—and fifteen thousand voices answer, "Aye, Aye!"

THIS enthusiastic verdict has been rendered by 15,000 physicians who thereby have decided the question: Is Sanatogen a true food-tonic of genuine merit and real efficiency?

Truly a unique vote of confidence, demonstrating to the world the belief of a great profession in a great preparation. When fifteen thousand men of science, among them the master minds of medicine, give their written endorsement of

Sanatogen

THE FOOD-TONIC

there must be conviction born of actual experience and observation. The physician watches in his patients the splendid reconstructive effect of Sanatogen, sees how wonderfully it feeds and strengthens enfeebled nerves, how it helps digestion, efficiently and persistently bringing into play the vital forces that make for perfect health.

Only after repeated experience and observation does the physician feel justified in expressing his opinion. It is under such conditions that 15,000 physicians have endorsed Sanatogen.

Thus results, demonstrated worth, are the factors behind this unexampled endorsement—because Sanatogen is prepared on scientific principles, in harmony with the known functions of the body machine. Its concentrated elements are so combined as to fulfill the true functions of a tissue food with the wonderful tonic power of a creative, reconstructive force.

When Sanatogen demonstrates these qualities, is it surprising that recognition should come from the world's master physicians, and should not this recognition mean a very great deal to you?

"Our Nerves of Tomorrow"—FREE

This is a beautifully illustrated treatise by a physician of note, absorbingly interesting and brimful of facts and information that are of vital interest to you. The book also contains evidence of the value of Sanatogen, which is as remarkable as it is conclusive.

Sanatogen is sold in three sizes: $1.00—$1.90—$3.60

Get Sanatogen from your druggist—if not obtainable from him, sent upon receipt of price.

Emperor of Austria's Private Physician

Surgeon General Dr. Kerzl, of Vienna:
"I have been using Sanatogen with splendid results and recommend it continually and everywhere because I am thoroughly convinced that it is an excellent food tonic."

His Excellency Prof. Dr. Von Leyden

Director First Medical Clinic, Berlin University, writes:
"I have gladly and frequently prescribed Sanatogen in cases of delicate patients in my clinical as well as my private practice and am extremely satisfied with the results."

Late King Edward's Physician

Dr. Ernest Ott,
"I have been using Sanatogen for a number of years in my practice with excellent results. These results have been notably good in the case of elderly people when it was desirable to build up the strength, to stimulate the bodily functions, and to improve the circulation of the blood."

Prof. C. A. Ewald

of Berlin University, Doctor honoris causa Johns-Hopkins Medical School, Baltimore, writes:
"I can say that I have used Sanatogen in a great number of cases (that is, in those disturbances of metabolism which were mainly of a nervous or neurasthenic origin), and have obtained excellent results."

Prof. Thomas B. Stillman, M.S., Ph.D.

The well-known research chemist of Stevens' Institute, writes:
"The chemical union of the constituents of Sanatogen is a true one, representative of the highest skill in the formation of a product containing phosphorus in the organic phosphate condition, and so combined that digestion and assimilation of Sanatogen are rendered complete with the greatest ease."

An Unfinished Artist

It is a strange and stirring sight,
When father carves the duck,
For dangers lurk to left and right,
When father carves the duck.

To all our minds this notion clings
That too adhesive are the wings,
Legs, breast, pope's nose and other things,
When father carves the duck.

There's dread on each expectant face,
When father carves the duck,
A constant wish to shift one's place,
When father carves the duck.

We watch with wide and wistful eyes,
The way each longed-for titbit flies,
For there is many a sad surprise,
When father carves the duck.

There is a long and strenuous strife,
When father carves the duck,
We deem the dead has come to life,
When father carves the duck.

And mother, looking on aghast,
Hopes in this time of long, long fast,
That someone will be served at last,
When father carves the duck.

We cower beneath the tablecloth,
When father carves the duck,
And that evokes paternal wrath,
When father carves the duck.

On every head a greasy blot
Of gravy is our destined lot,
And father says what he should not,
When father carves the duck.

The stuffing flies about the room,
When father carves the duck,
And lends the air a rich perfume,
When father carves the duck.

The Detroit Electric name on an Electric pleasure car means as much to you as the artist's signature on a Corot, Millet, Rembrandt or Whistler. The car is more than a utility. It represents a personality and its ownership reveals your discernment of TRUE elegance and REAL worth.

Model 25
One of Ten Beautiful Designs for 1912

THE turn of a key, your hand on the horizontal speed controller which allows full seat room, and you are ready to quietly "float" the miles away.

A slight movement of the hand—always in a natural, restful position on the horizontal lever—and you have a choice of five speeds. Move it back of neutral position and you apply the hub brakes, without even touching the foot pedals, or you can, also, bring the car to an abrupt stop by one pressure of the foot, which acts on four powerful rear wheel brakes and at the same time instantly stops the flow of current,—a double safety device, patented.

The instant response of the car to your slightest wish naturally creates an irresistible desire to know about the unseen beauty of its mechanism upon which all depends. You wish to know about the storage of electricity, how it is turned into mechanical power by the motor and then carried to the wheels without waste through the "Chainless" Shaft Drive—another patented feature.

Explanatory Note—The word "Chainless" does not refer to the absence of side chains alone, but applied to the shaft drive, means no chain or gear reductions concealed at the motor, beneath the car. A "Chainless" Shaft Drive has 1130 fewer parts than a Shaft Drive constructed with concealed chains, a self-evident advantage.

All battery cells are "get-at-able" by simply raising the piano-hinged hoods, an absolute necessity for proper inspection and "venting" while on charge.

All body panels are of aluminum. They do not check, crack or warp. That means long life, continued beauty of finish and easy repair.

Bodies are hung lower but not so extreme that there is danger to vital machinery from insufficient clearance. Wonderful springs of improved design smooth over any unevenness of the road. Ball bearing steering knuckles make steering remarkably easy.

For 1912 we build one chassis in four sizes—85-inch, 90-inch, 96-inch and 112-inch wheel base. Ten stunning body designs.

Tires—Pneumatic or Motz Cushion.

Batteries—Edison—nickel and steel; Detroit, Ironclad and Exide lead. Edison and Ironclad at additional cost.

Do not hesitate to write us for any information you may desire.

Force of Habit

"How easy," mused Robert Edeson, "it is to form a habit and how hard it is to break one. Last week I was out on a little joy ride when I came to a dignified-looking gentleman standing beside an auto, about which were scattered tools of various sorts. Two of the tires were removed. The dignified gentleman was perspiring freely and looking helplessly at a sympathetic lady in the tonneau.

"Having some trouble?" I asked, stopping.

"I decline to be interviewed," he replied.

"Carburetor out of whack?" I inquired.

"I have nothing to say," he answered stiffly.

"Had a blowout?"

"I will not make any statement at this time."

"Look here, old chap, you seem to be in trouble. Isn't there anything I can do to help you?"
"I refuse to answer on the advice of my attorney."
"Did the steering gear get stuck, or what?"
"You may quote me as saying I had nothing to say."
"Well, you're a crusty person. Don't you want some assistance?"
"I have nothing to say."

"Oh, don't bother him!" begged the sympathetic lady in the tonneau. "The poor man has been a witness before the Grand Jury and two investigating committees in the last month and it has affected him oddly."—Young's Magazine.

The Four Weapons

The brave man tries his sword, the coward his tongue;
The old coquette her gold, her face the young.

—From the Oriental.

Only a few years ago every street organ from New York to 'Frisco sang the praises of "Mr. Dooley" and with true Hibernian generosity hailed him as "the greatest man the country ever knew."

"Mr. Dooley" is Finley Peter Dunne but Finley Peter Dunne, is more, much more, than "Mr. Dooley." Grave or gay, Mr. Dunne is the sincerest, sanest, most clear-sighted writer in America to-day. He is unquestionably our most brilliant satirist. That complacent bigot, Mr. Worldly Wiseman, his latest brain-child, stands as the most notable literary achievement of the year.

Every month, beginning in the November Metropolitan Magazine, Mr. Dunne will write his observations of men and affairs under the departmental heading "FROM THE BLEACHERS." Witty and wise, it will be Mr. Dunne at his best. It will make the Metropolitan the one magazine you will want to read the coming year.

THE NEW SIZE METROPOLITAN

The November Metropolitan will be a notable magazine in many ways. It is the first number to be issued in a new popular magazine size.

It represents the most daring innovation in magazines since the publication of the first low-priced popular magazine.

The November Metropolitan, in addition to being the most interesting magazine of the month, will be the most beautiful. In its new size the Metropolitan measures 10 3/4 inches wide by 14 inches long.

The new size is not a mere change of inches. It is a great and important step toward the national magazine of the future. It gives greater opportunity for variety in make-up, and supplies the artist with sufficient surface to make his effect.

You will find all the halftones in the November Metropolitan printed on the best of coated paper, thereby insuring results such as no other national periodical can approach.

If you are "magazine-tired" buy the November Metropolitan. The new shape which opens flat, makes reading a comfort instead of a distress, and between its beautiful covers the November Metropolitan contains the most joyful reading to be found in any magazine this month.

AMONG THE MANY NOTABLE CONTRIBUTORS TO THE NOVEMBER METROPOLITAN ARE ARNOLD BENNETT, FINLEY PETER DUNNE, RICHARD HARDING DAVIS, MAURICE HEWLETT, STEPHEN BONSAI, VIRGINIA TRACY, GOUVERNEUR MORRIS AND F. CUNLIFFE-OWEN.

