Where Most Business Goes Is A Good Place to Go For More Business

Of interest and advantage to all who do business in the Chicago field is the newspaper advertising record for the first ten months of 1924.

Indicative of general confidence in the continuance of good business is the fact that The Daily News—"the mirror of Chicago industry"—carried a greater volume of display advertising by 254,580 lines in the first ten months of 1924 than in the corresponding period of 1923. Among the daily newspapers of Chicago the nearest competitor of The Daily News in volume of display advertising printed—a morning newspaper—gained in this period 154,094 lines.

	1923	1924	Comparison
The Chicago Daily News -	12,206,992	12,461,572	254,580 gain
The next highest score - -	9,416,924	9,571,018	154,094 "

From which it is evident that when experienced and successful advertisers in the Chicago field "go after business in earnest," they concentrate their efforts largely in the medium they know to be most effective for the sale of any legitimate merchandise—

NEW ENGLAND

Near the Top in Banking Facilities

A territory with money to save and money to invest, is an ideal merchandising territory, since there is always plenty of money to spend, as well. Advertising in such a territory will bring results that can be definitely valued on a dollar and cent basis.

New England is an Ideal Merchandising Territory

New England has 40% of the country's savings, as well as 11% of the total bank deposits in national and state banks and trust companies. Yet this territory has only 7½% of America's population. 85% of New England's population is urban, living in cities where there is greater desire and greater need to spend money and where the money to spend is within easy reach of all.

National Advertisers and Manufacturers owe it to their salesmen and themselves to use advertising, in these listed dailies, over 2,000,000 copies of which circulate over the New England territory daily. They are sure result getters.

ANOTHER STEP FORWARD

THE business of R. Hoe & Co. was founded more than a Century ago and ever since has been the principal world factor in the manufacture of newspaper presses and other printing machinery. The majority of large newspapers and magazines throughout the world are printed on Hoe Presses and of the leading publications in the English language more come from Hoe Machines than from all other makes combined. During the last few years the demand for Hoe Machinery and particularly for Hoe Superspeed Newspaper Presses equipped with the Hoe Patented Automatic Pump System of Ink Distribution (orders in process at the present time aggregating approximately twelve million dollars in value) has exceeded manufacturing facilities, in spite of very large additions to and improvements in both the American and British plants of the Company and the recent acquisition of the extensive plant of the Hall Printing Press Company at Dunellen, N. J., which is now devoted almost exclusively to the manufacture of large newspaper presses. This demand has necessitated largely devoting to the manufacture of newspaper and magazine presses facilities formerly used in the production of other important types of printing machinery which the Company has done much to develop.

From these reasons the heirs of the late Robert Hoe, who have owned the business since the death of the latter in 1909, felt for some time that the works should be largely expanded, in order to better take care of the requirements of customers. With this in mind the present Company, R. Hoe & Co., Inc., was formed, the securities of which, including its Class A Stock and First Mortgage Gold Bonds, are now listed on the New York Stock Exchange and will provide ample capital for the required expansion of the Company's facilities, and enable it not only to maintain the position of supremacy so long occupied by Hoe machinery but to give its customers the benefit of the best engineering, designing and manufacturing skill available, in every branch of its work, thus insuring even better service in the future than in the past.

The Executive Management, which, during the last five years, has greatly developed the business, will continue in charge and maintain the long established policy of building only the best and most efficient machinery.

A 28 mile stack of Hot Cakes for Breakfast

Can you visualize a stack of hot-cakes 150,000 feet high? That's what it would take to supply a breakfast of them to Mr. Bulletin Reader and Family.

Just an index to a consuming power that is matched by buying power—and that great market is tied to its great paper by the bonds of trust and respect, with no part of it achieved through the doubtful lure of premiums, prize contests, and such.

There is indeed no substitute for circulation—and the circulation of The Bulletin has grown to be one of the largest in America as a result of sound journalism devoid of pyrotechnics.

Neither has our space selling department any panacea to offer the advertiser—but it is notable that those National Advertisers who most cannily measure results are the ones who concentrate their Philadelphia advertising in the paper nearly every Philadelphia family reads.

Kansas Publishers Cooperate To Sell Their Market To Advertisers

Send Delegation to New York to Tell Merits of Their State Rather than Prestige of Individual Newspapers—Tender Luncheon to 125 Agency Representatives at Waldorf—George Marble, N. E. A. President, Presides.

KANSAS EDITORS AS HOSTS TO ADVERTISING PATRONS, PHOTOGRAPHER FOR EDITOR & PUBLISHER

KANSAS publishers came to New York, Friday, Dec. 5, to tell advertising men about Kansas prosperity.

The scene was the Waldorf-Astoria, where the Kansas Daily Newspaper Advertising Association gave a luncheon and food for thought to 125 men and women representing New York's leading advertising agencies.

Bitter newspaper lineage warfare was forgotten.

These publishers were not preaching the merits of their own respective dailies. They talked the power of newspaper advertising in selling goods to the Kansas market.

They presented a unique merchandising plan, by which 24 newspaper in a state co-operated to serve the national advertiser.

For the first time on record, publishers buried the hatchet long used against agency men, and themselves became friendly enemies in the common cause of moving merchandise by newspaper advertising,—all because this year it is said Kansas have $425,000,000 to spend on advertised products.

Telling of the Kansas market was a quartet of brilliant publisher-speakers: Senator Arthur Capper, publisher, Topeka Capital; Henry J. Allen, publisher, Wichita Beacon; Marcellus M. Murdock, publisher, Wichita Eagle; and W. A. Bailey, general manager, Kansas City Kansan. George W. Marble, publisher of the Fort Scott Tribune-Monitor, and president of the National Editorial Association, presided.

Mr. Murdock, perhaps, summed up the Kansas prosperity plea best, when he said:

"An abundant harvest awaits advertisers in the Kansas field. We expect you to furnish the seed. We'll just take the chicken feed. Kansas is a mine crammed with gold, that awaits your seeking."

Mr. Bailey opened the speeches in school-teacher style, asking those present to open the book "Facts About Kansas" placed at each seat. After explaining the organization of the association, which includes 24 daily-Kansas newspapers in its membership he devoted the remainder of his address to pointing out the highlights of the book.

"Our merchandising plan is built upon the strongest newspapers of Kansas. But we don't ask you to take advertising in the whole 24. What we have done, was to band together to uncover the facts of the Kansas field, realizing that we could do better work as a group than as individuals."

Members of the association, he said, were carefully chosen to cover completely and thoroughly the Kansas market at minimum cost.

"The member newspapers are located in 19 jobbing centers and these 19 jobbing centers are so located as to serve most economically the needs of the entire state," he explained.

Mr. Murdock expanded on the description of the association, calling it a "fine piece of selling machinery with a good motor attached."

"We are," he put it, "the most dead earnest, the liveliest thing that has come out of Kansas since Carrie Nation, homebrew, or Will Rogers."

The Kansas Daily Newspaper Advertising Association, he said, was equipped to furnish advertisers and agents all usable information on the Kansas market.

"What our organization has done is to link up the local distributors with national advertising campaigns. We have obtained the signatures of the retailers and wholesalers of Kansas, pledging the co-operation of their stores with the newspapers in furthering the advertising of manufacturers in the Kansas daily papers.

"When a national campaign is in progress in the Kansas newspapers, these distributors, who are anxious to increase their sales, tie up their local advertising with the national drive."

Quoting from President Coolidge's recent message to Congress to the effect the United States was entering the most remarkable era of prosperity this country has ever known, Senator Capper, the next speaker explained just what this meant when applied to Kansas.

"Kansas has the second largest wheat crop in the history of the state," he said. "In consequence, the spirit among the farmers is better than in years. The farmers were losing money in 1921. Now the situation has changed remarkably."

"Of course, Kansas is not back to normal yet. But we have turned the corner. And I am certain the prosperity news from Kansas will grade up a little higher than from almost anywhere else in this country."

Senator Capper closed his address by generalizing on Kansas newspapers and newspaper advertising.

"Of the more than 600 newspapers in Kansas, not one can be called 'yellow,'" he said. "Advertisements in these newspapers, or in any newspapers in the country, will come nearer to delivering profit to the investor than any other form of advertising."

In the last speech of the luncheon, Mr. Allen offered a close-up of Kansas people. They are, he declared, buying the same sort of things as New Yorkers.

"Surely there is now hope for the League of Nations, when you advertising agents are permitted to see such enemies as Mr. Murdock and myself, co-operating as we are in this advertising association," former Governor Allen declared in opening his address.

"Even Senator Capper," he humorously claimed, "I am sure, has in his wardrobe in Washington 10 pairs of pants and a separate pair of suspenders for every pair.

"Our girls too, are dressed like Broadway girls.

"Of course Kansas was founded to express the factor of freedom. We have a certain moral poise we have never been able to forget.

"Briefly, we are what Massachusetts would have been, if she had had our chance.

"'Bleeding Kansas' is ancient history. It has gone the way of the grasshopper plagues, which are no more.

"True we have gained tremendous attention because of the unusual way we have done certain things. But we have never been radical according to color.

"There is no taint of red in our newspapers."

The "Uniform Merchandising Service" of the association follows:

"1. On request, you will receive first-hand information of conditions in the vicinity of each of the members of this association. They will be glad to work with you in the preparation of a sales campaign to suit the needs of their community. Who is better acquainted with local conditions and local peculiarities than the local newspaper?"

"2. To help you get distribution through the proper and most desirable jobbers and retailers, these Kansas newspapers will be glad to introduce your salesmen to the distributors in their vicinity. They will do their utmost to make your salesmen's efforts most effective.

"3. Announcement will be made to all jobbers and retailers in the vicinity of each Kansas newspaper in this association, calling attention to your advertising campaign. This announcement will tell dealers of the reliability of your company. They will explain the purpose of your advertising and they will urge all dealers to co-operate with you in taking advantage of your efforts to help them realize quicker turnover and greater profit on your merchandise. All you need furnish is the postage.

"4. Each of your salesmen or detail men working the territory during your campaign will be furnished with a letter for his portfolio. This letter will verify your advertising contract and will ask dealers and jobbers to extend you their heartiest co-operation.

"5. Your salesmen will also be furnished with standard route information to help them cover their territories quickly and economically.

"6. On request, you will be furnished with an accurate list of all jobbers and dealers in the vicinity of each newspaper, so that you may follow up the personal calls of your salesmen with letters and other sales literature.

"7. Dealers will be urged to display your products conspicuously on their counters and in their windows at the time your advertising is appearing. They will also be solicited to tie up with your advertising by using your trade name and illustration of your product in their own advertising.

"8. These newspapers will do their utmost to secure window displays for you in the most advantageous locations.

"And in addition to this service the members of the Kansas Daily Newspaper Advertising Association have combined to give you uniform co-operation all over the state because they know what it means to you in avoiding confusion and in expediting the work of your salesmen.

"Is there another medium or group of mediums that offer you a service so complete—a service that will go so far in helping you get the most out of your advertising dollar?"

"This service, however, with the exception of surveys and report on conditions in each locality, is limited to advertisers using 5,000 lines or more. The members of this association, however, are always pleased to go to any reasonable extent in securing for any prospective advertiser or manufacturer any information needed regardless of the size of contract involved."

The book "Kansas Facts" distributed at the luncheon is issued from the association's executive offices at Hutchinson, Kan. It contains many illustrations, with text descriptive of the cities where the 24 member newspapers are published and Kansas industries, with statistics on automobile owners, public utilities and lists of wholesalers and jobbers.

The member newspapers, representing a total circulation of 310,762, are: Arkansas City Traveler, Atchison Globe, Coffeyville Journal, Dodge City

Globe, El Dorado Times, Emporia Gazette, Fort Scott Tribune, Great Bend Tribune, Hutchinson News-Herald, Iola Register, Junction City Union, Kansas City Kansan, Lawrence Journal World, Ottawa Herald, Parsons Sun, Pittsburg Headlight, Pittsburg Sun, Salina Journal, Salina Union, Topeka State Journal, Topeka Capital, Wichita Beacon, Wichita Eagle, Leavenworth Times.

Confirmation of the report of purchase of the Buffalo Commercial by a new corporation known as the Coley Publishing Company has been obtained from Richard Coley, president of the new firm. Mr. Coley announced the Commercial would be taken over Dec. 15, and its name changed to the Buffalo Evening Post.

A. H. Longbotham, director of publicity of the Hotels Statler Company, Inc., will be secretary of the Post. He formerly was associated with the Buffalo Express and Rochester newspapers. Mr. Coley, formerly a reporter for the Buffalo Evening News, will be publisher.

Mr. Longbotham told Editor & Publisher the Post will stress its financial, industrial and commercial departments and will have many local features illustrated.

Associated with these two men are C. W. Webster of the Curtiss Aeroplane Export Corporation and Walter A. Schweizer of the Hotel Statler Company offices. The new firm is incorporated for $800,000 and has paid to Mr. Finnegan a stipulated portion of the purchase price, Mr. Longbotham said.

While the price was not disclosed it was reported to be "in excess of $200,000."

Passing of the Commercial from the hands of Mr. Finnegan will witness the signing of a union contract and an abandonment of the open shop policy. Soon after Mr. Finnegan took control of the newspaper about six years ago he launched into a vigorous open shop policy.

E. J. McCone, general manager of the Commercial, made a tour of the country declaring the typographical union dominated newspapers to such an extent they could not publish an editorial attacking the principle of the closed shop. Mr. McCone offered $10,000 for an example of such an editorial printed prior to his declaration.

The Commercial is more than 100 years old. For several decades it was in the possession of the Warren family of Buffalo, Mr. Finnegan purchasing it from William Warren. It has been selling for one cent, other Buffalo newspapers selling for two cents, which will be the price of the Evening Post.

The Associated Press membership and equipment of the newspaper are included in the purchase price but not the building which is owned by Mr. Finnegan.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

By Henry Edward Warner

A PRESSMAN'S LOVE SONG

My love is fair—fair is my love
Above all else, and she Shall hear me as I twang my lute—
(Or is the thing you twang a flute?)
My love, she shall love me!

My love, she weighs a hundred tons
And stands with all her feet
(I must explain, she is indeed
Plumb full of feet, a centipede!)
Fast buried in concrete!

My love is dark, with here and there
A line of silvery sheen.
(I don't know where I got that word,
But "sheen!" . . . it listens like a bird;
No odds what it may mean!)

I feed her paper by the roll,
She eats it by the ton!
She has no indigestion—no!
That is because she likes it so
That eating paper's fun!

And when she's eaten all there is
To eat, I stop her then
And oil her up and rub her bright,
And keep her joints and bearings tight
Till she must run again.

I love my love, and she loves me! . . .
And I shall just keep on Starting her off and stopping her
Indefinitely, as it were,
Till all my paper's gone!

O love, my love! . . . My speeding sweet!
Hark to this song of mine!
I love these hundred tons of you,
You register so fair and true—
Long may you roar and shine!

Poor Richards Buy New Club House

The Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia has purchased the Leidy Mansion, 1319 Locust street, for $175,000. Howard C. Story, chairman of the expansion and rebuilding committee, announced the new home would be completely remodeled and ready for occupancy by March 1. The sum of $45,000 has been set aside for remodeling expenses. The club has decided to increase its membership from 400 to 750. J. A. Wood, is club president.

NEW TRIAL ORDERED

Appellate Court Reverses Pew Verdict Against I. N. S. on Legal Point

The Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court, sitting in Brooklyn, last week ordered a new trial of the suit of Marlen E. Pew for $65,000 against the International News Service, alleging breach of an employment contract. In the order, in which Justices Kelley, Jaycox, and Young concurred, Justice Kelby dissenting, the court ruled:

"Judgment and verdict reversed on the law and a new trial granted, with costs to abide the event. We think the trial justice was in error in ruling as a matter of law that the plaintiff was discharged from his employment. In our opinion this question was for the determination of the jury upon the letter of Jan. 5, 1923, and the surrounding circumstances disclosed upon the trial."

Mr. Pew was awarded a verdict of $49,500 in November, 1923.

Motion was made this week for a new trial in the Supreme Court at Long Island City, where the original hearings were held, and it is probable the action will be heard next week.

150 PER CENT RISE IN 2ND CLASS RATES SEEN

All Publishing Interests "Lining Up for a Fight" As New Proposes to Place Added Burden on Newspapers and Magazines in Bill Now Being Drafted—Claim Postal Report "Filled With Absurdities"

By J. BART CAMPBELL

(By Telegraph, to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11.—Second class postal rates would be increased between 100 and 150 per cent in the first and second zones, and in the other zones proportionately, to help meet the contemplated $68,000,000 wage boost of postal employes, by a bill being drafted Thursday at the Post Office Department at the request of U. S. Senator Thomas Sterling, Chairman of the Senate Post Office and Post Roads Committee.

One spokesman for the American Newspaper Publishers Association is authority for the statement the proposed legislation would involve an increase of "more than 75 per cent" in second class rates.

The most direct estimate that could be obtained, however, placed the threatened increase at "about 100 per cent."

Postmaster General Harry S. New was understood to have singled out second class rates for such a purpose on the basis of the Post Office Department's report on the ascertainment of mail costs which staggered newspaper and magazine publishers by its glaring exaggerations and inconsistencies when it was sent to the Senate last week.

It was reported authoritatively Mr. New figured the handling of second class mail as shown by the report to represent a deficit of about 250 per cent. Conceding if an attempt were made to increase second class rates to meet completely such an alleged deficit many newspapers and magazines would not only be driven out of the mails, but some of them would face actual bankruptcy. Mr. New is said to have decided on the supposed 250 per cent being cut in about half to arrange for an approximate increase which, in his judgment, would help overcome partly the reported deficit and add considerably to the pay of postal employes at the expense of newspaper and magazine publishers.

Mr. New's latest proposal in particular, and the report on the ascertainment of mail costs in general, have apparently created a strong new alignment of the newspaper and magazine publishing interests which promises a solidarity in their front lines not existing before the whole situation was described by EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week.

The Postmaster General received Wednesday at the Post Office Department leading representatives of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and kindred organizations who included: A. L. Miller, Battle Creek (Mich.) Enquirer-News, representing the Inland Daily Press Association; Charles F. Jenkins, Farm Journal, Philadelphia, representing the Agricultural Publishers Association; V. S. Hayden, executive secretary of the latter; Cranston Williams, of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association; Howard Davis, New York Herald Tribune; Urey Woodson, Owensboro (Ky.) Messenger; Jerome D. Barnum, Syracuse (N. Y.) Post-Standard.

The entire situation was threshed out thoroughly with Mr. New, who is understood to have admitted the bill he was having drafted to provide the long-aggitated wage increase for postal employes was certain to meet with stiff opposition, but who insisted newspaper publishers, in particular, had invited just such a situation by advocating the proposed wage boost in their news and editorial columns before revenue for the purpose was in sight.

After their conference with the Postmaster General, the representatives of the newspaper publishing interests foregathered in the office of Elisha Hanson, Washington spokesman for the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, for a protracted meeting. On Thursday, Mr.

Hanson announced the interests he represented were "lining up for a fight," and made it plain Mr. New had been so informed.

Mr. Hanson explained further that representatives of his interests had completed a preliminary examination of some of the so-called schedules accompanying the report on the ascertainment of mail costs and had discovered a "number of absurdities which convinced them the report was not a true representation of actual conditions."

Mr. Hanson, who as secretary to U. S. Senator Medill McCormick, of Illinois, became versed thoroughly in Post Office appropriations and similar matters, declared the representatives of the newspaper publishing interests were agreed second class rates had already been stretched to a point "beyond saturation" and the Post Office Department's report evidently "shed no real or accurate light upon postal conditions."

Mr. Hanson also stated the examination of the report was still under way and in a few days the interests he spoke for would probably make a more extended explanation of their position. He indicated clearly, however, enough had been learned from the report already to justify the opinion the report was by no means what the Post Office Department had reported it to be.

As foreshadowed previously by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, the proposed postal wage increase legislation has become inextricably interwoven with the mail costs report, and the two will unquestionably become the center of one of the hottest legislative battles Congress has witnessed in years.

It was further pointed out while the new postal wage increase measure Mr.

New is having drafted will probably embrace all classes of mail, including parcel post, second class rates will be by far hardest hit if such legislation is to be enacted.

Representatives of the American Publishers Conference have already gone on record as being opposed to the mail costs report as largely "pure bunk" and with the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and kindred organizations now in the front line trenches, some hot shot is sure to be poured into both the proposed Sterling-New bill and the mail costs report upon which it is being based, once the entire subject is gone into thoroughly before the Senate Post Offices and Post Roads Committee, to which it will undoubtedly be referred.

A peculiar phase of the situation is that President Coolidge has not yet indicated approval of either the report or the proposed bill that is expected to emerge from it. Apparently the whole matter is to be threshed out between Congress and the Post Office Department in compliance with White House intimations the President does not desire to interfere in what may be regarded now as a Congressional situation.

It is known the President is desirous of having a postal pay increase bill worked out on a "scientific basis," so there will be no necessity for Congress to override his veto of the still pending Edge bill.

It was learned in the judgment of Administration leaders of the Senate and House the President will probably have his wish, although the danger point has not by any means yet been passed.

In the meantime the obvious effort of certain members of the Senate and House to justify the proposed legislation, and the palpable move of the Post Office Department to bolster up its mail costs report, at the expense of the newspaper and magazine interests principally, can no longer be camouflaged.

Postal Crisis Demands Publishers Act Now— S. E. Thomason, A. N. P. A. Chief

ENACTMENT of the legislative program will drive newspaper country circulation out of the mails, S. E. Thomason, president of the A. N. P. A., warned his colleagues in a statement given to EDITOR & PUBLISHER before his return to Chicago Thursday. Immediate action by publishers to change the intentions of Congress is imperative, Mr. Thomason indicated in his message, which follows:

The Postal Committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, together with officers and directors of the association and representatives of the Southern and Inland Daily Press Associations met with Postmaster General New in Washington, December 10. In a frank statement the Postmaster General informed them of the fact that American newspapers are threatened with a legislative program at the present short session of Congress which if carried through will prove to be one of the most serious blows ever dealt by Congress to the distribution of newspapers outside of the metropolitan centers.

The cost finding report which the Joint Congressional Committee and the Post Office Department have been working on for three years was filed with Congress last week. According to this report, 75 per cent of the annual loss of the Post Office Department is attributable to second class mails.

The publishers Wednesday pointed out that the most casual study of the report disclosed serious errors in the allocation of expenses against second class mails and they took direct issue with the conclusions reached, but Mr. New replied that the report, in the opinion of the Post Office Department was correct, and that it would necessarily be made the basis for increased mail rates in all classes of mail on the assumption that the postal salary increases might be carried over the President's veto by the present Congress. Mr. New Outlined to the A. N. P. A. Committee that increases of almost 100 per cent in the first four zones would be necessary to provide the revenues for higher wages.

It appears certain that a bill will shortly be introduced in Congress for increased zone rates along the lines of the Postmaster General's recommendations.

These increases if made law will be ruinous to the country circulations of all newspapers now distributed by mail. If these rates become effective, newspapers are confronted with the practical necessity of a complete revision of delivery methods in the country. It means a practical withdrawal of newspapers from the mails having in mind that newspapers have almost no circulation outside the fourth zone and that publishers using the mails outside of the fourth zone will have to bear practically no increased rates.

The situation appears to be intolerable. The A. N. P. A. is analyzing the cost finding report and its fallacies will be made apparent to Congress, but unless daily and weekly newspapers, large and small, are immediately made alive to the dangers of the present situation we are all faced with the necessity of devising a new method of distribution to country readers. We will not be able to afford the mails.

MICHIGAN ANTI-GAMBLING LAW CALLED UNCONSTITUTIONAL BY COURT

Statute Prohibiting Printing of Betting Odds and Sale of Out-of-State Papers Carrying Them Killed on Technical Grounds

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 10.—The Voorhies-Bahorski Anti-Gambling Law, passed at the 1923 session of the Michigan legislature, which, among its stipulations, prohibited the publication of betting odds and even barred from sale in Michigan newspapers issued outside of the state carrying betting information of any sort, was declared unconstitutional and void in a decision handed down today by the State Supreme Court.

The court, in passing judgment on the measure, said to be the most drastic ever put into force in the United States, did not go into the merits of the law or take up the issue of "freedom of the press," but threw it into the discard purely on the technical point that it had not been according to the Journal, read three times on the floor of the lower house before its passage by the legislature.

The Voorhies-Bahorski Act was named after the bill drawn up by Paul Voorhies, then prosecutor of Wayne County, in which Detroit is situated, and Senator Joseph Bahorski, but it was sponsored from its inception by the Detroit News which solicited support for it in all parts of the state, but particularly in Detroit where it enlisted many women's clubs and civic organizations in the fight. The Detroit Times, which had been recently purchased by William Randolph Hearst and made racing forms on its sporting pages one of its big features, strongly opposed the measure, as did the Free Press, although in a less pronounced fashion.

The opening clause in the law, on which the recent fight against it was to be based had the Supreme Court taken up arguments on its merits, is so inclusive in its terms that it is declared that, taken most literally, it would technically bar the writing of any form of insurance other than the life variety, as it stipulated that it would be illegal to negotiate any transaction whereby money changed hands contingent upon an "event the outcome of which is not definitely known."

Among the other features of the law most protested by newspapers, in addition to the ban on publishing racing odds, choices, or forms, was the prohibition even of quoting odds after the sporting event in question had occurred. It was argued by its opponents that this stipulation was entirely unnecessary and only worked an additional hardship on newspapers which tried to give their readers "all the news."

Directly after the new law, which entirely supplanted the old anti-gambling act in Michigan, went into effect, most out-of-state newspapers tried to get around its provisions by blue penciling betting information. Sporadic raids were conducted on news stands in Detroit when papers were seized by the authorities because they were said to violate the new law, but when the police found that strict enforcement of the act's provision threatened to crowd out performance of any other duties they relaxed their vigilance somewhat and no cases against newspapers were ever fought out in the courts as far as could be learned here today. Other provisions of the act, equally stringent however, piled up so many cases on Detroit dockets that it is said it would have taken years to dispose of them.

It was reported at the Capitol today that the Detroit News will again sponsor an anti-gambling bill incorporating all of the salient features of the act just declared invalid including the feature relating to the publication of betting odds. If it is passed and the procedure is regular it is probable that the Supreme Court will again be called to rule on the constitutionality of the law.

Racing Evil Attacked

Dec. 9, 1924.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—I was profoundly interested in the editorial in your issue of Dec. 6, headed "Does It Pay?" which related to horse racing news.

In this editorial you have touched one of the outstanding evils in American journalism. Racing on the running tracks is no longer, at least rarely, a sport in the old sense of the word.

On the average race track today, so far as the gentleman sportsman is concerned, tin jumping jacks could just as well be substituted for the animals which are driven from one point to another merely to make gambling easy, not only in the immediate vicinity of the race track, but in every city in America where the infamous handbook is permitted to ply its nefarious business.

Some years ago an effort was made to secure federal legislation designed to destroy the business of the handbook trusts. This would have been successful had it not been for the opposition of leading newspapers who believed at the time that racing news really was catering to the spirit of true sportmanship. In my judgment, circulation gained by these so-called racing extras is as worthless to the advertiser as would be a sign painted on the top of a barn.

I enclose to you a pamphlet which was issued in 1922 by the Detroit News during the fight which that newspaper made against race track graft, which the News declared cost the people of Michigan millions of dollars a year with scarcely a running race track in the entire state. During the winter season, when racing on all of the leading tracks in America has ceased, little meetings are conducted here and there in Mexico and other places merely to furnish odds to handbook gamblers thousands of miles away. To this outrageous performance American newspapers daily contribute many thousands of dollars of free publicity in the form of highly expensive "racing extras."

I sincerely trust that you will use your influence to awaken the conscience of the newspaper men of America on this subject.

The Louisiana lottery, in its palmy days, was saintly compared with the hidden operations of the handbook and racing trusts in this country today.

Very truly yours,
H. GIOVANNOLI, Editor,
Editor, Lexington (Ky.) Leader.

COAST DAILY SELLING CROSS WORD AD-GRAMS

Black Squares in the Popular Brain Teasers Put to Work in New Way by San Francisco Bulletin

The cross word puzzle has become more than a mental exercise—it has entered the field as a strong advertising medium through an innovation launched by members of the business and editorial staffs of the San Francisco Bulletin—the Cross Word Ad-gram.

The black squares in the puzzles were just so much wasted space, it was decided, and immediately the idea of selling them to advertisers was evolved.

The Bulletin's first Cross Word Ad-gram appeared full page size recently, with the "stop" spaces filled with advertisements. Prizes amounting to $75 were awarded to the first eight persons submitting correct solutions.

The idea had such appeal to advertisers that only a few days had been required to sell the Ad-Grams on contracts calling for one puzzle a week for thirteen weeks.

The large department stores in San Francisco are now using the Ad-gram, by permission, in connection with their Bulletin advertisements, and are giving merchandise orders for a certain number of correct answers. In preparing the cross word puzzles for the stores, words are taken from the advertisements appearing in the "stop" spaces and worked into the designs.

Copyrights and patents on the idea have been applied for.

VANDERBILT NAMING STAFF

La Verne Collier Named M. E. of Proposed Miami Tabloid

Various staff appointments for the projected tabloid newspaper in Miami were announced this week by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., who last week made public his intention to enter the Florida field.

In a telegram, answering inquiries of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Mr. Vanderbilt stated he had not yet determined the name, price, date of publication, or whether the new newspaper would be a morning or evening daily.

Appointments so far announced are: La Verne R. Collier, now picture editor of Vanderbilt's Los Angeles Daily News, to be managing editor; Gus Thornrose, chief photographer; and Henry Villard, nephew of Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of The Nation, Palm Beach correspondent.

New Issues Fraud Order

Postmaster General New has issued a fraud order against John A. MacPherson and John Angus MacPherson, of Monterey, Mexico, in connection with the attempted sale of mine stock through the mails.

Would Ban Firearm Advertising

Herbert A. Wilson, Boston Police Commissioner, Dec. 4, recommended a law to the state legislature prohibiting advertising of firearms in newspapers and magazines.

Daily Adds Picture Section

SUPREME COURT TO ACT ON TAX CASE BY MAR. 1

Stone Seeks Early Decision for Kansas City Journal-Post—N. Y. Herald Tribune Found Not Guilty and Re-indicted—Baltimore Post Case in Judge's Hands

HOPE was expressed this week by Attorney General Stone that there would be a Supreme Court decision on publicity sections of the Income Tax law before March 1, marking the most outstanding development of the last seven days, in the fight for press freedom during which the New York Herald Tribune was found not guilty of illegal income tax publication, and arguments were heard in the trial of the Baltimore Post, Scripps-Howard newspaper. This case is now in the hands of Judge Morris A. Soper who is expected to give his decision within a few days.

Basis for the Attorney General's hopes lies in the fact that government briefs have been prepared for Supreme Court action, based upon the case of the Kansas City Post, recently decided on legal points in the newspaper's favor.

Following its victory for newspapers, the New York Tribune, Inc., publisher of the Herald Tribune, was immediately re-indicted, when it was discovered the case was not appealable to the United States Supreme Court as would have been the case had the New York federal district court quashed the indictment.

The second indictment was quashed Dec. 11, allowing the Government to appeal.

The Baltimore Post case was argued Tuesday for the Post by Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War and counsel for the Scripps-Howard newspapers and by W. Calvin Chestnut, a Baltimore attorney. Amos W. W. Woodcock, U. S. District Attorney, represented the Government.

Mr. Baker based his defense on the grounds:

That publication of the name, address and tax payment is not publication of the "return" under the meaning of that statute.

That if it were, then the statute itself should be held unconstitutional in that it violates the first amendment to the constitution which guarantees freedom of speech, and of the press.

"It is my honest opinion," said Mr. Baker, "that, under a fair interpretation of the law, the Post has violated no law."

"The constitutional point, as it were, is a backstop, so that if your construction of the statute should disagree with ours then it would violate the free press amendment."

"General publicity was contemplated by Congress when it passed the 1924 Income Tax Law, and by general publicity, it was not meant to limit it to persons who could go to the Internal Revenue Collector's Office and view the returns personally."

"Every congressman knows that if he votes for anything which suppresses free speech or publication he may as well not go home."

"The constitution specifically prohibits Congress from interfering with our right to worship according to the dictates of our consciences, or from placing any halter upon our rights to express our honest opinions, or upon the right to broadcast these opinions within reasonable limits in the public press."

"What, after all, is the freedom of the press? It is the right to print anything which people are free to say. This fanciful theory which the government is urging—that congress authorized disclosure of income tax facts to individuals, while preventing their use in the press—is fatal to the government's own contention."

"Freedom of speech and freedom of the press are inseparable. Under the constitution, anything the people are free to do or say, the press is free to print."

The decision of Judge Reeves, of Kansas City, in favor of the Journal-Post of that city in a similar case was cited to support the position of the Baltimore Post.

Mr. Woodcock said: "The Revenue Act of 1924 makes it unlawful for any person to publish in any manner not provided by law any income tax return or part thereof. What was published is the name of an income tax payer and the amount he paid. I think there can be no doubt that this is a part of the payer's income tax return, although Judge Reeves in Kansas City seems to hold to the contrary."

The District Attorney declared that the law merely directs commissioners to "make available for public inspection in the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue certain lists prepared from the returns."

"This cannot be expanded into a provision for printing and publishing," he said. The indictment against the Baltimore Post was brought for publishing the amounts of income tax paid by a number of Baltimoreans, including Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and Leon C. Coblens, a department store proprietor.

The actual taking of testimony and argument in the Herald Tribune's first trial lasted less than three hours.

Upon the conclusion of the case Judge Knox made the following ruling:

"The argument presented is based on the law involved in the indictment, against the Herald Tribune, and is of a character that would permit of a lengthy dissertation on the construction of these statutes and, perhaps, in the event of such a construction, the constitutional power of Congress to enact the statutes.

I do not see that it is necessary for me to do that, for whatever I do will in all probability be subject to review before the Appellate Court. And so I will instruct you, by reason of the construction which I place on the statutes under which this indictment was drawn, that there can be in this case no verdict of guilty against the defendant. I accordingly instruct you to return a verdict of not guilty."

The jury followed the direction of Judge Knox without leaving the box.

Henry A. Wise of counsel for the Herald Tribune, held that publication of income tax information was not banned because of Section 1018 of the revenue law, which included Section 3157 of the Revised Statutes, with the further provision that publication shall not be made in a manner "not provided by law." And the law, permitting publication, he said, was Section 257-B. If the law could be construed as the Government counsel suggested, Mr. Wise argued, than the Commissioner of Internal Revenue was guilty of a crime in violation of Section 1018, because he made the tax returns available for publication by his order to Collectors of Internal Revenue and thus published them just as much as did the Herald Tribune.

