Theodore Bock, of Hamilton, O., the judge of our monthly exhibitions, had his hands full last Saturday at the carnation exhibit. It is not exaggerating to say the show was the best exhibit of carnations ever seen in the club rooms. The E. G. Hill Company, of Richmond, Ind., the Chicago Carnation Company, of Joliet, Ill., the J. D. Thompson Carnation Company, of Joliet; W. Kunzman, of Louisville; Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis; H. Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md., were the out-of-town exhibitors, and Richard Witterstaetter, W. K. Partridge, William Rodgers and C. C. Murphy were the local exhibitors. The latter may be proud of the showing made. Everybody seemed to be interested in the Cardinal, which again carried off the highest honors. William Murphy informs me he has already booked orders for 30,000 rooted cuttings, a pretty good showing for owning a variety about ten days. The E. G. Hill Company showed Adonis particularly well done, but the arrangement of the vase was anything but artistic, therefore this firm had to take second money. Their Gov. Lowndes were also very good, and the same may be said of Lawson, Crocker and McKinley. Richard Witterstaetter showed a fine lot of seedlings, and his 1000 A in my estimation is a coming pink. Vernon Graves, of Richmond, Ind., brought down a nice bunch of seedlings, which looked to have several good ones in the lot. C. C. Murphy had a red which might find a place among the commercial varieties. Baur & Smith showed Indianapolis and carried off second money, Witterstaetter's Enquirer beating it out. Judge Bock awarded the prizes as follows:

- White—W. K. Partridge first, R. Witterstaetter second, Chicago Carnation Company third.
- Pink—R. Witterstaetter first, Baur & Smith second, Chicago Carnation Company third.
- Red—R. Witterstaetter first, E. G. Hill Company second, W. K. Partridge third.
- Crimson—Chicago Carnation Company first, W. K. Partridge second.
- Variigated—W. K. Partridge first, J. W. Rodgers second, J. D. Thompson Carnation Company third.
- Any other color—W. K. Partridge first.
- Twenty-five seedlings—R. Witterstaetter first and second, C. C. Murphy third.
- Best general display—R. Witterstaetter.

Trade remains very good and all kinds of flowers are moving well. Prices remain about the same as last report and the only scarcity is in green goods. Spring openings are using up considerable of the poorer grade of stock, and consequently the wholesale houses clean up stuff every night at closing time.

Visitors: Vernon Graves, E. G. Hill and R. Fulle, of Richmond, Ind., and D. B. Honaker, of Lexington, Ky. A. O.

OCEANIC, N. J.—The Monmouth County Horticultural Society met March 4. Geo. H. Hale showed Prince of Wales violets which scored 95 points. He had a dish of fine strawberries for which he received 100 points. H. A. Kettel showed fine tulips, narcissi and roses. N. Butterbach had some sweet peas, Christmas, which scored 90 points. Wm. Turner had narcissi and hyacinths and Geo. Kuhn fine celery. N. B.

Montreal, Que.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held on March 7. The meetings are generally well attended, and the last is proof that there is a revival in the club. The principal business was the revision of the chrysanthemum show's prize list. November 9 and 10 are likely to be the dates of this show. George Pasco read a paper on specimen chrysanthemum plants. At the close of the meeting G. Vreugde announced his departure from Montreal for a more favorable country. He is sorry to have Joseph Bennett's employment, because he passed there a most happy year.

The weather for the last few days has been fair and mild. Business has improved and is fairly good. The stock of cut flowers is quite plentiful and roses are promising well for Easter. Carnations, bulbous stock and violets are plentiful everywhere. "Will the lilies be in for Easter?" is the general question. In the line of plants for Easter, Montreal will have a great variety this year.

G. V.

Honolulu.

Business is very good and good flowers of all kinds are selling well. With the visit of Admiral Evans' fleet, the holidays, weddings and funerals the stock has been well cleaned up. Of course we do not take into consideration the native flower women. They are always in evidence and their prices vary with the demand. They raise no first-class flowers with their crude methods of cultivation. Some of the Japanese, however, raise good chrysanthemums out of doors. There are a great many flowers used here considering the limited white population.

We had an enormous quantity of rain during February, over 28 inches to date (February 25). On the 7th and 11th at least eight inches fell each night, doing an immense amount of damage to the streets and the Honolulu railroad. The road, which is about eighty miles long, was opened but recently.

Albany, N. Y.

The past two weeks have witnessed an unusual increase in the mortality list, owing to the very changeable climate that is characteristic of March weather in this latitude. As a consequence the florists have been rushed to an unusual degree with orders for funeral work, which required all their energies to fill. One dealer reported early this week that he had already booked twenty-two orders for funeral pieces on the day in question.

Whittle Brothers supplied the decorations for the banquet given by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to its agents in this section, on Wednesday evening, at the Ten Eyck hotel. Covers were laid for about 275 guests, among whom were many of the company's officials from New York. Bridesmaid roses were used in considerable numbers, each guest being supplied with a few at his dinner plate.

SAMUEL S. PENNOCK, 1612-18 Ludlow St. Philadelphia, Feb. 9, 1904.
 ROBERT CRAIG & SON, Philadelphia.
 Gentlemen:—We have been handling the Vesper carnation for the past two or three years, in fact, ever since it was introduced, and we find it to be one of the best all-around commercial whites on the market to-day. It has a good, stiff stem, is a good keeper, and is a good sized flower. Some of our customers prefer this to any other variety we can send them. They think it is the best keeper and gives them the best satisfaction of any white they are handling. Yours very truly,
 SAMUEL S. PENNOCK.

WM. C. SMITH, 61st & Market Sts. Philadelphia, Feb. 1, 1904.
 ROBERT CRAIG & SON, Philadelphia.
 Dear Sirs:—The Vesper plants that I have here on trial are certainly all that you claim for them. I find that the plants are healthy, free and that the flowers are of the first size, of long, stiff stems. You may hook my order for one thousand cuttings to be delivered as soon as ready.
 Yours very truly,
 WM. C. SMITH.

E. C. MARSHALL Florist, Kennett Square, Pa., Feb. 11, 1904.
 ROBERT CRAIG & SON, Philadelphia.
 Dear Sirs:—It gives me pleasure to state that the 20 plants of Vesper sent me on trial have given excellent results. It has excellent health; an extra long stem; flowers are of the first size and do not burst. I also find it quite free.
 Yours truly,
 E. C. MARSHALL.

JAMES C. MURRAY, Peoria, Ill., FLORIST AND SEEDSMAN.

IF YOU HAVE STOCK TO SELL....
 The best way to make that fact known to the trade is by regular advertising in the
The American Florist.

Los Angeles, Cal.

It has been a busy season and I think everyone has had his share of work. Most of them say that their sales will run twenty-five per cent greater than last year. I am speaking of the season up to Lent, which came in quietly and does not interfere much with the trade. However, we all expect to have it a little more quiet in the store for a few weeks and then pay for it in about one week.

The Grace Hill Nurseries have been supplying the trade with hot-house carnations this season, and they have done remarkably well. Their wholesale prices are as follows: Prosperity, $5 per 100; Lawson, $4 per 100; all others, $2 to $3 per 100. The grade of flowers handled this winter is considerably better than heretofore, owing to so much glass-house stock.

During the past four weeks the streets have been overrun with boys, girls, Japs, Italians and others selling violets. This is the first season such a thing has happened in our town. I do not think it interfered with counter sales in the stores to any marked degree.

The establishment of Miss Godin (deceased) at 436 South Broadway has been sold to Miss Lord and Mrs. Guentherodt, two charming ladies who have had considerable experience in floriculture. They report doing a very nice business.

Theodore Payne, formerly seedman of the Germain Seed & Fruit Company, has opened up a seed and plant store at 442 South Broadway. This is the first seed store that has dared try other than Main street.

This has been a dry season. If more rain does not come, and that quickly, and still more after that, the southern end of the state will suffer. The fall to date is less than five inches.

T. H. Wright has purchased the Fourth street store of the Ocean Park Floral Company, and it now goes under the name of the Ocean View Floral Company.

E. J. Vawter, of Ocean Park, is increasing his output of carnations. He will plant 180,000 in the field this year.

The Redondo Floral Company will plant new fields of carnations this year to the extent of ten acres.

TOMMY.

Tuscon, Ariz.

Dr. D. T. MacDougal, director of the New York Botanical Gardens; Professor R. H. Forbes, director of the United States agricultural experiment station at the University of Arizona, and George Sykes, of Flagstaff, a guide, compose an expedition fitted out by the New York Botanical Gardens and the Carnegie Institute of Washington for the purpose of exploring the shores and islands of the Gulf of California for new forms of plant life. This region has never before been visited by botanists and some remarkable discoveries are expected from the expedition, which will touch at Tiburon Island, the home of the savage Seris, and at a remarkable island in the gulf, a point where desert and marsh meet. This island was discovered two years ago by Frederick V. Coville, explorer for the Department of Agriculture. The exploration party met at the Desert Botanical laboratory at Tuscon and went direct to Yuma, where a schooner forty feet long had been constructed purposely for the trip.

What Advertisers Say

SAME OLD STORY.—AM. FLORIST Co.:—Kindly discontinue our adv. "Bred in Old Kentucky." The FLORIST is certainly a splendid medium for advertising. The first insertion brought us orders enough to clean us out of cuttings. We enclose $4.00 to pay for the insertions. When we have more stock will try it again. We were not only highly pleased with the results, but with manner in which you displayed our adv. C. L. BRUNSON & Co. Paducah, Ky.

PLEASURE AND PROFIT.—AM. FLORIST Co.:—Your paper is a weekly source of pleasure and profit to every one connected with this concern, and three copies have been subscribed for by the company for several years—one to my house, one to the greenhouses and one to the store. In addition to that the foreman and one or two of the men each receive a copy.

HEADQUARTERS FOR EASTER PLANTS.

Blooming Easter Week or from now if desired. I am noted for the past years and have a reputation among the trade all over the land, for growing a large and abundant assortment of choice Easter blooming plants of every description. I have an immense stock in large houses and 16 hot beds are crowded to their full extent, in better shape and condition than ever before. Azalea Indica; 3 houses filled with this only choice American variety. I know exactly what my customers and the public want. My son Howard and I went to Europe last summer on account of the scarcity of Mme. Van der Cruyssen azaleas, and must say with great pleasure that we were successful in obtaining 2,000 of this beautiful variety alone and offer them now as the gem of my stock only; none of it has been picked out by fall sales and I have the residue left. I make it a rule not to offer any in the fall outside of Xmas. Please note my prices of the 2,000 Mme. Van der Cruyssen; 6, 7, 8-inch, 60c, 75c to $1.00 each; specimens, $1.25 to $1.50 each. These are as round as an apple and covered with buds. Other varieties of which we have a large stock: B. A. Alba, Niobe, double white, Empress of India, Prof. Walter Vermeriana, Dr. Moore, Loo, Dr. Manhurst, Paul Weber, Simon Rucker, Lustre and about 12 more leading varieties, 6, 7, 8-inch pots, 50c, 60c, 75c, 90c, $1.00 each; specimens, $1.25, $1.50 each. If pots are not wanted we take the fresh soil off, because Azaleas never make new roots during winter; that makes packing light and safe and reduces the express charges considerably.

Lilium Harrisii and Japan Multiflorum. Have about 2,000 to offer. Raised only from special brand bulbs of Mr. H. F. Michell at the cost of $100.00 per 1000; 6-inch pots, from 5 to 8 buds to a plant, 10c per bud; under 5 buds, 12 cents.

Cineraria Hyb. Have a house of 2,000, 6-inch pots, all shades, from Mr. H. F. Michell's last strain $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per dozen.

Hydrangea Otaksa, 6 to 7-in. pots, from $4.00, $5.00, $6.00, $7.00 to $12.00 per dozen.

Daisies, white, (Marguerite), 6-inch pots, $3.00 per dozen.

Begonias, Pres. Carnot, 6-in. pots, $3.00 per doz. mixed, with or without bloom, 4 in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

" Vernou, in bloom, 4-in. pots, $1.50 per doz.

Cyclamen, 4-in. pots, in bloom, $2.00 per doz. Bud and bloom.

Primula Obconica, 4-inch, $1.80 per doz.

MIDLAND, ONT.—Delay in the shipment of the boiler and pipe for the heating plant in a new range erected by William Winfrey, who has been in the florist business for several years in this city, caused the loss of all his plants by frost, amounting to $800. He had taken out the old heating system, expecting the new material in time to replace it.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—William M. Canby, president of the Park Commission, died this morning at Augusta, Ga. Mr. Canby was a noted botanist, having frequently worked with Prof. Sargent and John Muir, of California, making a tour of Alaska with the latter about three years ago. He was a trustee of the Prof. Gray Botanical fund.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Where the coils are lower than the bottom of the boiler, which is the best method of returning the condensed water, by a pump and receiver or a trap? What pressure is necessary to operate a trap and can it stand on the ground and receive the drainage from the pipes by gravitation or must it occupy an elevated position? What make of trap is most satisfactory? F. C. C.

For small ranges a steam trap will give good results and will require less attention than a steam pump. Traps are made to work at various pressures, but they do best when the pressure is not less than six or eight pounds. They should be located where they will receive the water from the coils by gravity. Quite a number of the low pressure traps will give good satisfaction. The Moorhead trap, made in Detroit, and the Albany steam trap, advertised in these columns, would do good work.

Minneapolis, Minn.

Business is back to its normal tread again. Good average trade was enjoyed last week by the retail stores. Funeral orders cleaned up white stock. Tea roses are being cut in medium quantities and colored carnations in such numbers as to cause some stores to make cuts to clean up the surplus. American Beauty roses of all grades, although of limited numbers, were not in any decided demand.

Oscar Amundson, formerly with R. Wessling, has secured a position with the State Nursery Company, Butte, Mont.

St. Paul.

Trade continues very good with the help of lots of funeral work. Stock is about plentiful enough to go around, excepting greens. Bulbous stock, which is usually plentiful, is now being held back. Easter lilies are being sought by smaller out-of-town growers who have not had the facilities for forcing them for the early Easter. A good many of the growers here are having the hardest kind of a pull to get their lilies in, but if the weather is at all favorable the most will come in all right.

Mr. Graver, of Fargo, North Dakota, passed through St. Paul Sunday on his way to take unto himself a helpmate. We extend our congratulations to Mr. Graver.

Robert Topel, who has had charge of E. F. Lemke's University avenue houses, also has a position with L. L. May & Co.

Wm. Speth has accepted a position with L. L. May & Co., where we all wish him success.

Gust Colberg lost nearly everything in his home by fire recently.

Recent visitors were Messrs. McHutehison, Van Zonneveld, W. E. Pera and H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg. O.

Made Her Own Bargain.

There were three of them, and they were charming young things of the matinee girl variety. They had bright eyes and rosy cheeks, and they were all talking at once, as is characteristic of their type. A Greek florist poked a bunch of violets under the nose of the prettiest.

"Fina violet," he cooed. "Looka nice on lady dress."

"They are pretty," said the young thing. "How much?"

The Greek smiled with courtly grace. "To lofly lady a-twentia cent."

"Three for seventy-five?" asked the girl with lightning calculation.

"Three for a-seventy-five if my lady say so," said the Greek with humility.

The bargain was clinched, and the three young things were arranging the blossoms among their furs when one, who had been wearing a puzzled expression for a few minutes, suddenly said:

"Ruth, it oughtn't to have amounted to seventy-five cents. Didn't he say twenty cents apiece?"

There was an awful silence while the three young things laboriously worked the problem out in mental arithmetic. Then Ruth, with her cheeks all aflame, turned to the smiling Greek.

"You've overcharged me," she said. "It ought only to have been sixty cents."

But the Greek's smile only broadened. "The lady mada her owna bargain," he said with a Chesterfieldian wave of his hand.

Which being quite true, the three young things had nothing more to say; but somehow, quite suddenly, as it were, all the sweetness had gone from the flowers. —New York Times.

It is Jacob A. Riis who, in "The Making of an American," tells about the firemen desirous of honoring the dead reporter, but being obliged through press of time to leave it to the florist, found themselves on the solemn occasion face to face with a large wreath bearing the legend, "Admit Within Fire Lines Only."

A MAN uses flowery language when he calls another an idiot.—Chicago Daily News.

The Window Glass Market.

New York.—The window glass market presented a listless appearance throughout the week and the transactions for the week have been extremely light, says the Oil Paint and Drug Reporter. Prices, however, are firmly held, but are nominal. The statistical position of the market is strong, and owing to the light available stocks throughout the country the general feeling among the jobbers here remains firm, but despite this fact, there is still a marked indisposition shown by them to make large purchases. Unfavorable rumors have also checked business, and as manufacturers, according to reports, refuse to name a price until all orders for their glass are in, the feeling among New York people is rather uncertain regarding the future. It is claimed that only about one-half of the glass factories are turning out glass, which is the only favorable feature.

Chicago.—Discussing the general conditions, a prominent dealer said: "The extreme cold weather of the last six weeks has interfered materially with the use of glass in the building trade, and, as this is the chief source of consumption, the business has suffered. Despite the slack trade, however, prices are firm. This is due to the light supply on the spot and the fact that stocks at producing points are also very light. The production so far this year has not reached one-half the quantity turned out in the same period last year. In addition to this the carry over since the factories closed last fall was less than the normal. The present selling price in the Chicago market is actually less than it costs to make new glass, and the fact that prices here are low is due entirely to the lack of demand. Under normal conditions of demand the present supply of glass would not last three months, so that unless there is a considerable increase in production in the next thirty days there is going to be a scarcity of glass not only here but in other sections of the country."

CROP INSURANCE.
 Life Insurance is valuable because it guarantees the outcome.

"Gurney" Heaters

"BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouse: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expenses at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

FIFTH ANNUAL MEETING, PHILADELPHIA, PA, MARCH 22-23-24.

Boston Chosen for Next Meeting Place.

The annual meeting of the American Rose Society was called to order at Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, at 3 o'clock p. m. on Wednesday, March 23, by John Burton, who held credentials therefor from the president and executive committee. About thirty members were present. Secretary Barron read the minutes of the preceding session, and explained that Treasurer J. N. May was absent in Florida and his report had failed to arrive thus far. On motion, the executive committee was instructed to take charge of the report on its arrival. The secretary's report showed slight gains in membership and corresponding losses. He urged the desirability of issuing periodical bulletins, the appointment of special committees for forwarding the society's work and the assumption by the society of the duty of registering new roses. One death was reported, that of E. G. Asmus, one of the founders of the society. The secretary reported the award of medals through the Annandale rose show, Lenox Horticultural Society and Dutchess County Horticultural Society. After the acceptance of the secretary's report it was voted, after a lively general discussion, to open a department of registration on lines similar to that of the American Carnation Society. The chairman, in conjunction with the president, was authorized to appoint standing committees on schedule, publications and the award of medals to local societies.

Invitations were then presented from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston to hold the next meeting in Boston. A similar invitation came from the Chicago Florists' Club urging the claims of that city and from J. A. Valentine on behalf of a special committee appointed by the American Carnation Society to invite co-operation in a joint meeting and exhibition at Chicago next year. Wm. J. Stewart took the floor in favor of Boston and was followed by H. A. Siebrecht favoring both claimants and Robert Simpson endorsing Boston's candidacy, and upon motion of Edwin Lonsdale a ballot was cast by the secretary expressing the unanimous choice of Boston for the meeting of 1905. A scene of enthusiasm followed, during which a large number of gentlemen, including Messrs. Nugent, Hammond, Montgomery, Breitmeyer and Siebrecht, made voluntary offers of a number of valuable special premiums to be entered on the forthcoming schedule, and the secretary was instructed to take steps to secure as many more as possible in the same line. After a vote of thanks to Chicago and the Carnation Society for their invitations, F. L. Moore of Chatham, N. J., was presented and proceeded to read the paper by L. H. Martin, which appears in another column of this paper, Mr. Martin being unable to be present. In the discussion that followed, Dr. Huey applauded the Lord Penzance Sweetthriars and several of Dickson's novelties, and characterized Reine Marie Henriette as the crowning variety among the climbing roses.

The next thing on the programme was a discussion on grafting, opened by Robert Simpson. This much-debated question took on something of its old fire and brought the old warriors to their feet in rapid succession. Mr. Simpson told of the various experiments in grafting tea roses which he had been carrying on for a number of years, and a few things he had found out. He admitted that the question of the advantages of grafted over own-root stock was still an open one. For himself, although it is cheaper to grow from cuttings, he had found that many of the most important varieties are decidedly improved by grafting on suitable stock. These he listed as in that class: Bride, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate, Ivory, Testout, Kaiserin, Carnot, Liberty and Meteor, he said, were not always successful under either method, and as to Morgan, Perle and American Beauty, they don't take kindly to any stock he has ever tried them on. He mentioned, as special results of grafting, increased vigor, a remarkable precociousness in blooming and practical immunity from eel worm and similar pests. He had tried for stocks Rosa canina, polyantha, multiflora, multiflora Japonica, cinnamomea, rugosa, rubiginosa, La Griffiere, setigera, lucida and Manetti, but the latter had in all cases demonstrated its superiority. Multiflora makes a good stock but has large fleshy roots in which eel worm luxuriates; canina, popular in England, is not practical here because of the requirements for continuous growing; polyantha and others all have the same tendency to go dormant in winter. He has a California variety now under test which shows even greater winter vigor than Manetti, and it may prove valuable. All Manettis, he said, are not equally good, some—especially the French—being very unreliable and often mixed up with La Griffiere. Replying to a query he said that good, strong, well rooted stock is impossible with a thinwooded species like La Griffiere.

H. A. Siebrecht submitted that the necessity of getting strong wood for scions as compared with the small stuff often used for cuttings is responsible in part for the superiority of grafted roses. Golden Gate he preferred not grafted. He agreed with Mr. Simpson's strictures on French Manetti. James Scott concurred with Mr. Simpson, and stated that in a recent extended tour of the gardeners along the Hudson river he did not find half a dozen Bride or Bridesmaid houses, grafted, that were not good, nor half a dozen ungrafted that were creditable. He called attention to the fact that grafted roses enjoy a cool temperature, say 56°, need more soil and will stand more feeding than others. Carnot and Kaiserin he had seen superb all through the winter when grafted.

A. Fahrenwold testified that he saw but little advantage in grafted roses. Bride and Bridesmaid had given him better results on own roots and Liberty was decidedly an own-root rose with him. Under his method of treatment he got too many suckers when Manetti was used, and further he found them disposed to go to sleep in winter. He attributed most of the failures in stock on own roots to insufficient care in the selection of good wood for cuttings. He admitted that when eel worm is present grafting may be a necessary resort or else "the rose will get the yellows and the man the blues."

Antoine Wintzer reverted to his experience with grafted roses forty years ago. He said he was not an advocate of grafting but of good propagation as the main requisite, and suggested that a better stock than Manetti should be sought and may yet probably be found among some of the hybrids of multiflora and Wichuraiana. Mr. Simpson claimed that even with careful wood selection cuttings can never equal grafts. As to Golden Gate he can get good blooms from grafted plants fully a month earlier, and he doesn't get so many of those long rank shoots with two leaves to three feet of stem.

Patrick O'Mara detailed some of Mr. Henderson's early exploits with grafted material, and regarded the certainty of getting early results so that his roses could be thrown out in February as his motive in favoring the planting of such. Immunity from eel worm seems to be the dominant factor in the present general use of grafted stock, and another good result of grafting is the guarding against eventual deterioration in quality of stock through long-continued propagation. This latter proposition Mr. Simpson and others declined to endorse, however.

Election of officers was the next thing in line. Nominations were made as follows: President, Alex. Montgomery, Natick, Mass.; vice-president, F. R. Newbold, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; treasurer, John N. May, Summit, N. J.; secretary, Leonard Barron, and Alex. Wallace, New York. Mr. Wallace withdrew his name, and on motion the chairman cast the unanimous ballot of the society for the remaining candidates as officers for the ensuing year. In the same manner P. Welch, Boston, and John Burton, Philadelphia, were elected to serve on the executive committee.

Mr. Myers, of Myers & Samtman, called attention to the disqualification of certain exhibits because of inaccuracy in count in the exhibition, and asked whether some discretion could not be given the judges in such cases. Referred to the executive committee. After a vote of thanks to Chairman Burton for his ability in wielding the gavel, the meeting adjourned at 5:45 p. m.

The Exhibition.

The combined exhibition of the American Rose Society and Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, opened on Tuesday evening, March 22, under favorable auspices. The hall was well filled with exhibits but mostly those of the Horticultural Society as the display of roses, with the exception of some grand vases of American Beauty, was disappointingly small. Benjamin Dorrance, of Dorrance-town, Pa., was expected with a collection of his new ones, but sent word that he was afraid to leave home on account of the rise in the Susquehanna river which threatened his place. Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, Mich., arrived but his roses were eight hours late and neither these nor other western exhibits could be passed on by the judges. The vases of American Beauty, seven in all of fifty flowers each, were grand and as fine as any ever exhibited here before. The judges must have had a hard job deciding as the various exhibits were so even.

The vase of Queen of Edgely from Myers and Samtman, Chestnut Hill, Pa., was if anything finer than the Beauties and was much admired. Two vases of Liberty, shown by A. Fahrenwold, Roslyn, Pa., were fully up to his high standard and were one of the features of the rose tables.

There was a vase of General MacArthur from John N. May, of Summit, N. J. The flowers were of good form and color with long stems. It is said to be very prolific and easy to grow.

The seedlings of John Cook of Baltimore attracted considerable attention from the growers. His Enchantress is a beautiful shade of pink, resembling closely in shape of flower and stem one of its parents, Madame Testout. Cardinal is a good red, the flower being large and well formed with a stiff stem. A new seedling white is beautiful, being of good size and as white and perfectly formed as anything now on the market. In point of color it is in advance as it is the purest white to the very center. It is said by Mr. Cook to be a shy bloomer and does not make much wood. It is a hybrid tea. This is a great pity as it would be ideal if as free as other popular kinds.

Jacob Becker of Philadelphia made a nice exhibit of roses in pots. They were well flowered and there was a good assortment of varieties.

In the main hall William C. Graham of Philadelphia had erected a sort of pagoda in which were displayed a number of Easter baskets of plants and cut flowers. Surrounding this were exhibits of Primula stellata, which were exceedingly fine.

H. A. Dreer of Philadelphia staged a group of new plants prominent among which was a magnificent specimen of the Golden Pandanus.

John Scott, of Brooklyn, N. Y., exhibited specimen plants in various sizes of his new dwarf Boston fern. This is a very distinct sport and we believe is a valuable addition to this family. It makes a plant that is full and compact in any size from 3-inch pots up. There were choice specimen geraniums, finely shaped but on account of the dull weather very short of blossoms.

Louis A. Dupuy, of Whitestone, L. I., made a display of choice ericas, the varieties being E. persoluta, E. perspicua erecta, E. cupressina, E. amabilis, E. perspicua nana, E. translucens mamosa intermedia and E. Cavendishii. Hydrangea paniculata hortensis rosea, a bright pink variety, was very attractive and received a certificate of merit. A blue variety called azurea was very pretty.

The Banquet.

The complimentary dinner to the American Rose Society and visitors to the exhibition Wednesday evening was a great success. It was given in the Florists' Club room, which was suitably decorated for the occasion. W. B. Smith, the genial ex-mayor of Philadelphia, was toastmaster, and was at his best, so that those who have attended similar functions in this city in the last few years know what a treat those present enjoyed.

Mr. Siebrecht responded to "The Rose Society" and spoke of the future of the society and the good it might do if all worked intelligently. He predicted a great meeting in Boston next year under the leadership of President Montgomery. Otto Thilow made what he called his maiden speech as a debutante. His toast was "Horticulture," and he predicted that if we progressed as much in the next fifteen years as we had in the past, there was no one could predict the advancement that would be then shown.

Robert Craig spoke on "The Rose," and said there is nothing more lovely than the rose, all the associations of the flower being pleasant. He spoke of how useful such an organization as the national society could be made, referring to the great success achieved by the sister association of England. He thought it would be wise to issue bulletins and pamphlets on culture and varieties of the rose and encourage amateurs to join. He predicted a great meeting in Boston, as President Montgomery, who has glorified the rose, would stir up enthusiasm and the success of the exhibition and meeting was assured. The invitation to Boston was also emphasized by W. J. Stewart, who said he had gotten tired answering to the toast of the "Horticultural Press." It was no longer a novelty, having grown from a single sheet, bi-monthly, to some half dozen weekly publications, and there was no sign of the limit having been reached. He predicted a great meeting in Boston next year.

W. K. Harris made some witty remarks about his toast "Ourselves," and said there were no two alike. Mr. Harris was in good humor and appears younger as the years roll by. Patrick O'Mara made a fine speech to the toast, "The Twentieth Century." He said it was a healthy youngster, and had already done great things for a four-year-old. With the aid of schools, experimental stations and other educational lines, he looked forward to the time when results will be reached that are not now dreamed of. He had heard recently of a fluid that an inventor injected into cut roses that would make them keep a month. He thought this would do about Christmas time, but he left it to his hearers to believe as they liked about the possibility of the thing. He said for his part he would still tie to the Montgomerys, the Simpsons and other gentlemen in their line for his supply.

Benjamin Hammond, of Fishkill, N. Y., held up his end of the slug-shot question in a short, witty speech. Mr. Langjahr was asked to speak for the commission men, and Mr. Smith said he was a wonder, as he had both his hands in his own pockets, which was not generally the reputation of the profession. President Montgomery, of Boston, gave a pressing invitation to all present to come to Boston next year and see a show that he felt sure would astonish them.

John Burton handled his toast in an able manner, speaking of the noted growers who might have been there and what they were doing for the rose. He referred feelingly to those who would never meet with their fellows again, mentioning Messrs. Asmus, Wood and Cartledge, and holding them up as examples to the young men present as ideals. Edwin Lonsdale sang "The Brave Old Duke," and the party finally broke up with "Auld Lang Syne."

Roses For Hardy Gardens.

BY L. A. MARTIN, GREENWICH, CONN.

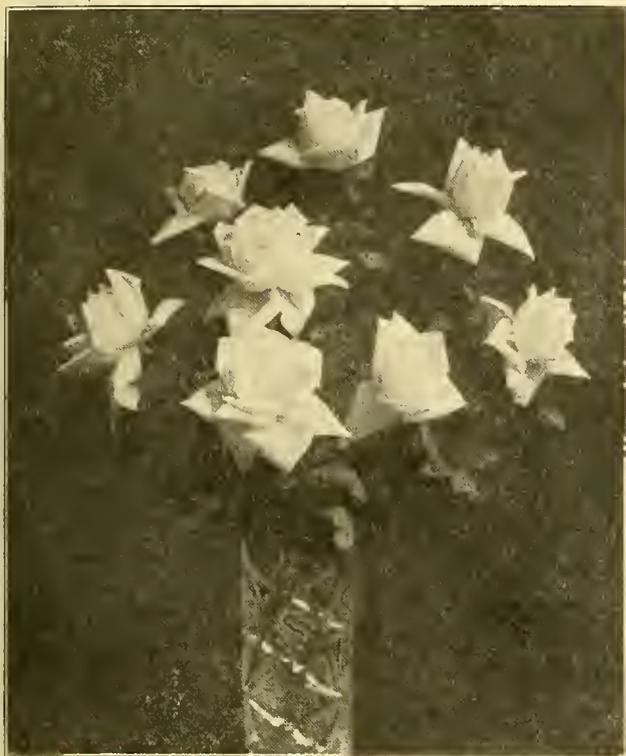

In this short paper on "Roses for Hardy Gardens," I will not attempt to enumerate all the species that are now cultivated, but will confine myself to a few well known varieties of merit and of different species that have proved themselves perfectly hardy and suitable for all purposes for which they are best adapted, omitting with but few exceptions, the hybrid perpetuals, tea scented and other varieties of so-called florists' roses. Many species other than the above named are so little known as to be little appreciated; I refer to our so-called wild roses and their hybrids, which are equally as suitable for the decoration of the hardy gardens as their more queenly sisters. Their ease of cultivation and adaptability to grow to perfection in many different kinds of soils, high or low, light or heavy, is a recommendation. They will readily respond, however, to a better treatment and they ought to be more generally planted. If a proper selection of varieties is made they can be had in bloom from May to November, and not only are their flowers beautiful, but their bright colored fruits, which succeed the flowers in many kinds, will adhere to the plant until new growths start in the spring.

One of the greatest differences from other roses is that the flowers of the wild species are single, but many of the hybrids are semi-double. They will need less care and attention when well established, a little thinning and shortening of the branches and the cutting of the dead wood once in a while is all they require; they are also less subject to insects and fungus than other garden roses, and so varying in growths that there are many different ways that they can be used advantageously. Rosa rugosa, a Japanese species, flowering in June, is one of the handsomest in cultivation. It forms a sturdy and erect bush about four feet high, with handsome, glossy foliage and produces ten or more flowers in a cluster. Its orange reddish fruit is very ornamental and should be in every collection. I think this rose could be used advantageously in forming hedges, cut to keep the required shape. Other forms of this variety equally as useful for many purposes are R. rugosa alba, pure white; America, crimson; Blanc Double de Coubert, white semi-double; Mme. Charles Worth, red purple; Mikado, crimson semi-double; Calocarpa, soft rose, with pretty fruit; Coruscans, clear pink, distinct; Georges Bruant, white, double and very fragrant, and others.

R. Carolina (Swamp rose) has flowers rose colored in June, is about four feet high and fine for low and wet ground. R. canina (Dog rose) is a British species, forming large, erect bushes, with cup shaped blossoms appearing in June, changing from white to deep rose. Many fine hybrids have been obtained from this species. R. centifolia (Provence rose), in height from three to six feet is very sweet scented and has rose purple flowers in June. In July these are succeeded by fragrant fruit. R. muscosa is well known as the Moss rose. R. ferruginea is a tall growing species with flowers a deep red in August and fruit purplish red. R. lucida is an American species, two feet tall, with red flowers from May to July and deep red fruit. A variety of this rose with double flower is "flore pleno." R. arvensis or repens has white flowers in June and is fine for covering rocky and gravelly hills. Varieties of this are Queen of Belgians, creamy white, double, and Splendens, flesh colored, the bud crimson. R. rubiginosa, Sweet Briar, is a very fragrant wild rose which flowers in June, is pink and excellent for hedges, growing tall. Hybrid sweet briar or Lord Penzance roses, which are crosses of the common Briar with garden roses, are very vigorous and hardy plants, very sweetly scented. The flowers are single or semi-double ranging in color from pale yellow to crimson. There are about fifteen varieties of this popular rose, and all worthy of a place in hardy gardens. R. setigera, the Climbing or Prairie rose, native to North America, has stems of fifteen to twenty feet and flowers of deep rose, changing to white, in July. The fruit is red. A favorite variety of this is the well known Baltimore Belle. In R. Wichuriana, the Memorial rose, another Japanese variety of great merit, we have a very useful flower, valuable for its keeping qualities, also for climbing low trellises, traveling over rocky slopes, gravelly embankments and growing where other roses could not live; some of the best hybrids are Gardenia, yellow to cream, Evergreen Gem, one of the very best for its foliage, flower yellow to white, and Universal Favorite, large, double fine rose pink, very fragrant. This paper would not be complete without mentioning the climbing varieties of hardy roses of which we have plenty of distinct colors and types to suit everyone and which are more and more used every year. They can be employed for ornamentation on many parts of the garden, where other kinds of plants would not be so effective and conspicuous. This class of roses must be trimmed sparingly, cutting only the laterals back to one bud and preserving only the strong shoots to the height desired. They are unsurpassed for covering old buildings, unsightly walls, old trees, some lonely rocks, trellises, arbors, screens and the much talked about pergolas. Think of the effect that could be obtained with the well known Crimson Rambler for covering the last named if the branches or stems were arranged and tied in festoons on the sides. Many other purposes can be found in using this favorite climber to advantage. Other varieties of this popular rose and equally as beautiful are Aglaia, pale yellow; Claire Jaquire, nankeen; Electra, yellow; Euphrosyne, pink with white centre; Psyche, rosy pink and crimson; Thalia, white semi-double, without forgetting Philadelphia Rambler, pegged down and growing as a trailer. In standard or bush form they are equally desirable and in this way will add much diversity and color to their environments.

A magnificent climbing rose, not often seen as yet, is Paul's Carmine Pillar, with its bright, rosy carmine, large single flowers. It does not grow as tall as other varieties, but will grow perfectly well against the north side of a building or wall, a very free grower and bloomer. Other varieties found perfectly hardy and of different species are Queen of the Prairies, deep rose and vigorous grower, Russell's Cottage, dark crimson, very rapid grower. Climbing Clothilde-Souper, pure ivory white. Many others of either bushes or climbing varieties of hardy roses could be added to the foregoing, and useful in some way or other for the embellishment of the hardy garden, as there will always be found some part of it where something is wanting, and where a bush, trailing, pillar or climbing rose would be just the thing.

New Rose General MacArthur.

This rose which the Storrs & Harrison Company and J. N. May are about to introduce to the trade gives promise of filling a very useful place as an easily-managed, freely-responsive and popularly acceptable variety. No grower in America is better qualified to judge as to the prospective value of a rose in the cut-flower market than the discerning introducer of The Bride and Mrs. Morgau and the unqualified endorsement of a man so cautious as Mr. May will go a long way toward inspiring confidence in the new comer, from the start. As seen growing at Summit, the rose is exceedingly vigorous and free. The foliage is ample and glossy and there is an abundance of those strong wine-red young shoots which always appeal to the rose grower. That it is thus perfectly at home in the same house with Bride and Bridesmaid will especially appeal to those growers whose limited space will not permit of giving a special house and special treatment to one variety. The color of the flowers is what Mr. May aptly terms the true Christmas color, brighter than either Liberty or Meteor. Its only apparent fault, short centre petals, causing a flatness in the expanded flowers is not without advantage for it precludes the possibility of "bull-heads," the almost universal failing of crimson varieties. There are characteristics about it that strongly suggest its adaptability for pot culture for Easter sales. Its fragrance is equal to that of Gen. Jacqueminot. See page 378.

Two New Roses.

In the opinion of many good rose judges John Cook's two new varieties, Cardinal and Enchantress, give promise of taking place among the established commercial roses for cut flower production. The rarity of American seedlings of standard merit makes Mr. Cook's services to floriculture all the more conspicuous. It is interesting to learn that each of these roses is the product of twenty years' devotion to rose hybridizing, Cardinal being the product of Liberty hybridized with an unnamed carmine seedling in the third generation, and Enchantress being a third generation seedling also, its parents being Mme. Testout and an unnamed seedling. In the case of Enchantress, its best qualifications are its beautiful clear unfading pink color and its freedom from blind wood, flowers coming from every growth. It is a steady bloomer from October till April, and the flowers shown in Philadelphia on March 23 were as good as those shown in midwinter. Cardinal is a very strong grower with a heavy flower. Mr. Cook hopes to get one yet that will be brighter in color, however. Its fragrance is very strong and sweet. It is at its best in December, January and February, but in fall and spring it is liable to give rather short stems. It has proved practically hardy in Baltimore, excelling Testout in this respect. See pages 376, 377.

New Rose Houses at Fahrenwold's.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs of an additional range of houses for Liberty roses erected last summer for Adolph Fahrenwold at Hillside Station, Pa., by the Lord & Burnham Company, which present some new features. There are eight houses in the block, each 16½x150 feet. Iron posts support the cypress gutters, which are six feet and six inches high. The ridge pole is ten feet from the ground. The rods of iron hold the gutters together and stiffen the houses so that there is no need of center posts. The glass used is 16x20 and the ventilators are 30 inches by 8 feet; this gives ventilation over each two beds. The roses are planted in the ground which has not been especially arranged except that one 3-inch common drain tile is run down the center of each bed about six inches below the surface.

Mr. Fahrenwold has been very successful with the Liberty rose and his place has become quite a Mecca for the growers. He is always glad to see visitors and pleased to show them about. The older portion of the place is mainly planted with Beauty roses which Mr. Fahrenwold seems to handle with equal success.

Pot Roses.

At this time of the year (January 30), when one's mind begins to turn to thoughts of brighter days, and with the coming of spring the beginning of the rosarian's year, some of your readers who have a cool greenhouse, but who have not turned it to any specific purpose, may be interested to know how easy it is to have roses some weeks before those in the garden gladden one's gaze, says a correspondent of the Gardening World (English). I have found the best plan is to buy plants from the open in the autumn; it is really not too late now, but a few already in pots, maybe, would be more successful now.

In potting roses be sure that the material they are potted in is good, and a little sand on the surface will aid the drainage. All new plants must be close-pruned in January to two or three eyes and brought a little nearer to the light, always watching for frosts and being careful as to amount of water given. The buds will soon be seen to swell, and by the end of February the plants will, if the greenhouse occupies a good position, be in full leaf, and pretty indeed is the early foliage of roses.

About this time greenfly may be found rather troublesome, but this can easily be kept in check by removing whenever seen by a gentle pressure of the thumb and first finger. A little weak soot water when the plants are bursting into leaf both improves the color of the foliage and purifies the soil. As the flower-buds begin to swell a little artificial manure is very helpful toward perfect blooms. By the end of April and beginning of May beautiful roses will be the result of this treatment, and a more interesting four months could hardly be imagined, always watching, always busy, as so much depends on the manipulation of the plants to obtain all light and sun possible.

A few of the varieties I have found most suitable in pots are: Mrs. W. J. Grant, Caroline Testout, Duke of Edinburgh, Papa Gontier, Liberty (a good rose for pots), K. A. Victoria, Frau Karl Druschki (the grand new white H. P.), White Maman Cochet, Maman Cochet, Nipetos, Beaute Inconstante, Perle de Jardins, and last, but not least, the fragrant and beautiful Souv. de Catharine Guillot. The small polyantha roses also are very useful and pretty in pots. When finished blooming they should be turned out to ripen their wood in a shady spot in the garden, to be brought in again in the autumn. This method I have found both simple, interesting and very successful, and to get lovely roses in an unheated house in the month of May is a great pleasure indeed.

New Dwarf Crimson Rambler Rose.

This is a cross between Crimson Rambler and Gloire des Polyantha, says Moller's Gartner-Zeitung. It is a rose of the first rank and everything that could be desired from a dwarf everblooming Crimson Rambler. The growth is strong and the plants attain a height of 20 to 25 inches. The foliage is a bright dark green and is not so subject to mildew in hot summers as the parent. The color of the flowers is a brilliant red, a trifle more carmine than the Crimson Rambler, but differing very little from it. The buds, which are counted by hundreds, appear very early and are continuously replaced by new shoots throughout the summer until frost. A bed of these roses is a dazzling sight, and at Mr. Levavasseur's place the space devoted to these roses looked like a field of red poppies. Young August grafts bloom abundantly in a few weeks. The hardness of the dwarf polyantha is well known. The Mme. Norbert Levavasseur requires only a light dressing of pine needles, though it is advisable to give first a covering of extra soil. Another valuable quality of this new plant is that it furnishes a good, brilliant forcing rose most suitable for sale in pots and its everblooming quality makes it certain to become a popular favorite. It propagates at least as easily as the monthly roses which it will soon rival.

[We understand that Vaughan holds some considerable stock of this rose and that it may now be seen in bloom at the greenhouse establishment of that firm—Ed.]

THE CARNATION.

ROBERT CRAIG, they say, is it.

ENCHANTRESS is one of those carnations whose exquisite coloring should not be exposed to the hot bleaching glare of the sun. If you would have such varieties to exhibit at their best pick the bloom early in the day.

Caring For Young Plants.

The young plants for planting out are making vigorous growth now and the general routine in caring for them is to be careful that they do not receive too much water or it will very quickly commence to tell on them by the stopping of root action. The plants will then take on a yellow, stunted appearance, developing rust, bacteria and every other disease known to carnation culture besides causing considerable trouble from worms in the soil. If the plants are in flats considerable trouble is sometimes experienced from worms working in the soil and preventing it from drying out as it should do. If this is found to be the case sprinkle some air slacked lime over the soil before watering. This will quickly bring the worms to the top, when they can be readily removed. A very little lime will answer the purpose. It is sometimes the case that the flats are set on soil left in the benches which has been used for other purposes. This is a good breeding place for all kinds of vermin. While it is poor policy to set the young stock on beds in this way yet in many establishments it is sometimes a necessity through rush of business or inability to remove the dirt when the space is needed. It therefore behooves us to fight the evils as much as we can. Before setting the flats or the young stock in pots throw considerable lime over the surface of the old bed, then spread on some clean sand. This will be found to help matters greatly. As most trouble with insects is found when flats are used, a good plan is to shift them around every little while, sprinkling some fresh lime underneath them in so doing.

The young plants will also need topping right along now every few days. You cannot top a whole batch at one time because many will be found more backward than others. Therefore we must go over them often but do not wait until they have made a growth of five or six inches before doing it. As soon as the main shoots show signs of breaking away make a clean cut beneath a junction of the leaves which prevents the main stem from shooting up again. All young stock that is well rooted should be hardened off as much as possible right along from now on. Give lots of ventilation on all favorable occasions and dispense with the artificial heat as much as possible. When it is found necessary to have a little steam on at night put on a crack of ventilation. After the first of April where good, sound cold frames are to hand, the young plants will be greatly benefited by being placed outside, but it will be far better to keep them in the house than to place them in frames where the sash leaks so badly that the plants are continually flooded during a wet spell. The difference in conditions between a cold frame and the inside of a greenhouse makes it necessary that the young plants should be gradually accustomed to it. They should receive plenty of air, but do not keep the sash off long at a time the first few days. After that the sash may be taken off entirely whenever the weather will allow. Particular attention must be taken to guard against cold, drying winds.

If you have a seedling you think enough of to want to increase your stock, or any other variety the stock of which does not amount to your requirements, the surest way to be successful in propagating from now on is to use a hotbed. They will readily root in this. Proceed in the usual manner to make the hotbed, using only fresh horse manure which has been turned over a couple of times and making the depth of manure about eighteen inches, banking up the sides of the frames so the cold cannot penetrate through the boards, as it is likely we shall get frosty nights for a considerable time yet. Besure the manure is made as firm as possible, then let it stand for a day or two to sweat and see it is well sprinkled with salt to kill the effect of any fungus. Then sand six inches deep, well pounded should be put on. It is then ready for the cuttings. The most important point to figure on in following this method is not to allow the heat of the frame to get above 65° without ventilation. Also be sure and water thoroughly when the cuttings are put in. All they will need after that is frequent syringings unless the weather turns very warm so the sand becomes too dry. Then, of course, another watering will be necessary. Shade the glass lightly to prevent the sun wilting the cuttings and if a severe frost comes throw some old bags or some other protecting material over the sash.

Cultural Reminders.

The bright days that we have had the last three weeks, after three months of almost sunless weather, have been indeed a blessing, and now that we may look for a continuance of the balmy spring weather it is well to see that our carnations have the best possible chance to make full use of their qualities. With the increased amount of light the plants will expand their tissues much more rapidly than a few weeks ago. This means that there should also be present those other things necessary for a full and healthy development. Fresh air is, next to sunshine, the greatest aid in this direction. There should, therefore, never be a lack of this health-giving element. After the plants have been subjected to the rather close atmosphere consequent to closed ventilators during cold weather, however, a little skill is necessary to prevent wilting when the ventilators are open wide. In such cases a light syringing once or twice during the warm part of the day, just enough to charge the atmosphere with moisture, will keep the buds from lopping over. Crooked stems and small flowers soon result from repeated wilting. With care and judgment the plants can soon be accustomed to the more airy environment.

The Dwarf Crimson Rambler

The remarks made some time ago about continued feeding will apply with greater force as the season advances and the weather becomes more certain. The soil will easily stand any reasonable addition of plant food now, either in liquid form or as a light mulch. It is as yet too early, however, to think of putting on a heavy mulch, except where the sun is apt to dry out the soil too fast. Any material used for stimulating effect, therefore, should be rich in some element which is intended to produce just the effect desired. Phosphoric acid seems to manifest its influence mostly in the development of the flower, and is therefore a valuable fertilizer at this season, when the plants are usually well set with buds. Ground bone, which is mostly relied upon to supply this element, must be fine enough to be quickly available, the finer the better. Potash had better be dispensed with, for it hardens the growth too much. This means a discontinuance of wood ashes on most varieties about this time. Nitrogen, which is found in abundance in a good grade of sheep manure and also in quantity in cow manure, gives tone to the entire plants and keeps them from becoming close jointed and hard. A good supply of this element should be present at all times, especially in very bright weather. Watering, both above and in the soil, will come in for a larger share of time than heretofore. A good syringing with force twice a week, and oftener later, will be necessary to keep down red spiders, and will help to keep thrips away. The latter insect, however, is best combatted with tobacco smoke, the same as green fly. Keep the shoots well worked into their supports, especially now, when the bodies of the plants have moved upwards considerably. A few weeks' neglect will make all future efforts to train the flowering shoots up straight useless. Disbudding must also be kept up regularly, especially when the greater supply of flowers on a slowly moving market increases competition. Quality counts at such times more than at any other. Set aside a day each week for this job and see that it is done just as sure as that day comes.

If you do any forcing for Easter, be sure that the plants have enough buds on them to make it worth while. There can be little objection to raising the temperature six or eight degrees for a few days before Easter. Run the plants just a little bit dry for a week or so before the forcing period, and then a little wetter than usual while this period is on. Keep well within the bounds of safety and prudence in this, for the public expects its money's worth at Easter time as well as at any other.

The Edelweiss.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—The undersigned will be greatly obliged to any reader who will state whether the edelweiss has been grown successfully in this country, giving details of culture, etc. A. LANGE.

The Edelweiss, Gnaphalium Leontopodium, or better known under our name of Leontopodium alpinum, can and has been successfully grown in this country. It differs in culture but little from our other so-called everlasting flowers, such as xeranthemum, ammobium, helichrysum, acroclinium, Gnaphalium decurrens or immortelles. Seed sown out in June will produce blooming plants the following summer. They like a sandy loam, yet they will do well in almost any soil. A cool frame or a violet house will be found best for overwintering. Edelweiss can also be successfully forced. For this purpose seed should be sown out in March, plants to be grown in pots during summer. It is best to shade just a little during hot months and not keep plants too wet. They should not be transplanted after October 15, and by that date should be in 4 to 5-inch pots. A temperature of about 40°-45° during winter months will be about right, with an increase of about 10°-12° in February. They will make nice plants, with from seven to ten flowers to the top of the plant, in March and April. While some of the above mentioned everlasting flowers are annuals, Leontopodium alpinum is a perennial and the plants may be increased by division of the root. Yet better results will be obtained from seed which, when fresh, will germinate with a temperature of 50° in from ten to twelve days.

FRITZ BAHR.

In reply to the inquiry of A. Lange about the edelweiss, I wish to say that it is possible to grow it in this country to perfection. The writer has raised it from seeds planted in the greenhouse in January and transplanted as soon as large enough. Then harden off and plant in the rock garden in a sunny location. The soil that seems to suit it is a rather sandy or gritty loam. The plants usually flower the second year, and then seem to die out, so it is best to have new stock coming along each year. The plant flowers very freely and always seems to surprise the general public when it is seen in flower.

Building Eureka Greenhouses.

[By J. S. Dillon, of the Dillon Greenhouse Manufacturing Company. Presented before the Chicago Florists' Club, February 3, 1904.]

