STATE AND CITY PRINTER. THE CNION -IT MUST BE PROPRETED "

SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 95, 1836. Hewlett's Exchange, this day, of some valuable property in Rampart etreet; and particularly of a fine house and lot in Toulouse street, in the immediate vicinity of the proposed le

GENERAL LEAVENWORTH - While carrying the remains his gallant soldier to the military station in Conde street. funeral procession was yesterday formed not only of the U. S croops with their officers; but-what must have afforded egion and militia. It was a melanchely and imposing spectacle; and rendered doubly painful to know that the dereased was young, gallant and gay; and was sudderly carried off by disease, while performing the duties of his exalt

It was delightful to see so many of our citizens assist this last duty of respect. We was pleasing to eee the sylemn and dignified appearance of the officers of the troops and legion, voluntarily honoring their oace comrade in arms and gratifying to find that even the privates acted their part as a willing duty rather than an imposed task. Colon-Twiggs deserves great credit for the healthy, orderly and neat appearance of the troops under his command. The remains of General Leavenworth will be brought to

they are justly attributed to imprudence or intemperance or the part of the victims. The small por has also attacked a few of our idoes not appear to be very dangerous

In other respects New Orleans is now healthy in gener. Rain has indeed been sovere and almost constant during the past fortnight; and produced temporary indispositions. In the afternoon of vesterday, we had thunder and lightning and rain on the most magnificent scale. The burst of one con rulsion of heaven's artillery was as sudden, loud and violent

Many 'lightfingered gentry' appear to have mad case from justice in Cincinnate and were said to be on their ay to this city. Our police should be on the alert; but we believe the members of that degraded corps are more odious than useful in this city.

The police system should undergo a thorough revision by the council, as the mayor is not very partial to improve

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

The very best actions performed by the most berevolen of men have been attributed to the most unworthy motives by those who could not appreciate humanity, or were desirous o malign. Calumny delights to batten on philanthropy: viour, when the facts could no longer be contravened, were attributed to the muchinations of Beelzebub: and so must d ever be with the acts of the great and the good. Fires love ragistrate is narrowly scrutinized; but we certainly could not have expected that the letter which he lately wrote in his own windication to a clergyman of Nashville, to rectify missions that have been uttered against him in consequence of sall Soult, Count Mole and M Barante, the work appears to have been uttered against him in consequence of have here suddenly another that have been uttered against him in consequence of have here suddenly another that have been suddenly another that have been suddenly another that have here that have here that particularly when that expression was but a vindication. He justly considered himself amenable to public opinion; and minligned his object. They seem to think that becoming chief magnificate deprives a person of his right as a citizen, freely to entertain and express his opinions. The president (they that when it was found that it would be in vain to resist the thank) should have no will, no wish of his own: he is to be calumniated by enemies, and misrepresented by false friends, without the privilege of appeal in his own name on his own healf to the public.

Now we highly approve the readiness of the president to missistence of the agent process of the president to missistence of the agent process of the president to missistence of the agent process of the president to missistence of the agent process of the president to missistence of the agent process of the president to missistence of the agent process of the president to missistence of the agent process of the president to missistence of the agent process of the president to missistence of the agent process of the president to missistence of the agent process of the president to missistence of the agent process of the president process of the proc hearken to public opinion; and his determination to deprive casumny of its sting, and dissimulation of its closk. That a can with the utmost confidence roly on the integrity and intelligence of Andrew Jackson, cannot be denied; after his having so often and so nobly passed the ordeal of public trial, and received the sanction of general approbation. But tha he is therefore to be reluctant to watch over the public welfare except during his own presidency—that he is to have no desire to perpetuate or continue what he in accordance with hamself from the various misrepresentations of his views; that he regards the people as the true source of political powerand is always ready to bow to their will and judgment; that disregarding personal preferences, he considers it expedient prudent and proper that a general convention of delegates ted said alaves, or had treated their owners as pirates, flary movements on hind as strain upon the water. We have greeably to our law?

Suppose again that the parliament of England had de rounced stavery in all the British colonies; and had pro ounced the traffic of slaves on the ocean to be pirecy: tiould our government complain if some citizens were foolbardy enough 'to contemn those laws of England, by enturing with slaves into her colonies; or transporting hem for the purpose of selling-and that therefore the au horities of England seized those slaves?

