CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society has invited the Chrysanthemum Society of America to hold its next annual convention and exhibition in Horticultural Hall, Boston, November 3, 4, 5 and 6, 1904, in conjunction with that society. This invitation has been unanimously accepted by the executive board of the society.

An invitation was also received from the American Institute to repeat the success of last fall in New York, and although the officers and executive committee fully appreciate the kindness of the American Institute in extending this invitation, they feel it will be for the good of the society to change the location every year if possible. We are expecting next November the greatest show ever held, and every effort will be put forth to accomplish this result.

FRED. H. LEMON, Sec'y.

Short Notes from Europe.

W. Wells, the well known grower of chrysanthemums at Earlswood, Redhill, Surrey, England, is announcing the publication of a new and revised edition of his book on the chrysanthemum. Mr. Wells is one of the ablest trade growers in England and his experience is an extensive one. In recent years he has been instrumental in bringing to the notice of the British public all the best of the colonial raised varieties, especially those from the seed bed of T. W. Pockett, of Melbourne, Australia. The book should be ready by the time these notes appear.

The N. C. S. show held for the first time at the Crystal palace was, in spite of a bad season, decidedly encouraging, although the change of locality and the problem of reduced finances made a somewhat decided impress on the general extent of the show and the number of the exhibits. This was more particularly noticeable to those of its members who had just returned from the Paris chrysanthemum show which was truly a magnificent one.

Competition in chrysanthemums is becoming keener every year. Raisers and exhibitors are vying with one another for supremacy and already (January 2) most of the English importers and trade growers are announcing the publication of their list of novelties. These comprise many interesting sorts raised by English growers and others from colonial and continental sources.

Of the French growers Ernest Calvat is first in the field with his catalogue of novelties. Most of these are grand examples of show flowers quite up to his usual style, and are a lot selected from those of his seedlings that were awarded the highest number of points for first-class certificates at Paris, Lille, Grenoble and Lyons. We specially recommend to the notice of American cultivators Alliance, Souvenir de Victorine Calvat, Mlle. Anna Debono, Femina, Comtesse de Grailley, Gabriel Martin, Mme. Marguerite de Mons, Mme. R. Oberthur, Joseph Paquet, Mme. E. Rosette and Marquise Visconti-Venosta (not the older variety of Marquis which is already well known.)

American growers of the popular flower who can read French would find much interesting matter in "Le Chrysanthème," the official organ of the French Chrysanthemum Society. One dollar a year covers the cost and there are generally seven or eight numbers published during the twelve months. Philippe Rivoire, 16 rue d'Algerie, Lyons, is the secretary.

A little shilling handbook on the culture of the chrysanthemum has just been published by Messrs. Collingridge, of the City Press, Aldersgate street, London, E. C. It is entitled "Chrysanthemums and How to Grow them for Exhibition." It is illustrated and contains a stopping and timing table.

Speaking of cultural treaties, mention ought to be made of an Italian book on the golden flower recently published by the Unione Tipografico-Editrice of Turin. It is one of the few worthy of the name of book for it contains upwards of 270 pages of printed matter, is illustrated with figures in black and white and also several in color. The author is Dario Formilli, of Rome, who deals with the flower in a most comprehensive manner. Briefly stated the book deals with the history, description, classification, bibliography and culture from every point of view. Lists of varieties for various purposes are given and a descriptive list of the best varieties. The price is 5 francs.

Growers who are interested in diseases and insect pests would do well to procure Dr. Chiffot's "Maladies et Parasites du Chrysanthème" together with the colored chart issued with it.

The French N. C. S. has undertaken the issue of a catalogue of varieties actually known to be in cultivation in France and also a color chart for the purpose of facilitating the description of the colors of the flowers about which there is often so much dispute. These two publications promise to be a boon to those engaged in literary work. P.

Golden Chain in Mass.

The accompanying illustration shows the effect produced by arranging plants of Chrysanthemum Golden Chain in mass. We find it valuable when used to screen an unsightly corner or doorway in the store during a show. The flowers are small, the rays a rich golden yellow, with a darker center. The leaves are small, the whole being borne on long slender, almost trailing stems. When cut the blooms would no doubt prove of some value, especially when made up with Asparagus Sprengeri into a loose bouquet. F. K. B.

PALMS AND FERNS.

Fern Spores and Seedlings.

The process of sowing fern spores has been described many times, but yet some of the essential points may bear review briefly, for the season of early sowing is now with us. Some clean 6-inch pots, or preferably new pots, are filled to three-fourths their depth with drainage material, either broken pots or cinders will answer, then the pots are filled to within about one-half inch of the top with fine, prepared soil which has been sterilized, and pressed down firmly and smoothly. The seed pots should then be given a thorough watering and allowed to drain for at least two hours before sowing, the fine duct-like spores being sprinkled thinly and evenly on the surface of the soil, and the pots being at once set away in the propagating house, and preferably plunged in sand or fine ashes in a propagating frame, where the atmospheric conditions may be controlled to a great extent.

This is very necessary from the fact that it is better for the moisture of the soil to be preserved, from the first watering up to the time the sporelings appear, without further watering if possible, it being impossible to water the seed pots overhead without washing the spores off. But at the same time it should be remembered that too dry a soil will result in absolute failure to germinate the fern spores, and this requires close watching on the part of the grower during the periods of strong firing that we are likely to experience at this season. Keeping the plunging material moist between the pots will usually avoid trouble in this respect, but in case any of the pots should be found dry they may be watered from the bottom by standing them in a bucket or pan containing four or five inches of water and leaving them there until thoroughly wetted.

The frame in which the seed pots are placed should be kept close during the day, but ventilated to some extent at night to avoid the drip from condensed moisture on the glass. This drip is more troublesome in some houses than in others and as an extra precaution some growers cover the seed pots with panes of glass. These are tilted slightly to one side for the drainage of their own drip, and protect the spores from washing out with the drip from the sash above them. One of the advantages from the use of sterilized soil for fern spores is that the seeds of weeds in the soil are destroyed, a crop of weeds in the seed pots being highly objectionable from the fact that it is difficult to remove them without disturbing a number of the tiny fern prothalli or sporelings at the same time. Trouble is sometimes found in the seed pots in the form of a tiny white worm about one-fourth of an inch long, of the origin of which I am in doubt, though believing it to be one form of a small insect that sometimes appears among the spores before they are sown.

This worm burrows about just under the seedling ferns, loosening them from the surface of the soil, and also making the soil so loose that it is more difficult for the delicate root hairs that are first formed from the prothallus to attach themselves to the soil. The most effective treatment I have used for this insect is to fumigate the propagating frame with tobacco stems, using a home-made fumigating outfit for the purpose, the arrangement consisting of a good sized tin can for a fumigating pot, this being covered with a large funnel and a piece of iron pipe one inch in diameter fitted on the funnel and reaching from that point into the frame. This apparatus cost practically nothing, being made from old material, but by its use a frame thirty to forty feet long could be well filled with smoke in a very short time, and by watching the fire so as to avoid any blazing of the tobacco stems the smoke could be kept cool enough to prevent injury to the seedling ferns.

But the fumigation of such tender subjects must always be done cautiously, and it is much better to give two or three light applications than to scorch the ferns with too strong a dose. As would seem natural, the strong growing ferns usually germinate the soonest, and such as Pteris argyrea, P. quadriaurita and P. tremula will show signs of germination in little more than a week, that faint green tint on the surface of the soil, that would seem to the beginner like a coating of green scum, showing to the fern grower that the first step toward a stock of young ferns is being made; and as the prothalli begin to throw up the first frond a watch should be kept for snails. These pests have a wonderful appetite for young fern fronds, and will mow off every frond from the surface of a 6-inch pot of seedlings in a night or two.

Pricking off the seedlings in small patches or colonies onto the surface of other pots or pans that have been filled with drainage material and fine soil in much the same manner as the original pots, will be the next operation, this being frequently done just about the time the sporelings begin to make their first frond. This last is a very tedious operation, and is likely to make a man wonder how large a margin of profit there ought to be in fern growing in order to cover the outlay of time and patience that has been made during the early stages of the game. But tedious though it be, yet the raising of ferns from spores is quite a fascinating part of the florists' work, though it is quite within the bounds of probability that many of the smaller growers and dealers can purchase their stock of young ferns from one of the fern specialists for less money than they can raise them themselves. Prices are not very high for the ordinary trade species of ferns, and it is a good thing for the grower to stop long enough to reckon up the cost of the stock he is growing from time to time, and if it is found that the proverbial dollar per square foot return from his glass is easier to get by buying young stock than by raising it from seed, then it would appear the part of wisdom to let the other fellow do the growing and to become a plant merchant.

Some few of the smaller growing tree ferns are found in trade collections at times, among them Blechnum Brasiliense, Lomaria gibba and Lomaria ciliata, and also Dicksonia antarctica, the latter being perhaps the best among those four. But all these young tree ferns are rather tender in foliage, and especially so if they have been grown a little too soft by being potted in very light soil and kept too warm, the latter condition also favoring the attacks of insects, of which thrips and scale are the most troublesome. As one cannot fumigate these ferns very severely without injuring the foliage, it becomes necessary to use another method to dispose of the thrips, this being to dip the plants in a rather weak solution of rose leaf extract or some similar preparation, and then to lay the plants down to avoid the extract running down into the roots. It is also less injurious to these or any tender plants if they are protected from strong light by covering them with papers after the dipping for about twenty-four hours.

PLANT NOTES.

For Week of January 30.

Seeds.—The seeds of different annuals for the spring trade should be sown as soon as possible. Lobelia, centaurea, gymnocarpa, salvia, Kenilworth ivy, ten-week stocks, and others, are sown now. Early sown stock will make good 4-inch plants with three or four large spikes to the plant, if the first bud is pinched out. Another sowing may be made later on for 3-inch pots. As soon as the first buds begin to develop, and the single ones can be distinguished from the double, they are separated and the single ones are discarded. A hatch of petunias may also be sown now, with another lot to follow about the first of March. Sow only double varieties, for half of these will come single anyhow, which will provide plenty of the latter. Dracæna indivisa should also be sown now for next year's stock. Growing them along outside during the summer, either planted out in a frame where they can be watered, or in pots the year round, they will make fine 4 and 5-inch stock by this time next year. Place the seed boxes on a light bench, in a moderately warm house, and keep the soil moist and shaded from the sun to prevent baking until the seed commences to germinate. Mice are sometimes troublesome pests around the seed boxes; a little strychnine or arsenic mixed with oat meal, made into a paste, will soon dispose of them.

Lemon Verbenas.—Old stock plants of lemon verbenas and lantanas, which are now in a state of partial dormancy in a cool house, should be started up by applying a little more heat. If they were grown in pots during the previous summer, they will need a shift to a larger pot; in this case, renew some of the top soil, and repot in good rich soil. In a few weeks a lot of cuttings will be ready, which root easily in the sand, and will make fine 3-inch stock for the spring trade. The stock plants of lemon verbenas should be grown in pots the year through. Some growers prefer to plant them out during the summer, but lifting checks them too much, and they start into growth too late in the season to make useful cuttings. They are deciduous, but if grown in pots they will start up early and produce abundance of soft growth in plenty time for propagating for spring. Anthericums should also be shifted to a size larger pot and started to growing in a moderately cool house. Plants in 4 and 5-inch pots will make good stock for yases and veranda boxes. Cuttings taken now for next season will root easily in the sand.

Propagating.—Every square foot of the propagating bench should now be pressed into service. Cuttings of heliotrope, ageratums, lobelia, swainsonia, and dozens of other plants for the spring trade should be inserted into the sand without delay. Coleus and alternantheras, however, need not be propagated for another five weeks for hedding. The north side bench of a house, where the temperature is kept at approximately 55° at night, is a good place to propagate. A mild bottom heat will facilitate rooting, and this can easily be obtained by tacking a piece of muslin or canvas along the front edge of the bench, letting it reach the ground. If the sand is kept at a temperature 5° higher than the surrounding air, it is quite sufficient. The bench should be thoroughly whitewashed before putting in the sand, which must be absolutely clean for every fresh lot of cuttings. If plenty of sand is obtainable, it had better be changed for every lot; especially so, if fungus was present in the preceding lot. Shade them from the sun's rays several hours each day with cheese cloth shades or newspapers, and keep the sand well watered so long as a strong bottom heat is maintained. Sprinkle the cuttings at least once a day an hour or so before the shade is put on.

As the sun grows stronger a light wash on the glass overhead may become necessary. Air-slaked lime blown from the bellows every evening, beginning at one end of the house and walking backwards to the other end, making a light mist throughout the house, will keep the air pure and sweet, and will also hold fungus in check. Propagating is at once the simplest, the most interesting, and one of the most important part of the business, and should be placed in charge of a capable man with nimble fingers who is interested in keeping up the stock. Allowing everyone to take a hand at it with no one directly responsible too often results in neglect; and neglect for even a few hours at a critical time will ruin a whole bench of cuttings. G.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—Kindly warn the trade against Hobart Kruger, who claims to have worked recently for Becker Brothers, Fort Worth, Tex. He worked a few days for me and on December 22 forged three checks for $10 each, passed them on local business men, and skipped. He is about 42 years old, very round shouldered and speaks with a marked German accent. B. H. IVES.

Society for Horticultural Science.

Supplementing the report of the St. Louis meeting of the Society for Horticultural Science published in our issue of January 23, we give herewith some opinions on other matters of interest to our readers.

Dr. H. J. Webber, of the United States Department of Agriculture, told of work which the department has undertaken in breeding strains of tobacco especially adapted for growing under cloth. In the department's work in growing tobacco under shade a serious difficulty has been met with, in that the varieties thus grown produce but a small percentage of the wide leaves desired in wrapper tobacco, although the same varieties as grown in the open produce perhaps eighty-five per cent of such leaves. The department is trying to breed a strain that shall be free from this defect. Dr. Webber also told of his well known experiments in breeding hardy oranges. By hybridizing a common cultivated variety of orange and the hardy trifoliolate a new race of fruit has been obtained which has been named the citrange. These are strictly new creations, there being previously nothing in existence like them. Unfortunately the fruits are rather sour, but perhaps this objection can be overcome by later breeding. Another of the department's creations is the Tangelo, or kid-glove grape fruit, which was produced by hybridizing the Tangerine orange and the pomelo or grape fruit. This fruit is not so sour as the grape and the peculiar flavor of the grape fruit is not so much in evidence. The rind can be separated from the fruit, and the segments can be separated from each other, as in the case of the Tangerine orange. These hardy races of citrus fruits extend the range of citrus culture perhaps 200 miles further north, and Dr. Webber prophesies that in the course of the next ten or fifteen years we shall have hardy edible oranges.

Prof. S. A. Beach, of the New York experiment station, Geneva, spoke of some correlations between the size and specific gravity of the grape seed and its germination and the vigor of the resulting seedling. It was found that the seeds from large berries produced much the more vigorous seedlings than do seeds of the same size from small berries. Among seeds from berries of like size, the larger ones produced much the more vigorous seedlings and give by far the greatest percentage of germination. The smaller seeds do not germinate at all. Among seeds of the same size the denser ones give a much higher percentage of germination and produced more vigorous plants than do those less dense. Seeds of low specific gravity do not germinate at all, irrespective of size. Prof. Beach called special attention to the importance of using seeds of known parentage in investigations on the breeding of plants. In conformity with this point he used in those investigations only seeds from self-fertilized flowers.

V. A. Clark, also of the New York experiment station, Geneva, described a method of separating seeds into a series varying according to their density, using a series of uniformly varying salt solutions for this purpose. It was shown that in the cases of many seeds percentage of germination is quite definitely correlated with the specific gravity of the seed; also that with the larger part of agricultural plants the seeds of highest specific gravity produced the most vigorous plants. It was shown also that in these same cases the seeds of lowest specific gravity either do not germinate at all or else only scatteringly. Intermediate between seeds of low and of high specific gravity is a range in which seeds produce less vigorous plants. In the cases of many seeds these three ranges can be somewhat definitely delimited. One practical application of the method promises to be the fixing with greater certainty the proportion of seeds which should be discarded in cleaning seeds with a fanning mill.

By the application of the method, the percentage of germination in a sample of low germinability, as in the case of egg plant seed, can be much increased. C.

Gloire de Lorraine at Southborough, Mass.

Plant growers can safely record as one of the lessons of the recent holidays that Lorraine begonia is still in its infancy so far as its sale as a holiday plant is concerned. The quantity that will be called for each year, as people come to realize its eminent qualifications as an easy and satisfactory house plant and as growers come to understand the knacks of special treatment necessary for its cultivation in quantity at popular prices, is certain far to surpass the present facilities for its production.

The accompanying illustration shows a house of Lorraine as grown in suspended baskets and pans by Alex. Ogg, gardener for J. Montgomery Sears at Southborough, Mass. The plant lends itself most gracefully to this manner of growth and, where a grower aims to make the most of his available space, bench room for other flowering and foliage stock is not encroached upon. Mr. Ogg took the cuttings from which these plants were grown, on May 1. The plants were shifted into 8-inch pans August 1 and put on shelves around the rose house in full sun facing the south. They were given liquid stimulant daily for three months and were then suspended from the sash bars in a temperature of 55° at night and 65° during the day. Out of three hundred plants, over one hundred measured thirty to thirty-six inches through, the rest measuring from twenty-four to thirty inches.

Notes and Comments.

In a recent issue of our New York contemporary, under the head of "The Christening of a Rose," "Spectator" falls into error when he refers to The Puritan as of American origin. This is an error. Although the stock of this rose was first disseminated generally in America by the B. A. Elliott Company of Pittsburg, I believe the stock was purchased from C. F. Evans, of Rowlandville, Philadelphia, who had secured the original stock from the late Henry Bennett, of England, who is supposed to have been the raiser. I am not quite sure on this point, because I believe Mr. Bennett sometimes purchased seedling roses and sports for distribution which he had not raised. Meteor came from Mr. Bennett. It was understood at that time that it had been "thrown in" to Mr. Evans when some of his purchases were made from Mr. Bennett. Most persons who were identified with floriculture and horticulture about that time will recall the varieties raised by Mr. Bennett and which went through the hands of Mr. Evans, to-wit: William F. Bennett, Her Majesty, The Puritan, The Meteor, Mrs. John Laing, and possibly some others the names of which I cannot at this time recall. Her Majesty was disseminated jointly by C. F. Evans and Craig & Brother. (Robert and George Craig composed the firm at that time.) The other roses mentioned by "Spectator" as of American origin, The Bride, Bridesmaid and The Queen, are sports. The Bride and Bridesmaid were bud variations from the French rose Catherine Mermet. The Queen was a white sport from the pink variety, Souvenir d'un Ami. The Queen of Edgely, a pink sport from the darker colored American Beauty, is sometimes abbreviated into Queen, but more often it is called just Edgely, and should not the original name of American Beauty be Mme. Ferdinand Jamin and not Jamain? Some authorities so give it. If we would write history let it be accurate.

I am glad to see John Thorpe take to the peony arena. He could disentangle a lot of faulty nomenclature. His experience with the peony, dating back to before 1860, shows that his knowledge is not superficial but comes from the basement up. Mr. Thorpe's experience that a variety with a given number coming from Japan this year may not be the same variety next year will be echoed and re-echoed from many quarters of the globe. In the meantime let us get together and make a determined effort to straighten out these unsettled peony matters.

ANTS IN GREENHOUSES.

It is generally understood that ants do no injury to plant life in greenhouses, but they do something which is equally as bad if not worse. They protect and encourage the increase of insects which injure plants. So far as I have read entomologists, in referring to plant lice that the ants protect and secure food from, the aphides, I believe are meant; but in greenhouses it will be found that where these little ants are busy we will surely find either mealy bugs or scale insects on some of the plants near, which are not so easily gotten rid of as are the aphids. It is quite a difficult matter to get rid of ants in greenhouses when once they have secured a foothold. I saw a plan in operation at Mrs. G. B. Wilson's orchid growing establishment in West Philadelphia where Alphonse Pericat is superintendent, that for simplicity and effectiveness beat anything I had ever seen before. I noticed some vials here and there among the pots and on inquiry found they contained sweet oil and were used as traps to catch ants. There were very few of these industrious little insects in the vials because most of them had been already caught.

We have some ants in our greenhouses and I decided to try this simple remedy. We had no sweet oil, so tried olive oil in two small medicine bottles and in four or five hours I found thousands of these insects in the two bottles, dead in the oil. So far as I know this is the least trouble and the most effective way of ridding a place of ants I have yet seen or heard of. Molasses might be equally as effective in place of the oil, but is not so readily handled.

CANNAS.

When looking through the trial grounds of H. A. Dreer, with J. D. Eisele last summer at Riverton, three of the orchid cannas were compared, namely, Pennsylvania, Miss Kate Gray and King Humbert, and the last named variety seemed superior to either of the others. It would be interesting to know how the above compares with the impressions made by the same varieties under different climatic and different soil conditions.

EDWIN LONSDALE.

Lilium Giganteum From Seed.

The illustration on page 5 shows a flowering plant of Lilium giganteum from seed sown in 1891, the bulb flowering in 1902. Mr. Fischer, of the Boston park department, who raised it, says that it was at first planted in a sunny situation, where it did not thrive, but when transferred to a partially shady place it did very well. Mr. Fischer states that he found the bulb perfectly hardy at Boston, with a covering of leaves during winter. It grew to a height of six feet, but will probably attain a greater height under encouragement, as Nicholson gives the growth of this species as from four to ten feet. The seed requires a year in which to germinate.

British Trade Topics.

The traders on this side have now had time to make a retrospect. Comparisons with previous years are not favorable to 1903. The abnormal rain proved disastrous to all branches of horticulture; trade depression, following the South African war, made its impact felt. Retrenchment in many households meant the sacrifice of floral adornment, which comes under the heading of luxuries, with a resultant injury to the trade. There is no lack of activity in the preparation made to meet the demands of 1904. It may prove of interest if I allude to some of the novelties which are being introduced this year.

R. Veitch & Son, a leading West of England firm of nurserymen, besides adding to their list of vegetable seeds, have a new single petunia, Lord Courtenay, which is of a medium size, of a bright rosy pink, and has blooms which stand well. They also have a new gaillardia, Veitch's Compact strain—a useful perennial for bed or border—and a fine marguerite, The Shasta, a pure white bloom, borne on a lengthy stalk.

J. Cheal & Sons, of the Lowfield Nurseries, Crawley, Sussex, are noted exhibitors of dahlias, their singles being especially good. Their new introductions this year comprise the following singles: Princess of Wales—a good exhibition variety, with finely formed blooms of a delicate soft pink, shaded with mauve—and Darkness, a rich dark, maroon crimson, which has received an award of merit from the Royal Horticultural Society. Among the cactus section Queen is likely to be popular. This is of an attractive primrose yellow, shading off to pink at the florets.

W. J. Godfrey, of the Nurseries, Exmouth, who has won numerous honors at the autumn shows, has several new chrysanthemums of his own raising. These comprise Devonshire Hero, rich golden-yellow; Geo. W. Matthew, soft amber-yellow, with a base of cinnamon-red; and The Captain, deep crimson, with a bronze reverse.

The seedsmen, as usual, are well to the fore in offering their latest introductions. Harrison & Sons, of Leicester, have a tomato, with the original title, Just-the-thing—a cross between Holmes' Supreme and Dobbies' Champion. Chas. Sharpe & Company, Ltd., of Heaford, Lincolnshire, have a new manicrop pea, Sharpe's Aristocrat, and an improved monarch pea which have received awards from the Royal Horticultural Society. Cooper, Taber & Company of 90 Southwark street, London, have a new pea, Rivenhall Wonder, which is an improvement on Witham Wonder, but owing to the excessive dampness last year the crop was seriously damaged, and it has been found impossible to supply any seed. The firm will put down a large acreage this year to satisfy the many demands which have been received. Sutton & Sons, the king's seedsmen, Reading, are making a leading line of their new late potato, Discovery, the result of a cross made at their trial grounds in 1898. Trials made have shown the tuber to possess exceptional cropping and disease resisting powers, and it has been in great demand at 15 shillings a pound. W. W. Johnson & Son, Ltd., of Boston, Lincolnshire, have placed on the market six new sweet peas which will prove a valuable addition to this increasingly popular subject.

The year 1903 will be noteworthy for the record prices made for seed potatoes of new varieties. Sales were actually effected at figures which turned out to be three times the weight of the tubers in gold. The wide-spread loss caused by the virulent disease among the potatoes has emphasized the need of securing a disease-resisting tuber to take the places of some of the old, worn-out sorts. From the first introduction into commerce Northern Star has made good prices. A member of the firm of Isaac Poad & Sons, seed merchants, York, to-day told me they have made trials of this variety and it yielded from fifteen to twenty tons an acre, besides being a splendid disease resister. Alexander Findlay, a Scotch raiser, has scored another triumph with this potato. He has another new one, El Dorado, which has made sensational prices. In fact these have eclipsed all other prices paid for the humble tuber. At the Smithfield show in London in December, several pounds of El Dorado were sold at £150 a pound. Since then Poad & Sons and E. W. King & Sons of Coggeshall, have obtained £160 per pound for the tuber. Mr. Findlay holds forty-two cwts. of this precious potato which he is keeping for planting this year, and two of his friends have eleven pounds. Orders are being booked for supplying the seed in 1905, and high prices are ruling. El Dorado has the same parents as Northern Star, Victoria and Dan. Victoria was one parent of Champion, Magnum Bonum and many others brought into commerce in the last thirty years. The tubers are more kidney shaped than Northern Star. The flesh is white and the flavor by an expert is described as of "a full chestnut flavor." It stood the trials well last season, establishing its claim to be a thorough disease-resister.

That greater attention is being paid to potato raising in great Britain is attested by the formation of a National Potato Society. It is intended to organize trials to ascertain the best varieties, and these experiments will be kept free from any trade influence. An advisory committee of trade members will, however, deal with any commercial questions which may arise. Lord Rosebery, as a farmer, not as a politician, was elected president.

My closing note must be a mournful one, for I have to record with sincere regret the demise of two leading men in the horticultural world whose careers have ended while they were still in active manhood. I refer to J. C. Fidler and W. Horne. Mr. Fidler was the head of an important seed warehouse at Reading. For many years he devoted attention to the raising of new varieties, and he brought out several manicrop sorts which became popular and profitable. He built up an immense home and colonial trade. The average out-put of potatoes from November to April, including seed and ware, is about 300 tons a week. The South African market has been extensively supplied by the firm. Mr. Horne was the head of the firm of Horne & Sons, nurserymen and fruit growers, of Cliffe, near Rochester. Mr. Horne was a specialist in dealing with orchard pests, and he introduced the Charles Ross apple and other well known fruits. From his farm and nurseries of 250 acres fruit trees were sent to America, Canada, New Zealand, and in fact all parts of the world. An auction sale was held twice a year, when thousands of trees were distributed.

A Discussion on the Sparrow.

At the Farmers' Institute meeting in Philadelphia, January 19, a discussion arose on the sparrow. Professor Menges voiced the popular feeling of aversion and blamed the sparrow for being noisy, dirty, pugnacious, and over prolific. He accused him of eating grain instead of weeds and insects, of driving other and more useful birds away from the haunts of men. In short, he had nothing good to say of the sparrow.

G. C. Watson tried to put in a word on the other side of the question and mentioned that W. N. Craig before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston some five years ago had stated that from personal observation he knew sparrows destroyed immense numbers of tussock moths, gooseberry and currant worms, cabbage worms, grubs of various sorts, larvae of canker-worm and green aphid. He said he had numberless times examined the crops of young nestlings and found them in nearly all cases filled with insects. In answer to the claim that they destroy the buds on our fruit and shade trees he said he had made close observation in his home city, a place of 30,000 inhabitants, where sparrows swarmed and he had failed to find any evidence of the destruction claimed.

The same authority wrote Mr. Watson under date of January 18, 1904, that he had seen no cause to change his opinion of the sparrow's usefulness. He said it was being charged that the sparrow was driving away other song birds from the towns but he was quite sure that electric cars and other noisy vehicles were the real culprits in driving the more timid song-birds to solitary surroundings. He referred to the original object in introducing the sparrow to America, namely to abate the canker-worm pest. He succeeded well but the howl went up when the useful little fellow showed a natural desire for a change from the everlasting hairy caterpillar to an occasional meal of fruit or grain.

Other testimony introduced by Mr. Watson was that of Prof. John Craig, of Cornell University, who wrote under date of January 15, that in his opinion an impartial jury after weighing the findings for and against the sparrow would have to declare in his favor. He did not believe the sparrow was multiplying out of proportion in the older parts of the country. The domains of this bird are gradually widening but in the regions of his first visitations Prof. Craig had not observed that there were more than there were a few years ago. Dr. Reed, of the zoological department of Cornell agreed with Professor Craig. Dr. Reed is a close observer of birds and his opinion in this matter ought to be considered of great weight. GEO. C. WATSON.

[Paper by Percy Waterer, presented at Dalwich, Eng., January 19, 1904.]

Although most of the papilionaceous flowers are adapted to cross-fertilization, the sweet pea invariably fertilizes itself. Hence had not the specialists for years been artificially crossing it, we should have had very few varieties to-day. In fact, it had taken something like 180 years for the two or three kinds which were introduced about the year 1700 to increase to the six or seven varieties that were known in the year 1879, when, I believe, Mr. Eckford first began to interest himself in them. Some years later Mr. Burpee, of Philadelphia, introduced many of the Eckford varieties into America, where sweet pea growing has since become a great industry.

The success of the bi-centenary exhibition in 1900, was so encouraging that we now have many nurserymen giving special attention to producing new varieties, and improving existing ones. They are doing most valuable work, for it is this continual crossing and selecting, which has not only produced the bewildering number of shades of color we now have, but has also greatly increased the vigor of the plant, the texture and size of the flower, and has also been the means of making the plant more productive of bloom.

Many believe that the sweet pea has been brought to such perfection that there is scarcely any room left for further improvement. This was the opinion expressed by several members of the bi-centenary committee, when it was suggested that a national society should be formed to encourage and improve the cultivation of this popular flower. I doubt if a society would ever have been started had I not convened a meeting for that purpose, as it was in consequence of that meeting, the bi-centenary committee formed the present society. There is no doubt that the National Sweet Pea Society would be more popular were the amateur better represented. The last show held at Earl's Court was far in advance of the two previous exhibitions, although at the same time very badly attended.

Though many people may think the sweet pea too insignificant a flower to need a national society to look after its interests, yet it is more than probable that many have never seen it in its present high state of cultivation, and can therefore have no idea of the wonders that will probably be revealed in its advancement during the next few years. At present its chief qualities are fragrance, variety of color, length of stem, abundance of bloom, lightness, gracefulness and cheapness. It also travels well, lasts well, can be made to grow in almost any soil or situation, and flowers for months. Notwithstanding all these qualifications, there is plenty of room for improvement in form, variety of form, staying properties in the color, and further fixing.

There are already two good forms, the hoed upright standard of Black Knight, and the hooded standard and wings of which Lady Grisel Hamilton is a good example. Then we have every degree of hooding between these two, which to my mind is not desirable. There are also the erect and reflexing standard, of which Countess Spencer is an example, and one or two varieties which are picotee edged. I hope to see in the near future such an improvement in these that they may need a class to themselves. There was one variety named Snapdragon, sent out by a firm in Philadelphia, very much resembling that familiar flower, and having for its chief quality a long, stout stem, but the trade here took a dislike to it. I admit that it was not an acquisition as presented.

*While there is much information in this paper of interest to all readers, it should be remembered that the cultural directions refer to the English climate.—Ed.

but with constant perseverance it might have resulted in a new type. Some varieties have a tendency to become double, but I think in this respect they are like the cineraria; the flowers lose their charm and will therefore never become popular.

When the Cupid, or dwarf variety, was first introduced, it was disliked on account of the shedding of its buds. I think this defect was caused by over-watering, for coming from the hot, dry climate of California, where it was produced, it required less moisture, and the fact that it does exceedingly well upon rockwork goes far to prove this. It is grown much more freely in America than here, can now be had in almost any shade of color, and will no doubt in time become popular. Again we have the bush variety, which is a cross between the old style and Cupid. When this class is more improved and there is a greater variety of color, it will be very welcome to those who experience a difficulty in procuring the tall boughs now necessary [in training].

As regards the improvement of form, the wings should overlap the keel, forming a conical center to the flower. This would not only improve its appearance, but be a further protection to the pollen, and consequently there would be less risk of the variety getting accidentally crossed. As to other forms, they might be fimbriated, scalloped, crested and hirsute. Too much importance has been given to the question of more flowers being produced upon a single stem. Even now in the case of fours sometimes, either the first bloom is over or the top one is not fully developed. Where a decorative effect is wanted a few buds can always be added.

I do not propose to enter into all the little details of cultivation, as most of these are known to you, and if not they may be found in the catalogues of the sweet pea specialists, but I certainly recommend early planting, as it is so necessary that the plants should take good hold of the ground before making vine, and they will only do so in cool weather. I find from notes taken last year, that my plants only grew two inches between April 20 and May 25, when they were only six inches high, but all that time they were making root. We were then favored with some good growing weather, and by June 1 they measured 13½ inches; by the 7th, 22½ inches; and by the 15th, 28½ inches, thus having grown 22½ inches in twenty-one days, and making vine in some cases three-fourths of an inch broad. They would not have made this rapid, strong growth had they not been thoroughly well rooted.

It is very essential that the ground should be deeply trenched, and this should be done some time before planting in order that it may settle down firmly. Many make a rule of changing the ground each year, but I think it is quite unnecessary. When I paid a visit to the best known sweet pea nurseryman in 1900, I found the peas had been grown for years upon the same ground, his plan being to alter the position of the rows, and their direction each season, so that with the exception of a very small percentage the plants did not occupy the same spot but once in four years.

Again when I was in the Midlands last year, I was invited to look over the sweet pea farm of a very successful nurseryman, and was astonished by his stating that he had planted some of the peas as nearly as possible upon the same spot they had occupied the year previous. His opinion is that the germs or bacteria which feed the roots directly with nitrogen are already in the soil prepared to go on with their work, it only being necessary to replace the phosphates, potash, etc., that the previous crop had consumed. I can only add that the plants gave excellent results, bearing some of the finest blooms I have seen during the past season. It is of course very necessary to change the seed occasionally when growing upon the same ground.

The hoe is far superior to the watering pot; it lets the air and warmth into the soil and also keeps the moisture that is there from evaporating. If the surface is constantly hoed very little watering at the roots will be required in an ordinary season, but the plants will be greatly benefited by syringing over the foliage on warm nights when there is an absence of dew. In a dry season the sweet pea can be grown to a greater state of perfection if the plants are six or eight inches below the surface, the fertilizing manures being well below that. They should be gradually earthed up until the surface is nearly level, using the top spit, which should be free from manures, as a mulch. We are often told that the pea makes a very shallow root, but in 1901—which was an exceptionally favorable season—I found the roots had gone down as far as the ground had been trenched, that being a good three feet. In wet seasons the plants do better nearer the surface as the bacteria do not work at any depth in cold wet soil.

The cause of the seed not germinating is sometimes attributable to its being sown too deep in heavy wet ground. Another cause of failure is owing to the incrustation of the soil, the young seedling having insufficient strength to push its way through. Natural manures are preferable to artificial, especially in a liquid form, when the plants are making rapid growth. Nitrate of soda given very sparingly as soon as the plants show through will greatly benefit them, but it should not be used in cold, wet weather.

The following are the best varieties in the order given:

White—Dorothy Eckford, Blanche Burpee, Sadie Burpee.
Pale yellow—Hon. Mrs. Kenyon, Lady Ormsby Gore, Mrs. Eckford.
Orange—Miss Willmott, Lady Marie Currie, Gorgeous.
Blush—Duchess of Sutherland.
Pink—Prima Donna, Lovely, Countess of Lathom.
Scarlet—Scarlet Gem (new).
Crimson—King Edward VII, Salopian, Mars.
Cerule—Coccinea.
Rose or carmine—Lord Rosebery, Prince of Wales, Lord Kenyon, Her Majesty.
Claret—Duke of Westminster, Duke of Clarence.
Magenta—Captivation, Calypso.
Maroon—Black Knight, Othello.
Blue—Navy Blue, Captain of the Blues, Emily Eckford.
Mauve—Dorothy Tennant, Admiration.
Lavender—Lady Grisel Hamilton, Countess of Radnor, Lady Nina Balfour.
Bicolor—Triumph, Prince Edward of York, Jennie Gordon.
Striped or flaked—America, Gaiety, Senator, Mrs. Chamberlain.
Fancy—Lottie Hutchins, Gracie Greenwood.

Picotee edged—Maid of Honor, Lottie Eckford, Golden Gate.

Sadie Burpee is a hooded variety, and therefore should not be exhibited under that name with an erect standard, as I have often seen it shown. Scarlet Gem is a great acquisition, it being very much nearer the color its name implies than anything yet sent out, but it may not find favor with a few faddists, as at present it only bears two flowers upon a stem, although, for my part, I prefer two good flowers to four poor ones. Gorgeous must be shaded, otherwise the flowers soon scorch. My variety of Navy Blue is grown from seed I obtained direct from America in 1899, when it was first sent out, and is very superior to that generally grown in this country.

The best eighteen varieties that have been well established are:

Dorothy Eckford, Hon. Mrs. Kenyon, Navy Blue, Dorothy Tennant, Prince of Wales, Lord Kenyon, Blanche Burpee, Prima Donna or Lovely, Lady Grisel Hamilton, Miss Willmott, Triumph, Salopian, King Edward VII, Coccinea, Black Knight, Lord Rosebery, Prince Edward of York, America.

If a striped one is not required, grow Captain of the Blues, or Bolton's Pink, instead of America. Countess Spencer and Mrs. Knights Smith are two new varieties of exceptional merit that will be sent out this year, and should be grown by all. Robert Bolton, Werton, Carnforth and Marchioness of Cholmondeley are four varieties I saw shown last year, and they seemed to me to promise well.

My plan is to sow the seeds in pots the first week in February in a cold house, excluding frost, and placing five seeds in a 6-inch. I then remove them to a cold frame about the first week in March, and place a few twigs in the pots to keep the plants erect. After the first week in April, as soon as the ground is in good condition, I plant them out in the open. Under this treatment they generally show the first buds about the beginning of June. I think these dates are roughly right for my district, as self-sown seed comes to bud just about that time in an ordinary season, but mine is a particularly cold and late situation.

In favorable positions seed may be sown in the open ground late in the autumn, and if they escape the slugs the plants will be very strong, and give a greater quantity of blooms. Ten to twenty degrees of frost in the winter does not injure them. The sweet pea under good cultivation has very few enemies. The slug is troublesome in the early stage, and sometimes the tomtit attacks the flowers and seed pods. I have known it to strip off one side of the pod and take the center of each seed almost as soon as they were formed. Aphid is rarely seen upon healthy plants, but after a spell of unseasonable weather, a washing with some insecticide is advisable as soon as the conditions for growing are again favorable. Some growers have been complaining of a fungus disease called Ascochyta pest, or pea spot, which most likely is caused by overwatering and sourness of the soil.

One of the most perplexing problems, in regard to sweet peas, is their not coming true, and this is much more prevalent in the newer varieties. The reason may be that as they have now become so popular, and the demand for new varieties is so much greater, they are sent out before they have had time to become properly fixed. I say this because I find that seeds sent out by the same firm come true in some gardens, and quite the reverse in others, and I conclude that where they come true the conditions happened to be much the same as existed where the seed was produced. This, however, will never be corrected while the present competition exists, and new varieties are sent out at such ridiculously low prices in comparison to the vast amount of skill and patience needed in raising them. To some extent it may be accounted for by the tomtit tearing the buds open and exposing the pistil, or it is possible that a variety of bee—Bombus muscorum—is more prevalent now than formerly. I saw it busily at work upon two occasions, once in 1901 and again in 1902, both days being very hot and bright.

The great naturalist, Charles Darwin, mentions this bee under the heading Plum sativum. He says: "I have observed the flowers for the last thirty years, and in all this time have only thrice seen bees of the proper kind at work (one of them being Bombus muscorum), such as were sufficiently powerful to depress the keel, so as to get the undersides of their bodies dusted with pollen. These bees visited several flowers, and could hardly have failed to cross-fertilize them. Hive bees and other small kinds sometimes collect pollen from old and already fertilized flowers, but this is of no account. The rarity of the visits of efficient bees to this exotic plant is, I believe, the chief cause of the varieties so seldom intercrossing."

W. Early, in Nature, 1872, states he once saw a bee visiting the flowers of Lathyrus odoratus and supposed that on that occasion they would be intercrossed. The bee (Bombus muscorum) alights upon the keel in such a position that in pressing it down the hairy side of the style—that is, the left side as you look at the flower—always comes in contact with its body whilst in the act of extracting the nectar from the base of the wings. I have seen many other varieties of bees, including the bumble bee, taking nectar, but they always work between the wing and the standard, and are quite impartial as to which side they enter.

The production of improved varieties and new forms must remain largely in the hands of the trade, but there may be a few amateurs enthusiastic enough to work at it, in which case it would be better to work by selection rather than by hybridizing, unless they have plenty of space at their disposal, as a large number of trials are necessary. There are advantages and disadvantages in hybridizing and crossing sweet peas as compared with other plants. For instance, a new chrysanthemum, once obtained, can be increased by bud propagation without further trouble; but the sweet pea, being an annual, and therefore only capable of reproduction by seed, requires to be grown some years under the same conditions until it becomes fixed. When this has once been attained, it has an advantage over many other annuals on account of its being a plant that is self-fertilizing and resists cross-fertilizing. It is also capable of reproducing itself for many years without the least deterioration, whereas the chrysanthemum is very often impaired in quality and constitution in a few years. As an instance of this, that glorious variety, Sunflower—sent out in 1888—ceased to exist some years ago. Therefore, those who give their time to improving sweet peas have the satisfaction of knowing that although their work takes much longer to complete, the result of their labor will long outlive the work of bud propagation.

The following few examples will show how necessary it is to fix a variety before it is sent out. On August 4, 1901, I crossed Coccinea with Salopian (Coccinea being the seed-bearing plant), and produced an improved Prince of Wales, which I showed, amongst others, at the Drill Hall, July 8, 1902. Out of five seeds sown of this variety I got—in 1903—an improved Coccinea, finer in flower, and much more robust in habit than the original has ever grown with me. The other four plants came true, but not so good as in the previous year. I also crossed on the same date Firefly with Sadie Burpee, the result being a fine, bold flower, good, erect standard, and long, stout stem. The color, however, was not good, it being dull purple, with a much darker purple edge. The seed was black, and I exhibited the flower at Holland Park, July 25, 1902. Three—AM. FLORIST.

Greenlee Out of three seeds of this variety two came true, and one a perfect white Firefly, having the reflexed standard and short stem characteristic of that variety, but taking the color of Sadie Burpee both in the flower and seed. The seed changed to fawn, or, as it is called in the trade, white. On July 21, 1901, I crossed Othello with Royal Rose, which resulted in a flower between Duke of Westminster and Black Knight, and it was from this variety that I raised the scarlet one shown at the Temple last year. Again Duke of Westminster crossed with Miss Wilmott gave an Improved Duke of Westminster in 1902, but resulted in 1903 in three shades of pink.

A large number of crosses result in shades of purple, and many others result, after the second generation, in anything and everything but a resemblance to either of their grandparents or the first offspring. Yet in some instances the seed has always come true each year, but until they have been grown upon the same ground for six or seven years, I doubt if they would do so grown elsewhere and under other conditions. As the anthers of the sweet pea shed their pollen before the flower expands, it is necessary to emasculate the female, or seed-bearing parent, just before the pollen is free. I have found the stigma in the best stage to take the pollen of the male parent two days later. The work of hybridizing and crossing should be done under glass, otherwise the operator must be prepared for a large number of failures, especially in a season such as we have just experienced.

It is curious that although the pods set so much more freely under glass, yet, so far as my experience shows, the seed lacks the germinating power of that grown outside. It is possible that this is owing to the seed being overripe. In a trial of sixty seeds in twenty varieties harvested under glass and sown November 22, 1902, only thirty-five had germinated December 13, whereas of sixty seeds in twenty varieties harvested outside—and in such an unfavorable season—and sown upon the same date, fifty-five had germinated December 13, that being three weeks in each case. Another trial upon the same dates of 1902 and 1903 seed resulted in twenty-nine seeds germinating out of thirty in each case. This tends to show that the germinating powers were not impaired by keeping. A fortnight later I made a trial of 1901 seed, raising twenty-eight plants out of thirty seeds, but I think the seed requires to be kept in a very dry place with an even temperature, or the result will be otherwise.

It is a mistake always to select the largest seed, as I have found that small and medium sized seed germinate better and gives just as good results as exceptionally fine seed in point of size. Minute, deformed seed often germinate freely, although the plants are usually very weak to start with, and it is quite possible that amongst these may be found the improvement that is wanted.

Now, in conclusion, remember—
The deeper you trench,
The finer the pea;
The thinner you sow,
The stronger they'll be.
Keep using the hoe,
And take it from me:
The more blossom out,
The more you will see.

THE RETAIL TRADE

A Cleveland Wedding Decoration.

In the decorations for the Tod-McBride nuptials at St. Paul's church, Cleveland, January 14, Easter lilies and American Beauty roses were used. On each side of the altar were tall banks of palms, and back of these large electric lights (such as are used on suburban cars). Intermingled with the palms were tall standards, showered with Easter lilies. The light through the palms was beautiful. Windows in the altar were banked with Easter lilies. On each side of the church were tall trees of American Beauty. Seventy-five extra lights were put in the chandeliers, and all of these were beautifully showered with Easter lilies and American Beauties. The decoration was planned and executed by Mr. Smith, of Smith & Fetters.

Hints on House Decoration.

In a house decoration the most impressive effects are produced by confining a distinct color to each room, and if the individuality can be carried still further and special features of form and character be followed as well, the result will be excellent. Schemes of decoration depend for their success very much on individual taste and feeling. The style of architecture and furniture of a room, the colors and figures in floor coverings and wall paper and other accessories will be carefully noted by the intelligent florist, and it will be his special endeavor to make his work harmonious with these surroundings. The old style of loading a room with flowers of promiscuous colors was, perhaps, in keeping with the stage of development which the art of floral adornment had reached at the time, but there is, to-day, no room for the florist who is not capable of better things.

Some customers come to the surface, occasionally, who insist on the florist's doing absurd things and tell you, in response to your polite protest, that if you cannot do it there are others who can. Fortunately, however, this class is not so often met with as formerly and the cases are infrequent where a lady cannot be induced to accord with the florist's views in regard to effects, provided he is able to explain them in a refined and intelligent manner.

To make a beautiful mantel decoration, cut a board the size of the mantel and mound it up with moss the day before it is to be used. A strip of rubber cloth under and behind it will prevent any possibility of damage from dampness or otherwise. Small glass vases can be concealed in the moss for the reception of such cut flowers as are to be used, and the dressing of the bank with small ferns and other plants, plunged in the moss, out of pots, is the work of but a few minutes for a clever workman.

A word about the helpers. The manners and appearance of the employes whom you have as assistants in carrying plants and similar work in connection with a decorative job should not be overlooked. Have the men leave their pipes at home. It may seem absurd to some that such advice should be printed, but it is inspired by experience, that "best of all teachers."

New York.

While a little improvement can be discerned in the cut flower trade it is still true the volume of business is not what it should be at this season, especially considering that it is a short season. On some few things values have braced up slightly, but on the general list there is not much advancement. Some lines sell out a little closer than they did during the early part of the month. Among the noticeably good flowers offered are Rosa Mundi tulips at Traendly & Schenck's and Raynor's and Liberty roses with stems three to four feet long at Young & Nugent's. Frank Millang finds the Bertha Rath one of the most popular of white carnations. Henry Rath, who raised it, sells no cuttings, simply raising enough to stock his own houses. White lilac of splendid quality is abundant. Some of the double varieties are exceedingly fine and bring good prices. Of bulbous stock such as Trumpet major narcissus, campernelles, tulips and lily of the valley there is an over-supply and much unsold material of this class as well as of violets is held from day to day in wholesalers' hands.

A few blooms of F. R. Pierson's new crimson carnation Daheim have been seen here. It is a remarkably fine flower, the blooms splendidly built up and in size and sturdiness of flower and stem might not unworthily be called a crimson Lawson. The color—crimson slightly shaded with maroon—is very brilliant in both sunlight and artificial light and the flowers have demonstrated excellent keeping qualities. The growers say that one of its best points is the rapidity with which the buds develop on the plant. It is to be introduced this spring and promises to be to the crimson class what Lawson is in dark pink and Enchantress in light pink.

Besides carnation night February 8 will be ladies' night at the New York Florists' Club. Mazzetti, the caterer, has been ordered to look out for the ladies. Judging from the number of entries already received from exhibitors it will be a great affair. All members are invited to bring their lady friends and anybody else interested in flowers. Among the many entries already received for the carnation exhibition are those of the Chicago Carnation Company and the J. D. Thompson Carnation Company, of Joliet, Ill. Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., is expected to read a paper.

Siebrecht & Son furnished a fine decoration last week at the A. P. Stokes mansion. There were twenty tables to accommodate 125 guests. The main table, fifteen feet in diameter, and the others, each five feet, were adorned with cactleyas, lœlias and phalœnopses. The ball room was decorated exclusively with American Beauty, the morning room Bridesmaid, the parlor with Bride and the red room with Liberty roses.

Simon Rodh, the ribbon expert, 40 West Twenty-eighth street, reports a largely augmented business this season. Mr. Rodh's cleverness in matching the exact tints of flowers in general use and the fidelity with which florists' tastes in this line are adhered to are his strong points.

A. J. Scott, son of the well-known grower of West Brighton, Staten Island, met with a serious coasting accident, being badly injured about the head. The entire party of coasters, fifteen in number, was thrown from the sled and all were more or less badly hurt.

Theodore Paltz, an aged florist of East New York, was found dead in his shanty on New Lots avenue January 20. He lived alone and was regarded as eccentric.

George Vocke, an old Astoria grower, has given up business and taken charge of some greenhouses for Admiral Rogers at the Navy Yard.

Percy Richter, salesman for the E. G. Asmussen estate, has been seriously ill at his home in Elizabeth but is now reported as recovering.

Gustav C. C. Schrader of Elmhurst is an enthusiastic automobilist. He takes a daily spin on Hoffman boulevard with his family.

A. S. Burns, Jr., of Spring Valley, is sending to Raynor some Enchantress carnations of remarkable quality.

P. Watson, of Orange, is bringing to the market some roses of very superior quality.

Visitors: Jac. M. Jansen, Hillegom, Holland; George Hannan, Forest Hills, Boston; Carl Jurgens, Newport, R. I.; F. R. Mathison, Waltham, Mass.

Chicago.

The second consignment of arctic weather was delivered this week, just as if the growers and shippers did not have enough conspiring forces to contend with. Practically no stock came into the market Monday and it was not until Tuesday that the slightest trace of activity was instilled into the market. The week has not been a good one from the dealer's point of view. Curtailed receipts in the better grades of all cut flowers, indifferent quality, unsatisfactory prices and a general apathetic condition in the ranks of the buyers in the country and city is a quad of forces in fatal conspiracy which keep the wholesalers figuring pretty hard these days. There was quite a brisk carnation movement on during the middle of the week, induced by the McKinley carnation day. The heaviest calls came from the Buckeye state, and red was the much desired color. But the movement was short-lived and the carnation situation hardly shows a perceptible improvement over that of last week. Roses have not been doing so badly. The top notch grade of Beauty are at a premium, but the lesser grades do not find much favor with the buyer. Bulbous stock persistently remains a surfeit, and from the looks of the stock constantly jamming itself into the market no one is able to discern a rift in the clouds. Nice tulips are coming in but prices are not half way respectable say the dealers. The week has been of the spasmodic order, some days bringing a brisk movement, others nothing doing. In spite of the comparative quiet, some wholesalers report a satisfactory shipping business. The cut flower business locally promises to open up soon, the effects of the Iroquois fire, etc., having run their course.

The second district meeting of the Florists' Club was held, according to schedule, on the west side, January 28. There was a good attendance and those present showed much interest in the proceedings. Melville G. Holding, of the Sprague-Smith Company, presented an instructive paper on "Greenhouse Glass," and replied in a very practical manner to numerous questions on the subject. Mr. Young, who was to have read a paper on "Pipes and Fittings," was unable to be present owing to illness. C. B. Read made a few remarks on "Paints, Oils and Putty," and John Thorpe gave a short address. On conclusion of business, supper was served. An exhibition of carnations, roses, violets and bulbous stock will be held February 17, and premiums will be awarded to the amount of $100. Varieties already awarded prizes this season will not be entitled to premiums at this exhibition. P. J. Hauswirth has been appointed manager, and the exhibits should be addressed to F. F. Benthley, 35 Randolph street, Chicago, all charges prepaid.

It takes more than one severe winter season to teach many shippers the proper manner to pack flowers for long distance shipping, with the mercury hiding in the bulb. A number of important carnation and violet shipments reached this market in a frozen state the early part of the week. Some were lightly packed in paper boxes. A few additional layers of newspapers will save many a dollar these cold days.

The Chicago Carnation Company, of Joliet, Ill., exhibited a number of leading carnations at the Flower Market Saturday afternoon, January 23. In the display were fine blooms of the prize winner, Fiancee, Dorothy Whitney, Harlowarden, Crusader and Reliance. Manager James Hartshorne was here also, booking cutting orders.

Wm. R. Mannheimer, aged 23, a son of Julius Mannheimer, of 3812 Prairie avenue, committed suicide this week at St. Louis. He left Chicago about a week ago, saying that he was going to Memphis, Tenn., to secure work. He was at one time an employe of John Mangel, and was well known by local florists.

Leonard Kill wears a bandage on his hand, the memento of last Monday evening's bowling seance. L. forgot the key to his residence, and in executing the step-ladder stunt to the transom he fell, spraining his good right arm.

George Scott, with the E. F. Winterson Company, is another example of the versatility of florists. In a match ice skating race with Wineberg, a prominent local professional, this week, he emerged a good second.

The George Wittbold Company has added some bulbous stock to the stock in the Flower Growers' Market. Everything in this line is exceptionally well grown.

The E. F. Winterson Company reports a brisk shipping business the fore part of the week. Some remarkably well grown freesias with long stems were seen here this week.

The Chicago factory and warehouse of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company was totally destroyed by fire Friday night, Jan. 22. The loss is estimated at $175,000.

Fire broke out in the Masonic Temple January 23. T. D. Mosconesotes, the State street retailer, sustained losses to the extent of about $100.

A. H. Schneider will erect a range of greenhouses in Concordia cemetery this spring. He has leased about ten acres of land for that purpose.

Poehlmann Brothers Company is handling a fine line of American Beauty roses. Their Bride and Bridesmaid are in good crop.

Mrs. Alex. Newett, wife of the wide-awake manager at J. B. Deamud's, has been quite ill for several weeks.

Charles Kronenberger, of Peter Reinberg's greenhouses, was married Tuesday to Miss Blanche Smith.

John Thorpe was called to La Crosse, Wis., January 27, for consultation in some important public park work.

E. C. Amling enjoyed a good business this week, notwithstanding the adverse weather conditions.

Fred. Kingel, of Peter Reinberg's, is again at his desk after several weeks' illness.

Benthley & Company are now prepared to meet a heavy cutting rush in all lines.

A visitor this week was J. Stern, of Philadelphia, Pa.

Philadelphia.

Good roses are scarce, very scarce, and poor ones, too, and one has to be on the spot when the boxes are opened these mornings if his orders are to be anything like filled. Most of the growers say their houses are off crop, and this with the dull weather is blamed for the scarcity. Supply seems to keep pace with the demand, however, for there is but little doing, the social season being the lightest in several years. Beauty has been particularly scarce, and commission men find it hard to get half enough to fill shipping orders. S. S. Pennock had an order for two hundred specials one day this week. Liberty is also much in demand. Meteor, which held the lead so long, now makes a sorry showing against its younger rival, as there are so many dark and ball-headed flowers that are not saleable. But a rose that stands the pace for ten years is a good one, and Meteor will not soon be forgotten. Violets are more plentiful, the Californias coming in well and all other kinds in larger quantities. Sweet peas are now constantly in stock and welcome, particularly the white ones in funeral work. Mignonette is at its best. Tulips can be had in all colors and daffodils are seen in quantity, but all single. No doubles as yet.

L. K. Peacock is building three large greenhouses and a propagating house and putting in a 60 horse power boiler at his Atco, N. J., place. One hundred and twenty acres of dahlias, planted closer, is to be the extent of his garden next summer, an increase of some forty acres.

Robert Scott & Son are sending fine gardenias to S. S. Pennock. The stock at the nursery looks fine and there will be a good supply until after Easter. Fifty cents each is the price, and they are cleared up every day.

The field day at Horticultural hall last week was like the play of Hamlet with the chief actor left out, as Chief Lonsdale was unable to be present, being kept indoors by a bad cold.

George Anderson is cutting some choice Beauty and Liberty. His Easter lilies are still in 3-inch pots with shoots only two to three inches high, but he is confident of success.

Jacob D. Eisele's oldest daughter has been very ill with typhoid fever but is now on the way to recovery.

Leo Niessen reports a fine shipping trade. His special Bridesmaid and Liberty are fine.

Hustling John MacIntire, of Ed. Reid's staff, is on the sick list. K.

COLUMBUS, O.—E. Metzmaier has a fine white sport of the Lawson carnation, which he expects to propagate and grow extensively.

Washington.

There is a steady demand for good stock in orchids, roses, valley and tulips, all of which enter largely into decorations for dinners and similar events. Roses are generally off crop and prices are firm, American Beauty in special instances going to $15 per dozen. First-class Liberty have sold for $12 per dozen in some instances, Bride and Bridesmaid from $2 to $4 per dozen. A few gardenias are on the market at $1 each. Tulips are in demand and retail at fifty to seventy-five cents per dozen. A few single daffodils have appeared at $1.25 per dozen. Violets are more plentiful and of better quality than a month ago. Louis Loose and J. R. Freeman are now showing good violets grown at their respective ranges, and all the dealers have good stocks which, on account of the mild weather of the past week, have sold well.

The visitors to the botanical gardens can find many flowering novelties that are worthy of mention. In one of the houses a Bougainvillæa speciosa, now in full bloom, has been trained along overhead tile. It is now the full length of the house, about seventy-five feet. As it seems to be growing fast it will now have to "double." The purple and white flowers of the Franciscea latifolia are also very pretty, peeping out from among the tall palms and pausies. Superintendent Smith has a large collection of orchids, a house of roses and other plants in great variety.

In the store of a local dealer I recently noticed a bunch of Fair Maid, a light pink carnation, sent out several years by Albert Roper, of Tewkesbury, Mass. It is a free bloomer and good keeper and deserves a place among the better varieties.

John Brown is growing fine carnation stock. His Prosperity, Lawson, Cressbrook and other varieties have all the points of good carnations. S. E.

Pittsburg.

Fears of a record-breaking flood did not materialize after the few days' thaw, yet it was near enough to warrant alarming predictions. The passing of the tremendous accumulations of ice was a spectacular sight. No loss is reported by the firms whose cellars were invaded by water, which included Breitenstein & Flemm, L. I. Neff, Pittsburg Cut Flower Company, Mrs. Williams, Geddes & Blind Brothers and W. C. Beckert. The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Company was unable to ship its stock to the city January 23, as the railroad was under water. J. L. Wyland could not ship by rail last Saturday, but made his delivery by wagon. On the return trip home his horse dropped dead.

Business continues quiet. Cold weather has returned. Roses are much improved and more plentiful. Carnations are very fine and moving nicely. Yellow tulips are particularly good, as are baby primulas and lilacs. Lilies are scarce; lily of the valley plentiful and good; yellow narcissi are few; violets moving nicely.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club will give a "smoking raucher" February 2. A number of entertaining features are on the programme.

"Bill" Clark and "Tom" Ulam have engaged Victor Herbert to coach them for Tuesday evening.

Randolph & McClements had the decoration for the banquet given by the east end board of trade. E. L. M.

St. Louis.

Trade conditions in St. Louis show an improvement. Roses are scarce. Bride and Bridesmaid are quoted at $3 to $8. Carnations sell at $1 to $4 with sufficient quantities coming in. Ferns show a slight increase, present prices being $2 to $2.50 per 1,000. Violets are plentiful, but owing to increased calls quotations are somewhat higher—60 cents to 75 cents per 100. Paper White narcissi, stevias, lilies of the valley and Roman hyacinths are abundant.

The body of William Mannheimer, a florist from Chicago in search of work, was found by two men January 26 in a retiring room at Union Station. He had swallowed carbolic acid. He died on the way to the city hospital. In a pocket was found a memorandum book in which was written the name William R. Mannheimer, 3812 Prairie avenue, Chicago. H. G. Berning said Mr. Mannheimer had been at his place seeking work.

Mrs. H. G. Berning, who has been quite ill for some time, took a sudden turn for the worse and is in a critical condition. Physicians said January 26 there was small hope of recovery. F. K. B.

Indianapolis.

Two days of heavy rain last week brought on a very disagreeable experience to E. A. Nelson. Part of his place was entirely under water and one of his rose benches settled, carrying the purlin supports with it, which caused a number of sash bars and a good number of lights to break. His boiler cellar was flooded and for a time it looked as if the fires would be extinguished. The damages amount to many hundred dollars. It is said tampering with a sewer in that neighborhood caused the mischief.

The Indianapolis Flower and Plant Company is cutting exceptionally fine roses at present in spite of its recent wood stove experience. Whenever anything happens to your heating system remember that the Indianapolis Flower and Plant Company can help you out with a couple dozen wood stoves and a mile or two of stove pipe.

Frank Harritt, of Broad Ripple, sold his grounds and greenhouses to Wm. F. Dowe for $6,500. Mr. Dowe is a graduate of Purdue University and has the reputation of being a good grower. Mr. Harritt's plans for the future are not yet completed. He is considering going into the retail flower business.

H. W. Rieman has purchased a fine two-horse decoration wagon and a team of five-year-old grays. The horses are so perfectly matched that Henry himself can't tell which is which. Mr. Rieman has a strain of cyclamen which is a great acquisition.

H. Junge has been appointed on the committee for trees and shrubs of the Indianapolis Civic Improvement Association.

E. C. Amling pronounces Smith & Young's violets equal in flower and better in stem than the Hudson river stock.

John Bertermann is keeping an eye on farm lands.

John Heidenreich is bulb king for this locality.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The Western New York Horticultural Society held its annual convention here January 27-28.

GOVANSTOWN, Md.—The greenhouse of C. H. Paterson was partially destroyed by fire on January 9. The blaze was caused by the overturning of a furnace.

OBITUARY.

Henry Weber.

Henry Weber, senior member of the firm of H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., died January 21, after an illness of several months. The funeral and interment occurred January 23 at "Seelheim," his late residence in the suburbs of Oakland, Md. The following particulars of Mr.

The Late Henry Weber.

Weber's career are reprinted from our issue of February 17, 1900:

"The subject of this sketch had his own little garden in the Province of Hesse Hassle, Germany, long before he had reached his fourteenth year and completed the customary course in the government schools, when he was apprenticed to a florist, becoming foreman before he was nineteen, at which age he entered the British army, serving in the Crimean war in 1854 and 1855. During the following ten years he was stationed at various points in Asia, Africa, Australia and New Zealand, meeting many thrilling adventures, particularly in the Hot-tentot war. In 1865 Mr. Weber came to America and, with his brother John, who had preceded him, embarked in market gardening at Mt. Savage, Md. At the end of five years he sold out to his brother and removed to Cumberland, combining floriculture with gardening. In 1879 he bought a tract of swampy land near Oakland, much against the advice of his associates, redeemed it and made it a veritable garden. It was his intention to grow cauliflower and celery for the eastern markets and his greenhouses were only designed for meeting local demands, but it was only a few years before he became alive to the possibilities of carnation culture and for the past nine years he has given particular attention to this specialty. He was among the first to adopt modern methods and believes that the improvement has only fairly begun. He takes great pleasure in the raising of seedlings and has achieved much success in this line. As a result of his efforts we have Genevieve Lord, now being disseminated, and in 1901 several more fine sorts will be put on the market, all seedlings of 1896, among them 110, a large white; No. 30, a bright pink, and No. 126, a sweet-scented, long-stemmed crimson. He has also a number of later seedlings which have not yet passed through the period of testing. Sub-irrigation, side-ventilation and indoor culture are problems in which Mr. Weber takes much interest and he believes they will soon be recognized as essential to the best development of the carnation."

Charles Evans.

Charles Evans, prominent among Boston rose growers for many years, died at his home in Watertown, Mass., on Sunday evening, January 24. Several days previous, returning from the city, he had slipped and was slightly cut on the leg in alighting from a car. Blood poisoning eventually set in and caused his death. Mr. Evans was born in Montgomeryshire, Wales, March, 1838. When a young man he entered the employ of the Right Rev. Bishop Judge, serving as gardener for many years. He emigrated to Canada in May, 1868, but immediately left Canada for the United States, where his first position was as gardener for the senior member of the Ames Plow Company, at Worcester, Mass. After one year he went to the Tucker greenhouses in Worcester, and from there he engaged in 1870 with Stephen Dow, of Woburn, where he built and superintended the most modern greenhouse establishment in New England for eight years. He went to England in 1880 to engage in rose growing there on the American plan but two years later returned to Massachusetts, where he built the place at Watertown, which he conducted successfully till the time of his death. He leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter.

The Late Charles Evans.

Mr. Evans was of most amiable and kindly disposition and always companionable and popular with his associates. Last year he became a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company and participated enthusiastically in the reception given to the Honorable Artillery Company of London.

Cold Storage for Lilies.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What temperature will suit to keep in cold storage Lilium longiflorum, L. giganteum and lily of the valley?

CALIFORNIA COLD STORAGE KEEPER.

A temperature of 34° will best suit Lilium longiflorum and L. giganteum in cold storage. Lily of the valley, however, should be kept as nearly as possible to 28°. G.

Hydrangeas for Decoration Day.

What is the best time for bringing in hydrangeas for Decoration day?

E. G. B.

Leave the hydrangeas for Decoration day in a cool place until March 1. It is best to place them on a light bench now, holding them on the dry side so as to induce a slow, stocky growth. After March 1 the temperature can be raised to 50° or 55° at night, which will flower them in time for Memorial day. No hard forcing is required thus late in the season. G.

Tulips With Long Stems.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What method shall
I use to grow tulips with long stems?
What varieties will suit best for this?

GREEN GROWER.

No trouble need be had in getting long stemmed tulips at this season of the year.
For the first two weeks after bringing them into heat they should be placed in a dark place; under a warm bench with a piece of canvas or other heavy material tacked in front to provide absolute darkness will do as well as any other place.
They require a high temperature, say 85° at night, and while in this extreme heat they should have abundance of warm water. Darkness is absolutely necessary to lengthen out the stems. After the first two weeks they can be removed to a lighter place, gradually inuring the foliage and flowers to the light. The best varieties to force at this season of the year are Keizerskroon, striped red and yellow; La Reine, light pink; Proserpiue, red, and Yellow Prince; varieties for later forcing are Murillo, Coleur Cardinal, Vermillion Brilliant, all the Pottebakkers, Tournesol and Cottage Maid. G.

The American Rose Society.

The premium list for the exhibition of the American Rose Society, to be held in connection with the spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, has been issued. The rose exhibition will take place Tuesday, March 22. Plants in pots have been made prominent features and gold and silver medals will be awarded for the best new varieties not yet disseminated. Copies of the schedule may be had on application to David Rust, Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, or Leonard Barron, 136 Liberty street, New York.

American Carnation Society.

DEPARTMENT OF REGISTRATION.

Registered by H. Weber & Son, Oakland, Md., New Daybreak, color the true Daybreak shade, which is not affected by the heat of summer, the result of a cross between seedlings of Scott extraction on one side and of Daybreak extraction on the other. The vigorous characteristics of these two varieties are fully conserved in the New Daybreak; the color at no time of the year has a washed out appearance. Blooms are three inches and over in diameter, stems eighteen to thirty inches in season and always strong enough to hold the flower erect. It is a very free bloomer and possesses the elements of a most profitable commercial variety. Does not burst and is a splendid keeper and shipper.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

Society of American Florists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

F. R. Pierson Company, Tarrytown,
N. Y., submits for registration, Carnation Daheim. Color, Harvard crimson; form compact, built high in center; three and one-half inches in diameter; fragrance strong clove; habit very robust, in way of Mrs. Lawson; stems heavy and rigid; free bloomer.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., submit for registration a seedling carnation,
New Daybreak, the result of a cross between seedlings of Scott extraction on one side and Daybreak extraction on the other. The vigorous characteristics of both these progenitors have been well perpetuated. Color is the true Daybreak shade which is maintained without fading at any time of the year. Blooms are three inches and over in diameter, stems eighteen to thirty inches and always strong enough to hold flower erect.

Peter Reinberg, Chicago, Ill., submits for registration a rose, Uncle John, sport from Golden Gate. The flower opens nicely like Bridesmaid and is of a much deeper shade of pink than Golden Gate, which it resembles in all other respects.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

Cincinnati.

Trade has improved considerably.
Good Bride and Bridesmaid are scarce.
The best bring $8 to $10 per 100. Good long-stemmed Liberty are few and easily bring $12 to $15 per 100. Short Beauty is plentiful, while it is very difficult to fill orders for 18 to 24-inch stems. Carnations are improving in quality and fancy ones, such as Enchantress, sell for $6 per 100, from that down to $2. There has been an extra heavy demand for white carnations, and it is next to impossible to fill all the orders. There are just enough violets to go around. Valley is not moving very well. Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi have to be sold at less than the quoted prices to make a bargain. Smilax and other green goods are plentiful. There was a heavy demand for common ferns the past week.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society will hold a special exhibition of roses February 13. Premiums are to be awarded as follows:

	Blooms	1st	2d	3d
American Beauty.....	12	$10.00	$6.00	$4.00
Bridesmaid.....	25	4.00	3.00	2.00

Society of American Florists medals, silver or bronze, will be competed for at this exhibition. A special exhibition of carnations will be held March 12.

Springfield, Mass.

The florists of this city are now having their usual January dull period, and from what I hear it seems to be general throughout New England. However, I do not think there is much to complain about, for during the past two months
Springfield has been quite busy socially.
I think there have been more good decorations and flowers used by society people than ever before up to this time of the season. There has also been considerable funeral work. The store windows commence to brighten up now with bulbous stock, which is moving fairly well.

LOCUST VALLEY, N. Y.—Robert E. Berry is now gardener for W. D. Guthrie at Mendon, his beautiful estate in this place. A fine house 40x100 has just been completed by Lord & Burnham Company for palms and decorative plants. Two more houses are contemplated, one for orchids and one for miscellaneous hard-wooded plants. Mr. Perry has some unexcelled carnations, among which Enchantress and Lillian Pond loom up as the best in their respective classes.

BRIDGEWATER, CONN.—J. J. Johnson recently discharged an employe for carelessness in allowing the fires to run low and the stock to suffer from cold. John Kelleher, the employe, brought suit against Mr. Johnson to recover back wages of $78.80. The case has just been finished in the Brockton court in favor of Mr. Johnson, it having been shown that Kelleher had been arrested and fined for drunkenness at the time of his discharge and Mr. Johnson's loss from freezing exceeded the wages claimed.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists to interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Charles McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.

Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-23, 1904.

SWEET corn prices are said to be a little less firm.

THE very severe cold weather is of no help to mail orders.

THE new potato 'Eldorado' is being offered in England at $875 per pound at wholesale rate.

CONTRACT bean prices are higher, while growers are refusing to take large orders for scarce sorts.

NEARLY every item on both the green pod and wax bean list seems to be short. Seed stocks will be needed.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., January 23.—There is a deficiency of rain here which is alike bad for crops and growers.

BUSINESS with catalogue houses generally is very good as compared with last season, in many cases much better.

THE disposition to make heavy contracts for seed peas is about in line with the sentiment on contracting for onion seed.

THE spring catalogue of Peter Henderson & Company has been mailed this season as promptly as most others in the trade.

VISITED CHICAGO.—August Rhotert, New York; E. M. Parmalee, of the John H. Allan Seed Company, Cape Vincent, N. Y., on his annual contracting trip.

SCHMIDT & BOTLEY, Springfield, O., report that the returns from their new catalogues are coming in very satisfactorily, even better than last year, and they think the prospects for business the coming spring are very good.

THERE will be some reduction of the acreage planted to onion sets in the Chicago district the coming season. Two years of low prices have discouraged some of the growers who can see more profit in other lines.

AMONG the short items in flower seeds this season are Viola odorata and varieties, Phlox Drummondii, P. decussata, Lady Grisel Hamilton sweet pea, thunbergia, Browallia speciosa major, hollyhocks, Lathyrus latifolius, Machet mignonette and nasturtiums.

Buckbee's New Warehouse.

The accompanying illustration shows the new shipping warehouse of H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill. The dimensions are 65x184 feet with boiler and engine room 39x65 feet. The cellar is very spacious and the machinery for cleaning and manipulating seeds of the best and most modern patterns, making the establishment one of the most complete and up-to-date to be found anywhere.

A California Protest.

We are pleased to see the protests against the extravagant humbug of national distribution of an inferior and worthless article, says the Santa Cruz Sentinel. In the early history of the country seed distribution was useful and beneficent. The population was thinly scattered and no one had seed farms. But these times have passed away. The government seeds are looked upon with suspicion by every farmer. They plant a few by way of experiment, but go to a reliable seedsman to be sure of a successful crop. The government should never do what the individual does better.

American Seed Trade Association.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—A meeting of the executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association was called at the New Willard hotel, Washington, D. C., on January 20. There were present S. F. Willard, president, Walter P. Stokes, Albert McCullough, W. Atlee Burpee, Henry W. Wood, F. W. Bolgiano and C. E. Kendel, secretary.

It was decided to meet at St. Louis June 21-23 at the Forest Park University hotel, which is located but a very short distance from the fair grounds, and is we are assured by the St. Louis members of the association in every way desirable. Suggested topics for the programme give promise of a most practical and interesting meeting, and this with the general attraction of the greatest exposition, at least from a horticultural standpoint, and the low rates on the railroads, ought to result in having the largest and best convention of the association.

Further announcements will follow in due time. C. E. KENDEL, Sec'y.
January 22, 1904.

Buffalo, N. Y.

W. F. Kasting has started to move his goods to his new place, but will not move all until after Easter. At his new establishment there will be a hall for florists' meetings and he has promised us the use of it. We now use his store and cigars. What more can he do?

The meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club last week was postponed owing to the disagreeable weather. There was a meeting of florists January 27 to take action on the Forest Lawn cemetery's resolution to do all watering and take care of graves.

Trade took a good jump last week. Several receptions and dinners gave a number of florists work. Stock is still equal to the demand, but there is no surplus.

Rudolph Boettger, of Eggertsville, N. Y., lost a sister this week. She at one time had a store and handled plants on Niagara street.

Dan'l. B. Long was called to Waynesboro, Pa., Monday owing to the death of his brother, David, who was well known in Buffalo.

Barney Meyers, superintendent for W. J. Palmer & Son, says their stock for Easter is in fine shape.

The extreme weather last week made a terrible hole in the coal bins.

Visitors: S. D. Green, Philadelphia, Pa.; Ernest Schoepke, New York. Bison.

DENVER, COL.—L. C. Waterbury has sold his wholesale cut flower and general supply business to R. S. Maham.

IMPORTANT TO PRIVATE GARDENERS

The system of allowing Private Gardeners a discount on their annual purchases of seeds has become almost universal; in fact, they have been gradually educated to expect it. We are offering this season

A Special Discount of 15%

ON ALL GENERAL SEED ORDERS AT OUR GARDEN GUIDE PRICES
Which are quoted as low as any reliable seed grower offers. Also, we deliver by freight or express prepaid to New York, Boston, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati or St. Louis. Garden Guide mailed free on application.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYRMEN.
 N. W. HALE, Knoxville, Tenn., Pres.; FRANK A. WEBER, St. Louis, Mo., Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
 Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

DECATUR, ILL.—The Mt. Zion Nursery Company partnership has been dissolved.

J. BLAAUW & COMPANY, of Boskoop, Holland, have issued a very attractive souvenir of their nurseries and Boskoop which they are mailing to customers.

THE Department of Parks, Borough of Brooklyn, N. Y., is in the market for a large quantity of trees and shrubs, the estimates to be in the office of the department, Litchfield Mansion, Prospect Park, Brooklyn, N. Y., by 9 a. m., Tuesday, February 9. The superintendent is Wm. J. Zartmann.

Pennsylvania Nurserymen's Association.

An auxiliary association of the Pennsylvania State Horticultural Association was formed at Lancaster, January 20, to be known as the Pennsylvania Nurserymen's Association with the following officers: W. H. Moon, Morrisville, president; Thomas B. Meehan, Philadelphia, vice-president; Earl Peters, Mount Holly Springs, secretary; Thomas Rakestraw, Kennett Square, treasurer.

Omaha, Neb.

Business has been rather slow for this time of the year. There are a good many society functions, but none very important to the florists. The weather for the first three weeks of January was summer-like. Stock was consequently plentiful and low prices prevailed. Violets sold at any price. The weather man helped us out for the last five days, the thermometer going down to 18° below zero for three days. Stock is now scarce and the prices are higher.

Paul Paulson erected two houses at the Prospect Hill cemetery grounds to supply the cemetery with plants and cut flowers.

The Nebraska Florists' Club decided at the last meeting to form a bowling team to take part in the St. Louis convention.

H. Slocomb, the violet grower, contemplates the erection of two houses, 30x200 feet, for violets this season.

A. Donaghue, Jr., opened his new store on Farnam street, and it is quite a credit to him as well as to the trade.

J. T. Butterworth's collection of commercial orchids is rapidly increasing in extent and value. Mr. Butterworth is the only florist growing orchids as a specialty for the Boston cut flower market and is likely to hold his monopoly of this specialty for a long time. Orchid cultivation is one of the lines not likely soon to be done to excess or placed at the mercy of the "factories," for a thorough training and comprehensive knowledge of their cultural requirements is absolutely essential to success in flowering them and in maintaining the plants in healthy condition from year to year. That Mr. Butterworth is equipped with this indispensable prerequisite is obvious from the condition of the plants in his house which give evidence of sturdy growth and substantial yearly enlargement since they have come into his possession.

Cattleyas Percivaliana, Trianae, labiata and gigas, Laelias autumnalis and anceps, Coelogyne cristata var. Chatsworth, Oncidium varicosum Rogersii, Dendrobium Wardianum and Cypripedium insigne of several varieties are the leading kinds in point of numbers and there are smaller quantities of other well-known species. At present Cattleya Percivaliana holds the center of the stage with a sea of bloom. A fair quantity of the flowers of this species were cut for Christmas. Trianae will come in next and are well supplied with promising buds. Among the Laelia anceps now blooming are two superb dark-flowered varieties and among the cattleyas several white or otherwise rare sorts have come to light.

Among the plants are many veterans with a record, some of which in bygone days have graced the exhibition tables of Horticultural hall. Coelogyne once the pride of James Cornley are of the number and grow side by side with former pets of Benj. Grey and David Allan. The oldest house on the place, once the property of the late C. J. Power and one of the oldest in the state, having been built in 1850, is a lean to that is rich in reminiscence of the early experiences of Joseph Tailby, W. W. Edgar, F. R. Mathison, John Forbes and other affluent worthies who successfully kept the flues agoing and operated the watering pot under the protection of its 6x8 glass in the days of yore.

Bulb culture has been a leading specialty with Mr. Butterworth from the start, but the former profits in this line are no longer possible. Tulips are now being brought in although it is still rather early for them and they require careful manipulation by shading and retarding after the flower has formed, to acquire a sufficient length of stem. The first Dutch hyacinths are already coming into bloom. French single trumpet narcissi are in abundance and will be followed by the larger and finer sorts which cannot be forced so rapidly. A house of callas, of which a good proportion are the dwarf-growing variety, attracts attention because of its perfect health and the abundance of the bloom. Mr. Butterworth states that he gives the pots a good top dressing of bone about the middle of November and no other stimulant, liquid or otherwise is used.

Hitchings & Company erected for Mr. Butterworth a fine carnation house 36x165 last summer in which the favorite varieties of the day are seen in prime condition.

Blooming Callas From Seed In One Year
100 seeds, 75c; 1000 seeds, $5.00.

STOCKS—Beauty of Nice

A very conspicuous and handsome new stock of quick growth, with flowers of very large size. The color is of a very pleasing daybreak pink. It is grown in large quantities in the south of France for shipment north. Under good culture the plants will grow 24 to 30 inches high. The seedlings will bloom in 10 weeks, and if the seed is sown by the end of May the plants will bloom in September when cut-flowers begin to get scarce, and continue to bloom during winter.

CRUSADER

Has gradually and surely pushed its way to the highest rung of the ladder on the Chicago market. J. B. Deamud says it is the best selling Carnation. The retailers are fighting for them.

Mr. Geo. Wienhoeber says the color is ideal.

Mr. Jas. Wilson says: "It is a good thing; I was well impressed with it when at your greenhouses."

All the large growers of Chicago say it improves in every respect every time they see it.

CRUSADER will be grown in the middle west next year more exclusively than any other red. Why? Because they know what it is. Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia, St. Louis have seen the blooms. Milwaukee will see it February 2, New Yorkers February 8. Don't miss it. Go to your Club and see it.

The rush for cuttings is on. Get your order in at once.

CRUSADER is a Seedling from the two well known varieties, Lawson and Crane. It can be grown successfully in a wide range of temperature, at from 46 to 54 degrees at night, as it never bursts the calyx. Form is always perfect. Produces strong stems from 20 to 30 inches in length, according to the season. It is a more robust and quicker grower than even the Lawson, and a freer bloomer. Color the same as Crane, and average size of bloom three to three and one-half inches, very full and slightly fringed. From 200 blooming plants, 100 blooms were picked that won the first prize at Kansas City, Fall, 1902.

CHICAGO CARNATION CO., Joliet, Ill.

JAS. HARTSHORNE, MANAGER.

Hartford, Conn.

The Hartford Florists' Club held an interesting meeting January 12. It was "cyclamen" night and splendid specimens were shown. J. F. Huss had six plants for which he was awarded a diploma. P. Zuger, of Elizabeth park, was awarded a certificate of merit for his exhibit. They were large and well grown. John Coombs showed plants for which he received honorable mention. Mr. Huss also showed a well grown plant of Platyclinis glumacea in full flower. Messrs. R. L. Osborn, of Hartford, and Boddington, of New York, acted as judges. In a discussion on culture of cyclamens Mr. Osborn gave his experiences. After the plants become too large for 2½-inch pots he plants them out in frames, raises the sashes when it becomes necessary and waters when needed. In September he lifts the plants and puts them in 5 to 6-inch pots and shades them for a few days. He cuts a lot of flowers in the summer and by fall has plants as good as if they had been grown in pots and at half cost and labor. The next meeting will be the carnation night.

The annual meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society was held January 13. Although the society has given no exhibition, the year 1903 was especially profitable to the members since much work was done in preparing the state's horticultural exhibit for the St. Louis Exposition. Before this exhibit is sent away this spring it will be shown at a free exhibition to be given in this city in February. The society adopted resolutions lauding the movement for the preservation by the government of the big trees in California. The following elections for the ensuing year weremade:

- President—A. C. Sternberg, of West Hartford.
- Vice-president—Theodore Wirth, for Hartford county; J. X. Amrbyn, for New Haven county; D. A. Lyman, for Wyndham county; Edwin Hoyt, for Fairfield county; A. N. Pierson, for Middlesex county; T. H. Gold, for Litchfield county, and O. A. Leonard, for Tolland county.
- Treasurer—W. W. Hunt.
- Secretary and librarian—L. H. Mead.
- Statistician—G. A. Parker.
- Professor in vegetable physiology—G. A. Parker.
- Pomologist—A. C. Sternberg.
- Executive committee and committee on awards and premiums—A. W. Driggs, John Coombs, C. M. Rogers, F. W. Davis, J. F. Huss and E. S. Greer.

A fine exhibition of winter-blooming plants is now in progress at the Elizabeth park greenhouses. A house 100 feet long is filled with cyclamens, cinerarias, primulas, begonias, geraniums and carnations.

Mr. Huntsinger, principal of Huntsinger's Business College, will build a small greenhouse.

Karl Fohn, late of Bar Harbor, Me., has engaged as forester at Keney park.

Drake & Carlson will open a store on Main street.

Visitors:—Mr. Ringier, of Rutherford, N. J., and A. T. Boddington, of New York. R. K.

North Adams, Mass.

The florists and gardeners of Adams, North Adams and Williamstown met January 19 and organized a florists' club, to be called the Hoosac Valley Horticultural society. The following officers were elected:

- President—J. Hynes, of North Adams.
- Vice-president—F. D. Brown, of North Adams.
- Secretary—A. J. Schmutz, of North Adams.
- Treasurer—Mr. Maber, of Williamstown.
- Auditors—Mr. McClellan, of Williamstown and F. H. Pratt, of North Adams.

The next meeting will be held February 2. J. S.

Cleveland, O.

The cut flower market is assuming large proportions. There is plenty of funeral work and decorations. A number of florists have stated that the cold weather has been too severe for their business, but in spite of this discouraging fact large quantities of cut flowers are used daily. The two wholesale cut flower firms, Bate Brothers and F. R. Williams, have incorporated, the business to be known as the Cleveland Cut Flower Company. It will be located at 52 and 54 High street. They have a large store, 40x80 feet, the office and show room being partitioned off from the main part. The firm will do a general cut flower business.

Godfrey Lendy, florist at the Cleveland State Hospital, is an enthusiastic designer with carpet bedding plants. He contemplates large additions along that line this spring. They have a large working force there, and Mr. Kalm supervises the potting shed and Martin is busy making flats for cannas.

G. Hammel & Sons, west side lettuce growers, have devoted some of their houses to the growing of plants and cut flowers.

James Wilson of Eddie road is sending in some superb carnations, Enchantress, Lawson, Joost and others.

J. Houska has established a store at 963 Broadway. O. G.

Milwaukee.

Cold weather, the mercury going as low as 25° below zero, has made trade quiet. Business is very erratic. One day there is a rush, the next day nothing doing; but in some lines there is nothing doing all the time, especially in violets, which have sold at lower prices than any previous season. Roses are in good demand and are cleaned out well but there are enough carnations to go around at all times. Bulbous stock is slow sale at present excepting daffodils, which have just made appearance. Green goods are selling well.

Mr. and Mrs. Edlfsen have been spending a few weeks with their daughter in Pittsburg.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club will have a carnation show at its next meeting February 2 in the club rooms, Empire building.

A. Billings is bringing in some fine tulips, among them some well colored La Reine. H.

Providence, R. I.

At last we may consistently report a brighter prospect. For the last two months things have not been indicative of good business and we have seriously felt the trade shortage and poor collections. It may be the present good call for design work will last until Easter. The last week has done wonders in the the way of restoring confidence and creating a more ambitious feeling.

Roses and carnations are in good supply and show a tendency to firmer prices, although there is no real increase over present figures. Carnations seem to have perceptibly fallen off in quality and retail customers are prompt to notice this. Violets remain slow at 50 cents per hundred wholesale. Carnations bring $1.50 to $2.50 and roses $3 to $6 for nice flowers. M.

WAUKESHA, Wis.—J. G. Robinson & Son are picking some exceedingly fine violets this season.

La DETROIT

Breitmeyers' New Rose

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID.

To Be Disseminated April 1, 1904.

COLOR. Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy, flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE. Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM. Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH. Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific.

L. L. MAY & CO., St. Paul, Minn.

New Bedford, Mass.

"Now comes the winter of our discontent." This is a winter that will show what your boiler is good for, and how much more heating pipe to put in next summer. A good many people know to their sorrow much more about heating greenhouses than they did. Probably half the greenhouses about here got nipped a little, or more than a little, by Jack Frost. The extreme cold weather all through January with the streets all the time a glare of ice had a very bad effect on the flower business. People would not come out in such weather. All the retail stores are feeling it keenly. But probably the bluest lot of people are the small growers who sell mostly at wholesale. The retail stores have heretofore bought their flowers here but this winter they have been buying out of town, so the poor growers are left out in the cold, not only by Jack Frost, but by the florists. One thing the retail stores have had to be thankful for in the past is that department stores and flower peddlers have not been troublesome, but now a change may come.

The annual election of the New Bedford Horticultural Society was held in the Y. M. C. A. building January 12 with the following result:

- President—William Keith.
- Vice-president—Peter Murray.
- Clerk—Joseph C. Forbes.
- Assistant clerk—George W. Woods.
- Treasurer—William F. Turero.
- Executive Committee—Dennis Shea, Peter Murray, James Garthley, August H. Jahn and A. J. Fish.

After the meeting a supper was held at Wickham's cafe, Purchase and High streets, thirty-one plates being laid. President Keith acted as toastmaster and Thomas Gray of Boston was the guest of the evening. The Horticultural Society is now just a year old. The treasury is in good condition, and the membership roll contains sixty-five names.

On January 14 the Florists' Club was invited by one of its members, Mr. Hoxie, of Mattapoisett, to hold its regular meeting at his house and not to eat any supper before coming. So the club to the number of fifteen took the car six miles to Mattapoisett and were royally entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Hoxie. They had a discussion on boilers and heating greenhouses and then took the last car for home.

H. N. V. Soule, who started a store at the north end, could not make it pay and has opened another one nearer the center of the city.

It is rumored the Richard Nofftz will open a store about March 1.

The present cold weather is the most severe on record, the thermometer not rising above 20° below in forty-eight hours and dropping as low as 35° below. One grower reported 43° below. We have heard of no damage, but it will be a close shave if everybody pulls through all right. Stock seems plentiful, especially bulbous stuff. As soon as the weather moderates it will move well.

Axel Hallstrom, formerly in charge of James J. Hill's private place, has been succeeded by H. C. Coates, formerly with Mendenhall's in Minneapolis. At a recent visit to Mr. Hill's greenhouses some good orchids were seen, plants of Dendrobium Wardianum in fine bloom.

William Speth, with Holm & Olson, and his wife had a close call from coal gas asphyxiation Sunday night. By prompt medical aid they were brought around all right.

Dr. R. Schiffman, who has the largest collection of orchids in the west, left last Saturday for his annual trip to the Philippines. He will be gone four or five months.

R. C. Sugar had the smokestack of his plant blown down in a heavy wind storm recently. O.

Minneapolis, Minn.

The Florists' Club will give a social dance February 4. Tickets and invitations are out to the number of 300. The event will take place at the fourth ward wigwam, Western avenue and Ninth street. Will Desmond, Otto Will and John Monson, of the executive committee, have the affair in charge.

There has been a heavy funeral trade. Social functions were few. White stock was in demand and scarce, excepting bulbous flowers. The carnation and rose cut is very small, owing to off crop followed by extreme cold weather.

John Vasatka of Chicago avenue called on the writer Saturday. John is always in the best of spirits and is a good entertainer. He has been a great experimenter with medicines and has a remedy for each ill.

The nursery edition of the Minneapolis Journal issued under the management of H. L. Patthey, January 18, met with decided success.

Oscar Swanson has had a week of heavy funeral orders. C. F. R.

Chatanooga, Tenn.

Work has been completed on the large new flower garden and greenhouses which have been built by Karsten Brothers at Blowing Springs, Ga., a short distance beyond St. Elmo and about seven miles from the city. The new garden has been built at an expense of $10,000 and is one of the largest in the south. A tract of land of six acres is required for the greenhouses and the buildings are supplied with the latest appliances. Seven large greenhouses have been erected and many other smaller buildings constructed. Frank Phillips, recently of Nashville, has arrived to take charge of the new garden. All the stock sold by the firm will be grown hereafter at the new garden and the greenhouses in the city will be converted into display and salesrooms. John and Charles Karsten have built up their business to such an extent that the old quarters were entirely too small to meet the demands and the new greenhouses were a necessity. It is the intention of the firm to make extensive improvements on their city greenhouses.

Lenox, Mass.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held in the society's rooms, January 16. W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., delivered a very interesting essay on "Evergreens for Winter Landscape Effect." Mr. Manda had about 200 samples of conifers and evergreen shrubs for illustrating his essay which fully covered the essential points of the subject. A hearty vote of thanks was given the essayist.

There were several vases of cut flowers on exhibition. A cultural commendation was awarded to Elm Court farm, for some fine spikes of Vanda cœrulea. Among other exhibits were two fine vases of Cypripedium villosum, from E. J. Norman, Erskin Park.

THE PIERSON FERN

(NEPHROLEPIS PIERSONI.)

We desire to call particular attention to our large stock of specimen plants ready for immediate sale. Florists will find this one of the quickest selling and most profitable plants that they can handle. These are grand, strong established pot-grown plants in the very best possible condition, not plants over-potted or lifted from the bench, and are exceedingly cheap at the prices offered. Stock is in grand shape, and will guarantee every shipment to give perfect satisfaction.

Florists will find these plants readily salable at twice or three times their first cost, and by shifting them up and holding them a couple months their value can again be doubled. Retail florists with stores will find this gilt-edged stock for retailing. We guarantee they will find nothing that they can handle as readily salable and profitable as this grand fern.

Extra fine plants in 6-inch pots, $1.00 each. Fine specimens in 8-inch pots, very fine, $2.00 each. Extra fine specimens in 10-inch pots, $3.00 each. Larger plants, $5.00 each.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST.

Oceanic, N. J.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held January 22. The officers were installed by Prof. C. H. Walling. They are as follows: Wm. Turner, president; George H. Hale, vice-president, George Kuhn, financial secretary; H. A. Kettel, recording secretary; W. W. Kennedy, treasurer. The treasurer's report showed a good balance on hand from last year, in addition to the stocks the society holds. Some beautiful roses were shown. Geo. H. Hale had Morgan which scored 80 points. H. A. Kettel had the finest Bride, Bridesmaid, Carnot and Golden Gate roses ever shown in this society; they scored 97½ points. He had also some fine sprays of clerodendron, two varieties of tulips and a vase of callas. James Dowlen had a crimson carnation seedling, a splendid bloom with a strong two-foot stem, which scored 80 points. He had also a good scarlet one but not enough blooms to be judged. The judges of the evening were G. A. Hale, J. Dowlen and A. Williams. Mr. Hale read a list of chrysanthemums, 117 varieties, which he grew ten years ago in Brookline, Mass. There is not one of those varieties grown at the present time. The discussions of the evening were "Strawberry Forcing" and "Remedies for San Jose Scale." After the business meeting a collation was served. B.

Columbus, O.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Company has purchased the Smith Floral Company's holdings, including land, buildings and stock. This place is situated directly north of the Fifth Avenue Establishment and is in fine condition. The two places will be under the one management, namely, the Fifth Avenue Floral Company. Mr. Seibert, the manager of the firm, is to be congratulated for the progress he has made in so short a time.

Business continues brisk. Some good tulips and daffodils are making their appearance. Carnations are doing well and find a ready market at a good price for first quality, but the poorer grades of these, as well as roses, go begging at any price.

E. T. Grave, of Richmond, Ind., was among the callers last week. CARL.

SUBBURY, MASS.—C. A. Jones has bought the Blair greenhouses comprising about 15,000 feet of glass and one and three-fourths acres of land.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Schmidt & Botley have just completed an additional range of six houses, each 20x100 feet. At present the houses are filled with roses—for which orders were booked last fall, aggregating 150,000—which are to be shipped throughout the spring.

CROP INSURANCE.
Life insurance is valuable because it guarantees the outcome.
"Gurney" Heaters
"BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouse: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expense at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

PALMS AND FERNS.

Latantias.

That botanical nomenclature has been very much mixed in many of its divisions is an old story, and among the palms in particular there have been many revisions and alterations. To many in the trade the name latania brings to mind the most familiar of our commercial species of palms, that one so frequently called Latania Borbonica, and yet this palm is not a latania, but on the contrary should be catalogued as Livistona Chinensis. It is quite true that both the latanias and the livistonas are four-leaved palms, thus presenting some similarity in appearance, but with the true latanias are found usually unarmed leafstalks, while the livistonas in general are quite liberally provided with prickles up the edges of the stalks, the thorns being strong enough to make a very painful wound.

There are also marked botanical differences between these two genera, the livistonas producing perfect flowers that are followed by large, branched bunches of small, single-seeded fruits, while the latanias do not have perfect flowers, but on the contrary the male and female flowers are produced upon different plants, the former in large quantities and the latter more sparingly, these being followed by fruits as large as a small apple and containing three seeds each, the latter being about the size of Brazil nuts. The latanias also seem to be somewhat restricted geographically, the three species that have been cultivated in this country being natives of the Mascarene Islands, a group of small islands in the Indian Ocean, possibly 300 miles east of Madagascar.

The livistonas are more widely spread and also more numerous in species, these being chiefly natives of various islands in the South Pacific ocean or of tropical Australia, while one species, L. olivæ formis, is found in Brazil, and the most widely known of all the livistonas, L. Chinensis, is, as its name indicates, a native of the Flowery Kingdom. Three species of the latanias have been mentioned, these being L. Loddigesii—once known as L. glaucophylla—L. Commersonii—also known in our boyhood as L. rubra—and L. Verschaffeltii, the last having had its name changed from L. aurea to commemorate a noted Belgian horticulturist. Talk about the trials of the Peony Committee! Why, that is easy compared with the tangles that crop up in the other plant families, and that serve to impress upon us from time to time how very little each of us really knows when compared with the whole sum of botanical knowledge.

But to return to the latanias, we find that for some time past it has not been necessary to go outside of United States' territory in order to get seeds of some of these palms, for L. Loddigesii has been planted in Hawaii and has produced seeds there quite freely for several years. This is the strongest growing of the three species in question, and produces immense fan-shaped leaves on strong stems that often reach a length of 6 to 8 feet, the tree itself having a comparatively slender trunk that sometimes grows to a height of 40 feet in its native islands. The foliage of L. Loddigesii is very dark green, the ribs and stems tinted with chocolate or dull red in the young plants, though showing but little of this coloring in the case of large plants. The second species, L. Commersonii, is by far the most attractive, being rather more slender than the first named, while the stems and ribs of the leaves, and to some extent the entire leaf at the time it is unfolding, are dark crimson, and surely merit its former varietal name of rubra. Latania Verschaffeltii makes quite a contrast to the other members of this family, its foliage and stems being strongly colored with bright yellow, and in growth is perhaps the weakest of the three.

These palms are essentially warmhouse species, and being rather slow in growth as young plants, have not been given much attention from a commercial point of view, for in this formative period of our horticulture there are few people who take up rare palms; but it may be worth recording that all three of these beautiful palms were in cultivation in this country more than twenty-five years ago, and the writer was not their only cultivator at that time, either. The dates of introduction of various plants to the American trade do not seem to be very well fixed, in the minds of some growers at least, and it does appear slightly humorous, to say the least, when we find a certain Belgian grower gravely claiming to have been the first to export successfully palms and azaleas to the United States, and to find that he places the date in the eighties, when there are several men in the trade here who can recall the fact that other European growers shipped azaleas in lots of 500 to 1,000 plants and palms by hundreds to the United States fully ten years before the date mentioned, and shipped them in good order, too. But these trifling aberrations are perhaps of little moment, and it is barely possible that our European cousins might point out that even in America the catalogue makers sometimes draw the long bow.

Fancy Ferns.

A few ferns that are out of the common run may sometimes prove useful to have about the place if one can spare a small space for that purpose, and if so there might be some of the golden and silvery foliaged sorts among them, tender though they mostly are. The ferns in question are found among the gymnogrammas, there being several varieties of each class, some of the best of the golden leaved section being G. Lauchena magnifica, G. chrysophylla, and G. decomposita. G. Peruviana argyrophylla is one of the finest of the silvery section, G. Tartarea is a stronger grower, but less silvery, and G. Wettenthaliana is a very beautiful variety with crested foliage.

