decline may be anticipated in the favor with which these elegant roses are regarded, or in the number of novelties introduced. The list of rambling roses is somewhat lengthy, hence it is that novelties which possess the attributes essential to a variety of the first-class not only merit the attention of the rose-loving public, but are likely to receive the warmest welcome when their high qualities become known. The beautiful variety Rowena is one of the most notable roses of its class that have been introduced within a recent period, and should, when distributed in the coming spring, have the instant attention of those who are interested in rambling roses. It belongs to the Wichuraiana section, is really vigorous, and the flowers are profusely produced in large and elegant trusses. The color is best described as transparent rose-pink, with a slight shading of mauve, and in this respect the variety is quite distinct. Rowena was raised from seed in the nurseries of William Paul and Son, Waltham Cross, and is a valuable addition to the list of rambler roses.

Saintpaulia ionantha.—Such a delightful group of this charming little Gesnerad as was shown from the gardens of Hatfield House on January 23 at the Royal Horticultural Hall should serve to still further direct attention to it as a charming winter-flowering plant. It is of easy propagation, while its cultural requirements are not at all exacting. If the leaves are put in as cuttings, they quickly form plants, while seed is also readily obtainable. Raised in this way, there is, however, frequently a certain amount of individual variation, while from leaf-cuttings one need increase only the very best forms. Those shown as above-mentioned represented a particularly fine, richly-colored type. Like many other gesneraceous plants, this saintpaulia thrives best in a compost containing a fair amount of leaf-mould. An intermediate temperature suits it well. It is a native of the Usambara Mountains in Central Africa, and has been cultivated in this country for some years. Some of the more distinct forms have been grown separately, but the most striking is that with rich bluish-purple flowers.

The Value of Ashes in Winter.—The true worth of coal-ashes does not seem to be realized even by professional gardeners; and certainly those less experienced do not understand their saving powers. Should ashes have to be bought, it would not entail much expense; but usually, with a little forethought, enough can be saved from most houses for ordinary purposes. The saving of the lives of many precious plants can be effected by the placing of a few handfuls in and around their crowns. They will be saved from two possible evils by so doing—from rotting away and from being eaten by slugs. The most precious plants can have their crowns well covered, while those with delicate stems, which are liable to decay, can be well surrounded with the ashes. I have found them invaluable for keeping expensive delphiniums, choice old carnation plants, phloxes, crinums, lupines, hollyhocks and outdoor fuchsias. Of course, there are many others; in fact, any plant you think may be a prey to the slug or the wet weather. The ashes are easily removed in the spring, when danger is past.

The Winter Heliotrope.—The fragrant flowers of the winter heliotrope (Petasites fragrans) warrant the plant a position in the garden, for they open in January and scent the air for some distance. Essentially a subject for the wild garden, or for a position where a choice plant would not thrive, the winter heliotrope is not exacting in its requirements, for it thrives on fairly dry, poor soil, and also about the margins of a lake or stream where it may be occasionally covered with water. It varies considerably in height, according to the quality of the ground in which it is growing, and may be seen at any height from three inches or four inches to upwards of one foot. The lilac flowers are borne in strong, upright panicles, and are over before the large, rounded leaves develop. A plant or two introduced into the garden will soon develop into a large clump, and give no trouble other than restricting its growth when it is likely to grow out of bounds.

Trees in Paris.—According to some recent statistics given in "Le Jardin," the number of trees in the Parisian boulevards is 86,154, representing some 21 species. The planes are the most strongly represented, and of these there are 26,254 trees; the horse chestnut ranks next with 16,662 trees, followed by 14,173 elms, 8,920 Ailanthus glandulosa, 5,960 maples, 4,788 sycamores, 3,903 acacias (robinias), 3,197 limes, 942 paulownias, 539 cedars, 344 American walnuts, 238 sophoras, 123 poplars, 34 negundos, 27 service trees, 26 planeras, 18 pterocarpus, two ash, and one mulberry and catalpa.

One Thousand Pounds for Sweet Peas.—This year the munificent sum of £1,000 is being offered in cash prizes for sweet peas by Mr. Eckford, the well-known sweet pea specialist. The amount is divided over five classes. The scheme caters for the cottager as well as the amateur employing one or more gardeners. One class is open to professional gardeners, and another to boys or girls under sixteen years of age. All entries must be posted to Wem on June 26, 1912.

BUSINESS GOOD DURING LENT.

Although there was some complaint of dullness in business during the early part of last week, Saturday was an excellent day. In fact the business of two days had to be crowded into one for on Friday there fell what the weather sharps call "torrential rains," and the streets were nearly deserted. The eve of St. Patrick's day stirred things up, in fact, it will be recalled that in the past a good many things have got mixed around St. Patrick's day. The dyers, as usual got in their work on carnations and even went so far as to dye roses. Just think of it. These dyed flowers might be worshipped without violating the great commandment against idolatry for they do not look like anything we have ever seen on the earth or from the waters under the earth. However, dyeing flowers may be classed as shocking had taste rather than as a sin, and very few real Irishmen wear them. Compared with other forms of humbug and hypocrisy that are being constantly practiced, much of it by government officials, we can let it pass. Nobody is likely to eat dyed flowers so there is no violation of the pure food law. But in the light of recent events it appears that the enemies of pure food, that is the dopesters and adulterators, are stronger than the government. One of the retailers remarked recently that business had been better thus far during Lent than in any previous season he could recall. As the heavy rain of last week has seemingly cleared the air, it is hoped that the fine weather will continue throughout the remainder of the month and thus insure a good Easter stock. Some of the growers have been fearful that if dark weather continued a large portion of their lilies would not be in flower.

NOTES.

J. A. Peterson of Cincinnati was in this city on March 12. He was accompanied by his young son the state of whose health is delicate, and it is hoped that travel and change of scene will be beneficial.

Fred Michell of Philadelphia was a visitor. He attended the anniversary dinner of the Baltimore Gardeners' and Florists' Club and then came on to call on old friends. A. F. F.

SIGNS OF SPRING.

We have read that when we hear the twittering of sparrows in the early morning that spring has come. We hear the birds, but as for spring we have had a carpet of snow for several days and chilly winds that blow from the northeast.

CLUB ANNIVERSARY.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore was duly celebrated at Mt. Holly Inn, March 11, and proved to be a great success. The floral decorations were beautiful and unstinted. Festoons of Southern smilax trailed from the ceiling, twined the pillars supporting the reception and banquet hall and softened the light of chandeliers. Tall palms, banked with velvety cinerarias in rich shades and masses of carnations lent color, and on coming in from the snowy world outside a typical view met the eyes. The guests numbering nearly 300 were seated at small tables, each with its own decorations of carnations or spring flowers; but the speaker's table, seating about 50 people, was exquisite with mounds of lilies, spring flowers and vases of choice roses. Wm. Feast was chairman of decorating committee.

Pres. Robt. Graham, in a neat speech praising Robert Halliday, presented him with a silver punch bowl on behalf of the club and to the memory of the late Robert Halliday, its first president. An excellent orchestra furnished music during the entire evening, and Hobart Smoek, a celebrated tenor, sang between the after dinner speeches.

Toastmaster Wm. B. Sands introduced the following who responded, Ex. Gov. Warfield, City Comptroller James F. Thrift, Richard Vincent, Jr., president S. A. F., Robert Craig, Philadelphia, Prof. T. A. Symons, College Park, Robert Graham, president of the club, Hon. Geo. W. Williams, president park board, A. S. Goldsborough, Baltimore, Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., J. Otto Thilow, president Florists' Club of Philadelphia, A. T. De La Mare, New York, John Wescott, Philadelphia.

Preceding the banquet a business meeting was held and the following officers elected:

Wm. Christie, president.
Wm. Johnston, vice-president.
N. H. Flitton, secretary.
Geo. Talbot, financial secretary.
F. G. Barger, treasurer.
C. M. Wagner, librarian.
B. S. Merritt & Co. of Grange, expect to build another house for American Beauties in the spring, 54x100 feet of King's construction. Their range now consists of 25,000 square feet of glass, growing lilies, carnations and roses. They have a sport of bright Enchantress that shows up well.
Among the visitors this week was D. T. Connor, of the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago.

NOTES.

F. C. Bauer of Govan's is cutting fine mignonette and his houses of carnations are doing well. Mr. Bauer erected two large houses last fall after his return from Europe. Potted roses are grown in one; the other is filled with miscellaneous plants.

The windows at Wm. J. Halliday's presented a veritable tulip bed one day last week. Brilliant yellow and scarlet tulips with ferns as background, and trailing baskets of green above, held the eyes of the passing crowd.

We thought of Florida as we looked in Halliday Bros.' store. Green moss, pines with their long, fragrant needles holding the gray Florida moss, and in the center an araucaria.

John Wagner of Towson has started to erect a large house, but unfavorable weather has caused him to delay work on the building until later in the spring.

S. Feast & Sons' windows of yellow and white were pretty and dainty, yellow Azalea mollis and white lilacs predominating.

James Hamilton of Mt. Washington is planning to do some building in the spring.

TRADE GOOD.

The spring openings are having a good influence on the business of this week. The leading florists have had many calls for Southern smilax and the renting of palms and ferns. The weather on the whole was better last week and the sunshine was gratefully welcomed by the growers. Trade conditions are good. Flowers are very plentiful and of good quality. Carnations just now are of very fine quality and bringing fair prices. There is an abundant supply of sweet peas and violets and they find ready sale. Roses are coming in good just now, but Richmonds are quite short-stemmed. Killarney and White Killarney are always good sellers. Prices on bulbous stock are good, daffodils, hyacinths and tulips meeting with quick sales. Azaleas are also of fine quality. Among other flowering plants now offered are lilacs, genistas, deutzias, cinerarias, etc.

CLUB MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held Tuesday, March 11. C. M. White, of White Bros., Gasport, gave an interesting paper on "Carnations." There were several exhibits by the local florists, amongst the varieties shown were White Wonder, White Enchantress, White Perfection, Gloriosa, etc. Favorable comment was given to the White Wonder exhibited by H. E. Wilson and grown by Harry Merritt of Irondequoit. A paper at this same meeting was also read by C. B. Ogsten of Mrs. Kimball's greenhouses, the topic being "Roses." Several good exhibits were shown. The association decided to hold its annual banquet at Powers' hotel March 26, and the date of the flower show was fixed for the week commencing November 3. The next meeting will be held on April 8, when John Dunbar will give a paper on "Pruning."

NOTES.

H. E. Wilson has a fine display of Dutch hyacinths at the Main street store. He reports that business is good and he has several large orders for green carnations for St. Patrick's day. This promises to be a very busy season. They were busy last week with funeral work, sending over 26 pieces to one funeral, including a very large wreath of pink and white roses sent by the B. R. & P. R. R. Co.

R. W. Wilson, of the Rochester Floral Co., has had a severe attack of tonsillitis and has been confined to his room for nearly two weeks. He is making good progress now.

Joseph Werdein, formerly of Geo. Boucher, is now with E. H. Wilson. Two other clerks have also been added, Misses Bonibel Trenham and Cybil Nellis.

H. C. Schulz, representing Chas. Zinn & Co., willow ware manufacturers, had a fine exhibit of baskets, etc., at the Powers' hotel March 13.

H. P. Neun had a very attractive window display last week-end—the color scheme being purple and white.

Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., was in town last week calling on trade. H. J. H.

Albany, N. Y.

One of the most enthusiastic meetings of the Florists' Club for some time was held on the evening of March 7. An attendance of about 40 was secured by the announcement that there would be an exhibition of new varieties of roses and carnations, and these, displayed in vases upon a table in the middle of the assembly room, attracted attention and comment. Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., sent a large vase of his new variegated carnation, Benora, which he introduces this spring, and John C. Hatcher, Amsterdam, sent some choice specimens of Asparagus Hatcherii, a variety of A. plumosus, which originated with him and he is introducing. Several of the new roses which have been mentioned lately in THE AMERICAN FLORIST were also on view. An attractive exhibit of snapdragon contributed by Frederick Goldring, Slingerlands, brought out an interesting discussion late in the evening on the desirability of the retail florist carrying in stock some flowers, like the snapdragon, to cater to the demand of many people of wealth who become tired of a constant round of carnations and roses. A discussion on the methods of growing of to-day as compared with 30 years ago took place, and the consensus of opinion seemed to be that the improvement of three decades is in methods, and not in varieties. President Danker made an interesting report on his visit to Ithaca on February 23, the date of the organization of the state association. He and Louis Menand arrived at Ithaca too late for the meeting, but the work in the experimental greenhouses at the State College of Agriculture proved instructive and suggestive. Louis H. Schaefer, chairman of the entertainment committee, in behalf of the club, presented to the secretary, Robert Davidson, a silk umbrella. The secretary, after he had recovered in a measure from his surprise, responded feelingly. One new member was elected and two applications received. The gathering came to a close with the enjoyment of light refreshments. The next meeting will be held on Thursday evening, April 11, at the establishment of Luie Marx, 1054 Madison avenue. R. D.

TRADE VERY GOOD.

Lent has not as yet been felt very much in the floral trade and this is no exception to former years. It is the last two weeks in Lent when trade is rather dull, but if funeral work keeps up at the present rate that dullness will perhaps not be noticed this year. Last Saturday there was a regular run on funeral work and most florists who have a Sunday express delivery from the western growers had to wait for this to finish all the work on hand. The weather is still very severe and the thermometer going below zero every night, but the days are very bright, which helps flowers greatly. Roses are really good though there are hardly enough to go around. Carnations are more plentiful, but with a tendency toward weak stems. Violets are at their best as are also sweet peas. The bulbous stock is very good all through, and is moving nicely. The Easter plants are coming along nicely but lilies will require a lot of forcing. Hydrangeas, in some instances, have the yellows badly. Every gardener uses a different remedy, but nobody has a cure. Roses in pots look all right at present and should sell well.

NOTES.

A preliminary programme has already been drawn up by the local members of the Canadian Horticultural Association for the coming convention next August and when the executive committee meets here March 18 it will be presented to them for approval. A number of the committee have already signified their intention of attending the meeting, so we expect to have a full house.

The meetings of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club are very interesting this year. Essays are read at every meeting and the discussions are very keen and the question box is largely used. The attendance is in excess of last year, but it is to be regretted that the president is so busy a man that he is hardly able to attend.

The sympathy of the members is extended to Mrs. Miles upon the death of her husband, W. Miles, a member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, who died at the home of the incurables of consumption.

The Countess of Warwick will give a series of lectures on "Horticulture as a Profession for Women" in Canada, and this should prove of interest to all gardeners.

W. Tully has left for sunny California for a better job. LUCK.

Worcester, Mass.

The first spring flower show of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural Hall March 7. The hall was exquisitely decorated with flowers and plants, and the society and exhibitors were complimented by those attending for the delightful spectacle. The feature of the show was the new carnation Eureka shown by Leonard C. Midgley, who, with Walter E. Brayer, conducts the Westboro conservatories, Eureka is a seedling from Old Glory X Robert Craig produced in 1904 by F. A. Blake, Rochdale. In color it is a deep, beautiful red, and blossoms freely. Mr. Midgley was awarded a Blake medal for this seedling; and William Anderson, gardener for Bayard Thayer of South Lancaster, was awarded another for an excellent display of amaryllis, which were much admired. H. F. A. Lange had a fine display of roses. W. A. Munda, South Orange, N. J., was among the visitors. The awards were: Cut flowers—Edward W. Breed, first; H. F. A. Lange, second; Alyne W. Hixon, third. Carnations—Leonard C. Midgley, first; A. B. Knowlton, second; Mrs. John C. Whitin, third; George W. Knowlton, fourth. Orchids—Mrs. John C. Whitin, first; George W. Knowlton, second. Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, held March 8, was "Cineraria and Cyclamen Night," and two tables of potted plants of both these flowers, comprising about 50 specimens all in full bloom were staged by President John F. Huss. Mr. Ross, a representative of Charles H. Totty, who was present and addressed the members, said that a finer collection was rarely ever seen, even in metropolitan cities like New York and Boston. The judges, C. H. Sierman, Wm. H. MacKenzie and John Gerard, promptly awarded Mr. Huss a diploma. C. H. Totty was also granted a society diploma for his new Wodenethe carnation, a very large white seedling that is bringing him many medals and certificates of honor from horticultural societies.

A valuable paper, prepared by Alex. Cumming, Jr., head gardener of Elizabeth park, Hartford, on the subject of "The Annual Plants," was read by the secretary, Mr. Cumming being slightly indisposed following an attack of la grippe. This paper was very comprehensive and gave so many useful hints, especially to amateur gardeners.

March 22 will be "Rose Night," and Charles Roemer of Hartford has promised to address us on the subject of "The Flora and Fauna of Alaska." A large audience is expected.

George E. Hoadley, who presented the Hoadley Memorial bridge in our Bushnell Park to the city of Hartford, was welcomed into membership. Gradually the society is attracting to it such men as this, who are not directly connected with horticultural pursuits.

OBITUARY.

The Late Joseph Heintl.

In the death of Joseph Heintl from an attack of a paralytic type, March 11, as announced in our issue of last week, the trade has lost one who has been always in the front rank in any movement to assist the business, and Jacksonville, Ill., has lost a citizen prominent in its business and social life.

Joseph Heintl was born January 13, 1838, near Eger on the border line between Bavaria and Austria and was at the time of his death 74 years of age. With his parents and three brothers he came to America settling in Toledo, O., in 1856. Four years later he located at Terre Haute, Ind., where he engaged in the nursery and florist business. In 1870 he moved to Jacksonville, Ill., and established himself in the florist business at the present site of the Joseph Heintl & Sons' greenhouses where he resided. He subsequently erected a residence on Greenwood avenue where he lived at the time of his death. Beginning in a humble way he built up a business which became of large importance and he took a prominent place among the substantial and successful citizens of Jacksonville. He was a man of strong character, plain of speech and maintained high ideas of honesty, integrity and high living.

He married in June, 1866, Miss Mary E. Francis at Toledo, O., who with six children survive him, five sons, Harry of Toledo, Edward D., William, Orlando B. and Ernest B. of Jacksonville and one daughter, Miss Adele. There are two brothers, George A. of Toledo, O., and John G. of Terre Haute, Ind., both well known to the trade, and two grandchildren.

He joined the Society of American Florists in its early days, which membership he continued for many years. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. and the Masonic Lodge, Chapter and Commandery, both bodies rendering their services at the funeral which took place at his late residence, March 14. The floral offerings were of unusual beauty and the interment was in Diamond Grove cemetery.

Patrick McKenna.

Patrick McKenna, the oldest resident of Cote des Neiges and a pioneer in the floricultural trade of Montreal Can., died at his home, March 15, aged 93 years. He was born in County Cavan, Ireland and came to Canada in 1847, becoming a private gardener in Cote des Neiges. Later he became a tenant and afterwards established himself on the property, devoting himself to the production of flowers, fruits and vegetables, and founded the firm of P. McKenna & Son. He retired from business twenty years ago being succeeded by his son, James McKenna, who with his two sons, Frank and Leo, have conducted the business. Mr. McKenna took active interest all his life in charitable and religious affairs. He is survived by a widow, one son, and three daughters. The funeral took place on Saturday morning, and the interment was in Cote des Neiges cemetery.

Michael H. Lawlor.

Michael H. Lawlor, an expert on the care and propagation of trees, and widely known to horticulturists of the country, died at his home in Flushing, Long Island, N. Y., March 14, aged 63 years. He was born in Ireland and came to this country when a young man and went to work for the Parsons' Nurseries at Flushing, and assisted Robert S. Parsons in importing trees and shrubs from Europe, Asia and Africa, care of which was intrusted to him, and he became an expert in that particular branch. At the death of Mr. Parsons he went into the nursery business from which he retired some 10 years ago. He is survived by a wife, three sons and two daughters. The funeral was held from St. Michael's church Saturday, March 16, CHICAGO, March 20.—Policemen and others are wearing ear muffs on the street here the first day of spring this leap year of 1912.

It is a sign of the times that Fleischman, one of the Chicago retail florists, is now using full page advertisements occasionally in the daily papers.

ROBERT CRAIG, as recently demonstrated by his enthusiastic friends at the LaSalle hotel banquet of the Chicago Florists' Club, and on many another similar memorable occasion, certainly stands first in the hearts of his fellow craftsmen.

Glass Situation.

There has been an advance of 30 to 50 cents a box in the greenhouse sizes of glass this week, caused by the advance of 40 per cent in wages agreed upon at the conference the United Glass Workers' Association. A prominent dealer states that a further advance will surely be made later and at present prices glass is still a good speculation.

Ladies' Society of American Florists

Mrs. James W. Brown, president of the Ladies' Society of American Florists, appoints the following officers on board of directors: Mrs. Chas. W. McKellar, Ill., chairman; Mrs. Richard Vincent, Jr., Md.; Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy, Mass.; Mrs. E. A. Feters, Mich., who will fill the place of Mrs. Fred H. Meinhardt, deceased.

MRS. CHAS. H. MAYNARD.

The Chicago Spring Show.

The first spring show of the Horticultural Society of Chicago was not a financial success, there being a deficit of something like $1,500. There were, however, approximately 32,000 visitors during the six days of the show and the publicity secured for the trade is considered well worth all it cost, so much so that the society's executive committee, at a meeting held March 20, J. C. Vaughan presiding, appointed Geo. Asmus, Ernst Wienhober, August Poehlmann and Carl Cropp a sub-committee to prepare a premium list for the second spring show next year, the premiums not to exceed $3,000. Growers and others interested are requested to send in suggestions now, addressing them to the secretary, Jas. H. Burdett, 1620 West 104th place, or any member of the premium list sub-committee.

"My Face is My Fortune, Str," She Said.

The Rural New Yorker takes Prof. John Craig to task for permitting the use of his portrait in correspondence school advertising, the details of whose operations are not supervised by the thrifty Scot. Is this not the same Craig who tried to block the philanthropic work of the National Council of Horticulture and sought to stop the very valuable free horticultural publicity it had secured? The professor was willing to prevent this publicity having no commercial interest in view and prompted solely by the desire of big-hearted men to set the public right in matters horticultural and caution the lovers of flowers, plants and trees against sharps and the wares of sharps. Fortunately, every officer of the nursery, florist and seed organizations has been favorable to the movement.

"Crepe-Chasing" Florists.

The trade in general does not for a moment countenance the acts of those, who, like the buzzard and ghoul, prey upon the dead, and not only make themselves obnoxious but bring ill-repute to all the trade, by soliciting business at the homes of those who have just died. "To see ourselves as others see us" is not always one's privilege, but the following letter in the Baltimore Sun describes the feelings of one who was obliged to submit to this so-called "enterprise" (?), so brazenly practiced by some in the business:

TO THE EDITOR:—

I write in protest to the methods employed by certain florists or would-be florists of our city. There was a death in the morning. In the afternoon, before the undertaker had left the house, the representatives of two florists had called and left cards. The next morning a third one was there.

When the door was opened at the ring of one of them, without a word he walked into the hall. I looked at him inquiringly. He took off his hat and gloves in silence. Then in the most matter-of-fact way, remarked: "I came to see what flowers you wanted," and he produced a card.

"We're not ready to order any flowers yet," was the answer, while the door was opened for him to get out.

"Then I'll come back later for it," he said calmly.

"We'll order what we want through the phone," I replied, mentally throwing him out of the house.

Heaven knows that advertising undertakers, with their lists of bargains, are gruesome enough, but to have florists practically camp at your house at such a time to sell flowers is surely too much. Our case is certainly no exception, for another family in our vicinity suffered very recently in the same manner.

As for such florists, if they did but know it, persons with any refinement at all are immediately antagonized by such methods. They couldn't have given us the flowers.

Where will such enterprise or lack of feeling end. CONSERVATIVE.

Horticultural Society of New York.

A meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York and an exhibition will be held at the American Museum of Natural History, Seventy-seventh street and Columbus avenue, Saturday, March 23. The exhibition will be devoted primarily to orchids and roses, but other exhibits will be welcome. All are welcome to exhibit, whether members of the society or not. The exhibition will be open from 1 to 5. Schedules are now ready and will be sent on application to the secretary. At the meeting a lecture will be delivered by Robert Pyle on "Among the Roses in Europe."

The meeting and exhibition which took place February 24 were well attended. There was a superb display of cyclamens, and attractive exhibits of cinerarias, schizanthus, primulas, bulbous stock, sweet peas and other plants and flowers. These monthly exhibitions are well attended by the gardeners, who have thus an opportunity of meeting each other once a month and discussing horticultural matters. At the meeting a lecture was delivered by G. R. Cushman on "The Orchard: Insecticides and Fungicides," which was listened to by a very interested audience, who asked numerous questions. The membership of the society was increased at this meeting by five life and six annual members.

Buffalo.DISAGREEABLE MARCH WEATHER.

The weather has been about as disagreeable as March could produce, but trade has been fair with stock equal to all demands. Carnations are in oversupply and bulb stock is retarding their sale to some extent. Violets are a glut on the market, the department stores selling them at 25 cents a bunch of 50, but it is better to have them sold in a department store than on the streets, so the florists are not complaining as yet. Store openings are on this week, which will give several of the florists quite a good deal of work. Roses are in fair supply and of fairly good quality. American Beauties hold their price for good stock. Easter stock at a number of the greenhouses looks good.

CLUB DINNER AND MEETING.

The event last week was the annual banquet and election of officers of the Florists' Club which took place at the Genesee Hotel. There was a good attendance, but there were many faces that should be seen at least once a year that were missing. President McClure called the meeting to order and appointed tellers for the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

Wm. H. Grever, president.
Edward Stroh, vice-president.
Joseph Streit, treasurer.
Robert Scott, secretary.
Charles Saniford, financial secretary.
E. C. Brucker, Charles Guenther, Edward Slattery, trustees.

This year the club is manned by the younger members who are all enthusiastic and energetic workers and there is no question that the new officers will work hard to make it a banner year and the fall flower show a success.

After the dinner and election President McClure, on behalf of the club, invited W. A. Adams to take the chair as toastmaster, a position usually held by Wm. F. Kasting, who for the first time was absent and greatly missed. The toastmaster gave a detailed account of the trip to Ithaca, N. Y. The organization of the New York state federation of florists' clubs and the purpose of the organization which was fully published in the different trade papers. The toast list was not long, but lively, being interspersed by songs and lantern views of interesting places, the latter ably handled by Otto Gillis.

The speakers were Robert Scott, who spoke on the value of a flower show to the florist; David Seymour spoke on our parks, and particularly mentioned and christened Mahoney Park, one of our numerous small parks named in honor of City Assessor John T. Mahoney who was an honored guest; Mr. Mahoney spoke on city assessments and what the florist should pay from his personal observation and their apparent wealth. Ex-President McClure spoke on the general plan of the show this fall. F. C. W. Brown spoke on the art displayed to make a show a success. Wm. Donaldson, assistant superintendent of parks, spoke on what the new park greenhouses would have for the show. L. H. Neubeck spoke, as only he can, on what he thinks of the flower show. S. J. Mahoney responded to the toast, the younger element in business, and did them credit. William Legg spoke on the past and future of the club and Charles H. Keitsch responded to the toast of "The Ladies" as only he can, not forgetting to roast the toastmaster in an equally brilliant manner. William Stroh, Jr., of Attica, gave piano selections. Mr. Vincent sang and the accompanist was a polished artist. A Victrola was kept busy during the dinner. President-elect Grever was somewhat nervous over the honor conferred upon him, but upon being called by the toastmaster ably responded and promised to make this a banner year. The decorations were very fine and artistically arranged, great credit being due to the committee, Messrs. Grever, Brown and Stroh, for their work. After one of the most pleasant evenings ever spent by the club it adjourned in the "wee sma' hours," ending with all singing "Auld Lang Syne."

BISON.

Denver, Colo.

Plainly speaking, business has been poor. The weather has continued cold with snow and also cloudy for several weeks. Hundreds of the best buyers have left for California to evade the cold spell here. Business the past few days has picked up a little, but not enough to make a noticeable decrease in the surplus stock. Carnations have accumulated until there is little room left in the refrigerators. Dumping will be in progress this coming week unless things brighten up some. Even roses have gone begging and many remain unsold. Fortunately the American Beauty crop is short and just about meets the demand. Violets and sweet peas are plentiful and have to be pushed hard to sell. Callas and all bulbous stock are in excess of the demand.

CLUB MEETING.

The meeting of the Florists' Club was held March 4, but the attendance was very poor on account of the exceedingly bad weather. Wm. Wilmore read a paper entitled "The Dahlia." A vote was taken on the applications of E. Randall Bierbauer, C. W. Fohn, Colorado Springs; August Cassier and Verner J. Davis, Denver. Applications of membership were read from Henry Monaghan and Herman Wolff, Colorado Springs, and H. G. Stewart, Denver. An entertainment committee was appointed consisting of Albert Mauff, H. D. Beleher and Geo. Zimmer. Out of town members present were John Berry, J. W. Smith, J. E. Johnson and S. R. Lundy.

NOTES.

B. E. Gillis, manager of the Park Floral Co.'s store, 1643 Broadway, has been confined to his home for several days with la grippe.

It is reported that another store will be opened in connection with the Scholtz Drug Co. at Fifteenth and Arapahoe streets.

The trade in general extend their sympathy to William Freeman, whose wife died last week.

Visitors: D. E. Dungan, Limon; Geo. Fleischer, Pueblo; F. Seigelman, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York. E. P. N.

Boston.ROSES MORE PLENTIFUL.

There was a cessation of hostilities in the trade during the week with a heavy bombardment at the end. There is still an optimistic feeling that the storm has passed and we are for a time at least to have fair sailing. Carnations are still in splendid shape. James Wheeler of Natick had some very fine White Perfection in the market that were well grown, good stems, bearing large perfect flowers. Carnations went up in price somewhat from the low water mark which they had reached. Roses are coming in more plentifully. We noticed some elegant My Maryland roses in Welch Bros., the largest heads which we have seen for some time. The same firm had some nice Lady Hillingdons. This rose has not been seen at its best this winter, there being so much wood taken for propagating and grafting that only the smaller grades have been sent to the market. Radiance and Mrs. Taft are seen now, the former in splendid shape. The perfume of this rose has made many friends with the ladies, and the growth has made many converts among the growers. Richmond is with many getting short stemmed. There are no premiums to be paid on bulb stock, it all depends on the buyer and salesman. And there is a sermon in that for us all, whether we read running or walking. There has been a fair call for shamrocks. St. Patrick's day has passed, with the green carnation.

NOTES.

The widow of E. Marland died at Brockton hospital, March 12, of blood poisoning. She left a baby and three other children. This is a sad case, and we feel there is an opening for some philanthropic person to do some real charity work.

Charles Robinson of H. M. Robinson & Co., we believe would make a patriotic Irishman. Saturday he was wearing a green necktie, a shamrock and writing out orders with a pen filled with green ink. Can any one beat this?

A rain and wind storm of severity passed over Friday, leaving in its trail many washouts.

Visitors: D. McLeod, Concord; E. Chamberlain and wife, New Bedford; George Emslie, Montpelier, Vt.

MAC.

Tacoma, Wash.

Business has been somewhat quiet, but prospects are better now that spring is with us and outside gardening has begun. Some very good carnations and other sorts of cut flowers are grown and brought to the market by those who had heretofore given space for lettuce and vegetables. Bulbous stock has been fully equal to the demand with exception of Paper White narcissus. Judging from the number of good lilies coming in, we are sure to have an abundance for Easter. Every grower seems to be just on time. There have been a great many roses shipped in from Portland and California, as well as violets, and they have arrived in fine condition, but the prices generally rule low. The winter has not been very cold and all the outdoor stock has come through in best of condition. Bulbs are in bloom and lawn mowers are going regularly. Prices of cut flowers have ruled about the same as in former years with the retailers, but growers have not received as good figures.

NOTES.

The Northwestern Floral Co., taken over by J. B. Pilkington of Portland, has assumed the place of importance it deserves. Manager Severance has made a change for the better and everything shows that the man in charge knows his business and accomplishes things. It looks like an eastern place under eastern management. We congratulate Mr. Pilkington and predict good results.

A. A. Hinze has a whole lot of good stock, and business is very good. His Easter lilies are in just right and are the most uniform and best lot we have ever seen.

W. H. Manike has a fine lot of potted plants and carnations were in plentiful supply. We noticed other cut flowers of all kinds in good supply and quality.

Van Slyke & Seaman are bringing in many fine carnations. They are investing in several of the new varieties.

Mrs. Watson, the Public Market florist, has doubled the volume of business so far this year and prospects are good.

F. C. Smith, C street, keeps a fine display and is having a good business.

Come see my stock quite superfine;
My glistening Araucarias,
My Lilies strong and wondrous fair,
Ferns, big and green, no rivals know,
Bulbs of all sorts, the best I grow.
There's not a flower you now can need
But I can sell you cheap indeed.

Azalea Indica.

Is another specialty of ours, inspected personally by myself on my yearly trip to Europe at our grower's establishment in Belgium, who is a specialist in cultivating Azaleas over there. Only the best American sorts are raised and imported for me.

What is the name of the Best Pink Azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name.

Originated by the well-known Azalea specialist, Mr. Van der Cruyssen, of Ghent, Belgium. Millions are raised every year of this so world-wide known popular pink Azalea and are shipped out to every portion of the globe from Belgium. We are well provided and have a big stock of this so well favored variety in America, the Mme. Van der Cruyssen; covered with buds and flowers, ready for Easter trade, well shaped, round as an apple; in all sizes, 6-7-8 in. pots, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00. On account of scarcity in Belgium of this variety, we only were able to obtain a limited quantity of the smaller sizes; therefore bigger sizes must accompany the order for Van der Cruyssen.

Simon Mardner, double pink, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; De Schryveriana, double variegated, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Vervœneana, a well known double variegated variety, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Apollo, best red, $1.00 to $1.25; Niobe, double white, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Deutsche Perle, double white, 75c; a few good mixed varieties, such as Empress of India, Helena Thielmann and others, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50.

If we are out of the size and color ordered, we shall ship next color and next size, either above or below what is ordered.

In connection with Lilies and Azaleas, kindly try to buy a few other plants.

Spirea Gladstone.

What is a home, what is a store, what is a church, what is an Easter present, without having a few of the so much admired and so greatly in demand Spirea Gladstone, the pride of Holland? O, those charming sprays of beautiful pure white flowers! And the foliage, of such a beautiful wax deep green is a jewel in itself! Mixed with beautiful lilies and other blooming plants they will complete the flower decoration for your happy, joyful Easter home of 1912. Knowing the great demand for these plants during past Easters, when not half the customers could be supplied, we are well prepared this year for the rush, and were fortunate in spite of the scarcity last fall in Holland. When other florists' supplies were cut short by Holland growers we obtained enough of the bulbs to fill two houses with the choicest, and we are able to supply all incoming orders promptly. Price: 5½, 6 and 7 in. pots, full of buds and flowers, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or more, the same price. Some are as big as a small washtub.

Shasta Daisies, pure white hardy daisies, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100.

Chinese Primroses, 5½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.

Our New Improved Begonia Erfordii has no equal as a constant bloomer, winter and summer, in bloom now, 5¼-in., 25c; 5½-in., 30 to 35c; 4-in., 20c.

Asparagus Sprengeri, 2½-in., 3c; 4-in., 10c.

Asparagus Plumosus, 10,000 on hand, April, 1911, savings, big stock plants, 4-in., 10c; 3-in., 10 to 12 in. high, $6.00 per 100; large 2½-in., suitable for edging bulb pans, $5.00 per 100.

Our Hydrangea Otaksa can't be beat: full of buds; right for Easter trade: every branch nicely staked up, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 heads to the plant, 6-in. pots, 35c to 50c; 5 to 7-in. pots, 75c; $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Azaleas, like a plant on fire
With blooms that fill the heart's desire.
Choice Primroses, with colors chaste;
Palms grown to suit the highest taste.
The Springtime jewels are my flowers,
Pictures of life that brighten ours,
None fairer, better, you can find,
I have the best of every kind.

Lilium Multiflorum.

We have Lilies this Easter (1912) to burn, to burn; they are crackerjacks, to beat the band, the best in the land, the best in the land, the best in the land.

Three houses in Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japan Easter Lily, better than ever before. Our own importation from our general grower in Japan, raised from 9-10-in. bulbs started in 6-in. pots last October; have kept cold. Good, perfect foliage from bottom up. Plants medium size and in all heights, from 5 to 10 buds to the plant, 10c per bud; plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud. Just right for Easter. We have the finest lilies this year in Philadelphia and all over the country; is the town talk from florists and agents daily visiting our place. "We have never seen anything like it," said two well-known growers one day when visiting our place together. We have three houses full in 6-in. pots nicely staked up, medium height, and can supply all applications.

Cineraria Hyb. Grandiflora.

Readers, please, just a minute, I wish to call your attention to one of our biggest growers filled with a big selection of that so much admired Easter novelty, the Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora, which will have no equal in the flower market for Easter, 1912. If you are not fortunate enough to see them growing at our establishment, then just imagine you were promoted to a paradise, to a garden in Eden, standing before a mass of flowers in various beautiful colors. This is the condition one of our Cineraria houses represents at Easter-time. Our new improved strain, planted in 6-in. pots, of medium tall sizes, are unsurpassed in the size and color of the flowers. The flowers are about twice the size of the old ordinary varieties, has big heads of flowers and good foliage; some of the plants are as big as a small apple basket. Price: 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 per plant; dozen or more, same price.

Ficus Elastica or Rubber Plants, in fine condition, perfect leaves, 7-in. pots, specimen plants, 28 to 30 in. high, $1.00; 6 to 6½-in. pots, 25 to 28 in. high, 50c to 75c; 5¼ to 5½ in. pots, 25c, 30c to 35c.

Araucarias Our Specialty.

We are the largest importers of these lovely decorative plants, the Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta Compacta and Glauca, the choicest last spring (1911) importation, ready for immediate shipment. It is of no use to look elsewhere for cheaper prices. We now control and will control the market of the Araucarias in the future.

Look! Bargains in Araucaria Excelsa. Such low prices as are quoted below were never known in the history of Araucaria Excelsa. Just think! 5½-in. pots, 3-4 tiers, 16 to 18 in. high, 50c to 60c.

Plants, 5-5½-6-7 in. pots, raised from top cuttings, no seedlings. 15-18-20-25-30 in. high, 4-5-6 tiers, 2-3-4-5 years old, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. We give big value for your money. Just think! An elephant, 6-in. pot, 4 years old, 4-5-6 tiers, 20-25 in. high, for only 75c; a jumbo, 6-in. pot, 5 year old, 25 in. and over, as wide as a bushel basket, 5-6 tiers, for only $1.00; and what do you think! a holy terror, 30 to 40 in. and over, 5-6-7 tiers, worth $2.00, for only $1.25 to $1.50.

We also have the nicest Araucaria Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, 3 to 4 tiers, 18 to 24 in. high, 25 to 30 in. across, 6-in. pots, a house full, perfect jewels, for only $1.25 to $1.50, worth $1.75 to $2.00.

Von Sion Daffodils (double nosed), best double yellow Narcissus in cultivation, three bulbs planted in a 5½ to 6-in. pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Murillo, Tournesole and Red Tulips in 9-in. pans, 7 to 9 bulbs in a pan, Asparagus around, 60c; 10-in., 75c.

Tulips, Tournesole, double, red and yellow variegated, and Murillo, beautifully shaded rose pink, three bulbs in one pot (4-in.), $15.00 per 100 pots; $1.80 per dozen.

Hyacinths, 3 plants in a 9-in. pan, edging of Asparagus Plumosus, 60c per pan; 10-in. pans, trimmed with Asparagus also, 75c to $1.00.

Hyacinths of our own importation, four best colors, Gertrude, best pink; King of the Blues, best blue; Grand Maitre, light blue; La Grandesse, best white; 4-in. pots, in bud or bloom, $12.00 per 100.

Diclytra Spectabilis (Bleeding Heart), hardy, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c and 50c.

Ipomea Noctiflora, our so well-known pure white, waxy Moonvine, bearing flowers very fragrant and as big as a saucer, 2½-in. pots; will make good stock for you to propagate from; $5.00 per 100.

Latania Borbonica (Chinese Fan Palms), 30 to 35 in. high, 6 to 7 in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; made up of 3 6-in. pots, 25 to 30 in. high, 50c to 60c.

Areca Lutescens, 3 plants in a 4-in. pot, 20c to 25c; 5¼-in., 3 plants in a pot, 30c.

Cocos Palms, Cocos Weddelliana, large 3-in. pots, 15c, 20c to 25c.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 6-in. pots, 25, 30, 35, 40-45 in. high, 4, 5, 6 years old, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Kentia Belmoreana, single plants, 5½-6-7 in. pots, 5-6-7 years old, 25-30-35-40 in. high, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 25 to 30 in. high, made up of 3 plants, 6 to 7 in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; 4-in. 20 in. high, 20c to 25c.

Our Ferns this year are exceptionally very fine. Boston, Scottii, Whitmani and Scholzei, 5½ and 6 in., 35c, 40 and 50c, 7-in., large, bushy plants, 75c to $1.00. As big as a bushel basket, $1.00 to $1.25, 8-in., as big as a washtub, only $1.50, worth $2.00 to $3.00. Remember, all our Ferns are pot-grown, not lifted from benches.

Neph. Giatrasii, a new beautiful fern, an improvement on Scottii, much shorter and bushier than Scottii, 5½ in. pots, 50c; 3-in. pots, 20c; 4-in., 25c.

Ferns for Dishes, big assortment, 2½-in. pots, at $4.00 per 100.

Mention if ship with or without pots.

Cash with order, please.

All plants must travel at purchaser's risk.

The "Spencer" Type of SWEET PEAS FOR 1912

Special Re-Selected Stocks.

By reason of their increased size, waved or fluted appearance and charming blendings of harmonious colors, the new "SPENCER" TYPE may be appropriately described as TRULY GIGANTIC "ORCHID-FLOWERED." The flowers are not only of extremely large size, and attractively waved or crinkled, but are distinct also in having the outer edges of the standard and wings serrated. The standard is broad and tall; the wings are broad, well spread and generally held erect by the keel.

We were the first to grow the original Countess Spencer (prior to its introduction) in America. By reason of its "sportive character" it has required years of labor to perfect even the original "Countess,"—but this same tendency "to break" has resulted in giving a number of colors which now come true,—not as usually sold, but from our choice RE-SELECTED STOCKS.

Boddingtons Quality Cannas.

Are true to name, have two to three good eyes, are well cured, sound and dormant, and give absolute satisfaction. Our sales last year were nearly 700,000, and not an overgrown kick. The Canna crop this year, however, is very short, and we advise placing orders early to secure stock. Delivery can be made at purchaser's option.

We are the largest handlers of Cannas in the world. Our prices upon Cannas will bear comparison with any house in the Canna business.

Our Cannas are true to name—two and three, sometimes four eyes—are sound, dormant, and are packed 250 in a box; two can be "cleated" together and shipped as one. One box of 250 sold at a thousand rate; it is cheaper for you to buy a box of 250 than 200 at 100 rate. Write for special prices for quantities.

If any Cannas are not found here, it may be understood that they are superseded by the foregoing. If selection is left to us, we will substitute or send only the best for all purposes.

The third annual banquet of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held at the Fairmount Hotel, Saturday, March 2, and was attended by about 125 gentlemen and 50 ladies. The banquet hall was beautifully decorated as were also the tables, at each of which were seated 12 persons. While the banquet was being served the guests were entertained by a fine musical programme. After full justice was done the menu, President Rossi rapped the assemblage to order and introduced the several speakers in a most admirable manner and covered himself with honor as toastmaster. The remarks were greatly enjoyed and then a spacious hall was opened and the lovers of dancing were given an opportunity to enjoy themselves.

A meeting of the growers was held at the store of Pelicano, Rossi & Co.

February 22, for the purpose of establishing a growers' market where flowers could be displayed and sold, and dispense with peddling them around. There were 15 present and it was agreed to form a corporation with a capital stock of $25,000, divided into 250 shares, 150 of which were subscribed. It was decided to erect a building and a committee was appointed to select a location and report at the next meeting.

MARKET RESUMING NORMAL CONDITIONS.

The business in both the wholesale and retail stores is assuming normal conditions for this time of the year, and the oversupply which was so pronounced two or three weeks ago is gradually disappearing and the dealers are feeling more optimistic, for Easter is only two weeks away and the growers are receiving good sized orders. There is plenty of stock, however, of all kinds; roses are coming in much heavier, and they are of superb quality, but they move quite easily. American Beauties are in much better supply and the quality of some of the stock is superb, and there is a good proportion of short and medium lengths. Killarney and White Killarney are both in magnificent condition with almost all the growers, and Richmond is in heavier supply, and some very fine stock is to be had. My Maryland is beginning to be received in large quantities and Mrs. Jardine, Uncle John are the older varieties that are in the daily shipments. The receipts of the novelties are not large, the propagation of all having been as large as possible which has necessarily kept the cut down, but the blooms of Melody, Prince de Bulgarie, Dark Pink, Double Pink and Double White Killarney that have been offered are quickly taken up, and Mrs. Aaron Ward proves a taking rose with all. It looked the first of the week as if carnations were a little short of the demand but this no doubt was caused by the large demand for white on Saturday which appeared later as green. The price of white advanced and its use for St. Patrick's day caused the buyers to purchase heavier in the colored varieties and the supply of all was exhausted. Monday there was a shortage of all colors, but Tuesday receipts were large enough to meet all demands. The dyeing of white carnations was very general and a few attempted roses and sweet peas and how ridiculous they looked. Green carnations are bad enough but save us from any attempt at the rest of the beautiful flowers dyed. Bulb stock is in plentiful supply, as are also lilies and lily of the valley and callas move very slowly. Violets are in plentiful supply and many sales are made at low prices. The home-grown stock that is fragrant sell well and at good prices, but the stock that is shipped in from

Warm Weather

That, according to Miss Ludlow, of Vaughan's Seed Store, is what we want now, and nearly everybody will agree with her. How about it, Mr. Weather Man?

long distances moves very slowly and much of it is sold at low prices, and the retailers feature it a bargain. There is a good assortment of spring flowers which add to the variety. One of the well posted dealers sums the week's condition up as follows: "Violets were in excellent condition and up to Saturday last were not moving at all, the rose market was fairly good and in comparison with the previous week showed improvement. Orchids are received in good quantities but there is little demand for them. Lilies are very plentiful, carnations are selling a little better. The whole market had taken on a much stronger tone but the blizzard during the middle of the week set it back again. Sweet peas are of excellent quality and have never been sold at such low prices at this time of the year." The outlook for bulbous stock is good, the report being made that some of the growers have not forced more than 50 per cent of what they planted up to date, so the outlook is for a large supply at Easter.

NOTES.

The report of the small parks' commission recommending a consolidation of different park boards and the establishment of a forest preserve will be submitted to the city and council at the next meeting. It contends that the ten park boards now in operation would be more efficient if consolidated. At the exhibition of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, held at the Art Institute, J. C. Vaughan, chairman of the executive committee, made a plea for the erection of a horticultural hall in Chicago, such as they have in Boston and Philadelphia.

Kennicott Bros. Co. has just about disposed of their large supply of bronze galax and has now turned their attention to the Easter business. This firm celebrated St. Patrick's day by painting the interior of their store a beautiful Irish green.

Frank Ayres, Chas. W. McKellar's popular store man, and Miss Eugenie Robbin, were married at the St. James Parish last Wednesday, March 20, Congratulations, Mr. Ayres, and may all your troubles be little ones.

Andrew McAdams, we are pleased to learn, is much better and able to be about the greenhouses again.

Geo. A. Kuhl, is still at the Presbyterian hospital but is progressing very satisfactorily.

The George M. Garland Co. is going to give away free 100 feet of Garland semi-malleable gutters, including all the necessary fittings and drilled for any size glass, to the first florist who will write and tell them correctly what their new invention in modern greenhouse construction is. The offer is open until May 1, 1912, and the manufacturers will be greatly pleased to hear from all the florists who would like to have 100 feet of gutter free.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting some very fancy orchids and the large supply of beautiful blooms that are seen at the store now are greatly admired by their many customers. Roses, carnations, sweet peas, violets, lily of the valley and other seasonable stock are arriving in fine condition and high grade quality stock in all lines is offered. The firm's supply of lilies for Easter will be large and of its usual fine quality.

