TRAVELS, GEOGRAPHY, &c.

Two vols. 8vo., with illustrations of interesting localities and costumes, a new Map of Germany, and Frontispieces in Oil Colours, by BAXTER, price 24s. cloth, lettered.

SKETCHES of GERMANY, and the GERMANS; with a Glance at Poland, Hungary, and Switzerland, in 1834, 1835, and 1836. By AN ENGLISHMAN, Resident in Germany.

* * This work comprises a full development of the present social and political state of Germany, gathered from a long residence at Vienna; including notices of its commercial relations and views, and the operation of the Prussian Commercial League. Also, a Tour from the German Ocean to the Baltic; from thence through Berlin to Warsaw, on to Silesia and Bohemia; and through the greater part of the Austrian Empire to the Adriatic; with a Voyage down the Danube, from Ulm into Hungary.

"All who desire to have an enlightened conductor to the almost innumerable places and objects of high interest contained within the wide circuit expressed in the title, whether the tour is to be in person or in spirit, ought to become intimately acquainted with it."—Monthly Review.

"We have found the whole exceedingly pleasing, even where the author goes over familiar ground, trodden by almost every visitor to Germany, such as her capital cities, baths, and rivers. On less frequented regions he is still more agreeable, and his touches more replete with novelty and intelligence."—Literary Gazette.

Fourth Edition, in one volume, revised, and illustrated by a Map of Ireland and a Chart of the Shannon, post 8vo. 12s.

A JOURNEY THROUGHOUT IRELAND, during the Spring, Summer, and Autumn of 1834. By HENRY D. INGLIS.

"The most striking, and the most valuable characteristic of this work is its strict honesty: we have often had to lament the difficulty of obtaining accurate information respecting the state of Ireland; most writers on this subject have yielded to the prejudices of party, if not to the extent of uttering falsehood, at least to the scarcely less culpable suppression of truth. We rejoice then to have before us the evidence of a traveller like Mr. Inglis, whose work bears in every page the stamp and impress of veracity."—Athenæum.

"Written in an honest and impartial spirit."—Edinburgh Review.

"Drawn by a careful and impartial man."—Times.

"He would refer to a passage in a recent work on Ireland, by Mr. Inglis, which he believed, was regarded by both sides as impartial."—Lord Stanley's Speech in the House of Commons, 2nd April.

Also, by Mr. INGLIS, new edition, post 8vo., with a Map, price 9s. cloth.

A PERSONAL NARRATIVE of a TOUR THROUGH NORWAY, SWEDEN, and DENMARK.

"This volume contains an animated description of the magnificent scenery of Norway."—Literary Gazette.

And also by the same, uniform with the foregoing, in 1 vol. price 10s. 6d. cloth.

A JOURNEY THROUGH the NORTHERN PROVINCES of FRANCE, the PYRENEES, and SWITZERLAND.

"The countries described in these volumes are rarely visited by ordinary tourists, and they are portrayed with all that graphic energy which so peculiarly distinguishes the author's writings."—Sunday Times.

Colonies of the British Empire,

AND EMBRACING THE

HISTORY—PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY—GEOLOGY—CLIMATE—ANIMAL, VEGETABLE, AND MINERAL KINGDOMS—GOVERNMENT—FINANCE—MILITARY DEFENCE—COMMERCE—SHIPPING—MONETARY SYSTEM—RELIGION—POPULATION, WHITE AND COLOURED—EDUCATION AND THE PRESS—EMIGRATION, SOCIAL STATE, &c. OF EACH SETTLEMENT.

Founded on Official and Public Documents, furnished by Government, the Hon. East India Company, &c.,

And dedicated, by express command, to the King.

By R. MONTGOMERY MARTIN, Esq., F.S.S.

* * Each volume is complete in itself, and is issued periodically, at intervals of not less than two months, and the whole work will not exceed 12 volumes, foolscap 8vo. Illustrated by original Maps and Frontispieces, and handsomely bound in cloth and lettered, price 6s. each volume.

"The Colonies of Britain are without a parallel in the History of the World. In each hemisphere, under every zone, and beneath various climes, one hundred and thirty millions of human beings are linked together in a Maritime Empire, on which the sun never sets, and over whose vast and fertile area all the blessings of civilization and Christianity are rapidly extending, diffusing light and life into every section of the habitable earth.

"To lay before the public, in a complete form and at a readily accessible price, the whole of these Colonies, separated by geographical distinctions, and yet connected by political institutions and commercial intercourse, is the object of the 'COLONIAL LIBRARY;' to which, each possession of magnitude or importance will have a separate volume devoted to its illustration in every possible point of view, so as to render the work one which will blend information with amusement, and instruction with profit.

"It remains only to be added, that the Author has spent one-third of his life, either as an officer in His Majesty's service, or as a private individual, exploring the Colonies of the British Empire; that since his return to Europe his stores of information have been enriched by official documents derived from the Colonial Office, the India-House, the Board of Trade, the Custom-House, &c., and by very many valuable private and semi-official communications from the various Companies connected with the Colonies, the Governors of each Settlement, and numerous Merchants interested in their welfare in London and Liverpool, as well as in the Colonies themselves."—Introduction.

ALGIERS, with NOTICES of the NEIGHBOURING STATES of BARBARY. By PERCEVAL BARTON LORD, M.D., M.R.C.S., of the Bombay Medical Establishment.

“It commences with an historical introduction, in which, after a glance at the antecedent history, the author takes up the transactions at the epoch of the irruption of the Saracens, bringing the history of the city of Algiers down to its capture by the French. The geography of the country is next treated. Mr. Lord then devotes a large space to an account of the inhabitants; each of the different races being the subject of a separate chapter. Then follow dissertations on the diseases and medical treatment, the natural history of the country, its topography, and on the French sway in Algiers, which, according to their own writers, is marked with glaring characters of tyranny and blood. The work embodies a considerable mass of information, gathered from various sources.”—Times.

“His graphic powers are of the highest order. A few lines from his pen place a country—a position—or a battle, in the boldest relief before the reader’s eyes.”—Sunday Times.

Fourth Edition, 2 vols. post 8vo., with 24 plates, 21s.

The DOMESTIC MANNERS OF THE AMERICANS. By Mrs. TROLLOPE, authoress of “Tremordyn Cliff,” &c.

“It must be every where admitted that her observations uniformly indicate a strong, active, well-informed mind, endowed with good sense, and no ordinary firmness. Her style is lively, elegant, and sometimes even poetically beautiful.”—Monthly Review.

BIOGRAPHY; HISTORY, &c.

In three thick 8vo. volumes, 2l. 2s. cloth lettered.

A GENERAL BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY, by JOHN GORTON. A new Edition, brought down to the present time.

“Mr. Gorton’s publication is altogether one of great excellence, calculated to be useful to a large number of students, and deserving extensive popularity. We may also mention that it is sufficiently large to contain every thing necessary, but not too extensive for the ordinary purposes of study, filling in this respect an open space in the fields of biographical literature.”—Athenæum.

An APPENDIX may be had to the FIRST EDITION, price 8s. sewed.

In 1 vol. 8vo. Illustrated with Portraits from Original Pictures, price 16s. cloth.

BIOGRAPHIA BOREALIS; or LIVES of DISTINGUISHED NORTHERNS. By HARTLEY COLERIDGE.

“In this Volume he has not only given us many very lively and well-stored narratives of the lives of eminent persons, but has contrived to interweave in them a series of literary and philosophical criticisms, which generally for their truth and delicacy, and always for their ingenuity and beauty, deserve, and will richly repay, the careful perusal of every man of letters.”—Quarterly Review of September, 1835.

Complete in 4 vols., illustrated by a Portrait and Views, 18mo., price 10s. cloth.

MEMOIRS of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, from the French of BOURRIENNE, Private Secretary to the Emperor. Translated by JOHN S. MEMES, LL.D.

“Bourrienne was the playmate of Napoleon in early life, his companion through his first campaigns, and his private secretary after he had reached the summit of power. He has made the best use of his opportunities, and has revealed to us more of Napoleon’s real character as a man, than any of the countless writers that have attempted his biography.”—Monthly Review.

“We know from the best political authority now living in England, that the writer’s accounts are perfectly corroborated by facts.”—Literary Gazette.

The HISTORY of ITALY; from the Fall of the Western Empire to the Commencement of the Wars of the French Revolution. By GEORGE PERCIVAL, Esq.

"For the elegance of its style, the generous tone of its sentiments, and, above all, for its faithful reference to original authorities, this work is certainly a valuable acquisition to our historical literature."—Monthly Review.

"The History of Italy fills up a blank long felt in our literature, in a way highly creditable to its author."—Literary Gazette.

In one vol. 12mo., price 6s. 6d. cloth,

The HISTORY of the OVERTHROW of the ROMAN EMPIRE, and the Formation of the principal European States. From original sources, Oriental and European, and comprising the latest elucidations of the Continental and English Antiquarians and Scholars. By W. C. TAYLOR, LL.D., M.R.A.S., & F.S.S.

"Unlike many of the cheap and abridged histories of the day, Dr. Taylor has given us one of sterling value and merit. Indeed it is but just to say, that while the histories of Gibbon and Sismondi are here found greatly condensed, they are also much enriched. The middle ages—a most important period in the history of the human mind, and of political institutions, here receive a philosophical and clear narrative, as well as a commentary which is absolutely beautiful. The author, therefore, has done more than labour for students in the higher classes of the academies: he has consulted original sources for himself, and conferred upon them historical value. His account of the last siege of Constantinople is a fine piece of writing, in point of literature, mind, and information."—Monthly Review.

The Third Edition. Royal 18mo., 6s. cloth.

MY TEN YEARS' IMPRISONMENT in ITALIAN and AUSTRIAN DUNGEONS. By SILVIO PELLICO. Translated by THOMAS ROSCOE.

"This little volume is the record of ten years' imprisonment suffered by Pellico—a person whose reputation as a man of literary taste is acknowledged in Italy; and whose privations and deep sorrows render him an object of interest to all who value liberty, and would not see it shorn of any of its beams in any land. Mr. Roscoe's preface is written with much spirit and freedom."—Sunday Herald.

In 12mo., price 4s. 6d. bound and lettered, and illustrated by three Maps.

A MANUAL of UNIVERSAL HISTORY and CHRONOLOGY. By H. H. WILSON, M.A., Boden Professor of Sanscrit, Oxford. For the use of Schools.

* * This work differs from those in ordinary use, by the insertion of more detailed notices than common of the leading occurrences of Asiatic History, and particularly of the history of India.

"A very useful work for schools, exceedingly well arranged, and sufficiently full to supply the key to universal history. It is ornamented with maps, which exhibit, by different coloured ink, the ancient and modern divisions of the earth's surface. The chronology at the end is extensive and useful, including the princes and dynasties of all nations. The learned professor has conferred a high benefit on education by his labours in this little work."—Sun.

In 12mo., a New Edition, corrected and amended, with a variety of Engravings, price 6s. bound and lettered.

An HISTORICAL EPITOME of the OLD and NEW TESTAMENTS, and PART of the APOCRYPHA; in which the Events are arranged in Chronological Order. By A MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

"There are very few in any class of the community whose biblical knowledge would not be refreshed, and even advanced, by an acquaintance with this historical epitome. It has our most hearty recommendation."—Monthly Review.

LÖWENSTEIN, KING of the FORESTS. A Tale. By the Author of "Two Years at Sea."

"This tale is a treat of the highest order. The gentle authoress leads us quietly, yet delightfully, through sylvan scenes, rich in all the majestic beauties of the German forest, and makes us acquainted with nature, simple, sweet, and enchanting. But though the surface is so pure and so unruffled, the under-current is strong, even impetuous. We see there that devotedness of love, that all-trustfulness of religion, which purifies every bosom."—Metropolitan Magazine.

A new Edition, illustrated by numerous Wood-cuts, in the highest style of the art, by BAXTER; in 3 vols. foolscap 8vo., bound, 24s.

OUR VILLAGE; Sketches of Rural Character and Scenery. By MARY RUSSELL MITFORD.

"Miss Mitford's elegant volumes are just in unison with the time; a gallery of pictures: landscapes, fresh, glowing, and entirely English: portraits, likenesses, we doubt not, all simply but sweetly coloured; in short, a book to make us forget the hurry, the bustle, the noise around, in the leaves, tall old trees, and rich meadows of her delightful village."—Literary Gazette.

In 3 vols. royal 18mo., embellished with Engravings, price 10s. 6d. half-bound and lettered.

The ENGLISH BOY at the CAPE: an Anglo-African Story. By the Author of "Keeper's Travels."

"The popular Author of 'Keeper's Travels' has here presented our young friends with another very agreeable story; indeed almost as much so as his first, which is so general a favourite."—United Service Gazette.

"This is a very interesting Robinson Crusoe sort of a tale, and would form a most suitable Christmas present to youth of both sexes. From it much more than mere amusement will be gained. The information it contains of the manners of the inhabitants, the topography, and other peculiarities of Southern Africa, is correct and valuable; and the moral that is throughout inculcated is not the least of its excellencies."—Metropolitan Magazine.

A new Edition, with several Illustrations, from Drawings by SCHETKY. 2 vols. post 8vo., 21s. cloth lettered.

"All his books have been excellent, but his last is best of all."

"I ca' him a Sea-Smollett."—Blackwood's Magazine.

"Glascock is unquestionably the Coryphæus in delineating the habits, manners, and even thoughts of the unsophisticated son of the sea, and the life and discipline of a man-of-war."—United Service Journal.

The RURAL MUSE. POEMS. By JOHN CLARE, the Northamptonshire Peasant: Author of "The Village Minstrel," "The Shepherd's Calendar," &c.

"It is with heartfelt pleasure that we take up a new volume of poems by John Clare. * * * We rejoice to find that the Rural Muse has been with him during his long retirement—that his fine sensibilities have suffered no abatement under the influence of time—and that although he says, 'ill health has almost rendered me incapable of doing any thing,' it has not in any degree weakened his mental powers or dulled his genius."—Blackwood's Magazine.

"The poet loves the country, and observes it with a lover's fondness: finding out and dwelling upon every beauty; now expatiating in their minute detail, and now clustering them together in their own wild profusion."—Literary Gazette.

"The translation of Baron Cuvier's inestimable work on the Animal Kingdom was undertaken with the intention of supplying the great and acknowledged want in English literature of any treatise on Zoology possessing even tolerable pretensions to completeness. While continental nations were rapidly enlarging the bounds of Natural Science, and minutely examining the details of its several departments, we continued to look on with apathy, though England possessed the greatest facilities for the cultivation of zoological knowledge, and the deepest interest in its advancement. The dawn of improvement commenced with the publication of the first part of this work, and has since gone on steadily increasing. The first object of the conductors of this great undertaking was to give a complete translation of the Baron's 'Regne Animal,' as close and accurate as the idioms of the two languages would admit; thus affording, for the first time, to their countrymen, a scientific synopsis of the varied living tribes that tenant earth, water, and air, arranged according to the laws of their conformation; they could not avoid perceiving that the low state of zoological science in England was owing to the prevalence of systems, in which arbitrary characters and accidental resemblances, instead of structure, were made the basis of classification, and they but followed the opinion of all the enlightened men in Europe, when they adopted a system founded mainly on organization, 'a system of zoology,' as Cuvier himself describes it, 'that may serve for an introduction and a guide in anatomical researches, and such a body of anatomy as may tend to develop and explain the zoological system.'

"Had their labours terminated here, the conductors of the work felt, that though they would have performed services of no inconsiderable magnitude to British science, still the sphere of their utility would be limited; for a mere catalogue of the divisions of the Animal Kingdom, however ably constructed, however valuable to the working zoologist and comparative anatomist, must, of necessity, seem dry and repulsive to the general reader. They, therefore, have added to the Baron's classification, a vast body of authentic information respecting the instincts, habits, &c. of animals, collected from the works of the most observant travellers, and the researches of the most eminent naturalists, conveyed in a popular form; containing, therefore, all the interest that belongs to treatises on the remarkable productions of nature, without any sacrifice of scientific accuracy. Their plans received the sanction of Baron Cuvier himself: a little before his lamented decease, he expressed his great satisfaction at seeing, from the portion of the work then published, that he was about to be introduced to the British nation under more favourable auspices than he could reasonably have anticipated."

Natural History and Gardening—continued.

A New Edition, with considerable Additions and Improvements, in 2 volumes, post 8vo., 28s. cloth and lettered.

In short, it is only second to those of Wilson and Audubon."—Neville Wood's Ornithologist's Text Book.

"Indispensable to every studier and every lover of the birds of Britain. This, like the rest of Mr. Mudie's works, is characterized by evidences of much original observation; of a combinative habit of reflections on things observed; of clearness of narration; and of a capacity for discursive, exciting speculations."—London's Magazine of Natural History.

PRINCIPLES and ILLUSTRATIONS of MORBID ANATOMY; illustrated by A COMPLETE SERIES of COLOURED LITHOGRAPHIC DRAWINGS, from Originals by the Author. Adapted to the Elements of M. Andral, and to the Cyclopædia of Practical Medicine, with the latter of which it corresponds in size, and designed to constitute an Appendix to all Works on the Practice of Physic, and to facilitate the study of Morbid Anatomy in connexion with Symptoms. By J. HOPE, M.D. F.R.S. Physician to the St. Mary-le-bone Infirmary, &c.

“Dr. Hope has entered, with great claims to our approbation, upon a field which will amply repay him for his labours, and which must enable him to diffuse satisfaction throughout his profession. The engravings admirably delineate the morbid changes caused by disease. The colouring of each figure is the result of minute and careful attention; there is nothing overdrawn; no heightening to produce effect: none of that gorgeous display, which so materially detracts from the value of many works, both in the English and French languages. The immense field from which Dr. Hope has the opportunity of gleaning a rich harvest, as physician to an Institution where so many sick and aged are assembled, gives us a promise of fruits worthy of his talents and industry.”—Med. and Surg. Journal.

Second Edition, 8vo. boards, 12s. Dedicated, by permission, to Sir Henry Halford, Bart.

A PRACTICAL COMPENDIUM of the DISEASES of the SKIN, including a Particular Consideration of the more frequent and Intractable forms of these affections. Illustrated by Numerous Cases. By JONATHAN GREEN, M.D. Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, and formerly Surgeon in His Majesty's Royal Navy.

* * It has been the Author's aim in this Compendium to condense within the smallest possible space, not merely the results of his own experience, but the whole amount of practical information extant upon this highly-important class of diseases. His most particular attention is constantly given to the characters by which they may be distinguished one from another, and to the most approved and available means of treatment recommended for their cure.

“Every professional reader who wishes to be successful in the management of cutaneous diseases, will find it his interest to study thoroughly the method of treatment recommended by Dr. Green.”—Edinburgh Medical and Surgical Journal.

“The Practical Compendium of Dr. Green forms a popular and very useful introductory work to the larger one of Rayer. His observations on Impetigo and Porrigo are certainly the most judicious we have ever read: they are derived from sound pathological views. To the student of medicine we do not hesitate to recommend the Compendium of Dr. Green in preference to Bateman's Synopsis (no mean praise), as more simple in its descriptions, and more practically useful in its therapeutic instructions; it is unnecessary to say more of this book.”—Medico-Chirurgical Review.

In a pocket volume, the Fifth Edition, 5s. cloth lettered.

By the Author of the Peerage and Baronetage Charts, &c.

“One of those useful little books, which, having found how serviceable it is for daily reference, you wonder that you could ever do without it.”—Literary Gazette.

"The 'Book of Family Worship' ought to be in the hands of every family in the land; the prayers are beautifully simple and sweet; and every sentence that they breathe speaks of Christ alone as the hope of our salvation."—Dublin Evening Packet.

"There is so much that is good in this volume, that we could not avoid adopting it for our own use, and therefore we feel justified in recommending it to others."—Christian Ladies' Magazine.

"The Book of Family Worship is correct in its principles, devotional in its spirit, and well worthy of being used by those who prefer a form to a free address at the throne of mercy."—Family Magazine.

AN EXAMINATION of the ANCIENT ORTHOGRAPHY of the JEWS, and of the ORIGINAL STATE of the TEXT of the HEBREW BIBLE.

Part I., containing an INQUIRY INTO THE ORIGIN OF ALPHABETIC WRITING; with which is incorporated an Essay on the Egyptian Hieroglyphics. By CHARLES WILLIAM WALL, D.D., Senior Fellow of Trinity College, and Professor of Hebrew in the University of Dublin.

"That many peculiarities in the writings of the Old Testament, especially in the Pentateuch, might possibly be elucidated by a careful examination of the hieroglyphic system of expression, has been for some time a general belief among Biblical scholars. Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and his early education must have naturally influenced his habits of thought and language. This hypothesis, which, however, scarcely went beyond a vague surmise, has been examined with great learning and acuteness by Dr. Wall, Professor of Hebrew in the Dublin University. In the progress of his inquiries, he was led to doubt the reality of Champollion's discoveries in the interpretation of hieroglyphics, and pursuing an opposite course, arrived at a key to the deciphering of the Rosetta stone. * * * He is entitled to the great merit of having discovered a new principle of investigation, which may elucidate the chief difficulties in the Hebrew text."—Athenæum.

"The volume abounds with deep learning and forcible argument."—Monthly Review.

WORKS OF INSTRUCTION, &c.PINNOCK'S CATECHISMS of the ARTS and SCIENCES.Illustrated with Maps, Plates, and Wood-cuts, PRICE NINE-PENCE EACH.

These Catechisms are intended to form the basis of every branch of useful knowledge, and are of themselves, in fact, "an Epitome of the Arts and Sciences." The style in which they are written is at once clear and simple, conveying instruction to the youthful mind in a manner unattainable by the use of more elaborate and comprehensive works. The LYRE of DAVID; or ANALYSIS of the PSALMS in Hebrew, critical and practical, with a HEBREW AND CHALDEE GRAMMAR. By VICTORINUS BYTHNER; translated by the Rev. THOMAS DEE, A.B. Ex-Sch. J.C.D. To which are added, by the translator, TABLES of the Imperfect Verbs and a PRAXIS of the first eight Psalms.

* * A desire to read the Sacred Scriptures in the original tongue has become of late evidently very prevalent in these kingdoms. Three months' industrious study, with good books, will effect that desirable object. The number of Hebrew radical words is 1867; of these 1184 occur in the Psalms: it is plain then, that a thorough knowledge of the Psalms very nearly amounts to a thorough knowledge of the language. Bythner's Lyra is, as all the learned know, the very best work on the Psalms; nearly two centuries have gone by since its first publication, and it still stands in all its freshness of estimation, unrivalled by any work that has since appeared on the same subject. Yet, excellent though it is, until now there has since appeared no English version of it, and so it has remained a closed book to the English student. Such a translation, so manifestly called for, will be presented to the English reader, with much unnecessary matter omitted, and several judicious additions made; and which, as the editor trusts, will be found more correct than any preceding edition in the original Latin.

The Third Edition, very considerably improved and enlarged, 18mo. 3s. in cloth.

The WRITER'S and STUDENT'S ASSISTANT; or, a COMPENDIOUS DICTIONARY of ENGLISH SYNONYMES; rendering the more common Words and Phrases in the English Language into the more elegant and scholastic, and affording a choice of the most appropriate, from a Variety of nearly the same Significations; with concise Notes, pointing out, in a familiar way, the Distinction between such Words as are frequently (in error) used synonymously.

"This little work is calculated at once to accelerate literary composition, and to assist in establishing a correct and elegant style, both in speaking and writing."—Gentleman's Magazine.

"It will be found useful to the finished scholar and orator, as well as to the tyros of letters."—Sunday Times.

HASTINGS & ST. LEONARDS

British Israel Association

Library of Standard Works,

Bearing on our National Hebrew Origin, and our identity with the Ancient Kingdom of Israel as distinct from that of Judah.

At present the number of volumes is few, but the Association hope to add others bearing on the subject as opportunity offers, and earnestly request the support of all who are interested in the movement, and who also value the Bible as the inspired Word of God.

They would call attention to the fact that God's promises to Israel of great national power, and the general characteristics of that people as recorded in Holy Writ, are now possessed only by the Anglo-Saxon race, and, therefore, depending on the truth of Scripture, they consider, as a logical sequence, that they are naturally descended from Hebrew-Israel, to whose descendants only those blessings were secured by an unconditional covenant by God Himself, whose faithfulness forms the foundation of their belief in the identity of lost Israel.

On details there may be differences of opinion, but the very discussion of these in social gatherings must tend to elicit truth and discard error; therefore to those who accord with the view (in the main) the Committee appeals for that support which is given by Association—"As iron sharpeneth iron, so does man the countenance of his friend"—while to those who object an appeal is also made; periodical meetings are open to all, and opponents will receive a courteous hearing, and their questions candid replies.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

BARON BROUGHAM AND VAUX,

LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR OF ENGLAND.

MY LORD,

The very munificent and disinterested manner, in which your Lordship has been pleased to notice my labours, (devoted as they have been for many years to the advancement of sacred and oriental literature in this country,) has made it a duty to seize the earliest opportunity in my power, publicly to express my obligations for the favours so unexpectedly, and I will say so unusually, conferred. I will not affirm that our public institutions are generally not well endowed, but I may that to have performed the duties of both Hebrew and Arabic Professor in the University of Cambridge with some public credit, for nearly the last dozen years with a salary of forty pounds,* was not very likely to impress any one so circumstanced with the idea, that his pluralities were such as to render him an object of public animadversion, or to buoy him up with the notion, that his services had been met by his country with more than ordinary encouragement. How these particulars first found their way to your Lordship's notice, I have not the means of knowing: but I do know that the very handsome manner, in which you have been pleased to meet them, has left me no alternative but that of gratefully acknowledging the obligations which I owe and feel, and of assuring your Lordship, that I shall ever consider it my duty to endeavour to deserve the distinction.

I have the honour to be,

MY LORD,

Your Lordship's most obliged,

Humble Servant,

THE AUTHOR.

THE first Edition of this Grammar having been entirely sold off, and having been requested by the Publisher to prepare another, I avail myself of this opportunity to state why the Work appears in its present form, and how the Learner may most profitably use it.

After all, then, that has been said about it, either publicly or privately, (and I here beg to offer my acknowledgments for all the favours thus done me,) my conviction is, that to present the Student with both the Synthetical and Analytical methods, at the same time, is by far the most likely to give him an interest, and to ground him, in the study of the Hebrew Language. To cultivate the memory, as well in this as in every other sort of study, I hold to be good; but then I must insist upon it, that to interest and inform the mind is infinitely better. A very learned and deservedly celebrated opponent of mine, on this question, has argued that to give naked rules in Grammar, is always the most likely to insure the progress, and to advance the truth: while, however, he has not hesitated to advance reasons, analytically, in support of his own rules, whenever he thought fit to do so. My opinion has been, and still is, that where we have Men, and not mere Children, to study any Language or Science, it is our duty to lay before them at once, both the rule and the reasons for it: and thus, at one and the same time, to present the grounds of the matter proposed for instruction, with rules calculated to assist the memory in retaining it; and thus to contribute towards improving the mind by habits of close investigation and inquiry. By these means the Learner will have the advantage of seeing on what grounds his instructions rest, and consequently of determining for himself, whether they are such as are entitled to his cordial reception or not: while, on the other hand, the Grammarian who is accustomed only to consider the Language on which he is treating synthetically, is apt to form rules upon every example with which he meets, less in conformity with its real principles, than with those of that in which he has been accustomed to speak and write: which, it may be shewn, has abundantly been the case with all European Writers on the Arabic and Hebrew Grammar, and of which M. de Sacy (the Writer alluded to) is an illustrious and striking example.*

With the view therefore of accomplishing this, I have, in the first place, considered the Vowels as either perfect or imperfect: not abstractedly, or with reference to the nature of things generally; but with reference to the formation of syllables as they are found to exist in this Language. I have, for example, termed (ⲧ) Kāméts, (Ⲙ) Tsēré, (Ⲏ) Khīrīk gādól, (ⲓ) Khōlém, and (ⲛ) Shūrék, Perfect vowels; because, when combined with any one consonant, they will generally form full and perfect syllables. For a similar reason, I have termed another set of vowels, as (Ⲑ) Páthakh, &c., Imperfect vowels; because, when employed in the formation of syllables, they require the addition either of a second consonant or of an accent to form such full and perfect syllables. My reasons are these: When we come to read the Hebrew text, it is important to know where every syllable commences and terminates, in order duly to pronounce the words. And, again, when a Hebrew word is changed from the singular to the plural form,—or when found in what is termed the state of construction,—or receives one or other of the pronouns,—the vowels composing it are usually found to vary; and this in exact accordance with this view of the syllabication, in conjunction with the character of their etymology or derivation. I have therefore, in the first place, stated and exemplified this system of perfect and imperfect vowels with regard to the formation of syllables. The exceptions introduced by the accents are next noticed: so that the Learner is, in a few hours, put in possession of one of the main principles which regulate the structure of this Language.

* Proofs of this will hereafter be given in a Tract which it is my intention to publish.

I have, in the next place, considered the forms and force of the several sorts of Nouns, beginning with those which are the most simple, and proceeding to those which are the most augmented. The forms and force of the unaugmented nouns, we must necessarily take as postulates, grounded however on the usage of the Language. For the augmented ones I have endeavoured to account, by supposing them to present two or more of the simpler forms, joined together as compounds. By this means I have also endeavoured to ascertain their precise force; and, in some instances at least, I think I have succeeded.* In all these cases too, or in as many as it seemed necessary, I have accounted for the changes of the vowels, in a way perhaps which can neither be burdensome to the memory, perplexing to the Learner, nor liable to be soon forgotten; and by which the numerous rules and exceptions of the school of Buxtorf are avoided, as is also the multifarious and indistinct doctrine of the German Grammarians, by which these nouns are distributed into not fewer than thirteen declensions!

The Particles I have treated, after Schröderus and others, as fragments of nouns, which enables us at once to ascertain their precise forms, force, and modes of construction.

The Verbs I consider, in the next place, as consisting of nouns either simple or augmented, conjugated with one or other of the pronouns in an abridged form. In this I am not singular; for the Hindoos, Arabs, and even some of our own European Grammarians, have done so before me. I adopt this view of the case, because it is both easy and natural, and because it will at once account both for the form and force of the verb in all its varieties of person. A point, however, of very great importance here is, the investigation of the principles by which primitive words are occasionally abridged, and by which the defective forms of both verbs and nouns can be easily and naturally accounted for. This investigation will be found in the third Lecture of this Work. Its use is, to shew in what particular cases certain letters and vowels are dropped or changed, and how all the verbs termed defective, are reducible to the Paradigm of the regular trilateral verb. This affords the advantage of saving much time and labour, and of cutting off the sources of almost infinite perplexity to the Student: the result being, that the conjugation is only one, and this the most simple and regular possible.

The next improvement which, I flatter myself, I first presented to the Public, is, an analytical investigation of the principles which regulate the use of the Tenses of the verb. It had been customary to suppose, that the two tenses were a past and a future; and, because it had often been urged, forsooth, that this was extremely philosophical, (there being no point of time which could properly be termed present,) it was thought, that this was one of the greatest beauties of the Hebrew Language! Unfortunately, however, it appears that this future is occasionally used as a present tense, and also as a past. No reason has been offered, as far as I know, for this its usage as a present tense; but, for its use as a past, the conjunction } and, so, &c. has, most unaccountably, been made to account, and thence has taken the name of the conversive Vaw! A considerable number of instances however occurs, in which this tense is so used without any such conversive Vaw: and What has been done in these cases? Why, the instances have been said to present an enallage temporis; and here the matter very wisely ended!

The next shift adopted by the Learned was, to term both these tenses Aorists; and by this their uncertainty was regularly determined beyond all doubt. For now the Preterite could be construed as a past, present, or future, tense, as could also this Future, by rule the most indeterminate possible: so that the Translator or Commentator had nothing whatever to do, but to adopt whatever sense he pleased: his Grammar always supplying him with a law comprehensive enough to justify all his wanderings. Upon a little consideration, however, and with the assistance of a few native Commentators on the Arabic Grammar, I felt convinced that the whole of this was a mere tissue of trifling and error. I found (what indeed our Writers on the Arabic Grammar ought long ago to have told us) that these two tenses exhibited really a past, and a present, tense: and that they were universally used as such in one sense or other: it being customary with the Orientals of this family to contemplate past, present, or future, events, either as we do, or, as past, present, &c. with respect to some other time or circumstance introduced into the context: and also, to speak of events, which they believed should surely come to pass, as if they had already taken place. These usages too are not only natural, but they are also found to exist, more or less, in perhaps every language. With the Hebrews and Arabians however, owing probably to their natural warmth of temperament and expression, they are more frequent, and apparently abrupt, than they are found elsewhere. In this view of the case, then, all is natural, regular, and constant. The tenses are as certain and orderly in their use, as any framers of Language could make them: and the only instances in which failure is most likely to happen in their application, are those in which the Interpreter himself is either uninstructed or unpractised in the usages of these particular dialects.

To this doctrine, however, M. de Sacy has loudly, though not argumentatively, objected: not so much, I believe, because he thought it untrue, as because it appeared to be inconsistent with the doctrines laid down in his own Arabic Grammar; which treats one of them, at least as an Aorist, and gives no just account of the use of the other. But, Is it likely that M. de Sacy can here be right, and the whole nation of the Arabs, the Persians, the Syrians, and others, wrong? Is it probable that they are ignorant of the principles upon which they speak and write? Or, that they speak and write upon no principles whatever, but go on at random (ἀορίστως), leaving the hearer or reader to make them out as well as he can? This is to my mind quite incredible: and, if I am at liberty to believe their best Writers on the subject, it is as untrue as it is incredible. In this view of the case too, there is a perfect end to the power of the conversive Vaw; which I should consider a great advantage gained, knowing as I do, that it is in very many cases worse than useless.* To this again my learned opponent loudly objects, although he very well knows that no Arab Writer whatever, circumstanced nevertheless just as every Hebrew one is in this respect, has ever once thought of having recourse to such a conversive power in his conjunctive ( , ) Waw! The Arabs, as every one knows, can do very well without this unaccountable conversive letter, and so can the Syrians and the Ethiopians, employing nevertheless, at the same time, dialects most intimately connected with that of the Hebrew, and using the tenses of the verbs, just as I have exhibited them in this work. They, moreover, feel no want either of this * Take one only out of the many which may be cited, viz. Is. ix. 5: וְתָהָיָה הַמְּשָׁרָה עַל-שִׁכְמוֹ, which, according to the doctrine about the conversive ו, ought to be translated, “And the government was, or hath been, upon his shoulder,” than which nothing can be more incongruous or false.

doctrine of Aorists, or of the still broader precepts which took in the enallage temporum. The principles they have adopted are clearly stated and well defined, so that their conversation is easy to be understood, and their written composition clear and precise. The same is in all respects the case with the Hebrew; and, if it has here been accused of irregularity or indefiniteness, it was not because the Language itself was irregular or indefinite, but because its Grammarians had made it so.

To the doctrine of the tenses, (which I now consider established,) I have in this Edition added that which determines the use of the Apocopated form and of the Paragogic letters, as found in the verbs. M. de Sacy has endeavoured to shew in his Arabic Grammar, that certain terminations of the Arabic verb are equivalent to the Indicative, Subjunctive, and Conditional modes, of the European Grammars; and it is certain that cases occur in which these forms may be so translated. Upon a close and long continued examination of this question, however, I have been convinced, that no two things can be more distant from each other, than are the principles by which these modes of expression are regulated in the Oriental and European Grammars respectively. The detail will be too long to be inserted here, I reserve it therefore for publication in the Tract already alluded to. I will only remark now, that if any reliance can be placed on this doctrine, as laid down in this work for the first time, (and certain it is that it is most amply acknowledged by the Grammarians of Arabia,) a most important improvement has been made in this part of Hebrew Grammar; and the consequence is, the Language itself, so far from being poor or defective, as it has been fashionable to affirm, is just as full and precise in these respects as its neighbour the Greek can be shewn to be. In the first Edition of this work, I expressed my doubts indeed, whether the paragogic ׀ had in itself any thing like an optative force, such as had been ascribed to it by Dr. Gesenius and others. Upon more mature consideration, however, I have not only been convinced that this is the case generally, but that it also possesses the power of expressing a correlative one in the subsequent members of antithetic sentences, as now stated in the Syntax. My reason for doubting then was, an apparent want of extent and uniformity in its use, which the results I have since arrived at have wholly satisfied.

Very considerable improvements have likewise been made in every page of the Grammar, which need not now be specified. I may perhaps say, that I believe the Student will find it, if not every thing he may wish, yet certainly much nearer being so than it was when it first appeared. The attention of some more years to this subject, with the remarks and admonitions of others, will perhaps enable me to render this work still more worthy of the patronage of the Public: and, should a kind Providence continue to afford me health and opportunities favourable for bringing about such a result, I trust I shall not be remiss in exerting my best efforts for its accomplishment.

I now proceed to offer a few remarks on Oriental Grammar in general, and particularly with reference to its effects on the interpretation of the Bible. It has been the misfortune of the Hebrew Scriptures, (and indeed of the New Testament in a great degree,) that they have generally been treated in Europe as if they had been mere European compositions. Hebrew Grammars have been constructed, not so much to shew the learner what was real Hebrew idiom, as to reduce the Hebrew Language itself to a comparison with one or other of the Languages of Europe. This might perhaps have been tolerable in the days of Buxtorf, when good Oriental Grammars and Commentaries on Grammar were extremely difficult of access. An opinion, too, has unfortunately prevailed, that many exceedingly valuable traditional interpretations were to be found in the hands of the Jews. And hence, the Buxtorfs and others were assiduous in giving currency to the notion, that no man could study the Holy Scriptures, with any prospect of success, who had not drunk deeply into the streams which had thus providentially come down to us. Hence originated the endless appeals to the Grammars, Lexicons; Commentaries, and Cabbala, of the Rabbins. The Talmud too was now ranked as a work, from which there was scarcely any appeal. And the consequence was, the obscurity of the Old Testament gradually became so great, and particularly when considered in connection with the New, that but few Divines among us would dare to attempt an explanation, (not to mention a reconciliation with the New,) of any considerable part of it. Out of this untractable obscurity seems to have arisen the art of applying a double, triple, &c., interpretation to Prophecy, as well as to much of the History of the Old Testament. The Writers of the New Testament, with some of the elder Fathers of the Church, took one consistent and steady view of these Scriptures :* the Rabbins, with their followers, took another : and, rather than break with either of these, the timid and inexperienced preferred the alternative of taking both ! Hence too arose what has been termed "the Grammatical interpretation," as opposed to the Theological one ; when, alas ! the first rudiments of the Grammar were scarcely known. And the consequence was, the Commentaries of the learned presented the inquirer with scarcely any thing more than mere statements of Jewish opinions ; or, with interpretations of the Sacred Text, which stood on no better grounds than those of ingenious conjecture.

But this was not all. The Rabbins with Maimonides at their head, (a writer who obtained the flattering title of being the first Jew who ceased to play the fool,) drank pretty deeply into the metaphysics of Arabia, which, as might have been expected, afforded ample amends for the defects of Hebrew philology, which were then acknowledged and felt. I will not now enter into a consideration of the results actually arrived at : I will only affirm, that the work of desolation, as it regarded Scriptural knowledge, seems to have arrived almost at its summit. Learning of the most imposing and most trifling character now filled the writings of the Commentators: and bodies of divinity, grounded upon these, were published to the world in numbers sufficiently great, both to surprise and confound the few, who were found bold enough to venture upon them. It was of little consequence, in this case, whether the Divine was of the orthodox or fanatical party, (parties which were then best known from the cast of their political opinions,) each was equally removed from the simplicity of the Scriptures: while each (I am not willing to allow) was in actual possession of the saving truths of religion. Their misfortune was, to have been led aside into an obscure, a steep, and a thorny, path. They had unwarily injured their own visual powers by subtleties and refinements, and the consequence was, they groped as in darkness at noon-day.

Of late years these studies, (and it is much to be regretted these very methods of carrying them on,) have been revived, and greatly extended in Germany. And the result has been, (as it might have been expected it would,) that under Judaism and heathenism combined, a monstrous system, termed by its abettors "Rationalism," has actually been formed and most lavishly recommended. This, however, exhibits nothing more than a revival of the exploded scheme of the once celebrated Spinoza, adorned indeed with the splendid trappings of many an hour's, ay many a year's, laborious but crude and undigested lucubrations. The Grammars, Lexicons, and Commentaries of the Divines of this school, imitate as closely as possible those of the Jewish Rabbins. They incessantly appeal likewise to the Oriental dialects:* but in no case do they evince an acquaintance with real Oriental Grammar, or beyond what is given in the Grammaire Arabe of the Baron de Sacy; which, as I shall shortly shew, exhibits little more than an endeavour to reduce the Grammar of the Arabs to the standard of that of the Greeks and Latins. The system of conjecture, therefore, so extensively cultivated by the Rabbins, (not to insist on the false and foolish system of Theology also adopted by these Divines,) has at length so far succeeded in reducing the standard of the Holy Scriptures, that it is difficult to say, whether we should most admire or condemn the almost unexampled patience and industry, which has thus so nearly heathenized and unchurched this once venerable and pious school.

Their great defects appear to me to be these: I. The want of a thorough acquaintance with real Oriental Philology; which, I must be allowed to say, is not to be found in the Grammars of Oriental Languages composed by Europeans generally, nor yet in the Lexicons of Golius, Castell, or Giggeius, which they are in the daily habit of citing. Information of this sort is only to be found in the Grammars, Commentaries on Grammar, and Scholiasts, of the East: and these, if we except one or two Individuals, they have not yet read. In the next place, they are deficient in real Scriptural knowledge; I mean, in a knowledge of the Scriptures distinct and separate from the systems and commentaries of the Jewish Rabbins.* Generally * See my Sermons and Dissertations, Cambridge, 1830. Diss. I. part ii. p. 124. Since writing the above, I have been favoured with a sight of the last number of the "Edinburgh Review" (No. 107), in which I am directly charged both with ignorance and misrepresentation in what I have said on the Rationalism of Germany, and on Dr. Gesenius in particular. My ignorance, it should seem, is apparent from the badness of my English, from my not knowing where to find a certain work of Bertholdt's, and from a false translation of a part of Dr. Gesenius's Commentary on Isaiah; and my disposition to misrepresent (coupled with this ignorance) from the manner in which I have stated and combated the opinions of Dr. Gesenius. On my bad English I will say nothing; because no faulty passage is pointed out by my censor. On my ignorance of the works of Bertholdt, which the Reviewer says I have avowed, I need only say, no such avowal is made any where in my work, nor any mention whatever of an interpretation of the fifty-second and fifty-third chapters of Isaiah by Bertholdt. I have only said, (p. 152.) that "Mr. Bertholdt refers us here to a work by J. D. Kraiger, entitled "Commentatio, speaking, no Commentary on the Old Testament is to be found at all comparable to that given by inspiration in the New. In

&c.” but, as I have not access to this work, I must take my materials from others, &c. The learned Reviewer might, therefore, have spared his charitable help, as he terms it, as well as his uncharitable misrepresentation. Come we now to the false translation. The words of Gesenius are these, “Die Rede des Propheten wechselt hier mit der Rede Jehova’s so ab, dass. lii. 13—15. Jehova zu reden fortfahrt, wie in dem Vorgehenden: liii. 1 der Prophet redet, und zwar communicativ im Namen seines standes.” My false translation is this: “The speaking of the Prophet is here so changed for that of Jehovah, that chap. lii. 13—15. (not chapter lii. 15, as the Reviewer has been pleased to give it,) Jehovah continues to speak as in the preceding context: in liii. 1. the prophet communicates in the name proper for his own station.” The amended translation of the Reviewer is, “Jehovah and the Prophet speak here alternately. Thus, at the end of the fifty-second chapter, it is Jehovah who continues to speak, as in the foregoing verses; but, in the beginning of the fifty-third chapter, it is the prophet who speaks,—communicatively indeed, (or in the manner of one who is holding communication with others,) and in the name of his order.” Now, I should like to know what the real difference between these two translations is, as far as the matter discussed by me is concerned. I can see none: and I know my adversary can find none. But, if it be asked, Which of these versions is the most literal? I think I know what the answer must be. The first three charges, therefore, of my Reviewer end in mere assumptions, just as creditable to himself as they are likely to be serviceable to the infidel cause, of which he is anxious to be thought a champion. Now for the case of misrepresentation and ignorance combined. “The conclusion,” it is said, “he (Dr. Gesenius) comes to at last is, that, in those passages where the Prophet speaks of the servant of the Lord, he had in view not any one particular person, past, present, or future, but the body, or aggregate, of the prophets of the Lord collectively considered:—in other words, the Prophetic order, which he thus personifies,” &c.—“In the face of all this Professor Lee ... comes forward and attributes to him an interpretation of the passage totally different from that which he has thus plainly and distinctly enounced. The servant of the Lord here mentioned, says Mr. Lee, is, according to Gesenius’s comment, the Prophet Isaiah.”—“We should be inclined,” it is added, “to consider this misrepresentation as merely a blunder of ignorance, had not Mr. Lee turned it to such triumphant account in taunting and exulting over his brother Doctor, &c.”—“This.... would be merely ridiculous, were there not strong reasons for suspecting that there is full as much of unfairness as of ignorance at the bottom of it.” I think I may say, that my antagonist is not excessively ceremonious: he seems quite disposed too to give up the charge of ignorance, if he can thereby bring home that of malignity. But why all this we must look for the Theology of the ancient Hebrews, not in the writings of modern or even ancient unbelieving

this waste of strength and of good breeding? Surely there must be some object here besides that of a desire for the truth. But let this pass, and let us adopt the Reviewer's own statement of the case. Will the matter now be mended? "The servant of the Lord, he (Dr. G.) had in view," (is) "not any one, &c.,.... but the body or aggregate of the prophets of the Lord collectively considered; in other words, the Prophetic order, which he thus personifies." Well: let us now apply either or both of these things, which however are very far from being identical. The passage had in view is, Is. lii. 13.—liii. 9; and my general question was, How could this all possibly apply to Isaiah the Prophet? Let it now be asked, How could it, either to the body or aggregate of the Prophets, or to the Prophetic order personified? Suppose we allow that these persons, or this office, may deal prudently, be extolled, &c., the question now will be, At what period was it, that one or both of them suffered martyrdom for the sins of the Jewish nation? And then, as a reward for these sufferings, (liii. 11, 12.) enjoyed the blessings of a long life, with the happiness of contemplating a numerous offspring? (i. e. of Prophets and prophetic offices personified!) Again, How we are to make the notion of the whole body of the Prophets, alias the prophetic office, growing up before him, &c. to square with, "when WE shall see HIM....WE hid as it were OUR faces from HIM....HE was despised, and WE esteemed HIM not: surely HE hath borne OUR GRIEFS," &c.? Who, I ask, is the WE and the HIM, in these passages? If Isaiah is now speaking in the "name of his order," surely he must form a part of both these bodies; and, as I formerly remarked, must be "acting moonshine and wall too!" My Censor is very well aware, that even on his own view of the case, the matter proposed is quite indefensible; but he has forgotten to say, that in endeavouring to set this right, he has only placed it in an infinitely more ludicrous light than I had done. And, let it be remembered, this is all with which I am concerned: my only object being to shew, that the Theological views of this school are untrue and unsound. With Dr. Gesenius's literary or gentlemanly reputation, I have nothing to do, except to express my admiration of both, which I have repeatedly done in the work in question; but which I am sorry to be compelled to say, I cannot do for my Reviewer. I thank him, however, for having called my attention to the particular just noticed, as it has afforded me an opportunity to correct what I had said on the person of Isaiah being meant by Dr. Gesenius, and so to direct my arguments as eventually to shew, that the state of the case is really worse than I had represented it. My Censor now dismisses me, having, as he flatters himself, determined that I am quite incapable of considering questions of this nature. The question at issue, however, is not whether the persons concerned are ignorant or learned; but whether the Orthodox or the Rationalist Divine be right

Jews, nor yet in the Apocryphal books of Scripture. These may profitably be consulted; but then, the greatest care must be taken to give them no more than their real due;—to make a prudent use of their Philology and History;—but to treat their Theology as a system adopted by blind and misguided men.

I myself have been much surprised at the similarity of character discoverable between the Philology and Theology of the ancient Hebrews. Both appear to me to be of the most easy, simple, and definite, character. In neither have we any thing forced, unnatural, or metaphysical. They generally exhibit things as they are, or as they appear to be, naked, unincumbered, and detached from every species of refinement. The principal difficulty which an European has to contend with, accustomed as he has been to art and to abstract considerations, is, to divest himself of these, and to return to the simplicity of primitive times. The state of the mind too, unless I am very greatly mistaken, has quite as much to do as the powers or the head have in making the able Theologian, or the good Oriental Grammarian. There must always be a willingness to learn;—to divest self of long-rooted prejudices, and in simplicity and godly sincerity, (qualities by far too lowly rated in general,) to drink deeply into the sincere milk of the word of truth. Without these, the interpreter of Scripture may write very learned commentaries, but they will be very useless, if not dangerous, books. With this, however, and with the aids now accessible to every one, there is great probability that the light which the Scriptures have long afforded us, will shine more and more, perhaps to the perfect day: and will not only put to flight the instances of darkness still visible among ourselves, but will succeed in dispensing their healing beams to the most distant parts of the earth.

in his views. Personalities are certainly easier advanced than arguments; and where arguments are not to be had, which I have reason to suspect is the case here, the enlightened and liberal system attempted to be propped up must necessarily rest on personalities!

I have been anxious to say thus much on the subject of Oriental Grammar considered in connection with the question of scriptural interpretation; because I am of opinion that Theologians, of this and other European countries in general, evince a much greater lack of knowledge of this sort, than they do of natural ability, industry, or perseverance: while there are others, not indeed deficient in personal piety, but so little accustomed to extensive literary inquiry, and to modes of thinking and expression unlike their own, that they make no hesitation in coming at once to conclusions the most plausible, splendid, and flattering; but which have not the least possible foundation in truth; and which, instead of recommending religion, as they might have been intended to do, tend eventually to injure it. Religion, to deserve that name, must necessarily be founded in TRUTH; and this the most extended, the most scientific, and the most rigid inquiry, never can, and never will, injure.

I may now offer a few remarks on the use of this Grammar. It is one of the greatest misfortunes to this country in general, and to the interest of true religion in particular, that so little encouragement is given in our Universities to the study of sacred literature.* The necessary consequence is, a few may be found hardy enough to encounter the many years' labour, which is absolutely requisite to form the truly learned and enlightened Theologian: but these can never be numerous; and times may come in which there may not be even one. In such a state of things, short, and if I may so speak, royal roads to this kind of eminence will daily be advanced and recommended by empirics, whom ignorance will not have it in its power to detect, and whom idleness and vanity will applaud as the prodigies of their times.† I need now say no more on this subject, than that these short and royal roads had very nearly succeeded in putting to flight every trace of real Hebrew learning in this country. The wire-drawn theories of Masclef, John Hutchinson, Parkhurst, and a host of others, certainly made every thing appear very easy to the learner, while, in fact, they effectually enveloped it in impenetrable darkness.

* The circumstance noticed in my Dedication will, I trust, have a different tendency.

† I need not say how remarkably this was exemplified a few years ago, in an attempt which was pretty extensively supported, to obtrude upon the British public a new translation of the Hebrew Scriptures.

It has more than once been suggested to me, that my Grammar had better be made more popular, and if possible, shorter. My answer once for all is : To those who have made up their minds to take none but a short and popular path, this Grammar will be found to answer full as well as any other can ; while it will have the advantage of enabling them to make a far greater progress, than such works themselves ever pretend to, should they eventually find courage enough to study it thoroughly. All that mere learners can first want must be, to see what terminations the nouns will take under their various inflexions, and how the verbs are generally conjugated. With these the historical books of the Hebrew Bible can generally be made out, with the help of an analysis or translation, or both. And to the beginner who has a teacher at hand, perhaps, this will generally be the best method that can be recommended. I very well know how much a progress even of this sort will encourage the learner, who is otherwise unencouraged and unassisted. I know too how slow the very best of us are to imbibe, and to lay up in the mind, notions, with which we were not previously acquainted. Besides, it is natural and prudent to restrict our first efforts to limits which they will conveniently comprehend, and effectually fill. Time and opportunity will enable us to extend them ; and, if we proceed not more rapidly than sure, we shall at least have the satisfaction to know, that what we have done, we have hitherto done well ; and, in these studies, this is every thing. The driveller in Theology is soon detected ; and, should he be so fortunate as to live and die without doing extensive mischief, he will not without having convinced the world that he was a mere pretender.

These first steps then being taken, the next will necessarily be, to examine with care the nature and character of the etymology of the Hebrew language, the laws by which the syntax is regulated, the customs, modes of thinking, antiquities, religious belief, and expectations, of the ancient Hebrew nation, which will include the use of Commentaries, Concordances, ancient and modern Translations, the Oriental Languages, Travellers, and in short every other help usually recommended to the student of Scripture. I mention these things, because some are apt to think that a knowledge of the Grammar, with the use of the Dictionary only, is quite enough to enable any one to be an able interpreter of Holy Writ ; while the truth is, language, opinions, and customs, are so intimately connected together, that they never can entirely be separated. Where however this is attempted, (and it is often attempted,) conjecture, uncertainty, and doubt, must necessarily supply their place. The study of the Oriental Languages indeed, which is indispensable to the critic, opens a very extensive field of inquiry. Our daily intercourse however with the East, in addition to the numerous valuable elementary and other Oriental works, which are now, by the munificence of the British public, daily making their appearance, has rendered this study comparatively easy and sure. And the probability is, that at no distant period it will be in the power of the British Divine, to call in to his aid every assistance which the East can afford him.* And my own opinion is, that if all these helps be duly appreciated and applied, we may indeed never have it in our power to boast of more erudite, laborious, acute, or pious, Divines than we now can, but we may of those who are more simple, more easy, more engaging, and more practical.

I need now only add, what it is important the student should know, that the Hebrew Bible from which the extracts in this work are taken, is that which was printed under the superintendence of Mr. Judah d'Allemand for the Publisher of this work.

LECTURES

ON THE

HEBREW LANGUAGE.

---

LECTURE I.

ON THE ORTHOGRAPHY, SYLLABICATION, &c., OF THE HEBREW LANGUAGE.

1. AS it is proposed to offer, in the present course of Lectures, a comprehensive and practical view of the structure of the Hebrew Language, all discussions relating to General Grammar, Philology, and Antiquities, will be avoided as much as possible; referring as we proceed to Authors who have treated on these subjects. It will also be taken for granted, that the Student is acquainted with Grammar as generally taught; and, that he is penman sufficiently good to write down such forms of letters, &c., as shall be laid before him.

2. But, although it is desirable that the Learner should know something of the principles of Grammar as generally taught; yet, he must not hence be tempted to infer, that a system almost entirely at variance with that to which he has been accustomed, is unphilosophical or wrong: or, because he cannot at first sight comprehend all its bearings, that it is therefore uncouth, embarrassed, or ambiguous. For it may be true, that the Language of the Patriarchs and Prophets is as consistent in its structure, as the subjects on which it treats are interesting and momentous; and, that it is as explicit and regular as other languages, which have been cultivated with much greater ardour, while they had infinitely less to offer in return. He must, therefore, allow the Language on which we are now entering, to stand or fall on its own merits; and, our delineation of it to be judged by the rules of criticism peculiar to itself. We mention this in the outset, not to depreciate the labours of others who may have taken a different view of this subject; but to warn the student, that the idioms of the Hebrew and other Dialects connected with it, are neither to be judged of nor explained by those of European languages; and hence, to caution him against that trouble and confusion, into which some have had the misfortune to fall.

On the Alphabet.

3. The system of Orthography found in our Hebrew Bibles, and that which has ever been taught with the greatest success,* presents a succession of consonants written in a direction proceeding from the right hand of the page towards the left. Two or more of these are found in every word; while the words themselves are separated from each other by a moderate space. To this system of consonants another is added consisting of vowels; and these are placed above, in the middle, or below, the line of consonants, as their several natures may require. To this, again, is superadded another, consisting of Accents, which are also placed either above, in the middle, or below, the consonants, in the same line or rank with the vowels. Before the student can possibly read the Hebrew text, therefore, he must be made familiar with these several parts of Hebrew orthography.

4. We shall proceed, in the first place, to delineate and explain the characters of the consonants; the number, forms, names, powers, and numerical values, of which are as follows.

* We say, the greatest success; for after all that has been said by the advocates for the unpointed system, it will be extremely difficult to point out one writer of that school who has really advanced Hebrew learning.

Number and Order.	FORMS.			NAMES.	POWERS.	Numerical Values.
	Biblical.	Samari- tan.	Rabbinical.
1	א	Ⲁ	א	אלף Álef	H unaspirated, as in humble, hour, &amp;c.	I.
2	ב or ב	Ⲃ	ב	בית Béth	V or B respectively, as in van or ban .	II.

5	ה	Ⲉ	ה	הא He	H aspirated, as in hard .	V.

7	ז	Ⲍ	ז	זין Záyin	Z, as in zeal , or S in those .	VII.
8	ח	Ⲏ	ח	חית Khéth	Kh strongly aspirated, as ch in the German, nicht .	VIII.
9	ט	ⲏ	ט	טית Téth	T, as in turn .	IX.
10	י	Ⲑ	י	יוד Yód	Y, as in yes, yonder .	X.

12	ל	Ⲕ	ל	למד Láméd	L, as in love, &amp;c.	XXX.
13	מ and as a final ם	Ⲗ	מ and as a final ם	מם Mém	M, as in man, &amp;c.	XL.
14	נ and as a final ן	Ⲙ	נ and as a final ן	נוú Nún	N, as in no, &amp;c.	L.
15	ס	Ⲛ	ס	סמך Sámech	S, as in Sir ; never as S in those .	LX.
16	ע	Ⲝ	ע	עין Áyin	The true sound of this letter being unknown, it is usually passed over in silence, as H in humble : we shall designate it thus, H.	LXX.
17	פ or פ and as a final ף	Ⲟ	פ and as a final ף	פה Pé	PH, when without the point, as in Philip ; P, when pointed, as in pint .	LXXX.
18	צ and as a final ץ	Ⲡ	צ and as a final ץ	צדי Tsadé	TS, as in mats, &amp;c.	XC.
19	ק	Ⲣ	ק	קוף Kóph	K, as in look, &amp;c.	C.
20	ר	ⲣ	ר	ריש Résh	R, as in roast, &amp;c.	CC.
21	ש	Ⲥ	ש	שין Shín	SH, as in shine .	CCC.
				שין Sín	S, as in son , never as S in those .
22	ת or ת	Ⲧ	ת	תו Taw or Tav	TH or T respectively, as in thin or tin .	CCCC.

In this and all future examples where the Roman vowels will be put to represent the Hebrew ones, á, or ā, will have the sound of the Italian a, or a in far; and a, as a in man; é, or ē, as a in wane or ai in rain; e, the same sound shortened: í, or ī, as ee in seen; i, as i in in: ó, or ō, as o in rose; o, the same sound shortened: ú, or ū, as oo in boot; u, as oo in good. The first vowel in each case will represent the accented or emphatical syllable, e. g. á in fáther, &c.; the second with the mark (-) as ā, ē, &c. will shew, that, as such vowel generally terminates a syllable, it will be pronounced openly, but not with an accent.

5. The Samaritan and Rabbinical forms of the Hebrew character have been given for the following reasons:—

1. The Samaritan Pentateuch being nothing more than a different edition of that in use among the Jews, the Student will want no other help for reading it, than the forms of the Samaritan character: and,

2. As the Rabbinical commentaries are composed, for the most part, in Biblical Hebrew, he will stand in need of little more than a copy of their alphabet to enable him to read them.*

6. The number and order of the consonants, as given in the table, are found in the text of the Hebrew Bible. The following are the passages:—Psalms xxxiv. cxix. cxlv.; Proverbs xxxi., from verse 10 to the end; Lamentations i. ii. iii. iv. In Psalm xxxiv. however, the verse beginning with  $\aleph$  Vav has either been lost, or both  $\aleph$  He and  $\aleph$  Vav are found in the 6th verse; and in the cxlvth, that which should commence with  $\beth$  is also wanting. In the ii. iii. and ivth chapters of the Lamentations,  $\gamma$  Ayin and  $\delta$  Pé are found transposed, which may perhaps be attributed to the copyists.

* Should he wish to make a considerable progress in Rabbinical learning, he will find some of the best books pointed out in Sect. xi. of my Sylloge Librorum Orientalium. Cantab. 1821.

7. As to the forms of the consonants, it is highly probable that they were originally hieroglyphical:* but, whether the Hebrew or Samaritan form is the most ancient, a difference of opinion seems to have prevailed as early as the times of Jerome; and which, as Schultens has justly remarked, has been contested in some instances with an acrimony, which neither the nature of the case, nor the love of truth, could justify:† some maintaining, that the Samaritan was the primitive form, and that Ezra adopted the other on the return from Babylon: others, that the Biblical character, as we now have it, is the same with that in which Moses composed his Autograph.‡ For my own part, I am inclined to believe with Bayer§ and some others, that which of the characters soever we take as exhibiting the most ancient form, the other is no greater a variation from it, than may be traced in our own black letter as derived from the Roman; and, by no means so great as that discernible between our own hand-writing and the printed letter, from which it has been derived.

8. The letters תרסלהא, when occurring at the end of a line, are sometimes lengthened out thus, תרסלהא, in order to fill up the space.

On the Powers of the Consonants.

9. א Alef, as already remarked, has the power of an unaspirated H: that is, it is used for the purpose of enouncing the vowel following it without any audible aspiration. It appears probable also, that this was its power in ancient times; not only, because the same letter has to this day the same power in the Syriac, Arabic, and Ethiopic, which are nothing more than dialects of the Hebrew, but because we find it occasionally put for ה Hé, or ו Áyin, in the Hebrew Bible itself; and, in the cognate dialects, the Syriac and Chaldee, for י Yód.* Among the Greeks and Latins it was expressed by one or other of the vowels unaspirated, and mostly by Alpha or A.† In writing Hebrew words in Roman letters, we shall form the syllable in which this letter is found, by representing that vowel only which accompanies it.

10. ב Béth is found either with or without a point inscribed, as בּ or ב. In the first case it is pronounced as our B; in the second, as V; and hence, it is sometimes represented by ו Vaw, as בּוּ, occasionally written וּו. In the cognate dialects it is often changed for פ Pé or מ Mém, being a letter of the same organ with them. But of this more will be said hereafter.

11. ג Gímél is also written with or without the point, thus גּ or ג. In the first case, all are agreed that it should be pronounced like G in the words gird, give, and the like. How it should be pronounced in the second, grammarians are not agreed. Some think it should take the sound of G in ginger; others, that it should be pronounced as G in the German Gemacht, &c. The usual practice, however, is, to sound it like G in gird, in every case.‡

12. ד Dáleth is also found both with and without this point, as ד and ד. In the first case it is pronounced like D in dare, do, &c. In the second, some give it the sound of TH, in thine, this; others neglect this distinction, and pronounce it like D in every case. It is probable, that it was originally pronounced with the tip of the tongue placed against the roots of the fore-teeth, just as its corresponding letter is still pronounced by the Orientals; which will give it rather a softer sound than that of our D. It is also probable, that it had two sounds, as it is the case now with the Arabic, where we have د Dál and ذ Dhál; the former pronounced like D dental, the latter like th in thine. Hence we may account for דבר Dāvár meaning a word, and דבר Déver, meaning a pestilence: the root of the former being ذבר Dhábara, scripsit librum, &c., the other דבר Dábara, ulceratum fuit, &c. We also have דבר Dhábr from the first root signifying Scriptura, and דבר Dhábir, bene discens, et edoctus, sapientiam, of similar import with דבר Dāvár, a word, relation, &c.; and from the second, דבר Dábr mors, of similar signification with דבר Déver, pestis, &c. This method of considering the powers of several other letters of the Alphabet, will generally explain the apparently conflicting significations sometimes found to prevail in the same Hebrew root, of which the modern Lexicographers have very properly availed themselves.*

13. It will be unnecessary to make any additional remarks on the following letters till we come to ח Khéth; and, on this it is only necessary to say, that like ד Dáleth, it probably had two sounds originally, the one more, the other less, aspirated, as noticed in the Dictionaries.

14.  $\text{ט}$  Téth should be pronounced with the tip of the tongue against the roof of the mouth, just as our own T is, and hence it may be termed cerebral.

15.  $\text{י}$  Yód is equivalent to our Y, as stated in the table. The Italians and Germans represent this letter by J, which they pronounce like our Y: and, as the first Hebrew Grammars studied in this country were imported from the Continent, we adopted the word Jehovah, Jehu, &c. which they very properly pronounced Yehovah, Yehu, &c. When occurring at the beginning of a word with the vowel i, it loses its power as a consonant, and takes the sound of the vowel only, as Is-ra-el, not Yis-ra-el. This is also found to take place in the Arabic, as Iktob, not Yektob, for  $\text{يكتب}$ .—See De Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. p. 4, note.

16. The sound of  $\text{כ}$ , without a point, probably partook more of the sound of K than of  $\text{ך}$  Khéth, which will account for its being represented by the Greek  $\chi$  and  $\kappa$ . With the point ( $\text{כּ}$ ) it is universally sounded like our C in carry, as already stated.

17.  $\text{ס}$  Sámek, and  $\text{שׁ}$  Sín, have for many centuries been pronounced alike, i. e. like S, in sin; and, although many Hebrew words are now found written with either promiscuously, it is doubtful whether this is not owing to the copyists; possibly it may be a departure from the pronunciation of  $\text{שׁ}$  Shin which may have been peculiar to this form ( $\text{שׁ}$ ) even in ancient times. See Judg. xii. 6.

18.  $\text{א}$  Áyin probably had, like  $\text{ד}$  Dáleth and  $\text{ך}$  Khéth, two sounds originally; one approaching to that of g mixed with h or r; another to that of  $\text{א}$  Álef, just as it is the case with the Arabs, who have both  $\text{ع}$  Ghain, and  $\text{ع}$  Ain. The examples to be found in the modern Lexicons under this letter, as well as the various orthography of proper names found in the Septuagint, may be considered as sufficient proof of this position.\* At present, this letter is usually passed over, like the Álef, in silence. The sound of ng in king, given to it generally by the Jews, may probably have prevailed even in ancient times. I have observed in the pronunciation of the Arabs of Barbary, that they give a nasal sound to their Ain,  $\xi$ ; and, that the Archbishop of Jerusalem, who was some time ago in this country, pronounced the Syriac  $\nu$  in this way, although the Maronites inform us, that it should be pronounced with a sort of compression of the throat.† We shall designate it in the Roman characters by an H, with a point under it.

19. The sound of  $\kappa$  Kóph is rather harder than that of  $\kappa$  Cáph: it is made by a sudden compression of the throat, and may be compared to the noise made by water when discharging itself from a bottle: it is, perhaps, analogous with the Roman Q. The explanations given in the table will be sufficient for the remaining letters.

20. We now come to the numerical values of the letters. We have given in the Table (Art. 4) the letters corresponding to the units, tens, and hundreds, up to 400. The remaining hundreds up to one thousand, are thus expressed: the  $\daleth$  final Cáph is put for 500;  $\beth$  final Mém for 600;  $\gamma$  final Nún for 700;  $\eta$  final Pé 800; and  $\zeta$  final Tsádé 900. One thousand is mostly expressed by the word  $\aleph$  Élef, a thousand; two thousand by  $\aleph$  Alpáyim; any number of thousands by using the word  $\aleph$  élef, thousand, or  $\aleph$  Áláfim, thousands, with the proper numeral prefixed, as the rules of Syntax shall require. Sometimes, as in the notes of the Masora,  $\aleph$  stands for one thousand; but on this subject the Hebrew tables of abbreviations should be consulted.‡

21. The numbers from ten to twenty are made by adding such unit to the numeral for ten, as will make the number required. Thus יא will represent eleven, יב twelve, and so on. The number 15, however, is made by טו, i. e. 9+6, not יד, i. e. 10+5, because יה is one of the names of God. In like manner, 21 will be כא, 22 כב, 32 לב, 42 מב, and so on. On this principle, the number given at the end of Genesis for the verses found in that book is, אָדָלָד=1534.

22. Whether this method of expressing numbers formerly prevailed in the Hebrew manuscripts, has been a subject of some dispute, and one which it is now impossible to determine. That the numbers have been expressed in words written at length for some centuries, there seems to be no doubt, but whether this was the case in very ancient times or not, it is difficult to say.*

23. As the Hebrew letters are sometimes changed for one another, both in primitive words, and in the process of derivation; and, as this change mostly takes place in letters of the same organ,† the following classification of them, according to the different organs of speech, has usually been given:—

- |   |            |                   |                  |                  |                                 |
| 1 | Gutturals, | א Álef ,   | ה Hé ,    | ח Khéth , | ע Áyin .                 |
| 2 | Palatals,  | ג Gímél ,  | י Yód ,   | כ Cáph ,  | ק Kóph .                 |
| 3 | Linguals,  | ד Dáleth , | ט Téth ,  | ת Taw .   |                                 |
| 4 | Sibilants, | ז Záyin ,  | ס Sámek , | צ Tsādé , | ש Shín , שׁ Sín . |
| 5 | Labials,   | ב Béth ,   | ו Vaw ,   | מ Mém ,   | פ Pé .                   |

24. The letters ל, מ, נ, ר, are termed liquids.‡

25. Four of the letters of the Alphabet occasionally lose their powers as consonants, and are then said to be quiescent or silent. These letters are, א Álef, ה Hé, ו Vaw, and י Yód, which form a sort of memoria technica in the word אֶהְוִי Ēhēvī. Those letters too which occasionally have a point inscribed, have, for the same reason, been formed into the technical word בגדנפת Bēgad-kēpháth. The final letters which are sometimes lengthened are exhibited in the words אֹהֶל תָּמָר Óhel Tāmár, Tamar's tent: and the finals which vary in form, as mentioned in the table, are comprehended in the words כַּמְנַפֵּץ Cammēnappéts, "Like a disperser."

† As גו for גב and נח for the back; מריא and בריא fat; and many others to be found in the dictionaries.

26. The letters have been further divided into two classes; one containing such letters as are occasionally servile, that is, are employed in the process of grammatical accident and derivation; the other, those only which are never so employed; the first have been termed servile, the second radical letters. The servile letters are, however, occasionally radical, though the radical ones are never servile.

27. The servile letters are all comprehended in the following memoria technica, viz. מֹשֶׁה אֵיתָן וְכֹלֵב, Mōshé Ēthán Vēcālév, i. e. Moses, Ethan, and Caleb. The remaining letters are termed radical.*

28. The best method the learner can adopt for making himself acquainted with the letters is, to write them over carefully and frequently, till he is quite familiar with all their forms. In doing this, he should strongly mark the difference between those letters, which are in some respects similar, such as ב Béth, and כ Cáph, ג Gimél, and נ Nún, and so on; in order to avoid the

* In almost all the printed copies of the Hebrew Bible, we find some of the letters occasionally larger or smaller than others; others inverted, or suspended a little above the general line of printing; in one instance, we have a final letter in the middle of a word; in others, a medial letter is used as a final: out of all which the Jews, and indeed some Christian writers, have endeavoured to elicit certain mysteries. But as they are most likely all owing to some accident in the transcription of the MSS., we may be excused in dismissing them without further notice.

confusion which beginners often experience, and to make that pleasant which is to many extremely irksome. If he use a pen, the point should be cut a little oblique, in order to make the horizontal strokes strong and regular; the others, which should be perpendicular, should be made fine and equal. An oriental reed, however, makes by far the best pen for writing these letters, which should be cut nearly like a pen, with a slit, and the point oblique, as already mentioned.*

On the Vowels.

29. It has already been remarked, (Art. 3.) that the Hebrew vowels present a system of marks or characters arranged sometimes above, at others in the middle, and at others beneath, the consonants: we now proceed to delineate and explain this.

† In these cases, the consonant ך is considered merely as the fulcrum of the accompanying vowels, and in the first it is often omitted, the point then resting on the side of the preceding or following consonant. The ך too is pretty much in the same predicament, and is also occasionally left out. In this case analogy must determine, whether it stand for a perfect or imperfect vowel.

30. It will be seen from the Exemplifications, which of the vowels-marks are placed above, which in the middle, and which below, the line. From the note appended to the table of consonants, will also be seen what sounds are given to the Roman vowels, as here made to represent the powers of the Hebrew ones; and, consequently, what powers the Hebrew vowels have.

31. The learner cannot now do better than make out a syllabarium for himself, extending throughout the whole of the alphabet, in the manner of the Exemplifications just given; bearing in mind, that whenever either of the letters contained in the memoria technica, בגדכפת Běgadhképháth, begins a syllable, the point should be inscribed. The exceptions will be given hereafter. He should also bear in mind, that the consonant must always precede the vowel, as marked in the table : a few exceptions to this rule will be noticed hereafter.*

* The sound of ě in these examples is remarkably short, better expressed by our brī, grī, drī, &c., without a vowel. So in the substitutes, which usually accompany the guttural letters. The final vowel וֹ, &c. has been added, in order to facilitate this rapidity of utterance in bārī, gārī,—běhē, bōhā, &c., making one syllable only.

32. By perfect vowels, as given in the first class, is meant, vowels which, being preceded by a consonant, will constitute a complete syllable in Hebrew orthography, as בָּ bā, in which both the consonant and vowel are fully and properly enounced. The same is the case, when either of the letters contained in the memoria technica, אֵהֶוִי Ēhēvî, which occasionally lose their powers as consonants, (Art. 25,) follows its homogeneous vowel, (of which more hereafter,) as, אָבָּ bā.

33. By imperfect vowels is meant, those vowels which are not generally found to constitute syllables without either the addition of another consonant, or of an accent. Such syllable, therefore, must either be like בַּד bad, or בָּ bā, i. e. followed by a consonant, or accompanied by an accent. When, moreover, a consonant is found to follow a perfect vowel, with an accent, as אֲבָרָה, &c., this vowel may be considered as an imperfect one: i. e. generally, an imperfect vowel, accompanied by an accent, will have the power of a perfect one; and, vice versâ, a perfect vowel so accompanied will exert the power of an imperfect one. Hence it will follow generally, that no syllable, excepting the last of any word, can have more than one quiescent

* The usual classification of the vowels has been, 1. Long vowels, 2. Short vowels, and 3. Vowels still shorter than the preceding. We have adopted a different one, for the following reason. These distinctions cease to exist when the vowels are combined with the consonants; for then, the second class of vowels becomes long, either by position, that is, when a consonant follows, or, by being accompanied by an accent. Both these classes of the vowels are, therefore, long when reduced to practice; and it is useless to speak of them in any other point of view.

It can never be necessary, we believe, to trouble the learner with the five different lengths of time ascribed to these vowels by Albert Schultens and Schræder; although the latter has declared, that it is a law amplissimum usum habens, because we have been unable to discover in what the use consists.

letter after a vowel; as in קָוֶם, קָמָה. Such forms as חוֹקָה, חוֹנָה, are anomalous, and occur but rarely.

34. The last class of signs has been designated “Substitutes for the mark (:) Shěvá,” which, in truth, they are, as we shall see hereafter.*

On the Combination of the Vowels with the Consonants.

35. Considering then, as we do, all the letters of the alphabet as consonants, no possible difficulty can arise from their combination with the vowels, when a consonant only precedes, as is the case in our exemplifications, (Art. 29.); but, when a consonant also follows, some questions may arise as to the conjoint effect produced. This we now proceed to explain.

36. The only difficulty that can present itself to a learner, will be in the concurrence of any of the letters אהוי Ehēví, with certain vowels preceding.

37. It has been remarked (Art. 25.), that these letters will occasionally lose their powers as consonants. We now say, this happens only when they are preceded by those vowels which are, or may become, homogeneous with them in sound, respectively. In this sense א may become quiescent after any vowel, as may also ה. ו will be quiescent with Khōlém or Shūrék only: and י with Khīrík, Tsēréré, Sēgól, and occasionally with Kāméts; as בָּא bā, בֶּה bē, בּוֹ bō, בִּי bī, עָלֶיךָ haleka, עָלָיו hāláu. The reason of this seems to be, that, as these consonants are made up of sounds nearly allied to those of the vowels respectively, when the vowel precedes both will

* Our object in adopting this new nomenclature is, to avoid the inconsistency of detailing a system of long, short, and most short vowels; and then, of informing the learner, that after all, every short vowel becomes long in practice; and, that the class of the shortest vowels contains nothing more than substitutes for what, in fact, are no vowels at all.

coalesce, and consequently the power of the consonant will be merged in that of the vowel. When these letters have no vowel, they will necessarily be silent, as in  $\text{חֶט}$  Khét;  $\text{הֶבִיא}$  Hēví, where the  $\text{א}$  is in each case said to be otiose.

38. A vowel, however, may precede, which is not homogeneous with such consonant; this will happen only in the cases of  $\text{א}$  and  $\text{י}$ , and then a diphthongal sound will be formed, as ai, in  $\text{אָדֹנָי}$  Ādōnai or Ādōnai; oi, in  $\text{גֹּי}$  Goi or Goy; ui, in  $\text{גָּלִי}$  Gā-lui or Gālúy. Other diphthongs may be formed; but more do not occur in Hebrew.—It must be remembered, however, that when any of these letters happens also to have a vowel of its own, i. e. following it, it will not be quiescent.

39. There are, moreover, a few instances in which two such letters may be found following a vowel, which is homogeneous with neither of them, as  $\text{אָלִי}$ ,  $\text{עָלִי}$ , and the like; in which, according to analogy,  $\text{י}$  should form the diphthong ai or ay, and the last letter  $\text{א}$  be considered either as a consonant, or as combining with the foregoing in a kind of triphthong, as Ē-laiv, or Ē-laiu, Hā-laiv, or Hā-laiu, but, generally, the  $\text{י}$  is in these cases considered as quiescent,\* and the following  $\text{א}$  read as the consonant v, or w, as Ē-lav, or Ē-law, and so on. Indeed, in the case of the diphthong, it is of little consequence whether we consider the concluding letter as a vowel or a consonant, i. e. whether we sound  $\text{י}$  as i, or y,  $\text{א}$  as w, or v.

\* It seems to be a general rule, that when a final ( $\text{׃}$ ) Sheva, either expressed or understood, comes under  $\text{י}$  or  $\text{א}$ , the diphthongal sound takes place: in other cases these consonants become quiescent, as in  $\text{אָלִי}$  or  $\text{עָלִי}$ , where it would be contrary to usage to supply a Sheva ( $\text{׃}$ ) under the  $\text{י}$ , as  $\text{אָלִי׃}$  and  $\text{עָלִי׃}$ .

On SHEVA and its SUBSTITUTES.

40. Shěvá (:) has two situations, one at the beginning of a syllable, the other at its ending. At the beginning of a syllable, (where it may be said to be initial,) it is, from the necessity of the case, pronounced like a very short e, as mentioned in the Table (Art. 29.). The only question, then, which can arise here will be, How is it to be known when this mark begins, or concludes, a syllable? The answer is: Whenever it is found at the beginning of a word, it must necessarily be considered as commencing the syllable; and, consequently, must be pronounced as a short vowel, otherwise the consonant, under which it is placed, cannot be uttered at all: as in the word בְּרִית Běvá-ith. The same holds good, whenever it follows a perfect vowel unaccompanied by a tone-accent; because, as that vowel must conclude the preceding syllable, the consonant, under which this mark is found, must necessarily commence the next. In this case, therefore, as before, it must be enounced as a very short vowel, as in the word הַיְתָה Hā-yěthá; here too, it will be termed initial, because it commences the syllable.

41. When, however, Shěvá (:) commences a word, (and must therefore be audible,) but is, by accident, preceded by some particle with an imperfect vowel, it will become final; e. g. גְּבוּל Gěvúl, a boundary; prefixing לְ for לָ, we shall have לְגְבוּל Lig-vúl, not Ligě-vúl.

42. In the next place, whenever the mark (:) Shěvá follows an imperfect vowel, having no tone-accent either expressed or implied, the consonant under which it is found must be taken as the last of the syllable. In this case, therefore, Shěvá (:) will have no sound, and may be said to be final or quiescent: e. g. קַמְתֵּם Kam-tém, not Kamě-tém.

43. To these rules, however, there are two exceptions of very extensive application; and these arise from the introduction of an accent. For, as it has already been remarked (Art. 33.), the operation of an accent will generally give to a perfect vowel the character of an imperfect one, and vice versâ. In these cases, therefore, Shěvá (:) may be final after a perfect vowel, and initial after an imperfect one: e. g. of the first case, בְּחָרָתָּ Bā-khár-tā, 1 Kings iii. 8, תְּגִלְנָה Tā-gél-nā, Ps. li. 10; and of the second, וַיְהִי Vā-yěhí, &c. When, however, such accent is purely euphonic, of which more hereafter, this does not always take place; as מַחְבְּרָתוֹ Makh-bar-tó, Exod. xxxix. 20, &c.*

44. Shěvá is rarely written at the end of a word. The reason probably is, that, as no vowel usually follows the last letter of Hebrew words, it would be superfluous to express Shěvá in order to shew this: the mark is consequently omitted. In one case, however, in which the preceding consonant has also a final Shěvá, it seems to have been added to shew, that no vowel has been omitted through negligence; as in the word קַמַּת kamt, &c., to distinguish it from קַמֶּת, &c. It is also found in the letter ך, but this may be considered as a part of the letter.

* The instances occurring of this kind are numerous: as הַיְהִיָּה Hā-yěthá, Gen. i. 2; ib., ver. 7, הַרְקוּעַ Hā-rā-kéah; הַרְעָה Thē-rā-é, ib., ver. 9. So also תְּדַשֵּׁן Tad-shé, ver. 11, and מְרַחֵם in ver. 2. In some of which cases, the accent seems not to interfere with the syllabication. So likewise in many cases, wherein the accent marks the tone syllable, and in which there is no euphonic one; as Gen. i. 2, בְּהוּ Vó-hū, חֲשֶׁךְ Khó-shek, ib., ver. 3, וַיֹּאמֶר Vai-yó-mer, &c. The word תְּהִי Thó-hū, ib., ver. 2, seems to present two accentuations, viz. one with the emphasis on the penultima, the other on the ultima. These apparent anomalies, however, arise from the operation of other considerations connected either with Euphony, the Etymology, or the Syntax, or from the mistakes of the copyists.

45. A part of one of the substitutes of Shěvá is occasionally found under the last letter of a word; but this happens only when such letter is one of the gutturals, ך, ם, or ן, with Mappík. The reason of this substitution seems to be, that, as these letters will not admit of the rapidity of utterance which the other consonants will, this vowel, or substitute, is added for the purpose of affording due time for their enunciation; but here the (·) is dropped, as before, and the mark (-) only remains. This mark, termed Furtive Páthakh, is, however, not to be pronounced after, but before, the letter under which it is placed, as ךֿׁׂ׃ Mā-shíăkh, not Mā-shí-khă, Messiah, or Anointed. The same is the case when such guttural letter is followed by any other consonant having a point, or Dāgēsh, within it, accompanied also by Shěvá; as, םֿׁׂ׃ Pā-sháăht, ןֿׁׂ׃ Hig-gúăht; not Pā-sháhăt, &c.

46. Those marks, which have been termed “the Substitutes of Shěvá,” supply, as it has already been intimated, the place of Shěvá, with one or other of the guttural letters ך, ן, ן, or ם, for the reason just given with reference to the Furtive Páthakh. In many cases, therefore, in which analogy would require the insertion of an initial Shěvá (:), upon the occurrence of one or other of the gutturals, some one of these substitutes will take its place. If a vowel immediately precede, the substitute will be that which is homogeneous with it: i. e. if (-) precede, (-·) will be the substitute; if (·), (::); if (·) o, then (·) will be the substitute. When no such vowel precedes, the substitute most congenial with such guttural, or with the analogy of the word, will be preferred. In the first case, ך will mostly take (-·), occasionally (::); ן (::), rarely (-·); ן or ם (-·), rarely (::); (·) is seldom used, unless (·) Khătúph, i. e. o, precedes, or unless it stands in the place of a ך Khólém, which has been rejected. In these last cases, however, usage alone can be relied on.

On the Points DAGESH and MAPPÍK.

47. Some notice has already been taken of Dāgësh (Articles 10, 11, 12, 31.); we now have to shew what its offices are. 1st. It will double any letter, which is from its situation capable of being doubled; and, 2dly, it will deprive the letters בְּגִדְכֶּפֶת of their aspiration. In the first case, whenever any consonant has this point inscribed, and is, at the same time, both preceded and followed by a vowel, or is preceded by a vowel, and has also a Shěvá, such consonant is to be read as two, e. g. לְמֶדֶד Limméd, or לְמֶדֶדֹּו Limmědú. But, if such consonant is not so preceded, &c., it cannot be doubled; and in that case, it is found only in the letters בְּגִדְכֶּפֶת, inscribed merely for the purpose of taking away their aspiration, as already noticed. Now, this last mostly takes place when such letter commences a syllable, as בָּף Caph, בֶּן Ben, &c.; in some instances when it ends it, as קָמֶת kamt. It must also be remembered, that whenever any one of these letters is in a situation to be doubled, the aspiration will also be taken away by the influence of this point, e. g. כִּפֶּר Kippér, not kiphphér.

48. In the first of these cases, this mark has been termed Dāgësh forte, in the second Dāgësh lené; terms, it must be confessed, ill chosen to designate the offices just described. I should prefer terming it Dāgësh in every case, its situation being always sufficient to determine its powers, according to our rule.

49. Mappík is a single point (like Dāgësh) inscribed in the letter ה only, thus הֵ. Its office is to shew, that this letter, when so marked, retains its power as a consonant, and is to be treated as such, both in the pronunciation and etymology. The Jews consider it also as extending to the letter י, as in יהוה־די־יהוה: Yěhū-diy-yá; but this is a useless distinction.

On the Mark רָפֵהּ RA-PHE.

50. Formerly when Dāgēsh was not found in any of the קָנֶדְקֶת letters, a mark called רָפֵהּ Rā-phé, was placed above it, in order to shew that the point had not been omitted by mistake. With the ancient Syrians this was nothing more than a point made with red ink. The Hebrews probably wrote it in the same way: but, as this point might be mistaken for the vowel Khōlém, when printed, or, for one of the accents, the form of it was altered for a short line thus (-), which is still found in the Hebrew manuscripts,* though very rarely in the printed books.

51. Other points are sometimes found placed over certain words in the Hebrew Bible, the use of which is now unknown. The accounts given of these by the Rabbins may be seen in Buxtorf's Thesaurus Grammaticus, lib. i. cap. v. art. 6, which need not be detailed here.

52. It will be seen by recurring to the table of vowels (Art. 29.), that Khōlém is given with a ו Vaw for its fulcrum, thus ו. The Vaw, however, is frequently left out. But, as the letters שׁ Sín and שׂ Shín are also written with a point on the left or right side, respectively, a question may arise, as to how the Khōlém is to be represented in the case of its following שׁ, or preceding שׂ. The answer is: Supposing any consonant to follow שׁ Sín, and this שׁ to have no other vowel-mark, then will its own diacritical point also stand for Khōlém; as שֶׁ֫שׁ Sō-né. In every other case, שׁ will be merely the consonant s, as given in the Table (Art. 4.). In the next place, with respect to שׂ Shín: Supposing any consonant to precede שׂ Shín, having neither Vowel-mark nor Shéva, then will the diacritical point of ש Shin stand also for Khōlēm, thus, שׁב Bósh. But, if the preceding letter have a Vowel or Shěvá, שׁ Shín will be used merely as directed in the table of consonants. This expedient has been resorted to, in order to avoid the inconvenience of marking these points twice over, which must otherwise have taken place.

* And in these it is sometimes put over a letter requiring Dāgēsh forte by analogy, also over נ and ׀ when quiescent.

53. It will also be seen in the table of the vowels, that the letter י Yod has been placed above the point (·) then called Khīrīk Gādól, in order to shew that it is a perfect vowel. This י Yod, however, is frequently omitted; and, when that is the case, an accent, as it will be seen hereafter, is mostly added to make the distinction. But, as this accent is also sometimes omitted, analogy will then be the only criterion by which the distinction can be known.

54. The learner will also perceive, that Kāméts, and Kāméts Khātúph, have the same form, viz. (ֿ). How then, it may be asked, are they to be distinguished? I answer; Whenever any consonant follows the mark (ֿ) having also a vowel of its own, it will be seen, that (ֿ) must make a complete syllable, and must therefore be the vowel Kāméts, as in the word רָפָה Rā-phé. For here, as פ begins the following syllable, the ר with (ֿ) must necessarily constitute the preceding one: (ֿ) therefore will here be the perfect vowel Kāméts. In the next place, (ֿ) found under any one of the letters וכלב, (Art. 27.) at the beginning of a word, will be Kāméts; because, in this case, a contraction must have taken place; as, בָּחֲלִי Bā-khōlí, for בָּחֲלִי, the (ֿ) here being compensative of (-). So in בָּאֶחָדָה Bā-ō-hol-ká, for בָּאֶחָדָה. These cases will be explained hereafter.

55. The following are the exceptions: 1. Should (ֿ) Khātéph Kāméts follow (ֿ), or a (ֿ) which has arisen out of (⌣) by the operation of a rule hereafter to be given, then will (⌣) be Kāméts Khātúph, and must be read as o, although an accent accompany it; as, פֶּה־לֵךְ Pō-hol-ká, in which case the (⌣) Khātúph being sustained by an accent, becomes equal to the perfect vowel (י), And, 2dly, when any consonant following (⌣) has no vowel, and the syllable is also without an accent, (⌣) will then be Kāméts Khātúph; as, חֹל־מָה Khok-má, רוֹן Ron-nú, יִבֹטֵז Ik-botz, &c.

56. As to the names of the vowels, &c., they are generally Chaldee or Syriac, whence some have argued that their invention is modern.* But, as this will involve questions of no importance to the learner, nothing need be said on the subject here.

57. Whether the pronunciation here ascribed to the different consonants and vowels was that in use in ancient times, it is impossible now to say: nor is it of much importance either to the learner or the critic. That the approximation is near, there cannot be much doubt; and, that the system is generally the same, is, perhaps, sufficiently certain. But, as the Jews differ in their pronunciation in different countries, we have here taken that of the Portuguese Jews, as nearly as it could be obtained, which is generally allowed to be the best.

* The heads of the arguments urged on this question may be seen in the Institutiones Ling. Heb. by Schultens, p. 53, &c., or in the Arcanum punctuationis revelatum, by Capell, &c. Various hypotheses have been offered on the names of the letters: one of the latest, and perhaps most improbable, is, that, as they occasionally present forms not in use in the Hebrew, they must therefore have been taken from some more ancient form of the language!

LECTURE II.

ON THE HEBREW ACCENTS, &amp;c.

58. HAVING given tables of the Hebrew consonants and vowels, with some explanations and rules as to their powers and use, we now come to consider the accents, and to give a table exhibiting their forms, situations, and names, to be followed, as before, with some observations on their nature and application. The following table given by Alting and adopted by Schultens and Gesenius, has been chosen as sufficiently extensive and explicit for our present purpose. The word here taken for the purpose of exhibiting the situation, &c. of accents, is cited from Isaiah lvii. 18, and signifies, with its affixes, "And I will heal him." The distinctive powers which these accents are believed to possess, will be considered hereafter.

59. The Hebrew accents are found placed below, above, or on a level with, the line of the consonants. Those which are found below, are twelve in number: their situations, forms, and names, are as follows:—

No.	Sit. and Form.	Name.
1.	וְאֶרְפָּאֵהוּ	סִלּוּק or סְלוּק	Sillúk.

Those which are placed above the line of consonants, are eighteen in number. Their names, forms, and situations, are as follows:—

No.	Sit. and Form.	Name.
1.	וְאֶרְפָּאֵהוּ	רֵבִיעַ	Révíáh.

18.	וְאֶרְפָּאֵהוּ	מַהְפָּךְ	Mahpák superior.

Zarká anterior, and the two last, are found thus in the poetical books only.

The accents, written both above and below the line at the same time are four: their names, forms, and situations, are as follows:—

No.	Sit. and Form.	Name.
1.	וְאֶרְטָאֶהוּ	Mahpák with Mercá .
2.	וְאֶרְטָאֶהוּ	Zarká with Mercá .
3.	וְאֶרְטָאֶהוּ	Zarká with Mahpák .
4.	וְאֶרְפָאֶהוּ	Mūnákh with Mahpák .

One only is found in the same line with the consonants.

וְאֶרְפָאֶהוּ לְגַרְמֵי Legarmé, or פְּסִיק P'ésík, according to its situation.

It should be observed that, as several of these accents have the same form, they can be distinguished by their positions only. The best way to get acquainted with them is, to write them over a few times, first with, and then without, the tables.*

60. These marks are divided, with respect to their offices, into Tonic, and Euphonic, accents.

61. The tonic accent, however situated, can affect only the ultimate or penultimate syllable of any word, which

* Various offices have been ascribed to these accents. By some they are thought to have been attached to the sacred text, in order to regulate the tone of voice, either in reading or chanting. Others have supposed them to have been affixed for the purpose of dividing it into its several members, as verses, the larger and smaller members of sentences, &c., and to point out the different dependence which these parts exhibit on one another. Others, again, have assigned to them emphasis, parenthesis, parallelism, &c., while others have given them all these offices together. Some, again, have supposed them to be of divine, others of human, origin. In the present work we shall consider their application to the text, as the best grammarians usually have done, viz., as intended to divide the context into its different members, and to determine (for the most part) the tone-accent of the words in which they are found. As to their authority, we cannot allow it to be divine, until better proofs than any hitherto offered shall have been given on that point. As coming from men, who had perhaps made the Hebrew Bible the study of their lives, they are valuable. They may, nevertheless, be rejected, whenever a more convenient division can be discovered.

it does by directing the accentuation to be placed on that syllable. When this accent is found on any other syllable, the tone-accentuation of such word can be known only from its analogy. In other cases, the accent will point it out.

62. When a word happens to have more than one tonic accent, and both are the same, the first will govern the accentuation; as,  $\text{תְּהוֹ} \text{Thó-hū}$ : but, when they are not the same, the last will have it; e. g.  $\text{וְלִמּוֹעֵדִים} \text{Ū-lēmō-ādīm}$ .

63. Generally, all words either being, or terminating in the form of, Segolates (to be considered hereafter), will have the accentuation on the penultimate syllable: all others on the ultimate.

64. The Euphonic accent supplies a sort of secondary accentuation to the syllable on which it is found, which can never be the ultimate of any word, nor even the penultimate of those having the Segolate form.

65. Of this accent, modern grammarians count two sorts, Métheg  $\text{מֵתֵג}$ , and Makkáph  $\text{מַקְפָּה}$ . The former of these has the same form with Sillúk (◌); but, as it can never hold the same situation, the distinction is easily made. The latter takes the form of our hyphen; as in  $\text{אֶת-כֹּל} \text{Eth-kól}$ , and generally deprives the preceding word of its tone-accent. In neither case is their insertion always solitary; for, several Méthegs are sometimes found in the same word, and several words are occasionally connected by the operation of Makkáph. Particular rules for their insertion will be given hereafter.

66. One mark more it may suffice to notice here, and that is, a small circle sometimes found over a word in the Hebrew context; thus,  $\text{הִנְיָצָה}$ . The word over which this mark is found is said to be  $\text{כֶּתִיב} \text{Kéthív}$ , or written; and the mark itself is intended to direct the attention of the reader to some note to be found either in the margin, or at the foot of the page. For the most part, it directs the reader to a various reading, on the right side of which we find the word קְרִי Kěri, meaning either reading or read.\* The readings thus pointed out in the Hebrew Bible amount to about 1000, and are generally preferred to those found in the text. The far greater part of them has been found by Kennicott and De Rossi in the MSS. which they collated.†

67. Having thus far explained the powers of the several consonants, vowels, accents, &c., and given some rules on the subject of their combination, we now proceed to examine a portion or two of the Hebrew text, in exemplification of what has been said. The passage we shall first take is, Zephaniah iii. 8, in which we have all the letters of the Alphabet with most of the vowels and other marks. In reading this, we would advise the learner to mark each syllable distinctly with a slight pause, and to continue this practice until he is perfectly familiar with all the consonants, vowels, &c.

† Kennicott's Dissertatio Generalis, § 39. De Rossi Proleg. § xxxix.

‡ This word is pronounced אֲדוֹנָי Ādō-nái by the Jews, whenever it is found as pointed above: but, when it precedes the word אֲדוֹנָי in the text, it then takes the points of the word אֱלֹהִים Ēlōhím, thus יְהוָה, and is then pronounced Ēlōhím. This is a mere Jewish superstition, derived from a considerable antiquity; it having been their opinion, that this name ought to be pronounced by none except the High Priest, and by him only once in the year.

The learner will recollect that he is to read, beginning at the right, and proceeding towards the left, hand (Art. 3.); and that the consonants must precede the vowels (Art. 31.). The numerals are added to shew the order of the words. Let us now proceed to analyse the syllables, &c.

In No. 1, we have Lámed with Kāméts, making the open syllable Lā. After this we have Caph with Tséré, followed by Nún, making the syllable kén. Here, according to our system of syllabication, we should have had some imperfect vowel under the Caph (Art. 33.), which would have been sufficient to complete this syllable; but the accent Mahpák being added, the anomaly is corrected (ib.).

No. 2. Khéth with Pathákh, followed by Caph with the point Dāgësh inscribed: and, as a vowel follows this letter, it must be doubled, the point is, therefore, Dāgësh forte (Art. 47.). The first syllable, consequently, is khak, the second is kú, and this is composed of the second Caph, and the vowel Shūrék. We next have the mark called Makkáph, which is used to connect numbers 2 and 3 together, like our hyphen (Art. 65.).

No. 3. Lámed with Khīrík followed by Yód, making the open syllable lī; to this is added the tonic accent Pashtá, which may be represented by lí.

No. 4. we have Nún with Shěvá. In this case Shěvá is very slightly pronounced (Art. 40.), but it is not reckoned as a syllable. In the next place we have Álef with Kibbúts followed by Mem. This syllable, therefore, must be pronounced úm, in which u has the sound of oo in good. The whole word will then be něúm, in which the ě will be passed over as rapidly as possible. We then have the mark Makkáph, as before.

No. 5. is the word Jehovah, pronounced Yěhō-vá.

Here Shěvá is passed over rapidly as before. The point over the left limb of Hé is the vowel Khōlém (Art. 52.); and, as the Vaw following has a vowel of its own, it is not quiescent in the preceding vowel Khōlém, which it otherwise would be (Art. 37.). The first syllable, therefore, including the Shěvá, will be Yěhō, the next Vá, in which the terminating ן will be quiescent in the preceding Kāmets. Over the Vaw commencing this last syllable, we have the accent Zāképh Kātón. In no respect, therefore, can the mark (ⴞ) under this Vaw be a Kāmets Khātúph. (Art. 54.).