The witnesses called by the Government were Mrs. Bessie Katz, clerk in the office of Internal Revenue Collector Frank K. Bowers; Chief Clerk Thomas J. Charles of the Second Revenue District and Reginald A. Wilson, reporter for the Herald Tribune. The defense rested after cross-examination of the witnesses, who told of the steps leading up to publication in the Herald Tribune of the names of Archer M. Huntington, M. M. Belding and John T. Underwood, whose taxes, respectively, were given as $114,551.80, $243,681.54 and $258,617.65.

Mr. Charles identified the memorandum of instructions issued by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair instructing collectors to make public tax returns. He also identified a telegram from Commissioner Blair, dated Oct. 23, in which the latter said that to print a return or any part of one subjected the offender to a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment for a year, or both. Next day, Oct. 24, it appeared from a telegram read by Mr. Joyce that Deputy Collector Mires sent a telegram to Collector Bowers announcing that assessment lists should be opened for inspection, but those examining lists should be advised of Section 3167.

"Representatives of the press should not be denied access to lists," the telegram concluded.

THE KANSAS VICTORY SMILE

Walter S. ### FORMER BRITISH NEWS MAN STUDYING U. S.

Valentine Williams, Novelist, to Write On "Middle Class" Americans— Was London Daily Mail Foreign Editor

An English newspaper man, former war correspondent, is visiting the United States on the peace time mission of "studying the middle-class American."

Such is the business of Valentine Williams, who this week explained he intended to write a series of articles for the London Daily Mail on America's middle class, particularly on "What the American Family Saves."

"I mean to discuss," he said, "whether or not the people of the United States skimp on books and the higher things of life in order to have radios, gramophones, pianos, and flivvers."

Although he is now a novelist, Mr. Williams has had considerable newspaper experience.

"I went into Reuter's Agency when I was 18 years old and I think there is possibly not a single thing in newspaper work that I haven't done, 'except radio news,' he explained.

During the peace conference Mr. Williams wrote an editorial every night, when it was a hard task to reconcile the different points of view of the Allies. He interviewed Col. House, Lloyd George, and many other notables.

Early in the war, he was one of Lord Northcliffe's right hand men, representing the London Daily News at Neuve Chapelle, Ypres and Loos. In December, 1915, when his pen was no longer necessary to stimulate recruiting, he took a commission in the Irish Guards. The following year he was severely wounded, and in the last battle of the war was wounded again while on the staff of the Guards division. He was foreign editor of the London Daily Mail from 1919 until 1922, when he resigned to take up fiction writing.

At present Mr. Williams is the guest in New York of his brother, F. Douglas Williams, general manager for America of Reuters, Ltd.

W. C. REICK, FORMER NEW YORK SUN OWNER, DIES

Brilliant Directing Editor of N. Y. Herald Under Younger Bennett Made His Fame On Mad Dog Story Taking Two Children to Pasteur in Paris for Treatment—Nearly 40 Years in N. Y. Field

WILLIAM C. REICK, 60, for nearly 40 years a New York newspaper maker, died at his New York home Dec. 6, after several months' illness.

One of the builders of the Herald of the Bennetts and more recently president of the New York Journal of Commerce, Mr. Reick achieved his greatest distinction as the owner for several years of the New York Evening Sun. He retired from presidency of the Journal of Commerce in October, 1923.

At different times he had also been connected with the management of the New York Times and the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Suffering a slight stroke while in Bermuda last winter, he had been gradually failing in health since.

All New York dailies paid editorial tribute to the eventful journalistic career of this great newspaper maker.

A mad dog which bit two children in Newark, N. J., gave William C. Reick his first big opportunity in newspaper work and he was quick to take advantage of it. Mr. Reick, then a young man of 24, was Newark correspondent of the New York Herald, and his story of the incident led James Gordon Bennett the younger, owner of the Herald, to cable from Paris to have the two children sent there to receive the antitoxin treatment for rabies which had just been discovered by Pasteur.

Mr. Bennett was greatly interested in Pasteur's discovery and up to that time no American patients had received the treatment. Mr. Bennett's cablegram directed that the Herald man be sent along in charge of the children, and Mr. Reick, as the writer of the original story, was selected.

The tradition is that Mr. Reick, realizing the necessity for getting the patients to Paris as quickly as possible, obtained the consent of the children's parents, and put the patients on a tug, chartered in the name of the Herald, to catch an outgoing steamship down the bay. In any event, Mr. Reick went to Paris, met Mr. Bennett and so impressed him that he first placed Mr. Reick in charge of the London and Paris editions of the New York Herald and a year later made him city editor of the Herald, a place of first importance in the news department of that newspaper, which under Mr. Bennett had no titular managing editor.

Mr. Reick remained with the Herald for 18 years. He became associated with the management of the New York Times early in 1907, leaving in 1911, when he purchased the controlling ownership of the old New York Sun. He continued with the Sun after its purchase by Frank A. Munsey until after the latter's purchase of the New York Herald. In June, 1921, he assumed management and control of the New York Journal of Commerce.

Robert E. Livingston, now director of public relations for the Consolidated Gas Company of New York, and one of the few men who were members of the New York Herald staff at the time Mr. Reick came to the paper, recalled for EDITOR & PUBLISHER, his association with the brilliant Herald city editor.

After returning from Paris young Reick came to the Herald as secretary to Julius Chambers, Mr. Livingston said. Dr. Esdaile P. Cohen who died recently after years of service on the New York World, was then city editor of the Herald. Cohen sent Livingston down to Wall Street to investigate a story. When he returned "Billy" Reick was sitting at the city editor's desk, appearing ill at ease.

"Where's Cohen?" Livingston asked. "I want to report on a story."

"I'm city editor now," Reick replied.

THE LATE WILLIAM CHARLES REICK

A cablegram from James Gordon Bennett Jr., in Paris had effected the change. Livingston's association with Mr. Reick covered 17 years, long after both had passed from the Herald's service.

"Mr. Reick was a phenomenal organizer," Livingston said. "It was the basis of his success. He had a flair for exclusive stories. He also was continually checking the Herald against its rivals to be sure the Herald was getting every bit of the news."

The first imported automobile to come to the United States was a Mercedes sent to Mr. Reick by Mr. Bennett as a gift, Livingston stated. At another time Mr. Bennett gave his managing editor a tract of land near the old Jerome race track.

William Charles Reick was born in Philadelphia on Sept. 29, 1864, the son of Charles William and Margaret Turner Reick. He was educated in Philadelphia and prepared for Harvard University. He was married on Dec. 4, 1894, to Miss Carrie Ridgway at Burlington, N. J.

He began newspaper work in Philadelphia in 1883, and five years later was the Herald correspondent at Newark. After his appointment as city editor of the Herald, already referred to, Mr. Reick was the moving force of its news department for 14 years. At the time Mr. Reick became city editor of the Herald that newspaper, because of the absence of its owner in Europe, was somewhat like a ship without a rudder. There were many competent men on its staff, but few who cared to take responsibility in view of the personal peculiarities of its proprietor.

Not so with Mr. Reick, and he soon became the dominating personality in the organization. The success of the Herald in reporting events in the war with Spain was largely attributed to Mr. Reick's foresight and skill in the preparation for news collection.

Mr. Reick's place in the Herald organization continued unchanged until 1903, when Mr. Bennett made him president of the New York Herald Company, publisher of the Herald and Evening Telegram.

In 1907 Mr. Reick became connected with the management of the New York Times and of the Public Ledger in Philadelphia, then controlled by the principal owner of the New York Times. In 1911 he acquired a controlling interest in the Sun from Mrs. William M. Laffan.

When Mr. Reick took the control of the Sun properties he devoted much care to the improvement of the Evening Sun, putting it under the managing editorship of the late George M. Smith, who had served for many years as news editor of the Sun under Chester S. Lord. Mr. Reick removed the two newspapers from their old home at Frankfort and Nassau streets to the American Tract Society Building, a block further south, at Nassau and Spruce streets.

Mr. Reick's control of the Sun and Evening Sun lasted until 1916, when Frank A. Munsey, who had bought the New York Press in 1912, acquired the two papers and merged the Press with the Sun. Mr. Munsey complimented Mr. Reick particularly upon the development of the Evening Sun, and then said:

"Very great credit is due Mr. Reick for the fine development of the Evening Sun since it came under his control. I know of no man who has done a better and sounder piece of newspaper work at any time in New York or elsewhere than Mr. Reick has done on the Evening Sun."

Mr. Reick remained with the Sun until after the purchase of the Herald by Mr. Munsey and its amalgamation with the Sun. In June, 1921, he became president of the Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, succeeding John W. Dodsworth, son of the late William H. Dodsworth, the founder. It was announced that John W. Dodsworth and his brothers, A. W. and W. A. Dodsworth, would retain an interest in the newspaper.

Mr. Reick is survived by his widow and three daughters, Miss C. Louise Reick, Mrs. Chandler Bates, who was Miss Amy R. Reick, and Mrs. Henry S. Stearns, Jr., who was Miss Margaret Reick.

"SPECIALS" CONSOLIDATED

Ingraham and Powers Take Over the Late Frank R. Northrup Agency

Consolidation of the Frank R. Northrup Company, special newspaper representatives, and the P. B. Ingraham Company was announced this week, following the death of Mr. Northrup in New York, Nov. 29.

Mr. Ingraham was formerly advertising manager of Printers' Ink, and resigned Oct. 1 to establish his own office as a newspaper special representative.

The combined organization is called Ingraham-Powers, Inc., and will occupy the former Northrup offices in both New York and Chicago.

E. J. Powers, who had been associated with Mr. Northrup for 17 years in charge of the Chicago office, will continue in that location as vice-president of the new company. P. B. Ingraham will be president, with headquarters in New York. Miss F. Doble who had been associated with Mr. Northrup for 14 years, will be associated with the new organization.

Publishers at Memorial Unveiling

Three newspaper publishers are members of the official party now in Havana, Cuba, to take part Dec. 14, in the unveiling of a memorial at Santiago de Cuba to Theodore Roosevelt, as Colonel of the Rough Riders. They are: Henry J. Allen, Wichita (Kan.) Beacon, and former Governor of Kansas; ex-Senator Lafayette Young of Iowa, Des Moines Capital; and Maj. Franklin Knox, Manchester (N. H.) Leader. Maj. Knox served with Col. Roosevelt in the Spanish-American war, and it was ex-Senator Young who nominated him for Vice-President at Philadelphia in 1900.

Editorial Men Want Own Club

Cincinnati newspaper men have taken steps to organize a club limited strictly to editorial workers. They plan to withdraw from the present Cuvier-Press Club because of its overwhelming membership of "undertakers, dairy supply men, lawyers, politicians, and other business what-nots." The organization committee is composed of Robert K. Harris, Cincinnati Times-Star; Barrett Schroder, Commercial Tribune; Henry Segal, Post and V. H. Logan, Enquirer.

Irwin Named Karger's Successor

Morris K. Irwin, Columbus correspondent of the Cincinnati Times-Star and formerly connected with the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune as copy reader has been appointed successor to the late Gus Karger, as Washington correspondent for the Times-Star. He assumed his duties Dec. 1.

Ban on Crime News Urged

Members of the Business Men's Association of Woodlawn, a section of Chicago, recently passed a resolution urging "a cleansing of the daily press of the mass of crime reports." Certain newspapers are "exploiting crime and criminals to a degree to disgust and discourage the average citizen," the resolution stated.

HOUSTON PLANS ROYAL WELCOME FOR A. A. C. W.

Robert Cornell, Convention Executive Secretary, Outlines Program Which Includes "Pan-American" and Nat'l Advertising Days, and a Trip to Galveston—$120,000 Raised for Entertainment

TEXANS are all prepared to kill the fatted steer for entertainment of delegates to the 21st annual A. A. C. W. convention at Houston, next May.

ROBERT CORNELL

This was the convention dinner bell rung this week in New York by Robert Cornell, assistant publisher of the Houston Chronicle, and the convention's executive secretary, who reported tentative program plans to the National Program Committee, meeting at the Advertising Club of New York, Dec. 8.

Approval of the plans was unanimous. The Houston menu, as read off by bell-ringer Cornell, took the proportions of his home state, and before café noir was reached eastern eyes widened in surprise.

"We are two months ahead of schedule," Mr. Cornell reported.

"We have just completed a five-day drive by which we raised $120,000 for entertainment purposes.

"Newspaper publishers of the state have rallied in remarkable fashion to support the convention, believing it to be the greatest opportunity ever presented to sell Texas to the world."

In addition to contributions from Houston newspaper owners, substantial donations have been received from publishers in widely scattered cities of the state, Mr. Cornell said, including large checks from George B. Dealy, publisher of the Dallas News and Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Outstanding features of the tentative Houston convention schedule described by Cornell include:

Change of the opening date from May 10 to May 9, to provide time for an elaborate official reception and ball. The convention will continue as planned until May 14. This reception will be a copy of the Albert Hall affair in London last July.

"National Advertising Day," on which President Coolidge is to be invited to speak on the functions of advertising in Washington and his address radiocast to the Houston convention and advertising clubs in all cities of the nation.

"Pan-American Day," which will be a program built up for the interest of delegates who have promised to attend from Mexico, Central America, Panama, and all South American countries.

"Coming of Age Party," celebrating the 21st year of the A. A. C. W.'s history. An official President's Ball the evening of May 12, which, according to Mr. Cornell, "will kill the idea that Texas doesn't know how to do things."

A "tabloid rodeo" and Texan barbecue, held on request of European and English delegates planning to attend.

Transportation of the entire convention for an afternoon session and evening entertainment from Houston to Galveston by motor.

A unique musical and inspirational program for Sunday, May 10, featuring local talent and Spanish troubadours imported from Mexico.

Circle tours, following the convention, carrying delegates on visits to important Texas cities, full details of which are to be announced later.

An imposing list of speakers, which will probably include: Charles M. Schwab, Secretaries Hughes and Hoover, Senators Edge and Borah, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., President Calles of Mexico, and Bruce Barton.

Before the National Program Committee, Mr. Cornell went into detail in regard to entertainment plans.

Attending the meeting were: C. K. Woodbridge, President of the Dictaphone Corporation and chairman of the general program committee; Joseph Meadon, Detroit, chairman of the On-to-Houston committee; John H. Logeman, Chicago, chairman of the international exhibit committee; Charles W. Hoyt, New York, M. C. Robbins, New York, and Gilbert Hodges, New York.

Also in attendance were Carl Hunt, general manager of the Associated Advertising Clubs, and Earle Pearson, educational director.

Arrangements were being made, Mr. Cornell told them, for entertainment of between 5,000 and 7,000 delegates.

"Of primary interest is the projected Pan-American Day," he said. "It will make this convention a real international affair. I intend to have a conference with Secretary Hoover in Washington Thursday, regarding the program of the day."

"The suggestion for the day came first from ex-Governor of Texas, William P. Hobby, now president of the Houston Post-Dispatch, publisher of the Beaumont Enterprise and Beaumont Journal, and general chairman of the Houston convention entertainment committee," Mr. Cornell explained.

Mr. Hobby met President Calles of Mexico in New Orleans recently and explained the importance of the convention. President Calles agreed to attend the sessions himself with an official state and business delegation and promised to convey to each of the Mexican states his official invitation to be present.

Secretary Hughes has also promised the Washington bureau of the A. A. C. W. to invite political, business and advertising representatives of all Central and South American countries.

"This Pan-American Day," Mr. Cornell declared, "is not being held for the selfish motive of offering opportunity to American and European business men to learn how to conduct trade with Latin-Americans.

"We want to make advertising the universal language of peace and goodwill among nations of the world.

"We had this thought in mind, when we decided upon convention decorations, which will have as central motif a composite flag made from the flags of all nations. In the center of this flag will be that of the United States, the Union Jack, Texas, Houston, and the A. A. C. W. emblem of 'Truth in Advertising.' As a border will be the flags of the 35 nations expected to attend.

"This composite flag will be made in several sizes, ranging from a pocket handkerchief to one to be painted on the ceiling of the Houston auditorium, 150 feet square. Thus delegates to Houston will be granted the unusual opportunity of deliberating on world problems sitting beneath the flags of all nations."

Elaborate plans are complete for the official reception to be held May 9. It will be in "true English style," Mr. Cornell said.

In the receiving line will probably be Secretary Hoover, representing the federal government; Mrs. M. A. Ferguson, Governor of Texas; Mayor Oscar F. Holcombe of Houston, and chairman of the convention's executive council; Senator Morris Shepard; Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and president of the Tenth District, A. A. C. W.; and W. S. Patton, president of the Houston Advertising Association. An informal ball will follow the official reception.

On the following day, Sunday, May 15, down-town churches of Houston will turn over their pulpits to business men for inspirational addresses. There will be a musical program furnished by a mass band of 400 pieces; 125 negro voices in plantation melodies from the Prairie View Normal, a negro institute; a choir of 300 local women; the internationally famous Kiwanis Glee Club of Houston; and a sextet from the Houston Symphony Orchestra.

Conveying of the entire convention by automobile to Galveston May 13, was one of the convention features elaborated on by Mr. Cornell before the National Program Committee.

The executive council of the convention, he said, had requisitioned 2,300 automobiles of the 4,200 owned by Houston people to carry the delegates the 50 miles between the two cities. The cars will leave Houston at 12 o'clock following the morning session, and, with a picnic lunch on the road, be at Galveston by 2 o'clock for the afternoon meeting. For the evening the Galveston entertainment committee is planning moon-light surf bathing, a "Bathing Beauty Parade," a treasure hunt for prizes hidden in the sand, and a shore dinner.

Another trip planned for delegates in addition to the circle tours will be down the Houston ship channel 20 miles to the San Jacinto battle ground. It will be Mexican night and the Mexican National Band brought from Mexico City by President Calles will furnish Spanish music. A Texas historical pageant will be presented.

In concluding his report to the National Program Committee, Mr. Cornell wished credit be given the Houston Advertising Association for its influence in gaining passage of a bond issue 10 days ago providing $300,000 for remodeling of the Houston Auditorium, making it second only to Cleveland in municipal halls.

This was the second big feat accomplished by the association within two years, it having been responsible for the trip from Houston to London last July, which later caused the French line to make Houston a port of call.

Mr. Cornell wished it announced that the executive council voted that not a cent of the entertainment funds will be spent in violation of the United States Constitution.

In addition to Mr. Cornell, Houston convention officials include: Mayor Oscar F. Holcombe, general chairman, Executive Council; William S. Patton, president, Advertising Association of Houston, vice-chairman, Executive Council; Ex-Governor William P. Hobby, general chairman Entertainment Committee; Robert H. Cornell, executive secretary; R. M. Farrar, treasurer, Executive Council; J. W. Neal, chairman, Finance Committee; A. D. Simpson, vice-chairman; John H. Payne, vice-chairman; J. W. Evans, chairman, Budget Committee; George B. Forristall, vice-chairman.

S. R. Bertron, chairman, Transportation Committee; R. L. Dudley, vice-chairman; George S. Cohen, chairman, Publicity Committee; John B. Westover, vice-chairman; R. H. Weir, chairman, Hotel Committee.

EVOLUTION OF A NEWS STORY TOLD BY PICTURES IN N. Y. SUN BOOTH

HOW news is gathered, written, and placed in newspapers was graphically told in pictures by the New York Sun in its booth at the Tercentenary Educational Exhibition held in the Ninth Regiment Armory during National Education Week, Nov. 14-22.

Under the caption "The Evolution of a News Story" a series of nine enlarged photographs showed the various steps taken in procuring, preparing and printing a news story. The first showed the city editor receiving information of a fire and assigning a reporter to cover it; then, in order, these pictures followed:

The reporter inside the fire lines; scene in the news room with reporter writing his story; composing room scene with typesetting machines in operation; proof reader correcting the proofs; stereotyping process illustrating how a matrix is made; view of press room with one of several presses running off 20,000 32-page papers per hour; mailing room; and an exterior view of 20 motor trucks being loaded.

Underneath these pictures was displayed "A Complete School Page"—nine typical pages showing the general arrangement of Sun school pages.

In one corner of the booth was a United Press ticker, which attracted much attention. It was in operation, printing the actual news of the day as it came over the wires.

A Certificate Of Merit was awarded the Sun by those in charge of the Exposition.

HOLD A. A. C. W. TROPHIES

THE two flags presented by American and overseas delegates, together with the twin statuettes of Columbia and Britannia, and the bust of Benjamin Franklin, the trophies of District 14's memorable Convention at Wembley, were officially deposited in the Aldwych Club of London on Thursday, Nov. 13.

The occasion was the installation of the incoming president of the Aldwych Club, Lord Waring, the head of the London department store of Waring & Gillow. Mr. Wareham Smith as club chairman, presided.

Lord Waring, on behalf of the Club, accepted the custody of the trophies, and complimented C. Harold Vernon upon the success of the Convention.

PLAYING TOREADOR TO WALL STREET BULLS

S. S. Fontaine, N. Y. World Financial Editor, Makes "The Street" His Arena to Bait Bears and Hurl Darts of Laughter at Financiers—Learned Fighting Tactics as War Correspondent

By WARREN BASSETT

WHEN a Wall Street brokerage house explodes, blowing the pocketbooks of thousands of investors to ribbons, a former war correspondent lists the casualties and writes the obituary for the New York World.

And when a newcomer to the Street steps out with the melodramatic announcement that he has made a "cool million," a former dramatic critic writes the story for the same paper.

Wall Street is both a melee and a melodrama to S. S. Fontaine, financial editor of the World, who covered revolutions in South America and opening nights on Broadway before he went down to watch the financial behemoths gobble up the silly little lambs and then smack their chops over the meal.

That was 25 years ago. At the present time, just to demonstrate he has lost none of his old versatility, Fontaine each day does a reportorial acrobatic few financial editors would attempt. On the left hand side of his page he writes the day's financial lead, a cold, technical account, which tells that "the rails held strong," or whatever they do. On the right hand side he writes a column of comment, gossip and humor, dealing with events and personalities in the Street.

This column, started three years ago to give the human side of Wall Street, has gained for Fontaine the reputation of being one of the few men who can "kid" the Street and get away with it. The column is rumored to be a thorn in the side of many sober, serious gentlemen of finance who would have it believed that the workings of the Street are privileged and profound. Here is an irreverent fellow who bursts into print with the fact that a certain manufacturing company, which had been "running at a loss," to quote official statements, reported a year's profit of $5,000,000 to the Government—a trivial fellow who goes on to remark about the number of business firms which lose money year after year and keep operating purely through philanthropic motives. Saccharine-sweet success stories which make the subject appear a synthesis of Napoleon and Emmanuel Kant never clutter Fontaine's column. Financiers to him are more or less ordinary fellows with specialized talents who eat more or less ordinary food, and who talk about high taxes, apartments, automobiles, golf scores and baseball like other ordinary people.

"I was trained in the human nature school of reporting," Fontaine told EDITOR & PUBLISHER, and that is the key to his success as a financial writer. He makes features of dry transactions in stocks and bonds by writing about them with sparkle and vivacity. He has a horror of ponderous and portly sentences which walk solemnly down a column in top hats and cutaway coats.

And speaking of style, one test of reportorial vividness is what kind of a head a copyreader can glean from a story. Too often headline writing takes the form of a Caesarian operation. "WHIRLWIND FROM ROARING FORTIES TOSSES STEEL LIKE TIN WHIRLIGIG," was the recent head on Fontaine's column. And it leaped virtually intact from the copy.

The outstanding feature of Fontaine's writing is that he dramatizes financial news through conversation, and visualizes it for readers by figures of speech and pure fancy. Often he describes the market in the language of the biggest current news story.

And it is an interesting fact that as a true "old timer" Fontaine writes his copy in pencil on huge sheets of copy paper. This applies only to his column; his market lead and other items are dictated.

In his stories Fontaine starts with the proposition that the general reader wants to pick up any part of the paper and find it interesting.

"In writing financial news you must write for those outside of Wall Street as well as the experts, and at the same time give authentic news of the market," he explained. "You must get away from the technical phrases of the Street which read like trigonometry to all but the insiders. I try to write from the point of view of the public, not that of the financial man."

Wall Street doesn't resent being "kidded" if it isn't done viciously, Fontaine has learned.

"I am not a professional humorist," he declared. "The average funny man couldn't get away with it for very long in Wall Street. Fictitious anecdotes and characters would soon be recognized as such."

It takes footwork to give the true ring and flavor to his daily gossip of the Street. Each day Fontaine visits 20 offices in the financial district, and writes the stories he hears just as they are told in the board rooms of the big stock exchange houses. In these stories he uses the language of the Street. His characters are real persons. Friends call him up when they have something choice they would like to see in print.

Important changes have occurred in Wall Street since Fontaine first took his ringside seat 25 years ago. For instance, in the Street's attitude toward newspapers.

"Financiers are beginning to realize that it is only through newspapers that they can get in direct contact with the public," he declared. "They have discovered that it is absolutely essential to advertise in dailies to keep their businesses going."

"The story of this discovery goes back to war days, when William McAdoo, then Secretary of the Treasury, forced Wall Street against its will to finance Liberty Bonds at a low rate of interest, 3½ per cent, when it wanted 5 or even 6.

"By this act he created 20,000,000 new investors. It changed the Street from a place where only a few shrewd men operated to a place patronized by the general public.

"Veterans of the Street were quick to take advantage of this situation. Stocks and bonds are now being sold to the general public in tremendously increased amounts. Financial advertising in newspapers has increased enormously, whereas before the war it was the custom to advertise in strictly Wall Street publications, with limited circulations."

Another important change has occurred in regard to publicity.

"The publicity man's influence in Wall Street is waning," in Fontaine's opinion.

"I have the fattest waste basket in the financial district, and I could use another.

"The modern idea is to refuse to allow a publicity man to write a story. Despite this, however, the number of publicity writers does not seem to decrease. I could fill four pages daily with their hand-out stuff.

"Today hardworking newspaper men haven't time to go out to lunch with press agents. Financial men are finding it pays better to use the advertising columns of newspapers.

"One hopeful sign is that instead of having the old-time 'publicity men,' many large companies now have trained reporters who assemble the bare facts and give them to the newspapers to use as they see fit.

"The hook or crook method of getting doctored news into print is rapidly passing."

And yet there is one feature of the Street that never changes, Fontaine sadly admitted. It is the annual influx of lambs impatient for shearing.

"The lamb is the general public and is always fleeced," he stated. "The lamb will not be content to use the facilities of the Street for investment purposes only. Money can be made in Wall Street by judicious buying and selling. It is even possible to double your original investment in a year's time. But the lamb refuses to play cautiously. He wants to make it all in a heap. The commission houses get them all sooner or later.

"The average life of a lamb is three years, from my observation. Some last a little longer, others lose their fleece within a year. But every three years there is a new crop."

To become a successful financial writer it is not necessary to steep oneself in figures and statistics, according to Fontaine.

"The general reporter has a very fine basis for beaming a news writer in Wall Street," he stated.

"I think a college man is the most desirable material, especially if he has taken some economics with a literary course, and then polished off with general reporting.

"It is my idea that there is nothing in newspaper experience or education which a financial reporter cannot use. The technique of the Street can be learned. But a sense of humor and a broad perspective cannot easily be acquired. Both are indispensable to any newspaper writer.

"I would list a fine news sense as the principal quality necessary for a good financial reporter."

Of his present position, Fontaine says he is "just a newspaper reporter who has grown into a financial editor."

He was born in the Blue Grass Country of Kentucky at the home of his grandfather, Samuel Spaulding, of Mapleton Manor. When? "About fifty years ago," is Fontaine's answer. During his youth he became interested in the great Kentucky sport, horse racing, and rode races at the county fairs.

He attended school at St. Mary's College, Kentucky, receiving the degree of Master of Arts. Subsequently he took a special course at Fordham University. In college he went out for baseball and won a pitcher's berth on the team. After leaving school he played semi-pro ball in the Blue Grass League.

His first newspaper work was done on the Louisville Commercial, where he learned everything a cub should know. From the Commercial staff he went to the Louisville Courier-Journal, under Marse Henry Watterson.

On April 9, 1892, he joined the staff of the New York World, and reported the cholera scare in the Lower Bay that year. The following year he was sent to South America as war correspondent for the World, and was appointed civil aide on the staff of Admiral Benham, U. S. N., and served in that capacity throughout the Brazilian revolution.

Returning to New York Fontaine was assigned to the dramatic department for a time, relinquishing this to join the Wall Street staff, where he has remained to the present time.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

James Gordon Bennett, Jr., Honored by the New York Yacht Club—Defeated in An International Yacht Race—Story of His Activities As Manager of the Herald for His Father

ON Mr. Bennett, Junior's, return to New York in 1867, wearing his laurels as winner of the unique ocean yacht race in midwinter, he was naturally looked up to by the public as one of the city's ablest and most representative young men, with a great career ahead of him. His father, as previously related, made him manager of the Herald, and the son entered upon his arduous duties with a vigor and extravagance that stand so far without an equal in modern journalism. The Herald's income at this time was enormous. The flow of advertising through the doors of its magnificent new office was incessant, "day and night," as the late Judson A. Brown, cashier, remarked. There were few or no agencies to take a rake-off from the golden stream; no costly art department had to be maintained with its photo-engraving accessory; print paper was cheap; compositors and pressmen were not yet exacting the present-day salaries, and thus the Herald's cash resources rapidly accumulated, and enabled the son to start the great expeditions through Africa and Asia, that at tremendous expense accomplished results that only governments had hitherto achieved.

In the meantime, young Bennett was a "social lion" in the metropolis, and stood pre-eminent in yachting circles, with the result that at the age of 26, he was unanimously elected on March 1, 1867, Vice-Commodore of the New York Yacht Club, an office he held until 1871, when he was again honored by being chosen Commodore, and for four years most ably discharged his duties, advancing the club's interests in every possible way, and bringing it up to a very flourishing condition.

In the winter of 1868-69, General Van Alen and his son cruised in West Indian waters in Mr. Bennett's famous "Henrietta" and met with a most friendly reception at every port touched at. Her keel was not altogether a stranger to the southern seas, as under Mr. Bennett, Jr.'s command she had done good service against the rebels during the late war, off the coasts of Florida and South Carolina.

Ocean Race Between the "Cambria" and the "Dauntless"

In July, 1870, occurred the famous International Yacht Race between the "Cambria," owned by Mr. James Ashbury of England, and the "Dauntless," the property of James Gordon Bennett, Jr. After lengthy negotiations by cable, an unconditional race across the Atlantic Ocean was agreed upon. The "Cambria" was the fastest schooner yacht in British waters, while the "Dauntless," a worthy successor to the old "Henrietta," also had a wonderful record. She had been built in 1866, then known as the "Hirondelle"; was bought by Mr. Bennett from Mr. S. D. Bradford, Jr.; rebuilt in 1868, under the owner's supervision, and was in every way a suitable yacht to meet the exacting requirements of his position as Vice-Commodore of the New York Yacht Club.

Both Messrs. Ashbury and Bennett were keen sportsmen and gave close personal supervision to every detail of the exciting race in which they took part. The start was made from Daunt's Rock, off the coast of Ireland, on July 4, 1870, and the "Cambria" won, arriving at the Sandy Hook Lightship in 22 days, 5 hours, 17 minutes and 15 seconds, beating the "Dauntless" by one hour and 40 minutes.

Activities of Mr. Bennett, Jr., As Herald Manager

As Mr. Hudson once said, the younger Bennett, "impulsive like his father, as ambitious and as fearless, after a period of intensive training, assumed the management of the Herald with great energy and skill. One of his first 'beats' was the cabling of the King of Prussia's important speech after the decisive battle of Sadowa, costing in tolls, $7,000 in gold, causing intense astonishment on the morning of its publication!"

This was the first step he took on the long road of costly enterprise that he rapidly traveled in the next few years, and it has been estimated that more than a million dollars were expended in the financing of his numerous expeditions, and inclusive of his $100,000 gift to the Irish famine sufferers.

As one of the ablest and most courageous and enterprising of the Herald's field correspondents during the Civil War, Dr. George W. Hosmer was honored by the junior Bennett with the important post of London correspondent. He was one of the few men upon whom President Lincoln had relied for inside information as to conditions at the front, and his despatches were at all times accurate and comprehensive. When the Franco-Prussian War began in 1870, he was at once sent to Paris, as the best qualified man to represent the Herald. He was in the city when the siege began in October, 1870, and his long and interesting letters fully described the gallant resistance offered by the French Army; the revolt that broke out in the city on Oct. 31; how the last desperate sortie in January, 1871, failed; and the sufferings of the starving inhabitants, when famine prices prevailed. All communication with the outside world had been cut off, and the despatches had to be sent out by balloon or carrier pigeon, and the thrilling story of the siege written by the Doctor from day to day, appeared at irregular intervals in the Herald, and was pronounced a masterpiece of its kind. The World later said of him:

"His reports on the Franco-Prussian War and the Commune revolt won for him a lasting place in the front rank of war correspondents."

He continued in active service on the staff of the Herald for many years thereafter, until in 1889 he accepted the very responsible position of confidential secretary to Mr. Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor of the New York World, and was his traveling companion during the years of his blindness. His active service terminated in 1909, when at Monte Carlo, his health broke down. He was the author of several books, a famous story teller, and possessed an unusually pleasing personality. Though holding degrees both as a physician and a lawyer, he never practiced either profession, and died at Summit, New Jersey, on June 2, 1914.

At the beginning of the Franco-Prussian War in 1870, Mr. Bennett, Jr., sent several correspondents into the field, among them being Januarius A. MacGahan, a young American, then a law student in Brussels, and whose abilities as a linguist were very great. To him was assigned the arduous duty of following up General Bourbaki, in his last desperate attempt to hold back the onward march of the victorious Germans. With characteristic energy and promptitude, and suffering great hardships, he remained with the French Army until it was finally defeated and driven into Switzerland in January, 1871. He was then ordered to Paris and with much difficulty effected his entrance into the besieged city.

On March 23, appeared in the Herald one of the finest "spreads" on record with a half-page map of Paris, and MacGahan's vivid description of the frightful slaughter in the streets, at the terrible opening scenes of the communists' campaign.

Throughout these perilous days he behaved with a courage, tact and industry that rendered him immediately famous. One has only to turn to his correspondence as it appeared in the Herald to realize the splendid nature of the work he was doing. His letters were graphic, truthful and of high literary merit and were widely copied both in England and America. MacGahan risked his life on many occasions during the deadly strife in the bloodsoaked streets to get the exact facts, and the Bennetts jointly rewarded him on a scale of liberality previously unparalleled.

In January, 1872, he headed the "Herald's Special Exploring Expedition," that ascended the Nile, and leaving Kirasko plunged into the desert in search of Sir Samuel Baker's expedition that had been sent to annex the Soudan to Egypt. Under the heading, "The Herald on the Nile," Mr. Bennett published on July 1, 1873, MacGahan's despatch, announcing Baker's safe arrival at Khartoum, after suppressing the slave trade and a rebellion, being a great "beat" over Bennett's sluggish contemporaries.

