INSTRUCTIONS

FOR USING

THE WESTINGHOUSE CODE.

Use the "code condenser" on page xvi, which enables two successive code words to be transmitted as one.

DASHES.

Where one or more dashes, not in brackets, occur in a sentence they are to be filled by words, which must follow the code word in the order in which the dashes occur.

Example: "Agency on commission of —— per cent., and salary of ——, agent paying all expenses," is coded "Kippebor."

Using this phrase to advise a commission of "five" per cent., and salary of "$2,000," the message is coded Kippebor five pothanger.

BRACKETS.

If two or more words or sentences are in brackets, the tenor of the message will indicate which one is to be used.

DASH AND BRACKETS.

In case a word or words in conjunction with a dash is in brackets, for instance "(—— per cent.)," or "(dated ——)," the whole is without effect unless the blank is filled by a word following the code word.

CONSECUTIVE BRACKETS.

Where a word and a dash, in separate brackets, are together, for instance "(you (——))"; "you" will be meant unless a proper name is inserted after the code word, which will then supplant "you." Similarly any word in brackets can be supplanted by another word inserted immediately after the code word, but in the absence of such inserted word, the word in brackets stands. For instance, "f. o. b. (New York)" may be changed into "f. o. b. London" or elsewhere by inserting the name of another place.

Any word or words in brackets may be used or not, as required by the meaning of the sentence.

PRONOUNS AND PLURALS.

The pronouns "I" and "we" have been generally omitted, but are to be understood where no other subject is expressed; for instance, "Have sent to your address," indicates that the senders of the message "have sent." This arrangement allows the same sentences to be preceded by other subjects, if desired. "We" is sometimes used when both "I" and "we" might have been inserted; similarly "do" and "does," "has" and "have," "he" and "they," are interchangeable. The tenor of the message will indicate whether the singular or plural is intended.

NUMERALS.

The code numbers upon the left of each page will be used for numerals, by prefixing the letter "O" to the corresponding code words. The code words begin with consonants, which prevents any confusion in prefixing an "O."

Example: 3270 is coded Olarzardo; 14686 is coded Opalastro.

WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC DETAIL APPARATUS.

Detail apparatus will be coded by using the word Schifabon, followed by the coded numeral for the style number, the latter being found in the Westinghouse Electric Catalogues.

Example : "Style No 8371, Direct Current Generator panel, type No 7, for 110 or 250 volts, capacity 200 amperes," is coded Schifabon omenura.

Example : "Style No. 5505, Direct current, round pattern Voltmeter, 100 to 300 volts," is coded Schifabon oluftkugel.

ELECTRICAL MACHINERY TABLES.

The full description of any electrical machine can be coded by using in conjunction two of the machinery tables at the end of the book.

To describe an A. C. machine, use tables on pages 435 to 444 for the voltage, alternations, cycles and phase ; and one of the tables of generators, motors, transformers or rotaries for the remaining particulars.

Example.

Staubweg "A. C. Generator, rotating armature, engine type, 2000 K. W."
Spigelian. "5,000 volts, 7,200 alternations, two phase."
Okalbslab "Full load speed 100 r. p. m."

To describe a D. C. machine, use tables on pages 454 to 461 for the voltage and speed ; and one of the tables of generators or motors for the remaining particulars.

Example.

Taufaki "D. C. Generator, 1400 K. W., compound wound, with bearings direct coupled."
Sujetos "550 volts, speed 210 r. p. m."

CODING MESSAGES.

Subjects are cross-indexed, the references being in brackets following the headings. In coding a message, reference should be made to cross-indexed subjects until the required phrase is found, as synonymous phrases have been eliminated to lessen the size of the book.

OTHER CODES.

When another code is used in conjunction with the Westinghouse code, the message should begin with the code word provided under "Code" to indicate which one is used, for example :

Losgedamp . . . "Use Lieber's Code coupled with the Westinghouse Code."

LIEBER'S CODE.

Lieber's code and appendix, which uses code words beginning with the letters A to E only, may be used in conjunction with the Westinghouse code without fear of misconstruction, for the latter uses only words beginning with the letters K to W.

ADDITIONS TO THIS CODE.

Phrases in frequent use, not found in this code, should be sent to The Westinghouse Companies' Publishing Department. From time to time, printed slips of additional phrases will be sent to the holders of the code books for attaching to the margins of the pages. Blank pages are provided at the end of the book for further tables of apparatus which will be issued as required.

CODE CONDENSER.

The Code Condenser can be applied to any two coded phrases which immediately follow each other in a message.

The Code Condenser is intended to be used for economizing in cable messages where the rate per word is high, and to reduce the cost of long messages, but it is not intended for general use in domestic and low rate telegrams.

TO USE THE CONDENSER

Take the code number which precedes each of the two code phrases to be condensed, and write these numbers continuously as ten numerals. Divide this combination into groups of two figures each, and from the condenser table write the corresponding letters for each group, forming a word of ten letters, which can be cabled as one word, for example :

21665 pugniamo .Hold offer open until to-morrow if possible
27010 riurtasse . .Will telegraph reply

the two phrases can be cabled as one word, thus :

2166527010 21 66 52 70 10 egvocoudan
 eg vo co ud an

FORMATION OF CONDENSER WORDS.

The order of the groups, each of two letters, must be strictly maintained, but the two letters of each group, a vowel and a consonant, may be transposed if necessary for the euphony of the transmitted word, for example :

0111344298 01 11 34 42 98 acapibilty

may be written capability.

Condenser words for transmission should be arranged to commence with a vowel (excepting "O," which designates a numeral), or with a consonant preceding "K" in the alphabet. This will avoid any confusion with the Westinghouse code words, which commence with consonants from "K" to "W," and will enable the receiver of the message to more readily identify Condenser words.

TO IDENTIFY CONDENSER WORDS.

The receiver of a message will identify Condenser words, as they contain ten letters; whereas the code words (except those having the prefixed letter "O" for numerals) do not exceed nine letters.

TO TRANSLATE CONDENSER WORDS.

A Condenser word in a message is translated by dividing it into five groups of two letters each, taken in consecutive order. From the Condenser table write the corresponding numerals for each group, which gives a combination of ten continuous figures. The first five numerals are the code number of the first phrase, and the last five numerals the code number of the second phrase, for example :

epirrabado ep ir ra ba do 2846120053
 28 46 12 00 53

28461 . .Will settle with deduction of 20053 . .$.1,300

SUBSTITUTES.

The substitutes (letters) upon the right of the Condenser Table may be used when they afford a more euphonious construction of the transmitted word, thus :

2312480025 jeratibale

may be written Charitable.
