CRITICAL HEALTH MANPOWER SHORTAGE AREAS

Designations and Withdrawals

Section 329(b) of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by the Emergency Health Personnel Act Amendments of 1972 (Pub. L. 92-585), provides that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall designate those areas which he determines have critical health manpower shortages and thus would be areas eligible for assignment of National Health Service Corps personnel. On October 23, 1974, a list of areas was so designated in the Federal Register (39 FR. 37756)

The purpose of this notice is, first, to update the list of such areas by adding to such previously published list areas of the United States which the Secretary has now determined meet the criteria for such designation. Further, this notice sets forth and clarifies the procedures utilized by the Secretary in making such a designation. In addition, notice is also given that the designation of certain areas (specified separately below) as shortage areas will be withdrawn effective May 27, 1975.

With respect to the designation of areas, § 23.5(b) of the regulations governing the National Health Service Corps program (42 CFR Part 23) provides that in determining whether an area has a critical health manpower shortage the Secretary shall take into account, where applicable, the following factors:

(1) health resource statistics; (2) health status indicators; (3) accessibility of health care services in the community and the ability of the community to obtain those services on a timely basis; and (4) other socioeconomic, demographic, and environmental factors of community life affecting the ability to procure such services.

In applying the first and third of the above referred to factors, the Secretary adopted the specific measures listed below and requested the appropriate areawide comprehensive health planning agencies or State comprehensive health planning agencies to identify those areas within their respective jurisdictions which met or exceeded those measures:

(a) For critical medical shortage areas (physician and physician extenders): (1) If the area in question consists of a group of census tracts within a city it must have (i) a primary care physicianto-population ratio of less than 1 to 4.000. (ii) no neighborhood health center, (iii) no organized hospital outpatient department within 10 miles of the center of the area, and (iv) a primary care physicianto-population ratio of less than 1 to 3,000 within the entire county in which the shortage area is located; (2) If the area in question is a group of census tracts within a county (not located in a tracted city) it must have (i) a primary care physician-to-population ratio of less than 1 to 4,000, (ii) no neighborhood health center, (iii) no organized hospital outpatient department within 20 miles of the center of the area, and (iv) a primary care physician-to-population ratio of less than 1 to 3,000 within the entire county in which the shortage area is located; (3) If the area in question is made up of one or more minor civil divisions or census county divisions within an untracted county (or counties), it must have (i) a primary care physicianto-population ratio of less than 1 to 4,000 within the boundaries of the shortage area itself and (ii) a primary care physician-to-population ratio of less than 1 to 3,000 within the entire county in which the shortage area is located; (4) If the area in question is an entire county, it must have a primary care physician-topopulation ratio of less than 1 to 4,000.

In making the above determinations, primary care physicians are defined to include: (1) in metropolitan areas, physicians in general or family practice, internal medicine and pediatrics; and (2) in non-metropolitan areas, physicians in general or family practice, internal medicine, pediatrics, obstetrics and gynecology, and general surgery; provided, however, that those physicians spend 50 percent or more of their time in the practice of primary care. Further, interns, residents, and physicians employed by the Federal Government are not included in making such determinations.

(b) For critical dental shortage areas:

(A) If the area in question consists of an entire county, a minor civil division or a census county division or a group of census tracts within a county, the overall dentist-to-population ratio (including general and specialty practice dentists) in the county within which the area is located must be less than 1 to 5,000. (B) If the area in question consists of a group of census tracts within a city, the overall dentist-to-population ratio within that city must be less than 1 to 5,000.

In making the above determinations, only dentists spending 50 percent or more of their time giving direct patient care are counted and dentists employed by the Federal Government are not included.

After reviewing the areas identified by the health planning agencies, and also taking into account health status indicators as well as socioeconomic, demographic, and environmental factors affecting the community's ability to procure health services, the Secretary has designated the following areas (counties, or specified parts of counties) as having critical medical and/or dental shortages:

With respect to the withdrawal of designation of an area as a critical health manpower shortage area, § 23.5 (d) of the regulations governing the National Health Service Corps program (42 CFR Part 23) provides that the Secretary may withdraw such designation upon his determination that there has been a substantial change in the circumstances within the area upon which the previous designation was made. The determination having been made in each case either that there has been such a substantial change or that the previous designation was the result of the use of incorrect data concerning the circumstances in the area, 90 days after this publication the designation of the following areas (counties, or specified parts of counties) will be withdrawn:
