No cow can do good work as a milker that has to put in most of her time gathering something to eat.

Do not deceive yourself with the belief that you can successfully raise poultry without admitting plenty of sunshine to the poultry yard and the houses.

This is the best time for caponizing, for the reason that the cockerels are the right age and weight, and will arrive in market during January, February and March when the demand is greatest and prices are highest.

Fowls do not thrive during the winter unless they have some green feed. The natural food of domestic fowls is that which they pick up on the range.

Grapes may be kept for months. Select perfect bunches and see that the fruit is solid on the bunch.

You must feed your stock well if you want good results. So must you do with your land. You cannot afford not to enrich your land year after year.

A typical market gardener does not plant in the midst of the trucking that supplies Boston. He has five acres, every foot of which is worked for all it will endure.

About this time of the year the poultrymen should begin changing over from the summer rations for the chickens to the winter formula.

There is no way to convert the corn, the hay, the clover, the straw, the Kaffir, the milo and the abundance of other green feed into a marketable form so quickly and so economically as by feeding to the dairy cow.

One of the main things, in preserving or storing feeds and foods is to consider their moisture. No moisture must be present on the outside, and the room in which the articles are kept must be reasonably dry.

PRESIDENT ELLIOTT MAKES STRONG APPEAL

Is Introduced to New England by the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

ASKS FOR CO-OPERATION. Declares Great Transportation Problem Can Only In This Way Be Solved.

The Boston chamber of commerce gave a dinner at the Copley Plaza hotel, Boston, on Sept. 30 in honor of Howard Elliott, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company...

Let us look for a minute at a few facts about the great transportation machine made up of the New Haven and New England lines and associated properties.

Revenues, Payrolls and Taxes.

The operating revenues of all the properties were for the last fiscal year in round numbers $155,000,000. The operating expenses were $122,000,000 of operating expenses approximately $63,000,000 or 59 per cent of revenues.

Employees and Investors. To maintain and operate this great transportation machine requires the services of from 90,000 to 100,000 men (82,732 on last payroll). These employees and these investors are drawn from all walks of life.

HOWARD ELLIOTT, PRESIDENT NEW YORK, NEW HAVEN AND HARTFORD RAILROAD COMPANY AND CHIEF EXECUTIVE OF THE NEW ENGLAND TRANSPORTATION LINES.

England is just as important to her future growth as to have adequate banking facilities, adequate commercial organizations and a sensible, sane and honest public opinion that will be reflected in a government that will not be swayed by the whims, prejudices or fads of the moment.

Management by Owners.

Some of the difficulties and inadequacies of the transportation machine of the United States today are the result of drifting away too far from the idea that transportation is a business, which in the long run must be governed by the same great human and natural laws that affect all human affairs.

Regulation and Ownership.

During the last five years I have tried throughout the west to present the railroad side of the transportation question. But I also had in mind a much broader question—namely that the country cannot attain its best growth unless the people can be made to see that adequate and safe transportation is absolutely necessary and that it cannot be obtained through private ownership unless, under honest management, enough money is earned to pay approximately the same return to the investor as is received by investors in other classes of business in the same territory.

Financial Advice.

In managing a railroad, just as in any other business, different kinds of talent and ability must be employed to safeguard the business—engineering talent, operating talent, commercial talent and financial talent.

by the introduction of different appliances and facilities more rapidly than the roads can obtain money then there is but one result for some of the railroads of the United States—and that is bankruptcy.

Magnitude of Transportation Machine. Let us look for a minute at a few facts about the great transportation machine made up of the New Haven and New England lines and associated properties.

Development of New England.

The varied development of New England's varied resources has not been accomplished. New England's farms must be re-peopled, and a change is going on even now.

The management of the properties will be more than pleased if New England bankers, banks and investors will furnish their full share of the money needed now and in the future and will assist in obtaining that money in the markets of the world.

—A large number of the Democratic voters of Ward 5 have appended their signature to a remonstrance against the caucus of last Friday night and a petition for "home rule" in the choice of members of the Town Committee.

TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.
—Through the efforts of officer Pea the number of dogs licensed this year is 670 against 582 last year.

Telephone subscribers are complaining that since the Quincy electric cars commenced to run, that it is almost impossible to talk with Boston.

The Sir Knights of South Shore Commandery K. T., who are to participate in the excursion to Washington which leaves Boston Saturday, are anticipating a grand good time.

A test of the engines at the works of the Weymouth Electric Light and Power Co. was made on Wednesday with satisfactory results, and efforts are being made to have machines in readiness to test the arc lamps tomorrow evening, though no contract for the street lighting has yet been made with the board of Selectmen and a relocation of one or two lights is desired by them.

THIRTY YEARS AGO.
$1350 in fines have been imposed on the rum sellers of Weymouth since officer Gardner was appointed.

At a recent trial of the Eureka Hook & Ladder Co. of East Weymouth a 20 and 30 foot ladder were spliced and a man put on the roof of the Franklin school house in 17 seconds.

The Butcher Boy and Union Engine companies attended the Firemen's Muster at Hingham on Tuesday taking their machines with them. The usual success attended the Butcher Boy taking the first prize playing 222 ft. 5 1/2 inches.

FORTY SIX YEARS AGO.
The members of Union Fire Engine Company made the reception of their new engine, on Friday last, "a gay and festive occasion". The machine arrived on the morning train from Boston and a crowd assembled at the depot to receive it with all the honors, their unanimous verdict that the tub was a perfect beauty.

The company preceded by the Quincy band, marched to the depot, where the rope was manned and a procession formed under the director of Joshua Binney Chief Marshal, with aids as follows: Capt. C. P. Lyon, Adjutant Messers. Thomas, Stoddard, Hunt and Cowing.

CHAPTER VII.

The Would Be Brother-in-law.

THE next morning, bright and early, Mr. Alfred Rodney, a telegram in his hand, charged down the hall to Mrs. Medcroft's door. With characteristic far west impulsiveness he banged on the door. A sleepy voice asked who was there.

"It's me—Rodney. Get up. I want to see Medcroft. Say, Roxbury, wake up!"

"Roxbury?" came in shrill tones from within. "He— isn't he upstairs? Good heaven, Mr. Rodney, what has happened? What has happened?"

"Upstairs? What the deuce is he doing upstairs?"

"He's—he's sleeping! Do tell me what's the matter!"

"Isn't this Mr. Medcroft's room?"

"Ye-es—but he isn't in. He objects to the noise. Oh, has anything happened to Roxbury?" She was standing just inside the door, and her voice betrayed agitation.

"My dear Edith, don't get excited. I have a telegram from—"

She uttered a shriek.

"He's been assassinated! Oh, Roxbury!"

"What the dev— Are you crazy? It's a telegram from—"

"Oh, heavens! I knew they'd kill him; I knew something dreadful would happen if I left"— Here she stopped suddenly. He distinctly heard her catch her breath. After a moment she went on warily, "Is it from a man named Hobart?"

"No. It's from Odell-Carney. Hobart? I don't know anybody named Hobart." (How was he to know that Hobart was the name that Medcroft had chosen for correspondence purposes? "We're to meet the Odell-Carneys today in Munich. No time to be lost. We've got to catch the 9 o'clock train.")

"Oh!" came in great relief from the other side of the door. Then in sudden dismay: "But I can't do it! The idea of getting up at an hour like this!"

"What room is Roxbury in?"

"I don't know!" in very decided tones. "Inquire at the office."

Alfred Rodney was a persevering man. It is barely possible that he occupied a lower social plane than that attained by his wife, but he was a man of accomplishment, if not accomplishments. He always did what he set out to do. Be it said in defense of this assertion he not only routed out his entire protesting flock, but had them at the West-Bahnhof in time to catch the Orient express—luggage, accessories and all. Be it also said he was the only one in the party save Constance and Tootles who took to the station amiably.

"Dash the Odell-Carneys!" was what Freddie Ulstervelt said as the train drew out of the station. Brock looked up approvingly.

"That's the first sensible thing I've heard him say," he muttered, loud enough to be heard by Miss Fowler. "I say, who are the Odell-Carneys? First I've heard of 'em."

"The Odell-Carneys? Oh, dear, have you never heard of them?" she cried in surprise. He felt properly rebuked. "They are very swell Londoners. It is said"—

"Then, good heavens, they'll know I'm not Medcroft," he whispered in alarm.

"Not at all, my dear Roxbury. That's just where you're wrong. They don't know Roxbury the first. I've gone over it all with Edith. She's just crazy to get into the Odell-Carney set. I regret to say that they have failed to notice the Medcrofts up to this time. Secretly, Edith has ambitions. She has gone to the lord mayor's dinners and to the Royal Antiquarians and to Sir John Brodney's and a lot of other functions on the outer rim, but she's never been able to break through the crust and taste the real sweets of London society. My dear Roxbury, the Odell-Carneys entertain the nobility without compunction, and they've been known to hobnob with royalty. Mrs. Odell-Carney was a Lady Somebody-or-other before she married the second time. She's terribly smart, Roxbury."

"How, in the name of heaven, do they happen to be hobnobbing, as you call it, with the Rodneys, may I ask?"

"Well, it seems that Odell-Carney is promoting a new South African mining venture. I have it from Freddie Ulstervelt that he's trying to sell something like a million shares to Mr. Rodney, who has loads of money that came from real mines in the far west. He'd never be such a fool as to sink a million in South Africa, you know, but he's just clever enough to see the advantage of keeping Odell-Carney in tow, as it were. It means a great deal to Mrs. Rodney, don't you know, Roxbury, to be able to say that she's toured with the Odell-Carneys. Freddie says that Cousin Alfred is talking in a very diplomatic manner of going to London in August to look fully into the matter. It is understood that the Rodneys are find the Odell-Carneys.

Mr. Odell-Carney was a middle aged Englishman of the extremely uninitiative type. He was tall and narrow and distant, far beyond what is commonly accepted as base. Indeed, he was especially slow of speech, even for an Englishman, quite as if it were an everlasting question with him whether it was worth while to speak at all. One had the feeling when listening to Mr. Odell-Carney that he was being favored beyond words. It took him so long to say anything that if one were but moderately bright he could finish the sentence mentally some little time in advance of the speaker and thus be prepared to properly appreciate that which otherwise might have puzzled him considerably. It could not be said however, that Mr. Odell-Carney was ponderous. He was merely the effectual result of delay. Perhaps it is safe to agree with those who knew him best; they maintained that Odell-Carney was a pose, nothing more.

His wife was quite the opposite in nearly every particular except height and angularity. She was bony and red faced and opinionated. A few shallow years, with a rapid, profligate nobleman had brought her, in widowhood, to a fine sense of appreciation of the slow going though tiresomely unpractical men of the Odell-Carney type. It mattered little that he made poor investment of the money she had sequestered from his lordship. He had kept her in the foreground by associating himself with every big venture that interested the financial smart set. Notwithstanding the fact that he never was known to have any money, he was looked upon as a financier of the high order, which is saying a great deal in these unfeeling days of pounds and shillings.

Of course Mrs. Odell-Carney was dressed as all ransy, long limbed Englishwomen are prone to dress—after a model peculiarly not her own. She looked ridiculously ungraceful along side the smart, chic American women and yet not one of them but would have given her boots to be able to array herself as one of these. There was no denying the fact that Mrs. Odell-Carney was a "regular tiptopper," as Mr. Rodney was only too eager to say. She had the air of a born leader—that is to say, she could be gracious when occasion demanded, without being patronizing.

In due course of time the Medcrofts and Miss Fowler were presented to the distinguished couple. This function was necessarily delayed until Odell-Carney had time to go into the details of a particularly annoying episode of the afternoon. He was telling the story to his friend Rodney, and of course everything was at a standstill until he got through.

It seems that Mr. Odell-Carney felt the need of a nap at 3 o'clock. He gave strict injunctions that there was to be no noise in the halls while he slept and then went into his room and stretched out. Any one who has stopped at the Hotel Four Seasons will have no difficulty in recalling the electric hall bells which serve to attract the chambermaids to given spots. If one needs the chambermaid he presses the button in his room and a little bell in the hall tinkles furiously until she responds and shuts it off. In that way one is sure that she has heard and is coming, a most admirable bit of German ingenuity. If she happens to be taking her lunch at the time, the bell goes on ringing until she returns. It is a faithful bell. Coming back to Odell-Carney, the maid on his floor was making up a room in close proximity when a most annoying thing happened to her. A porter who had reason to dislike her came along and turned her key from the outside, locking her in the room. She couldn't get out, and she had been warned against making a sound that might disturb the English guest. With rare intelligence, she did not scream or make an outcry, but wisely proceeded to press the button for a chambermaid. Then she evidently sat down to wait. To make the story short, she rang her own call bell for two hours, no other maid condescending to notice the call, which speaks volumes for the almost martial system of the hotel. The bell was opposite the narrator's door. As it, therefore, surprising that he required a great deal of time to tell all that he felt? It was not so much of what he did that he spoke at such great length, but of what he felt.

"Don't me soul," he exploded in the end, twisting his mustache with nervous energy. "It was the damndest nap I ever had. I didn't close my eyes, and I don't know how I did it."

find the Odell-Carneys.

Mr. Odell-Carney was a middle aged Englishman of the extremely uninitiative type. He was tall and narrow and distant, far beyond what is commonly accepted as base. Indeed, he was especially slow of speech, even for an Englishman, quite as if it were an everlasting question with him whether it was worth while to speak at all. One had the feeling when listening to Mr. Odell-Carney that he was being favored beyond words. What is the Single Damper?

Crawford Ranges

have a patented damper which by one motion regulates fire and oven, better than two dampers can. Push the knob to "Kindle", "Bake", or "Check"—the range does the rest. This Single Damper is the greatest improvement ever made in stoves. All other ranges have two or more dampers.

The Two Hods in the base—the Ash Hod—instead of the old clumsy ash pan—with Coal Hod beside it—is another patented Crawford improvement. Both hods free. Gas ovens if desired; end [single] or elevated [double].

PRICE FIVE CENTS

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

NINETEEN YEARS AGO.

If the person who took a pair of shoes from the window sill of Nash's drug store a short time ago will bring back the strings that were in them, the owner will be greatly obliged.

Mr. Willard H. Hunt was thrown from a team this morning at about 10:30 and instantly killed. He was driving one of Henry Thayer's horses on Washington street and in turning into Ashford Baker's driveway, the wheel struck a tree. Mr. Hunt was thrown out on to the lawn and struck on his head. He spoke once, saying, "Carry me home," and almost instantly died.

The past few days has been a good time to study Whitman's pond as it was before a Whitman or any other white man landed on our shores. Twice the Weymouth Iron Co. obtained a grant to flow land, making in all eight feet, but the pond is now, before the recent rain, below both flowages and evidently about in its natural state, in other words eight feet below high water mark.

The second assessment of 40 percent of the capital stock of the Braintree and Weymouth Street Railway Co., has been called for by the treasurer and as soon as it is paid in, work will be commenced. A few days ought to suffice to make these collections and the people will have the pleasure of seeing their road in process of building in a very short time. The South Weymouth extension will be built in the early spring.

TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO.

At the regular monthly meeting of the South Shore Co-operative Bank held last Monday evening $1,000 was sold at 5 cents per share premium, and a semi-annual dividend of 3 1/2 percent was declared.

Simeon Barrows had ten nice hens stolen from him last Tuesday night. Most of the citizens in this part of the town have a gun loaded with duck shot and watch their hen yards all night, and their motto is, "Let her go Gallagher."

Politics in this village is slow. Very little talk or excitement. J. H. Flint is mentioned by his friends as a candidate for representative, and last night A. P. Worthen was nominated by the Democrats for the same office.

"Isn't this a new hall? The last time we were in South Weymouth we sang in a low-studded and antique-looking hall over a store." Such was the salutation of tenor, George E. Devoll of the Lotus Glee club, when he entered Fogg's opera house last Tuesday evening before the arrival of the audience.

THIRTY YEARS AGO.

The boot business is very good at the Landing at present and in some instances orders can not be filled fast enough.

Action in forming a Republican Campaign club was taken at a meeting held in Amazon hall last Friday evening. Samuel Reed Esq. was made chairman of the meeting and Darius Smith, secretary.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mills returned from their wedding trip to McKeesport, Pa., last Friday, and will go to house-keeping in the Sharples house.

Nash's Corner bids fair to hold its name and place in the town for many years to come. Thomas Nash has in his family five children, all of whom were born on the first day of October, a rare and most remarkable coincidence. The last arrival was on the first day of the present month.

FORTY SIX YEARS AGO.

Joshua B. Cowing of East Weymouth, has raised two bushels of sweet potatoes this season well ripened and of good size. That they are as good as any grown on Southern soil, we can vouch for, from samples presented us by Mr. Cowing.

A large number of the voters in the Weymouth and Braintree Fire district assembled at the Engine house last Monday evening, to consider the matter of locating the old engine at or near Binney's Corner and the almost unanimous decision of the meeting was in favor of the petitioners for such location. The prudential committee was instructed to take the necessary measures to house the engine and keep it in order. Considerable feeling in regard to the formation of another Fire company for the Amazon and such will probably be the result of the new location of the old tub.

Board of Trade.

The October meeting of the Weymouth Board of Trade as held at the Town Hall last night was one of more than usual interest.

The meeting was called to order by the president, E. W. Hunt, and after a few words of welcome and a plea for activity on the part of the members for general good to Weymouth, he introduced L. O. Armstrong, lecturer for the Canadian Pacific Railroad. Mr. Armstrong with a life of experience in the development of the great north, both east and west, is a lecturer with high class stereopticon slides and "movies." The vast resources of the north from ocean to ocean were shown on canvas and the story told in a graphic and interesting manner.

Up there are as good or better wheat and other grain producing lands than are found south of the great lakes, also mineral and coal possibilities yet undeveloped which contain millions of wealth.

The lecture and illustrations were a rare treat to those present.

Monday Club.

The first meeting of the Monday Club of Weymouth, for the year 1913-14, was held on Monday afternoon, October 6th, at Odd Fellows Hall, East Weymouth. The president, Mrs. Arthur V. Harper, presided and gave a cordial welcome to the new and old members. Mrs. Jennie B. Worster gave an entertaining and instructive report of the Council Meeting at Washington, D. C. Mrs. James B. Jones read the report of the Annual Meeting of the State Federation.

The Club entertains this year as honorary members four of the honor girls of our High school senior class, Miss Margaret E. Beals, Miss Catherine Hanley, Miss Edith T. Hollis and Miss Florence D. Fry.

Orchestra music furnished by Mrs. Merchant and Mrs. Thomas, and a club tea followed the entertainment. Mrs. George Drew served as hostess with the following helpers. Mrs. George Young, Mrs. Herbert Pratt, Mrs. John Taylor, Mrs. William T. Thayer and Mrs. Samuel Drew. The pourers were Mrs. Henry Lovell, Mrs. Harriet B. Vorhees, Mrs. Lawrence Drew and Mrs. Fred Rivinius.

The next meeting of the club will be on October 20th, at Odd Fellows Hall, East Weymouth, and will take the form of Gentlemen's Night. The committee in charge have planned a splendid program, consisting of a drama entitled "The Sisterhood of Bridget," under the personal direction of Mrs. Franklin Whitten. Dancing and refreshments will follow, an orchestra being furnished by Miss Ethel Raymond. Tickets for gentlemen and other guests are ready. Members please engage their tickets before Friday, October 17th.

Memorial Service.

Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R., will hold a Memorial service in the Baptist church next Sunday at 2:30 p. m. and following is the order of exercises:

Opening Service by the Choir.
Address, Pastor.
Color Bearers and Officers take Positions upon the Platform.
Bugle Salute to the Colors.
Quartet—"The Flag They Loved So Well."
Reading, Mrs. Estelle Richards.
Decorating of Chair by the Color Bearers.
Reading, Miss Carrie G. Nelson.
Song—"The Vacant Chair," Mr. Myron P. Ford.
Taps, Miss Theodora Keith.
Prayer and Benediction, Rev. Mr. Underhill.

"Huskin Bee."

The Pansy Circle of King's Daughters held a very successful barn party and "huskin bee" in the stable of Robert S. Hoffman on Broad Street, East Weymouth, Wednesday evening.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. Charles R. Denbroeder, Mrs. F. V. Garey, Mrs. Robert S. Hoffman, Mrs. L. A. Drew, Mrs. William A. Hodges, Mrs. Charles H. Chubbuck, Jr., Mrs. Jessie Orr Buffum, Mrs. Fred L. Doucett, Mrs. Chester A. Halban, Miss Blanche Bates, Miss Alida Denton, Miss Mary Garey and Miss Alma Ford.

The barn was profusely decorated with farm products and Autumn foliage. A Mexican room presided over by Miss Sadie Plaisted was a feature.

Music for the evening was furnished by Oliver Burrell violin and Mrs. Mary R. Flint organ.

A sale of refreshments of various kinds was held throughout the evening. At the huskin, several red ears were found and the forfeits paid. The event closed with a series of old time dances under the direction of Frank Sampson.

WILLIAM J. HACKETT, DEAD.

Wellknown Runner and One of North Weymouth's Popular Young Men Passes Away at Home of His Parents Last Sunday.

William J. Hackett, age 28, one of the fastest marathon runners that ever donned a spike shoe, passed away last Sunday morning at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Hackett of Lovell street in North Weymouth.

"Billy" Hackett, as he was familiarly known to his host of friends all through this section, has been falling for two years, his last training for a race being in 1911, when he began training for the Olympic games. In the spring of 1913, he attempted to get into trim for the B. A. A. marathon, but was unable to regain the form of previous races and did not compete in the race.

Early this year he went away to an outdoor camp, in hopes of regaining his health, but returned home in June and since that time has failed steadily.

As a long distance runner Hackett when in his prime, was one of the finest and most graceful men in the running game and during his short career, probably did more running than any other youngster in the United States.

He was born in Somerville in 1885, but moved to North Weymouth when very young and has lived in that village ever since.

After leaving school he learned the machinist's trade at the Fore River Ship yards in Quincy. It was while working at the Fore River that he first attracted attention as a runner.

He first appeared in public in Lynn in May 1909, when he finished first in a ten mile race under the auspices of the Lynn Y. M. C. A. A few weeks later he ran 15 miles at Newburyport and came in second. The same year, in a big field of entries, he ran third in a 10 mile race in Brookline, doing the course in 55 minutes and 15 seconds.

In October in 1909, he entered the Brockton Fair marathon and easily outran the many high classed marathoners in the race. His heady running and graceful stride drew forth many articles of praise from sporting writers all over this section and many declared that "Billy" was the best in the country. His time in the Brockton Fair marathon of 1919 was 2 hours, 37 minutes.

On January 15, 1910 Hackett ran Frank Bruce of Quincy off of his feet in a 15 mile race in Quincy and again on February 1, that same year, he defeated Bruce at the latter's favorite distance of 10 miles.

Ellis and Marshall of Brockton were the next to fall victims to the North Weymouth star's clever running, Hackett winning the 10 mile grind in easy fashion.

During this year, some of Hackett's closest friends noticed that the constant training and strain of the races was beginning to tell on Hackett and at the races of the South Boston A. C. his trainers pulled him from the track, after he had practically ran himself blind.

In October 1910, he again entered the Brockton Fair marathon and for the second year in succession, a feat never before accomplished, he won the 25 mile race from Boston to Brockton, some of the fastest and best known long distance runners being obliged to trail the speedy little Brookline gym man, as "Billy" wore the colors of the Brookline gym during the latter part of his career.

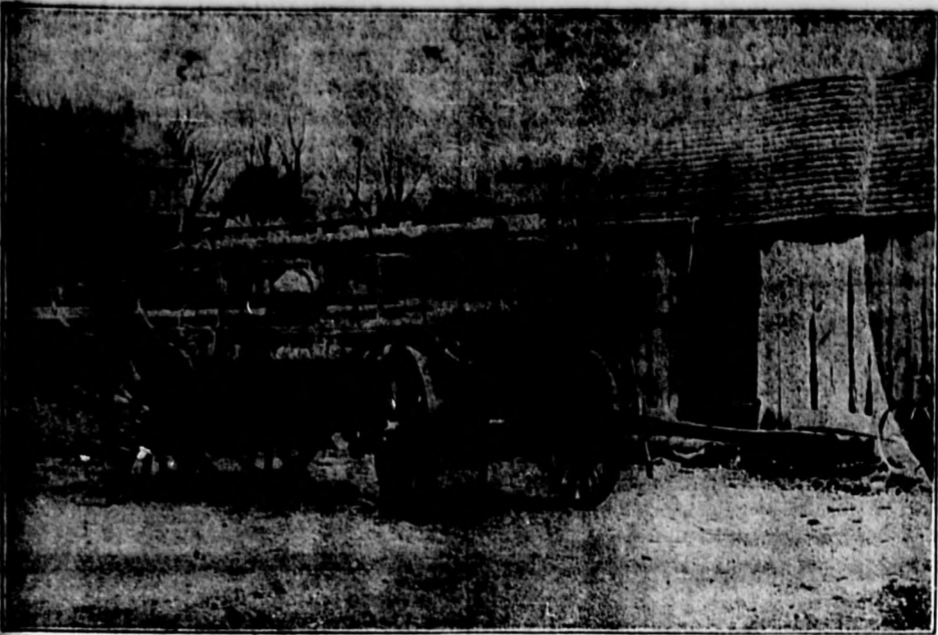

After winning the Brockton Fair marathon in 1910, Hackett's many friends tendered him a reception. A parade, with a band and many noted runners and athletic officials in carriages, as well as several hundred admirers with torch lights and banners, marched through the principle streets of North Weymouth, ending at the Engine house in Ward One, where Hackett was presented with an elegant diamond ring and a gold watch, chain and charm, the latter being the gift of the Holy Name Society of the Immaculate Conception church of East Weymouth. Speech-making and a banquet were features of the evening's entertainment, and quiet, unassuming, modest "Billy" Hackett, with tears in his eyes, made the longest speech in his career, when he thanked the host of friends, who crowded the hall to overflowing, for the gifts of the evening and kindnesses and honor shown to him.

He never really was able to do much active training after his final 25 mile grind to Brockton, but he ran in several races of shorter distances, winning them all, with one or two exceptions.

"Billy" Hackett was one of the finest principled young men in the country. Always quiet in manner, unassuming and modest, especially after a hard earned victory, he was decidedly well thought of by all who knew him.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning from the Immaculate Conception church. At the Solemn High Mass of Defender and Conqueror Win Prizes.

DEFENDER.

World's Champion Hand Engine. Record 285 ft. 6 1/2 in.

Weymouth was very well represented at the Brockton Fair muster in Brockton last Friday, and when the smoke had cleared away after the thirty-two hand engines had played, the Defender of East Weymouth had won fifth prize or $90 and the Conquerors of South Weymouth had captured seventh money or $80. The Active of Weymouth finished in 21st place just two positions outside of the prize money.

The Active of Weymouth Landing went on the board in second place, being the first Weymouth engine to play. Foreman William Coyle had fifty men on the famous old hand tub and succeeded in throwing a stream of 301 ft., 10 inches. The next Weymouth representative was the Conqueror of South Weymouth with Foreman Clifford in charge. The South Weymouth engine was hauled onto the boards in seventh position with a play of 231 ft., 8 1/2 inches.

Rev. Daniel W. Waldron was the celebrant at the funeral of John W. S. Wolfe, the son-deacon. The moral tributes were many and very beautiful. Interment was in St. Paul's cemetery in Hingham. Gordon Cossaboom, Ernest Fisher, David Kearns, Edward Donovan, Joseph Dunn and Harry McLeod were the bearers.

Weymouth Choral Society.

The first regular rehearsal of the Weymouth Choral society for the season was held in the Clapp Memorial hall, East Weymouth, last Monday evening, under the direction of James W. Calderwood, musical director. It is planned to present two concerts during the winter. The first will be of a miscellaneous character, while for the second, the opera of "Martha" will be presented.

Village Study Club.

The first meeting of the season of the Village Study club of South Weymouth was held in the Fogg library building last Monday night with Bates Torrey presiding.

The program for the season was announced. It will consist of the reading of Shakespeare's plays, several musical evenings and special evenings by club members. The meeting Monday night was in charge of Miss Eva W. Robinson. An original paper on "Is Reading Shakespeare a Fad or What?" was read by Miss May E. Moar. The drama "Home and Juliet" was read with the parts taken by Arthur C. Heald, R. E. Moar, Prince H. Tirrell, Bates Torrey, S. R. Cook, Mrs. A. C. Heald, Walter L. Bates, Rev. W. W. Rose, Miss Helen L. Rockwood, Miss Ruth N. Tower, Mrs. William Fottler, Mrs. Henry S. Stowers, Mrs. Bates Torrey, Miss Marjorie Wentworth, Mrs. W. T. Simpson, Herbert Rockwood, Mrs. Frank H. Wood, Miss Helen E. Courtney and Miss Helen Reed.

Epworth League.

In the vestry of the M. E. church in East Weymouth last Monday night, the Epworth League, George C. King chapter, connected with the church, conducted a social and entertainment. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Miss Abbie Maynard, Miss Olive Sylvester, Mrs. Margaret Abbott and Curtis Shaud.

The evening's program was composed of vocal numbers by Miss Olive Sylvester, Miss Ruth Joy and Miss Mary McIsaac; mandolin solos by Miss Mildred Bates; piano solos by Miss Hazel Aylesworth and Miss Ethel Bowker; vocal selections by Miss Marion Bowker and readings by Miss Lena Jones. During the social hour that followed the entertainment, refreshments were served.

Town Business.

In the absence of the chairman, E. W. Hunt, on Monday, Geo. L. Newton acted as chairman pro tem and following are some of the transactions of the meeting:

Several bids were received for the $25,000 of notes to be issued in anticipation of taxes. These notes are to be $5,000 each and payable April next. Easterbrooks & Co. of Boston were the lowest bidders and take the lot at 4 29-100 per cent which shows the town to be in good financial credit.

Not a few people are dissatisfied with the moth and street oiling assessments they are receiving and there were 10 applications for rebate or remittance.

Complaint was received that surplus poles, which were left standing when combination poles were placed from Columbian square to Main street were obstructive and unsightly and the parties responsible will be ordered to remove the same.

Ernest A. Bowker, in the employ of Alvin Hollis was appointed as a public weigher.