The Chicago Carnation Co. is receiving many congratulations for their success at the flower show in winning so many premiums with such a large number of competitors, and especially the sweepstake prize for best seedling carnation. The stock now being cut is of high quality and many blooms fit for the exhibition table are in their daily shipments. The cut at present is large and promises to continue so until Easter.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is receiving a large supply of choice stock of all kinds, with Killarney roses showing up exceptionally well. The sweet peas that Frank Felke is shipping to this house are of the same quality that he exhibited at the show last week and it is needless to say that his stock is disposed of almost as soon as it is placed on sale.

The Superior Machine & Boiler Works is looking for a banner year for the prospects at present are very bright and the thing that seems to keep the growers most from placing their orders is the unsettled and unfavorable market conditions. Mr. Weiler says that the inquiries are numerous and as we have mentioned before the outlook very bright.

W. F. Duntmann of Bensenville is offering a fine lot of Asparagus plumosus in three and one-half inch pots at very low prices. Mr. Duntmann planned on using the plants to stock up the greenhouse that he intended to build this spring, but since he has given up the idea of building he has been selling them at a sacrifice because he is crowded for room.

Bassett & Washburn are coming right on with a large crop of American Beauty roses and a good supply in all grades can be seen at the store this week. The supply of lilies for Easter will be large as far as this house is concerned and the quality will be the same that has been offered by this firm the past month.

Hoerber Bros. are also one of the progressive concerns of this city who always manage to get in crop with their roses for the holidays or when they are bringing the best prices. They will soon be cutting heavily in Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond and will have a large supply to offer for Easter.

Phil. Schupp says that J. A. Budlong's stock is coming along fine and that his firm is now assured of a large supply for Easter. The My Maryland roses that this house is offering are of the finest quality, as well as the carnations, sweet peas, lilies, American Beauty and other roses.

The Des Plaines Violet Co. is well pleased with the fine showing that it made at the spring show at the Art Institute last week where it won first prize on double violets. The entire output of their violet range is handled by the J. B. Deamud Co. of this city.

A. J. Stahelin of Redford, Mich., was so well pleased with his movable greenhouses that he has again placed an order with the George M. Garland Co. of Des Plaines for four houses, 35-11x173 feet.

Frank Johnson of the A. L. Randall Co. is away on another business trip. Mr. Johnson is some salesman as well as a traveler and always comes back with his order book pretty well filled.

Miss Marion Garland celebrated her eighteenth birthday with a party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sol. Garland, at Des Plaines last Sunday, March 17.

The Des Plaines Floral Co.'s stock has about recovered from the recent set back by injury from gas and the plants are again bearing large beautiful blooms of choice carnations. One can not help but notice the fine condition that the stock is in and some of the finest Conquest we ever had the pleasure to look upon were seen at this establishment last week. Messrs Blewitt & Priskett, the proprietors, are going into the propagating business more heavily and several benches of strong healthy carnation cuttings are already in fine shape and awaiting orders.

Wietor Bros. will again be in full crop with roses and carnations when they are most needed and are going to be particularly well fixed in American Beauties, Richmond, Killarney, Mrs. Jardine and Uncle John for Easter. The American Beauties, especially, the long stemmed stock that this firm is cutting now are of exceptionally fine quality and the shipments that arrived at the store last Monday morning were disposed of as soon as offered for sale. The shipping trade has picked up considerably the past week with the result that large quantities of choice stock were shipped out daily.

J. F. Wilcox and his foreman, Mr. Foster of Council Bluffs, Ia., were in the city the past week calling on the greenhouse material men and inspecting several of the up-to-date ranges of greenhouses in this vicinity. Mr. Wilcox is planning on building a large range of greenhouses and his mission here was mainly to look over the various kinds of construction. He was undecided when he left for home as to whether he would build connected or disconnected houses.

The W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co. of Princeton, Ill., has leased space on the local market and is now selling its stock at wholesale at 56 East Randolph street. This is the firm that exhibited the fine vases of Killarney and White Killarney roses at the show last week that were greatly admired by the trade. W. E. Trimble, who is in charge of the store, says that business for the opening week was good and fully up to his expectations.

The Chicago Fruit & Floral House, 39 West Randolph street, has gone out of the fruit business and is now dealing in flowers exclusively and doing business under the new firm name of the Chicago Floral House.

Gust. Rusch of Milwaukee was in the city for a few days last week taking in the spring flower show at the Art Institute and attending to other important business.

Frank Felke of Wilmette is particularly proud of the fine showing that he made with his prize winning sweet peas at the spring show in the Art Institute last week.

Chas Zopfe is another one of the enterprising young florists of this city who believes in advertising on the screens in the local moving picture theatres.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. is doing a tremendous business at their Edgebrook establishment and from six to eight men are kept constantly on the jump doing nothing but packing the stock and getting it ready for shipment. This firm is fortunate in having a large supply of choice blooming plants for the Easter trade, and it looks as if it will have no trouble in disposing of the Easter lilies, baby ramblers, hydrangea, rhododendrons, azaleas, spirea, Japan maples and lilacs. The supply of decorative stock is large and complete and the proprietors are confident that they will not have to turn any orders away for any plants in this line. The first importation of nursery stock, a car load, arrived last week.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are well pleased with the way business has been the past week and they say that they have no kick coming for both the local and shipping trade has been very good considering the present unfavorable market conditions. A. L. Vaughan says his firm will be right on the job for Easter with a large supply of choice stock, especially lilies, roses and carnations.

Henry Smith, the pioneer florist of Grand Rapids, Mich., took in the flower show at the Art Institute and talked peonies with E. E. Pieser, the Peony King here last week. Mr. Smith is well known to the local trade and those who visited his place during the market gardeners' convention are yet talking about the delicious grapes that they ate while they inspected his large vineyard.

John Kruchten has made arrangements with some of the large lily growers in this vicinity to handle their stock for Easter and it is safe to say that he will have about 40,000 choice cut blooms to offer to the trade during Easter week. Mr. Kruchten is rapidly building up a nice trade and all that he needs now is a few good out of town buyers.

The J. B. Deamud Co. will be headquarters for a fine grade of local grown double violets for Easter and it is the same stock that won first prize at the spring flower show in the Art Institute last week. This firm will also have a large supply of lilies for the Easter trade and will be prepared to fill all orders in full.

H. Van Gelder of Percy Jones has been dealing quite heavily in wild smilax the past week and some good sized orders have been filled. One of this firm's carnation growers has a large number of white, light pink and Enchantress cuttings yet to offer and Mr. Van Gelder is now busy booking orders for the same.

Tim Matchen says Peter Reinberg's crops of both roses and carnations are doing fine and that his firm will be particularly well fixed in these flowers for Easter. American Beauties of unusually fine quality, especially in the longer grades, are arriving in much larger quantities at the store this week.

Edw. Amerpohl, the efficient manager of the Janesville Floral Co., of Janesville, Wis., was a most welcome visitor at the flower show last week. Mr. Amerpohl is on the lookout for a good working foreman, one thoroughly experienced in growing roses, carnations and bedding plants.

John Zech is still receiving treatment for rheumatism in the Sacred Heart Sanitarium in Milwaukee and from last reports he was getting along nicely and it is expected that he will return home the latter part of the week or the first part of next week.

Lord & Burnham Co.'s office, under the management of Geo. Sykes, is certainly shaking the order plum tree with splendid success. Among other good things he mentioned in a casual way were the following orders lately booked: W. B. Davis, Aurora, two pipe frame houses 30 x 200 feet. W. B. is a brother to J. W. Davis, whose range of L. & B. iron frame houses, 43 x 600 feet, at Bettendorf, Ia., was written up in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, issue of March 9; Douglas Smith of Winnetka, a curved eave iron frame house; an ornamental range for O. G. Foreman, Glencoe, Iowa gets a curved eave house at Sioux City to be erected for J. P. Newton. C. W. Perkins, of Ruston, La., sends way up north for a curved eaver, and the Agricultural high school at Hays, Kans., also buys a curved eave house.

Vaughan's Seed Store is completing its jobbing orders for greenhouse-grown Asparagus plumosus nanus seed. This firm is taking advantage of the milder temperature to move its big orders for onion sets, potatoes, gladiolus, tuberoses and like items, which have been snowbound in its warehouses for weeks.

Chas. Bond, the well-known orchid grower of Naperville, is going to enlarge his plant this spring and has already placed an order with the Foley Manuf. Co. for two large houses. Mr. Bond consigns his stock to the A. L. Randall Co. where it always meets with very satisfactory sale.

The Raedlein Basket Co.'s store on Milwaukee avenue is a pretty busy place these days and the force is working like beavers to fill and ship the many orders that keep coming in. A recent large shipment of all their novelties will enable them to fill all late orders in full.

Johnson Bros. & Alexander are enjoying fine business during their special sales at the Washington Flower Market, 75 West Van Buren street.

J. Ogden Armour intends the coming season, under the supervision of Alfred B. Yeomans, to plant many thousand trees and shrubs for the outdoor decoration of his fine property. A new orangery was recently completed for the wintering of the collection of bay-trees and other tender shrubs.

The local horticultural society has changed its name to "The North Shore Horticultural Society," and intends to take active interest in all things pertaining to our craft in the adjoining shore towns, holding exhibitions at times in each. A largely increased membership has already resulted and is a source of satisfaction to John Newbore, the active secretary. Under the charter, jurisdiction is given in all towns from Evanston to Waukegan, Swedish Gardeners of America.

The Swedish Gardeners' and Florists' Society of America held its third meeting March 9 in the Teutonic Assembly rooms, 158 Third avenue, New York City, President Malkus Soderstrom in the chair. The object of this society is to get the Swedish gardeners and florists to come together for benefit and pleasure and to establish closer relations between horticultural interests here and in the mother country.

Most of the time at this meeting was taken up in discussing the by-laws and getting up a working schedule and all the thirty members present showed a large interest.

This society has been very successful from the start and had the pleasure of seeing eight new members added to the roll at this meeting. It has already a membership list of over fifty besides about twenty-five new applicants.

STOCK IN SHORTER SUPPLY.

Stock is shortening up considerable with the demand increasing and at the end of the week there was a good market for all grades and varieties. Carnations at some of the wholesalers were cleaned up. Some good white carnations bringing four cents for St. Patrick's day. Callas and lilies are much shorter in supply and Easter lilies are again bringing regular prices. Roses are selling better and stock is improving in quality as the days lengthen. Bulb stock, especially La Reine tulips are still very plentiful. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri is a little short of the demand. There has been a good call for boxwood by the case and southern smilax the past week. Novelties of all kinds are in excellent demand and not enough to go around can be obtained.

NOTES.

In connection with St. Patrick's day the city will celebrate the home-coming of Johnny Kilbane on Sunday, March 17. Johnny is Cleveland's champion pugilist and it is needless to say that the West Side is going to celebrate with a parade, speeches and "Wearing of the Green (carnation)."

STOCK SELLING WELL.

Last week started rather dull and up to the middle of the week there seemed little chance of any relief in the already over-crowded market. From that time on, however, practically all offerings of quality began to clean up and by the end of the week almost everything except violets and lilies was sold, and this week started as well. Violets are not selling very well, the demand being small, and the lily market is slow because the supply is somewhat larger than the call. Should the demand 'keep up as' strong as it has been the last few days longiflorums must necessarily be higher at present than they are. The rose supply is on the increase and a fair amount of bright weather between now and Easter should give a splendid cut for that day's business. St. Patrick's day took up all the white carnations available and there might have been more used had they been forthcoming, and they have since then, been more or less short in supply. The offering of other varieties and colors is easily ample. The bulb stock supply is fair and with the exception of yellow tulips and Dutch hyacinths is cleaning up fairly well.

NOTES.

Harry and Chas Pfeiffer of Ft. Thomas, Ky., have succeeded their father in business under the name of Chas. Pfeiffer's Sons.

Al. Brunner has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade in the death of his wife last week.

A. C. Heckman took a three days' trip through Kentucky last week. He reports a nice business.

J. J. Lodder's Sons of Hamilton have been sending some very fine sweet peas to C. E. Critchell.

Albert Sunderbruch and R. Witterstaetter were at Chicago. S. H.

STOCK PLENTIFUL.

There is stock enough to fill all orders. Carnations are quite plentiful and roses are of a fine grade and quality and are selling at a reasonable figure. Easter lilies are coming in in good supply and some of the growers are afraid that their's will not last for Easter while others state that they will not get in for that date, however, the writer believes that there will be enough lilies to fill all orders. During the past week there was quite a heavy demand for white carnations which brought good prices up to Saturday when they came in with an over supply

NOTES.

The Flora Bon which has been dealing in candies and flowers has made a voluntary assignment. This is the second time the place has been in bankruptcy owing a great deal to the high rental.

At Holton & Hunkel's greenhouses they have a fine selection of blooming plants and report some good sales up to date and expect to clean out completely during the Easter trade.

Gust Rusch & Co. say their growers are right on crop with lilies, carnations and all other seasonable flowers and expect to have a fine lot of blooming plants to handle for Easter.

Currie Bros. Co. reports both seed and flower business good. They have a nice lot of blooming plants which they expect to handle at their retail store for Easter.

C. C. Pollworth Co. is receiving a fine lot of blooming plants for Easter and report some fine sales. Their lily plants are in exceptionally fine condition.

A little something to do and lots to do it with will almost cover the situation in this vicinity. Carnations are in heavy crop, and the same may be said of all sorts of bulb stock. The quality is very good and the quantity available is giving the store men an opportunity for making some handsome displays. The retail trade has kept up fairly well considering weather conditions, which have been miserable from the personal comfort standpoint, although it has been considered beneficial for crop prospects. Funeral work has constituted a good part of the business done. The weather continues unseasonably cold and raw, and there will be little trouble in holding bulb stock back for Easter.

NOTES.

W. H. Culp & Co. are in with heavy crops of bulb stock. They are cutting some very fine Murillo tulips. They were called upon to furnish a casket blanket last week made of white hyacinths, lily of the valley and lilies.

F. Kuechenmeister's heating apparatus went back on him last week and the boiler men kept him without fire for one night. It happened to be about the only night for two weeks when such a thing could be done.

Chas. P. Mueller has been making an excellent show of cinerarias, also of seasonable bulb stock with good results.

SUPPLY IN EXCESS OF DEMAND.

Very bad weather with heavy rains the past week kept the people off the streets and the volume of business was the worst so far during the Lenten season. The temperature has been mild and the supply of flowers away above the demand. Saturday was a beautiful day and a brisk demand which kept all hands busy helped matters considerably. Although the supply of nearly all flowers is in excess of the demand some lines are scarce, gardenias appearing off crop. White roses were also sold up clean nearly every day, American Beauties are seen in quantity and will perhaps find purchasers when the public find out they can get them at a reasonable figure. White carnations were given a boost with the demand for stock to be greened for Paddy's day, but the other colors were as draggy as usual. Bulb stock stiffened a trifle, daffodils were scarce, there not being any large shipments, the growers evidently expected the southern shipments and for the most part have gotten the imported stock out of the way in time. None of the southern flowers have arrived as yet. Snapdragon is seen in quantity, very fine stock and much cheaper in price. Violets are very plentiful, sell low in quantity lots, as in fact does most everything. Good adiantum is scarce, but asparagus is wanting in quantity for an order; cattelyas in quantity if required. The commission men are urging special and week-end sales to the retailers and doing all they can in the matter of low prices to help to make business and to encourage the store men to carry larger stocks. Some of the retailers have adopted the suggestion and are, by means of advertisements in the daily press, letting the public know of the great price reductions. We understand these dealers to say that they are encouraged and intend to keep at it when like conditions, such as the present, continue or occur again. The plant men are busy as bees booking orders for Easter stock. There promises to be a full supply in all lines, lilies appear to be in good condition and about right in point of time regardless of coming weather conditions. Hydrangeas are also in full supply and ready to come on slowly and make good heads of bloom without forcing. Paddy's day saw the usual lot of dyed carnations and other flowers which sold fairly well.

NOTES.

At the Leo Niessen Co. corner they say they have to hustle to keep their large stock moving, but still they manage to do it, cleaning up very nicely each day's stock so as to be ready for the new lots of tomorrow. American Beauties are very fine here now. Charles Meehan says that the long sprays of leucothoe will not keep at this time of the season, there appearing to be enough substance in the leaf to start the dormant buds to growth and then the leaves drop off. The smaller and shorter stock is not affected and is in fine condition. Pennock Bros. made a showy window decoration with small gilt wooden harps in boxes filled with shamrocks.

FLOWERS PLENTIFUL.

The weather during the week was stormy and cold but Saturday was warmer and Sunday, St. Patrick's day, was more like spring, and although a southern wind was blowing still it was cool and chilly. Flowers of all kinds are still plentiful. White carnations advanced a little on March 16 and 17, for coloring green for the latter date. What the outlook for Easter will be no one can tell as it depends greatly on the weather.

NOTES.

The Florists' Club met Thursday afternoon, March 14, at Odd Fellows' Hall, 40 members being present, with Robert J. Windler in the chair. George Windler led a discussion on Easter plants. After the usual business the members went over to C. A. Kuehn's wholesale house where an exhibit of roses and carnations was staged. Among the exhibitors were the Oakland Floral Co., who showed a vase of long stemmed white sweet peas, Florence Dentzer. Vases of White Enchantress, White Wonder, Delhi, Washington, Sangamo, Gloriosa carnations grown by C. C. Murphy, Cincinnati, were shown by Wm. Murphy and S. S. Skidelsky, who are the introducers of Delhi. J. F. Ammann Co., Edwardsville, exhibited Enchantress and White Perfection carnations and vases of White Killarney, My Maryland, Richmond and Ivory roses. Vennemann Bros. showed White Enchantress, Enchantress and Rose Pink Enchantress carnations; Joseph House, a vase of violets, a new variety not named, that is very fragrant; Weber Nursery Co., a vase of carnations; A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., vases of Washington, White Enchantress and Gloriosa carnations; A. H. Werner, White Enchantress and Enchantress carnations, White Killarney and Killarney roses; A. Jablonsky, a vase of mixed carnations.

George L. Moore, professor of applied botany at Washington University, was elected director of the Missouri Botanical Garden to succeed Dr. Trelease who resigned in order to devote himself to research. Dr. Moore will take up his new duties May 1.

C. A. Kuehn has about completed his new house and everything is in tip-top shape. The new ice box is a beauty and the store is one of the finest in the country.

M. M. Ayres Floral Co. had a special and very original window decoration for St. Patrick's day. Genuine Irish potatoes, shamrocks and pipes were used.

Geo. H. Angermueller is receiving fine stock at present and is looking forward to a grand supply for Easter. The employes at Ostertag Bros. joined the union at the meeting last Monday.

Grimm & Gorley are very busy with store openings, and they had a big day Saturday.

Joseph Wors, son of C. W. Wors, is now in the employ of Grimm & Gorley. Visitors: P. J. Farney of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, Pa. W. F.

CHESTER, PA.—The greenhouses on East Ridley avenue are now conducted by John McGovern and a fine line of stock is on hand.

Greenwich Horticulturists.

The regular meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in Greenwich, Conn., Friday, March 8, with a good attendance. A fine display of plants and flowers was made. Three applications were received and 10 new members elected. The following prizes were offered for our fall show: Stephen Hoyt & Sons, New Canaan, ten dollar gold piece for best collection of vegetables; A. N. Pierson Co., Cromwell, Conn., ten dollars for best 25 roses Killarney Queen; Mrs. Chas. Waterbury, Stamford, five dollars for best Boston fern; Sam Prier Co., Stamford, five dollars for best Asparagus Sprengerl; fifteen dollars for show from J. E. Conine, New Canaan. Schedules for both summer and fall shows were adopted. The report of the judges is

New York.

A SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT.

The early part of the week the wholesale cut flower market showed just a little improvement and on Friday and Saturday the demand was considerably better although the increase in prices was very slight, except probably in carnations, the white varieties clearing out nicely, these being used to be colored for St. Patrick's day. The situation remains practically unchanged as far as all the other flowers are concerned that are coming in, but the outlook for Easter seems to be very bright and all dealers are making preparations for a large supply.

March 18—Business the latter part of the week was better, white carnations selling much better. The business has greatly improved this week with a slight increase in prices.

NOTES.

Directors Charles H. Totty, Harry A. Bunyard and Secretary John Young of the Society of American Florists have returned from Chicago. On their way home Charles H. Totty, John Young and Robert Craig stopped off at Richmond, Ind., to visit E. G. Hill Co.'s establishment. They were greatly impressed with what they saw there. The new scarlet carnation, Commodore, was the real cause of the visit. This carnation, as seen here, is more than is claimed for it and there is no question but what this variety has a very bright future. Charles H. Totty has made an arrangement with E. G. Hill Co. for distributing this carnation in the east and it will be seen at the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club. On the day of the visit of the gentlemen from Chicago, Philadelphia and New York, Mr. Hill and his wife were celebrating the fortieth anniversary of their wedding. Later in the day John A. Evans escorted the visitors through the Quaker City Machine Works, of which he is the proprietor, and showed what he was doing in the manufacture of up-to-date ventilating machinery. The party was then taken in automobiles for a ride through the city and parks of Richmond. On the train returning to New York from Richmond the party had the pleasure of celebrating the sixty-fifth birthday of Robert Craig. This was done in due and ancient form and will be an event long to be remembered.

The important topic at present is the National Flower Show and now that the local governing board has been appointed interest will be kept going in the matter of securing special premiums and the selling of space in the trade exhibition, all of which is going to make the Third National Flower Show the best ever.

Henshaw & Penrich are receiving large shipments of carnations of all the up-to-date varieties, but the best of them all is Wodenethe sent in by Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J.

A. L. Young & Co. are always busy and will be obliged to lease another store to take care of the large supply which they will have at Easter time.

William P. Ford is receiving a grand lot of American Beauty roses and sweet peas, and the supply of carnations here is of the very best.

Michael Lawlor, an old time grower of Flushing, L. I., died last week. Mr. Lawlor had retired from active business some time ago.

Walter F. Sheridan is suffering from a mild attack of rheumatism but is able to attend to business with the use of a cane. Y.

Morris Co. Gardeners' and Florists' Society.

Carnation Night with the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society on March 13 was a big event and very few of the members stayed at home. The rooms were filled with an exhibit that was superb in the quality of the material, and which was arranged very tastefully. As previously announced three essays on the carnation were read: "Propagation" by Geo. Hubbard, "Cultivation From a Florist's Point of View" by G. F. Neipp; "Cultivation From a Private Gardener's Standpoint" by John Dunn. The gentlemen treated their subjects exhaustively and each received rounds of applause. I hope the rose men will hold their end up as good at the next meeting. Peter Fisher of Ellis, Mass., showed Gorgeous and Benora in fine shape. The first named received a certificate of merit. C. H. Foltz had Wodenethe and Brooklyn previously shown in grand shape. G. F. Neipp, one of the essayists, exhibited Gloriosa and was awarded a cultural certificate. Florham Estate (Robt. Tyson, Supt.) showed a vase each, Alma Ward, Mrs.

C. W. Ward and Rose Pink Enchantress, and a cultural certificate was awarded. Robert Roper of Boston sent a fine vase of seedlings. Springbrook Farms had a vase of Rose Pink Enchantress and E. Reagan had a vase of mixed carnations. Norwarth Bros. of Easton, Pa., had one vase of Comfort which attracted much attention. Earnest Wild a fine vase of Beauty of Nice stocks, which received cultural certificate. Wm. H. Duckham had a superb exhibit of 10 pots of amaryllis seedlings which worthily got a cultural certificate and also a pan of Primula malacoides which was awarded a certificate of merit. Rose night is set for April 10. E. R.

Excessive rainfall during the greater part of last week had the effect of slackening up the trade to some extent. Saturday was a beautiful day and flower buyers were out in force and nearly every one wore a bunch of violets, which are very plentiful just now, and all the little "old woman's gardens" are sending them into market, at a sacrifice price, of course. All kinds of bulbous stock are abundant, but there seems to be sale for all of it. Tulips are especially beautiful and hold their own as to price remarkably well. Roses and carnations are doing well and will be in full flower for Easter. St. Patrick's day was characterized by the St. Patrick carnation which was everywhere in of uptown florists held large vases evidence, while the show windows of them, some very beautifully and perfectly colored. Preparations for Easter are now occupying the attention of all the growers, pushing forward some things and holding back others. There will be an abundant supply of Easter lilies, seemingly enough for every possible demand. Azaleas and rhododendrons will play an important part in the Easter trade, while some novelties will be brought out. The one time popular pelargonium was seen on some of the counters. Sweet alyssum is being used as a side flower in funeral work, fitting in prettily with hyacinths, lily of the valley and the larger flowers. The pot plant trade for Easter is receiving a large share of attention, as there is always a large demand for all kinds, the cheaper as well as the more pretentious and higher priced. M. C. D.

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, President; Marshall H. Duryea, New York, First Vice-President; Edgar Gregory, Marblehead, Mass., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary and Treasurer. Next annual convention at Chicago, June 25-27, 1912.

THE onion set acreage, at Chicago is likely to be increased the coming season.

SCHIZANTHUS WISETONENSIS is the subject of Ernst Benary's latest colored plate.

SEED POTATOES, true Red River grown stock, are firm at $1.75 per bushel, with very brisk demand.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, March 20, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $11 to $15 per 100 pounds.

THE question of field seed corn prices for April, when planting time is at hand, is an open one yet. Some think a high record price will be made.

LOMPOC, CALIF., March 8.—After a long dry spell we are having a very welcome rain and more promised. It is to be hoped that enough will come in time to save all crops.

ONION SETS have advanced sharply on wires for carlots from all points this week. Reds are now $1.50 to $1.60, whites $1.90 to $2, yellows, most scarce of all, $2 to $2.10, for good round lots.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. reports business this season to date as far ahead of that of 1911 and that the orders seem to be larger and include more of the extreme high priced seeds.

SANTA ANA, CALIF., March 18.—Since last reports abundant rains for present needs have fallen. Occasional showers until May will make good crops in most lines except those that should have had the winter in which to grow, which will be more or less short. Conditions for the tomato and bean crops are good.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—A. Currie & Co. write as follows, March 16: "We are well satisfied with the outlook for business at this time. This is our second season in business and the increase over last year is far in excess of our expectations, in fact, our catalogue trade at this time amounts to almost as much as the total of last season's trade."

Braslan Seed Growers Co.

Lettuce, Onion, Sweet Peas,

Growers for the Wholesale Trade Only.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, of Floral Park, N. Y., who passed through Chicago March 18, returning from California, is not very optimistic as to the effect of recent rains on the crops in the seed growing districts, stating that those seeds which have been in the ground since last December must suffer materially, however favorable the future weather conditions.

TOULON, FRANCE.—The Syndicate for the Defense of Agricultural interests will hold its meeting for fixing prices to be made by the growers to jobbers April 27 next. It is stated by one of the large jobbers that rainy winter weather has caused Roman hyacinths to become diseased to some extent. At its last meeting which was held January 20, the syndicate is said to have passed a vote endorsing the conduct of its affairs by the Albert Ordinaire, secretary.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The contract covering the congressional seed distribution is now being executed by the Robert Gair Company, Brooklyn, N. Y., who are employing their new packet filling machine under their own patent. It was reported in our issue of January 13 that the distribution was somewhat behind, but later information indicates that the Robert Gair Company have handled the work with greater expedition than they were given credit for. The filling of the seed packets is 90 per cent finished at this time and the work will be completed more than thirty days in advance of the agricultural department's requirements. The first report of their being behind doubtless had its origin in the fact that the Robert Gair Company were a little late in starting, but it is apparent that the progress since made has been unusually rapid. Obviously their new packet filling machine has proven successful and has fulfilled the expectations of the contractors in its efficiency.

French Bulb Acreage.

The following figures represent the number of acres planted to bulbs from which the 1911 crop was harvested:

Narcissus	3,552.54 acres
Hyacinths	717.75 acres
Lilium Candidum	395.36 acres

The professor in the French Agricultural Department does not state how the area planted for crop of 1912 compares with the above, but it is understood that there has been an increase in the plantings of Lilium Candidum and some falling off in the area planted to Roman hyacinths, leaving a total area substantially the same.

Grand Rapids Weather.

Writing under date of March 13, A. J. Brown, Grand Rapids, Mich., says: "We do not see very much difference between the weather we had in February and the weather we have at the present time, except that in February we 'waded' through several feet of snow, and now we 'walk' on a foot of solid ice. Temperature about the same."

March 16.—"Since writing you about weather conditions we have had another heavy snowstorm and everything now has the appearance of mid-winter."

Foreign Seed Potatoes Dangerous.

Although home-grown seed potatoes are selling at high prices, foreign-grown potatoes should not be substituted for them. The following statement on the danger to the American potato crop from the use of imported seed-potatoes is issued by the Secretary of Agriculture:

Europe has several potato diseases not now known to exist in this country, which, if introduced, might be the means of greatly reducing our annual yield of potatoes. Should these diseases become prevalent throughout the United States, the cost of producing future crops might be very greatly increased.

Do not, therefore, under any circumstances use foreign-grown potatoes for seed either at the north or at the south. The sorts which are coming to this country at the present time are late sorts and are not adapted to planting in the south where early potatoes are the main crop, neither are they adapted to planting at the north, for they will not produce a satisfactory yield.

They are not adapted to our soils or to our climate, and will not yield profitable crops; but the danger of introducing diseases not now present is sufficient reason for refusing to plant them.

Announcement The W. K. Fletcher Bulb and Floral Co.

has leased for a long term a tract of 40 acres of land located within the city limits of Des Moines, and especially adapted for the growing of bulbs. The change is made necessary by reason of lack of room to care for our rapidly increasing trade.

While still within the limits of Des Moines, all mail should be addressed to Valley Junction, Iowa, as we are outside the free delivery limits of Des Moines. The latter city will remain our shipping point as heretofore.

We are sold out of Gladioli for this season's delivery and the greater part of the coming season's crop is already under contract. However, we will be pleased to quote prices on strong divisions of field grown clumps of the better sorts of dahlias upon request.

Sweet Peas in Mixture

Vaughan's Prize Mixture—This mixture contains the cream of the new and standard sorts, including most of the new Spencer varieties. It is made up entirely of separate named sorts, carefully proportioned to its composition, and we can safely say "there is no better mixture in existence," no matter at what price or under what name it may be offered. Per ¼ lb., 20c; 1 lb., 60c; 10 lbs., $5.50.

Vaughan's Florist Mixture—This is a mixture made by ourselves, of principally light-colored varieties, suitable for florists' cut-flower trade. It is a very carefully proportioned mixture, and gives satisfaction. Per ¼ lb., 25c; 1 lb., 85c; 5 lbs., $3.75.

Eckford Mixture—This mixture contains over thirty varieties, including some of the novelties of 1911 and other choice sorts. Per ¼ lb., 10c; 1 lb., 30c; 10 lbs., $2.80.

NEW CARLISLE, O.—Two houses filled with lettuce, each 65x200 feet, belonging to W. N. Scarff, became so weighted with snow that they collapsed during the storm of February 21. The loss is estimated at $3,500.

FLORIDA truck lands, so extensively exploited, need from $20 to $40 worth of fertilizers per acre and considerable lime the first season in the new Everglade section. Only shrewd and capable farmers or truckers, with sufficient capital for two or three years should take up this work.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, March 18.—Mushrooms, 15 cents to 35 cents per pound; radishes, 15 cents to 40 cents per dozen bunches; rhubarb, 40 cents per bunch; lettuce, 15 cents to 17½ cents, small cases; cucumbers, $1.40 to $1.50 per dozen; asparagus, $1 to $1.50 per dozen bunches.

New York, March 16.—Mushrooms, 75 cents to $2 per 4-pound basket; cucumbers, $1.50 per dozen; tomatoes, 10 cents to 35 cents per pound; radishes, $1.50 to $3 per 100 bunches; lettuce, 75 cents to $1 per strap; rhubarb, 40 cents to 60 cents per bundle and 60 cents to 90 cents per dozen bunches; mint, 40 cents to 60 cents per dozen bunches; beet tops, $1.25 to $1.50 per box.

Outdoor Radishes.

In many sections of our country the radish or better cabbage maggots have made early radishes rather uncertain crops. In our locality the early crop has been practically abandoned, as there is no use trying. The first warm days in the spring the maggot flies get busy and they seem to do their work so thoroughly that no matter how large the planting, we have seen cases where not a single radish came through sound. Curiously, there are many gardeners who are entirely ignorant in regard to the true cause and nature of this pest. Most believe it is in the ground and many believe it is caused by excessive manuring. However, when we realize the damage is caused by a fly depositing eggs at the stem of the seedling radishes, and that this fly is very similar to a common house fly, we commence to understand our troubles. These eggs hatch in a short time and the young larvæ attack the roots, discoloring and finally ruining the plants. As these flies are good on the wing, changing of ground does little good. In fact, one man may never have grown a radish, turnip or cabbage and a neighbor may furnish all the pests needed. We have finally discarded all other varieties of radishes except Scarlet Globe. These we produce heavily, and the first three sowings are made under cheesecloth frames, which not only keep the flies out, but produce earlier and nicer radishes, as in the protected frames they become very tender.

MARKETMAN.

Endive for a Winter Crop.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you kindly inform me how endive is grown for a winter crop? What is the best variety for this purpose? When should the seed be sown? Can it be grown in mushroom pits under benches in the greenhouse? W. M. New York.

Endive for a winter crop should be started as late as possible to get fair size for many reasons. We will mention a few as a guide: If sown early, they often run to seed; they grow so heavy at times as to rot in rainy weather in early fall; they get tender with age and size and are easily hurt by frosts. On the other hand, the younger thrifty crop has no such troubles. We would advise "W. M." to make two plantings, one about June 25 and the other about July 10. Being easily transplanted, we always sow the seeds in frames broadcast and transplant into field rows wherever vacancies occur in August. They should have 15 inches each way, or better 12 x 24, which will allow of some hilling to protect from freezing in late fall. The best variety is the Green Curled, as we want size and hardness. If in proper condition, they will stand much freezing, more than celery. At the approach of cold weather we tie them all up and lift with a ball of earth and store in cold frames or benches much like celery; or they may remain where they are if there is room for hilling and covering; or they may be lifted with balls of earth, stood close together in rows of two or three and hilled over entirely like late celery. They will thus fill out with beautiful golden hearts; if the weather turns too cold they can be put under benches to complete the bleaching; but by all means tie up the crop as soon as danger of hard freezing is near. Another way is to lift without tying, place in frames or under benches and bleach in darkness.

MARKETMAN.

Growing Vegetables.

In a paper read before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society by William N. Craig, gardener at Langwater Gardens, North Easton, entitled "A Year's Supply of Vegetables from the Home Gardens," the essayist called particular attention to the advisability of everyone growing their own vegetables and thereby greatly reduce the high cost of living. He stated there is no reason why thousands of persons of moderate means should not raise practically all the vegetables needed for themselves and families. Vegetables will grow well in almost any soil on which water does not stand, clayey soils can be improved by the addition of street scrapings, sand, fine gravel or fine coal ashes, and soils which are acid should have a liberal dressing of lime, and a change of crops from year to year where this can be done. A list of vegetables for the home table was given with a few cultural directions for each, which included peas, beans, potatoes, root crops, cabbages and tomatoes.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen

J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O., President;
W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass., Vice-
President; John Hall, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Thirty-seventh annual convention to be held at Boston, Mass., June 12-14, 1912.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The superintendent of parks and parkings of the District of Columbia has completed plans for planting 2,500 trees this spring.

THE report of the "Transactions and Proceedings" of the first annual meeting of the California Association of Nurserymen is a splendid example of the fine work of the printer, and contains a verbatim report and all the valuable papers read at the interesting meeting of this young and enthusiastic society.

Augusta, Ga.

The P. J. Berckmans Co. report a heavy and growing demand for ornamentals and though they had the largest stock of these they ever handled, many varieties are sold out entirely. Everything is still perfectly dormant, and business the past six weeks has been more than could be attended to promptly. The winter has been the most unfavorable from the weather standpoint ever experienced, it commenced to rain early in November and still continues. Two days a week in nursery work have been lost on the average and planting, consequently, is very much delayed. We have had two snowstorms, one January 14 when 4½ inches fell, followed four weeks later with a fall of six inches. It has been impossible to get to some parts of the nursery for six weeks. Orders have been good but shipments have been delayed on account of the conditions caused by the weather.

A New Allanthus.

The ordinary Tree of Heaven (Ailantus glandulosa) is now fairly well known in gardens in this country, where it makes a stately and ornamental tree during the summer months, growing as it does at a fairly rapid pace. A new species, says The Garden, named Ailanthus vilmoriniana, has, during the last year or two, attracted considerable attention, mainly on account of the large size of its ornamental, pinnate leaves. Edwin Beckett of Aldenham House Gardens, Elstree, furnishes the following information relating to this particular tree: "The plant has made remarkable growth, and measures exactly six feet in height. The leaves, which are really magnificent, are produced at approximately every two inches of the plant's growth. These measure from four feet to six inches to five feet in length, and produce eighteen to twenty pairs of leaflets, the largest of which are about eight inches in length by two and a half inches wide. The midrib is a beautiful red, which contrasts strikingly with the green leaflets. The main stem is quite spinous. We have several others planted out, and each is forming a beautiful plant."

American Association of Nurserymen.

If the thirty-seventh annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen is not a splendid success it will not be the fault of the New England members of the craft. A joint meeting of the various committees was held in Boston, March 12, and was attended by Secretary John Hall, Vice-President W. H. Wyman and Harlan P. Kelsey, of committee on arrangements; J. Woodward Manning, committee on entertainment, and A. E. Robinson, committee on exhibits. A change in convention headquarters was found necessary, and Hotel Somerset was unanimously chosen. This hostelry is located at Commonwealth avenue, is of fireproof construction, thoroughly up-to-date, and affords ample facilities for the association meetings and for exhibits. Chairman Manning of the entertainment committee is absolutely embarrassed by the liberality of his local brethren, who are displaying that spirit of genuine hospitality so characteristic of New England in their determination to make the occasion memorable.

The dates of the convention are June 12-14. The business sessions will be confined to mornings, and will be occupied with the discussion of topics of vital interest to the trade. The secretary is preparing the annual circular of the particulars which he expects to mail very soon. In the meantime he urges upon the patrons of the badge book the wisdom of preparing their copy now so as to facilitate an early issue of that publication. Exhibits promise to be more numerous than ever, and those interested should lose no time communicating with A. E. Robinson, Lexington, Mass.

The various railroad passenger associations announce that summer tourist tickets will be on sale beginning June 1, on a basis, approximately of one and one-half first-class fares for the round trip; and the wish is expressed that many of the western members might make this an occasion for summer vacation for themselves and family.

Requests for further information regarding either the convention arrangements or as to membership, may be addressed to John Hall, secretary, 204 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The Wealthy Avenue Floral Co. is planning to rebuild their plant with modern greenhouses of steel and concrete construction.

OMAHA, NEB.—A very heavy fall of snow the last of February crushed in a section of the greenhouse of Peterson Bros., entailing a loss of about $1,500.

12 YEARS AGO

We Installed

— two “Morehead Traps” of type shown above in the greenhouse of John F. Horn Bros., Allentown, Pa. This machine has recently been replaced by larger traps of the “Morehead” type shown below—

Read What They Say

“In regards to the Morehead Steam Traps, the two old Steam Traps here were in use 12 years and did the work until we put up too many houses and then we had to get two No. 5, and these are large enough now for the entire place, which is 75,000 feet of glass. They give us no trouble here at all; pump all the water very easy and require no attention whatever. Work on all kinds of steam pressures, high or low. We have our boilers on floor level and have what you may call the Double Trap System. They deliver the water hot and quickly. Also feed the boilers with the city water when we need water by just letting it simmer in the receiver. We only turn off city water when we shut down steam for the day, so we can always hold the water line in our boilers steady by just letting the cold water valve so and the city water mixes with the condensed water and never helps to run the steam down on the boilers. We consider the Traps far ahead of the pump, as the pump is too slow and requires packing and also oil. Traps for us every time and Morehead at that. The old Traps would have lasted a lifetime, as they did not show any wear in the 12 years they were in use here.”

SAVED

A Carload of Coal Over Other Winters

This is what a prominent vegetable grower of Niles Center, Ill., has to say

Niles Center, Ill.

March 7, 1912.

Dear Sir:-

After using your #4 boiler the past severe winter, I would like to let you know that I am very much satisfied with it. It gave better satisfaction than the two other boilers we had in its place. I could keep my hot house plant about 4 degrees warmer than any winter that I have been in the business. Another thing I would like to mention, it is a great coal saver. This cold winter I will save about one carload of coal, compared to other winters. And thanking you for your prompt attention,

I remain,

Yours truly,

Nickolas Becker.

Don't Be a Barnacle Be a Pusher Not a Clinger

Barnacles cling to a ship's bottom—reduces its speed—have to be scraped off.

A Pusher helps things along—increases speed—is always wanted.

Some growers that you and I know are barnacles because they cling fast to their old-time way of growing and still keep on putting their money into old-time houses. Such men are sure-enough barnacles. They hold back the speed of their own ship of fortune. Some day competition is going to scrape them off. Then what?

They will scratch their heads and begin to listen. But when that time comes, Mr. Pusher will have the running start with his Hitchings up-to-date, repair-free Iron Frame houses and modern ways of doing business.

Years lost—money lost—and a long hard fight ahead for the barnacle man.

Keep the following fact right on the bottom shelf in your mind, where you can see it every day:

Top notch stock is always in demand.

"It's 'the poor' and 'mediums' that glut the market. Top notch stock can sometimes be grown in wooden houses—but it can always be grown in Hitchings Iron Frame houses.

Sash That Last

Single or Double Light

Exactly that—they last.

Last, first, because the best of materials is put into them.

Second—the joints are our special blind mortised grip lock kind that the more you twist the sash the tighter the joint gets.

Third—All joints are thoroughly white leaded and barbed steel dowel pins used.

Fourth—A round steel rod braces the glazing bars, ties the sides together and generally stiffens the entire sash.

Sash we made twenty years ago are in use today. Those we make now are a decided improvement. So it's hard to say how long they will last if kept painted.

Order, say five, as a tryout. If not entirely satisfactory in every way, we don't want you to keep them. We will send your money back and pay freight both ways. That's a pretty strong kind of a guarantee—almost as strong as the sash in fact.

Early tomatoes bring big prices

Get your plants out early

With Sunlight Double

Glass Sash you can have your plants and vegetables weeks ahead of the season

It's the 5/8 inch air space between the two layers of glass that enables you to get earlier - sturdier plants.

There may be a hard frost outside, but no cold will penetrate the 5/8 inch layer of enclosed air and your plants will have all the warmth and light that they need. The result is a quicker, sturdier growth, and you get the high prices of the early market.

Sunlight Double Glass Sash double your profits

They save you the expense—the labor—the worry of having to cover and uncover your sash with heavy covers of boards and mats. You can attend to twice as many Sunlight Sash as you can ordinary sash. It is good business to have them.

Aphine
The Insecticide that kills plant Lice, of every species.

Grand Rapids, Mich., February 6, '12.
 THE APHINE MANUFACTURING CO.,
 Madison, N. J.:

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of January 27th, will say that we have been using FUNGINE on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the APHINE for lice on lettuce, instead of _____ (a nicotine preparation) and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots. If so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this FUNGINE as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.

TRADE MARK

At most up-to-date places, and the mulching or dressing is now done with pulverized manures, which is much cleaner and easier to apply, quicker of action and more directly under control, not taking into consideration that very important point of being able to keep the soil open to the air. Pulverized cattle and sheep manure as advertised in THE AMERICAN FLORIST have been tried by us and we have found them both good, but we use the sheep manure more often than the cattle and back it up with an occasional dressing of Scotch soot, our soil being heavily charged with horse manure and rock phosphate from the beginning.

Olmsted's Improved Reliable Mole Trap

NO CHEAP TRAP SO GOOD. NO GOOD TRAP SO CHEAP.

The invention consists of the frame A, constructed with two crossbars, in which are holes to guide the needle bars B B. At the lower end of the needle bars is attached a plate to which eight needles are made fast, three on each side of the plate and two in the center.

Springs are furnished to operate the trap. The springs can be readily attached and detached.

Upon each side of the frame at C C projections are made which serve as stops or guides to indicate when the trap is pushed into the ground the right distance to insure the catching of the mole, and also to serve as a support for the trap. This is a very important feature in mole traps, for it obviates all guess-work in setting it.

To the frame is attached the lever D and trigger E, both made to work loosely on pivots.

This trap is constructed entirely of steel and iron. Each trap is packed in a strong paper box, 1 dozen in a case. (See that the name L. H. OLMSTED is on each trap.)

The Crocus Soliloquy.

Down in my solitude under the snow,
Where nothing cheering can reach me—

Here, without light to see how I grow,
I'll trust to Nature to teach me.

I will not despair, nor be idle, nor frown,

Locked in so gloomy a dwelling;
My leaves shall run up, and my roots shall run down.

While the bud in my bosom is swelling.

Soon as the frost will get out of my bed,

From this cold dungeon to free me,
I will peep up with my little bright head,

And all will be so glad to see me.

Then from my heart will young petals diverge,

As rays of the sun from their focus:
I from the darkness of earth will emerge,

A happy and beautiful crocus.

Gayly arrayed in my yellow and green,
When to their view I have risen,

Will they not wonder how one so serene

Came from so dismal a prison?

Many, perhaps from so simple a flower,
This little lesson may borrow—

While we all undergo a dark, trying hour,

We come out the brighter tomorrow.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Hotbeds.

Available bench space is always a serious question with the grower at this time, for the stock is growing rapidly and soon crowds and if not given room will grow out of shape and not make good stock. In order to meet this condition there is nothing better than a good hotbed, for here can be grown quantities of the young stock and they can easily be cared for and will make better plants than can be grown in the houses. These hotbeds can be heated either by running steam pipes through them or by making them of hot manure. Three lines of inch steam pipe, one in the center and the other two about eight inches from the sides, will provide a bottom temperature of 70° to 75°. These should be laid in trenches about 10 inches deep and covered with light soil and the whole bed spaded so that the heat can penetrate it. Steam should be turned into the pipes two or three days before using and the sash put on so that the soil may be thoroughly heated. After the soil has become warm it will take but a little steam occasionally to keep it so and this can be done when the pipes in the houses are being shut off in the morning, and when the fires are started in the evening. In using manure it should be damp enough so that it will not burn and be packed solid before covering with soil.

Gloxinias.

For the grower who has a retail business connected with his greenhouse there is no better flower that can be grown than the gloxinia for they make a nice plant for summer blooming and a select cut flower for work during the months of July and August. They are one of the best house plants that can be grown at that season and when in full bloom are very ornamental in any window. The bulbs should be started the latter part of March to have them in bloom in July and August. The bulbs should be started in 3-inch or 4-inch pots according to the size of the bulb, the soil should be two-thirds light loam and one-third manure (well rotted), is obtainable this is preferable to the manure. In potting fill the pot about one-third full of crocks and lumps of charcoal and cover with a thin layer of moss. Set the bulb so that the top is even with the soil and then place them in a house with a temperature of 60°. Give them a thorough watering and after that but little water until the leaves begin to form. As soon as the roots begin to grow they should be shifted to larger pots in the same kind of soil, always giving plenty of drainage. Never allow them to get pot bound until the buds begin to form but shift them to a size larger pot. Be careful in watering, never syringe them, and can watering is to be preferred, for water on the leaves ruins the beautiful foliage. As the warmer summer days come on they should be given a light shade.

Violets.

As the sun grows brighter and the days grow warmer the violet flowers unless shaded will grow lighter in color and much smaller, but there is always demand for violets as long as flowers of good quality can be picked, so heavy shading can be resorted to in order to prolong the season. The low sash houses are very easily shaded but it is more difficult to carry violets along into the warm weather in the large houses. We have often prolonged the picking of good violets into May by removing the sashes off of a sash house as soon as the nights become warm enough to do this safely and place wooden shutters on the frame in place of the sashes. This will keep the house shaded and cool and yet permit enough light to enter to allow the plants to produce good flowers. This can also be done with cold frames which is really preferable to sash houses for the shutters can be lifted at the back and propped up with short sticks and this will provide good ventilation. We have kept violets blooming with splendid flowers until May by this method.

The young stock if it is to be planted in the field should be set out at the earliest possible time, just as soon as with some sand added, or if leaf mould the ground can be ploughed and harrowed. The young plants take hold much quicker when the soil is moist and before the warm days come on, and very often there will be a dry spell in May, at which time it is almost impossible to get the young plants started unless they were planted early enough to have rooted into the soil. The young stock in flats and pots for planting inside are much better in a cold frame now than in the houses.

