POETRY.

The Affections.

Precious are the kind affections
Which around this life entwine,
Making earth, with all its troubles,
Something more than half divine.
But alas! they fade and perish
Like the bright and fragrant flowers,
Sorrow blights, and death destroys them.
And their beauty time devours.

'Tis not so with those affections
That are set on heavenly things;
They will bloom and flourish ever;
Watered by eternal springs;
Warned by everlasting sunshine,
Sheltered from the storms of earth,
Ever growing and increasing,
Knowing nought of drought or earth.

The Prisoner's Child.

BY MRS. MARY DENNISON.

It was early morning.
'Is this the way to Sing Sing?'
'Yes,' replied a brown faced countryman, and passed on.

It was afternoon. The child was somewhat fragile in her appearance. Her bonnet was of broken straw; her shoes were much torn, the sun played on her tender forehead. She walked on an hour longer.

'Is this the way to Sing Sing?'
'Yes, little girl; but what are you going there for?'

The child trudged on, her lip quivering, not deigning to answer the pleasant-faced old man who had stopped the jogging of his horse to note her hurried manner, and who liked that little faced, anxious and sad as it was.

The day was falling. Kate had fallen too, almost. A rough stone that lay in the way, imbedded in moss, received her tired little frame. She looked so wearied and aged, sitting there, her tangled hair falling on the hands that were clasped over her face. By the shaking of her frame, the tears were coming, too, and she was bravely trying to hold them back.

'Why, what is this dear little girl doing here?'
The exclamation came from a pair of cager young lips.

'A curiosity, I declare!' exclaimed a harsher voice, and Katy looked up suddenly, covered away from the sight of the pretty young girl and her agreeable looking companion.

'What are you doing here little girl?'
asked Nell Maywood, moving a little nearer to the frightened child.

'Going to Sing Sing,' said Katy in a sacred way.

'Did you ever, George! this child is going to Sing Sing? why it's ten mile off.—Child did you know it was so far off?'

Katy shook her head and wiped away the hot and heavy tears one by one.
'Why, yes, you poor little goose. What are you going to Sing Sing for? Have you had your supper?'

Katy shook her head.

'Have you had any dinner?'

Again the sad child shook her head.

'Nor breakfast? Why, George, the poor little thing must be almost starved?'

'I should think so,' mechanically replied, her brother, just recovering from a yawn, and showing signs of sympathy.

'Look here! what is your name?'

'Katy.'

'Well, Katy, you must come up to the house and get something to eat. Going to Sing Sing on foot; dear me, how ridiculous. Follow me, Katy, and we'll take care of you to-night, somehow, and see about you're going to Sing Sing to-morrow.'

Katy followed. What a glorious vision burst upon her view! The palace house, the rocks reddening in a low western sun, the shining river, the signs of luxury on every hand.

They walked up a wide avenue. Elms and oaks threw their wide branches on each side; here and there a flower bunch might be seen; vines grew around the noble pillars, twisting up to the glittering windows.

'Susan, give this poor child a good supper; she is hungry and tired too, I imagine. After that I will see what can be done for her.'

Susan wore a mild face. She looked pleasantly down at the poor, tired little one and taking her hand, which trembled now, led her to the kitchen.

Meanwhile her story, or that brief part of it which we know, was being told in the drawing-room. The sylph like figure in white, lounging gracefully in the 'midst of delicate cushions, accompanied her narration with expressive gestures, and now and then a little laugh.

'I should like to know what she is going to Sing Sing for? I must get her something to wear—a bonnet, a pair of shoes—and then maybe we can manage to have her carried some way, if her mission is of any importance. Oh! what an odd looking thing.'

'Who is that, my daughter?'

'Oh, papa, you have come home. Why I was talking about the mite of a child;
she cannot be more than ten years old, if that. I saw her out here sitting on a moss rock, the most forlorn object. She says she is going to Sing Sing.'

'I met her on the way,' said the pleasant faced old man; 'she asked me about it, and I would have stopped her, but she trudged on. Where is she? It was noon when I saw her.'

'In the kitchen, papa. Susan is taking good care of her, I expect, and when she has had a hearty supper we will talk with her.'

A gay trio of young girls came. The nettings were put up, the gas burned brightly, and music and mirth banished all thought and care. Suddenly Nell Maywood remembered the little odd figure, and clapping her hands, cried, 'Oh, I've something to show you girls,' and disappeared.