The attention of the board was called to the need of catch basins to take care of the water which accumulates on Commercial street near the intersection with Broad.

The general town clean-up day as arranged by the Selectmen for October 4th was changed to the 25th, and look in this paper next week for some instructions as to garbage.

High School Notes.

There will not be any school next Monday on account of the celebration of Columbus Day.

A schedule has been issued by the boys of the Junior class, containing on one side a list of the football games arranged for this year, and on the other, the cheer of the football team.

Miss Frazer, Pres., and Miss Trainor, Sec., are the newly elected officers of the Girls Basketball Association. The girls have set Friday afternoon for the first practice.

A meeting of the Junior class will be held this week, to take action on class dues and other matters.

A talk on the offensive and defensive football tactics was held in Room One, Tuesday, Mr. Hilton presiding.

At the first meeting of the Senior class, all of last year's officers were re-elected. They were: President Harold Glover; Vice president Leo Fraher; Secretary Edith Hollis; and Treasurer Norman Walker. The Entertainment Committee is composed of: Helen Hunt (Chairman), Edith Newman, Ethel Cain, Russell Kelley, Norman Walker and Parker Whittle.

About fifty spectators, who assembled Monday, to witness the Weymouth-Whitman game, on Clapp's Field, were keenly disappointed when the Whitman team did not show up.

TALBOT 15.

South Weymouth Grange, P. of H.

In Clapp's hall on Pleasant street, South Weymouth, on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, the South Weymouth Grange, P. of H., held a successful fair. The committee in charge consisted of John Hanson, Mrs. Lulu Tirrell and Mrs. Esther Rudkin. The sales tables were in charge of the following: Fancy table—Mrs. Esther Rudkin and Miss Annie Hanson. Candy—Mrs. John Inkle and Miss Mabel Hanson. Ice cream—Charles Loud and Miss Edith Inkle. Vegetable—John Hanson and Edward Hirt. Fortune teller—Mrs. Lulu Tirrell.

The Tuesday evening's programme consisted of vocal solos by Miss Gertrude Rudkin, violin numbers by Miss Katherine Pratt, vocal and instrumental selection by Miss Bertha Hanson, piano solos by Miss Grace Rudkin and the one-act drama entitled "The Crystal Gazer" by Miss Mabel Hanson and Miss Theresa Hanson.

On Wednesday evening the fair concluded with a dancing party.

Old Colony Gas Co.

For the quarter ending September 30, 1913, the output of the Old Colony Gas Co. was 16,843,000 cu. ft., showing a gain of 32 percent over the preceding quarter and a gain of 59 percent over the same quarter of last year.

Three Days' Bazaar.

The greatest event of next week will be the three days' bazaar of the Woman's Relief Corp. No. 102, which will be held in Odd Fellows' Opera House and Grand Army Hall, East Weymouth.

From Wednesday afternoon until late Friday night there will be something doing all the time. Read the program and if you haven't time to take it all in, make your selection and take what you can.

Pellagra Due to Flint in Water.
Professors Scala and Alessandrini of the University of Rome have announced the discovery that pellagra is due to the water of the affected districts, which contains colloidal solutions of flint. The disease can be prevented by adding carbonated chalk to the water.

Homemade Cedar Chest.
Get a large pine packing box. Hinge on the lid and putty up the cracks if there are any, but it is better to get one without cracks. Purchase a bottle of cedar oil from the druggist and paint the inside of the box with this, being sure that the oil soaks into all crevices. Use the oil plentifully, and when thoroughly dry line the box with cambric. Cover the outside with any preferred material. The cedar oil will retain its odor for years, and is as much disliked by moths as the cedar wood itself.

Discipline.
The rigor of discipline seems undesirable to many in the present generation. They are unaware that obedience is strengthening and peace giving. A military regime, with its iron-clad discipline, does not break spirit. It makes men ready for forced marches and to meet death. If discipline hurt the human spirit, then soldiers would never win battles. Battles would be won by mobs. Discipline does not diminish life. It enhances life, and so confers a sense of peace.—Collier's Weekly.

Saves A Lot Of Backache
and keeps the kitchen clean.

No more ashes to lug. No clumsy pan to spill dust and dirt on the kitchen floor.

The Glenwood Ash Chute
solves the problem. It is located just beneath the grate and connected by a sheet iron pipe straight down through the kitchen floor to ash barrel in cellar. No part is in sight. Not a particle of dust can escape. Just slide the damper once each day and drop the ashes directly into the ash barrel.

The Tight Cover to barrel is another entirely new Glenwood Idea and is very ingenious. The Ash Chute is sold complete with barrel and all connections, as illustrated, at a moderate price to fit any cabinet style Glenwood. This is only one of the splendid improvements of the Plain Cabinet Glenwood the Range without ornamentation or fancy nickel. "The Mission Style" Glenwood. Every essential refined and improved upon.

Up-To-Date Gas Attachments
This Range can be had with the latest and most improved Elevated or End Gas Range attachments. It has a powerful hot water front or for country use a Large Copper Reservoir on the end opposite fire box. It can be furnished with fire box at either right or left of oven as ordered. When the Ash Chute cannot be used an Improved Ash Pan is provided.

penagra Due to Flint in Water. Professors Scala and Alessandrini of the University of Rome have announced the discovery that penagra is due to the water of the affected districts, which contains colloidal solutions of flint. The disease can be prevented by adding carbonated chalk to the water.

Homemade Cedar Chest. Get a large pine packing box. Hinge on the lid and putty up the cracks if there are any, but it is better to get one without cracks. Purchase a bottle of cedar oil from the druggist and paint the inside of the box with this, being sure that the oil soaks into all crevices. Use the oil plentifully, and when thoroughly dry line the box with cambric. Cover the outside with any preferred material. The cedar oil will retain its odor for years, and is as much disliked by moths as the cedar wood itself.

Discipline. The rigor of discipline seems underrable to many in the present generation. They are unaware that obedience is strengthening and peace giving. A military regime, with its iron-clad discipline, does not break spirit. It makes men ready for forced marches and to meet death. If discipline hurt the human spirit, then soldiers would never win battles. Battles would be won by mobs. Discipline does not diminish life. It enhances life, and so confers a sense of peace.—Collier's Weekly.

CHAPTER VIII.
The Odell-Carneys.

WHILE Odell-Carney was studiously adjusting his eyeglass for a final glare at an offending bus boy who almost dropped his tray of plates in consequence, Mr. Rodney fustily intervened and introduced the Medcrofts. Mrs. Odell-Carney was delightfully gracious. She was sure that no nicer party could have been "got together." Her husband may have been excessively slow in most things, but he was quick to recognize and appreciate feminine beauty of face and figure. He unbent at once in the presence of the unmistakably handsome Fowler sisters. His expressive "chawmed" was in direct contrast to his ordinary manner of acknowledging an introduction. "Mr. Medcroft is the famous architect, you know," explained the envious Mrs. Rodney.

"Where the devil did you get such ideas—oh, wot?"

"Oh, yes, I know," drawled Mr. Odell-Carney. "You American architects are doing great things, 'pon my soul," he added luminously. Brock stuck his eyeglass in tighter and hemmed with raucous precision. Mrs. Medcroft stiffened perceptibly.

"Oh, but he's Roxbury Medcroft, the great English architect!" cried Mrs. Rodney in some little confusion. Odell-Carney suddenly remembered. He glared hard at Brock. The Rodney's saw signs of disaster.

"Oh, by Jove! Are you the fellow who put those new windows in the Chaucer Memorial hall? 'Pon me soul! Are you the man who did that?" There was no mistaking his manner. He was distinctly annoyed.

Brock faced the storm coolly for his friend Medcroft's sake. "I am Roxbury Medcroft, if that's what you mean, Mr. Odell-Carney."

"I know you're Medcroft, but, hang it all, wot I asked was, did you design those windows? 'Gad, sir, they're the laughing sensation of the age. Where the devil did you get such ideas—oh wot?" His wife had calmly, diplomatically intervened.

"I hate that man," said Mrs. Medcroft to her supposed husband a few minutes later. There was a dangerous red in her cheeks, and she was breathing quickly. Brock gave an embarrassed laugh and mentioned something audibly about a "stupid ass."

The entire party left on the following day for Innsbruck, where Mr. Rodney already had reserved the better part of a whole floor for himself and guests Mr. Odell-Carney, before they left Munich, brought himself to the point of apologizing to Brock for his peppery remarks.

He was very sorry and all that, and he hoped they'd be friends; but the windows were atrocious, there was no getting around that. His wife smoothed it over with Edith by confiding to her the lamentable truth that poor Odell-Carney hadn't the remotest idea what he was talking about half of the time. After carefully looking Edith over and finding her valuably bright and attractive she cordially expressed the hope that she would come to see her in London.

"We must know each other better, my dear Mrs. Medcroft," she had said audibly. Edith thought of the famous drawing rooms in Mayfair and exited vastly. "And Mr. Medcroft too. I am so interested in men who have a craft. They always are worth while really, don't you know. How like an American Mr. Medcroft is! I daresay he gets that from having lived so long with an American wife. And what a darling baby! She's wonderfully like Mr. Medcroft, don't you think? No one could mistake that child's father—never!"

Edith may have gasped and looked wildly about in quest of help, but her agitation went unnoticed by the new friend. From that momentous hour Mrs. Medcroft encouraged an inordinate regard for the circuspect. She decided that it was best never to be alone with her husband. The future was now too precarious to go unguarded for a single moment that might be unexplainable when the triumphant hour of revelation came to hand. She impressed this fact upon her sister, with the result that, while Brock was never alone with his prudent wife, he was seldom far from the side of the adorable lieutenant. As if precociously providing for an ultimate alibi, the fickle Tootles began to show unmistakable signs of aversion for her temporary parent.

Mrs. Rodney, being quite an old fashioned mother, could not reconcile herself to this unfilial attitude and gravely confided to her husband that she feared Medcroft was mistreating his child behind their backs.

"Well, the poodle likes him anyway," protested Mr. Rodney, who liked Brock, "and if a dog likes a man he's not altogether a bad lot. If I were you I wouldn't spread the report."

"Spread it!" she sniffed indignantly. "Are they not my own cousins? Twice removed," she concluded as an after thought. "Do you imagine that I would spread it? He may be an unnatural father, but I shall not be the one to say so. Please bear that in mind, Alfred."

"Well, let's not argue about it," said Mr. Rodney, departing before she could disobey the injunction.

Of course, there was no little confusion at the Hotel Tyrol when it came to establishing the Medcrofts. For awhile it looked as though Brock would have to share a room with Tootles, relegating Burton to an alcove and a couch, but Constance, in a strictly family conclave, was seized by an inspiration which saved the day—or the night, more properly speaking.

"I have it, Roxbury," she cried, her eyes dancing. "You can sleep on the balcony. A great many invalids do, you know."

"But, good heaven, I'm not an invalid," he remonstrated feebly.

"Of course you're not, but can't you say you are? It's quite simple. You sleep in the open air because it does your lungs so much good. Oh, but I know! It isn't necessary to expand your chest like that. They're perfectly sound, I daresay. I should think you'd rather enjoy the fresh air. Besides, there isn't a room to be had in the hotel."

"But suppose it should rain!" he protested, knowing full well he was doomed.

"You poor boy, haven't you an umbrella?" she cried with such a perfectly entrancing laugh that he would have slept out in a hailstorm to provide recompense. And so it was settled that he was to sleep in the small balcony just off the baby's luxurious room, the hotel people agreeing to place a cot there at night in order to oblige the unfortunate guest with the affected lung.

"You are so dear and so agreeable, Roxbury," purred Mrs. Medcroft, very much relieved. "If ever I hear of a girl looking for a nice husband I'll recommend you."

"It's all very nice," said he with a wry grin, "but I'm hanged if I ought to be expected to remember all of my accomplishments." They were sitting in her room, attended by the faithful duenna, Constance. "First, the eyeglass, then the English language, with which I find I'm most unfamiliar; then a deafness in one of my ears—I can't remember which until it's too late, and now I'm to be a tubercular. You've no idea how hard it is for me to speak English against Odell-Carney. I'm an out and out amateur beside him. And it's horribly annoying to have Ulstervelt shouting in my ear loud enough for everybody in the dining room to hear. It's rich, I tell you, and if I didn't love you so devotedly, Edith, I'd be on my way at this very instant. There! I feel better. 'On my way' is the first American line I've had in the farce since we left Stuttgart."

"And, by the way, Edith, I'm afraid I'll have to punch Odell-Carney's confounded head before long. He's getting to be so friendly to me as Roxbury Medcroft that I can't endure him as Brock."

"I—I don't understand," murmured Edith plaintively. Constance looked up with a new interest in her ever sprightly face.

"Well, you see, he's working so hard to square himself with Medcroft for the break he made about the windows, that he's taking his spite out on all American architects. Confound him, he persists in saying I'm all right, but God deliver him from those damned rotters, the American builders. He says he wouldn't let one of us build a hencoop for him, much less a dog kennel. Oh, I say, Connie, don't laugh! How would you like it if"—But both of them were laughing at him so merrily that he joined them at once. Burton and O'Brien, who had come in, were smiling discreetly.

"Come, Roxbury, what do you say to a good long walk?" cried Constance. "I must talk to you seriously about a great many things, beginning with egotism." He set forth with alacrity, refusing in spite of his numerous limitations.

Upon their return from the delightful stroll along the mountain side, she went at once to her room to dress for dinner. Brock, more deeply in love than ever before, lighted a cigar and seated himself in the gallery, dubiously retrospective in his meditations. He was sorely disturbed by her almost constant allusion to Freddie Ulstervelt and his "amazingly attractive ways." Was it possible that she could be really in love with that insignificant little whipper snapper? He seemed to be propounding this doleful question to the lofty, sphinxlike Waldrastrer-Spitz, looming dark in the path of the south.

"Hello!" exclaimed a voice close to his ear—the fresh, confident voice that he knew so well. "I've been looking for you everywhere." Freddie drew up a chair and sat down at his "good side." The young man appeared to have something weighty on his mind. Brock shifted uneasily. "I want to put it up to you, Mr. Medcroft, as man to man. You are Connie's brother-in-law and you ought to be able to set me straight."

"Ah, I see," said Brock vaguely. "You do?" queried the other, surprise and doubt in his face.

"No, I should say I don't, don't you see," substituted Brock.

"I was wondering how you could have seen. It's a matter I haven't discussed with any one. I've come to have a liking for you, Roxbury. You're my sort; you have a sort of New York feeling about you. I'm sure you're enough of a sport to give me unprejudiced advice. Hands across the sea, see? Well, to get right down to the point, old man—you'll pardon my plain speech—I think Constance ought to marry an American."

Brock sat up very straight. "I think that's—that's a matter for Miss Fowler to determine," he said coldly.

"You don't quite get my meaning," persisted Freddie, crossing his legs comfortably. "I was trying to make it easy for myself."

"You mean, you think she ought to marry you."

"That's it, precisely. How clever you are."

"But you are said to be engaged to Miss Rodney," ventured Brock, feeling his way.

"That's just the point, Mr. Medcroft. We're not really engaged—but almost. As a matter of fact, we've got to the point where it's really up to me to speak to her father about it, don't you know. Luckily I haven't."

"Luckyly?"

"Yes; that would have committed me, don't you see. I've been tentatively engaged more than a dozen times, but never quite up to the girl's father. Now, I don't mind telling you that I've changed my mind about Katherine. She's a jolly good sort, but she's not just my sort. I thought she was, but—well, you know how it is yourself. The heart's a d-d queer organ. Mine has gone back to Constance in the last two days. You are her brother-in-law, and you're a good fellow through and through. I want your help. I've got money to burn, and the family's got position in the States. I can take care of her as she should be taken care of. No little old six room flat for her. But, of course, you understand, I can't quite carry the thing through with Katherine still feeling herself attached, as it were. The thing to decide is this: How best can I let Katherine down easily and take on Connie without putting myself in a rather hazardous position? I'm a gentleman, you see, and I can't do anything downright rotten. It wouldn't do. I'm sure in her heart Connie cares for me. I could make her understand me better if I had half the chance. But a fellow can't get near her nowadays. Don't you think you are carrying the family link too far? Now, what I want to ask of you as a friend is this: Will you put in a good word for me every chance you get? I'll square myself with Katherine all right. Of course, you'll understand, I don't want to actually break with Katherine until I'm reasonably sure of Constance. I'm a guest of the Rodney family, you see. It would be downright indecent of me. No, sir; I'm not that sort. I shouldn't think of ending it all with Katherine so long as we are both guests of her father. I'd wait until the end of next week."

Brock had listened in utter amazement to the opening portion of this ingenious proposal. As the flexible youth progressed amazement gave place to indignation and then to disgust. Brock's brow grew dark; the impulse to pull his countryman's nose was hard to overcome. Never in all his life had he listened to such a frankly cold blooded argument as that put forth by the insufferable Kniekerbocker. In the end the big New Yorker saw only the laughable side of the little New Yorker's plight. After all, he was a harmless egotist, from whom no girl could expect much in the way of recompense. It mattered little who the girl of the moment might be, she could not hope to or even seek to hold his perambulatory affections. "He's a single example of a great New York class," reflected Brock. "The futile, priggish rich! There are thousands like him in my dear New York—conscienceless, invertebrate, sylvatic sons of idleness, college bred and underbred little beasts who can buy and then cast off at their pleasure. They have no means of knowing how to fall in love with a good girl. They have not been trained to it. It is not for their scrambled intellects to discriminate between the chorus girl brand of attack and the subtle wooing of a gentlewoman. They can't analyze; they can't feel! And this insipid, egotistical little bouncer is actually sitting there and asking me to help him with the girl I love! Good Lord, what next?" He surveyed the eager Ulstervelt in the most irritating manner, finally laughing outright in his face. The very thought of him as Connie's accepted lover! She, the adorable, the splendid, the unap-proachable! It was execrably funny!

"Oh, I say, old man," cried Freddie when the disconcerting laugh came, "don't laugh! It's no joke."

"'Pon my soul, Ulstervelt," apologized Brock, with a magnanimous smile. "I haven't said it was a joke. You?"

"Then what are you laughing at? Something you heard yesterday?" with fine scorn. Brock stared hard at the flushed boyish face of the other. It was weak and yet as hard as brass, hard with the overbearing confidence of the spoiled child of wealth.

"See here, Ulstervelt," he said, with sudden coldness, "you're asking my help. That's no way to get it."

"I beg pardon. I don't mean to be rude," apologized Freddie. "But, I say, old man, I'll make it worth your while. My father's got stacks of coin, and he's a power in New York. Odell-Carney's right. American architects can't design good hencoops. What we want in New York is a rattling good up to date Englishman or two to show 'em a few things. They're a lot of muckers over there, take it from me. By Jove, Roxbury, you don't know how I'd appreciate your friendship in this matter. It will simplify things immensely. You'll speak a good word for me when the time comes, now, won't you?"

"You want me to do you a good turn," said Brock slowly. He found himself grinning with a malleous joy. "All right, I'll see to it that Miss Rodney doesn't marry you, my boy. I'll attend to her."

"Just a minute," interrupted Freddie quickly. "Don't be too hasty about that. I want to be sure of Constance first."

"I see. I was just about to add that I'll give Constance a strong hint that one of the most gallant young sparks in New York is likely to propose to her before the end of the week. That will?"

"Heavens!" exclaimed Freddie in disgust. "You needn't do that. I've already proposed to her five or six times."

"And she—she is undecided?" cried Brock, his eyes darkening.

"No, hang it all, she's not undecided. She's said no every time. That's why I'm up a tree, so to speak."

"Oh!" was all that Brock said. Of course she couldn't love a creature of Freddie's stamp! He glowered.

"'Gad, you're a lucky dog, Roxbury," went on Freddie enviously. "Money isn't everything. You're married to one of the prettiest and most fascinating women in the world. She's a wonder. You can't blame me for wanting your wife as a sister-in-law. Now, can you? And that kid! You lucky dog!"

As Second Class Matter.

FRIDAY, OCT. 10, 1913.

The much discussed tax situation is beginning to assume a serious aspect. We hear this morning that legal advice has been taken and an injunction is to be served on the collector restraining him from further collection of the 1913 taxes.

We are asked who is Kenneth L. Nash, the republican candidate for representative; ordinarily we might not under the circumstances answer the question here, but he being a young man (24 years old) who has never before been before the people for official honors:

We say he is a native of Nash's Corner with a long line of honorable Weymouth ancestors, a graduate of the entire line of Weymouth schools and of unblemished character and spotless reputation.

'Tis well that we know the names of scholars, statesmen and heroes who in the past have devoted the best that was in them for the advancement of science, literature and national upbuilding.

Legislative bodies, State and National, have selected from the long line of the great men to whom we are indebted three who stand out distinct from all others, dedicated to each one day from the calendar of each year.

The special names are Columbus, Washington and Lincoln, and next Monday is "Columbus Day," which will be observed as a holiday, and while in many respects it will be a day of festivities, let us draw from it his great devotion to the work he mapped out for himself.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF SHORT COURSES 1914.

The Extension Service Massachusetts Agricultural College

The Massachusetts Agricultural College Extension Service is endeavoring to assist the farmers and the rural population of Massachusetts in every possible way. It is more or less generally known that Short Courses and other activities are conducted each year. Professor William D. Hurd, Director of the Extension Service, has just completed the program of Short Courses for 1914, which is as follows:

Ten Weeks Winter Courses, Jan. 6th—Mar. 13th inclusive
Apple Packing School, Jan. 31st—Jan. 28th inclusive

Farmer's Week, Mar. 16th—Mar. 20th inclusive

Men's Brotherhood.

The first regular meeting of the Men's Brotherhood of the Pilgrim Church of North Weymouth was held in the church vestry last Tuesday evening. The first part of the evening was devoted to a business session with the president R. S. Gillmore in the chair. The principle feature of the business meeting was the adoption of the revision in the by-laws.

At the conclusion of the business of the evening, Mr. Gillmore introduced as speaker of the evening Mr. Albert Barker, Superintendent of Schools in Quincy.

Mr. Barker's subject was "The Trade School," and he very clearly and interestingly told how the City of Quincy had established a trade school for the boys who had been forced out of work by the new 16 yr. age limit law. Mr. Barker stated that about sixty boys had already joined the class. Thirty boys are sent into machine and other trade shops, for one week and the other 30 attend the trade school during that week. Then on the next week the first class leave the shops and attend school, while the second group take up practical work in the shops. The work thus far has been very successful in the new trade school and many more boys are expected to join. Mr. Barker was given a round of applause at the conclusion of his address. After the talk, luncheon was served by Will Pratt and a corps of assistants. The next meeting of the club will take place on Tuesday evening Nov. 4.

Gas Light Positively Improves the Air Under Actual Conditions of Use

Comparatively few people are aware of the fact that Gas Light really benefits the air in the home or office. The atmosphere is purified by setting the air in motion to an extent that aids ventilation very materially. This it does by driving the heated products out through ceilings and windows, at the same time bringing in pure, fresh air through the floors and lower parts of doors and walls. Thus the germs and animal matter are cremated and the AIR THOROUGHLY STERILIZED, making the home or office livable and healthful.

Consider these facts, together with the acknowledged superiority of Gas Light in all respects—for all uses, and the great factors of safety and reliability (reliable, because it is under the ground, where storms of sleet and thunder so frequent here cannot affect it and therefore you or your business). Consider all of these, and seriously think if you can afford in all justice to yourself, to use any other means of illumination.

No matter what they are, they cannot even equal the Light—the old reliable and still the Peer of all.

Wait Paint.
 There are painters and waiters. Which am I going to do? Paint or wait? Which is better?
 How much am I worth with my property waiting? How much if I paint? Will my house be worth more or less if I paint?
 Say it costs $2 a gallon Devoe—I wouldn't paint any—and $3 or $4 more for putting it on. That's $50 or $60 a 10-gallon job.
 The money is gone. Is it in the house? Is it all in the house?
 Suppose I were selling; what should I get for that house fresh-painted and what should I get for it needing paint?
 I wonder why men paint before selling!

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.
 After the fruit harvest in the orchard, go over the trees and grounds and pick up and destroy all worthless, rotten and wormy fruit.
 After the moult a little linseed meal is a fine thing to round out the poultry ration with.
 The value of a good bull which has succeeded in bringing the herd up to a high standard cannot be measured in dollars and cents.
 No one point in the horse is more essential than well shaped hoofs and sound hoofs. The value of a horse depends to a large extent upon his feet.
 Success in hog raising depends largely on the selection and treatment of the male. It matters less how good the sows may be than is imagined unless careful selection in the males is looked to.
 Calves should have milk until they are five or six months old for best results. If they are forced to subsist on coarse feeds and grain too young they will be stunted, as their digestive system is not developed enough to handle such food exclusively at an early age.
 Take care of the plows. Get them under cover. Clean and grease bright parts so that when wanted next spring they will scour and save the time so many farmers lose in putting their implements into working order.
 As soon as possible stop working scrub horses on the farm and in their place use grade horses of good quality and character, well fed, properly groomed, furnished with attractive, nicely kept harness and hitched to modern implements, wagons and carriages.
 Few realize the great importance of good milking. A cow may quickly be spoiled by careless and irregular milking. Failing to secure every drop of milk each time that it can be made to come is one reason why so many cows decrease so rapidly in their milk flow the last months of their lactation period. Some cows are said to be persistent milkers, that is, they will give a good flow of milk from one freshening time to another. In many of these cases the person doing the milking is responsible for the persistency.
 Most persons who use lima beans do not know how excellent they are when dried for winter use. They are as much better than the common bean as they are when used in summer. The seed almost always brings a high price in spring, and for this use is one of the most profitable crops that a farmer grows.
 It is well to set blackberry plants about 2 feet apart in the row, with rows about 6 feet apart. Ample width between rows allows for easy cultivation and picking. Prune the vines during the growing season to a tall upright habit, real narrow at the bottom and wider at the top. Keep the row compact and even at top and sides. The ideal finished shape of the vines is that of a feather duster with the brush up.
 The farmer's flock should be prolific without sacrificing other qualities. They should be good table fowls. To satisfy this requirement they must be of good size, plump and of good appearance when dressed. They must be hardy and good foragers, as there is much waste food on the farm that can be converted into cash returns by the fowls. The hens must be good sitters and mothers, as many farmers are not ready to buy incubators.
 A short concave face and slightly drooping ear are the sure signs of an easy keeper and of the quiet disposition. Such are some of the features that should be demanded in the male hog, not for appearance but because they indicate qualities of real value.
 Choose good sorts when you plant pear trees. If not injured they will live and bear for a hundred years or more. They are the longest-lived fruit trees we have. While the young trees are making a start it is well to cultivate the soil, but after they have become well established and begin fruiting it is better for the trees to allow the orchard to run to grass. Too much cultivation and fertilization make the trees grow too rapidly and become soft and sappy, less hardy and less resistant to disease.
 Eggs and market chickens both command good prices at present. With good management really more money can be made from poultry than from any other class of live stock. Market poultry at 12 cents a pound is better than cattle and hogs at 8 cents. Eggs are uniformly a good price now at all seasons. Not many years ago eggs could scarcely be disposed of in town and villages in summer even at the low price of 5 cents a dozen. Then it was often common for a farmer to take

She Knew.
"Darling," he murmured, as soon as they had been seated in the high-priced restaurant, "you can have anything you want on the bill of fare. Shall I read it off to you?" "No," replied the dear girl, "just read it to the waiter."

Fought to Death in Mine.
Half a mile underground, in a gallery of a coal mine at Bethune, France, three miners, with their picks, suddenly attacked a fourth, against whom they had a grudge. The man fought desperately, killing one and wounding another before he himself was killed. Other miners sounded the alarm, and the mine, and the murderers were arrested.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed. For every nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Scrap Book

A Generous Spirit.
Fandy McPherson took his lass to Edinburgh for a day's outing. He did not get back until late at night, left a girl at her mother's door, and when the door opened the girl fell into her mother's arms, fumbling with hunger. When her mother said: "Maggie, dear me! What's the matter?" Maggie said: "Mother, something to eat, quick! I haven't had a bite since I left home this morning at 7 o'clock!" Her mother said, "Do you mean to tell me Sandy McPherson has had you away all day and never treated you with something to eat, not even a cup of tea?" She said, "Yes, mother."

"Well," she said, "take your supper and off to bed, and I'll see about it in the morning." In the morning when Maggie awoke her mother asked her how much McPherson had paid for her return fare, and Maggie said, "Two shillings, eightpence." Then handling her the money her mother said, "You go straight over to his lodgings and give him the money and tell him you are finished with him forever." When she went over and handed McPherson the money he said: "You needn't have been in such a big hurry. I could have waited a day or two!"—Detroit Free Press.

When she went over and handed McPherson the money he said: "You needn't have been in such a big hurry. I could have waited a day or two!"—Detroit Free Press.

Quietus.
Man and his strife, and beneath him the earth in her green repose,
And out of the earth he cometh, and into the earth he goes.

Oh, sweet at last is the silence! Oh, sweet at the warfare's close,
For out of the silence he cometh and into the silence goes!
And the great sea round him glistens, and above him the great night glows,
And out of the night he cometh, and into the night he goes.
—William Watson.

In Time of Peace.

The new "beast," or underclass man, at West Point had never heard a heavy siege gun fired. The first class man was solicitous.

"You have never been close when one of these guns was fired, eh?" he inquired.

"No."

"No, sir," commented the first class man.

"Yes, sir. No, sir," replied the "beast."

"Um-m! It's liable to burst your ear drums for life. See here, don't tell him I told you, but go to the commandant and ask him for"—The upper class man was so solicitous that he whispered the rest of his communication.

A few minutes later the raw cadet presented himself before the commandant.

"Please, sir," he said, "I want some guncotton for my ears."—New York Post.

Her Age.

The maiden lady of uncertain age became very indignant when the census taker asked her age.

"Did you see the girls next door?" she asked—"the Hill twins?"

"Certainly," replied the census man.

"And did they tell you their age?"

"Yes."

"Well," she snapped as she shut the door in his face, "I'm just as old as they are."

"Oh, very well!" said the census man to himself, and he wrote down in his book: Jane Johnson, as old as the Hills.

A Poetic Match.

S. E. Kiser, the Chicago poet, wrote a poem, and Bandmaster Innes set it to music, and between them they won the thousand dollar prize offered by West Virginia for a state ode.