These are warm house ferns, requiring a night temperature of 65° and also to be well shaded, a rather light soil being preferable for their culture. The farinose powder with which both the upper and lower sides of the fronds of these ferns are covered is liable to be washed off to some extent by careless watering, and these species not being especially benefitted by overhead watering it is much the better plan to keep the hose from them and to water them more carefully and gently with a watering can. Some of these gymnogrammas grow over freely from spores, the latter being produced in immense quantities by the stronger growing forms, of which G. decomposita is a good example, the seedlings of this fern being liable to come up in all directions from a few parent plants, much the same as those of the common "soft fern," Nephrodium molle. Nephrolepis Scottii.

Nephrolepis Scottii, the latest addition to the number of beautiful sports from the Boston fern, originated in the greenhouses of John Scott, Brooklyn, three years ago. As well shown in the illustration, the habit of the plant is dwarfer and much denser than that of the typical Boston fern, the fronds also being shorter and less erect, their arching form giving a graceful, fountain-like contour to the plant. A remarkable uniformity in size and growth is noted in the fronds, which is carried out also in the character of the plants themselves when seen in numbers and in various sizes in the greenhouses.

Mr. Scott states that the variety will not grow rank, even under excessive feeding. Notwithstanding its denseness the fronds in the center of the plant do not grow long jointed nor shed the pinnae, as is the case with the Boston fern when over crowded, and the reason for this is obvious in the tough, leathery texture of the foliage.

Its rapidity of increase is well evidenced in a densely packed bench of plants at Mr. Scott's Flatbush greenhouses, which was planted with single runners last August, and in the immense stock of the variety now held by Mr. Scott from what was, only three years since, one small plant with four fronds.

It is no reflection on the other excellent forms of Nephrolepis exaltata already disseminated to say that this one is the first to come into dangerous competition with the type known as the Boston fern. The Boston fern is distinctly the leading plant in the country for dwelling-house culture, and its popularity in this line seems not to have suffered in the slightest degree from the recent distribution of two elaborately decorative forms. If it has a fault at all it is that under generous cultivation it is apt to attain an unwieldy size and become inconveniently large for the average room in a city dwelling. The compact, symmetrical growth of N. Scottii furnishes the ideal form, while its moderate size and its contentment under closely-crowded conditions will be appreciated when valuable bench room is taken into consideration, and its hard-fibered fronds give assurance that it will withstand rougher treatment than its illustrious parent, all of which invests it with much promise as an all-around standard commercial plant. Mr. Scott is to be congratulated on his find, and the trade owes him its gratitude for this addition to the limited list of plants whose qualities fit them especially for popular favorites. N. Scottii is to be disseminated next June.

Filling Conservatories.

The rapid increase in the number of conservatories connected with private estates opens the way for a lucrative business, and affords an opportunity for the display of a high degree of artistic taste in the planting and furnishing of these flower houses, without which no suburban or country estate of any pretensions is complete. The ingenuity of greenhouse builders in erecting glass structures of tasteful design and proportions is supplemented by the ability and artistic perceptions of the plantsman, and the result is a picture such as we have here represented. The conservatory illustrated is that of Percival Roberts, Jr., at Narberth, Pa., not far from Philadelphia, and the furnishing and planting is the work of Siebrecht & Son, New Rochelle, N. Y. The conservatory is 40x50 feet in area and 32 feet to the top of the dome. The central plant is a splendid specimen of Kentia australis twenty-two feet high. From the center radiate four irregular pebbled walks, and in the center of each of the four divisions thus laid out are a Dicksonia antarctica fifteen feet high, in the south division; Chamærops excelsa, twenty feet high, in the north; Cycas circinalis, fifteen feet high, in the east, and Kentia Baueri, fifteen feet high, in the west division. The planting is concealed by masses of tuffa rock, in the crevices of which are planted small ferns, Tradescantias, Lycopodiums, grasses and similar small growing things in profusion. Over each of the four doors a mammoth Platycerium is suspended, and on the rafters are climbing vines, such as Passifloras, Lapagerias, Bignonias and Stephanotis. Our illustrations show the central plant and surroundings in the north, east and south sides of the conservatory.

DAVENPORT, IA.—The firm of Littig and Allison, composed of Victor A. Littig, Ed. C. Littig and Robert Allison, has purchased the business of Charles Dannacher on the Brady street road north of Central park, where the greenhouses are and also the stock of the down town store on East Third street. Mr. Dannacher will retire from business altogether on account of ill health.

THE CARNATION.

Notes on Propagating.

If the stock for the coming season's planting is not now complete we must get after this very important part of the business right away as the time is fast approaching when the bright warm days tell greatly on the propagating bed and a successful batch of cuttings is an exception rather than the rule. We have also to bear in mind that most of the very finest varieties which are being grown today, unless propagated early are not nearly so profitable. Take, for instance, the varieties Mrs. Lawson, Gov. Wolcott, Harlowarden and Prosperity.

We will first select the variety Mrs. Lawson, though, being a very vigorous grower during the winter months, it has a tendency to bud up very easily in the fall, particularly so when the plants have been grown in the field. The side growths from these short blooming shoots are the ones to bring the next winter's returns, but it takes time to produce these shoots and we have to take into consideration that for this variety to give the best results it should be planted into the house by August 1 at the latest. This will give very little time for them to make much of a plant while out in the field and therefore a plant taken from the sand and planted out in the field within three or four weeks cannot have had time to get properly established, with the top pinched out and the side shoots branching out as they ought to be. But if they are propagated during January or February and receive careful attention afterwards regarding topping, etc., they will be well established plants with plenty of side shoots bursting out by May 1, which generally is the best time for setting in the field.

Gov. Wolcott is a very free grower as far as making grass is concerned, but it is rather slow in throwing up blooming shoots in the early winter months and unless a good sized plant is secured at planting the variety is very likely to be condemned in time because its nature has not been properly understood and catered to.

Prosperity will not certainly pay its way with plants propagated later than February 1, its growth being peculiar and different from any other carnation, throwing up a good strong main stem with lots of side shoots branching out, but the side shoots seem to get so far and then stop, taking a long time to stiffen out and produce a bloom. This variety can be made to bring better returns by having the young plants in good growing condition at the beginning of February in 2 inch pots; then about the middle of March, shifting up into 3-inch pots will make them excellent stock for planting in the field and you will reap fine blooms much earlier by several weeks for this extra trouble. I am also of the opinion that Adonis can be made a success of if treated this way.

Harlowarden just at this time appears the picture of health and prosperity with its fancy blooms and their 3-foot stems, but what a small plant and carrying very little grass it is. This is another variety that takes a long season to produce a large enough plant to make it profitable. With us it has a tendency to throw all its energy into the crop that is on and then take its time to recover. We must therefore see the plants are of sufficient size and health to make that crop of sufficient duration to make it pay.

Cuttings put into the sand from this time forward will need extra care as the sun is gaining in strength right along and if the bed is left too long on a bright morning without being shaded or the steam left on till the temperature of the house runs too high the cuttings will very soon commence to suffer. Also, on bright days, or when the weather is very cold, causing extra firing, the walks around the propagating beds should be dampened down a little oftener to prevent the atmosphere becoming too dry. As soon as the cuttings are rooted get them out of the sand right away, either potting them or planting in boxes or in the bench. Some growers favor one method, some another, but I prefer the pots for most of varieties with heavy growth like Enchantress, Lawson, Crane and Prosperity. Varieties like Flora Hill, Mrs. Joost, Glacier and White Cloud I find do equally as well when transplanted into flats. Then again you must be guided to a certain extent by the nature of your planting field. If it is so you can water the plants directly after planting should the weather be dry then the flat grown plants will not suffer; again, if your soil is of a cold, clayey, wet nature, you will find plants set out from the flats will not take hold nearly as readily as those that have been grown in pots. After the cuttings are potted keep them in a temperature as near to that of the propagating house as possible for a few days or until the roots show through the soil after which it is best to give them a temperature of about 45° at night with plenty of ventilation in the daytime on all favorable occasions.

WITH THE GROWERS

Essex Greenhouses, North Olmstead, O.

M. Bloy.

The remarkably fine roses and carnations which are being sent in to the Cleveland market from the Essex Greenhouses, North Olmstead, O., caused the writer to pay that establishment a recent visit, and the sights to be seen in the way of well grown carnations and roses were sufficient compensation for the rather long ride on the not too well heated electric car. This establishment consists of seventeen houses in all about 50,000 feet of glass, and is presided over by M. Bloy, who is a thorough plantsman, and second to none when it comes to growing extra fine flowers, but withal very modest about his success. In the several houses devoted to carnations, Lawson takes the lead. Next in order come Crane, White Cloud, Apollo and Queen Louise. Several of the newer kinds are being tested, of which Enchantress is distinctly the best. All varieties are practically free from stem rot, Crane remarkably so. This variety has averaged five first-class blooms to the plant since October 1. Lawson and White Cloud have averaged 6. Apollo is showing up well, and is considered by Mr. Bloy to be the coming money maker in red. Queen Louise is all that is claimed for it in the way of good stem and free flowering qualities.

In the rose houses everything looks in splendid condition with one single exception, a half bench of Liberty which look, in that phrase so familiar to growers, "on the bum." Mr. Bloy has decided to cut this variety off the list as he finds it impossible to get satisfactory results from it. The American Beauty could not very well be in better condition. The crop for Christmas came in just on time and averaged between two and three long stemmed flowers to the plant. They are entirely free from black spot and "feathered" to the bottom. The Bride Bridesmaid are in equally good condition, especially the grafted stock which has averaged fifteen good blooms to the plant since the first of October. Meteor, of which two houses are grown, has produced in the same period sixteen blooms to the plant. One house entirely filled with poinsettias was in grand shape. Another planted to sweet peas gave evidence of producing an abundance of blooms in the near future, the first lot of about 1,000 being cut for Christmas. Propagating is now under full swing and judging from the quality of stock being propagated the outlook for good material for next season is good. A new boiler of 140 horse power was installed last fall to assist in the heating. The whole place is a model of neatness and reflects a great deal of credit on the excellent management of Mr. Bloy.

The four illustrations accompanying this are from photographs taken December 30, 1903. The house of American Beauty roses was photographed after a cut of nearly 1500 blooms during the month. In the house of Lawson carnations, 525 blooms were picked the same day. The boy in the house of White Cloud is a coming gardener, and is a son of Mr. Bloy. The average height of the plants of grafted Bride and Bridesmaid roses is four feet. I. K.

John L. Wyland, De Haven, Pa.

No one ever visits the plant of John L. Wyland at De Haven, Pa., without being impressed by the great natural beauty of its surroundings and the warm hearted courtesies of its owner. Mr. Wyland's plant is about ten miles north of Pittsburg on the P. & W. railroad, about ten minutes' walk from the station, just off the new macadamized county road. Mr. Wyland began growing flowers as a business about twelve years ago. In his range are eight houses with about 25,000 square feet of glass and southern exposure. Roses and carnations are his specialties. In roses he grows only Bride and Bridesmaid. Of carnations at present he grows about ten of the best varieties, including Wolcott, Enchantress, Mrs. Lawson, Nelson and Adonis. System rules in this establishment and it takes but little time to observe this. Each summer Mr. Wyland replenishes his houses with new rose plants. He is a close observer of all new carnations. His holdings at De Haven include sixty-five acres on which are valuable deposits of granite and undoubtedly coal. There is also a gas well of great pressure and an unbounded quantity of water. The supply of natural gas and water is sufficient to operate more than 200,000 square feet of glass. The soil is of the finest order. The natural gas well was sunk about two years ago and gas struck at a depth of 1650 feet. The plant and all houses on Mr. Wyland's premises are heated by this fuel, which is inexpensive and easily regulated.

Mr. Wyland has an orchard in which he has planted over 5,000 fruit trees. In 1901 the peach crop (Elberta variety) was more than 3,000 bushels. Mr. Wyland takes great pride in his peaceful domain. The various buildings on the place are complete, substantial and comfortable.

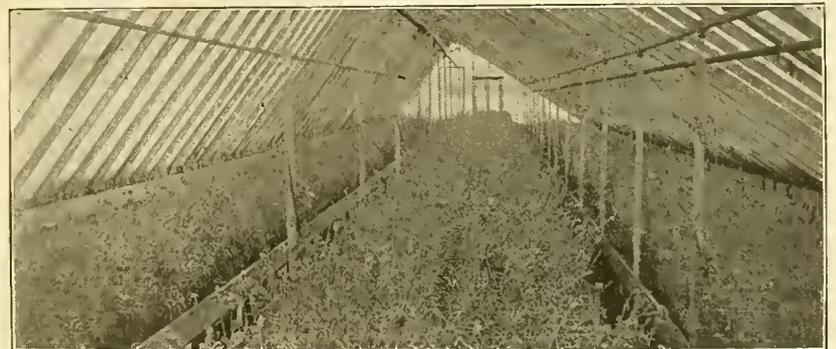

A stone wall in front and on the side of Mr. Wyland's residence is 150 feet long. It is built of coarse rubble with coping of granite. It has a foundation three feet in depth and stands three feet high. The entire wall was constructed of stone and granite taken from the quarry on the premises. E. L. M.

Tarrytown Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in the Vanderbilt hall, Tarrytown, N. Y., January 28. It was decided to change the monthly meetings from the last Thursday to the last Tuesday of each month. Some of the members were in favor of having the annual fall chrysanthemum show in either White Plains or Yonkers, but after some discussion it was decided to hold it again in Tarrytown, and the dates selected were November 1, 2, 3.

The prize for this month's exhibit was awarded to President Ballantyne for twelve roses. This exhibit consisted of excellent blooms of the new Killarney rose, Wootton, American Beauty and Bridesmaid. He also exhibited a very fine vase of Killarney roses. He said this variety was a first class grower and more of it would be seen next year. F. Gibson, gardener to Mrs. J. H. Hall, offered a box of cigars as a prize for the best fifty double blue violets to be competed for at the next meeting.

New members elected were R. Barton, gardener to L. Stern, Tarrytown, and WHITE CLOUD AND LAWSON CARNATIONS, ESSEX GREENHOUSES.

Mr. Parker, of Irvington. A. Brown and F. Koenig were proposed for membership. The business meeting over, the members adjourned in a body to the Perry House for the annual dinner. In all about sixty members and invited guests were present. The tables were tastefully decorated with fronds of Nephrolepis Piersoni and vases of roses and carnations. The carnations especially were the object of much comment. John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., brought with him a fine vase of a new scarlet variety, named after himself. This was the largest carnation ever seen in Tarrytown. He also had some white and variegated seedlings. The F. R. Pierson Company supplied well grown blooms of White Lawson, Daheim and Enchantress. H. Nichol of Yonkers brought some very good Golden Gate roses, and President Ballantyne's prize winners were also placed on the tables. As soon as the cigars were passed, President Ballantyne introduced J. W. Smith of White Plains as toastmaster. The first to come under his eye was the Hon. C. S. McClelland, easily a past master as an after-dinner speaker. Then the poet laureate of the profession, J. Austin Shaw, of New York, gave a very good example of his poetical ability in a poem in which he named Tarrytown and managed to gather in most of the gardening fraternity of the neighborhood, enrolling the virtues of each. Then the song bird of the profession, J. J. Butterfield, New York, warbled off his sweetest notes. P. E. Kessler, of New York, spoke for the gardening press. J. Dowling and John Newman, from the Monmouth County Society, N. J., replied to the toast, "The Visitors." Wm. Scott spoke for the gardeners reminding those present that theirs was the oldest profession on earth. Jas. Scott gave a humorous account of his experience as gardener at the House of Refuge on Randall's Island. Mr. McFarlane recited in his best form. After a few more speeches the evening came to a close with votes of thanks, and the singing of "Auld lang syne."

Window Glass Making.

[Paper read by Melville G. Holding before the Chicago Florists' Club, January 28.]

The materials of which window glass is made are chiefly white sand, lime and alkali, all melted together by intense heat, about 2,600° Fahrenheit, applied for about fifteen hours.

Formerly, and for many years, all glass was made in crucibles or pots made of fire clay, very thick and heavy, to stand the heat and hold the weight of the batch. In later years a large proportion of window glass has been made on what is known as the continuous melting tank.

The first successful tank was built in Belgium, in 1884, and created a great disturbance with labor, and in 1886 a mob destroyed the factories. Ever since the rebuilding the tanks have been in successful operation.

The adoption of the tank came in this country much later, and they have now largely displaced the old pot factories. Still a large quantity of glass is made in pots, the capital required for a tank factory being large compared with that for a pot factory.

It would be impossible to give you in words any adequate description of the process of making window glass. It must be seen to be appreciated. In general the gatherer dips the end of the blow pipe, which is a heavy iron tube, into the melted glass and brings out a ball of the material, which is then taken by the blower and gradually blown into a large cylinder. The cylinder is cracked, open with a hot iron, and it then goes to the flattening oven, where it is flattened and annealed, and is then ready for the cutter.

It is interesting to watch the blower make from a ball of glass a cylinder from twelve to eighteen inches in diameter and from six to seven feet long, of even and uniform thickness. In fact, the whole process of making window glass, from the melting of the hatch to the cutting table, requires skill of a high order, and can only be learned by long practice and experience. It is no easy work to handle on the end of a heavy blow pipe, four feet long, a heavy cylinder of glass six or seven feet long.

The skilled labor around a glass furnace is very well paid, the average wage being high, and some of it very high. It is not unusual for a blower of large double strength glass to make $400 per month. Of course the average is much below this.

The workers have had for many years the strongest kind of a union and have kept wages high, taking advantage of the very high tariff on window glass. The worker in Belgium receives much less for his labor, and glass costs much less there than here, as labor is about sixty-five per cent of the cost of the glass. In Belgium the cost to-day of a box of 16x18 double is about $1.45, and here about $3.25. The duty on a box of foreign glass, 16x18, would be $1.50, certainly a large protection to American labor, and the American workman takes all the advantage of it.

It would appear, however, that the day of great wages in this line of business is drawing to a close. A machine, as you know, has been invented, and is being slowly perfected, to take the place of the man blower and gatherer. It is already turning out glass in considerable quantities at several tanks, and it seems to be only a matter of time when it will largely displace man power, and certainly decrease the cost of making glass, but as long as the present tariff rates are maintained, the manufacturer will take advantage of them and no cheap glass in in sight.

The machine makes glass in cylinders by use of compressed air instead of the breath of man, and there is good reason to believe that it will ultimately be entirely successful.

MOUND CITY, Mo.—James C. Durham will shortly move to Anadarko, Okla., to engage in the greenhouse business.

NOBLESVILLE, IND.—The large greenhouse of Ross Farley, southwest of this city, was seriously damaged January 26 and many plants frozen. Snow drifted on the glass roof causing a space of about 100 square feet to fall in.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Standing Shield.

This shield was made solid of white carnations bordered with lily of the valley and maidenhair ferns. The sword and anchor crossed in the center were of double violets. The base was of Easter lilies, narcissi and Bridesmaid roses. This design was made six feet high and was sent by the manager of the St. Charles hotel, New Orleans, La., to the funeral of Gen. John B. Gordon, at Atlanta, Ga. It was said to be the handsomest design there. It was made by the C. A. Dahl Company of Atlanta.

Chicago.

Shippers are very well satisfied with the week's run, although a comparison with the amount of business transacted during the same week of 1903, will show a decrease. The market has not been what might be designated as brisk any day this week, although some days brought in enough outside orders to keep stock moving satisfactorily. The carnation situation is not taking on any marked improvement. The poor grades have a difficult time attracting buyers, as the fancies are ruling at such low prices. Good roses are the stiffest article on the market and all stock moves with celerity. American Beauty remain comparatively scarce. The medium sizes are the scarce article in this line. Bulbous stock continues to improve and tulips are now seen at their best. Since the invasion of the famous eastern violets the local violet situation is astride the horns of a dilemma. The imported goods have the call and are selling far better than a few weeks ago.

The Florists' Club held its regular bi-monthly meeting Wednesday evening in Handel hall. The evening was devoted to an exhaustive discussion of modern greenhouse construction. A number of prominent members of the trade took part in the discussions.

The next club exhibition will be held Wednesday, February 17, at Handel hall. Roses, carnations and all flowers in season will be covered and an interesting event is anticipated by those having the management in hand. After the regular exhibition in the afternoon a club meeting and a banquet will follow. The public will be admitted to the hall between fixed hours. Phil Hauswirth is sparing no pains to make this one of the most successful of this season's club shows.

The next sectional winter meeting of the club will be held on the evening of February 13 at the Drexel cafe, corner of Cottage Grove and Thirty-ninth streets. Wm. A. Moak will deliver an address on the subject of club membership and its benefit. The club is sending out neatly printed programmes of the schedule of club events for the balance of the season. An active campaign has been inaugurated with a view to swelling the membership of the club to the 500 mark.

Kuehn & Pearson have bought the stock and rented the greenhouses of John Hoeft, 920 North Campbell avenue, for a term of twenty years. The premises were leased from Mrs. Charles Held. These gentlemen were formerly employes of W. L. Palinsky.

Miss Anna Kreitling was married to Chas. Kochman Sunday, January 31. They will be at home on Claremont avenue after March 1. Mrs. Kochman is a sister of Walter Kreitling.

A serious fire was narrowly averted last Saturday in the Atlas block, in which there are about a dozen florists' stores. The fire partially destroyed several cases of moss in the warehouse of the E. F. Winterson Company.

Peter Reinberg has been confined to his bed by sickness. He was able to be out the last days of the week.

Daniel Branch is in Minneapolis, Minn., where he was called on account of his mother's illness.

John Zeck, who was formerly with J. A. Budlong, has taken a position with E. C. Amling.

Visitors this week were W. Bertermann, of Indianapolis, Ind.; R. Will, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Robert King, of the King Construction Company, Toronto; J. W. Lyon, of Belvidere, Ill.; J. F. Ammanu, of Edwardsville, Ill.; A. Jablonsky, of Wellston, Mo.; E. G. Hill, of Richmond Ind.

New York.

The cut flower market continues about as last reported. Carnations and roses are holding up more steadily than for several weeks, American Beauty leading, but there is not the usual winter animation and the satisfactory marketing of some things is due more to lightness of supply than to seasonable demand. Violets retain their low prices as heretofore. A season of temperate weather would help the violet crop greatly in its sale and, no doubt, when that comes the growers will have a more comfortable experience. All bulbous stock, including fine Golden Spur narcissi, is overplentiful, selling being devoid of any hopeful features. Lily of the valley shares in the depression although of excellent quality, as a rule. Lilacs have never been so good nor so plentiful here at this season as at present.

The dinner of the New York Florists' Club will be held Saturday, February 20, at 7:30 p. m., at the St. Denis hotel. A corps of entertainers has been engaged and every effort is being made by the efficient committee to insure an enjoyable evening.

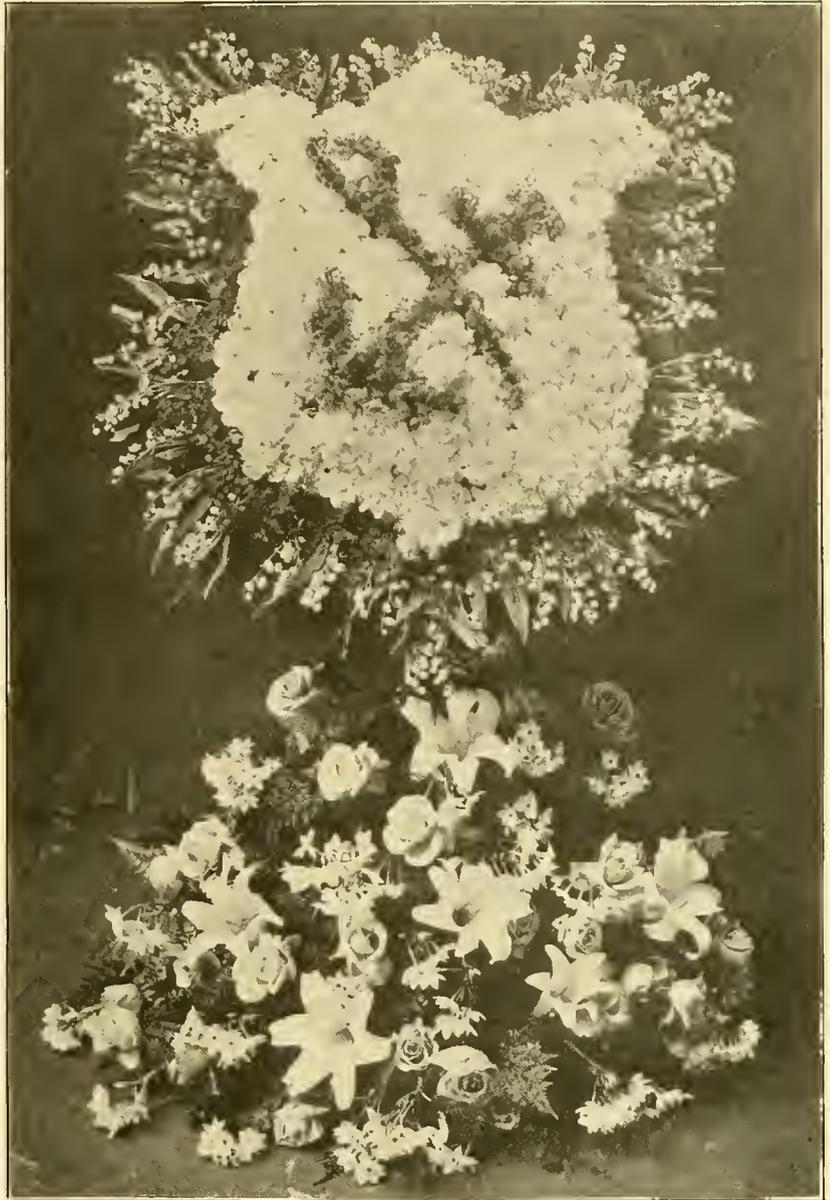

Victor S. Dorval, of Woodside, has purchased four acres of ground at Manhasset, L. I., for the building of a new plant. Several more growers are talking of doing the same thing. Taxes are getting too high to make it pay in greater New York.

A son of Gustav Frumiere, of Jersey City, died January 28 from the effects of excessive cigarette smoking. The boy was thirteen years of age.

Mrs. Julius Hanft died Monday, February 1.

Philadelphia.

A new device for collecting the black soot from bituminous coal smoke has been installed at Robert Craig & Sons and it appears to work like a charm. A fan run by water power draws the smoke from the stack near the bottom and forces it through several thin sheets or sprays of water which spread completely across the special smoke flue. It is then forced against a series of clay tiles set on end, to which much of the smoke sticks and which is again washed off by the falling water to the bottom of the flue and empties into a submerged tank. Here the soot rises to the top from which it is gathered, as it has a good commercial value. After the cleansing process the smoke passed back into the main stack and averages at least seventy-five per cent purer. The draft is about the same, there being no noticeable difference. Should this prove as successful as the inventors claim, and as the trial appears to prove it will, it should meet with great favor everywhere.

Another spell of extreme cold weather has made further inroads on the coal pile. Some of the growers say that they have already burned as much as last season and what is required from now until the spring season will bring up this item of expense to a record breaking point. Business is slow; there seems no life to it and still there is a scarcity of flowers in some lines. Beauty roses are noticeably scarce. Liberty fill in nicely and are taken in preference to the shorter Beauty. Bulbous stock is now to be seen in quantity, all the lines being full. Double Von Sions came in a week ago and are now to be had by the thousand. Carnations are at their best and some extra fine stock is seen, the stars being Prosperity, Lord, etc. Craig's Vesper, the new fringed white, is very fine and S. S. Pennock claims it to be one of the best sellers.

There was a very interesting meeting of the Florists' club last Tuesday evening. The chief attraction was the paper read by Secretary W. J. Stewart on "We and Our Field." This was handled in a masterly manner, being full of good thoughts and suggestions. It was well received and he was given a vote of thanks by the club. A. Fahrenwald is to tell us how to grow Liberty roses at the March meeting and as his stock is now the best in the country he should have a large audience.

M. B. Myers, of the Colonial Flower shop, has filed a petition in bankruptcy.

Boston.

The January exhibition at Horticultural Hall on Saturday was the best on record. Over five hundred bottles of orchid blooms were shown by the F. L. Ames estate, W. N. Craig gardener; J. E. Rothwell, E. Johanssen gardener, and Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher gardener, to whom were awarded the Appleton silver gilt medal, silver medal and bronze medal respectively. There were orchid plants by Lager & Hurrell and Colonel Charles Pfaff, George Melvin gardener, the latter being given a certificate of merit for superior cultivation of Cœlogyne cristata var. Chatsworth. There were two magnificent tables of Lorraine begonias, one for exhibition only from R. & J. Farquhar & Company, the other from J. Montgomery Sears, Alex. Ogg gardener. Mr. Ogg received a certificate of merit for superior cultivation as displayed in these begonias, an illustration of which was given in last week's issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Robert Cameron, of the Harvard Botanic Garden, received a certificate for Acacia Boyleana and a cultural certificate for Chorizema ilicifolium. A sport from the Mrs. Lawson carnation, striped in the way of Mrs. M. A. Patten, was shown by the Rockland greenhouses, and was recognized by the award of a certificate of merit. The prize competitions brought out some superb groups of Primula sinensis, P. stellata and P. obconica from E. J. Mitton, J. Lawson gardener; E. W. Breed and Mrs. J. L. Gardner; violets from Norris F. Comley and Colonel Pfaff, and freesias from Mrs. E. M. Gill. E. A. Orpet showed another of his seedling cattleyas, a cross between C. maxima and C. cinnabarina. The next important exhibition will be the spring show in March.

The cut flower trade moves along somewhat better than during the two previous weeks. There are no special features except a fair advance in the value of carnations. McKinley day, which was looked forward to as a possible factor in the carnation market, failed utterly in that respect here.

John Washke, for many years manufacturer of florists' wire designs, committed suicide by shooting himself on January 28, in his workroom in the rear of Sutherland's store. The cause was dependency over dull business. He leaves a wife and seven young children.

George Sutherland, who underwent an operation at the city hospital two weeks ago, is about again.

St. Louis.

One certainly gets a taste of the strenuous life visiting members of the trade these frigid days. It is not encouraging to learn "there is not much doing except in funeral work." Trade conditions, however, are somewhat improved. The prevailing cry is that white and pink roses are scarce, very scarce. Red is more plentiful. Yellow is seen only occasionally. Liberty roses are not on the market. Violets have taken a downward slant, quotations being from 50 to 60 cents. Roman hyacinths are more abundant than ever. Stevia is out of the market entirely.

The members of the Florists' Club will give an entertainment and hop at H. Haney's hall February 19. An interesting programme has been prepared for the meeting of the club February 11. F. J. Pillmore will talk on "Carnation Growing," and E. W. Guy will lead the discussion on "Propagating Carnations." This is to be a carnation meeting. Local growers are expected to show vases as well as those out of town.

Geo. E. McClure and Miss Ida Norton were quietly married the evening of February 1. Only a few intimate friends were present at the ceremony, which was quite informal. Mr. and Mrs. McClure left February 2 for Manhattan, Kas., for a week's visit with Mrs. McClure's family.

The banquet to be given in honor of the executive committee of the S. A. F. is expected to take place on the evening of March 5. A jolly, instructive and appetizing time is anticipated. Every member of the Florists' Club should attend if possible.

The St. Louis Cactus Association held an interesting meeting on January 31. Subjects under discussion were "Epiphyllums, Their Care and Culture" and "Fertilizing Succulent Plants."

Geo. Walbach is having a busy time with decorations. His most notable work of recent date was at the banquet given to a number of capitalists by Mayor Wells.

That the firm of Grimm & Gorley is enterprising is evidenced by the new delivery wagon recently received. It is one of the finest of the kind in the city.

C. H. Thompson, of Leland-Stanford University, will soon arrive in the city to take charge of the collection of succulents at the Missouri Botanic Garden.

The Bentzen Floral Company has a house of fine Flora Hill and Joost carnations. The stock for early spring sale is in good shape.

Mrs. H. G. Berning has been removed from the hospital to her home. Her condition continues to be anything but satisfactory.

The Michel Plant and Bulb Company has commenced work on the new range of houses. F. K. B.

Baltimore.

The weather, upon which the florists' trade so closely depends, continues wintry and exceptionally trying, the records of the weather bureau showing that January was the coldest of thirty-three years, the average being 27.3°, which is 5° or 6° below the normal mean temperature of that period. Still more abnormal is the continued cold. In ordinary seasons in this section after a cold "spell" of two or three days there is a thaw, followed by a spring-like interval of a week or so, but this year the cold has been unremitting and snow has covered the ground for weeks. Fortunately, one favorable feature was the few cloudy days, the atmosphere generally being clear and inspiring.

After the holiday trade, which hardly displayed the swing of last year, there was the usual dullness which is expected for a week or two in January. This has now yielded to a better demand, and most of the cut flowers offered have been taken up each week, though prices may have been shaded somewhat from former years. At Christmas, carnations were hardly equal to the market's requirements, and this condition still exists at times, good whites being especially in request. Roses are in fair supply, though those really first-class are insufficient for calls. Poorer grades drag somewhat, and the severe weather cuts off the street vendors, who usually take up a considerable proportion of this material. Nor are good violets abundant, and they seem in less demand than in times gone by. Some large growers have dropped out, and one shipper only, John E. Bartell, seems to have the secret of maintaining the quantity, color and fragrance which many others have lost.

The Liberty rose has practically disappeared here, owing to the difficulties of its culture. Few Meteors are grown, the dread of the black and bull-headed flowers, which follow periods of low temperature and clouds, operating against it. Here, as in most other localities, a great desideratum is a red rose of moderately easy cultivation.

Isaac H. Moss, of Govanstown, is sending in well-bloomed astilbes, apparently belated for Christmas forcing, but they do not seem to take as in the holiday season. John M. Rider is shipping handsome cyclamens, this gentleman being a farmer, who embarked a few years ago in the growing of violets, then ventured into the carnation field, being one of our largest shippers, and now competing with those "to the manor born" in raising blooming plants.

It sounds provincial to write it, but the opening of a new hotel has given the greatest impulse here of years to floral decorations. The handsome Belvedere has been in the six weeks or so of its business, the scene of many dinners, receptions, and other social functions of the fashionable set, including many strangers who alight here for an interval on journeys from north or south, and so largely stimulated the employment of flowers as to have a marked and healthful influence on the trade.

Henry Weber, of Oakland, whose death was recorded in the last issue of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, was widely known here and much respected. His career as a gardener began in Maryland as a grower of superb vegetables, and years ago he supplied the hotels of the mountain resorts then maintained by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. On the occasion of the meeting in Baltimore of the American Pomological Society, he made a great exhibit of the varieties in the culture of which he was famous. He was a man of deep religious feeling, and his business envelopes often bore numerous scriptural texts and religious exhortations.

The Florists' Exchange, a joint stock concern, which is the only intermediary between the growers and retailers of this community (there being no wholesale florists here), closed its year recently with a good showing of increased business. John J. Perry, now the manager, has systematized its work, and the operations are carried on with promptness and advantage to both growers and buyers.

The agricultural experiment station of Maryland, at the request of the Gardeners' Club, is undertaking to procure statistics of the florists' industry of this state, including the quantity of glass maintained, capital invested, amounts expended for labor, etc. There is no legal compulsion to make the returns, as in the census, and some object to disclosing their business, although it is promised that reports will be confidential.

At the instance of the new general superintendent of Parks, the custom which has prevailed of late years of growing plants for cut flowers in the greenhouses of the city parks has been discontinued. Large and costly structures erected as was popularly supposed for the production of budding plants for the various parks and squares, were devoted in reality to forcing roses, carnations and violets, and even the culture of mushrooms was exploited. This has provoked much criticism and seemed likely to result in a public scandal, for there was no public knowledge of the disposition made of the flowers. They were certainly not for the delectation of visitors, as the houses were kept locked and were inaccessible, and necessarily so, since the growing of roses with the constant opening of doors by visitors was of course impossible. Some other reforms are expected under the new park direction.

Over the stand of a vendor in paper flowers in one of our city markets a conspicuous sign reads: "Botanical Art Study!" S. B.

Washington, D. C.

With the landscape covered with nearly a foot of snow and the Potomac by an equal thickness of ice, we are in a position to sympathize with the florists of those semi-arctic regions between Boston and Duluth, who have been pelting the mercury with high priced coal. Considering the fact that a large and varied assortment of weather was crowded into the past week, trade was good. There were several entertainments at the White House; dinners to the outgoing and incoming secretaries of war, and many other functions, all of which called for a large amount of first-class stock. On account of the cold the trade in pot plants is at a standstill and several of the growers will have azaleas left on their hands. Roses are scarce and unless we have an exceptional spell of fine weather they will continue so for some time to come. Carnations are in fair quantity but bulbous stock, excepting white and yellow tulips, comes in slowly.

On a recent visit to the Soldiers' Home I was much interested in looking over the handsome and commodious conservatory. The palms and ferns are sheltered by a curvilinear house that is an ornament to the grounds. In the rear are several even span houses for cut flowers and bedding plants, as thousands of the latter are annually used in beautifying the grounds of the institution. The palms and ferns are arranged in a unique rockery of petrified vegetable matter, the material, I was told, having been brought from Geneva, Ohio. The clever work of arrangement is by Alex McPherson, florist and gardener at the home.

A handsome silver cup, the gift of Fred. H. Kramer, the florist, is now in the hands of the Baltimore bowlers. Mr. Kramer presented the cup with the understanding that it be contested for by the clubs of Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. On the night of January 27 the Baltimore Club came on and lifted the cup from our giants. The locals say they are going after it some time in March. As the weather will be warmer by that time, their "rheumatiz" may be better, at any rate, we hope so.

At the annual state dinner given January 14 by President and Mrs. Roosevelt to the diplomatic corps, the state dining room was even more elaborately decorated than usual for a dinner. The long mirror surrounded by a French gilt frame, purchased during the reign of Dolly Madison at the White House, was used on the table for the first time in several years. Floral plaques of rare lavender orchids, alternated with white carnations, were placed upon the mirror, while tall vases of flowers alternated with plaques of orchids the full length of the table.

John Robertson attended the dinner to commemorate the birth of Robert Burns and reports that it was an enjoyable event. Carnations were the flowers used, which seems to have been a misfit, for the memory of Burns and the heather are inseparable.

On January 29, the anniversary of the birth of President McKinley, the Ohio delegation in the house of representatives furnished carnations to all the other members of the house. The carnation was also worn on that day by many others.

F. H. Kramer, Z. D. Plackistone, A. Gude & Brother and G. B. Shaffer all report a good week of business, the most serious handicap being scarcity of stock.

The Gridiron club closed the week with a dinner, in the decorations for which Small turned himself loose and eclipsed his previous efforts. S. E.

Milwaukee.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club had its annual carnation show Tuesday, February 2. There were some excellent exhibits of Milwaukee growers. The Lawson, Enchantress and Adonis grown by Nic. Zweifel were notable. Some well grown stock of Lord was shown by Pohl & Krause; Heitman & Baerman showed Crane and Higinbotham; Otto Tietbohl had Lord and Wm. Helwig displayed Mrs. E. A. Nelson and a seedling white carnation, all very fine; J. D. Thompson Carnation Company exhibited Mrs. Nelson Fisher, which certainly is a fine carnation, also Mrs. M. A. Patten a good variegated variety, and some Adonis. There was also a magnificent vase of Estelle. F. Dorner & Sons showed The Belle and Lady Bountiful, a very good white carnation. The Chicago Carnation Company exhibited a fine lot of Crusader which was well liked, also some Fiancee which elicited considerable attention on account of its monster size. The same firm also showed Harlowarden, Reliance, Dorothy Whitney, Prosperity, Enchantress, Indianapolis and Alba. The club provided eatables, drinkables and cigars.

There was a slight improvement in the market the last week, especially in the rose line. All roses sold well and at good prices. Carnations are arriving in increasing numbers and in consequence all orders are easily filled and at reasonable prices. Bulbous stock is still slow sale, excepting some good La Reine tulips which are moving fairly well. There is an exceptionally good call at present for green goods, especially in the adiantum line. Plants have been slow sale the past month due to the extremely cold weather, the average temperature being 16° above zero.

Fred. Schmeling is able to be about again after being laid up with a broken ankle for five weeks.

Charles C. Carpenter, the new park superintendent, assumed his duties February 1.

Visitors: J. C. Vaughan, Chicago; Otto Sylvester, Oconomowoc, Wis.; James Hartshorne and J. D. Thompson, Joliet, Ill. H.

Montreal.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club is progressing nicely. The last meeting, held on February 1, had the best attendance for years. Joseph Bennett was elected president to succeed W. Whiting, who has removed from his old home in Montreal.

The florists in this city are experiencing the dullest period they ever had. Good roses are very scarce. The weather is not helping to improve this state of affairs. Snow storms are succeeding each other at close intervals. G. V.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The Western New York Horticultural Society began its annual meeting here January 27 with a large and enthusiastic attendance.

OBITUARY.

William A. Burgess.

Wm. A. Burgess, of Glen Cove, an old-time florist and famous grower of Marechal Niel roses, and father of the young man who lost his life in the Hotel Royal fire a number of years ago, died at Brooklyn, Sunday, January 31, aged 83 years.

Joseph Liggett.

Joseph Liggett, for many years a florist at Lowellville, O., died January 28 at the state hospital at Cleveland. He was 75 years of age and for three years had been confined to the state institution. He is survived by but two brothers, William and James. The former resides in Lowellville and the latter in the country. His wife preceded him to the grave.

Leroy Hopkins.

Leroy Hopkins, of Cortland, N. Y., dropped dead of heart disease on the afternoon of February 1, while at work in his greenhouse preparing flowers for a funeral. Mr. Hopkins had been subject to heart trouble for some time. Four or five years ago he dropped in a faint in Brown's drug store, but was restored to consciousness after hard work. The day before his death he complained of not feeling well, and did not return to work until 2 o'clock, feeling somewhat better. He was filling an order for flowers for the funeral of William H. Crane, of Homer, when he fell to the floor. Dr. Dana was summoned, but life had departed. Coroner Moore was notified and pronounced death due to heart failure. The deceased was about thirty-six years of age, and is survived by his father, L. C. D. Hopkins; his wife, one son, and a brother, Harry S. Hopkins, of Binghamton. Mr. Hopkins was one of Cortland's most progressive and successful business men. His greenhouses were the largest and most successful in this section of the state. A. J. B.

William Thompson.

William Thompson, gardener to the Manhattan state hospital, Central Islip, L. I., died suddenly at the age of 63 years, January 17, and was buried in the Catholic cemetery at Bay Shore, L. I., January 20. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, and came to this country in 1888. He became widely known here as a gardener of skill. He was employed at the Manhattan hospital for the last five years, and had marked success, his exhibitions of vegetables and plants at the fairs of Riverhead, Huntington, and at the Barkley lyceum, being awarded the highest prizes in their class. He was formerly gardener at the N. Y. Experiment station, Geneva, N. Y., where he had charge of the growing of vegetables for the World's Fair, Chicago, in 1893. His success and skill were here again very marked, as he was awarded a diploma for high class vegetables grown both in the open and under glass. He was well known in Ireland for his skill in growing all kinds of fruits, flowers and vegetables, and was awarded a certificate of merit by the Royal Horticultural Society of Ireland. The passing away of Mr. Thompson will be very much regretted by the many friends who knew him, because they all loved him for his simple, pure and honorable ways. D.

THE severe winter and its heavy demand on the coal supply should advance the price of all greenhouse plants from fifteen to twenty-five per cent.

POT roses of all kinds should have a temperature of 55° at night and 65° to 70° during the day. Frequent fumigating to keep off greenfly will be necessary.
Roses want abundant ventilation from the start, but sudden changes must be carefully avoided or mildew will appear.
Daisies should have plenty of water, air and light, and fumigating at least once a week. Fifty degrees at night and 60° to 65° in day will just suit them.

AZALEAS for Easter blooming should now be given all possible sunlight and abundant water and all new growths should be pinched back. A night temperature of 50° to 55° and day temperature of 65° to 70° is about right for them.
Acacias require essentially the same conditions and treatment. Special care should be observed to prevent their going dry at any time. Genistas will come along all right under similar conditions.
They particularly require all the fresh air that can possibly be given them.

Wistarias for Easter.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What course will be necessary to force wistarias for Easter?
GREEN GROWER.

About five weeks at a moderate temperature, 50° at night, will land them all right; give plenty of syringing at the start. WM. EDGAR.

Late Blooming Chrysanthemums.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Kindly give me a list of late blooming chrysanthemums.
I notice good blooms in the market as late as Christmas and would like to try them if I knew the varieties.

CONSTANT READER.

The following is a list of the best late blooming varieties:

WHITE.
Yanoma.	Mrs Rufus W. Smith.
W. H. Chadwick.	Convention Hall.
Merry Xmas.	White Bonnaffon.
PINK.
Maud Dean.	Mrs. S. T. Murdock.
Superba.	Xeno.
YELLOW.
Mrs. E. Buettner.	H. W. Buckbee.
H. W. Rieman.	Yellow Chadwick.

To be successful with late blooming chrysanthemums care must be taken to select only fresh young growing stock at time of planting which should be done during July or the first part of August.

Then aim to take the terminal bud at about October 1 to 15. The main point to be taken into consideration is to hold back the ripening of the wood until as late a date as possible. It makes quite a difference in what part of the country "Constant Reader" is located because if there is an over abundance of bright warm weather in the late fall months the wood will ripen and the bloom mature in spite of your calculations.

Railroad Gardening.

The Alton railroad has sent out from Chicago a corps of landscape gardeners to examine the different stations on its lines from that city to St. Louis and from Kansas City to St. Louis, with the view of preparing plans for the beautifying of depot grounds. It is the intention to lay out flower beds, grass plots and shrubbery patches at every important station along the lines between the points named, with the view of making the grounds as attractive as possible for the visitors to the world's fair at St. Louis. The work of fixing up the grounds according to the plans now being prepared will be begun as soon as the weather will permit.

MAMARONECK, N. Y.—Samuel Riddell, gardener to F. A. Constable, has a white sport from Enchantress. The flowers are said to be very large and of pure, glistening white, with regular Enchantress habits.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Charles McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.
Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-23, 1904.

MAIL order business to date is reported rather slow.

THE value of French bulbs exported to the United States the fall of 1902 is given in the United States consular report at Toulon as $127,881.

THE canners' convention, which occurs in Columbus, O., the coming week, is expected to shed some much-needed light on the sweet corn situation.

VISITED CHICAGO:—J. E. Northrup, of Northrup, King & Company, Minneapolis, Minn.; J. A. Robinson, with the J. B. Rice Company, Detroit; O. H. Will, of the O. H. Will Company, Fayetteville, N. Y.

LE SYNDICAT DE DEFENCE AGRICOLE ET HORTICOLE, having completed its third successful year, at its annual meeting at Hyeres, France, January 10 last, selected the following named persons for its officers for the year of 1904: President, M. Fichet-Nardy; Vice-Presidents, MM. Paul Amic, Michel Crozy and Paul Gensollen; Secretary, Pierre Moulis; Assistant Secretary, Henri Coufourier; Treasurer, M. Burlat; Assistant Treasurer, Lucien Recous.

Detroit.

The continued excessively cold weather seems to be largely responsible for a condition of trade which is anything but satisfactory to either growers or retailers. The former are complaining of a meagre cut of both roses and carnations, and the bulbous flowers produced are bringing very unsatisfactory prices. The violet growers, who are producing a generous crop of good blooms, are realizing lower prices at present than ever before, at the same period of the year, while the consumption of coal is greater than ever, and adding materially to the cost of everything grown. In retail circles reports indicate a great scarcity of good roses during the whole of the last month, and while carnations are at times plentiful the supply is irregular and unsteady. Romans, Paper Whites and lilies have been plentiful but their use has been confined almost entirely to funeral work. Violets are meeting with slow demand and the reduced prices on them do not encourage the retailers and the public sufficiently to consume the present large supply.

The club meeting Wednesday evening, February 3, brought out a large attendance. The entire time was devoted to the consideration of matters pertaining to the coming carnation meeting. Several committees were appointed to take charge of different portions of the work, and nothing is being neglected which will add to the completeness of every detail connected with the event, it being the desire and determination of those in charge to make the meeting and exhibition the most successful in the history of the society. Already many growers have signified their intention of making extensive exhibits, and the many inquiries concerning hotel accommodations, etc., indicate a large attendance of members. J. F. S.

Buffalo, N. Y.

We are still having cold weather with lots of snow. The event of last week was McKinley day. The sale of carnations was far in excess of last year. Palmer & Anderson, being downtown, had a large sale among business men. The Rebstocks, both J. H. and R. M., and also Byrne & Slattery had good sales. The making of a flat rate of 10 cents each was an excellent move. If an increased price had been asked the sales would have been much smaller. Several store windows were appropriately trimmed for the occasion. Anderson had samples of the mourning stationary used by all the cabinet officers, the lead pencil used by President McKinley in the last official business he transacted and the book compiled by the committee containing clippings, pictures, etc., pertaining to his assassination, death and burial.

The meeting of florists to discuss the action of the directors of Forest Lawn cemetery was spirited and resolutions were drawn protesting against their action. An effort will be made to see if it cannot be received. It seems to be unwarranted and deprives many florists of what was a big feature of their business. Another meeting will be held and a reply from the directors heard.

Prof. Cowell called last week and reported things in good shape at South Park. It is not decided as yet who is going to Detroit but the usual eight or ten will surely go.

Several weddings are booked for this week and a good trade is expected between now and Lent. Bison.

Lenox, Mass.

The Lenox Horticultural Society held its tenth annual ball January 26 in the town hall. It was the most successful and elaborate of the series. Preceding the dance a concert was given by Gartland's tenth regiment band, of Albany. Dancing was commenced shortly after 9 p. m. and continued until 2:30 a. m. The customary programmes were dispensed with and favors substituted, the ladies receiving celluloid book marks with pansies painted on them. The grand march was led by Vice-President Heeremans and Miss Weston, of Lenox. The march was participated in by nearly 100 couples. The committees of the ball were:

Arrangements—Charles R. Russell, Edward J. Norman and George F. Thompson.
Floor—Charles R. Russell, H. P. Woolsey, F. Heeremans and J. E. Bosworth.
Reception—E. Jenkins, F. Heeremans, S. Carlquist, R. A. Schmid and George Foulsham.

ROBERT BUIST COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific Burpee's FORDHOOK FARMS are famous As the largest Trial Grounds in America.

From the Atlantic.

Professor Johnson of The American Agriculturist, performed a similar office on behalf of the members of the agricultural and horticultural press present. Mr. Johnson said that the day had been one rare treat. In speaking of the immensity of the Trial Grounds at Fordhook, Professor Johnson stated that those present would take home a lesson which would be remembered for many years. There was not an experiment station in the United States, supported by State or national legislation, that had anything like the variety of tests that were conducted on the Fordhook Farms. He said this in all fairness to the splendid work of the Experiment Stations. —Extract from an Editorial account of "A FIELD DAY AT FORDHOOK" which appeared in THE FLORIST'S EXCHANGE, New York, July 4, 1903.

From the Pacific.

A careful seedsman's experiment grounds, like yours, it seems to me, are far more useful than any of the colleges or public experiment stations, as it all practical work. Your Fordhook Trial Grounds were the best of all my Eastern object lessons, and I had many of them. I had no idea of their extent and value, not only to yourself, but to every one of your customers, and eventually to every one who cultivates the soil—Thus wrote LUTHER BURBANK, "The Wizard of Horticulture," from Santa Rosa, California, October 20, 1900, upon his return from an extended eastern trip.

Special Announcement.

To FLORISTS and DEALERS who desire to supply the BEST SEEDS THAT GROW.

Herewith we show one page advertisement in March Delineator; similar page advertisements will appear also in the March numbers of McClure's, Munsey's, and Everybody's Magazine; also in The Mayflower, Success with Flowers, The Christian Herald, etc., while the same offers will appear in The Ladies Home Journal, Country Life in America, Saturday Evening Post, Country Gentleman, etc.

This Advertising, together with the wide circulation of BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1904, generally recognized as "The Leading American Seed Catalogue," will create a great demand for these Special Collections WHOLESALE. We will supply any or all of these popular 25c collections at $2.00 per dozen, postpaid, or $1.80 per dozen, by express—just 15c each.

BURPEE'S "BLUE LIST."

A new book of 144 pages. Will be mailed free on application to any Market Gardener or Florist who buys seeds to "plant for profit," but cannot be mailed to private planters, even if asked for. BURPEE'S RED LIST. Our strictly "Wholesale" Catalogue is mailed to Dealers only. It can not be sent even to Florists, unless they buy to sell again. Which of the above two catalogues are you entitled to receive? Kindly advise us at once and it will be sent by first mail. Our Retail Catalogue as advertised herewith is free to all who ask for it.

Eight Elegant New Sweet Peas.

For 25 Cts. we will mail, postpaid, one regular retail packet each of the following "Eight Best" new Sweet Peas: BURPEE'S DAINTY, the large flowers are beautifully formed and uniquely marked, "white with a pink edge,"—LORD ROSEBERRY, richly colored, deep rose-carmine flowers, gracefully hooded, see illustration.—JANET SCOTT, "the best pink sweet pea," flowers of large size, three on a stem.—LADY GRISEL HAMILTON, largest and best light lavender.—THE HON. MRS. E. KENYON, beautiful primrose-colored flowers of truly enormous size.—COCCINEA, a new color in Sweet Peas, a bright cherry-red.—JEANIE GORDON, charming, bright rose, shaded primrose, and a large packet of the unequalled new BURPEE'S BEST MIXED FOR 1904. The Seven Superb Separate Sorts are shown painted from nature, while the SPECIAL MIXTURE is described on page 108 of our new Catalogue for 1904.

25 Cts. buys all the above Eight Elegant New Tall Sweet Peas. Peas, and in each collection we enclose our NEW LEAFLET ON CULTURE FOR 1904.

Seven Nasturtiums. For 25 Cts.

we mail one full-size packet each of all seven distinct types: The beautiful Dwarf Liliput in best mixture,—the unequalled mixture, Burpee's "Gorgeous" New Tom Thumb,—the interesting small-leaved Tom Pouce,—the brightly colored Lobbs' Finest Mixed,—the superbly brilliant new and unequalled mixture of Burpee's Hotspur Harlequin,—the gracefully artistic Ivy-Leaved, and the finest Burpee's New Superb Giant-flowered Nasturtiums. In the large bag enclosing each collection is included our NEW LEAFLET on culture.

Burpee's GEM Collection.

For 25 Cts. we mail one packet each of all the following: Little Gem SWEET ALYSSUM, carpets the ground with a mass of white.—Fordhook Favorites among ASTERS, embracing many of the choicest types.—Burpee's Defiance BALSAMS, in unequalled mixture, including the new Exquisite.—Dwarf Marguerite CARNATIONS, in finest colors.—Burpee's New Giant-flowered NASTURTIUMS, in unequalled mixture.—Royal Prize PANSIES, both free-flowering and giant varieties.—Largest-flowering PHLOX DRUMMONDII, as grown by ourselves.—Fordhook Fairy POPPIES, most graceful double flowers, in many colors,—a large packet of Burpee's New Grand Tall SWEET PEAS, as specially prepared for 1904, and a small packet of the most beautiful New PLUMED CELOSIAS. This novelty is likely to give such rare delight to all flower lovers as to be alone worth the quarter paid for all ten packets!

Vegetables! "FIVE FINEST" FORDHOOK FAMOUS NEW VEGETABLES.

For 25 Cts. we will mail, postpaid, one full-size packet (such as we sell separately at ten cents per packet) each of the following: FORDHOOK FAMOUS CUCUMBER, the largest, most handsome, and finest flavored of all cucumbers.—BURPEE'S BRITTLE-ICE LETTUCE, the popular New "Nameless" Lettuce distributed for advance trials last season.—BURPEE'S NEW HALBERT HONEY WATER-MELON, sweetest and best for home use.—BURPEE'S NEW GOLDEN GLOBE ONION, earliest and handsomest of globe-shaped onions, and CHALK'S EARLY JEWEL TOMATO, largest of all extreme-earlies.

Above Five are all shown, painted from nature, on the cover or plates in our Catalogue. Perhaps there are named above one or two vegetables that you do not care for. Therefore you may omit any of the above, and instead select a packet of either the New DANISH ROUNDHEAD CABBAGE,—the unequalled CHINESE GIANT PEPPER,—the earliest HAILSTONE RADISH,—the delicious FORDHOOK BUSH SQUASH, or the New QUARTER-CENTURY STRAIN OF BURPEE'S BUSH LIMA BEAN.

For One Dollar we will mail all the seeds advertised—ten New Vegetables and twenty-five packets Choicest New Sweet Peas, Nasturtiums and other Flowers—in all thirty-five full-size packets for ONE DOLLAR!

Every one of these varieties is entitled to be marked with a bull's-eye [O],—as absolutely the best of its type.

Or For One Dollar

you can have ANY FIVE COLLECTIONS, and mailed to separate addresses if so requested. Be sure to ask for BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1904 when ordering. Write TO-DAY!

THE WORLD'S LARGEST MAIL-ORDER SEED BUSINESS

You need not take our word for the truth of this statement (although we never knowingly exaggerate), but can read below the entirely unsolicited opinions of two leading experts. There is not money enough, even in all the territory "from the Atlantic to the Pacific," to purchase such testimony from either of these well-known Horticulturists! They know whereof they speak and do not hesitate to tell freely the plain truth—as learned from their own inspection.

 Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

DAYTON, O.—The Montgomery County Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting February 3 at the residence of John Siebenthaler.

MOBILE, ALA.—The Alabama State Horticultural Society convened here January 26 for a two days' session. Members from various parts of Alabama, Georgia and Florida were present.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—The Pebble Hill Fruit Farm and Nurseries of Franklin county, has been incorporated by T. W. Boozelton, J. E. Carmack, J. C. Carmack, T. A. Embrey and Jo. C. Garner and capitalized at $10,000.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—The state board of horticulture will make many improvements in the southern Utah fruit farm at St. George. Among those contemplated is the putting in of complete apparatus for recording and measuring the irrigating water used on the various plats of the fruit farm.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The Kentucky State Horticultural Society at the meeting January 28, which closed the convention for 1904, requested the legislature to expand the scope and duties of the State Entomologist to include a more frequent and more minute examination of the fruit stock in Kentucky for the discovery of insects and other damaging marauders of that variety.

St. Paul.

Trade has felt the effect of the cold weather the last couple of weeks, but with plenty of funeral work it has been nearly as good as could be expected. A surplus of bulbous stock is seen everywhere, but prices are being kept up well. All the stores are making extra efforts to keep up attractive window displays, and are all satisfied that it pays, too. The only scarcity in flowers is Beauty stock. A few are seen, but they are of poor quality.

Some of the growers are worrying about getting their lilies in for Easter, and some of them will have a hard pull to get them.

Messrs. C. W. Scott, Aug. Rhotert and L. P. Lord were visitors during the week. O. O.

Pueblo, Col.

The steel works' closing down has made business very dull here. J. O. Zimmerman has closed his Main street store, which he opened before Christmas. G. Fleischer has a fine stock of roses, carnations and violets.

Charles H. Vick, of Wm. Hagemann & Company, New York, was with us a day this week. S. R. L.

URBANA, O.—C. A. Reeser & Company, florists, filed a deed of assignment January 26 naming I. O. Tritt assignee. The liabilities will reach $15,000. The assets will not reach over $10,000. The failure of the Reeser company was precipitated by the failure of the Floral Publishing Company and the New Era Company, in Springfield, last week. The Reeser people were on their paper.

The bowling alleys in the basement of the Coogan building are the scene of many an exciting contest between growers of the Cut Flower Exchange. On Tuesday last John Donaldson, George Golsner, E. W. Holt and Jasper McMullen rolled sixteen games, Golsner and Holt winning twelve games and Donaldson and McMullen four.

At Baltimore.

A team of bowlers of the Gardeners' Club composed of Chas. L. Seibold, Robert Halliday, Jas. H. Boone, Mack Richmond and Mr. Kreh brought back from Washington January 27 a handsome silver cup, won by them in the first of a series of inter-city contests against a team of the Washington Florists' Club. The Baltimore score was 887, 817, and 890; the Washington, 715, 739 and 819. The Philadelphia club failed to send its representatives, who were expected. The cup is the gift of Fred H. Kramer, of Washington, D. C. S. B.

Pittsburg.

The "smoking raucher" given by the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club, February 2 was an unbounded success. It was not known the club contained so many talented entertainers. Every one that did a "stunt" received the hearty applause of the 200 present. The raucher was held in the rathskeller of the club's quarters. This was suitably decorated with laurel, holly, palms, and immortelle designs, including a large pipe of immortelles, all sent to the club and arranged by Gus and W. J. Ludwig. Refreshments were served during the evening. Preceding the entertainment fifteen tables were arranged for card playing. E. Reinaman was master of ceremonies. The entertainment began with an excellent trio of Swiss singers who were recalled time and again. Phil Langhans, dressed in the costume of a German count, sang a topical song to the tune of "Mr. Dooley." This choice bit was done with great dignity. The song included the names of many of the club members. Mr. Langhans was accompanied by four desperate looking musicians, who added much to the hilarity of the occasion and played music that will never be forgotten. These artists were Ed. McCollum, George Marshall, Carl Klinke and William Potter. John Bader, in a short talk, gave away the secrets of "pool playing." When he finished Mr. Langhans in the name of the club presented him with a genuine diamond ring of about eight karats as a token of appreciation for his great services to the club. A "colored" quartette then rendered coon songs. P. S. Randolph spoke on shooting as an amusement in the potting shed, and was willing to shoot an apple off the head of any one who came forward. There were no takers. A skit by Julius Ludwig and Wm. Lauch made a hit. A boyhood reminiscence was related by E. Zieger. Patrick Maier gave "A Speech Without a Title."

The bouquet presented to Mr. Langhans after his act at the club affair was composed of red carnations and lighted Chinese incense sticks. When the actor became hoarse he loosened a cork in the butt of the bouquet and poured out a glass of "ambrosia."

Business continues irregular with no prospects of improvement until the weather moderates. All stock seems to be plentiful and fine. Spring flowers are coming in in good shape.

A parting of the water main from which I. S. Crall, of Monongahela City, gets his supply of water, caused the loss of a house of Meteor and the greater part of a house of carnations. E. L. M.

Louisville, Ky.

Members of the Society of Kentucky Florists at their recent meeting voted to have March 1 carnation exhibition day, and will invite carnation growers to show their flowers. J. Coenen was the originator of the plan and motion. Express charges will be paid by the society on flowers sent for the exhibition.

Cut flowers have been scarce in Louisville all winter, the demand exceeding the supply.

Anders Rassmussen, who was ill with typhoid fever, is able to be out again. H. G. W.

McKinley day was celebrated here last Friday by almost everyone wearing Lawson carnations.

=====New Rose=====

GENERAL MacARTHUR

Hybrid Tea.

Color by far the most brilliant of any shade of crimson forcing rose ever offered, retaining its brilliancy when fully expanded. It is also one of the very sweetest varieties ever offered, of very easy culture, as it can be grown in the same temperature as an ordinary Tea variety such as Bride. It is a good, strong, vigorous grower, producing stems 24 to 30 inches long, a free and continuous producer. It can be grown at much less cost than Meteor or Liberty and is a much brighter color than either. Also larger when fully expanded. We predict that this will be the red rose for the multitude. Ready for distribution April 1, 1904.

New Carnation The Bride For 1904.

We have grown this variety for the past four years and can with confidence assert that it is the most prolific white variety we have ever grown.

The flowers average 3 to 3½ inches in diameter, of ideal form and the purest white, borne on good stout stems which average 14 to 16 inches long, after the plants get well established; a free and continuous producer, and a healthy, clean grower, not subject to disease in any form.

Awarded Certificate of Merit by the New York Florists' Club, February 11, 1901; First prize for the best 100 white at the American Carnation Convention Show in Brooklyn, N. Y., February, 1903; Certificate of Merit by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society at their March Exhibition, 1903.

Strong, well-rooted stock ready February 1, 1904.
Prices $2.50 per dozen; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

NEW LIGHT PINK CARNATION

"NEW DAYBREAK"

To the commercial grower who is looking for profit, this variety is all that its name implies, and will at once command itself as the old Daybreak reincarnated without its faults. Color, true Daybreak shade; of Daybreak and Scott extraction through several generations of seedlings. Inherits the vigor and freedom of both the above varieties. Blooms, large, well formed and very sweet; does not have a washed out appearance at any time of the year. A fine keeper and shipper.

Price, $3.00 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

NEW CARNATION Louise Naumann

Dark pink. Produces far more than Lawson and is a better color. With this variety you can pick every day the year around. Always heavy with buds and flowers. Most excellent keeper. Size, 3-3½ inches. Fringed and never bursts or fades. Averages 25 flowers per plant a season, more than any variety I have ever grown. Come and see them grow. Order now for February and March Delivery, $1.25 per Doz.; $8.00 per 100; $70.00 per 1000. Also Rooted Cuttings of ENCHANTRESS, $6.00 per 100.

The Two Best Commercial White Carnations

LADY BOUNTIFUL.

The best of all white carnations.
It is clean and healthy.
It has a strong, robust growth, but produces no surplus grass.
It is early flowering and the best producer throughout the entire season.
Its keeping and shipping qualities are far superior to any other white carnation.
If you grow Lady Bountiful you have a white carnation where every flower is a flower with a stiff wiry stem, a perfect calyx and no splits.
It does well in either a medium or heavy soil.
You cannot miss it by placing your order now before all the early stock is sold.
We have up-to-date booked more orders for Lady Bountiful than the whole season's sales of any new carnation we have yet introduced.
It is a winner.

THE BELLE.

Is an excellent companion to Lady Bountiful with equally good points to make it a favorite paying variety with all growers.
Our large stock and easy propagation still enables us to offer February and March delivery.

Price for well rooted cuttings:
$12.00 per 100; $ 00.00 per 1000.

We also have all of the best of the 1903 Novelties and the leading standard varieties.

La DETROIT

Breitmeyers' New Rose

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID.

To Be Disseminated April 1, 1904.

COLOR. Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE. Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM. Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH. Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific.

NEW PINK CHRYSANTHEMUM Dr. ENGUEHARD

The finest commercial Pink Chrysanthemum ever introduced.

We were awarded for this, first prize for the best six blooms any new pink variety at the Chrysanthemum Show in New York. This is going to be in pink chrysanthemums what Col. D. Appleton has been in yellow and Timothy Eaton in white. It is a fine commercial flower of the largest size, and an ideal color; fine, large, compact blooms of great substance; a fine shipper; something that has long been wanted in pink chrysanthemums. It has grand foliage, is an easy "doer," and a phenomenal variety in every respect. As the demand for this is enormous, it would be advisable to place orders without delay. As orders are filled in rotation, the earlier order is placed the earlier delivery we can make.

Certificated by the C. S. A., having scored as high as 95 points.

Worcester, Mass.

There has been a change in the board of officers of the Worcester Conservatory, F. G. Davis retiring. The officers now are G. F. Barnard, president; W. B. Barnard, treasurer; L. C. Midgeley, secretary and manager. W. T. Tapper has severed his connection with the firm and Mr. Goudy has charge of the roses.

Trade the last month has been satisfactory and good flowers in all lines are plentiful. Fine stock of roses, carnations, violets, mignonette, etc., is in good supply at the present writing.

According to the local papers H. F. Littlefield contemplates building a 250-foot house in the near future.

Lange's roses and carnations are of specially fine quality.

Spokane, Wash.

The Washington State Horticultural Association at its last session decided to hold the next meeting at Wenatchee. The association adopted resolutions demanding a flat reduction from the express companies of 12 1/2 per cent. on fruit. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Rev. F. B. Utter, Wenatchee; first vice-president, W. H. Paulhamus, Sumner; second, vice-president, C. L. Whitney, Walla Walla; treasurer, R. C. McCroskey, Garfield; secretary, L. G. Monroe, Spokane; president of the horticultural department, Mrs. L. B. Wright, North Yakima.

Albany, N. Y.

The convening of the legislature, January 13, was made the occasion for the presentation of many gifts of flowers to the members by their friends. Since there have been a number of funerals, society functions and receptions, which have kept the local florists very busy.

Walter Mott, of Jamestown, was in the city January 25 and 26.

Now is the Time

To Investigate Matters Pertaining to Improvements in Your Plans for the Coming Season.

I wish to call your attention to the new DUPLEX IRON GUTTER, made of the best and strongest material, never six miles in use, giving the best of results. No snow or ice has bothered the Duplex this snowy winter, the only positively drip-proof gutter made. No drip from the glass or gutter. A boy can erect them. Simple and durable. Make a shadeless house, very neat and strong. Over 14 years in use and still the leader in simplicity, durability and ease of operation with power to sell.

Also the recently patented STANDARD STEAM TRAP. This trap has been especially invented to fill a want among the Florists, knowing that a reliable trap at all times willing to work, and easily controlled is needed. Do not fear to risk your plant to a Standard Steam Trap. It beats gravity to a stand still.

WRITE FOR OUR CATALOGUE No. 47.

Chicago House Wrecking Co.,
W. 35th and IRON STS., CHICAGO, ILL.

Cincinnati.

Trade holds up exceedingly well, and it is a case of skirmish to get enough roses and carnations for orders. Harrisii and calla lilies are in good demand, with not quite enough to go around. There are enough violets for all orders and a few left over. Bulbous stock is plentiful, also smilax and Asparagus plumosus, while A. Sprengeri is scarce. There are a few 'mums seen on the market now and then, of the variety Merry Christmas. The last lot of poinsettias were brought in last week, and were sold as soon as taken out of the box. Klehms' nurseries, at Arlington Heights, Ill., are sending the Novelty tulip to this market. This is in demand at $4 per 100. We have also had shipments of violets from Rhinebeck and Poughkeepsie, but they cannot be compared with the local article. When it comes to the real thing in violets we all have to take off our hats to Smith & Young, of Indianapolis, as their Marie Louise are the finest to be had. A great many carnations were used for McKinley day, January 29, and florists sold out clean. Jos. Goldman, of Middletown, says he sold all the Lawson he could get at twenty-five cents each, and did not have enough for all his customers.

It is with utmost regret that we read the obituary notice of Henry Weber, of Oakland, Md. Mr. Weber was a frequent visitor and exhibited often at our monthly shows. The dealers of this city take this method of extending their sympathy to the bereaved family.

Dohrmann & Schroetter have purchased the greenhouses of Henry Benzinger, at Fifteenth and Holman streets, Covington, Ky., and will grow cut flowers for the Cincinnati market. A. O.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—Charles Adgate estimates the loss caused by the freezing of his stock January 24 at $7,000.

PALMS AND FERNS.

Seasonable Notes.

This is the quiet season among plants of this character, for many of them are still taking a more or less complete rest, though the resting period is getting short. But little potting is in order as yet, there being nothing gained by too much haste with plants that are not in condition to take hold of the fresh soil. We have remarked several times before that kentias are the only palms among the ordinary commercial species that are improved by being repotted during the winter instead of waiting for the opening of spring, and even in so severe a season as the present one we find no reason to change that opinion, the only condition under which we might change our present practice being in the case of a poorly heated establishment where it was impossible to keep the kentias in a proper temperature of 60° at night. Under such conditions it would be the part of wisdom to wait until the breaking up of winter before disturbing the roots of even the kentias. But supposing the kentias to be kept in a night temperature of 50°, they are quite likely to lose some of their deep, rich, green color before spring, the younger leaves showing the greater loss of color, and the plants getting a rather hard and starved look that is attractive to neither grower nor buyer, though not necessarily resulting in permanent injury. The greatest loss from getting plants in this condition is in the loss of time that is used in getting them back to a good growing condition again. It takes several weeks to start them on again in the spring and thus cuts down the growing season to that extent. This matter of time is an important factor to the palm grower, the margin of profit being not by any means an excessive one, and, unless prepared for these contingencies, the wise grower will touch the palm market but lightly.

About three years ago the European stocks of palms were rather down in regard to certain sizes that were much in demand, but now the small plants of that period are coming into the market in great quantities, and there will doubtless be many attractive offers made by the representatives of the European growers, those interesting hustlers who are always quite ready to separate the American florist from his hard-earned capital. But attractive though these offers may be, there is always that forty-five or fifty per cent of expenses to be kept in mind when ordering plants from Europe, and that the one dollar plant does not look quite so large and cheap after you get through paying $1.50 for it without taking into consideration the constant possibility of finding a few injured or imperfect plants in each shipment. That there are many plants of excellent quality imported from Europe each season no one will deny, but there are also large numbers that will not pass muster as first-class stock, and in addition to this there is no good reason, climatic or otherwise, to prevent us from supplying our own market with palms, the difference in the cost of labor not being enough to count for much in this matter. Higher duties would probably have but little effect on this case, the chief reason for the American dealer and decorator importing palms being found in the fact that he is frequently unable to find what he wants in this country, and is thus driven to importing in order to get plants adapted for his purpose. Our climate is superior for the production of palms to that of most of continental Europe, and many of the species may be grown much more rapidly here than there. But the pros and cons of the question of importing may scarcely be considered in the light of cultural items by the editor unless it be along the line of mind culture, and it would seem best that we return to our knitting, or rather to our potting.

There is a fungoid disease of kentias that bears some resemblance to the stem rot of which the carnation growers have so much tribulation. The palm that is affected in this manner first shows a slightly withered appearance of the foliage, much as though the plant was suffering from lack of water. This is usually followed by one or two of the lower leaves turning yellow rather suddenly, and a further examination will show that the plant has rotted off at the collar and is entirely beyond recovery. The progress of the disease is so rapid that on turning out of the pot one of the plants that has rotted off, it is sometimes found that the roots still appear to be healthy, though in some cases the roots will also appear to be affected. This disease has given much trouble to some growers, and apparently infects the particular space on the bench that has been occupied by the diseased plant, for an apparently healthy plant that has been moved to fill up the space will sometimes develop the disease and go off in the same manner as its predecessor. From it would seem that the bench had come infested to some extent with the spores or mycelium of the fungus. Thus far there does not appear to have been a satisfactory remedy found for this trouble, but it would seem that plants that are not over strong to begin with, and that have suffered from extremes of moisture and dryness, are more likely to develop the stem rot than are those that are in vigorous health. In fact the plants that are allowed to get very dry, or are kept in a partially dry condition during the winter, are much more likely to become suitable objects for the vegetable pathologist than those that enjoy a liberal supply of water the year around.

The tremendous firing that has been needful during the present winter in order to keep up a proper temperature has brought about various attacks of red spider, the strong heat and comparatively dry air provide ideal conditions for this little pest and require constant watchfulness on the part of the grower. Vigorous syringing will do much to keep this pest down, but in case a batch of small plants become affected by it, a dipping in a rather strong solution of tobacco soap or whale oil soap and tobacco extract will probably put a stop to it. The plants are thoroughly rinsed in the solution so that all portions of the foliage may be wetted, the same treatment being also of value in ridding small palms of mealy bug, which insect also propagates freely during the winter, as in fact it does at almost all seasons of the year. The subject of shading will soon need to be considered again and will probably be referred to in an article in the near future.

THE CARNATION.

American Carnation Society.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Registered by Davis Brothers, Bloomsburg, Pa., Mary Albert, color pure white; stem twenty-four to thirty-six inches, long, stiff and wiry. Early and continuous bloomer; does not burst at any time of the year. Blooms measure from two and one-half to three inches. An extra good keeper. Cross Crane by Flora Hill. Might be termed an improved Flora Hill.

Everyone interested in carnations should attend the meeting of the American Carnation Society at Detroit, Mich., March 2 and 3. The rate of one and one-third fares has been secured from the Trunk Line Association and the Central Passenger Association, these two associations covering the greater part of the territory from which attendance will be forthcoming for this meeting. Everyone who has something to exhibit and is not a member of the society can get a premium list giving full particulars by applying to the secretary, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa. The premium list has been sent to each member of the society, and anyone not getting his should apply at once for a second copy.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

Advice to Exhibitors.

The Detroit meeting of the Carnation Society will be here in a little more than two weeks and intending exhibitors must by this time be making their preparations. Detroit being located within easy distance of so many large carnation growers, together with the fact of so many new varieties now being introduced this season, ought to be indication enough that this convention will be the greatest in the history of the society. Introducers cannot afford to neglect this opportunity of displaying their new varieties now being offered to the trade, also those being worked up for the season of 1905. This will also be the greatest and cheapest opportunity of every carnation grower to compare and make observations between the novelties and those that have stood the test. Many bright ideas and experiences can be obtained in a very short while by attending these meetings, all of which will more than repay you for your time and expense. If you make an exhibit you may not win out but you will have the experience of comparing your products with those that do.

The one great point to bear in mind when putting up a vase of carnations is evenness. Even in color, even in size, even in form and even in length and strength of stem are things that tell. I have been at exhibitions several times with a vase of blooms, in which many of the flowers were so much superior to the others in the vase that they have given the whole an uneven appearance. Consequently a vase of blooms though not quite as large, but more even, has beaten it out.

The Late Josiah Hoopes.

To be able to show the blooms at their best particular care must be taken from now on to keep the temperature of the houses as near the mark as possible with a slight tendency to the cool side. You can do this by reducing the steam heat a little earlier on bright days and leaving it off a little later in the afternoon; also by ventilating more freely but not so much that a cold draught will flow on the plants. By watching this part closely you will get a better texture in your blooms and a much stiffer stem, besides a far better color. If the weather is cloudy do not neglect a little crack of ventilation even if it takes an extra pipe of steam to get it. Use extra care in watering to keep the beds as near moist as you can but do not let them dry out or the size of the blooms will suffer. An application of liquid manure once a week will prove beneficial. This will be ample if the plants are as they should be at this season and if not, any quantity of liquid manure will not make them produce exhibition blooms. As the sun is getting much stronger every week now some of the pink varieties will need a little light shade as they fade very quickly, notably Mrs. Lawson and Enchantress. It is too early to shade with a brush so I find that the best way is to syringe enough of the shading on the glass to break the glare of the sun.

When it is time to cut the blooms allow them to stand about twenty-four hours in water before packing them. Get jars about twelve to fifteen inches deep, large enough to hold fifty blooms and take some stiff paper and tie around the jar allowing it to extend far enough above the top to hold the blooms upright. This will enable the stems to take up the water freely. Be sure, though, that the flowers are not crowded and give them every chance to expand. Regarding the best method of packing for shipment, I find that it is well to use a box four to four and one-half feet long, eighteen inches wide and six inches deep, and to pack one layer of blooms in each box, cleating three such boxes together in one package. For the inside packing we cut strips of cotton wadding to cover the bottoms and sides. We tack these on, then take a double thickness of tissue or oil paper and tack over this, treating the lid the same way. We then make little pillows of tissue paper to lay under each row of blooms, working from each end, and laying a wad of wet paper over the stems and cleating the whole in the center. By following this plan the paper cannot press down on the blooms. You can nail three of these boxes together and paper the whole outside to suit the weather.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Cultural Reminders.

The past eight to ten weeks have been anything but favorable to the production of the highest grade of flowers. In our section there has been so little sunshine that the stems have appreciably limbered up and the growth has become softer than we care to see it at any time. We have scarcely had a half dozen days on which the sun was seen at all during ten weeks, and then hardly long enough to penetrate the frosty glass. We expect better weather from now on, however. It is a good thing in cases of dearth of sunshine to give the plants a dressing of wood ashes or lime, or both, at intervals of about a month. The unleached hard wood ashes should be put on at the rate of about a bushel to one thousand square feet of bench surface. Air slaked lime should be put on just heavy enough to whiten thoroughly the surface of the soil. Liquid manure may be used more freely from now on in bright weather, but in uncertain weather must still be used with considerable care, else a soft growth will result. With plants in rapid growing condition and good weather, twice a week after the middle of February is not too much.

Some varieties usually need a very light shade after February 1, especially the light pink. Among these are Lawson, Enchantress and Sunbeam, all of which burn easily. It takes good judgment to put on this coat of wash, for if put on more than enough just to break the strongest rays of the sun there is danger of injuring the vitality of the plants. The plants themselves would be better off without any shade at all for a couple of months yet, for the temperature can still be controlled by proper manipulation of the ventilators and the syringe. On bright, sunny days, when there is much air on the house, a fine spray given in the form of a gentle shower will prevent wilting. It is not well in such cases to have more than the usual quantity of water at the roots, but the plants should be gradually inured to more abundant ventilation, and wilting, which is never beneficial, will be reduced to a minimum. A little more water at the roots than was used a month ago, of course, is in order now. The syringe should also be used with greater freedom, for red spider should be guarded against at all times and never allowed to gain a foothold. Greater folly could not exist than to wait for traces of this pest to appear before making an effort to expel it. If the end of the hose is in skillful hands and properly used there will be little use for salt water or any other concoction to kill red spider. Stick to nature's method wherever you can. We do not like to spray plants in bloom with any kind of mixture and seldom find it necessary.

The young stock will come in for a great deal of attention now. All cuttings should be thoroughly rooted before they are taken from the sand, and it is preferable to run them a little warm right after transplanting for a week or so, say about 53° at night, until they are well started. Give them the sunniest bench, free from drip, and shade for a few days during the warm part of the day. After they have started growing the night temperature may be held at about 45°, but no lower. The object is to get a solid short growth, which is essential to produce a shapely plant. A good syringing once a week for red spider should not be omitted. After the days get sunnier twice a week will be right. A good smoking once a week for green aphid with good, strong tobacco stems or dust, will do away with the necessity of dosing the plants with a strong spray or with tobacco dust later.

Whether to grow the young plants in pots, flats or benches is a question everyone must decide for himself. When there are plenty of pots on hand, and plenty of room, pot culture for the young stock might be preferred, but the writer has always produced good plants in flats and on benches and that is the method he is using now. Either way has its advantages and drawbacks. To plant a lot of cuttings on a bench now and leave them in the same position until planting out time and then destroy most of the good roots is a barbarous method. The feeding roots travel quite a distance from the plants, and by cutting the plants out with an ordinary sized ball most of these are lost. Right here is where a little brain comes in handy. Experienced nurserymen know that to transplant nursery stock every year is better than to leave it in the same position year after year, because the root pruning consequent to transplanting keeps the roots near the plants. The same principle applies to stock indoors. With us the cuttings are first planted in benches or flats from the sand, about two inches apart each way, to remain there about six weeks to two months. Then they are transplanted into flats or pots, early enough to get them thoroughly established by the time they are removed to the cold frames. This extra handling is just what they need to keep the roots at home. By planting out time a good root foundation is secured and there is not one quarter the check that would otherwise result. At the second transplanting they are allowed three inches each way, or more, if necessary. The soil should not be very rich. A pampered growth will not stand much wear.

American Carnation Society.

We are in receipt of the premium list for the tenth annual meeting of the American Carnation Society, which will be held in Harmonie hall, Detroit, Mich., March 2 to 4. The premiums are numerous, and there are many attractive special prizes offered by prominent houses in the trade. Papers will be presented as follows: "The Management of Exhibitions," by W. N. Rudd, Mt. Greenwood, Ill.; "The Exhibition of Carnations on lines similar to those of the Chrysanthemum Society," by W. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y.; "The Maintenance of Health and Vigor in Carnations," by Robert Craig, Philadelphia, Pa. The railroads have granted a rate of one and one-third fare, and it is expected that there will be a very large attendance. The exhibition will be under the management of John F. Sullivan, and all exhibits should be addressed to him, charges prepaid, at Harmonie hall, corner of Wilcox and Center streets, Detroit, Mich. Copies of the premium list and all other particulars may be had on application to Secretary Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.—The Hoosac Valley Horticultural Society, which was organized some time ago, held its second meeting February 2 at the office of A. J. Schmutz in Arnold place. There was a good attendance of the members. By-laws and a constitution were adopted and it was decided that the regular meetings of the society will be held at Pythian hall the first and third Tuesday evenings of each month.

CARNATION HOUSE OF W. L. LEWIS, MARLBORO, MASS., EXTERIOR.

WITH THE GROWERS

A Carnation House at Marlboro, Mass.

W. L. Lewis. Exterior and interior views are given on page 83, of a carnation house 110x150 feet, erected by the Lord & Burnham Company, for W. L. Lewis, at Marlboro, Mass. Mr. Lewis is a young man, being but twenty-six years of age, and his energy and ambition mark him as one of the heavy weights among the New England growers of the future. He acquired the Howe greenhouses which are seen in the extreme right of the exterior photograph, several years ago, and since then has been rapidly building up a prosperous local and wholesale trade. The local trade of Marlboro, which is an affluent city of 15,000 people, calls for 15,000 geraniums and a corresponding number of other bedding plants, winter flowering plants, lilies and bulbous flowers, etc., and the old range is devoted mainly to this material, the new house being filled with carnations, of which Mr. Lewis grows some 22,000 plants, the product of which is being marketed this season through Welch Brothers' City Hall Cut Flower Market in Boston, to the full satisfaction of Mr. Lewis, who states that he has given a trial to other methods of marketing and finds that Welch Brothers secure a better price for his carnations than he can get through any other means.

The interior view is taken from near the center of the bed and shows the house as it appeared on August 1, 1904. Mr. Lewis is a believer in early planting and a large part of his stock is raised in pots under glass. The plants are healthy and have been given an uninterrupted cutting of first-class blooms all through the season.

Among the varieties noted in a recent visit Enchantress is easily the leading attraction, producing heavily of high-grade flowers. Estelle takes high rank as a scarlet and is very satisfactory. Morning Glory makes a good record as to number of blooms produced but is decidedly unhealthy and this is its last year. Flora Hill is seen in considerable quantity, but its days are also numbered as are also those of Gov. Roosevelt, which will be supplanted by Harry Fenn.

Governor Wolcott has been eminently satisfactory and is regarded as indispensable. Although grown with a temperature never exceeding 50° to 55° at night it shows no disposition to split its calyx. Lawson, Prosperity, Manley, Golden Beauty, Queen Louise and other popular varieties are all grown in greater or less number and with good returns. The usual corner of home-made seedlings is in evidence. One white seedling, the progeny of Mary Wood x Flora Hill, has successfully passed through its three-year preparatory course and is to be exploited in the exhibitions the coming season.

The propagating house, a lean-to on the north side, is filled with rooted cuttings. Here as throughout the place a moderate temperature and abundant circulation of fresh air is observed. Close disbanding and scrupulous cleanliness in every particular attest the efficiency of Mr. Cooper, the foreman. The big house with its several gutters, one of the first of its pattern in this section, gives perfect satisfaction. It is equipped with the Chadborn automatic ventilator, the glass is laid with the long way horizontal and the heating is by two Lord & Burnham sectional boilers.

Piping for Greenhouse.

ED. AM. FLORIST.—How much 1¼-inch pipe will I need for a 17x120-foot house with a three-quarters span running east and west, the walls and ends to be boarded and shingled, front wall four feet high and back wall six feet high, from ground level to the ridge pole ten feet. The glass will be butted. I will use hot water for heating with a twenty-five horse power locomotive boiler which has thirty-eight 2-inch tubes. The night temperature required is 70°. It rarely goes below 16° below zero in this section. I have a house 12x100 running north and south, glass lapped, heated by 2-inch pipe, five flows and five returns. Will the two houses, the new and the old, be too much for the boiler in cold weather?

E. J. B.

It is not advisable to use pipe as small as 1¼-inch for a house more than 100 feet long. It will be far better to use 2-inch pipe for the coils in a house 120 feet in length. To maintain a temperature of 70° under the conditions named there should be three 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns in three coils. One flow can be in the center of the house and the others upon the plates. The flows may be partly upon the walls or all may be under the benches, according to the arrangement of the houses.

DOBB'S FERRY, N. Y.—A regular meeting of the Dobb's Ferry Horticultural Association was held in Odd Fellows' hall, Saturday, January 30. There was a large attendance. The evening was devoted to the making of a new schedule for the fall show. A prize was given by S. Bradley, gardener to O. J. Smith, for the best foliage plant in a 6-inch pot, which was awarded to Mr. Fisher for a dracæna. Other competitors were Mr. Kasberg and Mr. Boreham, who staged Pandanus Veitchii and Aspidistra variegata. S. Bradley staged a fine specimen of Pandanus Sanderi. Thomas Lee is to give an essay at the next meeting.

PLANT NOTES.

For Week of February 13.

Gladioli.—A batch of gladioli may be planted now if any early flowers are needed. Plant them about two feet apart along the north edge of a carnation bench; the foliage is not heavy enough to harm the carnations. Corms that were forced last year are all right to force again, for the mild heat to which they are subjected does not impair their vitality; in fact we have found that the corms that have been forced the previous season will come into bloom several weeks earlier than fresh ones. Plant them just deep enough to cover the tops of the corms.

Smilax.—If the smilax bed is to be renewed next summer the seed should be sown at once. Keep the seed boxes in a rather warm place until it germinates, and pot off as soon as two or three leaves have been developed. A little later, if pressed for room, the small plants can be shifted to 3-inch pots and placed in a mild hot bed, where they may remain until they are planted out in June or July. Keep the plants in the beds well syringed to hold red spider and thrip in check, and do not subject them to heavy tobacco smoke for it burns the vines. A few weeks after a section of a bed has been cut, cleaned off and started into growth, a light mulch of well rotted cow manure will be beneficial.

Cytisus.—Cuttings of Cytisus racemosus root readily in the sand now. Take the soft end growths before the buds have formed and insert them into the sand in a moderately warm part of the propagating house. When rooted pot off and keep them growing on, shifting as needed. During the summer they can be plunged outside in a frame, topping them at intervals of a few weeks. The old plants for Easter flowering had better be kept in a temperature of about 50° at night to have them on time. They are of little value after Easter, neither is there great demand for them before that time, and since the flowers last only a few weeks, care should be taken to have them just right for Easter, so as to make the crop profitable.

Cannas.—The seed of cannas should be sown now to make good 4-inch stock by the first of June. They come quite true from seed and the stock of desirable varieties can easily be increased by this method. Soak the seeds in hot water for about twenty-four hours before planting and, holding each seed firmly in a pair of pincers, file a small portion of the hard surface off; otherwise it will take the seeds all eternity to start. Started in this manner, many of the seeds will germinate in a few weeks and should be given small pots when they are three or four inches high, shifting to 4-inch when it is necessary. Keep the seed boxes in a warm place until all the seed has started, for it will probably be several months before the last seed germinates. The old clumps under the benches need not be started for another four weeks.

Verbenas.—The first of February is the proper time to sow the seed of verbenas. If they are sown much later than this they will hardly come into flower for Memorial day. Sow them in rather light soil, and when they are sufficiently large to handle transplant into flats an inch apart. As soon as they are large enough pot off into 2½-inch pots and keep them growing in a temperature of about 50°. Grown from seed they are less subject to mildew than when they are propagated from cuttings. For keeping the varieties true to name, however, the latter method is to be preferred, and now is the best time to propagate them. About the first of March the small plants can be transferred into a mild hotbed, for at this time the pressure for room in the greenhouse becomes serious. While they are in the hotbed they will grow quite rapidly, and for this reason they must be handled over several times or the roots will ramify too much in the manure, thus producing a rank growth which quickly wilts when they are taken from the bed and offered for sale. Whenever they are handled over all the roots on the outside of the pot should be removed. The stock plants which are now in 2½-inch pots should be shifted to 3-inch about the first of March, and they will make excellent stock with a number of flowers to the plant by spring. G.

Roses at Peter Reinbergs.

Madame Abel Chatenay is one of the best roses on the Chicago market and it is increasing in popularity each year. It produces strong, straight stems and every flower is perfect in form and color. Peter Reinberg is having great success with this rose. It is easy to grow and very seldom mildews. Plenty of ventilation and a temperature of about 58° are the requirements. The accompanying engravings show the Chatenay and Mr. Reinberg's new rose Uncle John. The latter is a sport from Golden Gate and originated at Peter Reinberg's greenhouses about three years ago. It is taking a great hold as a popular and successful commercial rose. The new variety is more pink in color than Golden Gate and unfolds its petals on the order of Bride and Bridesmaid. It is a wonderful producer and has its parent beaten on that score, says the owner. Uncle John, which was named after the renowned Chicago horticulturist, "Uncle John" Thorpe, was awarded a special prize of $40 at the Kansas City exhibition a year ago. C.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Marquis de Pins.

I notice in the report of the Paris chrysanthemum show, which appeared in the AMERICAN FLORIST for December 12, a slight misprint which it is important to correct at an early opportunity. The Marquis de Pins, a new raiser of seedlings, is in that report referred to as the Marquis de Paris. The correction is necessary, because anyone who saw that gentleman's new seedling chrysanthemums at the Paris show could not fail to be struck with the remarkable quality of his exhibit, and also because we are almost certain in the course of the next season or two to have an opportunity of seeing at our shows some of the novelties this gentleman has raised. Such quality cannot possibly remain outside the pale of American and English collections.

Concerning the new grower a few notes from Le Jardin, of Paris, are interesting. In a recent issue of our Parisian contemporary an excellent portrait of the Marquis and a biographical notice appear. It seems that this gentleman has only been a grower of the flower for a few years, and as he lives in a district peculiarly suitable for seedling raising, it was not long before he made attempts in that branch of chrysanthemum culture. He showed his first blooms at Toulouse in 1900, then the next year some at Montpelier, in which town the next exhibition of the French National Chrysanthemum Society will be held in November of the present year.

In 1902 he exhibited at the Paris show, where he won a gold medal and several certificates. And again in 1903, at which show the writer had the amplest opportunity of examining these wonderful samples of cultural skill. There was something about these new seedlings that struck one as being unique. A large display of big, heavily built Japanese blooms of the greatest size and substance is not an ordinary feature at a French chrysanthemum show, except perhaps in the case of a grower like Ernest Calvat. But in the case of the novelties staged by the Marquis there was a distinctive mark of high cultivation, combined with great originality of form and color. Every variety shown was represented by five colossal blooms. In 1902 he was awarded nine first-class certificates for varieties that were also included in his 1903 exhibit. In 1903 fourteen other varieties were awarded this distinction, and they fully deserved the recognition they obtained.

Where weight and solidity are required, and this is especially the case in such classes as the big vase class at the English N. C. S. show, these novelties will be invaluable to exhibitors. High class quality and liberal culture will result in the production of blooms that it will be hard to beat. In course of time it seems probable some of these novelties will find their way to America, although it was stated that the raiser only grew for his own pleasure and did not intend to sell them. A brief mention may therefore be useful to any growers in the States who are interested in the introduction of new chrysanthemums. Only those that have been certificated by the Paris floral committee are named, viz.:

It has often happened that fine American varieties have failed to accommodate themselves to European culture and vice versa, but from a recent critique of some French varieties in America there appears to be some hope that there are varieties from this side of the Atlantic that will do well in the States. If this applies to any of those raised by this new grower, there will be agreeable surprises in store for those who first undertake the culture of them. P.

THE VIOLET.

Structures for Violets.

There are a good many ways to grow violets. Some grow them in any old place; others cannot grow them even in good houses. I consider we have always grown the best violets in solid bed houses. In preparing for a house, dig out the walks and put the soil from them in the beds. Dig deep enough so you have your paths low enough. It is well to have them two and one-half feet below the beds. Use a five-foot locust post. Sink it two and one-half feet in the ground, and two and one-half feet will remain for the bench support. Of course space must be figured on for good violet soil. Make the paths the desired depth the first year. Don't make the beds one board high, and then add one board each year until you have them the right height. This costs money for longer posts every time you make them higher.

After you have the posts set nail hemlock boards, planed on one side, to the posts, to support the beds. Some use 2-inch spruce plank, which is better, but more expensive. Our houses run east and west, even span, and we find them much better than the three-quarter span. We use 15-inch glass, put in lapped on ground cypress bars. We find the heavy bars the best, about one and one-quarter inches wide and two and one-half inches thick, as heavy braces are not needed. A truss rafter is sufficient to hold the roof. We have continuous ventilation on both top and sides of the house. Be sure and have the ventilation on both sides of the house at the top, and when the wind blows from one quarter you can ventilate from the opposite. We have two 4-inch flow pipes overhead, under the ventilators, which is a great benefit to the middle bench, as when ventilation is on the chilled air doesn't strike the plants. We have two 4-inch return pipes hung on each side of the house over the side beds. Use locust posts for the house. Saw them on the pitch of the roof, then nail on the slating and go ahead with the house. Have slide ventilators about two feet wide and any length that may be desired hung under a 3-inch pipe, the same thickness nailed under the plate. If a beginner follows these instructions he will have a good and not too expensive house, as solid beds to start with are much cheaper than raised beds, and as I stated before far superior.

The New Jersey Floricultural Society.

The regular monthly meeting and exhibition of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, the first competitive one for 1904, was held on Friday, February 5, at Oceanic, N. J. Orchids Laelia anceps Stella, Oncidium Forbesii and Cœlogyne Micholettii, from the houses of William Barr of Llewellyn Park, grown by Arthur Bodwell, attracted attention for their variety, beauty and skillful cultivation. The last two were of last year's importation, it being a very difficult thing to secure bloom the first season. The cyclamens in pots from the houses of Wm. Runkle, grown by D. Kindsgrab, were perfect in form and beauty of flower and foliage and received 95 points. The judges for the evening were Harry O. May and Jos. B. Davis. Vases of The Bride carnations and Gen. MacArthur roses, exhibited by John N. May, on attention being drawn to the fact that they were not entered for competition and had already been certificated by the society, received a unanimous vote of thanks. Topics discussed all bore upon the contest and were: "Adherence to By-laws in Elections," "Standards of Judging," "Award of Certificates," "Selection of Judges" and "What Constitutes a Gardener." It was decided to adhere strictly to the by-laws, to leave judges untrammelled, using due care to select competent men, and to guard certificates so when they were given they would be valued. Pres. Geo. Smith announced that provision had been made to award prizes, the exact number not having been determined, and explained why the committee had formed two classes that the younger members might feel secure of their share of prizes. One new member was nominated. Letters from the Tarrytown and New York Florists' Clubs were read and attendance upon the carnation night of the last urged by Joseph A. Manda, who stated that while ladies had been invited for that night the "canteen" would be operated "on the quiet," for he was on that committee. Jos. B. DAVIS.

Notes of the Growers.

George M. Kendall, of Leonminster, Mass., one of the largest vegetable forcers of the state, is making the experiment of setting cucumber plants farther apart than usual. Most of the cucumber growers set their plants from fourteen to thirty inches apart but Mr. Kendall regards four feet between the plants as not too much for best results. He grows his cucumbers on mackerel nets in place of wire on account of its cheapness and ease of removal when clearing the houses. His largest house is 80x250 feet.

Most of the large vegetable forcers in New England sterilize all the soil used in their houses.

A swarm of bees in the greenhouse will do the work of fertilizing cucumber flowers much more thoroughly and in much less time than is possible by manual labor.

A bushel of cucumbers to the plant is a fair average for a greenhouse cucumber crop.

W. W. Rawson, the extensive grower of vegetables under glass at Arlington, Mass., regards the question of labor saving as the greatest problem at present confronting the vegetable forcer. It is thirty years since the first greenhouses were established in the vicinity of Boston for vegetable growing and since then the increase has been remarkable, and the improvements in greenhouse building and heating during that period have been taken full advantage of by the market gardeners.

George Matthews, of Great Neck, L. I., has eight large middle benches sown with sweet peas planted two rows in a bed; and between the rows are sown radishes which he sends to a commission man in New York, getting 4 cents a dozen for them.

Cucumbers for Forcing.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I am thinking of putting cucumbers in one of my greenhouses. Will you kindly inform me what are the best kinds for forcing and whether it is necessary to have bees? I have had good success with the English forcing, but some claim it is better to have bees for White Spine. F. H. R.