The Herald's Commissioners Visit San Domingo

Early in 1871, the U. S. Administration took up the subject of the annexation, or at least the control of the republic of San Domingo, and a commission was sent to the island to investigate the question at first hand. The subject vied with that of the Franco-German War as a topic of discussion by the press, and Mr. Bennett, Jr., promptly sent his own commissioners to San Domingo to report on the work of the Government's representatives and incidentally on the resources and people of the island, and during February the Herald printed pages of original matter on the subject and its editorial comments formed a valuable addition to the report of the Government's Commission, which came out much later.

It was at this time that Mr. Connery, the Herald's managing editor, referred to Mr. Bennett as "expedition mad!" It was also a fact that the names of his faithful correspondents never appeared over their despatches, and remained buried in the deepest obscurity.

WASHINGTON as a Market

You've just got to come into the National Capital itself, and appeal directly to its half-million prosperous consumers if you want to enlist their attention to any meritorious product.

There is no other way to accomplish it—and it assuredly is well worth while—for here is a community with a population larger than any one of eight different entire states, concentrated in one city. Cultured and progressive people—appreciative of the good things of life and competent to indulge their inclinations.

Nowhere is the problem of completely covering a field so easily solved as in Washington — through the Evening and Sunday Star. Within the city and its shopping radius the circulation of The Star leads its nearest competitor by 40,000 daily and 38,000 Sunday.

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

LUCILE BRIAN GILMORE

EVERY morning at the top of the first column of the front page of the local section of the Chicago Herald and Examiner and every other Hearst newspaper there is a box heading with the word "Hinman" prominently in view. The column contains a daily discussion of the economic problems of the world, a discourse on the nation's business and the world's financial affairs. The name "Hinman" represents the man whose ideas are expressed in that column, George W. Hinman, undoubtedly one of the leading political and economic experts in the country and one of the ablest newspaper financial writers.

Back of the man there is an education, and a training which has qualified him for his particular work, a training sufficient and adequate to make George W. Hinman an authority on what he discusses.

George W. Hinman is originally a New Yorker. There it was that he was brought up from childhood, but he has been an extensive traveler during his life. He graduated from Hamilton College with the first honors of the class. He went abroad to finish his education, then going to Germany, studying at the Universities of Leipzig, Berlin and Heidelberg, obtaining his master's degree and the degree of doctor of philosophy from the latter university, taking second honors.

He spent a total of four years in German schools, studying political economy, civil government, financial science and international law. At the end of that period he returned to New York and entered newspaper work as a reporter for the New York Sun under Charles A. Dana. He became almost immediately one of the "star" men of that paper, when its staff was famous throughout the country. Shortly after he came to the Sun, Hinman was made an assistant to city editor, and following that he assumed the duties of Sunday editor, writing also editorials for the Dana paper.

From the Sun, Hinman came to Chicago as editor of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, then owned by Charles T. Yerkes. After six years in this position, Hinman purchased the paper from Yerkes and for seven years was its editor and owner. He finally disposed of his double interest in that paper to the late H. Kohlsaat.

About that time Marietta College in Ohio was looking for a capable and qualified personage to fill the presidential chair of the school. The offer was made to George Hinman, who accepted. He was president of the college for four and a half years. During that period the attendance of Marietta College was increased materially. He resigned the presidency, however, preferring to return to his original calling.

In 1920, Hinman returned to Chicago and assumed the direction of all publicity in the Harding campaign for president. He wrote most of the literature and pamphlets himself during those days.

In addition to his daily column, Hinman writes editorials on national and international questions. When he first entered newspaper work, he was undecided between the career of a newspaper man and that of a college professor. Today, however, he is overly enthusiastic about the newspaper life. Politics is the greatest game in the world for a man, he declares, and next to that is newspaper work. Constant contact with live men and live issues is what makes the game extremely interesting and fascinating. The first ten years are the hardest for the reporter, Hinman says, and after that, the work is sheer delight. Education is a valuable and almost an essential qualification for the successful newspaper man, Hinman thinks, unless the man proves to be a genius.

Ability to marshal his facts—no matter how abstruse the subject—in speedy fashion and express his ideas and thoughts in a simple, forceful manner are perhaps the most outstanding features of Hinman's writings. He gets to the facts without a great deal of preliminary bother—uncovers the kernel of the news and tells people what he has to say in a snappy way. He is reputed to be a ceaseless reader and possesses a marvelous ability for grasping facts.

Hinman lives in Winnetka, Ill., with his wife, and there are three sons and two daughters in the family. One of the sons is a newspaper man in Washington and another is in San Francisco in government service, while the third son is attending the University of Wisconsin. One of the daughters is in college, also.

GRANTLAND RICE WINS WATCH

Awarded First Prize for Best 1924 Baseball Story

Grantland Rice, sports editor of the New York Herald Tribune was awarded a gold watch as first prize by a committee appointed by the Baseball Writers' Association of America to judge the best story written about baseball in 1924. Rice's prize-winning story was written about the last game of the recent world's series. First honorable mention was awarded to Gordon Mackay's story in the Philadelphia Inquirer about Walter Johnson's second defeat in the world's series. Second honorable mention went to W. B. Hanna's story in the New York Herald Tribune on the riot during the Detroit-New York game in Detroit on June 13.

Blaine Patton, of the Indianapolis Star, won the first prize for minor league writers with a story about the numbering of players, and Bruce Dudley, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, received an honorable mention for his story on the opening game of the American Association schedule in Louisville.

The judges were I. E. Sanborn, Irvin S. Cobb, Ring Lardner and Fred G. Lieb.

The first prize for the minor league division was awarded by mistake to Frank W. Getty, of the New York United Press staff, for a story in the Bridgeport Star, under his name, about the sacrifice Bucky Harris made in keeping Walter Johnson in the box in his second game of the series. The committee ruled that a New York writer was ineligible for the minor league prize.

BOOSTING HOUSTON ATTENDANCE

A.N.A.E. Appoints Committee to Promote Joint Meet with A.A.C.W.

Plans now being formulated by the Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives are expected to bring a record attendance of that organization to Houston, Texas, May 10-14, to attend the next annual convention to be held in conjunction with the A. A. C. W. international convention. An "On To Houston" committee has been appointed that is composed of one member from each state in the United States as well as a group of other prominent newspaper men who will serve as members at large.

Each state committee-man will be responsible for getting a large attendance from his state while the members at large will contribute general promotional activities.

Broun "Sitting on the World"

Heywood Broun, conductor of "It Seems to Me" on the New York World, has collected articles from his columns published in book form under the title "Sitting on the World." He is now finishing a novel for early publication.

Make Your Christmas Advertising Pull Sales in Cincinnati

At Christmas time the one kind of advertising that carries real dealer influence is the advertising that brings buyers into the retail stores. National distribution resolves itself into a matter of local retailing and the most effective media for national advertising are the home circulating newspapers in the communities where the advertised goods are on sale.

In Cincinnati there is one newspaper that will carry your message into every worth-while home; one newspaper that is read by every member of every family that has the capacity to appreciate and the money to buy quality merchandise; one newspaper that enjoys the complete confidence of the business man and his employees and of every member of their families.

This newspaper is the Times-Star.

If you hope to cash in on your Christmas advertising in Cincinnati the Times-Star is your one best bet. It is the newspaper in which, for seventeen consecutive years, the Cincinnati merchants have placed the bulk of their own advertising. It is the newspaper in which national advertisers for an equal number of years have placed more of their display lineage than in any other medium in this territory.

It matters little whether your merchandise is distributed through department stores or specialty shops, jewelers, grocers, electrical dealers, hardware merchants, clothing stores, automobile dealers, confectioners, stationers, music stores, or radio shops, the Times-Star is the buyer's guide to the Cincinnati market. Your Christmas advertising will prove it.

"SPECIAL DEAL" OFFERS SPEED SALES IN PERIODS OF HESITATION

Many Manufacturers Find Bargain Offerings Backed With Newspaper Space Move Goods—Plan Revives Lagging Dealer Interest

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

It was this way: The company had been pounding away for a number of years with advertising which described the selling points of the goods, the prices and where the products could be bought—in liberal newspaper space.

Sales had made gains, but had been rather spotty for 1924, due to general conditions. The salesmen had become somewhat demoralized. They had nothing special to offer the trade above the ordinary, and dealers were skimpy and faint-hearted in their purchases.

The president and the sales manager had a pow-wow with the head of their this offer have blossomed in the grocery stores and naturally the salesmen have talked the proposition for all it is worth.

It is reasonable to assume that in this case, as in others, the manufacturer by buying the premium in large quantities gets a rock-bottom price and hence is able to just about break even on the cost of the griddle at $1.69. He makes many new users—for women do relish a bargain—and has had the stimulus of a special proposition.

A motor car distributor for the Velie offered a special plan for the consumer in the late fall when automobile sales are apt to slacken, in liberal space under the rather startling heading, "List price for your old car," marked for special attention of Ford, Chevrolet and Overland owners. Any man who owns one of these cars and thinks he can get list price for the old boat at least reads the proposition, which was as follows:

- "(a) We have divided the city into 69 districts. We will sell one car in each district to some owner of a Ford, Chevrolet, Overland, Dodge or Maxwell.
- "(b) There are no strings to this offer. We will pay full list price for 1923-24 Fords, providing they are in average condition. If bought used, we will allow what you paid. Bring your bill of sale. On Dodges and Maxwells we will allow exceptional prices as an inducement for you to own a Velie and attend the opening Monday.
- "(c) Each purchaser must agree to use a separate spare tire cover with the name of the company on it.
- "(d) The sale will be closed promptly as soon as 69 cars are sold. It starts Monday morning at 9 a. m. Be here and get one of these cars and save yourselves hundreds of dollars in depreciation on your old car."

The one-cent sales advertised by the Rexall stores might be termed a form of special deal to the consumer. So in a sense is the typical bargain sale conducted ad nauseam by all sizes of retailers.

It has had little attention in newspaper space from the manufacturer who is selling direct to the consumer through agents. The Fuller Brush Company, although at intervals a liberal buyer of newsprint white space, usually talks the brushes, the men or the company, or all three.

The manufacturer of Ideal Brown Flint Ware is paving the way for his house-to-house men by featuring the free gift they give to obtain entrée. A good-looking agent is shown. The two-column newspaper says, "This gentleman has a free gift for you. May he present it soon?" and then goes on:

"It is free to every woman in this city—this useful gift. Our gentleman demonstrator is anxious to present it to you. He wants to tell you about a new housekeeping idea. A million dollar concern has been working 25 years to perfect it. Today Ideal Brown Flint Ware is sweeping the country. Already over 100,000 women have shown their approval. "Our demonstrator will call by appointment only. A phone message to our local office will make sure he visits your home this week."

Most of the far-sighted publishers who were quick to recognize the economies of the Associated Press in its infancy have again shown their alertness by obtaining the exclusive rights in their respective cities to the Consolidated Press—the first service designed to avoid duplication and to furnish instead a distinct supplement to "spot" news reports.

The Consolidated Press Assn. Executive Offices, Evening Star Building Washington, D. C.

Some of the other firms, large and small, might well take a lesson on how local newspaper advertising can be used to aid and dignify their agents. As yet, direct selling firms have not sensed what they can do with newspaper advertising to back agents; their vision so far has been glued mostly to the "agents wanted" in the classified, and the newspapers, rather sympathizing with the local retailer, have not tried to awaken the direct sellers from their sleep.

The Lalance & Grosjean Manufacturing Company of New York City have hit upon an ingenious idea which makes their newspaper space doubly productive. The company markets agate and grey ware utensils for the kitchen. Twelve utensils are illustrated in white against a dark background. Toward the rear of the rotogravure advertisement appears a woman who is getting ready to use a roaster for meat and vegetables. Under the head, "That delicious crown-roast of lamb!" the copy talks uses.

At the left appears a list of the twelve utensils each with a letter beside it. The same letter appears in the picture under the appropriate utensil. In the list a square which can be checked is published.

But the real "wallop" is supplied by a coupon which is marked "Start-a-set coupon." An arrow points at a perforated vegetable cooker which may be obtained direct from the company for 85c and thus start a woman buying the whole outfit. The "start-a-set" idea, already a proven success in the jewelry field, has possibilities elsewhere. It enables this manufacturer, certainly, to present a whole family of reasonably common-place products in a new light.

Much thought has to be given to the introduction of a new product.

Some months past the H. K. McCann Advertising Agency wanted to get the smoking public on the western coast acquainted with what was known as "The new Melachrino No. 8, pocket tin" of 24 cigarettes. Hand lettered copy which played up the new cigarette made the free introductory offer of a free 50c tin of the new cigarette with each tin of 100 Melachrino No. 9 "while the introductory supply lasts." The dealer's part in such a picture has to be figured out in advance so he will be protected.

Sometimes on volume business he will take a small profit to draw customers, as is undoubtedly the case on the "Wear-Ever" Aluminum sales staged in co-operation with the manufacturer.

A soap manufacturer sells department stores a quantity order of six or eight soap products to be retailed for $1 and a special market basket to be given. This introduces and samples some of his lesser known brands, gives the department store buyer a striking special, and appeals to the bargain instinct of the woman. One store moved several thousand dollars worth of soap in one sale under this plan.

Congoleum's nation-wide sale, which involved full pages in newspapers and special prices with furniture dealers everywhere co-operating, shows how a special proposition may put pep into a manufacturer's "week." Squibb offered during a special week a box of several lesser known products from its line to all who bought at least $1 worth, including one Squibb article, from the druggist. Such a stunt wins good will from the trade as well as sales.

advertising agency. The result was it was decided to put on a "special deal" for a limited period, an extremely attractive special offer to the public which would give an unusually good reason for buying. The advertising was planned and placed, the salesmen were sold the plan and sent out fired with new enthusiasm. They went out and canvassed new and old dealers with the special proposition and the advertising.

The dealers bought much more cheerfully than before and in turn put more effort into the merchandise through window displays, counter displays and in other ways. The local newspaper merchandising chaps went over the top in many towns.

Thus were sales speeded up in a period of hesitation, giving the manufacturer a running start for the more stable and prosperous post-election period which appears to stretch ahead.

The right kind of a "special deal to the public," properly merchandised and locally advertised in the press, can be a first aid to sales which will set totals clambering.

A striking example of how a special proposition stimulus can be put across may be taken from the plan used by the Pillsbury Flour Mills Company, maker of Pillsbury's Pancake Flour.

In large space, the housewife was told to "Ask your grocer about this $4 aluminum pancake griddle for $1.69." A huge griddle was shown and the copy predicted that any woman who obtained this griddle by buying a four-pound package or three small packages and sending a sales slip and $1.69 would be sure to make griddle cakes oftener.

The advertisement effectively sold the idea of owning this griddle at the same time it did the flour. Special signs with

STUDENTS HELPED TO BUY OWN PAPERS

Washington Journalism Professor and Publisher Evolve Stock Partnership Scheme—Declare Country Press Greatest Opportunity

A plan whereby graduates of the University of Washington School of Journalism can own their own newspapers with a very limited amount of capital and whereby they can enter the field of journalism as publishers has proved itself practicable, according to its originators, M. L. Spencer, director of the University of Washington School of Journalism, and Sol H. Lewis, editor of the Lynden (Wash.) Tribune, an alumnus of the Washington School of Journalism.

"The School has given up training men primarily for metropolitan newspaper work," Dr. Spencer said in explaining the plan. "We believe that the most productive field for many men to invest their lives in is the community or rural newspaper field. For this reason we are teaching our students, along with the courses in news writing and editing, how to manage and make successes of their own papers."

In order to allow graduates an opportunity to invest their 4 years of study profitably, Dr. Spencer and Mr. Lewis have put in operation their plan to give students newspapers of their own. A newspaper is bought by either of these men and one or two graduates are placed in charge of building it up according to modern newspaper practice. A stock corporation is organized, with Dr. Spencer or Mr. Lewis retaining 51 per cent of the stock and the other 49 per cent in escrow for the new "owner."

The graduates are paid a good salary, in all cases more than they could earn on a city paper. In addition, they receive dividends on their 49 per cent of the stock, whenever dividends are declared. Instead of coming directly to them, however, the dividend goes as payment for the stock. Payments on stock are not demanded any faster than dividends are declared. As soon as the graduate's part of the stock is paid for, the plant is valued and all the stock is placed in escrow. The remaining 51 per cent of the stock is then acquired by the graduate as was the first 49 per cent—from dividends.

"It isn't entirely altruistic," Dr. Spencer explained. "It's a good business proposition for the man that puts up the money, too. The principal reason for the plan, however, is to set graduates up in business."

Under this plan the man or men who are placed on the newspaper are enabled to own it within 3 to 5 years, in addition to drawing good salaries all the time. The only investment the graduate has to make is a small deposit of cash—$500 or $1,000—sometimes less—enough to keep him on the job during the first discouraging 2 or 3 months.

At the present time 7 newspapers in the State of Washington are owned by graduates of the School of Journalism which have been purchased or are being purchased under this plan. The possibilities of extension of the plan have been limited so far only by the scarcity of newspapers for sale.

GIVE HARVARD AD PRIZES JAN. 1

Jury of Judges Meets in Cambridge—$8,500 in Prizes

The jury which will select the first year's winners of the Harvard University advertising awards founded last year by Edward W. Bok, of Philadelphia, met Dec. 4 and 5 at the Harvard Business School, Cambridge, and considered the various advertisements submitted in the contest. It was announced that the winner will not be known before Jan. 1. Prizes totaling $8,500 are offered.

From among the hundreds of advertisements which have been submitted, the jury will select the best national campaign, the best local series, the person who has done the most in scientific research in advertising, the advertisement most effective in the use of English, most effective in the use of typography, most effective in the use of pictorial illustration, and the advertisement which accomplishes its purpose with the fewest words. The jury also will select the person who has done the most distinguished personal service in raising the standards of advertising during the year.

Members of the jury include: Philip Thomson, of the Western Electric Company and president of the Association of National Advertisers; H. K. McCann, of the H. K. McCann Advertising Agency, New York; George C. Sherman, of Sherman & LeBair Advertising Agency, New York; Milton Towne, of the Joseph Richards Advertising Agency, New York; E. W. Parsons, advertising manager of the Chicago Tribune; Harry Dwight Smith, of the Fuller & Smith Advertising Agency of Cleveland; O. C. Harn, of the National Lead Company; Dr. M. T. Copeland, director of the Bureau of Business Research of Harvard Business School, and Dr. Daniel Starch, professor of advertising, of the Harvard Business School.

THE POSTAL CASE

THE United States post office does not pay its way and there is no valid reason why it should.

That is the key-fact in the postal situation as revealed by the voluminous cost ascertainment report which the Postmaster General last week submitted to Congress, indicating a loss of $40,000,000 for 1923.

Since the advent of Burleson the public mind has been confused and official Washington has been astray on the fundamental principles of post office operation. The fact that it is a public accommodation, a business and social convenience, a public communications service, has been lost sight of in a vain pursuit of a totally false ideal.

Make the post office break even or pay a profit! That standard has been set up to supplant the ancient, fundamental principle of public accommodation and good service at any reasonable cost. Confusion is the harvest.

The post office is not a commercial institution, created to make profit or necessarily pay its way. No business man would accept it as a safe private venture if he were compelled to conserve the social and business obligations which the public has for more than a century been encouraged to impose upon this branch of government service. It would be a wild speculation. No private individual or corporation could do for the people, through postal service, what the government may do and very well do. The year that the post office earns the least operating "profit" may very well be the most profitable year of its career, from the general viewpoint of public welfare. Corporations deal in the concrete elements of cost, revenue and profit. Uncle Sam deals in elements of service, both direct and indirect, and regardless of expense when the cause is worthy.

Hence, all of the talk we have been hearing, and sometimes cheering, during the past ten years, of "great statesmanship," because in this or that political regime the post office was made to pay a "profit" on operations, has been absurd. It has dropped the curtain on the highest ideals of government service. Whether the post office lost $40,000,000 in last year's operations is of no more importance to the public than whether the Agricultural Department "lost" on every package of seed it handled, or cultured soil it examined, or hog remedies it experimented with. Did the Army show an operating profit? Did the Department of Justice close its books at the end of the year with a profit?

For thirty years, until 1911, the gross expenses of the Post Office exceeded revenues, and we were not in despair. Then politicians began to tell us that the post office was "just a great big business," which might be made to shower golden gains every year if operated by a simon-pure business man. When Burleson, of Texas, whooped up this idea and finally made a "profit" of $64,000,000 in 1918, he was acclaimed a business giant, in some quarters, but we know that he almost wrecked the machine.

In 1921 postal receipts were $163,000,000 less than postal revenues. In 1922 the operating deficit was $61,000,000. But the question on the lips of the public was not concerning these "losses," but concerned inadequate, confused mail service. However, and it is queer, the theory persists that a postmaster is efficient according to his "profit" showing.

Postmaster General New tells us now that $40,000,000 was "lost" last year and shows that second class mail was largely responsible. There is a great ad about it. Congress is to consider the question of recommending increased rates. Something must be done, it appears, to make the business idea of the post office work out. Yet, there is no public demand for a super-business "success" of the post office.

According to the cost ascertainment figures second class mail is costing more than three times the revenue paid in. The logic of "business" therefore calls for tripled rates.

The question of increased wages for postal employees is dragged in by the heels. It is supposed to be a trading point between the Postmaster General and the publishers. "How can we pay the employees living wages if we lose money on second class mail?" The answer is: According to your figures, if you triple second class rates you are still only "breaking even." If you add $70,000,000 in wage increases to your operating deficit and expect the users of second

PSALM XXXVII

Verses 1-3

Fret not thyself because of evil doers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity.

For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb.

Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed.

class privileges to yield their percentage you will multiply present rates seven or eight times.

But the big question is: Would there be any real equalization of the matter if you were to pass off to the public, in the form of increased cost of printed matter, your "problem" of deficit in postal operation?

Who paid the $40,000,000 postal deficit in 1923?

The public, in the form of taxes.

Who paid the postal deficit of $163,000,000 in 1921?

The public, in the form of taxes.

Did anyone hear of any complaint about it?

No, but we think we do remember some talk about incompetent service, and a zone system which had as an evil effect the segregation of public thought according to localities.

Many of the heaviest and largest circulating magazines are using express and railroad service, and multiple mailing points, to escape present rates and the abominable zone system. Those whose circulations warrant it have this way out, if postal rates are made excessive. Small publications, which cannot sustain express delivery, will be the ones to pay. That fact may not be important because of any economic reason, but we believe that it hits at the very heart of this question. A post office, conducted as a business, would let the little minority expressions of public opinion perish. A great government, recognizing the truth that it is minority opinion which is the very essence of the life of our form of government, would foster and encourage the small publication on terms equal to the great.

There are many valid elements to be considered. But the premise must be: The post office is a public institution, not for "profit," but for service.

KANSAS EDITORS CALL

EDITOR & PUBLISHER salutes the 24 editors composing the Kansas Daily Newspaper Advertising Association.

All honor to their intelligent view of the business they are in.

They have a state rich in material resources, populated by 300,000 American families who produce liberally and consume generously of the good things of life. The people are 98.4 per cent literate. They live in cities, towns and on farms. Their pride of good citizenship is manifested by lively appreciation of good homes, furnished with the conveniences and luxuries of modern life; wearing apparel and ornamentation of quality and style; liberal patronage of the arts and amusements; good food and plenty of it. Kansas people rightfully demand their share of the world's material comforts.

Kansas is, therefore, one of the nation's inviting markets. The business world naturally desires to trade in a community which wants good merchandise and can afford to buy it. The advertising columns of the newspaper complete the chain.

Our friends from the sunflower state, working in co-operation, propose to sell—what? Not a lot of claims as to their own magnified superiority. All they assert is that they produce reliable, respectable, enterprising newspapers which the people approve by regularly reading them. They propose to sell their market. They come to New York, center of the advertising world, and invite some 125 advertising men to dine with them and learn first-hand the reasons why Kansas newspapers believe they should be on national advertising schedules. They describe the sort of a man the Kansan is, tell of his industry and thrift, and by fact and figure indicate the stupendous wealth that lies in their land.

The advertising agents, being the accredited representatives of advertisers and anxious to find profitable markets for clients, are interested. A sound service is done.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER for a good many years has been preaching the gospel of co-operation among newspapers and newspaper men. It seems to us that this little incident, the New York call of the Kansas editors, will have great meaning to those who read this journal. We need not discuss the wasteful, destructive, blind competitive practices of the past. One by one they have met, or are meeting, a deserved fate. We need only point our readers to the brilliant achievements that co-operation is every day scoring for advertising, according to the new science. There is great progress. The well-conceived promotion of the Kansas Daily Newspaper Advertising Association is a valuable exhibit, commanding the congratulations of our craft.

No one has yet sprung the "publishers' subsidy" skit at Washington, but it will come. If postal rates are tripled the subscriber will pay the cost. If they are reduced, subscription rates will be lowered. If there has ever been a "subsidy" it was a readers' subsidy.

REMARKABLE CAREER

THE late William C. Reick was 25 years of age when James Gordon Bennett, Jr., made him chief editorial executive of the New York Herald.

Later he was associated with the management of the New York Times, for five years. He then acquired control of the New York Sun and New York Evening Sun and brought the latter publication to a high state of efficiency. When Mr. Munsey purchased these properties Mr. Reick gained control of the Journal of Commerce. His health was beginning to fail. He died at the age of 60.

Here was a remarkable career. Mr. Reick had wide acquaintance among influential business men. He lived in the inner circles of the social and commercial life of the metropolis. His is a conspicuous example of an editorial man winning success in the business field. He knew the ways of life. His knowledge gave him power.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

WHEN S. H. Robie, editor and publisher of the Chelsea (Mass.) Evening Record, recently purchased a two-story brick plant, which he plans to make the Record's permanent home, he was realizing on the ambition which had prompted him to acquire that newspaper 22 years ago.

S. H. ROBIE

Then he had come from the weekly field, hoping to head an efficient daily. At first, he had to be his own editor, reporter, bookkeeper, advertising solicitor, collector, and make-up man, with a force of two men and a boy to assist him. The Record was a 6-column, 4-page paper, printed on a two-revolution Cottrell press. Two years after he had purchased the daily, his plant was destroyed by fire.

Publication was soon resumed, however, and Mr. Robie began to prosper. Four years ago a Duplex press was installed.

Mr. Robie went from a New Hampshire farm into a country village printing office at the age of 17 where he worked for $3 a week and "pulled off" an edition of 1,200 copies weekly on a Washington hand press. Later he entered the employ of Omar A. Towne at Franklin, N. H., where he remained for 18 years. During the greater part of the time, he was associated with Mr. Towne in the publication of the Franklin Transcript afterwards consolidated with the Merrimack Journal as the Journal-Transcript.

Mrs. Florence Riddick Boys, editor and owner of a Women's Page service, issued weekly from Plymouth, Ind., recently returned from a few weeks study in Washington, where she goes several times a year to get in touch with women's headquarters of various national organizations. Besides her non-political Woman's Page service, Mrs. Boys is the editor of a "Page of Particular Interest to Women," in the National Republican.

After taking Babe Ruth, home run king, on a 9,000 mile tour of the country, Christy Walsh, head of the newspaper syndicate bearing his name, returned to New York this week. On the tour which was arranged by Walsh, Ruth played 15 exhibition games. Ruth was met by mayors and committees in every city.

Mrs. Carolyn Lisberge has taken charge of the department on the training of children, syndicated by International Feature Service, New York, four times a week, and will begin writing articles for the feature Dec. 29. She is the mother of three children, and specialized on child training in college.

Speaking about child training, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., contributed an article on that subject this week for the Women's News Service, Inc., New York, which

PARIS CAMERAMEN ORGANIZE

Victor Console of London Daily Mail President of New Group

American and British press and cinema photographers in Paris have just formed themselves into an association, with the title The Anglo-American Press Photographers and News Cinema Association of Paris. The president of the new organization is Mr. Victor Console, special photographer in Paris of the London Daily Mail. Edwin Getlin, of the International News Reel, is vice-president, with John A. Chapman, Pacific and Atlantic Photos, secretary and treasurer.

Members of the Association feel they can much more effectively protect their interest as an association than individually. Dealings with the Prefecture de Police and government authorities will be greatly facilitated. They will see that each member regularly exercising the profession of news photographer or news cinema operator is properly protected. Also they will endeavor to make arrangements so that news photographers visiting the country for a short time get the same treatment as local men.

says San Francisco Chronicle

IN writing of their Ludlow, Mr. Perry Epstein, Advertising Manager of the San Francisco Chronicle writes:

"Congratulations upon the new typefaces furnished by Ludlow. Your Caslon True-Cut series is most satisfactory for all advertising purposes, and I am glad it is being added to our Ludlow equipment.

"My experience is that advertisers are exceptionally well pleased with the Chronicle's Ludlow set-ups. Printing surely is making marked strides, at this time, and it must be a source of satisfaction to all Ludlow users to know that the Ludlow Company is keeping in the very front rank of this advance."

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

DIRECTING THE FLOW OF ADVERTISING

"LOCAL merchants and retailers can direct the flow of advertising into the daily newspapers by exerting their influence on the travelling representatives with whom they come into contact and over whom they exert an influence to their own advantage. If they accrue the full benefits to be derived from the expenditures of the manufacturer in advertising they will send back word asking more space in local papers, which seek those markets permitting an intensive cultivation."—F. Gay Davis, Western Manager, Bureau of Advertising, A.N.P.A.

ADVERTISING AND DISTRIBUTION

"ADVERTISING is the lighthouse which helps the consumers find what they want when they want it. Fundamentals of salesmanship should be used in advertising copy. Emotion controls desire; desire controls decision; so the advertising man must make the appeal to the heart, where the emotion is generated. Advertising is the long distance telephone from your store to the home of the consumer, with charges reversed. Advertising is the big factor in distribution. It is a big help, not only to the advertiser, the merchant, but to the buyer, the consumer."—W. C. Murden, of the University of Iowa, before Des Moines Advertising Club.

NEWSPAPERS THE UNIVERSITY OF TODAY

"THE newspaper is the University of Today. It is perhaps the most important factor in the steady rising of the level of intelligence of America. In millions of instances perhaps, it is the only printed intelligence that our citizens consult. One of the most important characteristics of the modern newspaper is its cosmopolitanism. The newspaper is the enemy of provincialism and provincialism is a threat against any social organization. The newspaper develops that something in the individual which inspires him to look beyond his own little world and teaches him to develop his community on broader lines out of the experience of many other communities. You cannot read the modern newspaper and stay inside of your own immediate circle mentally."—Dr. B. M. Rastall, Manager, Californians, Inc.

WHEN "GOOD-MIXERS" BECOME BORES

"NOW, I will try to say a few words on the actual solicitation of advertising. As I grow older I frequently become resentful at two things. One is that when the party is over at night nobody seems to have sense enough to go home. And the second is that the salesman feels he must ask me how my golf game is before getting to what he has come to see me for. I believe he should come in with a little program. I am not objecting to a little gossip, but if a man comes in to see me I want to know what he has come in to see me for first. We can take up the social side of it afterward. A salesman needs no apology to come in and talk directly of his subject. I am not unsympathetic. I like, so far as possible, to maintain those contacts, but I cannot maintain them on a social basis."—Gilbert Kinney, of the J. Walter Thompson Company, before New York Times Advertising Staff.

THE PLACE OF THE PRESS

"THE press has become the eyes and ears of the world, and, to a great extent, its voice. It is the substance which puts humanity in contact with all its parts. It is the spokesman of the weak and the appeal of the suffering. It tears us away from our selfishness and moves us to acts of kindness and charity. It is the advocate constantly pleading before the bar of public opinion. It holds up for review the acts of our officials and of those men in higher places who have it in their power to advance peace or endanger it."—Judge J. Fisher, before Edmonton Philosophical Society.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

JOHN A. DICKSON, for the past six years general manager of the Chicago Herald & Examiner, has acquired an interest in the Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company has been elected secretary of the concern. No other change has been made in the personnel of the organization. The other officers continue as before: Ernest I. Mitchell, president; Paul E. Faust, treasurer; C. H. Linn and Stanley G. Swanberg, vice-presidents. Mr. Dickson for many years has been prominent in the advertising business and has been counsellor on retail and national advertising operations.

N. W. Ayer & Son have announced that they will establish a Pacific Northwest branch at Portland, Ore. George H. Thornley, one of the members of the firm, and S. E. Peacock, manager of the San Francisco branch, visited various cities of the Pacific Northwest in making the selection of the new location.

A. J. Lasker, head of the Lord & Thomas Advertising Agency, arrived in San Francisco Dec. 7, to confer principally with the firm's California clients, among whom are the Southern Pacific Company, Dollar Steamship Lines, American Tobacco Company, Union Oil Company, California Prune and Apricot Growers' Association, California Fruit Growers' Exchange, California Walnut Growers' Association, the All-Year Club of Southern California, California Olive Association, California Lima Bean Growers' Association and Gantner & Mattern.

Edmund L. Judson, for the past year in charge of production with Evans & Barnhill, Inc., New York advertising agency, was this week promoted to space buyer.

G. H. E. Hawkins is new copy and art director of the Brandt Advertising Company, Chicago. He was formerly with Critchfield & Co., Chicago.

I. Dorfman has obtained a controlling interest in the Kings Advertising Agency, New York. He was formerly advertising manager of L. W. Sweet, Inc., New York. At one time he was with the New York office of Lord & Thomas.

Joseph E. Hanson, advertising manager of L. Bamberger & Son, Newark, N. J., department store, has resigned to start an advertising agency of his own with offices in Newark and New York.

90 Per Cent of World's Motor Cars on Our Highways

There are 16,000,000 motor vehicles in the United States — approximately 90 per cent of all in the world.

This total is being increased at the rate of 4,000,000 a year.

What is the saturation point?

Ask any one of the 16,000,000 motorists trying to make headway through the countless traffic jams on some of our concrete highways. He will tell you, from the standpoint of comfort and safety in driving, the saturation point is already in sight.

Not a very encouraging outlook, is it, for the man about to buy his first automobile?

So you see car owners and prospective car owners are both interested — and have an immediate task confronting them.

What are you going to do about it? Even now you are curtailing the use of your car because you do not want to endure the discomfort, inconvenience and danger of traveling on congested, narrow highways.

Your highway officials need your support. They can't do much unless you stand squarely behind them.

To delay building more highways wide enough and strong enough to meet all the requirements of modern traffic will cost you more money than will an adequate system of Concrete Roads and Streets.

250 ATTEND DINNER TO ROWE STEWART

Philadelphia Record Executive Feted by Friends—Movement Launched to Bring 1926 A. A. C. W. Meet to Quaker City

ROWE STEWART

Advertising men of Philadelphia and New York gave a banquet Dec. 9, in the Ritz Carlton Hotel, Philadelphia, in honor of Rowe Stewart, recently elected vice-president and general manager of the Philadelphia Record.

A movement was set in motion at the banquet to bring the 1926 A. A. C. W. convention to Philadelphia.

Mr. Stewart's activities in national advertising affairs date back to 1914, when he was elected chairman of the "On-to-Toronto" Committee of the Poor Richard Club to interest advertising men in the convention of the A. A. C. W. held later that year at Toronto.