Nothing now occurs worth remark till we come to No. 11. In the word םֶסֶפֶל Lē-ěsoph, then, the first syllable consists of Lūméd with Sēgól, accompanied by an Euphonic accent (Art. 65.) called Métheq, making a complete syllable (Art. 33.). This syllable, therefore, is open Lē. The Alef following, with Khātéph Sēgól which is a substitute of Shěvá (Art. 46.), does not constitute a syllable; and, therefore, it is passed over as rapidly as convenient, in connection with the following syllable Sóph, which has the tonic accent Pashtá (Art. 59.).

No. 12. The first syllable consists of Gīmél with (י) Khōlém (Art. 29.). The next syllable is commenced by Yód, with Khīrík following, and which, by analogy, should be followed by another Yód, as ם״י Yím, or ím (Art. 15.): but the second Yód is frequently omitted, as will be seen hereafter. Khīrík thus situated is nevertheless a perfect vowel: and, as the syllable also ends with a consonant, the accent Géresh is added to rectify the syllabication (Art. 33.).

No. 13. ץֶקֶלֶל. Here the first letter has an Initial Shěvá, which will therefore be passed over rapidly. In the next place we have ך Koph, followed by (ⴞ), i. e. either

Kāméts or Kāméts Khātúph. It cannot be Kāméts, because it precedes a consonant which has no vowel of its own, and is accompanied by no accent, (Art. 54.). The first syllable, therefore, will be Lěkov, and the last, tsí, which need not be further explained.

On No. 14. it will be necessary only to remark, that the point placed over the middle of the letter כ is the accent Rěviáh, not the vowel Khólém, which however follows that letter. A recurrence to the tables will always be sufficient to shew, that this accent is placed over the middle of the consonant, Khólém always on the one side.

No. 19. forms one syllable only: the Khátéph Páthakh (·) found under the ח Khéth, being one of the substitutes of Shevá, is not counted in the syllabication.

68. The names of the different accents will be found by turning to the table (Art. 59.), with which the Learner will do well to make himself familiar: otherwise, he will occasionally confound them with the vowels, and, in many instances, be unable to determine whether Shěvá begins, or ends a syllable, or whether the mark (·) be Kāméts, or Kāméts Khātúph. We shall subjoin a passage, for the sake of practice, in which the greater part of the accents is found, with the syllables in Roman letters, as in the last, in order to facilitate the reading.

lā-kēn	hek-rōn	ělō-hé	zěvuv	běvā-ḥal	lid-rósh	shō-lěäkh

69. It will be unnecessary to point out the names of the different vowels and accents found in this extract, as the Learner will easily find them by recurring to the tables. It may be necessary however to remark, that the accent found between the third and fourth words is termed Lěgarmé, not Pěsík. The distinction consists in this: that when the accent Múnách precedes the mark ( | ) it is then termed Lěgarmé. When any other accent precedes, it is termed Pěsík. In the word לָכֹן too, the accent is found over the ל, while the accented syllable is the following one כֹן: but this accent, viz., Tělishá gědōlá, is always found on the first letter, see the Table, while the accentuation is regulated by the analogy (Art. 61.) As the word שָׁם commences with Dāgěsh in the ש, the vowel (τ) terminating the preceding word is so connected with it, as to enable the reader to pronounce it as two, as in shshám (Art. 47.).

70. The Learner cannot now do better than to take a Hebrew Bible, and transcribe a chapter or more at a time, in Roman letters, divided into syllables as given above; and this he should continue to do until he is quite familiar with the letters, vowels, accents, and syllables. After this he may read, which he had better do, aloud, until he finds no difficulty in enouncing every word fully and correctly. A little perseverance will accomplish this, which is perhaps the greatest difficulty he will have to encounter: and, when he has succeeded, he will find his progress both easy and delightful.

LECTURE III.

ON THE GENERAL PRINCIPLES WHICH PREVAIL IN REGULATING THE ETYMOLOGY OF THE HEBREW LANGUAGE.

X 71. IT is well known that changes take place in the consonants and vowels of all languages, which can be accounted for on no other principles than those of euphony. Certain vowels and consonants would, in some situations, introduce sounds so difficult of utterance and so grating to the ear, that conversation would become painful both to the speaker and hearer. In order to avoid these, certain changes are found to take place in the constitution of words, which at first sight appear to be anomalous, and which give great trouble to the learner until the laws by which they are regulated are understood. In no language is this more apparent than in the Hebrew and its dialects, particularly the Arabic. In the Sanscrit it prevails in a much greater degree, and is found in its descendant the Greek to give more trouble to the learner than any thing else brought under his observation. It is our intention to commence our investigation of the principles of the Hebrew language, by detailing the rules by which these apparent anomalies are regulated, for the purpose of enabling the learner to account for the different forms of words as they occur. Because, until he has some knowledge of this subject, he will meet with scarcely any thing but difficulty; and may, after a study of some years, be induced, as many have been, to confess that there is nothing certain in this language.

72. It has been remarked (Art. 36, &c.), that the letters contained in the technical word  $\text{יְיָיָ}$ , will occasionally lose their power as consonants, or become quiescent in the sound of the preceding vowel, so that the pronunciation of the word will continue the same whether these letters be written or not: and, the consequence is, they are often omitted; as, פֶּקֹד for פִּקְוֹד visitor, דְּבָרִים for דְּבָרִים words, אֹתָת for אֹתוֹת signs, שָׁת for שָׁאת elevation, תִּשְׁנֶה for תִּשְׁנֶה they (fem.) approach, מִלְּכֶם for מַה-לְּכֶם what (is it) to you? יָדַעְתִּי for יָדַעְתִּי I have known, &c. And, vice versa, these letters will occasionally be inserted when the analogy does not require them: as פִּקְוֹד for פֶּקֹד visiting, קָאם for קָם stood,\* &c.

73. Hence, when Shěvá (:), or one of its substitutes, happens to be initial, and to precede one of the letters אֶהְיֶה, a contraction generally takes place, by which both (: ) and the אֶהְיֶה letter is rejected, and the following vowel drawn back to the place of the rejected Shěvá; e. g. שָׁת for שָׁאת, אָמַר for אָאמַר, בִּבְיָת for בִּבְיָת, יִפְקֹד for יִהְיֶה־יִפְקֹד, חָקָה for חָיָה־חָקָה, כִּי for כִּי, עָרִים for רָי, רָגַל for רָגְלוֹ, יָמִים for יָמִים (pl. of יוֹם day), עִירִים for עִירִים (cities, pl. of עִיר), רָאשִׁים for רָאשֵׁי (pl. of ראש head, where, however, the א is retained).

74. When any one of the letters אֶהְיֶה terminates a word, and has no vowel either preceding or following, it is often rejected: as, שָׁבִי for שָׁבִיָּה a captive, גַּי for גַּיָּה a valley, קוֹ for קוֹה a line, עֶד for עֶדִי or עֶדְךָ (passing) yet, ever, eternal.

1. When these letters remain, they are said to be otiose (Art. 37.), and this may happen either in the middle or at the end of a word: as, הֵבִיאתָ thou broughtest, גַּיָּה a valley.

2. Hence it is, that ה standing as the third letter of a root, and losing its vowel, is rejected: as, יָגַל for יָגְלֶה, originally יָגְלֶה he reveals, יִשְׁלֵל for יִשְׁלֶה, &c. This case is termed Apocope. The reason of it, as will be seen hereafter, is the removal of the accent.

75. Any one of the letters ה, ו, or י, when preceded and followed by a vowel, will occasionally be dropped: as, פִּקְוֹתֵיהֶם for פִּקְוֹתֵיהֶם I visited them; פִּקְוֹתֵיהֶם for פִּקְוֹתֵיהֶם they visited them; קָם for קָם he stood; כָּן for כָּן he understood; שָׁה for שָׁה a lamb, &c.

76. Either of the letters י or כ when initial,† and כ generally

* Hence it is that the letters ו י א (for ה rarely occurs in such situation,) have been termed “Matres lectionis,” and supposed to have been used as vowels at some former period.

† Mr. Stuart has, after Gesenius, given רַד for יַרַד Jud. xix. 11; תַּמָּה for תַּמָּה 2 Sam. xxii. 41, &c.; וְשׁוֹב for וְשׁוֹב Jer. xlii. 10, as instances in which when terminating a syllable (not the last) and having a Shěvá (:), will be dropt: as, לָדַת for יִלְדֵת bearing a child; יָדַעַת for יִדְעֵת knowledge; שָׁבַשׁ for יִבְשׁ approach; יָבַשׁ for יִבְשׁ he draws near; יִפְקֹד for יִנְפְקֹד; יִהְנַפְקֹד; אַף for אִנְף anger; אִמְרַת for אִמְנֵת truth. In the latter case, when נ is dropt, the following letter will, when it can, be doubled by Dāgēsh, which may therefore be considered as compensative. ל likewise in the verb לָקַח, when it ought to take (:) Shěvá by analogy, is dropt: as, קָח for לָקַח take.

1. The reason of these elisions seems to be, that as the ' would be enounced with some difficulty with an initial Shěvá, and the נ in each case on account of its being a nasal, both have been neglected in writing.

77. When the last two letters of any root, and occasionally of derivatives, happen to be the same, one of them is usually dropt: as, סָבַר for סָבְרָ he surrounded; סָבַר for סָבְרָ surrounding; עַם for עַמָּה a people; אִם for אִמָּה a mother; which, however, will return (by Dāgēsh) when any augment is made: as, סָבְרוּ they have surrounded; עַמִּי my people, &c. In this case the rejection has probably taken place, in order to avoid an ambiguity which might arise from the operation of a rule hereafter to be considered, by which the Learner or Reader may possibly misunderstand this for a reduplication, introduced for the sake of emphasis or the like.

78. Letters of the same organ are, on account of a similarity of sound prevailing among them, sometimes changed the one for the other: e. g.

1. Labials: בָּן, בָּב, or בָּבָ the back; מָרִיא or בָּרִיא fat; מָלַט or פָּלַט he escaped.

2. Palatals: סָגַר or סָבַר he shut up; רָגַל or רָבַל he travelled; פּוֹבַע or הוֹבַע a handle.

3. Linguals: חָטַף or חָתַף he robbed.

4. Sibilants: עָלַז or עָלַם or עָלַץ he exulted; זָעַק or זָעַקָה he cried out; שָׂחַק or שָׂחַקָה he laughed.

5. Gutturals: חָלַף or חָלַףָה he was weak; אָנַם or אָנַםָה he was mournful.

י or נ having a vowel, is dropt by the aphæresis. For my part, I doubt whether these are not rather infinitives than preterites; and if they are so, the elision comes under the above rule.

79. In a few instances, letters of different organs are changed one for another : as,

1. Sibilants for Linguals : זָעַף or דָּעַף he quenched ; נָצַר or נָטַר he watched ; כָּרוֹשׁ or כָּרוֹת a fir tree ; חָרַשׁ or חָרַת he engraved.

2. Liquids for one another : לָחַץ or נָחַץ he oppressed ; הִצְהִיר or הִצְהִיר he caused to shine ; שָׁמַן or שָׁמַם he opposed ; קוֹט or קוֹט tottering ; עָבַן or עָבַר a proper name. So נְבוּכַדְנֶצַּר Nēvū-kadnētstsár, or נְבוּכַדְרֶצְטַסַּר Nēvūkadrētstsár.

80. The אֶהְיֶה letters, considered either as consonants or quiescents, will occasionally be changed for one another : particularly, when the pronunciation of the word is not materially affected by the change : e. g. פְּלוּאִים or פְּלוּיִים rags ; דּוֹעַג or דּוּיַג Dōég, a proper name ; הָלַךְ or יָלַךְ he went ; קַרְחָא or קַרְחָה baldness ; מְקוּנָא or מְקוּנָה a collection ; רֹאשׁ or רֹאשׁ the head ; רֵאָם or רֵים an animal so called ; רִישׁוֹן or רִאשׁוֹן the first ; גָּלָה he revealed, for גָּלַי, &c.

81. In like manner, נ is occasionally found in the place of one or other of the אֶהְיֶה letters : as, נָצַב for יָצַב he set up ; נָחָה for יָחָה he was beautiful. So in the Syriac, נִקְטוּל for יִקְטוּל he kills.

82. The letters of a syllable are sometimes transposed ; as, כָּסַל for סָכַל he was foolish ; בְּשֵׁב for בְּבֵשׁ a lamb ; נִשְׁחַף for כָּפַח he breathed ; פָּצַר for פָּצַץ he broke out ; אָנַה for נָאָה he sighed ; גְּאִיּוֹת for גְּאִיּוֹת vallies : and, in some cases, a letter is transposed to another syllable ; as, עֲלָה for עוֹלָה wickedness ; שְׂמָלָה for שְׂמֹלָה a garment.

1. These changes and transpositions (i. e. from Art. 78. to this place) do not otherwise affect the grammar of the language, than point out to the student what roots, &c., are said to be cognate ; that is, are related to one another in their radical letters, and have the same, or very nearly the same, signification. The preceding, as well as the following, will affect the grammatical forms of words.

83. When the ת of the Hithpāhél species of conjugation will, by analogy, precede any of the Sibilant letters (Art. 23.) a transposition, and occasionally a change, of that letter will take place : e. g. In the first case, הִתְסַבֵּל for הִסְתַּבֵּל he loaded himself ; הִתְשַׁמֵּר for הִשְׁתַּמֵּר he caused to keep. In the second : הִתְצַדֵּק for הִתְצַדֵּק he justified. In this case only, is the ת changed to ט.

1. But, when a letter of the same organ with ת (see Art. 23.) follows, both will coalesce by Dāgēsh placed in the radical letter: e. g. הַיְדַבֵּר for הַתְּדַבֵּר, root דָּבַר he spoke; הַטְהַר for הַתְּטַהַר, root טָהַר he was clean; הַתְּמַמֵּם for הַתְּמַמֵּם, root תָּמַם he was complete.

2. This coalescence, which has been termed Assimilation, is found very generally to prevail; but not without some exceptions which will be noticed hereafter.

3. In a few instances, this principle of assimilation is found to extend itself to other letters: e. g. הַיְזַפֵּי for הַתְּזַפֵּי, root זָכָה he was pure; הַתְּפָסָה for הַתְּפָסָה, root פָּסָה he covered; הַתְּנַבֵּא for הַתְּנַבֵּא, root נָבֵא he declared; אַתְּרוּמֵם for אַתְּרוּמֵם, root רוּם exalting; תְּשׁוּמֵם for תְּשׁוּמֵם, root שָׁמַם he desolated, &c.

84. Letters are sometimes added either for the purpose of facilitating the pronunciation, or, for modifying the signification of words: e. g. in the first case: אַתְּמוּל for תְּמוּל yesterday; אַזְרוּעַ for זְרוּעַ the arm.* In the second: אַכְזֵר for כְּזֵר most cruel, from כָּזַר cruel, &c. Of this kind are the paragogic letters, as well as those used in forming the different species of nouns, conjugations, &c., of which an account will be given hereafter. The first of these cases is termed Prosthesis; the second Epenthesis, Paragoge, Hēmanthi, &c., according to their different offices and uses.

85. Letters are occasionally dropt, (Art. 72. 76.), so also ם (and ך in the Syriac, Chaldaic, and Arabic,) terminating words in the plural number, when those words happen to be in the state of definite construction, of which more hereafter. ך likewise, in a very few instances at the end of proper names: as, מְגִדוֹן for מְגִדוֹן, for the reason given in Art. 76. 1.

On the Contractions which take place in the Vowels.

86. As it may occasionally happen, in combining the vowels with the consonants, that certain sounds may arise either disagreeable to the ear, difficult of utterance, or, from some reason or other generally avoided by the people speaking a given language; it is of importance to know, in what cases these difficulties are found to arise in the language before us, and how they are obviated.

87. Whenever any vowel not homogeneous with one of the letters ך or ך (Art. 38.) happens to precede such letter, a vowel will be formed from the combination partaking of the sound of both.

* Of this sort are the words stablish and establish, special and especial, in English. So in the Greek στάχος ἄσταχος, ἡστίς ἀνηστίς, &c.

1. (-) Páthakh preceding ו will become ו̇ Khōlēm: e. g. מוֹת for מוֹת death; יוֹלֵד for יוֹלֵד (for יוֹלֵד, Art. 73.) he begets; יוֹשֵׁב for יוֹשֵׁב (for יוֹשֵׁב ib.) he causes to reside.*

2. Vav ו preceded by (τ) Khātúph, (ֿ) Kibbúts, (ֿ) Sēgól, or (ֿ) Tsēré, will become ו̇: e. g. יוֹלֵד for יוֹלֵד, or יוֹלֵד (from יוֹלֵד or יוֹלֵד, Art. 73.) he is begotten; קוֹם for קוֹם standing; מְלָכִית for מְלָכִית (probably for מְלָכִית, Art. 73. of מְלָךְ king, and הוֹת or הוֹת being, root הוּהוּ was,) reigning, kingdom. So יִשְׁתַּחֲוֶה for יִשְׁתַּחֲוֶה, root שָׁחָה for שָׁחָה he was low; הָהוּ for הָהוּ emp-tiness; בָּהוּ for בָּהוּ inanity, &c.

3. In like manner, ו̇ preceded by (-) Páthakh, will become quiescent in (ֿ), the (-) disappearing: as, בַּיִת for בַּיִת a house; עַיִן for עַיִן an eye; גַּיָּא, or by Art. 74, גַּי for גַּיָּא a valley; הַיִּטֵּב for הַיִּטֵּב (for הַיִּטֵּב or הַיִּטֵּיב, Art. 73.) it does well.

4. When the vowel (ֿ) or (ֿ) precedes ו̇, the contraction will take place in ו̇ perfect: e. g. בְּרִית for בְּרִית (formed perhaps from בָּרָה cutting, and הִיָּת or הִיָּת from the root הָהוּ he was) a covenant; רֵאשִׁית for רֵאשִׁית beginning; אִישׁ for אִישׁ a man. So מְרִי for מְרִי rebellion; שָׁבִי for שָׁבִי captivity; חֲצִי for חֲצִי half.

5. In like manner, when Shěvá precedes any perfect or imperfect vowel, or, a substitute of Shěvá follows an imperfect one, a contraction may take place, in which the Shěvá or its substitute will disappear: as, 1st. שָׁאָת for שָׁאָת elevation; לְקַרְאָת for לְקַרְאָת meeting; יֹאמֵר for יֹאמֵר he says, &c. 2. לְאָמַר for לְאָמַר saying; יִאָּצֵּל for יִאָּצֵּל he separates; and, by Art. 72, יִטֵּב for יִטֵּב he prospers.

6. Either (-) or (τ) preceding a guttural letter which has (τ) Kāméts, is frequently changed into (ֿ) for the sake of euphony: as, אָחָד masc. אָחָת † fem. one; הַהָרִים for הַהָרִים the mountains.

* So in the Sanscrit regularly, a and u become o; a and i, e. See the Grammars. From this and similar cases which will occur, it appears extremely probable, that ו, when a consonant, was originally pronounced like our w, as מְלָכִית Malkewth, which is regularly written מְלָכִית Malkúth: and so of others.

† There is a manifest anomaly in the first vowel of these words, which may be corrected thus: אָחָד or אָחָד, אָחָת or אָחָת, אָחָד or אָחָד. This last would approach the orthography of the Syrians; the other, that of the Arabs.

On the General Changes of the Vowels.

88. Could we suppose Hebrew words to have remained unaltered as to their original forms, or unvaried in pronunciation with reference to the syllable on which the accent is placed, we might also suppose that no variation would ever have taken place in the vowels. But the fact is, the forms of words vary, in order to express the different shades of meaning of which the root is capable; and from this, as well as other causes, the accented syllable will not always remain the same: and, consequently, as the pronunciation of the word thus varied must alter, the vowels accompanying it must vary likewise.

89. Hence it will appear, that two circumstances are to be attended to with reference to the change of the Hebrew vowels. One is, the etymology or form of the word; the other, the situation of the accent.

90. The form of the word can only be understood from rules hereafter to be detailed. The principles, however, upon which the etymology rests, may here be considered; and that will be sufficient at the present.

91. Any augment whatever prefixed to a word will not influence our present considerations, as the changes of the vowels do not depend upon this. We have now to do only with augments postfixed to words; because it is upon these alone that such changes depend.

92. These augments, then, may be considered as of two sorts: one commencing with a vowel, and which may be termed Asyllabic; the other with a consonant, which may be termed Syllabic.*

93. We can readily perceive, that, upon any Asyllabic augment being postfixed to a word, the terminating consonant of such word must be taken in order to enounce it, otherwise it will remain silent; it being contrary to the laws of syllabication for any vowel to begin a syllable (Art. 31.). If, then, we attach the asyllabic augment ׁ, which is the mark of the plural number masculine, to any word, such as ׁע a people, or ׁק pure, we must necessarily take the last letter of either of these words to enounce it: and, if

* The reason of these terms is obvious: a vowel cannot commence a syllable in Hebrew; hence augments thus commencing are termed Asyllabic: those commencing with a consonant are, for a similar reason, termed Syllabic.

the word have by analogy but one such terminating letter, then must the preceding syllable necessarily be perfect; but, if not, imperfect; e. g.  $\text{רָרִים}$  pure, (root  $\text{רָרַר}$ , the  $\text{ר}$  being rejected by Art. 72.) adding  $\text{ים}$ , we have  $\text{רָרִים}$  Bā-rīm, pure ones, &c. But, taking  $\text{עַמִּים}$  a people, which is derived from the root  $\text{עַמַּע}$ , (one of the radicals being rejected by Art. 77, we have  $\text{עַמַּע}$ ), and adding  $\text{ים}$ , we shall have  $\text{עַמִּים}$  Ham-mīm, peoples. It will entirely depend, therefore, upon the analogy of the word, whether the preceding vowel is to be perfect or not, due regard being had to the laws of syllabication.

94. In the next place, if our augment is Syllabic, as  $\text{בָּרִים}$ , (which is one of the pronominal affixes signifying your, and carrying the accent with it,) as Hebrew words generally end in a consonant, the preceding vowel, in such case, must necessarily be imperfect; because, both the vowel will be without an accent, and it will be followed by a consonant: e. g.  $\text{בָּרִים}$  Bar-kém, your pure one; or,  $\text{עַמִּים}$  Ham-mékém, your people.

95. Hence it will appear, that a perfect vowel will occasionally become imperfect; and, vice versâ, an imperfect one, perfect: i. e. in other words, vowels will be changed for their homogeneous perfect or imperfect ones, as the rules of syllabication shall require.

96. This correspondence however in the vowels is of two sorts, Direct, and Oblique.

1. The direct correspondence is that of the perfect with the imperfect vowels, respectively, as ( $\text{ר}$ ) with ( $\text{-}$ ), ( $\text{׳}$ ) with ( $\text{׳׳}$ ), &c. as given in the Table (Art 29.).

2. The oblique correspondence is that of vowels, in some respects, dissimilar; as, ( $\text{ר}$ ) or ( $\text{-}$ ) with ( $\text{׳׳}$ ) or ( $\text{׳׳׳}$ ); ( $\text{׳׳}$ ) or ( $\text{׳׳׳}$ ) with ( $\text{׳}$ ) or ( $\text{׳׳}$ ); and ( $\text{׳׳׳}$ ) with ( $\text{׳׳׳׳}$ ).

97. Generally, therefore, when any change of the vowels must take place in order to comply with the laws of etymology and syllabication, those vowels which are either directly or obliquely homogeneous with their primitives, will be taken: the directly homogeneous ones for the most part; the other cases may be considered as exceptions to be learned by usage.

98. This change of the vowels, moreover, will occasionally affect the penultimate syllable of a word, as well as the ultimate. Let us now consider by what laws the change will be regulated in this case.

99. Generally, when the penultimate syllable ends in a perfect mutable vowel, that vowel will be rejected and its place be supplied either by Shěvá or one of its substitutes, according to rules hereafter to be given; but, if that vowel be immutable,* it will remain unaltered: e. g. affixing ים to דָּבָר a word, we shall have דְּבָרַיִם Děvā-rím, words: but, attaching it to פִּיקֵד visiting, where the penultimate vowel is immutable by analogy, we have פִּיקְדַיִם persons visiting.

100. In like manner, if the penultimate syllable end in a consonant, and have no accent, it will necessarily remain immutable, whatever be the affix: as, מְקַדְּשׁ a sanctifier, מְקַדְּשֵׁי or מְקַדְּשֵׁיִם.

101. In all cases, in which the penultimate is immutable either by analogy or position, the ultimate vowel, if mutable by analogy, will be rejected: but, when both are immutable, no change will take place in the vowels, whatever be the affix. Examples of the first case, פִּיקֵד a person visited, פִּיקְדַיִם, פִּיקְדֵיִם; of the second, מְבַיְעֵי, מְבַיְעֵיִם.

102. The changes to which the vowels are liable from the accident of the Grammar, can affect no vowel beyond the penultimate: because, first, the prefixing of any augment whatever to a word does not affect its vowels (Art. 91); and, secondly, as no syllable beyond the penultimate can be affected by the tone-accent, neither can it by any augment affixed to such word: the syllables thus situated will therefore remain undisturbed by grammatical accident.

103. The reason for abridging words, either in the ultimate, or penultimate, syllable (for both seldom occur together) when any augment is suffixed, seems to be this: Were words thus to be augmented in addition to their own primitive vowels, they would become inconveniently long. And, on the other hand, as those vowels, which have been termed immutable, constitute the distinctive character of the words in which they are found, perspicuity forbids that any change should take place in them.

On the Use of Shěvá and its Substitutes.

104. Having laid down the general laws relating to the changes of the vowels, we now proceed to notice a few affecting the use of Shěvá and its Substitutes. To enter into all the minutiae usually brought forward about these points, would neither be necessary nor agreeable to the student: the length and subtilty of the enquiry would not only be tedious and embarrassing, but when brought to a close, would probably leave him in possession of less practical knowledge on the subject, than the use of tables and his lexicon would supply. We shall therefore be brief, contenting ourselves with generals, and noticing a few anomalies as we proceed.

105. Shěvá (:) may be either initial or final (Art. 40.). It will be initial at the commencement of any syllable, whether that be at the beginning or in the middle of a word; final when at the end of any syllable.

106. By grammatical accident, however, two Shěvás, or Shěvá with a Substitute of Shěvá, may concur as initials: but, as no one of them can stand for a vowel and so constitute a syllable when in conjunction with any consonant, some change must necessarily take place. In this case, the first Shěvá, or Substitute for Shěvá, will be changed into some imperfect vowel.

1. Shěvá so situated, which always happens at the beginning of a word, mostly becomes Khīrik (·), sometimes Páthakh (-) or Sēgól (·): as, 1. יִפְקֹד for יִפְקֹד he visits, יִפְקֹד for יִפְקֹד in visiting: 2, פְּנָי for פְּנָי wings, and יִפְקֹד for יִפְקֹד I visit. The use of Páthakh (-), however, is rare, and can be known only from usage: Sēgól will occur only with נ* or ה.

2. One or other of the Substitutes of Shěvá may concur with Shěvá or with another Substitute of Shěvá, either in the beginning or in the middle of a word, the change will then be into the imperfect vowel homogeneous with the substitute; e. g. אֲנָשִׁי for אֲנָשִׁי men, נִהְפָּךְ for נִהְפָּךְ he is turned over. So, in the middle, פְּעֻלָּה for פְּעֻלָּה thy work, יַעֲמֹדֵי for יַעֲמֹדֵי they stand. There are, however, many exceptions: as, נַעֲשָׂה it is made, or done, masc., but fem. נַעֲשָׂה, which can be known only by usage.

3. But as the Substitutes of Shěvá are various, it may be necessary here to state in what cases either of them is generally preferred; because, upon this the operation of the foregoing rule will depend.

* This is regularly the case in the first person singular of the species Kal, Niphál, and Pihél, when no guttural letter follows.

4. Generally, when one of the guttural letters commences a syllable, whether in the beginning or in the middle of a word, and ought by analogy to take (:) Shěvá; Khâtéph Páthakh (·) is mostly taken in its place: e. g. 1. At the beginning of words: אָבִיהֶם their father; אָחִיכֶם your brother; אֲשֶׁר who, which; עֲשֵׂה make thou. 2. In the middle: גֹּאֲלוֹ his redeemer; הַפְּחָדִי fear ye; אֲעֲדָה she proceeded.

5. There is, however, a considerable number of exceptions to this rule:* and, 1st, Several monosyllables with their compounds commencing with א will take (·) Khâtéph Sēgól in the place of Shěvá; as אֱלִמֶלֶךְ Ēlímélek, a proper name. 2dly, Infinitives and Imperatives of the conjugation Kal, when commencing with א: as, אֹכֵל eating, or eat thou; אָמַר saying, or say thou. 3dly, The characteristic ה of the Hiphhíl species, in verbs having the middle radical letter quiescent, and receiving some augment: as, הִשְׁבֹּה he restored him or it; הִמִּיתָם he put them to death. The first person singular mostly follows the general rule, and takes (·). 4thly, In a few words (·) is found with ע at the beginning of a word: as, עֲזוּזָה strength; עֵלִי a pestil; עֲנִיָּה affliction; עֲרִיבָה arrayed; עֲנֵנוּ respond ye. 6thly, Khâtéph Sēgól (·) is also found in the middle of a word: as, הָאֵהָלָה towards the tent; יִאָחֲזוּךָ they take hold of thee; וַיִּחַדְמוּ and they become inflamed; וַיִּחַמְתָּנִי she conceived me. 7thly, In the following we have (·) similarly situated: אֲשַׁקְּמָה I rest; הִשְׁחָדִי thou (sem.) didst bribe. And, 8thly, Generally, whenever a mutable א has been rejected, its place may be supplied by (·) when commencing a word, and frequently when in the middle, whatever be the accompanying consonant: as, הַחֳדָשִׁים months, from חֹדֶשׁ a month; אֲהָלִים from אֹהֶל tent; הַחֲדָשִׁים plural of קֹדֶשׁ holiness, &c. And, 9thly, Some cases occur in which one or other of these Substitutes is found with a non-guttural letter, and when analogy does not seem to require it: e. g. זָהָב gold, Gen. ii. 12; גִּלְקִיָּהָה she was taken, ib. ver. 23; and a few others, which may perhaps be attributed to the mistakes of the copyists.

107. Any guttural letter, originally commencing a word, and having a substitute of Shěvá in its own right, by Art. 106. 4. upon being preceded by some particle with Shěvá, but which by Art. 106. 1. must become an imperfect vowel, will require that such imperfect vowel be homogeneous with that in the Substitute: e. g. עֲשֶׂה making, &c. prefixing י, ת, כ, &c. which are the personal preformatives of the present tense, we shall have יַעֲשֶׂה he makes; תַּעֲשֶׂה she makes; נַעֲשֶׂה we make, &c. So likewise with other particles: as, כ, כ, ל, מ, ו; as, בַּעֲבֹד for בָּעֲבֹד in making; לַעֲבֹד, &c.

There are, however, some exceptions, as in the first persons singular of some of the species of conjugation, &c.; as, אֶעֱשֶׂה I make, &c., which seems to be derived from עֲשֶׂה as before; all of which, however, will be found in the dictionaries.

108. There are also other substitutions made for the mark Shěvâ, which may be termed Euphonic. These take place, for the most part, at the end of words where two Shěvâs concurring, by analogy, would introduce some difficulty into the pronunciation.

The vowels introduced in these cases are, (·), (-), or (·). Sēgól is generally used when neither of the consonants concerned is guttural; (-) when one or two of them is so; and (·) when the first of them is ' Yód: e. g. מֶלֶךְ for מֶלֶךְ a king; where the primitive vowel, be that what it may, is generally made to correspond, in sound at least, with the substituted one for the mere sake of euphony: e. g. סֵפֶר for סֵפֶר a book; נָעַר for נָעַר a boy; בַּיִת for בַּיִת a house; גַּבְרֵת for גַּבְרֵת a lady; לִוְדוּת for לִוְדוּת (fem.) learning. So in verbs: יָגַל for יָגַל (for יָגַל, Art. 74. 2.) he reveals; יָגַל for יָגַל (for יָגַל, ib.) he causes to reveal; יָחַר for יָחַר (for יָחַר, ib.), he becomes hot; הָעַל for הָעַל (for הָעַל) raise thou, &c. Nouns of these forms, termed Segolate, having ו for their middle radical letter, will take (·) Kāmets for their first vowel: as, מוֹת middle; תְּוֹת middle, &c.

Particular Rules for the insertion of DAGESH.

109. The guttural letters, viz. א, ה, ח, and ע, to which ק may be added, are, on account of the difficulty with which they are enounced, incapable of being doubled; the consequence is, they cannot receive Dāgēsh forte: and, as they do not come under the rule relating to the letters בְּגִדְכֶם (Art. 31.), they are also impervious to the operation of Dāgēsh when termed lene. Dāgēsh, therefore, cannot be regularly inscribed in any one of them.\* But, when analogy requires its insertion, either the preceding vowel is made perfect, by way of compensation, as  $\text{בָּרֶק} B\bar{a}-r\acute{e}k$ , instead of  $\text{בַּרֶק} B\bar{a}r-r\acute{e}k$ , in which case it is said to be expressed; or, it is only considered as being so, as,  $\text{מֶרְא־כְּפֶת} m\acute{e}r\bar{a}-k\acute{h}\acute{e}-p\acute{h}e\text{th}$ , instead of  $\text{מְרֶפֶת}$  for  $\text{מֶרְא־פֶת}$  (Art. 43. note); here Dāgēsh is said to be implied.

110. Generally, Dāgēsh is to be inscribed in any one of the letters  $\text{בְּג־כְּפֶת}$ , whenever such letter begins a syllable; provided the preceding syllable do not end in a perfect vowel, or in one of the letters  $\text{א־ה־ו־י}$  in a quiescent state, or in one of the Substitutes of Shēvā; for then it will not be inscribed in any of these letters. The exceptions are as follows:—

1. Should the preceding vowel be perfect, or the syllable end in one of the quiescent letters  $\text{א־ה־ו־י}$ , still, if two of the  $\text{בְּג־כְּפֶת}$  letters concur in the commencement of the following word, the first will receive Dāgēsh; e. g.  $\text{אֶמֹּנָה בְּפִי} \acute{E}m\bar{u}-n\acute{a}-th\acute{e}k\bar{a} b\acute{e}p\acute{h}i$ , Psalm lxxxix. 2. See also Isa. x. 9, Gen. xxxix. 12, &c. Dāgēsh will also be inscribed, should such perfect vowel, or quiescent letter preceding, have a distinctive accent; or, should the preceding word have any accent on the penultimate. A few exceptions are found when the preceding accent is conjunctive.†

2. When the preceding word ends in  $\text{ה}$  with Mappik (Art. 49.), or one of the letters  $\text{ו}$  or  $\text{י}$ , used as a diphthong, Dāgēsh will be regularly inscribed in any  $\text{בְּג־כְּפֶת}$  letter: because, in this case, such letter is considered as a consonant terminating the preceding syllable, as above: e. g.  $\text{בְּצִדָּה תְּשִׁים} B\acute{e}tsid-d\acute{a}h t\bar{a}-s\acute{im}$ , not thā-sim, Gen. vi. 16. See also Gen. xvii. 20, xxvii. 41; Ps. li. 17. Hence it is, that after  $\text{יְהוָה}$  or  $\text{יְהוֹה}$  Dāgēsh may be used, because the former of these is read by the Jews  $\text{אֲדֹנָי} \acute{A}d\bar{on}\acute{a}i$ , the latter  $\text{אֱלֹהִים} \acute{E}l\bar{o}-h\acute{im}$ . (See Art. 67. note.) There are, however, a few exceptions to this rule. See Isa. xxxiv. 11; Ezek. xxiii. 42; Ps. lxxviii. 18.

111. In the next place, when any one of the  $\text{בְּג־כְּפֶת}$  letters occurs, not being at the beginning of a word, but following a final

* Some, however, read this passage without Dāgēsh.

† Exod. xv. 11, 16. Isa. liv. 12. Jer. xx. 9. Dan. iii. 3; v. 11. Ps. xxxv. 10. On the conjunctive and distinctive character of the accents, see the last lecture in this work.

Shěva (:), it will regularly receive the point Dāgēsh; as, פִּקְדָּתָּהּ Pa-kád-tā, פִּקְדָּתָּהּ Pa-kádt, except in the following cases.

1. When this (:) stands in the place originally occupied by either (◌◌) or (◌◌), Dāgēsh will not be inscribed in the פִּקְדָּתָּהּ letter following: e. g. פִּקְדָּתָּהּ kid-vā-ré-kā, not פִּקְדָּתָּהּ kid-bā-ré-kā: the primitive form of which is פִּקְדָּתָּהּ dā-vár. So מְלִכֵי, not מְלִכֵי, from מְלִיךְ or מְלִיכָה. So also בִּלְוָו Bil-váv, from לְוָו Lē-váv.

2. After an initial Shěvá (:) which would be pronounced, but which becomes quiescent upon some particle being prefixed, (Art. 41.) Dāgēsh will not be inscribed: as, גְּבוּל Gěvúl, and, prefixing לְ, לְגְבוּל Lig-vúl, not Lig-búl. So with לְבוּשׁ a vesture, בְּכִי weeping, גְּדִי a he-goat, &c. as singulars, and דְּבָרִים words, זְבָרִים males, חֲבֵרוֹת sepulchres, &c. as plurals. Infinitives and Imperatives of the form פִּקְדָּתָּהּ, פִּקְדָּתָּהּ or פִּקְדָּתָּהּ with any augment, will also be excepted; as, רֹדְפוֹ Rod-phó, his persecuting, שִׁכְבָּה Shik-vá, lie thou down, &c. where the last radical letter is one of the פִּקְדָּתָּהּ letters.

3. After a final Shěvá (:) following an imperfect vowel which has arisen out of some one of the substitutes of Shěvá (Art. 106. 2. &c.); e. g. נֶעְמְדָה Nā-ḥam-dá, not נֶעְמְדָה Isa. 1. 8.

But if such Shěvá itself have arisen out of one of these substitutes, Dāgēsh will be inscribed; as, יַחֲפֹז Yakh-póts, Deut. xxv. 7.

4. The affixed pronouns הִי, כֶּם, כֵּן, never receive Dāgēsh lene: the letters פִּקְדָּתָּהּ preceding הִי; as, מְלָכֹת Mal-kúth, עֲבָדֹת Hav-dúth, יְלִדֹת Yal-dúth. So also בָּנָה, and נָנָה, when receiving any asyllabic augment, the latter in נֶגְדָה Neg-dá only, Ps. cxvi. 14; * בִּגְדוֹ Big-dó, 2 Kings ix. 13, &c., to which a few others might be added.

112. Dāgēsh, in its capacity of reduplicating certain letters, is sometimes found at the beginning of words; as, מַזְזֵה Maz-zé, מֹשֶׁל Mō-shel Lē-mór, &c., in which case it is purely euphonic. So also in מִקְדָּשׁ Mik-kědášh, for מִקְדָּשׁ Mik-dášh, Exod. xv. 17; וְאֶקְרָה Vá-ek-kěré-hā, for וְאֶקְרָה, &c.

113. And, on the contrary, there are a few instances, particularly in verbs having one of the liquids either for the second, or the two last radicals, in which every letter is written at length; as, צִלְלוֹ Tsil-ló, Job xl. 21; חֲנָנִי Khon-né-nī, Ps. ix. 14; not צִלְלוֹ or

* Which, however, Ib. ver. 18, has Dagēsh, חֲנָנִי.

הִנְנִי : and others in which it is omitted, contrary to analogy ; as, שְׁלָחָהּ for שְׁלָחָהּ she sent ; הִלְלוּ for הִלְלוּ praise ye ; הִקְדַּם for הִקְדַּם, Exod. v. 14, &c.

114. The following anomalies occur in the vowels occasionally, when coming in contact with Dāgēsh either EXPRESSED OR IMPLIED, &c. The vowel (-) coming before a guttural letter, and containing an implied Dāgēsh (Art. 109.) is, for the sake of Euphony, often changed into (◌); as, אָחָד (masc.) and אַחַת (fem.) one ; הַהָרִים for הַהָרִים, or more commonly הַהָרִים mountains ; לְהַבֹּת flames ; גַּחְלִים embers ; פָּחָה a leader ; הָעָרִים cities ; יִתְנַחֵם he repented himself ; הִתְנַחֵלוּ ye become possessed ; הִטְהָרוּ they became purified ; הֲאֵלֵנִי is it I? &c. In some instances, (-) coming before Dāgēsh forte is changed into (◌) Khīrik ; as, בָּתּוֹ his daughter, from בַּת (rather from בְּנִתָּה ; Arab. بِنْت), Gen. xxix. 6 ; מְרִגְוִים thorns, from מִרְגָּ, 2 Sam. xxiv. 22. In the same manner, גַּת a wine-press ; הָת consternation ; מִד measure ; מִקְב circuitous ; מִס tribute ; קַף door-post ; פֶּת morsel ; and צֶד the side, change (-) into (◌) upon receiving any asyllabic augment. The same takes place with the verb מוֹת dying, when found in the conjugation Hiphhīl ; as, הִמָּתָה ye put to death, for הִמָּתָה, Numb. xvii. 6, &c. The same is also found to prevail in the following verbs with syllabic augments ; viz. יִלְדֶּנִי for יִלְדֶּנִי I have begotten thee, Ps. ii. 7, &c. ; יִרְשֶׁתֶם for יִרְשֶׁתֶם ye shall possess, Deut. xi. 8, &c. These all, however, may be considered as arising either for the sake of euphony, out of the etymology, or else from the mere mistakes of the copyists.

LECTURE IV.

ON THE GENERAL USE AND SITUATION OF THE ACCENTS.

115. OF the origin and use of these accents very little can now be said with any degree of certainty. Much labour and learning, indeed, have been bestowed on their investigation; but, after all, the conclusions arrived at are beset with so much uncertainty, that some of the best Grammarians both Jewish and Christian have confessed that they knew but little on the subject.* We must, therefore, be content with the common rules respecting them, and here, with those only which are generally found to interfere with the vowels of the text.

116. These accents (Art. 60.) are said to have two offices; the one Tonic, that is, having the power to moderate the tone of voice in which any portion of the Scripture is to be read; the other Euphonic, that is, when added either for the purpose of giving a kind of secondary accent to words, or of regulating the syllables. It seems most likely, however, that they are added generally, for the purpose of filling up the system, as to perfect or imperfect vowels, and of obviating a great number of anomalies, which would otherwise occur.

On the Tonic Accent.

117. The Tonic accent may be any one of those found in the table (Art. 59.): and it will always be found either expressed, or implied,† on the penultimate or ultimate syllable of every word. When on the penultimate, the word is said to be מִלְּהֵל Milhel; when on the ultimate, מִלְּרָה Milrah. The following are the general rules for its insertion.

All words the penultimate vowel of which is imperfect and has not a consonant immediately following it, will have the Tonic

* See my reply to Dr. Laurence, entitled, "A Vindication of certain Strictures," &c. Cambridge, 1822, p. 17, &c.

† That is, if the accent be one of those not placed on the regularly accented syllable, it must be considered as giving emphasis either to the penultimate or ultimate, according to the analogy of the word.

accent on that syllable. Of this kind are all duals, and segolate nouns; nouns having the feminine affix תְּ (thy), attached to dual or plural forms; and all nouns having terminations peculiar to the segolate forms: as, יָדַיִם both hands, Gen. xxvii. 22; צֹדֵד hunting; כֶּסֶף silver; עֵינָיִךְ thy eyes (fem.), Cant. i. 15; מְרֵאיוֹתַי thy appearances, Ib. ii. 14; בַּצִּלָּתַי a rose; מְקוֹמֶיךָ perfumed with incense, Ib. iii. 6, &c.

The reason is obvious; the penultimate syllable is in all these cases imperfect, the addition of the accent is, therefore, necessary for the purposes of syllabication (Art. 33. 43.).

Segolate nouns having the penultimate vowel perfect, will, on account of their peculiar character, retain the accent on that syllable: as סִתְּרָה concealment; מָוֶת (for מִוֶּתַת) death; בְּהִי (for בְּהִיּוּ) emptiness (See Art. 43. note). Also proper names ending in הִי: as, זְדִיקְיָהוּ Zedekiah.

2. Nouns receiving a syllabic pronominal affix, and at the same time a vowel of union (Art. 123. 1.), or, having likewise a paragogic ו Nun, will have the accent on the penultimate of the word so formed: (The pronominal affixes usually termed grave, i. e. כֶּם, כֶּן, הֶם, הֶן, are excepted) e. g. שֹׁפְטֵינִי Judge me, Psalm xliii. 1; נַפְשֵׁנוּ our soul; עֲלֵהוּ its leaf, Ps. i. 3; תִּתְּנֶהוּ thou rejoicest him, Ps. xxi. 7; יִחַשְׁבֶּהָ he imputes it, Gen. xv. 6; פָּנָיו his face, Ps. xi. 7; פְּנֵיךָ thy wings, Ps. xvii. 8; אוֹכִיבְךָ I rebuke thee, Ps. l. 8; קָרָאתִיךָ I have called thee, Ps. cxix. 146; יִרְיֶה they praise thee, Ps. lxvii. 6; תִּדְפְּנֶהּ it (the wind) dispelleth it, Ps. i. 4. With the paragogic ו of plural verbs: יִשְׁתַּרְנְנִי they seek me early, Prov. i. 28; יִשְׁרְתוּנִי they serve thee, Isa. lx. 7; יִלְבְּדוּ they take him, Prov. v. 22.

3. Verbs terminating (i. e. in the process of conjugation) in the pronominal syllables תְּ, תִי, נִי, and כֶּה; as תְּקַפְּצֶתָּ* thou art willing, Ps. xl. 7; בִּשְׂרָתִי I have announced (good tidings), Ib. v. 10; שִׁחַרְנוּ we have dealt falsely, Ps. xlv. 18; תִּבְאִינָה they (fem.) shall come, Ps. xlv. 16.

4. Syllabic affirmatives are subject to the same rule, in the conjugation Hiphhil: as, הוֹחִילִי hope thou (fem.), Ps. xliii. 5; הוֹשִׁיעָהּ it (fem.) brought salvation, Ps. xlv. 4. Also in the surd and concave verbs: as, סָבְרוּ surround ye, Ps. xlvi. 13; מָטוּ they move, Ps. xlvi. 7; likewise when these affixes are joined to the third person singular and plural of the preterite of verbs: as, פָּקַדְנִי he visited me; שָׁמַתְנִי it (fem.) hath overwhelmed me, Ps. lxix. 3; אָהַבְתָּהּ she hath loved thee, Ruth iv. 15; סָבְרוּנִי they surrounded me, Ps. xviii. 6.*

* These cases ought, regularly, to be pointed, תְּקַפְּצֶתָּ, i. e. with (τ) with the second syllable. The Jews however seem to have pointed verbs with (-), for the purpose of distinguishing them from nouns; as, תְּקַד instead of תְּקַדָּה, and by this means an anomaly has been introduced among the syllables.

5. When the paragogic ה is added to nouns, pronouns, or particles, it exercises no influence on the accent, for the most part. In such cases, therefore, the accent will be in the penultima: as, אֶפְרַתָּה Ephratah, Gen. xxxv. 16, &c.

118. The tonic accent will have its place on the last syllable of words, in the remaining cases, which are then termed מִלְרַע Milrah, and are as follows:—

1. All words ending with a consonant preceded by a perfect vowel by analogy: as, גָּדֹל great; מְאֹר luminary; בָּנִים sons; בָּנוֹת daughters. The same is the case when any of the אִתְּנִי letters are thus situated, being then considered as consonants: as, שָׁנָה a year; מַצֵּבָה a pillar: and even ה preceded by (ו), as, יְהִיָּה he is, &c.

2. All words ending in one of the grave affixes: as, דַּמְיָם your blood; אֲבִיהֶם their father; הִיְיָתֶם ye shall be, Gen. iii. 5.

3. Verbs having no affixed pronoun: as, לָקַח he took; יִקְרָא he is called.

4. Verbs taking the asyllabic affirmatives הַ, י, and י': as, שָׁמְטָה it is quiet; פָּקַדוּ they visited; סִתְּנִי hide thyself (fem.); and finally, all words not comprehended in any of the preceding rules (i. e. Art. 117.).

On certain Anomalies as to the situation of the Accent, and on the changes effected by it on the vowels and consonants of words.

119. These generally take place, when the illative particle יַ is prefixed to verbs, in which case, 1st, the Tonic accent which is proper for the penultimate vowel in the past tense (Art. 117. 3.), will be removed to the ultimate: and, 2dly, vice versa, the accent proper for the ultimate in the present (Art. 118. 1.) will be removed to the penultimate: as, 1st, וְקִדְשֵׁתִי so I will consecrate (for קִדְשֵׁתִי), Exod. xxix. 44; וְגִבַּסְתָּ so thou shalt be gathered (for גִּבַּסְתָּ), Numb. xxvii. 13; וְהִבְדִּילָהּ so it shall divide; וְהִבְאִתָּהּ thus thou shalt bring, Exod. xxvi. 33; וְרָבָה so she shall increase, Isa. vi. 12; וְשָׁמַתָּ therefore thou shalt place, Lev. xxiv. 6; וְשָׁבָה so she shall return, Lev. xxii. 13; וְשָׁמוּ thus they shall place, Numb. vi. 27; וְיָבֹאתָ so thou shalt enter, Gen. vi. 18.

* These particulars will hereafter be illustrated by tables.

† Usually termed Vaw conversivum, but which corresponds to the Arabic

2. This rule, however, is often disregarded: as, וְלָקַחְנוּ so we took, Gen. xxxiv. 17; וְהִלְכְנוּ and we will depart: particularly in verbs having a quiescent letter for the third radical; as, וְיִרְאָתָּהּ and thou shalt fear, Lev. xix. 32; וְגִלִּיתִי and I will reveal, 1 Sam. xx. 12; וְגִלִּיתָ and thou shalt go into captivity, Ezek. xii. 3. With some having the medial radical letter quiescent: as, וְנִסְתָּהּ and thou shalt flee, 2 Kings ix. 3.

3. In the next place, the accent will be removed from the ultimate to the penultimate syllable of the present tense, when the illative particle ו is prefixed, and when the form of the verb will allow of the change: e. g. וַיִּפְקֹד (for יִפְקֹד) so he is visited. But in the third person plural masc. it will keep its place: as, וַיִּפְקְדוּ (from יִפְקְדוּ). The same holds good also in the form וַיִּפְקֹד: as, וַיִּפְקֹד so he visits.

Corollary. Hence it will follow, that the accent being removed from the last syllable, the ultimate vowel must necessarily become imperfect (Art. 33.): as, וַיִּגְנֹף and he was struck (for יִגְנֹף); וַיֹּאמֶר (for יֹאמֶר) and he said; וַיָּמָת and he died (for יָמָת or יָמִית); and so of others.

4. In the conjugation termed Hiphhîl, as it will be seen hereafter, the terminating vowel is either (י) or (ו). Whenever, therefore, the accent is drawn back, by this or any other rule, the imperfect vowel will be (ו) not (י): as, וַיִּקָּם so he raised (from יִקָּם or יִקָּם). So וַיִּלְוֶה so he lodged (for יִלְוֶה or יִלְוֶה), Gen. xxviii. 11, Josh. viii. 9; וַיִּנְחַח so he rested (for יִנְחַח or יִנְחַח), Exod. x. 14, where (ו) is taken on account of the guttural letter following. (Art. 45.)

In one instance, however, we have וַתִּפְרָץ (for תִּפְרָץ, root פִּרַץ) and she broke, Judg. ix. 53.

5. When, however, the last letter of the root happens to be one of the אֵהִי letters in a state of quiescence, the perfect vowel will occasionally remain: as, וַיָּבֵא and he brings, Gen. iv. 3.

6. In many cases, also, this removal of the accent is altogether neglected: as, וַיֵּשֶׁב so I sit, 1 Kings viii. 20, &c.

7. In consequence of this removal of the accent, the terminating vowel of the present tense of verbs is changed (No. 3. above), and entirely rejected with the consonant following, when that is quiescent: e. g. יִגְלֵל for יִגְלֶה (Art. 74.); and, by 108, the former will be יִגְלֵל, which is termed Apocope.

8. Again, the accent is occasionally removed from the ultimate to the penultimate syllable both in the present tense and in the imperatives of verbs, for the purpose of expressing prohibition, forbearance, exhortation, wishing or the like, with the greater emphasis; as, אַל-תִּטְּשׁ turn not away, 1 Kings ii. 20 (for תִּטְּשׁ); אַל-תִּנְכַּח chastise not, Prov. ix. 8 (for תִּנְכַּח); אַל-תוֹסֶף add not, Prov. xxx. 6 (for תוֹסֶף, where the vowel of the medial radical is also rejected though not followed by a quiescent ה); אֶרְיִי I will water thee (for אֶרְיִי, the root being רִי, usually רוּה, in which case the final radical letter generally returns. In this case the ׳ is doubled because the verb is in the conjugation Pihél). So הִשְׁמֹר observe (for הִשְׁמֹר); הִקְדֵּה give, &c. Gen. xi. 3, 4 (for הִקְדֵּה Gen. xxix. 21).

9. So in verbs having the third radical letter a quiescent ה: as, יִרְדֵּה let him rule (for יִרְדֵּה); יִמְחֵה let him be blotted out (for יִמְחֵה), Ps. cix. 13; יִפְתֵּה may he dilate (for יִפְתֵּה), Gen. ix. 27; יִהְיֵה let it be (for יִהְיֵה), Gen. i. 3; אַל-תִּשְׁתֵּה drink not (for תִּשְׁתֵּה), Lev. x. 9; אַל-יִרְאֵה let it not be seen (for יִרְאֵה), Exod. xxxiv. 3; אַל-תִּקְרַח relax not (for תִּקְרַח; where the verb takes the form of a segolate noun, see Art. 108); אַל-תִּהְיֵה be not (for תִּהְיֵה); and so of others. But it may here be remarked, as before, that the common form of the verb and usual position of the accent are often adopted: as, אַל-אֶרְאֵה lest I should see, Gen. xxi. 16; אַל-יִרְאֵה lest he should see, Job iii. 9.

10. Examples of imperatives subject to Apocope: גַּל reveal thou (for גַּלֶּה in Pihél); הִקְדֵּה smite thou (for הִקְדֵּה), Amos ix. 1; הִרְבֵּה multiply thou (for הִרְבֵּה in Hiphhil. Here the form assumed is that of a segolate noun, the first vowel becoming (·), in order to accommodate itself to the sound of the second, Art. 108.), Ps. li. 4.

So הָעֵל* cause thou to ascend (for הָעֵלָה), Exod. xxxiii. 12; הִתְחַלֵּף feign thyself (to be) sick (for הִתְחַלְּהָ), 2 Sam. xiii. 5.

11. It frequently happens in verbs ending with a radical ח (for י) and receiving some asyllabic augment, that not only is the accent drawn back, as in the cases above mentioned (No. 8.), but the original radical letter also appears: as, חָסְתָהּ it (fem.) hath trusted (for חָסְתָהּ according to the general paradigma, from the root חָסָה for חָסָי), Ps. lvii. 2. So יִשְׁלְוּ they are tranquil (for יִשְׁלְוּ, root שָׁלַח or שָׁלַי, whence regularly יִשְׁלְוּ), Ps. cxxii. 6, &c.; יָאֲתוּ let them come (for יָאֲתוּ, root אָתָה or אָתָי), Ps. lxxviii. 32; חַבְּרֵי bring ye (for חַבְּרֵי, Art. 73.), Jer. xii. 9.

12. In a few instances this drawing back of the accent also takes place in nouns and particles: as, רַבְּתֵי עַם numerous art thou (in) people (for רַבְּתֵי). So רַבְּתֵי בְּגוֹיִם great art thou among the nations; שָׂרָתִי בְּמַדְיָנוֹת a princess art thou among the provinces, Lam. i. 1. In like manner we have לָמָּה, לָמָּה, or לָמָּה why? (for לָמָּה, לָמָּה, or לָמָּה), where, according to Schroederus,—“subest adfectus exprobrantis, vel conquerentis, vel alius similis.” To these he adds, אֲנִי I (for אֲנִי), Ezek. xvii. 22.†

120. Again, the accent will be withdrawn from the ultimate to the penultimate syllable, in order to avoid the concurrence of two Tonic accents, which would happen when the following word is a monosyllable with an accent, or a dissyllable with an accent on the penultima. But here, the penultimate vowel of the former of such two words, will remain perfect: as, פָּתַח צֶרֶף he opened the rock (for פָּתַח), Ps. cv. 41; אֶלֶף לִי I will betake me, Cant. iv. 6; הֲהִיְתָה זֹאת has this come to pass? (for הִיְתָה) Joel i. 2; אֲחֻותִי הִיא she (is) my sister, Gen. xx. 2; וְנָתַן לְךָ and he will give thee, Deut. xix. 8; וַיִּגְדַּל מְאֹד he will exult exceedingly, Ps. xxi. 2.

2. Verbs, receiving any asyllabic augment, and on that account rejecting any of their primitive vowels, will, upon the removal of the accent by the above-mentioned rule, restore such rejected

* These Imperatives are probably nothing more than primitive abstract nouns, termed Segolates, enounced with some energy.

† The principles which regulate this retraction of the accent, and the consequent apocope, will be considered in the Syntax.

vowel: as, יִתְהַלֵּל בּוֹ* ye shall delude him (for יִתְהַלֵּל), Job xiii. 9; בָּנִי הִנֵּה come hither (for בָּנִי), Josh. iii. 9; יִתְאַהֲבֵנוּ רִיחַ ye will love vanity (for יִתְאַהֲבֵנוּ), Ps. iv. 3; בּוֹ חָסְיוּ they trusted in him (for חָסְיוּ regularly, but חָסְיוּ according to the tables for these verbs).

3. Should, however, this drawing back of the accent with the consequent change of the ultimate vowel tend to destroy or obscure the original form and signification of the word, no such change will take place: as, תַּעֲלָמוֹת לֵב the hidden things of the heart (not תַּעֲלָמַת with Kāméts Khātúph); עָבַר יָם passing over the sea (not עָבַר).

4. The accent will frequently fall on the penultimate instead of the ultimate syllable in words which conclude a sentence, or a member of a sentence. These accents are, for the most part, Sillúk, Athnák; and, in the poetical books, Mercá with Mahpák (Art. 59.).

5. In many of these cases, the removal of the accent will occasion no change whatever in the vowels: as, בּוֹשְׁבָה (for בּוֹשְׁבָה) inhabited, Jer. vi. 8; עָרֵי (for עָרֵי) make bare, Ps. cxxxvii. 7; בָּלוּ (for בָּלוּ) they are consumed, Ps. xxxvii. 20, &c.

6. But, in those persons of the verb which are formed by some asyllabic augment, or have the paragogic ה, and in which the second vowel of the root has been rejected, the accent, taking that syllable, will restore such vowel: as, הִתְקַרְבָה (for הִתְקַרְבָה from the root קָרַב) she hath approached, Zeph. iii. 2; יָבִילוּ (for יָבִילוּ, root יָבַל) they were able, 2 Kings iii. 26; תִּשְׁמְרוּ (for תִּשְׁמְרוּ, root, i. e. form for the Pres., שָׁמַר) ye shall keep, Exod. xxxi. 13. So אֵלְכָה (from אָלַח) I will walk, Gen. xxx. 26; סִפְּרוּ (from סָפַר) recount ye, Joel i. 3; לָכִי (for לָכִי, from לָחַד) go thou, fem., &c.

7. When the original final vowel is (-) it will generally become (ַ) when thus accompanying the accent: as, הִלְכָה she departed (from the root הָלַח), Is. xlvi. 2. So נִלְקָחָה (from נִלְקַח) it was taken, 1 Sam. iv. 17; וְאֵישָׁנָה (from אֵישָׁן) and I sleep, Ps. iii. 6; נִדְעָה (from נִדַע) let us know, Is. v. 19; צָעֲקֵי (from צָעַק) cry thou (fem.), Jer. xxii. 20; תִּמְדָה (from תִּמַד), Is. xxix. 9.

8. But, when a paragogic ׀ follows the asyllabic augments ׀ or

* The Dagesh found here in the ל has, perhaps, been introduced for the sake of euphony only, (Art. 112.)

יָ, the accent usually retains its proper situation, while the second vowel of the root is restored as in the last article: as, יִלְקְחוּן (from יִלְקַח) they will collect; יִפְהֲלֶינּוּ (from יִפְהֵל) they will be confounded; יִגְוְעוּן (from יִגְוַע) they will expire, Ps. civ. 28, 29.*

121. Segolate nouns of the form פִּקֹּד; derived from roots having for the third radical letter a quiescent ה, will, upon taking the pause accent in the penultimate, restore the original vowel to the first radical: as, חֲצִי (for חֲצִי, from the primitive form חֲצִי) the half, 1 Kings x. 7; מַרְיָ (for מַרְיָ from מַרְיָ) rebellion, Ezek. ii. 8; יָפִי (for יָפִי, from יָפִי) beauty, Is. iii. 24.

122. Apocopated present tenses of verbs having יָ in the place of the third radical letter ה, take (ֹ) for the vowel of the personal preformative, when so circumstanced as to receive the accent proper for the pause on that syllable: as, וַיְהִי (for וַיְהִי from וַיְהִי), Psalm xxxiii. 9; וַיְהִי־וָאֵלֶּיּוּ and she was, Lam. iii. 37. So יִחְיֶה he shall live (for יִחְיֶה), Is. xxxviii. 21.

123. When any word with the affixed pronoun ה happens to be the last word of a sentence, &c., so that the accent proper for the pause will fall upon its penultimate vowel, two methods have been invented for the purpose of avoiding any disagreeable concurrence which may happen in the vowels.

1. Instead of (ֹ) which is proper for affixing this pronoun, as will be seen hereafter, (ֹ) is introduced as a vowel of union: as חֲבִירֶךָ (for חֲבִירֶךָ) thy word, Gen. xlvii. 30; נַחֲלֶיךָ (for נַחֲלֶיךָ) thy inheritance, Ps. ii. 8; יִשְׁעֶךָ (for יִשְׁעֶךָ) thy salvation, Ps. li. 14; שְׁמֶךָ (for שְׁמֶךָ) thy name, Ps. cxxxviii. 2, &c.

2. The vowel proper for this pronoun is occasionally transposed: as, הִשְׁמֹדֶךָ (for הִשְׁמֹדֶךָ) thy destruction, Deut. xxviii. 24; אֲדָרְךָ (for אֲדָרְךָ) he hath adorned thee, Is. lv. 5; צִוְּךָ (for צִוְּךָ) he hath commanded thee, 1 Sam. xiii. 13.

3. The particles אַתָּה, עִמָּךְ, בְּךָ, and לְךָ, having ה affixed to them and receiving a pause-accent, are always subject to this rule: אַתָּה thee, Deut. xxviii. 48; אִתָּךְ with thee, Gen. viii. 17; עִמָּךְ with thee, Gen. xxix. 25; בְּךָ in thee, Ps. ix. 3; לְךָ to, for, or of, thee, Exod. xxxii. 34, &c., for אִתָּךְ, אִתָּךְ, עִמָּךְ, בְּךָ, לְךָ, &c.

4. The pronoun ה is subject to this rule even when not in the situation for receiving a pause-accent: as, עָנָהּ he answered thee, Jer. xxiii. 37; for עָנָהּ.

* The influence and use of this adjunct will be considered in the Syntax.

5. When a pause-accent falls on an ultimate or penultimate (-) Páthakh, or on a penultimate (◌) Segol, in segolate forms, that vowel is, for the most part, changed into (◌) Kāméts: as, עָמַד he hath stood; יָשַׁב for יָשַׁב he hath sat, Ps. i. 1, &c.; לַיְלָה for לַיְלָה night, Gen. i. 5; חֶרֶב for חֶרֶב a sword, Josh. viii. 24; עֹמְדָה for עֹמְדָה standing, Eccl. i. 4.

6. There are however certain exceptions: as, וַיִּצְחָק * he laughed, Gen. xvii. 17; עַד prey, Ib. xlix. 27; יִצְתָּהּ they shall be set on fire, Is. xxxiii. 12; דִּבַּרְתָּ thou hast spoken, Ib. xxxix. 8; בְּטָח security, Prov. i. 33; אִמְנָת a nurse, Ruth iv. 16. But these may be errors of the copyists.

7. The pause-accent will sometimes change a terminating (◌) into (-): as, יֵלֶךְ for יֵלֶךְ he shall go, Job xxvii. 21; הָשִׁב return, restore, for הָשִׁב, Is. xlii. 22; אֲלֵ-תֵלֶךְ (for תֵּלֶךְ) tarry not all night, Jud. xix. 20.

124. Makkáph following a terminating perfect and mutable vowel which precedes a consonant, will change the vowel into its corresponding imperfect one: as, זְכַרְנָא (for זָכַר נָא) remember now; כָּל-מְלָכִים (for כָּל מְלָכִים) all kings; אֶת-הָעָם (for אֶת הָעָם) the people, &c.

2. But if such final vowel be immutable, no change can take place: as, לְאִישׁ-אַחֵר to, or for, another man, Jer. iii. 1; אוֹת-הַבְּרִית the sign of the covenant, Gen. ix. 12. The reason of this is; the addition of Makkáph deprives the word to which it is attached of its tonic accent, and this makes it necessary that the preceding vowel be imperfect, when that is possible (Art. 33.).

On the Use and Situation of the Euphonic Accent.

125. It has already been remarked, that the Euphonic accent, Métheg, may be considered as supplying a secondary accentuation (Art. 64. 5.), with reference to some tonic accent preceding it. Monosyllables, therefore, can never have an Euphonic accent, unless indeed they happen to precede Makkáph; but, in that case, they are considered as making an integral part of a compound word, and may receive the Euphonic accent according to rules presently to be laid down. Dissyllables may receive an Euphonic accent; but these syllables must have a final (:) Shěvá intervening: as, יְהִי־יְהִי־הוּ he shall be, &c.

Rules for the Insertion of the Euphonic Accent.

126. The third syllable (not ending with a consonant) of any word, reckoning inclusively from the tonic accent, will have the Euphonic accent Métheg; as, הָאֶחָד the one, Gen. ii. 11; הַחֹלֶקֶת which proceedeth, Ib. v. 14; אֶיִרְשָׁנָה I shall possess it, Ib. xv. 8; מֵאֲבִינוּ from our father, Ib. xix. 32; לְשִׁשְׁנָתָם according to their tongues, Ib. x. 20; וּמִמּוֹלַדְתָּהּ and from thy kindred, Ib. xii. 1.

127. But if this third syllable end in a consonant, the Euphonic accent will be with the fourth: as, וּמִחֻלְבֵּיהֶן and of their fat, Gen. iv. 4; וְאֶנְתָּר and I remain, 1 Kings xix. 10 (where ו, being doubled by Dāgēsh, concludes the syllable; as, וְאֶנְתָּר).

2. Perfect vowels preceding Shěvá, and having no tonic accent, will, if occupying the third place from any tonic accent, (reckoning the Shěvá), receive an euphonic one: as, הִיְתָה it was, Gen. i. 2; תְּבִי־תְּבִי thou (fem.) shalt bring forth, Ib. iii. 16; נִינְוֶה Nineveh, Ib. x. 11; הַיְלָדוֹת generations, Ib. ii. 4; יִשְׁפֹּץ he shall bruise thee, Ib. iii. 15.

3. In many instances the Euphonic accent is omitted; nor is it necessary it should ever be added, if we except one case, viz. when the figure of (⌣) Kāmets precedes Shěvá, for then this vowel will be either ā or o, just as the accent is added or not: as, חֲכָמָה she was wise; or, חֲכָמָה wisdom (Art. 55.). In every other case, no difficulty can arise, whether the accent is added or not.

4. In some cases, however, the Euphonic accent seems to mark the substitution of an imperfect for a perfect vowel: as, גְּבֻלָּהּ (for גְּבוּלָהּ thy border, Exod. xxiii. 31; וַיִּירָאוּ for וַיִּירָאוּ) and they shall fear, Mic. vii. 17; where it is necessary for the completion of the syllable (Art. 33.). It is, nevertheless, frequently omitted, and must be supplied by the reader, particularly before an implied Dāgēsh (Art. 109), &c.

5. The letter ו with Shūrék prefixed to a word, and situated as above, with respect to the tonic accent, will sometimes be found with the Euphonic accent, and followed by one of the substitutes of Shěvá where (:) would be regular: as, וַיִּשְׂבֶּה and lead thou captive, Jud. v. 12; וַתִּבְקֶשׂ and be thou sought, Ezek. xxvi. 21.

128. Words consisting of more than two syllables, the first of which is terminated by Dāgēsh, will receive the Euphonic accent on that syllable: as, וַיִּשְׁמְעוּ and they heard, Gen. iii. 8; מָחָרֹת on the morrow, Ib. xix. 34; הַמַּאֲכָלֹת the knife, Ib. xxii. 6.*

2. This will also hold good when the Dāgēsh is omitted: as, וַיִּמְשָׁהוּ and he felt him, Ib. xxvii. 22; הַמְכַסֶּה which covereth, Exod. xxix. 13, &c. In all these cases Shēvā is initial; and, consequently, any one of the letters בְּנִדְפָתָהּ, which may happen to follow, will retain its aspiration: as, הַמְתַּעֲבִים the abhorrers, Mic. iii. 9. Hence הַלְלִי is to be pronounced Hālēlú, not Hallú. Something of the same kind is observable in the words גְּבֹהֶךָ and וַיִּרְאֵי just cited (Art. 127. 4.)

129. When any one of the substitutes of Shēvā happens to be preceded by a vowel, that vowel will receive the Euphonic accent: as, נַעֲשֶׂה let us make, Gen. i. 26; נְאֻמֹּו faithful, Numb. xii. 7; אֹהֶלֶה his tent, Gen. xiii. 3; הָאֲדָמָה the ground, Ib. i. 25; צָעֲקוּם crying out (pl.), Ib. iv. 10; וְאִשְׁלַחְךָ and I would have dismissed thee, Ib. xxxi. 27.

2. When the substitute of Shēvā, moreover, is resolved into its homogeneous imperfect vowel (Art. 106. 2.), the Euphonic accent will still remain: as, נַעֲלֶךָ thy sandal, Isa. xx. 2; וַיִּהְרָדוּ and they shall fear, Hos. xi. 10.

130. When any imperfect vowel at the beginning of a word, precedes a (:) Shēvā not accompanied by Dāgēsh forte, it will, for the most part, have the Euphonic accent: as, מְחַבְּרָתוֹ its coupling, Exod. xxxix. 20; הִשְׁתַּבְּחוּ they bowed themselves down, Jer. viii. 2; יִתְפַּרְקוּ they broke off, Exod. xxxii. 3; מְתַיְהוּם becoming Jews, Esth. viii. 17. Hence we have יִהְיֶה, יִתְחַיֶּה, &c., from the verbs הִיָּה become, and חָיָה live. But, in these cases, the accents do not interfere with the syllabication (See Art. 43.).

131. On some occasions, other accents are found to occupy the situation of Métheq. These are, מִן Mūnák, כַּדְמָה Kadmá, מֶרְכָּה Mercá: as, וְהָעֵצִים and the pieces of wood, Gen. xxii. 7; וְאַהֲרֹן and Aaron, Exod. vii. 7; וְהַכֹּהֵן and the priest, Levit. vii. 8; לְמַלְבִּיָּאל of

* The Student must not be surprised, if he finds the different editions of the Bible vary on these points.

Malchiel, Numb. xxvi. 45. In these cases we have *Mūnák*h or Kadmá in the place of Métheg, followed by Zāképh Kātón. In וַיִּלְכוּ so they proceed, Numb. xxii. 7, Kadmá is followed by Géresh; and, Ib. xxxii. 39, we have it again, coupled with Métheg, in some editions: as, וַיִּלְכוּ, which, with many similar examples, is perhaps to be ascribed to the carelessness, hurry, or whims, of the copyists.

2. In the following examples we have Mercá ¯ in the place of Métheg: as, כְּכִכְבֵּי like the stars,* Exod. xxxii. 13; וַיִּטְמַנְהוּ so he hides him, Exod. ii. 12.† In these cases Mercá is found with Tiphkhá for its tonic accent.

3. In a few instances Yérakh ¯ or Yéthiv ¯ is found in the place of Métheg; as, מִמְעַצְוֹתֵיהֶם from their counsels, Ps. v. 11; וְשִׂאֲהָבָה whom it (fem.) loves, Cant. 1. 7. In the last case, however, שׂ stands for אֲשֶׁר, and may therefore take any tonic accent. In numerous cases, as the student will find, many of these rules are never applied; and, in many others, as already remarked, the printed copies of the Hebrew Bible differ, as do also the MSS. In many too, neither the syllabication nor the sense of the passage, is affected by these accents, whence it should seem probable, that they have been added merely for the purpose of regulating the tone of voice in reading or chanting the text.

On the Use and Position of מַקְקַפֵּי.

132. Learned men are not agreed whether this mark is, or is not, to be ranked among the accents. Some have argued that it ought, because it is always found to supply the place of an accent. Others, again, that it ought not; because it is universally found to deprive the word to which it is attached of its tone-accent. That it is equivalent in effect to an accent, I think, both parties allow: and, if I mistake not, its depriving the word to which it has been attached of its tone-accent, seems to make for the hypothesis, that it ought to be considered as performing the functions of such accent. It seems to me, therefore, but a loss of time to argue against its being termed an accent.

* In some editions כְּכִכְבֵּי regularly.

† Which is also with Métheg in some editions.

Rules for its Use and Insertion.

133. Words immediately connected with each other, either in signification or by grammatical construction, are frequently connected by Makkápk, the former being then deprived of its tone-accent: as, נְאֻם־יְהוָה Jehovah's word, Amos ii. 16; טְהַר־לֵב pure of heart, Prov. xxii. 11; וַיִּט־שָׁם and he pitched (his tent) there; בֶּן־קָטָן a little son, 2 Sam. ix. 12; בֶּן־אֶחָד one son, 1 Sam. xxii. 20; כָּל־גְּבוּהָ every high thing, Job xli. 26; יַגְבֹּל־אֹתוֹ it shall limit it, Josh. xviii. 20; גַּם־לְאִישָׁהּ even to her husband, Gen. iii. 6; מִטּוֹב עַד־רָע lest thou speak with Jacob (any thing) from good to bad, Gen. xxxi. 24; אֲשֶׁר־קָרָא which he called, Gen. xxvi. 18. So, גַּן־בְּעֵדֶן a garden in Eden, Gen. ii. 8; גֵּשׁ־הֵלָאָה come hither, Ib. xix. 9; בָּא־לְגֹר he came to sojourn, Ib.; וַיְהִי־עֶרֶב and the evening was, Ib. i. 5, &c., to which many others might be added, in which two, three, or even four words, are thus connected (see Art. 65.). In all these cases, the last word only in the connection will have the tone-accent.

2. Since then the tone-accent is in all these cases taken away, words so connected, ending in a perfect mutable vowel, and followed by a consonant, will generally take the correspondent imperfect one in that syllable: as, כָּל־גְּבוּהָ every high thing, instead of כָּל־גְּבוּהָ; גֵּשׁ־הֵלָאָה come hither, for גֵּשׁ־הֵלָאָה; זְכַר־נָא remember, pray, Isa. xxxviii. 3, for זְכַר־נָא; שְׁמַר־תָּם preserve integrity, Psalm xxxvii. 37, for שְׁמַר־תָּם (Art. 124.).

3. In the following and similar cases, the terminating vowel of the preceding word is immutable: as, בָּנוֹת־לוֹט the daughters of Lot, Gen. xix. 36; גִּבּוֹר־צֹד great (in) hunting, Gen. x. 9; יַגְבֹּל־אֹתוֹ it (the Jordan) shall limit it; לֵב־דָּוִד David's heart, 2 Sam. xxiv. 10, where לֵב is put for לֵבָב; תַּת־כֹּחָהּ the giving of its (fem.) strength, Gen. iv. 12, תַּת־כֹּחָהּ being put for תַּת־כֹּחָהּ.

4. We have, however, Prov. xxii. 15, בְּלִב־נַעַר in the heart of a child. We also have, Gen. xvi. 13, שֵׁם־יְהוָה, and, Ib. 15, שֵׁם־בְּנוֹ, which, with similar instances, may perhaps be referred to the carelessness of the copyists.*

* The most complete list of these exceptions is given in the second volume of the Heb. Gram. by Guarin, pp. 320—1, 2.

134. Makkáph is inserted in the following cases:—

1. Particles, which from their nature can never have a *distinctive** accent, are mostly connected with other words by the mark Makkáph: as, גַּם־לְאִישָׁהּ even to her husband; בְּתָם־לִבִּי in the integrity of my heart, Gen. xx. 5, &c.

2. When words are to be construed together the tone-accent of which would concur; i. e. when the accent of the preceding word is on the last syllable, and the following word is either a monosyllable or a dissyllable having the accent on the penultimate, then, in order to avoid such concurrence (Art. 120.), such words are to be connected by Makkáph: as, זֶרְעוֹ־בּוֹ its seed (is) within itself, Gen. i. 11, instead of בּוֹ זֶרְעוֹ. So וַיְחַבְּקֵהוּ־לּוֹ וַיִּנָּשֶׂק־לּוֹ so he embraced him, and kissed him, Ib. xxix. 13, instead of לּוֹ וַיִּנָּשֶׂק־לּוֹ, &c.; וַיְהִי־עֶרֶב וַיְהִי־בֹקֶר so evening was, and morning was, Ib. i. 5, instead of וַיְהִי־עֶרֶב, &c. The remaining rules, usually given by the grammarians, may be resolved into one or other of the preceding.

3. In any of the above cases, the Euphonic accent may be appended to the former of such words, according to the rules already laid down (Art. 126, &c.).

LECTURE V.

ON THE CHANGES WHICH TAKE PLACE IN THE TERMINATIONS OF WORDS, IN CONSEQUENCE OF THE FORMATION OF THE FEMININE FROM THE MASCULINE GENDER; OF THE DUAL OR PLURAL FROM THE SINGULAR NUMBER; AND OF THE STATE OF DEFINITE CONSTRUCTION.

Of the Formation of the Feminine from the Masculine Gender.

135. It should be premised that in the Hebrew Language there are but two genders, viz. the Masculine, and the Feminine.

2. The Masculine is generally restricted to nouns signifying the proper names or offices of men: as, דָּוִד David; עֲזָה Uzza; פֶּחָה or פַּחַת a governor; קֹהֵל a preacher, &c., whatever be their termination.

3. Also to words signifying People, Rivers, Mountains, or Months: as, יִשְׂרָאֵל Israel; יַרְדֵּן Jordan; סִינַי Sinai; נִסָּן Nisán, &c., without reference to their termination.

4. Words ending in any radical letter (not included in No. 5.), also those ending in ה preceded by (ו), and others terminating in י, ם, or ן, servile, will be of the masculine gender: as, דְּבָר a word; מְמִשָּׁל dominion; שָׂדֶה a plain, or field; מְרֵאָה vision; עִבְרִי a Hebrew; פְּדִיּוֹם redemption; שֻׁלְחָן a table; קֶרְבָּן an offering.*

* The exceptions are: אֶבֶן a stone; כַּד a bowl; אֲפֵסֶדֶד a viper; אֲשִׁיר or אֲשִׁירָה a step, pace; בְּאֵר a well; גֶּהֶז a corn-floor; חֶרֶב a sword; יָתֵד a stake, post; קַד a vessel so called: כּוֹס a full cup; קֶבֶר a talent; מַחְבֵּת a frying-pan; נֶגֶד light; נַעַל a sandal; קֶלֶח flour; עָב a cloud; עֵשׂ a star so called; עֶרֶשׂ a bed; פֶּת a morsel; צָפוֹן the north; שְׁלֵו a quail; תְּמַל the world; תְּמוֹר an ass; לֶחֶם bread; מִגֶּן a shield; עֶרֶב the evening, which are all feminine.

5. Feminine nouns are the proper names of women; as well as words designating their offices; the names of regions or cities, and nouns signifying the parts and double members of the body, whatever be their terminating letters; e. g. רַחֵל Rākhél; מִיכָל Mikál; שֵׁגַל a consort; מוֹאֵב Mōáb; אֶדוֹם Ēdóm; קְהֵרֹן Khebrón; יְרוּשָׁלַיִם Yērūshāláim; בֶּטֶן the belly; אֹזֶן the ear, &c. This distinction, therefore, arises from the signification not from the form of the word: cities and regions being considered perhaps as mothers, and so of others.*

6. Nouns ending in ה־ or ת servile are also of the feminine gender: as, פּוֹקֵדָה or פּוֹקֵדֶת a female visitor; בַּהֲמָה a beast; מַמְלָכָה or מַלְכוּת a kingdom. So שֵׁנָא for שֵׁנָה sleep, &c.

7. Many nouns are found in both genders, which are therefore termed common. These generally are, 1, The names of animals, flocks, birds: 2, Segolate nouns not restricted to the names or offices of men: and, 3, Others designating parts of the human body: 4, Participial nouns of the form פִּקֵּד: and, 5, The decimal numerals from twenty to one hundred, inclusive: e. g. 1, גַּמֵּל a camel; דָּב a bear; צֹאן and שֵׁה a flock of sheep; צִפּוֹר a bird: 2, אֶרֶב a road; רוּחַ breath: 3, יָד a hand; עֵין an eye; זְרוּעַ an arm; נַפֶּשׁ the soul: 4, הַצֵּר an enclosure: 5, עֶשְׂרִים twenty; שְׁלֹשִׁים thirty, &c. To these several others of different forms may be added: as,

* The exceptions are, פֶּה the mouth; צְוֵהָר the neck; עֲרֵף the back; שֵׁן or שְׁרֵר the navel; עִפְעָפִים the eyelids; עֵקֶב the heel; דְּמוּת likeness; שָׂדֵמָה a blasted field; מִנְחָה a meat-offering; מוֹרָה a razor; מִקְנֵה a cucumber bed; and צְבָא an army, which are all masculine. I am inclined to believe, that this termination is nothing more than a fragment of some ancient form of the feminine pronoun of the third person singular, which we also find as the inseparable feminine pronoun of the same person. See the table of inseparable pronouns, Art. 145.

אָרֹן a chest, or ark; גַּן a garden; חֲלוֹן a window; יְצִיעַ a couch; יוֹבֵל a jubilee, &c., which are noted in the dictionaries.

136. We now come to shew how the noun of the feminine gender is formed from that of the masculine.

1. It will readily be perceived, that the names of certain offices, &c., may apply to either men or women; and that cases might occur, in which it may be necessary to designate the sex of the person, to which such word is applied. The masculine forms have already been pointed out; it will be necessary here only to shew how those peculiar to the feminine are formed from them.

2. Feminine nouns will be formed from the masculine generally by adding the termination הַּ or תַּ, and changing the preceding vowels of the ultimate or penultimate syllable, according as the analogy of the word (hereafter to be considered) and the rules detailed (Artt. 93, 101.) may require; e. g. טוֹב a good man, &c.; טוֹבָה a good woman, &c.; מֶלֶךְ (original form מַלְכָּה) a king, מַלְכָּה a queen; בּוֹקֵד masc. בּוֹקֵדָה or בּוֹקֵדֶת fem. a visitor, or visiting.

3. Let us now see in what instances these different terminations are taken. It will be extremely difficult to lay down rules comprehending every possible case: we shall content ourselves therefore with the following, given by Albert Schultens.

4. Nouns ending in an immutable* vowel will generally take the termination הַּ: as, בִּקְרוּד visited, masc.; בִּקְרוּדָה fem.; טוֹב good, masc.; טוֹבָה fem.; גָּדוֹל great, masc.; גָּדוּלָה fem.; צַדִּיק just, masc.; צַדִּיקָה fem.

5. Patronymics, and nouns originally ending in י, also

* What vowels are to be considered as mutable or immutable, will be shewn in the next Lecture.

ordinal numbers ending in י and falling under this rule, will double the (י) by Dāgēsh, upon receiving this feminine termination: as, מוֹאָבִי a Moabite; מוֹאָבִיָּה (or (מוֹאָבִית) a Moabites. So, אַרְמִי a Syrian; fem. אַרְמִיָּה (or אַרְמִית); פֹּרִיָּה bearing fruit; בּוֹכִיָּה weeping; שְׁלִישִׁי the third, masc.; שְׁלִישִׁיָּה or שְׁלִישִׁית, fem.

6. Participles of the Hiphhil conjugation are excepted: as, מִמְּקִיד, fem. מִמְּקִידָה, with some other nouns: as, שֹׁלֵט a ruler; שֹׁלֵטָה, fem.; גְּבִיר a master; גְּבִירָה or גְּבִירָת a mistress.

7. Nouns receiving a final Shēvā (ֵ) in the penultimate syllable will take הֵ for their feminine termination: as, אָדוּם red, masc.; אָדוּמָה (for אָדוּמָה) fem.; קָטָן little, masc.; קָטָנָה, fem.; נֶסֶב surrounded, masc.; נֶסֶבָה, fem. So, נִגְלָה revealed, for נִגְלָהָה, from נִגְלָה, masc. by contraction (Art. 73.).

8. Hence all segolate nouns will form their feminines in הֵ; as, מֶלֶךְ, for מֶלֶכָה a king, fem. מֶלֶכָה a queen; אֶבֶל for אֶבְלָה food, fem. אֶבְלָה; עוֹל for עוֹלָה wickedness, fem. עוֹלָה; or, by contraction (Art. 87. 1.), עוֹלָה; צִיד, for צִידָה contracted by (Art. 87. 3.) צִידָה hunting, fem. צִידָה.

9. Some nouns are found to take both forms of the feminine: as, מַמְלָכָה or מַמְלָכֶת a kingdom; מִשְׁפָּחָה or מִשְׁפָּחַת a family, (*Pāthákh*s are here taken instead of *Sēgól*s on account of the guttural ה) אֲשֵׁמוּרָה or אֲשֵׁמוּרַת a watch or guard. So some participles and infinitives: as, בּוֹקֶדֶת or בּוֹקֶדֶת visiting, fem.; לָדָה or לָדַת bringing forth. To which may be added the patronymics, &c. above noticed, as well as many other nouns which will be learned best from practice.

137. Nouns not subject to these restrictions will, for the most part, have their feminine forms ending in תֵּ or in some equivalent termination: as, עֹטָר a crown; עֹטָרָה, fem. (which also has עֹטָרָה).

2. The terminations equivalent to תֵּ are: 1, תֵּ; 2, תֵּ; 3, תֵּ; 4, תֵּ; 5, תֵּ; 6, תֵּ or תֵּ; 7, תֵּ or תֵּ; as,

1, אַחֵת sister, for אַחֵת; but on account of the guttural ח, אַחֵת, which, by Art. 87. 1, will become אַחֵת or אַחֵת; 2, גָּלוּת for גָּלוּת, and by Art. 87. 2. גָּלוּת exile: 3, תְּבִנִית for תְּבִנִית, and by Art. 87. 4. תְּבִנִית: 4, מוֹצֵאת for מוֹצֵאת finding, by Art. 87. 5: 5, חַטָּאת for חַטָּאת sin (by the same Article); 6, תָּת for תָּת giving, (primitive form תָּת, the נ being rejected by Art. 76.). So, אֱמֶת truth, for אֱמֶת or אֱמֶת: 7, לָת for לָת bringing forth a child, (primitive form לָת, and, rejecting the medial ט for the sake of euphony, we have לָת). For the same reason, we have אַחַת for אַחַת one, fem.; בַּת a daughter, for בַּת or בַּת: but זִמְרָת a song, has the regular Chaldaic or Syriac termination.

On the Inflection of Nouns.

138. Three numbers are recognised by Hebrew Grammarians in the inflection of Nouns: viz. the Singular, the Dual, and the Plural.

On the Formation of the Dual Number.

1. The dual number is formed from the singular by adding the termination יָם: as, יוֹם a day; יוֹמַיִם two days; מֶלֶךְ (for מֶלֶךְ) a king; מַלְכַיִם two kings; מַלְכָּה a queen; מַלְכָּתַיִם two queens. Instead of שְׁנַיִם two, we have, by contraction (Art. 87. 3.), שְׁנַיִם, and fem. for שְׁנַתַיִם (for שְׁנַתַיִם Art. 76.), by the same rule.

2. All feminine nouns ending in הָ, change הָ to תָ upon receiving any increment whatsoever, as also when put in construction with any other noun, of which more will be said hereafter: hence we have מַלְכָּתַיִם as above.

3. The dual number is, for the most part, restricted to things which are double by nature or art, as the parts or double members of the body, &c. It is never found in the conjugation verbs.

4. A few instances occur in which a dual termination is added to a noun already in the plural number: as,

הַמְּתִים two walls, Isa. xxii. 11; לַחֲתִים two tables, Ezek. xxvii. 5.

The changes of the preceding vowels will be regulated as before (Art. 93, &c.): these will be particularly considered in the next Lecture.

On the Formation of the Plural Number Masculine.

139. Nouns of the masculine gender are made plural by attaching the asyllabic augment ים to the singular: as, טוב good, masc., טובים plur.; מֶלֶךְ (for מֶלֶךְ or מְלֶכֶךְ) a king, plur. מְלָכִים; גּוֹי a nation, plur. גּוֹיִם (for גּוֹיִים by omission, Art. 75.) nations; נָכְרִי a stranger, plur. נְכָרִים (for נְכָרִיִּים by contraction and omission, Artt. 75. and 72.). So יהוּדִים Jews (for יְהוּדִיִּים).*

2. In many instances, however, words of this kind are written fully: as, לְוִיִּם Levites, sing. לְוִי; פְּנִישִׁים Cushites (vulgarly Ethiopians); כִּיְתִים Chittim, Isa. xxiii. 12; יְהוּדִיִּים Esth. iv. 7, viii. 7; כַּשְׂדִּיִּים Chaldeans, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17, &c.; where the marginal reading is generally of the contracted form.

In one instance א is inserted in the place of Dāgēsh: as, עֲרַבִּיִּים for עֲרַבִּיִּים, or contr. עֲרַבִּים Arabs, 2 Chron. xvii. 11.

3. We sometimes have the Chaldaic termination ין: as, מְלָכִין kings, Prov. xxxi. 3; אִיִּין (for אִיִּין) islands, continents, Ezek. xxvi. 18, &c.

* So שָׁנִים pl. of שָׁנִי scarlet, Isa. i. 18; חֲפִשִׁי of חֲפִשִׁים free, Isa. lviii. 6; פְּנִימִי of פְּנִימִים inner, 1 Chron. xxviii. 11, for שְׁנִיִּים, &c.

The א added to Hebrew masculine plurals, as well as the ین of Syriac and Chaldaic ones, seems to me to have been added for the mere purpose of filling up the hiatus which would otherwise have happened. Such is the Tamween (ء, َ, ِ) of the Arabs; which, according to them, is always cut off when the word is placed in the state of definite construction, as is also its vicegerent the final ن of the dual and plural. ويجب تجريد المضاف عن التنوين وما يقوم مقامه وهو نون التثنية والجمع &c. Hidayat-oon-Nahwe, p. 57 Calcutta, 1803. The Moolla Jāmi considers this as the index of a complete word, which, when lost in the state of construction, is supplied by the following word. Comment. on the Kāfia, p. 199.

4. The terminating letters ם, or (Chaldiac) ן, are always omitted, when the noun is in the state of definite construction with any following word (Art. 143.), or when any affixed pronoun is attached to it: as, מַלְכֵי אֶרֶץ kings of the land; מַלְכֵיהֶם their kings, of which more will be said hereafter. The first of these forms is termed absolute, the second is said to be that of construction.

5. In some cases also, when such plural words are not in the state of construction, these letters are omitted: as, חוֹסֵי בּוֹ those who trust in him, Ps. ii. 12, &c.

6. We occasionally find the termination יִ- used instead of יִם- or יִ-: as, גַּבֵּי locusts, Amos vii. 1, Nah. iii. 17; חַלּוֹנֵי windows, Jer. xxii. 14; שָׂרֵי princes, Judg. v. 15; הָרֵי mountains, Zech. xiv. 5; חֲוָרֵי net works, Isa. xix. 9; חָשׁוּבֵי (men, &c.) uncovered, Isa. xx. 4; and frequently, שֵׁנֵי the Almighty; אֲרֹנֵי Lord, &c. But, as we find that this diphthong (יִ-) is only another form for יִ- (Art. 87. 3.), we may perhaps hence conclude, that this termination is nothing more than a contraction for יִ-, and therefore, perfectly equivalent to it in signification: but, not containing any thing superlative as some have thought. This termination has also been supposed to designate collective nouns; but, as most plural nouns may be considered as collectives, there does not seem to be any necessity for this distinction.

7. There are moreover several passages, in which יִ- has been thought to be a plural termination: as, רֹאשׁ הַשְּׂלֵשִׁי head of the captains, 2 Sam. xxiii. 8, which in the parallel passage, 1 Chron. xi. 11, is רֹאשׁ הַשְּׂלִישִׁים. So הַקְּרָוִי וְהַרְצָוִים the captains and the runners, 2 Kings xi. 4, 19. Of this kind some suppose הַפְּנִיעָנִי Gen. xii. 6, xiii. 7; פְּרָתִי וּפְלִתִי 2 Sam. viii. 18, xx. 7, 23, &c. to be, while others believe the terminating (יִ) to indicate nothing more than a patronymic or gentile noun.* To these some other passages

* I am very much disposed to believe, that the plural termination attached to Hebrew nouns and verbs, is nothing more than a fragment of some word originally used to designate plurality. In the Malay, Sanscrit, and some other languages, the plural number is still formed by adding some word or words signifying much, many, or the like; or, by repeating the same word: as, in the Malay, Órang bāniak, or Órang órang, many man; or man man. So in Sanscrit. See Yates's Gram. p. 59.

might be added: as, פְּלִילִי Job xxxi. 28, compared with Ib. v. 11; אֶהְיֶה 1 Sam. xx. 38; אֶהְיֶה Gen. xl. 16; עָפְמִי 2 Sam. xxii. 44, Ps. cxliv. 2, Lam. iii. 14, &c.

In such cases as these, הֵי may, according to our hypothesis, be

In the Coptic and New Zealand also, the syllabic ni or na, which is prefixed for the purpose of designating the plural number, seems manifestly to be derived from the word naa or na, which in both these languages means great, much, or the like. In the Hebrew we find words derived from the root הָיָה or הֵיָה being, signifying substance, &c.: as, הוֹן wealth; הוֹה a great misfortune, calamity; or הֵיָה a great deep, a bath. In the Arabic هوي is, inordinate affection; هَوِيَّة lust, a great deep, abyss: and hence, perhaps, יְהוֹה

Jehovah, the great being, emphatically styled ó óv, הוּ, or הוּא, as well as אֶהְיֶה אֶהְיֶה אֶהְיֶה Exod. iii. 14. So in the Sanscrit bhūvān, literally and etymologically, being, applied to God or any great man; from the root bhū, be. Now, if we can conceive a noun of the primitive form פְּקֹדָה, i. e. הֵיָה being, substance, much, or the like, thus to be used, we shall have the forms הֵיָה by Euphony, (Art. 108), and הֵיָה by contraction, (Art. 87. 3.). Writing then הֵיָה הֵיָה in the form proper for construction but in one word, and striking out the first הֵי by Art. 73, and the last by Art. 74, we shall have הֵיָה for the contracted plural form, to which the Euphonic הֵי or הֵי may be added or not: and without the (·) Khīrik, הֵיָה, which is a form noticed above. Again, taking הֵיָה, which is the segolate form proper for construction, and striking out the two הֵ Hé's as before, we shall have הֵיָה, which is the termination proper for the state of construction likewise. The termination הֵיָה, or by contraction הֵי, (Art. 87. 2.), may, for the sake of distinction, have been taken for the verbs from the cognate root הֵיָה having the same signification: for, taking the segolate or primitive form הֵיָה or הֵיָה, we shall have הֵיָה by contraction; and, writing פְּקֹדָה for פְּקֹדָה, as before, we shall have the plural terminations for some parts of the verb, as also for some nouns above noticed, which I believe are real ancient forms of nouns in the plural number, and which therefore stood in no need of correction by the Masorets.

The plural termination of the feminine nouns may have arisen from this same root: for if we take הֵיָה of the form פְּקֹדָה, and change the final הֵ into ת, which occasionally takes place, we shall have by contraction הֵיָה by Art. 87. 1, and, for הֵיָה הֵיָה, as before.

a plural termination, the Euphonic ם being cut off: but, as it will be hereafter seen, that (י) is also the termination of patronymic or gentile nouns, the context alone must be our guide in ascertaining the sense in such passages.

8. Dr. Gesenius is of opinion, that the termination י is, in some cases, nothing more than an Arabism for the singular ה: as, שְׂדֵי for שְׂדֵה a field, Deut. xxxii. 13; Ps. viii. 8. So חוֹזֵי for חוֹזֵה a seer, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 19, &c., but this is unnecessary.

9. Some have also supposed, that ין, and י without the Euphonic ך, are occasionally used as plural terminations: as, יִשְׁרָרֹן Ye-shūrān for Israel. הִכְרִי שָׁמַיִם to be read הִכְרִי שָׁמַיִם (by Art. 87. 2.) augurs, i. e. dividers of the heavens. So Isa. xlvii. 13, רַבּוֹתַי הַרְבִּיּוּ the multitude of my laws. So Ps. cxix. 79; שְׁנֵאוֹ 2 Sam. v. 8; בָּנָיו 1 Chron. vi. 11, &c. In most of these and similar passages, however, we have a various reading in the margin, which supplies the regular plural termination, י.

On the Formation of the Plural Number Feminine.

140. The termination used to designate the feminine plural is יֹת,* which like the preceding ים, &c. is asyllabic: as, דוֹר a generation, דוֹרוֹת (or Art. 72. דוֹרֹת) generations.

2. When the feminine singular ends in ה, ת, or ת; &c., these terminations are rejected in forming the plural: as, בּוֹקֶדֶה or בּוֹקֶדֶת visiting, (fem.) בּוֹקְדוֹת plural.† The same may be said of the Chaldaic termination ת; as, תְּהִלַּת praise, תְּהִלּוֹת praises, Ps. ix. 15, &c.

3. Feminine nouns ending in ית and ית take the same termination, with this difference, viz. that י, in the first case, is doubled by Dāgēsh: as, עֵבְרִית a Hebrew woman, plural עֵבְרִיּוֹת (the singular being עֵבְרִית or עֵבְרִיָּה): and in the second by prefixing י, and preserving the homogeneous imperfect vowel corresponding to ו: as, מַלְכוּת a kingdom, מַלְכוּתִים kingdoms, as if the singular were a contraction of מַלְכוּיָה.

* See the note to the preceding article.

† In other words, the feminine plural is formed from the masculine singular, not from the feminine singular.