Susan was picking gooseberries in the pantry in the kitchen.

'Where is the child Susan?' asked Nell Maywood.

'On the door step, Miss,' Susan replied picking away.

'Why no, Susan, there's nobody out there—nobody to be seen.'

'Yes, Miss,' Susan placed her pan down, held her apron up to catch the stems of the berries, and walked deliberately to the door. 'Why she sat here sometime after supper. I thought she was a very quiet child; but she's gone.
Let me see—there ain't any silver around —I should be afraid she'd took something; they are mighty artful.'

'Why didn't you tell her she might stay all night?' Nell Maywood was peeping here and there to spy her if possible.

'Yes, Miss Nell, and told her what a good bed there was over the wood shed, but she looked strange out of them large eyes of hers, and never seemed to hear.'

'The poor child is in trouble,' said Nell, quite sorrowful that she could not relieve her necessities. 'I'd have given her something to wear, and we could have sent her to Sing Sing, but perhaps she will come back again; if so send her to me.'

'If she does, I will, Miss,' answered
Susan, going to the gooseberries again.

But little Kate did not come back.
She had been watching her opportunity to get off, and had already been gone some time. She kept in the open field, crawled into some hay; she would have walked all night if she had dared, but she was afraid of the darkness.

'Mr. Warden, there's a queer case over at my house,' said a bluff looking fellow, meeting the Warden of Sing Sing prison.

'We found her last night in some out of the way place, and nothing must do but my wife must take her in. We can't find out her name, except that it is Katy, and I expect she wants to see somebody in the prison. But we can't get anything out of her, where she came from or anything about her.'

'Bring her over here,' said the warden.
'My wife is wanting a little girl for help, maybe she's just the one.'

So Katy stood trembling more than ever, in the presence of the warden and the jailor. Katy was a pretty child.
Her large blue eyes wore an expression of intense melancholy; her hair had been combed and curled, and some one had put a good pair of shoes on her feet.

'Well, my little girl,' said the warden kindly, for he was prepossessed in her favor, 'where have you come from?'

'New York,' said the child faintly.

The men looked at each other incredulously.

'Do you mean to say that you came to Sing Sing from New York on foot?'

'Yes, sir,' said the child, frightened at his manner, which had in it something of severity.

'What have you come for?'

'To see my father,' the child bust forth with one great sob, and for a moment her frame was shaken with a tempest of feeling.

'And who is your father?' asked the warden kindly.

'He is Mr. Loyd,' said the child, as soon as she could speak for the rushing sobs.

The warden looked at the jailor.

'Loyd—there are three Loyds here, Jim, Bondy and Dick.'

'That may not be their proper name,' responded the warden.

'That's so,' said the jailor, 'but I can try 'em all. 'Little one, was your father's name Jim?'

The child nodded her head, or they thought she did; she was all convulsed by the reaction brought on by the termination of her journey.'

'If it's Jim, he's a bad one,' said the jailor in a low voice, 'he is in irons this morning for attempting to break jail. He don't deserve a little girl as looks like that one, the villain: Come, child, I'll go and find your father.'

He took Katy's shaking hand; with the other he dashed the tears away as fast as they fell. It frightened her almost into calmness to see the ponderous door at which the jailor applied the great key; and the stillness of the lone stone passages; the dimness thrown over all the constant succession of bare and black walls, was terrible to a sensitive mind like hers. How the heavy tread of the jailor, and the heavy tread of the warden behind, echoed through the gloom and space. It was in truth a great tomb through which they moved—a tomb in which were confined living hearts whose throbs could almost be heard in the awful stillness. On, on they went, now through this massive door, now through that passage way. Everything spoke of crime, fierce passions subdued and held in stern control; everything, from the grim face of the ferocious watch dog to the sentinels armed. Then they turned and went up stairs, the jailor holding the sacred bird close to his side with a tender clasp, the warden following. Another tramp and at last they came to a standstill. The jailor rapped at a cell door. Slowly a man with a harsh, hair covered face appeared.

'Here's your little girl come to see you,'
said the jailor.

'Little girl! you're green,' said the man in grim accents; 'I've no little girl or you wouldn't catch me here.'

'Father,' said the childish voice. It sounded so sweetly, so childish, in that terrible prison. But as the scowling face came closer to the bars, the child hid her head quickly in the jailor's arms, half sobbing; it wasn't him.