The forcing of the various types of White Spine cucumbers does not greatly differ from that of the English forcing varieties, but there are some points of difference worth noting. The English varieties need some shade, the American sorts require practically all possible sunlight, at least during the colder months. The White Spine section have a tendency to ripen up their crop much quicker than the English sorts and require artificial pollination to secure satisfactory results; we find the English varieties set fully as well when not fertilized in winter. A good selection of White Spine offered is that known as Improved Arlington, and can be procured from all reputable seedsmen. This is relied on almost exclusively in the extensive cucumber forcing establishments in Arlington, East Mansfield and the vicinity of Fitchburg, Mass., which send large quantities to New York in addition to supplying the Boston markets. It is an undoubted fact that the White Spine varieties need artificial pollination of some kind. Bees are used in not a few places, and with excellent results. If F. H. R. can secure a hive we can guarantee him a good set, other conditions being right. Other methods of pollination adopted are shaking the wires to disseminate the pollen about noon on bright days when the atmosphere is dry, and hand pollination by means of camel's hair brushes; if bees, however, are procurable they will prove the most satisfactory. Remove them from the house when doing any fumigating. Of the English forcing varieties we can recommend the following as being first-class: Telegraph, Improved, Peerless, Matchless, Lord Roberts and Sensation. These are as distinct an advance over varieties grown a generation ago as are the improved White Spine cucumbers now grown compared with those cultivated even a decade ago.

Stem Rot and Its Probable Causes.

[Paper read by Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., before the New York Florists' Club, February 8.]

Mr. President, members of the New York Florist Club and friends—In looking up a subject for a short paper on the carnation to read before you tonight, I thought nothing could be more appropriate at this season of the year than "Extremely early propagation as related to stem rot and its probable causes," including a few suggestions as to a means of preventing or minimizing the ravages of this, the deadliest of all carnation diseases. During the past summer stem rot has been most prevalent in the east, especially through Long Island, central New York and Pennsylvania, many of the largest growers losing their stock by the thousands both in the field and after being planted indoors, and the financial loss being extremely heavy. That climatic conditions had much to do with this there is no doubt and with outdoor culture we in future years will be just as liable to a recurrence of the disastrous results of the past season. This suggests to me the question, wherein lies the remedy? During the past five years or so you have doubtless observed the growing tendency towards earlier propagation and planting. Six or eight years ago early August to September 20 was considered about the right time to bench carnations from the field. The method as adopted at present is July planting from the field, finishing as early as possible in August. In some cases indoor culture is almost exclusively adopted, usually benching in May and June and where space is available I have known some cases where the plants were benched in February with splendid results. I was much interested on looking over an old trade price list of Fred. Dörner's (that veteran carnationist to whom we owe so much) to find him offering his novelties with distribution commencing April 1. Think of it! What do we find today? Nearly every buyer wants early January delivery. Some will gladly accept their cuttings in December and should orders remain unfilled until March 15 they are liable to cancellation. The points I want to bring up are these: Is this increasing tendency towards extremely early propagation and planting for or against the best development and longevity of the carnation, and is there not in this a probable cause for so much stem rot, especially where field culture is practiced?

Where the intention is to adopt indoor culture entirely I believe in early propagation, potting off the cuttings in January or early February commencing with 2 to 2½-inch pots and re-potting into 3 to 3½ or 4-inch as the case requires, but never allowing the plants to get stunted or pot-bound. Such early stock ought to be benched not later than May and if space permits April would give better results, insuring strong root action before the extremely hot weather sets in. Cuttings taken a month later can be benched during May and June. This method has many advantages over planting January stock in the field during April or early May and then lifting and benching it in July, because those early cuttings often get pot-bound and stunted before being planted out, the balls being full of roots become hard and should the weather be warm and dry, for some weeks after planting they dry out and wilt. This condition, followed by heavy rains, is the first step towards a severe loss from stem rot, as the plants are in no condition to absorb this surplus of moisture. A later batch of the same variety that has not been pot-bound and abused before being planted out, will pull through often with little loss while cuttings of the same sort potted off, say, in April and set in the field will often make better stock than either of the earlier lots with little or no loss from stem rot. This proves to me that much of the trouble is caused from the stock being allowed to become stunted, pot-bound and abused before being planted out,—and herein lies one of the greatest dangers in extremely early propagation: If you do not intend this stock for early planting in-door culture it is much safer to use a later lot of cuttings for planting out, and benching during July or early August. My experience has been, if a batch of cuttings once get extremely dry and wilted, either in the sand or after being potted, or put in flats, it is better to throw them away. They never recover from the check and are sure to be a source of trouble and disappointment later. Avoid extremes. I believe for field-culture February and March cuttings, preferable to December or January stock and if you cannot house your stock before August, cuttings taken from the sand early in April will give grand results. Of course this refers to good, free growing sorts. Some that develop more slowly need earlier propagation and planting.

The one great drawback to indoor culture with the average florist is, he cannot afford to throw out plants that are giving abundance of bloom at a minimum cost of production during the early summer months. Yet I believe the time is not far distant when, with properly constructed houses, the carnation (like the chrysanthemum) will be grown indoors exclusively. There is too much risk attached to planting out in the field new and valuable stock to be at the mercy of our variable climate and the experiences of the past will only tend to spur us on to devise means by which we shall yet overcome the difficulties and uncertainties of our present mode of culture.

I believe for all indoor culture, the best places are wide houses running north and south, even span, thirty-three feet wide with five benches, each four feet wide. (This admits of a better circulation of air than can be obtained on a five-foot bench.) Height of sides five feet, three feet being glass; ridge, fifteen feet in height with continuous top ventilation on each side, thirty feet in width, also side ventilations (to be used judiciously). You will find a house running north and south much cooler and better during the hot summer months than one running east and west and all things taken into consideration, the loss from this aspect during winter is scarcely noticeable in a large, light structure.

We and Our Field.

[Read by Wm. J. Stewart before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, February 2, 1904.]

A transposition in the title of this dissertation might betoken a commendable modesty. The typical gardener or florist has, however, always been a somewhat aggressive and self-complacent individual. Like the Ayrshire farmer and his wife, one is "Aye richt" and the other "Never wrang." Even before that memorable uprising which resulted in the establishment of our powerful National Society—when our interests in all horticultural activities were usually subordinated to those of the farmer and the fruit nurseryman—even then the Shibboleth of the craft was "Wha's like us?" "Naebody," and the less a man knew the more emphatic oftentimes his declaration. I once read of an encounter on the Delaware between a magnificent steamer and a grimy coal lighter. Officer: "Clear out of the way with that barge." Lighterman: "Are ye the captain av that vessel?" Officer: "No." Lighterman: "Then spake to yer equals; I'm the captain of this." The gorgeous self-sufficiency of some of our old-time champions overshadows that of some of her chesty rivals, and since the race is yet far from extinct we shall, in conformity to usage, talk first of ourselves, then of our field and how we may cultivate it.

That we have some basis for our pretensions, the vastly enhanced prominence which our art and its literature (not to mention our sporting prowess) have attained during the last two decades stands in evidence. The deduction that we are destined to become of yet greater consequence will doubtless pass undisputed, but mere theoretical conclusions have little value, and these boasts of future ascendancy which we have a habit of making are often little more than hollow generalities in support of which, if pressed for a specific forecast, we might find it difficult to put up a convincing argument.

Recognizing in ourselves the connecting link between the past which we know and the future which we know not, it is healthy to ask ourselves often how well we are filling the places of the sturdy pioneers whose heritage we enjoy, and to make it our constant aim to so shape our course that posterity shall see in us a pattern to imitate and not an example to deter. If we are to prove worthy successors of a distinguished ancestry, the mastery proficiency of Harris, the sagacity of Henderson, the noble simplicity of Cardage, the intensity of Menand, the tenacity of Wood and the sunny kindness of Halliday must find their counterpart in the leaders of today and we should strive that nothing be lost either in amplitude or potentiality of the eminent qualities so well exemplified in the character and lives of these honored men.

Our reverence for old age should, however, cease at the door of the rose cellar and, while we should emulate the example and recognize the genius of the old masters, there are problems arising daily, as new elements intrude themselves within our sphere, which bring us to a realization that while the principles actuating them were of the sterling kind, success today may demand a somewhat different application of them. We have with us now the Greek who cares not whether plants are fed on water or on carbolic acid but who, after six months in our country knows the cut-flower market better than do many of our craftsmen who have spent a lifetime in the business, and, on the other hand, we find the man who can grow violets or carnations of a quality hitherto undreamt of, but who somehow cannot understand why blooms with whiskers on them can't be sold at Christmas for three times what they were worth three weeks earlier, before their whiskers started out. Where shall we strike the balance between the dear soul who loves his profession more than its emoluments who can say, in all truth

"Thou source of all my bliss and all my woe Thou found'st me poor at first, and keep'st me so."

and the latter-day flower-factory man in whose transactions sentiment has no place, to whom a blossom is handsome only when going out of the door on the order of a cash customer, and who would not hesitate to accelerate with a brisk movement of his boot the exit of any flower, however beautiful in itself, the moment it should transpire that there was no pecuniary profit in it?

I am persuaded that a godly portion of the comfort and joy of a horticulturist's existence comes from his gregarious instincts. One of the most forlorn creatures in the world is the gardener so isolated that he is prevented from associating with his fellow gardeners, and almost pathetic is the keen delight evinced by one long shut out, when circumstances bring him in contact with old friends in the profession, "drinking it all in and life never seemed so full before." Study this marked characteristic of the craft and you will discover that the most contented as well as most progressive florists are usually found in those communities where ample facilities are afforded for flocking together. Thus the cohesive influence of our fraternal institutions is a boon which we should, in this era of specialization, prize most highly. Its value as an offset to the disintegrating forces now at work can hardly be overestimated. It begins to dawn upon us that the S. A. F., with its stimulus to the fraternal sentiments, came upon the scene at a most opportune time, and we applaud the rare discernment shown by her Philadelphia offspring in respect to providing abundant inducement for comradeship which has its timely reward in the unparalleled prosperity which this club enjoys and is sure to continue to enjoy, at least so long as John Westcott's buffet keeps on doing business.

Our field—It is a big field and a fertile one, as wide as vegetation extends, as broad as human sympathy, as deep as roots can penetrate the earth or love the heart, as lofty as the tallest trees can grow or noble sentiment aspire, a field in which to cultivate the intellectual faculties as well as material vegetation. Ours is a calling more ancient and honorable than any other pursued by mankind, whose mission it is to soften the asperities of life, to develop the best in humanity and clothe the world in beauty, whose adherents are fellow workers with Nature herself, "God the first garden made, the first city, Cain."

Are we occupying this fair field to fullest advantage? To do so we must be wide awake to its broader possibilities and take care that narrow vision and trivial controversies are not permitted to limit and monopolize our attention. The great expansion of our business and the influx of capital in certain branches have brought about changed conditions and evolved new problems. How shall we meet them? How successfully elude perils that seem to threaten and which especially concern those working hitherto on a small scale and subject to that most uncomfortable disease, lack of money? Our development has been so many-sided and on such varied lines that our aggregate interests, at first simple and closely akin, now rapidly grow complex and diverse. Thus disintegrating forces lead us into divergent paths, the circles widening as our diversified branches multiply. We see the situation through dissimilar eyes until

"'Tis with our judgments as our watches—none
Go just alike, yet each believes his own."

Admitting that no two of us are likely to quite agree in what direction the great quest measure of well-being presents itself, it seems to me that those who have cultivated broad habits of vision, who have perceived their business not so much in its essence as through its effects, will agree that the time has gone forever when things can be successfully run as the foolhardy skipper sailed his schooner "by luck, by G—d and the moonlight" and that insight, economy and foresight are three cardinal virtues to be henceforth zealously cultivated by the florist, whatever his particular line may be.

Without trespassing too far in the direction of special questions, which I have purposely avoided in this paper, let us for a moment turn to that most vital problem of the cut-flower industry, the distribution of the produce. At the recent holiday time we read from sundry suburban and country papers that the scarcity of flowers for Christmas was unprecedented. "On Christmas eve there was not a rose or carnation of any kind to be purchased in the city" was a sort of stock item all along the line. Why is it that we find florists reporting a holiday famine in towns within an hour's ride of New York city while growers' cellars and wholesalers' refrigerators are bulging with unsold stock and perchance the curbstone stands in the city heaping with flowers of varying ages at a few cents a bunch? In reply to that question we shall avail ourselves of the Yankee's birthright and answer by asking another—"Why a higher price on flowers at Christmas?"

I take it that in a profession so comprehensive in scope, no necessity exists for long-continued over-production on any special line. If fortune be unstable our will is free. When you find yourself over-crowded and jostled in your specialty, just watch your opportunity and move up. There is always room at the top. No place is so well conducted that some material increase in efficiency is impossible; no plant or flower now popular so universally well grown that somebody cannot do it still better. The list of good subjects as yet in obscurity that may be made popular is practically unlimited and there is abundant latitude for talent and industry in the establishment of improved strains of scores of things that have thus far scarcely been touched. As wealth and refinement increase the demand for conservatories grows apace; well-grown stock for the filling of such places, in the hands of a well-managed concern, is as good as government bonds. So rapidly has this fever for beautiful home grounds and gardens spread in this country that the call for choice planting material far exceeds the stock available here, and even foreign sources are being rapidly denuded. Only a few days ago a friend desirous of constructing a rose garden complained to me of inability to procure the stock he required. Choice lilacs on their own roots, well-grown conifers in reliably hardy varieties, nursery-grown kalmias and similar things are wanted. Where are they? Where can the stock for one substantial plantation of hardy rhododendrons, or for a house of foreign grapes, or good plants of the finer peonies, in a business way, be found?

Every sign points to a glorious opening for the immediate future for the intelligent gardener with high aspirations and a determination to excel. There is scarcely a line, no matter how unpromising it looks, that will not respond in a profitable way when you put brains into it. While it is true that the worst bowler on the alley may some time make the first ten-strike in the game, and that the chance hybridizer may turn up a carnation or a chrysanthemum that will sweep the field, yet it is a safe proposition always that in the long run the expert will distance the common throng. The young man who takes up horticulture as a calling today, if endowed with common sense and zeal, will not be content to settle into any branch, however lucrative for the moment, which offers the novice an even chance to locate at his elbow and become a dangerous rival. Think you that Peter Fisher lies awake nights fretting over the possibility of somebody showing up to skim the cream of his carnation milk? Tom Roland can sell ten times as many Lorraine begonias as he can produce, year after year. M. H. Walsh hasn't seen rose hybridization run into the ground just yet, and Tom Butterworth will be a centenarian before he sees a flower-factory able to compete in his specialty of orchid growing. Numerous similar illustrations of my point might be cited and will no doubt come to the minds of all.

Most powerful of agencies in the elevation of our craft is our professional press. The vastness of its contributions to the sum total of our knowledge is already far beyond our comprehension. Pregnant with helpful suggestions, reflecting in its reading columns current thought and progress, and in its advertising columns the limits of our commercial enterprise, it shows us where we are and points to what we may attain, and those of us who do not recognize nor heed the benefits the press brings within the reach of all must surely fall behind. Perhaps contributors are now and then prone to forget or underestimate the responsibilities of authorship and the bemasked would-be regulator,

"More peevish, cross and splenetic
Than dog distraught or monkey sick," has been known to debase its columns with ungenerous personal reference, but these are the exception. As to the use of a nom de plume it may be all right and even desirable when its assumer busies himself with impersonal questions or general principles or in a controversy with another of his kind, but how can anyone making a claim to manliness ever indulge in skulking ambushed criticism by name of a fellow florist?

Long familiarity with horticultural clippings leads me to feel that florists err in not making better use of the avenues for desirable publicity provided in the public newspapers. Much of the information unwittingly gleaned by these journals is undesirable and positively injurious to our interests. As a help to progress and popularity we should see to it that the floral news which reaches our patrons is something better than the immense profits in floriculture and the exorbitant prices of flowers, something more edifying than fried chrysanthemums, weird Mexican plants that will make a man forget his way home at night and so on. When a wedding occurs, instead of a half a column or more devoted to accordion-pleated crepe de chine, fawn colored taffeta, aigrettes, toques, bodices,

"Chiffon and lingerie (Whatever that may be)."

and six or eight lines to the floral decorations, cannot we have the space reversed, thus helping to make the press a "soul-elevating agency" as our friend Smith would say, and placing our art on its proper plane?

We want the people with us. The recent christening of a rose at Detroit was a broad benefit to the business at large and its influence in this direction far transcended whatever financial advantage might accrue to the introducers from the publicity gained. We want the impression to take deep root among the common people that one of the first requisites to a happy life is a home with a garden and an abundance of flowers everywhere, on all occasions, that no incident of life is quite complete without the presence of these things in one form or another, that there is nothing more worthy of a place in the heart and home than the flowers and no more honored occupation among the industries of a community than that of the florist.

And here your essayist meets the fate of the Scotch minister, who, on reaching the last page of his sermon, said, "But I will not enlarge," and an old woman in the gallery cried out, "Ye canna, ye canna, for yer paper's give oot!"

THE RETAIL TRADE

Georgia Coat of Arms.

The arch of this design was made of white carnations and Roman hyacinths. The cross piece was of pink and white carnations, Easter lilies and Roman hyacinths. The three columns were made of pink carnations and Roman hyacinths. The lettering was all done on tulle, "Constitution" on the top, "Moderation" on the right post, "Justice" in the center and "Wisdom" on the left post. The center of the base was solid in Paper White narcissi with Bridesmaid roses, Easter lilies and asparagus in each bank on the right and left ends of the base. The whole piece was trimmed with maidenhair ferns. The design was eight feet high and was sent by the governor of Alabama and other state house officials to the funeral of Gen. John B. Gordon. It was made by the C. A. Dahl Company of Atlanta.

Flowers at Whitney Funeral.

In writing my article for the week I think of nothing more appropriate than the magnificent tributes sent to the funeral of William C. Whitney. Such a wealth of floral pieces is seldom seen. Nothing but the choicest of everthing was used. One standing wreath consisted of Phalaenopsis amabilis and Cattleya Schilleriana with a base of lily of the valley. Another immense wreath five feet across was formed entirely of lily of the valley and superb cattleyas. There were several other large pieces, all over six feet in height, including wreaths, anchors and a cross made entirely of bronze galax and violets tied with broad sashes of light purple ribbon inscribed with the names of the several jockey clubs that sent them, blue and brown being the racing colors of Mr. Whitney. A wreath entirely of Gardenia Florida was a marvel. The casket cover was cattleyas and lily of valley. There were several other pieces well worth a description, and it was difficult to say which was the handsomest. The work represented all the leading florists of the city.

I saw an extremely handsome presentation basket last week made with American Beauty roses and Easter lilies. The basket, about thirty inches across, was of green wicker work with a high square handle. The roses and lilies were arranged on either side, low in the center and rising gradually to the top of the handle. The ribbon used was a pale green watered silk and blended beautifully with both flowers. The table decorations at the same function were quite simple. Azalea Vervæneana were cut down and arranged loosely in large silver urns. No other flowers or green were seen on the table. The effect was severe but thoroughly in keeping with the surroundings.

A mirror decoration in the same house was rather odd. A semicircular bed of tulips, hyacinths and jonquils was planted on the floor in front of the mirror, giving the effect of a large round bed. Asparagus plumosus formed an arch over the top of the mirror.

Chicago.

At last a tiny break in the clouds which have kept the local trade conditions in gloom for several weeks. It is a relief to report that business is improving, both with the wholesalers and city retailers. From a shipper's view, the last week was all that could be asked for, and prosperity in that department is pretty general among the wholesalers of this city. Everything in roses remains short and shippers have been kept at their wits' end to meet the call of their customers. Good American Beauty roses are very shy, as are Liberty, Meteor and all reds. Carnation receipts about keep apace with the demand. Carnation buyers are now in great glee, as the best of stock can be bought for poor quality prices. Tulips are now coming in at their best. All lilies are showing good form and quite a brisk demand for them is noticeable. Bulbous stock is generally slow sale, except daffodils, which have been kept well cleaned up at an average of $4 per 100. The fern business has not been active for some time. Smilax is selling well and at good prices.

Preparations for the next club exhibition at Handel hall, Wednesday, February 17, are progressing with vigor and dispatch. The public will be admitted by card from 2 to 4 p. m. As previously announced the banquet will be dispensed with, as many members wish the exhibition held open during the evening. The annual banquet will be held at some future date, probably in connection with one of the exhibitions.

A large delegation from this city is expected to attend the Detroit carnation show March 2-3. P. J. Hauswirth, who was appointed by the club some time ago to attend to the matter of transportation, reports that he has secured a rate of one and one third fare for the round trip via the Wabash. The party will leave Chicago on Tuesday afternoon, March 1, at 3 o'clock.

Frank Garland has leased a room on the second floor of the Atlas block and will move from his present quarters May 1. Michael Winandy will also have floor space in the room. A large drug house has leased the basement now occupied by Mr. Garland.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Union is making an effort to secure union wage rates for the gardeners in the West Side parks. They sent a committee to a recent meeting of the West Park board to make application for the same.

Frank Lockyear, formerly with Frank Garland, met with an accident Friday, February 5. He slipped and fell from an icy step at his home and was badly bruised, necessitating confinement to his home for some time.

The next and last sectional meeting of the Florists' Club will be held Saturday evening, February 13, at Drexel's cafe, corner of Cottage Grove avenue and Thirty-ninth street. A large attendance is looked for.

A bursted water pipe caused a miniature flood in the basement wholesale store of J. B. Deamud on February 6. Fortunately no damage was done beyond temporarily inconveniencing the boys.

Henry Hansen and Miss Mary Smith, of Rogers Park, were married Wednesday, February 10. The groom is a son of H. C. Hansen, of the Growers' Market.

Bride and Bridesmaid roses are seen in fine form at F. Benthey & Company's, and they are kept well cleaned up.

Charles M. Dickinson, according to Asphaltum, has been appointed secretary of the National Oil Refining and Manufacturing Company of California.

Manager Hartshorne, of the Chicago Carnation Company, has been at St. Louis this week with a fine display of his specialties.

A. H. Budlong has assumed the management of J. A. Budlong's downtown wholesale store.

A. C. Kohlbrandt, of E. C. Amling's, has been ill for several days, but is rapidly convalescing.

The E. F. Winterson Company is handling choice smilax and a good demand is reported.

J. D. Thompson was at St. Louis this week with good vases of his leaders.

Sinner Brothers are offering exceptional good daffodil stock.

Visitors this week were W. Hagemann, of New York, and Mr. Hill, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

New York.

The meeting of the Florists' Club Monday evening, February 8, was a record breaker. It was remarkable for the attendance, which amounted to 225, including a fair representation of the fair sex; for the exhibition of carnations, which was of extraordinary extent and merit, and for the number of distinguished visitors from distant points, among them being Robert Craig, Philadelphia; J. E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa.; P. Welch, Boston; M. A. Patten and L. E. Small, Tewkesbury, Mass.; Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., and T. J. Johnston and wife, Providence, R. I. The exhibition was superb, the number of blooms shown in each vase contributing to produce an effect of exuberant brilliancy. The capacity of the hall was taxed to the utmost with the large number of exhibits and the throng of visitors. With a room twice as large the effect of the exhibits would have been even better. There being no incitement to competition in the way of prizes, the committee entered into the spirit of the occasion and in its report mentioned only the general excellence of the exhibits and recorded the name of each contributor and his exhibit without individual comment except as regarded a vase of white carnations from Dailedouze Brothers, which was singled out as so remarkable as to be worthy of this especial honor. The blooms in question were of a seedling known as No. 144 C, and in size, form and other important characteristics were simply marvelous and unapproached by anything in the carnation line hitherto. The other exhibitors and their displays were as follows:

Robert Craig & Son—Vesper, white and deeply fringed, and Adonis.
Wm. Didden—Helen Reid, rosy pink.
L. E. Marquisee—Albatross, white, and Flamingo, scarlet.
H. L. Patthey—Pink seedlings, including Successor and Gov. Odell.
J. E. Kraver—Yorkston, blush sport from Lawson.
J. E. Haines—Star of Bethlehem, self yellow; Juno, scarlet; J. E. Haines, scarlet; Imperial, pink and rose striped and No. 77 rosy pink.
J. Reimels—Gomez, Lawson, Striped Lawson and seedling No. 21, white and carmine striped.
Cottage Gardens—Alpine Glow, Enchantress, Prosperity, White Rosevelt, Octoroon, maroon crimson; The President, crimson; Ethel Ward, rose pink; Sensation, blush with deep pink center; Judge, Hinsdale, striped; Macinac, white; Mrs. J. A. Thayer, light pink, and a vase of handsome unnamed seedlings.
R. Wittertaetter—The Cardinal, scarlet; L. E. Small, white seedling No. 3.
Peter Fisher—Nelson Fisher and Mrs. M. A. Patten.
A. J. Tharp—Crane.
M. A. Patten—Mrs. M. A. Patten.
Baur & Smith—Indianapolis, pink.
J. D. Thompson Carnation Company—Enchantress Mrs. Patten and several seedlings, but all badly injured in traveling.

F. R. Pierson Company—Enchantress, White Lawson, Adonis and Daheim, maroon crimson.
Jerome Suydam—Amaze, scarlet; white seedling and several mixed seedlings.
J. N. May—The Bride, white.

Among the promiscuous exhibits were an improved freesia from J. A. Shellem, three varieties of freesia from Rudolph Fischer, Adiantum Farleyense from A. N. Pierson, Nephrolepis Scottii from John Scott and a movable expansion plant support from H. L. Patthey.

The usual routine business of the club having been gone through with, Peter Fisher of Ellis, Mass., was introduced by President Traendly and after an enthusiastic reception proceeded to read the admirable paper on the stem-rot problems which appears in this issue. Mr. Fisher added in the discussion which followed that, on account of the danger from red spider, he did not believe in giving side ventilation to carnation houses on hot, dry summer days, but that he found it very beneficial on cool moist days and towards evening.

Robert Craig, who was called upon for remarks, followed with one of the most eloquent tributes to beauty as seen throughout all phases of nature which he asserted never comes in more bewitching and attractive shape than when it assumes the grace and form of the carnation. He enthusiastically applauded the enterprise of the New York Florists' Club and the social aspects of occasions such as the present.

C. W. Ward spoke in approval of all Mr. Fisher had said in his address. He said that the worst outbreak of stem rot he ever had had followed just such conditions as Mr. Fisher had outlined. His experience had been uniformly in favor of the plan of growing carnations under glass and against field planting, the earliest planted carnations from the field giving unvaryingly the best results and the latest planted being always the most satisfactory. As to side ventilation he did not agree with Mr. Fisher, it being his custom to give it freely under all conditions, closing up only when a gale prevailed.

M. A. Patten, in response to a call, said he had come only to see Mr. Fisher arrive in good shape, and that being accomplished he felt he had done his duty without making a speech. P. Welch refused to budge from his seat under any urging and Harry May responded briefly to a call. P. O'Mara, always witty, entertaining and eloquent, made the closing speech and under the incentive of the great exhibition and the presence of the ladies fairly outdid himself as he skipped from grave to gay, from quotation to simile, interspersing an anecdote by way of punctuation, here and there.

After a vote of thanks to Mr. Fisher and the exhibitors, refreshments were served and an entertainment of vocal music and magic by three clever performers followed. An invitation was received from the New York Horticultural Society to attend their meeting on Wednesday evening. The awards committee appointed last month to visit Mr. Ward's place reported the award of a certificate of merit to his phenomenal scarlet seedling, No. 303.

Market conditions are practically unchanged, violets selling a trifle better and American Beauty roses being stiffened in price owing to light supply. The American Institute held its annual meeting last Wednesday. A collation was decided upon as an adjunct to attract a better attendance than has been customary, with the result that sixty members showed up.

S. R. Wiley, said to be a florist at 952 Madison avenue, was arrested one day last week charged with having threatened to shoot a woman who had declined to marry him.

Mrs. F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, is very ill with measles contracted from a little nephew who had the disease at her home.

The wreath of violets sent by Thomas C. Platt to the funeral of the late Wm. C. Whitney was made up by August Milang.

Peter Rehm, who was formerly with Wm. H. Siebrecht, has taken a position with F. W. Massmann, of East Orange, N. J.

W. F. Sheridan confided to a few of his friends that Monday, February 8, was his birthday, with the usual result.

W. H. Gunther celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of his marriage on Saturday, February 6.

The directors of the Cut Flower Exchange held their regular meeting on February 6.

J. Bowne Hyatt, of Winfield, L. I., is expected home from St. Luke's hospital shortly.

Ben Dorrance, president of the Rose Society, has gone south.

Frost is two feet deep in the city streets.

Will Saltford, of Twenty-ninth street, is ill.

Visitor: Johs Tetkamp, Holland.

Philadelphia.

It seems hard to realize that Lent will commence with next Wednesday, as there is generally a rush of work that precedes and foretells that the end of the social season is near. Since there has been no such warning, all hands are hoping that this season will be an exception, and that this period of rest will be brightened and enlivened by quantities of flowers. The stock of flowers now coming in is not any too plentiful, with the exception possibly of violets and carnations. Lawson, Prosperity, Lord and Vesper, and several other varieties are to be seen in quantity and of very fine quality. It would be a shame to see these fine sorts on the streets, but no doubt when the full crops come in this will be their fate. Already fine mignonette is seen on the corners offered at twenty-five cents per dozen. It has been very fine this season, but it has hung fire, and as anything that accumulates has to be moved, the fakirs soon get a whack at it. Daffodils are piling up and $3 per 100 is now the price. Roses seem to move very well and are nearly all cleaned up every day. Beauties are most scarce; none but the specials appear to be worth much, and Liberty takes the place of all the lower grades. This latter is certainly a grand variety, as the flowers all come so uniformly good.

Robert Craig reports having spent a most delightful evening at the New York Florists' Club's carnation show. The new carnation of Dailedouze Brothers, which he says measured five and one-half inches in diameter, was a record breaker, and looked almost equal to a chrysanthemum. I wonder if the club did not borrow some of Commodore Westcott's bunch and pass it around with a liberal hand.

The trade was startled to hear of the death of Clarence A. Dunn last Saturday night. He had been sick but a week and scarcely anyone knew of his illness until his death was announced. He was taken with grip which in a few days turned into pneumonia. He leaves a wife and four children who have the sympathy of the entire trade in their bereavement. The business will be carried on as before.

Harris' lilac is coming in fine shape, a whole house being devoted to it. All the stock forced is fine and large, and so far has flowered abundantly. He says he has found a good market and a steady demand for all he has cut. Prices range from $1 to $2 per dozen sprays.

H. H. Bayersdorfer fell on the ice at his home and dislocated or broke one of the bones in his shoulder. While it will keep him home for a while, the injury is not serious.

R. Scott & Son are now cutting gardenias in quantity. Their best flower readily brings $5 per dozen. S. S. Pennock handles the bulk of the stock.

Leo Niessen is headquarters for pansies, which are popular for St. Valentine's day. His stock of Liberty and special Bridesmaid roses is also fine.

Pennock Brothers have an elaborate window decoration of floral valentines. Charles Fox also had quite a display of pretty conceits in this line.

Eddie Fancourt has recovered from the operation for appendicitis but will be confined to the hospital for three weeks.

S. S. Pennock has handled large quantities of fancy orchids the past winter, and finds an increasing demand. K.

Boston.

Business in the wholesale markets is rather brisk at present, indicating a disposition on the part of the festive element in society to wind up the season in a jubilant spirit, and also suggesting to the initiated the fact that certain lines of standard flowers are blooming sparsely about this time. The activity is well confined to a few specialties, roses being the most affected, and of these American Beauty heading the line. Colored carnations are in full abundance for all demands, but white ones are none too plentiful. Violets have still to contend with the adverse conditions of the prevalent zero weather of this frigid winter, and bulb stock of all kinds, in evident sympathy with the utter banishment of all springlike tendencies, is badly stagnated and without a standard of value.

George A. Sutherland has installed a wire design factory, with full equipment for order work, in connection with his business at 34 Hawley street. J. Jansky, hitherto located at the flower market, will be in charge of this department.

A. Leuthy, of Roslindale, and D. Lumsden, of Jamaica Plain, have gone into partnership and will continue the palm business conducted hitherto by Mr. Leuthy.

Visitor: Paul Berkowitz, Philadelphia, Pa.

St. Louis.

Trade conditions in St. Louis show but little change. Roses are still scarce, excepting red, which are abundant. Prices on Bride and Bridesmaid have taken an upward jump, the best being quoted at $10. The demand for Golden Gate has slightly increased, prices now being $3 to $8. Ferns have shown a tendency to depreciate. Violets are everywhere and prices range accordingly. Occasionally the fancy grades call for 50 cents. Roman hyacinths are not as plentiful as last week, the result being a slight advance in prices for A1 stock. There is little demand for Paper White narcissi. Too many are already on the market. The same may be said of lily of the valley, the best grades of which sell for $4. Carnations are steady.

Otto Koenig says he "hasn't been snowed under yet." This might be taken as an indication that business is prosperous up his way. Mr. and Mrs. G. E. McClure returned home Wednesday morning from an eight days' honeymoon visit to Manhattan, Kan.

H. F. Aue is cutting some fine smilax at his place in Lindenwood. The sweet peas are also of good quality. The variety Christmas is extensively grown. Mr. Aue has about 8,300 feet of glass devoted exclusively to the wholesale trade.

G. J. Kessler, of the landscape department at the World's Fair, has submitted plans to the city park commissioner, Mr. Aull, for improving the courthouse grounds. The amount appropriated for improvements was $2,000.

Geo. Wagner, who secured possession of E. Michel's establishment on Maryland avenue last fall, has had a very successful season. He says his trade is good in cut flowers and "lots of funeral work."

Dr. Halsted, of Belleville, was in the city Tuesday. F. K. B.

Worcester, Mass.

The large water tower of the Worcester conservatories was blown down February 8, and besides wrecking the tower nearly one hundred lights of glass in houses No. 4 and 5 were broken. This tower had not been in use this winter, so they were not inconvenienced as to water supply. There is nothing specially new in trade circles; trade remains steady, with a good supply of fine flowers.

Mr. Joy, of Nashville, Tenn., is making a tour of the east and while here visited the larger places in town. A. H. L.

OBITUARY.

Joseph Magill.

Joseph Magill, treasurer of the A. T. De La Mare Printing and Publishing Company, Ltd., since its organization in 1891, died Friday, February 5, at his home in New York. The funeral services were held at the Second United Presbyterian church, Jersey City Heights, on Sunday, February 7.

Charles M. Thornton.

Charles M. Thornton, senior member of the firm of Thornton Brothers, died February 1, from heart failure, a trouble from which he had long suffered. Mr. Thornton was the son of Geo. J. Thornton who was for many years gardener for Wm. Sutton in North Andover. In 1876 in company with his two brothers he established the firm of Thornton Brothers, which has since that time done a large and profitable business as florists and art dealers. His age was 52 years.

Clarence A. Dunn.

Clarence A. Dunn died Tuesday, February 9, at Philadelphia, Pa., of pneumonia, aged 43 years. He was sick but a week and the news of his death was a great shock to his many friends. Mr. Dunn started in the business at Robert Craig's. After a few years he engaged in business as a grower at Norristown. He afterward moved to Philadelphia and opened a retail establishment. Later he took up the commission business with Leo Niessen, going from there to Horace Dumont. Last fall he commenced the commission business on his own account. He later added florists' supplies. He leaves a wife and four children. K.

Ell B. Lewis.

Eli B. Lewis died at his home on Locust street, Lockport, N. Y., January 21. He was born at Boose Hill, Conn., in 1819. He removed from there to Holland, N. Y., in 1841. From there he went to Albion, Mich., where he married in 1846, returning to Holland, N. Y., in 1848. Here he engaged in gardening. In 1862 he moved to Lockport, where he continued gardening and embarked in flower growing, which lines he carried on very successfully for many years. He propagated about all of the once famous Niagara grapes and at the time of his death was propagating a new grape for Stark Brothers, which was unnamed. The grape and fruit business will be continued by Fred B. Lewis; his son, and the greenhouses by Fred. G. Lewis, a grandson. He leaves a wife and two sons, Frank B. and Fred B. Lewis, also three daughters, Mrs. Clement, of Lockport, Mrs. Lamont Prace, of Buffalo, and Mrs. R. B. Oliver, of Lockport. Mr. Lewis was known all over the country among nurserymen and was one of the wealthiest of Lockport's citizens. His residence and grounds on Locust street were among the most attractive in the city. While he was not a member of the Buffalo Florists' Club his sons and grandson were very active members, and Mr. Lewis himself was always a great reader of everything pertaining to the nursery and floriculture, and an authority on grapes and small fruits.

Philip Gauges.

Philip Gauges, for the past twenty-two years an employe of the United States Botanical Gardens, Washington, D. C., died at his home in that city on Monday, February 1. He had suffered from a muscular trouble for nearly a year but the end came with an attack of pneumonia. Mr. Gauges was born in Baltimore forty-eight years ago. At the age of thirteen he entered the employ of Robert J. Halliday, the well known Baltimore florist, remaining there until 1882, when he secured a position in the botanical gardens at Washington. In the same year he married Miss Annie Frederick, of Baltimore, who died a few years later. In 1890 he married Miss Mary E. Yockel, also of Baltimore, who with five children survives him. His other living relatives are his mother, a sister and three brothers. One brother, Jos. A., is an employe of the bureau of plant industry of the agricultural department. During his long service at the botanical gardens he had met many men of national fame, his kind and obliging disposition winning him friends among them. He attended many of the conventions of commercial florists in other cities and had a large acquaintance among the growers and dealers of the country, and a host of friends connected with the government horticultural bureaus and the commercial trade of Washington. His funeral was held at St. Mary's Catholic church, Washington, on Wednesday, February 3, the pall bearers being Assistant Superintendent Reynolds, Magnum Swenson, Michael McCarthy and Alex. Weir, all of the botanical gardens.

It Pays.

The generous and enthusiastic support given by the carnation growers to the local exhibition given by the New York Florists' Club last Monday evening was very much to the credit of the devotees of the divine flower. Gentlemen who will unhesitatingly respond to an invitation to contribute to an informal affair of this kind, sacrificing material that might be sold readily in the market for a substantial cash value, are entitled to the gratitude and respect of all and if their liberality brings them business it is no more than they are well entitled to. But this characteristic has at all times been prominent among the carnation brethren and those who have done it the most unselfishly stand, as they should, in the first rank as successful carnationists, commercially. A little of the same public spirit and enterprise on the part of growers in other special lines would not come amiss to their interests either collectively or individually.

Auction Bulb Sales in London.

Regarding sales at auction January 20, 1904, of Japan lily bulbs and American grown tuberose bulbs, A. Hemsley writes in the Gardeners' Chronicle as follows: "On January 20 there was a very large consignment of the above sold at Messrs. Protheroe & Morris' auction rooms. There have been several sales previously, but they continue to attract large numbers of buyers. Among the buyers on the above date were several from long distances. Some of the bulbs offered were the largest I and others have seen. In the catalogue they were aptly described as 'mammoth bulbs.' No exceptionally high prices were made, unless it was for L. speciosum album; for bulbs of this there was lively competition, the largest being particularly in demand. In all other varieties it was the largest bulbs that attracted most attention. The medium-sized bulbs were bought in large quantities by market growers. Judging from these sales, it would appear that though the trade may be dull just now, growers anticipate a better time later on. "American Pearl tuberose were sold in large quantities. In all there were upwards of 200,000 sold. These brought about 26 shillings per 1,000. Palm seeds sold well, especially Cocos Weddelliana and Kentia Belmoreana, but Kentia Forsteriana did not make quite such high prices, although the samples were very good. Lily of the valley 'Fortin's Giant' sold well at about double the prices made by the ordinary Berlin crowns."

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Charles McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.
Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-24, 1904.

THE price of White Pea beans has advanced 15 cents per bushel the past week.

THE Floral Publishing Company, of Springfield, Ohio, has failed. Assets, $1,247.23; liabilities, $43,488.97.

ONION set prices at Chicago range as follows: $1.30 to $1.35 for Yellows; $1.40 to $1.50 for Reds, and $1.75 for Whites.

PRICES of $6 to $7 on fair grades of Stowell's Evergreen sweet corn are reported made at the Cannery Convention.

MAIL order business continues fairly slow. The trouble about such conditions is that the shortage in receipts is never made up.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—Joseph L. Warder has bought out the Levings Brothers' Seed Company, an old established commission box seed house of Pekin, Ill.

SEED peas and onion seed continue slow and dealers are almost ashamed to mention them to possible buyers, seedsmen even in the smallest towns being overstocked with some kinds of peas and onions.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—The J. L. Ullathorne Seed Company has been incorporated by J. L. Ullathorne, O. C. Armstrong, A. S. Ullathorne, Hosmer J. Barrett, Geo. S. Hooper, W. A. Bickford and Henry Craft, and capitalized at $100,000.

NORFOLK, VA.—The Cotton Oil and Fiber Company's big mills and the McNally oil manufacturing plant at Norfolk are both closed and many employes are out of work as a result of the scarcity and high prices of cotton seed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—Among the visitors at the canners' convention here the following firms were represented: The Everett B. Clark Company, Jerome B. Rice Seed Company, D. M. Ferry & Company, W. H. Grenell, M. Cushman, S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Goodwin Harries Company and M. G. Madsou Seed Company. Canners report generally that they are fairly well supplied with all seeds.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The following seedsmen suffered by the recent fire: John Bolgiano & Son, Griffith & Turner Company (Light street store), S. L. Lambert & Company, W. A. Simpson & Company, W. G. Scarlett, Jr., & Company, Field's Sons and C. N. Robinson & Company. All are burned out with heavy losses, which, however, are generally covered by insurance, and the stocks can be replaced. S.

At the canners' convention, which opened at Columbus, O., February 9, the Western Canned Goods Association elected the following officers: Dr. A. C. Fraser, Manitowoc, Wis., president; L. A. Sears, Chillicothe, O., vice-president; Ira S. Whitmer, Bloomington, Ill., secretary-treasurer. The above all served last year and have been re-elected. The Canned Goods Brokers elected James M. Paver, Indianapolis, president; Lincoln North, New York, vice-president; Lord J. Dillou, New York, secretary.

Santa Clara, Cal.

Thomas M. Landrum, secretary and assistant manager of C. C. Morse & Company, was married on January 25 to Miss T. Emily Pfister, of Santa Clara. They will spend two weeks in Southern California, when they will return to Gilroy, where they intend to reside in a pretty little cottage being erected for them by the company at Carnadero.

We are enjoying a very timely and bountiful rain, which began January 3 and still continues. Crops in the vicinity of Santa Clara are now assured, so far as rain is concerned, for at least another month, and promises are good for more rain and good times. C.

Adulteration of Seeds.

OTTAWA, ONT.—The Minister of Agriculture hopes to secure the adoption this session of the bill he had before parliament last year to prevent the adulteration and mixing of seeds. He is satisfied after inquiring that careless seed collection has resulted in the spread of many noxious weeds, and is determined that this menace to agriculture shall not be permitted to continue. There was strong opposition, however, to the means by which it was proposed to achieve this object.

ADIANTUM CROWEANUM

By far the best Adiantum fern that has been introduced to the Florists' trade, is a free grower, the darkest green of the Adiantum family and longest stemmed, has the most graceful foliage, the average length of fronds measuring 30 inches, is by far the best keeper; cut fronds can be kept fresh several weeks in a cool place, and it is also one of the best ferns for a dwelling house. I have given presents of this fern to several Utica friends and from my own observation note it grows better than the Boston fern.

And as I have given up rose cultivation some ten months ago, in order to give all my attention to the fern cultivation, for cut fronds, I find it pays me $1.50 to $1.00 on roses, from the same amount of bench room. I will be delighted to give the history, also cultivation of this fern to any purchaser who may desire it.

Utica, N. Y.

MR. PETER CROWE.

Dear Sir:—Regarding your fern, Croweanum, would say that I have had the variety under observation since your stock appeared. Also that I have used many thousands of the cut fronds, believe it to be positively the best Fern of any family for Florist use and welcome the chance to buy a stock at what I believe to be a very low rate.

Very truly,

C. F. BAKER & SON.

Detroit, Mich.

DEAR FRIEND CROWE:—

I am very happy to hear that another good thing is about to be launched, and that in the fern line. I am satisfied Croweanum is by far the best Adiantum in existence, every frond being perfect. It is certainly an easy grower and money maker. You are deserving of a great success and know you will have it. Hoping for the visit at the Carnation meeting, I am,

Yours very truly,

PHILIP BREITMEYER.

New York, N. Y.

MR. PETER CROWE.

Dear Sir:—During the two years in which I have had the sale of the fronds of Adiantum Croweanum in New York City, the demand has at all times far exceeded the quantity you have been able to supply me with at $1.50 per 100, while ordinary Cuneatum has been, as a rule, in over supply at half that price.

It is without question, the best Fern for cut fronds ever seen in this market.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN I. RAYNOR.

Boston, Mass.

MR. PETER CROWE. Dear Sir:—Having had occasion to note the sale of Adiantum Croweanum in the New York market during the past eighteen months, I have been impressed with its great superiority for florists' use, as cut fronds, and have observed with pleasure the eagerness with which it has been bought by the trade. I congratulate you on the possession of a variety of such sterling commercial merit.

Very truly yours, WM. J. STEWART.

Natick, Mass.

MR. PETER CROWE. Dear Sir:—I am very pleased to hear that you have decided to put plants of your fern Adiantum Croweanum on the market. I have always been more or less interested as I understand it originated from some plants of Adiantum Cuneatum that I sold you at the Waban Conservatories in the early eighties. I remember the circumstances very well, as I hold the balance of our stock to Robert Craig in 1890.

Wishing you every success with it, I remain,

Yours truly, ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY.

Washington, D. C.

MR. PETER CROWE. Dear Sir:—The fern has been very satisfactory, and we will place a regular order next season for some.

Yours truly,

Z. D. BLACKSTONE.

Philadelphia, Pa.

MR. PETER CROWE.

Dear Sir:—I consider your Adiantum Croweanum a very valuable acquisition to this line of Ferns. It is an excellent commercial variety, good keeper and has given the best satisfaction wherever we have sold it. Our customers much prefer paying an extra price for it than buying the commoner varieties. The great trouble we find is, we cannot get enough to meet our customers' wants.

Yours very truly,

SAMUEL S. PENNOCK.

Rochester, N. Y.

MR. PETER CROWE:

Dear Sir:—We have used your Adiantum Croweanum for several years and must say it beats any Adiantum we ever had. It is certainly par excellence.

Yours truly,

SALTER BROS.

Denver, Colo.

PETER CROW, Esq.

Dear Sir:—As compared with any other Adiantum, we have found it more graceful and a much rapid grower, giving a much taller growth than we have ever been able to Cuneatum. Our store men, prefer it to any other cut fern. I certainly think it ought to be a winner, not only for you, but for those who buy it.

Yours truly,

J. A. VALENTINE, Pres.,
Park Floral Co.

Honolulu, H. I.

MR. PETER CROWE. Dear Sir:—Your Croweanum sent on October 17, came to hand on 29th ult., in very fair condition. Kindly send me full information in regard to it.

Respectfully yours,

C. F. TRUE.

Southport, Conn.

MR. PETER CROWE. Dear Sir:—Adiantum Croweanum is certainly a fine thing, shall want some as soon as you disseminate it.

Very truly yours,

ENW. J. TAYLOR.

San Mateo, Cal.

MR. PETER CROWE. Dear Sir:—Croweanum arrived here in good saleable condition; stems were longest we ever saw in Cuneatum type. Wish you success and a big sale.

Yours very truly,

FICK & FABER.

Summit, N. J.

MR. PETER CROWE. Dear Sir:—Have examined Croweanum with interest. Shall want it as soon as you send it out. It is certainly a great improvement and I am sorry I cannot get some at once.

Yours truly,

E. C. MCFADDEN.

Boston, Mass.

MR. PETER CROWE. Dear Sir:—We readily disposed of Croweanum for a much higher price than we receive for Adiantum of ordinary varieties shipped in by our growers. Respectfully, WELCH BROS.

The plants which will be ready for sale by the 1st of July next, will be from benches and large enough for 4-inch pots, as it is a rapid grower and no easy matter to confine it to a 3-inch pot. The photograph of the small fern shows character of plants, when ready to be shipped 1st of July. The prices will be as follows:

$35.00 per 100.

$250.00 per 1000.

Lowell, Mass.

During the last two weeks we experienced the severest winter weather we have had for years, the mercury going down to 30° below zero. It has been so severe that it almost put several growers out of business.

Geo. Buxton, of Nashua, N. H., is sending to town some excellent carnations of his own creation, Marion Buxton. His carnations in general are as good as one could wish for.

Although there is not much excitement in bowling circles in this quiet town, the regulars keep pegging away and many good scores are made. A new four-team league has been formed, in which the second team of the club has been entered. The most fun in the alleys appears to be the post mortems that are held after close games. Old man "Bake" is generally chief official on these occasions, and his diagnosis is worth going a mile to hear. Prize bowling for the ladies on February 22 will no doubt bring out great scores. The January averages follow:

At Chicago.

An event of interest to the bowlers took place on the evening of February 5 at Benzinger's Monroe street alleys. In a match of seven games, total pins to count, E. C. Benthey defeated E. F. Winterson, one of the Florists' Club cracks, by a margin of 281 pins. The totals were: Benthey, 1128; Winterson, 847. Another set-to between the same contestants is promised for the near future.

Another merry bowling party held the boards at Geroux alleys Tuesday evening, February 9. Three informal games were rolled with the following scores:

AKRON, O.—Hitchings & Company have just completed for C. B. Raymond a house 20x120 heated with hot water and fitted with one of their sectional boilers.

WARWICK, R. I.—A fire starting in the ventilator and fanned by a fierce wind, totally destroyed the barn and greenhouses of J. A. Foster February 2. The loss is more than $20,000, partly insured. Four valuable horses, other stock and the entire contents of the building were consumed.

FOND DU LAC, Wis.—Mrs. Ernest Haentzied on the morning of February 7, after a brief illness. She had been a sufferer from diabetes at different times for eight years. The deceased was born in Gemuenden, Germany, in 1841. She, as her husband, was an enthusiastic florist, and she worked for many years with her husband at their greenhouses on Linden street. She is survived by her husband, five sons and one daughter. The funeral occurred Wednesday, February 10.

THE ANNUAL FLOWER AND PLANT SHOW

Under the Auspices of the Boston Co-Operative Flower Growers' Association.

Will take place at the BOSTON FLOWER MARKET,

161-163, Columbus Avenue, BOSTON, MASS.

Saturday, February 27, 1904, from 9 O'clock A. M. to 5 O'clock P. M.

Further particulars for intending exhibitors may be had on application to the Secretary.

COMMITTEE:

WM. NICKOLSON, Chairman,

E. SUTERMEISTER,

GEORGE CARTWRIGHT.

Minneapolis.

The last week's trade was fairly good and stock seems sufficient to meet all demands excepting tea and Beauty roses. The weather has been exceedingly disagreeable and eastern trains have been from two to eight hours late, so that the retailer ordering from these points experienced many disappointments in trying to supply his customers. Carnations have been increasing in supply, as have violets. Quality is all that is desired. Bulbous stock of all kinds has shortened up. There seems to be a promising outlook for an increased cut of tea and Beauty roses for some time to come. Valley of choice quality is being shipped in.

R. Wessling has the distinction of having a "count" in his employ. The said party coming to this city with $300 in his pocket straightway hired a "cabby" to drive him around the city. The result was he imbibed too much, and was released of his $300 and now has to go back to his old trade, which he claims is the culture of flowers.

Irving Kimball, of Anoka, Minn., was in the city last week. He is growing carnations and is meeting with success. His attention was formerly given to vegetable production.

John Monson of the Minneapolis Floral Company says the firm intends to add a range of carnation houses in the spring.

The coal question has caused the growers much annoyance during the cold snap as the quality is very poor.

The Florists' Club social dance February 4 was well attended by the old as well as the young.

H. A. Bunyard, of New York, was a caller last week and attended the Florists' Club dance.

W. A. Sauer, of the East Side Floral Company, is the proud father of a new bright baby boy.

Hopper & Schamp are getting ready for the construction of their new range.

Walter Kerridge is busy on decorations and has some good orders booked.

R. G. Mendenhall has been confined to his bed the last week by illness.

Hans Rosacker is marketing some choice violets. C. F. R.

Providence, R. I.

Business continues in the familiar slow rut despite the fact that flowers are in crop and medium-priced. Carnations at $2 and $2.50 per 100, roses at 3 to 6 cents each and violets 40 to 50 cents per 100 are the prevailing rates. Narcissus is very slow at $1 and $1.50 per 100. Romans bring 2 cents and tulips 3 cents wholesale. Smilax is plentiful at 10 cents per string and maidenhair is short at 75 cents per 100.

With the exception of J. A. Foster's fire there is nothing new to report. Mr. Foster lost several thousand dollars in barns, horses, etc., and a couple of forced vegetable houses, but the carnation range with its valuable stock remains unharmed much to the relief of Wm. Macnair, who handles the product in Providence and who appreciates the skill of Wm. Burke as a grower. M. M.

OSHKOSH, Wis. — John Nelson has recently contracted with Riemer & Radmer, of Milwaukee, to install a Furman sectional boiler in his greenhouse. This change was caused by his old wrought iron boiler giving out. He has suffered no loss of stock, although the weather has been very severe.

Oceanic, N. J.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held February 5. The meeting was very well attended and interesting. A grand display of cut flowers was on exhibition. H. A. Kettel, gardener to James Loeb, had some fine lily of the valley, roses, Liliun Harrisii and narcissi, scoring in all 220 points. James Dowlen, gardener to H. L. Terrell, had a well flowered plant of Coelogyne cristata, a vase of good roses and a vase of carnations, scoring in all 235 points. Mr. Dowlen exhibited several seedling carnations of promise, a crimson scoring 90, a red 90, a scarlet 85, and several whites scoring 70 points. Geo. H. Hale, gardener to Edward D. Adams, had some well grown freesias, Princess of Wales violets and imantophyllums, scoring in all 250 points. The judges of the evening were W. W. Kennedy, A. G. Williams and Wm. Turner. The members who visited Tarrytown, N. Y., to attend the annual dinner of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, arrived home safely, although I understand the snow was a little deep in places. They reviewed their trip in detail. J. Yomans, our Oceanic Chauncey Depew, made a speech which will not be forgotten for a long time at Tarrytown. The discussions of the evening were on experiment stations and San Jose scale, and its treatment in winter and summer. Most of the members present took part. Mr. Hale, in order to find the views of the members, asked whether they thought it essential for a person learning the gardening profession to take up botany to become a good gardener. Most of those present gave their views, some stating that if a gardener could combine and carry the two he would be a stronger man, but the general trend of the views was against it, stating it was not necessary, as botany was a study in itself and from their experience and observation botanists as a rule made very poor gardeners.

Baltimore.

The great fire which has destroyed so large a part of the business section of our city, the loss being estimated by the more conservative at about sixty million dollars, and by other calculators at more than double that sum, has disorganized and paralyzed all local trade. Some funeral orders are being filled, naturally and necessarily, but pretty nearly all social events, public and private, are postponed or abandoned, and the florist whose commodities are classed as luxuries will feel for some time to come the disastrous blow to the business of our city.

Fortunately in the burned district there was not located one florist's establishment, and, except mere incidental losses such as are common to the whole community, and the prostration which will follow the disaster, the florists have had an exemption from loss above all other trades.

Last week was one of fair business and the demand for cut flowers about absorbed all the cut flower shipments at prices which ruled about the same as the preceding week. The weather was cold and unfavorable, but there was one warm day and night and the ice and snow which have been with us so long, disappeared.

Charles street florists are being offered heavy figures for their stores by burned out concerns. That will be the main retail thoroughfare during the reconstruction period.

Business the last two weeks was steady with no great rush. Roses are scarce and of poor quality. Carnations are fair and enough to go around. Sunlight is badly needed. Violets are moving more freely owing to a reduction in price; singles are being more called for this season and growers in this section are going to double up next season. Tulips, daffodils and Paper Whites are plentiful but do not move any too fast.

Store men are making good displays of pot plants, such as azaleas, cinerarias, cyclamens, primroses and hyacinths, but report they do not move very fast.

Visitors this week were Paul Berkowitz, representing Bayersdorfer & Company; Mr. Green, of Rice & Company, N. Y.; Mr. Norton, of Vaughan's, N. Y.; also a representative of Speelman & Sons, of Holland. A. B.

There is talk of organizing a florists' club in this city. A move in this direction would be a proper step, since great benefit could be derived from discussions that would take place at the meetings, besides creating a friendship among many who are now practically unknown to each other. Sherman Stephens is spoken of as a good man to organize the proposed society and act as its leader.

The Livingston Seed Company has added a wholesale department to its cut flower establishment and there is no reason why success should not crown the effort. CARL.

William J. Hamilton has just been awarded a contract to construct greenhouses and conservatories on the estate of Wm. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., at Lake Success. There will be six houses, each 20x250 feet, and their cost will be about $25,000. Iron, brick and glass are the materials to be used. The houses will be located on what was formerly the Isaac Poole estate. They will be near the Italian gardens, which are now under construction. Work on the houses will be commenced March 1.

THE PIERSON FERN

We desire to call particular attention to our large stock of specimen plants ready for immediate sale. Florists will find this one of the quickest selling and most profitable plants that they can handle. These are grand, strong established pot-grown plants in the very best possible condition, not plants over-potted or lifted from the bench, and are exceedingly cheap at the prices offered. Stock is in grand shape, and will guarantee every shipment to give perfect satisfaction.

Florists will find these plants readily salable at twice or three times their first cost, and by shifting them up and holding them a couple months their value can again be doubled. Retail florists with stores will find this gilded stock for retailing. We guarantee they will find nothing that they can handle as readily salable and profitable as this grand fern.

Extra fine plants in 6-inch pots, $1.00 each. Fine specimens in 8-inch pots, very fine, $2.00 each. Extra fine specimens in 10-inch pots, $3.00 each. Larger plants, $5.00 each.

Breitmeyers' New Rose

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID.

To Be Disseminated April 1, 1904.

COLOR. Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE. Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM. Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH. Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific.

GEO. HANCOCK & SON,
GRAND HAVEN, MICH.

Washington, D. C.

There recently has been quite a discussion of the scheme for a vista through the mall from the capital to the Potomac river. A vista or boulevard 800 feet wide was in the plans of L'Enfant, the French engineer who laid out the streets and parks of Washington. About 1850-51 the services of the celebrated landscape architect Downing were secured by the government and among his services was the planting of the mall with trees that are now a beauty and a joy to the lovers of cool and refreshing shade. In the years following Downing's work the vista scheme seems to have slumbered, but it was recently revived by the plans for the new agricultural building. The house committee on agriculture, of which Mr. Wadsworth is chairman, finding that the new building was designed to front on a vista that does not exist at once began an investigation. One result of their labors has been to show that the new building if so placed would be inconvenient to the present lines of travel, its rear instead of its front being on the street. They further claim that it will be fifty years before the government can afford to build the boulevard. A vista can be had at any time by chopping down the trees. The trees are now causing most of the discussion. It always seems a pity to destroy fine trees, but all who have knowledge of what a fine city park ought to be must agree that the mall as it now is falls short of the requirements. Its streets and walks are rambling and uncertain; between its most attractive point and the best section of the city a disreputable red-light district intervenes. The Smithsonian Institute and the National Museum are noteworthy attractions, but as a park it is more a resort for idlers and loafers than for fashionable or even the great middle classes. If a vista would make it a popular resort by all means let us have the vista.

The weather moderated toward the last of the week and trade of the transient sort was better. Prices remain firm. The society people were active with receptions, dinners and teas during the past week. The congressional reception at the White House was the leading event. A large amount of good stock came in from S. S. Penneck, of Philadelphia, to various Washington retailers.

George H. Cooke received an extra fine lot of Bridesmaid roses. He also has received from a local grower a lot of Dielytra spectabilis (Bleeding Heart) in 5-inch pots which will come in all right for St. Valentine's day.

Thomas J. Wade, who was for some time a traveller for various Holland bulb firms, is now in Washington as manager of Z. D. Blackstone's store.

Alex. B. Garden is doing a good wholesale business in La Reine and Yellow Prince tulips. His Yellow Prince are the best on the market.

H. Wilden, representing Warnaar & Company, of Sassenheim, Holland, recently visited the growers of this vicinity.

C. Ponnett & Company have given up their Fourteenth street store.

Lenox, Mass.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held in the society rooms February 6. After the meeting, Dr. E. O. Hovey, curator of the Museum of Natural History, delivered a very interesting public lecture on "Mount Pelee and the destruction of St. Pierre," which was illustrated with 200 stereopticon views which were for the most part taken by Dr. Hovey. The lecture was free and the hall was well filled.

At the next meeting, February 20, the society will hold another public lecture, at which Edward Howe Forbush, state ornithologist, will be the speaker. His lecture will be on "Birds" and will also be illustrated by stereopticon views. The society anticipates another large attendance.

G. F.

NEW BRIGHTON, PA.—August Meyer's greenhouses were flooded by the overflow which swept the Ohio valley and ruined. The water entered the boiler room and drowned the fire. Nearly all his plants were frozen in the zero weather which followed. Mr. Meyer and a force of men tried to get the water out of the boiler room and start up the fires, but he succeeded too late. His loss was $2,000.

DAVIS BROTHERS, Morrison, Ill.

San Diego, Cal.

California has been experiencing one of the most remarkable droughts on record. North of the Tehechipi Pass there was some rain last November but in southern California, outside of the mountains, less than one-half inch has fallen since the spring of 1903. In the east this would spell ruin to the farmers, but here, while a bit scared, we are not hurt very much, certainly not starving, with 30,000 carloads of oranges to ship. Besides we have three months of the rainy season yet before us and whatever moisture we get will come when it will do the most good. The orchardists are independent, to a certain extent, of the rainfall. Great and little companies and private owners have been busy developing water supply these last seven lean years, and now we may look with no great concern on a prospect which would have been appalling ten years ago.

Frank Sessious, brother of Miss K. O. Sessions, is to be congratulated on the success of his poinsettia experiment. Frank has a place near his sister's new gardens on Spreckel's Heights, where he planted a lot of poinsettia cuttings last spring. They did nicely and he cut and shipped 3,000 bracts to San Francisco for the Christmas trade. They sold well and it is reported were the finest outdoor stock ever seen in that city, having a richer coloring than that possessed by northern grown stock. The base of the stems were dipped in boiling water before shipping to coagulate the milky sap. If this is not done the stems bleed badly and the flowers wilt.

Geo. Cooke, of Parsons & Cooke, the well known landscape architects, is now in San Diego perfecting plans for the improvement of the big city park of over 1,400 acres. San Diego has a population of only 25,000 to-day but has big expectations, as may be inferred from the size of the park site. George W. Marston, a leading business man, has donated the amount necessary to have the plans made, and he and others are providing funds to make a beginning of the improvements.

Mrs. Mary Boyle of the Cottage Nursery on Golden Hill, has returned to her old stand in the Jose block on D street. This store has been neatly fitted up and is very attractive. Mrs. Boyle reports a 40 per cent increase in holiday flower sales. House plants broke about even with last season's demand. Violets are now retailing at 25 cents per bunch of fifty. The Golden Hill violet plants look better and are freer from spot than any others around San Diego.

E. J. Vawter, of Los Angeles, proprietor of extensive carnation gardens at Santa Monica and Ocean Park, was a December visitor to San Diego and vicinity, looking up carnations for shipment to Los Angeles. It is said he has contracted for the entire cut of Mr. Hasp's gardens at Oceanside and has also secured the output of Wolfskill's carnation houses in Los Angeles.

Miss Kent, who was with the Coronado Beach Company two years ago, is again in charge of the flower store in the Coronado hotel. R. H. A.

This section is still experiencing bad weather. Growers are unanimous in declaring it the worst ever seen. As to the volume of business being done, there is a diversity of opinion among the retailers. With the long period of unsuitable weather transient trade has fallen off quite noticeably and there are few social events of any importance. Roses are not coming in very rapidly though there is some very choice stock being cut and special blooms of Bridesmaid, Bride and Meteor will soon be more plentiful. The stock at present is readily disposed of and there is considerable demand for the cheaper grades for design work. Carnations are also very good, also mignonette. Freesias are quite plentiful and have a good sale. There is quite a glut of tulips and they are being offered at the price of the bulbs. Violets are also hard to get rid of and it will be a good thing for the retailers when they are brought down in price.

Several boxes have recently arrived with the flower frozen stiff, having been too well sprinkled with water and the boxes containing little more lining than in the moderate weather. Usually the water in the bottom of the boxes freezes and the frost on the flowers results from this. Several claims have been made to the express companies on frozen shipments which were the shippers' own fault, and it is said that they are contemplating refusing to carry flowers except at owners' risk. I think the florists' clubs should take this matter in hand.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club held a very successful meeting and the following officers were elected: President, W. H. Ford; vice-president, Geo. Douglas; second vice-president, Geo. Manton; treasurer, George Mills; secretary, E. H. Collins; executive committee, W. Muston, T. Manton, W. Jay, D. Robinson, J. H. Dunlop, H. Dillemath, J. Ede; representatives to the exhibition board, W. Jay and T. Manton.

J. H. Dunlop had the decoration of the Masonic Temple and certainly did credit for the auspicious occasion. In the supper room large quantities of southern smilax and many strings of pendants besides hundreds of flags were used. It was the most artistic and largest decoration ever had in this building. D.

VINELAND, N. J.—The floral society of this place, the only one of its kind in southern Jersey, which was chartered in 1868, has elected these officers: President, Mrs. A. E. Gay; vice presidents, Miss M. Abbott, Mrs. J. P. Gage, Mrs. H. Gove; librarian, Mrs. S. S. Gould; treasurer, Mr. Godkin.

What Advertisers Say

SAME OLD STORY.—AM. FLORIST Co.:—Kindly discontinue our adv. "Bred in Old Kentucky" The Florist is certainly a splendid medium for advertising. The first insertion brought us orders enough to clean us out of cuttings. We enclose $1.00 to pay for the insertions. When we have more stock will try it again. We were not only highly pleased with the results, but with manner in which you displayed our adv. C. L. BRUNSON & Co. Paducah, Ky.

PLEASURE AND PROFIT.—AM. FLORIST Co.:—Your paper is a weekly source of pleasure and profit to every one connected with this concern, and three copies have been subscribed for by the company for several years—one to my house, one to the greenhouses and one to the store. In addition to that the foreman and one or two of the men each receive a copy. J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Denver, Colo. Park Floral Co.

"Gurney" Heaters
 "BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouses: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expense at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

Greenhouse Construction and Heating.

[Presented before the Chicago Florists' Club, February 3, 1904, by Robt. W. King, of North Tonawanda, N. Y.]

In receiving an invitation to attend the meeting of this club I understand its object is the bringing together of men engaged in the florists' profession, with the purpose of exchanging ideas; not only amongst the florists or growers themselves, but also with greenhouse builders, engineers, etc., whose interests are allied with those of the first referred to. The chief subject I understood was to be "Greenhouse Construction." On this question, being open to learn, I was very pleased to have the opportunity afforded me of being present, and can assure you I feel honored in receiving an invitation from the Florists' Club. I am also promised the opportunity of inspecting the mammoth conservatories and becoming acquainted with many growers of renown whose praises have been carried my way on breezes emanating from what I have heard designated as the "Windy City." In reference to the florists' profession, a good many flowery things have been and still can be said in regard to the ennobling influences of the same, but to drop down to hard pan without the use of parachute or wings is the kind of knocks we are more accustomed to deal with and have got to make up our minds to expect when we allow our aspirations to carry us too high. There are many questions I would like to receive more light upon, possibly far too many for the present occasion to cope with. However, the old saying, "Rome was not built in a day," still applies as an offset against expecting to build too much on any single occasion. The questions in greenhouse construction before my mind are as follows:

- Best width for beds.
- Best width for walks.
- Best width for houses.
- Best methods of ventilation.
- Whether continuous.
- Whether opening at ridge.
- Whether hinged at ridge.
- Whether single or double.
- Whether hand or automatic.
- Difference for roses as compared with carnations.
- Detached houses or in block for roses.
- Detached houses or in block for carnations.
- In block houses has ventilation at the gutter as well as the ridge ever been tried?

Upon these questions I am not competent to protrude my opinion. There are other questions, however, on which my profession as an engineer engaged especially in greenhouse improving may entitle me to have something to say. I will treat them in turn as follows:

The Houses Themselves.—In regard to the improving of the houses themselves, it is universally acknowledged that two very desirable factors are permanency of construction and the obtaining at the same time of such form as will admit the greatest degree of light. Along these lines I have brought with me a sample of a new purline, thinking it may interest the club. You note it is on the same principle of truss work introduced some years ago, and on which many houses have been erected in the United States and in Canada, some of which have been illustrated in the trade papers. The first form did away with the posts that supported either ridges or purlines, making the walls of the houses or inside gutters the only roof supports, thus leaving the beds clear of obstruction. The present improvement exchanges the solid purline whether of wood or angleiron (either of which is a serious obstruction to light at the time it is most needed) for one of skeleton form, the purline itself being but three-eighths inch in diameter, trussed with wire of three-sixteenth inch diameter. The larger truss limbs at the end of the sample are those used in the form referred to and were fastened to either wood or angleiron purline. In this form they are adapted to fasten to the three-eighths inch iron sash bar direct, the intermediate sash bars being supported by the smaller truss limbs.

Greenhouse Steam Economizer.—Briefly, the object of the economizer applied to a steam boiler is to use the temperature of the colder return or feed water to absorb heat from the fuel gases after they have left the hotter surface of the boiler. In our new system we distribute the return pipes from the heating coils about the houses to be heated as in hot water heating, so abstracting the heat for a useful purpose; by so cooling the returned water we render it capable of absorbing additional heat from the otherwise waste gases.

The Economy Obtained.—By reference to Green's economizer catalogues (this is the economizer almost universally used in steam engine practice) you will find substantial references from all parts of the world and tabulated data as to the percentage of saving under different conditions. It will be seen that where conditions are as favorable as in greenhouse heating a saving of at least fifteen per cent. could be accomplished where the system is successfully applied. In the writer's own practice he has not been able to give exact results on the economy obtained with the economizer system alone, because it has been mixed with other elements of economy in the plants experimented upon. For instance, economizer surface adds considerably to the total area of heating surface of the boiler, and where this latter has been too small, as it usually is, an additional element of economy is here introduced, adding to the economy due to the economizer system only. In some work where the economizer system in greenhouses has been only partially installed along with other improvements, such as water tube boilers, as compared with the old style fire tube, a saving of twenty-five per cent in fuel has been accomplished. In other work where the effect of the economizer system has been more fully developed along with other improvements, a saving of as much as thirty-three and one-third per cent has apparently resulted. This is equal to a saving of one ton of coal in every three. The writer regrets that he is not at present able to speak more definitely on the economic value of the economizer alone, though he expects to later on or before this season is through. The guarantee given with the new system referred to is fifteen per cent. Before leaving this part of my subject a few words may be said on the financial side of the question. Many growers object to putting in an up-to-date heating plant and operating the same when erected on such business principles as are followed in other power stations on the ground of expense, and yet the extra expense so incurred would be the best paying part of their whole investment. For example, 180,000 square feet of glass, ventilation and heating plant included, represents an investment of, say, $80,000. A net profit of seven per cent would realize $5,600 per annum. The fuel bill for this glass on a basis of twelve tons of coal per season per 1,000 square feet of glass would represent 2,160 tons of coal. On a basis of eight tons it would represent 1,240 tons, being a difference of 920 tons of coal, which at $4 per ton would represent, were this ratio of economy obtained, an additional profit for the year of $3,680. Suppose the improvement of the plant cost $1,000, which would be adding, say, twenty-five per cent to the boiler cost. This would be a profit of 368 per cent per annum on the additional outlay.

When the writer first realized the importance of the economizer system he soon afterwards took steps to apply it to greenhouse work, since steam heating was then coming into use, and arranged with a grower desiring to experiment also, or rather to get something better than was then on the market, to work jointly along these lines. Coal at that time was costing $6 per ton, so a saving in the proportion mentioned, viz: eight to twelve, would mean an extra dividend of itself of seven per cent on the whole capital invested. After the first year's operation a very careful and minute stock taking and comparison with an ordinary plant (the figures of which I yet intend to publish) did not show quite eight to twelve, but showed seven and one-half to ten, which was very near it. It is said "the proof of the pudding is in the eating." I submit then as additional evidence that the grower who operated that plant became rich. Though this fact may not be due altogether to the superiority of the plant, still the writer is thankful that by no possibility whatever can the fact of this man getting rich be used as an argument against it.

Installing a Heating Plant.—Since it has been explained how the installing and conduct of a heating or power plant cuts such a large figure in the profit and loss account at the end of the year, is it not a wonder that so little regard is paid to the matter by florists generally? Is it that the profits derived from his work are so large that he does not care to bother with many things indispensable to other businesses working on finer margins and profits? This may apply to large concerns who are satisfied with a margin of seven per cent on their investment after living expenses or salaries have been paid. But how about the smaller grower who may be paying that or more for borrowed capital and credit which can only be redeemed or his business increased on the profit that can be made over and above the interest item mentioned. In the writer's opinion there is yet a large opening in this country for growing of all descriptions where the plant is erected on up-to-date engineering lines and then

The Late Philip Gauges.

expertly operated, the reverse being generally the rule. If a man wants to build a house to dwell in, so as to get the best value for his money he engages an architect and places the matter in his hands. But, let the same man undertake to run a greenhouse or to build one, the chances are that the whole thing will be run up haphazard, or by what is called in the part of the world the writer came from, "The rule of thumb." Pardon me while I explain this expression. Before thermometers were invented beer was brewed, and pretty good beer too, sometimes, by the rule of thumb; that is, to ascertain temperature of the worts, which have to be judged to a nicety, the brewer dipped in his thumb. It will probably be found that Mr. Bass was amongst the first to adopt more scientific methods. His brews are not only sometimes, but have the reputation the world over of being always good. Too many greenhouses and their heating plants are erected by the rule of thumb, and run on the same principle. Where can you go and learn from a greenhouse man (as you can from other power stations) the proportion of boiler surface to the power or radiating surface he uses? The proportion of great area with height of stack to the boiler surface? The proportion of radiating surface to glass and wall area? The percentage of moisture in the steam made? The percentage of CO₂ in his chimney gases? The average temperature of his feed or return water with average pressure of steam? The amount of water evaporated per pound of coal consumed under the above and other conditions by which the actual calorific value received from the coal used can be accurately determined, all with a view to improving, if necessary, some of the conditions referred to. The successful combining of these things means, in some cases, a dividend or no dividend to those holding an interest in the plant. If any one knows of a greenhouse establishment in the United States or Canada where such records are to be found on file in the office for future reference I want to be informed of it. I want to meet the man who inaugurated it if he is alive and shake him by the hand. I hope to find him in or somewhere about Chicago, and can assure you that the privilege of an hour's chat with him will be an event that will receive a double underscore in my diary. My notice to meet the club was too short for a paper. Also, to go further into detail of greenhouse plants and their management might tire my hearers. Such medicine is best taken and retained when in small doses. At some future time you may hear further from me on this subject.

THE CARNATION.

Raising Seedlings.

This is a good time to do some hybridizing, if you are thinking of raising some plants from seed. Hybridizing can be done at any time of the year, but as it is desirable to know the parentage of any variety and to avoid adulteration from inferior sorts, it is best to do it at a time when the chance of insects or other agents interfering with the work is reduced to a minimum. It was the writer's intention to refer to this subject earlier, but the stress of circumstances has interfered very much with his plans during the past few months. The months of November, December, January and February are the most free from outside influences and therefore the chance of knowing exactly what variety is used to fertilize the seed parent is then the greatest. Bees gathering their honey or a strong current of air blowing through the house will carry the pollen from one flower to another and in that way the result of an important cross may be entirely changed.

Few are ignorant of the fact that plant propagation by seed is effected by sex relation, much the same as is the case in the animal kingdom. In some species of plants the sexes are very widely separated, flowers of one sex appearing only on certain plants; in others flowers of both sexes may be found on the same plants; but in the great majority of plants both the male and female organs are found in the same flower. To the latter class belongs the carnation. The anthers with the pollen capsules attached to the end are the male organs, the dust or pollen being ejected when ripe. Each grain of pollen is capable of fertilizing an unimpregnated seed and combining the qualities of its parent with those of the seed parent. The ovary containing the seed and the stigmas reaching out from the top are the female organ. The office of the petals of the flowers is to breathe in the essence of the sunshine which is necessary for this most delicate operation in plant life. To make sure of a perfect cross and perpetuation only of such qualities as are desirable it is well to operate only on varieties that nearest approach an ideal. Select a few promising looking buds and tie them up some time before the flower is open, making sure that the stem and calyx are as near perfect as possible and that the plant is healthy. When the flower is about half open is the time to begin to prepare the flower for fertilization. The calyx is then split on one side with a sharp knife and the immature anthers are cut out. This is done in order to prevent self-fertilization. From then on there is nothing to do but to allow the flower to mature and the stigmas to become ready to receive the pollen. When the flower has grown to full maturity the stigmas are usually well developed, having assumed a hairy and moist upper surface. The operation of fertilizing the flower is very simple. A well developed flower that has been carefully selected is taken and the pollen dust is carefully rubbed over the stigmas by bringing the two flowers together. This is best done on a sunny day when life is most active, and the capsules containing the pollen must have burst to liberate it. If the operation has been well performed the petals and stigmas of the fertilized flower will wither up in a few hours and fertilization will be complete. The ovary will begin to swell in a few days and there is nothing more to do but to guard it from injury until it is ripe. The calyx and withered petals and stigmas should be cut away, so that water lodging around the seed pod will dry up quickly and not rot the ovary. The time required for the seed to ripen varies considerably, six weeks being about the average. When the seed pod has turned brown about half its length from the stem down, it is ripe, and should be cut off with the whole stem and laid in a cool, airy place to dry, after which the seed is carefully removed and either sown immediately or put away in an envelope upon which the cross is marked.

It is well to sow the seed early enough so that most of the plants will bloom outside before frost, thus saving considerable bench space, as at least three-quarters will come single or otherwise undesirable, and this should be no later than the last of March. Germinate the seed in a temperature of about 56° at night. Use a light soil and do not cover the seed more than twice their own thickness. When large enough to handle, pot into small pots and shift along when necessary, giving them the same treatment that is given the young stock propagated from cuttings. Top the plants only once and allow the side shoots to bloom as soon as possible. Watch each plant as it comes into bloom and if it seems worthy of further trial, mark it for planting indoors. Single-flowered plants or those that are otherwise undesirable should be pulled up immediately and thrown away.

This branch of commercial carnation culture, though not always the most remunerative and certain in its result, possesses a charm and fascination that is worth any effort bestowed upon it. Probably not one in a thousand plants grown from seed ever becomes the parent of a variety worthy of introduction to the trade, and of the many varieties introduced each year a very small percentage become really standard varieties. The man who works along the lines of established rules of plant breeding and does not place his hopes for earthly treasures too high will get greater satisfaction from this work than he who goes at it in a haphazard way and sees the mirage of a golden harvest ever before him. There is a satisfaction in working for an ideal that is far greater than any surprise that may ever come from mere chance.

Waste no time on poor varieties and keep a record of each cross. Make every cross with a certain end in view. A good white may be produced, for instance, by crossing Lawson with White Cloud. The seed parent usually influences the plant resulting from a cross, while the pollen parent reflects its qualities more in the color and shape of the flower. Quite the opposite, however, comes true in exceptional cases. J.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Registered by Swan Peterson, Gibson City, Ill., Gibson Beauty, color a magnificent shade of light pink, and entirely different from anything ever originated. Considered to be superior to Enchantress. Size three and one half inches and over. Form perfect and ideal for high grade fancy blooms with stem twenty-four to thirty inches and over, stiff and wiry. Calyx perfect and never bursts. Fragrance a rich spicy clove. Substance of the best, an excellent feature being its keeping and shipping qualities. Habits ideal; produces no surplus grass and is a strong and vigorous grower. Early, free and continuous bloomer, needing no special treatment to develop its blooms.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Class L of the premium list should read: "By J. B. Valentine, of Park Floral Company, Denver, Col., $25 in cash for the best twelve blooms of an undisseminated seedling shown by the originator, all varieties that are shown in classes requiring more than twelve blooms being excluded." The premium list as published reads $25 in cash for best blooms instead of best twelve blooms. It is the intention of the donor of this premium to bring out some of the good things in their second year, instead of waiting for the third year to see them.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Santa Claus.

The new white chrysanthemum, Santa Claus, brought out last season by David S. Beach, of Bridgeport, Conn., is shown in the accompanying engraving. It took well in its initial season and it has all the earmarks of a stayer. Mr. Beach, who is quite proud of the new acquisition, states that the habits of the plants are such as to make it very easy to grow. The foliage is dark green, plant dwarf, height not exceeding three feet, with a remarkably thick stem. The blooms do not begin to show until the last week in October. Mr. Beach named the variety Santa Claus because of its snow white, bearded appearance.

Chrysanthemum Comment.

"E. D. S." in the AMERICAN FLORIST of January 16, page 940, is somewhat "at sea" as to the origin of some of the varieties he mentions. Mrs. "F. W." Vallis (not "F. S.") is the correct name of Silsbury's variety, and it was distributed by no particular firm but by the whole of the English specialists. The probabilities are that good as it is in this country it will not be a success under the American method of culture.

Lord Ludlow is not a recent English novelty but is a standard variety here and is an Australian. Le Grand Dragon is one of Calvat's (French) of many years ago, once popular here but now surpassed. Lord Salisbury and Matthew Smith are rather ancient varieties and with Mary Inglis are also due to Australia. On the other hand I can claim credit for raising Kimberley so it must not be classed as an Australian.

It is wrong to class Miss Elsie Fulton and Princess Alice de Monaco as synonyms. I admit that until the past season many considered them such. The first named is much to be preferred, the flowers being larger and more easily produced. The florets are smoother and more even, whilst the foliage is less robust. W. J. GODFREY.

I do not doubt the correctness of Mr. Godfrey's comments, as most of the varieties brought to this country are procured from English disseminators. I cannot say how these errors occurred unless my article was written by memory instead of referring to records at hand. As to Lord Salisbury, Lord Ludlow and Matthew Smith, they are still quite new in this country. However, we find all three of these as well as LeGrand Dragon were reported in the Gardeners' Chronicle of November 14 as being among the winning forty-eight blooms, distinct, and were grown by W. Mease, gardener to A. Tate, and shown at the N. C. S. meeting. As to the similarity of Miss Elsie Fulton and Princess Alice de Monaco, I doubt if there are many who could identify the two varieties if placed in stands unlabeled. They are certainly very much alike. I quite agree with Mr. Godfrey that many of the novelties which reach us from England do not respond to our methods; yet we must expect them as good until they have proved otherwise. ELMER D. SMITH.

Chicago Florists' Club Exhibition.

The fourth exhibition given this season under the auspices of the Florists' Club was held at Handel hall, Wednesday afternoon and evening, February 17, and was pronounced by those who regularly attend these club functions as one of the most interesting and successful of the winter series, both in point of the number of exhibits and the exceptional quality of stock staged. The exhibits comprised roses, carnations, violets, miscellaneous plants and bulbous stock, and each of these departments contributed something of keen interest and value to the trade. Under the management of Phil Hanswirth who worked untiringly, the exhibition took a long step toward the standard of excellence which is being sought by the club members. It is to be hoped that the spirit of unalloyed and genuine interest manifested in this event by exhibitors, trade members and the craft in general will be fostered, and that the successful club show has come to stay. As an adjunct to the trade these exhibitions are proving invaluable. A healthy interest was also shown by the public, who were admitted to the hall by card from 2 to 4 o'clock. The exhibits were adjudged by John Thorpe, W. L. Palinsky and Harry Bunyard, of New York, who is a visitor here this week.

The Chicago Carnation Company had vases of Crusader, Harlowarden and Alba, all blooms of high exhibition standard. Manager Hartshorne also staged a vase of Baur and Smiths' Indianapolis.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Company, of Joliet, had a vase of Estelle, blooms of extraordinary size, color and foliage. Also vases of Mrs. M. A. Patten, Gov. Wolcott and Nelson Fisher.

E. G. Hill & Company, of Richmond, Ind., sent a vase of Adonis, 100 blooms.

Sinner Brothers had Lawson and America, the former remarkably well done. Their white seedling No. 200 was shown, and it has all the appearance of a good commercial carnation.

F. R. Thornton, of Galesburg, Ill., sent a vase of his white Illinois, which attracted much comment on account of its large free blooms and strong stem.

Anton Then displayed a promising variegated seedling, No. 122.

Several vases of 100 blooms each, of Lawson, were shown by John Reardon, gardener to Martin Kyerson. They were fine flowers, well up to the Lawson standard.

W. N. Rudd's popular pink Phyllis attracted creditable comment. It is a high class carnation and is winning many plaudits among the newcomers. Chicago White was also in Mr. Rudd's exhibit.

F. Dorner & Sons, of Lafayette, Ind., sent a vase of Lady Bountiful, splendid blooms.

Wietor Brothers sent from their regular noon shipment, taken from their counters a half hour before the exhibition opened, vases of Harlowarden, Sport, Lawson, Morning Glory, Enchantress and Chicago (Red Bradt). It was difficult to distinguish them from the carefully nursed exhibition carnations.

Peter Reinburg contributed to the rose exhibits with a fine display of his leading varieties, most prominent among them being his new Uncle John, the pink sport from Golden Gate. There were also vases of American Beauty, Chatenay, which Mr. Reinberg grows to perfection, Ivory, Liberty, Golden Gate, Bride, Bridesmaid, Perle and Sunrise.

Bentley & Company had a vase of good Bridesmaid, fifty blooms, and one of Bride, flowers much above the average.

George Hopp, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was present with a vase of his new unnamed pink rose, which, however, were frozen in shipping, and did not therefore show up as well as their worth merited. It is a cross between Testout and Bridesmaid, and a sister to La Detroit, which was originated by Mr. Hopp. It is somewhat darker than Testout, of good form and foliage. Mr. Hopp's stock is limited, only about 100 plants being now in his possession.

G. Swenson, of Elmhurst, Ill., sent the only violets shown, three vases of 100 each of California, Princess of Wales and Marie Louise, all of a rich dark color and delicious fragrance.

The George Wittbold Company never fails to come to the fore with a high class exhibit of assorted plants. The display of bulbous stock in decorated boxes and pans embraced Keizerskroon, Yellow Prince and Proserpine tulips, well grown jonquils, daffodils and Dutch hyacinths. Good azaleas and rhododendrons were also noted.

The Garfield Park Floral Company's exhibit of plants is deserving of special mention. It included specimen Pierson and Boston ferns, acacias, gardenias, cyclamens, primroses, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and Azalea mollis.

Stollery Brothers had a nice display of La Reine and Keizerskroon tulips.

W. L. Palinsky showed fifteen pots of remarkably well grown cinerarias in 5 and 6-inch pots.

Primula obconica was shown by J. J. Mitchell. There were five pots, some of the best stock seen here this year.

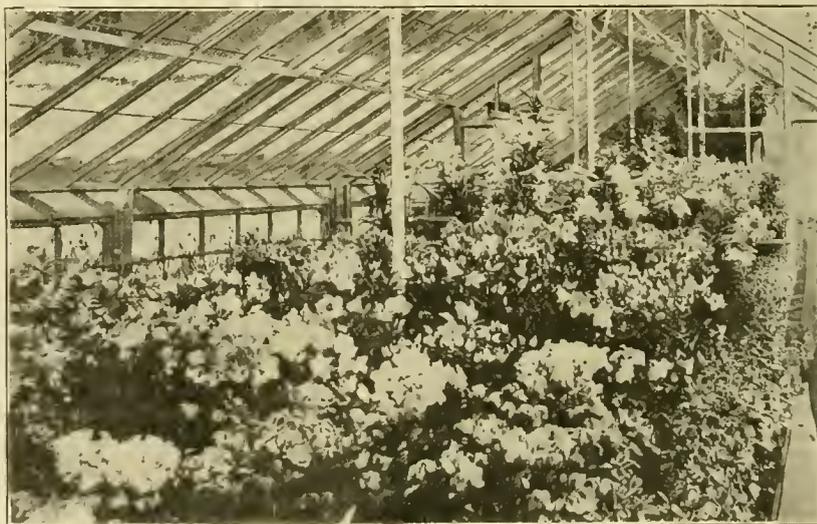

H. N. Bruns, the well known valley grower, displayed a small lot of good lily of the valley.

Kennicott Brothers staged home-grown valley, of the Berlin variety, grown by Klehm Brothers' nurseries. There were also 100 fine La Reine tulips, which were marvels in point of size and color.

The following awards were announced by the judges. They are not for individual exhibits, but for the general displays of the successful exhibitors: Peter Reinberg, roses, $20; George Wittbold Company, plants and bulbous stock, $20; Garfield Park Floral Company, plants, $15; J. J. Mitchell, obconicas, $5; Stollery Brothers, tulips, $5; Wietor Brothers, carnations, $5; W. L. Palinsky, cinerarias, $5; Chicago Carnation Company, carnations, $5; J. D. Thompson Carnation Company, carnations, $5; W. N. Rudd, carnations, $5; John Reardon, carnations, $5; Klehm's Nurseries, valley, $5; Sinner Brothers, carnations, $2.

COBLESKILL, N. Y.—Alfred Goldring's greenhouse office was slightly damaged by fire on the night of February 4.

WILKESBARRE, PA.—Wm. B. Alburger, a prominent florist, died at his home, 2021 North Thirty-first street, after a short illness of pneumonia. Mr. Alburger was born in this city forty-seven years ago, and is survived by a widow.

SECTION OF S. S. PECKHAM'S SHOW HOUSE, EASTER, 1903, AT NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

WITH THE GROWERS

A Fairhaven, Mass., Florist.

S. S. Peckham.

With this we present views in two houses at the nurseries of S. S. Peckham, Fairhaven, and a view of Mr. Peckham's show houses at New Bedford, Mass. The carnation house is interesting from the fact that it was planned by its owner and built mostly by the help on the place. It is of iron and cypress throughout, hav-

Some Shamrock Folklore.

"The sweet little, green little, shamrock of Ireland" is perhaps, next to "sublime potatoes, that from Antrim's shore to famous Kerry form the poor man's store," the most universally popular plant in the world to-day, for while the latter may be the more widely known and most useful to all nations the former holds an unique place in the realms of sentiment; and among people of Celtic and Saxon origin is regarded with the warmest affection as emblematic of all that is charming and lovable in the Irish character—a character which blends

Three godlike friends—

shamrakh is Arabic for the trefoil and the plant was held sacred in Iran and was emblematic of the Persian triad, long before St. Patrick's day. Mr. Bicheno and others have held that the wood sorrel (Oxalis Acetosella) is the true shamrock while Dr. Withering and Professor Rennie named the white clover (Trifolium repens) and Londou claimed the black medick (Medicago lupulina) as the true Irish emblem. Mr. Croker (not he of Tammany) points out, however, that as far back as 1689 the Irish themselves considered sorrel and shamrocks as entirely distinct. The "Irish Hudibras," printed in 1689, says:

Springs, happy springs, adorned with sallets,
Which nature purpos'd for their palats;
Shamrogs and watercress he shews,
Which was both meat and drink and clothes.

And again the Irish are there represented as

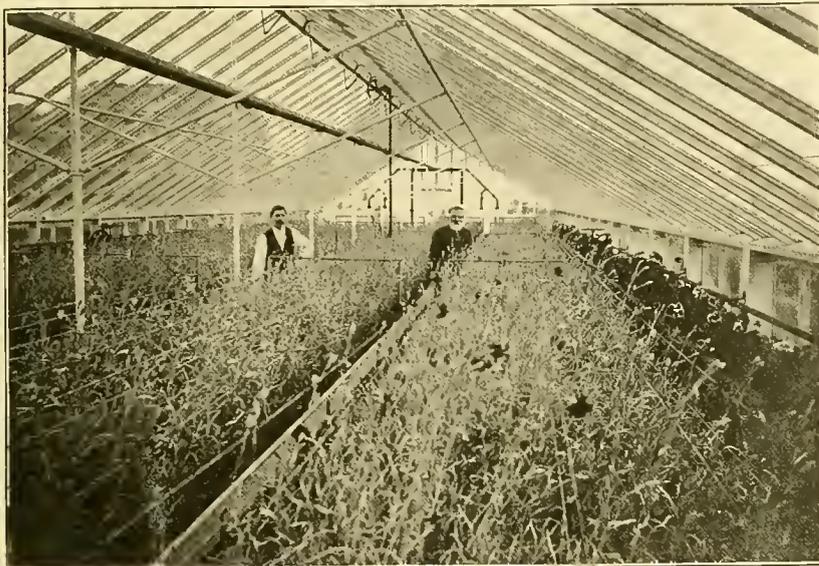

Without a rag, trousers, or brogues,
Picking of sorrel and sham-rogues

In another ancient Irish poem, the "Hespero-neso-graphia," the following passage occurs:

Besides all this, vast bundles came
Of sorrel more than I can name
And many sheaves I hear there was
Of shamrocks and of water-grass.
Which there for curious salads pass.

Keough, Threlkeld, and other Irish botanists assert that Trifolium repens or white clover is the true Irish shamrock and will have nothing to do with that "little, sour, puny plant, the wood sorrel." On the whole the weight of evidence seems to be with the white clover and it may not be out of place to whisper here to those conscientious deacons and other experts that the seeds of Trifolium repens that are for sale at any seed store in America at 25 cents per pound are just the same as what the humorous Irishmen charge them $2 a pound for! On the strict "q. t." they were both of them, most likely, grown in Germany. After that we can all swear to having "the real thing" with a clear conscience.

I cannot refrain, in closing this brief note, from mentioning the clever reply of the author of the popular song, "The Green Little Shamrock of Ireland," to the manager of the Dublin theater whose breach of faith had caused Cherry's leaving the Irish stage. In answer to an application after his success at Drury Lane to enter into an engagement Andrew wrote:

CARNATION HOUSE OF S. S. PECKHAM, FAIRHAVEN, MASS.

ing three lines of Lord & Burnham ventilating apparatus, and is heated by a Lord & Burnham sectional boiler. The benches and braces are constructed of pipe and Jennings Brothers' fittings.

This year Mr. Peckham has added to his nursery equipment a water plant, also planned by himself and built by the force on the place. Having tried driven wells, which proved unsuccessful, he finally had resort to a boiling spring 1,600 feet distant, which was dug out twenty feet square down to bed rock, the excavation thus forming a reservoir holding about 700 harrels of water with a constant supply of twenty-five gallons per minute. At a distance of about 600 feet from the greenhouses a pumping station was located in which were installed a Mietz & Weiss kerosine engine and Deming triplex pump with a capacity of twenty-two gallons per minute. The next addition in the line of up-to-date equipment is to be a large soil and tool shed and packing house.

A great deal has been written as to what is the real plant meant by the shamrock, and as a rule most of the commentators start out with St. Patrick who used a three-leaved plant satisfactorily to explain to the early converts of christianity the trinity in unity. The trefoil plant, however, was held sacred long before that, as can readily be gathered from the fact that shamroc and

The words of the song referred to were by Andrew Cherry, the music by Shield, and it was first sung by Mrs. Mountain in her entertainment called "Travelers at Spa," in Dublin in 1806. At the present time the shamrock is as popular in London town on St. Patrick's day as in Dublin or Manhattan and is therefore emblematic of the improved sentiments of good feeling and imperial comity which peace-loving citizens of the universe so rejoice to see. QUERIES.

To Destroy Earthworms.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What can be done to destroy the common earthworm in vegetable houses?
SUBSCRIBER.

Apply broadcast one bushel of unleached hardwood ashes to each 400 square feet. If spread upon the surface the potash will be carried into the soil in watering, but it will be better to fork it evenly in the soil to the depth of four inches. If to be worked in deeper than this the amount should be increased. Saturating the soil with lime water or the use of fifteen pounds of kainit in 400 square feet are other remedies.
L. R. TAFT.

Rose Cuttings in Cellar.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Will hybrid perpetual rose cuttings, dormant wood, six inches long, put in sand in a cellar where it averages 35° to 40° and put in open ground as soon as spring opens, do well or turn all black after they are put out?
J. VAN L.

The scheme is impracticable. Dormant rose cuttings cannot be rooted in a cellar under those conditions. A fair degree of success may be attained by planting cuttings in sand in a cold frame in the fall. By keeping them properly protected during the winter and attending carefully to air, watering, etc., in spring a strike of forty to sixty per cent may be assured. This method is practiced in some of the southern states, principally the Carolinas, with marked success.

ISAAC KENNEDY.

Greenhouse Heating.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We have a greenhouse 15x25, nine feet to the ridge and banked to the eaves, which we wish to heat to 60° in zero weather. We have a Wilks heater described as follows: Size of boiler, 16x30; heating capacity, 140 gallons per hour; size of opening, 1½ inches. Will it heat the house? We have 140 feet of 1½-inch pipe. We would rather run all pipes underneath the benches. Would we gain anything by using larger pipe?
C. H. I.

The heater would probably give a temperature of 50° to 55°, but is hardly large enough for 60°. In order to heat the house easily there should be about 200 square feet of radiating surface, which will require 400 feet of 1½-inch pipe. The easiest way to secure it will be to run a coil of six pipes around three sides of the house. By enlarging the openings to the boiler to 2-inch the coil can be supplied. If the pipes are placed under the benches there should be four coils of four pipes each with two flows and two returns in each coil. There should be a 1½-inch feed pipe for each coil.

THE SHAMROCK IN POTS.

L. R. T.

Piping For Greenhouse.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We desire to heat a small house 16x40 with hot water using 2-inch flow pipe, the heater to be below floor of the shed. What is the best way to pipe it and how many flows and returns are needed if returns are 1¼-inch and bring the temperature to 60°? Outside temperature is sometimes 20° below.
J. B.

To heat the house properly about 300 square feet of radiation will be required and this is too much for one 2-inch flow. By using two flows and placing one upon each side wall or upon the purlin posts if there are any in the house and then using about twelve 1¼-inch returns the temperature desired can be obtained. The returns can be divided between the two walls, or if there is a middle bench where bottom heat is desired some of them may be placed there. In case the end of the house is exposed it will be well to carry the coils partly across the end. If there is no door in the end of the house farthest from the heater a very simple method of piping the house will be to run a coil of five 2-inch pipes clear around the house.

Unopened Camellia Buds.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have several nice, stocky plants of camellia in 7-inch pots, one of them, a white one, bearing a dozen buds which opened fully. The others, some of them having as many as twenty-five or thirty buds, have only partly opened and some of the buds are falling. They were grown in a carnation house in a temperature of 50° in an ordinary light compost. What is the best exposure for growing them, southern or otherwise?
ENQUIRER.

It is not an easy matter to say just why some camellia plants open their buds satisfactorily, while others under the same treatment and conditions do not. Dryness at the root has frequently been the cause of the trouble complained about. This I am inclined to think would be more likely to cause the unopening and dropping of the buds than being too wet, provided, of course, the drainage is all right, though, of course, there is danger in both extremes; but camellias are lovers of water, and should never be allowed to suffer for the need of that essential element at any stage of their being. The temperature seems about right. The escape of deleterious gases has sometimes been charged with the cause of the fall of buds, but if that were the cause why should one escape and the others succumb? Camellias are wont to set more buds than they can carry and open satisfactorily. Try dishudding, leaving one or at most two buds on each shoot of the plants that are dropping their buds. In the early days when I was younger at one place where I was working buds from camellia plants were removed by the bushel. As to exposure, at this season of the year camellias are not at all particular, but during their season of growth, when same is quite young, a little shade to save from burning during hot bursts of sunshine might be an advantage.

Changing Soil for Roses.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Would some of your readers, who are expert gardeners, give the reason for changing the soil each year in the cultivation of roses and carnations.
S.