4. Nouns ending in ית are sometimes found with their plurals formed by the addition of the plural terminations ים or ות: as, חֲנִית a spear, pl. חֲנִיתִים and חֲנִיתוֹת; זְנוּת fornication, pl. זְנוּתִים, &c.

5. So also others ending in ת; as, דֶּלֶת a door, pl. דְּלָתוֹת; קֶשֶׁת a bow, pl. קֶשֶׁתוֹת bows; שֵׁפָת (for שֵׁפֶה) a lip, pl. שֵׁפָתוֹת lips.

141. The plural belonging to a considerable number of masculine nouns is found with the feminine termination ות, while, on the other hand, many feminine nouns are also found with the masculine termination ים in the plural: as, 1st, אָב a father, pl. אֲבוֹת; אוֹצֵר a treasure, pl. אוֹצְרוֹת; and, 2d, אֶבֶן a stone, fem. pl. אֲבָנִים; אֵלֶּה a fir-tree, pl. אֵלִים fir-trees; all of which the Lexicons will supply as they occur.

2. Nouns of the common gender are sometimes found with two plural forms: as, שָׁנָה a year, pl. שָׁנִים and שָׁנוֹת years: so יָמִים and יָמוֹת days, for יוֹמִים or יוֹמוֹת, pl. of יוֹם for יוֹמִים a day; and, a few others have the masculine added to the feminine form of the plural: as, קַמָּה a high place, pl. קַמּוֹת and קַמּוֹתִים. Others again are found only in the plural number: as, פָּנִים the face; חַיִּים life; נָשִׁים women. Others are used in the dual only: as, רֵחִים a mill; מאֲזַנִּים balances, &c.

142. Generic nouns signifying any whole species, may, in the singular number, be construed as plurals when the context requires it: as, עוֹף fowl, or fowls; בֶּן־אָדָם child, or children; צֹאן flock, or flocks.

2. Hence, nouns signifying Metals, Liquids, Virtues, Vices, to which may be added Proper names, are generally found in the singular number only: as, כֶּסֶף silver, זָהָב gold, יַיִן wine, יַצְהָר oil, חֵכְמָה wisdom, נְבִלָה foolishness, שִׂנְאָה hatred, מֹשֶׁה Moses, צִפְרָה Zipporah, יִשְׂרָאֵל Israel, &c.

3. We have, nevertheless, הַבִּינּוֹת understandings, אַהֲבָיִם loves, חַסְדִּים graces, כְּעֶשְׂיִם angers, חֲכָמוֹת wisdoms, &c.; but, in these cases, the signification is intensive.

4. Nouns implying age are mostly found in the plural number: as, נְעוּרִים childhood, עֲלוּמַיִם youth, זְקוּנִים old age, &c. We have, nevertheless, יְלֻדוֹת for childhood, and עֲלָמוֹת for youth, to which some others might be added.

5. Words ending in יָת and יָת, generally denote the state in which any person or thing is said to be. Hence יְלֻדוֹת will signify the state of childhood; these words therefore need not be put in the plural number. In the other case, the word שָׁנִים is probably understood; we shall therefore have נְעוּרִים for שָׁנִים childish years; and so of others, which will account for the apparent anomaly.

The nouns generally found in the dual number have already been pointed out (Art. 138. 3.).

On the Changes found to take place in Nouns when put in the Definite State of Construction.

143. By the definite state of Construction is meant, the juxta position of two or more nouns not meaning the same thing, when the latter is added for the purpose of defining, or otherwise qualifying, that which immediately precedes it: as, יַד יְהוָה Jehovah's hand; שֵׁבֶט בְּרֹזֶל a rod of iron; יְמֵי שְׁנֵי-חַיֵּי אַבְרָהָם the days of the years of the life of Abraham.

2. Now, as such words are added for the sole purpose of presenting some one definite idea, the whole combination seems to have been considered as presenting one compound word only; and, hence, the governing tone-accent has been supposed to rest on the last so construed; and then the vowels of the preceding word have been contracted or rejected, as far as the analogy would allow.

3. Hence, nouns having perfect and mutable* vowels

* These will be shewn when we come to treat of the forms of nouns.

in their ultimate and penultimate syllables, will generally change that in the ultimate to its homogeneous imperfect one, and reject that in the penultimate: as, דְּבַר יְהוָה Jehovah's word (from דָּבַר); תּוֹרַת יְהוָה Jehovah's law (from תּוֹרָה).

4. All feminine nouns however ending in הַ־ will change the ה to ת, probably for the purpose of rendering the character of such words more susceptible to the ear, than they would be with the ה remaining (Art. 138. 2.).

5. Exceptions:—All masculine nouns singular ending in הַ־* will take הַ־ when preceding others in the state of construction: as, מִקְנֵה־אַבְרָם Abram's stock. Segolate nouns are subject to no variation in the singular number: as, מֶלֶךְ אַשּׁוּר the king of Assyria.

6. Segolate nouns having ו or י for their middle radical letter, will undergo a contraction when preceding other nouns in the state of construction: as, תוֹךְ הַגֶּן the midst of the garden, (from תוֹךְ of תוֹךְ) by Art. 87. 1; בַּיִת יַעֲקֹב the house of Jacob,† רֵי בָּעַר (for רֵיה) sufficiency of burning, Isa. xl. 16. (Art. 87. 3.).

7. All masculine dual and plural nouns, ending in יִם־ and יָם־ respectively, will take the termination יִם־, and reject, or otherwise contract, the preceding vowel, whenever it is perfect and mutable; e. g. דְּבָרֵי יְהוָה Jehovah's words (sing. דָּבַר); עֵינֵי יְהוָה, (sing. עֵין or עֵינַי, dual עֵינַיִם) Jehovah's eyes. In these cases, the terminating ם of the dual and plural may be considered as euphonic, as the ם also is in the Chaldaic, Syriac, and Arabic (Art. 139. 4.).

* This terminating vowel seems to have been taken in order to avoid the confounding of these nouns with feminines ending in הַ־

On the termination ם, occasionally found in this situation, see Art. 139. 6.

8. From the examples already given, it will be seen that this construction may generally be translated by the genitive case in other languages; but, as one or other of the particles is occasionally introduced for this purpose, as well as to form combinations equivalent to the different cases of the Greek and Latin grammars, the Student is referred to the Syntax for further information on this subject.

LECTURE VI.

ON THE PARTS OF SPEECH IN GENERAL, AND ON THE NOUN
IN PARTICULAR.

144. HAVING laid down and exemplified the general principles of syllabication, &c. as found to prevail in this Language, we may now consider its different parts of speech, and shew how they stood in their primitive forms, and how they have been derived from one another.

1. The Hebrew language is, like all others, found to consist of nouns, verbs, and particles,* so arranged in sentences as to convey to the mind such ideas or notions as are intended to be inculcated by any Speaker or Writer. Of these, the third person singular masculine of the verb has generally been taken as the root or theme, from which the others have been derived. For my own part, I believe the noun ought rather to be considered as the root; not only because the learner may by this means be enabled more clearly to see how the conjugations of the verbs are carried on, but also because he may ascertain, with a much greater degree of precision, the force of all those nouns which have hitherto been considered as branches of the verb. Again, there are classes of the verb which do not exhibit the root fully in the third person singular masculine of the preterite; and these comprehend all those which have ٦ or ٧ for the middle radical letter; which are found complete in the noun, but defective in the verb. In some others, indeed, the noun appears in a defective form; but, in these cases, it is not found complete in the verb. Again, the variation found to prevail in the last vowel of the preterite, is more naturally accounted for in the noun than in the verb; and it is a fact, that a noun having the same vowel is almost universally found to exist. Besides, the participial and other nouns, which have no tenses in themselves, are much better understood when considered as derived from the primitive nouns, than when derived from words conjugated as verbs. Add to this the circumstance, that a verb in the state of conjugation either is, or must be considered as, compounded with a pronoun; and, therefore, in a state unfit to be taken for a primitive word. It is when without these pronouns, as well as every other adjunct, and when a word is in its simplest form, that we consider it as the root;* and, this we contend, is

* The Arabian and Jewish grammarians comprehend in these all the other parts of speech generally given in the grammars of Europe.

* The school of Basra hold the same opinion, with reference to the Arabic. See Ebn Farhát on this subject in M. de Sacy's Gram. Arabe, vol. i. p. 229, note. M. De Sacy himself thinks it will come to much the same thing, whether we consider the infinitive form as the root, or whether we take the third person singular of the masculine preterite, because the one may be termed the logical root, the other the etymological one, Ib. p. 197. But why, it may be asked, are the more natural way to proceed. Induced by these considerations to give the noun the first place in the etymology, we shall now proceed to lay down the forms of the personal pronouns, as used either in connection, or not, with other nouns; not, because these words have any prior claim to our consideration; but because, we shall thereby enable ourselves to shew, when we come to detail the forms of the nouns, how these pronouns are connected with them.

Of the PRONOUNS.

145. The pronouns are, in the Hebrew, as in other languages, 1. Personal, 2. Demonstrative, 3. Relative, and, 4. Interrogative, with which, 5. the Reflective, pronouns and the Definite Article, are sometimes classed. We shall at present consider the Personal Pronouns only.

The Personal Pronouns.

1. These are termed Separable, and Inseparable. When Separable, they may be considered as representing the person to which they belong in the nominative case:

---

we to have two forms of the root for the same word? And why may not that, which is termed the logical root, be also considered as the etymological one? If the one presents a form more simple than the other, which is the fact, Why, I want to know, may not the less simple be considered as derived from the other? I must confess, whatever the school of Koufa may think of it, that of Basra appears to me to have reason on their side in this question; and to their opinion I am therefore compelled to subscribe, which M. De Sacy has also done at p. 128, note a of his second vol. See also the Mikhlol of Kimkhi, fol. אָנָּן verso. The passage will be cited hereafter. I use the small edition of 1545. See also Le Court de Gebelin, Monde Primitif. vol. iii. pp. 55, 56, 80, &c.; Mr. Forster's Essay on Sanscrit Gram., p. 540; Caroli Aurivillii Dissertationes Goet. 1790, p. 376, &c. It is a curious fact, that in the Burman, verbs are nothing more than participial nouns conjugated with the pronouns. See Carey's Grammar of the Burman, p. 79, &c. See also Humboldt on the Chinese, Journal Asiatique, vol. iv. p. 115.

when Inseparable, they exhibit only a part of the Separable pronoun combined with some other word. When attached to verbs, they may be said to represent either the objective or some other oblique case; but, when attached to nouns, they stand for the correspondent possessive pronoun: there being no other way of expressing the possessive pronominal sense in Hebrew.

2. The Separable personal pronouns are as follows :

1 Person.	{	SING. COM. GEN.	אֲנִי, or אֲנֹכִי..... I.
		PLUR.	אֲנַחְנֹהּ, rarely נַחֲנֹהּ, and once אֲנֵנוּ.. We.
2 Person.	{	SING. MASC.	אַתָּה, rarely אַתָּ (for אַנְתָּ, &c.) .. Thou.
		PLUR.	אַתֶּם, (for אַנְתֶּם) ..... You.
		SING. FEM.	אַתְּ, rarely אַתִּי (for אַנְתְּ, &c.) Thou.
		PLUR.	אַתֶּן, rarely אַתְנֶה (for אַנְתֶּן, &c.) You.
		SING. MASC.	הוּא ..... He.
		PLUR.	הֵם, occasionally הֵמָּה ..... They.
3 Person.	{	SING. FEM.	הִיא, anciently הִוא.
		PLUR.	הֵן, occasionally הֵנָּה.

3. In a few instances אַתָּ thou, is used in the masculine gender: viz. Num. xi. 15, Deut. v. 24, and Ezek. xxviii. 14. אַתֶּם is used as a feminine in Ezek. xiii. 20: הֵמָּה is also used as a feminine, Cant. vi. 8, Ruth i. 22, Zech. v. 10: and הֵנָּה as a masculine, 2 Sam. iv. 6, Jer. l. 5. הֵן also occurs as a masculine, Ruth i. 13. We also have הִיא for הוּא, 1 Kings xvii. 15; and הוּא for הִיא throughout the Pentateuch, if we except eleven instances. This is usually ascribed to an archaism, grounded on the supposition that in ancient times the pronouns were all considered as being of the common gender.

4. אֲנִי is probably a foreign word: Egyptian, perhaps, where we have ANOK, there being no trace of it in any of the sister dialects of the Hebrew. Gesenius finds it, however, in the Phœnician.*

5. The Inseparable pronouns are abbreviated forms of the pronouns above given; they are invariably found attached to some preceding word, whether that be a noun, verb, or particle.† The following is a table of their forms when attached to nouns; we shall give those for the verbs hereafter.

For the 1 Pers.	}	SING. COM. GEN.	FOR NOUNS SING.	FOR NOUNS PLUR.
		אֲנִי, or אֲנִי	we have יְ	..... יְ my, or mine.
		PLUR.

2 Pers.	}	SING. MASC.	אתָ, or אַתָּה	..ךָ, or יְךָ .. כָּה, or יְךָ .. יְךָ thy, or thine.
		PLUR.	אתֶם	..... כֶּם

		PLUR.	הֵן, or הֵנָּה	..... הֵן, הֵן, הֵן .. יְהֵן, their, theirs.

* Lehregebäude, page 200, note.

† This may be considered as an illustration of the general principle of abridging and compounding words in Hebrew, and as confirming, in a great degree, the remarks offered in the note, Art. 139. 7. above.

6. It is to be observed, that in affixing these abbreviated pronouns to singular nouns, it will be necessary when such word does not end in a vowel, to take that form of the pronoun which is preceded by one, and thence called the Vowel of union. In this case, an accent will accompany it, as given in the table. But, when the preceding word ends in a vowel, no such union-vowel can be introduced: in that case, the abbreviated pronoun is taken which has no such preceding vowel of union.

7. Nouns ending in ם will drop that letter, upon receiving the affixed pronoun of the first person singular: as, גוֹי a nation; גוֹיִ my nation, for גוֹיִ.

8. The words אב a father, אח a brother, חם a father-in-law, and פה the mouth, will take ם when construed with a noun following, or when receiving any one of the above pronominal affixes: as, אבִי my father; אבִיךָ thy father. But, as two Yods (י) would, in these cases, concur in the first person, as אבִי, one of them will be dropped by the rule (No. 8.): as, אבִי (the root being אבִי or אבה) my father; and so on of the rest. Some other words ending in ם for ה, may take the affixed pronouns in the same way: as, פֵרִי fruit; פֵרִיהֶם their fruit; or, they may take it with a vowel of union: as, פֵרִיהֶם or פֵרִיהֶן their (masc. and fem.) fruit.

9. Here, however, the masculine form of the pronominal affix is sometimes taken, when the sense seems to require the feminine, and vice versá, see Gen. xxxi. 9, Ruth i. 8, 9, 11. 13, Ezek. xiii. 19, 20, 21, Jer. ix. 19. So also הוּ for הָ, פִמֶהוּ for פִמֶהָ Exod. xi. 6, twice. In the same manner we have מִמֶנִּי for מִמֶנֶּה Jud. xi. 34; ם for ן, as, שָפָלָם for שָפָלָן Cant. iv. 2, vi. 6. So Exod. ii. 17, 2 Sam. xx. 3, twice, Ps. cxix. 152. So הֶם for הֵן Exod. i. 21, Num. xxxvi. 6, twice, Job. xix. 15, Ezek. xxiii. 45, 47, Ezra x. 3, 44, Zech. v. 9, xi. 5: מוּ as a feminine in לָמוּ Lam. iv. 10. These apparent discrepancies, however, will be considered in the Syntax.

10. On the contrary, ן occurs for ם: as, לָאַרְבַּעָתָן for לָאַרְבַּעָתָם to them four, Ezek. i. 10, twice; and again, וֵרָר. 16, 18. Also in וֵרָר. 9, 12, 17, in their going; וֵרָר also occurs as a masculine, וֵרָר רַבְעֵיהֶן their four (sides), Ib. ver. 17; and again, in וֵרָר. 18, 24, 25. Also with a paragoric ה; as, גִּוְיֵיהֶן their bodies, Ib. ver. 11.

11. In affixing these pronouns to nouns, it must be remembered that they are not made to agree, either in number, gender, or person, with the nouns to which they are attached, but with those to which they relate, and which generally precede them in the context.

12. Such of these inseparable pronouns as commence with a consonant, and make a syllable independently of any part of the preceding word, are termed Syllabic; these are, that of the first person plural, נני; those of the second, כָּךְ, הֵ, כֵּם, and כֵּן; of the third, הֵי, הֵ, הֵם, and הֵן. Such as do not constitute a syllable in themselves, but require the addition of a letter from the preceding word, have been termed Asyllabic; see Art. 92, &c. Of these are the remaining pronouns, viz. יִ, יֵ, יָ, וֹ, וּ, וֵ, וִ, and וּ.

13. Of these inseparable pronouns כֵּם, כֵּן, הֵם, and הֵן, are termed grave (Art. 117. 2.), because they always have the accent. The others are, by way of distinction, termed light.

It is of importance to bear these distinctions in mind; because the changes of the vowels of the preceding word, will, in a great measure, depend upon them: e. g. if to דְּבַר a word. I affix יֵ my, mine, the ר of דְּבַר must be taken in order to enounce this vowel: as, דְּבַרִּי. But, by our laws of syllabication, the preceding ב must have a perfect vowel; (ֵ) will, therefore, remain unchanged. And, as the first (ֵ) is not immutable, and as the accent is with the affix, this vowel will become (:), and we shall have דְּבַרִּי dēvā-rī; where the asyllabic affix exerts a considerable influence on the ultimate form of the word. But, if I take a syllabic affix, let it be כֵּם your, we shall then have דְּבַרְכֵם your word. In this case, the ר of דְּבַר closes its last syllable; and as the accent is removed, the (ֵ) preceding this letter originally, must, by our laws of syllabication, become (-); and we accordingly have דְּבַרְכֵם. But, if we take הֵ which is also syllabic, we shall not have דְּבַרְהֵ, but דְּבַרְהֵ; because, although the affix הֵ is syllabic; still, as the accent accompanies the preceding syllable, it must remain perfect (Art. 33.) and we have דְּבַרְהֵ. The same holds good in all other cases. (Artt. 93. 94.)

15. Any word, preceding one or other of these affixes, may be considered as in construction with it, and therefore subject to all those changes in the vowels, to which words so situated are (Art. 143. 3.). The only difference is, that instead of the latter noun being written at length, it has been abbreviated.

16. The following examples will shew the application of the Inseparable pronouns to nouns singular and plural, masculine and feminine. No example of the dual is given, because it will always take the affixes proper for the plural : as, עֵינַיִם two eyes, עֵינַי my eyes, &c.

17. Nouns ending in ה־ take the affix ה־י instead of ו־ or

* The final ה becomes ת by Art. 143. 4.

ה in the third person singular masculine, rejecting first their final letter ה : as, עֵלֶּה a leaf; עֵלָּהּ his leaf; שָׂדֵה a field; שָׂדָּהּ his field. In like manner they reject their final letter when they receive the feminine affix of the same person, which is either הָ or הַ : as, שָׂדֵה a field; שָׂדָּהּ her field; מְקֵרָה an accident; מְקֵרָהּ her accident, Ruth ii. 3; מְרֵאָה an appearance; מְרֵאָהּ its appearance.

Anomalies.

18. שֵׂינָו his flock (of sheep), Deut. xxii. 1, from שֵׂינָה. The affix הָיוּ is occasionally found attached to other nouns: as, פִּילְגֶשְׁהוּ his concubine, Judg. xix. 24; מַטְהוּ his yoke, Nah. i. 13; אֹרְהוּ his light, Job xxv. 3. And also with plurals: as, גְּבוּרֵיהוּ his heroes, Nah. ii. 4.

19. The following examples are also anomalous. 2 Pers. masc. חֲלֻכָּה Ps. x. 14. 2 Pers. fem. וְשֵׁלֶשְׁתֵּיךְ thy third part, with ם inserted, Ezek. v. 12; נָתַתְּךָ giving thee, Ib. xxiii. 28; בְּלֵאָּה for the whole of it.

Of the first person plural מִדְּעַתְּבוּ our acquaintance, Ruth iii. 2; הַיָּמָנוּ our substance, Job xxii. 20. Of the second fem. זַמְתְּכֵנָה your baseness, Ezek. xxiii. 48.

Of the third masc. בְּלֵלָהֶם all of them, 2 Sam. xxiii. 6. Of the third fem. בְּלֵלָהֶנָּה the whole of them. So Gen. xli. 21; הַרְבֵּנָה for the midst of them.

With Nouns Plural.

20. 1 Pers. sing. עֵדוּתִי for עֵדוּתַי my testimonies, Ps. cxxxii. 12. The union vowels of the affix of the 3 fem. sing. are sometimes contracted: as, אֲחֵיוֹתַי for אֲחֵיוֹתַיךְ (Art. 87. 3.) thy sisters, Ezek. xvi. 52, &c., in which case the ם Yod is dropped. This sometimes takes place with the masc. pronoun: as, מַכּוֹתַיךְ thy strokes, for מַכּוֹתַיךְ Deut. xxviii. 59. So מְלֵאכְנֵיךְ thy messengers, Nah. ii. 14. It. 2d fem. כְּסֹתוֹתֶיכֶנָה your pillows. Of the 2d. masc. תְּגִמּוּלוֹהִי his benefits, Ps. cxvi. 12. Of the Chaldaic form: אֲלִיָּתָהֶם their posts. 3d fem. אֲתִיקוֹהָ its galleries; גּוֹיָתֵיהֶנָּה their bodies, Ezek. i. 11, &c.

21. The affix כֶּם of the 2d pers. plur. masc. is, in one instance, preceded by (.) ;* as, תַּפְּזוּזוֹתֵיכֶם your dispersions, Jer. xxv. 34. These may all perhaps be errors of transcription.

22. The ׳, which precedes the affixed pronouns in the plural numbers of nouns, is frequently dropped : as, תִּרְכָּהּ for תִּרְכֵּיהָ thy ways, &c. But, many of these anomalies will come under the rules detailed in Art. 139. 7, and will, therefore, be rather apparent than real ; the rest perhaps are the mere mistakes of the copyists.

N. B. The demonstrative and other separable pronouns will be given when we come to treat on the particles.

On the Use, Signification, and Forms of Words generally.

146. Words are nothing more than sounds, simple or compounded, which have been adopted in order to represent the ideas conceived in the mind of one person to that of another. Whether any of these were first imparted to man by the Creator, or whether he had only the powers given sufficient for appropriating such sounds for the purposes of life, it is impossible now to say : nor is it very important ; for, in either case, their adoption will be traced to the appointment of the Deity, either mediately, or immediately. From what is revealed in the Scriptures, however, I am inclined to believe, that it was an immediate appointment, as far at least as the necessities of society at first went ; leaving to his ingenuity the further extension and cultivation of this power, as the increasing wants or refinements of life might suggest. If then the boon was immediate, nothing can be more probable, than that the use of words would be regulated by some analogy ; which, it is likely, would also have been the case, had unassisted reason been left to shift for itself. In any case, therefore, we might expect to find that some analogy had been resorted to in the structure of language, whether we originally possessed the skeleton of it as given by inspiration, or, as made by man for his own use. Things must have had names; and these must have been such, as would generally be allowed and understood, whether we can now see their suitableness or not. Actions and events must likewise have had names; and, whether we can now see the reason why certain words or sorts of words have been employed for these purposes, or not, it must be next to certain, that there once was an immediate cause both for their adoption and forms.

2. If then this be the true state of the case, it may be worth while to consider, in the next place, how the primitive significations of words would, in process of time, be varied in order to meet the necessities which would daily arise. Let us first take the word הָלַךְ walking, going, proceeding. This, we can suppose, was the name given to that sort of action, by which a person removes himself from one place to another. If then we add another word, or words, the whole may now mean, proceeding towards, either as a friend or an enemy:—from, with, &c. with the additional notions of co-operation, resistance, haste, delay, or the like. This action might, in the next place, be applied to the mind, and then signify its progress, improvement, general conduct, conversation, &c. and, in such acceptations is this word used. Hence Enoch is said to have walked with God, וַתֵּלֶךְ חֲנוּךְ אֶת-הָאֱלֹהִים, Gen. v. 22. Again, it may be applied to any thing in the sense of progress, and this may be understood to intimate either increase or diminution: as, וַיֵּלֶךְ הַלֹּךְ וַיִּגְדַּל, Gen. xxvi. 13. So, he proceeded, proceeding and becoming great, i. e. gradually. And, Ib. viii. 3, &c. וַיָּשְׁבוּ הַמַּיִם הַלֹּךְ וַיָּשׁוּב וַיַּחְסְרוּ . . . . . and the waters returned . . . . . proceeding and returning, so they decrease, &c. And, accordingly, this word is often used in the sense of proceeding gradually.\* Again, let us take the word  $\text{עָלָה}$  rising, mounting up, &c. This with certain adjuncts may signify, to become superior to, or to get the upper hand of, another; to conquer him, to humble him; also to excel in state, dignity, power, &c.: the being conversant upon, or about, any thing: being near a place or thing, before it, or, as we say in English, over against it: also, over and above, implying excess; being incumbent upon, as a duty, &c. all of which might arise out of the primitive word, by considering it either in its proximate or remote bearings: and such are the acceptations, in which, in one form or other, it is actually found.

3. If then we can conceive how words would thus be made to vary from their primitive significations, in consequence of their different bearings, as just noticed, we shall find no difficulty in seeing, how the cause, beginning, continuation, completion, consequence, &c. of any action may be likewise intimated by such words, as also the ability, duty, right, will, endeavour, custom, occasion, permission, or notification, &c. which may also be intimated or implied by their various forms; and this in their more remote significations, according to the Grammarians and Commentators,† has actually taken place in many instances in the Hebrew; as, indeed, it has, in a greater or less degree, in all languages; but which is nothing more than what the necessity of the case absolutely requires.

4. The law or necessity by which this variety has been brought about, has, for the sake of convenience, been termed Tropology, and this, for the same reason, has been divided into Metonymy, Irony, Metaphor, and Synecdoche. METONYMY respects cause and effect; subject and adjunct: IRONY, contrariety: METAPHOR, comparison: SYNECDOCHE, distribution, as to the whole with reference to its parts, the genus to its species, the material to the thing composed out of it, &c. For a full account of which the reader is referred to the second volume of the Philologia Sacra of Glassius, or the work of Storr, books which every student of the Hebrew Language ought to have.

5. Let it be remembered, however, we are not to recur to these figures for the purpose of reconciling any passage of Scripture with our own preconceived notions. It must appear clearly from the context, considered in conjunction with the character of the writer we may be consulting, whether such figure has really been used or not, otherwise we shall make the sacred writers occasionally to talk like madmen: and shall, perhaps, extract from the same writer, nay the very same passage, the most incongruous and discordant notions.

6. When, therefore, we have to ascertain the meaning of any given word, we must carefully consider, whether the primitive or some derived signification is to be taken. When the literal acceptance of such word will answer our purpose, the work is done, and we need proceed no further: but, when this is not the case, we must try in what way our principles will help us: e. g. We find in Job ii. 9, the following passage, which has given considerable trouble to the Translators and Commentators: בְּרַךְ אֱלֹהִים וּמָת, which in our authorised version is, "Curse God and die." The word, about which the principal difficulty has here arisen, is בְּרַךְ. The best explanation I can give is this : בָּרַךְ used as a verb seems first to have been applied to camels kneeling down to receive their burdens.* Hence, perhaps, arose the idea of submission in kneeling, when receiving something from a superior: and hence also that of receiving a blessing; and, actively, giving or bestowing one: also, to ask or receive a blessing on departing, &c. To this קָלָלָה lightness, is opposed as implying a curse, Gen. xxvii. 12, &c. In the next place, as the imposing of a burden seems to be connected with the primitive meaning of this word, this signification may also be taken in the sense of oppression or affliction;† and, actively, treating or considering another as the author of it; which, I believe, is the force of the word in this place. Storr (p. 37—8.) has taken it in the sense of bidding farewell, and hence of forsaking and giving up. Parkhurst, with some of his school, has taken it as an irony here, which is hardly necessary.—What has now been said is intended to refer to un-augmented words generally. On the augmented ones we shall have something to offer hereafter.

7. With reference to the forms of Hebrew words, the student will readily perceive, that if the root in its simplest form, which is constant, will always represent a certain class of words; then, upon any augmentation being made, either in its vowels or consonants, or both, other forms will be produced, which may severally represent words of other classes, each having meanings, or shades of meaning, peculiar to themselves: and, such is actually the case.

8. If then this be the fact, we can adopt certain words representing the various forms found to prevail; and these we can use, like the formulæ in Algebra, to designate whole classes of others having the same forms. Thus, פִּקֵּץ, may be put for any word, having the vowel Páthakh only, between its first and second radical letters. In like manner פִּקֵּץ, פִּקֵּץ, פִּקֵּץ, may represent any others having a Khólém, Tzēréd, or Khírík, in the same place, respectively; and these are the forms of primitive nouns, generally having an abstract signification.* In the next

* This is also the case with the Arabic words of these forms: as, <sup>sc</sup>فهم comprehension, <sup>sc</sup>علم knowledge, <sup>sc</sup>حسن beauty; and where the adscititious s tanwín may be considered as equivalent to our Hebrew euphonic Segol. We must carefully bear in mind, however, that, although words of this form will generally be abstract in sense, they will not necessarily always have an active signification. For example, <sup>sc</sup>ضرب <sup>sc</sup>زيد will mean Zaid's striking, i. e. either the striking which he receives, or gives, passively or actively, objectively or subjectively, as the context may require. In such instances, the abstract noun place, פִּקְדָּה, פִּקְדָּה, פִּקְדָּה, פִּקְדָּה, &c., or, with one or other of the letters הַאֲמִנְתִּי, as, מִפְּקֵדָה, מִפְּקֵדָה, &c., may represent other classes of words, and may each be severally put down as a formulæ for such class of words. And, as the roots of words in Hebrew always consist of three letters, the servile letters or vowels being constant, these formulæ can always be applied.

<sup>sc</sup>ضرب striking, may be considered as equivalent to a passive or active participle, respectively; and then the abstract may be said to occupy the place of a concrete noun: as, in Gen. xxxi. 42, we have יִצְחָק יִפְחָד the fear of Isaac, i. e. the object of Isaac's fear, his God, which in the parallel passage is, אֱלֹהֵי אֲבִי my Father's God. So also again in ver. 53, Ib., where it is similarly explained. In Rom. ii. 26, iii. 30, the Gentiles are, in like manner, termed ἀροβυστία, and the Jews περιτομή, i. e. uncircumcised, and circumcised, respectively. These considerations will occasionally affect the verbs, so that the active form will have a passive sense and vice versá, of which examples will be given hereafter. See Viger on the Greek Idioms, Cap. v. § i. Ed. 1813. Hence the various acceptations of δικαιοσύνη in the New Testament. See also Storr, p. 201, &c.

9. In the Rabbinic grammars, dictionaries, and commentaries, the word פֶּעַל, with its variations, is taken as the common measure of other words; but, as great inconvenience arises from the use of this word, on account of the medial ע, we have, with Schröderus and others, taken פִּקְדָּה, not that it is entirely unexceptionable, there being one of the בגדכפת letters, both as its initial and final letter, but because it is sufficiently easy of application for our purpose.

147. It will appear from what has been said (Artt. 75. 76. 77. &c.) that primitive nouns originally consisting of three radical letters, may frequently be found with two only; and there are cases to be noticed hereafter, in which we have but one. Making these allowances, therefore, the forms of all nouns will be either Simple, Augmented, or Compounded.

2. The simple forms, as already noticed (Art. 146. 8.) will consist of the radical letters (supposing none of them to have been dropped as just mentioned) accompanied by one or two vowels.

3. The augmented forms of nouns will exhibit one or other of the simple forms, augmented either by the reduplication of its middle radical letter by Dāgēsh, or by the addition of one or more of the letters found in the word הַאֲמִנְתִּי, or by both taken together.

4. Compounded words are those which are formed by the combination of one or more words, simple or augmented, written together as one, contracted however or abridged as the rules may require.

5. The simple forms may be divided into two classes, the first of which may, from their peculiarities, be termed Segolate: the second, Primitive nouns, only.

6 By Segolate nouns is meant, nouns which, in addition to their primitive vowel, generally introduce an additional (◌) for the sake of Euphony (Art. 108.). In the other class of primitive nouns this does not take place.

7. We shall first consider the different sorts of Segolate nouns, and then proceed to the others, whether simple, augmented, or compounded; giving, at the same time, the forms which they severally assume in forming the plural number—when in the state of construction, whether singular or plural,—and when having any of the pronouns attached to them.

148. The forms of the primitive Segolate nouns are the following: viz. I. פִּקֵּד, the alternate form of which is, פִּקְדָּה or פִּקְדָּה: II. פִּקְדָּה, alt. פִּקְדָּה: III. פִּקְדָּה, alt. פִּקְדָּה*: IV. פִּקְדָּה, alt. פִּקְדָּה: V. פִּקְדָּה, alt. פִּקְדָּה; which are generally abstract in signification; and, in the leading form, have the accent on the penultimate (Art. 117. 1.).

2. Now, as the pronunciation of the leading forms of these words would, in many cases, be exceedingly difficult, an additional vowel, (◌) Sēgól, for the most part, is introduced for the purpose of obviating that difficulty (Art. 108.): e. g. instead of saying פִּקְדָּה, (where it would scarcely be possible to enounce the ד) by introducing

* As the vowels (◌) and (◌), (◌) and (◌), may here be considered, respectively, as identical, the number of the forms will be reduced to four: viz. I. פִּקְדָּה, alt. פִּקְדָּה: II. פִּקְדָּה, פִּקְדָּה: III. פִּקְדָּה, פִּקְדָּה: IV. פִּקְדָּה, פִּקְדָּה. See also Hoffmann's Syr. Gram., p. 239, &c., Halle, 1827.

(◌) we shall have פֶּקֶד : and, in order to avoid the concurrence of two dissimilar vowels, the former will also become (◌), and then we shall have פֶּקֶד instead of פֶּקֶד. Hence, we have מֶלֶךְ for מֶלֶךְ a king; סֵפֶר for סֵפֶר or סֵפֶר a book; and so of the rest. In some cases, however, where no difficulty of pronunciation would arise, the primitive form is retained: as, גֵּיאַ a valley; חַטָּא sin; נָרַד nard; קִשְׁטַ justice, which also occurs with (◌): as, קִשְׁט, Ps. lx. 6, and again in the alternate form קִשְׁט, Dan. ii. 47, iv. 34.

3. In all cases, in which this class of words will, by the accident of Grammar, receive any asyllabic augment, no necessity will exist for this Euphonic vowel, and then, either the primitive or the alternate form of the word will be used: as, מֶלְכּוֹ his king; מְלָכֵי kings (in construction); and, מְלָכִים (from the alternate form מֶלֶךְ) kings, when not in the state of construction. So also in the feminine form, מְלַכָּה a queen, which in the plural number will take the alternate form מְלָכוֹת, from מֶלֶךְ, as before. The (-) becomes (◌) Kāmets, by Artt. 97. 136. So also שֶׁבֶטּוֹ his shoulder, from שֵׁבֶט shoulder; קְדוּשָׁתוֹ his holiness, from קָדוֹשׁ. The accent being removed, causes the first vowel to become imperfect (Art. 33, &c.)

4. As we have already laid down the rules relating to the formation of the feminine gender of nouns (Art. 135.), of the dual and plural number (Artt. 138, 139, &c.), to the state of construction (Art. 143.), and to the inseparable pronouns as affecting the forms of the nouns (Art. 145. 5.), it is now our intention to shew in each form, as far as it may be necessary, in what way the vowels are affected by these circumstances. We have chosen this method of detailing what has usually been termed the mutationes punctorum, because it appears to be the only one likely to be of any service to the Student. In the grammars of Buxtorf and others of his school, it was customary to give a considerable number of rules on this subject with examples; and then to leave the Student to make his way as well as he could. But, as the analogy of the syllabication and of the forms of words are the only sure guides, little use could be made of those rules, until the Learner had become familiar with these; and, when this was done, the rules themselves were almost useless. In the more elaborate grammars of modern Germany, the analogy is first taught, and then the nouns are divided into a certain number of declensions. This, however, seems to be labour thrown away; for, when the Student is once made acquainted with the general laws of syllabication, and the forms of words, a further classification of these forms must rather tend to confuse than to instruct him. But, supposing this not to be the case, still the labour is multiplied; and, as far as I can see, for no useful purpose.

I have been agreeably surprised to find, upon turning over the Rabbinic grammars of D. Kimkhi and some of those who succeeded him, that under the forms of the nouns, the changes of the vowel-points are in all cases given; which, indeed, had appeared to me the most rational way of proceeding. In conformity with this principle then, it is my intention to proceed to the classification of the nouns, beginning with those termed Segolate, giving at once all that appears to be necessary for the information of the Student, and adding such notes on the different forms as the circumstances of each case may seem to require. Having already given a classification of the forms of the Segolate nouns, we shall now proceed to exemplify them.

On the First Species of Segolate Nouns of the forms פִּקְדָּה or פִּקְדָּה.

FORMS.	EXAMPLES.	STATE OF CONSTRUCTION.
		Fem. Gen.	Masc.	Fem.
Primitive. Usual Do.
פִּקְדָּה . פִּקְדָּה	מֶלֶךְ a king.	מַלְכָּה a queen.	מֶלֶךְ	מַלְכָּת
or Alternate Form,
פִּקְדָּה פִּקְדָּה	גִּבְרָה a man (Chald. Syr.)	—	גִּבְרָה	none.
פִּקְדָּה פִּקְדָּה	כְּתָב a writing.	—	כְּתָב	none.

5. The Absolute masculine plurals (Art. 139. 4.) of all Segolate nouns, except those only which have (ו) Khōlēm for one of their vowels, take the form of פִּקְדָּיִם; feminines take that of פִּקְדָּוֹת. In the first case, therefore, we shall have מְלָכִים, and in the feminine מְלָכוֹת, from the alternate forms (Art. 148. 1.). And, so of all the others, whether of the masculine or feminine gender, with the above exception. The plural form for construction with other nouns, or with any of the inseparable pronouns, will follow the primitive form of these words (Ib. 3.). In the examples given above, we shall have מְלָכֵי, and מְלָכוֹת, for the plural forms of construction. But, כְּתָב has כְּתָבֵי, and גִּבְרָה does not occur in that situation. It should be observed, however, that the Chaldaic and Syriac forms פִּקְדָּה or פִּקְדָּה are to be referred sometimes to one class and sometimes to another, of the Segolate nouns: thus, כְּתָב is manifestly of the class פִּקְדָּה, the plural in construction being כְּתָבֵי; but כֶּסֶף belongs to פִּקְדָּה, the plural of construction, no less than the forms found with the pronouns being כֶּסֶף: as, כֶּסֶפוֹ his silver; כֶּסֶפֵיהֶם their pieces of silver.

6. The regular forms for the affixed pronouns singular and plural of the first form, are, מְלָכֵי, מְלָכָה, מְלָכוֹ, מְלָכֵיכֶם, מְלָכֵינוּ, מְלָכֵיהֶם, and, by analogy, though not occurring in the text, מְלָכֵיךָ, &c. So that the plural of construction,—that used in connection with the pronouns of the second and third persons masculine and feminine plural, will follow the primitive forms of these nouns; in all the other cases, they will follow the alternate form, פִּקֹּד, or פִּקְדָּן, due regard being had to the laws of syllabication.

7. It should be remembered, that in every case in which a guttural letter is the second or third of such word, the accompanying or preceding vowel may be (-); as, זַרְעַן an arm (Art. 108.). For a list of nouns of this form, see the “Arcanum Formarum” of Simonis, p. 307, &c.

8. It should also be observed, that some Segolate nouns are, in their original forms, of the feminine gender (Art. 135. 5.): and that, generally, words need not receive the termination פִּתּוּ, as distinctive of that gender, except such as relate to sex.

9. A considerable number of defective words may be referred to the Segolates, of which the following belong to this class in particular: מוֹתָּ death (prim. מוֹתָּ, Art. 108.), which, in construction, or with the pronouns, will take the form מוֹתָּ (Art. 143. 6.): as, מוֹתָּ הַיֶּלֶד the death of the child, Gen. xxi. 16. So מוֹתָּהּ, מוֹתָּהּ, מוֹתָּם, &c., and in the plural number מוֹתָּיו, &c.; עוֹלָּ iniquity, fem. עוֹלָּהּ id. and contr. עוֹלָּהּ; דּוֹרָּ an age, generation (prim.

11. Of Nouns doubling the last radical letter: גַּן a garden, prim. גַּנָּן, by (Art. 77.) fem. גַּנָּהּ id. (Ib.). And, with the pronouns, גַּנָּי, גַּנָּו, &c. plur. abs. גַּנָּים for גַּנָּנִים, and fem. גַּנָּוֹת for גַּנָּנֹת, in order perhaps to avoid the too frequent recurrence of the same sound. The form of construction taken by the feminine is גַּנָּהּ, instead of גַּנָּתָּ, probably for the sake of variety. So פִּרָּ pure (prim. פִּרָּ Arab. <sup>پري</sup> پري): fem. פִּרָּהּ, for פִּרָּהּ (Art. 109.) purity. In the plur of constr. masc. פִּרָּי for פִּרָּי.

12. With a medial ו and final ס:—שׂוּסָ, prim. form, and, by apocope, שׂוּ (Art. 74.) vanity; fem. שׂוּסָה destruction. So with י, אָ, יָ, prim. form, a valley. In constr. אָיָ, and, by apocope, יָ, and in construction, יָ; pl. גְּאֵיֹת, and with the light affixes, תְּיֵאֵוֹתֶיךָ thy vallies.

13. With a final ו or י:—עֶד (prim. עֶדוּן) eternity; so אָחַו for אָחַוּ (Art. 87. 2.) a bulrush; שָׂחַו swimming.

14. With a medial כ:—אָף for אָפָה (Art. 76.) the nose, anger; with the pronouns, אָפֹו, אָפָה, אָפֵי, pl. אָפֵי, אָפֵי, &c.; and in constr. אָפֵי. The absolute form of the plural does not occur: but, in the dual we have אָפֵים, which would have the same form, in construction, and with the pronouns, with those given above.

For further examples of this sort, the Student is referred to the "Arcanum Formarum" of Simonis, sectio v. throughout.

149. Of the Second Species of Segolate Nouns.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.	IN CONSTRUCTION.
Prim.	Usual Do.		Masc.	Fem.
בְּקָד	בְּקָד	חֶלֶד an age.	חֶבְרָה society.	חֶבְרַת
Alternate form.
בְּקָד	בְּקָד	שֶׁכֶם a shoulder.	—	שֶׁכֶם —

Nouns of this species occur but rarely; and it is doubtful whether the last of these does not more properly belong to the primitive form בְּקָד, as we have it with the pronouns שֶׁכְּמִי, שֶׁכְּמָה, &c. But, as a proper name (as some think) with the local הַ־ we have שֶׁכְּמָה towards Shechem, Hos. vi. 9.

In the first example, we have חֶלְדֵי, &c., with the pronouns.

150. Of the Third Species.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.	IN CONSTRUCTION.
Primitive.	Usual Do.		Fem.	Masc. Fem.
בְּקָד	בְּקָד & בְּקָד	גֶּרֶד nard.	—	גֶּרֶד —
		חֶלֶד a portion.	חֶלְקָה id.	חֶלְקַת
בְּקָד	בְּקָד	חֶבֶל a vanity.	חֶבְרָה kin.	חֶבְרַת

The absolute form of the plural is here, as before,

פְּקָדִים masc. and פְּקָדוֹת fem. : as, חֵלְקִים, but חֵלְקוֹת does not occur. So חֵבְלִים pains; הַבֵּל vanity, הַבְּלִים vanities, and so of others. The pronouns are affixed thus : חֵלְקוֹ his portion; חֵלְקִי my portion; חֵלְקֵיהֶם their portion. So fem. חֲזָקָה, חֵלְקָתִי, חֵלְקָתְּם, &c. חֵבְלֵי pl. in constr. is חֵבְלֵי : of חֵבְלֵי, חֵבְלֵי, &c.

חֲטָא sin, is with the pronouns חֲטָאוֹ, חֲטָאֵם, &c. In the plur. abs. חֲטָאִים, constr. חֲטָאֵי : with the pronouns, חֲטָאֵינוּ, חֲטָאֵיכֶם, &c., and so on.

2. The nouns of this species are numerous. The following are a few examples : חֶפֶץ will, delight; עֵדוֹ pleasure, also the proper name of a place; חֲשָׁבֶה a girdle; חֵלֶב fat. But שֶׁבֶט a rod; מִצְחָה the forehead; שֵׁנָה understanding, acuteness, with some others, take the pronouns, &c. after the form חֶפְצִי : as, שֶׁבֶטֹו his rod; מִצְחָו his forehead; שֵׁנָו his understanding. From עֵקֶב, which also occurs of the form עֵקֶב, we have עֵקֶבֶיךָ thy vestiges, Jer. xiii. 22; and, in construction in the feminine gender עֵקֶבֶת : but these may, perhaps, be derived from different primitives.

3. The following are a few of the defective nouns, which seem to belong to this species : גֵּז a fleece; (prim. גִּזָּה Art. 77.), fem. גִּזָּה for גִּזָּה, constr. גִּזָּת, masc., in constr. גִּזָּי cuttings; גִּרָה the cud (prim. גִּרָה); חֶפֶץ the palate (prim. חֶפֶץ, Art. 76.), with the pronouns חֶפְצִי, חֶפְצֵי, חֶפְצֵם, &c. For further examples, see the "Arcanum Formarum," p. 326, &c.

4. Chaldaic and Syriac words often occur of the form פֶּקֶד : as פֶּסֶף, Heb. form כֶּסֶף silver; מִלְּוָה counsel. So, in Hebrew, שִׁאֵת instead of שִׁאֵת elevation. See the "Arcanum Formarum," pp. 309, 310.

Of the Fourth Species of Segolate Nouns.

151. This, according to our arrangement, will comprehend all primitive nouns of the forms פֶּקֶד, and פֶּקֶד, but of the latter no examples occur.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.	IN CONSTRUCTION.
Primitive.	Usual.		Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
פֶּקֶד	פֶּקֶד	כֶּבֶשׂ a lamb.	כֶּבֶשָׁה	כֶּבֶשׂ	כֶּבֶשֶׁת
		יָתֵר excellence.	יָתֵרָה	יָתֵר	יָתֵרָת

2. Here, as before, the plurals, &c., are regularly formed : as, pl. abs. masc. פְּבֻשִׁים, fem. פְּבֻשֹׁת, the pl. masc. of construction does not occur in this example: but, for the fem. we have בְּבֻשָׁת. The only instance in which this word occurs with the pronoun is Job xxxi. 20, פְּבֻשִׁי. So גִּדְרָא a vow; צְדָקָה justice, righteousness; לְקַח learning; בְּטַח confidence; to which many more may be added. Of the Defective nouns, עִיר (עִירָה) a city, pl. עָרִים for עִירָיִם (Art. 75.); פִּי the mouth (prim. פִּיהָ, the latter ה being dropped, Art. 74, and the first changed to י, Art. 80.). So, with the pronouns: פִּי for פִּיִּי (Art. 75.) my mouth; פִּיךָ thy mouth; פִּיו his mouth, &c.: and, in the fem. plur. פִּיּוֹת mouths, and masc. פִּיִּים. The Learner should be informed, however, that it is often extremely difficult to say, to which of the forms such words as these belong; and, as it is of no very great importance to which they are attached, we shall on every occasion offer but a very few.

Of the Fifth Species.

152. These have the primitive forms פְּקַד, and פְּקָד, and constitute a considerable class of Nouns in the Hebrew Language.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.	IN CONSTRUCTION.
Primitive.	Usual Do.		Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
פְּקַד	פְּקָד	קֹדֶשׁ holiness.	אֲכָלָה meat.	קֹדֶשׁ	—
Alternate form.	פְּקָד	קִשְׁט truth.	בָּאֵשׁ stink.	בָּאֵשׁ	—

2. Of this last form, perhaps, no other word occurs, unless the Infinitives of the form פְּקַד are to be added: these, however, upon receiving one or other of the pronouns, assume the same form with the first, but are never found in the plural number.

3. The masculine plural of the first of these forms is regularly of the form פְּקָדִים: as, קֹדֶשִׁים; the substitute for Shévá preserving the original vowel of the word. In the plural of construction we have קֹדֶשָׁי; and with the pronouns singular and plural, קֹדֶשׁוֹ, קֹדֶשָׁי, &c.; pl. קֹדֶשָׁיו, קֹדֶשֵׁיכֶם, קֹדֶשֵׁיהֶם, &c., all regularly formed. In the word ראש (for ראש), we have in the plural ראשים and ראשי, for ראשים and ראשי, by Art. 87. 5, א being preserved to avoid ambiguity; and with the pronouns ראשי (for ראשי), on account of the quiescence of א in the preceding vowel (Art. id.), ראשכם, ראשך, &c. The same form prevails in the plural with the pronouns: as, ראשי, ראשיכם, &c. In some instances, קדש is thought to take the same plural form: as, קדשים, קדשי, &c., for קדשים, &c. But in these cases, the primitive may have been of a different form: if not, this word is occasionally anomalous or erroneously written. So, שרש a root, שרשים, שרשיו, &c.; but in construction שרשי: גרן a threshing floor, fem. makes its abs. pl. גרנות, for גרנות, by a similar anomaly: and, in the pl. of construction we have also גרנות. From גדל we have גדלו his greatness; from קמצו, קמץ his handful, by adopting the obliquely corresponding vowel.

4. When the middle letter happens to be a guttural, the euphonic (◌◌) becomes (◌◌) (Art. 108.): as, הַאֵר form, בְּהֵק a pustule, &c., while in some instances the (◌◌) remains: as, אֹהֶל a tent; בְּהוֹ the thumb.

5. In some cases Khōlēm remains in the abs. pl. as, אֹהֶלִים; as also in those which have not the grave pronominal affixes: as, אֹהֶלֶיךָ, אֹהֶלֶי; but, in construction and with those affixes, the first vowel is Kāméts Khātúph: as, אֹהֶלֶיךָ ōhōlé, אֹהֶלֶיכֶם, &c. which are regular. D. Kimkhi takes it to be Kāméts.*

6. בְּהוֹ the thumb, fem. forms the plural בְּהוֹת, but does not occur with any of the pronouns. In the same manner are formed the plurals of נְבוֹהָ splendour, and נִבְחָ front, presence : as, נְבוֹהוֹת and נִבְחוֹת; but these, according to D. Kimkhi, belong to some other form of the singular (perhaps נְבוֹהָהּ, נִבְחוֹן, &c.); as, נִבְחָה Amos iii. 10.

7. A few peculiarities prevail in the word בְּאֵשׁ ill savour, which deserve notice. Its original form seems to be בְּאֵשׁ; but, with the pronouns it is written בְּאֵשׁוֹ, בְּאֵשָׁם, &c. in which the o is drawn back (Art. 87. 5.). In the time of Kimkhi, however, it was irregularly written בְּאֵשׁוֹ, בְּאֵשָׁם, with a quiescent א, which inclined him to think that the singular form must have been בְּאֵשׁ.

8. In those cases, in which the last letter is a guttural, the sound of o is lost : as, רֶמַח a spear, pl. רִמְחִים; but, with a pronoun it returns : as, רִמְחֵיהֶם their spears; אֵרֶת a way, makes אֶרְחוֹת pl. abs., but in construction אֶרְחוֹת.

9. Of the defective nouns, we have תְּהוֹי for תְּהוֹי emptiness (Art. 87. 2.); בְּהוֹי for בְּהוֹי, waste; מְרָה for מְרָה fem. bitterness; to which many others may be added.

10. These nouns are regularly abstracts in signification (Art. 146. 8.): and, in many instances, where they appear not to be so, some translated sense takes its place : as, מְלָךְ a king, which originally meant possession, dominion, or the like, but which, in process of time, seems to have lost its primitive force. Perhaps it still retains that sense in Proverbs xiv. 28.

בְּרַב־עַם הַדִּרְת־מְלָךְ וּבְאַפְס־לְאֵם מְחַתַּת רְזוֹן :

“ In the multitude of people is the glory of rule ;

But in the diminution of a nation is the stroke of poverty.”

In this case מְלָךְ is opposed to רְזוֹן, which seems to me to prove, that rule or dominion is the sense in which it must be taken. Some indeed have proposed to read רִזֵן prince, at the end of the second hemistich, but this will be unnecessary when we restore מְלָךְ to its primitive signification. In like manner the word سُلْطَانٌ Sultān, which means power, rule, or the like, has been applied to the Emperor of Constantinople; and in our own language we use Justice, Magistrate, Lordship, and many similar expressions, which were originally abstract nouns. See also Hosea x. 15.

On the Forms of the Second Class of Primitive Nouns, which are not Segolate.

153. Having laid down the different forms and inflections of the primitive nouns which are termed Segolate, we now come to others which are also primitive, but which have not the peculiarity of punctuation found to prevail in them; and which, moreover, have the tone-accent on the last syllable: and as it will be unnecessary, to give the forms of the plurals in all cases—of the noun when in the state of construction, or when in connection with the several pronouns; we shall only point out the instances in which any difficulty may arise, either from a vowel being immutable, or any other cause, which will be all the Learner can want. The following are the forms peculiar to this species of nouns: viz. I. פִּקֵּד : II. פִּקֵּדָה : III. פִּקְדָּה : IV. פִּקְדָּה : V. פִּקְדָּה : VI. פִּקְדָּה : VII. פִּקְדָּה : VIII. פִּקְדָּה : IX. פִּקְדָּה : X. פִּקְדָּה : XI. פִּקְדָּה.* The feminine forms will be given in their places.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.
Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
I. פִּקֵּד	פִּקְדָּה	יֶקֶר value.	יֶקֶרָה id.
II. פִּקְדָּה	פִּקְדָּה or, פִּקְדָּת	דְּבַר a word.	צְדָקָה righteousness. עֲתָרָה abundance.

* If, however, we consider the forms, פִּקְדָּה and פִּקְדָּה, פִּקְדָּה and פִּקְדָּה, פִּקְדָּה and פִּקְדָּה, פִּקְדָּה and פִּקְדָּה, פִּקְדָּה and פִּקְדָּה, respectively, identical, the number of the forms will be reduced to six.

2. As the last example exhibits the feminine form generally used in construction, nothing further need be said about it. In the first two, we have no vowel which can be said to be immutable. The plurals therefore and pronouns will take those forms, which a regard to the vowels and accents would suggest as proper: and the rule seems to be, that in every case, the vowel farthest removed from the accent will be rejected; as, דָּבָר, in constr. דְּבַר (Art. 143. 3.) with the pronouns דְּבָרִי, דְּבָרְךָ, &c. pl. abs. דְּבָרִים, in constr. דְּבָרַי (for דְּבָרֵי, Art. 106. 1.): with pron. דְּבָרֵיהֶם, דְּבָרֵיכֶם, &c. with an asyllabic pron. דְּבָרֵי, דְּבָרֶיהָ, &c. throughout. The same will hold good in all similar forms, in which the vowels are by analogy mutable.

3. In some instances the first (ר) is immutable, but in these it is believed to occupy the place of א: as פָּרָשׁ a horseman; Arab. فَارِس; pl. פָּרָשִׁים.

4. Nouns of these forms are generally Concrete, and will therefore designate substances: as, אָדָם a man; בָּרָד hail; בָּשָׂר flesh: epithets; as, חָכָם a wise man; רָשָׁע a wicked man.* In some cases they seem to be abstract: as, בָּכָה weeping; זָעָקָה crying out, &c.; but this may take place by the operation of a metonymy, just as the contrary effect sometimes takes place in the Segolates (Art. 152. 10.).

* Whether the Hebrews ever considered words of this kind as adjectives, as we do, I very much doubt. But, whatever may be said on this subject, it is much more convenient, in considering the structure of this language, to treat them as epithets, including a substantive with their attributive properties, as in the English word fool, &c. See the Syntax.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.
Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
III. פָּקֵד	פְּקִידָה or פְּקִידָת	גְּדֵר a fence.	גְּדֵרָה or גְּדֵרָת id.
		גָּזַל stolen.	גְּזֵלָה id.
IV. פָּקֵד	פְּקִידָה or פְּקִידָת	יָלַל howling.	אֲפֵלָה darkness.
			עֵצְלָת idleness.
	once פְּקִידוֹת		כְּבִידוֹת heaviness.

5. In these forms, which are very nearly related to each other, the second vowel is generally immutable, the first not so: as, גְּדֵרוֹ his fence; גְּדֵרֶיךָ thy (fem.) fences; גְּדֵרֶיהָ her fences; pl. fem. גְּדֵרוֹת fences. This being known, the vowels proper for construction, &c., are also known. In a few instances we have a י inserted: as, זְעִיר littleness; שְׁלֵוֹ tranquillity; בְּלִיטָה escape, which seems to account for the attendant vowel's being immutable; and also to suggest, that some affinity exists between this and the next form.

6. The signification peculiar to these forms, is that of habit, custom, passion, whence they have by some been termed participles. Those of the third are found in words signifying feeling, perception, or the like, and are often used as roots of verbs having this sense: as, חָפֵץ willing; שִׂמְחָה rejoicing, &c.

V. פָּקִיד	פְּקִידָה	נְבִיא a prophet.	נְשִׂיקָה a kiss.
VI. פָּקִיד	id.	נְסִיף a libation.	עֲלִילָה an action.
VII. פָּקִיד	פְּקִידָה	לָמוּד learned.	לְמוּדָה id.
VIII. פָּקִיד	id.	גְּדִיד boasting.	גְּבוּאָה prediction.

7. In all these cases the י and ו inserted are immutable, the other vowel is not: the plurals, &c. are, therefore, formed accordingly. In some instances the ו or י will be omitted, and their places supplied by (·) or (·) respectively; in all which these vowels will remain immutable as before, for the purpose of preserving the original form of the word: as, חַשְׁכָּה masc. חַשְׁכָּה fem. darkness. So עֲצָה fem. for יְעֲצָה advice (Art. 76.); and בְּקָרָה a visitation, being visited, &c.

8. Forms V. and VI. are very nearly allied to the foregoing both in form and signification; and from these, the forms VII. and VIII. scarcely present a shade of difference.* Simonis indeed makes a difference, but it is perhaps only an imaginary one. To the two last he ascribes the sense of past time, as if the action, of which this form is usually said to present the object, took place at some distant period; but, innumerable instances may be pointed out, in which it has a present or a future signification according to the context. The truth seems to be, that each of them implies habit, custom, &c., of such action, &c., as the root may signify; but, that in some roots, the one form is found to prevail, in others, the other.

X. בְּקֹרָה	בְּקֹרָה	גָּדוֹל great.	גָּדוֹלָה id.

once	בְּקֹרָת		צְלָחִית a sort of dish.

* So אֶסְקֵר and אֶסְקֵר bound, a captive; בְּחֵיר and בְּחֵיר chosen; יְלִיד and יְלִיד born, a son; מְשִׁיחַ and מְשִׁיחַ anointed Messiah: and in a great number of cases, in which the textual reading has the one form, the marginal reading will have the other.

9. In these forms the ḥ Khōlēm only is immutable. We shall have therefore in the plural, &c. פּוֹקְדִים masc. פּוֹקְדוֹת fem. and גְּדוֹלִים masc. גְּדוֹלוֹת fem., which will also be the forms proper for the state of construction, and for the pronominal affixes.

10. Of these forms a few nouns will be found abstract in signification. פּוֹקֵד, with its feminine, is generally used as an agent. Sometimes the feminine occurs as, פּוֹרְיָה, fructifera: (Art. 136. 5.).

11. It may be taken as a general rule, that whenever a ו or י, or one of their equivalents (ֹ) or (ֶ), happens to be found in one of this class of primitive words, that vowel will remain unchanged under all circumstances. The reason is: these vowels principally constitute these forms.

LECTURE VII.

OF THE AUGMENTED HEBREW NOUNS.

154. Having considered the Primitive nouns of both kinds, we now proceed to the Augmented ones, which may be classed under four heads. I. Those found to double any letter or syllable, which hence may be termed reduplicated. II. Those which are augmented by one or more of the letters contained in the technical word הֶאֱמַנְתִּי I have believed, reduplicating, or not, at the same time, any of their letters or syllables. III. Nouns compounded of two or more others, each of which may be otherwise augmented, or not: and, IV. Foreign words.

2. It is evident that whenever any addition is made to a word, some modification will be made in its sense. The great difficulty consists, however, in determining the law by which this process of augmentation is carried on, and thence ascertaining, what is the precise force of every form thus modified: and, it must be confessed, that although a considerable number of instances occur in most languages, in which we can clearly perceive a peculiar force attendant on certain specific forms; yet, there are others, in which no such power is discoverable; others again, in which one form is used for another, and even different forms linked together in the same phrase, or corresponding to one another in the parallel parts of the same context. To this may be added the figures of speech, which exercise a very considerable influence on the significations of words, and conspire very much to disconcert both the Learner and the Learned in enquiries of this nature. Still we must not throw away all the helps we have, merely because they will not conduct us to absolute knowledge in every case: besides, further enquiry may throw much new, and even sufficient, light on this subject. We shall, therefore, follow the course just marked out, in detailing the forms of augmented nouns.

3. Writers on this subject seem generally to agree in the following principles, viz. That, by augmentation will be expressed either intensity, frequency, duration, defect, or the like, of that action, passion, habit, &c. which is contained in the signification afforded by the primitive word:—that, in some instances, a word which is intransitive, will, by adding a letter, become transitive: as in the English words, rise and raise, which in Hebrew will be given in  $\text{קָוַם}$  (for  $\text{קָוַם}$ ), and  $\text{קָוַם}$  or  $\text{קָוַם}$ . A similar effect is produced in Hebrew by prefixing a letter: as,  $\text{קָוַם}$  which will also signify raise, the root being  $\text{קָוַם}$  rise. In many cases, however, as already remarked, the real force of the augment is not perceptible; and in these, we must be content to abide by usage. As we proceed, however, it is my intention to offer some conjectures on the origin of the different augments; and, should I not succeed in producing conviction, I shall certainly gain my point in another respect, namely, in impressing upon the Learner's mind, the different forms with which he will meet. Besides, by attempting to ascertain what these additional syllables really are, and what they mean, some light may be thrown on the manner in which language in general has been constructed.—It is my belief, that language has grown up, in a great measure, out of necessity; and, that words which now exceed their primitive length, must have been made so by the addition of others qualifying or otherwise modifying their significations, as circumstances should require. In process of time, many of these additional words may have become attached to others, and so abbreviated as greatly to obscure their original forms and significations: e. g. The English word attempting, seems to be compounded of at, (ad, whatever that word was originally) tempt, and ing. The last component part is probably the same with the Latin Ens, or Greek  $\omega\nu$ , so that each part of the word might originally have stood singly, but is now so compounded as to stand for one. In such words as incomprehensibility, transubstantiation, &c., I suppose we have not fewer than five or six primitive words confounded together in one.

4. The Greek and Latin prepositions, with which so many words are compounded, were perhaps at first significant words: and, it strikes me as most probable, that their terminations of case and gender, no less than the variations found to prevail in the conjugations of their verbs, were all, at some time, significant words, which have been so attached to the root, as to supply the sense which these conjugations, &c. now bear. It may, indeed, be impossible now to ascertain exactly what they were; still the attempt to do so, cannot but be attended with beneficial results.—To proceed, the following tables will exhibit the forms with some examples of the first class of these nouns.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.
Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
I. בְּקָדַד	בְּקָדַת	עֲקָשׁ	אֲוִלָּת or בְּקָדַד	or בְּקָדַת	אֵלִים	יְקָהָה
	or בְּקָדַה	לְמַד	נְבָחַת
		very perverse.	great folly.
		quite dumb.	prompt obedience.
		teaching.	baldness.

5. To this form may be referred all those nouns, which, on account of having a ך or ך for their middle radical letter, and therefore not convenient for reduplication (Art. 75.), double the last:

as, שׁוֹקֶה greatly desiring, fem.; שׁוֹקֶהָ id., root שׁוֹק; עוֹלֵל a sucking child, root עוֹל. The same form is also found in words derived from roots having the second and third radical letters the same: as, שׁוֹמֵם, fem. שׁוֹמְמָה desolate, desolation, root שׁמם. The passive forms of these will be שׁוֹמֵם, שׁוֹקֶה, עוֹלֵל, &c. Some others double the last radical letter by Dāgēsh: as, קְטַנִּים, pl. קְטַנּוֹן, small; אֹפְנוֹ a wheel, pl. אֹפְנִים; שְׂפָן a field-mouse, pl. שְׂפָנִים; זְמַן time, pl. זְמַנִּים, &c.

6. Some one vowel will, in all these cases, necessarily be immutable; the other occasionally so: e. g. עֵקֶשׁ &c., pl. abs. עֵקֶשִׁים, constr. עֵקֶשִׁי. The pronouns, therefore, will be affixed accordingly. Under this head may be placed all those verbal nouns, which are generally arranged as the infinitives, &c., of the Pihél conjugation.

7. As this form is taken for the root of one of the species of the Conjugation, some account should be here given of its force.

It has been laid down as a rule, that verbs which are intransitive in the first species, are generally transitive in this: as, לָמַד he learned; לָמַדְתָּ he taught. The same property prevails in the Arabic: عَلِمَ he knew; عَلَّمَ he taught. This they term the transitive property; التَّعْدِيَّةُ. The other dialects also recognise this property.

8. Another property is, the becoming either in reality, or in estimation only, that which the primitive word signifies: as, בָּבְרָה he became, or was adopted as, the first-born, from the primitive בָּבְרָה first-born: but this word, when used of trees as producing fruit, will mean prematurity.

Under this head may be placed all those cases, in which is intimated a Declaration, Announcement, Accusation, &c., of what the primitive word signifies: as, טָמְאָה pronouncing, or accusing another of being, unclean; טָהַר pronouncing another clean. So perhaps, אָדָּבָה pronouncing, confessing, &c. sin. And hence by a metonymy, expiating it.* These properties are termed by the

 as, جلدته I skinned him, or deprived him of his skin. Lumsden's Arab. Gram.,
 p. 178. See also his Pers. Gram.; vol. i. p. 230.

Arabian Grammarians, <sup>اَلتَّحْوِيلُ</sup> changing, and <sup>اَلتَّسْمِيَةُ</sup> naming : as,

* Hence from the noun <sup>ظَدْرِكٌ</sup> just, we have the verb in this form <sup>ظَدْرَكَ</sup> he pronounced, esteemed some one just, i. e. he justified him, e. g. Jer. iii. 11, <sup>نَفَقَتْهَا</sup> she justified herself. See also Job xxxiii. 32, &c. See also Buxtorf's Chaldaic and Talmudic Lexicon under <sup>ظَدْرَكَ</sup>. Greek verbs in <sup>ἀζω</sup>, <sup>ἰζω</sup>, <sup>εύω</sup>, <sup>ύνω</sup>, <sup>άνω</sup>, <sup>έω</sup>, <sup>άω</sup>, <sup>όω</sup>, &c. have frequently this force: so <sup>Δικαιοώω</sup> or <sup>Δικαιοῶ</sup> in the New Testament; so also 1 Cor. i. 20, <sup>ἐμώραρευεν ὁ Θεὸς τὴν σοφίαν τοῦ κόσμου τούτου</sup>, He hath made foolish, i. e. pronounced to be so, the wisdom of this world. So also with the verb <sup>ποιέω</sup>, which will give an equivalent sense, John xix. 7, <sup>ἐαυτὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐποίησεν</sup>, He made himself the Son of God, i. e. He declared himself to be so. In a similar manner the verbs <sup>ἔθη</sup> he gave, appointed; and <sup>ἔθηκε</sup> he placed, laid down, or the like, will intimate the mere declaration of something done or to be done, e. g. Gen. xxvii. 37. <sup>גָּבַרְתִּי שְׂמַתִּיו</sup> I have laid him down, declared him, great. <sup>וְאֶת-כָּל-אֶחָיו נָתַתִּי לוֹ</sup>, and all his brothers have I given to him, i. e. have declared shall be his. See Gen. xxxv. 12. Comp. Exod. xii. 25. So 1 Kings xxii. 23. <sup>יְהוָה רִיחַ שְׂקָר</sup> Jehovah hath given a spirit of lying, i. e. has declared that it is so. See Prov. ix. 9, where <sup>תֵּן</sup> give, in the first number, is explained by <sup>הוֹדַע</sup> make known, in the second. See also Ezekiel xx. 24—26. Other verbs too, not of this form but expressing some action, are occasionally used to signify a declaration of that action only; as in Jer. i. 10: to root out, to pull down, &c. Hosea vi. 5, I have hewed them by the prophets, &c. i. e. I have declared that they are, or shall be, hewn. See Glass. Phil. Sac. Lib. III. Tract. III. Canon XV., &c. Storr. p. 26, &c.

9. Another property of this form is, to intimate Intensity, Abundance, or Frequency, of the action or passion signified by the primitive word: שָׁבַר he broke; שִׁבְרָה shivered or broke to pieces; צָמַח it shot up, grew; צִמְחָה it shot up quickly and abundantly. Equivalent to this, is the property termed المبالغة or كثرة of the Grammarians of Arabia: as, حَمِدَهُ he praised him very much; جَوَلَ he exercised his horse very much; صَرَحَ الْحَقُّ the truth became very apparent, &c.

10. In a few instances also, this form is thought to have a causative signification: as, הִלְכוּ he walked; הִלְכוּ he caused another to walk, &c.

The vowels will in every case here be immutable; the plurals, &c., will therefore be regularly formed, פָּקוּדִים, פָּקוּדִים, &c.

To this form are referred some words having י between the first and second radical letters, which is thought to be a mere compensation for the omission of Dāgēsh: as, פִּיּוּן for פִּיוּן a spear; פִּיּוּר invasion; פִּיּוּק a fetter; and, according to some, שִׁילָה Shiloh.

or פָּקַד	פָּקַדְתָּ or פָּקַדְתָּ	אֶבְרָא a farmer.	בִּקְרָה enquiry.
		חַטָּא a sinner.	חַטָּאה id.
			פְּצִרָה sterility.

12. These nouns imply constant habit or the like, and are used to designate trades, professions, &c.*

13. Both vowels are here necessarily immutable, the first on account of the syllabication, the second because it seems to supply the place of ס, by analogy: as, הַרְשֵׁי an artificer (Art. 153. 3.), pl. הַרְשֵׁים, and in construction הַרְשֵׁי artificers; מַלְיָה a mariner, pl. מַלְיָהִים, with pron. מַלְחֵיהֶם their mariners. A few instances occur in which (◌◌) occupies the place of (◌) or (◌◌): as, פְּהֶלְהָ (Art. 87. 6.) and פְּלֶהָה perturbation. To the feminine forms Simonis adds פְּקֻדֹת, of which two examples only occur, viz. הַקְּלָמוֹת coagulated milk, according to him, Job vi. 6; and פְּלֻצוֹת terror, Ib. xxi. 6, &c. But these are probably compound forms.

	פִּקֻּדָּה rarely.		לְקַחָה taken.

14. Simonis places יִלְד Judg. xiii. 8, under this form; but nothing can be more probable than that this is the third person singular of the verb, construed with ה in the sense of יִשְׁרָר, and to be understood as a future tense; e. g. הַיִּלְד who should be born. Perhaps the word does not occur construed as a simple noun in any case.

15. Under this head may be classed all those nouns which are generally arranged as infinitives of the Pūhāl conjugation, and which may therefore be considered as passives corresponding with the active forms, פִּקֹּד, &c.

16. In all these cases, the first vowel is necessarily immutable; the last not so universally: but, as examples do not occur sufficiently numerous to decide this question, we can say but little about it.

* The same forms have the same force in Arabic: as, عطار a perfumer, خباز a baker; from عطر perfume, and خبز bread. So in Syr. and Chaldaic אֲעִדָּא Chald. זַמְרָא a singer, &c.

17. These forms are thought to be intensitive of those given under the preceding class (Art. 153.): but whether such force is always to be found when they occur is doubtful.

Of those Nouns which are said to be reduplicated by implication (Art. 109.)

155. These are nouns which are thought to have an intensitive signification, without presenting any reduplication either in the vowels or consonants: but, as they generally have a perfect vowel, occasionally immutable, in the penultimate, it has been supposed that this presents a compensation for the Dagesh which has been omitted. The following are their forms:

3. With respect to the inflection of these words, it may be remarked, that the perfect vowel (ֵ) in the first form, is sometimes immutable, at others not so. No rule, therefore, can be given, upon which reliance, as to the plurals, &c., can be placed. With respect to the other forms, whenever the ך or ך remains, its vowel also remains unchangeable; but, when it drops, the defect may be compensated by inserting the point Dāgēsh in the following consonant, as it is the case in the feminine פִּקְדָּה, in which the perfect vowel is supplied by its corresponding imperfect one; e. g. for פִּקְדָּה, we have פִּקְדָּה. So also, vice versá, letters doubled by the insertion of Dāgēsh, will frequently lose this point, and then the preceding imperfect vowel will change into its correspondent perfect one. Hence it is, that these forms are supposed to contain an implicit reduplication, (Art. 109.), or, in other words, to be forms equivalent to those which have the middle radical letter doubled by a Dāgēsh forte. But, as the nouns of this class are few, it is scarcely possible to glean from the usage of the language, what vowels are mutable and what are not so. For the same reason, it is impossible even to say, whether we are right in all cases in our classification of them.

156. In nouns of this description one or more of the letters contained in the technical word הַאֲמַנְתִּי (Art. 147. 3.) will be found attached to one or other of the preceding primitive or augmented forms, for the purpose apparently of varying the signification. That these are fragments of words I have no doubt: but, what they originally were, it may now be exceedingly difficult to say. I may, perhaps, be excused if I offer a few conjectures on this subject, hoping, that although I may not succeed to the extent that may be wished, I shall, nevertheless, afford something likely to fix these forms more permanently in the mind of the Learner; and this is my principal object.

2. Of these letters (viz. הַאֲמַנְתִּי) one or other will be found at the beginning of words; while ה, י, ם, ן, or ך, will be found at their ends. In some instances, words are augmented by one or more of these letters, both at the beginning and the end at the same time, having also the middle radical letter doubled by the operation of Dāgēsh forte, as in the Participial forms of Hithpāhél, מְתַפְקְרוּת and מְתַפְקְרִים, &c.

Of the Letters termed הַאֲמַנְתִּי, when prefixed to words.

157. Simonis* considers nouns having נ or ך prefixed, as having some affinity in signification to those persons of the verbs which have these letters as preformatives; and the ך as presenting a force nearly allied to that of the Hithpāhél conjugation. This may perhaps be true; but, as it leaves these conjugations, &c., unexplained, I have thought it would be better, to consider the force of these adjuncts in the nouns: because, if we can succeed in this, we shall have no difficulty whatever when we come to the verbs.

I suppose, then, that the letters ה, ך, י, ת, or הַת, are nothing more than abbreviated forms of some primitive words, which might have originally been written in full, and placed before others, for the purpose of modifying their sense. These, in process of time, might have lost some of their letters, and then have been compounded with others presenting the forms which we now have. If, therefore, we can now find words which may be thus abbreviated when joined with others, and giving the significations which such augmented forms seem to have, we shall perhaps make this subject more intelligible and interesting than it has usually been found to be.

2. With respect to the first, נ, with which we may join ה, we perhaps have a fragment of the root אָנָה (Arabic هَوِيَ هَوِيَ) desiring, impelling, casting down, and the like; to which, אָנָה, אָנָה, and אָנָה, as expressing certain affections of the mind, may perhaps be added, as cognate roots. Upon this supposition הַפְקִיד (or אַפְקִיד, for the Chaldee or Syriac form) will stand for אָנָה, הַוִּי, אָנָה, or הַוִּי, אָנָה (Form. VI. Art. 153.) impelling, causing, desiring, &c. another, to visit, &c. So אָנָה a willing, or great liar; אָנָה willingly, or greatly cruel.†

† It is remarkable, that the causative and other words in the Coptic are formed in precisely the same manner. "Verba composita," says Scholz. Gram.

3. We may now consider the force of words thus augmented: and, as some of them are taken for the leading words of a certain species of the conjugation of verbs, it will be as well now to determine their properties.

4. If then the primitive word have an active sense, as, שָׁמַע he heard, it will in this form have a causative one; as, הִשְׁמִיעַ causing to hear: but, if the primitive be neuter, this form will be active in signification: as, עָמַד he stood; הִעֲמִיד he set up; שָׂמַח he was glad; הִשְׂמִיחַ he rejoiced another.*

5. If, in the next place, the primitive be a noun substantive or adjective, it will, in this form, generally signify the being, making, becoming, doing, suffering, permitting, &c. the sense of the root: הִבְרִיא he made fat; noun, הִבְרִיא fat (Form V. Art. 153.); הִיָּמִין he used

Copt. § 86. e duabus vocibus coalescunt. In these cases the words prefixed have precisely the same power with those above proposed, and one, viz., ρι projicere, is very nearly allied both in sound and sense to our ה or ה, particularly in the Hiphkil form הִפְקִיד or הִפְקִיד, &c.

the right hand, or proceeded towards it; noun, יָמִין the right hand. So הִשְׁמָאֵל he used, or went towards, the left hand; noun, שְׂמָאל the left hand; הִמְטִיר he caused rain; noun, מָטָר rain; הִלְבִּין he became white, root לָבַן white; הִשְׁפִּיר he permitted (to purchase) provision, root שָׁפַר provision; הִשְׁאָר he permitted (to) remain, root שָׁאָר remnant.*

6. Another property is, the exhibiting, declaring, or esteeming, the person or thing designated by such word, as possessed of the quality intimated by the primitive: as, הִצְדִּיק he declared, or esteemed another, just, from צָדִיק just; הִרְשִׁיעַ he declared, or esteemed another wicked, from רָשָׁע wicked. So, in the Arabic, <sup>اَكْفَرْتُ</sup> اَكْفَرْتُ I called him an infidel; <sup>اَخَطَاةً</sup> اَخَطَاةً I accused him of sin.† To this property may be referred all those passages, in which this form is used, and in which God is said to have hardened the heart, blinded the eyes, made the heart gross, deceived the people, &c.—where nothing more than declaring this to be the case can be meant.‡

7. Another property of this form is, excess, or intensity, of the action, passion, &c. afforded by the primitive

† Lumsden's Arab. Gram., p. 175.

‡ Exod. vii. 3, x. 1, Deut. ii. 30, Is. vi. 10, comp. with Matth. xiii. 15. This property Storr refers to the influence of a metonymy. Observ. pp. 24, 28, &c., which he thinks amounts to nothing more than permission. See also pp. 194—5—6. This, however, leaves the matter nearly as unsatisfactory as it found it. Very nearly parallel to these Hebrew forms and usages, are those of Greek verbs terminating in ἄζω, ἰζω, αἰνώ, ὑνώ, εὔω, ὀω, and ἔω, many of which are manifestly derived from nouns: as, ἐορτάζω from ἐορτή, νομίζω from νόμος, σεμαίνω from σῆμος, εὐδύνω from εὐδός, παιδεύω from παῖς, δουλόω from δούλος, τιμάω from τιμή, φιλέω from φίλος, &c. See Glassii Phil. Sacr., Lib. iii., Tract iii., Canon xv. Note to Art. 152. 8.

word : as, הָאָדָּם he was very red. So, in the Arabic, صباح the morning was very bright; ثمر النخلة the palm tree bore much fruit.

8. Many verbs, not used in the first species of the conjugation (Lect. X.), have occasionally either a neuter or transitive signification in this form : as, הִשְׁפִּים he rose early; הִשְׁלִיךְ he threw. Sometimes they will have both significations : as, הִקְיִץ he watched, or he roused up another; הִרְגִּין he sang, or he stimulated another to sing.*

9. Several of the properties belonging to this form are also common to that of פָּקַד, see Art. 154. 7.

10. When the ה is prefixed with (τ) Khātúph, (◌◌), or (◌◌), as in הִפְקַד, הִפְקֶד, or הוּקַם, the sense will be passive of one or other of the above-mentioned properties.†

11. With respect to (◌◌) prefixed to certain forms, it may perhaps be a fragment of the root יָדָה, Syr. مأد or مأد, Arab. يأد decent, becoming, benign, beautiful, excellent, inviting one to rest, &c., which, when compounded with any other word, may afford the sense of durability, strength, excellency, or the like, which Grammarians are generally agreed is the force of words so com-

* And so often in the unaugmented forms, the force will at one time be transitive and at another neuter in the very same word.

† It will perhaps be difficult to assign a good reason for the adoption of this vowel to give a passive signification to words in the Shemitic dialects. Nothing can be more certain, however, than that this is the fact. And, hence, we not only have it in the passive conjugations of verbs both in the Hebrew and Arabic, but it will also impart a sort of passive, or rather habitual, signification to some verbs conjugated in the active form : as, יָדָל

he was strong; كرم he was bountiful; حسن he was beautiful; رفع he was

bined ; examples will be given in Art. 159. But, as no conjugation is grounded on this form, it will not be necessary to dwell very particularly on it here.

12. We now come to the forms having הַת, אַת, or ת, prefixed. These then we take to be derived from some word, which, when combined with any other, will give the modification of sense usually attributed to these forms. If we take אָתָּךְ Chald. or Heb. אָתָּךְ coming, arriving at, as the primitive word, and suppose אַת, הַת, or ת, to be a fragment of it, we shall have a particle, which when prefixed to any word will give something like a passive or reciprocal sense, which all are agreed is the import of this form : e. g. אָתָּךְ אָתָּךְ or אָתָּךְ אָתָּךְ ; of the Chaldee form, or אָתָּךְ, will mean, coming, or as we say in English, becoming, visited ; and will be either passive or reflective, &c., as the sense of the context shall require. So in Latin, amatum iri, in which the word iri is manifestly derived from the verb Ire, to go. The passives of the Persian, Hindustani, and probably of the Sanscrit, are formed in a similar manner.

Properties of the Conjugations grounded on this Form.

13. First to be or become, that which the primitive word signifies (which in Arabic is termed مطاوعة submission) ; as, הִתְנַאֵל he became polluted ; הִתְחַזַּק he became strong ; הִתְאָדָם he became red ; or, if the context require it, he made himself so, reflectively, or, was made so, passively. So in Arabic, اَدَبْتَهُ فَتَادَبَ I corrected him, and he became corrected, &c.* In the eighth

* Lumsden's Arabic Grammar, p. 182—"Submission." Or, as the Arabic Grammarians define it, حصول اثر الشيء عن تعلق الفعل المتعدي نحو كسرت الزجاج فانكسر ذلك الزجاج فان انكسار الزجاج اثر قد حصل عن تعلق الكسر الذي هو اثر الفعل المتعدي i. e. The impression made upon any thing by the action of a transitive verb : as, I broke the glass, and the glass became broken. Now, the glass's becoming broken, was therefore grieved; <sup>لومه فالقام</sup> he reproached him vehemently, and he became reproached.

14. Secondly, To feign, pretend, exhibit, &c. that which the primitive word signifies: as, Josh. ix. 4, <sup>וַיִּשְׁרְרוּ</sup> they feigned themselves to be messengers; 2 Sam. xiii. 5, 6, <sup>הִתְחַל</sup> he pretended to be sick; Prov. xiii. 7, <sup>מִתְעַשֵּׂר</sup> one boasting (himself) to be rich. So, <sup>מִתְרוֹשֵׁשׁ</sup> feigning (himself) to be poor; <sup>תִּתְחַסֵּד</sup> thou shewest (thyself) gracious; <sup>תִּתְמַם</sup> thou shewest (thyself) perfect, Ps. xviii. 26. And, in Arabic, <sup>تَشَعَّ</sup> * he pretended

Nothing, I think, can be less accurate than to class the term <sup>مَطَاعٌ</sup> with those of <sup>غَيْرِ مُتَعَدٍّ</sup>, <sup>غَيْرِ وَّاقِعٍ</sup>, and <sup>لَا زِمٍ</sup>, as Mr. de Sacy has here done. All that Beidawi means, seems to be, that <sup>يَنْفَطِرُنَ</sup> is more elegant than <sup>يَنْفَطِرِينَ</sup>, because it is the <sup>مَطَاعٌ</sup> (see the definitions above) of <sup>فَطَرَ</sup>, not of <sup>فَطَّرَ</sup>, as the other reading is.

The real difference between neuter verbs, termed by the Arabs <sup>غَيْرِ مُتَعَدٍّ</sup>, <sup>لَا زِمٍ</sup>, &c. is, that they imply intransitive action, habit, or inseparable properties: as, beauty, deformity, colour, &c.; whereas <sup>مَطَاعَةٌ</sup> or <sup>مَطَاعٌ</sup> signify the accidental influence of any transitive verbs exerted upon their objects; which is the real difference between the Hebrew forms <sup>פָּקַדוּךָ</sup> and <sup>נִפְקַדְךָ</sup>, as will be seen hereafter.

The real force, then, of this form will be best expressed by made, became, or the like: as in <sup>גִּבְרִי לָךְ</sup> made to go, <sup>נִפְקַדְךָ</sup> became visited, &c.; which will lay the groundwork for the reciprocal sense, &c., the context always determining who is the agent.

* The fifth species which has often a passive sense; and constantly in the Ethiopic.—It was shewn, Art. 146. 8, that certain forms had occasionally an objective or subjective signification, according to the view in which they were taken; the same appears to be the case in these forms; and, hence it is, that these verbs have sometimes a passive, at others a reflective, and at others an active signification. The same is the case in the Niphal form; and apparently for the same reasons.

16. Fourthly, In many instances the sense is the same as it would be, if the verb had been used in the primitive form termed Kal: as, <sup>הִשְׁתַּמֵּר</sup> he kept the laws, statutes, &c. This also, with many other properties unknown to the Hebrew, is found in the Arabic.*

For the transpositions and other changes which take place in certain words, when augmented by the particles <sup>הה</sup>, or <sup>את</sup>, see Art. 83.

17. Nouns which receive <sup>ב</sup> at the beginning will generally designate the Instrument, Agent, Action, Passion, State, Place, or the like, by or in which the influence of any verb is exerted, suffered,

* It is a curious fact that in the Arabic, the eighth species of the conjugation of the form <sup>اَفْتَعَلَ</sup>, equivalent in force to our <sup>הִתְפַּקֵּד</sup>, has occasionally the sense of the first (<sup>فَعَلَ</sup>); in that case the seventh, <sup>اَنْفَعَلَ</sup> mostly used. Now, this seventh Arabic species corresponds exactly with our <sup>נִפְעַל</sup> (see No. 19.); and, the consequence will be, if these dialects mutually illustrate one another, that the Hebrew <sup>הִתְפַּקֵּד</sup> and <sup>נִפְעַל</sup> will have the same, or very nearly the same, force: see Ps. ii. 2, where both occur in the same passage: and also that both will not be found under the same roots unless the <sup>הִתְפַּקֵּד</sup> have the force of the Kal: and, generally, these are found to be the facts of the case.

With respect to the reason for this variation of signification, Grammarians are generally silent. Simonis has supposed it to be equivalent to that which the preposition ב similarly situated would supply.† I may perhaps be excused if I offer a different solution. If we suppose, then, that the word originally prefixed was either מִי or מִן who, מָה or מַה which, or what, as the sense may require, we shall have significations corresponding to those of the words of these forms, e. g. מִי בֹקֵר he who visits, or is visiting; and, striking out the י, for the purpose of abridging the word, we shall have מְבַקֵּר as above. The same will be the case, if we take מִן בֹּקֵר, for then the ן will be lost by Art. 76. These are the forms which designate agents when the verb is transitive: and such are all the participial forms commencing with ב. In the next place, if we take מָה or מַה that which, &c. and prefix it, contracted as before, we shall have מְגִזֵּר an ax, for מָה גִזֵּר that which (is a) cutting, &c. So, מְעַשֶּׂה a work, for מָה עֲשֶׂה that which (is a) doing; and so of others.

18. We now come to give some account of the prefix נ, and of the modification of sense, which primitive words undergo in consequence of its influence. And here, as before, we may perhaps be allowed to offer a conjecture, as to its origin. If, then, we take it as the defective form of some primitive word, appearing sometimes as הַנ, at other times as נ only, we may suppose it to be derived from the root אָנִי, which, had it been preserved in the Hebrew, might have been written הַנָּה, הַנָּה, or הַנָּה. The senses attributed to it by Castell are, among others:—“Ad extremum perfectionis terminum pervenit . . . assecutus fuit, seu percepit. IV. Retinuit, detinuit, coercuit . . . V. Lenitate, modestiâ et patientiâ usus fuit, &c.” Supposing, then, this word, or some defective form of it, to be construed with any other, the sense of both taken together will, in general, give the force of the forms thus compounded. And, as this form of compound is often used as the leading word of one of the species of the conjugation, it becomes the more important to ascertain its properties.

† Arcanum Formarum, p. 447.

19. First Property : Primitive words receiving this particle will have a sort of passive sense, or will exhibit subjection to the action implied by the primitive accidentally, but not habitually : and in this respect they differ from words of the form פָּקוּד : as, נְבָרְכוּ בְךָ they (shall) become blessed in thee, Gen. xii. 2, i. e. in thy seed. So in the Hithpāhél, Gen. xxii. 18, וְהִתְבָּרְכוּ בְּזַרְעֶךָ, and they (shall) become blessed in thy seed ; their state shall be changed to that of blessedness : but in the phrase, בָּרוּךְ יְהוָה blessed (is) Jehovah, we have no such intimation of accident or change : if, however, יְהִיָּה be added, as in Gen. xxvii. 33, the two forms will have the same force. So, שָׂכוּר will mean an hireling ; but, נִשְׂכָּר a person hired on some particular occasion. So I understand Neh. vi. 12, 13, הוּא לְמַעַן שָׂכוּר הוּא : סַנְבַלַּט שִׂכְרוּ Sanballat had hired him, because he was an hireling ; and 1 Sam. ii. 5, נִשְׂכְּרוּ בְּלֶחֶם שְׂבָעִים בְּלֶחֶם נִשְׂכְּרוּ those who have been (habitually) full, are (occasionally) hired for bread.

This property is common to the Arabic, and is termed by the Grammarians, as before, مطروعة : as, بعثه فانبعث he sent him, and he was sent ; اغلقت فانغلق I shut it, and it was shut. (See No. 13, above.)

This property of the Hebrew form (as a verb) was pointed out many years ago by Elias Levita in a work entitled הִתְבָּרְכוּ ; but, as he supposed it also to involve a preterite tense, Glassius and others very properly objected ; and, the consequence has been, two distinct forms, viz. פָּקוּד, and נִפְקָד, have been confounded together ; and, what is still worse, a tense has been ascribed to each, which is more than can be proved of either of them.

20. Again : Words, receiving this augment subjecting them to the action implied by some primitive word, may, when the context requires it, be construed as having a reciprocal sense, or implying possibility, capability, exhibition, propriety, affectation, or the like, of the action, &c. meant by the primitive: as, נִשְׁמַר he guarded himself, 2 Sam. xx. 10, Mal. ii. 15. To this property may be referred many passages, in which this form seems to have a neuter signification: as, נִקְרַב he brings himself near, i. e. draws near, Exod. xxii. 7, Josh. vii. 14;—and, in a few instances, an active one: as, נִלְחַם he fought; נִשָּׁעַן he leaned upon; נִשְׁבַּע he swore; נִשְׁפַּט he contended, disputed; יֵאָכֵל it is, or may be, eaten, Gen. vi. 21. So, לֹא יַעֲשֶׂה בֵּן it is not, may not, cannot, or ought not, to be done thus; נִכְבֵּר he shewed himself honourable; נִאָּדָר he shewed himself glorious; נִאָּנַח he sighed. Such significations, according to European idiom, these passages seem to require, while in truth, became, or the like, will always satisfy the terms of the original. The subjective or objective force found respectively to prevail in these forms, was probably at first regulated by the view taken, in these respects, of the primitive noun. See Note on Artt. 146. 8. and 157. 14.

21. These properties are intimated in the Arabic by the terms

اللزوم والعلاج, necessity and remedy; which, Mr. Lumsden says, indicate “that verbs of this class must be INTENSITIVE by their own nature, and significant of actions performed by the members of the body:” but, the examples he adduces are not confined to this rule: كَسَرَ he broke, is as much an active verb as any other can be; which, when thus augmented becomes passive, not neuter: nor has أنحمت and أحمت the market was unfrequented, any thing to do with the members of the body. I am induced to believe, therefore, that the terms اللزوم والعلاج, are to be understood as intimating the properties above-mentioned.

158. EXAMPLES OF THE FORMS ABOVE-MENTIONED, ARRANGED UNDER THEIR SEVERAL FORMS.

First Class of Heemanti Nouns, having an א prefixed.

I. אֶפְקֹד and אֶפְקֹדָה, fem. אֶפְקֹדָה, אֶזְרָח home-born, indigenious, אֶהְיֶה (changing (τ) to (ν) on account of the following ה, Art. 139. 7, note), ὁ ὦν, a name of God, Exod. iii. 14, אֶצְעָדָה a bracelet, אֶיָּזוּ (for אֶיָּזוּ Art. 87. 5.) strength, אֶתָּנוּ reward, wages, אֶצְבָּע a finger.

II. אֶפְקֹדָה, אֶגְרוּף the fist, אֶפְרוּחַ the young of any bird, אֶתְמוּל sometime ago, yesterday, אֶשְׁפֹּל grapes.

III. אֶפְקֹדָה, fem. אֶפְקֹדָה; as, אֶחָלֶם an amethyst, אֶכְזֹר very cruel, אֶכְזֹב very false, אֶזְפָּרָה recollection, אֶסָּם (for אֶסָּם Art. 73.) a granary, אֶקֹּו (for אֶקֹּו or אֶקֹּו Art. 87. 1. and 76.) an animal so called.

IV. אֶפְקֹדָה; as, אֶבְנֵט a girdle, אֶרְבֵּה the locust.

V. אֶפְקֹדָה, fem. אֶפְקֹדָה; as, אֶשְׁפֹּת a dunghill, אֶשְׁמֹרֶת guard, custody.

VI. אֶפְקֹדָה, fem. אֶפְקֹדָה; as, אֶקֹּו (for אֶקֹּו Art. 73.) a cruet, אֶשְׁמֹרֶת guard, custody.

VII. אֶפְקֹדָה; as, אֶבְבֵּל or אֶבְבֵּל (for אֶבְבֵּל) a (never-failing) river.

VIII. Some nouns which lose one of their radical letters by contraction assume the form of the Segolates: as, אֶכַּף (for אֶכַּף) the palm of the hand.

2. Nouns of this class are few; and of the last form, perhaps, a second does not occur. It is curious enough to remark, how easily nouns, deprived of any of their vowels, slide into the Segolate forms. We shall see, hereafter, that the same thing often takes place in the conjugations of the verbs, in similar cases.—It will be seen that I have not entirely followed the classification of Simonis. My reason for doing so was this: he seems to me to have given some forms without examples to bear him out: and, in one case, he has given a form אֶפְקֹד for which he has only one example, and that example he has also given in another class. (See אֶבְטִיחִים, pp. 547 and 639. Arcan. Form.)

159. Second Class of Hēmantī Nouns having י prefixed.

I. Form יִפְקֹד; as, יִצְהָר oil, יִצְחָק Isaac.

II. יִפְקֹד; as, יִעֲנֶה the ostrich.

III. יִפְקֹד or יִפְקֹד, fem. יִפְקֹדָה: as, יְהִיִּל (for יְהִיִּיל) one who expects, יְפִיחַ an herald (for יְפִיִּחַ), יֶרֶךְ (for יֶרֶקֶךְ) the thigh, יִרְבֵּי (for יִרְיִיב) a disputant, יִנְיָקָה (for יִנְיִיקָה) a germ, stem, &c.

IV. יִפְקֹד:* as, יְחֻלֹּם an adamant, יִנְשׂוּף an owl.

V. יִפְקֹד: as, יְחֻמֹּר a species of goat, יִלְקוּט a purse, יְהִיִּם being (for יְקֹוּיִם Art. 73.).

VI. יִפְקֹד: as, יוֹבָל (for יוֹבֵל Art. 87. 2.) a constant river. And, according to some, the Segolate יֶרֶךְ thigh (for יֶרֶקֶךְ), the last radical being rejected, and the (׃) added, as in other Segolates, for the sake of Euphony.

2. In this class also is placed, as a special anomaly, the word יְהוָה Jehovah,† with a caution, however, that these vowels do not exhibit the ancient pronunciation of the word. The Jews, as it is known to every one, never pronounce this word, but substitute either אֲדֹנָי or אֱלֹהִים for it; and hence it is, that we sometimes find it pointed יְהוָה, i. e. with the vowels proper for the word אֱלֹהִים, which is invariably the case when אֲדֹנָי and יְהוָה occur together. The reason is, the word אֲדֹנָי would in this case be pronounced twice, which is not desirable; the word אֱלֹהִים is, therefore, pronounced instead of it (see page 28, note). That Jehovah is not the ancient pronunciation most writers are agreed: but what that was it may be difficult to determine. Some have proposed יְהֻוָּה Yāhāvó, of the form יִפְקֹד, as Capellus, Walton, Clericus, &c. Others have proposed יְהוּוָה, יְהוָה, or יְהוָה, as Mercer, Montanus, Amama, Scaliger, &c., taking the Samaritan pronunciation of it, as preserved by Theodoret, Ἰαβέ.‡ Others again take the Latin Jove; but which of these is nearest to the original pronunciation, no one can say.

* Simonis places יִאֵר under this form: but as there is some difficulty in ascertaining the root from which it is derived, and as the word appears to be of Egyptian origin, it may as well be omitted.

‡ Simonis Arcanum Formarum, p. 545.

160. Third Class of Hēemanti Nouns beginning with ה.

These forms, according to Simonis and Reimarus, as quoted by him, were not much used before the time of the Captivity. He takes the liberty, however, of excluding all the Infinitives of the Hiphhíl conjugation, which I think he ought not to do; because, I believe these infinitives are nothing more than such nouns, upon which that species of the conjugation is constructed; and, if this be the case, there will be no reason why they should not be considered as forming a part of this class.

Examples.

I. Form : הַפְקִיד or הַפְקִד ; as, הַמְשָׁל, rule, dominion, הַשְׁפֵּל intelligence, הַשְׁמִיעַ proclaiming, causing to hear, הַסִּב (for הַסִּבֵּב) causing to turn, הַפִּיץ for הַפְּיִץ dispersing, הַשָּׂא (for הַנְּשָׂא) seduction. Roots ending in silent ה often reject it in words of this kind, and take וֹת as their terminating syllable: as, הַרְבֵּה and הַרְבֹּת multitude, הַעֲלֹת elevation, &c.*

II. הַפְקִדָה ; as, הַנְּחָה (for הַנְּחָה) tranquillity, הַנְּפָה (for הַנְּפָה) agitation, הַנְּצִלָה (for הַנְּצִלָה) liberation.