'We'll try the next one.' He walked further on, and spoke more pleasantly this time. 'Well, Blondy, here is little Katy, don't you want to see her?'

'Little Katy! there was a long pause.
'I had a Katy once—not a little Katy—I broke her heart—God pity me! Go on,
it can't be me.'

Again the sweet voice rang out 'Father.' The prisoner came up to the bars, a youthful face, framed with light, wavy hair; a face that seemed a sin to couple with a foul deed gazed out. He saw the child's earnest, pleading, tearful eyes; a dark expression roved like a wave across his brow, a groan, he staggered against his bed crying:

'Take her away; I can't stand the sight of anything like that!'

Katy had hidden her face a second time, as she freely cried, 'It isn't him!' so they kept on to the next cell.

'Jim, here's a little girl, little Katy, your daughter, wants to see you.'

A stupid 'what?' came from the bed;
the man probably just awakened.

There was a sound of rattling irons that made the child shiver. Dimly appeared the face and outlines of a well made man—the countenance handsome but evil. He seemed not to comprehend.
But as fast as his chains would permit him, he came forward and looked out at the anxious face below. It was almost too much for the child. With a loud convulsive cry, she exclaimed, 'Father!
father!' and fell nearly senseless, against the jailor.

'Katy!' exclaimed the man, and there was a nervous twitching about the muscles of the mouth. 'What in heaven's name brought you here?'

The jailor was recalling the child to consciousness.

'Shall we let her come in the cell?'

asked the warden.

Jim was dashing his hand across his face. A smothered 'yes' issued from his lips. They opened the ponderous door, and put her in. Her arms were outstretched; his were wide open, and they came together with a clanking sound about the form of that poor little child.

'Oh, father! 'O, Katy, Katy!' and then there was a quiet crying. By and by the man lifted the little head whose glossy curls were falling on his shoulders.

After a moment's irresolution he kissed her, and then his head fell under her earnest loving look. 'Katy, what made you come?'

'I wanted to see you, father,' and the head was on his shoulder again.

'How did you come, Katy? never mind the noise, they are looking up; they will be here again and let you out. How did you come, Katy?'

'I walked here.'

'From New York, child? Yes father.'

There was no sound save that of chains, as he strained her to his bosom. 'And how did you leave—her, Katy—your mother?'

The question was fearlessly asked but not responded to. He gazed eagerly into the child's face; her little lips were quivering. 'Katy tell me quick!'

'A groan, a terrible groan followed; the convict's head fell into the lap of his child, and he wept with strong cries.
The jailor and the warden said that they never saw a sight so woeful. And the child tried to comfort him, till his strength seemed to be gone, and his sobs were like gasps.

'O, Katy, when did she die? Oh, my poor May! my poor girl!'

'Ever so long ago, I guess ever so many weeks,' replied the child; but she told me to come and see you, and comfort you.

'O, God! this is hard! she always forgave me.'

'She told me to pray for you, too; she told me to ask you if you would be real good after you came out, and meet her in heaven?'

'In heaven! in heaven' groaned the man, giving away again to his agony.
The child was angel guide. Her soft touch was better for his soul's good, than stripes and chains. He had been hardened; her little love had melted the adamant; had found the locked up good in his nature, and she had sent her sweet smiles through the prison door. Long he sat there, his head in the lap of his beautiful quiet child. None dared disturb them. The jailor and the warden walked to and fro.

'Father, when you come out I'll take care of you.'

He raised his head, his eyes red with weeping, were fastened on her face.

'Mother said I might.'

'God's blessings on you, my angel child, you may save your miserable father.'

'I will save you father.'

'The warden cleared his throat, the jailor spoke roughly to one of his prisoners; it was to hide their emotion. 'You had better come now,' he added, going to the child.

'Katy, you must go; will you come again, my child?'

'Can't I stay? 'No, dear, but you shall come and see me again.'

They took her very gently away from the dark cell; she sobbed very quietly.

Reader, ten miles from Sing Sing, there is a little cottage occupied by a laborer man and his daughter. Little Katy is fulfilling the commands of her dying mother. She is taking care of her father, and he, thank God, is taking care of himself.

The Weather and the Prospects.