This is precisely the case that lately occurred at Berm to the Enterprize. Britain acknowledges no pro perty in slaves. Her laws liberate elaves as soon as they nay land on any part of her territories; hence the authori ties of Bermuda felt bound or authorized last fall to free slaves of American gentlemen who had unfortenately at that island. Her laws also declare the traffic or trans portation of eleves in vessels on the high sees to be piracy ience the late seizure of the elaves in the brig linterprise. Now if we fall as throat ourselves into the hon's den, can we expect to escape like Daniel with impunite? We sees admit that congress has the power to denounce the slav rade on the seas, as piracy: we must therefore admit that England possesses the same power. We will admit that i ongress had so enacted, and any of our neval vessels had etected or captured such slave-pirates, that no governmen ould complain, that had been advised of the law and it

If our citizens had ignorantly or rashly out themselves the power of the British laws in the jurisdiction of England, can they justly complain if they are rendered amenable the penalty of having violated those lawe? Can they call on the protection of the executive government, when they went beyond the jurisdiction of that government, to violate the leve of another action?

Our sook sillers. We were glad that an aftern and taken into consideration the negligence or outpability of the booksellers in this city, relative to sending recent bubicationato editori, for their netice; but we forbore express ing then our sentiments, till we should see whether that iour

We now assure that paper and the other journale of the ty that every principal publisher in Boaton, New York and Philadelphia, who has an agent here, sends copies of his pulications; specially addressed to editors; or gives his agenpermission to give presentation copies. We are personally acquainted with many of those publishers: and are well ac or:sed of their routine in this respect.

We know that Messre Harper of New York always set special copies to all editors; and we have had the pleasure of arveloped and superscribed as 'editor's copy.' We are per sonally acquainted with the members of the firm of Carey & Hart: and know their custom to be similar. We can say the same of Carey, Les and Blancherd; and are well aware that the same practice is observed by the Beston biblipo-

How then the agents here of those publishers, dispose the editors' presentation copies, we cannot conjecture; but that there is some foul play we shrewdly suspect.

Our booksellers cannot assert that they or their employers clieve that editorial notices of their books would be useless o our community; they cannot assert that our editors ar devoid of the fact, talent, and integrity necessary for whole ome criticism; nor can they essert that no copies are given

Injury is therefore done to the publishers and editors; an niustice is done to our readers, who might have early ex racts from extertaining and eseful works, or notices of such have and perusal.

We are willing to " bell the cat: for whether fro pidsty or stupidity of these backsellers, we and our reads ouffes.

We are glad that we can make honorable exception or of Motchkies & Co; and Mr Levy once gave us a num er of the North Armerican review—at the same time we are pleased strat our notices of the books went so gratified those pook-offers, that they transmitted copies of our journal to their publishers.

The French ministry was already tettering before the late series of defeats on the tobacco question brought its official existence to the crisis at which it has now arrived. It is tree nents.

It is no longer doubtful that Marshal Mortier, the president of the council, has actually teadered his resignation, in spite of his known anxiety to retain the seal of office, until after the definitive adjustment of the American question. The better to signalize his victory. M Dapin has already published a notice in this merning's Moniteur; in the name of the committee of which he has been named the skairman, inviting the transmission of such documents as are calculated to promote the objects of the committee, and requesting all persons who desire to be examined to make themselves known to the chairman, who will signify the day and the hour at the mort and removal from office.

the wishes of the people themselves, believes to be materially important in promoting the national honor or interest; or that is give advice or express his opinions only in his annual messages to congress—is what few desirous of maintaining the freedom guaranteed by our constitution in all matters of opinion; and what few who are solicitous or willing to listen to the advice of an experienced, an intelligent and a sincere friend, can for a moment admit.

To advise or admonish is not to dictate. To express an opinion that one species of action would be counter to national policy, and that a different would promote national honor and prosperity, is not only privileged to the president, but may really be considered as demanded from him by those whe know they can depend on the accuracy and sincerity of his opinion.

What more has the president/flone by his letter? He tells we very distinctly that he has written in order to vindicate humself from the various misrepresentations of his views; that the message is prosperity in the contravention of the contravention of the contravention of the objects of the committee, and requesting all persons who desire to be examined to make the message to be considered by our constitution in all matters of committee for that purpose.

It was yesterday reported and pretty generally believed that M. Humann, the present minister of France, was to be remarked to the Presidency and that the war department was to be given to M. de Caux, so as to avoid a modification of the Contravention of the Sens to the chairman, who will signify the day and the hour at the contravently believed that M. Humann, the present minister of France, was to be remarked to the Presidency of the Sens to avoid a modification of the Course, was to be remarked to the Sens to avoid a modification of the Course of the Course of Course of Marshall, for each register of the House of Representative of France, was to be remarked to the Marshall Gerard, who is supposed to be now willing to throw the amnesty overbased, or l'aviser: and I may add, that at the hour at which I write the general impression am ng well informed people is, that the ministry may be considered in a state of total dissolu-

Where is the dictation evinced in this simple expression of a candid apinion? If he considers that the will of the majority should govern a community, and that he agrees with that in spirity as to the best mode of expressing tilat will, is he to be prevented from avowing his accordance in opinion with the people? Or is he to be denounced and calumnisted for
