PREFATORY NOTE.

YEARLY five years have elapsed since a Directory for Musselburgh was published, and in the interval whole streets of new houses have been erected and the population has correspondingly increased. The issue of a Directory was therefore urgently required. To a town of the size of Musselburgh, and possessing so many attractions, a Directory is almost indispensable alike to residents and to those doing business within it. No Directory hitherto issued for Musselburgh has given such complete lists as are in the present issue. But beyond these much additional information is supplied, which, it is hoped, will prove useful and make the Directory welcome in every household in the locality. The handy Guide for the town and district, the yearly Almanac, the Calendar of local events, and the lists of the various "Funds" administered in the Burgh are novel features to which special attention may be called. Then the small price of the publication (Threepence) will be noted and will make such a boon additionally welcome.

It is intended to make the Directory an annual publication and to issue it along with Almanac hereafter on 1st January. Every effort has been made to ensure accuracy in the lists and information given, but in a first issue it is perhaps inevitable that inaccuracies will appear. It will be regarded as a favour if those who discover any mistakes would at once point them out, and we shall be glad also to receive hints or suggestions for the future issues of the "Musselburgh and District Directory and Year Book."

Thanks are specially due to Mr R. M'D. Stirling who has written the Guide, to the local house agents for information as to tenancy, and to the merchants of Musselburgh and other advertisers for their hearty and much appreciated support.

MUSSELBURGH AND VICINITY

(Copyright).

USSELBURGH forms that part of the parish of Inveresk which skirts the shore of the Firth of Forth, is the north-eastern extremity of Midlothian, and is six miles distant from G.P.O., Edinburgh, and is separated from the metropolis by Magdalene Burn.

Approach.—Musselburgh is reached from Edinburgh by a branch of the N,B.R., which leaves the main east coast line at Newhailes Station, where there is a private entrance to the policies of Newhailes (Sir Charles Dalrymple, Bart, M.P.), formerly the residence of the celebrated jurist and historian, Lord Hailes. In the one-anda-half miles run to the terminus, evidence is seen of the modern enterprise which has given a vast impetus and commercial importance to the locality. In succession will be noticed the Musselburgh Ironworks, the Olive Bank Pit of the Lothian Coal Field, the Patent Net Factory, Inveresk Paper Mills and the Wire Works—a group of industries which demand skilled workers and find remunerative employment for many hundreds.

Entrance.—On emerging from Musselburgh Station, to the left is seen an ancient high-pitched bridge of three spans that here crosses the river Esk and has been a main artery of communication between North and South throughout nearly the whole of the Christian Era. Its traditional claim to be of Roman construction was for a time questioned, but this was set at rest from an actual examination whereby the remains of the original fabric were discovered embedded within the present masonry and resting upon transverse oaken beams. Not till early last century was it superseded for vehicular traffic on the completion of the handsome new bridge—one of Rennie's masterpieces—lower down the stream; and its sloping approaches were then replaced by the steps for pedestrians still used. Facing the station buildings is "The Mall," an avenue which forms an agreeable entrance to the town. The statelier of the trees are about 130 years old-those between the roadway and river were planted some 70 years since by Sir John Hope, Bart, M.P., of Pinkie, who believed in the maxim "be aye stickin in a tree, it'll be growin' when your sleepin'," and who did much to beautify the town in this direction.

At the end of the Mall stand the Delta Monument commemorating David Macbeth Moir, a distinguished townsman and popular contributor to "Blackwood," the New Stone Bridge, the U.F.

High Church, and a drinking fountain gifted by Mr David Wright, a native.

High Street.—Millholme House, behind the West Mill, belonged at one period to the Colts of Garsherrie and Inveresk, and was the dower-house of the family. Further on upon the same side, enclosed within a parapet and railing, is a barrack-like building deserving passing notice. Now a common lodging-house and tramps' shelter, it was wont to be the officers' quarters during the Peninsular Wars when the town was a military centre and sanatorium whence invalided troops were sent to recruit. Proceeding onwards the entrance to Dambrae is reached by an arched pend. In this alley was the Kilwinning Lodge of Freemasons which claimed seniority next to the Mother Lodge. The building, converted into dwellihg-houses, still retains the craft emblems on its interior.

Opposite the further extremity of Dambrae is Millhill U.F. Church, and near it are the Municipal Buildings. The Clock Tower or "Knockhous" is of continental design, and contained, until two years ago, a clock bearing date 1497, presented by the Dutch at a time of much interchange of trade between Holland and Musselburgh. It has been replaced by a modern one but may be seen by the curious in the burgh stores. The portion of the Municipal Buildings adjoining the Clock Tower formed the Tolbooth and was built of the materials of the once famous Chapel of Loretto during the Reformation time. The frontage facing N.E. is of eighteenth century work and after the manner of Adams style as shown at Edinburgh City Chambers.

In the entrance to the Town Hall is inscribed upon marble in black letters

January 16, 1773.

Magistrates do Justice in the fear of God.

He that God doth fear Will not to falsehood lend an ear,

In the Council Chambers are panels bearing the Royal and Burgh Arms (temp. Chas. II.), heraldically displayed, portraits of "Delta," Rennie, the late Lord Elphinstone; busts and a number of local views. In front of the Town House is the Mercat Cross, an interesting relic. Beyond is a very wide street surprising to find in a Scottish burgh of such antiquity, but accounted for by the demolition of a "Mid Raw" which formerly occupied the centre of the space.

Parsonage House (Mrs J. F. Kemp) was the residence of Parson Smith, Episcopal Minister at the beginning of this century, where Sir Walter Scott visited when stationed at Musselburgh as Quartermaster of the Edinburgh Light Horse Volunteers. It may be of interest to mention that, when then confined to his lodging for several days by a kick received from a trooper's horse during drill, the Great Unknown wrote a great portion of the opening Cantos of Marmion.

The property immediately to the east of Parsonage House (Dr Scott's) is noteworthy as having been the residence of "Delta," the doctor's grandfather. Close to it is a good specimen of street architecture of the Stuart period. This, at one time the Commercial Inn, must have been a hostelry of repute. Its crow-stepped gables, and its attic windows, with the floral emblems of Scotland, England, Ireland and France, are deserving of notice.

Nearly opposite is the site of Randolph's lodging. All that remains of the original building is a portion of the back wall. It is close to the English Church. Here the Good Regent was carried when too ill to proceed further on a journey to England. The house was the best the town could offer its illustrious guest; and the burgesses, in obedience to their obligation, "to watch and ward," provided a guard of honour till his death in July 1332. To this incident the motto of the burgh, "Honestas," is attributed.

Finely situated, with a graceful spire, St Peter's Episcopal Church forms a pleasing termination to the eastern extremity of High Street on its south side.

Two massive stone pillars, designed in accordance with the east frontage of the Municipal Buildings, and bearing the burgh arms and date, 1770, are here placed.

The entrance to Pinkie House (Sir Alexander Hope, Bart.) is one with which every resident in, and visitor to the town must be familiar, but the stately avenue can only date from the time when the pillars just mentioned were erected.

The house itself was the abode here of the Abbots of Dunfermline. The Abbey had its first grant of lands at Musselburgh from Malcolm Canmore and Queen Margaret. This tower was erected in 1390, and not until the beginning of the seventeenth century, when Lord Chancellor Seton had acquired the barony, was any material additions made to the place. Seton, however, had spent some of his youth in Italy, and became acquainted with the splendid buildings in that land. When he attained position and wealth, he desired to leave behind memorials of his greatness, and proceeded to convert his Musselburgh residence into a baronial manor house, with the result now seen. Prince Charles Stuart slept here the night after the battle of Prestonpans, 1745.

Pinkie House is surrounded by extensive policies, which Sir Alex. gives frequent opportunities of seeing.

Loretto, now a famous school, is situated on the opposite side of the highway from Pinkie. In Pre-Reformation times it was a famous chapel or hermitage, and place of pilgrimage. Lord Clive and Sir Ralph Abercrombie resided here; but for a long period it has been occupied as a highly successful educational establishment, where many famous men have received their training. Opposite the entrance gate an oak has been planted to commemorate the Coronation of King Edward VII.