Medical Benevolence

Here, you youngster, LIFE, you are a pretty good chap after all. Stop your nonsense and come here and be vaccinated.

What for?

Tut, tut, none of that. You are too sensible by half not to know that vaccination is the greatest possible boon to humanity. Besides, the law demands—

How about the tetanus that follows vaccination?

Bosh. Never happens, or almost never. But if it did, haven't you ever heard of our new serum for tetanus?

Surely I have heard about that. But I didn't know before that it was intended to follow vaccination.

What?

But what about the science of vaccination, anyway, doctor? What is your excuse for defiling my healthy body with a filthy substance, the exact composition of which you do not know and the possible effects of which you choose to ignore?

There are no ill effects.

All assumption, my dear doctor. Of course, vaccinating me does not injure your health, but how do you account for the fact of disastrous cases following vaccination the world over since the absurd and barbarous practice began, to say nothing of the increase in chronic diseases.

Stop, young man! You are plainly ignorant of the fact that the most terrible scourge ever known, smallpox, has been almost entirely vanquished wherever vaccination has obtained.

Yes, doctor, you have stated several things just now that I am ignorant of as being facts. For instance, you will recall that even Sydenham declared smallpox a comparatively mild disease.

As to vaccination being the means of its control, everybody knows that vaccinated persons are liable to the contagion, often suffering more severely than as if unvaccinated. Again, how happens it that if vaccination protects and you are vaccinated, you still consider yourself in peril because of me, who is unvaccinated and prefers to remain so?

LIFE, this is trivial and I cannot waste my time on you.

All right, doctor, but if you are intent on helping humanity, just watch your sanitary measures a little more closely, stop your serum and vaccine treatment till you understand it, and you will have a better lot of human beings to practice on. Then there will be less occasion for so much guesswork as you do now.

LITTLE

The Challenge of the Young Men

WE are weary of your parties
 With their hollow battle-cries.
 We are sick of broken pledges,
 We are sick of specious lies.
 You have promised, we have trusted,
 You have failed and failed again;
 We have had enough of parties;
 Give us Men! Give us Men!

Oh, a truce to poor excuses!
 We have seen and we have heard.
 Is it hard to do your duty?
 Is it hard to keep your word?
 Is it hard to deal the justice
 You have sworn with tongue and pen?
 We are done with trade and barter!
 Give us Men! Give us Men!

We shall find them, we shall know them;
 We shall call and they will heed—
 Downright men, however labeled,
 Men of honest thought and deed;
 Men who will not shirk or palter,
 Who will shame your weak-kneed
 sloth,
 Then,—a plague o' both your houses!—
 We have had enough of both.

We are coming, we, the young men,
 Strong of heart and millions strong;
 We shall work where you have trifled,
 Cleanse the Temple, right the wrong,
 Till the land our fathers visioned
 Shall be spread before our ken.
 We are through with politicians!
 Give us Men! Give us Men!

“Uncertain, Coy, and Hard to Please”

IN a certain Connecticut town twenty-three women recently started in to vote. The usual questions were asked. When it came to the question of age, fourteen women out of the twenty-three declined to answer. They departed without voting.

It also happened, on this occasion, that five of the twenty-three women voted not only for their own but for the opposing candidates.

However, little episodes of this nature can never prove that our republic is not to be rescued by the female vote.

VOL. LVIII. NOVEMBER 2, 1911 No. 1514

Published by
LIFE PUBLISHING COMPANY
J. A. MITCHELL, Pres't. A. MILLER, Sec'y and Treas.
17 West Thirty-first Street, New York.

MR. TAFT has one faithful political friend who never fails him. William J. Bryan is that friend's name. With business groaning at the enforcement of the interpreted Sherman law, with Mr. Morgan asking "How can you unscramble eggs?" with Mr. Perkins declaring that the Republican party has broken its promise of 1908 by leaving the Sherman law unamended, with all the trust lawyers and most of the other lawyers declaring that they could no longer advise their clients what was legal and what not, out comes Mr. Bryan and roars in the Commoner at Mr. Taft. And what does he say? That Mr. Taft is too hard on business? That the Supreme Court's rulings did not modify the law enough and that the Government should have waited till the law was further amended before enforcing it? Not at all. He says the interpreted law is far too mild, and intimates that Mr. Taft packed the Supreme Court to make it so.

What a help to a struggling President! Go back! says Bryan, to disgruntled business. Go back to Taft where you belong! He may whip you with whips, but the Democratic party—which is me—is waiting to whip you with scorpions.

Really, Mr. Taft ought to beg Mr. Bryan to accept a slice of his salary, payable once a month, t. f. But how long will the rest of the Democrats, and especially the candidates for President, stand these activities of William J. in boosting William H.? Governor Wilson seems not to mind them, but perhaps appearances mislead.

Meanwhile Mr. Taft and Mr. Wickersham seem to be getting along fairly well with their job. We don't find many lawyers yet who admit that an unamended Sherman law will do, but there are some signs of a more resigned spirit, if not of altered minds. "We have reached a point," said the President at Waterloo, "where we can call a halt against appeals to a spirit of pure hostility to prosperity on the theory that no one can be prosperous without being dishonest or a violator of the laws." The New York Times begins an editorial entitled "Light After Darkness" with the words:

The trusts are not yet out of the woods, but we think it can be said that they begin to see the light shining through the trees, and to catch glimpses of those fair open fields beyond, in which, hereafter, they will be permitted to do business in conformity with the law and not in violation of it.

The Springfield Republican says:

An eminent lawyer, Victor Morawetz, who is an acknowledged authority on the legal aspects of the trust question, has concluded that while the combinations which are in violation of the anti-trust act should be dissolved, the end in view should be the restoration of "reasonably competitive conditions."

The Republican complains that no one will know what degree of competition is reasonable; but still, Mr. Morawetz has conceded something.

And the New York Journal of Commerce remarks:

There is a prospect that the anti-trust crusade may be brought to an end before long by the accomplishment of its purpose. There will have to be surrender all along the line, and a recognition of the fact that while there is no objection to large organization or "big business," honorably conducted, the public sentiment of this country will not submit to monopoly and the ruthless crushing of competition.

It does seem as if Messrs. Taft and Wickersham were making progress with their interpreted Sherman law, and if they are, and business once finds its feet on it, it will be hard work for Brother Bryan to persuade folks to go in for ripping up the new pavement just laid down on the hard beset Fifth Avenue of trade.

AT this writing, with all kinds of domestic politics boiling, and the Los Angeles trial proceeding, and Italy tolling the bell for the Ottoman Empire, and China by the ears for a new deal with the Manchus thrown out, the chief concern in these parts and more or less all over the country, is the baseball series between the champions of the two leading leagues. A new great man has been developed, a Mr. Baker of Philadelphia, who plays third base, and is a handy man with a bat, and can make home runs when they are needed. There is more interest, for the time being, in the question whether Mr. Snodgrass of New York spiked Mr. Baker on purpose or by accident, than in the question whether the Los Angeles Times building was blown up by gas or dynamite. Efforts are being made to amend the field manners of Mr. McGraw, of this metropolis. Passionate complaints have filled the papers over the distribution of tickets, and the success of speculators in getting too many. It has rained and three baseball days have been lost.

Well, well! This is an anxious life we lead. When the tumultuous exuberance of human nature fails to provide us with enough sensations, we make them to order and then gasp over them.

MRS. PANKHURST, the lady suffragette from England, is here to help with our election and try to rouse our women to a more vehement concern about votes. She has been telling them how it is done in England. She told an audience the other night, in effect if not verbatim, that underpaid girls who go to the bad, are underpaid because women have not votes. She said:

So long as we have not the power to help ourselves, men are responsible for it, and it is an awful responsibility. We may not be able to improve matters when we get the vote, but if we fail, if we fail, then the responsibility will be upon ourselves.

Dear foreign friend and sister, under our present laws, even if the girls had votes, they could not vote themselves more pay. Do you realize what an extraordinary lot of legislation the girls will have to put through before their pay is raised? If it can be done at all, it can be done as easily without votes as with them. The New York school teachers have just done it by going to Albany, and the school teachers have, as yet, no votes.

And as to that responsibility that "will be upon ourselves." It will not be on you, dear sister; not any of it. We who live in this country will have to shoulder the whole of it. As a political orator in New York, you, an Englishwoman, are entirely irresponsible. If we got a judgment against you for political damages we could not collect it.

Our Thanksgiving Investigation

THANKSGIVING being under investigation, President Taft was called to the stand.

MR. ABBOTT: The report has been freely circulated that you are responsible for Thanksgiving Day. Do you care to affirm or deny that report?

MR. TAFT: In view of the approaching Republican convention I would prefer not to answer that question.

MR. COMSTOCK: I hand you a printed piece of paper. Will you please read it and tell the committee whether or not you recognize it?

MR. TAFT: Yes. That is my Thanksgiving Proclamation.

MR. HAMMERSTEIN: Do you not consider it conclusive incriminating evidence?

MR. TAFT: Not at all, except, perhaps, in the most technical sense. By comparing it with other proclamations you will see that it possesses no originality whatsoever; that it is merely a few nice words joined together out of respect for a tradition.

MR. HAMMERSTEIN: Please remember that you are under oath, Mr. Taft. Now, do you mean to say that this is not a spontaneous inspiration designed to express an excess of gratitude over something which is not clear?

MR. TAFT: That's it exactly.