The foregoing question, while it might be open to argument from a scientific point of view, would scarcely be considered to have more than one answer by anyone who has grown roses for cut flowers for profit, under the American system of forcing. I believe this question, if put to expert rose and carnation growers, would be answered in the majority of cases in these words: "Because the life has gone out of the old soil." Just what that life is we are not prepared to state, but we do know from experience that it must be present in order to obtain the finest results. In all probability it is sod. The best mechanical condition can only be maintained when a soil contains a fair proportion of sod. Such a soil we call lively; it can be firmed without becoming packed; it admits air freely and absorbs water readily, while it drains properly with very little danger of becoming sour on account of stagnant water. These conditions are necessary for the successful establishment of young stock. There may be other reasons in favor of new soil, such as the supply of available plant food and so forth, but the above mentioned are so important that they alone make it imperative to renew the soil. I may state for the benefit of "S." that rose growers do not consider it necessary to renew the soil every year, but only every time a house is replanted, whether it be in one, two or three years. Many rose growers are getting first-class results by planting in well-drained, solid beds, in from eight to ten inches of soil, forcing for one year and resting the plants. Then when they are started without being removed they have a year's growth of roots to begin with, so that conditions which would apply to plants having to make new root action would not hold in this case, as the plants when once started would be in a position to take artificial feeding. In case "S." may think I am begging the question in regard to new soil, I will admit that I take it for granted that when a grower renews his soil he does so with one containing sod; but in so doing I can point to men who will say that experience has taught them to do that, and experience, as every gardener knows, is sometimes a very dear teacher. If this answer is not to the point then I can say that I am so firmly convinced of the merits of new soil for replanting that I can only give a woman's reason for the same: "It is so just because it is so."

European Horticulture.

(From the German trade papers.)

Forcing Strawberries.—This seems to pay well in northern Germany. Large ranges of glass are now devoted to the culture. Certain varieties found to be the best and most profitable for this purpose are used. Small plants, rooted runners, are planted in 5 or 6-inch pots in August and kept in frames outside until late in the fall, when they are taken in and placed on benches in a coldhouse. Narrow houses covered with movable sashes and provided with one or two heating pipes give the best results. The real forcing begins in January and fruit is harvested in March and April. Two-year-old plants are sometimes carried over (depending on variety, soil and locality), but young plants, taken annually from the field, produce larger fruit, although a little later than second-year plants.

Dahlias.—The finest of the hundreds of old and newer varieties of dahlias exhibited last summer are said to be: Red—Standard Beaver, Red Rover, Progenitor, Holsatia, Meteor and Captain Broad. Yellow—Golden Plover, Volker, J. J. Crowe, Hobbie's Yellow and Sonnenstrahlen. Salmon, apricot and terra cotta—Countess of Lonsdale, Exquisite, Artus, Lodestone, General French and Mrs. MacKergow. Rose—Krimhilde, Zephyr and Sylvia. Dark red, almost black—Ebony, Uncle Tom and Night. White—Lord Roberts is the finest and most suitable for cutting in pure white.

New Celosia.—Celosia cristata Thompsoni magnifica, a fairly well known newer variety of the ostrich feather section of coxcombs, by careful selection, cross-breeding and special culture has been brought to so great a perfection that it now ranks first with the most gorgeous of pot plants and show specimens in Germany. Well grown plants attain a height of from two to three feet, forming a symmetrical cone, which, when in bloom, is covered with numerous, large, waving spikes of flowers, closely resembling real ostrich plumes, their colors ranging in all tints and shades from the brightest golden yellow to the deepest blood-red, the latter color being considered the finest. If rightly handled these celosias reach an enormous height, over three feet; so will their flowers be extremely large and brilliant and the season of blooming will last from early in July to late in autumn; or, if grown outdoors, until cut down by early frosts. To obtain these results the German growers sow the seeds not earlier than the latter part of April, keep them in warm quarters, encourage their rapid growth and transplant and repot as soon as needed, but never before the plant has formed a firm, compact ball of roots, which by handling must not be bruised or broken. In this point is to be found the secret of their wonderful success in growing this plant, as well as in that of sowing the seeds late, instead of sowing early in midwinter, as is usually done. In sowing so early, the Germans claim, only stunted little plants are produced, which will begin to bloom before they are fully developed and the flowers of which will be of ordinary size only.

Eucharis Grandiflora.—This plant, better known in America as E. Amazonica, has been found to be a profitable cut-flower in Germany and is grown there to a great extent, while here only a plant or two are seen occasionally, sleepily growing in an old pot placed in some out of the way corner of the greenhouse. Doubtless our gardeners are not ignorant of the culture of this well known plant, still a few points may be of interest. A writer in a German paper says: "This is one of those plants that, if grown as a single specimen or separated from other plants of its kind, amounts to little or nothing. It loves to be growing in large numbers closely massed together. So grown in a bench, provided if possible with bottom-heat, in ordinary well enriched, sandy soil, it produces an abundance of flowers twice a year. In this bench they remain undisturbed for three or four years, when they ought to be taken out, divided and replanted into renewed fresh soil. The best time, of course, for this operation is in the natural time for rest, March or August. They are grown in a temperature like that of our rose houses, but requiring shade. A house in which palms or ferns are grown would answer better."

Dahlias vs. Tomatoes.—Tomatoes grown in the same field or in close proximity to dahlias cause ruin and destruction to the latter, owing to the evaporation of ammonia from the tomatoes. This statement, now swelling the miscellaneous reading matter of some of the German trade papers, first appeared in an English paper, and the Germans faithfully copied it. Some, however, declare it to be dog-day nonsense.

Potting Soil.—We all know how important the question of soil for the different cultures used to be, and still is in some places with European gardeners. How painstakingly particular, guided by elaborate formulas for this or that kind of plant, they were in the composition, preparation and mixing of the many different ingredients, believed to be absolutely requisite for success. They have got over that, in certain quarters, and overanxiety about the texture, smell and color of potting soil does not keep them awake nights now. Especially have German commercial gardeners learned a good deal of late in this respect by attending the many exhibitions, conventions and other trade and social gatherings of the craft in all parts of the fatherland, as well as by their more frequent journeys to neighboring countries. They found, for instance, that Mr. Linden, at Brussels, grows his fine collection of thousands of the costliest orchids in peat and sphagnum, while Sander in his branch establishment at Bruges uses nothing but leaf-mold for his orchids with equal success. What astonished them most though was the sight of acres of the finest azaleas, camellias and rhododendrons, all grown in all kinds of ordinary good soil, when it had taken our German friends a year or more at home to import, collect, compound and prepare a handful of soil for a few plants of that class. Most of them went home converts to the new ideas, while some remained hardened old sinners, and now those sacred dogmatic formulas have all to be gone over again, corrected and supplemented by comments, to be followed by the most careful experiment, trial cultures and separate tests. It's awful!

Tomatoes in Germany.—It is interesting to note in German papers the many different methods in the culture of tomatoes described and recommended. Germans have not only learned to appreciate their peculiar flavor, but have also in a way mastered the art of growing them. Twenty years ago the plant was practically unknown in Germany, at least among the common class of people. Only on well endowed private places one would see a plant occasionally growing under glass, not raised for its edible fruit, but as an ornamental vine, the bright clusters of fine scarlet love-apples greatly adding to its otherwise rather coarse beauty. They still grow them under glass, some in hot houses; most of them, however, on the sunny side of a wall; in many cases especially erected for that purpose. Sashes are leaned against or fastened to this wind-break and no doubt the plants do well enough so protected. The very early wrinkled kinds, long since discarded here, give best results. Various modes and systems of tying and pruning are in vogue, all of them named after their originators and every one as complicated and laborious as can be. Of course, wonder at all this lessens when the difference between their midsummer season and ours is taken into account.

An interesting Arum.—An arum, remarkable for its great beauty and singular habit of growth, is to be sent out next season by a German firm, and will no doubt meet with unbounded favor and ready sales as something really new in house and parlor plants. Strictly speaking it is not a new plant, having been in cultivation in some botanical gardens for a number of years, where its introducer, wide-awake and realizing its great possibilities, found it. The rhizome, or bulb-like corm of this interesting plant, is round and large, resembling that of Caladium esculentum, and in the fall or early winter develops directly from its crown a flower, or, what is botanically more correct, a spathe of rare beauty and form, about ten inches high by five or six inches in width, of a rich velvety blood red color, the odor of which is not disagreeable as is the case with most members of that order. The plant is of the easiest culture; in fact, no care of any kind is required to coax it into bloom. Brought into the house when in its dormant dry state, about September, placed in a saucer or ornamental dish of that description, it will send up its magnificent bloom, no soil or water being needed. The numerous dark green leaves, a foot long, of oval shape, forming a graceful dense rosette, appear after the flower dies away, and by their tropical luxuriance and symmetrical arrangement render this arum a superb decorative parlor plant for the rest of the winter. Although the wording of the description leads one to infer that even at this period the plant would grow without soil or water, it should no doubt be understood, granting all else, that after blooming it is to be potted up to complete its season's growth under conditions more natural to arums.

Why Evergreens Die.—Good logic and sound reasoning is not wanting in a paragraph from an article on conifers. It reads: "That so many of our hardiest evergreens are found in the spring with browned tops, barely surviving and great numbers of densely branched pines, spruces, arbor vitae, etc., entirely dry and dead, is not directly due to the low temperature of a previous severe winter, but is to be explained by the fact that all evergreens and non-deciduous trees and shrubs evaporate through their foliage or needles moisture at all times, and, of course, also in the winter, and that their roots, being at that time imbedded in solidly frozen earth, are unable to replace this loss, thus being prevented from performing their part in the regular circulation of sap. Thorough watering on a mild day once or twice in winter is recommended as a precautionary measure."

Competition Restricted.—The authorities of Hanover have enacted a law forbidding all auction sales of plants in that city by firms of other towns.

Woman's Horticultural College.—A school for the training and instruction of women in practical horticulture has been established at Godesberg on the Rhine.

Noteworthy New Plants.—A new begonia of the semperflorens section is B. S. coccinea fl. pl., excellent for lawn-bedding and edging. Plants of this new variety are compact, bushy and not more than four inches high, covered all summer with bright scarlet double flowers. It was awarded the gold medal for best bedding plant by the Royal Horticultural Society of Vienna last summer. Another novelty, similar in character to the above, also fine for edging and border-planting, is Ageratum Blausternchen (little blue star), height three to four inches, flowers of a beautiful sky-blue, produced in profusion all through the season.

Polygonum Spectabile.—This, as yet scarce and high-priced, is a new outdoor decorative plant, belonging to the hardy herbaceous perennials. It is said to be the most valuable novelty in hardy plants sent out for many years. The foliage displays a variegation in all the colors of the rainbow, some of the large leaves being green with white, red or purplish spots, blotches or stripes, others half or entirely pure white, orange or fiery scarlet, not two leaves being alike in coloring, but all greatly resembling those of hot house fancy caladiums. This polygonum, like the older kinds, does well in any and all soils or locations, in a densely shaded position as well as in one exposed to the hottest sun. A plant of such great decorative value, thoroughly hardy and so easy of culture, may well be considered a grand acquisition.

Imperial Verbenas.—An entirely new race of verbenas has been obtained by taking advantage of the proclivity in that genus to sport, by careful selection and continued crossing, which, it is expected, will eventually take the place of those old emaciated varieties now in cultivation. In this new strain, introduced under the name of Verbena hybrida grandifl. Imperialis and being better known in Germany as the new Imperial verbenas, a novelty of great merit is offered to the public. The habit of the plant is robust, not creeping but boldly upright, carrying its immense trusses of bloom on sturdy stems well above the foliage. Flowers in the brightest of colors, very large, single florets measuring nearly an inch in diameter, each one distinctly marked with a large pure white center or eye, rendering it most effective for massing in border plantings. On account of its compact, symmetrical growth it will be one of the finest pot plants for spring trade.

Thubergia Harrisii.—As a profitable plant to grow for cut flowers during the winter Thubergia Harrisii is recommended. The color of the flowers is light-blue with white center; ten to twelve together in the form of sprays or trusses fifteen to eighteen inches long, produced by the thousands on a plant well established, all through the winter. Propagation from cuttings or from seeds is not difficult and the subsequent treatment is simple. Either in pots, or, which is better, in the bench or solid bed, they will do well. Best results, however, are obtained from older, firmly established plants, if properly taken care of and given sufficient head-room to expand. The temperature required is about 60 degrees in winter.

China Asters.—The improvement in China asters is steadily going on. The last two or three years were remarkable for the number of new varieties introduced here as well as in Germany. But this season seems to have been even more prolific in this respect than any. Scores of new asters are offered in next year's lists, of which, so it seems, a Giant Comet aster, named Rubin (Ruby) may be found of great value to gardeners and florists, especially for cutting. It is declared to be the best of the comets so far brought out. The flowers are of enormous size, wavy and curled, full up to the center, not showing at any time a yellow disk, resembling chrysanthemums to such an extent that it was mistaken for such by nearly all of the members present at a meeting of the Society for the Advancement of Horticulture, Berlin, held September 24, where it was first shown. The color, as its name indicates, is a deep glowing scarlet, a shade scarce in asters.

Tropaeolum Black Prince.—This is a new addition of great merit to the Lohbium section of this ever popular genus of plants. Its foliage is very dark with a bluish violet cast; the flowers, when first expanding, are of a deep purple-black, gradually becoming a velvety jet-black, good for cutting.

Vitis Thomsoni.—This, a novelty of Japanese origin, is closely related to ampelopsis, to which our Virginia creeper and Boston ivy belong. This also is a hardy climber with beautiful foliage marked and spotted red, blended with violet.

Saxifraga Rhei Superba.—This is a greatly improved form of the well known Aaron's beard. It is said to be a good thing for rockeries, hanging baskets, etc.

Salvia Ringens.—Although not a new thing, this plant had become very scarce, but now, when the value of some of our old garden favorites for certain purposes begins to be more appreciated and hardy perennials are finding their road to public favor smoother, this beautiful hardy border plant is also brought forward and re-introduced by German growers. And indeed, it fully deserves it. It is a very pretty, semi-woody, shrub-like plant, not resembling other members of the sage family much, although it belongs to that tribe. It forms a neat, compact bush, several feet high, covered for months in the summer with countless beautiful light blue flowers of large size, and a peculiarly graceful feathery form. The plants can be easily raised from seeds and, if sown early in the spring, will flower the second season.

Yellow Disliked.—Yellow flowering plants, and especially cut flowers, loose or made up in that color, meet with disfavor and slow sales in Germany.

New Aster Miss Kate Lock.

This aster originated from the Branching and Washington asters. The flowers, which resemble the Truffaut in form, measure from five to seven inches across with stems thirty-six to thirty-nine inches long on fine robust plants, about fifteen blooms on very stiff stems to each plant. The flowers can be easily and artistically arranged when cut. This aster will take a prominent place in the market for cut blooms as soon as it is better known.

THE RETAIL TRADE

THE floral tributes which had been sent to the family of the late Mark Hanna filled the marble room in the rear of the senate chamber, Washington, D. C., and only a few lilies and roses were banked about the catafalque. President Roosevelt sent a cross of violets, surrounded by a wreath of orchids.

Confederate Flag On Easel.

This was one of the largest and most elaborate emblems sent to the funeral of General John B. Gordon at Atlanta, Ga., and was the tribute of the John B. Gordon camp, United Sons of Confederate Veterans. It was made on a panel and stood eight feet high. The flag was made of red carnations and violets and the stars of white carnations. The top of the flag pole was a half-blown Easter lily tied with chenille tassels. Bronze galax leaves filled the space between the flag and the border, which was made of Bride roses, white hyacinths, smilax and maiden hair ferns. The lettering was done with pink felt letters on the white satin ribbon. The drapery at the bottom of the design was of white tulle and black crepe. The emblem was made by the C. A. Dahl Company, of Atlanta.

The market this week broke away from the indifferent rut it has been traveling since the holidays and turned stiff and strong. Everyone reports a most satisfactory condition. A healthy briskness characterized the market all week, especially during the first few days. The activity was considerably accentuated by the circumstances of St. Valentine day and the festivities, and heavy shipping calls from New Orleans. On Saturday violets were the item demanded and those who exercised enough foresight to fill their refrigerators with this popular Valentine day flower had no cause for complaint. Beauty roses continue a scarce item, this applying especially to the medium lengths. The growers have been compelled to cut all rose stock exceedingly close, but in spite of this the general quality is excellent. There appear to be plenty of carnations. The better grades move readily, but considerable "drumming" is necessary to dispose of the lesser lights. Bulbous stock is coming into the market with no signs of abatement. Red tulips have the call over other stock. The fancy fern situation is worthy of comment. It has been a long time since this item has ruled as high as they are now figuring; $3.50 has been reached and all of the receipts are selling readily. Some of the eastern ferns show a deficiency in quality. The growers advise their local buyers that their supplies now in storage are limited to an almost unprecedented degree. Excessive snows during the last cutting season is given as the cause.

The south side meeting of the Florists' Club, Saturday evening, was of the entertainment order and proved very enjoyable. After supper at the Drexel cafe the members proceeded to a hall across the street, where W. Foster Burns made an interesting address urging unity of action where the best results are desired in club life as well as in politics and business. Press Woodruff told a number of his inimitable funny stories and a negro trio rendered vocal and instrumental music. Messrs. Reardon and Woodward deserve the thanks of the club for the excellence of the arrangements, but it is to be regretted that the south side representatives of the trade did not turn out in larger numbers.

Fire in the greenhouse of Herman Krause, on Jeffery avenue, caused a loss of several hundred dollars on the morning of February 12. The blaze started from the heating plant and before the arrival of the firemen it had gained such headway that it threatened the dwelling occupied by Mr. Krause and his family. Many potted plants were damaged.

Bentley & Company, with a view to expanding, and possibly in the near future absorbing other interests, have incorporated with a capital of $10,000. The new stock company will be known as the Bentley-Coatsworth Company. The incorporators are F. F. Bentley, Louis Coatsworth and Philetus Smith.

The fourth Florists' Club exhibition of the season was held at Handel hall on the afternoon of February 17. In another column will be found a detailed report, together with the awards of the judges. The next regular meeting of the club will be held at Handel hall on evening of March 9.

Representatives of the Gardeners' and Florists' Union complained to the executive board meeting of the Chicago Federation Wednesday that General Superintendent Cook of the West Park system refused to grant union wages to the men. A committee of the federation will call on Mr. Cook.

Wietor Brothers report an increased activity in the cutting business. The extremely cold weather has not been conducive to a heavy business in this line. While the orders came in fast enough, the stock could not be shipped to distant points with any degree of safety.

The carnation convention at Detroit March 2-3 is exciting more than passing interest among live local florists. A representative Chicago delegation will be on hand. Special rates have been secured on the Wabash and the party will leave on the afternoon of March 1.

The George Wittbold Company this week removed its stand in the rear of the Flower Growers' Market to a more prominent location in the front of the hall. Some fine stock is coming in from the company's Edgebrook establishment.

Frozen violet shipments from the east were incidents in nearly every commission house this week. In several cases no blame can attach to the shippers as the goods were properly packed. It is up to the express companies.

Some unusually large elm trees, weighing from three to four tons, are being moved from Maywood for planting along the avenue leading to the proposed site of the Washington monument in Washington park.

H. D. Kamp, of Kenosha, Wis., was a business visitor here this week. He says this season has been unusually severe on the Wisconsin growers and coal hills make those of 1903 look insignificant in comparison.

T. J. Corbrey is now located at Long Beach, Cal., and his health has been excellent since he went to the coast. He will make a specialty of growing asters and pansies on an extensive scale for seed.

Wednesday was the first day of Lent, and it was barely noticeable in the market. Retailers report a quiet trade the latter part of the week in consequence.

John Degnan, of the E. F. Winterson Company, was confined to his home several days this week by a severe cold. Four new houses will be built this spring by J. A. Dudlong.

G. E. Piesser made a business trip to Iowa last week.

Andrew McAdams is sojourning at Ocean Springs, Miss., for the benefit of his health.

New York.

The less said about the cut flower trade the better. At the present writing Ash Wednesday looms up, linked with a blizzard, and the result of the combination is as uncertain as the Russo-Japanese war. The war, by the way, has been settled and we know the victors, thanks to the Barclay street contingent. Prices are tending downward, nevertheless, and no doubt our next week's report will show a drop in such specialties as have not already touched bottom.

It is a little early, but we will pause long enough to remark that the next meeting of the Florists' Club will be devoted to the interests of the rose. Prospectuses now on record indicate a remarkable outbreak on that occasion, despite the carnation. Robert Simpson, the expert on roses, will read a paper on his specialty with the dollars bristling all over.

At the meeting of the American Institute on Wednesday evening, February 10, a paper on "Cool Orchids," by E. O. Orpet, was read, also a paper on "Leaf Mold for Orchids," by C. W. Schneider. G. V. Nash, of the New York Botanical Garden, presented some stereopticon views in illustration, the slides being beautifully colored by Mrs. C. Van Brunt.

Wm. Fink, a florist who was supposed to have been drowned February 1 in escaping by swimming the East River from Blackwell's Island, where he was serving a six months' sentence for non-support, has been discovered very much alive by his wife. He was handed over to serve out the rest of his term.

Siebrecht & Sons are building a greenhouse 25x60 feet at Ninetieth street and Broadway.

Treasurer H. B. Beatty, of the Society of American Florists, was a visitor this week.

Philadelphia.

The chief topic at this writing is the weather which has been very cold for the past few days, the glass showing a night temperature of 2° to 4° below zero two nights in succession. Coming as this does after so many weeks of severe weather it cuts into the already depleted coal pile and adds to the grower's burden. Things were much more lively the past week and all salable flowers were quickly grabbed up. Valentine's day is getting to be quite a factor in the business. At the close of Saturday there was scarcely anything left. Violets sold up clean and were the favorite flower. Some of the retail florists offered floral valentines and some had pretty boxes. Most of the business, however, was of clusters and boxes of choice flowers. Prices stiffened a trifle, the best Beauties going to $6 per dozen and very scarce at that. Carnations are now at their best. Lawson is now foremost as all the stocks appear to be doing well. The Stratford farm is sending in grand Lawson, Prosperity and Adonis, the latter being particularly fine. Pansies are scarce. Many growers say their stock this season has been a failure. Daffodils and tulips are now the favorites and large quantities of the daffodils are handled every day at $2 to $2.50. Freesias sell well at $3 to $4. There has been a scarcity of Easter lilies the past two or three weeks. Why is this? They are easy to flower at this season and will bring readily $1.50 per dozen, which is better than $10 at Easter.

The lilac crop has been short the past week, Harris being the only man, with the exception of a few out of town shipments, having them. This is Mr. Harris' first season and he is much pleased with the results.

"France has the lily England has the rose"
But Harris' is the place
Where the shamrock grows.

Here they are, 40,000 strong, a large house full, pot after pot and an overflow house for the shamrock pans. This is a great side line. Everybody has to have a few and this explains where they all go.

Next Wednesday evening will be ladies' night at the club. The committee has worked hard and it should be a grand occasion. There will be music, refreshments and special prizes for both bowling and shuffle-boards, open to ladies only.

The extreme weather has made the lily growers apprehensive of their Easter crop. Robert Craig says it will take some hurrying but if the weather is bright it will help considerably and most of the stocks will be in.

Manager Meehan, of the Market, says trade has been booming lately and he has no kick coming. Their stock of fancy single violets is fine and they go out almost faster than they come in.

Myers & Santman are cutting some choice Queen of Edgely which for color, stem and foliage are hard to beat. Their Beauties have also done exceptionally well this season.

W. P. Craig was confined to his bed a few days threatened with pneumonia, but is now better.

Leo Niessen has been headquarters for pansies, at present the scarcest flower in town.

Eddie Fancourt is on the mend and hopes to be about in a couple of weeks.

John McIntire of Ed. Reid's force is now with H. H. Battles.

Visitors in town were Messrs. Seidewitz & Frazier, of Baltimore, and J. H. Troy, of New York.

Boston.

Jackson Dawson was the star at the monthly meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Horticultural Hall last Tuesday evening. His talk was on his favorite subject of hardy shrubs and climbers for the garden. The list of subjects desirable for this purpose because of their attractive habit, beautiful foliage, flowers or fruit, hardiness and varied adaptability, was an extensive one, but Mr. Dawson held his audience intact throughout by his earnestness and interesting manner. A motion was unanimously adopted, seconding the invitation by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to the American Carnation Society and American Rose Society to hold their 1905 meetings in Boston. The club was invited by Messrs. Oakes Ames and W. N. Craig to visit the Ames conservatories at North Easton on Tuesday, March 8. Mr. Craig exhibited two very fine plants of Cyclamen Persicum on the president's desk.

Wintry weather and the closing of the fashionable period have conspired to help the flower business somewhat during the past ten days. Prices have been better and maintained better than for some time heretofore on a few specialties, chiefly roses, but it is very evident that the short crop has been the mainstay of the flower values and that with a full cut conditions would be discouraging. The total amount of business done this season falls far below the average of recent years. Lent is not likely to make it much worse, and it is possible that in the event of moderate weather the market may be materially improved under the favorable conditions for transient street sales.

L. B. Brague, H. J. Smith and others interested in the hardy fern business, have been in attendance at the state house in the interests of the fern trade, as affected by the bills now under consideration for the regulation of this industry. A compromise measure is likely to pass, whereby the interests of the local fern gatherers will be protected while vandalism by irresponsible foreigners will be checked.

Cornelius Dineen, for twenty years head gardener for Mrs. Wm. Peck, at Arlington, was in court on February 12 to answer to a charge of cruelty to animals. The alleged offense was cutting off the tails of a number of cats.

At Horticultural Hall last Saturday a very fine plant of Odontoglossum Midgleyanum was exhibited by Arthur Hunnewell and a cultural certificate was awarded to T. D. Hatfield, the grower.

W. A. Kennedy, of Milwaukee, who came east to attend the funeral of his father, spent one day in Boston this week.

Julius Heurlin has returned from a short visit to France.

St. Louis.

The carnation meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club February 11 was a decided success. It was remarkable for enthusiasm and the magnificent blooms exhibited. Thirty-four members and five visitors attended. Among the visitors were J. D. Thompson of The J. D. Thompson Carnation Company, Joliet, Ill.; James Hartshorne, manager of the Chicago Carnation Company, Joliet; Martin Renkauf, with H. Bayersdorfer & Company, Philadelphia, and G. M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo. The general excellence of the vases shown elicited favorable comment. Although no prizes were offered exhibitors from distant points, the representatives present vied in arranging stock to the best advantage. The J. D. Thompson Carnation Company had five of its choicest varieties—Enchantress, Mrs. Patten, Estelle, Gov. Wolcott and Nelson Fisher. About forty blooms of each variety were shown. They averaged by actual measurement three and one-half inches in diameter. Enchantress was at its best with fine flowers on good, long, stiff stems. It was pronounced by the committee appointed, consisting of A. Joblonsky, Wm. Winter and J. Steidle, to be the best of its color. Mrs. Patten was said to be the "best variegated." Nelson Fisher, was also in evidence. Gov. Wolcott is a good white, with a well built flower and stem. The report on Estelle speaks for itself: "Best we have seen of its fine color and stem." The Chicago Carnation Company had four varieties on exhibition, including Dorothy Whitney, Fiancee, Crusader and Harlowarden. Dorothy Whitney was the only yellow variety present. It was said to be "finest of its color." Crusader is a very good red with good stem and flower. Harlowarden was pronounced the best crimson. Fiancee was the largest pink variety, with a good stiff stem and perfect flower. Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis, showed a beautiful vase of the new Indianapolis. They were much better than those shown at a former exhibition. The stems were stiffer and blooms slightly deeper in color. The committee's report read: "Good pink for commercial purposes." R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, had a large vase of the new Cardinal. It is a deep red of good color and stem. Everyone admired it greatly. F. Dorner & Sons' Company, Lafayette, Ind., were much in evidence with Lady Bountiful as the center of attraction and The Belle a close contestant. Lady Bountiful is an almost pure white variety of good stem and substance. It was one of the best on exhibition. The Belle is a good white. The local exhibitors were out in force with some of their choicest. Three prizes were offered by the club. John Steidle got first for a vase of Enchantress and Harlowarden; F. W. Ude second, for a vase of Enchantress and Prosperity, and A. Joblonsky, third, for a vase of fifty Peru. Fred. Ammann exhibited White Cloud and Queen Louise. James Dunford and F. J. Fillmore exhibited vases of mixed varieties. All the blooms shown by local men were of a high order and reflected great credit on the growers.

The usual routine of business being dispensed with at the meeting, F. J. Fillmore read an interesting essay on "Carnation Growing." Several points called for lively discussion, particularly in regard to the merits of side shoots or stems for cuttings, also the proper heat for the propagating bench. All the visiting growers entered into the spirit of the meeting and gave the local men the benefit of their experiences. Mr. Guy, of Belleville, illustrated his talk with a box of specimens. After a vote of thanks to the out-of-town exhibitors and to Mr. Fillmore, F. W. Maas, of the Plant Seed Company, made application for membership in the club. James Dunford made a motion that James Gurney, superintendent of Tower Grove park, be elected an honorary member. This was done by an unanimous vote. Fred. Ammann then read an interesting account of the journey he and Mr. Joblonsky took through Illinois and Indiana and their search for blue carnations. President Beneke announced the meeting would be held one week earlier next month, as the national executive committee would then be in session. The meeting will be on March 3. The prize winning blooms were next auctioned off by Auctioneer Fillmore, after which the meeting adjourned.

The prevailing cold weather has given the demand for stock a slight boost, although no change in prices is noticeable. Roses held up well. Beauty is offered in small quantities. Carnations are seeking a higher level, the best selling for $5. Violets were in great demand St. Valentine's day. Quantities were sold at 75 cents to $1. There is no perceptible change in either narcissi, valley or Romans. The market as a whole is steady and holding its own.

Dr. Wm. Trelase, of the Missouri Botanic Garden, left February 17 for a two months' collecting tour in Old and New Mexico. Sam Trelase, who was stricken with a severe attack of appendicitis in the fall, accompanied him.

Mrs. H. O. Berning is slowly improving.

Baltimore.

As a result of the great fire trade the last week was slack, and the near future is not encouraging. There were a few weddings, which there was no disposition to delay, and necessarily some funerals it was impossible to postpone, but practically all social entertainments were called off, society cotillions, assemblies, dinners and receptions, for some of which elaborate preparations had been made, being postponed indefinitely. Lent began Wednesday and diminished still further the demand for flowers and decorations, for, although recently this season of denial has not made the difference that it formerly did, this year will find its exhibitions of display and indulgence comport only too well with the conditions generally of pocket books and bank accounts. The usual routine was the ending of large functions, and in some religious communions almost all weddings, but there were many small gatherings—teas, receptions and dinners—making a pretty constant and even trade. These for a few weeks now are hardly expected to materialize.

But trade is not dead, and there are no signs of despondency. The florists as a body suffered directly less probably than any other trade, though from the interdependence of all our people there are necessarily some losses which will, as they must, be borne with the courage inspiring our entire community. The heaviest loss is the decline in business, but this will right itself as our business community rehabilitates itself. All are cheerful and grateful that there was no loss of life, that few homes were destroyed, that no destitution exists (only twenty persons having applied to our Associated Charities for relief), and that we miss wholly the physical suffering and mental distress which would have followed the destruction of so great an area in the residential section.

The weather continues extremely cold for this section; and we have completed our third month of a winter without a break—an experience new here to men of even old age. Still, the days are bright, the skies blue, the air bracing and dry. Roses were scarce last week—probably scarcer than at any other time during the winter, and orders for St. Valentine's day were difficult to fill. Carnations were more abundant and bulbous stock is coming in very plentifully. Demands for flowers for Senator Hanna's funeral in Washington made a marked demand to-day (February 16). On Sunday there were great crowds of excursionists from contiguous territory to view the ruins in the burnt section, and this being doubtless noted by the press there were seen yesterday street fakirs from other cities offering flowers on our congested thoroughfares.

To-day died one of our oldest members of the trade, Nicholas Kress, aged eighty-two years. He was born in Hinderstein, Hesse, Germany, and came to this city in 1846. He was employed for several years as a private gardener, then began business as a florist, made it a success until his retirement, when he was succeeded by his son, Edward Kress, who continues the business at the stand on North avenue, so long occupied by his father. Mr. Kress was widely known and greatly respected. His portrait appeared in the issue of April 7, 1900, of THE AMERICAN FLORIST.

Another death of a citizen known to thousands of our people was that of Captain William H. Cassell, for some thirty-six years superintendent of Druid Hill, the largest and noblest of our system of public parks. He was seventy-five years old, and his long contact with the multitudes who frequent the park, his kindly and frank manners, his cheerful disposition, and especially his fondness for the children who were so often under his care in their picnics and assemblages, made him a universal favorite, whose death will come to multitudes as a personal bereavement. Detroit.

The club meeting February 17 brought out an extraordinary attendance. The coming carnation meeting absorbed attention. All the committees' reports indicated complete readiness for the event of March 2 and 3. Inquiries for hotel accommodations are being made from all parts, and indications are for a grand exhibition and record breaking attendance. There will be a special meeting of the club in the rooms of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, February 29, when all minor details for the convention will be completed.

St. Valentine's day was celebrated Saturday and brought a wave of business activity. Purchases were heavy and ran mostly to violets and carnations. The supply of roses was early exhausted. The price of violets was materially less than a year ago. Carnations and roses maintained the same figures.

Mrs. N. M. Nettleton, 126 Miami avenue, has quit business, and is succeeded by C. A. Shaw. J. F. S.

New Castle, Ind.

All the greenhouses in this great rose growing center are having good cuts considering the extreme winter which we are having. At the Reinberg & Weiland place, which contains 100,000 feet of glass, they are cutting some fine Bride and Bridesmaid with stems three feet and more. Their Beauty roses are considerably off crop now. This place the coming season will be owned and operated exclusively by Peter Weiland and will be planted partly in carnations.

At the South Park Floral Company's houses (Heller Brothers) they are having a fine cut of all varieties except Liberty. They have a bench of 600 plants of the new red rose, Gen. MacArthur, which they think will be a great addition to the red roses. As seen here it is much more free blooming than Liberty, makes stems that grade high and has no surplus or blind wood. The foliage is extremely large and beautiful and its fragrance is delicious. A very heavy crop of magnificent Bride and Bridesmaid is just starting. The Beauties are in fine healthy condition, and while they are not cutting heavily now within two weeks there will be thousands of them. They have 200,000 feet of glass planted exclusively to roses.

At Benthley & Company they will soon be cutting a nice lot of tea roses, but the Beauty are off crop. They are devoting a great deal of their time now to the cutting business. They devote 75,000 feet of glass to roses.

At L. A. Jennings' good Bride and Bridesmaid will soon be cut. It is rumored that he will enlarge his place soon.

At Dittmann's the Beauty roses have been dried off and are now being started. He will build two houses this spring.

EASTER this year falls on April 3, nine days earlier than last year.

OUR Baltimore "Subscriber" should remember that all communications should be signed with the real name and address of the writer.

RHODODENDRONS take from four to six weeks, according to variety, for forcing into flower, with a temperature of 70° by day and 60° by night. An abundance of water and exposure to full sun is recommended. Watch for burning spots in the glass which are very apt to disfigure the foliage as well as the bloom.

CRIMSON RAMBLERS for Easter should now be in rapid growth and well covered with luxuriant foliage. Full sun is essential. If the foliage is still tardy supply a moist atmosphere and spray frequently. Avoid sudden changes and blow flowers of sulphur freely over the surface to keep mildew off. Fumigate often to escape insect pests. Ramblers flourish in a day temperature of 65° to 70° and a night temperature of 58°.

GIVE the hydrangeas full sun and moist atmosphere until they are in full bloom after which a slight shading may be beneficial. Frequent syringings are required to combat red spider and the plants should be fumigated lightly, but often, for green fly, etc. In the earlier stages of growth hydrangeas should be watered sparingly, otherwise the foliage is apt to come light colored and flimsy. Day 70° and night 60° is the right temperature.

An even temperature for gardenias is very essential. Any changes are liable to blight and cast the buds; 60° steadily by day and night is about right for their best development. Moderate watering is advised as either excessive or scanty watering is apt to bring on the "yellows." Lilacs can be forced for Easter in from nineteen to twenty-one days. The pink varieties will prosper in full light and a temperature of 70° day and 60° night but the white sorts require heavy shading and a regular temperature of 70° both day and night. Too high a temperature, especially in the first few days, is apt to cause the blooms to come knotty. To insure fine growth the branches should be sprayed five or six times each day.

Society of American Florists.

The annual meeting of the executive board has been called by President Breitmeyer to convene at St. Louis, Mo., on Saturday, March 5. Members of the society or others having in mind matters which should be brought to the attention of the committee for the benefit of the profession or the interests of the society are requested to send same in writing to the secretary at an early date. All such communications will be gladly welcomed by the officers of the society, and will be given all due attention. The sessions of the board will be held at the Southern hotel, and will probably continue for three days.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Emma Klingbiel.

Mrs. Emma Klingbiel, wife of Otto Klingbiel, Davenport, Ia., died at the Mercy hospital, February 15. Mrs. Klingbiel was born at Segeberg, Schleswig-Holstein, and came to this country in 1888, and was married to Mr. Klingbiel in 1898. Mr. Klingbiel and two children survive.

Alexander Kennedy.

Alexander Kennedy died February 6, at George's Road, New Brunswick, N. J. He was born at Banff, Scotland, seventy years ago. He served his time at gardening at Gordon Castle, also at Edinburgh. He came to America and worked as gardener at private places around Boston and New York city, finally settling at New Brunswick on a place of his own and growing cut flowers, vegetables and small fruit. Here he laid out a place whose fine and stately trees live as a monument to his memory. He was known by those who knew him best for his strict integrity and honorable dealings. A wife, two sons and one daughter survive him, the sons following in the footsteps of their father, Lachlan at Yonkers, N. Y., and William A., at Milwaukee, Wis.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The table herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Charles McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.
Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-24, 1904.

S. D. WOODRUFF & SONS, of Orange, Conn., now have a branch at 82-84 Dey street, New York.

THE St. Paul News devotes half a column or less to a lost carload of seeds belonging to D. L. May & Co.

CLEARBROOK, WASH.—One grower of bulbs here has matured 100,000 seeds of hyacinths, tulips and narcissi. The winter has been wet and warm.

It is reported that the Jones onion set loss by fire and water, approximately 6,000 bushels, has been settled by an allowance of something like 2,200.

JOHN DEGNAN, with the E. F. Winter-son Company, Chicago, takes exception to the advertisement of seedsmen who offer fifteen per cent discount to private gardeners. It is, in his opinion, in line with fake patent medicine advertisement and should not be printed.

At the Columbus convention of canners the members of the Canned Goods Brokers' Association made their temporary organization permanent. J. M. Paver, of Baltimore, Md., and D. H. Dutton are respectively president and secretary. The Atlantic States Packers' Association elected Willard G. Rouse, president, and H. P. Cannon, of Bridgeville, Del., secretary.

Union Set Supply and Market.

It is reported that Chicago and vicinity now holds the main supply of onion sets not sold on contract. Prices are about as stated in our last issue, or a trifle firmer. The Jones loss by fire and water was 5,000 or 6,000 bushels, on which salvage, if any, is doubtful.

Not Statesmen, but Seedsmen.

In the house of representatives February 5 Sheppard, of Texas, and Lind, of Minnesota, made a strong fight against the free seed bill. Sheppard said: "If the congressional comedy continues, congressmen will no longer be statesmen, but seedsmen."

Shafroth, of Colorado (of whom we shall later supply further information), supported the bill. Sheppard's amendment, proposing to distribute only rare and untried seeds, was lost. We shall give the names of those voting to continue the distribution in a later issue.

Import Values of Seeds and Bulbs.

The difficulties attending the fixing of values at time of shipment have been partly met by the assistance of appraisers themselves. This is now prohibited by the letter below. This leaves the importer, no matter how honest he may be, entirely in the hands of the custom house authorities, and he is expected to pay duties on values at date of shipment even though he may have bought twenty-five per cent less by contract. The careful business man is thus fined for the improvidence of his careless competitor.

The trouble here is two-fold. First, the law is old and out of date and not in accord with the present contract methods of seed and bulb buying, and secondly the law is not justly administered, being interpreted by the letter instead of the spirit. Many of the items mentioned are not grown and cannot be grown in America and should not be dutiable anyway. The government itself imports similar seeds and bulbs free of duty and gives them away. All in all, matters could hardly be worse.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 9, 1904.
SIR:—Referring to the department's letter, addressed to you under date of July 13, 1901, wherein, owing to the alleged inability of importers of nursery stock, such as seeds and bulbs, to inform themselves as to the foreign market value at time of shipment and to the perishable nature of the goods and other exceptional circumstances attending such importations, you were authorized to supply importers with data relating to the different foreign market values of such merchandise, without, however, making any suggestions as to the value to be declared on entry, I will state that the department is in receipt of information to the effect that there seems to be no good reason why importers should not be as familiar with the foreign market value of seeds, plants and bulbs as importers are with the value of other goods.

It appears that frequently where merchandise of the character in question is raised under contract the contract price is accepted as the foreign market value; that in a year when there is an abundant crop the contract price may represent the true foreign market value, but that should there be a partial failure in the crop the contract price may not represent such value.

In this connection, it further appears that it has been the practice at one or more ports to average invoice values in order to arrive at the foreign market value of goods of the above description, which practice is disapproved.

In view of the foregoing, it is hereby directed that the practice aforesaid be discontinued.

ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG,
Assistant Secretary.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—The Ocean Park Floral Company, E. J. Vawter, president, has sold its retail store at 224 W. Fourth street to T. H. Wright, who has been manager of the store from its installation. Mr. Wright will continue business at the same place under his own name.

LANCASTER, PA.—A house of geranium cuttings in Albert M. Herr's range was frozen this week. The steam pipes were all in working order and in use, but the wind formed a rebound and it was impossible to heat the house. Nothing else on the place was hurt. A. M. H.

OWATONNA, MINN.—L. P. Lord & Company have sold out to T. E. Cashman who will continue their business in connection with his nursery trade. O.

MENOMINEE, MICH.—E. L. Parmenter intends to engage in the nursery business extensively next spring. He has a farm on the county road just outside the city limits.

AMERICUS, GA.—P. D. Hill & Son are planting lemon hedges in this vicinity and it is expected that they will make a good screen and produce fruit at the same time.

WICHITA, KAN.—Owing to the increasing demand the Wichita Nursery has recently purchased eighteen acres on Arkansas avenue, and will plant it in nursery stock.

RIVERSIDE, CAL.—The Riverside County supervisors have passed a law giving the County Board of Horticultural commissioners power to destroy all nursery stock imported from any place, where peach yellows, peach rosette, phyloxera, red spider or white fly prevail.

GUTHRIE, OK.—The Oklahoma Horticultural society elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, J. A. Taylor, Wynnewood, I. T.; vice president, R. Kleiner, Wheatland, Okla.; secretary, J. B. Thoburn; assistant secretary, J. Carl Gilbert, Stillwater, Okla.; treasurer, N. B. Willis, Eason, Okla. The society adopted a resolution asking that the next legislature enact a law to eradicate diseases in orchards, that officers of institutes in the different counties be empowered to enter orchards for this purpose, the expense to become a lien on the property. The society will be reincorporated as the State Horticultural Society of Oklahoma.

New Bedford, Mass.

February 11 the Florists' Club met at the Mansion House hotel. One new member was admitted. There was an interesting discussion on the newer varieties of carnations. At the close of the meeting the club was treated to a nice supper given by the retail florists.

We are again in the grip of an Arctic wave. So much cold and cloudy weather is beginning to shorten up greenhouse crops. There is considerable funeral work, but transient trade is poor. Bulbous stock and violets go slow at low prices.

On February 9 the New Bedford Horticultural Society held its regular meeting with a large attendance. Two new members were admitted. H. F. Burt, of Taunton, gave a talk on the origin and development of the dahlia.

W. G. Kroeber has returned to New Bedford and is at work for Wm. P. Pierce.

Minneapolis.

The weather conditions are steadily improving and the last seven days have been busy ones with the retailers. Carnations are the only flowers appearing in any number. Tea and American Beauty roses still are backward. Bulbous stock is scarce and a heavy demand is maintained. Violets are in good supply and demand as well. Hans Pracker is marketing choice violets. A heavy funeral trade drains the market of white stock and the man with the early order is the only one who stands a chance of filling his needs.

Ralph Lathom, employed in William Donaldson & Company's flower department, will sever his connection with the firm shortly and take charge of E. Nagel Company's store, which he has purchased. He will continue the plant business in his own name. This was Ralph's old place of labor and he expects to build up a good trade. He has the best wishes of all in his undertaking.

The downtown store of the Minneapolis Floral Company especially the show window, has been a scene of grandeur the last few days. Some choice azaleas, sword ferns and palms, arranged with vases of cut flowers, were used in the display. The store is under the management of Miss Hannah Harveu, who was formerly with A. S. Swanson.

Walter Kerridge has been engaged by Miss H. B. Whitted the last week arranging some large decorations.

A. J. Mendenhall has a choice display of cinerarias in his Sixth street window.

Carl Johnson reports a good trade for St. Valentine's day.

A. S. Swanson has had heavy funeral orders recently. C. F. R.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—John Reck, of the firm of John Reck & Son, has sailed for Germany with his daughter. The trip will be a short one, as he intends to return before March 1.

FREMONT, MICH.—R. L. Chamberlin has purchased the three lots east of the power house and is getting ready to move his greenhouses from the lake to this location.

Wanted.

A few bushels of each of the following Beans: Bountiful, Longfellow, Yosemite Wax. Saddleback Wax.

BOOKS FOR FLORISTS.

The time is coming along when these are needed and opportunity at hand for reading them. Every one of the following should be in your library.

Send prices quoted and we send the books.

LANDSCAPE GARDENING (Maynard).—The development of landscape art within the past few years compels the wide awake florist to keep posted on this branch of the business. The many suggestions of this book will be found helpful every business day. It contains 338 pages, 165 illustrations. $1.50

THE GOLDFISH (Mulertt).—A number of florists find goldfish an attractive and paying addition to their business. The best advice is given in every department of the subject, including construction and care of the parlor aquarium, in this volume of 160 pages, handsomely illustrated. $2.00

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION (Taft).—It tells the whole story about how to build, and heat a greenhouse, be it large or small, and that too in a plain, easily understood, practical way. It has 118 illustrations. $1.50.

HEATING AND VENTILATING BUILDINGS (Carpenter).—This book covers the entire subject most fully. In the preparation of heating and ventilating plans, it will be found a most valuable guide. $4.00.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY GROWING VIOLETS (Saltford).—This is by a practical grower who has made a success of the business. No grower of violets can afford to be without it. Price 25 cents.

STEAM HEATING FOR BUILDINGS (Baldwin).—Contains valuable data and hints for steam fitters and those who employ this method of heating. The 350 pages are fully illustrated. $2.50.

THE HORTICULTURISTS' RULE-BOOK (L. H. Bailey).—Contains information valuable to all those engaged in any branch of horticulture. Illustrated. 312 pages. 75 cents.

FUMIGATION METHODS (Johnson).—A practical treatise on cheap and effective means of destroying insect pests. Handsomely bound and profusely illustrated; 250 pages. $1.00.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION (C. W. Ward).—A complete treatment of all the most modern methods of cultivating this most important flower. Illustrated. $3.50.

PRACTICAL FLORICULTURE (Peter Henderson).—A guide to the successful propagation and cultivation of florists' plants. Illustrated. 325 pages. $1.50.

HOW TO GROW CUT FLOWERS (Hunt).—The only book on the subject. It is a thoroughly reliable work by an eminently successful practical florist. Illustrated. $2.00.

THE ROSE—Its cultivation, varieties, etc. (H. B. Ellwanger).—A complete guide of the cultivation of the rose, together with a classification of all the leading varieties. $1.25.

La DETROIT

Breitmeyers' New Rose

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID.

To Be Disseminated April 1, 1904.

COLOR. Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE. Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM. Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH. Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific.

Washington, D. C.

The last week of the social season, so far as it concerned the official set, was a good one for business, there being many receptions, dinners and other social affairs. The illness of Senator Hanna caused the postponement of several social functions, and his death has cast a shadow of gloom over the whole city. Saturday was observed as St. Valentine's day, and cupid's arrows were in many instances cunningly concealed in bouquets and baskets of flowers. Dinner centerpieces in the form of hearts were sent out by several stores. Blackstone, Gude and Loose each had in his show window designs appropriate for the day. It was the best day for trade since Christmas, and all stock was well cleaned up. The following prices now rule: American Beauty roses, $10 to $15 per dozen; Bride and Bridesmaid, $1.50 to $4 per dozen; carnations, 50 cents to $2.50 per dozen; tulips, 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen; narcissi, 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen. There are plenty of good lilacs, and sweet peas are in good supply.

The National Woman Suffrage Association is now in session in this city. A careful young man who looked in a few nights ago, saw pots of pink azaleas in bright pink "petticoats" standing about the platform, and on the stand a great bunch of roses which had been presented to Miss Susan B. Anthony at the white house. All of which shows that the proprieties are being observed, and that the suffragists have friends in high places.

February 12, the birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln, was observed by various organizations in a quiet way. The wearing of the carnation on McKinley's birthday is a pleasing custom, which I hope will become more general. I would like to see a league organized and a flower chosen to commemorate the birth of that other great man, Abraham Lincoln.

"Heroic soul in homely garb half hid,
Sincere, sagacious melancholy, quaint,
What he endured, no less than what he did,
Has raised his monument and crowned him saint."

Mr. and Mrs. J. Louis Loose have returned from Jamaica, British West Indies, where they spent a month. They talk interestingly of the flora of that island. At the botanical gardens near Kingston they saw a splendid collection of tree ferns, bougainvilleas, and other tropical plants growing in the open air.

One of the strictly up-to-date florists had a cupid wearing petticoats in his window on St. Valentine's day.

R. Bowdles has been sending in some very good narcissi.

Albany, N. Y.

The present week has seen more than usual activity. Monday evening the firm of Whittle Brothers supplied the decorations for the review held by Company B, Tenth Battalion, in the state armory. The company rooms were tastefully decorated with pink azaleas, Boston ferns, palms and other foliage plants. On Tuesday evening W. C. King supplied the decorations for the dinner given by Governor Odell at the executive mansion in honor of a number of young society people. Liberty roses, mignonette and Farleyense ferns were used in considerable quantities. H. G. Eyres Wednesday evening had a large decoration at Odd Fellows' hall where the Republican organization of the county held its banquet. Palms, southern smilax and laurel roping were used for decorating, and tulips and azaleas for the tables. Friday evening the local society people held a charity ball in the same hall and the decorations were by Eyres, who used mostly laurel roping and southern smilax.

F. A. Danker on January 27 filled the order for the floral decorations at the Blake-McArdle wedding. The order was remarkable on account of the fact that the florist was told to go ahead regardless of all expense, which he did to the queen's taste. In addition to very elaborate house decorations and bouquets of ample proportions for all the ladies, the cathedral in which the ceremony took place was also elaborately decorated.

The firm of Henkes Brothers, at Newtonville, Albany county, has lately gone into the growing of plants. The concern formerly did a large business growing vegetables. A new house 25x125 feet was built this winter.

Mrs. C. Gloeckner will tear down a wooden frame house 25x125 feet this coming season and will replace same with a house of iron frame construction.

Louis Menand, of Cemetery avenue, is contemplating the building of a carnation house this summer, but has not yet decided on the plans. B. D.

Richmond, Ind.

The Florists' Club held its January meeting at the greenhouses of its president, George R. Gause. After routine business Fred Lemon read an excellent paper entitled, "The drawbacks to successful carnation growing, together with experiments with different fertilizers, and the results obtained therefrom." The paper and the discussion which followed proved both interesting and instructive, and could not help but be of material benefit to all. Mr. Lemon appointed Mr. L. H. Schepman to prepare a paper for the February meeting, which will be held at the Graves greenhouses west of the city. At the close of the meeting waiters appeared with hot coffee and sandwiches and fruit, and the way it disappeared showed that the members of the club had their appetites with them.

John A. Evans, not to be behind the rest of the boys, has come to the front with another fine boy. All doing well.

Finds It an Aid.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I much prefer your paper to others. I have just started growing cut flowers for the New York market, and find your paper very valuable. WM. SIMMONDS.

Staten Island, N. Y.

NEW PINK CHRYSANTHEMUM Dr. ENGUEHARD

The finest commercial Pink Chrysanthemum ever introduced.

We were awarded for this, first prize for the best six blooms any new pink variety at the Chrysanthemum Show in New York. This is going to be in pink chrysanthemums what Col. D. Appleton has been in yellow and Timothy Eaton in white. It is a fine commercial flower of the largest size, and an ideal color; fine, large, compact blooms of great substance; a fine shipper; something that has long been wanted in pink chrysanthemums. It has grand foliage, is an easy "doer," and a phenomenal variety in every respect.

As the demand for this is enormous, it would be advisable to place orders without delay. As orders are filled in rotation, the earlier order is placed the earlier delivery we can make.

Certificated by the C. S. A., having scored as high as 95 points.

San Diego, Cal.

P. Ridel is now foreman at the Coronado botanical gardens. He has Chinese helpers only. The outdoor carnations, about 8,000, are looking well. The Coronado White is a remarkably thrifty variety and may be seen in its full glory here. It is one of the famous Redondo varieties. These flowers possess several points of merit but should be somewhat larger to balance stem development. Another drawback is the tendency to pink at the base of the petals. If some wizard of the camel's-hair brush could combine the good qualities of this variety and those of the Los Angeles White we would have an ideal carnation.

A good many annuals are grown at the botanical gardens for use in the big hotel. About 4,000 strings of smilax were ready to cut before the holidays, besides some Asparagus plumosus. A Monterey cypress hedge which has been robbing neighboring plants of moisture and nutriment many years has been grubbed out and a neat fence put in its place. The Monterey cypress was planted very extensively a few years ago for hedges and wind-breaks, but at present the tree is looked on with growing disfavor by careful planters. It is a notorious dust accumulator and old trees are very seldom things of beauty. It will not stand as much drought as some species of pines. I can show you abandoned places in the dry hills back of San Diego where pines and cypresses are growing together—the pines handsome, hale and hearty as a grey squirrel cracking an acorn, while the cypresses remind one of lean and hungry rats. Then, too, the cypress is pretty nearly as adept in the gentle art of highway robbery as that grim and unblushing old scalcawag Eucalyptus globulus. A precious pair they are.

The beach company is preparing to set out a lot of roses for cut blossoms. The beach soil is deficient in some respects and Mr. Ridel was having a lot of adobe put on the ground, together with a heavy dressing of stable manure. Violets were not looking very well. Leaf-spot is induced by too much alkali in the irrigating water. Rain would straighten this out as well as improving the character of the water supply. Heavy rains in the mountains mean soft water in the reservoirs, doing away with the necessity of pumping hard water from wells. One glass house is planted to carnations as an experiment. Stem rot has been very troublesome under glass.

Geo. Otto sold more flowers than a year ago. House plants were about the same as last year. Mr. Otto buys these outside mostly.

R. H. A.

Davenport, Ia.

On February 1 the Allison-Littig Company purchased the Charles Dannacher greenhouses and business and consolidated them with their own. This firm now has by far the largest plant about here and at present occupies the Charles Dannacher store at 110 E. Third street. In a few days, however, the concern will move to 207 Brady street. The new store will be a pretty one in a good location well suited to the business.

Cincinnati.

The exhibition of roses February 13 was one of the best shows ever given by the Cincinnati Florists' Society. There were three exhibitors—George & Allan, W. K. Partridge and the E. G. Hill Company. Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis, showed their new carnation Indianapolis. Dick Witterstaetter showed an improved Estelle, which he has named The Cardinal. Its flower is an improvement over the Estelle, but of course we do not know anything about the blooming qualities. Tom Windram, who is growing some of the best Estelle coming into this market, says they will have to show him. W. K. Partridge had a table of about four hundred carnations, such varieties as Mrs. E. A. Nelson, Lorna, Lawson, Enchantress, Adonis, Nelson Fisher, Prosperity and Mrs. Patten, which helped him win the prize for best general display. Mr. Partridge received the first prizes for Bridesmaid, Bride, Meteor, Golden Gate and Ivory, and second for Liberty and American Beauty. His vase of Beauty was the only one on exhibition. George & Allan had a table nicely arranged with roses and bulbous stock. They received second prize for Bride, Bridesmaid, Meteor and Perle, their Perle being the only vase on exhibition. The vase of Liliun Harrisii shown by this firm was grand, as was also their lily of the valley. The E. G. Hill Company, of Richmond, Ind., received first prize for Liberty, with what certainly was the finest vase of this rose ever exhibited in this city. Their Bride and Bridesmaid were also very good in flower, but a little short of stem. A new variety, Rosalind Orr English, was also shown. It was regretted that the La Detroit roses, which had been sent by Breitmeyer's Sons, did not arrive in Cincinnati until Sunday morning. There were numerous inquiries about this variety. Theodore Bock, of Hamilton, O., acted as judge, and any variety receiving a prize was deserving of it, as Theodore was in one of his critical moods. A great many visitors attended the show in the afternoon and evening.

Business here is good and there was an extra demand for violets for St. Valentine's day. There was a big supply of this favorite little flower, consequently the price did not advance. George Corbett sent in 6,000, and they sold readily at $1 per 100. Mr. Corbett is also sending in some very fine Lawson carnations, which find a ready market at $5 per 100. Good roses, Bride, Bridesmaid and Golden Gate, are scarce and sell rapidly at $10 per 100. White carnations are also a little short at present, but there are enough colored ones to go around.

At the Florists' Society meeting held Saturday evening Charles Murphy was elected a member of the society, and a committee was appointed to draft resolutions of sympathy on the death of Henry Weber and to send them to the family of the deceased. Fred Lemon, of the E. G. Hill Company, told of the new rose seedlings on their place. It was also decided to hold a carnation exhibition in March.

George Murphy had one of his greenhouses blown down by the strong wind early last Sunday morning.

Visitors: Martin Reukauf and B. Eschner, of Philadelphia; Mr. Greenlaw, of N. F. McCarthy Company, Boston; John Lodder and Theo. Bock, of Hamilton, O.; Fred Lemon, of Richmond, Ind.

The Willowmead orchidry furnished 100 Cattleya Trianae to the recent W. C. Whitney funeral in New York. At the houses now are Oncidium splendens, Cattleya Percivaliana and Trianae—the trade price of which was 85 cents at the holidays—Vanda coerulea and a scattering of C. labiata, which are resting. Trouble still is experienced with the Mexican thrip in the formosum house, but it is kept under by constant fumigating. Dr. Kitcher is satisfied best results are only to be obtained with the last named variety by constant renewal, otherwise the bloom will be later and later each season, it finally becoming impossible to get the plants into bloom on time. Still he has individual plants that have been growing for a number of years. Sweet peas and carnations have been added to his list.

Michael Doyle goes this week from the employ of Miss Maud Adams, the actress, to the superb new houses put up by the Pierson-Setton Company for Dr. Leslie D. Ward, of Madison. Dr. Ward has without exception the finest equipment in this section and Mr. Doyle is to be congratulated upon securing so fine a post.

Alec Smith is with Benj. Douglas, Max Schneider with Geo. Merck and Tim McCarthy with E. P. Slavin on the ridge.

In Llewellyn Park Louis Parker, formerly with Thos. Taylor, is now with A. B. Jenkins under George Von Qualen.

Oscar Carleson, formerly with Paul Wilcox, Montclair, is now with Mrs. Jennings, of Fairfield, Conn.

Jos. B. DAVIS.

The eighth annual ball of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held in Red Men's hall on February 12, and was the grandest affair of the season. Over two hundred were in the grand march and about 250 guests were present. The hall was beautifully decorated with garlands, flags and flowers, and around the picture of Abraham Lincoln was a beautiful wreath of poinsettias donated by G. H. Hale. Refreshments were served at twelve o'clock. Some of the boys got home just in time for breakfast. The committee of arrangements was composed of W. W. Griffiths, J. Yeomans, G. H. Ashworth, G. B. Kuhn and H. A. Kettel.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—James G. Hayes and W. J. Connors have formed a partnership and will engage in the florist business, beginning to-day. The young men will have greenhouses on Seymour street, and are to open an office on Summer street.

THE ALLIED TRADES

Descriptive particulars—with drawings or photographs, if possible—of any new apparatus or device which may prove helpful to the trade are solicited for this department.

JOHN C. MEYER & COMPANY now make silkline in all the fashionable colors.

THE King Construction Company has decided to locate its United States business at North Tonawanda, N. Y., and has purchased land there and completed the erection of the first building. It has been found that this is a better shipping point than Lockport and as the United States business has more than fulfilled its expectations, the firm feels justified in making preparation for carrying it on in a substantial way.

London.

The Royal Horticultural Society's first meeting of the year, held January 5, was well attended and there were some interesting exhibits. Orchids were again a prominent feature. The only awards made were for some interesting species shown by L. W. Moore, of the Botanic gardens, Dublin, who gained a botanical certificate for Maxillaria Macrura, Maxillaria cucullata, Bulbophyllum micropetalum and Epidendrum Cooperianum. Other exhibits were mostly remarkable for beautiful hybrids of laelio-cattleyas, cyripediums and odontoglossums. There were very few other floral novelties and the only award made by the floral committee was for Moschosma riparium. This recent introduction from South Africa is sure to become a popular winter flowering plant. Some good chrysanthemums were shown. Harry Whateley, a sport from Niveus, pure white with narrow florets and well filled flowers, is certainly a fine late variety. Allman's Yellow was again well shown, also Winter Cheer, a deep-colored variety of Mme. Felix Perrin. Jacobinia coccinea and Jacobinia Chrysostephane were seen in well flowered plants. Evidence of the mild season was seen in the exhibit of Alpine and other hardy plants by Messrs. Cutbush, which included several things in flower from the open ground. The society continues to increase in strength, fifty-two new fellows being elected on the above date.

The new French market at Covent Garden, in the large hall which has been built specially for the sale of imported flowers, which was opened a few weeks ago, is now beginning to assume a busy aspect. It is a most commodious building and it will be more fully appreciated later on, when the ordinary flower market is quite unequal for the immense quantities of produce which pour in from all sources from early in April onwards until the London season is past. Just now all market trade is very quiet. Pot trade is at its worst. It would appear, however, that growers do not despair, for in many of the nurseries I have lately visited I find active preparations are already being made for a busy spring trade.

It appears to be very uncertain what will be done with the beautiful garden at Wisley, but Chiswick is evidently doomed and now wears a most desolate and forsaken appearance. It is not without some regret that we see the last of this old institution, where many of us have passed some pleasant hours and gained useful experience. There will be many readers of the AMERICAN FLORIST who have also some kind regard for Chiswick.

Life insurance is valuable because it guarantees the outcome.

"Gurney" Heaters

"BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouse: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expenses at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

Odontoglossum Crispum.

[Read before the Horticultural Society of New York by E. O. Orpet.]

Anyone who has seen Odontoglossum crispum, the finest of all the orchid family, thriving and flowering freely, will at once become a convert to its charms. It was my good fortune early in my gardening career to be employed where was at that time the best private orchid collection in cultivation. Not that the collection was the largest, though seven large houses were devoted specially to orchids, but it was rich in fine varieties, for no poor ones were tolerated. The bulk of the plants were a part of Chesterton's famous collections, and among them the first finely spotted varieties began to be found. Even at that time they were worth their weight in gold. When inferior varieties appeared, they were packed and sent to the auction rooms while in flower and sold, bringing a fair price as plenty of people were less fastidious, merely seeking a healthy plant that was established or likely to bloom. Since that time, some twenty or more years ago, the popularity of the Odontoglossum crispum has been steadily on the increase in Europe, but has made very little progress here in the United States, the general opinion of cultivators who have tried their best with but little success being that the hot summers are fatal to these plants that grow just below the frost line at an altitude of 6,000 feet. Yet other subjects from that same region thrive here and are seemingly perfectly happy. It is the purpose of this paper to explain some of the reasons why failure is so common and to suggest a few trials of a form of treatment different from that usually given, the same having been tried here and proved worthy of adoption elsewhere.

It has been our custom to read with avidity all published information concerning the needs of odontoglossums; naturally this has been gathered from European sources. It is very remarkable, up to the time of the adoption of leal mould in the potting compost, how very similar were the methods of cultivators. They were all traveling on a dead level. Here and there individuals shone out as exhibitors or growers who attained a greater perfection than their fellows, and in many instances the attempt was made to account for this superior culture by visitors who were much interested commercially or other wise. The sarcastic remarks of Linden when replying to some of these are still fresh in memory.

It will be well, perhaps, before going any further, to burst the leaf mould hubble, and relegate it to the place where "Jadoo" peacefully reposes. We have tried the leaf mould carefully and were at the time anxious to get all there was in it for the plants. They were tried in it for nearly a year, but before the end of that period it was seen to be very injurious. The plants all had "wet feet," the compost having decomposed so rapidly as to wash down and clog the drainage. This very nearly finished the plants. Many have not yet recovered, but all suffered as did the cattleyas tried in similar material. It must not be imagined that these trials were made in a haphazard manner. All potting and subsequent watering was done with my own hands and with judgment, with the result that nothing is now used but osmunda root fibre, and there is no better material to be had here or elsewhere.

There is altogether too much stress placed upon the component parts of a compost for orchids. Cultivators have yet to be weaned from the idea that seems all pervading, that the roots take up from the potting medium food for their sustenance as other classes of plants terrestrial. The one only instance that memory brings is that of the grower who planted orchids in some mechanical substance such as asbestos, and by judicious watering with plant foods in the liquid state attained surprising results. The great value of our osmunda root, lies in its indestructibility, and remaining a sweet and healthy rooting medium for years. It is said to be rich in potash, but this is very slowly available, not nearly sufficiently rapid to sustain the plants during growth, to say nothing of the drain upon their vitality during the flowering season. Hence we were forced to the conclusion that something was lacking, that the tens of thousands of orchids annually imported were being literally starved to death, for it may be pretty surely understood that though air plants, air alone will not feed them, and being air plants soil will not make them vigorous.

After experimenting in various ways with water containing nitrate of soda and ammonium sulphate, we could see that there were good results derived but the need was ever felt of a formula that was based on the exact needs of the the plants, one that would eliminate the element of uncertainty as to strength of solution. It was at this stage that Cookson published his formula in the Orchid Review, and he stated that by its use on plants separated by its use merely—otherwise on the same bench—he could easily pick out the ones his gardener had applied it to, and in the light of our experience this is easily believed.

The formula Cookson recommends is three ounces of nitrate of potassium, two ounces of ammonium phosphate by weight, dissolved in three gallons of water. One liquid ounce of this solution is used to each gallon of water applied to the plants. In practice this is worked out by filling large tanks with water and dissolving the chemicals therein, using pounds instead of ounces, then attaching a pump to the faucet and watering with hose in the usual way. This is only in summer, for in winter odontoglossums are in need of little water and they are watered when dry with the watering can about once a week during the mid-winter months. The intention is to keep the plants on the dry side always and this brings me to the consideration of another essential feature in the successful culture of the plants.

Some time ago in the Orchid Review we were told by a collector who had resided in the famous Paclio district of Bogota for the purpose of collecting large quantities of odontoglossums to be naturalized under similar climatic conditions in Jamaica, that he had experienced dry periods there of as long duration as four months, and he had noticed the plants became shrivelled and dried to such an extent during the drouth that one would hardly expect them to survive the ordeal. Probably in our greenhouses they would not recover, but it gave us a clue to a radical change of treatment that was tried first in a tentative way and then adopted wholly, with surprising results.

We have always been led to understand that an atmosphere and compost kept as nearly as possible at the saturation point was essential, and to carry out this idea sphagnum moss was used freely in the potting compost and also as a surfacing, the idea prevailing that if the sphagnum were made to thrive the plants would likewise. It is scarcely necessary to add that this is an imported theory and worthy of mention merely that it may be set aside as altogether misleading. Sphagnum moss is too retentive of moisture at all seasons to admit of its use in the culture of plants that require to be kept on the dry side at any time. It may be used for masdevalias and cypripediums as an index to the amount of moisture present in the compost, but never with Odontoglossum crispum, as it is too retentive of moisture during the dull winter months, causing decay of the roots and consequent ill health of the plants if not their actual loss.

Another important feature of cultural detail is worthy of consideration. All the growth of odontoglossums is made during winter, and if we wish to benefit them, we must pay all attention to them during active growth. A structure with a north aspect is an essential in the hot months but is the least desirable place from October to April. Indeed we can date our success from the day the plants were first taken out of the north house to winter in lighter and warmer quarters. It is a well known and recognized fact that all plant growth is at a standstill when the temperature is at 45°

Fahr. If we increase to 50° and keep away all sunshine matters are not improved so far as the plants are concerned, for the growth made lacks that substance that the vital influence of sun and air only can bestow. Therefore it has been found necessary at the end of October to take all the plants up out of the cool house and place them in a position where they can have all the air and sun our climate will allow during winter, keeping the night temperature between 50° and 55°. At the cool end of the house it stands at 52° without great variation for three months, and towards the middle of March it is best on bright, warm days, such as we sometimes experience, to provide some slight slat shades on the glass roof to prevent too rapid evaporation by the admission of too much air to keep down the temperature. Before April the sun will be high enough to act beneficially on the north house and the plants are removed thence for their summer sojourn. The roller shades are not used at first but merely the movable slats are placed on the roof until the hot days of late spring make them necessary. At this season the plants are in full bloom and present a display not equaled by any cultivated plant for charming variety of color and form, for if we import 1,000 plants of Odontoglossum crispum from the wilds we may certainly count on receiving 1,000 varieties that differ from each other. Even the individual blooms on the same spray differ from one another in the marking or potting.

It is not wise to allow the flowers to remain too long on the plants as they are apt to be weakened thereby to such an extent as to make the ensuing growth late in the commencement and puny in its completion. During the heat of summer the plants that have bloomed are at rest, or to be more accurate, are recuperating from their past efforts and need little attention save watering as often as they become dry. We never spray overhead at any time. It is apt to cause decay if moisture lodges in the young growths, but the requisite moisture in the atmosphere is kept up by frequent damping of the walls and paths, the plants all being placed on raised stages so that a free current of air can circulate above and under them at all times.

The season of repotting commences at the end of the hot months. The plants will, many of them, begin to grow fast and when the new growth is about half made, new roots are freely produced and the addition of new compost is of great benefit even though a larger pot is not necessary. Nothing is used for potting material except the very best of osmunda root fibre, not pulled apart, but sliced in slabs about one inch thick, the earthy matter shaken out and then cut into pieces square or triangular to fit around the plant and inside the pot, making the whole as firm as possible, as when thus complete, there is little danger of too much water being held in suspension by the mass and consequent souring of the same ensuing. By the elimination of moss, careful watering at all times, the addition of some slight chemical or animal stimulant to the water, intelligent use of heat and air and, above all, the admission of all possible sunlight to ripen and firm the tissues of the growing plant, the cultivator will be rewarded with a wealth of bloom in its season that will make all past care a pleasure from the knowledge of work well done.

PALMS AND FERNS.

Seasonable Notes.

It is a fact well known to growers of extended experience that a palm that has been given plenty of light and proper ventilation, and is also well established or even pot-bound, will endure much more hardship and exposure without injury than a plant of the same species that has been grown under more liberal conditions. But such a plant becomes light colored in stem and leaf, and the cautious customer is likely to claim that such a palm is not in a thrifty condition and consequently is not worth the price, the result being that the growers are compelled to follow the fashion and produce palms of an evenly dark tint of foliage. In order to keep up the coloring of the leaves without over-stimulation of the roots with strong fertilizers, it becomes necessary to begin shading the palm houses quite early in the season, the earliness of this operation depending to a great extent on the quality of the glass with which the greenhouse has been glazed, but in most cases it will be found needful to shade the west side of the house by March 1, and in some seasons shading may be in order a week or two earlier.

There are numerous water paints that have been offered for the purpose of shading greenhouses, though there are very few, if any, that are entirely satisfactory where one needs shading from early spring until late in the autumn, as is the case where palms are grown for the trade, and the best preparation seems to be an oil wash or thin paint, and the medium for spreading the color may be either naphtha, gasoline, turpentine or kerosene, the use of linseed oil being avoided partly on the score of expense and partly because a linseed oil paint stays on the roof too long. Naphtha and gasoline are very light and quick drying oils, the last being an advantage in applying shading material to a greenhouse roof, but it must also be remembered that these oils are highly inflammable and consequently are somewhat dangerous to have in storage about the place. A successful formula for a cheap shading material, composed of whiting, white lead, kerosene and boiled linseed oil, was published in THE AMERICAN FLORIST during the early part of last season, and although the frequent and heavy rains of last summer gave the shading a severe test, yet it gave good results, and the writer proposes to use the same preparation during the coming season. But from the fact that kerosene paint does not dry very rapidly, it is best not to apply it at any time that a heavy rain may be expected within twelve hours. Speaking of shading materials reminds us of a mixture that I think was first recommended by the late Peter Henderson, and that is useful where a very light shade is required, the mixture being simply boiled linseed oil and turpentine in the proportion of one quart of the former to one gallon of the turpentine. This preparation dries quickly and breaks the sun's rays without obstructing the light to any great extent.

At this period of the year there is also room for discretion on the part of the night fireman, for the days are lengthening quite rapidly, and as the sun rises earlier there is less fire needed in the early morning, for the temperature of the houses runs up rapidly on a bright morning. It is quite a natural process that the temperatures should fall at about day-break, and the sturdiest plants are usually those grown under natural conditions in regard to temperature, even though we may attempt to improve on nature in the matter of soils. Young plants of both palms and ferns do not always show strongly marked habits as to growing and resting during their first year, and we sometimes find that seedlings of certain plants may be induced to continue in growth throughout practically the whole of their first twelve months, while others seem to present marked periods of growth and resting, whether the plants are old or young. As an example of the fact that some seedlings may be induced to continue in growth for a whole year or more and afterward revert to their regular periods of growth and rest, we may cite a certain lot of seedling ferns, Pteris scaberula, a species that is naturally deciduous, and is consequently little grown for commercial purposes. The lot in question was potted off during the summer and continued in growth for the following winter, but positively refused to grow during the second winter, thus reverting to their natural habit of growth after one year's abnormal growth. The fixed characteristics of growth that have been found in so many plants may be illustrated by referring to a lot of seedling Areca lutescens that were potted off late in the fall, these failing to show any effort at growth throughout the winter, though exposed to proper conditions of temperature, light and moisture, the seedlings in question actually resting for between three and four months before they started up another leaf.

A decided interest has been awakened during a few years past in the outdoor garden and herbaceous plants in general and as this taste advances there will doubtless be further inquiries for plants that are adapted for the hardy garden and also for coolhouses. The first call for plants for the hardy garden comes in the form of a demand for showy perennials, and for these there will always be a large demand, but as the public becomes more interested in plants and gardening there will come a demand for a greater variety in both flowers and foliage, and rarity and beauty will also be included in the necessary qualifications. As this demand for hardy and half hardy plants increases it seems highly probable that some of the hundreds of varieties of ferns that are adapted for such purposes will be more sought for, and that there will be a recrudescence of a branch of trade that was not unknown thirty years ago, though apparently asleep for the past two decades.

Several varieties of Asplenium Felix-femina are very beautiful and perfectly hardy, there being both crested and tasseled forms among them, while even the ordinary type of this fern such as may be found by thousands in some parts of our country are well worth naturalizing in the hardy garden. Then there is the common bracken, Pteris aquilina that throws up its bold fronds to a height of four and five feet when growing under favorable conditions, and Pteris semi-pinnata, this being not entirely hardy and best adapted for cool house culture. Also the native osmundas, all three of which are worthy of a place in a hardy garden. O. regalis being the strongest in growth, while O. Claytoniana and O. cinnamomea are more dwarf but equally pretty.

The nephrodiums that we used to know as polystichums, N. aculeatum and N. acrostichoides are also excellent and are both hardy for some degrees north of Philadelphia. And one of the prettiest cool house ferns, and in fact nearly hardy, is Asplenium Goringianum pictum, some times called the "painted fern" from its bright pink stems and variegated foliage, and really one of the most interesting (though deciduous) ferns that has been brought from that land of pluck, Japan.

Our neat little native, Asplenium ebenium may also well be included in the list of hardy ferns, and some of the many forms of Polypodium vulgare, those singular ferns that we used to know as scolopendiums, should also be numbered among the chosen. Most of these ferns may be grown in a well protected frame, preferably on the north side of a building, as in such a location it is not necessary to shade them in summer, nor are they likely to dry out so badly, and if the pots are plunged in sand, cocoa fibre, or coal ashes the dormant ferns are more likely to come through the winter in good condition.

W. H. TAPLIN.

Nephrolepis Piersoni.

Having heard several complaints of late from persons having trouble with this variety sporting back or throwing Boston fern leaves, we wish to state our experience, hoping that this unnecessary alarm will not injure the popularity of this beautiful fern. In our experience with several thousand Pierson plants we find they require a very rich soil after they get started to grow. We use ordinary carnation soil, one-half rotted cow manure. After they get the pot filled with roots they will stand feeding often and at no time should they be allowed to suffer from want of water. Plenty of room and light are also very important. It seems to be the impression that too high or low a temperature is the cause of this sporting back, but we are satisfied this is not the case, having tried them in temperatures from 45° to 75° and had no trouble except with a few that got pot bound or stood too close to the steam pipe and died off frequently. While we do not pretend to be authority on this subject we would advise anyone having any trouble with Pierson ferns to give them better soil and see that they never dry out. You will soon have them looking different and the imperfect leaves may be cut off. Piersoni do not lift well from the bench if very large. If you want fine, large plants keep them in pots and plunge the pots in soil or moss.

DAVIS BROTHERS.

WITH THE GROWERS

August Von Boeselager, Mt. Clemens, Mich.

August Von Boeselager is a young man, born in Germany twenty-seven years ago. He came to this country at the age of nineteen and engaged in florist work with M. Ullenbruch, Port Huron, Mich., with whom he remained three years.

Leaving there he took a position with McCrea & Cole, Battle Creek, Mich., remaining with that firm two years. Wishing further to broaden his knowledge of greenhouse work, and particularly the culture of carnations and violets, he engaged with Robert Klagge, Mt. Clemens, Mich. In the spring of 1902, thinking that he had acquired sufficient knowledge of the business to justify him engaging in that occupation on his own account, he purchased seven acres of ground on Gratiot avenue, just outside the town limits of Mt. Clemens. On this property he built, in April of that year, three greenhouses 22x100 feet and one 12x100 feet. A substantial brick boiler room was also built and an eighty horse-power steam boiler installed. Encouraged by his success in these houses with violets, carnations and chrysanthemums the first two seasons, he determined to add to his glass area and last fall built another house, 22x100, in which he will grow roses. He has now the material on the ground to build another house 33x100, which he will devote to violets, with which he has been eminently successful the last two seasons. Mr. Von Boeselager has joined the Detroit Florists' Club, and is very popular with its members.

Sweet Peas Do Not Flower.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I planted a bench of Blanche Ferry sweet peas last September and they show no sign of blooming yet. The stocks are robust and from three to four feet high. I would like to know how long it will be before they bloom so that I may decide whether to throw them out.

J. R.

If the seed was sown last September the plants ought to commence flowering about the middle of February and continue until the soil is exhausted. If the stocks are robust it would not be advisable to throw them out now at the beginning of the blooming period after growing them all winter, for they are sure to flower very soon.

THE CARNATION.

American Carnation Society.

DEPARTMENT OF REGISTRATION.

Registered by Jerome A. Suydam, Flatbush, N. Y., Alarm. Pure white without any tint of any color at any season of the year. A cross between Flora Hill and Daybreak; size three and one-half inches, on an excellent stem, well formed flowers and nicely fringed.

A. M. HERR, Sec'y.

AT DETROIT.

There will be a number of new candidates at Detroit March 2 and any grower who wants to get some idea of the novelties should attend the meeting. There are plenty of good hotels. Nothing has been said about any certain one but it is likely that the Cadillac will be sort of headquarters. There will be a committee having this matter in charge and they can help all arrivals out on both hotel matters and how to get to the meeting hall.

A. M. HERR, Sec'y.

Gov. Wolcott.

We wish to add a good word for Carnation Gov. Wolcott. To prove what we say, we send a photograph taken the night of February 1. Alongside of Flora Hill, Norway, Queen Louise, Innocence, Her Majesty, Lorna and White Cloud, it is by far the best white with us, in every way; it is more productive, has longer stems, stiffer stems, larger flowers, finer form, pure color, is fragrant and leaves nothing to be desired. It is a grand keeper. When comparing the photograph with others, bear in mind that between December 1 and January 1 every available shoot was taken for cuttings. We also send a picture of a bench of Lawson in the same house, which is the best we have ever seen. By actual count, if we had nothing but Lawson and Wolcott we would cut six times as many flowers as we do now, these varieties holding less than one-eighth of the space. Both Lawson and Wolcott are remarkably even, averaging three and one-half inches in diameter and on good, long, stiff stems, while some other kinds are poor under the same conditions. Compared with Norway, Wolcott will produce a flower in less than one-half the time. There are about twenty kinds in this house, the main object being cuttings for plants for our catalogue trade. The plants were benched August 16 and were very small, being rooted cuttings May 10. Every flowering shoot was stopped up to October 10, it being the desire to produce early cuttings. Between October 10 and December 1 the shoots were allowed to form flowers. After December 1 everything available was taken for cuttings. Interesting was the record of blooms coming in as regards time. All varieties were stopped until the same day as above. First Wolcott was ready to cut, then Manley, Dorothy, Mrs. Joost, Flora Hill, Harry Fenn, Crane, Adonis, Cressbrook, Queen Louise, Roosevelt, Lawson, Mermaid, Golden Beauty, Innocence, Her Majesty, Harlowarden, with Norway last. Although Norway is a giant among the rest in growth, Wolcott brings four times the flowers Norway does. Wolcott appeared December 10, Manley December 15, the rest following in succession as named, Lawson being in about January 15—20, Norway February 10. Accordingly it takes Wolcott two months, Lawson three, Norway four to come into flower. The house was run in the fall at 52° at night; since January 1 at 55°. No tobacco, smoke, or insecticide has ever been used in this house, and the plants are to-day as clean as could be.

FRED. WINDMILLER,
Supt. Livingston Seed Co.

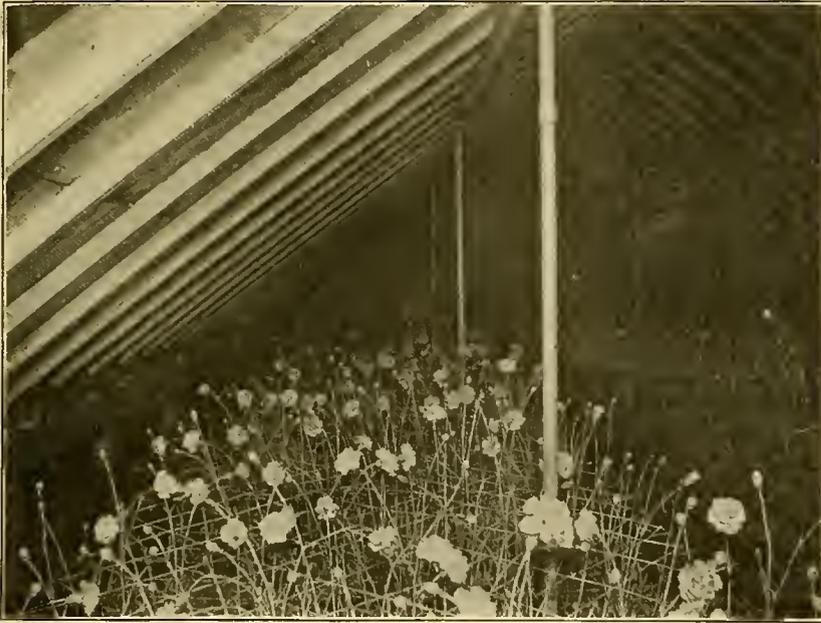

Carnations at Cottage Gardens.

The carnation houses at Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., always interesting, are especially so at this season of the year. Hybridizing has been persistently followed up for years, and records of results of investigation and experiment to trace and determine the laws regarding lineage and the transmission of characteristics have been carefully kept. One has a right to expect, after the years of diligent application to this special work, some interesting or striking development, and the visitor who goes with this object in view will not be disappointed. Seedlings are at all times interesting, but when, as in the present instance, their ancestry for several generations back is in evidence and certain peculiarities of habit or behavior are distinctly traceable, they become doubly so.

It is not the purpose in these notes to say much regarding the newer varieties, those under three years' existence, although these are undoubtedly the most interesting of all to the visitor, for as everybody now knows there are very few carnations produced from seed that do not recede from the quality displayed in the first year, and many undergo so great a change before the third year, which is supposed to fix them fairly well, that they are unrecognizable. The influence of Prosperity, Lawson and other less notable varieties of recent introduction that may be fairly given place as progenitors of distinct forms, is seen in many of the new seedlings, and some of the crimson progeny of many generations of all-crimson parents have the blood so thoroughly infused with the color that the stem-joints and contiguous foliage are actually purple.

ESTABLISHMENT OF AUG. VON BOESELAGER, MT. CLEMENS, MICH.

Among the named varieties of present or prospective introduction there are two crimson of noteworthy quality, Octoroon and The President. The latter, which has a tinge of maroon in its texture, is superior in the qualities that go to make up an exhibition flower, and will class readily among the fancies, but in blooming qualities and points that appeal to the commercial grower perhaps Octoroon will excel. Gov. Bliss will make a good substitute for Manley, which shows a tendency to become striped and is hardly large enough for the present taste. Ethel Ward is a very pleasing pink, softer yet deeper than Scott. It appears to be a heavy bloomer and the stem is exceedingly sturdy. Judge Hinsdale is a lovely Solferino, striped pink and white. Golden Eagle is well named as to color. The petals are edged with a tiny thread of red, in the manner of a picotee.

A variety of which Mr. Ward is particularly proud is marked No. 30, 1900. It is of the loose-flowered type, mottled and dotted white and rose, three and one-half inches across the flower, and has glaucous foliage of giant size and strength. Christmas Eve is a scarlet of scarlet lineage and eminently satisfactory as a bloomer at Christmas, the date when scarlets must make their supreme effort. Pink Harry Fenn has the make-up of Harry Fenn and Lawson color. It is a good one. White Roosevelt is a big deep-fringed, dashy flower and the foliage is strikingly blue. Another white that looks like an every-day bloomer is Mackinac. Its best time is from October to March. Among the standard varieties Lawson is easily first. Nothing finer can be imagined than a house full of this variety which has yielded a large profit steadily through the season, and is still a perfect sheet of splendid bloom. Enchantress, too, has given grand results.

Mr. Ward says that hereafter he shall grow all his carnations continuously under glass, as he finds this method preferable in every particular. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is still a standard holiday specialty here, Lonsdale's light pink variety being esteemed the best. Another bi-product is Asparagus retrofractus, a most beautiful tufted species unapproachable as a chandelier drapery, but unfortunately of too slow growth to be very profitable to the grower.

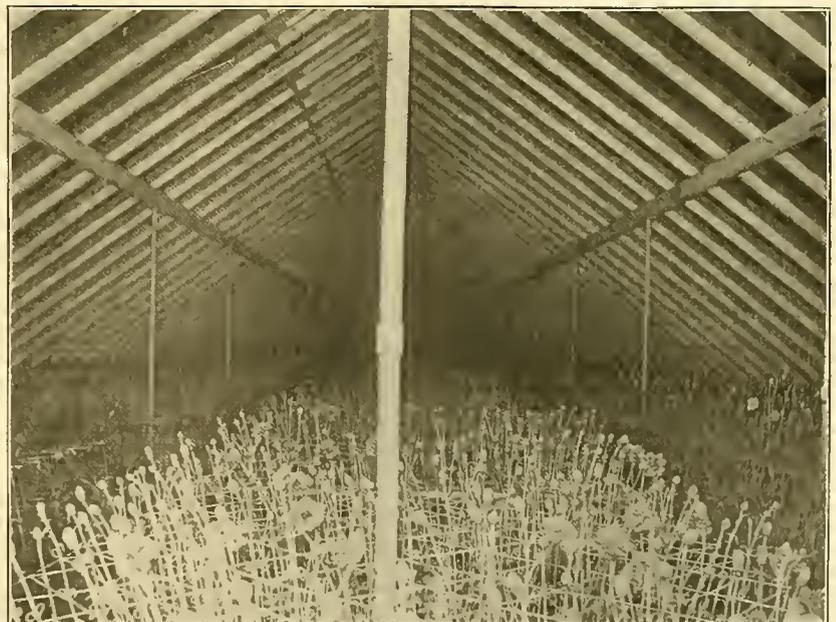

THE ROSE.

Watering and Ventilation.

The importance of proper attention to water and air in rose culture has been emphasized scores of times, but in my opinion it should be emphasized again. You may have good houses, good soil and every convenience to grow good stock, but if you don't treat your plants right in regard to water and pure air you will not have much of a success. At this time of the year the plants will stand more water than in previous shorter and darker days. Do not let your plants get very dry when in crop, as the roots at this stage are very tender. Let them get slightly dry and then give them a good watering that goes through to the boards. When out of crop keep them a little drier but do not let them be too dry and then overwater them. This will produce soft foliage, mildew and poor flowers. Keep a sharp lookout that the temperature of your houses doesn't run up too high in the morning. Open the ventilators slightly when the mercury reaches 65° for the tea roses and 70° for American Beauty and increase the opening as it gets warmer. Have your boiler started in good time so the houses don't run down too fast in the afternoon. Sudden changes in temperature are as bad as irregular watering. N. O.

About La Detroit.

There is no doubt that few roses of recent introduction have been more talked of than La Detroit. As with other new offerings there is a feeling of doubt whether or not it will prove worthy of trial. This is natural, and only time tells the story. So, too, with La Detroit. In the last few years there have been several new roses introduced that have proven worthy and have been added to the list to stay. The reason for this is that there is a demand for them, and as long as there is a diversity of taste among the consumers this fact will exist and the demand for something new will increase. Our growers want great variety in roses. Bridesmaid leads in pink, but other varieties in pink are constantly added. We all agree that Bridesmaid, Bride, American Beauty and Liberty are the four leading roses in cultivation to-day, and we hope they will exist for a long time to come. The interest, however, centers in something new.

La Detroit has proven it has the qualities necessary to make it popular. Its pleasing color and delicious fragrance are points much in its favor. Notwithstanding the worst season ever experienced in our vicinity it continues the good work, and far exceeds other roses under the same conditions. We are positive that it can be grown by all growers. It needs no experimenting. All plants that we are growing are on their own roots and March cuttings. La Detroit is in a class by itself. It is sometimes compared with Bridesmaid. We think that it is not quite as full as Bridesmaid, but its fragrance, freedom of growth and lasting qualities far exceed any points it may lose in that direction. We quote the words of a prominent Buffalo dealer: "La Detroit specials are grand and should easily be classed with American Beauty; its lasting quality is fine."

In conclusion let us wish that as many as can will avail themselves of the opportunity to attend the carnation meeting at Detroit, March 2-3, and in conjunction visit Mt. Clemens to see La Detroit. THE DISSEMINATORS.

A House of Easter Hydrangeas.

Two special attractions are seen in the accompanying illustration. One is the hydrangeas themselves which appear just right for the eager Easter market and the other is the grower thereof, proudly contemplating the results of his handiwork and industry. The view is taken in the plant houses of W. K. Harris and the complacent gentleman in the aisle is none other than Mark Mills, foreman for the Bard of Kingsessing, who has been with Mr. Harris for twenty-five years, a man of sweet and voluble discourse but also of untiring energy; a man who couldn't exist as a subordinate and whom even his master can't handle when he strikes a gait. Mark is a hustler and has enough Easter-plant erudition in his head to fill a big hook. Hydrangeas, to be in good shape for Easter, should now be well under way.

English Market Plants.

Cyclamens.—These are now one of the leading features in our English flower markets. We get them in early in September and they last well on until we get warm weather, but it is just now (January) that they are at their best. The prices vary but for well finished plants a profitable return may always be made. About the top price for well finished plants in the ordinary market size (4½-inch pots) is eighteen shillings per dozen, but larger stock may go up to thirty shillings. One grower, Mr. Orpwood, of Uxbridge, who makes these a specialty, is one of the earliest to bring them in and holds on through the season. He has had some grand stock this season and I think his system of growing may be taken as a guide. He relies chiefly on his own selection for seed, but adds some from others who are reputed to hold the finest strains. The seeds are sown in July. A cool, shady position is selected for the seed pots. I may add my own experience to this and say I have found HYDRANGEAS AT W. K. HARRIS', PHILADELPHIA, PA., APRIL, 1903.

(Foreman Mark Mills in path.)

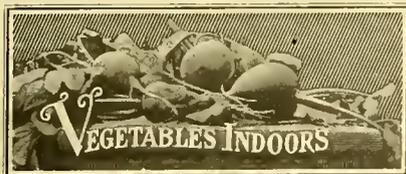

fresh sphagnum moss chopped up fine and sand added to it is the best material for surfacing the seed pots. This retains moisture and allows the seedlings to get through freely. They will be well started by the middle of August and the following few weeks are the most favorable of all the year for making growth. Nice little plants will be established before the winter comes on us. Fairly cool treatment is observed throughout. Cyclamens may succeed in various composts, but it will pay to use the best fibrous loam procurable. To this may be added some leaf mould, which has previously been prepared by mixing some soot with it. This, in addition to being a good stimulant, will destroy worms or other insects which are sure to abound in the best leaf mould. The time of potting may vary. Some may be in their small pots in the autumn, but mostly they will be ready early in February; that is, if they have been pricked off in the autumn. About fifteen to twenty plants in a 5-inch pot will usually give them sufficient room to stand over until they make a fresh start in the new year. After potting singly a slight bottom heat and a cool surface will give them a better start than a high surface temperature. The time for potting on into larger pots will be better indicated by the roots than the tops, for sometimes they do not make much foliage in the early part of the season. But the roots must not get cramped up. Potting at the right time is an important factor. After they are in their flowering pots they should be well exposed to the light and stood on a moist bottom with a good circulation of air above. In the summer a pit under a north wall where they get the full benefit of the light and are not exposed to the direct rays of the sun is most suitable, but if they have to be grown where shading is necessary, the shading should never remain on except just while the sun is most powerful. Watering is, of course, a most important element. While it is dangerous to let them get too dry, over-watering is equally damaging. Careful attention is the mainspring of success in cyclamen culture. New soil, clean pots, and above all a clean house to grow them in are needed. If thrips once get established in the buds, failure is certain. If the houses are thoroughly washed down and all the staging and ground surface well watered with weed-killer before taking the plants in there will be less risk. But it is also advisable to fumigate well after the houses are filled with plants. In finishing the plants off for market they may have a little more warmth to bring the flowers well up. It is most important to give them sufficient room to avoid the leaves getting drawn out. Any stray flowers that appear before there is likely to be enough for a good show should be removed. The strain most favored by market growers is the giganteum and only the most decided shades of color are appreciated.

Cocos Weddelliana.—Seeds of this useful palm have been rather scarce for several years, but it seems likely to be plentiful this season. Some good samples are already to hand and these seem likely to be followed by larger importations later on. Those offered by Protheroe & Morris at their auction rooms have sold readily at eighteen shillings per 1,000. When samples are good the first consignments are always quickly cleared up, and more especially after there has been a shortage the previous season. It is expected later consignments will be procurable at a much lower price. Formerly we rarely got the bulk of cocos seed over until the end of March or well into April, but the fact that early samples command best prices has made importers wake up, and they lose no time after the seeds are ripe. HORTUS.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—A flower show is being planned to be given by the school children next fall. The exhibition will be conducted by the Civic Improvement Association. The flowers will be grown by the children.

ALTON, ILL.—In a fire here February 23 which destroyed the McPike hall Joseph Krug, the florist, who occupied the center store room lost everything. The damage was about $1,000, not insured.

Market Gardening.

W. W. Rawson's formula for a successful market gardener is, a school and business education, a partial college education, a capital of $10,000 and, most essential of all, a practical experience.

The demand for winter lettuce is on the increase each year, but southern competition has made the price very uncertain and the profits elusive for the greenhouse-grown crop.

W. W. Rawson, of Arlington, Mass., is quoted as saying that a forcing house built seven years ago at a cost of $7,500 has yielded $10,000 each year.

Various Notes.

A pest known as the Mexican fly is giving serious trouble to some Massachusetts cucumber forcers this season. The insect is white, not larger than a pin head and when in flight in myriads resembles a snow storm. Cucumber and tomato vines quickly succumb to their attacks. Hydro-cyanic acid is fatal to them but its use in a house of young growing crops is exceedingly risky, as the plants are equally sensitive to the gas.

The present season has been the most trying one ever experienced by the vegetable forcers. The consumption of coal has been enormous, and, owing to the extreme cold, many wholesale produce houses have been declining to handle cucumbers on account of the danger from freezing. Prices received for cucumbers have not averaged more than forty per cent of what they were last winter. Tomatoes have, on the other hand, brought record prices.

On account of the severity of the cold this winter, cucumber growers have found the work of hybridizing by bees extremely difficult. During the coldest spells it has been necessary to hive the insects in the boiler rooms.

Deutzia Lemoinei.

This beautiful deutzia, a hybrid between the ever-popular D. gracilis and D. crenata, is well worthy of a place in the list of desirable Easter-flowering shrubs. The deutzias are hardy and should be left outside until about eight weeks before Easter, that giving sufficient time in which to flower them properly. They should be started at a temperature of 50° and afterwards advanced to 60° beyond which they should never be allowed to go as a higher temperature than this for even a single day will spoil them. The illustration shows a group of D. Lemoinei as forced by W. K. Harris of Philadelphia for Easter, 1903.

Bougainvillea.

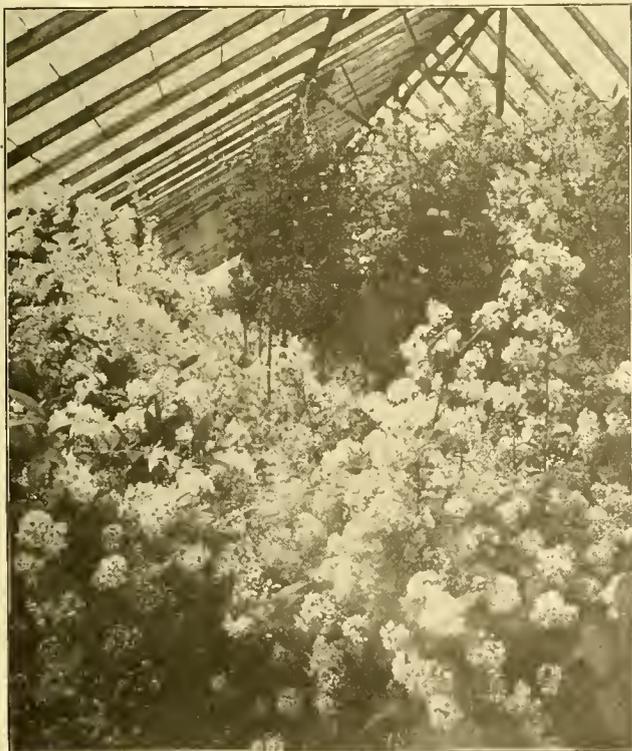

Bougainvilleas, to give any satisfaction as Easter bloomers, must have been kept cool and dry throughout the fall and early winter so that the wood is thoroughly ripened, a condition absolutely necessary to the setting of flower buds. It is now time to set them at work, with plenty of light and abundant water, in a temperature of 70° by day and 65° by night. If the plants are set up on pedestals so that the air and light get free access to the lower branches these will flower clear down to the pot giving much more desirable and salable plants.

MISCELLANEOUS.

New York Florists' Club.