There is no rule known to us by which we can judge with any certainty as to the quantity of water which will fall in the next four or five months, but the latter part of last week and the first part of this is certainly a prosperous beginning, and so much like the commencement of the wet season of '52 that we feel inclined to predict a very wet winter and run the risk of being charged with expecting it because we desire it. We certainly do desire it, because this particular section of the country, Cache Creek Valley requires it. The three or four past years have been so dry here, that there is no visible moisture in the ground until you descend upon a level with the water in the Sacramento river, and nothing less than a thorough saturation of the earth will suffice to raise a crop of either grain or grass with the present system of farming.

We believe, however, that the system of farming will be greatly improved so much so that it will be found that less rain will suffice for a crop than has generally been supposed—one we will venture to suggest; which is, to break the ground you design to seed as late in the Spring as it is safe to delay it. The dry weather sitting in so soon after the ground is broken will not permit any growth of vegetation that season, and as there is no heavy rains late in the Spring this ground remains in the same condition as when broke loose and mellow, and in a condition to receive the seed at any time before the Fall rains come. The grain being thus put in the ground before the rain falls, all sprouts at once, grows up evenly and takes deep root before the ground can even be broke if you wait until Fall to prepare the ground for seed. The winter here is emphatically the growing season and grain sowed upon fallow land well prepared before the Fall rains set in must, we think so far mature before the dry hot weather of Spring comes upon it that a crop of grain will be had.

By observing this plan in the culture of the cereal grains the farmer could not of course grow grain upon all his land the same year, but we think he would be none the loser by that. For it requires less seed for a part than for the whole farm, it costs less to reap a part than it does the whole, and it costs no more to thrash a thousand bushels of grain grown upon fifty acres of land than if it had grown upon an hundred acres. Besides he can avail himself of the benefit of fine pastures for stock upon what he now calls a volunteer crop until the proper time arrives to plow it up in the Spring for seeding in the Fall. Thus his land instead of being exhausted by a succession of crops is constantly recuperating.

The Lectures.

Rev. Mr. Bradbury entertained a small audience at the school house in this place, on Monday and Tuesday evenings last, with a Lecture upon "Language," with the view of getting up a class to whom he would deliver a course of lectures upon the English Grammar. We fear that parents and guardians do not attach sufficient importance to this branch of education when fitting their children and wards for the duties of life.

Rev. Mr. Bradbury will visit our place again about the first of December, when we hope to see the gentlemen of our town and vicinity respond favorably to his proposition to deliver a course of eight lectures for forty dollars.

It is our sorrowful duty to record the death of the only child of Mrs. Thrift, a beautiful boy of some five summers. He was cherished by all who knew him, as a kind and obedient child, he was adorned with an exceeding kindness of heart which endeared him to those bereaved friends who will long mourn his untimely death. We deeply sympathize with the bereaved mother for the loss she has sustained in the demise of her "only child." May he rest in peace.

DELINQUENT TAX LIST.—In our next number, we will publish the Delinquent Tax List of this County.

Lyceum.

Why is it that there is no Lyceum in this place? Those long evenings have suggested this question to our minds, and we only wonder that each man in the place has not asked his neighbor the same question—we take this occasion to ask one and all why have we not a Lyceum? Will it not pay? Perhaps not in dollars and cents. But, is the acquisition of money the culminating point of your ambition—have you no desire for mental improvement? If you have not you should have, and we know of no better plan to create that desire, and to stimulate it to action after it is created, than a connexion with a well conducted Lyceum supplied with a good Library, such a Library as could be procured at a small cost compared with the great good to be accomplished. Such institutions do not only serve their founders and cotemporaries, but those who come after us, can drink at the same fountain—gather fruit from the same trees, the same pages that contribute mental food to us will feed and strengthen their minds. The boys who are now around us will soon be men; if none but evil influences surround them in youth, but little good can be expected of them in after life, and if we do not open to them the avenues of knowledge and make it attractive with such appliances as a Lyceum or Library Association would present, they will not be likely to seek it of their own accord, and hence will not be fit to assume the weighty responsibilities that attach to all good citizens of this enlightened land and age.

IMPROVEMENTS.—It is gratifying to us indeed, to see how business is thriving in our little town. We see that some of our enterprising townsmen have already commenced building. Messrs. Bixler, Provo, and others, are erecting several fine dwelling houses, when completed, will be quite an addition to our small but prosperous village.

DRAWN OFF.—The California Stage Company have drawn off their line of tri-weekly stages from Sacramento via this place to Colusa. We learn that the mail will be carried once a week hereafter in a smaller vehicle. It is a burning shame that we have no better mail facilities here than is afforded by a weekly mail—more at another time upon this latter subject.