Willbur D. Nesbit, another Chicago poet, was riding out toward Evanston one night with Kiser and joshing Kiser about winning half a thousand dollars with a set of rimes like those, and Kiser proclaimed himself a natural lorn winner.

"You can't beat me," said Kiser. "I'm a natural born one; but, just to show you I'm not unduly puffed up, I'll match you to see who pays the car fare for everybody who gets on this car between this spot and your home street."

They matched, and Nesbit lost. It was late. Few people were about. The car proceeded for blocks, and nobody got aboard.

"You may be a natural born winner," said Nesbit, "but you won't stick me much on this proposition."

The car then stopped at a corner where there was a Swedish Lutheran church, and forty-two men and women who had been attending a prayer meeting got aboard. Nesbit is now trying to coax Kiser to write the Swedish national ode, guaranteeing to get it accepted if Kiser will give him a commission of $2.10.—Saturday Evening Post.

Crawford

Parlor Stoves

Crawford "Parlor"

Crawford "Wood Parlor"

"Crawford Parlor." A genuine indirect draft stove with full return flue; the smoke passes down between the firepot and the outside casing of the stove to a flue beneath the ashpan, thence up and out through the back smoke pipe to the chimney, giving more heat and burning less coal. The grate center slides forward for dumping. Large clinker door; wide, deep ashpan; dust damper; nickel rails removable. Four sizes.

"Tropic Crawford." With or without down draft back pipe. Draw center grate. Best stove made at the price. Nickel rails removable.

Crawford "Wood Parlor." In this new heating stove for wood the front door swings open to give the effect of a fire-place. By moving a slide in this door the fire can be seen without opening the door itself. The slide openings are protected by wire gauze. The main top swings to one side and underneath it is a large plate that lifts to admit large pieces of wood.

This stove is made in both direct and indirect draft styles. It is strongly made and very handsome. Three sizes, to burn 19, 22 or 25 inch lengths.

Can We Help You? (As We Helped This Man)

Herbert O. Russell is a farmer in North Hadley Mass., who turned a threatened loss, not only to himself but to his neighbors, into a highly profitable business transaction by making judicious use of the telephone toll lines. He is the Mr. Blank of the following story which appeared in TELEPHONE TOPICS. We use his name by permission:

A HADLEY PASTORAL.

The fertile fields of old Hadley are especially adapted for raising tobacco and onions and especially onions, which are usually a very profitable crop. This year the crop was larger than ever before—bumper to the nth. Prices at once shrunk alarmingly until it came to be a grave question whether it was worth while to market the crop. Some farmers became discouraged and left the crop to rot in the fields. One gave the subject careful thought. While he was pondering the question his glance fell upon the telephone in his kitchen. Could that be the answer?

That next day he called on Manager Proctor for information. He secured full particulars about our toll facilities, then went home and planned a sales campaign by telephone. Each evening the family carefully studied the directories and made up a list of wholesale commission dealers in the large cities.

Early each morning Mr. Blank called them by telephone. Results were immediate and surprising. He made satisfactory terms in short order for the sale of his entire crop and before long he was shipping onions by the carload. After he disposed of his own crop the commission merchants continued their demands for more onions and Mr. Blank commenced buying his neighbors' crops which he sold at a good profit. As a result of his work he has sold twenty-one carloads of onions. It need not be added that he is extremely grateful for the resources of our telephone service.

Are you, Mr. Farmer or Business Man, confronted with a distribution problem of any kind? Let us help you, if we can. In Greater Boston telephone (free of charge) to Fort Hill 7600, the Contract Department.

ANSWERED THE CALL

His Visit to the Hospital Took an Unexpected Twist.

In one of the large hospitals of the country there is a waiting room, where patients sit until rooms or wards are assigned to them and where visitors sit waiting their turns to visit friends or relatives who are sick there.

One morning a boy stuck his head in the doorway and shouted:

"Mr. Anderson?"

Two men started up. One stepped forward quickly and followed the boy, and the other dropped back into his seat.

The boy led this Mr. Anderson to a small room on the third floor, and Anderson went in. Two doctors were there, surrounded by all sorts of terrifying apparatus.

"Anderson?" asked one of the doctors.

"Yes, sir."

"Come here and have your stomach washed out."

"But," protested Anderson wildly, "I don't want my stomach washed out."

"GRAB HIM!" RETORTED THE DOCTOR.

"That's what they all say! Grab him!" retorted the doctor.

And they took Anderson, shoved him into a chair and in a twinkling had a stomach pump in him. After the operation the doctor looked sternly at the wilted and shivering Anderson and said:

"Confound you! You ate some breakfast this morning. I told you to eat nothing!"

"Of course I ate my breakfast!" wailed Anderson. "Why shouldn't I eat my breakfast? I never saw you before."

"What are you in here for?" demanded the doctor.

"Why," gasped Anderson, "I came here to see my wife!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Tenderness.

We can help make people bright by our keenness, but we can never accomplish anything toward making people good except by our tenderness.—Parkhurst.

Too Appropriate.

In his book, "Recollections of the Old Church," the Rev. John Elvy gives a rather amusing instance of a certain English bishop's want of tact.

The bishop had been asked to give an address to a meeting of workmen, and a special feature of the meeting was that the men were asked to come just as they were, in their working clothes. Most of them came straight from work, and they were highly indignant when the bishop announced as his text, "Wash and be clean!"

Mendelssohn's Selection.

It is related of Mendelssohn at a public dinner at which ladies were present and where he was surrounded by a chorus of aggressive women clamoring for his autograph, that he allowed himself to be victimized with good nature until finally a fleshy nation of mature years handed him her card. Whether with malice prepense or not it is not stated, but the composer wrote upon the card the music and words from Haydn's "Creation": "And God created great whales." This brought the autograph hunting to an end, and Mendelssohn was allowed to go on with his dinner.

Making It Easy.

There is a certain bright newspaper man in New York city who is also rather clever as a lawyer. Owing to his multifarious duties and somewhat strenuous life he occasionally indulges in strong drink as a relaxation. One day recently, after he had had a few, a friend said to him:

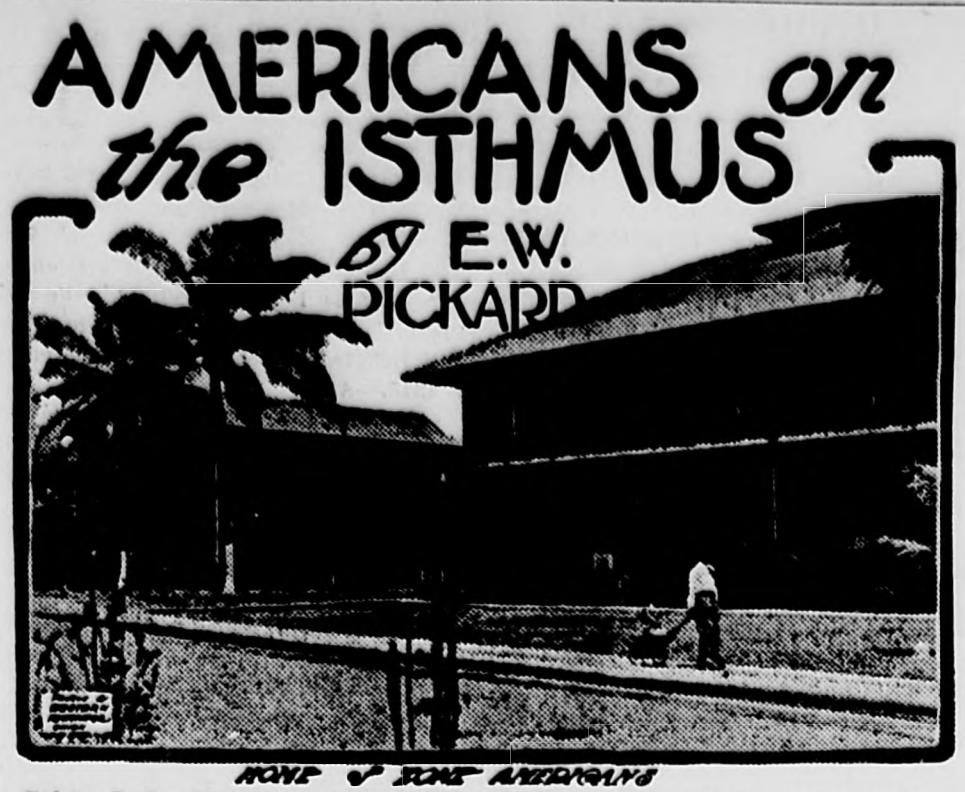

"See here, Ed, why don't you cut out the firewater? It's a shame that a man with your brain should ever cloud it with whisky."

Ed gazed at his friend for a moment with a pained and faraway look and replied:

"I'm not clouding my brain. I promised it to a medical college to be preserved in alcohol after my death, and I am only starting the preserving process, that's all."

Persian Inventiveness.

A foreign minister, traveling to Teheran from Resht, stopped at one of the small stations for some food. The head of the tea house, being asked by the dragoman what he could give them to eat, replied he had very little—only two eggs and a chicken. After a little while one egg was brought in and set upon the table. The dragoman asked where the rest of the meal was. This was the answer: "The chicken shows every sign of laying the second egg, and when she has done so I will bring it to you, and then I will kill her and cook her for you."—From "Peeps Into Persia."

AMERICANS on the ISTHMUS

Colon, C. Z.—For the American resident of the Canal Zone life is not all beer and skittles. There is plenty of beer, but I have not seen a skittle here. Perhaps I would not have recognized one if I had seen it.

The American in a foreign land is not so tenacious of his home customs as the Englishman, and in Panama he finds himself not only in a tropic clime but in the midst of a civilization much older than his own. Consequently he yields in many particulars to the customs of that clime and that civilization. The mid-day siesta of two hours, when he disrobes and does in a cool room, the dip in the ocean before dinner and the evening stroll in the plaza all appeal to him as to the native and have become a part of his life there.

At the same time the influx of north-erners has had its effect on the Panamanians, especially, perhaps, in the matter of sports. Bullfights no longer are to be seen here and cock-fighting has suffered a marked decline. In place of them the native now enjoys frequent wrestling matches and prize-fights, indulges in tennis to some extent and has taken kindly to the national American sport of baseball.

It is the American woman on whom the changed conditions of life bear hardest, for housekeeping on the isthmus is attended by many annoyances. A good many people have the idea that a woman in the tropics lies in a hammock all day and at meal time picks her food from the branches of trees that shade her resting place. As a matter of fact she must do her household shopping at home, and the domestic problem is with her here as there, only more so if possible. For clothing and standard groceries she usually goes to the store of the commissary department, where she can buy well and cheaply. But for fruit and many of the vegetables there is the daily trip to the market. In that spacious building—I am speaking now of Colon and Panama—are scores of booths and tables, attended by Jamaicans, Chinese and native Panamanians, and piled high with taro, breadfruit, soursaps, guavas, papayas, bananas, plantains, alligator pears, mangoes, oranges, coconuts and a dozen other tropical products. The layout is tempting, but the purchasing is a task. Such a thing as a fixed price is unknown and one must bargain diligently or get the worst of it. And the insolence of the negro women is often commensurate with their ignorance. The native meat market is quite "impossible" for white people from the United States, for the meat, roughly hacked, is sold immediately after slaughtering, and the screening enforced by the American sanitary department is rendered ineffective by open doors.

The domestic servants employed by Americans in the zone are almost all Jamaican negroes. They are neat and clean, but their stupidity usually is monumental. Every detail of the household operations must be driven into their heads, and their minds seemingly are on the island home they have left, for their memory is almost nil and their eyes see little close at hand. Then, too, after a year or so of service and saying they begin to think of returning to Jamaica and grow "weary."

"Why, Blanche," said one shocked housewife, "here it is eleven o'clock and the breakfast dishes and kitchen things not washed, and the ants all over them!"

"Oh, marm, I couldn't do them, I'm so exhausted this morning," was Blanche's reply.

That's a mild sample of what must be contended with.

Speaking of ants, there is another of the annoyances of housekeeping in the tropics. The ants are everywhere, in unbelievable numbers and most extraordinary activity. Screens do not keep them out nor insect exterminators discourage them. They must simply be endured. If they take a fancy to a nicely growing garden of young vegetables, they cut and carry off all the leaves in a night. It is the so-called leaf ant that does that. All over the isthmus he is to be seen, moving in processions along well beaten paths, each individual carrying a leaf or other bit of foliage. One day I saw a long line of them moving through the sparse turf, all carrying tiny red blossoms cut from a small weed. It was a very picturesque miniature parade. No place and no age has been free from the cockroach, and in Panama he grows to an enormous size and spends some of his time and energy eating the covers of bound books.

Rust and mould add to the woes of the American housekeeper, and many articles she must keep in "dry closets" in which electric lamps are kept burning.

There are not in Panama a great many of the old pure-blooded Spanish families, whose members possess education and refinement, and those that are there are not especially fond of Americans. Consequently there is not much social intercourse between the two races. The social activities of the Americans have three general centers—the Tivoli club, the Washington Cotillon club and the Young Men's Christian association. The first two are dance organizations and give balls alternate fortnights at the Tivoli hotel in Ancon and the Washington hotel in Colon. These affairs are quite formal and attract the best of the Americans from all parts of the zone.

As for the Y. M. C. A., its work on the isthmus really deserves a chapter to itself, for it has been one of the big factors in the successful building of the canal. At first it was found impossible to persuade men from the United States to remain long on the isthmus. The pay was good, the work interesting, but homesickness found easy victims and they resigned and went back to the States in discouraging numbers. Several remedies were tried, and finally the commission established a club house in every zone town of any size and wisely put them in charge of the Y. M. C. A. In these houses are billiard rooms, bowling alleys, gymnasiums, soda fountains, libraries, lounging rooms and a dozen other conveniences, and each house has a hall large enough for dances and amateur dramatics and musical entertainments. The secretaries in charge have been exceedingly active in the organization of bowling, baseball, billiard and other leagues, and the tournaments are continuous and of great interest. Of course no intoxicating drinks are to be found in these clubs, but in other respects they are conducted on lines so liberal as to be sometimes surprising. In one of them, for instance, I saw a number of young men and women dancing in the hall, to the music of a phonograph, immediately after the close of the Sunday evening religious service. This may have been an exceptional case, as it was in one of the more isolated towns.

In Ancon, Cristobal and some others of the larger American towns flourishing women's clubs have been maintained, and these were united in a zone federation which dissolved only this year, feeling that its work was done with the virtual completion of the canal. The clubs have done a great deal in the way of philanthropy and study, and many social functions are given under their auspices.

As may readily be comprehended, life for Americans in the zone is much like life in an American suburban town, and it has some of the disadvantages of the latter. Gossip and social jealousies are prevalent here, as there, and not a few women have been driven back to the States by them. Disputes over promotions and the assignments of living quarters cause bitterness and estrangements, and of course there are innumerable complaints of undue influence—"pull"—in these matters. In some cases it must be admitted there has been cause for these complaints, and, sad to say, often woman has been the cause. Her influence with certain of the high officials cannot be doubted, and sometimes it has results that are to be deplored.

Here is one instance of the power exerted by "pull." A man for some years has held a responsible position with the Panama Railroad company, and who has a wife, two daughters and a young son, has been waiting long for housekeeping quarters, which are at a premium. Two minor clerks of the railway had been attentive to the daughters, but, being objectionable to the father, were discouraged. But the clerks had some influential connections, and in revenge have so contrived things that the family in question has been passed by repeatedly in the assignment of housekeeping quarters. The father and son live in one building, the mother and daughters in another, and all must take their meals at the hotel.

Naturally, not many of the Americans on the isthmus will find that there after the completion of the canal. A few of the doctors may engage in general practice there—some already have done so—and some of the workmen may find the tropic climate so to their liking that they will stay. But nearly all are looking rather eagerly to the time when they can return to the states. The engineers and physicians no doubt will find that the experience they have had will be invaluable to them in the getting of positions and practice when they come home. But to readjust themselves to the old conditions of living may not be easy for the men and women who have been in the zone for years.

Suburban Life.

Now that the hot summer weather is over and the days are getting shorter and cooler, one's thoughts naturally turn to the inside of the house and what can be done to make it more comfortable. Suburban Life—The Countryside Magazine for October is full of just the things most folks are interested in at this season. The titles of the following articles about the interior of the house explain themselves: "The Library—Its Arrangement and Furnishings," "The Problem of the Modern Radiator," "Wall Coverings that are Shown for This Season," "Some of the Best Things I've Seen in Other Women's Houses," "Hardwood Floors—Their Varying Cost and Right Finish" and "The Economy of Built-in Furniture." In this issue also Harold J. Howland, Contributing Editor, has another frank up-to-date talk on a question which is troubling not a few "What Shall We Do with the Turkey Trot?" The answer is very simple according to Mr. Howland's suggestion.

"The Modern Stable and Its Furnishings," "A Countryside House of Stucco," "Bulbs to Plant in the Open and Indoors," "Fresh-water Pearl Fishing," "An Autumn Nosegay" and "The School Doctor" are all articles of especial interest to the man and woman of the countryside.

Hold Harvest Supper.

On Saturday evening last, the Ladies' Auxillary, connected with the King Cove Boat Club, gave a Harvest Supper at the Club-house in North Weymouth. About seventy people, including members of the club and friends, sat down to a delightful supper. The ladies in charge were Mrs. Irving Morgan, Mrs. Henry O. Miller, Mrs. Lester Culley and Mrs. Charles Abbott, assisted by other members of the auxillary. The club house was a pretty sight, red Japanese lanterns and red crepe paper were festooned from the corners of the room. On the tables the decorations were center pieces made of fruits of the season. The ladies had harvested a large quantity of good things with which the tables were loaded. Cards and music were enjoyed after the supper. The ladies are to be congratulated of the success of their first Harvest supper.

WORDS FROM HOME

Statements That May Be Investigated. Testimony of Weymouth Citizens

When a Weymouth citizen comes to the front, telling his friends and neighbors of his experience, you can rely on his sincerity. The statements of people residing in far away places do not command your confidence. Home endorsement is the kind that backs Doan's Kidney Pills. Such testimony is convincing. Investigation proves it true. Below is a statement of a Weymouth resident. No stronger proof of merit can be had. Fred Simpson, blacksmith, Hingham Center Mass., says: "I had to do heavy work and found I needed a medicine for backache and irregular kidney action. I have always depended on Doan's Kidney Pills to relieve me of the trouble and they have never failed. I consider them the best medicine on the market of that kind. The praise I gave Doan's Kidney Pills a few months ago, still holds good."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

An Awful Poor Forgettery

An old soldier once gave a happy description of Abraham Lincoln's fine memory by saying that he had an awful poor forgettery. This is a good moment to Old Colony Club.

The first meeting of the season of the Old Colony Ladies' club of Weymouth was held in the auditorium of the Union Congregational church in South Weymouth last Thursday afternoon, October 9. Mrs. Christopher Slinnett presided. A Japanese program was given during the afternoon. Miss Hetty Dunway gave a talk on the "Lady of the Decoration," from a platform arranged to represent a Japanese room. After the address, a Japanese social was held in the chapel, with Mrs. Arthur H. Linton as hostess. The decorations consisted of Japanese lanterns, wisteria, cherry blossoms and chrysanthemums, while the hostess and assistants were in Japanese costume. The pointers were Mrs. Walter R. Fields, Mrs. Henry Stowers, Mrs. John Robinson and Mrs. Alvin Reed. The servitors included Mrs. Frank Thomas, Miss Mary Greeley, Miss Hazel Robinson, Mrs. Marshall Abbott, Miss Agnes Holbrook, Miss Helen Simpson, Mrs. Louise Cook, Jr., Miss Carrie Swan, Mrs. Charles Brown, Mrs. William Barnard, Mrs. Josiah Prescott and Mrs. Arthur Tirrell. The next meeting of the club will take place Thursday afternoon, October 23, when Miss Ethel Raymond will give a musicale, assisted by Mr. Willard Flint, baritone. This meeting is to be the first open meeting of the club this season.

Naturally His First Thought.

An American gentleman went over the field of Waterloo with a guide, who boasted that he escorted General Sheridan over the scene of Napoleon's great defeat. "What did General Sheridan say?" asked my friend. "Oh, nothing." He must have said something. "Well, he only said: 'It was a good place for a fight.'"

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

FORTY SIX YEARS AGO.

There was quite a gathering of the friends of temperance at the Town Hall on Friday of last week. The day was dull and somewhat rainy but a very good audience was gathered. A quartette club under the direction of Mr. Gilbert Nash favored the company with good singing and the Weymouth band discoursed excellent music.

The Convention organized by the choice of Elias Richards Esq. for president and Messrs. John S. Fogg, M. C. Dizer, Wilmot Cleverly, D. C. Earle, Z. L. Bicknell, Cottingham Nash, John Blanchard, J. M. Whitcomb, Wm. Dyer, Darius Smith Jr., James Humphrey, Abner P. Nash, Josiah Reed, Alvah Raymond, S. W. Nash, F. E. Loud, J. W. Loud and B. F. Pratt, vice-presidents; Wilmot Cleverly and A. P. Nash, secretaries.

The speakers of the day were Rev. D. C. Edd of Boston and Rev. J. H. Coe of New Bedford and urged upon our citizens the importance of work and it is hoped that every lover of sobriety and peace will at once enter upon it.

THIRTY-SIX YEARS AGO.

Mr. J. M. Brant is erecting a two story dwelling on Cedar street, on the site of his former house, which has been removed.

The Rocket boys had their tub out for trial again last Saturday afternoon, throwing a horizontal stream a distance of 176 feet 5 1/2 inches.

Mr. Edward Hollis, the "champion picker," has deprived 4300 chickens of their feathers since the middle of March, working three days in the week.

The undersigned treasurer of the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial society for the past year submits the following report:

At the last Annual Meeting there was a balance in favor of the Society of $2,221.11-100.

Since the foregoing report was made out payments have been made so as to reduce the balance due the society to about $1,118.07.

TWENTY-SIX YEARS AGO.

For the first time in the town's history the citizen's of Weymouth will have an opportunity to vote in precincts instead of tripping to the town hall to exercise their suffrage.

A verdict against the town for $32,029 and a fraction, rendered yesterday. At noon Wednesday, after Judge Barker had charged the jury for about two hours, they retired and at a late hour returned a sealed verdict which was announced at the opening of court Thursday morning, which was in favor of the plaintiffs. The amounts are as follows: Quincy L. Reed ext., et al., $3884; Reuben Loud et al., $2707; Elon Sherman, $3531; John C. Howe et al., $4708; John E. Sanford, et al., ass's of Weymouth Iron Company, $17,199; total amount against the town, $32,029.

This is the largest verdict ever rendered in this court, and is one of the largest known to have been rendered against any town in New England. The town is satisfied, but it is said the plaintiffs are not, and probably will take exceptions.

As the above may not be understood by many of our readers we would say that these awards were for taking water from their mills for the town's water supply.—Ed.

NINETEEN YEARS AGO.

Next week will be a gala week for Court Wessagusset, No. 78, A. O. F., and Pilgrim circle No. 235, C. of F. A grand carnival under the auspices of these two societies will be held in Fogg's opera house on five consecutive evenings of the week.

The tax collector was at the Engine house, Tuesday, and the money came in so fast he was obliged to stay nearly two hours over the advertised time. At one time there was a line of people extending around the hall waiting to pay their taxes.

The first regular meeting of the East Weymouth Fish and Game club, was held in Engine Hall, Saturday night. The president, James L. Lincoln, was in the chair and for a hard rainy night a good number was in attendance. Eighteen new names were added to the roll of membership and plans made for future work in stopping the killing of robins and sealing of smelts.

The project looking toward an electric railroad from South Weymouth, there connecting in one of the squares with the road from Rockland, through Nash's Corner to Weymouth Landing, there connecting with the new electric road to be immediately built from East Weymouth to Braintree, is looked upon as an enterprise that will be of incalculable benefit to South Weymouth and Nash's Corner in particular.

Troop No. 2 Boy Scouts of America.

A meeting of the troop was held at their rooms last Friday evening. Scout Master Commons presided. The roll call and records of the last meeting were read.

According to new orders from headquarters, every scout will have to be enrolled at the National headquarters in New York. Twenty-two scouts have now enrolled and paid their yearly dues, which are sent to New York.

Master Harold Lincoln and Master David Joy have been admitted into the troop and enrolled as tenderfoots.

A committee consisting of Scouts Dudley, Rix and Blanchard have been appointed to organize a basketball team. If a suitable place can be obtained for practice, a fast team ought to be developed. Scout Studley has been chosen as temporary manager.

It was with much regret that the resignation of the president of the troop, John T. Dizer, had to be acted upon. Scout Dizer is at Amherst college, so cannot be with us much. His resignation was accepted and the troop secretary instructed to write him a letter, expressing the thanks of the troop for his services. He still remains a member of the troop.

Scout Clough has moved to Dorchester and has been transferred to a Dorchester troop.

It has been voted to pay dues weekly and that all dues from last June to October 1 shall not have to be paid. This allows some of the boys to catch up and gives others a good margin for the future.

A troop committee or court of honor has been organized and consists of the following: Joseph Chase, Jr., Charles B. Cushing and Emerson R. Dizer. Their duties will be to help the Scout Master in his work, and if the Scout Master should resign to obtain a successor.

Assistant Scout Master MacFaul and Troop Secretary Fahey were appointed to take charge of the new enrollment papers.

It was voted that the Scout Master, Assistant Scout Master and troop officers should constitute a nominating committee to bring in names to be voted on as patrol leaders for the coming year.

Monday Club.

On Monday evening, October 20th, at Odd Fellows hall, East Weymouth, the Monday club of Weymouth will celebrate Gentlemen's Night. Mrs. Franklin Whitten will present to the club and their guests the drama entitled "The Sisterhood of Bridget," parts being taken by local talent. Miss Ethel Raymond will furnish orchestra music for the dancing. Mrs. William Wheaton is to be hostess.

Members are requested to engage tickets not later than to-day (Friday) Oct. 17.

Hunt—Ford.

At the parsonage of the East Weymouth Methodist church last Thursday evening, October 9, Miss Alma Arnold Ford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Ford of 67 Raymond street, East Weymouth, became the bride of William Robert Hunt of Lakeport, N. H. The ceremony was performed at 6 o'clock by Rev. George A. Grant, pastor of the M. D. church. The maid of honor was Miss Sarah E. Ford, a sister of the bride and Edwin W. Ford, a brother of the bride was best man.

An informal reception (no cards) followed the ceremony from 7 until 9 at the home of the brides' parent on Raymond street. A wedding lunch was served. The bride wore a traveling costume of blue silk poplin with a hat to match, and in her hair was a beautiful silver comb, worn by her grandmother 80 years ago.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Hunt will reside in Lakeport, N. H.

King's Daughters Convention.

In the Union Congregational church in Weymouth Landing last Thursday the 30th semi-annual convention of King's Daughters was held with Mrs. Mary W. Sawtell presiding.

The many delegates were welcomed by Thomas W. Watson. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Edward Norton and Mrs. M. W. Farley. Mrs. Helen Dare conducted a quite hour service and a report from the Gordon Rest Home was read by Mrs. Farley.

Music was provided by Mrs. Robert S. Hoffman, soprano and Miss Anna Cady, organist. Luncheon was served by the Unity Circle of King's Daughters.

CLAPP M. A. OPENS FOR SEASON

Many Improvements in Building. Attractive Program Announced.

The Clapp Memorial association opened the building for the coming season, on Oct. 1st when a large number of members and their friends gathered to inspect the building and try the bowling alleys. The interior of the building has been put in first class condition and many improvements made.

When you approach the building at night the first improvement to greet you is the beautiful light over the front doors. This was one of the most needed improvements and will be appreciated by all.

The pool tables have been put in first class condition both banks and beds having been recovered. The men members who play pool will be interested to know that one table will be reserved for them and that a new set of cues with a lock cut-rack has been purchased for their especial use.

A fine selection of up-to-date reading matter will be found in the new reading room which was formerly the Junior boys' game room.

GYMNASIUM.

The gymnasium has been thoroughly cleaned, the floor varnished and the whole lighting scheme changed. Where once it took fifty incandescent lamps to give sufficient light the whole thing is done now with one of the latest type of white flaming arc lights. This arc gives double the light at a great saving of expense.

In order that hand ball may be enjoyed more by the evening classes six large lights have been arranged so as to throw all their light on the playing wall and yet be out of sight of the players.

The schedule of gymnasium classes together with the important events scheduled for this month are as follows:

Gymnasium classes: Business men, Mon., 4 to 5.30; Wed., 4 to 5.30; Fri., 4 to 5.30. A morning class for business men will be formed if ten or more enroll.
Men's evening class, Mon., 7.30 to 9.30; Wed., 7.30 to 9.30; Fri., 7.30 to 9.30.
Intermediate class, Mon., 2.30 to 4; Wed., 2.30 to 4; Fri., 2.30 to 4.
Junior class, Tues., 4 to 5.30; Sat., 9.30 to 11.
Special classes, such as handball, boxing, wrestling and basket ball, on Tues., 7.30 to 9.30 and Thurs., 7.30 to 9.30.

Events to Nov. 1: Oct. 13, gymnasium classes start, Choral society rehearsal; Oct. 16, married couples' dancing class; Oct. 20, Choral society rehearsal; Oct. 23, married couples' rehearsal; Oct. 24, first lesson young ladies' dancing class; Oct. 30, married couples' dancing class; Oct. 31, football, Weymouth High vs South Boston.

LOCKER ROOM.

This has been made a most up-to-date locker room. Steel ceiling, new electric lighting, liquid soap and paper towels have been added. The Miller Non-pickable Keyless locks have been installed thus eliminating any possibility of goods being borrowed without the owner's consent.

BOWLING ALLEYS.

The alleys were never in such fine condition as at the present time. The alleys were put in first class condition by the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. of Boston. The ball return fort has been moved back six feet, score boards changed from the wall to an iron frame with rod support directly over return fort. The new lighting for the alleys consists of twelve forty-watt Mazda lamps set at an angle of 45 degrees with 18 inch shade thus throwing the light ahead as well as down on the alleys, almost entirely eliminating the shadows which were so noticeable with the old lights.

MEMBERSHIP.

Membership in the Association is open to any man or boy of good moral character. Cost of membership is as follows:

Men's full membership including all the privileges of the association $8. Locker $1 additional.

