NO MERIT IN BOYCOTT.

AUTHORITIES SAY CONTROL OF PRESS BY ADVERTISERS WOULD RUIN BUSINESS.

Henry B. Joy's Suggestion Meets With Opposition from Representatives in Every Field—Power of Newspaper Comes from Independence—Would Reduce Its Value as Ad Medium—Could Do No Good.

Henry B. Joy, president of the Packard Motor Car Company of Detroit, stirred up a hornet's nest among the business men and recognized authorities in the advertising world this week by a suggestion that advertisers would do well to withhold all business from publications in which views were expressed which seemed to the advertiser contrary to the country's business.

Mr. Joy's suggestion was incorporated in a letter to Marshall Cushing of New York, in which he said partly as follows:

I think every intelligent advertiser is today studying in the highest degree how he can place his advertising so as best to promote the welfare of his business and that of his employes. If you were a business man selling goods at wholesale or at retail, or manufacturing them, would you advertise in publications which were seeking in every way to destroy business possibilities by creating conditions under which business could not thrive or exist except in a most modified degree over what would be possible by return to intelligent conditions?

Certainly no manufacturer desires in any way to purchase or dictate the editorial or business policy of any publication, but certainly it is his privilege to refrain from advertising in a publication which in his judgment is doing his business more harm by the doctrines which it advocates than he can receive in any possible way in benefit to his business by advertising therein.

The New York Herald called on representative business men, editors, publishers and advertisers of the nation to express their attitude on Mr. Joy's scheme, with the result that all declared, almost with unanimity, that such a boycotting policy could do no possible good and might lead to business disaster.

Frank Le Roy Blanchard, editor of THE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER, said:

"It seems to me that when the advertisers get into such a position that they can dictate to the newspapers what shall be placed in the editorial columns then it is a pretty bad day for the newspapers. The power of the newspaper comes from its independence. If advertisers can compel the newspapers to do what they want by bestowing or withholding advertising the newspapers would soon lose the commanding position they now hold.

"I do not believe that any number of general advertisers would undertake to whip the newspapers into line to do a thing of that kind. Mr. Joy evidently is speaking only for himself—he must stand alone in a position of this kind. The same thing has been tried at other times and in other ways, but it never has been a success."

W. H. Ingersoll of Robert H. Ingersoll & Bro., declared that the editorial opinions of the country ought never to be influenced by the advertisers, and no one ought to seek it. It would reduce the value of the newspapers as advertising mediums.

"I think," said O. C. Harn, advertising manager of the National Lead Co.: "Mr. Joy meant to refer only to publications which publish things which are not in any way good for good business."

"The idea is not right," said William J. Cloud, a banker and president of the Baltimore Ad Club. "No man who fully understands the advertising business could give it serious consideration."

LOADED TO THE GUARDS FOR A GOOD TIME.

"Sir Sidney's barge is seen
And his crowd of blushing beauty.
We hope he'll find us clean,
And attentive to our duty.

"We sail the lakes so blue,
And our saucy ship's a beauty
We're sober men and true,
Attentive to our duty."

CAPITAL CITY NEWS SOLD.

Syndicate Purchases Jefferson City's Only Morning Newspaper.

The Capital City News, an independent newspaper of Jefferson City, Mo., and the only morning daily of that city, has changed hands. A syndicate of which Mord McBride, Charles M. Buchanan, Martin Pohlman and Edgar Hestend are members has purchased the plant from O. Gordon Pickett.

It is understood that E. S. Austin will continue as editor of the paper and that it will remain independent in politics. Mr. McBride was formerly editor of a paper at Tusculum.

Iowa Workmen's Compensation Law.

Replying to an inquiry regarding the departments of a newspaper which will be protected under the Workmen's Compensation Law, effective July, the Iowa Industrial Commission has ruled that editors, reporters, heads of departments, mechanical force, press room employes and carrier boys come under the provisions of the law. Persons in purely clerical positions are not included, unless they are required to go into rooms where machinery is operated. Newsboys who sell papers on the streets are considered independent contractors, and the newspaper publisher is not responsible for them.

Grand Rapids Daily Leader Launched.

The Grand Rapids (Wis.) Leader, a new daily newspaper, has made its appearance in that city. It is published by Cooley & Emmons, editors and publishers of the Wisconsin Valley Leader, a weekly paper.

SPENCER, IA.—Hamilton & Son have sold the Sheldon Sun to Otto Bartz.

Cedar Rapids to Have New Daily

Roy Stewart, of the Cedar Rapids (Ia.) Tribune, is the promoter of a project to publish a new daily in that city. A syndicate is backing him, and there is every prospect of the new enterprise being launched early next month. Considerable capital has been pledged. Additional equipment will be installed in the Tribune to take care of the new paper.

New Sporting Daily in New York.

The Tri-Daily Sporting Bulletin is a new publication issued at 213 West Fortieth street, launched by William Patton, formerly of the New York Globe. A complete plant has been installed, including cylinder and job press and a well equipped composing room.

Newark Police Seek Missing Editor.

Kenneth B. Douglass, for five months religious editor of the Newark (N. J.) Evening News, disappeared last week, leaving his bride of six weeks ignorant of his whereabouts. Douglass was formerly of Toronto, Can., is a graduate of two colleges and a Doctor of Philosophy. The Newark police are now seeking him on a charge of perjury in connection with his marriage license. It is said there is also a warrant for Douglass' arrest on a charge of giving a check on a bank in which he had no account.

Gives $100,000 for French Athletes.

Basin Barboff, one of the proprietors of the Paris Excelsior, has given $100,000 to the French National Committee of Sports. He contributed this sum to cover the expenses of training athletes to compete as representatives of France at the Olympic games to be held in Berlin in 1916.

I. C. M. A. CONVENTION,

ANNUAL MEETING TO BE HELD ON LAKES SUPERIOR AND HURON NEXT WEEK.

Three Hundred Members Leave Sarnia on the Noronic This Afternoon for a Six Days' Trip on the Lakes—Some Details of the Event—Speakers to Talk to Audiences That Cannot Escape—Entertainment Features.

If you happen to be in Sarnia, at the foot of Lake Huron, at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, you will see draped around the edges of the decks of the steamship Noronic, just as she leaves the dock, like lace around a woman's neck, groups of distinguished looking men wearing badges, brightened here and there by pretty girls and smartly dressed matrons. They are members of the International Circulation Managers' Association, who, accompanied by their wives and daughters, are to hold a four days' convention during the steamship's trip to Duluth and back.

They are out for a good time but they are also out for a serious purpose—to take counsel together upon the things that enter into their life's work—circulation problems. The program is an interesting one from start to finish. The list of speakers includes among others R. J. Corrigan, of the St. Louis Times; J. M. Schmid, of the Indianapolis News; John B. Cox, of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press; William J. Little, of the Montreal Star; John N. Toler, of the Atlanta Constitution; Daniel Nichol, of the New York Mail; J. J. Lynch, of the Cleveland Press; Maurice J. Levy, of the Cincinnati Post, and G. E. Johnson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal.

CINCH FOR SPEAKERS.

One of the advantages the speakers will have over those who address conventions on shore is that the audience can't get away. None of the members can offer the excuse that he has to leave to keep a lunch engagement, or take an automobile ride around town with "a friend," or go to the theater, or call upon an old schoolmate. No, sir, he has got to stay right there on the boat and attend the meetings and listen to the speeches whether he wants to or not. Therefore the speakers will always have the pleasure of talking to a full house. Rows of empty chairs will not stare them in the face as they sometimes do when the convention hall has many exits and is surrounded by attractions that are greater than those within its walls.

SUNDAY'S SCENERY.

Sunday morning, when the bugle calls for breakfast, the party will pass Detour Light, at the entrance to St. Mary's River, and all that day there will be a panorama of river scenery until Sault Ste Marie is reached and a stop of two hours will be made. This will enable the members to inspect (not pick) the largest fresh water locks in the world, where the enormous traffic of the lakes is lifted or lowered from the level of Lake Superior to that of Huron and Michigan. Soon after leaving Whitefish Point late in the afternoon, land disappears, and the members will find themselves enjoying fresh water sea voyage, for land will not be seen until Monday morning, when Thunder Cape is sighted, soon to be followed by entrance to the beautiful land-locked Thunder Bay, and docking at the twin cities—Port Arthur and Fort William, Ont.

The entire day, Monday, will be spent in and between these two cities, and

CHICAGO HAPPENINGS.

Record-Herald Showing Up Swindling Schemes—Reporter Arrested as a Trespasser—Author's Night at the Press Club—Garrick Theatre Uses Newspapers Exclusively—Western Advertising Golfers Play June 16.
(Special Correspondence.)

CHICAGO, June 10.—Now that the war has let up and released some space local papers are turning attention to get-rich-quick schemes with a view of advising their readers to safer investments. The Tribune has inaugurated an investor's guide and the Record-Herald is daily exposing schemes of local sharpers.

The other day Mark Morton, a wealthy merchant who has been much mortified by continued newspaper reports of his daughter's escapades, captured a Chicago American reporter as a trespasser at his country place and took him to jail. He was released on bail and at the hearing next day was discharged. He has since filed a $50,000 damage suit.

Paul Crissey has resigned his position with the Record-Herald and gone to the Journal.

Saturday evening was authors' night at the Chicago Press Club. There were given readings from their works and talks by Opie Reid, William Lightfoot Visscher, Mary Moncure Parker, Forrest Crissey, and Charles N. Wheeler. Charles Lederer gave a chalk talk and a musical program was rendered. The lake front problem was discussed at the Press Club late last week by former State Representative Chipperfield, Henry W. Lee and Seymour Stedman.

Charles N. Wheeler may become connected with a Springfield, Ill., paper, according to a late report.

MISS COLSON HEADS PRESS CLUB.

Miss Ethel Colson has been elected president of the Woman's Press Club; Mrs. Elizabeth Reed, first vice-president; Mrs. Ida Gibson, second vice-president; Mrs. Grace Smith, third vice-president; Miss Maude Oliver, recording secretary; Mrs. Elizabeth Nolan, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Estelle Ryan Synder, treasurer.

The Garrick Theater is the latest convert to newspaper advertising exclusively. During the current engagement of Olga Petrova in "Panthea" the theater will use newspapers exclusively. Other theaters have tried that plan and found it worked all right.

Douglas Malloch is said to be about the only Chicago poet who has made a financial success of writing in that line.

The Western Advertising Golfers' Association announces its second tournament of the season to be held at the Glen Oak Country Club on June 16. There will be many prizes and a large turnout is anticipated.

First Issue of Hearst's Hustler.

The circulation department of the Atlanta Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American has just issued the first number of the Hearst Hustler for distribution among the newsdealers, newsboys and agents who handle those newspapers. Two pages are devoted to a display advertisement announcing $200 in prizes to those making the best record by July 1.

Moist Buys Ida Grove Pioneer.

The Ida Grove (Ia.) Pioneer has been purchased for $10,000 from Frank P. Clarkson by John H. Moist. The new owner comes from Alliance, Neb., where he was recently a member of Moist & Sallows and held a half interest in the Times. Mr. Clarkson is obliged to seek a milder climate as he has for years suffered with rheumatism.

Under assignment to cover Asbury Park and nearby Jersey shore resorts for the summer season, William C. Park, of the Newark (N. J.) Evening News staff, will be transferred from the News' Washington bureau to take charge of the News' Asbury Park shore office.

PITTSBURGH JOTTINGS.

Local Advertising Club Will Send a Large Delegation to Toronto.
(Special Correspondence.)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 8.—Pittsburgh will be well represented at the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, to be held in Toronto, Canada, June 21 to June 25. The comparatively short ride between the two cities will allow a large delegation from this vicinity to attend the convention. Some may be able to stay only a couple of days, but the many will remain for the five days.

Frank J. Markey, who has been the Pittsburgh manager for the International News Service, has returned to New York for duty in the offices of the general manager, Mr. Markey, who has been in Pittsburgh a year, and who is probably the youngest man holding such a responsible position, was a hustler here and got good results. He is succeeded in Pittsburgh by Charles Kane, formerly of the Chicago Examiner, who is well posted on what the International News Service wants.

The newspapers of Pittsburgh are taking great interest in the coming annual convention of real estate men, to be held here next month. Realty men from every section of the United States and Canada will attend the convention, and it is hoped through the newspapers and otherwise, to have the delegates and visitors carry away a good impression of this great industrial, educational and civic center. Special plans are being laid for the entertainment of the visiting women.