Gardenias.

The best time for propagating gardenias is in February and March for it is easy to maintain the high temperature that is required and good cuttings are obtainable. The best medium for the propagating bench is a mixture of fine chopped spagnum, peat and sand in equal parts, and it is very important to have sufficient heat, 75° to 80° bottom heat and 70° to 75° on top. Be sure and select the cuttings from strong growing healthy plants. The cuttings should be syringed two or three times a day and protected from the sun and no draughts should be allowed to blow across them. A propagated bench with a sash over it makes a very suitable place. With such treatment the cuttings will root in three to four weeks, when they should be potted in 2½-inch pots in a soil composed of half peat and half rotted compost. They should then be placed in a house with a temperature of about 70° at night and 75° to 80° by day for a week or so until the roots have grown into the soil, when the temperature can be reduced to 65° at night and 70° to 75° during the day. In three weeks they can be shifted to 3-inch pots and after this shifted as required, for they should never become pot bound. All the buds should be removed as they form to secure a strong healthy growth.

Shading Plants in Flower.

As the Easter stock and the plants that bloom later come into flower they will often need a shade to keep them in the best condition, for at this time when the sun in the houses is so strong nothing so quickly fades the high colors in azaleas, roses and bulbous stock as the bright sunshine. While whitewashing the glass will give the necessary shade, yet in many cases the plants are placed where no shade is wanted for some little time, and a much better plan is to purchase a piece of cheese cloth and stretch it over the bench on wires. This is inexpensive and easily arranged and it also protects the flowers from soot and dust that enters the open ventilators and blemishes any light colored flower. Where lilies are fully advanced and are being run cool this makes the best shade and a strip can also be run along on the south side of the bench to protect them from the direct rays of the sun. A piece of cloth of this kind can be used in many ways throughout the spring to furnish shade to certain plants when it is not advisable to shade the entire house, and with proper care can be used for many years.

THE ROSE.

Easter With the Rose Grower.

To avoid unnecessary worry and confusion during the Easter rush of business, there should be system used to lighten the work and careful preparations made. If there is quite a lot of retail business, one should have suitable boxes for handling their orders—boxes of all sizes. These boxes come in knock-down form and they should be set up and the lining of waxed paper placed therein, packed up neatly and close at hand. Have the wrapping paper handy, and everything sent out should show taste and neatness in arrangement, even to the twine and tying of the package. And don't forget an extra flower here and there; overcount shows at least a slight appreciation of an order.

Easter being a little late usually makes it necessary to resort to the ice box, if one hasn't an exceptionally cool cellar in which to keep the stock. This, of course, must be governed by the weather. At the same time the cellar or cold storage should be in A No. 1 condition and a good supply of various sized jars to hold the cut on hand. Do not be tempted to hold stock too long; it is a poor business method and in the long run will hurt the grower more than any other thing we could at the small margin made from filling a few orders by paying a top notch price outside. A disappointed customer is usually an indifferent one thereafter.

The work in the houses at this time consists of keeping the plants clean and well fed. They will take more air from day to day now, and very often it keeps one busy manipulating the ventilating apparatus to avoid sudden chills, draughts, etc. Cut off the steam as early as possible. Where hot water is used one will have to use more care, as the pipes cool slowly. Begin to ventilate early in the day also. By syringing quite early, even if the day should be a little cloudy, the plants will suffer no setback if they really need syringing.

Look carefully over the young grafted stock. The plants grow so rapidly in good surroundings that before one knows it the raffia will be cutting into the bark. They will also require more room, and this offers a good opportunity to retie any of them that require it and to loosen up the ties that are injuring the plants. It is not a bad plan to keep the strongest plants together, and when going over them this can be easily accomplished. Many of the weaker plants will amount to nothing from being overwatered if this is not looked after.

If one has one or more houses de-mention. It is rather hard, we must admit, not to have a disappointed customer now and then, and yet one should have an "eagle eye" on the cut. Take a careful inventory of the amount of stock to be handled and try hard to fill every order on the books even voted strictly to summer blooming roses that have been kept dormant during the winter months, and these have not been pruned and mulched, they should be looked after at once. Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Souvenir de President Carnot, Double White

EASTER BASKET BY C. A. SAMUELSON, CHICAGO.

Baby Rambler Rose in China Art Ware Basket.

Killarney, Mrs. Taft and others especially adapted for this work, owing to having been rested and in a dormant condition, should be pruned back pretty hard. It is not necessary to go back on the old wood, as we find the best results are obtained by cutting back to two or three eyes on the growths made during the past season, and of course removing all the thin, scraggy growth throughout the plants.

By pruning and mulching early the buds will not be broken off. Take off about three inches or more of the old soil carefully, so as not to injure the roots, and replace with good fresh compost, half manure and half loam, to which add a liberal supply of bone meal. The mulch should be in readiness before removing the old soil, and the work of removing the old soil and replacing it should be hurried along so as to have the roots exposed for the shortest time possible. Pack the new soil quite firmly and give the house a good watering, one that will reach all of the roots. Give the house plenty of air and syringe daily, but hold up the watering until the mulch begins to dry out somewhat or until there is new root action. The plants should be allowed to come along with the season, which will be all the forcing necessary. E.

Roses and Ferns.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you inform me if roses can be grown successfully with ferns and lilies? Can Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond roses be grown in the same house? O. S. Ohio.

Replying to "O. S.," would say that it would be hardly practical to attempt the growing of roses and ferns in the same house. Roses requiring all the air and sunshine that they can be given, whereas many varieties of ferns require at least light shading and humid surroundings. If ferns must be grown and the same house is to be used we would suggest placing a partition of glass at the north side of house, converting this space into a fernery.

Regarding the growing of Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond in the same house, will say this can be successfully accomplished. E.

COLUMBUS, O.—The National Cash Register Co. has offered to present to the Flower and Garden club 25,000 plants for the centennial.

Greenhouse Construction.

Paper read by D. T. Connor, of Philadelphia, Pa., before the Lancaster Florist Association, March 21, 1912.

The subject which you assigned me is so well known to most of the commercial growers that I feel there is very little left for me to add. However, I am glad to tell you what I know and what I have observed in my connection with this work. The first thought in planning to build greenhouses should be to construct them so that you can get the best possible condition for plant life under glass. We now have fifty-seven varieties of greenhouse construction, made up in various widths and lengths. There seem to be two styles that are preferred, the single side house and the ridge and furrow plan. I believe equal results can be had from both style houses.

The ridge and furrow is now built with high gutter lines, seven to 10 feet, and by this plan we get more direct light and a larger air space, which is desirable. We also obtain this same condition in the wide single house. In my conversation with many florists who have both style houses, I find they claim that the ridge and furrow house is cooler in the summer months, it is easier to repair and the cost of building is about the same. You are able to get more ventilation and for some crops this is important. With high gutter lines we do not have any trouble with draughts that are objectionable in the connected houses with low gutter lines.

The single wide house that so many growers are building, 40 to 75 feet wide and built in lengths, seem to bring out the proper results, but unless you can build this house in long lengths they will be found expensive to erect, as the gable ends cost the same. We have a great many growers who prefer the large single wide house, but, as I said before, good results can be had from both style houses. Growers often find that they have to adopt a certain style house to meet the surrounding conditions, grade of ground and limited space to build, etc.

HOW TO CONSTRUCT A GREENHOUSE.

The modern greenhouse is a combination of glass, wood, iron and concrete. The first and most important consideration in building a greenhouse should be to build proper foundations. This, as you know, is made of concrete and iron posts and should be of the best materials to stand the strain and take care of the roof construction. It is a common fault for growers to build light side walls and weak gable ends. The roofs of all greenhouses should be built of good material and made sufficiently strong to carry the loads that are obliged to meet weight of snow and wind pressure which have to be taken care of.

If you stop to think that the heating, glass, glazing, painting and erecting costs the same, no matter how cheap the construction is made up, a few dollars more will be well spent in using better materials.

The ridge and furrow houses are built with channel iron and cast iron gutters; both kinds will outlast the life of any greenhouse and should be used in place of wood gutters. Iron gutters are easier to erect, require less posts and again they are an important feature in tying the houses together. In the semi-iron construction, pipe purlins and columns are used to support the roof. I believe this style to be the best for ridge and furrow houses up to 35 feet wide. I feel sure it is a mistake to cut out pipe columns or supports of the houses, as this would put the strain on the roof and sides. I am sure that houses built of light truss work will only last a short time and constant repairing will be required. I am not in favor of truss construction unless the materials that are used are sufficiently strong to make the house rigid.

A house 40 feet wide or over should be built of flat rafter construction. We are using this material in all our wide houses and we find them the most economical houses to build. The iron work is fitted and worked out at the factory, so that the erection of the flat rafter style is made easy when it reaches the grower. Another important matter in building wide houses is to build the gables strong and rigid. It is much easier to make the gable strong with iron frame construction. During the past winter we have had a great many wind and snow storms that made trouble for the florists. I have had a great many reports where glass was blown out and considerable damage done by the frost and in most cases it was where the construction was weak and the glass set the twenty-four-inch way. I believe most of the growers are satisfied to space the glass the sixteen-inch way. This makes the houses strong and with the use of small sash bars sufficient light can be had. Glass should be bedded in putty, securely fastened with zinc glazing nails and the glass lapped. I know that in your section a great many florists prefer to butt the glass. We can point out a few good jobs where the glass is butted, but I am not in favor of this method and I would advise all florists who build greenhouses to bed the glass in putty and lap the joints. Putty makes a cushion for the glass and prevents moisture from getting between the glass and bars. If the best putty is used the glass will not accumulate dirt and makes shade as we find in butted glass houses.

HEATING SYSTEM.

The heating system in a greenhouse is an important matter in obtaining the best results. This should be planned and the coils arranged so that the heat can be equalized. I have al-idea of heating a large plant with steam would be to carry a pressure of twenty to thirty pounds and use a reducing valve or a vacuum system. With this plan you always have plenty of steam and your fireman will not have any excuse for not keeping the right temperature in the various houses. This plan is now used in a great many greenhouse plants and has proven to be satisfactory.

The fact that greenhouse builders can be found in every section makes the planning and building of greenhouses much easier than years ago. The greenhouse builders are always ready and willing to spend their good money to try and improve and build you the very best kind of a house. This is not always an easy task and I feel that the growers do not realize what this means. The up-to-date builder is always looking out for the best greenhouse material and working out the special details so that same can be standardized, which makes it possible to carry stock so that orders can be filled on short notice. In our private work where we build small compact ranges of glass it is difficult to plan so that the best and most practical arrangement can be had in securing the proper light. We are ways been a firm believer of steam heat for large plants. It is possible with vacuum system and steam traps to place the boiler on the same level with the greenhouse floor. You will readily see that the expense of a deep cellar can be avoided and the cost of taking the ashes out and getting the coal in will be greatly reduced. My often limited to small spaces in which to locate private greenhouses. We meet with uneven grades and undesirable exposures.

ALBANY, N. Y.—F. A. Danker, one of the hustling florists of this city, has just completed the erection of two Lord & Burnham pipe frame houses, 31x150 feet each.

ANCHOR OF ROSES, VIOLETS AND CATTLEYS

Arranged by Geo. H. Cooke, Washington, D. C., for the services over the heroes of the Battleship Maine whose remains were interred at Arlington Cemetery, March 23.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Anchor of Roses, Violets and Cattleyas.

The floral anchor which we illustrate was arranged by Geo. H. Cooke, Washington, D. C., on the order of the officers and seamen of the U. S. cruiser Birmingham, as a tribute to the dead of the sunken battleship Maine, whose remains were interred in Arlington National cemetery March 23. It was the Birmingham that brought the thirty-four coffins containing the pitiful remains of sixty-four men from Hampton Roads to Washington. At the Roads they had been transferred to the Birmingham from the battleship North Carolina which had borne them from Havana.

The anchor was an elaborate piece of work. Over fifteen hundred white roses were used with cattleyas on the bar. The chain was of violets. The length of the anchor was between six and seven feet, and it rested on a plaque of ample dimensions. It was the most elaborate design seen in the procession, and was borne on the first caisson, as the funeral being naval and military, each coffin was borne on a caisson. A. F. F.

Easter Pottery Suggestions.

Let us have the Parisian idea in mind and use the two color suggestions in making up the Easter baskets and novelties. For instance, a round low silver basket in which a fine specimen of a white English primrose is placed surrounded with cluster of red geraniums. These geraniums should not be growing, for they have too much foliage for effectiveness. The idea is to mass the red in striking contrast with the white center plant. As a foliage and finish, around the edge use the small ferns used in ferneries. A combined white and red ribbon or a simple white ribbon can be arranged around the body of basket, making a rosette at one side. This suggestion is also good for lilies of the Easter variety, using the red Baby Rambler rose around the Easter lilies. A useful suggestion is made by using a fancy paper basket filled in this manner around the body of which a red sash ribbon can be placed to advantage, making a double standing bow as a finish.

Lilies of the valley combined with sweet peas (the pink) are pretty in a glass fernery using the small ferns as a finish. Pink gauze ribbon should be used in this case. The golden epergne basket can be tastefully made with cattleyas in the center surrounded with violets of the single variety. Tie this with a ribbon of the pale lavender in the orchid, and it is better to use gauze in two tones if possible.

The white and yellow narcissus are pretty combined in a white enameled oblong basket, tying a fancy lace paper around the base with a yellow satin ribbon of the softest texture. A basket enameled in pink should contain white tulips and an arrangement of ferns as a finish, tied with a white satin ribbon. A basket enameled in white should contain pink tulips, etc., as a contrast.

Pink geraniums combined with white geraniums (not growing) but the cut flowers taking the white for the center and using the pink around; the foliage in this case can be used around the edge if the severe English effect is desired. This arrangement will look well in a green rustic basket. White and purple hyacinths can be prettily arranged in contrasting circles in a rough basket of natural color, using a little boxwood edge as a finish.

A basket of any pretty shape not too large can be tinted or enameled a heliotrope shade in which plant small heliotrope plants combined with the pinkish lavender sweet peas. Tie this with a lavender shade of heliotrope gauze ribbon around the base.

For a large tall handled basket use an immense bunch of the fine large mignonette in the center; surround these with Killarney roses, and these in turn with white lilac, using maiden-hair as a finish.

A tall golf basket can be beautifully arranged with long-stemmed American Beauty roses, using a cluster of the smaller ones where the ribbon bow is attached to the center. This will make a showy window piece. Two golf baskets can be arranged at opposite sides of the show window, combining asparagus vines in a drape at the back and grouping palms where necessary. Baskets for automobiles in which are arranged violets, sweet peas, lily of the valley or any of the smaller variety of harmonizing color flowers. Little favors of the Dutch slipper order, or of the swan, or Dresden flower vase, can be prettily arranged with pansies, a small fern, a tiny Baby Rambler rose, or even a little shamrock plant, and make a window of interesting variety.

Paris has a fad at present of sending out violet corsages tied in a violet lace paper which is fastened over the violets and tied to the stems with a gauze ribbon. This violet lace paper is—when the violets are really very sweet—so scented with the violet extract that this lace paper is used as a sachet for the handkerchief case. Small pink roses made into corsages are sent out in the same manner, but a pink lace paper is used instead. When orchids are sent out the lavender lace paper is well covered with a spray of the latest Parisian perfume.

The Coldest Spot on Earth.

Though more than one region might put in a good claim for this distinction, there appears to be good ground for awarding the palm—a most inappropriate reward—so far as inhabited regions are concerned—to the Siberian settlement of Werchojanst, which is situated in about 68° north latitude. According to a writer in the Standard, the thermometer, during the three winter months, never marks more than -24.3° C., about 76° of frost in the Fahrenheit scale, and occasionally registers more than 100° of frost. Yet in spite of these rigors Werchojanst is surrounded by forest trees—conifers, which possess a power of resistance to extreme cold unsurpassed by any other form of vegetation, except perhaps the microscopic plants which flourish in the oceans of the arctic regions.

New York Florists' Club Anniversary.

At its twenty-fifth annual dinner held at Park Avenue hotel March 23, on which occasion was celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the New York Florists' Club, it had for its guests, Prof. L. H. Bailey, dean of Cornell University; Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the S. A. F.; A. H. Farenwald, president of the American Rose Society; Wm. Sim, president of the National Sweet Pea Society; W. C. Hall, president of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club; A. G. Wilshire, president of the Canadian Horticultural Association, and J. Otto Thilow, president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. It seems unnecessary to say that the New York Florists' Club celebrated the event in a very appropriate manner.

There was an attendance of probably 200 and our Patrick O'Mara was toastmaster and Mr. O'Mara was at his best. To the writer it was demonstrated that Mr. O'Mara is not the fighter that one of the evening journals would try to make people believe he is. If he was there was no question but what he would have "swatted" more than one that persisted in disturbing the proceedings, and it is to be regretted that so many seem to forget the courtesy due the gentlemen who have come hundreds of miles by special invitation to entertain and address the assemblage, and so many times the toastmaster had to plead for "Peace!"

President Joseph A. Manda in opening the remarks spoke of what the club had accomplished during the past 25 years and introduced the toastmaster, Patrick O'Mara. President Richard Vincent, Jr., in a stirring appeal, spoke of the benefits of the S. A. F.; what it had done in the past, what it is doing now and what it proposes to do in the future. Prof. L. H. Bailey talked on the floricultural interests of the state and his address was most interesting and instructive. A. Farenwald spoke for the American Rose Society. Two of the most interesting talks were made by W. C. Hall, president of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Montreal, and A. G. Wilshire, president of the Canadian Horticulture Association. When one listens to these very interesting gentlemen, is it any wonder so many said, "Why don't the S. A. F. go to Montreal in 1913?" Harry A. Bunyard responded for the National Sweet Pea Society in place of Mr. Sim, who was compelled to leave the meeting at an early hour. J. Otto Thilow addressed the meeting on so many interesting features of our business, and to show the interest taken in his talk one could almost hear a pin drop. Mr. Thilow is to be congratulated in being able to say so many interesting things and say them in such a manner that he carries his audience with him.

Walter F. Sheridan, in his usual good manner, presented the retiring Ex-President, John B. Nugent, Jr., with a chest of flat silver, to which Mr. Nugent gracefully acknowledged. It was a cause of regret that Mrs. Nugent was unable to be present to share in the pleasure of the occasion. Alex S. Burns, who was president of the club in 1887, in a humorous, reminiscent speech, presented the president of the club with the charter which he has had in his possession during the twenty-five years of the club's existence. Charles Schenck, secretary of the dinner committee, made a brief address on the work of the committee and what they had accomplished.

But an ovation was tendered to "Charlie" Weathered, chairman of the committee. He was practically carried on the shoulders of some of the guests and placed on a table where he made the speech of his life, but this is such a common thing with "Charlie" that it did not cause so much comment, but only showed how close to the hearts of his friends in the club Charlie is held. Charles C. Trepel responded to the toast of the "Man Who Takes Good Care of the Surplus," and did himself proud. Mr. Trepel, in his remarks only, exemplified his characteristic "that actions speak louder than words," and that it only required "nerve" not only to address such an assemblage, but to "do things" as he is doing on such a large scale. Wm. J. Stewart responded to the toast of the "Horticulture Press" in his usual able manner. Attending the banquet were all the leading representatives of the morning and evening press headed by William C. Freeman of the Evening Mail, but owing to the lateness of the hour these gentlemen had to leave the meeting and the carefully prepared papers of Charles H. Totty, chairman of the National Flower Show committee, and John Young, the secretary, had to be omitted.

Taking all things into consideration, the banquet was most successful and the committee is to be congratulated on its success. The management of the Park Avenue hotel is to be congratulated on the good menu provided and every courtesy shown by those that served the same. There seemed to be nothing lacking. The management had evidently provided for every emergency.

The room was most magnificently decorated and to those who so kindly sent such splendid blooms the thanks of the club should be tendered. Alex McConnell, with his usual generous nature, attended to all details of the arrangement of the flowers and the decorating of the room, which was really made a bower of flowers, and done in Mr. McConnell's masterful manner. While it is true that some vases of new roses and carnations were not placed where those sending them would like to see them, it is almost impossible on an occasion of this kind to do different than was done. The flowers were beautiful and the novelties displayed showed up at their best. Each lady was presented with a beautiful souvenir silver perfume bottle which was very appropriate and the menu was silver colored and appropriate of the occasion. Among the guests were Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., and the amateur enthusiasts, E. T. Hart and Eugene Rodick of Bar Harbor, Me. Y.

FLUSHING, N. Y.—George Holts, who has conducted a florist establishment in this city for 40 years, was married March 7 to Mrs. Jessie Williams.

BOSTON, MASS.—A charter has been issued to the Solari Archie Co. to do a general florist business, with a capital stock of $10,000. Frederick C. Solari, Marciano Matkavazzo and Moses Leibman are the incorporators.

COLUMBUS, O.—The salvia has been selected as the Columbus centennial flower. T. J. Ludwig of the Livingston Seed Co., addressed the Flower and Garden Club as to culture and planting of salvia to bring about the best effect.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—At a meeting of the New Bedford Horticultural Society held March 4, John P. Rooney read a very interesting paper on rose culture. It was decided to hold the annual dinner March 21 in the Parker house.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Miss Wilhelmina Seeger was married March 11 to N. M. Kingsley who, with the bride's brother, William A. Seeger, are the proprietors of Mullanphy Florists. The bride is secretary of the Florists' Union of St. Louis.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB AT PARK AVENUE HOTEL, MARCH 28, 1912.

Baltimore.FLOWERS IN ABUNDANCE.

The weather the first three days of the past week was all that could be desired, but alas, the remainder has been cold and disagreeable enough to cause one to think it must have been a dream of Arcadia. Flowers, flowers—the windows of the retail florist are full of the fairest. Gilt baskets of sweet peas, azaleas—all of the spring flowers in abundance. The fine flowers are bringing fair prices. Some extra fine roses and carnations are coming in now.

NOTES.

Fred Baner is quite an economist of space in his greenhouses. We noticed today that his tables were elevated on iron pipe instead of the usual wooden supports. On the tables carnations are growing; beneath them are dracænas, aspidistras and other plants—while above are placed boxes of seeds, all doing well. We thought it a splendid idea for utilizing space.

Wallace R. Pierson of Cromwell, Conn., speaks of paying a visit to Baltimore in April. Mr. Pierson manages to get around quite a good deal in the course of a year and is a wideawake young man.

The next regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held Monday, March 25. The address of the evening will be made by Jesse King of Mt. Airy, Md., on the subject "Roses."

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., president of the S. A. F., will sail for Europe about the middle of May.

Buffalo.TRADE QUIET.

The past week has been about as variable as March could be. Trade is rather quiet, excepting for funeral work, there being very little in society functions or weddings, all keeping in check until after Easter. Stock is equal to all demands, with the exception of white carnations, they are somewhat scarce and no over supply of any color, but good prospects for Easter in all kinds of flowers. The stock at W. J. Palmer & Sons', S. A. Anderson's, L. H. Neubeck's and Wm. Scott Co.'s is good, and the suburban lilies will not be in oversupply, growers will have their usual supply as some are late, consequently those who are fortunate will be called upon to wholesale to others.

NOTES.

The event of last week was the visit of the Rochester Florists to bowl the return match. The result was different than in Rochester, Buffalo being the winner. The teams and scores were as follows:

The visitors arrived at 7 p. m., and immediately proceeded to Messenger's cafe, where dinner was served and the game started. Albert Vick was absent owing to the serious illness of Mrs. Vick. The bowlers were accompanied by George B. Hart as principal roofer, and several others of equal enthusiasm. A very pleasant evening was spent, and now a ball game is talked of, and we hope it can be arranged.

W. J. Palmer expects to move into his new home about May 1. It is in a very beautiful location in the new residence part of the city, and about where the Temple of Music stood at the Pan-American Exhibition.

Emil A. Boorman, who has been in the greenhouse business for many years at 336 High street, died on Friday. He had been ill for about three months. Mr. Boorman was well known by the older florists.

Henry Weber, who has had a store and greenhouse on Main street, near Amherst, has sold out and removed to Springville, where he will grow for the Buffalo market and supply the trade in that town.

Wm. F. Kasting is expected home from Hot Springs this week.

From now on everyone will be busy getting ready for Easter. BISON.

Lancaster Florists' Association.

A meeting of the Lancaster Florists' Association was held on the evening of March 21, with a paper on greenhouse construction by D. T. Connor of Philadelphia as the feature of the evening. A rising vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Connor for his paper. In the discussion which followed many valuable points were brought out, among them the fact that for greenhouse sides, ashes and cement in the proportion of seven to one made a better job than more expensive combinations providing the wall was finished with a cement coating before it was dry both outside and inside.

White and pink sweet peas were on exhibition from John R. Schreiner, daisies and roses by L. Landis, and the finest yellow marguerites we ever saw from Ira Landis of Paradise, Pa. In carnations the Wheatland Greenhouse Co. had fine vases of Pink Delight, White Enchantress and Mrs. C. W. Ward. J. W. Bruckhart of Lititz, Pa., had Alma Ward and Mrs. C. W. Ward and seedlings, one a magenta and the other a cerise pink, both of which attracted much attention. Chas. B. Herr of Strasburg had an extra fine vase of Gloriosa and Amos Rohrer of Strasburg, who clings to that which is good and grows it just a little better than the rest of us, showed a fine vase of Enchantress. H. D. Rohrer showed another vase of his new red which holds up its quality right along. This seems to be a good feature as we can see just how it compares each month with previous exhibits and learn its value as an all-season commercial flower.

Mr. Connor was considerably surprised at the number we had in attendance and the size of the exhibits which compared favorably with the special occasion exhibits of the older clubs.

Our next meeting, which will be April 18, will be devoted to sweet peas and the paper will be read by Chas. Weaver who is recognized as an authority on sweet peas, not only here in Lancaster but in other sections as well. Enthusiasts of this flower who may want to send some flowers for this meeting should send them to H. A. Schroyer, Lancaster, Pa. They will find an appreciative audience.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The regular meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, March 13, with a good attendance, President J. F. Johnston in the chair. The executive committee presented a report on the euchre and dance recently held which netted quite a nice balance. It certainly looks good the way the special prizes are coming in for the fall show. Offers were read from the following: C. H. Totty, Burnett Bros., Bon Arbor Chemical Co., A. T. Bodington, Weeber & Don and Stapleton, Glen Cove. A letter was read from A. Herrington accepting an invitation to address the society on some subject pertaining to outdoor horticulture at some future date. W. E. Kalmeyer was elected to active membership.

The judges of the exhibit were S. J. Trepass, James Halloway and Alex. Mackenzie and their decisions were as follows: Society's prizes, 12 Bridesmaid roses, J. W. Everett, first; J. Robinson and J. MacDonald, honorable mention. Three heads of cauliflower, J. W. Everett, first. Henry Gant was awarded a certificate of merit for a fine vase of new snapdragon, Glen Cove Beauty. Certificate of merit to Scott Bros. for a vase of Carnation Wm. Eccles. Certificate of culture to H. Gant for three heads of lettuce. It was decided to have the competition for the silver cup offered by Mrs. Townsend held at the dahlia show in place of the fall show.

JAMES MACDONALD, Secy.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The annual spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society opened March 22, in Horticultural hall and remained open two days. The exhibition, which consisted of bulbous and spring flowering plants, was held in the lecture room and one of the small halls, the main halls being occupied with the Italian garden which has been arranged by R. & J. Farquhar & Co., which was opened March 16 and will remain on exhibition until March 31. Among the novelties exhibited is a new clematis named Clematis Armandii var. Farquhariana, exhibited by R. & J. Farquhar & Co., and grown from seed collected by E. H. Wilson in western China. Louis Dupuy of Whitestone, L. I. showed a new French hydrangea and well grown heaths. C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., exhibited Carnation Wodenethe and Peter Fisher, Benora. W. T. Walke, Salem, had a fine display of Begonia President Carnot and other plants. Wheeler & Co., Waban, and J. T. Butterworth, South Framingham, exhibited beautiful collections of orchids.

Among the awards were a gold medal to R. & J. Farquhar & Co. for Italian garden, and a silver medal to the same firm for Clematis Armandii var. Farquhariana and for collection of cyclamen. Louis Dupuy was awarded a silver medal for Hydrangea hortensis Mme. Mouillere. Certificates of merit were awarded to C. H. Totty for Carnation Wodenethe and to Peter Fisher for Carnation Benora. John C. Hatcher, Amsterdam, N. Y., received honorable mention for display of Asparagus Hatcheri.

OBITUARY.

Fred Weber.

Fred Weber, a well known rose grower of Chicago and one held in high esteem and beloved by his associates in the trade, died at his home at 5332 Bowmanville avenue, Saturday, March 23, at 2 o'clock a. m. of a complication of diseases, mainly blood poisoning and pneumonia.

Mr. Weber was born in Ossiwiol, Wurtemberg, Germany, forty-six years ago, and emigrated to America at an early age. He found employment in the florist business, working in several large greenhouse establishments in the vicinity of Chicago, and then started for himself on Lincoln avenue, and later with his brother Ernest established a greenhouse plant at Bowmanville, which he has conducted successfully ever since. He was also a member of the E. C. Amling Co., serving as one of the directors. A strange coincidence in his death was that he passed away on the same hour of the same day of the year that his brother died three years previously. He is survived by a wife and two sons, Arthur and Richard, aged 19 and 17 years respectively.

The funeral was held at his late residence Monday, March 25, at 2 p. m., and was largely attended by friends and associates in the trade, the directors of the E. C. Amling Co. attending in a body. The floral offerings were beautiful and numerous, showing the high esteem in which the deceased was held by his social and business friends. The pallbearers were Herman Bauske, John Reitmeyer, Edward Assa, Anton Then and Nick Kruchten. The interment was in Montrose cemetery.

Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

The spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in the lecture room of Horticultural hall. As the display was not quite so large it just seemed to fit with a little crowding at that. What it lacked in quantity was made up in quality, as the exhibits of bulbous stock, such as hyacinths, tulips and daffodils, which were the feature of the exhibition, were never finer. Most of the prizes were in cash, and offered by the various seedsmen of the city, and grown from bulbs purchased from them, which they took care were the best to be procured. There was very keen competition, the gardeners having put in their best work with their stock, so as to get as large a share of the prizes as possible. William Robertson, Samuel Batchelor, William Kleinheinz, Joseph Harley, James Bell, William Fowler are all great wizards of the soil when they put their best foot forward, the job of the judges is not an enviable one.

There was great contrast between this show and that of last fall. The great decorative effects that were the features of the autumn show being entirely lacking here. Some of these days the society will have an ample income and then this city will lead in artistic as well as it does now in plant culture. The admission was free, but this did not appear to materially affect the attendance which was not at all what it should have been for so good a display. K.

SUCH a short season will make for the suburbanite only one jump from the snow shovel to the lawnmower, says the Chicago Daily News.

PROF. L. H. BAILEY of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., is at work on a new edition of his well known "Cyclopedia of Horticulture," founded on the present work, but considerably larger and to be rewritten.

GEORGE L. MOORE, professor of applied botany at Washington University, has been elected director of the Missouri Botanical Garden to succeed Dr. Trelease, who resigned in order to devote himself to research. Dr. Moore will take up his new duties May 1.

WITH the large quantity of stock which promises to be available for Easter this year, the complaint of "pickled stock" should not be heard. To sell flowers that one knows are practically worthless is nothing short of obtaining money on false pretenses or thievery.

Society of American Florists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that the Curtis Floral Co., 515 S. Main, Hampton, Ia., offers for registration the following geranium. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

RAISER'S DESCRIPTION.

Mrs. E. D. Curtis.—Seedling geranium, parentage unknown. Strong compact grower, attaining height of from 12 to 18 in. as a summer bedder. Leaves: reniform with slightly margin. Color: dark green with dark (chocolate colored) zone near middle. Upper surface densely pubescent. Flowers irregular, double. Outer petals broadly obovate twice the length of sepals. Inner ones narrowed, irregular. Stamens three to none often modified to form petals. Color: brilliant scarlet. Umbel: composed of many flowers on long pedicels; forming open cluster.

Third National Flower Show.

SPECIAL PREMIUMS.

Chairman C. H. Totty announces that Mrs. D. Willis James of Madison, N. J., has contributed $500 for special premiums, and Lenox S. Rose, also of Madison, has contributed $50 for the same purpose.

The C. W. Brownell Moss and Peat Co., Walden, N. Y., has offered a first prize of $35 and a second prize of $25 for the best exhibits in class 98, section E, covering orchids, twelve plants, distinct varieties.

The governing board is just now preparing a list of special premiums, and any member of the trade who has not been approached and would like to contribute something to the list, is invited to do so, communicating with Secretary J. Young, 54 W. Twenty-eighth street, New York, or Chairman C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.

RATES FOR SPACE.

The rates for trade space at the National Flower Show in the New Grand Palace, New York, April 5 to 12, 1913, will be as follows: Not less than 75c per square foot and not more than $1.25 per square foot and no space will be sold for less than $25.00. The rate for space up to 50 sq. ft. will be $1.25 per square foot, from 50 to 100 square feet at $1.00 per square foot; from 100 square feet up at 75 cents per square foot. JOHN YOUNG, Secy.

American Gladiolus Society.

Since the preliminary schedule of the American Gladiolus Society was issued, the following additional prizes have been offered for the Chicago Show in the open classes:

Frank Banning, Kinsman, Ohio, offers the following premiums: $5.00 for best vase America, $5.00 for best vase Niagara, $5.00 for best vase Panama, $10.00 for best display America, Niagara and Panama.

Mrs. Francis King, Alma, Mich., offers a premium of $10.00 for the most harmonious and beautiful color arrangement of cut gladioli, number of colors and quality to count. Not less than fifty spikes.

Jacob Thoman & Sons, Rochester, N. Y., offer $10.00 for best 25 spikes of any white variety.

Albert Lahodny, Brookville, N. Y., offers $5.00 for best exhibit of Europa. L. MERTON GAGE, Secy.

National Association of Gardeners.

The spring meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of Gardeners will be held Monday afternoon, April 15, at 2:30 p. m., in Horticultural Hall, Broad and Locust streets, Philadelphia, Pa. This meeting will combine both business and pleasure, the Philadelphia members extending an invitation to all members of the association to attend.

The exhibition committee is making a special effort to bring together a fine display of this season's novelties for the meeting, growers being invited to exhibit. Any exhibits sent to Horticultural Hall, in care of David Rust, up to noon on April 15, will be carefully staged by the exhibition committee if the exhibitor cannot be represented in person.

Another interesting feature of the meeting will be the bowling tournament between the members of the winning team which carried off the prize cup at the National Show in Boston last year. They will contest for the prize cup. The team is composed of Robertson, Dodds, Bachelor and Duckham. A big attendance of National Association members is looked for.

M. C. EBEL, Secy.

"How to Grow Asters."

A revised edition of "How to Grow Asters" has just been issued by James Vick's Sons, Rochester, New York, having been rewritten by Superintendent George Arnold with the view to make it of especial interest and help to commercial growers. It treats of the origin and development of the aster, and its classification and different types and the best method for commercial growing. Insect enemies and diseases are fully covered and known remedies advised. The booklet is a complete manual on the aster of 40 pages and contains 13 illustrations of types and the insects and diseases with which the cultivator of this popular florists' flower has to contend.

Patrick O'Mara Opposes Peace Treaties.

A letter, written by our friend Patrick O'Mara of Jersey City, N. J., to the New York Evening Journal, in opposition to the proposed peace treaties between the United States and England and France, is the subject of an editorial in the issue of that paper of March 20 of two columns' length. Mr. O'Mara is complimented upon his sincerity and the arguments which he presents as the descendant of a fighting race, but nevertheless the paper upholds the position which it has taken in support of the treaties.

THE Minister of Public Works at Bogota, Colombia, announces through Consul Manning that a National Horticultural Exposition will be opened August 7, 1912, at which a complete exhibit of the known plants and fruits of Colombia is expected.

THERE were many who remembered to write to their representatives in congress on March 18 in favor of a parcel post law, the New Jersey Floricultural Society instructed their secretary to write the senators of New Jersey and the representatives of their districts urging the passage of the measure.

$2,000.00 For 1000 Gladiolus Bulbs.

THIS is what I am willing to pay for a pure white variety which possesses all of the attributes which combined makes the variety "Peace" the best commercial white gladiolus in existence.

I am egotistical to this extent, that from the varieties which I have introduced during the past ten years the majority of which are not only being liberally used by both Florists and Amateurs, but are also demanded and listed by Professional Growers, I have the right to assume that my judgment as to the value of a variety should be worth some consideration, and that I am not a Novice in experimental and trial work. "PEACE" has been grown and increased by me since 1904, and has been planted in all kinds of soil, and under most every climatic condition, and has never failed to "make good." If this can be truthfully said of any other variety of equal or superior merit, I want it.

THIS is the Grandest White Variety ever offered in the world, and the international title of "PEACE" was selected for this valuable type, which will become a standard variety and secure a permanent place in every country when known.

This variety is not only new, distinct and of more than special merit, but it has wonderful vitality, which will insure perfect satisfaction under all reasonable conditions.

The plant is most striking and attractive, its massive proportions, broad heavy foliage of a rich green, erect and vigorous habit of growth, give evidence of the constitution and vigor, rare in light-colored hybrids. These qualities are further proven by the exceptional reproductive powers, by offsets and division.

MATURED bulbs are large smooth and practically immune from disease, and produce plants five feet high, before the bloom spike appears.

The flowers are large, of good form and correctly placed on a heavy straight spike. They are a beautiful white, with a pale lilac feathering on the inferior petals.

As a cut flower, there is no variety which will develop better, and for the garden I have yet to find its equal.

In placing the price of this variety within the reach of every admirer of the Gladiolus, I do so with the greatest confidence in its future popularity and that it supplies a long felt want, especially to the florist.

"PEACE" is not an early bloomer, but rather medium to late, and planted at the same time with other stock, it is in its best condition when most other varieties have passed blooming. It is therefore of exceptional value to the florist at this time when there are few other light-colored flowers in bloom.

"PEACE" (Groff's) Awarded certificate of merit 1906, by Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

BUSINESS FACTS.

The weather conditions for the last two weeks have been of the best for the production of high grade flowers, with plenty of bright sunshine and cool, sharp nights, and the stock that is coming into the market is of the very best quality in almost all lines, and in large quantities. But the market conditions are those that generally precede a holiday, for it is noticeable for two or three weeks before Christmas and Easter there is generally a let-up in the buying by the public. Whether they are waiting for larger purchases upon those days or for some other cause is not easily explained. Roses of superb quality are to be had from all the growers and from those to whom they consign. American Beauty of first quality are not overplentiful, there being a great many that are not perfect in the daily shipments and there is also a good proportion that are of short and medium lengths, so there are none too many of the longest grade to fill all that the orders call for. Killarney and White Killarney are to be had in superb condition, some elegant large blooms of high color in the pink on long strong stems with beautiful foliage. My Maryland and Mrs. Jardine are also seen in fine form. Richmond is of splendid quality, but the cut is not large and the prices of this rose hold up well. The novelties in roses sell well and at good prices, but the quantity received is small. Lilies are now received in large quantities, as are also callas, but the demand for them is not heavy and vases of these flowers are seen with all the dealers. Sweet peas are of excellent quality, some beautiful flowers on stems fifteen inches long being shown in the store windows, and of a great variety of colors, the Spencer, or "Butterfly," so called, have also made their appearance, and these beautiful flowers are quite an addition to the large assortment of stock obtainable. Violets are of good quality and quite plentiful. The home grown stock is the first to be bought and is selling very well. The eastern stock is received in good quantities and the market is a little better than it has been for the last two or three weeks. Bulbous stock is having a good call, although the quantity received is large yet the stock of narcissus and tulips cleans up well. Mignonette of excellent quality is shown and is featured in the retailer's window, and some fine antirrhinum in all colors is seen in the stores. The retail stores are beginning to display specimens of the Easter plants and the windows are beautifully arranged with azaleas, genistas, rambler roses and pans of hyacinths, tulips and narcissi, the pots being nicely ornamented with appropriate pot covers. Pussy willows are used extensively in basket arrangements and are displayed at all the stores.

NOTES.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is booking a large number of orders for Easter, especially in lilies, and one order called for 1,000 pot plants, and another order for 3,000 blooms in pots. The supply of stock in general is large, and extra fancy orchids, American Beauty, Prince de Bulgarie, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Melody, Richmond and other leading varieties of roses as well as a large supply of carnations, lily of the valley and seasonable bulbous flowers are daily offerings. Mignonette of high grade quality is arriving in quantity and meeting with very ready sale. The supply department is also busy, and a good many orders in this line are now being filled.

Peter Reinberg is receiving a large supply of roses and carnations and Tim Matchen, the hustling store manager, says that it will be still larger during Easter week. Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond especially are arriving in fine condition and American Beauty roses in all lengths is also one of this firm's leading features. This firm is now cutting heavily in Sunrise roses, the pretty bronze copper colored rose that is now being used extensively by the leading florists in the table decorations. Trade is picking up a trifle and the out-of-town shipments especially are much larger.

H. G. Miller, who has been with the King Construction Company for many years as an expert greenhouse constructor, will represent them in the this city and vicinity with headquarters at his home in Aurora, Ill. Mr. Miller has had a large experience in greenhouse building and will be pleased to call upon and consult with anyone contemplating building and explain to them the merits of the King idea in greenhouse construction. We bespeak for Mr. Miller an attentive hearing about greenhouse material and building.

August Lange added a Pierce Arrow gasoline machine to his delivery equipment last week and a Carter car will be installed this week. This will give him two gasoline machines and two electrics for the Easter business. Mr. Lange intends to eliminate the electrics as soon as possible after Easter, using only gasoline machines.

Fred Lautenschlager, Kroeschell Bros. Co.'s boiler man, has returned from a successful five week's business trip in the east. Mr. Lautenschlager reports having had a most enjoyable trip, besides booking a couple of good-sized orders.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a large quantity of choice roses with American Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, Mrs. Jardine and Uncle John, showing up exceptionally well. A visit to this firm's large greenhouse establishment last week found the stock in the highest possible condition and we could not help but notice what a large quantity of stock this firm will have for Easter. House after house of American Beauty plants fairly covered with highly colored buds was what we saw as James Novak, the efficient foreman, escorted us through the many houses. The Richmond, Killarney, White Killarney, Mrs. Jardine and Uncle John roses are also in fine condition and the supply of stock promises to be nearly as large as that of last Christmas. The carnation houses are also in grand shape, and Henry Roemer, the grower, is confident that the supply for next few weeks will be large and that the majority will be just right for Easter. N. J. Wietor is very enthusiastic over the Easter business, and says that the quality of the stock will be the same as his firm offered last Christmas, and adds that if the orders come in as good as they did then the prospects for a banner Easter would be very bright indeed. It seems as if the brightness has already started, for some good-sized orders have already been booked.

Frank Ayres' sudden dip in the matrimonial sea has certainly caused some disturbance and the likeness of the happy young bride with a half column write up appeared in the Sunday edition of several of the local papers. Mr. Ayres' many friends could hardly believe it when he told them last Wednesday that he was to be married, and even his employers took it as a joke until he produced the necessary evidence, a wedding license, and even then it seemed unbelievable. However the wedding took place and the popular young store man is now a happy benedict.

John Kruchten was laid up a couple of days the past week with a severe cold, but is again on the job and busy making preparations for the Easter business. He is going to be particularly well fixed on lilies and will have about 30,000 to dispose of during Easter week.

Hoerber Bros. are cutting a large quantity of choice roses and carnations and particularly fine Killarney and White Killarney are very noticeable at the store this week. The stock in the greenhouse at Des Plaines is in fine condition and in full crop for Easter.

Wm. Lynch's many friends will no doubt be pleased to hear that he is meeting with much success as a grower and that he will be in full crop with carnations for Easter. Tony Einweck and Dear Jack of the E. H. Hunt force visited his greenhouses this week.

JOHN KRUCHTEN

162 N. Wabash Ave., Phone Central 6269 CHICAGO

A. C. Brown of Springfield was in the city this week on business and pleasure combined. He and his friend, C. L. Washburn, had a very long chat and of course the conversation gradually led to the probable fate of one of the remaining bachelors of the Illinois State Florists' Association. Both gentlemen came to the conclusion that it would not be at all surprising if the pleasant sound of wedding bells would be heard far beyond the borders of one of the suburban towns.

J. A. Budlong's specials this week are fine Richmond, Mrs. Jardine and Kaiserin Augusta Victoria roses and lily of the valley of their famous blue ribbon brand quality. The supply of the latter is large and the quality excellent, the beautiful green foliage large bells and fine fragrance being particularly noticeable. Phil Schupp, the efficient manager, is now teaching his son Roswell the selling end of the cut flower business.

Weiland & Risch filled an order for 1,200 gardenias this week without any trouble, and after the order was filled they had 400 left to offer. This house is now headquarters for novelties and fine white and yellow daisies, snapdragons, single and double stocks, freesias and other flowers are now arriving in quantity.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. received two wagon loads of wild smilax by express this week and are now filling some good-sized orders. This firm is prepared for a good Easter trade with a full line of choice stock, especially roses, carnations, lilies and bulbous stock.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association will have a large supply of stock for Easter and expect to be particularly strong on Killarney roses, lilies and carnations. Sweet peas and lily of the valley of exceptionally fine quality are some of the leading features at this house this week.

Clifford Pruner and F. A. Longren, E. H. Hunt's traveling men, are still in the city, but expect to start out soon on another business trip. E. H. Hunt is offering a large supply of lilies, both cut blooms and pot plants and is making a specialty of these for the Easter trade.

Peter Sroczyński has a fine stock of pot lilies for the Easter trade, and has about 35,000 to offer at wholesale. Pan tulips and hyacinths of fine quality can also be obtained here, and the trade is cordially invited to call at his greenhouses and inspect his stock.

Bassett & Washburn are right in with a crop of American Beauty roses and fine stock is now arriving in large quantities at the store. Easter lilies are also one of this firm's chief offerings, and the large supply of stock is meeting with very good sale.

The J. E. Deamud Co. is having a good call for its choice home grown double violets and other seasonable stock. The firm will be on the job for Easter with a full line of seasonable stock, especially lilies and carnations.

Chas. W. McKellar is showing some fine Cattleya Schroederae, as well as single and double stocks. The supply for Easter will be large and he expects to fill all orders in full.

Oak Park voters will be given an opportunity to vote on the proposition to establish a park district to be known as the Park District of Oak Park, at the election to be held April 2.

W. E. Trimble lived up to his reputation as a crack marksman last Sunday, March 24, when he killed the limit of ducks at the Princeton game and fish club's reserve.

U S Budlong's E Blue Ribbon Valley.

E. E. Pieser says that Mrs. Pieser is still seriously ill and that as soon as she improves sufficiently to undergo an operation it will immediately be performed.

L. Leveson, of the Palace Floral Co., was very busy on March 24 with wedding work, and a bride's bouquet of lily of the valley was very artistically arranged.

Allie Zech came near rolling a perfect score at Bensinger's Alleys last Sunday, March 24, when he bowled 288 in one of the games played.

Sprinkleproof Sam, representing Wertheimer Bros., the national floral ribbon house, is calling on the trade here this week.

Frank Johnson, with the A. L. Randall Co., has returned from a successful business trip to the blue grass state.

The Alpha Floral Co.'s fine window display is being greatly admired by the vast throng of people who pass the store.

Joe Weise, formerly with J. A. Budlong, has gone into the retail business at 3445 Southport avenue.

A bouncing baby girl arrived at the home of Henry Wehrman in Maywood last week.

Miss H. V. Tonner is again showing a large supply of Spanish iris.

PREPARING FOR EASTER.

Lent has been felt but very little by the trade here this year, the business on Saturdays is of the best, and everything is sold out. During the week some days remind us of the Lent of years ago, but the funeral work and week ends make us forget about it again. Easter plants are coming along nicely, lilies have required heavy forcing this year and growers declare they will try some other variety than black stem Giganteum for early Easter next time, either Harrisii or Formosum. Pot roses in all varieties are well understood and will be in on time, as will spiraeas, but there will be very few hydrangeas. Bulbous stock, of course, will be plentiful. Of cut flowers we will have to hear yet, for the local product is insignificant.

NOTES.

