While had just voted a ten per cent, tax on real estate for railroad prepués, and her example was noble and encouraging. The éclay of a year from the voting of the ordinace's the collection of the first installment, created a prospect of a year smeativity, and would engender disappointment. It was deemed advisable to make an appeal to the people of those parts of Mississippi on the higs of the road. Mr. Risss undertook the mission, but in its inclipiency was prestrated by shows, and forced to relinquish his design, its July, 1835, the sale by the city of two millions of dollars of its bonds inspired confidence that our credit would be good on every occasion. In November, 1832, contracts were entered into the holiding eighty-seven miles of read from the state time, and other engagements made to, the assume of two and a had millions, of which two millions had to be provided by credit.

In January, 1853, Mr. Risss resumed his connection with the Company. It was apparent that large sums would be needed to insert engagements. Mr. R. make besay advinces in times of great fassachal distress, and not without sacrifice. As considerable sums were still required, it was proposed to appoint Commentance in the confidence that is a defined in the research and in imposition. European war. The larget step can secreely form an adequate idea of his style from mere description. Mr. Thronksky has not a particle of oratorical and rhetori-cal eloquence. He is neither figurative, que expendies a second of the control of the conmaked from Johnsonian rotundity and twi-mor, and Addhomina grace and polish. It is, however, robust, forcible, strikingly intelli-gible, and the mast appropriate vehicle for the manily thoughts and reflections of the lec-turers. Mr. Tanksmax wields a power over his honerer which is the gift of gentius alone, in half a dozen sentence; he resuscitates the dead just, and citches the dry and lifeless akcision in the habitiments R was wontto over, fills us; the outlines completes the bowever, robust, forcible, strikingly intelligible, and the most appropriate vehicle for the massly thoughts and reflections of the lecturer. Mr. Takabasan wisides a power over his hearers which is the gift of gridus aloae, in half a dozen sentence, he resurces as a power over his hearers which is the gift of gridus aloae, in half a dozen sentence, he resurces is the dead past, and clothes the dry and lifeless akeleton in the habiliments K was wont to wear. Alls up the outlines, completes the form, and presents it as the living and breathing illustration of the type of a type gone ago. His intellect is a lenn-wholl in the form and possible; even Georgia may be fairly contented. The mostly mass of objects to which the fapplied and exhibits them condensed in form, but perfect even to minuteness. Nothing sands and exhibits them condensed in form, but perfect even to minuteness. Nothing sands a face are not minuteness. Nothing sands a face are not intuitions, and the prefere even to minuteness. Nothing sands a face are not minuteness. Nothing sands a face, truer, more luminous mad striking than the picture thus developed.