W. P. Beazell, of the New York World local staff, was in Pittsburgh last week on some special work, and while here paid a flying visit to the home of his parents near Monongahela City, just above Pittsburgh. His father, Rev. Dr. B. F. Beazell, had not been very well for some time but is much improved.

Chas. O. Knowles, of Toronto, Canada, manager of the Canadian Press telegraph service, was a recent visitor in Pittsburgh in connection with newspaper work.

John F. Steele, a former well-known Pittsburgh and Washington, D. C., newspaper man, was a visitor in Pittsburgh Saturday.

MUST REDUCE FREIGHT RATES.

Commerce Commission Issues Order Against Railroads on Shipment of News Print.

Freight rates on the shipment of news print paper from points in Ontario, Canada, to Michigan cities are held to be unjust and unreasonable in a decision made last week by the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington. The Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, The Grand Rapids & Indiana, the Michigan Central, the Pere Marquette and other railroads are ordered to cease charging their present rates after August 1 and not to charge any rates in excess of those contemporaneously in effect over their lines for the transportation from Wisconsin points to the same destinations.

Complaint was made in this case by the Lake Superior Paper Company. The cities affected by alleged discriminating rates on news print paper from Ontario points were Grand Rapids, Bay City, Saginaw, Jackson, Port Huron, Owosso, Flint, Lansing, Battle Creek, Kalamazoo, Niles, Adrian and Detroit. The average distance of these cities from the point of shipment is 344 miles. The average rate per 100 pounds is 15.1 cents. The average rate asked for per 100 pounds is 12.9 cents.

The railroads complained against are now ordered to establish by August 1 a reasonable rate on the transportation of news print paper in carloads from Wisconsin to Michigan destinations.

The Autoplate Company, the Henry A. Wise Wood Company and the Word Flong Company, of No. 1 Madison avenue, has moved into new and larger quarters at 25 Madison avenue.

GERMANY WOULD SWAY PRESS.

Commercial News Agency Started by Government to Boom the Fatherland Abroad.

A special cable from Berlin to the New York Times, Sunday, tells of the publication in the Deutsche Export Revue, the official organ of the German shipping and export trade, of the details of an elaborate scheme worked out by the German government in conjunction with the leading industrial, shipping and financial authorities, for exploiting the foreign press on behalf of German commerce.

The German Foreign Office, it is said, guaranteed to furnish $62,500 to launch the new syndicate for a German news service abroad, provided a similar amount was raised in business circles. This condition has been fulfilled by contributions of $250 each from practically all the important industrial and financial concerns in the country, and the syndicate is understood to be already in operation.

The parent establishment is an existing news bureau, whose activities gradually are to be extended throughout the world, especially in the direction of replying in proper form to anti-German news and attacks on Germany.

The managerial committee includes Herr von Borsig, head of the well-known locomotive firm, and the official Deutsche Bank. The syndicate has been formed provisionally for three years. Each member agrees, in addition to his contribution to the foundation fund, to pay an annual subscription of $250. As every $250 confers the right of one vote, it is pointed out that the Foreign Office, with its subscription of $62,500, will be enabled to exercise a strongly influential voice in the management of the syndicate and the extension of its news service.

SAN JOSE TIMES-STAR SOLD.

Louis O'Neal Buys Daily at Sheriff's Sale for $7,000.

With only one bidder, and on one bid of $7,000, practically the entire plant of the San Jose (Cal.) Times-Star, an evening paper, including contracts, accounts and routes, was sold last week by Sheriff Langford at public auction. Louis O'Neal was the successful bidder. The sale followed a court order to foreclose a chattel mortgage for $30,000 to Guy Milnes, who assigned to O'Neal.

The property covers everything that was in the possession of the Times company and the Consolidated Publishing Company in September, 1912, when the mortgage was made. O'Neal holds another judgment for $2,500, awarded at the same time and practically confessed by the Consolidated Publishing Company, defendant in the action.

It is said that R. D. Cannon, who published the paper two weeks before the creditors came down on it, will resume publication when he can get a clean bill of sale. One page a day is being printed by the receiver to hold the paper's legal status.

Tablet to Thomas Taylor.

On May 30, the employees of the Pottstown (Pa.) News dedicated in the office of the News a tablet to the memory of Thomas Taylor, founder of the News, who died on May 30, 1906, after having conducted the paper for nearly twenty years. A large picture of Mr. Taylor in his familiar fishing costume was also hung in the office. The tablet bears one of Mr. Taylor's declarations: "I don't care whether a man is worth ten million or ten cents as long as he is a man."

Wilmington Delawaren Incorporated.

The Delawaren Publishing Company of Wilmington, Del., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000 to do a general publishing business and print and distribute a newspaper. The members of the corporation are Hugh N. Norris, Richard S. Rodney, James I. Boyce, all of Wilmington.

NORTHWESTERN NEWS NOTES.

Prince George Post, a New Daily, to Have $18,000 Publishing Plant.
(Special Correspondence.)

EDMONTON, ALTA., June 8.—Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture for the Province of Alberta, who was a newspaper editor and publisher in Ontario and Alberta before accepting a portfolio in Premier Sifton's cabinet, with headquarters at the parliament buildings in Edmonton, has gone to Europe to study methods of agriculture and stock raising.

William A. Milne, general secretary of the Edmonton Industrial Association, which has 700 members, has been sent East in advance of two special trains of delegates and visitors to the Tenth Annual Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America at Toronto. He is making arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the delegates at Winnipeg, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Racine, Chicago, South Bend, Battle Creek, Lansing, Mount Clemens, Port Huron, Stratford and Guelph.

J. G. Quinn, who was connected with the Edmonton Bulletin ten years ago, has become associated with a group of business men of Prince George, B. C., who will launch a new journal to be called the Post in a short time. The town is a divisional point of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway at the junction of the Fraser and Nechako rivers. Eighteen thousand dollars will be invested in the plant. The Post will specialize in news dealing with the development of the town and district.

Le Progres Albertain, one of the progressive French weeklies of the West, which has been published for years in St. Albert, Alta., has moved its plant to Edmonton. The size has been increased from six to seven columns to the page. It is a well printed and attractive newspaper.

M. R. Jennings, editor and managing director of the Journal, has returned from a stay of six weeks in New York State. He was called to Rochester by the serious illness of his father, who is now convalescent.

J. Ligertwood, financial editor of the Winnipeg Saturday Post, was in Edmonton last week on a tour of Western Canada, studying financial and business conditions.

Press Arrangements at Toronto.

Special arrangements are being made in Toronto to entertain accredited representatives of the press who may accompany the various clubs to the A. A. C. A. Convention. The Toronto newspapers have tendered for the use of the press correspondents the upper floor of the Press Building. The Convention Committee will see that stationery, typewriters and other accommodations necessary to gathering the news will be provided. The telegraph wires are in a building across the street and close at hand. A reception will be tendered to the visiting newspaper men.

Herbert Casson in England.

According to the English newspapers, Herbert N. Casson, of New York, has made a decided hit with advertising men during his stay in London. The Advertiser's Weekly, the leading periodical in that field, says:

"Wherever and whenever he has spoken, both in London and in the provinces, he has been listened to with rapt attention and has roused his audience to a pitch of enthusiasm seldom equalled by any orator. For Mr. Casson has the gift of making business and advertising seem the most engrossing, fascinating subjects on earth, and inspiring an audience."

The photo-engravers of the United States will hold their fifteenth annual convention at Indianapolis August 17 to 22. There are 5,500 photo-engravers in the United States who are members of the I. P. E. U., which is 97 per cent of all the photo-engravers in America.

DEALER CO-OPERATION.

How It May Be Secured By Newspaper Publishers — Best Selling Products Are Those Advertised in the Daily Newspapers—Importance of the Dealer in Making General Publicity Pay—Securing Good Will.

By W. C. JOHNSON,

Business Manager Chattanooga News.

[An address delivered before the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association at Atlanta.]

Within the last few years there has been an awakening of manufacturers, especially those recognized as manufacturers of nationally distributed products, to a realization that two very important factors to be reckoned with are the daily newspaper with its concentrated home circulation and the local dealer with his clientele, who are readers of one or more daily newspapers. At no time, however, has the opportunity for both manufacturer and publisher to link up with the dealer been greater than at the present, and the forming of this triple alliance will undoubtedly result in more business for those manufacturers and publishers who are keenly alive to the opportunities which present themselves in this combination which is in no wise in constraint of trade, but, on the contrary, a trade developer in the broadest sense.

Today the best selling products, especially those of home consumption, are those being advertised in the daily newspaper. Many of these were practically unknown until recently. Now they can be found on the shelves of nearly every dealer.

VALUE TO DEALER.

Inquiry will reveal that the dealer recognizes the fact that the advertising of these products in newspapers published in his own town and read by his own, or possible customers, is not only helping to hold his trade by giving them what they want, but is likewise developing trade for him by bringing more customers to his store.

The average retail merchant with an established business is a very keensighted individual. He has long since grown wise to the fact that it is not to his interest to load his shelves with goods for which there is only an occasional demand or perhaps no demand at all. He doesn't buy goods these days hoping to sell them by extolling their merits. Neither does he hearken to the statements of the salesman that the article he represents is being advertised in national publications. He knows his trade and is, in many cases, on personal relations with them. He realizes that only a small per cent. of his trade are readers of national publications. He does know that in practically every home served by him, a daily newspaper is read and that paper is one or more of the daily newspapers published in his own town.

NEW HOME OF GRAND RAPIDS HERALD.

RIGHT KIND OF SUPPORT.

This self-same dealer has the newspaper reading habit. He has likewise acquired the ad reading habit. He can in many cases name the products advertised in his home paper even more readily than the publisher. If the advertising has been consistent, he will inform you that there is a demand for these products. As an enterprising dealer, he carries the goods in stock and is prepared to meet the demand of his customers.

This is the dealer that is giving the manufacturer and newspaper the kind of support necessary to reach the customers. His co-operation is, therefore, a factor to be seriously considered in every advertising campaign. There is, however, another kind of dealer who is the real problem with the manufacturer and publisher, and that is the dealer who is slow to appreciate the value of carrying advertised products. He will not put the goods in stock until the demand of his trade awakens him to the realization that his trade is going where they can get what they want.

Again, there is the dealer who, while carrying a small stock of advertised products, seeks every opportunity to substitute a competitive article on which there is a wider margin of profit, or one put up as his own brand. If the publisher wants to make good his claim of maximum results at a minimum cost, it is essential that he convert every dealer within his circulation radius to an appreciation of the value of handling and co-operating in the sale of those products being advertised in his and other daily newspapers.

CULTIVATE GOOD WILL.

It is possible for any publisher to secure the hearty co-operation of practically every worth-while dealer in his trade territory and that is by the simple process of cultivating the dealers' good will. This cannot be done in a day, but once the publisher gets the dealer's support and shows him where it is to his interest to co-operate as a distributor of the products being advertised in daily newspapers, that publisher is making HIS columns more productive and at the same time rendering an added service to the advertiser.

Many are the ways whereby these dealers can be cultivated. The most effective, however, is through personal contact, and this through his paper. The licitation among the retail dealers for subscription to his paper. He should get the dealer interested in his paper, and he quite naturally becomes interested in the products advertised therein. Publish from time to time articles on dealer co-operation. Reach him indirectly through articles directed to the readers, setting forth the advantages to be derived through buying advertised trade-marked goods. Get out at intervals a general letter personal in its nature, thanking him for his co-operation and mentioning certain advertised products.

It is not within the province of the publisher to issue a circular letter containing reproductions of the advertisements every time a new campaign is launched. The dealer is already surfeited with circulars; besides the expense of printing and mailing these circulars is quite an item. At certain seasons, one general circular can be prepared in the same manner and sent to the dealers as many newspapers through the country recently issued at the suggestion of the Bureau of Advertising, A. N. P. A. This circular should contain one or more pieces of copy of every campaign scheduled at the time of issue.

KEEPING IN TOUCH WITH JOBBERS.