MR. DEBS: Can you conceive of any circumstances under which you would have refrained from issuing a proclamation?

MR. TAFT: I cannot.

MR. DEBS: I will ask you a hypothetical question. If it should happen that, for the great majority of the people, Thanksgiving became an empty celebration, if not an actual insult to their condition, would you take any notice of that fact?

MR. TAFT: Upon advice of counsel, I decline to answer.

The regular hour having arrived, the committee adjourned.

17 West 31st St.,
New York, N. Y.*

Envelopes addressed in any other way will not be considered.

All titles submitted must be at LIFE office not later than Saturday, Nov. 18. The contest will close at noon of that date. Within one week from Nov. 18 a check for $100 will be sent to the winner.

Announcement of winner will be made in LIFE's issue of Dec. 7—the Christmas Number.

It is not necessary to be a subscriber to LIFE in order to compete. The contest is open to every one.

Only one title from each contestant will be considered.

No manuscript will be returned.

The editors of LIFE will be the judges. They will award the prize to the title which, in their judgment, is the most deserving.

Who Did It? or The Great Emerson Mystery

IN LIFE'S issue of October 5 appeared the following:

"If a man," says Emerson, "can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse trap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten track to his door."

This quotation, thus attributed to Emerson, was taken from a little book entitled "Conklin's the World's Best Proverbs and Epigrams," published by George W. Ogilvie & Co., Chicago. (1906.)

"Did Emerson really say that?" exclaimed one of our able editors as he looked at the proofs.

The other editor modestly replied that he had not read all of Emerson's works, and even if he had, he wouldn't have remembered them; but the quotation looked as if Emerson might have written it and it passed the pickets.

Well! Well! This number of LIFE was scarcely off the press before letters began to arrive; to give them in full would be to take up the entire space in the present number. They came from everywhere: the effete East, the chivalric South, the frozen North and the wild and woolly West. And the sum and substance of their import was that LIFE didn't know what it was talking about.

One correspondent declared that the quotation had been foisted upon the public by Elbert Hubbard, of Philistine notoriety, and with malice prepense, to catch such innocent victims as ourselves. Others declared that the hoax was an old one and that Dr. Edward Waldo Emerson, of Concord, son of Ralph Waldo Emerson, had, in order to settle the fraud, painfully read through every line of his father's writings to prove that it was a fraud.

We have not yet heard from Chicago or from Mr. Conklin, the editor of the book from which we took the quotation.

Who is the guilty man?

"WHY do the banks love Aldrich so?" the children all did cry.

"Because he loves the banks, you know," the teacher made reply.

Grand Uprising of Husbands

It Will Take Place This Year on Hoboken Heights—Delegates from All Parts of the Known World—Supremacy of Women Will Be Forever Checked—Every Wife Interested—Provisions Made for Women—The End of Feminine Dominance in Sight

OWING to the fact that Madison Square Garden is no longer available, our patrons will meet this autumn on Hoboken Heights, a suitable tract of ground on that historic eminence having been secured.

This year there will be a Grand Congress of Husbands, international in character, the main idea being the general uplifting of husbands throughout the known world. In addition to the ordinary European countries, we expect delegates from Abyssinia, the Sandwich Islands, Greenland, Patagonia, Constantinople, Tokio and Polynesia. The results we hope to secure are the brotherhood of man and his continued (and kindly) supremacy over woman.

While we believe that we may confidently assert that we have established a reputation for true modesty which no amount of calumny can destroy, we wish to state that the object which we have looked forward to ever since the Husbands' Correspondence Bureau was established was to combat the situation which has recently assumed such proportions; we refer, of course, to the threatened dominance of women. Being many years ahead of the times, we have for a long time looked forward quietly to this situation; we knew that it was coming, and we felt very strongly that some one with genius enough to control it would be necessary at the critical time, in order to save the human race. From this time forward, the Husbands' Correspondence Bureau expects to become the leading factor in human progress. The woman's movement, while interesting and in a sense amusing, has no terrors for us. Our machine is now too well perfected. Our silent power has been exerting itself in every household. There has been a mental renaissance among all husbands, who have been quietly arming themselves. It should be thoroughly understood,

LIFE IS GENERALLY WHAT WE MAKE IT

Currency Experts

HOW can you tell a currency expert if you see one? How can you tell how much he knows or whether what he knows is so? Apparently there were no currency experts worthy of the name when our present arrangements were adopted, for, in all the broad land at this moment, they have no defender. Even the chief beneficiaries thereof declare them to be unscientific.

How can we know that the experts who want to change the currency are experts? Experts in other lines, such as doctors, lawyers, etc., go through some prescribed mill and come out at the other end with diplomas. For a man to have a diploma doesn't prove that he knows anything, but at least it entitles him to a hearing. Why not prescribe a course of study and a State examination for currency experts? That would, at least, give us the customary orthodox starting point.

however, that in stating this we do so with the most abounding affection for all women; there is no member of the feminine persuasion so homely, or so utterly lost to every sense of gratitude, for whom we cannot entertain the deepest pity; even our former wives—except the last one—come under this head; and so far as she is concerned—while her last plea to the judge for increased alimony has temporarily put us out of patience with her—we have no doubt that we shall come in time even to forget the deplorable manner in which she has tried to injure us. As soon as we are happily married again—which, as things look now, will probably happen in about three weeks—we shall no doubt resume our usual condition of charity toward all and malice toward none.

We are the champion of all women; we seek only their ultimate good, which we know from past experience consists in the noble art of looking after our households and keeping down the expenses while we are doing the work of the world.

The task of laying out the programme for the Congress is enormous. The tall, handsome blonde who has charge of our office has been working night and day. We have just succeeded in renting the Martha Washington Hotel complete during the time the Congress is in session, so that the wives of all delegates will be suitably provided for. The whole upper floor has been turned into a series of rooms for playing bridge. And other innovations are in process.

In addition to the usual husbands' parade, which will occupy the entire length of Fifth Avenue, there will be a grand ball, an excursion to Niagara Falls, and a daily session at which speeches and papers will be delivered, showing the progress of man and incidentally revealing the absurd claims of women to rule the household. This will all be done in the kindest spirit, but will be thoroughly convincing.

A model village, showing a group of husbands and wives living together in harmony, will be one of the features.

Among the subjects touched upon will be the following:

"Second wives and their treatment."

"Should a man over fifty ever marry a girl over nineteen?"

"Keeping ten wives in ease and luxury," by our Abyssinian delegate.

"The harem as an adjunct to civilization," by our Constantinople delegate.

We think we may confidently predict that our Husbands' Congress will mark the subsidence of the wave for woman suffrage which has been afflicting us for so long. Our motto is "Publicity." Everything will be open and aboveboard, and when the great power of this bureau is understood, when women come to realize that every husband in Christendom is firm in his stand, they will all accept the situation and settle down once more to woman's practical ideal, namely, taking care of us as we need to be taken care of, in order that the great work of the world may proceed in an orderly manner.

Our rates will be as usual, cash in advance, and all reports confidential. Call, write or wire.

Husbands' Correspondence Bureau.

Approaching the Limit of Possibility

THE wealth of stage entertainment New York is enjoying this season strains these columns for even passing mention. Some of the dramatic productions suggest discussions too lengthy and in some cases too serious for a journal whose field is so large that it can touch only briefly and lightly on any topic.

"The Return of Peter Grimm," for instance, is a play whose subject is the relation of the living to the dead, a subject which has filled countless volumes and will fill countless volumes more. In writing the play, Messrs Belasco and De Mille have appealed to one of the greatest of human interests, although they, like all the others, have added not a single mite to the solution of the great problem.

Dramatically, leaving aside the sombreness of the topic, they have produced an interesting result. To Mr. Belasco belongs the credit of lending an air of actual credibility to the theatrical depiction of the supernatural. There was never a stage ghost handled with such ingenuity as that of Peter Grimm. Although dead, the old Dutchman moves among those he has left behind him, stirring them unknown to themselves and this without any of the theatric devices of lights, gauze and voices from off stage. In the case of another character he resorts to a mechanical stage trick to produce an illusion, but the incident, rather paltry by comparison, is not of enough importance to spoil the general impression of a remarkable achievement.

Mr. David Warfield gives a delightful impersonation of the title character, although his present accomplishment is nothing like as well defined or as moving as his other serious creations. He is supported by a competent company, the most notable single performance being that of an unusually clever boy actor named Percy Hilton.

The appeal of "The Return of Peter Grimm" is to all those who have no settled philosophy concerning death and the hereafter and has a special interest for that large element which finds a charm in dabbling in the hidden, whether they call their cult spiritualism or by any of the other myriad names applied to speculation and experiment of the same sort. To more materially-minded theatregoers this latest of Mr. Belasco's productions in New York is likely to prove more depressing than amusing.

IN a season of less competition, "The Only Son" would arouse greater interest than it seems likely to just now. The mother motive has been so thoroughly exploited on the stage that to present-day audiences it sounds rather mawkish, although Mr. Winchell Smith applies it in novel fashion. The mother in the present instance has to be the subject of constant apology, so audiences may be pardoned for not rising to the old lure with their usual enthusiasm. The author also makes free use of the modern type of trust capitalist who on the stage of to-day has supplanted the former financial villain who, in the old plays, was the village note-shaver and forecloser of mortgages. In this drama the trust villain, who happens also to be the father of the hero and husband of the discarded mother, supplies Mr. Claude Gillingwater with material for the best acting in the piece. The mother herself is a colorless detail among the characters, and the youthful hero falls to the lot of Mr. Wallace Edinger, who is as boyish as ever, but whose dry voice utterly precludes any possibility of sympathetic appeal.