The Marysville Democrat of last Sunday, states that the splendid new iron tubular bridge, across the Yuba river, at Park's bar, was swept down stream, on Saturday morning, by the high water. The center settled down, and one end of the bridge slid off from the bank.

That venerable individual the "oldest inhabitant" authorizes us to say that the Sacramento river was never so high before on the ninth day of November, it having rose about eight feet since the rain began.

LIST OF LETTERS.—Next week we will publish the list of letters remaining in the Post-Office at this place, and continue to publish them once every six weeks.

Robert Lindsey and wife, ministers of the Society of Friends or Quakers, are holding forth to the good "people" of Sacramento.

TRAPPING.—Charles McClure, of Eastman's, has succeeded in trapping six bears within the last month—one grizzly, three black, and two brown.

DEATH OF MR. MASON.—By dispatches received from the overland mail. We regret to hear of the demise of Mr. Mason, the United States Minister to France, it will cause a deep feeling of sorrow among all who knew him in his public and private career.

A PROLIFIC SOW.—Rumor says that Mr. C. Ward, of Poulney, Vt., owns a sow which, within less than a year, has produced 54 pigs. She had three litters as follows: April 16, 1858, 22; September 11, 1858, 12; March 25, 1859, 20. Can any of our Western breeders beat this?

The amount of treasure shipped by the Golden Age of November 5th, amounted to $1,721,579 95.

BEE RAISING.—The Stockton Republican tells of one man, in that vicinity, who commenced two years ago with five hives, and who since that period has sold $10,000 worth. In that city alone he has sold thirty-five hives, from which he realized $3,500. It is seldom that the most fortunate miner strikes a better paying lead. We have heard of a dozen individuals in the State who have met similar good fortune, some with still better. It cannot be expected that this description of enterprise will continue to prove as profitable as it has been, though we should judge that it would be a long time before it ceases to pay well, as swarms cannot be imported from the east as cheap as they can be purchased here. There is a heavy loss of numbers attending their transportation across the Isthmus, and even if all are safely landed in California, the cost of bringing them hither is very great.

James S. Jamieson, late Clerk of the County Court, under J. Dayton, left last Saturday on the steamer Golden Age, for the East, having abandoned his family and left several creditors behind, but from a letter written by him to Frank Denver he thinks he has left enough to settle all his debts. The reason of the sudden departure, is divulged, it appearing that his principal, Jerry Dayton, late County Clerk. Mr. Dayton was investigating matters Tuesday, and discovered that he had collected in the Probate Court (of which he was clerk) upwards of $1,800, of which he rendered no return. He had received such amount as fees, credited them on the docket, but neglected to enter the same on the cash book. Inasmuch as Mr. Dayton seldom referred to the docket, having implicit confidence in Jameson, the defalcation was not sooner discovered. We have mentioned (says the Union,) that he had some $14,000 worth of county bonds belonging to Elijah Conklin, former Deputy under A. C. Hunter, County Clerk. It is presumed that he disposed of said bonds at San Francisco, either on the day of or the day before the sailing of the steamer, a sale of $12,000 worth of the bonds at fifty-three cents being chronicled in one of the Bay papers about that date.

FOUND DEAD.—We find in the Bee's dispatch of Wednesday, the following: L. E. Boren, clerk in the Indian Agency, San Francisco, was found dead on the sidewalk this morning in front of the California Hotel. It is supposed that he jumped in his sleep out of his bed room window in the second story. This, we presume, says the Bee, is the Boren who was long a resident of this city, and was well known here, having been a clerk in Rhodes' Bank.

SOLD.—Davis & Jordan, of San Francisco, has sold the steamer Santa Cruz, to Sanesvaine Brothers, the Wine Growers.