It is a comparatively easy matter for the publisher to keep in close touch with the jobbers and their salesmen. These jobbers and wholesalers are as much interested in securing the co-operation of the retailer as are the manufacturers, and the frequent publication of advertisements inviting their trade or a special number like a Dealers' & Consumers' Edition is a very good thing in creating good will. Again, there are the Spring and Fall trade extension campaigns conducted by the Jobbers or Chamber of Commerce, on which occasions the out-of-town merchants are invited to the city. Here is the opportunity for the publisher to interest the out-of-town dealer by handling the event in a manner that the element of personal contact is created.

No one will deny the fact that the dealer is indeed a strong factor in any advertising campaign. Every publisher should, therefore, get the dealers' co-operation. If the advertised article be one of merit, the copy well written, and the product one that appeals to the publisher should make a systematic sooper's readers, the campaign will make good. Without dealer co-operation, a great deal of the good effect can be lost. With the dealer co-operation success is better assured.

It is, of course, possible to launch a

Casket Moves to New York.

The Casket, devoted to the casket and undertaking trade, which has been published in Rochester, N. Y., for thirty-eight years, will, beginning with the July number, be issued at 120 Liberty street, New York City. The paper was founded by A. H. Nirdlinger in 1876 and upon his death was continued for twenty-two years by his widow. Upon her death Simeon Wile, her son, became the manager and publisher. Mr. Wile has now associated himself with William Mill Butler, at one time editor of the Rochester Post-Express, and later associated editor of the Democrat and Chronicle of that city, in purchasing the control of the Sunnyside of New York, another paper devoted to the same field as the Casket. Mr. Butler will edit and manage both publications.

Grand Rapids Herald's New Home.

The Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald now is located in its new building at the head of Monroe street, S. E. Considerable new equipment, including a new Hoe printing press, has been installed. The new building is of fire-proof construction and is equipped with the latest lighting and ventilation appliances.

Two Hustlers in Elmira, N. Y.

The Elmira (N. Y.) Herald is only six months old and is now selling over 7,000 copies daily. Frank Ross, the business manager, and Carl N. Marshall, the advertising manager, are live, hustling progressives.

campaign without first securing the dealers' co-operation. In some cases the dealers have been known to manifest an antagonistic attitude toward certain products and refused to handle them until the demand was so strong that they were, in self-defence, compelled to put the goods in stock. This, however, was not without considerable extra cost to the advertiser, and probably the means of the publisher securing a greater volume of advertising; but why should the manufacturer be compelled to force the dealer, if his prices are consistent with the quality of his product?

It is much easier for the newspaper to secure the dealer's co-operation than it is for the manufacturers. The publisher who secures the good will of the dealer and retains his good will, will find that he has an asset that will back up his circulation and produce the best possible results for those advertisers using his columns. Why not, therefore, get the dealers' co-operation when it can be secured with very little effort?

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram is sending to its friends and advertisers a neatly printed annual pass, resembling a railroad pass, to its press room and circulation department.

at that the time will be too short. Both places stand out as striking object lessons of the immense development that is going on in the great western provinces to the north; huge elevators, flour mills and freight sheds stud the banks as far as the eye can reach, while countless vessels line the wharves, discharging cargo or loading grain for the lower ports as far east as Montreal. The Grand Trunk terminal alone covers 1,600 acres, having water on three sides and huge elevators with a capacity of 9,000,000 bushels. The plans under way and completed aim to make this the greatest and most complete water terminal in the world.

Leaving these ports at 11 o'clock in the evening (Monday) the boat enters upon the last stretch of the west-bound trip. From Thunder Bay the passage is past Pie, Mink and Victoria Islands, through the most beautiful channels in Lake Superior. The north shore is followed all that night, and about 11 A.M. on Tuesday the party will disembark at Duluth to spend the time until the homeward trip commences again.

The itinerary is so arranged that many of the points passed during the night on the west bound trip will be covered by daylight returning. This will tend to sustain the interest every minute of the time the members are aboard the Noronic, and the shore stops are sufficiently frequent to break up any possible monotony, if one can associate this word with an outing such as this.

ENTERTAINMENT FEATURES.

The work of the entertainment committee of the past two or three months will begin to manifest itself on the arrival of the party in Detroit this morning, when after a general meeting at the Board of Commerce rooms, Lafayette Boulevard and Wayne Street, the members and their guests will leave in automobile cars for a tour of the city, this feature being provided through the courtesy of the members of the local board. After a visit to Belle Isle, the members will return to the Board rooms, where luncheon will be provided by the local publishers, and immediately after this the members will take a special train over the Grand Trunk Railway, which will conduct them directly to the dock at Sarnia, Ontario, where they will board the steamer "Noronic" about 5 P.M. On arrival at the boat there will be a presentation of the Louis Annin Ames flag to the organization, the same being accepted by the president and afterwards raised to the mast-head by the delegates travelling the greatest distance to the convention.

"I'm called little Buttercup, dear little Buttercup, Tho' I could never tell why, But still I'm called Buttercup, Poor little Buttercup, sweet little Buttercup I."

As reservations have already been received from California, Texas, Louisiana, Florida, and the provinces of Alberta and Manitoba, it surely will not be an easy task determining to whom this honor shall go. After dinner a general reception will be held in the social hall, followed by a vocal and instrumental concert of old "Heart Songs."

Saturday, through the courtesy of George Hough Perry of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, a representative will be present and give a motion picture and stereopticon lecture on the San Francisco Exposition of 1915.

Sunday morning the visitors will pass in sight seeing as the boat progresses up Sault Ste. Marie's River, afterwards going through the locks at Sault Ste. Marie. In the evening there will be a sacred concert in the observation saloon of the boat.

Monday morning the Board of Trade of Port Arthur and the local publishers will meet the delegates at the dock with automobiles and take them for a drive throughout the city and suburbs. In the afternoon they will be the guests on a similar ride arranged by the publishers of the adjacent city of Fort Williams. That night both organizations and their ladies will be the guests of the I. C. M. A. at a masquerade ball to be given aboard the ship.

At eleven o'clock Tuesday morning, when the party arrives at Duluth, still another automobile trip will be in readiness, supplied by the publishers, who will take their guests out along the boulevard skirting the lake, with luncheon at the end of the drive, and return to the boat in ample time for sailing at four o'clock that afternoon.

Through the courtesy of H. R. Charlton, the lecture, "Building a Nation Next Door," originally arranged by the late Cy Warman, will be given in the observation room. Wednesday night there will be another dance as the members are crossing the lake and Thursday afternoon will witness the last of the shore entertainment, when the members will be the guests of the Board of Trade and City Council of Sault Ste. Marie. That same evening the annual banquet will take place aboard the boat. The officers of the association are as follows:

CONCENTRATED CIRCULATION

96% of the Evening Star's circulation is in Washington, D. C., or within 25 miles of the national capital.

In its prospectus over 112 years ago, dated Nov. 10, 1801, The New York Evening Post stated that its design was to diffuse among the people correct information on all interesting subjects, to inculcate just principles in religion, morals and politics; and to cultivate a taste for sound literature.

Steadfast adherence to this policy has made The New York Evening Post the daily newspaper of refined and cultured families—of people with the greatest purchasing power. Its concentrated circulation in and around New York City, a wide distribution among thousands of thinking people throughout the United States and Canada, places it with no rival in its field.

The 56th annual meeting of the Canadian Press Association has been postponed until Thursday and Friday, July 9 and 10. The elections for the Ontario Legislature are to take place on Monday, June 29, and the dates originally set for the meeting of the association were June 26 and 27. Many Ontario newspaper men would have been unable to reach their homes until noon on Monday, the polling date. It has been decided to hold the meeting at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto.

SCHOOL'S SECOND YEAR

Pulitzer Journalism Graduate Tells of Gruelling Courses Designed to Prepare Students for Strenuous Newspaper Life.
By B. O. McANNEY.

(1914 Graduate Pulitzer School of Journalism)

Columbia's School of Journalism is no longer purely an experiment. The men it turned out at the end of its first year have been uniformly successful, and this year it graduated thirteen men and two women who will be, if nothing else, at least much less green than the average "cub"—a thing devoutly wished for by newspaper executives.

At the opening of the scholastic year the fourth year class numbered about twenty-eight men. Almost 50 per cent. fell by the wayside for one reason or another during the gruelling course, which is designed by the school to be even more exacting than the strenuous life of the reporter. So those in authority feel that the men who were graduated are pretty well seasoned.

Those who believe that journalism cannot be taught, that such a course would be all theory and no practice, would be surprised at the amount of actual news gathering, as well as feature writing of different sorts, that the school requires. The Blot (morning and evening) is a newspaper put out by the fourth year class. It is not for sale, nor is all of it printed, but it is put together with the regularity of any weekly, and with more painstaking care than some dailies.

PRACTICAL WORK DONE.

Monday is given over to practical work entirely. Lectures are abandoned, and the fourth year class becomes the city staff. Each man does his trick as city editor, with all the leeway and all the responsibility of any autocrat of the city desk. He picks his own copy desk, sends the men out on peg post and special assignments, and covers the doings of New York as completely as is possible. He is accountable to the M. E.—the man in charge of the fourth year students—and is praised or blamed for the showing he has made with the power in his hands. In addition to this, the work of each man is dissected and treated for ailments that militate against newspaper style or attitude.

That the school is learning besides teaching is shown by the fact that it will be a comparatively short time until the staff works for three consecutive days, multiplying the experience the men get and adding to the newspaper shop "feel." New courses are being added as their need becomes known, but only after an intensive study of the possibilities and the end desired, so that there is no doubt of their doing the work efficiently.

Reporting, however, is not the only practical work. The staff this year has handled dramatic and art criticism, book reviewing and editorial writing and in the manner of the newspaper man. Each dramatic criticism was written immediately after the first night production of the play and had to be finished by 1 or 1:30 o'clock. All the work is done amid the click of typewriters in the city room, and in the time the real newspaper man would be allowed for the same task, but no matter how late a man has been compelled to work, he must be up for early classes the next morning, so that a man who can stand the grind of the school is not likely to be overcome by continuous strain of the newspaper game. The authorities believe in discouraging those who are unfitted for the work, and no "weak sisters" are permitted to hang on and delay the advance of the soon-to-be "cubs."

GRADUATES THIS YEAR.

The School of Journalism is doing good work, but the encouraging thing is that those in touch with it believe that it will do still bigger work in the future. Fifteen young men and women were members of this year's graduating class. Some of them have already secured positions in newspaper offices.

Importance of Studying Costs Overlooked by Many Publishers
--Hit or Miss Advertising and Subscription Rates a Frequent Cause of Failure--Importance of Establishing a Circulation That Will Pull.

By F. M. Ball

(Of S. Blake Willson & Co., Chicago.)

The primary object of any business venture is to make money. Publishing a newspaper is classed as a business by the census reports, so we can deduce the statement that the primary object of publishing a newspaper is the making of money.

The last census states that the publishing and printing industry ranks sixth in the commercial value of its output and places the value of its product each year at over $737,876,000. There are over 31,000 establishments, employing over 388,000 wage earners. Two large commercial credit agencies of this country say that this tremendous industry ranks at the bottom of all the great industries as regards credit. We therefore are confronted with the situation that an industry upon which most other industries depend for success, an industry that has more to do with the success of all other industries than any other combination of forces, is financially the least successful of them all.

Let us analyze the peculiar conditions which exist and which account for so many newspaper plants being only partially successful. First, a newspaper has only two sources of possible profit--revenue from circulation, and revenue from advertising space sold. If the sum total of these two incomes is in excess of the total expense of the plant, the paper makes money, and if it is less, the profits sink below zero.

SOURCES OF REVENUE.

The income from circulation is from papers sold singly or by the year; the income from advertising is from inches of space disposed of. If the profit is realized on the circulation, papers must be sold for more than their combined manufacturing and distribution cost, plus the cost of getting the subscriptions on the list. If advertising is to yield a profit, it must be sold for more than the cost of producing the advertisement and setting the advertisement.

Analyzing circulation costs, there is the first cost of inducing the subscriber to read the paper; second cost of paper, ink and press work on papers sent out; third cost, of distributing the papers; and fourth cost, of renewing the subscriptions or replacing them.

The selling price of any article ought to depend on the cost of production, but who can tell me upon what foundation the subscription price to your paper is based? Why do most weekly papers charge $1.00 a year; most daily papers, $3.00 per year by mail and $5.00 by carrier, and most farm mail order journals, 25 cents? The fact remains that publications have no scientific price basis. They sell at a price fixed by custom, not production costs. This condition typifies the condition of most newspapers: they don't know their costs. Herein lies one big reason why so many publications fail to produce a legitimate profit.

