INTRODUCTION.

More than twenty-five years ago, Mr. Joseph Dodgson, of Leeds, issued a circular notifying his intention to publish a small folio volume with the title, "HERALDRY OF YORKSHIRE," to be issued to subscribers at 31s. 6d., and to non-subscribers at two guineas. He stated that the book had long been wanted and would be found invaluable. He further stated—"I have in my possession the wood blocks of the Arms of the Families in the list herewith given. Should your name not be included in this list, and you feel desirous that your Arms should appear in the work, I shall be glad to get them drawn and engraved by the first heraldic artists of the day. The average price of a single Coat will be 21s.; if with quarterings, about two guineas. The cost will fall upon you, and the wood block will become your own property." Mr. Dodgson's project evidently failed, and the blocks passed through a London dealer to me by purchase.

In 1874 Mr. Joseph Foster issued three large quarto volumes at eight guineas (with a score copies on extra large imperial paper, and the folding pedigrees mounted on linen, at sixteen guineas), under the title, "PEDIGREES OF THE COUNTY FAMILIES OF YORKSHIRE," with heraldic illustrations to each family. On comparing the lists of Arms mentioned by Mr. Dodgson, I find they exactly correspond with the lists of pedigrees in Mr. Foster's three volumes, with the omissions of Scott of Starbotton and Burnsall, Torre of Snydale and Paull Holme, Beckett of Leeds, Bentley of Eshald, Bright of Badsworth, Græme of Sewerby, Horton of Chadderton and Howroyd, Hungate of Saxton, Jackson of Doncaster, Oates of Nether Denby and Rawmarsh, Pilkington of Chevet, Rockley of Rockley, de Rodes of Barlborough, Stansfeld of Sowerby, Stapleton or Stapylton of Myton, Waterhouse of Halifax, Wentworth of Woolley and Wentworth. Mr. Dodgson's list of blocks gives about two hundred and thirty, all of which were used in Foster's pedigrees, and to these I have added in this volume two hundred and thirty more, mostly from Poulson's Holderness.

Since Mr. Foster issued his volumes in 1874, several genealogical mines have been opened, which we now consider absolutely necessary to be explored before any pedigree can be issued that claims comparative satisfaction. These mines include all the volumes of the Yorkshire Record Series, especially the volumes giving the index to Yorkshire Wills; secondly, the publications of the Yorkshire Parish Registers; thirdly, the works of the Antiquarian Societies of the County; fourthly, the London Genealogical Magazines and the Harleian Society volumes; and last, but far from least, the Manor Rolls still mostly unpublished, like the Wakefield Series which began about 1276. From the Wakefield Manor Rolls I very soon discovered that the pedigrees from 1300 to 1550 were extremely untrustworthy and woefully imperfect. I proved this speedily in the case of the Norcliffes, Fields, and other Halifax families; and I am convinced genealogists should desist from issuing anything but tentative trees, until the Rolls, Registers and Wills are printed. Until this desirable object is accomplished, we may follow the advice of Mr. Foster, who expressed the hope that "those who affect to despise pedigrees will, for the sake of their descendants, record, if only in their family Bibles, what they do know of their forefathers and contemporary kinsfolk, and so save much trouble and expense hereafter to future genealogists and their own posterity." We may be expected to do more than this; by imitating Mr. Clay, who has brought down the pedigrees of Dugdale's Visitation to the present day, and has issued "Hunter's Minor Gentry." The idea is not a new one, for Mr. William Radcliffe, F.S.A., Rouge Croix Pursuivant-at-Arms, about the year 1825 contemplated the publication, by subscription, of Dugdale's Visitation of Yorkshire (1665-6), together with a continuation of the same, and a supplement containing the genealogies of all the then existing families of the nobility and gentry of the County as were omitted by Dugdale; but the publication was never carried out.

My good friend Mr. Norcliffe considered that it was useless to print every name in Parish Registers, but I contended that nothing less could be satisfactory, for such have been the vicissitudes of family history that we have now cottagers who bear the names of Lacy, Percy, Savile, etc., and families of wealth, influence, light and leading, whose ancestors were humble peasants even so recently as three generations ago. This has been so frequently the case that the saying, "Clogs to clogs in three generations," can be supported by numerous instances. Probably the most satisfactory moral and stable families—the salt of the county—are those whose pedigrees have never been collected into a portly volume, but who run in a golden line of yeomanry through the centuries of the Manor Roll records. I could easily name scores of such for West Yorkshire.

Meantime, we must not suspend work until societies have provided us with Rolls, Registers and Records, for much can be done. It has struck me oft-times that we might divide our work into four sections, namely:—

(1) Compiling a list of personal names found in pre-Norman times, including the large number who gave their names to innumerable hamlets and townships, as exhibited in my Place Names of Domesday Book, 1086.