DISTINGUISHED DEPARTURE.—The following account of the final departure of the Honorable J. G. Stebbins, ex-State Senator, is from the S. F. Telegram:

Our merchants are the victims of a species of fraud, which develops itself on the departure of almost every steamer, in the flitting of parties who have contracted debts, converted the property into money, and have then availed themselves of the opportunity of leaving with their ill gotten means. A case of this kind occurred, which came to our knowledge to-day, possesses some interest, from the name and position of the party implicated. James G. Stebbins, formerly a State Senator from Yuba county, and always noted as a politician, was seen by Capt. Lees, of the police department, on his way to the steamer, who casually mentioned it to his friends, Messrs. Moses Ellis & Co., of Front street, who were his creditors to the amount of $1,200. They immediately got out the necessary papers, and Chief Burke immediately put the matter in the hands of Lees, Johnson and Chappelle, who followed the gentlemen to the Orizaba, after she got into the stream, and were so earnest in their attentions to Mr. Stebbins, that he thought it better to fork over than to be brought ashore. This case is the less excusable, as it is generally believed that this man has amassed a small fortune in California in usury, trading, etc., which last embraces, of course, politics. He left with his family and friends, bidding an eternal farewell to California, to which intention we most heartily say Amen.

ORLEANS HOTEL.—We learn by the Sacramento papers, that the entire furniture of the Orleans Hotel was sold about 11 o'clock on Wednesday morning by the Sheriff, C. H. Grimm acting as auctioneer. The entire proceeds of the sale was about sufficient to cover the first attachment, amounting to about $1,100. Several parties who held chattel mortgages on their investments bid, successfully, $1 on their respective claims, the property involved being sold subject to such mortgages. The crockery, cutlery and glassware was sold for $240; a billiard table that cost $550 for $360. The liquors were virtually peddled out. Mr. George Newcomb is now in possession, and will re-open the house on Monday next. J. C. Keenan, it is said, has made arrangements to conduct the bar.

Roger A. Prior, editor of the Richmond (Va.) Enquirer, and well known throughout the Union, received by acclamation the nomination for Congressman in the Fourth District of Va.

SUMMONS.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, County of Yolo.
The People of the State of California, to GEORGE W. TRADWAY, greeting: You are hereby summoned to appear before the undersigned, at his office, at Knight's Landing, on Friday, the 9th day of December, 1859, at 10 o'clock, a.m., to answer unto the complaint of J. J. RACKERBY, who sues to recover the sum of $80, when judgment will be taken against you for the above amount, with costs and damages, if you fail to appear and answer. To the Sheriff or any Constable of said County: Make due service and return hereof. Given under my hand this 11th day of November, 1859.

(Signed.) P. GIBSON, Justice of the Peace.
It appearing to my satisfaction that a cause of action exists in favor of the above named Plaintiff, and against the above named defendant, and that the above named defendant has left his usual place of abode, and conceals himself to avoid the service of summons, and after due diligence cannot be found within the State of California; Now, therefore, it is ordered, that service of summons be made by publication of the same in the KNIGHT'S LANDING NEWS, a weekly newspaper, published at Knight's Landing; for the space of four weeks, and that said defendant is required to answer in this case on or before the 9th day of December, A. D. 1859 at 10 o'clock A. M., at my office, at Knight's Landing, Cache Creek Township, Yolo County, California. Given under my hand this 11th day of November, A. D. 1859.
(signed) P. GIBSON, Justice of the Peace.
I hereby certify the foregoing to be a true copy of the original summons and order of publication.
O. P. ALEXANDER, Constable.

James Farley, a native of Ireland, was killed on Saturday week by the caving of his claim at La Porte, Sierra county.

An old man, 61 years of age, by the name of Morse, was killed on Friday last, at Bensonville, near Columbia, by the falling of a large rock upon him.

A correspondent of the Boston Journal proposes the name of Hon. Amos Kendall as a candidate for President of the United States.

REWARD OF HONESTY.—We take the following from the St. Louis Republican:

Johnny Moore is the name of a bright eyed, jolly-faced lad, twelve or fourteen years of age, whose invalid and widowed mother, living on Morgan st., he helps to support by the sale of newspapers, and by such errands and small jobs as he may choose to fall in with. Johnny, who is the hero of the pleasant and truthful incident we are about to record, is extremely neat in his attire, though his clothes have not always been of the best, and may have shown in sundry patches and mended rents, the result of both poverty and frugal care. In short, Johnny is just such a boy as we used to "read about in Sunday School books." Yesterday morning, bright and early, he was trudging along Broadway, between Franklin avenue and Washington street, when he chanced to stumble against a large pocket book, which he picked up and found to contain a large number of bank notes and papers. While he was meditating on the sudden riches he had amassed, and which he had slid into a capacious pocket, or perhaps racking his youthful mind whether to seek for the owner or conceal his good fortune, a gentleman rushed by him in an anxious, hurried, nervous manner, which convinced the boy that he was looking for something, and he thought he knew what.