WHAT YOU DON'T KNOW.

How much does it cost you to produce a hundred new subscriptions; to renew a hundred old ones? How much does it cost you to produce one eight-page paper, exclusive of editorial expense; what per cent. of losses do you sustain each year from failure of subscribers to pay their just bills? How much money is due you right now on subscription that should be paid? When did you last take a trial balance to see whether or not your subscription list was a losing or a winning proposition? What does it cost you to print an inch of advertising? Do you know for your individual plant whether your subscription list is an asset or a liability, and how much it loses you or profits you?

The man who does not know these things accurately is not a good business man, and it is to be feared that there are many such. Do you figure on paying yourself a salary for your time? Do you accurately know your overhead costs of heat, light, power, insurance, rent, telephone, clerk hire, interest on investment, depreciation, bad accounts, postage, premiums; and what relation these bear to your total expenses? Do you know whether a solicitor ought to produce new business at 40 per cent. or 75 per cent. in your field? Do you know what per cent. renewals cost you? Do you know how many subscribers leave your list each year? Do you know what percentage of replies your various circulation promotion and collection letters...

COLLEGE ADVERTISING

Fred B. Appleget Urges the Higher Educational Institutions to Use Publicity to Make Known the Advantages They Have to Offer—Address Before Brown University Alumni at Dinner in New York.

In a recent address before the Alumni Association of Brown University, at the Hotel Astor, New York, Fred B. Appleget, editor of Newspaperdom, made a strong plea for an extensive educational campaign in behalf of education, and urged that the colleges and universities use paid publicity to advance their interests.

The May number of the Brown Alumni Monthly devotes five pages to a report of the address, most of which, under the title "Intensive Cultivation of Alumni Fields," is an argument for newspaper advertising of the frankest and most direct kind.

Immediately after its delivery a number of Brown men offered contributions of from fifty to a hundred dollars if the ideas set forth could be put into practice, and on Saturday last Mr. Appleget went to Providence by invitation, and at a meeting in the famous "Bears' Den" discussed his suggestions more in detail with President Faunce and a number of the faculty and prominent alumni.

ADVERTISING VALUES.

In the course of his address Mr. Appleget said:

"During recent years it has been my privilege, as one interested in publicity, to see at close range how large enterprises are made successful by modern methods, and how such words as system, efficiency, co-operation and publicity have become the names of the parts of a vast and wonderful machine for the distribution of commodities.

"I wonder how many Brown men fully appreciate what Brown University means in its present power and its potentialities; what its traditions are worth, its associations, its services to mankind, its reputation as one of the world's great forces for good. They tell me that the one word 'Royal,' without a single physical or tangible asset, is worth $3,000,000; that each letter of 'Uneda' would sell for a million dollars. A baking powder and a biscuit! Has any one ever tried, or dared to try, to set a price on the word 'Brown'—the name of your father's college, your college and your son's college? Do you realize the incalculable force and value in those five letters?

"Reduced to its simplest terms, the proposition is this: You have a valuable commodity—the most valuable in the world—to sell. It is what is known as 'standardized'; you do not have to describe it or argue about it any more than you have to prove to a man that Ivory soap floats.

"Three thousand years ago one of the wisest and most reliable assayers the world has ever known stamped your commodity as 'more precious than rubies,' and the valuation has never changed, not even just before presidential elections. You do not even have to combat the tricky evil of 'substitution'—there is nothing 'just as good' as education, and no shoddy imitation of learning will wear long enough to deceive any one.

"So in Brown you have two great factors for successful merchandising—standardized goods and a trade-mark or 'slogan' or name known the world over. You have another tremendous asset—thousands of intelligent, enthusiastic and loyal salesmen or agents. These are your alumni. But you want to sell more goods. Where you are equipping one man with an education you want to equip two. Your glorious factory up there in Providence is turning out fine scholars and strong men every year—you want to double your output. I believe it can be done. How? By the same means and methods any other big business would use in meeting the same problem—by co-operation, by systematization and by intelligent publicity.

THE POWER OF MASSES UNITS.

"The day of the individual is past. The unit is as powerful as ever, but the big things of the age are done by massed units, whether they be dollars or men. As individuals, each of you here, each of the thousands of Brown alumni scattered over the world, may be doing much for the glory of your alma mater, but much of your force is wasted through lack of combination and concentration. A thousand Brown men walking in various parts of the country, each according to his fancy, would attract no special attention; a thousand of you marching together down Broadway would constitute a parade and get Brown's name into the papers.

"I would like to see a campaign of education in behalf of education started and carried on by the colleges of the country, and I would like to see Brown lead it, but no scholarly treatises will do, for if you would reach the eye and the mind and the heart of the Common People you must talk in their language, not yours. You must not talk the language of the laboratory and the lecture room; you need a translator. The Pierian spring gushes forth as clear and pure as ever, but you have labeled it H<sub>2</sub>O, and the Man on the Street does not know what the symbol stands for, and goes thirsty. You must have a translator, and I know of but one that can talk to the millions you want to reach, and in a language they understand, and that is the daily newspaper. Whatever its faults, the newspaper can do and does do that, and I need not name even one of the thousand colossal things it has accomplished, to prove its almost limitless influence and power.

USE REASON, WHY TALK.

"So it should be in the newspapers that the central bureau of Brown should begin its work. Begin it with carefully prepared 'reason why,' 'heart-to-heart' advertising talks on the value and benefit of education—always in plain and 'popular' language, and gradually leading up to specific and exact information about Brown, its opportunities, its advantages and the cost of an education there. I see no reason why, if properly approached, the colleges of the country, or at least of the East, could not be induced to unite in the first or general part of this campaign, the expense being distributed according to the size and wealth of the institutions, after which each college could follow up and take advantage of the general campaign with such special advertising as might seem advisable. But I would like to see Brown blaze the trail.

"If for no other reasons, let us do what we can for the pure love of learning. This is the greatest duty—to help to bless as many as possible with this priceless gift. The world is so filled with 'the market place, the eager love of gain'—take the boys of the country by the hand and show them 'the sequestered nooks, and all the sweet serenity of books.' Make it easier for them to gain those benefits which you acquired with so much of delight. If you will do this—to misquote the bravest singer of modern days—you will have done a better thing than to demonstrate the forty-seventh problem of Euclid. You will have helped to demonstrate the livableness of life."

A PROMISING YOUNGSTER.

Uniontown Record, not a Year Old, Has 5,000 Circulation.

Henry W. Reiley, editor and manager of the Uniontown (Pa.) Daily Record, was in town last week making the final arrangements for two vacation trips for the winners of a recent circulation contest, one to Bermuda and one to Europe.

The Record is not yet a year old, having been launched October 13, 1913. At that time Uniontown, a city of 20,000 population, had one morning and two evening newspapers. Mr. Reiley, who was formerly manager of the Waynesboro Evening Herald, and for eight years was editor of the Trenton True American, believed that there was room for another morning paper. So he organized a staff, established a printing plant and launched the Record, which started off with a good subscription list and a fair share of advertising. People liked the paper and the output increased until now the Record has a circulation of over 5,000 copies. The recent circulation campaign added 1,650 names to the list.

Minnesota Editors Seeking Office.

Editors and publishers of Minnesota are aspiring to seats in the legislature and in other political offices, and there is every prospect of a goodly number being elected this year. The following have filed as primary candidates: S. A. Langum, Preston Republican; Albert L. Ward, Fairmont Independent; Arthur M. Nelson, Fairmont Sentinel; W. H. Haislett, Butterfield Advocate; A. C. Finke, Hills Crescent; G. B. Bjornson, Minnesota Mascot; A. J. Rockne, Zumbrota News; Jens K. Grondahl, Red Wing Republican; Theodore Christianson, Dawson Sentinel; Andrew Bromstad, Milan Standard; Carl A. Wold, Alexandria Echo; Sam Y. Gordon, Brown's Valley Tribune; E. E. Adams, Fergus Falls Journal; S. M. Rector, Deer Creek Mirror; Farley A. Dare, Walker Pilot; Robert C. Dunn, Princeton Union; F. A. Wilson, Bemidji Sentinel; Charles F. Scheers, Akeley Herald-Tribune; George P. Jones, Bagley Herald, and Charles L. Stevens, Warren Register. The editors represent every shade of political thought.

Few Duties for Country Editor.

The Clay County (O.) Clarion says that to run a newspaper all a fellow has to do is to be able to write poems, discuss the tariff and money questions, umpire a baseball game, report a wedding, saw wood, describe a fire so that the readers will shed their wraps, make $1 do the work of $10, shine at a dance, measure calico, abuse the liquor habit, test whisky, subscribe to charity, go without meals, attack free silver, wear diamonds, invent advertisements, sneer at snobbery, overlook scandal, praise babies, delight pumpkin raisers, minister to the afflicted, heal the disgruntled, flirt to a finish, set type, mold opinions, sweep out the office, speak at prayer meetings and stand in with everybody and everything.

Facilitates Sending of Want Ads.

The Kansas City Star has inaugurated a new system that will facilitate and expedite the delivery of want ads for the paper. Twelve bronze letter boxes for the Star have been installed in large buildings of the business district for the convenience of those who have want ads, answers to ads, Public Mind letters or any other communication they desire to have reach the office of the paper. The communications reach the Star office within an hour. The collections are made weekdays, hourly from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m., and holidays and Sundays, 11 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Death of James H. Smith.

James Hinman Smith, one of the best known editors of Westchester County, died of heart disease, Saturday, at his summer home near South Britain, Conn. He was 67 years of age and came from a family of newspaper men. His father, the late Thomas Smith, founded the old Yonkers (N. Y.) Herald, now the Gazette. Mr. Smith learned the newspaper business with his father. About 1869 he founded the Tarrytown (N. Y.) Argus, which he sold in 1875, and went to New Rochelle, where he founded the New Rochelle Press. He was editor and proprietor of the Press until his death. He is survived by his wife and daughter.

OBITUARY NOTES.

Sir DOUGLAS STRAIGHT, journalist and lawyer, died last week in London. He was Honorary Treasurer of the Newspaper Society and of the Institute of Journalists. He was born in London October 22, 1844, and engaged in newspaper and magazine work until 1865, when he was called to the bar. From 1879 to 1892 Sir Douglas was Judge of the High Court at Allahabad and took much interest in the establishment of the university there. He was knighted in 1892. From 1896 to 1909 he was editor of the Pall Mall Gazette.

GIFFORD A. ALLEN, for many years advertising manager of the Troy (N. Y.) Record, died at a hospital in that city, following an operation, on June 5. He was 57 years old. Mr. Allen was prominent in Masonic circles and had a wide acquaintance among business men in that section of the State.

ROBERT A. WOOD, formerly an Albany newspaper correspondent for Manhattan newspapers, and later attached to the staff of the Appraiser's Department of the New York Custom House, died of congestion of the brain last week at his home in Brooklyn. He was fifty-four years old, and before coming to Brooklyn was editor of the Western New Yorker, of Warsaw, N. Y. He leaves his wife.

GEORGE Y. FOWLER, founder and proprietor of the Frankfort (Ind.) Times, died at his home in that city recently following a week's illness with double pneumonia. He was born at Colfax, 54 years ago and in 1882 was married to Miss Catherine Kramer, sister of Harold Kramer, the author. He is survived by the widow and three sons.

MARCIA MESSENGER, twenty-eight years a reporter on the Maryville (Mo.) Democrat-Forum, died last week as a result of an operation. She was 44 years old.

R. L. BIERLY, for many years editor of the Renovo (Pa.) Evening News, died recently at Karthaus, Pa., after a long illness.

A Bright One from Atlanta, Ga.

The Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution has issued, to advertisers, its claim that the morning paper in general and the Constitution in particular is superior to the afternoon paper, a clever illustrated booklet, "Where Are You Going This Evening?" The pamphlet, containing sketches and verses by Henry O. C. Wagstaff, is copyrighted by James R. Holliday, advertising manager of the Constitution. The booklet is dedicated to the "go-fans" or "domestic after-teahikers," who presumably find no time to read an evening paper.

Rogers and the Washington Herald.

Through an inadvertence the EDITOR AND PUBLISHER, in its issue of May 30, stated that E. S. Rogers had been appointed business manager of the Washington Times. Mr. Rogers, who was for some time with that newspaper, has been made business manager of the Washington Herald. Another erroneous statement was that the Times had carried only twenty-six thousand lines of advertising 1st year when the figures should have been twenty-six millions—some difference.