Intermediate and high school boys full membership $5. Locker 50 cents additional.

Junior boys full membership $3. Locker 50 cents additional.
Special bowling membership for men $5 per year.

Special bowling membership for ladies $2 per year.

A special reduction will be made to men and boys living outside East Weymouth as follows:

Men's full membership including locker $6.

Intermediate and high school boys full membership including locker $3.50 per year.

Junior boys full membership including locker $2.50 per year.

The ladies will be given the exclusive use of the alleys on Thursday afternoon and evenings. A fine set of prizes will be offered in the various tournaments on the alleys this winter. It is hoped that a sufficient number of ladies will join to form a bowling club and that many social events may be held this winter.

SPECIAL MEMBERSHIP OFFER.

All who join the association before Jan. 1st will receive all the time prior to Jan. 1st free as their memberships will not expire until Jan. 1st, 1915.

The association aims to do the greatest good to the greatest number possible and in order to accomplish its purpose most cordially solicits the help of the men and boys of all Weymouth. An invitation is extended to all to visit the building at any time.

William S. Wallace Celebrates his 75th Birthday.

William S. Wallace one of the town's most estimable citizens was 75 years old last Friday and a large number of his friends called at his home 265 Summer street and extended their congratulations. Mr. Wallace received a number of handsome gifts including a purse of gold. Mr. Wallace enjoys excellent health. He is a past commander of South Shore Commandery Knights Templars and past master of Delta Lodge of Masons. He represented the town in the legislature in 1876. He is a republican in politics and has on various occasions refused to become a candidate for town office. He has held the position of Warden continuously since the Australian System was adopted.

Mr. Wallace received a letter of congratulations from Ex. Gov. John D. Long whose birthday comes the same time.

Mr. Wallace is a brother of Col. Cranmore N. Wallace of Boston and Beverly.

Business Change.

J. F. & W. H. Cushing have assigned for the benefit of their creditors to Willard P. Sheppard. The business will be conducted as before, except that J. F. & W. H. Cushing will now act in the capacity of agents, in the sale of coal for J. F. Sheppard & Sons of East Braintree and Quincy.—Adv.

Blaze Near Lincoln Square.

The alarm from box 34 last Friday afternoon was for a fire at the building on Washington street near Lincoln square occupied on the first floor as a store and tenement by Benjamin Bean and on the second floor by John R. Fitzgerald.

Chauffeur Harry S. Dinsmore of Combination 3 was in Sullivan's barber shop getting a shave and on looking across the street saw the fire. He rushed to the box and pulled in the alarm. The department responded quickly, and when the firemen arrived they found the whole store in flames. After a stubborn fight they succeeded in extinguishing the fire. The stock of dry goods etc. was ruined and Bean's furniture was also badly damaged. Mr. Fitzgerald's furniture was also damaged by smoke. The building is owned by Walter Phillips and the loss on it is covered by insurance. Mr. Bean was insured but Mr. Fitzgerald was not. During the progress of the fire pipeman Fred B. Dwyer of Combination 3 had two of the fingers of his left hand badly cut by falling glass. Dr. James H. Cook dressed the wounds which required a number of stitches to be taken. The cause of the fire is unknown. Mr. and Mrs. Bean left a short time before the fire for Quincy and state that everything was all right when they left the building.

Columbus Day Celebration.

A celebration was held Columbus Day at Webb park under the auspices of the Citizens' association which was attended by several hundred people. There was a band concert by the Emerson Shoe band of Rockland and two baseball games. The game between the teams from the Hunt and Athens schools was won by the former 22 to 0. The game between the girls' team of the Jonas Perkins school, East Braintree and the girls' team of the Hunt school was won by the former, 18 to 17.

Weymouth Industrial Association.

The fifth annual meeting of the Weymouth Industrial Association was held in Engine Hall, Ward 2, last night.

The president, Fred Humphrey, was in the chair. Reports of the clerk, treasurer and executive committee were read, and showed a very satisfactory condition, and earning of the Keith factory No. 8 and other properties.

Funds are in the treasury and in sight for a further reduction of the debt, and also for the payment of a 2 per cent. dividend which was declared.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were: Frederick Humphrey, president; M. P. Garey, clerk; W. H. Pratt, treasurer; E. R. Keith, G. A. Walker, H. E. Hanley, George E. Bicknell, Gordon Willis and W. P. Denbroeder, executive committee; H. A. Nash, G. E. Bicknell and M. Sheehey, auditors.

HARVEST BAZAAR.

In Spite of Unfavorable Weather Reynolds W. R. C. 102 Entertains Large Crowd at Annual Harvest Bazaar on Wednesday and Thursday. Another Good Sized Audience Expected Today.

With a good sized crowd present, taking into consideration the decidedly adverse weather conditions, the Harvest Bazaar under the auspices of Reynolds W. R. C. No. 102 opened in Odd Fellows hall, East Weymouth on Wednesday. The event continued through yesterday and will be concluded tonight.

The affair is directly in charge of Mrs. Agnes F. Baldwin, president of W. R. C. 102; Mrs. Junie B. Morrill, chairman and a corps of able assistants.

The doors opened at 2.30 Wednesday afternoon with well stocked tables and booths about the hall in charge of the following chairmen:

Vegetable, Mrs. Caroline Sewell, chairman; Daughters of Veterans, preserve table, Mrs. Ida Farrington, chairman; ice cream booth, Mrs. Jennie Keene, chairman; mystery table, Mrs. Alice Hebeck, chairman; punch table, Mrs. Mary E. Mahoney, chairman; candy table, Mrs. Lizzie Burr, chairman; cake table, Mrs. Jennie Callahan, chairman; fancy table, Mrs. Harriet Litchfield, chairman; domestic table, Mrs. Jennie F. Stoddard, chairman.

Mrs. Jennie F. Stoddard, chairman of the domestic table sent a communication to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson concerning the annual Harvest Bazaar, and Mrs. Wilson very kindly sent a silver thimble and an autographed letter, to be put on sale on the domestic table.

The color scheme used in decorating the several booths and tables was of red, white, green and blue streamers, paper flowers and other reasonable decorations. The Daughters of Veterans table and the vegetable booth on the right hand side of the hall looking towards the stage were both beautifully decorated in red, white and green crepe paper. The ice cream, mystery and punch tables were tastily gotten up with red, green and white decorations of various styles and the cake, candy, domestic and fancy tables on the left hand side were artistically decorated with red and white streamers, paper chrysanthemums and other flowers.

From 5 o'clock until 7 on the first afternoon of the fair, an old fashioned supper was served in G. A. R. hall by a committee of ladies with Mrs. Caroline Sewell as chairman.

Yesterday afternoon a luncheon was served in Odd Fellows hall, in charge of Mrs. Eline Vining. Mrs. Vining will also conduct a luncheon table this afternoon.

The entertainment on the first evening consisted of a grand concert given by the Norfolk Kitchen orchestra of twenty five pieces, with Signorina Florencia Haleano, conductor. This group of talented musicians gave a pleasing program which was highly enjoyed by all. All the numbers were well rendered and all received a round of well merited applause.

Last evening Herbert A. Clark, gave a pleasing program of character impersonations, with Mrs. Mary R. Flint as accompanist. Orchestral selections were also enjoyed.

The bazaar closes this evening with the presentation by South Weymouth talent of "Mrs. Bouncer's Boarders" an opera in one act, arranged by Philip Greeley from Sir Arthur Sullivan's famous opera "Cox and Box." The cast is as follows:

"Mrs. Bouncer," a widow Annie Deane
"Penelope Ann" her daughter Annie S. Greely
"Cox" a hatter Philip Greeley
"Box" a printer Charles F. Brown
Accompanist, Dr. Porter Pratt.
Scene, Mrs. Bowser's boarding house
Time, Suit yourself.

Good sales have been reported thus far by the several committees in charge and a large crowd should be in attendance this afternoon and evening to help the ladies of the W. R. C. place the bazaar of 1913 on record as the best yet.

Mr. Michael Griffin, Dead.

Mr. Michael Griffin, one of the oldest residents of this place, died at his home, 67 Phillips street, Monday night, aged 85. His wife died some years ago. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Daniel McCarthy and Mrs. James Casey, four sons, Peter F., John, Thomas and Henry Griffin and a brother. The funeral took place Thursday morning from the Church of the Sacred Heart and was attended by many of the friends of the deceased. Rev. J. B. Holland celebrated Mass. Interment was in the family lot at St. Francis Xavier cemetery.

BONNY BLUE BONNETS.

And the Towns in Scotland Famed For Their Manufacture.

Since 1650 the town of Stewarton, Scotland, has been noted for its manufacture of the "blue bonnet," famed in song. In the infancy of the trade Glasgow was its chief market, and was visited yearly at the great July fair by the bonnet makers with their year's manufacture of nightcaps and bonnets. A record of 1650 shows that the Stewarton corporation was penalized by the Glasgow trades because of the insufficiency of its yearly product.

In 1720 the Stewarton corporation consisted of thirty-five members, who were bound by very stringent rules to keep up the price of bonnets, by periods of compulsory desistance from trade. In one instance an offender was fined $20 for going to work at Kilmarnock.

The Stewarton bonnet makers held themselves and their goods superior to those of Kilmarnock, and a fine of $250 was imposed for the offense of selling Kilmarnock bonnets as Stewarton ones.

In 1750 a law was passed enforcing the use of indigo only as the dyestuff. In the early days of the industry the bonnets were knitted in the open air, when the weather was favorable.—Argonaut.

HE KNEW THE ENGLISH.

Consequently the "Heathen Chinese" Took No Chances.

An Englishman who was appointed to an important post in China got married soon after. Among the recipients of the usual little cardboard boxes containing a piece of wedding cake was a Chinese merchant with whom the bridegroom had an outstanding account for goods supplied. After the honeymoon one of the first persons the newly wedded husband met was his celestial creditor.

"And how did you like the cake?" said the Englishman laughing, after the usual congratulations.

"Ah, ha!" returned the Chinaman, with a cunning leer. "Me no such big fool to eat him, sah. Me put cake in fire. Burn him up. He, he!"

"Oh, that's too bad!" said the Englishman, very much hurt. "You might have tasted it at least, out of compliment to my wife and myself. Why didn't you?"

"Me too clute, sah," said the celestial, with the same cunning smile. "You owe me monce, sah; sendee poison cakee; I eat him; I die; you no payee up! Houpla! He, he, he! I know your Inglesah!"—Exchange.

Karlsbad.

The question as to how to spell the name of a watering place in Bohemia was submitted by a New York woman to a resident of the spa. The answer did not decide the point, but it afforded those who were interested some amusement. "The place is named after a name which by you is Charles," says the writer. "No person will be deceived if Carl or Karl is written. Each one is entire right. So your letter with Karlsbad will come equal time as with Karlsbad address. Us business people care us very little of the name how it is spelling." The evident desire on the part of the writer to be on both sides of the question was frustrated, however, by the printed letter-head, which had "Karlsbad" on the date line and contained in a corner also the legend, "English spoken."—New York Tribune.

Best Side of a Cemetery.

Probably few people know that there is a choice side to every cemetery. Thus in some parts of the world the eastern portion, without regard to its situation, is always deemed the most desirable. This preference arises from the old tradition that our Lord will appear from the east. It is also believed that the dead in the eastern portion will be the first to rise, then those in the southern, western and northern in order. In England it was once the custom of laying felons and other bad characters on the north side of the church. The custom of laying the dead in a certain direction is responsible for the Welsh designation for the east wind, "The wind of the dead men's feet."—London Express.

Caste and Diet in India.

The private secretary of the maharajah of Jhulawar gave a lecture on food in London. In the course of which he stated that the eating of onions is conducive to "darkness of spirit." He also averred that the caste system in India is largely regulated by diet. Thus, those of the highest caste only eat vegetarian meals in order to keep their souls pure. Members of another caste are allowed to eat meat so that they may become fitted to be warriors, while the lowest caste of all eat "stale, fat foods," which suit their unspiritual natures.

Natural Toothbrushes.

The American consul in Santo Domingo reports that the natives use natural tooth brushes called "chew-sticks." They are made by cutting the green stems of the orange, lemon and the membrillo or quince tree, and those of a common plant known as guano, which they chew up and then use for brushing their teeth.

One Celebrity.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TRIED TO BE TACTFUL.

Yet Little Glory's Scheme Didn't Work Out According to Rule.

"Children," said Mr. Timkins, who had been suddenly moved to deliver a little sermon as he swallowed his second egg at breakfast, "whenever you hear anybody say anything mean or unpleasant, act as though you hadn't heard it. Talk about something else and pretend you don't hear. That's what we call tact."

When Mr. Timkins got home that afternoon from the office he observed that somebody had strewn his favorite golf clubs and all his golf balls over the front yard. Summoning his six-year-old daughter Glory, he said sternly:

"Glory, did you get all dad's golf things out and put them here where anybody could steal them?"

"Dad," replied Glory with perfect composure, "isn't it too bad our ice cream freezer's out of order, 'cause Mary can't make any ice cream?"

"Glory, did you dig up all this turf knocking those balls around?"

"And Uncle Randolph came and took mother for a ride in his auto," continued the six-year-old. "When are we going to get an auto, dad?"

"But, Glory," said Mr. Timkins, "I want to know about these golf clubs. Did you strew them around here? Why don't you answer?"

"Well, yes, I did," said the young person, "but I was trying to change the subject, 'cause I didn't want you to know that I heard something mean and unpleasant."—New York Post.

CHAPTER IX.
The Friends of the Family.

BROCK discovered in due time that he was living in a lofty but uncertain place, among the clouds of exaltation. It was not until the close of the succeeding day that he began to lower himself grudgingly from the height to which Freddie's ill-mannered confession had led him. By that time he satisfactorily had convinced himself that no one but a fool could have suspected Constance of being in love with Ulstervelt, and yet, on the other hand, was he any better off for this cheerful argument? There was nothing to prove that she cared for him, notwithstanding this agreeable conclusion by contrast. As a matter of fact, he came earthward with a rush, weighted down by the conviction that she did not care a rap for him except as a conveniently moral brother-in-law. He was further distressed by Edith's comfortless, though perhaps well qualified, announcement that she believed her sister to be in love. She could not imagine with whom. She only knew she "acted as if she were."

She Plainly Could Hear What They Were Saying.

"Besides, Roxbury," she said warningly, "it's a most degenerate husband who falls in love with his wife's sister."

They were walking in one of the mountain paths some distance behind the others. They did not know that Mrs. Odell-Carney had stopped to rest in the leafy niche above the path. She was lazily fanning herself on the stone seat that man had provided as an improvement to nature. Being a sharp eared person with a London drawing room instinct, she plainly could hear what they were saying as they approached. These were the first words she fully grasped, and they caused her to prick up her ears:

"I don't give a hang, Edith. I'm tired of being her brother-in-law."

"You're tired of me, Roxbury—that's what it is," in plaintive tones.

"You're happy, you love and are loved, so please don't put it that way. It's not fair. Think of the pitiable position I'm in."

"My dear Roxbury," quite severely, "if there's nothing else that will influence you, just stop to consider the child! There's Tootles, dear Tootles, to think of."

Of course Mrs. Odell-Carney could not be expected to know that Edith was blithely jesting.

"My dear Edith," he said just as firmly, "Tootles has nothing to do with the case. You know, and Constance knows, and I know, and the whole world will soon know that I'm not even related to her, poor little beggar. I don't see why she should come between me and happiness just because she happens to bear a social resemblance to a man who isn't her father. Come, now, let's talk over the situation sensibly."

Just then they passed beyond the hearing of the astonished eavesdropper. Good heaven, what was this? Not his child? Two minutes later Mrs. Odell-Carney was back at the spring where they had left her somnolent husband, who had refused to climb a hill because all of his breath was required to smoke a cigarette.

"Carney," she said sternly, her lips rigid, her eyes set hard upon his face, "how long have the Medcrofts been married?"

He blinked heavily. "How the devil should I know? 'Pon me word, it's—"

"Four years, I think Mrs. Rodney told me. How old is that baby?"

"'Pon me soul, Agatha, I'm as much in the dark as you. I don't know."

"A little over a year, I'd say. Well, I just heard Medcroft say that she wasn't his child. Whose is it?" She stood there like an accusing angel. He started violently, and his jaw dropped. An expression of alarmed protest leaped into his listless eyes.

"'Pon my word, Agatha, how the devil should I know? Don't look at me like that. Give you my word of honor, I don't know the woman. 'Pon me soul, I don't, my dear."

He was very much in earnest, thoroughly aroused by what seemed to be a direct insinuation.

"Oh, don't be stupid," she cried. "Good heavens, can there be a scandal in that lovely woman's life?"

"There's never any scandal in a woman's life unless she's reasonably lovely," remarked he.

"Whose child is she, if she isn't Medcroft's?" she pursued with a perplexed frown.

"Demme, Agatha, don't ask me," he said irritably, passing his hand over his brow. "I've told you that twice. Ask them; I dare say they know."

She looked at him in disgust. "As if I could do such a thing as that! Dear me, I don't understand it at all. Four years married. Yes, I'm sure that's it. Carney, you don't suppose—"

She hesitated. It was not necessary to complete the obvious question.

"Agatha," said he, weighing his remark carefully, "I've said all along that Medcroft is a fool. Take those windows, for instance. If he—"

"Oh, rubbish! What have the windows to do with it? You are positively stupid. And I'd come to like her too. Yes, I'd even asked her to come and see me." She was really distressed.

"And why not?" he demanded. "Hang it all, Agatha, it's nothing unusual. She's a jolly good sort and a slight too good for Medcroft. He's a stupid ass. I've said so all along. How the devil she ever married him I can't see. But, by Jove, Agatha, I can readily see how she might have loved the father of this child, no matter who he is. Take my advice, my dear, and don't be harsh in your judgment. Don't say a word about what you've heard. If they are reconciled to the—or—the situation, why the devil should we give a hang? And, above all, don't let these Rodney's suspect." Here he lowered his voice gradually. "They're a pack of rotters and they couldn't understand. They'd cut her, even if she is a cousin or whatever it is. I'd give a year or two of my life to know positively whether Rodney intends taking those shares or not." He said it in contemplative delight in what he would do if it were definitely settled. "I can't stand them much longer."

"What great variety of Americans there are!" she reflected. "Mrs. Medcroft and her sister are Americans. Compare them with the Rodney's and Mr. Ulstervelt. No, Carney, I'll not start a scandal. The Rodney's would not understand, as you say. They'd tear her to shreds and gloat over the mutilation. No, we'll have her to see us in London. I like her."

"And by Jove, Agatha, I like her sister!"

"My dear, the baby is a darling."

"But what an ass Medcroft is!"

And thus it is proved that Mrs. Odell-Carney was not only a dutiful wife in taking her husband into her confidence, but also that jointly they enjoyed a peculiarly rational outlook upon the world as they had come to know it and to feel for the people thereof. It is of small consequence that they could not find it in their power to be in tune with the virtuous Rodney's—the Rodney's were conditions, not effects.

However that may be, it was Katherine Rodney, pretty, plump and spoiled, who pulled the first stone from the foundation of Medcroft's house of cards. Katherine had convinced herself that she was deeply enamored of the volatile Freddie. The more she thought that she loved him the greater became the conviction that he did not care as much for her as he professed. She began to detect a decided falling off in his ardor. It was no use trying to hide the fact from herself that Constance was the most disturbing symptom in evidence. Jealousy succeeded speculation. Katherine decided to be hateful. She could not have helped it if she had tried.

It was very evident, to her at least, that Freddie was not to blame. He was being led on by the artful Miss Fowler. There could be no doubt of it—none in the least, declared Miss Rodney in the privacy of her own miserable reflections.

Just as she was on the point of carrying her woes to her mother an astounding revelation came to her out of a clear sky; an entirely new condition came into the problem. It dawned upon her suddenly, without warning, that Roxbury Medcroft was in love with his sister-in-law.

When she burst in upon her mother half an hour later that excellent lady started up from her couch, alarmed by the excitement in her daughter's face. Mrs. Rodney, good soul, was one of the kind who always think the world is coming to an end, or the house is on fire, or the king has been assassinated, if any one approaches with a look of distress in his face.

"My dear, my dear!" she cried as Katherine stopped tragically in the doorway. "What has happened to your father? Speak!"

"Mamma, it's worse than that! I—"

"Merciful heaven!" The good lady blindly reached for her smelling salts.

"I've made a dreadful discovery," went on Katherine in suppressed tones. "It came to me like a flash. I couldn't believe my own brain. So I watched them from my window. There's no doubt about it, mamma. It's as plain as the nose on your face. He—"

"My darling, what are you talking about? Is my nose—what is the matter with my nose?" She vaguely felt of her nose, in horror.

"He's in love with her. There's no mistake. And, will you believe me, mamma, she is encouraging him! Positively! Why—why, it's utterly contemptible! Oh, dear, what are we to do?"

Mrs. Rodney looked blankly at her daughter, who had thrown herself in a chair. She gasped and then gave vent to a tremendous squeak.

"In love! Your father? With whom—who is she?"

"Father? Oh, Lord, mother, I didn't say anything about father. Don't cry! It's another man altogether."

"Not Freddie Ulstervelt?" quavered Mrs. Rodney, pulling herself together. "After all he has said to you?"

"No, no, mamma," cried her daughter irritably. "Freddie may be in love with her, but he's not the only one. Mamma!" She straightened up and looked at her mother with wide, horror-struck eyes. "Roxbury Medcroft is madly in love with Constance Fowler!"

Mrs. Rodney did not utter a sound for fully a minute and a half. She never took her eyes from her daughter's distressed face. The color was coming back into her own, and her lips were setting themselves into thin red lines above her rigid chin.

"I'm sorry, Katherine, that you have seen it too. I have suspected it for several days. But I have not dared to speak—it seemed too improbable. What are we to do?" She sat down suddenly, even weakly.

"Freddie's not only leading Freddie on, but she's flirting with her own brother-in-law—her own sister's husband—her—her—"

"Her own niece's father! It's atrocious!"

"She's a horrid beast! And I thought I loved her. Oh, mamma, it's just dreadful!"

"Katherine, control yourself. I will not have you upsetting yourself like this. You'll have another of those awful headaches. Leave it all to me, dear. Something must be done. We can't stand by and see dear Edith betrayed. She's so happy and so trusting. And, besides all that, we'd be dragged into the scandal. I—"

"And the Odell-Carneys too. Heavens!"

"It must be stopped! I shall go at once to Mrs. Odell-Carney and tell her what we have discovered. It will prepare her. She is the best friend I have, and I know she will suggest a way to put a stop to this thing before it is too late. We must!"

"Why don't you speak to father about it first?"

"Your father! My dear, what would be the use? He wouldn't believe it. He never does. I wonder if dear Mrs. Odell-Carney is in her room." The estimable lady fluttered loosely toward the door. Her daughter called to her.

"If I were you I'd wait a day or two, mamma." She was quite cool and very calculating now. "It may adjust itself, and—and if we can just drop a hint that we suspect, they won't be so—so—well, so public about it. I know—I just know that Freddie will be disgusted with her if he sees how she's carrying on." Katherine suddenly had realized that good might spring from evil, after all.

In the mean time young Mr. Ulstervelt was having troubles and disappointments of his own. Persistent effort to make love to Miss Fowler had finally resulted in an almost peremptory command to desist. An unlucky impulse to hold her hand during one of his attempts to "try her out" met with disaster. Miss Fowler snatched her hand away and, with a look he never forgot, abruptly left him. "It's all off with her," ruminated Freddie, shivering slightly as an after effect of the icy stare she had given him. "She's got it in for me for some reason or other. Wow! That was a frost! I feel it yet. Medcroft has played the deuce helping me. I wonder if—Hello! There's Katherine."

Freddie did some rapid fire thinking in the next half minute, with the result that Constance Fowler was banished forever from his calculations, and Katherine Rodney restored to her own. So long as he could not possibly win Constance he figured that he might just as well devote himself to the girl he was virtually engaged to marry. Freddie's was a convenient and adaptable constancy. Miss Fowler out of sight was also out of mind. He descended upon Katherine with all of the old ardor shining in his eyes. It was soon after Miss Rodney's conference with her mother, and the young lady was off for a walk in the town.

"Hello, Katherine," called he, coming up from behind. "Shopping? Take me along to carry the bundles. I want to begin now."

It was Miss Rodney's fancy to receive his advances with disdain. She assumed a most unfriendly manner.

"Indeed?" with chilling irony. "And why, may I ask?"

Freddie was taken aback. This was most unexpected.

"Practice makes perfect," he said glibly. "Don't you want me to carry 'em, Kitty?" He said it almost tearfully.

Katherine exulted inwardly. Outwardly she was very cool and very baffling. "Please don't call me Kitty. I hate it."

"It's a dear little name. That's what I'm going to call you when we are—well, you know."

"I don't know. What are you talking about?"

"Oh, come now, Miss Rodney. Don't be so icy. What's up? Never mind—don't tell me. I know. You're jealous of Connie." It was a bold stroke, and it had an immediate effect.

"Jealous!" she scoffed, but her cheeks went red. "Not I, Freddie." She considered for a second and then went on: "She's not in love with you. You must be blind. She's crazy about Mr. Medcroft."

"By Jove!" exclaimed Freddie, stopping short, his eyes bulging. He looked at her for a minute in silence, realization sitting into his face. "You're right! She is in love with him. I see it now. Well, what do you think of that? Her brother-in-law!"

"And he is in love with her too. Now you may go back to her and see if you can't win her away from him. I shan't interfere, my dear Freddie. Don't have me on your conscience. Goodby."

BARGAINS IN TITLES.

Plenty of Foreign Countries Where You May Find Them.

Although foreign countries do not openly advertise their readiness to do business with those who aspire to affix a handle to their names, the fact is generally recognized that a considerable traffic in titles is carried on. The tiny republic of San Marino, which does a roaring trade in titles of nobility at fixed rates, devotes a great part of the profits to the maintenance of its foundling and orphan asylum. It will make you and all your heirs or only your male heirs, if such is your desire, a duke for $5,000 or an earl for $3,750.

An idea of the traffic done in titles may be gathered from the fact that a German firm trading in Sweden sends out a circular marked "Private and confidential" offering to secure any orders and decorations required.

The orders of St. George vary in price in different countries. In Sicily it costs $375 and in Bavaria more than twice as much, but you may become a Knight of Montenegro for as little as $75.

The king of Greece does rather a prosperous business with the Order of the Redeemer, which can be had for $250, while Serbia bestows the Order of Takova for a like sum. The Prince of Monaco has for disposal the Order of the Star, for which he asks $175, and for $50 less one can secure the Order of the Sun of Nas-red-din from the shah of Persia.

Although titles cannot be bartered in England, it is, of course, an open secret that a generous contribution to political funds often paves the way to a place in the peerage. Apropos of this, it is interesting to note the fact that Franz Kossuth, the son of the famous patriot, charged the Hungarian government with receiving no less than $1,450,000 by selling baronet titles.

Another phase of this traffic in titles is revealed by carefully worded advertisements which have appeared in London papers from time to time, offering for sale the titles of impoverished noble families of France. It is not so long ago since three titles, two of which were French—one a count and the other a marquis respectively—and one of an Austrian prince, were put up for sale in London, the prices ranging from $200,000 to $500,000.—London is a writing paper especially adapted to vacation time. It comes in neat boxes that you can be proud to carry around with you at your summer resort. It is a paper that doesn't crumple easily and it is just heavy enough to let you write upon it outdoors without having it flutter in a breeze.

In texture and shape Highland Linen meets every requirement of the most exacting person. Yet with all its good taste, this is not a paper restricted to those who can afford to spend a great deal on their stationery. You will be surprised when you ask us to tell you the price—most agreeably surprised. Let us tell you today.

Not Paint.

With linseed oil at $1, what sort of oil do you think they use in "paint" at $1.75 and $1.50?

That stuff is counterfeit paint. You can cheat yourself; you can't cheat Time or Weather.

Paint is a rubbery coat over wood and iron to keep-out water.

Counterfeit paint may look like it; counterfeit money looks like money.

YOU may have thought electricity a luxury for wealthy city people, or for the Gentleman Farmer. The following figures show, however, that electric service is easily within your reach, and can be very profitable to you. These figures are the results of actual tests—compare them with what it is costing you now to do similar work.

One Cent's Worth of Electricity used in operating suitable motor driven machines and devices

- Will
- Separate 700 lbs. of milk
 - Churn 10 lbs. of butter
 - Milk 3 cows
 - Shed 4 bushels of corn
 - Grain 2 horses
 - Operate Grindstone for five hours
 - Operate Forge Blower for two hours
 - Keep Soldering Iron hot for forty minutes
 - Heat Cise Pot for five hours

Whether your farm be big or little, your tasks few or many, light or heavy—our reliable all-day Electric Service will greatly assist in solving your "hired help" problem, and add to your profits.

Union Church Notes.

Next Sunday morning the address will be given by Rev. Samuel C. Bartlett, for twenty years a missionary in Japan. The relation of Christianity to the new racial movements of the Orient is most vital and Mr. Bartlett is qualified to speak an authoritative word on the subject.

Sunday school at 12 as usual, with Christian Endeavor at 6 o'clock; Topic—"How to Make This the Best Year in Our Society's History." Miss Jessie Morrill, the president, will lead the Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7.30. The pastor will take up for consideration: "Christ: the Son of Man," the meaning of the expression; the helpfulness of its truth. All are invited to the mid-week meeting.

Universalist Church.

Morning worship at 10.30. Sunday school and Kindergarten at 12. Young peoples at 6. You are cordially invited to all our services. The pastor will preach in the morning upon the theme: "The Everlasting Mercy: The Spirit of a Great Hymn." This will be a lesson in Universalism.

Miss Annie Deane and Mrs. Phillip Greeley will sing a duet.

On Friday, October 31, the Old Colony Conference of Universalists will meet at Hingham. The program will be given later. Mark this date.

Old South Church Notes.

Service of worship with preaching by the pastor next Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock. The Sunday School Rally Day exercises, postponed from last Sunday, will be held at the noon session.

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

Don't feed grain to warm horses. Give them hay first.

Cleaning dropping boards is a chore that cannot be done too often.

The best nest for laying hens is close to the door, darkened, and easily movable.

Don't keep a horse going after it begins to show signs of exhaustion. You will save him by resting a bit.