Newbigging is a street which leads at right angles from High Street to Inveresk Village. The Roman Catholic Chapel and School is on the west side. An old house in Sharp's Land was used as the Episcopal Chapel during the penal laws when it was a punishable offence for more than seven to assemble for such service in one place. Here, by the preacher standing in the midst of four separate apartments, each holding seven persons, a company of twenty-eight assembled without liability. Parson Smith so conducted service.

Pinkie Burn (W. Lindsay Alexander, Esq.)—In this neighbourhood is the scene of the Battle of Pinkie, 1547, when the burn-which flows through the property, ran for days tinged with blood.

Carberry Tower (Lord Elphinstone), three miles south.—A clump of trees and a memorial stone on the summit of the hill mark where Queen Mary surrendered to the confederate Lords prior to her imprisonment in Loch Leven Castle. The spot where the Duke of Somerset had his tent placed to enable him to reconnoitre the Scots army before the disastrous battle of Pinkie can also be identified.

South-east from Carberry is Fa'side Castle, the remains of an old Norman Keep; from this point magnificent views are had. The owner of Fa'side was employed as Ambassador to the English King two years after the battle of Bannockburn, and another called Orme gave Ormiston its name.

Nearly north from Fa'side are the ruins of Wallyford House, once the property of Lord Binning, a descendant of Binnock, the waggoner, who aided Douglas in rescuing Linlithgow Castle from its English garrison by a stratagem.

Inveresk Lodge, and Halkerston, are houses, which at one time were connected with Newbattle Abbey. Manor House adjoins these, and bears upon its front an exquisitely wrought monogram, J.H.D.E., doubly interlaced, with the date 1748. The initials are those of J. H. Dalrymple Elphinstone. Inveresk Gate was the residence of the late Admiral of the Fleet, Sir Alexander Milne, Bart., G.C.B., Father of the British Navy, and who had the longest recorded service as a Lord of the Admiralty.

Eskgrove (Charles Stewart, Esq.)—Within the grounds the Duke of Somerset's tent was pitched on the night after the Battle of Pinkie—a neat monument at the end of the long walk marks the place.

Inveresk House (J. A. Park, Esq.), the site of a Roman colonia. Several remarkable evidences of Roman occupation have been found here. Part of a bath, supported upon stone pillars, is still preserved. Cromwell occupied this house.

Battery Mound, Inveresk Churchyard.—Constructed by the Duke of Somerset, Lord Protector of England, in the reign of Edward VI., and subsequently used by Cromwell to command the passage of the Esk. A varied and extensive view is had from the Mound.

Inveresk Parish Church.—The remote antiquity of the site of this Church as a place of worship is beyond question. In the time of the Roman occupation their "pretorium" was on the same spot. Close at hand they erected an altar to Apollo. Late in the fifth, or early in the sixth century, a Christian Church was planted on "the summit of the mount," and dedicated to St Michael by St Monenna, an Irish missioner, who founded seven churches in Scotland, and died in 519. At that early date, buildings of stone and lime were unknown. Wattle and mud were the materials used, and later, wood was employed, even in the construction of cathedrals. Eventually, the fabric, which immediately preceded the present church, was reared, and in its building much of the adjacent brick-work of the Roman fort was utilised.

De Bernham, Bishop of St Andrews, here held the Synod of Musselburgh in 1242, and much enlightened business was transacted.

Cromwell used St Michael's as a stable for his cavalry horses.

In the present church an interesting memorial tablet, in black marble, commemorates the Duke of Lauderdale, lord of the lordship of Musselburgh, whose remains were laid in state in Old St Michael's previous to interment at Haddington.

Fisherrow.—The river Esk divides the Burgh into two nearly equal parts, the westerly being known as Fisherrow and ecclesiastically as North Esk Parish, quoad sacra. In it are North Esk, Bridge Street U.F., and Congregational Churches. One half of the population live in this part, and here is the fishing people's quarter. In New Street, conveniently adjacent to the Links, are the Headquarters and Drlll Hall of "G" Company, 6th Volunteer Battalion the Royal Scots, the Hall of the Scottish Coast Mission, and in South Street the Salvation Army Barracks, and the Harbour of the west end of Fisherrow.

Musselburgh Links skirt the shores of the Firth of Forth from the east end of the town to Levenhall. One of the most ancient golf courses in the world is here situated, and though only of nine holes, is still considered among the finest tests of all-round golf extant. Many championship meetings have been here conducted, besides innumerable important matches and tournaments, attracting the greatest golfers of succeeding generations. Formerly, the Honourable Company of Edinburgh Golfers, the Edinburgh Burgess Golfing Society and the Bruntsfield Links Golf Club, occupied clubhouses alongside the Royal Musselburgh Golf Club at the west end of the green, but when golf clubs began a few years ago to acquire private courses, these city clubs departed and their houses are presently tenanted by the Musselburgh New Club, the Links Café and the Links Golf Club respectively. Golf at Musselburgh is municipally controlled, the Green Officer being an official of the burgh, as also are the Greenkeeper and his staff. Although the green is never without its full quota of players an admirable system of booking places prevails which prevents all overcrowding. The charges for golf are is per day, is 6d per week, and 3s per month for summer visitors resident within the burgh. For outsiders the charges are 6s per month and £1 1s per annum. A special charge is paid by the members of the affiliated clubs.

On the Links is also situated the Race Course about 1¼ miles round, where the Caledonian Hunt Cup is competed for in rotation, and the Lothians' Racing Club hold an annual meeting in autumn. Here also excellent sports are carried through at Musselburgh Fair, the second week in August.

BUSINESS ANNOUNCEMENT.

THERE is a very general belief which has long existed in the public mind that the Local Tradesman, however long his standing and experience, is unable to compete successfully with the more opulent City Merchant or those larger Trading Associations which abound so much in the present day; but those who hold such opinions overlook the fact that heavy city rents and taxes, coupled with the further expenditure of maintaining high-salaried officials and assistants, mitigate not a little against the supposed advantages which the public think they derive over those who patronise the provincial merchant, who find themselves equally well and economically served by so doing.

The Subscriber invites comparison and trial from his well selected stock, which is replete with everything pertaining to a High-class Family Grocery, Tea, Wine and Spirit Business.

He would also give well-merited prominence to his Extra Special Old Scotch Whisky, the

"LORETTO BRAND."

This is an exceptionally fine old high-class pure spirit. Age has rendered it mild, smooth, creamy; and, being thoroughly matured in sherry casks, it has thereby acquired a mellowness which cannot fail to meet the approval of all who can really appreciate such a highclass article.

PRICE-21/ PER GALLON.

Trees as Natural "Compasses."

To the forester any isolated tree, for preference one standing on a rise, readily acts, on land the part of a compass.

Examining such a tree, observation at one shows that, as indicated, the darkest bark, the largest and darkest leaves and the smalle branches will be on the north side. The trunk, too, is on that side smoother, and othe ground at the root there will very likely the a clump of moss.

On the south side the branches are longe the leaves smaller and of lighter colour, an the bark, besides being lighter, is rough an lumpy. It is on the south or sunny side, to that spiders spin their webs.

When a tree has been sawn down, the stum will still tell the tale. The "rings" of the treare broader on the south side, and so th "heart," instead of being in the centre of the tree-section, is found more to the north.

EXPLANATION OF THE ABOVE TABLE.—In the left-hand division of the Table, over each year, is placed the Dominical or Sunday letter; in the middle division, the months; and in the right-hand division, the dates on which Sundays fall throughout the whole century.

To find the day on which the Sundays fall in February, 1904. Over 1904 in the left-hand Table we find B, the Sunday letter—and as it is Leap-year (which are noted by the blanks preceding them, and which must be referred to separately) in the right-hand Table, over B, and in a line with February (Leap-year), stands the figures 7, 14, 21 and 28,

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS.

Ullswater.