"Have you lost anything?" asked Johnny.

"Yes; my pocket-book," was the gentleman's answer; "have you seen it?"

The little fellow "expected" he had; he didn't know, though. What kind of a pocket-book was it?

This led to an adjournment to a neighboring store, where the flushed and almost breathless individual "of the first part" proceeded to say that the pocket-book was a large black one, containing $1,200 in bank bills and some accounts, a strip of red morocco binding underneath the flap, being inscribed, "Robert Thomas, Covington, Ky." The description tallied, and Johnny's eyes snapped with cheerfulness as he placed the treasure, just as he had found it, into the stranger's hand; and weepingly there was greater joy in that one act than $10,000 could have purchased at the expense of a guilty conscience.

Mr. Thomas hardly seemed to know which to feel most—relief on the recovery of his money and papers, or gratitude to the lad and admiration of his honesty. Taking Johnny by the hand, whose bounding heart, (he knew not why,) had by this time "splashed tears into his eyes," the gentleman took him to a clothing store and dressed him out, from top to toe, in a brand new suit. Then proceeding to a jewelry store, he purchased a good silver watch, upon which he directed to be engraved these words: "Robert Thomas to Little Johnny Moore, St. Louis, September 3, 1859. Honesty is the best policy." Not even content with this, the generous stranger placed in a neat bead purse five $20 gold pieces which he directed the lad to give his mother.

We shall not attempt to portray the emotions of the boy. If his quivering lips and choked utterance, and the smile that strove so hard to get through the watery globes that trembled in his eyes, failed to tell what was going on in his heart.

THE KNIGHT'S LANDING NEWS.

THE BLIND BRIDE.—The following poem derives its origin from a romance of real life. A young lady of great beauty and accomplishment was suddenly deprived, by an inflammation of the sense of sight. Nevertheless, instead of sinking, under so heavy a dispensation, into listlessness and melancholy, with an admirable spirit she retained her cheerfulness, and continued all her former pursuits, as far as the privation would allow. She continued to play, sing, dance, walk and even ride out on horseback—preserving a bright mind amidst her darkness, and a happy countenance. Soon afterwards a gentleman returned from abroad, who had been the companion of her childhood, and her lover in his boyhood. Touched by the noble spirit with which she bore her calamity, and still retaining his old attachment to her, he offered her his heart and hand for her acceptance—in spite of the urgent counsel of his friends, and even the remonstrances of the lady herself. But he remained firm to his purpose; and the verses were composed, as if addressed by him to his blind bride:

Thou seest me not, my own dear bride; Yet bright thy smile, my Esperance, As when we sported side by side, Or mingled in our playmates' dance— Thy step, as then, is light and free. Thy spirit firm and fearless still; Such powers abide in constancy, Of faith, and hope, and steadfast will. I loved thee then, my heart's first joy— I love thee now, and ten fold more, Than when the saddened stripling boy Left thee—his home—and native shore. One lingering gaze behind I cast! Thy young eye watched me from the hill: Oh, had I dreamed that look thy last! But here thou art, and dearer still. Thy mind's a kingdom all my own, And, like the lark in morning air, Thy playful voice, with minstrel tone, Can charm away my every care. The peace which pure, high thoughts impart, The scents, the sounds of jocund earth, Are thine—and more than all, a heart That beats for thee and feels thy worth. What though alike unmarked by thee, The moonbeam and the noontide ray, Thy mind, and heart, and converse free, Turn gloom to joy, and night to day, Then cheer thee love; where'er we go, My step, my thought, shall wait on thine; Thy spirit, tried in weal and woe, My Esperance, shall strengthen mine!

A wag entered a store in London, a few years ago, which had for its signs babboons, and addressing himself to the proprietor, said: 'I wish to see your partner.' 'I have no partner, sir.' 'I beg your pardon, sir. Hope you'll excuse the mistake.' 'Oh, no harm done, sir, but what made you think there was two of us?' 'Your sign—the two babboons!' A titer from ladies in the store—wag bolts in double quick time—babboon leaps the counter and takes after him—no go; wag too far ahead.

As a historical "personality," it is related that a young prince of the illustrious House of Monaco was asked why he had married a rich old woman. "Ma foi," was the gay young Prince's reply, "let me ask you what poor man in a hurry to get an enormous bank note cashed troubles himself to look at the date of it?"