III. הַפְקִידָה ; as, הַפְּגָה (for הַפְּוִגָה) termination, cessation.

IV. הַפְקִדוֹת ; as, הַשְׁמָעוֹת relation,† &c.

V. הַפְקִיד ; as, הַתְּפִיךְ pouring out (pr. הַתְּפִיךְ Art. 76.).

VI. הַפְקִד (for הַנְּפִקֵד) ; as, הַלְּחָם (for הַנְּלָחֵם) making war; and so all the Infinitives of the Niphhál species.

VII. הַפְקִד or הַפְקִדָה ; as, הַפְקִדָה visited, appointed, הַרְמָה slain (for הַרְמָה or הַרְמָה Art. 87. 2.). These forms have a passive signification (Art. 157. 10.).

2. It will immediately be seen, that the forms to which the particle ה is here prefixed, are by no means peculiar to the Hiphhíl

* These, however, are probably compound nouns, formed of the original root with וֹת, a contracted form of הוֹת being, for הוֹת. See Art. 139. 7. note.

† Words having this termination are also compounds formed of the Hēemanti noun, and the word הוֹת contracted to וֹת by Art. 87. 2, &c. The signification of which words, ending in וֹת and וֹת- is, that of the state of action or passion denoted by the primitive word; as, מַלְכוּת a kingdom, or state of reigning; רֵאשִׁית first state, or beginning (Art. 87. 2. 4.).

conjugation, and consequently that no one can, without violating the principles of analogy, derive them from that conjugation. The truth appears to me to be, that the Hiphhil conjugation is nothing more than the adjunction of one or other of the pronouns to words of the form פִּקֵּיד, &c. to which also the particle ה, (or א for the Chaldee form) is prefixed, for the purpose of varying the sense, as already noticed.

161. Fourth Class of Hæementi Nouns commencing with מ.

I. מִפְּקֹד, fem. מִפְּקֹדָה, מִפְּקֹדֶה, or מִפְּקֹדֶת: masc. מִנְּדָל a tower; fem. מִלְחָמָה war, מִעֲשָׁקָה oppression, מִשְׁמֶרֶת custody.

II. מִפְּקֹד; for which Simonis gives only one example, and that has suffered contraction: as, מִסְּבָב for מִסְּבָב.

III. מִפְּקֹד; as, מִסְּכֵן poor; with final ה, מִזְרָה a fan, &c.

IV. מִפְּקֹד, fem. מִפְּקֹדָה or מִפְּקֹדֶת; as, מִזְמוֹר a psalm, מִשְׁקָלֶת a plummet.

V. מִפְּקֹד; as, מִלְאָד a goad, מוֹתָר for מוֹתָר gain (Art. 87. 1.), מִפֶּל for מִנְּפֶל soft, &c. (Art. 76.).

VI. מִפְּקֹד; as, מִחֲנֶק (Art. 106. 2.) strangling.

VII. מִפְּקֹד or מִפְּקִיד, fem. מִפְּקֹדָה; as, מִמְּבֵחַ a slaughter-house, מוֹפֵת for מוֹפֵת (Art. 87. 1.) a wonder, מִרְאָה a vision, מִזְרִיעַ producing seed, מִבְּדִיל dividing, מִדְּמִנָּה sterquilinium, מִחֲתָה (for מִכְּתָח) consternation, מִכְּתָח (for מִכְּתָח) contusion.

VIII. מִפְּקֹד, fem. מִפְּקֹדָה or מִפְּקֹדֶת; as, מִחֲקוֹר want, מִטְּמוֹן hidden (treasure), מִרְפָּלַת trading, מִאֲכָלַת food, and מִנְּוֹרָה (Art. 73.) a candlestick.

IX. מִפְּקֹד, fem. מִפְּקֹדָה; as, מִאֲבוּס a stall, מִבּוּל for מִנְּבּוּל (Art. 76.) a deluge, fem. מִבּוּסָה trampling, (for מִבּוּסָה Art. 73.).

X. מִפְּקֹד; as, מִמְּבֵט for מִנְּבֵט (Art. 76.) expectation, מִהֲזָה vision (Art. 106. 2.)

XI. מִפְּקֹד or מִפְּקִיד; as, מִמְּעָד station, with all the participles usually ascribed to the Hophhal conjugation.

XII. מִפְּקֹד, מִפְּקִיד, and מִפְּקֹד; as, מִפְּקֹד one who takes account, with all the participial nouns usually attached to the Pihél species. The remaining two are only variations of the same form, and occur but rarely.

XIII. מִפְּקֹד; as, מִלְּמָד learned, מִגְּלָה discovered. To which may be added all the participles usually ascribed to the species of Pūhál.

XIV. מְהַפְקֵד; as, מְהַהֲלֵךְ an invader, &c. with all the participles of the Hithpāhél species.

XV. Some defective nouns, which for ease of pronunciation assume a Segolate form, are derived from roots having a medial ו or ך, or doubling the second radical, or having ה for the third. The forms will vary with those of the Segolates, and for the same reasons. If, therefore, we reject the last radical, &c. and prefix מ, we shall have מַפְקֵד, for מַפְקֵד, pointed מַפְקֵה, מַפְקֵה, מַפְקֵה, מַפְקֵה, מַפְקֵה, מַפְקֵה, &c. as the nature of the word shall require; or rather, as the jus et norma loquendi has established: as, מִקְסָם, number, sum; fem. מִקְסָה (root כָּסַם); מַעֲלָה or מַעֲלָה elevation (root עָלָה); מִמְדָּה, pl. מִמְדָּהּ measures (root מָדַד); מַצְדָּה or מַצְדָּה a lurking place (root צוּד or צִיד); מְתוּם or מְתוּם soundness (root תָּמַם), &c.

2d, Simonis thinks (p. 450, Arcan. Form.), that the participles should not be considered as nouns of the הַאֲמִנְתִּי class. I believe they ought to be so considered; because I hold, that, properly speaking, there are no participles in the Hebrew language. It is true, the Grammarians have placed a number of these nouns in the same page with the paradigm of the verbs; but it will not hence follow, that they are possessed of any of the properties of real Participles. If, indeed, it could be shewn, that they involve the tenses of the verb as the Greek participles do, the opinion of Simonis, &c. would have some weight; but this has not been done; and, I think, cannot be done satisfactorily. I have therefore thought it most conducive to the progress of the Student, as well as more conformable with the analogy of the Language, to class them all as nouns: it being from the context alone, that any thing like tense is to be discovered.

162. Fifth Class of Hēemunti Nouns beginning with נ or הַנ.

I. נִפְקָד, נִפְקָד, נִפְקָד, נִפְקָד, or הַנִּפְקָד; as, נִצָּב (for נִצָּב, perhaps for אֲנִצָּב or הַנִּצָּב) fixed, set up; נִוָּשֵׁב for נִוָּשֵׁב (Art. 87. 1.) inhabited; נָסַב (for נָסַב) turned back, &c. So all the participles and preterites of the Niphhál conjugation, with this difference, that the participle ends in (τ), the preterite in (-); also, נִהָפְקָד turned about; נִהָתָם sealed; הַלָּחָם making war (for הַנְּלָחָם, Art. 76.); הַאֲכָל eatable (for הַנְּאָכָל, Artt. 76. 109.).

II. נִפְקָד; as, נָסַב (for נָסַב), as נָסַב above. This is mostly found in words doubling their last radical letter; a form not found used in the Niphhál conjugation.

163. Sixth Class of Hēemanti Nouns having ת prefixed.

The forms commencing with ת, as given by Simonis, are the following :

I. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה; as, תִּקְוָה hope; תִּגְרָה conflict; תִּמְרָה (for תִּמְרָה, Art. 87. 5.) self-exaltation.

II. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה and תִּפְקֹדֶת; as, תִּירוּשׁ (for תִּירוּשׁ) new wine; תִּפּוּצָה (for תִּפּוּצָה) dispersion; תִּלְבָּשֶׁת clothing.

III. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה, or תִּפְקֹדֶת; as, תּוֹלָד (for תּוֹלָד) and תּוֹלָדָה generation, succession; תּוֹחֵלָת hope, expectation; תַּחֲמָם an ostrich.

IV. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה, or תִּפְקֹדֶת; as, תִּרְעֵלָה trembling, giddiness; תּוֹכַחָה (for תּוֹכַחָה), and, on account of the guttural, תּוֹכַחָת (for תּוֹכַחָת) reprehension; תִּפְלְלָה (for תִּפְלְלָה) intercession; תִּבְלִית (for תִּבְלִית) self-consumption; תִּבְנִיית (for תִּבְנִיית, Art. 87. 4.) form, pattern; תִּרְמוּת (for תִּרְמוּת, Ib.) deception; and תִּזְנוּת (for תִּזְנוּת*) whoredom.

V. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה; as, תִּלְמִיד a disciple; תִּכְרִיף a robe; תִּאֲנִיחָה self torment (for תִּאֲנִיחָה, Yód in many instances standing for ה, and, being doubled in this place, makes compensation for the ה which is rejected).

VI. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה and תִּפְקֹדֶת; as, תִּמְרוּהָ self-purgation; תִּמְרוּר self-embittering; תִּהַלְכָה (for תִּהַלְכָה) continual walking; תִּהַפְכָה self-perversion; תִּנְחַמָת a proper name, Jer. xl. 8, &c. So תִּשׁוּבָה (for תִּשׁוּבָה, Art. 73.) conversion; תִּשׁוּבָה (for תִּשׁוּבָה) and תִּשׁוּבָת reciprocal striking of hands in making a bargain, &c.

VII. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה; as, תִּחַרָה or תִּחַרָה a breast-plate, תִּלְאָה (for תִּלְאָה) weariness, תִּעֲלָה (for תִּעֲלָה) self-exaltation.

VIII. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה; as, תִּרְמָה (for תִּרְמָה) deceit, תּוֹגָה (for תּוֹגָה Artt. 73. 86. 2.) grief, תִּאֲנָה (for תִּאֲנָה, contr. for תִּאֲנָה or תִּאֲנָה) occasion, opportunity.

IX. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה, תּוּפִין (for תּוּפִין, from the root יפן or ופן) division, separation, תּוֹשִׁיָה (for תּוֹשִׁיָה) solidity, substance, wealth.

X. Here, as in the former class, the rejection of the last or second radical will reduce the nouns to one or other of the segolate forms : as, תְּבִלָּה confusion, (for תְּבִלָּל perhaps) : the latter ל being rejected in order to avoid the repetition of similar sounds, we have תְּבִלָּה, which, for reasons already assigned, (Art. 148. 2.) will become תְּבִלָּה. In the same manner we have תְּמַס (for תְּמַס) melting, dissolution, &c. to which many others may be added.

XI. תְּפִקִּיד ; as תְּבִלָּה suffusion (of the eye). To which may be added a few others, reduplicating some of the radical letters ; as, תְּהוֹמָם self-elevation, &c.

It must have appeared, I think, that the forms to which this letter ת is prefixed, are by no means peculiar to the Hithpāhél conjugation, but that they exhibit a great variety of other forms. I cannot help thinking, therefore, that this conjugation owes something to this letter, or to its more perfect form הַת or אַת, while the participle owes nothing whatever to the conjugation.

164. Seventh Class of Hēemanti Nouns, receiving הַת as a prefix.

I. תְּהִיָּחָשׁ ; as, תְּהִיָּחָשׁ (Art. 109.) genealogical computation. So all the infinitives of the Hithpāhél conjugation, due regard being paid to the radical letters composing such words. תְּשַׁתְּחוּיָי my prostrating (2 Kings v. 18), with the pronoun י, seems to be an anomalous word, deformed perhaps by the carelessness of the copyists.

II. תְּהִתְּבַקֵּר caused to be visited ; but perhaps this form never occurs as a noun.

III. תְּהִתְּבַרְוּת ; as, תְּהִתְּבַרְוּת *confederation, &c.**

In a few instances we have had, in the above examples, terminations in הַת, תַת, and וַת, which may be said to be Hēemantic. In these cases, therefore, we have anticipated our next chapter, which is to treat on the Hēemantic postfixed syllables : but, as we could not adduce our examples without bringing in these forms, we shall perhaps be excused.

* But this is perhaps a compound form as before, Art. 87. 2. and note.

LECTURE VIII.

ON THE HEEMANTI LETTERS WHICH ARE POSTFIXED TO WORDS.

165. IT has been stated, (Art. 156. 2.) that, the Hēemantí letters ה, י, ם, ך, and ת, are severally found attached to the ends either of primitive or derived words. The cases in which ה, ת, ות, ית, are found, have already been noticed (Artt. 135. 6, 137. 2, 164.). It will be unnecessary, therefore, to notice them further. We shall now proceed to consider those which end in י, ם, and ך, respectively.

Eighth Class of Hēemantí Nouns ending in י.

166. These nouns ending in י are used to express either persons or things, bearing some relation to the primitives from which they have been derived; and hence they have been termed Relative Nouns by the Arabian Grammarians.* Of this kind are the Patronymic or Gentile nouns of the Grammars of Europe; all of which, must from their nature necessarily be attributive, and, therefore, subject to the variation of the gender (Art. 135.).

2. In endeavouring to account for the form and signification of this class of words, I suppose, as before, that the additional letter (י) is the fragment of some word, which, if used at length, would impart the same signification which (י) now does to words thus augmented. In the Ethiopic we have the trilateral adjunct יי, used for the purpose of forming nouns of this class†; and, occasionally, in the Arabic <sup>2</sup> وي,* which is also further abbreviated into ي, ي†; and this is the augment universally found to prevail in the Hebrew.

الاسم المنسوب

† See Ludolf's Ethiop. Gram., fol. edit., pp. 95. 97.

3. That the meaning attached to the root <sup>13</sup> أوي in Arabic, is suitable to the signification of these words, the following definition of it given by Golius will be sufficient to shew:—“Se recepit com- morandi vel quiescendi ergo, diversatus fuit interdium vel noctu.
 Applying this, then, to any proper name, we shall have both the form and signification proper for these Patronymics; e. g. Ethiopic form ישראלאוי Israelawi: Hebrew and Arabic by contraction,

 nexion, residence, birth, &c. So יהודי (for יהודיה, Art. 75.) a descendant of Judah; and so of others.

4. It may also be considered confirmatory of this conjecture, that these Hebrew nouns, when receiving any asyllabic augment, are generally found with the י doubled by Dāgēsh: as, לויים Levites;
תחתיה below, &c., which are their true forms. See Art. 136. 5. †

5. The following are a few examples, with their primitives:
קנעני a Canaanite, from קנען Canaan; נדידי princely, from נדיד
a prince; רעי pastoral (for רעהי by contraction), from רעה a shepherd; צפוני belonging to the north, from צפון the north.

6. When, however, the primitive word ends in י, the Patronymic is formed by prefixing the definite article only; ‡ as, מושי Mūshī, a son of Merari: המושי one of his descendants; שגני the name of one of the sons of Gad; השגני one of his descendants. So גוני patron; הגוני Gen. xlvi. 24. In one instance ת is prefixed instead of ה, which may have been done for the purpose of avoiding the concurrence of two aspirates: as, תחמוני Takhkēmōnī, 2 Sam. xxiii. 8, from חמוני 1 Chron. xi. 11. We have, however,
מדי for מדוי, a Mede, Dan. xi. 1, from מדי Media.

* See Mr. de Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. p. 239, &c.

† The teshdid which is also found to accompany this י in Arabic, was, perhaps, added originally for the purpose of supplying the defect occasioned by the rejection of one or two letters from its primitive form.

‡ Of this property of the definite article some account will be given hereafter.

7. In forming Patronymics from compounds, two methods have been adopted; one, by adding ך as before, which is regular; the other, by also prefixing the article to the last word in the compound. Examples: 1. בְּנוֹ יְמִינִי a Benjamite; 2. בֵּית הַלְחָמִי the Bethlehemite, 1 Sam. xvii. 58; בֵּית הַשֶּׁמֶשׁׁי the native of Beth Shemesh, from בֵּית שֶׁמֶשׁ; בֵּית הַאֵלִי the native of Bethel; בְּנוֹ הַיְמִינִי the Benjamite, 1 Kings ii. 8.

8. Nouns ending in ך never form the Patronymic by the addition of ך, but by some periphrasis: as, בְּעַלְיִירִיחוֹ the citizens of Jericho, Josh xxiv. 11. So אַנְשֵׁי יְרִחוֹ men of Jericho, Neh. iii. 2; בְּנֵי יְרִחוֹ children of Jericho, Ib. vii. 36; בָּנוֹת שִׁילוֹה daughters of Shiloh, Judg. xxi. 21. In a few instances, נִי is added: as, הַגִּילּוֹנִי Haggilōnī, from גִּלּוֹה Gilōh, 2 Sam. xv. 12, Josh. xv. 51.*

9. The same frequently takes place in compound words: as, בְּנֵי הַרְיָת הָרִים the children of Kiryath Harim, Ezra ii. 25; בְּנֵי עֲזָמֹת the children of Hazmāveth, Ib. ver. 24.

10. Proper names ending in ך are sometimes subject to the same rule: as, אַנְשֵׁי סֹדֹם men of Sodom.

11. In Patronymics derived from compounds, the last only of the compound is sometimes taken: as, אֶרֶץ יְמִינִי, for אֶרֶץ בְּנוֹ יְמִינִי the land of the Benjamite, 1 Sam. ix. 4.†

12. Some primitives ending in ך drop that letter in forming the patronymic: as, הַנְּחָמִי Hannāhamī, Num. xxvi. 40, from נְחָמָן Nāhāmán.

13. In forming Patronymics from dual or plural words, one or other of the following methods is adopted: 1. The word, from which such patronymic is to be derived, is reduced to its primitive form, and then ך is added as before; as, מִצְרַיִם Egypt, primitive מִצְרַיִם, and with ך, מִצְרַיִם an Egyptian. 2. Either יוֹשֵׁב inhabitant, בַּת daughter, or מִן out of, may precede such proper name: as, בַּת יְרוּשָׁלַיִם inhabitant of Jerusalem; Isa. v. 3, בַּת יְרוּשָׁלַיִם daughter of Jerusalem;‡ or יְבִלְיָהּ מִן־יְרוּשָׁלַיִם Jecoliah of Jerusalem, 2 Chron. xxvi. 3.

† These abbreviations are found to take place in most languages. See M. de Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. p. 247. Lud. Gram. Eth., fol. edit., p. 22. Wilkins's Sanscrit Gram., Art. 1174., &c.

‡ But here we have a personification; in the other two cases a periphrasis.

14. In a few instances the primitive is put for the patronymic; which may be considered, either as presenting a metonymy by which the progenitor, &c. is put for the descendant, or by supposing an ellipsis to be made of one of the words בַּת, יוֹשֵׁב, מִן, &c. as given above; as, דַּמְשֵׁק Damascus, for Damascene, Gen. xv. 2; בֵּית הַלְחָמִי for בֵּית לָחֶם 2 Sam. xxiii. 15. So בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל for יַעֲקֹב, בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל for יִשְׂרָאֵל, and so on, passim.

15. Irregularities are occasionally met with in the forms of these words: as, הַגָּרִי a Hagarene, 1 Chron. v. 10, from הַגָּר Hagar, as if the primitive had been a Segolate noun of the form הַגָּרָה; תִּמְנִי Timnite, Judg. xv. 6, for תִּמְנָתִי, primitive תִּמְנָה. So, הַשִּׁלְנִי Numb. xxvi. 20, primitive שִׁלָּה: and הַשִּׁלְנִי, 1 Chron. ix. 5; הָעַמּוֹנִי the Ammonite, the primitive being עַמּוֹן. See 1 Sam. xi. 1, and Gen. xix. 38, from which, however, the collective form עַמּוֹן Ammon has been formed, Ib., and thence probably the Patronymic.

16. For the feminine forms of these nouns, see Art. 136. 5, and for the plurals, Art. 139. The forms taken in construction, or when any of the pronouns are affixed, will be regulated according to the analogy of the word. Art. 143.

17. Another class of nouns ending in י, preceded by (-) or (ט) has been thought to denote excess. These, however, are probably nothing more than nouns in the plural number (Art. 139. 6.). The following are examples: גֹּבֵי a swarm of locusts; חַלּוֹנֵי many windows; בִּילְיִ extremely greedy; שָׂדֵי a plain; שָׂדֵי the Almighty, root שָׂד powerful; אֲדוֹנֵי supreme Lord, from אָדוֹן. These will be considered in the Syntax.

We now proceed to the IXth class of augmented nouns, which take the Hæemanti letter ם at the end.

167. In this class the vowel immediately preceding the final ם is either (ט) or (ו), which induced Hiller to suppose, that the adjunct was הָם, or אֹם, respectively. It is believed that these nouns are intensitive in signification. If then we suppose הָם to be a particle derived from הָמָה, which means tumult, as of a multitude, or noise, as of the waves of the sea, we can easily conceive how the addition of such a particle to any primitive word would make it intensitive in signification.* This will account,

\* Nothing, surely, can be more ridiculous than the opinion of Simonis and others, expressed in his "Arcanum Formarum," (p. 584. 5.), viz.: that the perhaps, for the termination  $\text{אֵי}$ . In the next place, the root  $\text{אֵי}$  does not occur in the Hebrew Bible, but is to be found in the Arabic  $\text{أَمَّ}$ ,  $\text{أَمَّ}$  signifying, he became fat, or corpulent. If, then, we can suppose an abbreviated form of this word to be attached to any other, we shall have the termination  $\text{אֵי}$ , which will also give an intensitive signification to the compound. The following are a few examples: the student may arrange them under their respective measures, if he shall think it necessary to do so.

Tenth Class of Hēemanti Nouns, receiving a final ך.

168. Grammarians are generally agreed, that nouns receiving this letter as a final are intensitive in signification.

This letter is affixed to words simple or augmented, with the vowels (ׂ) or ך; thus  $\text{גֵּרָךְ}$  or  $\text{גֵּרָךְ}$ ; whence we may suppose, that  $\text{גֵּרָךְ}$ , or  $\text{גֵּרָךְ}$ , signifying strength, power, riches, wealth (the primitive form of which will be  $\text{גֵּרָךְ}$ , or  $\text{גֵּרָךְ}$ , Art. 87.) is the root. And hence, also, we may have the form  $\text{גֵּרָךְ}$ , or  $\text{גֵּרָךְ}$ , contracted by Art. 75. to  $\text{גֵּרָךְ}$  or  $\text{גֵּרָךְ}$ , the words from which these terminations may have been taken; and which, added to any other word, would naturally give it an intensitive meaning. Some have also supposed the meaning to be occasionally diminutive,\* which I am inclined to believe is the case in some instances.

Examples.

$\text{אַלְמָנָךְ}$ , fem.  $\text{אַלְמָנָךְ}$  a widow;  $\text{אַתְנָךְ}$  a large gift;  $\text{דִּבְנָךְ}$  (for  $\text{דִּבְנָךְ}$  Art. 73.), root  $\text{דִּבְנָךְ}$  corn; also with the additional  $\text{בֵּיתְךָ}$ ,  $\text{בֵּיתְךָ}$  a great palace.

---

figures of  $\text{אֵי}$  and  $\text{ך}$  being extended, may account for the intensitive meaning of these forms; and that  $\text{אֵי}$ , being inclosed, will give the idea of comprehensiveness, representing as it were a pregnant mother inclosing her offspring within the womb! For it is very probable these words were in use before the letters were invented.

* See the Arcanum Formarum, p. 564.

אַלְמֹן widowhood; אִתְּיוֹן (for אִתְּיוֹן Artt. 73. 96.) frequent entry; אֲרָמוֹן, or הַרְמוֹן a palace; עֲלִיוֹן The Most High. So also with augmented nouns: as, בְּפִחוֹן great confidence; בְּזִיוֹן great contempt; צְמָאוֹן great drought.

In שְׁהַרְגִים lunulæ, Is. iii. 18, and אִישׁוֹן homunculus, i. e. the reflected image of a man in the eye, Deut. xxxii. 10 (from שָׁהַר the moon and אִישׁ a man) we have, perhaps, examples of a diminutive.*

2d. This intensitive letter ׀ is frequently attached to verbs, and has been termed the Nún Paragogic, or Epenthetic. It is found in the Arabic in the same situation, and is termed by the Arabian grammarians, النَّوْنُ التَّكْדِیْمِ The confirmatory Nún; its office is to impart certainty or intensity to the verb, to which it is attached. The same powers have been ascribed to the Hebrew ׀ similarly situated, though it must be confessed, such powers are not always apparent from the context.†

N. B. All words thus augmented, whether the augment is prefixed or postfixed, may be considered as compound words.

On the Reduplicated and otherwise Compounded Words.

169. We shall have no difficulty in perceiving, that, if one word may be qualified or otherwise restricted in its signification by the addition of another, a similar result will be obtained when any word is repeated: and, that the effect will be the same, whether both such words are written out at length, or whether they are combined in one. Both these methods are adopted in the Hebrew. In some cases entire words are repeated; in others they are contracted into one word, by rules presently to be considered. In the first case, we have עֲמוּק עֲמוּק, deep deep, i. e. most deep, Eccl. vii. 24; סוֹבֵב סוֹבֵב turning turning, i. e. continually turning, or changing, Ib. i. 6: לֵב וְלֵב heart and heart, i. e. double hearted, Ps. xii. 3; בְּאֵרוֹת בְּאֵרוֹת wells wells, i. e. many wells, Gen. xiv. 10; מִטָּה מִטָּה rod rod, i. e. rod by rod, Num. xvii. 17. In what signification such reduplicated expressions are to be taken, the context will always be sufficient to determine. This too may be said with respect to compound words: in some instances the force will be augmented, as in superlatives; in others it will be modified; and in some, perhaps, diminished as in the diminutive nouns of other languages.

* We have in the Syriac a diminutive of this form; see Hoffmann's Gram. Syr., p. 251.

† Nun Paragogicum, Verborum personis in Jod et Vau finitis additum, semper esse Emphaticum notat Hottingerus de Officiis Literarum Servil. Analysi Jobi subjectis, § 9. Arcan. Form. p. 564. And Schröder gives the following passage as illustrative of this opinion: 1 Sam. xvii. 25, אֲנָשׁוֹר יִכְבֹּד יַעֲשֶׂה רֶגֶל יַעֲשֶׂה רֶגֶל הַפְּלִיָּה qui percusserit illum, hunc ditabit rex: "ubi," says he, "sonus fortior est, quam si scriptum esset יַכְהִי וְיַעֲשֶׂה רֶגֶל" et יַעֲשֶׂה רֶגֶל &c." R. 168. The true force of this particle will be given hereafter.

2. Let us now come, in the second place, to the rules which have been given for the formation of these reduplicated words.* It has been shewn (Art. 73.) that any one of the אהוי letters, will in certain cases disappear. This will happen in the first class of these reduplicated words, where we have סִמְאָה סִמְאָה for סִמְאָה סִמְאָה, which when compounded would become סִמְאָה־סִמְאָה, and striking out ה by Art. 72, we shall have סִמְאָה־סִמְאָה, which, again, by drawing back the (-) and rejecting the (: ) by Art. 73, we have סִמְאָה־סִמְאָה: and, if we place (·) Dāgēsh in the second Sāmék, either for the sake of euphony, or to compensate for the loss of ה, we shall have סִמְאָה־סִמְאָה for the reduplicated word, meaning, measure by measure, as both the composition of the word and the context require. In some cases, as will presently be seen, the final ה of such words is also rejected. It must be borne in mind by the student, that considerable difference of opinion is found to prevail among grammarians, as to the original roots from which these words have been derived; and, consequently, that great difference of opinion is found to prevail as to their precise meaning.

3. The following are a few examples of the first class of this kind of nouns, which are generally thought to be formed by a reduplication of some word having ה for its final radical letter: e. g. עֲרֵעֵר quite naked, or deserted, from the root עָרַה naked: by some also supposed to mean the juniper, by others the tamarisk, tree; הִשְׁקֵשֵׁת the scales of a fish, from הִשָּׁה peeling; שִׁשְׁשִׁים

* We use the word reduplicated to signify words which have been formed by the reduplication of some primitive word;—compound, to signify those which have been formed by the coalescence of two different words. In this sense Simonis uses the words Geminata and Composita.

exquisite delights, from שָׂעָה looking on (with delight); תִּלְתַּל copiously flowing (hair), from תָּלָה hanging, תַּעֲתָעַים many and great errors, from תָּעָה erring.

4. The second class of reduplicated nouns consists of those combinations derived from primitive words, which have their second and third radical letters the same: as, בְּרִבְרִים most choice (beasts or birds), from בָּרַר selecting; גַּלְגַּל a wheel, sphere, or any thing subject to continual turning about, as chaff, &c. from גָּלַל rolling. And hence גַּלְגֻּלַת the skull; גַּרְגָּר gargarism, gargle; also a grain, or berry, from גָּרַר drawing, &c. to which many more may be added. It has been shewn (Art. 77.), that when the last two letters of any primitive word are the same, one of them may be dropped for the sake of euphony. This rule holds good when such words are combined, and for the same reasons.

5. To this class may be added those reduplicated words, which, in their primitive forms, usually reject a medial ו or י: for here, as in the foregoing examples, we may consider the middle radical letter as rejected for the sake of euphony (Art. 75). Of this sort are the following examples: חֲחָלָה great pain, from חוּל, or חוּל grieving; טֹטְמָה grievous ejection, or captivity, from טוּל casting out; עַפְעָפַיִם eyelids, from עוּף moving quickly, flying; צַפְצָפִים flowing copiously, from צוּף flowing, Ezek. xvii. 5.

6. The third class of reduplicated nouns includes those which are formed by a repetition of the last syllable, or, of the two last letters of the primitive noun: as, הַבְּהָבִים great gifts, from בָּהַב giving, the ו being rejected; אֲדָמָדָם, fem. אֲדָמָדָת reddish, red here and there, having red spots, from אָדָם being red; אֲסַפְסָף mixed collection, or multitude, from אָסַף collecting; הַפְּכָפָה most perverse, from פָּךְ turning over, &c. תַּלְלוּלָה most smooth, i. e. deceiving words, or things, from תָּלַל polishing, smoothing, &c.

7: The fourth class of reduplicated nouns are those which are found to repeat the last radical letter of the primitives, inserting, at the same time, some vowel between the letters so doubled: as, אֲמַלְלָה, or אֲמַלְלָה most languid, from אָמַל anxious; גַּבְנִינִים eminences, great heaps, hills, from גָּבַן gibbous; נְאֻפָּה great or frequent adultery, from נָאֵף committing adultery; נְהַלְוָה a well watered pasture, from נָהַל leading to the water, &c., to which many more might be added.

8. In forming the plurals of these and similar compounds, regard is to be had principally to the analogy of the last component part of the word. In no case can the addition of any increment, whether syllabic or asyllabic, affect a syllable beyond the penultimate of any word. In words, therefore, consisting of a large number of syllables, no change will take place in the vowels beyond the penultimate, and, in many instances, not beyond the ultimate. The only question, then, which can arise must be, as to the change of the ultimate or penultimate vowels of such words. In primitive words, indeed, a greater number of vowels does not exist: and, there, as we have seen, analogy alone can be relied upon. The same is true here. For, first: In all cases, except those in which the second and third radical is the same, upon any asyllabic augment being attached to the word, the preceding vowel must either be perfect or rejected; otherwise the syllable will be incomplete: as, הַבְּהָבִים great gifts, כּוֹכְבֵי stars of —. Here, as the asyllabic ים or י must necessarily take the last consonant of the word in order to be utterable, the preceding vowel must become perfect, or else be rejected. But, if the root had its second and third radical letters the same, and one had been thrown away for the sake of euphony, then, upon any augment being applied, this rejected letter would return, expressed by Dāgēsh forte placed in the terminating letter (Art. 77.): as, זְלִזְלִים worthless super-numerary shoots, from זָלַזַל, the root of which is זָלַל vile, Isaiah xviii. 5.

9. The only question which can now arise is, How will these vowels be affected, when the noun is in the state of construction? Generally speaking, unless there be some reason for retaining a perfect vowel, i. e. when some letter has been retrenched for which compensation ought to be made, and hence a perfect vowel retained, either Sheva, or one of its substitutes, will appear in the penultimate: as, כּוֹכְבֵי the stars of —, &c., not כּוֹכְבֵי. But this can be determined only from a knowledge of the analogy of the word.

10. We shall now give a few examples of each sort of compound words, omitting the classification of Simonis as unnecessary: עֲרָפֶל thick darkness, from עָרַב it became dark, and אָפַל (Arab. افل) the sun set; הִזְקִלוֹ filthy vomiting, from הִיא vomiting, and הִזְלוֹ base; פָּרְשׁוּ widely expanding, from פָּרַשׁ expand, and פָּרְזוּ separating; רִטְפָּשׁ invigorating, refreshing, from רִטַּב moisture, and פָּשׂ increasing, spreading; אֲבַפִּיחַ a melon, from אָבַט Arab. he cast down, and במח nearly the same thing; אֲגַרְמָל a bason, from אָגַר collecting, and מַל blood, Arabic, or as others think מַל den, water; אֲחַשְׁדָּרְפָּנִים chief satraps, according to some, from the Persic, אַחַש price, pre-eminence, and שַׁרְפָּ a satrap; according to others, the chief door keepers, from אַחַש as before, and דַּרְבָּאן door keeper; גְּזַרְזָר treasurer, from גָּזַר γάζα (Pers. کنز or کنج) and זָר or זָרָה (Pers. وار or بار) agent, גְּבִינָה treasury (perhaps the diminutive کنزک or کنجک of the above); מְאוּמָה something, any thing, from אוּמָה quid aut quid; שְׁלֵהֶבְתָּה flame of the Lord, according to some, from שׁ, a Chaldaic particle, להב, or להבת flame, and יה the Lord; according to others, from שׁוֹב inflaming, Syriac, and להבת a flame, and יה as before. Others, again, take the שׁ as derived from the Arabic شهاب, flame, &c. as before. In the list of various readings given by Ben Naphtali, this word is read as two שְׁלֵהֶבֶת יְהוָה, which is probably the ancient way in which it was written. Some of these, as it will be seen, are foreign words: but, as the number of such is few in the Hebrew Bible, and as the Dictionary must be consulted for their signification and etymology, we have thought it unnecessary to investigate their forms and composition any further.

On the Forms and Composition of Nouns adopted as Proper Names.

170. By Proper Names, we understand those words or phrases which have been adopted for the purpose of conveying the ideas of certain specific persons or things. By names of persons are to be understood, names of God, Deities, Angels, Men, &c.; of things, those of kingdoms, cities, towns, villages, mountains, rivers, &c.: as, first, יְהוָה Jehovah; בָּעַל זְבוּב Baal Zevuv; גַּבְרִיאֵל Gavriël; יְהוֹשֻׁעַ Jehoshuah, &c. Second; אַשְׁשֻׁר Ashshur; מִצְרַיִם Egypt; יְרוּשָׁלַיִם Jerusalem, &c. And, in short, any word which is used to designate any specific object, (although the same may, in other instances, be used as an Appellative,) is termed a Proper Name, and is to be construed as such. Lion, for example, is an appellative; and yet it is as often used among us as a proper name, and so of others.

2. Whence it will be seen that occasions may occur, in which it will be extremely difficult to determine whether such word was originally intended to be taken as an appellative, or as a proper name.*

3. In the first place then, Proper names which are purely Hebrew, (for some appear to be of foreign extraction,) are, for the most part, found to follow the analogy of the Appellatives; at others, to present forms unknown to them. Those which are of the same forms with the Appellatives, we need not now notice, as those forms have already been discussed.

4. The simple forms of proper names which are found to differ from those of the appellatives, are, 1st, those which take some form peculiar to the persons of the verbs; and, 2d, those which add ו to the end: as, 1st, יִשְׁבָּק Ishbák, he excelled; יָשׁוּב Yāshúv, he returns, or shall return; יִצְחָר Itzhár, he shines, &c.; and, 2d, as, אֹנֹו Ōnó; יֶרֶחוֹ Yērēkhó, Jericho. A few foreign names are found of the form פְּקֻדָּת Basmath.

5. Names compounded with one or other of the divine names occur very frequently; a circumstance, which, according to Simonis, happens only twice, with respect to the Appellatives; i. e. in אֲרִיאֵל Aríel, and מְאַפְהֵלְיָא Māaphēlyá. Another remarkable circumstance is, that in these compositions the order is sometimes inverted: as, יְהוֹשָׁבֵהָת Yēhōshavhát, for יְהוָה שָׁבֵהָת Shavhát Yēhōváh: which Simonis terms Anastrophe.† This never takes place in the Appellatives. With these exceptions only, the forms of proper names, whether simple or compound, constantly follow those of the Appellatives; the significations of both being ascertained precisely in the same way. It would be superfluous to swell this work with numerous examples; particularly as they may be found in the "Onomastica" of Hiller and Simonis, classed, arranged, and discussed, as far perhaps as the most sanguine enquirer can wish.

6. Having stated what the general rules relating to the formation and composition of Proper Names are, we may now notice a few irregularities which are occasionally found to take place. These may be classed under the heads of, I. Omissions, II. Additions, * Glass. Phil. Sac., pp. 696, 705, 780, &c.

† Onomast. Vet. Test., p. 345.

III. The Transpositions of certain letters or syllables; and, IV. The Changes of certain letters of the same organs.

7. Omissions: and in the first case, of the initial letter of the primitive word; e. g.  $\text{רָם}$  1 Chron. ii. 9, for  $\text{אַרָם}$ , (Art. 84.) Matt. i. 3.  $\text{Αραμ}$ , in the name of a person, Job xxxii. 2; and of a place, 2 Chron. xxii. 5,  $\text{אַרָם}$ . In a compound  $\text{פֶּסֶם דְּמַיִם}$  1 Chron. xi. 13, for  $\text{אַפְסֵם דְּמַיִם}$  1 Sam. xvii. 1. In this last case,  $\text{אַפְסֵם}$  is taken by some as an Appellative:  $\text{דְּיַמָּה}$  is thought by some to be the same with  $\text{אַדּוּם}$  Edúm, i. e. Edom. Others have taken it to be a mystical name, from the signification of the word  $\text{דוּם}$ , to come to silence.

8. In the following instances, a letter has been dropped from the middle of the word: as,  $\text{אַבְיָגַל}$  2 Sam. xvii. 25, for  $\text{אַבְיָגַל}$  1 Chron. ii. 16, (Art. 75.)  $\text{אַרְוֹנָה}$  2 Sam. xxiv. 16, and  $\text{אַרְנָן}$  1 Chron. xxi. 25.  $\text{דְּרַמְשֶׁק}$ , but 2 Chron. xxviii. 5,  $\text{דְּרַמְשֶׁק}$ ;  $\text{יֹרֵב}$ , Gen. xlvi. 13, for which we have  $\text{יֹשׁוֹב}$  1 Chron. vii. 1;  $\text{שִׁפְחָה}$  1 Sam. xvii. 13, is written  $\text{שִׁמְעָה}$  1 Chron. iii. 5, and  $\text{שִׁמוֹעַ}$  2 Sam. v. 14. In the following words a letter has been omitted at the end;  $\text{אַדָּם}$  Josh. iii. 16, which is  $\text{אַדָּמָה}$  Chap. xix. 36;  $\text{קִיר־הַרְשָׁת}$  Is. xvi. 11, and Ib. v. 7,  $\text{קִיר־הַרְשָׁת}$ ;  $\text{אַפְרָת}$  1 Chron. ii. 19;  $\text{אַפְרָתָה}$  Ib. v. 24.

9. Under the head omissions may be noticed those defects which are found to take place in patronymics, &c., derived from compound proper names. Compounds are, in any case, troublesome words on account of their length; but in proper names this is less tolerable than in any other. The consequence has been, most nations have used contractions, by omitting some part or other of the compound word (see Art. 166. 11. note). Hence  $\text{יְמִינִי}$  for  $\text{בְּנֵי־יְמִינִי}$  1 Sam. ix. 1, Jud. xix. 16, and Esth. ii. 5;  $\text{אִישׁ יְמִינִי}$  a man, a Benjamite. So 1 Chron. xx. 5,  $\text{לְהַמִּי}$ , put as some believe for  $\text{בֵּית הַלְהַמִּי}$  Bethlehemite, conf. 2 Sam. xxi. 19;  $\text{רַמַּת לֶחִי}$  Judg. xv. 17, Ib. ver. 9. 14. 19, is written simply  $\text{לְחִי}$ .\*

\* With respect to this last passage, Pilkington has remarked—"The word  $\text{לְחִי}$ , as an Appellative, signifies, a jaw bone; but, as it was also the proper name of the place, where the Philistines met Samson, and where he slew a thousand of them with the jaw bone of an ass, the name also of Ramath-Lehi was given to the place, where he cast away the jaw bone. To consider the word then, as Appellative, in the next verse; and to say that, 'When Samson was thirsty, God clave an hollow place that was in the jaw, and there came water

10. To these may be added, יַעַר Ps. cxxxii. 6; for קַרְיַת יַעָרִים 1 Sam. vii. 1, &c., where the English version has "the fields of the wood;" יְרוּשָׁלַם passim, is written שָׁלַם Ps. lxxvi. 3; Bethlehem, לְחָם 1 Chron. iv. 22; Bethaven, Hos. x. 5, is אָוֹן ver. 8.

11. Some additions which are peculiar to proper names have already been given (No. 8.). We now come to the transposition of letters or syllables: אֱלֵיעָם 2 Sam. xi. 3, is עֵמִיאל 1 Chron. iii. 5, in which the component parts of the compound change places by the Anastrophe, as above noticed (No. 5.); יְהוֹזָבָב 2 Kings xxiv. 6, 8, is יְכִנְזָבָב 1 Chron. iii. 16; and, by omission, with the addition of י, כְּנִיחוּי Jer. xxii. 24; תְּמַנְת־סָרַח Josh. xxiv. 30, is תְּמַנְת־הָרִים Judg. ii. 9; חוּשָׁה 1 Chron. iv. 4, but Ib. 11, שׁוּהָה. So בְּטַח 2 Sam. viii. 8, is written מְבַתַח 1 Chron. xviii. 8; to which some others might be added. According to Hiller,* examples of this kind are very numerous: but here, as the significations adduced by him are grounded on conjectural etymologies, little reliance can be placed on them.

12. We shall now give a few examples, in which the letters of the same organ have taken place one of another (Art. 78.): פְּרָאֲדָה 2 Kings xx. 12, written מְרָאֲדָה Isa. xxxix. 1, and מְרֹדָה 2 Kings xxv. 27, Jer. i. 2. In the last instance, a quiescent א is also omitted (Art. 72.); עֶכָו Josh. vii. 18, written עֶכָר 1 Chron. ii. 7, and to this last allusion is made in the text; בַּת־שֶׁבַע 2 Sam. xi. 3, and בַּת־שׁוּעַ 1 Chron. iii. 5; נְבוּכַדְנֶאֱצַר Dan. i. 1; נְבוּכַדְרֶאֱצַר Jer. xxi. 2; נָף Is. xix. 13, and נָף Hos. ix. 6, Memphis. Several changes of ד and ר may be observed in the words Khemdán Gen. xxxvi. 26; Khemrán 1 Chron. i. 41; Dōdānīm Gen. x. 4, is given Rōdānīm 1 Chron. i. 7; Rīpháth Gen. x. 3, is Dīpháth 1 Chron. i. 6; Děhūél Num. i. 14, is Rěhūél Ib. ii. 14; Hādad-Hézer 2 Sam. viii. 3, is Hādar-Hézer 1 Chron. xviii. 5. These letters, although not of the same organ, thereout,' must be through want of common attention; because, they immediately subjoin, 'Wherefore he called the name thereof En hakkore, (q. d. The well of him that called,) which is in Lehi, unto this day.'—Such mistakes as these give wrong ideas to the ignorant; and furnish the scoffers with matter of ridicule."—"The error indeed, is corrected in the margin, which hath Lehi, &c."—Remarks upon several passages of Scripture, &c., by Matthew Pilkington, Cambridge, 1759, p. 157.

are found in other languages frequently interchanged. Their change in Hebrew has been accounted for, by the supposition of the Scribes having mistaken the form of the one for that of the other, which is likely enough to have been the case. I think also, that confusion may have arisen from their similarity of sound, which we find has sometimes taken place in other languages.

13. It may not be amiss to offer a few remarks here on those proper names, which are found to end in (י) Yód, not only because their number is very considerable, but also, because they afford some curious information on the subject of ancient Hebrew theology.

14. These, according to Hiller,* may be classed under four heads.

First, Those which may be termed Denominatives, on account of some particular circumstance being alluded to, when they were first given: as, לְוִי Lēví, meaning Conjunctive, see Gen. xxix. 34. To which may be added all Patronymics used as proper names.

Secondly, Words found in a mutilated state, which were originally composed of one or other of the Divine names: as, הַלְלָנִי for הַלְלֵי ה' or הַלְלֵי הוּא, signifying, the Lord (is) a portion. So נִצְרָה for נִצְרֵי ה' stripped of God; to which many others might be added. The intervening י Yod, however, is in many cases allowed by all to be nothing more than a sort of connecting letter, as in the case of עֲבָדֵי אֱלֹהִים for עֲבָדֵי אֱלֹהִים servant of God. This method of compounding the Divine name with other words, for the purpose of forming proper names, is certainly of great antiquity among the Jews, and may safely be appealed to in proof of the position, that they never did, as a nation, acknowledge any other God, than that urged upon their notice by the last prophet. Whether we can extract from it the fact, that they also understood the doctrine of the Holy Trinity, of the Immutability, Invisibility, Incomprehensibility, and of the other attributes of the Deity, as known and taught among ourselves now, does not seem to be quite so clear as Hiller will have it.† It is also worthy of notice, that the names given to individuals among the Babylonians, and other nations contiguous to the Jews, were, for the most part, either the names of their idols, or compounds including one or other of their titles. The same practice is found to prevail among the pagans of the present day.

† Ib., pp. 228, 229.

15. Thirdly, Yod is said to be paragogic when found attached to substantives used as proper names: as, רֹמְמָהּי עֶזְרָא 1 Chron. xxv. 4. 31; יְדִרְעָי Numb. xxi. 33: יְיִן גְּדִי Josh. xv. 62, &c.

16. Fourthly, Yod is thought to be the pronoun of the 1st person singular in the following and similar examples: מִלֹּחֶמֶי 1 Chron. xxv. 4; גְּדִלְתָי Ib. verr. 4. 29.

17. Having said thus much on the analogy and irregularities found to prevail in the forms of proper names, and referred the Student to those writers who have treated these subjects at great length, we shall now offer a few remarks; 1. On the persons by whom they were given, and the circumstances with which they were connected: and, 2, On the various names sometimes found attached to persons or places, which has by some been termed Polyonymia.

18. With respect to the persons by whom proper names have been imposed, they are various, as likewise have been the occasions on which they have been given. In some instances God himself gave the name; in others, the Father, Mother, or some one or other of the kindred.

Of the first, examples may be found in Gen. xvi. 11, xvii. 19, 1 Kings xiii. 2, 1 Chron. xxii. 9, Matt. i. 21, Luke i. 13, &c. Of the second and third,* examples occur very frequently; and of the last, Luke i. 59, may suffice.†

19. The principal causes or circumstances connected with the imposition of proper names amount, according to Simonis, to fifteen.‡ These, however, may all be reduced to the original number assumed by Glassius, which is two.§ “ 1. κατ’ ἔσω, vel ratione etymi et significationis, ejusque fundamenti. 2. κατ’ ἔξω, vel ratione extensionis ad alia, et communionis.”

20. In the first place, proper names both of men and places, were first given with reference to some event, either past, present, or future, with regard to such person or place.

§ Append. Gram., Tract. iii. p. 709, Ed. Dathe.

21. Of the first sort, are the following: Gen. xvii. 17, 19, יִצְחָק Isaac, so called on account of Abraham's smiling* upon receiving the promise of his birth; Exod. ii. 10, Moses (מֹשֶׁה) is so called on account of his having been taken out of the water, as the text shews, whether the word itself be Egyptian or Hebrew; for, on this subject learned men differ.

I Sam. iv. 21, Ī-kāvód (אֵי קָבוֹד) where is the glory? on account of the ark of the covenant having been taken.

22. Secondly; Of names taken from present circumstances, the following are examples: Gen. iv. 2, הַבֵּל vanity, on account, as it has been thought, of the vanity and instability of all human things, which had been occasioned by the fall; Gen. iv. 25, Seth (שֵׁת) because God had placed him in the situation of Abel, who had been murdered by Cain; Gen. xxv. 25, Esau (עֵשָׂו), whether we deduce it from עֲשֵׂי עֲשִׂי, as Dathe will have it, which signifies to cover, &c., or from עֲתִי עֲתָא to have long hair, after Simonis; Ib. ver. 26, Jacob, יַעֲקֹב from יַעֲקֹב the heel, because he took hold of his brother's heel at the time of his birth.

23. The following names appear to have been given with reference to something which was to take place afterwards: Gen. iii. 20, Eve (חַוְוָה), because she was to be the mother of all who should live; Gen. v. 29, Noah (נוֹחַ), because he was to be the means of consoling, or giving rest to, the true believers. In this case, the verb used to explain the proper name is not the same with that included in the name itself, which signifies quiet, rest, &c. The only thing intended by the sacred Writer seems to be on this, as on many other occasions, to give the general sense, and not the exact etymology, of the word.

24. The following are examples of names of places given with reference to certain present events.

Gen. iv. 16, Nód (נֹד) is the place in which Cain is said to have resided, after he had been driven out from the presence of God, the meaning of which is wandering or wanderer.

Gen. xi. 9, Babel (בָּבֶל) was so called on account of the confusion which took place there, from בָּבֶל־בָּל, a reduplicated form of בָּלַל to mix, confound, &c. which, by contraction, will become בָּבֶל.

* "Risus Abrahæ exultatio est gratulantis, non irrisio diffidentis." Eucherius apud Glass. Append. Gram., Tract. iii: p. 711.

Gen. xxviii. 19, Bethel (בֵּית־אֵל) was so called by Jacob, because he deemed it worthy to be called the house of God, on account of the vision he saw there. Similar examples are to be found, Gen. xxxii. 3, with respect to Mākhānāim; Ib. xxxi. 47, Galeed; John v. 2, where Bethesda is intended to point out the favour of God, exerted at that place, as in a house of mercy. In Exod. xv. and Num. xxxiii. we have several examples of names thus given to the different stations in the wilderness, at which the Israelites halted.

It should be observed, that in writing Hebrew names in the Greek letters, the aspirates are frequently omitted: as, Ἑσράμ, not Χεσράμ; Ναασσών, not Ναχσών; and so of others. See Art. 9. note.

LECTURE IX.

ON THE SEPARABLE AND INSEPARABLE PARTICLES.

171. These are nothing more than words, or fragments of words, attached to others for the purpose of qualifying or otherwise restricting them; and they are written either separately, or together forming one compound word, as usage may require. In this point of view, therefore, they may be classed under one or other of the forms of nouns already detailed; but, as they occur frequently, and exert a very considerable influence on the force and bearing of the context, they deserve a separate consideration.

2. By these Particles are meant, words used occasionally as Pronouns, Adverbs, Prepositions, Conjunctions, or Interjections. We say occasionally, because some of them will sometimes fill one or more of these offices, as the context shall require, just as similar words often do in our own language.

3. That the Separable Prepositions are words of this kind, no doubt will remain when we consider, that in many instances they actually present all the peculiarities of nouns put in the state of construction: as, בְּדִי-רֵיק for vanity, or in sufficientiam vanitatis,* Jer. li. 58; so בֵּין הַמַּיִם between the waters, Gen. i. 7; † or, distinctio aquarum: וַי (for וַיְהִי) being the absolute form in the one case, and בֵּין in the other, which in construction regularly become וַי and בֵּין respectively (Art. 143. 6.). And, again, words preceding these particles ‡ are often found taking the forms proper for the state of construction: as, בּו חוֹסֵי Ps. ii. 12; אֶת-רֵצֵן מְשׁוֹשׁ Delight of Remin Is. viii. 6, &c., which shews that they are nouns.

4. In the Arabic and Ethiopic dialects, in each of which we have a peculiarity of termination for the state of construction, these particles are clearly marked as being in that state: as, in the Arabic, أمام المسجد before the mosque, (i. e. pars. anterior templi), where the first word loses its tanwīn, and the last is put in the genitive case. So in the Ethiopic, ግዛት : ለግዛት : to, or towards, heaven; where the first word only has this mark. And, generally, words of this kind, whether conjunctions, prepositions, or adverbs, will be found with the termination proper for construction, when they are intended to be so understood: and without it, when not so intended.

With respect to the adverbs, as they can be known to be such only from the situations in which they are found, and may consist of any form of word suitable to the sense required, something will be said on their character and use when we come to the syntax.

‡ These particles are ב, כ, ל, מ or מִן, אֶל, אֶת, עַל, בְּלִתִּי, Glass. Phil. Sacr., p. 80, &c. Storr. Observ., p. 105.

5. If then these particles were originally nouns, it is likely we should find them exhibiting the simple and augmented forms peculiar to nouns; and such is actually the case, as the following examples will evince. Segolates: מָרָם not yet; אֶצֶל near, at; נֶכַח before, in presence of; הֵלֹם here, hither; הֵן only; אֵל,* by no means. Primitive nouns not Segolate: as, יוֹתֵר more; סָבִיב round about; מְהֵרָה (fem.) quickly, soon; רַבָּה (root רבב) much; זוּלָתָה besides, to which many others may be added.

The following are forms augmented by one or other of the letters termed הַאֲמַנְתִּי (Art. 156.); פְּתָאִים suddenly, immediately; חֲנָם gratis, freely (Art. 167.); אִילָי perhaps, which is probably a compound of או לי (Arab. أو لو); אַחֲרֵי (for אַחֲרָה) after, afterwards. Art. 109.

6. Many of these particles are found in the plural number, (a sufficient proof, if any were wanting, that they are nouns); as, כִּיּוֹ, fem. בֵּינָה distinction, between, pl. בֵּינָיִם, and בֵּינֹתַי. So masc. סָבִיב, fem. סְבִיבָה, pl. סְבִיבוֹת surroundings, enclosures, adv. or prep. round about; אַחֲרֵי, pl. אַחֲרָיִם, and, in construction, אַחֲרֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ after the king, q. d. subsequentionibus regis.

7. In many instances these words are found in a compound state: as, לְמַעַן (comp. of לְ, for לוי, and מען, of מ and עָנָה answer,) on account of, because of, &c.; מִפְּנֵי (of מן and פָּנִים) because of; בְּלֶעַד, בְּלֶעַדִּי, or מִבְּלֶעַדִּי besides, except: and, further, with another particle, הֲמִבְּלֶעַדִּי whether besides? In this last case, the simplest form בְּלֶעַד, is probably a compound of three primitives, viz. of עד usque ad, &c. ל, and ב, which are used as prepositions. In some of the others, also, we have the preposition מ, and the interrogative particle ה, with the word also put in the plural number and in the form proper for construction.

8. In some cases several of these words will be found construed

* This word is probably an abridged form of אֵלֶּה excretion, thence, deprecation, prohibition, or the like; or, from one or other of the Cognate roots, אֵל, אול, אלל, which will afford similar significations. See these roots in Castell and Simonis.

† בֵּל proprie defectus, sed in particulam abit .. notans non. Simonis Lex. sub voce בָּלָה attritus fuit. I hope to throw some additional light on these particles in my Hebrew Lexicon. 725.

together and qualifying one another; and, in all of these, those capable of receiving any variation from the state of construction, will invariably take that form. Of this sort are the following: עַד אֵין until...not; עַד הִנֵּה, and contracted, עֲדֹן and עַדְנָה Eccles. iv. 2, 3; עַד כֵּן, עַד כִּן hitherto; עַד מְאֹד to excess; עַד מְתֵי How long? Usquequo? עַד עַתָּה until now, εἰς τοῦ νῦν; עַד פִּי, עַד אֲשֶׁר אִם, עַד אֲשֶׁר, עַד אֲשֶׁר to the summit; עַד לְמַעְלָה until; עַד פְּלִמֵי אִם unless; עַד אִם לֹא if not; עַד כֵּן not so; עַד כֵּן even so; עַד לְבַד מִן and עַד מִלְבַּד besides, except, &c.

9. These particles are also found in construction with the pronouns, sometimes in the singular, at others in the plural, number: as, עִינֵי between thee; עִינֵינוּ, and fem. עִינֵינוּ between us. So עִינֵיהֶם near them; עַל מַעְנֵךְ on account of thee; אֵינֶם, and אֵינֵמוּ they are not. The following, when in the plural number only, take the affixed pronouns singular or plural, viz. אַחֲרַי after; אַחֲרֵיךְ after thee; עַל to; עַל above, upon; עַד to; בְּלֶעַד besides; and, according to Schræderus, אַשְׁרֵי the blessings of! לְפָנֵם before; עַל מַעְנֵם on account of.

10. The pronominal affixes attached to some of these particles differ, in some respects, from those usually attached to nouns: e. g. תַּחְתָּי under or beneath me, for תַּחְתֵּי behold me; תַּחְתָּיו behold him; עִמָּהֶם with them; אֶתְהֶם masc. and אֶתְהֶן fem. them, or as it respects them, for אִתָּם, or אִתָּן.

11. The particle אֵת, put before any noun which is the object of some verb in the sentence, and used apparently for the purpose of pointing out this particular, appears in three different forms when connected with the pronouns, which Schræderus thinks has arisen from the root's originally presenting three cognate forms, viz. אֵתָהּ, אֵתָהּ, or אֵתָהּ *to proceed, come, &c.**

* D. Kimchi has remarked in the Michlol, (fol. רנא verso) כמו שתאמר ראובן הרג את שמעון לא נודע מי ההורג ומי ההרוג וכשתאמר ראובן הרג את שמעון הנה מלת את נופל על הפועל ונודע כי שמעון הוא ההרוג לפיכך בדבר שהוא מבואר מי הפועל והפעול לא הוצרכו למלת את: So, should you say, Reuben slew Simeon, it would not be known who was the slayer, or who the slain. But when you say Reuben slew Simeon; (i. e. Simeonem), the particle את points out the objective case, and it is known that Simeon is the person slain. In like manner, in a matter in which the agent and patient are evident, the particle את is unnecessary.

From the first we have אַתְּכֶם you; אֹתָהֶם them, masc. אֹתָהֶן them, fem. From the second, אִתִּי with me; אִתְּךָ with thee, masc., אִתְּךָ id. fem.; אִתּוֹ with him; אִתָּהּ with her; אִתָּנוּ with us; אִתְּכֶם with you; אִתָּם with them. From the third, אִתִּי me, אִתְּךָ thee, or with thee; אִתְּךָ thee, or with thee; אִתּוֹ him, or with him. So אִתָּהּ, אִתָּנוּ, אִתְּכֶם, אִתְּהֶן, אִתָּם, אִתְּהֶן, or אִתָּן. In all which cases, coming to, as it respects, or the like, will give the sense of the particle.

12. Some of these particles take (ט) as the vowel of union before the affixed pronouns כִּי and הִי: as, עִמָּנוּ with us; אִתָּנוּ id.; אִתָּנוּ us, or with us; אִתְּךָ with thee, fem. אִתְּךָ; and אִתְּךָ id. So הִנֵּה behold thee, fem.; עוּדָה hitherto thou, fem.; עִמָּךָ with thee, fem.; עִמָּכֶם with you, masc.; עִמָּהֶם with them, masc.

13. The preposition מִן out, out of, apparently from the Arabic root مَنَن cut, doubles the כ by Dāgēsh, whenever any one of the pronouns is affixed: as, מִמֵּנִי or מִמֵּנִי from me; מִמֵּהוּ or מִמֵּהוּ (for מִמֵּהוּ) from him; מִמֵּהֶם from them. But more frequently the root assumes a reduplicated form, and drops its final letter: as, מִמֵּן for מִמֵּנִי (Art. 76.), and, with the affixed pronouns, מִמֵּנִי (for מִמֵּנִי) from me; מִמֵּנְךָ from thee; מִמֵּנֵהוּ from him; מִמֵּנֶיהָ from her; מִמֵּנֵנוּ from us: and, by a further abbreviation, מִמֵּנְךָ from thee, masc.; and מִמֵּנְךָ from thee, fem.

14. The other prepositions take the affixed pronouns regularly, and, for the most part, in the plural number: as, אֵלַי to, towards, pl. אֵלַי to me; עָלַי upon, against, plural עָלֶיךָ upon, or against thee; עַד to, usque ad, plural עַדָּיו to him; בְּעַדָּי besides; בְּעַדָּי besides thee. With the grave affix: אֵלֵיכֶם to you; עָלֵיהֶם upon them.

15. The remaining prepositions, are בְּעִבְרֵי on account of; בְּעַד by, through; חוּץ without, foràs; לְפָנַי before, in front of; מִבֵּין

This rule, however, is not universally true, as we shall see when we come to the syntax. Similar to this is the doctrine taught by the Persian Grammarians, on the use of the particle ل, (originally perhaps اَل, way), for where, according to Mr. Lumsden, there would be a difficulty in ascertaining from the context, which is the objective case to the verb, this particle is added; and, when it is not so, the particle is always to be omitted. Pers. Gram., vol. ii. p. 202. My edition (9th) of Sir Wm. Jones's Pers. Gram., p. 118.

towards, over against; עָבַר on this side, beyond (properly, passage); נִגַּד and נִבְּל before, in front of.

On the Inseparable Particles.

172. Having laid down the forms, and given some examples of construction, of the Separable particles, we now come to those which have been termed Inseparable. These have been termed inseparable, because, as many of them are no longer found extant in their original and complete forms, but presenting one single letter only, they are always prefixed to some other word. They are all comprehended in the technical terms, מֹשֶׁה וְכָלֵב, Moses and Caleb.

2. The first (מ) is regularly prefixed to nouns with the imperfect vowel (·) Khīrik, and consequently inserting a Dāgēsh forte in the following letter: as, מִן־הַדֶּרֶךְ from, or out of, the way. This word when written at length is מִן, probably from מִנֵּן, signifying, according to Storr, cutting off, &c.* This Dāgēsh, therefore, may be considered as a compensation for the loss of the letter נ (Art. 76.).

3. Dāgēsh, however, is frequently omitted when the following word commences with (:): as, מִגְּבוּרָה from greatness; מִיְמִינוֹ from his right hand (for מִיְמִינוֹ Art. 87. 5.). Under this rule Schroederus places the word לְמַבְרָאֵשׁוּנָה thence, from the beginning, 1 Chron. xv. 13. But here, the מ prefixed is probably a part of הַּ which, what, or the like.

4. But when any letter incapable of receiving Dāgēsh follows, (Art. 109.) a compensation is made, either explicitly, or implicitly: i. e. either, 1st, by putting the vowel (·) instead of Khīrik; or, 2dly, by considering the following letter as doubled: as, 1st. מֵאִישׁ (for מֵאִישׁ) from a man; מֵרָשָׁע (for מֵרָשָׁע) from a wicked (man); or, 2dly, מֵחַוֵּט (for מֵחַוֵּט) from a thread.

5. The particle שׁ, which is an abbreviation of מִשֶּׁר who, what, &c. will be considered with the demonstrative pronouns; where the use of the inseparable particle הַ will also be shewn.

* See last Art. No. 13.

On the Particle ו and, but, moreover, &c.

173. This particle is probably a fragment of the word ארה, Syriac אֹרַם, or Arabic اَرَى, to augment, connect, &c.: its augmented form is אֲרֵה desiring wealth, connection, or the like: and, as a noun וְ a hook, nail, or any thing by which one thing is connected with another. Hence, it is used as a conjunction, and is capable of all the variety of meaning to which such words are subject.

2. This particle is generally prefixed to words with (:): as, קָרָא וְאָמַר he called and said; שְׂפָחָהּ וְעַבְדָּהּ a servant maid and man.

3. The Shěvâ, however, is liable to certain changes. When the word, to which ו is attached, commences also with Shěvâ, this ו takes the vowel Shūrék: as, וּלְכוּ go ye, not וְלְכוּ (Art. 106. 1.): וּלְמַלְכָּהּ* and to, or for, the king, not וְלְמַלְכָּהּ or וְלְמַלְכָּהּ.

4. The same change takes place, whenever any one of the labial letters (בּוּמָה) immediately follows: as, וּבְגָדָהּ and the garment, not וְבְגָדָהּ. There are, however, some exceptions: as, וְבָהּ and void; וּבָשׁוּ and they blushed, &c.

5. When the letter ׀ with (: ) follows, a contraction will take place (Art. 87. 5.): as, וַיְחִי (for וַיְחִי׀ or וַיְחִי׀) and he shall live; וַיְמִינָם (for וַיְמִינָם׀) and their right hand. In a few cases we have (׀) in this place: as, וַיְהִי׀ and let him be.

6. Any word beginning with one of the substitutes of Shěvâ, will prefix ו with the correspondent imperfect vowel (Art. 107.): as, וָאֲנִי and I; וַאֲמַתָּהּ and truth, &c.

7. In some instances of this kind, however, we find Shūrék: as, וְזָהָבִי and gold, Gen. ii. 12; וַאֲצַעֲקֵנִי and cry thou (fem.), Jer. xxii. 20.

8. When the word commences with an א a contraction is often found to take place: as, וְאֲדֹנָי and my Lord (for וְאֲדֹנָי׀); so וְאֱלֹהִים and God (for וְאֱלֹהִים׀), Art. 87. 5.

9. Monosyllables, and dissyllables having the accent on the penultima, will generally prefix this particle with (׀): as, וְסוּסִים and * Kimchi is of opinion, that in these cases the letter א is to be considered as dropped, and that we should read אֲרֵה universally.

a horse; וְאֵיל and a ram. To this, however, there are many exceptions: as, וְשׂוֹר and an ox; וְרֶכֶב and a chariot.

10. This particle has been supposed to have the power of changing the tenses of the verb, i. e. of making the preterite tense future, and the future preterite, and hence has been termed Van Conversivum. From what will be said on the doctrine of the tenses of the verbs by and bye it will appear, that the conversive power supposed to exist in this particle is neither necessary nor true. When it takes the vowel Pāthákh it ought perhaps to be considered as illative, corresponding to the Arabic فَ then, therefore, &c., which is regularly so: when it takes (:), as being merely conjunctive (p. 50, note).

11. In some cases when accompanied by (-), the Dāgēsh of the following letter, as also the Euphonic accent, one or other of which is necessary to complete the syllable, is dropped, probably by the negligence of the scribes: as, וַיְקַדֵּשׁ and he consecrated, Gen. ii. 3, for וַיְקַדֵּשׁ, or with the accent וַיְקַדֵּשׁ.

12. In the first person singular of the present tense this particle takes (τ): as, וְאֶשְׁמַע and I hear.

174. The remaining particles ב, כ, and ל, signifying, in, according to, to, or the like, respectively, may be easily traced to their origin as nouns. The first is probably a fragment of the word בוא entering into, &c., which is found in Arabic under the forms of بوي he descended to his house, lodging, &c.; بَاء or بَا and in Ethiopic በጋል: meaning nearly the same thing.

2. With respect to the second (כ) signifying like, as, just as, &c., it is probably a fragment of some primitive noun, from which we also have the words כה thus; כי for, so; כון and כן thus. For the etymology of ל see Art. 171. 7.

3. These particles are regularly prefixed with (:); as, בְּדֶרֶךְ in a way; כְּעֵץ like a tree; לְאָרֶץ to earth.

If the word to which either of them is to be prefixed, have (:), the particle will regularly take (.) Khīrīk

(Art. 106. 1.): as, בְּמִנְלָה in the volume; כְּכֵלִי like a vessel; לְבָנוֹ to his son.

4. But, when any one of the substitutes of Shévá happens to be at the beginning of such word, the prefix will take the correspondent imperfect vowel (Art. 107.): as, בְּחֵלוֹם in a dream; כְּאֹכֵל like eating, &c.

5. When an ס happens to be the first letter, a contraction generally takes place: as, לְאֹדֹנִי (for לְאֹדֹנִי) to my Lord; לְאֱלֹהִים (for לְאֱלֹהִים) to God (Art. 87. 5.).

6. But when prefixed to monosyllables, or to dissyllables having the accent in the penultimate, they generally take (ט) as above (Art. 173. 9.); e. g. בְּזֶה in this; כְּאֵלֶּה like these; לְנֶצַח for ever. So with verbal nouns or Infinitives, when not in construction with other nouns: as, לְקוּם for standing; לְלַכּוֹת for walking.

7. The following affixed pronouns are often found attached to these particles: viz. בִּי in me; בָּנוּ in us; בְּךָ in thee, masc.; בְּךָ id. fem.; בְּכֶם in you, masc.; בְּכֶן id. fem.; בּוֹ in him, masc.; בָּהּ in her; בְּהֶם (or Art. 75.) בָּם in them, masc.; בְּהֶן id. fem.

8. The particle ל receives the pronouns in the same manner; but כ is so found in only two instances; viz. כְּכֶם like you, and כְּהֶם like them. When it is necessary to use the pronouns with כ, the paragogic particle מוֹ is generally introduced thus: כְּמוֹנִי like me; כְּמוֹנוּ like us; כְּמוֹךָ like thee; כְּמוֹכֶם like you; כְּמוֹהוּ like him; כְּמוֹהָ like her; כְּמוֹהֶם like them.

9. When either of the particles ב, כ, or ל, is prefixed to a noun with the definite article, the article is for the most part rejected (Art. 73.) and the particle takes its vowel: as, בְּבַיִת in the house (for בַּבַּיִת); כְּפֶאִישׁ like the man (for כַּפֶּאִישׁ); לְחֹדֶשׁ for the month (for לְחֹדֶשׁ); בְּחֶרֶב in the dry (land, for בַּחֶרֶב Art. 87. 6.). Exceptions: בְּחַדְרָה in the way, Neh. ix. 19: לְהָעָם to the people, 2 Chron. x. 7; כְּחַלְנוֹת like the windows, Ezek. xl. 25; כְּחָכְמָן like the wise man, Eccles. viii. 1.

10. This contraction, moreover, sometimes takes place in those Infinitives which commence with a servile ה: as, כְּפִשָׁל (for כַּפִּשָׁל) in being impelled, Prov. xxiv. 17; לְשָׁמִיעַ (for לְשָׁמִיעַ) for causing to hear, Ps. xxvi. 7; לְבִיא (for לְבִיא) for bringing, Jer. xxxix. 7, &c., which is most usual in the Chaldee.

175. To the preceding inseparable particles may be added others, which however are always found attached to the end, never to the beginning, of words; and for the purpose most probably, of adding something to the force of the passages in which they are found. These were at first, perhaps, nouns of one form or other just as the prepositions were, but which, in after times, were abbreviated for the sake of convenience.

2. These letters or syllables, then, (for they are now nothing more, have been termed paragogic, rather, I suppose, for the purpose of giving them a name, than for pointing out either their nature or their use), consist of one or other of the letters אהוין, which is found appended to words, either for the purpose of giving emphasis to the meaning, of promoting euphony, or for some other reason.

3. The letter א is mostly pleonastic, and is found attached to words terminating in the vowel (ַ) or ו: as אַתִּיקִיָּהּ its galleries (for אִתִּיקִיָּהּ), Ezek. xli. 15; אֵלֶּהֶם הָיְתָה לָבֹא they who went (for הָיְתָה לָבֹא), Josh. x. 24; אָבֹנָה they were willing, Isai. xxviii. 12; יִבְשׁוּןָ they shall be carried, Jer. x. 5. So יְהוּא for יְהוּ (for יְהוּ, Art. 87. 2.) he shall be, Eccl. xi. 3; also הוּא instead of הוּ he, Arab. هُوَ; לוּא for לוּ Arab. لَوْ would to God, utinam, &c., and so of others.*

4. The use of ה as a paragogic letter is very frequent. In some cases it is thought to augment the signification, in others to be merely pleonastic. On some occasions it is found appended to words ending in a consonant, with (ר); on others, it is preceded by (ו) or (ו): and in these it becomes quiescent: as, אִסְפָּרָה (from אִסְפָּר) I will recount, or, let me recount, Ps. ii. 7; אֶרֶץ (from אָרֶץ) the earth; הִנֵּה from הִן behold; אֵלֶּה (from אֵל) these.

* This prevails in the Arabic, whence Schultens comes to the conclusion, that it is an ancient manner of writing: others, that it is a mere Arabism.

5. It is attached to verbs. 1st, to the Infinitive or Verbal noun; 2d, to both the tenses; 3d, to the second person singular masculine of the Imperative; and 4th, to the participles: e. g. 1st. פָּשַׁטָּה (for פָּשַׁט) spoiling; רָגַזָּה (for רָגַז) shaking, Isa. xxxii. 11; שָׁאַלָּה (for שָׁאַל) asking, Isa. vii. 11, &c. 2d. נָחָה (for נָח) he rested, Isa. vii. 2; לָגָה (for לָן) he lodged, Zech. v. 4; הַשְׁלַכְתֶּנָּה (for הַשְׁלַכְתֶּן) ye cast; נִשְׂרָפָה (for נִשְׂרַף) let us burn, Gen. xi. 3; יִדְשָׁנָה (for יִדְשֵׁן) he will reduce to ashes, Ps. xx. 4, &c.*

6. Verbs ending in ה, usually drop that letter upon receiving the paragogic ה: as, אֲשַׁעְהָה (for אֲשַׁעְהָה Art. 75.) I will look on, observe, Ps. cxix. 117. So נִשְׁתַּעְהָה (for נִשְׁתַּעְהָה) we will observe, Isa. xli. 23. This last example Schröderus puts under the form of apocope, which appears to me to be unnecessary and erroneous.

7. With Imperatives: as, שִׁכְבָּה repose thou (for שִׁכַּב), Gen. xxxix. 7: אִסְפָּה (for אִסַּף) collect, Num. xi. 16: שָׁמְרָה (for שָׁמַר) keep, Ps. xxv. 20; הִקְשִׁיבָה (for הִקְשִׁיב) attend, Ps. v. 3; לֵךְ (for לֵךְ), and with ה omitted לֵךְ go, Num. xxiii. 13. So אֶפְבְּדָה (for אֶפְבְּדָה, from אֶפְבְּד) I will be honoured, Hag. i. 8.

5. With Participles: as, בֹּעֶרָה (from בֹּעַר) burning, Hos. vii. 4; נִמְלָטָה (from נִמְלָט) escaped, Jer. xlvi. 19.

8. Nouns singular of both genders, as also nouns masculine of the dual and plural numbers, will occasionally receive a paragogic ה, still preserving the accent on the originally accentuated syllable: as, לַיְלָה (from לַיִל) the night; עוֹלָתָה (from עוֹלָה) iniquity; מִצְרַיִם (from מִצְרַיִם) Egypt; יְמֵימָה (from יְמֵים) days. Any noun, however, ending in an imperfect vowel on account of construction (Art. 143. 3.), may, when the paragogic ה is added, take the accent on the last syllable: as, מִזְרְחָהּ (from מִזְרַח, in construction (מִזְרַח) the rising of the sun, Deut. iv. 41, &c. In this case, such terminating vowel will suffer no change on account of the state of construction: as, מִזְרְחָהּ שְׁמֶשׁ, above: אֶרֶץ הַנֶּגֶב the southern country, Gen. xx. 1; הַאֹהֶלֶת שָׂרָה the tent of Sarah, Gen. xxiv. 67.

9. This particle is occasionally added to the pronouns, whether separate or affixed: as, 1st, אַתְּנָה you, fem.; הֵנָּה they, masc.; הִנָּה they, fem.; אֵלֶּה these, com. 2d, לְכָנָה to you; וַפִּתְכָנָה your (fem.) wickedness, &c.

10. It will not be necessary to trouble the Reader with instances, in which this particle is found attached to other particles: as, שָׁמָּה there, &c.: because, as these are manifestly nothing more than nouns, it is reasonable enough that they should receive ה paragogic as well as others.

11. The following seem to be instances of pleonasm: i. e. in which this letter adds nothing whatever to the sense: viz. אַתָּה for אַתָּה thou; גַּתָּה for גַּתָּה thou gavest; יָדְךָ for יָדְךָ thy hand; to which many more might be added. So in עָלָה for עָלָה they ascended, 2 Kings xxiv. 10; וְהָיָה for וְהָיָה and they shall be, Josh. xv. 4, &c., where the Shūrék has been supplied by (ו).

12. The paragogic letter ו is sometimes found with Khōlém; at others, without any vowel; and, occasionally, coming between two nouns which are in the state of construction. It is thought by some to be nothing more than a pleonasm of the affixed pronoun (ו): as, בְּנוֹ בְּעַר his son (viz.) of Beor, instead of בְּנוֹ בְּעַר Numb. xxiv. 3. 15; חַיְתוֹ-אֶרֶץ its living creature (viz.) the earth's, instead of חַיִּת אֶרֶץ Gen. i. 24; לְמַעַיְנוֹ-מַיִם into its fountain (viz.) of water, for לְמַעַן Ps. cxiv. 8. So יַחְדָּו and יַחְדָּו his (being) alone, Gen. xiii. 6; Ps. iv. 9, &c. See also Ps. l. 10, civ. 11, 20, lxxix. 2; Isa. lvi. 9.

13. Professor Gesenius objects to this etymology, because the vowel points differ, in some respects, from those usually found with the affixed pronoun, and because the affix is also found to disagree with the noun to which it refers.\* I do not think, however, that much stress can be laid on the consideration of the vowel points, because anomalies of this kind frequently occur. Nor is the disagreement of gender discoverable between the noun and the affix of much moment; because little regard is paid in the Hebrew either to the gender or number of words in cases like this, as we shall see hereafter. In the Syriac and Ethiopic, pleonasm of this sort are extremely frequent; but, in general, a preposition is then added to the last word: as,  $\text{לְהַנְּתָתָּהּ}$ ;  $\text{ለሰጠው$  the gift of him, of God, or rather, the gift of him, who (is) God. The preposition in the Ethiopic is  $\text{ለ}$  in these cases. See Ludolf. Gram. Eth., p. 138.

14. There are some instances of verbs, in which  $\text{י}$  seems to be a paragogic letter: as,  $\text{וַיִּכּוֹתֵהוּ}$  and he smote, 2 Sam. xiv. 6, root  $\text{כּוּח}$ , where however the  $\text{ו}$  may probably be the true radical letter, for which  $\text{ח}$  has been substituted: and, as Khōlēm is most frequently the second vowel proper for the present tense, nothing can be more likely, than that  $\text{י}$  is here made to quiesce in it. We also have  $\text{וַיִּשְׁפֹּךְ}$  in 1 Sam. xxi. 14; probably for  $\text{וַיִּשְׁפַּח}$  he changed. We have  $\text{י}$ , in like manner, not as a paragogic letter, but, as the true radical letter, in  $\text{וַיִּמְחַדֵּהוּ}$  blot out, Jer. xviii. 23;  $\text{וַיִּזְנֶהָ$  she committed fornication, Ib. iii. 6.

15. The letter ( $\text{י}$ ) when Paragogic, is like the preceding asyllabic, and is mostly found between two nouns in the state of construction. Its vowel differs in no respect from that of the pronoun of the first person singular; whence Schultens and some of his followers have supposed it to be nothing more than a pleonasm of that pronoun. To this, however, Storr and Gesenius object, and apparently with good reason.† The Persian etymology, however, proposed by Gesenius, is perhaps equally objectionable, as exemplified in the phrase,  $\text{بویِ}$  the scent of musk. Whether it be the same with the الي النسبة, or الجنس of the Arabs, which is the same with the patronymic י of the Hebrews (Art. 166.); or, whether it be that of the plural number, derived from the verbal noun היה (Art. 139. 7. note), and thence applied for the purpose of giving Emphasis, Intensity, or the like to any passage, it is impossible to say; but, certain it is, that the significations thus derived will suit its application sufficiently well, where any variation of sense is discoverable in consequence of its insertion.\*

† Storr. Observationes, pp. 441. 442. Gesenius Lehrgeb., p. 547.

16. This particle is found appended both to nouns and particles: to nouns, as, בְּנֵי אֶתְנֹו אֶסְרִי . . . . binding the sole of his ass, Gen. xlix. 11; רַבְּתֵי בְּנֹוִים great (fem.) among the nations, Lam. i. 1; קוֹלִי תַחֲנוּנֵי the voice of my supplication, Ps. cxvi. 1; נֶגְבְּתֵי יוֹם stolen (fem.) by day, Gen. xxxi. 39; see also Deut. xxxiii. 16, Ps. cx. 4, cxiii. 5, 6, 7, 9, &c. To particles: as, מִנִּי בֶטֶן from the belly (for מן), Isa. xlvi. 3; בְּלִמְתֵי הַיּוֹם except to-day (for בְּלִמְתֵּי), Gen. xxi. 26; so זוּלָּתַי besides (for זולת), Deut. iv. 12, &c.

Schröderus and Schultens have also applied this paragogic letter to verbs; but, as it is never found, except in those which have ה for the last radical letter; and, as י is in these cases generally substituted for ה, there can be no doubt, that this is its character in all such instances, as Storr has justly remarked.

17. The letter י is mostly found with verbs: it is also affixed to particles, and is then preceded by (·) or (-); but when וּ or וַ precede, it is affixed without any other vowel: as, תַּתֵּן (for תִּתֵּן, on account of the accent, from

* In some cases, however, the י so affixed seems to be nothing more than a fragment of the feminine pronoun of the second person singular אֵתְנִי, as אֶהְבֵּתִי (Hos. x. 11.) thou hast loved, for אֶהְבֵּתֵי אֵתְנִי, as it constantly occurs in the Syriac Participles, see the Grammars. So יִלְדָּתִי for אֵתְנִי יִלְדָּתִי thou bringest forth, Gen. xvi. 11. See also Jer. xxii. 23; li. 13; Mic. vii. 8, &c.

† But this may be an instance of the Hendiadys; my voice, my supplication!

תָּנַתְּ) giving; יִשְׁיבָהּ (for יִשְׁיבָה) he shall turn her back, Jer. ii. 24; יִחִיתֶנּוּ it shall hang over (thee), Hab. ii. 17;* יִכְבְּדֵנִי he will honour me, Ps. l. 23, where we have (ר) for (-), on account of the accent perhaps: so, תִּתְּחִילִין (for תִּתְּחִילִי thou) (fem.) shalt bring forth, Is. xlv. 10; תִּדְבָקִין thou shalt adhere, Ruth ii. 8. So, תִּירָאוּן ye shall fear; תִּרְאוּן ye shall see; יִלְכוּן they shall walk, &c., and with (ו) when put for ו: as, יִשְׁכְּבוּן they shall lie down, 1 Sam. ii. 22; יִרְוּן they shall be watered, Ps. xxxvi. 9; in which cases the accent is always with the last syllable.†

18. Verbs having ה (without Mappik), for the third radical letter, will drop it by contraction (Art. 73.) when ךּ paragogic is to be added: as, אֶפְּרוּ I will smite him, 1 Sam. xxvi. 8 (for אֶפְּרוּהוּ); אֶוֹדְּפוּ I will confess to him (for אֶוֹדְּפוּהוּ), Ps. xlii. 6; אֶרְאֶפוּ (for אֶרְאֶפוּהוּ) I shall see him, Numb. xxiv. 17, &c. But in these cases, we have also an affixed pronoun, the rules for the addition of which we now proceed to consider.

19. When a paragogic ךּ is followed by either of the affixed syllabic pronouns נִי, הִי, or הוּ (Art. 145. 6.), no vowel of union is required: as, יִכְבְּדֵנִי he will honour me; אֶתְּקַדֶּךָ I will root thee out (of אֶתְּקַדֶּנּוּ, from אֶתְּקַדֶּהוּ, for אֶתְּקַדֶּהוּ, root נִתְּקַן); יִבְרַכֶּנּוּ he shall bless him (of יִבְרַכֶּהוּ, root בִּרַךְ). But, if the pronoun is asyllabic, there must be a vowel of union: as, יִשְׁרְתִינֶנּוּ they shall serve thee, Isa. lx. 7.

20. The affixed pronouns נִי and הִי, following the paragogic ךּ, are frequently expressed by inserting Dāgēsh forte in the ךּ: as, הִדְּנִי he judged me (for הִדְּנֵנִי, from דָּנַן, root דוּן). So, יִסְרַפֵּי he chastised me, Ps. cxviii. 18; יִתְּבַרְכֵנִי it shall bless me, Gen. xxvii. 19; יִצְּרַפֵּנוּ he shall save us (for יִצְּרַפֵּנּוּ, from יִצְּרַן, from יִצַר, root נִצַר); and, with the particle אֵין is not; אֵינְנִי my not being, (for אֵינְנִי, from אֵין), &c.

* Institutiones, &c. Schultensii, p. 428. In every instance this ךּ is probably nothing more than that, by which the intensitive form in nouns is sometimes designated. See Art. 168. 2.

† From these examples it appears, that the ךּ is sometimes single, at others doubled by Dāgēsh: its use will be investigated in the Syntax.

21. The paragogic ך is frequently inserted in the affix ך, in the same manner: as, בֵּרַכְךָ he has blessed thee (for בֵּרַכְךָ Art. 76.); מִיִּפְרָךְ chastising thee, Deut. viii. 5; עֹנֶנְךָ answering thee (for עֹנֶנְךָ, and rejecting ה by Art. 73. עֹנֶנְךָ, rejecting נ Art. 76. עֹנֶנְךָ, root ענה). So, in the particles, הִנֵּה behold thou, Ps. cxxxix. 8; אֵיפֶה where (art) thou? (ending also with paragogic ה, Art. 175.) Gen. iii. 9.

22. The ה of the affix הִי is omitted, and a compensation is made by doubling the paragogic ך by Dāgēsh forte: as, תִּפְקֹדְךָ thou shalt visit him (for תִּפְקֹדְךָ, See Art. 73.), Ps. viii. 5. So, יִפְּךָ he shall smite him, 1 Sam. xvii. 25; תִּקְחֶךָ take him, 1 Sam. xx. 21; אֵינְךָ he is not, Gen. xxx. 33; עֹדְךָ he yet . . . . Gen. xviii. 22; and, with the feminine affixed pronoun יִבְלַעְךָ he shall swallow her up (for יִבְלַעְךָ), Isa. xxviii. 4; so, תִּקְחֶךָ take it, Jer. xxxvi. 14; תִּנְּךָ give it, 1 Sam. xxi. 10; אֵינְךָ it is not, Lev. xiii. 21. In these cases, Schræderus is of opinion, that the ה of the feminine pronoun has been struck out, and that the paragogic ה has been added. Storr, however, is of a different opinion; his words are: "Similiter He paragogicum, in voce אֲשַׁעָה, Ps. cxix. 117, et similibus dubitationem habet, quoniam præter formam אֲשַׁעָה, ad quam He adjunctum videri possit, etiam alia datur, in Kamez desinens," &c. p. 440, note.

23. When the affix ו (which has always the accent) follows the paragogic ך, no vowel of union is employed: as, קִלְכֶּךָ curse him, Numb. xxiii. 13 (for קִלְכֶּךָ, root קלב). In like manner, we have יִשְׁנוֹ his being (for יִשְׁנוֹ, root ישן), 1 Sam. xiv. 39, &c.

24. This ך has by some been termed Epenthetic; but, as it appears to have been originally the same in every case, it seems unnecessary to give it more names than one.

25. The syllables which have been termed Paragogic are, מוּ, ךִּי, and פִּי, when preceded by the particles ב, כ, ל, and מ: as, בְּךִי in; כְּךִי like; כִּפִּי according to; לְךִי to; בְּמוּ in; כְּמוּ like; לְמוּ to, &c. These are mostly confined to highly energetic compositions; whence we may infer, that they were intended to add something to the signification.

26. The first of these is thought to be the same with the word יָי, or יִי, signifying sufficiency, &c. The second, Schultens and some others have derived from מוּ, or מוּ water; while Jahn thinks it is the same with מָה, or מָה what, which, &c. In the Arabic

מָה, מִזֶּה, is frequently found attached to the same particles : as, בְּמָה, כִּמָּה, לָמָּה, i. e. in that which, according to that which, to, or for, that which, &c. So in the Syriac, כֶּמּוֹ כֶּמּוֹ; בְּמּוֹ כֶּמּוֹ, &c. having the same signification.

27. The particle פִּי is nothing more than another form of פֶּה the mouth, found in construction with other nouns. Its meaning, by a metonymy, will be any thing said, enforced, or commanded : as, a precept, edict, &c. which will not always bear to be expressed in a translation.

On the Demonstrative Pronouns.

176. The Demonstrative Pronouns are always found written separately ; they are as follows :—

הַזֶּה masc., הַזֹּת fem. rarely זֶה or זֹה ; הַזֶּה or זֶה this, sing. com. : אֵלֶּה, rarely אֵלֶּה these, pl. com.

2. The forms הַזֶּה, הַזֹּת, masc. this, have the particle ל to, or for, with the definite article ה the. The same may be said of הַזֹּת this, fem. which occurs but once, viz. Ezek. xxxvi. 35, as also of הַזֶּה, of the common gender, as above.

3. אֵלֶּה these, is also found ; it is nothing more than the plural pronoun, as above, with the article prefixed.

4. הַזֶּה, however, is found construed as a plural, Gen. xxvii. 36, 1 Sam. xxix. 3, Job xix. 19, and Zech. i. 12, vii. 5. אֵלֶּה is also found as a singular, 1 Chron. xi. 11, 2 Chron. iii. 3, xvii. 14, and Ezra i. 9. But this has been done either by some figure of speech, or what is termed logical construction.

On the Relative Pronoun.

177. The Hebrew language recognises but one Relative Pronoun : viz. אֲשֶׁר he who, that which, what, which is common to every gender and number.

2. The gender and number, however, will be determined by that of the preceding or following noun, or pronoun : as, אֲשֶׁר הָעַמִּים, אֲשֶׁר who stand, i. e. they (masc.) who stand, 1 Kings xii. 8 ; אֲשֶׁר קָצְרוּ who his harvest, i. e. whose harvest, Job v. 5 ; אֲשֶׁר תִּדְבְּקֵנוּ רֵיחַ which (masc.) the wind disperses it, i. e. which (masc.) the wind dis- perses, Ps. i. 4 ; בְּאֶרְצָם . . . . אֲשֶׁר in whose land, Joel iv. 19.

3. In some instances, the demonstrative pronouns זֶה, זֹה, and זֹאת take the place of אֲשֶׁר : as Ps. ix. 16, xii. 8, and cxxxii. 12, &c. A similar substitution takes place in the Arabic, which the Grammarians ascribe to a difference of dialect.*

4. This pronoun is frequently found prefixed to other words in an abbreviated form : as, וְשׁ, וְשׁ, וְשׁ, or וְשׁ, the first and last letters being rejected. Examples : וְשׁ לֹא נָתַנְנוּ for אֲשֶׁר לֹא נָתַנְנוּ who has not given us (up), Ps. cxxiv. 6 ; וְשׁ קָוִינוּ for אֲשֶׁר קָוִינוּ which we waited (for), Lam. ii. 16 ; וְשׁ קָמָתִי for אֲשֶׁר קָמָתִי till I arose, Jud. v. 7 ; וְשׁ אָתָּה for אֲשֶׁר אָתָּה which thou, Ib. vi. 17 ; וְשׁ הֵם for אֲשֶׁר הֵם that they, Eccl. iii. 18, &c. It is perhaps difficult to say, in what cases the vowel (◌◌) is to be preferred to (◌◌), but it is not of much importance. Kāméts is used only when a letter incapable of receiving Dāgēsh follows : as, וְשׁ אָתָּה which thou, Judg. vi. 17. But, even in this case, (◌◌) is occasionally found sustained by an accent : as, וְשׁעָלוּ they who went up. The usage of (◌◌) in these places cannot perhaps be easily accounted for.

* In the Arabic commentary on the Káfia of Ibn Olhájib, published at Calcutta, (p. ۲۶۹) we have the following remark : وذو الطائبة . اي المنسوبة الي بني طي لاختصاص مجيها موصولة بلغتم بمعني الذي والتي قال الشاعر . ع . وبئري ذو حفرت وذو طوبيت . اي التي وحفرتها والتي طوبيتها , &c. That is, זֶה of the tribe of Táy : i. e. which is referred to that tribe, on account of its peculiar usage in their dialect, as the relative pronoun, signifying who, which, &c. in both genders (i. e. masc. and fem.) The Poet has said, ' My well which (זֶה) I digged, and which (זֶה) I enclosed.'

Dathe thinks, that we have an ellipsis of אֲשֶׁר, in these instances. See Glass. Philol. Sacr., ed. 1776, p. 160.

On the Interrogative, and occasionally Indefinite, Pronouns.

178. These are מִי for persons, מָה, מַה, or מֶה, who, which, what? הֲ, הִ, הֵ, what, whether? and אֵי where, how? &c. for things: all of which are invariable, and of the common gender: as, מִי-אַתָּה who (art) thou (masc.)? Gen. xxvii. 32; מִי-אַתְּ who (art) thou (fem.)? Ruth iii. 9; מִי-אַלֶּה who (are) these? Gen. xxxiii. 5. We also have מִי שְׁמֶךָ what (is) thy name? which Schultens says, refers to the person nevertheless: as, Quis nomen tuum? (Institutiones ad Fund. Ling. Heb., p. 228.). Examples with מה are: מָה עֲוֹנֵנוּ וּמָה חַטָּאתֵנוּ What (is) our iniquity, and what our sin? Jer. xvi. 10; מָה מְשַׁפֵּט הָאִישׁ what (is) the manner of the man? 2 Kings i. 7; מָה קוֹל what noise, 1 Sam. iv. 6, 14.

2. מָה, with Kāméts, is used when the article (הַ), or any other letter, incapable of receiving Dāgēsh, immediately follows, excepting ח or ע: as, מָה הַבְּטָחוֹן what confidence? 2 Kings xviii. 19; מָה-הָאָדָּם what (is) man? Ps. viii. 5; מָה הֵנָּה what (are) they (fem.)? Isa. xli. 22; מָה הוּא-לָהּ what he (was) to her, Esth. viii. 1.

3. Exceptions: 1. We have מָה with Pāthákh, notwithstanding the article following: מָה-הַמְּעַל what prevarication? Josh. xxii. 16. Also in מָה-הִיא what it is, Ps. xxxix. 5; מָה חַטָּאתִי what (is) my sin? Gen. xxxi. 36.

4. Whenever any letter capable of receiving Dāgēsh follows, מָה is with Pāthákh, and Dāgēsh is expressed in the following letter: as, מָה-טוֹב וּמָה-נְעִים how good, and how pleasant? Art. 112. In מָה-שְׁתֵּי what two (fem.)? Zech. iv. 12, the Dāgēsh is omitted.

5. When any guttural letter, having (ט), or ח or ע not having it, immediately follows, we have מָה with Sēgól, apparently for the sake of euphony: as, מָה-הָיָה לּוֹ what has happened to him? Exod. xxxii. 1; מָה-חַוֵּל what defect? Ps. xxxix. 5; מָה עָשִׂיתִי what have I done? &c. Art. 114.

On the Interrogative Particles הַ and אִי.

179. The Interrogative particle הַ, הֶ, or הֵ, has been classed by some with the definite article; but, if we consider either its construction or office, we must be convinced that they are different words.

2. The office of this particle is interrogation, like the Latin an, annon, num, utrum? or the like; and, in this capacity, strongly to affirm or deny; and thus to increase or diminish the importance of subjects with which it is connected. It is also used indefinitely.

3. It is always prefixed to some word, and is often followed in the succeeding member of the sentence, by the particle אִי, having nearly the same signification with utrum followed by an, in Latin, and corresponding to each other in different members of the sentence; or, as an and vel, in the following passage, הֲאִתָּה זֶה בְּנִי עֶשָׂו הֲאִי-לֹא “AN tu es, fili mi Esave, VEL non? Gen. xxvii. 21.* In many instances it loses its interrogative power, as it happens with similar particles in other languages, and then may be construed either as a relative, or indefinitely; as, הֲהֵלְכוּ אִתּוֹ who came with him,† Josh. x. 24; הֲיִשְׁקֶם whether you are, Deut. xiii. 4; הֲפִרְחָה whether it blossoms, Cant. vi. 11, &c.

* These particles correspond, both in sense and construction, with the Arabic

4. When prefixed to any word commencing with Sheva (:) or (-), it will take the vowel (-) with the Euphonic accent, and, therefore, will not require that the following letter should take Dāgēsh forte: as, הֲשַׁכַּחְתֶּם have ye forgotten? Jer. xliṽ. 9; הֲבִרְכָה num benedictio? Gen. xxvii. 38; הֲלִמְעַדָּה whether on thy account? Job xviii. 4, &c. With gutturals; הֲאִמֶת whether truth? הֲעַתָּה whether time?

5. In these cases, however, the Dāgēsh is often found written: as, הֲדַרְכֵי whether my ways? Ezek. xviii. 29; הֲרִאִיתֶם have ye seen? 1 Sam. x. 24; הֲפִצַּעְתְּךָ whether according to her cry? Gen. xviii. 21. And once, when Sheva is not attached to the first letter of such word: as, הֲיִטֵב will it be well? Lev. x. 19.

6. When any word, to which this particle is prefixed, commences with a consonant and a vowel (excepting gutturals with  $\tau$ ) the interrogative will take (-): as, הֲמוֹדֵהָ whether of the tree? Gen. iii. 11; הֲצֹאֵן shall the flock ...? Num. xi. 22; הֲיִקְרָה shall it happen to thee?

7. Guttural letters having ( $\tau$ ) require the Interrogative particle to be prefixed with (-): as, הֲאֵנֹכִי whether I? Num. xi. 12; הֲחִיָּהָ has it come to pass? Joel i. 2; הֲחֹזֵק whether strong? We also have, הֲחִדְדִּיתִי shall I cease? Judg. ix. 9, &c., which is perhaps erroneous, for הֲחִדְדִּיתִי. We also have, הֲאַתָּם whether you? Judg. vi. 31; and, הֲאֶפְרַתִּי whether an Ephrathite? Ib. xii. 5, which are anomalous. (See Art. 114.)

8. Noldius is of opinion, that this particle is a mere interjection forced out by the breath with some effort, in order to give the passage the force of an interrogation, or otherwise to heighten the expression, which is extremely probable. The passages too, which require to be construed interrogatively, but in which this particle is not found, must be so enounced, otherwise their interrogative force will not be perceived; e. g. In 2 Sam. xviii. 29, we have שָׁלוֹם for הֲשָׁלוֹם, which is found Ib. 32. and also in the similar passages, 2 Kings ix. 18, 19. In like manner perhaps אֲשָׁא for הֲאֲשָׁא shall I lift up? Ps. cxxi. 1; and עֲשִׂיתִי for הֲעֲשִׂיתִי Ezek. xvi. 59, which, when expressed with emphasis, will have just the same effect as they would, had the particle been prefixed. This is very much the case in all languages; and when no note of interrogation is used, we are compelled to determine by the context, whether such sentence is to be taken interrogatively or not; and, hence, whether it is to be understood in a positive or negative sense. When this particle is prefixed, however, this difficulty is removed; but, unfortunately, this is not always the case.