THE scenery about Ullswater is, like all the English Lake scenery, extremely beautiful, but one of the most charming views is shown in our illustration of Stybarrow Crag. It is in such delightful retreats as this that one forgets the stress and strain of life, the "daily round, the common task," and lives a newer and more restful life for the time being, forgetful of the past, unmindful of tue future, with its cares and competitions, con-scious only of the charm and quiet by which he is surrounded for the time being. Ullswater Lake is fourteen miles from Windermere Station, and ten miles from Ambleside, the two tion, and ten miles from Ambleside, the two routes joining at the Kirkstone Top Inn, seven miles from Windermere, three from Ambleside. From the latter, by a succession of the steepest pitches, generally called "The Struggle," "The Kirkstone Inn," and "Travellers' Rest," 1,500 feet above the sea level. Just past the inn, the "Kirkstone," as it is called on account of its shape, is passed. Then comes a steep descent of nearly two miles to Brothers Water-so called from the drowning of two brothers there. Thence it is a level run to Ullswater, where the hotel is charmingly placed on the edge of the lake. From here we can visit Aira Force by row-boat, or by road (three and a half miles), or take steamer for the length of the lake (eight miles). The chief mountains are Helvellyn, St. Sunday Crag, and Place Fell. Aira Force is in Gowbarrow Park, which lies to the left. The park is very beautiful, and in it the fallow deer disport themselves.

Miner's Bridge, Bettws-y-Coed.

Bettws-y-Coed is delightfully situated at the confluence of the rivers Conway and Llugwy, on the border of the counties of Denbigh and Carnarvon. It is four miles south from Llanrwst and 17 east of Carnarvon, and may be reached either by rail, via Conway, or by the Carnarvonshire or Denbighshire roads, the former being preferable, because nearer. The grandeur and beauty of Bettws-y-Coed have for a long time been well known to artists, and no scenes in the British Islands have been oftener exhibited on the walls of the Royal Academy and in our leading Art Galleries than the lovely river scenes of the Llugwy, Lledr, and Conway. River, cataract, woodland, and mountain are here commingled in such variety that the title of the "Paradise of Wales" may be fairly given to Bettws-y-Coed. The beauties of river, woodland, glen, or waterfall scenery abound whichever way you take a lowland walk, while the more hardy rambler will enjoy the bracing uplands and an occasional climb to the peaks and ridges further afield. Beautiful exceedingly is the Llugwy river at and above the singular old bridge, and lovely the walks either along the north side of the stream to or beyond the old Miner's Bridge (which, deemed unsafe, has lately been superseded by a more substantial structure, which is the subject of our illustration), or on the other side, by the more prosaic Holyhead (and Capel Curig) road from which, however, you can diverge into the cool shade of the woods. A mile or so farther, and about two from the village, you reach the famous Swallow Falls—most beautiful, we think, when the stream is not in flood, and the water clear; peat washings sometimes make it quite brown. A mile on the Holyhead Road from Bettws-y-Coed, passing Pont-y-Pair on the right, is the gate leading to the Miner's Bridge, which is well worth seeing, the views from the bridge on both sides being really charming. It is a sloping, wooden structure, and was originally placed there by the miners from Pentre Ddu (the village on the left), to cross on their way to the mines in the opposite hills, these mines formerly giving employment to about 500 hands. There is a way over the bridge and through the woods back to Bettws-y-Coed.

Matlock.

Although divided into four places, what is known as Matlock Bath, Matlock Bridge, Matlock Bank, and Matlock Town practically constitute one. The district is in turn beautiful and grand, charming and aweinspiring. Its health-givingsprings were known as far back as 1698, but for a long period nothing was done to develop and popularise them, owing to the then great difficulty in getting to and from the place. Some attempts were made in the eighteenth century to make the place more accessible, but the era of railways rapidly brought it into popularity and prominence. In addition to its medicinal springs, there are numerous caves, charming dells, and magnificent heights, typical of glorious Derbyshire, and whilst thousands of visitors go to Matlock for rest and health, innumerable crowds from all parts of the country pay it a brief visit by "trip," hundreds of the same people visiting Matlock year after year, never wearying of its wonderful charms.

Pleasure Gardens, Skegness.

Skegness is one of the best of the East Coast watering places, and is growing in popularity every year. It is pleasantly situated on the coast of the North Sea or German Ocean, in the South Lindsey Division of Lincolnshire, and is 12 miles from Spilsby (the nearest market town), 24 miles from Boston, 73 miles from Nottingham, and 131 miles from London. It is largely visited by the inhabitants of the midland counties, such as Nottingham, Leicester, Lincoln, and Northampton, but during the season, the Great Northern Railway Company bring thousands of visitors from London, Sheffield, Leeds, Bradford, Birmingham, Burton, and other large towns. It has been called "Nottingham by the Sea," owing to its great attraction for the good folks of the midland city, who go there in thousands every summer. Amongst those who stay there are invalids and persons seeking health but the great majority come for change and quiet, and these are delighted with the broad and expansive stretch of sand, the magnificent pier, the beautiful promenade, park, pleasure gardens, and sandhills. The pleasure gardens are the property of the Earl of Scarborough, and are about six acres in extent. Formerly a small charge for admission was made, but now visitors and residents have the privilege of free admission (except on special occasions), but are kindly requested to do their best to keep the grounds in good condition. During the winter months, the pavilion is used for concerts, dancing, minstrel entertainments, and theatrical performances. There are three entrances to the pavilion, which is reached by stone steps, and adjoining is a temperance hotel. In front of the pavilion is a band stand, and, during the summer months, an orchestral and brass band gives performances twice daily. The grounds have a very pleasing appearance, the rustic arbours, lake, trees, lawns, and winding pathways all giving evidence of care and attention.

Marine Park, Southport.

The park extends on both sides of the pier, and is beautifully laid out in flower beds, lawns, and rockeries. The sunk lawn near the pier is set apart as a playground for the children, an excellent arrangement, and one highly appreciated. The next lawn, fronting a commodious shelter-house, the upper portion of which forms a continuation of the surface of the Promenade, has been used for several summers as a place for ontdoor entertainments, including sacred concerts on the Sundays, but with the improved arrangements on the pier, these will not in future be so prominent a feature. Between the parks and the lake there is a second promenade. To the north of the pier it looks directly on to the Marine Lake, but on the other side of the pier it is separated by a wide stretch of sands, on which the children love to build their little castles, and on which the patrons of the donkeys also disport themselves.

Craig Tarn, Wharfe Valley.

Among the many noted dales of Yorkshire, the Valley of the Wharfe stands pre-eminent for the beauty of its scenery, as regards the wild grandeur of its upper course, and the extended and fertile vale into which it gradually expands. The southern side of the valley is bounded by a lofty range of rocky, heatby hills called Rumbald's Moor, from which gushes, in never-failing force, the spring of pure cold water for which Ilkley is famed, and which from an early period has attracted its summer votaries, and contributed to enhance the well-deserved reputation of this delightful place. Craig Tarn is a small, natural lake, which has been enlarged, and made otherwise attractive by artificial means, and is a favourite resort of pleasure parties, during the summer season. It can be reached by way of Wells Road or Cowpasture Road, its position being on the moor, directly above Craiglands. Paths radiate from Craig Tarn in every direction.

Tyn=y=Groes.

This is considered to be one of the prettiest spots in Wales, a country renowned for the beauty of its scenery. For its scenery alone the place is well worthy of a visit, but great numbers of artists and anglers visit the spot, indeed the former find it extremely difficult to tear themselves away from the spot owing to the many charming views they are able to sketch, and the latter from the fact that the river abounds in fine fish, affording them splendid sport. The Tyn-y-Groes Inn, shown in our illustration, is, it will be seen, situated in a most charming and romantic spot.

Fairy Falls, Trefriw.

From the Gwydir road junction Trefriw, once celebrated for the manufacture of Welsh harps, is distant a mile and a half down the Conway road; but a short distance may, unless the flooded Conway bar the way, be saved by turning to the right across the fields just over Llanrwst bridge. Trefriw is about nine and a half miles from Conway, and five miles south of the cross road (before described) leading to Y-Ro-wen. Its chief attractions are the mountain and woodland walks in well nigh every direction, the angling, the two fine waterfalls—Dolgarrog and Porthlwyd, and the wholesome (but very nasty) mineral spring near the eighth milestone from Conway, which runs, or seems to run, down the bare hillside like a streak of yellow ochre. It is a great resort of artists, and has been the creator of many pictures which have graced the walls of the Royal Academy. Taliesin, the father of Welsh poetry, is said to have resided in the neighbourhood.