In building our Eureka greenhouses our object has been to erect a substantial and practical house for a reasonable cost. Our foundation is made by embedding our composition posts in concrete. Holes are dug in the usual way, filled partly full with concrete, the post placed so it is the proper height and then the hole filled up to the level of the ground with concrete. This makes a foundation that will never sag nor give in any way providing the ground is solid under the concrete. Our posts, for which patent has been applied, are made of composition with No. 8 wires running through it to give additional strength. These posts will stand a pressure of one ton. Their composition will allow nails to be driven into it as will hard wood, so we have all the advantages of a wooden post and the durability of stone. Iron caps are set on the top of the posts and angle-iron, wooden plates or our patent composition gutter plates bolted to the same as the plan may call for.

After three years' use we are positive that our composition gutters are practically indestructible. We can nail the sash bars to them the same as the wooden gutters and they do not rust the sash bars like the iron gutters. Nailing the sash bars to the gutter plates in the old fashioned way allows ventilation and is positively better than when the sash bars rest in cast iron boxes or slots. Composition gutter plates do not waste your heat all winter. It is claimed by those who use the iron gutters that the snow melts away very quickly after a storm. This shows a great loss; it takes heat to melt snow, consequently your iron gutters not only radiate the heat when it is melting the snow but you are losing heat from the time you commence to fire until you stop. Our plan to melt the snow is to run a steam pipe on each side of the gutter plate, using it only when there is snow on the glass or in very cold weather. These gutters need no painting and combine all the good qualities of the iron and wooden gutters not excepting the lower price of the wooden gutter.

SHELLEM'S NEW ROSE.

PRIZE CINERARIA STELLATA AT THE PHILADELPHIA EXHIBITION.

For our iron purlins we use "U" structural steel, which is very much stronger, weight for weight, than iron pipe or angle-iron. Our purlins are supported about every eight feet by upright pipe, connected with a "U" iron by a cast iron connecting brace which thoroughly braces and ties the building together. After five or six sections are set up and the sash bars put on the structure is perfectly rigid. Instead of sprigging the glass in the usual way we use a zinc cap twenty-four and one-half inches long for each twenty-four inches of glass, which is quickly put on by driving three small nails and prevents all possibility of the glass blowing out; protects the sash bars from the weather, thereby lengthening their life, and saves painting on the outside. These caps cost about one cent per foot but as they save a considerable part of the cost of glazing their first cost should not be considered alone.

As we use in our own greenhouses only butted glass you may wish to know our opinion of it. I wish it distinctly understood that I do not recommend butted glass in all cases, but in the country where there is no black smoke or dust a greenhouse can be glazed much cheaper by using butted glass and will be equally as tight against the cold as when lapped. It is true it leaks a little more in the summer but I have never lost, as far as I know, a dollar by the leaking. After the glass becomes wet the water will run down the glass or the sash bars. When we had the great hail storm on September 17, 1896 and lost 1300 boxes of glass, we realized the great advantage of butted glass. There was no putty to cut out and we were quickly able to lay our glass and save our plants from frost. We layed 310 boxes of glass a day.

Our Eureka houses are all put together before leaving the factory and with the aid of blue prints and plain directions sent with them can be put up by any person with a mechanical turn of mind. This is a great consideration to many florists who at some times of the year have more help than they can profitably employ in their regular business. The points of superiority we claim for our Eureka houses are indestructible composition posts, indestructible composition gutters, structural steel "U" purlins, connecting braces and the zinc caps. The small increased cost over the price of the old style wooden houses with pipe purlins should not be considered when durability is taken into consideration. I would like to say something about our sub watering beds and the great success with Liberty roses grown on them but as this would make a paper of itself I will leave it for some future time.

Greenhouse Heating.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I desire to heat a small house, 12x40, with hot water, using 2 inch flow pipe, the heater to be below the floor of the shed. The sides of the house are three and one-half feet high. It is seven feet in the center. I would like to have a temperature of 50°. Outside temperature is sometimes 10° below. Kindly state the best plan of heating a house of this size. W. P. B.

Without knowing something about the arrangement of the walks and benches it will not be possible to give very definite advice regarding the arrangement of the heating pipes. The necessary amount of radiation can be supplied by means of two 2-inch flow pipes and six 2-inch returns. If there is no door in the farther end it would answer to have a coil of four 2-inch pipes run entirely around the house. If this is not done it will be best to have coils extend at least a portion of the way across the exposed end.

LYONS, FRANCE.—Maurice Rivoire, the well known horticulturist, died at Hyeres, March 1, aged 75 years.

A PRIZE GENISTA AT THE PHILADELPHIA EXHIBITION.

MUSHROOMS sliced and dried in the sun, and whole mushrooms dried in ovens and placed on strings for convenience in handling, were held by the United States general appraisers, New York, February 29, 1904, to be dutiable under the provision for "vegetables, prepared or preserved," tariff act of 1897, and not dutiable as "vegetables in their natural state" nor free as "vegetable substances, crude or unmanufactured."

Various Notes.

At the greenhouses of G. M. Whitin, at Whitinsville, Mass., a mushroom cellar is equipped with electric heaters similar to those used on street cars. The heaters are under the beds and the results given are very satisfactory.

THE Italians, whose entire families work on the garden or farm, are gradually becoming a factor in the market gardening districts around Boston, and with their minimum expense for labor are a menace to the peace of mind of the natives. Their eventual competition in the forcing industry is also probably a matter of time only.

ELECTRIC ploughs, auto trucks for transportation, wireless telephones, rain-making and electric invigoration generally are, according to W. W. Rawson, among the attainable ideals for the vegetable forcer of the future.

Cyaniding Under Glass.

A demonstration of an interesting character, and proving the utility of the new process of cyaniding by hydrocyanic acid gas in glass houses, was given at Messrs. Ladd's Nurseries at Swanley Junction, January 11, according to the Gardening World (English). The demonstration was one of importance to market gardeners using glass. The experiments were performed in the presence of some twenty-four growers, and the hydrocyanic acid gas would appear to be most effectual. It is claimed for it that it will destroy all insect and vermin pests to which flowers and plants of any kind grown under glass are subject. At the same time it has to be borne in mind that the operation of cyaniding has to be very carefully performed or the gas will kill the men as well as the insects. It is necessary to immerse the powder used in vitriol. The powder is placed in a suitable vessel over the vitriol. To the powder vessel is attached a cord, which is of sufficient length to admit of the operator going outside the glasshouse, where, having first shut the door, he gently pulls over the hydrocyaniding powder into the vitriol, when the compound at once commences to boil, and the gas is given off. For the purpose of distributing the gas a simple fan arrangement is provided. This also is worked from outside the house by means of a cord.

DULUTH, MINN.—The South Superior Floral Club met at the home of Mrs. Henry Rasmussen Friday afternoon, March 25.

City Gardens Association, Washington, D.C.

Washington has now a City Gardens Association, its object and purpose being to utilize the Potomac flats and all other available land about the city for growing flowers and vegetables. The City Gardens Association is for the old flag, but to its credit be it here recorded does not ask congress for an appropriation. It has, however, asked for the use of available land under the control of congress. The membership fee has been placed at not less than $1. Col. T. W. Symons, superintendent of public buildings and grounds, who seems to be something of a wag, attended the last meeting of the association at the New Willard hotel, and created amusement by asking if it was prepared to dig up the cultivated parks, and the parks improved with flowers and shrubbery, for the purpose of substituting vegetable gardens.

"Are you going to dig up the mall and the grass plot around the base of the monument?" inquired Col. Symons. He was assured that the association had no designs against the mall or monument park. Col. Symons then said he was not opposed to the aims of the association.

This is the Pingree scheme of gardening, named after the late Mayor Pingree, of Detroit, who originated it in that city. It is a far cry from the parlors of the New Willard to the Potomac flats, but I do not doubt the sincerity of the ladies and gentlemen who are thus aiming to assist the poor and unemployed. They are furnishing the money to buy seeds and implements, and the government and owners of vacant property will give them the use of the land. It seems as though the agricultural department might donate enough of their perfectly lovely seeds to sow and plant the Potomac flats. It would be a much better use than to burden the mails with them, increasing the labors and expenses of the busy and expensive postoffice department.

LENOX, MASS.—The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held March 19. W. D. Sloane, F. Heeremans gardener, was awarded cultural commendations for Gardenia Veitchii and G. Florida, which were remarkably fine flowers.

ERICA CAVENDISHIANA AS GROWN BY LOUIS DUPUY, WHITESTONE, N. Y.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Unique Dinner Decoration.

At a dinner given at the Waldorf-Astoria recently by George H. Munroe, representing the Marconi wireless telegraph system, to the New York press, the floral decorations by J. H. Small & Sons were unique. The scheme represented an extensive country scene, mountains, glens, lakes, rivers, houses, barns, windmills, all reproduced in exactness by the clever skill of the florist. Through this elaborate landscape were represented the old-fashioned telegraph poles, wires tangled, cut and running in every direction, illustrating in miniature their uselessness when compared with the Marconi wireless system.

Chicago.

The advent of Spring was accompanied by mild and pleasant weather which brought stock from the greenhouses in large quantities and increased the prospect for a good supply in all lines for Easter. If the present brand of weather remains with us until the holiday there will be ample stock to meet all demands. Good American Beauty and Liberty will be the scarce items in roses. The former have been scarce nearly all the time since the holidays and the prospects are meagre for an increased cut. Not many Meteor are to be seen in the market. Bride, Bridesmaid and the other staples are of excellent quality and are enough to fill the running calls at present, although some predict a shortage for Easter. Carnations are slightly stiffer in price than formerly and Easter quotations put this item at nearly Christmas prices. The violet situation has been much improved during the last week. The flowers are much in demand and are moving readily. Tulips are a glut, as they have been for some time. Other bulb stock, narcissus, daffodils and callas are selling slowly and large quantities are coming in. Among the scarcest items on the market now is smilax and dealers are doubtful if they can get their orders filled in time to satisfy their Easter trade.

The aldermanic campaign of Peter Reinberg is on in full force. The downtown florists are taking an active part by putting up Reinberg posters in their stores and distributing buttons. Mr. Reinberg's campaign is called the carnation campaign, his souvenir buttons bearing a picture of a red carnation.

High water wrought considerable damage to the growers on the north side as well as South Chicago last week. The fires were extinguished under the boilers at C. Clemenson's place and a small flood surrounded his houses several days.

Edward Calvert, of F. Calvert & Sons, of Lake Forest, Ill., was in the city a short time this week. He was showing some Princess of Wales violets, which for size and length of stem are not equaled by even the eastern violets.

Poehlmann Brothers Company will have fully 25,000 lilies just right for Easter. The quality was never better. Besides these they will have large cuts of American Beauty roses, carnations and bulbous stock.

An office at 46 Van Buren street has been opened by the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company temporarily until its building, which was recently destroyed by fire, can be rebuilt.

RED ROSES AND WHITE LILAC.

Bentley-Coatsworth Company will have a fine supply of Bride and Bridesmaid roses for their Easter trade. All of their greenhouse stock is looking healthy and promising.

Sinner Brothers are booking plenty of Easter orders. Their Lawson carnations have earned an enviable reputation and they have a good crop coming just right for Easter.

Two successive orders of 2,500 and 2,000 of assorted roses this week from one house gave Peter Reinberg a substantial lift in keeping his counters cleaned.

E. C. Amling is getting choice longiflorums, cut and in pots, and will be in a position to satisfy a large demand for Easter.

John Leach, formerly with John Mangel, is now in Lexington, Ky., where he is employed with Honaker, "the florist."

E. F. Winterson Company shipped in one order this week to a western point 10,000 assorted carnations.

Supply houses report an active business in Easter supplies, ribbons, trimmings and wire work.

Among the Chicago visitors this week were George B. Wiegand, of A. Wiegand & Sons, Indianapolis; W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind.; Mrs. Emily Stapleton, Detroit, Mich.; C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.; H. M. Reincke, Green Bay, Wis.

New York.

Wholesale dealers note a slightly better tone in the cut flower market this week, consequent upon a reduced product and probably also upon a disposition on the part of the growers to hold back stock in some lines until the Easter demand is on. As intimated in last week's notes callas are assuming an unwonted firmness because of the wide spread belief that lilies are likely to be scarce as compared with recent years. American Beauty roses are changing hands this month at prices lower than ever before at this season, the number sold for the highest quoted price, 20 cents, being very small as compared with the sales at half that price. Violets begin to show the effects of the spring weather on their size and color and receipts are growing smaller daily. There is no question, however, that the supply of this Easter favorite will be enormous.

F. W. Massmann, who has been in the florist business at East Orange, N. J., for the last twelve years, has sold his establishment to George Smith, head gardener to Mr. Colgate, of East Orange. The reason for selling was the poor health of Mrs. Massmann. Mr. Massmann and family will visit relatives in Germany next June. Mr. Smith will take possession on May 1 and will be succeeded at the Colgate place by George Reed, recently assistant to P. Riley at Flatbush.

Letters received from J. N. May bring encouraging news of his improvement in health under Florida skies. While not yet able to do much walking he finds much enjoyment in sailing, driving and fishing and manifests special delight in the companionship of a Marechal Niel rose blooming outside his window.

The stockholders of the Cut Flower Exchange, will, at their annual meeting in May, vote for five directors, in place of John Johnson (deceased), Philip Miller, William C. Duncan and Charles Smith of Woodside, and John Taylor of Bayside.

Philip Miller and John Mahacek, the expressmen of Long Island City, who have been delivering the baskets every morning to the Cut Flower Exchange, have dissolved partnership by mutual consent. Mr. Miller will continue the business.

Mrs. E. C. Matthies of Woodside, L. I., who has been sick most of the winter, has been removed to the German Hospital, New York, and hopes are entertained for her complete recovery.

E. C. Matthies was thrown from his wagon while driving past his home in Woodside, last Saturday, and was badly hurt, a cut in his scalp requiring six stitches to close it.

A couple of local lights furnished a few minutes strenuous entertainment, without gloves, at the Cut Flower Exchange last Monday morning.

The auction sales have begun and trade in this line opens merrily. Cleary had his first sale on Tuesday, March 22, at his new place.

A card "For Rent" adorns the window of the place on Twenty-ninth street occupied of late by Reidel & Spicer.

J. Bowne Hyatt has recovered from his late illness sufficiently to leave St. Luke's Hospital.

A visitor this week was Jac M. Jansen, with C. Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland.

Boston.

A fair amount of business is being done in a wholesale way and while flowers are low, as a rule, growers are making no complaint, being seemingly satisfied that the flower market is holding its own and will continue to do so. The influx of bulbous flowers is, as heretofore during March, quite heavy, and the smaller growers of this line of material have difficulty in realizing any profit on the goods, even when of the higher grades. Violets seem to take kindly to the sort of weather we have been partaking of and bid fair to be of much better quality than is generally seen at Easter. Notwithstanding the general impression that the lilies for Easter are badly behindhand, no verification of this is found in the stock of the various large operators in this vicinity, one and all being elated over the quality and confident of an exceptionally good showing for Easter. As a general thing the plants are much lower in stature than in past seasons. Crimson Rambblers do not seem to be in as forward condition as the lilies and a repetition of the experiences of past Easters when a good many unsold specimens have been left over is not likely this year.

R. D. Ireland died at his home in Ocean Spray, March 18. Although not engaged in the florists' business Mr. Ireland was an enthusiastic flower-lover and found his best-prized companionship among the florists, by whom he was esteemed highly for his good-hearted and companionable qualities. He had been in failing health for a year.

That splendid violet, Governor Herrick, from Mr. Carlton, of Willoughby, O., was on exhibition last week at Welch Brothers. Its fine keeping qualities were generally commented on.

Baltimore.

Trade is moderate; there are no glutts and no marked deficiencies of stock of cut flowers, and prices are fairly well maintained, the tendency for the time intervening till the Easter demand being on the declining side, though it is not marked. Good American Beauty are scarce; so are red roses of first quality.

Carnations are irregular in supply from day to day; whites are generally cleaned out at satisfactory figures, whilst red and pink are often left over. Violets are not abundant, nor in great demand either. Much uncertainty is felt as to the Easter supply. On almost every hand exist apprehensions that lilies will be behind time, and complaints as to the bad condition of hyacinths are general. The character of the bulbs sold last fall is widely impeached and grumbling, if not swearing, is loud and deep. Much cloudy weather adds to the uncertainty of the outlook. Though spring is here, by the almanac, the temperature and skies are anything but vernal, since every other day is cold, blustering or rainy, with not much intervening sunshine.

The recent death of one Mrs. Feast, and the announcement of the critical illness of another, recalls to the minds of the older horticulturists in this community two men, of whom these were the widows, who were pioneers in the trade here—John and Samuel Feast. They were brothers who emigrated to Baltimore probably in the first quarter of the last century from Yorkshire, England, and they were active for a great many years in business. John was a collector of rare and fine plants, and from time to time imported many specimens not commonly in cultivation. Samuel, who was nurseryman as well as florist, had a notable assemblage of striking trees in what is now Harlem Park, and produced some superb seedling camellias in the era when that flower was in its popularity, Feast's Perfection, Mrs. Lurman and others, also Cereus Feastii, a cactus with enormous flowers. He was also the originator of the Fillmore strawberry, one of the largest and best varieties ever produced. The firm now in the trade here is composed of his grandsons.

Henry Le Brun, one of the oldest of the gardeners in this community, celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday a few days ago, and was given a surprise visit from many of his neighbors and friends, who congratulated him on his years and continued health. Mr. Le Brun came to this country from France at a comparatively early age, and has long been engaged in the florist's business, as are his descendants to the third generation.

Hans Schuler, the son of Mrs. Schuler-Thomas, who carries on a successful florist's establishment on Saratoga street, is a sculptor with a studio in Paris, where he has done work which marks him as gifted with genius of no inferior degree. His latest work is a group of heroic size of "Adam and Eve," which will soon arrive in Baltimore and find a place in the galleries of the Peabody Institute.

Philip B. Welsh, who now has his new place near Glyndon in fine working order, and who has had his usual good success with Easter stock, has made arrangements to forward his plants by rail instead of hauling them into the city and has chartered several cars so as to bring in with the least handling his azaleas, lilies, hydrangeas, etc.

Edwin A. Seidewitz has leased a portion of his store on Lexington street to a phonograph firm, the demand for accommodations on the leading thoroughfares from concerns driven out of their former quarters by the fire not being by any means exhausted.

Except the bowling team very few members of the trade here have gone over to the meeting and show of the American Rose Society at Philadelphia this week, but some of our Baltimore roses are on exhibition.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club held its annual meeting Monday night and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President, John A. Cook.
Vice-president, Fred C. Bauer.
Secretary, John J. Perry.
Treasurer, F. G. Berger.
Financial secretary, Phil. B. Welsh.
Librarian, Chas. M. Wagner.

Washington, D. C.

With the abundance of stock and good weather that brought out the buyers, the retailers had no reason to complain of the condition of trade last week. The fancy prices that ruled during the fashionable season are fading away, to Palm Beach and other seasonable resorts. Prices for good stock are not demoralized, but have simply come down a peg or two, and as a result the great middle class is now buying more freely. Good roses seldom go begging in this market and there is little danger that they ever will. In carnations there seems to be a scarcity of good reds. Estelle and Crane about comprise the stock to choose from in that color, and they are not plentiful. Violets may "cost twice as much per gal" in Chicago and other cities, where the octopus is on its native heath, so to speak, but that is not true of Washington. There are so many trust-busters about capitol hill and the octopus is so "skeered" of them that he generally sneaks in here under an alias. But as to violets: The Virginia violets are in the market in quantities and selling at low prices. Fred H. Kramer, a Centre market dealer, had a bargain-day sale of them recently, and says he sold $5,000 at 10 cents per bunch of fifty on that one day. There is an over-abundance of narcissi, and plenty of tulips to supply the demand, although the variety is not great. A leading retailer told me recently that having an order for several dozen Murillo only one grower could supply them. There is a good supply of Easter stock in sight at the local greenhouses and in addition to this several of the retailers will draw on the Philadelphia market.

On a recent visit to the American Rose Company's range, I found Manager Durfee busy among his seedling carnations, which are of infinite variety. He has one yellow seedling that may yet fill a vacancy in the carnation world. As the name indicates, roses are the principal crop grown at this range but they have also thousands of lilies, two houses of A. Sprengeri and a variety of other stock.

St. Patrick's day brought some business in shamrocks and other greens for decorative purposes. There are skeptics and scoffers who say that most of the "shamrocks" sold here are New Jersey clover, grown in Philadelphia. Geo. H. Cooke made quite a hit with shamrocks—the real thing—in 2-inch pots, with a miniature flag of Erin for a consolation prize, thrown in.

Indications point to an early adjournment of congress, probably not later than April 15, and within the next few weeks there will doubtless be a number of dinners and entertainments of the farewell-till-we-meet-again order which should call for good decorations.

Clarke Brothers, who are neighbors to the American Rose Company have a fine lot of rhododendrons and grow a general stock.

J. Ringier, representing Bobbink & Atkins, of Rutherford, N. J., has recently been calling on the local growers.

Cleveland.

Quite a change has taken place in market conditions the last week. Carnations are having a run and everything salable is picked up every morning. Prices have increased fully one-third. White and pink roses are in good demand. Red roses seem to hang fire; even bulbous stock is moving better. This sudden change of conditions is only another instance of the erratic way in which stock has sold this season. Let us hope these improved conditions will stay with us for a longer spell than usual. Easter plants are being hustled along, and from all reports there will not be a scarcity of anything in the plant line, except possibly Crimson Ramblers, and if we get plenty of sunshine for the next couple of weeks there will be plenty of those. John Merkle, of Mentor, has a splendid lot, but it will require some strong measures to get them all in. The lilies promise to be very plentiful and fine, nearly all Japan longiflorums are being grown, the percentage of diseased plants being less than other years. Bermuda grown longiflorums are no better than the Harrisii, and, if anything, not as good.

There seems to be an epidemic of eel worm among the rose growers hereabouts this year. Nearly every grower has had trouble more or less from this insidious pest. Can anyone explain the reason why? Last year there were scarcely any traces of it, yet this year nearly everyone is complaining about this and club root, and we take it for granted where the roots are clubbed eel worm exists. It often strikes me forcibly that this condition of club root is often brought about by causes other than eel worm. If not, why don't we have the same conditions every year? I have personal knowledge of one instance where plants last year showed evidence of a very bad attack, yet these same plants this season are absolutely free from the disease and grown right along in the same soil. They were dried off for a few weeks last summer and started up with a slight top-dressing of soil and manure, and have been the picture of health since. Verily, as Brother Simpson says, the trials and the tribulations of the rose grower are many, and his reward ought to be great hereafter.

The usual display and prize competition will be held in the Sheriff street market Easter Saturday. This event is looked forward to with keen interest by the patrons of the market. Quite elaborate displays are made by the stall holders. About a dozen florists sell their products there. This last season has been a poor one for the majority of them. The only thing that sold well were the dear old grandmother bouquets, those with the ruffles preferred. ECHO.

Pittsburg.

The month of March has been generous in contributing several delightful days. Business is not increasing in strides, but there is a noticeable improvement. There is little doubt about the supply of all kinds of stock for Easter. Stock conditions are well regulated. There is no surplus in anything. Lots of good Bride and Bridesmaid roses in different grades are coming in. Carnations, too, are plentiful and fine. Violets are rapidly passing out. Marguerites, lily of the valley, Harrisii, mignonette and all bulbous stock are good.

"Carnation night" surpassed the expectations of the Pittsburg Florists' and Gardeners' Club members, who devoted the evening of March 15 to the inspection and discussion of the many kinds of carnations exhibited at the club quarters. Blooms were displayed by local and distant growers. Interest was centered in Mr. Murchie's Fred Burki and the White Lawson shown by F. R. Pierson.

The attendance was good and the various exhibits tastefully and effectively arranged. Visitors were William Craig, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. Dumont, of Dumont & Company, Philadelphia; A. Rolker, of A. Rolker & Sons, New York city; Arthur Langhaus, of Wheeling, W. Va. The following were exhibitors:

John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., showed Imperial, variegated; John E. Haines, red; Star of Bethlehem, yellow; Juno, scarlet, and No. 77, pink.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Company, Joliet, Ill., showed Estelle, red, and Nelson Fisher, red.

R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, O., showed The Cardinal.

Charles Frueh & Son, Saginaw, Mich., showed Seedling No. 115, red.

The F. R. Pierson Company, Tarrytown, N. Y., showed Enchantress, Adonis, Daheim, dark red, and White Lawson.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., showed New Daybreak.

W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, N. Y., showed Red Lawson.

Basset & Washburn, Chicago, Ill., showed Madame Chatenay roses.

John Murchie, Sharon, Pa., showed Fred Burki.

H. R. Carlton, Willoughby, O., showed his new single violet, Governor Herrick.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Company showed Governor Roosevelt, Midnight Sun, Mrs. Bradt, and all kinds of cut flowers.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Company, Bakerstown, Pa., showed Lillian Pond, Estelle, Enchantress, Lawson, Cressbrook, Floriana, Higinbotham, Lorna, Queen, Alba, Norway, Prosperity, Adonis, Palmer, Boston Market, White Cloud, Genevieve Lord and Joost.

E. C. Ludwig, of Allegheny, Pa., showed a fine bunch of carnations of assorted colors.

J. L. Wyland, De Haven, Pa., showed Mrs. Lawson and Enchantress.

H. L. Blind & Brothers, Westview, Pa., showed Queen Louise, White Cloud, Cressbrook, Norway, Enchantress, Adonis, Mrs. Lawson, Nelson and Genevieve Lord.

Superintendents Burke and Hamilton, of the Pittsburg and Allegheny parks, respectively, have been getting their houses in shape for their Easter displays.

Graves & Reisch, of Beloit, O., have leased the plant of J. E. Bonsall, of Salem, O. They will take possession in April.

J. B. Murdoch & Company are cutting some fine Bridesmaid roses and Mrs. Lawson and Marquis carnations.

P. J. Decmas, of the Florists' Exchange, will go to Chicago this week to buy stock for Easter. E. L. M.

Cincinnati.

Trade since our last report has been very good and stocks of all kinds moved exceedingly well. At times it was a difficult matter to get flowers enough to fill orders with. However, since Monday conditions have changed and it is now a question of moving stock, there being very little business outside of funeral work, which consumes quite a lot of the white flowers. Bulbous stock is still in over-supply and the way prices are being slaughtered it is a mystery to the writer how some of the growers are going to pay their bulb bills. Roses and carnations will be in good supply for Easter, in fact, seasonable flowers of all kinds will be equal to the demand. Green goods, such as smilax, fern leaves and asparagus are very scarce, notably fern leaves, which have reached $4 per 1000 in price.

Max Rudolph & Company will have a nice lot of carnations and roses for Easter and Geo. Corbett will cut some of those fine Lawsons, also callas, Harrisii, etc. His house of Asparagus plumosus will be ready to cut in about two weeks. Mr. Corbett also has a fine lot of bedding plants coming along which he claims is his main business, but from the appearance of the houses in which he grows cut flowers, we have to admit he is some pumpkins at growing cut flowers too.

The writer had occasion last Monday to go to College Hill, and while there called on several of the florists. At Walter Gray's place the roses promise a very nice crop for Easter. He will also be able to cut several hundred good calla lilies. One sash house containing several thousand longiflorums will be good stock for May and June.

Wm. Murphy is busy moving. He has rented three rooms on the second floor in the same building where he is located at present, and when everything is finished he will have very pleasant quarters.

On Tuesday we had a heavy rain which included a lot of hail, but up to the present writing we have not heard of any damage being done. A. O.

New Bedford, Mass.

The growers are hustling to get their lilies in for Easter. Probably not more than half of them will be bloomed in time. A good many will be brought from out of town. Bulbous stock and flowering plants of all kinds will be plentiful. S. S. Peckham has a very fine lot of bulbous stock, hybrid roses, azaleas, genistas, etc.

The annual meeting and supper of the New Bedford Florists' Club was held at the Mansion House and the following officers were elected: President, E. Y. Pierce; vice-president, A. B. Hathaway; secretary, Wm. P. Pierce; treasurer, Wm. Brown; executive committee, Geo. Pasel, S. S. Peckham and Mr. Hoxie.

A paper on violets was read by E. Y. Pierce. The new committee having charge of the supper made a small change in the menu by leaving out all drinkables except coffee.

R. H. Woodhouse's place is also full of flowering plants of all kinds. E. G. Davis is in with a house full of lilies. Richard Nofitz makes a specialty of bulbous stock and azaleas. E. Y. Pierce, A. Jahn and Wm. Brown have azaleas and lilies in abundance. A. B. H.

Minneapolis.

Trade is dull. Stock is plentiful in all varieties and grades. There will be no rise in prices until Easter, the approach of which is welcomed by all. Easter promises to be an eventful one. Good orders will be handled and first-class stock will be available to fill them with.

O. S. Swanson had a display of red, white and assorted tulips in boxes, with a background of palms and ferns for Saturday's attraction.

Some choice cinerarias were observed in R. A. Latham's store. They found ready purchasers. C. F. R.

Too Much Nitrate of Soda.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please give me an opinion as to the trouble with the enclosed Norway carnation bloom, cut from an apparently healthy plant with a good stem. A good share of the blooms come like the enclosed, small and shriveled. G. D. C.

The flower was well dried out on that the plants had been given too much

Store and Greenhouse Heating.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We wish to heat a flower store 16x24 and lean-to conservatory 10x14. Which would be best, hot water, hot air or a combination furnace with hot air register in the store and hot water in the greenhouse? We lack room for hot water radiators in the store.

S. H. D. & S.

Hot air will be quite undesirable for heating either the flower store or the conservatory, but if there is no place for either a wall-coil or a radiator in the store a register could be used in connection with a combination heater supplying hot air to the conservatory.

Piping for Violet House.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—How many runs of 2-inch pipe and what size of boiler do I need for heating a house 24x72 with double span sash roof, hot water to be used? The house is to be kept at 45° at night. It has solid benches for violet growing. Outside the thermometer goes in very severe winters 12° below zero.

A. R. L.

The amount of radiation will depend a good deal on the exposure and the construction of the houses. It will require two 2½-inch flow pipes and from eight to ten 2-inch returns. Under favorable conditions the smaller number should suffice. If for any reason 2-inch pipes must be used as flows, it will be well to use either eleven or twelve pipes, of which three and preferably four should be flows. The house will contain rather more than 500 square feet of radiating surface, and the boiler should be one rated for 700 to 800 square feet of radia-

Piping for Greenhouse.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I wish to pipe a greenhouse, 30x150, even span, running east and west, 14 feet to the ridge, side 4 feet six inches, 24 inches of which will be glass. The temperature needed is 60°.
The situation is rather exposed to southwest winds, especially the west end. I desire to use 2-inch pipe or 2½ inch flows with 2-inch returns. I do not want any overhead heat but would like most of the pipes to be on the side walls or the flows on the walls returning under the benches, if you think that feasible. There will be about 10-feet north of the greenhouse in a cellar not more than 6 feet deep.

ENQUIRER.

The exact location of the boiler is not stated, but if near the end of the house the coils can run the entire length of the house. If near the centre the coils can extend in either direction from that point.
It will be desirable to use six 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns. If the walks extend along the walls it would be well to have one flow pipe and two returns on each wall and under each

OBITUARY.

Edgar J. Bowen.

Edgar J. Bowen, the well known San Francisco seedsman, died March 7, of apoplexy at his home on Vallejo street, in his 72nd year. Mr. Bowen was the head of the firm of E. J. Bowen and went to San Francisco after the Chicago fire and started in the seed business with a very limited capital. He was the son of a physician and hailed originally from western New York. He was known far and wide for his benefactions. For some time he was a member of the board of education of San Francisco and of the Young Men's Christian Association.
Booker Washington's University at Tuskegee, the Geographical Society of the Pacific and the Associated Charities were favored by his support and he acted as a director for the two last named organizations. Mr. Bowen left a widow to mourn his death, his two children having died some time ago. See portrait

FLORISTS' AMERICAN EXCHANGE

While there is an amount of correspondence being conducted in answer to inquiries to our several pointers and inquiries published thus far, there is none too much to receive our prompt and careful attention. Our office is now well equipped and we earnestly request anyone who has any desire to buy or sell to immediately send us a written statement of whatever these desires may be. Do not suppose that we can publish all we have to offer, and do not make the mistake of waiting for the publication of something exactly suited to your requirements. Our files are large and varied, and we shall be pleased to send anyone a moderate-sized list of opportunities available if they but give us a fair idea of their requirements.

Pointer No. 19. An opportunity for a good landscapergardener to enter into partnership with established firm. Will require no more than $1000 investment as a pledge of good faith and sincerity. We understand there is no limit to the amount of business that can be done if the proper partner with the requisite skill and intelligence is forthcoming. The field of operations is in and about the city of Chicago, Ill.

Pointer No. 20. A greenhouse property for sale in an Illinois city. Two lots, a six-room framedwelling, three greenhouses heated by hot water, wagon, tools, stock, etc. Good market. The price and terms with a more detailed description will be found interesting. This, like many of our offerings, gives you a better start than you could ever get by establishing a new place.

A Hint to the Wise. Knowing of what use holly has been for the past twenty years, could you make any money by being the first to establish the traffic? How about Alabama smilax? If it were possible to go back ten years do you think you could venture your spare cash and energy in handling it for profit? Well, there is something better than the holly and equal to the Alabama smilax. In many ways more beautiful. Can be handled every day in the year. Stands shipment better than smilax. Is has been tried by parties who know what is needed. We intend to organize a company of a moderate size for next season's business. It will require a good reliable person in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Cincinnati and Denver, besides a manager to attend to gathering, growing and shipping, with some working capital, about $2,500 will do for a start. If you feel interested let us hear from you.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

The Seed Trade.

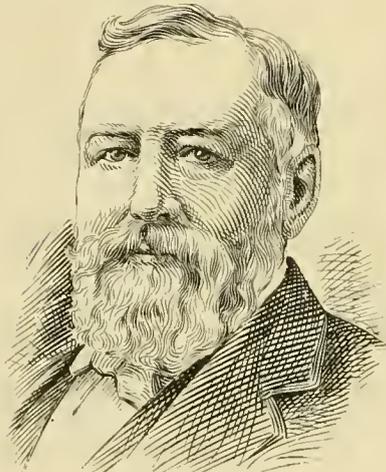

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Chas. McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.
Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21, 1904.

VISITED CHICAGO.—Alfred J. Brown, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

FINE rains have fallen in the seed growing districts of California where the lack of rain is usually most feared and sufficient seems now to be assured.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The Geo. A. Weaver Company reports that while Rhode Island Bent Grass seed is no higher in price than previous seasons, that choice samples are not very plentiful—in fact the crop is not quite up to the average in quantity.

BEFORE the board of general appraisers, March 1, 1904, certain merchandise classified as seed peas under paragraph 250, tariff act of 1897, was claimed to be dutiable under the provision for dried peas under the same paragraph, and the protest was sustained.

FLOODS March 1 in the Sacramento valley, California, district have submerged the fertile islands in the river which were protected by levees and devoted to vegetable and seed growing. The Cox Seed Company reports that all of its growing contracts must be cancelled.

ONION seed is bound to be in better demand than anticipated and the supply may not be so much in excess of the demand as has been supposed.

The above clipping is a pleasing illustration of indefiniteness. A correspondent asks, "About how good a demand was anticipated and about how large an excess was supposed, and lastly about what will be the excess supply?"

St. Louis.

Mrs. Mary H. Ostertag, a florist of 506 North Grand avenue, has asked the police to arrest a man who worked a shrewd game March 18. He claimed to be houseman for "Mrs. Fischer," 4038 Westminster place, and, calling at the Ostertag Floral Co., stated that "Mrs. Fischer," was going to give a house party and wanted to rent three palms. Mrs. Ostertag sent the palms by a boy. The man took the plants and told the boy to bring three more. Police inquiry developed that no "Mrs. Fischer" lives at the address. The thief had asked permission to leave the palms in the yard for a few minutes, but took them away immediately.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—The annual meeting and banquet of the New Bedford Florists' club was held March 10 at the Mansion house, when seventeen members of the club had a very enjoyable time. Officers were elected as follows: President, E. Y. Pierce; vice-president, A. B. Hathaway; treasurer, W. L. G. Brown; secretary, William P. Pierce; executive committee, R. S. Hoxie, S. S. Tucker and J. H. Gray.

The Nursery Trade

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn., Pres.; Frank A. Weber, St. Louis, Mo., Vice-Pres.; George C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

VISITED CHICAGO: S. Mendelson Meehan, of Thomas Meehan & Sons, Philadelphia, Pa.

FLORENCE, COL.—A heavy snow of March 12 imperils the prospective fruit crop. The trees are almost in bloom.

SINGLE eyes in grape vines and similar subjects make the best cuttings, the growth starting advantageously low, close to the sand.

CUTTINGS of hardy shrubs and trees should be secured before the wood has become frozen and kept protected from frost, otherwise success is doubtful.

Retail Men Band at Rochester.

The National Association of Retail Nurserymen, planned at a meeting held in Rochester, N. Y., March 10, was formally organized at a banquet in Powers hotel, Rochester, March 19, when a constitution was adopted and officers and an executive committee elected. While dealers of western New York organized the association it will admit members from throughout the United States. The officers are:

President—William Pitkin, of Rochester.
Vice-President—O. G. Chase, of Geneva.
Secretary-Treasurer—John B. Kiley, of Rochester.

Executive committee—C. H. Stuart, of Newark; E. S. Osborne, of Rochester, and Walter W. Wyman, of Rochester.

The objects of the association are to promote cordial business relations among its members, to advance their interests and prosperity, and to deal with any important matter that may arise in connection with the nursery business. The following firms were represented at the dinner:

- | | |
|----------------------|-----------------------|
| Allen Nursery Co. | H. J. Bowden |
| Brown Bros. Co. | E. J. Bowden & Co. |
| G. Costich & Co. | Chase Bros. Co. |
| Charlton Nursery Co. | Charles H. Chase |
| Ellwanger & Barry | Glen Bros. |
| F. E. Grover & Co. | Graham Nursery Co. |
| Hooker, Wyman & Co. | Hawks Nursery Co. |
| R. D. Luetchford | George Moulson & Son |
| Oliver Bros. Co. | Rochester Nursery Co. |
| H. S. Taylor & Co. | Western New York Nur- |
| Irving Rouse | sery Co. |
| C. L. Yates | Pinnacle Nursery Co. |

Clark Nursery Co. Peirson Bros., Waterloo.
C. W. Stuart & Co., R. G. Chase Co., Geneva.
Newark.

The following nurserymen from out of the city were at the banquet: C. W. Stuart, J. M. Pitkin, Jr., W. M. Gould and F. M. Phelps, of Newark; O. G. Chase and G. R. Watson, of Geneva; H. W. Clark and S. J. Peirson, of Waterloo. William C. Barry addressed the nurserymen on the value of trade organizations and social gatherings.

At Philadelphia.

The three-cornered match between Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia was in every way a success, at least for the local boys, as they won from Baltimore by one hundred pins, which puts them in the lead for the silver cup. There is to be another match in Washington in the near future. Total pins in all three matches is to decide the contest. George Moss covered himself with glory by making 244 for high single game and a total of 604 in the three. The score follows:

At New York.

Monday night at the bowling alleys is gradually assuming importance as an indispensable function, and a goodly party is now assured at each meeting. Last Monday there were ten bowlers and would-be bowlers in attendance. The scores are appended without comment further than that the figures, truthful as they are, do not tell half the story of the occasion:

NEWPORT, R. I.—The greenhouses and contents belonging to Mrs. Ogden Golet narrowly escaped destruction by fire on March 16. The flames started in the boiler room where they did a damage of $500 but were prevented by the firemen from spreading to the grapeery adjoining where the loss would have been very heavy.

New Rose General MacArthur

Hybrid Tea.

Color by far the most brilliant of any shade of crimson forcing rose ever offered, retaining its brilliancy when fully expanded. It is also one of the very sweetest varieties ever offered, of very easy culture, as it can be grown in the same temperature as an ordinary Tea variety such as Bride. It is a good, strong, vigorous grower, producing stems 24 to 30 inches long, a free and continuous producer. It can be grown at much less cost than Meteor or Liberty and is a much brighter color than either. Also larger when fully expanded. We predict that this will be the red rose for the multitude. Ready for distribution April 1, 1904.

CRISIS

— THE NEW — SCARLET CARNATION

Which will be disseminated February 1904, is beyond the shadow of a doubt, the finest commercial scarlet, now offered for sale. It is a fine shipper, excellent keeper and a continuous bloomer. Stems measure from 24 inches to 30 inches blooms measure 3 inches and over, color is a fiery red, and we have not had one bursted calyx in our four years' experience with it. It is also a strong grower, and produces more cuttings than Adonis or any other scarlet we have on our place.

We are now booking orders at the following prices:

$2.00 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.
$95.00 per 1000 in lots of 5000.

COME AND SEE IT GROW.

Davis Bros., Bloomsburg, Pa.—

BLOOMSBURG, PA., Mar. 18, 1904.

Gentlemen:—Please hook my order for 5,000 of your new red carnation "Crisis." I have watched this carnation for the last three years and I believe it is the best red carnation in cultivation to-day. I sold several thousand blooms of this variety for you last year. It proved to be a good shipper and always gave satisfaction.

Yours very respectfully, J. L. DILLON.

Cardinal New Roses Enchantress

Read Testimonials from two of the largest growers in Washington who have bought a large number of plants after seeing them growing at my place.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27, 1904.
Your new Rose Cardinal came duly to hand, and we firmly believe it will have a great future and will certainly be a money-maker, as it is in a class all to itself, being superior in form and habit to anything that we have as yet seen. Your new rose Enchantress we also think will be a great money-maker, judging from its profuse blooming quality, as we have seen it several times in mid-winter. It cannot help being a winner. Wishing you every success, we remain,
Yours truly, A. GUDÉ & BRO.

AMERICAN ROSE COMPANY, 909 F Street, WASHINGTON, March 17, 1904.
Dear Sir:—We gave all the show possible to Enchantress and Cardinal, placing them in our window with placards, telling what they were. They kept a week, retaining their brilliant color to the last. Cardinal was as full of perfume the day the petals dropped, as when it was first cut. The roses are both matchless, and we believe destined to out-class all roses of their color for forcing under-glass.
Very sincerely yours, AMERICAN ROSE CO., per B. D.

Detroit.

Preparations for Easter trade are now engaging the attentions of both retailers and growers, and many of the latter are complaining about the condition of much of their stock of Easter lilies, which show considerable disease, particularly the Harrisii, although it is expected that the supply of fairly good ones will about equal the demand. There will not be the usual over-supply of other bulbous stock this season, as much of it was frozen this winter where it was stored outside. Indications point to an extra supply of violets. Carnations, too, will be plentiful, while the stock of roses, locally grown, will be short of the demand.

A monster meeting of the Florists' Club was held Wednesday evening, March 16. All the affairs connected with the carnation meeting were reviewed, and the bills all paid. The matter has now passed into history, but many pleasant memories of the event will be long entertained by the many participants. The club's treasury was amply prepared for all demands made upon it. Furthermore a notice has already been given of a proposed amendment to the by-laws, which will be acted upon at the next regular meeting, reducing the dues one-half the present amount.

The erection of a new building has been begun on Miami avenue, which will be occupied when completed by the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

W. B. Brown is now the sole proprietor of the business heretofore known as Brown & Northcott, retail florists, 308 Woodward avenue.

The many friends of Andrew Ferguson sympathize with him in the loss of his mother, who died recently.

Fred Breitmeyer is attending the meeting of the American Rose Society at Philadelphia this week.

Franz Holznagle was recently re-elected president of Highland Park village council.

Visitors were: James McHutchison, Thomas Wade and Leopold Oesternal, New York; H. Thiernam, Owosso, Mich.; J. Blokker, Holland; Harry D. Byers, Dayton, O. J. F. S.

Elmira, N. Y.

A meeting of the directors of the United States Cut Flower Company was held at Elmira, N. Y., March 12. The contracts for the iron work on the new ranges were let to the King Construction Company, of North Tonawanda, N. Y. The general plans for the plant of 1,000,000 square feet of glass are being prepared by Roht. W. King & Company, consulting engineers for the King Construction Company.

About 100,000 feet of glass will be erected this year. The heating system of the plant will be laid out in the lines indicated by Mr. King in his paper recently read before the Chicago Florists' Club. The patents covering this system are controlled by the King Construction Company. William Algie, one of the executors of the H. Dale estate of Brampton, Ont., is the president and general manager of the United States Cut Flower Company.

San Francisco.

The spring exhibition of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society will be held in the grand nave, Ferry building, May 12, 13 and 14. An attractive list of premiums for cut flowers and plants is offered. H. Plath, 510 Wyoming avenue, San Francisco, Cal., is the manager.

Buffalo.

Trade is as good as one can expect with four inches of snow on the ground until Sunday and accompanied by dark days. We have had fully six hours of sunshine this month but to-day is fine and springlike. All greenhouse men are attending church and praying for sunshine. Without the latter a scarcity of lilies will be the word in Buffalo.

The controversy between the florists and the Buffalo cemetery, Forest Lawn, has been settled by the cemetery people rescinding that portion of their resolution wherein they were to do the watering, which is a wise move on their part as it would have been a very unpleasant and unnecessary fight and the adjusting of it is a good thing.

The dissolution of partnership of Byrne & Slattery was a surprise to the trade. Mr. Slattery is now at Palmer's lower store. Byrne Brothers is the name of the new firm on Main street.

The Buffalo Kennel Club is having a show this week. S. A. Anderson showed a setter dog made of carnations on a panel 4x6 feet which attracted a great deal of attention.

From observation and reports the supply of azaleas, tulips, daffodils and other bulb stock will be equal to the demand for Easter. Genistas are fine at all the greenhouses.

For St. Patrick's day Palmer had potatoes tied with green ribbon in his window which was very pretty and novel.

W. F. Kasting is the busiest man in the city getting ready for Easter and arranging for his removal.

The Florists' Club will have its election and banquet after Easter.

Miss Margaret Skinner is now at work after her serious illness.

J. H. Rebstock expects a big show of bulb stock for Easter.

ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

Newport, R. I.

The florists here have had very dull business lately, and were it not for the funeral work things would indeed be serious; but better days are coming, when it will take less coal and more flowers will be wanted. It does not look like a very good Easter business this year, but the florists are hoping for the best, and the weather may come better; but even then good plants will be short here, as the winter has been so severe and coal so much used, that what few plants there are have cost more than they can possibly be sold for. Easter lilies will be scarce here and must be purchased out of town, as they have made slow growth, and few will be in good bloom by April 3.

The meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, Wednesday evening, was addressed by Kenyon L. Butterfield, president of the Rhode Island College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. Mr. Butterfield's paper on "Education and the Modern Farmer" was very much enjoyed by a large audience. After the discussion which followed a nice collation was served and a social evening passed.

Things outdoors are very slow as there is deep frost in the ground yet, and it will take two or three weeks of good weather before planting can be done; one day will be fine and fairly warm and the next cold. This week we had snow and then rain—then soft, and then 14° of frost, and so it goes.

The Vanderbilts, Berwinds, and many other New York and Boston families are preparing to open their estates for the coming summer and business in all lines will soon be much better; many of the gardeners of these larger places already are purchasing their supplies.

Milwaukee.

Trade has been excellent. Stock has cleared out at good figures. Greens of all kinds are selling well with a decided scarcity in smilax. Some fine adiantum has been noted. Bulbous flowers which for a long time were very slow sale have moved fairly well lately. The prospects for a good Easter trade are bright but there is no doubt that there will be enough stock to go around. There is some difference in opinion in regard to the Easter lily situation but without doubt sufficient will be on hand. The plant growers have been busy lately with orders. There is ready sale for such stock as Boston ferns, kentias, lilacs, hydrangeas, azaleas and spiraeas.

At a meeting of the Outdoor Art Association March 19 Mrs. C. B. Whitnall told of the gardening work at the social settlements. She said early work was being begun in window boxes. Early vegetables, scarlet runner beans, pansies and similar seeds will be sowed. C. G. Carpenter of the park board gave some helpful suggestions for garden work.

The Milwaukee Gardeners' Association has decided to move to its new headquarters on Filth street from the German market on March 30. A monster parade has been arranged.

A. Billings, of Cudahy, has a fine lot of longiflorums for Easter. A. V. H.

HEADQUARTERS FOR EASTER PLANTS.

Blooming Easter Week or from now if desired. I am noted for the past years and have a reputation among the trade all over the land, for growing a large and abundant assortment of choice Easter blooming plants of every description. I have an immense stock in large houses and 15 hot beds are crowded to their full extent, in better shade and condition than ever before. Azalea Indica; 3 houses filled with this only choice American variety. I know exactly what my customers and the public want. My son Howard and I went to Europe last summer on account of the scarcity of Mme. Van der Cruyssen azaleas, and must say with great pleasure that we were successful in obtaining 2,000 of this beautiful variety alone and offer them now as the gem of my stock only; none of it has been picked out by fall sales and I have the residue left. I make it a rule not to offer any in the fall outside of Xmas. Please note my prices of the 2,000 Mme. Van der Cruyssen; 6, 7, 8-inch, 60c, 75c to $1.00 each; specimens, $1.25 to $1.50 each. These are as good as an apple and covered with buds. Other varieties of which we have a large stock: B. A. Alba, Niohe, double white, Empress of India, Prof. Walter Vermeriana, Dr. Moore, Loo, Dr. Manhurst, Paul Weber, Simon Rucker, Lustre and about 12 more leading varieties, 6, 7, 8-inch pots, 50c, 60c, 75c, 90c, $1.00 each; specimens, $1.25, $1.50 each. If pots are not wanted we take the fresh soil off, because Azaleas never make new roots during winter; that makes packing light and safe and reduces the express charges considerably.

Lilium Harrisii and Japan Multiflorum. Have about 2,000 to offer. Raised only from special brand bulbs of Mr. H. F. Michell at the cost of $100.00 per 1000; 6-inch pots, from 5 to 8 buds to a plant, 10c per bud; under 5 buds, 12 cents.

Cineraria Hyb. Have a house of 2,000, 6-inch pots, all shades, from Mr. H. F. Michell's last strain. $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per dozen.

Hydrangea Otaksa, 6 to 7-in. pots, from $4.00, $5.00, $6.00, $7.00 to $12.00 per dozen.

Daisies, white, (Marguerite), 6-inch pots, $3.00 per dozen.

Begonias, Pres. Carnot, 6-in. pots, $3.00 per doz. mixed, with or without bloom, 4 in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

" Vernou, in bloom, 4-in. pots, $1.50 per doz.

Hyacinths, only the choicest of my own importation, all shades, $10.00 per 100.

Tulips, Tournesdale, double red or yellow, best selling tulips, 3 in a pot, 4-in. pots, $1.50 per doz.

Daffodils, Von Zion, best double nosed, 3 in a 5 1/4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.

Araucaria Excelsa, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 22, 23 to 26 inches, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 each; 8-in. pots, 28 to 35 in. high, perfect jewels, $3.00 to $3.50 each; worth $5.00 each easy; 5 1/4-in. pots, 3 tiers, 50c; 4 to 5-in. slightly damaged, 25c, 30c to 40c.

Ficus Elastica, Rubber Plants, 6-inch pots, from 20 to 28 in. high, $5.00 and $6.00 per doz.

Dracaena Bruanti, 22 to 25 in. high, good for decoration, 35c to 50c each.

Smith's Hyb. Moon Vines, best in the world, 2 1/2-inch pots, $5.00 per 100.

Herbert G. Walker was recently the defendant in a suit for $1,000 damages for malicious prosecution. The judge gave peremptory instructions for the defendant. The case grew out of F. Walker & Company placing signs telling of their removal to a new store in a yard rented by them. The occupants of the upstairs apartments repeatedly removed the signs and were arrested for disorderly conduct. The charge was dismissed and the suit then filed for damages with result as above in Mr. Walker's favor.