In 1915 he headed the same committee for the "On-to-Chicago" convention for the Associated Clubs. That year they brought back the convention for Philadelphia the following year, 1916.

In 1916 Mr. Stewart was made chairman of the Committee of the Poor Richard Club that made the preparations for the convention and that later acted as hosts for the hundreds of delegates from all parts of the world who attended. The Poor Richard Club elected Mr. Stewart president, an office he held for two years. He was made president of the A. A. C. W. 1920-21, and is at present serving with past-presidents of that organization on the Advisory Committee to President Lou E. Holland.

In addition to the Record, Mr. Stewart has been connected at various times with the Philadelphia North American, New York Globe, Washington Herald, and the Philadelphia Times. For three years, from 1910 to 1913 he was in the advertising agency business with the Tracy-Parry-Stewart Company.

Those who arranged the banquet in his honor included: John Clark Sims, Jarvis A. Wood, Karl Bloomingdale, Howard C. Story, Harry Appleton, C. A. Stinson, W. H. H. Neville, P. C. Staples, John M. Fogelsanger, and Gordon H. Cilley. More than 250 friends of Mr. Stewart attended, including 25 who journeyed to Philadelphia from New York for the occasion.

MARGIN SPACE IS ADVERTISING

Must Be So Computed in Postal Rates, Is Ruling

Postmasters have been informed from the office of the Postmaster General that all marginal space associated with advertising must, hereafter, be computed in postal rates as advertising.

When a page is 50 per cent advertising and 50 per cent news the marginal spaces must be split in the rate calculation. If advertising appears on a page, the back of which is blank, the blank page must be paid for at the advertising rate.

The order says: "When a publisher follows the method of measuring the columns devoted to advertising and to matter other than advertising, respectively, the margins should be ignored entirely and only the actual space covered by the printed columns taken into consideration. For example, if the printed columns are 22 inches long, excluding the title and date line, with eight columns to the page, making 176 column inches to the page, and 88 inches are devoted to advertising, such matter would constitute 50 per cent of the page. On this basis the portion designated as advertising and

KOHLSAAT'S ASHES TO REST IN WASHINGTON CATHEDRAL

THE urn containing the ashes of Herman H. Kohlsaat, Chicago newspaper publisher, will be placed in the crypt of Washington Cathedral "as an acknowledgment of his constructive moral influence as a citizen in government and journalism." Mr. Kohlsaat died in Washington Oct. 17.

On Nov. 29, the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, made public the following statement issued by Cathedral authorities:

"In recognition of the public service rendered by private citizens, so conspicuously exemplified in the life of Herman H. Kohlsaat, whose unselfish counsel was always welcomed by those hearing official responsibility, and as an acknowledgment of his constructive moral influence as a citizen in government and journalism, the urn containing the ashes of the late Herman H. Kohlsaat will rest permanently in the crypt of the Washington Cathedral."

Woodrow Wilson and several Church dignitaries are buried in the Cathedral vault, which lies beneath the floor of the center aisle of that part of the structure known as Bethlehem Nativity Chapel.

that as other than advertising would each include its proper proportion of the marginal space and date line."

Plan $5,000,000 Power Development

A $5,000,000 development in connection with the water supply for the paper mill of the Backus-Brooks Company of Minneapolis, Minn., at Kenora, Ont., requiring employment of 500 men and resulting in increasing the output of this mill, making it one of the largest in the country, has been authorized by the Canadian government, according to word received in Minneapolis this week.

Ten-Page Classified Section

The Rockford (Ill.) Register-Gazette carried a ten page classified section on Tuesday, December 9, eight pages of the section composed of Christmas Gift Suggestion ads. Practically every large and small merchant in the city was represented. One advertiser ran 75 small ads. C. E. Phillips, classified manager, said the copy was written and sold in five days.

N. Y. TIMES ENDOWS U. S. BOOK OF BIOGRAPHY

Gives $500,000 Through Publisher Adolph Ochs Toward Preparation of Authoritative Biographical Dictionary

The New York Times, through action of Adolph S. Ochs, publisher, on December 6 advanced $500,000 towards publication of an authoritative dictionary of American biography, the American Council of Learned Societies Devoted to Humanistic Studies announced this week in Washington, D. C.

Consisting of 20 volumes the dictionary will record the life histories of 20,000 illustrious Americans, not including any of the living.

The Times will be neither maker nor publisher of the dictionary, and will assume no control over its conduct and no responsibility for its contents.

The function of the newspaper, according to J. F. Jameson, chairman of the management committee representing the council, is simply that of making possible preparation of the reference book.

The permanent committee will consist of seven members. Those already named are J. F. Jameson, chairman; John H. Finley, Frederic L. Paxton, Iphigene Ochs Sulzberger, Carl Van Doren and Charles Warren. The seventh member will be the editor-in-chief who is to be picked by those already on the committee.

The editorial work will be done in Washington because of the advantages offered there by the Congressional Library. The first volume is expected to appear within four years. This will be followed by fifteen volumes at the rate of three a year.

STATE AD CLUBS ORGANIZE

Illinois Groups Elect W. Frank McClure President in Chicago

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—Representatives of more than fifteen advertising associations and clubs throughout the state of Illinois met in Chicago, December 8, at the invitation of the Advertising Council of the Chicago Association of Commerce and effected a state organization of advertising clubs. W. Frank McClure, vice-president of Albert Frank & Co., was elected president; S. O. Blair of Peoria, vice-president, Miss Minerva J. Agur of the Chicago Woman's Advertising Club, secretary; and Charles J. Scheetz of Joliet, treasurer.

The purpose of the association is to develop local advertising clubs.

It was decided to hold an annual convention, the first in Springfield, early in April.

Business Editors to Washington

The National Conference of Business Paper Editors will hold a Washington meeting, Dec. 15. Speakers include General Lord, director of the budget, and Secretary of Commerce Hoover.

DAILY'S HOME A LIGHTHOUSE

THE new home of the Miami (Fla.) Daily News will serve as a lighthouse as well as a publication plant when completed. Atop the tower of the structure, which will rise 285 feet above Biscayne Bay, a beacon light will be placed visible 50 miles away and serving to guide both north and south bound vessels. The tower will be on the Spanish style, a copy of the Giralda tower in Seville, Spain. James M. Cox, former governor of Ohio and publisher of Ohio newspapers, is owner of the Daily News.

REPORTERS WIN $3,000 OF MURDER REWARD

Goldstein and Mulroy Get $1,500 Apiece for Solving Franks' Slaying While On Chicago Daily News Staff

Alvin H. Goldstein and James W. Mulroy, newspaper reporters, this week received $1,500 apiece from the $6,000 reward offered for solution of the Robert Franks murder mystery, for which Richard A. Loeb and Nathan F. Leopold Jr., are serving life sentences. Six other men shared in the reward.

Both reporters, at the time of the murder were on the staff of the Chicago Daily News, with which newspaper Mulroy is still affiliated. Goldstein is now employed by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

In solving the murder mystery the reporters developed an angle overlooked by the police. They went out to Chicago University and obtained typewritten class notes prepared by Leopold and Loeb months before. They compared these with the typewritten ransom letter sent to the slain boy's father. The typing was identical. Confronted with this evidence a confession was soon obtained.

For their work Goldstein and Mulroy each received a $100 check and a commendatory letter from Victor F. Lawson, publisher of the Daily News.

The beneficiaries in the $6,000 reward were selected from 102 persons involved in the case. Jacob Franks, the slain boy's father, offered $5,000 reward and Police Chief Collins $1,000 more. Policemen and public officials were eliminated.

G. HERB PALIN, SLOGANEER, "DOES HIS STUFF" WHILE THOUSANDS CHEER

$500 Every Hour Flows In to Show His Magic Power—"Remembrance Value" Is the Way to Make Your Advertising Pay

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

HE handed me his card. On it was engraved: "G. Herb Palin," and beneath, in parentheses, were the words—"The Highest Paid Writer in the World." Of course I was impressed. "Yes," said he, "I am paid anywhere from $1 to $500 an hour and I'm kept of the A. A. C. W. to be held next May at Houston, Tex: "No advertising man should fail to hit the great Southwestern Trail." "Houston, Texas, U. S. A., Be There on the Tenth of May." "There," he interrupted himself, "that last one's the best. See, it gives the speed of an octuple press. They came from his lips all folded, ready for delivery. I wore out pencils trying to keep up with him.

A crowd began to gather. We were in the gorgeous lounge of the Advertising Club of New York. Those who edged closer and closer to the slogan vendor were men trained in superlatives.

G. Herb Palin was displaying the bait with which he had landed the largest advertisers of the nation. He was giving proof of his "remembrance value."

Slogan after slogan tripped from his tongue. They danced out like maidens bound to a May party. They roared out, like steamboat sirens. They boomed out like organ notes.

And he ended it all by giving his rates. "Isn't he wonderful?" asked one of the advertising men from the crowd when the show ended.

This man was once a reporter, even as you and I.

On the staff of the New York World from 1902 to 1903, he was writing news, but was handicapped because he couldn't remember dates. One day, he stumbled across that ancient rhyme of the months.

"By Golly," he said to himself, "that's a good way to remember how many days 'hath December.'

"Wonder if the same stunt couldn't be put to work to make people remember what soap they should use, what soup they should eat, or what shirt they should wear?"

And he gave up his job as reporter on the strength of this idea, and set to work to write and sell slogans. He has kept it up now for 21 years.

Of course success didn't greet him when he first opened the door to his slogan career. He made his hat his office, however, and made his feet do the work of a centipede.

"What's the use of vast research departments," he contended. "The man who knows nothing about the business he intends to advertise can write the best copy.

"Let him do as I do. Simply get in to see the highest executive. Go beyond the advertising manager. I show this high executive what I have done in the past, and ask permission to try to do something for him.

"Then I begin to ask him about his business. I get the highlights from this conversation. From these I write my slogans. Within 20 minutes to an hour's time, I convince and sell him, charging $100 for one, $200 for 20, or $1,000 for 100 lines.

"Anyone could do the same thing. The average person fails in not practicing continually as I do, making up rhymes and slogans about everything I see at all times.

"And, of course," he added, "no one else has this," and he patted a big album, which contained, he said, 1,000 testimonials from the nation's biggest advertisers.

"Last week," he reminisced, "I came to New York from Los Angeles. On the way, I stopped off at Chicago. Riding in a taxi, I passed the office of a radio manufacturer called the Operadio Corporation.

"Immediately Operadio slogans began to buzz about in my head. I motioned the driver to stop, jumped from the taxi, and rushed into the office.

"Within 30 minutes, I had sold a slogan, receiving a $195 radio machine in payment.

"I went to the station and caught the New York train. In the same sleeping car with me were the presidents of the Vergex Vitamin Company and the Carbola Paint Company.

"We soon found ourselves in conversation in the smoking compartment. Before bedtime, I had sold one $500 worth of slogans, the other $700 worth. I had made $1,395 on the trip.

"And when I reached New York the trip had taken me only the customary four days.

"This," he concluded, "is not quite 100 per cent efficient. But it was a fairly successful trans-Continental trip."

While Mr. Palin is "proud in possession" of his sloganeering ability, he has ambition.

"Thousands of people have asked me to try and do it," he explained.

"I have two books coming out next spring, one a collection of children's stories, the other called 'Rhymes of the Times, or the Better Thoughts of a Worse Man,' but they are nothing.

"You know," he said, "how no one now sings more than the first verse?"

"Well," he ended, "my life ambition is to write a song to take the place of the 'Star Spangled Banner.'

"It would be a national anthem all could remember."

G. HERB PALIN, GRAND MARSHAL OF LEXICONS

busy most of the time. I now write slogans for 700 of the largest firms in the United States and Canada.

"I am G. Herb Palin, without a competitor on earth."

Mr. Palin, by way of aside to those few who may never have heard of him, is the record breaking sloganeer of the century—the chap who teases the advertisement reader by saying:

"Everyone who buys a car should know what Timken Roller Bearings Are."

Lures Pierce Arrow purchasers declaring:

"Pride of its Makers Makes You Proud in Possession."

"Built on Honor to Honor Its Builders."

A man who writes a slogan a minute and collects immediately. And he is proudest to call himself an advertising man, honorary or life member of 36 A. A. C. W. clubs, and poet laureate of the Pacific Coast Advertising Clubs.

He doesn't mind confiding, however, that he is the fellow responsible for the slogan "heard 'round the world"—"Safety First."

"My kingdom for your secret," I cried. Fortunately, he gave it to me for nothing, which was about the same thing.

"It is so simple," he said.

"The straight line, you may know, is the shortest distance between two points. The shortest line, in other words, is the shortest distance between the advertiser and the consumer.

"To write copy that sells, all one need do is to tell the story in the best and fewest possible words, plus a remembrance value. That's what I tell my clientele. Anyone else may do the same thing.

"I get my remembrance value by rhyme and alliteration. The word's greatest aid to memory is rhyme. Alliteration is next best.

"In other words crystallize your salesmanship.

"Here's some examples for you, slogans, written for the international convention place, the date, and the injunction to be there."

"Right," I admitted. But G. Herb Palin was in dead earnest now. He began reeling off slogans with

CITRUS BODY REPORTS ON BIG AD DRIVE

California Fruit Growers Exchange Tells How Sunkist Advertising was Conducted—Spends Less Than One Cent Per Person for Selling

How "Sunkist" was made a household word in the United States by advertising is told in a report of the advertising department of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange made public this week.

"The market for oranges and lemons is people, and it is the purpose of the Exchange advertising plan to seek out the merits and many uses of citrus fruits and keep these facts continuously and effectively before as many people as possible," the report states.

"To accomplish this with any considerable percentage of the 120 million people who comprise the American market, requires a comprehensive program. Although its advertising investments are large in the aggregate, the Exchange expends less than one cent per person annually to get its selling messages before the consuming public.

"These messages during the past season were broadcast principally through 53 million Sunkist full-color pages in magazines with national circulation and 175 million advertising insertions in the daily newspapers throughout the United States and Canada. Supplementing this major effort, posters, farm papers, trade papers and thousands of window displays were employed in an endeavor to acquaint every one with sound reasons for his greater use of oranges and lemons.

"The advertising activities of the Exchange are synchronized as closely as possible with the selling program. When the merchandising problem presented by the excess of small sized oranges became apparent, the newspaper advertising campaign was completely rewritten to emphasize the quality of these small oranges, the attractive values offered and the particular uses to which small sizes are adapted. The advertising and merchandising support was of material assistance in the handling of this extreme size situation.

"While the principal objective of Exchange advertising is now, as it was in the first campaign 17 years ago, to increase the total consumption of citrus fruit without particular regard to source or brand, emphasis is laid on the advantages of the California fruit, particularly the Exchange 'Sunkist' and 'Red Ball' trade-marked brands. Advertising and dealer service work have assisted in the substantial progress made by the recently established 'Red Ball' brand in the southern territory, where it is principally sold."

MERGER IN MODESTO

News Buys Herald—Will Print Both Papers from New Plant

(By Telegraph, to Editor & Publisher)

MODESTO, Cal., Dec. 8.—E. L. Sherman, publisher of the Evening News, has purchased the Morning Herald. The Herald will be maintained as a morning paper and the news as an evening paper. H. E. Conway, city editor of the Evening News, has been advanced to editor of the News, while Dan. L. Beebe, who has been news editor of the News has been made editor of the Herald. H. P. Walls, present business manager of the Evening News, will be business manager for both.

Both plants will be moved about Jan. 1, into a new $50,000 building now being erected by the News. The Evening News will continue its full U. P. leased wire while the A. P. leased wire will be in operation for the Herald.

The new building being built to house the newspaper's plant will have a floor area of 14,000 square feet. Every modern convenience is being installed.

League Protests on Church Ad

Use of Episcopal without Protestant preceding it in newspaper classified religious advertisements is "erroneous, misleading, and illegal," according to the National Church League, in an open letter of protest to the New York Times made public recently. Attention was called to the fact that the only constitutional and legal title is "The Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America." In classified advertising the full title can be limited only to "Protestant Episcopal."

2,000 Billboards Banned from Park

Nearly 2,000 billboards and signs have been removed from the Adirondack Park in Northern New York this season as a result of the law passed at the last legislature prohibiting signboards within the limits of the park. The work has been done by the Conservation Commission through the forest rangers and property owners.

Former Reporter Now Playwright

Dana Burnet, a former newspaper reporter, has written a play called "The Habitual Husband," which is scheduled for first production in New York about Dec. 20. Burnet was on the staff of the New York Sun from 1911 to 1918. He is the author of a volume of poems and "The Shining Adventure," and a novel, both written while he was reporting for the Sun.

Daily Advertises Advertising

The Omaha (Neb.) World-Herald's service department has prepared for syndication to newspapers a series of 12 full page advertisements to interest readers in advertising. Henry Doorly, business manager, is in charge. The copy, cleverly prepared, aims to accomplish for display advertising, what the World-Herald has done before in the classified field.

San Francisco Veteran Retired

W. F. Bogart, financial manager of the San Francisco Examiner, has been retired after a continuous service of nearly 45 years. He joined the Examiner when it was purchased by Senator George Hearst, father of William Randolph Hearst.

SHIPPING BOARD AD POLICIES PROBED

House Committee Seeking to Determine Whether Favoritism Was Used in Letting Contracts—E. L. Davis, Chairman

Whether or not favoritism was shown in advertising contracts let by the United States Emergency Fleet Corporation is being probed in Washington by the House Special committee investigating the Shipping Board. The hearing is expected to end before the end of the month, when a report will be made.

James M. Boring, advertising manager of the corporation, testifying Dec. 8, denied emphatically the contracts were let only to friends.

He told the committee he "took no stock" in the story that an attempt was being made to "injure" the name of the Leviathan through unfounded newspaper articles.

He said the Leviathan was the most widely advertised ship in the world and, therefore, anything about the vessel was "news" and that frequently what was "good news" in one sense was "bad news" for the ship.

Newspaper editors, he asserted, were interested in selling their papers and not passenger tickets on the Leviathan, and he pointed out that an accident to the vessel, even if minor, would be news, whereas a similar accident to another ship probably would not receive so much attention.

English newspapers, however, Mr. Boring said, had a different attitude and frequently accidents to British ships were "soft pedaled" by the English press.

Representative E. L. Davis, Democrat, of Tennessee, heads the House committee.

NEIGHBORS

When Ephraim Crosby made a clearing far out on Valley Road and built his house, he had no neighbors. He lived an independent life, producing on the farm practically all that his family ate and wore. Emergencies—sickness and fire and protection of his homestead from prowlers—he met for himself. Later he had neighbors, one five and another eight miles away. Sometimes he helped them with their planting and harvesting, and they helped him in turn. Produce was marketed in the town, twenty miles along the cart-road.

Today Ephraim Crosby's grandchildren still live in the homestead, farming its many acres. The next house is a good mile away. But the Crosbys of today are not isolated. They neighbor with a nation. They buy and sell in the far city as well as in the county-seat. They have at their call the assistance and services of men in Chicago or New York, as well as men on the next farm.

Stretching from the Crosbys' farm living-room are telephone wires that lead to every part of the nation. Though they live in the distant countryside, the Crosbys enjoy the benefits of national telephone service as wholly as does the city dweller. The plan and organization of the Bell System has extended the facilities of the telephone to all types of people. By producing a telephone service superior to any in the world at a cost within the reach of all to pay, the Bell System has made America a nation of neighbors.

AD. MEN PUT QUALITY ABOVE CIRCULATION

"Dry News Must Go," Trade Paper Editors Told—Declare Advertiser Puffs and Blurbs Dilute Reader Interest

Business papers which print puffs and blurbs for advertisers are diluting the interest of their editorial columns and impairing their efficiency as advertising mediums, was the consensus of opinion at a "Truth" party held by the New York Editorial Conference of the Associated Business Papers, Inc., at a luncheon at the Astor Hotel, Friday, Dec. 5.

A three-cornered discussion was held in which the business paper viewpoint was expressed by Frank C. Wight, editor of Engineering News-Record, the agency viewpoint by M. L. Wilson, vice-president of the Blackman Company, Inc., and the advertiser's attitude by P. C. Gunion of the Hyatt Roller Bearing Company.

Mr. Wight said that what editors desire most from agencies and advertisers is an appreciation of the editorial viewpoint of news, which should automatically eliminate the demand for "puffs."

Mr. Wilson, speaking for the agencies, asked that trade papers be made so bright and interesting they would not be laid aside unopened by subscribers. "Too technical and too dry" was his criticism of business papers.

"The man who reads the Saturday Evening Post with enjoyment does not become a ponderous, dull fellow when he turns to read his trade paper," he said. "Editors should keep this in mind in preparing copy. Dry news must go."

"All groups of publishers will see the necessity of strengthening their editorial departments. Advertisers follow readers and readers follow interesting reading. Agencies are becoming less interested in total circulation, and more interested in qualitative circulation."

More comprehensive, interesting editorial matter was asked of business paper publishers by P. C. Gunion, who, although not able to be present prepared a paper which was read at the luncheon, giving the attitude of the advertiser.

"Editorial quality rather than circulation is influencing buyers of space. Filling trade papers with handouts puffing advertisers makes them uninteresting to the reader, and therefore of little value to the advertiser."

Mr. Gunion scored special editions, declaring they were usually too large to be read, vitiating the value of the advertising carried.

DAILY BACKS NAT'L SPELLING BEE

Louisville Courier-Journal Evolves Plan for Picking U. S. Champion

The Louisville Courier-Journal, as a promotion project, has launched a National Spelling Bee, and invited newspapers in the chief cities of the country to aid in the plan. It is claimed to be the first national spelling bee ever attempted by a newspaper.

City champions are to be selected by the various newspapers, the winners to be sent to Washington to compete for the national championship. J. A. Humphreys, Jr., of the Courier-Journal staff, is national director of the contest.

The prizes will be well above $2,000. The prize list will increase as the number of participating papers grows. The entrance fee charged in each city is calculated to cover only cost of management and organization and the prize list, a generous percentage of the receipts automatically going into the prize list fund.

"The national bee," said Mr. Humphreys, "is, we believe, a newspaper promotion stunt of the widest significance. No other plan that I have seen effects 'hook-up' with so great a percentage of the city's population. Not only are school children taken in, but we find adults as eager, or more eager, to get the fun, as the children. For this reason our plans have been made so comprehensive that ministers, lawyers, doctors, parent-teacher bodies, luncheon clubs, alumni organizations, commercial and religious bodies are entered."

NEW QUEBEC PAPER COMPANY

Quebec Paper Mills, Inc., Organized With Capitalization of $13,500,000

The Quebec Paper Mills, Ltd., was incorporated last week by provincial letters patent with a capitalization of $13,500,000. Frank Clarke, of the Gulf Pulp and Paper Company, and also acting president for the Rothermere interests, heads the new company, the promoters also including several attorneys of Montreal. The head office will be in Quebec.

Transfer to the new company of 2,000 square miles of pulpwood along the Manicouagan River was effected on Saturday. These limits had been leased in November, 1923, by the province, and the transfer is preliminary to the construction by the Rothermere interests of new pulp and paper mills within a few miles of Quebec, since a clause of the lease provided that the successful bidder must erect a mill within eight miles of one of the 18 cities of the Province. The object of this proviso was to give work to residents of cities and relieve unemployment. It is generally believed that the new mill will be near Quebec, and Sillery and St. Romuald are mentioned as a likely choice. To meet the requirements work must be started in April at the latest. A short distance from the proposed sites the St. Regis Pulp and Paper Company has purchased land for a mill.

"SPECIAL DEAL" OFFERS SPEED SALES

uct is marketed can be changed to advantage. Right now a number of manufacturers are furnishing special holly boxes and Christmas cards for products from fountain pens to hosiery. A tea importer offers tea in little bags, each bag sufficient for four cups. This makes a new angle of approach to dealers and consumers.

Kindly Old Aunt Jemima has been advertised extensively. Sales are large. Yet the Aunt Jemima Company of St. Joseph, Mo., is finding a new appeal especially appropriate for the season before Christmas by offering the Aunt Jemima family of rag dolls, Auntie herself, Uncle Mose, Little Diana and Little Wade, 12 to 15 inches high, for tearing a top from a package of the pancake flour or prepared buckwheat flour. The dolls are sent all ready to cut out and stuff, providing 25c accompanies the package top. The newspaper copy is keyed. A window strip and store card are furnished the dealer, who is kept posted on what is doing.

In a short-time drive for sales awhile ago the Durham-Duplex Razor Company offered a 50c package of blades free with every purchase of a razor and 50c worth of blades for a dollar. By juggling the hand lettering on the title of the copy, "Men of ———!" the copy was localized.

The Gem Safety Razor Corporation this fall for $1 is offering free a cigarette case with a Gem razor and backing this with substantial advertising.

Every day a new idea is being created. Some work; some don't. But there are times when a specially planned "deal" to the public gives the needed punch to an otherwise colorless campaign.

Umpires Again File Suits

Gerald W. Hayes and Ed O. Gaffney, baseball umpires in the Western League, have filed two libel suits against the Oklahoma City (Okla.) Times, asking $1,000 in each case, for statements in stories which commented adversely on decisions made by them in Oklahoma City games. Suits filed by the umpires some months ago against the Oklahoma Publishing Company, publisher of the Times, were dismissed.

When Things Go Wrong!

In spite of best intentions and endeavors things will go wrong. So it is with stereotype mats as with any other supplies or equipment.

But when things do go wrong must you wait until your dealer gets his next shipment; or until he has had time to communicate with a factory or some other dealer somewhere—you know not where?

The beauty of using Certified Dry Mats is that we are here, the mats are made here at home; there is no need to wait for the next shipment! If things should go wrong they can be righted in a jiffy.

Remember that your stereotype problem is with you every day of the year. Then why not tie up with the dry mat that you can depend upon day in and day out the year 'round.

Know your source of supply! Insist upon having American-made Certified cold process dry mats and you can forget your stereotype mat troubles.

Samples of Certificates cost you nothing, and you incur no obligation whatsoever. Just let us know how much shrinkage you require and what equipment you employ, particularly your casting box, so that we can send you the Certified mat best suited for your requirements.

N. Y. EVENING POST PLANS NEW BUILDING

Site Purchased at 71-75 West Street in Downtown Financial District—12 to 15-Story Home Contemplated

Cyrus H. K. Curtis has purchased property in the New York downtown financial district, and this week announced plans for building a modern new newspaper plant for his New York Evening Post. The purchase and construction plans were necessitated in order to "make adequate provision for the Post's recent advertising and circulation expansion," he declared.

The site, now covered by a group of old buildings, is known as 71-75 West street running through to 108-116 Washington street and includes the entire southerly block front on Carlisle street, between these two thoroughfares. The street frontages are respectively 133 feet on West street, 123.4 on Washington street and 180.2 feet on Carlisle street. The building at 108 Washington street was acquired from the Wall Street Journal and the balance of the site from the Russell Estate.

Possession will be taken by the New York Evening Post on Jan. 2. When the leases expire, about March 1, 1925, a modern 12 or 15 story structure will be erected on the West street frontage. The future home of the Mechanical department of the Evening Post will be the Washington street frontage. Construction details are now being worked out and will be announced shortly. The broker in the transaction was the Charles F. Noyes Company.

John C. Martin, vice-president and treasurer of the Evening Post made the following announcement regarding the purchase:

"We have selected this site after a careful survey of the down-town district because we believe it is admirably suited for our purpose. It's proximity to the Stock Exchange and the Curb Market, its unexcelled transit facilities, its potentialities as regards light and air, overlooking the North River, and its general accessibility have all combined to create a location peculiarly adaptable to our needs. The recent growth of the New York Evening Post in advertising and circulation has made necessary the building of a more modern plant in which will be incorporated the most modern details of newspaper plant construction. The present lease in the Post building does not expire until May 1, 1927, which will give us ample time to make our plans with regard to our new home."

The present plant occupied by the Evening Post was built for that newspaper in 1907, and is owned by the Garrison Realty Company, of New York, in which Oswald Garrison Villard, president editor of The Nation, and former Evening Post owner is interested. When Mr. Villard sold the Post to Thomas W. Lamont he retained the building, which is an 11-story structure.

Church Ads at Christmas

The churches of your town have something to say to the people who read your paper on Saturday night besides the mere announcement of a sermon topic.

The biggest church event of the year is Christmas. In some cities publishers have been able to obtain the underwriting of large space so that the churches or business men interested in church work may tell the public the real meaning of Christmas.

Copy for this purpose has been prepared by the Church Advertising Department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Proofs of 52 ads comprising Series No. 6, each containing 250 words, may be obtained from Herbert H. Smith, 723 Witherspoon Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa. Price for use 3 cents per week per 1000 circulation.

Several mat services offer attractive page layouts to use with Christmas copy.

CANADA'S ADVERTISERS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

T. F. Kelly Named President of Canadian Association—Tribute Paid John Sullivan, former A. N. A. Secretary-Treasurer

Thomas F. Kelly, of the Hoover Suction Sweeper Company, was elected president of the Association of Canadian Advertisers at the recent annual convention held in Toronto.

The principal business of the convention were resolutions passed calling upon the Audit Bureau of Circulations to introduce renewal statistics in their returns, and directing that association officers enter into conference with the Canadian Manufacturers Association on methods to promote the sale of Canadian goods.

Other officers are: vice-president, G. L. Spry, London; F. W. Johnson, Montreal and John Martin, Toronto, and Treasurer A. L. Davidson, Toronto.

New members of the board of directors include the following: W. M. Mackay, Beattie, E. W. Robertson, A. L. Blanken, F. Hetherington, W. M. MacQueen and W. G. McGunther.

The association adopted a resolution voicing its appreciation of the co-operation which had been extended to it by John Sullivan during his ten years' service as secretary-treasurer of the Association of National Advertisers. As previously reported Mr. Sullivan has resigned because of ill health.

The resolution reads as follows:

Resolved that this meeting express to Mr. John Sullivan, secretary of the Association of National Advertisers, its deep regret that continued ill health has compelled him to give up his work; and that we are deeply conscious of the invaluable assistance Mr. Sullivan has given this Association for many years, and that while voicing our appreciation of the services he has rendered the A. C. A. and tendering our sincere sympathy in his misfortune, we express the very strong hope that he will soon be restored to his accustomed health and vigor.

W. M. Mackay, of Lever Bros., Toronto, president of the association, presided over the two-day meeting.

Thomas Heads Norristown Register

L. Powell Thomas, treasurer, Norristown (Pa.) Register, has been elected president, succeeding Gilbert S. Jones, resigned. David H. Mann has been appointed assistant treasurer.

NEW BROOKLYN TIMES PLANT

Construction Started This Week on Modern Home

The Brooklyn Daily Times has started construction at Nos. 532-40 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, of a modern plant. The building is to be of the unitary type, and the unit now in course of construction will have a frontage of 67 feet and a depth of 90 feet. It will be of the cavity production type. It is designed to permit of expansion when necessary. The executive and business offices will be on the fifth floor. On the floor below will be the editorial rooms, the photographing department and the photographers' plant. The composing room is to occupy the entire third floor except for the space allotted to the stereotype mat-making department. The second floor will contain the stereotype casting and molding room and the offices of the circulation and home delivery department.

The street floor is devoted to three tiers of presses. The immediate needs of the paper will be served by a new Hoe Super-speed Sextuple press, which is now being manufactured, and the new sextuple unit type press recently installed in the present Times Building.

The contract calls for the completion of the building by Feb. 15, and the Times will be issuing from its new building by April 1.

The newspaper will retain possession of its present building for bulletin and other purposes.

KLAN EXPOSER DIES

Charles P. Sweeney, 32, Was New York World Reporter

Charles P. Sweeney, 32, reporter for the New York World and instrumental in the Ku Klux Klan expose conducted by that newspaper, died suddenly of pneumonia in New York, Dec. 10.

Mr. Sweeney began newspaper work in 1909 in Central Pennsylvania, and then served as reporter and copy editor on various papers in Philadelphia. He was legislative and Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger from 1916 to 1918; in charge of labor information for the Committee on Public Information, in 1918, then became assistant to the Secretary of the War Labor Board, and represented the Secretary of Labor in investigating working class educational systems in Europe.

He was industrial editor of the Public Ledger in 1919 and publicity adviser in the United States for the Irish Republic from 1919 until he came to the World in 1921.

1893 SERVICE 1924 as visualized by BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

SERVICE TO PUBLISHERS, as we see it, means much more than merely getting business. That, of course, is important, but the caring for it, keeping it giving satisfaction, preventing mistakes that work harm, all enter into the service we render.

There are hundreds of ways, some of them seemingly unimportant, others of supreme importance, where we find chances to do things for publishers which increase revenue and make standing with advertisers — standing that counts.

Imperial in Historical Chattanooga

IN addition to being one of the most beautiful scenic spots on the Tennessee River, Chattanooga is also rich in historic interest. The romantic stories of Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge will live forever. The battle grounds will always be sacred to American hearts.

Today the Chattanooga News and the Chattanooga Times are recording modern historical events a few hours after they happen. In selecting the Imperial Plus Metal Plan we feel that these two splendid Southern newspapers have paid us a distinct compliment.

Like the North and the East, the South has taken to the Plus Plan. Publishers all over the South find in it an unexpected dependable economy. That economy lies in keeping their type metal at highest efficiency and prolonging its life by years of service.

A Plan for Economy

If you want to put your type metal on a strictly economical basis and get the most out of it, you will send for the Imperial Plus Plan. The newspapers being featured twice a month in this column are a testimony of the reliability and economy of the Plus Plan. May we send you a copy of the Plus Plan?

COAST-TO-COAST AIR SERVICE PERMANENT

"Here to Stay," Says Col. Henderson—San Francisco Now But 34 Hours From New York—Additions Planned

Transcontinental air mail service, begun in July by the U. S. Post Office Department, is here to stay, according to Col. Paul Henderson, second assistant postmaster general, in a review of air mail accomplishments to date.

San Francisco has been permanently moved up to within 34 hours of New York, from the point of view of the post office he said, an accomplishment of great value to businesses of all kinds. A seven-days-a-week continuous service is being maintained.

"This operation is running along very smoothly," Col. Henderson said. "Our schedules are approximately four hours longer than our experiment of a year ago would indicate as practical.

"Every day the service becomes more popular with the people, and consequently better patronized.

"I am confident, from what I have seen, that this transcontinental service is here to stay."

Among the developments hoped for by the air mail service are:

An additional service each night between New York and Chicago.

Reduction of schedule time between coasts and an increase in the frequency of dispatches.

Cutting the cost per ton-mile from $2.63 to less than 30 cents.

Use of ships with greater carrying capacity.

Col. Henderson predicted that the time would come when all the important centers of the country would be connected up by air mail, with a nightly service between such centers 1,000 to 1,400 miles apart, and the carrying of merchandise and passengers by air.