The committee of the Canadian Horticultural Association met in this city Monday, March 18, ten members being present. The preliminary convention programme was adopted. The dates will be August 6-9. The papers to be read were decided on and as soon as those gentlemen have consented their names will be published. The secretary also was instructed to write the Dominion government requesting that owing to the large amount of horticultural produce imported into the ports at Toronto and Montreal and the perishable nature of the same, a competent appraiser be appointed in each city. The tariff question also was talked over, and when the much discussed and permanent tariff commission is appointed by the government, a commission will go before it when it sits in the different towns and cities, and the florists were requested to come to a thorough understanding so that they will ask

Mention the American Florist when writing

Davenport, Iowa.

Business for the past two weeks has been ordinary. Funeral work being mainly responsible for most of the orders that have been coming in. Lent in these parts seems to play no little part in the curtailing of the florists' business—as very few social affairs of any great magnitude take place during this period. There has been an abundance of almost everything and with the cold, bright weather, flowers have been of the very best. Carnations were never better, as can also be said of roses and bulb-stock. Everything points to a good Easter business, as many inquiries are already coming in, and there will no doubt be plenty of everything to meet the demand. Lilies, at nearly every establishment visited, are looking fine, and there will be enough to go around. Five degrees above, 18 inches of snow, 3½ feet of frost in the ground on March 24 is something we have not had for over 40 years. All florists are hoping that the conditions will be different Easter week.

CLUB MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held on the evening of March 22, at the home of Henry Gaethje at South Rock Island, with nearly every member present. One new member was elected, and a review of the year gone over. "The Storage of Bulbs" was the evening topic, and as every member has had some exciting times getting the bulbs in this winter, some very good ideas were brought out, mainly, a cave or cellar for the storage of bulbs, where they would be accessible even at 27 degrees below and nearly four feet of frost, as was experienced this win-

As some have had different experiences with the modern houses and heating plants, all look forward to a very interesting meeting.

The banquet was of course the most interesting affair of the evening. Chairman Boehm reporting everything in readiness for the greatest affair ever held by the local society. The Outing club, the most beautiful club house in this part of the country, has been procured for the occasion, and the chef has been given instructions to do his level best. Music, dancing and vaudeville will follow the banquet, and Mr. Boehm promises that there will be something doing every minute. The visitors who have accepted invitations and will take part in the programme are: J. C. Vaughan, August Poehlmann, President Foley, of the Chicago Florists' Club of Chicago, Wesley Green, secretary Iowa Horticultural Society, and J. S. Wilson, of Des Moines, A. Ankney, J. W. Davis, of Bettendorf and several other notables of nearby towns, whom the committee have invited to attend. The decorations will no doubt surpass anything in grandeur and splendor that has ever been attempted, and the ladies of the 400 have been invited to view the show between the hours of five and six on the day of the banquet, Thursday, March 28.

Officers for the new year were elected as follows:

Theodore Ewoldt, president.
 Henry Pauli, vice-pres., Davenport.
 Ludwig Staff, vice-pres., Rock Island.
 A. Anderson, vice-president, Moline.
 John T. Temple, secretary.
 Harry Bills, financial secretary.
 Wm. Knees, treasurer.
 Wm. Goos, Carl Zimmerman, R. H. Rohlf, executive committee.

After the election the members sat down to a fine supper which was served by the hostess and her daughters which was greatly enjoyed, a hearty vote of thanks being extended the royal entertainers for their hospitality. Harry Bills will entertain the club at his home for the April meeting on the evening of April 11.

NOTES.

The smile on John Staack's face is not there because he has coal enough to last all winter or that spring is near, or that his lilies and other flowers are in fine shape for Easter. It was placed there to stay when his wife presented him with a son.

R. H. Rohlf, the Alta Vista Nursery man, is a victim of the auto bug, and has bought a fine delivery car of the combination type—pleasure and delivery car in one—the bodies being removable.

Harry Bills' little daughter has been in the hospital for the past three weeks with typhoid fever, but is improving, and may be sent home in a few days.

Grandpa Julius Staack has been confined to his room for some time with lagrippe. We are glad to report him improving. T. E.

SPRING OPENS WITH A BLIZZARD.

Spring opened here with a young blizzard following the warm, spring-like weather we were having, and the change was very apparent, peekaboo waists and straw hats were called in, and furs and overcoats brought out again. Business is somewhat better, but it is hard to know where to find the pulse so as to diagnose the case. There is no special call in any line of goods, and no scarcity of anything. These are the conditions and there is no use preaching a long-winded sermon on nothing.

showed a splendid vase of Benora. The principal attraction was the Italian Garden by R. & J. Farquhar & Co., a copy of the sixteenth century. James Farquhar was the constructive head and the way the work is finished places him as an artist of high order. It was a big piece of work, not speaking of the expense attached, and the opinions from professional men who have seen it, agree it is a masterpiece. There was a row of long forsythias in bloom, and these were interspersed with cedars, cyclamen, begonias, tulips, blooming shrubbery and spring flowers, which with the fountains, made it something worth seeing. The Gardeners' and Florists' Club attended in a body Tuesday evening, on the invitation of R. & J. Farquhar, and were shown the fine points by the builder, James Farquhar. A committee was appointed to invite President Taft to attend the exhibition, but his secretary said it was impossible as the time schedule would not admit of his being present. At the banquet of the Irish Charitable Society, at which the president was the guest of honor, he told P. Welch that if time had permitted he should have been exceedingly glad to have viewed the exhibition, but hoped some other time to have the pleasure of seeing some of Boston's floral handiwork. We were somewhat carried back to the days when the miniature gardens were designed on wooden forms, with their tiny walks and well laid out flower beds, which helped many a man in after years to become a landscape gardener.

We were rather surprised with the lecture given by J. Otto Thilow before the Baltimore Gardeners' and Florists' Club. In his list of pioneers there seems to be a general sidestepping or ignorance of those who were pioneers. We are proud of those pioneers, they hewed the way and blazed paths along which we later-day heroes have found it much easier than those who went ahead. We will mention a few of the men of national prominence and just why they were omitted in the pioneer list we don't know. Fred L. Harris, J. N. May, E. M. Wood, M. A. Patten, Robert Simpson, Alex. Montgomery, W. A. Manda, P. Welch, Robert Farquhar, Fred. Mathieson, Wm. Nicholson, L. Cotter, W. W. Rawson, George C. Watson, N. F. McCarthy, Joseph Tailby, and it might not be bad to mention John G. Forbes, the man who learned Adolph Poehlmann to grow roses. We are proud of all the pioneers, each one has made his particular mark and cut his notch deep into the horticultural or floricultural barks, and there is no excuse for their being omitted in any lecture on that class of men.

The Simmons bill for the prevention of diseases on imported stock is causing some contention here. America has been the dumping ground for all European countries, and we are reaping our reward for the easy entry for such stock. If the bill becomes a law, it may work harm to New England in general. We have the gipsy and brown tail moths, and by the provisions of the bill any state with anything of that nature can be quarantined. That would of course shut out our nursery men from shipments to other states. Our nurseries invariably are as clean and well kept and free from insect pests as there can be found, but so long as the vermin are in the state it will be a hardship which may be felt by many nurserymen.

There seems to be a change coming in greenhouse lumber. Last week we were shown a piece of sash bar made from California redwood that is to be used by the King Construction Co. in the large houses to be erected by the Montgomery Rose Co. at Hadley. We all know the difficulty of getting oil into cypress, unless the wood is tank soaked. The redwood seems to be a wood that will take oil as well as pine, and the lasting qualities are claimed to be as long. We were told of sash that had seen 42 years' wear and where the cuts were in the tenon, were just as fresh as when made. We don't know whether it will be cheaper than cypress, but if it will hold the paint longer, then it will be something that will cut expenses to the grower.

CHANGEABLE WEATHER.

The weather is very changeable. On Sunday morning there was a heavy snowstorm, which by noon had ceased and the probabilities are that there will be warmer weather. Stock in some lines is much shorter, violets and sweet peas being the most noticeable. Carnations seem plentiful, but the supply for Easter is guess work. With good weather an ample supply is expected. Lilies are also plentiful, but fancy ferns are scarce. Blooming plants are coming into the market in increased quantities and a good supply is expected for Easter.

NOTES.

H. J. Weber, president of H. J. Weber & Son's Nursery, stated the peach crop in this vicinity is almost entirely destroyed, and California privet was nearly all killed by the very severe early frost in November. There will be plenty of cherries, apples and plums and bumper crops of all cereals on account of the large amount of moisture left in the soil by the heavy snows.

Some fine Radiance roses are seen at Geo. H. Angermueller's from W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Hugo Gross and his two brothers are bringing in large quantities of violets, sweet peas and carnations.

Otto Sander was smiling Saturday. A bouncing girl had arrived and he was a happy father.

W. J. Pilcher's Mizzura violet is still seen in the market and is bringing a good price.

SUPPLY ADEQUATE.

The weather and the market seem to be running each other a race to see which can be the most variable. One day the temperature is down to freezing and a winter weight coat is necessary; the next day we have the most beautiful spring weather. Just so is the market varying. Last week started splendidly, on Monday everything cleaned up nicely, on Tuesday all lines began to crowd, and the next day were really crowded. The latter part of the week used up practically all the surplus stock. The first two days of this week resembled closely the corresponding days of last. Practically every flower is in adequate supply. Now and then one may run short, but that is the exception rather than the rule. Most all orders are being taken care of as they come into the wholesalers. The quantity of the supply has, however, dropped somewhat and has given the market a much firmer tone. Roses of all kinds and carnations are naturally enjoying the largest sale. The offerings in both leave nothing to be desired as far as quality is concerned and the supply is as stated, ample. Longiflorum, Giganteum, Harissii and callas are coming to the front nicely as Easter approaches. The receipts are large and good, while the request is fair. Smaller bulb stock is in short supply, but is easily sufficient for almost all demands for it. Sweet peas with decreased numbers clean up better than they did for a time. Violets

Frank Vierick and Joseph Helanthal of this city visited Chicago last week for the purpose of seeing big things in the floricultural and horticultural lines. Upon arriving at the Windy City they called at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s salesroom. After inspecting the stock of flowers grown by these people there, genial T. E. Waters, who is well known as entertainer and guide for all visiting florists who come his way, took them for a visit among the wholesale houses. On Thursday a trip was made to Morton Grove, accompanied by Fred Longren, with E. H. Hunt, and Robt. Newcomb of Vaughan's Seed Store. August Poehlmann escorted the party through Plants A and C. A short rest was then in order, so sojourning to the Wayside Inn, a sumptuous meal was indulged in. After dinner a snow ball fight was had, bringing back to their minds the frolics of boyhood days. It was declared a draw until Newcomb had his face washed by Waters and then it meant a pitched battle between these two salesmen. At Plant B Adolph Poehlmann guided the party about. In speaking about what they saw it would take too much space, but when one sees three large houses of lilies ready for Easter; house after house of carnations in full crop; American Beauty roses with every prospect of unlimited supply; lily of the valley coming and going; the same with sweet peas. At Plant C stock of the newer variety of roses, such as Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Melody, Sunburst and Lady Hillingdon, all benched and showing up nicely, it is doubted if any better stock could be shown in the country than was being cut there. At night Mr. and Mrs. Fred Longren entertained the party at their home. A bountiful spread was laid, after which a friendly game of cards was played. As the limit was small, no one went broke. The next morning Mr. Newcomb escorted Mr. Vierick and Mr. Helanthal to Western Springs to visit Vaughan's Greenhouses and trial grounds. Stock was in excellent condition, so they were well pleased with the trip. Upon returning to the city Mr. Cropp of Vaughan's Seed Store invited the party to lunch, after which they went to Frank Oechlin's well known greenhouses. In the evening a visit was made to all the leading downtown retail florists, one which was the most impressive being John Mangel's new store in the Palmer House, which is believed to be the finest and most artistically decorated retail establishment in the west. With every assurance of having had a trip that will not be forgotten, Mr. Vierick and Mr. Helanthal left on the Panhandle to be on the job for Saturday.

FAIR MARKET FOR CHOICE STOCK.

Weather conditions were better for the past week, but the trade did not improve to any great extent. It is the lull before the holiday. Stock is plentiful, but there appears to be a fair market for the choice and some of the medium grades, while the lower lines are offered for very small prices, and are seen piled up in all the wholesalers' ice boxes. American Beauties are quite plentiful and appear hard to move even at low prices. The flower lovers appear to have lost their great admiration for the rose as it certainly is not as popular as it used to be. Killarneys can be depended on at all times, and people do not seem to tire of them. Carnations are very fine and plentiful, but cheap. Snapdragon is getting overstocked. Single violets are beginning to get smaller and have less substance. The street men dispose of large quantities. Sweet peas sell as well as anything. Bulbous stock is not quite so plentiful. Southern arbutus is in and sells well as the first usually does. Easter lilies are in full stock in all the houses. There are some very choice flowers seen, it would seem as if there will be no scarcity at Easter.

NOTES.

At Leo Niessen Co.'s busy market they are kept hustling handling their immense stock. Captain Leo says that they get away with it all, their large shipping demand being a big factor. They anticipate a large Easter business. A great stock of American Beauty roses is a feature here.

D. T. Connor of the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, has the order for a house 28x83 feet for E. C. Marshall, Kennett Square, and is about closing with several other growers who managed to save enough out of the coal money for a house or two.

John Walker, of Youngstown, O., was one of the visitors of the week. We are always glad to see John and hear his hearty good-natured laugh. He looks prosperous, says that he is getting ahead and working hard with that end in view.

Joseph Heacock says the first carload of lumber for the new 72x600 foot house at Roelofs has arrived from the Lord & Burnham Co., and the erection will commence at once. The contract calls for completion by the middle of May.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., who handle quantities of plants at Easter through their growers, say their sales so far have been very satisfactory. They anticipate a good all around Easter.

Berger Bros. early in the season laid lines for a stock of Easter plants, and have booked some nice orders the past week.

The 55x300 foot rose house for Myers & Samtman's addition at Chestnut Hill is to be erected by the Lord & Burnham Co.

M. Rice is recovering slowly, but not as fast as his friends would like. His trouble is a nervous breakdown.

EASTER OUTLOOK.

As it seems a rule that Saturdays bring a clean up lately, the past week can be called satisfactory. Naturally one hears of Easter on every side and some very heavy buying in plants is taking place. The florists of this city get more into the plant business every year, and it is astonishing how many are sold now, at the holiday times. There probably will be plenty of short-stemmed lilies, but the long-stemmed stock will not be over plentiful, in fact the unusual winter we have experienced has fooled a good many who force lilies, with the result that they will be from one to two weeks late. Any change would be welcome to most of us, from the great glut of lilies that has been thrown on this market the past two seasons. P. Maier's old place in Woodville always figured prominently in reckoning the Easter supply of lilies, but none will be cut there this year. It looks as though there will be very little advance in prices except probably on carnations and violets. A very fine crop of sweet peas with long stems will hit the market just right, violets are still of good quality, but a little holding back of these flowers will make a sorry looking mess. White and lavender lilac will be plentiful and fine, in fact there will be an abundance of all flowers that are on the market.

NOTES.

Gilbert Weaklen and R. J. Dashbach went east together and picked up a lot of Easter plants. They report visiting Ernest Zieger at Germantown, and state that he has the finest lot of plants they saw while away.

Samuel McClements of Randolph & McClements spent three days in the east buying Easter stock. Miss McKinley of the same firm spent a week at Cambridge Springs getting ready for the Easter rush.

Harry Graves and A. E. Gibson also spent a few days east picking up Easter novelties.

LILIES FOR EASTER DISAPPOINTING.

The preparations and expectations of Easter now overshadow present day business, though there was some very good business during the past week. Easter stocks, such as they are, progress favorably, considering inclement weather. The lilies, so far as we have observed, are a great disappointment, and either some of the bulb merchants are receptive candidates for the Ananias club, or some of the growers secure their help at the Salvation Army employment bureau. We will admit that there has been great advances made within recent years in cut flower growing; plant growing seems to be progressing backward. There are, in this vicinity, many very good hydrangeas and some fair pot roses and azaleas. A few years ago I asked Chas. Thorley, the leading retailer of New York, if he did not think that the profusion of other stocks was hurting the sale of lilies at Easter. Said he: "The people would buy as many lilies as they ever did, but the lilies are no good."

NOTES.

There was quite a lot of good funeral work for the victims of the Maine disaster, the funeral being held here March 24. The people of Washington, however, were not in advance of the Cubans in their tribute, for a number of designs were brought here on the cruiser Birmingham, which brought the remains, that had been laid on the coffins before they left Havana. The natural flowers were, as a matter of course, withered and dried up, but enough were left to show the grateful intent of the Cubans. There were also a number of metal designs of unique and striking make-up. The local florists had a number of fine designs for the funeral of the sailors. George H. Cooke had an exceptionally large anchor. George H. Shaffer had a reproduction of the battleship Maine, while Gude Bros. Co. and J. H. Small & Sons had some smaller pieces.

BUSINESS IMPROVES WITH THE WEATHER.

The wholesale cut flower market continues to improve, a little each day. The weather has been much pleasanter which enables the street men to get out, and they are a great factor in cleaning up the market. The prices on the higher grades of roses especially the novelties have dropped considerably. American Beauties are very plentiful, and large shipments of these are cleared out at very low figures. Carnations are still in large supply, and the prices on some varieties are a trifle better, though the bulk of the heavy shipments that are coming in are being disposed of at the low prices previously quoted. The orchid situation remains unchanged, the supply in most all lines exceeding the demand. Gardenias are of very fine quality and are moving very satisfactorily. Violets too are moving much better, but the prices do not improve, and it is only a small percentage of the shipments that sell for fair figures. Trailing arbutus and daffodils from the south have made their first appearance, and the very large quantities of southern daffodils that have arrived already affects the home grown product of bulbous stock very much. Lily of the valley of very fine quality is plentiful, but moving slowly. Lilies are far in excess of the demand. Sweet peas are not so plentiful, it is evident that many of the growers have thrown them out to make room for spring stock. Asparagus and smilax are doing a little better and there is a good demand for the smilax that is in flower.

NOTES.

The National Flower Show continues to be the chief topic of conversation among the florists and gardeners. And all visitors in town inspect the new Grand Central Palace where this grand exhibition will be held. On Saturday, President Vincent, of the Society of American Florists visited the building with a party of friends and was very favorably impressed, not only with the magnificent hall and the different floors, but with the accommodations and conditions which will make the trade exhibition in connection with the show the grandest and most successful ever held in the history of the society. It is true that the rates charged for space are higher than formerly, but it must be considered that if the building or hall was to be hired outright the rent would be about $17,000. This is the City of the World, and rents and other fixed charges must necessarily be larger than in the smaller cities, but there is no question in the minds of the National Flower Show committee and the local governing board but that all exhibitors in the trade exhibition are going to be very much elated with the returns and the attraction of this part of the exhibition. Already the secretary of the National Flower Show committee has received many inquiries for space, and the only question seems to be with the committees is whether there will be enough available space to satisfy all applicants.

The establishment of P. J. Smith is a very busy one at present, in addition to the lilies received from A. S. Burns, Jr., Spring Valley, and the magnificent roses from Frank McMahon, Sea Bright, N. J., and Righter & Barton, Madison, N. J. Attention can not help being attracted to the roses, especially the Killarneys sent in by E. J. Taylor, Greens Farms, Conn. Mr. Taylor is devoting more room to growing high grade flowers for the wholesale market and intends to make in the near future a very large addition to his present extensive plant.

accident while on his way home Friday night, which was caused by his slipping on the ice. This was the reason of his absence from the banquet. Some of the streets are very rough in the Bronx where Mr. Fenrich resides, and on a dark night they are difficult to navigate.

Charles Millang is able to get about each day, he shows plainly the very hard time he has had. His rugged constitution is the one thing that has helped him on the road to complete recovery, though it will be months before he will be completely mended.

Rheumatism is affecting many of the wholesalers and others at present. The latest to be compelled to remain away from their business being Frank H. Traendly and Charles B. Weathered. There was a great influx of noted visitors on Saturday, many of whom came to attend the banquet or twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the New York Florists' Club.

St. Paul, Minn.

The weather conditions this year have been just the reverse of last season. During February and early March last year, warm, pleasant weather was enjoyed throughout the northwest, but this year we have had a continual cold spell which has as yet shown no sign of turning toward warmer weather, and this has had considerable influence on the conditions of trade. It is probable that as soon as the season opens a trifle more and the weather improves, that trade will be a great deal better and a better season than a year ago is looked for.

L. L. May & Co. say that the country trade has dropped off considerably this year, owing probably to the severe weather. The cut flower trade has increased about 50 per cent this year, while the sale of plants has dropped, being nearly double last year of the amount of sales this year. The general line of business in design work and other branches is approximately the same as it was a year ago. S. T. H.

off your mind. It is said that good Lilies are scarce.

Our lilies are exceptionally fine and we expect to have plenty to fill all orders.

OUR BEAUTIES,

Roses, Carnations and other stock will also be in full crop and we will be particularly well fixed on Tulips, Mignonette, Valley, Daffodils, Sweet Peas and Cattleyas, so let your orders include a liberal amount of these for you will need them for your Easter Baskets and Boxes. We especially call your attention to our new Roses which we can supply more liberally than heretofore.

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, President; Marshall H. Duryea, New York, First Vice-President; Edgar Gregory, Marblehead, Mass., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary and Treasurer. Next annual convention at Chicago, June 25-27, 1912.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, Grand Rapids, Mich.

SWEET PEA crops in California are reported as not doing very well.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, March 27, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $10 to $15 per 100 pounds.

MILFORD, CONN.—Arthur B. Clark, of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., is president of the new Milford Trust Co., which opened for business March 4.

JEROME B. RICE, who has been ill and operated on in the hospital at Baltimore, has made a trip south and is now at Hot Springs, Arkansas. Mr. Rice's health has not improved as rapidly as his friends would like.

FRED BARTEDES, the well-known Lawrence seedsman, is a hard worker, beginning about seven o'clock in the morning and has a habit of doing business while standing on his feet all day. Mr. Bartedes does not work Sunday afternoons.

ARRANGEMENTS are in progress with a view to making the Sherman House, Chicago, headquarters for the thirtieth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, June 25-27. This new hotel stands on the site of the old house so well known to the older generation of seedsmen, nurserymen and florists.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—W. Atlee Burpee & Co. report under date of March 19: "Both January and February showed a very substantial gain over 1911, making both of these months the largest that we have ever had. Up to date the month of March is but slightly ahead of a year ago but (and this is a great big but) it would have been very much ahead had it not been for the fact that we had to decline many orders on short items. The question this year with mail order seed houses—and doubtless with all other houses of reputation—is one of supply rather than demand."

J. E. NORTHRUP writes from San Diego, Calif., that he has spent a very pleasant and beneficial winter there

Braslan Seed Growers Co.

Lettuce, Onion, Sweet Peas,

Growers for the Wholesale Trade Only.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.

and may start soon for his home in Minnesota, visiting the seed growing districts on the way. He reported the heavy rains to be of great benefit to the growing crops and those about to be planted.

STURGEON BAY, WIS., March 14.—Theo. H. Hopkins, local manager for the John H. Allan Seed Co., reports that his establishment expects to contract for the usual acreage in this county and vicinity. He does not look for much of an improvement in the pea growing situation for a couple of years, or until the clover is able to restore the soil once again to its former productive state.

HOLLAND BULBS.—One of our correspondents writes from Haarlem, Holland, March 15, as follows: "The weather has been unusually mild so far and bulbs of all kinds are well advanced, in fact, a little too much so to withstand the late spring frosts which we are almost certain to get. Crocus are now past and several early varieties of hyacinths are in full bloom."

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., March 20.—There has been more rain, making a total of 3.75 inches since March 1. This assures the seed growers of crops, although they are very late. Under the very best growing conditions, it is said that an average crop of sweet peas can not be harvested here this year.—The John Bodger & Sons Co. is making a specialty of asters this season.

NEW YORK.—J. M. Thorburn & Co. are in the midst of their spring rush now, with plenty of orders to keep all hands busy day and night.—Vaughan's Seed Store reports February business somewhat better than the same month last year, with March bidding fair to run ahead also and indications that the season of 1912 will be better than that of 1911 on the whole.—Harry A. Bunyard, of Bodding's, says the mail order trade is ahead of last year's.—Burnett Bros. say their business shows a decided increase over any previous year in all departments, but especially in grasses and flower seeds.—S. D. Woodruff & Son write: "In spite of the very high prices trade has been way ahead of the average, and the short items are the ones the people seem to be most anxious to buy. The following articles, at the present time, are bringing higher prices than we have seen during twenty-five years' experience in the seed business: Potatoes, onion, carrot, beet, parsley, pea, celery and turnip seed." Weeber & Don report that business to date is very much ahead of a year ago, and they have prospects for plenty more.

Boddingtons Quality Cannas.

Are true to name, have two to three good eyes, are well cured, sound and dormant, and give absolute satisfaction. Our sales last year were nearly 700,000, and not an overgrown kick. The Canna crop this year, however, is very short, and we advise placing orders early to secure stock. Delivery can be made at purchaser's option.

I Have Been Dubbed The Dahlia Crank

I do not dislike the title, for I have been informed that it signifies an ENTHUSIAST—and I acknowledge that I am.

I have carried on a systematic study and trial tests for many years, increasing the list with novelties from abroad and at home, discarding as well as adding—and have at present perhaps the largest list of varieties grown by any one person up-to-date.

For want of ground, as well as advancing years I am willing to dispose of much of my stock having a surplus over actual needs. Send for my descriptive list and prices.

Growing Tomatoes in Heated Beds.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

We contemplate raising tomatoes for the factory and will build 13 beds 130 feet long by 5½ feet wide. We have a quantity of 2-inch pipe and intend placing a length of pipe in the middle of each bed with a stop cock at the end to allow steam and condensation to escape and not return to the boiler, the ground being very nearly level. What would be the best way to connect these pipes with the boiler? We intend to sow the seed in rows six inches apart covering with plant bed cloth. The ground is not very rich. What chemical fertilizers should be added? The storage tank for water is ten feet above ground level and the water will run through 150 feet of pipe. Will this give pressure enough?

Indiana. W. S.

Very often we find steam work put up on the principle of hot water heating—that is, the designer provides areas of flow suited to hot water conditions. Such is not needed in steam work; very often large areas in pipes, valves and fittings actually cause trouble instead of preventing it. This will apply very much to the case in hand. If we had to do this job we would run a two-inch steam main across the ends of these beds, overhead if possible. Such main to be protected with weatherproof asbestos coverings, sectional, then the whole thing is easily removed if no longer wanted. To feed the two-inch radiating pipes, very small pipe connections will answer. We believe a ½-inch, or at most a ¾-inch, connection will do for each 2-inch run. This can be demonstrated by trying one run. On the other end a ¼-inch pet cock will be ample to relieve air and condensation. Water expanded to steam will increase over fifteen hundred times in volume and in condensing will shrink that much, hence large valves and stop cocks in this case are a useless expense. Further, where water is slow to flow by gravity alone, steam under pressure has tremendous speed; on this account a comparatively small connection will fill a hundred feet of 2-inch pipe in short order.

The 2-inch pipe is rather large to place in the middle of the frames. If watered or during rains while steam is on, the plants will be scalded. If the beds slope like hotbed frames the pipe should be at the lower side where no harm would be done. When the canvas is on, the heat in trying to get to a higher point will cause good circulation of air. Heat does not readily go to a lower point, which must be borne in mind by the designer.

Steam is not a perfect medium for frame heating, as we either have the full heat or nothing. If "W. S." could arrange for circulating water by means of a pump his 2-inch pipe would be admirable. In this case the water could be heated in an open tank by live steam, to any temperature desired and forced by the pump.

In regard to fertilizers, we never like to use chemicals in seed beds. Spent hotbed manure from a previous season is our main standby; if such is obtainable we would first see that our soil is porous; if not naturally sandy, add sand or coal ashes or slack coal until of desired body, then apply pulverized sheep manure. If chemicals must be used, take bone flour as a base and add enough sulphate of potash to bring the analysis up to eight per cent phosphoric acid and 12 per cent potash; there will be some nitrogen in the bone; as soon as plants are up, if they lack thrift, nitrate of soda can be applied in water solution with a sprinkling can. By this method their growth can be controlled at will.

Your storage tank for water will be ample if you use large areas for the water; thus use 2-inch pipe all the way to the frames and then 1-inch hose, and not too much of it. Use the Boston nozzle and enlarge the holes to give the water as easy a travel as possible.

Most factories demand the Stone tomatoes, which is a late variety; to make the most of it an early start is essential. One week gained in the spring is as good as a month in the fall. The plants should go into the field not later than June 1; every day after that means a lot of green tomatoes left behind in the fall. Therefore it will pay you well to use every means to forward your plants.

MARKETMAN.

Sowing Garden Peas.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you kindly inform me how late the seed of a tall-growing garden pea can be sown? What is the best variety? Would it be too late to sow after taking sweet pea vines from the wires?

W. S.

We believe there are few sections in the United States where garden peas can be sown at intervals with any assurance of success. Our summers rush in, so to speak, and the high temperatures are unsuitable to the young peas. The best results are obtained in most localities by sowing a number of different varieties at one time, that is, early, and depend for a succession upon the difference of these kinds in maturing. With a little study and experiment one can soon find which kinds are best.

For the state of Illinois we believe the first week in May would be as late as a good crop could be expected. As a rule, these late sowings should be made in furrows five or six inches deep, covering the seeds but slightly, and when up gradually fill in until level. After that mulching is very beneficial. We found last summer that peas respond very well to Skinner irrigation.

As regards varieties much depends whether they are for home use or market. For home supply, Champion of England is probably the best late, but for market we use only the Telephone or its various types.

To attempt planting garden peas after sweet peas the same season would be courting failure. Besides such a late start, sweet peas nearly always finish with red spider, which pest would be right on the spot to attack the young garden peas. Were we to attempt late peas we would be sure to isolate them from any attack of red spider.

Potatoes Instead of Grafting Wax.

According to the experiments made by Mr. Bergounioux, and described in Le Jardin, a potato is better for vine-grafting than any form of grafting or clay wax. The method of use is simple. A scion is chosen of about the same diameter as the stock; a hole is cut through the potato just large enough to admit of the passage of the stock and scion. After the surfaces of stock and scion have been prepared for grafting, the potato is slipped over the stock, the scion placed in position, and the tuber drawn up and fixed so as to surround the graft. Mr. Bergounioux states that in the dry and hot weather of last year the grafts bound with ordinary materials were generally a failure; those treated in this novel manner were as generally successful.

Roses and Peonies.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you kindly advise me as to the best varieties of roses and peonies for a garden in central Illinois? What special culture is required to grow them successfully? M. E. T. Illinois.

For 12 hybrid perpetual roses I might mention the following, not to say that these anywhere near complete the list of good ones—in fact, there is no end to such a list, but usually a dozen will give one a fair assortment: Ulrich Brunner, cherry red; Prince Camille de Rohan, dark crimson; Paul Neyron, deep pink; Mrs. John Laing, perhaps the finest bright pink; Marshall P. Wilder, red; Mme. Plantier, white; Mabel Morrison, white; Frau Karl Druschki, considered one of best whites of late introduction; Magna Charta, deep pink; Gen. Jacqueminot, crimson; Fisher Holmes, crimson; Capt. Christy, creamy white. If it is desired to be able to cut armfuls of roses the first year, I would plant strong plants of the following, which mostly consist of teas and hybrid teas: Caroline Testout, rose pink; Gruss an Teplitz, crimson; Kaiserin Aug. Victoria, white; Killarney, pink; Mme. A. Chatenay, salmon pink; Maman Cochet, carmine; Mrs. Aaron Ward, orange; My Maryland, salmon pink; Perle des Jardins, yellow, and Souv. de Pres. Carnot, cream white. As this list is perhaps a little shy of yellow, one might include Sunburst and Soleil D'Or. It does not matter which of the above may be selected, they are all good.

In peonies, I might head the list with that grand old standby Festiva Maxima, there is nothing to equal it in the whites, but to include another good one and especially to be recommended as a fine late sort, La Tulipe is a splendid white variety. In the pink shades we have Perfection, a good florist variety and Modeste Querin. In the red shades there are the following: Officialis Rubra Plena, Felix Crousse and Grandiflora Rubra, desirable sorts, in light pink or rose colored ones are the early one, Fragrans, Mme. de Vetry and Mathilde Mechin. As to cultural directions, the most important thing is a deeply cultivated soil. In order to prepare a bed, turn your soil over 15 to 18 inches deep, remove the poor soil along the bottom and substitute good loam of a rather heavy nature. Mix into it a liberal amount of well rotted manure, say one barrowful to three of soil. Beds prepared in this manner will give results, but all the cultivating on top or manuring afterwards is of but little avail if the preparing of the beds has not been attended to properly in the first place, and this holds good with anything else we plant in the hardy plant line where permanent results are to be expected.

TAKE THE HINT

is not forgotten and is a name in the mind of every florist who dealt with him last Easter. He is more active than ever. He shall take care of you this Easter, 1912. His big stock of fine plants and his low prices will pull you through at all times.

Therefore Prepare for Easter and Come Direct to the Factory. A Great Factory of Live Stock That Never Ceases.

Twenty-five years' experience in shipping Easter plants—well known, popular, from Atlantic to Pacific Oceans. Our shipments of Easter Plants reach every city and state of the United States, Mexico, Canada, and as far as Cuba.

ONE OF GODFREY ASCHMANN'S LILIUM MULTIFLORUM HOUSES.

No argument needed; speaks for itself. The real stuff: the cream of Japan's production. The True Variety of the Liliun Multiflorum, raised from 9 to 10 selected bulbs, at $95 a 1000, direct from Japan. Look at the picture! Just right for Easter. Picture taken March 12, 1912.

Azalea Indica.

Is another specialty of ours, inspected personally by myself on my yearly trip to Europe at our grower's establishment in Belgium, who is a specialist in cultivating Azaleas over there. Only the best American sorts are raised and imported for me.

What is the name of the Best Pink Azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name.

Originated by the well-known Azalea specialist, Mr. Van der Cruyssen, of Ghent, Belgium. Millions are raised every year of this so world-wide known popular pink Azalea and are shipped out to every portion of the globe from Belgium. We are well provided and have a big stock of this so well favored variety in America, the Mme. Van der Cruyssen; covered with buds and flowers, ready for Easter trade, well shaped, round as an apple; in all sizes, 6-8 in. pots, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00. On account of scarcity in Belgium of this variety, we only were able to obtain a limited quantity of the smaller sizes; therefore bigger sizes must accompany the order for Van der Cruyssen.

Simon Mardner, double pink, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; De Schryveriana, double variegated, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Vervaneana, a well known double variegated variety, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Apollo, best red, $1.00 to $1.25; Niohe, double white, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; Deutsche Perle, double white, 75c; a few good mixed varieties, such as Empress of India, Helena Thielmann and others, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50.

If we are out of the size and color ordered, we shall ship next color and next size, either above or below what is ordered.

In connection with Lilies and Azaleas, kindly try to buy a few other plants.

Shasta Daisies, pure white hardy daisies, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100.

Chinese Primroses, 5¼-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.

Our New Improved Begonia Erfordii has no equal as a constant bloomer, winter and summer, in bloom now, 5¼-in., 25c; 5½-in., 30 to 35c; 4-in., 20c.

Asparagus Plurigeri, 2½-in., 3c; 4-in., 10c.

Asparagus Plumosus, 10,000 on hand, April, 1911, savings, big stock plants, 4-in., 10c; 3-in., 10 to 12 in. high, $6.00 per 100; large 2½-in., suitable for edging bulb pans, $5.00 per 100.

Cocos Palms, Cocos Weddelliana, large 3-in. pots, 15c, 20c to 25c.

Hyacinths of our own importation, four best colors. Gertrude, best pink; King of the Blues, best blue; Grand Maitre, light blue; La Grand-esse, best white; 4-in. pots, in bud or bloom, $12.00 per 100.

Lilium Multiflorum.

We have Lilies this Easter (1912) to burn, to burn; they are crackerjacks, to beat the band, the best in the land, the best in the land, the best in the land.

Three houses in Liliun Multiflorum, the genuine Japan Easter Lily, better than ever before. Our own importation from our general grower in Japan, raised from 9-10-in. bulbs started in 6-in. pots last October; have kept cold. Good, perfect foliage from bottom up. Plants medium size and in all heights, from 5 to 10 buds to the plant, 10c per bud; plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud. Just right for Easter. We have the finest lilies this year in Philadelphia and all over the country, is the town talk from florists and agents daily visiting our place. "We have never seen anything like it," said two well-known growers one day, when visiting our place together. We have three houses full in 6-in. pots nicely staked up, medium height, and can supply all applications.

Cineraria Hyb. Grandiflora.

Readers, please, just a minute. I wish to call your attention to one of our biggest houses filled with a big selection of that so much admired Easter novelty, the Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora, which will have no equal in the flower market for Easter, 1912. If you are not fortunate enough to see them growing at our establishment, then just imagine you were promoted to a paradise, to a garden in Eden, standing before a mass of flowers in various beautiful colors. This is the condition one of our Cineraria houses represents at Easter-time. Our new improved strain, planted in 6-in. pots, of medium tall sizes, are unsurpassed in the size and color of the flowers. The flowers are about twice the size of the old ordinary varieties, has big heads of flowers and good foliage; some of the plants are as big as a small apple basket. Price: 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 per plant; dozen or more, same price.

Ficus Elastica or Rubber Plants, in fine condition, perfect leaves, 7-in. pots, specimen plants, 28 to 30 in. high, $1.00; 6 to 6½-in. pots, 25 to 28 in. high, 50c to 75c; 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 25c, 30c to 35c.

Latania Borbonica (Chinese Fan Palms), 30 to 35 in. high, 6 to 7 in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; made up of 3 6-in. pots, 25 to 30 in. high, 50c to 60c.

Areca Lutescens, 3 plants in a 4-in. pot, 20c to 25c; 5¼-in., 3 plants in a pot, 30c.

Our Hydrangea Otaksa can't be beat; full of buds; right for Easter trade; every branch nicely staked up, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 heads to the plant, 6-in. pots, 35c to 50c; 5 to 7-in. pots, 75c; $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Araucarias Our Specialty.

We are the largest importers of these lovely decorative plants, the Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta Compacta and Glauca, the choicest last spring (1911) importation, ready for immediate shipment. It is of no use to look elsewhere for cheaper prices. We now control and will control the market of the Araucarias in the future.

Look! Bargains in Araucaria Excelsa.

Such low prices as are quoted below were never known in the history of Araucaria Excelsa. Just think! 5½-in. pots, 3-4 tiers, 16 to 18 in. high, 50c to 60c.

Plants, 5½-6-7 in. pots, raised from top cuttings, no seedlings, 15-18-20-25-30 in. high, 4-5-6 tiers, 2-3-4-5 years old, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. We give big value for your money. Just think! An elephant, 6-in. pot, 4 years old, 4-5-6 tiers, 20-25 in. high, for only 75c; a jumbo, 6-in. pot, 5 year old, 25 in. and over, as wide as a bushel basket, 5-6 tiers, for only $1.00; and what do you think! A holy terror, 30 to 40 in. and over, 5-6-7 tiers, worth $2.00, for only $1.25 to $1.50.

We also have the nicest Araucaria Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, 3 to 4 tiers, 18 to 24 in. high, 25 to 30 in. across, 6-in. pots, a houseful, perfect jewels, for only $1.25 to $1.50, worth $1.75 to $2.00.

Von Sion Daffodils (double nosed), best double yellow Narcissus in cultivation, three bulbs planted in a 5½ to 6-in. pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Dielytra Spectabilis (Bleeding Heart), hardy, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c and 50c.

Murillo, Tournesole and Red Tulips in 9-in. pans, 7 to 9 bulbs in a pan, Asparagus around, 60c; 10-in., 75c.

Tulips, Tournesole, double, red and yellow variegated, and Murillo, beautifully shaded rose pink, three bulbs in one pot (4-in.), $15.00 per 100 pots; $1.80 per dozen.

Hyacinths, 3 plants in a 9-in. pan, edging of Asparagus Plumosus, 60c per pan; 10-in. pans, trimmed with Asparagus also, 75c to $1.00.

Ipomea Noctiflorum, our so well-known pure white, waxy Moonvine, bearing flowers very fragrant and as big as a saucer, 2½-in. pots; will make good stock for you to propagate from; $3.00 per 100.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 6-in. pots, 25, 30, 35, 40-45 in. high, 4, 5, 6 years old, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Kentia Belmoreana, single plants, 5½-6-7 in. pots, 5-6-7 years old, 25-30-35-40 in. high, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 25 to 30 in. high, made up of 3 plants, 6 to 7 in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50; 4-in. 20 in. high, 20c to 25c.

Our Ferns this year are exceptionally very fine. Boston, Scotti, Whitmani and Scholzei, 5½ and 6 in., 35c, 40 and 50c, 7-in., large, bushy plants, 75c to $1.00. As big as a bushel basket, $1.00 to $1.25, 8-in., as big as a washtub, only $1.50, worth $2.00 to $3.00. Remember, all our Ferns are pot-grown, not lifted from benches.

Neph. Giatrisii, a new beautiful fern, an improvement on Scotti, much shorter and bushier than Scotti, 5½ in. pots, 50c; 3-in. pots, 20c; 4-in., 25c.

Ferns for Dishes, big assortment, 2½-in. pots at $4.00 per 100.

Spirea Gladstone.

What is a home, what is a store, what is a church, what is an Easter present, without having a few of the so much admired and so greatly in demand Spirea Gladstone, the pride of Holland? O, those charming sprays of beautiful pure white flowers! And the foliage, of such a beautiful wax deep green is a jewel in itself! Mixed with beautiful lilies and other blooming plants they will complete the flower decoration for your happy, joyful Easter home of 1912. Knowing the great demand for these plants during past Easters, when not half the customers could be supplied, we are well prepared this year for the rush, and were fortunate in spite of the scarcity last fall in Holland. When other florists' supplies were cut short by Holland growers we obtained enough of the bulbs to fill two houses with the choicest, and we are able to supply all incoming orders promptly. Price: 5½, 6 and 7 in. pots, full of buds and flowers, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or more, the same price. Some are as big as a small washtub.

Mention if ship with or without pots.

Cash with order, please.

Dreer's Specials in Hardy Delphiniums

DELPHINIUM BELLADONNA.

Choice Hybrid Delphiniums

Amos Perry. Semi-double flowers of a rich rosy mauve flushed with sky-blue; conspicuous black eye. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
Alfred Henderson. Bold massive spikes of rich, rosy lavender with white eye. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
Belladonna. The freest of all, never out of bloom. Beautiful turquoise-blue flowers. 15 cents each; $1.50 per dozen; $12.00 per 100.
Carmon. Large individual flowers, deep Gentian-blue; smaller petals in the centre, rosy plum with a deep brown eye, 30 cents each; $3.00 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.
Duke of Connaught. Rich Oxford-blue, with bold white eye; fine large flowers. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
Genova. One of the finest light Delphiniums; a pleasing light-blue shade and a pure white eye; many branching stems. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
Julia. Gigantic flowers of a pretty cornflower-blue; beautifully veined with rose; large, pure, white eye arranged on a most symmetrical spike. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
Lamartine. Similar in habit of growth to Belladonna, but with rich Gentian-blue flowers with white centre; very distinct and handsome. 20 cents each; $2.00 per dozen; $15 per 100.
Mme. Violet Geslin. Perfectly round semi-double flowers of a clear blue; lavender centre, bold white eye and evenly arranged in spikes 5 to 6 feet high; a gem. 30 cents each; $3.00 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.
Portia. Lovely cornflower-blue, but with just the faintest flash of rose; black centre. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
Queen Wilhelmina. One of the finest of the newer hybrids; immense flowers of a soft lavender-blue, flushed rose, with a very conspicuous white eye. 30 cents each; $3.00 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.
St. Paul. Large bold flowers two inches across; sky-blue; inner petals rosy-plum; white eye; a most telling variety. 30 cents each; $3.00 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.

New Delphiniums

Hybridum Moerheimi. This is the first really white hybrid Delphinium introduced. The plant is of strong, vigorous growth, 5 feet high, the lateral or side shoots 2½ feet high. The flowers are of purest white, without the slightest shading; a free and continuous bloomer from June till frost. Stock limited. $1.00 each.
Belladonna Hessen. A variety of the beautiful Belladonna in which the coloring is a more intense blue; flowers fully 1½ inches across. 50 cents each.
Nassau. Another very branching variation, with soft blue flowers of extra large size. 50 cents each.
Capri. Of the same fine habit of growth as Moerheimi, having the same parentage, but with large flowers of a beautiful sky-blue; the best of its type. $1.00 each.

You Can Be Independent on Five Acres of Land if You Grow Berries

With a hundred berry plants you can find health and enjoyment. With five acres you can be independent; with twice that you can become rich. High cost of living, health, enjoyment, recreation, independence — these are the problems berry growing solves.

Get My Invaluable Berry Book

I've studied living conditions for a good many years, while I produced berries of all kinds. The results are summed up in the one book of its kind published in America.

Here also is described, among many others, the Himalaya Berry, that perennial resembling blackberries, but bearing fruit on old and new wood like a fruit tree, with the value of apples for commercial growing. The vine is beautiful, climbing like a Rambler rose over your porch. Get the full details. The book is free. Send your address now, before you lose my address.

Circulation in Buyers' Brains
Is the kind enjoyed by the American Florist. Its actual paid circulation we believe, is the largest in its class. The contents are of real present value and are preserved for future reference. Advertisers who realize this establish permanent business with the best trade in the United States and Canada.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

Which Pile of Sash Do You Want?

Here is a chance for you to get our "Sash That Last" at a special price. A price that will last for exactly 15 days and not a day longer. If your order comes a day late, you must expect to pay the regular price.

These special prices in lots of 25, 50 or 100 are for single light each unglazed and unpainted. For double light add 25 cents to each price.

Now a word about the sash themselves. Peter Henderson has some at his place in Jersey City that have been in use for, this is the twenty-second year. From the way they look, you would declare them good for another ten.

Up at Stamford, Conn., the other day we came across a lot that have been standing the racket for 35 years.

Of course, in both these cases, the sash have been kept well painted, but you always keep yours painted, and you might just as well paint good sash while you are about it, and even if you didn't paint them, there isn't a sash made that will come anywhere near beating "Sash That Last" for endurance.

What's the use of buying rough, heavy sash with open mortise joints, when only for a few cents more you can get Lord & Burnham "Sash That Last" with their blind mortise weather-tight joints, steel dowel pins, steel cross brace and smooth workman-like finish?

And that isn't all—we guarantee them—a guarantee that means something—a guarantee that says: "If they are not the best sash you ever saw, and in every way exactly as we have told you—then notify us and we will send you shipping directions and pay the freight charges both ways ourselves." So far we have never had to pay any freight—a fact which tells its own conclusive story.

This offer is good for only 15 days—so you better order right now, before it slips your mind and you wake up to find it's too late get in on the special price.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE "BIG ADVANCE" Ventilating Machine

This machine is an enlarged duplicate of our well known "ADVANCE" machine and uses 1 1/4 inch pipe for shafting, which pipe is 40% to 45% stronger in twist relation than 1 inch Double Strength pipe. This was proved by a thorough test.

The service and satisfaction that our Advance machine has given in the past is sufficient proof that this new machine is built mechanically correct. We still continue to use our Advance machine on houses 100 ft. long or under.

To date over 300 of these "BIG ADVANCE" machines have been sold and they have only been on the market 2 months and unadvertised. A recent installation showed that this machine would easily take care of a 300 foot house and leave no sag in the end sash. This is quite an item and it would pay you to investigate before purchasing your ventilating apparatus. The prices on the advance machine and parts are maintained on this new machine by economical methods of manufacturing and the shafting pipe for the new machine will cost you less than 1 inch pipe.

Write us today asking for further information regarding our BIG ADVANCE ventilating machine.

Announcement of Eight Terse Talks.

I ASKED the Trouble Man to talk again. He said it was too early, but when the good old summer time came he would. The way the weather has been lately—summer seems a long way off. So I have made up my mind to do a little talking on my own hook.

They are going to be short and pointed—Terse Talks, in every sense of the word. Eight of them.

The first one entitled, "Don't Be a Barnacle" was published last week. Seven more to come.

Here are the subjects:

No. 2. Don't Be a Mummy.

There are more mummies now than in the time of ancient Egypt. Perhaps you are one. This talk tells you how to find out.

No. 3. Don't be a Kicker.

It tells what surely happens to all kickers and gives a prescription for their immediate help.

