The Story of Tracy Beaker was a television programme adapted from the book of the same name by Jacqueline Wilson. It ran on CBBC for five series, from 2002 to 2006 and also contained a feature length episode, Tracy Beaker's Movie of Me, broadcast in 2004, as well as a week of interactive episodes for Children in Need, entitled Tracy Beaker Parties with Pudsey which were also crossovers with other shows from CBBC. The episodes themselves intersperse live action with cartoon sequences drawn by Nick Sharratt depicting Tracy's inner thoughts and, from series 3 onwards, the thoughts of other characters. Initially these cartoons would often be followed by a more realistic interpretation of what happened, but this was discontinued after the first series. The theme song was written and performed by Keisha White. In March 2009, the BBC announced that actress Dani Harmer would reprise the role of Tracy Beaker in a new series consisting of 13 episodes in which she would become a carer at her former care home - this appears on TV as Tracy Beaker Returns. All of the five series have been released on DVD.

The Story of Tracy Beaker

The TV series has been praised for its depiction of children's lives and for its portrayal of challenging situations. However, it is also known for its controversial moments. For instance, Lily was almost being sacked, and Liam became homeless for a while. However, Tracy soon learns that the kids are more important to her than any job. Mike and the children on her last house have a fight resulting in Mike being injured. She saves him and later on finds out that he is part of the Dumping Ground.

Almost being sacked, Lily being seriously injured and Liam becoming homeless for a week. However, Tracy soon learns that the kids really need her. First, she appeared in a popular new care worker, Mel and Mike and the children, and then with the last show, Mike and Mike have a fight resulting in Mike being seriously injured. She saves him and later on finds him in the Dumping Ground.

“Selz Abbey” or “Seltz Abbey” is a former monastery and [[imperial abbey]] in [[Seltz]], formerly in [[Selz]]. "Selz" is the German spelling, "Seltz" the French.<ref>See [[Odilo of Cluny]]'s "Epitaph of Adelheid", chapter 20, in Sean Gilsdorf, "Queenship and Sanctity: The" Lives of Mathilda and the "Epitaph of Adelheid" (Catholic University of America Press, 2004). In January 992 it was granted royal "tutio" and immunity (the equivalent of the later "[[Reichsunmittelbarkeit]]) by [[Otto II, Holy Roman Emperor|Otto III]].</ref> DD Otto III, no. 79.<ref>
The abbey suffered from severe floods in 1307. A new abbey, and was rebuilt between 1307 and 1315.<ref>
The relics of Saint Adelheid, which apparently survived the floods, were moved to the church of Saint Stephen in Seltz. A daughter house of the abbey was founded at [Mermelberg creta in 1197, and was washed away by floods in 1465.</ref>

The abbey was eventually secularized in 1481 and the monks formed a college of [[Canon (priest)]]s operating as the [[chapters]] of Saint Stephen's church (a mile away from the abbey), retaining some of the privileges of the former foundation, although not all the possessions.

The chapter became [[Protestant]] in 1575 and was [[mediatization]] by the [[Elector Palatinate]]. Buildings of the abbey became monastic buildings were quarried from the beginning of the 17th century. The remaining building of the abbey became, except for one which had been used as a reformed academy for young nobles in 1576. The academy, but was closed in 1577 because the new elector was [[Lutheran]].

The Protestant chapter reverted to a canonry in 1684 after Seltz was annexed by France (in 1680) and the local population was reconverted to [[Roman Catholicism]]. It was dissolved by the [[bishop of Strasbourg]] with the approval by the king of France in 1692.

The Seltz parish of Seltz was dissolved during the rule of the [[National Convention]] (1792–95) and the Saintchurch of St Stephen church was burnt down by [[Austrian]] troops after the [[Battle of Seltz]] on 23 October 1793. But the Saint Stephen the church survived however, and the parish was re-created in 1801 in the time of the [[French Consulate in 1800]] The church was extensively rebuilt by the rule of the [[German Empire]] which had annexed Alsace in 1870 for the occasion of the anniversary of the death of the Empress Adelaide in 1899.

The church was almost destroyed during [[World War II]]. Restoration was completed in 1958.