TO PROBE COMMODITY DISTRIBUTION COSTS

National Chamber of Commerce Calls Conference of Retail, Wholesale and Manufacturing Interests to Attack Problem

A project for bringing together retail, wholesale and manufacturing interests of the United States in an effort to cut down the costs of distributing the wide array of articles for which the general public, as the ultimate consumer, pays, has been announced by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

A conference of representatives of the three branches of merchandising activity will be held in Washington early in January under the auspices of the Department of Domestic Distribution of the National Chamber. It will consider the problem of distribution, compounded of all the factors that enter into the spread of the price of an article on its way from producer to consumer, and will formulate a program of investigation to be carried on by representative committees of business men and economists.

The recommendations of these committees, each dealing with a different phase of the inquiry, will form the basis of discussion at a final conference representing all branches of commercial activity involved in distribution, and a definite course of action to reduce the costs, which necessarily enter into prices, will, it is hoped, be evolved.

The undertaking of the National Chamber constitutes the first concerted attack upon the problem of distribution from the point of view of the distributor. The field of inquiry which the forthcoming conference will cover is for the most part unexplored, the announcement stated. It has, at times been criticized as the field of greatest price expansion. In support of this criticism it has been asserted by one set of investigators that of each dollar spent by the consumer almost half, 49c, goes to pay for the costs of distribution and all that it entails. Whether this is correct or not, the purpose of the conference, as announced will be to point the way by which expenses in this field may be reduced.

"Few subjects relating to what is called business," the Department of Domestic Distribution, which is making preparations for the conference, says in its announcement, "are of so great interest to the average man or woman as what happens in the spread of price between producer and consumer. Periods of high prices bringing about an insistent demand that the public shall be shown why the cost of articles, generally speaking, should be doubled, or even trebled, between producer and consumer. There are very good reasons why this situation should be uppermost in the mind of the average person since the cost of living today is about 60 per cent above that prevailing in 1913."

"One of the difficulties encountered in approaching the problem of distribution is that, unlike transportation and manufacture, it is almost wholly intangible.

"Charges are frequent that there are too many grocery stores but they cannot either be admitted or denied because even the approximate number of groceries is not known. Producers of merchandise cannot apportion their sales because the number of outlets is not known.

"These and many other considerations enter into the problem of distribution. As practical results of the contemplated survey it is possible that material savings may be accomplished by reducing the amount and number of failures throughout all industry by reducing the costs of doing business and the ultimate price to the consumer and by placing the distributor in a better relation to his customers."

BANKS URGED TO ADVERTISE

A. A. C. W. Completes Survey of Money Lost in Fraud Stocks

Approximately $600,000,000 was lost last year to investors in fraudulent stocks, according to a survey just completed by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which intends to use the figures obtained to urge reputable banks to advertise the "investigate before you invest" slogan, in their local newspapers.

The A. A. C. W. sent questionnaires to 285 Chambers of Commerce and 40 Better Business Bureaus, asking them to report the estimate of the annual loss from fraudulent investments in their localities.

Replies obtained announced this week showed $600,000,000 or $6 per capita as the approximate figure. The heaviest losers, the report showed, appeared to be the coal and iron miners of Pennsylvania. One group of Pennsylvania towns, with a population of 10,000, reported a loss of $400,000 through fake stocks or $40 per capita.

Newspaper Ownership Case Settled

Long litigation over the ownership of the Turlock (Cal.) Tribune has been ended with the payment of $1,000 to Thomas D. Calkins. In numerous actions, Mrs. Veda Calkins, daughter-in-law of the plaintiff, contested Calkins' claim of ownership.

Dec. 1, 1924.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Let me say at this time that I have read EDITOR & PUBLISHER regularly and thoroughly for many years, and I regard it as a most helpful and inspiring influence in newspaper making. Its editorial aims have been in the right direction, and its features have been most instructive, informative and encouraging. I hope you will have many more years to devote to it.

Concerning Circulation

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Mr. Omansky in his comment on the resolution of the California Circulation Managers Association on community and metropolitan newspaper clubbing and delivery seems to have overlooked entirely the subject of criticism on the part of the association. There can be no valid objection to combination delivery from an economic standpoint of physical expense.

The objection of the California managers is clearly stated in "condemning the sale of a community newspaper in conjunction with a metropolitan newspaper on a compulsory combination basis." In connection with this resolution another was also adopted calling for a poll of the membership of the Audit Bureau of Circulation members "to determine the sentiment of the members as the practice of the Audit Bureau in certifying as paid the circulation of newspapers given away free with other publications."

The action of the convention had nothing to do with the question of combination delivery. The convention was concerned, and seriously concerned, with the practice of the Audit Bureau in certifying as paid circulation newspapers given away free with other publications without any increase in the price of the paper and without the formality of an order from the subscribers for the additional papers served free.

The combination is sustained by the bureau on the theory that a customer who buys a paper on a corner and finds another paper stuffed inside without his knowledge or consent is buying two papers provided he pays 50 per cent of the total combination price. The theory of the California Circulation Managers Association is, if he pays only the regular price of one paper, the other is given away as a free premium and that the Audit Bureau is violating its own rules in certifying that the circulation of both papers is paid by giving each separate audits.

This distinction would be clear to anyone taking the trouble to read the resolutions adopted and the paper read before the convention on the subject by Harold D. Searles, circulation manager of the Hollywood Citizen, which prompted the action.—C. F. WAITE, San Pedro Daily Pilot.

OUR OWN WORLD OF LETTERS

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

IN the preparation of the volume "Editorial Writing" (Houghton Mifflin Company) M. Lyle Spencer has frequently drawn upon contributions printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER. In fact the book opens with a mention of EDITOR & PUBLISHER in which the editor of the Wall Street Journal is quoted as saying that of the 22,000 editorials published in the United States every week 21,500 might far better have never been printed. For the loss in prestige of the editorial page Mr. Spencer gives the following nine major reasons:

- (1) The phenomenal development of the news-gathering departments;
- (2) The failure of editorial writers to keep in practical touch with readers;
- (3) The transfer of the editorial function to the news columns;
- (4) The territorial expansion of the United States;
- (5) The corporate growth of newspapers;
- (6) The failure on the part of editors to train and develop editorial writers;
- (7) The absence of impending dramatic, national crises;
- (8) Increased education and enlightenment of the average reader;
- and (9) speed in newspaper production.

Obviously, however, the book is not published to outline the decadence of the editorial page but, with becoming modesty on the part of its author, it offers a stimulus to more effective editorial writing. Its author frankly admits that a study of his volume cannot make an editorial writer out of any reader, but he does believe that an application of the principles set forth will lighten the burdens of those seeking training in the fundamentals of editorial work.

The book is divided into four parts. The first of these takes up editorials and editorial work; the second concerns itself with editorial composition; the third sketches types of editorials; the fourth outlines policies and make-up of the editorial page and has a chapter on the country editorial. The volume concludes with a bibliography of collections of editorials—the most complete that I have seen.

Possibly Part III is the most practical for editorial writers now holding desk jobs. Even the experienced editorial writer can read with profit the discussion of such types as the interpretative, the human interest, and the controversial editorial. The editorial paragraph has a separate chapter. It begins with a description of how Robert Quillen, the well-known paragrapher, manufactures his famous "pepper and salt" variety of editorials. In contrast with the pointed quips of Quillen the author mentions the abbreviated matter-of-fact editorial. The illustration selected is an editorial paragraph of four sentences printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER about opportunities in the newspaper business in New York.

The author of the volume is the Director of the School of Journalism at the University of Washington. His purpose has been to compile a volume which should be primarily of value to classes in schools of journalism, and secondly, of help to those interested in editorial writing who are not attending such schools. His text is admirably adapted to meet the needs of such groups, and will doubtless be adopted as a text—as it should be—in many universities offering technical instruction in journalism.

AT least half of the fun-makers represented in "Sixty Years of American Humor"—a prose anthology (Little, Brown & Co.) edited by Joseph Lewis French are dyed-in-the-wool newspaper men. The preponderance of newspaper men in this field of writing is a significant commentary on the philosophical angle necessarily developed in the editorial office and the city room where the human panorama inexorably unfolds and asserts itself, and where the mental balance of sanity is sustained by the leavening grace of the optimistic philosophy so succinctly set forth in wit and humor.

In any one-volume anthology where the field is as wide and heterogeneous as that of American humor there inevitably must be some sin of omission. While Mr. French has made numerous happy selections, many a newspaper man will find omitted what he considers the most representative bit of joyous satire for lighter vein jest. But withal, even the sophisticated newspaper man will find enough of josh and jest, subtle humor and wit, lampoon and parody, cynicism and satire—enough good old-fashioned laughs to fill Josh Billings' prescription, "Laugh till your soul gets rested."

The short biographical headings, often with a word of criticism, serve admirably to place each contributor as to habitat, but unfortunately leave unfinished pictures of personalities. But the selection's the thing. For the most part, that's all right in "Sixty Years of American Humor."

HARCOURT, BRACE & CO. announce for publication in January "Getting the News" by William S. Maulsby of the University of Iowa. The volume is said to concentrate upon practical problems which the cub reporter must face—how to find out what is happening and how to get the story back to the paper.

JOINT production is unusual in newspaper circles except when the printers or pressmen go on strikes. But Keith Preston, who conducts the "Hit or Miss" column in the Chicago Daily News, and Richard Atwater, who conducts a similar department, "From Pillar to Post" in the Chicago Evening Post, have united in the production of an anthology of the best verse published in their columns. The book is published by Pascal Covici.

ADVERTISING managers on community weeklies and small city dailies should aid in the distribution of a 38-page booklet entitled "Small Store Advertising." Its purpose, to quote from the booklet itself, is "to enable the owner of the small retail store to make the most economical and effective use of the money he has available for advertising."

Copies of this pamphlet may be obtained gratis upon application to the United States Chamber of Commerce, Department of Domestic Distribution, Washington, D. C.

MANY of the points which George Horace Lorimer makes in his article "The Unpopular Editor of the Popular Magazine" contributed to The Bookman for December will apply equally as well to newspaper editors. The latter have learned a lesson similar to that mentioned by Mr. Lorimer when he says:

I have learned during the 25 years that I have been editing The Saturday Evening Post to have confidence in the good sense, good judgment, and good taste of our popular audience.

Lorimer can write almost as well as he can edit—and that is saying a good deal.

ARTHUR RUHL, who has himself been a European correspondent for American newspapers, in reviewing "These Europeans" by Sisley Huddleston (G. P. Putnam's Sons) in The Nation for Dec. 3, says that the twenty odd sketches in the volume are the sort of thing which a foreign correspondent sends home to his Sunday paper when the exigencies of news permit.

To the same issue of The Nation Howard A. Lamb, who used to be connected with the New York City News Association, contributes "Calles—The Teacher and Statesman." His sketch of the public career of Mexico's new president is worth clipping for the newspaper morgue.

WILLIS J. ABBOT, editor of the Christian Science Monitor of Boston, reviews "Those Europeans" by Sisley Huddleston (G. P. Putnam's Sons) in the Atlantic Monthly for December. J. St. Loe Strachey, editor of the London Spectator, is conducting a special department in the Independent of Boston. He is also frequently found in the columns of the New York Times as a reviewer of books published in England.

IN the Publishers' Auxiliary for Nov. 29, can be found the first installment of "Contempt of Court and the Newspaper" by Stuart H. Perry, editor of the Adrian (Mich.) Telegram.

THE second edition of The Stylebook of the Detroit News by A. L. Weeks has just been issued for that newspaper. Of especial value is the contribution "The Doctor Looks at Journalism." In this Dr. Morris Fishbein of the staff of the Journal of The American Medical Association lists some of the minor errors that afflict news stories.

He joined the cavalry to get action in Mexico, and served his enlistment.

Then he went to Alliance, O., married, and started work as a machinist. But the urge to draw, which had always followed him, asserted itself. He studied cartooning and soon he was working for NEA.

When asked by EDITOR & PUBLISHER as to what he thought of cartooning, he said:

R. L. Cox Takes Place on Board, Vacated by Leavitt

Robert Lynn Cox, second vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, was this week announced as new member of the board of directors of the Association of National Advertisers, filling the vacancy caused by elevation of Robert K. Leavitt to secretary-treasurer.

Leavitt, former advertising manager, "Onyx" Hosiery, Inc., assumes his association duties Dec. 15, succeeding John Sullivan, who resigned after 10 years service, Dec. 1. F. R. Kingman, assistant sales manager, has been appointed successor to Leavitt with "Onyx" Hosiery, Inc., and will represent that concern in the A. N. A. membership.

One has only to hear him tell of his years as a cowpuncher to realize where he gets his ideas for his famous "Smokey" and "Cotton" cartoons, having to do with two typical western cowboys, for, Jim will tell you, he wrangled horses, punched cows, branded calves, rode lines, "busted" broncs, shoveled hay and all the rest of it for years on the famous old McMurray Bar T L (-TL) ranch near the Rio Pecos, and on Stark's

WHEN YOU EAT THINK OF INDIANA

Indiana is a factor of recognizable importance in supplying foodstuffs for the people of the country.

Indiana produces twenty-one crops which are important enough to be considered statistically. Of these corn and wheat have leading places.

Millions of cattle, sheep and hogs are produced annually in Indiana, ranking her high in the livestock industry. Large numbers of milk cows have made dairying profitable.

The prices that consumers pay, in their respective markets, for the foodstuffs that are produced in Indiana, are indicative of the millions of dollars that annually revert to this Hoosier State.

A food market is a never failing market. Indiana's revenue is steady and never failing for this reason.

With these facts in mind, an intensive cultivation of this market by National Advertisers will win distribution and popularize your merchandise.

CIRCULATION

FOR ALL DISTRIBUTORS OF DAILY NEWSPAPERS

By J. OMANSKY

THE need for well organized promotion has never been as urgent as now when gains in sales will have to be made largely by circulation departments. In most organizations, excepting those in very large properties, promotion is done by the same men who are charged with the delivery of the papers and the collecting for them. Often campaigns that involve the expenditure of hundreds and thousands of dollars are conducted in the little time that can be spared from routine work that must be done and so we have a condition on most newspapers which hardly exists in any other business; one group of men is required to do both maintenance and promotion with the result that neither is done as successfully as it might be.

Excluding the small papers, all others can profitably have promotion departments whose duty it would be to prepare office ads, write and supervise the distribution of circulars and posters, handle offers to boys, contests, canvasses, house organs, and publicity stunts. This work should be done under the supervision of the circulation manager who should co-ordinate the work of both the maintenance and promotion branches.

Promotion handled in this way would make unnecessary the employment of outside companies and would permit the men who deliver papers to concentrate on the jobs for which they are primarily fitted.

The best promotion can be done, we believe, by men with actual circulation department experience and some advertising ability. The ads and circulars that pull are not always those that are well written and attractively laid out. Copy that gets the most results is usually prepared by men who have dirtied their hands counting out sheets to carriers and sleep-outs.

A fellow circulator in writing us about his paper refers to our business as a noble calling. We will send post paid a couple of worn out carrier bags to anyone who will show us any nobility in selling papers.

A caustic friend of ours hit the mark when he said that a circulation manager is nothing more than an exalted newsboy.

When we get complaints we offer to send to the irate subscribers their papers by messenger. The cost is charged to the carrier boys. In this way we help satisfy the subscribers and penalize the boys for negligence. Of course they are given the benefit of any doubt as to their responsibility for the complaints.

The Western Union handles the deliveries for us at a flat rate to any part of the city. We deliver a few papers to each of their offices, telephone the names and addresses of subscribers and the W. U. does the rest.

Here is a letter from a circulation man: "We wonder if you could give us some information as to how newspapers are meeting the problem of carrier boys wasting time folding their papers before starting on their routes. We find that some of our boys who ride bicycles waste the better part of an hour folding their papers before starting out. We should like to know whether this is permitted by circulation managers in general, or if not, what they do to overcome it."

Routes with subscribers living close together should not be delivered with bicycles. Most newspapers forbid their boys to use bikes because it is not possible to get boys in town to hop off their wheels to make deliveries and no boy can give satisfactory service by throwing his folded papers from the street. Furthermore bicycles in densely populated sections do not speed up the delivery sufficiently to justify their use.

When the boys stop using them the trouble our correspondent is having will be automatically eliminated for the carriers will then fold their papers as they walk around their routes.

On scattered suburban routes bicycles are a tremendous help and their use should be encouraged. When the boys use bicycles no harm is done if they do take time before they start to fold their papers because they can do that easier at the office than while they are delivering.

One of the chief functions of a carrier paper is to interest the boys in reading carefully the paper they are selling. The Brooklyn Times Junior is trying to do this by advising the boys to read The Times.

Another way of getting this result is by running personality stories with art about the feature writers and men and women who conduct departments. The boys may not be interested in the women's page but they will read about the editor, if she is pretty. Stories about the comic artists, serial writers, and sports staff will be followed by the boys eagerly.

Interest can also be aroused by offering prizes for the best letters on, "The Comic Strip I Like Best," or "Why The Sport Pages are the Best in _____." Such contests will get the boys to read their paper and talk about it, and also increase the reading of the house organ.

and obtained the most subscriptions. Such an Honor Roll acts as a big incentive to boys.

Agents from distant towns often ask us to do things for them; such as purchase tickets to a show, see their local wholesaler, give them the name of a radio dealer, and the like. When we render such service we are making friends at very little expense.

Any paper that organizes a service bureau for out of town agents will be more than repaid in loyalty and good will. A service department can be handled by any bright young man or woman and all the equipment required is a directory and a telephone.

Much capital can be made of such a bureau and the advertising department can use copies of inquiries with advertisers to good advantage.

When a paper finds the need of a premium to get subscriptions we believe that magazines are the best to use. They are just as strong an inducement as most articles, with careful buying they can be had at very low cost, and they serve to reduce to a minimum the obtaining of subscriptions from illiterates and the very poor. Almost anyone can be induced to subscribe when a useful household article is offered free. But, generally only persons who are likely to continue reading the paper after the subscriptions expire will give orders when magazines are offered as premiums.

"Since you talk so much about carrier papers," writes a reader, "why don't you tell us how you would run one, if you know how." That's just what we are going to do in an early issue.

Testimony as to the superiority of newspapers in advertising the attractions of exhibitions and fairs was given by a number of speakers in discussing the question of advertising at the first annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Exhibitions, held in Toronto, recently.

The discussion was opened by J. B. Hay, publicity director of the Canadian National Exhibition, who declared there was no more complicated advertising proposition on earth than that of advertising a fair.

John C. Simpson, president of the World Amusement Service Company, Chicago, reported that when he had to do with advertising fairs in the Western States he found the weekly country newspapers the most effective medium. In his opinion, newspapers were the best mediums.

I. T. U. NAMES PUBLICITY MAN

Harry Calkins, of Indianapolis Star, Will Explain Union's Work

Appointment of Harry R. Calkins, lately a member of the Indianapolis Star staff, as director of publicity for the International Typographical Union, has been announced by James M. Lynch, president of the union.

HARRY R. CALKINS

Creation of a department of publicity at the union's headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind., was undertaken, President Lynch said, in order that the humanitarian and educational accomplishments and aims of the organization may attain recognition by the general public.

"In these days of the widespread use of printers' ink it is not wise for an organization of such magnitude as the I. T. U. to hide its light under a bushel," said Mr. Lynch. "We want the public to understand that a trade union can go beyond the business of wage negotiation in serving its membership. The Union Printers' Home at Colorado Springs, Col., to which sick and aged printers may retire, the union's old age pension, its mortuary benefits and its apprentice educational system are of great value to the craft and to the employers."

Mr. Calkins, for several years an Indianapolis newspaper man, formerly was connected with newspapers in St. Louis, Mo., New Orleans, Sioux City, Ia., and other cities.

Rapid Expansion OF INDUSTRY IN IOWA

Although every one knows Iowa has leading place agriculturally few people realize that it has become a great manufacturing state. Within the last thirty years the manufactures of Iowa have increased at a phenomenally rapid rate due largely to three main reasons—

- Abundant Coal
- Excellent Transportation Facilities
- Unlimited Supply of Raw Material

There are, in Iowa, 5683 manufacturing establishments having a capital investment of over $400,000,000 and giving employment to over 105,000 persons.

Iowa has proven herself possessed of the fundamental elements of a great manufacturing state.

Her factories no longer turn out merely the results of the conversion of her own raw material and those articles for which there is a strong and constant home demand. Iowa is now turning her attention to a greater field of enterprise and is turning out merchandise of national and world wide use and demand. This steady and persistent growth of industries in Iowa has caused a steady and persistent increase in the revenue.

The people of Iowa find themselves more prosperous than ever. The disposal of this new prosperity can be guided your way by these strong influential newspapers.

SAYS RUSSIA'S UGLIEST NEWS NOT PRINTED

Correspondents Keeping It to Themselves, Charges Capt. McCullagh in New York Herald Tribune—Asks Investigation

Newspaper correspondents keep the "ugliest news" of Soviet Russia to themselves, Capt. Francis McCullagh charged in a series of articles appearing in the New York Herald Tribune this week, suggesting that the situation should be investigated by editors and journalistic associations in America.

"If American newspapers cease paying foreign journalists to represent them in Moscow, practically no cable news save what is openly Communistic will get out of Russia," he said.

"I do not mean, of course, to call for a journalistic blockade of Russia on the part of the American press; I only ask American editors to combine for the purpose of getting an independent news service from Russia, and I assure them that if they stand by one another Moscow must give way, as she cannot afford to see all the American correspondents withdrawn.

"There need be no encouragement of recklessness and insolence on the part of any correspondent; but no American newspaper whose American correspondents have been kicked out one after another because they told the truth should fall so low as to replace those American correspondents by Russian revolutionaries and German Communists, who manage to hang on to their jobs and to their salaries in Moscow by exercising a severe economy of the truth."

PARIS CORRESPONDENTS FROLIC

American and British Writers Hire Entire Cabaret for Annual Dinner

The Paris correspondents of American and British newspapers laid aside all care on the night of Nov. 18, at the annual dinner of the Anglo-American Press Association.

Abandoning the practice of previous years of holding the function at one of the leading hotels, the members hired a whole Montmartre cabaret, and a number of the best artists of Paris, among them some American and English stars, made the evening's entertainment a great success. But perhaps the most appreciated turns were two provided by the correspondents themselves. Frederick K. Abbott, of the International News Service, proved a remarkable ventriloquist—with the aid of a hidden confederate.

The feature of the evening, however, was a sketch, "The Impromptu de Montmartre, a Classic Drama in One Spasm," in which Aphrodite, Dionysus and Clio welcomed the Count de Chambrun, formerly head of the Press Bureau at the Quai d'Orsay, to his new post as Minister to Greece. Harold E. Stearns, of the Baltimore Morning Sun, was an excellent Aphrodite, while Hudson Hawley, of the Associated Press, was a hit in his own part of Dionysus.

A special edition of the Paris Times was issued during the dinner, which was attended by many distinguished members of the American and British diplomatic corps.

New Canadian Newsprint Mill

Another newsprint mill for Canada has been announced by the Great Lakes Paper Company, which now operates 125-ton pulp mill at Fort William. Construction will commence April 1, 1925 on property adjoining the pulp mill. Present plans call for a 200-ton mill, to cost $4,000,000.

Sells Vegetables to Probe H.C.L.

The enterprise of French newspaper men was illustrated recently when the Petit Parisien entrusted an inquiry into the high cost of living in France to one of its editors, M. Victor Bonnans. To get the right angle, he set out with a fruit and vegetable barrow and sold his eatables in the streets of Paris, hustled by the crowd, moved on by the police, and grumbled at by the housewife. He lived the life of the itinerant street vegetable seller, obtaining information which made an authoritative series.

To Unveil Statue at A. A. C. W. Meet

An equestrian statue of Gen. Sam Houston, to be unveiled in Houston during the A. A. C. W. international convention, May 10 to 14, will be shipped to Texas from New York during the winter. The statue, second largest of its kind in the country, is the work of Enrico Cerracchio, and was approved by a committee of which Paul Wakefield, owner of the Houston Post-Dispatch, is a member.

Pressmen to Instruct by Mail

On Feb. 1, 1925, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union will start a free correspondence course to apprentices of all branches of the commercial and newspaper industry of America.

New York Times Club to Dance

RADIO FANS DON'T CARE FOR NEWS, CANVASSES PROVE

RADIO fans do not care for distribution of news over the air, according to Robert T. Small, who, writing for the Consolidated Press Association, reports on the results of canvasses recently conducted by newspapers operating broadcasting stations.

Newspapers mentioned by Small were the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Detroit News, and Chicago Daily News.

"Some of the newspapers," he wrote, "persisted in putting a summary of the news on the air. Then it was noticed that in communications received from the fans not a word ever was said in praise of the news service. So the experimenters began cutting down news and enlarging entertainment programs. More encomiums came from the fans. Canvasses revealed that there was no demand for the general run of news."

Covington Post Starts Sunday Edition

The Covington (Ky.) Post, Scripps-Howard evening newspaper, is now printing a Sunday morning edition, taking the United Press Saturday night wire service. First publication date was Nov. 30. Bruce I. Susong is editor.

Swedish Ad Men Join A. A. C. W.

The Swedish Advertising Association has decided to join the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. The decision was reached at a meeting held recently in Stockholm. Next to the United States, Sweden sent the largest number of delegates to the A. A. C. W. international convention in London last July.

Walter Duranty Recovering

Walter Duranty, of the New York Times, who was injured in the accident to the Paris Havre express on Nov. 6, is making good progress in spite of serious injuries to his legs. He is still in hospital at Havre, but it is hoped he may be able to leave there before Christmas.

A. P. Committee Meets Dec. 17

Date of the December meeting of the Associated Press executive committee at New York headquarters has been changed from Dec. 24 to Dec. 17, to avoid conflict with the Christmas holiday season.

Ohio Daily Sold

The Middletown (O.) Journal was sold last week to J. A. Chew of Xenia, who with C. F. Ridenour of Piqua, operates newspapers at Piqua, Xenia and Niles, O.

TO PUBLISHERS

of Daily and Sunday Newspapers, Magazines and Trade Publications.

Is your circulation department managed so that you get all the circulation it is possible to obtain in your territory?

Is your circulation an expense or a source of revenue?

Is your circulation accounting department efficient, and do your newsdealer collections run 97% or better?

Is your mail subscription department modern and systematized so that unnecessary clerical expense and waste are eliminated?

Is your delivery to city and country newsdealers and by carriers to the homes of your subscribers economically and satisfactorily made?

The advertiser has been a circulation executive for more than twenty-five years on metropolitan Daily and Sunday newspapers and magazines of National Circulation in New York, Chicago, Boston and other large cities.

My business has been solely CIRCULATION—Department Management—Promotion—Systematizing—Increasing Revenue—Carrier and Newsdealer Organization, etc.

I am not looking for a circulation manager's position or a permanent connection of any kind. I believe with my long and varied experience in the greatest newspaper organization in the world that I can accomplish more for a publisher in a short time than a dozen theoretical efficiency men.

My services will be available after January 1, 1925. Further details and a host of unquestionable references from coast to coast will be sent upon receipt of a letter or wire to Box C-546, c/o EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

DO you know your own town? Our Space Buyers' Guide, published with this issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, may contain many surprising facts concerning your field.

Study its pages. They contain a great, because true, statement of what you are really selling. Keep this Guide at your elbow! Force its fact into the consciousness of those with whom you deal!

W. D. KILPATRICK, New York real estate man, recently placed a 3-column, page-length advertisement in the New York Herald-Tribune showing that because of prohibition the assessed value of real estate in New York has increased four billion dollars. The copy was not linked with a sales appeal, Mr. Kilpatrick's name and business appearing only in a note at the bottom of the ad. Perhaps there is a business man in your town—a strong backer of prohibition—who might be interested in this idea.—W. L. B., New York.

The fruit commission merchants in some cities are now getting together every now and then for the purpose of using advertising in the local papers to urge folks to buy the fruits which are coming in to the commission houses in particularly large quantities. This sort of advertising has proved to be a splendid thing for the advertisers, as it pleases their customers, the grocers, and as it greatly helps the sale of fruits. Get some of this sort of advertising in your city.—Frank H. Williams, Santa Ana, Cal.

Don't pass up the opportunity to sell your banks some New Year Resolution Ads featuring the savings idea during 1925. They will like the idea, and it will help to fill up the last edition of the old year.—Donald O. Ross, Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

In some sections of the country mail order houses offer serious competition to local retail stores. This condition causes a number of merchants of Chippewa Falls, Wis., to investigate prices offered by Chicago houses, with the result that they could usually meet and often undersell the mail order concerns. This fact was made the basis of a good deal of educational advertising, with the result that many persons, especially in rural districts, were convinced they could trade to their benefit at home stores.—A. C. Regli, Eau Claire, Wis.

in demand, but some time folks have a hard time obtaining just what they want. You can make it easy for them by obtaining the advertisement of printers and stores handling such work.—B. A. T.

Increasing auto accidents point to defective vision of drivers. Why not have opticians and optical firms of your city co-operate and have their optometrist offer to examine eyes of all auto drivers free, to prevent accidents. Many optical shops maintain eye examiners who give free service anyway, and may be glad to call attention to their willingness to decrease accidents.—C. M. L.

SCHOOL books of an ancient vintage have proved the source of a series of popular features in our paper. The first story was about a resident who had several copies of McGuffey's readers. Other old-timers, not to be outdone, brought in treasured originals, including geographies, histories, grammars, spellers and arithmetics, dating back a hundred years or more. The prize belonged to the old gentleman who owned a copy of "The Columbian Orator," published in 1810, until a young lady brought us a copy of "The Federal Calculator; or American Schoolmaster's Assistant and Young Man's Companion," the second edition of which was published in 1805. Quotations from the books, the readers and "The Federal Calculator" particularly, furnished some entertaining material, and by doing a little biographical research work in the city library we were able to make the articles instructive as well as of considerable local interest.—Jo Hemphill, Manhattan, Kan.

Here's a stunt that will get them guessing and talking. Each week have a staff member obtain a minute description of some person seen on your streets and then run it, offering a small cash sum if the person will appear at your office dressed in the same fashion. A battery dealer in one town advertised under the caption "Compare These Prices." The mail order price was given for a 6-volt battery together with the cost for a money order, postage stamp, express charges, and cost for installation. The total of this was greater than the local dealer's price for the battery installed. Besides, the local dealer was prepared to install your battery without delay and thus save you rental charges for a service battery. There are a number of stores in most every town that have mail order competition. These stores would benefit by inserting an advertisement showing the savings in time and money by purchasing merchandise of the home merchant.—Robert B. Miller, Marion (Ind.) Chronicle.

A Lowell (Mass.) paper got a page of advertising from auto accessory men on a "Prepare For Cold Weather" campaign. The dealers urged motorists to buy chains, radiator covers, heaters, etc. in advance of the actual coming of severe weather. Attractive prices were featured.—Arthur N. Stackpole, Lowell.

An interesting daily box feature. Take two old men, Civil War Veterans, and call them, say, The Veteran Spectator and the Oldest Scandal Snifter, and have them comment on the events of the day. This is used here, and has proved one of the biggest daily features.—W. C. Stouffer, Roanoke (Va.) World-News.

A excellent bulletin on Retail Store Planning has just been issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Service of the U. S. Department of Commerce which should be of interest to advertising solicitors. It might be a "good will" idea to ask local merchants if they would care to have you obtain copies of this booklet for them.—W. L. B., New York.

Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, U. S. A., in an interview in New York said one German soldier was worth 3 Allied soldiers because of his discipline. What do prominent overseas veterans in your city have to say on this?—W. L. B., New York.

Brief Facts for National Advertisers

DURING the eleven months of 1924, January to November, inclusive, The New York Sun published more than two million six hundred thousand lines of National Advertising. This represents a gain of more than half a million lines, and over 450,000 lines more than the next evening paper.

Advertisers coming into the New York market should know that 97% of the The Sun's circulation is concentrated in the shopping radius of New York City.

The more than 250,000 average daily paid circulation of The Sun offers advertisers the greatest concentration of high-grade circulation in New York City.

The Maximum of Concentration in the World's Greatest Market

ADVERTISERS planning New York campaigns face a complete reversal of conditions in the newspaper situation of the city.

Three papers have passed out of the picture with in a year—one in the morning field and two in the evening field. The advertisers of the city used 210,000,000 lines of space in these three newspapers in the past ten years, representing an expenditure of about $40,000,000, all of which, so far as good-will and continuity of impression are concerned, has vanished into thin air. So much for one kind of waste!

But there is another and more costly form of waste than this, and that is the waste that is purchased in the shape of circulation far removed from the advertiser's immediate sales-radius.

Within the past three months THE WORLD and THE EVENING WORLD have reached the highest point in circulation that they have registered in six years. About 93% of their joint circulation of 700,000 daily is concentrated within the Metropolitan Retail Area, where the merchant is in daily contact with his patrons and where the national advertiser has the bulk of his distribution.

THE WORLD GROUP constitutes the most powerful single selling force available as a unit in Greater New York, and all circulation outside of the city's shopping area is a highly speculative advertising venture for the merchant or manufacturer who is trying to reach New Yorkers.

The sharp increase in circulation already noted has resulted in corresponding reductions in the Milline rates effective for THE WORLD GROUP. A comparison, based on a 5,000-line contract, between this year and last year indicates the increased economy with which space can now be purchased in these papers:

	This Year		Last Year
	Milline for Metropolitan Distribution	Milline for Total Distribution	Milline for Metropolitan Distribution	Milline for Total Distribution
THE WORLD (6 days) .....	$1.70	$1.55	$1.81	$1.66
THE EVENING WORLD .....	$1.97	$1.90	$2.25	$2.14

Intensity of coverage considered, these figures constitute the lowest rates at which advertising can be economically and efficiently purchased in the greatest retail market in America.

Editor & Publisher's Space Buyers' Guide

A New Contribution to the Science of Selling and Advertising

WITH unconcealed pride EDITOR & PUBLISHER presents to the advertising business world the Space Buyers' Guide, dedicated to the science of advertising.

Perusal of these pages will reveal the stupendous effort that has been expended to make the edition possible.

To the legions who manufacture, distribute and advertise merchandise among the millions who read daily newspapers, in the cities and towns of the United States and Canada, we feel that the Guide is an offering of extraordinary value.

To us who have created it, the Guide is a dream come true.

Seven years ago EDITOR & PUBLISHER, anticipating the need of market surveys intelligently to guide the business world in advertising investments, took the first steps to collect and collate for national advertisers, advertising agencies and newspapers essential facts and figures descriptive of centers of population.

Our state and city surveys, made at intervals, are now in standard and everyday use by space buyers in general. Scarcely a week passes that EDITOR & PUBLISHER is not called upon by some advertising or selling interest to supply back copies of those sectional surveys.

The ideal toward which we strove was a national space buyers' guide, listing for handy use the important data that advertisers require in the preparation of a national or sectional schedule. This, to us, seemed the acme of selling publicity science. Such a vast undertaking seemed a doubtful commercial venture. How to collect such a huge mass of data appeared an unsurmountable problem.

But, here it is.

More than 1,200 cities and towns have been surveyed for this issue.