No. 4. Don't be Spider Trapped

Perhaps you are. If you don't read any of the other talks.—be sure not to miss this one. It's very personal.

No. 5. Not So Much Engineering, But More Common Sense.

This talk tells how to make a spring medicine that is a sure cure for fat repair bills and that will put flesh on lean bank accounts.

No. 6. The Deacon and the "Hoss."

True story with a moral. Mostly "horse sense."

No. 7. What's Back of the Dollar.

It tells about a certain canny Scotchman (you know him) that gets $5000 a week. And why. It's the why that will interest you.

No. 8. Some Men Would Rather Crawl Through the Fence Than Walk in by the Gate.

This is a good one on you, because it talks mostly about the other fellow. The point is—who is the other fellow?

THESE talks will appear every week for seven weeks in the Florists' Exchange and American Florist.

Our heating system works to perfection. To our surprise the new No. 8 Kroeschell Boiler mastered the whole Plant, consisting of five houses, 20x150. We only deemed it necessary to start our second boiler when the temperature went down to 8 degrees below zero.

We had expected to use both boilers in cold weather, but the one boiler did such excellent work that we did not run the two boilers until the very cold weather set in. It was a very easy matter to keep the temperature up in the very coldest weather and stormiest nights. The five houses have 20,500 square feet of glass; No. 8 Boiler is rated at 16,500 square feet.

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of January 27th, will say that we have been using FUNGINE on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the APHINE for lice on lettuce, instead of _____ (a nicotine preparation) and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots. If so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this FUNGINE as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.

FROM PETERS & REED

We here show the first of several clay working machines used in our factory, which are indispensable to the manufacture of all high grade pottery; others will appear later.

The one shown here is known as a Blunger Mill, into which the raw clay is received at the open top. It there meets the revolving knives and by the addition of a stream of water, is reduced to a consistency that allows it to flow freely from a valve at the bottom into the next machine, a Revolving Sifter, which will be described here later.

A fine illustrated description of the full scheme will be sent you on request. Write for it.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Hardy Roses.

The rose bed should be pruned and then spaded as early as possible after the ground has opened and if the canes have been buried the covering removed and the canes cut back. To properly prune a bed of hybrid perpetual roses is a careful, painstaking piece of work. This work is too often done in a careless, haphazard manner, and by many every variety is cut back alike. To get the best results a study of the varieties is necessary, for instance, strong growing varieties like General Jacqueminot and Magna Charta can be cut back and the small wood cut out much more severely than Prince Camille de Rohan or Mme. Gabriel Luizet. When pruning it is first necessary to determine whether quantity or quality is the most to be desired. If quantity is wanted more wood can be left and six to eight eyes left on the canes. If quality is the main object this must be obtained at the expense of quantity, and the strong canes only retained and these cut to two or three eyes according as to how the eyes are located. The top eye that is left should be pointed out from main stem so that when the growths start they will not crowd toward the center. This will allow of plenty of room for development and a good circulation of air through the plant. After bushes are pruned the soil should be spaded good and deep and leveled off.

Bedding Stock.

The general florist will now have his hands full with bedding stock, and as soon as the Easter plants are out of the way these can be spread out and given the necessary room. The geraniums should be spaced and if any have grown too tall to make shapely plants the tops should be cut back, but at the present day the trade wants a geranium in bloom at bedding time and very little pinching should be done after the first of April, for it will take from then until the first of June to produce a new branch with a flower. Ageratums, alternantheras, alyssums, heliotropes and like blooming plants should be kept on the move and be given good light positions. Salvia should be kept pinched back until the latter part of the month which should produce fine shapely plants. The coleus should be rooted and the top rubbed out as soon as established in the pots. Seedlings should be potted or flatted, the former preferred if a price can be obtained commensurate for the extra labor, but if flatted give them room enough to properly develop. Cannas will now require a warm, light location and with plenty of root room. The one great factor in growing good bedding stock is, at this season, to keep the plants moving and never allow them to get a check, for if once severely checked a good plant is an impossibility.

Potting Young Stock.

At this season of the year the plant grower will have thousands of young seedlings to pot or place in flats and as many more to shift from a small pot to a larger size, and it does not seem that any instruction in potting should be necessary, but we chanced not long ago to see a boy potting and wondered if the plants would live and we then saw in the houses many of the plants which had been potted struggling for existence. It seems to be the general idea with the young gardener that the one that can pot the most plants in a given time is the smartest, regardless how well it is done and how the plants afterward grow. The young man whom we saw would fill the pot full and then make a hole in the soil with his finger, place the seedling in the hole and then press the top soil around the stem. The chances were that the roots of many of those plants were still hanging in an enclosed hole in the center of the pot, for the soil should have been firmed around the roots. That he could handle a large number of plants in a given time was no question, but a much better plant can be grown if the soil is made firm around the roots first and then the top firmed down. The same thing happens in transplanting where the loose soil is thrown around between the plant and the pot and the top then firmed down. A little soil should be first thrown in the bottom of the pot and the plant placed in this, then a little soil around the plant which should be firmed down, then a little more soil which can be pressed down from the top. This will take longer, but the plant will live and grow enough better to pay for the extra pains.

Peonies.

As soon as the frost is out of the ground the peony beds should be forked over and the manure mulch that was placed on them last fall should be forked or spaded in, but let this be done by a careful man, or at least not by help that knows nothing about this work. The young growths start very early and are very tender so it is best not to fork too close to the crowns, but loosen up all the soil around the plants. It is also well to leave the stems covered as deep as they have been all winter, for a sharp frost may injure a stem that has been protected through the severe winter and then subjected to sharp cold. But the loosening of the soil to good depth will conserve the moisture and allow the air to get into the soil. If the plants were not mulched with manure in the fall it is well to spread some old manure, not fresh, on the beds before spading and fork it in.

Although the fall is the best time to transplant peonies, yet if not done and it is desired or necessary to move them, they can be transplanted early in the spring, but this must be done before the growths are above the surface of the ground and as much soil left about the roots as possible. These plants make their young roots in the fall and if any attempt is made to shake the soil off the roots will be broken doing this. Divisions must therefore be carefully made, so as not to disturb the roots more than possible. The dry roots that are purchased at this time are much better planted in pots or boxes until the roots are formed in the soil and later transplanted to the ground. It cannot be expected that plants of this kind will produce any flowers this year, for it will only be possible to get them established in their new location the first season.

The Gogo Vine.

Visitors to almost any tropical seacoast are likely to find cast up with the shells and other flotsam and jetsam certain large flattened chestnut colored beans two inches or more in diameter. These are sometimes known as sea beans because ocean currents frequently bear them long distances and cast them upon shores foreign to the plants that bear them. The beans are seeds of an immense tropical climber and are borne in huge pods that are often four feet long. The plant, which is known to science as Entada scandens, and in common parlance as gogo vine, contains saponin or vegetable soap and the bark and seeds are said to be much used by tropical people as a hair wash. The bark is thoroughly beaten and imparts a reddish tinge to the water. Taken internally the juice of the bark is reported to be of value in asthma. The hard polished seed-coat also has its uses and in other days was often made into snuff-boxes.—The American Botanist.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Most Important Item of a Package.

Two florists were recently discussing the value of an attractive put-up, and one remarked: "With me the most important point about my put-up is the tag, and, strangely enough, it is the tag which is often neglected by others. I believe that it has just as much direct advertising value as the box. An impressive tag is the cheapest advertisement a florist can make. When I see fine flowers in a costly box with a cheap tag, I always think of the so-called 'town sport' who wears a celluloid collar with his frock coat on Sunday. In both instances mistaken economy destroys the entire effect."

The Easter Church Wedding.

Starting with the center aisle of the church arrange made-up plants of Easter lilies in this manner: plant into a green Dresden basket a stump of a tree with bare branches, of moderate size, and cover this completely with white satin ribbon. Wire to the branches long sprays of Easter lilies tied with white satin ribbon; they must not be allowed to spread much but arranged with a view to height. If sufficient foliage of the lilies is not available use asparagus to wind down in between the branches where the lilies have been attached. The flowers should be arranged so that they are above the average person's height when standing. The lower stump can be wound with asparagus allowing a arches in all. Cover this stout wire with a satin ribbon (white) and arrange on it in graceful manner white lilac with its foilage, making a large and artistic bunch to be suspended from the center of the arch to which a tiny cluster of electric lights can be attached covered with white catgut. In between each tree down the aisle at a height just above a tall person's head stretch wide satin sash ribbon around which asparagus vine has been run at intervals; from the center of each such strand a bunch of lilac can be arranged effectively.

In the chancel, where the bride is to stand, a huge butterfly made of white lilac, with electric lights, can be suspended from which are extended long strands of Easter lilies with the other ends attached where most convenient, at windows at the back if possible. Around the circle of windows at the back arrange wide white satin ribbon on which has been knotted single Easter lilies to make it look like a fringe along the windows. This can also be used in the side aisles along the wall. Use Easter lilies in groups combined with white tulips, and ferns where necessary. The usual palms should be used as backgrounds to lend to the effectiveness.

In case the ball room is to be decorated in the same manner, the trees should be arranged along the walls. Curtains can be made of flowers and suspended over any windows there may be, using white satin ribbon in which small clusters of lilies have been knotted, interspersed with strands of asparagus. Garlands of this same good deal of the white satin to show. Tie around the green pot or basket an artistic bow knot of ribbon. Twelve of these on each side of the aisles should be sufficient and to the center stump of each attach at the top a stout wire to be used as an arch to extend to the opposite tree, making 12 order can be arranged where most effective. Sweet peas and pink roses are also effective in this arrangement.

For the wedding table a good arrangement is a large silver basket of white lilac arranged loosely. A pink sash ribbon of a delicate hue should be tied around the basket, allowing one width to extend on and over table the longest way. On this ribbon can be marked in silver the date and the monograms of the contracting parties, silver candelabra with pale pink shades are effective in this arrangement.

The bridal bouquet as a contrast should be of white roses and lily of the valley in loose arrangement. For the bridesmaids sweet peas in pink and white.

Easter in the Chicago Stores.

With the wealth of material which the large retail stores have at this Easter they all present a most beautiful sight for they are filled to overflowing with elegant specimen plants of the different kinds in flower at this season, bearing flowers of all the different colors that are found in the floral world, and a splendid assortment of all the spring flowers of unexcelled quality. The plants are the first to attract the attention of the patrons, and they include rambler roses of white, red and several shades of pink, grown in bush and fantastic forms, hydrangeas, azaleas, splendid plants in white, pink and red, genistas, spiræas, large and small sizes; cyclamen full of flowers, nicely grown Primula obconica, flowering almonds and other shrubs, and thousands of lilies, beside the beautiful plant combinations in all shapes of baskets and decorated boxes. Added to this are a large variety of bulbous plants, lily of the valley, tulips, hyacinths and narcissi in pans and boxes, which make the stores a riot of high colors.

The cut flowers embrace the beautiful vases of roses and the quality of all is superb, carnations of all colors, lilies and callas, sweet peas of unsurpassed quality in the several colors, snapdragons on stems three feet long, mammoth mignonette, stocks, beautiful orchids, violets in quantity and quantities of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths, as well as pansies and other spring flowers. With all this from which to select the stock one can easily comprehend what a gorgeous collection was to be found in the beautiful stores.

John Mangel is in his beautiful new store on Monroe street as well as in the old store which he still occupies on Wabash avenue, was well supplied with the best the market afforded. Nicely grown hydrangeas, low and well flowered, were a feature, as well as splendid lilies, azaleas, rhododendrons, a large line of the several rambler roses and quantities of bulbous plants. Baskets of plants were prominent and a full assortment of cut flowers.

A. Lange had an immense stock of both plants and cut flowers that embraced everything that the market afforded. Roses, lilies and bulbous plants were seen in profusion and nicely grown azaleas, hydrangeas, spiræas, genistas and plant baskets. The cut flowers were in great profusion, the ice chest full of elegant roses and the tables and shelves overloaded with excellent stock.

The Bohannon Floral Co. was well supplied with a beautiful line of specimen plants as well as the cream of the cut flowers. Rambler roses in all forms and of all colors were a great feature, fine shaped azaleas were admirably shown, and a splendid lot of well grown lilies. The stock was so large that an additional store had to be procured in order to display the elegant stock.

The Fleischman Floral Co. had their beautiful store full of the finest of stock. Splendid plants of azaleas, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, lilies, beautiful pans of lily of the valley, and well grown tulips and narcissus. The cut flower display was of the choicest, and orchids, lily of the valley, sweet peas and the extra grades of roses adorned the store.

H. C. Rowe's new store was filled with a beautiful assortment of the best in the market and another store was procured to display the splendid assortment of well grown plants, noticeable among these being extra fine specimens of lilies, rambler roses, hydrangeas and azaleas, as well as well arranged plant combinations in baskets and boxes.

John T. Muir's two stores had a splendid line of plants, a nice lot of lilies and a great assortment of bulbous flowers were well displayed in the large windows and in the stores. A fine lot of hydrangeas were a grand feature and splendid baskets of plants were nicely arranged and beautifully ornamented.

W. J. Smyth had one of the choicest collections and the beautiful store was filled with fine specimen rambler roses, hydrangeas, azaleas, and pans of tulips, hyacinths and narcissus. Plant baskets are always a feature at this store and they are well assembled with the best of taste and some beautiful combinations were displayed.

C. A. Samuelson had a choice collection of both plants and flowers which included all of the best specimen plants to be procured. Splendid azaleas in the different colors and nicely grown rambler roses of the several shades and in different forms were nicely decorated. Plant combinations in baskets and boxes were a splendid feature and well arranged, and a full line of the best of cut flowers was offered to the patrons of this store.

Canger & Gormley and the Alpha Floral Co. both have a full line of the best of cut flowers and a fine assortment of pot plants. The windows of both stores are beautifully arranged and attract the attention of the passerby on the crowded thoroughfare on which the stores are located.

All are looking forward to a strenuous week and a prosperous season. With the large amount of stock on hand a vast amount of work is before all the stores, and it will be not only all day but all night and way into Sunday before the last of the plants and flowers are delivered and the store can be closed to end the Easter trade for 1912. The only wish during the middle of the week was for pleasant warm weather for Saturday and Sunday and a successful season was assured.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.—H. C. White has opened a new flower store at 345 Third street.

Nemesia Strumosa.

A half-hardy plant that is one of the most beautiful annuals when it is well grown, is Nemesia strumosa, but this latter condition is not always easy to obtain, which is doubtless responsible for the comparative infrequency of its growth. It is a native of South Africa, and plants from that part of the world are generally regarded as not only sun-loving, but accustomed to dryness. That might be regarded as the reason why this annual is so seldom a success in damp gardens, if it were not for the fact that it is often grown very successfully in the North of England. The finest heads of blossom I ever saw came from a North Yorkshire garden.

There is one very fine strain known as Suttoni, in many beautiful colors, the shades of orange and apricot being the most characteristic colors of the flower. A blue form has recently been raised known as Blue Gem, but for a bed there is little doubt that the various shades of scarlet, pink, yellow and orange are best, without the admixture of blue or purple, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine. The forget-me-not blue variety is a doubtful acquisition if it is going to be introduced into all mixtures of seed, as purples are in the case of verbenas and pentstemons.

Seedlings may be raised in any frost-proof structure, but if raised in a warm house they should be given very little heat, and water should be used very sparingly; while, as soon as the seedlings appear, they should be kept in a cool place, with plenty of ventilation, as they are as prone to damp off as stocks. A rich sandy soil should be used, and as soon as the plants are large enough to handle they should be pricked out into boxes; and they are even worth potting up for the sake of obtaining the best results. They should be bedded out about six inches apart each way in well-prepared soil in a sunny position; and if the soil has been deeply worked, so that the plants have an extensive root run, they will not need much water in an ordinary summer. At this distance apart they will grow together; and, as each plant sends up five or six stems of more or less equal strength, each crowned with a head of flowers, the whole bed will be a glowing mass of color.

Seeds may be sown in the open ground after the first week in May, but it needs a favorable season and conditions for good results. They last in flower a fairly long time as annuals go, but, if the plants are raised early, so as to get them strong before the forcing weather of June, they must not be expected to make much show after the beginning of August—at least, in the south—and some reserve material should be in readiness to replant the bed for an autumn display.

These nemesias grow less than 1½ feet in height, even at their best, and they make excellent pot plants. They may be had in flower from May to September, according to the time of sowing. Though the Suttoni strain is the best known, having been longest in the field, other nurserymen are now raising their own strains, some growing less than one foot in height.

THE GLADIOLUS.

American Gladiolus Society Medal.

The American Gladiolus Society has had manufactured a new medal, which we illustrate, of unique and original design, the illustration showing the face side; the reverse is a simple wreath of gladiolus flowers, with space in the center for the necessary engraving. One is made in sterling silver, colored silver gray, and the other is finished bronze. Both are sand blast finish, and are made and designed by the Boston Badge Co., Boston, Mass. These medals will be given to representative horticultural societies, who will offer them in their schedules to be competed for by amateur exhibitors of gladiolus blooms at their summer shows, the silver medal as first prize, and the bronze medal as second prize. The following societies have been given a set of these medals for their coming summer exhibitions: Massachusetts Horticultural Society; Newport Horticultural Society; Southampton (L. I.) Horticultural Society; St. Catharines (Ont.) Horticultural Society; Pasadena Horticultural Society; Melrose Horticultural and Improvement Society.

American Gladiolus Society Medal.

The Gladiolus as a Florists' Flower.

Few flowers are more valuable to florists than the gladiolus. When it is remembered that the forced blooms can be had from the middle of April, and that the flowering season lasts till the end of September, it will be recognized that few flowers have so long a season.

The earlier flowering varieties are the more easily handled for florists' work, on account of their lightness and delicacy, but the stately spikes of the Gandavensis and Childsii have their place too, and for church decoration they are unsurpassed. In ball-rooms, or for big receptions, their grand coloring and stiff habit of growth make them the flower par excellence for decorative work, and above all, they hold the palm for their wonderful lasting qualities. I have had spikes of gladioli sent me from abroad that have been three days on the journey, says a writer in the Handbook of the National Gladiolus Society of England, and when placed in water they continued to bloom and expand their flowers for ten days after arrival. At the present time florists do not sufficiently recognize the value of gladiolus in decoration, but the time is slowly but surely coming when they will realize its merits; already a change is making itself felt. As a grower in a small way, I had a nice lot of Gandavensis, Brenchleyensis and Childsii in bloom last autumn, and endeavored to dispose of the cut flowers to the neighboring florists, but without success, not a single spike could I sell. This year sees a great change, for the past month orders from five different florists have reached me daily, and I have sold nearly every spike. Another grower assures me that he has never sold gladioli so freely, and at such good prices, as during this season, which points to the fact that the gladiolus is taking its place at last as a florists' flower, and perhaps the new society may, in a small way, have helped to bring this about.

Having had experience, both as a grower and as a retailer in a West End London shop, perhaps a few notes on the best selling varieties would be of use to those who are raising for market. In the early flowering section, Colvillei Alba, The Bride and Nanus Peach Blossom are the two favorites, and every grower who is planting for cut work should not fail to put in large beds of both these. My own experience this year was that Bride and Peach Blossom kept top prices right through, and next to them came Blushing Bride, for which there was great demand. Pascal sold very well, but I could do nothing with Sappho, it is a bad flower to travel, and does not last long. Many of the newer varieties of nanus sell well, but the old ones I have just mentioned will be difficult to beat, from the florists' point of view. There is room for a really good crimson, and I have been privileged to see a magnificent new variety of this color raised by a friend, but the stock is yet too limited for it to be put on the market, but in a year or so it will be creating a sensation. Now, turning to other sorts for cut work, the old Brenchlyensis sells very well, and the newer Brenchlyensis Hollandia is an excellent one to grow; one florist I know sells more of this variety than any other. America, Attraction, Brilliant, have all sold very well, and my experience has taught me that it is useless to grow mixed varieties for floral work, as florists like good named sorts, and will send for them again and again, where they will not have a mixture of colors. One of the reasons, no doubt, is that a large jar or bowl in a shop window of one striking color will attract the attention of the passerby, where a mass of mixed colors does not catch the eye. A fine effect was struck in a West End florist's shop last week by a background of ferns, against which stood a large jar of Brenchlyensis, and at the foot of the jar was a bowl of the pale salmon Hollandia.

At this season of the year when London is empty and the florists' trade at its lowest ebb, the gladiolus comes to them as a boon and blessing. A moderate outlay on the market will buy a mass of magnificent blooms which will make their window a delight for three or four days. The florist knows the value of a bloom that will last in his slack season; he does not desire to buy daily large supplies of roses and lilies which last but one day only; and where can he find another flower that will stand him in such good stead as the gladiolus?

I look forward to a time when the gladiolus shall take its place as one of the most important flowers in the florists' trade, but this time will not come till growers realize the importance of growing good named sorts only, and those most suitable for cut work, while raisers of new varieties must realize that good flowers with strong constitutions and erect habit are needed, and that it is not to their advantage to flood the market with weak stock of indeterminate colors and markings.

It must be patent to all raisers and growers that if there is to be a great future for gladioli, it will be the market for cut blooms that will make the future. The few private gardens that have a named collection of choice kinds will never put much money into the pockets of the growers, though they may pay a few guineas for a bulb or two, but when the gladiolus is recognized generally as one of the leading florists' flowers and every shop has great jars and bowls full of their grand spikes, then we poor growers may find our returns for gladioli mounting up and up, and bulbs may be sold yearly by tens of thousands to those who grow cut blooms for market. May this come soon. But again, in conclusion, let me emphasize that it lies chiefly in the grower's hands to make the flower popular, and where he has a weak or insignificant variety, let him root it out and put it on his bonfire, no matter what it cost him to buy or produce.

THE CARNATION.

Spring Culture.

The bright spring days use up the moisture very rapidly in the carnation houses, and the benches are found to dry out frequently, for it must not be forgotten that the plants have occupied said benches for about eight months now, with the natural result that the soil is, or should be, quite well filled with roots. The texture and composition of the soil has much to do with the quantity of water that may be given, so that no positive rule can be laid down for this operation, a light sandy soil permitting a good watering every second day in bright weather, while a heavy and compact soil may not require more than two waterings in a week, and yet either soil may grow good carnations, providing that proper care be given in culture.

MULCHING.

A good mulching of manure is a great help to the blooming stock at this season, not only from the amount of plant food that is contained therein, and which is gradually carried down to the roots by successive waterings, but also from the fact that the mulch protects the surface roots from the sun and prevents the soil moisture from evaporating quite so rapidly.

SHADING.

A light shading helps much in the color of the flowers from this time forward, the light pinks especially suffering from too much sunshine, but care needs to be taken in the shading operation, else too dense a shade may result, the happy medium being found in a sprinkle of shading that just breaks the full force of the sun's rays without causing the growth of the plants to become weak.

Up to the last week of March there has rarely been a night without frost, consequently more or less artificial heat has been in demand, but with the longer days it becomes necessary to check the fires early in the morning in order that the piping may cool off before the sun gets too high. This of course referring to those many establishments in which hot water heating prevails. Ventilation also demands early attention, the temperature rising so rapidly on bright mornings, especially where the houses are without shade.

Among the varieties that show the effect of the sun quite early in the season are Enchantress, Rose Pink Enchantress, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Windsor and Gloriosa, all of these being subject to bleaching to a greater or less extent, and are therefore improved by being shaded. Some of these flowers improve in color by being kept in water for 24 hours, but those that are very badly bleached are best kept by themselves, for two or three poorly colored flowers in a bunch will spoil the effect of the rest, and thus depreciate the whole bunch.

THE NOVELTIES.

Of the novelties of the past season, White Wonder seems to have attracted quite a good deal of attention, this variety being a healthy grower and a good producer, the flowers large and pure in color when fully open. The flower of White Wonder is not quite so fine in form as a good White Perfection, but is larger, and both these fine whites are rather given to splitting in some localities, apparently giving the best results when grown in a rather light soil. But in any locality in which White Perfection behaves well, it would seem that White Wonder would be well worth a trial, for it is a better grower than its parent, beside having the advantage in size.

Gloriosa is a large flowered variety of most pleasing color, makes a splendid stem, and does not seem much inclined to split, but the plants do not make many breaks, and consequently one could not count on getting as many flowers from this variety as from one of the Enchantress type, but a nice bunch of Gloriosa is liable to make the buyers sit up and take notice, and ought at all times to command a fair price.

Of Bright Spot it may be said that it might be a lot brighter without setting the world on fire, but it is a free grower and produces a fair number of flowers, and those who grow Mrs. C. W. Ward do not need Bright Spot for color.

Bonfire is a pleasing color, and a fair grower, but does not measure up to the ideal scarlet in either size or fullness.

And thus it goes from season to season; we see, we buy, we are conquered, for sometimes we get a good one, but more often we find what is known on the street as a "lemon," but novelties are the spice of life in carnation growing, and without a little spice what is the use of living?

Carnation Blooms Small.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Our carnation plants look vigorous and healthy, bearing from 12 to 20 flowers and buds, but the flowers are thin and small and the stems are weak. We keep the temperature at 48° to 52° at night and as cool as possible during the day with plenty of ventilation. Can you tell us any reason for this? H. B.

I do not understand the reason for this unless it is that your soil is lacking in nourishment. I have had a little experience in your section of the country and remember the peculiar condition there existing as regards soil and the difficulty that it is to be able to obtain a good live manure of a lasting nature. I would advise that you apply a dressing of pulverized sheep or cattle manure to the beds and note its action, which should be easily seen in a short time, then following it up with another dressing in about three to four weeks after. Then provided you keep up the night temperature as stated and follow it up with a day temperature of 58° to 60° on cloudy days and on bright days about 65° with ventilation on, being guided in the extent of the ventilation according to the state of the weather, I am of the opinion that an improvement will quickly be noticeable. C. W. JOHNSON.

WITH THE GROWERS

John Walker, Youngstown, O.

The encroachment of large manufacturing plants with their dirt, soot, smoke and foul air upon the greenhouse plant of John Walker at Youngstown, O., made it necessary that he look around and procure a location where the conditions were more propitious for the production of cut flowers. He consequently last year, after looking thoroughly over the country adjacent to the city, purchased seventeen acres at Boardman about five miles from the center of the city, and last summer erected a range of new houses which we illustrate.

The houses are thoroughly up-to-date; four are 28½ x 200 feet, one 18 x 200 feet, and two which connect at the end with the boiler house are each 18 x 100 feet, comprising an area of 30,000 square feet, the material being furnished by the Foley Manufacturing Co. of Chicago. The houses are all equal span, glazed with 16 x 24-inch glass, set the 24-inch way between bars, giving the maximum amount of light. The walls are seven feet high to gutter which allows for ample head room. The heating is by steam furnished by a large return tubular boiler and over 2,000 feet of pipe was used in installing the heating plant. The houses are situated on high ground overlooking the valley of Mill Creek, away from the soot and dirt of the manufactories.

The first house is devoted to roses and here is a fine healthy crop of White Killarney, Richmond, Killarney Perle and Mrs. Aaron Ward roses. The other three large houses are filled with carnations and a glorious assortment of the standard varieties is to be seen, Enchantress, White Enchantress, Rose Pink Enchantress, Victory, Beacon, Winsor, Mrs. T. W. Lawson, Harlowarden, and among the newer varieties were noted May Day, Scarlet Glow, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Pink Delight, Dorothy Gordon and others. One of the narrower houses is planted to sweet peas and violets and the other two are used for the cultivation of smilax and other greens and for propagation. The crops are all in a splendid condition and that the proprietor has not forgotten his early training and cunning is manifest by the fine quality of blooms being grown.

The old plant at Crab Creek has not been abandoned, being used for bulk stock, palms, ferns, pot plants and decorative stock and a large quantity of bedding plants are grown here, but it will probably be but a matter of a few years when all will be assembled at the new plant.

My Maryland Rose at W. J. & M. S. Vesey's

We boarded an interurban car recently and took a trip to Fort Wayne, Ind., to look over W. J. & M. S. Vesey's Easter stock. At the office we were met by W. J. Vesey, Jr., the efficient young manager of this large establishment. The first house we entered was planted to My Maryland and a finer sight we never saw in a rose house. Young Mr. Vesey has been gaining quite a reputation for growing this variety for some years. Until seeing this house we did not believe such results were possible. The house in question was forced two years without a rest, then this year it was rested from January 17 to February 17 and the bulk of this crop will be in for Easter. From August 1, 1910, to July 31, 1911, there were 45,962 blooms cut from 1,146 plants or a fraction over 40 flowers to the plant. This seems phenomenal, but if any one would visit this house and see the enormous crop now ready to cut it would not seem so remarkable. Mr. Vesey informed us that there are three very essential things for the successful cultivation of this rose, namely, water, feed and heat, and judging from what we saw they surely get the trio.

My Maryland is not the only thing that is well done in this establishment. Killarney, White Killarney and Rhea Reid will compare favorably with the best grown roses in the west. Carnations, too, were in excellent shape. Mr. Vesey thinks well of White Wonder and Gloriosa; both will be planted largely next year. Azaleas, hyacinths, tulips and daffodils we noticed in large quantities just right for Easter. One small house is devoted to orchids and the returns have shown up so well on the right side of the ledger that the number will be largely increased next year.

Society of American Florists.

MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE BOARD.

The board of directors of the S. A. F. met in Chicago, in the Auditorium hotel, March 13-15. There were present President Vincent, Charles H. Totty, E. Allen Peirce, H. A. Bunyard, John A. Evans, W. N. Rudd, George Asmus, Robert Craig, August Poehlmann and Secretary Young. The board was in session practically the whole three days and accomplished a vast amount of business.

The sum of $50.00 was placed at the disposal of Prof. H. H. Whetzel of Cornell University to cover the expense of an exhibit embracing the diseases of the florists to be made at the Chicago convention.

A request from I. S. Hendrickson, president of the American Gladiolus Society, that arrangements be made for space in which to exhibit gladiolus blooms at the Chicago convention and that such arrangements allow of a competitive class for amateurs was granted. A request of the Western Dahlia & Gladiolus Society on the same lines was, upon motion, refused for the reason that the board believed it to be for the interest of the society that divisions or multiplication of such societies should not be encouraged, and, further, that the allotment of space for another display of gladioli was not feasible.

The committee having in charge the matter of life membership badges was continued, and the committee was empowered to make arrangements with manufacturers for a supply of badges to be offered at a stated price to members wishing to purchase; thus finally disposing of this matter.

Vice-President Poehlmann reported that the Coliseum in Chicago had been engaged to house the August convention of the society under the terms considered at the meeting of the board at Detroit, and the action of the officers in taking a lease was approved.

A committee was appointed to formulate a plan looking to the affiliation of sister societies of the S. A. F.; such plan to be presented at the first executive meeting to be held at the August convention and finally submitted to the convention for decisive action.

The sum of $100.00 was appropriated to the use of the committee on school gardens, to be used in the preparation of a text book for school teachers of America, outlining methods of teaching gardening to elementary school children. A further appropriation of $50.00 was made to the committee on school gardens for use in its work.

A request from Mrs. Charles H. Maynard, secretary of the Ladies' Society of American Florists, that the society be given a place on the convention programme for its annual business meeting and a reception and dance was granted.

The rules governing the trade exhibition of this society in previous years came in for much consideration and several amendments were made. An advisory committee was appointed to which all the matters relating to the trade exhibition and exhibits are to be referred.

It was arranged that the Auditorium hotel be selected as headquarters for the society during the convention; it being understood that the management of that hotel was willing to furnish a room in which the president's reception could be held.

It was decided to recommend certain amendments to the by-laws of the society, chief among which is one covering the election of the secretary, the recommendation in this case being the amendment of Article 11, Section 2, by adding: "The Secretary shall be elected by the directors at the annual mid-lent meeting, and shall serve one year; seven (7) affirmative votes shall be necessary to elect and nine (9) to remove him from office before the expiration of his term."

The following appropriations were made:

Tariff committee	$100
Legislative committee	100
Entomologist's office	50
Pathologist	50
Botanist	50
Annual badges	50
Dies for new badges.....	50
Secretary's assistant at convention	100
Sports committee	50
President's messenger at convention	25
School gardens committee.....	50
School gardens committee for publication of text books	100

The programme for the August convention involved a good deal of discussion which resulted in a skeleton programme being formulated.

It was decided that the rate for space in the trade exhibition should be 40 cents per square foot, and that the smallest amount of space to be sold should be 50 square feet.

A resolution, covering the thanks of the board, was passed to the Chicago Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society of Chicago for entertainment and other courtesies extended to the board during its stay in Chicago.

On Thursday morning the board visited the Coliseum building in a body to inspect the same and decide upon a plan for the arrangement of the trade exhibition.

Treasurer William F. Kasting was unable to be present at the meeting through sickness. A message of sympathy was dispatched to him to Hot Springs, Ark., where he was undergoing treatment.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Banquet of Tri-City Florists' Club.

The fifth annual banquet of the Tri-City Florists' club which was held at the beautiful building of the Outing club, Davenport, Ia., March 28, was without doubt the most brilliant and successful affair ever held by any club in this part of the country, and was attended by a large number of florists and their friends. Included among the number were the following guests: J. C. Vaughan, M. Barker, of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, and P. J. Foley, president of the Chicago Florists' Club of Chicago; Wesley Greene, secretary Iowa Florist and Iowa Horticulture Society of Des Moines, Ia.; J. W. Davis and A. Ankney of Bettendorf.

The tables were set in the form of a horseshoe, conveying the thought of good luck to all that attended. The table decorations were beyond description, and we can only say that nothing like it was ever attempted outside of Chicago. Beautiful baskets and vases of the very best roses, carnations and other flowers occupied places where they showed to the best advantage and smilax, ferns and other greens ornamented the cloth. Bouquets of violets were presented to the ladies and carnations to the gents. The head table which formed the point of the horseshoe and at which sat the invited guests, the toastmaster and their lady friends would have, without doubt, captured the prize in any competition ever held. The center piece was a large basket of lavender sweet peas intermingled with boxwood, the handle being tied with lavender chiffon; on the cloth facing the opening was fastened lavender solanum, smilax and sweet peas and on each side of the table on the floor were two vases three feet high filled with stocks and antirrhinums that were greatly admired by all. The flowers of the snapdragons were very large and stems were very graceful and all of five feet in length. In the center of the open space was a bank of the Cineraria stellata of a cerise color in which callas were placed, making a beautiful decoration. Between the two ends of the horseshoe was a table some 15 feet in length on which was placed the exhibition flowers which consisted of three vases of seedling carnations of 150 each and one vase of about 75 blooms of the new red carnation which is making such a hit in this locality, shown by A. Anderson. Not one of the flowers was less than 3½ inches in diameter, and many of them were over four. A vase of St. Nicholas carnations occupied the center of the table, sent by Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, was greatly admired. The hall was decorated with wild smilax and decorative plants, the mantle being decorated with ferns, smilax and variegated vinca, and was beautiful, the variegated vinca proving a fine decorative plant as here used with other greens. Every member of the club sent in an abundance of the best they had and on behalf of the committee in charge the writer extends to them a vote of thanks for their kindness, not only for their flowers, but for their assistance and presence, thereby making the affair the grand success it was. The committee in charge deserve great credit for the way everything was carried out and the decorating affairs. Chairman Boehm was responsible for the beautiful table decorations which showed him to be a master hand, and he was ably assisted by Harry Bills. Henry Pauli arranged the hall and mantle decorations and the beautiful baskets used on the tables. Theo. Ewoldt had his hand into almost everything, and John T. Temple, the other member of the committee, entertained the invited guests. The committee worked hard and everyone present will agree that the results showed them to be well up in their profession.

After the banquet, Theo. Ewoldt officiating as toastmaster, introduced the following speakers who made interesting addresses: P. J. Foley, Wesley Greene, J. C. Vaughan and M. Barker. Between the addresses were interspersed piano solos by Prof. Shaeffer and vocal selections by J. W. Barr. As several visitors were obliged to leave to catch the train, the programme in full was not carried out. A photograph was taken after which the tables were removed and dancing followed until a late or rather an early hour. A grand time was enjoyed by all present. The guests were all so jolly that it seemed more like a family gathering than the stiff and formal banquets which are usually held.

Between the hours of 5 and 6 o'clock a great many ladies of the city took advantage of the invitations extended them by the florists and visited the houses and viewed the decorations.

NOTES.

Who ate the most? We won't tell. But there was a little boy there that weighed 375 pounds that seemed to enjoy everything that came his way.

After being introduced, the ladies paid no little attention to an editor of a florist paper of Chicago.

The remark, "the next congressman of the second district of Illinois," met with a hearty approval. Some ladies' man, too, that gent.

Wesley Greene's address was a fine one. We are only sorry that we have not a stenographic report. Mr. Greene arrived late, due to the fact his train was two hours behind time, but arrived in time to enjoy the menu and to take part in the programme.

An American Beauty rose came near being the cause of Theo. Ewoldt losing his lady friend. Ask one of the Chicago guests. It was a neat trick, but there's a man running around Chicago with a thorn in his thumb.

The ladies—God bless them—were on hand in all their finery and added much charm to the occasion. Mrs. _____ was attired in a beautiful dress of silk made _____. We can't do it, so ladies you'll have to excuse us. We are not up in social affairs, so the descriptions of your beautiful dresses will have to be left out. I know it's a shame but next time we will see that we have a society editor on hand. T. E.

ADDRESS OF WESLEY GREENE.

I am glad to be with you this evening after being absent for so many years. I have some very pleasant recollections of former meetings of the florists of the tri-cities, of picnics at Suburban Island, and chrysanthemum shows in Turner Hall. This is the oldest florist club in the state, if not the only one having such a long and prosperous career. The club has a record of which it may well be proud. It has brought together members of the craft in the tri-cities in social intercourse, and cemented bonds of friendship that cannot be other than beneficial to the trade by eliminating petty jealousies so often found among competitors in business.

In speaking of floriculture in Iowa, I cannot tell you when or where the first greenhouse was built or garden planted, but hope to be able to do so before the next meeting of the state society. In horticulture, we have some such record, and floriculture is the more æsthetic part of horticulture.

In 1799, Louis Honore Tesson planted an orchard of 100 apple trees near where the town of Montrose is now located, which he brought from St. Charles, Mo. It is not known that Julien Dubuque ever planted a tree or flower during his sojourn from 1788-1810 south of the town which now bears his name; though an apple tree was found growing near a spring in the timber that showed great age and may have grown from a seed left by someone who had camped there during that period. Not until the Langworth Brothers started a nursery after opening the mines again in 1835, have we any record of gardening at Dubuque.

Scarcely a mile from where we are assembled tonight, Antonie LeClaire planted an orchard in 1833. Some of the members of the club may remember Mr. LeClaire, Captain W. F. Cook, Major Gorden, Geo. Davenport and other early settlers. The only floriculture at that time was what nature had planted. The marsh marigolds gave back its gold from the sun-kissed meadows; wild violets on the hillsides reflected the blue arch above, white cranebills and shooting stars added white and purple to the margins of streams where the red strawberries nestled in the grass while the bobolinks fluttered out an exaltic song to his dusky mate. Such was still the condition of floriculture when I first beheld these "pararies," fifty-seven years ago. "As they stretched in airy undulations far away, as if the ocean, in his gentlest swells stood still, with all his rounded billows fixed and motionless forever."

With the early settler it was a contest for a livelihood and the florist had only a limited demand for plants and less for cut-flowers. But with an increase in population and accumulated wealth gathered from its fertile soil, floriculture kept pace with the onward movement. There are now more than a hundred floral establishments in the state, with an area in glass equal to any west of Chicago. Not only has floriculture grown in the greater quantity of stock produced, but in the quality of flowers grown. The small glass in heavy wooden frames on narrow houses has given place to larger glass on lighter wood and iron structures of greater width, having a larger volume of air and more uniform temperature. Specialization has been the watchword, growing only one variety in a house so that the necessary temperature could be maintained, and a greater measure of perfection attained in flowers or plants. It is probably better for the retail florist with a limited area of glass to buy his roses, or carnations than to attempt to grow too many varieties in one house. That depends, of course on local demand and shipping facilities. I believe co-operation would be mutually advantageous if some arrangement could be made between florists living in the state by which they could fill orders for each other when received too late for trains, or where shipping connections are not good, causing vexations, if not destructive delays on station platforms. This I believe would be good work for the state society—its members could assist each other when cases of this kind occur. I believe it would be for the upbuilding of the craft if its membership would get into close touch with each other throughout the state.

The florist should be a leader in civic improvement and home gardening projects. The more interest that can be aroused in such organizations the greater will be the demand for florist's stock. I need not speak of the æsthetic influence of floriculture on the community. Who can compute the value in dollars and cents of the fragrance of flowers on the human soul? Or estimate in cold cash the value of a bird's song? Truly the effects of an apple orchard in bloom, or a garden of flowers, is not without value in character building. To live in squalor and dirt, in dilapidated buildings surrounded by tin cans and ashheaps, will make men vicious. We cannot afford to neglect anything that would tend to make men criminals. Then let us make our homes as beautiful as we can, live in the open sunshine where we can breathe the fresh air, hear the birds sing and smell the fragrance of the flowers. Then will we realize what a beautiful world it is in which we live and what an exhaustless source of enjoyment there are in life with such environments.

Denver, Colo.

There has been very little improvement in business. The weather conditions have improved somewhat this week but there is evidence of another snowstorm. We have always boasted of our good Italian climate but this year we must acknowledge that we have had a bad winter, the worst for fifty years. The rainfall has been above the average and will mean millions of dollars in crops in the agricultural districts. This will mean a prosperous year for Colorado and the florist business will come in for its share. Easter stock is in fine shape. Hydrangeas especially are in excellent condition both in shape and color. There will be some good ramblers, mostly Dorothy Perkins, White Dorothy Perkins and Lady Gay. Tausendschon was a little early and most of these have been sold already. Spiræas are the best we have ever had here. Lilies are a little short but the flowers are of good quality. In cut flowers there will be plenty excepting American Beauties, which will be a little short. Carnations we have, and some to spare, and some to dump. More should be dumped and prices kept more steady. If the growers could see things in this light they could make more money and the retailers too. Control the output of anything and there will be more money made. Violets are very plentiful with very little demand. Sweet peas are of good quality and sell fairly well. E. P. N.

The Forest Ranger.

His way is through primeval woods,
 He knows the ancient tongue
 In which the crystal cataraets
 For ages long have sung.
 The messages that nature writes
 On leaf and bark and seed,
 And fallen leaf and broken twig
 He never fails to read.

When sunlight gilds the lichened rocks,
 Or snows are cold and pale,
 Along the dusky forest aisles
 He tramps the lonely trail;
 And fir and spruce and tasseled pine,
 And oak with hoary knees,
 Salute him as he passes by,
 The captain of the trees.

There isn't all the time to spare
That makes a standard year,
So gentle spring should have a care
Or fall may beat it here.

The lily is a fragile flower and easily bruised. No matter how mild the weather the blooms should be well wrapped in soft paper to ensure safe delivery.

SEND us report on your Easter trade, stating how prices and business compare with those of last year, what stock was most in demand, what stock in short supply and what in over supply.

This is the time to make notes of the Easter stock to which to refer in 1913. Easter comes two weeks earlier next year, and it will not do to depend upon guess work to have everything in the best condition by March 23, which is the date for Easter in 1913.

Personal.

Treasurer Kasting has returned to Buffalo much improved by his sojourn at the springs.

It may be a coincidence that B. W. Balaam sells horses and mules in Iowa, but how do you account for the fact that Carl Sprinkle of Lincoln, Ill., gave up his position in Gullett's greenhouse?—Chicago Tribune.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Hundreds of men, women and children are planting California golden poppy seed on the slopes of Telegraph hill to beautify the now flowerless hills on the north shore of the channel before the opening of the world's fair in 1915.

THE foliage of spiraea (Astilbe Japonica) is one of the best greens for bouquets or other florists' work. Any plants from which the flowers are cut or which are not full of bloom, the foliage should be saved for flower work.

WE are in receipt of the preliminary premium list of the fall flower show of the Minnesota State Florists' Association, to be held at the Auditorium, St. Paul, about November 8-12. The premiums are quite liberal and copies of the list may be had on application to Secretary S. D. Dysinger, 20 West Fifth street, St. Paul, Minn.

The Date of Easter.

There has been and is considerable discussion among growers regarding the earliness of Easter date, 1912; we give below the Easter dates for the past five years, together with the dates for 1912 and 1913.

Society of American Florists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that Alex. Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland, address Robt. Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., agents, offer for registration the following rose. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

RAISER'S DESCRIPTION.

Killarney Brilliant—A double sport from Killarney, originating in England. It is more double than Double Pink Killarney and the color is more brilliant than the original Pink Killarney. Habit, growth and form like original Killarney.

FINE OUTLOOK FOR EASTER.

Business conditions here were never better and the outlook is for an exceptionally good Easter. Stock at present is in fine shape with the exception of American Beauties, which are scarce; other varieties of roses are fine and a pleasure to handle. Richmond, Killarney and Brides are coming in the best shape and with their splendid color and long stems are hard to beat. Carnations are all that could be desired. They are fine and have been plentiful enough to sell at bargain prices for the past two weeks. Violets which have been very plentiful are about over and the cut at Easter will not be large. Bulbous stock has been more than plentiful, with the better varieties of daffodils as low as $8.00 per 1,000 and tulips at $10.00. It looks as if the bulb growers have been trying to outdo each other, greatly to some one's loss. Easter prices which are now at hand quote roses such as Richmond, Killarney, Bridesmaid, Brides, etc., at from 5 cents for the poorest to 15 cents for the best; Carnations $2.00 to $6.00 per 100; lily of the valley, $3.00 and $4.00; tulips, $2.00 and $3.00; daffodils, $2.00 and $2.50; lilies, $8.00, $10.00 and $12.00; Cattleya Schroderae, 20 to 35 cents each. There are also a fine lot of flowering plants but the heavy run on these is, mostly azaleas, rhododendrons, lilacs and ramblers roses, the prices of which are favorable with other seasons.

NOTES.

This is the season when the prospective buyers are scouring the houses looking up Easter stock. Brampton was the scene of a recent visitation and was as usual well along with the Easter crop. The Dale Estate had a house of Cattleya Schroderae which was a sight to behold. The plants are in the best of shape and well covered with bloom. In the lily of the valley houses 100,000 pips are being brought along; they promise from eight to 14 bells to each stem and are a fine looking lot. The lilies were also in good shape. Carnations show every indication of a good crop, while roses will be a little on the off side. At R. Jennings the place was found as usual, never with an exceedingly large crop but always with a good average and some fine blooms.

J. H. Dunlop has a nice assortment of Easter plants besides his usual roses and carnations. His lilies are in grand shape and have sold out quickly. He has his former foreman, A. H. Houle, back again and will try to produce even better stock.

Joseph Boston is bringing in sweet peas and stocks, both of which are welcome. The past winter has been a severe test to him and he will change his heating plant. Spaulding boilers are now commanding his attention and are likely to be tried.

Bedford Park Floral Co. is cutting some of their three and four-foot Richmonds for which they are famous. This firm is busy on their new addition and when completed American Beauties will be given a thorough test.

The Steele-Briggs Seed Co. has a nice lot of Liliun Longiflorum which will be just right, and a batch of their own strain of Primula obconica are moving out quickly.

Grobba & Wandrey are busy night and day. They are handling the decorations of the department stores and it keeps them on the jump.

Frank Duffort believes in doing a few things well. This year it is lilacs, ramblers and hydrangeas. They look fine and will sell out easily.

Everything, weather included, looks rosy for Easter. H. G. D.

A LARGE QUANTITY OF STOCK.