(2) A list, with available dates and copies of old charters, extending from Domesday, 1086, to the Poll Tax of three hundred years later. The various manor rolls, wills and old deeds before 1387, added to the printed Poll Tax as given in the Yorkshire Archæological Journal, and some fragmentary Subsidy Rolls of earlier date, provide us with materials wherewith we may accurately define the limits where particular families originated, and the meaning and origin of our family names, which generally became settled and fixed in that period in Yorkshire. These will be found to be of four classes:—(a), those derived from the locality of the homestead, as Wood, Green, North, Dale, Yeadon, York, Sutcliffe, etc.; (b), those derived from trades or professions, as Priest, Clerk, Walker, Tailor, Lister, Sutor, etc., a list of which also conveys much social and commercial history with it; (c), Sirenames which had in some instances scarcely become fixed before 1400, with relics of dialect names near the Pennine range in such expressions as Bill o' Jacks, Sam o' Tom o' Lukes, which run concurrently with the fixed names. It must have seemed very ridiculous when Mary (John's daughter) was entered as Mary Johnson, and Mary (John's wife, Will's son) was recorded as Mary Wilson. Such difficulties led to abbreviations, as Willes, Simms, Watts, etc. The pedigrees of this class are likely to begin about 1400, whilst those of the two former classes are as likely to be permanent a hundred years earlier. (d), Miscellaneous sources, the smallest class of the four, as Long, White, Whitehead, Swift, and various nicknames, with others of capricious origin.

(3) Our third period might extend from the Poll Tax list, about 1380, to the introduction of Parish Registers. In some localities (but very few) this took place in 1538; or, rather we should say, that the Registers of very few places have been preserved which date back to that year. Far more frequently the earliest existing date will be nearer 1558 or 1580, and some 1600.

(4) The fourth may be called the Parish Register period. Thousands of Yorkshire deeds exist in private hands for each of the two last periods, and as they are of no legal value they are every day liable to be destroyed as rubbish, or sold to kite and drum makers. Sometimes a bookseller or antiquarian dealer buys a bundle at a solicitor's office, but until we become as enlightened as the Americans, in the establishment of County Record Offices, such documents ought by all means to be secured by the Antiquarian Societies. Our Nonconformist Registers at Somerset House need to be made easily available.

It is in the hope of contributing suggestions that may culminate in the publication of genealogical records, and in the gathering of materials for various phases of family history, that these lines are penned. In the days of yore, when only the clergy could read, and many of them were poor at writing, signs and symbols were in constant requisition. Old deeds and charters were not signed by the parties writing their own names, but they were signed by making a sign or symbol, long before they were accustomed to scratch a rude cross, by which they swore to the truth; and this sign was often a seal or wax impression, which became a personal significance and grew into a coat of arms. The chieftain's flag, the overlord's war device, formed the basis of many of these signs, and out of the use grew the wax-seals, and in much later times the names of public inns, because their signs pictured the Black Horse, the Red Lion, the White Bear, or other emblems used by the lord of the manor, before the more elaborate Rawson's Arms, Savile's Arms, Thornhill Arms, were depicted on sign boards.

Besides Arms impressed on waxen seals, and worked in colours on banners and costumes, we find them depicted on windows and panels, or carved on stones, at the churches, castles and manor-houses throughout the country. The erection of tombstones enlarged the sphere for display, and new Coats were invented, being either variations of the over-lord's shield, or canting symbolic innovations, indicating the calling or trade of the individual, or more frequently introducing some object that was a pun on the family name—a practice that has led many persons in modern times to jump to erroneous etymologies of family names, thus, Oates, a sheaf of oats, being a dealer in oats; whereas it is from Otes, a personal name.

With these objects in view, we need not merely a handbook indicating where the Arms may be found, and their heraldic descriptions, but also one describing the origin and meaning of family names, and a bibliography embracing the lists of Parish and other Registers, with dates, printed family histories and printed pedigrees, and books of biography of notable natives. Positive accuracy in describing so many coats of arms is unattainable, but I venture to hope that the references to many examples of any one family will enable the student to discover the true tinctures. These are sometimes erroneously given on mural tablets, and I have not ventured to insert corrections, but to note where examples may also be found, so that the student may make his own comparisons. It may be objected that I have spelled some of the words, even on the same page, in two ways: e.g., fess and fesse. I simply have taken what I find, and have not presumed to state that the fashion in spelling at any time was wrong, and that my way is right.

I proposed, in the circular issued seven years ago, to print privately only sufficient copies for subscribers at 10s. 6d., the issue to be limited to one edition only, and the blocks to be dispersed at a nominal rate by sale to anyone immediately on publication. Wood engraving has very rapidly died out, and these examples have a double value now, as they are sure to be esteemed by the collectors of antiquities. The fifty large paper copies announced at a guinea each have been abandoned, and the issue in demy octavo is so limited that the price will increase whenever one finds its way into the market. Stone carvings, church windows, roof paintings, memorial tablets, and county and local histories supply the bulk of the information. The utility to the general historian and genealogist, as well as book-plate collector, will be acknowledged by those who are constantly enquiring for such a key. No such work exists for Yorkshire, and no hand-book is more urgently needed by local antiquaries.

A second part (it is hoped), completing the work for Yorkshire, will be issued speedily if there is a ready response.