"The Only Son" is moderately interesting, but in plot and handling is a far from satisfactory example of play construction, which means that it doesn't convince its audiences.

ALWAYS we have the musical plays with us and in the space of one week three new recruits have been added to their number. Best of these is "The Quaker Girl," which, imported from England, reopens the former Majestic Theatre, now to be known as the Park. Mr. Lionel Monckton has furnished to an ingenious book a score which, written in the English method, is a refreshing contrast to the more sensual strains of the waltz pieces with which we have been deluged since the success of "The Merry Widow." It contains waltzes, but not in cloying excess, and its most successful numbers are in the school of the old London Gayety productions. There are several of these, and, of course, brilliant settings, costumes and chorus girls galore. The Quaker idea is carried to some extent in the music and with refreshing effect.

An unusually clever company is allotted to this piece, including Nellie McHenry, May Vokes, Percival Knight, Clifton Crawford and Ina Claire. These last four make a combination whose equal has not been seen on the musical show stage for a long time. Ina Claire in particular, had she more voice, would be ideal for this kind of work, as she is pretty, graceful, refined, shapely, an excellent dancer and displays real intelligence in what she does.

It requires no gift of prophecy to foretell a long and profitable career for "The Quaker Girl."

THE other two musical pieces, "The Duchess," with score by Mr. Victor Herbert, and "Gypsy Love," by Herr Franz Lehar are along lines with which we have become too familiar of late.

"Gypsy Love," although by the author of "The Merry Widow," and, of course, provided bountifully with waltzes, has some strikingly pretty and stirring music. The composer alternates the tinkling airs of Vienna with the more strenuous strains of Hungary with effective skill. The plot is of rather more than usual interest, but the American book is in the deadliest style of Messrs. Harry B. and Robert B. Smith.

"The Duchess" shows that Fritzi Scheff's voice is as brilliant and apparently unworn as ever. Also that her physique is unimpaired. The whole performance is reminiscent of "Mlle. Modiste," although Mr. Herbert's score and the present book are far from being up to the standard of that success. In fact it looks as though every one concerned had been afraid to attempt anything novel or original. Therefore "The Duchess" does not show the progress demanded in a period of strong competition.

"THE Garden of Allah" has come at last. Its dramatic authors, Mr. Hichens and the former Mary Anderson, have taken it too much for granted that everyone has read the book, so the story is somewhat obscured in the early part of the play. In the end it is made clear and includes some opportunities for excellent acting.

It is to its wonderful reproduction of the North African atmosphere that "The Garden of Allah" must look for its special distinction. In this Mr. George Tyler, the producer, and his staff of artists, more than share honors with the authors. Of course the new note which Mr. Hichens's book sounded in his description of the lure of the great desert was the foundation of it all, but it could never have conveyed anything like it so well without the truly remarkable stage effects possible in the former New Theatre, now the Century.

Not to have seen "The Garden of Allah" in its present magnificence will be a defect in the education of any theatregoer.

Metcalfe.

Astor.—Last week of "The Arab." Fairly interesting and picturesque drama of what happens to American missionaries in Turkey.

Belasco.—"The Return of Peter Grimm," with Mr. David Warfield. See above.

Broadway.—"The Never Homes." Suffragettes in control. Brilliantly staged musical show, making fun of what may happen.

Casino.—"The Kiss Waltz." Musical show with the Viennese waltz as the principal motive.

Century.—"The Garden of Allah." See above.

Cohan's.—"The Little Millionaire." Mr. George M. Cohan exploiting himself and his family in musical show with some fun and some songs.

Comedy.—"Bunty Pulls the Strings." A whole lot of fun with the Scotch. Very well acted and very original comedy.

Criterion.—"Passers-By." English lower class types well depicted as adjuncts to a moderately interesting drama.

Daly's.—Mme. Simone in "The Whirlwind." Notice later.

Empire.—Mr. John Drew and good support in pleasant English society comedy entitled "A Single Man."

Gaiety.—"The Only Son." See above.

Globe.—"Gypsy Love," by Franz Lehar. See above.

Harris.—"Maggie Pepper." Rose Stahl showing what may occur to a conscientious employee of a department store. Rather interesting play.

Herald Square.—"The Wife Hunters." Notice later.

Hippodrome.—"Around the World." Series of impressive stage pictures of foreign scenes accompanied by ballet and spectacle.

Hudson.—"The Price," with Helen Ware. Notice later.

Kuickerbocker.—"The Siren." Waltz music and Mr. Donald Brian's dancing as main features of a musical show.

Lyceum.—Billie Burke in "The Runaway." Diverting French comedy giving the star ample opportunity to display her vivacious personality.

Lyric.—"The Duchess." Musical play, with Fritzi Scheff. See above.

Maxine Elliott's.—Miss Margaret Anglin in "Green Stockings." This is not literal, but the clever artist appears in an amusing and well acted comedy of that title.

Playhouse.—"Bought and Paid For." Fun and pathos combined in a well acted up-to-date play.

Park.—"The Quaker Girl." See above.

Republic.—"The Woman." Mr. Belasco's fine staging of an interesting play based on the corruption of Washington politics.

Thirty-ninth Street.—"The Million." Notice later.

Wallack's.—"Disraeli." The British Premier cleverly counterfeited by Mr. George Arliss in an amusing little play of the Victorian era.

Weber's.—"Mrs. Avery." Notice later.

Winter Garden.—Gaby Deslys heading the bill in an elaborate display of not very high class vaudeville and extravaganza.

Thanksgiving Dinner for All Pessimists

It Will Be Given Under the Auspices of the Pessimists' Club, and Everybody in America Who Can Come is Expected to Be Present

THE Pessimists' Club will hold its usual Thanksgiving dinner this year. The following proclamation has been sent out to all members:

Whereas, Everybody understands that Thanksgiving is in reality a day of universal melancholy, concealed under the hypocritical guise of merriment; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the pessimists of America set aside the last Thursday of November as an occasion for emphasizing the hopeless condition which we, as a nation, have gotten ourselves into; which inwardly we all recognize, but which we are ashamed to admit outwardly.

And, furthermore, let it be understood that the great numbers of pessimists who will undoubtedly attend this dinner should not lead us to any feeling of false encouragement; it is really only an additional evidence of the unanimity we all feel with regard to our lamentable state.

The menu of the dinner is as follows:

Imported typhoid oysters.
Boracic acid olives. Pyroxide celery.
Chemically prepared tomato soup.
Canned lobsters, tannic sauce.
Cold storage turkey, cochineal cranberries.

Alum tarts, coal tar strawberry jam.
Yellow ochre pumpkin pie.
After-dinner chicory demi tasse.
Salicylic soda biscuits.
Pittsburg Perfectos. Glucose bonbons.

Cokeberry claret.
Jersey champagne.

As a rule, we pay no attention to complaints, as they are so numerous and because nothing can be done about them, but in this instance one of our members has written us as follows about this Thanksgiving dinner:

"I see no reason why our club should give a Thanksgiving dinner. Of course, I recognize the fact that at the dinner the traditions of the club will be preserved and that it will be simply a chance to unite us once a year more firmly, as pessimists. But why is this necessary? The object of the average family Thanksgiving dinner is to create as much sadness as possible; why, therefore, is a Pessimists' Club dinner going to add anything to the gravity of nations? Things couldn't be any worse; why go to all of this bother?"

In reply, we will say that it is not the intention of the management of the club to take any member away from a family Thanksgiving dinner—especially if this happens to be a large family affair—if he thinks that he is going secretly to be as unhappy as possible, surrounded in his own home by his own relatives. But it must be remembered that in our club we have the atmosphere and the spirit of pessimism fully developed on scientific principles, and we firmly believe that every member will have a fuller and more complete sense of the utter hopelessness of everything by attending our dinner than he could possibly have at home.

By all means, bring your relatives if you think they will add anything to the melancholy of the occasion. Almost everyone of us has some relative who has the reputation for having a keen sense of humor, and who never fails to vent it on everyone within range; these are the people we are looking for. And if they are in the habit of playing practical jokes, so much the worse; bring them along by all means.

Since sending out the preliminary notice about this dinner we have been receiving acceptances from all over the country. One member writes:

"I shall be at the Thanksgiving dinner, realizing that even at home I probably cannot have a worse time. At Thanksgiving what have we to look forward to? Nothing, indeed, but Christmas shopping and Christmas bills! This is the time also when we should all remember that New Year's is approaching—New Year's, with its awful possibilities. I hope that you have considered these matters, and will have them dwelt upon at the dinner."

This leads us to instruct all our guests who will be present at the Thanksgiving dinner as follows:

You will be expected to stuff yourself as full as possible. While this

"The object of the average Thanksgiving dinner"

BAIT

operation is attended by some show of immediate enjoyment, all this is purely fictitious; you will suffer enough the next day to make up for it.

Do not hesitate to smoke all you can; excessive and persistent smoking, if continued for several hours at a time, will depress you more than anything else known.

All old stories will be welcome.

The following toasts will be given:

"To our wives: May their extravagances never grow less."

"Prosperity, a fetish."

"To our President, and his harrowing and hopeless job."

"Our creditors—their inevitably increasing number."

Other toasts will be considered, provided they are prepared with a full realization of our condition.

