FOREWORD

When the list on the Islands of the Pacific, to which the present list forms a supplement, was prepared in the spring of 1943, a year and a half after Pearl Harbor, the Polynesian islands were being converted into bases for American troops. Most of Melanesia and all of Micronesia--including the American "stepping stones," Midway, Wake and Guam--were held by the enemy. The campaign in New Guinea for the defense of Australia had begun.

During the two intervening years the tide of battle has moved from defense to assault, from New Guinea and the Solomons to the Gilberts, Marshalls, Marianas, and, as this compilation is completed, beyond the Japanese mandated islands to the islands of Japan proper. The attention of American readers and the work of American scholars and investigators have kept pace, and significant books, as well as a flood of magazine articles, appear among the new publications.

In supplementing the earlier list, the compiler has searched all new material on the islands. The selection from the mass of war reporting stresses accounts of the lands and the natives, and their contacts with American forces, rather than details of campaigns. A few older works have been added, including some omissions which had become apparent after the release of the 1943 list, and a group of early sources on the Japanese mandated islands.

The 1943 list, out of print for over a year, has now been re-issued in an edition identical with the original except for the omission of the index pages. For the sake of economy it seemed advisable to combine the author and subject indices of the original with those of the supplement, and the joint indices are placed at the end of the present pamphlet, pages S37 to S68. Items in the supplement are numbered in continuation of those in the original list, beginning with No. 1748.

The scheme of classification of the supplement is like that of the earlier list, except that the numerous references on World War II have been transferred from the subheading under the General Section, and placed in a separate section at the end, itself subdivided according to campaigns.

JAPANESE ISLANDS (MICRONESIA)

1996 Cross-cultural survey file on the Pacific. Ed. by Dr. George P. Murdock, for the Institute of human relations, Yale university. Washington, On deposit at Ethnogeographic board, Smithsonian institution, 47 file cases, containing over 50,000 5 x 8 cards.

This card file covers information on Micronesia and the Japanese islands, taken from the most authoritative books, reports and articles. Relevant data on every aspect of economy, life and environment are abstracted in full, many in translation from German and Japanese. Photographs and maps reproduced from original sources are included.

The cards are classified according to subject under 295 main topics and many sub-topics, systematically numbered and filed by separate areas. A simple printed guide indicates the arrangement.

Sources used number about 1,000 works, including 117 on Micronesia general, 251 on the Caroline Islands, 148 on the Marshalls, 212 on the Marianas, 22 on the Gilberts, 36 on Nauru, 48 on the Bonin islands, 137 on the Ryukyus, 30 on the Izus, 157 on Formosa.

Restricted to the use of government agencies.

Note: The bibliography of the Cross-cultural survey file has been checked for the present list, and a number of the more extensive early sources have been added in this section.

WORLD WAR II

Note: In selecting these titles out of the quantity of book and periodical material dealing with the war in the Pacific, the attempt has been to stress works describing the islands under war conditions, and the contacts of American soldiers with native life and an unfamiliar world, rather than battle narratives.

SUBJECT INDEX

Note: This index covers both the 1943 list and the present supplement. Items refer to numbers, nos. 1-1747 in the 1943 list, nos. 1748-2137 in the supplement.

Contents of works have not been analyzed and each book or article is entered under its widest subject and by place name. The island groups to which individual islands belong are indicated in parenthesis following the name of the island. Square brackets following the names of the island groups show by what powers they are administered.

Table with 2 columns: Subject and Nos. Includes entries for Acculturation, Admiralty islands, Air bases, Alofi, American possessions, Bibliographies, Anaa, Anthropology, Cook islands, Hawaii, Marquesas, New Caledonia, New Guinea, Pitcairn, Samoa, Society islands, Solomon islands, Tonga, and various expeditions.

Table with 2 columns: Subject and Nos.