It was necessary to canvas some of the larger cities by assigning trained investigators, schooled in the task, but the vast majority of these detailed descriptions were secured, during the past six months, through the spirited co-operation of newspaper men of the cities and towns of the United States and Canada, the executives of chambers of commerce, boards of trade, business men's associations, bankers and trust companies, and others to whom EDITOR & PUBLISHER, in behalf of those who shall directly benefit from this work, hereby extends greetings and an expression of profound appreciation.

As the returns have come in, they have been checked by a staff of qualified experts. In cases of doubt, they have been returned for amplification, correction or explanation.

With confidence we offer this work as authoritative, conservative, as well as 98 per cent complete. We have on file a record of the sources of all this information.

It is conservatively estimated that 25,000 letters were exchanged to make this compilation a reality. No less than 2,500 individuals participated in the co-operative effort. To them, individually and collectively, we gratefully acknowledge splendid assistance.

The fact that such a large number of surveys came promptly from individual newspaper publishers speaks eloquently of the present-day attitude among newspaper men to yield a maximum of service to advertisers. No longer can it be said of newspapers that they lack, either in spirit or fact, responsibility to make their space valuable to every advertiser by working with him to appraise the local outlets for merchandise. Advertisers and agencies who do business with the newspapers of the United States and Canada are getting the service to which their patronage entitles them.

In American business, through all its varied classifications, there is no substitute for the newspaper when a legitimate producer desires to address the consuming public.

A thousand and one uses for the material contained in this Guide at once suggests themselves to sales and advertising forces. It is not for us to attempt to vision the countless variations of service to which it will be put, but we do make bold to suggest to advertising agency men that, in the preparation of tentative schedules for submission to clients, there be added to ordinary specifications a declaration as to trading possibilities, based upon information bearing upon the line of merchandise in question, now available through this Guide.

It takes imagination to encompass the markets of this great land with nationally advertised merchandise. No man is big enough or sufficiently experienced and traveled, to visualize the infinite possibilities. Our statistics are intended to stimulate trading imagination, as well as to inform dealers.

For instance, assume a few of an endless variety of problems in relation to Guide uses:

A firm is advertising a fountain pen. We dare say that a very high percentage of the users of fountain pens are high school children. Our data on schools become significant.

To a whole class of dealers, information bearing upon the housing conditions of cities and towns becomes a positive index to trading possibilities, and this Guide shows them.

There is a wide difference between a market largely composed of miners and one populated by shop workers, for another host of traders. Our Guide serves.

There is deep meaning to departments of the advertising world that various communities present various living customs and habits—that the people drive over dirt roads or concrete, that they use coal or oil or electricity for power and fuel, that they are a religious people or that they go in for Sunday amusements, that they are liberal spenders as indicated by the number of natural extravagances shown in the Guide, that they are thrifty people, that they are foreign born or colored people, that their banking institutions tell by their surplus statements a story of local economic health or depression.

The Guide shows what are the chief sources of income of the people of the localities surveyed. You find a city or town dominated by iron and steel workers and, knowing the prevailing conditions of that trade, you are able sensibly to apportion your advertising investment. You know, when you find a trading area largely depending on the agricultural pursuits of the people, what must be the ability of the community to absorb your commodities.

If a relatively small population sustains a high number of retail outlets in your line, you are informed that that community deserves your attention. There is no more important information for the sales manager than what concerns wholesale and retail outlets, and our classifications we believe to be both adequate and reliable.

Such are the multiplicity of uses to which the Guide may be put by imaginative sales and advertising forces.

Advertising as a science grows apace. The shabby coat of deceit and false statement has long since been discarded. "Truth in Advertising" is no longer a mere slogan, but common practice. Rates based upon audited circulation have become almost universal practice; the advertiser no longer buys unknown quantity. But haphazard placement of advertising has not been uncommon during recent years, not because of any insincerity of purpose among advertising men nor loose methods among advertisers, but wholly because definite information as to the character of cities and towns, physical, social and economic, has not been available.

So, our Space Buyers' Guide takes its place as one of the standards of the new and better system of advertising, a contribution, we trust our readers will feel, to the general science, which has as its ideal commercial publicity upon the solid footing of known facts, definite investments and profitable results.

Our newspaper friends naturally will benefit from this general survey. It opens to the national advertiser new vistas of opportunity and it is, at the same time, another proof of the indisputable fact that the American newspaper is the direct line of communication to all of the people on terms and under conditions which completely outdistance all rival forms of trading media.

It is right, for sensible trading campaigning wherein distribution and publicity synchronize.

It is right for results.

It is right, when time elements are to be conserved.

It is right, because it does not waste and it is flexible.

In season, out of season, every day the newspaper is the people's chosen medium of thought and action.

Our Guide will assist our newspaper constituents, also, in the matter of cutting down the enormous expense of time and money in supplying individual requests for the trade data this volume now contains.

Finally, the whole theory of this work is that it shall reveal to sales and advertising forces sound evidence as to the habits and character, natural needs and desires and the purchasing power of our scattered communities. The American citizen may be a type when he is on foreign soil, but in America he is a type of his community. What is food to one may be another poison. What "goes" among the children of lead workers may be rejected by the children of cotton planters. What the tenement dweller craves may not suit the dweller of a two-story frame house. These are the elementary considerations, stated here merely as a matter of record.

Incidentally, the Guide is an inspiring document for any American patriot who will examine its pages. Nowhere else in the universe do people live in such contentment, surrounded by such comforts, producing and consuming, living according to the highest material standard ever known by man.

The power of the American people to consume is beyond conception. It is, as the Guide so plainly shows, impossible to exaggerate the potentialities of useful service to our hundreds of millions.

Theatres: Legitimate, 1 (not steady); Moving Pictures, 2 (also one in Carmel and 1 Pacific Grove); Burlesque, none; Miscellaneous (Auditoriums, etc.), 3. Total number of seats, —.

Location: Southern Pacific Railroad, Santa Cruz and Monterey S. S. line, and Linden S. S. line. The steamship lines are merely freight lines, picking up fresh and canned fish from industries here, lumber, etc. Monterey is situated on the Bay of Monterey, greatest bay in California, with some day future for great seaport. Also excellent bus service to Santa Cruz, San Francisco, San Jose, Los Angeles and the San Joaquin Valley and Yosemite.

Principal Industries: Fresh fish catching, sardine canning (greatest sardine packs in America put up here), poultry, fashions, ginsolins bulbs, diatomaceous earth mining, stock raising in one background is the great Salinas Valley.

Manufacturing Establishments: 7 large canneries. Leading firms, Hovden Canning Co., Booth Canning Co., Carmel Canning Co., Monterey Canning Co., Funston & Gross Bayside Company, Monterey Products Co.

Total value of yearly output of factories estimated at $4,000,000, not including Monterey Products Co.

Special Information: Monterey Peninsula is greatest playground of California. Regular flow of business dependent upon the sea throughout year, maintaining general level of prosperity, which reaches very high peaks in summer and winter months as result of tremendous influx of tourists and Californians from the valleys. Jobbing houses consider this locality this year a "bright spot" in California. All merchants' credits very high. City of Monterey, which is main center of Peninsula, is old capital of California, first and last Spanish capital, Mexican capital, and here the American flag was first raised officially in California. Great number of historic buildings and landmarks. Residence of Monterey, home of 11th U. S. Cavalry and 76th Field Artillery, C. M. T. C. camp, National Guard summer camp, Hotel Del Monte.

Residential Features: Mostly one-family houses. No slums, no tenements. Private homes, owned by occupants, predominate greatly in Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel. Homes average in value about $5,000, but there is great variation, due to expensive villas in Monterey, Pebble Beach and Carmel Highlands, 18,000 acres being exploited by Del Monte Properties Company for fine homes. Most slightly home locations in California. Climate shows variation of mean temperature winter and summer not more than ten degrees. Great purchasing power in population.

Retail Shopping Section: Alvarado street in Monterey, three blocks, in main shopping district—Lighthouse avenue in New Monterey section of Monterey is secondary district, two blocks; also Lighthouse avenue in Pacific Grove, three blocks, and Ocean avenue in Carmel, three blocks. Main shopping district is in Monterey, to which most business comes from Pacific Grove, Carmel and outlying territory.

There is the city of Monterey as a political unit, but it is the Monterey Peninsula that is the economic trading unit.

Trading Area: Extends 38 miles to the south down the coast-line, 33 miles up Carmel Valley, 15 miles N. E. toward Salinas, 14 miles North up the coast-line, and including the entire Monterey Peninsula, which is composed of Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel. Hotel Del Monte, Del Monte Lodge, Pebble Beach, Sealife—all immediate adjacent communities. There is a high class bus service within and between these places.

Special Information: Location of the city makes it the terminus of the Southern Pacific, Western Pacific and Santa Fe Railways. Oakland has wonderful water terminal facilities which make this city a port of ever increasing importance. As a matter of fact Oakland is now a port of call for steamers from all ports all over the world. Oakland is well termed the city "Where Rail and Water Meet."

Residential Features: The homes of Oakland possess a charm that inspires a love of home and pride in ownership. Oakland is a perfect home city with private homes for working men and the wealthier classes predominating. There are no slums or tenement districts. The average cost of the Oakland home will range from $8,000 to $8,000.

Retail Shopping Section: Extends First and Broadway, Washington, Franklin, and Webster streets, on the South to 28th and Broadway, on the North to 14th and Broadway, in the center or hub of all radiating laterals for street cars, bus transportation and automobile boulevards or highways leading to the great Santa Clara Valley. On the East and South are Richmond, Vallejo and rich back country. On the North and East small sectional trading centers are very numerous throughout this entire district.

Trading Area: Extends about fifty miles East and North. A wonderful system of paved highways, steam railways, electric railways, locally situated trolley lines and efficient motor bus transportation make trading in Oakland from any point within this fifty mile radius an event of convenience and pleasure for the buyer.

Suburban and Farm Residents

Within a radius of 50 miles practically all of the larger purchases of over one million people are made in San Francisco. The geography of California makes San Francisco the shopping center for the entire northern part of California, drawing from the rich San Joaquin, Sacramento and Santa Clara valleys, due to the fact that the southern part of California is practically shut off by the Tehachapi Mountains.

How the San Francisco Examiner Covers Central and Northern California

Central and Northern California—the territory that stretches from Bakersfield on the South to the northern boundary line—is the Pacific Coast's greatest market—boasting 55% of California's total population—61% of its bank resources—59½% of its bank deposits—54% of its bank clearings—71% of its manufacturing—70% of its livestock—65½% of its crops and 52 1-3% of its total wealth—although occupying only 43% of its area.

Thus does density of population and concentration of wealth make the Central and Northern California market the most important on the Pacific Coast—and San Francisco—the chief city, its hub of operation. And it naturally follows that the San Francisco newspaper which most thoroughly serves this rich territory is the logical "keystone" of any advertising campaign to win its attention.

Not only does The Examiner more thoroughly cover this territory than any other San Francisco newspaper—from a city, suburban and country standpoint—but in a majority of cases offers advertisers more circulation in the smaller cities dotted over the territory than is given by the local newspaper—thereby providing a medium that not only stands alone as the greatest advertising "buy" but may be used alone with telling effect.

Place your Advertising where it will reach the greatest number of readers at the lowest cost per reader.

Manufacturing Establishments: 2,360. Leading firms, National Paper Products Co., Bemis Bros. Bag Co., John Boliman Co., Crown Shirt Factory, California Barrel Co., Petri Cigar Co., Illinois-Pacific Glass Works, Levi Strauss Co.

Special Information

Financial center of the West. Principal shipping port of the West. Outlet of the products of the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys, and the Western and Central Rocky Mountain States. Jobbing center for Northern and Central California. Western terminus for three transcontinental railroads. In San Francisco there are many branch offices of firms doing an international business. There are over 500 San Francisco concerns that maintain branches in other Pacific Coast cities.

Residential Features

There are homes of every description, from the modest cottage of the workman to the city chateau of the millionaire, and the fortunate fact that San Francisco is a city of hills and valleys leads to the general effect in the residence district of neatness, refinement and beauty. Both the apartment house and the bungalow are well represented in San Francisco and have been brought to a point of high development.

Retail Shopping Section

Extends from Market and Kearney to Market and Eighth, and the district bounded by Market, Kearney, Sutter and Mason. There are five outlying buying districts, and several smaller neighborhood sections with the usual small number of small shops.

Due to the tremendous commuting and outside population, shopping in San Francisco district is extremely large for a town of its size. Because of its even temperature, San Francisco produces an all-year market for many otherwise seasonable items.

In a retail way San Francisco stands comparison with New York City. There is, of course, a "main shopping district," and then there are a number of outlying or neighboring districts.

Market street is the "big" street. When the term big is used it is well to mention in passing that Market street is 120 feet from building line to building line, and the only "Main Street" known to the writer where four sets of street car tracks are laid, and all of them used fast and furiously.

Geary street, California street, Powell street, Stockton street, Grant avenue and Kearney street are all important retail streets, all running into Market street.

Grant avenue, just off Market, is a very high class shopping street. Further up is the street on which the important Chinese stores are. It is the main artery of Chinatown, a part of the city that, apart from being picturesque and interesting, is important commercially.

In the outlying districts there are Fillmore street for 14 blocks; Clement street for 10 blocks; Mission street for 11 blocks; Irving street, Cortland street, Union street and several others, making in all some 145 blocks of retail shopping districts, and having some 4,500 retail establishments wherein money may be exchanged for merchandise of some kind or other.

Trading Area

San Francisco is the distributing hub of the Pacific Coast. In a wholesale way, San Francisco reaches into all the Pacific Coast States and into Arizona, New Mexico, Utah and parts of Idaho and Montana.

In San Francisco there are many branch offices of firms doing an international business. There are over 500 San Francisco concerns that maintain branches in other Pacific Coast cities.

San Francisco's retail trade zone may be roughly estimated within a fifty-mile radius and the bulk of the populations within this territory look to San Francisco as their retail shopping center. Intermittent business is secured from people living within this radius by fine trolley, bus and ferry services.

Twenty-one interurbans and railroads, together with California's remarkable auto highways, link this high purchasing power area to the business district of San Francisco.

San Francisco Chronicle

Leading Newspaper of the Pacific Coast

25% of the population does 75% of the buying—and this great purchasing power is reached almost exclusively through The Chronicle.

THE high percentage of first class paved streets (550 miles) within the city of San Francisco itself eliminates any urban delivery problem, while the well developed ferry system and excellent roads down the peninsula make daily suburban delivery a practice of many years' standing.

Within the 42 square miles land area of the corporate city of San Francisco there are 687,000 persons (1924 tabulation), which means 16,360 per square mile. The San Francisco distributor, therefore, reaches an average of 16,000 persons in every square mile of this city. A distributor in Los Angeles reaches 2,423 persons in every square mile of his city territory. He must then go seven times farther than the San Francisco merchant in order to find an equal number of potential purchasers. A distributor in Seattle reaches 5,876 persons per square mile within the corporate city limits, and must, therefore, travel four times as far as the San Francisco merchant in order to reach a corresponding number of people.

The entire area covered by The Chronicle's circulation contains 253 persons per square mile. The Chronicle serves a district with a population twice as great as the Los Angeles market, larger than the entire state of Oregon and equal to the state of Washington—this circulation offers the key to the rich Pacific Coast.

FIRST in PER CAPITA WEALTH!

San Francisco's per capita wealth is three times as large as Chicago's, Milwaukee's and Baltimore's. It is $1,400 larger per capita than New York and Boston, and $600 higher than Cleveland.

In per capita bank deposits, Californians are 26% above the average of the United States, and in per capita savings 93% ahead of the average of this country. During the nine months' period ending June 30, 1924, a total of $187,056,629 was added to the commercial and savings deposits of the state. The San Francisco Bay District (San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda) was the greatest contributor—65.5% — Los Angeles contributed 5.9% and the rest of the state 28.6%.

San Francisco Bay District banks contribute 39% of the total deposits and 44% to the total resources of the entire state.

During the worst period of business depression since the Armistice $53,000,000 was added to the savings deposits of San Francisco.

During the first 5 months of 1924 business expansion kept pace with San Francisco's increase in wealth, 2,281 new industrial enterprises adding $5,000,000 to the city's payroll—and since January 1, 1923 over $60,000,000 was added to the payroll of the Bay District.

The San Francisco trading area produces 71% of the manufactured output of the entire state; two-thirds of the crops, half of the minerals—and contains two-thirds of the farm area, over one-third of the forests and 70% of the livestock.

—and the increases of this most favored section of God's country are getting greater month by month.

Business is Good in Bridgeport

Our belated friend "General" Prosperity has arrived and the Industrial Capital of New England is thriving.

The great increase of savings deposits Dec. 1, 1924, over the aggregate of Dec. 1, 1923, is conclusive evidence of Bridgeport's affluence.

This increase represents largely the savings of thrifty, intelligent, well paid industrial families—people who are ready and willing to respond to legitimate merchandise offerings.

The Bridgeport Times

Founded as the weekly Farmers Journal in 1790; changed into an evening paper, the Evening Farmer, in 1856 and the name again changed in 1920 to The Bridgeport Times.

Now under the complete control of

Kendall B. Cressey

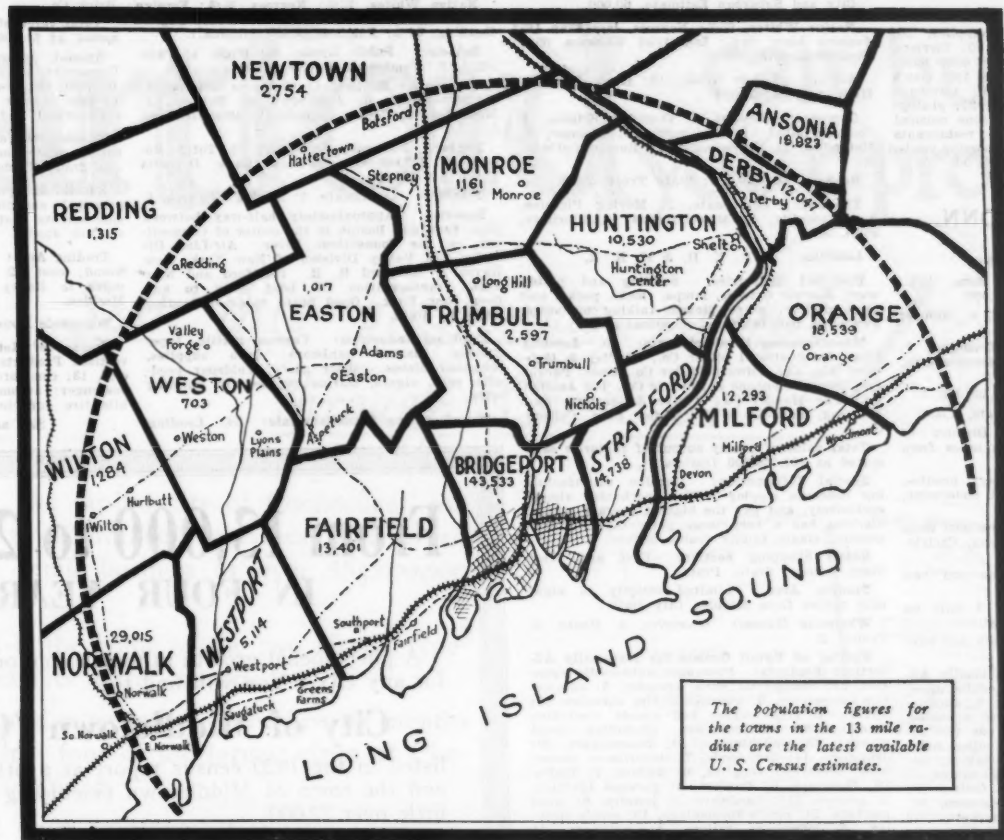

President of The Times Publishing Company

The Times is now contracting for erection of an entirely new building, with latest mechanical equipment as, since Mr. Cressey took control Nov. 17, 1924, the capacity of the present plant is more than over-taxed.

There has been a general and immediate response both in advertising and circulation to The Times under its new control.

Bridgeport and its associated city (Stratford) has a population of approximately 160,000 and a concentrated buying population within a 10-mile radius of over 200,000.

National advertisers who have confidence in Mr. Cressey's ability to build a leading newspaper in Bridgeport and to do so immediately will be interested in this announcement.

Let the Post-Telegram Make This Market Yours

This section of Connecticut is thickly populated. The divisions shown on the map above are towns and cities. The boundary lines are purely political and have no merchandising significance as Bridgeport is the shopping center. The towns surrounding Bridgeport are almost wholly residential and are to a large extent "bedrooms" for Bridgeport workers.

Bridgeport is the chief shopping center for over 235,000 people. A network of trolleys and railroads, and bus lines over well paved highways connects Bridgeport with its suburbs. No point in the territory is more than an hour's ride by bus or trolley from the center of the city.

The market is compact, well defined and easily cultivated. It is one of the few large units in the country that can be covered thoroughly through one newspaper buy.

The Post-Telegram prints and delivers through its own distributing system more than a newspaper for every family within 13 miles of the City Hall. Over 98 per cent of its 47,000 circulation is concentrated in that 13 mile radius. It gives complete coverage without waste and at a rate less than it would cost you to cover any similar market so thoroughly.

Waterbury produces more brass than all the rest of the entire world. Waterbury is the home of "the watch that made the dollar famous" and Waterbury clocks tick their way around the world. More pins are made in Waterbury than anywhere else in this country. In fact, Waterbury as a manufacturing center ships more freight tonnage than does Cleveland, a city of seven times its size, and has the second largest freight tonnage in New England.

Waterbury is the home of 120 different industries which are manned by over 35,000 industrial workers. That they are well paid is evidenced by 79,111 savings bank accounts with an average of over $471 per account. Waterbury has five good department stores, over 50 drug stores, 450 groceries and in all over 1,200 retail business stores.

Special Information: Washington, being the capital, is primarily a residential rather than a manufacturing city. Thousands of visitors are here for stays varying from a few days to a few weeks or months. Washington is also the gateway of the South and the freight yards of the Southern Railway, located a few miles from Washington, are among the largest of the country.

Residential Features: Extremely high apartment house population and large ratio of boarding houses. Congestion during the war created great need for housing and building during the years immediately following was greater proportionately than in any other section of the country. Because of the narrow confines of the District of Columbia, thousands of persons, making their living in Washington necessarily make their homes in the surrounding states of Virginia and Maryland for a radius of 25 miles or more. It is a remarkable fact that a thousand or more government employees daily commute from Baltimore, distant 40 miles.

Who Is Your Salesman?

Is he a one-time order-taker or can he repeat?

The Atlanta Constitution repeats its sales every morning. It has done so for over a half century. Its sales are greater today than ever in history.

Does your "salesman" enjoy full confidence of his patrons—do they bank on what he tells them?

For over a half century, the statements of the Atlanta Constitution have been referred to as the "last word." It's called "The Georgia Bible."

Is your "salesman" so close to his patrons that they will consult him on other lines of business because they feel that he knows?

For over a half century in any sort of crisis the Constitution's subscribers have looked to it for guidance.

Does your "salesman" make friends easily—does he wear well—has he increased his territory?

The Constitution has for over a half century been gaining strength in its territory—it is today in far stronger position than at any time since its first issue was published.

The Constitution was established during the trying days of Reconstruction. It was called the Constitution because it championed our constitutional rights.

When you place an advertisement in the Constitution's columns, the statements which you make carry the added weight and influence which the paper, itself, has with its subscribers.

Every morning at six o'clock the Constitution is delivered by carrier into the homes of Atlanta. It has a greater home delivered by carrier circulation than any other Atlanta paper.

It reaches the well-to-do and the great middle class.

For a quarter of a century, the Constitution has been the official organ of the Federated Women's Clubs of Georgia.

These clubs are composed of representative women in all walks of life. There are said to be 50,000 women members of these clubs. They have their great club house and auditorium on Peachtree Street in this city.

The Constitution carries Sundays all of their official announcements, devoting several pages to same. It carries week days exclusively all of their official announcements of meetings for the day.

The Constitution wields great influence with the women throughout this section.

Within sixty miles of Atlanta reside one-third of Georgia's population.

Over 75% of the entire circulation of the daily Constitution is within sixty miles of Atlanta—the balance is scattered throughout the State, less than 1500 being sent outside the State.

Pick your advertising media as you pick your "salesman." Let the Constitution be your "salesman" in Atlanta.

Theatres: Legitimate, 1; Moving Pictures, Hon. 19, Terr. 90; Miscellaneous (Auditoriums, etc.), 2 private. Total number of seats, Hon. 5,900, Terr. 35,000.

Location: At center of North Pacific ocean, so situated as to be known as Cross-Roads of the Pacific. Served by two S. S. Lines from the Pacific coast, and five Transpacific Steamship Lines, which stop at Honolulu, both to and from the Orient. In constant touch with all the world by radio and cable.

Principal Industries: Sugar, Pineapples, Coffee, Banana. Marked sources of revenue to Honolulu merchants are tourists and expenditures of Army and Navy. Army and Navy expenditures amount to over a million a month in Honolulu.

Manufacturing Establishments: None. Leading firms, manufacturing plants as you know them do not exist here. We have 45 sugar mills and 11 pineapple canneries in the Territory. Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar Co., Ewa Plantation, Hawaiian Pineapple Co., California Packing Corp. and Libby, McNeill & Libby are the largest sugar and Pineapple companies.

Total value of yearly output of factories estimated at Sugar and Pines, $92,908,116.

Special Information: Honolulu is the political, business and financial capitol of the Territory, and the only large city. Head offices of all big business are located here. Connected with other islands by Inter-island steamship services of from two to five steamers per week. Communication by Inter-island wireless.

Residential Features: Mostly one-family houses. Tenement section rapidly being rebuilt to single family houses. Residential districts seven in number, lying in valleys and on heights from two to five miles from business district. Excellent residential location because of equable climate the year round; never hotter than 90°, nor colder than 53°. Excellent sea bathing the year round.

Retail Shopping Section: Divided rather sharply into Oriental and Haole (White) sections by Nuuanu street. Oriental section extends 9 blocks north along King street, which is at right angles to Nuuanu, 4 blocks along Hotel and Paohi streets and 6 blocks along Berentania. Three latter streets are parallel to King. Haole section extends 5 blocks on King (South from Nuuanu), 4 blocks on Hotel and Berentania.

Trading Area: All the population of Oahu is dependent on Honolulu for trading. Small stores are located in outlying districts where staples can be bought, but they, in turn, buy from Honolulu. Shopping, other than regular staples, on Oahu, must be done in Honolulu. Variety carried in stock on other islands is narrow, consequently, purchasing of novelties and extraordinary lines is done in Honolulu. Hilo, with a population of 10,000, is shopping center for 30 miles on either side.

Three Trading Areas Composing One Complete Community

Territory covered by the circulation of papers of the Northern Illinois Group is one complete community with three trading centers. For all purposes of buying in response to advertising it is the same as a city of 250,000 with three business districts.

People do the most of their buying in one or the other of these centers (Aurora, Elgin or Joliet) and none are more than an hour's ride from the stores. They are nearer the best stores of the community than many who live in metropolitan cities.

The people are prosperous and good spenders. There are over 350 diversified manufacturing industries, employing between 35,000 and 40,000. Pay roll is around $60,000,000 a year.

Wholesalers actively co-operate with lines that are advertised in these papers by securing distribution in the outlying small cities and villages. Few advertisers feel they can send traveling salesmen into the smaller towns even though they realize the importance of their trade. The co-operation of our wholesalers takes care of this in Northern Illinois Group territory, which has 117 of these small towns.

There are 2,163 retail outlets in this community. In Aurora, 417, in Elgin, 298, in Joliet, 687. Outside towns, 761.

Circulation coverage is complete. These papers go into the homes of 98% of the English speaking people. The papers are sold on subscription and delivered by carrier.

We can furnish accurate information about the market possibilities here for any line. Just address:

Real Want Ad Mediums

Few newspapers in Illinois rival the three members of the Northern Illinois Group in want ad business. They have been developed up to the minute along these lines and bring great results for those who patronize them.

Territory large enough to give a substantial "try-out"

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

1920 Population, 33,868.

City and Suburban Estimate: 140,000. Native Whites, 88.4%; Negroes, 2.8%; Foreign Born, 8.8%; Industrial Workers, 16%; English Reading, 98.5%; Families, 7,975.

Schools: Public Grade, 16; High, 3; Parochial, 4; Number of Pupils, 7,212.

Churches: Baptist, 2; Christian Science, 1; Congregational, 2; Episcopal, 1; Hebrew, 1; Methodist, 4; Presbyterian, 3; Roman Catholic, 3; Miscellaneous, 10.

Banks: National, 1; State, 5; Total Resources, $16,996,337.17; Bank Deposits Total, $14,301,793.48. Savings deposits not available.

Theatres: Legitimate, 1; Moving Pictures, 5; Vaudeville, 1; Miscellaneous (Auditoriums, etc.), 5. Total number of seats, 7,922. Auditoriums, 8,900.

Location: C. & A., 2 lines; I. C., 2 lines; C. C. C. & St. L.; Nickel Plate, Illinois Traction System; 3 bus lines; 80 passenger trains daily. Overnight freight service from Chicago & St. Louis, second night service from Cleveland, Cincinnati and Kansas City; third morning service from New York and Boston.

Principal Industries: Agriculture (principally corn, oats, livestock, dairying), washing machines, oil heaters, furnaces, railroad equipment; freight cars, passenger coaches; farm implements, book publishing, candy making (largest candy factory in the world), seeds and nursery stock, overalls, shirts, canning.

Manufacturing Establishments, 100. Leading firms, C. & A. Shops (railroad equipment), Paul P. Reich Co. (confection), American Foundry & Machine Co. (furnaces), C. L. Williams & Son (Oil-O-Matic Heater), Meadows Mfg. Co. (washing machines), Portable Elevator Co., Kleum's Overall Factory.

Special Information: With 7 railroad lines and 7 concrete highways entering the city, and because of the fact that no cities of similar size are located within 41 miles, Bloomington has been the logical retail trading center for a large area of Central Illinois. Bloomington ranks eighth in the United States in general quality of goods handled in retail stores. Important as a wholesale and jobbing center. The home of 1,600 traveling salesmen.

Residential Features: Individually-owned homes predominating with only a small strip along railroads housing foreign labor and colored element, which might be classed as a poor residential district. No city in Illinois of like size has such a large proportion of fine homes as will be found in Bloomington, a statement borne out by the average valuation given herewith: 40% of homes, $6,000; 40%, $4,000; 10%, $15,000; 10%, $3,000 or less.

Retail Shopping Section: Extends from Public Square (which forms heart of business section, and terminal for interurban and bus lines, and transfer point for city trolley lines) for 10 blocks on Main St. Center, Madison and East Sts. parallel Main St. and are business streets of 6 to 7 blocks each. Cross streets 3 blocks north and south of Square have retail stores along 2 to 5 blocks. Smaller neighborhood sections, are grouped around the 3 railroad depots located 10 to 14 blocks from Square. Normal, Illinois, which adjoins Bloomington on the north, and is separate only as to government, has 8 blocks devoted to business on both sides of the main street.

Trading Area: Extends about 35 miles north, east and southeast; 25 miles south, west and northwest, with fairly consistent trade coming in from a distance as great as 45 miles southwest. The exceptional stocks of department stores, together with the accessibility of Bloomington over the railroads entering the city from 12 directions, the concrete highways, and the bus lines, bring buyers from many points outside the trading outlined above.

Wholesale Houses: Groceries, 4; Meats, 3; Fruits, 6; Miscellaneous lines, Seeds, 1; Feeds, 2; Hides and Fur, 1; Millinery, 2; Saddlery and Shoe Findings, 1.

Number of Retail Outlets for Nationally Advertised Products: Passenger automobile agencies, 23; commercial auto, agencies, 8; automobile accessories, 25; automobile tire agencies, 20 (representative stocks only); bakers, 13; cigar stores and stands (including hotels), 12; confectioners (including hotel stands), 19; delicatessen, 6; dressmakers, 4; druggists, 23; dry goods, 6; department stores, 5; electrical supplies, 9; florists, 5; fruits, 4; furniture, 9; furriers, 3; garages (public), 8; grocers, 100; hardware, 6; jewelry, 12; meat markets, 41; men's furnishings, 24; men's clothing, 22; merchant tailors, 11; milliners, 14; opticians, 8; photographers, 11; pianos (and miscellaneous musical instruments), 4; radio supplies, 13; restaurants (including hotels), 45; shoes, 10; sporting goods, 11; stationers, 5; women's apparel, 12.

No other section in the United States can boast of a year-to-year corn crop comparable to that of McLean county, the largest and richest agricultural county in Illinois, and the exact center of Pantagraph influence.

With this year's crop bringing in a total revenue one-third greater than in 1923, this territory now furnishes a greater market for everything used in the home and on the farm than at any time since the deflation period.

Department store advertising may be taken as a barometer of local conditions, and a gain of 24.9% for the past ten months in this classification is indicative of the greater possibilities for trade.

The Pantagraph Brings Better Results—

BECAUSE over 90% of its 18,000 circulation is concentrated in the immediate trading territory—a "balanced" market, almost equally divided in city and country population.

BECAUSE for 78 years it has been Central Illinois' "Home" paper, with 97% of its entire circulation delivered direct into the home, and renewals averaging 94%.

BECAUSE the Pantagraph enjoys, in the twin cities of Bloomington and Normal, a daily circulation twice that of its nearest competitor, covering 88% of the homes.

BECAUSE it goes into 77% of the homes of McLean County, the largest in Illinois. (Over 12,000 daily.)

BECAUSE there are now 300 miles of concrete highway lying within the Bloomington trading territory, giving a tremendous impetus to daily buying on the part of rural residents.

BECAUSE the Pantagraph "pulling power" is proved by the choice of its readers, who use in its columns four times as many Classified Ads as are printed by its local competitor.

The prominent theological schools of Chicago are: Chicago Theological Seminary, Garrett Biblical Institute, University of Chicago Divinity School, Western Theological Seminary, Quincy Memorial Seminary and McCormick Seminary.

Churches table with columns for Denomination and Number of Churches. Lists Advent Christian, Baptist, Methodist, etc.

Financial Institutions table with columns for Institution Name and Assets. Lists Savings and State Banks, Deposits, etc.

Chicago is the banking center of the prosperous Mississippi Valley. It abounds in financial institutions of strength and character. At the beginning of 1924 there were 51 national banks and 171 state banks, with combined cash resources of $2,627,877,000.

Theatres table with columns for Theatre Name and Seats. Lists Motion Picture, Vaudeville, and Productions.

Chicago is situated in the northwest corner of the State of Illinois, on the extreme southwest shore of Lake Michigan and extending along the shore for 26 miles.