At no time in the year is the opportunity for all pessimists to unite so good as at Thanksgiving time. It is, therefore, believed that all pessimists realizing this will attend this dinner, which will begin with Mendelssohn's Funeral March.

And, in looking for the largest attendance upon record, we desire to state that the great perfection of organization which the Pessimists' Club has reached should not be taken to mean anything encouraging. On the contrary, it is evidence that the American people as a whole are thoroughly aware of their hapless plight. There is, therefore, no consolation to be drawn. We have none to offer.

MANY a fear sticks a feather in his cap and calls him conservatism.

Dr. Wiley's Thanksgiving

LORD, as from off this turk I cut a slice
And note its flavor, verging on the strong—
Meaning it's lain in Omaha on ice

For fully six or seven years too long—
And as I taste the dressing, brimming o'er
With poisonous preservatives abhorred;
That these have never done for me before,
I thank Thee, Lord!

The cranberry sauce I reach for, knowing well
How saccharated glue and analyne
Can mock the ruby fruit of Jersey's dell
Yet gnaw away the stomach's inner shrine;
Nay more, I'm 'ware the jellies of to-day
Of falsely flavored, tinted trash are blent,
Yet I maintain I'm thankful, anyway—
I am content.

Bring on the old mince pie of ancient meat
Dopey with acids, sogged with shoddy spice;
Fain would I analyze it as I eat,
But I confess the language isn't nice,
Being a page from Sinclair's "Jungle" book
Combining all the foods and drugs that kill:
Yet spite of this I do not blame the cook—
I'm thankful still.

I'm thankful that the Washingtonian clams
Who block my schemes to keep our fodder pure—
The Wilsons and the wicked Wickershams
Seeking to oust me on a charge obscure—
I'm thankful when they sit them down to feed
On cranberry sause and turk and celere
Are risking King Adulteration's greed
The same as me!

Wallace Irwin.

WHITE WINGS OF THE FUTURE

Democratized Fifth Avenue

SOMEHOW, the Fifth Avenue dwellings that have had their front steps shorn away seem more democratic than they used to. Their hospitalities seem less formal and exclusive when you can step right into them from the sidewalk level. They are more like shops now, and the shops invite all comers.

If we all had our noses cut off, society would seem more democratic, because for a time there would be a feeling that one noseless man was as good as another.

So it is, just for the moment, with the shorn-off Fifth Avenue houses. But they don't look ill. Some look better than they did; some look worse. The worst loss is Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt's front steps, which it was a great pity to disturb.

Dis-Bleased

SUCH odd things happen! Governor Cole Blease, of South Carolina, one of the most abusive gentlemen in public life, is mad because a newspaper editor called him a comic opera villain. It is to wonder that a man so nimble with his mouth as Governor Blease should object to as mild a comment as that. But after all, it is the abusive men who object to having anything thrown at them.

A Penitentiary for Guide-Shooters

THE disgusting annual record of guides shot in the woods by hunters who mistook them for deer is now accumulating in the daily papers. There ought to be a national penitentiary—a true one, designed for retirement and repentance—to which every hunter who shoots a guide should be invited to retire for six months.

Take Your Choice

CARDINAL GIBBONS opposes direct election of Senators: "If you cannot trust the members of the Legislature," he says, "how can you trust their constituencies from whom they spring?"

How, indeed! It is a poser, and we offer the question to all those who may wish to become rhetorical in opposition to this measure. And for those who may wish to become rhetorical in favor of it, we offer the following:

If you cannot trust the constituencies from whom they spring, how can you trust the members of the Legislature?

"For an instant she paused, then looking up, she saw standing before her the man she loved"

Old Masters in the Light of Criticism

I.

THERE was an old man, Cimabue,
Who was awfully fond of chop-
suey;
So he painted a lot
To fill his old pot
With articles gummy and gooey.

II.

He had for a pupil Giotto,
Who, when the Duke told him he'd got
to,
Built a very tall tower
In less than an hour.
His reward was a dish of risotto.

III.

After him came the galantuoma,
Who built the dome on the Duomo,
Fillipo Brunelleschi,
With temper so pesky
His rivals all had to take bromo.

IV.

Somewhat later, Paolo Ucello
Found his pictures would look a pale yellow,
So he painted them blue.
But the yellow soaked through
And made them most wondrously mellow.

V.

There probably was a Benozzo.
His art wasn't good till it got so.
He painted a chapel
And Eve and the Apple.
(This story is true or is not so.)

VI.

A Fiesolan sculptor named Mino
Did statues in fine cipollino.
Among them the bust
Was a horrible bust
Of that prince of philosophers, Zeno.

VII.

Rafaello Sanzio d'Urbino,
After breakfasting on maraschino,
Would paint several miles
Of Madonnas with smiles
And put in the night playing at Keno.

VIII.

Then came a Venetian, called Titian,
Whose only and darling ambition
Was to paint ladies nude,
With their heads slightly skewed,
And their arms in a pretty position.

IX.

The Bolognese painter, G. Reni, Always painted eyes upturned and strained.
His ardor was such,
And he painted so much,
That Cook's tourists still think him
quite brainy.

X.

At Seville, in Spain, one Murillo
Painted figures that look like a pillow
With straw colored hair
And faces so fair,
All drooped like the sad weeping willow.

XI.

Last of all comes Antonio Canova,
Whose statues we'd like to turn over
And spank them so much
That the splinters and such
Should fly all the way to Jehova.

How Big is Hunnewell?

WILL the Director of the Census oblige many friends by issuing a pamphlet giving the population of all the towns, villages and hamlets in the United States?

We need this information.

For observe the case of Hunnewell,
Kan., the settlement that has the woman Mayor, with whom other town officers dispute. The papers have talked about Hunnewell as though it was Utica, or Rochester, or Dallas, or Tacoma, recording and discussing its affairs and such details as the proceedings of its Chamber of Commerce.
But there began to be a rumor that Hunnewell was a small place. It did not appear in the World Almanac's list of cities of 7,000 population and over.
Then some one whispered that it had 407 inhabitants. Following that the Director of the Census disclosed on appeal that by the last federal census
(1910) Hunnewell had 208 folks.

Shades of Malthus! What is a hamlet of that size doing with a Mayor!
Is the whole tale of Hunnewell a joke?

Send out the pamphlet, Mr. Census
Man. As it is now, we have no protection against any microbe village that gets consent from the news associations to pose as a full sized place.

Poor Frisco!

CALIFORNIA, as a State, desired
woman suffrage. And she got it.

San Francisco, as a city, did not desire woman suffrage. And she got it.

San Francisco knows, as most of us know, that one of the worst things that can happen to any city is the female vote. Male voters know it. The more thoughtful the voter the better
he knows it; and the more he dreads it.
He knows that the ignorant vote and the purchasable vote will be doubled:
that it is the death knell to civic reform.

All that, however, does not disturb the suffragette. And there is no reason why it should. She is no more to blame than a baby for scorching its fingers. Unlike the baby, however, she refuses to learn. Men who have discussed this subject—or tried to—with suffragettes know the futility of the effort. As well argue with a canary bird.

It is certainly an excess of punishment that San Francisco, after its earthquakes and its fires, should be afflicted with the female vote.

Women May Smoke if Men Do

ALDERMAN DOWLING thinks women should not smoke in public restaurants in New York, and wants an ordinance to forbid it.

Somebody please take the alderman
aside and expound it to him that laws to forbid to women ordinary actions and indulgences that are permitted to men don't go in the courts. We have long been aware that the overcrowding of the public vehicles in New York could be greatly relieved by a rule forbidding women to ride in them, but the lawyers say such a rule would be unconstitutional. So with Alderman Dowling's rule "to prohibit tobacco smoking by females in public places."

Men and women in the United States are equal before the law. So far as that goes women already possess what the suffragists practice and orate to win for them.

PRICES are governed by the law
of supply and demand—the supply of easy-going consumers and the demand of the trusts.

The Great Arnold Bennett Problem

Case of the Latest English Ambidextrous Literary Phenomenon

IS Arnold Bennett a phenomenon or a freak?

There seems to be a curiously tangled conflict of opinion on the subject. And not the least curious kink in the critical snarl is the odd fact that it does not cut the Gordian knot to admit that he is both. For even among the people that thus hold, there are those who advance diametrically opposite reasons in support of the separate items of their double agreement. Some think that the author of "Clayhanger" and "The Old Wives Tale" is a phenomenon, and the author of "How to Live on Twenty-four Hours a Day" and "The Human Machine" a curiosity. Others confidently maintain that it is the other way about.

Perhaps the situation might be explained by assuming that Mr. Bennett is an ambidextrous author who writes impersonal literature with one hand and didactic best sellers with the other; who brings an equal earnestness to either achievement; who never lets one hand know what the other is doing; and whose right- and left-handed critics judge him from the biased viewpoints of their respective predilections. Or it may be possible that Mr. Bennett is an ambidextrous author in another sense; that he is equally the artist and the man of business; that with his indefatigably acquired skill he is putting his astonishing understanding of the middle class mind to double use; employing it on the one hand as the raw material of his art, and, on the other, making it the target of his commercialism. It is possible that he knows the middle class mind so well that he is equally successful in interpreting it and in catering to it.

Whichever explanation we incline to, we must all agree, I think, that there is something phenomenal in the fact that a writer who, two years ago, was only known to perhaps two in a million of the inhabitants of America, is now at one and the same time being widely pointed out as an original and successful enlarger of the scope of the English novel and enthusiastically followed by thousands of eager disciples who regard him as the inspired prophet of a new cult of self-development.