Worcester Beacon, Malvern.

Starting from the centre of the town, the visitor turns his face to the hill, and in the course of half an hour he can reach the beacon, from which in ante-telegraph days the fiery glare went forth which thrilled through the nation, telling tidings of invasion and disaster, and summoning the people to arm. Macaulay, in his stirring lines on the Spanish Armada, tells how

"Twelve fair counties saw the blaze From Malvern's lonely height," and on the occasion of the Prince of Wales' (now King Edward VII.) wedding, 10th of March, 1863, and again on the Jubilee years, 1887 and 1897, a large bonfire blazed from the beacon hill, and testified to the truth of the poet's lines. On the latter occasion 135 answering fires were counted on the hills around. At the summit of the beacon is an Indicator, the base of granite, surmounted by a metal dial, by means of which visitors will be able to identify the various objects of interest around, which was erected in 1897, in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee. The view from the summit is truly magnificent. The landscape stretches away over the garden fields of Worcestershire, watered by the "Queenly Severn," and the "soft flowing Avon." Immediately beneath lies the pretty town of Malvern itself. On the north-west the view melts away in the hazy Salopian hills. On the south-east the eye rests on the Cotswolds. The panoramic view is studded with hill and dale, woods and mansions, cities, towns, and hamlets.

Corwen.

At ten miles from Llangollen von reach Corwen, where artist as well as angler may well stay awhile. Here the great road crosses the Dee and enters the valley of the Alwen, which, in its onward course towards Pentre Voelas and Bettws-y-Coed, it soon leaves for that of the Ceirw. The church at Corwen is dedicated to Mael and Sulien, and in the interior there is a curious monument, which is said to be that of Saint Sulien himself, but this is incorrect. Pennant says, "the saint has a well here, and is patron of the church." But the well referred to is a mile and a half from Corwen, on the north-western side of the Dee, near Rhug Chapel. Hynnon Sulien, or St. Sulien's well, was more sacred once than the Dee itself, and water was once fetched from it to fill the baptismal font at Corwen. Visitors to the church are shown a rude cut in the stone lintel of the priest's door, and told it is the mark of Owain Glyndwr's dagger. Another stone, which bears the formidable title of "Carreg-y-Big-yn-y-Fach-Rewlyd," is built in the north porch, of which we are told that "all attempts to build the church in any other place were frustrated by adverse powers, until, warned or directed by visions, the founders came to the place where this pillar stood." One of the old crosses in the churchyard, west of the building, also bears the traditionary mark of the redoubtable Owain Glyndwr's dagger, but the cross is more interesting from the "cup markings" on the base of the pedestal. Another curious object to visitors to Corwen Churchyard is seen in the low gravestones, with two holes for the knees of those who came to pray for the dead. Similar stones are mentioned by Pennant as occurring in several other Welsh churchyards and burial grounds. Corwen, the great centre for Owain Gwynedd, who ruled in 1165, abounds in legends and tales of his doings, and also of in legends and tales of his doings, and also of those of Owain Glyndwr, and upon Bryn-llys, which is called Owain's seat, a flagstaff was placed in honour of the marriage of the Prince of Wales (Edward VII.), and formed a conspicuous clue to the spot, which affords a really grand view, the peak of our language over 200,000.

Snowdon being well in range—owing to the southward bend of the widening vale, and the position high up the outlying N.W. the position high up the outlying N.W. Berwyn summit, Moel Ferna. To the latter you may ascend—first to south-east with Nant-cawr-ddu on the right and Nant Llechog on the left, till you reach a track, along which turn to left; it passes south of the summit which you can easily reach from the watershed at Bwlch Cynwd; returning to Llansantffraid if you prefer, in which descent look out for slate quarries and a tramway.

Ruskin's Tomb, Coniston Churchyard.

One of the greatest losses sustained by English literature in recent years is the loss by death of John Ruskin. Of those who dominated the art world during the nineteenth century, Ruskin is considered the greatest and most interesting. He moulded the taste of the public in æsthetic affairs, and largely influenced painting and architecture, and his death gave reason for mourning to many, for he eloquently and passionately pleaded the cause of the poor, and to few men has it been given to have so vast a number of friends amongst the great mass of the public. Ardently loving his country, he loyally and consistently strove to serve her. His death took place January 20th, 1900, and Dean Bradley offered a tomb in Westminster, but in deference to Ruskin's own wish he was buried in the churchvard at Coniston.

Llyfnant Valley.

To view this delightful valley, train should be taken from Aberystwyth in the early morning to Glandovey. On emerging from the station into the main road, turn to the left, and in about half a mile a sign post on the right, at the corner of a narrow lane, informs the visitor that there is the entrance to the Llyfnant Valley, so justly celebrated for its charm and beauty. A new picture is seen at every bend of the road, and at the farther end of our walk we are rewarded with a sight of the lovely little waterfall of Glas-Pwll and Cwmrhaiadr Cascade and valley of the same name. One may travel far and visit many lands and yet not find such charming scenery as we find in our own country. We never seem to realise the beauties and grandeur of the scenery at our own doors.

Growth of the English Language.

To give some idea of the tremendous growth of the English language it may be mentioned that the words and phrases under the letter "A" have increased in fifty years from 7,000 to nearly 60,000. So enormous, indeed, has been the growth of the English language that it would be practically impossible for the most learned man to be acquainted with every word. Intelligent persons, even those engaged in the learned professions, do not make use of more than from 6,000 to 8,000 words all told, although there are properly belonging to

In Belgium, Bulgaria, Greece, Italy, Roumania, Servia, Spain, and Switzerland the money of account is identical with that of France—the franc—the names alone differing. Nearly all the South American States issue standard coins corresponding to the peso of Chile, which is identical with the 5-franc piece of France. The principal circulating medium of Austria-Hungary, Russia, Argentine Republic, and Brazil is paper, but, in the first-named country, the paper is in process of being withdrawn, and the currency placed on a gold basis, with the crown (see above) as a new unit of account. In Russia the gold Imperial is now rated at 15 instead of 10 roubles, and the paper currency is being replaced by silver and bronze. The currency of Japan is now on a gold basis, silver bearing a ratio to that metal of 1 to 32°348. In British Honduras the money of account is now the United States gold dollar of 100 cents, subsidiary coins being specially struck for the Colony. Ceylon and Mauritius also possess special subsidiary currencies on the basis of the rupee. By an Order in Council passed in 1894 a British dollar was authorised to be issued for circulation in the East. It is identical in weight and fineness with the Japanese yen, and has been madelegal tender in Hong Kong, the Straits Settlements, and Labuan. The last two columns of the Table are calculated on the supposition that the relation between the values of gold and silver remains fixed at 15½ to 1; in other words, that the price of standard silver is 60°2d, per oz. troy.

The above dates are computed from the Old Style up to 1752. Those printed in heavier type are leap-years. 1752 had E D up to September 2, but A from September 14 to December 31, the intermediate days being dropped for the change of Style. Its Easter was the last in Old Style. Until them also the years were considered to begin on March 25; but that, as it did not effect the date of Easter, is not noticed in this Table. The Table of Moveable Feasts in the Prayer-Book gives all the others after finding Easter in this. The Sunday Letters in the Calendar then enable any one to count the days of the week from Sunday. The tables in modern Prayer-Books are calculated for the New Style only.

Star Spectres.

STARS WHICH COME FROM NOWHERE, AND RETURN.

Of all the problems furnished by astrology the problem of the temporary star is the most difficult.

There are other stars which the astronomers call variable. That is to say, they change not only in size, but sometimes also in colour. At one period they may be suns of the first magnitude, at others they have dwindled away to tiny points of light beyond the range of the unaided eye.

The temporary star is a veritable spectre. Out of the utter darkness it suddenly blazes into radiance, flames up, and fades back agaiu into obscurity.