The daughter of the proprietor of a coal mine in Pennsylvania was inquisitive as to the nature of hell, upon which her father represented it to be a large gulf of fire, of most prodigious extent. "Pa," said she, "couldn't you get the Devil to buy his coal of you?"

A negro girl at Ghent, Ky., painted herself and attempted to cross by the ferry to Indiana. The novelty of the steamboat attracted her attention and exposed her ignorance. Suspicion was excited and she was returned to her "old Kentucky home."

An exchange declares "that Rarey" the horse-tamer, has a rival in a young lady of Westchester county, who has recently been exercising her wonderful powers on vicious horses with great success.

"I can't bear children," said Miss Prim, disdainfully. Mrs. Partington looked over her spectacles mildly before she replied: "Perhaps if you could you would like them better."

AN HONEST GIRL.—A young and beautiful, but poor widow, was about to marry an old, rich widower. Her friends wished to know what she was about to marry him for? She feelingly replied, "Pure love—I love the ground (meaning the farm, probably,) on which he walks, and the very house in which he lives." There is platonic love for you. There is none of your school-girl foolishness in that.

A wit having been asked by another person whether he would lend a certain friend of theirs money, said, "What! lend him money? You might give him an emetic, and he wouldn't return it."

An ark is now being built by a man at Shields, in anticipation of the next flood—of tears, shed by his wife when he refuses to buy her a new gown. He thinks he can weather the storm.

Mrs. Smith, a poor woman just returned from America to Cavan, was safely delivered of three children, a son and two daughters, on the 30th of August. Her husband is in humble circumstances, being a day laborer in the neighborhood of Cavan.

They have a new mode in Ohio, in the way of judging a man whether he is old enough to marry, to effect this, they look at his teeth. If they are sharp he is rejected.

Henry Neebken, a boatman, is under arrest in Albany for beating his wife because she would not return him five dollars which he paid her as satisfaction for a beating at Oswego.

In Pitt County, N. C., a few nights since, a boy 12 years of age entered the chamber of his employer, Mr. Van Buren Hopkins, and murdered him with an axe while he slept.

A servant girl fell from an attic window in Wheeling on Monday last, and though the height was forty feet she suffered little or no injury. She came like a parachute—hoops saved her.

HEAVIEST SPORTING WAGER ON RECORD.—Mr. Ten Broeck appears to be putting things through with a rush just now in England. Our London paper brings intelligence that he has made a bet of $100,000, $50,000 a side, with Sir Jos. Hawley, that his horse Umpire defeats Loiterer for the Derby of 1860. Mr. Ten Broeck purchased Loiterer when a yearling for $2,500, and afterwards sold him for $7,500, having won $5000 with him in a match in the meantime. He is half brother to the celebrated Saunterer, but beyond his undeniable high breeding and promising appearance, there is nothing in him to justify the high opinion entertained of his merits by his owner. Umpire has proven himself a first class horse. Sir Joseph Hawley is the most experienced as well as successful turfite in England. Last year he carried off the Derby with Beadsman, and this year with Musjid. In fact the "cherry jacket" is oftener seen in front in the more important races than the other, and if Mr. Ten Broeck out-generals the lucky baronet, he will have achieved a feat which no other sportsman in England has ever been able to accomplish. The enormous extent of the wager, together with the character of the horses engaged, will render the race the most interesting that has taken place on the English turf since Voltigeur, had to succumb to the Duchman, and the result will be looked for with equal anxiety on both sides of the Atlantic.

Thanksgiving Proclamation. STATE OF CALIFORNIA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT. In accordance with established usage, as the Chief Executive of the State, I hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the 24th inst., as a day of thanksgiving and prayer. It is understood that this day has been designated by nearly all our sister States in order that it may be a National Festival, in which the whole American people, as a united family, may supplicate the Throne of Almighty God for the preservation of that Union which has placed us amongst the freest and happiest of nations. And I do earnestly invoke the good people of this State, abstaining from all secular pursuits, to assemble in their respective places of worship, and with sincere and contrite hearts offer up thanks to the Supreme Ruler of the universe for the manifold blessings conferred upon us during the past year, and humbly and fervently supplicate Him that he will continue us a free, prosperous and united people. Witness my hand and the Great Seal of the State, at Sacramento, this 24 day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine. JOHN B. WELLER. Attest: FERNIS FORMAN, Secretary of State.