The one great feature of the Easter of 1912 is the large amount of stock which all the growers and dealers have to offer, and it really seems at the middle of the week that no matter what the demand may be there is plenty of good stock to fill all the orders that will be received. There is a bountiful supply of roses and the stock is of excellent quality. The only possible scarcity that appears before the heavy shipments are made is in long-stemmed American Beauties. Killarney and White Killarney are in great supply and of splendid quality. My Maryland is also of good quality. Richmond is superb, some elegant long stemmed stock with fine long buds being seen. There is also a fair supply of the novelties of the best quality and they find a ready sale at good prices. Carnations have not been received in such large quantities during the week, some of the growers saying that the cut is not large, but the prevailing opinion seems to be that a look around the greenhouses would find large quantities held back for the last of the week. Time only will prove whether this is so, but it was unnecessary and stock kept too long at this time of the year is sure to meet with much loss. Lilies and callas are in bountiful supply, large quantities of both are to be found with all the dealers. There is a good supply of lily of the valley and orchids are adequate for all the demands. Sweet peas are abundant, the stock is of the finest quality, and there is a great variety of colors offered. Bulbous stock is plentiful, tulips, hyacinths and daffodils being received in large quantities. Violets are beginning to shorten up and there will be no surplus for Easter in these flowers if the demand is anywhere near what it ought to be. The home grown blooms are of very good quality and are having a good sale and the stock shipped in is also selling well. There is splendid mammoth mignonette and beautiful snapdragon offered and some of the finest stocks were to be had on the market this week. The trade in greens is large but the supply is good and there does not appear to be any shortage of any of the seasonable stock. The plantsmen have had a busy week and quantities of pot lilies have been sold and delivered but there will probably be enough to supply all the demands. Beautiful azaleas, roses and other blooming stock have been carried to the stores all the week, and thousands of bulbs of all kinds have been bloomed for the Easter trade. With pleasant weather the large stock of both plants and flowers should find a good sale and if the market cleans up well the Easter of 1912 is sure to be a prosperous one.

A LETTER OF THANKS.

Mrs. Weber, widow of the late Fred Weber, and family, send the following: "We would like to thank the members of the trade through your paper for their heartfelt sympathy and their many beautiful floral offerings bestowed upon us in our hour of sadness, when we parted with our beloved father and husband."

NOTES.

Pochlmann Bros. Co. is prepared for a big Easter trade and it looks as if it will be a big one, for Otto W. Frese has been pretty busy at his desk receiving orders the past week. He says that the demand for pot lilies has been the best ever and it looks as if John Pochlmann and his force of hustling assistants will have some work to attend to before Easter. An error appeared in this firm's advertisement in this paper last week and smilax should have read $2.50 and $3.00 per dozen instead of the price quoted.

Peter Reinberg is right in crop with Killarney and White Killarney and large quantities of these and other choice roses are arriving at the store this week. This firm's pretty rose Sunrise is also in full crop and we notice that it is being featured in the downtown window displays.

Bassett & Washburn have a fine lot of stock for Easter and are particularly well fixed on all kinds of flowers, especially roses and carnations. Mr. Washburn says that his firm has received a large number of orders for Easter and that the demand for first class shipping stock is very good.

Wendland & Keimel's new range is all ready for planting and the proprietors are now awaiting the arrival of the rose plants from A. N. Pierson of Cromwell, Conn. Fred Meyer, a well known rose grower, is now in the employ of this progressive concern.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is moving a lot of stock this week and is pretty well fixed on roses, carnations and lilies. President Kidwell says that the Wellworth Farms alone will have 6,000 Easter lilies for this house yet this week.

Hoerber Bros. are supplying their customers with a fine grade of stock, particularly choice Killarney and White Killarney roses.

Weiland & Risch's fancy stocks are the talk of the market and the grower is to be congratulated for his success in producing such fine flowers.

E. C. Amling has been elected president of the new state bank of Oak Park, a suburb of this city.

Otto Wittbold, superintendent of the Geo. Wittbold Co.'s greenhouses at Edgebrook, says that the demand for plants for this Easter has been the best ever and that the sales have already exceeded those of last Christmas. The demand for rooted cuttings and bedding plants is also very good, especially for pansies and the improved Shasta daisies of which the supply is large. This firm will probably again have the first gladiolus of the season and some will be in bloom most likely for Easter. Of course there are the small flowering varieties, mostly Peach Blossoms and Ackermanni.

Henry Wittbold arranged a window for a large furniture house that has blocked the sidewalk with interested spectators. The firm uses an advertising phrase "feathering your nest" and the window is a farm yard scene with nests of all the feathered tribes with the birds including a hen and brood of chickens. It was well arranged with the running brook and apple tree in bloom and entailed a large amount of work.

Chas. W. McKellar is using the store on the second floor of the building next to and east of Peter Reinberg's this week, in addition to his old quarters, during the Easter business. Mr. McKellar's business has been increasing so lately that he is seriously considering the idea of moving into the temporary quarters permanently.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a raft of stock of all kinds and particularly fine American Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Mrs. Jardine and Uncle John roses and a large supply of carnations can be seen at this firm's store this week. A large number of orders for Easter have been booked and N. J. Wietor is more than pleased with the amount of stock that has already been sold.

John Kruchten is filling a large number of orders for lilies, both cut blooms and plants, but still has a large quantity left to offer. The stock in general is arriving in large quantities at this house and Mr. Kruchten says that all that is needed now are the orders.

The opening business at Weiland's new store in East Washington street was very good and fully up to the proprietor's expectations. The handsome conservatory that is now being erected in the court east of the building will be used for display purposes.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are well pleased with the outlook for Easter and are well prepared for the rush with a fine line of all kinds of seasonable stock, especially lilies, roses and carnations.

The West Park commission have resolved to purchase property bounded by West Eighteenth, West Nineteenth,

U S Budlong's E Blue Ribbon Valley.

South Lincoln and South Wood streets for a small park.

George Reinberg is cutting a good supply of choice Richmond roses and Robert Northam, his storeman, says that they are of the usual Reinberg quality.

The Easter display at Lincoln Park which opened this week, included a large number of the different Rambler roses.

Kyle & Foerster's growers are in full crop with smilax and large quantities of this stock were sold the past week.

A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., expects to leave this week to visit his old home in Corsicana, Texas.

Zech & Mann filled some large orders for lilies this week and the blooms were exceptionally fine.

Fred Nelson of the George Wittbold Co. has been serving on a jury the past two weeks.

The Cook County Florists' Association was organized on March 28 at the Union restaurant and the following officers were elected: A. C. Kohlbrand, president; George Weinhoeber, vice-president; A. T. Pyfer, secretary; John Zech, treasurer; Michael Fink, sergeant-at-arms, and Walter Scott, A. Henderson, N. P. Miller, A. T. Hey and W. J. Keimel, directors.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is busy disposing of a couple of carloads of choice plants, principally spireas, lilies, rambler roses, hydrangeas and azaleas. Mr. Winterson says that he has plenty of plants to go around and that he is prepared to fill all late orders. Edgar Winterson is busy with the builders' tools lately and his friends cannot help but admit that he is some carpenter.

James Psenicka, of the Northwestern Floral Co., says that everything is running smoothly at their greenhouses at Gross Point and that his firm will be in fine crop with carnations for Easter. The firm's entire output of choice stock is handled by Kyle & Foerster, where it always meets with ready sale.

H. Van Gelder, of Percy Jones, is offering his customers a fine line of seasonable stock and the fancy long stemmed sweet peas are still very noticeable. W. E. Trimble, who has space on the same floor as Mr. Van Gelder, is offering some very choice Killarney and White Killarney roses.

Peter Reinberg and W. F. Schofield made a brave fight for aldermanic honors this week, but the conditions were not right in their districts. The death of Mr. Schofield's father from heart failure, April 2, is attributed to the excitement of election day.

Anton Then who recently returned from Magnolia Springs, Ala., will leave again for that resort in May to receive further treatment and attend to some business affairs. Mr. Then has had a very successful Easter plant trade and is already sold out of lilies.

Stollery Bros. have a fine assortment of potted plants to offer their customers at their Wilson avenue store for Easter. This stock is all grown by Fred Stollery at the firm's greenhouses on Southport avenue.

The trade was greatly pleased to receive a visit from Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Labo of Joliet on March 30. No doubt the genial couple's visits here will be more frequent now that they have a new auto.

Arthur Pasternick is again attending to his duties at the Bassett & Washburn store, having fully recovered from the injuries he sustained from falling off a sidewalk about a month ago.

Frank Johnson, the efficient sales manager of the A. L. Randall Co., says that the demand for supplies for Easter has been very good and trade in general satisfactory.

Frank Ayres, Chas. W. McKellar's store man, is still receiving the congratulations of his many friends for his sudden dip in the sea of wedded bliss.

Peter Olsem, superintendent of the Chicago Carnation Co.'s greenhouses at Joliet, will bowl in the state tournament now being held at Bensingers' Alleys, West Randolph street.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is receiving a large supply of all kinds of seasonable flowers, particularly fine home-grown violets and fancy sweet peas.

Sol. Garland says that the Des Plaines river is again on the rampage and that the beautiful little city has more water than it really cares for.

J. A. Budlong is still offering a fine grade of Blue Ribbon lily of the valley, as well as a large supply of carnations and other seasonable stock.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union restaurant, 70 West Randolph street, (tonight), Thursday, April 4, at 8 p. m.

Geo. A. Kuhl, of Pekin, who is still at the Presbyterian hospital, reports that he is progressing as well as can be expected.

E. E. Pieser, the Peony King, has been somewhat under the weather the past week but is on the job as usual looking after the Easter business.

Jack Byers, the Chicago Carnation Co.'s baby doll, is now wearing a moustache.

Miss Edith Walker of Louisville, Ky., was a most welcome visitor here this week.

Geo. Mohn, of Vaughan's Seed Store, says it is a girl this time.

FINE LILIES FOR EASTER.

Plans that have been and that are being laid for a busy Easter week, show signs of consummation. Everyone is looking forward to a busy week and we hope that all their hopes will be reasonably filled. There is talk of a scarcity of carnations. They are not so plentiful as they were a few weeks ago, but the last of the week will tell whether or not the cellars and stock-holes have not hidden some long enough for them to grow whiskers. Easter lilies as a rule are in splendid shape, well grown with large flowers and we have heard very little of disease this year. Roses are in good condition and the market has been somewhat slow but there is always a bad week before any floral holiday. Spring hats and clothes have so filled the feminine mind just now for Easter that flowers have been somewhat neglected. The grower of course expects to have his share and hopes to grind a few extra shekels from the increased sales and the hoped for increased prices to offset this annual spring show, and help pay for the extra coal burned this winter. Coal is one of the costliest items that confronts the grower. If growers would combine on coal orders cheaper coal could be obtained, for the company would certainly get extra tonnage. This question is a matter of serious consideration to us all, for on a business basis the larger the order the greater the discount and the more the order is split into units, the more it costs the grower. We were fortunate this year to obtain coal in carload lots at times when the local dealers' bins were almost empty.

NOTES.

STOCK OF ALL KINDS PLENTIFUL.

The cut-flower market has been quiet the past week, there being no extra demand at any time, although Saturday's trade showed a little improvement. Everything is plentiful and accumulations were the rule. Quite a little business was done by the street men on Saturday, who, considering the low prices, should have cleaned up quite a tidy sum. The shipping trade is a great boon to the wholesale men who often find quite a demand out of the city when the trade in town is very quiet. Carnations have been held a trifle higher and but few found their way to the market on Monday morning, April 1. Various reasons were given, all but the real one, of holding for higher figures later in the week. Orchids are plentiful as are gardenias, the latter being very fine and low in price. Violets look as if they will be in fine condition for the Easter parade, being of good color and substance. Bulbous stock is plentiful and is now in competition with the southern outside daffodils, although the first shipments have not been very large. The Easter business looks as if it will average about up to that of other seasons. The department stores are all holding large sales and advertising lilies in pots at 12 to 15 cents per flower. Some of the flower stores are also marking their lilies at 15c per flower, which goes to show that there must be a surplus somewhere. The asking price of those growers with the best stock is 10 to 12 cents per flower and bud with a lower mark for the "shortys," and there are a great many of these undersized plants about. As a rule, however, the plants are well budded, many of them carrying six flowers and over. Cut lilies are quoted at from eight to fifteen cents, the latter for extra long stemmed selected blooms.

CLUB MEETING.

Owing to a violent thunder and wind storm which passed over the city on Tuesday evening, April 2, the attendance at the Florists' Club meeting was rather slim. The feature was the interesting and scientific paper on "Sods" which was very well received. In the discussion that followed several growers stated that roses grown for five years in the house in the same soil gave the best crop the last year, showing that the strength of the soil appeared to increase instead of diminish. How to help Miss Jarvis with her work in spreading the gospel of "Mothers' day" was discussed and it was thought that the trade should get together and assist Miss Jarvis in her work financially and so help her by contributing money to pay for stationery, stenographic and other clerical work that has become a burden. Each year the correspondence is greater and as there is no revenue or money returns of any kind it has become quite a task and expense to continue the work. Let the trade tap their bank accounts a trifle and help the good cause along.

The Sign of the Rose lost their plate glass window when the scaffolding of the new Ritz Carlton hotel was blown down by the cyclone last Tuesday night. It is a serious loss coming at this busy time. Richard Heron at 18 Chestnut also lost a large show case which was carried half a block down the street and smashed to pieces. K.

NOTES.

The many friends and customers of John S. Hay, who represents Henry A. Dreer, Inc., will be glad to know that he is making satisfactory progress towards recovery. The nature of his operation was such as requires considerable time for complete recovery, but he is looking forward with pleasure to the time when he will again be making his regular calls upon the many customers of the firm he represents.

John A. Ruppert, one of the H. A. Dreer salesmen, who is well known to the retail trade of the Eastern states, has just finished his twenty-sixth year with the firm. Mr. Ruppert is well liked by his customers and is always sure of a welcome at all times. He says that they are doing a record-breaking business at the nurseries.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. report business as excellent and they expect to top last year's volume for the holiday and set a new mark for next season. Orchids, lily of the valley, violets and gardenias are a feature here.

One of the scarce things of the past week was sphagnum moss, the market for several days being entirely bare. Shipments are very light as yet, the swamps being too full of water to make profitable gathering.

M. J. Callahan of Fortieth and Market streets, has just added a Ford car to his delivery service, which will be of great service for his Easter business.

At the Leo Niessen Co. market they expect a great rush; they will be particularly strong on American Beauties, Easter lilies and carnations.

The Robert Craig Co. say they have had a great sale for their rose baskets; they certainly are a striking novelty. K.

AN IMMENSE STOCK.

March goes out like a lamb and indications point to continuation of fine weather, but, April's reputation for fickleness has passed into a proverb. If this week's weather, particularly the latter part of it, remains as fair as at present, a record-breaking business seems certain. Though we have at times indulged in criticism, it is a fact that in the aggregate there is a great stock and a great variety in sight ready for customers. There was a time a few weeks ago when it was feared that much stock would not be in flower in time for Easter, but these fears are now dispelled. There will be an immense stock and the hope is that it will be cleaned up. Rambler roses, hydrangeas, azaleas, lilies, hyacinths in pans, pots of daisies and various other stock are appearing in the retail stores and by the middle of the week all available space will be occupied. In addition to the stores the Centre Market dealers, several of whom are also large growers, have made extensive preparations to supply the Easter trade and will doubtless do a rushing business. This is one of the greatest markets in the whole country insofar as supplying the necessities of the table is concerned, and everybody patronizes it. Thus, it will be seen that while the people are there buying food it is very convenient to order a few plants or a bunch of flowers, the dealers having equal facilities for delivery with the stores.

NOTES.

Geo. H. Cooke has received a large stock of fine plants from the W. K. Harris range, Philadelphia. Mr. Cooke, having the desire to remind the customers of the needs of plants, has had printed several thousand cards and will attach one to every plant he sells. On the card is a picture of a pot of forget-me-nots with the sentence "Please give me a drink" in large type.

J. H. Small & Sons advises us that their stock of lilies is very fine and that they were never better prepared for Easter. A feature of their stores at present is fine specimens of Tausendschon roses.

Sunday, March 31, being an ideal spring day, many people visited the various greenhouses to see the stocks. The Gude Brothers Co. range at Anacostia was the mecca for many visitors.

Lewis Rankin, formerly with S. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I., is now foreman of the J. R. Freeman range at Brightwood.

Mrs. Z. D. Blackstone has been quite ill with an attack of lagrippe, but we are pleased to learn that she is now improving.

A feature of nearly all the retail stores is the large pots of marguerites grown by E. W. Jenkins of Anacostia. They are full of flowers and are very attractive.

F. H. Kramer already has his conservatory filled up with lilies and will be on deck with a good variety of other stocks.

The Southern jonquils are now in, but for that matter they are blooming outdoors right here in Washington.

A. B. Garden says he never before had such a good stock of tulips for Easter. He also has many plants.

SUFFICIENT SUPPLY.

As Easter approaches business has been growing better. A large call for green goods is preceding the demand for flowers and orders on file for the end of the week for these are most gratifying. Early reports show the wholesalers will have a supply sufficient for all requests. Carnations alone may run short because there are a very large amount of advance orders for this flower in particular. Lilies, including Giganteums, Harrissii and Formosum, as well as callas are abundant, the offerings too are mostly of a very high quality. Long American Beauties are now to be had in larger numbers and are very much better in quality than they have been for a time. Offering of other roses are good. The supply of sweet peas, lily of the valley and violets will be adequate. In smaller bulb stock the quality of the blooms as a whole, is excellent. Tulips and Dutch hyacinths, particularly the latter, deserve special mention.

NOTES.

The regular meetings of the Florists' Club will be held at the rooms in the Flower Market, April 8. The executive committee of the flower show will make their final report and ask to be discharged. At their final meeting at E. G. Gilletts' last Friday, Wm. Murphy was voted $50 for his services as superintendent of the show.

C. E. Critchell was fortunate to get a good supply of wild smilax in storage before the warm weather set in. He is now in a position where he can easily and quickly fill all orders for this commodity.

The J. M. McCullough Son's cut flower department have made preparations for a large supply for Easter. The early part of the week they had a nice lot of spiraea.

T. Ben George is cutting some very fine Dutch hyacinths.

LILIES PLENTIFUL.

The continued dark weather has caused many to think that stock would be very scarce for Easter, but the warm, sun of the past few days should change this and bring in lots of stock. Lilies will be more plentiful than was anticipated.

NOTES.

The McCallum Co. announce they are moving into larger quarters at 139 and 141 Seventh street, where they will occupy the entire building. They have been rather crowded for room at their old location and the new place will give them the facilities they desire. The removal will take place right after Easter. John Scissely of this firm has the sympathy of his friends in the loss of his father March 28.

The show at Schenley park (this year is probably the best ever seen there. It will consist principally of lilies, rambler roses and cinerarias. It should be seen to be appreciated, both as to quantity and quality.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has been making some remarkable basket window displays.

Florists' day held at the Massachusetts Agricultural College March 14 in connection with Farmers' Week was very successful. Not as many commercial men attended the exercises as it was hoped and expected, but the fact that Easter was so near and that the florists are exceedingly busy was responsible in a large measure for the small attendance.

The address by H. D. Haskins of the Massachusetts Experiment Station on fertilizers for glass house agriculture was very interesting and instructive. Mr. Haskins considered the relation of the fertilizer question for glass house crops as compared with outdoor crops and showed conclusively that in many cases the florists are overloading their soils with fertilizing elements so that the soil becomes charged with substances which the plant cannot assimilate. He spoke of the best fertilizers to use for securing sufficient nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid in soils for carnations, roses, sweet peas, cucumbers and lettuce. Dr. H. H. Whetzel of Ithaca, N. Y., was obliged to cancel his engagement and Dr. J. K. Shaw of the Massachusetts Experiment Station spoke on the principles of plant breeding. In the evening Dr. H. T. Fernald gave a fine address on some recent investigations in fumigation methods. He spoke principally of the use of potassium cyanide and sodium cyanide in greenhouse fumigation.

The flower exhibit in French Hall was the finest ever held at the college and the institution is deeply indebted to the practical men for contributing the newer varieties of flowers so generously to this exhibition. Following is a list of the contributors and the varieties shown: S. J. E. A. WHITE.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The county building at Hartford presented an animated scene March 23, which was "Rose Night" with the Connecticut Horticultural Society. The center tables bore a brilliant display of potted plants and cut blooms, recognized by the judges, H. A. Pinney, George B. Baker and W. W. Hunt, in the following awards: Diploma to Alfred Cebelius, Hartford, for collection of rose blooms; certificates of merit to A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, for blooms of Killarney Queen and Double White Killarney roses; M. L. Lawson, Bristol, for vase of Mrs. Taft roses; diploma to Warren S. Mason, Farmington, for collection of rose blooms and rare plants, the latter including Tabernaemontana, Passiflora princeps, Allamanda Hendersonii and Lady Banksia rose; diploma to J. A. Weber, Hartford, for four dainty blooming plants of schizanthus.

The society has for many years given a dahlia exhibition in early September, and a chrysanthemum show in early November, being encouraged in this work by a state appropriation of about $200, to reimburse it for premiums awarded. Under a new law the state fund is cut in two; and hence it was voted, at this meeting, to forego the chrysanthemum show this fall and to give the usual dahlia exhibition at Hartford September 19-20, two weeks later than usual. All seasonable flowers, as well as vegetables and fruits, will be represented, and the preliminary premium list, now being arranged, will represent a larger outlay for premiums than the society has hitherto appropriated from its own funds. Joseph Breck & Sons, of Boston, have offered a prize of $10 for exhibits of asters. The idea of holding either fall show at New Britain has been abandoned.

Charles Roemer, an amateur gardener of Hartford, who has been twice in Alaska, gave an address on the flora and the fauna of that silent country. He described the plant life on the glaciers and in the valleys and along the coast. Brilliant colors are often seen, but fragrance almost never exists. July is the month for flowers. The Viburnum opulus, or high-bush cranberry, is common there. A grass similar to our red top is abundant in midsummer. Mr. Roemer received a hearty vote of thanks for his lecture, which embraced also the animal and fish life of that country.

U S Budlong's E Blue Ribbon Valley.

The society is the fortunate owner of two shares of stock in the Aetna Life Insurance Company; and voted to avail itself of the allotment to subscribe for two additional shares of the increased capital stock.

April 12 will be "Amaryllis Night" and an address by George H. Hollister, of Hartford, the foreman of Keney Park, on the "Chestnut Bark Disease" is expected.

GEORGE W. SMITH, Sec'y.

St. Paul, Minn.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the St. Paul florists was held at the store of O. R. Eckhardt & Co., 87 E. Fifth street, on Wednesday evening, March 27, President May in the chair. The executive committee reported a full list of committees for the flower show to be held at the Auditorium in November next; finance committee of seven members, O. R. Eckhardt, chairman; publicity committee of twelve members, with O. J. Olson chairman; show committee of thirteen members, Max Kaiser, chairman; decorative committee of eleven members, E. W. Reed, chairman.

The secretary reported the preliminary premium list in the hands of the printer, and that it would probably be mailed during the week. Several additions to the guarantee fund were reported, bringing the total up to nearly $3,500. Fifty per cent of this guarantee fund is to be paid into the treasury by September 1, and all exhibitors are assured of being paid the full amount of premiums awarded to them.

It is the intention of the show committee to hold the show over Sunday, and have it in connection with the popular concert of the Symphony Orchestra. It is also the intention to enlist the support of the society leaders, and in this way make the show a grand success, both socially and financially. Louis Hill, president of the G. N. Railway Co., has signified his intention of growing a number of varieties for competition in the private gardeners' class.

As the St. Paul florists are now thoroughly organized the show will be pushed in a systematic manner, and we look for a very great success. Mr. Cassidy, representing the Foley Mfg. Co. was a visitor at the meeting and assured the society of the co-operation and assistance of his firm. Money for premiums, cups and other trophies have been donated by members of the trade in different parts of the country.

FLOWERS OF GOOD QUALITY.

The Florists' Exchange, wholesale flower market, predicts a good Easter if the weather continues cool and bright as we are having it now, with no soft weather. Flowers are coming in in good shape. Lilies and lily of the valley are fine, as are roses and carnations also. Azaleas and spiræas are plentiful, violets are still holding their own, though a trifle smaller.

NOTES.

Jesse King gave the florists a very interesting talk on his recent trip through New England to see the new roses, Killarney Queen, Double White Killarney, Sunburst and Lady Hillingdon. It took six hours to look through A. N. Pierson's range of houses at Cromwell, Conn., and they were all in fine condition. He found White Killarney grown to perfection at J. A. Budlong & Sons Co.'s at Auburn, R. I., and considered it the prettiest rose seen during the trip. He also visited the Waban Conservatories at Natick, Mass., the home of Lady Hillingdon, and thought it a very promising yellow rose. Mr. King was surprised to find the principal portion of the help in the north to be Italians. The florists treated him with great cordiality and took much pleasure in showing him through their establishments.

This city boasts of its Lexington Market—and it was beautiful last week with flowers as well as vegetables. Some of the florists have stalls in the market where they dispose of potted plants and cut flowers and do a good business.

The men selling on the curb today had very good roses, violets and carnations and nearly all those returning from market had a bunch of flowers or a potted plant. We noticed very fine hyacinths and geraniums on some of the stands.

The retail stores have had quite a lot of funeral work this week and quite a demand for roses. B.

GOOD SUPPLY FOR EASTER.

The local market offers a splendid assortment of excellent quality stock for Easter week, of which the following are some of the leaders: In roses, American Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Bride and Bridesmaid; in carnations, White, Enchantress, Rose Pink, Red and a few fancy novelties; in violets, good single and doubles; fine long-stemmed pansies; sweet peas in pink, white and lavender, long and medium stems; Easter lilies in pots and cut flowers; large and medium callas; daffodils, both single and double; tulips of all colors, both single and double; lily of the valley, special stock and medium; in novelties, mignonette, lupines, daisies, calendula, snapdragon, etc.; greens of all kinds are plentiful, consisting of adiantum, Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, smilax, Southern wild smilax, box-wood, fancy and dagger ferns of good quality. Orchids of good quality are to be had at moderate prices. The outlook for stock is good and with fine weather, this year promises to be a record-breaker. The weather here the latter part of the week was ideal and local wholesale houses are pretty well cleaned up of all salable stock. White roses and red carnations were in good demand, not near enough to fill orders were obtainable.

NOTES.

Frank Baur has opened a retail store on Twenty-fifth street near Broadview in connection with his greenhouses. As this is the only retail store south of the bridge it cannot help being a good business proposition.

Hammell Bros. have opened a retail store at 1730 East Fifty-fifth street near Payne avenue. This is an excellent location, and with their greenhouses behind them they are going to make a strong bid for east side business.

Brendell & Boyd is the name over the door of the new store on Lorain avenue of which Mr. Brendell has charge. The store is finished in white and mahogany.

Knoble Bros. report a large amount of funeral work the past week, two large blankets of violets, lily of the valley and adiantum being only a starter, considering the amount of other work during the same week.

The Wilson Florist Co., Woodruff road, arranged the greenhouses and entertained friends and patrons with a miniature flower show Sunday, March 31.

Geo. W. Mercer, 2991 West Twenty-fifth street, is beautifying the interior of his store. This is one of the prettiest and best arranged stores west of the river. C. F. B.

BETTER BUSINESS.

Conditions are much brighter and cheerful in the wholesale cut flower market than they were a week ago. The volume of business done has been much larger. American Beauties and the higher grades of other varieties of roses move slowly and it seems difficult to get the prices up to what they should be. Ulrich Brunner of very fine quality are now arriving in quantity and this tends to keep the prices on American Beauty and Richmond down. Top grades of Radiance, Lady Hillingdon, Mme. Chatenay, Prince de Bulgarie are not so plentiful and naturally the prices on these are better, but supply of the best Killarneys Brides and Bridesmaids far exceeds the demand. The No. 1 and No. 2 grades of these varieties clear out nicely. The prices on carnations are somewhat better, that is for the best quality, but there are still large shipments of inferior blooms in the market that have to be disposed of at very low figures. The condition in the orchid market remains unchanged. Prices on all varieties having a downward tendency. Violets for a change are doing much better caused by the great supply falling off considerably. Bulbous stock of all kinds is a glut, and in many cases have been disposed of by the box just as received. Gardenias are again in over supply and even the best of these are moved with difficulty. Lilies moving slowly and the same is the case with callas. No change either in the supply or call for adiantum, smilax or asparagus. Sweet peas are as a general rule of poor quality. The shipments of lilac, mignonette, wall flowers and daisies are much lighter than they have been. The outlook at present is that there will be an over supply of cut lilies and violets for Easter. The weather at present is ideal and if it continues so during the week, the volume of business done will be tremendous. The plant growers all seem satisfied with sales made and the dealers in cut flowers look for a very large business, and from present appearances there will be no shortage in any particular line.

NOTES.

Jonathan Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, while driving into Central park at West Seventy-second street, accompanied by his wife, was run into by an automobile and both thrown out on the parkway on the afternoon of March 17, Mrs. Nash sustaining a bad fracture of the nose and was otherwise severely bruised. Mrs. Nash was taken into a residence and cared for and later removed to her home. The horse ran away but was caught after a run of three blocks uninjured. The driver of the automobile kindly offered any assistance to Mr. Nash and carried him in his auto to where his horse had been taken when captured. Mr. Nash only suffered a severe shaking up.

Robert M. Schultz made his first visit to the wholesale market on Thursday. The doctor has ordered Mr. Schultz to abandon work in the greenhouses on account of the dampness, and consequently he will have to lease or otherwise dispose of his greenhouse plant. Mr. Schultz appreciated very much the kindness shown him by his fellow members in the New York Florists' Club. John Donaldson, John Meisam and E. Dorval spent one day with him during the week.

There have been a great many visitors at Louis Dupuy's greenhouses, Whitestone, L. I., to see his novelties in Easter plants. Just at present his new hydrangeas are the centre of attraction. Among the many visitors to this place on Saturday were William P. S. Randolph and Samuel McClements of Pittsburg, were recent visitors to the large plant growers' establishments and seemed surprised that nearly all the growers had orders for most of their best stock which means that the prospects for a large Easter trade are very bright, at least where lilies and flowering plants are concerned.

The Beachwood Heights Nurseries are receiving large consignments of the very best gardenias and orchids from their greenhouses in Bound Brook, N. J. It is reported that there will be a very large addition made to their greenhouse plant the coming summer.

There is no question but what the presence of the ladies has much to do with the success of the banquets of the Florists' Club. At one banquet devoted to men only the number attending fell as low as fifty, now the attendance is over two hundred. "More power to the Ladies!"

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be on April 8, but as it will be the day after Easter Sunday, it is doubtful if there will be a very large exhibit of spring plants, but there should be a very creditable display of novelties in cut flowers.

V. Zuber & Sons are sending to Henshaw & Fenrich heavy shipments of Ulrich Brunner roses which are of the very best quality, but owing to the great number of American Beauty in market the prices are not as high as in former seasons.

John A. Payne, of the Foley Mfg. Co., reports orders received from W. H. Tracey, Waverly, N. Y., one house 42x70; four houses 34x125 for Ander Wifner, Middletown, N. Y.; one house 22x100 for John DeBuck, Homestead, N. J.

The stock of the new carnation Salmon Beauty, which is attracting so much attention at Traendly & Schenck's will be disseminated by that firm—it is being grown by F. Abrams, Blue Point, Long Island.

Theo. Lang has taken the large store at 1211 Broadway for an Easter branch where he is carrying a full line of Easter stock of the very best quality.

Wertheimer Bros. state that the demand was so large for many items before Easter that they were completely sold out, but stocks have been rapidly replenished.

John J. Foley, the wholesale florist of 53 West Twenty-eighth street, has made his reappearance in the market after being confined to his home several weeks suffering with gastritis.

E. V. Cole now conducts the flower store in the Pennsylvania Terminal which was formerly in the name of Fleischman.

E. W. Fengar of Newark, N. J., is sending a fine line of iris, the first of the season, to Henshaw & Fenrich.

A young florist arrived at the home of Charles Scherck, April 3. Mother and boy are doing finely.

Visitors: J. Otto Thilow; W. P. Craig, John W. McIntyre, Philadelphia, Pa.; Peter Crowe, Utica; John N. Champion, New Haven, Conn. Y.

New York Florists' Club.

At the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club, which will be held Monday night, April 8, 1912, there will be an opportunity to exhibit sweet peas and spring-flowering bulbs. It is hoped that all that can make an exhibit will do so. Anyone not in a position to accompany the exhibit may send same to the exhibition committee, care of Traendly & Schenck, 131 West Twenty-eighth street, New York City, to arrive there before 5 o'clock p. m. Monday, when the exhibition committee will see that it is properly staged.

This Budding Knife Free

The Unrivalled Henkel Knife Shown Above Ivory Handle and Fine English Steel Blade will be mailed absolutely free to anyone sending in Two New Subscriptions to The American Florist, the new subscribers being persons in the trade or trade employes. This knife cannot be bought anywhere for less than $1.25 and most dealers will probably ask more for it, as the price of ivory has been advanced recently.

Send Post Office Money Order or Express Money Order for $2.00 with the names and addresses of two New Subscribers (persons in the trade, as Florists, Seedsmen or Nurserymen, or their Employes) and we will send them the paper for one year after receipt of subscriptions.

With Canadian orders it will be necessary to send $4.00 with two new subscriptions and $5.00 with two new subscriptions from other foreign countries.

The request for the knife must be made when sending in the subscriptions, giving name and address of person to whom the knife is to be sent.

The knife will be mailed absolutely free if the sender of the New Subscriptions complies with the above instructions.

This offer is good now for present orders.

Fredericton, N. B.

The winter seems to be breaking up and rain and slush are the order of the day. It is now three weeks to Easter and the stock never looked better, especially carnations, which are the largest and finest ever produced in this section. Lilies we have been cutting since February and they have been fine for funeral work. We always consider March one of our busiest months for the local government is in session and will continue until Easter.

NOTES.

The examination for gardeners for the park which appeared in the AMERICAN FLORIST issue of March 9 is a pretty stiff and complicated proposition, even for old gardeners who have been at it all their lives and we find we have much to learn. Our experiences with employes is that there is more danger with the one who claims to know it all. The one who does not know is always asking for guidance, but the other is indignant if told when it is thought he is wrong.

St. Louis.

LARGE QUANTITIES OF STOCK.

Cloudy and rainy weather the past week has hurt transient trade, but it cleared up Saturday and Sunday. The stores are now all decked out in Easter attire of blooming plants. Stock continues to arrive in large quantities, but on Saturday everything cleaned up. Violets are getting smaller and sweet peas are favorites. It is to be hoped the growers will not hold stock back as the result has invariably been a loss to the grower. Southern jonquils are on the market and with warm weather there will be quite a quantity of this stock which affects the sale of the home product.

NOTES.

Wm. Smith of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has a new machine. Will is known as a fast flyer and St. Louis county growers will do well to keep their rigs out of his path. The grading and excavating for the new greenhouse at Shaw's Garden will start April 1. The main section will be 300 feet long, 20 feet wide and 60 feet high.

Vincent Gorly of the firm of Grimm & Gorly returned from Chicago and reported an abundance of Easter stock in endless varieties.

C. Young & Sons decorated the Boyds Gents' Furnishing Emporium opening last week. They have a large supply of lilies for Easter.

Joseph Scheidegger is bringing in a fine lot of long-stemmed sweet peas that find ready sale, having two houses devoted to them.

Dominic Bova is making a special display of metal and other artificial designs. He carries a large stock of cut flowers.

Andrew Meyer, Jr., now has the floral establishment formerly run by his father and is doing a nice business.

The Paris Floral Co. had a special sale of sweet peas Saturday of last week.

F. H. Weber is making a very fine display of Easter plants and novelties.

Wm. Schray has a fine display of Easter plants at the Union market.

Chas. Freshman is building up quite a trade at the Planters Hotel.

Arbor day will be celebrated by the public schools April 5.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—W. J. Palmer has entered mandamus proceedings against the State Department of Agriculture for $1,031.28, the value of 2,260 azaleas and rhododendrons which the department destroyed, the authorities claiming the plants were infested with gypsy moth.

MUSCATINE, IA.—Arthur Kleist, a well known island farmer, residing five miles below the city, suffered a fire loss that will probably amount to nearly $500 when his hot house, ice house, tool shed and several out buildings burned completely to the ground.

Boddingtons Quality Cannas.

Are true to name, have two to three good eyes, are well cured, sound and dormant, and give absolute satisfaction. Our sales last year were nearly 700,000, and not an overgrown kick. The Canna crop this year, however, is very short, and we advise placing orders early to secure stock. Delivery can be made at purchaser's option.

We are the largest handlers of Cannas in the world. Our prices upon Cannas will bear comparison with any house in the Canna business.

Our Cannas are true to name—two and three, sometimes four eyes—are sound, dormant, and are packed 250 in a box; two can be "cleated" together and shipped as one. One box of 250 sold at a thousand rate; it is cheaper for you to buy a box of 250 than 200 at 100 rate. Write for special prices for quantities.

If any Cannas are not found here, it may be understood that they are superseded by the ongoing. If selection is left to us, we will substitute or send only the best for all purposes.

Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, President; Marshall H. Duryea, New York, First Vice-President; Edgar Gregory, Marblehead, Mass., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary and Treasurer. Next annual convention at Chicago, June 25-27, 1912.

THERE is an advance of over 10 per cent on ocean freight rates on French bulbs.

LILY of the valley pips to the value of $173,240, were imported into the United States from Hamburg in 1911, against $95,959, in 1910 and $74,729, in 1909.

RICHMOND, VA.—T. W. Wood & Sons state that the business during January and February was behind last year but during March was very heavy and more than made up any deficiencies.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The business for 1912 compares favorably with that of 1911, states Northrup, King & Co. While some departments have fallen a little behind, attributed to the extreme cold weather of March, yet since the weather has moderated business has made a rapid gain.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Wood, Stubbs & Co. report that the weather has been extremely bad and no planting has been done. But the business shows an increase for every month this year. Wheat is badly injured, especially late sown wheat. The demand for all kinds of seed has been very heavy and the number of orders is 40 per cent above that of last year. Even with the high prices of seed the sales have increased in larger proportion.

LAWRENCE, KANS.—We have had the longest winter and the most snow ever experienced, writes the Barteldes Seed Co., and the trade has been backward but the mail orders have been ahead of last year all season. The trade on grass seeds, especially clover and timothy, has been backward, due, we think, partly to weather conditions and partly to the high prices. The trade on onion sets has been good and prices are advancing, which is quite the contrary of last season. Alfalfa seed has been moving well and high grades are about all gone. Cane and millet have been selling well and there has been a brisk demand for seed potatoes. The demand for seed corn has been unusual and much corn does not germinate. Farmers are looking for corn that has been tested.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, April 3, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $10 to $14.50 per 100 pounds.

SEED POTATOES made another sharp advance, Michigan and Wisconsin pits showing much decay, due to frost, on opening this week. Good stock is now quoted at $1.85.

OMAHA, NEB.—J. B. Stewart writes that the business of January and February compares favorably with last year, but March has fallen off 50 per cent owing to the weather conditions. The outlook however is good.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The Crosman Bros. Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $200,000 to deal in seeds, bulbs and garden requisites. The incorporators are C. W. Crosman, G. F. Crosman and D. T. Crosman.

PRESIDENT LEONARD H. VAUGHAN of the American Seed Trade Association contracted scarlet fever this week and is confined to his home. This is usually a very dangerous disease in adult cases and the period of danger much protracted.

A Sigh of Spring.

Cheerless and barren are the prairies. The streets are slushy; the lawns are covered with snow; not even a snowdrop or a crocus lifts its head in the hardy border; there are no buds on the trees or shrubs. But spring is surely coming; the visible evidence of the fact is in countless homes.

Behold the postman, as he bends under the weight of a sackful of envelopes marked "U. S. Department of Agriculture, Seed Distribution, Free." Each envelope bears the frank of a congressman and the address of a voter. Within it are smaller envelopes containing seeds of new or rare plants, concerning the adaptability of which for general cultivation in the United States the Department of Agriculture needs information. So each seed envelope bears the request: "Please report the result of your trial to this department."

One of these collections of novelties contains seeds of the Chinese pink, morning glory, mignonette, poppy and sweet pea. The department is in doubt about these flowers. It wishes to know whether they will grow now as they have grown for the last hundred years or more in the United States. Are they or are they not suited to the gardens and window boxes of registered voters?

"Congressional seed distribution" is a fearful and wonderful example of how science may be combined with politics. It is also graft, pure and simple.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Another Seed Bill.

Congressman Mann introduced on March 26 in congress a bill (H. R. 22340) to regulate foreign commerce by prohibiting the admission of certain adulterated seeds, etc., and the bill was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. This bill is similar to the Mann Bill (H. R. 18495) filed January 22, 1912, heretofore reported. There are three changes made:

Sec. 1. Law would not go into effect until six months after its passage.

Sec. 1. Kafir corn and sorghum added to list of articles excepted when not intended for seeding purposes.

Sec. 2. Test of seeds made "by weight."

BOSTON, MASS.—Breck's Club, an organization composed of salesmen connected with Joseph Breck & Sons Corporation, held their regular monthly meeting and dinner at the Crawford house Saturday evening March 23, thirty-five members being present. After the regular business was transacted an informal entertainment was given by members. William J. Collins and P. Van Baarda gave an illustrated lecture, describing their recent trip through the seed and bulb growing districts of Europe, which was of a very interesting nature. Freeman C. S. Frye, "Impersonations of country characters." Messrs. Stewart, Wilson, Dopler and Hirth, vocal selections. Messrs. Haynes, Werner and Howard in a comedy sketch, "Orpheum Trio." Messrs. Foster, Frederickson and Lohman, popular songs. Brecks' Glee Club in original selection written by Guy Small, leader. Brecks' Orchestra (five pieces), John Russell, conductor, furnished the music. James T. Carroll, president, acted as toastmaster. Meeting adjourned at 10:30 o'clock, all voting it a most enjoyable affair.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.—Plans have been made to hold one of the most extensive exhibits of flowers ever held in this section in May, probably in the City Hall park.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—An exhibition of flowering bulbs grown by the children of the Eagle street school attracted a large attendance. Out of 1,500 bulbs planted and cared for by the children 1,500 exhibits were made.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—Leaking gas from a main leading into the greenhouses of F. L. Lanson totally blighted the winter vegetables, causing a loss of $10,000.

NEW CARLISLE, O.—W. N. Scarff has purchased the interest which Prof. C. W. Waid had as manager in the greenhouse which recently collapsed under the heavy snow, and has not as yet decided to rebuild. Prof. Waid has under consideration the acceptance of a position at the Experiment Station at Morgantown, W. Va.

Outdoor Lettuce.

We make quite a specialty of outdoor lettuce in early spring and for a number of years have carried the market most successfully. There is a lull between greenhouse leaf lettuce and the out-door crop; also between southern head lettuce and the out-door sown crop. This gap we have aimed to fill. Being poorly located for early work we must use every advantage or be left behind. Our land is naturally heavy and drains slowly, making it rather slow in the spring. Yet in spite of this drawback we have invariably entered the market first and cleared up the entire planting before the glut comes on. Therefore our methods must be worth investigating. In our location out-door work commences with the first week in April. Thus we time our plants to be ready by April 1; however, for several years we have rushed this date a little to our advantage. Two years ago we planted about March 25; last year March 16. Each time the plants were completely buried in snow and the ground froze hard enough for a wagon to go over. Last spring the temperature dropped to 16° for three days. Our neighbors had it figured out that our lettuce this time was surely lost. But May 20 we entered the market with magnificent heads of Big Boston lettuce and Grand Rapids weighing a pound each.

Of course we have plenty of imitators, like every other successful thing; but our imitators fail on one point, and that is the vital one—good plants. They think they can broadcast lettuce seed into hotbeds and pay no more attention to them and when the time comes set these tender things out into the rough weather of early spring. Judging by the numerous offers to buy our plants they commence to see the point, but we decline all such orders, as our plants are not for sale.

We are careful to have our plantbeds well cooled down before seeding—we don't want a soft heat. The beds are marked with a two-inch marker into shallow furrows and the seed drilled in thinly. As soon as the second leaf appears these seedlings are dibbled into other beds 2x2; we screen this ground through a three-quarter inch mesh, to be sure we have no sticks, stones or lumps to interfere with digging of the plants. Just before the plants close in on each other we use a paring knife and run it lengthways and crossways between the rows to block them off. The air is increased from day to day and during favorable spells the sash are off entirely. Next we remove the sash and substitute cheesecloth. If they freeze through this cloth occasionally no harm is done. As soon as the land can be prepared they are set out, using no fertilizer until they show good growth. Then we side dress heavily as often explained in these notes. Such plants can stand a great deal of freezing without harm. MARKETMAN.

Berberls Wilsonae.

This showy barberry was introduced from China a few years ago by James Veitch & Sons through their collector, E. H. Wilson. It is quite distinct, and likely to be a much-sought-after plant as it becomes better known, writes a correspondent in Gardening Illustrated. Of dwarf habit, it forms a compact bush of spiny, many-branched stems, clothed with small oval leaves. During late spring a profusion of golden blossoms appears. These are followed by bright red fruit. Autumn, however, sees a further attractive feature of the plant, for at that period the leaves turn to a brilliant crimson shade before falling. As it grows quite as easily as any other barberry, there are few places where it would not thrive, and it has the advantage possessed by many other species of requiring very little attention after it has once become established. Propagation may be effected by means of seeds or by cuttings of half-ripe shoots inserted in sandy soil in a cold but close frame.

New Plants From China.

E. W. Wilson addressed the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, March 16, on his recent expedition to China for the purpose of collecting new plants for the Arnold Arboretum. On a previous trip a large number of new conifers were discovered but the season was unfavorable for the gathering of seeds, but the herbarium collected demonstrated that the China-Thibetan borderland was the headquarters of the spruce family, a fact previously unsuspected, there being at least twenty to twenty-five distinct species, and, for the purpose of testing these new conifers the second trip was promoted. The difficulties of traversing this wild country were described as were also the rich flora discovered. The mountains are clad with oak, Pinus Massoniana and cypress, a few Keteleeria trees and Liquidambar formosana occur. Populus silvestris is common and the wood-oil trees were a wonderful sight and abundant. By the side of streams Rosa multiflora flourished and the musk rose grew to a height of 20 feet covered with flowers.

The forest abounds with splendid timber the Chinese beech being the commonest tree and the interesting Tera-centron sinense is very abundant. Shrubs are in great variety and include viburnums, diervillas, deutzias, philadelphus and Neillia sinensis. The Davidia trees in full flower were a beautiful sight, and it is one of the most interesting trees in the north temperate flora. Two distinct beeches were found, one with a single trunk and the other has several trunks. Five species of oak—three deciduous and two evergreen, occur. Many species of pomaceae and cherries are common while the varnish tree is abundant. Various evergreen barberries in the shade and Neillia sinensis in the open form dense thickets. The fruiting of conifers is uncertain, but they were found fruiting freely and these new conifers are now growing in the Arnold Arboretum, as well as 350 miscellaneous trees and shrubs which were collected.

I've studied living conditions for a good many years, while I produced berries of all kinds. The results are summed up in the one book of its kind published in America.

Here also is described, among many others, the Himalaya Berry, that perennial resembling blackberries, but bearing fruit on old and new wood like a fruit tree, with the value of apples for commercial growing. The vine is beautiful, climbing like a Rambler rose over your porch. Get the full details. The book is free. Send your address now, before you lose my address.

Dreer's Specials in Hardy Delphiniums

Choice Hybrid Delphiniums

- Amoa Perry. Semi-double flowers of a rich rosy mauve flushed with sky-blue; conspicuous black eye. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
- Alfred Henderson. Bold massive spikes of rich, rosy lavender with white eye. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
- Belladonna. The freest of all, never out of bloom. Beautiful turquoise-blue flowers. 15 cents each; $1.50 per dozen; $12.00 per 100.
- Carmen. Large individual flowers, deep Gentian-blue; smaller petals in the centre, rosy plum with a deep brown eye, 30 cents each; $3.00 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.
- Duke of Connaught. Rich Oxford-blue, with bold white eye; fine large flowers. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
- Géneva. One of the finest light Delphiniums; a pleasing light-blue shade and a pure white eye; many branching stems. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
- Julia. Gigantic flowers of a pretty cornflower-blue; beautifully veined with rose; large, pure, white eye arranged on a most symmetrical spike. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
- Lamartine. Similar in habit of growth to Belladonna, but with rich Gentian-blue flowers with white centre; very distinct and handsome. 20 cents each; $2.00 per dozen; $15 per 100.
- Mme. Violet Geslin. Perfectly round semi-double flowers of a clear blue; lavender centre, bold white eye and evenly arranged in spikes 5 to 6 feet high; a gem. 30 cents each; $3.00 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.
- Portia. Lovely cornflower-blue, but with just the faintest flush of rose; black centre. 25 cents each; $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.
- Queen Wilhelmina. One of the finest of the newer hybrids; immense flowers of a soft lavender-blue, flushed rose, with a very conspicuous white eye. 30 cents each; $3.00 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.
- St. Paul. Large bold flowers two inches across; sky-blue; inner petals rosy-plum; white eye; a most telling variety. 30 cents each; $3.00 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.