When You Think of CIRCULATION--- Think of HOE

To get circulation and keep it, by taking care of it properly, the newspaper must have fast and dependable presses and quick and accurate stereotyping facilities.

For more than a century newspaper publishers have placed their reliance upon R. HOE & CO. for printing and stereotyping machinery that will stand the severest tests.

The Acid Test is being applied to circulation, and bogus claims are being heavily discounted. An honest list of one thousand subscribers will out-pull a padded list of three times that number. There is enough circulation to buy, and the advertiser is rapidly learning the difference between the good and the bad. The honest list has nothing to fear—the dishonest list ought to go. As long ago as the days of Adam Smith it was considered poor policy to follow out the theory of "Let the buyer beware."—F. M. BALL.

THE I. C. M. A. CONVENTION.

The sixteenth annual convention of the International Circulation Managers' Association, which will be held June 13-19 on the steamship "Noronic" during its trip from Sarnia to Duluth and return on the Great Lakes, will bring together the leading men in the business. Fully three hundred of them will meet to discuss the pressing questions of the hour in circulation work. The program calls for addresses by big men on big topics. Out of the week's intimate association and uninterrupted study of circulation problems will come, it is believed, a vast amount of valuable suggestion and help. The EDITOR AND PUBLISHER extends to the members its best wishes for a most profitable convention.

Among all the workers in newspaper offices none are more alert and progressive than those employed in the circulation department. Circulation managers must be capable and efficient men in order to hold down their jobs, for in carrying on their work in the large cities they encounter fierce competition, the battle is always on, steel clashes against steel and victory is not always to the strongest. Brains as well as brawn must be used in marketing newspapers.

Once on a time any kind of a man was considered good enough for circulation manager. If he was muscular, had a strong voice and a stout pair of legs he filled the bill. Such a man would be out of place in the position today. Conditions have changed. Circulations are now numbered by the hundreds of thousands instead of thousands, the machinery of distribution has grown so large that it requires skilled engineers to run it. Papers are delivered to agents, thousands of them, who in turn place them in the hands of newsboys and newsdealers; they are shipped by mail, by express, by automobiles, by special trains and steamboats.

It takes a man with a big brain, with special executive ability, and with untiring energy to run the circulation department of a great modern newspaper.

He gets a big salary because he earns it. He stands well with both the editorial and the business departments, because, owing to his direct touch with the reading public, he is able to make suggestions that will greatly enhance its popularity.

The circulation manager's rise in importance and influence lies in the fact that the very life of a newspaper depends upon the amount and character of its circulation. No matter how interesting and valuable a newspaper may be, if it has not a sufficient number of readers to make it an attractive proposition to advertisers, it will be a failure. Hence men who can get circulation, hold it, and economically effect its distribution are highly esteemed and well paid by newspaper publishers.

"TRYING CASES" IN NEWSPAPERS.

In a long letter to the New York World, published on May 17, Mr. Samuel Untermyer condemns

The intolerable evil of trying cases in the newspapers in advance of their trial by the courts, by which the public mind is poisoned and the securing of impartial juries is rendered impossible.

He says:

For this uncivilized state of things the responsibility must be equally shared by the press, our prosecuting attorneys and our cumbersome and antiquated legal machinery.

After praising the World for its ability, courage and fairness, Mr. Untermyer continues:

Yet its columns, like that of every other paper in New York, have for weeks past, ever since the Court of Appeals reversed the Becker case, been filled with comments and interviews that have the effect of pre-judging the case. There is nothing unusual about that state of things. It has become an incident of every important case.

After a long attack upon District Attorneys who "persist in trying their cases in the papers," Mr. Untermyer concludes:

This scandal should be ended and it will be the purpose of the Committee on Legislation of the Lawyers' Association, of which I am Chairman, to endeavor to enlist the aid of the press in this city in securing such legislation as will render its continuation impossible. I believe most of them will be glad to put an end to the abuse if their competitors are prohibited from doing so. This is, however, only one of the many defects in our legal machinery, though an important one. The entire system sadly needs overhauling. This will now be attempted, and we hope with the valuable aid of the press of this city, for without that aid I am afraid we can accomplish nothing.

Mr. Untermyer errs in attaching to newspapers a large degree of blame which should not rest upon them, but which primarily belongs on the shoulders of the legal officials and other lawyers who give to reporters the information which he condemns. In Mr. Untermyer's long and brilliant career has he never told "the boys" certain things which, in print, might benefit his client? If so, he is a rare exception among lawyers.

A reporter is assigned to gather and collect all the news and views worth printing about a case. His paper expects him to be impartial and thorough. Naturally enough, the reporter will get all the good copy he can, especially when a part of that copy is the utterance of a prosecuting attorney or the attorney for the defence in some case of great public interest. The city editor and managing editor, who pass upon the story in its final shape, are in much the same position, merely doing their routine duty. Only, then, by an agreement between the men who control a paper's news policies, the owners who accept the judgment of their subordinates, could the elimination of the kind of interviews complained of by Mr. Untermyer be accomplished. It is safe to say that such an understanding will never be reached.

In order to facilitate and expedite the sending of want ads, answers to ads, letters and other communications that may be desired to reach the paper promptly, the Kansas City Star has installed in the business district of that city a dozen boxes for the convenience of its readers and advertisers. Collections are made hourly. The plan not only saves postage and telephone tolls but insures almost immediate delivery to the Star office. This is the kind of newspaper efficiency that helps both ends of the business and might well be tried by papers in other cities whose mail service is indifferent to modern requirements.

DIVERS DASHES.

The London Times, according to a special cable to the New York World, seems to fear that the American pen will prove to be more mighty than the American sword ever was in a conquest of Canada. The cable says:

The Americanization of Canada is being regretfully discussed in the Times, but no suggestion is forthcoming for checking the tendency. The President of the Macmillan Company of Canada now writes deploring the Americanizing mission of newspapers from the United States. "Beware," he says, "of Americans when they come bearing newspapers!" The Times correspondent says: "A multitude of Canadians read, perhaps by preference, the sporting papers, weekly publications and monthly magazines from the United States."

The Canadians are certainly showing excellent judgment in the selection of their reading matter. And, incidentally, the president of the Macmillan Company has paid tribute to the influential nature of American publications. Now, if he will only realize that their purpose is much more peaceful than that of the Greeks who bore gifts to the Trojans, he will welcome the invasion.

I heard a pretty good story about Don C. Seitz, the business manager of the New York World, this week. The incident at least sounds as if it might be true, although the time of its occurrence was some years ago. The man who told me the yarn says it has never been in print, so here goes: My informant, with Mr. Seitz and a little girl were walking on a beach. Mr. Seitz turned over a stone and from under it came a curious bug which ran a short distance, then jumped sideways, then proceeded ahead and then again sidestepped at full speed. "What kind of bug is that?" demanded the child. "I don't know," replied Mr. Seitz. "Well," persisted the youngster, "what's it good for?" And Mr. Seitz, with that smile which is a part of him, did not hesitate to answer. "I think," he responded, "that judging from his movements he would make a fine managing editor!"

If he has been correctly reported, Charles H. Betts, president of the New York Press Association, made at the recent convention of that body in Syracuse, N. Y., some statements to which I take exception. Mr. Betts talked of the "yellow" tendencies of many publications and expressed the belief that cheap literature, as an expression of the nation's life, was an indication of mental if not moral deterioration. "We are living in an age of yellow journals, yellow magazines and yellow dogs," said Mr. Betts, "and since this trio holds the centre of the stage, with demagogues as end men, it is probable that future historians may refer to this as the 'yellow age.'" While it may be true that some "yellow" publications still exist, they are comparatively few. The press of the United States steadily grows cleaner in its news, editorial and advertising columns. It sturdily supports countless reforms and has fearlessly fought for good things when even the Church remained silent. And, while I do not know what Mr. Betts meant by "cheap" literature, I do know that the low price of newspapers and magazines, which has been generally maintained, despite increased cost of production, has made it possible for every home circle to enjoy a little university of its own. Mr. Betts should discard his blue spectacles!

Swift belongs to the fourth generation of newspaper men in the family. He has covered the local news of several Hudson river towns, and has written several news stories for New York City newspapers.

The Great Empire State of New York, with

Thirty-seven New York State Newspapers, each with a circulation of 5, buyers of newspapers, will print for a general advertiser 50 advertisements lines of space within a year at

The only thing that has stood in the way of faster development of general advertising in newspapers has been the rather slow development of the spirit of cooperation among newspaper publishers and their representatives.

This spirit of cooperation has reached, however, a stage of development which bodes well for the future development of newspaper advertising in the general field.

There are a great many newspaper publishers who are beginning to realize that their own success depends upon the general success of their contemporaries.

If advertising is a power in one newspaper in a community, it is relatively powerful in all other newspapers in the same community. Likewise in a state or in a section of the country.

Now, here is the great Empire State of New York, with a prosperous population of 9,113,279. Her people have an average earning power which makes certain the success of any business that will concentrate its appeal to them through advertising in the daily newspapers, as a starter anyway.

Everybody in New York State able to read at all reads a daily newspaper, and many outside of her borders read some one of the many New York dailies.

I have often said, and I want to repeat it here, that New York newspapers serve advertisers in the dual capacity of making their business known locally and nationally.

They enable advertisers to tell WHERE their goods are sold in communities, besides acquainting a large national constituency with the names of their products. The latter is all that the exclusively national media can do for their advertisers.

There are thirty-seven daily newspapers, printed in English, in the State of New York, with a combined circulation of 2,176,923. Each one of these newspapers has a circulation in excess of 5,000 daily.

A campaign of 2,500 lines in a season will cost the advertiser in all of these newspapers a rate of $4.0409 per line, or $10,102.25.

A campaign of 10,000 lines within a year will cost the advertiser in all of these newspapers a rate of $3.7304 per line, or $37,304.

I wish to call your attention to the fact that it costs the advertiser for a 2,500 line campaign in all of these thirty-seven daily newspapers, 44 cents plus per line for every million inhabitants; that it costs for a 10,000 line campaign, 40 cents plus per line for every million inhabitants.

Can you beat it?

The proportion of rates charged by the New York City dailies and all of the dailies outside of the greater city is $5.97 per line for New York City and $2.4947 for the State dailies. These rates are for a 2,500 line campaign. They are less for greater volume of space, or for three times a week for a year, although the discounts for New York City dailies are proportionately greater than those allowed by the State dailies—the latter operating on a closer scale between maximum and minimum rates.

But, just think of getting the equivalent of 48 standard magazine pages in 37 daily newspapers in one year (48 weeks out of 52) at a cost of $37,304.

Just think of this cost to reach all of the people in the Empire State (9,113,279 of them)—and, in addition, all of the people from all parts of the country who visit New York and other cities every day in the year (estimated to be 300,000 daily)—also many thousands of others who live in different sections of the country, and who buy some one New York State daily newspaper.

Actually, it only costs eight mills—eight-tenths of one per cent—to reach every inhabitant of the State of New York, with national publicity thrown in for good measure!

circulation, it is necessary, however, to buy the entire circulation, manifestly impossible for them to sell circulation by states or by the 1,787,119 magazine circulation in the State of New York, which is $79.56 per line.

er could use all the circulations of the magazines, whose total is 1,787,119 circulation which he gets in New York at $8.44 per line.

magazine circulation with the cost of the combined concentrated insertion is written, we find that for $4.0409 per line the advertiser gets in newspapers 2,176,923. On this basis, the advertiser gets in newspapers 2,176,923 cents a line.

ers are members of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Advertising Association, the Director of the Bureau, 806 World Building, New York City, Suite 1117 World Building, New York City, will gladly be interested in newspaper advertising.

The argument is advanced very often that national publicity is more economical than localized or sectionalized publicity in daily newspapers.

But I don't see how it is possible to overlook the fact that advertising in sections—gradually developing a business as the advertiser can afford it—getting in intimate touch with the people of any given section, and through this method getting distribution—is the logical, sensible thing to do.

However, tear to pieces every argument made in behalf of daily newspaper advertising, the final deduction must always be that newspapers reach all of the people all of the time—once or twice every twenty-four hours, and that a direct, forceful, continuous appeal to them always brings to advertisers profitable returns, secured, too, at a minimum of cost.