The flavor of eggs and their color depends very much upon the kind of food given.

It is a mistake to suppose that sour fermented slop for hogs is better than a fresh mixture that is sweet and clean.

Do not forget that your fowls need green food. If it is impossible to give them a change of yard or runs, see that they get some kind of green food during the daily feed.

No man—farmer or what not—can afford to be an "average" man in his business. The product of the average farm in the United States is worth $850. The figures show that the farmers who use the most improved implements and methods, produce 50 to 100 per cent more than the average.

We wish our fields to become more fertile so that larger and better crops will be possible. It is possible to make our land rich enough to grow two, or even three, crops in succession on the same land in one year, in central and southern latitudes. It is not possible to do this economically unless the soil is well supplied with humus and plant foods.

Irish and sweet potatoes should be dug as they mature. Do not let them remain in the ground after they are ripe. They will never keep so well when dug as soon as ripe and carefully dried out. The injured and diseased tubers should be carefully sorted out as soon as possible after digging.

The proper selection of seed corn means selection in the field, because selection in the crib can give no idea as to what kind of a corn plant the ear came from whether it is a desirable type. For this reason the seed corn should be selected in the field.

The whole country in poultry-buying is looking too much at the bargain counter, and in almost every case they are getting just what they paid for, value received, but not what they need, or perhaps want. In only exceptional cases can tested hens be sold for less than $3 up, or cock birds for less than $5 up. Any good pullet (not scrubs that are so often sold on the bargain markets) should bring from $2 up and cockerels $5 up.

Making, saving and economically using manure on the farm is one of the most important things the progressive farmer has to do. We talk about larger and better crops and there are several ways of securing them. However, one factor must stand uppermost, and that is soil fertility. Without this, large crops are not possible. Good seed, good cultivation and some other things are important, but fertility is most potent.

Plowing at best in all soils but the light sandy kinds is heavy work and slow. So heavy is the work that the majority of plowing is not done as deep as it should be. Many of our best soils have lost their original loose, friable nature and have become heavy and tough. One main reason for this state is the loss of virgin humus. The lightness of the garden soils is an indication of what our field soils can be made. Heavy manuring and the plowing under of stubble and trash every year will make the plow run easier.

Horse radish is an entirely hardy plant, hence can be planted either in fall or spring. The practice, however, is to plant in the spring; and among those who make the most of their land, and crop every foot as much as it will carry, it is placed in the ground for a example, as a second crop. The method is somewhat as follows: In the fall,—and it may be one of the last crops to lift and harvest, as a frost does not hurt it,—all the young side shoots taken off from the main or market roots are selected for the next spring's planting. These are cut into pieces six inches long or so, tied in bundles, and stowed away in boxes to keep fresh until wanted. It is said that care should be taken that all are planted small end down.

Riley at Home.
An Indianapolis lawyer, with a friend, motored down to Greenfield, Ind., the birthplace of James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet. They had dinner at the hotel and thought they would like to see the house where Riley lived. So they asked the hotel man:
"Where is the Riley house?"
"I don't know any hotel by that name," he replied; "though there may be some such boarding house here."
"I mean the James Whitcomb Riley house," said the lawyer, thinking his host had misunderstood.
"I don't know him. You may be able to find his name in the city directory."
"I guess he's moved," said the lawyer as he aimlessly thumbed the directory.
"Probably," the hotel keeper commented. "Some of them Irish don't stay long in a place!"—Saturday Evening Post.

"Nobody Knows It!"
"Nobody knows it!" Well, what if it's true?
That nobody knows your transgressions but you?
If you've sinned the time's coming you'd give the world's self.
For the power to forget what you know of yourself.
In the favor of kings you'll then find little worth.
Though your praises should ring to the ends of the earth.

But ever and ever there's some one—it's odd—
There is somebody knows it besides you and God.
Was there ever a secret that nobody knew Outside of its guilty possessor? But few Are allowed the illusion and ignorant stand.
Like ostriches hiding their heads in the sand.

"Nobody knows it!" That treacherous reef
Has wrecked human lives beyond count or belief.
The roar of those breakers, once given control,
Drowns the sound of the bell buoy of conscience of soul.
"Nobody knows it!" Ah, wormwood and rue!
Chained to an act you can never undo.
—Cora M. W. Greenleaf.

Tempering the Water to a Lamb.
There is a certain lawyer in New York whose income from his practice is nearer $100,000 than $50,000. He is known as the keenest and readiest of cross examiners and a man of profound learning as well as common sense. Yet he confesses that it took one year for the fact to flash upon him that he had been the victim of a most egregious piece of simple trickery. This, his colloquy with the clerk in a haberdashery store, will explain it:
Eminent and Brilliant Lawyer—
I want to buy a bathing suit.
Small Clerk—Yes, sir. (Sorts out several. All are of ordinary woolen except one. This, by far the most expensive, is of a heavy knitted kind. Lawyer remarks that he is to spend summer in Maine.)
Eminent and Brilliant Lawyer—Why is this one so heavy?
Small Clerk—That is for bathing in climates where the water is very cold, sir. We sell many to persons who go to Maine.
Eminent and Brilliant Lawyer—Ah, it's lucky I learned this! I'll take the heavy one. (Buys suit and walks out. One year later the truth flashes on him.)—New York Post.

A Nontemperance Drink.
A London clergyman was being entertained over a week end by one of the well to do but plain men of a Lancashire town not far from Manchester. As soon as the guest was settled by the fireside on the Sunday evening his host asked him, "Are you a teetotaler?"
"Well, no; not exactly," the clergyman admitted.
The master of the house received the statement with obvious relief.
"Ah'm right glad to hear it," he said. "We'n had that sort stayin' with us afore. Now, if ye'd been one o' them teetotalers ye'd 'a' been wantin' soda water and lemonade and lime juice and ginger ale and nobody knows what all. But as ye ain't a teetotaler ye'll be like the rest o' us an' satisfied w' plain water!"—London Answers.

A Yankee Trick.
The shrewd "down easter" who flocked to Ohio in the early days made such good use of their wits that they were constantly suspected by their neighbors of being engaged in trickery, says Mr. Hulbert in "The Ohio River." One day one of them overtook a Dutch farmer riding to mill with a bag of grain. In one end of the bag was all the corn; in the other, to balance it across the saddle, was a stone.
"Why do you carry the stone?" asked the Yankee.
"To make de bag balance shteady," replied the Dutchman.
"But it isn't needed for that. Throw it away and put half the meal in each end."
"Goot!" said the Dutchman, and away went the stone.
Soon afterward the other rode on ahead, and the Dutchman was left to his own musings. He became suspicious.
"Now, how it iss?" he asked himself. "Efferybody aroundt here in de glade carries delr grain so, mit a stone in de sack. Dot feller has got some gatch in dis. It was a Yankee trick someveres."
Thereupon he stopped his horse, hunted up another stone and jogged contentedly on to the mill with the grain all in one end of the bag.

Dreaming to Order.
Dreams can be made to order by outsiders, but not by the dreamer. Yell "Fire!" in the ear of a sound sleeper or allow a sudden draft of cold air to play on the back of his neck and he will dream to order, but he can't go to sleep with his mind made up to dream of any certain thing and then actually dream of it. In spite of this fact, books are sold in Europe which tell what one must do in order to dream the lucky number in the lottery.

Can't Afford It?

Let's figure it out and see

How much would you charge to go to the grocer's or provision dealer's?

How much would you give, on a stormy day, to be able to visit a distant friend?

How much would it be worth, in case your child were taken suddenly ill at night, to be able to summon the doctor at once, and, perhaps, by special instructions from him by wire, to be able to give temporary relief pending his arrival or even to save its life?

The expense of a telephone is not figured by what it costs for a whole year, but by how much it saves each time it is used. Therefore, with all these things in mind, ask yourself

Can I Afford to be Without a Telephone?

Welcome to Everybody. In Russia newspaper correspondents have a hard time of it. Not long ago a nihilist conspiracy was discovered, and the correspondent of the London Standard went to see the building. "Can I come in?" he asked the officer in charge. "Certainly," said the officer. The correspondent entered and took copious notes, but when he turned to go the officer barred the way. "Anybody who likes may come in," he explained, "but he is immediately arrested." In vain the prisoner pleaded; the officer had his orders. The correspondent walked to the window and saw the London Times man on the street. "Hello," he called out. "Here's the nihilist place. Come up." He came up, and when he found himself a prisoner he was furious. Then the two correspondents spent the afternoon inviting other newspaper files into the spider's web until there was quite a company of furious and cursing correspondents, and there they remained until released the next morning.

CULEBRA CUT from the RAILWAY

Colon, C. Z.—With the completion of the Panama canal the importance of the Panama railway will decline almost to the vanishing point. For nearly sixty years this railway has been carrying people and freight from ocean to ocean. Though only 47 miles long, it has been, for certain periods, one of the most important and most interesting railroad lines in the world. During the building of the canal, under the ownership of the United States, it has become one of the best equipped and most efficient of railways. It has given great help in the construction of the canal that will prove its virtual death. The finding of gold in California was the cause of the building of the Panama railroad. For long years before the wild rush of argonauts in 1849 the isthmus was almost forgotten by the civilized world, but when the yellow metal was discovered on the west coast it became once more a great trade route. In order to avoid the long trip across the plains in "prairie schooners," thousands of gold-seekers went by boat to Chagres, up the Chagres river to Gorgona or Cruces and thence over the old Spanish road to Panama. This, too, was a long route and in the rainy season a painful and dangerous one because of the prevalence of disease. To the rescue of the gold hunters came three bold Americans, W. H. Aspinwall, Henry Chauncey and John L. Stevens. In 1848 these men had asked the government of New Granada for a concession for the road, and in 1850 Stevens obtained it at Bogota. The Pacific terminus could not be otherwise than at Panama, but at first the harbor of Porto Bello was selected for the Atlantic terminus. However, a New York speculator spoiled this plan by buying up all the land about the harbor and holding it at a very high price, so Navy Bay was chosen instead. When work on the line was begun in May, 1850, there was no celebration, no turning of the first spadeful of earth with a golden shovel. Two Americans with a gang of Indians landed on Manzanillo island, now the site of the city of Colon, then a desolate, uninhabited spot, and began the tremendous task of clearing the route through the dense jungle. The surveying party suffered intensely for the land was so swampy and so infested with malaria and yellow fever bearing mosquitoes that they were compelled to sleep aboard a ship. Much of the time they carried their lunches tied on their heads and ate them standing waist-deep in the water. The efforts of the company to obtain laborers were attended by a terrible tragedy. Eight hundred Chinese were brought over from Hong Kong, but within a week of their landing scores of them died. Oplum was given the survivors and for a short time checked the ravages of disease. But the supply of the drug was shut off on account of its cost, and again the deaths became numerous. The poor Orientals in despair began to commit suicide, some by hanging, others by impalement, while some deliberately sat down upon the seashore and waited for the rising tide to overwhelm them. In a few weeks scarce two hundred were left, and these, broken in health and spirits, were sent to Jamaica. Another shipload of laborers, this time from Ireland, met no better fate, for nearly every man died. The material difficulties that confronted the railway builders are thus summarized by Tomes in his "Panama in 1855": "The isthmus did not supply a single resource necessary for the undertaking. Not only the capital, skill and enterprise, but the labor, the wood and iron, the daily food, the clothing, the roof to cover and the instruments to work with came from abroad. . . . Most of the material used for the construction of the road was brought from vast distances. Although the country abounded in forests, it was found necessary, from the expense of labor and the want of routes of communication, to send the timber, for the most part, from the United States, and not only were the rails, to a considerable extent, laid on American pine, but the bridges, and the houses and workshops of the various settlements were of the same wood, all fashioned in Maine and Georgia. The metal work, the rails, the locomotives and the tools were brought either from England or the United States. The daily food of the laborers, even, came from a New York market." The first section of the road was laid through a mangrove swamp in which no bottom was found, the tracks being floated on an immense pontoon. By October, 1851, eight miles had been completed and solid ground was reached at Gatun. Lack of funds now began to hamper the builders. Investors in the states had become discouraged and the cost of labor had advanced. But a hurricane came to the rescue. Two ships loaded with gold-seekers were forced to anchor near Manzanillo island and the passengers paid the company a handsome sum to carry them to Gatun in work cars. The news that the road had carried more than a thousand passengers reached New York and funds again flowed into the coffers of the company. As the work progressed passengers were hauled longer and longer distances and before the line was completed the receipts from passengers and freight were considerably above $2,000,000. The last rails were laid the night of January 27, 1855, and the next day the first train passed clear across the isthmus from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The entire cost of the road up to December 31, 1858, had been something less than $8,000,000 and its gross earnings in the same time were a little more than that sum. The rate across the isthmus was put at $25 gold, being intended to be to a certain extent prohibitive until they could get things into good running order, but so great was the volume of travel that the rate was not reduced for more than twenty years. Soon after its opening the road began to declare 24 per cent. dividends, and at one time its stock went up to 350. In the '60's the company fell on hard times. It lost much of its freight traffic, was held up by the politicians in Bogota and then suffered by the completion of the Union Pacific railroad. Next Russell Sage and others like him got control of the directors and wrecked the road. When de Lesseps came over to dig a canal his company bought up the stock and used the road to help in its work.

Then in 1904 the United States bought out the French company and also acquired the railway and so it became the first American road to be owned by the government. So economically and efficiently has it been conducted since then that it is cited as an argument for the government ownership of all our railways. The building of the canal and especially the creation of the artificial Gatun lake made necessary the relocation of the Panama railroad along most of its route. The old roadbed now is under water for much of the way, the old line still in use being only about seven miles in length, from Colon to Mindi and from Corozal to Panama. From Gatun the road runs east until it is four and a half miles from the canal, and then south again on great embankments across the Gatun valley.

Along this stretch passengers obtain an unusual view. Because of the construction of the Gatun dam across the channel of the Chagres river, the Chagres valley and all its tributary valleys have been converted into a lake with an area of about 164 square miles. The Gatun valley is one of these drowned arms and as the train crosses, wide stretches of water are to be seen on both sides of the track. Down below the surface are still visible the tops of giant trees that have been killed by submergence, and along the edges of the lake the tallest and hardest of the trees reach their dead limbs above the waters. Here and there is a pretty little island that not long ago was the summit of a hill, and the shore line is most picturesquely broken up by capes, peninsulas and bays.

From Monte Lirio the line skirts the shore of the lake to the beginning of the Culebra cut at Bas Obispo. Originally it was intended to carry the railroad through the Culebra cut on a 40-foot beam along the east side, ten feet above water level, but this plan was knocked out by the slides and breaks. The line was carried around Gold Hill to a distance of two miles from the canal until it reached the Pedro Miguel valley, down which it runs to Paraiso and the canal again. Thence it runs almost parallel with the channel to Panama. There are two big steel bridges on the line. One, near Monte Lirio, has a center lift span to permit access to the upper arm of Gatun lake; the other, a quarter of a mile long, across the Chagres river at Gamboa. The total cost of building the new line of the railway was $8,866,392. In addition, a large sum has been expended in increasing the terminal facilities.

Of course, even after the canal is opened, the railway will have a good deal of business, transporting people and goods between Colon and Panama, and serving the needs of the operating forces of the canal. But its days of glory have departed, and J. A. Smith, the American who has been its efficient general superintendent, recognizing that fact, has resigned and returned to the states.

Congregational Church Notes.

Under the auspices of the Ladies Social union a very interesting farewell reception to the pastor, Rev. W. H. Commons was held last evening. In the absence of the president, Mrs. E. E. Leonard, who was ill, Mrs. J. H. Libby, vice president, was in charge. About 100 people were at the supper and enjoyed a well served menu after which the meeting adjourned to the chapel to enjoy other features. The musical program was in charge of Miss Ethel F. Raymond. Mr. Commons was the recipient of a magnificent Persian rug presented by M. E. Hawes in behalf of the donors; a fine travelling bag presented by Emerson Dizer in behalf of the Christian Endeavor society. W. C. Earle was chief marshal of the occasion and Mrs. Libby joined Mr. and Mrs. Commons in receiving the long line of friends in the farewell hand clasp of the pastor and his wife.

Her Object.

Little Dot had asked a lot of questions, and her father was growing impatient. Finally he protested: "Oh, Dot, I can't answer half your questions." "I know you can't, papa," she replied; "but I want to find out which half you can answer."

HOWLEY—BOWLES.

East Weymouth Railroad Foreman Takes Brighton Young Lady As Bride.

A wedding of much interest in this section took place on Wednesday, when John Walter Howley, foreman of the East Weymouth division of the Bay State Street Railway and son of Mrs. John Howley of Broad street, East Weymouth, took as his bride Miss Kathryn V. R. Bowles, daughter of Mrs. John Bowles of Cypress road, Brighton. The ceremony was performed at 2.30 o'clock in the church of St. Columbkille in Brighton, by Rev. Father Reardon. The best man was Thomas Leo Howley of East Weymouth, a brother of the groom, and the maid of honor was Miss Bessie M. Reynolds of Meriden, Conn. The church was beautifully decorated with potted plants and flowers.

The bride was gowned in white crepe-de-chine over white messaline, with Irish point trimmings. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. The maid of honor's dress was of pink brocaded satin. She wore a large picture hat and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother on Cypress street in Brighton. The newly wedded couple were assisted in receiving by Mrs. John Bowles, mother of the bride, and Mrs. John Howley, the groom's mother. The rooms were tastefully decorated with potted plants, chrysanthemums and roses.

The ushers were Thomas Bowles and John Bowles of Brighton, Harold Hobson of Meriden, Conn., and Daniel P. Howley of East Weymouth.

A wedding lunch was served by a Brighton caterer. Guests were present from Weymouth, Quincy, Braintree, Brighton, Baltimore, Md., and Meriden, Conn. Mr. and Mrs. Howley received many beautiful and costly gifts of china, cut glass, bric-a-brac and silver from their host of friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a magnificent gold pendant.

The newly married couple left during the evening on a wedding trip to Norfolk, Va., Baltimore, Md., Washington, New York, Philadelphia and Meriden, Conn. On their return, they will be at home at 166 Middle street, East Weymouth, after December 1st.

The groom is connected with the Bay State Street Railway Company as foreman of the East Weymouth division. He has always been interested in athletics in this section, being a runner of some note, and in his school days he was a football player of some prominence. The bride has always been prominent in social activities in Brighton and is a musician of considerable fame.

Tirrell—Connolly.

Miss Elizabeth Frances Connolly, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Connolly of 31 Upland road Quincy, and Ralph Tirrell of 5 Wellman street, Brookline, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tirrell, formerly of North Weymouth, were married on Wednesday, October 15, at a Nuptial High Mass at St. John's church, Quincy, by Rev. John J. Coan. They were attended by John C. Connolly of Malden and Miss Viola W. Tirrell of Brookline.

The bride wore white duchess satin with rose point lace and trimmings of pearls. A rose point lace veil was caught up with orange blossoms.

A wedding reception was held at the home of the bride, the couple being assisted in receiving by their parents and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Donovan. After an extended wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Tirrell will reside at 35 Brae Bourne road, Auburndale.

The groom is a leather exporter in Boston. The bride was private secretary to the president of the Harvard Engraving Company of Boston.

Find Body in Woods.

While out gunning last Saturday afternoon in the woods off Green street, North Weymouth, Edward Curley and John Connell of Weymouth Landing came across the body of a man rolled up in burlap. The body was so badly decomposed that it was impossible to make out the age. The man was about six feet in height and had on a brown suit, with cap to match, and wore low shoes. On the ground beside the body was a bundle of canes made from the limbs of trees and a short distance away was a Boston paper dated September 3. It is thought by the authorities that the man has been dead since that time. There was absolutely nothing about the body which would lead to the identification of the man. Medical Examiner J. C. Fraser of East Weymouth viewed the remains, and ordered them removed to the undertaking rooms of W. J. Dunbar in Jackson square, East Weymouth.

Ward 3 School Room.

For some time the growing need of Ward 3 for more or better school accommodations has been a subject of much discussion and at a meeting of the Citizens Association of Weymouth and East Braintree held on the evening of Sept. 24th, the following committee was appointed to fully investigate the conditions which exist and report to the association: Wm. E. Thayer, Frank H. Wescott, H. Forest Wilson, W. S. Wells and R. J. Donnelly.

The above named committee after viewing the conditions have made a very elaborate report of which we give a few extracts.

The present number of pupils enrolled is 482.

Number of teachers, 12.
Number of school buildings, 3, viz., the Lincoln, the Hunt and the Tufts.

These three buildings contain in all ten regular class rooms, one assembly hall used as a class room and one former store room or room never intended for a class room, now used to accommodate pupils. That is, with 482 pupils we have proper accommodation for but 350, on the basis of 35 pupils to a teacher which is a generally accepted standard in modern educational methods.

TUFTS BUILDING.

A building of this number of school rooms should be used for but 140 pupils. It has now 205, many of this extra number being crowded into a former store room, long and narrow, devoid of proper light and ventilation, heated by a stove, and so situated that in case of fire, escape from this room would be difficult practically a negative chance.

Sanitary arrangements: These are positively disgraceful and should not be tolerated in a town that makes any pretention to the care of the cleanliness and health and morals of its school children. An out building about 50 feet from the school building is the only toilet accommodation for 205 pupils.

Fire risk: The fire risk in the Tufts building is a serious menace. A single flight of wooden stairs receives pupils from three rooms. Should exit by these stairs be cut off by fire as often occurs in a wooden building of ancient construction the only other exit for the three upper rooms is by a wooden so-called "fire escape" in the rear of the building.

HUNT SCHOOL.

This four-room school building should accommodate 140 pupils; by crowding the rooms and using the assembly hall it is made to accommodate 209.

Here again the light is inadequate: windows are narrow and few, and in the assembly hall, which now serves as a class room for the ninth grade, the windows are recessed, unusually small, and so obscured by their construction, that even on a clear day the children have great difficulty in seeing, while on cloudy days, work in this class room has often been impossible.

Heat: The present boiler is overtaxed by the recent addition of five hundred feet of radiation to heat parts of the building not sufficiently heated previously by the old furnace.

Ventilation: The general plan of ventilation is good, but is not sufficient for the number of pupils now in each room—there is no ventilation in the coat rooms.

Sanitary arrangements are fairly good, but the location of toilet room is such that pupils are compelled to go out of doors in order to use it—a serious draw-back in stormy weather.

Fire risk: The stairways are narrow and winding; doors from the class rooms and coat rooms open directly into the stairway, with less than a thirty-inch passage way—two of your committee could not walk abreast through the passage way, by which the pupils from three rooms must reach the lower hall. The so-called "fire escape" in the rear of the building would prove an excellent chimney flue, in case of fire.

LINCOLN SCHOOL.

The rooms in this building are lighted from three sides, making cross lights, so that the children are never out of their own shadows. Rooms are very high studded, and without ventilation. Here, as in the Tufts building, the outer clothing of the children is kept in unheated halls, a most unsanitary practice.

The children use the toilet connected with the Hunt school, thus being compelled to go out of doors across the wide yard, in all kinds of weather.

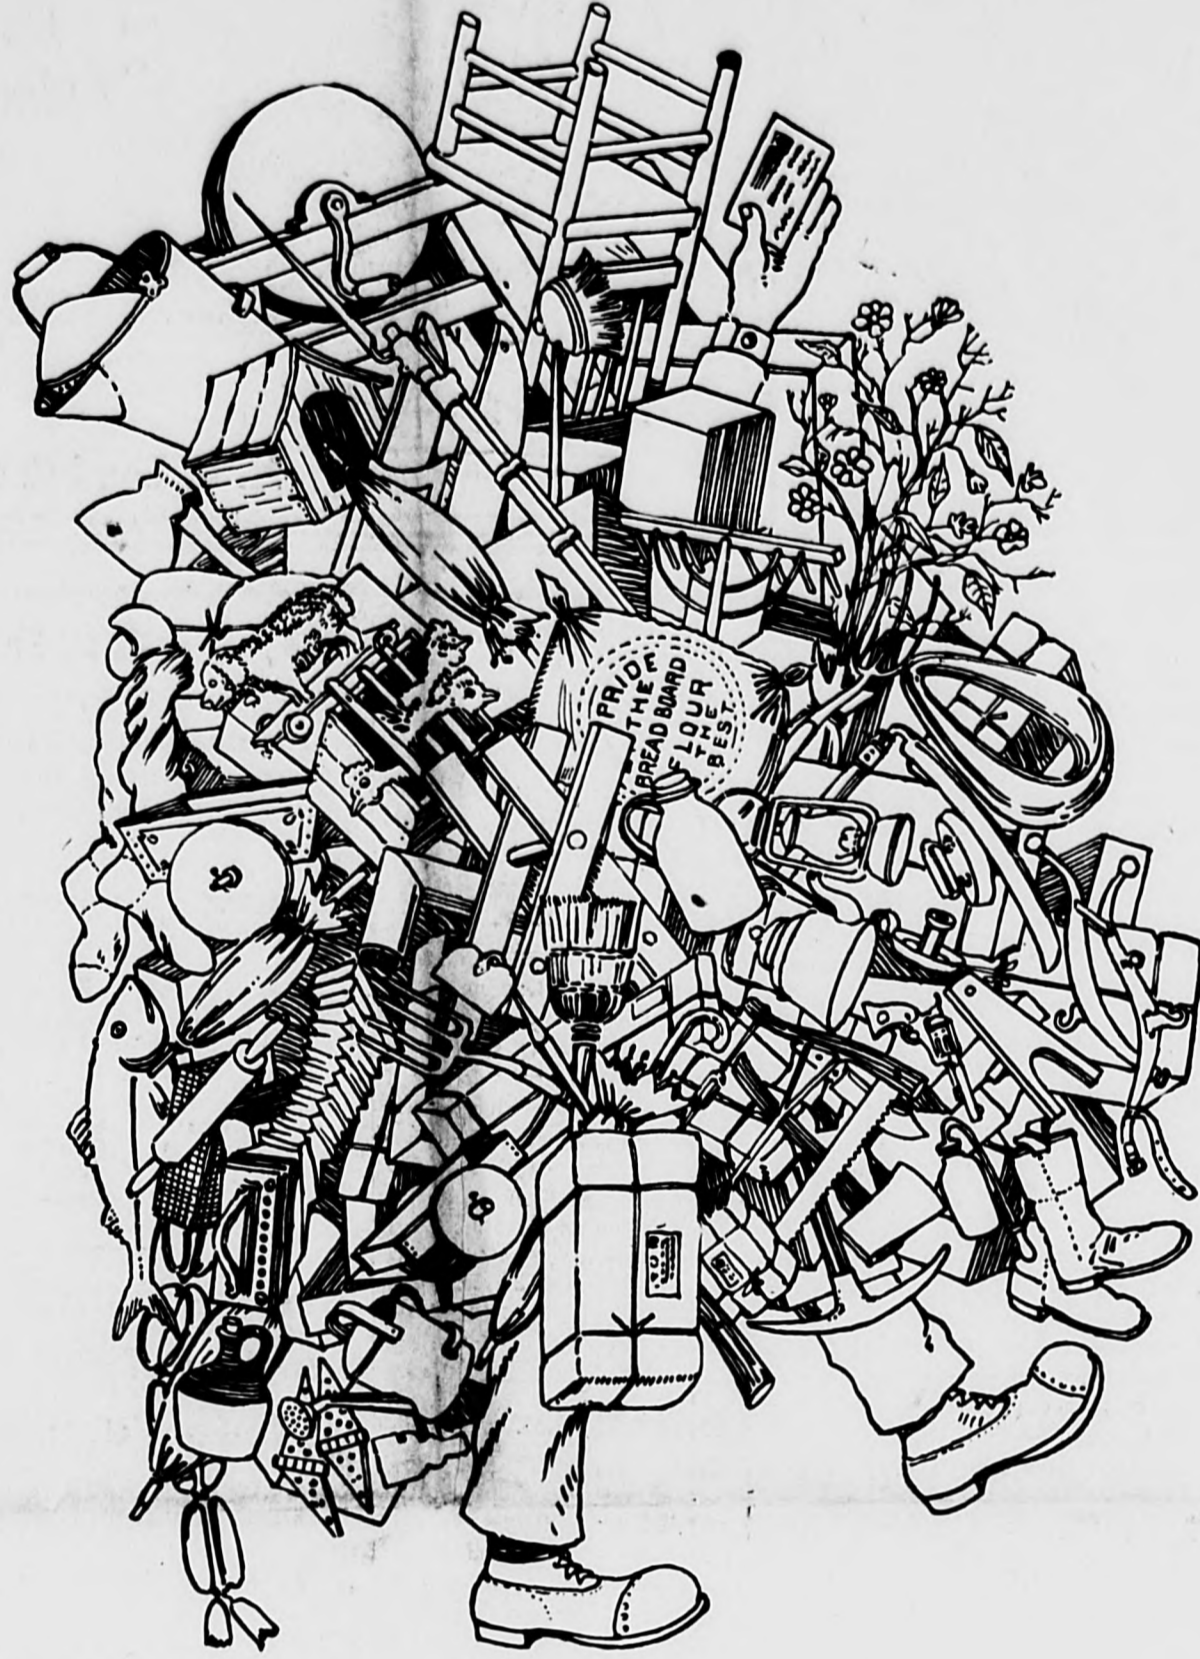

There is no fire escape, and the furnace is under the stairs. Further comment as to fire risk is unnecessary.

The details presented to you, as above, by your committee, show the following conditions:

First: Ward 3 has, without doubt, the poorest school accommodations of any part of the town.

Second: That we are trying to provide schooling for 482 children in antiquated buildings that should accommodate but 350.

A Parcel's Post Dream drawn by C. C. Collyer

Although for the past 21 years Charles C. Collyer has been unable to leave his bed, or hardly able to move his head from side to side to look out of the window, he retains a great interest in all outside matters. One of his favorite ways of passing many hours of the day is by sketching, in which art he has considerable skill. Recently, seeing "Bill" Nolan, a letter carrier in East Weymouth, passing through Commercial square by Mr. Collyer's home, heavily laden with mail, Mr.

Collyer drew the above sketch of what may be expected in the future if the parcel post becomes as popular as is sometimes dreamed.

Third: That every day these 482 children—our children and our neighbor's children—are housed in rooms where poor light is affecting their eye-sight, and bad air their health, while they are in constant peril from fires.