Where does it come from, and whither does What is the origin of those tremendous fires compared with which our own sun is merely a fire on the domestic hearth to a blast furnace?

Many theories have been advanced to account for these strange appearances, but the one most generally accepted by astronomers also happens to be that which appeals most strongly to the imagination.

Heat is simply a mode of motion. leaden bullet at an iron target. Pick up the flattened remains immediately afterwards and they will burn your fingers. That is because the motion of the bullet has been transformed into heat.

The velocity of such projectiles is about 3,000 feet a second, or about 1,800 miles an hour.

Now, let us imagine, instead of the projectile and the target, two solid and opaque bodies travelling towards each other with a velocity to which the speed of a shell from a twelve-inch gun is as the crawl of a snail to the swift flight of a frigate-bird.

What would be the result of collision?

The two bodies, being dark, would be invisible until the moment of their contact. The shock would change their motion into heat. The materials of which they were formed, metal, rock, and sand, would be instantly changed into a luminous gas, occupying an enormous space, and this would gradually condense first into incandescent matter, then to a glowing liquid surrounded by gases, and then to a white hot solid, and so the two dead suns, mingling in fiery contact, would be reborn, and the new orb would speed on its way into the outermost depths of space, perhaps to become in some far distant age the light and life-giver to a family of worlds such as ours.

The astronomers believe that the birth of Nova Persei, the new star, came into being no one knows howlong ago. Sir Norman Lockyer one knows how long ago. Sir Norman Lockyer believes that two such bodies collided and sheered off from each other. He calculates that the collision took place at a speed of 700 miles a second, and that the two blazing orbs parted from each other at the inconceivable velocity of 42,000 miles a zinute, or two and a half million miles an hour. Yet so vast is the distance that separates us from the new star that we still see the two bodies as one. So that we have to face the startling fact that this terrific collision may have taken place many years ago. We do not see the stars as they are now, but as they were when the light left them.

Light travels across space at the rate o 186,000 miles a second. The nearest star to us is Alpha Centauri, the brightest star in the constellation of Centaur. It is nineteer billions of miles, i.e., nineteen millions of millions of miles away from us. Light taker three years and seven months to cross this great gulf. Therefore, when the astronomer turns his telescope on Alpha Centauri he sees hing him, not as he is, but as he was in 1899.

The light from the Pole Star has beer darting through space for fifty years before it strikes the astronomer's lens. Beyond these again lie an infinite succession of distances immeasurable by human means, inconceivable by human mind. Some of the remoter stars we see by the light that left them when David Brit ruled in Salem. There are possibly others whose light has not reached us yet.

Now imagine those two vast dark orbidead suns, probably accompanied by a train of dead planets, speeding black and silent hat through space at a speed of two million miles

They may have been rolling along their predestined paths for ages, and at last the fateful moment came, no one knows yet how many years ago. Motion became heat, dark ness and death became fierce and fiery life and a slender beam of light flashed through space to fall on the lens of the telescope at Edinburgh. So, somewhere in the fields of innuensity, it may be five or fifty or five hundred years ago, the new star was born. Pearson's Weekly.

Coal! Coal!

THE first thought in regard to coal is that if is made to give heat or warmth; the next, that one of its principal uses is to illuminate. But there are obtained from it the means of producing over 400 colours, or shades of colours among the chief of which are saffron, violet blue, and indigo. There is also obtained a great variety of perfumes-cinnamon, bitter almonds, queen of the meadows, clove, wintergreen, anise, camphor, thymol (a new French odour), vaniline, and heliotropine Some of these are used for flavouring. Among the explosive agents, whose discovery has been caused by the war spirit of the last few years in Europe, are two called dinitrobenzine or bellite, and picrates. To medicine, coal has given salicylic acid, naphthol, phenol and antipyrine. Benzine and napthaline are powerful insecticides. There have been found in it ammoniacal salts, useful as fertilisers tannin, saccharine (a substitute for sugar), the flavour of currants, raspberry, and pepper pyrogallic acid, and hydroquinine, used in photography, and various substances familia or unfamiliar, such as tar, resin, asphaltum lubricating oils, varnish, and the bitter taste of beer. By means of some of these we car have wine without the juice of the grape, beer without malt, preserves without either fruit or sugar, perfumes without flowers, and colouring matters without vegetable or anima substances from which they have beer hitherto chiefly derived.

One King a Year.

RULERS DEPOSED BY QUEEN VICTORIA.

DURING the reign of the late Queen Victoria hirty-five kings of considerable influence vere deposed by her.

Taking into account the lesser kings reignng in the numerous Pacific islands, and emoter nooks, about which complete records re unobtainable, it is probable that sixty tings altogether had to bow to the authority f the late Empress-Queen, or nearly one ing for every year of her reign.

Most of the kings who received peremptory otice to quit reigned in India over indeendent States. Some of their thrones were ottering, due to the discontent of their ubjects or the rise of pretenders. Others vere overthrown for acts of war against the leighbouring British power, or for murdering British subjects.

The Maharajah of Bharatpur was the last ndian monarch to incur the displeasure of he late Queen-Empress. A curious feature n this case was that the ex-Maharajah's ather, on his deathbed, made a request that his son should not be allowed to reign.

The Afghan monarch Dost Mohammed was ne of the first to fall under the Queen's ban. He was dethroned in 1838—one year after he Queen's accession—in connection with roubles in Afghanistan; but it was found hat the unrest could best be allayed by letting him on the throne again, and in 1842 he vas restored. The lesson was taken to heart by Dost Mohammed, for until his death he aithfully kept his engagements with England. The King of Scindh was the next to disappear, his territory being annexed in 1843. sikh War produced a small crop of deposi-ions, including Lall Singh in 1847, and Dhuleep Singh in 1849. The latter received a pension of £40,000 a year as a solatium, but his was ultimately stopped for disloyalty. In 1848 the Dewar Moolraj murdered a civil officer and a military officer. In 1849 he was teposed, sentenced to death, but transported. In 1856 the conduct of the King of Oude led o his deposition and the annexation of his state. In 1857 the ex-King was arrested for complicity in the Mutiny. After the capture and deposition of the King of Delhi, during he Mutiny, he was sentenced to be trans-borted, and was sent to the Cape of Good Lope, but the Colonists absolutely refused to eceive a man whose deeds had been so trocious. He was then sent to Rangoon.

Nana Sahib, another notorious figure in the Intiny, was chased from his native country, and fled to Nepaul, where all trace of him was ost. The King of Poona was also deposed at he same time.

Removing foes by poison and similar nethods were some of the Oriental customs condemned when England became allpowerful in India. A number of rulers have been deposed for not obeying Wastern tastes in this respect. Bahadur Khan, King of in this respect. Bareilly, was deposed and hanged for murder in 1860. The ruler of Tonk was deposed in 1867 for massacring a body of Hindoo chiefs. Mulhar Rao, Gaekwar of Baroda, was de-posed for poisoning Colonel Phayre, and his son recognised as ruler in his stead.

In Africa, King Theodore of Abyssinia escaped deposition during the siege of Magdala, in 1868, by committing suicide before his stronghold was taken by the British forces.

In Southern Africa, the Zulu War brought about the deposition of Cetewayo in 1879, but he was restored in 1882; continual disorder, however, led to the termination of his reign for the second time. And Dinizulu, his successor, in 1888 received ten years' imprisonment, with deportation to St. Helena--Answers.

Effects of Some Big Eruptions.

THE appalling volcanic eruptions in the islands of Martinique and St. Vincent recall the remarkable and alarming effects of many other upheavals of the earth in the world's history, the most famous, of course, being that of ill-fated Pompeii

Many volcanic eruptions have commenced upon the bed of the sea. Etna and Vesuvius in their younger days were submarine. The vast cones of the Sandwich Islands are of the same character. About a hundred years ago a column of vapour was seen to rise from the North Pacific Ocean near Unalaska, and the effect was the formation of an island. ejected materials which eventually raised the crater above the sea level were responsible for this strange formation, and owing to repeated eruptions the island is now several miles in circumference.