The newspapers of New York State reach practically one-tenth of the population of the United States. The cost of reaching this population is eight mills per inhabitant.

Twenty-four of the leading national media have a combined circulation of 1,787,119 in the State of New York, and the proportion of their total combined rate for New York State advertising is $8.436 per line.

Besides, the advertiser must remember that he cannot buy circulation in national media for any given state or section or territory. He must pay for the advertising for the whole territory covered by the national media, and very often he does not want all of it.

The cost per million of population in newspaper advertising is practically the same low cost throughout the whole country—that is to say, about eight mills for every human being, man, woman, child.

The general media, all of them combined, do not reach all of the people in the United States, but all of the people who read at all read a daily newspaper—and the cost of reaching them through newspaper advertising is very small.

Any business developing itself in territories all over the United States, doing so gradually, and ultimately touching every nook and corner of the country, will find its advertising investment yielding a larger return—therefore, at a lower percentage of cost on the gross business done than by any other means of publicity.

It is infinitely better for advertisers to concentrate their efforts in one given territory at a time—reaching all of the people there—developing their business on sound lines—than it is to scatter their advertising all over the country, not touching any one territory thoroughly.

There is a tremendous spreading of advertising in this country. It is mighty thin spreading in a great many instances. But, as little as all of us knew about advertising, the fact remains—its power is so great that it makes business successes in spite of the awful lot of groping in the dark that is done.

The daily newspapers of New York State, as well as the daily newspapers in all other States or territories, can give advertising a definite, fixed, commercial value, so that there need be no groping, or wandering, or spreading.

All the newspapers need to do is to unite. The very successful ones must make allowance for the struggling ones. They must not be too proud, or too selfish, to help pull the smaller fellow along to success. Success is necessary to all, if the few are to continue to succeed.

Newspapers must ultimately become the ten commandments of business, regulating the character and methods of advertising, so that the greatest service will be rendered the people as well as the manufacturer and merchant. They will regulate also the general cost of advertising, minimizing it greatly, besides making it more efficient. Ultimately, it will reduce the cost of everything to the consumer.

HOW TO MAKE IT PAY

ters bring in? In other words, do you keep a stop watch on your business at every point?

I recently remodelled a circulation system that lost the publishers $50,000 a year and by accurate bookkeeping, a changed system and a little enthusiasm wiped out the loss entirely.

Therefore, I advise you to study your costs. Look your circulation problems squarely in the face and do not be afraid to find out the true rottenness of it for fear some advertiser will learn the truth about your list. Know the truth and it shall make you free to correct the errors.

SOME CIRCULATION FACTS.

You have all heard that the way to get circulation is to publish a good newspaper. Yet any number of good newspapers have comparatively small circulations. A poor newspaper with a good circulation department can out-distance a good newspaper with a poor circulation department every time. The best way to get circulation is to go out and fetch it in.

The best kind of circulation is the kind that comes into your office voluntarily and lays down its money each year and begs you to please send the paper another year. Unfortunately, there is not enough of it to go around. Newspapers, as a rule, are too nearly identical in news, features and service to influence a subscriber one way or another. It is a difficult thing to prove one newspaper better than another. The most successful newspaper from a circulation standpoint, therefore, is the one which can induce the most people to read it and pay for it. It is simply a case of salesmanship, and the best salesman wins.

Shall high priced salesmen be employed? Not if lower priced ones will get you enough business at reasonable cost.

Shall premiums be used? Not if you can get enough subscribers for your purpose without them and get them at as low cost without premiums as with them.

Shall contests be held? Not if you can maintain all the circulation you need without them.

Shall prices be cut? Not if you can get enough subscribers at the full price.

Shall clubs be made with other publications? Not if your own is strong enough to induce its own subscriptions.

GET CIRCULATION.

If you need high priced men to get you the needed circulation, hire them; if you have need for more circulation than you have and premiums will get them where other things fail, use premiums; run contests, cut prices, club—get the circulation. Don't hesitate—get enough subscribers so that your circulation equals or exceeds the amount necessary to earn a rate big enough to show a profit on the amount of advertising you carry or are likely to carry.

Circulation you must have—enough good circulation to pay your advertisers. If you have not got it already, go out and get it by hook or crook. Whether or not a subscription list will produce results for advertisers depends largely on the methods by which the list was built. Whether a subscription is good or bad is governed entirely by the opinion the subscriber of the publication subscribed for. That opinion is governed by what is in the paper, the methods used in getting the subscription and the service rendered the subscriber after the subscription is taken.

If the editorial and news departments are weak, the paper is a weak salesman for the advertiser. If dishonest methods and misrepresentation were used in getting the subscriber's money, or if the delivery service is poor, the influence of the paper as a selling force is weakened terribly.

THE USE OF PREMIUMS.

If you sell me a good article at a right price for which I have use, my opinion of it won't be lessened by your offering me an inducement to buy, in the form of a premium, a cut price or a chance to please a pretty girl. Therefore, a premium, a contest, or a bargain day cannot be condemned as such. The danger lies in the methods employed. Two-thirds of the papers of standing in the United States use premiums; over half believe in contests and most all papers cut prices in one way or another.

The danger in a premium campaign lies in not figuring the cost before its inauguration, in employing crooked agents and in giving away stuff on which you get insufficient return in money or influence. If proper business methods are employed a premium induced subscription is as good as any on the list.

The danger in a contest lies in the methods employed by the managers. A straight contest is a good thing providing the publisher is a good enough business man to invest the proceeds wisely and not spend the whole income immediately and forget the paper and ink bills that must fall due before the subscriptions expire.

KATZENJAMMER KIDS.

Their Mother Tells an Editor and Publisher Reporter of Hardships the Captain Now Endures Twice a Week.

"Good evening, Mrs. Katzenjammer," said the reporter of the EDITOR AND PUBLISHER, as he met that distinguished, highly colored German lady last evening at her home. "I have called to see you in the hope that you might favor me with an interview."

"Yah," she answered with a three-column-wide smile. "Sit down vonce."

Mrs. Katzenjammer was found in her living room, surrounded with saws, shot-guns, pick axes, crowbars, clubs, knives, augurs, cans of paint, spikes, nails, balloons, ropes, barbed wire, sledge hammers, dynamite, and other bric-a-brac.

"Dose vas der chiltrens blay dings," she explained, as she detected the reporter looking them over. "Dey use some of dose efery veek."

"Mostly on the Captain—I believe," ventured the reporter.

"Yah," replied their proud mother.

"Where are Hans and Fritz?" she was asked.

"Dey vas gonod oud to get shaved."

"They are certainly old enough to grow whiskers, are they not, Mrs. Katzenjammer?"

"Yas—I dink. Fritz iss vorty-seven years of age, unt Hans dirty-nine."

"They certainly hold their age well."

"Sure—dey haff to—or dey loose der job. It is choost der same mit Mrs. Newlyved's papy. Dot kit vas old enough ter vote—but if it got viskers dot vould be nix mit der picture gerscheft."

"Ah yes—I see."

"Sure—Der Captain must always be der same—me also."

"Have you any idea, Mrs. Katzenjammer, how many millions of dollars' worth of furniture, houses, ships, works of art, and other property your children have destroyed since they have been in the comic section business?"

"I know me nit. But vot matters der loss? It vas to laugh."

"Certainly—I understand that. What I really wish to know is this: Who do you really consider responsible for your children?"

"Vell I haff suspicions of Rudolph Dirks—"

"So I have heard—but another person is claiming that he is their only original father."

"Sure. But vat can I do?"

"You can go—to court."

"But I haff been to court, unt der court it says Rudolph vas der varder of der kits. Den dot other mans, he say, 'Nit—I vas der vater of der kits—' unt he makes dem do stunts yust der same as Rudolph."

"Yes, it must be a very distressing situation for a lady to be placed in."

"Sure—it vas makin' me unt Hans unt Fritz unt der Captain vork overtime. But vat can ve do? Der kits now haff two varders unt two pages efery Sountay."

"That certainly is a hardship."

"Sure—two loads of furniture is now proken efery veek instead of von—twice a veek now does der Captain loose his pants, unt haff glue put in his viskers, unt a house vall down on him. Twice a veek does der Bolice unt Fire Departments come py our house instead of vonce."

"Under the circumstances, Mrs. Katzenjammer, you are certainly leading a very strenuous life—"

"Sure—"

"This having two men, claiming to be responsible for your family, while not causing you to lose your standing for respectability in society, as it is now organized, must at least be annoying at times?"

"It vas—but vat could I do? Could I got a conjunction by der court? Nit. Uff I vas a grass widow, I could make von man's responsible—but as I am only a paper widow—ach! Vot iss der use?"

Thanking Mrs. Katzenjammer, the reporter started to go.

"Come around next veek," she said. "Fritz is to have a pirthday bardy—in der cake vill pe vorty-eight gandles." TOM W. JACKSON.

VIRGINIA PRESS CONVENTION.

Program Includes Moonlight Excursion and Reception by President.

(Special Correspondence.)

RICHMOND, VA., June 12.—The annual meeting of the Virginia Press Association will be held June 23-25 at Alexandria, and indications are that there will be a full attendance of the members, as a program of unusual interest has been arranged. The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce has extended an invitation to the press association to be its special guest on a moonlight excursion, while the Washington Chamber of Commerce will give the editors a sightseeing automobile tour over Washington, a luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce, and a reception at which President Wilson is expected to extend the glad hand of welcome.

The program includes an address of welcome by the mayor of Alexandria, auto trip to Arlington, Fort Myer, Georgetown and Great Falls, moonlight excursion down the Potomac, trip to Mount Vernon and to Washington.

In the afternoon the Washington committee will arrange a special program which will include a reception by President Wilson and a visit to the Pan-American Building on invitation of John Barrett.

PRESS ASSOCIATIONS.

H. L. Hoard of Fort Atkinson was chosen president of the Wisconsin Press Association meeting in convention at Milwaukee last week. Edward Malone of Waterford was chosen secretary and A. L. Scott, Strowand, treasurer. The organization voted to work towards presenting the passage of the proposed law prohibiting papers from giving advertising space for railroad mileage. "The Building and Holding of the County Weekly Circulation," by H. E. Roethe of Fennimore, gave many timely hints of this important phase of publishing. J. E. Nethercut of Lake Geneva discussed "The Free Space Problem." Mrs. Adelaide King of Wau-pun, in her address, "The Woman Journalist," advocated the organization of a woman's press association. Other papers were "Editorial Responsibility of the Country Publisher," by C. J. Augustin, Glenwood; "Foreign Advertising," by Percy Atkinson, Eau Claire; "A Successful State Association," C. W. Bowron, and "Should Editors Engage in Politics," by Edward Malone of Waterford.

The Associated Weekly Newspaper Association of Indiana has prepared an elaborate program for its semi-annual meeting at Brookside Park this week. No officers will be elected, but the weekly newspaper men have plenty of things to discuss, including the running of political press notices, with which the country weeklies are being swamped at this time.

The Alabama Press Association met at Birmingham last week and elected the following officers: C. J. Hildreth, New Decatur Advertiser, president; Harry M. Ayres, Anniston Star, vice-president; J. R. Rosson, Cullman Democrat, secretary and treasurer, and J. H. Hard, recording secretary. One of the features of the convention was a banquet tendered by the Age-Herald. Some of the speakers were E. M. Barrett, editor Age-Herald; Hugh W. Roberts, C. M. Stanley, Rev. F. W. Barrett and C. W. Hare.

Michigan Journalism Courses.

Practical courses in journalism, added to the theoretical courses, will be offered at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, next year. Lyman Bryson, a member of the rhetoric faculty, and a newspaper man of experience, will have charge of the new courses, which will cover a wide scope, and include instructions in news gathering.

The Evening Telegram Leads All Evening Papers in Advertising

Naturally some of its competitors follow, a few of them totter along, while others, like The Globe and Evening Mail, join the procession with a limp.

The following figures, compiled by the statistical department of the Evening Post, which is authoritative, shows that during the MONTH OF MAY The—

Evening Telegram	GAINED	102,904	lines of advertising
Evening Sun	gained	9,946	lines of advertising
Evening Post	gained	23,851	lines of advertising
Evening Mail	lost	124,372	lines of advertising
Globe	lost	56,053	lines of advertising
Evening World	lost	48,117	lines of advertising

AND AGAIN THE DEADLY FIGURES

The EVENING TELEGRAM published in May
 166,672 lines more than the Evening World
 333,339 lines more than the Globe
 331,007 lines more than the Sun
 360,423 lines more than the Evening Post
 295,528 lines more than the Mail

The EVENING TELEGRAM printed 13,108 lines of instruction and educational advertising, which was more than was printed in any morning or evening newspaper in New York.