Fourth: We are supporting and heating three buildings, where one building would more easily, and more economically do the work. A room, properly ventilated, can be heated more easily than one without proper ventilation, as the amount of cubic air space necessary per pupil in such a room is less.

Universalist Men's Club Meeting.

On Monday evening, October 20th, the first meeting of the Universalist Men's Club of North Weymouth was held in the church vestry. Supper was served at 6.45 o'clock by the following ladies: Mrs. George Ames, Mrs. F. H. Torrey, Mrs. N. B. Stiles, Mrs. M. S. Page, Mrs. R. T. Vining, and Mrs. Frank Benson. The menu was as follows: roast lamb, baked potatoes, escalloped oysters, rolls, apple and squash pies, coffee.

Following the supper was the business meeting and then the speaker of the evening, Rev. A. E. Wright of Danvers, gave a very interesting talk on "National Tendencies."

K. of C. Elect Officers.

At the recent annual meeting of the Weymouth Council 729, K. of C., the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Edward R. Butler, G. K.; Carmine Garafalo, D. G. K.; Charles Y. Berry, Rec. Sec.; B. J. Smith, Warden; Joseph J. Conroy, Chancellor; E. P. White, Fin. Sec.; George A. Heffernan, Treasurer; George A. McGowan, I. G.; Joseph W. McDonald, O. G.; John W. Cronin, Advocate; James A. Knox, Archie Heffernan and John F. Reardon, Trustees.

Always a Way to Do It.

Mrs. Eke—"Some husbands win their wives by sheer audacity." Mrs. Wye—"Yes, and many others by sheer mendacity."

Mr. Walter F. Sanborn, Dead.

Mr. Walter F. Sanborn died very suddenly at his home 23 Prospect street, Wednesday forenoon. He had been confined to his home for the past three weeks, but was thought to be improving and his death was unexpected. Deceased was a son of Mrs. Lanora and the late deacon Woodbury Sanborn. He was born in Wilton, Me., May 6, 1858. When a young man he entered the employ of Loud & Pratt, lumber dealers, and later succeeded to the business, which he has conducted since. He was a trustee of the Weymouth Savings bank, and a member of board of investment. He is survived by his widow, a son, E. Russell Sanborn, his mother, and a sister, Mrs. Fred A. Sullis. The funeral will take place from his late residence this (Friday) afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

"Reasons Why."

The Citizens' club of Weymouth and East Braintree had an open meeting Wednesday night to which they invited all the political parties to send a representative to set forth the "Reasons Why" their particular ticket should win in preference to either of the others.

Louis F. R. Langeller, candidate for Senator from the First Norfolk district, spoke for the Republican ticket.

David W. Murray, another candidate for the same position, spoke for the Democratic side.

Wm. Shipp, a Progressive worker, spoke for that party and John McCarty of Abington was the exponent of the Socialist principles.

Each speaker was allowed twenty minutes and by a majority of those present Mr. McCarty headed the list for oratory.

Universalists' Annual Meeting.

The Old Colony Association of Universalists will hold its annual business meeting at Hingham, Friday, October 31st. A splendid program and a good dinner. Come and bring your people.

Monday Club.

The annual Guest Night of the Monday club of Weymouth was held on Monday evening, October 20th, in Odd Fellows hall, East Weymouth. The president, Mrs. Arthur O. Harper and chairman of executive board, Mrs. Jennie B. Worster, received and welcomed the guests. Mrs. Franklin P. Whitten assisted by local talent presented the comedy in three acts, "The Sisterhood of Bridget." Miss Ethel F. Raymond's orchestra furnished music. The entertainers were most cordially received and given generous applause at the close. Dancing followed the entertainment. Guests were present from the Weymouths, Hingham, Quincy and Braintree. Mrs. Chester Halnan was chairman of the reception committee. Mrs. William Wheaton served as hostess. The ushers were Mrs. Harold Joy, Mrs. Lawrence Drew, Mrs. J. Herbert Walsh, Mrs. Frederick Alden, Mrs. Arthur Corthell and Miss Blanche Bates.

Benjamin J. Loring, Dead.

Mr. Benjamin J. Loring died yesterday after a long illness. Mr. Loring was born in Weymouth, April 27, 1842, and was a son of Benjamin J. and Elizabeth Gunning Loring. He was since 1888 an agent for the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. He served in the Civil War in Co. G, 5th Massachusetts regiment and Co. A, 1st Heavy artillery. He was elected a constable in Braintree in 1872 and had served continuously since. He was a night police officer for several years and a member of the Board of Fire Engineers of Braintree. He was a past commander of Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R., and a member of Rural Lodge Masons of Quincy, Pentalfa Royal Arch Chapter, East Weymouth; Boston Chapter 68, Eastern Star; Mapitl Tribe Red Men of Boston, Weymouth Council Royal Arcanum, Grand Army Club of Boston, Minute Men of '61, and was for 27 years secretary and treasurer of Co. A, Heavy Artillery Association. He is survived by his widow and one daughter, Mrs. Charles O. Miller.

Town Business.

At a meeting of the Selectmen on Monday there was a petition of Almon B. Raymond and others to make a town way of, what is known as, Torrey avenue running from Pleasant street to the westerly entrance of the Fair grounds. Several of the petitioners were heard and the selectmen will make a thorough examination of the situation before passing on the petition as nothing less than forty feet in width is the policy of the Board in laying out new town ways and in this instance there is some objection on the part of some of the abutters as it will bring the road in too close proximity to their homes.

Many people are objecting to bills they are receiving for oiling the streets and among them Mr. Babcock of Dorchester, who has a summer home in Aspinwall avenue, North Weymouth.

J. E. Mulligan of Lake street in East Weymouth appeared with a petition for better disposal of water which accumulates in the road in front of his home.

The warrant for the State Election on November 4th was prepared, and the polls will be opened in the several Precincts at 5.45 a. m. on that day.

Tee paving along the track of the Bay State Street Railway at Bicknell square, Washington Street from Lincoln square to Washington Square, and Iron Hill Street was a subject of discussion and some improvements will be asked for.

George W. Osgood, Dead.

George W. Osgood, a veteran of the Civil War, passed away at his home on Green street, Thursday, October 16th, after a lingering illness. Mr. Osgood was born in Boston, and came to Weymouth in his early childhood. In early life he married the late Paulina Bicknell, daughter of the late Stephen Bicknell. When the Civil War broke out, he was one of the volunteers who served from 1861 to 65, in the 12th Massachusetts Regiment. He was a valued employee of the Third Division Custom House, Boston, for thirty-nine years acting as chief clerk, having worked there until three years ago when sickness prevented him. For twelve years he was treasurer of the Old North Church parish, having resigned three years ago. On November 16, 1908, he was united in marriage to Mrs. Stoddard of Plattsburg, N. Y., who still survives him.

The funeral services were held at his late home at two o'clock, Sunday afternoon, Rev. E. J. Yeager officiating. The Webber Quartette of Boston rendered "Crossing the Bar," "Abide With Me," "Nearer My God To Thee," and "Gathering Home." Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R., attended, and the Grand Army committee service was read by Commander Joseph P. Ford and by J. Quincy Spear, chaplain. The pall bearers were Christopher P. Tower, Isaac Walker, George S. Hunt and Franklin Derby. The interment took place at the Old North cemetery. Three volleys were fired over the grave by the colored guard of Post 58, and "taps" sounded by Miss Theodora Kleih, the bugler of Reynolds Post. There were many beautiful floral tributes, which showed the esteem in which the late Mr. Osgood was held.

Boy Scouts of America, Troop No. 2.

The troop held their weekly meeting at their rooms last Friday evening; President Blanchard, presided. The record of the last meeting was read by Secretary Dizer.

The annual report of the treasurer, Scout Canterbury, was read and approved. The report showed a small balance in the treasury. The records are now turned over to the new treasurer, Merton Rix.

The matter of basket ball was discussed. The report of the committee on the same was heard and it was voted to accept their report and that they continue to serve as such a committee. It was voted that the suits for basket-ball should consist of black jersey with orange stripe on which would be the scout monogram, khaki pants below the knee, black stockings with orange stripes and brown canvas shoes.

Recently, some of the scouts in charge of Assistant-scout Master Rix, while doing "a good turn" incidentally obtained some fun from the same. A man owned three nut trees from which he gathered the nuts each year. This year, on account of ill health, he was unable to do so. The matter was brought to the attention of the troop by one of the scouts, and the boys gladly offered their services. The man now has the nuts and the boys had their fun. The troop will be glad to hear of any cases where they may be of help in any way.

The matter of an entertainment was discussed, and it was voted that a committee consisting of Scout Master McFaul, Asst. Scout Master Rix and Alton Fahey take the matter in charge and report at the next meeting.

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

It is poor economy to inbreed to save the expense of buying new roosters.

Compare your poultry with that shown at the agricultural fair and see if yours can be improved.

After the moult a little linseed meal is a fine thing to round out the poultry ration with.

Don't allow your horses to drink a large amount of water on coming into the stable warm. Allow them to cool off a bit first.

The dairymen and live stock growers are the men who are building up their farms for the future. They, too, may grow some grain, yet most of all their crops are fed at home, and the fertility turned directly back to the land to make it more fertile every year.

The making of large amounts of good manure with a limited number of animals on the farm is an agricultural art of no mean importance. The man who is learning how is on the road to real, permanent success. Building up the land by any method is laying up a bank account for the future.

Just before the soil is being prepared for the sowing of the cover crop is a fine time to go over the orchard and clean up, picking up and hauling out such rubbish as old crates, ladder and other things that were left during the period when fruit gathering was on hand, says the Home and Farm.

Considerable loss is occasioned on many farms every year by allowing crops to become too ripe before harvesting. This is especially true of grass or clover, or any crop intended for hay or as a substitute. With grasses when the seed begins to form well, and with grain crops when the grain begins to harden, is the best stage to harvest.

The San Jose scale is now found in almost every part of the United States. This pest was imported from China and thus has no natural enemies in this country. Wherever man does not combat it the scale multiplies unchecked until the trees on which it is found die. Most of our old home orchards have passed out of existence by way of the scale route. This loss of good, healthy bearing trees, says Fruit Grower, is a preventable one, and some of the very effective remedies should be applied in the earlier stages of the scale infestation.

In the matter of poultry manure for garden use, the value of the product may be increased by scattering coal ashes or common dry soil over the droppings under the roosts every few days. Do not use wood ashes or lime, as they react chemically with the droppings, and cause the ammonia to waste. Coal ashes or dry soil will absorb odors and prevent the escape of valuable fertilizing elements. Ground rock phosphate is also good for this purpose.

Even though grains carry in composition for a long time, hens will begin to refuse it, as they may be over-supplied from other sources. For this reason they will accept a change of food which is of itself evidence that the best results for his hens can only be obtained from a variety of food. Corn and wheat may be used as food with advantage, but must be given as a portion of the ration only, and not made exclusive articles of diet.

As a counterpart of soiling should go the making of a large quantity of manure. As the cows are stabled more or less every day in the year, and for the other time are kept in a yard, every particle of manure made, solid and liquid can be saved and a very large quantity can be worked up into compost. In this way, by the use of leaves gathered from a wood lot cleared of brush so that a horse rake can be used to gather them, with dry swamp grass and other materials one cow in the year can be made to furnish 10 loads of excellent manure, and the land be kept in the highest state of fertility.

To prevent the introduction into the United States of dangerous potato disease known as potato wart, potato canker or black scab, the Federal Horticultural Board has decided to continue indefinitely the quarantine against potato importations from the British Isles, Germany, Austria, Hungary, New Zealand and the two French islands at the mouth of the St. Lawrence River, St. Pierre and Miquelon.

The farmer's flock should be prolific without sacrificing other qualities. They should be good table fowls. To satisfy this requirement they must be of good size, plump and of good appearance when dressed. They must be hardy and good foragers, as there is much waste food on the farm that can be converted into cash returns by the fowls. The hens must be good sitters and mothers, as many farmers are not ready to buy incubators—although they should do so at once. These are questions that are being studied by the careful, and each individual will have to determine the matter for himself.

The Popular Editor.

The only editor who succeeds in making his office a delightful rendezvous is the editor who finds himself at the close of the second year with a "host of friends," a large exchange list and two bundles of paper at the express office which he cannot get out. When I ran a paper I did not refuse to see anybody. Most anybody could drop in casually and have fun with me. Even when the ballfist came in, and I knew that I ought to work, I said: "Come right in. I never have refused anybody yet, and it is too late now to begin." So he came in.—BILL NYE.

Capped The Lot.

It happened at a dinner in honor of a number of famous artists. Frivolity prevailed, and soon the conversation turned to art. Said one of them: "The other day I painted a little deal board in imitation of marble with such accuracy that, on being thrown into the water, it immediately sank to the bottom." "Faugh!" said another. "Yesterday I hung my thermometer on the easel supporting my view of the polar region. It fell at once 20 degrees below freezing point." "All that is nothing," remarked the third artist, in conclusion. "My portrait of a prominent millionaire was so lifelike that it had to be shaved twice a week."

When I Go Home.

When I go home it will be evening, And I shall hear my own dear people sing; And see the lighted rooms and take my place. As one of them, in that sweet time of grace.
When I go home I shall be very tired Of struggling for the things that I desire.
But I shall be content to end my quest Gaining the best things—peace, and love, and rest.
When I go home how sorry I shall be Not to have brought more treasures back with me! Yet, though I be a failure, worn and poor, They will not turn me from my Father's door.
When I go home, I shall be travel-stained, For winds have beaten me and storms have rained; And earth has clung to me by vale and hill, But they will take me in and love me still.
When I go home—O, will it not be heaven To be restored, accepted, loved, forgiven? Sorrow and sighing are for those who roam; I shall have found my bliss when I go home.
—Marianne Framingham.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

THIRTY YEARS AGO.
A large and enthusiastic gathering of the stockholders of the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial society was held in the Engine hall, Ward 5, Tuesday evening the 16th. After listening to the reports of the various committees and officers of the society giving results of the year's work the meeting proceeded to ballot for officers for the ensuing year with the following result:
President, Alvah Raymond; vice presidents, Peter W. French, J. M. Cutting, B. N. Poole; secretary, William Dyer; treasurer, Geo. W. Bates; supt. of hall, S. S. Spear; supt. of grounds, Leonard B. Tirrell; finance committee, Eri T. Joy, Joseph Dyer, Wm. A. Shaw; directors, John S. Fogg, J. R. Orcutt, Samuel Cleverly, Henry Loud, J. R. Totman, Erastus Nash, C. G. Easterbrook, J. Wilkins, R. L. Hunt, D. W. Barrows, Geo. Hollis, James Moore, Edward Rosenfeld, Elbridge Nash, Geo. A. Ordway, Q. L. Reed, Loring Tirrell, C. W. Lorrrey, Bela T. Nash, William Burrell, L. A. Cook.

THIRTY-ONE YEARS AGO.
Postmaster Lyon has made arrangements to have a new mail for Boston beginning Monday next, the mail closing at 7.30 p. m. This will be greatly appreciated by business men and others.
One hundred guns and a thousand rounds of blank cartridges arrived in the village last night and the time is near when the rattle of musketry will be heard and the heavens blaze with a republican rally at East Weymouth.
The Republican club propose to have a grand torchlight and illumination, Thursday evening, Nov. 3. A large procession will march through all the principal streets of Weymouth and East Braintree. Citizens are requested to prepare for a grand illumination.

TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.
Cards are out announcing the marriage of Fannie Bartlett, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Pratt to Webster Lincoln Pratt, which will be solemnized at the residence of the bride's parents on Middle street, Wednesday evening, Oct. 30, at 8 o'clock.

TWENTY-ONE YEARS AGO.
The shipment of boots and shoes continues large with the prospect of its remaining so for several weeks, as the factories are all quite busy.
The selectmen have offered a reward of $200 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who on a second trial burned the house of Mary Fennel near Broad street last week.

NINETEEN YEARS AGO.
The corner stone of the new Odd Fellows building on the corner of Commercial and Cottage streets was laid Saturday afternoon by the committee appointed for that purpose. The stone which is of white Quincy granite was furnished by John Kelley, of the Weymouth Monumental Works.
"Let there be Light." And there was light on our dark thoroughfares last Sunday evening, when the electric light furnished by the Weymouth Electric Light and Power Co. was flashed all over the town in a burst of radiance which excited general admiration. It was expected that the general lighting up would be commenced on Saturday evening, but owing to a fault in the connections, the lighting that evening was confined to the East and North Weymouth and Hingham circuit, so that Sunday, Oct. 20, 1889, will stand as the inauguration time of electric street lighting in Weymouth.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
Land Court.

To Henry B. Chandler, Bradford Chandler, Elizabeth K. Barrett and Anna Barrett, of Weymouth, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Fanny L. Byrnes, of Newton, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth; Frank S. Rogers, of Cambridge, in said County of Middlesex; Percy S. Rogers, of Worcester, in the County of Worcester, and said Commonwealth; any heirs, devisees or legal representatives of Mark Fenney, late of that part of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth; called Charles town, deceased, of Patrick Glines, late of Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, deceased; and to all whom it may concern.
Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Peter G. Goldie of Norton in the County of Bristol, and said Commonwealth, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:
A certain parcel of land situate in said Weymouth, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the westerly side of Union Street at land of Wallace Lanman and from said point running northwesterly by said land five hundred seventy one and 65-100 feet to land of the heirs of J. Austin Rogers, thence turning and running northeasterly by said last named land two hundred ninety five and 75-100 feet to land of Bradford W. Chandler, thence turning and running by said land of Chandler in a southeasterly direction three hundred seventy two feet to Union Street and thence turning and running southerly by said Street three hundred thirty six and 6-10 feet to the point of beginning.
The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.
You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the tenth day of November, A. D. 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.
Witness, CHARLES THORNTON DAVIS, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this tenth day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen.
Attest with Seal of said Court.
[SEAL] CLARENCE C. SMITH, Recorder.

FRIDAY, OCT. 24, 1913.

The Gazette & Transcript is printed and mailed Friday afternoons, and is for sale at all News-stands in the Weymouths and at the South Terminal, Boston.

All communications must be accompanied with the name of the writer, and unpublished communications cannot be returned by mail unless stamps are enclosed.

Notices of all local entertainments to which admission fee is charged must be paid for at regular rates, 10 cents per line in the reading matter, or regular rates in the advertising columns.

The hunting season will soon be on in Maine, and it will cost $10. more to shoot a man in the Maine woods than it has heretofore cost, as hunting licences have been raised from $15. to $25.

The new Weymouth Directory, put out from the Union Publishing Company, 1013 Old South Building, Boston, is the most readable book of the kind in printer's art ever yet issued. Business features are well classified, and the arrangement of people and their location could hardly have been better than it is.

We are in receipt of large quantities of Argentine beef. Col. Pryor, one of the largest cattle raisers of Texas, says the meat famine fear is "drivelling rot"; large packers at Kansas City say there is as much beef in sight as they can handle and yet the high price of beef seems to have come to stay and the people are inquiring why?

There are four men who are more strongly in the lime-light as candidates for Governor, than either or all of the other three and according to one of the leading Boston dailies three of them, including himself, are working for David I. Walsh. In other words, the next Governor of Massachusetts will be either Augustus P. Gardner or David I. Walsh.

The much talked of anxiously waited for Assessors' valuation list for the year 1912 is out in book form. The book is one of 1189 pages and the issue of 400 volumes cost the city at the rate of about $4 per volume.—Quincy Patriot. A large number of people in Weymouth are waiting to see a similar book of Weymouth valuation but when it comes no 400 volumes would satisfy the demand.

Mrs. Pankhurst,—most of the people have heard of her—has been allowed to land on our shores and one of the reasons given by the Commissioner of Immigrants for allowing the same is "There is nothing in the records before me to indicate that the British Government desired that Mrs. Pankhurst be returned to England." And there is nothing in the records before us that the United States Government desired the presence of Mrs. Pankhurst here.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels in his recent tour made some interesting talks about citizenship and voting. He deplored the unpleasantly numerous evidences that a great many so-called citizens neglect to vote. "So-called citizens" is a good term, that is, it indicates that there are many people so-called, who never fill the highest functions of citizenship. We will take Weymouth, and it is a good average town, as an illustration. Of its 3000 voters 500 or 600 is an average town meeting and nine times out of ten the most important measures are carried or lost by less than 200 votes and then comes an aftermath of kicking. We are now fast approaching an election which is of more than usual significance and importance. Massachusetts now more than ever in the past needs a good sound, conservative governor; now more than ever it needs a legislative body of men who will curb the tide of freak legislation and place in the statute book as little class legislation as possible and work for the greatest good to the greatest number. The election is only two weeks away, and, are you a voter? If not get registered before Saturday night and join in the election of the best men in the ballot.

WORSE THAN HIGH TAX RATE.

Lynn is vexed at a jump in tax rate. Most cities would be. Yet there are worse things for a city than an honest high tax rate. One worse thing is fictitious high valuation. A number of New England communities boast of low tax rates wherein it would be impossible to realize at forced sale anywhere near the valuation assessed on the homes of citizens.

These fictitious high valuations, coupled with low tax rates, almost invariably inspire governing bodies to unwarranted expenditures; and the fictional high value brings little comfort to a citizen struggling to maintain a home over the heads of his family.

Better to assess a high tax rate and be honest about it than to compel the home builder to submit to constantly increasing assessed valuations on a house which he knows is annually depreciating a sellable value.—From Boston Post.

Something He Had Forgotten.

When little Marjorie tried to spread her toast with a piece of butter almost as large as the bread itself, her father remonstrated, saying: "You mustn't be so wasteful, Marjorie; some of the poor people in China have to get along on a few grains of rice each day." "But, father," replied Marjorie, "you must remember that rice swells."

High School Notes.

Gerald C. Fitzgerald, '12, visited school this week.

There will be no school on Friday, the 31st, on account of the Teachers' Convention at Boston.

All the exams this year will be of forty-minutes duration, except the Midyears and the Finals. These, as usual, will be the regular two-hour exams.

It is rumored that a dance is soon to be given by the school. The music is to be furnished by the school orchestra.

All the girls are going to get together, next Wednesday afternoon, to hold the first rehearsal for the opera, which is to be given in January.

On next Wednesday, the report cards for the first term will be issued.

At the weekly meeting of the Class of 1915, the report of the Class-pin committee, asking for more time, was heard. October 30th was the day set for the Junior party, the other details being left to the Social committee.

The Class of 1912 will bring a football team to Clapp's Field on November 14th to match its skill against the High School team, after which the entire class will enjoy their annual banquet at South Weymouth.

Tuesday, November 11, 1913, was the date set, at the last meeting of the Senior class, for their party.

With dual meets at Quincy, Woburn, and Winchester, and the N. E. cross-country championships at Worcester academy and at Tech Field, Brookline, the High School cross-country team will have its hands full this Fall. The team starts training this week.

Hingham, 26; Weymouth, 6.

In the best game, so far, of the year, the High School football team was defeated on the Agricultural grounds, Hingham, last Friday. Only unfortunate fumbling and adverse breaks in the luck kept Weymouth from winning. The team lacked sprit and confidence but otherwise was as good, and even better, than Hingham. Whittle, who ran eighty yards for a touchdown, Condrick, Rand, Young and Dean, played well for Weymouth. The score: Hingham, 25; Weymouth, 6. Touchdowns: Whittle, Dean, Mitchell, Fell 2, Murphy. Goals from touchdown: Mitchell 2. Linesmen: Thayer, Leonard, and Caseese. Referee: Wilder. Timer: Green. 12-8--12-8 minute periods.

Village Study Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Village Study Club in the Fogg Library building in South Weymouth, last Monday night, Bates Torrey presided, and the program consisted of the reading of "Julius Caesar." The parts were taken by Miss Stella L. Tirrell, Mrs. Walter R. Field, Miss Annie Deane, Mrs. Fletcher W. Howe, Mrs. H. B. Reed, Miss Florence Cook, Mrs. Carl W. Gridley, Miss Helen E. Courtney, Miss Helen Richards, George L. Wentworth, Louis A. Cook, Henry S. Stowers, Bates Torrey and Prince H. Tirrell.

—Alexis H. French of Brookline was in town on Saturday renewing old acquaintances. Mr. French is a former resident of North Weymouth.

—Mrs. E. M. Bartlett and Mrs. C. L. Thayer returned last week from a month's visit in Hampton, N. H.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hawkes of Bartlett street entertained Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Bean of Cambridge last Sunday.

—Mary Hesse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hesse, who is ill with scarlet fever was very pleasantly remembered by her school mates and friends last Friday, the occasion being her eleventh birthday.

—Mrs. E. J. Jordan is visiting her sister in New York for two weeks.

—Miss Ruth Robinson of South Weymouth and Mr. Cole of Boston were the week end guests of Mrs. D. J. Sampson and family of Shaw street.

—Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Estes are visiting relatives in Brookfield for a few days this week.

—Little Teddy Wolfe, the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Wolfe is ill at home on Moulton avenue with scarlet fever.

—Quite a number of pillars of the new factory building of the A. A. C. Co. were blown over in the severe storm of Monday last.

—Mrs. Horace Phillips is entertaining her sister from Norwell this week.

—Dr. Wm. A. Drake has been seriously ill at his home on North street for the past two weeks. On Wednesday, his birthday, he received a post card shower and other remembrances from his numerous friends.

—There will be a Halloween party in the vestry of the Universalist church on Thursday evening, October 30th, under the auspices of the Sunday school.

—The first social dancing party of the season was held under the auspices of the Fire companies in Engine hall last Saturday evening.

—Miss Mabel Baker was the guest of the Misses Esther and Edith Bicknell at Mt. Holyoke college on Saturday and Sunday.

—Miss Mabelle Bartlett is taking a forced vacation on account of an epidemic of spinal meningitis at her school in Wakefield.

—Mr. Ernest N. Fisher and Miss Adeline M. Jelleau of Quincy were united in marriage on Thursday, October 23rd.

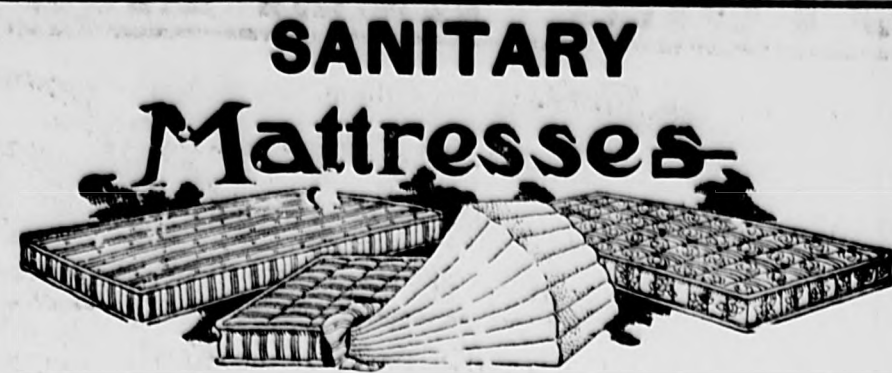

Making and Keeping a Good Lawn

Everyone who takes a personal pride in the appearance of the home grounds will be anxious to secure a copy of the October number of "Facts for farmers", the monthly pamphlet which is published by the Massachusetts Agricultural College Extension Service. As a well-kept lawn is the foundation upon which attractive home grounds must be built, its establishment and upkeep are of vital importance. The article upon this subject in the above pamphlet was written by P. H. Ellwood, Extension Instructor in Civic Improvement and gives some very valuable pointers. A copy can be secured by addressing Prof. Wm. H. Hurd, Director Extension Service, M. A. Co., Amherst, Mass.

To Remedy Rattling Windows.

Do not allow yourself to be made wakeful and nervous by rattling windows or doors when the comb on your dresser makes a perfect wedge, easily inserted and as easily removed. Especially annoying are such noises in hotels and other strange bedrooms, but even there the comb is at hand and equal to all sizes of cracks.

Thursday, October 30th, at mid-week meeting, the pastor will give a Bible reading: God, The Creator and Sustainer, in Scripture, Literature and Hymnology. All invited.

Altogether Too Literal.

Boarder (tackling a tough steak, to boarding house keeper):—"When you undertook to provide me with board, madam, I was unaware that you meant to do so literally!"

Unbelievable.

Of course we have all heard many strange tales and unbelievable stories, but did any one ever hear of a woman who kept boarders and had a husband who paid the grocery bills?

—Rev. E. J. Yaeger invites all the men of this community to meet him at his home next Tuesday evening at 7:45.

Bold Comparison.

A visitor from South Africa, on being asked for his opinion of Niagara falls, inquired of the questioner in his turn, "What do you think of Victoria falls compared with Niagara?" The Yankee's reply was, "Victoria falls compared with Niagara?—a mere frontal perspiration."

A Frequent Mistake.

"That man seems to think he is the voice of the people," said the cynic observer.

"He does," replied Senator Sorghum, "when as a matter of fact he's only one of the people with a voice."—Washington Star.

CHAPTER X.

The Disconsolate Freddie.

SHE left him standing there in the street. With well practiced tact he darted into a tobacconist's shop.

"Another shakedown," he reflected ruefully. "They're all passing me up today; but, great goods! What's all this about Medcroft and Constance? He bought some cigarettes and started off for a walk, mildly excited by this new turn of affairs. It occurred to him as he turned it over in his mind that Mrs. Medcroft was amazingly resigned to the situation. Of course she was not blind to her husband's infatuation for her sister. Therefore if she were so cheerful and indifferent about it it followed that she was not especially distressed. In fact, it suddenly dawned upon him she was not only reconciled, but relieved. She had ceased to love her husband! She could be a free lance in Love's lists, notwithstanding the inconvenience of a legal attachment. "She's ripping, too," concluded Freddie, with a certain buoyancy of spirit. "If she doesn't love Medcroft she at least ought to love some one else instead. It's customary, I wonder." Here he reflected deeply for an instant, his spirits floating high. Then he turned abruptly and made his way to the Tirol.

"You little wretch!"

It came to pass in the course of the evening that Mr. Ulstervelt, supremely confident from the effect of past achievements, drew the unsuspecting Mrs. Medcroft into a secluded tete-a-tete. It is not of record that he was ever a diplomatic wooer. One in haste never is. Suffice it to say Mrs. Medcroft, her cheeks flaming, her eyes wide with indignation, suddenly left the side of the indomitable Freddie and joined the party at the other end of the entresol, but not before she had said to him with unmistakable clearness and decision:

"You little wretch! How dare you say such silly things to me?"