9. The Interrogative particle אי, which is sometimes written separately and at others is prefixed to pronouns, is probably nothing more than an interjection, like the preceding, so enounced as to imply a question. It is occasionally found of the forms הא and הא, and in conjunction with a pronoun: as, הוּי and איך.* Examples: אי הַבֵּל אָהוּי where is Abel thy brother? Gen. iv. 9; אי לֹזַאת אֶסְלוּחַ לָךְ how can I pardon thee for this? Jer. v. 7. With pronouns; אי־יָהּ where, Esth. vii. 5, 1 Sam. ix. 18, Is. l. 1; אי־יָהּ הַדֶּרֶךְ הַלֵּךְ which way went he? 1 Kings xiii. 12; אי־מָה עִיר אַתָּה from what city (art) thou? 2 Sam. xv. 2; איך יָדַעְתָּ how knowest thou? 2 Sam. i. 5; איך נִדְעָה how can we know? Deut. xviii. 21, &c.

10. It also occurs with a paragogic ה, אי־ה: as, אי־הַאֲנָשִׁים where (are) the men? Gen. xix. 5.

11. This particle is sometimes expressive of desire, admiration, lamentation, expostulation, insult, or negation, as is also the case with most of the interrogative pronouns: as, אי־יָהּ יְהוָה where is Jehovah! Jer. ii. 8. (desire) אי־הּ אִפּוֹ הִתְקַנְתִּי where is now my hope! Job xvii. 15. איך אָבַדְתָּ how hast thou perished! Ezek. xxvi. 17, &c.

On the Definite Article ה.

180. The Hebrews have the fragment of some word, ה, which they prefix to others for the purpose of restricting, or otherwise modifying, their signification, as will presently be seen.

* In Persian, Sanscrit, and some other Oriental languages اي is an interjection O, Oh, &c. In Arabic اي has the same meaning as in Hebrew, viz. Quisnam, quis, quod, &c.

2. Some have supposed this particle to be an abbreviation of the pronoun הוא he, or, of one or other of the interjections הוּן, הָא, הֵא behold. Others, again, have affirmed that it is only another form of the Arabic article ال, אל, which should be written הֵל.* In this case, as in many others, each party is perhaps both right and wrong. That both these articles have a common origin is, to me, extremely probable; and, that their force is the same in both these languages, there can be little doubt. No good reason can be assigned, perhaps, why we are to derive the Hebrew form of the article from the Arabic one, rather than we should derive the Arabic one from the Hebrew. Professor Gesenius thinks, that there are still manifest traces of the Arabic article to be found in the Hebrew Bible, such, for example, as, אֱלֹהִים Prov. xxx. 31, which he considers as equal to the Arabic <sup>القوم</sup> the people; אֱלֹהֵינוּ Gen. x. 26, and אֱלֹהֵינוּ Josh. xv. 30, which, 1 Chron. iv. 29, is written אֱלֹהֵינוּ. With respect to the first of these, there seems to be but little necessity for supposing the syllable אל to be the Arabic article ال. The interpretation of Schultens, Hiller, and others, who suppose אל to be the prohibitive particle here, appears to me to answer the intention of the Sacred Writer much better. With respect to the proper names אֱלֹהֵינוּ, and אֱלֹהֵינוּ, the particle אל or אֵל is sufficiently applicable, without having recourse to the Arabic article. The circumstance of אֵל being omitted in one place, in the parallel passage, is nothing more than what is found to happen in other words and phrases, and particularly in proper names (See Art. 170. 9, &c.).

3. Another particular dwelt upon is, that in Hebrew the letter following the article is almost always doubled; and, that in Arabic, the ل of the article is so assimilated to the following letter, in many cases, that the first letter of the word may be said to be doubled: as, הַשֶּׁמֶשׁ in Hebrew, and <sup>الشمس</sup> الشَّمْسُ pronounced אַשְׁמֶשׁ in Arabic, both signifying the sun. It might be suggested: In Hebrew the imperfect vowel (-), with which this article is usually attended, makes it necessary that the following letter be doubled, in order to complete the syllable commencing with the article, (Art. 33.). In * Storr. Observ., &c., p. 121.

Arabic, the ל of the article must according to rule either be pronounced or not. In many instances it must be pronounced: it is only in others, that the sound of ל is merged in that of the succeeding letter; and to this no parallel is to be found in Hebrew. I am of opinion, therefore, that the Arabs have introduced the ל of the article, and not, that the Hebrews have rejected it.*

4. The article is regularly prefixed with Páthakh (-), occasionally with Kāméts (◌) or Sēgól (◌): as, הַגָּדוֹל the great; הָאָדָם the man, or הָעָרִים the cities.

5. Whenever any letter capable of receiving Dāgēsh follows the article, it will be doubled by that mark, and the article will take Páthakh; הַשֶּׁשֶׁשׁ the sun.

6. But, י, ל, מ, or נ, (with Shēvá) are frequently found so situated without Dāgēsh: as, הַיְשׁוּעָה the salvation, Ps. iii. 9; הַיָּאֵר the river, Exod. vii. 18, &c. Where the euphonic accent is also omitted.

7. Of words commencing with ל, הַלְוִיִּם the Levites, Num. iii. 12.—With מ, הַמְּלַמֵּד the teacher, Ps. cxliv. 1; הַמְּבַשְּׂרֹת the proclaimers (fem.) of good news, Ps. lxxviii. 12.—Yet we have הַמְּשֻׁנָּע the insane, 2 Kings ix. 11; הַמְּעַנְנָה the delicate woman, Jer. vi. 2; הַמְּבַשְּׂלִים the adulteress, Ezek. xvi. 32, and הַמְּבַשְּׂלִים the cooks, Ib. xlvi. 24, &c.—With נ: as, הַצְּפַרְדֵּיִם the frogs, Exod. vii. 29. Yet we have הַצְּפַרְדֵּי the frog, Exod. viii. 2. In most of these instances, it is probable the negligence of the transcribers has been the sole cause of the omissions.

8. If, however, either of the letters ה, ה, or ע, follow such letter, Dāgēsh is mostly expressed: as, הַיְהוּדִים the Jews, &c.

9. But, when any letter incapable of receiving Dāgēsh follows the article, it will take the perfect vowel corresponding to (-) in order to complete its syllable: as, הָאִישׁ the man; הָרֹאשׁ the head; הַעֲלָמָה the virgin, &c.

* In the Commentary on the Kāfia by Moolla Jāmi, published at Calcutta, in 1818, it is cited as the opinion of El Mobarrad, that א is the original form of the article, and that the ל has been added, in order to distinguish it from the interrogative, א, p. 13. The words are, والمبرد ذهب الي انها الهمزة المفتوحة وحدها زيدت اللام للفرق بينها وبين همزة الاستفهام.

10. In many instances, however, when ה or ך follows, (-) is still retained: as, הַיְהוֹלֵךְ that which proceedeth, Gen. ii. 14; הַחַיָּה the living creature, Gen. viii. 1. In all which cases (-) will either be sustained by an accent, or must be considered as placing an implicit Dāgēsh in the following letter (Art. 109.).

11. In words, not monosyllables, commencing with ה, ך, or ע, and having Kāmēts (τ), the article usually takes (∞): as, הַחָכֵם the wise man; הָעָרִים the cities (Art. 114.)

12. When such words are monosyllables the former rule prevails: as, הַהָר the mountain; הָעָם the people, Par. 9.

13. The letter ך, however, having (τ) or (∞) in monosyllables, will mostly prefix the article with (∞): as, הַיָּי 1 Kings iii. 22, 23 (where it also occurs, הַיָּי); הַחַרְבֹּת the wastes, Ezek. xxxvi. 35. The word אֲרֶצַּהָרָא earth, always takes (τ) with the article, and changes its first (∞) to (τ) for the sake of euphony: as, אֲרֶצְהָא the earth.

14. On the use of the article we shall speak particularly when we come to the Syntax. It will suffice for the present to remark, that its offices appear to be two: one, to mark the noun to which it is prefixed, as already known and definite, either from the context, or from general consent: as, הָאֹר the light, Gen. i. 4; or, הַשָּׁמַיִם the heavens, Ib. i. 1; הָעֵלְמָה* ἡ παρθένος, Is. vii. 14, &c.: the other, for the purpose of impressing upon the mind of the Hearer or Reader, the peculiar property, nature, character, &c., of the noun to which it is prefixed: as, הַאֲרִי an animal remarkable for its properties as a lion, 1 Sam. xvii. 34. So Ib. הַדָּב a very bear. So, passim הָאֱלֹהִים the real or true God, In this sense it is occasionally used as a vocative: as, הַבֶּעַל, the Being designed as Lord Possessor, or the like, 1 Kings xviii. 26. So, in the N. Test. ὁ θεός, Heb. i. 8. Apoc. xv. 3, &c.

* The Jews and some of the German Divines have thought, that in this, and some other cases, the article is equivalent to the Demonstrative pronoun this, the intention of which however has been, to get rid of a certain unpalatable doctrine.

15. This particle is also said to occur in the sense of the Latin versus, when found either prefixed or postfixed, or both, to words : as,  $\text{הָרָמָה} \text{הָרָמָה}$  towards Ramah, 1 Sam. vii. 17 ;  $\text{הַפְּלִשְׁתִּים}$  to, or towards, the Philistines, Ib. xiii. 20 ;  $\text{הָעִיר}$  to the city, Ib. xx. 40, 42 ;  $\text{הָאֹהֶלָה שָׂרָה אִמּוֹ}$  to the tent of Sarah his mother,\* Gen. xxiv. 67. To which many others might be added. In these instances, however, it is very doubtful whether the article does not retain its original signification, the noun following being considered as complementary to some preceding verb : as, Josh. viii. 19,  $\text{וַיָּבֹאוּ הָעִיר}$  and they entered THE city, &c., or, by the preposition  $\text{אֶל}$  being understood. The following examples will tend to confirm this opinion, in which, according to Buxtorf,† the preposition is to be supplied ;  $\text{וַיָּבֹאוּ יְרוּשָׁלַם}$  and he came (to) Jerusalem, 1 Kings iii. 15 ;  $\text{אָבֹא בֵיתְךָ}$  I will enter thy house, Ps. v. 8 ;  $\text{וַיַּעַל הַמֶּלֶךְ בֵּית יְהוָה}$  and the king went up (to) the house of Jehovah, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 30 ;  $\text{וַיְבִיאֵם בָּבֶל}$  and he (caused them to enter) brought them to Babylon, Jer. xxviii. 3.

16. The passages in which  $\text{ו}$  occurs postfixed to words, and in which it is said to have the signification of versus, are numerous ; yet, it must not be dissembled, that passages which must be so construed, but in which this particle is not found, are also numerous. Noldius is of opinion, that it is nothing more than a paragogic letter, added for the mere sake of Euphony ; or, with the view of giving some emphasis : and, if this latter be the case, it will be the definite article, as used in the Chaldaic and Syriac.‡ Buxtorf holds, that it is not paragogic, because, says he, “ tales literæ nihil ad vocem consignant.”§

17. When this particle is postfixed, it does not take the accent, in which particular it differs from the feminine affix  $\text{ה}$ . The following are a few examples of its occurrence : מִצְרַיִם to Egypt, Gen. xii. 10, 14, &c. ; הַשָּׁמַיְמָה towards heaven, Gen. xv. 5, xxviii. 11, &c. ; הַיְאֵרָה into the river, Exod. i. 22 ; הַמִּדְבָּרָה towards the desert, Exod. iv. 27, &c. In these cases it is said by some to be equivalent to the Syriac and Chaldaic א, which either makes the noun definite to which it is attached, or gives some emphasis to the sentence.

† Thesaurus Grammaticus, lib. ii. cap. xii. Reg. v. See also Hilleri. Onom., p. 339.

On the Numerals.

181. The last species of nouns, of which we have to treat, are the numerals: these are of two kinds: 1st, those which designate the number of persons or things to be thus defined, and are termed the Cardinal Numbers; and, 2d, those which determine the order in which they are to be taken: as, first, second, &c., which are termed the Ordinal Numbers.

2. The Cardinal Numbers are designated in Hebrew by substantives put either in apposition, or in the state of construction, with others designating the persons or things to be numbered: and they have this peculiarity, that those which designate the numbers from three to ten inclusively, generally take the feminine form with masculine nouns; and, vice versâ, the masculine form with feminine nouns. But of this more will be said in the Syntax. The decimal numbers may be considered as adjectives or epithets.

ORDINAL NUMBERS.

	Masc.	Fem.
First ,	אֶחָד or ראשון	ראשונה
Second ,	שְׁנַיִם	שְׁנַיִת
Third ,	שְׁלוּשָׁה	שְׁלוּשִׁית
Fourth ,	רְבִיעִי	רְבִיעִית
Fifth ,	חֲמִישִׁי	חֲמִישִׁית
Sixth ,	שֵׁשִׁי	שֵׁשִׁית
Seventh ,	שִׁבְעִי	שִׁבְעִית
Eighth ,	שְׁמִינִי	שְׁמִינִית
Ninth ,	תִּשְׁעִי	תִּשְׁעִית
Tenth ,	עָשִׂירִי	עָשִׂירִית

3. The rest of the Ordinal Numbers are made by the terms appropriated to the Cardinal ones: as, הַשָּׁנָה הָאַחַת עָשָׂרָה the eleventh year; so, הַיּוֹם הַשִּׁבְעִי עָשָׂר the seventeenth day.

4. In some other cases also the Cardinal Number has been preferred: as, יוֹם אֶחָד day one, i. e. the first day; שְׁנַת שְׁתַּיִם the second year; so, שְׁנַת שֶׁבַע the seventh year. But these are probably elliptical expressions, see Lev. xxv. 10, 11. שְׁנַת הַחֲמִישִׁים the year of fifty years, i. e. the fiftieth. And Gen. vii. 11, בְּשָׁנַת שֵׁשׁ־מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה in the year of six hundred years, i. e. in the six hundredth year.

5. The decimal numerals ending in יִם : as, עֶשְׂרִים are never found taking the form for construction, עֶשְׂרֵי, &c. (Art. 143. 7.)

6. When the feminine form occurs in these numerals, distribution or parcels consisting each of that number of persons or things, is intended to be conveyed : as, וְעֶשְׂרֵי עֶשְׂרוֹת and chiefs of the tens, Exod. xviii. 25.

7. The intermediate numbers from ten to twenty, twenty to thirty, &c. are made by connecting a decimal with an unit, in the following manner.

	Masc.	Fem.
Eleven,	אַחַד עָשָׂר or עֶשְׂתֵּי עָשָׂר	אַחַת עֶשְׂרֵה עֶשְׂתֵּי עֶשְׂרֵה
Twelve,	שְׁנַי עָשָׂר or שְׁנַיִם עָשָׂר	שְׁתֵּי עֶשְׂרֵה שְׁתַּיִם עֶשְׂרֵה
Thirteen,	שְׁלֹשָׁה עָשָׂר	שְׁלֹשׁ עֶשְׂרֵה
Fourteen,	אַרְבָּעָה עָשָׂר	אַרְבַּע עֶשְׂרֵה
Fifteen,	חֲמִשָּׁה עָשָׂר	חֲמֵשׁ עֶשְׂרֵה
Sixteen,	שֵׁשׁ עָשָׂר	שֵׁשׁ עֶשְׂרֵה
Seventeen,	שִׁבְעָה עָשָׂר	שִׁבְעַת עֶשְׂרֵה
Eighteen,	שְׁמֹנֶה עָשָׂר	שְׁמוֹנֶה עֶשְׂרֵה
Nineteen,	תִּשְׁעָה עָשָׂר	תִּשְׁעַת עֶשְׂרֵה

8. In a few cases אֶחָד is found as the absolute form : as, לְאַחַד מֵהֶם to one of them, Deut. xxviii. 55. So 2 Kings ix. 1, Ezek. xlvi. 17, Zech. xi. 7, &c.

9. In two instances this word is found defectively written, Ezek. xviii. 10, אָח; and Ib. xxxiii. 30, חָד.

10. The feminine form אחַת, when found at the end of a sentence with the accent Athnák, or Ségól, is written אַחַת. See Exod. xxxvi. 10, where it occurs twice.

11. This word (אחד) is also found in the plural: as, דְּבָרִים dictiones unæ, like mœniis unis in Latin, Gen. xi. 1, it. Ib. xxvii. 44, xxix. 20, Ezek. xxxvii. 17, Dan. xi. 20; שְׂפָתַיִם is put for שְׂנֵתַיִם, the נ being dropped, and its loss supplied by Dāgêsh (not forté, Art. 76.).

12. From twenty to thirty, &c., the intermediate numerals are formed thus:

	Com.	Masc.		Fem.*
One-and-twenty,	וְעֶשְׂרִים	אֶחָד	or	אֶחָת
Two-and-twenty,	וְעֶשְׂרִים	שְׁנַיִם	—	שְׁתַּיִם
Three-and-thirty,	וּשְׁלֹשִׁים	שְׁלֹשָׁה	—	שְׁלוֹשׁ
Four-and-forty,	וְאַרְבָּעִים	אַרְבַּעַה	—	אַרְבַּע
Fifty-five,	וְחַמְשִׁים	חַמֵּשָׁה	—	חַמֵּשׁ
Sixty-six,	וּשְׁשִׁים	שֵׁשָׁה	—	שֵׁשׁ
Seventy-seven,	וּשְׁבָעִים	שִׁבְעָה	—	שִׁבְעַת
Eighty-eight,	וּשְׁמֹנִים	שְׁמֹנָה	—	שְׁמוֹנָה
Ninety-nine,	וּתְשַׁעִים	תְּשַׁעָה	—	תְּשַׁעַת

13. And the hundreds, &c., thus:

	Com. gen.
Three hundred,	שְׁלֹשׁ מֵאוֹת
Four ditto,	אַרְבַּע מֵאוֹת
Five ditto,	חַמֵּשׁ מֵאוֹת
Three thousand,	שְׁלֹשָׁת אֲלָפִים
Four ditto,	אַרְבַּעַת אֲלָפִים
Five ditto,	חַמֵּשַׁת אֲלָפִים
Twice ten thousand,	שְׁתֵּי רִבּוֹת
Twenty thousand,	עֶשְׂרִים אֲלֶף
Ten times ten thousand,	עֶשֶׂר רִבּוֹת
A hundred thousand,	מֵאָה אֲלֶף or מֵאָת
Six hundred thousand,	שֵׁשׁ מֵאוֹת אֲלֶף

* See No. 2. above.

14. The Cardinal Numerals from three to ten inclusive, require the word designating the thing numbered to be put in the plural number: all the others require the singular. Examples, חֲמִשָּׁן שָׁנִים וּמֵאָת שָׁנָה five years and a hundred year, Gen. v. 6; שִׁבְעַת שָׁנִים וְשִׁמְנָה מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה seven years and eight hundred year, Ib. 7.

Some instances occur in which this rule is not observed: as, עֶשְׂרִים קַרְשֵׁים twenty planks, Exod. xxxvi. 23; חֲמִשִּׁים שֶׁקֶלִים fifty shekels, Josh. vii. 21; עֶשְׂרִים וְאַרְבָּעָה אֲלָף twenty and four thousand, 1 Chron. xxvii. 1; בֶּן־עֶשְׂרִים וְחָמֵשׁ שָׁנָה a son of twenty and five years, i. e. a man five and twenty years old. So עֶשְׂרִים וְתֵשַׁע שָׁנִים twenty and nine years, 2 Kings xiv. 2. But of this more will be said in the Syntax.

15. When the decimal number takes the precedence, the conjunction ו is used: as שִׁבְעִים וְשִׁבְעָה seventy and seven; תֵּשַׁע וְשִׁשִּׁים ninety and six, Ezr. viii. 35, &c.

16. When the numerals are to be used distributively, they are repeated like other nouns: as, שְׁנַיִם וְשְׁנַיִם two and two, i. e. by twos; חֲמִשִּׁים חֲמִשִּׁים by fifties, or, every fiftieth man.

17. Numerals signifying the repetition of any quantity or thing, are generally expressed by the dual number: as, אַרְבַּעַת־פְּעָמִים four-fold; שִׁבְעַת־פְּעָמִים seven-fold, or, seven times repeated.

LECTURE X.

ON THE HEBREW VERBS.

182. WE now come to treat on the Hebrew Verbs, and to shew, first, In what way they appear to have been formed; and, secondly, To delineate and explain their several conjugations.

2. The verb, we believe (See Art. 146.), is, in its crude state, nothing more than a noun of one form or other,* and, that its signification will be regulated by that peculiar to the form of the noun to which it belongs, whether that form be primitive or derived.

3. If, therefore, we have the means of knowing what signification is to be attached to the different forms of the primitive nouns, as also how the augmented forms are derived, and what sense they will bear; we shall also know, to what class the verb itself is to be referred, and what must be its general force and meaning.

4. In our Lectures on the forms and derivation of nouns, we laid before the Student all that appeared necessary on that subject, leaving it to his own industry to follow out the enquiry to any extent he might think proper. We now come to shew how this bears on the question before us.

5. The different forms of the verb, as found generally in use, amount to seven; four of these have an active, and three a passive (and sometimes a reciprocal) signification.

* Kimkhi says in the Mikhlol. fol. 3. verso. ואכתוב שער דקדוק חפעלים בתחלה ואף על פי שהשם קודם לפעל כי הפעל יצא מהשם ואמרו כי השם כמו הגוף נושא המקרים והפעל כמו מקרה "I first proceed to write the chapter on the Grammar of verbs, although the noun precedes the verb: for the verb proceeds from the noun. And they say, that the noun is, like the body, the subject of accident; but, that the verb (may be considered) as the accident (only)." And again, fol. קצא verso. כי דע... כי השמות הם שנים חלקים יש מהם שם שהוא נגזר מן הפועל או הפועל ממנו כמו ראובן 'שָׁמְעוֹן' זבולן' שהוא שם נגזר מן הפועל' חכם רשע' צדיק' חרב' שֶׁלֶג' והדומים להם נגזר הפועל מן השם i.e. "Observe that nouns are of two sorts. There are those which are either derived from verbs, or, from which verbs are derived: as, Reuben, Simeon, Zebulon, each of which is derived from a verb; חכם wise; רשע wicked; חכם just; חרב a sword; שֶׁלֶג snow, and the like, are nouns from which verbs are derived."

6. The first of these has been termed Kal, קל i. e. levis, light; because the root is here exhibited in its simple state. Verbs of this species are either active or neuter.

7. In this conjugation, or species, as we shall term it, three forms are in use, which may be represented by the measures פקד, פקד, and פקד, corresponding to the forms of nouns given in Artt. 153. Ff. II. III. X.*

8. Again, in this, as in every other species of the conjugation of Hebrew verbs, two tenses only are found; namely, the Past, and the Present.

9. The leading form in every species will designate the third person singular of the masculine gender of the Preterite Tense; and, in Kal, this will always be a primitive noun of the form פקד, פקד, or פקד.

10. The leading form proper for the present tense of this species, is always a noun of one or other of the primitive Segolates; as, פקד, פקד, or פקד (See Art. 148, &c.), which, when combined with one or other of the pronouns, will present both the vowels, and signification, proper for this species of the conjugation.

183. The next species, taken in the usual order, is termed Nipphál, נפעל, because, as it should seem, that word presents the conjugation itself of the word formerly taken as a paradigm for the verbs in general, which was פעל. This forms the objective voice of the foregoing.

* A similar variety, in the vowels proper for the medial radical letter of the root, exists in the Arabic, where, as in the Hebrew, the first generally denotes transitive verbs; as, نصر he assisted; the second, verbs of sense: as, سمع he heard; فرح he was glad; the third, implies habit; as, كرم he was generous, &c. So, פקד he visited; שמח he was glad; יקל he was powerful.

2. This species, according to our system, is an augmented word, combined of two others, affording both the form and sense peculiar to this conjugation (See Artt. 157. 18, 19, &c. 162. Ff. I. II.); נִבְקַד, therefore, will be the measure generally taken for the leading form of the Preterite Tense of this species; as, נִבְקַד he was, or became, visited.

3. The Present Tense of this species is formed on the measure נִבְקַד (for הִנְבְּקַד Artt. 157. 18. 162, &c.); which, with the abbreviated form of the pronoun of the third person sing. masc. will be יִבְקַד he is or becomes visited, and, by Art. 76. יִבְקַד.

4. The third species has been termed Pihél בִּעַל. This is always of the active voice, and has, for the most part, a transitive signification (See Art. 154. 7, 8, &c.). The measure proper for the leading person of the Preterite is בִּקַּד, which is one of the augmented and intensive forms given under Art. 154. 4, &c.

5. The form proper for the leading person of the Present Tense is of the cognate form, Ib. Form I. בִּקַּד, which, with the abridged form of the pronoun, will become יִבְקַד.

6. The objective species peculiar to this class of verbs is termed Puhál בִּעַל. Its leading word will be of the measure בִּקַּד, and will always be a noun of the form given in Art. 154. Form V. This may be termed the fourth Species.

7. The fifth species is termed Hiphhíl הִבְעֵל, the leading form of which is cognate with those of the augmented nouns given Art. 160: that proper for the Preterite being of the measure הִבְקַד,—for the Present, הִבְקַד, for the force of which see Art. 157. 2—9.

8. The sixth, and the objective of Hiphhíl, is termed Hophhal הִבְעֵל. This takes, for the leading word of both tenses, a noun of the augmented form הַפְּקֵד. See Artt. 157. 10. 160. F. VII. having an objective signification.

9. The seventh and last species is termed Hithpāhél, הִתְפַּעֵל, which, as before, is the form taken in the old paradigm פָּעַל in this species. Our form is הִתְפַּקֵּד. The leading forms proper for both tenses, will always be of this measure, affording the sense common to nouns of this form, See Artt. 157. 13—19. 164. Ff. I. II.

184. These are the forms of the several Species of the Conjugation of Hebrew verbs, as usually given in the Grammars. But to these a few others may be added: which, as they occur less frequently, have been considered anomalous. They are, however, according to our view of the subject, just as regular in their formation as those already mentioned: and, although they occur less frequently, which might easily be accounted for, they are quite as consistent with the analogy of the language, as any verbs can possibly be.

2. These additional species are thought to be analogous to those of Pihél, Pūhál, and Hithpāhél, because some reduplication of the letters or syllables of the root is generally found to take place in them, as it does in those forms; and, consequently, affording a similar shade of signification, although the same letters are not always doubled, nor the same vowels always found to accompany them.

3. It has been remarked (Art. 154. 5.), that nouns of excess formed from roots having ו or ך for their middle radical letter, or, which have the same letter in the second and third of the root, usually take the forms פּוֹדֵד, for the active, and פּוֹדֵד, for the passive signification: as, פּוֹנֵן, פּוֹנֵן, פּוֹנֵן, for the active; and, פּוֹנֵן, פּוֹנֵן, פּוֹנֵן, for the passive of these words, respectively.

4. Instead of פְּקֵד, and פְּקֵד, therefore, which are the measures proper for the species Pihél and Pūhál, we shall always have these forms from roots of this description; and here the same form is taken for the leading word of each tense respectively; פּוֹנֵן, פּוֹנֵן, פּוֹנֵן, active, and פּוֹנֵן, פּוֹנֵן, פּוֹנֵן, objective.

5. The first of these forms is also taken for the Hithpāhél species, i. e. instead of הִתְפַּקֵּד, we shall have הִתְפּוֹדֵד, for the measure; as, הִתְפּוֹנֵן, הִתְפּוֹנֵן; and so of others.

185. There is, moreover, a considerable number of forms peculiar to certain verbs, as laid down by Schultens and Schröder, and, before them, by David Kimkhi and other Grammarians: of these some notice should be taken. These writers, then, have supposed these forms of the conjugation to have sometime existed; and, hence, they have proceeded to derive nouns of similar forms from them, even when the verb itself has not occurred; all of which seems to me to be proceeding in an inverted order. According to our system, the addition of one or other of the pronouns to any noun, simple or augmented, will always have the effect of investing it with the powers of a verb; and hence it probably is, that we occasionally find this done both in the Hebrew and all its dialects. This will sufficiently account for these rare augmented forms, as also for those instances in which nouns, which were originally the mere names of substances, are found acting as verbs in these tongues.

2. But, to come to these remaining and rarer forms, which are sometimes found as verbs:  $\text{הִתְפַּקֵּד}$ , is the passive form of  $\text{הִתְפַּקֵּד}$ , just as  $\text{הִתְפַּקֵּד}$  or  $\text{הִתְפַּקֵּד}$ , is of  $\text{הִתְפַּקֵּד}$ . Of this form, we have  $\text{הִתְפַּמֵּן}$  (for  $\text{הִתְפַּמֵּן}$  Art. 83. 1.) rendered impure, or polluted; prim. noun,  $\text{מִמֵּן}$ . So  $\text{הִתְפַּשְׁנָה}$  made fat, for  $\text{הִתְפַּשְׁנָה}$  Is. xxxiv. 6, where, however, the Dāgēsh proper for the  $\text{ש}$  is omitted.

3. Another form given by Schröder is  $\text{פִּתְקוֹד}$ , from which we have only a noun supposed to be derived from this species of the verb, viz.  $\text{פִּגְדוּדָה}$  perfidious, Jer. iii. 7, 10. This, therefore, does not occur as a species of the Conjugation: it is also doubtful, whether it is to be referred to the form given by this excellent Grammarian. Surely, as the ( $\tau$ ) is immutable,  $\text{פִּתְקוֹד}$  would be the more suitable measure.

4. Another form is  $\text{הִתְפַּקְדוּי}$ . Of this is  $\text{יִתְפַּקְדוּי}$ , and  $\text{הִתְפַּקְדוּי}$ , occurring Judg. xx. 15. 17. But here we have no necessity for introducing a new form; the omission of Dāgēsh in the  $\text{פ}$ , which might have been merely accidental, would make it necessary that the preceding vowel should be a perfect one (Art. 32.). This form, therefore, may be considered as belonging to Hithpāhél, which has already been considered (Art. 183. 9.).

5. The next form given by Schröder is  $\text{הִתְפַּקְדוּ}$ , or  $\text{הִתְפַּקְדוּ}$ , which may be referred to the first of these forms (No. 2.), with the additional consideration, that the Dāgēsh proper for  $\text{פ}$  has been omitted, and supplied as in the last. The examples occur, Num. i. 47, 1 Kings xx. 27, &c.

6. His two next forms, viz. פּוֹקֵד and פּוֹקֵד having a reciprocal sense, are not supported by the passages adduced. We may dismiss them, therefore, without further enquiry.

7. The next form, הִתְּפוֹקֵד, should have been הִתְּפוֹדֵד, his example being הִתְּגוֹלֵל, which is manifestly derived from the root גָּלַל. See Art. 184. 5.

8. In the form בָּקֵד, as exemplified in אָהָב, and הִתֵּל, we have, I believe, nothing more than a form equivalent to פָּקֵד, in which the Dāgēsh being omitted, we have a perfect vowel supplied to compensate for the defect thus occasioned. See Art. 109.

9. The next form given is פּוֹקֵד, which Schrœder exemplifies by הוֹתֵל Is. xliv. 20 : but this does not occur as a verb.

10. Of his next form פְּתוֹאֵד, no example occurs; שְׂמֵמָל as given by him is fictitious. The noun is שְׂמֵמָל left hand, &c. : which, when augmented, becomes הִשְׂמֵמָאֵל, signifying to proceed in that direction. Whether Schrœder's derivation of it from שָׂמַל, be correct or not, may be matter for dispute.

11. We next have רֵעֵנָה, and the example given רֵעֵנָה green, which is said to be put for רֵעֵנָה, or רֵעֵנָה. But all this is extremely doubtful. The noun appears to be merely one of those augmented by the addition of ך (see Art. 168.); קוֹמֵם for קוֹמֵם, as Schrœder has put it, we think comes more properly under another form, which, however, is nothing more than a noun.

12. His next form פְּתוֹדֵד, has, for the same reason, no connection with קוֹמֵם. And the other example given is manifestly a noun, אִמְלֵל, and is referable to the compound form (Art. 169. 7.).

13. The form הִתְּפוֹקֵד should rather have been הִתְּפוֹדֵד, in order to admit of the form הִתְּקוֹמֵם. But, as we have already considered this form (Art. 184. 5.), we need not dwell any longer on it here.

14. The form פְּתוֹדֵד, is that of a reduplicated noun (Art. 169.), which is often conjugated as a verb : as, סַחֲרֵד travelling about as a merchant, &c. of which examples will be given hereafter.

15. With respect to the other forms, viz. שְׂפָקֵד, הִתְּפָקֵד, מְפָקֵד, the first does not occur, and the rest have been given under the different forms of the noun, and accounted for; we need not, therefore, add any thing further on them now.*

186. The forms, therefore, proper for the leading words of all the species of the conjugation now in use will be as follows :

SPECIES.	FORMS.	SPECIES.	GENERAL FORCE.
1	פָּקַד active. פָּקַד id. פָּקֵד neuter.	2	נִפְקַד objective or reciprocal.	} Simple, or translated, sense of the root.
3	פָּקַד active, causal, &c. פִּוְקַד id.	4	פָּקַד objective. פִּוְקַד id.
5	הִפְקִיד active, causal, &c.	6	הִפְקִיד objective. or הִפְקַד	} Causative. Transitive. Also so the form assumed by many substantives when used as verbs.

* In the cognate dialects of the Hebrew, viz. the Arabic, Ethiopic, Syriac, and Chaldaic, we have a considerable number of forms seldom found in the common Grammars. In Erpenius's Arabic Grammar, we have only thirteen forms of the trilateral, and four of the quadrilateral, verb. In M. de Sacy's Grammar, we have two more noticed in the trilateral verbs, four under the quadrilaterals, and a few others, which are said to belong to the trilaterals, but which have been augmented by a letter or two. Scheidius gives upwards of forty forms in his "Primæ Lineæ Institutionum Arabicarum." Lugd. Batav. 1779. And Mr. Lumsden, in his elaborate Volume on Arabic Grammar, has given a list of still greater extent, amounting to fifty (Gram., p. 162, &c.), from which it appears, that it has often been a matter of difficulty with the native Grammarians to determine, whether many of these should be referred to trilateral or quadrilateral roots. Some of them do not occur more than once; and this should suggest, that the language itself acknowledges no such conjugations generally; but, on the contrary, that nouns of these forms have occasionally been made to occupy the situation of verbs.

SPECIES.	FORMS.	SPECIES.	GENERAL FORCE.
7	הִתְּפַקֵּד active, reciprocal, or &c.	8	הִתְּפַקֵּד objective. or הִתְּפַקֵּד id. very rare.	Reciprocal. Passive. Re- flective occasionally.
	הִתְּפַוֵּד id.
Rare.	9	פִּקְדָּה neuter.	Intensive.
	10	פִּקְדָּה or פִּקְדָּה neuter.	Frequentative, Intensive, or the like.
	11	*תִּפְקֵד neuter. —	Frequentative.
	12	†מִפְקֵד neuter.	Habit, or custom, it occurs however but seldom; and, therefore, little can be said as to its general force.

2. But, for particulars, as to their several significations, see Artt. 183. 184. &c., with the references.

3. It must be borne in mind, that any change occurring in the forms of the nouns, with respect either to the vowels or consonants, will also occur when they are used as verbs: i. e. whenever any guttural letter occurs in the root, certain changes may take place on that account in the vowels: even the consonants אהרי, as well as the

* It is remarkable enough, that some cases occur in the Arabic, in which ת, ת, occurs, even when the verb has already been augmented by that letter: as, <sup>ו</sup>תִּקְטַעְתְּ she, or it has cut. The same excess occurs in the word <sup>ו</sup>תִּשְׁאֵבֶת she resembled, in which the additional ת is implied in the (-) teshdeed over the ש.

† In Arabic we also have verbs augmented by מ, מ, as <sup>ו</sup>מִרְחַב and <sup>ו</sup>מִסְפֵּל, as in the phrases <sup>ו</sup>מִרְחֵב אֱלֹהִים וּמִסְפֵּל “May God make matters broad and easy for you.” Lumsden’s Arab. Gram., pp. 147, 154, in which there can be no doubt these words are nouns.

letters ך and ל, may disappear in certain cases : of these we shall give examples hereafter, when we come to detail the forms of the conjugation at length ; we shall then point out the rules on which these changes, &c. are founded.

187. It should be premised, that there are in the Hebrew, as in other languages, three persons, each of the singular and plural number : that, in the verbs, there is no dual number ; and, that the second and third persons, both singular and plural, have forms peculiar to both genders. The first person is, under one form, common to both genders ; as in the pronouns (Art. 145. 2.).

2. These distinctions, however, do not arise out of the root itself, but out of the pronouns which are either prefixed or postfixed to it in an abbreviated form.

3	בָּקַרְהוּ	the primitive concrete noun.	בָּקַרְהוּ
			} (the same in the fem. gen. (Art. 136. 4.).

* This, according to D. Kimkhi, is the form taken by certain nouns : as, חָכֵם wise ; רָשָׁע wicked ; כָּבֵל intelligent, &c. The only difference being that the noun ends in Kāmêts, whereas the verb ends in Páthakh. But, he goes on to say, that the noun will end in Kāmêts, when at the end of a verse or accompanied by certain accents : as, בְּאִשֶּׁר אָמַר as he had said, Gen. xxi. 1. ; לֹא יָשָׁב has not sat, Ps. i. 1. There are also instances pointed out by him, in which Kāmêts is the terminating vowel, just as it is in the noun, when neither the position of the word, nor the accent, requires any change in the vowels : as, 1 Sam. vii. 17, שָׁם שִׁפְטָה אֶת־יִשְׂרָאֵל there he judged Israel. To which he adds a number of similar examples. Mikhlol. fol. ה, verso. et fol. ג, in which we have Kāmêts with the accent Zákéf.

The נ of the first pers. pl. is rejected by Art. 76 ; and the guttural ק is omitted, perhaps for the sake of euphony.

1	יָכַלְתִּי	יָכַלְתִּי	יָכַלְנוּ	יָכַלְנוּ

3. It may be observed, in general, that the conjugation of the preterite tense of every species, will be carried on just as in the instances here given; that is, by attaching the same abbreviations of the personal pronouns to the leading word of the species, whatever be its form or character; whether it include one or more of the guttural letters, or whether it be defective by the loss of one or more of the letters א, ה, ו, ל, or נ: due regard being had to the rules laid down respecting these letters, as well as to those concerning the changes of the vowels. The conjugation, therefore, is but ONE, however varied the ground form or leading word may occasionally appear.

4. As the changes which take place in the vowels in the conjugation depend, in a great measure, on the situation of the accent, it may be proper here to advert to that subject.

5. It has been remarked, that in neither of the preceding leading words are the vowels immutable by usage. The nature of the syllabication, therefore, which very much depends on the situation of the accent, will regulate the vowels (Artt. 96. 96, &c.).

6. It will be seen by a reference to the paradigm, that the asyllabic adjuncts יָכַלְתָּ, יָכַלְתִּי, as well as the syllabic ones יָכַלְתֶּם and

* These, according to D. Kimkhi, (Mikhlol, fol. 74), are of the same form with יָכַלְתָּ great, יָכַלְתָּ small, יָכַלְתָּ distant, יָכַלְתָּ near. The words so found as verbs are, יָכַלְתָּ fearing, יָכַלְתָּ little, יָכַלְתָּ snaring as a hunter, יָכַלְתָּ able, יָכַלְתָּ bereaved, יָכַלְתָּ lighting, for יָכַלְתָּ, יָכַלְתָּ stealing; some of which occur as nouns.

תָּוֶה, take the tonic accent with them. The preceding vowels, therefore, of these words, will be shortened as far as circumstances will allow (Art. 98, &c.). In the first case, the vowel immediately preceding is rejected, in order to make way for the exertion of the accent; and, as this restricts the word to its primitive quantity, there is no necessity that any further change should take place: we have, therefore, תָּוֶה and תָּוֶה, in these instances. In the second case, we have the syllabic adjuncts וֶה, and תָּוֶה, with the tonic accent. The preceding syllable must, therefore, contain an imperfect vowel, in order to comply with the laws of syllabification (Art. 33.). And as the first vowel is not immutable, it is rejected: the whole word still retaining its primitive quantity, i. e. consisting of two syllables, as in the former case, and no more.

7. In all the other cases, the accent retains its original situation: and, as the noun seems here to be in apposition, not in construction, with the pronoun, the vowels remain unaltered throughout.

8. Hence in the second form, exemplified by וְזָרָה willing, the (·), when made imperfect, becomes (·) instead of (·), by what has been termed an oblique correspondence (Art. 96. 2.), as in וְזָרָה, וְזָרָה, which is retained likewise in every other case of increment, in which the accent remains on that syllable. In the remaining cases, when the verb receives the asyllabic augment, וְזָרָה, and וְזָרָה, it is rejected.

9. The first syllable is rejected in וְזָרָה, וְזָרָה, for the reasons already given. The substitute of Sheva (·) is added, on account of the guttural letter, see Art. 105. 4.

10. In the third form, וְזָרָה, the vowels follow the paradigm of the first, and for the same reasons: except in the third person singular and plural, where the ו entirely disappears.

11. When, however, verbs receive the illative particle ו* as

* This has generally been termed Vau conversivum. But, as I see no necessity whatever for supposing that it has any such conversive power as this name implies, I have rejected it: as it has an illative power, however, and even in Arabic has a manifest influence on the vowels, and sometimes on the consonants of the verbs, I have thought it more consistent to give it the title of illative. See Schnabel's Commentary on the Agrumia, p. 26, where this property is ascribed to both ו and ف. See p. 50, note. The use and force of this particle will be considered in the Syntax.

a prefix, the accent is removed to the first syllable of the verb, which will always be perfect, and the following one imperfect: as,  $\text{וַיִּבְרַחְתִּי}$  and I will visit;  $\text{וַיִּכְרַחְתִּי}$  and thou wilt be able. The last syllable will be subject to the same law, when the accent is removed on account of any affixed pronoun: as,  $\text{וַיִּבְרַחְתִּיו}$  I have prevailed (against) him, Ps. xiii. 5.

12. The (·) Tséré of the second form, and of the third and seventh species, viz.  $\text{פָּקַד}$ , and  $\text{הִתְפַּקַּד}$ , will undergo the same changes during the process of conjugation, as it does in  $\text{צִדְקָה}$  in the paradigm.

13. The following examples present some anomalies, with which the Learner ought to be made acquainted.

On the Third Person Singular Masculine.

14. In one instance the verb  $\text{לָקַח}$  drops its first radical letter: as,  $\text{חָק}$  he took, Ezek. xvii. 5; so, for  $\text{יָרַד}$ , by a similar omission, we have  $\text{רָד}$  he declined, Judg. xix. 11. But see p. 34, note.

15. Whenever the third person singular of either gender is accompanied by a pause accent, the final vowel will be made perfect, and, in some instances changed: as,  $\text{לֹא יָשָׁב}$  he has not stood, Ps. i. 1;  $\text{שָׁכַן}$  he dwelt, Deut. xxxiii. 12 (Art. 123. 5.). The same often happens in the feminine, as also in the plural number, whenever the accent is drawn back: as,  $\text{דָּבְקָה}$  it adheres to, Job xxix. 10;  $\text{גִּבְרָוּ$  they were powerful, 2 Sam. i. 23 (Art. 120.): all apparently belonging to the roots  $\text{גָּבַר}$ ,  $\text{שָׁכַן}$ , or  $\text{דָּבַק}$ , respectively. These may, nevertheless, be of the form  $\text{פָּקַד}$ , although the other form most frequently occurs in the context. We have something similar to this in Gen. xliii. 14,  $\text{כִּי אֲנִי אֶשְׁכַּחְתִּי אֲשֶׁר אֲנִי אֶשְׁכַּחְתִּי}$  even as I am bereaved I am bereaved, where the first verb is of the form  $\text{אֶשְׁכַּח}$ , and the last of  $\text{אֶשְׁכַּל}$ .

On the Third Person Singular Feminine.

16. Our measure is  $\text{פְּקַדָּה}$  in every case. In some few instances, however, we have the Chaldaic instead of the Hebrew feminine termination: as,  $\text{אֲזַלָּה}$ , instead of  $\text{אֲזַלָּה}$  Deut. xxxii. 36. So  $\text{קָרָאתָ}$ , for  $\text{קָרְאתָ}$  she called;  $\text{עָשִׂיתָ}$ , for  $\text{עָשִׂיתָ}$  she made; which seems to shew, that this termination is not a part of the pronoun, but the distinctive form of the feminine gender, as stated above (Art. 188.). The same holds good in the Arabic dialect, where the feminine termination is also  $\text{ة}$ , which cannot be derived from the feminine pronoun. See also Art. 137. 2.

17. When the accent is removed from the ultimate to the penultimate syllable, the original vowels of the root will return: as,  $\text{נָתַתָּהּ}$  she gave, Judg. v. 25;  $\text{שִׂמְחָהּ}$  she was glad, Est. viii. 15. So,  $\text{נִשְׁתָּתָּהּ}$  it hath failed, Is. xli. 17, with an euphonic Dāgēsh in the  $\text{ת}$  (Art. 120.).

18. In Ezek. xxxi. 5, we have  $\text{גַּבְהָהּ}$  for  $\text{גַּבְהָהָהּ}$ , the Chaldaic for the Hebrew termination.

On the Third Person Plural, Common Gender.

19. We have a final  $\text{ן}$  sometimes added to this part of the verb, which is either intended to obviate a hiatus, or, as in the augmented nouns, to give some emphasis to the sentence: as,  $\text{יָדְעוּן}$  they knew, Deut. viii. 3;  $\text{נָקְדוּן}$ \* for  $\text{נָקְדוּ}$  they poured out, Isa. xxvi. 16. See Art. 175. 17.

20. In some cases this plural form appears with the vowel ( $\text{ו}$ ) and  $\text{ה}$ : as,  $\text{שִׁפְכוּהָ}$  they poured out, where the  $\text{וְזָרִי}$ , or marginal reading is  $\text{שִׁפְכוּהָ}$ , which is most likely the true one. According to the Masora, as cited by Buxtorf, there are fourteen such instances as these in the Biblical text, (Thes. Gram., p. 102.†) In a few cases the  $\text{ה}$  is not found: as,  $\text{אָמְרוּן}$  they said. Art. 72.

21. When the accent is, on any account, drawn back, the original vowels return: as,  $\text{יָבִיאוּהוּ}$  they have brought forth, Gen. xxxi. 43;  $\text{חָדְלוּהוּ}$  they ceased, Judg. v. 7;  $\text{נָזְלוּהוּ}$  they became debased, Isaiah lxiii. 19, lxiv. 2;  $\text{יָכְלוּהוּ}$  they were able, Exod. viii. 14. In a few instances, a paragogic  $\text{ה}$  is added: as,  $\text{הִהְיֶהְלֶכְהוּהָ}$  Jos. x. 24 (Artt. 119. 175. 3.).

On the Second Person Masculine Singular.

22. Instead of the termination  $\text{תָּ}$ , we sometimes have  $\text{תָּהּ}$ , which is the more usual termination of the pronoun (Art. 145. 2.):

* The force of this letter will be considered in the Syntax.

† Ed. 1630.

as, קָבַדְתָּהּ thou hast dealt perfidiously, Mal. ii. 14; זָקַנְתָּהּ thou art grown old, Josh. xiii. 1, &c.

23. Whenever the root ends in ת, and also receives this pronominal affix, both these letters will coalesce by Dāgēsh: as, פָּרַתָּהּ thou hast cut, Deut. xx. 20, for פָּרַתְתָּהּ. When י is the last letter of the root, and this or any similar suffix is added, the י is dropped (Art. 76.), and for this a compensation is made by inserting Dāgēsh forte in the first letter of the affix; as, נָתַתָּהּ, for נָתַתְתָּהּ thou gavest, Gen. iii. 12. So, נָתַתִּי, for נָתַתְתִּי I gave; נָתַתְתֶּם, for נָתַתְתֶּם you gave, &c.

On the Second Person Singular Feminine.

24. When the last radical letter happens to be ח or ע, (-) stands in the place of the first Shēvā (Art. 45.): as, לָקַחְתְּ, for לָקַחְתִּי* thou didst receive, 1 Kings xiv. 3; שָׁמַעְתְּ thou didst hear, Jer. iv. 19; יָדַעְתְּ thou didst know, Jer. l. 24. In roots ending in י, that letter will be dropped as before: נָתַתְּ thou gavest, Ezek. xvi. 33.

25. In many instances, particularly in the Books of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, this affix assumes the form תִּי, for תְּ, which is also a termination of the original pronoun (See Art. 145. 2. p. 161; note): as, תִּקְרָאתִי thou wilt call, for תִּקְרָאתְתִי Jer. iii. 4; שָׁמַעְתִּי thou hast heard, Ib. iv. 19; to which many others may be added.

On the Second Person Plural Masculine.

26. We have occasionally a Khīrik with the second radical letter, instead of (-): as, יִרְשְׁתֶּם, for יִרְשְׁתֶּם ye shall possess, Deut. iv. 1. In others (◌): as, שָׁאַלְתֶּם ye asked, 1 Sam. xii. 13; and, as before, נָתַתֶּם, for נָתַתְתֶּם ye gave, Jer. xxxvii. 18 (Art. 76.).

On the Second Person Plural Feminine.

27. Instead of the termination תֶּנָּה, we sometimes have תֶּנְנָה, which is also a termination peculiar to the pronoun of this person (Art. 145. 2.); הַשְׁלִכְתָּנָה ye cast forth, Amos iv. 3. This, however, is an example belonging to the Hiphhil species.

* In some editions only.

On the First Person Singular, common gender.

28. A few verbs have Khīrik for their second vowel: as *יִלְדֵתִי** I have begotten, Ps. ii. 7, for יִלְדֵתִי. So, *שָׁאַלְתִּי** for שָׁאַלְתִּי I asked, 1 Sam. i. 20. Here also, as before, (Nos. 23. 24.) roots ending in ת, or ל, will reject those letters, and supply their place by Dāgēsh.

29. In the first person plural also, roots ending in ל will cause that letter to coalesce with the נ of the pronominal suffix: as, נָתַנְנִי (for נָתַתְנִנִּי) we gave, Lam. v. 7.

30. Upon the whole, then, these are rather apparent than real anomalies. It is consistent with the analogy of this language to make certain changes in the vowels, upon the occurrence of any of the guttural letters. The concurrence of any two identical letters is also regularly expressed, by placing a Dāgēsh in one of them, and omitting the other, provided no vowel intervene (Art. 47.). Nún נ likewise is regularly rejected, whenever it should receive a final Shēvā (Art. 76.). Other varieties in the vowels may be accounted for, by supposing different nouns derived from the same primitive, to have been originally taken as the leading word.

31. N. B. The remarks here made on the preterite tense of the first species Kal, will apply, in a great measure, to those of all the rest.

* But perhaps these vowels do not belong to the form פָּקַד, but פָּקַד, or perhaps, פָּקַד. וָרַת, וָרַת, is certainly the root in Arabic to which יִרְשָׁתֶם must be referred; and יָלִיד a son, may be the root of the second, and שָׁאַל, Arab. سَأَلَ a beggar, of the third. And hence, perhaps, it is that the same root is occasionally found with different vowels. In Arabic, also, we have خَفِيَ hiding one's self; خَفِيَ concealing something; رَفَعَ he raised; and رَفَعَ he was elevated, ennobled; رَفَعَ he had a high voice, &c. De Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. p. 119.

On the Present Tense of the First Species KAL.

189. It has been remarked (Art. 182. 10.) that the leading word of this tense in Kal is always one or other of the Segolate nouns of the forms פָּקַד, בָּקַר, or בָּקַד. There are, however, a few examples in which פָּקִיד is the form taken, as we shall see presently. These nouns are generally abstract as to sense (Art. 152. 10.): if, then, a personal pronoun, or any abridged form of it, be affixed, we shall have a meaning something like the following: He (is) a visiting; Thou (art) a coming, &c., where the words visiting and coming are not used as participles but as abstract nouns, which must necessarily intimate a present tense. How this, as well as the preterite, tense, is used in composition, will be shewn when we come to the Syntax.

Paradigm of the Present Tense.

נִפְקְדוּ		נִחְנוּ פָּקַד We visit.	נִפְקְדוּ	as before. We visit.

2. The form הַמְּקַדֵּי may, perhaps, stand for הַמְּקַדֵּי, with the י of הַמְּקַדֵּי transposed, as we say, what man soever, for whatsoever man, &c., in English.

3. Of יִפְקְדֵי the same may be said which has been said of others (Art. 139. 7. note). As to the ת prefixed to the feminine, what has just been said of הַמְּקַדֵּי must suffice. The תָּה suffixed is probably a fragment of the pronoun הַתָּה, as Jahn has observed (Gram., p. 177. Ed. 1809.). The derivations of the other forms are sufficiently obvious. See Comment on the Kafia, p. 117-

5. Paradigm of the Third Form פָּקַד.

This form never occurs except in verbs which are subject to some defect, and then but seldom.

* So יִרְכַּב he rides; יִרְפַּד he spreads; יִרְבֵּץ he lies down; יִגְדֵל he increases, &c. When the last letter is guttural, the final vowel is, for the most part, (-): as, יִשְׁמַע he hears; יִשְׁלַח he sends; יִגְבַּה he rises, is exalted. This also will be the case when the middle letter is guttural, just as it is with the Segolate nouns (Art. 148. 7.).

			PLURAL.
Pers.	Masc.			Fem.
3	יָתְנוּ	They give.	}		wanting.
2	תִּתְנוּ	Ye give.
1	נִתְּנוּ	We give.

6. It has been remarked (Art. 189.), that the form of פָּקֹד is sometimes taken as the leading word of the present tense. The following are examples: viz. יִשְׁפֹּטוּ they judge, Exod. xviii. 26; יִתְּשֹׁרֵם it (fem.) preserves, or keeps, Prov. xiv. 3; תַּעֲבִירִי pass thou over (fem.), Ruth ii. 8: אֲנֹכֵשָׁה (for אֲנֹכֵשָׁה Art. 72.) I am mortally pained, Ps. lxix. 21.

7. Of these forms, the first פָּקֹד is the most generally used in Kal; and, for the most part, it has a transitive signification. פָּקֹד occurs but seldom, and is mostly intransitive. פָּקֹד is found in defective verbs only; as, אָמַר or אֶמַר, יָאמַר or יֵאמַר, יִשָּׁב, יִגְלֶה, &c.

8. In all cases in which the terminating vowel is perfect and regularly accompanied by an accent, upon the accent's being withdrawn (which always takes place when the verb is joined with any other word by Makkáph, &c.), such final vowel will be changed for its correspondent imperfect one (Art. 119. 3. &c.): as, אֲשַׁמְרֶהוּ I will keep for him, Ps. lxxxix. 29; אֲתַמְדֶּבּוּ I will sustain him, Is. xlii. 1, for אֲשַׁמֵּר and אֲתַמְדֶּה respectively.*

9. The same verb is sometimes found to occur in more than one of these forms; as, יִשְׁבֹּת he rests, Gen. ii. 2; and יִתְּשֹׁבֵת it rests, Neh. vi. 3; לֹא אֲחַפֵּץ I am not willing, Ezek. xviii. 32; and יִהַפֵּץ.

* It is a curious fact that the tense corresponding to this in the Arabic verbs, is subject to a variation of ending, similar to that of the nouns, i. e. its terminations will answer to those of the nominative or objective cases. This tense they term <sup>مضارع</sup> alike, because it is said to be like the noun. In a few instances, indeed, it has the <sup>أ</sup> of the accusative; as, <sup>لنفسعا</sup> we will surely draw, as, <sup>ينصرون</sup> he will surely assist: but of this more in the Syntax.

&c. In others we have an additional <sup>ن</sup>, <sup>و</sup>, as in the nouns of excess (Art. 168):

he will approve, Ps. xxxvii. 23 ; יִטְרֶף he will tear, Ps. vii. 3 ; and יִטְרֶף Gen. xlix. 27. To which many others may be added. (See the Mikhlol of D. Kimkhi, fol. ב, verso.) This may be accounted for by supposing, that the Segolate noun corresponding to both these forms was once in use.

10. When however any paragogic letter is added, this distinctive vowel, be what it may, disappears (as it is the case with some of the Segolate nouns): as, אֲשַׁמְרֶה, not אֲשַׁמְרֶה I will keep, Ps. xxxix. 2 ; אֲשַׁפְּכֶה, not אֲשַׁפְּכֶה I will lie down, Ps. iv. 9 ; אֲהַרְגֶה I will kill, not אֲהַרְגֶה Gen. xxvii. 41. In the last case, the substitute of Shěvá is resolved by Art. 106. 2.

11. In a few instances the letter ׀ is still retained, which was perhaps formerly a mater lectionis: i. e. was used instead of the vowel ı̄ Khōlēm: as, אֲשַׁקְוֶה I rest, Isa. xviii. 4 ; אֲשַׁקְוֶה I weigh, Ezra. viii. 25. In which cases the ׀, or marginal reading, generally gives the more usual form. This ׀, however, is mostly omitted, and Kāmets Khātéf then found to supply the place of the rejected Khōlēm (see Art. 152. 3.): as, אֲפַשְׁעֶה I step, Isa. xxvii. 4 ; אֲשַׁמְעֶה I hear, Dan. viii. 13 ; תִּשְׁחָרֵי thou bribest, Ezek. xvi. 33. In some copies, however, we have (:) Shěvá only in most of these cases.

12. With the third person plural masculine we sometimes have an additional paragogic ׀, supplied; as, יִשְׁמְעוּ they will hear, Exod. iv. 9. Sometimes the preceding vowel is perfect: as, יִשְׁאַלוּ they will ask, Josh. iv. 6 ; יִקְצְרוּ they will reap, Ruth ii. 9. (See Art. 175. 17.) Of this more will be said in the Syntax.

13. When the first radical letter happens to be a guttural, the substitute of Shěvá will be resolved into its cognate imperfect vowel: as, יִאָרְפוּ they will extend (for יִאָרְפוּ, by analogy יִאָרְפוּ, see Art. 106. 2.).

14. In the feminine we have תִּשְׁפַּנֶּה, for תִּשְׁפַּנֶּה, by Art. 175. 20, &c., Ezek. xvii. 23. The final ה is sometimes omitted by apocope, by Art. 73. 2., of which more will be said hereafter.

15. The abbreviated pronouns are regularly prefixed to the present tense, in every species, with Shěvá (:): as, יִפְקֹד; but here, as two Shěvās cannot concur at the commencement of a word, the first is changed to (·), (-), or (::) as circumstances may require, (Art. 106., &c.): as, יִפְקֹד, יִאָרְפוּ, אֲפַקֵּד, &c. Where, however, no such necessity exists, Shěvá remains, as it does with the particles ל, כ, ב, Art. 174 &c.): as in יִפְקֹד, נִפְקֵד, מִפְקֵד, &c.

16. The principles, therefore, by which the vowels both of the verbs and nouns are regulated, are precisely the same. This is also true of the letters, as well as of the forms of words: for these, as we have already seen, are such as the nature of the several cases seems to require.

Of the Infinitives and Imperatives.

190. It is difficult to say which of these two ought to take the precedence, since both present the same form: but, as that which has been termed the imperative is sometimes found conjugated with one or other of the pronouns, the Infinitive has usually been placed first, as exhibiting the more simple form of the verb.

2. It is now generally allowed that the Infinitive (as it has been termed) is nothing more than a Verbal noun, having either an active, neuter, or passive, signification: as, פִּקְוֹד, and in construction, פִּקְוֵי, a visiting, visitatio, or the like, the acceptance of which may be either active or passive, (see p. 89. note); and, שָׁכַב, lying down, which is neuter.

3. Any of these words according to Schröder, when pronounced with some emphasis, will become imperative in signification: as, פִּקְוֵי or פִּקְוֹד inspicere, i. e. “inspice, vel inspice.” So, continues he, “Ab initio nullum discrimen habuit numeri et generis: e. g. שְׁמֹעַ audire! non tantum pro audi, sed et pro audite, Deut. i. 16; יִצְרָח infestare! pro infestate, Num. xxv. 17, &c.

4. We may now come to the forms, and other particulars, connected with this species of words.

5. The forms of the Infinitives are various, and may be either primitive or augmented, according to the sense intended by the writer. We shall, at present, notice only the primitive forms, reserving the others till we come to treat on the augmented species of the conjugation.

Forms of the Infinitive or Verbal Noun, belonging to the First Species of the Conjugation KAL.

6. פָּקֹד, constr. פָּקֹד* is the most frequent; פָּקַד, פָּקֹד, פָּקֹד, and פָּקֹד are more rare. These forms are peculiar to the masculine gender. The following are feminine; פָּקְדָה, פָּקְדָה, פָּקְדָה, פָּקְדָה, פָּקְדָה, פָּקְדָה, פָּקְדָה, פָּקְדָה, פָּקְדָה, פָּקְדָה, &c. These all, excepting the first three, masc. and fem., are of the forms of the Segolate nouns (Artt. 148. 149, &c.); and, as these nouns are generally abstracts (Art. 152. 10.), they are well suited for the functions which they here perform.

7. These, when in conjunction with any of the particles בְּנִלַם, will afford a sense similar to that of the Gerunds in Latin: as, בְּפָקֹד in visiting; לְפָקֹד for visiting; כְּפָקֹד according to the visiting; מִפָּקֹד from, or by, the visiting. In which cases, the form proper for construction is necessarily taken, on account of the following context.

8. In like manner with the pronouns, פָּקְדִי my visiting; פָּקְדֶיךָ thy visiting, &c. in which פָּקֹד is preferred.† We have, however, אֲכַלְכֶם your eating, אֲמַרְכֶם your saying, &c., of the form פָּקַד, as well as the other forms.

9. When the terminating vowel (ו of פָּקֹד) happens to lose the

* Of this form in the nouns is גָּדוּל, constr. גָּדוּל, רָחוּק, קָרוֹב, which imply habit, custom, &c., and occasionally have an abstract signification.

† The nouns equivalent to these in Arabic are subject to the same laws; and they are occasionally found in the plural number, which never occurs in Hebrew. In the last instance, (No. 8.) Grammarians have thought, that a transposition of the o has taken place, supposing פָּקֹד to have been the original form. But, as פָּקְדָה is regularly the feminine form of פָּקֹד, I do not see why פָּקְדִי may not be derived from the same form, particularly as these forms are in use.

accent, it becomes imperfect as in the nouns: as, מְלֹךְ-מִלְּךָ a king's reigning, Gen. xxxvi. 31. In one instance we have an additional ך inserted: as, לְדַרְיוֹשׁ הַדָּבָר for investigating the matter, Ezra x. 16.

10. Buxtorf* thinks, that, in the phrases לְמַשְׁחָה for anointing, Exod. xxix. 29; לְגִבְהָהּ for elevating, Zeph. iii. 11; לְהַמְלִיחַ for using patience, Ezek. xvi. 5, the o has been transposed, on account of the additional paragogic ה. But the truth of this is doubtful: First, because ה is here not paragogic but feminine, as the situation of the accent is sufficient to shew. In the next place, it is not necessary to suppose that the o is transposed, for reasons just given (No. 8, note); and hence we have, in the very next example adduced by him, לְרַחֲקוֹהָ for removing far away, Ezek. viii. 6, where the o is not transposed, but remains in its original situation.

11. Again, the other examples which he gives, viz. בְּנִשְׁמַעְתּוֹ, בְּקִרְבָּתָם shew, beyond all doubt, that the ה above mentioned is of the feminine gender, but not paragogic. Other examples are, שְׂהַטָּה slaying, Hos. v. 2; שְׂאַלָה asking, Isa. vii. 11; יִרְאַה fearing, Deut. iv. 10. These, however, Buxtorf confesses after all, are feminine forms of the Infinitive, which the Jewish Grammarians term Verbal Nouns.

12. It will be difficult, perhaps, and certainly unnecessary, to lay down rules for the use of the other forms. The Student may note them down as they occur. We shall merely remark, that cases will happen here, as in the Arabic, in which it will be extremely difficult to say, whether a noun is to be referred to this class, or to that of the participles: and further, that in some the very same word will occasionally be found in situations suitable to both.

On the Imperative belonging to the First Species.

191. This is usually of the form פִּקֹּד or פִּקְדִי visit, for the second person singular masculine; פִּקְדִי, for the same feminine; פִּקְדוּ, masc. and פִּקְדְנָה or פִּקְדִינָה, fem. for the same person plural. In which will be perceived some of the fragments of the pronouns as already mentioned (Art. 188.).

2. It has already been remarked, that the form פְּקֹד is sometimes used for both numbers and genders (Art. 190. 3.).

3. As the Imperative is generally formed on the same word with the Infinitive, it will occasionally be found with the feminine termination הַיְ, as also with the same vowels: as, שְׁמְרָהּ keep,* Ps. xxv. 20; זְכַרְהָּ remember, 2 Chron. vi. 42. Khōlēm remains unchanged in וְזַמְּרָהּ vilify, curse, Num. xxiii. 7. Judg. xix. 5, we have סִעֵד support (from the form סִעֵד), and v. 8, סִעֵדְךָ with Makkāph (from סִעֵד): and, 1 Kings xiii. 7, סִעֵדְהָ (from סִעֵד) with the paragogic letter הַיְ, whence it should seem, that each of these forms of the verbal noun was once in use.

4. שְׁכַבְּךָ lie down, of the form פְּקֹד, will, upon receiving the feminine termination, lose (-), and then change the first (:) into Khīrik: as, שְׁכַבְּכָה. Upon the same principle, the o of פְּקֹד is generally rejected: as in פְּקֹדִי, פְּקֹדֵי, &c., as above (Art. 189. 10.). In נִצְרָהּ keep, Ps. cxli. 3, we have either an euphonic or an intensive Dāgēsh.

5. Of the form פְּקֹדְךָ, פְּקֹדְךָ destroy ye, Jer. ii. 12; מְשַׁכְּךָ draw ye, Ezek. xxxii. 20; שִׁדְדְךָ lay ye waste, Jer. xlix. 28, are instances. So מְלַכְּךָ reign thou, fem., Judg. ix. 10; צַעֲקֵי cry thou, Jer. xxii. 20; (the medial י has been added on account of the accent's being drawn back, Art 120. 7.); so תַּרְבֵּי make thou dry, Is. xliv. 27.

6. When a guttural is the first letter of the root, (·) is taken instead of Khīrik (·), whenever any asyllabic augment is affixed to the word: as, הַשִּׁפִּי make thou bare, fem., Isa. xlvii. 2; תִּשְׁחָצֵי take thou, fem., Ruth iii. 15.

7. הַשִּׁמִּי divine thou, 1 Sam. xxviii. 8, takes a substitute of Shēvā with the second radical letter, upon the principle of assimilation, noticed Art. 108, for הַשִּׁמִּי. This is sometimes found to take place in the present tense also.

* See Ps. cxli. 3, where this word is used as a noun; unless, indeed, we construe the former word שְׁמִרָהּ with it: thus, שְׁמִרָהּ שְׁמִרָהּ place, keep, i. e. keep constantly. But much reliance cannot be placed upon the accents.

8. The feminine plural will occasionally suffer apocope; as, שְׁמַעְנָן Gen. iv. 23, for שְׁמַעְנָה hear ye, which will also happen occasionally in the present tense, as will be seen hereafter.

On the Participles.

192. We now come to that species of words which have been termed Participles, and have accordingly been classed with the verbs as such, contrary perhaps to every principle of Hebrew Grammar. The fact is, these are nothing more than attributives of one form or other, into the etymology of which nothing having the least possible connection with tense has ever entered. Nor is the force usually ascribed to these words, exclusively applicable to nouns of their forms: חָכֵם wise, רָחוֹק distant, נֹדֵל growing, being just as much participles as בּוֹקֵד, masc., בּוֹקֵדָה and בּוֹקֵדֶת fem. visiting, or בּוֹקֵד, masc., בּוֹקֵדָה, fem. visited, can possibly be; to which a very large number of other forms may be added. The truth appears to be, that all these nouns, together with those conjugated as verbs (which, indeed, is occasionally the case with some of these), are to be regulated in tense by other considerations, as will be shewn hereafter.

2. It is curious enough to remark, that Simonis has, in his Arcanum Formarum, assigned a whole section to words of the form usually ascribed to the first participle, in which they occur as agents, without the least reference whatever to tense. Yet, in one of his notes he says,* “ Exinde vero non sequitur, omnia Participia mera esse Nomina, quod contendit PAGNINUS in Institut. Hebr., p. 229. If by this he means, that these words may occasionally be construed as participles, perhaps no one will object; but, if he contends, that they are not mere attributives, I believe he will contend for a position which will not admit of proof.

193. Having dwelt thus much on the first species of the Hebrew Conjugation, which is indeed the model, and contains the principles upon which all the rest are formed, we may now proceed to give the others, with such notes as shall seem necessary.

2. We have here given the Infinitives, Participles, &c. as usually found in the Paradigm, as we shall in all the other Species; not because we believe this arrangement to be the best, but because we would depart as little as may be from the usual methods; and, because we may in this way familiarize the mind of the Learner with the several forms of these nouns.

3. The sense afforded by this species is mostly objective; sometimes, however, it is subjective: as, הִלָּחַם he fought; נִשְׁבַּע he swore; נִשְׁעָן he reclined; נִשְׁפָּט he contended; where co-operation seems rather to be implied: at others it is reflective: as, נִשְׁמַר watching one's self; נִשְׁאֵל asking for self; and at others, its force may be expressed in English, by using, may, can, must, ought, or the like. See Gen. vi. 21; xvi. 10; xx. 9. All of which may be very well comprehended in the compound form of this word, when regulated by the circumstances mentioned in the context. See Art. 157. 18, 20.

On the Preterite Tense.

4. When the primitive word happens to begin with a guttural letter, the vowel accompanying נ may be either (·) or (-), but not (·): as, נְהַשֵּׁב accounted, Num. xviii. 27; נֶאֱמַר said, Dan. viii. 26; נִבְעָרוּ overturned, Esth. ix. 1; נִבְחַתּוּם sealed, Ib. viii. 8; נִפְקָד placated, 1 Chron. v. 20; where we have the form פְּקֹד or פְּקֹד, instead of פִּקֹד. So נְמֹל and נְמֹלוּ circumcised, Gen. xvii. 27, for נִמְּוֹל (Art. 76.). In one instance נ seems to have been affixed to one of the augmented forms נִפְּקֵר it shall expiate, Deut. xxi. 8, for נִתְּפֵר, in full נִהְיֶה פִּפְּרָה (Art. 83. 1.), grounded on the form הִתְּפִקֵד.

5. In נִאֲשָׂא left, Ezek. ix. 8, the additional word forming this species (see Art. 157. 18.) seems here to be given more at length than usual. Buxtorf thinks that we have here a form compounded of both tenses, than which nothing can be more unlikely.* For הִתְּ in נִתְּפִקֵד we sometimes have the Chaldee ת, as in Kal (Art. 188. 16.); as, נִשְׁכַּחַת forgotten, Is. xxiii. 15.

6. נִנְאָלוּ they were polluted, Lam. iv. 14, on the form פְּנֹקֵד, probably from גּוֹאֵל an avenger. Of the same form is נִאֲחֲזִי they shall be possessed of, Num. xxxii. 30. In the word נִאֲדָרִי Exod. xv. 6, we have perhaps an abbreviated form for נִאֲדָרָה הִיא it is become glorious, the preceding word, יִמְיוֹ, being regularly of the feminine gender. This, therefore, need not be considered as anomalous, in any other point of view.

On the Present Tense, Imperative, &c.

7. The leading form mostly taken for this tense is פִּקֹד, and sometimes the feminine form פִּקְדָה; פִּקֹד and פִּקְדָה are also found, as in Kal: but, פִּקֹד is used only with the Infinitive or verbal noun, examples of each of which will presently be given.

8. The א of the first person singular is sometimes regularly prefixed with (·); as, אֶדְרֵשׁ I am enquired of, Ezek. xiv. 3; אֶשָּׁבַע I swear, Gen. xxi. 24. Also with the feminine form; as, אֶמְלֹטָה I escape, Ib. xix. 20; אֶכְבֹּדָה I am honoured, Exod. xiv. 17; and * Thes. Gram., lib. i. c. xiv. ad. particip. Niphhál.

אֶפְקֹד Hag. i. 8, where the ה seems to have been lost, as in other instances (Art. 72, &c.), in most of which, however, it is restored in the marginal reading.

9. For אֶפְקֹד, we have אֶתְשַׁבֵּר *thou wilt* be broken*, Ezek. xxxii. 28. So יֵאָנֵשׁ he was infirm, 2 Sam. xii. 15; יִנְפֹשׁ he was refreshed, Exod. xxxi. 17; יִגְמַל he was weaned, Gen. xxi. 8; יֵאָמַר it was said, Josh. ii. 2. So also, יִתְזַכְּרֶנָּה they shall be commemorated, Isa. lxxv. 17; יֵאָכְלֶנָּה they shall be eaten up, Jer. xxiv. 2, to which many more may be added.

10. To the plural יִפְקְדוּ a paragogic ו is often added as in Kal: as, יִפְרְרוּן they shall be cut off, Ps. xxxvii. 9, &c.

11. We have in the Imperative, נִקְבְּצוּ assemble yourselves, Joel iv. 11, for אֶתְקַבְּצוּ, which seems to be grounded on the form פִּקְדוּ or פִּקְדוּ, if it is not the preterite used as an imperative.

12. Whenever here, as in other instances, the first letter of the root is such as to be incapable of receiving Dāgēsh forte, the preceding vowel is necessarily made perfect, as in יֵאָכְשׁ &c. above given (No. 9.).

13. In the Infinitive we have אֶחָאֵל eating, Levit. vii. 18; אֶהַתִּין giving, Jer. xxxii. 4. And with נ for the first letter, נִלְחֹם fighting together, Judg. xi. 25; נִשְׁאַל requesting, 1 Sam. xx. 28; נִבְחַשׁ desiring, Gen. xxxi. 30; נִשְׁלַח sending, Esth. iii. 13; נִגְוַח, for אֶתְגְּוַח striking, Judg. xx. 39, grounded on the form פִּקְוֹד or פִּקְוֹד. To these may be referred אֶתְנַדֵּף (by Art. 76.), for אֶתְנַדֵּף or אֶתְנַדֵּף propelling, Ps. lxxviii. 3. We also have אֶתְדַּרֵּשׁ enquiring, Ezek. xiv. 3, of the same form, with א instead of ה prefixed, the letter usually taken by the Chaldees and Syrians.

14. The Dāgēsh forte, found in the first radical letter in these verbs, is merely compensative for the characteristic נ which has been rejected according to rule (Art. 76.).

15. The noun given here as a participle, has, in a few instances, (·) instead of (τ): as, נִוְקֵשׁ, (for נִוְקֵשׁ, form נִוְקֵשׁ Art. 87. 1.) taken in a net, Ps. ix. 17. Alting† is of opinion, that the plurals נִבְאִים persons prophesying, 1 Sam. xix. 20, Jer. xiv. 15, Ezek.

* Reasons for translating this present tense by a future will be given in the Syntax.

† Sect. vii. §. 119. de verbo perfecto.

xiii. 16 ; נְהַבְּאִים hidden, Josh. x. 17 ; נְמַמְּאִים polluted, Ezek. xx. 30, 31 ; נְמַצְּאִים found, Esth. i. 5, iv. 16, 1 Sam. xiii. 15, and some others, are formed on the measure נִבְּקַד. But this is by no means necessary. The (τ) of the singular is, it is true, mostly found with the second radical : as, נִבְּאִים, but then, this vowel is not immutable, and may become (:) for the mere sake of euphony, which is perhaps the case in all these instances.

On the Persons &c. of the Third Species PĪHEL.

2. Whenever the last radical letter happens to be one of the gutturals, or ק, (-) Páthakh will be the terminating vowel; פָּקַד will, therefore, be the measure in such cases: as, שָׁבַר he broke, Ps. cvii. 16; בָּלַע he swallowed, Is. xxv. 8; שָׁלַח he sent, Exod.

ix. 7, &c. &c. Also when followed by Makkáph; as, לְמִדְּיָעַת he taught knowledge, Eccl. xii. 9.

3. In a few instances (◌) is the terminating vowel: as, וַיֹּאמֶר he said; וַיִּבֹשׁ he washed; וַיִּפְּרַח he expiated.

4. When any letter incapable of receiving Dāgēsh is the medial letter of the root, a compensation is made by changing the preceding imperfect vowel to its corresponding perfect one: as, מָאָן he refused, for מֵאָן. So בֵּרַךְ he blessed; and, in the participle מְבַרְךָ  blessing; מְהַאֵב detesting, &c.; בִּיָּאֵר he explained; אֶחָר he delayed (Art. 109.). In a few instances (◌) Khīrik remains without any apparent compensation: as, בִּיעַר he destroyed, 1 Kings xxii. 47; וַיִּצְטַעַר he vexed, Ps. x. 3; וַיִּלְהַט he inflamed, Mal. iii. 19; וַיִּנְחַם he consoled, Is. xlix. 13; וַיִּאָּחֲרוּ they delayed, Judg. v. 28, where א occurs with Sēgól. So, in the Participles; מִפְּחָד fearing, Prov. xxviii. 14; מְנַהֵל leading, Is. li. 18, &c. In all which cases Dāgēsh is said to be implied (Art. 109.).

5. When the accent is drawn back in the feminine (פְּקֻדָּה) the characteristic vowel (◌) returns: as, לִחְקָה it licked, 1 Kings xviii. 38; וַיִּקְטַף she gleaned, Ruth ii. 18, &c. (Art. 119. 11.).

6. In some instances Dāgēsh forte is omitted when the letter is capable of receiving it: as, וַיִּשְׁלַח she sent, Ezek. xvii. 7; וַיִּשְׁלְחוּ they sent, Ps. lxxiv. 7. So, וַיִּלְלוּ passim, for וַיִּלְלוּ praise ye. See Art. 113.

7. We have in the participle מְלַמְּנֵנוּ our teacher, Job xxxv. 11, for מְאֻלְמְנֵנוּ, by Art. 73. And, Jer. xv. 10, מְקַלְלֵנִי cursing me, but in the margin, מְקַלְלֵנִי, which is probably the true reading, giving the participle or concrete verbal noun, written like a verb, with the fragment of the first personal pronoun. See p. 186, note.

8. In the participle of the feminine gender, (◌) occasionally remains: as, מְשַׁבְּלָה causing abortion, Exod. xxiii. 26; we also have מְשַׁבְּרָה inebriating, Jer. li. 7; and without Dāgēsh, מְנַאֲפָה (for מְנַאֲפָת) committing adultery, Prov. xxx. 20; and by contraction, מְשַׁרְתָּ (for מְשַׁרְתָּת) ministering, 1 Kings i. 15 (Art. 77.).

9. For the particular force of this species, see Art. 154. 7—9.

On the Objective Voice, or Fourth Species, PŪHAL.

10. We sometimes have (◌) Khātúph in this species instead of (◌), e. g. כִּרְתָּ it was cut, Ezek. xvi. 4; where it should be observed, that ׀ receives Dāgēsh, contrary to the usual practice : שִׁדְדָהּ it is destroyed, Nah. iii. 7. So also the participial noun מֵאֲדָמָם made red, Ib. ii. 4 ; and, in the plural number, מֵאֲדָמִים,* Exod. xxv. 5.

11. In many instances, the Dāgēsh is implied (Art. 109.); as, רָחַץ washed, Prov. xxx. 12 ; רַחֲמָהּ object of mercy, fem., Hos. i. 6. The Kāméts found here in the penultima is on account of the pause-accent (Art. 120. 4.). So, נִחַמָהּ consoled, Is. liv. 11.

12. When Dāgēsh is neither written nor implied, the preceding vowel is necessarily made perfect ; as, הִרְג slain, Is. xxvii. 7 ; טָרַף torn, Gen. xlv. 28 ; פָּרַשׁ declared, revealed, Num. xv. 34 ; סִעֲרָהּ agitated, (as with a whirlwind,) Is. liv. 11. In all which cases the correspondence of the vowels is oblique (Art. 96. 2.).

13. In some instances the correspondence is direct ; as, יֹלְדָהּ born, Judg. xiii. 8 ; יִקְנָשִׁים taken in a net, Ecces. ix. 12 ; מוֹעֲדָתָהּ out of joint, Prov. xxv. 19. In the first two examples Dāgēsh is perhaps euphonic ; in the last, Kāméts is put for Sēgól on account of the pause (Art. 120. 4.). In Jer. xxii. 23, we have this participial noun, with several others, so combined with the feminine pronoun of the second person singular, as to have given considerable uneasiness to the Grammarians : the passage is,—

יִשְׁבְּתִי בְּלִבְנוֹן מְקַנְנִתִי בְּאֲרָזִים מִחֲנַנְתִּי בְּבֵאֵלֶךָ חֲבָלִים

Thou (who) dwellest in the Libanus—art nestled in the cedars—how shalt thou be consoled when pains come upon thee?

Here יִשְׁבְּתִי is put for יִשָּׁב אֶתִּי, מְקַנְנִתִי for מְקַנְנֵן אֶתִּי, and נִחַמָהּ for נִחַמֵנִי אֶתִּי. In all which cases, we have nothing more than the feminine form of the pronoun in conjunction with a participial, or verbal concrete, noun. In the example מְקַנְנִתִי, Rabbi Jona was of opinion, according to Buxtorf, that some of the vowels only had been retrenched ; by which he probably meant, that the pronoun was added, some abbreviation being first made (See p. 176, note.)

14. In a few instances we have a substitute of Shévá, where analogy requires the Shěvá, which seems to have been introduced merely for the sake of euphony: as, לָקַחְתָּ taken, Gen. ii. 23; תִּבְקָשִׁי thou shalt be sought, Ezek. xxvi. 21 (Art. 106. 5.).

* In some editions, and as cited by Buxtorf, this word is written מֵאֲדָמָם and מֵאֲדָמִים, with Kāméts Khātéf under ם, which is contrary to the first principles of Hebrew syllabication. They are thus also cited by Kimkhi, in the Mikkhol, from which Buxtorf probably took his examples.

15. For the particular force of this Species, see Art. 154. 7—15. 16.

On the Active Voice.

2. The characteristic ה of this species occurs also with (·), (··), or (-), but this happens only when a guttural letter follows: as, הִאֱמִין he believed, Gen. xlv. 26; הִעֲמִיד he caused to stand, Lev. xiv. 11; הִאֲמַרְתָּ thou hast professed, Deut. xxvi. 17; הִעֲבַרְתָּ thou hast caused to pass over, Josh. vii. 7. We also have הִעֲבַרְתָּ Exod.

xiii. 12, and הַעֲבַרְתִּי Zech. iii. 4, &c. And with (:) under the guttural in הַחֲתִימִים it is obstructed, Lev. xv. 3.

3. In one instance we have (·) with the middle radical letter: as, הִשְׁאַלְתִּיהוּ I have requested him, 1 Sam. i. 28. See the notes on Kal (Art. 188. 28.).

4. On the word הִחֲדַלְתִּי shall I leave? Judg. ix. 9, 11, 13, much has been written, but perhaps not very conclusively. Let us endeavour to analyze it. It will be seen by turning to the lexicons, that הִחֲדַל is the form of the Imperative in Kal: which, according to our system, will give הִחֲדַלְתִּי, for the primitive Segolate noun. Here, then, we have nothing more than a Segolate noun, conjugated with the pronoun, which in the first person will regularly be הִחֲדַלְתִּי, and, by rejecting the Khōlēm (as in the Segolates, Art. 152. 3.), and retaining the correspondent substitute of Shěvâ, in order to preserve the form, we shall have הִחֲדַלְתִּי, which, with the interrogative הַ prefixed (Art. 179.), we shall have הַחֲדַלְתִּי am I a leaving? i. e. shall I leave? According to this analysis, therefore, this word belongs not to the fifth, but to the first species, conjugated with the abstract, instead of the concrete, noun, which is unusual.

5. In another instance, viz. הִשְׁאַלְתִּי I have polluted, Is. lxiii. 3, we have the augmented verbal noun commencing with שׁ instead of ח: i. e. the form usually taken in the Chaldee and Syriac (Art. 157. 2., 158.

6. Again, we have in Amos iv. 3, הִשְׁלַכְתֶּנָּה, which is an unusual but more regular way of writing the second person plural feminine of the preterite tense: i. e. הִשְׁלַכְתֶּנָּה, usually הִשְׁלַכְתֶּנָּה (Art. 188. 27.), ye have cast. In Isaiah, chap. xix. 6, we have הִשְׁאַזְנִירוּ they shall abhor, with two letters of augmentation, שׁ and ה; but here, הִשְׁאַזְנִירוּ is perhaps the ground-form.

7. In the present tense we also have the form הִפְקֹד; and in both, the characteristic ם is frequently omitted. With the paragogic ה, however, ם is always added: as, הִשְׁלִיכָה I will cast, Neh. xiii. 8. With (·); as, יִאֱמֵן he may believe, Job xv. 31. And by a further contraction, יִבְטַח he will give confidence, 2 Kings xviii. 30, for יִבְטַח or יִבְטִיחַ.

8. In some instances every trace of the characteristic ם is lost; as, יָדְבִקוּ they arrived at, 1 Sam. xxxi. 2; יָדְרִקוּ they bend, tread, or direct, as a bow, Jer. ix. 2. Where the primitive form seems to have been taken instead of the usual one of the measure פְּקִיד.

9. אָקַף I will collect, 1 Sam. xv. 6, is put for אֶקְפֶּה (for אֶקְפֶּה Artt. 72., 87.1.), root יָסַף or וָסַף. So, אֶבְרֹד I will ruin, Jer. xlvi. 8 (for אֶבְרֹדָה Ib. for אֶבְרֹדָה), root וָבַד, Arabic وَبَدَ, cognate with אָבַד.

10. א is sometimes rejected together with the characteristic ה, to facilitate the pronunciation perhaps: as, אָזַן I will hear, Job xxxii. 11 (for אֶזְנֶן Art. 72.). So, אֶסַּף I will destroy them, Jer. viii. 13, for אֶסַּפֶּם; יָהֵל he shall pitch a tent, for יִהְיֶהֱלֵל, Is. xiii. 20; יוֹחֵר he tarries, 2 Sam. xx. 5, is perhaps for the passive form יִחָחֵר, for יִחָחֵר (Art. 73.); and, as the quiescence of א after Kāméts Khātúf is rather unusual in Hebrew, the ה may have been taken to avoid this. The final (◌) is probably euphonic, and taken on account of the guttural, as in other cases.

11. Some are of opinion, that וַיִּרְבֶּה 1 Sam. xv. 5, is put for וַיִּצְרַב by omitting the א, as above, by Art. 73.

12. In the Imperative we may have a paragogic ה, which will then, as before (No. 7.), take the characteristic י: as, הִצְלִיחֵהָ prosper thou, Neh. i. 11.

13. Whenever the second or third radical letter is either a guttural or ר, the terminating vowel will be (-): as, הִבְחַת cause to come down, Joel iv. 11; הִרְחֵק remove far away, Job xiii. 21; הַיִּשָּׁר make straight, Ps. v. 9.

14. In the Infinitive or abstract verbal noun, the characteristic ה has (-) for the most part: as, הַכְּרִית cutting off, Jer. xliv. 8; הַזְּקִיר commemorating, 2 Sam. xviii. 18. When any one of the particles contained in the word בְּכַלֵּם is prefixed, this form is always adopted; when this is not the case, we may have הַפְּקֹד, or הַפְּקִיד: as, הַשֶּׁבֶם rising early, Jer. vii. 13; הַעֲמִיד setting up, Neh. vii. 3; הַשְׁמִיד destroying, Amos ix. 8.

15. When either the second or third letter is a guttural, or ר, we then have (-) for the final vowel, as before: as, הַפָּצֵר resisting, 1 Sam. xv. 23; הַזְּפִרְכֶם your bringing to recollection, Ezek. xxi. 29.

16. In many instances, we have the first vowel of the Infinitive the same with that of the Preterite tense: as, הִרְגִיעַ giving rest; הִרְגִיעַ shaking, Jer. l. 34: הִמְלִיט liberating; הִצִּיל saving, Is. xxxi. 5.

17. לְהִצְדִּיב 1 Sam. ii. 33, is probably put for לְהִצְדִּיב (Art. 73.), derived from the root אָדַב; אָדַב he punished. Whence תִּאֲדִיב correction, punishment. See Eichhorn's edition of the Lexicon of Simonis, sub voce אָדַב.

On the Objective Voice, הוֹפְהָל.

18. This voice is grounded on nouns of the form of הִפְקֹד or הִפְקָד (Art. 157. 10.). And here, as in the Pūhāl, the agent never appears; and hence, both are called by the Hebrew Grammarians, as are also those corresponding to them in Arabic by the Arabians, Conjugations the agents of which are not named.*

19. Kibbúts occasionally accompanies ה, instead of (τ) Khātúph; as, הִשָּׁבַת thrown down, Ezek. xxxii. 32; הִשָּׁלַךְ cast down, Dan. viii. 11.

20. When the first radical letter happens to be a guttural, (τ) occupies the place of Shévá: as, הִחָרְבָה she is laid waste, Ezek. xxvi. 2, where the Kāméts Khātúph becomes a perfect vowel, and remains under the characteristic ה, by analogy (see Art. 55.).

21. The participial nouns frequently occur with (ν) instead of (τ) Khātúph: as, מִשָּׁבַב laid down, 2 Kings iv. 32. So in the feminine, מִשָּׁלַכָה cast down, 1 Kings xiii. 25. In one instance, the characteristic ה is retained, as is often the case in the Chaldee: as, מִהִקְצָעוֹת (for מִקְצָעוֹת) made angular, Ezek. xlvi. 22. But, when the first radical is a guttural, it will take (τ): as before: e. g. מִעֲמֹד set up, 1 Kings xxii. 35: מִאֲחֻזִּים contained, held, 2 Chron. ix. 18; מִחָרְבוֹת wasted, Ezek. xxix. 12. So מִיִּחְרַם (who is) forbidden, Exod. xxii. 19. Here also Kāméts Khātúph is equivalent to י.

* Heb. בִּנְיָן שָׁלַח נִזְפַּר שֵׁם פְּעֻלוֹ, Arab. صِيغَةُ مَا لَمْ يَسْمُ فاعله

The reason of this seems to be, that, as the nominative is included in the verb, and, as in these passive conjugations, this nominative is not the agent, but the patient on which the influence of the verb is exerted, if any other word were added as a nominative, (which would then be in apposition with the pronoun so included,) it would not represent the agent, but the patient; and further, it is unusual in the Shemitic dialects to use a periphrasis; as, Judah was killed by Simeon; for then it would be shorter to say, Simeon killed Judah; the Grammarians, therefore, have laid down this apparent omission as a rule, although some instances are to be found to the contrary.

22. The characteristic ה of this and the last species is generally rejected, when preceded by any preformative taking an initial Shévá: as, יִפְקֹד for יִהְיֶה־פְקֹד; יִפְקֹד for יִהְיֶה־פְקֹד, &c. See Art. 73.

23. For the peculiar force of this species, both subjective and objective, see Art. 157. 2—10.

On the Species termed HITHPAHEL.

2. The last vowel in both tenses, as well as in the Imperative, is frequently (-): as הִתְחַזַּק he seemed strong, 2 Chron. xiii. 7: הִתְגַּלַּח he shall be shaved,* Lev. xiii. 33, and, with the Chaldaic prefix אֶתְחַבֵּר he joined himself, 2 Chron. xx. 35. So in the present tense, אֶתְנַחֵם I will console myself, Ps. cxix. 52 (the primitive word being נָחַם, not נָחַם); הִתְהַבֵּר thou arrogatest praise to thyself, Prov. xxv. 6; הִתְחַסַּד thou shewest thyself kind, 2 Sam. xxii. 26; הִתְמַלֵּם thou shewest thyself perfect, Ib. et Psalm xviii. 26; הִתְפַּלֵּל thou shewest thyself perverse, 2 Sam. xxii. 27. See Ps. xxxvii. 4, and 1 Kings xx. 22, for the Imperative. Here the primitive word seems to have had (-) for its last vowel.

3. In נִפְּאֵר he shall be expiated, Deut. xxi. 8, we have a contracted form for נִתְפַּאֵר, a compound of both the Hithpāhél, and Niphhál, forms. To which I see no ground for objection; because I hold that the augment of the Niphhál species may be prefixed to a noun commencing with ת, with just as much propriety as it can to any other. The Rabbinical writers often use this form.

4. Any root having a medial letter incapable of receiving Dāgēsh, will make the usual compensation (See Art. 109.) The verb here also, as in other instances, may have the paragogic ה (See Art. 175. 4.).

5. In a few instances, (·) attends the medial radical letter; as, הִתְקַדְּשֵׁתִי I will shew myself holy; הִתְגַּדְּלֵתִי I will shew myself great, Ezek. xxxviii. 23. (See Lev. xi. 44.) We have also Khōlēm: as, הִתְנַעֲשׂוּ they shall be moved; הִתְהַלְּלוּ they shall be made mad, Jer. xxv. 16. The primitive nouns here are perhaps קֹדֶשׁ, גְּדֹל, גַּעַשׁ, and הִלָּל, which will account sufficiently for the vowels.

6. In the participial noun we have מִפְּאֵץ irritated, Isa. lii. 5, for מִתְנַחֵץ, where the primitive noun is of the form פָּקַד.

7. The feminine form has sometimes a segolate termination; as, מְתַאֲמָצֵת strengthening herself, Ruth i. 18; מְתַלְקָחַת contained, Exod. ix. 24.

* The future signification of this tense will be accounted for in the Syntax.

8. In Exod. ii. 4: וַתִּתְנֶבֶב and she stood, we have a very singular anomaly, and one which has given great trouble to the Grammarians, among whom Albert Schultens seems to me to have approached nearest to the truth. His solution of the difficulty is:—"It is not only," says he, "in the sibilants that a transposition might take place (Art. 83. 2. 3.), but also in any other letter, as in the Arabic species اَفْتَعَلَ. If then we take נִבֵּב for the root, and write הִתְנַבֵּב for הִתְנִיבֵב and then drop the י (Art. 72.) we shall have הִתְנַבֵּב, which will be sufficiently analogical. Altling refers the form to a Syriasm. Heb. Gram., § 163.

9. Of the objective form of this species only a few instances occur; as, הִתְקַדְּדוּ they were set in order, arranged, Num. i. 47, ii. 33, xxvi. 62, 1 Kings xx. 27. In our authorized version, this word is translated by numbered, for which there seems to be no good authority. For some account of (τ) instead of (-) under the first radical letter, see Art. 185. 4. 5; 157. 10, note.

Other examples are: הִטְמַמְּאָה polluted (for הִתְטַמְּאָה, where ט and ת combine under ט, Art. 83.), Deut. xxiv. 4; and הִדְשְׁנָה made fat, Is. xxxiv. 6, for הִתְדַשְׁנָה Art. 83. 1.

10. For the properties of this species, see Art. 157. 12—16; and for the transpositions which sometimes take place in the letters, Art. 83.

On the remaining and less usual Species of the Conjugation of Hebrew Verbs.

197. Of these, the forms פִּוּדַד, פִּוּדָד, and הִתְפִּוּדַד classed under the third, fourth, and seventh species (Art. 186.), will be considered when we come to treat on those roots which have ו or י for their middle radical; or, have the second and third the same; because those verbs alone are subject to these forms.

2. It must have appeared from what has already been said, that, although the roots or words to be conjugated may be multiform, the conjugation is but one: that is to say, the different persons, &c., are formed in all cases by one general and regular process. The persons, for example, are formed either by prefixing or postfixing the defective forms of one or other of the pronouns (Artt. 188. 189.): the Imperative and Infinitive by taking the root and suffixing the pronouns or not; and the participles by prefixing מ, which may then be inflected like other nouns. The following examples taken from the Mikhlol of D. Kimkhi will sufficiently illustrate this subject, as applied to pluriliteral roots.

PASSIVE PARTICIPIAL NOUN.

מְכַרְבֵּל, &c., 1 Chron. xv. 27.

3. In the same manner may be conjugated פָּרַקֵם he cut off; רִמְּטָשׁ he was full of moisture; פִּרְשָׁז׃ he spread; נִזְרַקֵר׃ he undermined; חִרְרַר׃ he inflamed, &c., which are nothing more than reduplicated nouns. See Art. 169.

4. From the noun פִּתְחָרָה a breast-plate, we have פִּתְחָרָה thou puttest on a breast-plate, Jer. xii. 5. And as a participle, מְפִתְחָרָה, Ib. xxii. 15.

5. Of primitive words dropping the medial ו or י, and reduplicating the first and last radical letters (Art. 169. 5.), the following are given as the leading forms of verbs: פָּלְלָל sustaining; פָּרַפֵּר leaping; סָכַסַּף arming; צִפְצָף chirping; תִּרְקַר׃ (rather תִּרְקַר, as above), undermining. Many of these, however, are placed by other Grammarians under roots having the second and third radicals the same. In one instance we have an objective form, קָלְלָלוּ they were sustained, 1 Kings xx. 27.

6. The following are supposed by Kimkhi to have been formed by reduplicating the first and second letter of the root (Art. 169. 3.): as, אֲנַשְׁג causing to increase; שֹׁעֵשֵׁע soothing, delighting; הִתְעַתַּע ridiculing. Whence מִתְעַתַּע Gen. xxvii. 12; יִפְיִיבִית thou art exceedingly beautiful, Ps. xlv. 3; מֵאֲמֵא bowing down, overwhelming:— these, by reduplicating the last two, and dropping the first, radical: הִפְכִּיף turning about, tortuous; הִמְרַמַּר becoming very hot; קַתְרַקַּר perambulatory (see Art. 169. 6.); and the following, by also prefixing the particle הֵת: as, הִתְמַהֵמַה delaying.

7. All these, as far as they are found conjugated, follow the general analogy already laid down: e. g. אֶסְכְּסְכֵי I (will) arm Is. xix. 2; יֶסְכְּסֵךְ he will arm, Ib. ix. 10. From אֲנַשְׁג, הִתְנַשְׁגִּי thou (fem.) caustest to grow, Is. xvii. 11. So הִתְמַהֵמַה he delayed; הִתְמַהֵמְהוּ they delayed, Judg. xix. 8; הִתְמַהֵמְהוּ we delayed, Gen. xliii. 10. Infinitive, הִתְמַהֵמַה delaying, Exod. xii. 39. Participle, מִתְמַהֵמַה, It. יִתְמַהֵמַה he will, may, &c. delay, Hab. ii. 3.

In the last instance, the final ה is radical, and therefore it has the Mappik and remains unchangeable, of which more will be said hereafter.