The Kentucky Society of Florists' carnation exhibit was held at the residence of Jacob Schulz. The show was a fine one and largely attended. Vases of several of the new varieties of roses attracted considerable attention. Refreshments were served and a good time generally enjoyed by the florists attending.

Chas. Rayner bought what he supposed was the best putty but which proved to be about as useful as that much mud when he constructed his new range of houses. He intends to sue the seller for damages.

Wood, Stubbs & Company are doing a good business in seeds. They publish a very attractive little book on "How to make a lawn," advertising their grass seed.

Notwithstanding much bad weather business has been very good the first half of March. The spring openings of the stores have helped in keeping things lively.

Jacob Schulz is very successful with Enchantress. He finds ready sale at $1.50 per dozen. Ordinary carnations sell for 60 cents per dozen at present.

F. Walker & Company and Nanz & Neuner have issued attractive spring catalogues and are doing a good mail order business.

Fred. Klink, foreman for E. G. Reimers, has gone into business for himself and has built two greenhouses.

C. H. Kunzman is cutting some fine Prosperity carnations and is bringing in fine pot plants of hyacinths and tulips.

The Sunrise rose is a favorite in Louisville. H. G. W.

Oceanic, N. J.

The regular meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held at Oceanic, N. J., March 18. Geo. H. Hale showed some of his beautiful Princess of Wales violets, which scored 95 points. He had Amaryllis Johnsoni, which scored 90 points, and Von Sion narcissi, receiving 70 points.

The discussion of the evening was "What constitutes a table plant?" The members came to the conclusion that a table plant should not be more than twenty inches high. A visitor was W. M. Campbell, of Vaughan's greenhouses, Chicago and New York, who showed a truss of the Rose Madame Norbert Levassieur, a cross between Crimson Rambler and a polyantha. The plant grows from eighteen to twenty inches high, and can be well used for the border of a rosebed. The judges of the evening were A. Williams, John Yoemans and N. Butterbach. B.

An effort is being made to interest the florists of this city in a movement which has for its object the holding of a flower show in Convention hall next November. It is understood that the directors of Convention hall are in favor of holding the show, but they are of the opinion that the florists should take more interest in the plans and management than they have in the past. "Uncle John" Thorpe, who was the superintendent of the two flower shows heretofore given in Convention hall, is getting very restless over the interest shown here. He is at his home in Chicago. He has written to several friends here, urging them to take part in the movement for holding a show and has advised several florists that it is their duty to take the lead. W. L. Rock is now working among the florists on the lines suggested by Mr. Thorpe and will probably issue a call for a meeting soon.

The greenhouse owned by Charles Semmler is a wreck and all of the flowers are ruined. The hail did the damage and the loss will reach $1,500.

Lowell, Mass.

Business is apparently trying to make good for the dull spell of the last two months. The demand for flowers for funerals has been heavy. Once more we are enjoying good weather. The severe winter seems to have closed. With Easter near everyone is bustling and anticipating a big business. The plant men promise plants and flowers galore. A good many of the Easter lilies sold here come from E. N. Peirce & Sons, of Waltham, the largest grower of Easter lilies in New England. The supply of bulbous flowers is heavy. Paper Whites, tulips of all colors, with no end of daffodils, and Dutch hyacinths, have certainly had telling effect in bringing down carnations from their high perch. Lawson, Enchantress and all the other top-notchers have had a bad tumble in price. Blooms of excellent quality at present are only bringing in $2 to $3 per 100. The violet supply is nearly exhausted, owing to the heavy demands of late.

M. A. Patten & Company are sending to town some Enchantress that are hardly out of the box before they are sold.

A. C. Tingley is cutting callas in large quantities. A. M.

AMERICAN FLORIST

When you write to an advertiser.

Toronto, Ont.

Business is steadily increasing, and not so erratic as lately though the weather is still unfavorable. Roses in all varieties are more plentiful. Bulbous stock is not in an over supply as last week and prizes are more firm. Carnations are plentiful and a very good grade. The outlook for Easter is propitious. All kinds of flowering plants will be numerous, carnations in full crop and roses fair. Harrisii now looks as though it would need a little extra firing.

The regular monthly meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was well attended. Business relating to the carnation show took up most of the evening. The judges' report was accepted.

March 17 was marked by a very good day's business. The weather moderated and banquets helped to keep the retailers busy. All the smaller oxalis plants were sold out early in the morning.

E. Crowhurst, of Humber bay, is at present cutting some very good carnations. He has not been in the business very many years. H. G. D.

Providence, R. I.

Roses and carnations are abundant, and the former are inclined to an overplus at erratic figures. We sincerely hope that the present good weather may last till Easter and produce a good cut. Business is between medium and good. Lilies are in doubt, the probability of small receipts being admitted generally. Other Easter stock is abundant.

The Florists' Club holds a flower exhibition the second Thursday in April, and all florists are requested to stage something to show their merits. M.

I WISH TO CALL YOUR ATTENTION TO

The New DUPLEX IRON GUTTER

Made of the best and strongest material. Over six miles of it in use and still an infant. Gives best results. No ice, snow or drip this severe winter. The only positively drip-proof gutter sold. No inside drip whatever from glass or gutter. A boy can erect. Very simple and durable, making a shadeless house, strong and neat.

Send for descriptive catalogue of Standard Ventilating Machinery. Over 14 years in use and still the leader in simplicity, durability and ease of operation, with power to sell.

Also the recently patented Standard Steam Trap. This trap has been especially invented to fill a want among florists, knowing that a simple trap, which is always ready to work, and which any ordinary man can set and keep in order, would be appreciated. Do not fear to risk your plant to a Standard; it beats gravity to a standstill.

CROP INSURANCE. Life Insurance is valuable because it guarantees the outcome.
"Gurney" Heaters
"BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouse: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expense at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

Our Craftsmen's Civic Duties.

During the recent St. Louis meeting of the directorate of the Society of American Florists, the visitors were tendered a banquet by local members of the trade, at which Theodore Wirth, of Hartford, Conn., a member of the board of directors, made an address which is well worth the close attention of the entire trade. It was as follows:

"I wish I were able to give appropriate expression to my feelings of pleasure and pride to be with you to-night, and if I fail to convince you, which I am inclined to think I will, than I am more than thankful, delighted and happy to share your comradeship and hospitality, it is because of my inability to find the words which would best give expression to my thoughts.

"I have come to your beautiful world's fair city on errands which it shall be my earnest endeavor to fulfill to the best of my ability. One of these errands is to discharge the duties of the office, which the distinguished president of our national society has done the honor to bestow upon me. Another is to look out for the interests of the horticultural department of my state, Connecticut, in the greatest world's fair ever held, and in connection with these errands it is my good fortune to enjoy at the same time your generous hospitality and good fellowship of which there is such a convincing display here to-night. I assume that most of you gentlemen are commercial florists, but I also take it for granted that of those present many are following some other branch of our noble profession and that whatever these branches may be we are all united in the desire and endeavor to better our calling and advance our interests. Our professional organizations of local and national character are the most influential and successful means towards progress and prosperity. We come together to learn from each other, and so to be helpful amongst us as brothers should be; we meet for sociability and development of good fellowship, and where could good fellowship be better developed than amongst men interested in the same calling of life? I pity the colleague who for one reason or another, does not take advantage of the opportunity to enjoy the benefits of associating with fellow members of the craft, for his life must be a lonely, selfish one, and he must become one-sided and with time must fall behind.

"But gentlemen, besides the benefits which our professional organizations give to their members in various directions, I believe there is still a much larger field of healthy development and beneficial work that can be followed, which would be worthy of the noble calling we follow, and which would be befitting the industrious, intelligent and progressive tendencies of the members who constitute our organizations. I believe our florists' clubs and horticultural societies should interest themselves to a great extent in such developments and improvements of their respective municipalities, in which on account of their professional knowledge and abilities, they should take the initiative and advisory leadership. They should interest themselves in the development of parks and public playgrounds, school gardens, the planting and maintenance of street trees and the beautifying of home grounds; in fact they should become leading spirits in anything that will make their home cities better, more beautiful and healthier to live in. It can be done like anything else that is supported by good will, earnest work and intelligence, and all labors spent in that direction will bear satisfactory results and eventually bring good interest for labor and time expended, for it stands to reason that with the development of good taste, order and ornamentation of our grounds and streets, there will be created a public desire and demand for the beautifying of home grounds, which will result in commercial advancement of our trade.

"I should like to see some of you leading craftsmen occupy positions on boards or commissions that have charge of this important branch of municipal administration. I should like to see you get there on account of your evident fitness for the position, and not through political wire pulling, and I feel satisfied that if selected on account of those mentioned qualities you would do your best to stamp out that despicable, contemptible monster, political corruption, which is yet to-day such a detriment to our park development and administration in so many of our largest cities. What better field, besides those nearest to our own immediate advancement, which by law of human nature we are first called on to develop, is there for our local and national organizations to follow, and why in following same should we not deserve the support and earn the respect of the public in general, whose servants we are and wish to be?

"I trust you will kindly excuse my selecting this subject for my remarks. I am, as my position as park superintendent would indicate, deeply interested in park work, and I know that all of you more or less must take some interest in this matter. There seems to be a growing tendency in our park developers to cut out to a great extent at least floral decorations from park work, and I myself with all of you agree that there are a good many instances in all parts of our country where criticism is justified in regard to the offensive and unharmonious bedding display in connection with natural landscape effects, which not only do not need any floral embellishment, but to which such displays are an absurd and distasteful detriment. Here is just the point where the advice of a competent authority is needed and where so many of our leading professional men of good taste and intelligent judgment could be of service. Because those features are out of place here or there, it is not said that they are well placed elsewhere. Ninety per cent of our park visitors are attracted by floral displays. Bright colors in flowers and foliage, individual beauty and harmonious combinations appeal to them, more so than natural landscape effects. I know this from experience gained by close observation of our visitors, and therefore I am and always will be in favor of a reasonable, liberal, tasteful display of floral decorations in proper locations with harmonious surroundings in our parks, for I believe it is the masses and not the classes to which we are first bound to cater."

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

It was a superb exhibition which greeted the public when, at the appointed hour on Thursday afternoon, March 24, the doors of Horticultural Hall were thrown open. The quality of the individual exhibits was superb, but that was to be expected. The excellence of the arrangement of the exhibits generally, the completeness and order prevailing and, above all, the fact that the judging had all been done, the committees having had the hall to themselves and all intruders barred out, came in the nature of a mild surprise and brought a lively realization of the truth that the affairs of the society, and particularly its exhibitions, are at last in competent hands. It is less than three months since the new control went into effect. Old traditions, deep-rooted customs and life-long habits are not overcome in a day and the vast improvement noted in this exhibition is only one step as compared with what will undoubtedly be accomplished in the art of exhibition-making between now and the day, one year hence, when the grand old society shall put on her best clothes and extend a welcoming hand to the Queen of Flowers and her votaries from all over the land.

The plant groups were disposed principally in the main exhibition hall. The cyclamens, unapproached in cultural excellence by anything ever seen on this continent, occupied the center foreground as viewed from the loggia and beyond were ranks of cinerarias, spring flowering bulbs and palms and at the farther end was a remarkable group of M. H. Walsh's hybrid Rambler roses. To the right and left were splendid displays of hybrid hippeastrums from Walter Hunnewell, obconica primroses from Harvard Botanic garden, promiscuous spring-blooming plants from R. & J. Farquhar & Company, Louis Dupuy and others. Julius Roehrs' exhibit occupied the center with a stately group of palms, foliage plants and orchids, the class entries in spring flowering bulbs and hardy primroses being arranged on tables beyond. The hippeastrums, forty in number, were seedlings comprising a wide variety of colors and marking and the lack of foliage characteristic of these plants was compensated for by the use of small plants of Cyrtomium falcatum. The bank of Primula obconica from the Botanic Garden was well finished with palms and small-foliaged plants as was also the Farquhar group of tulips, narcissi, lily of the valley, etc., opposite, in which fine taste in arrangement was displayed. Mr. Dupuy's group included specimens of Erica cylindrica, ventricosa magnifica, V. coccinea minor, persoluta alba, cupressina, Wilmoreana, intermedia, Cavendishiana, perspicua nana and translucens and the beautiful new Hydrangea azurea. In Mr. Walsh's rose exhibit were many enormous specimens of Wedding Bells, double pink, Lady Gay, double pink, Hiawatha, single carmine, Minnehaha, double pink, Sweetheart, double white and La Fiamma, single pink, bearing myriads of blossoms and they attracted more attention than would a whole hall-full of Bride, Bridesmaid and similar products.

In the bulb displays, tulips and narcissi were seen in great variety and excellence of quality, but the hyacinths were hardly equal to former displays, due to the effects of the two cold seasons in Holland. In Mr. Roehrs' groups were several things comparatively new, including Livistona Woodwardii, a free-growing palm with orange petioles and entirely devoid of thorns, Calamis intermedia and a new fern named Lomaria l'Herminierii, with young fronds deep red colored. Hydrangea azurea and Hortensia rosea were also included. The cyclamens were simply perfection. Geo. F. Fabyan, Jas. Stuart gardener, and J. S. Bailey, J. Nilan gardener, and E. J. Mitton, Jos. Larson gardener, were the principal competitors. As heretofore, Mr. Stuart demonstrated that he is without a peer in this speciality. The cinerarias were all large, stately specimens but the stellata type was conspicuously absent, which was a pity.

The lecture hall was devoted to the orchids and cut flowers, a very comprehensive and extensive exhibit of forced shrubbery, such as wistarias, lilacs, staphyleas, azaleas, etc., trylliums, cyripediums and other native and Alpine plants with tulips, hyacinths, daffodils, crocuses and spring bulbs in gorgeous array, from the Bussey Institution giving the needed setting for the vase displays. The showing of carnations was extraordinarily fine. Enchantress, Fair Maid, Mrs. M. A. Patten, Nelson Fisher, Gaiety, Harry Fenn, Mrs. Lawson, Boston Market, Gov. Wolcott, Her Majesty, G. H. Crane, J. H. Manley, Adonis, Eldorado and Dorothy Whitney held the place of honor among the prize winners; a full list of the successful exhibitors will be found in the prize list. Among the novelties were a vase of promising seedlings from Miss E. J. Clark; Helen Goddard, a very shapely pure pink from S. J. Goddard; a white seedling from L. E. Small; Chester Roper, a crimson-striped white from A. Roper and White Lawson from F. R. Pierson Company. The Bride from J. N. May and The Queen from John Barr were on view but not for competition.

The orchid displays were very fine. Lager & Hurrell put up an unique collection of rare and beautiful varieties including Dendrobium nobile nobilium, CYCLAMENS AT THE BOSTON EXHIBITION, MARCH 1904.

WALSH'S HYBRID RAMBLER ROSES AT BOSTON EXHIBITION, MARCH 1904.

Lælia Jongheana and L. Crashleyana, the latter having flowered for the first time in this country. J. E. Rothwell also staged a superb collection including many rare hybrids. J. S. Bailey had a group of eight different forms of Dendrobium nobile. In E. V. R. Thayer's group were seen some of Mr. Orpet's seedlings, including Lælio-Cattleya G. S. Ball, Lælia Percinn and Cattleya × Catherina (Warneri × Schroderæ alba) the latter receiving a certificate of merit. W. P. Winsor and Col. Chas. Pfaff each made very large displays of cut orchid blooms, rich in odontoglossums, phalenopses, dendrobiums and other sorts, all fully named.

In roses the entries were few and unimportant. Col. Pfaff staged a set of twenty-four named varieties of hybrid perpetuals, all fine blooms. F. R. Pierson Company had American Beauty and Waban Rose Conservatories had Beauty, Ivory and Golden Gate. A vase of the beautiful crimson General MacArthur came from John N. May. In violets there were eight exhibitors, all the standard varieties being shown in good form except the intractable Marie Louise. Wm. Sim had vases of his Mt. Blanc and Blanche Ferry sweet peas, the size and quality of which have never been equaled and M. A. Patten showed a vase of blooms of J. J. Harrison geranium which was a veritable eye-opener. F. R. Pierson's exhibit of the improved form of the Pierson fern was the center of much interest. The pinnae in this variety are again pinnatifid and crowded together into a deep fluffy mass resembling an ostrich plume. The habit of the plant is much dwarfer than that of the original Pierson fern, the broad and short heavy fronds gracefully arching.

Diplomas were awarded, in addition to those above mentioned, as follows: Certificate of merit to M. H. Walsh, for roses Wedding Bells and Babette; Louis Dupuy, for Hydrangea hortensia rosea; F. R. Pierson Company for improved Pierson fern and for Carnation White Lawson; A. Roper for Carnation Chester Roper. Honorable mention was given to Julius Roehrs, for Livistona Woodwardii; L. E. Small for seedling carnation No. 3; S. J. Goddard for Carnation Helen Goddard. Wm. Sim received cultural commendation for sweet peas; Walter Hunnewell received a botanical certificate for Amorphophallus Rivieri and the Harvard Botanical Garden received a botanical certificate for Echinocactus Visnaga. Other exhibitors not competing in the prize entries and not already mentioned in these notes were Peter Fisher, who staged grand vases of Nelson Fisher and Mrs. Patten carnations; E. W. Converse with a fine group of cyclamens, primulas and palms; Arthur Clark, native orchids and violets; Mrs. E. M. Gill, general display; E. A. and W. K. Wood, mignonette and Mrs. J. M.

Sears, gardenias.

The exhibition was opened free to the school children from 10 a. m. till noon on Saturday. Crowds of them were in attendance under conduct of their teachers and the innovation has received much approving comment in the public press.

H. H. Hunnewell Triennial Premium.

This prize, established by the late H. H. Hunnewell for award through the garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, is offered for the estate of not less than three acres which shall be laid out with the best taste, planted most judiciously, and kept in the best order for three consecutive years. The cup shown in the illustration on the next page has been won by H. H. Rogers, of Fairhaven, Mass. Its value is $160. The visit of the garden committee last fall to Mr. Rogers' beautiful home was fully described in these columns at the time, accompanied by some of the garden views. James Garthley is the gardener and superintendent of the estate and to his proficiency and industry much of the credit for its comeliness and charm is due.

PORTLAND, ME. — A brisk fire in the basement of the store occupied by "Dennett, the Florist," on March 20, damaged the stock of boxes and other sundries to the extent of a few hundred dollars.

A Visit to Chicago.

Last week I visited a few of the larger places in Chicago for the double purpose of inspecting the stock and of taking notes on modern greenhouse construction, as I intend to rebuild this summer. I found nearly all the large growers in favor of large wooden houses of something near even span and built in blocks, but I found a great difference of opinion in regard to gutters. As I consider the gutter the most important part of the greenhouse I paid particular attention to this part of the construction. While iron gutters seem to be growing in favor, many growers are as much in favor of wooden gutters as ever. The man with the iron gutter bases one of his arguments on durability; the man with the wooden gutter argues cheapness of construction. The iron man says wood is not cheaper in the long run. The other says a wooden gutter well kept will last as long as the rest of the house. It seems to me that much depends on the care of both gutters. Even iron will not last forever and a good cypress or red cedar gutter, properly painted and cared for, will last a long time. Probably of more importance than first cost or durability is the question which the iron gutter man answers this way: Iron gutters melt the snow quickly and prevent the houses from being covered with snow and obstructing the light. It takes heat from the house, but heat can be supplied artificially and light cannot. The other side argues that it takes too much heat, that heat goes through the gutter all winter, not only when it is melting snow, but also at all other times, when it is simply wasted. Whether or not the cost of this extra heat is paid for in results of the extra light every florist must decide for himself. Different conditions existing in different localities make different constructions necessary.

Here at my place, in Kokomo, I believe that I am not troubled enough with snow to justify my putting in iron gutters on account of snow. It never piles up enough to break any glass and only about three or four days each year does it stay on the glass long enough to unduly obstruct the light. While the snow question varies in different localities, the question of cost and durability remains the same and is often settled differently under exactly the same conditions. For example, there are two large places in Chicago side by side. One firm is not only building its new ranges with iron gutters but is constantly tearing down old houses in order to rebuild with iron gutters. At the other place houses are going up with wooden gutters and the proprietor claims that they are not only the cheapest but the best. So after all arguments are done we will each decide to suit our own means and inclinations. For my own use, and take note I am not advising this to anyone else unless he has figured out his conditions to be the same as mine, I was the best pleased with a two piece "V" shape gutter manufactured by the Foley Manufacturing Company. It is not exactly "V" shaped, being slightly rounded at the bottom and fitting together in a dove tail. The edges on which the sash-bars rest are cut on the concentric principle, so that the drip from the inside of the glass falls free of the gutter into the drip conductor.

At Vaughan's greenhouses at Western

Springs nearly every style of wooden and iron gutters may be seen and their advantages and defects show up side by side, and just at present the bad ones do not seem to be affecting the stock very much for everything is uniformly fine throughout the place. Kentias and Boston ferns in various sizes were especially well grown. Auracarias and rubbers were seen in quantity and were well done. Roses, geraniums, cannas and a general assortment of bedding plants are grown in large numbers. The most promising novelty is the new Dwarf Crimson Rambler. Quite a number of these are growing here in fine shape. It will certainly be a great acquisition to the trade.

At Peter Reinberg's everything was seen in first class shape. My visit here was to inspect the new rose Uncle John, for I had never seen it growing. It is identical with Golden Gate except in color which is surely a big improvement as it shows a much brighter color and has not that dull, faded look that it so often seen in Golden Gate. Those who grow Golden Gate profitably will find Uncle John a greater money-maker. Chateau is grown here in large quantities and shows up in vigorous form. Such growth is seldom seen in any rose. American Beauty, Bride, Bridesmaid and Liberty were all in the pink of condition. Young stock is grown here by the tens of thousands and the leading forcing varieties such as Beauty, Perle, Sunrise, Chateau, Bride, Bridesmaid, Ivory, Golden Gate and Uncle John could not well be in better shape and great credit is due George Collins, the foreman. The carnations which are grown here by the acre are also looking well with but few exceptions. Special mention should be made of Estelle, for both the plants and flowers were the finest the writer has ever seen. It is certainly the best in its class when well done. I did not have the pleasure of seeing Peter Reinberg himself for, as I was told, he was out looking after his political fences around the aldermanic field in his ward.

W. W. COLES.

Oncidium Tigrinum Unguiculatum.

Oncidium tigrinum unguiculatum, exhibited by George Melvin, gardener to Colonel Charles Pfaff, South Framingham, Mass., at a meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society February 17 and awarded the society's silver medal, was a superb specimen. If it could be taken as a sample of what can be done with this variety it ought to find a place in every collection of orchids. The plant had three spikes; each over five feet long, and carried 150 flowers. This variety is somewhat smaller in flower than O. tigrinum, its color a pale green speckled with crimson, and lip a clear yellow. It is a native of Mexico. This is the second silver medal of this society that Mr. Melvin has been awarded for orchids in the last four months, besides two gratuities.

The members of the Newport Horticultural Society were addressed by Kenyon L. Butterfield, president of the Agricultural College at Kingston, March 16 on "Education and the Modern Farmer."

At the request of the State Board of Agriculture Alex. MacLellan has written an article on the extermination of the San Jose scale which is to be printed by the board and distributed throughout the state.

THE H. H. HUNNEWELL TRIENNIAL PRIZE.

WITH THE GROWERS

A Great Rhode Island Enterprise.

S. J. Reuter. Westerly, R. I., has long been renowned for fine granite. When, however, one contemplates the rapid strides being made by S. J. Reuter's mammoth greenhouses it becomes a question as to how long it will be before the granite industry finds itself confronted with a formidable rival for supremacy as the leading product of the town. At the present rate of increase Mr. Reuter's lot of thirty-three acres would before long be covered with glass. Fortunately he has another lot of ninety-six acres near by.

Westerly, R. I., has long been renowned for fine granite. When, however, one contemplates the rapid strides being made by S. J. Reuter's mammoth greenhouses it becomes a question as to how long it will be before the granite industry finds walks between and 2½-foot walks next the walls.

A new boiler house, 50x115 feet, has been built. The chimney is eighty-five feet high and ten feet square at the base, and in its construction 110,000 bricks were used. Opposite each two boilers is located a wide door to which teams can back up and dump the coal directly in front of the boilers. By this plan the coal is handled but once and there are no coal heaps outside as the dealer stores it and delivers as needed.

The new range will be practically level, there being but two feet of a rise in grade in a width of 600 feet. An 8-inch main carries the steam from the boiler house, which is 350 feet distant from the nearest greenhouse. The returns are placed within a subway and the water pumped back to the boiler by steam power. Mr.

and develops a very bright and uniform color. Enchantress also does excellently. The plants in two of the Lawson houses were grown in pots, inside, all summer, the object being to secure long stems early. One white sport has appeared this season on the Lawson. Marienne is a fine bloomer with a nice clear white flower and habit somewhat like McGowan. Gov. Lowndes behaves much like Norway, being a good grower with stems of great length, but the flowers seem rather poor keepers. Gov. Wolcott is remarkably robust but late coming into bloom. Mr. Reuter thinks highly of The Queen as a free and good all-around sort and will grow more of it this year. Her Majesty is another white of fine form and vigor which does grandly here. The early blooms of this variety are occasionally slightly penciled with red. White Cloud is grown in limited quantity; Murphy's White has not given satisfaction. Queen Louise is a favorite early white. Mr. Reuter has great faith in Fair Maid, which, under the high-class cultivation given here, has shown well during the past season. A little fringe of freesias, myosotis and similar small-growing material planted along the edge of the carnation benches suggests a thrifty system which seeks to turn every inch of space to good advantage.

There are numerous rose houses in which Bride, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate, Ivory, Beauty and Gontier are seen at their very best and 20,000 lily bulbs are forced. The product of this immense establishment is marketed by Welch Brothers, of Boston, to whom Mr. Reuter, twenty odd years ago consigned his first cut from the little house which constituted his entire original outfit and who have been intrusted with the handling of his flowers uninterruptedly ever since.

Some Short Hills Growers.

Three separate and distinct firms occupy the ranges of houses where formerly the United States Nurseries of Pitcher & Manda held forth, and all are evidently prosperous. The long palm house once filled with stately tree ferns and noble specimen palms, with the tiers of houses opening from it on either side where was

FLOWERING BULBS AND CARNATIONS AT THE BOSTON EXHIBITION.

Mr. Reuter will build no more small houses. He has come to the conclusion that whatever one may grow it is not possible to have the house too good, and the better the house the better the product will be. In line with this conviction one of the original ranges of small houses is to be demolished next season and replaced by six 300-foot houses of modern construction and proportion. An additional range of houses, each 35x500, is also to be erected as rapidly as possible. The first of these has already been completed and planted with carnations, of which it holds 16,000, and another is under way. They are of Lord and Burnham construction, erected by local labor. They are of the most thorough workmanship, the supports bedded in cement and additional strength being given by two braces running obliquely in opposite directions from the ridge to the ground and anchored in the solid rock. The glass is laid the longest way between the bars to secure the greatest amount of light and the sides are five feet high. In each end are three wide doors, only one of which is in common use, the other two being intended to facilitate the moving of soil. Mr. Reuter maintains that if a house be properly built there is no better device for emptying and filling greenhouses than Italian and wheelbarrow.

The beds, of which there are five to a house, are raised on the surface, with cement sides, the soil underneath having been first taken out to the depth of sixteen inches and the excavation filled with gravel. The beds are made four and a half feet in width with 20-inch

Reuter expects to carry steam to every part of the range with from twenty-five to thirty-five pounds pressure.

Carnations are an important crop and of these Lillian Pond is the leading variety. The returns last season from this superb white were approached only by those from the Lawson. Lawson seems very much at home in Westerly an infinite variety of rare and beautiful stove plants, are all devoted by the present occupant, E. C. McFadden, to Asparagus plumosus nanus, A. Sprengeri, *adiantum*s and smilax. There is little to recall former glories but from the hustle of continual cutting and bunching which is going on there it is plain that the florists of New York find in it a useful source of supply for these indispensable goods. Mr. McFadden also has the old Kent place houses at Summit and there Adiantum Farleyense is the specialty.

The big range of side-hill houses, covering an area of 38,000 feet, is conducted by John Wilson, and devoted exclusively to Bride and Bridesmaid roses. Mr. Wilson was formerly manager at the Lum establishment in Chatham and thoroughly understands his specialty, as a look through the houses will quickly show. He is a genial, companionable man as well and when interrupted by a visitor loses no time in making him feel at home. On the top of the hill, the old orchid houses are occupied by Anderson & Christensen, who have managed them so thriftily that in the coming spring they are to erect a range of ten iron houses on land purchased on the other side of the railroad station where better facilities for a commercial business will be enjoyed. The old houses will be removed also to the new location. Ferns are the main specialty with Anderson & Williams. These they grow in batches of half a million. Among the best things to be seen there at present is a house of young plants in various sizes of that grand florists' decorative fern, Cibotium Schiedeii.

Two New England Growers.

A recent visit to South Sudbury, Mass., revealed a house of Enchantress carnations at Coolidge Brothers' which would excite the unbounded admiration of any carnation grower. The foreman in charge of this establishment is A. M. Johanson, formerly at Waban Rose Conservatories and afterwards in charge of the rose houses of J. W. Howard. Although preeminently successful with roses, Mr. Johanson is not an uncompromising rose man and appears to take with equal kindness and consequent success to the carnation. As seems to be the case everywhere, he looks upon Enchantress as without a peer thus far. Lawson, Roslyn, Queen Louise and Lillian Pond are also grown in large numbers here, the latter with indifferent success on account of bursting. It is proposed, however, to grow it for a summer crop and to discard in its favor the growing of chrysanthemums which has hitherto been an extensive specialty, giving up the houses to the carnation instead of the chrysanthemum. Mr. Johanson, in common with the majority of carnation growers, has been doing some seedling raising and with more than customary success as some of his seedlings are in the highest grade, notably one not unlike Nelson Fisher, the color being identical. This and possibly one or two others will be exhibited widely next season. The product of this establishment is sold by Welch Brothers, of Boston.

Close by is the range of houses operated by H. N. Eaton, of which Welch Brothers also are the wholesale outlet. The main crop here is lilies which are followed by bedding plants directly after Easter. The proportion of diseased bulbs this year in the stock handled by Mr. Eaton has been very small. The plants as elsewhere average lower in stature than in past years but are well furnished with flowers.

Impressions of Philadelphia Exhibitions.

Our next stop was Philadelphia, to witness the rose show of the American Rose Society, and the spring exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society. There were some remarkably fine American Beauty roses shown, and two vases of Liberty as good as we have yet seen (and we understand they were grown upon own root plants). La Detroit also showed up as well as we have yet seen it and was in fine condition when the exhibition closed. In new roses we noted one, a pure white, No. 115, a cross between A. Revoir and A. Furon. It was a very nice flower and seems to possess good points, but as shown the stems were far too short. It would seem now-a-days that the public demand is for roses by the yard, and unless two feet can be added to it it will never make its mark. We thought more of General MacArthur when we saw it growing than we did on the exhibition stand. The buds and flowers as seen here were far too short, but we are inclined to think it was not seen at its best. Enchantress, another new rose with a color resembling the Enchantress carnation, also lacked stem. Cardinal, another debutante, is dark pink (certainly not scarlet); a fine bud and good substance.

LA DETROIT ROSES AT THE PHILADELPHIA EXHIBITION.

The stem could be better, and we question if the color will ever be popular. Golden Gate, Bride and Bridesmaid were wellshewn. Queen of Edgely seems to be growing darker every time we see it. (We sometimes wonder why this rose has not been more popular with the private growers; of all the private places we have visited this last winter we have not once seen this rose.) The show of pot grown roses was very poor, and the classes were very poorly contested. Had this been an exhibition of a local character it might have been passable. For Philadelphia it might have been excusable, but it was very, very poor indeed for "America."

The meeting of the American Rose Society was very well attended, and by a number of prominent growers. There is much less of the "Waldorf-Astoria" silk stocking element about this society now. The common people are having an inning and there are still hopes for its future. A good deal of enthusiasm was inspired by the noble way that many of the men who are interested in the rose for a livelihood came forward and offered liberal prizes to be competed for at Boston next year. Boston is all right. We would like to have seen it in Chicago; it would have given the society (as the sponsor for Chicago put it) "a more national character," but Boston won and we have no doubt whatever but that the Bostonians will do themselves credit. They certainly have a noble chance, for the thing at present is very much of a forlorn hope. A practical man was elected as president, a man of actions not of words, and upon this we base our hopes for the future.

The paper of L. A. Martin on "Hardy Roses" was a practical treatise, by a very able and practical gardener, and if freely published ought to stimulate the cultivation of these popular favorites. Mr. Simpson's lecture upon "Stocks for Grafting" was interesting and instructive, but after all he has not found a stock for indoor use than Manetti. The after discussion brought out the facts that the use of grafted stock indoors was largely on the increase; that it was almost immune from the attack of eel worm; that you could commence to cut from grafted stock earlier in the Fall; that grafted plants were as large and strong in November as own root stock in January; that deeper benches were needed; that richer soil and more feeding was necessary; that Bride and Bridesmaid grafted did better with a night temperature of 56° and with the lower temperature were firmer and of a better color; that Kaiserin and Carnot were not so liable to go to sleep in winter on grafted stock; that Perle was better upon its own roots; that Ivory and Golden Gate were much the same either way; that two-year old plants of Liberty gave better results on own roots than on grafted stock. The discussion then drifted on to "whether or not roses propagated from cuttings from year to year did not tend to deteriorate the stock." It was a hot time and nobody won. When a practical body of men tackle a scientific subject they usually get beyond their depth, but "Fools will sometimes step where angels fear to tread."

As we were hurrying along to catch the train the street car conductor asked why we looked so worried? We told him we wanted to catch train, so and so, for Philadelphia. He said: "You might as well take your time you will be there in time tomorrow." We asked how that was and he replied: "Don't you know that in Philadelphia they are twenty-four hours behind?" "Why," he said, "a man just fell off the top of a five story building and when they asked him if he was badly hurt he said, 'Why no; I come from Philadelphia; I came down slow.'" Be that as it may, we arrived in time for the banquet and were never accorded a better time in our lives. Everyone was most anxious to show courtesy to the stranger. The city of brotherly love we certainly found it to be, and if the rush of life be slower they certainly catch more of life's pleasures, and though "they do leave poor old Billy Penn out in the cold all night and never ask him to have a drink," they are not so with the stranger within their gates.

TRAVELER.

New Haven County Horticultural Society.

The annual banquet of this time-honored society was enjoyed in due and approved form by a congenial and care-free party of nearly fifty at the New Tontine Hotel, New Haven, Conn., on Tuesday evening, March 29. After the excellent dinner had been gathered in, President William Gardner spoke briefly of the objects of the society and the benefits derived by the craft from the free interchange of ideas at its meetings and outlined the good work proposed for the coming year, which contemplated physical as well as mental culture, in the form of an aggressive bowling club. He then introduced Robert Veitch as toastmaster, who filled his important post in an admirable manner.

The first gentleman called upon was J. F. Huss, president of the Hartford Florists' Club, who was obliged to take an early train home and had only time enough to express the fraternal good wishes of the sister organization. Wm. J. Stewart was next introduced as representing the S. A. F., the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and a few other affiliating bodies on behalf of which Mr. Stewart extended congratulations and expressed the hope that a substantial delegation from New Haven might attend one or more of the important horticultural events scheduled for the coming year in the city of crooked streets and straight goods. Ex-president J. N. Champion followed with an interesting description of a recent visit to the Pierson greenhouses and a plea for the development of home industry, interspersing a series of conundrums which he had to answer himself. The irrepressible "Charlie" Keith, whose jovial, weather-beaten frontispiece embraces in its entirety the famed Bridgeport Florists' Club, officers, staff and privates, next gave a characteristic dissertation on neighborly qualities, the management of mules, the evils of cut-throat methods and the trials of school ma'ams, all productive of the usual crop of spasms. John H. Murray of the School of Forestry spoke in advocacy of a broader scope for the society's activities on educational lines.

Then came Mr. Ferrier who, first divesting himself of his pipe, proceeded to warble a defiant Scottish melody of several octaves' range and then turned his attention to the expounding of the rules of civilized warfare. H. A. Groby, famed for kohlrabi and Chinese cucumbers, Mr. Thrall, dahlia enthusiast, F. G. Horn, a philosopher on the violet question, Messrs. Nye and Ferguson, bowling specialists, ex-Secretary Pettit, Treasurer Kydd, and Messrs. Patton and Hawkins followed with a few words each, and John Handyside told again in melodious voice the full and impressive details of "how Paddy stole the rope."

A hearty vote of thanks to those who had contributed the lavish display of flowers and plants which adorned the room and the singing of Auld Lang Syne brought the festivities to a close just before the midnight hour.

THE CARNATION.

Preparing For New Stock.

It is now time to commence preparations for the coming season's stock, and the propagating of the slow growing varieties should be well under way. The old stools should be planted in the bench or in boxes in a place where they can receive all the light possible to guard against them throwing up weak growths for cuttings. The temperature in daytime should be kept as cool as possible without causing cold draughts, because a direct cold wind blowing on the young, tender growths will very soon cause them to mildew. Also a temperature of about 45° at night will suit them best. Some kinds are very slow in producing stock. These should be placed in a warmer house and kept a little on the dry side. The soil also can be of a much finer texture which will help to encourage them to break faster. And again any new and expensive novelty can also be given the same treatment if more stock of it is wanted. In a very short while the top can be taken out as a cutting and then the young plants will quickly begin to break out in every direction and quite a nice lot of stock can be worked up in this way.

We also practice this method for our seedlings. The seed was sown about the middle of January. In about five weeks the plants were well above the ground and as soon as large enough to handle we potted them direct into 2-inch pots and placed them on a warm, light bench. They very readily got a rapid growth on them and are now nice, thrifty stock. By April 1 we shall be able to plant them into the bench and by closely watching them we can raise six or eight nice young plants by the middle of June. Where large quantities of seedlings are raised this method would be too expensive because of occupying a large amount of bench space for plants of unknown merit. But where a few are raised it is a good way to make sure of ample stock should a seedling prove meritorious. On receiving new importations we moisten the roots with lukewarm water when they are taken from the box. The plants are then planted into a bench of light soil in a warm house and after a little while if time will allow we take a cutting from them, otherwise they are potted up to get established by planting out time.

The principal things to be taken into consideration when propagating are, first, to see that the sand is thoroughly fresh so that there is not any possible chance for fungus. Second, they must be given a moderate temperature of about 50° to 54° and, lastly, see that the sand does not at any time get too dry. By paying attention to these details with frequent syringings the cuttings will in about twenty-one days be ready to be potted up. This must be done as soon as they are rooted because after roots are once formed they quickly make rapid growth if left in the sand and in a short while are drawn and of weak constitution. In potting up use a fresh soil without any manure. Place in a temperature of 40° to 45° at night when it can be maintained and in warm nights keep the ventilators open a little to allow the temperature being as near the mark as possible.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Care of the Young Stock.

The main batches of cuttings should about all be rooted by this time and the young plants well established in the soil. It is not too late, however, to propagate valuable and scarce varieties, for these small plants, though not always useful for blooming, may come in useful for propagating next winter. Planted quite closely together in a cool, sunny situation they will yield an abundance of good healthy cuttings, often far superior to cuttings taken from blooming plants of the same variety growing in a higher temperature. Late bloomers, such as Prosperity and Marquis, should not be propagated later than January for blooming, but early bloomers can still be rooted with the expectation of growing medium sized plants for benching. As the sun grows stronger great care is, however, necessary to insure a good strike. More shade is needed and the sand must be kept a little wetter and the cuttings will need a little more sprinkling overhead to prevent wilting than was the case a month ago. It is well to shade the glass lightly to reduce the temperature of the house and supplement this shade with a single sheet of newspaper while the sun is on the cuttings for the first three weeks in the sand. After that they should be gradually inured to the sun, the same as would be done in midwinter.

The active growing weather in March and April will demand the strictest attention to keep the young plants in good growing shape. A good sunny exposure is the first requirement and a dry, airy environment must be secured in order to secure a stocky growth. Plants that are drawn up spindly to any degree during their infancy never make quite as well shaped plants as those that have the full benefit of every element that is conducive to a normal growth from the start. The plants' future size and the number of flowering shoots that will be ready to run up during late summer will depend greatly upon the number of eyes that break from the young plants now. There is much gained, therefore, by planting a limited number of plants in a given space under the most favorable conditions and giving each plant a chance to make use of its fullest capacity. Crowding throws the body of the plant up and away from the ground and the result is a top-heavy subject that is easily beaten about by a heavy storm. An attenuated growth also means weakened tissues and an ideal breeding ground for all kinds of disease. Three to three and a half inches apart each way, according to variety, is about right at the second transplanting for plants propagated early, while from two to two and a half inches will be right for those that need no shift after being taken from the sand. Those propagated up to the first of January we try to transplant about the first to the middle of March. This gives them a chance to become well established by the time they are removed to cold frames, about April 1. Later cuttings receive no shift after transplanting from the sand. They are also removed to cold frames about the date mentioned. As nothing is gained by putting the young plants into cold frames for the purpose of giving them a short rest previous to planting into the field, their safety should not be jeopardized by making the transfer too early, for the latter part of March is often full of inclement weather, under the influence of which the vitality of the plants is apt to be weakened. March 15 may, in latitudes below 40°, be safe to make the transfer, but above that good growing conditions can hardly be secured in cold frames so early.

While these frames are a valuable adjunct to a range of glass during the crowded months of spring, their principal usefulness in the care of young carnation plants lies in another direction more than in relieving the pressure on indoor stock. The growing conditions prevailing in the open air and under the full sun on a bright day in April are just about ideal to promote a good growth on these cool loving plants and that fact alone would fully warrant the expense of erecting the frames. It does not take a very close observer to note the stimulus given the little plants by the free circulation of air and full exposure to the sun on these bright spring days when the sash can be removed altogether. If it is impossible to give the young stock the benefit of this treatment we should at least try to imitate those conditions as nearly as possible indoors. As no shade should ever be on the glass above them, the heat thus generated must be controlled by thorough ventilation and wetting down the walks and walls during the hot part of the day. Care must be taken, however, to keep the air and the foliage dry over night. On hot days syringing the plants lightly once or twice will do no harm and the spray should be applied with sufficient force about twice a week to keep red spiders in check. A good fumigating with strong tobacco stems or dust once a week will keep down greenfly. Keep stirring the surface of the soil with a sharp stick to keep it open and allow no weeds to get any headway.

Heating Carnation Houses.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have three violet houses 12x176 feet, 12 feet high from path to the ridge, and heat them with a No. 15 Lord & Burnham hot water boiler, getting 45° inside in zero weather. I want to take the sash off two violet houses and make carnation houses 12x176, ten feet high from path to ridge. Can I get 50° at zero weather in the carnation houses, with two returns and two flows of 4-inch pipe and still heat the remaining violet house with the same boiler?

F. B. A.

The difference in the heat required for three violet houses and two carnation and one violet house will be but slight, and if the boiler as it has been used shows a little surplus capacity, as is probably the case, there should be no difficulty about its doing the work after the change proposed is made. The four 4-inch pipes should give the temperature desired, if the houses are well built and have no glass except in the roof.

L. R. TAFT.

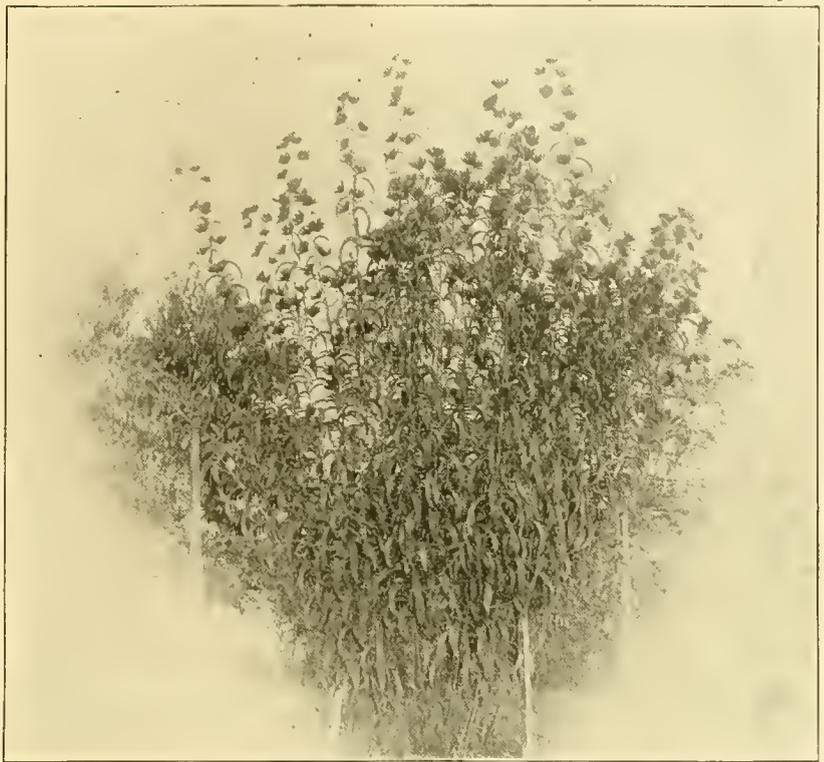

To Heat Dwelling and Greenhouse.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Could a small dwelling and a small greenhouse be heated satisfactorily with hot water with the same boiler, pipe from one side of the boiler in the cellar of the house running upstairs and connecting with radiators in the house, and pipe from the other side of the boiler running up and through the greenhouse? Also, would one smoke-stack answer for two furnaces and give good draft in both?

L.

If the boiler is sufficiently large there will be no difficulty about heating the dwelling and greenhouse. In case any of the radiators in the house are very much higher than the coils in the greenhouse, the size of the feed pipes should be reduced, otherwise the greenhouse coils may not get a full share. One chimney can be used for two boilers, but it should be fully twice as large as will be required by one boiler.

HELENIUM AUTUMNALE.

Houses With South Exposure.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Would it be all right to build greenhouses facing southeast? To build them along the road; which is our line, will give them this exposure. Would it be better to build without regard to this road as the land is not of great value? We intend to grow carnations in these houses. READER.

While it would be better to have the houses face the south, or at best be but a few degrees from east and west, the difference if it faces southeast will be but slight, and if the location makes that position desirable it can be used with good results if the walls are of the same height and especially if there is glass in the north side.

How to Force Lillium Harrisii.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Why is it that Lillium Harrisii will not force for early blooming? My Japanese longiflorums planted in October are as large as the Harrisii planted early. Some years ago I used to grow Harrisii and had them in bloom the end of November with ordinary greenhouse temperature, but now they will not move with 65° at night. Can any of your readers give an explanation?

J. B.

"J. B." must have got some spurious Harrisii. The genuine stock can be depended upon to force as readily as it ever did. It is generally known that much of the stock planted in Bermuda of late has been badly mixed up.

Gardenias From September to March.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please give the correct treatment to give gardenias in order to have them in flower from September to March. Please state best temperature, soil, etc.

B. L. M.

To grow gardenias for winter blooming, take young plants from 3-inch pots and plant them in a greenhouse, about the first of May, about twelve inches apart, in a good, rich soil, the same as you would use for roses, with good drainage. Grow them during summer as rapidly as you can until about the first of September, then reduce the temperature to as near 60° as possible, and give them less water than during summer growth. Keep the temperature from this time at 60° at night and about 65° in day time. If you allow the temperature to go much above 65° the plants will cast their buds.

Helinium Autumnale.

The accompanying illustration shows a very fine clump of Helinium autumnale, commonly known as the fall sunflower. This plant is rapidly coming into favor because of its rich foliage, profuse flowering and easy cultivation. This particular clump has a rather interesting history. The year before last a plant with a single stem was planted in the yard of Edward M. Nye, a Pomeroy, O., banker. It grew about eight feet in height, and the seeds, ripening, fell to the ground. Last spring a great cluster of them came up and this photograph shows the result. The deep contrast between the dark green leaves and profuse yellow flowers is most pleasing. The plants are about eight feet high and fit companions to the asters and goldenrods, which thrive wonderfully in Southern Ohio. This photograph was made in October when these thrifty plants show to best advantage.

ELKHART, IND.—F. L. Tornquist, whose greenhouses are located on Garfield avenue, will remove to Benton Harbor, Mich., this week.

THE company which supplies most of the canned asparagus for Chicago received word March 28 that California floods have cut short the crops at the principal producing points.

THE Worcester County (Mass.) market gardeners to the number of thirty-seven visited a number of the cucumber growers at Leominster on March 19, under guidance of E. M. Bruce. Among the places visited were the greenhouses of E. M. Bruce, D. E. Wheeler, M. D. Haws, Frank Pierce, Geo. M. Kendall and S. A. Esten. They were entertained at Music Hall, where the wives of the growers had prepared a bountiful repast. The number of winter cucumber growers in Leominster is twenty-eight, the most extensive establishment being that of Geo. M. Kendall. All make a practice of sterilizing the soil by forcing steam through it, and bees are used generally for the purpose of fertilization. Sterilization costs from $150 to $200 per acre per year. The sterilized soil is used to a depth of twelve to fourteen inches.

A Cucumber Forcing House.

At the establishment of Davis Brothers, Morrison, Ill., three houses, each 30x300 feet, are devoted to cucumber forcing. The accompanying illustration shows one of these which was planted December 15 of last year. The photograph was taken March 2. The houses are all new and thoroughly up-to-date and fitted with the Chadbourn automatic ventilating machine, which is giving good satisfaction. The gutters are seven feet from the ground with four feet of glass in the side walls. The benches are made of ordinary drain tile laid on the ground with 10-inch planks for sides. The soil is an ordinary turfy sod with one-fourth rotted manure thoroughly mixed. The plants were set into the benches about December 1. Davis Brothers are growing the Arlington White Spine with great success, also some of the long green varieties. The Davis establishment at Morrison covers 55,000 feet of glass and that at Geneva, Ill., 15,000 feet. The latter is almost exclusively devoted to Boston ferns, the soil being especially adapted to growing these of unusual good quality.

CANTON, O.—The Brown Floral Company has been incorporated here with a capital of $25,000. The incorporators are Charles Brown, Florence Brown, Conrad Charleson, Lena Charleson and C. C. Bowe.

CUCUMBERS AT THE ESTABLISHMENT OF DAVIS BROS., MORRISON, ILL.

Chicago.

After everyone has time to get his breath and do a little figuring it will be found that this Easter's business will equal if not eclipse that of last year. This will be particularly true in the shipping line, which has been taxed to its fullest capacity by orders both early and late. There was a slight lull Tuesday, the calls for flowers not keeping pace with the receipts, which increased at an alarming rate upon the opening of bright and warm weather. The growers who had already commenced the pickling process were compelled to release their holdings. The usual strenuous Easter shipping period opened with vim and vigor Wednesday, when distant orders were filled and stock put in readiness for the rush of the succeeding days. The best grade of stock was early cleaned up, the demand for this making it difficult for the dealers to get enough together to satisfy their customers. Except possibly roses there was enough of everything for all purposes, but the quality was of an indifferent, and much of it, of a poor grade. American Beauty are the scarcest item, as are all reds. White and pink, however, met the demands which were very heavy. Lilies, about which there has been so much pre-Easter speculation did not turn out to be as short as some had forecasted. Much poor stock was left standing around after the best grades were cleaned up. Bulbous stock moved well toward the end of the week and it was a good opportunity to move some of this which had been hanging fire for so long a time.