DELPHINIUM BELLADONNA.

New Delphiniums

- Hybridum Moerheimi. This is the first really white hybrid Delphinium introduced. The plant is of strong, vigorous growth, 5 feet high, the lateral or side shoots 2½ feet high. The flowers are of purest white, without the slightest shading; a free and continuous bloomer from June till frost. Stock limited. $1.00 each.
- Belladonna Hassen. A variety of the beautiful Belladonna in which the coloring is a more intense blue; flowers fully 1½ inches across. 50 cents each.
- Nassau. Another very branching variation, with soft Nile-blue flowers of extra large size. 50 cents each.
- Capri. Of the same fine habit of growth as Moerheimi, having the same parentage, but with large flowers of a beautiful sky-blue; the best of its type. $1.00 each.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120 page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

All thought of the florists is now turned to the Easter trade which promises well for everybody. Most of the growers will have their stock in exactly right and there is no doubt that there will be a fine trade. All the bulbous stock is at its best and will go far toward filling all desires on Easter day. The floral windows are a mass of bloom of the richest coloring, and within are large stocks of everything in the way of blooming plants.

NOTES.

Haury & Sons are well prepared to meet the demand with a large supply of lilies, potted stock and cut flowers. Roses are on just in time but carnations are off a little. For some time past they have made a fine window display using a very simple device which is very effective. Using an ordinary cane of the fishing rod variety at each joint there is cut a slanting notch and in each of these notches a blossom is placed, a carnation or jonquil or tulip, and then the canes are placed at intervals around the windows. The effect is very pleasing and decorative, giving the effect of a floral curtain all the way across the window. They have a fine supply of baskets on hand and have plenty of plants to fill them beautifully.

The Joy Floral Co. say they never had better stock nor more of it. They have all kinds of roses, Killarney, both white and pink, American Beauty, Richmond and others. Carnations are not so plentiful and lily of the valley and violets are scarce. Roman hyacinths, narcissi, and lilies will be plentiful and there will be an abundance of potted plants including rambler roses, rhododendrons, lilacs, spireas, cinerarias, tulips, lilies, hyacinths and narcissi as well as ferns and foliage plants and a fine stock of baskets decorated with plants, for which there is always a large demand.

Geny Bros. have a magnificent stock. Lilies are in fine condition and sufficiently plentiful to supply all demands and were never better, while bulbous stock is abundant. Carnations and roses will be somewhat scarce. Potted plants are fine and include azaleas, spireas, cinerarias, hyacinths, tulips and narcissi in the greatest plenty. The stock of baskets is unsurpassed and the simplest or most fastidious taste can be suited.

McIntyre Bros. are always in the forefront with Easter flowers. Will McIntyre and his brother Dan have charge of and still use their stall in the market house and will have a fine display there all week. They are much crowded for room and will try to get into their new place as soon as possible. Lilies, Lorraine begonias, spireas, cinerarias and plenty of bulbous stock of the finest quality are ready for Easter sales. M. C. D.

16 for $13

Sixteen all cypress frames in three different sizes, every one of them bolted together with cast iron cleats. Made just the best we know how.

10 Single Plant Frames, 11½ x 13 inches.
2 Single Row Frames, 34½ x 13 inches.
4 Junior Melon Frames, 19½ x 20½ inches.
The 16 for $13. Shipped knocked down.

The Melon and Single Row Frames each have moveable sash—the single plant, slidable glass set in grooves; Every one has the iron corner bolted cleats. No nails used. Painted one coat best lead and oil. Handiest thing ever to boost your garden along. You have always wanted some melon and cuke frames—now here's your chance and at the price that you would have to pay for the wood and glass alone. Those cast iron corner pieces alone would cost you 10c apiece—then there's the wood, the glass, the painting, and the labor. While you were making two we would turn out two hundred—that's why we can sell them so surprisingly cheap.

Order at once—warm weather is due—freight shipments are slow.

Junior Melon Frame, 19½ x 20½ inches,
5 for $4.40, or 10 for $8.50.
Standard Size Melon Frame, 22½ x 25½ inches,
Price: $1.25 each; 10 for $12.00.

Northern Indiana Florists' Association.

The Northern Indiana Florists' Association was incorporated in July, 1910, under the laws of the state of Indiana with W. W. Dederich of Warsaw as president. The home of the society is Winona Lake, where the annual meetings at which the election of officers is held in July, the quarterly meetings being held in the different cities where the members reside. The next meeting will be held April 17 at Kokomo, the invitation being extended by Walter W. Coles.

The membership of the association is 40 and additions are being made constantly, the membership fee being one dollar and the dues one dollar a year. At the election last July J. D. Connor, Jr., of the Connor-Ulch Floral Co. was elected president. One of the features of the association is the exchange, where at each meeting the needs and the surplus of the members are reported, so that they can buy of each other, resulting in mutual benefit.

A. J. WAGONER, Sec'y.

Boulder, Colo.

The trade has been good all winter and the demand at nearly all times has exceeded the supply, so that regular shipments have been received for other points. The winter has been unusually cold and dark and is still so, causing considerable anxiety over the Easter stock, which is, however, coming in all right. Lilies have been slow, and although rather short, will be in on time. Other bulb stock is fine and it looks as if the supply would equal the demand. The indications are for a good Easter trade and 1912 bids fair to be a banner year. Outside work is very much delayed on account of the weather and it will probably come with a rush as soon as weather permits.

NOTES.

S. Knudsen of the North Boulder Greenhouses has picked unusually fine violets this winter, shipping many to Denver.

Charles F. Fawcett will have a full crop of fine violets for Easter as well as a good lot of other stock. F.

Lancaster, Pa.

The Lancaster City and County Florists' Association which was organized December 12, 1911, meets the third Thursday of each month. June, July and August, excepted, in the Chamber of Commerce. The officers are Albert M. Herr, president; Elmer Weaver, vice-president; L. Landis, secretary; Harry Rohrer, treasurer. The meetings have been well attended and much enthusiasm has been shown by the members. At the meeting to be held April 18 Charles Weaver of Ronks will read a paper on "Sweet Peas," and on May 16 a paper on "German and French Bedding as Compared with American" will be read. Exhibitions of flowers are held in conjunction with the meetings and enthusiastic growers are solicited to forward sweet peas and other seasonable flowers to the April meeting and the exhibit at the May meeting will be of pot plants and flowers. All shipments should be made to H. A. Schroyer, Lancaster, Pa., who will see that the exhibits are properly displayed.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The W. L. Rock Flower Co. have extended an invitation to its friends and patrons to attend the opening reception at the new store, 1106 Grand avenue, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 9 p. m., Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, April 1-3.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—At the meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society held March 11, premiums were awarded for azaleas, cinerarias and window plants. A paper was read by Miss Sallie Johnson entitled "Tropical Gardens I Have Seen on a Tour Round the World."

DENVER, COLO.—The annual flower festival was held in the Garden of Elitch on the afternoon of Sunday, March 31, from 1 to 5 o'clock, and invitations were extended by Mrs. Mary Elitch Long to attend and view the Easter and spring flowers.

Don't Be a Kicker It's a Long Eared Habit.

Terse Talk No. 2.

THOSE in a position to best know both human and animal history, state that "the habitual kicker, in the end, generally gets kicked; and that the worst kickers generally have the longest ears."

These very same long-eared friends of ours, are always kicking about "the bottom having fallen out of the market," and that "business isn't what it used to be." That "there are too many in the business." "Wall Street isn't buying stocks, so it won't buy roses." Year after year they hand out that same old drivel always kicking.

That such kickers are always kicking themselves is plain enough to see by comparing their ranges with those of the fellow who never kicks but always pushes.

The pusher spends his time scheming up short cut methods to reduce running expenses—is always on tip-toe for the up-to-date things—hires good men and pays them good wages. Builds the best Iron Frame Houses his money will buy and pays for them cheerfully.

He hasn't time to kick, but he always has time to talk real business.

We would like to point out some of these men to you—a good many of them have Hitchings' Iron Frame Houses.

Let us tell you about the new cantilever method used in framing our Iron Frame Houses.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE “BIG ADVANCE” Ventilating Machine

This machine is an enlarged duplicate of our well known “ADVANCE” machine and uses 1½ inch pipe for shafting, which pipe is 40% to 45% stronger in twist relation than 1 inch Double Strength pipe. This was proved by a thorough test.

The service and satisfaction that our Advance machine has given in the past is sufficient proof that this new machine is built mechanically correct. We still continue to use our Advance machine on houses 100 ft. long or under.

To date over 300 of these “BIG ADVANCE” machines have been sold and they have only been on the market 2 months and unadvertised. A recent installation showed that this machine would easily take care of a 300 foot house and leave no sag in the end sash. This is quite an item and it would pay you to investigate before purchasing your ventilating apparatus. The prices on the advance machine and parts are maintained on this new machine by economical methods of manufacturing and the shafting pipe for the new machine will cost you less than 1 inch pipe.

Write us today asking for further information regarding our BIG ADVANCE ventilating machine.

Soils.

Paper read by Alfred Burton before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, April 2, 1912.

What is soil? Soil is the home of the roots of the plant. Soil is the storehouse for that part of the food which the plant takes in through its roots. Soil is the laboratory or kitchen where the food is prepared. And this work goes on unceasingly. Lastly soil is a support to hold the plant firmly in its place.

But what is soil? Soil is finely divided rock as can be readily seen with a microscope. Clay being the finest and sand and gravel the coarsest of the divisions. In between the sand and the clay, we have what are generally known as loamy sand, sandy loam, loam, clayey loam, loamy clay and clay. These divisions are based upon the size of the soil grains and the different percentages of each size in a given soil. They are, of course, not arbitrarily fixed, there being unnum-bered variations of soils.

Now if we consider soils as broken and decomposed rock, the first question that comes to our mind is, how and when were the rocks which originally covered the face of the earth converted into soil? Certainly ages and ages before man appeared on the earth.
In fact before animal life of any kind could exist there must have been vegetation; and vegetation of the higher forms could not exist on bare rocks.
Probably the commencement of the disintegration was coincident with the appearance of plant life in the lowest form.

Geologists tell us that the earth was once a molten mass, also that the water which now composes the oceans, was probably in the form of a dense vapor which surrounded the red hot earth.
Naturally, the earth began to cool, and as it cooled, it contracted. The result of this was that the surface subsided in some places and wrinkled in others, thus producing the sea basins, valleys and hills. When the surface had cooled sufficiently (and this cooling was hastened by the vapor in the air) the vapor condensed and fell as rain or snow, and thus began to wear or weather the rock. Frost and heat assisted the water in disintegrating and breaking up the surface. Sometime after the surface had cooled sufficiently vegetation began its existence. First in almost microscopic forms, the mosses and lichens which are able to extract nourishment from almost any rock. These by their death and decay formed a very thin film of vegetable matter on the rock and a stronger growth took place which in turn died, decayed and gave way to a still stronger and higher form of vegetation, and so on till grass, shrubs and even trees were able to exist. This decayed vegetable matter in the soil is called humus.

And this humus helps to disintegrate the rock by holding moisture and by supplying acids which increase the solvent powers of the water on the rock.
When a soil contains much of this humus, it is called a vegetable mold.
Rich garden soils are good representatives of this class. A soil that contains vegetable matter that has only partly decomposed under water is called peaty soil. Such soils are found in swamps and bogs and are generally sour and need to be aerated and limed before using.

While organic matter or humus is by no means indispensable to plant life, and though it is a debatable question whether plants derive any nourishment from it direct, it is of great importance in enabling the soil to hold water, in making the soil more friable and easily worked, and in supplying carbonic acid which feeds the plant, and acts on the soil, dissolving and making available other foods such as soda, potash and magnesium which are held in an insoluble state in the soil. Humus also gives the dark color to the soil which enables it to absorb the heat rays of the sun more rapidly and thus warm up more quickly in the spring.

True clay is composed of silicate of alumina, but the term clay in agriculture is employed rather loosely, being given to soils that contain a large percentage of impalpable rock dust with very little of the true clay present. Some authorities give the following percentage composition of the various soils:

	Impalpable matter per cent	Sand per cent
Heavy clay contains.	75-90	10-25
Clay loam	60-75	25-40
Loam	40-60	40-60
Sandy loam	25-40	60-75
Light sandy loam	10-25	75-90
Sand	0-10	90-100

These percentages are by weight of the dry soil. We hear the terms light and heavy applied to soils. These terms have no reference to the weight of the soil but are used in reference to the mechanical condition. A light soil is one that contains considerable sand, falls apart and works easily. A heavy soil is one that is stiff and tenacious, with more clay than sand. It is a fact that a heavy soil actually weighs less than a light one.

A tenacious or adhesive clay soil can be greatly improved by the addition of sand, lime or vegetable matter, which tend to separate the particles of clay. It is this adhesiveness of clay which causes heavy soils to crack when drying. Clay expands very much more than light soils when wet and shrinks upon drying, and owing to the adhesiveness of the particles of which it is composed, the shrinking causes the cracks to appear. These cracks are naturally injurious to the roots of the plants, breaking and pulling them apart. Sand does not change its bulk by wetting or drying. Likewise a sandy soil can be improved mechanically by the addition of clay, lime or vegetable matter. Lime has the peculiar power of lightening heavy soils and also of making light soils hold together better, bringing the two extremes to a happy mean, as it were.

The general chemical composition of soils is extremely similar, owing to the general mixing of the soil ingredients that has been going on since soil first began to form. Through the action of water dissolving and carrying material from place to place, through the action of streams, floods and glaciers, of burrowing animals, worms, etc., of the wind and even plants. Silica or quartz, because it is so hard and insoluble, is the chief ingredient both by volume and weight of all soils. It is a combination of silicon and oxygen. Aluminum probably comes next in abundance, being a fundamental constituent of true clay, feldspar and ice mica. Some of the other elements in the soil are oxygen, which occurs free and in combination with nearly all the other elements. Carbon occurs as part of the humus, also united with calcium and magnesium in the form of carbonates; also as carbonic acid gas which plays such an important part in the solution of plant food. Sulphur occurs as sulfates. Hydrogen is united with oxygen in the water. Chlorine occurs in limited quantities generally in the form of common salt sodium chloride. It seems to be in some way essential to plant life. Phosphorus is never found in nature in a free state but always combined with some other substance. It is very generally distributed through the soil but in small quantities and is very essential to plant life. Nitrogen is found in the soil in a combined form in the humus and the vegetable and animal matter, which upon decaying give up the nitrogen in the form of ammonia, which is turned into nitric acid by bacteria. The nitric acid unites with potash, soda or other soil ingredients and is taken up by the plant as a nitrate. Nitrates are extremely soluble and easily washed out of the soil. Calcium and magnesium in the form of carbonates compose the limestone beds of the earth. Both calcium carbonate (or lime) and magnesia are necessary plant foods, and both are generally present in the soil in sufficient quantities to supply the plant with the required amount. Potassium is another element found in soils which is very necessary. It is widely distributed as a constituent of some feldspars and micas. Sodium, which is the base of common salt, is also widely distributed; it very much resembles potassium as a chemical element, but can in no sense take its place in plant life. Iron is always present in the soil in sufficient quantities for the plant.

It would be supposed, that to find what foods were necessary for soils, all that would be necessary would be a chemical analysis of the particular soil. Then if any element was found to be lacking in sufficient quantity, the addition of this or these elements would give the desired results. But chemical analyses of the soil as they have been made, unfortunately can and do throw but a very dim and uncertain light upon either the condition or the amount of plant food a soil may contain.

It is true that the results of these analyses show a marked difference in soils, but from the data at hand, these variations may reasonably be supposed to be due more to the relative size of the soil grains than to any chemical differences in the composition of the soil. Taking an average of different analyses of soils, the following has been stated by one writer. On a farm where a three year rotation composed of corn, clover and oats was followed, the corn and oats being sold, and the straw, fodder and clover returned to the ground, the soil would contain potash enough to last 1521 years, soda 4050 years; magnesia, 3300 years; lime, 4367 years; phosphoric acid, only 542 years; sulfuric acid 292 years, and soluble silica 17,650 years. These amounts of plant food are what chemical analyses have told us were in the top foot of the soil, and we know that plants send their roots foraging two, three and four feet down. And the subsoil is sometimes richer in certain ingredients than the surface or top soil.

Seeing these figures, a man taking up farming who was not familiar with agricultural or horticultural pursuits would think it superfluous to add any more of these elements to his ground. When his fields contained already nearly two tons P_2O_5 in each acre and over three tons K_2O , of what earthly use would it be to add a paltry 25 or 50 pounds more? Why it would be lost. A chemist with the most accurate and careful analyses could never find it. It would be money thrown away. But we know from practical experience that ninety times out of a hundred his crops would be increased more than enough to pay for the manure or fertilizer added. We know that in spite of these figures, which there is no reason at all to doubt, soils do need fertilizing, they do play out, that farms do run down and become unproductive. And only by feeding can the soil be kept up to its full fertility. So we cannot be governed by a chemical analysis as to the different elements our soils need. The only way is by trials, experiments and careful observation.

The most important thing in considering a soil, to my mind is the mechanical condition. Is it too stiff or too light for your purpose? Has it enough humus or organic matter incorporated in it? The proportions of clay, loam and sand can be readily ascertained in a laboratory with a simple apparatus, the percentage of humus can also be ascertained by analysis. But a practical man can judge a soil very closely by feeling it and observing how it works. Fortunately for the florist, he uses a comparatively small amount of soil, measuring it by the load instead of the acre, and can afford to amend or ameliorate his soil and so change its mechanical condition to suit his particular needs. In all probabilities, the greatest necessity will be humus. The cheapest way to add this is by plowing under a growing crop. Legumes are always preferable for green manuring as it is called, because they increase the amount of nitrogen in the soil and nitrogen is the most expensive element of plant food we have to buy. It is well to lime the soil before sowing a crop to be turned under, as adding a large quantity of green material is apt to sour the soil for a little while, also the legume family do better in soil that contains lime. It seems to be necessary for the proper development of the bacteria which cause the nodules to appear on the roots of clover and the other legumes.

Soils, generally, have the power of fixing the plant food added to them. By fixing, we mean holding the food in such a state that it cannot be washed out by the rain. This is true of phosphoric acid and potash, but nitrogen is very easily lost by leaching in the form of nitrates and under certain conditions escaping into the air as free N. The best way to hold the nitrogen is to keep the fields filled with growing crops, catch crops as they are called. These make use of the nitrogen and return it to the soil when plowed under. But it is only the clovers and others of that family that add more nitrogen than was originally in the soil. Clays hold the plant food more firmly than sandy soils, and the same is true of moisture. Humus also helps to hold the moisture by absorbing it in the same way a sponge does, while clay holds it by surrounding it as though it were in a cup.

Oxygen or fresh air is very necessary to the soil to promote the growth of the innumerable bacteria that are always present in a fertile soil and to assist the chemical reactions that are continually going on. When the water in soil evaporates or is used by the plant, air rushes in to take its place. When more water is added, air and any injurious gases which may have been formed are driven out, and when this water is gone more fresh air is taken in. Also fresh air is taken into the soil at night. When the evening comes on, the soil cools and shrinks and air is drawn in to fill the vacant spaces. The opposite occurs when the soil grains expand with the heat in the morning. So you might say that the soil takes a breath once every twenty-four hours.

Propagating Shrubs in Spring.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you kindly inform me if cuttings of dormant or even started shrubs such as Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, H. aborescens, Sambucus nigra aurea and also roses can now be cut and planted in rows, cultivated like ordinary fruit and vegetable plants and give good rooted plants by June 15?

New York.

S. E. U.

The hydrangeas cannot be propagated from hardwood cuttings; they are usually increased by cuttings made of the half-ripened growth in summer. The sambucus also is not easy to root from hard wood, it being so full of pith, cuttings, may be made of half-ripened growth in summer, or root cuttings may be made, taking pieces of the stout roots about three inches long, planting them in drills in the open ground where moisture is secured in summer. Roses are sometimes increased from hard ripened wood such as prunings. The Ramblers are the easiest to root in this way. None of the above, if they would root from dormant wood, could be called good rooted plants by June 15, October 15, or at the end of the growing season outside would be the nearer date, and then such are not fit to sell until transplanted and grown another year in rows. "S. E. U." should get Bailey's "Nursery Book," which contains much valuable information as to propagation of all plants.

St. Valentine's Table Decoration.

The beautiful and elaborate table decoration, which we illustrate, was arranged by McIntyre Bros. for the Hermitage Club, the leading social club of Nashville, Tenn., for a recent dinner. The tables were thirty feet long and at either end was a large circular table, one six feet and the other fourteen feet in diameter. It was a St. Valentine's table and the color scheme throughout was red, and over three thousand carnations and roses were used. The bow on the larger round table was ten feet long, made of red carnations, as were also the hearts, of which there were six, with centerpieces of Richmond roses. Large vases of Richmond roses and one of four dozen American Beauty roses were used on the side tables. On the plate rail were blooming potted plants, while all woodwork was decorated with southern smilax and palms, which completed one of the most elaborate decorations of the season. The ladies' bouquets were of violets and lilies-of-the-valley, and each gentleman was provided with a Richmond rose.

Easter in Chicago Stores.

"The finest Easter ever" is the way one of the storemen expresses himself in regard to the trade of Easter 1912 in Chicago, and it certainly looked that way on Saturday when there was hardly room enough to move around among the jostling crowd that filled the stores and on Sunday morning when automobiles and teams and an army of boys were delivering the plants and boxes. All the stores report a splendid business and an increase in the trade of a year ago, and everything seemed to favor an enlarged sale, the weather was all that could be desired, with the exception of a few minutes on Saturday when an electrical storm accompanied with very high wind passed over the city, but this soon cleared away and trade was resumed. The stores had an immense stock and there was an exceedingly large supply of cut flowers to draw from at the wholesale market and there were buyers from many of the stores in the market as soon as it was opened to replenish the lines that had been sold out. There was also a grand supply of splendid plants and these were displayed in an elegant manner, and the sales of plants was something enormous for there were but few left of the large stock in any of the stores.

A. Lange, on East Madison street did an immense business, the store was crowded on Saturday afternoon with patrons making their selection from the large stock of elegant plants and superb flowers, and the clerks were rushed to the top notch attending to their wants. The stock of cut flowers embraced everything in the market and there were beautiful plants of hydrangeas, azaleas, rambler roses and bulbous stock of all kinds.

John Mangel had a very extensive line of plants of all kinds and the best of cut flowers in the two stores on Monroe street, and the store on the corner was so full Saturday afternoon that one could hardly turn around. Large azaleas and hydrangeas were a great feature and the sale of the handsome plants was enormous, and there was hardly enough left of the immense stock to properly decorate the store on Monday morning. A most satisfactory business was the report of the trade at the two stores.

The Fleischman Floral Co. displayed a large and varied line of plants and flowers which filled the store to overflowing. A large stage had been erected and this was filled with the finest specimens of plants and plant baskets, that were arranged with the finest taste were a great feature and were duly appreciated by the patrons.

John T. Muir reports a most satisfactory trade at both stores, which were filled with elegant specimens of azaleas, hydrangeas, roses, a splendid lot of lilies as well as large quantities of finely grown bulbous stock, tulips, narcissus and hyacinths being shown in proof well grown plants artistically put up in the best manner as well as a large assortment of the finest flowers in the market.

At the George Wittbold Co.'s houses on Buckingham place, the large show house running parallel with the street was filled with beautiful blooming plants that attracted many visitors in that fashionable neighborhood. Louis Wittbold and his force of assistants had all they could handle during Saturday and Sunday, working late and early and a very large and satisfactory business was reported by the proprietor.

The proprietors and all the force were a tired looking lot on Monday morning, but it was with pleasant faces that they greeted the visitors who called, for one and all realized that the business was far in advance of previous years, but it will take a little leisure to figure what is the percentage of gain, but all agree that the conditions were all that could be desired and the business was as large as could be well done.

Easter Trade at Washington.

Weather and other conditions were favorable to trade and it probably exceeded that of any previous year. There was on hand an immense stock of plants of all grades, and Friday and Saturday were particularly favorable days for pushing such stock, the weather being fair and warmer with no difficulties in transportation. There was a great sale of lilies, such as they were. We do not infer that there was no good ones, but an immense amount of lily stock was short and scrawny and some of the flowers were a fair imitation of paper lilies.

By all odds, the finest and most attractive of any single plants sold were the large pink and white Pearl rhododendrons. Some of these were very large, being in 14 or 16-inch pots and were features for any storekeeper to be proud of. Judged by beauty and attractiveness, they were well worth the retail price of $25.

Other good sellers were the various rambler roses, Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins and Crimson Rambler. Novelties in the way of baskets were among these roses. Some of the standard roses the latter being a very prominent feature, and on Sunday morning the autos had all they could do to make the large number of deliveries on time.

The Bohannon Floral Co. showed a large and varied line of rambler roses in different forms and colors that were splendidly grown and admirably displayed, beside a large assortment of beautiful azaleas and other Easter stock. The proprietor and his assistant, H. E. Klunder, had their hands full waiting on the trade Saturday and Sunday, and it was early rather than late when the stock had been made ready for delivery on Sunday morning.

The Alpha Floral Co. report a very large business both in cut flowers and plants, the supply of the former being sold out on Saturday night and an early visit to the market was required on Sunday morning notwithstanding that it was in the early morning, before the Saturday business was completed.

Canger & Gormley were well satisfied with their Easter trade which was better than last year. The plant sales were very large and the call for combinations in baskets completely depleted the large and beautifully arranged stock.

C. A. Samuelson's store was a complete spring flower show, for not only the store but the greenhouse in the rear was filled with magnificent plants. Rambler roses, hydrangeas, genistas, with a large quantity of lilies and beautiful ericas greeted the eye, and the plant baskets were beautifully arranged and the trade in them was very large.

W. J. Smyth displayed an assortment of plants and flowers that would be hard to surpass. The finest azaleas, hydrangeas, rambler roses and lilies filled this beautiful store which was artistically decorated with southern smilax, hung with Florida moss. Plant baskets fusion in boxes, baskets and pots all harmoniously decorated.

H. C. Rowe had a beautiful assortment which was so large that a temporary store had to be engaged to display the splendid line of plants and plant baskets, and a very large and satisfactory business was transacted is the report.

The Adams-Robertson Co. report a business that exceeded all expectations in the new store on Rush street, and they displayed a beautiful assortment were trained as parasols and were popular. Well flowered azaleas, both large and small, sold well, as did also hydrangeas, of which the stock was enormous; Baby Rambler roses and hyacinths in pans, daisies in pots, lilac and spiræas, particularly the pink, were slow. "Pink" for this spiræa is a misnomer, as it is neither a good pink nor any other good color.

While as above mentioned in the case of the rhododendrons, good prices were paid for exceptionally fine stock, it is doubtful if the aggregate returns for a given quantity of stock was equal to that of last year. The trade with the working people was injured to some extent by a number of grocery stores all over the city stocking up with plants.

J. H. Small, a veteran florist, said that more people were buying this year, which coming from a man of life-long experience, corroborates our belief that each year the trade is expanding.

Scale on Ferns.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Will you inform me what will kill scale on ferns?
Illinois.

Scale are the most troublesome insects with which the grower of ferns has to contend. Fronds that are thickly infested with brown scale should be picked off and burned. The young scale can be killed with nicotine solution, but this must be thorough enough to be sure and cover the insect and will require several applications to eradicate them.

Government Bulb Farm, Bellingham, Mass.

In order to demonstrate whether hyacinth, tulip, narcissus and crocus bulbs, the importation of which from Holland and other European countries has constantly increased and this year amounted to more than a million dollars, could be successfully grown in this country, the Secretary of Agriculture, in 1908, leased a tract of 10 acres on Puget Sound near Bellingham, Wash., and erected thereon the buildings necessary to conduct the experiment. On this tract that year were planted 175,000 bulbs, and the increase has been very gratifying, for this year the planting was 860,000 bulbs, some of the beds of which we illustrate, this yield being the maximum number of young bulbs which were equal if not superior to those grown in Holland. As a test 50 of these bulbs were grown side by side with Holland bulbs of the same varieties; those from Bellingham bloomed seven to ten days earlier, the flowers were of better size and color and the bulbs were free of disease, while of the imported bulbs a number were diseased and many failed to produce a flower.

It is believed that bulbs can be grown on the Pacific coast that will in many ways surpass the imported article. The chief obstacles are the cost of production and marketing, but an effort is being made to overcome the difference in the cost of labor by the invention of appliances and the use of horses to replace the operations performed by hand in Europe. The expense of freight shipments across the country are a serious drawback, but upon the completion of the Panama canal it should be possible to deliver bulbs at New York as cheaply as they can be brought from Europe. The experiments are solely for the purpose of showing what can be done in growing bulbs in the United States. Careful records are kept and valuable information collected which will be at the disposal of anyone wishing to take up bulb growing. The demand for bulbs is increasing rapidly and bulb growing offers a promising field for the investment of American capital and the establishment of a new and profitable industry on the Pacific coast, which will keep at home a large amount of money now sent annually abroad.

Geranium Foliage Discolored

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

I am forwarding you geranium leaves which are discolored and which occur on part of my plants. They were planted in a sandy loam, the washings from a country road. Can you inform me what the trouble is and what would be the remedy?
J. Y.

If these geranium plants are standing on coal ashes, I think the trouble can be traced to that. We have had the same trouble caused by the fumes from the ashes. We now use sand entirely for setting the plants on and have not had any trouble since using it. Sometimes, directly after repotting this will appear on some of the lower leaves of the plants which is due to the check the plants receive from repotting.

THE CARNATION.

Growing the Young Stock.

The clearing out of the Easter stock will give us some more very needful bench room to take care of the young stock which is a very important matter just at this time. The increased bright warm weather is having its effect on the young plants, encouraging them to make a rapid growth and stretch out quickly, and those of the earlier propagation will need attention by being shifted into a size larger pot as soon as they show any signs of being root-bound or the wood begins to get hard. We are sometimes tempted when it gets to be after the first of April to take a chance and hold off the shifting of the young plants, figuring it out that they will not suffer very much if held in the same pots for three or four weeks when it will be time for planting them out in the field, but this is a serious mistake because after the plants have commenced to get hard every few days that they are held in the small pots will be detrimental to their making vigorous healthy plants.

There is one thing that the young stock should not be treated to and that is warm moist conditions; they love fresh air, a cool temperature and not an overabundance of water. They require the common sense method of culture of the up-to-date carnation grower without coddling of any description as is given a bench of blooming plants that is bringing in full returns. Within the next 10 or 12 days can be said to be the last call for putting in cuttings in the sand. The main quantity of stock for the coming season's planting requirements ought to be well in hand before this, but if you have a seedling, or a variety of which you are short, cuttings can be rooted for two or three weeks yet, but it needs extra care and caution. It will be necessary to watch them closer in regard to wilting by spraying oftener and giving more shade, also the higher temperature makes more liberal ventilation a necessity so that extra draughts will have to be more closely guarded against. Cuttings in the sand at this time grow very rapidly after they become rooted and in a very short while the roots get wiry and the stem becomes hard. The only safe way to guard against this is to take them out of the sand as soon as they have made roots large enough to stand the transfer. Cuttings taken from the sand require extra shading at this time, after potting or planting in the bed, to prevent their wilting, also a little closer atmosphere for a few days helps them to take hold of the new soil and stiffen up quickly.

If there is one thing more needed than another with the young stock planted out in benches, it is to keep the surface of the soil open by frequent scratchings. Soils that have a tendency to clog on the surface through a scum forming are very liable to start stem rotting among the young plants, and the only way to guard against this is to keep the soil open and the surrounding conditions clean and sweet.

There must not be any let-up in care of the older plants because Easter has gone or spring is at hand, if a continued steady cut of flowers is expected; rather than that they need closer attention. The beds will dry out faster as it becomes necessary to give more ventilation, also the red spider will become troublesome in a short while unless the syringing of the plants is followed up at every favorable opportunity. Up to this time we have not had the bright weather to need any shade on the glass, but as soon as it becomes necessary the flowers will be greatly benefitted by it. While the weather continues so that the insecticides can be used, it should be done to prevent the aphids getting the upperhand of the plants, when it will be a difficult problem to dislodge them. C. W. JOHNSON.

Distance Between Carnations.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Our carnation plants were planted nine inches apart each way in a house running north and south. The sun never strikes the ground and many of the growths are spindly. How far apart should they be planted in such a house? SUBSCRIBER.

New Jersey.

Nine inches apart each way is not an unreasonable distance to plant carnations if other conditions such as light, air and heat are favorable. The size of the plants at time of planting in usually determines the distance apart to set them; ten inches apart each way being the rule generally fol-all around the plants, even if they must be given twelve inches apart each way to obtain it. C. W. JOHNSON.

Moving Large Trees.

Nurserymen and landscape gardeners occasionally find it necessary in laying out estates or are called upon in other cases to transplant large trees. Alexander Klockner of Wauwatosa, Wis., has moved many large trees in the last twenty years without losing one, and the illustrations are of trees moved this winter which are the largest of any that he has undertaken. A tree that will weigh ten tons is considered large, but to move a tree that weighs from 20 to 30 tons it is necessary to employ house moving apparatus, for no planting wagon was ever built that would lift a tree of that size and it could not be drawn by horses.

In moving a tree of so large a size the tree is dug around and the ball lifted with jack screws, using 3-foot blocks to raise it to a height of six feet. Then two 14-inch square timbers are placed, on which are 6-inch rollers with runners under the ball. The screws are then removed and the weight rests on the rollers. It is then drawn with chains and blocks by horse power, and the progress of the moving is from 200 to 400 feet in eight hours. Mr. Klockner a few years ago moved a very large tree in the middle of summer; the soil was, however, of very heavy clay and it was so molded that none was lost in transit and the tree was moved but a lowed by most growers, though this is sometimes shaded a little crosswise of the bench to even up the distance between the rows. Carnation plants growing in houses running north and south are very apt to be a little spindly at this time of the year, especially if the temperature is not kept to an even degree and the ventilation properly attended to. The condition of the plants now should be noted and used as a guide for next season's plans. There is not anything gained by crowding a plant; better by far to allow for a free circulation of air short distance, it requiring 48 hours to accomplish the task, but the work was so successfully done that the tree never suffered in its removal.

NEW HAVEN, IND.—The New Haven Floral Co., recently incorporated by Henry Hermann, Sophia Hermann and Herman J. C. Leitz, with the last named as manager, have erected a range of 10,000 feet of glass, corner of Belle and Eben streets, which is being planted to carnations and smilax, and will also grow bedding plants and nursery stock, doing a wholesale and retail business.

PLANT NOTES.

Poinsettias.

The propagation of poinsettias with most growers is started during April but cuttings made at this time produce the taller plants and the propagation is continued until July when the short plants are rooted. The stock plants will have to be started at this time regardless of when the bulk of the stock is to be propagated. The plants that have been dormant during the winter should be well ripened at this time and the natural season of growth is at hand. The old soil should be all shaken off and the plants trimmed back to the green wood. They can then be potted in 5-inch pots or if to be grown only for stock purposes they can be planted in a bench in a warm house. The top eyes will break first and when 2½ inches long they can be cut with a beel of the old wood, trimming off nearly all the foliage and inserted in the propagating bed. They root very readily in a bench which has a mild bottom heat but must be kept free from all draughts and watered carefully. Over-watering will quickly cause damp-off, and if they wilt they will never recover. If there is no propagating bench which is heated, a mild hotbed can be made with about three inches of sand on top of the soil and the poinsettias propagated in this. Propagating poinsettias in a cold bench is sure to be attended with more or less loss. We have placed a lot of cuttings in such a bench and rooted 90 per cent, and the next lot with the same treatment would lose 90 per cent, the temperature not being under control and the plants would get chilled and damp-off. As soon as the roots are half an inch long the plants should be potted, for they grow very rapidly and should not make any growth in the propagating bench. The soil should have a good proportion of sand, the plants placed in a warm, close atmosphere and shaded until they have become established when they should be placed in bright sunlight that a good stocky growth may be obtained.

Violets.

To be successful with violets they should be taken out of the hothouses as early as possible. The single and the double varieties that are to be planted in the open are much better set out at the earliest possible moment, as soon as the ground can be worked and the plants are safe from heavy freezing. The ground at this time is full of moisture and the young plants root very quickly during the cool weather which they will not do after the hot spell comes on. If the young stock of the singles has not yet been taken it should be done at once. The plants selected for divisions should be the healthiest, under no circumstances take plants showing disease or poor growth. The divisions should be made from this year's growths, discarding the centre crown, for this will not make a suitable plant for another year's blooming. These divisions should be planted in flats or in a frame and shaded for a few days and in two or three weeks will have made new roots and can be transplanted to the open ground. The young plants of the Marie Louise should be in a frame outside and as soon as the houses are cleaned out and the beds prepared planted in the houses which should be shaded and given all the ventilation possible. Lady Hume Campbell will grow nicely outside but will have to be lifted the latter part of August or early in September. Constant cultivation of the stock planted out will be necessary throughout the summer.

they are to be in bloom and they will be in the best of condition and fill a great want.

Tuberose.

One of the easiest flowers to grow and bloom during the summer months is the tuberose and they add a variety during that season that is much ap-

Bulbs for Memorial Day.

The demand for bright flowers is very large for Memorial day work and is invariably larger than the supply, especially those that make a large show, and there are many growers who yearly plant large quantities of the late tulips for cutting at that time. Gesneriana major is a splendid red and Bouton d'Or a fine yellow for this purpose and are largely grown, the Bybloemens and Bizarres can also generally be had in flower the last of May, but they are of mixed colors and not so satisfactory in floral work. The Darwin tulips are also very late but are expensive for cut flower work. Many growers plant a bed of tulips on the north side of a building which will retard them considerably, but the weather is always a great factor in having any of these bulbs in bloom on a certain day when planted outdoors. The narcissus are almost always through blooming by Memorial day, but it is very easy to have a few boxes placed in cold storage or the ice house before they get started too much and bring them in two weeks before precipitated by many patrons. The principal thing is to procure good stock and have heat enough to properly start the bulbs. These can be potted separately in small pots or set in boxes of sand and placed in a warm, moist location. This will save room at this time when the houses are invariably crowded, but they must be potted up as soon as growth starts. A good fibrous loam is the best soil in which to grow them, but it should contain no fresh manure. Some of the finest tuberose we ever saw were grown in pots in which was placed, on top of the drainage, an inch or more of old wasted cow manure picked up in the pasture, and when through flowering the roots were found thickly growing in this. A moist atmosphere is necessary in the early part of their culture to keep thrips in check which is the worst insect enemy which the plants have, but after the flowers begin to unfold they should be moved to a drier location and shaded, for excessive moisture and bright sunlight tarnish and cause the flowers to take on a yellow hue. A succession of plantings will give the grower fine spikes of flowers through the summer and early fall.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Propagation and Stock Plants.

Another season's work among the chrysanthemums is now opening up and the first thing on the docket is to prepare the stock plants and get them in shape to produce strong, healthy cuttings. Any stock plants that are standing in places where they do not get the full sunshine should be brought forward and given a place where they can receive the full light at all times, with plenty of ventilation on every favorable occasion. Another very important point is not to try and force the stools to produce cuttings by the hurry-up method of running the house warm. The chrysanthemum loves a cool temperature just as much when it is producing cuttings as it does when developing its blooms. Any attempt to coddle it is quickly followed by trouble and disaster.

A cool temperature and a clean, sharp sand are two very important considerations in the propagation of the chrysanthemum. They will root a little quicker in a high temperature, but it is at the expense of weakening the young plants. Treat them to a sand temperature of 50 degrees, with the overhead temperature about the same or a little lower if possible. The cuttings require a good watering at time of putting them in the sand. After this they should be given frequent sprayings to guard against their wilting, which if allowed to occur will quickly cause them to become hard and woody. Ventilate the propagating house at every favorable opportunity, not enough to produce a draught, but with the object in view of maintaining a cool, fresh atmosphere.

Another very important point is as soon as the cuttings have formed roots of about one-half inch in length get them out of the sand as quickly as you can. If allowed to remain for even a few days rapid growth takes place and they are hard and woody, with wiry roots before one is aware of it. I do not know of a one more important feature to have in mind at all times in connection with the culture of the chrysanthemum in all its stages than that of encouraging a short, robust growth, and it applies just as much to young plants starting out as it does to the one of more mature growth later on. Therefore, do not use a soil heavily charged with manure for the first pottings; also give the young plants a favorable location, where they will get the full benefit of all the light with ample fresh air. If there is another species of plant life more subject to the ravages of insect pests than the chrysanthemum I have not been able to find it, and the only thing to do is to fumigate constantly, even though there does not appear any trace of any of the insects on the plants. If we keep them down now it will not be half as hard later on when rush of work of weather conditions are against us attending to the matter.

It is not necessary to propagate the main batch of plants for commercial plantings at this early date, but it is absolutely necessary to care for the stock plants that are expected to produce the cuttings a month or so later. Early varieties, exhibition varieties, and those of short jointed, slow growth should be propagated without delay. The two most noted very early varieties—Smith's Advance and Golden Glow—should be well established plants, ready for planting between the dates of April 15 to May 15, to be able to get first-class stock from them by August 20 or even later. You can time the date of blooming to a great extent by regulating the taking of the buds, but the only way that you can get size and depth to the blooms is by allowing them a reasonably long period of growth. All the Australian and the imported exhibition varieties should also be now well along. If they are not already out of the propagating bed, they will have to be attended to right away to be able to get exhibition blooms on them. Glory of Pacific, Polly Rose, White and Pink Ivory and the early October flowering varieties should now be got into the sand without any further delay.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Rooted Cuttings.

Year by year this feature of the chrysanthemum industry is becoming more important, and as the quality of stock offered presents so wide a range as to values a few comments on this subject may be acceptable. Some very fine cuttings which reflect credit to the shipper are offered, but we regret they are an exception rather than the rule. The accompanying illustration show four cuttings of varied quality.

The first shown is practically worthless, being very short and nearly devoid of root and leaves. It is rare that an entire consignment is of such poor grade, but it is not uncommon; in fact most of the houses handling such stock include a few weaklings in each bundle which results in loss to

The second cutting represents one which is an improvement on the first, but is what we term thin and has been either grown in the shade (possibly under the benches), or placed very close together in the cutting bench, remaining there until it has become drowned. Such cannot be considered prime stock and we find the majority of cuttings are of this class.

There is not so much objection to their being short, provided they have good vigor as shown by the third on the print. Some varieties are inclined to be very short through the winter months, of which the several forms of Ivory are good examples.

The last one on the plate shows the most satisfactory cutting either for shipping or growing on for benching.

In taking cuttings, those of a variety should be cut at a uniform length, some kinds being strong will furnish long, while others less rampant will give short ones. If they are trimmed, this should be done with as much regularity as possible so that the entire lot are equal in all respects. When taken at haphazard lengths and trimmed indifferently, the short weak ones suffer and when rooted and wrapped tightly in moss for transportation, they again suffer, especially if the conditions are favorable to the development of fungus. If various grades must be taken it is better to sort them and place the weak ones by themselves, so they are not smothered by the stronger ones.

Give abundance of air after they have been inserted in the sand, but avoid strong drafts as this will cause them to flag, and in this connection top rather than side ventilation is preferable. When the roots are one-half inch in length they are in the best condition for potting or shipping. We would prefer them even shorter than to remain in the sand until several the purchaser. Such cuttings should not have been taken in the first place, but allowed to remain on the old plant until they had increased in size and vigor. The recipient with careful treatment may be able to nurse them along to fairly respectable plants, but he will be careful not to buy from this house again.

inches long. Those most to be feared are such as have been forced with excessive heat either to induce the stock plants to greater productiveness or to hasten roots upon the cuttings. Such stock suffers in transit and are difficult to establish, with more or less of them sloughing off after being potted.

The Easter Trade.

From the reports received from the several correspondents in the different sections of the country, a good healthy growth of the business is recorded, and in most cases a material increase in the sales is noted. From some sections are reported a small falling off, but in these cases it is owing to local or weather conditions. That more people are purchasing flowers every year is manifest by the great advancement made by the trade, for with the great additions of glass area that have been made, and the consequent production of a much increased supply, yet the markets sell out very well. There is no doubt, however, that the supply is rapidly becoming equal to the demand, even in these times of largest sales, and the day has passed when the markets in the large centers are really going to entirely clean out, and inflated prices can be obtained, for lower prices are reported from many places. The weather conditions throughout the country were particularly favorable this year for good business, but few places reporting adverse conditions, and the temperature everywhere was such that deliveries could be safely made without a large amount of labor being expended in wrapping the plants and flowers. The sale of plants still seems to be on the increase, for the general report is that all the well-grown plants were disposed of readily. Lilies are still in great demand and sell well, especially where the stock is good, but there is a greatly increased demand and sale for more expensive plants, and well finished hydrangeas, rambler roses and the more costly plants are more and more purchased by the customers. From some sections comes the report that bulbous stock did not sell as well, but this more often occurs where there is a large supply of other stock, and where the better plants and flowers are not so plentiful the bulbous stock still has a large sale. The quality of the stock this year is commented on very favorably, many saying that it was never before excelled, and that there was but very little of poor quality. Taken all in all the business done was no doubt enormous, and far beyond what could be looked forward to a few years ago, and the general trade is in a very prosperous and healthy condition.

LAWRENCE, KANS.—Easter lilies were short of the demand, writes A. Whitcomb & Son, hyacinths and daffodils in pots sold exceptionally well, and there was a plentiful supply of these as well as other plants. The trade increased about 25 per cent over last year and prices were about the same. There was considerable funeral work which called for all the short stemmed flowers in arranging designs, so the supply of cut flowers for Easter sales was very short. There was not much call for primroses and ferns, but more lilies and daffodils in pots could have been sold if obtainable. Everything in cut flowers was sold, with roses and carnations most in demand. The weather was fine and a great assistance in delivering the plants. Spring business is starting up nicely and bedding stock looks well with promise of a good demand.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—The volume of business was very satisfactory from every standpoint, says N. B. & C. E. Stover, being very much larger than last year, an increase of about 25 per cent, with prices about the same. The supply of cut flowers was adequate, but more bulbous stock in pots could have been sold. Hyacinths and lilies were the leaders in pot plants and cinerarias were least in demand. Carnations, lilies and roses were the cut flowers having the best call, and violets were the least in request. One of the department stores had plants and cut flowers on sale for the first time here, but the quality was very poor and we did not notice that it made any particular difference to the legitimate florist, for the sale of such stock will not do much damage to the regular business.

LINCOLN, NEB.—Stock was never in better shape for Easter, nor was the variety ever so good, writes C. H. Frey, and the business was about 40 per cent larger than last year with prices about the same. The weather was fine up to Saturday, when it stormed, and this being the big day everybody that called meant business. The supply of plants and cut flowers was adequate, and of the latter there were some to spare. There was a fair call for palms and ferns, and blooming plants sold in about the following order: lilies, azaleas, deutzias, spiraeas, hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, rhododendron, cinerarias and primulas. The demand in cut flowers ranked as follows: roses, carnations, lily of the valley, daffodils, tulips, lilies and violets.

UTICA, N. Y.—Lilies, azaleas, hyacinths, tulips and daffodils in plants, and carnations, sweet peas, roses and daffodils in cut flowers, were what were in the most demand of all the floral products at Easter writes J. C. Bigelow & Son. The supply of both plants and flowers was excellent being fully equal to the call, the prices about the same as last year, and there was but little difference in the total sales. The department stores were heavily stocked with flowers shipped from Philadelphia, which they sold at one-half or one-third of the regular prices, selling violets at 40 cents for bunches of 50 and carnations three for 10 cents.

ANGOLA, N. J.—The trade at Easter this year was larger by about 10 per cent than in 1911 says John J. Neubeck of the Angola Floral Co. There was a good supply of both plants and cut flowers and prices were about the same as last year. In cut flowers carnations were the most in demand, and in plants the ones having the least call were tulips, spiraeas, cinerarias and daffodils. Lilies were backward owing to the dull, wintry weather, but there were plenty of other plants to fill their place. Pelargoniums sold exceptionally well. Saturday was a fine warm day, which was a great help, for the plants needed but little wrapping.

JANESVILLE, WIS.—The stock this year was the best we ever saw at Easter, says the Janesville Floral Co., and the trade was looking for the newer varieties of roses and were willing to pay for novelties that were good. Prices were a little lower than last year, but the business was larger by about 25 per cent. The supply of plants was enough to meet the requests and there was a surplus of cut flowers. Tulips in pots sold well, and so did any well finished plant. Roses and carnations were the cut flowers most in demand, but bulb stock did not seem to be desired.