The EVENING TELEGRAM broke all records during the month of May in Automobile Advertising by printing 42,239 lines, which was 9,386 lines more than published by the Post, Globe and World combined.

The hundreds of thousands of persons who read the Evening Telegram have the money to purchase automobiles and gasoline. Just think this over.

"Our circulation isn't going ahead," said the Boss. "Can you do anything to help?"

"Sure," said the Optimist.

"Well, why don't you?"

"You won't let me," answered the Optimist, smiling.

"Talk sense," said the Boss, somewhat curtly. "I can't see any joke in the situation."

"All right," rejoined the Optimist. "I'll talk if you'll let me go on without interruption for ten minutes and I'll let you say at the end whether or not it is sense."

The Boss grunted assent.

"In the first place, a newspaper has the same selling problem as any other article of general merchandise seeking a market. You are the manufacturer. Wagons, trolley cars and trains take the bulk of your product to newsdealers, big and little. Such of them as sell direct to the readers are retailers. Such of them as resell to other newsdealers and to newsboys are wholesalers.

READER AS CONSUMER.

"Look, for a minute, at the 'ultimate consumer.' Mr. Regular Reader goes out on his porch in the morning and picks up your paper where the boy has thrown it, or he goes to his accustomed newsstand and picks it up there (always with a glance at the headline displays of the other papers), or he gets it from the hands of his regular newsboy on car, train or street corner. You can count pretty surely on Mr. Regular Reader. He is the slave of the habit, and the newspaper habit is, fortunately, a strong one.

"You can't build your future on Mr. Regular Reader, however. He is constantly wasting away for one reason and another. A newspaper that means to hold its quantity of circulation—to say nothing of increasing—must always seek new readers.

"That brings us to the important point. What are we doing to get new readers? How are they to be had?"

"The prospective purchaser of a newspaper is identically like the prospective purchaser of any other commodity—swayed by the same influences, antagonized by the same qualities or defects, possessed of the same baffling inertia.

"How are you going to reach him? Your paper is convenient to his hand. By newsdealer or newsboy you have made it easy for him to buy. So have all your rivals. The newsboy calls the name of your paper in his ear. The boy calls the names of the others, too. He hears from some of his friends occasional compliments for your paper. He hears from other of his friends compliments for your rivals.

AS TO USE OF ADS.

"Advertise? What media have you? Your own columns reach only your own readers. Your rivals will not accept advertisements of your paper. Street cars and billboards at best can do little else than shout your name. Limitations of copy prevent anything more than the most sketchy of arguments, and you can't change the copy often enough to be really effective.

"Schemes? Circulation obtained by schemes usually has to be maintained by schemes. And there are few schemes that don't prove mighty expensive when you consider the genuine permanent circulation obtained from them. Further, the usual scheme cheapens the paper in appearance and in the estimation of the advertiser.

"Headline display? The most dangerous game in the newspaper world. Once you begin to excite the emotional public with startling headlines you must keep the sensation alive with constantly more lurid display. You come quickly to a place where you must stop. Then the reaction sets in. Meanwhile you have offended the intelligence of the readers whom you really want, the readers who spend money with your advertisers.

"Now we've got 75,000 net circulation. You say you want 25,000 more in order to establish a satisfactory advertising rate. You aren't very particular where and how you get the extra 25,000, I understand. The merchant today buys advertising space almost entirely on quantity circulation. He has only a vague idea of the character of the newspaper goods. All the other merchandise that he buys he examines and compares. Advertising space he buys on your claims and his impressions. That being so, keep feeding him figures for the immediate future.

SEEK INFORMATION.

"But the advertiser is beginning to inquire as to what kind of people make up your 75,000 or 100,000 readers. As the years go on he is going to inquire more carefully. As a farsighted business man, building a newspaper property on sound lines, you should anticipate the future.

"What would you like to be able to show the advertiser when he asks the question, 'How much and what kind of circulation have you?' Here's what you'd like to be able to say, 'Mr. Merchant, there are in the field 132,000 families whose incomes range from $800 to $3,000 a year. My paper goes regularly to everyone of them. As to the rest of the population, the incomes below $800 will bring you mighty little profit, and those above $3,000 are mighty little influenced by advertising!'

"Not only is that what you would like to be able to say, but also it is what the merchant would like to hear. He knows that it will cost him less to cover the field with one paper than with two.

"Nor is the dream so utterly chimerical as it sounds. The Baltimore News goes daily into 61,000 out of 78,000 white and English-speaking homes in its city. I'll venture that the Indianapolis News has as high a percentage. The Kansas City Star long had the reputation of absolutely blanketing its territory. Other papers have undoubtedly done as well.

"The Baltimore News' circulation problem is chiefly a city one. Maryland has no important city, except its capital, and little suburban territory surrounds that. The Indianapolis News, on the other hand, has a very important suburban and country territory. It maintains a system remarkably thorough and efficient. To be accepted as the News' carrier in a town is a mark of genuine distinction, achieved only after careful investigation as to reliability and activity. The appointment carries with it membership in the News association of carriers—an organization administered with the purpose to stimulate pride in membership and with some recreation privileges to appeal to the boys' love of fun.

CONCENTRATED CIRCULATION.

"Concentrated circulation is the kind that is worth while. It cuts the cost of delivery and supervision to a minimum. It entrenches you against competition. It provides an unanswerable argument to the advertiser.

"How are you going to get it? Simply by going after it—systematically, intelligently, relentlessly. Intelligent persistence will sell nearly anything to nearly anybody. As to the exact form, I like the Baltimore News plan—it's pretty much the same as the Indianapolis News plan—best of any I know.

"Baltimore is divided into thirteen circulation districts. Downtown and in

123,419 Lines

The Evening Post Statistical Bureau is authority for the following figures:

The Herald Gained	123,419 lines
The World Lost	12,675 lines
The Tribune Lost	17,553 lines
The Times Gained	75,852 lines
The Press Lost	14,616 lines

The New York Herald gained nearly three times as much as the combined losses of three of the above papers.

The Herald gained over 47,000 lines more than the Times.

The Herald gained in New Publications over 19,000 lines.

The Herald gained over 4,000 lines in Financial advertising.

The Herald published about the same amount of Want advertisements as last year. The World lost over 54,000 lines in Want advertising.

The Herald gained 5,000 lines in Railroad and Steamship advertising. The World lost over 300 lines.

The Herald gained over 35,000 lines in Dry Goods advertising; a greater gain than was made by any other morning paper.

The Herald gained 3,000 lines in Instruction advertising.

Automobile advertising—The Herald topped all other papers with 54,000 lines, with a gain of nearly 13,000 lines. The next paper which has been claiming the lead in this class of advertising not only carried 5,000 lines less than the Herald but showed a loss of 4,000 lines.

In Hotels and Restaurants the Herald gained 16,000 lines—publishing more than any other paper in New York city.

The latest convert to monotypes is La Patrie, the French daily of Montreal, which has just put in six machines.

HOW TO MAKE IT PAY.

The best way to maintain a good list of subscriptions is first to get a good list which has been built by honest methods and then keep that list interested. A subscription list is like a new theatrical production. It is easy enough to fill the house the first few nights by proper advertising, but if the show is not interesting the audience dwindles and the show fails. Therefore, don't spend your money building up a list and spoil all your efforts by printing a punk paper.

Salesmanship and advertising can sell any article once, but future success demands that quality bear out the statements of the salesman or the advertiser.

Many a newspaper now loses money because it has not quite enough subscribers. I refer now to the small daily papers with circulations from 4,000 to 25,000. Broadly speaking, no 1 cent paper can make any money worth mentioning unless it has at least 5,000 paying subscribers with a net circulation revenue of approximately $25 a day. This achieved, however, the paper will make about 6 per cent on invested capital and for each 1,000 subscriptions added about 1 per cent will be added to the profits. A paper with 10,000 circulation ought to make 10 per cent, but after the 25,000 mark is reached, the percentage of profit per thousand decreases owing to the inability of the paper to pull results in the wider territory.

The cost of printing 5,000 papers is but little more than that of printing 1,000 papers, except for the white paper item. Pay-rolls, overhead expense, and editorial cost will not increase, but the advertising revenue will, and the result is very satisfactory to the book balance. Some newspaper men have never figured this out and let their circulation stay just below the winning mark. If your paper is losing money I advise you to investigate this ratio of circulation and determine at what point your list will have to stand in order to bring it up to the profitable mark.

INCONSISTENCY OF PUBLISHERS.

Publishers as a class do not believe in advertising. They sell it, write it, pay their bills with it and then disbelieve their own statements about its selling power. A publisher will give you a splendid talk on why you should advertise lavishly but he seldom spends a nickel for the purpose of advertising his own product.

Many publishers will not print a line of their own advertising in their own columns, much less pay for space in other publications. I have actually heard publishers remark that their advertising space was too valuable to use in running house copy. Beyond a doubt you publishers are the worst advertisers in the world.

The big publishers are waking up and it won't be long before others follow. Curtis has always believed in advertising his publications and has spent millions of dollars in letting the public know their good points and he has won big. The New York World is a good advertiser. Hearst also has been a big advertiser as well as a seller of space. Capper has built up a tremendous business mainly by believing in the power of advertising as applied to his own publications.

TOO MANY NEGLECT COLLECTION.

Ordinarily the average newspaper loses a lot of money on so-called bad subscription accounts. The truth is that the money is lost through carelessness and not dishonesty. Poor collection methods are the real cause of the trouble. The average mail list is a gold mine, yet the publishers who will collect by his advertising accounts to less than one-half of 1 per cent will allow 50 per cent of his subscribers to be in arrears. He will bill the list from time to time but he won't follow it up properly with the right kind of letters.

I have known of mail lists on weekly papers where the average amount due from each subscriber was in excess of 50 cents and on a $4 a year daily paper an average of over $2 was due from each name. This is criminal negligence and it is always punished by a big money loss and a loss in subscribers, too, because readers dislike to be allowed to run up a big bill and then be dunned for it. The safest way is to keep the list paid up as far as possible. A regular billing and letter schedule should be made up and followed religiously. The man who does not pay up when he ought to do so must be reminded and you should have your collector or your letter there periodically until he does pay.

Most men do not dodge grocery bills or rent bills, and why should they be allowed to put the publisher off for years? The publisher is in error if he allows it and he also stands a big chance of losing the subscriber. I believe that lax collection methods loses more subscribers than the strictly paid in advance plan. Clean up your lists.

GILLILAN'S ACTIVITIES.

How the Well-Known Humorist and Newspaper Man Will "Rest" This Summer.

Strickland Gillilan is back in Roland Park, Maryland, for a brief stay, looking after property interests. He will oscillate between Indianapolis and everywhere else, keeping up his work for the Indianapolis Star. Recently his column, "Four Ways From the Monument," began appearing under the head of "Jest So" in two other of the big Shaffer papers—the Chicago Evening Post and the Rocky Mountain News.

Mr. Gillilan also contributes regular monthly features in the Woman's World, Railroad Man's Magazine and other periodicals, besides a strong line of advertising-writing contracts. These jobs, with sixty summer lectures and the attendant travel, are almost enough for one newspaper man. In idle moments, when, as he says, "my brain is entirely inactive," he writes verse.

Gillilan says: "Few people realize the horrors of war. On account, partly, of the Mexican situation, Champ Clark has to stay in Washington, and can't fill his twenty-four circuit Chautauqua dates in June, in Tennessee, Alabama and Kentucky. I have to be the houn' dawg. They are all afternoon lectures, under tents. When I stand up there, and the perspiration is using all the pores I have and wishing for more, I'll remember Sherman's immortal words."

A Novel Advertisement.

The Burroughs Adding Machine Co. is issuing every week "Bank News," a simple page of matter relating to banking, set in newspaper style and printed on the back of an ordinary small desk blotter. It is also running a three column ad filled with similar matter and arranged in the same style in the banking publication. The ads are unique and attract wide attention.

NEW AUDIT BUREAU MEMBERS.