8. It should be observed, that these verbs are found in a very few of the persons at most, and some only as participles or verbal nouns: in no case, perhaps, is any verb found conjugated throughout all the species.

On these pluriliteral verbs, see Jauhari under جهر, Martelotto's Gram. Arab., pp. 185. 162-3. Bochart. Hierozoicon, tom. II., col. 689. Orig. Edit. Hariri, by Mr. de Sacy, p 10 in voce حصص. See also Jauhari and the Kamoos under this and similar words.

LECTURE XII.

ON THE DEFECTIVE VERBS.

198. Having given tables of the verbs whether simple or augmented, and explained some occasional anomalies (as they have been called), we now proceed to consider those verbs which present certain defects in their several forms. We shall be brief, however, because a table of the conjugation of every kind of verb will be given at the end of these remarks. Our principal business now will be to shew, how these defective verbs are reconciled in form with those already considered.

2. It has already been shewn, that primitive words having a נ in certain situations (Art. 76.), or either of the letters אהוי (Art. 72.) will occasionally drop it; and, that one of the two last radical letters of any word, when both are the same, (Art. 77.) may also be rejected. We now remark, that when words thus circumstanced are conjugated with the pronouns, they will be affected both in their vowels and consonants by these considerations. We do not think it necessary here to divide these verbs into Defectives and Quiescents, as has usually been done; because that would, perhaps, be multiplying distinctions without sufficient reasons for doing so.

3. All the anomalies or defects, then, that can possibly occur, must arise from one or more of these letters occurring as the first, second, or third, radical letter of the root; or, when the second and third radicals are the same.

4. Let us begin with those commencing with נ. The rule is (Art. 76.), to this effect: Whenever נ is affected with a final Shěvâ (:), it must be dropped: i. e. whenever the פ in פקד of our paradigm has a final Shěvâ, then, putting any verb commencing with נ in the same situation, the נ will be rejected, and the defect supplied by Dāgēsh forte.

5. All verbs of this kind, therefore, will be conjugated regularly in the Preterite tense of Kal; as, נגש, he approached; נגשת, נגשת, נגשת, &c., as also in the Pihél, Pūhál, and Hithpāhél, throughout.

In the Present tense, the leading word is נגש; here, then, we shall have ינגש, but by Art. 76. יגש, תגש, תגשי, &c.

6. In the same manner in the preterite of Niphhál, נגש, for נגש; and so on by the same rule through the Hiphhíl and Hophhál species.

7. The Infinitive or abstract verbal noun is here, for the most part, of the form פקדת; as, נגשת, and, dropping the נ (Art. 76.), גשת; but, if a guttural be the last radical letter, (גש) will become (גש) as it is the case with segolate nouns (Art. 108.).

8. The Imperative is גש for נגש, which is regularly conjugated: as, גש, גשי, גשו, גשנה. It will be unnecessary to notice this verb farther.

9. As the verb נתן he gave, placed, &c., has a little peculiarity about it, in having ך also for its final letter, it will be necessary briefly to notice its conjugation.

10. Here, then, the final ך will also be rejected by our rule (Art. 76.), whenever that has a final Shěvâ: as, נתת, for נתת, &c. And, as נתן is the leading word for the present tense, we shall have regularly, ינתן, תנתן, &c.; but, by our rule, ינתן, תנתן, &c. This, however, does not universally take place in other verbs commencing with נ.

11. In the Infinitive, for נתת or נתת, according to our last example, we have נתת, by a further contraction, as if נתת or נתת had been the primitive form; and hence, with the affixed pronouns, תָּתִי my giving; תָּתֶי his giving, &c.

12. In these, as in other verbs, we may have (-), (·), or (ו), for the last vowel of either of the tenses: hence תִּגְּשׁ thou shalt exact, Deut. xv. 3; יָבוּל it shall wither, Ps. i. 3; the primitives being, perhaps, נָגַשׁ, and נָבֹל respectively.

13. When the second radical letter is either a guttural or ר, and therefore incapable of receiving Dāgēsh, the compensation, when נ is dropped, is either expressed or implied, (Art. 109.); as, first, יִחַת, for יִחַת (for יִחַת) he will descend; second, נָחַם, for נָחַם, of נִנְחַם he will receive consolation.

14. In most cases when the middle radical is a guttural, the נ is not dropped; as, יִנְאָק he groans; יִנְהָם he rages; יִנְחַל he will possess; יִנְעַם he is mild. There are also a few instances in which the נ is retained, when the second radical is not guttural; as, יִנְטֹר he will keep, Jer. iii. 5; יִתְּבַשׂוּ ye will exact, Is. lviii. 3, &c.

15. The נ is also occasionally preserved in the Infinitive; as, נִבֵּל withering; נִגַּע touching; and in the Imperative; as, נָטַשׁ leave; נִצֵּר keep; נִדַּג dig; נִטַּע plant, &c.

16. As one verb commencing with ל, namely לָקַח he took, is subject, in some degree, to the same rule, it may be proper to notice it in this place.

This verb, then, is found in the species Kal, Nipphál, and Pūhál only. In Kal, the ל is dropped whenever it is accompanied by a final (:), as also in the Imperative, and occasionally in the Infinitive. In the preterite tense, therefore, it will retain all its letters regularly. In the present, we shall have יִלְקַח, for יִלְקַח; and so on. In the Imperative we have קַח and לְקַח, קְחֵי and לְקַחֵי, &c. In the Infinitive, we have two forms, קַחַת (once קַחַת 2 Kings xii. 9.), and לְקַחַת, Deut. xxxi. 26.

17. In Nipphál the ל is retained; as נִלְקַחָהּ and נִלְקַחָהּ it is taken, 1 Sam. iv. 11, 17, 22. Infinitive, הִלְקַחַת being taken, Ibid. 19, 21.

18. In Pūhál we have לָקַחַת in the preterite, and יִלְקַחַת, for יִלְקַחַת, in the present. But in the third person singular feminine of the preterite, לְקַחָהּ (for לְקַחָהּ) Gen. ii. 23, which has probably been effected by attraction.

19. The participles are regular as far as they are found: as, לֹקַח one who takes, &c.

On the Verbs commencing with א or י.

199. The next class of roots we shall notice as subject to certain defects, are those having an א or י for their first radical letter.

2. Now, as these letters standing as the first of any word will lose their power as consonants only when preceded by certain vowels (Art. 37.), the consequence is, the conjugation will be regular, as in פָּקַד, in the preterite of Kal, the Infinitive and Participles; as also in the whole of Pihél, Puhál, and Hithpühél; but, in this last, they seldom occur. We need not therefore give any table of these forms. Let us now proceed to consider those parts in which any defect or contraction arises, in consequence of either of these letters losing their powers as consonants; and, first, of those which have א for the first radical letter.

3. The leading word for the preterite tense of Kal may be of either of the forms פָּקַד or פָּקַד: as, אָמַר he said; אָוַר he shone (for אָוַר perhaps, Art. 75.); that of the present of either פָּקַד, פָּקַד, or פָּקַד, and rarely פָּקַד: as, אָמַר (for אָאמַר Art. 87. 5.) I say; אָוַר binding; תָּאָוַר thou bindest; תָּאָנַף thou art angry; יָאָתָה he comes. A few have two forms; as, אָתָו and אָתָו; אָמַר and אָמַר.

In one case, we have פָּקַד: as, אָנַוּשׁ; so, אָנַוּשׁה, contr. for אָאנַוּשׁה I am languid, Ps. lxi. 21.

4. Taking אָמַר, then, or any other of these leading words, and prefixing the abbreviated pronouns with (:), (Art. 189. 15.), we shall have יָאָמַר, תָּאָמַר, תָּאָמַרִי, אָאמַר he, she, thou, I, speak, &c.: but, by contraction, (Art. 87. 5.), יָאָמַר, תָּאָמַר, תָּאָמַרִי, אָמַר; and, with the accent drawn back, יָאָמַר, תָּאָמַר, &c.: also with (-), יָאָמַר, תָּאָמַר, &c.; or, with א omitted, יָמַר, תָּמַר, &c.;

אָהוּ he held, has יֵאָהוּ and יִאָהוּ, תֵּאָהוּ, and תִּאָהוּ, &c.; many other verbs also, of this kind, have two forms in the present tense.

5. In the Imperative אֲמַר, אִמְרִי, &c. the Infinitive is אָמַר or אִמְרֵ; the participle active אֹמֵר, plural אֹמְרִים, &c. as in פָּקַד. So in the Passive Participle, אֲמוּר.

6. In Niphál the initial א is treated like any other guttural; as, נִאָמַר, נִאָמְרָה, נִאָמְרֵת, &c.; and, in the present tense, יֵאָמַר, תֵּאָמַר, תִּאָמְרִי, &c.; אָהוּ has in this species, נֵאָהוּ, (for נִאָהוּ Art. 87. 5.), plural נִאָהוּ they are taken, Josh. xxii. 9; the leading word taken here being similar to that in the present tense of Kal. The participle is regular, נֹאמֵר, נֹאמְרָה, &c. It will be observed, that the syllabication differs here in a slight degree from that in which a non-guttural letter is the first of the root; as, נִאָמַר Nē-ěmár; נִפְקַד Niph-kád. In the first case the preformative with its vowel forms the first syllable; in the second, the preformative with its vowel together with the first radical letter.

7. In Hiphíl and Hophál, the same rule prevails; as, הֵאָמַן he believed; הֵאָמְנָה, הֵאָמְנֵת, הֵאָמְנֵתִי, הֵאָמְנֵנוּ, &c. Present tense, יֵאָמַן, תֵּאָמַן, תִּאָמְנִי, אֵאָמַן, &c.; or, with the י omitted, יֵאָמַן, תֵּאָמַן, as in other cases.

8. So in the Participial noun, מֵאָמַן, fem. מֵאָמְנָה, pl. מֵאָמְנִים, &c.

9. In a few instances the radical א is dropped; as, הֹאֲכִיל consuming, for הֵאָכִיל, where we have also a contraction of the vowels (Art. 87. 5.) Ezek. xxi. 33. So יִרְבֵּ, for יֵאָרֵב he lies in wait, 1 Sam. xv. 5; אֲזַיֵּן I will hear, for אֵאָזַיֵּן, Job xxxii. 11; אֲסַפֵּ I will collect, Zeph. i. 2, 3; אֲרִיֵּצֵנוּ I will depress him, Jer. xlix. 19; to which several other of the same kind may be added. So in the participle מֵזַיֵּן for מֵאָזַיֵּן hearkening, Prov. xvii. 4.

10. In Hophhál, מִאֲחֻזִּים things or persons held, contained, or the like, 2 Chron. ix. 18, is agreeable with the analogy.

11. Enough perhaps has been said to shew what the process of conjugating these verbs is: we may now proceed, therefore, to those which have ה for their first radical.

200. One remarkable circumstance attends these verbs, which is this: There is a difficulty in ascertaining, whether ה or ח has the greater claim to be considered the first letter of these roots. The same is the case in the Arabic: and, from the frequent substitution of one for the other in the Hebrew, the same difficulty must have long existed in this language.* We shall, therefore, in considering the conjugations, take it for granted, that the primitive forms were written with either ה or ח, and, that the one or the other of these letters has been occasionally taken, as the most convenient for enunciation, when preceded by some vowel depriving it of its power as a consonant.

On the KAL, PIHEL, PUHAL, and HITHPAHEL Species of Verbs commencing with ה.

2. In Pihél, Puhál, and Hithpáhél, as before, we have no defect, which is also the case in the preterite of Kal. In the Infinitive, Imperative, and Present tense of Kal, and in the Niphhál, Hiphhál, and Hophhál species, therefore, our only defects will occur; and these we now proceed to consider.

* Thus we have יָרַד for יָרַד descending, 1 Sam. xxx. 24; וְיָרַד progeny, Gen. xi. 30; וְיָרַד id., 2 Sam. vi. 23; וְיָרַד heavy, Prov. xvii. 27; וְיָרַד laden, Ib. xxi. 8. In all which cases, and indeed in almost all others in the Arabic, ה is taken for the first radical letter.

3. In the present tense of Kal, then, as in former cases, the last vowel of the root may be either (·) (·) or (ו), which may be accounted for in every case, by supposing a different form of the primitive word to have been originally taken. So far all is as before.*

4. In the next place, when the preformatives are brought in contact with י, two modes of adjustment will take place among the vowels and consonants; the one by contraction and occasional omission also: the other by a sort of accommodation and omission: e. g. 1st. יִבֶשׁ becoming dry; present יִבֶשׁ; contracted by Art. 87. 5. יִבֶשׁ; and by omission, יִבֶשׁ, where (·) is a perfect vowel by analogy. So יִרְשׁ he will possess; אִישָׁן I shall sleep; יִקָּץ he will awake; יִשָּׂם he will place; יִצָּר he will form.

5. The second method is, by contracting the (·) and (·) into (·), and omitting the radical י: as, יִשָּׁב, for יִשָּׁב he will dwell; אֵלְךָ I will go; אֲדַע I shall know; תִּרְד she shall descend. This sort of contraction generally takes place, when the last vowel of the leading word is (·), probably for the purpose of promoting euphony, as in the segolate nouns. See Art. 108. In the following examples, (ו) is the last vowel of the primitive form: נִאָּוֵת we agree, Gen. xxxiv. 15; יֵאָּתוּ they agree, 2 Kings xii. 9; יִבּוֹשׁ he blushes: but these two may be derived from אוֹת and בוֹשׁ as the roots.

6. Of this kind, the following are, according to Alting, the only verbs which occur; viz. יִאָּתֵר he agreed; יָדַע he knew; יִלְבֹּד he begat; יָלַךְ he went; יִצָּא he went out; יִקָּע it was dislocated;

* I must dissent from Schræder in supposing many of these roots to be conjugated like those commencing with נ (Reg. 72.), because, the analogy of the language requires a different process when certain vowels precede נ, from what it does when they precede ו, or י; and because the signification of these roots, though cognate, requires no such sacrifice of principle.

יָרַד he descended; יָרַע it seemed evil; יָשַׁב he dwelt. The following have both forms; יָהָם he became hot; יָצַר he formed; יָקַד he burned; יָקָר it was precious; יָשַׁם he desolated, and יָבַשׁ he became dry, to which יָבוֹשׁ above noticed is referred by some. In a few the י is retained with (·): as, אֵילֶכָה I will go, Mic. i. 8; יִיקָר he shall be precious, Ps. lxxii. 14.

7. The former of these modes may be considered, therefore, as conformable with analogy; the latter, as accommodated to euphony.

8. In all those verbs which conform with the analogy (and all are so except the few above noticed) the Imperatives and Infinitives follow the general paradigm: יִרְקֵה spitting, abs. יִסֵּד founding, יִרָא fear thou, &c., in construction.

9. But, when an elision takes place, Art. 76, the first radical letter is dropped, the final vowel remaining: as, יָרַד Infinitive and Imperative, fem. יִרְדֵּה and יִרְדֵּת. This verb has also יִרְד and יָרַד for the Infinitive. So Imp. הִקְוֵה and הִקְוֵה give, root יָקַב; יָדַע know thou, and with the paragogic ה, יִדַּעַה. Infin. יִדַּעַת for יִדַּעַת and יִדַּעַת. What verbs are to be used in the several forms, can be determined only by usage.

10. Several forms of the Infinitive are occasionally derived from the same root: i. e. according to our system, sometimes the abstract noun of one form is taken, and sometimes that of another; as, יָלוּד bringing forth, Job xv. 35, form יִלְוֹד; לָאֵת Gen. xvi. 16; לָת* (for לָאֵת, form יִלְוֹד) 1 Sam. iv. 19. So יִרְדֵּה descending, Gen. xlvi. 3; יִרְדֵּי (form יִלְוֹד) my descending, Ps. xxx. 4.

11. To this variety of forms may be referred the following examples; אִם-שׁוּב תִּשָּׁבוּ Jer. xliii. 10, if ye will still abide, where שׁוּב is probably put for יָשׁוּב, the י being dropped, by Art. 76. כִּי-כָל הַמִּגְבַּל that thou shalt surely prevail; or, prevailing shalt prevail, Job xlii. 2, where כָּל stands for יִכָּל (root יָגַל) by the same rule.

* Kimkhi tells us, that his brother derived this word from יָלַל, thus: for לָלַת, striking out the latter ל, לָת, and varying the vowel לָת. In the Mikhlol, we generally have the leading word for the Present tense given thus: the root יָגַב-יָגַב; root יָהַב-יָהַב; whence we are to infer, that the persons of the Present tense will be יָהַב, יָהַב, &c., root יָטַב-יָטַב; whence Pres. יִיטַב, and so on.

12. This verb יָלַל forms the Present tense in Kal, as if the root had been יָקַל; as, אִיִּקַּל, אִיִּקְלוּ &c., for אִיִּקְלוּ, תִּקְלוּ. See Art. 87. 2.

13. In the other species, viz., Pihél, Pūhál, and Hithpāhél, the analogy of the paradigm פָּגַד is regularly followed; excepting only, that in the verbs יָדַע he knew, יָדָה he thren, and, יָקַח he contended, the ם of the root is changed to ו: as, הִתְיַדָּע he made known; הִתְיַדָּה he confessed; הִתְיַקַּח he disputed. In Pihél, however, we have יַגִּיד (for יִגִּיד Art. 73.) he shall make grieve, Lam. iii. 33; יִדְּוּ (for יִדְּוּ) they shall cast out, Ib. iii. 53. In Pūhál we have מִיִּזְנִים for מִיִּזְנִים Jer. v. 8.

14. We now proceed to the others; viz. Niphhál, Hiphhíl, and Hophhál, in which the first letter of the root will lose its power as a consonant.

15. It has already been remarked, that these verbs are sometimes conjugated as if ם had been the first radical letter; this is the case in the three species before us. In Niphhál, for example, we shall have in the Preterite נִשָּׁב (for נִשָּׁב Art. 87. 1.), from the root יִשָּׁב or נִשָּׁב. Present tense יִנְשָׁב (for יִנְשָׁב) where ם retains its power as a consonant. In a few instances ם remains in the Present: as, יִיָּרֶד he shall be pierced with a dart, Exod. xix. 13; יִיָּתַל he waits Gen. viii. 12; נִחַם for נִיָּחַם made hot, Is. lvii. 5. The Imperatives and Infinitives are regularly formed; as, הִנְשָׁב. The participial noun, נִשָּׁב, fem. נִשָּׁבָה, נִשָּׁבָת; pl. נִשָּׁבִים and נִשָּׁבוֹת. We have, however, נִבְגָּת made mournful, fem., Lam. i. 4, and נִבְגָּי id. masc., Zeph. iii. 18 (for נִבְגָּת &c. Art. 87. 2.).

16. In Hiphhíl we have הִנְשָׁיב (for הִנְשָׁיב Art. 87. 1.), and, in the Present tense, יִנְשָׁיב or יִנְשָׁב, הִנְשָׁיב, and so on throughout.

17. In some roots, however, the (ם) remains, and either forms a diphthong with the preceding vowel, or coalesces with it by contraction; as, first, הִיָּצָא, or הִיָּצָא according to the Kéthiv (for הִיָּצָא, root יָצָא) lead out, Gen. viii. 17; הִיָּשָׁר or הִיָּשָׁר direct thou, Ps. v. 9; אִיָּקִיר I will chastise, Hos. vii. 12. So in the Participle or noun of agency, מִיָּמִינִים using the right hand, 1 Chron. xii. 2. In the second place, the contraction may take place by the preceding letter taking (ם): as, הִתְיָיַב (for הִתְיָיַב Art. 87. 3.) he gave prosperity, Gen. xii. 16. So הִתְיָיַב, הִתְיָיַב, or הִתְיָיַב &c. throughout; אִיָּמְנָה I will take the right-hand direction, Gen. xiii. 9. Inf. הִתְיָיַב &c. In Exod. v. 7, we have הִתְיָיַב repeat ye, where הִ stands in the place of ם or י: but, here the leading word might be

אָפּוּ, from the root אָפּוּ, cognate with יָפּוּ: in יִיטִיב for יִטִּיב, Job xxiv. 21; יִלְקִיִּל for יִלְקִיִּל Is. xvi. 7; and אִיִּלְקִיִּל for אִלְקִיִּל Jer. xlviii. 31, none of the contractions common to other words have taken place.

18. In Hophhál the ו of the root takes ו throughout: as, הוֹשֵׁב (for הוֹשֵׁב, see Art. 87. 2.) he was made to dwell. So in the Present tense, יוֹשֵׁב, הוֹשֵׁב &c.; or, in both cases with (ו) for ו: as, הוֹשֵׁב, יוֹשֵׁב &c. Art. 72.

On the Conjugation of those Verbs which have ו or י for their Medial Radical Letter.

201. When these verbs terminate either in a quiescent ה, or in ח, ע, or ר; as also, when conjugated in those species which have Dāgēsh in the middle radical, they follow the general paradigm; as, רָוָה it was watered; הָיָה it became; רָוַח he breathed; נָפַע he expired; הָוָה he became white. So also קָוִי vomit ye, Jer. xxv. 27, from קָוָה; אָוִיב he acted as an enemy, אָוִי he was weary, which are perhaps only nouns.—With Dāgēsh in the middle radical; as, עָוָה he made crooked; עָוָה and הָעָוָה he was made crooked. So in verbs with a medial י, הָיִב he criminated; הִצְטִיֵּד he procured by hunting. In all other cases, the medial radical ו or י loses its power as a consonant, and gives rise to several apparently defective forms.

2. Whenever a single medial ו or י is preceded, either by a vowel or a final Shěvá, and is, at the same time, followed by any vowel, it will be dropped, with the preceding vowel or Shěvá, and its own vowel will be transposed to the first radical letter (Artt. 73. 75.); as, קָם for קוּם he stood; מָת for מוּת he died; אָר for אור he shone; טָב for טוב he was good; קוּם for קוּם or קוּום to rise. In Niphhál, נָקוּם for נָקוּום; Hiphhíl, הָאִיר for הָאִוִּיר, הָאִוִּיר for הָאִוִּיר; Hophhál, הוֹנָם for הוֹנָום, &c. In like manner, when י is the middle radical, בָּו for בָּו he understood; בִּין for בִּיִן, or בִּיִן to understand; Hiphhíl, הִטִּיב for הִטְוִיב, הִבִּין for הִבְיִן; Hophhál, הִבֵּן or הִבְּן, for הִבְּוִן, &c.*

3. For the forms פָּקַד and פָּקְדָה which are usual in the Imperatives and Infinitives, we here have קָוָה (for קָוָה or קָוָה Art. 87. 2.), and, בִּין (for בִּיִן, or בִּיִן Ib. 4.)

4. In the Pihél, Pūhál, and Hithpāhél, Species, when the middle radical is not doubled, which is mostly the case, the leading forms will be, פִּוּדַד, פִּוּדַד, and פִּוּדַד, respectively (Art. 197.): as, קוּמָה he raised; קוּמָה and קוּמָה he was raised. In these cases, the process of the conjugation is regular throughout. Nouns of agency, &c. will be מְקוּמָה, מְקוּמָה, and מְתַקוּמָה, respectively; the feminines and plurals of which are regularly formed, when in use.

5. The Participial noun in Kal is, for the most part, constructed on the same form with the Preterite: as, קָוָה, pl. קוּמָה &c.: מָתָה, pl. מִתָּה; בָּן, pl. בָּנִים &c. The passive, לְוִטָה for לְוִטָה involved, form פָּקְדָה; מָלָה for מָוּלָה circumcised. So שָׂוָה for שָׂוָה placed, form פָּקְדָה. In a few instances the Participle, or noun of agency, seems to be of the form פָּקְדָה: as, קוּמָה for קוּמָה standing, 2 Kings xvi. 7; בָּוָה treading, for בָּוָה Zech. x. 5.

6. In the first and second persons of both genders and numbers, in the Preterite of Niphhál, the leading word seems to be a segolate of the form פָּקְדָה or פָּקְדָה, i. e. קוּמָה for קוּמָה, בִּין for בִּיִן Art. 87. 2. 4; in which cases, the vowel (ו) is introduced between the root and the

* In קָוָה, מָתָה, and בָּן, the vowels become perfect on account of the accent. In קוּמָה, הִטְוִיב, הִבְיִן, הִבְּוִן, and הִבְּוִן, the first vowel is made perfect, in order to complete the syllable; which becomes necessary on account of the first radical being taken to commence the next syllable. The (·) is taken in Hiphhíl, being the vowel obliquely corresponding to (·) of the regular paradigm. See Art. 96. 2.

† That is, dropping the middle radical letter out of our common measure פָּקַד, as is the case in these verbs, then assuming the proper vowel, and doubling the last radical letter, we have פִּוּדַד, &c.

abbreviated pronoun: as, נְקוּמוֹת, נְקוּמוֹת, נְקוּמוֹתָם, &c. So נְבִינֹת, נְבִינֹתָם, נְבִינֹתָ, and so on. Alting thinks this has been done, in order to give the fuller pronunciation to the accent, as in נְקוּמוֹתָ; but, in נְקוּמוֹתָם the accent does not accompany that syllable. That reason, therefore, will not hold good. I am inclined to believe, that the ׀ has been introduced, in order to avoid the concurrence of two quiescent letters after one vowel (Art. 33.), as would be the case, had the form נְקוּמוֹתָ been adopted: and if so, this vowel has been introduced, just as the (◌◌) has in the segolate nouns (Art. 108. 148. 2.).

7. In every other case Niphhál takes the leading word קוּם; as, נְקוּם for נְקוּום, as in נְקוּום, נְקוּום, &c. (Art. 193. 4.)

8. A similar anomaly takes place in the corresponding persons of the Hiphhíl species, which may perhaps be accounted for in the same way; as, הִקְוּמוֹת, הִקְוּמוֹת, הִקְוּמוֹתֵי &c., but here, we also have the regular form; as, הִקְוּמוֹת, הִקְוּמוֹת, הִקְוּמוֹתֵי.

9. It must be remembered, that whenever the first radical letter is, by any accident, made to commence a syllable, the preformative must, by our laws of syllabication, either take Shévá or a perfect vowel. When the accent is far removed it will be Shévá; but, when not, the vowel will be perfect: as, Present tense, Kal, יְקוּם, יְקוּום, pl. יְקוּמוּ, יְקוּמוּ, &c. So, in the nouns of patience and agency, in Niphhál and Hiphhíl, נְקוּום, fem. נְקוּום, pl. נְקוּום &c. Hiph. מְקוּום, fem. מְקוּום, pl. מְקוּום &c. In Hophhál, however, no such change takes place: as, הִקְוּם, 2 pers. pl. הִקְוּמוֹתָם, &c.

10. Verbs having a medial (׀) will sometimes drop it, and supply its place by (◌◌), as it happens in other verbs in the Hiphhíl species; as, תִּלְוּ for תִּלְוּ׀ thou shalt lodge; and, with the accent drawn back, תִּלְוּ׀ 2 Sam. xvii. 16. But, when either the first or last radical happens to be a guttural, we shall have (◌◌): as, יַעֲרֶה he was wearied, 1 Sam. xiv. 28; יָנַח he rested, Exod. x. 14, for יַנְחֶה or יַנְחֶה. So with יָסַר he put away, Gen. viii. 13. The same will occasionally take place with a pause accent: as, תִּלְוּ׀ Judg. xix. 20.

11. Hence it will appear, that verbs having a medial ׀, may, in the present tense of Kal, take the same form which they, as well as those having a medial ׀, will in Hiphhíl; and that they can be distinguished only by the context.

On the the Third Class of Defective Verbs.

202. These verbs are formed upon roots whose third radical letter is subject to elision; and this may take place, either when one of the letters אהרי occupies that situation (Art. 198. 2.), or, when the second and third radical letters happen to be the same (Art. 77.): as also in certain cases, when נ or ת is found in that place (Artt. 76. and 188. 23.).

2. But, before we proceed to consider these defects, it will be necessary to offer a few observations on the causes which have led to them: and first, we shall consider those which have one or other of the letters אהרי for their third radical.

3. It has already been remarked (Art. 200.), that considerable difficulty has been felt both in the Hebrew and Arabic, in ascertaining which is the proper root in many instances wherein these letters are concerned. It is also a fact, that primitive words having either of these letters for the first, second, or third radical, and forming words similar in some respects in sound, will generally have either the same, or very nearly the same, signification: e. g. וַצַּב, וַצַּב, or נָצַב he SET UP, to which perhaps may be added, as cognate, צָבָא he arranged, or assembled, an army, performed divine service, &c. which some make cognate with צָבִי beauty, and צָבָה he became inflated, &c. So יָכַל, כָּלַל, כָּוַל, כָּוַל, כָּוַל, כָּוַל comprehending, completing, &c.,* to which many others may be added.

* So יָבֵשׁ and בָּוֵשׁ; מָטַב, מָטַב; גָּוַד, גָּוַד; צָוַד, צָוַד; רָוַע, רָוַע; קָוַץ, קָוַץ; רָבַב, רָבַב &c. See the Mikhlol of Kimkhi, fol. קיט, where a large list of this sort of verbs is given.

It may be proper here to notice remarks sometimes made on verbs of this kind, which, I am induced to believe, are entitled to little credit. "Singularis Linguae genius," says A. Schultens, Inst. Ling. Heb., p. 399, "et granditas

4. If this be the case, then, we need not be surprised in occasionally finding the vowels, and even the signification of one cognate root applied to another; as, רָפָה, for רָפָא heal thou (root רָפָה becoming lax), Ps. lx. 4; אָרַפָה, for אָרַפָא I will heal, Jer. iii. 22. So, with respect to the vowels only; as, כָּלַאתִי, for כָּלַאתִי I restrained, Ps. cxix. 101, as if the root had been כָּלַה; מוֹצָא, for מוֹצָא finding, Eccles. vii. 26; רָפְּאוּנוּ, for רָפְּאוּנוּ we have healed, Jer. li. 9; הִנְבְּאוּת prophesying, Zech. xiii. 4; חָטָא sinning, Eccl. viii. 12, where the vowels belong to roots having ה or י for the last radical.

5. The following assume the vowels, and in some instances the forms, of a cognate root; גָּשְׁוִי taken away, Ps. xxxii. 1, where the form is derived from גָּשָׁה, while the root is גָּשָׂא. So, תִּרְפִּינָה, they (fem.) will heal, Job v. 18; יִרְפוּ they (masc.) will heal, Jer. viii. 11, and נִרְפְּתָה she, or it, was healed, Ib. li. 9; נִבְּלִיתִי I wondered, Ps. cxxxix. 14; צָמַתְּ thou hast thirsted, Ruth ii. 9 (for צָמַתְּ, as if the root had been צָמָה, but which is צָמָא). In like manner, we have גָּשְׁוּ they bear (root גָּשָׂא) Ezek. xxxix. 26; מָלְוּ they are full, Ib. xxviii. 16; נִטְמְנוּ we stili, sæpe ansam præbuere, ad geminæ Radicis formas in unam conflandas." The first example he gives is הִבְּאִישׁ Is. xxx. 5, which he calls "specimen insigne. Hiphh. Radicum יִבֵּשׁ aruit, et בָּבֵשׁ fatuit, signantissimi præ se ferens: ex הִבְּאִישׁ fatere fecit, et הוֹבֵישׁ acescere fecit, coalitum." Remarks of this kind are often met with in the Thesaurus Grammaticus of Buxtorf, in the Mikhlol of Kimkhi, the Rabbinical Commentaries, &c. I must confess, however, I can see little in all this, but the occasional adoption of one or other of the cognate roots, as indeed it occasionally happens in the Arabic, without any intention whatever on the part of the writer, to combine more ideas than one in such verb. In the above instance, then, I believe בָּבֵשׁ has been the root taken, to be used nevertheless in the sense of בִּישׁ. I must object to the vowel (י) Khôlem: because, I think, it may have been introduced for the mere purpose of supporting this hypothesis. In Eichhorn's edition of Simonis's Lexicon, sub voce בִּישׁ, א is said to be otiosc.

are vile, Job xviii. 3, to which many more may be added; but, as they are always noticed in the best Lexicons, they need not be detailed here.

6. In the first place, then, every root terminating with a radical ה, that is, with ה having Mappík inscribed, will be regularly conjugated like פָּקַד; as, גָּבַהַּ he was high; גָּבַהְתָּ thou wast high, גָּבַהּוּ they were high, &c. This letter, therefore, is not subject to any elision, either here or elsewhere.

7. It is when ה is a substitute for ו, or י, only, that any departure from the general paradigm can take place in any case.

8. In the following instances, however, no such substitution takes place, but ו and י retain their original places; שָׁלוֹמִי I have been tranquil, Job iii. 26; Infin. Kal, fem. שָׁלוּהָ; Participial noun, שָׁלוֹ, of the same root שָׁלוּ. So רָאָהָהּ, Infin. Ezek. xxviii. 17, from the root רָאוּ, usually רָאָה. In Pihél, אֶרְאֶינָהּ I will water, Is. xvi. 9. But, in Job xii. 6, we have (י) for the last radical: as, יִשְׁלָוּ they will be tranquil (where the accent has been drawn back) Art. 119. 11. So, חֲסָדָהּ it trusted, fem., Ps. lvii. 2; יִרְבְּנוּ they multiply, Deut. viii. 13, where, in the next member, we have יִרְבְּוּ; יִדְבְּמוּ ye assimilate, Is. xl. 18. 25; עֹטִיהָ becoming languid, Cantic. i. 7; בֹּכֵיהָ weeping, Lam. i. 16. So also, מְמָחִים things full of marrow, Is. xxv. 6. In all other instances, ה will be substituted for either ו or י, and then will be subject to elision by the general rules affecting the letters אהוי.

9. In the Preterite tense, therefore, of all the species, ה־ will be the termination for the third person singular masculine, instead of י־ or ו־; ת of the feminine, just as it is in the feminine nouns in construction. In all the others, י will represent the third radical: as, גָּלָהּ he revealed, discovered; fem. גָּלְתָהּ; 2 pers. masc. גָּלִיתָ, id. fem. גָּלִיתְ; 1 pers. com. גָּלִיתִי; pl. 3 pers. com. גָּלוּ for גָּלוּהוּ or גָּלוּ Art. 73; 2 masc. גָּלִיתֶם, id. fem. גָּלִיתֶן; 1 com. גָּלִינוּ.

10. It must be remembered, however, that in every other species (·) is generally the vowel which precedes ם in the Preterite. Even in Kal (·) would be more agreeable with the analogy than (·), because גָּלִיתָ &c. should be, according to the general paradigm, גָּלִיתָ, which by Art. 87. 3. would become גָּלִיתָ: but, as (·) preceding the ם may also become (·) Art. 87. 4. this may have been adopted in this species.

11. The Present tense of every species here ends in ה־,* as do also the Participles. The Imperative has ה־, but this is the form of construction assumed by all nouns ending in ה־ (Art. 143. 5.), and such will the Imperative generally be.

12. The Infinitives follow the general paradigm, and end in ה־ in the masculine; as, רָאָה and רֹאֵה seeing.† The feminine form always ends in ת־; as, גָּלוֹת or גְּלוֹת (for גְּלוֹת Art. 87. 1.).

13. The agent or active participle will end in ה־; as, גָּלָה; fem. גָּלָה (for גְּלָה Art. 73.). The patient or passive participle ends in וי; as, גָּלוּי, form פְּקוּד, regularly, where the final י is quiescent, fem. גְּלוּיָה, pl. גְּלוּיִים and גְּלוּיֹת: here י appears as the proper radical letter.‡

* Except the 2 pers. sing. fem. and pl. masc. and fem., as also the 3 masc. and fem. pl., where ה is dropped, or changed to וי; as, 3 m. יִגְלֶה, f. תִּגְלֶה; 2 m. תִּגְלֶה, f. תִּגְלִי (for תִּגְלֶה Art. 73.); 1 com. אִגְלֶה. Pl. 3 m. יִגְלוּ (for יִגְלֶה Art. 73.), f. תִּגְלִינָה; 2 m. תִּגְלוּ (for תִּגְלֶה as before), f. תִּגְלִינָה; 1 com. נִגְלֶה. In the same manner are the Present tenses of all the species conjugated.

† In קָנָה acquiring, 2 Sam. xxiv. 24, and הָרָו וְהָרָו conceiving and meditating, Is. lix. 13, Schröder thinks we have a final ן for the last radical letter: but this is far from being certain; קָנָה, הָרָו and הָרָו will terminate regularly according to our paradigm; and, omitting the final ה by Art. 72, we shall have the forms, קָנָה, הָרָו and הָרָו. The other example, viz. חִפִּי Hos. vi. 9, adduced by him, is probably a plural noun in construction.

‡ In Is. iii. 16, we have a various reading, viz. נְטוּיֹת and נְטוּיֹת, as also

On those Verbs which have an א for the Third Radical Letter.

203. The only departure from the general paradigm in verbs of this kind is, in the א becoming quiescent in the preceding vowel; as, Pret. Kal. מָצָא for מָצֵא, he found, f. מְצָאָהּ, 2 m. מְצָאתָ, f. מְצָאתִי, 1 com. מְצָאתִי; pl. מְצָאוּ, com. 2 m. מְצָאתֶם, f. מְצָאתֶן, 1 com. מְצָאנוּ.

2. The Present tense is, יִמְצֵא, תִּמְצֵא, and so on.

In every other species, the persons of both tenses, except the third singular and plural of the Preterite of both genders, those of Pūhál, and of the Present of Hiphhál, the vowel preceding א is (·). As Niphhál, 3 m. נִמְצָא, f. נִמְצָאָהּ, 2 m. נִמְצָאתָ, f. נִמְצָאתִי, 1 com. נִמְצָאתִי; plur. com. נִמְצָאוּ &c. Pres. tense, יִמְצֵא &c.; Hiph. הִמְצִיא, f. הִמְצִיאָהּ, 2 masc. הִמְצִאתָ &c. Pres. 3 m. יִמְצִיא, f. תִּמְצִיא &c. In Pihél and Hithpāhél all is regular. In Pūhál we have, Pret. 3 pers. masc. מָצָא, f. מְצָאָהּ; 2 m. מְצָאתָ, f. מְצָאתִי &c. Pres. 3 m. יִמְצֵא, f. תִּמְצֵא; 2 m. תִּמְצֵא, f. תִּמְצֵאִי &c. and so on throughout.

We have, however, יִשְׁנֶה it shall be changed, Eccl. viii. 1, where, according to Kimkhi, the vowels belong to the root שָׁנָה. Mikhlol, fol. קעד.

3. In the Infinitives and Participles a contraction mostly takes place; as, שָׂאת or שָׂאת, for שָׂאת or נִשְׂאת bearing; root נָשָׂא; מוֹצֵאת for מוֹצֵאת; root מָצָא finding. We also have מוֹצֵאת. So also שִׁנְאת for שִׁנְאת hating, form פָּקְדַת, root שָׁנָה; קָרְאת or קָרְאת calling; מְלֵאת or מְלֵאת filling (Art. 87. 5).

in 1 Sam. xxv. 18; עֲשׂוּיֹת and עֲשׂוּיֹת, no reliance, therefore, can be placed on Schröder's remark, that these are words retaining their primitive radical ו. So likewise עֲשׂוּ Job xli. 24, may be a verb, and צָפַי Ib. xv. 22, for צָפַי by Art. 72. By the same rule we have בְּקִי clear, innocent, for בְּקִי &c.

4. Some verbs here, as in the other classes, have (·) for the last vowel of the Preterite of Kal: as, יָרָא he feared; מָלֵא he filled; שָׂנֵא he hated; צָמָא he thirsted, which they will retain throughout that tense, where other verbs have (ֹ): as, 3 m. יָרָא, f. יָרָאָה; 2 m. יָרָאָת, f. יָרָאָת; 1 com. יָרָאָתִי; and so on. In every other tense and species they are conjugated like מָצָא.

5. For the rules and examples relating to Apocope when happening to these or any other verbs, see Artt. 74. 119. 3—8.

LECTURE XIII.

ON THOSE VERBS WHICH HAVE THEIR SECOND AND THIRD RADICAL LETTERS THE SAME.

204. It has been laid down as a rule, that whenever the last two letters of any primitive word happen to be the same, one of them may be dropped for the sake of euphony (Art. 77.) There are cases, however, in which this will not take place: these we shall notice first, and then proceed to shew in what instances and in what way our rule applies.

2. First, then, in the reduplicated species, i. e. in Pihél, Puhál, and Hithpāhél, the middle radical letter will either receive Dāgēsh forte, as in פָּקַד, or, the reduplication will take place on the measure פִּוּקַד, פִּוּקַד, or הִתְפִּוּקַד; or, lastly, on one or other of the reduplicated forms (Art. 197.). In these cases, therefore, no defect will take place.

3. In the next place, the following examples follow the general paradigm; as, זָמַן he intended, Deut. xix. 19; זָמַמְתִּי I intended,

Zech. viii. 14 ; כִּלְלוּ they finished, Ezek. xxvii. 11 ; סָבְבוּ they surrounded, Eccles. xii. 5, &c. ; עָשָׂתָהּ it decayed, Ps. vi. 8 : חָנוּן being gracious, Isa. xxx. 19.

4. The Participial nouns of Kal; as, סָבֵב surrounding, Gen. ii. 13, pl. סֹבְבִים 2 Chron. iv. 3 ; אָרוּר cursed, Gen. xxvii. 29, pl. אֲרוּרִים, Josh. ix. 23, &c.

5. In some instances the Infinitive also takes the form פִּלְקוּ ; as, לְסָבֵב for surrounding, Numb. xxi. 4 ; לְחַמֵּם for warming, Isa. xlvii. 14, form פִּקְדוּ, with (-) changed to (τ) on account of the pause, (Art. 123. 5.).

6. Again, in no case, in which either the first or third radical letter of any root is subject to elision or contraction, will our rule take place; as, in the first case, יִרְדּוּן they flee, Ps. lxviii. 13 ; הִילֵל he exclaimed, root יָלַל ; הִתְתַּתִּי I broke to pieces, Jer. xlix. 37, for הִתְתַּתִּי. So, חָיָה for חָיָה. But, when this is not the case, and the last radical retains its power as a consonant, one of the two is dropped: as, חָיָה he lived, Gen. v. 5.

7. Whenever, therefore, one or other of these exceptions does not take place, one of the two last radical letters of these verbs will regularly be rejected in both the tenses—in the Imperative, and occasionally in the Infinitive of Kal,—the whole of the species Niphhál, Hiphhíl, and Hophhál.

8. The most convenient method, perhaps, of stating this defect will be by saying, that the second radical with the preceding vowel, or Shěvá, is rejected; as, קָב, for סָבֵב ; Niph. נָסַב, for נִסְבֵּב, &c. which will generally hold.

9. In both tenses, then, of the species Kal, Niphhál, Hiphhíl and Hophhál, as also in their Infinitives, Imperatives, and Participles, excepting those already mentioned, will the second radical letter of all such roots be rejected; but, whenever any asyllabic augment takes place, this rejected letter will be restored by the operation of Dāgēsh forte (Art. 77.)

10. If, in the next place, we except the first and second persons of both numbers and genders, throughout all the Preterites of these species, the abbreviated pronouns which are asyllabic will be the same in these as in other verbs. But, in all the first and second persons of these preterites, the vowel ı is introduced, as in Art. 201. 6. between the root and the pronouns; e. g. taking קָבַב for the root, 3 m. קָבַב, f. קָבַבָּה, 2 m. קָבַבְתָּ, f. קָבַבְתְּ; 1 com. קָבַבְתִּי; pl. קָבַבְתֶּם, קָבַבְתֶּן. So in Niphhál: 3 m. נָקַב, f. נָקַבָּה, 2 m. נָקַבְתָּ, and so on.

11. It should be observed, that as the first letter of the root in the Present necessarily commences a syllable, the preformative will either take Shěvá (:), or a perfect vowel. It will take Shěvá when the accent is on the third letter, or farther from the beginning of the word; in all other cases the vowel will be perfect: as Pres. Kal; 3 pers. m. יָקַב, fem. תָּקַב; pl. m. יָקַבוּ, f. תָּקַבְינָה, &c. Niphhál, Pret. 3 m. נָקַב, fem. נָקַבָּה, 2 m. נָקַבְתָּ, f. נָקַבְתְּ, &c. Hiphhíl, Pret. 3 m. הִקַּב, f. הִקַּבָּה, 2 m. הִקַּבְתָּ, f. הִקַּבְתְּ; 3 pl. com. הִקַּבּוּ, 2 m. הִקַּבְתֶּם, f. הִקַּבְתֶּן, &c. Pres. 3 m. sing. יָקַב, f. תָּקַב, 2 m. תָּקַב, f. תָּקַבִּי; 1 com. תָּקַב, 3 pl. m. יָקַבוּ, f. תָּקַבְינָה; &c.

12. It should be remembered, that the ı usually found between the second and third radical, and which is considered as characteristic of the Hiphhíl species, never appears in these verbs.

13. In Hophhál, ı is inserted after the characteristic ה, in order to complete the initial syllable, after which this species is conjugated like the preceding: as, Pret. 3. m. sing. הוּקַב, f. הוּקַבָּה, 2 m. הוּקַבְתָּ, f. הוּקַבְתְּ;

1 com. הוֹסֵבֹתִי, &c. Present: 3 sing. m. תּוֹסֵב, f. תּוֹסֵבָה, 2 m. תּוֹסֵבִי, f. תּוֹסֵבִי; pl. תּוֹסֵבִינָה. In the last, and every similar case in this species, the first vowel is necessarily immutable: it must, therefore, remain perfect. So in the Imperative and Participle, הוֹסֵב, f. הוֹסֵבִי, &c. מוֹסֵב, f. מוֹסֵבָה, &c.

14. In these, as in all other verbs, the final vowel of both the tenses in Kal may be (-), (·), or (ו). The root above given exemplifies (-) for the last vowel of the Preterite, and (ו) for that of the Present. The only variety however which occurs is, in having (ו) for the last vowel of the Preterite, and (·) for that of the Present: as, רָבּוּ they cast, of רָבּב Gen. xlix. 23; גָּל he hath devolved upon, Ps. xxii. 9. So in the Infinitives and Imperatives, which are generally constructed on the same form with the Present, with (·): as, גָּל, for גָּלְלִי devolve thou, Ps. cxix. 22. Present: יִקְלוּ they shall be vile, for יִקְלְלוּ 1 Sam. ii. 30. In Hiphhél also, we have occasionally (-): as, הִקֵּל he made light, for הִקְלִיל Is. viii. 23. Participle, מִצֵּל giving shade, for מִצְלֵל Ezek. xxxi. 3.

15. In the species Pihél, Pūhál, and Hithpāhél, the forms assumed for conjugation must be determined by usage, i. e. whether they are to be פָּקַד, פּוֹדֵד, פּוֹדֵד, פּוֹדֵד, הִתְפַּקֵּד, הִתְפּוֹדֵד, or any other of the reduplicated forms (Art. 197.); and when this is done, the process will be analogous to that of the general paradigm.

16. Of the verbs terminating in נ or ת, enough has been said, Artt. 198. 10. 188. 23. 26. 28.

On the doubly Defective Verbs: i. e. Verbs, in which more than one of the Radical Letters may be subject to quiescence or elision, by the operation of the preceding Rules.

205. Roots may be supposed to exist composed of such letters as may all be subject to elision or quiescence, when occurring in certain situations: but, that they all should be subject, at the same time, to such rule, the nature of the case makes impossible: because, quiescence can take place, only when some homogeneous vowel precedes; and this pre-supposes that such vowel is enounced by a consonant. And, in the case of one of the two last radical letters of a verb being dropped, it is also supposed, that some preceding vowel is enounced, which cannot be done without the influence of a preceding consonant.

2. Hence it will follow, that such part of any root as is unaffected by the influence of a preceding vowel will remain unaltered: and also, that no two contiguous letters can at the same time be subject to defect by the process of conjugation, if we except the operation of apocope, and those cases in which any of the אָרְוִי letters are dropped, as being unnecessary to the pronunciation. But, when the first and last are subject to quiescence or elision, the middle radical letter, be that what it may, will generally retain its character as a consonant, and may receive a Dāgësh forte; or if not capable of being doubled, may be compensated in the preceding vowel being made perfect.

3. In this case, therefore, as in all the preceding ones, the general paradigm holds good: but, as the concurrence of certain sounds is incompatible with the pronunciation of the Hebrews, some changes will take place, in order to avoid this difficulty. Example, however, is always easier to be understood than precept; we shall now give, therefore, a few examples of all the cases that occur; which, after Schrœder, we shall divide into three classes.

First Class.

4. This class will have the first and third radical letters subject to elision, or quiescence. And first, both are subject to elision, as in נתן he gave, placed; נגן he played on the psaltery; נחת he descended, which will drop either the נ or ת, or both, by rules already detailed (Artt. 198. 10. 188. 23. 28. &c.): e. g. in Niphhál, Pret. 2 pers. נתת, נתתי, נתתה, נתתה, נתתה; and so of the rest.

5. The first is subject to quiescence, and the third to elision, as in אמן he was faithful; ישן he slept; אפת, or יפת, he was handsome. Here the ך will be rejected, as before, whenever it is affected by a final Shěvá (:) by analogy; the final ת, by Art. 188. 23; and the initial י or א, will be quiescent, according to the rules detailed in Artt. 199. 200.

6. In the next place, the first will be subject to elision and the third to quiescence, in such roots as נשא he bore; as, Present tense, 3 p. m. Kal, ישא for ינשא (Art. 198.); Imp. שא; Inf. שוא, שאת, or שאת. Niph. Pret. and Part. נשא. Hiphhúl, Pret. הושיא. Hoph. הושי: also in roots terminating in ה, for ו or י: as, נטה he extended; Pres. Kal, יטה; and, by apocope (Art. 74. 2.), יט or יט. But here, the Imperative and Infinitive are sometimes written at length; as, נטה extend, Exod. viii. 1, &c.; נטות declining, Num. xxii. 26. In Niphhál, נטו for ננטוהו, and, with a pause accent (Art. 119. 11.), נטוהו are they extended, Numb. xxiv. 6.

Hiphhál, הִטְתּוֹ, 3 sing. fem. with the pronoun וּ, for הִטְתָּהּ she subdued him, Prov. vii. 21. Pres. תִּטְּ for תִּטְּהָ, by apocope, incline, Ps. cxli. 4, and Imper. הִטְּ for הִטְּהָ incline thou, Ps. xvii. 6.

7. Again, verbs having both the first and third radical letter subject to quiescence; as, יִתָּא (for יִאֲתָא, contraction of יִאֲתָא Art. 87. 5., from the root אֲתָא) he will come, Deut. xxxiii. 21; יִאֲפָה (for יִאֲפָה Ib. from the root אֲפָה) he will bake: and 1 Sam. xxviii. 24, תִּבְהוּ she bakes it, where the first and last radicals are dropped; יִצָּא he will go out, for יִצָּא, root יִצָּא. Imper. צָא. Infin. צֹא, צָא, צָאָה, and צָאת. So יִרָא he feared; Pres. Kal. יִירָא or יִרָא; Infin. לִירָא for לִירָא. Niphhál, Pret. or Part. נִירָא; יִרָה he cast, Pres. Kal, יִירָה. Hence נִירָם we shoot them, Num. xxi. 30. In Hiphhál, יִוְרָה, and, by apocope, יוֹר he shot, 2 Kings xiii. 17: יִגָּה he grieved; Pret. Hiphhál, הִוְגָה; Pres. pl. תִּוְגְּוּ; and Job xix. 2: תִּוְגְּוּן, with a paragoric Nún (Art. 120. 8.) Hophhál, הִוְגָה, whence תִּוְגָה pain. Participle of Niphhál, נִוְגָת persons (fem.) pained, Lam. i. 4, &c.

Second Class.

8. The second class of doubly defective roots includes those which have a medial ו or י subject to quiescence, and the third radical letter subject to elision; as, בִּין or בִּין he understood; לִין he lodged; שִׁוּת he placed; as, שָׁתָּ for שָׁוֹתָּ thou hast placed; לָגְנוּ we have lodged, for לָוְגְנוּ (Artt. 76. 188. 23.). But, in these verbs, the final ו is not universally rejected; as, בִּנְתָהּ thou hast understood, Ps. cxxxix. 2.

Third Class.

9. The third class comprehends those verbs which have ו or י for the middle radical, and נ or ה for the third; each of which may be subject to quiescence, and in certain cases to rejection.

10. Of the first sort בוא entering in; נוא being crude, and קוא or קיא vomiting, are examples which may thus be conjugated.

11. In those cases in which Khôlém would accompany the middle radical, ו may be inserted or not: as, יבוא, תבוא &c., or יבא, תבא &c. And, in others, where Kâmêts attends the radical נ, נ is occasionally omitted (Art. 72.): as, פני for פנינו we came in, 1 Sam. xxv. 8.

In Hiphhîl we have, Pret. הביא, הביאת, or הביאות, &c. Pres. יביא or יביא or יבא, תביא, and so on. Infinitive, הביא, הביא, and with נ dropped, הבי. Part. מביא or

12. Examples, in which both a medial ו or י, and final ה, are at the same time quiescent, seldom occur, if we except those forms of the Present which are said to be subject to apocope: as, יִהְיֶה, for יִהְיֶה he shall, or may be; so יִהְיֶה for יִהְיֶה by apocope (Art. 74. 2.) and having a paragogic ה; root הָיָה for הָיָה Eccles. xi. 3. In all other cases the middle radical letter retains its character as a consonant, the third only being subject to quiescence: as,

PART.

Masc. sing. הָיָה Ens.

13. Verbs of this kind are seldom found conjugated beyond the first or second species; and perhaps never throughout those.

It must be borne in mind, that, in any of these verbs, the paragogic ה or י may occur in their usual places—that any of the אהוי letters may be dropped or not, when the preceding vowels will preserve the pronunciation of the word—that the second persons singular of the Preterite may have ה added: as, הָיָה thou gavest—and that Dāgēsh forte may occasionally be omitted, and a compensation made, by the preceding vowel becoming perfect. But, as the Dictionaries and Concordances will always shew in what cases these take place, it will be unnecessary to note them down here.

On the Inseparable Pronouns when attached to Verbs.

206. When the inseparable pronouns are attached to nouns, the meaning of the compound will, as we have seen (Art. 145. 1.), be propriety, possession, or the like ; because in no other way can nouns and personal pronouns be construed together ; but, when the same pronouns are combined with verbs, which are already compounded with pronouns by the process of conjugation, then, if the verbs are transitive, these further affixed pronouns must be considered as complementary of the signification of such verbs, or what we usually term an objective case : but, if such verbs be intransitive, then must they be translated by introducing some preposition or other word explanatory of the connexion thus formed ; as, גִּדְּלָנִי he grew up for me, or with me, Job xxxi. 18 ; קִדְּשָׁתִּיךָ I am holy (as to) thee, i. e. I am holier than thou, Is. lxxv. 5. So יִגְדָּךְ shall dwell (with) thee, Ps. v. 5. We shall have occasion to speak more particularly on this subject when we come to the Syntax.

207. The next question will be, How will the addition of these pronouns affect the vowels and consonants of the verbs ? Generally, having the vowels of the affixed pronouns given, those which precede and are mutable will be regulated by the general laws prevailing in the nouns ; that is to say, any mutable vowel, situated at some distance from the accent, will be rejected, while any perfect vowel, deprived of the accent and followed immediately by a consonant, will be changed for its correspondent imperfect one. But, as a table will make all plain, we shall now give one with the regular triliteral verb : those which are subject to any defect will receive the same affixes, due attention being paid to their particular characters.

Remarks.

209. It will be seen by the Table, that every possible combination of the verb with the pronoun thus affixed is not made: I visited myself, thou visitedst thyself, and the like, would rather fall under the province of one of the reciprocal species: as, בְּקָדְתִּי, or הִתְבְּקַדְתִּי in Niphhál or Hithpáhél, and would not, therefore, be made in Kal by affixing the pronouns; but, which of these species is to be adopted, custom alone can determine. We have, nevertheless, a very few examples in which this combination is made in

Kal : as, אָנִי עָשִׂיתָנִי I made myself, or, for myself, Ezek. xxix. 3, in which the repetition of the pronoun seems to add some emphasis to the passage.

2. With respect to the vowels of the root, it will immediately be perceived, that they are subject to the same laws which prevail in the nouns, when receiving similar additions. In the asyllabic affixes, for example, as the last consonant of the root must be taken in order to enounce the syllable, the preceding vowel must either be perfect, or rejected. But neither of the vowels of the root in Kal is immutable; and, as the first is the farthest removed from the accent, it is rejected as in the nouns; and we have פָּתַחְנִי, just as we have דִּבַּרְנִי (Art. 153. 2.). In like manner, when the affix is syllabic, we have the first vowel rejected, and the second made imperfect, as often as the accent is with the affix: as, פָּתַחְתֶּם, just as we have דִּבַּרְתֶּם in the nouns. This necessarily holds good in the Present tense, the Imperative, Infinitive and Participles; as also in all the other species Niphhál, Pihél, &c., as well as in the defective verbs, nouns, and participles, due respect being had to the etymology of the words.

3. In a few instances the affix of the first person has (τ) instead of (-): as, עָנַנִי he hath heard me, Ps. cxviii. 5; בִּזְתַּנִּי thou hast despised me, 2 Sam. xii. 10. But in the last case this seems to have been brought about by the influence of the accent (Art. 120. 7.).

4. For the feminine affix תָּנִי we sometimes have תָּנִי; as, קָרָאתָ he hath called thee (fem.), Is. liv. 6. So קָרָאתָ thy being created, Ezek. xxviii. 15, which are generally thought to be Chaldaïsms. In the last case, however, the pause-accent will be sufficient to account for the anomaly (Art. 123. 4.).

5. When, however, the accent is on any occasion drawn back, the vowel accompanying the affix will necessarily be imperfect; as, אָהַבְתָּ she hath loved thee (fem.); גָּנַבְתָּ she hath stolen them, &c. Art. 119. 3. cor.

6. It should also be observed, that whenever the root ends in either ה or י by the process of conjugation, &c. the affixes are simply added; as, פָּתַחְנִי without any previous vowel or Shévá; and, that when the affixes are found both in the syllabic, and asyllabic, forms, the syllabic must be taken in these cases: as, פָּתַחְתָּ, not פָּתַחְתָּ they visited her; פָּתַחְתָּ, not פָּתַחְתָּ they visited him. The reason is obvious: one vowel following another will be unnutterable ; and, in order to avoid this, a consonant must be introduced.

7. In פָּקַדְתָּ the terminating vowel gives place to the vowel of the affix ; as, פָּקַדְתָּנִי thou visitedst me.

8. The form פָּקַדְתָּ is found in a few instances with the pronominal affixes ; as, הִשְׁפַּעַתְתָּנוּ thou (fem.) hast adjured us, Josh. ii. 17, 20 : but, most frequently, the form פָּקַדְתִּי is taken (see Art. 188. 25.) : as, פָּקַדְתִּינִי ; and, without י, פָּקַדְתִּינִי thou (fem.) hast visited me. When this is the case, the context alone must determine whether the verb is of the first or second person. In a few cases also, (·) takes the place of (·) ; as, הוֹרַדְתָּנוּ thou (fem.) hast caused us to descend, Josh. ii. 18.

9. The second persons masculine and feminine plural take the forms פָּקַדְתֶּם, instead of פָּקַדְתָּם or פָּקַדְתֶּן—before the affixed pronouns ; as, פָּקַדְתֶּמְנִי ye (com.) visited me. In this case, the affixed pronoun seems to be of the Chaldaic form, אַתְּמִין you, instead of the Hebrew one אַתְּמִם, or אַתְּמֶן.

On the Vowels of the Present Tense, the Imperative, Infinitive, and Participles.

210. As the terminating vowel of the Present tense is mutable in the regular trilateral verb in Kal, it will be rejected upon receiving any asyllabic affix ; as, יִפְקַדְנִי he visits me ; but, when the affix is syllabic, it will be changed for its correspondent imperfect vowel ; as, יִפְקַדְךָ he visits thee, &c. due regard being had to the vowel as determined by usage : i. e. whether it be (ו) (-), (·), or (·), and to the following consonant, whether it be guttural or not.

In a few instances, the vowels proper for the affixes of the preterite are found with those of the present ; as, יִשְׁפִּיעַנִי he will fill me, Job ix. 18 ; יִפְרַחְנוּ he will acknowledge us, Is. lxiii. 16 ; נִירָם we will strike or pierce them, Num. xxi. 30, &c. And, vice versa, those proper for the present with the preterite ; as, יִפְקַדְנִי he hath corrected me, Is. viii. 11.

2. These observations will apply to the affixing of the pronouns to the present tenses of verbs of every species and sort.

3. In the Imperatives, however, which receive no preformatives, the vowels will be regulated as they are in the nouns (which in reality the Imperatives all are) ; and, as the form proper for construction will take the affixed pronouns, the ultimate or penultimate vowels alone can be subject to change, as in the nouns; e. g. שְׁלַחְנִי send me, from שָׁלַח send: שְׁמַעְנוּנִי hear ye me, from שָׁמַע hear. So יָדַעְתָּהוּ know thou him, from יָדַע.

4. Those terminating in (ו) have been thought to be subject to a transposition; as, שְׁמַרְתָּ keep thou me, from שָׁמַר. I believe, however, that שָׁמַר is the primitive word taken in these cases, whence we shall regularly have שְׁמַרְנִי, &c.

5. The Infinitives are subject to the same general laws with the Imperatives of Kal, and these also prevail in every species of the Segolate nouns; i. e. we must inquire, in the first place, what form of the primitive has been taken, and then add our affixes, &c. just as we do to those nouns. Examples; מְלִכּוֹ his reigning, from מָלַךְ, or rather מִלָּךְ; רָדַפְנִי my persecuting, from רָדַף or רָדַף. So מְאַסְתֶּם for מֵאַסְתֶּם (Art. 106. 2.) your spurning, from מָאָס or מָאָס; הִקְרַבְתֶּם, for הִקְרַבְתֶּם your drawing near, from קָרַב or קָרַב. Sometimes obliquely (Art. 96. 2.): as, הִקְצַרְתֶּם your reaping, from קָצַר or קָצַר.

6. It may be observed that with the affixes הִ-, כִּ-, and כִּ-, both forms are found; as, אֲכַלְתָּ thy eating, Gen. ii. 17; אֲכַלְתֶּם your eating, Gen. iii. 5; שְׁמַעְתָּ thy hearing, 2 Sam. v. 24; שְׁמַעְתֶּם your hearing, Josh. vi. 5. But it seldom happens that the same word is found in both forms: which seems to shew, that in one case, one primitive form has been preferred, and in another, another.

7. Infinitives of other forms are subject to the general laws which prevail in nouns of the same forms.

8. Nothing further need be said on the manner in which the participles receive the pronominal affixes. They are nothing but nouns, and are, therefore, subject to the same variations with them.

On the mode of affixing the Pronouns to the different parts of the Defective Verbs.

211. It will be quite unnecessary to detain the Student long on this subject. He will only have to bear in mind, what has been laid down in our Canons on the mutable and quiescent characters of the letters אֵהָיִי—on הָ, as occasionally rejected—on roots having the second and third radical letter the same, and hence occasionally losing one, which will however return whenever circumstances will allow it, under the form of Dāgêsh forte—and on the vowels, as regulated by the occurrence of gutturals, the addition of syllabic, or asyllabic augments, and the like; all of which has been abundantly exemplified in the preceding pages. We shall now, therefore, take our leave of this subject.—The following are tables, intended to show the full conjugations of the different kinds of verbs, in illustration of the rules detailed and exemplified in our present and preceding Lecture.

These Tables have been taken from the “Lehrgebäude der Hebraischen Sprache” of Dr. Gesenius, with some slight alterations.

LECTURE XIV.

ON THE SYNTAX.

212. IN endeavouring to investigate the principles of the Hebrew Syntax, we shall first consider the nature and construction of propositions; secondly, those of their several parts; and, lastly, shew how these have been combined, according to the Authors of the accents.

2. In the first place, then, every proposition will be either general or particular. A general proposition is that which contains a complete sentence expressive of some general truth: as, "Men die." A particular, or singular, proposition (as it is sometimes called), expresses only that which relates to particular individuals: as, "The men die." Hence,

3. When any general proposition is enounced in Hebrew, the word or words used for the purpose of enouncing the subject will, generally, be indefinite; i. e. will not have the definite article, or be otherwise limited;* while that which is intended to be the most impressive, will stand first in the order; e. g. זורע עֹלָה.

* In such expressions as תּוֹרַת יְהוָה הַמִּימָה the law of the Lord is perfect, &c. Ps. xix. 8, &c. although the truth is general, the proposition is not so; because it relates to one particular law, not to any general one.

The subject and predicate are, according to the Grammarians of Arabia, two words so placed, that they may be independent of each other in a grammatical or formal point of view, their relation being purely logical. The author of the Hidāyat oon Nahve (p. ۳۴) says, المبتدأ والخبر هما اسمان مجردان من العوامل اللفظية أحدهما مسند إليه ويسمي المبتدأ والثاني مسند به ويسمي الخبر نحو زيد قائم والعامل فيها معنوي

יִקְצֹר־אֶן (any one)* SOWING iniquity, reaps vanity, Prov. xxii. 8; מֵיִם עֲמֻקִּים עֵצָה בְּלֵב-אִישׁ (as) DEEP WATERS (is) counsel in the heart of man, Ib. xx. 5.

4. And, on the contrary, when any particular proposition is to be enounced, the word or words expressive of its subject must be made definite: as, הַשֶּׁמֶשׁ יָצָא (as to) THE SUN, IT HAD ARISEN, Gen. xix. 23; פְּקוּדֵי יְהוָה יִשְׂרָיִם THE PRECEPTS OF JEHOVAH (are) right, Ps. xix. 9. This holds good whether the proposition be affirmative or negative.

5. Propositions will also be either Incomplex, or Complex; Simple, or Compound.

6. Incomplex propositions are those which contain no qualifying, or otherwise modifying, words in connection with either the subject or predicate. Complex propositions are those which have such words. Of the first, יִבְנֶה בַּיִת a house is built, Prov. xxiv. 3, is an ex-

وهو الابتداء “The subject and predicate are two words construed independently of any GRAMMATICAL government. The first is that of which something is predicated, and is called المبتدأ or, the beginning: the second is that by which this predication is made, and is termed الخبر the enouncer: as, ZAID (is) STANDING. The government of them is regulated by the sense (or, is logical), that is, by the beginning,” or subject matter of the discourse.

This conjunction of words is termed by them الكلام, and is thus described by Ibn ul Hájib: ما تضمن كلمتين بالاسناد ولا يتأتى ذلك الا في اسمين او في فعل واسم “It is that which comprehends two words in connection with each other, which cannot happen except in the concurrence of two nouns, or of a verb and noun.” The word constituting the subject (المبتدأ) is, according to El Hazeri, placed first, on account of the importance which it holds in the estimation of the speaker or writer.” See Commentary on the Agrumia by Schnabell, Amsterdam, 1755, pp. 1. 1.

* The capitals are intended to point out the words upon which the rule immediately bears.

ample. Of the second, בְּחָכְמָה יִבְנֶה בַּיִת in, or by, wisdom is a house built, Ib.

7. Simple propositions are those which have no supplementary or subordinate parts. Compound propositions are those which have such parts. Example of the first, בְּחָכְמָה יִבְנֶה בַּיִת in wisdom is a house built: of the second, וַיִּוָּעַץ הַמֶּלֶךְ וְשָׂרָיו וְכָל-הַקְּהָל so the king, and his princes, and the whole congregation, took counsel, 2 Chron. xxx. 2. In this case the subject only is compound: others occur in which the predicate is also compound.

8. We now proceed to consider the relation of the subject with the predicate, which is indeed necessary to point out the construction of simple and incomplex propositions. We shall next shew how the complex and compound parts of propositions are constructed, i. e. on what principles their several parts are connected together.

On the Predicate of Propositions.

213. The predicate of any proposition may consist of nouns attributive or substantive (if predicables), or of verbs or pronouns, as in other languages.

2. Every proposition, whether general or particular, will, unless something particular require the contrary, have its predicate indefinite. (Verbs, of course, when in the predicate, do not come under this rule, because it cannot be said of them, that they are either definite or indefinite): e. g. שׁוֹחָה עֲמוּקָה זֹנָה a whore (is) a deep ditch, Prov. xxiii. 27.

3. Here, זֹנָה being indefinite, the proposition will be general: and, as the rule requires the predicate also to be indefinite, this becomes a case in which some ambiguity might arise, as to which of the substantives is the subject of the proposition. The sense requires here that the last word זֹנָה be the subject, although שׁוֹחָה a ditch precedes: the sentence may be thus rendered, (as) a deep ditch (is) a whore.

4. Examples of particular propositions : וְהָאָרֶץ הָיְתָה and (as to) THE EARTH (it) existed, Gen. i. 2 ; יְהוָה * מֶלֶךְ Jehovah (is) king, Ps. x. 16. With a verb : בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים HE CREATED (i. e.) GOD, Gen. i. 1.

5. When, however, any thing very specific is intended to be enounced by the predicate, it will be made definite : as, יְהוָה הוּא הָאֱלֹהִים יְהוָה הוּא הָאֱלֹהִים Jehovah he is THE GOD, Jehovah he is THE GOD, 1 Kings xviii. 39.

6. Here, as both the subject and predicate are made definite, unless a pronoun (as הוּא in this instance) were introduced in the place of the logical copula, or, unless the construction should otherwise contribute to explain the intention of the writer, an ambiguity would arise, as to which of the words so defined is to be considered as the subject : e. g. אֲנִי־הוּא הַמְדַבֵּר I (am) he who speaketh, Is. lii. 6. Or taking הוּא as the logical copula, I am the speaker. But by inverting the proposition we shall have, (as to) the speaker, it is I. In these cases, however, the sense afforded is generally the same whichever way we read the proposition. In others, where it is not, we have no other resource than the order of the construction, or the general sense of the context, to guide us.

7. From this and the case above noticed (Art. 213. 3.), some difficulties will occasionally arise in construing the Hebrew text, particularly in the books of Job, the Psalms, the Proverbs, and the Prophets, where the style is often sententious, and the order inverted.

It may be remarked, that as the Hebrews have no abstract verb which can stand for our logical copula is, and, as any pronoun may stand in the predicate of a sentence, due regard must be had to the subject of the context, in order to ascertain which of the pronouns, when more than one is used, is in the predicate : e. g. In Is. xli. 4, we have אֲנִי־הוּא I he, where a very slight consideration of the context will shew us, that אֲנִי is to be considered as in apposition with the subject of the sentence יְהוָה, and that הוּא must be in the * Exod. xxxiv. 6, &c. יְהוָה יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵי רַחוּם וְרַחוּן Jehovah Jehovah (is) a God merciful and gracious, &c. Both the construction and accents require that this passage be thus taken. Our translators, however, have taken it differently.

predicate. See also Deut. xxxii. 39, Neb: ix. 7, Jer. xiv. 22, Isa. xli. 4, xliii. 25, &c.

Of the Concordance of the Subject with the Predicate.

215. Whatever is predicated of any thing must not be incongruous with it, in sense at least: what the grammatical agreement may be, we shall see presently.

2. As the Grammatical forms of words were perhaps not much attended to in very early times, a difference in termination for the purpose of distinguishing between the feminine and the masculine gender would, probably, be among the first wanted, particularly in cases wherein there was no other means of intimating of what sex the person spoken of was. Number would soon be in the same predicament; and hence, such terminations generally agreed upon and allowed to intimate these particulars, or other words used at first as attributes, and afterwards abridged and adopted as terminations, would be made to supply these defects. The latter of which I am inclined to believe was the case.

3. If then it were ever necessary to make any such distinctions as these, it must have been so in the subjects and predicates of sentences: because, as the one must be known to refer to the other; and, as this could not be pointed out, in many cases, without some mark to apprise us of such relation, these terminations would naturally be employed in such cases.

4. In process of time, however, recourse would be had to the several figures of Rhetoric, such as Personification, Epanorthosis, Métonymy, or the like; each of which would exert a very considerable influence on the construction of sentences; and this is often found to be the case. When, therefore, we are to consider the relation of a subject with its predicate in the Hebrew, it will sometimes be necessary to have recourse to one or other of these figures.

5. Generally then, the Predicate is found to agree with its subject in gender and number, considered either in a logical or a formal point of view.

By logical we mean, when the gender, number, &c. is regulated, not according to the grammatical forms of words, but by their significations; in which case they may be influenced by any of the figures of rhetoric, or not. By formal we mean, when the gender, number, &c. are considered with reference to the grammatical forms only: e. g. יְרוּשָׁלַם יְרוּשָׁלַם וַיִּהְיֶה נָפֹל Jerusalem HATH STUMBLLED, and Judah HATH fallen. Is. iii. 8. Here יְרוּשָׁלַם is considered as feminine, not as to form, but signification (Art. 135. 5.); its predicate, therefore, בְּשָׁלָה, may be said to be in logical, not in formal, concordance with it. In the next member, יְהוּדָה, though feminine in form, is not considered as being so in signification; its predicate, therefore, is put in the masculine gender, נָפֹל.*

6. In the example וְהָיְתָה מְסֻלָּה And (there) shall be a high way, Isa. xi. 16, the concordance is purely formal. The same may be said of . . . . אֱלֹהִים קְדוֹשִׁים God (is) holy ones, Jos. xxiv. 19. הִתְעוּ אֹתִי אֱלֹהִים They caused me to wander, i. e. God, Gen. xx. 13. See also Gen. xxxv. 7. 2 Sam. vii. 23. Jer. x. 10. In all which cases the agreement appears to have been made with reference to the forms only, and not to the significations, of words.†

* Hence the names of nations, tribes, or families, may be taken as collective and singular nouns, and the names of regions, cities, &c. as singular feminine nouns, considered as containers, &c. See Exod. xiv. 30, Jer. xlviii. 11, 1 Kings xx. 20, 2 Sam. xvi. 3, Ps. cxiv. 2, Job i. 15. When, however, a verb is used as the predicate, as will be presently seen, the apparent nominative is not to be considered as the real nominative to it: but, as this must be in apposition with the real nominative, the rule respecting the concordance will hold good.

† I am well aware that these and similar passages have been appealed to in support of the doctrine of the Holy Trinity; but, until it shall be made probable, that the Sacred Writers did usually involve doctrines of this kind in the mere forms of words, I must be allowed to object to such methods of supporting an article of faith, which stands in need of no such support. For similar usages in the Greek and Latin, see Viger de idiotismis. Edit. 1813. pp. 32. 46, &c. Clarke's Homer. Iliad E., line 778, note.

7. The following is an instance of Personification: הַסֶּדֶק וְהָאֱמֶת נִבְנְשׁוּ צְדָק וְשָׁלוֹם נִשְׁקָו grace and truth have MET (each other), righteousness and peace have SALUTED (each other), Ps. lxxxiv. 11; i. e. they have met and saluted as men generally do, when on good terms with one another.

8. The following ones involve a Metonymy:* הַבָּל בְּנֵי-אִישׁ the sons of mean men (are) vanity, the sons of eminent men (are) a lie, i. e. they are in effect as deceptive as vanity, or a lie; עֵץ קִירָתוֹ עֵץ its walls (are) wood, i. e. made of wood, Ezek. xli. 22; יְהוּ כְּלֵי הַנְּעָרִים קֹדֶשׁ the vessels of the young men are holiness, i. e. are made holy, 1 Sam. xxi. 6; † הַמְּלָאכָה הַרְבָּה The work (is) an increasing, Neh. iv. 13, i. e. is in a state of progress. So we say in English, "Knowledge is power," i. e. it is the cause of power; "Money is a defence," is the means of obtaining a defence; "a man goes a hunting," and the like.

9. When one Predicate answers to several subjects differing from each other in gender or number or both, it may be put in the plural number, as referring to them all; or it may be made to agree, both in gender and number, with the nearest, or, with that which may be considered the most worthy: † e. g. וְאַבְרָהָם וְשָׂרָה זְקֵנִים and Abraham and Sarah (were) OLD, Gen. xviii. 11: וַיָּקָם אַבְיִמֶלֶךְ וּפִיכֹל שַׂר־צְבָאוֹ וַיָּשָׁבוּ So he arose, (i. e.) Abimelek and Phicol the captain of his host, AND THEY RETURNED, Gen. xxi. 32.

† Storr, pp. 11. 17, &c. refers the use of abstracts for concretes to a Synecdoche, see p. 20; and vice versa, p. 21.

‡ The plural is considered as more worthy than the singular, and the masculine than the feminine gender. But, in the last case, the mother will be considered more worthy than the children.

the subject : as, כָּל-מְלָאכָה לֹא יַעֲשֶׂה the whole of the work (it) SHALL not BE DONE, Exod. xii. 16.

See also Gen. v. 23. 31, Is. lxiv. 10, Nah. iii. 7, &c. And particularly when the predicate stands first in the order : as, סָרָה קְנִיאַת אֶפְרַיִם the envy of Ephraim (it) SHALL DEPART, Isa. xi. 13.

Of the Concordance of the Nominative with its Verb.

216. The Concordance of a real nominative with its verb, is that of a subject with its predicate. By a real nominative we mean, the pronoun which is always inherent in the verb when in the state of conjugation (See Art. 188.). What, therefore, is usually taken for the nominative is, in fact, either a noun or a pronoun put in apposition with the nominative ; and, consequently, as before, agreeing either logically or formally with it, or with the predicate. Considered, therefore, in this point of view, all the cases of apparent discrepancy which can happen under this head, may be resolved into one or other of the preceding ones : e. g. בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים he (i. e.) God, created, Gen. i. 1.

Here the word אֱלֹהִים is manifestly a plural form ; but, as the Being designated by this word is every where affirmed to be one, the agreement between the pronoun inherent in the verb בָּרָא and this word is logical, not formal. The same may be said of יֹאמֵר אֱלֹהִים he says (i. e.) God ; and of many other similar constructions.

2. Examples of apparent discrepancy in gender and number : 1st, הַפְּלִחָמָה . . . חָזַק it (masc.) became strong (i. e.) the war, (fem.) 2 Kings iii. 26 ; 2d, הָבִיָא שְׂפָחָתָךְ he hath brought (i. e.) thy handmaid, 1 Sam. xxv. 27 ; 3d, יְהִיָה נַעֲרָה בְּתוּלָה he may be (i. e.) the young woman, a virgin, Deut. xxii. 23 ; 4th, מַה יִּהְיוּ חֲלֻמֹתָיו what they (masc.) will be (i. e.) his dreams, Gen. xxvii. 20.

3. With the apparent nominative preceding : 5th, person or thing has acquired power; it is then added that this is the war. The same may be said of the four following ones. In the sixth example, either a personification is resorted to, or some such word as דָּבָר affair, matter, thing, or the like, is to be supplied by the ellipsis: as, knowledge (it is a thing or person), that gives pleasure. In the seventh and eighth, the plurals seem to be taken collectively: as, her cities (the whole), has gone up.* The arms of the orphans (the whole), is broken.

5. When the verb הָיָה is introduced, it is sometimes found to agree with the subject, at others with the predicate: e. g. נִקְרָא יְהוָה שְׂבָרָךְ thy reward shall be the spotted ones, Gen. xxxi. 8; שְׂמָמָה תְּהִיָה הַר־שֵׁעִיר IT SHALL BE a devastation (i. e.) Mount Seir, Ezek. xxxv. 15. So, “The wages of sin is death.”

6. So also when a personal pronoun occupies the place of this verb: e. g. הַקֹּת הָעַמִּים הַבָּל הוּא (as to) the statutes of the people, IT IS VANITY, Jer. x. 3, i. e. taken collectively.

7. When, however, inanimate or irrational beings are represented as agents, the feminine form of the verb is often taken: † e. g. תִּשָּׁטֵף סְבִיחָיָהּ עַבְר־אֶרֶץ it bears away (i. e.) her effusions, the dust of the earth, Job xiv. 19; שְׁפָתַי הַכְּמִים תִּשְׁמֹרֵם the lips of the wise, it preserves them, Prov. xiv. 3. See also 1 Sam. iv. 15, 2 Sam. x. 9, Job xii. 7, xx. 11, Ps. cxix. 98, Is. lix. 12, Jer. xlviii. 41, li. 56, Mic. iv. 11.

8. When the apparent nominative is in the definite state of construction (see Art. 215. 12.) with another noun, the verb will occasionally agree with the latter:

* So in the Greek, πόλιν ἄρδην ἐξολοθρεῦσαι.—aliquando (ἄρδην) significat sublime, Viger., Ed. 1813, p. 294.

† This is a constant law in the Arabic, and generally in all the dialects of this family of languages, viz. that it is only when the agent is a rational being that the concordance is formal.

e. g. כִּילְגֵשׁ כָּלֵב מֵעֵבָה יָלַד שֶׁבֶר * the concubine of Caleb (i. e.) Maachah (he) begat Sheber, 1 Chron. ii. 48.

9. When courage, virility, fortitude, efficiency, or the like, is intended to be predicated of females, verbs expressive of acts, &c. done by them, seem to be put in the masculine gender in order to express that; e. g. בְּאִשֶּׁר עָשִׂיתֶם עִם-הַמֵּתִים וְעִמָּדִי as ye (women) HAVE DONE (courageously) with the dead and with me, Ruth i. 8; וַיֵּדְעֶתֶם כִּי אֲנִי יְהוָה and ye (women) SHALL KNOW (effectively) that I am the Lord Jehovah, Ezek. xxiii. 49; וַתַּעֲשִׂי הָרָעוֹת וַתִּוְקָל and thou (fem.) doest evil things, and thou PREVAILEST (manfully), Jer. iii. 5.†

10. It has been laid down as a general rule, that the word intended to be considered as the most important in a sentence will stand first (Art. 212. 3.). When, therefore, this happens to be the apparent nominative to a verb, it is usually termed the Nominative absolute.

11. The office of this nominative is to enounce the subject matter of discourse (Art. 212. 3. note); which, as it is done in a manner independent of any of the following context in a formal point of view, has been termed absolute. Any nouns, pronouns, &c. following, and referring to this nominative, must, however, agree with it either logically, or formally: e. g. נֶפֶשׁ כִּי-תִהְיֶה טָמֵא וְעָשָׂה . . . &c. (as to) a soul, when it shall sin . . . AND HE DO, &c., Lev. iv. 2; i. e. as spoken of a person, וְעָשָׂרָה אָנָשִׁים נִמְצְאוּ-בָם and (as to) TEN MEN, they were found among them, Jer. xli. 8 ; וּמִכִּיבֹשֶׁת בֶּן-אֲדֹנָיָה יֹאכֵל and תִּמְוֶיךָ but (as to) Mephibosheth, the son of thy master, HE SHALL EAT continually, 2 Sam. ix. 10 ; וּפִילְגֶשֶׁוּ וּשְׁמָהּ and (as to) his concubine, and her name was Reumah, SHE ALSO BROUGHT FORTH, Gen. xxii. 24.

* But here we may have an ellipsis.

† It is a curious fact that the Grammarians of Arabia consider females as unintelligent agents, not absolutely, but relatively; and hence they account for these agents having, in grammar, the same government with collective inanimate nouns. See the Shurho Moolla Jámi, p. ۳۱۹.

12. A great number of instances moreover occur, in which the Subject of the discourse is thus absolutely enounced (Art. 212.) by one or more words, not apparent nominatives to verbs, but which are, nevertheless, termed NOMINATIVES ABSOLUTE : e. g. הַדְּבָרִים אֲשֶׁר שָׁמַעְתָּ (as to) THE WORDS which thou hast heard, &c., 2 Kings xxii. 18 ; הַדְּבָר אֲשֶׁר-דִּבַּרְתָּ . . . אֵינָנוּ שׁוֹמְעִים (as to) THE WORD which thou hast spoken . . . we regard it not, Jer. xliv. 16 ; וְדַמוֹת הַחַיּוֹת מֵרְאִיָּהֶם and (as to) THE SIMILITUDE of the living creatures, THEIR appearances, &c., Ezek. i. 13 ; וְכֹל דְּבַר חֲכָמַת בִּינָה . . . וַיִּמְצְאוּם (as to) EVERY MATTER of wisdom (and) discrimination . . . so he found them, Dan. i. 20 ; אֲנִי הִנֵּה בְרִיתִי אִתְּךָ (as for) ME, behold my covenant is with thee, Gen. xvii. 4, &c.

13. The relative pronoun אֲשֶׁר is often subject to this kind of construction, though always in a subordinate point of view, and when the subject matter of the proposition in which it is found, is not the real subject of the discourse, but nevertheless relates to it : e. g. אֲשֶׁר תִּהְיֶנּוּ (as to) WHICH, the wind disperses it, Ps. i. 4 ; אֲשֶׁר צִוִּיתִיךָ לִבְלֹתִי אֶכֶל-מִמֶּנּוּ (as to) WHICH, I commanded thee for not eating of it, &c., Gen. iii. 11 ; אֲשֶׁר הָיָה (with respect to) WHOM, the word of the Lord came to him, &c., Jer. i. 2.

14. This view of such constructions will account for the apparent pleonasm of the pronoun in Hebrew, which has in some instances found its way into our own version. See also Exod. vi. 4, Lev. xviii. 5, Num. xiii. 27, Deut. xxviii. 49, 2 Kings xiii. 14, Jer. xiv. 1,

Ezek. xx. 11, xxxvii. 25, Joel iv. 2, Ps. xcv. 5,—with וְיֵשׁ Eccles. ii. 21.

15. From the unconnected situation of words thus placed, it will be necessary to render them in our language, and some others, by prefixing some such expression as, with reference to, with respect to, as to, or the like, otherwise our translations will appear bald and obscure. This will account for most of the additional words found within brackets in this work.—There are instances, however, in the Hebrew, in which these supplementary words are expressed in the text: * e. g. אֲשֶׁר-בְּאֶרֶץ לְקְדוֹשִׁים AS TO the saints who are in the land, Ps. xvi. 3; לִפְנֵי מִרְעֵהוּ חֶסֶד AS TO the afflicted man, from his friend (there ought to be) kindness, Job vi. 14; אֶת-מְקוֹם בְּסֵאֵי WITH RESPECT TO the place of my throne, &c., Ezek. xliii. 7; וְאֶת-דּוֹרוֹ and, AS TO his generation, &c., Is. liii. 8. (Art. 171. 11.)

16. Any other word may, like אֲשֶׁר, be employed as a subordinate nominative absolute at the pleasure of the writer; but, when this is done, its connection with some former word, &c., which may involve the real subject matter of the discourse, will be pointed out by the intervention of some other word: e. g. כִּי הַמְגִיד לִי לֵאמֹר... וְהוּא הָיָה FOR (as to) him who announced to me, saying ... and he was, &c., 2 Sam. iv. 10; גַּם-אֲנִי יִקְרָנִי EVEN, (as to) me, it will happen (to) me, Eccl. ii. 15.

17. In some instances, also, we find both the leading and subordinate subject of a discourse placed together, without any such mark of distinction: e. g. מְלָכִים בְּחַנוֹת יְדִיהֶם וְרַגְלֵיהֶם מִקְצָצִים הָיוּ מִלְקָטִים (as to)

* So in the Arabic, Gram. Arabe, vol. ii. Art. 158. Also with ل ف اما, ل &c., passim.

seventy kings, the thumbs of their hands and (the great toes) of their feet being cut off, they were gathering, &c., Judg. i. 7, which however will, according to the Arabic idiom, admit of another solution and translation; viz. (as to) seventy kings deprived of their thumbs and great toes, they were gathering, &c. The accents give the former.

18. The recurrence of ו, in all such constructions as this, is said to have the effect of pointing out the comparison or correspondence intended to be instituted between the preceding and following member, i. e. the relation between the prothesis and apodosis: e. g. וְאִם יִלְקַח הַבַּיִת קָטָן . . . . וְיִמְעַט הַבַּיִת . . . . AND if the house be small . . . . THEN let him take, &c. Exod. xii. 4.

LECTURE XV.

ON THE GENERAL DEPENDENCE OF WORDS ONE UPON ANOTHER.

217. Having considered the principles of concordance found to prevail in this language, we now come to consider the dependence of words upon one another generally, and to investigate the principles by which this is regulated.

2. It will readily be admitted, that when words are added, either for the purpose of defining or modifying the signification of others, or for completing the ideas partially perhaps conveyed by them, the relation which such words will bear to one another must be regulated by some easy and intelligible principles. We now proceed to shew what these are.

3. The principles found to prevail in the Hebrew language may be reduced to two: viz. apposition, and what has been termed the definite state of construction, (Art. 143.)

4. By Apposition is meant the juxta-position of two or more words which are either different names for some idea, or some of which are added for the purpose of presenting it in a different point of view, or otherwise to modify and define it: e. g. יהוה אלהים Jehovah Elohim, presents two words in apposition; by the first of these the reader is put in mind of that Being alone, who had revealed himself to the Jews; by the second, the name of any Deity, either true or false. But, when these two are combined, the sense of the latter is so restricted, as to be applicable to none but the God of Israel. Again, in the example, הַמֶּלֶךְ דָּוִד the king David,* by the first we shall understand the king, but shall not know what king is meant. It may be the king of Assyria, Samaria, Egypt, or of any other country; when however the word David is added, the phrase becomes perfectly definite. The first of these may be termed apposition of identity; the second, of specification.

5. Apposition may also be either immediate or mediate: immediate, when the words so connected have no intervening word or particle: as, יהוה אלהים; mediate, when some such word, &c. intervenes: as, יְשִׁי בֵּית הַלְּחָמִי Jesse the Bethlehemite.

6. Under this head we shall consider the construction of attributives with substantives, or when used as adverbs: nouns substantive used as specificatives, i. e. when in apposition with others signifying number, weight, measure, &c. : also the Pronouns demonstrative, interrogative, and personal, when added for the purpose of defining, specifying, or otherwise restricting, the significations of other words.

7. The other principle just mentioned, by which two or more words are so connected as to present one definite idea, is that which regulates the juxta-position of two or more substantives, or attributives used as substantives,* which are not names for the same thing, but which, having a certain relation to one another, will by their combination afford the idea of proprietorship, materiality, peculiarity, or the like, which exists between them. This we term the definite state of construction, generally; but, when the first of two or more such words in construction is an attributive, used as a substantive, we shall, for the mere sake of distinction, term this the distinctive state of construction.

8. This construction may be either immediate or mediate, as before, and for the same reasons.

* It is usual with writers on the Arabic Grammar to say, when speaking of (what we term) adjectives or attributives, that they are put to stand for the essence or being of the person or thing described, including also the properties expressed by such words. So the Moolla Jâmi, on the Gram. of Ibn ul Hâjib,

الوصف وهو كون الاسم دالاً على ذات مبهمه ماخوذة مع ٤١،
بعض صفاتها سواء كانت هذه الدلالة بحسب الوضع مثل احمر فانه
موضع لذات ما اخذت مع بعض صفاتها التي هي الحمرة.

See also the same sentiment repeated under the فاعل, مفعول, and صفة مشبهة. and Mr. de Sacy's Gram. Arabe, vol i. p. 228. The same is found to prevail in the Persian, Sanscrit, and Bengâli. On the last, see Mr.
Haughton's Gram., p. 35. Art. 120. See also Lumsden's Pers. Gram., vol. i.
p. 147, &c. And the جوهر التركيب of Shiva Ram. Calcutta....p. ٥٥—.

there is not a God besides him, &c. In all such cases as the above, then, we have a Nominative absolute (Art. 216. 10.), or a Subject attended by its predicate, e. g. as to Jehovah, (he is) a merciful and gracious God: and so of the rest: in which the subsequent words may also be considered as specific (Art. 217. 4.).

3. In all cases, in which both the subject and predicate are made definite, we have nothing more or less than nouns in immediate apposition, where the following ones may be considered as specificatives as before: and hence the rules relating to the concordance of the subject with the predicate will also hold good here.

4. The construction of apparent nominatives with their verbs, has been shewn to be nothing more than nouns, &c., in immediate apposition with the real nominatives, and which must always agree with them either in a logical or formal point of view.

Of Words in Immediate Apposition with one another.

219. When two or more substantives, or attributives used as substantives, are in Apposition, one or more of them may be considered as occupying the place of adjectives in other languages.* Examples of immediate

---

* Nouns put in apposition, may, as already observed, be considered in two points of view: the one may be termed Identity; as in the phrase יהוה יְהוָה Jehovah Elohim; the other, Specification, as in the instances above. This last is termed by the Arabian Grammarians <sup>س</sup>تَمْيِيز specification, and is thus explained in the Hidayat oon Nahve, p. ٤٩ تَذَكَّرْ بَعْدَ عَدَدٍ أَوْ كَيْلٍ أَوْ وَزْنٍ أَوْ مَسَاحَةٍ أَوْ غَيْرِ ذَلِكَ مِمَّا فِيهِ

الابْهَامُ وَتَرْفَعُ ذَلِكَ الْاِبْهَامُ نَحْوَ عِنْدِي عَشْرُونَ رَجُلًا وَقَفِيزَانٌ بَرًّا وَمَنْوَانٌ سَمًّا وَجَرِيْبَانٌ قَطْنَا وَعَلِي الثَّمْرَةَ مِثْلَهَا زَبْدًا وَقَدْ يَكُونُ مِنْ غَيْرِ مَقْدَارٍ نَحْوَ خَاتَمٍ حَدِيدًا وَسِوَارٍ ذَهَبًا — وَقَدْ يَقَعُ بَعْدَ الْجُمْلَةِ لِرَفْعِ الْاِبْهَامِ عَنِ

نَسْبَتِهَا نَحْوَ طَابَ زَيْدٌ نَفْسًا أَوْ عِلْمًا أَوْ اِبًّا. “THE (NOUN OF) SPECIFICATION is always indefinite, and is placed after a noun of NUMBER, MEASURE,

apposition: אֲנָשִׁים מְעַט men, a FEW, i. e. a few men, Neh. ii. 12; אֲמָרִים אֱמֶת words, TRUTH, i. e. true words, Prov. xxii. 21: שֶׁה בְּרִיָּה a sheep, FATNESS, i. e. fat sheep, Ezek. xxxiv. 20.

2. Examples in which the latter designates the materials, metal, &c. out of which the first is made: כֶּפָּרַיִם two talents (of) SILVER, 2 Kings v. 23; *הַבֶּקֶר

WEIGHT, DISTANCE, &c., in which the signification is vague, in order to render it SPECIFIC: as, twenty MEN, two measures (termed قَفِيز) (of) WHEAT,

Two pounds (of) FAT, Two measures (termed جَرِيْب) (of) COTTON:

or, when speaking of a single date (fruit, saying) زَبْدًا THE CREAM. It is also used when quantity is not meant; as, a ring (of) IRON, a bracelet (of) GOLD. It sometimes comes after a sentence, in order to mark the thing referred to with the greater precision; as, Zaid (is) fortunate (in) PERSON, or, LEARNING, or (in his) FATHER." The following is the account given of it in the Alfiya of Ibn Málík: اِسْمٌ بِمَعْنَى مِّن مِّمَّيْن نَكْرَةً. يَنْصَبُ تَمْيِيزًا بِمَا in the signification of من of explains something that is vague, is placed for the sake of specification in juxta-position with the word so restricted: as, a span (of) EARTH; a measure (termed قَفِيز) of WHEAT; two pounds of HONEY, or of DATE FRUIT.

According to the opinion of El Akhfash, الاخفش, and Soheili سهيلي, as recorded by El Azheri (Schnabell's Com. on the Agrúmia, p. ۸۲) and condemned by him, this construction is to be considered as a species of the Izáfat, or definite state of construction; which is no doubt erroneous.

* We have a construction perfectly parallel to this, which M. de Sacy has put down in his Gram. Arabe, (vol. ii. p. 110.), as anomalous; it is given in these examples: viz. القَرَامِي الخَشَبِ the billets, the wood,

i. e. the wooden billets. So الصُّلْبَانِ الخَشَبِ، الخَرَارِيْبِ الذهبِ and הַנְּחֹשֶׁת the oxen, THE BRASS, i. e. brazen, 2 Kings xvi. 17; טוֹרִים אָבֶן orders (rows) stone, i. e. of stone, Exod. xxviii. 17.

3. So also, when the latter word signifies the person, thing, &c. numbered, measured, or weighed, and the preceding one the name of the measure, &c.; e. g. שְׁנַתִּים יָמִים two years, DAYS, i. e. the space of two years, Gen. xli. 1; שָׁבָעִים יָמִים weeks, DAYS, i. e. the space of certain weeks, Dan. x. 3; אֵיפָה שְׁעָרִים an ephah (of) barley, Ruth ii. 17; סָאֵה-סֶלֶת a seah (of) fine flour, 2 Kings vii. 1.

See also Gen. xv. 1, Num. ix. 19, 20, xxviii. 23, 1 Kings xxii. 17, Prov. xxii. 21, Is. x. 19, xxx. 20, 33, &c.

4. Apposition may also take place mediately, i. e. when one or more words intervene between the nouns to be thus construed.

Under this rule may be placed all those examples, in which

الخَبز الشعير. So in the tale of Sindbad, by Langlés, السروج الخشب

p. ٤, and without the article لوح خشب, p. ١٦. There is no reason, however, for supposing, as M. de Sacy does, that this construction is modern, for it also occurs in the Koran; nor, that these are to be considered as nouns in the definite state of construction. The fact is, they are nouns in apposition, and involve the rhetorical figure which the Arabs term بدل, and we, EPANORTHOSIS. This construction may also be explained, by supposing the preposition من to be omitted, as done by El Azheri, الأزهرى, in his Commentary on the Agrúmia, published by Schnabell, p. ٨٣. But I prefer the former method. See also Josh. iii. 14, 2 Kings ix. 4, 1 Chron. xv. 27, 2 Chron. xv. 8, Ps. lix. 6, Jer. xxxviii. 6, where there seems to be an excess of the definite article; but this may be accounted for without having recourse to the ellipsis, as Schræderus has done. Synt. R. III. See also Freytag's Hamasa, vol. i. p. 3.

Schrœderus has said, "Emphatica est construendi ratio," &c. (Synt. R. 18.) which, however, are nothing more than words put in mediate apposition with others, i. e. having an intervening particle expressed, which seems to be added rather for the purpose of modifying the signification of the preceding word, than for adding emphasis to the context: e. g. כִּי בָרַע הוּא for he is IN evil, i. e. in an unfortunate situation, Exod. xxxii. 22; בְּקִדְשׁ יְרַבְּדָהּ IN holiness (is) thy way, Ps. lxxvii. 14; יְהוָה יְהוּדָה בְּכִסְלָהּ Jehovah SHALL BE IN (or for) thy confidence, Prov. iii. 26; * אֲדָנִי בְּסִמְכֵי נַפְשִׁי the Lord (is) AMONG the sustainers of my soul, Ps. liv. 6.

See also Ps. lxxxix. 14, cxviii. 7, Prov. xvi. 6, Is. xl. 10, Hos. xiii. 9.