The annual dinner of the New York Florists' Club took place at the St. Denis Hotel, Saturday evening, February 20. It was the seventeenth in the series and in many respects a duplicate of its predecessors, yet it was different. The galaxy of old war horses that in by-gone years never failed to be in their places at this annual event, and let themselves loose for a big "hurrah boys," was not there. But two or three out of the whole party could claim association with the dinners of the club's early days. A new and younger element has shouldered the responsibilities and the joys of the occasion and it must be confessed that they are much more sedate and quietly dignified than were their illustrious predecessors.

The menu was of the usual high-class provided at the St. Denis. An excellent orchestra contributed freely of musical selections and undoubtedly many a diner enjoyed his meal all the better for the welcome announcement that only two or three were to be called on for speeches. The cigar course having been reached, President Traendly called upon ex-president Patrick O'Mara to respond to the toast of "Our Night." Mr. O'Mara was inclined to be reminiscent in his remarks and there was a note of tender recollection when he referred to the many once familiar faces now missing from the board. He spoke appreciatively of such affairs as this where hospitality and good cheer cement the bonds of fellowship and mutual respect is engendered. In reference to the coming year he urged that all pledge their loyalty to the man whom they had chosen to sit in the executive chair, willing to do what they are asked to do and anxious to do something useful whether asked or not. He said that never from its inception till the present time had the organization stood on a higher pinnacle than it stands at present.

Alex. Wallace was the next speaker, his toast being "The Horticultural Press." He spoke facetiously of his natural timidity in presuming to stand before so intelligent a body of men and speak on such a lofty theme. He referred to the grave and gay duties borne by those responsible for the horticultural press and their many opportunities to befriend the craftsmen battling against adversity and said that "it is not what goes into a paper, but what you keep out" that counts in good management.

John H. Taylor said a few pleasant words and, speaking as one of the two or three original members present, said that he was glad to participate and pledge his fealty to the workers who had now taken up the burden, and that while a little indulgence in retrospect is all right we must look forward and not backward if the best usefulness is to be attained. A number of merry entertainers filled in the time between the speeches with dialect songs, recitations and story telling and added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion.

Buffalo Florists' Club.

The carnation show was a success as far as attendance and good blooms were concerned. Great interest was shown in the exhibition. The weather made the shipments late and some did not arrive until the next day and after the judging was over. The new varieties that were noticeable were Mrs. M. A. Patten and Nelson Fisher from Peter Fisher; The Cardinal, a rich red, large, beautiful flower, sent by R. Witterstaetter; Flamingo, shown by L. E. Marquisee; Albatross, white, also from Mr. Marquisee; Crusader and Harlowarden from the Chicago Carnation Company; Indianapolis, from Baur & Smith, which looks like a good, extra fine Scott. Palmer & Son had Red Lawson, which is a fine flower and will be sure of a mark at Detroit. They also had Enchantress and Lawson. There were blooms of Ethel Ward, Judge Hinsdale and The President from the Cottage Gardens; C. T. Guenther, of Hamburg, N. Y., had a nice lot of Enchantress, Lawson, Bradt, Morning Glory, Prosperity, Roosevelt and Crane which showed well for our local growers. F. G. Lewis, of Lockport, had Mrs. Roosevelt, which was a good flower. It is very near Lawson and one has to look pretty hard to see the difference. He also had Harlowarden. Wise Brothers, of East Aurora, had Lawson and Enchantress and also a grand bunch of 100 violets. The Governor Wolcott shown by C. T. Guenther was by far the finest white shown, in my estimation.

The judging was done by Prof. Cowell, C. T. Guenther, Chas. Sandiford and Geo. McClare. The following varieties were scored by a committee of the Florists' Club:

The Cardinal, 91 points, shown by Witterstaetter.
 Red Lawson, 88 points, shown by W. J. Palmer & Son.
 The President, 89 points, shown by Cottage Gardens.
 Crusader, 85 points, shown by Chicago Carnation Company.
 Mrs. Patten, 86 points, shown by Peter Fisher.
 Judge Hinsdale, 88 points, shown by Cottage Gardens.
 Ethel Ward, 87 points, shown by Cottage Gardens.
 Nelson Fisher, 88 points, shown by Peter Fisher.
 Indianapolis, 85 points, shown by Baur & Smith.

Among the out-of-town florists present were, C. T. Roney, Jamestown, N. Y.; Gus. Baur, Erie, Pa.; Edward N. Button, Fredonia, N. Y.; F. G. Lewis, T. Mausfield, Jas. White and C. L. Dole, Lockport; M. Bloy, Cleveland, O.; H. J. Wise, E. Aurora, N. Y.; Jerry Brookins, Orchard Park, N. Y.; C. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y.; F. G. Knight, N. Tonawanda, N. Y.; Paul Berkowitz, Philadelphia, Pa.; J. Dobbie and E. A. Butler, Niagara Falls; Wm. Gammage, London, Ont.; Mr. Miller, Bracondale, Ont.

At the meeting in the evening Mr. Gammage read a paper, which, while not very long, was to the point and called forth many questions which he was ready to answer.

A good cold lunch was served at Wm. F. Kasting's in the afternoon and Mr. Scott, Mr. Kasting and a few others had Mr. Gammage as their guest at dinner at the Genesee. BISON.

Tarrytown Horticultural Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in the Vanderbilt building, Tuesday evening, February 23, and was largely attended. The monthly prize, given this month by F. Gibson, was won by H. T. Kastberg, gardener to the Misses Masters, Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., for the best bunch of fifty violets. Other competitors were, President Ballantyne, J. Bradley, I. Bryan and others. Mr. Bryan exhibited a fine bunch of Princess of Wales single violets, each flower measuring two inches in diameter. A splendid vase of the new Daheim carnation, shown by the F. R. Pierson Company attracted a great deal of attention, with its massive and heavy flowers of the deepest and most beautiful shade of crimson scarlet, measuring over three inches across. Mr. Pierson tells us that one good feature about it is that it never bursts its calyx.

Miss Blanche Potter, of Ossining, N. Y., was elected a life member of the society. A. Brown and Fred Koenig, of Tarrytown, were elected active members. Frances Pammer, of Tarrytown, one of our most prominent landscape gardeners, gave a very instructive lecture on his travels through Europe last summer, in which he portrayed with beautiful illustrations the different kinds of gardens and places of interest to the horticulturist in Italy, Germany, France, Switzerland and other countries. It was very much appreciated by all the members present. After Mr. Pammer had finished and a hearty vote of thanks, had been tendered him, coffee and sandwiches were passed around and the entertainment of the evening commenced, with songs and recitations by Messrs. Scott, Lee, McFarlane, Malony and others, accompanied on the piano by Mr. Walquist. This was the first entertainment given after the regular meeting and everyone agreed that it will be a very good way to get a better attendance, and bring the members closer together. T. L.

Rules Governing Exhibition of Novelties.*

The following rules governing the exhibition of novelties have been submitted by the exhibition committee of the New York Florists' Club and adopted by that body:

RULE 1. For any exhibit of any new variety of florists' flowers or plants the committee would make it absolutely necessary that the initial exhibit of such flowers or plants be made at the regular meeting of this club, and the exhibitor of said novelty shall give at least ten days' notice in writing to the secretary before the meeting at which he proposes to exhibit.

*These rules may be of much value to other clubs in planning for local exhibitions of novelties.—Ed.

RULE 2. Any one showing a novelty with the intention of obtaining the club's endorsement in any way the committee may recommend, either as a certificate of merit or a medal or both, shall conform to the rules laid down by them for their guidance as herein stated.

RULE 3. Any exhibit of a novelty in the shape of cut flowers at the regular meetings, if considered of sufficient merit by the committee, they, or a portion of them, shall visit the place where it is growing, and if, after careful examination of the same, they deem it worthy of the club's endorsement, they shall award the same; but if, in their judgment, it appears advisable to defer the same till a second visit shall be made, they shall be at liberty to so decide.

RULE 4. Points of importance that must be considered in judging novelties, 100 points, as follows:

20 points for color.
 15 points for form.
 15 points for size.
 15 points for stem.
 15 points for distinctiveness.
 10 points for foliage.
 10 points for depth and substance.

In judging roses and carnations the committee shall, in their option, substitute 15 points for fragrance in the place of 15 for distinctiveness, as above.

RULE 5. When a new plant, such as will be grown in pots generally, is brought to this club's meetings, if the committee is sufficiently satisfied as to its distinctive merits and other qualities, without comparing with others of the same or nearly allied species, they shall be empowered to give whatever award of merit they may deem it worthy of without further examination. This rule to apply to new plants only.

RULE 6. Cut flowers or plants may be exhibited from any section of the country, but the committee does not recommend that a general invitation be issued for the same to be sent from sections remote from this club's headquarters, as the necessary expense and time it would incur in traveling to examine such things—as would be necessary so to do—would entail heavy loss on the committee; and, furthermore, it is the opinion of this committee that each florists' club should be applied to for examination of all such novelties in their own territory.

RULE 7. In all cases where the committee is called upon to make any award or report, when there is a minority of the same, whether favorable or not toward an award, the minority report, if possible, with the majority report, shall be entered in a regular book kept purposely for such reports, and at the same time and manner that the majority report is so entered, so that any or all the members of this club wishing to know the particulars of any special or particular report can examine the same at any of the club meetings.

The committee, after due consideration of all the points bearing upon the matter, are unanimously agreed that the expenses necessarily attending the traveling, etc., to examine such things as may be considered of sufficient merit to warrant an investigation of the plants or flowers as growing in the greenhouse shall be paid by the party requesting such; and we further recommend that if an initial exhibit be made in the club rooms, and the committee, after careful deliberation, consider its distinctive qualities sufficient to warrant further investigation, that the party exhibiting such novelty shall be notified that if he wishes the committee to go to the place for further examination he must forward the amount in cash to the secretary of this club, necessary to cover mileage, etc., for at least three of the committee. The chairman of this committee shall first ascertain what such expense would be and advise the secretary of the amount, and in no case where the money is not sent in advance shall the committee be authorized to make the visit.

In view of the heavy expense such journeys may entail upon this club, we advise the above; but we do not advocate giving any notice of the time the committee will visit any place for completing their report.

BRATTLEBORO, VT.—A. E. Whitely, of Boston, has been engaged as the successor to Donald McGillivray, florist at the Bradley greenhouse. Mr. McGillivray will leave for Newport about March 1.

THE RETAIL TRADE

A Violet Vase.

The illustration herewith shows a pretty little vase of bisque ware, which has been one of Bayersdorfer & Company's special novelties this season, and has proved a ready seller. The little fellow's robe is violet and gold and the cornucopias white. It makes a very appropriate and serviceable holder for violets, primroses or other small flowers.

Novel Dinner Decorations.

I have seen several fine dinner decorations the last few weeks. There seems to be a general tendency for customers to use their own vases and silverware for these occasions. At a dinner dance for a large party a plateau five feet across was used. This was filled with Adiantum Farleyense in pots with a superb silver plate in the center, with one large plant of A. Farleyense. The flowers used were cattleyas and Lælia anceps. This combination was also used on the table cloth. Small tables were furnished for the refreshments after the dance, each one being decorated with Liberty roses and Cypripedium insigne, arranged in silver cups won by famous horses on the race track or at the horse show.

On another similar occasion a center piece of white lilac and giant mignonette was used, a large fern dish being utilized instead of the usual basket, the handsome silver receptacle showing out here and there through the flowers. Asparagus Sprengeri and white sweet peas made the finishing touches, giving a white and green effect of simple elegance. At another dinner loving cups abounded. These were surrounded by 12-inch wreaths of pink carnations and Adiantum cuneatum, the cups being left empty.

The following arrangement was also very effective. In this case vases of hammered copper were used. These were filled with Narsissus Golden Spur, large bows of yellow ribbon being used to finish the effect.

Spring flowers are now here in great abundance and are being called for extensively for table work. English wall flowers and the orange colored tulips make a beautiful combination for a luncheon. Gold cords and tassels are something new for violets and are especially good tied in with violet ribbon.

THE ARTIST.

Chicago.

The Lenten season and a decided moderation in the weather the latter part of last week made it possible for a large accumulation of stock to find its way into the market. All stock hung fire for a few days and prices took a downward step. The market at the present time is not worthy the name of active. All dealers say that the week is one of the poorest first Lenten weeks in their experience. Roses are coming in in gradually increasing quantities, but the calls for them are strong enough to keep well ahead of the receipts. The better grade of roses find no difficulty in passing out of the wholesalers' hands. Prices are low enough to induce the medium grade buyers to order the best. Good Beauty, while not as scarce as formerly, are yet far from plentiful. Carnations are in admirable supply and they are moving fairly well. A slight decrease in carnation prices is noted in general with all other lines of cut flower trade. Lilies are being sent in in greatly improved quality. The indications point to a fine supply of both callas and Harrisii for Easter. Bulbous stock continues to be long on quantity. Violets and valley are also inclined to hang fire. Spasmodic rallies in the shipping trade make things interesting for the wholesalers, but this week's business may be described as very quiet, particularly so with the local retail men.

Gardeners and florists employed by the park boards and by the county commissioners threaten to issue an order for a general strike. The men are aggrieved at the refusal of the county and state officials to grant their demands for an increase in wages. They are particularly incensed at the west park commissioners, as the pay of the park policeman recently was increased. At present the gardeners and florists are receiving $60 a month. They believe that they should be paid $75 a month and their demand is indorsed by the Chicago Federation of

A Unique Violet Vase.

Labor. There are only forty-one gardeners likely to be involved in the strike. Of these twenty are at work in the west park system, nine in Lincoln park, ten in the south parks and two at the county institutions at Dunning.

About forty members of the Florists' club with their wives and ladies enjoyed a highly entertaining bowling carnival and turkey supper at McRill's alleys on Michigan avenue, on the evening of February 20. The hosts of the evening were the members of the Roseland Bowling Club and they took care of their guests in royal fashion.

The annual convention of the Carnation Society of America is but a few days distant. Detroit will be the Mecca of all carnation lovers on March 2 and 3. The Chicago contingent promises to be larger than the delegations heretofore sent to this occasion. Many will leave for the Michigan city on Tuesday afternoon, March 1.

George Ball, formerly with Emil Buettner and lately foreman of John Brod's place, has taken a three years' lease of the greenhouse of the Harms Park Floral Company. The range consists of six houses, aggregating 12,000 feet of glass. They will be devoted to carnation growing.

The splendid rose display shown by Peter Reinberg at the last exhibition of the Florists' Club was sold to the Consumers' Company immediately after the exhibition. The flowers were shown in the company's windows several days.

Johnson & Swan, whose store is located at Forty-seventh street and Lake avenue, incurred a loss of $1,000 on the night of February 23, by smoke and fire in a large flat building adjoining.

John Pierson, who has had charge of the George Wittbold Company's store in the Growers' Market, has taken charge of that Company's North Clark Street store.

Bassett & Washburn are grafting 100,000 roses on manetti. They have so far potted up 35,000 and have not lost one per cent, a most phenomenal record.

Chas. McKellar reports a brisk activity in the supply business. He has been handling large quantities of fancy orchids which seem popular sale.

E. F. Winterson Company this week received a heavy shipment of good fancy ferns, an item which just at this time appears rather scarce.

Adolph Thomann, of Rochester, N. Y., formerly in the employ of the Wm. Roethke Floral Company, is now a resident of Chicago.

Peter Reinberg this week shipped a large order of his new Uncle John rose to New York to be used for a large dinner decoration.

Sweet peas of the A1 class are being shipped to E. C. Amling from New Castle, Ind.

Poehlmann Brothers Company is cutting a remarkably fine lot of Harrisii lilies.

L. Coatsworth was a business visitor in New Castle, Ind., this week.

F. F. Bentley was slightly indisposed the fore part of the week.

Bridesmaid roses are seen in fine quality at Weiland & Risch's.

Visitors this week and last were Wm. Murphy and Thos. Windram, of Cincinnati, O.; J. A. Evans, of Richmond, Ind.; H. Weezenaar, representing the De Nijs Brothers, Hillegom, Holland; B. Eschner, of Philadelphia; Mr. Greenlaw, of N. F. McCarthy & Company, Boston; Herm C. Kroseberg, with Wm. Edlefsen, Milwaukee, Wis.

New York.

The cut flower market is not materially different from what it was last week, excepting in the case of roses, which are coming rapidly into heavier crop and have taken a considerable drop in value in consequence. Carnations are also growing more plentiful, but are selling better as a rule. Violet receipts are very heavy, but there has been more or less temperate weather and they are disposed of in the street in large quantities, much to the relief of the wholesale market.

W. A. Kennedy, of Milwaukee, Wis., is here for a two weeks' stay. Mr. Kennedy came to attend the funeral of his father, which occurred last week at New Brunswick, N. J. He is looking over the city in company with his brother, L. Kennedy, of Yonkers, N. Y., who is gardener to Leake & Watts.

Gustave C. C. Schrader, of Elmhurst, L. I., who makes a specialty of smilax, asparagus and adiantums, is cutting some extra heavy smilax, for which he gets $3 per dozen. Frank Millang and Bonnot Brothers are his sales agents.

C. A. Bird, of Halliman's Third Avenue store, is proud of the fact that he made three large horseshoes, one of which was composed of 1000 American Beauty roses, for Fire Chief Croker last week.

Victor S. Dorval, of Woodside, L. I., has a fine lot of La Reine tulips at the present time, which sell readily because of their deep pink color.

J. N. May, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, started on Tuesday, February 23, for Port Orange, Fla., by his physician's orders.

The next meeting of the directors of the Cut Flower Exchange will be held on Saturday, March 5, at 9 a. m.

Charles Millang is showing some fine azaleas in bloom at his Twenty-ninth street store.

Eugene Dailedonze, of Flatbush, L. I., is suffering from a severe attack of lumbago.

H. Beaulieu, of Woodhaven, has been sick all winter.

Visitors in town were H. W. Clark, Manchester, Mass.; J. S. Wilson, of Vaughan's, Western Springs, Ill.; Robert Craig and John Burton, Philadelphia, Pa.

Philadelphia.

The weather is much milder and the little warm sunshine there has been hatched out the fakirs in great numbers. The shopping districts have been lined with vendors offering chiefly carnations and daffodils, but there were also plenty of roses and violets, all offered at prices that would seem to make the general average of prices returned to the growers very small indeed. Business in the stores has fallen off considerably and prices are beginning to shade perceptibly and should the weather continue favorable the increased output will soon flood the market and lower figures will result.

Mushroom growers, and they are mostly florists who carry these as a side line, are much discouraged this season as the prices have been very low. For awhile they hardly brought enough to pay for the baskets and express. The Philadelphia Carnation Company's large house has turned out a fine crop at satisfactory prices, as they placed the most of the stock in the hands of the consumers direct. For awhile they cut from 100 to 150 pounds a day.

Wm. J. Muth, of S. S. Pennock's force, has resigned and will take charge of the wholesale business established by the late Clarence Dunn. Mr. Muth is well liked by the trade and with his experience will no doubt make a success in his new position. Mr. Pennock also loses another man, Albert Calmbell having taken a position with Edward Reid.

Washington's birthday was noticed by quite a few of the stores with cherry tree decorations, the Century Shop having a lot in 6-inch pots which they offered at $1 each. There were quite a number of dinners of public character to commemorate the day at which there were decorations.

W. Smith, of Sixtieth and Market streets, says his stock is coming along nicely and he thinks that although started late they are all the better for it. At this place the Adonis carnation is doing fine and the stock is to be largely increased for next season.

Robert Crawford is contemplating extensive improvements in the greenhouse department at his store. The two houses are to be replaced by one large structure. Mr. Connor, of Lord & Burnham's staff has the matter in charge.

Leo Niessen is handling quantities of New York double violets and he says they are selling very well. His store is open every Sunday morning until 11 o'clock and many store keepers find it a great convenience.

The growers are now bending all their energies to getting their Easter stock in order. The sunshine of the last few days has been a great help and lilies are fairly jumping.

The exodus to the seashore resorts has commenced and quite a lot of stock is being shipped to supply the trade, particularly at Atlantic City.

S. S. Pennock is handling quantities of southern daffodils. Most of this stock finds its outlet with the side walk merchants. K.

Boston.

Cut flower values have taken a fall. Within the past few days receipts have been growing larger and the distribution smaller, and at present writing the inevitable has followed. The shrinkage includes all varieties and all grades, and stock on hand is moved with more or less difficulty, indicating a further reduction in the near future. The supply of American Beauty roses, hitherto very light, has increased perceptibly. Carnations show a large increase, some growers bringing in from fifty to sixty-five per cent heavier invoices than at this time last week. The quality is very fine, Lawson, Enchantress and other prime favorites being in evidence in as good shape as ever seen, but they are accumulating and the market is unable to assimilate it all. Daffodils, single and double, and bulbous stock generally, are in excess and hard to unload except at low figures. Violets are down also to bed rock. Harrisii lilies have experienced a slight advance, but it is not expected to be permanent, and callas are doing well. Smilax is moving all right at good prices. Sweet peas fluctuate and are, as usual, rather risky property.

A box of John Cook's two new roses, Cardinal and Enchantress, has been received here, and the keeping qualities of both, as demonstrated in the trip from Baltimore, are remarkable. The former bears a very massive crimson flower on a stem of American Beauty proportions, and Enchantress is of a clear pink color, which has the rare characteristic of continuing without fading, as long as the flower holds together.

Carl Beers, of Bangor, Me., was in town for a couple of days, looking as animated and ruddy as though he lived in New York, Philadelphia, or any other place than Maine where they have to drink rain. He brought an invoice of nineteen funeral designs for the Waterman obsequies, thus combining pleasure and profit.

A visitor this week was C. B. Weathered, of New York.

St. Louis.

The progress made in the plant departments at the Missouri Botanical Garden from 1898 to 1903 was shown by a quinquennial inventory taken at the end of 1903. It was found that 11357 varieties of plants were then in cultivation, an increase of 41.8 per cent on an average of about eight per cent each year. Of the total number in cultivation 5673 are tender plants growing in the conservatories, and 5684 are woody and herbaceous plants in the out of door sections about the garden. Among the most notable collections are the succulents of which some 1600 are cultivated. The orchids, notwithstanding the recent severe loss by fire, number 730. In the last two years the bulbous plant section has been given special attention. A competent gardener has been placed in charge and the collection greatly increased. Of gladioli there are now 308 varieties; of dahlia 400 and of cannas 200.

Trade conditions in St. Louis are such that no one is heard complaining. This is a rare condition for the St. Louis market. Wholesale men say stock is coming in in reasonable quantities—not enough to demoralize trade, but just enough to supply the demand. Certain stock might be more plentiful, such as roses, especially American Beauty, but, as the demand has fallen off, no one is clamoring for them. Valentine prices for violets have somewhat lowered though some of the best sell for 75 cents. Romans have also fallen in price to $1 and $3. Not so many are sent in, but those that are are not the best in quality. Other stock remains about as last week.

The dance and entertainment given by the Florists' Club February 19 was a decided success, both in a monetary and social way.

J. J. Beneke says business is rushing with him just now. Cut stock is not greatly in demand. F. K. B.

Baltimore.

The calendar of the weather for the week ending to-day (February 23) includes the severest of the winter, followed by snows, sleet and thaws, ending at this writing with a perfect day which would be no discredit to May. Trade has been of moderate volume and is restricted largely to funeral work, most social festivities being temporarily abandoned except a few weddings. The cessation of certain lines of business, the difficulties of receiving stocks and the interruption of navigation on our bay and rivers by ice, makes a dullness which is expected to be only for a short season. Building operations are not yet begun in the burned district, pending the adoption of plans which will inure to the greater beauty, safety and convenience of our city. There is a disposition to act largely, and though there is some growling the general spirit favors taking sufficient time to formulate plans which will not have to be soon changed again and which will be comprehensive enough to create a great city. When these are ready activity will be quickened all around.

The supply of cut flowers has not been excessive, and at the end of last week all shipments were pretty well cleaned out. Good roses continue scarce, and hardly anything was in excess of daily requirements, except pink carnations. To this may now be added bulbous stock and lilies. No callas are used during Lent on the altars of the Catholic churches, which restricts their demand. To-day all white and light-colored roses were scarce. There is as yet no break in prices, and little perceptible downward tendency. S. B.

Washington, D. C.

The funeral services in the senate chamber of the capitol, February 17, to honor the memory of the late Senator Marcus Alonzo Hanna, were the occasion for many floral tributes of choice material and beautiful design. From the president of the United States to men and women in the humbler walks of life, the universal respect and esteem for Senator Hanna was shown by the bounteous offerings of choice blossoms. President Roosevelt's tribute was a large wreath of orchids encircling a cross of violets. The senate sent a standing wreath five feet in height, of orchids, American Beauty roses and lily of the valley. The Gridiron Club sent a standing wreath of orchids and violets, tied with ribbon bearing the insignia of the club. Another handsome wreath was from the Ohio Republican Association. The last named pieces were executed by J. H. Small & Sons. A. Gude & Brother executed a large number of designs. J. Louis Loose, Z. D. Blackstone, The American Rose Company, George C. Shaffer and J. R. Freeman each had orders. In addition to the work executed here, many flowers were received from New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and other cities. At the Arlington hotel, where the Senator died, a room was filled with them, and they occupied a large space in the senate chamber, in front of the president's desk and about the casket.

Bulbous stock is plentiful. Harrisii in pots and cut are coming in fair quantities. It does not now appear as though there will be a great falling off in trade on account of Lent. Dinner parties, which call for large quantities of cut flowers, will continue and milder weather, which must soon come, will revive the transient trade.

The vindication of the ground hog is complete. Wednesday morning, February 17, the mercury went down to 6° above zero. Within the week we have had snow, sleet and rain.

Washington's birthday anniversary was celebrated here and on a more extensive scale at Alexandria, Va., but there was little demand for flowers.

Geo. C. Shaffer has his window decorated with long strings of smilax, grown by W. C. Brooks. As a decorative green smilax is "it."

Pittsburg.

Business continues on the ragged edge, and it is doubtful whether it will improve until we get better weather. We are getting an abundance of sunshine. Temperature ranges from 30° above to 10° below zero, and has done so since Christmas day. There is no excess of any kind of stock, and it seems there is just enough business to take up the supply. American Beauty roses are scarce, but the few offered are of exceedingly fine quality. Fine fancy and special Bride and Bridesmaid roses continue to come in, but the cheaper grades of all kinds of roses are scarce. Carnations are good, and all kinds plentiful. Lilac, tulips, jonquils, lily of the valley and yellow and white Marguerites are fine and plentiful. Violets are good and in demand. St. Valentine's day proved the best violet and carnation day the Exchange has had since it opened.

Owing to a hitch in the agreement the Florists' Exchange has not been able to effect the arrangement that will give additional floor space, as previously announced.

B. E. Blackley has purchased L. I. Neff's Homestead store. Mr. Blackley is well known and will undoubtedly make things move.

John Boder is delighted with the progress of his Easter blooming plants. He received a large consignment recently.

Miss McKinley, of Randolph & McClements, is ill. Ed Weaver, of the same firm, is down with typhoid fever. E. L. M.

Buffalo.

Trade up to Lent was very good and Valentine's day was unusually brisk, the sale of violets and valley being far in excess of previous years. The funeral of Ex Senator Ellsworth, of Lockport, called forth a grand lot of flowers. The largest designs sent by state officers were made up by Messrs. Anderson and Palmer, the former having a six-foot column of violets and white orchids with a base of white lilac and violets. This was sent by Senator Grady, of New York. Palmer & Son had an immense wreath of pink roses from Governor Odell and an immense bunch of American Beauty. The different Lockport florists had some very large and pretty designs.

Mrs. S. A. Anderson gave a large reception at the Park club to end the party season. The decorations were very elaborate, the color scheme being yellow and red.

Mr. Elverson, of New Brighton, Pa., was a visitor at the carnation show. We were much pleased to see C. F. Christensen, of Eggertsville, N. Y., with us.

Prof. Cowell left last Thursday for Jamaica and other southern points. He was accompanied by his son and expects to be gone nearly a month.

We are sorry to hear of the serious illness of W. F. Kasting's little boy and hope to hear of a change for the better soon.

Signs on one store Saturday that made good sales were "daffodils, 25 cents per dozen; violets, 50 cents per bunch."

C. F. Schnell, formerly with Palmer & Son, is now with S. A. Anderson.

Miss Margaret Skinner is convalescing. BISON.

The store force of Bertermann Brothers Company and those of A. Wiegand & Sons had their first bowling match February 23. The Wiegand's came out ahead, Bertermann's men, however, being very game. Another contest is to come off in the near future.

H. A. Haugh, of Stuart & Haugh, read a paper, "Our Customer," at the last meeting of the Florists' Club, which was well received and was well up to Mr. Haugh's standard. At the next meeting John Rieman will speak on cut flowers.

Congratulations are in order for Bertermann Brothers' Company which will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary February 25. The firm will celebrate by giving a dinner to their employes in the Maennerchor hall.

Martin Brandlein has an even span house on the north side of which nearly all the lights break without apparent cause. Of the many theories advanced by Brandlein's friends none will hold good.

C. Green, for many years with E. A. Nelson, will leave for California March 1, where he intends to make his permanent home.

Huntington & Page, the largest growers of onion sets in Indiana, announce this season's business as very satisfactory.

Last week brought an unusual amount of funeral work. Flowers were scarce and brought good prices.

According to latest reports H. Tall will take Bert Stanley's place as city gardener.

A. Baur and John Bertermann will attend the carnation meeting at Detroit. H. J.

Syracuse, N. Y.

Two greenhouses filled with palms and ferns belonging to P. R. & W. J. Quinlan, florists at 904 West Genesee street, were completely destroyed last week by a disastrous combination of little smoke, less fire and extremely cold weather aided by the streams of water from the fire engines. The loss amounted to several thousand dollars. The greenhouses were each 100 feet long. The houses were heated by what is termed the "flue system," the hot air being forced through tile pipes from the furnace at one end. How the fire started is not known. It was discovered in the workshop, which contained the furnace. By the time the firemen arrived the houses were filled with smoke, a vent at the futher end furnishing the draft. Some of the glass broke with the heat and the remainder was smashed by the firemen in their efforts to get at the blaze. Exposed to the cold, the tender tropical plants, covered with water, soon froze stiff.

Henry Morris' new store is a great improvement over his former place, affording more room and a greater opportunity for window display. His show window is prettily decorated with acacias, rhododendrons, cinerarias, crocuses and tulips. Instead of the customary pots he has them arranged in shallow pans. The stock at present is fine.

Local florists are more encouraged with the outlook for business with the approach of spring. The last three weeks have been busy ones for the men in this line, although the demand has been principally for funeral flowers.

A. B. V.

Kansas City, Mo.

Continued dark weather has shortened the supply of roses and carnations. The demand for the past three weeks has been unusually brisk and the call for white flowers from out-of-town made matters worse. Many of the calls have come from towns that usually go to St. Louis or St. Joseph, showing that a shortage existed at those points. On the whole the business has been very satisfactory. Stock is cleaned up each day. Valentine's day falling on Sunday rather helped matters, as a brisk demand for boxes was created for both Saturday and Sunday. American Beauty has been off crop for two weeks. One hesitates about booking any fair sized order of these. Local prices for the past week and for the present follow: Bride, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate, $6 to $10; Perle, $6; valley, $4; violets, $1 to $1.50; narcissi, Romans, daffodils, 3 cents; sweet peas, $1.50 per 100; lilies, $1.50 per dozen.

The Rock Flower Company reports two large wedding orders, one of which was at Hiawatha, Kan. They experienced some difficulty in shipping palms for the occasion, as the weather was close to zero.

Samuel Murray is reported to be in California for his health. W.

GLENBROOK, CONN.—The greenhouses of Wm. Heragan were damaged one night last week to the extent of $1,000 by a fire the origin of which is unknown. A small insurance was on the property.]

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

John Cook, Baltimore, Md., submits for registration two seedling roses described as follows: Cardinal, a cross between Liberty and an unnamed seedling; color, crimson maroon; growth very strong; flowers large, full double and deliciously fragrant; a continuous bloomer. Enchantress, a cross between Mme. Caroline Testout and an unnamed seedling; color, pink; growth rapid and continuous, never resting, and flowering at every shoot.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

Providence, R. I.

Since Valentine's day we note no special business. On that day there was a fine call for violets and an increased cut flower trade. The weather has now broken up into a thaw and cloudy days, which finds flowers generally off crop, roses especially. Daffodils and tulips have just begun to come in at 2 and 3 cents wholesale. Smilax is scarce and hardy ferns are poor.

Our florist friends are doing well—for instance, Mr. Waltham has a new boy and Messrs. Almy, Hay and Keller have baby girls.

DAVENPORT, IA.—Victor L. Littig, the well known attorney, who recently became associated as the senior member of the floral firm of Littig-Allison Company, has decided to abandon the practice of law and devote his entire time to and has opened a store at 207 Brady street.

OBITUARY.

Joseph Manda.

Joseph Manda, father of W. A. Manda and Joseph Manda, Jr., died on February 18, after a lingering illness, at his home in South Orange, N. J. Mr. Manda was a native of Prague, Austria, and served as an officer in the Austrian army, being personally commended by the Austrian emperor for bravery in the Sicilian war.
A widow, five sons and one daughter survive him.

Isaac W. Lozier.

Isaac W. Lozier died February 17 at his home in Des Moines, Ia., of complicated lung disease. He was 54 years of age and had lived in Des Moines twenty years, nineteen of which had been spent in the florist business. He was the proprietor of two stores and a number of greenhouses. The deceased is survived by a wife and four sons, Alfred S., Harry J., Henry E. and Frank, and a daughter, Mrs. Charles Winset, and a son, J. A., by his first wife.

George Gipson.

George Gipson, president of the Suffolk County Horticultural Society, died very suddenly of heart failure at his home in Islip, L. I., February 17, at the age of 64 years. He was born in Ireland and came to this country when a boy. He settled in Barrytown, N. Y., and was later engaged as gardener to Mr. Diggles at Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson, which position he held for eleven years. He left there to take charge of Mr. McCurdy's place at Morris Plains, N. J., remaining there seven years. At the time of his death he was engaged as superintendent for Bradish Johnson, Jr., of Islip, L. I., which position he had held for more than fourteen years. He was a man of sterling qualities and beloved by all that knew him. He was always active in work for the betterment of the profession he loved so well. W. W.

ALBANY, N. Y.—The greenhouse of Alfred Goldring caught fire about 10 o'clock the evening of February 4. It was finally extinguished without much damage.

Pointer No. 4.

For Sale—Retail department in a Pennsylvania City. The gross earnings amount to $10,000 a year. Parties have 50,000 feet of glass which they wish to retain and co-operate with the party who may purchase city store. A few hundred dollars down with suitable recommendations will suffice. This is an unusual opportunity for an experienced and up-to-date store man. Occasioned by the death of one member of the firm. None but good reputable persons need apply and they cannot do so any too quick.

BOILERS. Have you any in good condition that you are willing to dispose of at less than first cost? Do not keep any dead capital of this nature. Let us exchange it for something useful. Send in an inventory now.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Charles McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.
Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-24, 1904.

THE peanut market is said to be cornered.

VISITED CHICAGO: Patrick J. Lynch, of West Grove, Pa.

JOHNSON grass hay sells at $13 per ton in Birmingham, Ala.

The planting season in the southern trucking sections is ten days late.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—The Harvey Seed Company has moved into new quarters, corner Monroe and Perry streets. The business has increased to such a degree in the last two years as to necessitate a larger and more commodious building.

Free Roosters.

There is no more reason why the government, except with the sole view of introducing entirely new and greatly improved varieties, should distribute seeds to farmers than there is why it should distribute books among lawyers, sermons among preachers, lead pencils and paper among newspaper men, or hens and roosters among poultry raisers. —Kansas City Journal.

Buckbee Loss Compromised.

The Buckbee Seed Company loss at Rockford, which has attracted wide attention among insurance men, at last has been settled by compromise, according to the Chicago Record-Herald. The fire occurred in June, 1903, and a contest was precipitated at once by what was regarded by the companies as an excessive claim on the part of the insured. The claim went to appraisal, but the appraisers never were able to agree on an umpire. The companies named a practical seed man, while the insured named a Rockford attorney.

The insurance companies contended that the umpire must have some knowledge of seed values, and tendered nearly every well-known seed man in the country, but they were rejected by the other side. It in turn tendered men not conversant with the seed business, and these were rejected by the companies' appraiser. The insured claimed a value of $121,875 in stock and fixtures, with insurance of $80,500. This would make the loss total to insurance. The claim was compromised yesterday, the companies paying $72,450, a reduction of $49,425 from the original claim. This is on the basis of ninety per cent on the insurance.

Spanish Catalogues in Brazil.

United States Consul Walter Schumann, of Mainz, Germany, under date of December 5, 1903, sends the following translation of a letter from a gentleman residing at San Paulo, Brazil, to a German trade journal, which will be of interest also to American exporters to that country:

A Brazilian who is thoroughly acquainted with his own language—the Portuguese—will be able to understand a catalogue in the Spanish language without much trouble, both languages being closely related. Nevertheless, Spanish catalogues are not looked upon more favorably in Brazil than catalogues in the English, French, or German languages. If, however, a Spanish catalogue comes from Spain or any other country in which Spanish is the language of the country, it is, of course, as welcome to the Brazilian merchant as a French catalogue from France, an English catalogue from England or the United States, or a German catalogue from Germany, for the knowledge of these languages is by no means a rarity among Brazilian merchants.

Should an American, an English, or a German merchant send to Brazil catalogues intended expressly for that country but printed in the Spanish language, he can almost be certain that such catalogues are thrown into the waste-paper basket without even being looked at, and that with the compassionate men of the Brazilian who pity the foreigner who thus seek to do business with Brazil and does not even know that the language of Brazil is Portuguese; or else the Brazilian merchant may even feel insulted at being addressed in any language other than his own. It is therefore advisable that foreigners wishing to do business with Brazil make use of their own language, if they are not acquainted with the Portuguese language, rather than avail themselves of the Spanish language.

New Orleans.

The last meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was largely attended. The society had to give up the idea of holding a public exhibition Mardi Gras week, a suitable location not being found. A discussion on chrysanthemums was conducted by Paul Abele. Secretary Dan Newsham tendered his resignation, he having been put in charge of the Louisiana horticultural exhibit at the St. Louis World's Fair. The resignation was accepted with regret and E. Baker, with an appropriate speech, presented him with a silk umbrella. C. R. Panter was appointed as his successor. Several new members were present.

M. M. L.

New Bedford, Mass.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held February 11 in the parlors of the Mansion House, after which the downtown florists and unmarried members of the club gave a supper to their associates in the organization. It was an enjoyable feature which was well handled by Host McAdam. During the business session there was an interesting discussion on carnations—their growth and habits. The annual supper and election of officers will take place March 10.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.—The greenhouse of Chas. Ludwig was damaged by fire on the morning of February 15. Insurance on building will amply cover loss on same, but not on the plants killed by exposure.

READING, MASS.—Charles S. Pratt has filed a bankruptcy petition. He owes $2,624.48 with no assets.

HAVERHILL, MASS.—Ralph S. Hosmer has assumed the duties of superintendent of forestry at the Hawaiian Islands, to which he was recently appointed.

THE present winter with its deep snow and severe temperature offers conditions liable to result in extensive damage to young nursery stock and loss to nurserymen, from the gnawing of the bark by the mice whose usual winter food is inaccessible to them. Much anxiety is felt as to what the disappearance of the snow will disclose.

SHERMAN, TEX.—Conditions were never more favorable than just at this time and the outlook for an abundant fruit crop is highly gratifying. The successive cold snaps are the best things that could happen for the fruit growers of Texas. The weather has not been severe enough to kill the trees but the cold has been sufficient to keep down the sap and retard the growth of buds.

Huntsville, Ala.

The bulk of the shipments of nursery stock from here to the north and west move in car lots to St. Louis and are distributed from there. The bulk of these shipments has gone forward. Plowing and planting operations are now being pushed forward vigorously while some stock is still being dug. The strong alluvial soil seems especially adapted for the free growth of fibrous roots and the showing of roots on young peach and privet trees just loosened by the digger leaves nothing to be desired.

It is reported that Stark Brothers will invest a large sum in establishing a nursery here. There are already three large establishments. The United States government has lately completed a soil survey of this county (Madison county) in which reference is made especially to its adaptability to growing nursery stock. The county authorities have purchased a portable stone crusher for road improvement.

Toronto.

Very little change is noticed in the retail business, which keeps up fairly well, though there is a scarcity of social affairs. The weather still registers below zero. Rose stock still holds up in quality though there are not enough to go around. American Beauties are fine for this time of the year and Bride, Bridesmaid and Meteor are running to a very high grade. Some very good Ivory and Helen Gould are also on the market. Carnations are coming in plentiful enough to fill all orders and the stock is well worth $4 per hundred which is asked for it. Lillian Pond in the whites is fine and is certainly the best white of the season. Valley is becoming very plentiful and in bulbous stock you can choose at your own figures. Harrisii are coming in fine and from the appearance of the local stock there will be plenty for all at Easter and with but very few plants showing disease. Saturday proved a great day for the violet growers. Violets have a greater demand on Valentine day than on our olden Violet day.

The coal situation is getting serious, the railroads having been blocked so long that the supply which was here is almost exhausted. The larger growers are having difficulty in getting cars through, some of which have been on the road over a month. The blocking of the railways in the outer districts, and especially on the side lines proves disastrous for the retail dealers, as the express companies are refusing to carry stock to many outside points.

Manton Brothers had the decoration of a large department store for their millinery opening, the leading feature being a California villa which is proving a great drawing card.

J. H. Dunlop had an attractive window of hearts and special hampers of violets which sold rapidly and showed the utility of flowers for this purpose.

Some very good rhododendrons are seen at Chas. Tidy's. They are well grown and show to advantage in his window.

D. J. Sinclair is again back to business. His trip to Prestou Springs benefited him considerably.

There will be a carnation show about the second week of March. H. G. D.

Richmond, Ind.

The Florists' Club met in regular monthly session at the greenhouses of E. T. Grave, with a large number present. President George R. Gause was in the chair. In the absence of L. H. Shepman, who had been appointed to prepare the paper for the February meeting, the secretary read the paper. The subject was "Heat and Heating Systems," a subject near and dear to the heart of every florist. The questions and suggestions of the paper brought out a full and free discussion by the growers and practical florists, who gave their views in a clear and distinct manner. Refreshments were provided by the hosts of the evening. Vernon D. Grave was appointed to prepare the paper for the March meeting, which will be held at the ventilator works of John Evans.

Fire February 21 almost totally destroyed the greenhouse plant of Chessman & Shepman. It is estimated that the loss will be from $7,000 to $9,000; insurance about $1,000. It is not known exactly how the fire started, but it is believed it originated in the boiler room, the flooring above the boilers first taking fire. The two rooms above the boiler are the potting and planting rooms and nothing remains of them but charred woodwork. Of the eight glass hothouses six of them are practically useless. All of the glass has been broken and parts of the houses destroyed by the flames. The two remaining hot houses are in serviceable condition and all of the plants and flowers that were not destroyed have been placed in them.

L. H. Shepman is the proud father of a new baby girl. H. C. C.

Albany, N. Y.

A fire in the greenhouses of Fred A. Danker, Central avenue, on the morning of February 17 caused damage to stock and houses to the amount of $6,000. The insurance is $3,000. The fire was caused by a defective chimney augmented by the necessity of keeping up a large fire in the boiler owing to the cold night. The fire was discovered at 4 o'clock and before it was extinguished by the firemen had burned down the boiler shed, potting shed and the ends of the houses exposing the plants to the cold which was 5° below zero. All of Mr. Danker's Easter stock, including Easter lilies, orchids, foliage plants and azaleas are a total loss. Mr. Danker will rebuild as soon as the weather will permit.

The cold winter has caused some complaint among local florists to the effect that many customers who in the past have purchased liberally of corsage bouquets for street wear are not buying this winter. A few moments of exposure in the zero atmosphere causes the flowers to freeze and very quickly lose their freshness and color.

Whittle Brothers supplied the decorations for the masque ball of Company B, held in the state armory Monday evening. R. D.

NEWARK, N. J.—The greenhouses of John F. McDonough were entered early on the morning of February 15 by two men who proceeded to cut roses and carnations at wholesale. They were discovered by Joseph McDonough, who was able to trace them in their flight by their footprints in the snow. One of them, giving the name of Ernest Narrath, was arrested.

COLOR.

Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy fl-sh tint, shading to silver toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring rare and fascinating.

FRAGRANCE.

Subtle, strongly tea-scented, reminds one of old Bon Silene.

AN INVITATION

Is cordially extended to the visitors of the American Carnation Meeting in our city, March 2-3, to visit the Home of this great Rose at Mt. Clemens. Special cars will be provided for the occasion. Definite starting time will be announced at the Banquet, Thursday evening, March 3.

BOOKS FOR FLORISTS.

The time is coming along when these are needed and opportunity at hand for reading them. Every one of the following should be in your library.

Send prices quoted and we send the books.

LANDSCAPE GARDENING (Maynard).—The development of landscape art within the past few years compels the wideawake florist to keep posted on this branch of the business. The many suggestions of this book will be found helpful every business day. It contains 338 pages, 165 illustrations. $1.50

THE GOLDFISH (Mulerdt).—A number of florists find goldfish an attractive and paying addition to their business. The best advice is given in every department of the subject, including construction and care of the parlor aquarium, in this volume of 160 pages, handsomely illustrated. $2.00

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION (Taft).—It tells the whole story about how to build, and heat a greenhouse, be it large or small, and that too in a plain, easily understood, practical way. It has 118 illustrations. $1.50.

HEATING AND VENTILATING BUILDINGS (Carpenter).—This book covers the entire subject most fully. In the preparation of heating and ventilating plans, it will be found a most valuable guide. $4.00.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY GROWING VIOLETS (Saltford).—This is by a practical grower who has made a success of the business. No grower of violets can afford to be without it. Price 25 cents.

STEAM HEATING FOR BUILDINGS (Baldwin).—Contains valuable data and hints for steam fitters and those who employ this method of heating. The 350 pages are fully illustrated. $2.50.

THE HORTICULTURISTS' RULE-BOOK (L. H. Bailey).—Contains information valuable to all those engaged in any branch of horticulture. Illustrated. 312 pages. 75 cents.

FUMIGATION METHODS (Johnson).—A practical treatise on cheap and effective means of destroying insect pests. Handsomely bound and profusely illustrated; 250 pages. $1.00.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION (C. W. Ward).—A complete treatment of all the most modern methods of cultivating this most important flower. Illustrated. $3.50.

PRACTICAL FLORICULTURE (Peter Henderson).—A guide to the successful propagation and cultivation of florists' plants. Illustrated. 325 pages. $1.50.

NEPHROLEPIS SCOTTII

This splendid new Fern has received the Highest Award from the New York Florists' Club and the American Institute. Its natural compact habit admits of its being grown in one-half the space required to grow N. Bostoniensis. Its rapidity of increase is well proven by the fact that in October 1900, I had but one plant with four (4) fronds, and at the present time I have three houses each 152 feet long, full. I am certain if you grow N. Scottii you will not meet with the same disappointment that has been met with in some of the varieties of Nephrolepis that have been introduced within the last few years, but you will find it a profitable investment, as this fern will surely appeal to your customers on account of its compact symmetrical and graceful form and its excellent adaptability to dwelling-house culture. The illustrations show a plant each of N. Scottii and N. Bostoniensis. Both were grown in 5-inch pots, and it is easily seen how much more decorative N. Scottii is over the old Boston fern. A further description is unnecessary.

DELIVERY WILL BE MADE AS FOLLOWS:

NEW CARNATION Louise Naumann

Dark pink. Produces far more than Lawson and is a better color. With this variety you can pick every day the year around. Always heavy with buds and flowers. Most excellent keeper. Size, 3-3½ inches. Fringed and never bursts or fades. Averages 25 flowers per plant a season, more than any variety I have ever grown. Come and see them grow. Order now for February and March Delivery, $1.25 per Doz.; $5.00 per 100; $70.00 per 1000. Also Rooted Cuttings of ENCHANTRESS, $6.00 per 100.

G. M. NAUMANN, 1537 Doan Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

Cleveland, O.

The obsequies attending the burial of the late Senator Hanna called for the most magnificent and elaborate display of floral emblems ever seen at one time in this or any other city in this country. Two baggage cars filled with elaborate designs came for Washington with the same train which bore the deceased senator to his home city. Added to these were the almost countless numbers of tokens from the many friends and admirers here of the dead statesman. These made a display in the Chamber of Commerce hall, where the body lay in state for a day, which once seen could never be forgotten. Viewed as they were by tens of thousands the effect will no doubt be most beneficial upon the floral business. Various estimates give the amount spent in this city at $5,000 to $7,000. All got a share of the work from the largest to the smallest establishment. All the growers in the vicinity through the medium of the new Cleveland Cut Flower Company responded nobly to the increased demand. But the local supply was entirely inadequate and outside sources had to be called upon. The display at the receiving vault at Lake View cemetery equaled that of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Guy Bate, wife of the popular East Cleveland florist, had a narrow escape from death by fire on Saturday evening. While trying to extinguish a coal oil lamp it exploded and her clothing caught fire. With rare presence of mind she ran into the yard and plunged into a snow bank, extinguishing the flames. Suffering intense agony from her burns she rushed back into the house and extinguished the fire that had gained considerable headway, thereby saving the lives of her children. Her condition is very critical. The family has the sincere sympathy of the entire craft and best wishes for her speedy recovery. Unfortunately Mr. Bate was absent at the time of the accident and did not learn anything about it until his return later in the evening.

Prices run about as follows: Roses, teas $4 to $8 and $10 for specials; carnations, $2 to $6; valley, $3 to $4; callas, $1.50 per dozen; smilax, 15 cents per string; Paper Whites and Romans, $2 to $4; violets, $1 to $2. Nearly everything is cleaned up daily and more carnations and roses could be sold. Beauty roses are very scarce.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Company has been doing a rattling business since it started. Consignments and shipping trade are increasing right along.

James Wilson is sending in some fine carnations. His Enchantress are magnificent flowers with three foot stems.

Adam Graham and wife have gone south to a more congenial clime for a lengthy stay.

Charles Schmitt is out from his three weeks' sojourn in the hospital.

Fred Aul is on the mend again from his recent attack of typhoid fever.

J. C. Vaughan and L. Vaughan, of Chicago, were recent visitors. ECHO.

DES MOINES, IA.—B. R. Anderson, at one time with W. L. Morris, will leave March 1 for Marshalltown, Ia. He will be head gardener at the Soldiers' Home.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—A fire in the greenhouses of P. R. Quinlan & Company, in West Belden avenue February 10 did $2,500 damage. Over 800 choice palms were destroyed.

SAMUEL S. PENNOCK, 1612-18 Ludlow St. Philadelphia, Feb. 9, 1904.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON, Philadelphia.
Gentlemen:—We have been handling the Vesper carnation for the past two or three years, in fact, ever since it was introduced, and we find it to be one of the best all-around commercial whites on the market to-day. It has a good, stiff stem, is a good keeper, and is a good sized flower. Some of our customers prefer this to any other variety we can send them. They think it is the best keeper and gives them the best satisfaction of any white they are handling. Yours very truly,
SAMUEL S. PENNOCK.

E. C. MARSHALL Florist, Kennett Square, Pa., Feb. 11, 1904.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON, Philadelphia.
Dear Sirs:—It gives me pleasure to state that the 20 plants of Vesper sent me on trial have given excellent results. It has excellent health; an extra long stem; flowers are of the first size and do not hurt. I also find it quite free. Yours truly,
E. C. MARSHALL.

WM. C. SMITH, 61st & Market Sts. Philadelphia, Feb. 1, 1904.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON, Philadelphia.
Dear Sirs:—The Vesper plants that I have here on trial are certainly all that you claim for them. I find that the plants are healthy, free and that the flowers are of the first size, on long, stiff stems. You may book my order for one thousand cuttings to be delivered as soon as ready. Yours very truly, WM. C. SMITH.

what you pay for the advertisement but what the advertisement pays you. It pays to advertise in the American Florist.

Minneapolis.

Lent is again with us and a decline in the cut flower trade is expected. The cuts are increasing daily, and prices will also take a step or two downward. Saturday was a day of good sales, caused by the deaths of several prominent citizens. Social functions of the large order have been at low ebb the past week and decorative stock was at a standstill. American Beauty roses of good stem found ready purchase for funeral occasions. Red roses of all varieties are hard to secure as are the white. Bridesmaid have appeared in quantities. White carnations are limited somewhat, but no decided shortage was experienced in any variety of color. Enchantress and Lawson are holding their own with size, color and keeping qualities of the highest. Violets since Valentine's day have not been in steady demand. Bulbous stock in supply for all calls. Trade in general was good the past seven days.

A call on James Lyles, of Northrup, King and Company's retail store finds preparations going on for a large spring trade. This is one of the most complete seed stores of the northwest and will compare with any in the east. Canary birds and gold fish with accessories are also handled in large quantities.

R. Will & Son are marketing some choice Enchantress, Lawson and Crane carnations; white is not appearing in large numbers with them. Otto Will was ill again from a relapse of his last sickness, but is able to be up once more.

Ted Nagel, who was manager of the downtown store of Nagel & Company, recently sold this part of the business to R. A. Latham, has bought one-half interest in the greenhouse of his father, E. Nagel.

James Souden, of Wm. Donaldson & Company, is as busy as ever with the growing, and some choice stock can be observed as the result of his earnest work.
C. F. R.

Cincinnati.

The advent of Lent was not very encouraging to the florists for it seemed as though the bottom dropped out of the business, until Saturday, when things started off with a rush and have held up very well since, with a very good supply of roses and carnations. It is an easy matter for both wholesaler and retailer to fill orders, and it is a pleasure to announce that no orders are being turned down. There is a slight scarcity of Beauty and Liberty roses but there are some for every order. Lily of the valley is in oversupply, as are nearly all kinds of bulbous stock except callas and Harrisii which bring $1.50 and $1.80 per dozen, respectively. Smilax and asparagus are in good demand, also fern leaves. Violets have dropped twenty-five per cent in price and 75 cents buys 100 good blooms at present.

J. M. Gasser, of Cleveland, O., en route from the south, called on several of the craft in this city. Mr. Gasser said he was somewhat improved in health, and was anxious to get back home as his large business interests required his attention.

Mr. Murphy and Thomas Windram left for Chicago and Joliet Monday night to visit some of the large carnation growers of these two cities. On their return trip will stop off at Lafayette, Ind., to visit Dorner & Sons.

Harry McCullough has returned from Florida very much improved in health.

Life insurance is valuable because it guarantees the outcome.

"Gurney" Heaters

"DORIC" HEATER.

"BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouse: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expense at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

Daddy's Seedling Pink.

A genuine sensation
Is daddy's seedling pink.
All gaze in admiration
On daddy's seedling pink.
From stem rot, rust and spot she's free,
She's everything a pink should be.
All winter she's a sight to see!
Daddy's seedling pink.

Her pedigree's extended—
Daddy's seedling pink.
She's from high blood descended—
Daddy's seedling pink.
She's ten times crossed and intercrossed
Upon a white whose tag was lost:
'Twould never do to count the cost
Of daddy's seedling pink.

She'd scorn to be a burster—
Daddy's seedling pink.
On all soils you can trust her—
Daddy's seedling pink.
Where'er her dazzling petals spread,
All others seem but dull brick red;
Even Lawson bows her haughty head
To daddy's seedling pink.

Four inches she will cover—
Daddy's seedling pink.
Her stem's two feet and one—
Daddy's seedling pink.
From early fall till late in June
She'll be the happy florist's boon;
We'll put her on the market soon—
My daddy's seedling pink.

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING, DETROIT, MICH., MARCH 2-3, 1904.

Chicago Secures Next Convention.

The thirteenth annual meeting of the American Carnation Society was held at Detroit, Mich., March 2-3. In point of attendance, excellence of the exhibition, enthusiasm of delegates and profitable results obtained, the convention must be put down as a red letter event in the annals of this thriving organization. The delegates began to arrive in large adapted for the convenience of a large assemblage.

Wednesday Evening Session.

This was the first scheduled session of the convention. The meeting was called to order by President Rackham, who introduced President Flowerday of the Detroit Florists' Club. The latter extended a hearty welcome to the visiting florists asking them to command the services of all members of the club who would do everything possible to make their stay in Detroit of pleasure and interest. He then introduced Hon. Mayor Maybury, who extended a hearty welcome to the visitors in behalf of the city. He dwelt upon the city's beauty and the hospitality of its citizens. He referred to the nearby city of Mt. Clemens where he said baths could be had and the finest flowers grown. He referred to the pioneer firm of florists, John Breitmeyer's Sons, which had done so much for floriculture during the long life of that firm. He spoke of the wild roses of Michigan of which he had heard so much.

He gave an eloquent tribute to the beauty of flowers and referred feelingly to the kind and generous hearted McKinley, who so loved the carnation.

President Rackham then introduced Wm. Scott, who responded to the mayor's address. He said the society was familiar with the hospitality of Detroit which was learned on the occasion of the S. A. F. meeting here a few years ago. He spoke of the Society of American Florists out of which this great society sprung. At the time the American Carnation Society was organized the carnation was neither prominent nor at all well grown and he claimed the present exhibition the grandest ever yet made.

A cablegram was read from A. Herington from England expressing his regret at not being present. J. H. Dunlop also wired his inability to get to Detroit because of a heavy snow storm. President Rackham then read his address which will be found in another column. E. H. Cushman made a motion to refer the address to a committee of three to report at the next session and E. H.

President-elect James Hartshorne.

numbers on Tuesday and they were directed and admirably entertained by the committees of the Detroit Florists' Club under whose auspices the convention was held. The club members and florists of Detroit shouldered the arduous task and the manner in which the programme was carried out speaks well for the excellency of the arrangements.

The sessions were held in Harmonie Hall, the spacious halls being admirably Cushman, Wm. Scott and Jas. S. Wilson were appointed. Secretary Herr then read his report, which was formally accepted as read. The treasurer's report was next read and formally received. Favorable comment was made on its completeness. President Rackham next referred to the constitution and by-laws under which the society has worked during the past year. He pointed out some of the defects of the present constitution, which is really without by-laws. Mr. Hill made a motion to continue the operation of the present constitution, which was carried.

H. M. Altick reported on the Carnation League. He spoke of the progress being made and said he had sent out ten thousand subscription lists and generous responses were being received. His report was accepted and his committee was continued.

W. N. Rudd's paper was then read, the full text of which will be found in another column. J. F. Sullivan opened the discussion on the subject and cheerfully endorsed all Mr. Rudd said. He emphasized the importance of a press committee which could be relied upon to give reliable data to the daily papers. E. H. Cushman also commended the paper. Lewis Ullrich, of Tiffin, O., said that many exhibits were not properly arranged, referring particularly to collections and citing examples at the present show. Wm. Scott likened the paper to a text book on the subject. He referred to the difficulty of making flower shows self sustaining and said that an effort should be made to associate some society fad with flower shows that they may be more popular. Mr. Rudd was given a vote of thanks.

The report of judges on preliminary certificates was read and adopted, as were the other classes. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society sent a telegram asking for the next meeting at Boston. The Chicago Florists' Club also sent a communication asking for the meeting. Jas. Hartshorne made a motion, which was seconded, to take the meeting to Chicago. E. N. Peirce, of Waltham, Mass., favored Boston, but admitted not being authorized to speak for the state. Wm. Nicholson favored Chicago next year and Boston the year following. Wm. Gammage, of London, Ont., said that Canada would invite the society in 1906. E. Gillett made a motion to close the nominations and to accept Chicago. The motion was carried.

The following names were then placed in nomination for the various offices: For president, James Hartshorne, of Joliet, Ill.; for vice-president, Peter Reinberg, of Chicago, and Wm. Gammage, of London, Ont.; for secretary, A. M. Herr, of Lancaster, Pa.; for treasurer, Fred. Dorner, of Lafayette, Ind. The following were named as directors: William Weber, E. Dailedouze, Flatbush, N. Y.; E. Gillett, J. S. Wilson and J. F. Wilcox. C. W. Ward withdrew.

Before the evening adjournment an invitation was extended by Philip Breitmeyer to the society and visitors to visit the Breitmeyer establishment at Mt. Clemens.

Thursday Morning Session.

The election of officers was first taken up with the following result: President, James Hartshorne; vice-president, William Gammage, who secured twenty-seven votes to Peter Reinberg's twenty-five; secretary, A. M. Herr; treasurer, Fred Dorner, Jr. All of the directors named on the preceding day were elected.

While the counting of the ballots was in progress, J. A. Valentine suggested that the American Rose Society might hold its next convention in the same city and at the same time as the next convention of the American Carnation Society. The chair appointed a committee of three to confer with the officers of that society toward that end.

Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, then read his paper entitled, "The Exhibition of Carnations on Lines Similar to Those of the Chrysanthemum Society." H. M. Altick opened the discussion on the paper and heartily endorsed it. W. N. Rudd said it was impracticable to set the society's seal of actual commercial value on a variety when it appeared, formally offered to the trade. He deplored any attempt to adopt drastic measures to regulate the dissemination of novelties in carnations. C. W. Ward, in discussing it, said that conditions varied so much it is impossible for one man or society to determine for all localities the exact commercial value of novelties. He endorsed the ideas of Mr. Rudd on the subject. J. A. Valentine said that no one was obliged to buy a novelty immediately on its first appearance, and advised some to wait awhile and let the other fellow try a shot at it. Mr. Ward, resuming, said a grower should pay more attention to the growing of a variety and not so much to the acquisition of untried varieties. He said Mr. Valentine's suggestion to let the other fellow buy first was a good one, and that it was not practical to put into operation an ironclad system or method of determining precisely the value of a variety. E. N. Peirce, of Waltham, Mass., said he had a great deal of confidence in the seal of the society; a variety grown in two different locations often showed a great difference in the results; the disseminator who was lucky enough to get a certificate conveyed many times a false standard of the merit of varieties taking such premiums or certificates. A. F. J. Baur commented on the same lines of thought. E. G. Hill said all should buy all new varieties (humorously), and referred to Mr. Altick's idea of giving a certificate to a variety on its appearance the second and third day after being staged. J. A. Valentine moved that a vote be given Mr. Scott for his able paper. Carried.

REPORT ON PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Your committee makes the following recommendations: First, that the certificated varieties intended for dissemination in the following year be sent to localities for trial as the board of directors may direct, under proper restrictions; reports of such trials should be made to the secretary of the American Carnation Society by the individual grower, or a committee of a local club. Second, we recognize the value of the suggestion to curtail the list of varieties as now printed in our reports, and believe that some action is desirable, and would recommend that the board of directors take the matter up and see if this cannot be accomplished. Third, that the value of the carnation as a pot plant should be recognized and encouraged, and we suggest to this end that a special exhibition class be created, and that carnationists be urged to develop varieties suitable for pot culture.

ROSES EXHIBITED AT THE DETROIT CONVENTION OF THE AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY BY PETER REINBERG, CHICAGO.

E. H. CUSHMAN,
WILLIAM SCOTT,
J. S. WILSON.

A motion to adopt the report failed to carry, and an amendment by Mr. Rudd prevailed to adopt only that portion referring to pot plants.

C. W. Ward wanted the date of the annual meeting and exhibition put back where it was, earlier in the season. Secretary Herr then stated that he agreed with him, because many had told him they would not go to the meeting because they had already bought their new varieties and had not so much interest in it at such a late date. Wm. Scott said he liked the later date, but said it should be left largely to the large growers, who really made our exhibitions. Mrs. Vesey said the present date would be good for the standard varieties, but not so good for seedlings. E. Gillett moved to put it back to the original date. After much discussion it was decided to make that recommendation, leaving the definite date, however, with the directors and the Chicago Florists' Club.

Mr. Rudd then spoke of the matter of judging, and moved that three men should be elected to act as regular judges for the society, and that the traveling expenses or a part thereof should be defrayed by the society. A committee was then appointed to name nine persons from whom the three judges should be elected. The following were named as candidates: W. N. Rudd, Wm. Nicholson, E. Dailedouze, J. A. Valentine, Fred Dörner, R. Witterstaetter, E. Buettner, Wm. Scott and A. Graham. Of these the following were then elected to serve as official judges: W. N. Rudd, three years; Wm. Scott, two years; Wm. Nicholson, one year.

The chair then appointed Messrs. J. A. Valentine, E. G. Hill and E. Dailedouze to consider the matter of affiliating with the American Rose Society at the next annual convention. Messrs. Wm. Scott, A. Baur and Wm. Weber were appointed to constitute the committee on final resolutions.

A question asking for the best five varieties for outside summer blooming was referred to C. H. Allen, Wm. Scott and Peter Fisher.

The matter of the incomplete by-laws was considered. A question was raised because of the present indefinite time at which the terms of new officers take effect. May 1 after the election was fixed as the inauguration day, on motion of Wm. Scott.

At the complimentary banquet in the evening, tendered by the Detroit Florists' Club, President Flowerday presided as toastmaster and responses were made to toasts as follows: "Our Ex-Presidents," W. N. Rudd; "Carnations, Roses and Chrysanthemums, Their Friends and Admirers," E. G. Hill; "The Dominion of Canada," Wm. Gammage; "Has It Ever Occurred to You?" Lewis Ullrich; "Society of American Florists," President Breitmeyer; "Flowers and the Sick," Dr. E. B. Smith; "Carnation League," H. M. Altick; "The Carnation in the Past," Geo. A. Rackham. Alexander Wallace sang some selections and remarks were made by President-elect Hartshorne and Theo. Wirth.

President Rackham's Address.

Were I a believer in signs or omens I should be fearful of the success of this meeting, for it is the thirteenth convention of our beloved society, but I cannot doubt when I look at this large body of enthusiastic carnation growers that this will be the blue ribbon meeting of the society. I ask you as a personal favor to myself and the local club, to help make it so by attending the business meetings and taking part in any matters of interest to the society, for all meetings of any organization are dependent upon the help or the lack of interest of its members for their success or failure, and it is for you to make this meeting one of profit and benefit to each and every member if you will.

We are gathered together for the purpose of considering matters of interest to the members of this body, financially, educationally and socially. In a financial sense, the introducers of new varieties have come to exhibit the results of their patience and skill for your approval, and to sell as many rooted cuttings as possible. The growers have come to inspect, find fault with, compare, criticise and buy as many as they feel they can afford to risk trying. And right here I wish to quote from the minutes of the first meeting of the society of Philadelphia, 1891 and 1892, one of the paragraphs in the report of the committee composed of Edwin Lonsdale, Wm. Swayne, C. W. Ward, C. J. Pennock, and Wm. Scott, upon one of the objects of the society, namely: To submit all new varieties to a test committee of practical and successful growers, to be located in different sections of the country. Now I believe if that was a good object then, it is one at present, and I do think no variety should be eligible for either a certificate or registration which has not been shown at least three times during the season, say October, January and April, for two years before such a committee. As we are to have a paper on this subject I will leave the matter in your hands with another quotation by the committee on awards, composed of John Westcott, Robt. Kift and H. H. Battles. "We are confident that the time is not far distant when the American Carnation Society will endorse certain new varieties." This once done the buyer need have no doubts about the merits of that variety, and I venture to say if that were done in some honest and satisfactory way that our membership would be increased 100 per cent within two years. It is not the distributor that buys 20,000, 30,000 and 40,000 lots of new carnations who suffers by the failure of success of the variety, but the one who buys 100, 250 or 1,000 of them from the distributor. To me the matter seems a serious one and very difficult of solution. I will again quote from the proceedings of the society. Ex-President Nicholson in his address at Philadelphia said: "There is one thing that I think we ought to encourage as much as we can. People who have seedlings of merit and are thinking of disseminating them should send a few plants to prominent growers in the different parts of the country for trial, then people could see them growing without so great an expense." This I am glad to say is being done to some extent but not as largely as it should be.

In the matter of registration and certifying of new varieties, I find that of twenty varieties registered in 1897 and 1898, there is not one now under cultivation, and of twelve that received preliminary certificates of merit, there are but two, Lawson and G. H. Crane, now grown. Of the list in 1900 comprising those that received the three year certificates (twelve) only two are now grown, viz.: Estelle and Prosperity, and in another year these will be classed among the has beens. The registered ones number twenty-nine and but one, Queen Louise is now grown. In 1901 we find thirty-six varieties registered with but eight that are considered worth growing. In 1902 and 1903 we have thirty-two registered, with but nine that are thought good enough for sale. The list of names of varieties, February 1, 1899, only four years ago, gives the grand total at that time of 726, and it would seem to me that if worthless varieties are all registered and given certificates of merit, that in the near future it will tax the brain of originators of really meritorious varieties to find suitable names for the products of their skill.

From an educational point of view one who has not had the opportunity and pleasure of reading the proceedings of the twelve meetings which this society has held can have no conception of the work of the society in the past. Papers have been read and discussions had upon every subject in connection with the carnation, and such results have been obtained through the study and experience of the workers of this body that we can truthfully say it pays to be a member of the American Carnation Society. In the minutes of the first meeting, 1892, I find this paragraph: "First class blooms will readily sell for 75 cents to $1 per hundred at any time, and during seasons of particular demand $2.50 to $3 is frequently obtained." (Note the difference). At the present time first-class flowers readily sell for $2.50 to $3 per hundred and during seasons of particular demand from $6 to $12. This change has been brought about through the introduction of better varieties, through better methods of growing gained by study and interchange of experience and through the making of the carnation more popular by exhibitions throughout the country, especially those of the American Carnation Society. We still have a great work to do, and one of the most important, I believe, is to produce and popularize the carnation as a pot plant. What could be more beautiful than a short stocky carnation plant with from twenty-five to fifty open flowers of the shade of Flamingo or Enchantress for Christmas, that in an 8-inch pot would retail from $2 to $5! Our growers of new varieties will do well to give a portion of their time and skill to the finding of a variety that will produce such a plant.

Edwin Lonsdale in his address to the society at New York on November 4, 1891, said: "The cultivation of the carnation as a pot plant is sadly neglected. To inaugurate a successful carnation exhibition we must have well grown specimen plants." Thomas Cartledge of Philadelphia said at Pittsburg, February, 1893, in a paper entitled "A Retailer's View": "Good pot plants for spring sales have been totally neglected, almost forgotten in the rush to grow cut flowers. We used to grow plants well in 4 and 5-inch pots, and they always sold. I do not remember any plant that was more attractive or sold better." The season that is past has been a hard one for the grower for various reasons, but we are all looking for better in the future. When we have secured Fiancee,

THREE DISTINGUISHED CARNATION MEN AND THEIR RECENT ACHIEVEMENTS.

Flamingo, Reliance, The Belle, Lady Bountiful, Indianapolis and Albatross, and several other best commercial carnations, the life of the carnation grower will no doubt be one of joy and a continued round of pleasure.

Now to turn from labor to refreshment and consider our meeting socially. It is a well known fact that all work and no play becomes monotonous and tiresome, but we in the business know that times of play are few and far between. Let us improve the present in greeting old friends and making new ones; let us be free with one another and gather round the festal board, showing the sunny side of our natures in relaxation from the cares and worry of the daily grind; let us forget for a portion of the time at least, stem rot, aphids, thrips and all kindred pests and troubles.

In conclusion I wish to remind the society that it is now without by-laws (except those adopted by the directors at Milwaukee regarding exhibits) and I can not see how our secretary can register new varieties, collect a fee for so doing, etc. We are a new society, old things have passed away, and we are an incorporated body working under a new constitution. I hope that you may all have a good time and feel well repaid for coming to the meeting at Detroit.

Secretary Herr's Report.

Your secretary reports having issued the proceedings of the Brooklyn meeting after considerable delay, caused by our stenographer getting sick and losing part of his manuscript. He also reports that, aside from the few years that Mr. Wallace kindly did this work, there always has been trouble, and that imperfect reports of the proceedings were a result. It being impossible to get a stenographer who was acquainted with our floral terms, and being a new one each year, the names of speakers were hopelessly confused. Therefore your secretary strongly recommends the appointment of a permanent stenographer, on the same lines as the one employed by the Society of American Florists. The reports of our meetings are a permanent and valuable contribution to carnation literature, and should not be made secondary to any other part of the work.

There were two meetings held by the board of directors, the first in Detroit, May 6, 1903, at which the preliminary premium list was adopted and afterward printed and sent to all the members. A second meeting was held in Milwaukee, August 18, 1903, at which papers were selected, writers assigned for the same, and some additions made to the premium list. The minutes of these meetings are here and may be read if desired. They will, of course, be in full in our annual report. The regular premium list was mailed to all members early in February, purposely a bit late, so that the matter of entries, etc., would not be set aside and forgotten, and a final postal card reminder February 22. An attempt was made to get reports from the various shows giving the merits and defects of the carnations shown throughout the country, so that a summary could be made covering the whole season. Your secretary wrote to members of the society in various sections where such shows were being held, also to the different secretaries of clubs holding such shows. About fifty letters were written, and the responses secured numbered three, one from your president, one from W. N. Rudd, and one from your secretary, so that this seems to be a matter of "love's labor lost," and we are left to rely on the trade papers for our information.

The matter of advertising in the premium list, which is a very necessary source of income to the society, is not quite up to the mark this season, in spite of the fact that strenuous efforts were made to increase this feature. In addition to the regular notice to the members over a hundred personal letters were written to advertisers of our and kindred products. There should be some method adopted whereby the society would have a larger and more permanent income than that derived from its limited membership and advertising. Our membership is constantly changing, and while we are adding a few each year over what we lose, we are hardly gaining enough to meet the increased demands upon our income. The carnation is forging ahead very fast, and we need to give work and serious thought to our society so that it keeps up with the same rate of increase.

Report of the Judges.

The judges in the various classes were as follows:

Classes A, B and C—Frank Holznagle, Geo. Bayer and Jno. Hartje.
Certificate of Merit—E. H. Beard, Phil. Hauswirth and Wm. Nicholson.

Classes D to O and Sweepstakes—W. N. Rudd, E. H. Cushman and Lewis Ullrich.

The awards made at the meeting were as follows:

CLASS A—ONE HUNDRED BLOOMS.

White.—Chicago Carnation Company, Joliet, Ill., first, with Alba; F. Dorner & Sons Company, Lafayette, Ind., second, with Lady Bountiful.

Daybreak pink.—W. K. Partridge, Cincinnati, O., first, with Enchantress; C. W. Ward, Queens, L. I., second, with Enchantress.

Lawson pink.—Chicago Carnation Company first, with Lawson; F. Dorner & Sons Company second, with Eclipse.

Scott shade of pink.—Cottage Gardens, Queens, L. I., first, with Ethel Ward; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind., second, with No. 4.

Scarlet.—R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, O., first, with The Cardinal; Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill., second, with Adonis.

Crimson.—Cottage Gardens first, with The President; Chicago Carnation Company second, with Harlowarden.

Yellow variegated.—Chicago Carnation Company first, with Dorothy Whitney; Bassett & Washburn second, with Gold Nugget.

White variegated.—Cottage Gardens first, with Judge Hinsdale; W. J. & M. S. Vesey second, with No. 8.

Any other color.—Chicago Carnation Company first, with Prosperity; J. D. Thompson Carnation Company, Joliet, Ill., second, with Prosperity.

CLASS B—FIFTY BLOOMS.

White.—Jno. Breitmeyer's Sons, Mt. Clemens, Mich., first, with Gov. Lowndes, The E. G. Hill Company, Richmond, Ind.; second, with Gov. Wolcott.

Daybreak pink.—Chicago Carnation Company first, with Enchantress; Jno. Breitmeyer's Sons second, with Enchantress.

Lawson pink.—W. J. & M. S. Vesey first, with Lawson; Chicago Carnation Company second, with Lawson.

Scott shade of pink.—H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., first, with Genevieve Lord; Jno. Breitmeyer's Sons second, with Cressbrook.

Scarlet.—R. Witterstaetter first, with Adonis; H. Weber & Sons second, with Adonis.

Crimson.—Jno. Breitmeyer's Sons first, with Harlowarden; H. Weber & Sons second, with Harlowarden.

Yellow variegated.—F. Dorner & Sons Company first, with Dorothy Whitney; no second.

White variegated.—F. Dorner & Sons Company first, with Stella; no second.

Any other color.—Chicago Carnation Company first, with Prosperity; C. H. Kunzman, Louisville, Ky., second, with Prosperity.

CLASS C—TWENTY-FIVE BLOOMS.

White.—H. Weber & Sons first, with Norway; J. D. Thompson Carnation Company second, with Gov. Wolcott.

Scarlet.—H. Weber & Sons first, with Estelle; J. D. Thompson Carnation Company second, with Estelle.

Any other color.—Chicago Carnation Company first, with Prosperity; no second.

SPECIAL PREMIUMS—CLASS D.

Jno. Breitmeyer's Sons' prize of $50 for best collection of from fifty to 100 blooms of ten to fifteen varieties arranged for effect, Chicago Carnation Company; second, $30, J. D. Thompson Carnation Company.

CLASS G.

Silver cup for best 200 blooms, one variety, any color, the E. G. Hill Company, with Adonis.

CLASS H.

Best collection not less than twenty-five blooms, no two of same variety, named and numbered, F. Dorner & Sons Company; second, H. Weber & Sons.

CLASS J.

"Enchantress challenge cup," offered by Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., and J. D. Thompson Carnation Company for best one hundred blooms of Enchantress, W. K. Partridge.

CLASS K.

Chicago Carnation Company's prize of $15 for best 100 blooms of Harlowarden competing in Class A, H. Weber & Sons; prize for fifty blooms not awarded.

CLASS L.

Prize of $25 offered by J. A. Valentine of Park Floral Company, Denver, for best blooms of undissected seedling shown by originator, divided by R. Witterstaetter, with 1000 A, and Dailedouze Brothers, Brooklyn, N. Y., with No. 144.

CLASS M.

Silver cup offered by Foley Manufacturing Company, Chicago, Ill., for best vase of undissected Michigan seedling, Jno. A. Frueh, Saginaw, Mich., with No. 115.

CLASS N.

Lawson gold medal, best 100 blooms, any variety, Chicago Carnation Company with Fiancee.

Lawson silver medal for second best 100 blooms, any variety, H. Weber & Sons, Gov. Lowndes.

CLASS O.

S. A. F. silver medal for best fifty blooms of undissected variety, R. Witterstaetter with The Cardinal.

SWEEPSTAKES.

Best vase in Class A, Bassett & Washburn with Lawson.

Best vase in Class B, Jno. Breitmeyer's Sons with Gov. Lowndes.

CERTIFICATES.

Preliminary certificate.—Cottage Gardens, No. 303, score 92 points.

Certificate of Merit.—Chas. Knopf, Richmond, Ind., Richmond Gem, score 85 points.

Jerome A. Suydam, Brooklyn, N. Y., Alarm, score 82 points.

John Murchie, Sharon, Pa., Fred Burke, score 88 points.

W. N. Rudd, Chicago, Ill., Phyllis, in poor condition.

J. E. Krayer, Yorkston, score 70 points.

Cottage Gardens, Lieut. Peary, score 85 points.

Jno. E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., No. 77, score 69 points; Juno, score 87 points; Star of Bethlehem, in poor condition.

R. Witterstaetter, Lillian May, score 88 points.

H. Weber & Sons, New Daybreak, score 80 points.

Geo. Guignet, Miss Helen Bosler, in poor condition.

Swan Peterson, No. 12, score 70 points; No. 9, score 68 points.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey, No. 8, score 78 points; No. 4, score 82 points.

W. J. Palmer & Son, Lancaster, N. Y., Red Lawson, score 87 points.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

Peter Reinberg, of Chicago, showed a vase of Chatenay and a vase of Uncle John roses, all magnificent specimens.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, O., made an exhibit of well grown plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and Primula obconica, the latter of two colors, lavender and magenta.

Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., showed four vases of Princess of Wales violets, also five vases of sweet peas, of the varieties Mont Blanc and Blanche Ferry.

Heller Brothers, New Castle, Ind.—Vase of Gen. MacArthur rose.

August Von Boeselager, Mt. Clemens, Mich.—Sweet peas, violets (Marie Louise) and one vase each Morning Glory and Lawson carnations.

H. R. Carlton, Willoughby, Ohio.—Single violet (Governor Herrick) richer in color than Princess of Wales.

John Breitmeyer's Sons.—Vase of their new rose, La Detroit.

Geo. Hopp, Grand Rapids, Mich.—Two vases of violets.

HILL'S VASE OF CARNATION ADONIS AT THE DETROIT CONVENTION.

Chris. R. Lund, Wausau, Wis., showed a "New Idea" carnation support.
John Morehead.—Steam trap.

Jottings.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Company, of Joliet, Ill., sent 4,000 blooms, but unfortunately most of them went to sleep fifteen minutes after they were taken out of the boxes and consequently they were out of the running.

As expected, The Cardinal won in the 100 scarlet class. The consensus of opinion is that it is a great carnation with a bright future.

The Visitors.

The attendance was unusually large and among those present we noted the following:

Chicago: Geo. Asmus, A. Beuson, L. Coatsworth, P. J. Foley, Phil. J. Hauswirth, J. E. Jensen, Leonard Kill, A. Lang, J. C. Moninger Company, W. L. Palinsky, Peter Reinberg, W. N. Rudd, W. J. Smyth, J. D. Thompson, C. L. Washburn, N. Wietor, J. S. Wilson, Adam Zender.

President-Elect James Hartshorne.

James Hartshorne, president elect of the American Carnation Society, needs no introduction to our readers. He is well known throughout the country and has done much to develop his favorite flower. He has raised many meritorious carnations which are known throughout the country. Among them we find Marshall Field, variegated; Mrs. Potter Palmer, scarlet; Mrs. Higinbotham, pink; Harlowarden, maroon, and Crusader, scarlet. He was in a measure instrumental in developing the fame of Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson, Peter Fisher's well known product. Mr. Hartshorne has now secured a large interest in Richard Witterstaetter's Cardinal, winner of the first prize for best 100 scarlet at the Detroit meeting, and acquired the splendid Fiancee, winner of the gold medal, some time ago from the Fred Dorner & Sons Company, of Lafayette, Ind. He has not missed a meeting of the American Carnation Society since the Chicago meeting in 1898. Some particulars of his career appeared in our issue of January 28, 1899, and they are reproduced herewith as follows:

"Mr. Hartshorne was born in Shropshire, England, thirty years ago. He came to America in 1888, locating at Boston, but going shortly to Exeter, N. H., to become gardener to the late Charles Burley. In 1892 Mr. Hartshorne came to Chicago with a view of participating in the floricultural work at the World's Fair, but he was tendered an excellent offer by John C. Ure at Argyle Park, where his success with carnations did much to enhance the already excellent reputation of that establishment. Two years ago Mr. Hartshorne became head gardener to H. N. Higinbotham, who has a fine residence on Michigan avenue in Chicago and an estate of 1500 acres just outside of Joliet. It was Mr. Hartshorne's recognized proficiency as a carnation grower which led to the organization of the Chicago Carnation Company and the construction of its model range of houses upon the Higginbotham property. Mr. Hartshorne is a member of the Society of American Florists, the American Carnation Society, the Chicago Horticultural Society and the Chicago Florists' Club and takes an active interest in the work of each." See portrait page 201.

The Management of Exhibitions.

BY W. N. RUDD, MOUNT GREENWOOD, ILL.

The manager of a horticultural exhibition, especially one intended for the general public, must be prepared to expend all his energies, both of brain and muscle; he must be prepared to crowd two working days into every twenty-four hours; he must be firm and determined, yet good natured and diplomatic, and above all he must be able to think and act quickly under unforeseen difficulties, and perhaps amid a storm of abuse. Given a man with the proper qualifications, there is still, generally, the lack of experience on his part and inability to secure experienced assistants. It is customary to divide the work of exploiting and holding an exhibition among various committees, and this is an excellent method if the proper men can be placed on the committees and the proper co-ordination secured and enthusiasm developed among them. The manager should, however, be in constant touch with all the committees and have an intimate acquaintance with the work they are doing.

The Premium List.—After deciding to hold an exhibition, the first thing to be done is to issue a premium list. A preliminary premium list should be gotten out as early as possible—a year in advance will be none too early. Of course the extent of the list and the size of the premiums will be governed by the amount of money available. Local firms and individuals can generally be induced to subscribe liberally towards the premiums. In order to secure a well balanced exhibit it is advisable to block out the list first and then solicit the prospective donors to assume the payment of various premiums therein rather than to offer special premiums. It should be borne in mind that the exhibition is held to interest the public and the list must be designed to secure a comprehensive and attractive exhibit. After this, and almost of equal importance, the list must be so arranged as to attract the exhibitor. It is unfortunate, but true, that very few florists can be made to see what an immense incentive an exhibition is to the buying public. Every exhibition makes new buyers and makes old buyers purchase more frequently and pay higher prices for better goods. Added to the general increase of sales and prices in the local market is the direct advertising value to the grower of a good plant or vase of flowers, or to the store man exhibiting an artistic arrangement. While something can be done in the way of missionary work, it must be admitted that the prizes must be made as large as possible in order to appeal to a large proportion of the growers, and—let me whisper it—a still larger proportion of the store men. To secure quantity and variety a certain number of premiums for "collections" are necessary, but there are but few growers who can compete in such classes and the bulk of the premium money should be offered for specific things. When the individual premiums are not so large as might be desired sweepstakes, open to the winners in several other classes, are attractive. Provision should be made for gratuities to exhibits not coming within the classified list premiums. A final premium list containing rules, dates, location of exhibition, addresses, miscellaneous information and the revised and numbered premiums should be mailed at least two weeks before the exhibition. The premiums should be grouped under the day and date on which they are to be staged; and should be numbered consecutively as Class 1, Class 2, etc. Repeating the same numbers under the different divisions or grand classes must be condemned, as it leads to confusion and error. The final list may be arranged to be used as a programme for the public, but a special programme giving the musical numbers for each day, as well as the premiums, is better and can generally be paid for by the advertising in it.

Advertising.—As soon as it is decided to hold an exhibition the press should be notified and short notes, more or less directly bearing on the show, should appear at intervals. About three weeks before the opening day the "strenuous" advertising work should be done. The press should be supplied with photographs and material for reading notices. This work should culminate on the Sunday before the opening day. If the dates have been so arranged that the exhibition does not immediately precede some event of overshadowing importance, such as a political convention, or—sad to relate—the horse show, with tact and hustle on the part of the advertising committee the newspapers can be induced to give liberal space. Banners across the street, street car "ads," large bill board posters and small posters in shop windows, restaurants, hotels and public places are all good. On the evening before the opening day an effort should be made to induce the reporters and photographers for the morning papers to be present and prepare illustrated "write-ups." The afternoon papers on the opening day will follow with pictures and descriptions of the completed show and the exhibits and a part of the awards. An effort should be made each day to reserve part of the awards to be first published by the morning papers on the following day. A press committee should be appointed, some member of which should be present at all times while the show is open to talk with and explain the exhibits to the reporters. The best men available should be detailed for this purpose, as the amount of space given in the papers will largely depend on their work. Arrangements should be made for quickly copying and manifolding the awards, which should be sent direct to each paper by a trustworthy messenger. A first-class press agent will be well worth his hire, but he must be kept in close touch with some one well posted on horticultural subjects, or the information given to the public will be weird and wonderful. The newspaper man or press agent simply cannot spell botanical names.

Getting Exhibits.—As soon as the premium list is cut the manager should by personal visits and personal letters begin "drumming" up exhibits and keep at it until the show opens.

Admissions—The Treasurer.—It possible a treasurer should be appointed who will be responsible for the ticket taker and seller and the handling of all money. Small bills, after receiving the O. K. of the manager or proper committeeman, can be paid by the ticket seller, the receipted bill being retained and turned in at night as cash, larger items being, of course, paid by check in the usual way. The professional ticket seller and ticket taker are to be shunned. While the writer does not intimate that all are dishonest, he has met among them some of the most finished rascals upon the face of the earth and the non-professional show man is a lamb in their hands. A convenient form of ticket is that printed in a continuous strip and notched so as to be torn off readily. The tickets are numbered consecutively. Each strip con-taing 1,000 is coiled and sealed. The tickets should be obtained from a firm making a specialty of such work, and preferably located in another city to avoid leakage in the press room. The ticket seller should receipt for tickets received in the morning and at night return all unsold tickets with a written statement of sales and cash to balance. A locked box should be provided for the ticket taker in which to deposit tickets. In closing at night the treasurer should examine and count all tickets in the box and personally see that they are destroyed. Passes and free tickets should be issued by the treasurer on the written order of the proper persons or committees. The press must be taken care of, members of the society are generally admitted free and exhibitors are entitled to free admission, but the issuance of free tickets should be hedged around with all possible difficulties, as the deadhead list is often responsible for a large part of the almost universal deficits which result from horticultural exhibitions. When receiving cash at night at least two trustworthy persons should remain with the treasurer and accompany him until the funds are put in a safe place.

The Secretary.—An incompetent secretary or a poor system can create a deal of trouble and arouse a deal of criticism. The writer prefers what may be called the De La Mare system of exhibition accounting as being simple, speedy and accurate. It consists of an exhibitors' book, a class book, a judges' book, entry cards and envelopes for them and a set of gummed labels of different colors, "1st Premium," "2nd Premium," etc., to be attached to the entry cards by the judges as they complete each class.

The Exhibitors' Book.—This has a large leaf, about cap size. At the top appears the name of one exhibitor and his entry number. In a column at the left appear the numbers of all the classes in which he is entered. This is copied from his entry blank. In the middle space is entered on the line with each class number, after the judges have passed on the class, the premium won, as "first," "second," etc., and in the right hand column, which is ruled for dollars and cents, is entered the amount of the prize, so that when all are entered a footing of that column will give the total amount of his winning.

The Class Book.—This is similar to the exhibitor's book except that each page is devoted to one class, and in the left hand column are written the entry numbers of all persons competing in the class. In the middle column is written the prize won and at the right the amount. The footing of each page will give the total awarded under the class in question, and it is evident that the total footings of the class book and the exhibitors' book must agree, thus making an excellent check. All entries in both books should be made from the exhibitors' entry blank and should be carefully checked over to insure absolute accuracy. It is well to enter the amounts of each premium offered at the head of the page of its class.

The Judges' Books.—These are smaller and have perforated pages to be duplicated by carbon. At the top appears the class number and the total number of entries in the class, and below are written the awards as made, giving both entry number and exhibitor's name. In use, an assistant will remove the envelopes from the exhibition cards and affix the pasters as instructed by the judges and the secretary or a trustworthy assistant, who should accompany the judges, having the carbon sheet in position, will write in the awards. Each judge will then in turn take the book, see that the class number is correct and that he has examined the total number of exhibits entered and see that the names and entry number of the prize winners are properly entered under the prize won, signing his initials. This method, if properly carried out, gives an almost absolute guarantee against errors, and as this is the most vital part of the bookkeeping, this method should never under any circumstances be varied from. As fast as a class is judged the duplicate sheet may be torn out and sent to the press committee, avoiding vexatious delay to the reporters, and assuring them an accurate list, while a complete and certified list of awards remains in the book.

The Exhibition Cards.—These have the class number, the name of the class and the exhibitor's number and name. They should be enclosed in an unsealed envelope bearing on the outside nothing but the class number. It is a common mistake to place the entry on the envelope also. This is wrong, as after opening a few envelopes the judges will know the names, and while a knowledge of the exhibitors' names will rarely influence a judge, he much prefers not to know them until the decision is made. These cards will all be made ready in advance and tied in bundles with each exhibitor's name attached to his bundle. These are delivered to the exhibitor and attached by him to his exhibits. Here, as everywhere, checking, preferably by a second person, is the order of the day. There must be no mistakes. After the awards are all made a voucher is to be made for each winner, showing in detail and in total the amounts won, which voucher will go to the treasurer for payment.

The Judges.—Three judges are commonly invited to act, although the writer believes one judge is much better. One man, realizing that the burden is on him alone, will be much more likely to exercise greater care than if he can shift two-thirds of the blame on his "wicked partners." If possible, at least two of the judges should be residents of a distant locality. In close decisions the work of such judges is much better received by the exhibitors than that of local men and charges of favoritism are much less apt to be made. In general a grower is a better judge of plants and flowers than a retail man, and the store man is a much better judge of artistic arrangements than the grower. It should be borne in mind, however, that, over and above all, the necessary quality in a judge is the judicial temperament. There are many first-class growers having wide knowledge of plants and flowers who are absolutely unfitted to act as judges.

Men who have had experience as judges are always to be preferred. Of course a judge's absolute honesty must be beyond question. A committee of ladies selected to judge a limited number of exhibits will often add to the public interest.

Protests Against Awards.—All protests should be filed in writing over signature, and should state in full the grounds for protest and should be filed at once. The protest should at once be placed before the proper committee who will first call in the judges and learn their grounds for making the award, after the grounds of the protest are made known to them. They should be given a chance to rejudge, if they desire, after which the committee may examine the exhibits and confirm or alter the awards as may seem best.

The Examining Committee.—The judges, especially in a large exhibition, should not be required to examine exhibits, count blooms, or otherwise be responsible for compliance with rules. It wastes their time and distracts their attention from their proper work. A properly selected examining committee should precede them. They should count all exhibits requiring a specified number and relentlessly reject any exhibit which, by overplus, or shortage, or in any other way does not absolutely and literally comply with the rules. It is not fair to the man who faithfully lives up to the rules to allow another who, whether by accident or design, seeks to evade them, to compete with him. Any rule which can not be enforced must be struck from the list, while those retained must be vigorously enforced. The examining committee will note grounds for rejection on the cards of all exhibits thrown out and will O. K. the envelopes of all those accepted.

The Entries.—An entry blank should be enclosed with each final premium list, and entry should be made on this by number only. Entries should be closed at a certain time before the classes are to be staged, in order to allow the secretary to get his work in hand and to enable the manager to arrange proper space, tables and vases. A fine should be assessed against every exhibitor failing to stage an exhibit entered, unless it has been declared out, at least by noon of the day before the class is to be staged.

Decorating the Hall.—Some decorating more or less elaborate will be needed. As there are many florists in nearly all cities who are experts at this work, the writer need not enter into minute details. It should be borne in mind, however, that the decorations are simply a background to set off the flowers and plants and should be subordinated to that purpose. Flags, bunting, paper flowers, Japanese lanterns, and the like, are, in most cases, better excluded. Among greens, the wild smilax and evergreen boughs are pre-eminently the thing. Perhaps there is no more effective background for cut flowers, especially chrysanthemums, than the dull colored autumn foliage of the white oak. The brilliant scarlet and yellow tints of maple foliage are not so good in large masses. Evergreen trees can be used where there is a scarcity of palm groups and for screens Spanish moss is effective, but expensive. Cornstalks may often be used to good advantage. Wild smilax may be used to drape tables and twine around cut flower vases, thus relieving what is frequently an ugly blotch in an otherwise beautiful picture. The decoration should be started as early as possible and finished and debris removed before the exhibits begin to arrive.

Installation.—The problem of installation is greatly simplified where space is sold, as the hall can be mapped and the exhibitor can be trusted to fill the space he has paid for. With such exhibitions, however, this article does not largely deal. In public exhibitions where so much depends on the general appearance this plan can not be pursued. The writer has learned by dear experience that from the average exhibitor no adequate idea of the extent of his exhibit can be had. He has seen a promised carload of plants dwindle to a small express wagon load, and a small group expanded to a moving van full at the last moment. The manager must see the plants in hand shortly before the show by as many exhibitors as possible and get as complete an idea as possible of the size, quantity, and character of them; he must study his hall frequently and carefully in connection with the knowledge he has gained of the exhibits and sketch out a skeleton of the picture he wishes to create, locating his prominent groups. He will then endeavor to induce as many as possible of the dependable exhibitors who have the material and the skill in arranging to meet him at the hall one by one (never two at a time) and endeavor to induce each to accept and fill the space which he—the manager—wishes filled. This requires diplomacy, but can generally be done. The cut flower tables must then be located, also the space for table decorations or other large decorative work. These, especially the table decorations, are best located in a separate room, if possible, although there must be a goodly quantity of color in the main hall. The rest must be left until the exhibits arrive and the manager can size them up and place them where the best effect will be produced. In this process the manager must coax and wheedle, browbeat and bully, perhaps "cuss" a little, and at last possibly demonstrate that he is the czar of all the Russias for this day and date.

At this time there must be one "boss" and there must be no appeal from his decisions. He must demonstrate that he is fair, but at the same time must make it emphatically known that the whim of no one exhibitor is to be allowed to injure the effect of the display as an artistic whole. Let him explain and argue, if there is time, but if not let him command and see that his commands are obeyed. Of course the arrangement of exhibits in classes for judging and their rearrangement before the public is admitted is desirable, but in large exhibitions, where the hall rental amounts to many hundreds of dollars per day, this can not be done. Well in advance of the work the necessary men will have been engaged and instructed. Tables, stands, vases, paper, hammers, wire, ladders, water cans and all the other thousand and one requisites will have been provided, placed in convenient location and put in charge of a trustworthy man. From the time the exhibits begin to arrive until the doors are opened to the public the manager must be in the hall. He must be prepared for every conceivable accident and many that are not conceivable. A time should be set at which no more exhibits or material shall enter the hall and he must have a man at the door who will be proof against entreaty, bull-doing or physical force. Another hour should be set at which all must be ready and he should begin early and notify all at frequent intervals that the rule will be enforced. It is not fair to the public to admit them to a half-staged exhibition after they have paid to see a finished one and it is not fair to the exhibitor who is on time to have his display stand and possibly suffer to help out the delinquents.

Maintenance.—When the first day's exhibit has been installed half the battle is won, but untiring effort and unceasing watchfulness are necessary until the last plant is out of the hall after the show is over. Thefts must be guarded against. The public does not realize the value of the material shown, and the stealing of flowers is considered no great crime by many, and besides the public there are often others. Each day the water in vases should be changed, withered flowers removed and stems shortened. At crowded times plants and flowers must be protected from injury. Faded or damaged material must be removed or placed in less prominent positions, and places made for new, fresh, and novel exhibits as they come in.

Dismantling.—This should never be done at night if it can possibly be avoided. The hall should be closed until the next day and the exhibits removed by daylight. Where necessary to dismantle at night, the public should be made to leave before the work is begun, as a general assault by the public and the wrecking of many exhibits is apt to occur at this time. Each exhibitor should be required to identify his men and each should be tagged by a piece of card pinned to his coat and bearing the plainly written name of his employer. A strong guard should be put at the door, no person not properly tagged be allowed to enter and each employe compelled to keep away from all exhibits except that of his employer. These seem drastic regulations, but their observance will save many valuable plants and much mortification to the manager. In packing vases, tools, etc., it will be advisable to number each box plainly and keep a record of its contents in a book provided for the purpose. In conclusion let me say that I devoutly believe there is no town in this broad land where there is a grower of flowers, or a seller of flowers, in which there should not be some kind of a flower show at least once each year, and I believe there is hardly a town in which one might not be easily held if the florists and growers would display a little—a very little—business horse sense.

PALMS AND FERNS.

Variegated Palms and Ferns.

Variegated varieties are not very numerous among either palms or ferns, and as a matter of fact are comparatively rare among palms particularly. There are occasionally found among a large lot of seedling kentias a few plants with more or less variegated foliage, though it is quite an exception to find a plant among them that is constant in the habit of variegation, it being much more common to find that as the plant grows in size and strength the variegation becomes less marked and more irregular until finally leaves are produced that are entirely free of any unusual marking. The best variegated kentia I have seen was a seedling of K. Forsteriana, every leaf of which during the seven or eight years it remained under my observation continued to be evenly marked with narrow yellow lines or stripes, the yellow marking being also quite noticeable down the leafstems. But the specimen in question showed its weakness by its very slow growth, other plants from the same lot of seed being fully twice as large as the variegated one at the end of five years.