Some volcanoes are in a state of permanent eruption, while others are intermittent, belching forth only occasionally. Stromboli is constantly active, and a volcano in San Salvador which first became active a century ago has continued active ever since. Other volcanoes which are always busy are two in Nicaragua, one in the Andes of Quito, Cotopaxi, Sion, in the Moluccas, and a volcano in the Friendly Islands. The tops of these fiery mountains remind one somewhat of huge chimney-stacks emitting strong volumes of vapour at intervals. When volcanoes continue quiescent for some time and then break forth again the eruptions are all the more violent. This was the case when Herculaneum was destroyed, and also when the terrible outburst took place at Krakatoa, in the Straits of Sunda

Perhaps the most remarkable of the great volcanic eruptions which have startled the world was that which occurred in Iceland during 1783. The lava then thrown up from Jokal flowed in two main streams for distances of forty and fifty miles respectively, and varied in thickness and depth from 600ft.

In 1779 jets of lava, mixed with stones and scoriæ, were thrown from Vesuvius to as great a height as 10,000ft., or nearly two miles. In 1845 the ashes of Hecla were in ten hours lying thick in Orkney and Shetland.

Ashes from Consequina fell in 1835 in Jamaica, 700 miles off, and fine dust covered the ground thirty miles south of the volcano to a depth of 10ft.

Not infrequently fresh rents are opened in the sides of a volcano, forming new craters round which cones are built up by the rejected matter.—Tit Bits.

Disappearing Seaports.

THE whirligig of Fortune's wheel not only affects the history of individuals, but places, and none more than the seaports and harbours of our kingdom.

All round our shores are places that once were famous and prosperous, but which are now, and have been for some time, distinctly down on their luck.'

In the ancient world, Tyre and Sidon, Jaffa and Carthage, Acre and Venice were rich and flourishing seaports, but these queens of the sea have been deposed, and have lived to see others utterly outrivalling them. A similar experience has passed over many of Britain's gates of the sea.

The decline comes in varied ways. Sometimes the rivalry of a near neighbour will cause it. At other times the failure of particular trade may involve the seaport in Barrow-in-Furness was centuries ago a flourishing seaport, but it sank into forgetfulness for four hundred years until the hematite iron ore business and the application of the railway train came to its rescue Bristol as a manufacturing city is full of prosperity; but as a seaport it has dwindled, owing to the rivalry of Liverpool, with its miles of magnificent docks. Once the western port was the great inlet and outlet of the sugar and tobacco industries, and also of piracy and the slave trade. From Bristol, too, the first steamship went that crossed the Yet to-day Liverpool has absolutely Atlantic.

Ports have sometimes lost their standing through the advance of the sea upon the land, or by its incessant withdrawal from it. The town of Sandwich, in Kent, is one of the most striking cases of a seaport being abandoned by the sea, and so losing its trade. What was formerly a broad waterway is now a vast stretch of marsh pasture land, dotted over with sheep, and the town is high and dry inland. The town of Rye, beloved of artists for its picturesque beauty, is another example of vanished greatness in shipping affairs. Where once the flood ran up to the large houses, now pleasant gardens are seen, and smiling meadows and fruitful orchards have taken the place of brigs and schooners and barges. Its population is only about three or four Whilst many delight in its quiet thousand. charm and endless artistic suggestions, not a few of its old inhabitants sigh for a return of its former bustle and business.

The Eastern shores have suffered in similar fashion. Harwich was once the great port from London to the Hague, and through it went nearly all the fashionable Continental tourists; it was for a long time forsaken for Dover, Folkestone, and Newhaven, but has been revived by the Great Eastern Railway, with its enterprise and schemes of cheap

In Suffolk there is the town of Woodbridge ten miles from the sea, reached only by small vessels, and with coals and corn as its chief vogue, and was a well-to-do port.

In Norfolk, too, are Wells and Clay-next-the-Sea, both little more than marshes not though formerly they were busy harbour. The rough North Sea has broken away the cliffs, and made the huge banks a danger ! the small or medium craft that once ker them alive. So whilst vast seaports, such a Cardiff and Liverpool, have grown to amazir proportions, these smaller ones have decline seeming to give encouragement to the wheel of the man who said, "Survival of the fittest."—The Gem.

A Wonderful Lake.

In the vast inland seas between Canada and the United States is stored not only an ine haustible supply of cold pure water to slall the thirst of the millions who live along the shores, but a supply of food which, if avaria shall keep its hands off, will never be exhausted through all the centuries to come.

Lakes Superior, Huron, Michigan, Erie, ar Ontario have a combined area of nearly or the hundred thousand square miles; without Lal Michigan, lying wholly within the Unit and States, about seventy-five thousands of squamiles, with a short line several thousands miles in length.

To catch the fish of these great inland see calls for the labour of many thousands men, for the annual expenditure of mar hundreds of thousands of dollars; it calls for many ships and tugs and smacks and boat for millions of fathoms of nets, for large storehouses of ice, for trains of refrigerator express cars. The value of the annual cate runs into millions of dollars.

To Restore an Old Oil Painting.

FRANSFERRING an oil-painting to a new sanvas sounds an impossible feat. But it s the latest miracle of restoration when a sanvas is so rotted with age and damp as to be beyond cleaning.

A picture eight feet square, and two cenuries old, has thus been treated by a Belgian picture-dealer. The first thing he did was to lue a huge sheet of thick Manila paper irmly to the face of the picture. Then he armed it over carefully, and picked off every article of the old decaying canvas, revealing the rear surface of the paint itself. It was a pig job, and required no end of patience; but the last thread was finally removed, and nothing was left but the fragile shell of pigment. That he covered with the strongest ish-glue, and a new sheet of canvas was spread over it, and pressed down. In a few lours it was perfectly dry, and the painting was as firmly attached to its new foundation sif it had been there from the start. Nothing then remained but to take off the Manila paper, which was readily done with hot water. After that the surface was thoroughly cleaned, and the picture is now almost as bright and clear as it was when it left the painter's easel.

The First Photograph.

THE first photographic portrait from life ever nade was of Miss Dorothy C. Draper, of Hastings, New York, who posed for the picture n 1839. Her brother, Dr. John W. Draper, who had been greatly interested in the experinents of Daguerre and Nieppe, took the likesess, which has since become famous. It is n the collection of Sir John Herschel. It is a long time since Miss Draper, in the quaint bonnet and gown of the period, sat for her picture, which is still in an admirable state of preservation. As a faithful and beautiful ikeness it has never been surpassed by nodern photography.

It is a long step from the Daguerreotype of

It is a long step from the Daguerrectype of ifty years ago to the wonderful photographs of 1900. From the time of the discoveries of Wedgewood, in 1802, to the successful complesion of the Daguerrectype process by Daguerre n 1839, the only pictures taken were of still ife. Even when the Daguerrectype was in its perfection, long exposures were required, varying from three to thirty minutes. With a strong sunlight five minutes was considered by many photographers the requisite length of time to take a portrait.

The method of obtaining Daguerreotypes was complicated. First, a brightly polished silver plate was cleaned with pumice, olive polity, and nitric acid, and afterwards brilliantly polished with a soft buff. The plate was then placed, face downward, resting on supports, over a saucer on which had been scattered fragments of iodine, covered with gauze. The vapour from the iodine formed upon the plate a surface of silver iodide, which is the sensitive compound. The stage of maximum sensitiveness was reached when it was of a golden orange colour. In this stage the plate was inserted in the dark slide of the camera, ready for exposure. The pictures were beautiful, but copies could not be made. Not until Dr. Draper's successful venture was the idea of using the Daguerreotype as the means of perpetuating the likeness of individuals considered feasible.

The Wonders of Ant-Land,

ANTS are the athletes of the insect world, easily carrying ten times their own weight. The edifices they rear by conjoint labour render the pyramids ridiculous; for the common wood ant will build structures as large as a hay-cock, all of mere fragments. If others are content with smaller domiciles, it is because their needs are sufficed; but all alike dwell amid their underground galleries and halls with the order and activity of a busy, well-governed city. No nonsense is talked in ant-land about everybody being as good and great as anybody else. They nurse with infinite devotion the ant babies when they appear, putting them in the warm upper galleries by day, and at night "tucking them up" in the snuggest of lower chambers.