On Friday, June 12, the Standard Forms Committee, of which G. H. E. Hawkins, advertising manager of the N. K. Fairbank Co., Chicago, is chairman, held a general hearing on circulation forms for farm, trade and technical publications, at the Union League Club, of that city. Next week, Thursday, the committee will hold a hearing for newspapers and magazines, at the same place, the newspapers at 10 a. m. and the magazines at 2 p. m.

The following publications and advertisers have become members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations since May 20, the date of the organization meeting held in Chicago.

NEWSPAPER ADS ESSENTIAL.

Expert Tells Electrical Convention the Press Is Best Medium.

The report of a special investigating committee presented last week to the National Electric Light and Power Convention indicated that even in an industry which is constantly growing and which now involves about three billions in capital, newspaper advertising is considered absolutely essential to prosperity and development.

The report was read by P. H. Kemble, of Cincinnati, O., chairman of the association's Special Committee on Merchandising and Advertising.

"Every central station must advertise in order to grow," Mr. Kemble said. "Yearly or semi-monthly advertising appropriations should be decided upon. Use all newspapers, but concentrate on those giving the best audience. Limit the advertisement to one idea. Spend the time and money to get the copyright, regardless of the cost of getting the argument into the mind of the reader. Advertise continuously."

Newspapers were placed first among all advertising mediums by Mr. Kemble, whose suggestions were based on long investigations in all parts of the country made at the special request of his organization.

Chicago in Summer.

The Chicago Tribune has issued an attractive booklet, entitled "Chicago This Summer," for the purpose of supplying Chicago business men with information and data that will be of assistance to them in laying plans for special events during the month of June. From its pages it appears that thirty-four conventions will be held in the city this month, four more than in July and August of last year. Plenty of arguments are presented showing that the summer is one of the best seasons in the year to advertise.

Journalism Courses in Tokio, Japan.

The Keio and Waseda Universities of Tokio, Japan, have established courses in journalism. In Keio University the department is under the supervision of the ablest newspaper writers of Tokio, who are especially interested in increasing the prestige of journalism.

FREE FILM PUBLICITY.

Publishers Warned Not to Allow Themselves to Be "Worked" by the Manufacturers as They Were by the Automobile Makers—Advertising Should Be Paid For—Cappeller's Views on the Subject.

From an advertising viewpoint one of the important questions of the moment is "What policy should publishers adopt in developing proper publicity among film manufacturers?" The newspapers, it will be remembered, were worked to death for free publicity by the automobile manufacturers until they tumbled to the fact that they were rendering a valuable service for which they should be well paid. The film manufacturers are now trying to do the same thing. Whether or not they succeed depends upon the attitude taken by the publishers.

Many of the daily newspapers have received offers of film stories at a nominal cost, the object, of course, being to secure such favorable publicity as will lead the local theaters to run them.

E. B. Cappeller, general manager of the Mansfield (O.) News, in commenting on one of these propositions, writes:

DECRYING FREE SPACE GRAFT.

"Convention after convention of newspaper publishers has decried the free space graft. There is a very strong feeling against, for instance, automobile manufacturers, who have, year after year, been able to boost their game without proper advertising appropriations from which publishers have been benefited, through free news notices they have been able to secure from the newspapers. We have resolved, as publishers, time and again, that the real estate promoter, notwithstanding that he glitteringly displays before the editor and advertising manager the great benefits which will come to the community through his project, must pay advertising rates for the advancement of his cause. We have decided that stocks and bonds can be presented to the reading public by any concern only through the paid columns of the paper. We have regarded ourselves, as publishers, as easy marks and have thought that the time has long since been reached when the service we can render must be paid for.

"A new industry in its attempt to reach the American public must be handled wisely by the publishers. The moving picture film manufacturers are anxious to popularize their industry, and they very shrewdly know that there is only one big medium of publicity—the daily newspaper. And they probably think that there is one set of easy marks in the country which will help them do it.

BOOSTING FILMS WITHOUT PAY.

"It seems to us that such leaders in the newspaper world as the Chicago Tribune should stand solidly on the platform so earnestly adopted—that newspapers have a right to expect fair pay for publicity matter. But there may be some "nigger in the woodpile." It is a matter of rumor rather credibly believed that some of the big newspaper interests in this country are being very well paid indeed by the film manufacturers for the promotion of publicity in their cause. And that these big newspaper interests are taking advantage of their position and prestige to the disadvantage of their lesser associates in newspaper work. Now, of course, we do not mean to say that the Chicago Tribune, for instance, is acting in the capacity of a paid press agent for the Thanhouser Corporation, but no more effective effort in the interests of the corporation could be imagined than what the Chicago Tribune is trying to do.

"We understand, too, that for many months the moving picture film manufacturers have had under consideration paid publicity through the medium of daily newspapers. The newspapers have already treated this industry with a great deal of consideration. The local picture houses know this well and there is no doubt about it that such a policy will be maintained. But the film manufacturers owe it to the local picture houses, to the newspapers, and to themselves to take advantage of the publicity value of newspapers in advertising campaigns. Do you think that appropriations will be made for the benefit, not only of the Chicago Tribune and such newspapers, by the film fraternity at large as long as they can secure their ends without adequate advertising appropriations?

"In two weeks we have had three such propositions as that submitted to us. In each case the film corporation interested is certain that a local picture house would exhibit the films provided the newspaper closes the deal. We have no doubt of it. The local picture houses certainly realize the value of newspaper publicity but the acceptance of any one of the three propositions would be regarded by two of the houses as a discrimination against them."

CIRCULATION METHODS

the thickly settled parts of the city the districts are about a mile square. Nobody need walk more than half a mile to get to the center of a district. In the thinly settled sections the districts naturally are larger.

"In as central a location as possible in each district a small store or shelter is permanently rented. Here are the headquarters of the district circulation man, and here the boys assemble before the papers arrive. The district man knows them all. He knows their regular customers and has duplicates of their route lists. If a route boy fails to show up he can send out a substitute. If a boy gives up a route it is turned over to another boy whose street work and dependability have earned him the opportunity. A healthy interest is stimulated by various prizes. Complaints from subscribers get attention at once, because the district manager knows what boy is responsible for delivery.

HOW IT WORKS OUT.

"When a regular brings in a new boy to sell he is paid a small sum, provided the boy sticks for two weeks. The new boy is given ten papers a day free for the first week and is encouraged by practical first-hand advice in that trying period. Cases of non-payment by subscribers are reported to the district manager and he helps in the collection, if necessary.

"Those are some of the things that are done to keep the boys up to their work; but that is only one side of the district manager's job. He makes a house to house census of his territory, finding out what newspapers are regularly taken by each family. This information is entered on cards, which become a complete record of the newspaper habits of this community—white cards for the families that take the News, blue cards for the families that do not. After the census work is complete, the canvassing begins. The mornings are spent in calls on the families who have blue cards. The merits of the News are emphasized and a trial urged. Twice a year the census is corrected and views noted. The remainder of the year is given to canvassing.

"Each week the district managers are assembled in the main office. Problems are discussed, suggestions made, and an inspirational talk given by the business manager. Managers whose districts show any weakness or decline are given the appropriate treatment.

"This plan is systematic. It knows what it is aiming at—the present non-subscriber. It identifies him, locates him, and then goes after him with every resource which experience and practical salesmanship can suggest.

"The result is concentrated circulation. It provides an argument to the advertiser that is unanswerable. If he will go or send to one of your district stations you can show him instantly by the predominance of white cards the superiority of your circulation. He cannot successfully attack your record."

London Times Circulation 140,000.

The London Times published Saturday a chartered accountant's certificate, showing that the average net sales of the newspaper during April exceeded 140,000 copies daily, after deducting all unsold copies. The Times says: "Not since the abolition of the Stamp Act has the net sale of any British daily newspaper, sold at a greater price than a half penny, been revealed to the public."

AD. FIELD PERSONALS.

Harry Robbins, chairman of the Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, and H. C. Brown, advertising manager of the Victor Talking Machine Company, were speakers at the annual convention in New York, this week, of the National Association of Piano Manufacturers. Gov. Glynn was another speaker.

W. F. Long, publishers' representative, 25 West 42nd St., New York, has been appointed Eastern United States representative of the Toronto World, daily and Sunday. Mr. Long is specially qualified to look after the interests of this Canadian newspaper, as he was several years ago associated with the Toronto Globe and later with the Toronto World, prior to coming to New York.

James D. Fulton, who has been appointed Western advertising representative of the Chicago Record-Herald in the foreign field, has a host of friends in the advertising business throughout the country. His promotion on the Record-Herald has been rapid and under the new regime, with most favorable conditions existing, it is expected that the volume of foreign business will be largely increased. His headquarters are in Room 213, Record-Herald Building, Chicago.

Nathaniel S. Olds, who recently resigned as secretary to Boro. President Marcus M. Marks, has taken a position in the advertising department of Julius Kayser & Co., Rochester. He was formerly connected with Rochester newspapers, and later with the Stein-Bloch Company.

F. W. Prother, formerly of the H. W. Weisbought Engraving Co., of Cincinnati, has taken charge of the Maxwell Motor Company publicity, succeeding Charles J. Baker, who joins the Detroit office of the Dunlap-Ward Advertising Company.

Frank L. Valiant has resigned as advertising manager of the Miami Cycle & Manufacturing Co., Middletown, O.

C. F. Higham, the well-known English advertising specialist, sailed for New York on June 13 on his way to Toronto to attend the great ad club convention.

Business Good With Keator.

A. R. Keator, the well known publishers representative of Chicago, spent several days in New York this past week and while talking about bad business conditions in the West, especially in Chicago, took pleasure in displaying two contracts, one for 25,000 lines and the other for 75,000 lines, which he had just closed for the Washington (D. C.) Herald.

SEESTED GOES IT ALONE.

Special Agent Quits Kansas City Star to Embark in Business for Himself.

Charles Seested, who has represented the Kansas City Star in the advertising field for twenty-eight years, and the most of that period, in the Eastern territory, has severed his connection with the Star to embark in business for himself in New York City, which has been his headquarters for a long time. He leaves the Star, of which his brother, August, is business manager, with the best wishes of Col. William R. Nelson, the owner, and with the highest regard for the paper and its management.

Mr. Seested has opened an office at 41 Park Row, where he will act as a special newspaper representative. He has already secured the representation of the Detroit Free Press and will add several other desirable papers as arrangements are completed.

Mr. Seested is probably as well known in the Eastern field as any of the special agents. He has a wide circle of friends who wish him all kinds of good luck in his new enterprise.

NOTES OF THE ADFIELD.

The Monmouth Advertising Agency is a new firm at Long Branch, N. J. H. P. Bennet is at the head of the new concern, which will make a specialty of resort advertising. A general advertising business will also be conducted.

Albert G. Newbell, former advertising manager for Harris-Emery Company, Des Moines, Ia., has opened offices at 412 Flewing Building of that city, where he will conduct an independent advertising agency.

Clyde L. Bentley and Harvey A. Graf, of North Tonawanda, N. Y., have filed a certificate to do business under the name Bentley Advertising Company.

The Houston (Tex.) Telegraph has appointed Knill-Chamberlain, Inc., Chicago, and Putnam & Randall, New York foreign representatives of that newspaper. Ralph H. Spence is the manager and secretary of the publishing company.

An Orange-Judd Appointment.

Perley E. Ward, who has been active in the subscription department of the Orange-Judd Company for a number of years, has been appointed subscription manager of that concern's five weeklies—The New England Homestead, of Springfield, Mass.; The American Agriculturist, of New York; Southern Farming, at Atlanta, Ga.; the Orange-Judd Farmer, of Chicago, and the Northwest Farmstead of Indianapolis, Ind., which have a combined circulation of 500,000.

In 5 Days

A certain manufacturer, making a high priced article, had repeatedly attempted to break into the Chicago market. In every attempt he was balked by the competition of inferior articles, lower priced. Unable to secure a single Chicago dealer, he was ready to give up.

He finally got in touch with The Chicago Tribune's Advertising Promotion Department and in 5 days, working in conjunction with that department, and with only one salesman on the job, he had secured six of the best dealers in Chicago and had sold over two thousand dollars' worth of goods.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will be glad to show you how your goods may be introduced in Chicago, at reasonable expense and without loss of time, provided you have a product of merit.

In daily city circulation and in volume of advertising printed THE TRIBUNE nearly equals all other Chicago morning papers COMBINED.