At the meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, held at the Auditorium Annex, March 29, the executive committee was authorized in its discretion to hold a flower show next fall and to co-operate with the Florists' Club and the American Carnation Society in the exhibition of the latter to be held in this city next January. The election of officers was deferred until the next quarterly meeting, which will be held this month.

High water wrought great damage to the greenhouses on the north side, particularly in Evanston the early part of the week. The fire under the boilers of the greenhouses of John Weiland, 1516 Greenwood boulevard were put out by the rising water. To make matters worse the pumps refused to work and the fire department with engine and hose was summoned. After much work the place was pumped out.

Carl Niemann, president of the Florists' and Gardeners' Union, will go into the growing business about May 1. He will build several houses at Norwood Park, where he is now erecting a residence. He will grow cut flowers for the trade.

Friedman has his Michigan avenue store beautifully decorated for Easter. One window displays many remarkable heathers. The other is banked with cut flowers and decorative plants.

Frank Garland is preparing to move to the second floor of the Atlas block about May 1. The store now occupied by him will be occupied by a wholesale drug house.

The date of the next regular meeting of the Florists' Club is April 6 and it is expected important matters concerning coming exhibitions will be discussed.

The George Wittbold Company has opened a branch retail store at 88 State street. The stock for Easter is particularly well grown and attractive.

Wieter Brothers have a house of Kaiserin roses in splendid shape for Easter.

Their houses of La France came a little too late for the Easter trade.

The sympathy of the trade goes out to Mrs. Horton of Bassett & Washburn's office in the loss of her mother who died last week.

The A. L. Randall Company has the lead over their competitors with a fine line of white lilac grown by Emil Buettner.

John Mangel made his store attractive for the Easter holiday. He contemplates a sojourn in Greece this summer.

J. C. Rinneson, of Sioux City, Ia., spent part of the week in this city, stocking up for a brisk Easter trade at home.

Easter chickens are being sold by Chas. McKellar who reports a surprising demand for them.

The business of the late Walter Kreitling has been taken over by his sister, Mrs. Kochmann.

Johnson & Swan's store has been sold to Joseph Curran, who took possession this week.

Anton Kill, father of Leonard Kill, is quite seriously ill at his home in Bowmanville.

C. L. Coatsworth made a flying trip to St. Louis last Saturday.

New York.

With Easter three days distant, there is no evidence of any special sensation in either the supply or demand in the cut flower line. Some profess to believe that an apparent shortage justifies stiff figures on lilies and the same sentiment is responsible for a considerable activity in the calla market, many shrewd buyers taking up for storage all the callas they can secure at good prices. Business is anything but brisk otherwise. Roses feel the influence of the warm weather handed out this week and are abundant, selling hardly as well as do the carnations. Much of the stock of the latter gives evidence of having been held back and will be a dead loss, no matter how well the fresh goods may be sold. Violets are still on the downward course as to quality.

A young man over in Hudson City has been creating a mild sensation by claiming to be able to embalm roses so that they will remain fresh indefinitely. He'd better stay away from Twenty-eighth street.

Traendly & Schenck have placards on their walls announcing that "This is our busy week. Don't butt in. Our time is valuable. Catch on?"

There was a slight fire in some moss in the basement of Fleischman's store on March 23, the dense smoke doing considerable damage.

Longiflorum lilies in 5-inch pots are selling at from 10 to 12 cents per flower, wholesale. The supply is good and the demand fair.

Plans for a splendid pergola and Italian pavilion to be built in Dewitt Clinton park have been submitted. They will cost $50,000.

A heavy cargo of Bermuda lily flowers, destined for various inland points, arrived on the steamer Trinidad, March 21.

Siebrecht & Son's corner store shows the sign conspicuously, "Cut Flowers Delivered to all Parts of the World."

Recent visitors were J. H. Rebstock, Buffalo, and J. C. Vaughan, Chicago.

Friday—A heavy driving rain all day to-day, two days before Easter, caused a loss of many thousands of dollars to the trade in sales of plants and cut flowers.

Philadelphia.

There were several exhibits at last week's exhibition which we did not mention but which were especially worthy. The vase of La Detroit roses grown by the Asmus greenhouses improved wonderfully the second day but it was not at its best until Thursday when it was as large as any of the American Beauties beside it. It attracted a great deal of attention. Robert Simpson's vase of Golden Gate was gilt edged. We have never seen them so fine before. John E. Haines staged some seedling carnations of his own equal to the best of the new ones. A large red and also a fine pink certainly ranked first class and a vase of yellow, the nearest approach to and in fact a better color than Buttercup. It is also a large flower with a good stem.

The price of the lilies is 10 and 12 cents to the store trade, but the department stores are able to get them from 8 to 9 cents and sell for 12 cents per flower. The retail store price is 25 cents and it is hard to convince some people they are not getting robbed as compared with the advertised price of the department stores. The price of the cut flowers is the same as in the pots. Prices of carnations are soaring and will range from $4 to $10.

Robert Craig says that many men force their plants with too much heat; 65° is better than 80°. They come along faster at the lower temperature and have much more substance. George Anderson, a successful grower, says the same thing, as in speaking of a lot under discussion, he said they would come nicely if they did not cook them.

The growers appear to be well pleased with the extent of the trade and all the choice stock is sold and even the good average is getting scarce. It is thought they will sell out with possibly the exception of some lilies which will not make it, although the way they have come along the last week is wonderful.

At this writing, March 28, the streets are fast taking on an Easter coloring from the fact that almost every vacant store on a prominent thoroughfare has been for the time being turned into a flower shop.

H. H. Battles has his storehouse on Walnut street above Twelfth street and nearly all the larger retailers have taken additional space where it was available.

Wm. P. Craig has the corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets and Charles Fox, of Broad & Sansom streets, has a large store in the Ninth Arcade.

W. C. Smith has a large store at Eighth and Chestnut streets and another on Ninth street above Chestnut.

George Faulkner opened an annex on the corner of Fifteenth and Chestnut streets. K.

Boston.

Easter week starts out with a trace of special activity well-developed in the lily market. One large dealer is authority for the statement that more lilies have been sold a week ahead than during the entire Easter season in any recent year. It is gratifying to note that the quality is generally good. In other lines considerable stored stock was in evidence on Monday. This was probably due, in part, to the influence of the few warm days, and possibly another reason is that the growers are getting wise in regard to the futility of heavy shipments at the last moment. All are anticipating a good Easter business.

Considerable comment is made on the plan of Gov. Bates for the establishment of a state department of agricultural. The prevailing sentiment seems to be that the old method of a board of agriculture has outlived its usefulness and that the governor is right.

Welch Brothers have a fine line of lilies for the trade of Easter week, marketing the stock of H. N. Eaton, South Sudbury, Mass., (house illustrated in this issue) with that of other well-known growers.

L. H. Foster has been quite ill but is now rapidly convalescing and expects to be about soon as well as ever.

Mrs. Bock, widow of the late Wm. A. Bock, died at North Cambridge, March 21.

Among the visitors the last week were H. Hurrell, Summit, N. J.; Thos. Knight, representing Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; L. Dupuy, Whitestone, N. Y.; F. R. Pierson and J. R. Fotheringham, Tarrytown, N. Y.

Baltimore.

The week preceding Easter, notoriously the dullest of the season, did not change its reputation this year. Social entertainments are practically suspended, and few demands exist except for occasions of mourning and solemnity. The usual shrinkage of shipments is also visible, but this is to be expected, and as soon as Easter prices prevail the deficiency will be more than made up. Last week the supply of roses was excessive and toward its close they could be moved off only by liberal concessions in selling figures. The same may be said of bulbous stuff, which is over-abundant. Carnations are not as plentiful as generally about this date, and they move fairly well, especially whites. Violets are dull, though the fashion amongst the women of wearing great corsage bunches is revived. The weather conditions have been wholly unsuited to out-door selling, and on few occasions have the market men been able to display their flowers. To-day they appeared in some force, but until towards noon it was a chilling performance. The peripatetic vendors, or fakirs, too, have had few opportunities to get rid of their goods, and many well-known figures are missing.

Notwithstanding apprehensions to the contrary, which prevailed for sometime, there will be scarcity of eastern flowers. Lilies are showing themselves in great quantities and fine quality. John Cook hardly looks for such a phenomenal Easter as last year, but he has an abundant supply of lilies, bulbs, genistas, hydrangeas, etc. Halliday Brothers have scarcely as many lilies as in former years, but they are of high class. Robert L. Graham has an immense stock of tulips, hyacinths and lilies. Edward Kress has his houses full of lilacs, rhododendrons, lilies, bulbs, etc., and more orders booked than ever before. William J. Halliday reports a fine stock of genistas, azaleas, etc., and Harrisii lilies to burn, all in the pink of perfection.

There seems to be hardly as many Ramblers on the market as heretofore, and the glories of the bougainvillea as an Easter plant appear to have departed. There is a great abundance of hydrangeas, and with something to suit every taste and every purse, both in plants and cut flowers, all that is wanted is a few fair days; that the sun's inspiring rays will stir up the love of plants and flowers which seems implanted deeply in every human heart, and which at this season always shows outward manifestations.

Though it was predicted, and with every apparent soundness of reason, that the result of the great fire would be to cripple the flower and plant trade, there has been no such general decline as was feared, and the Florists' Exchange increased its business more than ten per cent in February over the same month of last year. Its sales are limited almost entirely to local dealers, though it ships some material to outside points.

Winter still lingers, the mercury this morning (March 29) marking 18°, exceptionally cold for the season, and we have had light snows, cold rains and leaden skies for several days. Yet trees and grass begin to show signs of returning life, but there is much in the way of vegetation which this winter has received a quietus, and every park and lawn shows the fatal touch of Jack Frosts' fingers. S. B.

Washington, D. C.

The rush of preparation for Easter is now fairly on. Several of the retail stores have good decorations already arranged; while in others there is a hurry-scurrying to get everything in shape. The growers who have been placed at a disadvantage by almost continuous cloudy weather for the past two weeks, will show up well, considering the unfavorable conditions. There will doubtless be a great demand for lilies, and indications are that 25 cents per bud and flower will be the prevailing price. Many of the Japanese lilies are being brought in with six to twelve in a pan, the size of the latter ranging from eight to sixteen inches. There will be a good display of Roman hyacinths, narcissi and tulips in pans and jardiniers, as there is good demand for such stock in this market. Crimson Rambler roses, hydrangeas, spiræas and azaleas are expected to sell well. The weather will make a difference. If it is fair and mild we expect a record-breaking business.

J. Louis Loose has a fine lot of lilies and Roman hyacinths grown at his Alexandria greenhouses, and his decorator, Fred Wolfe, has a window decoration that is strictly first-class. Fred is quite an artist, and in this instance has the advantage of having a lot of good material to choose from.

A. Gude & Brother are pretty well stocked with all that goes to make an Easter display; in addition to flowering plants they have a large stock of the adiantums that are excellent.

Otto Bauer has a novel decoration in his show window, a mammoth egg-shell from which the chickens—I guess they are chickens—are just emerging. It is all very "cute" and interesting.

Harry Robey, salesman for Alex. B. Garden, is now a very busy man, and keeps his assistants on the jump. He does, however, let them rest on Sunday.

John Robertson has a fine stock of lilies, hydrangeas, Crimson Ramblers and azaleas, and is selling them at good prices.

Alex. B. Garden is doing a rushing wholesale business in lilies, spiræas, hydrangeas and azaleas.

Mayberry & Hoover have a fine Easter stock and their store has an attractive appearance. S. E.

CHESTER, PA.—Edward M. and Margaret M. Delahunt have been awarded $15,000 in the suit for damages brought against the United Telegraph and Telephone Company for the death in April, 1902, of their father, Thos. F. Delahunt, who was fatally shocked at the telephone during a heavy sleet storm.

Cleveland.

One of the best conducted establishments in the city is that of Herman A. Hart, where everything is conducted on strictly up-to-date lines. It is always a pleasure to visit this place, and more especially at this season of the year, when everything denotes preparation for the Easter sales. The writer dropped in the other day to have a look at things and saw a collection of Easter plants which in general excellence would be hard to beat anywhere. His lilies, of which he has thousands, are a grand lot. Just the right size and foliage clean down to the pot. A whole house of hydrangeas were in prime shape, ranging in size from 5-inch to 10-inch pots and all beautifully flowered. Another house of the same plant was retarded for later sales. Quite a large number are kept for Decoration day, when they are in good demand. His azaleas and bulbous stock are up to the usual standard of excellence. His carnations this year are extra good, particularly Lawson and Joost. Mr. Hart considers the latter variety one of the best paying carnations he grows. It is certainly good here, measuring fully three inches across. One would hardly recognize it from some of the poor things of the same variety seen occasionally. I must not forget to mention a house of Crimson Ramblers for Easter which are splendid plants and in the right condition for selling. One house is devoted to roses and more will be planted in the new range he contemplates building this spring. Taken altogether, this is a model place and well worth a visit. The visitor always receives a hearty welcome, and something else, from the genial proprietor.

The stock of carnations at the Andrews Brothers' place is rapidly recovering from the freeze-out they received last January, occasioned by the bursting of their boiler. It was a very serious accident, coming as it did when the severe weather was at its worst. The boiler is a sectional cast iron one and this makes the second section to give out, as a similar accident occurred last winter. This does not speak well for sectional boilers, as the sections in each case were new.

The weather conditions this week so far are very satisfactory with plenty of bright sunshine. From present market indications business promises to be good; roses will be in good supply, carnations not over plentiful; violets fair, quality good, especially single ones.

Frank Andrews and wife left on March 23 for a three months' visit in England. Mr. Andrews has been in rather poor health and it is hoped the change will do him good.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting Monday night. Nothing of importance was transacted. F. W. O. Schmitz, of Prince Bay, N. Y., was a guest.

Buffalo.

M. Bloy, who purchased the greenhouses of Wm. Legg, sold them a few days afterward to Scott Brothers who will use them as an annex. Mr. Bloy has several other places in view but is not decided what he will do.

A visit to J. H. Rebstock's, Elmwood avenue, shows his greenhouse at its best. On entering you see lilies, azaleas, lilacs, Rambler and other roses, genistas and cinerarias, the whole being in good shape and making a fine show.

S. A. Anderson was visited at his Linwood avenue place where a large and fine assortment of all the above was on sale. L. H. Newbeck, at his new place, had equally as fine a stock, which, with the newness of his place, made a pleasing display to the prospective buyer.

Scott Brothers have divided their immense stock and have a branch store in Walbridge's large department store where their display of everything is arranged effectively in one whole window.

The untimely death of George Fancourt who was looked upon as one of our standby visitors was a sad blow to his many Buffalo friends, who all extend their sympathy to Mrs. Fancourt.

Everything is looking very good and with the sunshine as it was Monday and Tuesday a great many more lilies will be out than was at first expected.

Palmer & Son at their two stores have beautiful windows, the predominating decorations being bells of white trimmed with lavender.

With a good warm Friday and Saturday and the stock as good as it looked Sunday we will have a grand trade in Buffalo.

S. A. Anderson has a fine window of daffodils and genistas, the bright yellow being very attractive.

Harry Bunyard called on his way east. BISON

Syracuse, N. Y.

The last week was encouraging for growers, being warmer and with more sunshine, enabling them to ventilate freely and harden stock which has been very soft on account of the prolonged cold and cloudy weather; but again the cold wave is upon us with its accompaniment of snow. Roses and carnations are behind the average both in quantity and quality and many growers will be behind with Easter lilies and will have to buy from more favored localities.

At the establishment of L. E. Marquisee nearly the entire plant is devoted to the stock of the newscarlet Flamingo, which is being sent out to the trade this year. There has been difficulty in filling orders on time owing to the dark weather. The growth has been soft although large and heavy and waiting has not materially helped, for the growth simply lengthened instead of obtaining the requisite firmness. Albatross, though wonderfully productive of high grade flowers, despite the weather, has been shy of cuttings. They were housed rather late, which accounts in some measure for the shortage.

The new plant of P. R. Quinlan & Company at Onondaga Valley is looking well considering the late planting and untoward winter. The entire range is devoted to carnations. Lawson has done fairly well but is coming short-stemmed. Marquis has better stems, while Fair Maid is showing up very well now. Lillian Pond is late.

Louis A. Guillaume, also in the Valley, has a wonderful showing of Lawson cropped for Easter, and although the quality is not what it would have been but for the cold and dark days it is a fine sight. But for free and continuous blooming, maturing quickly as any of the common varieties, Enchantress holds the palm in this establishment and doubtless will be grown in larger quantity another year.

Henry Morris has a very showy window of Azalea mollis but in most of the stores Easter stock is not as yet much in evidence. It is reported that Mr. Morris will settle with his creditors at 15 cents on the dollar.

Prices for Easter stock will range about the same as for the last two years with the possible exception of lilies.

G. Bartholme has carnations and roses looking very well and his entire place is a credit to his efforts.

J. B. B.

Newport, R. I.

The prospect for a good Easter trade seems very dubious, and a trip among our florists has confirmed this opinion. Of course it may come warm for April 3, but that will not give us the stock to sell. The fact is that the winter has been so long and severe here that good plants are not plentiful, and there is an extreme shortage of lilies. Lilies did not make the usual amount of good roots early, owing to the fact that the weather came very cold and froze them solid, almost as soon as they were potted and put outdoors. Lilacs and rhododendrons look about the best of anything, and there are many fine plants of these offered. Azaleas in the best varieties are in good supply, and these will be retailed for $1.50 to $2 each for the 12 to 14-inch sizes. Bulb stock is also good and plentiful. The crop of lilies, on the average, is fully two weeks late, and at this writing the florists feel that they will be obliged to supply themselves almost entirely from out of town. They are asking 25 cents for each bud and blossom.

The annual meeting of the Island Cemetery Corporation was held this week. The trustees strongly recommended that owners make arrangements for the perpetual care of the family burial plot. Several lot owners have done this during the past year and it is hoped the custom will become universal.

William B. Scott, who for twenty-five years has been associated with the Geo. A. Weaver Company, will soon open a seed and hardware store here under the firm name of William B. Scott & Co. The store will be situated at 8 and 10 Broadway. With Mr. Scott will be two of his brothers.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt has purchased forty-five acres of land from the heirs of the late Charles C. Slocum. This land adjoins Mr. Vanderbilt's estate known as "Oakland." It is supposed that extensive improvements to his already splendid place will be made.

Robert McLeod, head-gardener for Reginald C. Vanderbilt at Sandy Point Farm, was fatally injured in trying to stop a runaway horse and died last Thursday. Mr. McLeod was a Scotchman by birth and 56 years of age. He leaves a widow.

Stewart Ritchie has some nice plants for Easter—lilacs, deutzias, rhododendrons, valley and other bulb stock. He also has some good geraniums and heliotrope in bloom.

Among the visitors here the last week were Arthur Zirkmann, representing Sigmund Geller, New York; E. Schoepke, for W. A. Manda, Short Hills, N. J.; Henry Kallen, for August Rhotert, New York. X.

Toronto, Ont.

This has been another busy week for the florists. The weather is favorable and Easter stock of all kinds plentiful. Roses have picked up wonderfully. Those now cut are of the very best grade. There is a shortage of poorer stock. American Beauty is more plentiful. Ivory and Golden Gate are fine. Carnations are numerous and of excellent quality. Blooming plants were never more abundant nor in better shape. Rhododendrons, lilacs and azaleas are so numerous that even at Easter there is a great slaughtering of prices. Easter lilies, which about ten days ago looked over plentiful and were sold in large quantities as low as $6 per 100, now look scarce, as many of the blooms were too early to hold back, while others have all the substance forced out of them. Good blooms have again advanced to $12 per 100.

William Fendley, of Brampton, was a visitor, and in a short time had orders for 30,000 violets. His stock is in the very best condition, and even this late in the season his violets are as good as they were in midwinter. He is contemplating building four new houses, each 21x200, all of which will be planted with violets the coming season.

There will be a chrysanthemum show here in November of this year, which it is expected will eclipse anything of the kind ever before attempted in Canada. Four societies will co-operate and it is expected a grant will be given by the government to help defray expenses.

W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, was a visitor here, and it is rumored he relieved this market of 7,000 Harrisii and 150 azaleas. A few more buyers of this kind will make some of our soft-hearted growers sorry they parted with their stock at cut rate figures.

J. D. Doyle, of Woodstock, was also a visitor and purchased Easter stock.

H. G. D.

Albany, N. Y.

W. C. King put out a handsome new wagon early in the week. The vehicle is olive green in color and is fitted with rubber tires, glass sides and a storage battery which supplies current for two side lamps and two or three incandescent bulbs in the interior. It was built by a local firm of wagon makers.

Easter is the dominant thought in the minds of all this week. The dealers have made great preparations for a large trade and the stores are lavishly decorated with azaleas, poinsettias and other flowering plants.

F. A. Danker will start to rebuild his greenhouses that were damaged by fire about two months ago soon after Easter is over. Lord & Burnham will supply the material.

Miss A. Hansen, daughter of Henry Hansen, of Catskill, is at Eyres, employed to help out during Easter week.

Henry Hansen is preparing to add two large carnation houses to his establishment this spring.

R. D.

Lowell, Mass.

This week finds everyone hustling getting things into proper shape for Easter. Everyone seems to be happy and is making vast preparations, anticipating a big business. This year as never before the storemen have fixed up their establishments in proper shape for the occasion, and have put in a large stock of flowering plants. Lilies, of course, will predominate, and the stock that is being offered for sale is excellent in quality. The plants in most cases are well grown, carrying four to eight blooms on good stiff stalks and standing alone without that unsightly stake that comes sometimes on the drawn-up stock. One pleasant feature about them this year is that they are not so tall as in former year's which makes them a great deal easier to handle. This Easter finds the storemen all alone in the field; in past years the department stores took hold of thousands of lilies at Easter and sold them at low figures. This year, with a clear field and good stock, the prevalent price will be 25 cents per flower, and everything will be counted. The supply of other flowering plants such as azaleas, hydrangeas, Crimson Ramblers and bulbous stock is in good supply; the azaleas being offered for sale are particularly fine this year. The cutflower supply promises to be good unless something unforeseen happens. The weather man of late has been good to us, giving us plenty of sun, which has had the desired effect by bringing in some of the doubtful stock ready for Easter. A. M.

New Orleans.

We have seldom experienced in New Orleans the weather we had last week. A deluge of water and hail prevented the meeting of the Horticultural Society. Some damage was done to the flowers and also to some greenhouses. F. Faessel was the worst treated, losing quite an amount of glass. E. Valdejo, Ahele Brothers and U. Virgin had only a few broken ones.

M. Cook & Son will have a fine lot of hydrangeas. They have a house of perfect plants in 8-inch pots, well advanced and which will be in perfect shape for that time.

Plants sell quite rapidly now, prices being about the same as last season. Easter will find the market well supplied with good white stock. M. M. L.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.

For a consideration of $20,000, Ira G. Marvin has purchased the Fancourt gardens and greenhouses located in Kingston township. The deal was made owing to the fact that George E. Fancourt, the former owner, was, before his death, about to move with his family to Spokane, Washington, and his purchaser wishes to take his stock from his greenhouses that have been damaged by the flood. This is compulsory if Mr. Marvin wishes to retain his trade for, 140,000 feet of glass, besides choice flowers and plants, were ruined by the water that submerged his Firwood place.

Lenox, Mass.

The Lenox Horticultural Society has issued announcements and premium lists for its exhibitions to be held during the year. The fall exhibition will be held in the town hall, September 9. Fruit, vegetables, cut flowers and plants will be shown. The date for the chrysanthemum exhibition and the rose and strawberry exhibition will be announced later.

Louisville, Ky.

H. Kleinstarink will build three new greenhouses this summer, each 20x150 feet. They will be equipped with iron gutters.

E. J. Marrett died March 25 of pneumonia. He was engaged in the florist business here many years. H. G. W.

expect them to live."

AMONG the rose exhibits at Philadelphia last week, one that attracted more than a little attention and admiration, was John Cook's seedling, No. 115, a cross between A. Revoir and A. Furon. It is a finely formed, large, full flower of a dazzling whiteness rarely seen in roses.

In photographing your pet novelty or seedling always remember that you add nothing to its value in the eyes of others by sticking a big prize card up against it but that you do evince very bad taste as would a man who should decorate himself with trinkets when "getting his pic-

Lilium Harrisii Late in Forcing.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I find my Lilium Harrisii plants, while not diseased, are growing quite irregularly, some being early enough for Easter while quite a percentage are inclined to straggle and will come in later. All are well budded and the plants look healthy. Have you heard of any other complaints of this kind and has the hard winter and dark weather had anything to do with the delayed flowering of these lily plants?
Would like to hear from others through your columns. C. M.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The premium list of special prizes for the exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, in connection with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, Mass., is not yet completed but the following prizes have been offered:

By W. Wells & Co., Redhill, Surrey, Eng., gold, silver-gilt, and silver medals, three prizes for six blooms of any of the Wells-Pockett set of 1903, not less than two varieties to be shown. The list of eligible varieties, as approved by Mr.
Wells is as follows: W. Duckham, May-nell, S. T. Wright, Harrison Dick, Leila Filkins, F. A. Cobbold, Donald McLeod, Mrs. T. Longley, Mrs. R. Hunt, Mary Inglis, Hester Edwards, Pantia Ralli, Cheltoni.

By the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.,
a silver vase to be known as "The E. G.
Hill Trophy," value $25, open to private gardeners only; twenty blooms in twenty varieties, one bloom to a vase.

By Chas. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J.,

$25, $15, and $10 for a vase of twelve blooms of Chrysanthemum Wm. Duck-ham.

By A. Herrington, Madison, N. J., $6, and $4 for vase of six blooms, any chrysanthemum. The C. S. A. Cup will be offered as in previous years. In addition to this the C. S. A. offers three prizes of $25, $15, and $10 for 24 blooms, in 24 varieties, on 15-inch stems, open to all.

Many other special prizes will be given.
It is expected that the horticultural societies of Massachusetts will co-operate with the C. S. A. and the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on the plan which was so successfully carried out in New York last year.

Further announcements will be made next week. FRED. H. LEMON, Sec'y.

SEABROOK, MASS.—George Everett Felch has purchased the greenhouse of Alvah A. Eaton and has moved it to a location near his residence where he will go into the growing business.

OBITUARY.

Charles Eschenbach.

Charles Eschenbach, the oldest florist in Lancaster, Pa., died March 21 from injuries due to a fall. He was aged 80 years.

Harry Geisendorff.

The death occurred recently of Lieut.
Harry Geisendorff, of Company H., Twentieth Indiana Infantry, at the Frost Hospital, Chelsea, Mass., of which institution he has been an inmate since August, 1902. After the war, in which he served with distinction, he was engaged in the flower business for a number of years. He was born in Cincinnati, O., and was 60 years of age.

Prof. Schumann.

Prof. Carl Schumann, curator of the Royal Botanical Museum, Berlin, Germany, is dead. With the exception of the aged Sir Joseph Dalton Hooker, no one probably had so comprehensive knowledge of flowering plants as had he.
Prof. Schumann made large contributions to the "Flora Brasiliensis," edited by Eichler, had worked up the Kaiser Wilhelm's land, and had studied deeply in tropical Africa. He was not yet 50 years of age.

George E. Fancourt.

George E. Fancourt died Sunday,
March 26, at his home in Wilkesbarre, Pa., as the result of a shot from his own hand while laboring under a fit of temporary insanity. The deceased was very popular with all who knew him and was of a very bright and cheerful disposition, and his sudden taking off is a great shock to his friends and business acquaintances.
He was born in Surrey, England, in 1858, and after a long apprenticeship with his father, who was a skilled gardener and whose father before him had held important trusts on the best estates in England, he came to this country in 1879 and settled at Dorrance, Pa. Here he was foreman for Benjamin Dorrance. Later he started in business for himself and was very successful, shipping most of his stock to the New York market. About a week ago he sold out his establishment preparatory to moving to Spokane,
Washington, where he expected to reside.
He leaves a wife and four children.

FLORISTS' AMERICAN EXCHANGE

Things You've Discarded
MAY BE Converted Into Cash.

We are preparing a list of Boilers, Pipes, and other articles useful in building, for publication May 1. In case you are in need of any material before that date, we will thank you to write us stating what you desire. We will take special care to find it for you.

Wanted Immediately Two Steam Boilers, horizontal, 45 to 50 H. P. Also a quantity of 2-inch pipe.

Pointer No. 21. If you would go to Spokane, Washington, examine this Place. One acre good land in the city, one block from street cars; 8 greenhouses, boiler room, office, steam heated, gasoline engine for pumps; 40 bbl. iron tank; 8 room dwelling, two story, 24x26 cellar cemented; bath with hot or cold water; 2 lavatories, wired for electric light; 6 fire places; double floors; some fruit, etc. This place can be had at a very reasonable price. Greenhouses are stocked, everything ready for you to step into. The part of this town is growing fast in locality of this place, besides price being low. Terms are so arranged that the first payment of $1,000 will give you possession and enable you to make the balance pay itself. If not sold quick it may be rented, but a sale will be more satisfactory all around.

Hotbed Sash.

We wish to state that we are unable to find enough to meet the demand.

It Costs Nothing to List Property for Sale With Us. If we make the sale we charge 5 per cent for real estate sales on all amounts not exceeding $1000, for any balance over that amount we charge 2 per cent. For boilers, pipe, wagons, etc. etc., we charge 8 per cent. We do not solicit trade outside of Florists' requirements, although we have a good thrifty Printing Business for sale. It belongs to a son of a florist, and we want to accommodate for sake of family relationship. If you can think of any one likely to want to run a print shop for profit, please advise us. We will not overlook such a courtesy.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

The Seed Trade.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Chas. McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.

Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-23, 1904.

Congressional Seedsmen.

PUBLIC PAYS SALARIES AND SUPPLIES SEEDS.

If the current custom of indiscriminate distribution shall indefinitely continue, if this congressional comedy shall drift into a continuous performance, we shall ultimately be driven to the mournful admission that we are not statesmen, but seedsmen; and it will be in order for some distinguished seedsman, some sainted hero of a score of memorable distributions, some legislative knight upon whose shield is blazoned a radish in its glory or a turnip in repose, to arise in his place with becoming gravity and move, Mr. Chairman, that the American eagle be taken from the mace and supplanted by a package of vegetable seed as the supreme emblem of the genius, the character, and the principal occupation of American statesmanship.—Morris Sheppard, of Texas, in House of Representatives.

SOME holders of onion seed are offering to sell at contract cost.

VISITED CHICAGO: John Lewis Childs, of Floral Park, N. Y., enroute to the coast.

HAMILTON, Montana, seed pea contracts are being made with seedsmen by farmers of the Bitter Root at $2.50 per 100 pounds, stock seed furnished.

THE twenty-second annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association will be held at the Forest Park University hotel, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-23.

THE severe winter has affected even southern stock. Caladium bulbs have suffered from frost and careless dealers are sending out bulbs with no center shoots.

IT is said that Secretary Wilson will support the bill introduced by Representative Trimble, of Kentucky, to prevent the sale of bad seed, which is likely to become law.

AN amendment to the domestic commerce law has been introduced, providing that no person shall sell roots and seeds of ginseng from a country outside the United States without English labels stating the country where they were grown.

CALVERTON, L. I., N. Y.—B. E. Goodell reports that cabbage seed will be a very light crop for the reasons that the acreage is not over one-third of the usual extent, and that the cabbages are not keeping well. At present they show much decay and their appearance indicates further decay when replanted.

NEWPORT, R. I.—Seed potatoes are in very good demand, the best Maine stock bringing $3.75 per barrel to our largest planters. Red onion sets are short here; white and yellow sets are more plentiful and go slow. The market for sets to consumers is: Reds, $3.50, yellows, $3 and whites $4. The spring is late and trade as yet only fair.

New York.

The seed trade planting season is three weeks late here.

The mail trade is fair, some houses working nights to keep up with the orders. The counter trade is as yet very moderate.

Onion sets are in demand at $2.75 to $3 for yellow.

Cox Seed Company Not Injured.

The Cox Seed Company advises us that the statement in the AMERICAN FLORIST, issue of March 26, regarding the company's loss by flood is entirely out of line. The telegram states that the loss was partial only and in but one district, and that the company is still in position to take contracts.

[We are very glad to hear this. Our notes of March 26 were based on Sacramento Valley newspaper reports, letters from San Francisco, and the fact that certain growing contracts made by the Cox Seed Company in the west had been cancelled on account of flood damage.—Ed.]

Send Out the Money.

There is the same reason for going into the market and buying shoes for people as seeds. Why not as well send out the money and let the people buy the seeds themselves.—Carlinville, Ill., Argus.

Vaughan's Forcing Bulbs

For the Coming Season.

VAUGHAN'S "STAR BRAND" PAPER WHITES.

Please mention the American Florist when writing.

Our arrangements for high grade bulbs of Liliun Harrisii, French Romans Paper White Grandiflora, Callas, Japan Longillorum, London Market Valley and picked bulbs of all Dutch Hyacinths, Tulips, Narcissus and Spiraea are unexcelled.

Bulbs secured from us will be subject to careful inspection and approval on arrival, and if in any way unsatisfactory, will be made good at once.

By combining your order for a full line of this stock with us, you get each in season and all at the closest cost for high grade stock. Economy in carload freight shipments and large importations supply half our profits.

Owing to new Custom House regulations it will pay you to place your order for imported stock with an American dealer.

The Nursery Trade

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn., Pres.; Frank A. Weber, St. Louis, Mo., Vice-Pres.; George C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

TREE peonias and herbaceous ones too, repay high cultivation. Without ample feeding the best results are impossible.

FOR seashore planting Tamarix Gallica and T. Chinensis are among the best of the small trees and are thoroughly reliable and hardy.

LEGUSTRUM REGELIANUM is recommended as a fine shrub for planting along the borders and fringes of tree and shrubbery groups.

TRAEER, IA.—John Porterfield has severed his connection with Puckett's department store and will give his entire attention to the nursery business.

JACKSON DAWSON says that shrubs, like people, enjoy good treatment. See that they have good food and opportunity for abundant air and sunlight.

PORTLAND, N. Y.—Thornton Stark, who has charge of the branch nursery establishment at this place of Stark Brothers of Louisiana, Mo., says that business is progressing very favorably.

VICTORIA, B. C.—There is a tremendous demand for fruit trees this season, so much so as to make it impossible for nurserymen here to supply all that is required and large orders have gone to eastern dealers.

LEUCOTHOE CATESBÆI, the handsome broad-leaf evergreen from the North Carolina mountains, the foliage of which is now used extensively in florists' work, has taken its place as one of the hardiest and most reliable shrubs in its class around Boston.

It is not generally known that the prettiest of all the viburnums, V. tomentosum was first brought to this country by a whaling vessel's captain. Another fine one not yet in general cultivation is V. Wrightii, found by Prof. Sargent in 1895. It has glossy foliage, white flowers and bright polished scarlet berries.

At Chicago.

The Florists' Club bowling team met at the Geroux alleys Tuesday evening, March 22. Four games were rolled with the following scores. In the fourth Phil. Hauswirth distinguished himself by knocking over 210 pins. The ladies contributed much to the pleasure of the occasion:

At New York.

The brave bowlers of the New York Florists' Club were treated to an entertainment not down on the programme at the practice meeting last Monday night. It was "prize night" and the struggle for choice was on when a big longshoreman who was indulging in a little argument with the gentleman in charge of the third-dispelling station suddenly whipped out a big horse-pistol and began to give an imitation of a cowboy shooting up a town. Such a scamper! Pin boys and bowlers alike struck out for safety; one corpulent member took refuge behind a post which covered about one-third of his anatomy; one solitary individual stood his ground. It was Elliott, the auctioneer, whose nerve proved him well fitted for his business. The balance of the aggregation took their time about emerging and if the scores are a little weak in the last half the cause is evident. But this is the way the scores are recorded:

"Pity the Poor Blind Man."

The only place in Boston where green carnations, the latest novelty in the flower family, are to be found is the store of the well-known florist, ———. This is a rare flower and few of them have ever been raised. Mr. ——— says that it can only be produced at this season of the year, and in company with the shamrock makes a combination eagerly sought after by the followers of St. Patrick.—Boston News.

DENVER, COL.—Referee in Bankruptcy David B. Burns, announces that Curtis F. Redd, trustee of Miss Bessie Hortop's bankrupt estate, has sufficient money on hand to pay a first dividend.

To CAPITALISTS, INSECTICIDE, MANURE and SUNDRY MERCHANTS.

EXORS R. CAMPBELL,

Water Street, MANCHESTER, ENGLAND.

Has for sale outright the valuable AMERICAN PATENT RIGHTS of their apparatus for safely vaporizing Sulphur in greenhouses. The apparatus is meeting with enormous success in England, and is now the standard remedy for Mildew on Roses, Vines, Peaches, Chrysanthemums, Strawberries, Etc., Carnation, Cucumber, Tomato and other plant diseases; also the dreaded pest, Red Spider. The patent is most impervious and cannot be infringed or improved upon.

Any manufacturer of Manures, Insecticides or Sundries, buying this patent will prove it a GOLD MINE. It will sell in every greenhouse in America, and at the same time help to sell other lines. FULL PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION TO OWNERS.

The Following are a few of many Testimonials received:

Gentlemen:—I enclose cheque in settlement of account for Sulphur Vaporisers. I have given them a thorough trial and am more than pleased with the result.

Generally before housing my Show Chrysanthemum Plants, each one is laid on its side and well syringed with some kind of Fungicide, with the idea of destroying any Mildew or other disease. This is a tiresome and expensive item where several thousands of plants have to be so treated. With your Sulphur Vaporiser this is obviated, for after thoroughly vaporising the house every spot or Symptom of Mildew has disappeared. One variety was badly infected, and after the treatment mentioned I have been interested to note the gradual disappearance of the Mildew; the expanding blooms were in no way injured by the sulphur, and I consider the Vaporisers have already paid their cost.

W. J. GODFREY, Chrysanthemum Specialist.

From W. GIBSON, Fruiterer and Florist, 33 High Street,

Sandown, Isle of Wight, July 9, 1903.

Please send me another Patent Sulphur Vaporiser; I have found it very valuable in killing Mildew on Vines, "leaves and grapes" which it does most effectively, and though I have had a slight re-appearance since I first used the Vaporiser on June 7th, I find it just as easy to check as Green Fly, only the operation takes a little longer. Its effect on roses was very marked. I have a house of Roses that was never free from Mildew till I used the Vaporiser; now the Roses have long clean stems, and splendid foliage, which make the flowers worth as much again. I do not find it injures any plants, such as ferns, lilies, geraniums, etc. I shall do my best to make it known, as I am sure it will be a boon to all growers of Roses and Grapes.

W. GIBSON.

SIR:—Your Worthing correspondent mentions that no cure has yet been found for the dreaded Cucumber Disease. My experience may be of use to growers. The Spot appeared in my second crop of cucumbers this season, and before I knew what it was (not having seen it before) had made considerable headway. I cut away the leaves attacked the most, and vaporized about 3 ozs. of sulphur with one of Campbell's Patent Vaporisers; the house is 70 ft. long, "about 4,000 cubic feet." This is about a fortnight ago. The Spot on the leaves slightly attacked has been completely killed, and no more of the disease has appeared up-to-date. I hold no brief for Messrs. Campbell's, but think their Vaporisers a grand patent, and no grower should be without them. I think if the Vaporisers were used about once a fortnight that the disease would not be seen at all. I don't think the Spot would attack the leaves through the sulphur. Anyhow, it is worth trying.

Yours faithfully,

E. H. E., Crawley.

CRAWLEY, Winchester, Hants, June 14, 1903.

I have used the Patent Sulphur Vaporisers for Mildew on Tomatoes with excellent results; they worked well. They will be a great boon to all growers and the most important aid to the destruction of Mildew in Vines and the various Fungoid Diseases affecting Tomatoes, Cucumbers, Etc.; in fact, they are invaluable wherever sulphur is used.

E. H. EVANS, F. R. H. S.

THE GARDENS, Trinity Cottage, Edinburgh, July 16, 1903.

I am pleased to say that I have been using your Patent Sulphur Vaporiser for several months past for Mildew on Roses. I can safely say that in my opinion it is the best thing yet invented for the use of sulphur on plant foliage; every particle is boiled off in steam, which lights like a dew thickly on the leaves. I have every reason to believe that I would have lost all the Roses with the Mildew by this time only for its use.

THOMAS LESLIE, Head Gardener.

ROYAL IRISH NURSERIES, Newtownards Co., Down, May 13, 1903.

Please send us another of your Patent Sulphur Vaporisers, and much oblige. We are very pleased with results obtained from that sent.

ALEX. DICKSON & SONS, LTD.

THE NURSERIES, Ware Road, Hoddesdon, Herts, July 15, 1903.

We have had your Sulphur Vaporisers in use in our Rose Houses for about three months, and it gives us great pleasure to state that they have given us complete satisfaction in preventing and destroying Mildew.

G. BECKWITH & SON.

SWAYTHLING, Southampton, August 4, 1903.

It is with much pleasure that I testify to the great utility of the Patent Sulphur Vaporiser as a cure and preventive of Mildew and kindred pests.

I have now used them for some months in Peach, Rose and Tomato Houses, also Vinery, and have never had my plants so clean and healthy. To the grower of all crops under glass they would be cheap at six times their actual cost.

W. J. WOODS, F. R. H. S.

MEOPHAN, Kent, July 23, 1903.

The two Sulphur Vaporisers I had from you a few months back, I am glad to say have proved themselves a great boon; I have tried them amongst Roses for Mildew and amongst Tomatoes for the spot, and in both cases they have proved satisfactory both in curing the Blights and more especially, in preventing them coming. Kindly send me two more at your earliest convenience, for which I enclose check.

PHILIP S. LADDS, Farmer and Fruit Grower.

—NEW ROSE—

General MacArthur.

HYBRID TEA.

Color by far the most brilliant of any shade of crimson forcing rose ever offered, retaining its brilliancy when fully expanded. It is also one of the sweetest varieties ever offered, of very easy culture, as it can be grown in the same temperature as an ordinary Tea variety such as the Bride. It is a good, strong, vigorous grower, producing stems 24 to 30 inches long, a free and continuous producer. It can be grown at much less cost than Meteor or Liberty and is a much brighter color than either. Also larger when fully expanded. We predict that this will be the red rose for the multitude. Ready for distribution April 1, 1904.

NEW CASTLE, IND., Feb. 26, 1904.
 Our attention was called to the Rose Gen. MacArthur, three years ago, by the originator, who then had only the one plant. We liked its looks very much, and last year secured 25 plants from The Storrs & Harrison Co. for trial. We cut fine flowers from them all winter, and made 800 cuttings which we are growing this winter. We commenced cutting good flowers from them in November and have done so continuously ever since, it being distinctly a winter rose. At this date the bench is a fine sight. The plants are from two to three feet high, and are sending out flowering shoots which are most all one to two feet in length, although quite a number are three feet or more. It has the most beautiful large lustrous foliage, and most abundant of any rose we have ever seen. The flower is a brilliant red, and has a very fine odor. We find it the best Red Rose we have ever grown. While not as fine a flower as Liberty, with us it is much healthier and so much freer flowering that we prefer it. We have it growing in the same house as Bridesmaid.
 Yours truly,

Breitmeyers' New Rose

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID.

To Be Disseminated April 1, 1904.

COLOR. Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE. Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM. Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH. Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific.

Cardinal New Roses Enchantress

Read Testimonials from two of the largest growers in Washington who have bought large number of plants after seeing them growing at my place.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27, 1904.

Your new rose Cardinal came duly to hand, and we firmly believe it will have a great future and will certainly be a money-maker, as it is in a class all to itself, being superior in form and habit to anything that we have as yet seen. Your new rose Enchantress we also think will be a great money-maker, judging from its profuse blooming quality, as we have seen it several times in mid-winter. It cannot help being a winner. Wishing you every success, we remain,

Yours truly, A. GUDE & BRO.

AMERICAN ROSE COMPANY, 909 F Street, WASHINGTON, March 17, 1904.

Dear Sir:—We gave all the show possible to Enchantress and Cardinal, placing them in our window with placards, telling what they were. They kept a week, retaining their brilliant color to the last. Cardinal was as full of perfume the day the petals dropped, as when it was first cut. The roses are both matchless, and we believe destined to out-class all roses of their color for forcing under-glass.

Very sincerely yours, AMERICAN ROSE CO., per B. D.

BLOOMSBURG, PA., Mar. 18, 1904.

Gentlemen:—Please hook my order for 5,000 of your new red carnation "Crisis." I have watched this carnation for the last three years and I believe it is the best red carnation in cultivation to-day. I sold several thousand blooms of this variety for you last year. It proved to be a good shipper and always gave satisfaction.

Yours very respectfully,

J. L. DILLON.

THE CARDINAL

The Ideal Scarlet Carnation.

Queen of the Cincinnati Market. Winner at Detroit for the best 100 scarlet. Winner at Detroit S. A. F. Medal and Certificate of Merit. The only variety awarded a Certificate at Toronto, March 11.

The Cardinal is an improved Estelle, a large fringed flower, fine keeper, better color, stronger grower than Estelle. More free and never comes single. THE CARDINAL has been pronounced perfect. Raised by R. Witterstaetter, of Cincinnati, and Jas. Hartshorne, of Joliet, Ill., both of whom have watched it for 3 years.

Springfield, Mo.

This city was visited by the most destructive hail storm ever experienced on the evening of March 21. It came almost without a moment's warning and was over in a few minutes. Some of the hailstones were seven inches in circumference. The losses were exceptionally severe, as the following will show: W. A. Chalfant had 3,850 feet of glass broken out of 11,500 feet; Edward Quinn lost 7,500 feet out of 8,000; R. Koeppen lost 6,500 feet out of 8,000; the Summerfield Floral Company had 7,200 feet broken out of 7800 feet and Chas. Summerfield, the vegetable grower, lost 13,000 feet out of 14,500 feet.

The Chalfant range was all double strength glass, which accounts for the smaller proportion broken, as the storm was equally severe all over the city. To add to the distress, heavy rains set in and drenched the houses and on March 25 a cold wave sent the mercury to 25° causing a freeze in many of the houses. All were looking forward to a heavy Easter trade as the year had been very prosperous. Several firms have begun reglazing and in time the losses will be made good. C.

Every one is preparing for Easter. The Stuppy Floral Company has a promising lot of lilies and bulbous stock with a fair supply of roses and carnations. The company's new store was only recently opened and it is elegantly furnished.

D. M. Reichard will have a fine lot of azaleas at the proper time. E. V. Meyers is cutting a fine lot of Lawson carnations at present, and from all indications will continue to do so for some time to come.

J. N. Kidd spent ten days of March in Colorado on business. He also has a fine flower in the way of a large new baby boy, which helps to keep him busy.

With Easter drawing near and good business the past month the prospects for a prosperous spring trade are promising.

Mr. Rau, superintendent of the city park, is a very busy man now.

DON'T WASTE

Printed Matter and Postage.

THE American Florist Company's Directory saves many times its price to every one who catalogues or circularizes even a small part of the trade. Fully revised to date of publication, it puts the mail only to live names, avoiding waste of postage and printed matter, time and labor.

Contains 412 pages, lists of Florists, Seedsmen and Nurserymen of the United States and Canada by states and towns, also alphabetically; firms that issue catalogues, foreign merchants, horticultural societies and much other up-to-date information which makes it a reference book of daily utility wherever a wholesale trade is done.

Sent postpaid at $2.00 a copy by the publishers.

Pittsburg.

Every necessary condition for a successful Easter business is with us. Weather, quality of cut and blooming stock, supply and advance demand is right up to the mark. Many new and unique arrangements for azaleas and Rambler roses, effective gardenettes, hampers of hyacinths and many other attractive novelties are on exhibition. Roses, carnations, tulips and in fact all kinds of cut stock seem to be plentiful and at a wide range of quality and price.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has granted a perpetual injunction against the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company restraining the company from operating its furnaces in Soho. The ore dust which was emitted was very destructive to vegetation, and especially so in Schenley Park, where many valuable trees and flower beds were ruined.

The Pittsburg Florists' Exchange temporarily rented a large store room on Diamond street in which to handle the Easter business which will be very large.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Company states that distant buyers show large increases in their purchases and a very successful Easter business is anticipated.

Over ninety men are employed in the Phipps' Conservatories preparing for Easter.

W. L. Campbell is having splendid success in the disposing of his gladioli bulbs.

Lincoln I. Neff's display of tulips, hyacinths and azaleas is very attractive.

John Bader has received a large importation of box trees. E. L. M.

Lansing, Mich.

The recent floods in this vicinity practically destroyed the establishment belonging to Smith & McDowell. A part of one greenhouse was washed away and on Saturday morning the water stood in all of the houses up to the eaves. Smith & McDowell bought the plant belonging to C. J. Fitzsimmon last fall and have shown a great deal of enterprise during the winter. On Tuesday they opened a store uptown with a full line of Easter flowers, among which will be Easter lilies and plants rescued before the flood entered the houses. I. C.

TO-BAK-INE

For Spraying or Vaporizing Is Unexcelled. Free From Ammonia.
A Concentrated Liquid Solution of Pure Nicotine.

CAN YOU AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT IT? It is absolutely the BEST.

Cost of Spraying. To kill Green and Black Fly, Thrips, Aphis, etc., it requires only one to two teaspoonfuls, and for Red Spider and Mealy Bug three to four teaspoonfuls to a gallon of water, making the cost only 1½ to 6 cents per gallon.

For Fumigating. To-Bak-ine may be vaporized by placing the required quantity (one ounce is sufficient for 2,000 to 6,000 cubic feet) in a shallow pan and heating with alcohol lamp or otherwise. It can also be vaporized on your steam pipes by applying with a soft paint brush, using the quantity as above.

1-4 pint can, 60c; 1-2 pint can, $1.10; 1 pint can, $2.00; 1 gallon can, $15.00. Send Your Order to

E. H. HUNT, 76 Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO.

SHADING.

What you need is a reliable shading upon your greenhouse glass, one that will not easily wash off by rains. Upon receipt of $1 00 I will mail to any address printed recipe for for same with instructions how mix. It saves labor and material, because it stays where you put it. Address

• THE EASTER TRADE. •

REPORTS from all parts of the country indicate that it was a record Easter in many respects. It is gratifying to note that few decreases in the volume of business from that of Easter 1903 are reported; in fact, where a decrease existed it may be attributed to unfavorable weather or other purely local conditions. Supplies, especially in large growing centers, were adequate to the demands. Roses and carnations were generally of very high quality and the prices stood firm throughout the week preceding the Sunday holiday. A noticeable feature of the trade everywhere was the situation in bulb stock, which was reported a glut almost universally. Violets in the east were in great favor, while in many western centers they were no factor whatever. The usual heavy retail trade in fancy boxes, baskets and bouquets was carried on. Few novelties worthy of particular mention were noted.

That the plant is working its way deeper into popular favor as a holiday flower was proved by the sales this year. In many places it was only after all the bright colored flowering plants were exhausted that the cut flowers were recognized by the buyers. The favorite Easter lily plant was in grand supply everywhere. There were few complaints as to the quality of the stock. Azaleas, hydrangeas, genistas and cinerarias also came in for a large patronage.

Brief trade reports from various sections of the country follow. They express unbounded satisfaction and indicate that the trade everywhere is in a thriving condition.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y.—S. G. Ellis reports a satisfactory business. Prices ruled somewhat higher than last year. All stock, plants and cut flowers were in good supply.

