

Northampton June 19, 1845

Dear Friend.

I recd your kind invitation to attend the N.E. Convention but not till after the day on which it was to assemble, by reason of your note lying in the Post unusual time. My engagements would not however have permitted me to respond in person had I recd it in season. It would have been a real pleasure to have done so; and under other circumstances I should not have waited for an invitation. Sometime back I thought that I should meet again my anti-slavery friends (still friends if constant affection on my part can make them so) on that occasion I infer from the abuse the Convention recd. that it was interesting and effective. I wish as earnestly as any one living the destruction of this ignominious and most accursed Union. I have for long years regarded it as an obscene and bloody idol to which human sacrifices are offered; but I did hope that the exorbitant and degrading demands that the slaveholders would someday in their madness make upon the North would arouse it. I have been disappointed as I presume they have at the extent of Northern servility. Kick me such a parcel of tame and vaporous scoundrels! "I would as soon move a dish of skimmed milk to an honorable action". Where is the famous Faneuil Hall Committee, I C Phillips Judge Allen &c? There is one comfort in the case. The North (Maple's not excepted) has shown itself eminently fit to be dragged at the tail of the Southern car in a career of conquest the most infamous that was ever.

undertaken upon earth, or by devils above or under it. The wickedness will meet its due punishment in its own iniquity. The avalanche will fall by its own weight and I am inclined to think by nothing else. I had a faint but much cherished hope that the dignity and fair fame of our own beloved state would be preserved whatever might betide

In this too I have been disappointed. "But why should honor outlive honesty?"

"Old mother Hubbard, went to her cupboard"; and old mother Briggs, (forgive me all ~~of that~~ old mothers) and old mother Hoar and ten thousand more are very little better. The South has always maintained a better front in the wrong than the North in the right. Slavery had done its work upon ^{the} morals of the free long before an abolitionist raised his voice. Where under the sun is John Quincy? No "last words & dying speech?"

Where is that position he promised when he turned his back in the fight? I feel like the desperate Scotchman, as if I would stand up against a post and damn every thing. I almost wish the Indians had massacred the puritans, and I decidedly

Maria W Chapman

53 Federal St

Boston

June 19. 1845.
Z. F. Child with the revolution had failed; but I wish to be kindly remembered to your dear sisters, whose magic circle would have drawn me to Boston, if the convention would not could I have possibly left home Ever yr sincere friend D. Child

MS. A. 4. 2. 2. 15