Arnold Bennett's new book, "Hilda Lessways" (Dutton, $1.50), is by Bennett, the novelist, and not by Bennett, the propagandist. In itself, that is to say quite apart from its connection with the author's previous novel, "Clayhanger," it is a study of a girl's mind and a history of the development of a girl's character and personality that is noteworthy both for the completeness and clarity of its understanding and for the straightforward simplicity of its presentation. But considered, as it is meant to be considered, in connection with "Clayhanger," it not only constitutes an entirely new device in fiction, but adds an almost uncanny illusion of reality to an imaginative work already more than ordinarily lifelike.

Hilda is the girl whom Edwin Clayhanger married. In the first novel we see her (as he saw her) but a few times. We feel, as he felt, her odd though potent charm, but are unable, as he was unable, to reconcile her unquestioned actions with her apparent character. And at the end, although we understand and sympathize with his marrying her, she remains to us, as indeed she was to him, a tantalizing although an irresistible mystery.

In the new book, whose relation to the first is that of a co-ordinate and not of a sequel, we have the independent history of this almost incidental and all but enigmatic heroine. The story is a separate fabric of fiction, but in spots it interpenetrates the first. And not only, by showing us the characters common to both tales from the bifocal points of view of the chief actor in each, does it throw these figures into a sort of spectroscopic relief; but in proving to us that Hilda, who showed in "Clayhanger" as only a half character, a pilaster, a decorative and explanatory finish in the character scheme of the hero, is in reality an autonomous and self-consistent personage, the book gives us in a heretofore unimagined degree the impression that the world of its author's imagining is a bona fide three dimensional affair like that in which we live.

Confidential Book Guide

The Big League, by Charles E. Van Loan. A volume of rattling baseball stories that deserves to make a hit.

The Claw, by Cynthia Stockley. A tale of South Africa, being a hifalutin love story ballasted with cattish character sketches of frontier femininity.

The Common Law, by Robert W. Chambers. Much ado about nothing in a fashionable New York studio. A pseudo-problem novel with a highly decorative mis en scène.

The Dangerous Age, by Karin Michaelis. Pathological fiction. A study of distorted instinct presented in the diary of a woman in the forties.

Hilda Lessways, by Arnold Bennett. See above.

The Iron Woman, by Margaret Deland. A broadminded and big hearted story of contemporary American life.

The Long Roll, by Mary Johnson. A big canvas of the making of an army and the realities of war, stretched on a wooden frame of historical romance.

Miss Gibbie Gault, by Kate Langley Bosher. A generous second helping of "Mary Cary."

My Life, by Richard Wagner. A detailed and highly interesting account of all that Wagner the man did for the sake of Wagner the genius.

The Price, by Francis Lynde. The reformation of a philanthropic burglar. A sociological study with melodramatic leanings.

The Reappearing, by Charles Morice. A French satire based on the supposed coming of Christ to Paris.

Thorpe's Way, by Morley Roberts. The wittily told story of an unconventional love making.

Three Plays, by Brioux. Forceful dramatic presentations of blinked social conditions, translated from the French.

The Unknown Isle, by Pierre De Coulevain. A long winded but intermittently enjoyable interpretation of England and the English.

Stolypin

THE late P. A. Stolypin, head statesman and administrator of Russia, was indeed a hard man, but it is not clear that his taking off has been profitable to any party in Russia. He was not the kind of man who can be replaced. Military governors, grand dukes, police chiefs and all the usual kinds of Russian officials can be supplied in necessary quantity by the machinery of the Russian Empire, but Stolypin was not a standardized product. He was a great individual, who could rule, suppress and also think. He could think, and did, not merely for the Czar, but for Russia. He knew Russia's needs, and however stern and autocratic were the plans by which he practiced to meet them, the plans did recognize the needs.

Big men are scarce and valuable. Stolypin was a very big man. Some of the radical newspapers in Russia agree that his murder was a greater disaster for his public adversaries than for his supporters.

It is a very bad mistake to blow up the wrong man, but it is sure to happen wherever assassination becomes a political habit. That is one great trouble with that habit. It is sure to fail in judgment. The recall is much better, for that gives second thoughts a chance.

Finance

THE principal thing to be noted about finance is that nobody will admit that he does not understand what it means.

This is due to the well-known convention that two and two make four.

"Was it ordained," said Arthur Hugh Clough, "that twice two should make four, simply for the intent that boys and girls should be cut to the heart that they do not make five? Be content; when the veil is raised, perhaps they will make five! Who knows?"

At present the chief difficulty is that so few people really know that two and two actually make five. Among the masses of common people the belief that two and two make four is universal. This obsolete doctrine is still taught in our public schools. Mr. Morgan, Mr. Aldrich, Mr. Ryan and a few other choice spirits have learned that this is not so—that two and two may not only make five, but possibly ten or twenty, according to the condition of things.

WM. H. MERCURY

WHO HAS TRAVELED TWO HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIVE THOUSAND MILES
IN ELEVEN YEARS

The fact that the rest of us are still wrapped up in the old belief is the cause of all our troubles.

The real secret of finance then, is to discard the laws of arithmetic at once and get down to business. It is amazing that no one of the multitude has thought of this before.

"FATHER, what does it mean when it says, 'kid-gloved reformers'?"

"It means a man who's trying to stop graft without injuring the business of the grafters."

Proverbs of a Politician

TO work is human; to graft divine.
An ounce of pull is worth a pound of push.

The trust proposes; the boss disposes.
Fair count never won faint election.
An office in hand is worth two on the ticket.

It is better to have grafted and lost than never to have grafted at all.

A wink to the wise is sufficient.

I would rather be boss than President.

Marse Henry Discusses Mr. Brisbane

DISCOURSING in Collier's about "The Editorial, Past, Present and Future," Mr. Tiffany Blake includes a review of the professional exploits of Mr. Arthur Brisbane, whom he calls "the shop-girl's Addison," and praises for his democratization of the essay as "the most honorable thing done by yellow journalism."

To which, in the main assenting, Col. Henry Watterson names it as "the single and serious disadvantage which yet opposes itself to Mr. Brisbane's enrollment among the immortals of his profession," that "he is scarcely credited with being his own self," but is "either the shadow behind Mr. Hearst or the flambeau in front of Mr. Hearst."

To be sure; to be sure. One cannot think of Mr. Brisbane without thinking of him as Mr. Hearst's employee. It may be, as Marse Henry says, that that detracts from his standing among the immortals of his profession. But if so, how very slight a chance there is nowadays for any working journalist to break into the group of the immortals of journalism! How many famous writing editors are there nowadays who are known and advertised as controlling the papers in which their writings appear? There may be another besides Mr. Watterson, but who is he? All the others we can think of are flambeaus in front of or shadows behind some man with a purse.

That is nothing against the man with the purse. It only means that great newspapers nowadays represent very large investments of capital, and that the final responsibility for their opinions and conduct lies with their owners and publishers rather than with their editors. It is the owner that must stand the loss in case the paper goes wrong and the owner that gets the credit and the profit for what is done well. One may approve Mr. Hearst or not; one may object to Mr. Brisbane, because he works for Mr. Hearst and not for some one else. But is it not true, Marse Henry, that Brisbane, if he wished to continue and make a living at the trade of being a writing editor on a strong paper in New York, had to be the shadow or flambeau of somebody? If he had stayed with Mr. Dana, could he have come to be the absolute editor of the Sun? Not unless he could have bought the paper as Mr. Laffan did. If he had stayed with Mr. Pulitzer, could he have been the absolute editor of the World? No! He could only have been Mr. Pulitzer's flambeau. He recognized the conditions of contemporary employment in his profession, recognized that as a writing editor he must take some owner's pay for providing unsigned editorials, and made for himself a bargain which is said to have been amply remunerative, and which we suppose has suited him.

"THE COLD, GRAY DAWN OF THE MORNING AFTER"

If that exploit places him under serious disadvantage in qualifying as an immortal of journalism, don't you think, Marse Henry, that the present immortals are fairly secure against intrusion from contemporary aspirants? They must work for somebody, and is it not about the best they can do to become so luminous that that somebody's bushel cannot hold all their light?

The dust-begrimed tramp saw the good lady of the house pottering about in the garden; so he approached her on the subject of alms. "And where have you been, and how do you live?" she asked.

Noble Science, This.

There is a new science called mnemonics, which is trying to get itself introduced into our public schools. We have no kick on this science—only it seems to us to be a roundabout way of arriving at facts that you ought to remember right off the bat. It appears to work something in this manner.

"When was Lincoln born?" asks the teacher.

"I—f-f-forget," whines the pupil.

"Naturally you do. Go at it right. How many Muses are there in mythology?"

"Nine."

"Right. Now double that number."

"Twice-nine's-eighteen."

"Right again. Multiply it by 100."

"1800."

"Good. Add the number of Muses to that."

"1809."

"Aha! That's when Lincoln was born. Why don't you learn the scientific way of getting at these things?"

As we said in the first place, it's a noble science; but we'd rather remember dates.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Advice

EDITOR LIFE:

DEAR SIR.—As regards doctors in general, amen, say I. They need improvement.

And as to vaccination—well, I was “raised in the faith,” but believe now that the hazard of injury by vaccination is, in this country, day and age, greater than that from smallpox, which is remote.

But, LIFE, as to some few other things, such as bacteriology, serum treatment, etc., your attitude toward these things seems rather one of self-inflicted blindness than sound and judicial criticism.