LANSING, MICH.—Ida L. Chittenden says that this Easter's business eclipsed that of last year. Plants were in great demand and bulbous stock was well cleaned up.

MONTREAL, CAN.—Nothing unusual in the trade here, except that lily plants were scarce. There was a good call for hydrangeas and white hyacinths, says B. T. Graves.

WINONA, MINN.—The usual Easter business was transacted. The supply was not up to the demand, the stock being cut short by a week of cloudy weather before Easter.

HELENA, MONT.—Everything in the plant line, except lilies, was plentiful. The weather was ideal, making an excellent Easter business, reports the State Nursery Company.

HAGERSTOWN, MD.—Nothing out of ordinary in Easter business says Henry Holzapfel. Good fancy carnations were the leading sellers and American Beauty roses also sold well.

DAYTON, O.—H. H. Ritter found nothing exceptional in the trade. The weather was cold and disagreeable, interfering greatly with a rushing business. All lines were in good supply.

ALLEGHENY, PA.—Sales about same as Easter, 1903, but general prices somewhat lower this year. Azaleas were in good demand. G. & J. W. Ludwig report a satisfactory trade.

EXETER, N. H.—Slight improvement over Easter 1903, prices the same, stock plentiful and roses in great demand, writes G. W. Hillard, proprietor of the Exeter Rose Conservatories.

LAWRENCE, KAN.—C. M. & S. E. Luther found Easter business about as usual, with a slight increase in prices. In some lines there was a shortage in supply. Many lilies were sold.

ANACONDA, MONT.—R. M. Creig reports Easter business this year about on a par with last year. Plants and cut flowers were equal to the demand. Roses and carnations were the big sellers.

NEWPORT, KY.—Easter business was not up to the standard, T. Windram noticing a ten per cent decrease from that of last year. Roses were the scarcest item and all other lines were full.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—A nice increase in value of sales, reports the Central Michigan Nursery. There was a fair demand for lilacs, Crimson Rambler roses and lilies. New plants eagerly sought.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—John White is conservative and doesn't estimate much of an increase in business. Any kind of a plant, well grown, especially lilies, sold readily. Carnations were the best sellers.

LEAD, S. D.—A brisk Easter demand cleaned up all stock and the total sales beat those of last year by sixty per cent. Lily plants and in fact everything in bloom sold readily, reports Alexander Rose.

UTICA, N. Y.—Everything in good supply and the Easter business was on a par with Easter 1903. There was a splendid demand for orchids and no one had enough for the call, writes William Mathews.

TORONTO, CAN.—Violets and American Beauty roses were the only scarce items. Everything sold well, especially plants. Easter business was better in point of sale values than last year, report Wm. Jay & Son.

SIoux FALLS, S. D.—In the opinion of M. M. Strong everyone handled at least twenty-five per cent more business than last year. Plants, except lilies, were in good supply. The latter were not of the best quality.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—Both plants and cut flowers were not enough to meet the calls for them. Lilies and azaleas were the favorite plants. Tipton & Hurst report a good trade, with last year's prices ruling.

GENEVA, N. Y.—The Union Street Greenhouse Company states that the retail sales were about double those of last year. Carnation prices were one-fourth higher. Plants and cut flowers all cleaned up well.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—John B. Keller's Sons report a slight increase in sale values over last Easter. Azaleas and lily plants were the leading sellers. The weather was unfavorable all week, keeping down the sales.

SEDALIA, MO.—Gelven & Son say that the call for potted plants is getting smaller every year, carnations carrying away the principal Easter trade. The Easter business this year was on a par with that of 1903.

AUGUSTA, GA.—Jules Rival found Easter business very satisfactory, the increase over last year being twenty-five per cent. Harrisii lilies were short of the demand, especially those in pots. White roses were in heavy demand.

FREEMPORT, ME.—John Burr puts the increase of Easter business over last year at ten per cent. Cut flowers and plants were all cleaned up and many more could have been sold. A good demand was noted for small plants.

SAVANNAH, GA.—The demand here kept ahead of the supply and everyone was kept on the jump. White roses and carnations were very scarce. Most of the lilies were late and more than forty per cent poor, writes John Wolf.

PINE BLUFF, ARK.—The buyers here were not particular, anything in plants and cut flowers selling readily. Not enough plants to meet the calls. The business averaged as good as Easter 1903, writes Mrs. C. A. Starr.

STILLWATER, MINN.—The supply and demand were evenly balanced, writes Frank Berry, lily plants being the only scarcity. Business better than last year and total sales larger. Carnations and bulbous stock had the lead over roses.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—Generally speaking, business was better than last year, with plenty of good stock. Lily plants sold readily. Muddy streets made deliveries difficult and slow, reports the Salt Lake-Huddart Floral Company.

PAMONA, CAL.—O. Roessner reports business the same as last year with prices about 10% better. The supply of both cut flowers and plants was not large enough to meet the demand. Few cut flowers outside of carnations were sold.

CAMDEN, N. J.—Total sales were at least thirty per cent greater than Easter 1903, says C. W. Turnley. Lily plants sold for 20 cents per flower. Small plants were in great demand. Violets were short in supply. Roses did not sell so well.

WILKESBARRE, PA.—Better stock was demanded by the buyers this year than last and there was plenty of it in supply. Everything in plants and cut flowers was cleaned up and Ira G. Marvin says business was twenty percent better than last year.

The Late George Fancourt.
(See issue of April 2, page 438.)

BAKER CITY, ORE.—A most satisfactory Easter trade is reported by Ira B. Sturges, who figures the increase over last year at twenty-five per cent. Every plant was cleaned up as well as all cut flowers. Greens were greatly in demand.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—Total sales and prices did not differ materially from Easter 1903. Carnations were somewhat short. Bulbous stock sold slowly. A noticeable demand for plants in preference to cut flowers, especially in J. F. Wilcox's retail place.

MANSFIELD, O.—Florists have chalked up a nice fat forty per cent increase in sale values over 1903, although prices were about the same. Easter deliveries were difficult to execute on Saturday owing to rough weather, writes the Berno Floral Company.

OWATONNA, MINN.—Prices were 33 $\frac{1}{3}$ per cent higher than last year but the long and cold winter cut the net profits. Buyers are growing more conservative each year. L. P. Lord says that cut flowers were short of the demand but that plants were plentiful.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Greater volume of business, better prices and a good supply in all lines made the Easter business here most satisfactory. Home grown cut flowers were short, as were lilies. The trade of Jos. Coenen & Company was about twenty-five per cent over that of last year.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—Carnations and violets were much in demand but roses were slow. On Easter Sunday there was two inches of snow and the mercury stood 10° below the freezing point. A. Stoeckle reports business as good, however, fully twenty-five per cent better than in 1903.

PEORIA, ILL.—James C. Murray says that business averaged up about the same as last year although all prices ranged from ten to fifteen per cent higher. Good stock was scarce in both plants and cut flowers. Fancy carnations sold at good prices and were in great demand.

TROY, N. Y.—Geo. T. Sambrook & Son report a satisfactory increase in the total sales in money value, although prices were the same. Strange to say violets, which were a glut in so many western cities, were far short of the demand. A good call was noted for azaleas, lilacs and lily plants.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—This place is not in line with the increase reported almost everywhere. Walker & McLean say that the ten per cent decrease was caused by the cold, raw weather prevalent two days before Easter. The stock, which was in good supply, was of a higher quality than last year.

DENVER, COL.—The Park Floral Company reports twenty-five per cent increase over last year's business. Plants and cut flowers were in good supply, with the exception possibly of American Beauty and Liberty roses. The trade ran largely toward plants, cut flowers cutting less of a figure than ever before.

NEW LONDON, CONN.—Everything passed off satisfactorily. Prices probably averaged lower than 1903. A good plant trade was handled. Carnations and violets were leaders and lily plants enjoyed a remarkable run. Two rainy days preceded Easter, otherwise everything would have been short, says H. H. Appeldorn.

WICHITA, KAN.—No great increase was noted here. The prices ranged about on a par with last year and the plant supply was able to meet the demand, excepting possibly lily plants. Cut flowers were somewhat scarce. Bulbous stock moved slowly. The weather was fine and numerous medium priced sales were recorded, write W. H. Culp & Company.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—A satisfactory increase of twenty-five per cent over that of Easter 1903 was enjoyed by the florists here although the prices were about the same. The Lake View Rose Gardens had 18,000 pot lilies sold March 30 and they had a call for 5,000 more. Crimson Ramblers sold well and everything in cut flowers was plentiful except carnations.

ANNISTON, ALA.—The usual Easter business in point of total sales, prices and supply, writes J. Ulbricht. He also states that a great drawback to the florist there is the fact that at Easter, early or late, the woods are full of crabapple trees, rhododendrons, dogwood, etc., all in full bloom. Every one gathers these flowers, even the church people, and the florist suffers.

OGDEN, UTAH.—F. J. Hendershot estimates the Easter business as fully 100% better than last year. There was enough of all stock to go around. Hyacinths and valley sold slowly but there was great activity in roses, carnations, lilies and violets. A number of Denver wholesalers canvassed the city and sold holly, etc., to the grocers, who cut on the trade with the extra supply.

AURORA, ILL.—The total sales over Easter of 1903 average 10 per cent, although even better business was expected. Violets and carnations were short and more small plants could have been used. Bulbous stock sold only after fresh carnations and roses gave out. Pickled stock couldn't sell even in preference to bulbous stock. Joseph M. Smely enjoyed a good business.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Some dealers think there was an advance, others a decrease in this Easter's trade. No shortage existed in any line. Flowering plants led in sales. Cut roses were not in favor. The weather was bad, causing a loss of twenty-five per cent in sales. L. E. Marquisee thinks that the increasing display of Easter gifts in the stores doubtless reduces the popularity of flowers as gifts.

THE PEONY.

Peonia Lutea Franchet.

In the midst of the recent floral splendors at Ghent a hardy plant attracted the attention of connoisseurs, a herbaceous peony, with flowers of a beautiful golden yellow, clear, bright and pure in color. The plant was exhibited by Victor Lemoine & Sons. It seemed a little eclipsed by the striking colors of the new azaleas and by the very beautiful bromeliads of M. Duval, but those who were alive to good things—and notably all the reporters for horticultural papers—placed the new peony as a plant worthy of the attention of the judges who gave it the highest award in their power. Emile Lemoine has written as follows regarding this plant in the Revue de L'Horticulture Belge:

Among some seedlings from seed sent to the Jardin des Plantes at Paris by the abbe Delavay years ago was found this new woody, yellow flowered peony.

In an interesting article accompanied by colored photographs Louis Henry, eleven years later, related how the Museum of Natural History at Paris having received seed of this poppy from the abbe Delavay, set out to raise and flower some plants. The packet was labeled: "Alpine plant seed received upon the Che-Te-Hotze below Tapin-tze, October 15, 1886." It contained twenty-six common looking seeds, of which, planted upon their arrival, three seeds germinated May 28, 1888. The first flower opened in early June, 1891. The following year it flowered again and was shown by Professor Maxime Cornu before the National Society of Horticulture of France at its session of June 9. In 1893 it was again shown on May 25.

Successful grafting and seeding enabled the museum to distribute young plants to various botanical establishments, notably to the Kew Gardens, and the Botanical Magazine gave a description of it in 1901 with a colored plate. A plant and some grafts were sent to Lemoine & Sons, who introduced it in 1902.

It is a small, smooth shrub forming clumps reaching three feet in height, and produces new shoots from the roots freely. The stalks are woody and more or less persistent with grayish bark. The leaves are large, composed of three leaflets which are divided nearly to their bases of a deep green above, pale or glaucous green below. The flowers are solitary upon their peduncles and two or three are produced by each branch. The slender peduncles, clear green or bronze, are often stimate or horizontal. The corolla measured from two to three and a half inches in diameter; petals, six to eleven; color, the beautiful lustrous yellow of the caltha. The numerous golden yellow stamens form a dense ring around the three to five greenish yellow carpels. The flowers appear regularly in early June; that is when the tree peonies are done blooming and a little ahead of the herbaceous peonies; they are agreeably fragrant. The seeds are large, round, a little angular, deep brown, variable in number and enclosed in the carpels, which remain green and fleshy, not becoming dry.

This peony is a variable species. There are two distinct forms already. One has branches, petioles and nerves of the leaves of a reddish brown, stems green up to the leaves, flowers two to two and one-half inches, with six to eight petals of a brilliant yellow, a little late in flowering. The other has bronze leaves when first opening, then passing to deep green, as do the branches and petioles, large flowers three and one-half inches, nine to eleven petals of a bright yellow, filaments reddish brown, and a little early in opening its flowers. The first variety has been distributed; the last is the one shown at the late exposition in Ghent, which was a pot grown young plant and does not give a full idea of what a larger plant grown in the open would be. The plant has proven hardy but it will be wise to protect it with a few leaves. Ordinary garden soil suits it and it is easily grafted on the roots of the herbaceous peony or can be increased by dividing the old plants.

Popularizing the Peony.

[George C. Watson of Philadelphia, Pa., before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, April 2, 1904.]

I suppose it is not every day you have a chance to look at a Philadelphian. I can assure you it was quite a wrench for me to drag myself away from my desk at this busy season, but I am proud to claim that I am half a Bostonian myself, and I really could not resist the temptation. In my early days I sat for five years under the shadow of Fanueil Hall, and I know of no better place to absorb the grand traditions of the gardening achievements of Boston than in the vicinity of that time honored building. I learned there to appreciate the great names in the gardening history of Boston, from the Endicotts and Fanueils and Fessendens and Brecks down to the Wilders and Hoveys, Olmsted and Harrises and many others that I do not think of for the minute.

When I settled in Philadelphia some sixteen years ago I soon found that they also had a roll of honor in the gardening world of which they were proud. They had their Bartrams, their Marshalls, their Pierces, their McMahons, and later their Buists, their Landreths, their Meehans, and many others who had added greatly to the achievements of gardening in that locality. There was, therefore, a strong bond of amity between the two centres of gardening in North America, each appreciating what the other had done and basking in the sunshine of a cosmopolitan glory which they claim as a common heritage. You can, therefore, appreciate my feelings when your secretary, Mr. Rich, asked me to come to Boston and talk peonies to you. I told him that I was not confident that I could make the subject interesting but that I could talk all day and still, perhaps, not tell them very much on the subject. I am not a peony expert by any means and do not pretend for a moment to consider myself in the same class as a Terry, a Richardson, a Hovey or a Thurlow. I am merely a lover of this king of border flowers, an onlooker whose delight and wonder at the amazing development of what may be termed the modern peony is unbounded and who takes an equal delight in trying to impart some of this enthusiasm to others.

Although my official connection with the S. A. F. Peony Association, which had its inception at the Asheville convention in 1902, might lead some of you to expect that I would say something about the nomenclature of the peony, I may state that that matter is only in its initiatory stage and it will take a long time before definite results can be obtained. A nucleus of a test collection has been formed in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, and this will be added to from time to time. The number of varieties planted out is small as yet and the effort can only be termed a step in the right direction so far.

But the matter of nomenclature though important need not hinder efforts to still further popularize the modern peony by exhibitions, by lectures, by writings in the horticultural press or by any other means that may suggest themselves. For although the past ten or fifteen years have witnessed a great increase in public favor, it is as yet nothing to what the merits of the subject entitle it. Mention a peony to the average owner of a garden and nine times out of ten the flower that rises to his mind's eye is the old double red of our grandmother's garden—very good in its way but without fragrance, or size or form and not to be compared with the gorgeous, many colored, fragrant masses of bloom which go to the make-up of the modern varieties.

One reason why more peonies are not grown is the comparative slowness of reproduction as compared with roses and other popular flowers. These latter can be quickly raised from cuttings and when quite small lend themselves admirably to that magnificent medium for spreading a love of flowers among the people, the mail order catalogue. If "twelve-for-a-dollar" of young plants of the modern peonies could be sent broadcast over the land through the mails as is done with roses there would be less necessity for societies like yours or enthusiasts like myself making efforts to tell the people about the gorgeousness and fragrance of the new peonies. The catalogue man would do the work for us and far quicker and better too. But we have to depend on root division, etc., for propagating the desirable varieties and good pieces with two or three eyes cost a great deal more to produce than a young rose plant. As for new varieties these are raised from seed and four or five years must elapse before they are judgeable. From a commercial standpoint the peony is emphatically not the plant for small capital and quick returns. It takes money, time and patience to get results; but when the results are obtained what a glorious reward for the efforts expended!

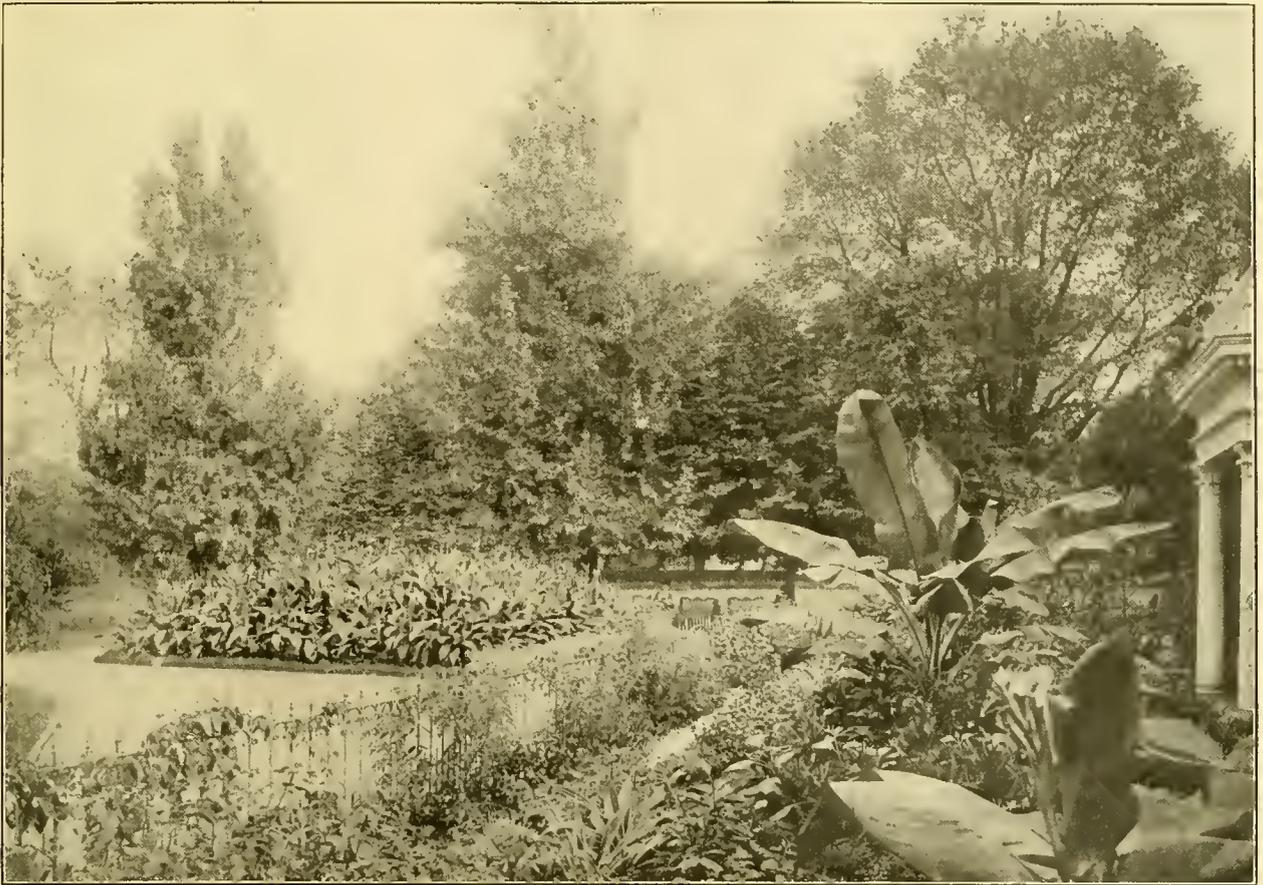

In a wild state the peony family consists of some twenty-five distinct species. Baker's monograph of 1884 enumerates twenty-two, that of R. Irwin Lynch in 1890 gives twenty-five. The latter authority was of the opinion that our modern garden forms originated mostly from two of these species, namely, P. albi-

flora, a native of Siberia, and the European P. officinalis. Some few are traceable to P. peregrina, a native of Southern Europe, two or three to P. tenuifolia, a Russian species, and considerable influence is also attributed to two double forms imported from China, P. Reevesi and P. Pottsi. These last two are termed "hybrids of Sinensis" by Verdier of Paris, who achieved prominence as a disseminator of new peonies about 1838. According to Mr. Paul the first raisers were M. Lemon Pere, of Porte St. Denis, Paris, 1824; M. Jacques, gardener to King Louis Philippe, at Neuilly, 1824, whose collection passed on to his nephew, M. Victor Verdier; and M. Guerin, Paris, 1837. M. Lemoine, of Nancy, and M. Keteleer, of Paris, were also prominent raisers of peonies from the beginning of their culture. Lemoine refers to the rich collection of the Prince de Salm Dyck, at Soulange Bodin, near Paris, which he saw in 1842. A most distinguished French raiser was M. Calot, of Douai, who inherited the Comte de Cussy collection and continued the collection and production of seedlings to 1872, when the collection passed into the hands of M. Crousse, of Nancy, who did much to bring the standard up to the high mark our collections have now attained. M. Buyck, the raiser of the celebrated Festiva Maxima, and M. Parmentier, of Enghien, were among the prominent workers on the peony in Belgium in the early days. In England little had been done with the peony up to 1850 when Salter began his collection. Kelway started hybridizing in 1864 and his his energy and long continued enterprise in raising and distributing improved forms has done much to popularize the peony. In 1884 Kelway catalogued 250 varieties; of these sixty-three were new, single, and forty-one new double, of his own raising. Kelway's exhibit at the Royal Horticultural Society's show that year, according to Richard Dean, "greatly astonished old fashioned gardeners who could look back to the time when only about twenty, all told, species and varieties, were known in cultivation." Barr, Hooper, Paul and others were also prominent among the English horticulturists who did good work on the peony.

In America, so far as I have been able to learn, there are but few names prominent as raisers of new varieties. Among the first of whom I find mention is that of H. A. Terry, of Iowa. Mr. Terry writes me that he commenced growing peonies in 1858, getting his first stock from Prince, of Flushing, thirty varieties including Humei, Pottsi, Reevesi, Fragrans, Count of Paris, Festiva Maxima, Lutetiana, Edulis superba, Plenissima Rosea, Queen Victoria, etc. Most of the thirty produced seed freely and Mr. Terry soon had thousands of seedlings, but he says that generally not five in a thousand would be worth propagating and often not one. He has now a fine collection of some 200 choice varieties of his own raising. Mr. Terry is of the opinion that Festiva Maxima is still the best all around white, and for pink he thinks there is none much better than Plenissima Rosea. Grover Cleveland is his best dark crimson. Of fancy colored varieties he names Carrie, Esther, La Reine, Mrs. Pleas, Maude, Hutchinson, Stephania and Variegata. "I am now in my 78th year," says Mr. Terry, "and do not know how long I will continue to grow peonies, but I want to be surrounded with them as long as I live. They are like my children, very dear to me." I have heard Morning Star, one of his seedlings, highly spoken of. It has light delicate outer petals and the inner ones radiate like star rays from the center. Said to be a most lovely, fragrant and winsome flower. His Mrs. Harrison is also a fine one with deep red outer petals, center delicate pink. Mrs. Sarah E. Pleas, of Indiana, has also been an ardent worker in raising new varieties for many years. Her variety, Golden Wedding, is unique and beautiful.

Your own Richardson was also a noted raiser of new varieties. His work I have no historical data concerning, but presume it must have been done during the 60's and 70's. The records of your society would tell. His variety Rubra Superba is considered by many to rank in its color with the celebrated Festiva Maxima. One of its most valuable characteristics from a commercial standpoint is its shipping and keeping qualities. A large shipper of cut peony blooms to the Chicago market, who handled last season over 300,000 peonies of the best varieties of the day, states that Rubra Superba is the best shipper and keeper of all. Richardson's Perfection, Dorchester, Grandiflora and Norfolk are also very fine varieties. Hovey, Ellwanger, Peterson, Barry, Pentland, Thurlow, are also among the American names that should be added to the roll of honor as enthusiasts if not actual raisers of new varieties and there are doubtless others that I do not think of for the minute. Mr. Harrison and Mr. Rosenfield are doing splendid work in the west in popularizing the thoroughbred peony. All through the great west and northwest the people are becoming enthusiasts and are finding the peony a much more satisfactory plant than the rose. Mr. Rosenfield, of Nebraska, has been quite successful in raising American seedlings. One of the best is Blushing Maid, a light blush, late, very fragrant.

Around Chicago quite a number of large plantations have been formed for the sale of the cut blooms alone and they are reported as profitable. The peony is a good keeper when cut at the proper stage in the bud and they not only ship well long distances but can be kept in cold storage for weeks, and will open up beautifully when wanted and with the colors more perfect and delicate than if they had been allowed to open on the plant.

Now as to the varieties. I am frequently asked the embarrassing question as to which are the best twenty-five or fifty out of the hundreds and hundreds of fine new kinds now in commerce. I have tried it, on a few occasions, and each time I almost wish I hadn't. If, for instance, I should name Magnifica, some one will be after me as to which Magnifica. There at least two of that name. If I name Princess of Wales there are at least three of them, and so with many more. I used to make copious notes of the exhibits at your Boston shows, including the grand collection of Mr. Thurlow in its heyday. I have visited good collections when in flower and spent many delightful hours notebook in hand. I have grown a few good ones myself and what I have been innocent enough to praise as good in the past, I at least thought so, however mistaken. But I agree in advance that my list can be improved on by better judges, and I submit same with a meekness exceeding the meekness of Moses and am perfectly satisfied to have it corrected on the shortest notice. For Massachusetts the four early flowering kinds namely: P. tenuifolia plena and the three colors of P. officinalis are indispensable, as they flower in May and are welcome even if they are not large or fragrant. Among the June flowering I think I am fairly safe in mentioning the following:

WHITE.

Duke of Wellington	Alice Julocourt
Festiva Maxima	Grandiflora Nivea
La Tulipe	Baroness Schroeder
La Vestale	Helene Leslie
Marie Lemoine	Madame Dupont
Duchess de Nemours	Viscountess Folkestone
Noemie Demay	Triomphe de Paris

PINK.

Belle Doualssiene	Madame de Vetry
Caroline Allain	Paganini
Delicatissima	Princess May
Duchess of Sutherland	Humei Carne
Eugene Verdier	Rosea Grandiflora
Faust	Alexandre Dumas
General Bedeau	Glorie de Patrie
Leonie	Josephine Parmentier
Madame Breon	Reine des Fleurs
Lady Bramwell	Washington

DEEP ROSE.

Dr. Bretonneau	John Fraser
Abel de Pujol	Sir Charles Dilke
	Etendard du Grand Homme.

DEEP CRIMSON.

Rubra Superba	Rubra triumphans
Marshal Macmahon	Delachei
Souv. d'Auguste Mieliez	Louis Van Houtte
	Francois Ortegai.

The foregoing fifty are all medium priced varieties that can be purchased at from 25 cents to about $1 each. Many of the extra fine new ones have not been included on account of their high price. Very few of ordinary planters care to pay $2.50, $3.50 or $5 a root for the very latest, most of them preferring to wait until the prices have become more reasonable before adding them to their collections.

In regard to the culture of the peony I prefer to leave that to more experienced and competent hands than my own. In a general way the details are known to all of you or can readily be found in your library. If I have been able to interest you in these rambling notes on this magnificent flower, which is now commencing to again take its true place in our gardens, I am happy and hope you will immediately resolve to plant a worthy collection of the grand modern varieties.

Washington Botanic Garden Notes.

The large palm house is at present an unrivaled picture of tropical verdure. In contemplating these gigantic specimens of the various popular florists' species one gets a conception of their beauty never afforded by the small plants with which we are familiar. Mr. Smith has been long deeply interested in the study of temperatures best suited to these plants and has been especially devoted to an effort to demonstrate the advantage in culture at a much lower degree than is usually given. One house is kept at a very low temperature for this purpose and in it are most of the cocoses and kentias, all the araucarias, all the green foliaged dracenas, Corypha australis, the arecas and many other things less familiar, all showing a sturdiness and a verdure far surpassing those in the hot houses and here scale and other troublesome insects are almost unknown. Mr. Smith cites as an example in support of his views the fact that the first specimens of Cocos australis brought across the Atlantic were actually killed by being put into a stove house. He sees in Areca glandiformis, listed by Nicholson as a handsome stove palm, a fine subject for cool house culture well adapted for florists' use, seeds being readily obtainable in Jamaica. Dracena Rossiana latifolia is another subject pointed out as having qualities fitting it for commercial uses.

About fifty varieties of roses are under cultivation in the new rose house and the plants are in splendid vigor. This house is 25x70, erected by Lord & Burnham Company. Three summer views in the garden are presented herewith. No. 1 shows the planting in front of Mr. Smith's residence. In the rear are seen fine specimens of the cut-leaved and the plain Salisburia adiantifolia and the "winged elm," Ulmus alata. No. 2 is a view of one of the ornamental grass beds, the tall Arundo donax making an effective central figure. No. 3 shows a magnificent specimen of Rhapis humilis which does better here, Mr. Smith avers, than in its tropic home.

BRYN MAWR, PA.—The greenhouses of James Rawle were partly destroyed by fire on March 13.

NEW ORLEANS, LA—One C. L. Bresford is wanted in New Orleans. He claims to have come from San Francisco, is 26 to 28 years of age, buys liberally from various local florists and fails to settle. He disposes of the stock to private buyers.

SALEM, O.—Joseph E. Bonsall has sold his greenhouses to Graves & Reisch, of Beloit, O., who took possession immediately after Easter. O. W. Bundy who held the position of foreman with Mr. Bonsall will retain that place with the new firm.

Growing Violets.

[Paper by E. Y. Pierce, read before the New Bedford Florists' Club, Bedford, Mass., March 10.]

In the first place get good clean plants or cuttings, and get them early enough to plant the rooted cuttings in the field by the last of April, in good strong soil with plenty of room to work them. Keep the weeds from the plants by frequent hoeing, and as they attain a good growth, the runners will appear and they should be looked after, and cut off close with a sharp knife. It throws the strength back to the plant that would otherwise go to the runners, and make a large straggling plant of little use.

After the plants have become large enough to plant in the house, which they should be by September, the house should be made ready. If they are to be grown on benches the earth should all be taken out, the boards washed off clean and a good coat of hot lime wash applied to the sides and bottom of the bench. In filling the bench the earth should be of a friable nature, two parts of well rotted sod and one part of old cow dressing mixed well together. Six or seven inches of soil is about the right depth for bench growing. The plants should be taken up with a good ball of earth so as not to disturb the roots more than is necessary, and planted as soon as possible to prevent drying the roots. They should be planted eight inches apart each way, which I think is far enough, watered thoroughly, and if very warm they should be shaded a little for a few days. Give them plenty of air at all times, day and night, until frosty weather, and then moderate air and water according to the weather.

After the first watering do not wet the foliage, especially in the cold short days of winter. Keep the earth moist but not too wet. In growing them cool it is best to keep them a little on the dry side, rather than the wet. I notice that green or black fly do not disturb them as much when grown moderately cool about 42° at night, and 58° by day with plenty of air. Of course there are times when the sun is very warm and the thermometer will go up higher, but it can be kept at 65° which will do no harm. If warmer than that, however, it will induce a soft growth which is to be avoided. My rule is to keep them as near an even temperature as possible. After they have been growing two or three months, I find it helps them to have a little dressing water once a week. Cow dressing, I think, is best, but not too strong at first. Another essential thing is to keep the earth well stirred; it is a good preventive of spot and other diseases.

In growing violets in a solid bed the conditions are the same as bench growing as far as temperature, air and water are concerned. The bed should not be less than twelve inches deep but eighteen to twenty-four inches is better. If possible there should be eight or ten inches of stone or cinders for drainage, and the earth should be prepared in the same way as for benches, only care should be taken to firm the soil well by tramping lightly over the surface so that when watering the earth will not settle much from the plants. When planting great care should be taken so as not to cramp the roots. Make the hole large enough to take the roots comfortably and press the soil around the plant firmly. Plant deep enough but do not bury the crown, by doing which you will cause many of the small buds to rot, consequently shortening the period of flowering. As the weather becomes warmer I think it is a good plan to slightly shade the house with thin lime wash. This keeps the flowers from burning and fading, which they will do if the strong sunlight is directly on them.

In growing the different varieties care should be taken to find out the kinds your customers like the best. If you retail your flowers it is well to have both double and single; if you sell at wholesale I think it is as well to confine yourself to only one kind, so as to give it special care. The most productive kinds I have grown have been Princess of Wales, single, and Lady Campbell, double. Although I have grown a number of other kinds I have found more profit in these.

PALMS AND FERNS.

Sundry Palm Notes.

The revision of plant names that has given us archontophenix as the proper generic name for Seaforthis elegans and Ptychosperma Alexandræ, while it may be eminently correct, will probably do little to familiarize the general public with plants, from the fact that few will attempt to pronounce it or to inquire for a plant with such a polysyllabic title. Two handsome and easily grown palms may thus be more neglected as the years run on, until at some future period some bright advertiser may translate the unwieldy name into "Majestic Phoenix" or other catchy title, then offer "a limited stock of this sterling novelty" at a good round price per plant and he will doubtless turn a trick, securing a good profit on the stock in question. In the meantime we may recall that both these palms are still in the market, though in probably less supply than they were some ten or fifteen years ago. In a small state there is quite a great deal of similarity between the seaforthis and ptychosperma, the seed leaves of each being simply bifid, but by the time they are large enough for a five or six-inch pot there is noted more of a distinction, the foliage of the ptychosperma having more substance and the young fronds having a chocolate or reddish tint as they unfold, while those of seaforthis are usually green. Both these palms are rapid growers and fresh seeds germinate very rapidly also, so much so that I have seen the ground beneath a fruiting specimen of seaforthis completely covered with a close undergrowth of seedling plants without any special effort on the part of the cultivator. Young plants of both Ptychosperma Alexandræ and Seaforthis elegans may be grouped together very effectively, this method producing a much better furnished plant in a six-inch pot than it is possible to have in the form of a single specimen in that sized pot. This same method may also be used with a large centre plant and a number of young plants grouped around it, thus covering the bare stem of the larger plant. In the more tropical portions of our country these palms are also used for outdoor ornamental gardening with good results, their long primate fronds giving much the same effect as that secured by the use of the Royal palm, Oreodoxa regia, in Honolulu, Havana and Rio Janiero, the famous avenues of which have been so often pictured, and which would unquestionably be a source of delight to many of our northerners could we but have them here or even see them.

The oreodoxas are another genus that is but little grown among commercial growers, for while the young plants of this genus are readily had from seeds and grow very rapidly, yet the foliage is rather soft and not well adapted for decorative usage. It is one of the half dozen or so species of this group, O. oleracea, that is the true Cabbage palm of the West Indies, one of the tallest of the palms when fully grown, and is said to sometimes reach the great height of one hundred and seventy feet, having a perfectly straight stem crowned with a number of its long pinnate leaves. The cabbage, so-called, comprises the cluster of immature leaves in the heart of the tree, and its removal naturally results in the destruction of a noble specimen, a price that would seem to be too great to pay for a mere pot of vegetables, though frequently indulged in by the West Indians. Oreodoxa regia is perhaps the most common species in cultivation, though O. Sancona is also found in some collections, the latter being a smaller grower, slender and graceful in habit, and the young leaves of a chocolate red when unfolding. None of the members of this genus present any special difficulty in culture, a strong loam for compost, a night temperature of 60°, moderate shading and an abundance of water being the essential points to be observed. Euterpe edulis was used to be grown to some extent many years ago, but in all probability one would have to make diligent inquiries among growers of the present day in order to secure one hundred plants of this palm of a given size.

This is also a slender growing pinnate palm of moderate dimensions, its height in its native home in Brazil being given as thirty to forty feet, and from the fact that it is found growing in the greatest profusion in swamp land near the rivers it is natural to assume that a plentiful supply of water should be given it when under cultivation in our greenhouses. Euterpe edulis is one of the many useful palms to the natives of Para, owing to its fruits being edible, the pulp of the latter being macerated in warm water, then strained and sweetened, and after being mixed with a certain proportion of cassava flour being said to be highly nutritious and to form a large part of the daily food of many of the natives.

Another genus of American palms, of which comparatively few specimens are seen in cultivation, is the chamædoreas, some of the members of which extend up into Central America, and one or two are said to be found in Mexico. The chamædoreas are comparatively dwarf in habit, the leaves very slender and cane-like, and the leaves pinnately divided, some of them having narrow leaflets, of which C. graminifolia is a good example, while others have extremely broad leaflets, in some cases the leaves being little more than bifid, this condition being more noticeable in the case of a young plant. Of the broad leaved species, C. Ernesti-Augusti is perhaps the best example, and is really one of the most ornamental of the genus, this palm having quite large, dark green leaves, and seeming to hold its foliage better than some of the other species. Under cultivation the chamædoreas mature earlier than the majority of palms and it is not unusual to see a plant in an eight or ten-inch pot producing flower spikes from the axils of the leaves, these being followed in the case of a female plant by small round berries or fruit that are usually bright yellow or orange in color when ripe, the male and female flowers being produced upon different plants. The foliage of the chamædoreas is rather thin and does not bear the exposure of decorating very well, in consequence of which they are more appreciated in a private collection than for commercial purposes. The chief insect enemy of these interesting palms is red spider, a pest that soon finds them out unless the plants are kept in a moist atmosphere and well syringed, while in the matter of soil and temperature they may be well managed in company with Areca lutescens.

The climbing palms, or rattans, of which the various species of calamus are the best representatives, are also little used commercially as decorative plants, their foliage being easily damaged and their vigorous spines being also somewhat of an objection, though the dried stems of these palms are used in vast quantities in the form of rattan canes and furniture. In the Malay peninsula, where most of the calamuses are found, these palms climb through lofty trees by means of the thorny extension of the midrib as well as the strong hooked thorns that extend all down the leaf stems, and sometimes form a serious obstruction to travel in those tropical forests. The western representatives of the rattan palms are found in the form of the desmoncuses in several species that are natives of tropical South America and some portions of the West Indies, these latter presenting much the same characteristics of stem, thorns and leaves that have been noted in the calamus, but differing from them in the flowering portions. All are warm house plants, requiring a temperature of 70° and abundant moisture.

THE CARNATION.

Preparing the Soil.

The soil for the coming season's planting ought to be attended to during the next week or two or as soon as it is in condition to be properly worked. Many of the most up to date carnation growers commenced to make preparation last fall by ploughing up and stacking their soil so that it is by this time thoroughly rotted and in the right condition to be easily handled. After you are satisfied that you have enough of the soil and of the right texture for your requirements the next thing is to get together a good pile of medium rotted manure. By medium rotted I mean that it should have enough life and strength to impart richness enough to the soil to last for a considerable time. It is at all times good policy to keep a little on the safe side in your judgment when applying manures, but at the same time we must bear in mind that we are laying the foundation for next season's results and it will not do to be over-cautious by using manure that is so thoroughly rotted that its strength has gone out and it is only useful as a potting material. Many growers claim that the cause of stem rot can be traced to using too much manure that is not rotted enough, but it has been my experience that if compost is made at this time, and the manure thoroughly incorporated with the soil, and a little common sense used, there will not be much danger from that source. On some places they do not mix the soil and manure into compost heaps but prefer the plan of hauling the soil to the ends of the houses, mixing the manure with it there after which it is wheeled direct into the benches. They claim that time and labor are saved by carrying out the work this way. This is certainly a rough and ready style of doing the business and if the manure is one of the causes of stem rot there is a big chance of the plants getting affected, particularly so should there be any carelessness in caring for them just after planting. Some growers who have land enough to be able to do so select a piece, ploughing over the sod in the fall, then when spring comes place the manure over it. It is then turned over a couple of times before it is taken into the houses. There are several points in favor of this plan; at the same time it has its drawbacks, particularly so if the season is inclined to be wet. A great many florists who grow carnations do not have enough land to follow this method every year.

When you are ready to start to work making the compost heap, figure on having enough help to push it through quickly, as it is poor policy to put a couple of hands to undertake the job of preparing enough soil for 25,000 to 30,000 feet of bench space. It is better and cheaper by far to have a good force at it with a man in charge who knows what he is about and able to see that it is done right. There is a big difference in the time it takes sod to rot. Some kinds will be easy to break up after having laid up all winter while others will take a good deal of beating and shaking out to work properly. After you have enough chopped take a house scraper and commence hauling the soil to the place selected for your heap which should be close to where the sod has been stacked and as near the greenhouses as possible. Commence with a layer of soil to about the depth of one foot and then haul on your manure, using in proportion one-fourth manure to three-fourths soil and mixing in about two bushels of wood ashes to the whole. Carry this on until your pile reaches the height where it calls for extra shoveling, then round it up and start again from the bottom on the end of the former heap until you have enough for your requirements. Any weeds anywhere within distance of the heap should be cut out. In a little while the weeds will commence to spring up through the soil and these must be removed as soon as they can be handled. Your soil will then be ready whenever you are in need of it. When the time comes to haul it into the houses see that it gets a thorough mixing in shoveling it into the wagon. Commence to chop from the top of the pile going clear to the bottom which will mix all the parts well together.

If it is your intention to grow any of your plants inside all summer it will be necessary to break away a little from this method because you will have to use the soil much sooner. The soil should be as fine as possible and should not contain any clods or pieces of half-rotted sod. The manure should also be more thoroughly rotted than that advocated for field grown plants which have two months longer to get incorporated through the soil. Referring to the use of clay in the compost, this must be governed entirely by the texture of your soil. If it is very light a little clay mixed through it would greatly benefit the stems of the flowers, but if the soil is stiff and takes a long time to dry out, keep the clay away from it. Varieties that burst badly during the dark days should not be planted in a soil where clay is mixed through it. Any variety with weak stems is greatly benefited by using a stiff clayey soil. C. W. JOHNSON.

THE RETAIL TRADE

CUT Asparagus plumosus most liked by the New York trade is that which is grown naturally in fronds and not trained on strings. The best retailers have little use for cut up pieces of the latter.

Helpful Hints.

For baskets or jardinières of mixed plants Aralia elegantissima makes a very effective center.

In a dark green willow basket daffodils look their best.

Cover the soil with sheet moss. It adds twenty-five per cent to the selling power of a pot plant.

Erica cupressina in any size, from three inches to a foot high, stands close to the top of the list as a florists' plant.

Lady Hume Campbell is the violet for spring pot-plant sales.

The Floral Muff.

Among the new departures in gifts for bridesmaids is the flower muff, says the Washington Star. It forms a pretty as well as a serviceable present, for it is by no means the fragile thing it seems. The flowers are fixed on a foundation into which the real muff is slipped, and this may be of sable, ermine, moleskin or, in fact, whatever the generosity or means of the bridegroom may suggest. Some of the frillings to the flower muffs are of real lace, so that altogether the dainty token is by no means inexpensive, often, indeed, costing far more than a piece of jewelry.

New York.

On all sides gratification over the Easter results is heard. Few complaints are made by either wholesale or retail dealers. Plant and cut flower trade thrived equally well. In the retail stores a few plants are left unsold, but they amount to but little as compared with the number sold and no one is disposed to protest. The varieties were, as a rule, the same as we have seen in former years and the demand did not vary materially as to choice from that of last season. Ericas were seen in much greater variety and better quality than ever before and were duly admired for their beauty, but their price was against them, especially when used in made-up baskets or hamper, to which they added value in proportion to the beauty conferred. In hydrangeas a decided revival was noticed, due to the addition of the bright blue and pink varieties to the general assortment. Azaleas sold especially well in the smaller sizes and where any are left over they will be found invariably in the large-sized class. This is true of a good many other things, such as acacias, rhododendrons, etc., and it is prudent to assume, in ordering such material for next year, that the smaller grades should predominate in all lines of Easter plants. Not only the small sizes but dwarf-growing varieties enjoyed the advantage of popular favor this year. This was demonstrated particularly in the case of the azaleas where the little Firefly, Carl Enke, Queen of Holland and Hinodekiri took the lead whenever or wherever shown. Hinodekiri is a Japanese variety much smaller than Firefly even, in bloom, but of equally desirable color and excellent as a jardinière plant in the combination groups so popular with buyers here. Next year promises to see a widespread call for these gems. The fancy in special jardinière, basket and hamper arrangements varied but little as compared with recent Easters and was limited only by the ingenuity of the basket makers in providing novelties in this line. The so-called Russian baskets of rough wood held the popularity gained at Christmas, but no new styles were shown. As to ribbons, they were freely used by all, and the addition of little birds, nests, and such trifles was indulged in by many prominent retail houses with profit. "Pussy Willows" were also generally used as accessories.

Not for many years has the wholesale cut flower trade expressed so much satisfaction with the Easter results. The demand for violets was insatiable. On Saturday the receipts of violets from the Rhinebeck district alone amounted to 500 boxes, averaging from 2,500 to 3,500 flowers, each. Good roses and carnations were also in luck and sold out clean. It is a rare thing and worthy of record when the New York wholesale trade sees the ice boxes empty. In bulbous stock there was the usual and anticipated drag and the left-over stock was confined mainly to these things. Lilies sold out clean at all points and at better prices than of late years. Many more might have been sold had they been available. Many were too late in blooming and are due for the next two weeks. Already the price has fallen to about one-half of the Easter value, because of the heavy receipts of belated flowers. Carnations made a stiff advance all along the line.

The estimate of violets received at this market Friday and Saturday is about 2,500,000. Heavy shipments to Chicago from violet growing districts helped to prevent a surplus here and this market benefited materially in consequence.

John Birnie, representing the association of florists doing a spring plant business, has secured a lease for three months of the site of the old Clinton market at Canal and West streets for the purposes of a market. A tent covering an area of ten city squares is to be erected, and should the results justify the permanent use of the property for a plant market the city will undoubtedly proceed to erect a permanent building for the purpose.

The rental paid for three months is $1,000.

The problem of handling the Easter visitors that flock to the commercial plant houses at Easter was solved by Julius Roehrs, by making a charge of 25 cents for admission on Saturday and Sunday, the proceeds to be turned over to the benefit of the Passaic General hospital.

The Easter show at the greenhouses in Prospect park was upon the usual extensive scale and many thousands of visitors were in evidence. At Central park the conservatories were also in Easter array and had their complement of admiring visitors.

N. Lecakes just returned from a three months' visit to his home in Greece. He brings with him samples of yellow immortelles grown there which he thinks may in time develop a paying industry in competition with the French article.

Thomas Young, Jr., is getting shipments of Jacqueminot roses every day such as delighted the flower buyers of twenty years ago. All modern red roses hide their diminished heads in the presence of the old favorite.

The employes of the New York Cut Flower Company and the Cut Flower Exchange had a busy day on Saturday, and about 1 o'clock on Sunday morning adjourned to the bowling allies.

Charlie Schenck is exhibiting with pride a handsome diamond ring presented him by his fraternal friends on the completion of his two years' service as master of his Masonic lodge.

The blue laws are evidently being revived in Brooklyn, for a florist of that borough was recently arrested for the crime of whistling a secular tune on Sunday.

Gustave C. C. Schrader says he finds barrels to be the proper thing in which to ship smilax. He is reputed to be the largest grower of smilax in this country.

At the Cut Flower Exchange W. C. Duncan had 2,000 lilies for Easter and Victor Dorval had a big load of bulbous flowers.

A visitor this week was W. Griesinger, representing Louis Van Houtte. Mr. Griesinger sails for home on Saturday, 9th inst.

The directors of the Cut Flower

Exchange have a meeting on Saturday, April 9. General business will be transacted.

Southern grown narcissus is being shipped to the New York market in large quantities.

John Cuff, the Manhattan florist, has a bad attack of rheumatism.

H. C. Steinhoff will sail for Bermuda this week.

J. C. Vaughan was a visitor at Flatbush Bowling Club meeting Thursday evening.

Chicago.

Now that averages have been figured, inventories taken and balances struck the florists are able to give out more definite information about their business this Easter as compared with last and preceding Easters. There is a wide difference of opinion, based no doubt on actual facts which governed each dealer's business, as to the volume of business in point of money value, transacted during the six days preceding the Sunday holiday. One of the leading growers candidly says that his business showed a decrease this year and explained it away by saying, "We did not have as much stock as last year and prices were not high enough to make up the deficiency." His neighbor had convincing figures that he took in twenty per cent more money than last year during the same week. Sizing up the situation in a general way it may be said that it was a very satisfactory week, fully equal to that of last year. In cut flowers pretty much of everything was cleaned up and there was a good supply too. Roses were more plentiful than had been anticipated the week before and it was possible to buy roses at the end of the week at a very low figure. Beauty and reds were the scarcest item in this line. All good stock was sold before the final Saturday rush. Carnations cut a big figure and there were more of these sold this year than ever before. The supply was large and quality of every shipment could not well be better. Outside of the fanciest grades no orders were turned down for want of stock. There was a noticeable absence of the large quantities of pickled material. The violet situation during the entire week was an extremely weak one, differing greatly from the reported eastern situation. The bunches could hardly be given away and such ridiculous figures as 25 and 30 cents were realized. Bulbous stock held its ground stolidly, indeed it seems that it will never be started. The stock hanging around the market all week might be called a glut. One of the most important features of the Easter business deserves special note. The lily plant trade was very active and more were handled this year than can be remembered for many years. There was plenty of good stock and prices averaged 12½ cents per bud, some of the fancies going as high, however, as 16 cents. Saturday it was a difficult thing to secure a good lily, although some dealers had some poor grade material still on their hands.

The usual quiet characterized this week's trade. Election day added to this and about the only business the local retailers enjoyed came from funeral work. All prices have fallen accordingly. During most of the week the counters were crowded with stock, especially roses.

Peter Reinberg's "carnation campaign" proved the feature of the spring elections which were held Tuesday. He was elected alderman of the Twenty-sixth ward over Wilson, the Republican candidate, by a plurality of 2,292 votes. When one considers that the ward is normally about 1,000 republican, Mr. Reinberg's popularity may be better appreciated.

"By the gentle influence of the modest violet and the magnetism of the lovely carnation, Peter Reinberg, Democrat, was elected alderman of the Twenty-sixth ward. He turned a normal Republican majority of 1,200 into a Democratic majority of 2,292. The campaign of Charles H. Wilson, his Republican opponent, was based not only on his own qualification, but on the liquid gorgeousness that made Milwaukee famous. Mr. Reinberg estimates that he gave away $5,000 worth of flowers. He decorated twenty-six churches in his ward on Easter. "I'm going to give the women of the ward another $1,000 worth of roses and carnations," said he to-night. "I am the happiest man in Chicago. Say "the flowers that bloom in the spring, tra-la-la, had something to do with the case." My campaign offers new ideas to politicians. I won every one of the women and most of the men. My entire expenses were confined to flowers."—N. Y. World.

Wanzer & Company this week filed a petition in bankruptcy, giving their liabilities as $114,034 with assets of $90,632. This is the Board of Trade firm of which Wm. H. Chadwick, president of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, is a member. Mr. Chadwick has been very active in things pertaining to horticulture and he has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade.

The executive committee of the Horticultural Society of Chicago held a short meeting on the afternoon of April 6. Plans were discussed for the holding of a fall exhibition, but nothing definite was done.

The Florists' Club held a meeting in its room in Handel hall Wednesday evening. Most of the evening was devoted to an interesting discussion of the Easter business.