It is the terminus of 37 railroads including 23 great railroad systems. The trunk lines terminating in Chicago are: Chicago & Northwestern, Chicago & Alton, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago Great Western, Pere Marquette, Soo Line (M. St. P. & S. Ste. M.), Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, New York Central, Nickel Plate (N. Y. C. & St. L.), Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Chicago and Western, Indiana (Suburban), Erie, Grand Trunk, Monon (C. I. & L.), Santa Fe (A. T. S. F.), Wabash, Big Four (C. C. & St. L.), Illinois Central, Michigan Central.

Chicago is by far the greatest railroad center in the whole world; 40% of the railway mileage of the United States terminates there. No train passes through Chicago. It either begins its journey or finishes there.

There are about 10,000 miles of railroad tracks within the city limits and an investment of $1,000,000,000 in railroad property. Chicago has the most comprehensive system for handling freight within its own railroad area; 1,400 miles of belt railway lines intersecting every railroad entering Chicago give unusual switching facilities by linking up the trunk railroads into a compact system.

Chicago has more than 120 railroad yards for the receipt, transfer and despatch of freight shipment with 184 freight receiving yards distributed throughout the city. A number of Chicago freight yards cover 100 acres and more of land each, and one a tract of 240 acres.

There is a supply of about 45,000 cars within the Chicago district each day. The freight traffic in and out of Chicago daily consists of about 27,000 cars.

Over 2,500 through package cars leave Chicago daily to about 2,000 points in forty-eight states, and one transfer service to 60,000 other points.

Chicago also has an unrivaled system for handling freight within the Metropolitan district. Belt lines intersect all railroads entering the city. The greatest switching yards have been built. Sixty miles of tunnel, under the central business section used exclusively for freight, connect docks, depots, warehouses, wholesalers and department stores and industries with the various railroad terminals and warehouses.

Chicago has four great systems of elevated railways, aggregating about 200 miles of tracks. These systems interchange business so that for one fare, passengers may go from one section of the city to the other merely by changing cars at the transfer stations. The Metropolitan "L" serves the west side of the city; Chicago and Oak Park System extends from the Loop westward, serving not only the West Side of Chicago, but some important suburban towns including Oak Park and Forest Park. The South Side "L" is what the name implies. The "Northwestern" "L" runs north from the Loop through Evanston to Wilmette and northwest to Ravenswood. The elevated railroads have 205 stations and 1,664 cars.

There are six railway passenger stations located in or near the heart of the city: Central Station, which is terminus for the Big Four, Illinois Central and Michigan Central; Chicago & Northwestern Station, terminus for all divisions of the C. & N. W. Ry.; Dearborn Station, for Santa Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Erie, Grand Trunk, Wabash, and Chicago & Western Indiana. The Grand Central Station, for Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago Great Western, Soo Line, Pere Marquette; the LaSalle Street Station, for Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, New York Central Lines, New York, Chicago & St. Louis; Union Station, for Chicago & Alton, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Pennsylvania Lines.

There are five electric interurban roads serving Chicago. These lines extend far out into the suburbs and surrounding territory and connect with many other electric railway systems that feed Chicago. There is also a motor bus company and an interurban motor despatch which is a freight service over the various electric lines. There are five electric surface lines that start in or near the city limits and extend into suburban territory.

The Chicago Motor Coach Co. has in operation in Chicago about 500 of the latest type double-deck motor buses, serving nearly all sections of the city. This new service is rapidly expanding and at present about twenty-five new buses per month are being added.

Other facilities are: Nine motor truck lines serving a radius of 50 miles in daily operation. Chicago has been established as the headquarters of the Air Mail Service of the U. S. and is the center of plans for development of commercial air travel.

Chicago Freight Tunnel: Beneath the streets of Chicago's business district are 55 miles of freight tunnels, electrically operated, connecting factories, warehouses, wholesale and retail stores with central district freight stations. Tunnel service eliminates trucking and saves time and money for shippers.

This system furnishes universal freight forwarding through four stations conveniently located at different points in the central district, for concerns not having direct tunnel connections.

Thirteen hundred passenger trains carrying 250,000 passengers arrive and depart every day. Of the passengers, about 180,000 are commuters and 70,000 are travelers.

The following steamship lines (freight and passenger) maintain routes from Chicago: Chicago, Duluth & Georgian Bay; Goodrich Steamship Lines; Carham & Morton Line; Michigan Transit Co., and Chicago & South Haven Steamship Co. There are about 50 other lines that run into Chicago, practically all of which are bulk freighters carrying coal, iron, lumber, steel, grain and automobiles.

Freight Transportation in Chicago District: Approximately 500 road freight trains bring to and take from Chicago district 30,000 freight cars each day. Of this amount there are about 15,000 inbound and 15,000 outbound. Of the total, 30,000 only about one-third are empty. 26.5 per cent of all the freight cars brought into Chicago are through cars. Therefore 73.5 per cent of the cars are loaded with goods for distribution in Chicago.

Chicago has as many freight cars going in and out daily as New York and St. Louis combined. The Chicago District loads about 4 1/2 percent and unloads about 1 1/2 percent of the country's total freight car loadings. In other words about 10.5 percent of all the freight cars loaded in the United States are loaded or unloaded in the Chicago District.

There are 30,000,000 tons of merchandise in and out of Chicago each year. The ratio of business moving out of Chicago to business moving west out of Chicago is 1.50 to 1. More than 4,000 industries are served by private side tracks.

The Chicago roads own 50.4 percent of the total number of freight cars owned by class one railroads; 40 percent of the locomotives and 47 percent of the total passenger cars. About 100,000 people living in Chicago are engaged in railroad service.

The clearing yards have a capacity of 10,580 cars. The Proviso yards a capacity of 4,705 cars at the present time and the plans for the new yards arrange for the accommodation of 22,000 cars. The Illinois Central yards will have

What a space buyer ought to know—

—about The Chicago Tribune and its market

1. The City

- (a) In Chicago and its immediate suburbs there are more people than in any one of the thirty-six states shown in black on the map opposite.
- (b) In this tremendous market The Chicago Tribune (with 40% more local circulation than the next paper) reaches practically 100% of the English reading families.

2. The Territory

- (a) The Chicago Territory (Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin) with one-eleventh of the area of the United States, has one-sixth of the population, who possess one-fifth of the national wealth.
- (b) In each of 1063 towns and cities of these five states (outside of Chicago) The Chicago Tribune reaches from one-fifth to four-fifths of the families. Of these towns 471 are shown by dots on the map opposite.

3. Dealer Influence

- (a) In Chicago 80% to 85% of the retailers read The Tribune. Outside the city, in a zone 400 miles in diameter, from 60% to 85% of the retailers read The Tribune.
- (b) Not only do they read it but from 63% to 87% of them state that Chicago Tribune advertising is a selling influence and moves goods from their shelves.

4. Cost

- (a) Chicago Tribune advertising space is economical because circulation increases make each contract a great bargain before it expires. The chart at the left shows the rate at which the paper has grown.
- (b) Compared with other media Chicago Tribune space is positively cheap. Based on circulation and rates of October, 1924, National advertisers can buy space in The Tribune on week days for $1.46 per milline and on Sundays for $1.30 per milline. How much space are you buying at rates as low as these, Mr. Space Buyer?

The Tribune's BOOK OF FACTS on markets and merchandising will be mailed free if requested on business stationery.

Principal Industries.

Table with 2 columns: Metropolitan District and Municipal. Rows include Establishments, Persons engaged, Proprietor and firm members, Salaried employees, Wage earners, Capital, Salaries, Wages, Cost of materials, Value of product, and Value added by mfg.

The Chicago Industrial District, which ranked second in manufacturing in 1914, embraced 409,087 acres, of which 120,210 acres represent the area of Chicago and 288,877 the outside territory.

Chicago is the pre-eminent city of diversified industry. It produces a wide variety of manufactured products because it possesses conditions favorable to nearly every type of industry.

The principal industries of Chicago for which statistics can be presented separately, arranged in the order of value of product in 1919.

Table with 2 columns: Industry and 1914 Output. Rows include Slaughtering and meat packing, Foundry and machine shop products, Printing and publishing, Clothing, men's, including shirts, Electrical machinery, apparatus and supplies, Bread and bakery products, Cars, steam, railroad, Automobiles, including bodies and parts, Clothing, women's, Confectionery and ice cream, Paint and varnish, Furniture, Lumber and timber products, Copper, tin and sheet iron products, Soap, Musical instruments, Boots and shoes, Boxes—paper and other, Leather goods, Fur goods.

Table with 4 columns: Industry, 1914-19, Increase, Per Cent Increase. Rows include Slaughtering and meat packing, Foundry and machine shop products, Printing and publishing, Clothing, men's, including shirts, Electrical machinery, apparatus and supplies, Bread and bakery products, Cars, steam, railroad, Automobiles, including bodies and parts, Clothing, women's, Confectionery and ice cream, Paint and varnish, Furniture, Lumber and timber products, Copper, tin and sheet iron products, Soap, Musical instruments, Boots and shoes, Boxes—paper and other, Leather goods, Fur goods.

Grand total, including all industries not listed above, $2,009,052,000 139.

The importance of the slaughtering and meat-packing industry is apparent when it is noticed that its value of products formed 24.9 per cent of the total for the industry in the United States.

Chicago is a great industrial center because it combines in the most advantageous manner the greatest number of the various facilities, conveniences and conditions required for the successful manufacturing and merchandising in a great variety of lines.

Chicago is not only the most important manufacturing city in Illinois, but ranks second only to New York annually.

Meat Packing.

The slaughtering and meat packing industry ranks first among the industries of the U. S. in point of cost of materials and value of product. Chicago is the greatest distributing center for meats and meat products in the world.

An official valuation of the live stock sold at the Chicago stockyards is $514,845,245 (1923). During the year 19,073,116 head of live stock were handled, including 3,157,100 cattle, 769,751 calves, 11,031,367 hogs, 4,067,833 sheep and 26,065 horses. The actual number of carcasses received was 313,228.

Chicago Leads as Canned Goods Mart.

Manufacture and distribution of "tinned" foods from Chicago are sent to all parts of the world and reach huge annual figures. It has been said that Chicago feeds the world. The annual output is large. There are 96 packers, large and small, in meat and meat products, 25 producers of foods, 26 packers and canners of pickles, 13 manufacturers and canners of preserves, 11 producers of condensed evaporated milk, one canner of eggs, 35 manufacturers of cans, one manufacturer of can keys, two manufacturers of canning machinery, and five manufacturers of can making machinery in the district of Chicago.

The Chicago furniture market is the most important wholesale display market in the entire furniture industry.

Musical Instruments.

Chicago produces 100,000 pianos annually. This represents more than one-third of the entire production of the U. S., and employs from 6,500 to 7,000 people. This city has an immense establishment devoted to making player-pianos—35,000 a year. Chicago holds a leading position in the manufacture of band instruments and has assumed prominence in phonograph making and considerable output of all kinds of orchestra instruments.

Cloaks and Suits.

Chicago ranks among the largest centers for the manufacture of men's and ladies' garments. This industry gives employment to more than 52,000 people. This number shows approximately 70 per cent female and 30 per cent male. Of these 30 per cent are Jews, 20 per cent Bohemian, 20 per cent American, 15 per cent Polish, 10 per cent Italian and 5 per cent miscellaneous. In value, men's clothing manufactured in Chicago is one-fifth of that produced in the United States.

Telephone Apparatus.

Enormous quantities of telephone apparatus (switchboards, telephone instruments, etc.) are made in Chicago. Over 60 per cent of the world's supply is manufactured in this city. The annual production of telephone apparatus all over the world is valued at $110,000,000, of which $68,000,000 is produced in Chicago.

Candy.

With sales that average fully $50,000,000 annually, Chicago is well in the lead as the center for distribution of candy throughout the Central West.

The production of this amount of candy necessitates a large number of well equipped factories, and with these Chicago is amply supplied. A conservative estimate places the investment in candy plants in Chicago at more than $25,000,000. This figure refers merely to the factories and not to the capitalization of the companies, some of which have other interests.

The Chicago factories use about 300,000 pounds of almonds annually and about 200 to 300 carloads of beans. The consumption of sugar by local candy plants is in the vicinity of 5,000 carloads a year, or about 200,000 tons. Great amounts of chocolate are used, but the amount consumed cannot be estimated according to experts, because many of the big plants grind their own supply of chocolate beans.

Special Information.

Chicago transportation surface lines cover more than 1,100 miles of single track, serving 172 lines with 575 transfer points. Daily traffic—2,000,000 cash and 1,500,000 transfer passengers.

Twenty-five hundred through package freight cars leave Chicago daily to 2,000 shipping points. From these shipping points, other shipping points are reached by making one change.

275,030 passengers arriving and departing from Chicago railway stations daily. Of these 229,339 are ambarran and 45,691 are through passengers.

Chicago has 14 large city parks and 197 small parks and 73 municipal playgrounds in various sections of the city. This system of parks with 83 miles of boulevards offer health and recreation to all people in all seasons of the year. Chicago's lake front affords unlimited opportunity for play. Bathing beaches line the shore and beautiful boulevards parallel part of the lake front.

The Parcels Post business at the Chicago Post Office exceeds that of any other five cities in the United States.

The Chicago Post Office in 1923 handled 3,138,035,027 pieces of mail. 3,609,594 money orders were issued in 1923 to the extent of $38,285,838.05. 38,699,389 money orders were cashed in 1920 to the extent of $244,661,850.64.

Total receipts of the Chicago Post Office were $51,506,651.83, or about 27 per cent of the total business done by all offices in the country. Chicago does 60 per cent of the mail order business of the United States. The greater part is done by the two biggest mail order houses in the world. A million and a half people shop in Chicago in a busy week by this method.

The Electric Light Company of Chicago has over 700,000 consumers.

Chicago has more telephones per capita than any other large city, and it is the greatest telephone using community in the world. There are 601,515 telephones in use, one for each 4.21 persons. Average number of calls per day, 2,750,000.

Chicago is the greatest commercial center in the United States, because of the preponderance of package freight shipments, statistics showing that the package freight business of Chicago is 10% over that of the general average of the percentage of the total tonnage for this class of business.

It is estimated that within a night's ride of Chicago there is a population of more than 50,000 people. The territory within this radius reaches from Omaha in the West, to Pittsburgh in the East, and from Minneapolis and St. Paul on the North, to Memphis and Nashville on the South.

Situated in the very heart of the largest producing section in the universe, Chicago is the great central market for butter, eggs, fruit and vegetables. The South Water Street District, where trade is concentrated in 10 to 12 blocks, is known of all over the world.

The produce trade of Chicago ranks amongst Chicago's largest business interests, generally estimated as doing a business of between six and seven hundred millions of dollars annually.

Port of Chicago.

Chicago owes its advantages as a port largely to the natural protection for vessels afforded by the mouths of the Chicago River and Calumet River. Breakwaters have been built on the east and for some distance out on the north and south by the United States Government, thus forming an outer harbor of 21-foot depth. The rapid growth of Chicago led to the development of her port facilities known as Chicago River, Calumet River, Indiana Harbor and Gary, all within the metropolitan district and to be considered Greater Chicago ports. Chicago now has 101 miles of water frontage for the handling of its water borne commerce, of which 52 miles are equipped with dock and railway facilities. Its outer harbor has a frontage of 24 miles, protected by Government breakwaters.

The chief business of Chicago's first port, the Chicago River, is the transportation of lumber, coal and package freight. The Calumet River has now become Chicago's greatest industrial harbor. From this harbor are served the numerous industries of South Chicago, East Chicago, Indiana Harbor and Gary by rail connection. Around this port are grouped steel mills, furnaces, smelters, forging plants, foundries, grain warehouses and numerous other factories and plants.

The total tonnage of the Greater Chicago Ports exceed 18,000,000 tons annually, and each month brings fresh demands for increased provision for the handling of more raw materials and the greater shipment of manufactured products.

Chicago at this moment is a port registering 4,000 to 5,000 arrivals and an equal number of vessels that carry annually each way over 12,500,000 tons of freight.

There are 64 grain elevators in Chicago with a total capacity of 54,235,000 bu., 29 of these having a capacity of 1,000,000 bu. or more.

Residential Features.

The residents of the City of Chicago occupy principally one and two-family houses built of brick. Chicago is known as a "City of Brick."

At the end of December, 1923, there were 160,272 one-family houses; 101,500 two-flat buildings; 41,630 apartment houses with 269,303 individual living apartments and 63,397 living apartments over stores. From the above figures it is estimated that 762,600 live in one-family houses, 1,050,000 live in two-flat buildings, and 1,112,400 live in apartments.

According to the federal census bureau the number of homes in Chicago, as enumerated in January, 1920, was 625,910 of which 485,966, or 78.6 per cent, were owned by the occupants, and 447,405, or 71.7 per cent, were rented; for the remaining 10,639 the facts as to tenure were not reported. Of the owned homes 58,382, or 35.2 per cent, were free from encumbrance and 102,719, or 61.9 per cent, were mortgaged; for the remaining 4,765 no information as to mortgage indebtedness was secured.

The bureau of the census secured reports regarding the value of the home, the amount of the encumbrance and the rate of interest from 76,573, or 74.5 per cent, of the 102,719 mortgaged homes enumerated in the census. The average market value of the mortgaged homes was $6,460, and the average mortgage was $2,734. Assuming that the average value and the average mortgage debt for the homes not reporting was the same as for those for which reports were secured, the total market value of all mortgaged homes in Chicago was estimated at $684,000,000 and the total mortgage debt at $281,000,000.

The prevailing rate of interest was 6 per cent, this being the rate reported for 83.9 per cent of the total number of homes reported as mortgaged and 81.6 per cent of the total amount of mortgage indebtedness. Five and one-half per cent was the rate on 9.16 per cent of the total number and 5 per cent was the rate on 3.1 per cent of the total number of mortgaged homes reporting. From 5 per cent to and including 7 per cent formed 98.7 per cent of the number of homes reporting the rate of encumbrance on their mortgaged debt. For the remaining indebtedness other rates were reported, ranging from less than 5 per cent to more than 8 per cent. The average rate on all mortgages was 5.9 per cent.

Of the 76,573 mortgaged homes concerning which information was secured 5,069, or 6.7 per cent, were valued at less than $2,500; 30,127, or 39.3 per cent, at $2,500 to $5,000; 22,100, or 28.9 per cent, at $5,000 to $7,500; 9,444, or 12.3 per cent, at $7,500 to $10,000; 5,721, or 7.5 per cent, at $10,000 to $15,000; and 4,082, or 5.3 per cent, at $15,000 and over. Of the latter number 1,308, or 1.7 per cent, were valued at $25,000 and over.

As a rule the greater the value of the home the smaller the proportion which the encumbrance represents of the total market value, this proportion ranging from 38.8 per cent for homes valued at $15,000 to $20,000 each to 50.2 per cent for those valued at less than $2,500. On homes rated at amounts of more than $25,000 the encumbrance amounted to $22,466,190, forming 41.9 per cent of the market value on January 1, 1920.

Retail Section.

The main business section which is known as the Loop District, is a seething cauldron of commerce, finance, traffic congestion and humanity. It embraces only a quarter of a square mile. In this little patch are 19 streets, running east and west and north and south. On fifteen of these streets are street car tracks and cars turning in all directions at every intersection.

There are daily within this district 10,000 street cars, 152,000 vehicles of all sorts, 325,000 working population and over 1,000,000 floating population. This wildly pulsating heart is held in place in the coil of the river which bounds it

IN THE Chicago market proper, where evening papers are supreme in their ability to sell merchandise, the daily average net-paid TOTAL CIRCULATION of all four Chicago evening newspapers for the six-month period ending September 30, 1924, was 1,016,035.

Of this total, the Chicago Evening American sold 458,189 papers every day, or more than 45% of THE ENTIRE EVENING NEWSPAPER DISTRIBUTION.

If any advertiser thinks he can cover the Chicago market without using this 45% of the city's entire evening newspaper circulation, he is GUESSING —and GUESSING WRONG.

Sworn statements of circulation for the six-month period ending Sept. 30, 1924 show that the Chicago Evening American has more circulation within the city of Chicago than any other daily newspaper; that it leads the second evening newspaper (the Daily News), by more than 65,000 in total circulation and by more than 27,000 in city and suburban circulation.

on two sides, the railroads on the third and the lake on the fourth.

Chicago has outgrown this small and congested district known the country over as the "Loop," and with about 70 active communities with outlying banks, where total deposits exceed $350,000,000 and whose capital surplus and undivided profits run over $35,000,000, it is no wonder that the business of Chicago is being distributed throughout the entire city.

In six blocks on State street, the main downtown retail trade, the retail clothing, dry goods and department store business is said to be equal to that of any similar area in the world. This includes the paper of pins as well as the million individual sales are made within these few blocks every day.

The new Boulevard Link Bridge which has recently been opened connecting Michigan avenue on the south with Lake Shore Drive on the north has given downtown Chicago its greatest opportunity for the spreading of general business, particularly offices, retail stores, and especially shops. The business trend is out of the Loop and northward on Michigan Boulevard.

The following are the principal shopping centers or neighborhood retail sections. In most cases with these herewith mentioned the shopping is not necessarily confined to the immediate section or even streets. Some of the larger neighborhood centers are really the centers of towns within Chicago, the sales area will extend from two or three blocks on one or both streets to ten and twelve in some of the larger retail distributing centers.

Trading Area.

In attempting to secure accurate information in regard to the trading area of Chicago it was necessary for our representatives to become familiar with transportation facilities, character of inhabitants, size of cities and towns, distributing facilities of large Chicago stores and many other details before arriving at a conclusion of what is the retail trading area divided into a daily trading zone, weekly zone and monthly zone.

The areas have been carefully checked by impartial sales managers, merchandising managers, advertising managers, shipping clerks and others whose knowledge of Chicago territory was of value. The areas were rearranged from time to time as special information and further study of shipping facilities and buying habits of people were noted.

The three areas represent first the daily zone where the bulk of daily business is secured; second, the weekly zone. In this territory buyers are accustomed to travel to the city for business and pleasure at least once a week. Third the limits of territory from where Chicago draws trade at least once a month. Within this zone are many fair sized cities and towns which can easily supply the daily wants of its citizens but close enough to Chicago for those buyers to travel about once a month and usually large sales are made.

The daily zone extends to Waukegan on the north and swings westward in a semi-circle around Chicago to Gary and on the east including Oak Park, Highland Park, Northville, Chicago Heights, Hammond, S. Chicago, Wheaton, and Dyer.

The weekly zone area extends northward to Racine, Wisconsin, then swinging around in an irregular semi-circle to Michigan City, Indiana. This zone depends a great deal on transportation facilities. The larger cities within this zone are Elgin, Joliet, Aurora, Geneva, Syracuse, DeKalb, Mokena, Valparaiso, Ind., and Kenosha, Wisconsin. Within this zone the larger stores maintain free delivery to the larger cities.

The monthly zone area on the north extends only a little further than the weekly zone as far as S. Milwaukee, from there the boundary line swings almost directly west to Dubuque, Iowa, including Rockford, Janesville, Evansville, Galena, Freeport and Beloit, all to the northwest.

The furthest point west of Chicago is the monthly trading zone Cedar Rapids, Iowa; from this point the boundary line begins to swing south and then east, and in this direction are included Davenport and Clinton, Iowa; Rock Island, Moline, Cambridge and Galesburg, Ill. Directly northward is Peoria, Bloomington and Pontiac. The point furthest south in this zone is Champaign and Urbana. This trading zone then swings northeast through Lafayette, Logansport, Goshen, all in Indiana, through Three Rivers, Michigan, and again swings northwest to the east bank of Lake Michigan. The large cities in this direction are South Bend, South Haven, St. Joseph and Benton Harbor.

Chicago is the distributing center of the United States. Its wholesale trade in 1920 was estimated at $6,000,000,000. It is the world's live stock, grain and lumber market. It leads in the distribution of dry goods, general merchandise, foodstuffs, machinery, jewelry, pianos, wearing apparel, automobiles, furniture and household requisites.

Chicago has one of the great jewelry jobbing houses of the United States, and the city's business in jewelry runs from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 annually. The business is growing at a tremendous rate and it already holds an important place among Chicago's business activities.

There are more than 80 manufacturers of jewelry and kindred lines that have headquarters in Chicago, and there are fully 70 more that maintain offices and salesrooms with headquarters elsewhere. More than 170 jobbers of jewelry and kindred lines have headquarters in Chicago. There are more than 100 manufacturers and jobbers of china, umbrellas, lamps and brass goods in Chicago.

From a small beginning the jewelry trade of Chicago has developed so rapidly that it now ranks seventh on Chicago's business list.

Theatres: Moving Pictures, 4. Total number of seats, 2,700.
Location: Pekin & Peoria Union Ry.; Big Four; Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis and I. C. Ry., Eagle Packet Line on Illinois River. Excellent distributing point for the Middle West, or West, East, North and South, indicated by location here of several enormous industries for the size of Pekin.
Principal Industries: Corn Products Refining Co., Liberty Yeast Corp., American Distillery (alcohol), Hammer Saddlery Works, Pekin Wagon Co., Quaker Oats Co. (strawboard factory). Next year will erect enormous big cereal mill.
Manufacturing Establishments: 6.
Special Information: Is one of the few cities formerly closely allied with the liquor industries which has not suffered by prohibition. Ideal location for factory purposes, due to rail facilities and prospects of enlarged river transportation on the Illinois River under deep waterways projects. Steady growth in population, which, in spite of construction of over 700 new homes in three years, causes a scarcity of houses and forcing about 1,500 workers to live in Peoria and nearby small towns.

—in PEORIA intelligent space buyers use the STAR

Some space buyers do so because past experience has proven to them that the STAR is the dominant paper in downstate Illinois—the paper with the greatest circulation—the paper of proven results. Others do so because they have noticed that this paper carries the greater proportion of local advertising, a good criterion by which to judge any newspaper.

That their judgment is vindicated we offer these figures—the results of tests made by a certain large local retailer (name on request and testimonial letter on file), on different dates, under widely different circumstances:

A one-day offer on a certain staple article, brought direct replies (keyed coupons) in this proportion:

Results that show STAR pulling power is almost TWICE that of its nearest competitor. Incidentally, this offer was made by a merchant who sells for cash only.

Another offer, by the same merchant, on DOLLAR DAY, when competition of all kinds is strongest, was made to prove the percentage of effective or buying circulation, and resulted as follows:

Paper	Cir- culation	% Coupons per paper	% Coupons to circulation
Star .....	29,197	50.04	1.897

Proving the Star to be superior in results as regards total sales, pulling more than its two closest competitors combined, and also superior in results per centum circulation.

Peoria is the second city in Illinois, situated halfway between Chicago and St. Louis. Peoria has 179,030 people in its trading area who spend $75,000,000.00 annually. Peoria shows a buying power of $732 per capita, in this radius, as compared to $172 in Chicago. 31% of Peoria's homes have an annual income of $1800, as compared with a national average of 13%. Peoria is the center of the corn product industry and near the center of gross farm income, in the heart of a vast bituminous coal field, and is the heart of the pure bred hog industry—the home of the National Swine Show. The STAR is Peoria's favored paper—serving the nation's favored territory. You should be represented in its columns—are you?

PEORIA HUB OF GREAT MARKET

One of the reasons Peoria has held a place among the leading markets of America is that she is the center point of a trade area seldom acquired by a city of her size. Ten years ago Peoria placed her trade radius at 25 miles. Today it extends at least twice and probably three times that far in all directions.

The trade territory in which Peoria justly claims to be the shipping center expended close to $80,000,000 during the past year.

What Peoria Spends.

A resume of some of the more important articles sold in the Peoria market during the past year:

Automobiles .....	$6,478,000

Close Study

WHEN selling conditions in a market are outstandingly favorable and inviting, an unusual concentration and emphasis in sales and advertising plans is strongly advisable.

In the great Indianapolis market the—

INDIANAPOLIS TIMES

—is an advertising medium of great importance for the national advertiser. With a large EVENING circulation not noticeably duplicated by the other evening paper, The Times provides advertising contact with substantial home buying power which no other paper reaches.

Most merchandise is sold to population groups YOUNG in average age. The Times is the progressive, liberal type of paper which strongly appeals to this most responsive group. List the Times even though this may mean listing two papers.

The Times is a Scripps-Howard Paper, and is represented in the national field by—

INDIANA (Cont'd)

Location: The 17 railroads and the 13 interurban lines radiating in all directions from Indianapolis are listed: 4 companies operate 13 lines, I. U. T., E. E. & E., I. C., I. P. S. Co. The 17 railroads are (the eight companies named maintain 17 railroads out of the city): C. I. & L. C. I. & W., C. C. C. & St. L., Illinois Central, L. E. & W., Peunysylvania, New York, Chicago & St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis.

Principal Industries: There are 1,215 manufacturing concerns making more than 850 distinct articles, including silk hose, shock absorbers, cotton gloves, pop corn machines, quality automobiles, poultry remedies, auto bodies, pharmaceutical products, transmission chains, hog serum, saws and tools, fire fighting apparatus, and food products. Packing and agricultural industries are of equal importance.

Manufacturing Establishments: 1,215. Leading firms, E. C. Atkins & Co., Nordyck & Marmon, Link Belt, Reel Silk Hosiery Mills, Robert H. Hassler, Stutz Fire Engine Co., Van Camp Products Co., Holcomb & Hoke, Martin-Perry Corp., Eli Lilly Co., Frest-O-Lite Co., Cole Motor Car Co., Premier, Stutz Motor Co. of America, Diamond Chain & Mfg. Co., J. C. Adams & Co., Kingan & Co., F. M. Dilling & Co.

Total value of yearly output of factories estimated at $450,000,000 (1923); packing industry, $135,000,000.

Special Information: Although 21st in population, Indianapolis is 15th in volume of retail business. The assessed valuation of Indianapolis is in excess of $600,000,000. The city is within 55 miles of the center of population of the United States. It is an equal distance from the industrial center of the nation as determined by the Census Bureau. It is the largest inland city in the world. 33% of the population have individual incomes of over $1,800 annually. More than 9,000 new homes have been built in the last 3 years.

Residential Features: Principally single dwellings—89,256 families live in 79,550 dwellings, or about 11% occupy doubles, duplexes, flats, and apartments. The Zoning Commission regulates the residential, industrial, commercial and manufacturing districts.

Retail Shopping Section: Principal section is the "Mile Square," or the district of about that area bounded by East, North, West and South streets. There are 6 large neighborhood districts—South Meridian, Irvington, 30th and Illinois, Haughville, Broad Ripple, Fountain Square. There are approximately twice as many smaller neighborhood districts, including Alabama and Ft. Wayne avenues, East 10th and Brookside, 30th and Northwestern, 38th and College, and others.

Trading Area: The trading area is that territory within a radius of 50 miles. Because of the network of electric interurban lines, steam roads, and improved State highways, Indianapolis has a transient population of over 20,000 daily. This is based on the number of passengers carried by the transportation companies, including bus lines. Many thousands undoubtedly arrive in their own automobiles. It is because of this, that the volume of retail business done is many times larger than the actual city population might produce.

Wholesale Houses: Groceries, 13; Meats, 15; Fruits, 4; Hardware, 4; Dry Goods, 5; Miscellaneous Lines—Confectioners, 16; Cigars and Tobacco, 11; Jewelry, 6; Plumbers, 7; Drug, 3; Auto Accessories, 7.

The statistical services don't tell everything

There is a "tertium quid"—a third something—about a newspaper that does not show on the rate card or in the statistical services but it is equally important with circulation and advertising lineage or endorsement. Call it what you will—character, prestige, reader interest, effectiveness, editorial service to the reader, acceptance or by any other generality—it is coordinate in value to the advertiser with circulation. You don't have to pay for this tertium quid. It is not included in the rate. But without it, the rate is a meaningless index to the newspaper's value.

The latest A. B. C. report discloses the plain fact that The News has the largest circulation in Indiana—daily or Sunday. But it does not tell you that The News has more home delivered circulation in Indianapolis than both other Indianapolis papers combined. It gives no hint, either, of the tremendous hold of The News on its readers, its indispensability to them.

It is common knowledge that The News carries more paid advertising lineage than both other Indianapolis papers combined—six issues a week against thirteen. But the statistical services don't tell you that The News has ruled out or rejected more than a million dollars worth of available lineage in the past ten years, most of which was considered acceptable by its contemporaries.

The well-known fact that The News leads the field in local advertising does not portray the full importance of The News to local merchants. The News carries their unabridged advertising. Day after day it fills their stores in response to item copy, copy they have run largely exclusively in The News because they know they need advertise the same items in no other Indianapolis paper. Local advertisers must carry full copy in The News, because the housewives of Indianapolis have been taught by long experience to look there first.

The editorial excellence of The News is nationally known and respected.

But to judge the editorial content of The News in relation to its readers you must see The News through Indiana eyes. You must appreciate the loyalty and interest, the affection and confidence of its readers—dealers, laymen, authors, lawyers, jobbers, laborers—people of every walk of life, representing several times the total circulation of 128,000.

The rate card and statistical services give no hint of the unusually high standards of business practice which have guided The News throughout the fifty-four years of its existence, from minor beginnings to its present dominance of its field.

The statistical services, while valuable, don't tell everything. If you could see The News as it appeals to its Hoosier reader, you would appreciate the enormous value of its "tertium quid"—the third something—the intangible yet invaluable factors that have made and keep The News a great newspaper.

Total value of yearly output of factories estimated at $20,000,000.

Special Information: The location of this city on the Ohio River, with the only vehicle and automobile bridge on the Ohio, west of Cincinnati, makes New Albany the gateway between the North and South. New Albany is the southern terminus of Indiana's State road No. 1, concrete, running from Michigan to the Ohio River. Also of state road No. 5 and state road No. 16, 16 miles. Connected by the Kentucky & Indiana to the Pacific Ocean. New Albany is the center of southern Indiana's most historic and picturesque scenery. Gravel cement, sand and lime distribution center. 6,000 passenger autos, 1,500 trucks. Jackson Highway, Dixie Highway, Midland Trail and Daniel Boone Trail all pass through this city.

Residential Features: Mostly one and two-family houses. Private homes predominate. There are a number of flats and apartment houses. One of the most delightful residential sections in southern Indiana is located just west of the city on Silver Hills, overlooking the Ohio River and valley.

Retail Shopping Section: Extends four squares of Oak St., five squares on Spring St., five squares on Market St., and five squares on State St. Each of these streets has practically as much additional retail sections in the eastern end of the city, with Vincennes St. as the center, with quite a good many stores intervening. Vincennes St. is a retail shopping section for 10 squares. There are also a number of smaller neighborhood sections in the different parts of the city, with the usual number of groceries, meats, drugs and confectionery stores.

Trading Area: Extends about forty miles southwest, west, northwest, north and northeast to ten miles east. On the south we are shut off by the Ohio River, but do get quite a large amount of trade from the city of Louisville. Business is secured from these great distances because of the size of our city and the dominating character of its wholesale and retail stores, being the best in southern Indiana south of Indianapolis.

Space Buyers' Guide to Daily Newspaper Markets of KENTUCKY

ASHLAND, KY.