Perhaps you do not realize that the engineer—a calm-blooded organism, dealing rigidly and coldly with facts, dollars and results—guided by the science of bacteriology, has done more toward the prevention of typhoid, for instance, than all the medicos put together. Also, through bacteriology alone was it possible to discover the source of yellow fever, the mode of infection and to effect its prevention—practically its eradication—in localities where it has been a frightful scourge for ages.

Students of bacteriology and immunity admit that this is but an infant science. But it is a tremendous and most beneficent infant even now. Read up, sprightly sir. Take Jordan's General Bacteriology, Bowhills's Bacteriological Technique—any one of the many thoughtful balanced compendia of research by many indefatigable workers for many years. Dull reading, to be sure. But assume the judicial, the impersonal attitude, and weigh carefully the evidence presented by many men whose years of patient labor may possibly have extracted some few crystals of truth that even LIFE may recognize—if LIFE loves truth.

By virtue of the class of people who most read and appreciate LIFE, its influence is great. An attitude of illogical and dogmatic unbelief is unbecoming and harmful to this influence. Burn a little midnight oil, old friend.

Sincerely,

GEO. S. BINKLEY.

The Clean Also Suffer

DEAR LIFE:

For several years I've been “obeying that impulse” and planking up my dime every Tuesday or Wednesday for a copy of you. I've sworn by you. Now I come to register a very strenuous kick. In your issue of October 5 you publish a letter from Ottawa, signed “H. McD. Walters.” This party seems to think himself an authority on smallpox and vaccination. To quote him, “I have been through four epidemics and observe that it never attacks clean people, living in wholesome environments.” I'd like to know if he has ever had smallpox. I have! I am considered a clean person and likewise I am considered to live in wholesome environments. Before writing such a statement to an intelligent paper like LIFE, to be read by intelligent people, this man should have posted himself. A glance at the records of any board of health will show that the best people are victims of smallpox as well as any one else.

Now, LIFE, in this instance be your brother's keeper and inform this man of the facts in the case. He should not be left in ignorance on a subject he writes so positively about.

Now I'm going to watch and see if you will do this, in order to do justice to me and thousands of other people who are far from unclean yet have had smallpox.

Yours very truly,

C. D. POLAND.

ANNISTON, ALA., October 5, 1911.

A Good Argument

EDITOR OF LIFE:

DEAR SIR.—In LIFE for August 24, under the heading, “Is ‘Science’ Blind in One Eye?” you speak of the case of a young woman who died of blood poisoning following vaccination, and of others who were affected with blood poisoning which was presumably due to the same cause. Did you read in the daily papers at about the same date of the case of a woman who was pricked in the hand by a rose thorn and died a few days later of blood poisoning? Or did you notice earlier in the season the case of the man who was stung by a bee and died very soon after?

The chances are that in the cases which you cite the blood poisoning was not due to the vaccination, that is to say, to infection received at the time of the vaccination, but to carelessness afterward.

No one who knows the facts in the case could possibly take the attitude which you take upon this subject. Are you willing to read an article which appeared recently in the New York State Journal of Medicine entitled “Experience of the Army with Vaccination as a Prophylactic Against Smallpox?” This article gives very briefly the recent results of vaccination. If you are willing to read the article, I shall be glad to furnish you with the full reference, or if you prefer, I will send you a copy of the article. If you read it and do not find it convincing, I should be glad to have you point out any weakness or fallacy in it.

Hoping to hear from you, I remain,
Yours very truly,

J. EDWARD GILES.

The Diaphragm Pneumatic when in action or "striking" is filled with buoyant air, which gives a resilient touch, just like the human finger. Note the absence of creases or corners, which insures greater durability.

DIAPHRAGM PNEUMATIC INFLATED FOR STRIKING

The Bellows Pneumatic is worked by an exhaust; that is, when it strikes a note the air is entirely withdrawn from it, which causes it to collapse with a hard staccato touch, in no way resembling the pliancy and flexibility of the human finger.

BELLOWS PNEUMATIC WITH AIR EXHAUSTED FOR STRIKING

THE Diaphragm Pneumatic is the only means ever devised to give the real human touch. When in action it is an air inflated cushion, with the same firm but resilient and buoyant touch that characterizes the human fingers. All other pneumatics are collapsed when in action, withdrawing from them the buoyancy of the air, resulting in a hard, mechanical touch.

LONDON

What He Did

An American tourist who has recently visited London gives his experience of the extent to which the "tipping" evil has developed at the big hotels. He went into the lavatory to wash his hands before lunch, but seeing a notice on the mirror—"Please tip the basin after using," he rushed from the room, muttering: "No! I'll go dirty first."

After he had had lunch he tipped the head waiter, the waiter's two helpers, the man who gave him his hat and gloves, and the man who whistled for a taxicab. The vehicle rolled out into the Strand, and the American leaned back with a sigh of relief, when he was aware of a page-boy running along beside the window.

"Well, what do you want?" he asked, savagely.

"A few coppers, sir—accordin' to the usual custom, sir," the boy panted.

"Why, what did you do?"

"If you please, sir," said the boy, "I saw you get into the cab!"—Tit-Bits.

STAR Safety Razor

What You Should Know About Stropping

Ask a barber, an expert on blades, how often he strops his razor. He'll tell you, "Before, during, and after a shave."

Ask him why. He'll answer, "Because a blade, no matter how good, must be stropped to keep a shaving edge. Only a few strokes across the beard will twist and bend this edge. It must be straightened and sharpened by stropping."

The barber is right. To keep a perfect edge day after day, year in, year out, any razor blade must be stropped daily. A few seconds before and after the shave.

To make this stropping easy, so that you may be perfect in it, we furnish with the Star Safety Razor an automatic stropper.

It is partly because of this stropper that the Star enjoys today the enviable reputation that it does.

You become in a moment an expert at stropping. Blade reverses itself automatically and correctly. You can make no mistake. You have always an edge that gives a wonderfully clean, easy shave.

Of course the fine Star blade helps the stropper, but the stropper helps you. It enables you to use a good blade as it should be used.

Write us for, or get from your dealer, booklet that tells fully the why and wherefore of the use of the Star.

Price, with automatic stropper, $6.75 to $14.00

Other styles, $1.75 to $5.25

the other, "how then canst thou say what thou now sayest?"

From same, Jest VIII. A blind man with a lamp in his hand and a jar on his shoulder, while passing along a certain road in the darkness of night, was met by a meddlesome fellow, who said to him: "Oh, fool, since day and night are alike to thee and light and darkness one to thine eyes, what use hast thou for this lamp?" The blind man laughed and replied: "This lamp is not for my own use; it is for such ignorant fools as thou that they may not knock against me and break my jar."

From translations from Sadi (died 1291), by Edward B. Eastwick, pub. Trübner & Co., London, 1880, page 188. A fellow with a pain in his eyes went to a farrier, saying: "Give me medicine." The farrier applied to his eyes the remedies he was in the habit of using for animals, and blinded him, on which he complained to the magistrate, who pronounced that he could not recover damages. "For," said he, "if this fellow had not been an ass he would not have consulted a farrier."

From Eastwick's translation, page 157. A man with a harsh voice was reading the Koran in a loud tone. A sage passed by and asked: "What is thy monthly stipend?" He replied, "Nothing." "Wherefore, then," asked the sage, "dost thou give thyself this trouble?" He replied: "I read for the sake of God." "Then," said the sage, "for God's sake, read not!"

From same, page 154. A poet went to the chief of a band of robbers and recited a panegyric upon him. He commanded them to strip off his clothes and turn him out of the village. The dogs, too, attacked him in the rear. He wanted to take up a stone, but the ground was frozen. Unable to do anything, he said: "What a villainous set are these who have untied their dogs and tied up the stones?"

Some Examples of Historic Fun

One of LIFE's readers furnishes us with the following:

From translations from the Persian Poet Jami (died 1492), by C. E. Wilson, pub. Chatto & Windus, London, 1883, page 6, Jest IV. A learned man being annoyed while writing a letter to one of his confidential friends, at the conduct of a person who, seated at his side, glanced out of the corner of his eye at his writing, wrote: "Had not a hireling thief been seated at my side and engaged in reading my letter I should have written to thee all my secrets." The man said: "My Lord, I have neither read nor even looked at thy letter." "Fool!" exclaimed

Religion and Business

Charles W. Fairbanks, former Vice-President of the United States, is pleading for "more religion in business and more business in religion"

Apparently Mr. Fairbanks thinks there is little religion in business, but he must be quite mistaken. J Pierpont Morgan is the leading layman of the Protestant Episcopal Church and for more than twenty years has been a deputy from the diocese of New York to the General Convention. John D. Rockefeller is the best-known Baptist in the United States. The Catholic Church owes its beautiful cathedral at Richmond to Thomas F. Ryan. Jacob H Schiff founded the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York City. Wall Street in general is now engaged in financing a great revival movement to lead sinners to repentance. Ordinary business may be deficient in religion, but Big Business is saturated with it

Mr. Fairbanks's plea for "more business in religion," however, may deserve consideration. Religion has never been systematically organized in this country

NON-SKID TIRES

LOOK at the tread. The mass of sharp edges, angles, sides and hollows show you why this tire won't let your car skid or slide, no matter how slippery the street.

This thick raised lettering is all extra. After it is all worn down you still have left a regular smooth tread, giving you an extra mileage that no other tire can offer.