The rebuff decisive! And he had only meant to be comforting, not to say self-sacrificing. He'd be hanged if he could understand women nowadays, not these women at least. In high dudgeon, he stalked from the room. In the door he met Brock.

"For two cents," he declared savagely, as if Brock were to blame, "I'd take the next train for Paris."

Brock watched him down the hall. He drew a handful of small coins from his pocket, ruefully looking them over. "Two cents," he said. "Hang it all, I've nothing there but pennings and hellers and centimes."

In the course of his wanderings the disconsolate Freddie came upon Mrs. Odell-Carney and pudgy Mr. Rodney. They were sitting in a quiet corner of the reading room. Mr. Rodney had had a hard day. He had climbed a mountain—or, more accurately speaking, he had climbed halfway up and then the same half down. He was very tired. Freddie observed from his lonely station that Mr. Rodney was fast drooping to sleep, notwithstanding his companion's rapid flow of small talk. It did not take Freddie long to decide. He was an outcast and a pariah and he was very lonely. He must have some one to talk to. Without more ado he bore down upon the couple and a moment later was tactfully advising the sleepy Mr. Rodney to take himself off to bed—advice which that gentleman gladly accepted. And so it came about that Freddie sat face to face with the last resort, at the foot of the chaise-longue, gazing with serene adulation into the eyes of a woman who might have had a son as old as he—if she had had one at all. She had been a coquette in her salad days—there was no doubt of it. She had encountered fervid suitors in all parts of the world and in all stations of life. But it remained for the gallant Freddie Ulstervelt to bowl her over with surprise for the first time in her long and varied career. At the end of half an hour she pulled herself together and tapped him on the shoulder with her fan, a quizzical smile on her lips.

"My dear Mr. Ulstervelt, are you trying to make love to me? You nice Americans! How gallant you can be! I am quite old enough to be your mother. Believe me, I thank you for the compliment. I can't tell you how I appreciate this delicate flattery. You're very delicious. But," as she arose graciously, "I'd follow Mr. Rodney's example if I were you. I'd go to bed." Then, with a rare smile, which could not have been more chilling, she left him standing there.

"By Jove!" he muttered, passing his hand across his eyes as if bewildered. "What was I saying to her? Good Lord, has it got to be a habit with me? Was I making love to—her?" He departed for the American bar.

Mrs. Rodney had but little sleep that night. She went to bed in a state of worry and uncertainty, oppressed by the shadows which threatened eternal darkness to the fair name of the family, however distantly removed. Katherine's secret had in reality been news to her; she had not paid enough attention to the Medcrofts to notice anything that they did, so long as they did not do it in conjunction with the Odell-Carneys. The Odell-Carneys were her horizon—morning, noon and night. And now there was likelihood of that glorious horizon being obscured by a sickening scandal in the vulgar foreground. Inspired by Katherine's dreadful conclusions, the excellent lady set about to observe for herself. During the entire evening she flitted about the hotel and grounds with all the snoop- ing instincts of a Sherlock Holmes. She lurked, if that is not putting it too theatrically. From unexpected nooks she emerged to view the landscape o'er; by devious paths she led her doubts to the gates of absolute certainty and then sat down to shudder to her heart's content. It was all true! For four hours she had been trying to get to the spot where she could see with her own eyes and at last she had come to it. Of course she had to admit to herself that she did not actually hear Mr. Medcroft tell Constance that he loved her, but it was enough for her that she sat with her in the semi-darkness for two unbroken hours, speaking in tones so low that they might just as well have been whispering so far as her taut ears were concerned.

Moreover, other persons than herself had smilingly nudged each other and referred to the couple as lovers; no one seemed to doubt it, nor to resent it, which is proof that the world loves a lover when it recognizes him as one.

Mrs. Rodney also discovered that Mrs. Medcroft went to her room at 9 o'clock, at least three hours before the subdued tete-a-tete came to an end. The poor thing doubtless was crying her eyes out, decided Mrs. Rodney.

And now, after all this, is it to be considered surprising that the distressed mother of Katherine did not sleep well that night? Nor should her wakefulness be laid at the door of the tired Mr. Rodney, who was ever a firm and stentorian sleeper.

Morning came, and with it a horse-back ride for Brock and Miss Fowler. That was enough for Mrs. Rodney, she would hold in no longer. Mrs. Odell-Carney must be told. She, at least, must have the chance to escape before the storm of scandal broke to muddy her immaculate skirts. Forthwith the considerate hostess appeared before her guest with a headful of disclosures. She had decided in advance that it would not do to beat about the bush, so to speak. She would come directly to the obnoxious point.

They were in Mrs. Odell-Carney's sitting room. Mr. Odell-Carney was smoking a cigarette on the balcony, just outside the window. Mrs. Rodney did not know that he was there. It is only natural that he held himself hospitably aloof. Mrs. Rodney bored him to death. He did not hear all that was poured out between them, but he heard quite enough to cause him some thing of a pang. He distinctly heard his wife say things to Mrs. Rodney that she had solemnly avowed she would not say—things about the Medcroft baby.

It goes without saying that Mrs. Odell-Carney refused to be surprised by the disclosures. She calmly admitted that she had suspected Medcroft of being too fond of his sister-in-law; but, she went on cheerfully, why not? His wife didn't care a rap for him—she said rap and nothing else. Mrs. Medcroft had an affair of her own, dear child. She was not so slow as Mrs. Rodney thought, oh, no. Mrs. Odell-Carney warmed up considerably in defending the not to be pitied Edith. She said she had liked her from the beginning, and more than ever, now that she had really come to the conclusion that her husband was the kind who sets his wife an example by being a bit divaricating himself.

Mrs. Rodney fairly screamed with horror when she heard that Tootles was "a poor little beggar," and "all that sort of thing, you know."

"My dear," said Mrs. Odell-Carney, hating herself all the time for engaging in the spread of gossip, but firmly unable to withstand the test, "your excellent cousin, Mrs. Medcroft receives two letters a day from London—great, fat letters which take fifteen minutes to read in spite of the fact that they are written in a porfectly huge hand by a man—a man, d'ye hear? They're not from her husband. He's here. He cannot have written them in London, don't you see? He—"

"I won't hear of a divorce."

"I see," inserted Mrs. Rodney, who was afraid that Mrs. Odell-Carney might think she didn't see.

"Mind you, Mrs. Rodney, I'm terribly cut up about all this. She has—"

"Oh, I knew you would be," mourned Mrs. Rodney, her heart in her boots. "You must just hate me for exposing you to—"

"Rubbish!" scoffed the other. "It isn't that. I've been through a dozen affairs in which my best friends were frightfully—er—complicated. I meant to say that I'm terribly cut up over poor Mrs. Medcroft. She's a dear. Believe me, she's a most delicious sinner. Even Carney says that, and he's very fastidious—and very loyal."

"They are married in name only," said Mrs. Rodney, beginning to sniffle. She looked up and smiled wanly through her tears. "You know what I mean. My grammar is terrible when I'm nervous." She pulled at her handkerchief for a wavering moment. "Do you think I'd better speak to Edith? We may be able to prevent the divorce."

"Divorce, my dear," gasped Mrs. Odell-Carney incredulously. At this juncture Mr. Odell-Carney emerged from his shell, so to speak. He stalked through the window and confronted the two ladies, one of whom at least was vastly dismayed by his sudden appearance.

"Now, see here," he began without preliminary apology. "I won't hear of a divorce. That's all rubbish—perfect rot, 'pon my soul. Wot's the use? Hang it all, Mrs. Rodney, wot's the odds, so long as all parties are contented? We can stand it, by Jove, if they can, don't you know. We can't regulate the love affairs of the universe. Besides, I'm not going to stand by and see a friend dragged into a thing of this sort!"

"A friend, Carney," exclaimed his wife.

"Well, it's possible, my dear, that he may be a friend. I know so many chaps in London who might be doing this sort of thing, don't you know. Who knows but the chap who's writing her these letters may be one of my best friends? It doesn't pay to take a chance on it. I won't hear to it. If Medcroft knows and his wife knows and Miss Fowler knows, why the deuce should we bother our heads about it? Last night I heard the Medcroft infant bawling its lungs out—teething, I dare say—but did I go in and take a hand in straightening out the poor little beggar? Not I. By the same token, why should I or anybody else presume to step in and try to straighten out the troubles of its parents? It's useless interference, either way you take it."

"I think it's all very entertaining and diverting," said Mrs. Odell-Carney carelessly. She yawned.

"Do you really think so?" asked the doubting Mrs. Rodney. "I was so afraid you'd mind. Your position in society, my dear Mrs.—"

"My position in society, Mrs. Rodney, can weather the tempest you predict," said Mrs. Odell-Carney, with a smile that went to Mrs. Rodney's marrow.

"Oh, if—if you really don't mind"—she mumbled apologetically. "Not at all, my dear madam," remarked Odell-Carney, carefully adjusting his eyeglass. "It's quite immaterial, I assure you."

Revised From Old Legend.

The Mexican stamp bears the coat of arms of the country, an eagle on a cactus, holding a serpent in its talons. This device is the outgrowth of a legend that the first Aztec settlers chose the site of their city from seeing an eagle so engaged, and situated at that spot.

Sure Enough.

"So you depend on recognition from posterity?" said Mr. Dustin Stax. "Yes," replied Mr. Penwiggie. "Another generation will recognize my genius." "But how are you going to know whether the opinion of a future generation is any more trustworthy and desirable than that of the present public?"

Can We Help You? (As We Helped This Man)

Herbert O. Russell is a farmer in North Hadley Mass., who turned a threatened loss, not only to himself but to his neighbors, into a highly profitable business transaction by making judicious use of the telephone toll lines. He is the Mr. Blank of the following story which appeared in TELEPHONE TOPICS. We use his name by permission:

A HADLEY PASTORAL.

The fertile fields of old Hadley are especially adapted for raising tobacco and onions and especially onions, which are usually a very profitable crop. This year the crop was larger than ever before—bumper to the nth. Prices at once shrunk alarmingly until it came to be a grave question whether it was worth while to market the crop. Some farmers became discouraged and left the crop to rot in the fields. One gave the subject careful thought. While he was pondering the question his glance fell upon the telephone in his kitchen. Could that be the answer?

That next day he called on Manager Proctor for information. He secured full particulars about our toll facilities, then went home and planned a sales campaign by telephone. Each evening the family carefully studied the directories and made up a list of wholesale commission dealers in the large cities.

Early each morning Mr. Blank called them by telephone. Results were immediate and surprising. He made satisfactory terms in short order for the sale of his entire crop and before long he was shipping onions by the carload. After he disposed of his own crop the commission merchants continued their demands for more onions and Mr. Blank commenced buying his neighbors' crops which he sold at a good profit. As a result of his work he has sold twenty-one carloads of onions. It need not be added that he is extremely grateful for the resources of our telephone service.

Are you, Mr. Farmer or Business Man, confronted with a distribution problem of any kind? Let us help you, if we can. In Greater Boston telephone (free of charge) to Fort Hill 7600, the Contract Department.

TABOGA ISLAND AND PORTO BELLO

1—Remains of One of the Spanish Forts at Porto Bello. 2—Native Village on Taboga Island.

"Down verdure-clad slopes and terracing reaches Where orange and mango and pineapple grow. One wanders through Eden to ocean-washed beaches— An Eden that only the sun-children know."

Thus James S. Gilbert, the late lamented poet of Panama, wrote of Taboga Island. It was so enticing that I determined to be one of the sun-children for a day or two and so steamed away in a little launch twelve miles out into the Pacific to that beauty spot. It is all that Mr. Gilbert called it, and more, and it is no wonder that the sanitarium, established there by the French canal company and reopened by the Americans, is so well patronized. If you are a canal employe—white—and have been ill, the doctor may be kind enough to send you over to Taboga for two weeks to recuperate. If you are a mere visitor you can put up at the unpretentious little hotel conducted by William Jones, the American six-footer who looks like a miner and dances like a cotillon leader. In either case you will find those "verdure-clad slopes" gorgeous with flowers and alive with brilliant birds, and the "ocean-washed beaches," the finest places in the world for a swim. You can sail about the pretty bays with the native fishermen, or you can climb up the hills where the boys are vociferously driving the kine home to be milked, or you can merely lie in the shade and dream dreams of the Spanish galleons and the buccaneers. A more delightful place for rest and the repair of shattered nerves would be hard to find.

Spanish days will be woefully disappointed by the town as it now is. Romance, commerce, everything attractive has fled long ago from that place and Porto Bello is nothing but a dirty, immoral little village, full of low cantinas, slatternly natives and mangy curs. At each side of the town is the ruin of a Spanish fort, its picturesqueness marred by fishermen's nets and the local washing hung up to dry.

Thus the work of man has decayed, but Nature is as kind as ever to Porto Bello. Its bottle-shaped harbor is one of the prettiest to be found, with promontories guarding the entrance, beautiful hills on both sides and entrancing little rivers meandering down from the mountains and through the jungle into its upper end. One hill opposite the town boasts the remains of three unusually interesting Spanish forts. One is at the water's edge, another several hundred yards up the slope, and these two were once connected by a covered stone stairway the ruins of which still provide the easiest means of ascending. On the summit of the hill is the third fort, a mighty square tower surrounded by a deep moat. The walls are almost intact but the roof has fallen in and the fortress is full of trees and shrubbery.

With these three forts, two others protecting the harbor entrance, the two at the ends of the town and another just above it, Porto Bello might well seem to have been impregnable, yet it was taken twice by the English. Sir Francis Drake planned to capture it in 1596, but just as his ships were about to begin the attack Drake died and was buried in the mouth of the harbor. Dispirited by the loss of their leader, the English sailed away, but Capt. William Parker took up the project in 1602. With two ships he got past the first forts at night and after a desperate fight captured and sacked the city, carrying off 10,000 ducts' worth of plunder.

The second taking of Porto Bello was the first notable exploit of Henry Morgan, the famous buccaneer, as an independent commander of a fleet. Sailing into what is now Colon harbor, he took his men up a river in canoes, landed at a place called Estera Longa Lemos and marching through the jungle, attacked the city from the rear. First capturing the castle above the town, he shut the garrison in one room and blew them and the fort to pieces with gunpowder. The governor, the citizens and the rest of the soldiers, surprised and terror-stricken, were soon driven into one of the other forts and for hours they bravely withstood the assaults of the buccaneers until, as Esquemeling tells us, Captain Morgan began to despair of the whole success of the enterprise. Finally he had a number of ladders made and forced the priests and nuns whom he had captured to set them up against the walls. Many of these poor creatures were killed by the defenders, but at last the ladders were placed and the buccaneers swarmed up them carrying fireballs and pots of powder which they kindled and hurled among the Spaniards. The garrison surrendered at discretion, but the gallant governor defended himself so obstinately that the English were forced to kill him. Morgan remained in Porto Bello several weeks, plundering the place and torturing the citizens to induce them to reveal the hiding places of their riches.

Though an important place in the transshipment of gold from the west coast of South America, Porto Bello never was a large town, but for several weeks each year it was very populous. This was at the time of the annual fair, when the galleons from Spain were in the harbor waiting for the mule trains to bring the gold from Panama. Then merchants and adventurers from all that part of the world gathered in the village and trade was brisk in the big building now called the custom house, whose ruined walls still are standing. Merchandising, drinking and fighting divided the time until the galleons set sail for Spain with their golden cargoes.

Philbrook—Sherman.

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday evening of this week, when Miss Mary Eveline Sherman, daughter of Mrs. A. L. Flint of Commercial street, East Weymouth, became the bride of Mr. Walter George Philbrook of Braintree.

The ceremony was performed at 6.30 o'clock at the parsonage of the First Congregational church in Weymouth Heights, by the pastor, Rev. Edward J. Yaeger.

The best man was Harry W. Vogel and the matron of honor was Mrs. Harry W. Vogel.

The bride was gowned in white crepe-de-chine and princess lace with pearl trimmings. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses.

After the ceremony, an informal reception was held until ten o'clock at the bride's home on Commercial street. The newly married couple were assisted in receiving by the best man and the matron of honor.

A wedding luncheon was served by Bates & Humphrey, caterers. The ushers were Ralph Flint and Joseph A. Sherman of East Weymouth. The parlors were prettily decorated in pink and white, with a profusion of cut flowers, ferns and autumn foliage about the rooms.

At a late hour the couple left on a wedding trip to New Hampshire, and on their return will be at home Wednesday in November at 833 Commercial street, East Weymouth.

The Finishing Touch— Electric Light

She:—"Ah, there's an inviting house. What a difference light makes—especially electric light."

He:—"That's Jones' house. Yes, electric lighting is the finishing touch to a perfect home—large or small. It insures health, convenience and comfort. It's one of the strong attractions of a popular home."

She:—"Yes, that's very evident. Let's call on them and ask who wired their house. We must have electric light immediately."

High School Notes.

If the students had the power to vote, and, if their votes could swing the election of Representative in this district, "Ken" Nash would undoubtedly be elected.

Miss Inez Wheaton '11 of East Weymouth and Miss Nina Quinn '12 of South Weymouth were visitors at school on last Wednesday.

A suitable class pin was adopted, and the program for the junior Halloween party accepted, at the junior class meeting on last Monday.

Manager Cascese of the baseball team, is busy arranging a series of games for every Saturday afternoon, during May and June, with the teams that will probably figure in the Interscholastic baseball championship of Mass.

The cross-country team started training this week, with eight candidates reporting. Attempts are being made, to hold a duel cross-country run with some other High school team, on the same date on which Weymouth plays the class of 1912, that is, Nov. 14, 1913.

A meeting of the athletic association was held yesterday afternoon, to elect a basketball captain and to set a date for the first practice.

ABINGTON 18, WEYMOUTH 0.

The much heralded Abington team failed to create any miracles in scoring against Weymouth at Abington last Friday. On the other hand, during the first quarter, they were played off their feet by Weymouth and were pushed down to their own two-yard line, at one stage of the game. "Conny" Condrick, who was acting captain, during the first half, ran the team well, while he was quarter back. Whittle and Borlenghi played consistently for Weymouth. The score: Abington 18; Weymouth 0.

U. O. P. F. Install.

On Tuesday evening, October 28th, the following officers of Monaquot Colony of Pilgrim Fathers were installed by Deputy Supreme Governor Frank G. Bell and suite of Brockton: Worthy Governor, W. O. Collyer; Lieut.-Governor, G. W. Beane; Secretary, Mrs. Emma Pratt; Treasurer, W. A. Pratt; Collector, J. W. Cushing; Chaplain, Mrs. Ella Peterson; Sergeant-at-Arms, Mrs. Sarah A. Dasha; Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms, F. A. Bicknell; Sentinel at Outer Gate, Andrew Culley; Sentinel at Inner Gate, Mr. Melvina Clapp; Ex-Governor, Mrs. Margaret Culley.

After the meeting adjourned a collation of coffee, sandwiches, cake and ice cream was served and a social hour was spent.

Monday Club.

The regular meeting of the Monday Club will be held on Monday afternoon November 3rd in Odd Fellows Hall East Weymouth.

Mrs. Emmons Crocker chairman of Conservation of General Federation will speak, taking local subjects as her main topic. Her addresses are always most cordially received by the various clubs.

Mrs. Lena B. Newton chairman of Music of State Federation will speak on "The Appreciation of Music and how to develop that appreciation through Folk Songs." Mrs. Newton is a most charming speaker and with Mrs. Frank A. Morrill as soloist demonstrating the Folk Lore the club are assured a splendid afternoon. Mrs. A. E. Beals will be Hostess of the afternoon.

Union Literary Cir. le.

The Union Literary Circle met last Tuesday evening with Mrs. Eleanor Holmes. After the usual routine business a very interesting talk was given by Rev. William Hyde on Tara, the ancient capital of Ireland. Mr. Hyde dealt with the history of Tara for a period of two thousand years, its traditions, lore, literature and civilization. The next meeting of the circle will be with Mrs. Alice Cook, Summer street Weymouth, on Tuesday evening Nov. 4th where Mrs. Simeon Gutterston will give an account of her recent trip abroad.

Chance for Missionaries.

A missionary stationed in a land where the natives were cannibals wrote for assistance as follows: "Our small force of brethren seems to be unable to cope with the distress which prevails in this dark and benighted land. Many of the natives are starving for food. Please send a few more missionaries."

Can You Believe This?

Nature's most deadly antipathy seems to have been overcome. A rat was killed in a produce company's plant in Missouri and left four young rats, which the cat has undertaken to bring up, meantime not neglecting her duty of keeping the place clear of all adult rats that come in sight.

Benjamin J. Loring Dead.

An active and useful life ended on the morning of the 24th inst. when Benjamin J. Loring after a long illness passed to the great beyond.

Mr. Loring was the oldest of a family of eight children born to Benjamin J. and Elizabeth (Gunning) Loring and first saw the light in Weymouth April 27th 1842.

Mr. Loring was among the early responders to the call of his country in 1861 and enlisted in Co. G. 5th Regiment Mass. Volunteers saw active service in first enlistment, three months and re-enlisted in Co. A 1st Battalion Mass. Heavy Artillery. For 25 years of his later active life he has been well known throughout the state as a special agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

He was a member of Knights of Pythias, Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R., of Weymouth; Rural Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Quincy; Pentalpha Chapter Royal Arch Masons, East Weymouth; Boston Chapter 68 of the Eastern Star, Wapiti Tribe 65, I. O. of B. M. of Boston, of which he was past sachein; Weymouth Council 747, Royal Arcanum; Grand Army Club of Boston, Minute Men of 1861, representing the 5th Regiment as vice president in 1901 and 1902; Co. A. Heavy Artillery Association, of which he had been secretary and treasurer since its organization 27 years ago, and the Cochato Club of Braintree.

Mr. Loring passed away at the home of his daughter Mrs. C. O. Miller East Braintree and funeral services were held at that place Sunday afternoon and nearly all of the organizations to which he belonged were well represented by members.

Rev. D. R. Freeman of All Soul's church Braintree was the officiating clergyman and as Mr. Loring was a Past Commander of Reynolds Post 58 G. A. R. that organization with Joseph P. Ford Commander J. Quincy Spear Chaplain performed its ritual service at the home and accompanied the remains to Village Cemetery where the committal took place. A volley by the firing squad, taps by the bugler Miss Theodora Keith and Benjamin J. Loring an honored citizen and soldier was at rest.

Walter F. Sanborn Burial.

The funeral of Walter F. Sanborn took place from his late residence 23 Prospect street Friday afternoon and was attended by many of the friends and late business associates of the deceased. The service was conducted by John Sprague of the Christian Science church Quincy. Rev. F. B. Cressey of Cambridge read a poem. The Lotus male quartette sang "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Lead Kindly Light". There were many beautiful floral tributes. The bearers were Chester Tenney, Charles T. Crane, Charles G. Jordan, Charles Haywood, Harry Smith and Mr. Thirgood. The interment was at Old North cemetery.

Town Business.

At the Monday meeting of the Selectmen the trolley freight franchise granted to the Bay State Street Railway Co. was returned with request to remove some restrictions. As we understand the situation after the long delay and discussion the Board granted the unlimited franchise as far as time was concerned but placed some restrictions as to sub-letting, leasing or selling and now the request is a removal of those restrictions. Action on the request was postponed.

The Weymouth Light & Power Co. asked for the privileges of erecting six poles on Lovell street, one on Neck and one on Norfolk streets and a hearing will be held on the petition Monday, Nov. 17.

Susannah Tufts Chapter D. A. R.

The Susannah Tufts Chapter, D. A. R. of Weymouth met at the home of Mrs. A. P. Worthen, Monday afternoon, Oct. 27, at two thirty o'clock. After the business meeting the regent, Mrs. Alice Senior, presiding, Miss U. C. Noyes, a nurse in the Massachusetts General hospital and a member of the chapter, gave a talk, "How to Make Patients Comfortable." Her subject appealed to all and she made it so simple and instructive. She demonstrated several different ways of bandaging showing the great value of each kind of bandage used and made it so plain that each one listening carried away with her many helpful hints.

She spoke particularly of the great benefits derived from using water, both hot and cold. She told of many little ways of helping the patient bear a long period of lying in bed and laid special stress upon perfect cleanliness. She was very modest which gave an added charm to her lecture. At the close of the lecture the guests were invited to the dining room where delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Miss Annie Richards and Mrs. Fred Stirling. Mrs. Harriet B. Voorhees and Mrs. W. B. Clapp were the pourers.

W. R. C. Notes.

The chairman of the domestic table, Mrs. James F. Stoddard, at the recent bazaar of Reynolds W. R. C. No. 102, held in Odd Fellows Opera house, solicited something for her table of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. She kindly donated a silver thimble, of which Mrs. Harriet D. Litchfield is now the proud possessor, and the following correspondence has resulted:

"Mrs. Woodrow Wilson,
 Dear Madam:—
 I esteem it a great honor to wear the thimble you so kindly donated to Reynolds Woman's Relief Corps No. 102 of Weymouth, and hereby acknowledge the same.
 Respectfully yours,
 HARRIET D. LITCHFIELD."
 "Personal."

White House, October 25, 1913.

My dear Madam:—
 Mrs. Wilson asked me to acknowledge your letter and tell you she is very glad to hear that you have the thimble which she gave for the entertainment. She appreciates so much your having written to tell her about it. Believe me
 Very truly,
 ISABELLA L. HAGUER, Sec'y."

Boy Scouts of America Troop No. 2.

Scout Fahey has been confined to his bed with a dislocated hip. At the last meeting of the troop a committee was appointed to visit him and incidentally they left him a basket of fruit as a remembrance from the troop.

A color guard consisting of the three assistant patrol leaders, has been elected.

The committee on entertainment reported and outlined a prospective program. It was decided to have the same about the middle of November. The plan as at present outlined is to give a demonstration of scout work in a connected and entertaining form. Each scout will have his part to do. There will be music between the acts.

The basket ball manager reported that in all probability the season would open about the first of December with a game at Abington.

At this meeting Mr. Commons was elected an honorary member of Troop No. 2. This was passed by a rising vote, everyone standing squarely on both feet. Mr. Commons, later in the evening was informed of his election as an honorary member and was also presented by Scout Master MacFaun, with a loving cup, from the troop, as a token of the love and esteem with which the scouts regard their former scout master. Mr. Commons responded with words of appreciation for the gifts and honor he had received.

The next meeting will be held on Monday evening Nov. 3 at 7.30 o'clock. All scouts be prepared to give a demonstration of scout work. Scout Master MacFaun presented all the enrolled members who were present, with membership cards. The cards are very attractive being printed in two colors.

It was voted to donate the cocoa and condensed milk left from the camping trip of last summer, to the Christian Endeavor to be used at the Halloween Social this evening (Friday).

How to Reckon Tonnage.

The method of reckoning a vessel's tonnage, carpenter's measurements, is as follows: For a single-deck vessel, multiply the length of keel, the breadth of beam, and depth of hold together and divide by 95. For a double deck vessel, multiply as before, taking half the breadth of beam for the depth of the hold and divide by 95.

TUFTS LIBRARY.

Art Exhibition.

The pictures from The Library Art Club now on exhibition in the reading room are examples of Japanese textile fabric in color.

"The most beautiful and successful result of industrial printing in color which has ever been brought out. If it were possible to present, side by side, the material and its production, it could then be shown what an extraordinary fac-simile has been made, sometimes even deceiving the eye.

The Japanese have a variety of technical processes, an inexhaustible decorative invention, with all nature for its source, and the most refined sentiment in color. These examples have been chosen from the Musees des Arts Decoratifs de Paris, the Chambre de Commerce de Lyon, and the South Kensington Museum of London, as well as the principal private collections of Paris.—Condensed from preface to Etoffes Japonaises Tissees et Brochees.

The exhibit will remain until Nov. 17.

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

Prepare the ground for grape vines in the fall, but do not plant until spring. Dig deep and plant shallow.

It will pay you to put some head work as well as cold cash into the stock business. If you do not it will be harder work to make it pay.

It is noticeable that the season gets somewhat of its complexion from the farmer—the good farmer has few bad seasons, and the poor farmer has few good seasons.

Young pigs highly fed should not be given sour apples. Almost any kind of succulent vegetables is better than that. The effect of high feeding is to sour the stomach, which is the natural result of indigestion.

Get you a definite strain of stock of poultry, so that you can wrangle good naturedly with your neighborhood about your favorite breed. Such things are a wonderful stimulant toward doing your best.

It seems strange when men are so particular about the food they eat, and turn with loathing from mouldy or rusty dishes, that they neglect to guard the horses and cattle as zealously. It takes a little time to screen the oats and remove the dirt and chaff, but it pays.

As a table-fowl the white guinea possesses peculiar merit of its own. The flesh of a guinea is never tough, though it is somewhat dry, as compared with the flesh of a chicken. Guineas are very cheaply raised, as they are great foragers, and find their own living from choice during the greater part of the year.

By selecting ears of corn for seed early in the fall before freezing weather and drying the ears, there is no danger from freezing. They should be gathered, husked and hung up in a well-ventilated room for quick drying before cold weather.

Many farmers have hobbies and pet theories which sometimes bring them plenty of "experience," but as a rule they look at everything along utility lines, says Farm News. Some farmers have been looking for the best farmer's fowl, have bred almost all breeds in existence, and yet have to confess to failure along these lines. At times he thinks that he has the best bird cornered only to find that it is still at large. A buzz-saw is all right for the purpose for which it was intended, but it can't be used for shaving a man's beard. All these things are very practical in their way, but making them answer for all purposes is very much like corralling a cyclone which is something no man has succeeded in doing.

The home orchard should be a permanent thing, and well cared for, it is the most attractive spot on the farm. The apple and pear trees will live and bear for generations, while other kinds will live for a great many years. If neglected, but cared for as other important farm crops, the orchard of large fruit trees should produce at least twice the equivalent in cash as any other acre on the farm. With a variety of kinds, some fruit is reasonably sure every year. The average year the crops will be all that can be economically handled for home use. Cultivating, pruning, fertilizing and spraying will be necessary for the best results, but they will pay handsomely.

CLEANING THE HARNESS.