FARGO, N. D.—The prices this year for plants were better than last Easter and about the same for cut flowers, writes The Shotwell Floral Co., and the business was about the same as a year ago. The supply of cut flowers was equal to the demand, as was that of plants with the exception of good small azaleas, which were short. Azaleas sold well and there was a good demand for bulbous stock in pots, rambler roses, and hydrangeas. Pink and white roses were the cut flowers in largest request.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The Easter sales this year were a little less than last, reports the Alpha Floral Co. The supply of both plants and cut flowers was equal to the demand, and prices were no better. Lilies were the plants most in demand and hydrangeas the least salable, and in cut flowers, sweet peas and carnations were most in request with less demand for bulb stock, snapdragon, orchids and lilac.

PEORIA, ILL.—The Easter trade this year was about the same as last with prices a little lower, say B. Juerjens & Co. There was plenty of everything in both cut flowers and plants to meet the demand, with a few plants over.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—Manager Lawrence Cetter, of the Lakeview Rose Gardens, reports that they have had a very good Easter trade, having made a complete cleanup for the first time since he has been here.

St. Louis.

A GRAND EASTER.

The Easter of 1912 was a grand one for the retailers. The warm weather brought everything into bloom and stock of all kinds was very cheap with the exception of violets and good roses. Carnations were very plentiful, but many of the growers held them too long and they were sleepy and unsalable. Violets were scarce, but sweet peas were a glut, as were also lilies. The plant trade was good, many of the retailers pushing the sale of them rather than cut flowers. The weather was warm and pleasant until Saturday evening, when it stormed, and Sunday was cold and clear.

NOTES.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Laura Tesson, mother of Robert Tesson. He was formerly proprietor of Forest Park, west of Union avenue.

The Paris Floral Co. will close their store at Olive and Broadway and will locate at 410 N. Sixth street. Both stores were open at Easter.

The next meeting of the Florists' Union will be held at Ostertag Bros., where they will meet above the store in the house of flowers.

C. A. Kuehn had a large supply of flowers. He complained of several consignments of carnations having been held over too long.

The Alexander Floral Co. have fitted up a portion of their candy palace for a floral department. They grow their own flowers.

George Waldbart, as usual, did a splendid trade. His sales of plants and cut flowers were very large.

Kalisch Bros. Floral Co. had a fine display of everything, their show windows being large and roomy.

Vincent Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, said the sales were very large and showed big increase over last year.

Ryan Floral Co. are doing a nice trade. Their new store is too small and they will enlarge.

C. Young & Sons Co. did an immense business, their stock of lily plants being entirely sold out.

H. G. Berning had his hands full handling the consignments, and his sales were large.

Robert J. Windler had a splendid display and did a rushing business.

George H. Angermueller had a fine supply of orchids and roses.

F. H. Weber's sale of plants and cut flowers was very large.

Werner Bros. came in with a nice supply of roses. W. F.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The Rochester Florists' Association held its annual banquet at the Powers hotel March 26. Among the speakers were A. J. Sigl, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Rome, City Comptroller Edward S. Osborne and George S. McClure, president of the Buffalo Florists' Club.

LILIUM FORMOSUM, from California, was an unlooked for novelty in the Chicago market. A large shipment was received on Friday which arrived in very good condition. But there was a good supply of home grown lilies on hand and the home grown stock had a fresher look.

ACCORDING to the decision of the board of general appraisers, rendered on the protest of W. K. Harris and others, evergreens propagated from seed as distinguished from other methods of propagation regardless of size or age, are considered as evergreen seedlings and are free of duty.

IN an interview appearing in the public press, Charles Thorley of New York states "that lilies are a thing of the past except for church decorations and orchids are the flowers of the season. A great change is noted in the last ten years. We used to send out all the flowers on Sunday and then it became good form to send the floral presents on Saturday. Now this year everybody has been sending flowers during the whole week."

Gas Damage.

The extraordinary severe winter with the frost settling deeper in the ground in some places than ever before, has introduced a new danger to greenhouse proprietors, for from many places come reports of damage to greenhouse crops by sewer and coal gas escaping from mains that have been broken by the frost. It is a question if many partial failures were not the result of the same cause, but the amount of gas was not enough to make itself manifest or to cause such a heavy loss that it would be traced. This is certainly a matter for the growers in establishing a plant in a new location to consider, and for all growers to see that everything possible is done to protect their interest before the damage occurs, for it is sometimes very difficult to prove the loss was caused by escaping gas and may entail much expensive litigation to procure recompense for damage sustained.

Examination For Park Gardeners.

The fact that the civil service law requires examinations to be competitive and public required that the examination for head gardener of the West Park system, Chicago, be held in that city on a fixed date. The civil service board received inquiries and applications from some forty or fifty prospective candidates in twelve different states. Of these only ten found it possible to appear in Chicago on the date set for the examination. The test was completed in one day and consisted of papers and oral examinations as appeared in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of March 9. The questions were designed by W. N. Rudd, president of Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association and Edwin F. Kanst of Chicago, and these gentlemen conducted the oral examination and graded all the papers on floral work.

The successful candidate was August Koch, who has been in charge of a department of the Missouri Botanical Garden in St. Louis for about 14 years.

FRED C. HEUCHLING, Supt.

Fashions in Plants.

A gradual change in the demand for the several varieties of plants has taken place in the last 12 years and the business is influenced by this change in the fashion so that the grower must keep pace with the times, writes a correspondent in the Horticultural Advertiser, and grow what the trade demands and cease growing that for which there is but little sale. The increase in the culture of carnations and the demand for British grown roses has compensated for the loss of trade caused by the decline in demand for other plants. The last 10 years has seen the rise in the dahlia and it seems as if that demand had reached high water mark. Old fashions return, for the women of today are wearing some of the early Victorian modes, and the camellias, acacias, boronias and other hardwood plants, all gone out of date 10 years ago, are today more in demand than they have been for the last 20 years.

The system of trade, which finds a like parallel in some sections of this country, which causes a shortage of money with florists and nurserymen is largely due to private people keeping these unfortunates waiting longer for their money than they would dare keep the butcher or baker, and further, the retailers are lax in collection of their debts, which is keenly felt by those who have to buy for cash and sell on long credit. May not these weaknesses be repaired and the change of fashions in plants be used to advantage?

London International Exhibition.

The following items concerning the Royal International Horticultural Exhibition to be held in London, May, 1912, will be of interest, not only to those who may attend, but to all:

After the opening of the show by King George V, an address will be presented to His Majesty on behalf of the organizing body.

Without counting entries from foreign exhibitors there are no fewer than 1,500 entries from British exhibitors alone. These range from exhibits varying in size from 10 to 1,000 square feet.

Admirable and extensive arrangements have been made for the refreshment catering during the period the show is open.

In the grounds, seating accommodation has been freely provided, and will, all over the entire area of the show, be free.

The programme of the receptions and other festive gatherings is almost in a state of completion.

The grounds will be lighted by electricity from 6:30 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. every evening.

Nearly all the county associations have agreed to furnish silver cups of about the value of £50 each for competition in addition to those prizes already offered by the show authorities. Those county cups will be open to all exhibitors, foreign and British.

All the British horticultural papers have arranged to have kiosks to display their publications. Foreign garden papers will be accorded the same privilege free of charge.

The representatives of certain foreign papers will also be entitled to free admission during the period the show is open.

The consuls of each country represented will also be invited to take part in the proceedings.

Among other attractions the bands of the Royal Marine Light Infantry, the Royal Artillery and other crack regiments will perform daily.

The entire extent of the area covered will be approximately 10 acres of which the great tent will occupy 6 1/4 acres.

A LARGE SUPPLY OF SPLENDID STOCK.

The great flower day of the season of 1911-1912 has passed into history and the general opinion of the trade in all its branches is that the amount of stock received and disposed of was in excess of that of any other year. Some of the wholesalers state that the business was larger than ever, others that it was about the same, but to sum the situation up it looks as if the quantity of stock was the largest that the market ever had to handle, and there was a much larger amount of flowers disposed of, but the prices were lower, averaging in the opinion of some about 10 per cent less than last year. One of the features of the sales this year was the great demand for medium length roses, instead of the longer-stemmed grades, which probably made some difference in the total amount of the sales, but there were plenty of this grade to meet this extra demand, so the call for the better grades was not so large as it would have been had there been a shortage of the medium lengths. American Beauties were not in over-supply but there is not the great demand for this rose at Easter that there is at Christmas, and the large supply of the other varieties gave the storemen a bountiful supply of good stock. Lilies were in good supply, the pot lilies sold out well, and there was a large demand for the cut stock, but a large shipment of Liliun Formosum was received from California on Friday that filled up the market. They arrived in very good condition and taking the long shipment into consideration, were very fine though they could hardly compete in price with the best of the home grown stock. The usual holiday conditions existed in regard to carnations. On Friday the stock that had been held back at the greenhouses was placed in the market in quantities enough to force the prices down, but there was not much that had been kept too long, some few vases were seen that looked as if they would hardly carry to Sunday in good condition, but they found but few buyers for there was good stock enough to fill all the demands. Violets were in much better condition than is usual at Easter, especially when that day comes in April, the home grown stock was fine and some stock that was shipped in was good, and all met with a ready sale. Sweet peas of fine quality were superb and sold well. A large quantity of southern jonquills were received on the market and were freely offered in the grocery and butcher stores, some as low as two dozen for 25 cents. The plantmen all did a rushing and magnificent trade, cleaning their stock up well and at good prices. The storm of Saturday interfered some with business, although it was of short duration, and some of the dealers think it caused a slight drop in the prices. The stock is now coming in in good supply and the quality is fine, the retailers sold out so well on Sunday that there was a good demand the early part of the week but with such a supply as is now being received it will take an active demand to clean up the stock as it comes in every day.

NOTES.

Wietor Bros. did a land office business last week and disposed of thousands of fancy American Beauty roses. This firm cut quite heavily in everything and were well satisfied with the amount of stock that was sold. N. J. Wietor is always ready to help along a good cause and it could not help but be noticed how greatly pleased the "Sisters of Mercy" were when they were presented with a large supply of choice stock for the Easter festivities. Wietor Bros. will have a large supply of stock for some time for they are now in full crop and are cutting heavily in American Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Uncle John and Mrs. Jardine roses.

Bassett & Washburn sold out in practically everything for Easter with the possible exception of a few carnations which were very plentiful nearly all over the market. The quality of the stock that this firm supplied their customers for the holidays was fine and of its usual high quality.

J. A. Budlong had a fine Easter and sold out completely in roses and carnations and lily of the valley. Both the local and the out-of-town trade were good, and large quantities of choice stock were sold and shipped for the great flower day.

John Kruchten was well pleased with the amount of stock he sold for Easter and says that he could easily have disposed of a great many more pot lilies. All of the employees in this hustling house are now singing "Everybody's Doing It."

Wm. Hartshorne took a day off on Saturday, April 6, to inspect Vaughan's greenhouses at Western Springs and to attend a meeting of the Sons of St. George at the Masonic Temple in the evening.

The Chicago Carnation Co's. crack baseball team defeated the White Eagles in a practice game at Joliet last Sunday by the score of 7 to 3.

Weiland & Risch report that their Easter business was very satisfactory and fully up to their expectations.

H. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was a welcome visitor here this week.

C. L. Washburn, the popular wholesaler, is suffering from a severe cold.

Peter Reinberg is cutting a fine grade of roses with American Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond showing up exceptionally well. The Richmond roses that this firm supplied their customers for Easter were elegant and the long strong canes were well clothed with luxuriant foliage and carried magnificent heads. Manager Matchen says that Easter business was very good.

Oak Leaves, a weekly paper published in Oak Park, contained in its last issue, a likeness of E. C. Amling, the well known commission man, and the other bank officials of the new state bank which was recently organized in that city. Mr. Amling as was before stated in these columns, was elected president and he is now receiving the congratulations of his many friends.

Hoerber Bros. are going to grow some of the chrysanthemum novelties this year at their greenhouses at Des Plaines, having just received a fine lot of plants of Christy Mathewson from Elmer D. Smith & Co. of Adrian, Mich. The stock arrived in splendid condition and were such exceptionally fine plants that the buyers were greatly pleased upon opening the shipment.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association did a satisfactory business for Easter and Charles Erne jokingly says it was the best the firm ever had. The third quarterly meeting of the stockholders will be held on Wednesday, April 17, at 7 p. m. and all the members are earnestly requested to be present.

George Perdikas did a splendid business at his three stores last week and disposed of an exceptionally large quantity of cut flowers and plants. The proprietor evidently believes in making a showing, for every nook and corner of his stores was fairly crowded with stock for Easter.

The J. B. Deamud Co. found very ready sale for their fragrant home grown double violets for Easter and had the good fortune of disposing of the Des Plaines Violet Co's entire large cut at very high prices.

There was a large representation of the members of the trade at the funeral of the father of Wm. F. Schofield, the popular North State street florist,

The Otto Wittbold Nursery has acquired the nursery interests of the George Wittbold Co., and has filed articles of incorporation with a capital stock of $20,000. The proprietors are Otto Wittbold, Mrs. George Wittbold and Mrs. Otto Wittbold, and the business will be managed by Otto Wittbold, who has so successfully managed the greenhouses and nursery at Edgebrook the last few years. Mr. Wittbold is fully posted on nursery stock, and the demands of the patrons of the old firm, and the success of the new concern is assured. The best wishes of the trade and of the many friends of the young proprietor are extended in the new enterprise.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. report that the Easter trade this year was much better than last year and that it sold out completely in cut lilies and pot lilies. The demand was so great the last days of the week that the firm was obliged to telegraph their customers that it was impossible to fill any more orders on account of being entirely sold out. The proprietors are now receiving some very complimentary letters from their customers in which the writers state that their pot lilies arrived in fine condition and this was probably due to the careful packing and the fact that they were all shipped when in bud.

The A. L. Randall Co. is again making some alterations to their large store and is now busy putting the finishing touches to a large salesroom. This firm was greatly handicapped for the lack of store room for Easter when business was exceptionally good so it decided to be better prepared for the future, hence the recent changes. Frank Johnson, the efficient sales manager, escorted us through the firm's new ribbon room and we were surprised to find that such a large supply of stock was always carried.

H. Van Gelder says that his Easter business was fine, and that it was the largest that Percy Jones ever had. The enterprising wholesaler's many friends are relieved to hear that he and his store man, Mr. Simons, were in no way connected with the recent automobile accident that happened in this city a few days ago.

In the severe electrical storm that passed over the city and vicinity Saturday afternoon, April 6, three greenhouses owned by John P. Jenetten in Niles township were blown down, and the proprietor, his three sons and an employe were injured by the falling glass and timbers.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. say that they had a very good Easter trade and add that the only drawback was that they were handicapped with the lack of sufficient help to wait on the city trade. The shipping trade was also very brisk and large quantities of choice stock were sold.

Canger & Gormley had a very large Easter trade and John Canger and his force of assistants had more than they could attend to the latter part of the week. Prettily arranged baskets of plants and cut flowers were but a few of the offerings at this store for Easter.

A suburban grower advises us that a note in his diary is to the effect that Primula veris and mertensias were in bloom April 10, 1910, and that Festiva Maxima peonies were ready to be disbudded on the same date.

H. S. Garland of the Geo. M. Garland Co., has returned from several cut-of-town trips and is again working on the new construction that his company will place on the market some time in the future.

J. W. Niesen's store on East Forty-seventh street presented a most favorable appearance during the Easter rush with its large showing of cut flowers and plants and a newly decorated interior.

W. W. Randall returned from his Wisconsin trip in time to help out with the Easter business at the A. L. Randall Co.'s store. He is doing jury service in one of the local courts this week.

Harlow N. Higginbotham, president and treasurer of the Chicago Carnation Co., and his son Harlow have returned from a trip to Panama and are now on an extensive trip through the south.

At the sale of Easter flowers held in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel by the Children's Flower association, April 6, $4,275 was raised for the home for crippled children.

A baby boy arrived at the home of Otto Wittbold, in Edgebrook last week and the proud father is now telling his many friends what a splendid little chap his second son is.

A. E. Hunt & Co., who lost all their stock by freezing in January, are again shipping some fine sweet peas and daisies to the market.

Miss M. C. Gunterberg had recovered sufficiently from her recent attack of pneumonia to attend to her customers during the Easter rush.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Horticultural Society April 9, was adjourned to Thursday, April 18, at the Art Institute at 3 p. m.

Chas. Zapfe says that his first Easter in the retail business was a most successful one and that he sold more stock than he expected.

Chas. W. McKellar says that his Easter business was fine and that with the exception of a few plants he sold out completely.

George Manos shipped about 50 boxes of cut flowers to his store in Pittsburg from this market during Easter week.

Louis Visas says he shipped at least a carload of stock last week to his store in Duluth.

Mr. and Mrs. James G. Hancock celebrated their silver wedding last Saturday, April 6.

A. Henderson & Co. have just received a shipment of cycas stems.

Joseph Curran, one of the older florists of this city, died in Las Vegas, New Mexico, on Friday, March 29, at the age of 61, and was buried in that city the following Sunday, March 31. The late Mr. Curran was well known in this city and was formerly connected with Reissig Floral Co., which was then located where Marshall Field & Co.'s large establishment now stands, and when the late P. J. Hauswirth succeeded to the business of this firm he was with him for many years. He was later with O. J. Friedman and was also in business for himself. He possessed a most amiable disposition and was very obliging, and by these personal characteristics attracted a host of friends, who, with the wife and daughter that survive him, will mourn his loss.

Miss Gussie Linquist, for many years identified with Vaughan's Seed Store, died at Colorado Springs, Colo., April 8, after a protracted illness. Miss Linquist leaves a host of sorrowing friends to whom the memory of her constant kindness and fortitude under heavy affliction will always be a benediction.

Kennicott Bros. Co. did a fine Easter business and sold large quantities of stock of all kinds. E. E. Pieser is now turning his attention to the peony game and he says that with all the snow we have had the past winter the flowers ought to be fine for Memorial day. The Atlas Floral Co., on East Randolph street, enjoyed a fine Easter trade and also arranged many beautiful and attractive church decorations. Frank Williams has returned from Wisconsin feeling much better in health and is again seen at the store.

Mrs. Margaret Port, widow of the late Harry Port, died at her home in Maywood on April 5. She was forty-three years old and was well known to the local trade.

Peter Reinberg was elected Democratic central committeeman by a large majority at the primaries held Tuesday, April 9.

Ed. Misiewicz reports that the Easter trade was very good at both his stores in South Halsted street and Milwaukee avenue.

E. F. Winterson says that it was a fine Easter and that he sold out with the exception of a few plants.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held April 4, at the Union Restaurant, 168 West Randolph street, and the following were elected members: Henry Klunder, 70 East Monroe street; Wm. Tegan, Morton Grove; John Van Hess, 31 West Randolph street, and Leo Real, 31 West Randolph street. Four applications for membership were presented: August Koch, 3500 Washington boulevard; John Lambert, Lake Forest; H. Van Gelder, 56 East Randolph street, and S. A. Jamieson, 72 West Adams street. Secretary Pyfer tendered his resignation and as many were absent on account of the pressure of Easter work the meeting adjourned to Thursday, April 11, the same place and hour as above.

Milwaukee.

A SATISFACTORY BUSINESS.

The trade in general was well satisfied with Easter business. There was enough stock for everybody and all orders could be filled with but few exceptions, the only really scarce stock seemed to be Richmond and American Beauty roses which it was impossible to obtain at almost any price. Carnations and Killarney roses were plentiful enough to go around, as was also the bulb stock. The sudden change in temperature certainly did not help the market conditions as it brought stock in quite heavily on Saturday and some good carnations were sacrificed at reasonable figures. The change also affected the quality, for it made the stock rather soft and being well opened there was a lot of poor stock for the wholesalers to contend with, especially Enchantress carnations, which seemed to suffer more than any of the others. Some came in rather off color and these naturally did not move very fast. The eastern violets also did not arrive in very good condition, they would fall apart when handled and they would not sell at any price. The Wisconsin violets, however, were very fine and cleaned out well. Lilies were fine and sold readily, the long-stemmed ones were a little scarce on Saturday, but there were enough short ones to fill all orders. The demand was mostly for long and they naturally cleaned out first.

NOTES.

R. Lietz says, "Well, we got through fine, but you would not think that it was possible for a little fellow like me to get out so many orders and do such a large business in the west side of the town." He certainly had some and he sold everything he had in his store and greenhouse, coming to the market on Monday and getting what was good in blooming plants to fill up his place and make it look like a flower store. He feels proud of his new automobile delivery car which is certainly a dandy and says he can cover plenty of territory in doing his delivering.

Gust Rusch & Co. reports business beyond expectations, having had a fine shipping and local trade. They handled a lot of plants for the different growers and sold all the lilies that they received from Fred Schmeling. They were certainly glad that the store had been remodeled so that they could get more room to handle the quantity of stock they received. This concern is receiving some Kaiserin Aug. Victoria roses from one of their growers which are of a fine grade and are just coming in crop.

M. A. McKenney Co. reports business good. They had a fine display of blooming plants in the basement and when getting into this place you imagined you were into a conservatory. They had a large variety and sold out well, working all night Friday and Saturday. They were so rushed that they were still getting out cut flower orders on Easter Sunday afternoon.

Edlefsen-Leideger Co.'s conservatory in the back of the store looked rather forsaken on Monday, as there was plenty of room to put in a new supply. They sold out anything that looked like a blooming plant and certainly had a few. Much of their stock was sent in from their own greenhouses and they also had a large quantity from the different growers.

C. C. Pollworth Co. certainly had some very fine lilies for Easter and they cleaned them all out so quick that they could not fill their orders for cut blooms on Saturday, the demand being so great. This concern also had their carnations and roses right on crop and were there to deliver the goods.

Wm. Currie, speaking for the Currie Bros. Co., says it is surprising what becomes of all the blooming plants we grow at the greenhouse. We sent down load after load and sold them as fast as they came in to the store. They are more than satisfied with their Easter trade.

W. C. Zimmerman says, "Well, it is all over now," but during the rush, he said, "Never another Easter job for me—too much like a good thing to handle so much stock and crowd all the business into so short a time, but nevertheless we are over it and only a little tired out."

The E. Wilke Co. say, "We certainly did some business and we would have been stuck with our large amount of delivery if it had not been for the new auto truck which we bought just in time."

Holton & Hunkel Co. reports having had a fine Easter trade, being sold out completely at their greenhouse of all good blooming plants and also report good sales at their store. G. R.

THE BEST EVER.

Easter trade was, by unanimous consent, "the best ever." The various estimates of increase over previous years and particularly over last year for the same event, were from twenty to thirty per cent. The cash sales are easily compared with former dates, the charge sales can only be estimated until later, but there's no doubt of the total bearing about the same relation to the increase of cash sales. It is difficult to discern any material difference between the prices realized and those of a year ago for the same grade of stock. The public bought freely and prices did not seem to be a governing factor as the poor and rich alike could be and were supplied with plants and cut flowers with prices to meet the same. A selection could be made from the twenty-five-cent hyacinth to the high-priced azaleas and rhododendrons or made up baskets and from the low-priced cut bulbous flowers to the American Beauty roses. No one would venture to say which of the great variety of plants offered was the most popular without a correct record of sales. True, Easter lilies were very popular, but it is doubtful if this year they maintained their usual advantage over the beautiful gay colored azaleas. There was an enormous stock of all kinds on hand and though some dealers ran short of some varieties, it was no serious matter, as so many worthy substitutes were available. Easter complexion was given to the trade early in the week and indeed the day before Palm Sunday the business indicated the busy week that followed. Cut flowers of all kinds sold well the last part of the week and Saturday the call for these increased with each advancing hour of the day. A strong feature of the cut flower trade was the great popularity of flowers suitable for corsages. Violets were never more popular and the supply of these gave out as early as four o'clock in the afternoon. Then followed the heavy demand for Bon Silene corsages and sweet peas and lily of the valley, the last three items continued, with the violet in short supply throughout the day and Sunday. Carnations were not in heavy supply, but fairly equaled the demand. These retailed most uniformly for one dollar per dozen. American Beauties sold better than a year ago and the stock was good, which could not be said of much of the stock of other varieties of goods. Those florists, who by their capacious stores were enabled to make a display with made-up plant baskets did a good trade in them, but these do not show to advantage when crowded in rich groups of mixed plants. The weather was all that could be desired for the shoppers and the advantageous handling of the deliveries. Saturday was a balmy, pleasant, springlike day and though Sunday weather with snow flurries and clouds was a disappointment to the street paraders, the florists could not complain, as their harvest was practically over with midnight of Saturday, and with one florist it was found necessary to close the doors as early as eight o'clock p. m. to enable the force to execute the heavy orders already in. The employment of many extra automobiles for deliveries rendered that feature of the trade more expeditiously done and removed much of the worry incident to horse-drawn vehicles of the past.

NOTES.

Harry Rackham's first Easter in business turned out to be also his last, as he has given up the struggle to maintain his business that he established on Woodward avenue last fall. He will manage his father's fruit farm near Redford, Mich., hereafter.

New York Florists' Club.

There was a light attendance Monday night at the meeting of the New York Florists' Club owing to it being the first day after the Easter rush, there being but sixty-five members present. A report was made by Charles B. Weathered, chairman, of the annual dinner and celebration of the clubs' twenty-fifth anniversary. This affair was a great success and the committee received the hearty vote of thanks of the club. Thanks was tendered to the gentlemen who had donated flowers and other decorative material, to Alexander McConnell who had charge of decorating the banquet room and which was done in his usual masterful artistic manner. The Park Avenue Hotel management also received a vote of thanks for the courteous, generous and successful way they had carried out their part of the arrangement. It was by far the best served dinner the club has ever had.

Harry A. Bunyard was the lecturer of the evening and gave a most interesting talk on the recent spring show in Chicago, illustrated by many beautiful slides made from pictures presented to him by George Asmus of Chicago. Mr. Bunyard's talk was pleasing and interesting and will probably be seen and heard in many of the other large cities.

A LARGE SHIPPING TRADE.

Friday opened with a snow storm, followed by rain, then by a rise in temperature in the afternoon to 65°, and an all night temperature at 50°. Spring is here at last, and of course the tired feeling with some, but all are glad to experience something pleasanter than that which they have passed through. In some of the outlying cities and towns there is some depression caused by strikes and lockouts, and a general feeling of unrest, especially amongst the foreign born or Latin races. The coal strike does not give us the shivers just now, although we will not say much until it is over. Easter is over for another year. There are some satisfied and some among the rose men who were not over good natured all the week. The wholesalers did a big business in roses, and the shipping business from Thursday, we were told, was phenomenal. The local call in the market dwindled to nothing Saturday. Red roses had a good call. It is a noticeable fact that in the market some will wait until the last day before ordering or buying, and then try to squeeze the price down. The shipping trade is the standby of the growers. We are neither throwing rocks nor bouquets, but those with facilities for handling large quantities of goods and ordering early get the cream of the trade, their customers are better satisfied, and there is a rebounding satisfaction to the grower who knows his goods are disposed of before the holiday has come. This may arouse an argument but we are here to tell the truth and give the readers something unvarnished, regardless of criticisms. The plant men had a satisfactory Easter. Ramblers and azaleas were good and sold readily, and the lily growers claim to have done a satisfactory business. It may seem strange but lilies were sold for 12 cents per flower and bud at wholesale, yet one flower store sold them at retail for the same price, and department stores at 12 to 15 cents. It is a question at what price the grower sold them, and how the trick was done. This is mighty poor business and certainly shows a lack of business sense on the part of the grower and a cutthroat method of killing himself as well as others. The retail stores were almost a unit at 25 cents per flower. Double violets arriving from out of the state were well bunched and packed, but they had a had feature of losing themselves, sometimes on the floor, if shaken gently. The single violets were good, carnations held up well, orchids had a good call, sweet peas were of fine quality and enjoyed a good demand. Gardenias sold well.

NOTES.

Andrew Christensen is one of Boston's intellectual florists and master of several languages. He is at present, after he sells his flowers in the market, studying French under a professor of that language. It is a pleasure to see some make every minute of their time count in some useful study. Andrew expects to take a continental trip again soon and to visit "Gay Paree." Then we have Robert Cameron, a Gaelic scholar, and W. N. Craig, a Latin scholar. Verily, we can show some class in Boston.

The seed trade has opened up with a rush. The back garden artists are having backaches getting ready for the expected crops of something that will scare the bugaboo of high prices and bring the general satisfaction of eating something that was raised by their own energy and get the freshness never had when bought at stores.

At the stand of E. Winkler is shown Heliotrope Centefleur. This is large flowered and of better color than the older varieties, but it lacks the sweet odor of the old favorites. MAC.

BETTER TRADE THAN EVER.

Up to expectations and better than ever are the reports that come from reliable sources in the retail and wholesale branches of the trade in answer to questions about the volume of the Easter business. A look around the retail shops finds some of them entirely bare of flowering plants, while others who have still a few standing about say they are well satisfied, having had a large stock and the few that are left making little difference. The wholesale men all agree that it has been the best Easter that they have ever had, all saying they worked to the limit to get their orders out and could have sold more stock in nearly all lines if they had had it. The quality of the cut flowers offered was fully up to the average with the exception possibly of Easter lilies, the branches of these carrying more green buds than was profitable to the buyer. Lily of the valley was very scarce as were good double violets, there not being near enough of either to go around and late buyers, those who "wait to see," had a great time getting any. There was about enough of the rose stock except possibly American Beauties, which were all sold out quickly. The plant trade was as usual the feature of the Easter business and immense quantities were sold. The metrosideros from the W. K. Harris stock was about the only novelty and they sold well. Rambler roses did not appear to go with as much vim as last season, probably because they were not flowered so well—there must be lots of in the selling. A twelve-inch white tub with gilt bands, filled with plants containing twenty to thirty buds and blooms as seen in one of the shops, looked the real thing. Quite a few of the stores offered a line of baskets filled with growing plants that were very attractive. One dealer said, referring to baskets, "No, we don't carry them; they are too much bother at this time. Any kind of a decent basket made up costs from three dollars up without the precious time of filling and there is no more profit in it than in a plant that costs the same price and requires no skilled help or time in its preparation for sale." A very great help to the business was the splendid weather conditions. Each day was clear and ideal for shoppers, no rain falling until the afternoon of Easter Sunday. It took the buyers sometime to get started and dealers who had laid in large stocks early were wondering on Tuesday night just how they were coming out, as practically no business was done by that time. But Wednesday it was better and after that they did not have time to think about anything but handling the trade that came to them.

NOTES.

"All we had left was the empty ice-box," was the word at Berger Bros.' "We sold out to the last flower in the staples. It was much the best Easter we have ever had. Good Easter lilies were all gone long before they got tired ordering them and it was the same with double violets and lily of the valley, the latter being very scarce."

The Leo Niessen Co. moved an immense quantity of stock. They were strong on Easter lilies, American Beauty roses and violets and cleared up to the last flower. They were much pleased with the increase in the business over that of a year ago which was at that time a record breaker.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.'s report is that they never sold out so clean at any holiday before. Although they had an unusually large stock of Easter lilies, lily of the valley and carnations, they had to refuse many orders as the demand was greater than their large supply.

Easter trade was all right and very satisfactory, was the word at Edward Reid's. "Haven't had time to compare, but sold all our large stock out at prices that pleased both our customers and ourselves. Could have sold thousands more Easter lilies and violets."

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. report a record breaking business. Easter lilies and lily of the valley were specialties and despite their great preparation, there was not enough to go around.

A. M. Campbell moved a large stock of Emperor daffodils. They were exceptionally fine stock from his own nursery.

AN IMMENSE BUSINESS.

The wholesale cut flower market during Easter week was as a general thing very satisfactory. The weather was all that could be desired, and there was an unprecedented call for lilies, callas, violets, lily of the valley and the dark colored orchids. The volume of business done was enormous, but at closing time on Sunday many of the dealers had still on hand a large supply of white roses, stocks, mignonette, wall-flowers, jonquils, tulips and carnations. With the exception of dark colored orchids, the supply of other varieties far exceeded the demand. Gardenias of the very best quality were very plentiful and the prices were disappointing. Sweet peas were very good and met with ready sale and the same can be said of lilac. There was not the active demand for roses that was expected, but the best grade blooms of Radiance, Mme. Chatenay, Richmond, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Mrs. Jardine were disposed of quickly. The shipments of jonquils from the south were very heavy and were of exceptionally good quality, which affected the sale of the home-grown stock to a very great extent. There was a good demand for smilax and asparagus, but an oversupply of adiantum which moved slowly. The bulk of the violet shipments were of very poor quality showing the effect of the hot spell, but under the circumstances cleared out remarkably well, though the flowers that were most worn in the Easter parade on Fifth avenue seemed to be gardenias, sweet peas and orchids. While it is true that all the plant growers sold out all the stock that was good, many of the retailers had a great many plants on hand especially the larger sizes, on Sunday at noontime.

Tuesday, April 9—There is a good supply of everything and the demand is very light, and there has been a considerable cut in prices all along the line.

NOTES.

Charles H. Totty, chairman of the National Flower Show committee, will sail shortly for London and the continent in the interest of the National Flower Show, which will be held in the New Grand Central Palace, April, 1913. A great deal of important work is being accomplished by the Local Governing Board which are holding weekly meetings at the office of Traendly & Schenck. Mr. Traendly is chairman of this committee.

The Weathered Co. have closed contracts for one curved eaved house, 55x250 feet for William Ryder, Wantagh, L. I., one house 16x181 feet for E. Butchenkirk, Sea Cliff, L. I. One house 25x150 feet for W. G. Muller, Newark, N. J. This firm has also just completed a range of greenhouses 25x400 feet for George J. Gould, Georgian Court, Lakewood, N. J.

Joseph A. Manda sprang a pleasant surprise on his friends by announcing his marriage to Mrs. Mary Esch, which had taken place on March 6. Mr. Manda gave a wedding supper on Sunday at Cavanaugh's restaurant, in Twenty-third street. He is very popular as president of the New York Florists' Club and has a host of friends, all of whom wish him every happiness.

Marius Matheron of Hempstead as usual sent in a large shipment of carnations of fancy quality which commanded the highest market prices. Mr. Matheron will erect a new house the coming summer, 60x300 feet.

Woodrow & Marketos had two large stores completely filled with the finest stock of plants of all kinds and did a wonderful business. This is not surprising as all of their stock was of the very best quality.

and Fourteenth street, died on Sunday of abscess on the brain. Mr. Newrock was well known as one of the old time florists and was a member of the Society of American Florists.

Never before did J. H. Small & Sons have their store so nicely arranged for the display of their Easter plants. The effect was beautiful and the street in front of the store was crowded at all times.

Gunther Bros. in addition to their usual fine supply of carnations, received large shipments of lily of the valley of A No. 1 quality which were disposed of quickly at advanced prices.

Charlie Millang is improving rapidly and is able now to attend to business regularly. Mr. Millang as agent for the Ford Car has sold two delivery automobiles to Frank R. Pierson.

Wm. Peters & Sons of Hempstead had 17,000 carnations in their cut of Friday and Saturday, all of this stock is sold on the floor of the New York Cut Flower Co.

Philip F. Kessler did the largest business of his career, and was fortunate in having a very large supply of lilies, callas and smilax in flower.

Wm. A. Kessler did a fine business in plants and on Sunday was completely sold out of everything that was good.

Cincinnati.STOCK VERY PLENTIFUL.

There was easily plenty of everything for Easter and at the close only the very best stock was used. The receipts the early part of last week showed plainly that many growers were holding back and prices were forced up to a level almost twice as high as at the close. Few growers gave their commission men or sales managers any satisfaction in their answers to early inquiries. This holding back combined with sunshine and lots of it from the middle to the close of the week, brought in a large amount of stock in very little time and the supply was greater than the demand could possibly take care of. As a result, only the best was taken up and everything soft that came in late was passed up entirely. The two flowers that were long in particular were carnations and lilies. Everyone, particularly the growers, predicted a short cut. There was, however, many more than could be used to advantage. Many from out of town came in too soft to be used.

CLUB MEETING.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Society was held Monday evening at the club rooms. The executive committee of the flower show through Secretary Geo. Bartlett handed in their final report which showed that every cent coming to the committee had been received by them and every penny had been paid that the committee owed. Their report was unanimously accepted and they were relieved from further duty. Then the president, Gust Adrian, in a few well chosen words on behalf of the society thanked the committee for their earnest and hard endeavors which made the affair the artistic success it was.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell received a large cut of carnations from Tom Windram. Tom always manages to have a good strong cut at this time of the year.

The J. M. McCullough Son's Co. cut flower department report a splendid Easter business.

Visitors—L. F. Benson, Indianapolis, Ind.; Miss E. Burrill, Clifford. H.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting at the office of the American Rose & Plant Co. March 18. One new member was elected and a paper on "Peonies" prepared by John M. Good was read. An invitation to visit the farm of Ward Welsh during the summer was accepted.

Nashville, Tenn.

Never before in the history of the floral business in this city has there been a finer or more abundant supply of flowers than in the Easter just passed. Every store was full to overflowing with reserve stock in the cellars and greenhouses. The wonder was where the purchasers came from to use up such a supply. To view the flowers alone was well worth a visit to the florists stores, and once there the impulse to possess some of the rare treasures are irresistible. The florists' stores were thronged constantly for the four principal days and when it was all over while there were still some pretty things left, the stock of a few hours before were scattered through the homes and churches of the city. The sale was wonderful and the weather fairly satisfactory. While April made a few spurts to be April-like, it did not rain to do any great harm and as long as the florists kept their doors open sales were being made.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Co. had a pretty arrangement in the store with a rising platform which showed the plants off to advantage. They had a large supply of lilies, rhododendrons, white lilac, pink and red rambler, hydrangeas well flowered and large. These were special favorites and being out of the usual run of the winter's flowers, met with ready sale. One of their novelties was the baskets filled with orchids containing numbers of blooms and finished with orchid tinted ribbons. Potted hyacinths and other bulbous stock, being modest in price commanded a large sale as did tulips and narcissi. In cut flowers there was an equal abundance. Mr. Joy said the trade had been entirely satisfactory and one of the best Easter trades he had ever known.

The spacious store of Geny Bros. was a perfect picture of bloom and beauty. They had hundreds of lilies and their strong line was the Crimson Rambler roses. Hundreds of pots of these beautiful plants went off rapidly in a phenomenal sale. Potted hyacinths, tulips, etc., filled in the medium trade and were sold as fast as they could be handed over the counter. An extra force of clerks was called in to wait on the trade and all were kept busy. Handsome baskets filled with blooming plants sold well and some were gems of artistic beauty. Mr. Geny was all smiles and said his trade had been all he desired.

L. Haury & Sons made an elegant Easter display and attracted to their store a fine lot of customers who were liberal in spending their money. Their stock was excellent with lilies, rambler roses, white lilac and all the other Easter belongings, and they sold out almost completely. They had beautiful decorated baskets and filled many orders for them. Bulbous stock they had in plenty and it sold well. It is their first Easter in the uptown store and they expressed themselves as much pleased with their trade.

McIntyre Bros. in the market house and at their greenhouses did a splendid business and sold out pretty well. Like the others they had baskets and cut flowers and roses of all kinds for which they had a demand. M. C. D.

THE GEO. WITTBOLD CO.

EDGEBROOK, CHICAGO.

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, President; Marshall H. Duryea, New York, First Vice-President; Edgar Gregory, Marblehead, Mass., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary and Treasurer. Next annual convention at Chicago, June 25-27, 1912.

THE BURPEE BIRTHDAY.—W. Atlee Burpee and his son David celebrated their birthday April 5.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, April 10, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $8 to $14.50 per 100 pounds.

A. J. BROWN, of Grand Rapids, Mich., attributes the present unusual demand for onion seed to the fact that onions are now selling at the highest price known since 1885.

PRESIDENT LEONARD H. VAUGHAN, of the American Seed Trade Association, who has been confined to his home with scarlet fever since April 1, is reported progressing favorably.

MARSHALL H. DURYEA, of the Nungesser-Dickinson Seed Co., elsewhere on this page, urges all New York state seedsmen to write Governor Dix with reference to the Wilson Pure Seed Bill, now before the governor for consideration, and everyone should comply.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—James Vick's Sons write that though Rochester may not be the coldest spot it will stand toward the head and considering weather conditions the sales have held up surprisingly well. The ground is now frozen three and a half to four feet deep, with snow in shady places, and such conditions are not conducive to early sales, yet we are not so far behind but that a good run of sales in April and May will bring the total up to last year.

J. C. VAUGHAN (democrat) will again have James R. Mann (republican) for his opponent in the fall election of representative for the Second Illinois Congressional District, the latter having defeated the other republican candidate in the primaries April 9. This district is one of the largest and most densely populated in the country, including some of Chicago's greatest industrial enterprises and considerable residential territory. At the last election Mr. Vaughan reduced Mann's previous majority by some 17,000, losing only by about 1,400 votes. With the city and county offices at Chicago under democratic instead of republican control Mr. Vaughan's chances are improved.

New York Seed Bill.

A New York state seed bill, known as the Wilson Pure Seed Bill (No. 1455—1920 Int. 1265) introduced in the assembly March 7, 1912: "An act to amend the agricultural law in relation to inspection and sale of seeds," has passed in the assembly and senate, and is now before the governor for his consideration. I would particularly call attention to the following passage on page 2, line 13: "Containing in excess three per centum by count of foul and foreign seeds."

My principal objection to the bill in its present form is the word "count," for which the word "weight" should be substituted, as the method provided in the bill has been found to be impractical. The Department of Agriculture at Washington makes all its tests by weight, and furthermore, all state seed analysts throughout the country recommend that such tests should be made by weight and not by count.

As many seedsmen in New York state have their seeds tested by the department at Washington, all such tests would be useless under the proposed law, and dealers doing an interstate business would be seriously handicapped, as they would be obliged to make two tests, one by weight and one by count, because the results made by each test vary materially.

I believe if the dealers throughout the state would file their protest with Governor Dix, writing him especially along these lines, he might be induced to withhold his signature from the bill in its present form.

The Holland Outlook.

The following is an extract from a letter received from one who is thoroughly conversant with the conditions of bulbs and bulbous roots in Holland: "Spring is much earlier with us this year than anyone can remember. We now already have daffodils in full flower, and some of the early varieties of hyacinths are in bloom. What will be the result nobody can tell. We expect the cold north winds in March and April as usual, and are afraid that the tender plants will suffer a great deal. But so far we have had a very early season, and all the bulbous stock looks very well. There was some harm done by the heavy rainfall which we had in November and December of last year. We hope prices for tulips will advance for they are now sold at prices below cost of production, and prices for narcissus are advancing owing to increased demand and reduced stocks. Hyacinths will be about as at the end of the season last year.

"Gladioli are the favorites nowadays, and, as you have certainly found out in America (we think with Gladiolus Kunderdi "Glory,") some people are mad in Holland, and we talk here about gladiolus fever. Spiræas are planted out, but are not so plentiful as expected. The poor growing season of last year made a poor stock for making divisions. Peonies and all perennials are selling better than ever, in fact, there is a shortage in nearly every line of bulbs and bulbous roots."

Uncle Sam Guardian of Bean Growers.

That the Lima Bean Growers' association of California is to be operated in future in accordance with the advice of the legal heads of the United States government was the statement made recently by Charles Donlin, president of the association, and J. Waterman, its general manager, just prior to a conference between them and United States Attorney A. I. McCormick.

"If the government considers our organization as a monopoly in restraint of trade it shall be dissolved as it is operated at the present time," said Donlin. "On the other hand, if we find that we have not overstepped the law in our manipulations there will be no material change in our methods. We do not believe that the Sherman anti-trust law is being violated, but if it is we are just as anxious as any one else to effect a change."

California Seed Crops.

We have received the following telegram from a well known California seed grower, dated April 9: "More rain has fallen in the seed growing districts and crop prospects are greatly improved, a total to date of about 50 per cent of the normal rainfall. Sweet peas, probably, will be very short. All conditions from now on will have to be most favorable to make anywhere near an average crop. The recent Santa Cruz correspondence in another trade paper is very misleading as there is practically no seed grown in San Joaquin valley."

LYNN, MASS.—Thomas Roland of Nahant has offered a silver cup valued at $25 for the best display of sweet peas made by any school of Lynn or Nahant at the show of the National Sweet Pea Society of America to be held July 13-14, 1912.

Fertilizer Requirements in Greenhouses.

We believe the spring months are the most exacting in regard to plant food elements in greenhouse soils. This condition is brought about partly by the repeated cropping during the winter, partly by the increase of light and heat of the advancing season and lastly by the change of crops themselves. In order to produce anything at all in the winter months when soil activities are slow, an excess of manure is generally applied; and when the houses in late spring are planted to cucumbers and tomatoes, very often an unbalanced condition exists. To produce pollen and fruit properly, comparatively larger amounts of phosphates are required than for leaf growth only. The importance of correcting improper conditions cannot be overestimated. We have found that heavy applications of bonemeal to either cucumber or tomato plantings was very beneficial; a good way is to apply broadcast soon after the plants start into good growth—hoe in and a little later apply a mulch of coarse manure. Under such treatment the feeding roots will come near to the surface and get the full benefit out of the bonemeal. It is generally believed that manure acts chemically upon phosphoric elements. Growers who raise a late crop of leaf lettuce and find their product becomes too leafy and thin in warm weather, should try bonemeal or some other form of phosphate, as this element induces more solid growth. Sometimes, potash is the missing element; to determine this, it is a good plan to carry on constant experiments, trying small plots with different materials. Hardwood ashes are generally preferred for greenhouse use, but we find sulphate of potash admirable if carefully applied.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen
 J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O., President;
 W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass., Vice-
 President; John Hall, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
 Thirty-seventh annual convention to be held at Boston, Mass., June 12-14, 1912.

NEW YORK.—McHutchison & Co. are now receiving large consignments of nursery stock, raffia and bay trees.

STATFORD, CONN.—The F. E. Conine Nursery Co. has received a large consignment of imported nursery stock.

American Association of Nurserymen.

In the circular issued by Secretary John Hall, to the members of the American Association of Nurserymen of the preliminary arrangements for the annual convention to be held in Boston, June 12-14, some of the attractions of that city are enumerated and the points of interest to be visited by the members. While the programme is not yet complete, among the papers which will be read are those by Jackson Dawson, Jamaica Plain, Mass.; D. S. Lake, Shenandoah, Ia.; J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore., and W. C. Barry, Rochester, N. Y. A large attendance is expected, and the Northwest Horticulturist is authority for the statement that P. A. Dix, president of the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association, expects to have at least one Pullman carload of coast nurserymen for the convention.

Association of Park Superintendents.

The executive committee of the American Association of Park Superintendents at the meeting held in the Hotel Astor, New York, decided upon August 12-14 as the dates of the convention at Boston, Mass., and the Copley Square hotel was chosen as headquarters. The preliminary programme was adopted, which includes besides the business meetings at the morning and the reading of papers and the lectures at the evening sessions, a trip through the Boston Park System on the first day, to Arnold Arboretum and the country estates of Brookline, Newton and Wellesley the second day, and through Middlesex Fells, Revere Beach boulevard and North Shore drive to Beverly on the third day. Changes in the constitution and by-laws as regards the qualifications for membership and the date of the annual meeting were recommended.

You Can Be Independent on Five Acres of Land if You Grow Berries

With a hundred berry plants you can find health and enjoyment. With five acres you can be independent; with twice that you can become rich. High cost of living, health, enjoyment, recreation, independence—these are the problems berry growing solves.

Get My Invaluable Berry Book

I've studied living conditions for a good many years, while I produced berries of all kinds. The results are summed up in the one book of its kind published in America.

Here also is described, among many others, the Himalaya Berry, that perennial resembling blackberries, but bearing fruit on old and new wood like a fruit tree, with the value of apples for commercial growing. The vine is beautiful, climbing like a Rambler rose over your porch. Get the full details. The book is free. Send your address now, before you lose my address.

I Have Been Dubbed The Dahlia Crank

I do not dislike the title, for I have been informed that it signifies an ENTHUSIAST—and acknowledge that I am. I have carried on a systematic study and trial tests for many years, increasing the list with novelties from abroad and at home, discarding as well as adding—and have at present perhaps the largest list of varieties grown by any one person up-to-date. For want of ground, as well as advancing years I am willing to dispose of much of my stock having a surplus over actual needs. Send for my descriptive list and prices.