1920 Population, 14,729; 1923, 25,120.
City and Suburban Estimate, 100,000. Using ABC suburban limits.
Native Whites, 97%; Negroes, 2.80%; Foreign Born, .20%; Industrial Workers, 30%; English Reading, 99%; Families, 5,021.
Schools: Public Grade, 3,580; High, 576; Junior High, 490; Parochial, 300; Number of Pupils, 4,946.
Churches: Baptist, 4; Christian Science, 1; Episcopal, 1; Hebrew, 2; Methodist, 7; Presbyterian, 2; Roman Catholic, 1; Miscellaneous, 5.
Banks: National, 3; Total Resources, $9,712,000; Savings Bank Deposits Total $1,203,500.
Theatres: Moving Pictures, 6; Miscellaneous (Auditoriums, etc.), 4; Total number of seats, 3,500.

Location: On the Ohio River at the mouth of the Big Sandy River. On main line of C. & O., and terminal of the Big Sandy Div. and Lexington divisions of this line. N. & W. main line and B. & O. Junction with C. & O. three miles from this city at Kenova, W. Va. River makes transportation very heavy.

Principal Industries: Iron and steel and their products, coal by-products, leather, fire-brick and common brick, lumber.

Manufacturing Establishments: 14. Leading firms, American Rolling Mill Co., Ashland By-Products Coke Co., Ashland Leather Co., Ashland Fire Brick Co., Ashland Steel Co., Norton Iron Wks., Van Sant-Kitchen Lumber Co.

Special Information: Ashland is located at the mouth of the Big Sandy Valley, one of the richest coal, oil and gas regions of American Rolling Mill Co., has recently completed a plant costing $13,000,000. The fact that coal and iron can reach the city at a minimum transportation cost has caused the rapid growth of the city and surrounding territory.

Residential Features: Wide paved and shady streets contain mostly one family houses of three classes. About 30% workingmen's homes, averaging $2,500 to $3,500. Second class, about 3% average $5,000 to $6,000, and remaining 2% are beautiful homes in newly made subdivisions, costly from $8,000 to $20,000.

Retail Shopping Section: Winchester Ave. for 18 blocks east and west contains most of the retail section. Greenup Ave. parallel and to the north has 4 squares of retail section and contains practically all of the wholesale houses.

Trading Area: North to Greenup 13 miles, east to Coal Grove, Ohio, 2 miles, west to Morehead 50 miles and south to Prestonsburg 50 miles is A. B. C. suburban radius. This is practically the trading area, except that much trade is drawn from the Big Sandy Valley to the south, including Pikeville and Jenkins. This is true because of the funnel-shaped valleys, the only outlet is through Ashland.

Wholesale Houses: Groceries, 3; Meats, 2; Fruits, 3; Hardware, 2; Dry Goods, 1; Miscellaneous Lines: Drugs, 1; Boots and Shoes 1.

Number of Retail Outlets for Nationally Advertised Products: Passenger automobile agencies, 16; commercial auto. agencies, 10; automobile accessories, 20; automobile tire agencies, 2; bakers, 4; cigar stores and stands (including hotels), 32; confectioners (including hotel stands), 42; delicatessen, 3; dressmakers, 5; druggists, 12; dry goods, 12; department stores, 4; electrical supplies, 13; florists, 3; fruits, 7; furniture, 7; garages (public), 12; grocers, 80; hardware, 4; jewelry, 5; meat markets, 10; men's furnishings, 20; men's clothing, 20; merchant tailors, 4; milliners, 3; opticians, 4; photographers, 3; pianos (and miscellaneous musical instruments), 6; radio supplies, 6; restaurants (including hotels), 18; shoes, 8; sporting goods, 4; stationers, 3; women's apparel, 12.

Chaperoned Distribution

¶ It's a short trip and a safe one from the doorstep to the hearthstone—or its modern equivalent. That's as far as most Sunpapers have to travel unchaperoned by a guardian with a real interest in their welfare.

¶ These guardians of the Sunpapers' journey from the press to the privacy of Baltimore's homes are the capable and energetic business men who own and operate the Sun Carrier Service.

¶ Through their efforts the larger part of the Sunpapers' circulation goes directly to the one place where a newspaper is really read and read thoroughly.

¶ The Sunpapers have street sales, of course, but the fact remains and the figures prove that the copies delivered to the homes of Baltimore by the exclusive Sun Carriers are the real backbone of their circulation.

¶ It's a strong backbone, too, and it grows stronger as the years roll by. Plenty strong enough to carry your message in the most effective way right where you want it to go—straight into the hands of men and women who have time to read it and the most comfortable place in the world in which to do that reading.

Population Classifies Itself by the Papers it Reads

In the Boston Area, those on the way up and those who have arrived, attach themselves to the Boston Evening Transcript. They may read other papers for this news department or that—but the paper they read thoroughly, the paper they cannot do without, the paper they regard as their paper is the Boston Evening Transcript. It is the only Boston daily paper never sold for less than three cents per copy—the Saturday edition selling for five cents.

The Boston Evening Transcript is the advertiser's passport to the best buying element in the Boston market.

Recognition of Transcript superiority by National Advertisers has been evidenced in the most practical manner.

There are 33 houses with more than 1,000 seats each, and 6 houses with seating capacity of more than 2,000 seats.

Location

Situated at the head of Massachusetts Bay, 230 miles northeast of New York, it has a harbor with berthing space of more than 40 miles, most of which is in active use for commercial purposes.

It is the terminus of three large railroads, the Boston and Maine and subsidiary lines, the Boston and Albany (New York Central, lessee) and the New York, New Haven and Hartford and subsidiary lines.

The Boston and Maine connects Boston with points west, north and east. Besides serving directly the territory in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, part of New York and the northern half of Massachusetts, the Boston and Maine connects at Portland, Maine, and other junctions in that section with the Maine Central Railroad for Maine and eastern Canadian territory. At Newport, Vermont, and White River Junction, Vt., traffic is fed to the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk, respectively, thence to points in Canada and the west.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford railway network covers southern Massachusetts, the states of Rhode Island and Connecticut, connecting at New York City with the various trunk lines west and south.

The various terminals at Boston are connected by the Union Freight operating along the waterfront for the purpose of interchange of freight. The Boston and Albany and the Boston and Maine also have direct physical connections for this purpose.

In addition to the freight service given by these roads, they daily bring to the terminal stations a vast throng of commuters. Nearly 100,000 passengers a day go through the North Station, while at the South Station nearly 150,000 arrive and depart every day on the more than 600 passenger trains. The northeastern section of the Metropolitan District is served by the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad. This urban steam line each day in the year brings in its thousands of commuters.

Surface, elevated and subway lines are maintained throughout the city by the Boston Elevated Railway Co.

These lines extend far out into the suburbs and connect with other electric lines running to points outside the Metropolitan or "Greater Boston" territory. A large proportion of these are the lines of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co., which is the largest street railway system in the world.

Principal Industries

As Editor & Publisher did not wish to publish facts and figures which in some cases might conflict with the publicity already issued by local organizations, which is based on the State definition of Metropolitan Boston, it is to be noted that all Metropolitan facts and figures in this chart are based on the Federal Government's definition of Metropolitan Boston.

perior manufacture, trunks and valises, window, door screens and weather strips, window shades and fixtures, wirework.

Pianos and Organs

For many years Massachusetts has held third place in the United States for the manufacture of pianos and organs. In 1919 the value of these instruments and the materials used in their production amounted to more than $13,000,000. Several makers of national reputation are located in Metropolitan Boston.

Slaughtering and Meat Packing

Although Metropolitan Boston is not one of the great meat packing centres of the country the annual product of the slaughtering and meat-packing industry amounts to nearly $100,000,000. Hence the demand for meat products in this locality are by no means wholly dependent upon the distant western sources of supply for their meat products. The great establishments in Somerville and Cambridge, employing several thousand workers, have a successful history of more than seventy years. In addition, Boston is the most important New England distribution point for western shipments. Several collateral industries of considerable importance have been built up in the Metropolitan Area.

Soap and Medical Supplies

Situated in the Metropolitan District is a factory of one of the world-famous soapmakers. This and the other 16 soap establishments of the region produce an annual output valued at approximately $17,500,000. The manufacture of patent medicines and drugs amounts to more than $16,000,000; and the plant of a company with branches all over the country is located here.

Electrical Machinery

With one of the largest electrical manufacturing plants in the world, and numerous other establishments, Metropolitan Boston is easily a leader in the production of electrical apparatus. In the ten years between 1909 and 1919 the number of workers employed by this industry in Massachusetts increased more than a third and the value of goods produced more than tripled. The total 15,678 electrical workers in Metropolitan Boston alone exceed the number employed in the whole state ten years before. The value of electrical manufactures in Metropolitan Boston amounted to $55,901,540 at the last federal census, more than half the total for the whole state in the same year and almost twice the total ten years before.

Furniture Specialties

Furniture manufactures in Metropolitan Boston include office furniture, folding and portable chairs, reed and rattan furniture, carriages and go-carts, school furniture, toy vehicles, railway car seats, cocoons, mats and matting and other reed and rattan products. Boston is the home of one of the greatest reed and rattan furniture manufacturing companies in the country. Its nine plants turn out a large part of the total American production of these specialties.

The Metal Trades

In the Metropolitan District 277 foundries and machine shops turn out an annual product amounting to more than $55,500,000. Tools and cutlery from 53 factories add $18,000,000 more to the annual output of metal products.

The Shoe Industry

Within 25 miles of Boston are more shoe factories than in any other section of similar size in the country. Boston is the greatest market in the world for boots and shoes. Practically half of all the rubber furniture, toy vehicles, railway car seats, cocoons, mats and matting, are manufactured in Eastern Massachusetts.

Boston is the headquarters of the industry which manufactures practically all the shoe machinery used in this country.

Cotton and Woolen Textiles

Boston is the leading market in the U. S. A. for cotton and woolen textiles. Boston leads the country as a wool market and in importations of wool.

The Fish Trade

Boston is the most up-to-date fish port in the world and in production is exceeded only by Grimsby, England. It has one of the largest fish piers in the world, built at a cost of $5,000,000, 1,200 feet in length, 300 feet in breadth, 537,000 square feet in area, having capacity for the simultaneous discharge of 80 vessels. On and adjacent to it is the largest fish freezing and cold storage plant in the world, with a capacity of 15,000,000 pounds, ice-making capacity of 230 tons daily and ice storage for 10,000 tons. Boston distributes more than 150,000,000 pounds of fish annually—the new Boston Fish Pier alone has handled over 2,000,000 pounds a day. This great business of turning into wealth the resources of the sea is an almost unappreciated asset.

Metropolitan Boston.—An area of approximately 400 square miles designated by statutory enactment, including Municipal Boston (748,000 population) and thirty-nine surrounding towns and cities, with a total population of 1,658,936.

Boston is one of the six great clothing markets of the United States. The latest federal census reports 9,965 wage-earners employed in all branches of this industry in Metropolitan Boston. The output of men's clothing amounts annually to over $33,000,000 and of women's clothing to about $25,000,000.

Special Information

Boston is a commercial and industrial centre of 1,657,000 people (Federal Metropolitan Boston 1,172,000) rather than a city of only 748,000. The real Boston extends far beyond the municipal boundaries. There is no break in the widening circle of stores, warehouses and factories which are thickly spread over the whole area of Metropolitan Boston. The forty towns and cities, whose economic interests are inextricably bound up with the banking and railroad and port facilities of their centre, comprise the real Boston. This Metropolitan District forms a powerful economic unit, the natural centre for the manufacturing and trading interests of New England, one of the richest industrial regions of the world.

Not only is Metropolitan Boston a mighty centre, but it is steadily growing in size and importance. So far from being merely bedrooms of Boston business people, the other municipalities of the Metropolitan Area are so many parts of one great business community.

Thirteen of these municipalities each manufacture annually goods valued at over $10,000,000, and nine more than $20,000,000 each. Below the $10,000,000 line, among the smaller communities which are chiefly residential in character, are twelve each of which turn out over a million dollars worth of goods annually, the amount ranging from a little over $1,000,000 to more than $9,500,000. In the three cities of Metropolitan Boston which are next to Municipal Boston in industrial importance more than $255,000,000 are invested in manufacturing plants and machinery, and the aggregate output of these establishments amounts to more than $58,000,000 a year.

Residential Features: The residents of Municipal Boston occupy almost exclusively apartments in the better sections and "tenements" and small apartments in the poorer districts.

The greater number of "tenements" (some of the familiar "3-deck" classification) are in North End, West End, South End, part of Charlestown, Roxbury, Dorchester, South Boston and East Boston.

The better class of apartments are in Dorchester, West Roxbury, Hyde Park, Jamaica Plain, Brighton and Rock Bay Section.

Other sections having individual homes and in some cases large estates are Milton, Dedham, Wellesley, Lincoln, Lexington, Winchester and Weston.

Total owned homes in Boston 30,132 or 19,609 mortgaged, 9,968 free, 523 unknown, total rented 132,658; tenure unknown 1,965.

Retail Section: In Metropolitan Boston there are many retail sections. Each of the 49 towns and cities has its own shopping center or centers. Of course, the largest and therefore most attractive shopping districts are in the heart of Boston or close to its borders.

The principal shopping center is in a district about 1 1/2 miles long and 3/4 miles wide. In this section are the shops, theaters, banks, etc., of far-famed Washington St., Tremont St., Boylston St., Summer St., Winter St., West St., Temple Place and Park Square section.

There is a busy retail and wholesale marketing district on Dock Square, Blackstone St., North Market St., South Market St., Clinton St. (including "Faneuil Hall" and Quincy markets).

In the "West End" there is a retail district at Scollay Square, Bowdoin Square, Tremont Row and Hanover St., totalling about a mile. In the "North End" there is another retail district of five or six blocks on Hanover St., Haymarket Square and radiating streets. South Boston has a shopping district about one mile on West Broadway, Dorchester St., and Andrew Square.

In Dorchester there are a group of stores at Uphams Corner, Fields Corner, Grove Hill, Meeting House Hill, Dorchester Center, Neponset, Ashmont and Mattapan. In Roxbury district there is a retail section on Washington St., Blue Hill Ave., and Dudley St. At Roxbury Crossing the retail section is at Columbus Ave. and Tremont St.

In Charlestown there is a busy section on Brimmer Hill St., Main St., and City Square, about one mile long.

The principal shopping center of Allston-Brighton District is on Brighton Ave., Harvard Ave. and Commonwealth Ave. Brookline (the richest section in Metropolitan Boston) has a retail section at Brookline Village and at Coolidge Corner. The Jamaica Plain section is 1/2 mile on Center St. The East Boston principal retail section is on Central Square, Meridian St. and at Orient Heights.

The Port of Boston with the finest natural harbor on the Atlantic Coast, equipped with modern piers, docks and warehouses, stands well to the fore, among the ports of the world. As a shipping point to commercial centers, Boston has a marked advantage over other American seaports. It lies 200 miles nearer Europe than New York. As compared with any other Atlantic Seaport for 150 miles to 500 miles are saved in the voyage from Boston to Copenhagen, Hamburg, Amsterdam, Antwerp, Cherbourg, Havre, Liverpool, London, Gibraltar, Naples or Constantinople.

A harbor area of 30,000 acres and 141 miles having a growth of commerce to at least of linear waterfront, make Boston capable of three times the present amount. There is practically no limit to the size of vessels which can be accommodated. Of the total 40 miles of berthing space, eight miles front on a depth of 30 feet or more mean low water.

The construction of Commonwealth Pier by the State, at a cost of $4,500,000 just before the war gave to Boston what has been classed as the finest passenger and freight pier in the world. Twelve hundred feet long and 400 feet wide, it provides berthing space for five 600-

New England—Most Remarkable Merchandising Zone in the United States

"Other things being equal, the more people there are in a given territory the better the market will be."

The six New England States, the Boston territory, have more than 7,500,000 people—7 percent of the total population—119 people per square mile as against 69 people per square mile in Zone 7, the Chicago territory, and 33 people per square mile in Zone 8, the St. Louis territory.

Compare This Territory With Others

New England, known as Merchandising Zone Number 1 among American markets, has an area of 61,975 square miles, a population of 7,500,000 or 1,700,000 families.

In New England there are 47 cities having a population of 25,000 or over. There are 292 cities and towns of 2500 or over. Zone 7 has an area of 263,212 square miles, 59 cities of 25,000 or over and 521 cities and towns of 2500 or over. Zone 8 has an area of 274,970 square miles, 13 cities of 25,000 or over and 169 cities and towns of 2500 or over.

New England is the Financial Cornerstone of the United States. It possesses more than 30 percent of the savings in the Mutual Savings Banks of the United States. Its wealth is evenly distributed: In 1922 there were 36,346 returns for incomes $5,000 to $10,000—21,710 for incomes of $10,000 upwards and 610,421 returns for incomes up to $5,000. The average net income reported for Zone 1 was $2,914, Zone 7, $2,823 and for Zone 8, $2,747.

Greatest Coverage of This Great Market Offered by Boston Sunday Advertiser

The Boston Sunday Advertiser enables advertisers to influence the greatest possible number of people in the Boston and New England territory.

The Boston Sunday Advertiser is regularly read by more than 495,000 families in 943 communities throughout New England.

One of the leading Sunday newspapers in Chicago is read by one out of every five families in Zone 7, while one of the leading Sunday newspapers in St. Louis is read by one out of every eight families in Zone 8. The Boston Sunday Advertiser is regularly read by better than one out of every four families in Zone 1—the six New England States.

In all New England the Boston Sunday Advertiser is regularly read by at least 135,000 more families than read the second largest Boston newspaper, 170,000 more than the third, and 385,000 more families than read the fourth Boston Sunday newspaper.

foot ocean-going vessels at once. Three large two-story warehouses of steel and concrete contain 900,000 square feet of floor space. The pier is connected with the railroads by six trucks, two of which run alongside the ships at their berths.

Well over a mile of berthing space, capable of accommodating nine or ten large ocean going steamers, is available at the United States Army Supply Base in South Boston. Built during the war, this Army Base, the second in size in the country, is now likely to be turned over to commercial uses. The main storehouse is an eight-story building, 1,638 feet long and 126 feet wide, with a total floor area of nearly 40 acres. Three supplementary buildings—one 1,638 by 100 feet, of two stories, and two 294 by 100 feet, each, three stories high, provide an additional floor area of about 900,000 square feet. The modern equipment of this pier makes possible exceptional rapidity in handling of shipments.

Other extensive pier and dock facilities are provided by the railroad terminals in East Boston. The Boston and Maine Railroad property includes the Hoosac Tunnel Terminal, with five large piers, freight sheds and a grain elevator, and the Mystic Wharves, comprising seven wharves with freight sheds, coal pockets and a grain elevator. The Grand Junction Wharves, owned by the Boston and Albany Railroad, comprise six piers with warehouses and a large grain elevator. A pier recently constructed by the State is also situated in East Boston. The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has ample wharf facilities in South Boston. Of the numerous piers owned by coastwise shipping companies, coal companies, and private pier and warehouse companies, the majority have direct connections with the railroads entering the city.

The opening of the new dry-dock at South Boston puts the Port of Boston among the leaders in repair facilities. This dock is one of the largest in the world, the only others comparable being at Liverpool and Southampton. The government plans to construct two wet docks near by and to install a thoroughly modern repair plant. Within Metropolitan Boston at Quincy is one of the most important ship yards of the country.

Boston is served by freight and passenger lines to the principal seaports of Europe and by regular freight lines to and from the Far East, South American and Australia. It is also the terminus of an extensive coastwise trade which helps to feed the foreign shipments. Boston's foreign trade is surpassed only by New York, New Orleans, Philadelphia and Galveston. In imports alone, it surpasses all American ports except New York.

Trading Area: For the purpose of securing accurate information for the Trading Area of Boston, the representatives of Editor and Publisher consulted the advertising managers of three largest retail establishments, several departments which keep an accurate check upon sales and deliveries of merchandise, both by person and mail, and several other reliable sources.

The trading areas are divided into four classifications: First, the territory from which the retail establishments of metropolitan Boston derive their daily support; second, the area from which the stores secure what is termed "Once a Week" business (thousands of people living in this area are accustomed to make weekly trips to Boston for business and pleasure); third, the "Once a Month" area, a wider and not so thickly populated territory, but one where large sales are made because the patrons of the Boston stores who live in this territory are usually large buyers on these monthly or twice a month visits to the metropolitan center; fourth, the "Seasonable and Mail Order Territory," the area from which business is secured by mail or because of once a season (in some cases once a year) visits to Boston on the part of people living in extreme northern and western parts of New England. These latter customers of Boston establishments buy in large quantities, often a whole season's supply of clothing and other necessities, in one order.

The First or "Daily Area" extends on the north from Rookport, Mass., on the coast, directly west to Nashun, N. H. From this point it swings in a half circle south through Fitchburg, Mass.; Worcester, Mass.; smaller towns of northeastern Rhode Island, southeast to Fall River and east to the coast at a point just south of Plymouth. These boundaries are based upon the transportation facilities which enable buyers to visit Boston by steam train and trolley in an hour or less, thus making it possible for shoppers to come to Boston in the morning and return in the afternoon, or, in some cases, before lunch hour. From this area the largest Boston stores derive their daily support and to each corner of the territory is maintained exceptionally fine delivery service.

The Second or "Once a Week" area extends north to a point on the coast near Kennebunk, Me. The northern limits of this area circle west and south to Concord, N. H., thence to Winchendon, Mass., and south across the Connecticut boundary to Thompson, Conn. From this point the area extends southeast to Providence, R. I., and then east to almost the same point as the end of the "Daily Area."

The Third or "Once a Month" area, because of the railway accommodations extending north to Maine to a point on Penobscot Bay just north of Northport. The fact that there is a daily steamboat line from Boston to Bangor during Summer and in Winter as long as navigation is open, has a stimulating effect upon business from this section. From this point the "Once a Month" area extends southwest through Auburn and Lewiston to a point just beyond Lebban. From there the boundary extends west just north of Concord, N. H., to Clark's Point, N. H. From there the western limits of the territory follow close along the Connecticut River to Springfield, Mass. From this point the area extends southeast through Stafford Springs, Conn.; Ashford, Conn.; Sterling, Conn.; across Rhode Island to Newport and east along the coast to Cape Cod.

The Fourth or "Seasonable and Mail Order" area includes all of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and about one-half of Connecticut. The southwestern boundaries run diagonally across Connecticut from New London to Norfolk and No. Cannan, passing through Hartford.

These areas have been rechecked by the Boston Chamber of Commerce, sales promotion departments, advertising managers and others thoroughly familiar with New England business conditions, retail merchandising in metropolitan Boston, transportation facilities and general conditions, which have a tendency to make Boston the natural wholesale and retail trade magnet of New England.

The real Boston,

While this district is commonly known as "Metropolitan" Boston, newspaper circulation which falls in this district is designated "City" circulation by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. Therefore, when considered as a sales market, Boston is indeed "Fourth City" in the United States instead of seventh where it is placed on the Federal census report of 1920.

Forty distinct cities and towns comprise Metropolitan Boston. They are all served by the same parkway system and form a compact community which finds its business interests largely in Municipal Boston. Its compactness may be better understood when it is realized that in density of population Boston is exceeded only by New York.

Imagine a city of 100,000 without a daily newspaper!

Yet Cambridge, Mass., with a population of 109,000 has no daily! Somerville, with 93,000, Newton and Everett with over 40,000, and Medford and Brookline with over 30,000 population support no daily paper. Of the 40 cities and towns in Metropolitan Boston, 31 have no daily newspaper!

The Boston Globe is the only paper which prints detailed daily news of all the Boston suburbs

The Globe is the only paper in which residents of these towns can find daily news of their own home town affairs. For nearly half a century these suburban news items have appeared exclusively in the Boston Globe. With other features of strong reader interest to both men and women they have helped to make the Globe Boston's Greatest Family Newspaper.

Another thing that has helped in this respect is the fact that 90% of the morning and 60% of the evening edition is home delivered. The rest of the Evening Globe goes home too, for 45,000 copies are sold every night at terminal points in downtown Boston to homeward bound commuters who carry the papers to the different suburbs.

It is pertinent to observe that the Globe has the same features, comics, editorials, and much of the same news matter in all editions, so that there is no duplication of morning and evening readers, and the Globe cannot be considered as a "combination" paper.

Its 278,000 purchasers buy it because they want it, no premiums or circulation contests being employed by the Globe.

For 30 years the Globe has regularly carried the largest volume of advertising of all Boston papers.

It has done so without the use of special pages or editions.

It is carrying more advertising now than ever before—more in the first 8 months of 1924 than in the full year of 1914.

It carries, among other classifications, more Department Store advertising daily and Sunday, and more Automobile and Accessory advertising than any other Boston paper.

295 Years Young—Center of
150,000 POPULATION

including Salem and 20 or more nearby communities, among the larger of which are Peabody, Beverly, Danvers, Ipswich, Marblehead, Manchester, Essex.

Salem is one of the oldest settlements on the North American Continent. It became a buying and trading center for a large section of the so-called North Shore of Massachusetts nearly 300 years ago.

At the present time, aside from the industrial importance of the city, its retail establishments are far and above those found in most cities of even much larger population. The retail establishments are operated by live, up-to-date merchants, who are now continuing to keep Salem in the foreground as a buying center.

The Salem Market:

The City of Salem and about 20 nearby towns.

and numerous other products made from leather, cloth, and paper.

THE EVENING NEWS

is the only daily paper published in Salem, founded by Robin Damon in 1880.

Circulation now over 21,000 net paid. This circulation has been built by the creation of good will, and by its absolute devotion to its own people, by giving them the local news, and that of the neighboring towns as well as news of national and international importance received over its own private wires—the best news services in the country.

The News does not make use of premiums, schemes, etc., but its excellence and enterprise in local news gathering enables it to hold its circulation against all sorts of efforts made by outside papers.

The carrier delivery system in the city of Salem alone consists of more than 100 carriers who deliver the News every night directly into the homes. Street sales are comparatively small.

In addition, there are many other carrier deliveries in 20 or more nearby towns for which the News is also the home paper, with our own correspondents in each of these places, and they buy the News for the local happenings not only in their own town, but in other places in our field.

Our territory is so situated that the distance is short from one place to another, and the readers are interested in the news of their neighboring towns.

Advertisers may reach this excellent market through the columns of the Evening News the quickest, surest and best way at reasonable cost.

The Taunton Daily Gazette

Est. 1848
William Reed & Sons Co., Publishers

THE GAZETTE is the only paper published in Taunton, Mass.; the center of a trading population of 60,000 people. No other advertising means can properly cover the city. Taunton, a city of diversified industries, is a market where the wages of skilled labor in stove making, silver working, textiles and textile finishing, copper and brass working, machine tools and many other strong trades make buying flourish. Not a "one industry city" it is never "flat."

Local and foreign advertisers appreciate this. During October, 1924, the Gazette carried a total advertising lineage of 471,240 lines. It invites the patronage of all who would reach its field.

Member of American Newspaper Publishers' Association; New England Daily Newspaper Association; New England Newspaper Alliance; The Associated Press. It also carries United Press and Newspaper Enterprise Association Services.

Special Information: Bay City's location makes it the gateway of northeastern Michigan and is therefore considered the main wholesale distribution point and the first metropolis city south of the Straits of Mackinaw. Due to being the entry to numerous summer resorts, thousands of tourists make Bay City their headquarters when going north and that is why Bay City is rightfully called the place where the summer trains begin.

Residential Features: A city of permanent residents, beautiful homes, parks and boulevards. One of the most beautiful spots in Michigan.

Retail Shopping Section: Extends from Wenhonh Park five blocks on Center Ave. and Seventh to Third Sts. on Washington Ave., which makes five blocks, and from Center to Third St. on Water St., which makes three blocks. On the west side of the river from Litchfield to DeWitt St. on Midland, which makes eight blocks. There are seven outlying retail business sections and several smaller neighborhood sections with the usual grocery, confectionery, meat and small shops.

Trading Area: Extends about 20 miles west, 10 miles south, 40 miles east and 182 miles north. Much business is secured from greater distance because of the good roads and inter-city bus lines.

Wholesale Houses: Groceries, 5; Meats, 2; Fruits, 4; Hardware, 3; Dry Goods, 2; Miscellaneous Lines, Drug, 2; Confectionery, 6; Flour, 4.

The Greatest Single, Selling Influence in a Market of 2,300,000

DETROIT—one of the key markets of the nation, best reached and influenced by those who want to SELL, through The Detroit Free Press. Although 83% of all the motor cars made in America are built in and shipped from the Detroit territory, Detroit is also a world leader in twenty other different industries, ranging from adding machines to pharmaceutical products. For 93 years The Detroit Free Press has been serving this great market, reaching for nearly a century the better types of all classes, being read at the breakfast table in thousands of homes where every inmate is a buyer.

Get the Facts About This Market

Detroit and the territory within a radius of 100 miles is a fertile field for any advertiser having meritorious merchandise or a service to sell. For the manufacturer desirous of selling to other manufacturers, for the manufacturer or merchant who wants to sell the retailer or jobber or the individual in his home, the Detroit territory offers every conceivable opportunity for profit, when selling efforts are directed intelligently and when The Detroit Free Press is used consistently to revitalize the merits of an old, established product, or to introduce the merits of the new.

Ask today on your business letterhead for DETROIT'S MARKET—A 48-page book covering Detroit, the Detroit territory and The Free Press most comprehensively, and without bias.

THE NEW FREE PRESS HOME NOW UNDER CONSTRUCTION Fronting 212 feet on Lafayette Boulevard, and occupying an entire city block, this new home of The Detroit Free Press is now being erected, and will be ready for occupancy in 1925. It will be one of the world's finest newspaper plants lacking nothing in the provision of facilities to give an incomparable newspaper to Detroit.

One in every five of the population is a paid subscriber to the Enquirer and News

"The Best Known City of Its Size in the World"

This is a long-standing condition. Throughout the city and its prosperous trading territory the Enquirer and News is and long has been the accepted newspaper institution; an established home habit; a typical part of this prosperous, intelligent, home-owning American community.

Battle Creek is unique for percentage of home-ownership, for percentage of English-speaking Americanism, for bank savings, for wide diversity of industries and consequent stability of earning and buying power.

During the general slow-down of the spring and summer of 1924, Battle Creek increased its incoming and out-going freight tonnage over 1923, and some of its great industries have had the most prosperous year in their history.

Battle Creek is a supplying center for the world for cereal foods, threshing machines, power-driven pumps, newspaper printing presses, gas stoves and ranges, heating equipment, brass products, steel-wire products, box-board and cartons—and for health treatment.

And Battle Creek's Newspaper, in City and Surrounding Country, is the

DETROIT, MICH.

1920 Population, 1,088,893. City and Suburban Estimate: 1,113,750. Native Whites, 91.4%; Negroes, 4.5%; Foreign Born, 29.1%; Industrial Workers, 18.04%; English Reading, 71.5%; Families, 260,000. Schools: Public Grade, 191; High, 12; Junior High, 7; Parochial, 17; Number of Pupils, 318,420. Churches: Baptist, 29; Christian Science, 4; Congregational, 5; Episcopal, 24; Hebrew, 24; Methodist, 88; Presbyterian, 26; Roman Catholic, 54; Miscellaneous, 77. Banks: National, 3; State, 16; Total Resources, $717,816,065; Savings Bank Deposits Total, $282,068,117. Theatres: Legitimate, 5; Moving Pictures, 148; Vaudeville, 7; Burlesque, 3; Miscellaneous (Auditoriums, etc.), 82. Total number of seats, 109,694.

Location: Detroit is located on the west bank of the Detroit River in the heart of the Great Lake district. It is 18 miles from Lake Erie and 7 miles of Lake St. Clair. Served by following railroads: M. C., N. Y. C., C. P., Peans., P. M., Wabash, G. T., and D. T. & I. In addition, interurban lines totalling 600 miles extend from 60 to 100 miles in all directions.

Principal Industries: Automobile, pharmaceutical preparations, foundry and machine shop products, slaughtering and meat packing, tobacco manufacturers, bronze, brass and copper products, stoves and furnaces, bakery products, clothing and lumber and timber products.

Manufacturing Establishments, 3,300. Leading firms, Ford, Dodge, Cadillac, Hudson, Packard, Chrysler, Hupmobile, Paige, Columbia, Essex, Studebaker, Maxwell, Gray, Rickenbacker, Jewett, Federal and Godfredson Automobiles; Continental Motor, Kelsey Wheel, Fisher Body, Timken Axles, U. S. Tires, Garland Stoves, Park-Davis Drugs and Burroughs Adding Machines are all famous Detroit products.

Special Information: Detroit is a city of growth and prosperity. Its population has approximately trebled since 1900 and Department of Labor figures show Detroit industries to pay higher wages than are paid in any other city. Detroit has over 13 miles of improved harbor frontage lying along both the Detroit River and River Rouge. Detroit stood first in 1920 among all lake ports in exports and imports, and is the home of 4 steamship lines owning 37 vessels. About 2,000 motor trucks operate as an auxiliary freight service throughout the trading radius.

Residential Features: One and two-family residences predominate. There are approximately 1,250 apartment houses and apartment hotels, but relatively few tenements. The industrial nature of the population makes the rooming house an important feature of Detroit housing. The great majority of Detroiters, however, live in single or double dwellings.

Retail Shopping Section: Extends northward from the river along Woodward Ave. for a distance of two miles or more. A secondary retail section forms a continuation of the main district for an equal distance in the same direction. There are 10 lesser areas scattered over the city and many small neighborhood districts. Each of the main arteries of traffic radiating from the heart of the city, such as Jefferson, Michigan, Grand River and Gratiot Aves., are largely given over to small retail establishments for the first two or three miles of their length. Trading Area: Spreads over a 25-mile radius, east, north and west. An outer area spreading for 50 miles around the city is hardly less important than the first. The entire trading radius is easily accessible both to freight and passengers via interurban lines and motor truck and bus fleets.

Wholesale Houses: Groceries, 50; Meats, 96; Fruits, 99; Hardware, 13; Dry Goods, 17; Miscellaneous Lines, Shoes, 1; Confectionery, 99; drug, 11.

Number of Retail Outlets for Nationally Advertised Products: Passenger automobile agencies, 100; commercial auto. agencies, 104; automobile accessories, 676; automobile tire agencies, 183; bakers, 323; cigar stores and stands (including hotels), 1,414; confectioners (including hotel stands), 1,859; delicatessen, 97; dressmakers, 429; druggists, 702; dry goods, 730; department stores, 34; electrical supplies, 186; florists, 730; fruits, 225; furniture, 181; furriers, 110; garages (public), 486; grocers, 3,717; hardware, 448; jewelry, 222; meat markets, 672; men's furnishings, 437, includes both clothing and furnishings; merchant tailors, 318; milliners, 296; opticians, 62; photographers, 151; pianos (and miscellaneous musical instruments), 64; radio supplies, 56; restaurants (including hotels), 1,756; shoes, 418; sporting goods, 38; stationers, 9; women's apparel, 5, exclusively.