All of the churches in the Twenty-sixth ward, Peter Reinberg's ward, were decorated with choice flowers on Easter Sunday, sent gratuitously by Mr. Reinberg.

The absence of "kicks" from outside buyers was a noteworthy feature of this Easter's business. Most of the stock sent out was of high quality.

Mrs. Thomas Rogers, who is ill at Wesley hospital, this city, underwent an operation Thursday. Her condition is said to be quite critical.

Chas. McKellar is still handling orchids in quantities. This week he received a large shipment of dendrobiums with long stems.

Sinner Brothers report a good Easter business. They were a trifle short on carnations but filled all orders with good stock.

George Reinberg's Easter business was the best in years. He disappointed none of his customers, all orders being filled early.

Frank Beu, of 2780 North Fortieth avenue, is building a new house, 25x125 feet, to be used exclusively for roses.

The Bentley-Coatsworth Company handled for Easter a fine cut of roses which were all cleaned out early.

O. P. Bassett and wife have returned from their sojourn of several months at Pasadena, Cal.

Bassett & Washburn enjoyed a remarkable run on Easter lilies for Easter.

L. C. Coatsworth spent several days in New Castle, Ind., this week.

Visitors this week were C. H. Frey and August Eiche, of Lincoln, Neb., and James Schols, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Philadelphia.

Easter of 1904 is over and all can contemplate with more or less pleasure the result. From the grower's standpoint it was all that could be desired, as, with the possible exception of azaleas, everything that was in condition and ready for the market was in the hands of the retailers by Saturday morning. The supply of lilies was not equal to the demand and several thousand more cut flowers could have been sold at from $12 to $15 per 100. There seemed to be plenty of the smaller sizes of azaleas and some of these are still to be seen in the growers' hands, but not enough to cut much of a figure in the profits. Ramblers sold out clean. Good hydrangeas were in demand and all that were fit were sold. Quite considerable of the stock did not make it however and much that was sent in was very soft and undesirable. Hyacinths and tulips seemed to sell very well. Large pans of these and daffodils, arranged with ferns in low baskets and pans, moved rapidly and but few were left over. Rhododendrons in bright colors also sold lively, but the dull looking sorts are best left off the list as they invariably get on the bargain tables in the late hours. It was astonishing to see how the lilies came along at the last. Thursday and Friday were both cold and rainy, about the worst that could have been turned out for forcing lilies, but when Saturday night came it was found that what had been given up a week ago had opened out and were all sold. The fact that there was a great and pressing demand for cut lilies on Saturday at from $12 to $15 per 100 must have made some of the growers feel badly, as thousands of pots had been delivered to the department stores earlier in the week at from 8 to 9 cents per flower. After the price of lilies is settled the general stock cost about the same to these large stores as they are not so familiar with values and are not so particular as to the quality. The very bad weather of Thursday and Friday was a knocker to the transient stores and street men and there was considerable left over on Saturday night.

The report from the regular stores is that they had a very satisfactory trade, some claiming to have had the largest volume of trade in their history and others to have done their usual business. Cut flowers sold very well, there being a good demand for violets, Liberty and Beauty roses. Special Beauty roses sold quickly at $6 per dozen, Liberty at $3 to $4 and Bridesmaid at $15 per 100. Violets are in great favor.

S. S. Pennock handled an immense quantity of valley for the Easter trade, his first selection being very fine. Easter lilies too were shipped by the thousand, nearly if not quite ten thousand being the week's total.

Leo Niessen had an immense business and is all smiles when he thinks of it. His Sunday morning consignment of violets came in good time as the market was entirely bare.

Eugene Bernheimer was well satisfied with the business. He handled thousands of sweet peas together with carnations and roses.

Ed. Reid said he had more than he could do; he complained of the scarcity of lilies and said he could have handled many more.

W. K. Harris had a fine lot of cut lilacs which sold rapidly.

The April meeting of Florists' Club on Tuesday evening was well attended. The feature of the occasion was to have been a dissertation on "Mistakes I Have Made," by Wm. K. Harris, but as this astute and successful member could think of nothing more or less disastrous that had happened to him through his own negligence there was nothing doing. Next month Joseph Heacock is to tell whether or not the American Beauty rose is a back number. The question of the selection of the team to represent the club in the St. Louis bowling tournament is also to be settled at the May meeting.

The following resolutions were adopted at the last meeting of the Florists' Club on the death of the late George E. Fancourt:

WHEREAS, The Florists' Club of Philadelphia having heard with deep regret of the untimely passing away of their fellow member, George E. Fancourt,

Resolved, That the Florists' Club of Philadelphia hereby expresses its sincere sorrow at the loss of one who was so endeared to every member by his many good qualities of mind and heart. He was regarded by us all as one of the most intelligent and progressive of the craft, and was held in the warmest affection and esteem by all who knew him. We shall miss his genial and kindly presence at our meetings; and

Resolved, That we hereby extend our sympathy to his bereaved family.

A beautiful Schuylkill river, within masonry walls and with driveways and handsome buildings on either bank, running through the heart of the city, was said by Leslie Miller, president of the Parkways Allied Associations, in an address before the John Bartram Association in Houston hall, University of Pennsylvania, March 28, to be the keynote of the proposed plan for beautifying this city with parks and boulevards. Such an undertaking, he asserted, would not be an extravagance nor would it be burdensome to the taxpayers.

Last Monday almost every florist in the city had one or more wagons at the city hall. It was the opening of the city council and there was a great floral display. Considerably over a thousand dollars worth of stock was to be seen in presents to members, in addition to which were the decorations on an elaborate plan by Robert Crawford.

A visitor this week was A. W. Moore, of Wilkesbarre, Pa. K.

Boston.

Boston florists generally express satisfaction with the Easter business. The storm of Thursday and Friday caused them much trouble, compelling them to do practically three days' work in one, and Saturday was one of the hardest days ever experienced by the city florists. The pressure was tremendous and the business limited only by the capacity to handle it. Considerable stock was left over unavoidably which would have been all disposed of had there been one more clear day. But even with this serious drawback the amount of business was as large as or larger than that of any previous Easter and so all are willing to acknowledge satisfaction. The growers had rather the best of it as their goods were about all placed beforehand and the plant houses are well depleted, while their owners are almost collapsed after the fierce mental and physical strain, and many of them doubtless wish that Easter could be erased from the calendar forever.

The demand leaned toward the smaller grades of plants and in azaleas especially, the specimens of moderate size and price were decidedly preferred. The leftover stock is limited almost entirely to the large sizes. Lilies had a splendid run but unfortunately the stock was not uniform, that from some growers being of unexcelled quality while that from other sources showed unmistakable evidence of the high forcing temperature to which it had been subjected in the frantic struggle to get the buds opened in time. This immature stock was very unsatisfactory and, as is usually the case, the discounts and losses and dissatisfaction are likely to more than offset the advantage gained. Suburban florists report a better sale than for several years past for pans of tulips, daffodils, lily of the valley and other bulbous material, the preference being, as in the case of the azaleas, for those having bright color. The cut flower department fared well everywhere, growers, wholesalers and retail dealers all sharing in the prosperity. The amount of "salted" stock in evidence was unprecedentedly light and to this good judgment and the absence of any disposition to demand exorbitant values is undoubtedly due much of the good showing made in the cut flower line. Normal prices were the rule in all lines excepting carnations which were held at about double the rates recently prevailing, but even then were not unreasonably high. The preference in carnations was for the colored varieties everywhere, and a good many white ones had to keep company with the bulbous material, mignonette and stocks which comprised about all the material left when the overworked clerks had locked the doors and turned their weary feet homeward.

Violets made a superb record. Rarely, if ever, has the Easter quality been so good. The old love for the violet seemed to have broken out afresh and big purple corsage bunches were all the go. Princess of Wales held the lead, far outnumbering the double varieties. William Sim picked and sold 100,000 violets alone and asserts that he could have sold easily double that number had they been obtainable. Other violet growers and dealers tell of similar experience. A few plants of the dwarf azaleas Firefly and Carl Enke were seen here and met with the approval accorded them in other markets. Firefly, from its intense color, proved especially popular. Next year will see a good many grown for this market, beyond a doubt.

Active preparations for the Rose Society's meeting and accompanying exhibition in Boston next spring are already in progress. The latest addition to the special list of prizes for that occasion is a silver cup, value $50, offered by Col. Charles Pfaff, through his gardener, George Melvin, for twenty-five distinct named varieties of hybrid roses in pots.

G. C. Watson talked on his favorite subject, the "Peony," before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on Easter Saturday. The floral section of the members was prevented from attending by the demands of Easter business, but the audience was gratifyingly large otherwise and the discussion following the paper indicated that the peony is not lacking for enthusiastic friends in eastern Massachusetts.

Kenneth Finlayson returned last Wednesday on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse from a seven months' absence in Scotland and Germany and his friends are glad to note evidences of his greatly improved health.

J. W. Howard has again secured the contract for supplying the B. & M. R. R. with plants for station gardens. There are 500 stations, requiring 100,000 plants.

Welch Brothers secured the entire lower floor of the recently vacated St. Nicholas Hotel, directly opposite their market, for an Easter annex.

J. H. Cox, lately representing Stump & Walter, is dangerously ill in Boston.

Visitors in town were Winfried Rolker, New York; G. W. Hilliard, Exeter, N. H.; C. M. Atkinson, Pittsfield, Mass.

Baltimore.

It was violet day. No renaissance even in Paris of the adoring enthusiasm for the great emperor could have brought out a greater abundance of the flower than was in evidence here Sunday. Huge mounds on the corsage, lesser bunches and the modest little boutonnières were everywhere. Of course appeared lily of the valley, American Beauty and other roses, but the violet was unquestionably IT.

The "parade" on Easter Sunday on Charles street, a residential and club thoroughfare, is a society institution of this city. Women and men, in finest and newest raiment, issuing from the churches after the morning service, move up and down the street, exchanging greetings and receive the admiration and criticism of onlookers. For a year or two there was a break in the custom of wearing flowers for personal adornment, but there is a revival in this regard, and this season these decorations were unusually abundant and lovely. The day was cold, with high winds, but the crowd was large, the women handsome and the toilets ravishing to each other's eyes. That the flowers gave added charms even to our Baltimore belles every florist believes.

Scarce a house in sections of the city but had its floral display. In more pretentious dwellings azaleas, rhododendrons and other showy sorts were banked in effective array, and the humbler homes had a spiræa, a hyacinth, a pot of tulips or a bunch of Easter flowers in the window. The church displays were more general and often more imposing than ever before. In those of some communions, where years ago no flower was tolerated, the adorning of pulpit and chancel was profuse, tasteful and acceptable to the worshippers as being entirely consonant with the spirit of the day and the place.

It follows from the demands thus created that trade was up to the average. Indeed, so far as the first indications mark the outcome, it was beyond ordinary seasons. This is the more surprising when it is considered that our city has lately passed through a terrible disaster, that the lines of business have been disturbed and are not yet straightened out and that many persons are out of employment.

Saturday was clear and cold, with a chill wind blowing not favorable to the market men, but by closing-up time at night there was little left on the stalls except the cheapest and poorest stuff, and generally there was satisfaction felt and expressed with the day's business. There was no scarcity in any line, unless it was in Harrisii lilies, which were not present in the quantities usually seen at this holiday.

At the Florists' Exchange the volume of business was apparently heavier than the average, but Manager Perry, with some extra and efficient help, kept things moving briskly and by nightfall practically everything was cleaned out and at figures tully up to those prevailing ordinarily at this season.

A partial poll of the trade will show the trend and general features of the business done:

John Cook, N. Charles street: Gratifying business all through. Had a rush on violets all the time. Valley did well too. Plants in great demand. Azaleas were features, so were Ramblers, especially the pink variety. A good many Japanese cherries sold, but they are too evanescent.

Halliday Brothers, N. Charles street: Trade very satisfactory; lilies in fine shape, but it was violets, violets all the time. Gardenias sold well and we are practically cleared out. The same with azaleas. The business in plants was far better than that in cut flowers.

G. V. Smith, 2020 Madison avenue: Very satisfactory business done. Couldn't get enough violets. Took one person's time at the phone to say "Regret we cannot take orders for any more violets." Plants sold well.

W. Tilton, 519 N. Chester street: Good business—better than ever. Violets had the call. In plants, azaleas, Harrisii and hydrangeas went well. Could have handled much more stock.

F. G. Berger, 1128 Greenmount avenue: Orders came in late and there was so great a rush at the end that it seems like an awful big trade has been done. Much pleased with result.

S. Feast & Sons, N. Charles street: Business exceptionally fine—certainly 25 per cent increase over last Easter. No special features to note. Everything went well.

M. M. Fiedler & Company, 2340 Pennsylvania avenue: Well satisfied with business done, this being our first Easter. Stuff all sold well, but violets were top notch.

Albert G. Fiedler & Company, 902 S. Charles street: Sales better than last year. Violets insufficient for demand. Plants all cleaned out. Much gratified.

E. Rallman, 1049 S. Charles street: Heavier trade than ever. Plants and cut flowers both cleaned out, but cut flowers were more in request than pot stuff.

Isaac H. Moss, Govanstown: Fully up to average; bulbous stock rather slow; roses and carnations in good demand. Pot plants went off finely.

Wm. J. Halliday, 915 Madison avenue: Good Easter trade. Could have sold many more violets. Plants went fairly well, lilies especially well.

Mrs. Chas. Held, 32 S. Eutaw street: An extra business was done. Everything cleaned out. Violets were at the top. Thoroughly pleased.

Mrs. Gosnell, 825 Madison avenue: Fine business done. Sold all the violets we could get our hands on. Plants sold splendidly.

John Eberhart, 332 N. Howard street: Trade better than usual, and violets better than anything else. Plants, all sorts, sold well.

M. Wells, 231 S. Broadway: Good trade all around. Both plants and cut flowers went well. Violets were No. 1.

John Berl, 1803 Bank street: Good trade in plants and cut flowers both. All plants sold. Azaleas had the lead.

Mrs. B. C. Fox, 743 Columbia avenue: Good average trade. Plants and cut flowers both went well.

Thos. Vincent: Never had as good an Easter either at our W. Baltimore street or our Charles street store.

Kirkley & Son, 1710 Eastern avenue: Had fine trade—plants and cut flowers all sold.

James Hamilton, Mt. Washington: Did an exceptionally fine business.

R. L. Graham: Best business we have ever done at Easter.

Edwin A. Seidewitz: The best Easter trade we ever had.

J. H. Siddons: Trade first rate. Abundantly satisfied.

J. A. Ritter & Son: Very fine trade.

The weather is cold and March-like, and the mercury drops below freezing every night. The ground is full of water and outdoor work in many locations is much delayed. Some planting of hardy things is being done.

After-Easter weddings are now in order, but the number will probably be less than in most years, due to financial disturbances resulting from the fire.

Washington, D. C.

The magnitude and importance of the Easter trade seems to increase with each succeeding year. In attempting a review of the trade of the past week and of the weeks of labor and anxiety to the growers preceding it I may now say that while we have been prone to grumble at the weather and other conditions everything came in well at the finish. We had good forcing weather, and just when everything was good and ready Easter was here. It seemed that after a long cold winter everybody was in just the frame of mind to go out and buy flowers, and they did. They began to buy early in the week and kept at it until twelve o'clock Saturday night, and maybe later; but having been in my youth properly trained by Presbyterians of the old school, I cannot be supposed to know anything of Sunday trade. I asked a leading retailer, after it was all over, what stock was the best seller and he replied: "Everything." That seems to be the general sentiment among the retailers; there was a good demand for everything. It is unnecessary to state that lilies and other pot plants took precedence over cut flowers, though of these a great quantity was disposed of. There is this satisfaction in the Easter trade; that there is something to suit every taste. Down the line from a big bougainvillea or genista at $25 to a geranium for ten cents there was a choice variety of potted plants, and from baskets made up with orchids, valley and adiatum costing $50 to a big bunch of jonquils for a quarter there was a space for variations. The leading retailers started lilies at 25 cents per bud and flower and it is probable that the pick of the market sold at that price, but an immense number went at lower figures. Thousands of short stem Japanese longiflorums sold in pans at $2 per dozen. Several dealers had fine stocks of Philadelphia grown Harrisii. Callalilies, both in pots and cut, also sold well; six-inch pots with one and two flowers brought $1 to $1.50. A great number of azaleas were sold at prices ranging from $2 to $5; hydrangeas were not in their perfection, being about the only stock that was not quite ready, but they sold well at from $2 to $5. There were plenty of lilacs in pots and cut, many of the latter going into expensive baskets with other choice stock. In writing of baskets, I must mention my old friend the "pussy willow" which was very much in evidence in baskets of flowers for "my lady," also chickens, goslings and ducklings, as decorations. A "Japanese emporium" on one of the principal streets had "real" chickens and ducklings and I will agree they looked natural. There were many fine specimens of the Crimson Rambler rose. A fair one could be had for $2 and up to $5 and $10.

The Easter trade is too large to attempt to particularize as to what any dealer had or sold. It is sufficient to say that from those who are classed as the leading retailers, on through the ranks of growers and retailers and market men, all had good stocks, suited to their class of trade and all disposed of them at good prices. Of cut flowers American Beauty roses were not great sellers at $10 and $12 per dozen. Other roses moved freely at $2 to $3 per dozen. Violets were plentiful and sold fast at $1 to $2 per hundred.

As a faithful adherent of the administration and its policies I was naturally pained to observe the disregard shown for the recent neutrality proclamation by the Washington public, inasmuch as it showed a preference for Japanese flowers. It is true that Russian flowers do not seem to be very plentiful. The Russian thistle is said to thrive in Nebraska, and some of the Omaha or Lincoln politicians may blow in here some day with some of its seed about them; then neutrality will be preserved.

As to novelties, I take it that any variety grown much better than the average is a "novelty," even though the variety is not new. There were bougainvilleas, genistas and azaleas such as are seldom offered for sale and smaller plants of the heath that are also rare. Now that we own so many islands of the sea, will not some enterprising collector find some new novelties? The old ones are getting commonplace.

Pittsburg.

Blooming plants and violets were the important features of the Easter business and so decidedly so that never before were there so many plants or violets sold in a like period. The cut flower purchases fell off a little, but hardly to any damaging extent, and so far as I can learn all the stores cleaned up nicely.

The Florists' Exchange and the Pittsburg Cut Flower Company satisfied a great demand for violets. They also had extraordinary sales in roses, lilies and carnations, also in bulbous stock. Very little pickled stock was received. The increase in the shipping trade was remarkable.

The Phipps conservatories in Pittsburg and Allegheny presented their annual display to the public on Easter Sunday. Both institutions were thronged with visitors during the day and have been each day since.

John Bader reports a very successful Easter business. His own and hired wagons were in active operation night and day for a whole week. His shipments by boat and express were the greatest in his business career.

High water, which caused railroad washouts prevented a valuable lot of American Beauties from reaching the Pittsburg Cut Flower Company in time for Easter sale.

Easter Monday the city councils began new sessions and many of the new and old members were the recipients of floral designs and bouquets that formed an attractive display.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Company made some remarkable cuts in roses and carnations during the week.

Al. Sheppard went into harness again to give Geddes & Blind Brothers a lift.

Both E. C. & J. W. Ludwig were bottled up by crowds of purchasers on Friday and Saturday. E. L. M.

Indianapolis, Ind.

At last night's meeting of the State Florists' Association, A. Baur read a very interesting paper on "Convention Impressions." The Indianapolis members were very agreeably surprised by the presence of W. W. Coles, of Kokomo. Mr. Coles intends to increase his area of glass and made several trips recently to different places investigating greenhouses. He gave it as his opinion that high gutters and wide houses were the best. He thinks a good wooden gutter is preferable to an iron one. The latter opinion was not shared by the majority of those present. Mr. Coles recommends a visit to Vaughan's greenhouses to whoever wants to study gutters. At that place, he says, every known form of gutter may be seen in use. H. Haugh, of Anderson, was a visitor and reported his Easter trade extraordinarily good. John Hartje showed a vase of his new Moonlight carnation. The chair appointed Mr. Coles to give an opinion on it. Mr. Coles said Moonlight was a first-class white carnation and would be a wonder in the hands of a first-class grower. Homer Wiegand, of this city, and J. H. Bornhoeft, of Tipton, were elected members of the association.

The Easter business has been very satisfactory. Plants as well as cut flowers were sold out completely in most cases. Prices were about the same as last year, and as usual at Easter plants were in the lead. The cool March weather gave the violet growers an opportunity to have a first-class crop for this occasion and they sold correspondingly well. Owing to their perfection these flowers took a rather prominent place.

Bertermann's large two-horse wagon was run into by a street car Saturday night while delivering Easter orders and about $200 worth of plants and cut-flowers were destroyed. The wagon was damaged, but no one was hurt seriously.

Ed. Bertermann is planning to take a trip to Europe this summer, on which he hopes to visit some prominent growers abroad.

Carl Sonnenschmidt intends to visit Cuba in the near future.

H. Junge is convalescing from a serious attack of gripe. J.

Cincinnati.

Easter has passed into history and the writer for one is glad the rush is over. Everybody is satisfied with the amount of business done and there are no complaints heard, although George & Allan suffered a severe loss on account of the heavy rains of Thursday night and several thousand bulbous flowers they had shipped to different cities were delayed in transit from twelve to eighteen hours. Most of the stock received was very good.

Not much pickled stock was to be seen and both dealer and consumer were in an unusually happy mood.

At the Flower Market business was not up to last year and a great deal of stock had to be taken home again. Harrisii lilies were in good demand and the best of these easily brought $15 per 100. There was a glut of poor bulbous stock, but good hyacinths and Murillo tulips met with a ready sale. Smilax was very scarce. Good valley brought $4 per 100 and violets sold well at 50 and 75 cents per 100. George Corbett sent in a nice lot of genista sprays which brought $1 per bunch. Azaleas and other blooming plants were in good demand.

The Rosebank Company had the decorations for the Taft-Leaman wedding last Wednesday and used large quantities of Harrisii lilies, daffodils and sweet peas. This firm also had the decorations for the Womans' club, Thursday.

Business since Easter has been good, especially shipping trade, and prices at this writing remain firm on roses and carnations but bulbous stock is an awful glut.

Theo. Miller, of Ironton, O., was a visitor last week. A. O.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

This city has just passed through one of the most disastrous floods in its history. Almost the whole west side was under water. Hundreds of families had to vacate their homes. Among the florists who were caught were the Tuinstra Brothers. Their fire was put out and the water raised to the level of the benches. Oil stoves were put in and the best part of their stock was saved. At Grandville, George Conklin lost almost his entire stock. The Stover Floral Company placed one of its houses at his disposal and saved about 4,000 plants, but all the rest were destroyed. We send a photograph of his place taken after the water had fallen twenty-two inches. (See page 472.) F. J. Mead also had the most of his stock destroyed, but managed to save his parsley.

Easter trade was about the same as last year. Crabb & Hunter report an increase in the demand for lilies.

All the churches curtailed their usual decorations and donated their Easter offerings to the flood sufferers.

Henry Smith says that lilies and roses were in great demand and not enough carnations to go around.

Freyling & Mendels report a fine Easter trade, with bulb stock and lilies leading.

James Schols shipped 100,000 violets to the Chicago market. B. N.

Milwaukee.

Easter trade, according to reports, was but slightly better than last year. The condition of the weather played a considerable part in this as it was cold all week. Advance orders were very light hence the rush on the last days was more marked than at any previous season. The forecasted shortage of Easter lilies did not materialize, but the demand for them was steady and all were cleaned out by Sunday. Carnations sold at lower figures than in previous years with more than enough white on hand. Bulbous stock was rather poor sale excepting Murillo tulips, which cleaned out well. The plant growers did a very good business, in fact there is an increasing demand for flowering plants of all kinds.

The hydrangeas grown by Holton &

Hunkel Company were very good and there was a ready demand for them.

F. P. Dilger brought in bulbous flowers in enormous quantities and they were all sold.

Fred. Schmeling had a fine lot of longiflorums in pots for Easter.

M. A. McKenney & Company have purchased the business of the Ellis Floral Company in the Wells building and will run it in conjunction with their present store.

At the last Florists' Club meeting it was decided to spend a certain amount each month for advertising the trade in general in the Sunday newspapers.

Common ferns have taken another jump and are now bringing $4 per 1,000. H.

Lowell, Mass.

It can be safely said the business here this Easter was the biggest ever known. Easter week was full of events and all kinds of weather. The first part the weather was glorious and made the storemen happy, but this was too early for the public to buy the well grown flowering plants offered for sale, and these few days were too short lived to be of much good. Wednesday and Saturday we had heavy rains which put a damper on enthusiasm, but on Friday we awoke and found splendid weather. Then the business started in for keeps and continued until Sunday noon. Never before was there such a splendid array of flowering plants shown as this Easter. Lilies sold at 25 cents per bud and azalias were more than abundant and certainly made a blaze of color in the windows. They brought good prices. The supply of Crimson Ramblers and hydrangeas was a little shy this year. What few were offered went quick. Spiræas and bulbous stock in pans went flying. The cut flower supply was good and prices high. Roses, carnations and violets were the flowers most wanted. Roses were in excellent quality, especially the Bridesmaids. Some few Beauty were sold, but they were limited in supply. Carnations were as popular as ever. Enchantress and Fairmaid sold for $2 per dozen. But the flowers sought most were the violets and they were to be had in any quantity, but the quality was way off, nevertheless they sold at good prices.

Patten had, as usual, an annex just around the corner from his store on the square which was filled with lilies.

E. N. Peirce & Sons, of Waltham, furnished the greater part of the azaleas and lilies sold here.

Peter Healy's cut of stocks and snapdragons was of excellent quality and large.

R. C. Tingley brought in an enormous supply of violets and callas in pots. A. M.

UPPER NYACK, N. Y.—A. C. Tucker has sold his Midland avenue greenhouses to Pye Brothers.

WINCHESTER, N. H.—Wm. F. Flint, the well known horticulturist, died here recently, aged 70 years.

WELLESLEY, MASS.—Frederick E. Vetter has resigned his position with D. Carmichael and has leased a greenhouse and store in Erie, Pa.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.—The greenhouses of the Illinois Central railroad are now well stocked with plants for the decoration of its station grounds during the coming season.

THE REVUE HORTICOLE states that the use of ether and chloroform in the forcing of plants is commercially successful, recent experiments with Azalea Indica, Azalea mollis, deutzias, snowballs and lily of the valley having demonstrated this.

PROFESSOR B. T. GALLOWAY, chief of the bureau of plant industry of the United States department of agriculture, says that on a quarter of an acre and without capital, in five years he built up a violet-growing business worth $2,500 to $3,000.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Is it not about time botany was taught in our public schools —or certainly in our schools of art? Four of our popular monthly magazines have on their covers Easter lilies as a part of their pictorial illustrations, three of which are imperfectly drawn and consequently quite as imperfectly illustrated.
Those appearing on the Strand magazine have pistils and stamens all right. The other three have only the pistils appearing. O! ye artists! E. L.

Fumigating Ferns.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Will Asparagus
Sprengeri, Boston ferns and Easter lilies stand as much tobacco smoke as roses?
Will they stand enough to kill green lice or are they as tender as adiantum?

O. O.

These plants will all stand a reasonable degree of fumigation with tobacco stems or tobacco dust, provided that the smoking is done with sufficient care to avoid the tobacco blazing up during the operation. Should this occur it is quite likely that some of the plants may be scorched, but if proper care be used there will be no danger while giving plenty of smoke to kill aphides or green lice. It is, however, preferable to use aphis punk for fumigating these plants instead of the tobacco, this preparation producing a stronger vapor with less liability to injure the plants. W. H. TAPLIN.

Greenhouse Heating.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We have a twenty horse-power tubular boiler, 3x10 feet, which is heating at present with hot water two greenhouses, even span, 20x 100. How much more glass will this boiler heat with hot water? The temperature must be 50° on coldest nights.
The boiler has twenty-six 3-inch flues.
L. F.

A great deal depends on the location, outside temperature and construction of the houses, but for zero weather, and in well built houses, and in a fairly protected location, a boiler such as is described should be able to heat three houses if there is no glass in the side walls. L. R. TAFT.

AMERICAN GROWN NARCISSUS BULBS.

The bulbs of Narcissus grandiflorus Paper White and N. Princeps exhibited by Misses Wilson, Montgomery, Ala., at Milwaukee last August for test as to forcing qualities, have been bloomed by Carl Jurgens of Newport, R. I., who reports that the Paper Whites which flowered were very fine and fully equal to imported stock. There were, however, a good many "sets" in the collection, the bulbs evidently having been grown in a clump and taken up as such and separated. Mr. Jurgens expresses the belief that had these sets been planted out, as is done in general bulb culture, and grown for one season, they would have made most excellent bulbs, like those that flowered.

As to the N. Princeps, results were not so satisfactory, although they were not forced till late, and in Mr. Jurgens' opinion the climate of Montgomery is too warm for the growing of bulbs of this class. WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

Greenhouse Heating.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I wish to learn through your excellent paper as to the size of boiler it will take to heat four greenhouses, 25x100 feet, and also the best make boiler for the purpose.

A SUBSCRIBER.

The question as submitted is too indefinite for anything more than approximate answer. A great deal will depend upon the slope of the roof, the height and amount of glass in the walls, the climate where the houses are located, as well as the temperature desired in the houses, or the class of plants to be grown. If the temperature desired in the houses will not average more than 60°, and they are located in a section where the mercury seldom drops below 10° and if there is no glass in the side walls four houses of the size mentioned could be heated with a 30 horse-power boiler, but it would be found more economical of fuel if its size is 40 horse-power, and this would be required if there is much glass in the walls. For temperatures higher or lower than those mentioned a corresponding change should be made in the size of the boiler. If hot water is to be used it will be well to select a heater rated at about 6,000 square feet, although the actual amount required will probably be from 4,400 to 5,000 feet. An ordinary tubular steam boiler will give good results for steam heating and although it would answer for hot water if the entire shell is filled with flues, it may be better to purchase some of the hot water boilers in the advertising columns of this paper. L. R. T.

Francis Supoit.

Francis Supoit, formerly of Philadelphia, but who for the last five years has been a resident of Veyins, Maine et Loire, France, died there on Saturday, April 2, of paralysis. Mr. Supoit was a Frenchman and came to Philadelphia about eighteen years ago. His forte was violets of which he grew large quantities for this and the New York markets. He was a very successful as well as an enthusiastic grower. He believed that almost every one would buy flowers if they could be placed within their means. About ten years ago he purchased a farm in Chester county and erected houses for forcing lilacs which he grew in large quantities importing the stock from France. He was also a large grower of water cresses for which he found a great demand. His son, Francis, Jr., will continue the business. Mr. Supoit was 53 years of age and leaves a wife and four children.

and will be among the largest and most complete in this town. They will cost about $15,000. The Pierson-Sefton com-

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

The Seed Trade.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Chas. McCullough,
First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland,
O., Sec'y and Treas.

Twenty-second annual convention, St.
Louis, Mo., June 21-23, 1904.

BERLIN, N. Y.—Arthur Cowee is building a large storage house for gladiolus bulbs.

DUTCH steamers brought in thousands of sacks of table potatoes to the port of New York last week.

MANY bean growers report their growing capacity well contracted for. If the season proves a good one there should be sufficient Wardwells to go around next year, a large acreage having been arranged for.

ARTHUR T. BODDINGTON, one of the incorporators and one-fourth owner of the Clucas & Boddington corporation, who has embarked in business for himself at 35 Warren street, New York, is one of the best known and most popular salesmen in the trade. He has the universal good wishes of all who know him.

BOSTON seed trade is nearly a month behind the normal and will have to be crowded into a very brief period this year. It is now well under way. All stores are running three and four nights each week. Stock is not heavy and will be pretty well cleaned up. There is no likelihood of surplus in any line.

A LETTER of March 23, from Santa Clara, Cal., states: "Owing to the losses by floods and the fact that the acreage of onions planted for seed in this section this year was only about one-half of what it was last season, the crop, under ordinary conditions, will be only fifty per cent of that of last year, so that there should not be any large surplus to throw on the market next fall."

Manifestly Ridiculous.

The whole thing (government seed distribution) is so manifestly ridiculous and so obviously opposed to rational principles of government that legislators ought to be ashamed of themselves for sustaining it.—Chicago Post.

Connecticut Seed Crop Prospects.

One of our well informed correspondents writes as follows: "Beets have carried over very badly owing to the very severe winter, frost having penetrated through the ordinary depth of covering into the pits, and these, as well as all other biennials, are coming out in bad shape. This applies to turnips, carrots and parsnips where pitted. Owing to the extremely high price of onions the crop in Connecticut will be lighter than usual for there is little inducement to plant onions that are worth from $1.50 to $2 per bushel for seed when the product is to be sold at a mere shade above seed grown in other sections of the country, where it can be produced at less than half the cost of producing it in this state."

Eastern Onion Sets Scarce.

The severe winter is making itself felt in the eastern onion set market. Growers who usually ship sets just as soon as the spring opens could not do so from the fact that this year the sets were frozen so solid that it took a long time to get the frost out of them so they could be sent to customers. The season for handling sets has been about as unfavorable as it could possibly be. White sets of good quality are advancing fast and are now worth $5 per bushel, which will make them at least $6.50 to $7 to consumers. Yellow and Reds are about the same as for the past month—Yellows, $3; Red, $3.50 to consumers. Potatoes are somewhat stronger, the best Maine samples selling to planters in a large way for $3.75 to $4.25 per barrel according to the variety.

More Sweet Corn Contracts.

SEWARD, NEB., March 14.—Saturday morning the jury in the case of the Sioux City Seed and Nursery Company against A. H. Bemis, brought in a verdict in favor of the defendant. The case was tried in the county court and lasted three days. The nature of the case aroused considerable interest. The litigation arose over a seed contract. The seed house replevined three hundred bushels of sweet corn, on January 15 of this year, raised by Mr. Bemis on his farm near Seward, and shipped the same to Sioux City, where the corn was sold to the seed company's customers. Mr. Bemis by way of answer denied the contract under which the corn was replevined and claimed damages for conversion. The evidence brought out the fact that an oral contract was made in January, 1903, whereby Mr. Bemis was to raise sixty acres of sweet corn and receive from the seed company 75 cents a bushel; that Mr. Bemis planted sixty acres of sweet corn but subsequently the company had tendered Mr. Bemis $1 a bushel for the corn raised. Mr. Bemis contended that both parties mutually had broken the oral contract and that he was entitled to the market price of his corn. With that understanding he had sold fifty bushels of the corn in the fall to the Griswold Seed Company at Lincoln at $3 a bushel. Mr. Emerson of Fremont and Mr. Robinson of Waterloo representing seed houses at the two cities, were used as expert witnesses on the value of sweet corn. Their testimony showed that sixty per cent of the sweet corn raised in the United States for seed purposes was raised in Nebraska. The jury found that the defendant was entitled to $1.75 a bushel for his corn and the costs should be taxed to the plaintiff. —Lincoln, Nebraska Star.

Columbus, O.

There is no complaint from any one regarding Easter trade. All the florists report good business with prices about the same as in former years. There seemed to be plenty of stock to go around and most of it was of good quality. Violets were quite plentiful and of good quality. Lilies were more plentiful than had been expected earlier in the season. Rambler roses were quite good with some of the growers but did not move as readily as had been expected. Lilacs, azaleas, hyacinths and daffodils in pans sold quickly at good prices. CARL.

IMPORTANT TO PRIVATE GARDENERS

The system of allowing Private Gardeners a discount on their annual purchases of seeds has become almost universal; in fact, they have been gradually educated to expect it. We are offering this season

Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

LAFAYETTE, ILL.—Irvin Ingels of the Home Nursery, was married recently to Miss Rose Garner, at the home of the bride's sister in Stillwater, Okla.

AURORA, ILL.—The Aurora Nursery Company has been incorporated with a capital of $5,000. The incorporators are J. K. Newhall, J. A. Young and F. C. Grometer.

RHUS AROMATICA is an admirable and altogether satisfactory ground cover under larger shrubs and trees and is especially valuable in dry soil where many other things would fail.

The steamship Staatendam carrying many hundred cases of Belgian nursery stock broke down in midocean and returned. The Slaterdyk will bring her cargo and is due April 8 or 9.

WILLIAMSBURG, IA.—A. J. Baumhoefener and Hugh Williams have purchased the interests of Hugh Harrington and W. P. McFann in the Williamsburg nursery and are now sole owners.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The best judges here seem to feel that during the past severe winter considerable shrubbery has been injured or killed. It is yet too early to know, but the good weather will tell the story.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—The seventh annual convention of the New England Association of Park Superintendents is to be held here on June 14, 15 and 16. The parks of the city will be inspected on the second day, and on the third day a trip to Meriden is contemplated.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—William H. Barnes, secretary of the State Horticultural Society, has not heard of a single case of damage to fruit by the late cold snap. He predicts a bumper fruit crop this year. Judge Fred Wellhouse has reports from his orchard men in which a record-breaking yield of apples is predicted.

BARRYTOWN, N. Y.—The beautiful native perennials, which grow in great beauty and abundance in the peat soil of this locality, have been taken up as a specialty by the Shatemuc Nurseries and a catalogue, both comprehensive and instructive, has been issued. The tendency of the taste of to-day is in the direction of a better appreciation of our native shrubs and herbaceous plants for effective garden work.

American Pomological Society.

The secretary of this national society of fruit-growers and students of horticulture, announces that the report of the proceedings of the Boston convention has just come from the press and is ready for distribution. This report contains an unusually large amount of valuable matter, including, as it does, the addresses of noted scientists and pomologists. Important changes appear in the amended code of nomenclature. For the first time the pomological history of the middle states is written up; the chapter

Our Pastimes.

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and sporting readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Win. J. Stewart, 43 W. 28th St., New York; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia; or to the American Florist Co., Chicago.

At New York.

The New York Florists' Bowling Club's bowling enthusiasm was apparently cooled off by the strain of Easter work for on Monday night there were but six members on hand to try conclusions on the alleys. They rolled several games the following record giving the three best scores made by each:

The consensus of opinion seems to be that the demand for plants and cut flowers this Easter equaled that of last year, but prices were decidedly lower. More plants were sold, but the prices of last year were not realized, except in lilies, which, contrary to all expectations, were scarce. Those who were fortunate enough to have a good stock had no difficulty in disposing of it at good figures; 25 to 50 cents per flower and bud was the retail figure. Small and medium sized azaleas were in brisk demand, also Crimson Ramblers. The stock of this popular rose offered for sale was never in better condition and sold like hot cakes. Hydrangeas lagged, sales had to be forced. Spiraeas sold well as also did hyacinths and daffodils. Tulips were a glut and hung fire. In the cut flower line roses, carnations and violets sold well. Roses were about equal to the demand. Carnations were scarce. More violets could have been disposed of. The weather was fair but toward evening it grew colder which interfered somewhat with deliveries.

The magnificent display made by the stall holders in the Sheriff street market was a surprise to everyone considering the earliness of Easter. Owing to lack of space the plants had to be elevated on platforms erected ten to twelve feet high. One can imagine the brilliant effect eight or ten of those high stages would create loaded down with gorgeous Easter plants all crowded into a space 50x100 feet. Such an effect was to be seen at the market Saturday morning. Outside the market house the curb was also lined with plants, which were a fine lot, hardly a poor plant to be seen. First prize went to G. M. Nauman, who had a splendid display, including azaleas, genistas, lilies, Ramblers and hybrid roses in pots. S. N. Pentecost got second prize with an equally fine display. His hydrangeas and Ramblers were fine. The third prize went to F. W. Berger, who had a nice lot of well done Azalea mollis, hybrid roses, etc. Casper Aul had a fine lot of lilies, Ramblers and azaleas. John Mollenkopf had a fine lot of superbly finished Ramblers; also lilies of a high order. August Schmitt had his usual grand lot of plants. Mr. Schmitt did not enter into competition for any of the prizes. G. G. Stehn, among other good things, had a lot of extra well done hyacinths in pots and pans. Leonard Utzinger had a splendid lot of azaleas, lilies and Ramblers. Mr. Gamble was the only one in the market to show rhododendrons, which sold readily. His pot hybrid roses were good.

At the cut flower market everything went with a whoop. The boys claim the business was equally as good as last year, but prices were lower. Orders were placed quickly and all got out on time. Some consignments arrived too late on Sunday morning to be of much value. The following were the prices: Roses, tea, $4 to $10; Beauty, $1.50 to $6 per dozen; violets, 75c to $1 for single; Gov. Herrick, Carlton's new single one brought $1.25 per 100; lilies, $12.50 to $15; carnations, $3 to $6; valley, $3 to $4; daffodils and tulips, $3; smilax at a premium.

The J. M. Gasser Company had an exceptionally fine lot of Rambler roses and lilies. The store presented a very handsome appearance and they report business good.

Smith & Fetters had to have an annex to accommodate the large quantity of extra fine stock they had for sale; nothing but the very cream is handled by this firm.

Collins & Harrison did a rushing business, principally in cut flowers, of which they handle the finest the market affords, principally long stem Beauty roses.

Westman & Getz had all they could do to handle their Euclid avenue trade.

Baumont & Company had a nice display of plants and cut flowers.

Milton Parks opened his new store in the Citizens Building on Euclid avenue. The store is finished in marble.

ECHO.

Detroit.

Easter trade was much the best ever experienced here. But, tremendous as the demand was, most all the dealers were amply prepared for it with an immense stock of most all kinds of flowering plants and cut flowers. Everyone's facilities were taxed to the utmost, however. Every dealer's experience showed the call to be chiefly for flowering plants in lieu of cut flowers. Violets alone escaped the discrimination and enormous quantities of them were sold and far in excess of the number sold a year ago. At times through the week it appeared that Easter lilies would be in over supply, and the prices moderated considerably, but early on Saturday it was seen that a shortage would exist in most places, which later proved to be true. Azaleas were very popular and sold readily, great numbers being disposed of. Hyacinths, tulips and daffodils in pots and pans were moved in great numbers. Some Crimson Ramblers were on the market and they sold well, while lilacs, snowballs and rhododendrons and other novelties in plants seemed in little favor. The plant-filled baskets daintily trimmed were much favored for the more costly gifts, and most all of those prepared were sold. The supply of roses and carnations was about equal to the demand, but no fancy prices were realized. There was but little demand for American Beauty roses. The weather of Saturday could not be called favorable, being very windy, cloudy and some of the time raining, turning to very cold in the evening, and by Sunday morning eight degrees of frost made some trouble for early deliveries.

The Florists' Club meeting, Wednesday evening, April 6, was fairly well attended. Much of the time was given to the consideration of lily culture. The club recently received, direct from Bermuda, a report of the result of an experiment made jointly by a botanical station there and Kew Gardens, England, three years ago, with bulbs allowed to mature before removing and shipping, and a lot which had their blooms cut previous to maturity. Both lots of bulbs were shipped to the Kew Gardens and there grown to flowering period, all receiving the same general treatment, but with results vastly different. The bulbs which had matured perfectly produced thirty-three per cent better results than the others. This information led to a resolution denouncing the practice of Bermuda growers shipping to this country cut blooms, and an appeal will be also addressed to the Society of American Florists asking the exercise of its influence to bring about legislation prohibitory of the practice.

Geo. W. Davis disappeared from his home last Monday morning. He took with him the entire receipts of his Easter week sales, estimated at $1,000. He left behind him his wife and two small children and many anxious creditors.

J. F. S.

Springfield, Mass.

The outlook for Easter sales was gloomy owing to the weather which was very threatening. A snowstorm followed by rain all day April 1 kept buyers at home, but by April 2 we got a change and with it came the rush. Every one had all he could attend to. Plants and cut flowers sold well. Lilies, azaleas, lilacs, spiraeas, tulips, Rambler roses, hyacinths and violets in pots and pans were in good demand. Prices were about the same as in previous years. Made-up baskets of hyacinths, geraniums, azaleas and lilies sold well and a few good baskets of mixed plants were taken up. In cut flowers violets took the lead. Carnations, roses, tulips, daffodils and valley went off well. In violets one retailer sold 25,000 and could have sold more.

Mark Aitken reports prices about the same as former years with good sales. Messrs. Fairfield, Schlatter and L. D. Robinson report business as the best they ever had. Wholesale growers say sales were good and they would have sold more if they had had it. A. B.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill.—W. T. Hempstead was the victim of some sharpers last week. They ordered $10 worth of flowers and palms sent to 316 East Locust street. A swindler met the delivery wagon, secured the flowers and then, going to the back yard, made his exit from the rear.

Cardinal New Roses Enchantress

Read Testimonials from two of the largest growers in Washington who have bought large number of plants after seeing them growing at my place.

Your new rose Cardinal came duly to hand, and we firmly believe it will have a great future and will certainly be a money-maker, as it is in a class all to itself, being superior in form and habit to anything that we have as yet seen. Your new rose Enchantress we also think will be a great money-maker, judging from its profuse blooming quality, as we have seen it several times in mid-winter. It cannot help being a winner. Wishing you every success, we remain,
 Yours truly, A. GUDE & BRO.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27, 1904.

Dear Sir:—We gave all the show possible to Enchantress and Cardinal, placing them in our window with placards, telling what they were. They kept a week, retaining their brilliant color to the last. Cardinal was as full of perfume the day the petals dropped, as when it was first cut. The roses are both matchless, and we believe destined to out-class all roses of their color for forcing under-glass. Very sincerely yours,
 AMERICAN ROSE CO., per B. D.

Breitmeyers' New Rose

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID.

To Be Disseminated April 1, 1904.

COLOR. Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE. Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM. Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH. Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific.

Easter trade was very satisfactory notwithstanding that rain fell all day Friday, and Thursday and Saturday were not warm enough to tempt people out of doors. While some of the storemen report an increase over last year's trade the receipts in many cases were not much over last year. Lilies were plentiful and conservative buyers closed out at good prices, while many of the plungers had large quantities left over. The department stores, as a rule, were in this class and Saturday night were selling lilies at twenty-five cents a pot that cost them at least forty cents. There was also an over supply of all kinds of bulbous stock, but all other Easter plants cleaned up well. Cut flowers were plentiful in all lines, with the exception of violets, many frames of which were too late for heavy picking. Orders from nearby towns showed a marked increase.

As has been usually the case, large orders for funeral work for early Monday deliveries kept the tired storemen busy until late Sunday evening.

H. F. A. Lange opened an extra store to display his large Easter stock and reports an increased trade.

The Bay State Floral Company which opened about a month ago has discontinued business.

Hansen & Lundeen have opened a flower store at 260 Main street. L.

Omaha, Neb.

Easter business was the best for the last fifteen years. We were very fortunate in regard to the weather. Thursday, Friday and Saturday were nice, bright days, and Sunday was one of the nicest Easter Sundays we ever had. The florists' window displays were the finest they ever had. Lilies took the lead in pot plants, azaleas second. Pans made up of hyacinths, tulips and valley sold well. Dutch hyacinths in pots were a drug. Lilies sold all the way from 12½ cents to 20 cents per blossom. Roses, teas, brought $1 to $2; carnations, 75 cents to $1.50; American Beauty $3 to $6. Bulbous stock sold well this year. Saturday afternoon after four o'clock all the good lilies were sold. Carnations were somewhat scarce but the quality made it up and the roses were never better.

DAVIS BROS., Bloomsburg, Pa.—

BLOOMSBURG, PA., Mar. 18, 1904.

Gentlemen:—Please book my order for 5,000 of your new red carnation "Crisis." I have watched this carnation for the last three years and I believe it is the best red carnation in cultivation to-day. I sold several thousand blooms of this variety for you last year. It proved to be a good shipper and always gave satisfaction.

Yours very respectfully, J. L. DILLON.

DAVIS BROTHERS CO., Bloomsburg, Pa.

Newport, R. I.

Easter has come and gone. We had the worst rain storm experienced in a long time. A cold north east rain began Thursday noon and was with us all day Friday. As the first days of the week of were cold, cloudy and had our only good day was Easter Saturday. It was then warm and pleasant, and business was very satisfactory. As a whole the trade may be said to have been fairly satisfactory although there is a difference of opinion as to how the Easter business compared with previous years. After carefully considering all the facts the situation sums up to this—total volume of business about the same as last year; more plants sold, and perhaps not quite as many cut flowers. This may be accounted for from the fact that violets and carnations were not very plentiful while good plants were in ample supply and reasonable in price. Azaleas, genistas, rhododendrons, lilacs, spiræas and other specimen plants were in the best possible condition and well grown. There was a surplus of bulb stock and some that had been grown in flats for cut flowers could not be sold.

The private gardeners made many large shipments of Easter plants to their employers' houses in New York and other cities. Some notable collections were sent this year. One of the best was sent from Commodore E. Gerry's greenhouses, Arthur Griffin, head gardener. This shipment filled three express wagons and all the plants were especially well grown, showing the skill of Mr. Griffin.

Wadley & Smythe have been working this winter moving some large trees to estates on Bellevue avenue. Some were evergreens and some deciduous trees. It is the immediate effect that is wanted on these splendid places, and no expense is spared to gain the desired effects.

The Geo. A. Weaver Company has just received a nice lot of small palms from W. A. Manda. There is a constant and increasing demand for small palms of the varieties most suitable for house culture. Palms that retail from 50 cents to $2 are good sellers.

Gibson Brothers made a beautiful Easter display at their Bellevue avenue store. Lilies, azaleas, genistas, daisies and cinerarias composed the potted plants.

There has been a change of gardeners at Sidney Webster's estate, "Pen Craig," this week, Mr. Hutchinson being succeeded by Mr. Hutor.

William Butler, of Portsmouth, R. I., has been engaged by Reginald C. Vanderbilt to be head gardener of "Sandy Point Farm."

Albany, N. Y.

The florists of Albany are well satisfied with the results of their Easter business. The demand as reported was largely for azaleas, which stood first on the list for popular favor; the next greatest demand was for hydrangeas and rhododendrons. Scotch heather in pots sold well, but the supply was limited. A considerable number of orders were filled for flowers in hampers, many quite expensive combinations in this line being supplied. The demand for Lilium Harrisii was large as was also the request for violets. Eyes reported the sale of 65,000 violets on Friday and Saturday of Easter week. Whittle Brothers sold about 100 fine azaleas during the same period. Very little stock remained unsold and all the dealers reported business as slightly better than last year.

BOOKS FOR FLORISTS.

The time is coming along when these are needed and opportunity at hand for reading them. Every one of the following should be in your library.

Send prices quoted and we send the books.

LANDSCAPE GARDENING (Maynard).—The development of landscape art within the past few years compels the wide-awake florist to keep posted on this branch of the business. The many suggestions of this book will be found helpful every business day. It contains 338 pages, 165 illustrations. $1.50

THE GOLDFISH (Mulertt).—A number of florists find goldfish an attractive and paying addition to their business. The best advice is given in every department of the subject, including construction and care of the parlor aquarium, in this volume of 160 pages, handsomely illustrated. $2.00.

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION (Taft).—It tells the whole story about how to build, and heat a greenhouse, be it large or small, and that too in a plain, easily understood, practical way. It has 118 illustrations. $1.50.

HEATING AND VENTILATING BUILDINGS (Carpenter).—This book covers the entire subject most fully. In the preparation of heating and ventilating plans, it will be found a most valuable guide. $4.00.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY GROWING VIOLETS (Saltford).—This is by a practical grower who has made a success of the business. No grower of violets can afford to be without it. Price 25 cents.

STEAM HEATING FOR BUILDINGS (Baldwin).—Contains valuable data and hints for steam fitters and those who employ this method of heating. The 350 pages are fully illustrated. $2.50.

