[20 in the Troy Those]

In the year 18'3 the writer attende the district school at Coboes. The drig department di i not enjoy a very envi lde reputation for being possessed that respect day from the pupils t tacher. During the year there be been at least four teachers in the ge partment, the last one only remaining one week. The Bord of Ever tion had found it difficult to obtain pedamone to take charge of the school until a young man, slender as a May pole, six feet high in his stockings, of blied for the place. He was engaged a once, although having been proviously informed of the kind of timb r he would be oblige I to hew. Promptly at 9 delocated a m. every scholar was on band to well torge the man who said he would "cor mer the select or for cit his repute an." Having called the morning ses ion to order, he said that he had been engaged to take charge of the school. He came with his mind projudiced gainst the place. He had heard of the carment of the former teachers by the upils, yet he was not at all embarrassed or he felt that, with proper recognition of each other's rights, teacher and cholars could five together in harmony. He did not intend to threaten, but h intended to make the scholars obey him. fuel would try and win the good-will o ill present H had been engaged to take charge of that room, and he wished he co-operation of every pupil in so doing. He had no club, ruler or whip, but appealed directly to the hearts of every young man and young Laly in the com. Whatever he chould do, h. would at least show to the people of thi place that this school could be governed. is spoke thus an t feelingly at times. ct with perfect dignity be displayed hat sup-rior executive ability which, in fter years, made lim such a prominent nau. Of course the pupils, especially the boys, had heard fine words spoken before, and at once a little smile scemed to fit across the faces of the leading aprits in past rebe l'ons.

The work of the forenon began, when a fact of 13 placed a marble between his thank and finger, and, with a snap sont it rolling arross the floor. As the tall and bandsome young teacher say his act he rose from his seat, and, with but a word, walked toward the lad. "Get up, sir," he said. The lal looked at him to see if he was in carnest, the he cast his eye toward the large boys t s e if they were not going to take up his ofense. "Get up, sir," said the tah or a second time, and he took him by the collar of his jac tot as if to raise him the lad saw he had no common man to deal with and he rose from his seat. " Fellow me, sir," calmiy spoke the scher, and he led the way to the hall, while the boy be an to tremble wadering if the teach I was going to taleli m out and kill him. The primary lepartment was presided over by a sisger of the new teacher, and into this orn he led the young transgressor. Invalue to his sister, he ail: "I buy a pupil for you; select a seat for him and let him remain here. If he makes by disturbance whatever inform me,' furning to the boy, he said: "Young man, mind your teacher, and do not dave your seat until I give you permision," and he was gone. The lad sa there, feeling very sheepish, and as disery lives company, it was not long before he was gratified to see the door on in and observe his cost-mate enter with the new teacher, who repeated the orders previously uttered, when he quietly and with dignity withdrew. The pumber was subseque itly increased to three, the teacher returning each time without a word to the other scholars concerning the disposition made of the refractory lads. The effect upon the rest of the school was remarkable. A no intimation of the disposition of the boys was given, not a shale of anger displayed on the countenance of the new teacher, nor any appearances of blood were noticeable upon his hands. speculation was rife as to what he had lone with the three chaps, He spoke kindly to all, smiled upon the scholars who did well in their classes, and seemed to inspire all present with the truth of his remarks uttered at the opening of aid of at least two dictionaries. the session. At recess the mystery that had enveloped the school was cleared away, for the three lals in the primary department wire seen as the rest of the scholars filed by the door. While all the rest enjoyed the recess the three lads were obliged to reman in their seats, and, when school was dismissed for the forepoon, the new beacher en-

ANTELOPE VALLEY ITEMS

During our visit to Antelope Valley, on . Monday last, by invitation we visited the Antelope School, Miss Lizzie Armstrong, teacher, and, accompanied by Trustee Barnett, passed an hour and a half very pleasantly. As the pupils were not expecting distinguished visitors the manner in which they responded to the numerous questions was very creditable to their fair teacher. In object teaching, Miss Armstrong exhibited a class of little toddlings, who were remarkably prompt and correct in their responses, showing that the young lady had been very thorough in her teachings. In geography. arithmetic, history and grammar the older scholars exhibited a thoroughness of drill on the part of Miss Armstrong that showed she is not a supertol to give him, but, upon a short deten- tions instructress. Possibilities of Cotton Production.