Sometimes whole colonies move to new quarters. Before long the emigrants will make the best of their new location, by constructing passages, chambers, pillared halls, royal apartments, and nurseries out of the earth provided, and settling down to the duties of an ant town. A little dab of honey laid outside the colony, on the uncovered part of the tray, supplies them with food, which they come to fetch, emerging at gateways made at the edge of the glass cover. Thus recommences the regular existence of the tribe, which may grow to number a quarter or a half million individuals.

When the observer quietly draws aside the upper lid which conceals the glass top, there lies disclosed the daily existence of the tiny creatures, furnishing evidence of gifts utterly astounding, and hardly to be disposed of by calling it instinct.

In one city thus suddenly revealed to view will be seen the queen-mother—of truly royal stature compared with her children and subjects—reclining in her throne-room. Ants come and go through the apartment, laying down small white pupe—the infants of the state—and carrying them off again when Her Majesty has inspected, touched, perhaps fed, them. The ants-in-waiting, if we may so style them, do not turn their backs upon the sovereign; their heads are in the direction of "the presence."

In another city whose squares and streets are next unveiled a different species lives. They are, perhaps, the pale-coloured ants, who capture and train slaves; and, if so, one may watch the luxurious masters, fed and attended by dark servitors, who scurry hither and thither, intent upon their duties, visibly performing all kinds of work for the perfectly idle fighting ants. And slowly wandering up and down the same streets and squares will be observed small wood-lice, quite blind, but domiciled and maintained by the community, the function of which appears to be keeping the city clean, for they will be seen feeling about for every scrap of dirt and removing it—the housemaids of this ant-people.

London Cannot be Killed.

IT is a difficult thing to kill a city, and there are some well-known places that have so much vitality that they will survive any number of disasters

Rome is an example. Ten times has she been swept by pestilence. She has been burned twice, and starved out on six occasions. Seven times she has been beseiged or bombarded. She still flourishes.

Paris has been besieged eight times, ten times has she suffered from famine, twice from plague, and once from fire which de-vastated it. The revolutions are too numerous to mention. Paris still flourishes.

Constantinople has been burned out nine times, and has suffered from four plagues and five sieges. Many of the Sultans have been worse for the city than any pestilence. And yet she lives.

Then there is our own metropolis. London began as a mound in a swamp. In her early history she was sacked, burned, and She has been her inhabitants butchered. visited by plague five times, exclusive of typhus, cholera, smallpox, and such maladies. She has been burned seven times. Yet she is thriving.

A Library Six Thousand Years.

PROFESSOR HILPRECHT, of the University of Pennsylvania, the Babylonian explorer, has discovered the Great Temple Library of the ancient city of Nippur, which was destroyed by the Elumites 228 B.C. For eleven years the professor had been exploring the mounds of ancient Nippur, the city that antedated Babylon by centuries as the capital of Babylonia. He found among those pre-historic ruins the library of the Temple of Nippur. This is the first Babylonian temple library that has ever been discovered, and it contains the oldest and most important records of the earliest civilization. Eighteen thousand volumes have been taken from the ruins, and it is thought that many more thousands will be recovered. Inscribed on clay tablets in the cuneiform characters which the explorations of Nineveh and Egypt have made familiar to archæological students, these literary works of men who lived 5,000 years before the Christian Era began include dictionaries, architectural plans, historical and chronological data, legal and commercial as well as religious literature, that bear witness to the time in which Abraham lived. They also show that ages before the reputed appearance of Adam man was existing, and had developed a high state of civilization, comparable in its essential points with that which we ourselves possess.-Pearson's.

Liquid Air.

Liquid air defined, is a clear, sparkling substance resembling water, but so cold that it boils on ice and freezes alcohol and mercury. Although fluid, it is not wet to the touch, but a drop of it on a man's hand burns by this pure, cool, germless air.

like white hot iron. It may be dipped up and poured about like so much water, but confine it explodes more terribly than nitro-glycerine and when left standing in the open air for few moments, vanishes in a cold grey mis In 1893 Professor Dewar first produced it i go b some quantity. It cost £600 an ounce to make—a price which he managed to reduce little later to £100 a pint. The excessive cos precluded it from commercial use, but Charle Tripler, an American, succeeded in making i at tenpence a gallon-and can make fift gallons a day. Dewar used expensive and dangerous chemicals. Tripler uses the common air itself, employing a seventy-five-horse power engine and a felt and canvas-covered tube about as large in circumference as small barrel, and about fifteen feet high tran When once the compressor engine begins to run, the liquid air can be produced in about. quarter of an hour. About as much air a goes into a small bedroom is required t furnish a pail of the liquid product.

Air becomes liquid at 312 degrees belov zero, while water boils at 212 degrees abov zero. If a room contains air at the ordinar English temperature of about fifty degree above zero, it is 360 degrees above the temperature of liquid air; consequently, if yo expose liquid air to the heat of this furnac in which we live, it boils instantly, and throw off a vapour which expands and produce power. The power of liquid air is difficult t conceive. In the first place, it has about hundred times the expansive power of steam in the second place, instead of having to wai while water is raised to the boiling point c 212 degrees, liquid air begins to produce powe the moment it is exposed to the ordinar When water is once boiled atmosphere. every degree of heat added produces on additional pound of pressure; every degree of heat applied to liquid air gives twent additional pounds of pressure. Requiring n large boiler, no water, and no coal, and con taining not the smallest fraction of waste, it uses are almost certain, in the near future, t

When liquid air was first discovered, it utility was not obvious, but it is now found that in medicine and surgery its possibilitie Air absolutely free from germ are vast. could be furnished in any amount, and if th stimulating effect of an excess of oxygen werdesired it could be had without trouble, quite free from the impurities which now so often make this gas objectionable. The temperature of hospital wards, even in the Tropics, could readily be cooled to any degree prescribed by the physicians in charge, and by keeping the air about yellow fever patients down to the freezing point, nurses would be perfectly protected against contagion, and the recover of the patients themselves facilitated. the cauterising cold which liquid air is capable of producing might be used in cases of cance. with great benefit, as compared with man caustics, since, while it absolutely destroy the flesh to which it is applied, its action i perfectly under control, and can be stopped in an instant. It is probable, also, that har fever, asthma, and even consumption, could be greatly relieved without change of climate

How to Keep the Hair on.

LET the light and air get to your head as much as possible, for these, more than anything else, tend to make the hirsute growth strong and luxuriant: There can be no doubt about that; innumerable facts go to prove it. People who go bareheaded are seldom bald-nations that wear the least head-gear have the best heads of hair; and it has been so in all ages. It would almost seem, indeed, that, given constant light and air, the hirsute growth can tolerate almost anything. The North-American Indians daub their heads with an amount of reeking and stinking grease which would rot the hair of civilised, hat-and-cap wearing man, vet, like the Ancient Britons, they are noted for their luxuriant locks. Indeed, as the for their luxuriant locks. Indeed, as the traveller Catlin tells us, hair six feet long is quite common amongst them. Sailors, too, have generally good heads of hair, notwith-standing that the salt atmosphere is bad for hair and scalp alike. Moreover, people have regained their hair by simply going without head-covering. For all which reasons, go bare headed as much as possible, and wear nothing on your head within doors. Nightcaps are out of fashion; smoking caps should be put out of fashion. Probably one reason why women are not nearly so subject to baldness as men is because, as a rule, their head-gear is more porous. Besides, they go bareheaded more than men, not being out of doors so much.

With respect to headgear, always choose a hat of some kind in preference to a cap, unless this be of some open material. Heavy cloth caps are the very worst forms of headcovering, because they can't be properly ventilated even if one tries, owing to their fitting so closely to the top of the head. Hats, on the other hand, can be, and should be, properly ventilated—namely, by means of holes at the sides as well as one in the crown. Even the much-abused, and rightly abused, "chimney-pot," if it is ventilated in this way, and fits somewhat loosely at the temples. is less injurious to hair-growth than most But the ideal hat, whether high or low crowned, is one of openwork straw.— Heywood's Penny Medical Library.