THE HORTICULTURISTS' RULE-BOOK (L. H. Bailey).—Contains information valuable to all those engaged in any branch of horticulture. Illustrated. 312 pages. 75 cents.

FUMIGATION METHODS (Johnson).—A practical treatise on cheap and effective means of destroying insect pests. Handsomely bound and profusely illustrated; 250 pages. $1.00.

Gardeners' Chronicle.

A Weekly Illustrated Journal.

ESTABLISHED 1841.

The GARDENERS' CHRONICLE has been for over SIXTY YEARS THE LEADING JOURNAL of its class. It has achieved this position because, while specially devoting itself to supplying the daily requirements of gardeners of all classes, the information furnished is of such general and permanent value that the GARDENERS' CHRONICLE is looked up to as the STANDARD AUTHORITY on the subjects of which it treats.

Subscription to the United States, $4.20 per year. Remittances to be made payable to H. G. COVE.

"Gurney" Heaters

"BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouse: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expense at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

THE ROSE.

That Red, Red Rose.

Fashions may come and fashions may go, but I go on forever. RED ROSE.

Yes, red roses will always be with us, and will be always popular. Who among us who have been in parts of Europe where roses flourish so satisfactorily out of doors cannot call to mind some red rose that was especially appealing when in the month of June it was in full bloom, in all its crimson glory? In nearly all the villages of Great Britain there are some residents who vie with each other to have all the meritorious old varieties of roses in their gardens, and at least a few of the newer ones on trial. Sometimes it may be the pastor of the parish, often the cobbler, and I know of one case where the gamekeeper was that person.

Who does not remember "Jack," Jacque, or more properly, General Jacqueminot (possibly so named in honor of a general in the French army), Louis XIV, Lord Raglan, Louis Van Houtte, Fisher Holmes and others of crimson shades, which help us to realize to the fullest what the New England poet Lowell meant when he asked: "And what is so rare as a day in June? Then, if ever, come perfect days." Especially would that apply in old England when roses are in bloom. It was not until the writer came to America that he heard the good old red rose General Jacqueminot called by the affectionate name of "Jack." It was "Jack" which aided materially in lifting the rose in winter to the high plane it now so deservedly occupies. It was its rarity in winter, because difficult to produce, that caused it to sell for $2.50 per flower, a price which another French rose has more than sustained in dignifying rose culture, namely, Mme. Ferdinand Jamin, known to Americans by common consent by what is thought the more nearly appropriate name, American Beauty. It is believed the original producer of this most famous of all roses in America in winter would hardly recognize it as his production if he saw it at its best in any American city.

The red rose "Jack" was and still is so constituted that its powers for the production of buds for cutting in winter is limited. One crop of flowers more or less large, depending entirely on the season when it was being cut, was all that could be expected. To try to bring in a crop for Christmas great risks were run and much expense entailed, because a technical process of the preparation of the plants for the trying ordeal had to be gone through with many weeks before the time set for the cutting of the first flowers. This old red rose, General Jacqueminot, belongs to the class of roses known among French rosarians as Hybrid Remontant. Two of the first red roses to be grown to help "Jack" out in winter were the hybrid teas, Duke of Connaught and Pierre Guillot, but although they were everblooming they could only be cut with short stems, and would not be worth considering for a moment in these progressive days, not even on the curb. The William Francis Bennett was the next hybrid tea brought out, which it was hoped would fill the long felt want, but it has had its day and ceased to be. The latest bit of history about the last named red rose is from C. Bennett, son of the raiser, Henry Bennett, of England, who states in effect that the famous $5,000 variety was condemned in its early youth to the fiery furnace, but was given a second chance on account of great length of petals, which it certainly had, but unfortunately there were not enough of them.

We thought we needed for exhibition in Philadelphia a short time ago some flowers of a new red rose which belongs in Richmond, Ind., and was raised by the dean among disseminators of novelties in new roses, E. G. Hill. In reply to the request made he said: "I wish it were possible to make the display of the new rose that you suggest, but we have made use of every eye for grafting purposes and all the young growth for cuttings. We desire to have eight to ten thousand of the variety for planting the coming season. We have only eighty-four plants all told. The variety has in it blood of the tea-scented rose to a far greater extent than has the Liberty, hence it grows and blooms with the freedom of a tea-scented variety. It is perhaps the most free blooming red rose extant. I don't desire to appear unduly enthusiastic about the variety, but good growers of roses in the western part of the country and good judges of what a red rose ought to be for winter blooming appear to believe it to be O. K. We could take $5,000 for the stock if we wished, but that price is no temptation whatever to us." Since the above was written by Mr. Hill I believe this rose has been named Mars.

Liberty, referred to by Mr. Hill, is the name of an Irish red rose, at present the ruling favorite in that color for cut flowers in winter in America. It is classed as a hybrid tea, having as its parents Victor Hugo, a hybrid remontant or June rose, with velvety crimson flowers on the one side as the pollen parent, and an unnamed seedling from Mrs. W. J. Grant (renamed Miss Belle Siebrecht in America), a pink hybrid tea as seed parent on the other, so that Liberty is sufficiently well bred to expect it to bloom freely, which it certainly does when treated rightly with some amateurs, gardeners and florists, though everyone who undertakes to induce it to produce its beautiful, red sweet-scented blossoms in winter with long stems does not do so satisfactorily, that is to say, considered commercially. Others have been preeminently successful. Those who have succeeded in the production of these coveted red rose buds in winter modestly make no pretensions as to unusual skill, but to the application of common sense cultural methods attribute their success. It is refreshing to listen to a successful cultivator of winter-blooming roses explaining his methods, because they are reminders of what all practical growers should know, be they gardeners or commercial florists.

Meteor, the H. T. red rose which has been with us so long, is gradually giving way to the superiority of Liberty. It was the rose par excellence winter and summer as a cut rose for many years. It is an English raised seedling, coming from the nursery of Mr. Bennett, before referred to, and was given away with an American purchase of new varieties of roses thought at the time to be more valuable, which have been and gone, and Meteor will not much longer remain. A new red rose from France may be looked for next year, though on account of the uncertainty or unknown quality and the limited quantity of a new rose and its high price, it will be tried only in a small way the first year. Its name is Etoile de France, which sounds as though the owners had confidence in it. It has for its parents Mme. Abel Chatenay as the seed bearer and Fisher Holmes as the pollen parent. It appears to be well bred, as both parents are well enough known in America for us to be able to speak with confidence as to their characteristics. In some of the large cities, notably Chicago, Chatenay is quite popular with the producer and has decided merits as a flower to render it acceptable to the rose lover. Fisher Holmes is much like "Jack," being described as an improvement on that good old sort, the flowers being fuller of petals and more freely produced; so that Etoile de France will come to us with excellent pedigree. It is also described as "having fine long buds, coming singly and carried on stiff, erect stems; very large flowers, expanding freely, possessing petals of good substance; magnificent cupped form and very full; color superb velvety crimson. It is also fragrant with good lasting properties."

Another red rose of American origin, is called General MacArthur, coming originally from the birthplace of Mars, but since purchased by and now being disseminated jointly by Storrs & Harrison and John N. May. Though the flowers are not as fine in shape as are the best Liberty, not being so long in the petal, yet we are assured that it is a good doer, and can be grown by anybody and everybody, which is a good trait and ought to appeal to the florist who grows his products to be disposed of on his own place at retail. All good new roses are welcome, no matter what the color, but we must always have a good red rose, so that the new roses referred to, both American and French, may with confidence expect to be greeted most courteously and purchased generously.

EDWIN LONSDALE.

John Cook, of Baltimore.

John Cook's new roses, Cardinal and Enchant, are going off well and the stock becoming reduced, shipments having been made to rose growers in all parts of this country as well as England, Germany and Canada. Recent visitors to inspect the new candidates in their own home were Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., and Mr. Traendly, of Traendly & Schenck, of New York.

Mr. Cook recently celebrated his golden jubilee (fifty years) of residence in and near Baltimore. Born in Breisgau, near Freiburg, in Germany, he was put at the gardeners' trade and learned thoroughly during six years all its branches. Arriving at the age when he was liable to enforced military service he determined to escape it by trying his fortunes in America, and, with no backing save health and a determination to succeed, reached New York early in 1853, where he worked for about a year for David Clark, whose sons continue the business as the well known firm of David Clark's Sons. Coming to Baltimore, engaging at once with Robert Halliday, then at the head of its nurserymen and florists, and known widely for his great stock of and success with the camellia, then in the heyday of favor. Young Cook introduced in this establishment the system of grafting instead of the slower process of inarching camellias, this in turn giving way to their propagation from cuttings.

After about two years' service here he went as gardener to James Howard McHenry, a gentleman with a handsome landed estate and a great taste for horticulture. On his place Mr. Cook superintended the erection of the first iron conservatory put up in this country, and which is still standing, the plans being procured from England.

In 1863 Mr. Cook took charge of Wm. F. Frick's property, afterwards acquired by Robert Garrett, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, (Mrs. Garrett being a daughter of Mr. Frick). Of this, with abundant means put at his disposal and empowered to use his own then recognized great taste in landscape architecture and adornment, he made a splendid place, far in advance of others in this locality, and renowned for its lawns and vistas, its superb roads, its harmonious combinations of tree forms and foliage, and its magnificent specimens, all happily placed, the whole being the creation of his own genius and practical skill.

Mr. Cook's notable achievement in constructing and embellishing "Uplands" brought him so many requests to supervise the laying out of other places that he decided, having accumulated by frugality some capital, to go into business for himself, securing a promising tract of some thirty acres on which he has been located about thirty years.

Many of the handsome country seats around Catonsville, a suburb popular with people of means, owe their beauty to his knowledge and discerning taste.

In 1872 Mr. Cook introduced the Marie Louise violet into America. Noticing the advertisement of this novelty in a continental paper—he has always kept finger on the pulse of trade progress abroad, subscribing for many years to the gardening periodicals—he ordered 300 plants. Their modest cost, only about $35 including duties and expenses, gave him in plants and flowers a return the following year of $1,450, the new sort going like wildfire wherever seen, and his earliest customers, for considerable quantities, being John and Peter Henderson, H. A. Dreer, etc.

As soon as Mr. Cook became sufficiently independent financially to give time to his favorite pursuit he took up systematically the production of new varieties of fruits and flowers, but especially of the rose. All kinds of crossings and experiments were made, and a careful record maintained, but of thousands of hybridizations very few were successful. Of those which were promising enough to put on the market, the trade recalls Souvenir of Wootten, which was the first hybrid tea raised in America; Marion Dingee, Mrs. Robert Garrett, Baltimore and now are added to the list Enchant and Cardinal. The White Cochet originated also with Mr. Cook, but this most useful outside rose is not a seedling but a sport from Maman Cochet, pink. He was also introducer into the United States of Balduin and Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, he having the latter six months before it was put on the market abroad.

Mr. Cook keeps in touch with the rosarians of Europe and few new things escape his notice. Mr. Lambert, of Treves, editor of the Rose Zeitung, with whom he has long kept up a correspondence, sends him his new seedlings to be tested under conditions prevailing here, and receives in exchange those originating on this side.

Only one or two points of Mr. Cook's horticultural activity have been touched. In other branches as well he has been student, practitioner, improver. For years he had most successful plantations of small fruits, his results from strawberries being phenomenally handsome, but with increasing cares and years he has withdrawn from these specialties (although on his well kept place large quantities of staple fruits are raised and marketed) and devotes his attention to his extensive range of glass and his retail trade in the city.

Mr. Cook, by intelligence and industry, has prospered in his calling, and as a citizen he has been active and useful. Blessed with a beautiful and valuable homestead, a large, companionable and helpful family, held in respect and esteem in the community where he resides, he is an example of all around success achieved and merited by character, probity and diligence.

A Discouraging Sample of Dutch Lilac.

Here is a sample of what our Holland friends are in the habit of sending to American customers for forcing purposes. Long, bare, crooked stems with a few buds at the extreme top and many of the buds blind—that is the character of much of the stock exported to this country. Years ago a French grower used to send beautiful pot-grown specimens, shapely and profusely budded, that were a credit to their grower and a delight to look upon. We don't see such nowadays. The Holland exporters make a great mistake in sending out such rubbish. Some enterprising American grower in a suitable location can build up a large trade by producing and supplying properly grown lilacs and other shrubs of a like nature for forcing purposes. The demand is growing rapidly. If not perhaps Japan can do it for us.

A Model Gardeners' Club.

We stopped off at Dobb's Ferry the other night to attend the meeting of the Dobb's Ferry Gardeners' Association. We had often heard of the enthusiasm and work of the Dobb's Ferry gardeners and have attended one or two of their exhibitions, but we never had the privilege before of entering into their family circle. This noble little band has sprung from a small beginning. Their work at first was entirely directed to charity. They co-operated at first with several of the leading ladies of the district in the management of a fall flower show, the proceeds of which (and also the flowers when the exhibition was over), went to augment the needy and worthy exchequer of the Dobb's Ferry Hospital. The prizes were all subscribed and although they perhaps did not amount to much they were nevertheless keenly contested, the winner counting the intrinsic value above the dollars and cents. The schedule of classes for the fourth annual exhibition is issued, and from this small beginning the association has sprung. The membership is made up of all the leading gardeners in the district and though not as large as many of the neighboring societies, they lack nothing in enthusiasm. The proceedings were entirely informal and reminded one more of a family gathering met for a social friendly chat than an association bound tightly by parliamentary rules.

A small prize is given every meeting for the best exhibit. At this meeting it was given for the two best plants of geraniums, and was won by Robt. Boreham, gardener to the J. J. McComb estate, Dobb's Ferry. The after talk followed upon geraniums generally, and upon the most suitable kinds of bulbous stock for forcing. The chat as already stated was quite informal and the very best of good fellowship prevailed. Such meetings are held twice a month. It is refreshing to be present at such a gathering, and such friendly meetings ought to be encouraged in every district. Such association is worthy of emulation, and incalculable good for the men concerned and the profession at large must be the outcome. There is a marked jealousy amongst gardeners in many places, and it arises from nothing else but narrow mindedness. Such gatherings dispel this and the knowledge diffused when all horticultural topics are thus talked over is apparent in the district in which such men live. It shows that there is a desire to keep posted and up to date.

We came across a gardener recently who has charge of a large place, which belongs to a member of the 400. We asked him why he didn't attend some of these meetings, and he replied quite indignantly "that he didn't need to." We visited his place and found the grapery full of chickens, and when we asked what was the matter with the grapes he said: "I think the chickens pay better." We asked if it wouldn't be more profitable to get some of the newer varieties of carnations, but he said "No.

McGowan and Portia are good enough for me." The roses looked bad and we asked him what he thought was the matter. He said: "I guess they want new soil; these plants have been growing in that same soil for six years." We concurred with him that it might be better to change the soil, but he thought the roses would be all right again and we didn't try to argue the point. Happy man; his brain is not troubled with the world's evolutions, and we could only sigh as we recalled the old proverb: "Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise."

Nothing dispels the cobwebs like association with our fellows. Let us have more of it. TRAVELER.

PONTIAC, ILL. — On March 29 the greenhouse of Frank Fenton was almost entirely submerged in water and about one-fourth of his plants were frozen.

PALMS AND FERNS.

Spring Treatment of Palms.

Easter of 1904 having passed into history, there may be found time to do a little more among the foliage plants, there being much that is needed at this season. Just before the Easter trade sets in, the greenhouses are in most cases in their most congested condition, there being not only the bulky stock that is specially prepared for that occasion, but also a general stock of spring bedding plants in those establishments in which a varied retail trade in both plants and flowers is done, and such a trade is by far the most common in our business. The foliage plants being out of commission, so to speak, at this season, excepting those that may be needed in church decorations, are generally crowded together in as small space as possible and are quite likely to receive scant attention until the rush is over. Such a method is not beneficial to the plants owing to the lack of light and air that prevails under such conditions, and just as soon as possible they should be set over and spaced out. If they have not already been thoroughly cleaned there should be no further delay in this operation, it being decidedly the better plan to have the cleaning done before repotting. It is more or less injurious to a plant that is freshly potted to be pulled about and to have the earth loosened around its base, something that is very likely to occur when washing the leaves of a kentia, for example. This loosening of a plant at the collar may seem to be a small matter, but it really does check its progress to some extent, as any observant grower will testify, and it is the attention to these minor details that counts up toward success, or rather that makes the difference between success and failure.

It is also in the spring and early summer that the houses dry out most rapidly and it becomes necessary to pay special attention to the watering and syringing to keep a proper degree of moisture to promote growth and to check red spider and thrips. In bright, warm weather it is beneficial to the growing palms to have a light syringing in the morning and again in the afternoon, this practice being particularly helpful to the newly potted plants in reviving the color of the foliage and encouraging the root growth. The afternoon syringing may be given at three o'clock or even later as the weather grows warmer and the days longer, and immediately afterward the ventilators should be closed, or nearly closed, according to the condition of the weather and temperature. It may be worthy of note that the suggestion regarding special warmth and moisture is specially intended for the spring and early summer season, and for newly potted stock, the writer being strongly opposed to the hotbed and steam bath method of growing palms for commercial use, and believing that only plants that may be safely recommended as being strong, hardy and thrifty are such as should be offered to a customer. The best of plants are perishable enough when exposed to the heat and vitiated air that is so often experienced in our dwellings during the winter season, and a soft and overgrown palm is quite as unsatisfactory to the consumer as an early forced azalea or an Easter lily that has been pushed in a temperature of 100° in order to catch the market.

During the spring house-cleaning, the palm house should have its full share, it being a good plan to give the walls and roof a thorough washing with the hose and a strong pressure of water, this not only removing a great deal of dirt but also dislodging a great many insects, and if repainting be out of the question, at least the walls and benches may have a good coat of warm lime wash. Many insects will crawl about on the woodwork of a greenhouse that has been in use for some years, and if one can empty the house completely and sufficiently isolate it from the other houses to give a fumigation with formaldehyde or with hydrocyanic acid much would doubtless be done toward freeing it from insects for some time to come. It is the fact that the houses are clean and free from insects that so frequently makes the output of a newly built establishment superior to that of some of its neighbors, provided that other conditions are equal. Among the palms that are used for decorating there are usually found some that are in large enough pots for convenient handling, and these will have to be patched up for the season without re-potting. Where it may be done without serious disturbance to the roots the surface soil should be removed and a good top-dressing of rich soil applied. It is also a good time to insert one or more small plants of the same species around the base of the large plant in case the latter is rather too bare around the bottom for the best effect, it often being a matter of surprise to those not familiar with such matters to find how much improvement may be made in a straggling or shabby plant of this character by simply filling it up around the base.

Large phoenixes are likely to form great masses of coarse roots in the bottom of the pot or tub to such a degree as to lift the plant above a proper level for watering, besides loosening the ball from the pot so much that it is impossible to water the plant properly, and in such cases one may have to resort to root-pruning in order to get the plant down again into a pot of reasonable size. Should this be necessary, a sharp knife is the only proper tool to use in cutting back the roots, so that the mutilated roots may soon callus and proceed to make new feeders. Root pruning of palms is not generally advisable, but there are some cases in which it may be done without special injury, and it certainly is a convenience when handling a lot of large decorative stock. But any plant that has been so treated must not be allowed to get very dry afterward, and should also be well protected from the sun until the roots are healed and re-established.

The phoenix and a few other palms have a singular habit of sending up some rootlets above the surface of the ground at times, this habit being especially noticeable with plants that are much pot-bound, when these root tips may be seen protruding vertically from the soil in considerable numbers. This habit seems allied to that of the cypress of the southern swamps in forming those very singular growths known as "cypress knees," and it is just possible that the protruding roots of our phoenix have a similar office to perform in the economy of that palm to that said to be performed by the cypress knees, namely, that of being air conductors to the roots. We might term them vegetable air shafts.

Referring once more to the repairing or rejuvenation of palms that have been in use for decorating, there is a practice among some growers of not only giving some liquid fertilizer to the roots during the summer, but also of applying clear manure water overhead once or twice a week, this being applied with a syringe, and the manure in question being in the form of cow dung. It will be understood, however, that this method is not recommended here as a specific, though it is quite possible that some benefit may be derived from its reasonable use.

W. H. TAPLIN.

A Remarkable Transformation.

The accompanying illustrations speak for themselves. They represent scenes in the store of S. A. Anderson, Buffalo, N. Y., before and after Easter. The first photograph was taken on Friday night preceding Easter before the inroads of the frantic Easter buyers left their impression. It will be noted that the floor is clean and everything inviting for the prospective customer. The second picture was taken Sunday morning. The floor is not immaculate and the neatly wrapped packages stand ready for delivery, mute commentaries on the conditions of Easter business at Anderson's.

Russian War Hurts French Growers.

PARIS, FRANCE.—The war between Russia and Japan is being greatly deplored by the florists of Nice, who under ordinary circumstances, send enormous quantities of cut flowers to Russia during the winter. The war has completely spoiled this part of their trade this year. Society in St. Petersburg has no thought of flowers now, but is donating all its surplus money to the czarina's committee, which takes care of the wounded and sick Russian soldiers, and the gardeners around Nice who last year shipped nearly two million pounds of flowers to St. Petersburg, Moscow and Warsaw, have lost many million francs in consequence.

Belated Easter Reports.

The following are additional reports of the Easter trade as found by the florists in different sections of the country:

TRENTON, N. J.—C. Ribsam & Son report a brisk Easter trade fully up to the standard.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—A. R. Aldrich says prices and volume of business were the same as in 1903. The plant supply was overcrowded.

RACINE, WIS.—Business ran about even with Easter 1903 in point of prices and total sales, says A. J. Fidler. Plants were short of the demand.

HIGHLAND, N. Y.—Over supply of cut flowers and a low demand reduced Easter trade fifty per cent under that of Easter 1903, says J. W. Feeter.

WATERBURY, CONN.—A. Dallas found a good margin over total business transacted in 1903. Good supplies of everything. Bulb stock was slow sale.

HARRISBURG, PA.—A good increase is noted by J. D. Brenneman. Everything in grand supply. Crimson Ramblers did not meet with as much favor as formerly.

MADISON, WIS.—Plenty of everything left over. Easter lily plants and pot tulips sold best. Nothing unusual about the Easter trade reports Fred. Rentschler.

HAMILTON, CAN.—Nothing unusual in the Easter trade says E. G. Brown. Everything in good supply except lily plants. Prices averaged higher than 1903.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Lehr Brothers report better business than last year. Violets were the only shortage. Lilies and azaleas in great demand. Bulb stock went slowly.

BROCKVILLE, ONT.—Total sales much larger than Easter 1903 and better prices obtained. Hyacinths and tulips followed the lily as favorites. There was plenty of stock says R. B. Heather.

REDONDO, CAL.—The Redondo Carnation Company says that total Easter sales averaged higher than last year. In cut flowers violets were scarce. The company handled few plants.

SANTA FE, N. M.—This place is also in line with a fine increase in Easter business, writes Arthur Boyle. Everything was salable, though carnations were most in demand. A good plant trade.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—Fine weather, good prices and good demand boosted business twenty-five per cent better than 1903. Not enough cut lilies. Heavy plant demand, say W. J. & M. S. Vesey.

BANGOR, ME.—Carl Beers notes a thirty per cent increase in sale values over Easter, 1903. Good prices, as high as 24 cents were realized on lilies. Carnations were slightly short. Azaleas sold well.

DUBUQUE, IA.—Harkett's Floral Nursery notes an improvement over Easter 1903. Lilies were scarce. Most all flowering plants were ready sellers. Cut flower stock was of good quality and in good supply.

FARGO, N. D.—Easter passed off satisfactorily, fully up to last year's record. Plants and cut flowers in good supply and lilies the only shortage. Azaleas did not sell as freely as last season. A little cold to deliver plants, say Shotwell and Graver.

BUTTE, MONT.—Easter trade was very good, Harrisii lilies selling for 50 cents per bloom in pots and $5 per dozen cut. Law Brothers had an order of 10,000 carnations, the largest individual order on record in Butte.

BERKELEY, CAL.—Very little increase if any over business of last year writes J. A. Carbone. Wholesale prices were ten per cent less. Growers' prices were less than preceding years. Lilies, both cut and plants, sold well.

NASHUA, N. H.—1903 prices ruled and business was in other respects about the same. Everyone wanted flowering plants and was willing to pay the price. Everything except violets in good supply, write Aug. Gaedeke & Company.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—Plenty of good stock to meet all wants; 1903 prices ruled and a twenty-five per cent increase in the volume of business is given by Chas. W. Crouch. Lily plants and azaleas proved great favorites.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—Cut flowers short of demand, plants plentiful, carnations and lilies the best sellers and an increase of twenty-five per cent in sale values over Easter 1903 is the way Thomas Thompson sizes up the Easter trade.

BRANTFORD, CAN.—Thomas A. Ivey reports everyone as satisfied with the week's Easter business, which eclipsed that of last year by twenty-five per cent. Everything was cleaned out in cut flowers and plants and the supply was very large.

EAST OAKLAND, CAL.—Domoto Brothers report a great scarcity in all lines. Heavy rains and floods during February and March wrought great damage to the growing crops and flowers. Business of course fell off greatly in total sales and prices.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Easter was satisfactory. Higher prices, more business and plenty of stock, with the exception of cut roses, combined to make it very pleasant for the florist. Martin & Forbes say that everything in flowering plants moved at a sharp pace.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—Lily plants, which were scarce brought better prices than in 1903. Other stock was well up to the demand. Plants in bloom were eagerly sought. Bulb stock, as almost everywhere else, moved at a snail's pace, reports James Pont.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Sales were twenty-five per cent less this year than Easter 1903. There was little sale for plants and there were more than enough cut flowers. Azaleas did not sell well but some good hydrangeas which M. Cook & Son handled sold readily.

DALLAS, TEX.—A heavy rain on Saturday preceding Easter hurt Easter sales considerably and trade on a whole was not as good as expected. Easter lilies were late, says the Texas Seed and Floral Company. The demand for carnations, roses and lilies was about equal.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—The Ingleside Floral Company found business slightly better in point of total sales than Easter 1903. The weather was ideal. Orders came in unusually late, causing a great rush. Automobile delivery played an important part in getting out orders.

LINCOLN, NEB.—1903 prices ruled, although several firms tried to see how cheap they could sell stock without giving it away, writes C. H. Frey. The supply of cut flowers and plants was just about equal to the demand. Carnations, roses and lilies had the call over other stock.

MITCHELL, S. D.—Better prices governed the market than last year and better business generally. The supply in plants and cut flowers was not adequate to meet the calls. There was little call for azaleas, palms, etc. Good stock sold at good figures and E. C. Newberry reports everyone as satisfied.

BRAMPTON, CAN.—Increase of twenty-five per cent over last season's Easter business and better prices, reports the Dale estate. The demand soon cleaned up good plant and cut flower material. Some growers hung out the "cut throat" price of 6½ and 7 cents for lilies in spite of the limited supply which developed.

CARLISLE, PA.—Jesse Robbins says that lily plants were scarce and good carnations were not over-plentiful. The higher priced roses did not sell well. The writer further notes that it is a great pity that dealers in bulbs do not state when they substitute Japanese longiflorum for Bermuda Harrisii. By doing so the grower would be aided in getting his lilies in on time. The dealer who substitutes without notification thereof should be made to stand the loss.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A. Gude & Brother say that the rush for Easter lily plants and violets was phenomenal. At their place it was utterly impossible to wait on the customers. Over 3,000 pots of lilies were sold. A fine supply in all lines and a fifteen per cent increase is estimated over last year's business.

TORONTO, ONT.—Plants were favorite Easter sellers and they were in good supply. Roses were scarce but everything else was plentiful. A heavy demand for violets noted. John H. Dunlop says that bulb stock sold well where cheaper flowers were required. Twenty per cent increase in total sales over last year.

GUTHRIE, OKLA.—All enjoyed a thriving trade over Easter, the volume of business transacted being almost fifty per cent greater than in 1903. Farrow Brothers report a good supply of everything except carnations, of which they could have sold 5,000 more. Three-fourths of the calls were for carnations. Harrisii lilies sold at $4 per dozen.

TOLEDO, O.—Forty per cent greater business than that of Easter 1903, reports George A. Heintz. Plants and cut flowers were equal to the demand. Azaleas, genistas, Rambler roses and lilies were the leading sellers in plants and in cut flowers carnations had the call. Plant trade is increasing every year at the expense of cut flowers.

JACKSON, MISS.—W. J. Brown, Jr., reports thirty per cent decrease in Easter business under that of 1903. He says that owing to the extraordinary early spring all outdoor plants were in bloom, cutting florists' sales short. Mr. Brown even had sweet peas out in the open, in full bloom, a thing never heard of here. There was stock in cut flowers enough to get around.

"Thought Floriculture."

The New York World, Pittsburg Dispatch and other voracious journals publish an account by Dr. Paul Edwards of an experiment in "thought floriculture." According to the story Col. Andrade, of Mexico, made the experiment, selecting therefor two excellent specimen plants in equal health.

The first, by his thought, he is said to have endowed with courage, love, force, development. He communicated to it thoughts of sweetness and happiness; in short, he gave it all the moral support possible, and this flower gained very rapidly in size, beauty, suavity and perfume. It seemed to try to attain an esthetic perfection, and whenever Colonel Andrade approached it it seemed to recognize and bend before him.

The other flower the Colonel disdained and turned from it in derision. In three days it drooped and in a month died.

Colonel Andrade never touched either of the flowers.

Unfortunately the narrator omits the very interesting information as to the variety of flower upon which he exercised this wonderful influence, but we can see in the experiment suggestions of grand possibilities and a possible revolution in cultural methods. Soils, food, temperatures, insects and plant diseases all cease to worry in the presence of this application of Christian science to plant health.

The Florists' Clubs and other institutions and horticultural journals are wasting good time and ink on so-called cultural and reasonable notes. We had a suspicion of this before after perusing some of the sage articles published under such headings, but now we are convinced. Hereafter our energies should be devoted to the establishment of schools where our ambitious growers may practice and become adepts in the cult of communicating to their plants by means of "Persuasive speech and more persuasive sighs, silence that speaks and eloquence of eyes," that measure of happiness and ecstatic perfection which will secure every bloom in the "special" class. We think of some to whom the modern suavity method will come sweetly easy and others to whom it will be a tough proposition, but it looks as though they'll have to face it. Hereafter when we find one of the boys parading a seraphic countenance we shall know just what to attribute it to.

NORTH STOUGHTON, MASS.—The business carried on heretofore by Davis & Jones will now be conducted by M. Davis & Company, who have purchased a 100-foot greenhouse from Mrs. M. L. Duly, of Randolph.

HARTFORD, CONN.—The exhibition of flowers of Connecticut which was recently on view in this city has been forwarded to the exposition at St. Louis, for which it was prepared. A. W. Driggs, of East Hartford, who arranged the exhibit, has been sent to St. Louis by the Connecticut Horticultural Society to set it up.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Decoration Day Trade.

Decoration day is now but six weeks away. This holiday has been attaining greater importance each year, florally. In many places it is ranked on a par with Christmas and Easter in the volume of business and ahead of those festivals in net profit to the florist. Customers are no longer satisfied with cheap arrangements of field and garden bloom. Originally buttercups and daisies, snowballs and lilacs, hawthorn and apple blossoms sufficed for the cemetery decoration and were generally thought more in keeping with the sentiment of the day than the indoor productions of the florist. But, gradually the taste has come to demand something, if not artistically better yet costing more and giving choicer effect. So it now becomes an object for the grower to give special attention to the prospective crop for Decoration day.

The wise man will watch his roses and carnations, and guard against deterioration of quality or depleting of crop with the same solicitude as at Easter, feeling assured that a hungry market stands ready to take up every first-class flower he can offer. Lilies are a profitable Decoration day crop. In the present waning vitality in the bedding plant trade the houses can well be spared for a crop of longiflorums that, coming along naturally, with the minimum expenditure for fuel, will give blooms in abundance, of the highest grade.

Colored flowers are in particular demand at Decoration day. Red carnations reach a value rarely realized at any other time excepting Christmas. Semi-double scarlet geranium although hardly in the "choice" class finds a ready sale because of the scarcity of greenhouse flowers of this color, and the blooms well grown and carefully handled will bring a price almost equal to what the entire plant will realize in the plant market. One florist doing an extensive suburban trade for Decoration day makes a rule not to deliver any Decoration day flowers, either to houses or cemeteries. Every customer must call or send for his flowers or otherwise the order is declined and the reasons courteously given. Buyers generally accept the situation and this leaves him with his full force available for waiting on customers and filling orders. For several years the custom has been followed and with most gratifying results.

New England Notes.

LENOX, MASS.—The Lenox Horticultural Society has added a rose and strawberry show in June to the list of its proposed exhibitions for 1904.

BRENTWOOD, N. H.—The oldest married couple in New England is said to be Mr. and Mrs. John Smith of this place. Both were born in 1812. Mr. Smith built a greenhouse for flower and vegetable forcing in 1860 and has continued in that business ever since, his son, J. W. Smith, being now in company with him under the firm name of John Smith & Son.

AMHERST, MASS.—At the Amherst Experiment Station the weather for December, January and February was recorded as follows: December, mean maximum temperature, 31.4° Fahr.; mean minimum, 12.9°; snowfall, 12 inches. January, mean maximum, 23.7°; mean minimum, 4.9°; snowfall, 23½ inches. February, mean maximum, 27.8°; mean minimum, 6.8°; snowfall, 10 inches.

Chicago.

Since Easter there really has not been much of a market. Immediately after the holiday rush stock of all kinds, including lilies, accumulated rapidly and low prices prevailed to the degree that the seller himself made no price. Carnations sold better this week than last, but roses are yet in a crowded state and good stock may be purchased at very low figures. Violets are still coming to this market but it is not difficult to see that they are on the wane and must soon take their place in the category of the season's has-beens. The shipping trade has been fairly active but the local retail business seems to be in a state of innocuous desuetude. The weather for the last three or four days has been of the March variety and the output from the greenhouses received a set-back which was not unwelcome to the dealer in the city who was, since Easter, wrestling with the old, old problem of the glut.

The regular meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago was held in the Auditorium annex Tuesday afternoon. The committee appointed to secure the location for the coming autumn show made an informal report which was referred to the executive committee for action. A committee on nomination was appointed to report at the next meeting. F. F. Benthey was elected a member of the society. The meeting was adjourned subject to the call of the secretary.

An old ruling which prohibited flowers being sent to the council halls on the inauguration night was dug up this year and enforced. The Florists' Club sent a committee of three around with a petition which was signed by almost every florist in the city to Mayor Harrison asking that the ruling be discarded. They were informed that it was too late to rescind the action this year and the local florists lost an aggregate of several thousand dollars.

The Chicago Tree Planting society was organized April 13 with election of the following officers: President, O. C. Simonds; vice president, Edwin A. Kanst; secretary, George E. Hooker; treasurer, L. V. LeMoyné. The society will encourage the observance of Arbor day, April 22, and will distribute literature instructing school children and citizens how to select and care for trees.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Union Wednesday voted to strike on twenty-four hours' notice unless their claims received prompt attention from the west park board. Complaints are that the men have been kept on at half pay for two months, on account of lack of funds, and that men with no knowledge of gardening are being paid gardeners' wages.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held on the evening of April 20. At this meeting the coal question will be discussed and several papers on the subject read. The first May meeting will be held on Thursday evening instead of Wednesday. The club will then move its quarters to a larger room.

L. C. Coatsworth and Leonard Kill went to St. Louis Wednesday night, with roses to exhibit at the Thursday night meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club. Mr. Coatsworth took Bride, Bridesmaid and Beauty and Mr. Kill took Peter Reinberg's well known Chatenay and the new Uncle John.

Members of the public service committee of the county board this week received a communication from the woman's auxiliary of the American Park and Outdoor Art association asking permission to plant trees and flowers between the city hall and the county building, known as Ritter park.

The trade will be sorry to learn of the untimely death of the ten-year old son of Mathias Mann, the north side carnation grower. The little fellow was struck by a fast Northwestern train at the Grandville crossing on April 13 and killed instantly.

The Dormant Sod company was incorporated with a capital of $2,000 and florists' sundries will be handled. The incorporators are S. S. Gorham, Ed. Brothers and E. J. Furber, Jr.

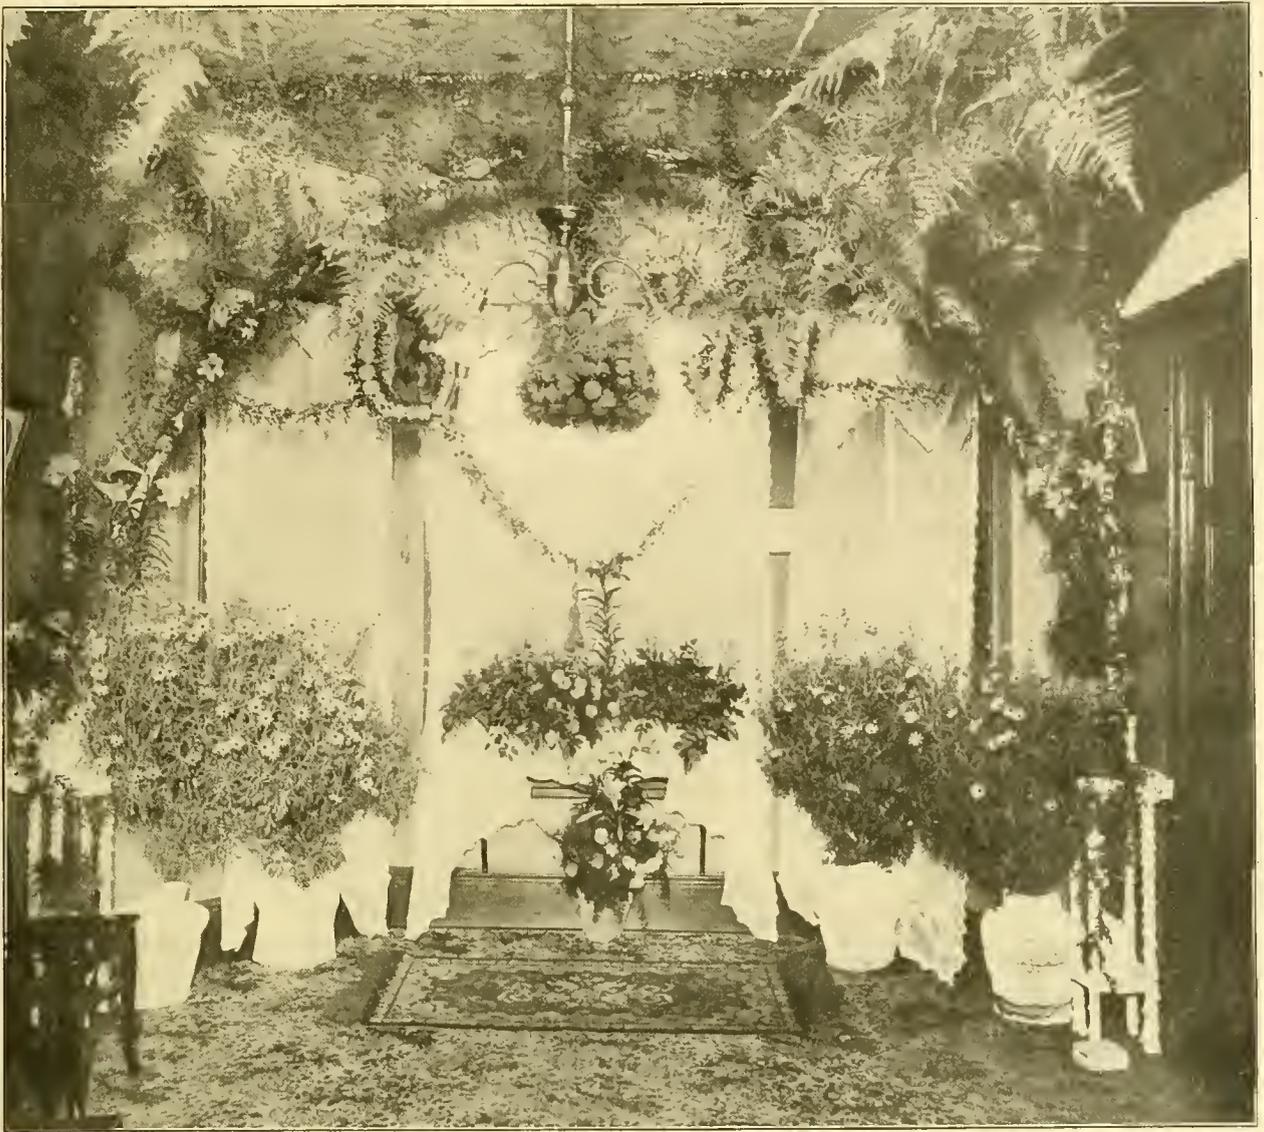

M. P. Dilger, of Waukegan, known to almost every trade member of Chicago, is emulating Peter Reinberg and is running for alderman for the first ward of his city.

Samuel Pearce had for Easter a fine display of well grown daffodils, Roman hyacinths and Easter lilies. His houses all are in first-class condition.

Stephen Costigan who had a flower store about a year ago on the north side is missing and the police have been asked to search for him.

STORE OF SHOTWELL & GRAVER, FARGO, N. D.

WEDDING DECORATION BY CHARLES O. HORN, HELENA, MONT.

Frank Garland and Michael Winandy moved on the 15th of this month to their new quarters on the second floor of the Atlas block.

The decorations for the Hamilton club's banquet and reception last Saturday were executed by Phil Hauswirth.

The Geo. Wittbold Company handled a heavy Easter business, in fact one of the best in the company's history.

J. B. Deamud is getting in ferns of quality and he claims to have plenty of them.

New York.

The monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Monday evening, April 12, was well attended. On the exhibition table was a handsome plant of the new Dwarf Crimson Rambler from Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill. John Scott showed a fine specimen of the Scott fern and Thos. Devoy, of Poughkeepsie, sent a seedling single zonal geranium, Telegraph. Announcements for the remaining meetings of the year were made as follows: May, exhibition of bedding plants; June, ladies' night, with exhibition of strawberries and cream; October, cannas and dahlias; November, chrysanthemums; December, florists' supplies. A show of perennials may be arranged for September. It was announced that tickets for the club outing on June 29 are now ready. A transportation committee composed of Patrick O'Mara, A. J. Guttman and H. A. Bunyard was appointed to arrange for the St. Louis trip in August. C. B. Weathered, S. S. Butterfield and W. J. Stewart were appointed to prepare suitable resolutions on the death of Mrs. T. Devoy, Poughkeepsie.

The flower market in general is very poor, lilies, violets and roses going at very small prices and hard to dispose of at that. Bulbous stock is very abundant and reports show that there will be plenty of it for some time to come. Lilies no doubt are the worst drug of all, buyers not paying over two dollars per hundred for the best when ordering them three or four days ahead. Callas can be had at from 3 cents to 4 cents apiece. Shipments of southern grown narcissi have stopped. They do not sell at any price.

These days of big receipts and slow sales do not bring the happiness to the honorable Mr. Johnnie Weir that they did in days of old. The "select Greek trade," is causing him much anxious thought, and "Charlie" Abrams is another thorn in the flesh, contesting with him the monopoly of the bargain counter.

Franz Zimmerman, of College Point, has gone out of the growing business and has disposed of his glass to Philip Haas, of College Point. The boilers were bought by E. C. Matthes, of Woodside.

"Tree Planting in City Streets" was the subject for discussion at the April 13 meeting of the horticultural section of the American Institute. H. A. Siebrecht was the principal speaker.

Twenty-two Hollanders spent Easter Sunday at the Broadway Central Hotel here ready to interest the trade when the Easter rush was over.

Splendid large bushy plants of Crimson Rambler rose in full bloom were a feature of P. Henderson & Company's Easter store display.

Many roses, shrubs and herbaceous plants usually considered hardy in this latitude have suffered much this winter, says Dr. Van Fleet.

A. J. Guttman has attained to the first rank among the violet manipulators. He handled an amazing quantity of them for Easter.

H. A. Hahn, of 728 Broadway, Brooklyn, has opened a branch store at Jamaica. He reports business very good in landscape work.

Two tents are already up at Clinton market for the accommodation of the plant dealers and another is contemplated.

Fellouris is receiving some very fine trailing arbutus for which he finds a ready sale at 25 cents a bunch.

Moss roses are about the choicest flowers now offered. Several wholesalers have them.

A. H. Langjahr is receiving quantities of fine Brunner and Rothschild roses daily.

A. Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., was in town last week calling on the trade.

Other visitors: W. P. Craig, Philadelphia, Pa.; E. W. Clark, New London.

Julius Krötschmar suffered another stroke of paralysis on April 4.

Ford Brothers are handling extra fine sweet peas at present.

Lilium candidum blooms are in the market.

Sigmund Geller will sail for Europe this month.

The eastern office of the AMERICAN FLORIST is now at 42 W. Twenty-eighth street.

Philadelphia.

Business last week was very dragging; there was but little doing and the excess of stock that did not make Easter together with the regular shipments was more than the market could stand and prices broke badly. Longiflorum lilies were offered at anything from $6 per hundred down. Long Beauty roses were to be seen on the street corners in tall jars of water at ten cents each. All they lacked was the dignity of the flower shop, for they were equal in all other respect to the $5 per dozen kind to be seen in the stores. Southern daffodils have been received by the dealers in large quantities and offered at times at such prices as would hardly seem to pay express charges.

It is astonishing to see how rapidly the houses fill up again after the depletion of Easter. At Robert Craig & Son's, palms, crotons, Boston and Pierson ferns and roses, as well as lilies for Decoration day and June weddings, have almost completely filled up the empty spaces. One wonders where it all comes from, but there it is, much of it ready for sale and some to be at its best in the early autumn and fall.

A. Leuthy of Boston was in the city last week gathering up palms and he secured a fine lot for growing this summer. This class of plants should move a little lively, as many florists stock up now and get the benefit of the summer's growth for themselves instead of paying for same next fall.

Mr. Craig has a new yellow pompon chrysanthemum that he says will create some excitement. It has recently been imported from Japan and is a variety of great merit. He holds the entire stock.

There have been quite a few weddings at which the decorations were elaborate and very helpful to the overstocked market. Graham, Battles and Pennock all had a share of these functions.

Wm. C. Smith is sending in some very choice Adonis carnations. This variety seems to be clearly ahead of anything in its color and is a good seller.

Jacob Becker is busy with his roses, the houses being almost entirely filled with fine pot stock. He has about the largest stock in the city.

At a meeting of the creditors of Robert Craig & Son, March 9, the following statement was submitted: Assets, $168,421.81; liabilities, $163,098.07; net assets, $5,323. The seventy-six creditors represented at the meeting voted to continue the business with John Burton as assignee and the following gentlemen were appointed as a committee of creditors to advise with the assignee in the conduct of the business; Wm. K. Harris, F. L. Atkins and Alexander Scott. The greenhouse buildings were not included in the assets. K.

Boston.

The market, which began to tumble directly after Easter, has continued tumbling ever since until at the present time all resemblance to a market has disappeared. Stock accumulates beyond even the abilities of the street men to carry it away at their own price and it is very evident that a period of low values, or more properly, no values, is on. Thus far quality is excellent in all lines. Violets are weakening a little under the stress of warm sunshine, but are still much better than usual at this date.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, Peter Fisher will talk on "The Carnation." The date of the meeting will be Wednesday, April 20, the regular day being a holiday here. The attraction at the May meeting will be Carl Blomberg, who will have something to say on Alpine plants, and at the June meeting M. H. Walsh is slated for a talk on roses.

N. F. McCarthy & Co.'s auction sales commenced on Friday, April 15, when some of the imported stock delayed by the accident to the steamer Staatendam was sold. Sales will continue every Tuesday and Friday throughout the spring, excepting on Tuesday, April 19, which is a holiday. A fine lot of fancy conifers and garden shrubbery is promised.

The old Wm. Love greenhouses on Withington street, Dorchester, with the land on which they stand, have been sold and will be torn down.

John H. Cox, who was taken very ill last week, is now at the City Hospital and is progressing favorably.

A. Dimmock, of Sander's, St. Albans, was a visitor last week.

Ed. J. Welch has gone on a recreation trip to Washington.

Visitors this week were A. Gaedeke, Nashau, N. H., and H. C. Riedel, New York.

Baltimore.

For two or three days of the week succeeding Easter there was an active trade in cut flowers, but after Thursday it dwindled away so that only by hard pushing was the stock coming in sold at very substantial reduction of prices. The new week starts off to-day (April 11) without much animation, all varieties being apparently in excess of current requirements. The belated callas and Harrisii lilies are offered in great quantities. The weather is March like, dull, cloudy and cold, with no "ethereal mildness" in it. Rains have been excessive, and gardening and farming work is retarded. The early spring hoped for as a corollary of a long cold winter did not materialize. The city markets on Saturday afternoon and night were like a flower show, but the temperature has not as yet raised the gardening fever in the people's blood.

This part of the country is being inundated with government vegetable seeds under the frank of the congressmen. In the city every voter who cannot afford to take up even six bricks from his yard in which to plant them has assortments—often duplicated—of melons, parsnips, beets, etc. These packages bear the stereotyped request that the results of their trial be reported to the department of agriculture; and it is a grotesque commentary on the wisdom and appropriateness of this wide-spread distribution that the "new and promising varieties" which the department is authorized by law to send out to ascertain their adaptability to fresh soils and locations are such hoary-headed old-timers as "Hollow Crown parsnips," "French Breakfast radish," "Rocky Ford melon," "Yellow Globe onion," back of which the memory of the oldest gardeners now living hardly goes. Verily the bricks and mortar of this goody city will blossom indeed when these seed yield their increase.

The park board is changing the methods of its predecessor. The older greenhouses in some of the parks are to be removed; the flower beds in Druid Hill—described sometime ago by the mayor of the city as "little dinky flower beds"—are to be superseded by groups of flowering shrubs, the material and planting of which are to be recommended by Frederick Law Olmsted. The flower beds in Mount Royal Square, the construction of which occasioned a burning discussion during the Clendinan regime, are to be done away with and the walks which were broken up by them are to be repaired.

James W. Boone has been made superintendent of Druid Hill, succeeding the late Captain Cassell. The general superintendent, Mr. Crosby, commended Mr. Boone's work, saying he had worked hard and used excellent judgment in handling his men. Mr. Boone has been working for a number of years at the florist business and as gardener at private places and has established a reputation for energy. He has lately been head gardener at Druid Hill, and his present position includes the policing of the park and the general administration of its affairs.

Conrad Hess, of Friendship avenue, finding a house of carnations doing poorly—as many houses seem to have done this winter—has planted in Lorillard tomatoes, which are growing handsomely and setting a promising crop of fruit. Mr. Hess makes a speciality of the Kaiserin rose, and so manages, winter and summer, to have a good crop at almost all times, and in great perfection as a rule.

Wm. J. Halliday has sold his property on West North avenue, reserving only the greenhouses. This is in the Walbrook suburb of the city, where real estate is last appreciating in value. It is understood the purchaser will erect dwellings on the ground. The figures of the transaction are not made public.

On Monday night, Prof. Corbett of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, delivered an address to the Gardeners' Club. He spoke of the advantage of going back to the seed in raising Harrisii lilies, the prevention of disease and the earlier flowering resulting.

A movement is on foot here to set aside vacant lots and have children taught gardening on a small scale. An application to the park board to supply instructors was turned down, there being no funds applicable to such a purpose.

Washington, D. C.