It may be well to remark at the outset that the production of cotton in the South/is practically without limit. It was 1830 b fore the American cropreached 1,000,000 bales, and the highest point over reached in the days of slav ery was a trifle over 4,560,000 bal. a The crop of 1880 81 is about 2,000,000 in excess of this, and there are those who believe that a crop of 8,000,000 takes is among the certainties of the next few years. The heavy increase is he cotton crop is due entirely to the increase of cotton acreage brought about by the use of fertilizers. Mil ions of acres of land, formerly thought to be beyond the possible limit of the cotton belt, have been made the best of otton lands by being artificially enached. In North Cacolina alone the init of cotton production has been moved twenty miles northward and twenty miles westward, and the half of leorgia on which no cotton was grown wenty years ago now produces fully haif the crop of the State. The "area of low production" as the Atlantic States are brought to the front by artiieral stimulation is moving westward, and is how central in Alabama and Florida. But the increase in acreage, aarge as it is, will be but a small factor n the increase of production, compared to the jufeusitying of the land now in c. Under the present loose system of hantings the average yield is only one ale to three acres. This could be easily increased to a bale an acre. In orgia five bales have been raised on e acre, and a yield of three bales to he acre is credited to several localities. restlent Morehead, of the Mississipp alley Cotton Planters! Association ays that the entire cotton grop of the sent year might have been easily s d in fourteen counties along the besis ppi river. It will be seen. herefore, that the capacity of the onth to produce cotton is practically aitless, and, when we consid r the normous demand for cotton goods now ening up from new climes and peoture will see crops compared to which be crop of the past year, worth $3:0.00,000, will seem small.—Henry IV. Grady, in Harper's Magazine.

Host and Guest in England. The universal deference paid to a luties as well as social pleasures far le-s onerous than they are with us. In is a double slavery. The host has the om-out and amusement of his guest so painfully at heart that he often becomes his officious slave for the time being while the guest, unable to refuse his nost's continual and pressing offers of indis-criminate kindness, becomes in turn the slave to his host's notions of amusement. He has either to blindly follow it his host's programme, or has to rack his own brain to furnish the latter with opportunities to show him atten-tion. The typical American entertainer Would you not like to, etc., etc., to-lay?" are the standard breakfast-table puestions. In England hosts let their mests do just what they please. 1888. Harper's Magazine Illustrated.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE, begins its sixty-sixth volume with the December Number. It is not only the most popular illustrated periodical in America and England, but also the largest in its scheme, the most beautiful in its appearance, and the best magazine for the home. A new novel, entitled "For the Major," by Constance Fenimore Woolson, the author of "Anne," was begun in the November Number. In literary and and artistic excellence the Magazine improves with each successive number. Special eforts have been made for the lighter entertainment of its readers through humerous stories, sketches, etc.

How a Rebel Major Got His Pardon.

A few days after the war had been declared at an end, Maj. Drewry went to Washington, and without the usual ceremony of sending in his name, lest he should be refused an interview, made his way into the presence of Secretary Stauton. "Mr. Secretary," said he, "I want my pardon as soon as possible. I've fought against you as long as I've fought against go to work. I've fot lundreds of acres of land that have been lying fallow for the last four years, and I want to get seed into every inch of it this spring, so I'll thank you to save me my parlon and let me go." He taked so fast that Mr. Stanton couldn't get like word; but, being amused and mather pleased by Maj. Drewry's bluff manner, be asked at last, "On what ground do you expect to get a pardon, sir?" "On the ground, sir, that I showed you how to build a navy. How Long We Are to Live. It is not every one who asks himself that question, because, strangely enough, it is the belief of many persons that their lives will be exceptionally lengthy. However, life insurance companies are a wire of the credulous weakness of those whose lives they assure, and have, therefore, compiled numerous tables of expetancy of life for their own guidance, which are carefully referred to before a policy is granted. The following is one of those well-intenticated tables in une spong London assurance companies. spong London assurance compania, showing the length of life at various ages. In the first place we have the present age of persons of average health, and in the second column we are enabled to peep, as it were, behind the scenes of an assurance office, and gather from their tible the number of years they will give us to live. This table habeen the result of careful calculations that seldom proves misleading. Of course, sauden and premaure deaths, es will as lives unusually extended, oc-ces onally occur, but this lies table of average expectancy of life of an ordinary man and woman: A person I year old may expect to live thirty nine years longer; of 10 years, lifty-one; of 20 years, rdered charcoal) to a nursing-bottle ment the number of years to which their