We also occasionally find a more or less variegated plant among Kentia Belmoreana, this species apparently producing more freaks in growth than are found in K. Forsteriana, some having white or yellow markings on a portion of the foliage, while others may have pink or red leafstalks, or even dark chocolate stems in some few instances. These freaks, however, have but little value to the commercial grower unless he may find some customer especially interested in gathering together a collection of such curiosities, and as a natural result they are not looked upon with great favor by the trade. Areca lutescens sometimes produces a seedling with variegated leaves, though I have never seen one with evenly marked leaflets, the colorings being more often found in patches, some leaflets being entirely yellow, while others are plain green.

Livistona Chinensis produces striped foliage in small proportion and also that more constant form in which the entire plant is suffused with yellow, the variety known as L. Chinensis aurea, a comparatively rare palm and one that is of more value to a private collection of plants than to the average trade grower. Rhapis flabelliformis variegata is one of the most attractive of variegated palms, and one that retains its variegation quite well, though without careful selection the plants of this palm are quite likely to get a little too much color at times, this resulting in a lack of vitality in the foliage and a consequent loss of the tips of the leaflets. The variegated rhaps is naturally less vigorous than the type and possibly owing to this fact seems to grow better in a slightly higher temperature, a night temperature of 60° being more satisfactory to the variegated form, while the ordinary green rhaps may be safely kept in a night temperature of 50° to 55°. Variegated seedlings appear among the phoenixes at times, but are seldom regular in marking or constant in habit, and thus have but little value to the grower. Caryota urens will also throw a variegated leaf occasionally, streaks and splashes of yellow being the most frequent color variation seen in this species. Some also of the extra-tropical species of palms are found with more or less variegation in the form of small spots on their broad leaves, one example of this character being found in Stevensonia grandifolia, the leaves of which are spotted to a greater or less degree with small orange or yellow dots, and a somewhat similar marking in the form of small yellow spots is found upon the leaves of some of the pritchardias.

Variegated ferns are found in many different species and several genera, the greater number of such variations being probably found among the pterises. One of the best marked examples of this family is the well known and much grown P. argyræa, one of the easiest of ferns to propagate, its spores being produced so freely and germinating so readily, while the characteristic variegation of silver gray down the center of each leaf seems so well fixed that one seldom finds a seedling that has reverted to the type. It may be worthy of note in passing that in order to grow P. argyræa to the best advantage it should be potted in rather a heavy loam, the latter enriched with a moderate proportion of dry cow dung, say about one part in bulk to eight of the soil, and the plants placed in a rather light greenhouse that is kept at about 60° at night, and well provided with water—in short, treated much the same as one would do in order to grow good stocky plants of the Boston fern, and the result would perhaps be a surprise to those growers who have become used to the long stemmed and thin leaved plants of P. argyræa that are so often seen. Pterises of good quality and compact growth would often sell readily, and would provide a possible change from the everlasting Boston fern, for beautiful though the latter is, yet the dear public sometimes wants a change.

Another of the deservedly popular variegated pterises is P. Cretica albineata, a very clearly marked form of P. Cretica, and also a very easy one to reproduce from spores, of which an abundant supply is produced even by quite small plants. In common with many other ferns this pteris throws up fertile fronds that are distinct in form from the sterile fronds, the fertile ones being much narrower and more upright in habit than are the barren fronds, but both leaves are well marked with a silvery stripe, and the foliage is among the most enduring of the fern tribe. Pteris tricolor may be considered as the aristocrat of variegated ferns, the main stem of the leaves being rosy red, with a band of white on each side of the center of the leaf and the remainder of the leaf dark green, the colors being especially clear and bright on the young leaves, and giving a most attractive effect. Unfortunately this fern is rather a tender one, requiring a comparatively high temperature and careful handling, and it also seems to be especially attractive to snails, these little drawbacks making P. tricolor rather a shy plant for the trade to handle. Adiantums with variegated foliage are by no means uncommon but unless it be as curiosities they have but little value, a good A. cuneatum with the ordinary green foliage being far superior to one with variegated pinnae.

Nephrodium aristatum variegatum is another of the really good variegated ferns and one whose value for table ferneries has long been recognized, for though the marking of this fern is not so striking as that of some of the pterises, yet the fronds are so bright and glossy and their substance so good that it is a general favorite. Among the many curious and interesting plants that were picked up in Japan by the well known plant collector, Thomas Hogg, a number of years ago, were some variegated niphoboluses, a genus of ferns that is now included among the polypodiums, the ferns in question having thick, leathery, simple leaves, more or less striped with yellow. They were rather slow growing, cool house ferns, propagated by division, and seem to have dropped out of sight of late years, though decidedly interesting to have in a collection of plants.

Flowering Bulbs at W. H. Siebrecht's.

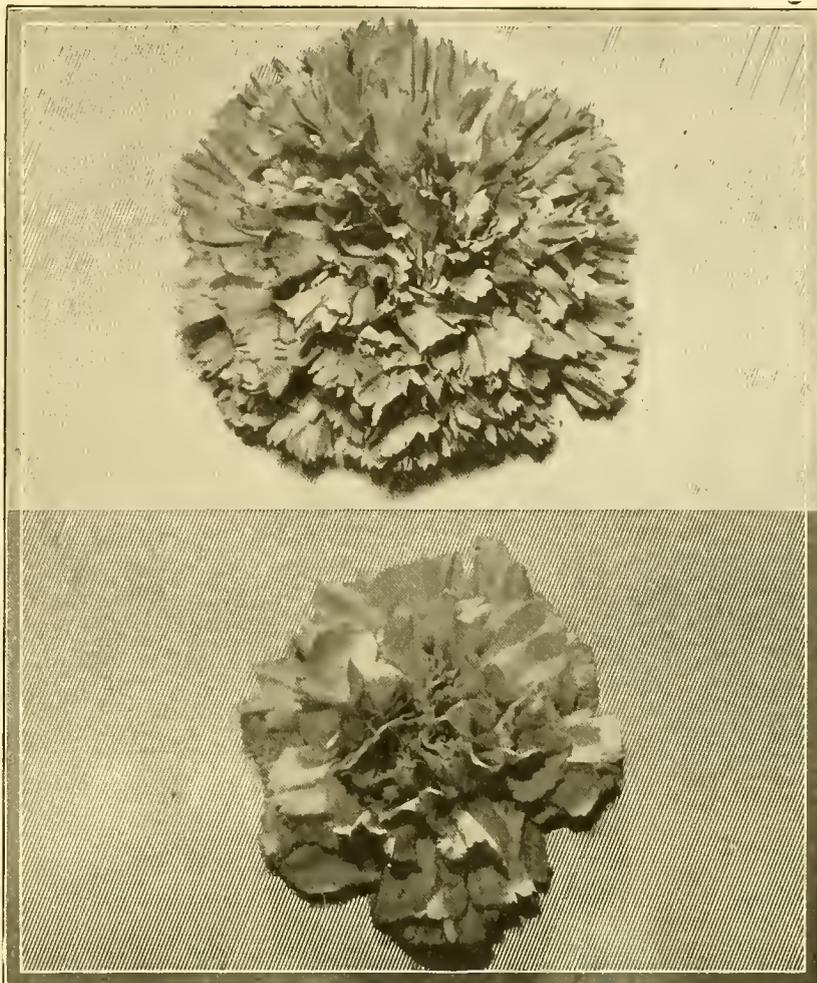

Astoria and Dutch Kills are getting thawed out and the big wisteria arch spanning the entrance to the establishment of Astoria's eminent bulb grower and bowling expert has a sort of glad-some look on its sinuous stems. Inside, the spicy aroma of Roman hyacinths and lily of the valley, the great masses of daffodils and tulips, the pendulous branches of acacia and the hum of bees make a perfect summer-land. Nowhere is the visiting brother more cordially welcomed by the proprietor and nowhere is information gained in long experience more clearly and unreservedly imparted. A box of pure white tulips and one of deep shining pink, each labelled La Reine, attract attention and inspire inquiry for an explanation. Mr. Siebrecht replies that the secret of bright color in this otherwise white tulips lies entirely in cleverly managed temperature fluctuations, the bulbs after being brought into flower in a certain temperature being removed to a cold house and then back again into heat, these sudden checks resulting in the desired deep color.

The finer varieties of daffodils are now flowering profusely. Mr. Siebrecht calls attention to one block of Golden Spur, unevenly and sparsely bloomed, a sea of rank foliage with a flower here and there and tardy flower buds showing through. These bulbs were taken in from the storage sheds five weeks ago. Alongside is a block of as fine Golden Spurs as one can find, with short, firm foliage and a sheet of splendid bloom of even height and finish. These were brought in only three weeks ago. An impressive object lesson on the folly of too eager haste to bring such things into bloom before they are ready for it and the consequent loss.

Japan lilies are looking very fine here, better, Mr. Siebrecht asserts, than heretofore. Tobacco stems are hedged thickly between the pots. No smoking is done until after the lily stalks have grown well up beyond the tobacco stems. Mr. Siebrecht does not favor the use of tobacco dust on the crowns of the growing lilies as many growers practice and attributes the brown-tipped foliage which often disfigures the plants and is commonly regarded as a "disease," directly to the effects of this dust.

Dutch haycinths are a large crop here. The first blooms appeared early in February and a regular succession is now kept up until Easter when the main crop will be brought in. They are kept in the dark at first until the "nose" of the flower spike is well out above the soil. They are then given abundant sunlight to strengthen the spikes and when in bloom are put in a cooler temperature to harden off. The varieties in evidence are the familiar kinds of many years' standing. One unfamiliar sort is Morano, classed by Mr. Siebrecht as an improved Norma, which promises to become a standard variety as it is a finer color than that old favorite. For single, deep pink, however, nothing can yet beat Gertrude.

Roman hyacinths are still in evidence and, as seen here, are of excellent grade. Although grown during the past season in much reduced quantity the price realized in the market has been no better than heretofore. The middle of February saw the last of the old lily of the valley and since early in the month the new crop is well supplied with the luxuriant foliage always demanded by the market.

BLOOMS OF CARNATIONS FIANCEE AND ENCHANTRESS.

(Front views showing comparative size of the flowers.)

Mr. Siebrecht is headquarters for Acacia pubescens. A row of large trees extends down the center of an entire house and the picture just now is an inspiring one, the wide-spreading pendant branches weighted with golden bloom clear to the tips. A man who can grow acacias to such perfection doesn't have to bother with bulb forcing if he doesn't want to.

Profit in Smilax House.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Would it be profitable to put up a house for smilax, planting the seed now so as to put it in the house in August, cut it twice and next spring plant the house to something else, say cucumbers, in August again planting it to smilax?

E. G.

Unless sale can be had for smilax in late spring, summer and early fall months, it might be profitable to throw out the smilax in spring and plant the house to cucumbers. Sowing the seed now would make strong plants in 4-inch pots by the first of August. This would produce a good crop by the first of November, and another easily by the first of April the following year. Then, if cucumbers are considered a better paying crop than smilax during summer, the house could be planted to cucumbers. The only question that occurs to me is this: Will the crop of cucumbers be entirely off by the first of August? The White Spine varieties would perhaps be the better ones to grow because they are not so slow to mature as the long English forcing type, for it would not pay to throw out the cucumbers before the crop is fully matured, and on the other hand to keep them in the house until the crop is entirely off would of necessity throw the planting of the smilax later in the season than is advisable. My advice would be to plant the house to smilax, sowing the seed now, plant out about the first of July, and grow smilax the year round, for I believe in the long run the other plan would prove unsatisfactory. Tearing out the smilax in spring would mean no smilax six months in the year, and the correspondent must judge for himself whether or not he can afford to be without smilax that length of time. G.

Ficus Elastica Cuttings.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What is the best and quickest way to root Ficus elastica cuttings, what temperature is required and at what season should it be done?

BEGINNER.

The best time to root ficus cuttings is in mid-winter when you have plenty of fire heat, and your stock plants are quite dormant; use clean, sharp sand with bottom heat at about 85°. Top or crown cuttings with about three leaves, make the best plants, but small side shoots taken off the parent plant with a heel are the surest and quickest to root. Shoots cut into single eye cuttings will root, but it takes them a long time to make a plant, and never very shapely, as the first leaves from such cuttings are miniature and such plants have a naked appearance around the bottom when finished. The above methods would be advisable only when the stock is dormant or at rest. If the plants are soft and in a growing condition, use the method of nicking and mossaing in the following manner: Cut the shoot at any desired length, half way through the stem, then turn the knife and make the incision upwards about one inch in length. In this incision insert a small wedge, say the thickness of a match stick, to prevent its growing together. Around it wrap wet moss. Keep the moss wet every day and allow it to remain until the top is rooted. Place the plants after nicking and mossaing them in temperature of 80° and the cuttings will root in from three to four weeks. In potting off these cuttings after they have rooted, cut below the moss, let the moss remain on the cutting and plant moss and all so that the new and tender roots may not be disturbed or broken. It requires about three weeks to establish them in the pots.

How to Produce Good Liberty Roses.

[Read by Adolph Fahrenwold before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, March 1, 1904.]

In giving you my experience in growing Liberty, I have omitted the growing of young plants from cuttings, as that is so well understood, and besides, Liberty is one of the easiest propagated roses in existence. I have divided my subject into seven different topics: namely, 1st, soil; 2d, planting; 3d, watering; 4th, manuring; 5th, disbudding; 6th, cutting, and 7th, temperature and ventilation; making them as plain as possible, in language and expression, using no "high-trotting" sentences to bewilder myself and you. Hoping that from these plain facts, regarding the growing of this, one of our finest and grandest red roses in trade, some of you will gather points which will enable you to solve this knotty question: "How to produce fine Liberty blooms."

Soil—A good, suitable soil for roses is one of the most important factors in rose growing. If that is at hand, success is within easy reach of any careful grower. My soil is a heavy, gravelly loam with a good sod on top of it. Before plowing it down, I give it a good dressing (about three inches) of good cow manure. It is then plowed over as deep as a two-horse plow can work it. After this, it is kept cultivated for about a month, being then again plowed and kept cultivated till used. This work is generally begun about the first week in April.

Planting.—The soil being well prepared outside, I put in the young plants without adding any commercial fertilizers, as the cow manure is sufficient to begin with. I believe that those highly concentrated fertilizers force a plant too quickly to maturity; that is, to hard wood, which I do not want to be the case with the Liberty. Young plants I put in from 15 to 18 inches apart, preferring to plant from the first of June to middle of July, which will give a good succession of crops I have grown with equal success both in shallow and solid benches.

Watering.—The young plants will not need much water till about five to six weeks after planted, when they will commence to grow nicely, and will then take an abundance of water, even more so than any other rose that has ever come under my care. If not kept well watered, they will get yellow leaves right away, as the roots seem to have a tendency of spreading out near the surface, which makes them suffer at once if they happen to get too dry. The wood will commence to harden and will be slow to break out anew. I syringe during the summer, every day when clear. Towards the latter part of September I stop syringing too often overhead, as by that time most of the plants will have made plenty of top growth; and from that time on, I try to induce breaks to come from the base, which I think too much syringing overhead will hinder, as it will keep eyes on the top growth continuously breaking into small growth, which is not desirable during the fall and winter, as I believe rather in quality of roses than in quantity. I keep soil always in a moist, good growing condition, but never soggy. I use water direct out of a well which has an even temperature all through the season, about 52° to 54°.

Manuring.—I don't commence to top dress till latter part of August and beginning of September. Then I put on a top dressing of cow manure. I prefer to put this in little ridges between rows, covering it with soil to prevent the escape of ammonia as much as possible, and its getting washed off too quickly from the benches. Two or three weeks after this first mulch, I have been in the habit of putting on a sprinkling of dried blood. This has to be done very carefully, as blood is very strong in ammonia, apt to take off a big crop of leaves if put on too strong. I put it in small streaks on either side of a row, two to three inches wide, just thick enough to cover the ground, and also covering it with soil. From then on and following this every two or three weeks, according to the health and growing condition of the plant and the weather, I put on sheep manure, bone flour, wood ashes and pondrette, either mixing these together in equal quantities or by themselves, but never at any time putting it on too heavy. I would rather do it a few times oftener than to endanger the health of the plants. In March I put on another layer of cow manure, and by the time it is spent, I use the fertilizers mentioned before till June, when it winds up the season. I have always used plenty of all sorts of manures, as I believe that a plant, which has to work out of season and receive so many waterings should have plenty of nourishment all the time, never giving it a chance to become dormant for want of proper nourishment.

Disbudding.—I consider that the pinching out process is the most important factor in the production of strong, vigorous plants, able to stand the strain of heavy cutting in the dark months of winter. We know that the formation of buds and flowers taxes the strength and vigor of the plant to the utmost. Therefore it naturally seeks a rest after this exertion; some roses will recover faster from it than others. Liberty is one of the slowest of these to recover. Ever since I commenced to grow Liberties, I have followed the practice of carefully disbudding from the cutting on. After they are planted in benches a few months the production of buds will be quite plentiful. I then make it a practice to go over them every other day, pinching out the buds as soon as they can be gotten hold of, but taking no leaves with them, except on suckers, which I cut back three to four eyes; because if pinched too close at the top, they will break into very short stemmed buds, which is undesirable on the stronger wood. This continuous disbudding which stops the sap flowing to the buds and flowers seems to irritate the dormant eyes at the base of the plant and they finally break into fine canes which will make grand flowers. In September and October when plants begin to make longer stemmed flowers, ten to eighteen inches long, which I do not care to have in bloom for another month, I cut them back three eyes to induce them to break strong again. If pinched too close at the top a short stemmed flower will be the result. This practice enables us to have crops in succession. I continue this disbudding all through the winter, carefully taking off all buds up to five and six inches in length of stem, as flowers of that class are little thought of, and the benefit of the retarded sap, and the saving of the foliage and wood will prolong its blooming capacity.

This may seem to many unnecessary, in fact, I know that many growers do not believe in it, but I hold that it is the most important point to successfully bloom Liberty in winter.

Cutting.—To cut right is a point which I am particularly careful with. Nothing will spoil the successful blooming of Liberties as quickly as careless cutting. One should always remember that we want flowers all through the winter. To illustrate my point better: Take a plant with eight buds which would all come within a week or two. I would pinch three or four buds away if this is in September or October, which would bring them in seven to eight weeks later. It will give four buds at a better price besides not hurting the plants as much as if I had cut all those long stem buds off at once; the plant would have received a check which it would take all winter to overcome.

In other words, I do not want them to come all at once, avoid crops. Plants put in benches by 1st of June will, if they have done well, be fit to cut by beginning of October. They may have produced strong enough wood in August to tempt the grower to cut some blooms, but I find that if cut too soon, they will not produce flowers in mid-winter, nor will they throw up so strong canes from base later on. I consider that four months of growth is the least the plants should have before starting to cut; and even then I take nothing but the strongest wood, cutting everything up to 12-inch back.

Wood ten to twelve inches long, or longer in October should be cut back two or three eyes; if the bud is only pinched out, it would make an inferior bud at the next eye. Strong wood, that is canes from the base, should not be cut too low, as it is too hard and slow to break. It should have twelve to fifteen inches of stem left; when it will break in reasonable time. In cutting the flowers, I am very careful to cut them right, that is the outer petals expanded; of course in the fall and spring I cut closer. I cut three and even four times a day, according to weather and demand, for they must be in as fine a shape when they reach the dealer as they can possibly be gotten. After they have been in water for about twenty-four hours in a cool place, they are fit to be shipped. If not well soaked, the long stemmed Liberties in particular are easily wilted, and will be a disappointment to all concerned.

Temperature and Ventilation.—In the early part of fall, when the growth of the plants is soft, I have always tried to maintain a temperature of 62° to 64° with a little air on if possible at night, with a day temperature on clear days from 85° to 90°, while on cloudy days, a temperature as near 70° as possible. As soon as they commence to bloom, I reduce these temperatures to 58° and 60° at night and 75° and 80° during the day in fair weather, 68° to 70° on a cloudy day following a bright day, and if there is a succession of cloudy days, leave it down to 65°, as too high a temperature at night will spoil the color.

After the first planting of the young stuff, I use ventilation sparingly, gradually increasing as the plants take hold. The Liberty is very sensitive to draught, not that it will show mildew by it, but it retards the growth. It will harden and stand for months before it will get over this check. Therefore great care should be exercised on windy days, in a single house, and more so where the houses are built together with no partitions, where the draught will have a clean sweep underneath the gutters.

I try to give air every day, even in the coldest weather, when I can only open the ventilators to their full height and shut them down again at once, as a change of air is always most desirable.

Conclusion.—In finishing my remarks in regard to growing Liberties, I suppose some of you will be disappointed in not hearing some sensational and almost witchcraft-bordering way of growing, but instead of that you have heard nothing but plain everyday facts, which most of you know, ought to know, or have known. So this may prove to be a reminder to some of you. And last but not least, success will lie only with that grower who is ever watching, who has his grip on the situation every day and all the time, never relaxing in enthusiasm in his fascinating and noble occupation, constantly studying the surrounding conditions which confront him with new varieties, higher standards in quality, and ever changing market.

Chicago.

Business has improved but little since our last report. The trade in both the wholesale and retail lines is hovering between the embarrassing contingencies of too much stock and no buyers. Prices as a consequence have not much dignity and no one makes an attempt to adhere to anything like market quotations. During the first three days of the week, stock of all kinds piled up in a huge oversupply and the greater part of this has been hanging throughout the week. The quiet was broken here and there by fitful shipping calls, which, however, were not sufficient to give any tone or stiffness to the market. Roses are in better supply than formerly and are improving in quality. There are plenty of carnations and bulbous stock remains in the same overclouded state that has characterized that line for over a month. The thaw and warm weather of the latter part of last week had the effect of increasing all cuts. Word from the greenhouses indicates that all Easter plants and specialties are coming into crop nicely.

The Chicago delegation to the carnation convention at Detroit left for that city Tuesday, the larger number going in the afternoon at three o'clock via the Wabash. Another party followed in the evening via the Michigan Central. It was a large and enthusiastic delegation and included the following: James Harts-horne and wife, J. D. Thompson, Frank Friedly, Fred Hunt and George Jensen, all of Joliet; Nic Zweifel and wife, Milwaukee, en route; N. J. Wietor, P. J. Hauswirth and wife, W. N. Rudd, L. Kill, George Wienhoeber, John Degnan, Peter Reinberg, Adam Zender, L. Coatsworth, John Sianer, C. L. Washburn, C. A. Samuelson, W. J. Smyth, George Asmus, E. F. Kurowski, P. J. Foley and W. L. Palinsky.

The first of a series of district meetings of the Gardeners' and Florists' Union was held at Hinsdale, Ill., on March 2. The meeting was addressed by Barney Cohen, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor and the officers of the Chicago Union. A very enthusiastic meeting was held and over twenty members were added to the roll of the union. The union contemplates opening a local at Hinsdale, including Western Springs and Downer's Grove. The scale of the union was granted by the county board. It is said that the union never considered a strike as far as the park boards are concerned, as the wage scale is still under consideration at those places.

Albert Fuchs informs us that he will tear down his extensive greenhouses on North Halsted street in the spring, retaining but one or two houses for retail use. He will sell the material and most of the stock at auction. The houses cover 65,000 feet of glass and are devoted exclusively to palms, ferns and rubber plants.

The Bentley-Coatsworth Company is now operating under the new name as a stock company, incorporation papers having been taken out last week. The company contemplates expanding in the near future by erecting additional houses, etc.

Walter Kreitling, one of the leading retailers, died suddenly Monday night of peritonitis. The news of his death was a shock to the trade as few knew of his illness. In another column will be found a complete obituary notice together with a portrait of the deceased.

Poehlmann Brothers Company has purchased the land between the old plant and Morton Grove depot and they intend to add about 100,000 more feet of glass this season.

Frank Garland's Harrisii lilies, which are being cut in large quantities, are good stock. His Easter benches look very promising.

The A. L. Randall Company is handling an exclusive strain of A1 white lilac, a grand cut of which is promised for Easter.

Among the visitors here this week were J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.; J. A. Valentine, of the Park Floral Company, Denver, Colo.; Nic Zweifel, Milwaukee, Wis.

New York.

This last week of the cut flower business was the worst we have experienced in some time, bulbous stock going at any price offered, and plenty left over day after day not disposed of and finally going to the garbage can. Daffodils seem to be the flowers least wanted, and the blooms can be bought for less than what the growers paid for the bulbs. Tulips do not sell well, unless they are of the lighter shades, and lily of the valley is very plentiful, selling as low as $10 per 1,000 for fairly good stock. Roses are coming in very abundantly and prices have receded somewhat.

The "Hinode" greenhouses at Secaucus and Woodside are filled with Japan Easter lilies in very promising condition. The Woodside establishment is already cutting flowers, which are consigned to several Twenty-eighth street dealers.

N. Lecakes & Company have on hand a fine lot of fancy ferns, of which there seems to be quite a scarcity. They report several orders from Chicago firms, who are willing to pay $2 per 1,000 for them.

William H. Long, who had charge of Thorley's uptown store at 386 Columbus avenue, has accepted a position with Charles Brown, 412 Columbus avenue.

Mrs. Julias intends opening a new flower store, March 20, at One Hundred and First street and Broadway. It is being fixed up in the best of style.

Phil F. Kessler received a lot of choice carnations from John Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., last week, and exhibited them among the market growers.

Bonnot Brothers are shipping quite heavily of roses and carnations to Scranton, Pa., and other nearby towns.

George Mathews, of Great Neck, L. I., is sending in some fine radishes, which are grown between his sweet peas.

John Young and John Raynor are receiving daily large shipments of Golden Spur and other fancy daffodils.

David Clarke's Sons are cutting most of their bulbous stock from their own greenhouses at Fordham.

Slinn & Hughes are handling Jerome Snyder's carnations, including the new variety, Amaze.

Ford Brothers are handling a tremendous lot of violets and other seasonable flowers.

Most of the wholesalers have as their window displays boxes of tulips and daffodils.

Matthew Sampson, of the Cut Flower Company, is down with a severe cold.

Anton Schultheis is cutting some fine Empress narcissi.

Philadelphia.

The special feature of the March meeting of the Florists' Club held last Tuesday evening was the paper on "My Experience with the Liberty Rose," by Adolph Fahrenwold of Hillside, Pa., who is probably the most successful grower of this beautiful rose in this country. The attendance was the best of the season. Mr. Fahrenwold's Liberty roses have been the feature of the Philadelphia and New York markets for several years and his success with this apparently difficult rose, when so many other good growers have failed, lent an added interest to his essay. At the beginning he said he had no secrets. What he knew was by studying the habits of the roses and profiting by his experience. All that is wanted is good soil and a careful grower. Among the remarks illustrating his paper as he read it and afterwards in answer to questions were, that frequent disbudding made the plants break from the dormant eyes at the bottom which give the strong shoots; 56° was all right for a day or two to get a brilliant color in the flowers, but too low to be continued, as it would check their growth; dried blood was good to start dormant growth, but should be very carefully applied; never top dress nor manure when dry, always have the beds wet before applying; the plants should always be kept growing if possible and given plenty of water. He had noticed that where ventilator drafts struck the bed and they dried out, only a little, the growth was retarded. If possible, the wood must not be allowed to get hard, as then the leaves drop and the plants soon get into a dormant state. Mr. Barton, in moving a vote of thanks, said it was the best paper of its kind he had ever heard, and this seemed to be the opinion of all rose growers present. Mr. Fahrenwold says that he has a sport from Liberty, just a shade darker than Bridesmaid, from which he expects great things.

There is to be a banquet on Wednesday, March 23, in honor of the American Rose Society, which holds its annual exhibition in connection with the spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

"The Mistakes I Have Made" has been assigned to W. K. Harris for next month. We are afraid the reading of the paper will not consume much time, as Mr. Harris' strong fort is success, not failure.

Robert Craig & Son have made an assignment for the benefit of their creditors. John Burton, of Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, Pa., was named as assignee. A meeting of the creditors has been called for March at the office, 49th and Market streets, when it is hoped some amicable arrangement may be made which will allow them an extension of time. The whole establishment is in fine condition, about one-fourth of the houses being entirely new and all filled with the best of plants. Their Easter stock is particularly large and varied, and seems to be just right in point of time.

Edwin Lonsdale met with a serious mishap February 28. The water tank, which furnishes his greenhouses with water, fell, cutting off his water supply entirely. Fortunately he made temporary connections with his neighbor, John Burton. In the fall some glass in an adjoining greenhouse was broken, four or five boxes possibly. No one was hurt and little or no damage to the plants was done. It was quite a large tank, holding about 20,000 gallons. How it happened no one seems to know. The ice may have had something to do with it.

Business has been very quiet the past week and prices have softened considerably. The quality in most lines is extra fine, the special Bridesmaid roses being now almost equal in size to Beauty. Carnations, too, are finer than ever. The stock coming from the Strafford farms to S. S. Pennock is the best commercial stock we have ever seen offered.

Godfrey Aschmann has been confined to the house with a severe cold for the past two weeks. K.

The annual carnation exhibition of the Co-operative Flower Growers' Association was held in the salesroom on Columbus avenue on February 27. The entries were limited this time to local growers, no outside exhibits being sent. First and second prizes in the different classes were awarded as follows:

Fifty white.—H. A. Stevens & Company, Geo. M. Anderson; both Gov. Wolcott.

Fifty scarlet.—L. Small, D. J. Kerrigan; both J. H. Manley.

Fifty light pink.—J. W. Foote, first and second; Enchantress and Fair Maid.

Fifty dark pink.—Miss E. L. Philbrick, L. Small; both Mrs. Lawson.

Fifty crimson.—Patten & Company, S. J. Goddard; both Harry Fenn.

Fifty variegated.—D. J. Kerrigan, first and second; with Prosperity and Mrs. Bratt.

Fifty yellow.—Backer & Company; Eldorado.

Vase of one hundred blooms, not less than six varieties.—Wm. Nicholson.

Twenty-five roses.—Waban Rose Conservatories; American Beauty.

One hundred single violets.—W. Sim, West Spillsbury; Princess of Wales.

One hundred double violets.—L. Smith, M. Orr.

Certificates were awarded as follows: L. Small, No. 3, white, 90 points. A. Roper, Chester Roper, variegated, 85 points. E. N. Peirce & Sons, lily of the valley. Miss Philbrick, hardy primroses. Patten & Company, mignonette. Wm. Sim, sweet peas Blanche Ferry and Mont Blanc.

Among the displays for exhibition only were Carnation Marion Buxton, pink, by Geo. E. Buxton; white seedling from John Barr, white seedling from Stevens & Company, several seedlings from A. Roper and Variegated Lawson from Rockland Greenhouses. The judges on carnations were Allan Peirce, L. W. Mann and George Ayer; on novelties and miscellaneous exhibits, W. C. Stickel, W. S. Phelps and D. Ziragiebel.

The Horticultural Club met on Thursday evening, February 25, and H. F. A. Lange presided. Among the guests were David Lumsden and Prof. L. C. Elson. A pleasant event of the evening was the presentation by Ed. Hatch, on behalf of the members, of a beautiful scarf pin, set with an opal and diamonds, to Herman Thiemann, who is about to remove to Michigan.

Snow still lies in this neighborhood from one to two feet and more in depth and is of a solid, icy nature, so that it will take much persuasion to induce it to go. Broadleaf evergreens are already beginning to show, in their brown dilapidated foliage, the rigors they have gone through in this unprecedented winter.

Norton Brothers have gone into insolvency. The liabilities are given as $10,817.94, assets $730.

Visitors this week, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fuller, Leominster; Chas. Loechner, of Suzuki & Iida, New York; A. H. Lange, Worcester.

Baltimore.

There is some abatement of winter and now we are having a season of rains and clouds. The past four months show lower average temperatures and more frequent snow storms than any similar period within the memory of our oldest citizens. In the 121 days from November 1 there have been twenty-nine snows, and fifty-five of the 121 days since that date the ground has been covered. As this location has ever been considered a half-way station to the southland this temperature is novel and trying. Consequent upon such weather there has been generally, and still continues, a dearth of really first-class flowers, especially roses. Carnations are more abundant and are improving in flower and stem, but many days there are not enough for the requirements of the market. Trade continues fairly active, the main call being for funeral uses, the mortality being considerably beyond the normal. The death of a number of prominent citizens, where the floral offerings were handsome and numerous has given an impetus to trade all around. There is some resumption of social entertainment and by the time Lent is over it is hoped a general revival will follow the suspension caused by the fire.

A few days ago your correspondent called upon Wm. R. Smith, the widely known and universally esteemed superintendent of the Botanical Gardens at Washington, and former president of the Society of American Florists, finding him, as his friends everywhere will be glad to know, robust in health, his eye undimmed, his natural force unabated, with no halting in the enthusiasm for his calling, still glorying in new acquisitions for his ever-growing and unique collection of Burnsideana and ready and generous in helping along every good cause. May his days be long in the land and among the people who honor him!

As a result of the destruction of business houses a number of changes have taken place in the location of the florists' stores. Wm. J. Halliday, for fourteen years at 316 N. Charles street, sold his lease on advantageous terms and has transferred his business to his greenhouses, 2800 W. North avenue, until he can suit himself as to location of new quarters.

His neighbor, John Cook, who purchased the property 318 N. Charles street a few months ago, has had several advantageous offers both to buy and rent, but so far resists all temptations, concluding the premises worth as much to him as to anyone else.

Samuel Feast & Son have vacated their old store at 228 N. Charles street, occupied by the firm and its predecessors for many years, and will do business only at their upper location, Charles and Pleasant streets, where they have an excellent corner with fine show windows.

Chas. E. Smith & Company, have sold the lease on their N. Liberty street store, a very commodious one, and have removed several doors further north on the same street.

All the world knows of the Isthmus of Panama, that we will soon dig a canal across it, and that we have the means to protect it when completed. All this was happily portrayed by J. H. Small & Sons in a decoration for a dinner given by Senator Warren, of Wyoming, in honor of Secretary of War William H. Taft, at the New Willard hotel, February 24. The table arrangement was along the lines of the hollow square. Within the space thus formed was a representation of the Isthmus of Panama. Along the banks of the canal, which was skillfully executed in sunken mirrors, were palms, ferns and flowering plants. In the canal was a model of the old man-of-war Wyoming, which was a fighting craft in civil war times. There was also a model of the modern harbor monitor Wyoming, now on duty in Central American waters. The warship Ohio and other craft were represented as in the canal. Along the banks, among the tropical plants and vines, cannon and galling guns were placed, several being of actual size, the remainder being miniature models. Stands of rifles and rosettes of swords were interspersed among the heavy artillery. The national colors were everywhere in evidence, and the flag of the republic of Panama was given a place. At one end of the room was a large United States flag, and at the opposite end a shield, both in incandescent lights, the national colors being brought out by red, white and blue bulbs. The whole scheme was of that high class of decorative work that must be seen to be thoroughly appreciated. To the brains that devised, as well as the hands that executed it, I here pay tribute.

In the United States Senate, February 24, the agricultural appropriation bill being under consideration, Mr. Hale made a point of order against the committee provision authorizing the secretary of agriculture to examine and report upon samples of seeds, to accept fees for the service, and make certificate of the result of such inspection. His point was that this was general legislation, and it was suggested that the certificates thus provided would be used for advertising purposes. The point of order was sustained. The amendment made by the committee striking out the house provision appropriating $40,000 for the introduction of foreign plants and seeds was disagreed to.

George H. Cooke had two dinner decorations in the home of a prominent senator within the week. There have been a number of weddings, and all in all the condition of trade is good. There is plenty of stock, and for the best good prices prevail. First-class American Beauty roses $10 to $15 per dozen; Bride and Bridesmaid, $2 to $5 per dozen; Enchantress carnations, $2.50 per dozen; Lawson, $1.25 per dozen; Prosperity, $2 per dozen; valley, $1 per dozen; lilacs, $3 per bunch of ten sprays; Tulips and narcissi are plentiful and the prices in some instances are being cut in two, but the leading retailers are getting 50 cents and 75 cents per dozen.

H. A. Taylor, acting secretary of the treasury, has transmitted to the house a copy of a communication from the secretary of agriculture, submitting an estimate of $25,000 for the removal and reconstruction of the greenhouses of the department of agriculture, in order to make way for the new buildings of the department. Secretary Wilson states that the change in the plans for the location of the new buildings will make it necessary to remove practically all of the greenhouses now on the department grounds.

Bulb salesmen are so plentiful just now that they can scarcely be enumerated. However, nearly all growers of this section seem to agree with the philosopher and poet of the bulb business, that "good bulbs do the farthest walk."

Dinner decorations have kept several of the leading craftsmen busy during the past week, and first-class orchids, roses and carnations have been in demand.

Toronto.

This vicinity has just been visited by the worst storm known to local florists. Great snow flurries and a blizzard have stopped all railway traffic and express orders are refused. This has been an extremely cold winter, surpassing anything on record at the weather bureau. Roses seem to be getting more plentiful, although there are hardly enough to go around. In other cut-flower lines, with hardly one exception, there is a glut. The department stores Saturday made great slashing in the prices by retailing daffodils at 10 cents a dozen, carnations 15 cents a dozen and tulips 20 cents a dozen. The outlook is at present very propitious for Easter. Everything with the exception of roses will be more than enough for the demand.

John H. Dunlop's place is in excellent shape, although some of the roses are a little shy of bloom; the plants are very healthy looking, and a few days of bright sunshine will no doubt help the crop along considerably. His carnations were never better. The Lawsons have buds and flowers set in so thickly that they resemble a field of timothy. He has also a pale pink sport from this flower, which is a beautiful shade and with all the good qualities of its parent. One house of lilies looks just right, both Harrisii and longiflorum being fine. There are also large numbers of rhododendrons, lilacs and azaleas.

There are at present many bulb growers in this section soliciting orders for next season, but when the bloom of lily of the valley is being sold for $5 per 1,000, tulips $8 per 1,000, and hyacinths and other varieties of stock unreasonably low, it is not certain that they will be overtaxed with orders from this section.

There have been several freeze-ups among the florists. The Georgetown Floral Company had some trouble with their boiler, resulting in having to shut down the heating system for about six hours. The greenhouses registered 18° and it is doubtful if the plants will be much good after their sudden check.

Transportation being blocked it is doubtful if our members from this section can get through to carnation meeting.

John Milligan, of Mimico, has opened a store on Queen street.

EASTER in four weeks.

It is probably on account of the severe and prolonged winter that so many eminent men in the trade are now sojourning in the south.

AZALEA PRES. VAN DER KERCHOVE, double salmon pink with wavy edging of white, is one of the handsomest of the Easter varieties.

LILACS require shade in forcing, otherwise the flower heads will come bunched and valueless. Yellow cloth is used under the glass by some growers.

CALADIUM ESCULENTUM should be started in small pots in early spring in order to attain the finest effect of massive foliage in August and September.

The best of the scarlet tulips for early forcing is Vermilion Brilliant. Next in order comes Waterloo or Belle Alliance and latest, the best of all, Belle Alliance.

We are in receipt of three photographs of carnations marked "Conradi," but they bear no other sign of identification. The sender will oblige by forwarding full particulars.

Greenhouse Heating.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Will a Hitchings No. 14 boiler with 2-inch pipe heat two carnation houses, one 20x60 and the other 12x20 in zero weather? How many pipes should I have? F. G.

I do not have a Hitchings catalogue at hand and am not positive about the rating of the No. 14 Hitchings boiler but as I remember it the rating is 750 to 800 square feet of pipe. The two houses will require but 600 feet and this leaves a good margin if the above is correct. For the 20x60 carnation house use twelve 2-inch pipes, with either four or six of them flows or, put in two 2½-inch flows and nine 2-inch returns. In the 12x20 house use one 2-inch flow and six 2-inch returns, with the coils carried across the ends of the houses if exposed. If there is no door in the further end of the house a coil of three 2-inch pipes could be carried entirely around the house with good results. L. R. TAFT.

P. LOEF Az, of the firm of P. Loef Az & Company, Boskoop, Holland, will withdraw from the firm at the close of the spring trade, and the business will be continued by P. C. and J. C. Van Heiningen under the title of Van Heiningen Brothers & Co., with headquarters at Boskoop and branch office at 136 Water street, New York, care of Maltus & Ware.

OBITUARY.

R. M. Kellogg.

R. M. Kellogg, of the R. M. Kellogg Plant Company, Three Rivers, Mich., died at his home in that city February 17 after an illness of three weeks. He suffered a stroke of apoplexy January 30 when in Indianapolis to see his wife in a hospital there. Mr. Kellogg was born in Richfield, Summit county, O., in 1843. He served in the civil war until injured and placed on the reserve list. After the war he was married to Orrilla C. Richards, of Macomb county, and began his married life by taking a farm to clear in the woods of Saginaw. He entered the University of Michigan and graduated from the law department in 1880. He opened a law office in Grand Rapids, but his health soon demanded that he make a change. Finding a fruit farm near Ionia could be secured, he purchased it. In 1896 he purchased the old Hoffman property near Three Rivers, and made it one of the most productive farms of its kind in the United States. He abandoned the promiscuous raising of fruits, and devoted his entire attention to the propagation of strawberry plants. He was for many years a member of the Michigan State Horticultural Society, of which organization he was secretary one year and president two. Mr. Kellogg is survived by his wife, who is now in the hospital at Indianapolis; his mother, Mrs. Sophia Kellogg, of Battle Creek; a sister, Mrs. Henrietta Reid, of Roscommon county, and two brothers, Frank J. Kellogg and J. D. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, besides L. M. Kellogg, who resides here. Mr. Kellogg's partners, Frank E. Beatty and Lyman M. Kellogg, will continue the business along the same lines.

Walter Kreitling.

Death bereft Chicago of one of her best known retail florists when Walter Kreitling passed away Monday night. The news of his demise came as a severe shock to his numerous friends in and out of the trade, as he was not known to have been ill but a few days before the final summons. On Sunday preceding the day of his death he was up and about, although slightly indisposed. Sunday night he visited at the home of his sister, and while there was taken ill. Twenty-four hours after that the trade was stunned to hear the announcement of his taking away. The direct cause of his death was peritonitis. Mr. Kreitling, although a comparatively young man, was one of the oldest retail florists in point of years of service.

The Late Walter Kreitling.

For years he occupied the cozy store in East Van Buren street, where he built up a thriving business by application, energy and perseverance. He commenced his career as a florist in this city when a mere boy after arriving from the land of his birth, Germany. After an apprenticeship as errand boy, etc., he worked for W. D. Allen and subsequently for James Ferrel. For two decades he was in business for himself. The deceased was well known to every member of the trade. He was ever ready to advance the interests of the local trade, and for many years was an active member of the Florists' Club. He also participated regularly in the Florists' Bowling Club meetings. He was a member of several lodges and fraternal organizations, among them being the Royal Arcanum, Columbian Knights, Royal League and the Improved Order of Red Men. Mr. Kreitling was born in Berlin, Germany, in 1861. He came to America at the age of seven years and came at once to Chicago. In 1885 he was married to Miss Virginia Steiner, of Mauston, Wis. His wife and one son, Victor, aged 15, survive him. Of his family he leaves a sister, Mrs. Kochman, and three brothers, Bruno, Felix and Albert, to mourn his death. The funeral took place Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock from his late residence, 1517 West Van Buren street. The obsequies were under the auspices of the Royal Arcanum and the interment was made at Forest Home cemetery.

Pointer No. 5.

The only florist establishment in a New York village of 4,000, close by a large city, an elegant summer resort, no better place in the state, will pay 25 per cent on the money invested. A lady has done so, and in her modest opinion thinks a man can do better. There are four acres of land, dwelling house of eleven rooms with bath room, double lathed and plastered, storm doors and windows, well heated. Fine barn, nearly new (two-story), carriage room, box stalls, three for cows, three for horses; harness room, water tank, bin for feed zinc-lined; barn cost $2,000. City water in both house and barn, also two wells of spring water and two cisterns; four greenhouses, each 100 feet long, heated by hot water. They are up-to-date in every particular. Hot-air pumps for pumping fertilizer. Office and boiler room separate. Poultry house nearly 100x15 feet, apartments will hold 800 fowls, also heated by hot water, cement floors. Three ponds, one large with row-boat, white water lilies are raised; two smaller ones for gold fish and Pekin ducks, the latter very profitable for eggs and feathers, and clear lily ponds of snails. From fish and ducks alone can be cleared $2,000 a year. Orchard of fifty good fruit trees besides small fruits in garden. Pasture for two cows besides beautiful lawn, ornamental trees, rustic bridges, pavilion, plenty of room to add more greenhouses. An elegant home. A good business. A great bargain. The owner has spent $32,000 on this place. We are ashamed to say publicly what it can be had for, but if you have $1,000 write us quickly for full particulars. You may not live for another opportunity like this one.

Pointer No. 6.

For Sale or Rent.—In excellent resident part of a thriving Indiana city. Three greenhouses 60x12, 60x12 and 60x18 feet, steam heated, plenty of room for more. Grounds 135x140 foot corner lots with improved streets and cement walks on two sides. Cut flowers and funeral work has been the chief trade, but pot plants are in good demand. This place can be had for 25% less than its real value, terms to suit. This is an opportunity for a beginner with small capital.

Pointer No. 7.

Farm and Greenhouses.—One of the most beautiful localities in Wisconsin; twenty acres, a seven-room house, a barn 26x45, three hen houses, corn crib, a good well and a greenhouse 20x112 feet; 2¼ acres of orchard, two and one-half acres small fruit, all set within the last three years. All good land by the side of a beautiful lake. Considerable stock and personal property goes with it. Owner must move south at once. Price is low, terms most reasonable. This is also an excellent shipping point if greenhouses were enlarged.

Pointer No. 8.

Ohio.—For sale or long lease—or long lease of land and sell the greenhouses, with or without dwelling. A modern up-to-date business, principally wholesale cut flowers and bedding stock. Four houses, 16x100, 18x100, 21x100, 9x55, and material on hand to put up another 18x100; new forty horse-power boiler, steam pump, trap, etc. Potting and loading shed 17x75. Boiler and coal bin 29x40. Wind mill and pond for water supply, also large tank house, horse, wagons, etc., all new and in good order, doing a good business. Other business interests compel the owner to dispose of the place. A small amount of money and a good character will be given a rare opportunity here. Full particulars if you write us with an earnest desire for doing business.

Pointer No. 9.

The retail florist establishment known as the Linwood Floral Nursery is offered for sale, comprising as follows: Three lots 150 feet front, 122 feet deep, about 4,000 square feet glass; five greenhouses, store and dwelling; ice house and coal shed. The place is stocked with palms, ferns, bedding plants, etc. It is heated by new hot water boiler, "Kroeschell," heating greenhouses, dwelling and store, was built in the past nine years; store and showhouse built the past season only. On account of poor health owner will dispose of same to cash buyer or part cash, balance on time at three to five years with low interest. Price and other particulars on application.

Pointer No. 10.

A retail nursery business in Los Angeles, Cal. In this city this business is continuous the year around. Deciduous fruit trees are handled all winter, but all ornamental stock is kept in pots or beds. The owner of this place wishes to devote his entire time to growing and wants buyer of city sales place to co-operate with him. The trade is well satisfied with the place for fifteen years and it is favorably known. The amount of cash required is small, but you must know something about plants, roses, carnations, palms, bulbs, araucarias, bamboos, cyperus, bougainvilleas, fuchs, pansies, eucalyptus, oranges, etc. We shall be pleased to explain more fully on application.

Pointer No. 11.

A large plant near Philadelphia, $10,000. Correspondence solicited for this.

Pointer No. 12.

We have a customer for 10,000 feet of glass to lease for five years, a grower.

TO THE CRAFT AT LARGE.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—The few pointers written above, those which have preceded, and many more to follow, are all worth your careful consideration. They are exemplifying our predictions with a greater force and certainty than we ourselves anticipated.

Do not permit your judgment to be biased in the least by the suspicion so frequently suggested that if a place is put on the market at a very reasonable price there must be a concealed reason why it is an unsafe proposition to entertain.

There is no business in which so many embark annually with insufficient knowledge. The common impression among the inexperienced is that a greenhouse man's income is most all profit. A short experience results in "a snap" for a person well loaded with practical experience and conservative ambitions.

Then, again, there never was a time in the history of our country when there was such an awakening among physicians and the public generally that different localities are more particularly adapted for the physical welfare of certain types of individuals. When a man finds he has cast anchor where his health is being sacrificed the element of time, when considered in making a change, frequently amounts to a large percentage of the capital invested. With these and other reasons, therefore, we advise you to first consider the locality as to the welfare of your family's health. This being determined do not hesitate to investigate, relying on your own judgment. We hold ourselves in readiness to make any inquiry or investigations you may desire. It is our business to bring seller and buyer together for mutual benefit. We will thank you one and all for a letter expressing your convictions on this subject and suggesting any way we may be able to serve you. Truly yours,

FLORISTS' AMERICAN EXCHANGE.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The table herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Charles McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.

Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-24, 1904.

DWARF mixed nasturtium seed is in strong demand.

P. J. LYNCH, of West Grove, Pa., has purchased "Home of Flowers," the Springfield, O., publication.

M. G. MADSON, of the Madson Seed Company, Manitowoc, Wis., is inspecting his seed ranches in California.

VISITED MOBILE: A. W. Bradstreet, with the Cleveland Seed Company, and W. B. Hayt, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Company.

"OPEN all night" reads the advertisement of a Mobile, Ala., seed house. This should be advantageous to the early rising trucker.

The mail trade in the west was very good for three or four days of warm weather, but this condition was reversed when the cold set in again.

MANDEVILLE & KING COMPANY'S establishment, Rochester, N. Y., although located almost opposite the recent big fire, escaped without injury.

BAY CITY, MICH.—A recent fire at the establishment of the Harry N. Hammond Seed Company, resulted in an estimated loss of $10,000, fully insured.

Changed Trucking Conditions.

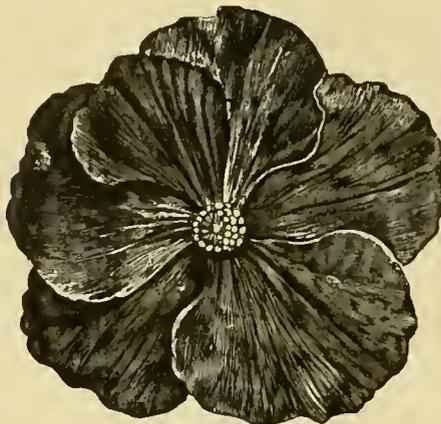

American enterprise and methods have changed the market garden methods in Cuba. There are now arriving at Mobile, Ala., tomatoes, egg-plant and okra of quality equal to mid-season products in this country, stock which in size, color and packing leaves nothing to be desired. The vegetables are moving north and west from Mobile and must, because of extra quality, hurt the sale of extra early stock of lower grades from early shipping points in the United States.

Contract With Farmer Not Binding.

VALLEY, NEB.—Considerable interest has been felt in the information received here tonight from Papillion, where the case of Seedsman J. C. Robinson of Waterloo, Douglas county, against Farmer Ed Strickler of Sarpy county was on trial.

The seedsman sued Strickler on a contract entered into early last year to furnish certain kinds of sweet corn seed and which contract was not fulfilled by the defendant, who, it was alleged, during the seed corn excitement, early in the winter, had sold his seed to the highest bidder, and the seedsman asked judgment in the sum of $1,188.14.

The defendant was represented by three Omaha attorneys and a local man, while an Omaha attorney appeared for the plaintiff. After hearing the case it was learned here tonight Judge Sutton took the matter from the jury and decided in favor of the defendant. This ending of the case, so far as this court is concerned, has caused no end of comment at Valley and vicinity, which is the greatest seed producing district in Nebraska. The case will be appealed.—Omaha World-Herald, February 27, 1904.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

N. W. HALE, Knoxville, Tenn., Pres.; FRANK A. WEBER, St. Louis, Mo., Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—It is denied by the Grace Hill Nursery Company that its output is controlled by any dealer, the stock being disposed of by the company to the retailers direct.

WE understand that the date for the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen at Atlanta, Ga., has not been definitely fixed, although it is believed either June 22 or June 29 will be decided upon.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—“Horticulture, including the nursery industry, is advancing steadily in Alabama,” said R. S. Mackintosh, state horticulturist, in Birmingham, recently. “This has been a good season for orchards and nursery work.”

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Mr. McNair, president of the Newport Horticultural Society, Alex McLellan and others, were before the executive committee of the state board of agriculture, on February 18, advocating action to repress the gypsy moth, San Jose scale and other insects injurious to vegetation.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL.—The report that the Southern California Acclimatizing Association's collections are going to be dispersed is not correct. While the association has offered for sale and disposed already of many of the large specimens growing in its old grounds in space now needed for building purposes, the great bulk of the collections are being transferred to a more favorable and more extensive location within the city limits. There business will be continued on a larger scale.

ATLANTA, GA.—Otto Katzenstein and S. Z. Ruff announce that they have formed a partnership for the purpose of exploiting extensive fields of Rhododendron Catawbiense and kindred plants which they have acquired. They will do business as the firm of Katzenstein & Ruff, with office at 40 Druid Circle. Mr. Katzenstein was, since their inception about eight years ago and until recently, manager of the Pinehurst nurseries at Pinehurst, N. C. Mr. Ruff also is a plantsman and collector, with extensive practical experience gained in charge of large public and private plantings.

Canadian Horticultural Association.

An executive meeting of the Canadian Horticultural Association will be held at Ottawa, Ont., March 9, when it is expected much important business will be transacted.

Bowling Among the Ancients.

A very interesting paper was read recently before the Antiseptic Society of Philadelphia by Professor Rathskeller, of the chair of prismatic theology in the University of Fishtown. His lecture has been deemed of sufficient importance to be made public.

The professor has made an exhaustive study of the subject of bowling, from the time of its inception in Rome, during the reign of Emperor Hatrack, the Fourth, B. C. 7,963, down to last night's games, and his labors have resulted in greatly enriching the treasury of bowling lore. He has spent four years chiefly amid the ruins of ancient Greece and Carthage, and his investigations show that bowling was highly popular among the peoples who once inhabited those shop-worn countries. Light has also been thrown on matters that have long puzzled the wisest savants. Hieroglyphics that have for ages remained undecipherable, are now known to be bowling scores, as to tell the truth, any one with half an eye should have been able to see long ago. The professor made a number of incisions in the earth that yielded some remarkable disclosures.

At one place, near the ruins of Frogopolis, he discovered the rigid figure of a man, in the attitude usually assumed after delivering the ball, who had probably been standing there thousands of years, petrified, no doubt, with astonishment that one of his choicest strike balls had yielded nothing but a measly split.

At another place, at a great depth, was found an incongruous mass of lignum-vitæ ball, human skeletons, Dayton pins, soused pigs' feet, schwartzbrod mit kimmel, Dutch mustard and hard radishes, near which was a pyramid of Bergner & Engel sextiles, showing conclusively that the bowlers of that age attended strictly to business, and seldom went home to meals.

The professor has an idea that the Aztecs were bowling fiends, and that research in their country would be productive of much interesting and useful information. It is his purpose to set out next spring and begin his excavations in Mexico, as soon as the frost is well out of the ground in that country.

P. S.—We did not observe any of the representatives of our esteemed contemporaries at the lecture, hence we in all probability have the honor to be the first to present a synopsis of this important paper to the world. The Deacon, The Commodore, The Barrister and the Judge were on hand and listened with spell-bound attention to this able exposition of their favorite pastime.

Lion in Flower Shop.

Next to a bull in a china shop, a lion in a hothouse seems the real thing in the way of a destroyer. Daniel Cole, a florist of Newark avenue and Erie street, Jersey City, says so. Although a florist's shop at this or any season is not exactly a circus or a zoo, Cole decided a few days ago he needed an extra attraction to draw eyes to his show windows. So he installed a lion cub, six months old, among his American Beauties. Cole was not on familiar terms with the animal—but that didn't worry the cub. To prove that fact the budding king of the desert began to assert his authority in the shop. He began at the bottom, like other creatures of ambition, and selected the florist's ankle when Cole opened the shop yesterday.

Cole went higher up—several wooden steps—and from his lofty perch resented verbally the interference with the conduct of his business. In his flight he dropped his wallet, containing $10 in bills. The cub proceeded to chew on the nice, crisp, green salad of Uncle Sam until he had devoured $7, then he meandered into the icebox in search of other fields to conquer. Then Mr. Cole, the wily old soul, slammed the door, and the cub was in the "cooler." Its keeper bailed it out, but not before it had swallowed the lion's share of the flowers in the box. —New York Press.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—The Murray greenhouses on Bergen avenue are to be removed, Murray Brothers having decided to sell off the property in residential lots.

ATLANTA, GA.—The Tyrol Floral Company has been incorporated with a capital of $25,000. New greenhouses will be constructed to be operated as a wholesale and retail plant. The firm is composed of W. T. Ashford, John A. Lambert and M. J. Smith.

Cleveland.

Business for the past week has been quiet. Mild weather has increased the supply of stock all along the line, but not to any alarming extent. Prices continue about the same for good stock, poor grades having dropped a little. Carnations and roses are at their best, and some fine stock is coming into market. Tulips and daffodils are getting better right along. Bate Brothers are shipping in some splendid La Reine tulips, which find a ready market, the color being just right. Now that the fine weather is with us, the lily growers are off the anxious bench. The prospect for a plentiful supply for Easter seems good. A. Graham & Son have the finest lot that has been seen here for many a year. Hydrangeas and Crimson Ramblers are likely to be scarce unless sunshine keeps with us. Out Mentor way John Merkel has things looking in fine shape. A couple of houses filled with lilies are in fine condition. His Crimson Ramblers are up to the usual standard of excellence. His carnations and roses are also in superb shape.

Carl Hagenburger has the honor of being the only grower in this vicinity who has been successful in flowering gardenias. He intends to devote more space to their culture next year.

Robert Kegg, our park superintendent, who has been confined to his home for the past three months with rheumatism, is somewhat improved.

Mrs. Guy Bate is progressing as favorably as could be expected from her recent accident, being burned from the explosion of a coal oil lamp.

George Tilton, after a serious illness of several weeks, is able to be around the store for a few hours each day.

George E. Fancourt, of Kingston, Pa., and Walter Mott, of Jamestown, N. Y., were visitors in town.

George Smith is passing around the cigars to the health of a new boy.

ECHO.

Hartford, Conn.

There has been on public exhibition for two weeks the collection of dried flowers and photographic views illustrating the native flora and horticultural development of the state which is to form a part of Connecticut's display at the Louisiana Purchase exposition. The flora of the state is represented by a collection of over 2,000 specimens mounted on large swinging screens. Members of the Connecticut Botanical Society and the Connecticut Horticultural Society have been active for a year in collecting and preparing this exhibit which, it is believed, will be the finest in its class in the great exposition. The photographic views are superb and all richly framed. They represent scenes in the public parks of Hartford, New Haven, Meriden and Bridgeport, and are supplemented by views in a number of the finest private estates in Connecticut. The park views were collected and arranged by Theodore Wirth, superintendent of Hartford parks, and the private estate views under the supervision of J. F. Huss, of the Goodwin estate in Hartford. The grounds around the Connecticut building at St. Louis will be planted and adorned by Mr. Karlstrom, Mr. Wirth's assistant in the park department.

New Carnation
THE BRIDE
For 1904.

We have grown this variety for the past four years and can with confidence assert that it is the most prolific white variety we have ever grown.

The flowers average 3 to 3½ inches in diameter, of ideal form and the purest white, borne on good, stout stems which average 14 to 16 inches long, after the plants get well established; a free and continuous producer, and a healthy, clean grower, not subject to disease in any form.

Awarded Certificate of Merit by the New York Florists' Club, February 11, 1901; First prize for the best 100 white at the American Carnation Convention Show in Brooklyn, N. Y., February 1903; Certificate of Merit by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society at their March Exhibition, 1903.

Strong, well-rooted stock ready February 1, 1904.

What Advertisers Say

SAME OLD STORY.—AM. FLORIST Co.:—Kindly discontinue our adv. "Bred in Old Kentucky" The Florist is certainly a splendid medium for advertising. The first insertion brought us orders enough to clean us out of cuttings. We enclose $1.00 to pay for the insertions. When we have more stock will try it again. We were not only highly pleased with the results, but with manner in which you displayed our adv. C. L. BRUNSON & Co. Paducah, Ky.

PLEASURE AND PROFIT.—AM. FLORIST Co.:—Your paper is a weekly source of pleasure and profit to every one connected with this concern, and three copies have been subscribed for by the company for several years—one to my house, one to the greenhouses and one to the store. In addition to that the foreman and one or two of the men each receive a copy.

The WHITE LAWSON.

The Most Valuable White Carnation.

When one considers that about a third of all the carnations grown to-day are LAWSON, the value of a WHITE LAWSON will be at once apparent, and it will undoubtedly stand as far ahead of all white carnations as LAWSON stands ahead of all pink carnations for commercial or private use.

Nothing need be said in praise of WHITE LAWSON except to state that it is a sport of MRS. THOS. W. LAWSON, and is as good as that variety in every respect, with all its remarkably free blooming qualities, but is pure white. No extended description is necessary; its value will appeal at once to every carnation grower.

This originated with Mr. Charles Allen, Floral Park, N. Y., and recognizing at once its great value to the trade we purchased his entire stock. As there are other stocks of White Lawson offered, in order to secure this superior stock, the value of which has been established, order from us, as

WE CONTROL THIS ENTIRE STOCK

As the demand for this is very great and stock somewhat limited, in order to secure early delivery orders should be placed without delay. We can now offer for early March delivery Strong Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Send for our Wholesale Price List, giving list of other novelties—Flamingo, Mrs. M. A. Patten, Nelson Fisher, Etc., also other choice standard sorts. We have, also, an extra fine lot of Gold Storage Lily of the Valley For EASTER Forcing.

Pierson's Premier An extra selected quality of very fine sand-grown Berlin pips. This will give the largest percentage of first-class spikes with the largest number of bells, and will be found very satisfactory. It is more than worth the difference in cost between the price at which we offer it and the price of Extra Quality offered below.

$1.50 per 100; $3.00 per 1000; $30.00 per case of 2,500 pips.

EXTRA QUALITY THREE-YEAR-OLD HAMBURG PIPS. A fine grade of Hamburg Valley and exceedingly good value at the price offered. $1.25 per 100; $11.00 per 1000; $25.00 per case 2,500 pips.

Breitmeyers' New Rose

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID.

To Be Disseminated April 1, 1904.

COLOR. Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE. Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM. Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH. Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific.

The warm weather of the last few days has brought out an abundance of all kinds of flowers. Retail trade inclines to be dull, and with the big supply there has to be an outlet some place. The street fakirs are now in their glory, and some very good flowers are seen on their stands. There is an increased demand for smilax and asparagus, both plumosus and Sprengeri, while common ferns have gone up to $2.50 per 1000.

Richard Witterstaetter has sold his new red carnation, The Cardinal, James Hartshorne, of the Chicago Carnation Company, and Wm. Murphy, of this city, being the purchasers. It is the opinion of the growers around here that Messrs. Hartshorne and Murphy have secured one of the best scarlet carnations in cultivation to-day.

Messrs. Witterstaetter, Gillett, Peterson, Murphy and Partridge made up the delegation from this city to the meeting of the American Carnation Society at Detroit.

George & Allan have been sending some of their bulbous stock to Charles Kuehn, St. Louis, Mo., and are well pleased with their returns.

Thomas Windram and William Murphy have returned from Chicago, Joliet and Lafayette, and report a pleasant time.

A. O.

Providence. R. I.

Business is fair, but nothing special. Flowers are coming in more plentifully, and another week will find a full crop in swing, mostly of roses, carnations and bulbous stock. Violets are suffering from an oversupply and are slaughtered by the outside stores at funny figures. Hardy and fancy ferns are scarce. Bague, of Hinsdale, has usually supplied the local market, but is now unable to do so on account of taking contracts with the big towns and giving poor Providence the go-by. Azaleas are common, but find a slow call.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society has reached the fiftieth anniversary of its incorporation and proposes to commemorate the event by making an effort to secure for itself a permanent home, where its meetings and exhibitions can be held and its library housed. "Better late than never." There is no surer road to wealth and influence for a society than the possession of some real estate that will appreciate in value, while at the same time furnishing headquarters without cost.

M. M.

Rockford, Ill.

The flower trade in this city has increased enormously in the past few years, and those who have kept track say the capacity for production has been more than doubled. All the florists in the city are looking forward to a good trade in the coming months. They have looked well after their plants during the winter and none of them report serious losses from cold. Indications are that a good Easter trade will be enjoyed.

NEW ROSE GENERAL MacARTHUR.

Hybrid Tea.

Color by far the most brilliant of any shade of crimson forcing rose ever offered, retaining its brilliancy when fully expanded. It is also one of the very sweetest varieties ever offered, of very easy culture, as it can be grown in the same temperature as an ordinary Tea variety such as Bride. It is a good, strong, vigorous grower, producing stems 24 to 30 inches long, a free and continuous producer. It can be grown at much less cost than Meteor or Liberty and is a much brighter color than either. Also larger when fully expanded. We predict that this will be the red rose for the multitude. Ready for distribution April 1, 1904.

Utica, N. Y.

The Utica Florists' Club held its annual carnation meeting February 18. There was a large attendance of members and a handsome display of flowers. F. R. Pierson & Company showed Enchantress, Daheim and Adonis. From the Cottage Gardens, Queens, L. I., there were several varieties. One was a variegated pink and white seedling, known as Judge Hinsdale. Another was a white seedling, Mackinac, of fair size, and another a yellow seedling, fringed with red, and known as the Golden Eagle. There was also a dark crimson flower, known as Octoroon; another dark crimson seedling, The President, and a pink seedling, Ethel Ward. Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., had on display Nelson Fisher and Mrs. Patten. A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., showed Prosperity, Queen Louise, Enchantress and Adonis. The J. D. Thompson Carnation Company, of Joliet, Ill., sent Nelson Fisher and Mrs. Patten, and F. Dorner & Sons, of Lafayette, Ind., Lady Bountiful and The Belle, both pure white. There was a vase of seedlings from John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., a pronounced clear yellow, called Imperial, a variegated, Star of Bethlehem, and a large red, John E. Haines.

Besides the carnations the exhibition contained a Begonia Glorie de Lorraine from J. C. Traudt, of Cauajoharie, a pot of primroses from Hakes & Son, of Ilion, a bunch of Bride and Bridesmaid roses from C. F. Seitzer and, from Breitmeyer's Sons, La Detroit.

Arthur Cowee, the well known gladiolus specialist of Berlin, Rensselaer county, reports a most encouraging outlook for 1904. "The orders received," said Mr. Cowee, "up to Saturday, February 22, are beyond the entire sales of 1903." Mr. Cowee has planned to increase his acreage of bulbs over that of last year. About April 10 he will begin to plant nearly eighty acres of the various varieties of Groff's hybrids. One field will be twenty-two acres in extent and one and one-seventh miles in circuit. Across the road from this great display of color will be a smaller field of thirteen acres. A third large field will contain twenty acres and the remainder of the plantings will be in smaller areas. Opposite the railroad station of the village Mr. Cowee intends to plant one acre of his famous "Silver Trophy Strain" in red shades exclusively so that when the visitor alights from the train he will see in front of him a most dazzling display of color. During the planting season Mr. Cowee has from fifty to eighty men, boys and girls employed on the fields. During the harvest period it is hard to get enough hands to take care of the crop. Last fall about ninety people were employed and this year more may be necessary. Last week Mr. Cowee had to cancel by cable some foreign orders for certain sections because they had all been taken some time ago at better prices.

R. D.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Fire on the premises of J. L. Barber, on the Wheeler road, started in the chimney of the boiler room February 16. The ends were burned off four greenhouses. Violets were growing in the houses and the cold air ruined them to the amount of about $1,000. About $500 damage to the building was caused. The property was not insured.

Milwaukee.

Business has been very quiet the past week and stock of all kinds has accumulated in the wholesale houses. Prices have taken a tumble on all items excepting greens. Good roses are now held at $8 per 100 and fancy carnations at $3, but the bulk of the stock sells for less. Violets and bulbous flowers are plentiful and prices on these two items are below producing price. Harrisii and callas are in heavy supply.

W. H. Kennedy returned from a two weeks' trip to the east, called there by the death of his father. He was well pleased with some novelties in carnations and also by the way the eastern florists decorate their show windows. A little improvement in this respect in this city would no doubt help to boom business.

The meeting of the Florists' Club last Tuesday was not well attended but those present did some preliminary work which it is hoped will lead to a general advance in the price of spring plants, such as geraniums, coleus, etc.

C. B. Whitnall, who has been in California for a few weeks, has returned and is all enthusiasm about that part of the country.

Herman Kroseberg is passing the cigars; it is a boy.

Visitor: E. Haentze, Fond du Lac, Wis. H.

Worcester, Mass.

A visit by the writer to H. A. Cook's establishment found everything up to his usual standard of excellence, although the proprietor complained of his carnations not being as good as last year. Mr. Cook is much pleased with Enchantress. In white he is growing Boston Market, Queen, Gov. Wolcott, and a seedling of his own. A house of Lawson is a veritable sea of bloom. Joost does finely. One house of violets is grown. Mr Cook considers this the hardest winter in his experience.

Business remains fairly steady, but we could take care of a good deal more. The weather continues very cold, the thermometer registering nearly zero every night. Five and one-half feet of frost is reported in town.

A retail store has been opened at 390 Main street under the name of the Bay State Floral Company. H. F. Littlefield is the proprietor.

W. J. Woods has had considerable trouble with frozen water pipes, making it difficult to keep his boilers filled.

A. H. L.

Columbus, O.

There has been quite a bit of loss in this section, due to the cold winter just ended. A number of growers report some of their stock damaged, such as hardy roses, bulbous stock, etc., a great deal of which was intended for Easter forcing. Lilies do not make as good a showing as in former years, there being a greater per cent of disease visible. Holland has been well represented during the last few weeks, fully fifty per cent more representatives having called this season than at any other time. There is a fine crop of carnations and roses coming on for Easter.

While there may be some representatives from Columbus at the Detroit carnation meeting, it is hard to say at this writing who will find time to go.

CARL.

MILLERSVILLE, PA.—The large greenhouse belonging to J. P. Lenhardt, was destroyed by fire. His loss is severe.

Holm & Olson lost a great deal of stock in their store the last month through the escape of gas from a leak in the mains in front of their place. For a time it was hardly noticeable except on plants such as primroses and azaleas, but on February 25 it seemed to come directly into the store and nearly drove everyone out. They have made claim against the gas company, which has promised to adjust the damages.

An unusual amount of funeral work has kept the trade booming, and it has been of the very best class. No noticeable difference in sales has taken place since Lent set in, probably on account of the moderating of the severe weather. A surplus of bulbous stock has been noted, especially in yellow. Smilax and other greens seem almost impossible to get anywhere.

Haugen & Swanson have been bringing in quantities of Sulphur Phoenix (white daffodil), which are selling on sight. This is the first year they have been grown in any quantity here.

Aug. S. Swanson had an unusual amount of fine sprays at a recent funeral.

Recent callers were Ralph M. Ward, Jas. Rolker, J. M. Jansen and Paul Berkowitz. O.

The first meeting of the creditors of Henry Morris, against whom an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed at Utica a few weeks ago, was held Monday before Referee in Bankruptcy Chas. L. Stone. Chester H. King was named trustee and his bond was fixed at $5,000. He had been acting as temporary receiver. Attorney Frank B. Hodges, who appeared for the petitioners, represents thirty of the forty claimants. The liabilities will amount to $20,000 and the assets between $3,000 and $4,000. The examination of the bankrupt took place Friday morning. A new chattel mortgage has turned up. It was for $500, made last August and given Charlotte E. Rainford. The principal argument against this claim is that the mortgage was not recorded. Another chattel mortgage for $2,000 was filed shortly before the proceedings against Mr. Morris were instituted.

P. R. Quinlan & Company are planning to rebuild the two greenhouses which were destroyed by fire two weeks ago. A. V. BREWSTER.

MARION, IND.—Elijah Burrows and Andrew Smithmaker were seriously burned February 24 by an explosion of gas in the greenhouse owned by the latter. The two men were at work in the heating room of the greenhouse when the gas escaped from a heater and, becoming ignited, exploded. The men were thrown to the ground and badly burned about the head, face, hands and arms. Farmers living nearby put out the fire.

PADUCAH, KY.—Joseph Mattison has sold his interest in the Mattison greenhouses, maintained here for fifty years, to his partner, Robert Rudolph, who will move them to Rowlandtown, and establish one of the largest floricultural establishments in this end of the state. Mr. Mattison will retain the stock, which he will sell out as rapidly as possible, and no doubt dispose of in the spring. Mr. Rudolph is one of the best known young men in Paducah.

Detroit Convention Notes.

J. M. Gasser, who is in ill health, remained at Mt. Clemens where he will take the mineral baths for several weeks. Mrs. Gasser returned home Saturday.

The modest Frank Holznable of the Detroit Florists' Club developed unusual activity as a member of the reception committee. He had the glad hand for everyone.

The question box seemed to have been overlooked by everyone, even by the vigilant President Rackham.

Many of the visitors who were unacquainted with the topography of Mount Clemens looked in vain for the "mountain" but the only semblance of one to be seen was the immense mound of sandwiches at Breitmeyer's.

It was an unusual spectacle to behold nearly everyone who sat down to the banquet remain seated and evidently intensely interested in every part of the program for so long a time, fully six hours.

E. G. Hill's "phenomenal" speech was certainly the most eloquent and masterly of any ever delivered before by him on a like occasion.

C. W. Ward lingered in Detroit a few days and will visit Lafayette, Joliet and Chicago before his return east.

The daily papers gave over sixteen columns to the description of features of the exhibition, the business sessions, and other matters concerning carnations.

About five thousand persons (of the general public) visited the exhibition. Admission was free by tickets obtained for the asking of any member of the Detroit Florists' Club.

Messrs. Valentine, Dailedouze & Hill, the committee appointed to make an attempt to bring about an affiliation with the American Rose Society, held a preliminary meeting at the Hotel Cadillac Friday afternoon.

President Philip Breitmeyer, of the Society of American Florists, together with Secretary W. J. Stewart, Treasurer Peatty, Harry Altick and Theo. Wirth left Friday afternoon for St. Louis where the meeting of the S. A. F. executive committee took place.

The supply of humor usually provided by J. D. Carmody was missed but the memory of him was kept awake.

The big delegation expected from St. Louis was kept at home to prepare for the reception of the S. A. F. executive committee meeting.

As early as nine o'clock on the last evening of the exhibition every flower had been appropriated by the public and despite the fact that three police officers tried in vain to prevent it. As sleepy as many of the carnations were they still found admirers.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange was the donor of the $25 sweepstakes prize, which was inadvertently omitted from the list of prizes as printed in the last issue. Mention should also be made of the exhibit of R. Fisher, of Great Neck, L. I., who had two vases of well grown freesias, one a pure white named Purity and the other a creamy white named Buttercup.

The Banquet.

A fitting finale to the carnation meeting was the banquet in Harmonie hall, at which nearly 300 persons were present. The large dining room in which the banquet was held was tastefully decorated with palms and wild smilax. The speakers' table, arranged across the further end of the room, near the stage, was adorned exclusively with La Detroit roses and smilax, while the other long tables were decorated lavishly with carnations. An orchestra played until the commencement of the speeches, which were alternated with acts by local vaudeville artists. President Robert Flowerday, of the local club, was toastmaster, and in that capacity was a complete success. Besides speakers to toasts, those who made short addresses were E. N. Peirce, Waltham, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind., and J. F. Sullivan, of Detroit. At the close of Mrs. Vesey's remarks, Philip Breitmeyer presented her with an immense bunch of La Detroit roses. Walter Mott sang and received much applause. J. D. Thompson presented to W. K. Partridge the Enchantress challenge cup, and James Hartshorne transferred the Lawson medal won by his firm to Fred Dorner, the actual raiser of Fiancee, the winning variety. The final resolutions were read and the festivities closed with the singing by the entire party of "America." It was then exactly 2 a. m.

The toasts given at the banquet, as stated in the last issue, were: "Our Ex-Presidents," W. N. Rudd; "Carnations, Roses and Chrysanthemums, Their Friends and Admirers," E. G. Hill; "The Dominion of Canada," Wm. Gammage; "Has It Ever Occurred to You?" Lewis Ullrich; "Society of American Florists," President Breitmeyer; "Flowers and the Sick," Dr. E. B. Smith; "Carnation League," H. M. Altick; "The Carnation in the Past," Geo. A. Rackham.

Additional Convention Visitors.

Harry Byers, Dayton, O.; Joseph Wall, Greenfield, Mich.; P. Welch, Boston, Mass.; H. R. Carlton, Willoughby, O.; L. B. Crow, New York; S. A. Baur, Erie, Pa.; Chas. Gibson, Cleveland, O.; H. Jennings and F. Dix, London, Ont.; Mrs. Dunkley, Kalamazoo, Mich.; W. H. Watson, Lapeer, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Gasser, Cleveland; A. J. Guttman, New York; S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; F. Burki, Pittsburg, Pa.; E. N. Kroninger, Allentown, Pa.; Wm. Jackson, Cincinnati, O.; L. E. Small, Tewksbury, Mass.; R. W. Clucas, New York; E. H. Cushman, Sylvania, O.

Trip to Mt. Clemens.

On Friday morning nearly two hundred visitors, accepting the invitation of John Breitmeyer's Sons to visit their establishment at Mt. Clemens, met at the Brush street depot and took a special train provided by the firm which reached the Bath city at 10:30 a. m. When the Breitmeyer place was reached the herculean task of serving a lunch to the immense crowd was begun. Wine of many varieties and plenty of everything was provided. After lunch a tour of the greenhouses was made. Their greatest interest centered upon the new rose La Detroit, and, notwithstanding the evidence everywhere of the propagator's knife and the most unfavorable of recent winter weather the popular novelty was in splendid condition which prompted many to leave their orders without further delay. In the large house recently erected were over a hundred thousand young plants awaiting the date of shipment and as many more in the sand rooting. When the time was announced for the return trip Wm. Scott mounted a table and in behalf of the assembled guests thanked the firm and particularly Philip Breitmeyer for the unbounded hospitality extended the visitors.

Final Resolutions.

Wm. Scott, chairman of the committee on final resolutions, read the following at the banquet:

WHEREAS, There has just been brought to a close one of the most successful meetings in the history of the society in spite of snow blockades in many localities, making it impossible for many members to reach this meeting; it has been one of the best attended conventions since its organization; the business meetings of the society have been well attended; the essays have been interesting and instructive; the debates have been entertaining, and brought out many views that will redound to the future welfare of the society; the exhibition in quantity and quality of blooms surpasses any previous exhibit. Although through the delay in the arrival of the exhibits, the local committee was obliged to make the greatest possible effort to get them all in order, and the splendid system inaugurated by the committee overcame these unavoidable accidents, and all was in readiness at the appointed hour. The staging and system of judging and executive ability displayed by President Rackham deserve the highest commendation.

RESOLVED, That the thanks of the society be tendered to the local press for the prominent, cordial and interesting manner in which they have given space in their columns and reported the proceedings of the society.

RESOLVED, That with great appreciation we tender our thanks to his honor, Mayor Maybury, for his presence during the opening meeting, but more especially for his most eloquent address, and beautiful thoughts, and kind allusions to our calling, the most eloquent remarks we have ever heard addressed to a convention of florists.

RESOLVED, That it is with the deepest regret that we have missed at this convention a familiar face, that most good man, one who may truly be said to have been a loyal member and pillar of the society, and that we mourn the death of Henry Weher, of Oakland, Maryland. And, finally,

RESOLVED, That we tender to the local club our heartiest thanks for the hospitality and good will and hearty welcome tendered to us by every member of the local club of florists, assuring them one and all that we will not soon forget this most enjoyable convention.

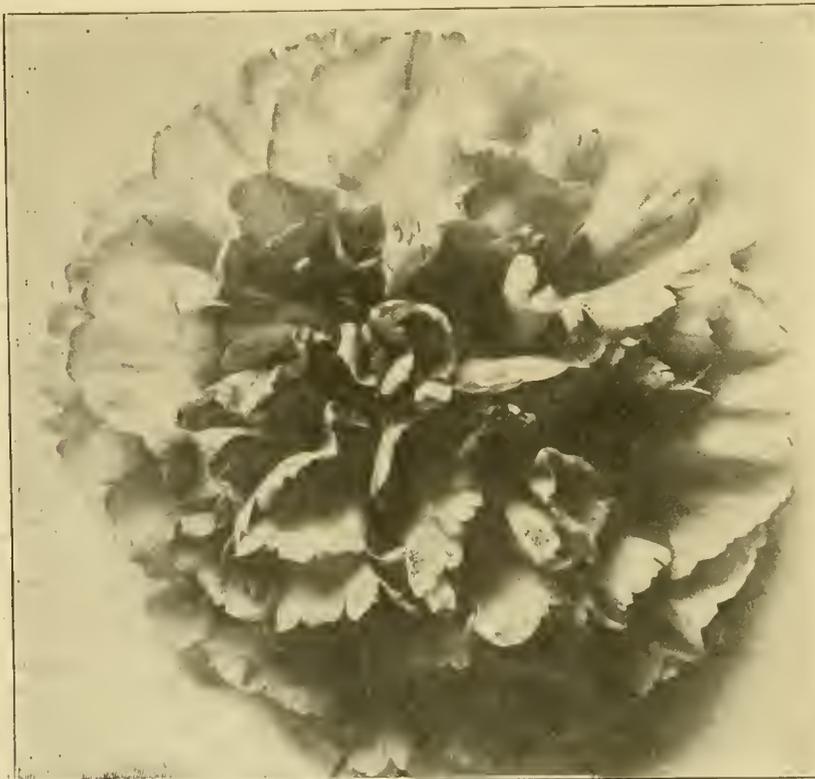

Has It Ever Occurred to You?

BY LEWIS ULLRICH, TIFFIN, O.

Has it ever occurred to you that the practical florist is, as a rule, a clever, whole-souled person, in whom the trait of good fellowship is a sort of a second nature? You will generally find him with a deep sense of honor and a sincere wish to do what is right between man and man. The real florist is easy to approach, has a welcome for everybody and a hearty handshake that carries a feeling of friendship with it, which shows that he has his heart in the right place. He may be a man not possessed of many of the higher attainments of life, but by nature he has an inborn love for the beautiful, and is possessed of a great amount of patience and perseverance, or he could not content himself to carry out the many details required in growing plants and flowers successfully. Florists are usually a contented class of people, and not grumblers, kickers or fault-finders, nor envious of the more successful one, but willing to give credit for what they know and what they have done. The real, practical florist is always willing and ready to give the less experienced the sought-for advice or information, and you will invariably find him a faithful husband, an indulgent father and a law-abiding citizen.

Has it ever occurred to you that, as nearly every flock has its black sheep, so the fraternity of florists has an occasional one; one who has not got the true sense of honor, that willingness to be accommodating and obliging; is a florist in name only; is selfish, conceited, arrogant, and, to use the slang phrase, is stuck on himself? Has it ever occurred to you that that man has no use for you, only so long as he sees profit in your acquaintance? Then he don't care how he meets you. He may mortify you with a snub to a civil question. Such a man is so filled with vinegar that the nobler qualities that go to make the man find no room in him. It is advisable to steer clear of such a character, for life is too short and the genial characters too plentiful to waste any time on such an individual.

Has it ever occurred to you how much good the Carnation Society has done for the ordinary florists? Many a one can thank these carnation meetings in a great measure for his success in growing carnations. He saw by the exhibits that others were doing much more than he and producing better flowers than he, and being desirous to do equally well, profited by their experience. With what he learned while in attendance at the meetings, information got from his brother florists, he went home determined to improve his condition, and did improve it. Has it ever occurred to you what the stay-at-home florist has missed by not belonging to this society? He who thinks he knows it all, that fellow who says, "They can't teach me anything." Such a man you will usually find an old fogey, a back number, his place of business generally dilapidated and disorderly and looking like an old junk shop, full of broken pots, empty boxes and dead plants standing around, tumbled down benches, muddy walks, his tools out of place; in fact, he has no place for anything, and when he wants a tool he must spend more time looking for it than is spent in using it. If he would get a move on himself and go away from home occasionally and attend these meetings, go and see how other florists do, he would find out that there is a great deal for him to learn; he would find that to be prosperous he must get out of the rut in which he has plodded year after year. He will find out that he is a back number, and that he must get a hump on himself and profit by the experience of others, if he wishes to be progressive and get into the front rank with up-to-date florists.

Has it ever occurred to you that these meetings are to the go-ahead florists what the oasis is to the traveler in the Sahara desert? The traveler trudges on day after day through the sandy desert; he knows that by traveling a little longer he will finally reach a bright, green spot, where he can rest for a while in the shade of the green trees and quench his thirst, and then, strengthened and refreshed, proceed on his journey. So with the go-ahead florist; he goes on from day to day, busy with his business, faithfully attending to the wants thereof, that he may realize a good return for his labors. He, too, is looking forward to the carnation meetings and the conventions of the Society of American Florists as oases in life's journey, where he can rest from his labors for a few days, bask in the smiles and kindly greetings of his brother florists and, refreshed and happy to have been there, go to his home well repaid for the time spent and the expense incurred.

Has it ever occurred to you, young men of the society, that some day not very far distant, when the older men will have stepped down and out, when the Angel of Death will have knocked at their doors and they have gone to their reward in the great beyond, that you, young men, will have to take the place vacated by their demise? I would advise you to employ every moment of your time to improve yourselves; strive to become proficient in every branch of the work, from the wheeling of the soil up, through the various details of growing and producing good plants and flowers. Learn how to dispose of them at a profit. Adopt a good system of bookkeeping and be sure to learn how to be a good, prompt collector of bills, for that is the great finale of all your labors. And while at the conventions attend closely to the business meetings, be observant as to what is going on, take part in the business and the discussions and profit thereby, so that when you are called on to take your place in the management of the affairs of this great carnation society you will be prepared to do so.

Has it ever occurred to you that when a society undertakes to carry out the various details connected with a convention and the arrangement of the exhibits it has undertaken a big job, and the bulk of the work usually falls upon a few? From what I have observed and learned I think the American Carnation Society is under many and lasting obligations to George Rackham, the president of the society, and to Robert Flowerday, the president of the Detroit Florists' Club, and for the great bulk of the work to our whole-souled and our obliging friend, J. F. Sullivan, the secretary and manager of the exhibit.

It has undoubtedly occurred to you during your visit here that Detroit is an ideal place to hold a convention meeting. It undoubtedly has occurred to you that the members of the Detroit Florists' Club are of the true stripe, genial, hail fellows well met; that they have their hearts in the right place, and that they have met us as true florists, with a hearty handshake that, as I said before, carries with it that feeling of true friendship and hospitality. At their homes at all times you will invariably find their latchstring on the outside, a hearty welcome, and something substantial on the inside. To go into details and enumerate the good qualities of all the members of the Detroit Florist Club would take up more time than is allotted to me. And I cannot help but speak of another who is a fair sample of the caliber of the members; one who is a son of parents who were practical florists—yes, he is one of a family of florists; one whose name has gone before him; one who is fondly known from Maine to Florida, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific; a man whom you will always find the same genial and obliging gentleman; a man who has a kind word for every one, even for the most lowly employed in a greenhouse; a man whom Detroit surely is proud to claim as one of her citizens. It is he who is our standard-bearer as president of the Society of American Florists—our genial friend, Philip Breitmeyer.

Ladies and gentlemen, when we leave Detroit and each goes back to his home, we will leave with reluctance but filled with gratitude and thankfulness to the Detroit Florists' Club for its hospitality, and we go with the conviction that we have been bettered by having been here.

Exhibiting Carnations.

BY WILLIAM SCOTT, OF BUFFALO, N. Y.

Since the time that I was asked, or may be volunteered, to read a paper before this meeting, some change of the subject has been made and, as those changes were made without my consent, it gives me the privilege to wander a little from the text. If I can bring about by any thought or suggestion the increased usefulness of the American Carnation Society, the title of my remarks is of little consequence.

Our society was formed and exists not alone for the benefit of, or usefulness to, those who have new varieties to disseminate, but for every member who grows carnations. Whether large or small growers, they look to this society for its stamp of approval as a guide before investing in any new varieties. Don't think, you gentlemen who are so wonderfully improving every desirable attribute of the carnation, that the writer thinks for a moment that you are getting any more glory and profit out of the society than you deserve. You are not. Without you our society could not exist and the annual exhibition of the new varieties is the grand feature and attraction that brings members from long distances to attend the meetings.

I have nothing to criticize of what our society has done, nor its methods of accomplishment. The exhibition of and premiums given for standard varieties is a good feature, for it teaches growers that some one can do an old variety in fine shape, but it is to make acquaintance with new varieties that brings us together for these most enjoyable meetings, and that is by far the most important feature of our annual convention. The committee that is annually appointed to award certificates to these new varieties do their work, to my knowledge, most conscientiously and exercise all the care and caution that they can, but only in rare instances do they know anything of the new aspirants to fame, except by the few flowers that are on exhibition. They do not know how many poor flowers, were left at home. It's none of their business to learn whether the plant produced only seven such blooms during the season, or if it produced twenty-five. They are not supposed to know what quality of soil this variety was grown in, unless they happen to be acquainted with the locality and establishment of the raiser. Neither are they acquainted with the temperature that best suits any certain variety.

I will admit that these important points are freely imparted by the raiser to any prospective purchaser, and without doubt any and all those firms sending out new varieties would, and do, most gladly welcome any intending buyers to visit and see for themselves these varieties growing. With large investors in a new variety this is often done, but with the great army of florists this is impossible and they wait for the report of the convention as to what rank a variety took as a prize winner and how many points it scored in the certificate class.

To repeat, with all the careful judgment that the committee brings to bear in scoring points, they have nothing but these few extra selected flowers to guide them, and although many a variety has been awarded a certificate that well deserved it, and its sterling good qualities have made it a bread winner in every section of the country, yet you all know that while this has been the case there have also been sent out with a certificate from this society a good many varieties that had but a short and ignoble career. Money gone into pockets that never deserved it. Still worse, a waste of hench room, time and labor. Granted that the raiser himself is often deceived. A variety may do well with him for three or four years and he honestly believes it is a splendid thing and he would not be patriotic to the trade if he did not let his brother florists participate in the benefits derived by growing his wonderful variety; then in almost every place except the soil and environment in which it was raised from a seedling and first showed its good qualities, it has turned out to be a miserable failure and a pecuniary loss to many a man who felt the loss.

We shall hear from Robert Craig as to his views on the early collapse of many most promising varieties; that is something entirely outside the province of my subject, but it has some bearing in this way, that if a dozen growers in different sections of the country were testing the new varieties before their dissemination this collapse might be discovered before the raiser had a chance to send them out. We know, and so do you all, of instances where a variety, after giving every promise, being shown at our exhibitions until it would have been in large demand, has been withdrawn and not one sent out simply because the owner discovered faults and failings in the variety and believed it would be a disappointment to those who bought it. This is most honest and honorable conduct and cannot be too highly admired and commended. The opportunity to make a few thousand dollars was sacrificed, but the reputation and confidence in the firm was greatly enriched.

We all remember, some fifteen years ago, that there were a half dozen or more firms in the country who thought it very necessary for the welfare of the chrysanthemum growers of the land that each should send out its set of new varieties. The set was twelve varieties. We also remember that if there was one real acquisition in each set, it was all we could hope for, and often more than we got. That prolific production died a natural death, not because the chrysanthemum became less popular, but the florists of the country got wiser and learned that no one firm can have the good fortune to raise twelve varieties of great merit in one year. If they had succeeded in producing one variety that surpassed in all desirable qualities any existing flower of its color, they had done well and it would have been more profitable to the average florist had he paid the specialist the price of the whole set for one plant of that real good variety and not have wasted money, time and space on the other long forgotten and useless eleven.

Nothing as absurd has yet taken place with the carnation, yet if you look through the list of new varieties offered this year it is a pretty long one and the man who wants to grow the best is greatly puzzled to know what to buy, and I think it is the special duty of this society to guide him in his choice to obtain the best in every class. I am not insinuating for a moment that the disseminators of those chrysanthemums, or of the present-day carnations, are practicing anything but a legitimate and honorable business. As long as they can find customers and a profitable sale for their new varieties, they are justified in advertising and sending them out. It is simply business, and human nature, and will continue till the men who grow to produce cut flowers only realize that, great as the improvement of the carnation has been within the past fifteen years, we cannot expect that each succeeding year there are going to be a dozen varieties sent out that surpass all that have gone before.

To digress a moment. Heredity has as much to do with the improvement of flowers as it has in the improvement in the animal kingdom. There is, there must be, in nature a constant tendency upward and onward toward improvement. Plants and animals on the earth without man's interference are here by natural selection. Plants and animals that man has influenced, our economic and garden plants and our domestic animals, are here by artificial selection. But this improvement does not occur with every individual and perhaps with the case of florists' flowers not one in 10,000. You carnation specialists know that you may raise 10,000 seedlings, all from parents of great excellence. Every seedling has an equal chance, yet many will revert away back to a remote progenitor, a single-petaled dianthus. Ten per cent may be equal in size and color to their immediate parent and perhaps one in 1,000 may be superior in some quality to either parent, and different in another, and if you get one in 10,000 that surpasses the parents in all good qualities, you are lucky. You have advanced the flower slowly and at a cost of time and money, yet slightly you have lifted the flower upwards.

The advent of a wonderful flower, let it be the Lawson carnation or Catherine Mermet rose, is like the sudden appearance of genius among men. "Like begets like" is a trite old saying, but only partly true. There is nothing in the ancestry of Shakespeare, Burns, Napoleon or Lincoln to account for their inspiration and power of intellect. They towered over their ancestors as well as their descendants, as did that one little seed that produced that matchless flower, Mrs. Lawson. Why this is or what governs it we know nothing, but we know it seldom occurs.

GROUP OF SEEDLING CARNATIONS AS GROWN BY C. W. WARD, QUEENS, N. Y.

BRIDESMAID ROSES IN THEIR FIRST YEAR AT J. A. BUDLONG & SON CO.'S.

Now I think I have said enough against the evil of too many new varieties being introduced that are not improvements over existing varieties, admitting at the same time that as long as purchasers can be found these raisers of new varieties are doing a legitimate business and they will continue to do so just as long as they find it profitable, and admitting also that under our necessary artificial culture of the carnation the best of varieties wear out, for propagation by cuttings is not raising a new individual, it is merely dividing and perpetuating the same old plant. The seedling is the birth of an individual and therefore we look to the man who is a specialist along these lines to give us new varieties that possess health and vigor, as well as the other attributes that make a desirable variety.

I am aware that several firms which had new varieties to send out have sent to a few growers in different parts of the country a dozen or twenty-five plants for them to test in their soil and climate, knowing that if the variety was a success with them that the word of these men as to the qualities of the variety, as well as the inspection by many growers who had an opportunity to see it growing, if favorable, would add largely to its sales. This plan is, in my opinion, just what should be done and practiced to a greater extent and with some recognized system.

To send a bunch of flowers to a meeting of some florists' club, as several firms so kindly sent beautiful flowers to our meeting in Buffalo two weeks ago, is a great treat and affords many men an opportunity to look upon these wonderful flowers who cannot possibly, from some cause or other, attend our national gathering. Don't think for a moment that because they have seen these flowers they will not want to attend these conventions; it will rather, I think, raise enthusiasm and make them anxious to look upon the wonderful display that we have before us today. Withal that is not enough and we learn nothing of the habit, productiveness, faults and failings of the variety that we cannot learn from the few beautiful, perfect flowers that are set before us.

I have often remarked to a brother florist who was dabbling in the seedling business (it is very fascinating), that if he had the good fortune to raise a seedling that proved, under his care, to possess size, color, stem, freedom and other good qualities and it sold well and was profitable, then he should keep on growing it and not trouble himself about sending it out. Keep it and make money from the flowers. The very fact that it did well from the original seedling plant to the time when you had a thousand plants is proof that this seedling of yours was suited with your soil and climate and care. Many florists have done this and I was strongly of the opinion a few years ago, when so many seedlings were offered, that the majority of florists would soon depend on their own seedlings. I think my memory is correct when I state that Daybreak, which marked an epoch in the history of carnation culture, quite as much as Lawson did, three or four years ago, was sold by the raisers for the enormous sum of $300. It seems to me that if the firm that raised it had kept it for three or four years and grown an acre of it, they would have realized 100 times as much from the blooms as they did by selling it.

Now let me propose that this society select or designate ten or twelve florists in different parts of the country; naturally they would be in the neighborhood of our large cities or in localities where carnations were extensively grown. They should be men who are widely known to be good, careful cultivators, having the facilities as well as the skill to thoroughly test and demonstrate the value and merits of any variety put under their care. They should not be men or firms that are interested in the distribution of their own seedlings. That is evident, for human nature is still human nature and a man who had a scarlet variety which he was putting on the market would hardly feel that it was his duty to grow and boost some other fellow's scarlet variety. If he did he would be more saintly and unselfish than anyone who has lived for nearly 2,000 years.

We cannot make this compulsory, either with those who are to give these new varieties a trial in their houses or on the man who intends sending out his new varieties, but I believe there would be no difficulty in finding a good, capable man in every neighborhood glad to grow twenty-five plants of any variety sent to him. There would not be so many. Even supposing there were twenty new varieties offered next year and twenty-five plants of each, it would be only 500 plants. A comparatively small space would be required and surely the flowers cut from these plants would well pay for the bench room. As I believe establishments can be found most willing to give these new varieties a trial, so do I believe that every man who has a seedling he honestly believes in and the large sales of which he is anxious for, will be heartily glad to have it tested in several different sections of this broad land.

With all sincerity, I say that I know no men or firms who intentionally send out a poor variety of carnation. They are in love with their own offspring and if their offspring fails when abroad in the cold world, they erred in their judgment, but meant well. Ten or twelve stations, or I may call them, trial grounds, distributed over the continent, including our neighbors and brethren of the Dominion, would give us many textures of soil as well as varied climatic conditions. I need not enter into that, for you all know in the wide expanse of latitude and longitude from the shores of the Gulf to the wheat fields of Manitoba and the rock ribbed coast of Maine to the mild and salubrious timber lands of Washington, there are lands of dark clouds for months, and others of almost continuous sun; states where the absence of rain makes irrigation necessary and localities where too much rain is feared.

I would have these men who are making these trials report to the secretary of the society by February 1 of each year. If a variety has not shown its good qualities by that time it has no place in the list of winter flowering carnations. On receipt of these reports the secretary of our society should publish them in the trade papers, or, if you think better, have them printed in circular form and mailed to every member of the A. C. S. in good standing and to non-members who applied for the report at $2 per copy. The report from the men giving these new varieties a trial would, of course, tell us the quality of soil, temperature, what style of bench, and other information that would guide us to learn whether our conditions would suit it. The nearest trial ground to our home would naturally be the one we should look to for our most valuable information. Failures would doubtless be reported from some quarters, but if the variety was really worth our buying, it would be sure to have enough favorable reports to ensure its wide distribution. In addition to the report of the grower, a local committee might visit the establishment in December and give a much more valuable report from seeing the plants growing and the flowers they were producing, than is the report of a committee which only sees some selected flowers sent to them. Perhaps this would be the most valuable estimate of the merits of the varieties.

In conclusion, gentlemen, I think the object of this society is to help and benefit every member and what I propose would, I think, go far towards that end. There is, of course, detail to be worked out in the plan, but something along the lines I have endeavored to explain would I think be a blessing to the thousands of men and women who are striving to make an honest penny in the virtuous and gentle art of raising blossoms of the divine flower.

PEORIA, ILL.—James C. Murray is still confined to his bed by illness, from which he has been suffering since October, 1903.

BATAVIA, ILL.—Williams & Sons Company will soon commence the work of rebuilding their greenhouses at the corner of Main street and Batavia avenue. At present the houses all front on Batavia avenue and their length is down Main street. The new plan is to have them front on Main street and run in the other direction. The office building of the firm will also be rebuilt.

BRIDE ROSES IN THEIR SECOND YEAR AT J. A. BUDLONG & SON CO.'S.

WITH THE GROWERS

A Rhode Island Flower Factory.