Nothing Like-Water.

YEARS ago, a physician recommended 48 tumblers of water a day as a cure for gout, and other doctors-doctors who can't believe in anything but drugs-laughed at him. there was a good deal of sound sense in his suggestion, for there is nothing like pure water Indeed, if we had for flushing the system. not, so to speak, a stream of water continually passing through our bodies to wash away all impurities, we should soon be choked, just as an engine is choked with soot and ashes if it be not properly cleansed. At the same time, we are not advocating 48 glasses of water a day; but one might take 10 or 12, as is done at water-cure establishments, with That is the simplest way to advantage. promote perspiration and to act on the kidneys, and it is through the kidneys that the uric acid, if inschuble, at anyrate, must be passed in the main. - Heywood's Penny Medical Library.

Why the Middle-Aged Become Too Stout.

ONE great reason why people of about middleage are so apt to become too stout is because, though they really need less food than when they were younger, they continue to take quite as much. They forget that their digestive apparatus is not as strong as it was, and that, as a rule, they take less exercise than they did, and consequently, that they cannot properly utilise and adequately dispose of as large a quantity of food as they were at one time able to do. Doubtless it is owing to this error that what are vulgarly called "pot bellies" are so common in the middle-agedin men, at anyrate. In women, "change of life" has probably much to do with it. However, don't eat as much food at 50 as you did at 40, or at 40 as you did at 30, unless you positively need it.-Heywood's Penny Medical Library.

Two Secrets of Long Life.

KEEP your skin clean—the whole of your skin, not merely your face and hands. Bear in mind, dirt not only causes sores, but prevents the healing of them. Uncleanliness is, perhaps, the great reason why so many of the lower classes are so subject to ulcerated legs. They seldom wash their legs, or their feet either. To keep the skin in really healthy condition, a warm bath should be taken once a fortnight—and some soap should be used. Water alone is not enough. Why? Because as water does not mix with oil, it cannot cleanse sufficiently the oil-glands of the skin, any more than it can the little tubes, sacs, or follicles out of which the hair grows, since these are also oily. And it is in these glands and hair-tubes, the latter especially, that skin germs mainly accumulate. Moreover, the sweat-glands, remember, are always more or less dirty, for is it not through them that the perspiration carries off the impurities from the system? Oil-glands, sweat-glands, hairsacs all require a thorough cleansing occasionally—and there is nothing so good for cleansing them as warm soap-and-water. At the same time, there is nothing so good for stimulating and strengthening them as cold water and friction. Therefore, cold sponge all over every morning, and give yourself a good rubbing with a coarse towel or a flesh-brush afterwards. Or, if you cannot tolerate cold water, use tepid with a handful of salt in it. Or simply rub yourself all over with the towel or flesh-brush. But don't neglect the soapand-water once a fortnight, and wash off the soap thoroughly, and wind up with plenty of friction. There can be no doubt about it: history proves that friction combined with bathing is one of the great secrets of long life. It does more good to the system than any drug could do, for the healthy, active skin which results from it is vital to our internal health. This is easily demonstrated. If you painted your skin all over, you would soon die, despite all the wonderful drugs you took to counteract your plugging of the pores. Ours is a remarkable age, but the Ancients knew as much as we do about the merits of friction and bathing—and attended to them more.— Heywood's Penny Medical Library.

Try a Dry Salt Bath.

A DRY salt bath is said to tone up the general system and renovate the complexion as if by

"I never had anything do me so much good," said a lady who has tried it. "I get that feeling of fatigue which oppresses me nearly every summer. My physician advised me to avoid tonics and to try dry salt baths instead.

"I fill a large earthen jar with the coarsest salt I can get, and add enough water to this to make a sort of thick salt paste, but not enough to dissolve the mineral. Every morning when I get up I take this up in handfuls and rub it briskly over my body. Next I jump into a tub of clear, cold water, and take a thorough but quick dousing. This being done, I take a brisk rub down with a Turkish towel.

"The effect is delicious. It gives one a sense of exhilaration. But the best part of the dry salt bath is not the feeling of freshness and renewed life that it imparts, but the soft, satiny texture of the skin.'

The Patches on Your Boots.

A SUGGESTION TO YOU AND THE SHOEMAKER.

WE are a proud nation. Many a man who cannot afford it will buy new shoes rather than have his old ones patched. He feels that he is too good to wear patches. But Mr. Gladstone displayed patches as neat as they were large and visible. Edison wears them.

This, however, is no moral lesson. We believe in the throwing aside of half-worn boots and shoes. It means that someone who needs the old pair very badly gets hold of it on good terms. It means that the boot business flourishes, which is a good thing in itself.

But let each man do as he pleases about patches.

We want to talk at present to the man who does wear patches and to the shoemaker who puts them on.

A patch on the outside is unsightly. The thin patch glued over the crack in the side of the shoe soon comes off in wet weather. The patch that is sewn through is rough. It looks worse when it frays. Therefore we say to our cobbler friends:

Put thin patches on the INSIDE OF THE BOOT instead of putting thick patches on the OUTSIDE.

The thin patch glued to the inside will stick and will last. It is not exposed to rough usage or to rain. It does not show at all, if well put on. It makes the boot as good as new in the minds of those whose pride objects to patches visible. It can be stitched with fine twine, or glued. Blacking will conceal the stitches.

Young men who wear patent leather—which is bad for the feet—know how often such leather cracks. They can use this suggestion. Girls who work hard in shops, and are compelled to buy the cheapest of foot-wear, may find this suggestion of use also.

Varnish the soles of your boots, and it will render them impervious to damp, and will also make them last longer.

Paraffin.

PARAFFIN is not half appreciated as it deserves as a cleanser and general household friend. Dirty lamp chimneys are speedily cleaned by being rubbed with a soft cloth slightly moistened with paraffin. Try the same treatment for windows instead of washing in the usual way. A mixture of paraffin and sand will move the most obstinate rust. Cloths moistened with paraffin and put in the store cupboard will prevent the invasion of moth. Two tablespoonfuls of paraffin added to a small copperful of water will be a great help in cleaning dirty cloths. The odour is quickly dispelled in the rinsing. If the sewing-machine works heavily, oil everywhere with paraffin. Work the machine well for a few minutes, so that the oil penetrates every part; then wipe clean with a soft cloth, and oil with machine oil.

Two Whitewash Recipes.

(1) Stir six pounds of whiting into cold water, avoiding all lumps. Steep three ounces of glue in cold water for twelve hours, then heat it until it is dissolved, and pour into the whiting while hot. The wash must be of a good consistency to apply with a whitewash brush. (2) Pulverise air-slacked lime till it is almost as fine as good flour, and pass it through a sieve. Next boil a quantity of rough rice until all the starchy matter is taken out of the grain. When mixing the lime and rice-water, to every half gallon of it add nearly a gallon of linseed oil. This will make an excellent whitewash for fences and outbuildings. The first recipe is for ceilings.

Uses for Lemons.

If the hair be falling out, rub the pulp of the lemon on the scalp. A headache may be relieved by rubbing the temples with a slice of lemon. Ink stains may be removed from white goods by rubbing promptly with a slice of lemon. If the complexion be not clear, squeeze a lemon into a quart of milk and rub the face with it night and morning. A corn or bunion may be relieved thus: After bathing the afflicted foot in hot water, a few drops of lemon juice on the toe will be found very soothing. A wash for whitening the hands is made of glycerine and lemon juice in equal parts. Use it at night, wear gloves, and rub the hands with clear lemon juice in the morning.

To Get Rid of Warts.

As you have apparently tried most remedies, this seems difficult to you; however, I believe the following is very successful, so there is still hope. Soak an ivy leaf in vinegar, and place it over the wart, when going to bed every night, till it disappears. The ivy leaf and vinegar is also very good for corns.

How to Get Rid of Cockroaches.

MIX borax and brown sugar together, spread round the place where the cockroaches congregate; they will eat every particle, and be poisoned.