In the first place the harness should be washed clean of all dirt, as grease or oil applied over dirt is of no benefit to the leather. This can be done by placing them in a tub which has enough of lukewarm water in it to cover the harness. The water must not be too hot or the leather will be spoiled. After remaining in the water a short time, the dirt can be easily removed. As each piece is cleaned it should be hung up and allowed to dry. By the time the last pieces of the harness are washed and hung up to dry, the first pieces are ready to begin applying the grease or oil. Use good oil—neatsfoot oil is best and will strengthen the lasting qualities of the leather as well as make it very pliable and easy to handle. A very good way to apply the oil is with a small paint brush.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Can't Afford It?
 Let's figure it out and see

How much would you charge to go to the grocer's or provision dealer's?

How much would you give, on a stormy day, to be able to visit a distant friend?

How much would it be worth, in case your child were taken suddenly ill at night, to be able to summon the doctor at once, and, perhaps, by special instructions from him by wire, to be able to give temporary relief pending his arrival or even to save its life?

The expense of a telephone is not figured by what it costs for a whole year, but by how much it saves each time it is used. Therefore, with all these things in mind, ask yourself

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

THIRTY-SIX YEARS AGO.
 The hope of getting a four-inch notice with a half-inch advertisement seems to be immortal with some men.

Whitman's pond is at present very low, on account of the Iron Works running on full time. It is said they draw about 3 inches a day.

At the conference of the Republican committee at Quincy, last Monday, it was agreed to nominate two Representatives from Weymouth and one from Quincy, for the coming election.

A party of young men left South Weymouth for a smelting excursion one day last week. After fishing awhile at Hingham without a bite, they drove to Strawberry hill, Nantasket, and when thoroughly chilled, started for home without a fish.

About fifty persons from Boston, Hingham, Scituate and Weymouth, met in the city last week to consider the subject of constructing a narrow gauge railroad from Boston through Quincy, Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, and to some convenient point near Captain's hill in the town of Duxbury.

TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.
 The booths for the Australian voting system have arrived and are being placed in position.

David F. and Leonard F. Wolfe went fishing one day this week and in one tide caught 85 dozen smelts, weighing 61 lbs.

Through the efforts of Congressman Morse, a new postoffice has been established at Shaw's Corner, to be styled Weymouth Centre, and Robert F. Shaw has been appointed postmaster.

The electric cars to Quincy Point are freely patronized, some of our Old Spain residents returning from the city by this route. That an electric line in Weymouth will pay good dividends is certain, and it is hoped that our electric company will construct a road without delay.

The 27th annual reunion of the Weymouth High School Association was held at Fogg's hall, South Weymouth, last Friday evening, and was one of the most enjoyable of these pleasant gatherings of the graduates of our High schools.

The following officers were elected for the year 1890:
 President, Fred T. Hunt, Weymouth.
 Vice-president, E. J. McGrath, East Weymouth.
 Secretary, Miss Louise Fay, East Weymouth.
 Treasurer, Miss Sadie Stetson, South Weymouth.

TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO.
 Politics are very quiet in South Weymouth; most everybody seems to know how he is going to vote. When the time comes they will make the crosses to suit their taste.

To the independent voter, the Australian system is a boon. He can scratch his party's ticket at his own sweet will without any one knowing how he votes.

For 1890 the vote of Weymouth was: W. E. Russell, 899; J. Q. A. Brackett, 867; John Blackmer, 77 and some 40 or more blanks, making a total of about 1,780, which was only about 75 per cent of the registered vote.

Quincy and Weymouth both went Democratic for governor last fall, and elected three Democratic representatives. The Republicans enjoyed the pleasure of considerable knitting among themselves and paid off so many old scores that this year they seem to be solidly united for an earnest support of their candidates.

The Lost Dime.
 A man sent his neighbor's little boy to the drug store to buy five postage stamps. He handed him two dimes, the extra one being for himself. Some time afterward the boy came back blubbering and said he had lost one of the dimes.
 "But why didn't you buy me the stamps?" asked the man.
 "Because, mister," replied the boy, "it was your dime I lost."—Judge.

Origin of "Whisky."
 The word usk is an Anglicized form of the Welsh word wysg, a Celtic word meaning water. It is connected with the Irish word usque, from which the Saxon gets the word whisky.—Cardiff Western Mail.

Honk, Honk!
 "Did she come to the door when you serenaded her with your mandolin?"
 "No; but another fellow came along and brought her out with an auto horn."—Washington Herald.

Philosophy is nothing but discretion.—Selden

Visual as Well as Vocal.
 "His language was terrible; I never saw worse," said a policeman at Bridgend, England.

A PACKAGE FOR MARK TWAIN.

It Came to the Great Humorist Just Before a Christmas.
 In the winter of 1883, when Mark Twain was in financial difficulties and his family was in Europe, the great humorist went to live temporarily at the Players club in New York.
 Just before Christmas a member named Scott said one day:
 "Mr. Clemens, you have an extra overcoat hanging in the coatroom. I've got to attend my uncle's funeral and it's raining very hard. I'd like to wear it."
 The coat was an old one, in the pockets of which Clemens kept a melancholy assortment of pipes, soiled handkerchiefs, neckties, letters, and what not.
 "Scott," he said, "if you won't lose anything out of the pockets of that coat you may wear it."
 An hour or two later Clemens found a notice in his mail box that a package for him was in the office. He called for it and found a neat bundle which somehow had a Christmas look. He carried it up to the reading room with a showy air.
 "Now, boys," he said, "you may make all the fun of Christmas you like; but it's pretty nice, after all, to be remembered."
 They gathered around and he undid the package. It was filled with the pipes, soiled handkerchiefs and other articles from the old overcoat. Scott had taken special precautions against losing them.
 Mark Twain regarded them in silence, then he drawled:
 "Well, hang Scott. I hope his uncle's funeral will be a flat failure."—Bookman.

Weymouth Gazette and Transcript

Published every Friday by the Gazette and Transcript Publishing Co. Weymouth, Mass. M. E. Hawes, Editor and Manager. Norton F. Pratt, Assistant. Mark J. Garrity, Supt. Telephone 145, Weymouth.

FRIDAY, OCT. 31, 1913.

"Just before the battle." There are now but three days between us and the balloting. It has been a campaign of more than usual "muck raking" unwarranted personalities and we fear unprovoked statements.

Superintendent Dyer of Boston has started in to round up hoodlum school boys on the cars. Weymouth is in the Metropolitan district of Boston and when Superintendent Dyer gets the city proper cleaned up he might with a good excuse visit Central and Lincoln squares and do a little work.

Elsewhere in this issue we give our readers the entire ticket for next Tuesday's election, as far as the people of this district are directly concerned in voting. There are, as is well known, many names mentioned which will get but a small per cent of the vote cast and while they stand for a principle, is not the time now ripe to narrow the list down to the few who stand some show of election and act your best judgement to get the best man of the few.

On the last week of one of the most hotly contested campaigns Massachusetts has ever witnessed, one would naturally ask, why is this interest?

Some say that "nothing but state issues are at stake," but such is not the fact. While we elect only state officers the questions on which the parties divide, the living issues of the hour, are as broad as the nation itself, and as important as the rock on which it is founded.

It is not a question if Jefferson, Jackson, Sumner or Lincoln were right in their time, but what is right and best for today, and the people differ, and honestly, upon the questions before them. On all important issues Massachusetts' voice has always in the past had great weight throughout the country and may her voice so speak on Tuesday next that her influence shall be thrown for the best interests of the people.

The election is one of great interest and importance and it is now the duty of every voter to think earnestly upon the issues of the campaign and to go to the polls on Tuesday and mark his ticket in accordance with his honest convictions.

Don't be a Democrat or a Republican because somebody else is, or because most of your friends are, or because your father was, but seek for reasons and good ones for casting your votes for one party or the other, and remember that the principles at issue are always more important than the men.

Hear what Dr. French, Principal of Morris Heights School; Dr. Faunce, President of Brown University; and Dr. Meiklejohn, President of Amherst College, have to say of this man.

To whom it may concern:—

It gives me great pleasure to testify to the ability and character of Mr. Kenneth Nash, whom it has been my good fortune to know for the past five years and who was intimately associated with me as a member of my faculty for the scholastic year 1912-13.

He showed himself eminently capable of attacking the problems of the school teacher and from the beginning proved himself the master of the situation. He was at all times the possessor of tact, he insisted on honest relations, and in every way commanded the regard and confidence of teachers and students.

I have never had associated with me a man of more sterling character or of better future prospects than Mr. Nash.

I heartily commend him to the consideration of anyone looking for the characteristics of honesty, persistence, intelligence yoked together in a gentleman.

JOHN S. FRENCH.

Theron L. Tirrell, 244 Main St., South Weymouth

October 17, 1913.

I am glad to state that Mr. Kenneth L. Nash, who graduated from Brown University in 1912, made an excellent record at Brown and gained the entire confidence of all our Faculty and students. As scholar, athlete and all around man he took large part in our undergraduate life, and was one of the leaders in creation and expression of college sentiment. Our good wishes will follow him throughout his career.

W. H. P. FAUNCE.

To whom it may concern:—

I have known Mr. Kenneth L. Nash as an undergraduate student in Brown University. He is a man of excellent ability, with genuine power of leadership among his fellows, and of the personal quality in every way. I am sure that he can be counted on for intelligent and energetic service along the line of any activity upon which he may enter.

ALEXANDER MEIKLEJOHN.

But the Point is Important.

Railroads should remember that it doesn't make so very much difference to those who are killed whether the wreck was caused by an incompetent engineer or a defective rail.—Charles-ton News and Courier.

Worry May Cause Death.

Medical science has recently explained how worry commits its murders. It has reached the conclusion that in many instances of what have been regarded as lunacy, and from which the victim finally dies, the case has simply been one of acute worry. Instead of the person dying of mental breakdown, he has worried himself to death.

Do You Know Why We Are Installing Scores of Gas Lights Every Day in the Stores of Our District?

It is because we are manufacturers of the world's greatest artificial illuminant, thereby assuring the finest light for commercial purposes.

Greatest, because it is incomparable as a substitute for daylight—a pure amber glow—perfect color for the most exacting requirements.

Because Gas Light is the only reliable illuminant of the universe. It is always at your service when you need it—storms do not affect its reliability, as it is delivered through underground pipes—out of reach of the elements.

This means superb satisfaction to any merchant, for their store is never in darkness—thereby giving them the reputation of dependability among their customers.

Good light increases output and decreases cost.

We know and can prove that gas lights will light your place of business better and cheaper than any other light.

Let's turn your poor light losses into good light profits by installing for you Modern Gas Lights—powerful, efficient, economical.

Hundreds of merchants have found that Gas Light in their shops has materially increased the efficiency of their clerks. You will find this a true statement, often wondered at by some few skeptics but always proven correct where put to a test.

And permit us to impress upon you, that Gas Light of to-day is as convenient and far more beautiful than any other.

Gas Light: superior, hygienic—good for your employees, your customers, yourself and your pocketbook.

You can't afford to "think it over."

Let our experts give you guaranteed figures on lighting your factory, store, or shop. Cut down the cost of inefficient and costly illumination.

Autumnal Glories

Autumnal Glories may be seen On hill-top, plain and dell; And Nature in her wisdom shows She doeth all things well.

The ripened fruit, the fading leaf Has each a tale to tell; Reminding us that we should say To many things farewell.

We face the winter with its cold, But one thing it supplies; A favorite in New England Our famous Apple Pies.

Now, Whitcomb makes Green Apple Pies And from the best of fruit; And the demand is now so large It proves they always suit.

CHAPTER XI. Other Relations.

IT is but natural to presume after the foregoing that the affairs of the Mederofts were under close and careful scrutiny from that confidential hour. The Odell-Carneys were conspicuously nice and agreeable to the Mederofts and Miss Fowler. It may be said indeed that Mr. Odell-Carney went considerably out of his way to be agreeable to Mrs. Mederoft—so much so, in fact, that she made it a point to have some one else with her whenever she seemed likely to be left alone with him. The Rodney's struggled bravely and no doubt conscientiously to emulate the example set by the Odell-Carneys, but it was hardly to be expected that they could see new things through old world eyes. They grew very stiff and ceremonious—that is, the Rodney ladies did. It was their prerogative, of course. Were they not cousins of the Mederofts?

Four or five days of uneasy pretense passed with a swiftness that irritated certain members of the party and a slowness that distressed the others. Days never were so short as those which the now recklessly infatuated Brock was spending. He was valiantly earning his way into the heart of Constance, a process that tried his patience exceedingly, for she was blithely unimpressible if one were to judge by the calmness with which she fended off the inevitable though tardy assault. She kept him at arm's length. Appearances demanded a discreetness no matter how she may secretly have felt toward the good looking husband of her sister. To say that she was enjoying herself would be putting it much too tamely. She was reveling in the fun of the thing. It mattered little to her that people, her own cousins in particular, were looking upon her with cold and critical eyes. She knew down in her heart that she could throw a bomb among them at any time by the mere utterance of a single word. It mattered as little that Edith was beginning to chafe miserably under the strain of waiting and deception. The novelty had worn off for the wife of Roxbury. She was despairingly in love, and she was pining for the day to come when she could laugh again with real instead of simulated joyousness.

"Connie, dear," she would lament a dozen times a day, "it's growing unbearable. Oh, how I wish the three weeks were ended. Then I could have my Roxbury, and you could have my other Roxbury, and everybody wouldn't be pitying me and cavilling at you because I'm unhappily married."

"Why do you say I could have your other Roxbury?" demanded her sister on one occasion. "You forget father expects me to marry the viscount!"

"You are so tiresome, Connie. Don't worry me with your love affairs—I don't want to hear them. There's Mr. Brock waiting for you in the garden."

"I know it, my dear. He's been waiting for an hour. I think it is good for him to wait," said the other, with airy confidence. "What does Roxy say in his letter this morning?"

"He says it will all be over in a day or two. Dear me, how I wish it were over now! I can't endure Cousin Mary's snipshiness much longer, and as for Katherine! My dear, I hate that girl!"

"She's been very nice lately, Edith—ever since Freddie dropped me so completely. By the way, Burton was telling me today that Odell-Carney had been asking her some very curious and staggering questions about Tootles and your most private affairs."

"I know, my dear," groaned Edith. "He very politely remarked to me last night that Tootles made him think very strangely of a friend of his in London. He wouldn't mention the fellow's name. He only smiled and said, 'Nough mind, my dear, he's a defended handsome doc.' I daresay he meant that as a compliment for Tootles. She is pretty, don't you think so, dear?"

"She's just like you, Edith," said Constance, who understood things quite clearly.

"Then, in heaven's name, Connie, why are they staring at her so impudently—all of them?"

"It's because she is so pretty. Goodness, Edith, don't let every little thing worry you. You'll have wrinkles and gray hairs soon enough."

"It's all very nice for you to talk," grumbled Edith. "I'm going mad with loneliness. You have a lover near you all the time—he's mad about you. What have I? I'm utterly alone. No one loves me—no, not a soul!"

"You won't let them love you, Edith," said Constance jauntily. "They all want to love you, all of them."

"I hate men," announced Mrs. Mederoft retrospectively.

Developments of a most refractory character swooped down upon them at the very end of the sojourn in Innsbruck. Every one had begun to rejoice that the fortnight was almost over and that they could go their different ways without having anything really regrettable to carry away with them. The Rodney's were going to Paris, the Mederofts to London, the Odell-Carneys (after finding out where the others were bent) to Ostend. Freddie Ulster suddenly announced his determination to remain at the Tirol for a week or two longer. That very day he had been introduced to a Mlle. Le Brun, a fascinating young Parisian stopping at the Tirol with her mother.

All might have ended well had it not been for the unfortunate circumstance of Odell-Carney's making a purchase of the London Standard instead of the Times, as was his custom. His lamentations over this piece of stupidity were cut short by the discovery of an astonishing article upon the editorial page of the paper—an article which created within him a sense of grave perplexity. He read the headlines three and glanced through the text twice, neither time with any very definite idea of what he was reading. His fingers shook as he held the sheet nearer the window for a final effort to untangle the incredible thing that lay before him in simple, unimpeachable black and white.

"Pon me word," he kept repeating to himself feebly. Then he got up and went off in extreme haste to find his wife.

"My dear," he said to her in the carriage way, "I must speak with you alone." She was just starting off for a drive with Mrs. Rodney.

"Bad news, Carney?" she demanded, struck by his expression. She was following him toward a remote corner of the approach. He did not reply until they were seated much nearer to each other than was their wont.

"Read that," he said, slipping the Standard into her hands. "Wot do you think of it?"

"My dear Carney, I don't know. Would you mind telling me what I am to read?"

"The Mederoft thing. Right there."

She read the article, her husband watching her face the while. Surprise, incredulity, dismay, succeeded each other in rapid changes. She was reading in sheer amazement of the doings of Roxbury Mederoft in connection with the county council's subcommittee—in London! The story went on to relate how Mederoft, implacable leader of the opposition to the "graters," suddenly had appeared before the committee with the most astounding figures and facts to support his charges of rottenness on the part of the "clique;" his unexpected descent upon the scene had thrown the opposing leaders into a panic; every one had been led to believe that he was sojourning in the east. As a matter of fact, it was soon revealed, he had been in London secretly working on the problem for nearly three weeks, keeping discreetly under cover in order that his influence might not be thwarted. His array of facts, his bitter arraignment of the men who were trying to force the building bill through the council, staggered the whole city of London. At that writing it looked as though the bill would be overthrown, its promoters had been so completely put to rout. The committee would be compelled to take cognizance of the startling exposure. The people would demand a full thrashing out of the obnoxious deal Roxbury Mederoft's name was on every one's lip. The Standard had profited by securing a great "beat."

The Odell-Carneys looked at each other in wonder and perplexity. "What does it mean?" asked the lady, her eyes narrowing.

"Look here, Agatha, this paper's at least two days old. Now, how the devil can Mederoft be in London and Innsbruck at the same time. He was here day before yesterday, wasn't he? I'm so 'cufended unobserving!"

"Yes, yes, he was here. And this paper!"—She paused irresolutely.

"Says he was there. 'Pon my word, it's most uncanny. There's some mystery here."

"I've got it, Carney! This is not Roxbury Mederoft!"

"Good Gawd!"

"This explains everything. Heavens, Carney! This fellow is—is her lover! She's running about the country with him. She's!"

"Her lover? 'Gad, my dear, he may have been so at one time, but he's the other one's lover now, take my word for it. I say, 'pon my soul, this is a charming game your friends the Rodney's have let us into. They?"

"My friends! Yours, you mean?" she retorted.

"Oh, come now! But let it go at that. They know, of course that this fellow isn't her husband, and yet, by god, Agatha, they've gone about deliberately palming him off on us as the real article. They are actually sanctioning the whole!"

"Stop a moment, Carney," interrupted his wife. "The London clap may be the fraud. Let us go slow, my dear."

"Slow? How the devil can we go slow in such fast company? No! This fellow is the fraud. And they know it too. They all know it. They?"

"Rubbish! You forget that the whole Rodney tribe is up in arms because Mederoft is making love to his wife's sister. They're not assuming anything there, let me tell you. And he's not Edith's lover. If he's not her husband, he's playing a part that she understands and approves. And this—this, my dear Carney, may account for the imaginary exchange of Tootles. Dear me, it's quite a tangle."

"I shall telegraph my solicitors at once for definite news. They'll know whether the real Mederoft is in London, and then—well, by Jove, Agatha, I can't tell just what steps I'll take in regard to these Rodney's."

He went into a long tirade against the unfortunate Seattlettes, as he called them. "Understand me, Agatha, I don't blame Mrs. Mederoft. If she's having an affair with this chap and can pull the wool!"

"But she isn't having an affair with this chap," cried Mrs. Odell-Carney, her patience exhausted. "She's having an affair with a chap in London, the one who writes 'Good gracious!' Of course! Why, what fools we are! The real Mederoft is in London, and it is he who is writing the letters. How stupid of me!"

"Aha!" exclaimed he triumphantly. "Of course, she's getting letters from her husband. Why not? That's to be expected. But, by the everlasting shagpat, do you suppose that her husband knows she's off here with another fellow who masquerades as her husband? No!" He almost shouted it. "I've never heard of anything so brazen. 'Gad, what nerve these Americans have! Just to think of it!"

"I don't believe she is anything of the sort," declared his wife. "She's as good as gold. You can't fool me, Carney. I know women."

"Dence take it, Agatha, so do I. And wot's more, I know men."

"They're a poor lot, the kind you know. This pseudo Mederoft is not your kind. He's a very clever chap and a gentleman."

"Now, look here, Agatha, don't imagine that I'm going to be such a cad as to turn against 'em in their hour of trial. Not I. I'm more their friend than ever. I'll help 'em to get away from here, and I'll bulldoze these Rodney's into holding their peace forever after. It's the Rodney duplicity that I can't stand."

"Shall we stay here, or shall we find an excuse to leave?" she asked pointedly.

"We'll stay long enough for me to tell the Rodney's wot I think of 'em. I'll have an answer to my dispatch by night. Then I should advise you to have a talk with Mrs. Mederoft. You've invited her to the house, you know. Tell her there can't be two Mederofts. See wot I mean? We'll see 'em through this, but—well, you understand."

Suburban Life.

If anything were needed to justify its sub-title, "The Countryside Magazine," the November issue of Suburban Life would amply serve this purpose. From cover to cover the contents of this beautiful monthly savor of the affairs of the countryside. Not only does it treat of the things practical, but also of the things beautiful and the things that make for civic good. Harold J. Howland, the contributing editor, has a strong presentation under the title "Why Not Church Unity—Now," of the possibilities that the religious bodies have for concerted effort for the good of their communities. Every woman, and most men, will like "How I Made Money and Remade Myself," the story of how a young woman regained a new lease of life. It was all due to a beautiful, big, brown and white collie dog, "Scotch Highball" by name. Then there is an article about a woman in Massachusetts driven "back to the land" by ill-health who wanted "something two-footed to raise," and so chose turkeys as her life saver. "Two Little Gray Squirrels and How They Adopted Us" tells of a pair of wild creatures that came a-visiting to a New Jersey garden and how the owners of the garden induced them to stay. "Ideal Garages for Country Homes," "The Proper Care of Ferns in the Home," "Uncle Sam's Pure Water Bureau," "Natomas Farm—a Business Man's Paying Hobby," "How to Make Your Old Apple Trees Profitable," "The Uses of the Glass Garden," and "The Public Library as an Educator" are some of the other worth-while articles.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

Land Court.

To Henry B. Chandler, Bradford Chandler, Elizabeth R. Barrett and Anna Barrett, of Weymouth, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Fanny L. Byrnes, of Newton, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth; Frank S. Rogers, of Cambridge, in said County of Middlesex; Percy S. Rogers, of Worcester, in the County of Worcester, and said Commonwealth; any heirs, devisees or legal representatives of Mark Penney, late of that part of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth; called Charles-ton, deceased, of Patrick Glines, late of Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, deceased; and to all whom it may concern.

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Peter C. Goldie, of Norton, in the County of Bristol, and said Commonwealth, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land situate in said Weymouth, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the westerly side of Union Street at land of Wallace Lannan and from said point running northwesterly by said land five hundred seventy one and 65/100 feet to land of the heirs of J. Austin Rogers, thence turning and running northeasterly by said last named land two hundred ninety five and 75/100 feet to land of Bradford W. Chandler, thence turning and running by said land of Chandler in a southeasterly direction three hundred seventy two feet to Union Street and thence turning and running southerly by said Street three hundred thirty six and 6/100 feet to the point of beginning.

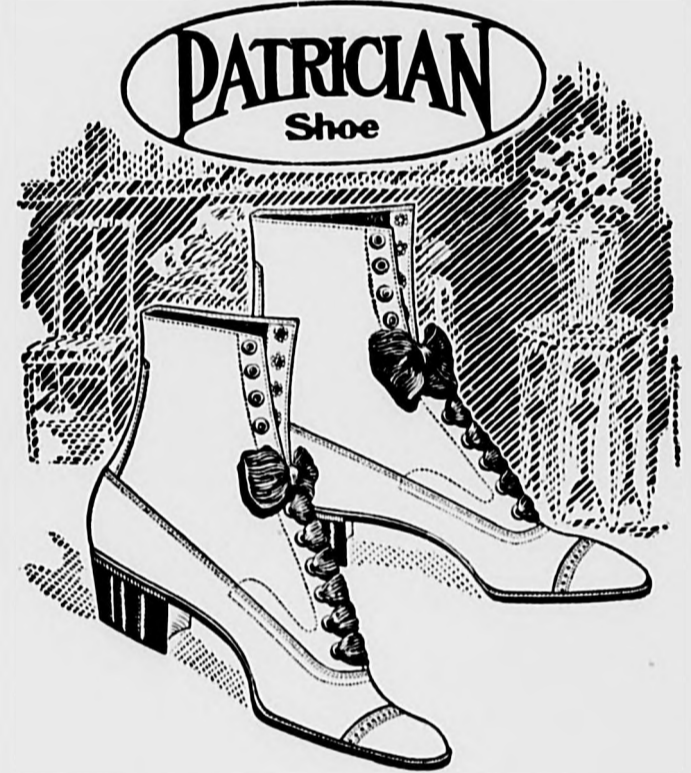

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the tenth day of November, A. D., 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, CHARLES THORNTON DAVIS, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this tenth day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen.

Milk and Music.
It is a little known fact that the most delightful music at the present day is produced by playing on milk. The supply of ivory nowadays does not to a great extent meet the demand. Strange as it may sound, skin milk forms a substitute. It is used for making the keyboards of pianos, and in appearance the finished substance is hardly distinguishable from ivory.

Panama, R. P.—It is not given to many men to destroy a city so utterly that it is never rebuilt. That is what Capt. John Morgan, the master buccaneer, did in 1671, when he led his band of cutthroats down from the hills upon Panama. After he had finished with that big, flourishing city there was so little left of it that the Spanish moved five miles west along the coast and there built a new Panama—the Panama we know today. The story of Morgan's justly famous exploit, often told, never grows stale. It is a wonderful story of desperate bravery, endurance, suffering and ruthless cruelty, and as John Esquemeling was the first to relate it in detail, so he has been the best. Howard Pyle has well said: "In the case of the Esquemeling history, it should be decidedly hands off. One touch of the modern brush would destroy the whole tone of dim colors of the past made misty by the lapse of time."

So I wish I had space to quote the entire story of Morgan and Panama as Esquemeling, who was one of the band, tells it. Some of it, at least, must be given in his quaint language, beginning with the capture by a part of Morgan's fleet of Fort San Lorenzo at the mouth of the Chagres river. Says Esquemeling:

"Captain Brodely being made commander, in three days after his departure (from St. Catherine's) arrived in sight of the said castle of Chagre, by the Spaniards called St. Lawrence. This castle is built on a high mountain at the entry of the river, surrounded by strong pallisades, or wooden walls, filled with earth, which secures them as well as the best wall of stone or brick. The top of this mountain is, in a manner, divided into two parts, between which is a ditch thirty feet deep. The castle hath but one entry, and that by a drawbridge over this ditch. To the land it has four bastions, and to the sea two more. The south part is totally inaccessible, through the craginess of the mountain. The north is surrounded by the river, which here is very broad. At the foot of the castle, or rather mountain, is a strong fort, with eight great guns, commanding the entry of the river. Not much lower are two other batteries, each of six pieces, to defend likewise the mouth of the river."

"No sooner had the Spaniards perceived the pirates, but they fired incessantly at them with the biggest of their guns. They came to an anchor in a small port about a league from the castle. Next morning, very early, they went ashore and marched through the woods to attack the castle on that side. This march lasted till two of the clock in the afternoon, before they could reach the castle, by reason of the difficulties of the way, and its mire and dirt; and though their guides served them very exactly, yet they came so nigh the castle at first that they lost many of their men by its shot, they being in an open place without covert."

The pirates bravely assaulted the castle, sword in one hand and fireball in the other, but were repulsed with heavy loss. Renewing the attack under cover of darkness, "there happened a very remarkable accident which occasioned their victory. One of the pirates being wounded with an arrow in his back, which pierced his body through, he pulled it out boldly at the side of his breast, and winding a little cotton about it, he put it into his musket, and shot it back to the castle, but the cotton being kindled by the powder, fired two or three houses in the castle, being thatched with palm leaves, which the Spaniards perceived not so soon as was necessary; for this fire meeting with a parcel of powder, blew it up, thereby causing great ruin, and no less consternation to the Spaniards, who were not able to put a stop to it."

Full advantage was taken of this by the buccaneers, and they set fire to the palings and gained a foothold within them, despite "many flaming pots full of combustible matter, and odious smells, which destroyed many of the English." All next morning the fight raged, but about noon the English gained a breach through which they fought their way to the heart of the castle. "The Spaniards who remained alive cast themselves down from the castle into the sea, choosing rather to die thus (few or none surviving the fall) than to ask quarter for their lives. The governor himself retreated to the corps du guard, before which were placed two pieces of cannon; here he still defended himself, not demanding any quarter, till he was killed with a musket shot in the head."

In a few days Captain Morgan arrived with the rest of his fleet and organized the expedition against Panama. He took his men by boat up the Chagres as far as Cruces, now a village not two miles from the canal, and there landed them for the overland march. Leaving 160 men with the

the city, and though the defense was desperate, many of the pirates being killed, Panama fell within three hours. What Morgan did to the devoted inhabitants in the effort to find all their hidden treasure is too horrible to relate. Soon after the capture of the city fire broke out in many quarters, and Esquemeling says the conflagration was started by Morgan, though he laid the blame on the Spaniards. Anyway, as the houses were almost all built of cedar, the entire city was soon consumed by flames. Some three weeks later "Captain Morgan departed from Panama, or rather from the place where the city of Panama stood; of the spoils whereof he carried away with him 175 beasts of carriage laden with silver, gold and other precious things, besides about six hundred prisoners, men, women, children and slaves."

Of old Panama naught remains but the ruins of the cathedral, the tower of St. Stanislaus church and the fragments of a few other stone and brick structures. For more than two centuries they have been buried in the jungle, but are now being brought to view by the efforts of the Panama government, which is having the undergrowth cleared away from the ruins.

The visitor to the isthmus should not fail to make the trip down the Chagres from Gatun to the sea, reversing Morgan's route. The scenery along the river is beautiful, and the great stretch of ocean beach—clean, hard, green and purple sand over which immense breakers roll—is ideal for bathing.