Wm. White.

The question of profitability, as between vegetable forcing and flower forcing, is still open, considering the number of flower growers who are turning their attention to lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes as side issues and, on the other side, the many vegetable forcers who are now devoting some of their best glass to the production of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and lilies. Among the latter class is the extensive Budlong establishment at Auburn, near Providence, R. I., world-renowned for the production of wintergreens and the manufacture of pickles, and now for the past three years making itself an appreciable factor in the rose and carnation market of Boston and Providence.

The outfit consists, at present, of two houses, each 22x700 feet, filled with Bride and Bridesmaid roses; one house of equal dimensions filled in part with these roses and with Liberty and American Beauty; one house of Lawson carnations, 30x500 feet; one each of Prosperity and Genevieve Lord, each 20x300 feet; one of equal size filled with Boston Market and Gov. Wolcott, and a new double span house, 58x700 feet, one-half of which contains 20,000 White Cloud and a full bench of Lorna, and the other half, having been just finished, being devoted to young stock for the present, although intended ultimately for roses. This department, although but a small item in a business such as that of Budlong & Son, is a good-sized establishment in itself, as New England flowerhouses go, amounting to close to 120,000 square feet of ground covered, and there is no lack of ground or capital for its unlimited extension should results warrant. It is under the supervision of William White, formerly with Alex. Montgomery, John Montgomery and W. H. Elliott, and his rose-growing education is demonstrated in the quality of the roses as grown here, which have the genuine Waban swing in their every movement. All is grafted stock on solid beds built on a broken stone foundation. Two houses are in their second year. One house, planted last July, has flower canes in abundance from four to five feet tall. The carnations, although grown on a sort of rough-and-ready method as compared with the dainty precision characteristic of some modern places, are healthy and evidently producing a profitable output. W. F. Molloy, for many years salesman for the Waban conservatories, fills a similar position now for the Budlong establishment in the Boston market. See illustrations on preceding page.

A. Leuthy & Co., Roslindale, Mass.

The establishment of A. Leuthy & Company at Roslindale, Mass., of which views are given herewith, has been developed from unpretentious beginnings through hard work and close attention until at present its interests have become such that Mr. Leuthy has found it advisable to take in a partner in the person of David Lumsden, recently manager of the MacMulkin greenhouses at Jamaica plain. Mr. Lumsden, who comes of a family of three generations of gardeners and served an apprenticeship at Veitch's in England, brings to the undertaking the requisite ambition and training and under the management of two such men as Mr. Leuthy and Mr. Lumsden a leading place among New England plant establishments is assured for the new firm.

Small ferns for table jardinières and similar uses are a leading specialty. The demand for mixed pans with cocos or kentia centers for the Boston market is very steady and the output of such standard varieties as Pteris serrulata, P. serrulata nobilis, Wimsetti and other crested forms, P. albo-lineata Mayii, P. tremula, Adiantum cuneatum, A. O'Brienii, A. gracillimum, Cyrtomium falcatum, Selaginella Emmeliana and Aspidium tsusimensis is very large. The late sluggishness in the palm business has led many growers to abandon the specialty and turn the other things but this firm has confidence in the future now that over-production is curtailed and will still make the palm-growing industry a prominent branch of their business.

Easter plants hold forth in several of the houses now. There is a very fine house of Japanese longiflorum lilies, one of genistas and one of azaleas which are bursting into color. Azaleas in the smaller sizes are not so well budded as in previous years but the medium and large sizes are very fine. The large, cool storage house is inadequate for present demands and another of equal area is to be added in the spring, with possibly some greenhouses also. A Kroeschell boiler is to be installed in place of an "Electric" heater which, although good in some respects, has proved very inconvenient when the boiler tubes required cleaning. One Kroeschell boiler already in the establishment has given satisfaction. Mr. Leuthy will make a trip to Europe in midsummer.

Two Long Island Erica Growers.

The establishment of Louis Dupuy at Whitestone has a well-grounded reputation among the New York city florists for heathers. A few years ago the varieties grown were limited mainly to E. melanthera, hyemalis, persoluta alba and rosea, Wilmoreana and a few Cavendishiana, but as their cultural requirements in this climate became better understood and their beauty came to be more widely recognized other varieties have been gradually added to the list until now many types are in regular cultivation,

Mr. Dupuy being at all times a pioneer in their introduction. To the majority of the retailers, however, the identity of the variety is of no consequence; all he is concerned about is that it sells, and sell it generally does under the alluring name of "genuine Scotch heather," regardless of whether it originated in the tropics or the antipodes.

Among the pretty heaths seen at Mr. Dupuy's this season, in addition to those above mentioned are Erica hybrida, sometimes known as E. cylindrica, with large, bright coral flowers; mammosa intermedia with pale purple downy flowers; perspicua nana, with bluish white tubular flowers and slender habit; perspicua erecta; regerminans; mirabilis; Victoria, large orange-red flowers; ovata, very large purplish red flowers; cupressina, with globular pink-tinted bells and foliage of the most beautiful green; Sanderiana; Mediterranea; bruniades, with pendulous pink flowers, both foliage and flowers peculiarly clothed with woolly hairs; and several of the handsome ventricosa varieties. Mr. Dupuy has determined to abandon the use of frames in erica growing, finding that it is more economical and reliable in the long run to give them room in the greenhouses in all their stages of growth.

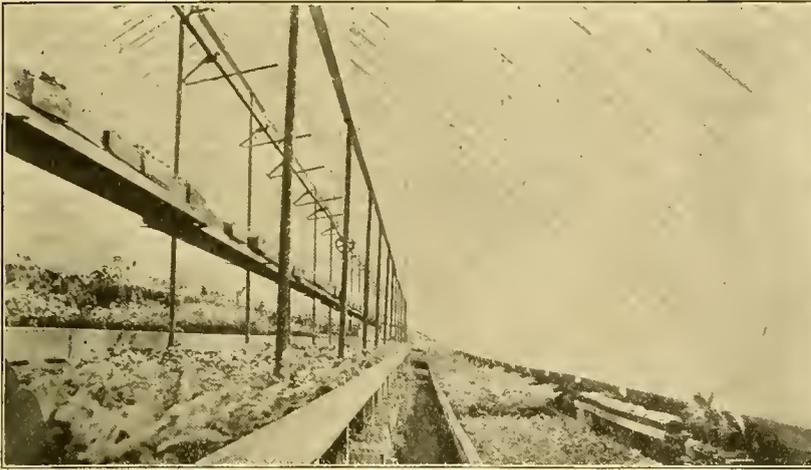

Hydrangeas, lilacs, lilies and daisies divide the honors here with the ericas and among the azaleas a noticeable one is Dame Melanie, dwarf in habit and with light rose, white bordered blossoms. Acacia dealbata, with silvery multi-pinnate foliage, is beautiful enough to soon win for itself a place among the standard Easter specialties.

At E. D. Darlington's, in Flushing, are also to be seen a large stock of heathers, many of the species and varieties above enumerated being under cultivation and still others under observation and experiment. Mr. Darlington still makes use of frames for the handling of young stock, the frames being heated by coils of pipe. A large quantity of the popular little Azalea Hexe is in readiness for Easter. Acacia Lindenensis may be mentioned as an addition to the Easter plants here and will bear watching. Interest centers in an expedient in lily culture adopted by Mr. Darlington. Having potted a large number of lilies in 5½-inch pots instead of 6-inch as should have been done, he is trying the experiment of slipping the plants, pots and all, into the larger sized pots, on the supposition that the moisture retained by the second receptacle will supply the needed stimulant to the pot-bound roots, thus saving the labor of repotting.

THE VIOLET.

Propagation of Violets.

If the stock for the coming season's planting is not now in the sand, I would advise putting it in about April 1, providing the grower wishes to plant in the house about June 1 from the sand bed. If he wishes to have them potted up before planting in beds, any time from March 1 would do, but the sooner the better. The first thing to do when starting to propagate violets is to have good, healthy stock. If you haven't this don't propagate, as the best is none too good. Have a sand bed, but not sand that has been used before, as new sand is cheap compared with old sand and, perhaps, failure. We use a table about two and one-half feet above the walk, with boards about four inches wide, with good drainage, and to prevent the sand from sifting through between the boards we take a little wet moss and cover the cracks. After you have the cracks all covered, if you wish to keep the cuttings in the sand from six to eight weeks, put about one and one-half inches of light soil in the bottom of the bench and then about three inches of good sand, not too fine, but sharp, on the top of the soil, making it about four and one-half inches in all, or three and one-half inches, packed down.

Now for the house. If it be a north side house the plants need not be syringed one half as much as in a south side house, as the sun doesn't get at it. Any one having a south side house must throw a spray over the cuttings at the early part of hot days for at least ten days, until the cuttings get started. But a north side house needn't have so much water, as it is naturally darker and cooler. Great care must be taken in reference to cuttings. The best success, as we have always found it, comes from good, strong, side arms running out from the plants. Take those off with a knife and have two or three eyes on each cutting, removing all the leaves except about three at the crown. See that they are put in a large tub of water for an hour to harden them, so when you do so they will be nice and crisp. After having them cut, put them in water again until you get from 500 to 1,000, when they may be taken to the propagating bed. Be sure your sand is well packed and watered before starting. When ready to propagate take a two-inch strip, one inch thick and as long as the bed is wide, put it along the bed, and with a thick knife make a groove in the sand about one inch deep for the cuttings. Put in the cuttings about one inch apart in rows, and after the first row is filled put the stick within one-quarter inch of the cuttings, take a hammer and make the sand firm against the slips. Before removing the stick make another groove in the sand for the next row, and so on until finished. Water when there are 500 or so in the sand. Don't let them wither, as every time they wither they have a check, which means so much loss at the end of the season. For shading in propagation have wires running from the plate to the ridges about six feet apart and stretch on them muslin, which is convenient and not very expensive. When done at the end of the season remove the muslin and pack it away until needed again. After the very hot weather comes in the spring a shading of naphtha and white lead may be put on the glass on the outside. We always use two pounds of white lead to a gallon of naphtha, and apply it with a spray pump.

THE CARNATION.

Dispensing With Steam Heat.

The severely cold weather, with its dark dreary days is now quickly passing away, and each sun brings us nearer to more sunshine and warmth, consequently artificial heat can be dispensed with gradually. On most bright days very little steam heat is necessary when once the sun rises far enough for its rays to strike the glass, and as soon as the temperature of the house gets above 60° the steam can be taken off entirely, though the best plan is to put on a small crack of ventilation the first thing in the morning, keeping a pipe of steam running until about 8 o'clock, by which time the heat from the sun will be strong enough to allow the steam to be all taken off. Then the temperature can be regulated by ventilation, which must be closely watched to guard against a weak, soft growth. At no season of the year will the plants grow more rapidly than at this time or absorb the nourishment as quickly, which also means that the blooms will mature very much sooner, and if allowed to develop in a close house of high temperature they will be without that fine and glossy texture and their keeping qualities will be greatly impaired. The general routine in the culture of the plants can be carried on the same as for the last month, excepting that they will take up more water each week. Also, an occasional syringing can be given them, choosing a bright day and doing it early enough to allow the plants to dry out before nightfall. Go over the plants every few days, and if you find any of the shoots outside the wire rings, place them inside before they get too large to handle without damaging them. It takes a very short time for a plant to get out of shape when it is growing as rapidly as they do at this time of the year. Disbudding should claim our close attention, and also keep the side shoots cleaned off lower down the stem than has been the rule where they have been needed for cuttings.

With a great many florists who retail their own products the carnation is more profitable in April, May, June and July than in the winter months, owing to the increase in the quantity of the cut and the call for special occasions during these months. They can also be sold at a lower figure and the demand is increasing every year, particularly regarding white. There is no other flower that can fill the place of the white carnation properly. It is also a fact that a great many more people are buying sprays for funerals every year, some because they can get more for their money, but a greater number because they are tired of the usual fixed design and consider a fine spray of Lawson or Lawson and white carnations much more artistic. It is wonderful what a pinnacle the Mrs. Lawson has gained in the flower trade. When at its best it commands a respect nearly as great as do high grade roses and no questions are asked or kicks presented about the price. In the hands of an artist as elaborate a spray can be made as with any flower. This is a great stride when we look back and consider that but a very few years ago fifty cents a dozen was considered a good price for carnations at retail. I well remember the time the controversy was going on in the columns of THE AMERICAN FLORIST regarding the qualities of the Carnations Lizzie McGowan and Mrs. Fisher. One of the parties to it claimed that he got fifty cents a dozen retail for his carnations. This was taken up the following week by another party, who considered him a lucky man, and warned him not to give anything like that away or he would have all the florists in the country flocking to his town. This shows the strides that have been made, and among the principal things to bring this about have been the fine productions like Mrs. Lawson and many others, which give greater satisfaction at double the old time price.

In getting back to our text, we have at this time to build up the plants in the way they should go to produce a continuous crop of blooms right up to the time to bring the new stock in. No more cuttings should be taken from the plants, but every shoot possible allowed to go on to make a flower. Particular care must also be taken to keep the plants free from green fly, for if this pest once gets the upper hand from now on it is a tough job to get the best of it, which also is the case with thrips. This pest is most easily taken care of by even temperature, frequent syringing and ample ventilation. Also, unless the beds have been mulched recently, they will be pretty well run down and should have a mulch put on. And as the principal object in view is to prolong the crop, do not use manure exclusively, but use two-thirds of good, fresh soil, and before putting it on give the beds a dressing of fine bone meal or wood ashes. All varieties do not take kindly to hot weather, and as soon as it gets at all warm they very soon play out, but among the best are Flora Hill, Gov. Wolcott, Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Joost, Prosperity and Harlowarden. We do not think Enchantress will do very well in hot weather, as it commences to get light quickly now. White Cloud, Glacier, Mrs. Higinbotham, and most of the scarlet varieties also get played out. Among the red varieties, America and Mrs. Potter Palmer have stood the hot months best for us.

C. W. JOHNSON.

RIO VISTA, VA.—Mark T. Thompson, of this city, and Miss Ida Fredrick, of Richmond, were quietly married in Washington, D. C., February 22. Mr. Thompson is well known through the beautiful flowers raised on his farm. Miss Fredrick is popular in Richmond, and has a large circle of friends in both the city and county. Last fall Mr. Thompson built a handsome new home on his place.

European Seed Report.

Our sale season is slowly approaching its end. While in November, December and January most of the seed trade is going on in Germany by water or railway in big quantities, the following months are under the sign of the parcels post, or even the sample post. At this time several thousands of packets containing seeds leave daily the Erfurt and Quedlinburg postoffices. The seed trade for these towns has become an economical necessity, for at least a quarter of the grown-up inhabitants are occupied or connected with it. It affords winter work to a large number of women, picking and cleaning peas and beans and even flowers like stocks and asters. A large number of women are earning money by sewing bags, which they do at home. In summer they work in the gardens and fields. Even the children find work at all times of the year.

After this digression let us come back to the seed business, which everywhere seems to fall short of expectations. At the beginning of the season, in October and November, opinions mostly agreed that the auspices for a good and brisk trade were favorable, the crops not appearing too abundant and the demand being lively at this season; but later on this has changed somewhat, for the crop turned out larger than expected, and as soon as this fact was known prices went down and orders began to come in more slowly. Several articles, certain kinds of peas and most of the beans, are cleared out at good prices, while red carrots, lettuce and radish met with a rather slow sale and had to be sold at very low prices. Cabbage, fodder beets, cucumbers and onions seem to be sold out or will be sold at good prices, while spinach is still much asked for and the quantities at disposal do not suffice to meet the demand.

The flower seed business took its ordinary way, this branch of the trade is conducted only by some prominent houses possessing sufficient land and capital to keep a regular staff of experienced gardeners. Therefore the prices are not subject to so many variations as vegetable seeds, which have now become (or nearly so) a general object for speculation. Lots of people who sometimes do not possess the smallest notion of the culture buy and sell seeds, but of course they can very seldom guarantee the quality of their goods, which generally they have never seen on the fields. Seed houses buying from these unknown men have therefore the greatest inducement to take all precautions in order not to lose money. Up to the present date our winter has not been severe, indeed the thermometer very seldom showed a low stand. The usual temperature varied about the freezing point. There was much humidity, but no snow. The soil had to suffer under a continual moisture, damaging the cabbage plants to a certain extent. They have lost many leaves and do not look well. If the spring sets in with its usual frosts, it is likely lots of the biennial plants will suffer. The pitted beets and carrots want also somewhat colder weather for their perfect conservation.

The French seed growing districts have been favored, it appears, with a splendid winter until now, so all the biennial plants are in perfect condition and show a most promising appearance. Cabbage is looking splendid, also red kitchen beets. Carrots have passed the winter very well and are at disposal in sufficient quantities. Taken all in all the prospects of this year's autumn crops are not bad if the spring does not bring too severe and frequent night frosts. The autumn of 1903 in France left behind it a very bad souvenir for, especially in the seed growing districts, October and November were very wet and gloomy, instead of bright and dry as in Germany. The damp weather was unfavorable for the perfect drying and harvesting of many seeds. Leek and onions suffered especially, their germinative power becoming weaker through this exceeding humidity. That is also the reason why leek and onion seed show a somewhat grey shine this year. Apart from this the crop was normal, some articles, like lettuce and carrots, yielding even more than usual. I have heard of growers who harvested 300 kilos of lettuce where they could expect only 100 in normal years. Cucumber, cabbage, radish and other vegetables gave average crops. The trade in France goes on slowly. Business is not bad, but without the usual animation. Probably many lots of different seeds will have to be kept over for next year, as in Germany. But the season is not yet finished and if the demands of the retailers are numerous and important many stocks may be cleared out still. X.

Slaughter House Wastage.

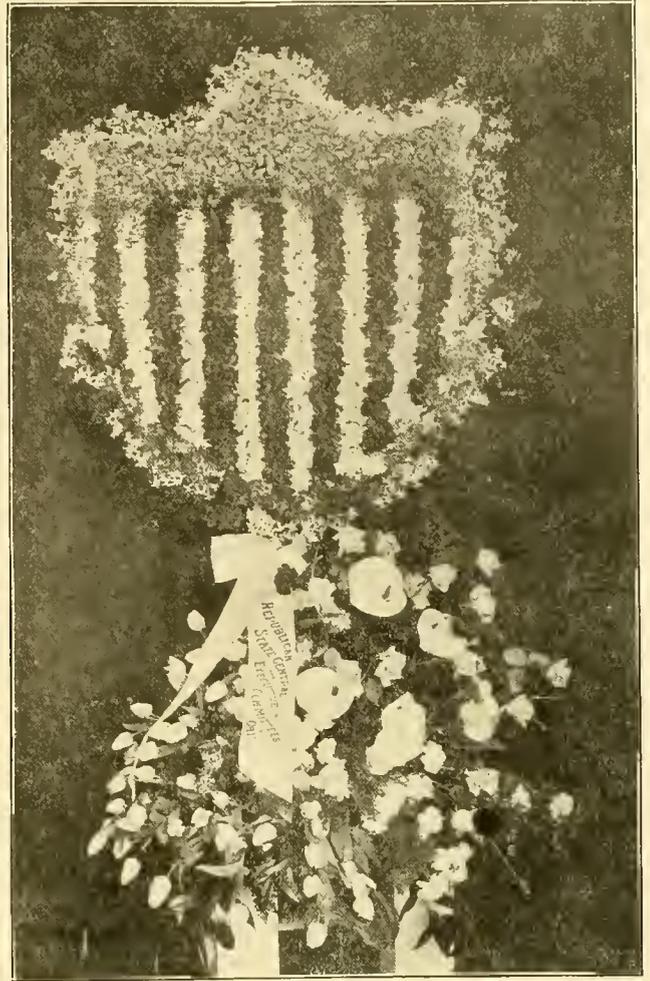

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Can well rotted slaughter-house wastage be used as a fertilizer, and if so how strongly, especially on carnations and roses? Can fresh animal blood be used for that purpose also? I have received many valuable lessons from your paper, for which accept my thanks. C. S.

Slaughter-house refuse, if thoroughly decomposed, can be used as a fertilizer with good results. The method of handling it will depend on its condition. It should be mixed with enough dry muck, or similar material, to take up all surplus moisture. If not thoroughly decomposed it should be mixed with muck and piled in a dry place for several months, working it over occasionally. This treatment will also answer for fresh blood. Prepared as described above, they can be used as top-dressings to the depth of an inch. L. R. T.

Water Supply.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We are seeking information as to the most practical and economical way of conveying water from a 6-inch drilled well, 160 feet deep, in which the water rises to within 65 or 70 feet of the surface, to a tank in our greenhouses 200 feet distant. Top of tank is 25 feet higher than the surface of the well or about 95 feet higher than the water level at the well. We have a 1-inch underground supply pipe from well to tank but owing to a hollow in the land between the two points the tank end of the pipe is 35 feet below the top of the tank. We are now using a windmill which does the work very well, but is not sufficiently reliable. B. H.

For the purpose named a gasoline pumping engine will be found very satisfactory. It will, of course, have to be placed at the well and connected with a deep-well pump. There will be considerable friction when water is forced through a 1-inch pipe and if a large amount is needed it will be advisable to put in a large pipe between the pump and the tank. L. R. T.

Designs for Hanna Funeral.

Designs for the funeral of Marcus A. Hanna, made by Westman & Getz, of Cleveland, O., are shown in the accompanying illustrations. The larger shield, with the field and stripes worked out, was made of violets, red carnations and white narcissi, with a border of Roman hyacinths and maidenhair ferns, the base being of callas, tulips, roses and carnations, and the whole standing over five feet high. The other shield was in pink and white carnations, roses, narcissi and callas, and was four feet in height.

Chicago.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held in Handel hall Wednesday evening. Besides other important business transacted was the appointing of several committees, as follows: On resolutions on the death of the late Walter Kreitling, Messrs. R. Johnstone, John Reardon and John Degnan; on recommendations for the revision of the constitution and by-laws of the club, Messrs. M. Barker, P. J. Hauswirth and J. S. Wilson. On recommendation of the trustees it was decided to take up larger and better quarters in Handel hall, a suitable hall having been rented. The change will be made after May 1. The preliminary arrangements for the convention of the American Carnation Society, to be held here next year, will be in the hands of President W. N. Rudd and P. J. Hauswirth. At the next meeting of the club the question of inviting the American Rose Society to hold its next convention conjointly with the American Carnation Society here will be discussed.

The supply of all kinds of flowers with the possible exception of the longest stemmed Beauty roses is adequate to the current demand, which can not be characterized as unduly heavy. Locally the situation has been quiet but the shippers are doing a fair business. Roses are in fine form but are not commanding the price which their quality justifies. Carnations continue to come into the market in the best of quality and in large quantities. Very good grades were sold this week at a dollar and less. All bulbous stock is looking exceptionally fine but it is no easy task to move it. Callas and Harrisii look promising for Easter and there is plenty of this stock in the market which sells at $1 and even less.

A botanical gardeu, in which Devries' new theory of the origin of the species is to be tested, will be established at the University of Chicago. Dr. John M. Coulter, head of the botanical department, will have the arrangements for the garden which will be laid out on the vacant block opposite the Ellis avenue dormitory and between Ellis hall and the Midway. Seeds for experimenting has been received at the university from Devries, the botanist at Amsterdam, Holland. His theory is that new species result from the "sports" or "freaks of nature" in plant life.

The Chicago members of the craft who attended the Detroit convention last week express themselves as highly pleased with the event. It is now up to them to eclipse all previous records for the American Carnation Society and committees appointed for the purpose will soon cast about for a suitable hall for the next convention.

H. D. Kamp, proprietor of the Kenosha, Wis., Greenhouses, was a Chicago visitor the latter part of the week. Other visitors were J. A. Valentine, of the Park Floral Co., Denver, Col., and Lyman B. Crow, of Lord & Burnham, New York.

Theodore Wirth, of Hartford, Conn., one of the directors of the Society of American Florists, stopped a few days here, enroute to his home, after attending the meeting of the executive committee of his society at St. Louis.

Phil Hauswirth immediately after his return from the carnation convention at Detroit, left for St. Louis, where he attended the meeting of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists.

The houses of E. Asmus & Company, on the north side, are looking fine and a lot of fine flowering plants are coming for Easter. Cinerarias are to be seen there in tip-top condition.

James Hartshorne, of the Chicago Carnation Company went to Toronto, Thursday where he has an exhibit of his leading carnations at the Canadian Carnation exhibition.

W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, stopped in the city a short while this week. On Tuesday afternoon he visited Hinsdale, taking in Bassett & Washburn's greenhouses and other plants.

Bassett & Washburn are well fixed for a heavy Easter demand of lilies. They have 7,000 plants of Japanese early longiflorums, which average from two to three feet in height.

The rooted cutting business has opened up wonderfully since the apparent breaking of Winter's backbone. George Reinberg is enjoying a heavy run in this line.

L. Coatsworth of the Bentley-Coatsworth Company, spent a few days in Chatham, Ont., before his return from the carnation convention at Detroit.

John Risch, of Weiland & Risch, was absent from his customary place in the store all week. He was doing time as a county juror.

Peter Reinberg sent a large vase of Chatenay roses to the last meeting of the Louisville Florists' Club.

W. E. Lynch, of E. H. Hunt's, spent the week in Massachusetts on business and pleasure bent.

A. L. Randall Company is handling an exclusive strain of white lilac.

New York.

Market conditions are about the same as last quoted, very little material change being seen in any line. Golden Spur and Paper White narcissi are not so plentiful as they have been and are selling somewhat better as a result. Violets are still a drug, going at any price obtainable, some as low as $1.50 per 1,000. The general outlook for lilies for Easter appears poor. A number of the Long Island florists are complaining that the weather must be exceptionally good with lots of sunshine to bring them along in time.

C. W. Ward's phenomenal scarlet seedling, No. 303 of 1901, is to be disseminated in 1906. Although not up to its standard of quality at Detroit it received its preliminary certificate on a score of ninety-two points. One-half interest in it has been sold by Mr. Ward to the J. D. Thompson Carnation Company, the consideration therefor being given as $10,000.

Charles Lustgarten became suddenly ill at his stand in the Cut Flower Exchange last Monday morning and medical attendance was hastily summoned causing a temporary sensation, but it proved to be nothing serious.

Frank H. Traendly and J. B. Nugent, Jr., the Twenty-eighth street delegates to the Detroit festivities, have returned with their mental and physical faculties unimpaired but waist girth noticeably augmented.

A visit to Victor S. Dorval's greenhouses last week showed some fine lilies and bulbous flowers. An orange tree here has at least 2,000 flowers and buds and will be fine for Easter.

The Florists' Club is making preparations for a large attendance and extensive exhibit of roses at the special rose meeting Monday evening, March 14.

The directors of the Cut Flower Exchange had their monthly meeting last Saturday, March 5. General business was transacted.

Moore, Hentz and Nash are handling some extra fine double stocks. They are very much in demand.

Charles Millang has added one more to his list of employes, Wm. Starke.

Philadelphia.

At a meeting of the creditors of Robert Craig & Son, held last Wednesday afternoon, at the office of the firm, it was unanimously agreed to continue the place as a going concern, under the assigneeship of John Burton. In an address Mr. Craig made to the creditors, he showed that it was a combination of circumstances, caused mainly by the purchase of a large adjoining block of ground, which had been occupied by him for a long time, but which was finally sold to close an estate. This he felt obliged to purchase, particularly as it went at about one-third less than its value, under the hammer. He erected large greenhouses on this to give himself needed room, as well as to help him carry it. Then he had a long sickness, succeeded by a damaging hailstorm. Finally he found the weight of carrying the added charges too much for his capital, and he placed himself in the hands of his creditors, as he felt sure if given time he could pay all his debts dollar for dollar. The statement to the creditors showed a balance of over $5,000 in their favor if the assets were realized on and not sold under the hammer. Mr. Burton stated that he felt sure that the place in the excellent condition in which it was could be conducted in such a way as to realize a good profit for the creditors, and as this seemed to be the general consensus of opinion, the motion to continue the business under the assignee was unanimous.

The main topic now is Easter, and all are looking forward to a good trade. The growers are for the most part pushing things, as the long continued cold weather of the winter and the dull, cloudy spell of the past few weeks has been very hard on them. House after house of lilies is seen, which at this writing, March 8, are just showing buds so that they can be counted, but it is thought they will readily make good in the three weeks yet intervening. Much of the hulbous stock is doubtful, as it has been frozen solid almost since the day it was put outside, and some of the hyacinths have made scarcely any roots at all. The pot man, however, is benefited, as in getting them out most of the pots are found broken or are cracked and smashed in prying them apart. Business in the stores is quiet, although some of the decorators are busy, as many of the large stores are having quite elaborate openings. The department stores are moving plants in fair quantities, their fifty-cent sizes of rubbers and palms appearing to find plenty of buyers. The ordinary cut-flower store cannot sell this stock except in a limited way, but when seen on the bargain table and marked half price they seem to look particularly beautiful.

Wm. Tricker, late of Dreer's nursery, has accepted the charge of Percival Roberts' place near this city. K.

Baltimore.

The winter seems to have broken, at least we have had one day of copious downpour. The frost is coming out of the ground, the water courses are all out of their banks, and there is devastation and ruin all around. There never was frost so deep, and the abnormal and constant cold has destroyed much in the way of vegetation generally regarded as hardy. Evergreens which have stood for years are sere and brown, and by the time we can count our losses in May we will have to change our estimate as to the suitableness for planting of many varieties. Deodars which have endured for about thirty years are badly scorched; the Mahonia Enonymus, and other flat-leaved sorts usually hardy, are dead to the snow-line; and roses killed to the ground. To-day is a type of spring, the sun clear and the air bracing, and for the first time for months the market men are out and their stalls are bright with color and fragrant with the perfume of flowers. Outside business as yet is, however, rather dull. For the last week for cut flowers there has been a moderate demand, and pretty much all the stock offering was worked off by its close, sometimes by liberal concessions in prices. Some outside contributions to this market added to the difficulties of the situation—notably shipments from New Jersey of several thousand valleys, of very good quality, which it seemed hard to move at anything like reasonable profit to the growers.

Much interest is excited by the new roses of John Cook, advertised in the AMERICAN FLORIST, and they are being critically examined. Cardinal is a stout grower with long stems and leathery foliage, the color a bright crimson, the perfume sweet but delicate. Enchantress does not make such stems but blooms freely, the color being a bright soft pink. Gude Brothers, of Washington, D. C., write that "Cardinal is in a class all to itself, being superior in form and habit to anything we have yet seen, and Enchantress will be a money-maker, judging from its profuse blooming quality, as we have seen it several times in mid-winter;" and Benj. Durfee, of the American Rose Company, says "the roses are simply grand." This seems the general verdict of those who have seen them.

There have been one or two dinners, a few quiet weddings, but the round of smaller festivities, which ordinarily occur in Lent following the big functions of the earlier season, are missing this year, as a consequence of the economies due to the losses by the great fire. There have been a few funerals where large quantities of flowers were used, notably that of Edward F. Abell, the head of the Baltimore Sun, where there was a great display of the finest specimens of American Beauty roses, lilies, valley, orchids, etc.

Much sympathy is felt here with Robert Craig & Son in their business troubles and hope is expressed that they will come happily through them. Both are well known here, and the former, besides his business relations, has often been present at our shows, meetings, etc., and made a most agreeable impression by his genial presence and charming gift as an after-dinner speaker.

J. H. Brummel, one of our oldest gardeners, and the most thorough practical botanist in this community, who was badly injured several months ago by a trolley car running over the wagon he was driving, is now much improved and able to go about, though unable still to put on his coat.

Wm. J. Halliday, who sold the lease of his Charles street premises, has secured a neat and convenient store at 915 Madison avenue, a promising thoroughfare for the florists' trade, reaching a good residential section.

Though no tree has moved a bud, no blade of grass shot forth, that one never-failing sign of spring, the Dutch bulb man, is here, but whoever thinks there is any verdancy about him makes a mistake indeed.

Not a member of the trade in Baltimore went to the Detroit carnation meeting.
S. B.

Washington, D. C.

All things considered, there is no reason to complain of trade conditions. The prices on several stocks have dropped from what they were a few weeks ago, but there is compensation in the fact that there are more buyers. The fancy carnations have taken a tumble. Enchantress, which has been selling for $3 per dozen, is now down to $1.50. Good Lawsons bring $1 per dozen, and the common varieties 50 to 75 cents per dozen. I have recently noticed in a local store, good stock of the light pink carnation, Alpine Glow. It is a good flower on a long-stiff stem, and may have a future. Violets are plentiful, selling at 50 to 75 cents per bunch. The prices on bulbous stock have degenerated to a slaughter. Both growers and retailers are looking forward to Easter, the former in the hope of a general clean-up of available stock; the latter figuring as to how much will be available in the local market. There should be a good supply of lilies by that time, as they are now on the market in fair quantities.

The Centre Market florists seem to be doing a good business since milder weather has come. R. Bowdler, Harry Robey and the American Rose Company and others have good stocks and catch a lot of transient trade. The versatility of the Centre Market people is wonderful. They can furnish customers a great collection of the flora and fauna of this region. I will not be surprised to yet see the ground hog on sale there as a reliable weather forecaster.

P. H. Meehan, who for several years has been general foreman and rose grower at Fred. H. Kramer's range, has resigned the position to accept a similar one with the Joy & Son Company of Nashville, Tenn. The good wishes of a large number of fellow craftsmen whereabouts, will follow him. The vacancy at Kramer's will be filled by Philip Buckingham, late with A. Gude & Brother.

Mayberry & Hoover recently furnished a fine decoration for an opening at one of the leading department stores. They used 500 palms and a large number of azaleas, lilies, lilacs, rhododendrons, spiræas and other stock. It was tastefully arranged and creditable to the enterprising firm of decorators.

O. A. C. Oehmler, manager of F. H. Kramer's F. street store, has in the three months since the store was opened, worked up a good trade. There is always "somethin' doin'" about Kramer's places of business.

Alex B. Garden is cutting a fine crop of Bride, Bridesmaid, Ivory and Golden Gate roses. He is also sending in fine specimens of lilacs, rhododendrons and spiræas and has a lot of wisterias that will be in for Easter.

Many beautiful designs were noticed at the funeral of the late Wm. Stewart Daniels, Washington correspondent for the St. Louis Republic, which took place Tuesday, March 2, at his late residence, Brookland, D. C.

Tom Wade has severed his connection with Z. D. Blackstone's store and is now on the road for McHutchison & Company of New York.

James Watt, the genial grower at the executive mansion conservatories, has a fine crop of American Beauty and Queen of Edgely roses.

Harry L. Rowe, who has for some time been foreman at J. R. Freeman's Brightwood avenue range, has resigned.

John Brown, who has scored a success in his carnation venture, will at once erect another house 15x100 feet.

Jas. Marty is now decorator at Blackstone's and seems to be filling the bill.
S. E.

Cleveland.

The recent poor business does not seem to have had a very depressing effect on some of the growers here, to judge from several extensive building operations in progress and those in contemplation. Adam Graham & Son are erecting a $2,600 barn and stable on their Euclid avenue place. Herman Hart has completed a $2,000 boiler shed. The boiler is installed and everything is in readiness to commence operations on a new range of five houses to be devoted to rose and carnation growing. James Eadie is likewise getting material ready for the construction of a range on his new site in East Cleveland. Seven houses will be built to begin with. His present range on St. Clair street will be gradually removed to the new place.

Since the mild weather set in we no longer hear the vigorous cries of "Bring her along," "Soop her up," "Give her legs," and so forth, from the curlers. The "bonspiels" are all over. The braw Scot cannot claim a monopoly of curling here any longer. Germans, Irish and Hebrews have become ardent lovers of the game and know how to "take the inrig" as well as the canny Scot.

The market conditions have improved slightly over last week and all grades are moving a little better, but it lacks the vim of former seasons. First-class roses are not over plentiful. There are too many seconds and thirds. Carnations are fine and the supply is sufficient to meet the demand.

John Murchie & Son, Sharon, Pa.; C. H. Roney, Jamestown, N. Y., and John Walker, of Youngstown, O., were visitors on their way back from the carnation convention.

W. F. Griffin has taken charge of the cut flower department in the May Company store. He still retains his retail store on Euclid avenue.

Robert Kegg has gone to Mount Clemens, Mich., to take a course of hot baths.
Echo.

Pittsburg.

There is little or no improvement over last week's business. Rainfalls are of daily occurrence and this undoubtedly has been an impediment to business lately. Stock of all kinds and grades is plentiful especially in Bride and Bridesmaid roses. American Beauty, Liberty and Meteor roses are very scarce. Carnations are coming in in quantities that predict a glut. Yellow narcissi too are moving very slowly. Lilies move rapidly and tulips seem to meet with even demand. Lily of the valley is plentiful as are lilacs, sweet peas and violets. Greens are scarce.

The recent flood made it very inconvenient for the growers along the line of the Pittsburg & Western Railroad. The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Company sends its stock to the city by wagon, owing to the washouts along the road. It is necessary for their wagon to leave the houses at 2 a. m. in order to reach the city by 7 a. m. Other growers along the same road have combined and take their turns in collecting and sending a wagon to the city to deliver their consignments.

All the florists of this section who visited the Detroit convention have returned. They speak in high terms of the many fine carnations exhibited and of the delightful entertainment accorded them. Those who visited Detroit were Ed. Blind, B. Elliott, F. Burki, Charles Crall and J. L. Wyland and son. It is a great pleasure to Pittsburg florists to know the new carnation, Fred. Burki, was one of the attractive features of the show.

Peter J. Deemas will shortly file an application before the proper authorities at Athens, Greece, and at Washington, D. C., for the appointment as vice consul for western Pennsylvania representing Greece. Mr. Deemas is well qualified for the position.

The flood of last Thursday was not so destructive as the one in January, nor was it as high, yet it was sufficient to visit the cellars of L. I. Neff, Mrs. E. Williams and Blind & Geddes.

The outlook for Easter is bright, and the preparations of the local growers indicate that lots of blooming plants and a great quantity of bulbous stock is going to be sold.

Blind Brothers are making daily cuts of special Bride and Bridesmaid roses, also Harrisii lilies. All of their bulbous stock is just right for Easter cutting.

S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, N. Y., came to Pittsburg on March 5 to attend the annual dinner of the Duquesne Canoe Club.

Lloyd Swarthout, of Washington, Pa., is shipping some fine Bride and Bridesmaid roses to this market.
E. L. M.

New Bedford, Mass.

Business has improved very much since the middle of February. There has been a great demand for funeral flowers, and all kinds of flowers are selling well. As is well known, about February 15 is the annual awakening of all vegetable life. The sap begins to circulate, the buds begin to swell and everything begins to be alive. So it seems to be this year with the flower business. Buyers were hibernating through the extreme cold weather, but are now awake and alive and money is circulating quite freely our way.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting on March 5. Six new members were admitted. It was voted to hold an exhibition of flowers and plants in September. A paper was read by Thomas White, of Fairhaven, on wayside trees, followed by a discussion on the same.

E. S. Haskell is fitting up a fine store for the sale of flowers and plants, birds and gold fish. It will no doubt be the finest store of the kind in town.

A. B. H.

Davenport, Ia.

A large number of florists of Davenport, Rock Island and Moline met March 4 at Odd Fellows' hall and organized the Tri-City Florists' society. C. Keur, a bulb grower of Holland, was present and addressed the meeting on the subject of "Florists' Societies in Europe and Their Benefits." Mr. Keur was also elected an honorary member of the new society. Officers were elected as follows:

President—John T. Temple, Davenport.
Vice-President—John Stapp, Rock Island.
Secretary—H. Meyer, Rock Island.
Treasurer—O. Arp, Davenport.
Corresponding Secretary—Leo Ewoldt, Davenport.

Board of Managers—Julius Staack, of Moline; H. Gaethje, of Rock Island, and Otto Klingbiel, of Davenport.

Greenhouse Heating.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—How many square feet of glass will an ordinary hot water boiler heat? Are 2-inch wrought iron pipes preferable to 4-inch pipes?

A SUBSCRIBER.

The question is certainly very indefinite, as greenhouse boilers are made in sizes that will heat all the way from 300 square feet of glass to 10,000 or more.
As a rule the manufacturers give the different sizes of their boilers ratings according to the number of square feet of radiating surface they will supply. If this can be ascertained for a given boiler, it will be safe to reckon that it will heat from two to four times as much glass as the radiating surface for which it is rated.
For houses less than 300 feet long,
2-inch pipe answers very well and is to be preferred to 4-inch.

L. R. T.

Jamin vs. Jamain.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Under the head of "Notes and Comments," page 5, January 30 issue, in noting and commenting upon what had appeared in your eastern contemporary a short time before, this question was asked: "Should not the original name of American Beauty be Mme. Ferdinand Jamin and not Jamain? Some authorities so give it." Said contemporary quotes authorities giving "Jamain" as correct. Since this appeared I have looked into the catalogue of Ketten Freres, Luxembourg, and it is there given Mme. Ferd. Jamin (Ledechaux, '76), where over 1,700 roses are catalogued. And in H. B. Ellwanger's book on the rose it is therein spelled Mme.
Ferd. Jamin (Ledechaux, '76), both of which are given as synonyms of American Beauty. The editor of said publication must admit that both are very high authorities and furnish sufficient evidence for asking the question. No harm is done if accuracy is established.

WE ARE SHORT IN THE SUPPLY OF

Hot-Bed Sash { If you have any to spare, put a price on them, including packing and delivery to freight house. State exactly what condition they are in, dimensions, size of glass and how many. Do not neglect this. While they are spoiling, we can get you dollars, which draw interest.

POINTER No. 13.

FOR SALE. CAROLINA STATE. On account of death. 7 greenhouses, large dwelling, with store on the corner, 10 rooms, sewerage, hot and cold water and gas. Everything in good order. The business is the best in the city. Well established. Full particulars on application.

POINTER No. 14.

PENNSYLVANIA CITY. 9 greenhouses, 21,000 sq. feet of glass. Nearly all new and in good condition. Stocked with carnations, roses and general line of bedding plants. Business established about twenty years. Two new boilers put in this winter. New brick smoke stack, 40 feet high. All heated by steam. City water. New dwelling house of six rooms, two halls, pantry and bath. Piped for hot and cold water. Gas, cement cellar, built 16 months; also small house for hired man, new stable, sheds, a variety of wagons and horses, harness, steam pumps, etc., etc. This is an extra fine place and requires some money, but terms will be made to suit the desirable purchaser.

INQUIRY No. 3.

A grower wants to lease plant of 20,000 to 40,000 feet of glass with good shipping facilities. The extreme Northwest Washington or Oregon preferred. This client is one of the most successful growers in the middle west for several years past. In prime of life. Good references are offered. An opportunity for any one with such a plant who cannot run it himself.

INQUIRY No. 4.

My capital consists only of my ability to grow first-class carnations, etc., and a capacity and willingness to turn out an unusual amount of work in that line. I can furnish the best of references and am at the present time with the help of my wife, running five houses 34x240 feet on contract and we are having splendid success, doing all the work ourselves. I also have two children, large enough to help outside of school hours. So you see I am capable of handling quite a place without hired help. I am anxious to get a place to lease or purchase making the plant pay for itself. This may be unusual, but a party, through illness or other causes, obliged to stop work, might be willing to put his place out in this manner if he were sure the party would look after it and do as agreed. Am 36 years of age.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Charles McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.
Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-24, 1904.

On page 264 of this issue will be found a report of the seed trade in Europe.

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.—Franklin Reynolds, who for thirty-three years was the efficient head clerk of the seed firm of J. J. H. Gregory & Son, died March 7, after a brief illness.

THIS is one of the most extraordinary seasons in regard to the deliveries made by the growers here as well as in Europe. Sweet corn seed is one of the most troublesome items. It seems to be very slow in curing, and seedsmen are obliged to live from hand to mouth until deliveries of larger volume can be made.

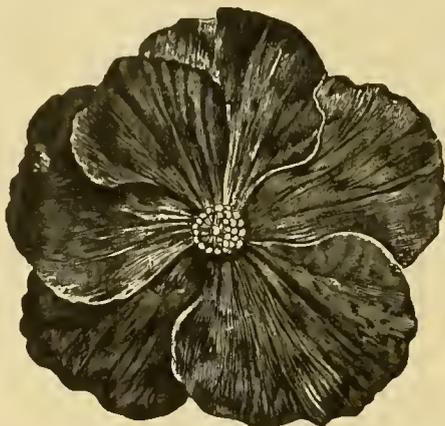

SANTA PAULA, CAL., March 1.—We have just had a nice rain, making the total of the precipitation to date four inches in this county, write John Bodger & Son. Ordinarily we require about fifteen inches to produce average crops, but as we are getting our year's supply in the spring this season, we calculate on being able to produce average crops with from eight to ten inches.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The seedsmen who were burned out have all secured new quarters and new stocks and are prepared (as indeed are all the business men in every branch of trade) for the spring trade, which will probably come in now with a rush. The "truckers" in Anne Arundel and in other sections south of Baltimore sow peas as rule in February, but the severity of the winter, unrelaxed until now, has delayed them nearly a month, and with twelve inches of frost in the ground until February 1, not a plow has started.

Government Seeds Branch Office.

The following is found in the editorial columns of the Edgefield, S. C., Chronicle: Through the kindness of Hon. Asbury Latimer, junior United States senator from South Carolina, the Edgefield Chronicle has a moderate supply of garden seed which we will distribute among our subscribers absolutely free of cost. All that is necessary to secure a package of these fine vegetable seeds is to call at the Chronicle office. We have for distribution this year two different packages. One contains pole beans, watermelon, beet, lettuce, radish. The other contains lettuce, squash, turnip, mustard, cabbage. These seeds are of the finest varieties and are raised at the government experimental farms.

This is a new and easy way for a United States senator to distribute his share of seeds among his constituents. The distribution is authorized by a statute which stipulates that the distribution "shall be confined to such seeds as are rare and uncommon to the country, or such as can be made more profitable by frequent changes from one part of our country to another." It is under this law that the esteemed Edgefield Chronicle is enabled, through the kindness of the junior senator, to place in the hands of Edgefield farmers such "rare and uncommon" seeds as the bean, the watermelon, the beet, the lettuce, the radish, and also the squash, the turnip, the mustard and the cabbage!—Columbia, S. C., State.

OWATONNA, MINN.—Thos. E. Cashman, president of the Clinton Falls Nursery Company and manager of Lord Greenhouse Company, has been re-elected mayor of Owatonna.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—The Republicans of the second congressional district nominated N. W. Hale, of the Knoxville Nursery Company, president of the American Association of Nurserymen, for congress.

Joplin, Mo.

A certificate of incorporation has been issued to the Ozark Fruit Farm Company, of Joplin, capitalized at $1,000,000, fully paid. The purposes of the company, as set forth in the statement filed in the office of the secretary of state, are the clearing of land from timber, the planting and cultivation of all kinds of fruit and agricultural products, the development of the agricultural, horticultural and other resources of land, the canning and preserving of fruit, the manufacture of all such articles as may be obtainable from agricultural or horticultural products, and the erection and maintenance of the necessary buildings, machinery and appliances.

Patchogue, N. Y.

William B. Woodruff, aged 65 years, was burned to death in his greenhouse February 29. His body, burned to a crisp, was found the next day by Ira B. Terry, and there were indications of a horrible struggle with the flames. It is supposed he lay in his bed, started to light a cigar and, the match falling, set fire to his clothing. From ashes on the floor could be traced his course as he crawled from the bed to the corner. His charred coat, which he had thrown off, lay half way between the bed and his body. Woodruff was a native of New Jersey and his mother and two sisters live at Madison in that state. Two children, Edward R. Woodruff and Mrs. Daniel Jackson, survive.

WORCESTER, MASS.—T. C. Joy, a prominent florist of Nashville, Tenn., visited Worcester in search of two greenhouse superintendents.

Cincinnati, O.

Trade since the last writing has improved somewhat, and the local florists have no complaint to make, for there is a nice lot of stock coming in which they can buy at very reasonable prices. The glut of violets and carnations so noticeable last week seems to have left us. Especially is this true of single violets and to procure any of these the orders have to be placed in advance. Smilax and fern leaves are very scarce it being almost impossible to fill one-half the orders for these. Bulbous stock of all kinds is plentiful and there are enough roses and carnations for all orders.

The florists who were fortunate enough to attend the meeting of the American Carnation Society at Detroit last week, have returned and are proud of the record a few of our carnation growers made at the show. They say that Dick Witterstaetter has the finest lot of seedling carnations in this country.

The death of Walter Kreitling, of Chicago, was quite a shock to a good many of the craft in this city, for he was pretty well known here. The local florists take this method of extending their sympathy to the hereaved family.

New Rose General MacArthur

Hybrid Tea.

Color by far the most brilliant of any shade of crimson forcing rose ever offered, retaining its brilliancy when fully expanded. It is also one of the very sweetest varieties ever offered, of very easy culture, as it can be grown in the same temperature as an ordinary Tea variety such as Bride. It is a good, strong, vigorous grower, producing stems 24 to 30 inches long, a free and continuous producer. It can be grown at much less cost than Meteor or Liberty and is a much brighter color than either. Also larger when fully expanded. We predict that this will be the red rose for the multitude. Ready for distribution April 1, 1904.

NEW CASTLE, IND., Feb. 26, 1904.
 Our attention was called to the Rose, Gen. MacArthur, three years ago, by the originator, who then had only the one plant. We liked its looks very much, and last year secured 25 plants from The Storrs & Harrison Co. for trial. We cut fine flowers from them all winter, and made 600 cuttings which we are growing this winter. We commenced cutting good flowers from them in November and have done so continuously ever since, it being distinctly a winter rose. At this date the bench is a fine sight. The plants are from two to three feet high, and are sending out flowering shoots which are most all one to two feet in length, although quite a number are three feet or more. It has the most beautiful large lustrous foliage, and most abundant of any rose we have ever seen. The flower is a brilliant red, and has a very fine odor. We find it the best Red Rose we have ever grown. While not as fine a flower as Liberty, with us it is much healthier and so much freer flowering that we prefer it. We have it growing in the same house as Bridesmaid.
 Yours truly,
 HELLER BROS.

The March meeting of the I. S. F. A. was well attended, comparing it with previous meetings, but there should have been twice as many members present. John Rieman's paper on "How to handle cut flowers," was one of the best papers we have had for a long time. Mr. Rieman brought with him a large box of roses and carnations in all kinds of conditions which he used as illustrations. There is nothing commonplace about John's papers. He has a style all of his own, that makes listening highly interesting. The reading of this paper was followed by a lively and interesting discussion.

The twenty-fifth business anniversary of the Bertermanns was a grand success. Members of the family, a few personal business friends and employes were invited. Almost everybody present made speeches, many of which will be long remembered. John Bertermann was presented with a handsome chair by his employes.

A street car collided with G. C. Lang's wagon March 5. Mrs. Lange who was going home from market was thrown to the street and severely injured, and the wagon was demolished.

Ed. Bertermann, who has been on the jury, is back to his place of business again, brimming over with jury jokes and yarns.

John Bertermann, A. Baur, J. Hartje and H. Rieman are back from Detroit, reporting the best time of their lives.

Ernst Huckriede & Sons have an unusual fine lot of lilies which apparently will be just right for Easter.

Frank Herritt has opened a flower stand on the corner of Market and Illinois streets.

Frank Soult, for many years with John Heidenreich, is now with A. Wiegand & Sons.

Herman D. Schilling has bought Aug. Hoheisel's place in Haughville.

Mrs. E. A. Nelson, who has been sick, is convalescent. H. J.

Toronto, Ont.

There has been a gratifying increase in trade the last few days, no doubt due to the better weather. The days of sunshine with which we have been favored are having a good effect on roses. Bride and Bridesmaid are becoming more plentiful, though American Beauty and Meteor are still scarce. All other stock, especially violets, is plentiful enough to meet all demands, and if any quantity is wanted the growers will certainly offer good inducements as far as price is concerned.

The death of several prominent citizens has again brought forth the "crepe chaser." We had thought from recent comment in the papers that this means of obtaining orders would be dispensed with, but, alas for our joy, the "crepe chaser" is worse than ever.

W. J. Gammage, of London; Arthur Ewing, of Woodstock; Thomas Manton, of Eglinton; Walter Muston, of Davisville, and John H. Dunlop, are all enroute to Ottawa where they will attend the executive meeting of the Canadian Horticultural Association.

Railroads are nearly all open, and shipments are getting through in better shape. Some lines have been blocked for over ten days, and many orders for flowers were cancelled.

BOOKS FOR FLORISTS.

The time is coming along when these are needed and opportunity at hand for reading them. Every one of the following should be in your library.

Send prices quoted and we send the books.

LANDSCAPE GARDENING (Maynard).—The development of landscape art within the past few years compels the wide awake florist to keep posted on this branch of the business. The many suggestions of this book will be found helpful every business day. It contains 338 pages, 165 illustrations. $1.50

THE GOLDFISH (Mulertt).—A number of florists find goldfish an attractive and paying addition to their business. The best advice is given in every department of the subject, including construction and care of the parlor aquarium, in this volume of 160 pages, handsomely illustrated. $2.00

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION (Taft).—It tells the whole story about how to build, and heat a greenhouse, be it large or small, and that too in a plain, easily understood, practical way. It has 118 illustrations. $1.50.

HEATING AND VENTILATING BUILDINGS (Carpenter).—This book covers the entire subject most fully. In the preparation of heating and ventilating plans, it will be found a most valuable guide. $4.00.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY GROWING VIOLETS (Saltford).—This is by a practical grower who has made a success of the business. No grower of violets can afford to be without it. Price 25 cents.

STEAM HEATING FOR BUILDINGS (Baldwin).—Contains valuable data and hints for steam fitters and those who employ this method of heating. The 350 pages are fully illustrated. $2.50.

THE HORTICULTURISTS' RULE-BOOK (L. H. Bailey).—Contains information valuable to all those engaged in any branch of horticulture. Illustrated. 312 pages. 75 cents.

FUMIGATION METHODS (Johnson).—A practical treatise on cheap and effective means of destroying insect pests. Handsomely bound and profusely illustrated; 250 pages. $1.00.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION (C. W. Ward).—A complete treatment of all the most modern methods of cultivating this most important flower. Illustrated. $3.50.

PRACTICAL FLORICULTURE (Peter Henderson).—A guide to the successful propagation and cultivation of florists' plants. Illustrated. 325 pages. $1.50.

HOW TO GROW CUT FLOWERS (Hunt).—The only book on the subject. It is a thoroughly reliable work by an eminently successful practical florist. Illustrated. $2.00.

THE ROSE—Its cultivation, varieties, etc. (H. B. Ellwanger).—A complete guide of the cultivation of the rose, together with a classification of all the leading varieties. $1.25.

The first exhibition of the Horticultural Society held on March 3 was the best opening show ever given by the society. Especially fine were the azaleas, shown by Lange and Littlefield, measuring four to five feet in diameter. The display of carnations was good. Splendid exhibits of cyclamens, primulas, cinerarias, orchids, hyacinths and begonias were staged and also a fine collection of cut flowers. H. F. A. Lange won first on cut flowers, carnations, three azalea plants and hyacinths; P. W. Moen first on cinerarias, cyclamens and primulas; M. J. Whittall, first on Begonia Gloire de Lorraine; Mrs. J. C. Whitin, first on orchid plants and cut orchids; H. F. Littlefield, first on one azalea plant and E. W. Breed first on one cyclamen plant.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Fruit Growers' Association was held at Horticultural Hall March 9 and 10 and the interesting lectures and discussions by prominent horticulturists were enjoyed by a large attendance. There was a fine display of fruits and vegetables and an interesting exhibition of models of hen houses, hotbeds and blue prints of gardens, illustrating the work done by the boy inmates of the County Truant School.

The annual reunion of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was held March 9. Officers of the prominent horticultural societies were entertained at the banquet and dancing followed.

Business is quiet. S. H. L.

Springfield, Mass.

Business, considering Lent, is good, there being a good demand for cut flowers of all kinds. Bulbous stock has sold well this season and more will be grown the coming year. Roses and carnations are plentiful and of fair quality. Violets find ready sale. Design work has kept the store men busy. Growers are busy getting flowering plants ready and from the present outlook there will be plenty to go around for Easter trade. Reports are that lilies will be scarce, but they usually show up on time. All are anxiously waiting for spring as this has been the hardest winter greenhouse men have seen in this section for years.

The WHITE LAWSON. The Most Valuable White Carnation.

When one considers that about a third of all the carnations grown to-day are LAWSON, the value of a WHITE LAWSON will be at once apparent, and it will undoubtedly stand as far ahead of all white carnations as LAWSON stands ahead of all pink carnations for commercial or private use.

Nothing need be said in praise of WHITE LAWSON except to state that it is a sport of MRS. THOS. W. LAWSON, and is as good as that variety in every respect, with all its remarkably free blooming qualities, but is pure white. No extended description is necessary; its value will appeal at once to every carnation grower.

This originated with Mr. Charles Allen, Floral Park, N. Y., and recognizing at once its great value to the trade we purchased his entire stock. As there are other stocks of White Lawson offered, in order to secure this superior stock, the value of which has been established, order from us, as

As the demand for this is very great and stock somewhat limited, in order to secure early delivery orders should be placed without delay. We can now offer for early March delivery Strong Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Send for our Wholesale Price List, giving list of other novelties—Flamingo, Mrs. M. A. Patten, Nelson Fisher, Etc., also other choice standard sorts. We have, also, an extra fine lot of

NEW CHRYSANTHEMUM DR. ENGUEHARD. THE FINEST COMMERCIAL PINK CHRYSANTHEMUM EVER INTRODUCED.

We were awarded for this first prize for the best six blooms, any new pink variety, at the Chrysanthemum Show in New York. This is going to be in pink chrysanthemums what COL. D. APPLETON has been in yellow and TIMOTHY EATON in white. It is a fine commercial flower of the largest size and an ideal color; fine, large, compact blooms, of great substance; a fine shipper; something that has long been wanted in pink chrysanthemums. It has grand foliage, is an easy "doer," and a phenomenal variety in every respect.

As the demand for this is enormous, it would be advisable to place orders without delay. As orders are filled in rotation, the earlier order is placed, the earlier delivery we can make. Certified by the C. S. A., having scored as high as 95 points. 50c each; $5.00 per dozen; $30.00 per 100.

H. WEBER & SONS, Oakland, Md. Please mention the American Florist when writing.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Buffalo lost a young and enterprising florist from the east side when Joseph Stafflinger, who had greenhouses on Parade avenue, and a store on Seneca street, died. He was ill for two weeks with brain fever. He had a good business and was well liked, and will be missed by all. He was aged thirty-two years and leaves a wife.

Buffalo has an automobile exhibition this week, and Palmer has an automobile in each of his store windows. The one at the upper store was made of Lawson and white carnations, with a galax border. The lower store had a much smaller one, made of pink and white carnations and smilax.

On their return from Detroit we had a call from Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.; E. N. Pierce, of E. N. Pierce & Son, Waltham, Mass.; Wm. Swayne, Kennett Square, Pa., and last but not least the conductor of the party, the only Patrick Welch, of Boston, looking younger than ever.

William Legg has sold his greenhouses to Michael Bloy, a former Buffalo boy, but lately of Cleveland. We wish him success I do not know what Mr. Legg's intentions are, but a rest will do him good, as his health has been bad lately.

The opening of a large furniture store last week called forth a large number of flowers, consisting of roses, carnations, daffodils and tulips, which were given away to customers. The stock was supplied by J. B. Wiese, of the Chippewa market.

The usual contingent, excepting D. B. Long, was at Detroit, and from reports all had a good time. W. J. Palmer has not had enough, so goes to Chicago to finish up. He is entitled to a vacation.

S. A. Anderson has a full-sized Pierce motorette trimmed. The wheels, dash, mud guards and seat are trimmed with yellow daffodils, which make a good showing.

S. A. Anderson made a hurried trip to Pittsburg, Pa., Friday. It was purely a social trip, as he is a canoeist and must take in the banquets.

George Stafflinger, a florist of Springville, has been appointed superintendent of the German and French cemetery in Buffalo.

From reports there were in attendance at Detroit: Wm. Scott, W. F. Kasting, W. J. Palmer and C. T. Guenther.

Trade the last week has not been startling. Stock is in good supply, but the demand poor.

George D. Hale, of Elmwood avenue, has the palm and bunting decorations for the automobile show.

Palmer's Red Lawson scored $7 in Detroit, and is certainly a good flower and a good keeper. Bison.

Providence, R. I.

Violets, violets everywhere and at all prices. Local florists have advertised these flowers at varying figures, but the over-supply does not work off; 35 to 50 cents per hundred secures the finest stock at wholesale. Roses are beginning to crop out and should be in full cut at Easter. Carnations are fully equal to the demand at $1 to $2 per hundred. Greens are very scarce and the outlook is not encouraging for a regular supply. Macnair has been in New York all week arranging for an Easter supply of hardy ferns. Business is only moderate.

SAMUEL S. PENNOCK, 1612-18 Ludlow St. Philadelphia, Feb. 9, 1904.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON, Philadelphia. Gentlemen:—We have been handling the Vesper carnation for the past two or three years, in fact, ever since it was introduced, and we find it to be one of the best all-around commercial whites on the market to-day. It has a good, stiff stem, is a good keeper, and is a good sized flower. Some of our customers prefer this to any other variety we can send them. They think it is the best keeper and gives them the best satisfaction of any white they are handling. Yours very truly, SAMUEL S. PENNOCK.

WM. C. SMITH, 61st & Market Sts. Philadelphia, Feb. 1, 1904.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON, Philadelphia. Dear Sirs:—The Vesper plants that I have here on trial are certainly all that you claim for them. I find that the plants are healthy, free and that the flowers are of the first size, on long, stiff stems. You may hook my order for one thousand cuttings to be delivered as soon as ready. Yours very truly, WM. C. SMITH.

WM. C. SMITH, 61st & Market Sts. Philadelphia, Feb. 11, 1904.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON, Philadelphia. Dear Sirs:—The Vesper Cuttings were received, and are fine. Please send me one thousand more from the same batch for my own use. I am going to plant a house of Vesper this Fall. Respectfully, WM. C. SMITH.

E. C. MARSHALL Florist. Kennett Square, Pa., Feb. 11, 1904. ROBERT CRAIG & SON, Philadelphia. Dear Sirs:—It gives me pleasure to state that the 200 plants of Vesper sent me on trial have given excellent results. It has excellent health; an extra long stem; flowers are of the first size and do not burst. I also find it quite free. Yours truly, E. C. MARSHALL.

HEADQUARTERS FOR EASTER PLANTS.

Blooming Easter Week or from now if desired. I am noted for the past years and have a reputation among the trade all over the land, for growing a large and abundant assortment of choice Easter blooming plants of every description. I have an immense stock in large houses and 15 hot beds are crowded to their full extent, in better shape and condition than ever before. Azalea Indica; 3 houses filled with this only choice American variety. I know exactly what my customers and the public want. My son Howard and I went to Europe last summer on account of the scarcity of Mme. Van der Cruyssen azaleas, and must say with great pleasure that we were successful in obtaining 2,000 of this beautiful variety alone and offer them now as the gem of my stock only; none of it has been picked out by fall sales and I have the residue left. I make it a rule not to offer any in the fall outside of Xmas. Please note my prices of the 2,000 Mme. Van der Cruyssen; 6, 7, 8-inch, 60c, 75c to $1.00 each; specimens, $1.25 to $1.50 each. These are as round as an apple and covered with buds. Other varieties of which we have a large stock: B. A. Alba, Niobe, double white, Empress of India, Prof. Walter Vermeriana, Dr. Moore, Loo, Dr. Maohurst, Paul Weber, Simon Rucker, Lustre and about 12 more leading varieties, 6, 7, 8-inch pots, 50c, 60c, 75c, 90c, $1.00 each; specimens, $1.25, $1.50 each. If pots are not wanted we take the fresh soil off, because Azaleas never make new roots during winter; that makes packing light and safe and reduces the express charges considerably.

Lilium Harrisii and Japan Multiflorum. Have about 2,000 to offer. Raised only from special brand bulbs of Mr. H. F. Michell at the cost of $100.00 per 1000; 6-inch pots, from 5 to 8 buds to a plant, 10c per bud; under 5 buds, 12 cents.

Cineraria Hyb. Have a house of 2,000, 6-inch pots, all shades, from Mr. H. F. Michell's last strain, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per dozen.

Hydrangea Otaksa, 6 to 7-in. pots, from $4.00, $5.00, $6.00, $7.00 to $12.00 per dozen.

Daisies, white, (Marguerite), 6-inch pots, $3.00 per dozen.

Begonias, Pres. Carnot, 6-in. pots, $3.00 per doz. mixed, with or without bloom, 4 in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

Vernon, in bloom, 4-in. pots, $1.50 per doz.

Cyclamen, 4-in. pots, in bloom, $2.00 per doz. Bud and bloom.

Primula Obconica, 4-inch, $1.80 per doz.

Spirea Compacta, Superba, and Floribunda, 6-inch pots, $3.00 to $4.00 per doz.

Gladstone, new, 6-inch pots, $5.00 per doz.

Hyacinths, only the choicest of my own importation, all shades, $10.00 per 100.

Tulips, Tournsdale, double red or yellow, best selling tulips, 3 in a pot, 4-in. pots, $1.50 per doz.

Daffodils, Von Zion, best double nosed, 3 in a 5 1/4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.

Araucaria Excelsa, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers 22, 23 to 26 inches, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 each; 8-in. pots, 28 to 35 in. high, perfect jewels, $3.00 to $3.50 each; worth $5.00 each easy; 5 1/4-in. pots, 3 tiers, 50c; 4 to 5-in. slightly damaged, 25c, 30c to 40c.

Ficus Elastic, Rubber Plants, 6-inch pots, from 20 to 28 in. high, $3.00 $4.00, $5.00 and $6.00 per doz.

Dracaena Bruanti, 22 to 25 in. high, good for decoration, 35c to 50c each.

Smith's Hyb. Moon Vines, best in the world, 2 1/4-inch pots, $5.00 per 100.

To save express charges please state if pots are wanted. All goods shipped at purchaser's risk. Cash with order is needed. Buyers coming to Philadelphia are respectfully invited to visit my place and inspect buying elsewhere. Take 13 or Germantown car to Ontario Street.

SAVES MANY TIMES ITS PRICE

THE AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY'S DIRECTORY saves many times its price to every one who catalogues or circularizes the trade. Fully revised to date of publication, it puts the mail only to live names, avoiding waste of postage and printed matter, time and labor.

Contains 412 pages, lists of Florists, Seedsmen and Nurserymen of the United States and Canada by states and towns, also alphabetically; firms that issue catalogues, foreign merchants, horticultural societies and much other up-to-date information which makes it a reference book of daily utility wherever a wholesale trade is done.

Published annually by the American Florist Co.

Minneapolis.

At the Florists' Club's last meeting, held in Latham's new store, 818 Nicollet avenue, Thomas Hall was re-elected president, Otto Will vice-president, Ralph Latham secretary and E. Nagel treasurer. Jacob Weisenstein was elected for one year on the executive committee. A bowling club was organized and Otto Will appointed captain. The meeting nights are the first and third Fridays of each month. The meeting adjourned with a short address from the president.

Stock in all varieties is increasing in supply and with a decline in trade this makes considerable surplus. Tea roses are plentiful enough to meet all extra demands, although a week ago they were in limited supply. The next seven days will probably witness a better business from the decorative orders already booked.

Paul Berkowitz, of H Bayersdorfer & Company, called on the trade last week. C. F. R.

Richmond, Ind.

Chessman & Shepman will not open their greenhouses which were destroyed by fire, but will retire from the business. The wreckage caused by the fire was so complete that the firm would have been compelled to start anew in every department if it had continued in business. The stock remaining will be disposed of as fast as possible.

The quiet spell which prevailed the last two months has been broken in spite of it being the Lenten season. For two weeks there has been more going on than before this year. One of the unpleasant things we have had to contend with lately has been that unpopular phrase, "Omit flowers." A good many times this notice has appeared when the demand otherwise would have been heavy. Another detriment has been the wretched weather. None of the old timers can remember as bad a winter. The shop windows are beginning to look like Easter. Already they are being filled with Easter lilies, primroses, tulips and daffodils. The supply of cut flowers is in good condition with scarcely any shortage. Violets are coming in by the thousands and in some cases the prices obtained hardly pay for the picking.

Otto Bourdy, whose greenhouses are located on the banks of the Merrimac river, is wearing a worried look. Close to his greenhouses the river is covered with ice three feet thick, and the stream is gradually on the rise. He has taken time by the forelock by getting a boat so when it is high tide he can float safely away to high land.

After an absence of two years our old friend "Bill" Waterworth, made his appearance, looking hale and hearty and just in time to fit in for Easter.

The Exeter Rose Conservatories of Exeter, N. H., have done themselves proud this year. Their roses being sent to this town are excellent.

Geo. Buxton, Nashua, N. H., is sending fine carnations to town. His Enchantress have three-foot stems.

Last year at this time the farmers were ploughing. This year the land is covered with snow three feet deep.

Lewis Small, of Tewksbury, returned home much pleased with his visit to Detroit.

Harvey B. Greene made a flying business trip to New York city last week.

Orange, N. J.

The monthly meeting and show of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held March 4. The exhibition was elaborate. Among the displays worth special attention were the orchids Cattleya Harrisonia, C. Schilleriana and Lycaste Skinneri, from the orchidry of William Barr, grown by Arthur Bodwell, the second having eight spikes. This exhibit received 95 points. A vase of mixed carnations, exhibited by Sydney and Austin Colgate, grown by George Smith, received 85 points. Other exhibits were a vase of mixed carnations, exhibited by A. C. Van Gaasbeek, grown by Wm. Bennett, 75 points; carnation Enchantress, exhibited by John Crosby Brown, 70 points; Primula obconica, in pots from Chas. Hathaway, grown by H. Hornacker, 75 points; Dracena indivisa, exhibited by John Crosby Brown, grown by Peter Duff, 75 points. The topic for the evening was "The San Jose Scale."

Emil Decker has one house of fine mignonette, spikes ten inches long. Falling short of his own seed, he purchased some to finish, and the entire sowing of purchased seed was a failure.

Local trade is active with funerals, weddings and orders for various social events. Bulbs are showing in the windows.

W. A. Manda has eighty varieties of orchids in bloom and reports a ready sale for all cut blooms.

CROP INSURANCE.
 Life insurance is valuable because it guarantees the outcome.
"Gurney" Heaters
 "BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouse: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expense at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

The Planting of a Tree.

Wouldst thou upbuild a home where sweet wild lives are nested.
Glad with the sound of song, quick with the flash of wing;
Where the soft broods may rock, warm housed and unmolested,
Deep in the leafy nooks, through all the changeable spring?

Or wouldst thou rear an arch of noblest grace and splendor,
Lifted in air and light, shaped by the sun and storm,
Moved by the wandering wing, swayed by each influence tender,
Yet by the hand of life molded to steadfast form?

Wouldst thou make day more fair and night more rich and holy,
Winter more keenly bright and summer's self more dear;
Grant the sweet earth a gift, deep rooted, ripening slowly,
Add to the sum of joys that bless the rounded year?

Go, then, and plant a tree, lovely in sun and shadow,
Gracious in every kind—maple and oak and pine—
Peace of the forest glade, wealth of the fruitful meadow,
Blessings of dew and shade hereafter shall be thine!

For, though thou never see the joy thy hand hath granted,
Those who shall follow thee thy generous boon may share.
Thou shalt be nature's child, who her best fruit hath planted,
And each of many a spring, shall find thy gift more fair.

THE ROSE GROWER AND HIS PROBLEMS.

READ BY ROBERT SIMPSON, OF CEIFTON, N. J., BEFORE THE NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB, MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 14, 1904.

ENTHUSIASTIC lovers of flowers will tell us sometimes that ours is the most charming and attractive vocation that any man or woman of taste and refinement could possibly choose; and we must admit that when everything moves along smoothly the rose grower has a calling that is both interesting and attractive. When his plants grow luxuriantly, and bloom profusely, and prices are satisfactory, it should not be very difficult for the average man to be good natured and agreeable all round.

There are times and seasons, however, when the rose grower has more troubles and perplexities than seem to fall to the lot of his fellow man in other walks of life. I do not propose, neither will you expect me in this article, to offer a solution for all the problems that are liable to confront each member of the craft at some period or other of his career. I confess that to some of them I have given my best thought during the last twenty years, yet seem to be no nearer a solution now than I was in the beginning. It has been said that misery loves company, and it may be a source of comfort to know that no one of us has had a monopoly of business puzzles.

Perhaps the greatest problem for most of us this present season has been one of mathematics: how to make a weekly check for $125 go as far in paying bills as one for $200 did last season. The labor item is just the same, the butcher and grocer demand equally as much, the incidental expenses are just as great, and the coal bills certainly have not been any smaller than usual. I wish that one of you expert financiers to-night could solve this problem to the satisfaction of all the rest.

The Labor Problem.—When a man's establishment has grown too large for his own hands to do all the work in it, and he is compelled to employ others, he is pretty certain to encounter difficulties which will keep him awake late into the night trying to puzzle out. The help problem in its most aggravated form makes a grower often wish that he had been anything in the wide world but a florist. To read the advertising columns of our trade weeklies one would be inclined to take an optimistic view of the situation. As one's eye runs over the page we find it bristles with talent and experience all waiting to serve the man lucky enough to secure it; each applicant thoroughly fitted for any position of trust and responsibility; "capable of taking charge" is the stereotyped phrase. With so much talent, all the best, how is a man to make a choice? We make a venture; the sequel you all know. The man who knew it all, when put to work and given the test, knew almost nothing, or else had stored up all the knowledge there was and immediately took upon himself the benevolent task of instructing his ignorant employer. The itinerant florist is a wonder. When a man pulls out a pocketful of testimonials you had better have a hurry call to the telephone, slip out of the back door, and never come back that day.

It seems to me that in trying to solve the labor problem we shall have to do one of two things: employ only unskilled labor and furnish the brains and intelligence ourselves, so that the men will simply need to execute orders and work machine fashion; or else we must try to secure journeymen florists of a higher stamp of morality and intelligence than those we have at the present time. A number of growers that I have talked with are trying the former method with more or less success; they at least have the satisfaction of running their business in their own way and having the work done as experience and common sense dictates. One very serious drawback to this method, however, will be found in the fact that if the intelligence of the overseer is, through sickness or any other cause, withdrawn for any length of time something serious is liable to happen.

If we adopt the other suggestion, I believe we will have to make our business more attractive and offer greater inducements for young men of education and intelligence to seek such employment. Bright boys to-day will not choose a business for life that pays them no better and gives them no higher rank than that of a common laborer. The treatment which some employers give their men in the way of long hours, little recreation, scanty and poor food and utter disregard for all the comforts of life, is scandalous in the extreme. I have passed through it.

Varieties to Grow.—Along about this season of the year the question of what to propagate and how many to plant has to be met and decided upon. American Beauty, we begin to reason, have sold poorly most of the season, and have not paid; Liberty went to sleep just when it needed to be wide awake, and has been a good deal of a disappointment; Golden Gate frequently have had to be put into the ice box because they were left unsold; Bride have not brought as good prices as Bridesmaid, hence were not as profitable. Shall I then discard all the rest and plant only Bridesmaid? If we all did this there would be a good many flowers of this variety next winter.

As a general rule, I think soil and environment must largely determine what we should and should not grow, particularly when catering to a market like that of New York City. The man who can grow superb American Beauty should fill his houses with that variety. He who has succeeded in producing high-grade Liberty could hardly miss his mark if he continues to grow them in quantity; the same with Meteor, Bridesmaid and the rest. It is far better to grow one variety first class, and get a name for growing it well, than to grow half a dozen kinds, a few of each, and grow them all indifferently.

On the other hand, is it not a fact that in our specializing we have narrowed our growing down to about four to six varieties, just about one variety of each color? We frequently hear European growers visiting this country say, "Why do you grow so few varieties of roses for cut flowers in America when you have such a list of good ones to choose from?" Would not the public who buy our flowers appreciate a greater variety, and in many instances purchase more liberally if they had more choice? It is reasonable to suppose they would.

It has been charged against the buyers for some of our large retail stores that they are very loath to take up a novelty and show it to their patrons, lest they should get an order for it some time, which it might be difficult or impossible to fill. If this be true, I think such buyers are injuring the business of their house, as well as closing the door to some worthy aspirant to popular favor. Presuming what I have just said to be a fact that the grower must reckon with, I believe it is still to his interest, present and prospective, to endeavor to furnish as great a variety of choice and desirable roses to the flower buying public as he has it in his power to do. To this end he should plant and experiment with all the promising novelties and keep a correct account of sales from such for future guidance.

I am very glad to see so many new and interesting varieties here for our inspection to-night, and I compliment the New York Florists' Club and its present officers for what they have accomplished in bringing together these various exhibits from distant points, giving us growers a chance to inspect them and find out their merits without incurring much expense, and furnishing the growers of these novelties the opportunity to make a display the result of which must be both pleasing and profitable.

Chicago sends us Uncle John—a monstrous name, it seems to me, to give to a lovely rose that its introducers confidently expect will become a standard variety for forcing purposes! It seems to be identical with Golden Gate, of which it is a sport, except that its color is said to be as uniformly good as that of Golden Gate at its very best. The flowers of it that I have seen were not nearly as large as those of our best Golden Gate; perhaps it will improve in this particular after dissemination.

Madame Abel Chatenay, also from Chicago, needs no apology for its name, which is pleasant to the ear; and its color, stem and general make-up create a very favorable impression.

La Detroit you have all seen before, both on exhibition and in the greenhouse, and have no doubt already formed your opinion as to its merits. As shown at Philadelphia a year ago it was very fine, and some of our eminent rose men got very enthusiastic over it; but it has hardly maintained the reputation that it made at its first introduction to the trade. I hope it may fulfil the expectations of its introducers.

Prof. George E. Stone.

Canadian Queen at its best is a very chaste and beautiful flower; its one drawback, as far as I have seen, is its lack of uniformity of color. If it can be fixed so that it will be permanent in color and shape we shall have a really desirable variety.

Killarney many of you are familiar with; it is uncommon, though not strictly new. It has shape and color and seems to be popular with the best class of buyers. The short stemmed blooms lack in character somewhat, and whether it would pay as well if grown quite extensively, as it has done during the present season, is a question to be determined later.

Ideal, a sport from La France, is a very beautiful rose; its fragrance, form and color are charming, and it is well worth a trial. The other new varieties here to-night I am not sufficiently acquainted with to criticise either one way or the other.

For variety some of the old favorites of a few years ago might very well be resurrected and brought to the front; some of them are so good that if they were offered to us under a new name we would snap them up eagerly. Among them I would mention Madame de Watteville, Madame Hoste, Papa Gontier and Bon Silene. A grower in one of our Western cities told me confidentially last spring that Bon Silene was one of the best selling and paying varieties on their list. Meteor is still a good all the year round rose, and many who discarded it for Liberty are returning to their first love. If well grown La France would sell as well now, comparatively, as it did fifteen years ago.

We will suppose the grower has made out a list of what he intends to grow, has propagated or purchased his stock, and planted the same in his benches after the most approved method. He can then sit down, or go on a long vacation, confident of splendid results the following winter? Well, hardly! Some growers do, but you know what kind of flowers they produce. The thoroughly practical and wideawake man doesn't take many vacations. If he can afford it he may send his family to the mountains or the seashore during the summer; but he, poor man, must stick to the wheel and keep at his post. And if he doesn't what then? Why, a score of things may happen. A storm comes up suddenly and his ventilators are turned inside out; the Beauties got syringed too often and watered too freely and black spot resulted, not to mention mildew, red spider, thrips, green fly, eel worm, any one of which is had enough, but, altogether, did you ever see a man in such a predicament? Of course, if a capable foreman is in charge the situation is altered somewhat, but I am thinking to-night of the small grower who is his own foreman.

Disposing of the Product.—A word now about disposing of our product after it is grown. Most of us consign our goods to the commission house and hope for the best; we cannot, perhaps, dispose of them in any other way. Is this the ideal way of getting our flowers to market? And are the results generally satisfactory? We have practically all adopted it; but that is not an argument in its favor. The commission house has its good features. The grower who consigns to it does not need to divide his time and energies between growing and selling and collecting his money; he stays home, produces the goods and receives his weekly check. The retail florist finds it convenient and profitable to have the commission dealer carry the goods for him, and be able to replenish his stock at any hour of the day. But these features would remain and prevail, no doubt, if the house became a wholesale market where flowers were bought and sold.

Among the bad features of the commission system I will mention one or two. Flowers consigned to a commission house are, theoretically, the property of the consignor until they are sold, or returned, or disposed of in some other way; practically they cease to be his when delivered to the express company; the consignee has not paid for them, does not own them, and is not responsible for them. If they are damaged, broken or stolen while in his possession it is the grower's loss. This state of affairs produces carelessness in the commission house, first in owner, then in employee. Choice roses that have been handled, possibly with the greatest care by the grower are frequently tossed around and bruised out of all semblance to their original freshness and beauty before they finally reach the ice box of the retail store. Who has to stand the loss caused by depreciation of value to the goods? The grower and the ultimate purchaser suffer equally. If I was growing mushrooms, peaches or hothouse grapes, and was very successful as a grower, but through carelessness or ignorance could not place them upon the market in a marketable condition, I would realize on them just what they were worth to the consumer; no more. So it must be with all our flowers. Perhaps the commission dealer would use no more care if he was the actual owner of the goods, but the chances are that he would; at all events, any loss there might be from that cause would be his own and not the grower's, as at present. I have no fault to find with the commission dealer as a man, but with the system under which he works.

Perhaps it is not too much to say that conditions in the cut flower business today are such as to demand of the growers the most serious consideration, individually, and as a body of hard working men. Organization and combination of allied industries have resulted in the putting up of prices on almost everything that the florist has to buy. I might mention glass, coal, pipe, hose, flower pots, and tobacco stems; but the florist, lacking organization, neglecting co-operation, stands alone in his helplessness and sees the price of his products diminishing from year to year, utterly unable to stem the tide which, sooner or later, threatens to sweep him off his feet. If we have any natural leaders in our ranks it seems to me that the time is ripe for them to take up and grapple with this question, and place our business on a more up-to-date basis. The first thing to consider should be fair and uniform prices, to be decided by the grower, not the retailer; the next an effort to regulate supply to keep pace with the demand. If there is an over-production at present, as appears to be the case, there should be no more new glass erected until an equilibrium has been reached. This is no doubt a knotty problem, but who dare say that it is not capable of a solution? Who shall be our Moses to lead us up and out of the land of Egypt?

Prof. G. E. Stone.

Prof. Geo. E. Stone, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College and Hatch Experiment station, was born in Massachusetts, receiving his early education in the public schools of that state and afterwards attending the Massachusetts Agricultural College during the years 1883-85. Thence he went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston, taking there an extensive course in biology. He remained in this institution until 1889 and then devoted one year to teaching botany and doing special botanical work. In 1890 Prof. Stone went to Europe where he studied two or three years, giving his attention to plant physiology under the direction of the ablest men in that line. Returning from Europe, he spent a brief period in botanical work at the Clark University, Worcester, Mass., there receiving an appointment as assistant professor of botany at the Massachusetts Agricultural College. He was subsequently appointed professor of botany in the college, and vegetable physiologist and pathologist in the Hatch Experiment station. Prof. Ralph E. Smith, who has recently been called to the position of vegetable pathologist in the University of California was assistant under Prof. Stone for some years. Their association in station work was of a very congenial nature.

Prof. Stone's work has been very largely along greenhouse lines and he is frank to admit that he owes a great deal to the experienced skill of the practical gardeners of Massachusetts for suggestions in managing greenhouse crops. His greenhouse work has been to a large extent affiliated with the raising of market gardening crops under glass, but more recently has taken up the horticultural problems. He has given considerable attention for the past ten years to the diseases of cucumbers, tomatoes and lettuce under glass, and discovered remedies which have resulted in controlling the worst diseases of those crops. An example of this is his method of soil sterilization, which has become quite extensively used in many sections of the country. He has given much attention to experimenting with electricity in relation to plant growth. The electrical problems are so complicated, however, that at present it seems of little practical value in horticulture.

He is thoroughly interested in agricultural problems, using the term in its broadest sense, and believes that agricultural colleges were established for agricultural purposes, and therefore the botany under his direction possesses a strongly agricultural flavor. Prof. Stone has recently been appointed to superintend the preparation of the biological exhibits of the agricultural colleges and experiment stations at the St. Louis exposition. Mr. Stone belongs to many scientific societies and associations, among them the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Worcester County Horticultural Society and Massachusetts Forestry Association. F. Society of American Florists.

MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The regular annual meeting of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists was held at the Southern Hotel, St. Louis, Mo., March 5 to 7, 1904. After the usual routine of officers' reports, sundry communications, etc., the arrangements for the coming convention were taken up. Music hall, Eastern nave and the spacious vestibule of the Exposition building on Olive street were found to be admirably adapted for the purposes of the convention and trade exhibition, and their selection therefor by the St. Louis Florists' Club was duly approved by the committee. The secretary was instructed to arrange for the presentation of papers by competent gentlemen upon the following subjects:

- Progress of Bulb Raising in America.
- Home and Municipal Improvement from a Horticultural Standpoint.
- The Ideal Employee.
- Development of an American Type of Roses.
- Indoor Blooming Plants.

The president's reception will be held, as heretofore, on the evening of the first day of the convention, but the usual evening meetings on the second and third days will be omitted so that members may be free to visit the World's Fair, a session on the morning of the fourth day being substituted therefor. One session will be devoted to addresses by eminent horticulturists from abroad. The bowling tournament will take place on the afternoon of the second day, the shooting and ladies' bowling on the afternoon of the third day and the visitors will be the guests of the St. Louis Florists' Club on the afternoon of the fourth day.

New rules were adopted regulating the judging in the trade exhibition, whereby the main report of the exhibits shall be made by the superintendent of the exhibition, and the judges, three in number, shall be required to examine and make awards on novelties and improved devices only, due entry of such special exhibits being made in advance with the superintendent. On recommendation of President Beneke of the local club, C. A. Kuehn was appointed superintendent of the exhibition with power to select an assistant. Arrangements were also made for the appointment of a sergeant-at-arms and assistant, a night watchman in the exhibition hall and the establishment of a bureau of information, and an agreement was entered into with the representatives of the St. Louis Florists' Club establishing the salary of the superintendent and providing for the disposal of the proceeds of the exhibition after the payment of all expenses, for the benefit of the St. Louis Florists' Club, on a basis similar to that made with the local club at Milwaukee last year.

The legislative committee was re-appointed with J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, as chairman for 1904, and H. M. Altick, Elmer D. Smith and the secretary were constituted a special committee to work in conjunction with them in promoting an agitation favoring the passage by congress of the bill presented by the Postal Progress league. P. J. Hauswirth, Carl Beyer and R. M. Tesson were appointed the committee on sporting events for the convention of 1904, and were instructed to rule that all persons (ladies excepted) participating in any games must be members of the S. A. F. in good standing, and also of their respective local Florists' Clubs where one exists. The amendment to the constitution providing for reciprocal relations with other societies, referred by the Milwaukee convention to the executive committee, was taken up and considered at length, and finally adopted in an amended form for regular presentation to the convention next August.

It was voted to offer for the coming year silver and bronze medals for award through various horticultural bodies, as in previous years. The accounts of the secretary and treasurer showed a very substantial increase in both general and permanent fund. The committee on final resolutions, Messrs. Altick, Wirth and Stewart, presented the following resolutions, which were adopted by a unanimous vote:

We, the members of the Executive Committee of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, in meeting assembled, hereby express our thanks to the St. Louis Florists' Club, to F. W. Taylor, Chief of Agriculture and Horticulture of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, to J. H. Haskinson, Superintendent of the Department of Floriculture, to T. W. Brown, Chief of Landscape, British Exhibit, to R. J. Mohr, Superintendent of Landscape, British Exhibit, and to the management of the Southern Hotel, for the hospitality and many courtesies shown us during our stay in St. Louis, and to the Daily Press for notices of our proceedings, and we would especially express our appreciation for the incessant and considerate attention shown to this committee by J. J. Beneke, Pres., and Otto G. Koenig, Treas. of the St. Louis Florists' Club.

PLANT SHIPMENTS BY EXPRESS.

Shippers of plants are hereby cautioned, by instruction of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, against the use of cut flower shipping labels on boxes of plants, as by such use they forfeit their right to the reduced rates accorded to plant shipments properly labeled.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

A Beautiful Suburban Home.

The accompanying photograph conveys but a faint idea of the beauty of the suburban home of one of Cleveland's most distinguished citizens, L. E. Holden, publisher of the Plain Dealer. It is in Glenville on the shore of Lake Erie, where it receives the full benefit of the delightfully cooling breezes of the lake in summer and the correspondingly cold blasts in winter. The latter are tempered by a grove of evergreens to the northwest. The grounds are laid out with simple yet exquisite taste. The dwelling sets back about three hundred feet from one of the principal thoroughfares. The intervening space is devoted to a well kept lawn, as the picture shows, dotted here and there with magnificent specimens of latanias, agaves and other attractive plants. The latanias are worthy of special notice, being in perfect condition, from six to eight feet high, and spread to a like width. The main drives are bordered with shrubbery and edged with flowering and border plants.

Mr. Holden is a noted horticulturist and his fund of knowledge in this line gained from extensive travel in foreign lands has been put into practice in the adornment of his beautiful home. It is mainly due to his energies and profound knowledge of the subject that Cleveland is the proud possessor of a chain of parks second to none, he having been connected with the park board as its president for a number of years. A new range of greenhouses as an additional adornment has been added this year. They are strictly modern in every particular. In their construction the practical as well as the artistic side was kept in mind. The range consists of five houses, 20x50, and a palm house 25x70, and 18 feet high. There is a boiler shed, 20x20, the upper story being divided into an office and potting shed. The outside walls are built entirely with hollow concrete blocks, an innovation in greenhouse construction which Mr. Holden considers almost as cheap as wood and everlasting. The divisional walls are of hollow building tile. The woodwork is all cypress. The glass 16x24, is put the 24-inch way.

Iron benches with tile bottoms are used throughout, ribbed glass being used for the palm house. The whole is heated by steam from a forty horse-power boiler. The grounds surrounding the houses are neatly laid out in flower beds and lawn. Roses, carnations and bedding plants are grown and at present are in the pink of condition. The management of the whole devolves upon Wm. Stadie, who is not only an expert plantsman and landscape artist but a prince of good fellows. Mr. Stadie, like his employer, has had a wide and varied experience in horticulture. He has occupied his present position sixteen years. The fifteen years preceding were spent in the commercial line with B. Elliott, Jno. Bader, and others in Pittsburg. Later he helped to grow the first roses produced in Cleveland on a commercial place, that of W. J. Gordon, which has since passed away. The entire place reflects great credit upon Mr. Stadie, and his ambition is to keep this beauty spot looking well.

Comments on the Detroit Convention.

In thoroughly digesting the report of the Detroit convention together with the papers read there and the ideas presented by the several gentlemen who took part in the discussions, I find lots of material to enrich the mind. It is my opinion that several of the points brought out should receive further consideration, particularly Wm. Scott's paper. It is my firm belief that some method must be adopted different from that now in use to make the seal of the society more valuable and to curtail dissemination of novelties of questionable merit. If not we shall find Mr. Valentine's angel less willing every year to take first shot at the novelties. After then, what? I do not believe in sending small lots to different growers for trial because it is generally the case that they are planted on one end of the bench or in some out of the way place where they cannot get a fair show, and if they do not do as well as expected they are to a certain extent condemned. But I should think the society could arrive at some system which would be acceptable to the disseminator and buyer alike and also broaden the usefulness of the society.

It seems to the writer that there is no good reason why thoroughly practical results could not be obtained if the society were to appoint certificate committees in different sections of the country with power to score any variety sent to them for the society's certificate, the owner to present his seedling before the nearest committee at intervals during the season—at a certain date in September, again in December, again in March and again in May—each exhibit to consist of twelve blooms and one plant in bud and bloom taken direct from the bench, a scale being compiled consisting of ten points to cover the plant, and a certificate to be granted to each variety which averages above a certain number of points throughout the season. A certificate obtained on these lines would mean a great deal more to a variety than it does at present.

The suggestion that the carnation as a pot plant be encouraged is a good thing, but to grow a carnation successfully in a pot, in other words to bring them to such perfection as to meet with the present day requirements, an entirely different method of culture must be followed than what is practiced in growing carnations for cut flowers. It is not only a question of getting them into bloom at the right time but also one of being able to get enough buds and shoots on the plants to give satisfaction after being sent to market. Any plantsman that makes a specialty of growing pot plants I believe could find a good profit in putting in a house of pot carnations for the Christmas holidays. Carnations do not need a very deep pot, so I would advise using what is called the azalea pot, and seven inches would be plenty large enough for them. Take clean, healthy young stock the first part of April and shift up into 3½-inch pots, using a soil similar to that used in the benches but with considerable less manure. Give them as cool a house as possible, just about 40° night temperature with plenty of ventilation on all favorable occasions. They must at no time receive an over abundance of water, but the soil should be kept a little on the dry side so as to keep the roots in active growth. As soon as the weather permits they can be placed outside in frames with the sash raised about a foot above the frame. Along about the middle of June repot into 5-inch pots, then plunge them in some light material in the frames. After this for about two months care must be taken by dusting with tobacco powder to keep away aphids. Also give them an occasional watering with lime water to keep the soil clear of worms and pay particular attention to topping to insure a bushy plant. By August 15 arrange to transfer them into the house again. If you have a house running north and south with side ventilators this will be the place for them. They can now receive their final potting into 7-inch pans, using about the same proportions of manure and soil as you would for the bench plants. After this, great care must be taken in the watering until they are established. Keep all buds removed and side shoots pinched out up till about ten weeks before the time for them to bloom, the night and day temperature being kept as even as possible, 45° to 50° for night and 50° to 55° cloudy days. One of the most important parts of their culture is to make sure that there is a free circulation of air between the plants to prevent the foliage from getting decayed. After they begin to throw up the blooming shoots they will have to be neatly tied up, each plant being spread out as much as possible to keep it dwarf. Varieties that produce but very little pollen will be found to be best suited for pot culture because there is no chance for self fertilization and therefore the blooms will carry much longer. If I had to make a choice from the varieties in cultivation to-day I would choose Adonis, Mrs. Lawson, White Lawson and Geo. H. Crane on account of their compact habit.

Carnation Show at Toronto, Ont.

The carnation show held by the Gardeners' and Florists' Association and the Horticultural Society in St. George's hall March 11 was a decided success in point of attendance and in the quality and number of blooms shown. The flowers staged both by local and out-of-town competitors were all of a standard never before equaled at a local show. For the Challenge Cup there were many entries, but Fiancee, exhibited by the Chicago Carnation Company, Joliet, Ill., won the prize, making its debut in this section. Fiancee was an interesting feature of the show and deserved to triumph though there was other stock of high merit in competition. Mgr. Hartshorne accompanied the exhibit and also staged six other vases of 100 blooms each, all of which were very well grown, showing good color and strong stems. The prize for the best collection of carnations was won by J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, with fifteen varieties—in white, Gov. Lowndes, Alba and Lillian Pond; in pink, Enchantress, Lawson and a Lawson sport. His Lawson sport was very much admired. It is a fine shade of pink. The prize for best exhibit of general stock was won by W. J. Lawrence, of Eglinton, Ont., showing very nice roses, carnations, bulbous stock and a general collection of well-grown stock in flowering plants. The Chicago Carnation Company was awarded a certificate of merit for the Cardinal which scored 80 points. The firm was given honorable mention for the collection of Enchantress, Lawson, Alba and Crusader which scored 76 points. There was some comment on the judging as the exhibits scored were in all cases about 15 points behind what they should have been given. F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, N. Y., sent his new dark crimson Daheim, which was a very good flower but rather weak in the stem. He also showed a vase of white Lawson, which scored 79 points, and some well grown Enchantress and Adonis. F. Dorner & Sons Company, Lafayette, Ind., sent their new varieties Lady Bountiful, which is a very good white but with weak stem, and the Belle, a large white flower with strong stem. W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, sent his new Red Lawson, which were good flowers with strong stems. H. Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md., sent a very fine bunch of Gov. Lowndes and their New Daybreak, which, however, had been on the road too long. The J. D. Thompson Carnation Company showed a fine vase of Enchantress. J. N. May, of Summit, N. J., sent his new white Bride, very good flowers, and a vase of very handsome Gen. MacArthur roses, which were a very pleasing shade of red, sweetly fragrant and with good long stems. They were much admired. Peter Reinberg, of Chicago, sent exhibits of his new rose, Uncle John, and Chatenay. Jno. Breitmeyer's Sons, of Detroit, Mich., sent an exhibit of their new rose La Detroit. The Dale estate of Brampton showed a collection of carnations and roses, the latter Bridesmaid and Bride. Wm. Fendley, of Brampton, exhibited a fine collection of carnations and violets, his Princess having a very large flower and long stem. J. H. Dunlop also showed a good general collection of Bride, Bridesmaid, Meteor, Ivory and Golden Gate roses, all well grown, beside a number of well bloomed azaleas and rhododendrons. Wm. Jay & Son had a nice general collection, including roses and carnations, ferns and bulbous stock. Manton Bros. had a very creditable collection of orchids and some very fine Pierson ferns, beside bulbous stock, carnations and roses. Baur & Smith sent their carnation Indianapolis, a very beautiful shade of pink and a most desirable and fragrant flower. It did not arrive, however, until the day after the show. It is certainly a very fine keeper, for after having been on the road five days it opened up fine and still looks as though it would last three or four days.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson.

This splendid variety is gaining more friends every year, and well it may, for since the conditions under which it thrives best have become better understood it has proved itself the most profitable carnation now cultivated. However, it will have to share that honor hereafter with Enchantress. I have had many compliments on our house of Lawson this winter by visiting florists and traveling men. On February 24 I invited a few florist friends to visit our greenhouses, and in their presence had two of the carnation houses photographed. One, a house of Lawson, 18x100 feet; the other, 23½x221 feet, planted with most of the standard varieties. The white varieties which show in the foreground of the picture are Gov. Wolcott, Queen Louise, White Cloud and Peru. The Lawsons show a uniform and healthy growth that has attracted the attention of visitors. Many have asked about our method of treatment, and perhaps some of the readers of the AMERICAN FLORIST may be interested in the manner we cultivate this variety. I firmly believe our success is mainly due to proper selection of the cuttings; and I have every reason to expect that in a few years our Lawsons will be in better shape and more profitable than they are at present. Our stock has improved every year.

In the first place we are very particular to take cuttings from only the most vigorous and healthy plants. After they have been rooted and taken out of the sand we discard all that show any signs of weakness, and after they have been potted four or five weeks we go through the hatch and throw out all that are not growing properly. In this way we get rid of the weak portion of the stock and have left only strong healthy plants, which make a better showing each succeeding year. I believe in growing Lawson as well as all other carnations in pots. Those that were potted early in 2-inch should be repotted into 3 and finally into 4-inch if there is any danger of their becoming pothound and their growth being checked. But for plants that are to be grown in the field it is seldom necessary to use 4-inch pots. Those in threes make good strong plants for field planting, and they lift much better in the summer than plants from smaller pots, as the 3-inch ball of earth usually sticks to the plant and prevents it from wilting when it is transplanted into the greenhouse. Under no consideration should the growth of the Lawson be checked. If the plants are not to be grown in the field they should be kept moving in pots until they can be planted in the house. Last year we planted from 3-inch pots about June 20 in the house where they are now blooming, but we made a serious mistake in holding them in 3-inch six weeks too long. They should have been planted in the house May 1 or shifted into 4-inch pots about that time. Had we done either a much earlier and heavier crop would have resulted. The Lawson will stand stronger feeding than other varieties, but care should be taken not to use anything strong enough to injure the roots. It will take more water than most varieties and will thrive with a good syringing on all bright days. We find it does best in a night temperature of 56° to 58°. Grown cooler, the flowers split and warmer the flowers are too small. Nothing, however, seems to affect the stiffness of the stem. We have picked from this house (18x100 feet) as many as 1,060 blooms in one day, and on many occasions we have picked from 800 to 950 at one time. But these heavy pickings were after the flowers had been left three or four days. Our general average has been for some months past about 1,000 per week. While I consider the Lawson the best and most profitable dark pink carnation to date, the beautiful Enchantress, the queen of carnations, is a most wonderful variety. Taking the season as whole it will produce as many or more flowers than Lawson, and they sell for nearly 50 per cent more on the average. Peter Fisher deserves the thanks of every carnation grower in America for giving us these two wonderful varieties. Lawson is now grown almost everywhere; no place is too large for it and no place is too small, and I predict that within three years the Enchantress will be as popular. W. W. COLES.