5. Words are sometimes put in the mediate state of apposition by means of a conjunction. This is generally termed Hendiadys. Examples: עִיר וְאִם a city AND mother, i. e. a mother city, or metropolis, 2 Sam. xx. 19; בְּרָמָה וּבְעִירוֹ in Ramah AND in his own city, i. e. in his city Ramah, 1 Sam. xxviii. 3; בְּכֵלֵי הָרֹעִים וּבִילְקוּט in the shepherds' vessel, AND in the bag, Ib. xvii. 40.

And in a note, "C'est ainsi que l'on peut dire زَيْدٌ كَاذِبٌ ou بِكَاذِبٍ, ou مِنَ الْكَاذِبِينَ; à la lettre, non Zeidus mendacem, ou in mendaci, ou ex mendacibus." So Sophoc. Œdip. On the Nouns of Time and Place.

220. Under this head may be placed certain words, signifying the time or place in which any thing is done, the construction of which in the Arabic is absolute :* these words are, therefore, construed by them as if in the objective case, and as standing in no need of any intervening particle : e. g. שְׁנַתַּיִם יָמִים two years (as to) DAYS, the space of two years, Gen. xli. 1 ; וְהוּא יָשָׁב וּפְתַח-הָאֹהֶל and he standing (in) THE OPENING of the tent, Gen. xviii. 1 ; וְעָמַד פְּתַח הָאֹהֶל and it stood (at) THE OPENING of the tent, Exod. xxxiii. 9 ; עֹמְדִים מִזְרַח לְמִזְבֵּחַ standing (at) THE EASTERN PART of the altar, 2 Chron. v. 12.

As the construction of the numerals will occasionally require the application of the other principle, which we have termed that of "definite construction," its consideration will be postponed till we come to treat on that subject specifically.

The preposition, however, is sometimes used : e. g. יִתְיַצְּבוּ בְּתַחֲתֵית הָהָר they stood BENEATH the mount, Exod. xix. 18.

2. In all these cases, as the qualifying word seems to have no formal connection with the word qualified, its position may be termed absolute : and, in this point of view, it may be said to have the same relation to the word qualified that an adverb has when used for the purpose of qualifying a verb.

3. We sometimes find a pronoun joined with the first

* These are termed ظروف المكان والزمان containers of time and place :
 e. g. <sup>ف</sup>صوموا <sup>أياماً</sup> معدودة <sup>ف</sup>fast ye (for) days numbered ; <sup>ع</sup>أمام <sup>المسجد</sup> before the mosque, Gram. Arab. M. de Sacy, vol. ii. p. 59, 60, &c.

of such nouns : as, מְרוּ בֵד HIS GARMENT (of) linen, Lev. vi. 3 ; מְחַסֵּי-עוֹ MY REFUGE (of) strength, Ps. lxxi. 7.

See also 1 Sam. xxii. 13, Is. xxxi. 7, Lam. iv. 17, Ezek. xvi. 27, &c.*

4. Attributives in Hebrew being considered as including some substantive in their signification (see Art. 217. 7.), need not, when put in apposition with other substantives, be made to agree with them formally, i. e. in the same gender and number : e. g. עֹלָה פְּלִיל an offering, a COMPLETE ONE, i. e. a complete offering, 1 Sam. vii. 9 ; בֶּשֶׂר בַּשָּׂדֶה טֶרֶף flesh in the field, TORN (flesh) i. e. flesh torn in the field, Exod. xxii. 30 ; לְעַם לְצִיִּים for a people, for THE DESERT-ONES, i. e. for those inhabiting the desert, Ps. lxxiv. 14, &c.

5. When, however, attributives are put in apposition with substantives, they must agree with them in a logical point of view at least ; i. e. if the substantive is either definite or indefinite in signification, the attributive must also be made definite or indefinite. As to number and gender, the agreement is that of a predicate with its subject (see Art. 215, &c.). And, with respect to the order, it will be the same as before (Art. 212. 3.) : e. g. אִישׁ חָכָם a man, WISE, 2 Sam. xiii. 3 ; שִׁוְחָה עֲמוּקָה a ditch, DEEP, Prov. xxiii. 27 ; רַבִּים צִידִים MANY, hunters, Jer. xvi. 16 ; הַדְּבָרִים הָאֵלֶּה the words, THESE, Gen. xlviii. 1 ; הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת the land, THIS, Ib. v. 4 ; בְּנֵי הַנּוֹלָדִים thy sons, THE BORN ONES, Ib. v. 5.

6. Pronouns have the property of making the words to which they are attached definite ; and hence, in the last example, the article is necessarily affixed to the attribute נוֹלָדִים. Hence also, it is only when the antecedent is definite, that the relative pronoun אֲשֶׁר, or any equivalent term being also definite, ought in any case to be introduced : e. g. הָאִשָּׁה אֲשֶׁר נָתַתָּה עִמָּדִי THE woman, WHOM thou hast placed with me, Gen. iii. 12 ; מִי־זֶה רֹעָה מִי־אִישׁ הַלֹּזֵה הַהֶלֶךְ who (is) THIS shepherd WHO standeth ? Jer. xlix. 19 ; מִי־הָאִישׁ הַלֹּזֵה הַהֶלֶךְ who (is) THIS MAN, THE (one) walking, Gen. xxiv. 65. But to this rule there are many exceptions.

* Examples of this description have been improperly laid down by Schröderus as being in the definite state of construction. Synt. R. 10.

7. In some instances, however, the attributive appears to be made definite, when the preceding substantive is not so : as, בְּיַד מַלְאָכִים הַבָּאִים by the hand of messengers, THE coming ones, Jer. xxvii. 3 ; עֲבָדִים הַמֹּתְפָרְצִים servants, THE runaways, 1 Sam. xxv. 10. But, in these cases, we seem to have an Epanorthosis ; as, in the first case,—I mean those who are coming, &c. (see Art. 216. 4.).

8. In other cases, the latter is without the article when the first is not ; as, הַדִּיר אֶחָד THE basket, one, Jer. xxiv. 2 ; לְעֵינֵי הַגּוֹיִם לְרַבִּים in the eyes of THE nations, many, Ezek. xxxix. 27 ; אֶת־הָעֲגָלָה הַחֲדָשָׁה the new cart, 2 Sam. vi. 3. But, in these instances, we have probably an ellipsis of one of the words so connected : e. g. הַדִּיר אֶחָד as to the basket, one basket, &c. : or, the latter word may be considered as specific : in which case the article is necessarily omitted ; and so of the rest.

9. Proper names are to a certain degree definite in their own right ; they do not, therefore, receive the article. Nor will two nouns in the state of definite construction admit of the article being prefixed to the first ; as, הַדְּבַר יְהוָה or הַדְּבַר הַמֶּלֶךְ : because, in all these cases, the last word (whether it be a proper name and therefore definite in itself, or, an appellative with an article) is added for the purpose of defining the first ; which will not then admit of being made still more so, by the further addition of the article.

10. There are, however, many examples in which this doctrine about the force of the article seems to be contravened ; and in order to be able to account for these, it becomes necessary here to consider the principles by which the use of the article is regulated.

On the Use of the Article.

221. The article is used for two purposes generally (Art. 180. 14.); first, to point out any person or thing already mentioned or well known; as, הָאָרֶץ the earth, Gen. i. 2, which had just been mentioned; or, הַשֶּׁמֶשׁ the sun. Secondly, to restrict the bearing of any generic, abstract, or other noun, to the peculiar property, quality, &c. expressed by such word; e. g. Gen. xviii. 25, חָלְלָה לְךָ מַעֲשֵׂת פְּדָבָר הַזֶּה לְהַמִּית צְדִיק עִם־רָשָׁע וְהָיָה כְּצִדִיק בְּרָשָׁע far be it from thee to do after this manner, to put to death RIGHTEOUS and EVIL; so, THE RIGHTEOUS shall become as THE WICKED: or, and thus the man characterized as RIGHTEOUS shall be (considered hereafter) as the man designated as WICKED. So Ib. xiii. 7, וְהַכְּנַעֲנִי וְהַפְּרִזִּי אֲזוּ יָשָׁב בְּאֶרֶץ and THE CANAANITE and THE PERIZZITE dwelt then in the land. So also with respect to abstract nouns: 1 Kings vii. 14, וַיִּמְלֵא אֶת־הַחֲכָמָה וְאֶת־הַתְּבוּנָה וְאֶת־הַדַּעַת לַעֲשׂוֹת כָּל־מְלָאכָה בְּנִחְשָׁת and, he is filled with SUCH WISDOM, and INTELLIGENCE, and KNOWLEDGE, (as are necessary) *for making all work in brass,* &c.* See also Gen. xxiii. 17, הָיָעַן; Deut. xxxii. 4, הַצּוֹר; 2 Sam. xii. 7, הָאִישׁ, &c.

---

ما عرف باللام وهي علي اربعة اقسام الاول ما يشير به الي المهيمة من حيث هي هي بلا اعتبار فرد او افراد نحو الرجل خير من الامراة ومن ثم اجيز الدينار الحمر والدرهم البيض ويسم بلام الجنس . . . والثاني ما

2. The reason of the rule seems to be this. These generic, or abstract, nouns may be considered as proper names for the ideas for which they severally stand ; and, therefore, as definite within themselves to a certain degree. But, as they may stand for any individual of the species to which they belong, and, likewise, for every individual, they may represent whole classes. In this case, the addition of the definite article can affect their signification in no other way, than by giving a sort of importance, not to such class or individual, but to the property expressed by its name. And, again, any proper name receiving the definite article, may be considered as an attribute expressive of the properties, &c. expressed by such name.

يشير به الي المهية الموجودة في ضمن فرد معهود بين المتكلم والمخاطب في الخارج نحو ليس الذكر كالانثي ويسمي بالعهد الخارجي والثالث ما يشير به الي المهية الموجودة في الذهن في ضمن فرد ما نحو اني خاف ان ياكله الذئب ويسمي بالعهد الذهني وهذا في المعني كالذكرة واما في اللفظ فيجري عليه احكام المعارف . . . والرابع ما يشير الي المهية الموجودة في ضمن جميع الافراد نحو ان الانسان لفي خسر بدليل صحة الاستثناء وهو الا الذين امنوا ويسمي بلام الاستغراق . That which is made definite by the article, is of four sorts. The first is, any word intimating character as it exists, without regard to particular or particulars ; as, THE MAN is better than THE WOMAN. And hence by a metonymy, THE RED Dinar, THE WHITE Dirhem, (i. e. of gold or silver, respectively). This is termed the article of kind. The second is that by which the character existing externally and habitually in an individual, is pointed out between the first and second person (in discourse) ; as, THE MALE is not like THE FEMALE. This is termed, The external convention . . . The third is that which points out the character of something inherent in any individual mentally : as, I am afraid THE WOLF will devour him. This is termed, The mental convention. In this the word is not actually defined, although it has received the form of words defined. The fourth is that which points out the property found to exist in all the individuals of any species ; as, "THE MAN" (i. e. man generally) "is certainly" (implied) "in sorrow:"—in order to point out the force of the exception (following, viz.) "except those who believe." This is termed the article of immersion. The Persians express these powers by adding the letter ي to nouns. See Sir William Jones's Persian Grammar, edit. ix. pp. 26, 27, &c.

3. Hence, we find words used as proper names, sometimes with, and at others without, the definite article; e. g. הַיַּרְדֵּן the Jordan, (properly, the River, יַרְד or רְדא in the Syriac, signifying to run, flow, &c.) Jer. xii. 5, xlix. 19; but Job xl. 23, &c. יַרְדֵּן Jordan; הַיְאֹר the Nile, i. e. the River, Gen. xli. 1, 2. 18; יְאֹר Isa. xix. 7, xxiii. 3, Zech. x. 11; הַלְבָּנוֹן the Libanus, Deut. iii. 25, &c.; Ps. xxix. 6, &c. לְבָנוֹן as a proper name; הַפְּרָמֶל I Sam. xv. 12, &c. פְּרָמֶל Josh. xv. 55. So הַפְּשָׁן and פְּשָׁן, הַפְּעוֹר and פְּעוֹר. So also in the names of men: הָעֵצֶקָה Num. xiii. 22. 28; עֵצֶקָה Deut. ix. 2; הָאֲרוֹנָה 2 Sam. xxiv. 16; הַפְּגוֹג Ezek. xxxviii. 2, &c.* See Nold. Concord. Part. annot. and vind. p. 855, &c.

4. This sometimes takes place also, when a proper name, compounded of two words, is put in the definite state of construction; as, הַקְּרִית הָאֲרָבֶעַ Neh. xi. 25, but הַקְּרִית אֲרָבֶעַ Gen. xxiii. 2. So הַקְּרִית הַיְעָרִים Jer. xxvi. 20, but הַקְּרִית יְעָרִים Josh. ix. 17, &c. So I Sam. xvii. 34, הַאֲרִי and הַדּוֹב, are put for a lion, and a bear, not the lion, &c. See also Mr. de Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. pp. 326—8, vol. ii. p. 276, &c.

5. Some appellatives which are much in use, seem to take the article by way of distinction: † as, הַבְּיַר the well, Exod. ii. 15; הַפֶּעַר the servant, Gen. xviii. 7, &c. just as we use the corresponding

* In the کتاب المظهر في اللغة by Essoyuti, we have the following remark to this effect: فان قيل فالفرات أيضاً معرفة فلم دخلته الالف واللام فالجواب ان ذلك جايئ في كل معرفة اصله الوصف كالعباس والحارث والفرات هو الماء العذب قال تعالي واسقيناكم ماءً فراتاً. If it be said, Why is EL FARAT with the article, when its addition is not allowable? The answer is, that this is allowable in all proper names the origin of which is AN ATTRIBUTIVE; as, العباس EL ABBAS; الحارث EL HARITH. And as to EL FARAT, its signification is, THE SWEET WATER: as it is said in the Koran, "And we will surely water you with sweet water." (Sur. 77.). See Weiske on the Greek Pleonasms, p. 23, edit. 1813; Freytag's Hamasa, p. 12 line 16, &c.

† This the Arabs term الغلبة prevalency, i. e. a sort of antonomasia. So in the Greek, ὁ ποιητής: ὁ ὦν, καὶ ὁ ἦν, καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος. See also Freytag's Hamasa, p. 1 — words in English without intending to make the word definite. For a similar reason perhaps others omit it: as, מְלֹךְ רַב great king, for the great king, Ps. xxi. 2, xlv. 16, xlvi. 3, xlix. 7, lxii. 1, Esth. i. 9. So אֱשֶׁת מֶלֶךְ for אֱשֶׁת מֶלֶךְ Ps. lxxii. 17, Jer. xxxi. 35, &c. So אֶרֶץ for אֶרֶץ Ps. ii. 2, Job iii. 14, xxxv. 11, &c.; and אֱלֹהִים frequently for אֱלֹהִים, &c. see No. 3.

Adverbs and other qualifying Terms.

222. Words generally construed as adverbs are nothing more than nouns, attributives, or particles, put in immediate, or mediate, apposition with those which they are intended to qualify.* The order is regulated as before (Art. 212. 3.). Examples of such words in immediate apposition; פָּקוּד פִּקְדוֹתֵי visiting, † I have visited (or will surely visit); וַיִּגַּשׁ הַפְּלִשְׁתִּי הַשָּׁמַיִם וְהָעָרִב so the Philistine approaches rising EARLY and remaining LATE, i. e. early and late, 1 Sam. xvii. 16, &c.

2. Examples of such words in mediate apposition with others, i. e. with some particle or other word or

* The construction is here, as before, absolute when immediate. This is termed by the Arabian Grammarians الحال i. e. the state; and, as it consists of one or more words added for the purpose of qualifying either the subject or object of a verb, it must necessarily be an attributive. Mr. de Sacy seems to have confounded the حال, with the تميز which is always a substantive. The principle, however, is the same in both.

† Ibn Malik says on the use of the Infinitive thus added, اِتَّخِبَ تَوْكِيْدًا "It is selected for the purpose of giving emphasis, or to specify, or to intimate number: as, I went two journeys, or, on a journey of observation." So in the Greek, ὅς ἂν καταφύγων καταφύγη ἐς τούτους. Herodot. iv. 23. See Weiske's Pleonas. Græc., Ed. 1813, pp. 9. 15. 27. Bos. Ellipses Græc., p. 3., Edit. 1813.

words intervening: יִתֵּן-אֵל לְמִכְבִּיר he giveth food to abundance, i. e. abundantly, Job xxxvi. 31; יִבְרְחוּ בְּהִתְחַבֵּא they fled in becoming hidden, i. e. secretly, Dan. x. 7, &c.

3. In all these cases specification is obviously the purpose for which such words have been introduced. With verbs these will necessarily be construed as adverbs, with nouns as adjectives, attributes, or the like. The addition of the particle can have no other influence than that of uniting the force of the several terms used, for the purpose of giving perspicuity to the whole.

4. Hence, when it is necessary to express the commencement, repetition, hurry, progress, the power of effecting, the intensity, certainty, &c. of, any action, passion, &c. this may be done either by putting two verbs in the tense and person suitable to the passage, with or without the copulative conjunction; or, by one verb only in such tense and person, and the other, either in the Infinitive, or in the Participial, form: * e. g. הִחֵל רָשׁ begin, possess, i. e. begin to possess, Deut. ii. 31;

* This, according to the Moolla Jâmi, is done for the purpose of rousing the hearer, or to prevent the supposition of mistake (Com. on Ibn ul Hâjib, p. ۲۳۵-۶).

His words are: وذلك أما لدفع ضرر الغفلة عن السامع أو لدفع ظنه بالمتكلم الغلط. وذلك الدفع يكون بتكرير اللفظ نحو ضرب زيد أو زد. "and this," he adds, "is done by repeating the word: as, He struck (i. e.) Zaid, Zaid: or, he struck, he struck (i. e.) Zaid. But, it is not to the repetition of the same words that this rule is confined, any other words may be added, as the sense may require. So Zúzeñ on the Moallakah of

Antara Ed. Menil. v. 5: جمع بينهما لضرب من التأكيد . . . الاقواء والاقفار

كما قال طرفة متي ادن منه يناء عني ويبدع i. e. The becoming void and desert. These words are conjoined for the purpose of strengthening the passage, just as the poet Tarafat has said, When I come near him, he wanders and separates from me." So also Weiske Isagoge, §. 16, and Winer's Grammar of the New Testament, p. 91, Edit. Andover, 1825.

וַיִּטַע כַּרְמִים . . . וַיַּחֲל נֹחַ so Noah begins . . . and plants a vineyard, i. e. to plant, Gen. ix. 20; לֹא תוֹסִיפוּ יְקַרְאוּ לָךְ do not repeat (that) they call thee, i. e. do not allow them again to call thee, Is. xlvii. 1; וַיִּסַּף שֵׁלַח and he repeats sending, i. e. he sends again, Gen. viii. 10; לֹא אֶסַּף לְקַלֵּל I add not to curse, i. e. I will not curse again, Ib. v. 21; וַתַּמְהֵר וַתִּתֵּר so she hastes and puts down, i. e. hastens to put down, Gen. xxiv. 18; מַדּוּעַ מְהֵרָתָן בָּא why have you hastened coming, i. e. to come, Exod. ii. 18; וַדָּוִד הִלָּךְ וַחֲזֹק וּבֵית שָׂאוּל הִלְכִים so David (was) proceeding and becoming strong; but the house of Saul (was) proceeding and becoming weak, i. e. David becomes gradually stronger, &c. 2 Sam. iii. 1; אֵיבֹל נִפְהֵבוּ I may be able (that) we may smite him, Num. xxii. 6; נִפְרָצָה נִשְׁלַחָה let us spread out, let us send, i. e. let us send out extensively, 1 Chron. xiii. 2. The force of the paragogic ה will presently be considered.

5. The repetition of nouns or particles is often resorted to, for the purpose of denoting distribution, diversity, comparison, or the-like: e. g. שְׁנַיִם שְׁנַיִם בָּאוּ two (and) two came they to Noah, Gen. vii. 9; בֵּין עֵדֶר וּבֵין עֵדֶר between flock and between flock, Gen. xxxii. 17: בִּבְקָר בִּבְקָר אֶתְּוּ and let them collect it MORNING by MORNING, Exod. xvi. 21; אֶבֶן וְאֶבֶן גְּדוֹלָה STONE and STONE, a great and a small (one), i. e. diverse weights, Deut. xxv. 13; בְּלֵב וּבְלֵב יִדְבְּרוּ in HEART and HEART they speak, i. e. while they profess one thing they mean another, Ps. xii. 3; וְהָיָה כְּעַם כְּכֹהֵן כְּעֶבֶד it shall be, LIKE people LIKE priest, LIKE servant LIKE master, &c., Isa. xxiv. 2; אָז וְכַחַי אָז וְכַחַי עַתָּה as my STRENGTH (was) then, EVEN SO (is) my STRENGTH now, Josh. xiv. 11.

6. When, however, any demonstrative pronoun is used; or, a singular personal pronoun referring to an antecedent in the plural number, distribution is generally intended: e. g. זֶה אֵל-זֶה this to this, i. e. one to another, Exod. xiv. 20; גִּדְרַר מִזֶּה וְגִדְרַר מִזֶּה a wall from this, and a wall from this, i. e. on each side, Num. xxii. 24; כִּי-תֵצֵא לְמִלְחָמָה עַל-אֹיְבֶיךָ וְנָתַנוּ יְהוָה when thou goest to the war against thy enemies, and Jehovah shall give HIM, i. e. wholly, or every one of them, Deut. xxi. 10; וַתִּקַּח הָאִשָּׁה אֶת-שְׁנֵי הָאָנָשִׁים וַתִּצְפְּנוּ so the woman takes BOTH OF THE MEN and hides HIM, i. e. wholly, or each one of them, Josh. ii. 4.

7. The context will always shew us whether we are to consider these repetitions emphatical, or distributive. There are, however, instances of repetition which fall under neither of the preceding heads, but which are to be ascribed to the simple and unpolished usage of a venerable antiquity. Such is the repetition of the word לֵאמֹר 1 Kings ii. 4, &c.—of whole sentences: as, Gen. vi. 22, xiii. 5, 6, xiv. 5, 8, xxiv. 37, 1 Sam. x. 9.—the introduction of words apparently superfluous; as, “he lifted up his eyes, feet,” &c. Gen. xiii. 10, xviii. 2, xxix. 1, Dan. x. 5: he put forth his hand,” Gen. viii. 9, 2 Kings vi. 7, &c.; “they arose,” Jos. xviii. 4; “and it came to pass,” וַיְהִי, וַיְהִי; and “behold,” הִנֵּה passim. These apparently superfluous terms are, however, of immense importance to the unity and perspicuity of the context.*

On the emphatic repetition of Words or Phrases.

223. If, upon the addition of one word or phrase, another will be made more definite, specific, &c., then upon the repetition of either, a still greater definiteness, perspicuity, energy, fervency, or the like, will be given to the context: † e. g. שׁוּבוּ שׁוּבוּ מִדְּרִכְיֶכֶם הָרְעִים TURN YE,

* See Weiske on the Greek-Pleonasms, Isagoge, § 15, &c., Ed. 1813.

† For similar examples in the Arabic, see Mr. de Sacy's Gram., vol. ii.

TURN YE, from your evil ways, Ezek. xxxiii. 11 ; רִיבוּ בְּאִמְכֶם רִיבוּ CONTEND with your mother, CONTEND YE, Hos. ii. 4 ; הַיְכָל יְהוָה הַיְכָל יְהוָה הַיְכָל יְהוָה THE TEMPLE OF JEHOVAH, THE TEMPLE OF JEHOVAH, THE TEMPLE OF JEHOVAH (are) these, Jer. vii. 4 : i. e. They insisted that the idols, which were called temples, (هَيْكَلٌ, see Pococke's Spec. Hist. Arab., p. 91.) REALLY contained the Deity; a principle of heathenism still prevailing in the East. For similar expressions, see Is. xxxviii. 19, xliii. 25, Ps. xciv. 3, Cant. vii. 1, &c.

2. So with the pronouns : מִשְׁגְּבִי וּמִפְּלִטְיָי my high tower, and MY deliverer FOR ME, i. e. my sure deliverer, Ps. cxliv. 2 ; יִתֵּן מוֹתִי אֲנִי תַּחְתֵּיךָ who will put MY DEATH, ME, in the place of thee! i. e. O that some one had slain me, even me, instead of thee! 2 Sam. xix. 1 ; וּפְגָרֵיכֶם אֲתֶם וַפְּלוּ and YOUR carcasses (even) YOU shall fall, Num. xiv. 32. See Artt. 216. 4. 219. 5.

So מְשֻׁעָן וּמְשֻׁעָנָה, masc. and fem. i. e. every species of support, Is. iii. 1. See the Concessus of Hariri by Schultens, p. 36, and the Moallakah Antaræ by Menil (Lugd. Bat. 1816.), v. 71, شَيْظَمَةٌ وشَيْظَمٌ, with the Scholia of Zúzení, at p. 113.

3. Hence, also, words put in the plural number, (which according to our system, consists of the juxta-position of two words) may be considered as emphatical : e. g. אֱלֹהִים God ; אֲדֹנָיִם Lord ; בְּעָלִים Baal ; עֲשֶׂתְרוֹת Ash-taroth, Venus ; בְּהֵמוֹת the Behemoth ; הַחֲכָמוֹת real wisdom, &c. by way of eminence, and which may hence be termed the plural of excellence.

Art. 671—2—676 ; Moolla Jami's Commentary on the Kafia, p. ۲۳۵. And with the pronouns, Mr. de Sacy's Gram., vol. ii. pp. 359, 360.

struction termed Immediate: שֵׁר־צָבָאוּ captain (of) his host, 1 Sam. xxvi. 5; מְנַשֵּׁי בְנֵי־הַנְּבִיאִים of the wives (of) the sons (of) the prophets, 2 Kings iv. 1; נְהַר־פָּרַת the river (of) Euphrates, Gen. xv. 18; קְרִית הַצּוֹת the town (of) Khuzoth, Num. xxii. 39; בְּתוּלַת בֵּת־עַמִּי the virgin (of) the daughter (of) my people, Jer. xiv. 17.

4. In these and all similar passages, this juxta-position of words has the property of defining the idea presented by the first, just as that kind of apposition does, to which we have given the term Identity. In the following, the idea presented by the first of the words so placed, is made more distinct or specific, just as it is by that state of apposition which we have termed specific. It will readily be seen, that the distinctions here mentioned can arise only from the consideration of the character of the qualifying terms in each case. Examples: בְּגָדֵי הַקֹּדֶשׁ garments (of) holiness, i. e. holy or sacred garments, Exod. xxix. 29; אֶבֶן . . . אֲבֹן a stone, or weight (of) justice, i. e. a just weight, Deut. xxv. 15; אִשְׁתַּת נְעוּרָיִם a wife (of) youth, i. e. a young wife, or, it may signify, a wife married in one's youth, Isa. liv. 6. See also Gen. xli. 42, Exod. xi. 2, Jud. viii. 13, 1 Sam. i. 11, Jer. xi. 20, &c.

5. The case will be the same should a sentence stand in the place of the qualifying word: * e. g. לֹא יָדַעְתִּי אֲשַׁמַּע a lip (or language which) I knew not, I heard, Ps. lxxxix. 6; יְהִרַת עֶשְׂהָ הַאֲדוּרִי the acquisition (of that which) he made, they have lost, Jer. xlviii. 36; לֹא אֶבְלֵ קוּם בְּיָדַי into the hands (of those) I am not able to rise against, Lam. i. 14. See Ps. lxxv. 5, cxxix. 6, Jer. ii. 8, &c.

6. This construction, however, will admit of more than one solution. For, first, if we consider the particles, &c. as nouns,

* A similar practice exists in the Persian with respect to the vowels which mark the state of construction: e. g. <sup>سرتن</sup> وقت رفتن the time of going, &c. So بی چون ارادت بی چون the will of (him who is) without a when, i. e. is eternal.

But in these cases both رفتن and بی چون may also be considered as nouns.

which I believe we ought to do, we shall have nothing more than an immediate state of construction, with the preceding word in the proper form for such a state (Art. 171.). And, 2dly, if we suppose the relative pronoun אֲשֶׁר who, which, &c. to have been omitted by the ellipsis, which has been preferred by Schroederus, the construction will also be explained.

7. In some cases, however, the order is inverted, and has hence been termed Hypallage; e. g. כֶּסֶף סִיגִים argentum scoriarum, for scoriae argenti, Prov. xxvi. 23; לֶחֶבֶן הָעֵצִים oblatio lignorum, for ligna oblationum. See also Lev. v. 15, vii. 21, xxii. 4, Deut. xii. 3, Josh. ii. 6, 1 Kings xvii. 14, Ezek. xxi. 30, Est. ix. 19.

8. As this combination takes place only for the purpose of presenting some definite idea to the mind, should it be necessary further to define or qualify them by the addition of any pronoun, &c. such pronoun, &c. will generally be added to the last: e. g. הַר קִדְשִׁי the mountain (of) my holiness, i. e. my holy mountain, Ps. ii. 6; בְּסִלֵי כֶסֶף the images (of) thy silver, i. e. thy silver images, Isaiah xxx. 22; עַמֵּי הַתְּעֹבֹת הָאֵלֹהִים the peoples (of) abominations, these, i. e. these abominable people, Ezra ix. 14.

See also Exod. xxviii. 38, Neh. ix. 14, Ps. iv. 2, lix. 18, cx. 2, cxix. 123, Is. ii. 20, xxx. 22, xxxi. 7, Dan. ix. 24. For similar constructions in the New Testament, see Rom. vii. 24, Col. i. 13, &c.

9. In the preceding examples, the qualified and qualifying noun have been considered as in juxta-position with one another; still this is neither necessary, nor is it always found, for in some instances we have the intervention of particles, such as the definite article, &c., in others, whole words or phrases: e. g. עֲשׂוֹת יְהוָה THE LORD GOD'S making (of) the earth and heavens, Gen. ii. 4; מְשֻׁלָּח מְנוּחַת אִישׁ לְרֵעֵהוּ THE SENDING GIFTS of each man to his friend, Est. ix. 19; בְּשֻׁלָּח אֹתוֹ סָרְגוֹן IN SARGON'S sending him, Is. xx. 1.

See also Gen. vii. 6, Jos. xx. 3, Isa. v. 24, xx. 1, Prov. xxv. 8, &c. Storr thinks that these examples are not to be considered as in the state of construction, but to be accounted for in some other way (Observ., p. 282.). I believe it is of little importance whether we consider them in this point of view, or as in apposition with the preceding noun, or otherwise qualifying it, the end arrived at is precisely the same in every point of view: the only question here being, whether one or more words do not parenthetically intervene between such qualified and qualifying terms. That such is the case, perhaps, there can be little doubt; and, as the usage of the language, in this particular, is all we wish to ascertain, we need not be very anxious as to the terms used, particularly where no change of vowels or consonants can be appealed to as decisive on the subject. The parallelism of the following passage requires that the construction be considered as definite: הוּי אֲשׁוּר לְיָבֵט אַפִּי וַיִּמָּוְהוּהָהוּא בְּיָדָם וְעָמִי *O Ashshur, the rod of my anger: even the rod is he, for their sake, or, in their hand, or my wrath,** Isa. x. v.

10. Great care should be taken in translating passages found in this state of construction, i. e. in considering whether the last of such words is to be taken in an active or passive sense: e. g. הַרְפַּת מוֹאָב the reproach of Moab, Zeph. ii. 8, is not to be understood as the reproach afflicting Moab, but that which they inflict on others. So הַרְפַּת עֲבָדָיָהּ Ps. lxxxix. 51, the reproach of thy servants, is that which they suffer, not that which they inflict. In like manner, . . . הַיּוֹשְׁבִים הַחַמָּס the violence (exercised by the) inhabitants, Exek. xii. 19; but פְּנֵי יֶרֶבְעֵל . . . הַחַמָּס the violence (suffered by the) children of Jerubbaal, Judg. ix. 24. וְעִנְתֵי־דָל the cry of the poor, Prov. xxi. 13: but וְעִנְתֵי קֹדֶם the cry (excited by the oppression) of Sodom, Gen. xviii. 20. The same holds good with reference to the pronouns. See Gen. xvi. 15, l. 4, Jer. li. 35, 2 Sam. xvi. 12, Is. xxi. 2, Ps. xcvi. 8, lvi. 13, &c. See also Art. 146. 8. note.

11. The following are examples of what has been termed the "mediate state of construction," i. e. when the connection of nouns thus situated is, in one way or other, defined or modified by the intervention of one or more of the particles: * הַזֵּיז מִיַּעַר a boar out of the forest, i. e. of the forest, or, a forest boar, Ps. lxxx. 14; לְאֲמִים מְרַחֵק people of, or from a distance, i. e. distant, Isa. xlix. 1.

* So in the Arabic كَمَا خَطَّ الْكِتَابَ بِكَفِّ يَوْمًا يَهُودِيَّ just as the book was written by the hand, one day, of a Jew. See Gram. Arab. M. de Sacy, vol. ii. p. 125—6.

See also Exod. i. 14, Ps. xc. 4, Cant. iii. 8, Jer. v. 6, &c. Of this kind are the passages לְדָוִד מִזְמוֹר לְאַסָּף—a psalm of David,—of Asaph; אֲשֶׁר לְשֹׁלֹמֹה which (is) Solomon's, i. e. belonging to Solomon, Cant. i. 1, &c., where the proprietor, author, possessor, or the like, is designated. †

12. This rule, however, with its exemplifications, coincides with the corresponding one given under the article of mediate apposition (Art. 219. 4.), i. e. the preceding word generally suffers no abbreviation either in the quantity of its vowels, or in the number of its consonants. The words so connected may, by taking the particle as a noun, all be considered as in immediate apposition. In the following cases, the first so connected is put in the definite state of construction, e. g. מֵשִׁבְיָי בְּבֹקֶר . . . מְאַחֲרֵי בְּנֶשֶׁף those arising early in the morning . . . lingering after the twilight, Isa. v. 11; יֹשְׁבֵי בְּאֶרֶץ צִלְמוֹת dwellers in the land of the shadow of death, Ib. ix. 1.

See also 2 Sam. i. 21, Ps. ii. 12, lxxxiv. 7, Isa. xiv. 19, xxviii. 9, Jer. xxiii. 23, Ezek. xiii. 2, xxi. 17, &c. So also with the conjunction וְ; as, חֵכְמָה וְדַעַת wisdom and knowledge, Isa. xxxiii. 6. With אֵין: as, אֵין מִיָּדָם פֶּרֶן אֵין מִיָּדָם there is no deliverer from their hands, Lam. v. 8.

13. It must appear from these passages, that the particle here found so influencing the preceding word, must either have been considered as a noun, or the following context must be supposed to exercise the influence, which the second of the nouns in construction does. See Art. 217. 5.

* If we consider these particles as nouns, which we may, all these cases may be resolved into those of immediate construction or apposition, as before.—New Test., John iii. 31, vi. 31, Rom. iii. 26, iv. 16, Gal. iii. 7, 8, &c.

† It has already been remarked (Art. 224. 2.), that the Arabian Grammarians consider every construction of this kind, as equivalent in signification to those in which the particle is not introduced. In most cases, however, the particles tend to define the relation more specifically.

*On the DISTINCTIVE State of Construction.**

225. It has been remarked (Art. 217. 7.), that, in this case, the preceding word to be qualified must always be an attributive. The effect here produced is, that of rendering distinct or specific, the person or thing designated by this attribute; coinciding in this respect with what has been termed definite construction: the qualified word being always an attributive involving the signification of a substantive (Ib.), e. g. גְּדוֹלַת הַיַּעֲצָה great (of) counsel, i. e. a great being, &c. (of) counsel, or counselling being, Jer. xxxii. 19; קְדוּשַׁת יִשְׂרָאֵל the holy (one of) Israel, Isa. i. 4; תְּמִימֵי-דָרֶךְ those perfect (of) way, i. e. men of perfect way, Ps. cxix. 1; נְשֵׁב־לְרוּחַ low (of) spirit, i. e. an humble man, Prov. xxix. 23; מְשֻׁחַת יְהוָה the anointed of the Lord, 2 Sam. i. 14.

* This kind of construction is termed by the Arabian Grammarians الاضافة اللفظية i. e. verbal construction, in order to distinguish between it and that which we have termed “the definite,” which they style الاضافة

المعنوية the logical or significant, construction. It is curious enough to observe, that they exemplify this sort of construction in three different ways; which may serve to shew, that in fact they all amount to the same thing in meaning: e. g. حَسَنٌ وَجْهٌ handsome (of) face, in immediate apposition

حَسَنٌ وَجْهٌ handsome (of) face, in the state of definite construction; and

حَسَنٌ وَجْهًا id. when the latter or defining word is put absolutely, and construed as a noun of specification, تَمْيِيزٌ. See M. de Sacy’s Arab. Gram.,

vol. ii. p. 159, &c. So Rev. xii. 1. γυνή περιβεβλημένη τὸν ἥλιον.

Arab. امرأة ملبوسة الشمس.

See also Gen. xxxv. 29, Exod. xxxv. 22, Ps. xxiv. 4, Isa. i. 21, &c.

2. Under this general head may be placed certain idiomatical expressions which will frequently meet the Learner in his progress. These are, phrases having אִישׁ man, each, בֵּן son, בַּעַל Lord, possessor, אֲנָשֵׁי, אֲנָשֵׁי, אֲנָשֵׁי men, &c. for the first member, followed by certain others in the definite state of construction: e. g. אִישׁ מוֹת thou art a man of death, i. e. deserving death, 1 Kings ii. 26; בְּנוֹ שִׁבְעַת שָׁנִים יְהוֹאָשׁ בְּמָלְכוֹ the son of seven years (was) Joash when his reign (began), i. e. he was seven years old, 2 Kings xii. 1; בְּנוֹ מוֹת הוּא a son of death (is) he, i. e. he shall die, 1 Sam. xx. 31; אִישׁ שְׂפָתַיִם a man of lips, i. e. loquacious, Job xi. 2; אִישׁ דְּבָרִים a man of words, i. e. a speaker, Exod. iv. 10; אִישׁ אֱמֶת a man of truth, i. e. a true man, Neh. vii. 2; אֲנָשֵׁי הַשֵּׁם the men of name, i. e. famous, Gen. vi. 4; אֲנָשֵׁי חַיִל men of might, i. e. mighty men, Gen. xlvii. 6; מְתֵי מִסְפָּר men of number, i. e. few, Gen. xxxiv. 30; אִישׁ בַּעַל שַׁעַר a man possessed of hair, i. e. hairy, 2 Kings i. 8; כָּל-בַּעַל כַּנָּף every (one) possessed of wing, i. e. winged bird, Prov. i. 17.

So אֲנָשֵׁי סוֹדִם men of Sodom, Gen. xix. 4, for Sodomites. See Gen. xxiii. 3, xxiv. 13, Numb. xxi. 28, Josh. xxiv. 11, Judg. ix. 2, x. 1, Jer. ii. 16, Ezek. xvi. 26, Ps. cxlix. 2, Cant. 1. 5, &c. To this class may be referred בְּנֵי הָאֱלֹהִים sons of God, pious persons, and בָּנוֹת הָאָדָם daughters of men, low, impious women, Gen. vi. 2, &c.

On the Construction of the Numerals.

226. The numerals in Hebrew being all substantive nouns, are put either in apposition, or in the definite state of construction, with the word signifying the thing numbered: e. g. In apposition: אֶלֶף וּמֵאָה הַכֶּסֶף one thousand and one hundred (pieces of) silver, אֵילִם שְׁנַיִם rams two, עָרִים שְׁתַּיִם cities two, בָּנִים שְׁלֹשָׁה, or שְׁלֹשָׁה בָּנִים sons three, or שְׁלֹשִׁים בָּנִים thirty sons. In construction: שְׁלֹשַׁת אָנָשִׁים three, or, a triad, of men; שְׁנֵי בָנִים two sons; שְׁתֵּי בָנוֹת two daughters.

2. The dual and decimal numerals, however, signifying numbers above ten, such as עֶשְׂרִים twenty; מֵאָתַיִם two hundred, &c. prefer the state of apposition.

On the Concordance of the Numerals with the Thing, &c. numbered.

3. The numerals from three to ten inclusively, are mostly in the gender different from that of the thing numbered, for the sake perhaps of variety: in this case the word representing the thing, &c. numbered is put in the plural number, e. g. שִׁבְעָה כְּבָשִׁים, or שִׁבְעַת כְּבָשִׁים seven male lambs; שִׁבְעַת כְּבָשׂוֹת seven female lambs. The numeral is here taken as a collective noun, and stands either in apposition or in the state of definite construction with the thing numbered.

4. In like manner when the numeral signifies any number exceeding ten, it may likewise disagree in gender with the thing, &c. to be numbered; while the thing, &c. numbered, will be put in the singular number: e. g. שִׁבְעַת עָשָׂרָה וְשִׁבְעִים אִישׁ seventy and seven men; שִׁבְעַת עָשָׂרָה שָׁנָה seventeen years; חֲמִשׁ שָׁנִים וּמֵאָתַת שָׁנָה five years and a hundred year, Gen. v. 6.

5. There is nothing peculiar in the construction of such numerals as מֵאָה an hundred and אֶלֶף a thousand, other numerals being made to agree with them or not, according to the preceding rules, while they will be put either in apposition or construction, in the singular or plural number, according to those rules: e. g. מֵאָתַת אֶלֶף וְשִׁשְׁתֵּי אֶלְפִים וְאַרְבַּע־מֵאוֹת an hundred thousand, and eighty thousand, and six thousands, and four hundreds, Num. ii. 9. See Gen. v. where a large number of examples occurs.

Other modes of Construction.

227. In many cases, too, when the numeral exceeds the number one, the thing, &c. numbered is put in the plural, whether the numeral precede or follow it; the gender is regulated as before: e. g. אֵילִם שְׁנָיִם-עָשָׂר rams twelve, Num. vii. 87; שְׁנָיִם עָשָׂר . . . כְּבָשִׂים lambs male . . . twelve, Ib.; עָשָׂר שְׁנָיִם עָשָׂר כְּרִים twelve bullocks, Ib.; עָשָׂר עָשָׂר וְאַרְבָּעָה כְּרִים twenty and four bullocks, Ib. v. 88.

See also Gen. xvii. 20, xxv. 16, xxvi. 12, xxxii. 15, 23, Josh. iv. 2, xxi. 19, 2 Sam. xix. 18, 1 Kings iv. 13, Jer. xxxviii. 10, Ezra viii. 35, &c. And, vice versá, חֲמִישׁ שָׁנָה five year, 2 Kings xxii. 1. &c.

2. The intermediate numbers between ten and twenty, twenty and thirty, &c. are regulated by the principles already investigated; that is, either by apposition or definite construction, immediate or mediate; e. g. עָשָׂר וְשִׁבְעָה seventeen, in immediate apposition; שִׁבְעָה וְשִׁבְעִים seven and seventy, mediate apposition: שְׁנַיִם עָשָׂר twelve; שְׁנֵים עָשָׂר eighteen, definite construction.

3. In many cases when the numeral is in apposition, it is to be taken as an ordinal: e. g. אַרְבָּעִים שָׁנָה the fortieth year, Deut. i. 3; i. e. taking it in the order of computation, the year, forty, or forty (by) year. So Gen. i. 5. יוֹם אֶחָד day, one, i. e. the first. See also Exod. xii. 6, Num. xiii. 2, Deut. xv. 9, 1 Kings xvi. 10, 2 Kings viii. 16, xii. 2, Ezek. xxix. 17, Dan. i. 1, 21, vii. 1, ix. 1, xi. 1, &c.

4. When it is necessary to qualify the thing, &c. numbered by some attributive, this attributive will agree with it either in a formal or logical point of view, at the pleasure of the writer: e. g. in the first case, שְׁמָנִים וְחֲמִשָּׁה אִישׁ eighty and five men, (each, or the whole) bearing (sing.) an ephod, 1 Sam. xxii. 18.—In the second, חֲמִשִּׁים אִישׁ רָצִים fifty men running (pl.), 1 Kings i. 5.

5. The thing numbered, measured, &c. may also be considered as a specifying term (Art. 219. note), and construed as absolute with reference to the preceding noun; as, בְּנִים שְׁלֹשִׁים thirty, sons; אֶלֶף כֶּסֶף a thousand (of) silver, &c. We nevertheless have occasionally the state of construction : as, שְׁתֵּי-לֶחֶם two (pieces, &c. of) bread, 1 Sam. x. 4, &c. : מֵאֵת שָׁנָה (Art. 226. 4.).

6. As it is easy to supply certain names of weight and measure, on account of their frequent occurrence, they are often omitted by the ellipsis : e. g. וַיִּשְׁקְלוּ אֶת-שִׁבְרֵי וַיִּשְׁקְלוּ אֶת-שִׁבְרֵי כֶסֶף so they weigh my price thirty (shekels of) silver, Zech. xi. 12 ; וַיִּמְדוּ שֵׁשׁ-שְׁעָרִים so he measures six (measures of) barley, Ruth iii. 15. 17 ; בְּאֶחָד לַחֹדֶשׁ in the first (day) of the month, Deut. i. 3 ; וַיַּעֲשׂוּ אֶת- הַפֶּסַח בְּרֵאשִׁוֹן and they keep the passover in the first (month), Num. ix. 5 ; בְּרֵאשִׁוֹן בְּאֶחָד לַחֹדֶשׁ in the first (month) in the first (day) of the month, Ezek. xxix. 17.

See also Gen. xx. 16, xlv. 22, Lev. xxiii. 17, 1 Sam. x. 4, Ezek. xlv. 21. And, where some of these ellipses are supplied, Gen. xxiii. 15, Lev. xxvii. 3, 6, Ruth ii. 17, &c. See Bos on the Greek ellipses, p. 4, Ed. 1813.

The ordinals are construed like other attributives.

LECTURE XVI.

ON THE COMPLEMENTS OF WORDS GENERALLY, AND OF VERBS
IN PARTICULAR.

228. It will perhaps readily be granted, that the character of the words necessary to complete any sentence must very much depend on the signification of the preceding ones ; or, which is the same thing, on the signification intended to be conveyed in them by the Writer. I may say, for example, I am now riding, equitans ego ; or, am a riding. But it may also be necessary to state whether this be on a horse, in a carriage, &c. as also to, or from, what place I am thus proceeding; or, for what purpose, &c. The same will hold good of all attributives.* A man may be said to be swift generally, or swift on foot, swift in the chase,—in the pursuit of an enemy,—to revenge,—to do good or evil, or a thousand other things, which it may be necessary for a Writer or Speaker to state.

2. All verbs are necessarily attributive in signification; and, from what we have seen, as to their etymology, there is strong reason to suspect that they are composed of nothing more than nouns put in a state of conjugation or combination with one or other of the pronouns. If, then, attributive nouns will necessarily stand in need of such complementary words in order to complete or modify the sentences in which they are found, the same must necessarily be true of the same words, when found in the form of verbs. Usually, however, this has been stated by saying, that nouns derived from verbs are subject to the same mode of construction with the verbs from which they descend. I prefer the contrary method of stating this question; because I can see why nouns, as such, require this kind of construction; of verbs we know nothing, on the other supposition.

3. We have seen that nouns substantive or attributive may be qualified by the addition of other words, either in a state of apposition, of definite construction, immediate or mediate, or absolutely, just as the signification of such word shall require, or as the intention of the Writer may be. The same is the case with verbs whether active, passive, transitive, intransitive, or

* So in Is. xiii. 19, and Amos iv. 11, we have מְהַפְּכֵת construed as a verb; and in Infinitives and Participial nouns this is done regularly.

neuter : which are distinctions arising purely out of the signification of the primitive word or noun.*

4. In treating of the complements or qualifying words of substantives and attributives, we adopted the terms Immediate and Mediate as best suited to our purpose on that occasion. We shall use the same now, because they are sufficiently easy and intelligible, and because it will be interesting to find the same principles prevailing throughout every part of this Language.

5. The influence then of any noun or verb (arising out of its signification, or the intention of the Writer,) may extend to one or more subsequent words with some variation of the sense in each ; e. g. I may say as before, " I am riding a horse." Here I would term the influence of the verb riding, Simple, because it affects one object only, which is here " a horse." But, if I say, " I rode a horse towards the city at full speed," then I should term the influence of the verb Various, because the subsequent terms are variously affected by it. I prefer this method of considering the influence of verbs, &c. because the Latin cases of nominative, genitive, accusative, &c. as taken by Schrœderus and others, are ill calculated to convey just notions on this subject ; and, because these distinctions are perfectly foreign to this language. The truth is, the words added here, as in the rules already given, are nothing more than terms added for the purpose of defining, &c. the signification of such verb, and may be resolved by recurring into one or other of those rules.

* Let it be remembered, however, some verbs which are at one time transitive, will at another be intransitive, in these languages ; so, ضرب برجله he struck with his foot, or kicked. See Ludolf. Gram. Eth., p. 32. ed. 1702. Freytag's Hamasa, p. 10—

229. Having determined then, whether the signification of any verb or verbal noun, is to be taken actively or passively, (Art. 146. 8. note.) the influence of its action or passion, considered with reference to the subsequent terms in immediate or mediate connection with it, will always be either Simple or Various, just as the signification of such verb shall require, or, as the intention of the Writer or Speaker may be.—Examples of active verbs and verbal nouns in immediate connection with the following term, and where the influence is, consequently, simple; אָדָם נַעֲשֶׂה אָדָם let us make, MAN, Gen. i. 26; זָרַע זָרַע seeding, or producing, SEED, Ib. 29.

2. In mediate connection, and where the influence is also simple: בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים אֶת הַשָּׁמַיִם God created THE HEAVENS, Gen. i. 1; וַיֵּרָא . . . אֶת־הָאֹר . . . and he saw . . . THE LIGHT, Ib. 4; וַיִּבְרָל . . . בֵּין הָאֹר וּבֵין הַחֹשֶׁךְ and he divided . . . BETWEEN the light and BETWEEN the darkness, Ib.; וַיִּקְרָא לְאֹר . . . וְלַחֹשֶׁךְ קָרָא and he called the LIGHT . . . and THE DARKNESS he called . . . Ib. 5; מִבְּרִיל בֵּין מַיִם (a thing) dividing BETWEEN the waters, Ib. 6.

3. Both in immediate and mediate connection, and where the influence is various: עֵשֶׂה פְּרִי לְמִינוֹ (a tree) producing FRUIT, ACCORDING TO ITS KIND, Gen. i. 11; מִזְרִיעַ זָרַע לְמִינֵהוּ (herb) producing SEED AFTER its KIND, Ib. 12.

Note. The proper office of the particles is, to point out the precise character of this influence.

The verb הָיָה construed with ל will signify either to have, or to become, according to the context: e. g. לְעֶשְׂרֵי הָיָה צֹאן the rich man had flocks, 2 Sam. xii. 2; וְהָיוּ לְדָם so they shall become blood, i. e. the waters, Exod. iv. 9.

4. Where the connection is mediate, and the influence various: וְהָיוּ לְמַאֲרֹת בְּרָקִיעַ הַשָּׁמַיִם לְהַאֲרִי אֶל־הָאָרֶץ

: וַיְהִי־כֵן and they shall be FOR lights IN the firmament of the heavens, FOR giving light UPON the earth, and it was so, Gen. i. 15; וַיִּתֵּן אֱלֹהִים בְּרָקִיעַ הַשָּׁמַיִם לְהָאֵר וּבֵין עַל־הָאָרֶץ : וְלִמְשַׁל בַּיּוֹם וּבַלַּיְלָה וּלְהַבְדִּיל בֵּין הָאֹר וּבֵין וַיִּרָא אֱלֹהִים בְּיָמֵי וַיִּרָא אֱלֹהִים בְּיָמֵי : and God placed THEM IN the firmament of the heavens FOR giving light UPON the earth, and FOR ruling OVER the day and OVER the night, and FOR dividing BETWEEN the light and BETWEEN the darkness. And God saw THAT (it was) good, Ib. 17, 18.

5. In causative and other doubly transitive verbs, the influence will necessarily be various: e. g. וְהִלַּכְתִּיהָ וְהִלַּכְתִּיהָ and I caused HER to walk THE DESERT, Hos. ii. 6; מוֹשֵׁב יְחִידִים בֵּיתָהּ who causes THE SOLITARY ones to possess A HOUSE, Ps. lxxviii. 7. In these instances the connection is immediate: in the following, it is both immediate and mediate: e. g. וַיִּשָׁב . . . אֶת־הַמֶּלֶךְ דָּבָר and he caused WORD to be returned TO THE KING, 1 Kings ii. 30; לְמַד רַעַת אֶת־הָעָם he taught KNOWLEDGE TO the people, Eccl. xii. 9; וַיִּשְׁמְעוּ דְבָרֵי אֶת־עַמִּי let them cause MY PEOPLE to hear MY WORDS, Jer. xxiii. 22.

6. In the following the connection is miscellaneous, and some of the verbs are passive: וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יִקְווּ הַמַּיִם מִתַּחַת הַשָּׁמַיִם אֶל־מְקוֹם אֶחָד וְתִרְאָה הַיַּבֶּשֶׁת : וַיְהִי־כֵן so God says, Let the waters be gathered FROM BENEATH the heavens TO one place, and let the dry land appear, and it becomes so, Gen. i. 9; *וְהִרְאָה אֶת־הַכֹּהֵן וְהִרְאָה אֶת־הַכֹּהֵן * then let it be shewn TO THE priest, Lev. xiii. 49; אֲשֶׁר אֲשֶׁר which thou wast shewn IN the mount, Exod. xxvi. 30; לֹא תַעֲבֹדֵם thou shalt not cause THEM to be worshipped, Exod. xx. 5, xxiii. 24; וַיִּתֵּן אֶת־הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת

* The particles mostly used with passive verbs, however, are ל and מ. See Gen. xiv. 19, Is. i. 26, lxii. 4, Ezek. xiv. 3, Neh. vi. 1, 1 Chron. v. 20, &c.

לְעַבְדֶיךָ let it be given (i. e.) this land to thy servants,
Num. xxxii. 5.

Observations.

7. A little consideration will enable any one to see, that the construction must in all cases very much depend on the intention of the Writer. It is true, certain constructions only are allowed, because they have been generally adopted, and these are to be known only from long and constant practice in the language, or, from the use of the Concordance: but, in general, the principle is in the Hebrew, as it is in the English: viz. that the significations of words will always be influenced by those with which they are connected. A few remarks on the examples given will make all plain. In the first we have נַעֲשֶׂה אָדָם let us make man. Here, the word man may be said to be in immediate connection with the preceding word, and to qualify or restrict its signification, just as שָׁנָה year does the word אַרְבָּעִים forty, in the phrase אַרְבָּעִים שָׁנָה forty year (Art. 227. 3.); or, as the English word year does the word forty, in the same example, absolutely, as it regards the grammatical construction, and, therefore, just as the <sup>ט מ י ז</sup>תְּמִיז, i. e. the specific construction does in the Arabic (Art. 219, note). This would be exemplified in that language, by what is termed a juxta-position,

the last or qualifying word is nothing more than a <sup>ט מ י ז</sup>תְּמִיז, i. e. specification, with reference to the signification of the verb. The next

8. The next case (Art. 229. 2.) affords an instance of mediate connection, that is, where we have the particle <sup>ו</sup>אֵת falling between the verb and its complementary or restricting term, for the purpose of shewing, that the following, not the preceding, word is to be construed as complementary to the signification of the verb. Kimkhi has remarked long ago (see Art. 171. 11. note), that such is the office of this particle. His illustration is the sentence, Judah killed Simeon יהודה שָׁמַעוֹן הָרַג; where he says, that the particle being omitted, it could not be known which is the subjective, or which the objective, case to the verb. This would indeed be the case in this and all similar passages; and, I believe, this is one of the offices of this particle, and perhaps of all the others so situated. The other particles have, moreover, the force of defining the relation, which the action of the verb has, with reference to the word or words which designate its object, either directly or indirectly: e. g. הָלַךְ construed with אֵל will signify, he walked towards; with מִן or מֵן from; with לְפָנַי before; with אַחֲרַי or אַחֲרָי after, and so on. Situated, then, as this and other particles are, in immediate connection with verbs, they ought to be considered as pointing out the objective, or some such case of the noun affected by them: and hence it is, that the particle אֵת has been said to mark the objective case in active, and the nominative (which is really the objective case) in passive, verbs.*

9. This particle, however, is often found without any such preceding verb; and, in these cases, it seems intended strongly to impress upon the mind the force of the word immediately following it, as being of considerable importance. Of this character is the following passage, to which many more might be added: אֵת-עַמּוּד הָעָנָן לֹא-קָרָא AS TO the pillar of the cloud, it passed not away, Neh. ix. 19. The verb following is manifestly not passive; אֵת, therefore, does not point out an objective case; on the contrary, it is found in apposition with the nominative of a verb in the active voice, and apparently for the purpose of impressing that word on the reader's mind, as of considerable importance. In most cases, as to, with reference to, or the like, will express its real force: e. g. בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים אֵת הַשָּׁמַיִם God created (I speak) WITH REFERENCE to the heavens, &c. So יִתְהַלֵּךְ אֵת-יְהוָה he walked about, i. e. daily exercised himself (I say) WITH REFERENCE to God, Gen. v. 22; וַיֵּצֵא אֶת-הָעִיר and he went out (i. e.) WITH RESPECT to the city,* Exod. ix. 33. That is, generally, any person or thing strongly recommended to the attention of the reader, may, whether it be in the situation of a nominative or objective case, be pointed out by introducing the particle את. See Hosea ii. 23. 24.

* The Bengáli particle Kē is used for a similar purpose, as is also the Persian ک. See Professor Haughton's Bengáli Gram. Art. 90, 91, 92. Sir W. Jones's Pers. Gram., Edit. 9. p. 111.

10. In the examples (n. 3.) we have both the immediate and mediate connection of a verb or verbal noun with its complementary words. And here, it will be seen, that had not the particle ל been prefixed to the last, some ambiguity might have arisen, as to the precise sense in which it ought to be taken: or, in other words, as to the precise relation of the latter, to the two former, words. The same has been remarked of words in the state of mediate apposition and construction. The principle in each case is one and the same.

* Schræderus has endeavoured to explain this sort of construction, by having recourse to a metonymy, by which he says, intransitive verbs take the signification and construction of transitive ones (Synt. R. 69.). For my part, I can see no necessity for this; nor, for introducing the doctrine about nominative, accusative, or other cases in conformity with the usage of the Latin and Greek grammars, which in fact drove Schræderus to this expedient. In Hebrew we have no cases. Why then should we talk about something which has no existence, and then coin rule after rule in order to explain it? But, if we can conceive these particles to possess the same defining character which they do when coming between nouns in construction or apposition (see Art. 219), we shall have no difficulty in perceiving, why they are sometimes omitted, or else used the one for the other: e. g. וַיָּבֹאוּ אֶרֶץ כְּנָעַן so they enter the land of Canaan, Gen. xlv. 25, for אֶל אֶרֶץ כְּנָעַן into the land of Canaan; שָׁבָה יְעֲלֵי הָעִיר return (to) the city, for אֶל הָעִיר to the city, 2 Sam. xv. 27; יַעֲלֵי יְרֵדוּ תְּהוֹמוֹת שָׁמַיִם they ascend the heavens, they descend the deeps, Ps. cvii. 26. In all which cases, the latter word in the construction may be considered as merely specific, as in the case of nouns of number, weight, measure, &c. In other instances the particles will vary; as, יָרָא אֶת־הַמֶּלֶךְ 1 Kings i. 51; יָרָא מִפְּנֵי שְׁלֹמֹה he feared the king—he feared from before Solomon, Ib. 50. And Ps. lv. 20, יָרָאוּ אֱלֹהִים they fear God, without a particle. So, with יָצָא אֶל־ יָצָא הָעִיר he went out (into) the city, 2 Kings xx. 4; יָצָא אֶל־ יָצָא הָעִיר he went out to the altar, Lev. xvi. 18; יָצָא מִתְּשֻׁבֹן Num. xxi. 28; יָצָא מִלְּפָנֵי יְהוָה Num. xvi. 35; יָצָא מִלְּפָנֵי יְהוָה Ib. xvii. 11. With מִפִּי Est. vii. 8, compare viii. 15; יָצָא אֶת־הָעִיר Gen. xlv. 4, &c. As to אֶת in Neh. ix. 19. we have apparently the ellipsis of some such verb as I speak, mean, &c., and, in this view, the case will identify itself with the Arabic construction termed شريطة التفسير i. e. what comprehends a condition of explanation, as زيداً ضربته (as to) Zaid, I struck him, زيداً مررت به (as to) Zaid, I passed by him. See Jami's Com. on Ibn Ulhájib, p. 127, &c.

11. With respect to the causative verbs, If we suppose them to be actually composed of two words; which, according to our system, is always the case with Hiphlíl and Hophhál, we shall readily perceive why two complementary, or restricting, words would be necessary to complete the idea contained in each of them. This is what grammarians usually term a double accusative, just as they do verbs, doubly transitive. It is curious enough to remark, that when such verbs become passive, the object of one of them will stand as its nominative, that of the other as the accusative: for this reason, viz. that one of the verbs only in the compound takes the passive character, the other remains active: e. g. Lev. xiii. 49, as above, Fac eam videri à sacerdote. This is still more evident in the Arabic, where we have terminations marking these cases: e. g. active, <sup>أَطْعَمْتُ</sup> <sup>ابْنَكَ</sup> <sup>لِكَمَا</sup> أطعمت ابنك لكما I caused thy son to eat flesh; passive, <sup>أُطْعِمُ</sup> <sup>ابْنَكَ</sup> <sup>لِكَمَا</sup> أطعم ابنك لكما thy son was caused to eat bread. See M. de Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. ii. p. 101. In the other species, viz. Pihél, and Puhál, the accessory idea may be considered as equivalent to an additional word.

12. Of the other examples nothing need be said: the particles introduced are only such as the various relations of the words to each other seem to require, in order to present to the mind of the reader the various circumstances which the writer wished to detail; but without these, all must have been error and confusion.

13. What has been here said of the verbs is true of all the verbal nouns, whether of the Infinitive or Participial kind; i. e. the complementary or defining word may be put either in the state of apposition mediate or immediate, or in that of definite construction. The former cases have been sufficiently exemplified; the following are a few instances of the latter. Of infinitives, <sup>בְּיָמֵי</sup> <sup>שֹׁפְטֵי</sup> <sup>הַשְּׁפָטִים</sup> בְּיָמֵי שֹׁפְטֵי הַשְּׁפָטִים in the days of the judges' judging, Ruth i. 1; <sup>בְּרִבְוֵי</sup> <sup>בִּדְבָרֵי</sup> <sup>בּוֹ</sup> בְּרִבְוֵי בִּדְבָרֵי בּוֹ from the abundance of my speaking against him, Jer. xxxi. 20; <sup>שֹׁמֵר</sup> <sup>מִצְוֹתָיו</sup> שֹׁמֵר מִצְוֹתָיו the keeping of his statutes, Deut. viii. 11; <sup>עֹשֶׂת</sup> <sup>מִשְׁפָּט</sup> <sup>וְאַהֲבַת חֶסֶד</sup> עֹשֶׂת מִשְׁפָּט וְאַהֲבַת חֶסֶד the doing of judgment, and the loving of piety, Mic. vi. 8. Of Participles, <sup>מְבַקְשֵׁי</sup> <sup>נַפְשִׁי</sup> מְבַקְשֵׁי נַפְשִׁי seekers of my soul, נְשֵׂאֵי וְדֹרְשֵׁי רַעְתִּי and followers out of my evil, Ps. xxxviii. 13; מְשִׁיבֵי קֶשֶׁת וְדֹרְכֵי קֶשֶׁת carriers of the shield, and treaders of the bow, 2 Chron. xiv. 7; מְשִׁיבַת נַפְשׁ a restorer of the soul, מְדַבְּרֵי פֶתִי an instructor of the simple, מְשִׂמְחֵי לֵב delighters of the heart, &c., Ps. xix. 8, 9. See also Gen. ix. 10, xxiii. 10, xxxi. 16, 2 Sam. v. 8, Is. xxxviii. 18, liii. 4, Lam. i. 4, Joel i. 8, Ps. xxxviii. 6, Cant. ii. 5, &c. With pronouns, Ps. xxxvii. 2, Prov. ii. 9, ix. 18, &c.

On apparently Elliptical Constructions.

230. Some active,* neuter, and all passive verbs, being such as to include within themselves the idea required for their object, complement, or other restriction, will stand in need of no other for that purpose, when their influence is simple; but, when it is various, the connection will be either immediate or mediate, as before. In the one case, the connection may be termed Implicit, in the others, Explicit. N. B. This has been usually styled by the Grammarians, “Constructio prægnans.” Examples: לֹא רָבִיתָ רְבִיתָ thou hast not made abundance or gain, Psalm xlv. 13.

This is an instance in which the influence may be said to be simple and implicit; but, when we add בְּמַחְרֵיהֶם by their price, it is various, and necessarily explicit; and we have the particle ב introduced for the purpose of pointing this out. So בַּל־נִשְׂרַשׁ פָּאֲרָץ it hath not struck root into the earth, Is. xl. 24. See Jer. x. 18, Josh. xxiv. 20, &c. So הִטְהַרְרִי cleanse yourselves, or rather, become ye clean, Gen. xxxv. 2. See also Ib. xxv. 22.

2. Of this character are the following examples, which have usually been considered as impersonal: תָּרַח לּוֹ HE became hot to himself (or, HEAT became hot to him), Ps. xviii. 8; אַל־יִחַר בְּעֵינַי אֲדָנָי let IT not become hot (i. e. let not heat exist) in the eyes of my Lord, Gen. xxxi. 35; אַל יִרַע בְּעֵינָיְךָ let not EVIL be in thy eyes, Ib. xxi. 12; וַתִּצֹר לְדָוִד and (pressure) pressed upon David, 1 Sam. xxx. 6; לֹא תִמְטִיר עָלֶיהָ* (rain) rains not upon it, Amos iv. 7.

* These are for the most part verbs of the Pihël and Hiphhël species, which have been formed from substantive nouns, Art. 154. 8. 157. 5, &c. See Glass. Philol., Ed. Dathe, pp. 185—254, &c. Storr, p. 15, &c. For similar instances in the Arabic, see Mr. de Sacy’s Gram., vol. ii. Art. 653—657. See also Bos. Ellipses Græcæ, Ed. 1813, p. 2. Freytag’s Hamasa, p. 6, line 22. Ludolf. Gram. Eth., p. 32, 3.

3. So with passive verbs and participles; as, וַאֲמָרוּ so they said, IT has become desperate, Jer. xviii. 12. i. e. אָמַר נֹאֲשׁ, or רָבַר נֹאֲשׁ THE MATTER has become desperate; נִשְׁעָרָה מְאֹד IT became very tempestuous, Ps. l. 3, i. e. the tempest שְׁעָרָה became so; אֲשֶׁר עָבַד which IT has been imposed as slavery upon thee, Isa. xiv. 3, i. e. הָעֲבוּדָה the slavery mentioned just before; אֲשֶׁר יָלַד לּוֹ which had been caused to be born to him, Gen. xxxv. 26, i. e. the sons mentioned just before; נְשִׂי־דָבָר בָּהּ in which IT shall be spoken respecting her, Cant. viii. 8, i. e. רָבַר a word.

See also Gen. iv. 26, x. 25, xlvi. 22, Is. xxiii. 1, Lam. v. 5, Job xxx. 15. And with participles, Is. xxvi. 3, Ps. lxxxvii. 3.

4. Hence it is, that in many instances the word necessary to complete or qualify the sense of the verb, is frequently omitted by the ellipsis: e. g. לֹא יָלְדָהּ לּוֹ she had not borne to him, i. e. a son, Gen. xvi. 1; וַיִּשְׁלַח so he sent, i. e. a messenger, Ib. xli. 14; וַיִּצְבֵּר he accumulated, i. e. wealth, Ps. xxxix. 7.

See also Ps. lxxvi. 12, 1 Sam. viii. 15, &c. The same often takes place in words of common occurrence: as, וַיִּכְרֹת he cut, or made,

* This would universally be so supplied in the Persian بَران نه بارانیده

i. e. a covenant, פְּרִית 1 Sam. xx. 16; לא יִפְרְסוּ they broke not,
i. e. לֶחֶם bread, Jer. xvi. 7; תִּפְּלוּ they cast, i. e. גּוּרֵל the lot, 1 Sam. xiv. 42.

5. Under this head may be arranged the apparently frequent ellipses of the antecedent to the relative pronoun אֲשֶׁר, which may be thus accounted for, viz. אֲשֶׁר ought to be considered not as a mere adjective signifying qui, quæ, quod, &c. but, is qui, ea quæ, id quod,* &c. including a substantive like other attributives. Hence, in such cases there is no real ellipsis: e. g. יִשָּׂאךָ עַל-אֲשֶׁר לֹא-אֲדַע he will take thee up to (a place) which I know not, 1 Kings xviii. 12; וְשָׁתִית מֵאֲשֶׁר יִשְׁאֲבוּן הַנְּעָרִים and thou shalt drink out of THAT WHICH the young men draw, Ruth ii. 9; בְּאֲשֶׁר תָּמוּתִי אָמוּת in (THE PLACE in) WHICH thou diest, I will die, Ruth i. 17.

6. This relative pronoun (אֲשֶׁר) ought to be considered, moreover, as definite in its signification like other pronouns, and need not therefore be expressed when the antecedent is indefinite; e. g. בְּיוֹם דִּבֶּר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה on a day (on which) Jehovah spoke to Moses, Exod. vi. 28; לֹא יַחֲשֵׁב יְהוָה לוֹ עוֹן אֲשֶׁר-יֵאָדָם blessed is ANY MAN, Jehovah imputes not to him iniquity, i. e. to whom, &c. Ps. xxxii. 2, comp. Ps. i. 1, &c.

7. There are, however, instances in which this rule seems to be contravened: e. g. אֲנִי הַגִּבֹּר רָאָה עָנִי I am THE man (who) has seen affliction, Lam. iii. 1; יִזְבְּחוּ לַשְּׂדִים לֹא אֱלֹהִים they sacrificed to the devils, (who are) not God, &c. Deut. xxxii. 17. But in these cases, the article does not refer so much to the definite character of the noun, as to its properties, i. e. I am that sort of man, &c. See Art. 221.

* See Noldius sub voce, p. 98, note d. This is also a remark of Noldius, "Præpositio semper pronominis relativi, ad quod se refert, objectum supponit, atque in quod ipsa influit; sive id exprimendum concipiatur per nomen, sive per pronomem antecedens מי vel מה," &c. See also his note under פְּאֲשֶׁר. Concord. Part. Ed. 1734.

8. In the following examples, some consequence seems to be intimated by the influence of words termed prægnantia,* which may, therefore, be supplied by the ellipsis: וַיַּגֵּד מֹשֶׁה לְאַהֲרֹן אֵת כָּל-דְּבָרֵי יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁלַחַו so Moses relates to Aaron all the words of Jehovah, which he had sent him, (i. e. to relate) Exod. iv. 28; see also the remainder of the verse; וּפְתָחוּ אֶל-יְהוָה and they shall fear towards Jehovah, i. e. fearing shall turn to Jehovah, Hos. iii. 5; וַיִּהְרָדוּ ... לִקְרַאתוֹ and they fear for meeting him, i. e. they fearing proceed to meet him, 1 Sam. xvi. 4; לְאָרֶץ הַלְלוּ מִשְׁכַּן שְׁמִי to the earth have they profaned the habitation of thy name, i. e. profaned and cast it down to the earth, Ps. lxxiv. 7.

9. Hence, when several members of a sentence are connected together, the verb accompanying any one of them, may be supplied to them all: e. g. הֲטִלְבִּי אֶל-עֲדוֹתֶיךָ וְאֶל-בְּצַע INCLINE my heart to thy statutes, and INCLINE not (my heart) to gain, Ps. cxix. 36; וְכָל-הָעַם רֹאִים אֶת-הַקּוֹלוֹת וְאֶת-הַלְפִידִם וְאֵת קוֹל הַשֹּׁפָר and the whole of the people were perceiving (SAW) the thunderings and (SAW) the lightnings, and (SAW) the sound of the trumpet, &c. Exod. xx. 18.

See also Deut. iv. 12, xxxii. 13, Job x. 12, Est. iv. 1. And in the New Testament, 1 Cor. iii. 2, 1 Tim. iv. 3, James i. 9, 10. Hence, also, the word hear, &c. has often the signification of understanding, obeying, or the like. Comp. Acts ix. 7, with xxii. 9: and, generally, verbs of sense are used the one for the other.

10. Hence also verbs, nouns, or particles, which are expressed or implied in one part of the context, may be supplied by the ellipsis in the other: e. g. of verbs: בְּאֶבְשָׁלוֹם שְׁמְרוּ-מִי בְנֵעַר OBSERVE YE who (whoever of you) the young man (OBSERVE YE) Absalom, 2 Sam. xviii. 12; אִישׁ אֶל-עִירוֹ וְאִישׁ אֶל-אֲרָצוֹ (let) each man (GO) to his city, and each man (GO) to his land, 1 Kings xxii. 36.

* By this term is meant, words not only used in their own proper significations, but in others which may naturally be supposed to flow from them.

So Ps. xxv. 15, xxxiii. 18, xxxiv. 16, Prov. vi. 26, Is. lxvi. 6, Hos. viii. 1, &c. And particularly לֵאמֹר יִתְבּוֹכְנוּ saying, e. g. הֲיֵזֶה הָאִישׁ (לֵאמֹר) הֲיֵזֶה הָאִישׁ they consider (saying), Is this the man? Is. xiv. 16, ib. 8, &c. which is perhaps owing to the direct and abrupt manner in which citations are generally made by the Hebrews.

11. This often happens also with the noun which should be the apparent nominative to a verb, and sometimes when it must be supplied from different parts of the context: e. g. לָמָּה יִתֵּן לְעֵמֶל אֹר why giveth he (GOD) light to the sorrowful, Job iii. 20; וַיִּשְׂאֵל וַיָּבֵא שָׁלוֹ he asked (i. e.) THE PEOPLE, and he (GOD) brought the quails, Ps. cv. 40; וַיִּקְרָא-לוֹ דָּוִד וַיֵּאבֵל לְלִבָּיו וַיִּשְׁתֵּת and David called him (URIAH), and he (URIAH) ate before him (i. e. DAVID), and drank, and he (DAVID) made him drunken, and he (URIAH) went out in the evening, 2 Sam. xi. 13.

12. The most frequent ellipsis, perhaps, is of the negatives, לֹא, אִין, אֵל, &c.: e. g. לֹא לִנְצַח יִשָּׁבֵחַ אֶבְיוֹן the poor (man) shall not be forgotten for ever, (NOR) shall the expectation of the humble (ones) for ever perish, Ps. ix. 19.

See Deut. xxxiii. 6, 1 Sam. ii. 3, Ps. xlv. 19, Prov. xxv. 27, xxx. 3, Is. xxxviii. 18, xli. 28, &c. Of לֵפֶן lest, Exod. xix. 22, Is. vi. 10; לָמָּה why? Ps. ii. 1, 2, x. 1; כִּמָּה how often? Job xxi. 17, 18, 19, 20; אֵיךְ how? Ps. lxxiii. 19; אֵיכָּה Id. Lam. i. 1, 2, 3, 4, ii. 1. 2, iv. 1. 4. 8. 10; מַה what? Joel i. 18; עַד-מָה how long? Ps. iv. 3, lxxxix. 47; עַד-מָתַי how long? Ps. xciv. 4, 5, 6, &c. For an ample consideration of this subject, see Glassius's Philologia Sacra, Edit. Dathe, vol. i. p. 608, &c.

13. It ought to be remembered, that the orientals of this family generally enounce their propositions vaguely, and then add the restricting or defining terms (Art. 216. 4.). When, therefore, the leading term happens to be a verb, its qualifying term or nominative will immediately follow; as, בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים He created, i. e. God. If, however, it be intended to leave the passage indefinite, as in English, SOME ONE said, or in French ON dit; no such nominative will be added: and the greatest care ought to be taken in supplying it: e. g. Is. ix. 5, וַיִּקְרָא שְׁמוֹ and he, (i. e. some one, any one, or every one) calls his name, Ps. cx. 7; מִנְחַל בְּהַרְרֵי יִשְׁתָּהּ from the torrent (i. e.) the abundance of spiritual waters which shall then abound) in the way, shall one (any one, every one) drink: 2 Sam. xxiv. 1, וַיִּסֶּת אֶת-דָּוִד so (one, some one) tempts David; which is supplied, 1 Chron. xxi. 1, by וְשָׂטָן an adversary. We must not, therefore, take the name of God found in the preceding context, in order to supply this ellipsis, as some have imprudently done, nor charge the text with the inconsistencies which have arisen purely out of our own ignorance. This sort of construction frequently occurs. So also in the objective voice, קָרָא לְךָ it hath been called to thee, i. e. thou hast been named, Is. xlviii. 8, equivalent to the Arabic يقال له. See also v. 11, אֵיךְ יִחַל how would it be profaned?

LECTURE XVII.

ON THE MODES AND TENSES OF THE VERBS.

231. As the Hebrew Language recognizes no variation of termination in verbs indicative of mode, no place has been assigned to that distinction in the paradigms: nor will it be necessary to enter on that consideration, until we have considered the doctrine of the tenses: but, when this is done, we shall offer a few remarks on that subject.

On the Tenses.

2. We have in our theory of the verb proceeded upon the supposition, that the Preterite tense is formed on a Concrete noun as its basis;—the Present on an Abstract.

3. If then the basis of the Preterite be a Concrete noun, such word considered alone will naturally refer to some past time, for the commencement of the action, passion, state, &c. meant by the root; and which, when put into a state of conjugation, may be considered as intimating some indefinite past tense. If, for example, I say in Latin, Amatus ego, or Amans ego; it will necessarily be understood, that at some time antecedent to the present, I began to be, and consequently am now, either the subject or object of the action intimated by the verb amo; but whether I shall be so hereafter, will depend upon other considerations. We find accordingly in the Hebrew, that our Preterite tense universally refers to past time, unless some of the circumstances hereafter to be mentioned shall require the contrary.

4. Again, if the Present tense be formed on an Abstract noun, as no intimation whatever can be given by this combination of any person or thing being at any time past or future subject to the influence expressed by such word, the sense afforded will naturally apply to the present time, unless indeed some of the circumstances hereafter to be detailed should suggest the contrary.

5. But here an important question will arise, which is this: How are we to determine the period from which we are to reckon, when speaking of past, present, or future tenses? This, I believe, involves the main part of the question before us; which we shall now proceed to consider: and, if we can succeed, we shall perhaps solve the hitherto unsolved problem.

6. In the first place then, any writer commencing his narrative will necessarily speak of past, present, or future time, with reference to the period in which his statement is made; and to this period he may adhere, as long as it suits his purpose to do so. This use of the tenses may, therefore, be termed Absolute.

7. In the next place, a person may speak of past, present, or future events, with reference to some other period or event, already introduced into the context. This may be termed the Relative use of the tenses.

8. In the Hebrew paradigm, we have only two tenses, viz. a Past, and a Present tense. To the present tense, the Participles* and Infinitives are very nearly allied. That is, either of these when unrestricted by any other considerations, are generally to be understood as referring to the present time, either absolute or relative. Hence, too, a Preterite connected with another Preterite, will be equivalent to our pluperfect; a Present following a preterite, to our imperfect; and so on, affording every distinction of time necessary for the purpose of language. Of these, examples will now be given, beginning with those which have been termed absolute.

* Participial nouns may, indeed, have been used as preterites, for the reasons just given respecting concrete nouns: but, in practice, they include within themselves no particular tense, and are, very much like the present, to be construed either in the past, present, or future tense, as the context may require: and may in almost every case be substituted for the present. See Jámi on Ibn Uthajib, p. ۳۳۲—.

9. Generally, in the commencement of narrations, paragraphs, &c. the use of the tenses will be absolute, as in the English; e. g. בְּרָא אֱלֹהִים בְּרֵאשִׁית בְּרָא in the beginning God CREATED, Gen. i. 1; וְהָאָדָם יָדַע אֶת-חַוָּה וְהָאָדָם יָדַע אֶת-חַוָּה and (as to) the man, he KNEW Eve his wife, Ib. iv. 1, &c., where we have the preterite tense so used. A great number of instances also occurs, in which the present tense is so used, and in which the writer takes the liberty of transporting himself and his reader into a time present to the narration, occasionally introducing some terms designating such time: as, וַיְהִי בַעַת הַהִיא וַיְהִי בַעַת הַהִיא So IT COMES to pass AT THAT TIME, that HE DESCENDS, Gen. xxxviii. 1; וַיְהִי כִּהְיוֹם הַזֶּה וַיָּבֵא הַבַּיִתָּה וַיְהִי כִּהְיוֹם הַזֶּה וַיָּבֵא הַבַּיִתָּה So IT COMES TO PASS as ON THIS DAY, that HE ENTERS the house, Gen. xxxix. 11; כָּכָה יַעֲשֶׂה אִיּוֹב כָּל-הַיָּמִים כָּכָה יַעֲשֶׂה אִיּוֹב כָּל-הַיָּמִים Thus DOES Job at ALL TIMES, Job i. 5:—at other times totally omitting all such terms: as, וַיִּקְרָא אֶל-מֹשֶׁה וַיְדַבֵּר וַיִּקְרָא אֶל-מֹשֶׁה וַיְדַבֵּר So HE CALLS (at that time) to Moses, and SAYS, Lev. i. 1. So in the New Testament, John i. 29. 42. 46. &c. On the pleonastic use of the ׀ in these cases see Noldius Concord. partic., Ed. 1734, pp. 309, 310. Mikhlol, fol. נד verso.

10. When, however, it is necessary to enounce any thing in the absolute present tense,* either our present

* See also Is. v. 23, vi. 2, vii. 14. In this last instance I understand יִהְיֶה he gives, to refer to the declaration or prediction of the Prophet, which is here

termed أَوْت sign, or wonder. See Gen. iv. 15, Exod. iii. 12, iv. 8. 28, 1 Sam. ii. 34, 2 Kings xix. 29, where it also means a prediction, not a visible sign.— This has been termed an Aorist by modern writers on Arabic Grammar, but it is really a present tense, as will appear from the following considerations. In a Commentary on the كافية of Ibn ul Hájib, by Najm Oddeen of Irák, preserved among Mr. Burckhardt's books in the Public Library at Cambridge, it is said of this tense, وقال بعضهم هو حقيقة في

الحال مجاز في الاستقبال وهو اقوي لانه اذا خلي من القرائن لم يحتمل الا علي الحال ولا ينصرف الي الاستقبال الا لقريضة وهذا

i. e. "Some say that it is in truth a present tense, but allowed to be used as a future, which is the best opinion. For when it is accompanied by no other (words, &c.) it can refer to the present tense only : nor is it turned into a future, except when so accompanied. This is what we mean by true, and allowable." So in the following examples: مَا يَزْكِي الْإِنْسَانَ بِشَهَادَةِ أَهْلِهِ

مَا يَبْدُو a man IS NOT JUSTIFIED by the testimony of his own family; مَا يَبْدُو

الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا أَنْ يَنْزِلَ عَلَيْكُمْ مِنْ خَيْرٍ مِنْ رَبِّكُمْ those who have not believed DO NOT LIKE THAT any good thing SHOULD BE SENT down to you from your Lord. M. de Sacy, Arab. Gram., vol. i. p. 132.

Again, they consider the present tense as of two kinds ; one they term the real present ; أَلْحَالُ تَحْقِيقًا, by which they mean, the tense which we have termed absolute ; or, in other words, that in which a person commits to writing any event or number of events he may have to detail. This is what our Grammarians always understand by The Present tense. The other they term

أَلْحَالُ حِكَايَةً, i. e. the present, as to the narration ; by which they mean, the time contemporary with any event, and which may therefore be considered as present with it, although past, present, or future, with regard to the real or absolute present tense. The following passages taken from the Commentary on the كافية by Moolla Jámi will be sufficient to shew in what manner they speak on this subject (p. ٣٧٣-٣٧٤). When speaking of the use of sacrifices to me? SAITH Jehovah, Is. i. 11; לְכוּ-נָא וְנִדְבַחְהָ come now, LET US REASON together, SAITH JEHOVAH, Ib. v. 18; הוּי מִנְיַעֵי בַּיִת בְּבַיִת שָׂדֵה בְּשָׂדֵה וְקָרִיבוּ woe (to those) WHO JOIN house to house, (who) LAY field to field, Is. v. 8. In this last instance the participle holds a place in the parallelism corresponding with the present tense. כִּי יִהְיֶה אֶלְהֶיךָ מִבְּיַדְךָ אֶל-אֶרֶץ טוֹבָה אֶרֶץ for the Lord thy God (now) BRINGETH thee into a good land, a the particle حَتَّى he says, اذا كان اي المضارع مستقبلاً بالنظر الي ما قبلها وان كان بالنظر الي زمان التكلم ماضياً او حالاً او مستقبلاً i. e. when the مضارع (i. e. our present) is to be taken as a future, with reference to what may have gone before; or, with reference to the time in which the relation was first made, as a PAST, PRESENT, OR FUTURE. And again, فان اردت بالفعل الذي دخله حتى الحال يعني زمان الحال تحقيقاً اي بطريق التحقيق بان يكون هي زمان التكلم بعينه . . . . او حكاية اي بطريق الحكاية كما تقول كنت سرت امس حتى ادخل البلد فادخل في هذا الموضع حكاية الحال الماضية فكانت كنت في زمان الدخول هيأت هذه العبارة وتحكيها في زمان التكلم علي ما كنت هيأته i. e. if you intend by the verb preceded by حتى to express the PRESENT TENSE, i. e. the time of the ABSOLUTE PRESENT; that is to say, by way of verifying it as present with the time of the original narration itself, &c. . . . or, by way of (subsequent) حكاية NARRATION, (i. e. relatively) as if you should say, I was (so circumstanced that) I proceeded yesterday, in order that I (may then) enter the city. Here the word ادخل I ENTER (is used in) the PRESENT TENSE of a past circumstance, as though you had expressed yourself in this manner (i. e. as present) at the TIME of entering; relating the circumstance in the tense of (the first) enunciation in consequence of having so conceived the matter (in your own mind). Hence, it will be seen, that this present tense will occasionally be relative to the reader, when it was absolute with the original enouncer of any proposition. On this use of the Arabic participles, see Jámi's Comm., p. ٣٢٢—.

land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that SPRING out of the valleys and hills, Deut. viii. 7.

11. When, however, any future event is enounced prophetically, or any circumstances are mentioned manifestly relating to a future period, either the present tense,* or one of the participles may then also be used ; e. g. וְאֶעֱשֶׂה לְגוֹי גָדוֹל וְאֶבְרַכְךָ וְאֶגְדֹּלְךָ וְאֶנְדְּלָה שְׁמֶךָ and I MAKE thee a great nation, and I BLESS thee, and so MAKE thy name great, Gen. xii. 2 ; אֶרֶץ אֲשֶׁר לֹא בְמִסְכָּנֹת תֵּאכַל-בָּהּ לֶחֶם לֹא-תִחְסַר כֹּל בָּהּ (SHALT) EAT bread without scarceness, thou SHALT (DOST, MAYEST) not lack any thing in it, &c. Deut. viii. 9 ; וְאֲנִי הִנְנִי מְקִים אֶת-בְּרִיתִי אִתְּכֶם וְאֶת-זֶרְעֵכֶם אֲחֲרֵיכֶם and (as for) me, behold me ESTABLISHING (ABOUT TO ESTABLISH, or WILL ESTABLISH) my covenant with you, and with your seed after you, Gen. ix. 9.

The reason of this usage seems to be, that when any thing is predicted, it may now be said either to be doing or done in the mind of him who makes the prediction. This is also the case in the Arabic and Persian, and apparently for the same reason. See Mr. Lumsden's Persian Gram., vol. ii. p. 334—7. In the other case, i. e. when it takes a future signification from circumstances, the mind of the writer and reader are translated into the times referred to, and then the narration is necessarily carried on in the present tense.

12. Hence, in all cases in which any other person is introduced as speaking, or in which any event evidently of past occurrence is mentioned, the tenses will be reckoned from that period ; i. e. placing both the writer and reader in the times in which such declaration, prediction, citation, &c. took place. The same will also be the case, when the mind is carried forward in any prediction.* Examples; יהוה אלהי השמים אשר לקחני מבית אבי ומארץ מולדתי ואשר דבר-לי ואשר נשבע-לי לאמר לזרעך אתן את-הארץ הזאת הוא ישלח מלאכו לפניך the Lord God of heaven, who TOOK me from my father's house and from the land of my kindred, and who SPAKE unto me, and that SWARE unto me, saying, Unto thy seed GIVE I this land, he SENDETH his angel before thee, Gen. xxiv. 7.

Here we see the first three verbs דָּבַר, לָקַח, and נִשְׁבַּע, are all in the preterite tense. The first is necessarily so, by the operation of the rule, Art. 231. 9: The two following are so, because connected with the first by the relative pronoun אֲשֶׁר, which is more consistently termed a conjunction (حرف الصلة) by the Arabs. In the next place we have a citation prefaced by לֵאמֹר saying. Then we have the present tense, אֶתֵּן I give, i. e. I now give, which may be taken as a prophetic future (Ib. 10. note.). In the next place, Abraham, having finished the citation, recurs to the period at which he set out, and from this the present יִשְׁלַח he sends, he now sends, or, taken prophetically, he will send, is to be reckoned.†

† Of this kind are all those expressions in the Arabic, in which the leading verb is found in the preterite tense, and the following ones in the present, or (as

he sought something that he might (now) eat it, but he finds not; <sup>ك</sup>كانا <sup>ي</sup>ينطحان

<sup>ب</sup>بقرورنهما they two were (so situated that) they (now, i. e. in those circumstances)

butt with the horns of them both. The same principle generally holds good, when two preterites follow each other without an intervening conjunction; for then, the first will have respect to some time anterior to that from which the writer had set out, the second to one anterior to that of such verb: e. g. <sup>و</sup>كان <sup>خ</sup>خرج

Corollary. Hence citations will generally be made in the words of the first speaker: i. e. it is not said, that God sware and declared, THAT HE WOULD GIVE the land to Abraham's seed, &c. but, in the original terms of the oath, unto thy seed DO, or WILL, I GIVE it: and also, that preterites and futures more or less remote from the time in which any declaration is made, answering to our imperfects, perfects, pluperfects, simple, compound, or paulo-post, futures, may be formed

Mr. de Sacy remarks, that “le verbe <sup>كان</sup> employé comme auxiliaire influe sur les prétérits <sup>خرج</sup>, &c. et les convertit tous en preterits antérieur.” Arab. Gram., vol. i. p. 131. The reason of this is, that each of these verbs involves a preterite tense in its own right, and the reader is by the combination of both carried back into a time more remote than either alone could express. This the European Grammarians have termed the Pluperfect tense.

As the Persian language has for several centuries been cultivated on the principles of the Arabic grammar, it may not be amiss to cite Mr. Lumsden's remarks on this use of the present tense. “In the conversation of the Persians,” says he (Pers. Gram., vol. ii. p. 336.), “though seldom perhaps in written composition, the present is often found to supersede the past tense of the verb, in the statement of those propositions which, though past in point of fact (i. e. as to the absolute time in which the statement is made) are recalled by the memory as if they were present. Example: <sup>دي شب گذرم نزد دوستي افتاد در آنجا</sup> last night I went (rather

<sup>دهد</sup> the Prophet informs (or has informed) us.”—This must bring to every one's mind, the φησι, ait, and inquit, of the Greeks and Latins, which are used in the same way, and upon the same principle. Citations are made in a similar manner in the Persian; as, Zaid said, I am going to Calcutta, not obliquely,—said that he was going, &c., but in the words of the original enunciation. See Pers. Gram., ib., pp. 349—355.

at the pleasure of the writer. The following passage from Isaiah must suffice on this subject: כֹּה־אָמַר יְהוָה לְמַשִּׁיחוֹ לְכוּרֶשׁ אֲשֶׁר־הִחַזְקֹתִי בְיָמֵינוּ לְרַד־לְפָנָיו גּוֹיִם וּמַתְּנֵי מַלְכִים אֶפְתַּח לְפָתַח לְפָנָיו דְּלָתִים וְשַׁעֲרִים לֹא יִסְגְּרוּ: אֲנִי לְפָנֶיךָ אֵלֶּךְ וְהַדּוּרִים אֲנֹשֶׁר דְּלָתוֹת נְחוּשָׁה אֲשַׁבֵּר וּבְרִיחֵי בְרֹזֶל אֲגַדֵּעַ: וְנָתַתִּי לְךָ אוֹצְרוֹת חֶשֶׁךְ וּמַטְמְנֵי &c., thus HATH Jehovah said of his anointed, of Cyrus, whose right hand I HAVE HOLDEN, for the subduing of nations before him, and that I MAY UNLOOSE the loins of kings; to open before him, the two-leaved gates, and (that the) gates MAY not BE SHUT: I GO, (or WILL GO,) before thee, and MAKE LEVEL mountainous places; the gates of brass DO I BREAK, and the bars of iron DO I CUT ASUNDER. And I have given thee the treasures of darkness, and the hidden treasures of secret places, that thou MAYEST KNOW, that I am Jehovah who CALL (thee) by thy name, &c., Is. xlv. 1—3.

Although this citation is not quite direct in the first verse, the passage is nevertheless all put in the first person; and the second verse is a direct citation. As to the tenses, the first verb is in the preterite, because the prophet recites what he had already received, perhaps at some distance of time. The next is also preterite as referring to past events. The following אֶפְתַּח and יִסְגְּרוּ are present, referring to what may have been done at the time when the declaration was first made, or immediately subsequent to it. The same may be said of the four following verbs. The next, נָתַתִּי is a preterite to be taken in an absolute future signification (see Art. 236.): and the following אֵלֶּךְ is present to the fulfilment of this or immediately subsequent to it. The second preterite, הִחַזְקֹתִי refers to a time anterior to that of אָמַר, with which the declaration commences, though perhaps not so much so as to bear our pluperfect in the translation. The next two, אֶפְתַּח and יִסְגְּרוּ, though presents or futures to הִחַזְקֹתִי, seem, nevertheless, to be anterior to אָמַר as to tense. In the next place, אֲנֹשֶׁר, אֵלֶּךְ, and אֲגַדֵּעַ, are evidently present or future to אָמַר, and consequently, in a tense future to  $\text{קָרָא}$  and  $\text{יִקְרָא}$ . In the last place,  $\text{קָרָא}$  is manifestly future with respect to the preceding verb  $\text{עָנָה}$ , &c. and  $\text{קָרָא}$ , which is present or immediately future to this, may be considered as referring to something still further removed into futurity. Numerous instances of this kind occur in the New Testament. For examples in which the present tense is thus carried backward or forward, see Matt. ii. 13,  $\text{φαίνεσθαι}$ ; Mark ii. 4,  $\text{χαλῶσι}$ , &c. As future, Matt. ii. 4,  $\text{γενῶμαι}$ ; Ib. v. 46,  $\text{ἔχελε}$ ; Ib. xvii. 11,  $\text{ἔρχεσθαι}$ ; Ib. xxvi. 29,  $\text{πίνω}$ . Paulo-post future, Matt. xxvi. 24,  $\text{παραδίδομαι}$ ; Ib. v. 45. See Mark xiv. 41, Luke xxii. 21, 22, John xiii. 3. 11. 27. 33, &c. In like manner the Aorists are also used for the past, present, or future. It will be unnecessary to give examples of the past. Of the present, Matt. iii. 17,  $\text{ἐνδόκησα}$ . So Ib. xxiii. 2, Luke i. 47, xv. 16, John i. 12, 1 John iv. 8. Of the future, John xi. 56,  $\text{ἔλθη}$ : xv. 6,  $\text{ἐβλήθη}$ ,  $\text{ἐξηγάθη}$ . See also Rom. viii. 20. With  $\text{πρὶν}$  or  $\text{πρὸ}$  preceding, Mark xiv. 30, John iv. 49, viii. 58, xiii. 19, &c. See also Matthiæ's Greek Grammar, vol. ii., Artt. 504, 505, &c.

14. From what has been said it must have appeared, that the writer, placing both himself and his reader in times contemporary with the events of which he is treating, can supply all the deficiency of tenses apparent in the Hebrew paradigm; an expedient often resorted to, indeed, by the Latin and Greek historians, without the necessity which presents itself here. We must not hence suppose, however, that they never recur to the original time from which they set out. This they appear to do optionally, just as we find it done in the Greek and Latin historians\* (Art. 231. 6.): e. g.  $\text{וַיִּקְרָא אֱלֹהִים לְאֹר}$   $\text{יִוֵּם}$   $\text{וְלַחֹשֶׁךְ קָרָא לַיְלָה}$  so God CALLS the light day; but the darkness he CALLED night, Gen. i. 5;  $\text{וַיִּנְיְחוּ אֹתוֹ}$

232. If then events consecutive of each other may be enounced by verbs intimating a presence of action, with reference to those primarily introduced into the context, then may Subjunctive or Conditional sentences also be enounced upon the same principle, by the present tense, while the dependence of the different members one upon another will be determined by the signification of the particles introduced for that purpose. Examples: Gen. xxiv. 49, 50, וְעַתָּה אִם-יִשְׁכַּם עֲשִׂים הַסֵּד וְאַמַּת אֶת-אֲדֹנָי הַגִּידוּ לִי וְאִם-לֹא הַגִּידוּ לִי וְאַפְנֶה עַל-יָמִין אוֹ : *and now, if ye ARE DEALING kindly and truly with my master, tell me; and if not, tell me; and I turn (or that I MAY TURN) to the right hand or to the left; Ib. v. 5, וַיֹּאמֶר אֵלָיו הָעֶבֶד אוֹלֵי לֹא-תֵאבְדָה הָאִשָּׁה לָלֶכֶת אַחֲרַי אֶל-הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת הַהִשָּׁב אָשִׁיב אֶת-בְּנִי אֶל-הָאָרֶץ : *then the servant said (says) to him, Perhaps the woman MAY not BE (or, putting the case that she is not,) WILLING to follow me to this land, must I surely bring back thy son unto the land from whence thou camest?

233. There are, moreover, other modes of construction, by which hypothetical and other sentences, exhibiting certain relations between their leading and subsequent members, are formed. These constructions have hitherto been unobserved by Christian Grammarians and Commentators. Some of the Jews seem to have entertained a few very imperfect notions respecting them,* which they probably borrowed from the Arabians, who detail them very much at length in their Grammars and Commentaries on Grammar.*

2. It has more than once been remarked (Artt. 74. 2. 108. 119, p. 256, &c.) that verbs will occasionally appear in an apocopated or abridged form: at others with a ה, usually termed paragogic (Artt. 175. 2. 4. 5, &c.), and, at others, with what has been termed an Epenthetic or Paragogic Nun (ן) Art. 175. 17, &c. We now proceed to state, in order, the several powers which these forms appear to exert upon the context of Scripture:—and first, of that which has been termed apocope.