The world's record for durability and speed is held by Firestone tires—and the Non-Skid combines this wear-resisting quality of rubber with the only tread construction that is non-skid in fact as well as in name.

Only slightly higher in price than our regular tread—your safety and economy demand the use of Firestone Non-Skid Tires.

Organdie Glace'

THE excellence of a writing paper lies in the clearness of its color, the firmness and evenness of its texture, and what is most important, in the perfection of its surface.

The pen, no matter what style of point it may have nor what character of hand you may write, should ride over the paper easily.

Organdie Glacé embodies these qualities. At present it is the most widely demanded fine writing paper. It is made in sizes and shapes suitable for every social requirement, and is sold by all dealers in high grade stationery.

says this man, Grenville Kleiser. Will you give him the opportunity?
People always listen to a man who has something to say—if he knows how to say it.

"Ninety-nine men in every hundred in the crowded professions will probably never rise above mediocrity because the training of the voice is entirely neglected and considered of no importance," wrote Gladstone.

Isn't there a world of truth in his words? Haven't there been occasions when you have noted the tremendous advantage possessed by the man who can clearly express himself before one or a thousand people? If you are lacking in this essential qualification, why not acquire it now?

Justice

Hank Hoss of Tin Can was accused of stealing a mule, but a Tin Can jury brought him in "not guilty." This disgusted the spectators and the judge, and the judge, voicing the general opinion, said: "Gentlemen of the jury, you have erred grievously. Go back, reconsider the evidence, and see if you can not give us a verdict in accordance with right and justice."

Crestfallen, the jury retired a second time. They were out about ten minutes. On their return the judge said: "And now, gentlemen, your verdict is?" "Guilty," said the foreman. A sigh of relief went up from the crowded court, and the judge remarked: "Correct! We hanged him two hours ago."

—Argonaut.

"You are charged," said a magistrate, with talking back at an officer. "Have you anything to say?"

"Dayvil a word, your Honor," replied the culprit. "O'i've said too much al-reddy!"

Motoring and the Complexion

Motoring has a disturbing influence upon the complexion no matter how closely the face may be veiled.

The rapid motion creates an atmospheric current that causes an abnormal condition of the skin, and the complexion soon becomes impaired unless proper protective measures are adopted.

The best thing to do is to wash the face with a copious lather of before starting on a motor drive. This will insure the skin being made soft and pliant, and the pores being braced to their work.

On returning, after the skin has cooled down, another wash with Pears will restore the complexion to its natural bloom.

Motorists should always use Pears

The Road

(By Frank Savile, Little, Brown & Company)

I sing of Agnew, Engineer!
Unscared by threats, unbribed with kisses,

He built the railway line to Bir
Beneath the Balkan precipices

And wasn't balked by anything—
The crafty Turkish bey's oppression,
The bad Italian railroad ring
That tried to grab his road's concession,

Nor Black Hand chiefs in German pay
Who flooded marshes, river branches
And lakes across his right of way
And pelted him with avalanches!

That siren Lucia tried to wean
Our Engineer from faith and duty,
But Agnew loved his own Katrine
And scorned the dark Italian beauty.

He saved Katrine from floods and foes,
From tumbling rocks and horrid suitors,

Until the nice Young Turks arose
And promptly squelched the persecutors.

And now when skies again were blue,
The clouds of evil disappearing,
Our dauntless hero carried through
A pretty bit of engineering:

His roadway crossed a deep defile
Below embattled mountain rid Whose landslides, every little while,
Would sweep away his iron bridges—

Whose sudden torrents, raging white,
Came roaring down from snowborn fountains;

So Agnew, using dynamite,
Plugged up the gulch with shattered mountains,

Heaped fifty feet above the grade,
And drove a tunnel through the rubble.
And thus The Road is neatly made
Without an awful lot of trouble.

A trifling map is needed here;
For while I would not seem to cavil,
Not everyone's an engineer
Like you and me and Mr. Savile.

Arthur Guiterman.

Eating and Providing

EVERYBODY eats—but not everybody buys food.

Some board—and perforce take what is served unto them.

The food product advertiser should know the proportion of homes into which goes the publication whose space he buys—for there is the audience he wants to address

—but in most cases he doesn't know.

He should also have at his command authentic information regarding the occupations, pocket-books, and geographical locations of these people

—but mostly he hasn't.

COLLIER'S does give this information in the form of a detailed circulation analysis, showing COLLIER'S "circulation good-will"—which is the only thing an advertiser should take into consideration in buying space.

"Circulation good-will" is that portion of circulation—as distinguished from the total—that has the mind and the means to buy —and "circulation good-will" varies in aspect, and must be measured by each individual advertiser separately, as applied to his specific needs.

COLLIER'S circulation analysis will be placed before any advertiser or agent, upon request.

The Chinese Compositor

The Chinese compositor cannot sit at his case as our printers do, but must walk from one case to another constantly, as the characters needed cover such a large number that they cannot be put into anything like the space used in the English newspaper office. In setting up an ordinary piece of manuscript, the Chinese printer will waltz up and down the room for a few moments, and then go down stairs for a line of lower case. Then he takes the elevator and goes up into the third story after some caps, and then goes out into the woodshed for a handful of astonishers. The successful Chinese compositor doesn't need to be so very intelligent, but he must be a good pedestrian.—Bill Nye.

Not having risen, he leaned forward on his elbow and asked what was the matter. "Why, a little snake has just crawled out of my boot," cried she. "Only one, my dear?" interrogated the professor calmly. "There should have been three."

No-Rim-Cut Tires—10% Oversize

The Tires Which Have Changed the Whole Tire Situation—Now Come With a Double-Thick, Non-Skid Tread

THE whole trend of demand in automobile tires has been changed in two years by a patented tire.

The old-type tire—the clincher tire—used to dominate the field. It was a relic of bicycle days.

That is the hooked-base tire, which holds to the rim by hooking into the rim flanges. Its great trouble is that, when the tire is deflated, the rim flanges cut it—wreck it beyond repair.

Then we invented a hookless tire—a tire that can't possibly rim-cut. Its method of fitting permits us to make it 10% oversize. We call it the Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tire.

Men found that this tire cut tire bills in two, and the demand came like a flood. This patented tire, in two years, has increased our tire sales by 500 per cent. We have sold to date over 700,000. And the demand now compels us to bring our capacity to 3,800 tires daily.

This tire—the most popular tire ever created—now comes, if you wish it, with this ideal Non-Skid tread.

The Three Greatest Tire Troubles Ended

No Rim-Cutting

The old-type tire, if punctured, could be wrecked in a single block. It could be ruined by rim-cutting if run partly deflated.

We have examined thousands of ruined clincher tires, and 23 per cent. have been rim-cut. That has been the tire-user's greatest worry, and one of his greatest costs.

The No-Rim-Cut tire makes rim-cutting impossible. We have run them flat in a hundred tests, as far as 20 miles. We have run them partly deflated over great deserts, to get a wider tread. Of all the 700,000 sold not one has ever rim-cut.

The reason lies here:

No-Rim-Cut tires have no hooks on the base. They are not hooked to the rim. So your removable rim flanges are simply reversed when you use them. Instead of curving inward they are set to curve outward. Then the deflated tire comes against a rounded edge.

They fit any standard rim—quick-detachable or demountable. The removable flanges are simply slipped to the opposite sides.

The tires are held on by flat bands of 126 braided wires, vulcanized into the tire base. These wires make the tire base unstretchable. The tire can't come off until you unlock and remove one flange, for nothing can stretch the base over the flange. You can remove it, however, like any quick-detachable tire.

Our patent lies in these flat braided wires. They form the only way yet invented to make a practical tire of this type. That's why we so nearly control the demand for tires of this new type.

No Overloading

Tires just rated size are overloaded with nine cars in ten. The extras added—top, glass front, gas tank, etc.—overtax the tires. That is the main cause of blow-outs.

The No-Rim-Cut tire—where the rim flanges curve outward—can be made 10 per cent. over the rated size without any misfit to the rim. And we do it without extra charge.

That means 10 per cent. more air—10 per cent. greater carrying capacity. And that, with the average car, adds 25 per cent. to the tire mileage.

These two features together—No-Rim-Cut and oversize—under average conditions cut tire bills in two. Yet these new-type tires now cost no more than other standard tires. That is why the annual demand is enough to equip 100,000 cars. They are saving men millions of dollars.

No Skidding

For three years we have worked to equip these tires with a perfect Non-Skid tread. Now we have it—a non-skid tread with which nothing of its kind compares.

It is an extra tread, almost as thick as our regular, and we vulcanize it onto our regular tread.

It is made of very tough rubber, as impervious to wear as a rubber tread ever can be. Its thickness reduces the danger of puncture by 30 per cent. And it gives you a double-thick road surface.

The deep-cut blocks grasp the road with countless edges and angles. They are wide at the base, so the load is spread over as wide a surface as it is with the smooth-tread tire. The grooves can't fill up.

This is the most durable, most efficient device against skidding that was ever put onto a tire. It forever does away with the need for ruinous chains. It is bound to displace all lesser treads of its kind.

The Ideal Tire

Think of a tire that can't rim-cut—a tire 10 per cent. oversize—a tire with this Non-Skid tread. And the whole construction the final result of our 12 years spent in tire making. Is it any wonder this tire has come to outsell any other tire in existence?

Our Tire Book is filled with many facts which tire buyers should know. It will save you a great deal of money. Ask us to mail it to you.