PALMS AND FERNS.

Potting and Spring Cleaning.

As the sun gains in strength and the days lengthen out there are many more signs of growth that may be noted among the palms, and not only the kentias but also arecas and latanias begin to show a growing color and to push up young leaves. Of course it is possible to force these plants into growth to some extent during the resting season, but such forcing does not pay in the long run, for it results in thin foliage and spindling growth. But now that a natural growth is beginning the sooner we can get at the potting and spring housecleaning the better, an early start at this work not only giving so much longer a season for plant growth, but also allowing the various repairs that may be needed to be completed and the houses put in order before the weather gets uncomfortably hot. Those growers who are fortunate enough to have only slate and iron benches throughout their houses are not so frequently troubled with the repairing and rebuilding of benches as are the majority who stick to wood for this purpose, and no matter how carefully these wooden benches are built it is only a matter of time before they give out and must be replaced. The life of a bench varies with the quality of the material and the use to which it is put, but we find the average life of a bench built of hemlock lumber and used for growing pot plants of various sizes to be about four years, though there are occasional exceptions to this rule, as for example, a bench that is only used for young stock in 2 or 3-inch pots and does not have so great a weight to support may last for five years, while another in the same house that has to carry a heavier load it to be a useful process at times, and especially so when one wants to make up some combination plants, this method removing the soil from the roots without breaking or bruising the latter to any serious extent. But it is very necessary to remember that no plant is benefitted by having its roots exposed to the air for any great length of time, and consesoon be in order, the old crowns being divided up into very small sections after the foliage has been cut down, and the sections of crown being planted in a bed of sandy soil in a propagating frame, or in flats filled with a similar compost and kept in a warm and shaded house. Some growers prefer a compost of sand and chopped sphagnum for these root divisions of Adiantum Farleyense, but whatever the compost the divisions are carefully planted, kept moist and well protected from the sun, and as soon as they have made a few roots and a small frond or two they are potted off in the same manner as seedling ferns and treated in much the same way. Adiantum rhodophyllum and A. Victoriae, both of which are excellent dwarf adiantums, also make a multitude of crowns and may be divided as readily as A. Farleyense, the young stock being treated in the same way.

PRIMULA KEWENSIS.

(As grown by James Veitch & Sons, London, England)

Primula Kewensis.

A hybrid primula of garden origin would be interesting, whatever its horticultural merits, but in P. Kewensis we have this and a hybrid of quite exceptional beauty and usefulness. It originated in the Royal Gardens, Kew, nearly six years ago, its parents being P. floribunda and P. verticillata. These two species are grown in quantity in pots at Kew for the decoration of the conservatory, and when in flower they are always mixed for effect. It is not known how the two were crossed, whether by wind or insect agency, at any rate it was accidental. Amongst some seedlings of P. floribunda was noticed one with distinct foliage, and this when it flowered proved to be a happy blend of the characters of the two species named. The same thing happened again two years later. It may be surmised that the cross breeding is effected by insects, but it is noteworthy that only one seedling in each batch was a hybrid. The capsule of P. floribunda contains many seeds, and it might therefore be expected that more than one ovule would be fertilized with the pollen of P. verticillata. So much for the origin of the plant.

It was awarded a first-class certificate by the Royal Horticultural Society in may give out in three and one-half years. These figures may be applied to benches of various widths, provided the supports are not over four feet apart.

But the benches having been repaired and given a good coat of hot whitewash or even a coat of slacked lime before putting on the ashes or whatever material the boards are covered with, they will then be ready for the plants. This cleaning off of the old material be it ashes, sand or soil on which the pots have been placed, is well worth the trouble, there being no better way to get rid of a lot of earthworms and insects that soon accumulate on an old bench, to say nothing of the improved appearance of the house. At the time of repotting the palms, there are doubtless some growers who take the whole of a lot of small stock and repot at the same time, but in such a lot of plants even though they are all from one crop of seed there will be found many that are undersized and really not fit for a shift, and it is much better to select the stronger plants for a shift and to leave the weak ones for a later crop. By this practice one is enabled to grow a much more even grade of stock than is possible where the non-selective method is used. Firm potting is the best for palms in general, though not requiring to be rammed quite so hard as an azalea or some other fine-rooting plant, and it is particularly essential that the soil in the bottom of pots be made firm rather than that should be loose and the surface soil rammed down hard. Repotting a palm is a simple process but needs the use of some common sense in addition to a good strong potting stick.

We have frequently referred to the advantages of washing out the roots of some palms by means of a good head of water and a small nozzle, and still find quently one should repot the washed palms just as rapidly as possible. This washing process is by no means a new idea in palm growing, it having been advised by B. S. Williams, of London, as a useful method in the recuperation of unhealthy plants in the books written by that gentleman more than thirty years ago, and Williams carried out the idea even farther, for he suggested the placing of such palms after they had been repotted in a tank of warm water for some weeks. There are, however, but few establishments in which such a course would be convenient or practicable, and we therefore depend upon placing the washed and repotted palms in a warm and shaded house, syringing frequently and keeping the atmosphere rather close until the plants become re-established.

With milder weather there is not the same opportunity for vaporizing nicotine on the heating pipes in order to keep down the insects, and it becomes necessary to fumigate the houses at intervals in order to discourage the various aphides and thrips that will appear, for these insects remind us of what is said of the very poor, namely, that they are very fruitful and are always with us. The early lots of palm seeds are now being offered, among them Kentias Belmoreana and Forsteriana, both of which are offered at comparatively low prices, Kentia Belmoreana bringing the best price of the two on account of its great popularity. But palm seeds are somewhat of a lottery as percentages of germination vary so greatly, and it is safer for the small buyer to get the young plants from some specialist rather than to bother with raising seedlings, a process that occupies space for many months and frequently results in partial failure. The dividing of Adiantum Farleyense for stock will 1900, and the stock shortly afterwards passed into the hands of J. Veitch & Sons, whose success in its multiplication and cultivation has been remarkable. They have exhibited large batches of it in flower in February, March and April, and in their Feltham nurseries they had last year a house filled with it in flower. There are many beautiful primulas, and it is not easy to say which are the best; I should not hesitate, however, to place P. Kewensis in the selection which included P. Sinensis, P. Japonica, P. obconica and P. Auricula. It is easily grown, of sturdy constitution, forming in a year a good tuft of bright green leaves from eight to twelve inches long and about three inches broad, the margins irregularly toothed. The flowers are borne in whorls on erect, graceful scapes, twelve to eighteen inches long, each whorl consisting of from six to twelve flowers and leafy bracts; well grown plants will produce as many as eighteen scapes. The flowers are bright, sulphur yellow, and are nearly an inch in diameter; they are fragrant and lasting, and are most effective either in a conservatory or in table decoration.

The hybrid origin of this primula is further shown by its sterility, no seeds being matured by it, although its parents seed freely under cultivation. Fortunately it can be readily multiplied by division, every growth with a root being certain to form a plant, and as there are many growths in a tuft a good stock of plants can be got in a short time with a little skill. This is proved by the success of Messrs. Veitch who now have thousands of plants from the original ten plants obtained from Kew three years ago. When the flowers are over, say about the end of April, the plants should be repotted and placed in a cool frame for the summer and autumn. With regard to soil and water the same treatment as suits P. Japonica answers for P. Kewensis. It will not stand frost, an airy greenhouse or frame being best for the plants in winter. Liberal treatment, except for three or four weeks after flowering, when the soil should be allowed to get dry, gives the most satisfactory results. The largest plants grown so far were in 6-inch pots.

A New Primula.

Our illustration shows a new primrose grown by W. K. Harris, of Philadelphia, in quantity for the Christmas trade this season, which has been received with marked appreciation. It is undoubtedly a relative of P. floribunda but its identity is not known by Mr. Harris, neither has any plantsman thus far been able to name it positively. The flowers are bright yellow, slightly fragrant and produced in continuous succession for months; other characteristics are well shown in the picture. It was at first thought to be P. Kewensis, a novelty offered by Veitch this season, but a comparison with a photograph of P. Kewensis shows the latter to have a long corolla tube whereas Mr. Harris' plant has a very short tube. Whatever it may be, it is certainly a very useful addition to the list of acceptable house plants and, as it reproduces readily from seed, will undoubtedly soon become widely disseminated.

Dahlia Propagation.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Are dahlia roots produced from root cuttings equal to those produced from divided tubers?

W.

We hold the opinion that dahlia roots produced from cuttings are as good as those produced from divided tubers.

WAGNER PARK CONSERVATORIES.

Much depends on the circumstances. I assume that conditions are favorable in each system, and if such be the case there would be but little or no difference in the quality of the two products so far as blooming is concerned. Where a commercial grower uses due care in selecting stock plants from which to take cuttings, and then exercises the same care not to over-propagate, or propagate too far into the spring, I see no reason why he should not have a stock of roots in the fall practically equal to stock grown from divided tubers. Personally, I use divided tubers almost exclusively for growing commercial stock, principally for two reasons. There is much less danger of getting varieties mixed, and I am strongly of the opinion, based on years of experience, that dahlias propagated from cuttings for a number of years will become shy producers of roots. This last objection, however, is a matter of quantity rather than quality. I like the European method of sending out what are known as "pot roots." These are grown from cuttings but instead of being planted out are grown and ripened in a small pot, thus allowing the vitality of the plant to return to the root instead of being destroyed by frost. These pot roots are very small—too small for the average American—but they make excellent planting stock. This article does not take into account the rooted cuttings or what are commonly known as green plants. As I understand, the question applies only to the plant one year after the cutting has been rooted.

W. W. WILMORE.

Where dahlias are properly propagated, using good strong healthy stock, the cuttings taken at the proper size and stage of growth, struck in pure sand in a moderate temperature of about 55°, giving the cuttings ample room, potted, and the plants set in the ground during May, they will give much stronger and better clumps and are considered by florists generally as being superior to roots grown from divided tubers. The reasons for this are obvious. On the other hand, if first-class stock is not used to propagate from; if the cuttings are not rooted in a clean, pure, well ventilated house; if the plants are potted up and allowed to become thin, drawn and hardened, making slender weak plants, and are planted in the ground late in June or July; or if they are planted very close together and worked with a wheel hoe, as compared with the divided tubers receiving more space, they would, of course, be inferior. No matter what method is used in propagating dahlias they are plants that require plenty of room, air and light. We propagate by divided tubers as far as our stock permits because it is the cheapest method, but many of our largest customers specify, "We prefer roots grown from green plants." The principal reason for this is that as the green plant has but one stem and consequently but a two eye system, these eyes are developed better and by not sending up so many shoots, the following year send up much stronger ones and give better satisfaction to their customers. Besides this the roots are more compact and are not so apt to have their necks broken in handling. Stating the question in this way: Suppose divided roots were planted in rows four feet apart and one foot in the row, strong well grown plants the same distance apart, the divided roots sending up two to four shoots and the green plants, of course, having but one—it is needless to say that the green plant is going to make the largest stem and root, and develop its eyes much better than the divided root which has so many more eyes. The principal objection to propagating from green plants in commercial dahlia growing is the additional expense over propagating from divided tubers, as in addition to the expense of growing and rooting the cuttings and potting the plants, they must be shifted and given plenty of air and space to prevent them drawing in order to keep them strong, stocky, little plants up to the time they are planted in the field. EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING.

Ottawa was the scene of the executive committee meeting this year. Delegates turned out well, east and west about even. The convention will be held early in August, probably the week before the S. A. F. convention. The exact date will be fixed in a week or two. The trade exhibit is to be made a special feature. Certificates of merit, diplomas and honorable mentions will be given to worthy exhibits. Professor Fletcher, of the dominion experimental farm, will give a lecture at the second evening session, if possible illustrated with the stereopticon. There will be two essays read. The secretary was again instructed to write to the minister of customs urging the placing of azaleas on the free list. A great deal of business was done at the meeting, the effects of which will be seen in the programme and at the convention. The weather was cold, the reception by the genial President Mepsted and the other Ottawa boys warm. Every Canadian florist should make up his mind right now to attend the convention and begin saving at once. A look over the experimental farm alone is worth the money.

The Parks of Washington, D. C.

The question of a vista through the mall from the capitol to the monument has taken definite form in the United States senate. Senator Newlands has introduced a bill, providing in effect for a space of 800 feet between buildings to be constructed on the north and south sides of the mall. In speaking for his bill, Mr. Newlands stated that he favored placing government buildings on Pennsylvania avenue rather than on the mall, but he considered it a wise precaution to preserve the 800-foot space in the case of such buildings as may be erected under the existing law. He reviewed the work of the park commission, saying its plans had followed closely the lines laid down by General Washington and carried out by L'Enfant. The necessity of his bill, Senator Newlands said, was made prominent by the proposition to place the new building for the department of agriculture in such a way as to reduce the central space of lawn to 600 feet. He said there was no proposition to convert this space into a boulevard. Instead of the proposed boulevard there would be a great lawn 300 feet wide through the mall, from the capitol to the monument, and on each side of this would be planted rows of elm trees forty-five feet apart. A roadway on each side of the 800-foot space would be provided along the building lines established, in case the government should wish to have public buildings there. He added that there was a very general sentiment favoring the south side of Pennsylvania avenue for public buildings, in order that it might be rescued from its present deplorable condition. In the course of his remarks Senator Newlands said that in a few years expositions would be held in this city every ten years, as they are in Paris, and the mall would be the proper place for such expositions.

On Saturday, March 12, the senate district committee held a public hearing at the capitol. Members of the house district committee were invited to sit with the senate committee. As showing the great interest manifested in this matter, the names of a number of men prominent in building and landscape architecture who were present at the hearing are here given: Frederick Law Olmsted, of Boston; D. L. Burnham, of Chicago, and

GENERAL VIEW OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

C. F. McKim, of New York, composing the senate park commission; W. S. Eames, of St. Louis; Frank Niles Day, of Philadelphia; Augustus St. Gaudens, the sculptor, and Dr. B. T. Galloway, representing the secretary of agriculture, and Secretary S. P. Langley, of the Smithsonian Institution. D. L. Burnham referred to the scheme of Washington in the laying out of the city. He said a town near Connellsville, Pa., had been seen by the commission whose park was laid out by Washington himself, and its similarity of plan with the plan of this city proved that the plan for the capital's streets and avenues was the conception of Washington himself. They had then sought by every possible way to discover the intentions of Washington, had gone abroad and visited places in this country to seek the best ideas for improvements. The proposed improvement of the mall, he said, was finally decided on as the only fitting one for such a parkway. Examination had resulted in convincing them that there should be four rows of trees on either side of the parkway of the mall. The necessities of the case were such that 800 feet would have to be used. He favored the erection of the building for the department of agriculture on a site on the north portion of the mall, rather than on the south part. He would prefer, first of all, to have that building at Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, but still he would be willing to state in writing that Fifteenth and B streets on the land of the mall would be satisfactory to the park commission. So far as the suggestion for a national park on the mall was concerned, he said that was a matter of taste, to be decided by educated men. The commission thought the formal treatment of the mall was the proper one. Both the capitol and the monument were of the most formal nature, so that a formal treatment of the mall seemed to be the one to commend itself to the park commission as without doubt the most desirable.

W. S. Eames, president of the American Institute of Architects, explained to the committee how all over the country, since the park commission's plans were gotten out, various cities had undertaken to devise plans by which they could be developed on harmonious lines. This was eminently the case in Cleveland, Philadelphia and St. Louis. What was recognized as desirable for those cities was even more desirable for this city. Franklin Smith did not believe in the formal treatment of the mall as proposed by the park commission, but thought that it ought to be retained as a pleasure park for the people of South Washington. Senator Newland's bill is now in the hands of the senate district committee.

The illustration herewith shows the mall, looking east from the Washington monument. In the foreground and to the right are the buildings of the agricultural department. The Smithsonian Institution and the national museum stand a short distance beyond. The capitol and congressional library will be easily recognized. S. E.

A Traveler's Note Book.

In my travels I find that roses on their own roots (indoors) are nearly all badly infested with eel worm, but have not seen any so far on grafted stock. The new rose Killarney is giving very good satisfaction and will be largely grown next year. Gen. MacArthur is also doing very well.

In carnations Enchantress is ahead of everything. Adonis is doing better as the days lengthen, but it is too shy a bloomer. White Lawson is doing as well as its parent ever did and is not bursting very much at all. The sale of this variety is phenomenal and it is questionable if it will be possible to fill all the orders.

The planting of Rhododendron maximum and Kalmia latifolia on private places is largely on the increase and more will be planted out this spring than ever.

WITH THE GROWERS

Easter Plants at A. Schultheis'.

The long ranges of plant houses at College Point, Long Island, crowded to the doors with roses, heathers, lilies, hydrangeas, genistas and azaleas in endless variety, present an inviting appearance now and a cheery promise of a bountiful Easter show. Ericas have been steadily gaining a foothold in the popular fancy each year of late, and Mr. Schultheis has done much to bring about this appreciation by presenting these graceful little subjects in satisfactory shape and ever-increasing variety. Each year sees a few additions to the bench of unfamiliar varieties, under test as to their behavior under American conditions and their adaptability for the commercial florists' use. The number of sorts in sight for this year's Easter demand is greater than ever before. The use of ericas is no longer confined to Christmas and Easter, however, for the melantha of Christmas is followed by a succession of other varieties which continue the line uninterruptedly all through the winter season.

Mr. Schultheis' Rambler house is a veritable museum of chairs, baskets, arbors, anchors, horseshoes and whatnots. The ingenuity displayed here in evolving novel designs in the training of Easter Crimson Rambler roses is equaled only by the infinite patience and labor expended thereon. Some communities there are that prefer their roses in bushy specimens of natural appearance, but as Mr. Schultheis is a man of alert business sagacity, who knows better than to indulge in profitless work, it is evident that in New York at least these remarkable contrivances find ready admirers. A favorite form is that of a basket, some of the branches being trained over to form a handle. Bougainvilleas are also trained in like manner. The Farquhar and Perkins roses are being tried this year, with the hope that they may make serviceable companions to the Crimson Rambler. Other varieties experimented with in past years have proven unsatisfactory.

The outfit of an up-to-date Easter plant grower requires an equipment of storage sheds, preparatory houses, finishing houses, etc., such as the grower of a few years ago had no conception of. Palms and similar things are side-tracked for the time being, and a regular routine is established for each class of plants according to their special needs. Once decided upon, this routine is carefully adhered to and sad is the fate of any employe neglecting established rules of temperature, fumigation, light and shade or watering as based upon years of experience. Mr. Schultheis forces 140,000 tulips each season, which means an average output of 10,000 weekly. Without going into detail as to varieties grown, which are well known to all tulip forcers, mention might be made of White Hawk, a variety which Mr. Schultheis regards as a coming standard sort, as soon as the stock obtainable is sufficiently large. It is of purest white and excellent substance. Three weeks is the average time given to tulips and Dutch hyacinths, from their removal from the cold storage sheds until ready for market.

A house of Bermuda longiflorum lilies presents a picture of health and vigor calculated to restore suspended animation in any discouraged lily grower. Nothing finer in the lily line has been seen in recent years. Hydrangea azurea, first seen in the New York Easter market last year, is being grown in large quantity this season by Mr. Schultheis. The color of its flowers, when they come, is glorious, but the proportion of blind shoots is apt to be large, under present cultural methods, and something has yet to be learned as to how to secure its best development. A prime acquisition is Spiræa (Astilbe) Gladstone. The flower spikes are branching and of enormous size, each individual stem bearing as much bloom as an entire plant of the familiar old Japonica.

W. W. Edgar, Waverley, Mass.

Easter specialties are advancing at a rapid clip at the greenhouses of W. W. Edgar at Waverley, Mass. In nearly everything in flowering plants that safe stage has been reached which wise-headed growers like to attain where buds are so well advanced that they can now beside-tracked in cool quarters ready to be brought in and pushed ahead should the exigencies of the weather make this necessary and, in any event of weather, can be depended upon to respond in full bloom just when wanted. It thus becomes a question of retarding instead of forcing and the plants will ultimately give greater satisfaction to the buyer on this account. Already the vast cool storage shed is well filled with specimens practically finished and only awaiting the command to burst.

There will be the usual unrivalled display of acacias here, also genistas and azaleas in large quantity. Mr. Edgar complains, as others have done, of his inability to secure during the past season the proper proportion of azaleas in small sizes. The demand in the Boston market runs strongly to the small sizes, the price which the grower must get for plants that cost $3 or $4 apiece on other side being prohibitive for the purses of the vast majority of Easter plant buyers. He reports, as have all others who have given them a trial, especial call for the miniature varieties such as Firefly, Hexe and Chas. Encke, of which many thousands could be sold beyond the available supply.

In Crimson Rambler roses the same is true in Mr. Edgar's experience. He is stocked with plants of the medium and small sizes mainly and the training is confined to the low bushy form which is the only acceptable form for this market. There will be a fine house of Brunners in pots. The usual trouble with the pest known as the "leaf roller" is being experienced, Brunner seemingly being a favorite variety for this grub's appetite. Hand picking is the only available resort and eternal vigilance is essential. Lily of the valley in pots and pans is a regular output with Mr. Edgar the season through until Easter. A batch of pips is put in once a week, the quantity based on the approximate demand. The margin of profit on this specialty is so narrow, however, that great care must be exercised not to overstock as the flowers last but a short time in salable shape and the loss of a few unsold pans wipes out most if not all of the profit on the remainder.

Lilacs look very promising. The leading varieties with Mr. Edgar are Mme. Lemoine, splendid double white, Mary Legray, simple white and Souv. de Louis Spath, single dark. Referring to recent Christmas experience he says that the sale of Cyrtomium falcatum, the "holly fern," in small pans was phenomenal, the demand far exceeding the supply on hand. Mr. Edgar has been eighteen years at his present place. His business has now outgrown the area of land and next spring he contemplates beginning the erection of a large range of houses on a farm acquired for this purpose some time ago.

The Aschmann Greenhouses.

The visitor to the greenhouses of Godfrey Aschmann is generally given a surprise with every visit as the place changes as if by magic with the different seasons. No matter when one calls, every foot of space on the tables, above as well as below, is paying the proprietor as it is seen filled with stock in all stages of growth. At present, Easter plants hold the boards while cuttings and seedlings occupy the shelves and flats suspended above, waiting their turn to be potted and brought on for the spring sales. Underneath the tables are geraniums, palms, rubbers and other plants in more or less light places, stored away temporarily to make needed room. The lilies, azaleas, spiræas and cinerarias and the bulbous plants which comprise the bulk of his Easter stock are all in nice condition. His Vander Cruyssen azaleas are as fine plants as it seems possible to get in 6-inch pots. They were selected personally by Mr. Aschmann in Europe last summer. The cinerarias are a particularly fine strain and very well grown. Lilies are in good shape, except the Bermudas which show some disease. Mr. Aschmann vowed he would have nothing but Japs after this, but when reminded of the war said, "Ah, that is so, maybe I will have to be satisfied with the Bermudas next year." Mr. Aschmann does a large bedding plant business and in a week after Easter the houses will be crowded with such stock. Moon flowers are a specialty with him, his annual sales being over 10,000 plants. Next fall the houses will be found full of palms, rubber plants and araucarias of which stock he is a large importer. We question if there is an establishment in the country of the same size that turns out as much stock. K.

Shipping Gardenias.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please inform me of the proper way to handle cut blooms of gardenias for shipment of about fifty miles so that they will arrive in good condition and not to be blighted in any way. J. B. W.

We pack them in a box the same as roses, but every third row we put a cleat across and nail to the sides of the box so that the flowers cannot move. When we have finished one layer we cover all the blooms with about half an inch of raw cotton, and on top of this we put a layer of tissue paper. We find they ship this way very well. ROBT. SCOTT & SON.

The Gladiolus.

Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., was the lecturer before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, March 12, his subject being "The Gladiolus." He spoke in part as follows:

"Early in my experience with this flower, being obliged to assume more important responsibilities in connection with other interests, I was unable to develop the industry as I had planned, and in the manner in which I have been obliged to handle it advancement has not been as rapid as anticipated, until within the past five years, when I have been able to devote more time and attention to it. I have been preeminently aided by a gentleman who has made a scientific study of the breeding of this flower for upward of twenty years, H. H. Groff, of Canada, a banker by profession, but at the same time the most successful and enthusiastic gladiolus hybridist in the world. Until I saw his creations I had been spending thousands of dollars upon foreign and domestic novelties, to be again and again disappointed, not only with the quality of the bloom but the weak vitality of the corm.

"The gladiolus is a native of Central Europe, the Mediterranean region, West Asia and Africa. The headquarters of the genus are, however, in South Africa. The different species are too numerous to mention. Most of them produce very small flowers compared with the modern hybrids, and few of them are of much value to the successful hybridizer of to-day.

"The best soil for the gladiolus is a sandy loam, containing a trace of clay, but only enough to assist in retaining moisture. Fall preparation of the soil is preferable, but, if neglected at that time, spring fertilizing should be given with thoroughly rotted manure, and care should be exercised that the bulbs do not come in contact with it. Careful selection of soil best adapted to the different strains is most important and the correct amount of proper food to use, and shallow or deep cultivation are among the many details which enable the grower to produce strong, healthy bulbs that will withstand the many climatic conditions under which they must be planted.

The time for ploughing (in the fall) is necessarily short, for the ground where bulbs have been grown one year must be used, or new soil from which the crop of potatoes, corn, grass or grain has been removed. All stable and coarse fertilizers are worked into the soil at this time, while the chemical fertilizers are placed in the drills before planting. In the spring the ground is again loosened and drilled. The bulblets three-eighths of an inch in diameter and upward which are graded by screens are placed in the drill one and two inches apart according to size, and two, three and four across the row accordingly, and are then covered with earth. The large stock is planted in rows thirty-three inches apart, while the small cormels (black) are sowed in rows twelve inches apart.

"This labor requires about one hundred men and boys for an acreage of seventy acres. Weeding in some seasons is a most expensive operation; the past season being one of the worst we have ever experienced in this regard. After the spikes begin to appear above the surface, horse cultivators are kept busy in the larger stock, and it is not unusual to see half a dozen wheel hoes in operation in our fields. After the bulbs begin to appear in the large stock, all cultivation ceases.

"During the blooming season the roguing and classifying is done, mostly by girls, as they have a better eye for colors. At harvest time ploughing on each side of the rows loosens the earth and raises the bulbs sufficiently so that they are easily lifted by hand and the tops are removed, after which the bulbs are spread upon the curing sheets where they remain for from one to three days. They are then placed in trays in the bulb houses, where until planting time the temperature is kept as near forty degrees as possible. The tedious work of removing the roots is done at leisure, during the winter. The grading, counting and execution of orders as well as the arranging of planting stock is done by the most experienced men.

"While personally I have given little attention to hybridizing, my part of the work being the commercial end, still I have made many and extensive experiments with fertilizers to the end of producing an exceptionally strong and healthy bulb.

"The early Groff hybrids were the result of crossing the species with the then best commercial types. The later hybrids are from species both wild and domestic crossed with the best novelties obtainable in the world, as well as with new and stronger types produced by Mr. Groff. I can safely say that if you are familiar only with the ordinary gladiolus, or even if you have planted quite largely with the high-priced European and American novelties, you have no idea of the grand surprises in store for you from the many thousand varieties contained in these new hybrids."

Louisiana Horticultural Society.

At a meeting February 11 and 12 the Louisiana State Horticultural Society was organized, officers elected, a programme carried out, and plans laid for the next meeting. There will probably be a mid-summer meeting of the society sometime in July, in Shreveport, and measures will be taken to have a display of fruit of that season. Louisiana needs a large and active Horticultural Society, and the outlook to-day is very promising. A constitution was adopted, and the following officers were elected:

President, A. K. Clingman, Keithville, La.
 First vice-president, Wm. Nelson, Jefferson Parish, La.
 Second vice-president, R. S. Moore, Naomie, La.
 Third vice-president, B. M. Young, Morgan City, La.
 Secretary and treasurer, F. H. Burnette, Baton Rouge, La.
 Executive committee: Maj. J. G. Lee, Baton Rouge, La.; S. H. James, Mound, La.; W. H. Todd, Gibsland, La.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—The public library committee will give a flower show this spring, probably some time early in May.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—H. T. Winter, who has been in the employ of Walker & McLean for three years, is now with J. W. Alexander, of Charleston, W. Va.

A VISIT to Rhinebeck, N. Y.

The present winter has been a hard one on the violet growers. The ubiquitous Greek has had few days to do business, and even when he could open up few women cared to risk the tender blossoms in the zero breezes. We had often heard of Rhinebeck and its famous violets, but never before had the opportunity to see the violet at home. Rhinebeck is a rather quaint old hamlet. We take the Hudson River railway to Rhinecliff, and as we get off the train we see two or three stage coaches of the old-fashioned kind waiting to take us on to Rhinebeck. We wend our way slowly up the hill for two or three miles, where the air is bracing and clear. As we jog along we pass eight wagon loads of violet boxes, not a few boxes, mind you, but piled up high, all enroute for the New York market, and we are warned of our approach to Rhinebeck by the strong odor of violets, which is very perceptible. The day was rather mild and nice when we got there, and full air was on every violet house. It certainly did one good to get out of the din, dirt and smoke of the city to such a perfume-laden atmosphere.

CRYPTOMERIA JAPONICA.

The bulk of violet houses are massed together on rising ground between the village and the river. So far there is none of the "trust" or "factory" savor about Rhinebeck and its violets. Most of the growers have only one house. Some have two and a few have three houses, but the majority of them only one house each. The houses are all alike, and so far as we could discern the returns from every house visited were much the same. The houses all are about 34x100 feet, running north and south. There are three beds in each house, each ten feet wide, one on each side and one in the middle, and two pathways, two feet each. The sides of the houses are without glass and the plants are in solid beds. The houses are heated by hot water, a four-inch flow and return on each side and a flow and return in the middle, the pipes being far enough above the plants to cause no danger from red spider.

The wonderful success that followed the first attempt at violet growing in this section ten or twelve years ago has been the incentive for the building up of such a business. All and sundry fell in line and to-day the violet growers of Rhinebeck are men who formerly made their living as farmers, carpenters, painters, etc. The great majority of them have no knowledge of horticulture beyond this, but they have each imitated the former successful cultivators so implicitly that the results vary so little as to be almost imperceptible. The bulk of the work connected with violet growing is in picking and hunching the flowers. For this work boys are largely employed. A man and a boy is usually employed in each house. The plants are watered about once a week, and in dull weather once in two weeks. The dead leaves are also picked off and otherwise the plants are kept clean. At the present time 2,000 flowers a day is the average pick on such houses. No sooner are they over the benches once than they commence at the other end again. A flat board about eighteen inches wide is used in picking the side benches. This is fixed up trolley fashion and the picker sits in this and propels himself along, not having to get up until he reaches the further end.

The growers have not been getting the same prices this winter that they have done in former years and consequently the ranks will not be so largely augmented as was expected at the beginning of the season. The prevailing opinion is that at 35 cents per 100 violets pay expenses. The prices on an average have ruled slightly above this this winter, so no one will have to assign who has been reasonably careful. Never in our experience have we seen such high quality of flowers. The size is great, the color excellent, the stems good and the shining green of the leaves betokens the best of health. Propagation has not commenced yet, but will as soon as Easter is past. In speaking of propagation the growers spurn the idea of crown cuttings so often advocated. They select exclusively the small runners, those that have not as yet shown any flower buds. The growers here believe that a runner that has shown a flower at all is no good for future use. The runners are rooted in sand in the usual way and no Irishman's cuttings are taken, i. e., cuttings that have emitted roots before being severed from the parent plant. As soon as they are rooted they are pricked off thickly in a part of the bench. They are never planted outdoors at all. The soil is renewed every year, the houses washed down and a good rich soil put in. The soil here is a medium clay loam and this is enriched with lots of animal manure. The plants are planted in their permanent quarters about the end of June or beginning of July. The glass is shaded and all the air possible given. They are planted about nine or ten inches apart each way. Very little feeding is given throughout the growing season and they do not seem to need it. As soon as they begin to flower a mulching of woodchips is applied. This is principally to keep the soil from splashing when watering is being done, and thus the flowers are kept clean. Such is the modus operandi, simplicity in itself, but we question if the same results could be obtained in any other part of the country. Certainly we never knew it in our experience.

TRAVELER.

The Violet Trust.

Down goes the heart of every anxious beau—

Each lover's hopes are tumbled in the dust;
The bosom of each swain is filled with woe.

For violets are cornered by a trust.
Along with oil and steel the purple blooms
Are held within a grip fi-nan-ci-al,
And dark despair on Cupid's visage looms.
For violets cost twice as much per gal.

What though the parlor lights are burning low?

It does no good to save the cost of oil.

To-day the total evens up, you know,

Since violets are added to the spoil.

Quotations will read "Violets Preferred"—

What man will dare be e-co-nom-i-cal?

To greater lavishness he will be spurred

Since violets cost twice as much per gal.

In future his expenses may go down.

For pipe lines may convey the blossoms fair

In purple streams from mossy dell to town,

And tank cars, too, may haul them everywhere.

Trust violets may cause the maiden's trust

In him to grow—but that's chi-mer-i-cal.

The price is fixed, and he'll pay what he must,

When violets cost twice as much per gal.

Alas, however, all the charm is gone—

The gleaming dewdrop that was wont to come

And, jewel-like, the blossom cling upon,

Now seems a globule of petroleum.

The subtle perfume from the clusters damp

That used to haunt the sense, hereafter shall

But make us think someone upset a lamp—

Since violets cost twice as much per gal.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y.—Chas. J. Pepper died suddenly of heart disease on the morning of March 3. He was 72 years of age.

PIERRE, S. D.—The American Mushroom and Greenhouse Company has been incorporated here with a capital stock of $300,000.

KOKOMO, IND.—A number of trade friends visited the establishment of W. W. Coles recently and expressed themselves as highly pleased with the excellent condition of his stock. Among those present were: Messrs. Stuart & Haugh, of Anderson; J. A. Newby, of Logansport; J. W. Bernard, of Marion, and Adolph Baur, of Indianapolis.

RHUBARB forced in the dark gives a beautiful pink product much more tender and brittle than that forced in light.

THE cucumber houses and crops of E. L. Durbee at North Leominster, Mass., were badly damaged by fire and subsequent freezing on the evening of February 26. Loss on the houses $800 in addition to the value of the crop.

CHARLES UFFLER, of Baltimore, Md., has gathered two quarts of indoor strawberries every week since Christmas, some of them one ounce in weight. He considers Sharpless best for forcing, and expects his supply will continue the same until Easter, and perhaps later.

ARTHUR GRIFFIN, gardener at Sea Verge, Newport, R. I., is now on his second crop of melons for the season and it is estimated that fully 1,000 melons are already in sight on the vines. Strawberries, asparagus, rhubarb and celery are also grown in large quantities by Mr. Griffin.

MICHAEL SULLIVAN, of Revere, Mass., gave an interesting talk on "The Ideal New England Market Garden" before the Worcester County Horticultural Society on March 3. In the course of his address he said that results rather than present economy should be considered in the building of greenhouses and storage cellars and that the business of market gardening as now conducted calls for the highest order of intelligence to be successful. He recommends a solution and spray of arsenate of lead as a remedy for blight in melons and cucumbers and favored frequent rotation of crops as a partial defence against this and other prevalent diseases.

Mushroom Spawn.

I may say that not only have we been successful in obtaining pure cultures of the spawn grown direct from the mushroom itself, writes Prof. Duggar, of Columbia, Mo., but these cultures have been used for the manufacture of a commercial mushroom spawn, both by ourselves and by practical men co-operating with us. The spawn thus made has been tested in comparison with what we suppose to be the best English and French spawns to be obtained on our American markets during the past season. In general I may say that the vigor of this spawn made from our pure cultures is beyond question. The yield of this spawn has been extraordinary, but unfortunately in most cases we were unable to compare it satisfactorily with the imported spawns for the reason that in nearly every instance the imported spawn has failed to grow. The latter must, therefore, have been stored under improper conditions before reaching us, so that the most we can say concerning this matter is, that the purchase of spawn which has long been upon the market is certainly a hazardous matter, or at least it has proved such in this case.

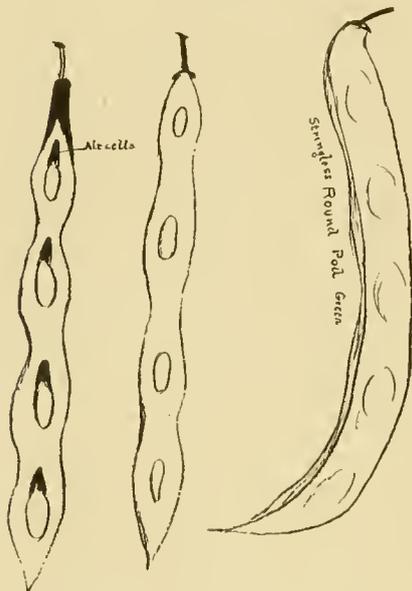

The mushrooms which we have grown have been of excellent quality and flavor, and to test their shipping qualities, small quantities have been shipped to the east and have arrived at their destination in a satisfactory condition.

Improvements in Vegetables.

[Paper by J. Ottn Thilow, read before the Farmers' Institute for Philadelphia County, Philadelphia, Pa., January 19, 1904.

The improvements in vegetables in the past decade have been many. Constant experimenting with some of the older sorts have improved them in quality, thus bringing some obsolete types back among the standard varieties. While many varieties are constantly coming to the front, it does not prove that their quality is such as to obliterate many of the older and well tried sorts; a new variety of any of the genera which is entirely distinct and unlike its predecessors, possessing good qualities, comes to the front with some gusto, which lasts a short time; the variety remains on the list and comes in regular order with the rest of its numbers.

The time has come when the public are more critical, and through their constant use of vegetables where facilities afford, have fixed on their lists the desirable sorts wanted. Tastes vary. There are preferences, such as white or green asparagus against purple, wax-podded beans against green pod, because they appear more tender and brittle, although they do not possess the flavor; white beets, because they are sweeter; small-grained corn, because it is sweeter and with deep grain and small cob, and so on through the list, not always because of better quality, but often for appearance.

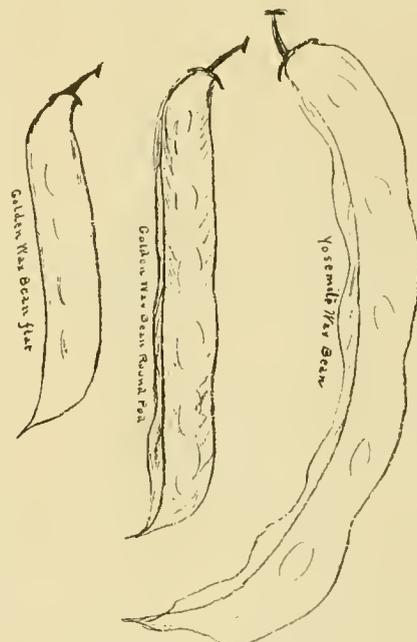

It is not my purpose to weary you with the results of experimenting which is constantly going on to obtain new and improved sorts, but to refer to some practical points and name some improvements which might appeal to you to be of value, and point out something new and interesting. You may know that this is a very brief part of this extensive subject when we refer to Bulletin No. 21 of the department of agriculture, which gives American varieties and synonyms for 1901 and 1902. It is a book of 402 pages, closely written. What have the improvements been, how do they benefit us, and what types are desirable to seek?

Regardless of varieties, let us omit names and give some results of years of experiments and cross-breeding along with high cultivation.

Artichoke.—The globe variety has been improved by cultivation. A very small portion of the globe is edible, hence it is necessary to grow free and full.

Asparagus.—Through high cultivation this has been brought to a state of perfection. Deep planting and plenty of space between the plants has produced this. The sorts preferable are the large stalks, green tops. Under this class there are at least four varieties.

Beans.—The green sorts of the bush, commonly known as the snapshot, have been much improved, the round-podded varieties almost together for summer use. The stringless are without doubt the nearest approach to perfection, they are early, large, and very tender and continue much longer in bearing than the flat-podded sorts. It has also been discovered that the oldest of the flat-podded American sorts are excellent for forcing, and far superior to some of the famous imported varieties for that purpose, which we only a few years ago deemed indispensable. In the wax-podded sorts the same advancements have been made through constant improvements. Many of these have been brought to perfection in the production of round-podded varieties. It has been the object of the bean raisers to grow for a small number of grain to the pod, while less profitable to the seed producer, yet good quality is the object and also to overcome the air cells above the seed and the neck of the pod, thus producing less string and more flesh, thereby producing longer bearing season and larger pods. In the pole varieties the same improvements have been achieved as in the bush sorts, both in green and wax sorts. The Lima bean has made very perceptible advancement, starting with the long-podded thick-skinned, white-seeded bean, to the shorter pod, with more beans and much thinner shell. These are also doubly prolific and of much better flavor, a-greater luxury for the table and more profitable for the market gardener. These types have also been dwarfed in both large and small

Lima, and are now known as the bush form of Lima bean which we now have in about six varieties.

Beets.—Of the table sorts we may note the varieties produced by crossing the best of the deep blood with the white, thus giving color and sweetness combined, also earliness with small top, making good forcing varieties. These are not so desirable for summer sowing as the deep blood sorts with heavier top.

Improvements in Vegetables.—Fig. 3.

This is imperative to produce a tender deep color turnip-rooted beet during hot weather.

Cabbage.—The improvements are not numerous but of value, particularly in early sorts which have been crossed with larger types, thus giving large crops very early in the summer. In the later sorts large heads and long-keeping varieties have been added.

Celery.—This important vegetable is the most critical of the market gardener's stock; he must have the new early varieties. Many new sorts, which are good and of good keeping quality, have been introduced. Consumers are seldom treated to the good quality of celery, excepting those who have their own private gardens, as the largest quantity of this vegetable comes from the celery-growing districts of the northwest, where it is planted close over the ground, thus bleaching without banking. This method never produces tender celery regardless of the sort, new or old. It is thrust upon the market earlier than our home growers can produce it fully grown and bleached. The latest introductions are the Golden and Rose colored combined, possessing earliness and high flavor.

Corn.—This is among the species which permits of crossing easily, thus requiring close selection. The introductions have been mainly of the zigzag types with large ears and deep grain, thus maintaining sweetness. Growers are still hard at work endeavoring to produce these types in early sorts.

Cucumbers.—These have been improved, particularly in the large deep green sorts, which withstand the hot weather without losing color.

Endive.—A much used salad by the chefs, the curled sorts with large white rib, although the broad leaved sorts known as escarolle are now used largely. They must be thoroughly bleached.

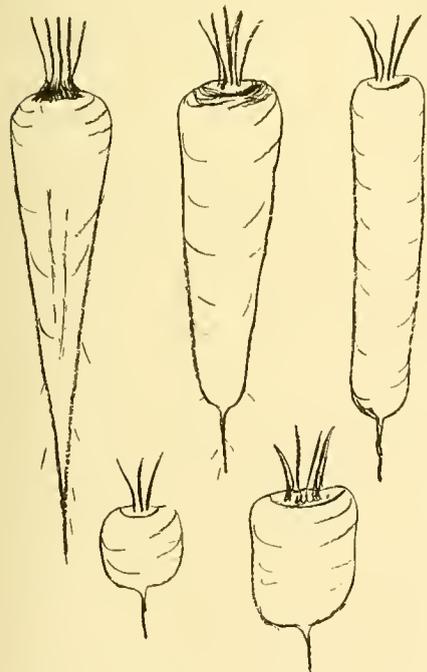

Lettuce.—Of this vegetable much could be said, new introductions of excellent quality, both for forcing early open ground and summer growing.

Melons.—Like all cucurbitaceæ, these are susceptible of producing numerous varieties. Many new sorts are introduced, but soil and location does not always suit. The orange-fleshed, netted varieties are more extensively grown. A few of the green-fleshed muskmelon sorts have been very much improved. The same is true of watermelons; many introductions, the most valuable being the hard rind and fine grained flesh.

Onions.—All the new sorts produced have been of the quick-growing and full maturing from seed the first year.

Peas.—Improvements of value have been along this line, and much appreciated by all who use this much prized vegetable. Within a few years the large green wrinkled sorts have been brought to perfection in tall and dwarf varieties, maturing in three days after the extra early round seeded sorts. Other varieties have been introduced which endure our hot summers, thus giving green peas a larger part of the summer. The sugar or edible pod sorts are of excellent quality and have been greatly improved; these are used pod and grain.

Radish.—Among these several new sorts have been introduced, scarlet and all white, very short top forcing sorts, which are good.

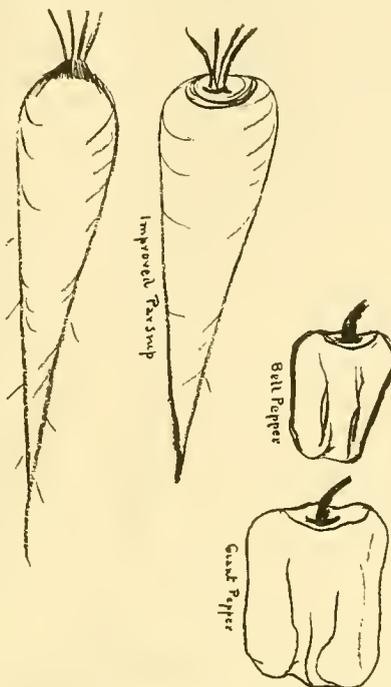

Improvements in Vegetables.—Fig. 4.

Squash.—Of the summer sorts in bush form the yellow and other varieties have been improved. The object has been to get into bush form the best of early and late sorts.

Tomato.—This valuable vegetable, which even at this day is used in Europe as an ornamental plant, is coming into use gradually as a staple vegetable with us. Its use has demanded the greatest improvements from the flat, irregular varieties, which were the only early sorts known a few years ago. We now have perfect, round, well colored sorts of excellent quality. They are also in tree form, with fruit of uniform character. The forcing sorts are distinct and excellent in quality. The latest introduction is the tree shape, with large, dark red solid fruit.

Improvements in Vegetables.—Fig. 5.

Some of our well known vegetables have been omitted in this list, but the improvements not having been marked in the last decade they have not been mentioned. Having touched only on types and not varieties, this subject is left with you in an unfinished state, but the seed catalogues of all of the reliable seed firms have the newer types listed and their distinctions thoroughly described.

Peat Substitute for Steam Coal.

Mine owners have predicted the entire exhaustion of the steam-coal beds in England within a generation, says United States Consul Mahin, of Nottingham, England. This possibility is deprived of some of its terror by the announcement that an electrical process has been discovered whereby peat can be converted into hard, smokeless steam coal which, while occupying less room in a ship's bunkers, will, it is claimed, hold its own against the best Welsh coal. According to a description of the process, the peat from the bog is placed in rotary cylinders, and after the water has been expelled by pressure electrodes with electric wires attached are inserted and the mass becomes the medium of the completion of the circuit. Heat is generated by the resistance offered, and this in turn gives the objective result sought, namely, a perfectly disintegrated or pulverized material which separates freely into particles and has suffered loss of none of the properties primarily contained in the peat. Kneading and teasing operations serve to bring the mass into a plastic condition, so that it contracts into any shape or size desired. The cost is said to be much below that of coal at the pit's mouth. An initial plant is to be erected immediately in Ireland, where one-seventh of the surface of the land consists of peat bog.

THE RETAIL TRADE

A Simple Home Wedding.

Decorations furnished by Smith & Fetters, of Cleveland, O., at the Scofield-Cogswell wedding recently, a simple home affair, are shown in the accompanying engraving. Easter lilies alone were used to decorate a room finished in red.

Antifrost Solution.

As an excellent remedy against the freezing of shop windows, the Pharmaceutische Zeitung recommends the application of a mixture consisting of fifty-five grams of glycerine dissolved in one liter of sixty-two per cent alcohol, containing, to improve the odor, some oil of amber. As soon as the mixture clarifies, it is rubbed over the inner surface of the glass. This treatment, it is claimed, not only prevents the formation of frost, but also stops sweating.

Chicago.

We are again in the grip of the ice king, the thaw of last week being only temporary. Stock which had been coming in in large quantities has been considerably shortened and the market is a little more toned than for the last four weeks. There is no shortage in any line, good roses running about even to the demand. The local retail trade this week assumed a brisker attitude and shipping trade continues good. Just now the subject of greatest interest to growers and dealers alike is the Easter lily question. Some are inclined to the opinion that there will be plenty to go around and of good quality. Others are not so sanguine and fear a shortage of good stock. It is quite certain that there will be lilies enough, with quality probably not up to the standard. All other kinds of stock will be plentiful, but not a glut. Carnations are slightly stiffer in price than for some time and they promise to remain so until Easter. Bulbous stock continues to be the plentiful article on the market and is not moving with rapidity. Calla lilies also move slowly and the best may be purchased at hard time prices. At the greenhouses everything looks ripe for Easter and the great bulk of the lilies are right up to the handle in point of time.

The Florists' Club committee on resolutions on the death of the late Walter Kreitling has prepared the following, to be presented at the next regular meeting:

WHEREAS, In view of the loss we have sustained by the decease of our friend and associate, Walter Kreitling, and of the still heavier loss sustained by those who were dearest and nearest to him, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is but a just tribute to the memory of the departed to say that in regretting his removal from our midst we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our respect and regard. It is further

Resolved, That we sincerely condole with the family of the deceased in the dispensation with which it has pleased Divine Providence to afflict them, and commend them for consolation to Him who orders everything for the best and whose chastisements are meant in mercy.

Resolved, That this heartfelt testimonial of our sympathy and sorrow be forwarded to the family of our departed friend by the secretary, also that these resolutions be duly spread upon the records of our society. Signed

Committee.

Peter Reinberg has been chosen by the democrats of the Twenty-sixth ward as their candidate for alderman in the spring elections. A committee of citizens headed by Sheriff Barrett called on him Saturday and induced him to give his consent to run. At first Mr. Reinberg was opposed to the proposition which was made to him, giving as his reason the fact that he had never held a political office. When it was pointed out to him, however, that he was looked upon as the one man capable of uniting the party adherents in the ward he gave his consent. At the convention he was unanimously nominated. His ward is republican by a normal majority of about 500, but his friends feel confident that he will easily overcome this.

At the regular meeting of the Florists' Club, March 16, it was decided to request the American Rose Society to hold its spring meeting of 1905 in this city in connection with the annual convention of the American Carnation Society. If this scheme prevails it is believed that excellent quarters can be had for the meetings and exhibitions. Phil Hauswirth was appointed committee on transportation to St. Louis for the Society of American Florists' convention in August. S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, and H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, addressed the meeting.

The St. Patrick's day banquet of the Irish Fellowship Club at the Auditorium hotel Thursday night called for a large order of shamrocks. The plants were imported by Harry C. Rowe. Each plate at the banquet was decorated with a plant and each guest received one as a souvenir.

J. H. Troy, of the Rosary, New York, made a flying trip to this city on the twentieth century limited March 18, and will leave again to-day. Mr. Troy has been called here for consultation in an extensive landscape proposition.

The down town stores are taking on their Easter holiday appearance. The George Wittbold Company has the contract for several State street and Wabash avenue department stores.

E. F. Winterson was a Milwaukee visitor last Saturday. He reports that the florists there treated him royally and that everything is looking bright for Easter in the greenhouses.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, mingled among friends of the craft this week. Monday evening he participated in the games of the Florists' Club bowling team.

The stores and salesrooms of Bassett & Washburn and E. H. Hunt are in the hands of the decorators and the interiors are being much improved.

C. M. Dickinson, manager of E. H. Hunt's, spent last week in California, where he is interested in a large oil refining project.

SOME excellent varieties of Primula cortusoides Sieboldii are now in bloom at Vaughan's greenhouses, Western Springs.

Robert Miller, formerly superintendent of W. H. Elliott's establishment at Madbury, N. H., is calling on the local trade.

A. Dietsch is at present spending some time at Chun Chula, Alabama. He will remain in the south several months.

George Reinberg will be in good position to fill orders for Easter lilies. His rose stock was never better.

E. F. Winterson Company handled the bulk of the shamrocks sent to this market for St. Patrick's day use.

J. A. Budlong will have a nice lot of lilies for Easter. His other stock is also looking in excellent shape.

E. C. Amling was slightly indisposed the latter part of last week with a touch of the grippe.

Among the visitors here this week were C. R. Hills, Grand Rapids, Mich., and S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; James McHutchison, of McHutchison & Company, New York.

New York.

The monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held March 14. It was rose night and there was a good attendance considering the weather. All the flowers exhibited were of the highest grade and most creditable to their growers. The exhibitors and their respective exhibits were as follows:

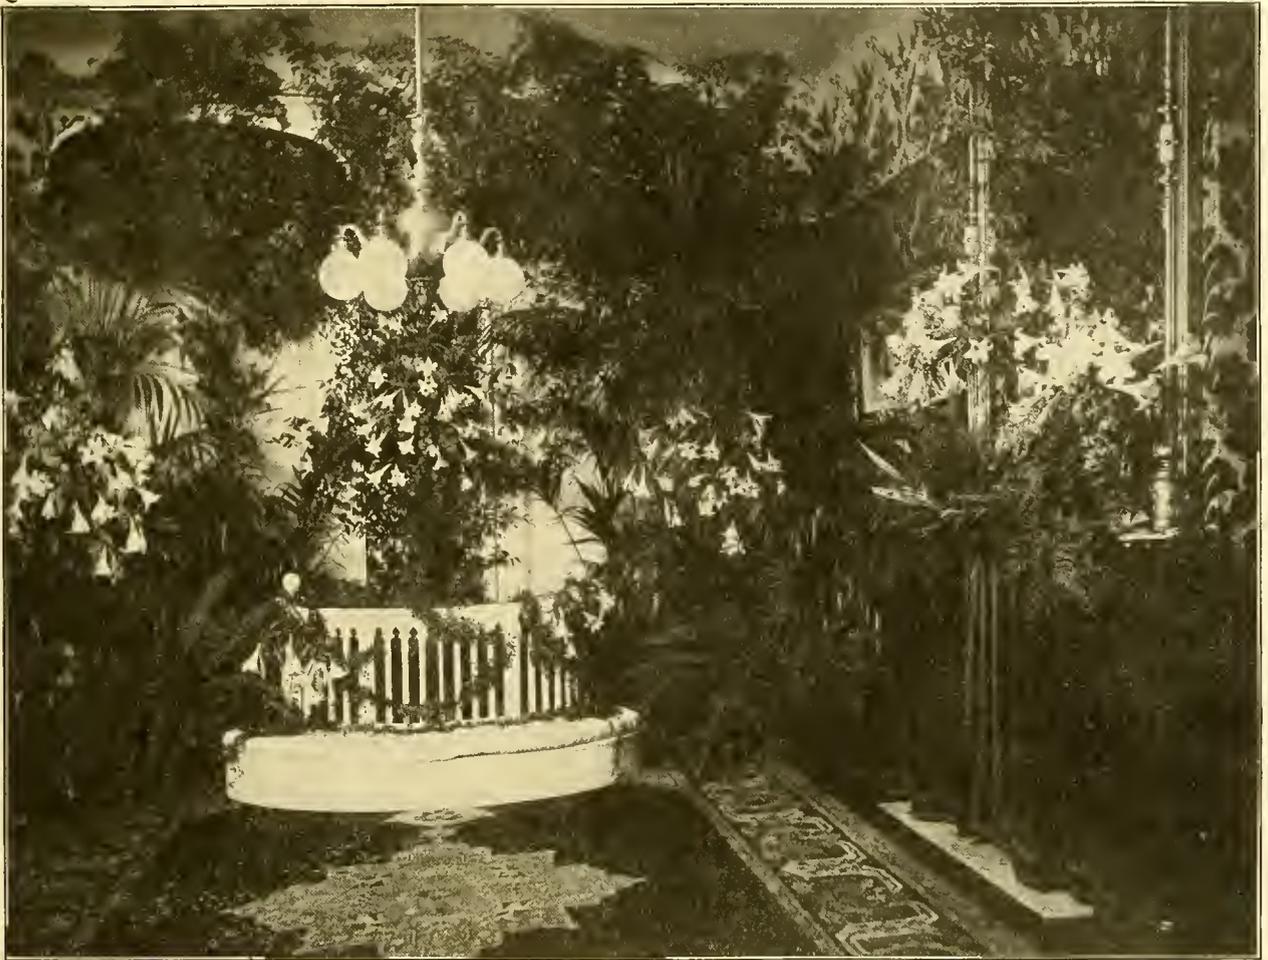

Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J., Golden Gate.
A. Fahrenwold, Roslyn, Pa., Liberty.
E. G. Asmus, La Detroit.
John H. Taylor, Bayside, N. Y., Bride, Bridesmaid and Liberty.
Peter Reinberg, Chicago, Uncle John, Madame Chatenay.
J. N. May, Summit, N. J., Gen. McArthur.
Henry Heutz, Jr., Madison, N. J., Bride and Bridesmaid
F. L. Moore, Chatham, N. J., Bridesmaid from original stock.
J. M. Cooper, West Grove, Pa., carnations.
F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, White Lawson carnations grown by C. H. Allen.

No awards were made as the exhibits were not for competition.

Robert Simpson read an excellent paper on the culture of the rose, which was received with much approval and was discussed intelligently by a number of members. Mr. Fahrenwold took occasion to urge the rose growers to an ambition for high ideals if they wished to keep up with the standard of the carnation men. Antoine Wintzer gave an interesting account of the history of a number of popular types of roses. Thanks were extended to the exhibitors for their attendance and assistance in contributing to the success of the meeting.

Market conditions are properly a little better than last quoted. Carnations clean up well, Beauty can be had at $4 per dozen, Bride and Bridesmaid at 10 cents and 12 cents each. Violets go a little better. Lily of the valley is selling poorly at $2 per 100. Tulips bring different prices according to variety, but average low all along the line.

Wm. Krick, the patentee of the Krick letters and a number of other useful articles, has decided to give up the retail flower business and devote all his time to the manufacturing of his many patented articles at 1164 Greene avenue, Brooklyn.

A sure harbinger of spring is the voice of W. J. Elliott, which permeates the vicinity of Dey street with the peculiar eloquence of the plant auctioneer. Good roots on every specimen.

Josephine Joslin has issued attractive circulars announcing the opening of a "florist shop" at 2603 Broadway (Ninety-eighth street), March 19, 20 and 21.

Callas are being ordered for Easter by many of the storekeepers, who fear the longflowers will be hard to get on account of the dull weather.

Rumor has it that the old market at Thirty-fourth street is to be torn down, the Pennsylvania railroad having bought the property.

Alfred Dimmock left England on March 9 and is due now. His headquarters in New York will be at 31 Barclay street.

Wm. Amos, of Woodside, L. I., is sending some very fine Ulrich Brunner roses to the Cut Flower Exchange.

John Einsmann, brother of Philip Einsmann, is in St. John's hospital suffering from pneumonia.

J. Rovalyos, of Twenty-ninth street, has given up the wholesale business.

Washington O. Cherry has the finest white sweet peas seen this season.

Jacqueminot roses are coming to the market, but do not sell readily.

Visitors: Carl Jurgens, Newport, R. I., Mr. Heller, of New Castle, Ind.

Philadelphia.

The condition of the lily market is now the question of the hour. Expert growers seem to be at sea as to how much of the crop will be in, some saying that plants showing buds one inch long on March 15 will make it all right while others who have them bending down think it will take them all their time. The main trouble has been the severe winter which froze the earth solid in the pots almost immediately after they were put outside, and as a consequence they made but little root. Under these conditions it was very hard to get them to start. Much of the stock seen is very short, but still carries a goodly number of flowers. Others of fair height with fine foliage have but one or two flowers. If the weather is fair for the next two weeks it will make a great difference, as one day's sun is better than two days of forcing by fire heat. Although there are quite a few diseased plants about the percentage is not nearly as large as that of the last few years. In many places the Japs seem as far advanced as the Bermudas and are carrying a good many flowers. Hydrangeas are also backward and many of the plants will hardly make it. Taking the stock as a whole it is about up to the average of other years. W. K. Harris has his usual large and varied stock and the condition is excellent in all departments. His lilies are right to the hour in point of time and a fine lot otherwise. His other leaders are azaleas in large and small sizes, hydrangeas, pink and blue, from 8-inch pots to tubs; a house of genistas which it is worth a journey to see; Rambler roses; a house of spiræas and a splendid lot of deutzias. There are also specimen rhododendrons.

The Hugh Graham Company is another of the large growers of Easter stock and has quantities of azaleas and Easter lilies. These latter are a very clean lot of good height, perhaps the best in this respect of any in the city. They also have thousands of fine hyacinths. The latter are wintered in a novel manner, being placed in a frame on a bed of ashes. The pots are not bedded or covered but the top of the frame is covered with boards and this is covered with manure or leaves a foot thick and when taken out in the spring are always found in fine condition.

At Robert Craig & Sons' there is a splendid stock. They have much the largest lot of lilies about the city which are in splendid shape and perfect in every respect except in point of time. Mr. Craig says that he is sure of at least eighty percent, as he is already setting aside the most forward ones. There are two houses of choice Ramblers, thousands of azaleas in assorted sizes, a house of well shaped hydrangeas, spiræas in quantity and thousands of hyacinths in pots and pans. There are also a fine lot of hybrid roses in from 6 to 8-inch pots.

Robert Scott & Son are strong on lilies having a fine lot of longiflorums. Azaleas, rhododendrons and pot roses are also seen in quantity. A lot of gardenias in pots can not be duplicated anywhere in this country and will be fine for Easter as they are loaded with buds. We must not forget the houses of Ramblers which are exceptionally fine. This rose has been a feature of their Easter stock ever since it has been introduced and it has always been done exceptionally well.

H. A. Dreer has an enormous stock of azaleas which are all sold out for Easter delivery with the exception of some large whites and plants in the one dollar and smaller sizes. Such a business is certainly encouraging and shows a healthy state of trade.

J. W. Colflesh has his usual assortment. His lilies are in good shape and there is a good load of hydrangeas which will make it nicely and a fine table of daisies. His stock of hyacinths and tulips is also in good shape.

Westcott Brothers are right in it with their lilies which are a very pretty lot, which will make it whether the sunshines or not. Hydrangeas, spiræas and a bench of daisies are also in good shape.

Godfrey Aschmann has his houses crowded with lilies, hydrangeas, azaleas, spiræas and quantities of bulbous stock. His medium azaleas are perfect plants and he is justly proud of them.

Jacob Becker is strong on lilies, azaleas and hybrid roses, also a lot of hydrangeas, which are all sold already. His stock is in its usual fine condition.

George Carpenter has his lilies and hydrangeas better than ever. They say his lilies are about the best around.

W. C. Smith has a fine lot of azaleas from 5-inch pots to specimens, also spiræas and lilies.

Zimmer, of Collingswood, offers lilies, geraniums, cinerarias and a general line of bulbous stock.

George Anderson has a house of lilies with fine flowers and foliage as green as leeks.

James Griffin has his usual stock of lilies and azaleas; also a lot of bulbous stock.

J. Koehler & Sons have lilies, hydrangeas and a fine lot of bulbous stock.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Horticultural hall March 15 was one of the best in its history, there being an attendance of close to fifty members, notwithstanding the inclement weather. They had the pleasure of listening to a paper by Irving T. Guild on the subject of art in architecture and landscape gardening and their relations one to the other, a splendid discourse on the higher phases of gardening conceptions, which was a most thoughtful and finished production and of interest to every gardener in America. His sentiments advocating a distinctly American type of gardening and deprecating the futile attempts to imitate Italian and other foreign effects in a country and climate unsuited were applauded and given unanimous approval by the speakers who followed him. E. L. Beard, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Jas. Wheeler, Jas. Morton, T. Waterworth and others took part in the discussion which took the form of a spirited "roast" of pergolas, demoniacal images, carved trees and other characteristics of the "made to order garden" type, and deprecation of those who find pleasure in surrounding themselves with such things and in subjecting the gardeners' art to the domination of the house architect. An inquiry in the question box developed a brief discussion regarding fumigants for greenhouse use, and it may be well for the manufacturers of such specialties to know that the universal sentiment of the gardeners present was that none of the tobacco products offered by American manufacturers are of the quality possessed when they were first put on the market, all giving evidence of adulteration.

The outing of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club to North Easton, March 8 was a delightful affair. The weather was superb and about twenty-five members were in attendance. Mr. Craig escorted the party about the F. L. Ames greenhouses where the show of flowering plants was superb. Especially noteworthy were the carnations, antirrhinums, hybrid roses, cyclamens, cinerarias, primulas, violets and orchids, the latter including Cœlogyne cristata, Chatsworth variety, Lemoniana and alba; Dendrobium nobile nobilium, D. Wardianum, and phalænopses of several species. A house of forced tomatoes was exceptionally fine, being full of ripe fruit. The Oakes Ames place was also visited and the experimenting with leaf molds for orchids, etc., noted with interest.

The annual spring exhibition at Horticultural hall opens on Thursday, March 24, and promises to be an event of much interest. Among the good things that are to be shown there may be mentioned J. N. May's Gen. MacArthur rose and John Cook's two great seedling roses, Cardinal and Enchantress.

George C. Watson will lecture before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on Saturday, April 2, on "Pæonies." The subject and the speaker combined should fill the hall, but the date falling on the day before Easter will doubtless deprive many of the pleasure of attending.

Arthur Cowee delivered a lecture on the gladiolus before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on Saturday, March 12.

Wm. T. Good, who has been employed with W. E. Doyle for many years, has gone to Galvin's Back Bay Conservatories.

Patrick and Michael H. Norton, doing business as Norton Brothers, dissolved partnership February 29.

Baltimore.

We have to amend our declaration of last week that winter has "broke," for the frost-king is at it again, hammer and tongs, and, in proverbially blustering March, is licking us with the rough side of his tongue. Cold rains, slets, snows and night temperatures down to 20°, with cloudy days and raw, piercing winds make a total of great discomfort for a week, broken only by one or two lovely spring days that demonstrate our climate is equal to anything. Unless there is quick improvement, brighter suns and warmer airs, much Easter stuff will be belated. But at this season changes come suddenly, and ere long there will be complaining, probably, of undue warmth.

Trade has been fairly active, the larger demand being still for funeral occasions. There are some exceptions in the social line, small and moderate entertainments being resumed. Another indication of improvement is the call for flowers for the theaters, which for some weeks ceased entirely. At the funeral Sunday of Edward H. Fowler, one of the Board of Police Commissioners, there was a great display of floral testimonials, one of the daily papers headlining it as "A Forest of Flowers." There were offerings of all shapes, sizes and designs, many handsomely and tastefully executed, loose bunches and exquisitely wrought wreaths, besides a great assortment of conventional pieces, vacant chairs, columns, stars, etc. Four hearses were required to convey the flowers to the cemetery, where the whole lot was covered with fragrant tokens of the respect and affection in which Mr. Fowler was held by those associated with him during his prominence in public life and in the church. Of course, the benefit to the trade was generally distributed.

The supply of flowers is equal to all requirements; carnations are somewhat in excess; roses are improving in quality, though American Beauty is scarce. Bulbous stock from out-doors begins to arrive from the south, and violets are plentiful. Prices remain about the same, Bride, Bridesmaid and Golden Gate ranging from $4 to $10, and Perle from $3 to $6 per 100. Greens have not been over abundant the whole season and are still in request.

W. W. Crosby, general superintendent of parks, is evidently raising the standard of the manner in which the city's pleasure grounds are to be maintained, and in a recent letter to the local superintendent he declares that he is not satisfied with the past conditions, but the grounds must be kept in better order and more cleanly, adding that "hereafter no excuse will be accepted for the unkept condition of the parks and squares."

Designs have been made for a new conservatory at Patterson park, and estimates are being asked for its construction. The old building has stood many years, and is practically worn out, if not unsafe.

It is not likely there will be much building in this vicinity the coming summer, as material and labor will be higher even than ordinarily, from the demands of the reconstruction of the burnt portions of the city, and from the rather unsatisfactory state of trade.

William Madsen, of Govanstown, who has long had recognition as at the head of the class in American Beauty growing, is the one grower who escapes the itch for more glass. This year he will tear down three houses which he considers have outlived their usefulness, and in their place will put up but one, 20x100 feet, turning the other space out-of-doors.

His next-door neighbor and former partner, Andrew Andersen, also among our crack Beauty growers, is "almost persuaded" that he needs a new house, and we expect soon to see its skeleton up and the work done with his accustomed care and thoroughness.

Thos. H. Patterson, of the Old York road, Waverly, has met a grievous affliction in the sudden loss by scarlet fever of his only child, a daughter of ten years, bright, attractive and lovable. He and his bereaved wife have the sympathy of all the trade.

John J. Perry, manager of the Florists' Exchange, after fighting hard against the gripe, finally succumbed and went to bed for some days, but is out again, looking, though, somewhat battered from his contest.

Halliday Brothers, whose establishment on the Liberty road embraces more glass, probably, than any other plant around Baltimore, and who of late years have grown carnations mainly and no roses, will change their programme and next year devote several houses to the queen of flowers. S. B.

Buying Seeds.

SOME OF THE EARLIEST SIGNS OF SPRING.

Outside the store highly colored posters depicting brooding magpies and onions, enormous ears of corn, stupendous squashes and colossal cabbages attracted the gaze of the passers-by to the display of seeds in the window. This was before the big snow. Busy citizens, the cares of commerce written on their anxious brows, stopped as if struck with a sudden idea that June peas might be as well worth attention as May wheat and forget their hurry for at least a few moments at the sight of the gorgeous vegetables.

There were other pictures in the window, bright-hued tulips and hyacinths, gaudy poppies—all pretty enough, especially compared with the brown seeds and ragged bulbs, but hardly worth notice from an æsthetic point of view, considering that a few doors away the flowers themselves were blooming in the florist's window; yet the women did not throng before the florist's as they did in front of the seed store. All sorts and conditions of men seemed to feel an interest in that window and drew away from it with visible reluctance.

If the outside of the store was attractive the inside was more so. Corpulent bags of lawn mixtures gaped invitingly at the customer and seemed to promise him unlimited expanse of verdant turf. Tobacco dust assured him protection against noxious creeping things. Flower pots spoke to him of blazing scarlet geraniums and gracefully drooping fuchsias. Gleaming scythe blades, spades, hoes, pruning hooks and shears, hose coils, watering pots, dibbles, trowels and a thousand and one other horticultural implements and appliances met the eye at every turn.

"Too early?" echoed the clerk. "Not a bit. It wouldn't have hurt to sow it a month ago. The earlier the better. Some people don't think grass seed grows well unless it's sowed right on the snow. It will be all right, though, as far as the snow is concerned; we haven't seen the last of it yet."

"How long do you think it will be before the frost goes out of the ground?" asked the customer, anxiously. He was a trim little man, neatly—almost fastidiously—dressed, but his heavy ankle boots and the mud upon them betrayed him for a suburbanite.

"Well, now, that depends," said the clerk. "You see, it's like this: If we have a spell of soft, warm spring weather, with rains now and then, it won't take so very long; but we may get a few more cold snaps, and if we do the frost will stay in a good deal longer. It depends a good deal on the sort of weather we get."

"Hm-m!" said the suburbanite. "I could have told you that and I don't pretend to be an expert."

"Are you buying the mixture?" asked a friend at his elbow. "You don't want to experiment with mixtures. Get a plain, straight Kentucky blue grass. You can't get a better lawn than that makes. Isn't that so?"

The clerk being appealed to shrugged his shoulders. "It depends," he replied. "Kentucky blue grass certainly makes a fine lawn if you get the right kind of soil—"

"But if you don't it doesn't do as well, eh?" interrupted the suburbanite.

"I was going to say it takes longer to grow?" said the clerk.

"What in the world are these!" exclaimed a young woman picking up a ball of gray, papery looking material. "They look like hornets' nests, but they can't be. Nobody would want to buy hornets' nests. They've got iron things around them to hang them up by, too."

"Hornets don't make honey, do they?" inquired her companion. "If they did that might account for it. I know they like sweet things because they always get into the sugar bowl if they get into the room. Oh, look. Here are some violet seeds. Myra, why couldn't we grow violets? It would be perfectly lovely just to go out and pick what violets one wanted instead of paying 50 cents a bunch for them."

"I don't pay 50 cents a bunch for them," said the first young woman, meaningly. "I know, but then—oh, will you tell us what these are, please?"

"Those are fumigating balls for burning in greenhouses," the clerk informed them.

The young woman dropped the ball and dusted her glove. "There are some more of them—larger ones," she said. "They must be for fumigating all outdoors."

"No," said the clerk. "Those are Japanese ferns. You soak them in water and hang them up in a window and they sprout out of the ball."

A large red-faced man was over by the corner devoted to tools, showing a friend a new device in a whirling spray.

"You set that on your lawn overnight and there you are," he said. "It's just as good as a natural rain the way it sends it. That's the pattern I use, and you know what my lawn looked like all last summer."

"Don't you think a good wetting down with the hose would do as well?"

"Certainly not. You won't do anything else if you stand there hanging on to a hose all evening, and you've got plenty to do if you set out your garden the way I advise you to. You want one of these weeders, too."

"Do I?"

"Sure; unless you want to grub up the weeds with your fingernails. Let's see! You've got a hoe, a rake, a spade and a leaf rack for your barrow, and a sprayer, haven't you?"

"Yes, and a roller."

"Well, you get that weeder and a planter and you can get along for a while. You might buy your lawn mower now, just as well as not."

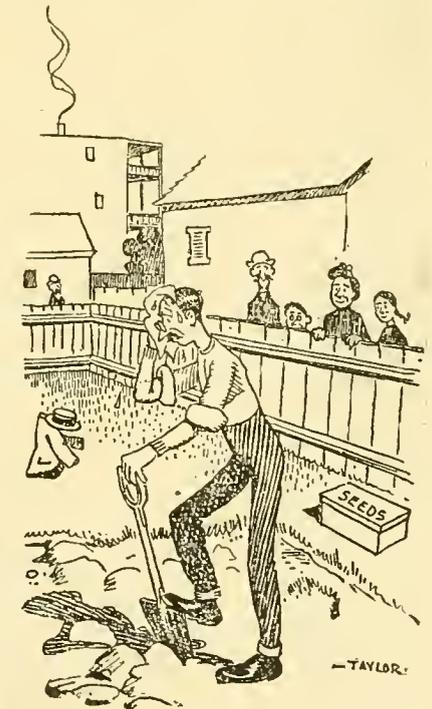

"I don't believe I want to now. I'd rather see what all this comes to first, anyway."

"Just as you like. I think you're pretty well stocked up with seeds. No, there's asparagus, I forgot that—and Brussels sprouts. You can sow your asparagus now or in April and the sprouts a month later. Get a catalogue as you go out and we'll look it over this evening and see if there's anything more."

"I know there isn't," said the victim. "I've bought everything in it, and how I'm going to raise it all on one 50-foot lot, goodness only knows."

"It's fine exercise, gardening," said the red-faced man.

In and out they came and went and the seed store was one of the busiest places in town. For the first warm wind that puffed into a man's face, the first gleam of spring sunshine, stirs his dormant agricultural blood. He has not yet dispensed with his winter flannels or discharged his furnace-tender, but he looks out of the back window to the little patch of ground stretching to the alley and his fancy transforms it into a verdant Eden. The side beds are glorious with sweet peas, phlox, poppies, nasturtiums and pinks. Tall hollyhocks and sunflowers rear themselves splendidly against the fence and honeysuckle and clematis overrun the ash bin. In the center are symmetrical rows of beets, carrots, radishes, onions and of cabbages and lettuce.

Fond vision! Happy dream! It is no wonder that everybody buys seeds. And then it snows!—Chicago Daily News.

The Edelweiss.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—The undersigned will be greatly obliged to any reader who will state whether the edelweiss has been grown successfully in this country, giving details of culture, etc.

A. LANGE.

PETER REINBERG, the well known Chicago florist, candidate for aldermanic honors, has adopted the red carnation as his political badge.

COAL men generally say that a strike of the miners is improbable. If a strike does occur, however, they claim that prices will advance very materially.

Society of American Florists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Storrs & Harrison Company, Painesville, O., submit for registration:

Rose General MacArthur. H. T. Originated in Indiana, a seedling of Marquis de Litta crossed with seedling of unknown parentage. Flowers large, on long stems, color vivid crimson; foliage deep green and very abundant; a strong grower throwing out thick canes three to four feet high.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

Greenhouse Heating.

ED. AM. FLORIST.—I wish to put hot water heating in a house 15x75. I want to keep a temperature of 55° in the coldest weather and do it easily. What will it cost?

ESTABROOK.

About 450 square feet of radiation will be needed to maintain 55° in a house 15x75 feet. To obtain this it will be advisable to use two 2½ inch flows and seven or eight 2-inch returns. While the smaller could be made to answer, the larger number will give the most satisfaction. It will be well to have a boiler rated for about 600 square feet of radiation. The price varies so much in different localities, and with different kinds of boilers, that no definite estimate can be given.

L. R. TAFT.

Sweet Peas Not Flowering.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—If "J. R." planted his sweet peas the middle of September he ought to have been able to cut blooms for Christmas if properly attended to. They should be planted in raised benches and in not more than four inches of soil. When about four inches high they should have some kind of support. Commence feeding when six inches high, and as soon as they start to bloom use nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia, a teaspoonful to twelve gallons of water, and "J. R." ought to cut sweet peas until spring if the red spider is kept down. Syringe on every bright day. We planted our sweet peas November 24 and cut our first bloom February 16. They are grown in from 50° to 55°.

J. KENNEDY.

Transplanting Box Bushes.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What is the best manner and best time of year for transplanting very large box bushes?

Maryland. H. T.

Box bushes are safely transplanted from now on at any time when the soils is in fit condition, as they have numerous fibrous roots which hold the soil and make a good ball, which should be preserved if possible. On the fine "Uplands" place near Baltimore of Mrs. Dr. Jacobs (formerly Mrs. Robert Garrett) are two handsome specimens of box, measuring from five to eight feet in height, which were transplanted two years ago by John Cook, and they scarcely show that they have been moved. A good mulch might be desirable over the first summer.

S. B.

American Rose Society.

At the annual meeting of the American Rose Society, which will be held in Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, Wednesday, March 23, a paper on "Roses for Hardy Gardens" will be presented by L. A. Martin, of Greenwich, Conn. A general discussion on "Stock for roses, and the merits of grafted vs. own root plants" will be opened by Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J. The meeting will be called to order at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and any question for the question box may be handed in to the secretary up to the hour of the meeting. It is hoped to make this meeting take the form of an experience discussion.

L. BARRON, Sec'y.

The American Rose Society.

The question as to what is the matter with the rose society is one frequently discussed. There is as much brains, more money and more glass area devoted to roses than to carnations. The rose has always been the favorite flower with the public, and yet the carnation society is the "livest" and most successful horticultural society in America, and its members, by their push and enthusiasm, have placed the carnation—perhaps—foremost of all the florists' flowers in the public eye, while the rose society is to-day, to say the most, only a mild sort of success.

The reason for the failure of the rose society, for anything short of a brilliant success must be called a failure nowadays, is not far to seek. The carnation society is truly national, so far as climatic conditions will permit, and it is intensely democratic—it is of the common people. It is "our society" to a host of small growers and greenhouse workers. At every one of its conventions, numbers of greenhouse employes may be seen, who have traveled long distances at their own expense, in order to attend, and many more are members, gladly paying their dues and attending the conventions whenever possible.

The idea exists among the rank and file of the trade that the rose society is not democratic, that it is a sort of silk stocking affair, in which the men with potting soil stains on hands and clothes are not wanted. The average grower is a hard-headed sort of chap, who is not going to trouble himself about a society, nor pay his money into its coffers, unless he gets something in return. He does not merely want his money back, but he wants to see a profit on his investment. The attempt to make the rose society a fixture in New York and the selection of nearly all of its governing body from places almost in the shadow of that great city, made a local society of it, and it had no right to call for national support under those conditions. Later on this mistake was recognized and half-hearted attempts made to correct it, but the society has never been in touch with the common people. It has to be pinched, pruned and re-potted. It must take a lesson from the carnation society and get in touch with the smaller florists. It must become "our society" to every florist from Maine to Colorado and from New Orleans to Winnipeg. It must meet east, west, north and south, and become national in fact as well as in name.

At a meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club on Wednesday last, March 16, a cordial invitation was extended to the rose society to meet with the carnation society in that city in January next. A committee was also appointed by the carnation society to extend the same invitation. It was stated by a number of the Florists' Club members that the exhibition hall, meeting rooms and general conveniences in the location selected in the Auditorium hotel could not be excelled anywhere in the country. Here is a chance for the rose society to be "re-potted." Will it take advantage of it?

W. N. RUDD.

The Rhodum Sidus.

An amusing story told by Hood describes how a country nurseryman made a large sum out of sales of a simple little flower which he sold under the name of the Rhodum sidus. This charming name proved quite an attraction to the ladies, and the flower became the rage of the season. It was one of those freaks of fashion for which there is no accounting. At length a botanist who found that the plant was only an uncommon weed requested to know where the nurseryman got the name from. He elicited the following reply: "I found this flower in the road beside us, so christened it the Rhodum sidus."

BARNESBORO, N. J.—Frederick Pope died at his home here, aged 68 years. He was a florist well known in South Jersey.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The table herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

The Seed Trade.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Chas. McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.

Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21, 1904.

CUCUMBER, in pickling sorts, is easier, with White Spine very scarce.

THE Carlson aster, introduced about three years ago, is still very popular.

SWEET peas have been in stronger demand this season than for several years past.

SWEET CORN prices generally appear to be on the decline, but there is a shortage of early sorts.

ONION sets are still in good demand, whites worth $2.50 at Chicago, while reds are now higher and yellows lower than last week. All will likely be wanted before the season is over.

OWING to continued cold and unseasonable weather and snow storms the retail mail seed trade in the west for March to date shows quite a falling off over March business in previous years.

FROM Toulon we learn that the value of the flower bulbs exported to the United States during the season of 1903 was approximately $127,000, which is a trifle less than the total value the previous year, 1902. It is added that the next bulb season promises to be good on account of the rainy weather the present winter.

A Timely Example.

At this time of the year, when each mail brings disappointments to the seedsmen as to short crops and deliveries, former reports to the contrary, it is interesting to hear of an European case of the past season in which a large wholesale house had sold considerable quantities of peas for future delivery. When the crop turned out so very short this concern went to the open market and bought sufficient stock to complete the advance orders, although the orders had been taken subject to the usual crop conditions. This, we are told, meant a loss of some £2,000, and the firm is convinced that it was money well spent.

Judge Rules For Seedsmen.

Judge Vinsonhaler Monday passed on a point that is of considerable interest to the many seed growers in this county, as it upheld the validity of the seed contracts generally in force. The case was that of James C. Robinson, a wholesale seed merchant of Waterloo, against Charles H. Cobb, a seed raiser, who had raised ten acres of seed corn under contract. After maturity, when seed corn had advanced very greatly in price, the corn was sold to someone else, and Robinson brought suit for damages.

The court found for the plaintiff, sustaining the validity of the contract. A few days ago the district court in Sarpy county, through Judge Sutton, held that title to the seed did not pass by reason of the contract, thus establishing one phase of the matter, but it is now further held that notwithstanding that, an action for damages may be maintained under the contract.—Omaha World-Herald, March 8, 1904.

Growing Cauliflower Seed In Denmark.

From a small beginning about forty years ago, the growing of cauliflower seed has become an important industry with the Danish gardeners, especially for those in the vicinity of Copenhagen. The cool, moist and temperate climate there exerts a great influence in fostering a strong growth in the plants right up to the time when the seed is harvested. This, combined with the fact that the growers are conscientious and skilled gardeners, has given the Danish grown cauliflower seed so high a repute that it is now sold all over the world, the United States taking a large share of the output. The only kind grown is the Early Dwarf Erfurt with its varieties, Snowball for early use and Large Danish for summer use. The seed is sown in the beginning of September and generally two sowings are made to insure seedlings of the right size for wintering; generally the autumn is mild and then the last sowing is selected. As soon as the seedlings are large enough to be handled they are pricked off in a carefully prepared frame, only the strongest and healthiest being used. They are set about two inches apart, in very sandy soil and here they are wintered, free from frost, getting all the light and air necessary.

In the beginning of March a hotbed is prepared of manure worked over several times to insure a steady, gentle heat; by the middle of March this bed is ready to receive the plants which are then subjected to a second selection. Generally we set seventy-seven plants—7x11 rows—in a sash of average size. They here receive a generous treatment with all the ventilation possible and in April the sash is taken off in daytime, when weather permits, and air is given at night. In the latter part of April, differing according to the season, transplanting to the open ground takes place, the glass having been taken off some days before. The ground is generally prepared in the fall, getting a heavy manuring and a deep plowing and it is harrowed and rolled but once before planting. The plants are lifted carefully, only large and perfectly healthy plants being chosen and taken to the field so that the balls are not broken. They are generally planted about eighteen inches apart, with three feet between the rows. This final transplanting is a most critical operation and is done with great care. It must be done just at the right point and in a capricious season, during a short span of time, it is surprising to see the difference a few days belated or too early planting can make on the crop.

Planting well over, the grower heaves a sigh of relief and confines his work to cultivating and watering until heading commences, when the roguing is done. This final selection of the plants requires a sharp eye, trained by long experience, and is generally the work of the grower himself; only good and typical heads are chosen; the very best heads, possibly four or six to the acre, are marked and numbered, the seed of these to be used for further seed growing. After this, hoeing and watering is the only work done until the seedpods are full grown when it is necessary to stake them. During the last part of September and the first of October the seed is harvested, tied in small sheaves and hung in a drying shed, for from four to six weeks before threshing. Then the seed is cleaned, sorted and dried and is ready to be put on the market.

Formerly the seed was grown to order only for German and French seed houses so that even Danish gardeners bought their supply, grown near Copenhagen, from Erfurt. But this state of affairs is a thing of the past and the energetic Danish growers are now in direct communication with seedsmen all over the world.

For the accompanying illustration I am indebted to A. Hansen, Copenhagen, one of the pioneers of this trade and the man who probably has done most to free us from dependence on German and French seedsmen. He is the largest grower, operating about twenty acres, and growing mostly the Snowball variety. He also has invented an ingenious machine for the final sorting of the seed. He is shown in the foreground of the picture. H.

The Nursery Trade

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn., Pres.; Frank A. Weber, St. Louis, Mo., Vice-Pres.; George C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

LOGAN, UTAH.—A county board of horticulture was organized March 2 by the county commissioners. A vigorous campaign will be inaugurated against peach blight.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—The Holyoke Horticultural Society has elected officers as follows: President, Dr. E. A. Reed; vice-president, D. F. Sickman; secretary, G. H. Sinclair; treasurer, C. E. Mackintosh.

LYNN, MASS.—The annual supper of the Houghton Horticultural Society on the evening of March 3 was attended by about 250 people. J. K. M. L. Farquhar gave an interesting stereopticon talk on the flowers of Japan.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—The annual banquet of the New Haven County Horticultural Society will be held on March 29 at the Tontine hotel. Many members of the Hartford Florists' Club are expected to be present as guests.

Two pounds of whale oil soap to one gallon of water and one pint of kerosene oil, applied with a paint brush to the trunks and branches of trees and sprayed over the inaccessible twigs, is recommended as a good home made remedy for the San Jose scale.

A BILL has been presented in the Massachusetts legislature providing for the appointment by the governor of a state forester whose duty it shall be to further the perpetuation, extension and proper management of the forest lands of the state, both public and private.

GREENFIELD, IND.—Horace G. Beckner has formed the Capitol City Nursery and Orchard Company, with a capital stock of $10,000. E. A. Henby and Mrs. Ona Beckner are shareholders and directors. Mr. Beckner has been a successful dealer for a number of years.

AMHERST, MASS.—The horticultural department of the experiment station reports that the very cold weather of the last two months has seriously damaged the peach trees of New England, the fruit buds having been killed and many of the branches being also killed outright.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—A meeting of the Buchanan County Horticultural Society was held at the court house March 6. Most of the time of the session was consumed in comparing fruit twigs and discussing the prospects for crops this year. The twigs exhibited substantiate the opinion that while the severe freezes damaged the fruit to a great extent, there is still prospect for good crops.

The tenth annual meeting of the Massachusetts Fruit Growers' Association was held at Worcester, on March 9. "Home-grown Nursery Trees" was the title of a paper presented by Prof. Geo. O. Greene, of Amherst. Prof. F. T. Fernald, of Amherst, spoke on the "San Jose Scale." He said it had now been fully proven that this insect can stand the coldest winters and all parts of the country are exposed to its attacks. Speaking of the astonishing rapidity of increase of this insect he said it had been calculated that the total number of descendants from a single individual during one summer numbers 3,216,080,400. A. H. Kirkland gave a stereopticon talk on "Some Common Fruit-tree Insects."

Grafting Japanese Maples.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please inform me what is the best time to graft in greenhouses the Japanese maple; what temperature they want and what kind of grafting is preferable? D. J.

For grafting Japanese maples under glass from February to the last of March is the best time for the spring operations and August and September for the summer months. They can be successfully grafted at both seasons. The best methods of grafting are the cleft grafting, splice grafting and veneer on the side, and they are best done under a double-lighted frame in the greenhouse. The plants should, if possible, be potted the spring before so as to be well established in the pots. Keep them in a cold pit or frame until they are required. It is well to bring them into the heat a few weeks to get them well started before grafting. Have the scions cut and kept in a cool place until ready for use. If the plants after they have been grafted are plunged in damp sphagnum moss and kept close with a slight bottom heat, the grafts will take much easier. The frames will need to be kept close for the first few weeks, only opening them to let off surplus moisture. At the end of two weeks some air can be given for a few hours morning and evening, when the greenhouse is closed. It is best to keep the grafts close when air is given to the greenhouse. At the end of a month they ought to have air in plenty, so as to harden them off gradually. As soon as the grafts are well taken they can be removed to the body of the house. By using the damp moss they need not be watered so often, otherwise they should be. The Japanese maples, that is the polymorphum and Japanese types, are best worked on the common polymorphums, in fact they will not succeed on any other varieties known of at present. I have thought that if we had Acer circinatum from Oregon they might possibly succeed on that. For stock for the grafting the seedlings or layers of Acer polymorphum, should be used, top layers usually taking two years to become well rooted. In many nurseries the Japanese maples are all propagated by layering. While a little slower method than grafting it is much surer. As the Japanese maples are somewhat tender, it is better to cut the scions in the late fall or early winter and heal them in in boxes of sand or moss, keeping in a cool pit that does not freeze, until wanted for use.

At Omaha, Neb.

The Omaha Florists' Club held its annual bowling tournament March 11. The tournament was well attended, and after the contest luncheon was served. Twenty prizes were offered by different firms, from six towels up to a $16 Florentine mirror from the Midland Glass and Paint Company. M. H. Bath made the best average for three games, W. J. F. Wilcox was second, P. Floth third, L. Henderson fourth, S. R. Faulkner fifth and A. Donaghue sixth. The highest score in one of the games was made by J. H. Bath with 207. J. F. Wilcox was second with 181, L. Henderson third with 142, and P. Floth fourth with 140. The consolation prize went to George Sorenson, of Florence, Neb., and the hard luck prize to W. W. Ellsworth. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. Valentine, from Denver; Charles Green, of Fremont, Neb., and Mr. Reed, with the George Wittbold Company, Chicago. GRIPPE.

At Jamestown, N. Y.

The two teams of the Lake View Rose Gardens Bowling Club met at the Empire alleys on March 14. The Carnation Growers won the first two games and the third was a tie, which was rolled off, one ball to a man, the Carnation Growers again winning. The following scores were made:

At Baltimore.

The first of a series of games between teams from the Florists' Clubs of Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore for the silver cup presented by F. H. Kramer, of Washington, was bowled March 14. The game played some weeks ago in Washington and won by the Baltimore team was annulled, the Philadelphians not being then on hand. On this occasion the Baltimores won in three straight games, the score being 864, 853, 846. The Washingtons' score was 732, 780, 738, and the Philadelphias' 818, 823, 848. The Baltimore team was composed of C. L. Seibold, Robt. Halliday, James Boone, Mac. Richmond and Mr. Kreh. The bowlers attended the club's annual dinner. The next game will be rolled in Philadelphia March 23.

After the meeting the club had its annual dinner at the Academy hotel, from fifty to sixty persons being present. E. A. Seidewitz was toastmaster and Mr. Morgan, president of the First Branch of the City Council represented the city. Speeches were made by Messrs. Gibson and Connor, of Philadelphia; Kramer, McClellan and Schaeffer, of Washington, and by Mr. Seibold, captain of the Baltimore bowling team. S. B.

—NEW ROSE—

General MacArthur.

HYBRID TEA.

Color by far the most brilliant of any shade of crimson forcing rose ever offered, retaining its brilliancy when fully expanded. It is also one of the sweetest varieties ever offered, of very easy culture, as it can be grown in the same temperature as an ordinary Tea variety such as the Bride. It is a good, strong, vigorous grower, producing stems 24 to 30 inches long, a free and continuous producer. It can be grown at much less cost than Meteor or Liberty and is a much brighter color than either. Also larger when fully expanded. We predict that this will be the red rose for the multitude. Ready for distribution April 1, 1904.

—EXTRA STRONG 3-INCH STOCK AT $4.00 PER 100 ADDITIONAL TO ABOVE FIGURES.—

Our attention was called to the Rose Gen. MacArthur, three years ago, by the originator, who then had only the one plant. We liked its looks very much, and last year secured 25 plants from The Storrs & Harrison Co. for trial. We cut fine flowers from them all winter, and made 600 cuttings which we are growing this winter. We commenced cutting good flowers from them in November and have done so continuously ever since, it being distinctly a winter rose. At this date the bench is a fine sight. The plants are from two to three feet high, and are sending out flowering shoots which are most all one to two feet in length, although quite a number are three feet or more. It has the most beautiful large lustrous foliage, and most abundant of any rose we have ever seen. The flower is a brilliant red, and has a very fine odor. We find it the best Red Rose we have ever grown. While not as fine a flower as Liberty, with us it is much healthier and so much freer flowering that we prefer it. We have it growing in the same house as Bridesmaid.

Yours truly,
HELLER BROS.

BOOKS FOR FLORISTS.

The time is coming along when these are needed and opportunity at hand for reading them. Every one of the following should be in your library.

Send prices quoted and we send the books.

LANDSCAPE GARDENING (Maynard).—The development of landscape art within the past few years compels the wideawake florist to keep posted on this branch of the business. The many suggestions of this book will be found helpful every business day. It contains 338 pages, 165 illustrations. $1.50

THE GOLDFISH (Mulerdt).—A number of florists find goldfish an attractive and paying addition to their business. The best advice is given in every department of the subject, including construction and care of the parlor aquarium, in this volume of 160 pages, handsomely illustrated. $2.00

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION (Taft).—It tells the whole story about how to build, and heat a greenhouse, be it large or small, and that too in a plain, easily understood, practical way. It has 118 illustrations. $1.50.

HEATING AND VENTILATING BUILDINGS (Carpenter).—This book covers the entire subject most fully. In the preparation of heating and ventilating plans, it will be found a most valuable guide. $4.00.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY GROWING VIOLETS (Saltford).—This is by a practical grower who has made a success of the business. No grower of violets can afford to be without it. Price 25 cents.

STEAM HEATING FOR BUILDINGS (Baldwin).—Contains valuable data and hints for steam fitters and those who employ this method of heating. The 350 pages are fully illustrated. $2.50.

THE HORTICULTURISTS' RULE-BOOK (L. H. Bailey).—Contains information valuable to all those engaged in any branch of horticulture. Illustrated. 312 pages. 75 cents.

FUMIGATION METHODS (Johnson).—A practical treatise on cheap and effective means of destroying insect pests. Handsomely bound and profusely illustrated; 250 pages. $1.00.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION (C. W. Ward).—A complete treatment of all the most modern methods of cultivating this most important flower. Illustrated. $3.50.

PRACTICAL FLORICULTURE (Peter Henderson).—A guide to the successful propagation and cultivation of florists' plants. Illustrated. 325 pages. $1.50.

HOW TO GROW CUT FLOWERS (Hunt).—The only book on the subject. It is a thoroughly reliable work by an eminently successful practical florist. Illustrated. $2.00.

THE ROSE—Its cultivation, varieties, etc. (H. B. Ellwanger).—A complete guide of the cultivation of the rose, together with a classification of all the leading varieties. $1.25.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MANUAL (Smith).—By an expert who has given his undivided attention for twenty years to the improvement of the chrysanthemum and its culture in detail. Profusely illustrated. Price 25 cents.

JAS. HARTSHORNE, Mgr.

Joliet, Ill.

Syracuse, N. Y.

All the Syracuse florists, including Henry Morris, P. R. Quinlan & Company, Henry Burt, L. E. Marquisee, Bannister Brothers, Peter Kay and the smaller stores, are making great preparations for Easter displays anticipating that the trade will offset the dullness of the winter months. The trade has been better the last two weeks than at any time since the holidays and with the approach of warmer weather better stock and better demand are looked for. Already there are a number of fine window displays as a forerunner of what may be expected in two weeks.

Miss Adah Boddy, the little negro girl who attempted suicide a few weeks ago after the Syracuse Lighting Company had shut off the electric lights because she could not pay her bill, has closed her flower store in the Empire block in West Genesee street. She had been with Henry Burt for eleven years so had many friends and enjoyed a good trade in the holidays but the dull period of the last few weeks exhausted her small capital. Frederick H. Ebeling, dealer in seeds and bulbs, has taken judgment against her in the Municipal court for $26.74.

One of James P. Boyle's climbing rose bushes is in blossom at his greenhouse at Lyon, N. Y. The rose is the Lamarque and while the bush is comparatively young it has nearly 150 buds and blossoms. Mr. Boyle also has an older bush of the Marechal Niel variety loaded with hundreds of buds which he expects will be in bloom about Easter. A. V. B.

Columbus, O.

Sherman F. Stephens is working hard to organize the Florists' Club of Columbus, and has called on a number of growers and employes. All are in favor of the club. There could not have been a more suitable person selected to organize the club than Mr. Stevens. He expects to call the first meeting directly after Easter, when it is hoped every florist in Columbus will be present.

Indications are that lilies will be scarce for Easter. Dutch stock will be plentiful. John R. Henthall, who is generally to the front with a fine lot of Ramblers and lilies, is not quite so fortunate this spring, although not left in the shade by a long way. S. F. Stevens has a promising lot of lilies.

The Livingston Seed Company has fine Ramblers and cinerarias just right for Easter. They are also well supplied with pans of well grown Dutch bulbs. There are some good lilies, but Mr. Ludwig said the per cent of bulbs lost took all the profit.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Company is planting several houses to summer blooming roses. This firm has been fortunate with violets, the plants which bore an unusual crop all winter being still in a very promising condition.

At the Franklin Park Floral Company there is a fine lot of Queen Louise, Estelle and Lawson carnations, which have been prolific since early in the season, and are still a sea of bloom. CARL.

Breitmeyers' New Rose

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID.

To Be Disseminated April 1, 1904.

COLOR. Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE. Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM. Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH. Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific.