3. We have seen, Artt. 119. 8. 9, that the apocopated forms are often used for the purpose of expressing command, prohibition, exhortation, wishing, forbearance, or the like: as, יהי let him or it be; יבית let him, or,

 i. e. And there is another (use of) Vaw in the place of אִם, and this indicates the reply of a conditional sentence; as (in the examples), Putting the case that the iron is blunt,—the corresponding member is,—then must one increase the force, Ecel. x. 9. If ye, or putting the case that ye, walk in my statutes:—the corresponding member is,—then surely I will give your showers in their season, Lev. xxvi. 3, 4. This is precisely the doctrine of the Arabian Grammarians as far as it goes, (See Jāmi's Com. on Ibn Ulhājib, pp. ۳۷۱-۳۷۷-۳۷۸ ۳۸۰. — &c.) They investigate the matter, however, much more scientifically and profoundly. The result of a careful examination of this matter with me is, that although the subsequent members may often be translated by our subjunctive or conditional mode, yet, as positive comparisons are always instituted in their languages, no such doubtful mode actually exists with them. This will be proved at length in a tract which I shall shortly print.

* See the شرح الكافية by the Moolla Jāmi, and the work of نجم الدين العراقي in the collection of Mr. Burckhardt in the Public Library at Cambridge.

may he, dilate ; יִמַּח let him be blotted out ; * אֶל-יִרְא let it not be seen, &c. We now say, that, apparently for the purpose of preserving an uniformity in the forms of words composing those members of sentences which have a mutual relation to each other, the verbs in such subsequent members will also be apocopated : e. g. יְהִי אֹר let (there) BE light : AND light (accordingly) IS. This connection is also preserved in the next verse ; thus, וַיֵּרָא אֱלֹהִים אֶת-הָאֹר כִּי-טוֹב וַיַּבְדֵּל אֱלֹהִים בֵּין הָאֹר : AND GOD (accordingly) SEES the light, that (it is) good ; and GOD (accordingly) DIVIDES between the light and between the darkness . . . AND (hence) the evening BECOMES, AND the dawn BECOMES, day one. See the remaining instances occurring in this and the following chapters.† So Is.

* The Arabic imperatives are regularly apocopated forms ; as, انصُر assist thou : the preformative alif is added merely for the sake of facilitating the pronunciation, and is omitted by rule whenever it can be. In Hebrew an imperative of the first person singular and plural must be made either by this form ; as, אֲהִי let me be, Hos. xiii. 14. נִלְאֵךְ Num. xx. 17, &c., or by one of those presently to be considered. It must also be borne in mind, that imperatives will express request as well as command.

† The Arabian Grammarians reason on this subject in the following manner. The Moolla Jámi says, in his commentary on Ibn Ulhájib (p. ٣٨٢), ولام الامر، وهي اللام المطلوب بها الفعل ويدخل فيها لام الدعاء نحو ليغفر لنا الله . . . ولا انهي هي لا المطلوب بها اترك اي ترك الفعل . . . وكلم المجازاة . . . تدخل علي الفعلين لسببية الفعل الاول ومسببية And the lām الفعل الثاني اي لجعل الفعل الاول سببا والثاني مسببا (ل) of command, i. e. the LAM intimating a desire for the action of the verb.—

The LAM of prayer will also influence the verb ; as, ليغفر لنا الله “ may God forgive us : ” also the word لا, (Heb. לֹא) of prohibition, i. e. intimating a request that the action of the verb be given up ; also expressions of retribution, xlvi. 17, לֹא הָיָה שְׁלוֹמֶךָ לְמִצְוֹתַי וַיְהִי כְּנָדָר שְׁלוֹמֶךָ hadst thou attended to my commandments, THEN HAD BEEN thy peace like the river. When לֹא is used as a prohibitive, no apocopation takes place: see Exod. xx. 3—18. Similar consequent members seem also to be marked, when the illative ו accompanies the preterite and exercises the influence of removing the accent, (Art. 119.) e. g. Exod. xxix. 1—3. *לָקַח פֶּר אֶחָד... וְנָתַתָּ אוֹתָם עַל-**

(i. e. a consequent member in such sentences), these will influence two verbs, the first implying the cause (or antecedent), the second that upon which the cause acts (or the consequent), i. e. to mark the first verb as implying the cause, the second as the thing caused. The Moolla goes on to tell us, in the words of Ibn Ulhájib, that we must not, however, always understand such constructions as marking the absolute cause and effect, but only that the writer or speaker has expressed himself, as if this were actually the case; i. e. just as we find it in the scriptural parables, he argues these cases as real, whether they are so or not in the nature of things. This is a principle exerting a most extensive influence on the language of Scripture. The idiomatic force of such passages seems to be: Let there be light, so, let there be light; i. e. The Creator gives the command in the first instance, the historian, writer, or speaker, in the second. This will account for the use of the apocopated forms in each case, and explain their concordance with one another. So in the Arabic, أَنْ تَشْتَمِنِي أَكْرَمَكَ.

Putting the case (thus) or surely, despise me: let me honour thee: تَزْرِنِي أَزْرِكْ visit me, (so) let me visit thee. And hence the peculiar force of the Arabic ف ومن عاد فينتقم الله منه so, therefore, and the Hebrew illative particle ו; as, וַיְהִי אוֹר וַיְהִי אוֹר let there be light, ACCORDINGLY, CONSEQUENTLY, so (or the like) let it be taken for granted that light becomes, (exists.)

* So in the Arabic with the illative particle ف . . . ف ان كان قميصه قد . . . ف انصدت putting the case that his frock was torn....then she has spoken truly. This ف is termed by the Arabian Grammarians الفاء التعليلية the consequent ف. Jāmi's Com., p. ٣٨٥. فقد is mostly used in these cases.

כָּל אֶחָד וְהִקְרַבְתָּ אֹתָם וְגו' Take one heifer . . . . and place them upon one basket, and offer them (accordingly), &c. See the following verses. The preterite is apparently used in these cases for the greater emphasis.

4. It is not, however, necessary that a command or prohibition should always precede ; any subject matter of discourse upon which a consequence will depend, may have its consequent members enounced by apocopated present tenses : as, כָּשְׁלָה בְּרָחוֹב אֱמֶת וּנְכַתָּה לֹא-תוֹכֵל, לָבוֹא : וַתְּהִי הָאֱמֶת נִעְדָּרַת . . . . וַיֵּרָא יְהוָה וַיִּרַע בְּעֵינָיו *for truth hath stumbled in the open place, and integrity is unable to enter. SO, ACCORDINGLY, &c. truth hath failed: . . . . SO, THEREFORE, &c. the Lord saw, AND (therefore) it was evil in his eyes, &c.** Is. lix. 14.

5. From what has been said, it may perhaps be concluded, that no passage of this sort can occur, in which such apocopation will not be found either as a mark of a leading imperative, or of a consequent and corresponding member. We must bear in mind, however, that a very great number of cases occurs in the verbs, in which we can have no mark whatever of this apocopation. Again, in a great variety of instances, it will be of but little importance whether the context contain narration only, or be prophetic ; for in either of these the particle ו may be a simple conjunction.* In others a paragogic ה, (of which hereafter,) may have been struck out for the sake of euphony: and, in others, the accents may have been misplaced through the ignorance of the copyists; nothing being more certain, than that the modern Jews are perfectly ignorant of this doctrine; and, it is doubtful whether it was known to any considerable extent by their older and better writers. Examples of the kind alluded to are the following:—יָקוּוּ הַמַּיִם . . . וְתִרְאֶה &c. Let the waters be limited, . . . and let the dry (land) appear: or prophetically: The waters shall be limited . . . and the dry (land) shall appear. And then we have the consequent member: viz. וַיְהִי כֵן And it became thus (accordingly). Gen. i. 9. 26, &c.

* From this sort of connection in the context, we may see in what sense this connecting and illative particle ו, may be said to be conversive of the tense of the following verbs to that of the preceding ones : not that it exerts any such power absolutely, but only relatively, (Art. 231. 9.). And in this sense D. Kimkhi has taken it, (Mikhlol, fol. מ"ה verso.) where he cites Aben Ezra as appealing to the Arabic. And De Balmes expressly ascribes it to the tense of narration (Art. 231. 10. note) הַהֲגֵדִי. It is very doubtful, therefore, whether the Jews ever believed an absolute conversive power to be vested in this ו.

234. We have, in the next place, to state and exemplify the laws which regulate the use of the paragogic ה when attached to the present tense of verbs. This termination is used for two purposes: I. to express a command or request: and II. to designate, as in the last article, the member consequent to some previously expressed antecedent. Examples of the first case:—Gen. xxxvii. 13. לָקֵחַ וְאֶשְׁלַחְךָ אֲלֵהֶם, Come (I pray) and let me send thee to them. In the next verse this command is prefaced by לָךְ-נָא, come I pray, equal apparently to the preceding לָקֵחַ: and in verse 16.

* Nor is this mark always visible in the Arabic, particularly when the preterite tense is used: e. g. أَنْ خَرَجْتَ خَرَجْتُ If you have gone out, I have gone out; for, if you do so, then I will. So also أَنْ أَتَانِي زَيْدٌ أَوْ آتَيْتَهُ If Zaid comes to me, I will come to him, i. e. with or without the apocoped form: so in the Hebrew, Micah vii. 8, כִּי נִפְלֵיתִי קָמַתִּי When I have fallen, (then) I have arisen: i. e. these are the constant facts of the case.

we have both combined in הַגִּידָהּ-נָא, Shew now I pray. So also Ib. xxxviii. 16, הִרְבֵּה-נָא, Give now I pray. See Ps. ii. 3, 7; lxix. 19, &c.

2. Examples of the second case : *—Ps. ii. 8. שְׂאֵל מִמֶּנִּי וְאֶתְּנָה לְנוֹסִים Ask of me, and I will (accordingly) give, or, let me (then) give, nations, &c., Ib. lxix. 15. הֲצִילֵנִי מֵאֶל-אֶטְבָּעָה וְאֶל-מַטִּיט Deliver me from the mire, and let me not (thence) sink down, Ib. cxix. 18. גַּל-עֵינַי וְאֶבְיטָה Enlighten my eyes, in order that I

* This relation is marked in the Arabic by the vowel Fatha placed on the last letter of the verb in the present tense, as <sup>ف</sup>يُنصِر instead of <sup>ف</sup>يُنصر; which Mr. de Sacy has mistaken for the subjunctive mode of European Grammars; to which it will only occasionally correspond. The particles found to precede this form are various: see de Sacy's Gram. Arab., tom. ii., pp. 19—30. His mistakes will be pointed out in a tract which I shall shortly publish.—This form is not used as an imperative in Arabic, unless preceded by a negative. The principle on which this construction proceeds, is thus stated by Jāmi in his commentary on the Kāfia. Speaking of the particle ف, our illative و, he says:

ف which marks the following verb with FATHA, as equivalent in sense to ان UT.

Now this equivalent to ان after ف, (added) for the purpose of placing FATHA on the (last letter of the root in the) present tense, is governed by two conditions. One of these is CAUSALITY, i. e. the causality of some antecedent acting upon its consequent: for, indeed, the change from (ف) to (ف) is intended to mark this causality; so that the change in the form of the word intimates the change intended in the sense. But, when no such causality is intended, there can be no want of any intimation of it. The second condition is, that one of the six things (as in the last article) precede the ف &c. These are, a command, a prohibition, an interrogation, a question, a negation, a wish or representation.

may see, or, and let me see, wonders out of thy law. See also ver. 27; Ps. cxlv. 5; Obad. ver. 1. קוּמוּ וְנִקְוּמָה אֲרִיזוּ וְנִקְוּמוּ
Arise ye, and let us (too) arise, Hab. ii. 1. עַל-מִשְׁמַרְתִּי * אֶעֱמְדָה וְאֶתִּיצֵבָה עַל-מְצוֹר וְאֶצְפָּה.
Let me stand upon my watch, that I may be set up on the fortress, and spy.
 In all of these cases, as in the preceding, a kind of imperative force seems to belong to every verb employed in the succession. In this last case, the force is more of the *precativ*e or optative character.

3. It must not be supposed, however, that this form is always had recourse to, for the purpose of marking this relation: for it is occasionally, and perhaps most frequently, designated by such particles as will best express it; as, לְמַעַן אֲשֶׁר quod, or eo quod, לְמַעַן אֲשֶׁר for the purpose of, בְּעֵבוּר in order to, because of, &c., כִּי that, ut, לְ to, in order to, כִּן seeing that, and the like, with the unaugmented form of the verb. It is when these particles are omitted that the form is generally used. So also in the nouns, מִצְרַיִמָּה will signify to, or towards, Egypt, and will be equivalent to אֶל-מִצְרַיִם: but both are not usually combined; as, אֶל-מִצְרַיִמָּה: whence perhaps we may conclude, that the real force of this particle is either to, in order to, or something nearly allied to this. (Art. 232.)

235. The third case we have to consider is, that which involves the doctrine respecting the uses of the Epenthetic and Paragogic Nún (ן): and here, as before, the first of these is found with commands, prohibitions, and exhortations, and also in the consequent members of antithetic sentences: the second is used with interrogatives, and also in the consequent members of similar sentences. And, in both cases, strong asseveration, with futurity of action, seems to be implied.* Examples in signification; as, Thou shalt certainly strike (اضربن), in its light form, and اضربن in its reduplicated one; also with a prohibition; as, Thou shalt (certainly) not strike: also with an interrogation; as, Wilt thou really strike? also with a wish; as, I wish you would really strike: and with a representation; as, Surely you will come down to us, so that it may be well with you: also with an oath; as, And (as) God (exists) so, surely will I do it: and these cases all hold good, whether the form be light, or doubled. . . . This confirmation is not used, except when something is requested; but, it is most frequent in such examples as, "WHETHER YOU WILL SURELY DO IT, &c.," (i. e. in a condition, the accompanying particle of which is strengthened by ما, what, &c., For, when such particle gives force, the intention is, to strengthen the action of the verb likewise, in order to avoid otherwise missing the force intended by the passage,) TOGETHER WITH WHAT GOES BEFORE IT, i. e. whatever precedes such confirmatory Nūn, whether it be light or heavy (i. e. single or double). That is, in all such antithetic sentences as those involving oaths, requests, and the like. The most complete account I have met with of the use of these forms is to be found in the work of نجم الدين العراقي already referred to, from which I shall give extracts in another publication. I have given this note more which the Epenthetic or Paragogic Nūn is used in interrogations, &c., Ps. lxxviii. 17; לָמָּה תִּרְצְדוּן why will ye (persevere to) watch? Job ix. 12; מִי יִשְׁיבֵנו who will (effectually) turn him back? Mic. vi. 6; הֲיִקְרַמְנוּ shall I (actually) approach him? Gen. xxxvii. 21; לֹא נִכְנֹו נִכְּשׁ let us by no means strike his person, Amos i. 3; לֹא אֲשִׁיבֵנו I will by no means restore him. See also Dan. ii. 5. 9, &c.

* In this place we have probably a contraction, i. e. אֶצְפָּה for אֶצְפָּה, in order to avoid the concurrence of two Hēs ה. Art. 175, 6.

2. In some instances the Paragogic Nūn, in single sentences, seems strongly to intimate futurity of action, as in Joel ii. 4; בְּנִ יְרוּצוּן so shall they assuredly run: Ib. ver. 7; כְּגִבּוֹרִים יְרוּצוּן like heroes shall they (certainly) run; אִישׁ בְּדַרְכּוֹ יִלְכוּן each in his ways shall they march; וְלֹא יַעֲבֹטוּן אֶרְחוֹתָם neither shall they (at all) wander (from) their paths.

3. In the following passages they strongly mark consecutive members of sentences, implying perhaps, at the same time, futurity in the tense of the verb, Gen. xxxvii. 27; לָכוּ וְנִמְכְּרֵנוּ come, let us actually sell him, Isa. xxvi. 5—7; בִּי הַשְׁחָ יִשְׁגִּי מְרוֹם קִרְיָה נִשְׁגַּבָּה יִשְׁפִּילָנָה for he shall (surely) bring down the inhabitants of (a) high place; an exalted city, he shall assuredly debase her: he debaseth her to the earth; he shall assuredly make her touch even to the dust: the foot shall surely trample her.

We may here remark that הִשְׁחָ, a manifest prophetic future, is parallel to יִשְׁפִּילָנָה in the following member: whence both must at length than I otherwise should have done, because I find Mr. de Sacy speaking in his Gram. Arabe (tom. ii. p. 35), as if there were no fixed rules for its use, and actually dislocating the last example he has cited, as if it had no connection with what went before. See the Koran, Sur. 102.

be construed in the same tense : both therefore will be strong prophetic futures : the one grounded on the principle (Art. 236.) of the event having already come to pass ; the other enouncing a similar event in a corroborated present sense only : while the Epenthetic Nūn in the latter, marks it as a consequent to the former.—In the next place, the following ישפילה has no such Nūn : it commences, therefore, a new series of context, i. e. it resumes the original theme commenced with יהיה, and has וינצרה with the Epenthetic Nūn for its consequent ; and, in apposition with this is the following תרמסנה. See Ib. xliii. 5 ; Deut. viii. 5. 19, 20 ; Job. ix. 6. 32. 34 ; xii. 7. 8, &c. In the nouns too, the termination ך appears to have a corroborative force, see Art. 168.

4. From the near approach of these forms in sense, we must not be surprised in occasionally finding constructions in which they are mixed, for the purpose perhaps of imparting to its several members some particular shade of meaning, or to keep up a variety in the modes of expression, e. g. Job ix. 14 ; אף כי-אנכי אענונו Nay, (supposing) that I may really answer him, (then) let me I pray select my words (for use) with him, Gen. xii. 2 ; ואעשה לגוי גדול...ואגדלה and let me make thee a great nation, and let me (I pray) make thy name great, and become thou a blessing, Exod. xxiii. 10 ; ושש שנים תזרע-את- ארצה ואספת את-תבואתה : והשביעית תשמטנה ונטשתה ואכלו אביוני עמך ויתרם תאכל תית השדה and six years sow THOU (imper.) thy land, and HAVE COLLECTED (pret. i. e. prophetic fut.) its income. But the seventh (year) THOU SHALT DISMISS IT (Epenthetic form) : so THOU (shalt) HAVE LEFT IT, and the poor of thy people SHALL (surely) EAT : and their excess (i. e. leavings) the wild beast of the field SHALL EAT (pres. or contingent future). I translate these so as to express the force of the different forms as near as I can. See also Gen. xliii. 21.

236. Another leading principle, by which the tenses are regulated, has arisen out of the circumstance, that the Hebrews, in common with some other nations of the East, often represent events, of the future occurrence of which they have no doubt, as having already taken place.* Examples: בִּי-יָלֵד יֵלֵד-לָנוּ בֵּן בְּתוּן-לָנוּ וַתְּהִי

* The following observations on this use of the past tense of a Persian verb are taken from the Persian Grammar of Mr. Lumsden, vol. ii. p. 326.

“The prophetic denunciation of a future event will be often expressed in the past tense, in order to indicate the certainty of its occurrence. Examples:

گِرْدَنِ كَشِيْدِهٖ وَبَانَوَاعِ عَذَابِ گِرْفَتَارِ گِرْدِيْدِهٖ ‘The infidel, however happy to-day, will be encircled to-morrow by a collar of curses, and will suffer miseries of every description.’

“It seems to me,” continues Mr. Lumsden, “that most of the preceding rules have their basis in the following principle....that the occurrence of a future event is naturally a matter of great uncertainty, and generally speaking, will be so considered, if expressed by the future tense of the verb. Past events having already occurred, are subject to no uncertainty at all. And hence it happens, that a Persian, having occasion to speak of a future event, which he believes to be of certain occurrence, will naturally enough employ the past tense of the verb: by the use of which he means to apprise his auditor, that the occurrence of the event, though still future, is, in his opinion, not less certain, than if it were past.”

Of this character is the passage cited by Mr. de Sacy, from the “Concessus of Hariri, Arab. Gram., vol. i. p. 123, &c. لَا تَلْمِظْتِ بِقِرَاكُمِ اَوْ I WILL BY NO MEANS TOUCH your meat, unless, &c. See Storr, p. 163—4. Pococke’s Specim. Hist. Arab., p. 57. Gram. Syr. Isaac Sciadrensis, Rom. 1636, p. صَحَّحَ, &c.

The following passages copied from a very valuable commentary on the Arabic Grammar of Ibn Ulhājib, by نَجْمُ الدِّينِ الْعِرَاقِي which is preserved in the public library of Cambridge, will put this question out of all doubt, as to the practice of the Orientals. Speaking of the preterite tense, it is said: وَيَنْصَرِفُ اِلَى الْاِسْتِقْبَالِ بِالْاِنْشَاءِ الطَّلَبِيِّ اِمَّا دَعَاءٌ نَحْوِ رَحِمَكَ اِنَّهُ اَوْ اَمْرًا نَحْوِ قَوْلِ عَلِيٍّ عَلَيْهِ السَّلَامُ اَجْزَا اَمْرٍ قَرِيْنُهُ اَسَا اَخْلَا بِنَفْسِهِ وَيَنْصَرِفُ اِلَى

 : for a child HAS BEEN (i. e. shall surely be) BORN to us, a Son HATH BEEN (or surely shall be) GIVEN to us, so the government is upon his shoulder, and الاستقبال ايضاً بان يخبر من الامور المستقبلية ان قصد القطع بتوقعها

بدخول ما النايبة عن الظرف... نحو ما دامت السموات
 &c., i. e. "The preterite takes the future signification, when used in passages intimating desire—whether in prayer; as, رَحِمَكَ اللهُ, MAY GOD HAVE MERCY ON THEE;—or, command, as in the saying of Ali, لِيُعْطِكَ اللهُ أَجْرَهُ, LET THE MAN REWARD HIS NEIGHBOUR (اجراً pret.) WHO IN HIS OWN PERSON HAS DONE GOOD TO HIS BROTHER. It is also changed into the future, when speaking of some future event, and intending to enounce it AS CERTAIN TO COME TO PASS; as in the passage (of the Koran), يَدْعُونَكَ مِنْ جَنَّةٍ تَجْرِي مِنْ تَحْتِهَا الْأَنْهَارُ, THE INHABITANTS OF PARADISE SHALL CALL, &c. (have called. Surat. Alaraf.) where the speaker mentions the event as HAVING AL-READY COME TO PASS. It is also taken as a future, when accompanied by a negative, or, as an answer to an oath: as, بِاللهِ لَا أَفْعَلُهَا, BY GOD, I WILL NOT DO IT, or, SHOULD I DO IT. It is also used as a future in hypothetical sentences, except with the particle لَوْ SHOULD, UNLESS, &c. But, as to the verb كَانَ, it will retain its preterite signification: as, لَوْ كُنْتُ قُلْتُهَا, IF I HAD SAID IT. It is also changed when the particle مَا is used intimating time: e. g. مَا دَامَتِ السَّمَاوَاتُ, AS LONG AS THE HEAVENS HAVE ENDURED (i. e. SHALL ENDURE"), &c. It is very evident, that the same principle prevails throughout every instance here adduced, (if we except the hypothetical ones, of which something will be said hereafter, and كَانَ which is used as an auxiliary), namely, that of certainty, and thence intense petition, or command, grafted upon this certainty.—See Viger de idiotismis Græcis, p. 167. Edit. 1813, with the notes. Winer's Gram. of the New Test., p. 105. (b).

(one) calls his name Wonder, Counsellor (or Preacher), Mighty God, the Father (or Proprietor) of an age, the Prince of peace; Ib. vii. 18, וְהָיָה בְיוֹם הַהוּא יִשְׁרָק, וְהָיָה לְזָבוּב אֲשֶׁר בְּקִצָּה יְאִרִי מִצְרַיִם (certainly) COME TO PASS, in that day, Jehovah hisses (or shall hiss) to the bee which (is) in the extremity of the rivers of Egypt, &c.; Ib. 19, וּבָאוּ וְנָחוּ בְלִם בְּנִחְלֵי וּבְנִקְיֵי הַסְּלָעִים &c. and they SHALL (certainly) COME, and SHALL all REST in the desolate valleys, and in the holes of the rocks.

2. Upon the same principle, the Preterite tense is often used as an Imperative; which may, therefore, be termed emphatical: e. g. Deut. vi. 5, וְאָהַבְתָּ אֶת יְהוָה, אֱלֹהֶיךָ בְּכָל-לִבְבְּךָ וּבְכָל-נַפְשֶׁךָ וּבְכָל-מְאֹדֶךָ : וְהָיוּ הַדְּבָרִים הָאֵלֶּה אֲשֶׁר אֲנֹכִי מְצַוֶּה הַיּוֹם עֲלֶיךָ : וְשָׁנַנְתָּם לְבָנֶיךָ וְדַבַּרְתָּ בָם בְּשַׁבְתְּךָ בְּבֵיתְךָ וּבְלֶכְתְּךָ בַדֶּרֶךְ וּבְשֹׁכְבְּךָ וּבְקוּמְךָ : וּקְשַׁרְתָּם לְאוֹת עַל-יָדֶיךָ וְהָיוּ לְטָטְפֹת בֵּין עֵינֶיךָ : וְכָתַבְתָּם עַל-מְזוֹזֹת בֵּיתְךָ וּבְשַׁעְרֶיךָ : and thou SHALT (surely) LOVE Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might. And these words which I command thee this day SHALL BE upon thy heart: and thou SHALT DILIGENTLY IMPRESS them upon thy children: and thou SHALT TALK of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And THOU SHALT BIND them for a sign on thy hand, and THEY SHALL BE for frontlets between thy eyes. And thou SHALT WRITE them upon the posts of thy house, and upon thy gates.

It will be imagined, perhaps, from the use of the accents here, that these preterites have been affected by the preceding imperative שָׁמַע (Art. 233. 3.). But this is unnecessary, as it regards their forms; because, had nothing but a simple imperative been intended, the common imperative forms would have been used. Innumerable instances occur, however, in which no such form precedes, as is also the case with the prophetic preterites just noticed. See Gen. xl. 14, xlv. 13, xlvi. 34, Ezek. ii. 4, iii. 17, iv. 5, 6.

3. In the following example, we have both the preterite and present tenses, used as prophetical futures; the former for the purpose of intimating certainty, and thence of affording assurance; the latter for the reasons already given (Artt. 231. 11. 235. 3.). Gen. xxvi. 3, גִּזְרָה בְּאֶרֶץ הַזֹּאת וְאֶהְיֶה עִמָּךְ וְאֶבְרַכְךָ כִּי-לֹךְ וְלֹרְעָה אִתָּן אֶת-כָּל-הָאֲרָצֹת הָאֵל וְהִקְמַתִי אֶת-הַשְּׁבָעָה אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁבַּעְתִּי : sojourn in this land, and I am (or WILL BE) with thee, and so I bless (or WILL BLESS) thee; for to thee and to thy seed I give (or WILL GIVE) all these lands: and I WILL (surely) ESTABLISH the oath which I swore to Abraham thy father.

4. The following has a prohibitive sentence in the Present, followed by two predictions enounced in the Preterite, tense: Gen. xxvi. 24, אַל-תִּירָא כִּי-אֲתָךְ אֲנֹכִי וּבִרְכָתִיךָ וְהִרְבִּיתִי אֶת-זֵרְעֶךָ fear not, for I (am) with thee and WILL (surely) BLESS thee, and MULTIPLY thy seed.

5. When a preterite follows a present (prophetical) tense in the same order of events, and in the same context, the second of these, with as many succeeding verbs as follow in the same tense, order, &c. may be translated by the English compound tense, shall have—shall have had—or the like.* Examples: Deut. vii. 1, כִּי יִבְיֹאֵךְ יְהוָה אֱלֹהֶיךָ אֶל-הָאֶרֶץ אֲשֶׁר-אָתָּה בָּא-שָׂמָה לְרִשְׁתָּהּ וְנָשַׁל גּוֹיִם-רַבִּים מִפְּנֶיךָ... וְנָתַנְם יְהוָה

* In this case, the preterite is reckoned, not from the period in which the declaration is made, but from one future to it, as it is even in the English. The reason is: futurity is intended in the first, and consequently in every subsequent verb, whatever other particulars the context may require in this respect.

וְהִפִּיתָם הַתְּהָרִים תְּהָרִים אֹתָם &c. when Jehovah thy God BRINGETH (or shall bring) THEE to the land whither thou art going to possess it, and SHALL HAVE CAST OUT many great nations from before thee . . . and Jehovah thy God SHALL HAVE DELIVERED them up before thee, and thou SHALT HAVE-SMITTEN them, (then) devote thou them to utter destruction.

6. In like manner when two events are enounced, one of which is prior to the other, and that which occurred first in the order of time, being to be taken in the past tense, (with reference to the time in which the relation was originally made,) the following one may be translated into English in the preterpluperfect tense:* as, Gen. xxvi. 18, וַיִּקְרָא לָהֶן שֵׁמוֹת בְּשֵׁמוֹת אֲשֶׁר-קָרָא לָהֶן וַאֲבִיו : so he calls them (i. e. at that time by) names, according to the names (by) which his father CALLED THEM (i. e. had called).

237. General opinions may be enounced either in the preterite,† the participles, or in the present tense.

* In this case, the verb וַיִּקְרָא is an historical present, and hence contemporary in act with the preceding verb וַיִּשָׁב, and therefore preterite with reference to the time in which the narration is made: but, the following verb קָרָא is preterite with reference to this time, i. e. to the time of וַיִּשָׁב and וַיִּקְרָא, it is, therefore, a preterite still more remote, and equivalent to our pluperfect. So

† So in the Arabic لو اخذتني معك لعملت عسلا مثلك had you taken me with you, I had made honey like yourself; لو كان الناس كلهم عقالا

خربت الدنيا HAD IT BEEN (so that) all men were wise, the world HAD BEEN DESTROYED. Mr. Lumsden has, I think, been very happy in his remarks on this sort of construction. "General opinions," says he, "ought to result from the observation of facts; and whether we state a general opinion, or the facts

Examples: Ps. i. 1, אֲשֶׁרִי הָאִישׁ אֲשֶׁר לֹא הָלַךְ בְּעֵצַת רְשָׁעִים וּבִדְרֹךְ חַטָּאִים לֹא עָמַד וּבְמִשְׁבַּל לְצִים לֹא יָשָׁב : Blessed (is) the man who HATH not WALKED in the counsel of the wicked, and HATH not STOOD in the way of sinners, and HATH not RESIDED in the habitation of the scorers; Prov. xxviii. 7, נֹצֵר תּוֹרָה בֶּן מִבּוֹן וְרָעָה זוֹלָלִים יִבְלִים : An intelligent son KEEPS the law; but he who ATTENDS upon base men, PUTS his father to shame; Ib. xi. 4, : לֹא-יוֹעִיל הוּן בְּיוֹם עִבְרָה וּצְדָקָה תַצִּיל מִמּוֹת : לא-יועיל הון ביום עברה וצדקה תציל ממות on which an opinion is founded, the effect is the same in either case. An Englishman will commonly state the opinion, as 'Force cannot cope with fortune:' and a Persian will be often disposed to state the facts on which the opinion is founded: as 'The strong have been generally foiled in the contest with fortune.' This, therefore," adds he, "is a case in which the past may be said to supersede the future tense of the verb." Example; كَزَيْنِ پَسْ بَدَ

كُنْجِي نَشِينِم چو مور كه روزي نَخوردند پيلان بزور "henceforward I shall retire and dwell in a corner, like the ant; for even the elephant (which is the strongest of all animals) cannot master (has not mastered) his fortune by force." Pers. Gram., vol. ii. p. 326.

The Arabic Grammarians endeavour to account for this use of the verb, which they say must be taken as in the present tense, by saying, that we have here, الْاِنْشَاءُ الْاَيْقَاعِي, by which they mean the retention of an event in the mind, which although past, as to fact, is nevertheless present in effect; as, اشتریت I have sold, and am now dispossessed of the thing sold, اشتريت

I have bought, and do possess, &c., whereas, when we use the present tense in such cases, the thing sold, bought, &c. may be, or not, now in our possession. So we say in English, I AM come, he IS gone, not I HAVE come, he HAS gone. And in Hebrew, Is. xiv. 7; נָחָה נְשָׁהּטָה פְּלִיְהָרֵץ פְּצָחָהּ רָפָה &c., The whole land is at rest, it is quiet (has been), they BREAK forth (into) singing (have broken forth). See also some of the following verses. This, however, mostly takes place in intransitive verbs, such as יָדַע, יָבֵל, חָכַם, דָּלַף, יָדַע, יָבֵל, חָכַם, or the like.—See Viger. de idiot. Græc., p. 166. Edit. 1813, with the notes: also p. 163.

riches PROFIT not in the day of wrath; but righteousness DELIVERS from death.

238. Hypothetical sentences, which are very nearly allied to the foregoing, will be enounced either in the past or present tense, according to one or other of the preceding rules, or as it shall suit the intention of the writer. Examples: Gen. xxvi. 10, מֵה־זֹאת עָשִׂיתָ לָנוּ בְמַעַט שָׁכַב : what is this (that) thou hast done to us? some one of the people MIGHT lightly HAVE LAIN with thy wife, so thou WOULDST HAVE BROUGHT sin upon us; Ib. xxvii. 12, אָבִי וְהִיִּיתִי בְעֵינָיו בְּמַתְעַתֵּעַ וְהִבֵּאתִי עָלַי קָלְלָה וְלֹא בִרְכָה : Perhaps my father MAY FEEL me; (or, putting the case that he feels me) so SHALL I (certainly) BECOME as a great deceiver in his eyes, and SHALL (surely) BRING upon myself a curse and not a blessing; Prov. vi. 1, בְּנֵי אִם־עֲרֵבֶתָ לְרֵעֶהָ תִקְעֶתָ לְזָר בְּפִיָּהּ : My son, if thou HAST BECOME surety for thy neighbour, if thou HAST STRICKEN thy hand with a stranger. . . . do this, &c.; Gen. xxviii. 20, &c., אִם־יְהִיָּה אֱלֹהִים עִמָּדִי , וְשָׁמְרֵנִי בַדֶּרֶךְ הַזֶּה אֲשֶׁר אָנֹכִי הוֹלֵךְ וְנָתַן־לִי לֶחֶם לֶאֱכֹל וּבִגְד לְלַבֵּשׁ : *and if it shall be that God is with me, and HATH PRESERVED me in this way in which I am (now) travelling, and HATH (hitherto) GIVEN me bread to eat and clothing to put on; so assuredly SHALL I RETURN to my father's house in peace, and Jehovah SHALL assuredly CONTINUE my God; and this stone, &c.* Is.*

* This passage has been entirely misunderstood. It contains an oath, or vow, which is the same thing. This usage of the preterite in the Hebrew, as in the Arabic, generally designates oaths; and the principle upon which these are constructed is, by taking something which is most certain as a basis, and then by comparing the subsequent terms with it. See Heb. vi. 13—19. And the

: HADST thou RENT the heavens, HADST thou DE-SCENDED, HAD the mountains BEEN REDUCED before thee; ...
then the nations HAD TREMBLED before thee;* Lev. x. 19, Moolla Jámi on Ibn Ulhájib, pp. ۴۶۲-۴۶۷. These forms, therefore, imply no curse or ban, as the forms of cursing do which run thus, God do so to me, &c.

* In translating this passage, I have taken נָזְלוּ as the Niphál of נָזַל, to which it seems to me most properly to belong, (see Simouis's Lexicon sub voce), and לֹא as a particle implying supposition with a negation, according to its most usual import both in Hebrew and Arabic. It should also be observed, that in the first and two last examples, the preterite is used, as in the statement of general opinions, and for the reasons assigned by Mr. Lumsden. The particles preceding such expressions may always be considered as intended to put a suppositious case; or, in other words, to lay down a general fact as accidental, and then to deduce the consequence: which may be stated, either in the past or present tense, as circumstances may require. Of this character are the following Arabic examples; لَوْ لَا عَرَفْنَاكَ لَفَعَلْنَا مِثْلَ ذَلِكَ HAD we not KNOWN thee, we HAD (surely) DONE after this manner; or, WE SHOULD (surely) HAVE DONE SO, taking the second member as a future of certainty with respect to the first; لَوْ كُنْتَ هَاهُنَا لَمْ يَمُتْ أَخِي HADST thou BEEN here, my brother WOULD not HAVE DIED; إِنْ فَعَلْتُ ذَلِكَ ضَيَعْتُ مَالِي HAD I

DONE this, I SHOULD SURELY HAVE LOST my wealth; إِنْ أَنَا كَثُرْتُ عَافِيَا

إِنْ أَنَا كَثُرْتُ عَافِيَا DID I INCREASE her food, she WOULD (probably) LAY TWO eggs:

i. e. putting the case that if I had done so, then she would perhaps lay, &c. De Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. p. 124, &c.

The Persian examples selected by Mr. Lumsden seem to me all subject to this distinction, i. e. of certainty or contingency, and to have been enounced accordingly, either in the past, present, or future tense; اِگَر نَرَسِيْدِي اِنْتِظَارَتِ

اِگَر نَرَسِيْدِي اِنْتِظَارَتِ HAD you not ARRIVED, the expectation of you, WOULD (probably) HAVE KILLED (me); اِگَر اِمْرُوْرز بَر خَلْقِ رَحْمِ كَنْدِ فَرْدَا مَرْحُوْمِ

: וְאָכַלְתִּי הַטָּאֵת הַיּוֹם חַיִּיטָב בְּעֵינֵי יְהוָה : and, HAD I EATEN the sin-offering to-day, WOULD it HAVE (seemed) GOOD in the eyes of Jehovah?

: 239. Commands, requests, prohibitions, deprecations, blessings, and hence future events taken prophetically, will be enounced by the imperatives of verbs, or by any of those other forms, which are used as imperatives (Artt. 233. 3. 234. 235.): as, Gen. xxvii. 3, וְעָתָה שְׂאֵנָא בְּלִיָּה תְּלִיָּה : and now, TAKE, I pray, thy weapons, thy quiver and thy bow, and GO OUT into the plain, and HUNT for me a hunting. Ib. v. 26, בְּנֹשֶׁה-נָא וְיִשָּׁקֶה-לִּי בְּנִי : COME NEAR NOW, and KISS me, my son. Ib. v. 28, וַיִּתֶּן-לָהּ הָאֱלֹהִים מְטַל הַשָּׁמַיִם : and MAY God GIVE (or, he shall give) thee of the dew of heaven. Ps. xxxvii. 1, : אַל-תִּתְּחַר בַּמַּרְעִים אֶל-תִּקְנֵא בְּעֹשֵׂי עוֹלָה : BE not IRRITATED at those who are evil; ENVY thou not the workers of iniquity. Gen. xxiv. 60, הֲיִי לְאַלְפֵי רֶבְבָה : BECOME thou (i. e. thou shalt be) thousands of myriads, and LET thy seed POSSESS the gate of those who hate them. See also Gen. xii. 2, xx. 7, xlv. 18; Deut. xxxii. 50; Is. xlvii. 1; Ps. xxxvii. 27, xlv. 4, 5 : also Ps. lxix. from v. 7 to the end, explained by St. Paul, Rom. xi. 9, &c., as prophetic. So also Ps. cix. compared with Acts i. 20; Ps. lxxix. 6—12. See Glassius, Lib. i., Tract iv., § i.,

شدي if to-day you (by any chance) shew mercy to mankind, to-morrow you HAVE RECEIVED mercy, i. e. CERTAINLY SHALL RECEIVE it. See Pers. Gram., vol. ii. p. 322, &c. That is to say, the present tense appears to be chosen when contingency is intended to be intimated, the preterite when it is not. The one therefore is a less forcible form of expression than the other. It is, however, my intention shortly to treat this matter more at length in a tract devoted to this and similar questions.

Remarks.

240. The preceding rules seem to be governed by two general principles. One, in which the Writer, setting out from the period in which he commences his narrative, follows the different circumstances of it, as if himself and his reader were present, and hence dates the tenses of his verbs from the different periods in which he thus places himself; still however reserving the right of returning to his original position whenever he pleases.

2. By the other principle, events which it is believed will certainly take place, are represented as having already come to pass: and thence preterites are used as Imperatives for the greater emphasis. Nothing surely can be more natural than the adoption of such principles. And, when we consider the great degree of precision, which their application must communicate to the context, we shall be induced to believe, that the poverty and uncertainty, of which it has been fashionable to accuse the Hebrew language, has rather arisen out of our own ignorance, than from any defect inherent in its construction. We do not mean to affirm, however, that we can always say, why one mode of enunciation is preferred to another, when, as far as we can see, either would have suited the character of the context: nor can we in the Greek and Latin, notwithstanding all that has been said in their favour. In many cases the parallelism may have had some influence, in others attraction; but, upon the whole, I believe we can generally give as good an account of the use of the tenses in the Hebrew, as can be given in either the Greek, Latin, or any other language.

LECTURE XVIII.

ON THE NATURE AND CONSTRUCTION OF THE PARTICLES, AND ON THE ADVERBS.

241. It has been seen (Art. 222.), that adverbs are nothing more than words added for the purpose of qualifying the signification of verbs generally; we now come to consider some of those cases, which are not of the most common occurrence, and which may otherwise present some difficulties to the Learner.

2. Adverbs in immediate connection with verbs may be considered as absolute (Art. 220. 2.), or, as added for the purpose of specification (Art. 219. note): those in mediate connection, as in the definite state of construction with the preceding word or particle; which word or particle may nevertheless be absolute with respect to the verb. General examples are given, Art. 222. The following are some in which we have attributives singular and plural, pronouns, and particles, thus construed: תִּרְדּוּ בְּלָאִים she descends, WONDERS! i. e. wonderfully, Lam. i. 9; מִיִּשְׂרָיִם תִּשְׁפֹּטוּ RIGHT THINGS judge ye, i. e. righteously, Ps. lviii. 2; נִרְאֹת נִבְלִיתִי (in) DREADFUL THINGS I have become wonderful, i. e. I have become exceedingly wonderful, Ps. cxxxix. 14; וְתֹרֶךְ נִרְאֹת יְמִינֶךָ and thy right hand shall shew thee (to be) WONDERS, i. e. very wonderful. Ps. xlv. 5. Comp. Is. ix. 5. and the Septuagint.

3. It will immediately be seen, that these instances may all be construed by one or other of the rules already given. So also with pronouns: בְּזֶה in this (place), for here; פִּזָּה, פִּזָּה, and פִּזָּאת like this, for thus; לָמָה,* or לָמָה for what, why? בְּאַשֶּׁר in that which, i. e. place or time, as the context shall require; or אֲשֶׁר absolutely, for where, when? or since, because, &c.

4. Negative particles ought to be considered as affecting the action, &c. of the verb either expressed or understood, not as negating the substance implied by the noun; † e. g. עַם לֹא-עָז a people, NOT strong, Prov.

* The particles ב and ל are occasionally equivalent to the εἰς of the New Testament, signifying for the purpose of, in order to, &c., as, Ps. xxix. 4, בְּכֹחַ εἰς δύναμιν; powerful, effective, ib. בְּהִדְרָר in ordinem, producing order.

† Such expressions as, there is no man, no place, nothing, &c. would be considered as monstrous by an Oriental, whom it would be extremely difficult to persuade that we were not affirming both the existence and non-existence of the same thing at the same time. They would say, there is not a man, &c., which is certainly more natural and intelligible. See Art. 218. 2. note.

The Arabs make their adverbs by an indefinite attributive put absolutely, or in immediate, or mediate, apposition with the word intended to be qualified, which may be either the subject or the object of the verb: e. g.

ضربت زيدا مشدودا ولقيت زيدا راكبا Zaid came to me, RIDING; ضربت زيدا راكبا

عمرًا راكبين I struck Zaid VIOLENTLY, and I met Omur, BOTH RIDING. In these cases the adverbs are put in what is termed the accusative case, where the connection seems to be mediate, i. e. in which some intervening word is to be understood. In the following, they are in the nominative, and there the connection is manifestly immediate. زيد و غلامه راكب Zaid came to me, and his servant (was) RIDING. The reason given for the first of these examples by the author

ومثال ما كان عاملها معني الفعل نحو هذا زيد قائما فان معناه انبه

وأشير. The examples, in which the signification of a verb was the governing principle, as in "this Zaid (is) standing," require a verb to be understood:

thus, "I intend, I point out."—His meaning is this: "as to this Zaid, I men-

xxx. 25 ; לֹא-כֵן עָשׂוּ* NOT so (or, according to Schroederus, right) have they done, Jer. xlvi. 30 ; נָתַתִּי לָהֶם I ascribed to them, i. e. declared that they were subject to; statutes (which are) NOT GOOD, (p. 109. note.) Ezek. xx. 25. So, תָּהוּ לֹא-דֶרֶךְ EMPTINESS (want of culture, in which there is) not a way, Ps. cvii. 40 ; לֹא אֹר לֹא NOT giving light, Amos v. 20 ; לֹא שֵׁם לוֹ (there is) NOT a name to him, i. e. he is nameless ; לֹא-אִישׁ (who is) NOT an eminent man, לֹא-אָדָם (who is) NOT a mean man, Is. xxxi. 8 ; אֶמְרֵתִי לְלֹא-עַמִּי I will say to (her who is) NOT my people, Hos. ii. 25 ; הַשְׂמֵתִים לְלֹא דְבָר those who rejoice in (that which is) NOT a matter, i. e. in a non-reality, Amos vi. 13, &c. In many cases, too, לֹא may be construed as a noun put in the definite state of construction with the following word, intimating the want, defect, or the like, of the thing mentioned.

5. In the particle אֵין this is still more apparent ; for it takes the vowels necessary for the state of construction† (Art. 143. 6.) : e. g. אֵין מוֹשִׁיעַ WANT, LACK, of a saviour, Deut. xxii. 27 ; לְחַנָּה אֵין יְלָדִים to Hannah (was) A WANT

tion him as standing." By this he means to shew why the accusative case is used in such places. Mr. de Sacy gives a different account of this construction, see vol. ii. Art. 630 ; where he considers أَكْبَأَ, as intended to point out a sort of logical objective case to the verb جَاءَ. For my own part, I would prefer considering this termination as the fragment of some word formerly used as a postposition, and therefore, as equivalent to the preposition بِ, see note, p. 291, and to be translated thus : Zaid came to me (IN the situation of) a person riding.

* פָּוֶן establish, &c. Hence פָּוֶן ; and Art. 73. פָּוֶן establishing, right, just, &c.

of children, 1 Sam. i. 2; אִינְנִי שָׁמַע A WANT of me hearing, i. e. I hear not, Jer. xiv. 12; so יֵשׁ אָדָם the BEING, EXISTING, of a man, i. e. there is a man, Eccl. ii. 21; יֵשׁ צְדִיקִים THE EXISTENCE of just men, i. e. there are just men, Eccl. viii. 14; אִם-יִשְׁנוּ בְּאֶרֶץ putting the case that HIS EXISTENCE (be) in the land, i. e. if he be, &c., 1 Sam. xxiii. 23.

6. When any of these particles follow the word to be qualified, they will be absolute: e. g. כִּי-עָתָה הָיִיתֶם לֹא for now ye have become (of) NOTHING, Job vi. 21; מִיַּם אֵין water (is) NOT; יֵשׁ מְסֻבּוֹת provision, BEING, i. e. there is provision, Jud. xix. 19.

7. Similar to לֹא and אֵין is the construction and force of אָפֵס* terminating, expiring; hence, defect, non-existence, &c.: e. g. אָפֵס אֱלֹהִים NOT a God, or, no God, Isa. xlv. 14; אֲנִי וְאֶפְסִי עוֹד I am, and EXCEPTING ME, still (is none), Zeph. ii. 15.

8. The following are examples of similar construction with the particles: עוֹד† returning, reiteration, yet, still, &c.; הִן see, behold; אַל defect, want, not; כִּי marking, observing, inferring, whether, that, &c.; מִן, or מִ, cutting off, separating, from, than, &c.; בְּלִי and בְּלִתִּי growing old, decaying, lack, non-existence; טָרַם cutting off, defect, want, not yet, &c. with or without other particles, &c.; עוֹדךָ מְחַזֵּק THY CONTINUING a retainer, or holder, i. e. thou still retainest, Job ii. 9; בְּעוֹדִי in (being) YET full day, Jer. xv. 9; מִבְּעוֹדִי in MY STILL being, Ps. cxlvi. 2; מִמְּעוֹדִי from, or, since MY STILL existing, i. e. since my birth, Gen. xlviii. 15; אֲבָרְחָם

* See also Art. 171. 2. 3.

עֹדְנוּ עִמָּד * Abraham, HIS CONTINUING a stander, i. e. he still stood, Gen. xviii. 22; הִנֵּהוּ עֹשֶׂה BEHOLD HIM, a doer, i. e. he does, Jer. xviii. 3; מֵאֵין כְּמוֹךָ FROM (there) NOT BEING (any) like thee, Jer. x. 7; שְׁבַעְתָּ קָלוֹן מִכְבוֹד thou art filled (with) ignominy, WANTING (being destitute of) glory, reputation, Hab. ii. 16.

9. To this kind of construction may be referred all those passages which are generally translated by a word in the comparative degree with than following it: e. g. Prov. viii. 10, קָחוּ מוֹסְרֵי וְאַל-כִּפְסֹף וְדַעַת מִחֶרֶץ גְּבָחַר accept my castigation, and NOT, i. e. rather than, silver: and knowledge, NOT, i. e. rather than, choice gold: i. e. put silver and gold out of the question, when these things are proposed, as unworthy of being compared with them. The negative particle occurring here, in the first member of the parallelism, is sufficient to determine in what sense that in the second is to be taken. Of this sort of expression is, "If any man come to me, and hate not his father and mother," &c. Luke xiv. 26, John xii. 25, &c. where this hatred, or rather disregard, is not spoken of as absolute, but relative, i. e. the comparison is here, as in the case of oaths, (Art. 242. 8.) strong and positive, though not necessarily absolute.

10. So with other negative particles, לֹא-אַתֶּם שְׁלַחְתֶּם אֹתִי הֵנָּה you sent me not hither, BUT God, Gen. xlv. 8, i. e. it is NOT you, but rather God, &c. See Exod. xvi. 8, 1 Sam. viii. 7, Jer. vii. 22. 23, Hos. i. 9, vi. 6, Ps. li. 18, Eccl. iv. 9, and Matt. xxiii. 23, Luke x. 20, xiv. 12. 14, 1 Pet. iii. 6. See Storr, p. 251, &c.

Examples of בְּלִי, &c. : עַד-בְּלִי יָרַח until the DECAY of the moon, i. e. as long as it shall endure, Ps. lxxii. 7; עַד-בְּלִתֵּי שָׁמַיִם until THE DEFECT of the heavens, i. e. as long as they shall last, Job xiv. 12; מִבְּלֵי הַשָּׁאֵר-לוֹ כֹּל

* In the case of the Epenthetic ׀ being added to this particle, as well as to some others, the relation of a subsequent member of a sentence seems to be occasionally pointed out as in Art. 235. 3. with some emphasis. Examine the instances of this and אֵינֶכֶּנִי, &c. in Noldius.

from THE NOT leaving to him every thing, i. e. any thing, Deut. xxviii. 55 ; לְבִלְתִּי שׁוּב for the LACK of returning, i. e. the not returning, Ezek. xiii. 22 ; מִמְּבִלְתִּי יִכְלֹת from the WANT of power, Num. xiv. 16 ; לְבִלְתִּי תַחַטָּאוּ for CESSATION of your sinning, i. e. that you should not sin, Exod. xx. 20 ; הֲמִבְּלִי אֵין־קְבָרִים is it from the WANT of graves? Exod. xiv. 11 ; בְּטָר־לֹא יָבוֹא in its NOT YET coming, Zeph. ii. 2.

11. The following are examples of prepositions in immediate connection with the word to be qualified, restricted, &c. : מִן־הֵם הַיֹּשְׁבִים שָׁם לְפָנַי OF HAM (were) the dwellers there of former (times), 1 Chron. iv. 40 ; כְּקוֹל מַיִם רַבִּים לִיכֹל לִיכֹל לִיכֹל LIKE the sound of many waters, Ezek. i. 24 ; כְּפִשִׁי בְּאַרְצ־עֵפָה לָּךְ my soul (is) like a parched land (with respect) TO thee, Ps. cxliii. 6.

In these, and all similar cases, it will be of no consequence whether we suppose the particles to be in apposition, or in the definite state of construction, there being no mark of case in the Hebrew. The latter perhaps agrees best with the analogy ; because we have, in some of the particles, the form proper for that state, as in אֶל־יָמֵי קְבֹרָה TO the grave, Job v. 26 ; עַל־יִשׁוּר OVER the wall, Gen. xlix. 22 ; אַחֲרֵי מֹשֶׁה after Moses, Exod. xxxiii. 8 ; and in the Arabic always, as, <sup>علي</sup> <sup>المسجد</sup> i. e. THE UPPER (part) of the mosque, for OVER the mosque. See Art. 171. 3. &c.

12. Examples of mediate construction, i. e. when one or more other particles intervene : לְמַעַן לְמוֹג לֵב...נָתַתִּי לְבִלְתִּי אֶבְחַת־הָרֶב FOR THE PURPOSE OF melting (the) heart . . . have I appointed the chastisement of the sword, Ezek. xxi. 20 ; בָּא עַד־אֵלֵיהֶם he came UP TO them, i. e. even to them, 2 Kings ix. 20 ; לְבַד מִטָּף for each, EXCLUDING infants, i. e. with respect to the men, excluding the children, or, beside the children, Exod. xii. 37 ; מִחוּץ לְחוֹמָה from without (with respect) TO the wall, Jer. xxi. 4.

13. The intervening particles most in use are, ל and מ, which seem to be added for the purpose of marking the word to which the preceding one has some relation, and also to point out the nature of that relation, e. g. תַּחַת לְרֵאשִׁי beneath (with reference) to my head, i. e. under my head, Cant. ii. 6; חוּצָה לְעִיר outwards (with reference) to the city, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 15; אֶל-מִבֵּית לְפָרֶכֶת to (that which is) FROM within (with respect) to the veil, Lev. xvi. 15; אֲרַח חַיִּים לְמַעַלָּה לְמַשְׁכֵּל לְמַעַן סוּר מִשְׂאוֹל מָטָה the way of life, or, religious instruction (is) FOR the elevating of the understanding (person,) FOR the purpose of receding from the grave beneath, Prov. xv. 24; הִשְׁכַּתָּ לְמַטָּה מִעֲוֹנוֹי thou hast refrained (with reference) to bringing down (degrading) ON ACCOUNT OF our sins, Ezra ix. 13.

Of this kind are the combinations עַד לְמֵאד 2 Chron. xvi. 14; עַד לְמַעַלָּה Ib. xvii. 12; עַד לְאֵין מִרְפָּא Ib. xxxvi. 16, &c.

So, אֲשֶׁר בַּשָּׁמַיִם מִמַּעַל וְאֲשֶׁר בָּאָרֶץ מִתַּחַת וְאֲשֶׁר בַּמַּיִם וְאֲשֶׁר בַּיָּם which (is) in the heavens from above, and which (is) in the earth from beneath, and which (is) in the waters from beneath (with respect) to the earth, Exod. xx. 4.

The phrases here used, from above and from beneath, must necessarily be taken relatively: in the first instance above, with respect to the earth; in the second, by ל beneath, with respect to the heavens, and in the third, beneath, or low, with reference to the earth, which is expressed by ל: i. e. Thou shalt make no image of the heavenly bodies which are above, nor of the creatures &c. which are on the earth beneath; nor of those which are in the waters that are still lower than the earth: not, which are “in the waters under the earth,” &c. Hence will be seen the great necessity there is of observing, to what words these particles have an immediate reference; and hence, that we should not take them absolutely, as we often do in our own and other languages.

14. When the preposition בֵּין between, is used for the purpose of opposing one noun to another but is not repeated, it has this peculiarity, that it requires the insertion of ל before the latter: e. g. בֵּין מַיִם לְמַיִם between waters (as opposed) to waters, Gen. i. 6; בֵּין-דִּין לְדִין between cause (as opposed) to cause, i. e. between cause and cause, Deut. xvii. 8. If however this particle is repeated, its influence is immediate: e. g. בֵּין הָאוֹר וּבֵין הַחֹשֶׁךְ BETWEEN the light, and BETWEEN the darkness, Gen. i. 4.

15. From what has been said on the primitive and derived significations of words (Art. 144.), it will be easy to conceive how cases may occur, in which it will be exceedingly difficult to ascertain the precise force of these particles; and consequently, the relation between words which they are intended to point out and define. Generally, however, either the primitive, or one or other of the derived, senses of the particle, considered in conjunction with the context, will afford us sufficient light. But here Noldius should be consulted.

16. The following instances, taken from Glassius, are intended to shew how these particles influence certain modes of expression; * יָלְכוּ מִחַיִל אֶל-חַיִל they proceed FROM strength TO strength, i. e. they become stronger and stronger, Ps. lxxxiv. 8; כִּי מִרָעָה אֶל-רָעָה יֵצְאוּ for they go FROM evil to evil, i. e. they become worse and worse, Jer. ix. 2.

For similar expressions in the Greek Testament, see Rom. i. 17, vi. 19, 2 Cor. iii. 18, Phil. ii. 27, &c.

17. Of the particles which signify motion towards,†

* So in the Arabic من ناحية الى ناحية from part to part, i. e. proceeding on. Tale of Sindbad, Ed. Langlés, p. 1., &c. So also χάριτι ἀντὶ χάριτος, grace for grace, i. e. an increase or excess of grace, far surpassing that of the Law of Moses, John i. 16.

† In this respect the postposition ל, the prepositions אֶל, עַל, עַד, and בְּ, are found to have the same, or very nearly the same, force. From the construction and sense in which this particle is found, there is good reason for supposing, that it is the same with أ which is said to mark the Arabic accusative; and it is probably derived from the same root. No one I think can read הִשְׁלִיכֵהוּ אֶרֶצָה cast it to the earth, Exod. iv. 3, and إِطْرَحُوهُ أَرْضًا &c. Surat of Joseph, without being struck with the identity of the expression in each case, especially when we know that the nasal of the Arabic is disregarded in common conversation. In this case too, we have no intervening particle; yet, in other cases, we find each of these verbs construed also with בְּ, אֶל, ל, עַל, מִן, as may be seen in Castell; and the conclusion must be, that the particle prefixed in the one case, must be equivalent to the ל post-fixed in the other.

even as I have seen thee in the sanctuary, (being now) in a land of drouth and weakness (and) without water, Ps. lxxviii. 19; עֲלִיתָ לְפָרוֹם שְׁבִיתָ שְׁבִי לְקַחַת מִתְּנוֹת בְּאָדָם וְאִף כּוֹרְרִים לְשֹׁפֵן יְהוָה : יְיָ אֱלֹהִים : thou, O Lord God, hast ascended up on high (there) to dwell; thou hast taken captivity captive (i. e. hast overcome the great enemy and subduer of man); thou hast received gifts for man (i. e. mankind), nay even (for) the rebellious ones.

Instances of this sort are numerous in the Psalms, book of Job, and in the Prophets, in all of which we should be careful to bring those parts together, the constructions of which are homogeneous. When this is done we shall find, that the significations and constructions of the particles are neither so numerous nor so various as commentators have made them.

LECTURE XIX.

ON THE NATURE AND USE OF THE CONJUNCTIONS.

242. Words standing in the situation of conjunctions in the Hebrew, are subject to the laws of apposition and definite construction, just as other words are. In many instances, indeed, they are the very words which, at other times, are used as pronouns, adverbs, or prepositions; the situation alone in which they are found, giving them the character of conjunctions. A few such as ו, ׀, &c.* are used only as conjunctions.

* The first of these seems to be derived from וְ a hook, connector, &c. and consequently, to signify, in addition, besides, and, &c. The second is probably from the word מְרַבֵּץ multiplying, becoming abundant, or the like, and equivalent to our moreover, much more, &c. See Storr, p. 337.

NOT departed. Here מִבֵּית is evidently in the definite state of construction with בְּלִיתִי, to which סָרָה is added as a verb; and, as it is contrary to the genius of every Oriental language to negative the noun, the force of this negative combination must eventually influence the verb thus, “a stroke without having passed away,” i. e. continual. So we say in English, in-finite, never-ending, and the like, when we wish to express the indefinite continuity of any thing. In like manner: Deut. viii. 20, עָקַב לֹא תִשְׁמָעוּן BECAUSE (that) you will NOT hear; or, of your not hearing; taking לֹא as a noun signifying deficiency, lack, want, or the like. See also Gen. xxii. 16, xxvii. 5, xxxviii. 11, Num. xi. 20, 1 Kings xxii. 42, Ps. cxix. 136. And more particularly with Infinitives or verbal nouns, Num. xiv. 16, Judg. vi. 18, Is. xlvi. 4, lx. 15, 2 Chron. xxviii. 6.

4. It is not meant to be affirmed, however, that this sort of construction is universally adhered to. The truth is, it is very much left to the writer either to express himself thus, or to employ a greater number of words; and what is most remarkable, we sometimes find both methods adopted in the same context: e. g. עַד אֲשֶׁר-תָּשׁוּב חֲמַת אָחִיךָ : עַד שׁוּב אֲחֵי-אָחִיךָ מִמָּוֶד וְשָׁכַח עַד &c. UNTIL THAT (time in) WHICH the heat of thy brother shall turn away: UNTIL THE TURNING AWAY of thy brother's anger from thee: AND (until) HE HAVE FORGOTTEN, &c. Gen. xxvii. 44—5; על־ . . . עַל שְׁלֵשָׁה ON ACCOUNT OF three . . . ON ACCOUNT of their despising the law of Jehovah, AND (on the account that) they have not kept his statutes, Amos ii. 4.—See also 1 Sam. iv. 19, 1 Kings xviii. 18, Is. x. 2, xxx. 12, xxxvii. 29, Jer. vii. 13. So the word לְמָוֶת not yet, is found twice in Zeph. ii. 2, with לֹא, —לֹא בְּמָוֶת לֹא.

5. It is the opinion of Schröderus (R. 105.), that לֵבֵן lest, and אִם if, surely, &c. imply an ellipsis of some other word or words: as, לֵבֵן תִּקְחָה (I will take care) lest thou take away, &c., Gen. xxxi. 31. I can see no necessity for this. The real meaning of the word לֵבֵן is, seeing, observing, or the like, from the root בָּנָה; and if so, the passage may be rendered thus: I feared, for I said, SEEING THOU (mightest) TAKE AWAY, &c. So in the other passage cited, viz. 2 Kings ii. 16, רִיחַ יְהוָה רִיחַ יְהוָה לֵבֵן נִשְׂאוֹ רִיחַ יְהוָה SEEING (that) the Spirit of Jehovah (might) HAVE TAKEN HIM UP. So also with respect to the particle אִם: 2 Sam. xi. 11, וְחַי נַפְשְׁךָ אִם תִּיָּד וְחַי נַפְשְׁךָ אִם תִּיָּד אִם תִּיָּד אִם תִּיָּד (as) thy life and the life of thy soul (exists, so) SURELY shall I do this thing? And again, Gen. xxiv. 37, 38,

 swore me, saying, Take not a wife for my son from the daughters of the Canaanite, in whose land I dwell: SURELY not. Go thou to my father's house, &c. And at v. 41, אַף הַנִּקָּחָה מֵאִלְתֵּי בֵּי תְבוּאָה
 אֶל־מִשְׁפַּחְתִּי וְאִם לֹא יִהְיֶה לָּךְ וְהָיִיתָ נָקִי מֵאִלְתֵּי
 אֲפָ then shalt thou be free from my oath (i. e.), when thou shalt come to my kindred, and (upon the condition that,—putting the matter on this issue) they will SURELY NOT give her to thee, then shalt thou be free from my oath,
 i. e. from the oath which I made thee swear.

6. There is perhaps no real ellipsis in any one of the passages in which this particle is found. This, however, will depend very much on the signification which we attach to it, and on the nature of the construction in which it is found; both of which we shall now endeavour to explain.

7. If we derive this particle from אָמֵן firm, steady, permanent, and hence, sure, surely, true, trust-worthy, faithful, and the like, and suppose it to be of the primitive form אָמֵן (see Art. 151.), which will make the elision of the ך necessary (Art. 76.), then we shall have אִם meaning, surely, truly, certainly, &c. which is perhaps its real force in every instance.

8. We have seen (Art. 237, note), that in hypothetical sentences, enunciations are generally made as of facts, not as of opinions. If then we propose the certainty of one fact, with some strong asseveration in one member of a sentence, and compare another with it as equally certain of occurrence in another, we shall do nothing more than what is always done in oaths in the Hebrew, when this word is employed in one of the members. In some cases these constructions will imply a negation, and hence this particle has been often so interpreted.* There is a passage, viz. Ruth iii. 12, which seems to confirm the etymology just given: וְעַתָּה כִּי אֲמַנֶּם כִּי אִם גֹּאֵל: אֲנִיְכִי and now that (it is) true: for TRULY, SURELY, I am a Goel, or near kinsman. This word has been rejected by the Masorets in this passage, but without any good reason for doing so. In this place, and perhaps in most others, the words אִם and אֲמַנֶּם may be substituted the one for the other, and the sense will remain perfectly the same: e. g. Job xix. 5, וְאֵף-אֲמַנֶּם לְשִׁגְיֹתַי אִתִּי תָלִין מְשׁוּגָתַי, and even (let it be) TRUE, SURE, (that) I have erred, with myself lodges my error. So Is. iv. 4, 5, וּבָרָא יְהוָה . . . &c. . . . אִם רָחֵץ אֲדָנִי, TRULY the Lord shall wash . . . then shall Jehovah certainly create, &c. And in Job xix. 5, 6, we have both these particles occurring together, either for the purpose of strengthening the asseveration, or for qualifying both the prodoxis and apodosis found in the context: e. g. אִם-אֲמַנֶּם עָלַי תִּמְדִּילוּ וְתוֹכִיחוּ עָלַי הִרְפָּתִי : דְּעִי-יִמְנֵן אִפּוֹ כִּי-יִלְלוּ עִירְתָנִי &c. SURELY, ye TRULY, OR CONSTANTLY, magnify yourselves, or speak great things against me, and contend against me (to) my reproach; (so) know ye now, that God hath bent me (down), &c.

9. The following example seems to involve a negation: אִם-יִחְיֶה פַרְעֹה אִם-יִתְצַח מִיָּדָה כִּי אִם-יִבְּרָא אֶחֱיִיכֶם &c. (as) the life of Pharaoh (exists), (so) TRULY shall ye go forth hence, but ESPECIALLY, TRULY, REALLY, upon the coming in of your brother, Gen. xlii. 15. That is, as certainly as the one thing exists, the other being made to appear equally so, no less certain shall your liberation be: but not before this condition is complied with. On this principle, I think, every instance in which this particle occurs can be solved. That it is redundant, or that it has been omitted by the to Mr. de Sacy, this particle is negative when the verb preceding it implies negation. Gram. Arab., vol. ii., Art. 667. In the examples following, however, in which he has treated it as a pleonasm, he has entirely mistaken its force, especially as he himself has cited the Arabians in Art. 671, giving it the title of <sup>5</sup>توكيد or corroboration. In every instance given by him, certainly, surely, most certainly, or the like, will supply the sense of the passage. See Art. 651—2. 668: i. e. putting the case either positively, or negatively, some consequence will, or will not, certainly come to pass; which is a kind of swearing. But more on this subject in a tract which I intend shortly to publish.

ellipsis, as affirmed by Noldius, p. 69, &c. I deny: because every passage adduced by him can be accounted for, without having recourse to those suppositions.

10. From what has been said on the use and signification of some of these words, it will be easy to conceive how they may be used, either in their simple or compound state, for the purpose of connecting together such parts of a discourse, as the speaker or writer may wish should be considered in connection with one another: e. g. בָּרָא אֶת הַשָּׁמַיִם וְאֶת הָאָרֶץ he created the heavens AND the earth, Gen. i. 1. So in the next verse: וְהָאָרֶץ הִיְתָה תְּהוֹ וְבָהוּ AND (as to) the earth, it was emptiness AND a vacuity, &c. in which these particles are said to be Copulative; in others they are said to be Disjunctive (better, Distinctive), Conditional, Causal, or Conclusive, according to the signification of the passage in which they are found. The following are a few examples of each case.

Examples of Copulative Conjunctions.

11. טוֹב אֲשֶׁר-יִכֶּה לֶאֱכֹל וְלִשְׁתּוֹת it is a good, THAT one becomingly eat and drink, &c. Eccl. v. 17; וְהוּא אֲדָמוּנִי עִינָיָה עֵינַיִם and he was ruddy WITH (being) beautiful of eyes, 1 Sam. xvi. 12; וַיִּתְּנֵהוּ לְדָוִד וְעַד חַרְבּוֹ AND he gave it to David, EVEN his garments AND EVEN TO his sword, &c. Ib. xviii. 4.

See also Gen. vii. 23. In many cases there is an apparent excess in the use of the copulative conjunctions, which has been termed by the Grammarians πολυσύνθετον, see Gen. xxv. 34, xliii. 8, Jos. vii. 11, 2 Kings ii. 14, Ps. cvii. 37, &c. and in the New Testament, John x. 27, 28, 1 Cor. xiii. 1, 2, 3, &c. perhaps to excite attention only. See Art. 222. 7.

12. In other instances they are omitted, for the purpose of exhibiting the order of events, &c. the more closely or rapidly in succession, as in the Latin, "Veni, vidi, vici," &c. See Exod. xv. 9, Judg. v. 27, 1 Sam. xv. 6, &c. This has been termed ἀσύνθετον.

By the former of these distribution is sometimes intended; as, וַיָּבֵינָה וַיָּאִיָּה both Aiya and Ana, Gen. xxxvi. 24; וְרֶכֶב וָסוּס both chariot and horse, Ps. lxxvi. 7, &c. See Art. 216. 17, 18.

13. Examples of Disjunctive (i. e. Distinctive or Distributive) Conjunctions; *וְנָתַן אֵלֶיךָ אֹת* אוֹ מוֹפֵת* and he shall give thee a sign OR a wonder, Deut. xiii. 2; אוֹ הַקְּבִיָּא אוֹ-כֹהֵן EITHER the prophet OR a priest, Jer. xxiii. 33.

This particle, however, is often construed as conjunctive, adversative, or, conditional. See Noldius sub voce, and Glass. Phil. Sacr., p. 524, &c. where similar usages are collected from the New Testament. It is also occasionally omitted by the ellipsis. See 1 Sam. xx. 12, 2 Kings ix. 32, Is. xvii. 6, Ib. xxxviii. 14, Jer. xi. 19, &c. See Noldius, p. 4.

Examples of Conditional, Causal, and Conclusive, Conjunctions.

14. אִיִּלִּי יֵשׁ הַמַּשִּׁים צְדִיקִים . . . . הַאֵף תִּסְפָּח SHOULD there be fifty righteous . . . . wilt thou also destroy, &c.? Gen. xviii. 24; אִם-תֵּלֶכְנִי עִמִּי וְהִלַּכְתִּי IF (OR TRULY) thou go with me, then I will surely go, Jud. iv. 8. But here the cases are put as positive, Art. 242. 8. Under this head may also be arranged the particles אִם and אִם-לֹא of asseveration and swearing, &c. See No. 5, &c. above.

15. The Causals are for the most part, עַל-כֵּן, כִּי אִם, כִּי, עַקֵּב אֲשֶׁר, עַקֵּב, תַּחַת אֲשֶׁר, תַּחַת, לְמַעַן אֲשֶׁר, לְמַעַן, לְכֵן, לְכֵן, עַקֵּב אֲשֶׁר, יַעַן כִּי, יַעַן אֲשֶׁר, for, whereupon, therefore, because, under or upon (the consideration that), &c.; כִּי לֹא אָבוֹא &c. that I may not come, &c., 1 Sam. xxix. 8; עַל-כֵּן אֶחָיִל

therefore I hope, Lam. iii. 21 ; לְמַעַן שְׂמֹךְ because of thy name, 1 Kings viii. 41, &c.

It would be endless to give examples of every case ; we must therefore refer the Reader to Noldius and Glassius as before.

16. Of the Conclusive conjunctions it will be unnecessary to say any thing. Those which are used as Causals in one place, may be employed as Conclusive in another ; the position and context being the only means by which the peculiar character and bearing of these words can be ascertained.

Of the Interjections.

243. These are words either insignificant as to their etymology ; as, הוּ הוּ oh oh! הוּי O! הָאָח ahah! אוי alas! אָהָה alas! or, significant : as, נָא* up! לָךְ, לָכֵה, לָכוּ, go to! הָבֵה give! הָלִילָה profane! And, according to Schröderus, אֲשֶׁרִי blessings! Ps. i. 1, 1 Kings x. 8, Prov. xxix. 18, &c., which will be pronounced in a manner expressive of intreaty, aversion, pleasure, pain, excitation, &c. according to the intention of the Speaker. Examples : יֹאמְרוּ הוּ-הוּ they shall say, OH! OH! ## LECTURE XX.

ON THE COMPOSITION OF SENTENCES AS POINTED OUT BY THE INFLUENCE OF THE ACCENTS.

244. After what has been said on the composition of incomplex and simple propositions (Art. 212.), in addition to what has been stated and exemplified on the concordance and government of words, it cannot be necessary to exemplify our rules by adducing and accounting for complex and compound propositions, as they occur in this language. We shall, therefore, now shew in what way this has been done by the authors of the accents.

On the Distinctive Powers of the Tonic Accents.

245. It has already been remarked (Artt. 58. 59.), that these accents have been supposed to have the property of dividing sentences into their several members, just as our comma, semicolon, colon, and period, do. Nothing can be more likely, than that the Masorets, or, whoever else they were who affixed the vowel points to the Hebrew text, would apply some system to it, whereby the mutual dependence of its several parts upon one another would also be pointed out. It has been shewn, that these accents (Artt. 60. 64.) also serve to mark the accented syllable in any word, as also that which sustains a secondary kind of accent.

2. But as they differ considerably from one another in shape and name, they may also have been intended to point out the grammatical relations of words, or of sentences, to one another. The Jews have attached certain musical notes to each of these marks, which may be seen in the Bibliotheca Rabbinnica of Bar-parties in a sort of dialogue, in which the one responded to the other, and both joined occasionally in a kind of chorus, as has been well supposed and maintained by Lowth and others, no word could, perhaps, be more suitable than this for such occasional chorus: and hence perhaps the Διαψαλμα of the Seventy, and the לְעַלְמֵינָּהּ &c. for ever, of the Chaldee. See Nold. num. 1877., as above.

tolloci (vol. iv. p. 427, &c.); or in the second volume of the Hebrew Grammar by Guarin (page 329, &c.):* but this is not to be wondered at. There has always existed a predilection for a sort of chanting in divine worship.—The Mahomedans chant their Koran, and we ourselves still continue to chant several parts of our ritual in the cathedral and collegiate churches.

3. It is not our intention to detain the Learner long on this subject: we shall merely lay down a few of the general principles which regulate the accents, with a few examples by way of illustration, referring to other Writers for further particulars.

4. In considering the nature and application of the accents, we have nothing to do with the grammatical or purely formal government of words (Art. 215. 5.). The logical import of passages is all we can now be concerned with; and this may be considered in two points of view. The first is, that which respects the construction of phrases, as of nouns in immediate or mediate apposition or construction, or of verbs with their apparent nominatives, or complementary words: in all which the connection is considered and represented, as being the closest possible. The second is, the combination of such phrases, or sentences, in the construction of periods; and in this the connection will be considered and represented, as more or less close or dependent, according to the intention of the Writer.

5. For the first of these cases, accents have been adopted, which have been termed Servants or Ministers, and which are rarely found in any other situation: for the second, two systems of accentuation are found to prevail in the Hebrew Bible: one peculiar to the Books which are generally termed Prosaic; the other to those which are said to be Poetical. The Poetical Books are, Job אִיּוֹב, Proverbs מִשְׁלֵי, and the Psalms הַתְּהִלִּים; termed by the Rabbins אֲמָר, which is a technical word, formed out of the initials of the names above mentioned. All the rest of the Books are said to be Prosaic.

6. We shall first lay down a few rules for the prosaic, and afterwards, for the poetical, books.

7. The following table gives the relative powers, and the order of consecution, of the several accents: it has been taken from a Hebrew Grammar of considerable merit, which appeared for the third time at Vienna in 1810, by one Jehuda Leb Ben Zeb. This is adapted to the prosaic Books of the Bible only, and is sufficiently correct and extensive for our present purpose. Should the Student wish to pursue this subject to a greater length, he may consult the elaborate work of Ouseel, the Biblia Accentuata of Daschelius,* or the “Doctrina Accentuationis Hebrææ” by Daniel Weimar,† which last is certainly the best work I have seen on the subject; I have, therefore, generally followed it.— See the Table of Accents (Art. 58. &c.)

† Lipsiæ, 1709.

2. The reader will find considerable difference between this table, and that given by Ouseel* in his elaborate work on the Hebrew accents. Ouseel's table is much larger, and contains several instances of the power and consecution of the accents not to be found here. Shalshéleth, שלשלח, for example, with Pésik, is placed among the subdistinctives, which does not occur at all in our table. Yerách also is among the conjunctives, of which we have not a vestige here. Záképh gādól, זקף גדול and Ségoltá סגול or סגלח, are also found among the greatest distinctives in consecution, to which several more, found in other places, may be added.

3. I have not translated the terms employed by the Hebrew Grammarian, but have used those which appeared to me the most suitable.

4. It will be perceived, that many of the words are abbreviated: as  $\acute{S}$ , for  $\acute{S}\acute{L}\acute{S}$ , which is the same with Géresh (Art. 59.), the mark for which is placed above the  $\acute{S}$ . In every other case, the form of the accent meant is placed over the initial letter of its name: as,  $\acute{r}$  Telisha Gedóla,  $\acute{r}$  Telisha Ketanna, and so of others. In one instance we have  $\acute{r}$  Zakeph gadol and Zakeph katon. The syllable id. is to shew, that the accent above is also to be used here.

5. It will be unnecessary to explain the different names given to the several classes of accents in the tables, as Emperors, Kings, &c.; every one will see, that a greater or less dependence, observed in the relation of phrases or sentences one to another, is intended to be pointed out by these titles.

6. It should also be observed, that, in the above table, the accents greatest in rank, or, in other words, which point out those phrases, &c. which have the least dependence upon others, are placed uppermost: and, that those which accompany the closing word of any sentence, or member of a sentence, are placed at the left side. Silluk סלוק, for example, ranks highest, and is placed in the left-hand column. Its office, therefore, is to close a period.

* "Tabula accentuationis," prefixed to his "Introductio in accentuationem Hebræorum prosaicam. Lugd. Batav. 1715.

7. In the next place, as these leading accents are situated at the close of a sentence, or of a member of a sentence, and are placed in the left-hand column of the table, we must look towards the right hand for those which should either immediately, or more remotely, precede them. In this point of view, therefore, Mercá מֵרְכָא, will be found to attend on, or to precede, Silluk, as its servant.

8. The second accent (proceeding downwards) in the left-hand column, is Athnákh אֲתִנָּךְ. This accent, therefore, is the next inferior to Silluk; and is usually found to close a larger member of a sentence. To the right of Athnákh we find Mūnákh מוֹנֵךְ, in the capacity of a minister or servant. Athnákh, therefore, is to be considered, as usually accompanied by Mūnákh.

9. In the same manner, proceeding downwards, and again to the right, we shall find the several accents with their attendants, which are supposed to mark the members of a sentence, each having a less dependence on one another than the preceding.

10. We have now explained the use of the two first columns containing the distinctive, and their several accompanying, accents. Let us now proceed to the other three, containing the small, greater, and greatest, distinctive accents.

11. If we can suppose a period to consist of several sentences, or members of sentences, we can also suppose that each of these will have a greater or less dependence on one another, with respect to signification. The Author, from whom our table is taken, is of opinion (and with him all other writers on this subject agree), that phrases, considerably removed from the end of a verse or period, have less dependence on those which immediately follow them, than others have on those nearer its conclusion. Hence he has supposed, that the first of these, considered in the capacity of distinctive, will have a greater dependence on those which immediately follow them, than others will, which are farther removed from the end of the period, &c. Hence, these have been termed small, the next greater, and the next or last, the greatest, distinctives. Now, most of these, considered as distinctives, will also be found in the left-hand column, their servants or attendants will be always found there also, in the next, or right-hand column, as already explained.

12. Hence it should seem, that, for the most part, every second accent, counting from the end of a period or sentence, and proceeding backwards towards its beginning, will be a distinctive one : and that, immediately to its right, will be found its attendant or servant. And this is found to be the case. In the above table, therefore, we shall have the order of the accents for a very great variety of cases. That they are not all found here, must be certain, from the consideration, that there are several accents in use not to be found in this table at all. But, as our limits will not allow us to enter fully into this subject, we have deemed our table sufficient for the present. Let us now proceed to our rules and illustrations.

247. Words in apposition or construction, either immediate or mediate, will be connected by a conjunctive accent; as, יְהוָה יְהוָה the Lord God, Gen. iii. 1; עֶבֶד אֲבְרָהָם Abraham's servant, Gen. xxiv. 33; אֶחָת מִפְּיִי־אֶלֶף one of a thousand, Job ix. 3. So אֱלֹהֵי מִקְרָב the God of him who is near, &c. Jer. xxiii. 23; עֶבֶד וְשִׁפְחָה servant and maiden, Gen. xxxii. 6; בַּדֶּרֶךְ בַּדֶּרֶךְ in way, (and) in way, i. e. in the common roads, Deut. ii. 27 . . . חֶרֶב חֶרֶב a sword (nay) a sword. . . Ezek. xxi. 14; מְאֹד מְאֹד exceedingly, exceedingly, Numb. xiv. 7; בְּיַד חֲזָקָה with a mighty hand, Exod. iii. 19.

2. The same is the case when the construction is distinctive (Art. 225.): as, נְקִי כַפַּיִם clean (of) hands, Ps. xxiv. 4; בַּר־לֵבָב pure (of) heart, Ib.*

3. The same holds good when one of the words so connected occupies the place of an adverb, or specificative (p. 288. note): אֶחָד פְּתָאֵם sudden fear, Prov. iii. 24; שְׂאוֹל מִטָּה the grave beneath, Ib. xv. 24.

4. The numerals are similarly connected with the thing numbered, as are also particles with the words with which they are to be construed. To which also may be added verbs, when repeated for the purpose of giving greater emphasis, or when succeeding one another in order to vary the sense; or, as found with, or without, the connecting particles.

5. The verb is generally connected with its apparent nominative (Art. 216.), by means of a conjunctive accent; as, בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים God created, Gen. i. 1; וַיֹּאמֶר אַבְרָם and Abram said, Ib. xv. 2.

* Makkáph is to be considered as a conjunctive accent here and elsewhere. The distinctive accent here is a compound (see p. 26.), not found in our table.

6. The word complementary of the signification of a verb (Art. 228, &c.), or its objective case, is frequently connected with it in the same way; as, עָשׂוּ מִלְחָמָה they made war, Gen. xiv. 2.

7. Also when a particle intervenes: as, הוֹלְךָ עִמָּם walking with them, Gen. xviii. 16. There are many exceptions, however, to this rule.

8. When more than two words, immediately following each other, stand in the same apparent relation to one another, those which are more immediately connected together in signification will have a conjunctive accent, the others disjunctive ones, according to the relation in which they are found with the former; as, זָהָב וְכֶסֶף וְנְחֹשֶׁת gold and silver, and (also) brass, Exod. xxv. 3. So, חֹשֶׁן וְאַפֹּדֶרֶת וְמִעֵיל a breast-plate, an ephod, and (also) a robe, Ib. xxviii. 4.

9. This holds good in members of sentences, verbs, &c. having such relations to each other; as, וְאֵת כָּל-בְּהֵמָתָם וְאֵת-כָּל-מִקְנֵיהֶם and all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their power, they spoiled, Num. xxxi. 9; לֹא-אָחֲזוּל וְלֹא-אָחָיוּם I will neither suffer, nor spare, nor have mercy, Jer. xiii. 14.

10. Also, when they are not all of the same person; as, אֲדַבְרָה וְשָׁמְעוּ וְאֵינִי וְשָׁמְעוּ Let me speak, and attest, and they shall hear, Jer. vi. 10.

11. Numerals are similarly connected; as, שִׁבְעִים וְעֶשְׂרִים וּמֵאָתַיִם seven and twenty and two hundred. See Gen. v. xi. &c.

12. In all these cases, the two first words or sentences, so occurring, are connected in accordance with the rule. In the following, the two last are, for the same reason: as, דָּגָן וְיֵינֶיךָ וְיִצְהָר corn, wine and oil, Deut. xxviii. 51; צֹאן וְעֶבְדֵי וְשִׁפְחָה flocks, and men-servants and maid-servants, Gen. xxxii. 6.

13. The same will hold good in any number of words, subject to a similar regimen; as, בְּכֶסֶף וּבְזָהָב וּבְנְחֹשֶׁת וּבְבַרְזֶל וּבְשִׁלְמוֹת with silver and with gold, and with brass and with iron, and with garments, Josh. xxii. 8.

14. When several nouns succeed one another, each in construction with the following one, the leading words in the sentence will sometimes have disjunctive accents; the former being always greater than the next in succession: or, they will be divided into pairs, according to the pleasure of the Writer, or, as the sense of the passage shall require ; פְּקֻדֹת שְׁמֵרֵי מִשְׁמֶרֶת הַקֹּדֶשׁ the superintendence of the keepers of the charge of the sanctuary, Num. iii. 32 ; אֱלֹהֵי אֲבֹרָהֶם יִצְחָק וְיַעֲקֹב the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Exod. iii. 16.

15. Nouns, or phrases, to be construed as nominatives absolute, will be distinguished from the following context by a disjunctive accent : * as, וְהָאָרֶץ הָיְתָה רְתוּלָה וְנָחֹה and (as to) the earth, it was vacancy and emptiness, Gen. i. 2 ; וְרוּחַ אֱלֹהִים מְרַחֶפֶת עַל-פְּנֵי הַמַּיִם and (as to) the Spirit of God (it was) brooding upon the face of the waters, Ib. ; וְדַמּוּת פְּנֵיהֶם פְּנֵי אָדָם and (as to) the likeness of their faces (it was as) the faces of men, Ezek. i. 10.

16. And, in the same manner, all nouns or phrases added for the purpose of qualifying, defining, or otherwise limiting others, but not so closely connected as to form phrases, &c. with them, will be marked by one or other of the disjunctive accents ; as, הוֹצֵאתִיךָ מֵאֶרֶץ מִצְרַיִם מֵבְּיַת עַבְדִּים : I brought thee forth from the land of Egypt—from the house of servants, Exod. xx. 2.

The same holds good in all parenthetical passages : as, וַיֵּצֵא מֶלֶךְ-סֹדֶם לִקְרָאתוֹ (אֲחֵרֵי שׁוּבוֹ מִהַכּוֹת אֶת-כְּדֹרְלֹאֶמֶר וְאֶת-הַמֶּלֶךְ שֹׁדֵם וְאֶת-הַמְּלָכִים אֲשֶׁר אִתּוֹ) אֶל-עַמְקֵי שָׁוֶה and the King of Sodom went out to meet him (after his return from the slaughter of Chedorlaomer, and of the kings who were with him) at the valley of Shaveh, Gen. xiv. 17. And again : וְיָשְׁבוּ בְעָרֵיכֶם וְיָמְסֻכֶם וְיִמְחַגְּכֶם (יֹדְעֵתִי כִּי-מְחַגְּגָה רַב לָכֶם) only your wives, and your little ones, and your cattle (for I know that ye have much cattle), shall abide in your cities, Deut. iii. 19. Again : וַיִּדְבְּרוּ אֵלָיו הַיְלָדִים אֲשֶׁר גָּדְלוּ אִתּוֹ לֵאמֹר כֹּה-הֵיטֵמַר לָעַם הַזֶּה (אֲשֶׁר דִּבְרֵי אֱלֹהִים לֵאמֹר אֲבִיךָ הַכְּבִיד אֶת-עַלְיָנוּ וְאִתָּה הִקַּל מֵעַלְיָנוּ) כֹּה הִדְבַּר אֱלֹהִים קִטְּנֵי אֶת-עַלְיָנוּ וְאִתָּה הִקַּל מֵעַלְיָנוּ וְאִתָּה הִקַּל מֵעַלְיָנוּ and the young men who had grown up with him, spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou speak unto this people (who have spoken unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us), thus shalt thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins, 1 Kings xii. 10. Again: וַיִּתֵּן אֱלֹהִים-מִשָּׁה (פְּכֻלְתּוֹ לְדַבֵּר אֵתוֹ בְּהַר סִינַי) שְׁנֵי לְחֹתֶת הָעֵדוּת and he gave unto Moses (when he had made an end of communing with him upon mount Sinai), the two tables of testimony, Exod. xxxi. 18.

* Hence Jarchi's comment on Ezek. i. 11, which has so frequently been cited and misunderstood, is only intended to shew that וּפְנֵיהֶם with Zakēph gadol is to be separated from the word following, thus ; וּפְנֵיהֶם וּכְנֵפֵיהֶם and (as to) their faces, even their wings were spread out above (them). His words are : היו פרודות למעלה מפניהם ומכסות אותם. They were separated upwards from their faces, and covering them.

248. When a verse consists of more propositions than one, or of several members of a sentence, the greater distinctive accent will generally be found placed at the end of that proposition, or member, which is most complete in its signification; or, if the context is sententious, at that part which marks the parallelism of the whole period. Example: : וַיֵּצֵא הָחֵטֶר מִגִּזְעֵ יֵשׁוּ וַנִּצֵּר מִשָּׂרְשָׁיו יַפְרֶה : and there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse: and a branch out of his roots shall bear fruit, Is. xi. 1.

2. Here, if we take the liberty to separate the context, according to the importance of the accents, we may write it out thus:

: וַיֵּצֵא הָחֵטֶר מִגִּזְעֵ יֵשׁוּ וַנִּצֵּר מִשָּׂרְשָׁיו יַפְרֶה :

3. The following example from Gen. i. 2, contains several propositions.

וְהָאָרֶץ הָיְתָה תֹהוֹ וָבֹהוּ
 וְחֹשֶׁךְ עַל-פְּנֵי תְהוֹם
 וְרוּחַ אֱלֹהִים מְרַחֶפֶת
 עַל-פְּנֵי תְהוֹם :

And (as to) the earth (it was) emptiness and a void :

And darkness (was) upon the face of the great deep :

And (as to) the Spirit of God, (it was) brooding

Upon the face of the waters.

The terms וְהָאָרֶץ and וְרוּחַ אֱלֹהִים, I take to be nominales absolute, and therefore, as properly divided by distinctive accents from the context following (Art. 247. 15.). It should also be observed, we have three distinct propositions in this verse: the first ending with תֹהוֹ וָבֹהוּ, having the distinctive accent Réviák; the second with תְהוֹם, having Athnák; and the third ending with Sillúk and (: ) Soph Pāsúk. Here also, as before, the accents distinctly mark the parallelism of the different members of the verse.

4. In the following passage we have four distinct propositions, Isa. i. 2.

שָׁמְעוּ שָׁמַיִם וְהָאֲרֶץ
 כִּי יְהוָה דִּבֶּר
 בְּנָדָם גִּבְלָתִי וְרוֹמְמָתִי
 וְהֵם פָּשְׁעוּ כִּי :

*Hear ye heavens, and give ear, O earth,
 For Jehovah, he hath spoken,
 (As to) children, I have brought up, and exalted (them);
 But they,—they have rebelled against me.*

5. Here the termination of every member marks the close of a distinct proposition, each of which is distinguished by a larger accent, which also serves to point out the parallelism, as before. So in the following : Isa. xlix. 4.

וְאֲנִי אֲמַרְתִּי לְרִיק וְגַעַתִּי
 לְתַהוֹ וְהִקְבַּל פְּתִי כְלִיתִי

*But I—I had said, I have laboured in vain :
 For emptiness and vanity, I have consumed my strength.*

On the Accentuation of the Metrical Books אֲמַת, i. e. Job, Proverbs, and the Psalms.

249. The accentuation which we now propose to consider commences at the third verse of the third chapter of the book of Job, and continues to the fifth of the forty-second, whence the prosaic accentuation is continued to the end. The whole book of Psalms, with that of Proverbs, is also subject to this metrical accentuation : the remaining books of the Bible are not.

2. The system of the accents, generally, is the same both in the prosaic and metrical books : that is, one set of accents will serve as disjunctives, the other as conjunctives in both, either dividing or connecting the several parts of the context, according to the interpretation of the authors of these marks. The only difference observable in its application is, that the powers peculiar to some of the accents differ, in some respects, from those just mentioned, as does also their order of consecution.

3. The distinctive accents, according to this system, are,  $\dot{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Sillák,  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Mercá with Mahpák,  $\bar{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Athnákh,  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Rëvíäh with Géresh,  $\bar{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Rëvíäh,  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Zarká,  $\bar{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Tiphkhá anterior,  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Pázér,  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Shalshéleth with Pěsí,  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Kadmá with Pěsí, and  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Mahpák with Pěsí.

4. The conjunctive or servile accents are the following:  $\bar{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Mercá,  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Mercá with Zarká,  $\bar{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Mahpák,  $\bar{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Mahpák with Zarká,  $\bar{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Mūnákh,  $\bar{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Mūnákh superior,  $\bar{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Tiphkhá, not anterior, and  $\bar{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Yérakh.

5. The distinctives are here given according to their order of precedence: the conjunctives are considered as having no such order, as before. The distinctives on which these usually attend, may be found in the tables of Ouseel and others.

6. It will be seen from the forms and titles above given, that several of these accents are mere combinations of two of those already given (See Art. 59.).

7. The accents accompanying Soph-pāsúk and Pěsí are always found on the tone-syllable.

8. Of Mercá with Mahpák  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$ . Mercá is always under the tone-syllable; Mahpák is placed on the preceding syllable, if there be any; if not, it remains on the same syllable. If, however, the preceding word be connected by Makkáph, or end in a furtive Pathakh, Mahpák may then be on its last syllable.

9. The same holds good with respect to  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Mercá with Zarká, and  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Mahpák with Zarká.

10. In the occurrence of  $\bar{\bar{\bar{}}}$  Rëvíäh with Géresh, Rëvíäh is always on the tone-syllable, and Géresh carried as nearly to the beginning of the word as possible. But when no other syllable remains, they are placed together, as  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  his name, and  $\overset{\curvearrowright}{\bar{\bar{}}}$  flee ye.

250. It will easily be conceived, that if the disjunctives here, as before, have been invested with various powers for the purpose of dividing and subdividing any given part of the Biblical context into its several members, and thereby to facilitate the discovery of its meaning, the order of consecution of these disjunctives may be exceedingly various, just as the different modes of construction would require. With the view of familiarizing the Student with the different powers of these accents, therefore, tables have been formed, first giving the order of consecution found among these disjunctives; and, lastly, of these with their several attendants.

When speaking of the prose accents, we gave a table, rather with the view of complying with custom than for any thing else. At present we shall give a few examples only, and leave it to the industry of the Student to construct such tables for himself, should he think it necessary: believing it to be quite sufficient to make him acquainted with the principles, which it is trusted the following examples, in addition to what has been said, will be sufficient to do.

2. The following is an abstract of the analysis given by Ouseel of the first verse of the first Psalm.*

עָמַד וּבְמַשְׁבַּל לְצִיּוֹם | לֹא יִשָּׁב :

3. This is to be divided, in the first place, into the two larger divisions indicated by the greater distinctive accents, which are  $\bar{\quad}$  Sillúk, and  $\acute{\quad}$  Mercá with Mahpák (Art. 249. 3.). We shall have, therefore, for the first great division:

אַשְׁרֵי הָאִישׁ אֲשֶׁר | לֹא הָלַךְ | בְּעֵצַת רְשָׁעִים | The blessings of the man, who hath not walked in the counsel of the wicked.

4. In the next place, the division to be taken, according to the importance of the accents, will be, first, אַשְׁרֵי הָאִישׁ the blessings of the man. Or, considering these two words as constituting a nominative absolute, (as to) the blessings of the man, which is universally accompanied by a larger distinctive accent (Art. 247. 15.). In the next place, the two words, viz. אַשְׁרֵי הָאִישׁ, will, on account of their close connection, be coupled by a conjunctive accent; and here we have  $\bar{\quad}$  Mūnák for that purpose (Art. 247.).

5. The next portion we must take, will be לֹא הָלַךְ | אֲשֶׁר | who hath not walked. Here we have first אֲשֶׁר | with Mahpák and Pésík, which is the least disjunctive in our table. And, according to our consecution in prose (Art. 247. 12.), when the two last of the consecutive words are more immediately connected with one another, than either is with the preceding, the former will have a smaller disjunctive accent.

6. In the next place, לֹא הָלַךְ | must be construed together (Art. 247. 4.), they are, therefore, connected by a conjunctive accent.

7. The next two words are, בְּעֵצָתָם יִשְׁעִים in the counsel of the wicked, which, from their logical character, must be construed together. They are therefore connected by the conjunctive accent Yérakh. This concludes the first division or parallel of our sentence.

8. Let us now proceed to the second.

: וּבְיַדְהֶם הַטָּאִים לֹא עָמַד וּבְמִשְׁבַּל לְצִיִּים לֹא יֹשֵׁב and in the way of sinners hath not stood; and in the habitation of scorers hath not resided.

9. The first larger division of this part of the verse will end at עָמַד, where we have the next larger distinctive accent. This may again be subdivided into two smaller ones, the former of which will end at הַטָּאִים, having the distinctive accent  $\bar{\text{—}}$  Tiphkhhá anterior.

10. In this smaller division, viz. וּבְיַדְהֶם הַטָּאִים, we have two words in construction; and this is marked by the conjunctive accent  $\bar{\text{—}}$  Múnákh.

11. The next phrase, לֹא עָמַד is connected in the same way, and for the same reason.

12. Our next subdivision will be וּבְמִשְׁבַּל לְצִיִּים. Here we have Révááh with Géresh for a distinctive, and Mercá for its preceding conjunctive, accent.

13. In the last place, לֹא יֹשֵׁב will be connected by the conjunctive accent  $\bar{\text{—}}$  Múnákh; and Sillúk with Soph-pasúk will close the period.

14. We do not think it necessary to pursue this subject farther: enough has been said to point out the general doctrine respecting the accents, and this is all we proposed to do. With regard to the formulæ usually given, shewing the consecution of the accents, it may be remarked, that generally speaking they are sufficient to point out the way in which this subject is taught; but, when we come to particulars, are very inadequate. Even in the few examples here given, our own tables fail: and the truth seems to be, that, as the forms of composition may be exceedingly numerous, so may those of the consecution of the accents.