It was natural that there should be a lull in trade for a few days after Easter, but this week is more favorable. There is a steady demand for good roses and carnations, and spring flowers are selling well. Tulips, daffodils and daisies are going off like hot cakes. Violets are failing and will soon join the great company of has-beens. There has been considerable funeral work which has made a place for cut lilies from left over Easter stock. Daffodils, sweet peas and daisies are being quite freely used at luncheons. The following prices prevail: American Beauty roses, $5 to $10 per dozen; Bride and Bridesmaid, $1.50 to $3; good stock of Testout, Carnot and other roses, $1.50 to $3; cut Harrisii lilies, $2.50 per dozen; valley, 75 cents to $1.25 per dozen; carnations, 50 cents to $1.25 per dozen; callas, $1.50 per dozen; tulips, 50 cents; daffodils, 50 cents; sweet peas, 50 cents per bunch of 25; cowslips, 10 cents per bundle; yellow daisies, 50 cents per dozen; smaller daisies of white, 35 cents per bunch. Though local growers are making a fair showing in roses and carnations, the best stock comes from Philadelphia.

It is always the unexpected that happens. When, in my letter of last week, I asked the plant collectors to show us some novelties, I was thinking of the collectors who hunt in tropical jungles for rare plants, and are in turn hunted by tigers, monstrous serpents and microbes; or are betrayed by their "native servants" and carried into captivity. I have positively no use for "native servants," and when I again explore a jungle I shall take a good coon dog with me for company. My musings over novelties were interrupted at this point by the appearance of a wide awake business man bearing a novelty, the good points of which he presented in a business-like way. This was Mr. Campbell, of Vaughan's seed store, and his novelty is an ever-blooming Crimson Rambler rose, which I understand to be a recent importation from Europe. I predict for it a great future, as it seems to be the kind of a pot rose:

For which we long have sought,
And mourned because we found it not.

But it is probable that the affable Mr. Campbell will soon be around and then you will rejoice. Mr. Campbell also showed me specimen blooms of the carnations Cardinal and Fiancee. Both are so good that they seem faultless. The Cardinal in particular, seems destined to be a money-maker. The market greatly needs a first-class scarlet carnation, and it seems to have arrived in the form of Cardinal.

A delegation of Georgetown ladies was recently granted a hearing before the House committee on buildings and grounds on the Senate bill to provide a park on Georgetown Heights. The following named ladies were present: Miss Rittenhouse, Mrs. Fitzhugh Magruder, Mrs. William A. Gordon, Mrs. F. L. Moore, Mrs. Theo. McAvoy, Mrs. Geo. King and Mrs. Wight. The bill authorizes the acquisition by purchase or condemnation the tract of land known as Montrose, near Lovers' Lane, on Georgetown Heights. The ladies have captured the Senate and it looks as though the House will surrender. A park is greatly needed, in the Georgetown section of the city, in fact though Georgetown is older than Washington it seems to be somewhat neglected by the powers that be. If the ladies succeed in this enterprise in which the men have failed they will be deserving of all praise.

George T. Moore, an employe of the department of agriculture, who, we are informed, is "engaged in the work of vegetable pathological and physiological investigations," has secured a patent and dedicated it "to the people of the United States," for a process of preparing for distribution organisms which fix atmospheric nitrogen. I trust that the people of the United States will duly appreciate the philanthropy of Mr. Moore. His invention is just what we need. The habit some people have of preparing organisms for distribution with a four-pronged pitchfork, a hoe or any old thing that comes handy, is, to quote a more or less eminent Bostonian, "dead wrong." A street-sweeping machine or a hired girl fresh from Castle Garden, with a broom, are thought by some to do the work very well, but there are objections to their use on the farm or in greenhouses. Mr. Moore has solved the problem. May his shadow never grow less!

The United States department of agriculture has planted in the department grounds this year a collection of narcissi, tulips and hyacinths secured from some of the best European houses. The collection includes something like seventy-five varieties of narcissi, about 200 varieties of tulips and about 150 varieties of hyacinths besides a few California bulbs. The plants are pretty well along in bud now and the earlier varieties have commenced to bloom.

Senator Newland's bill for the preservation of the Mall has passed the Senate. As passed, 890 feet are reserved for the vista. S. E.

Buffalo.

Easter has come and gone, leaving nothing but pleasant thoughts with the trade members. W. J. Palmer says he never had as good Easter plants. J. H. Rebstock estimates his business as good and in plant sales far better than last year. R. M. Rebstock put in a much larger stock this year and sold all. S. A. Anderson handled more of all kinds of plants than last year and could have sold many more lilies. Scott Bros. report a big increase and do not think they will run an annex next year, as they can sell all their surplus stock at wholesale and keep all their employes for their fast increasing up town trade. L. H. Neubeck says business was out of sight from a cut-flower point of view. Violets never were in such demand as this year, with valley second choice. Roses were in fair call, American Beauty finding a very good sale. Had the weather been good on Friday and Saturday, the trade could not have been handled properly. Well grown rose plants found a good sale, while genistas, no matter how well grown, were but little called for.

Now that Easter is passed, and all are satisfied, it is up to the Buffalo Florists' Club to have its election and banquet while all are in good humor. President Scott has ample time now to prepare a list of speakers. Keitsch can always get a good banquet hall and Kasting and Brooker can decide on the incoming officers, to make all pleasant.

The passing of a bill authorizing the Forestry commission of Buffalo to look after the care of trees will be a good thing for the city. Our residence streets will not be spoiled with unsightly dead limbs.

The week following Easter was a lively one; several receptions and two good weddings helped. The next two weeks will be more lively, as a very large and brilliant wedding is scheduled for the latter part of the month.

The William Scott Company, incorporated, began business March 1 with a capital stock of $20,000.

Ed. Slattery has charge of Palmer's lower store and no doubt will be a fixture in Buffalo. We hope so.

The opening of a new dry goods store and a new hotel should call forth some choice flowers very soon.

Harry Bunyard was an able assistant to one of our florists Easter and was certainly an acquisition.

Wm. Legg is building two greenhouses on Delavan avenue, near his former stand.

Wm. F. Kasting is about ready to move to his new store.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Anderson are in Washington, D. C.

M. Bloy assisted Miss R. M. Rebstock during Easter. Bison.

Columbus, O.

The organization of a Florists' Association was the final outcome of a meeting held at the establishment of the Franklin Park Floral Company by special invitation of Albert Knoff. Light refreshments and cigars were indulged in by the large number present and all were made welcome. A number of interesting discussions took place and to a man they were ready to become members of what promises to be one of the best organizations of its kind in the state. Fifty-four members were enrolled while a number who were unable to attend the meeting sent word that they too wanted to be recognized as members and the names of these will be added to the list at the next meeting, which will take place April 28. Sherman Stephens was the choice from the beginning to act as the first president of the new society, as it was through his untiring efforts that the matter was brought to a head. The response from almost every firm of the city was very encouraging and assures a grand success for the future of the Columbus Association of Florists. CARL.

Lowell, Mass.

Since Easter, business has been very quiet. The good weather has made stock accumulate rapidly. All signs are now favorable for a rush of spring orders as spring is surely here. Already the public is asking for seeds, trees and shrubs. The nurserymen are anticipating plenty of business as a great many outdoor plants have been killed by the severe weather.

The first annual report of the board of park commissioners was sent out the other day, a sixty-eight page book describing the parks and commons in an interesting manner. One of the commissioners is Harvey B. Green, a brother florist.

Backer & Company, at Billerica, are putting up a new house for carnations, 30x400 feet. This firm was only born a few years ago, but under the guidance of our old friend, Ed. Winkler, it seems as if it was having smooth sailing.

John Gale, of Tewksbury, formerly in the employ of M. A. Patten & Company, but now connected with A. Roper, is contemplating erecting a plant of his own.

When sending us change of address, always send the old address at the same time.

The eastern office of the American Florist is now at 42 W. Twenty-eighth street, New York.

Now that the season of floral festivals and parades is approaching, the use of artificial flowers should be discouraged everywhere.

EASTER being very late next year the longiflorum giganteum lily should come in easily. It is a splendid variety, but requires a little more time to develop than the ordinary type.

MANAGER HARTSHORNE, of the Chicago
Carnation Company, Joliet, Ill., advises us that there was an error in the advertisement of the Cardinal carnation which appeared in our issue of April 2. The following should have been substituted for the sentence given therein: "Raised by R. Witterstaetter and purchased by James Hartshorne, of Joliet, and Wm.
Murphy, of Cincinnati, both of whom have watched it for three years."

Two new azaleas have made a favorable impression in the New York market this Easter season. They are named in compliment to two of the best known plant growers for the New York market,
J. M. Keller and Julius Roehrs. J. M.
Keller is similar to Simon Mardner with flowers larger and more double than that of Van der Cruyssen. Julius Roehrs is of an intense color, excelling in that respect any of the popular varieties.

In the Orchid Review, page 320, 1903, Odontoglossum Midgleyanum is referred to as a poor form of O. Ruckerianum.
T. D. Hatfield, gardener for Walter Hunnewell, of Wellesley, Mass., who recently exhibited a beautiful plant before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society as O. Midgleyanum is inclined to question the accuracy of the statement in the Orchid Review, the writer of which may have seen a poor specimen or other poor form and been misled thereby.

Society of American Florists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

It having been shown that a rose is already in existence bearing the name of Enchantress, announcement is now made that the name Enchant has been given to the variety registered as Enchantress by John Cook of Baltimore. Dealers are urgently requested to make the necessary change in their trade announcements and catalogues that confusion may be avoided.

The address of Secretary Wm. J.
Stewart has been changed from 79
Milk street, Boston, Mass., to 11 Hamilton place, room 11, Boston, Mass.

Wm. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

The undersigned committee would urge every reader of this paper to write to the member of congress of his district, asking him to support H. R. 7874, proposed by Mr. Henry, of Connecticut, for the establishment of a parcels post and for the insurance of all mail matter against loss or damage, which law, if passed, will prove of vast benefit, not only to our profession, but to individuals and business people in all lines. Impress upon your representatives the fact that we as tax payers and business people are the bone and sinew of this great republic and, as such, demand our share of the benefits to be derived from the passage of this bill. Insist that, as our representatives, they are in duty bound to deliver us from the greed of certain corporations who have fed upon us for so long a time, and who have shown by their under-bidding the postoffice department on registered second-class matter that outside of this class they are exacting from the public a profit of from one hundred and fifty to one hundred and seventy-five per cent per year on the actual express investment, and in many cases collecting charges which are from three hundred to over twenty thousand per cent of corresponding freight rates.

Unless this bill is passed the present postal regulations virtually protect this carrying monopoly in its excessive exactions, and it is due to us who have contributed so patiently and so long to have our wishes considered in the passage of this bill. Prompt action is necessary, therefore write at once to your congressman and also influence your business friends in other lines to do the same, and our concerted efforts may be crowned with success.

Signed, H. M. ALTICK, ELMER D. SMITH, Committee.

Pittsburg.

The volume of business the last week was very low. The weather conditions continue to remain indifferent to our desires, and we continue to receive rain, snow and frost almost daily. The variety of stock is limited as very little bulbous stock is coming in, and it looks as though it was over with. American Beauty roses are plentiful and Bride and Bridesmaid are a little below the standard. Carnations continue good, and the supply large.
Lily of the valley is very fine and in great demand. Harrisii lilies are especially fine.

Charles T. Seibert has secured a fifteen-year lease on a fine property at the corner of Baum and Beatty streets. The plot is 30x90 feet. Mr. Seibert will begin the building of a fine store and two of the most modern display houses. He will continue his Liberty market establishment, which proved to be a fine investment.

Two of our large department stores embarked in the blooming plant line for Easter, with results that were far from being satisfactory.

Thos. Ulum & Company are highly delighted with Easter results, especially so with plant, violet and rose sales.

E. Hostetter, of Manheim, Pa., who is a large shipper to Pittsburg, paid us a visit on Saturday.

The orchid display at the Phipps conservatories in Schenley park is a very notable collection and has received much public comment.

Last Saturday an electric car ran into one of Randolph & McClements' wagons, completely demolishing it, also breaking one of the driver's legs and injuring the horse.

Ed. Reinaman conducted a party of friends over the plant of the Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Company at Bakers-town last Wednesday.

Lloyd Swarthout, of Washington, Pa., visited Pittsburg last week and purchased an automobile.

Frank Schoen, a former Pittsburg florist, now of Toledo, O., is in the city on a short visit.

Walter Faulk is ill at his home in Allegheny. E. L. M.

XENIA, O.—A flower store has been opened by J. J. Lampert, on South Detroit street.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

CALADIUM ESCULENTUM bulbs in good order are not overplentiful.

THE continued dry weather cut short the crop of beans on the Florida east coast.

POTATO stocks are well sold out. A drop in prices is predicted, eating stock being apparently too high.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. L. Kunz of M. G. Madson Seed Company, Manitowoc, Wis.; J. A. Everitt, Indianapolis, Ind.; Edwin R. Baldwin, of Benjamin Hammond's Slug Shot Works, Fishkill on Hudson, N. Y.; H. W. Rodgers, Cincinnati, O.

MATTITUCK, L. I., N. Y.—J. M. Lupton writes under date of April 2, with reference to cabbage seed prospects: "The winter on Long Island has been unusually severe and at this writing there is still some frost in the ground. The work of setting the large cabbage stocks for seeding has just commenced, about two weeks later than usual. All the stock buried in exposed locations, or where water has stood during the past winter, appears to be frozen to death, and but a small percentage of it will be saved. In more favored locations or where well protected it is reported in fairly good condition. The result will probably be an uneven supply of the different varieties and general prospects at the present time indicate a crop considerably below average yields."

Important Patent Suit.

The Brown Bag Filling Machine Company, of Fitchburg, Mass., has filed a bill in equity in the United States Circuit Court for the Western District of New York, asking for an injunction and accounting against J. L. Drohen for the infringement of certain letters patent for bag filling machines.

The Brown Bag Filling Machine Company is the originator of machines for filling bags which are used especially in connection with the seed industry, and is the only concern in the country manufacturing practical machines of this character. It has been in the field for a number of years and its machines are used by leading seed houses of the United States, and also at the Agricultural Department at Washington on the congressional seed distribution.

The complainant alleges that Mr. Drohen, in a machine recently constructed by him, has infringed several of its patents.

The Brown Bag Filling Machine Company is represented by Messrs. Roberts, Becker, Messer & Groat, attorneys of Buffalo, N. Y., and Nathan Heard, of Crosby & Gregory, patent counsel of Boston, Mass.

San Francisco.

All seed crops in this state are in a backward condition, April 2. There has been no growing weather for over a month and most vegetation was at a standstill during that time. With warm weather and no further setback, crops above the average must result. Your correspondent has been all over the seed district, as far as Arroyo Grande, within the last ten days and can safely vouch for the above.

Interested parties may be disposed to magnify flood losses, but good crops are coming along just the same.

E. J. Bowen's business is to be continued on the same lines as formerly for the benefit of the widow. SEEDSMAN.

Legal Seed Warranty.

A case of interest to seedsmen was heard last week at the Leicester County Court, in which Messrs. Harrison, Leicester, sued Atterbury Bros. (farmers), for £16 1s. 4d. goods supplied April 1902. The defendants made a counter-claim for £30 18s. 9d. on the ground that the goods were mangold seeds which did not grow, and for expenses in preparing and reowing the land for another crop. The seed was sold personally on market by the head of the firm and it was claimed that he guaranteed it to grow 100 per cent. This was controverted by Mr. Harrison who said that he stated that it grew 120 per cent on trial, but did not give any guarantee to that effect; he also drew attention to the non-warranty causes in his catalogues and invoices. The failure was owing to too early sowing and the unfavorable season, which were manifestly beyond the control of the seedsman.

His Honor said he saw nothing contradictory at all in the notice sent out with the invoice of the seed that there could be no guarantee of the growth of any seed, and the statements made at the time of the contract of sale. All the seller undertook was that he was selling new seed, which according to the tests made had a germinating power of 100 to 120 per cent, evidence had been given on his behalf to prove that. There was no guarantee that the seed should actually come up, that was a matter depending upon circumstances beyond the control of the seller, and it was almost incredible that, unless some extraordinary price was charged, a guarantee should be given of the nature that was relied upon by the buyer. Judgment was given for the plaintiff on both the claim and counter-claim.—Horticultural Advertiser, March 30, 1904.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn., Pres.; Frank A. Weber, St. Louis, Mo., Vice-Pres.; George C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

A TREE to be well planted must be well dug.

WALLINGFORD, CONN.—Barnes Brothers' Nursery Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $15,000.

BERBERIS CHINENSIS planted among groups or belts of B. Thunbergia relieves the monotony and adds an agreeable variety to the foliage and fruit effect.

PROF. L. R. TAFT will be in attendance at the horticultural building of the world's fair at St. Louis a great deal of the time this summer and will be glad to have his friends call on him there.

BOSKOOP, HOLLAND.—The business formerly carried on by P. J. Van Heiningen and P. Loef Az under the style of P. Loef Az & Company will be continued under the exclusive management of P. Loef Az.

A FRENCH nurseryman speaking of the necessity of preserving the ball of earth intact in planting evergreens states that on receiving shipped stock he frequently plants it, packing material and all, and has been very successful with this method.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Officers have been elected by the Floyd County Horticultural and Agricultural Society as follows: Joseph Stilger, president; J. E. Kriereman, vice president; George B. Harrell, secretary, and L. Yenowine, treasurer. Meetings will be held by the society the first Saturday of each month.

FLUSHING, N. Y.—The authorities have arrested a representative of a local nursery firm for removing a tree on a public street at the request of a customer abutting. The case may be pushed to the limit by the Good Citizenship League and Business Men's Association in the interests of the movement to prevent "tree butchery."

SUZUKI & IDA had to pay freight and duty of nearly $6,000 on one big shipment of nursery stock received by overland route from Japan last week. The goods were Japanese maples, wistarias, sciadopytes and a variety of evergreens and Mr. Suzuki thinks this one of the largest invoices in its class ever coming to New York. Freight from Japan is delayed somewhat now on account of the small slow going steamers that have taken the place of the large vessels chartered by the government for war purposes.

Transplanting Growing Trees at Night.

A number of interesting and conclusive experiments in this manner of planting have been made by Mr. Rene Ronalt, a nursery man at Rennes, according to Le Jardin. Having a large plantation to make late in the season he first experimented on a five-year old linden. By planting at night, watering copiously, and wetting the branches, which had young shoots six or seven inches long, the transplanted trees showed almost no signs of check. Encouraged by this he transplanted the whole of the trees in the same way between the 21st of May and the 5th of June, losing only two trees which had poor roots. In August a robinia had made shoots thirty inches in length, others had done equally well and a walnut had retained its nuts. Towards the middle of June he transplanted lindens four to five inches in diameter and with tops seven feet through, as well as other trees. A linden transplanted at the end of August had put out an abundance of roots six weeks later. A robinia was transplanted twice at an interval of fifty days and a lot of trees and shrubs were transplanted in July. Grapes transplanted at this time developed regularly.

Some precautions are necessary to success, however. The young shoots should commence to become woody throughout half their length, as, if too soft, they will wither. Abies should have finished their growth a month before transplanting. Most other conifers may be treated like deciduous trees. Shrubs with persistent foliage may be transplanted throughout the growing season successfully by this method, but the operation should preferably be when the shoots have begun to lignify. The work is best done between 10 o'clock at night and 2 in the morning. The earth is settled about the roots by copious watering instead of tamping, and the branches and leaves thoroughly syringed each evening for fifteen days. R.

Worthless Trees Sent West.

Senator Heyburn, of Idaho, introduced an amendment to the general agricultural appropriation bill in Congress, with a view to prohibiting the sale of worthless fruit trees in any state or territory. The amendment failed to pass, because of its class legislation features.

The abuses of the eastern fruit tree agents are becoming unbearable in the west, and Senator Heyburn cited the fact that he had lists of farmers and orchardists showing that over 9,000 fruit trees sent out by eastern firms had proved worthless and unfit for use, and had to be pulled up and thrown away, in Idaho last year.

Peddlers from eastern nurseries sell the cheapest stock that is sent out to the western communities. This stock fails to grow, puts the purchasers back a year in starting an orchard, and is a clear robbery. The Heyburn amendment sought to prohibit this unjust traffic in fruit trees, inasmuch as the practice of selling the worthless stock is becoming so universally demoralizing in some western districts.

While the same practice prevails to a certain extent in Oregon, it has not reached the degree here that it has in Idaho. There is a growing tendency in Oregon to patronize home nurseries and turn down the foreign agents who enter the field.

The same condition could be brought about in Idaho if people would patronize their home nurseries and refuse to buy of the transients. It is an abuse which is brought upon the orchardists by themselves.

There is a general movement in the west looking toward better grades of fruit and the eradication of the pests, and although it seems difficult to reach the questions by law there must be united action on the part of the people to improve conditions.—Pendleton, Ore., East Oregonian.

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and sporting readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 42 W. 28th St., New York; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia; or to the American Florist Co., Chicago.

A slim attendance at the bowling alleys last Monday afternoon showed that either pressure of business or indifference had diverted the members' attention. Had the versatile and always entertaining "Larry" Hafner given notice that he proposed to permeate the alley with his presence and roll up a score of 233 to mark the event, it is very probable that standing room would have been at a premium. He threatens to do it again. The scores are recorded as follows:

The members of the Florists' Club bowling team are pegging away diligently and the veterans are becoming seasoned and rounding into great shape for the big St. Louis tourney. The following scores were made at the Geroux alleys, Tuesday evening, April 12:

St. Louis and how strong a team there will be from this city is the subject of discussion. There is plenty of good material, and if the best can get away this city will give a good account of itself. Chicago, St. Louis, Baltimore and New York with two or three more ambitious aspirants will no doubt make a great contest for the first prizes. It appears to us that there ought to be two divisions, but probably all would want to be first, and as there can be no such thing as a preliminary contest for place it is probably best as it is.

Some good scores have been made recently. John Burton surprised himself and all the boys with a score of 239, which is high for the month and likely to stay so. W. K. Harris finds it rather a dull day when he does not put up at least one 200 or better. His high this month is 223. The following are the averages for March:

SEABROOK, N. H.—George E. Felch has bought the greenhouse of Alvah Eaton.

Toronto, Ont.

Easter business was better than last year, much better than was anticipated. The weather was dark and gloomy and had there been more brightness no doubt much more stock would have been disposed of. Most notable was the supply of flowering plants, which far exceeded any output ever seen in this section. So plentiful were they that almost every butcher and grocer in town was selling them, but still many remained unsold. The better stores obtained good prices for cut flowers, but in plants prices were lower than former years. Violets, of all cut flowers, had the call and retailed at $3 to $4 per 100, but even at these prices they were sold out long before the day was over. Roses and carnations sold well. Stock was in the best of condition and no pickled stock was seen. The window displays about the city were of the best and some good arrangements were seen, the idea being more to show the better qualities of the stock than to fill up with novelties. After Easter there was considerable funeral work and any good cut flowers that were left over were used to good advantage. Stock since has begun to accumulate, especially in roses and carnations which are of very good grade and still holding up fairly good prices. Lilies, which were just a little late, now help to make the stores look well and all are prepared to do a rushing business. Violets are about over though Wm. Fendley of Brampton is still cutting some very good ones.

J. H. Dunlop has some American Beauty and Ivory which would be hard to beat. His King street store is showing special windows of these. A large cymbidium with hundreds of flowers attracts attention.

Frank Duffort has fine colors in his Azalea mollis. This plant is always attractive but for keeping qualities is not all that could be desired. His H. P. roses are the first to be seen.

P. J. Fogarts promises some of his special pansies in a few days. The sash has been removed from them and a few days' sun will do it.

Wm. Jennings of Brampton is still cutting some fine sweet peas with stems as long as 16 inches. His carnations are all very good.

Some very good Emperor narcissi are coming from Geo. Hollis. He has a seedling carnation which looks promising.

Grobba & Wandrey have some well grown hydrangeas. Their bulbs, ferns and other stock all look promising.

Tidy & Son are showing some nice basket arrangements of ericas which are very good.

The seedsmen are working nights trying to catch up with their orders.

Manton Brothers have some finely grown lilacs and Pierson ferns.

H. G. D.

Cleveland.

Business the last week has been very good considering the amount of flowers disposed of at Easter. There have been a number of social events which have kept the store men busy, and the cut flower market cleaned up pretty well every day with the exception of lilies, which are a glut and hard to move at any price. Owing to the cold, dark weather roses and carnations are not very plentiful, consequently prices have not dropped much since Easter. From present weather indications, outdoor planting will be very late here this spring. Not much planting can be done before the end of April, while in other years the carnation men were busy getting their plants by this time.

Another large greenhouse plant is about to be constructed with Cleveland capital. The E. A. Wilhelmy Floral Company was incorporated last week, with a capital of $50,000. The incorporators are: L. M. Pfaffman, G. A. Laubscher, John A. Chamberlain, Jos. C. Rayon, Jr., and L. I. Litzler. The plant will be established near Berea, about ten miles from Cleveland. Ten houses 150 feet long will be put up as a starter, all to be of the most modern type. Cut flowers principally will be grown.

Ed. Holland has severed his connection with the Essex greenhouses after five years' service and has gone to San Francisco, Cal.

L. F. Darnell, of the J. M. Gasser Co., is visiting his parents in Raleigh, N. C.

M. Bloy of Buffalo and Denis Connor, of the Lord and Burnham Co., were visitors this week.

A GREAT ACQUISITION. The best of all ferns for cut fronds. Brings the highest prices. The easiest to grow and the easiest to sell. Has received the highest encomiums from the leading cut flower dealers in the country. Buy now. Buy liberally and reap the benefits. Adiantum Croweanum originated at Utica, N. Y., about fourteen years ago, and has been extensively grown by the original owner, Mr. Peter Crowe, who has received phenomenal prices for the cut fronds in the New York and other markets, and has created a great demand for it. The fronds are long, elegantly proportioned and of a texture that renders it the best keeper and shipper of all Adiantums. It is a very free and continuous grower, requires no rest, and responds readily to fertilizers. Anyone can grow it and get good money for it. Will be ready to ship July 1, 1904, out of 3-inch pots (strong plants) at the following prices: $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000. 25 at 100 rate. 250 at 1000 rate.

WHAT OTHER PEOPLE SAY ABOUT IT.

WILLIAM SCOTT, Buffalo, N. Y.—“I congratulate you upon securing the entire control of the distribution of the Adiantum Croweanum. On my frequent visits to my friend, Mr. Crowe, I have had an opportunity to observe this beautiful fern from the time when there were but a few hundred plants till last December, when I saw it occupying 20,000 sq. feet of glass. Its freedom of growth, length and beauty of fronds and its wonderful keeping qualities must quickly make it the only commercial Maidenhair Fern. From a very small plant you have in two or three months a splendid crop of fronds. There is no secret in its cultivation, but generous treatment. I feel sure you will find a widespread demand for this beautiful and distinct Adiantum.”

SAMUEL S. PENNOCK, Philadelphia, Pa.—“I consider your Adiantum Croweanum a very valuable acquisition to this line of ferns. It is an excellent commercial variety, good keeper, and has given the best satisfaction wherever we have sold it. Our customers much prefer paying an extra price for it than buying the commoner varieties. The great trouble we find is we cannot get enough to meet our customers' wants.”

JOHN I. RAYNOR, New York City, N. Y.—“During the two years in which I have had the sale of the fronds of Adiantum Croweanum in New York City, the demand has at all times far exceeded the quantity you have been able to supply me with, at $1.50 per 100, while ordinary Cuneatum has been as a rule, in over supply at half that price. It is without question the best fern for cut fronds ever seen in this market.”

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY, Natick, Mass.—“I am very pleased to hear that you have decided to put plants of your fern Adiantum Croweanum on the market. I have always been more or less interested in it, as I understand it originated from some plants of Adiantum Cuneatum that I sold you at the Waban Conservatories in the early eighties. I remember the circumstances very well, as I sold the balance of our stock to Robert Craig in 1890. Wishing you every success with it.”

C. F. TRUE, Honolulu, H. I.—“Your Croweanum sent on October 17th came to hand on 29th, ult., in very fair condition. Kindly send me full information in regard to it.”

WELCH BROS., Boston, Mass.—“We readily dispose of Croweanum for a much higher price than we receive for Adiantum of ordinary varieties shipped in by our growers.”

By far the best Adiantum that has been introduced to the Florists' Trade. Is a free grower, the darkest green of the Adiantum family and longest stemmed. It has also the most graceful foliage, the average length of the fronds measuring 30 inches. It is by far the best keeper. Cut fronds can be kept fresh several weeks in a cool place. It is also one of the best ferns for a dwelling house. I have given presents of this fern to several Utica friends, and from my own observation note it grows better than the Boston fern. I gave up rose cultivation some ten months ago in order to devote all my attention to fern cultivation for cut fronds. I find from the same amount of bench room this fern pays me $1.50 to every $1.00 obtained from the roses.—PETER CROWE.

Cardinal New Roses Enchantress

Read Testimonials from two of the largest growers in Washington who have bought large number of plants after seeing them growing at my place.

Your new rose Cardinal came duly to hand, and we firmly believe it will have a great future and will certainly be a money-maker as it is in a class all to itself, being superior in form and habit to anything that we have as yet seen. Your new rose Enchantress we also think will be a great money-maker, judging from its profuse blooming quality, as we have seen it several times in mid-winter. It cannot help being a winner. Wishing you every success, we remain,

Yours truly, A. GUDE & BRO.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27, 1904.

Dear Sir:—We gave all the show possible to Enchantress and Cardinal, placing them in our window with placards, telling what they were. They kept a week, retaining their brilliant color to the last. Cardinal was as full of perfume the day the petals dropped, as when it was first cut. The roses are both matchless, and we believe destined to out-class all roses of their color for forcing under-glass. Very sincerely yours,

NEPHROLEPIS SCOTTII.

AWARDED S. A. F. O. H. Silver Medal at the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's Spring Exhibition in Philadelphia, March 24, 1904. Awarded a Diploma by the American Institute, and also received the New York Florists' Club's Highest Award, "A Certificate of Merit."

Nephrolepis Scottii is without a doubt the finest Nephrolepis ever introduced, and is as far ahead of the Boston Fern as the Boston is ahead of all other introductions. It is a rapid grower and to see it in all stages of growth, from a runner in the bench to a 14-inch pot specimen, will convince you that it will positively take the place of its parent, the old Boston Fern.

MR. JOHN SCOTT,
Dear Sir:—Please accept my order for 1000 Nephrolepis Scottii at $300.00 per 1000. I consider your fern as far ahead of the Boston fern as the Boston is ahead of all the recent introductions of Nephrolepis. It has a splendid habit and is a rapid grower and will, I am certain, prove itself a money maker for anyone that buys it.

MR. JOHN SCOTT,
Dear Sir:—You have my order for your new Nephrolepis Scottii. I wish to say here, that I am very favorably impressed by your novelty. I admire its habit and style of growth and consider it the best Nephrolepis variety we have got so far. Yours very truly,

Tarrytown, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held March 29 in the Vanderbilt building, Tarrytown, with President Jas. Ballantyne in the chair. The principal business was the altering of the schedule of prizes for the November exhibition and a few small classes were added to enable the small growers to compete. It was moved that a letter of thanks be tendered to the donors of the following special prizes for the fall exhibition: Silver cup for the best twelve Dr. Enguehard chrysanthemums, by the F. R. Pierson Company; $25 for the best arranged table of foliage plants, $15 for first prize and $10 for second, by Mrs. H. Walter Webb, Scarborough; $20 for the best twelve chrysanthemum blooms, distinct varieties, $12 for first prize and $8 for second, by John D. Archibald, Tarrytown; $10 for best display of pompon chrysanthemums by Mr. Johnson, Tarrytown, and $10 for best twelve chrysanthemum blooms, four varieties, three of each, $6 for first prize and $4 for second, by President Ballantyne.

A beautiful display of bulbous flowers was made at this meeting for which President Ballantyne was awarded Jas. Smith's prize of a pair of cuff buttons; Joseph Mooney of Hastings-on-Hudson was awarded a certificate of merit for an exceptionally fine display of Lilium Harrisii and D. MacFarlane received honorable mention for a vase of white Antirrhinum majus. H. Nicholls, of Yonkers, and C. Wilson, of Dobbs's Ferry, were the judges. A very lively discussion on the growing of bulbs followed.

At the April meeting President Ballantyne offers a fountain pen as a prize for the best two calceolaria plants. It was decided that after the April meeting the monthly prizes for the entire season shall be awarded for the best display of flowers cut from hardy shrubs. The members were pleased to see their very popular brother, Robt. Angus, with them again.

THOMAS A. LEE.

St. Paul.

Easter trade was the best on record according to all reports. Plant sales were much larger than ever and cut flowers just about the same as last year. Weather was quite favorable excepting Saturday morning, when the thermometer registered below freezing and had everybody badly scared. But everything turned out well and very few complaints were heard. As usual lilies were most in demand, closely followed by azaleas. Hydrangeas sold very well but they cause a good deal of trouble on account of being too soft.

Holm & Olson had their usual big display and were completely sold out of everything with flowers. Mr. Olson was under the weather most of the week but managed to get in at the finish.

L. L. May & Company had their usual fine display in their store and conservatory. They had their fountain all in electric lights and flowers.

Swanson Floral Company had a fine display of Crimson Ramblers, Azalea mollis, etc.

E. F. Lemke and Charlie Vogt report business as very satisfactory.

Miss Gertrude Distel, with L. L. May & Company for several years, is now with Holm & Olson.

Recent callers were Miss O'Sullivan, of W. Superior, Wis.; F. V. Kent, Grand Forks, C. S. Ford and C. W. Scott.

Breitmeyers' New Rose

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID.

To Be Disseminated April 1, 1904.

COLOR. Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE. Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM. Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH. Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific.

Conditions after Easter may be defined as moderately busy, not that enough has been doing to use up an increasing surplus of carnations and roses, but that the trade has been able to keep the usual force at work on regular orders. Carnations are better than ever at $1.25 to $2 per 100, but are in full crop and cannot clean out from day to day; in fact the street fakirs have begun operations and one of our florists recently advertised a "slaughter" in order to empty his ice box. Roses pile up at $1 to $6 per 100, being fine and full of substance, some very long stemmed stock selling at the latter figure. Violets are almost gone, although still finding a satisfactory demand. Very little bulbous stock is being offered, and sweet peas are about the only odd flower to be had.

T. J. Johnston's new flower box is a mammoth among the pigmies, holding about double the former capacity and making an elegant show as one comes in the store.

The Florists' Club holds a flower exhibit this Thursday, April 14, and we expect to chronicle a success in next week's number.

Frank Sullivan, of Westminster street, made one of the neatest Easter displays seen, his show front being a mass of choice colors.

W. B. Hazard is able to be out and attend to store duties once again.

M. M.

Cincinnati.

Trade the last week has been very poor, and accordingly we are having a heavy glut of flowers. It is a pretty hard matter to tell where it will end, for the immense amount of flowers received every day and very little doing in the selling line is certainly discouraging to both grower and dealer. About the only demand seems to be for smilax and spring flowers, such as marguerites, violets, lily of the valley, sweet peas and single daffodils. Undoubtedly the cool weather had considerable to do with the slump in business.

At the Eden park greenhouses there are 260,000 growing bedding plants that will be ready to be transplanted to the parks the middle of May. Geraniums, cannas, salvias and coleus are in the majority, and Park Superintendent Critchell says the flowers will be finer in appearance than any spring plants that have ever been set out in the parks.

Smith & Young of Indianapolis are still sending violets to this market, which for this time of year are remarkably fine.

H. F. LITTLEFIELD, WORCESTER, MASS.

Albany, N. Y.

A bill has been introduced into the state legislature to permit the Municipal Improvement commission of Troy to expend the sum of $150,000 on improving the park system of that city, and to complete the work already undertaken. The bill will undoubtedly pass. Engineer Garnet D. Baltimore, who has the work in charge at the new Prospect park, has prepared plans for the expenditure of $100,000 of the amount to be used upon the western slope of the park which will be graded and embellished with numerous landscape features. The remaining $50,000 will be expended in the construction of a boulevard to connect Prospect park with the water-works park at Oakwood several miles to the north.

H. G. Eyres will to-day fill the order for the floral decorations at the Sanford-Keeler wedding. The color scheme is pink and white. The drawing room and library of the residence of the bride's parents will be decorated with lilies and Bride roses; American Beauty roses, azaleas, palms and smilax will be used to decorate the dining room.

Arthur Cowee, the well known gladioli specialist of Berlin, has received a consignment of lumber to be used this summer to construct a third bulb storage house. The new building will be larger than the two others, the dimensions being 40x100 feet, three stories and basement.

W. C. King had the decoration for the Dole-Reynolds wedding on Tuesday. Hundreds of daffodils were used in the drawing and reception rooms. The staircase was trimmed with southern smilax tied with bows of yellow ribbon. Maiden hair ferns were used in large quantity to bank the mantels.

LAFAYETTE, COL.—F. A. Haenselman, landscape architect and florist, formerly of 517 Thirty-first street, Denver, Col., is now located in this city.

ITS PRICE

THE AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY'S DIRECTORY saves many times its price to every one who catalogues or circularizes the trade. Fully revised to date of publication, it puts the mail only to live names, avoiding waste of postage and printed matter, time and labor.

Contains 412 pages, lists of Florists, Seedsmen and Nurserymen of the United States and Canada by states and towns, also alphabetically; firms that issue catalogues, foreign merchants, horticultural societies and much other up-to-date information which makes it a reference book of daily utility wherever a wholesale trade is done.

IRON GREENHOUSES. Attention, Florists!

The Duplex Gutter and The Duplex Eaves have solved the question of how to build up-to-date greenhouses as durable as the iron frame greenhouses at high prices, and nearly as cheap as wooden houses. See the cut that represents the new Duplex Eaves, the most durable, strongest and simplest to erect. Any common laborer can set them as perfect as an expert mechanic. It is perfection in construction. No ice or snow to darken your houses when light means money. Positively no shade from the Duplex Eaves, costs only about $2.00 per foot, including Duplex Gutters and Eaves, Iron Posts for Gutters, Iron Purlines with Posts, Tees and Floor Plates.

Center Posts with Plates and Bases. Standard Ventilating Machines, complete with double strong Pipe, Cypress Sash Bars and Ventilating Sash. Investigate the proposition and convince yourself of the fact. Also note the simplest steam return Trap made; just what a Florist needs, and a coal dealer condemns. Catalogues and circulars free.

CROP INSURANCE.
 Life insurance is valuable because it guarantees the outcome.
"Gurney" Heaters
 "BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hot-house: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expense at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

THE CARNATION.

Indoor Carnation Culture.

[Read by Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, Boston, Mass.,
April 20, 1904.]

I have been asked to speak to you to-night on the carnation. It would be a waste of time to attempt a lengthy review on the progress made in the development and improvement of this popular flower during recent years, as it is no doubt fresh in your minds. As compared with five or six years ago the carnation of to-day looms up like a "new creation," scarcely recognizable as a descendant from the family from which it evolved, strong and vigorous, of mammoth proportions, in beautiful and varied shades of color, and the end is not yet. With this change in general characteristics has also come a change in modes of culture. Where a few years ago it was considered the proper time to house carnations from the field in September, we find them being planted in July and the latter part of August is now considered late. Experiments have also been made in "exclusive indoor culture" and this method is what I want to say a few words upon to-night.

The first requisite to successful indoor culture is properly constructed carnation houses, large and airy, with ample ventilation on both sides of ridge and on the sides. The latter must be used judiciously—by that I mean opened on cool or cloudy days or during the night, but closed when a hot, dry wind is blowing and vegetation out of doors is wilting. If opened on such a day or succession of days, red spider is sure to cause trouble. A very convenient type of house with which I have been experimenting is of the following dimensions: Length, 300 feet; width, 33 feet; height to ridge, 15 feet; height of sides, 5 feet, 3 feet being glass, with side ventilators and ample ventilation at the ridge. Last season we built a house of this size with detached roof ventilators. This season we have nearly completed one of similar size with continuous ventilation on both sides of the ridge, using 30-inch glass. My purpose is to test the merits of both systems. Another 300-foot house has continuous top ventilation but without any on the sides. In this I have grown with excellent results some of our latest varieties.

My intention is to plant directly from pots into the three different styles of houses and carefully note the results.

The advantages of indoor culture are: Perfect control of conditions necessary for the successful culture of the plants. They are not subject to the extremes of a dry or wet season or often extremes of both, which invariably cause stem rot. You save the time and labor of one planting and do not check the plants when doing so as is the case when lifted from the field, which process has always seemed to me as unnatural and gives some varieties a check from which it takes weeks to recover. The larger the plants the more they are affected. Indoor grown plants give a steadier supply of blooms, are not so liable to crop and are usually of better form and quality and invariably give a longer stem. Again there are no doubt disadvantages to this method, especially with the average florist who needs his flowers during the early summer months and who cannot afford to throw them out in order to plant into the benches before the young stock gets pot-bound. If properly arranged, however, there are few who cannot spare at least one house for trial, and where a grower has from 20,000 to 40,000 feet of glass or more, and besides carnations grows chrysanthemums or or other quickly developing crops, a little forethought will always arrange sufficient space so as to be available when time for planting comes around. The time for propagating the cuttings to be used for all bench culture will depend upon the varieties and time when space is available. Slow growing or late blooming sorts ought to be propagated early in any case, but where they are of free and easy growth they may be rooted any time from January to April as required, first potting them into a 2-inch to 2½-inch pot according to strength of cutting, and repotting until required for benches. Great care should be exercised never to let them get stunted or pot-bound; a 3½-inch pot ought to be about the limit in which to have them growing at planting time, as larger sizes take up too much valuable space.

Planting can be done with excellent results any time from February to July. I prefer May or June, the distance between the plants being governed by the variety and season when propagated. Strong growing sorts planted before May will require 9x12 to 9x15 inches, weaker sorts or later propagations correspondingly less, but in no case should free growing sorts be planted closer than 8x12 inches. This insures a better circulation of air around the plants during summer and light during winter, which means better stems and quality of blooms, with few, if any, of second quality. I prefer benches four feet wide to those five feet or more, as the plants get a much better circulation of air. An extra path in the house is not waste space, as you always get more and better stems and blooms along the sides of the benches. Care should be exercised not to over-water the plants as the carnation thrives best in a moderately moist soil and excess of moisture will cause the soil to become sour. Always damp down the paths and under the benches freely during the hot or sunny days. Fumigate regularly every week for green fly and syringe every ten days with salt water (two ounces to a common pail) for red spider.

No doubt some of the objections to this in-door culture will be some of the following: Attacks of red spider or green fly. Over-watering and souring the soil. Yet we have just those same conditions to contend with in the field where it is often very difficult to subdue the insects, and we have no power over the excess of moisture, usually accompanied by severe attacks of rust on varieties so inclined. While under glass we can keep those evils under control. The worst condition with which we have to contend is excessive heat, yet I doubt if the plants suffer as much from this, providing proper ventilation and atmospheric moisture is maintained, as they do in the field when a dry, hot wind causes them to wilt.

Anything really worth having in this world costs something, and we usually pay the full price. This is well, as we are more apt to appreciate it when once obtained. To produce and put upon the market a new carnation often costs far more than the average grower thinks, in time, patience and hard cash, before being tested and its cultural requirements understood. How often have we heard of some originator (on the eve of reaping his hard earned reward) losing almost his entire stock of some promising new variety in the field, as the result of an unfavorable season, either too wet or too dry. I have come to the conclusion that it does not pay to run this risk and to my mind indoor culture is the solution. It will be adopted gradually no doubt but I venture to predict that five years from now few carnations will be grown in the field.

There never was a time when a better all around grade of carnation blooms were put on the market, never a time when we growers had less excuse for failing to produce them. With improved varieties to work upon and modern facilities at hand for their successful cultivation, it clearly becomes a duty not only to ourselves professionally, but to the flower loving and consuming public, to place our product on the market in the best possible condition and to insure their continued popularity and lasting qualities. Flowers have passed the stage of mere luxuries; they have become a daily necessity and amongst them the carnation is not last, nor least.

Merits of Iron Gutters.

Geo. M. Garland.

In your issue of April 2 we note an article commenting on gutters for greenhouse construction and as this article presents the question from an individual point of view it would seem to us fair to present it from a more general standpoint. The gentleman admits that the gutters are the most important part of the house and that he finds a difference of opinion on the subject but that iron gutters are growing in favor. He states that those using iron gutters base their argument on durability while "the man with the wooden gutter" argues cheapness of construction. From this it appears to us that the statement that the gutter is the principal part of the house, is the strongest reason that durability, which implies strength and solidity, should be more desirable than cheap-

The Late George Huster.

ness and should score a large point. The point raised that wooden gutters will last as long as the rest of the house indicates that wooden gutters are a temporary form of construction and as the iron gutters are practically indestructible it would appear wiser to provide a gutter that will not deteriorate with the house but will add to its strength and solidity and prevent decay instead of assisting it. The bars do not rot as quickly next to iron as next to wood and the iron gutter is just as good for further use when rebuilding becomes necessary.

Answering the question of the care of gutters, we find the advantage to be decidedly with the iron gutter. With no care at all, it preserves itself. It rusts, which closes the pores of the iron and prevents corrosion. While the painting of iron gutters improves their appearance it is not a yearly necessity. Those who have used cast iron heating pipes know they are as good to-day as when put in. This is not so of steel, witness the corrosion of steel pipe. The article states that an item of more importance than first cost or durability is the immediate removal of snow to prevent interference with the admission of sunlight. It is claimed the iron gutter takes heat from the house but admitted that heat can be supplied artificially but sunlight cannot. As the iron gutter house immediately removes the snow it receives more sunlight, which is heat. So the argument of lost heat is disproven. The excess of radiation of heat through an iron gutter over a wooden gutter is imperceptible by actual test in a greenhouse and is more than compensated for by the immediate removal of snow.

The point that different conditions in different localities require different construction is well taken but the majority of the growers are not so fortunately located that snow was piled on their greenhouses but three or four days during the winter just past. The article compares two large places in Chicago, side by side, one of which not only builds new ranges with iron gutters but tears down old ranges in order to rebuild with them, while at the other place, which has never tried iron gutters, wooden gutters are claimed to be not only cheapest but the best. This would seem to be a question of individual opinion, but the success which has attended the large user of iron gutters has not only placed him in the lead as the largest grower in the world but has enabled him to become an alderman in the great city of Chicago. The article states that everything at this place is in first class shape, therefore we conclude the writer of the article shows his approval of the judgement of the large user of iron gutters. We conclude our letter with the exact wording of the statement made by the above large grower: "I can get 8,480 square feet more bench space in a range of sixteen houses 27x265 feet by using iron gutters and it costs no more to heat it. I can use one-third less posts and I expect the extra space gained to almost repay the cost of building in one season." The above statement speaks for itself.

A Model Greenhouse.

The carnation house shown in the accompanying illustration is one of four erected for Robt. Craig & Son some time ago, the plans and most of the material having been furnished by Lord & Burnham Company. It is a typical modern iron-constructed house. The houses are built in pairs with an iron gutter between each two houses and open space between the pairs. The eave-plates are of angle iron and the sash-bar construction is supported entirely by angle iron purlins and pipe columns. A cast-iron fitting at the top of the pipe column receives the angle iron and secures it to the column with set screws or bolts. The fitting at the base is a heavy clamp socket made adjustable so that by unscrewing the bolts the column may be easily raised at any time to counteract any settling that may have taken place. The sides of the houses are constructed with angle iron posts, the bases of which are set on heavy cast-iron foot pieces extending 2 feet 6 inches underground. Lord & Burnham's self-oiling ventilating machines are used throughout.

BATAVIA, N. Y.—To make room for improvements in the shops, the Erie railroad's greenhouses at Avon, which for twenty-one years have supplied plants and flowers for the stations along its western New York lines, are to be torn down, and presumably the station yards will hereafter be unadorned.

ROBT. CRAIG & SON'S LORD & BURNHAM CARNATION HOUSE AT PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Recent Greenhouse Construction.

[By Lyman B. Craw, of the Lord & Burnham Company. Presented before the Chicago Florists' Club, February 3, 1904.]

I have sent you photographs and drawings of houses, some recently constructed and some in course of erection which show that the tendency of the growers in the east is toward both longer and wider houses. Some of those who put up long, narrow houses about two years ago, last season went in for houses of equal length and about double the width, as in the case of the house 40x700 erected for the Waban Conservatories last year. Those who have tried the wide houses are unanimous in the opinion that they are superior to the narrower houses in that the temperature is much more easy to control in the wider houses, either in warm or cold weather, and it is more convenient to work in. In our experience they have been more economical to erect, as a given area of ground can be covered with one wide house for less expense than with several small houses, either built together or separately. The larger house is also more economical to heat.

It is a self evident fact that there is far less framing required for the larger house, in proportion to the ground covered, than for several smaller houses covering the same space; consequently the larger house admits a much larger percentage of light in proportion to the area. We have erected a number of ranges of what are sometimes called short span houses, in the past few months. The cast iron drip gutter which we have used in all our short span work is cast in stock lengths of eight feet, four and one-half inches and requires the posts to be set one under each joint, which brings them eight feet, four and one-half inches from center to center of post. The gutter is a heavy casting so it will carry this distance. We furnish brackets for this gutter so it can be supported either by wood posts, iron pipe posts or iron bar posts, or by two pipe posts forming an arch over a walk.

A house 53x700 which we have now in course of construction, in the vicinity of New York city, is designed to be used either for carnations or roses. The glass in the roof will be 16x24, laid the 24-inch way. The heating will be done by steam with the boiler room placed at one end of the house. The wide houses which we have built have been constructed with our usual iron frame, with light wooden capping and our patent angle iron plate and sockets used at the eaves with bars laid in sockets. So far there has been no complaint of the loosening of glass by expansion and contraction or from vibration and there has not been a larger percentage of glass broken than in narrow houses. We understand there has been no more glass broken at one point than another in our wide houses. I beg to thank the Chicago Florists' Club and yourself for this opportunity to address your club, and am sorry it is impossible to accept your invitation to have a representative present at your meeting.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Eli Cross will soon begin the construction of a greenhouse costing $1,000.

Fig. 1 is a transverse section through a gutter and the glass of a greenhouse roof, the bar and the glass-retaining clamps being shown in elevation. Fig. 2 is a transverse section through one of the bars and a glass-retaining clamp with the glass held thereby, and showing in elevation a hanger connected to the bar and by means of which the drip-trough is suspended. Fig. 3 is an enlarged side elevation of a portion of a rail and hanger and retaining-clamp, the overlapping portions of two sheets of glass being shown in section. Fig. 4 is a detail perspective view of the retaining-clamp. Fig. 5 is a perspective view showing the lower end portion of one of the bars of the frame, illustrating the manner in which the flanges are cut away, also the manner in which each flange is notched to accommodate a sister hook.

Referring now to the drawings, there is shown the portion of the roof of a greenhouse comprising a gutter 5, the sides of which are bent to form seats 6, beyond which said sides are bent downwardly and then outwardly and upwardly to form the troughs 7, extending longitudinally of the side edges of the gutter. At the central portion of the gutter 5 and on the under side thereof is a vertical collar 8, which is threaded for engagement with the threaded upper end of the usual post, it being understood that the threads may be omitted, if desired.

In connection with the gutter 5 there are employed bars 9, each consisting of a vertical web having flanges 10 and 11 at its lower edge and at opposite sides, these flanges diverging upwardly and forming between them and the web of the rail channels 12 and 13, which are designed to receive putty. The lower ends of the bars 9 have their flanged lower edges cutaway, and the resultant shoulders 14 are disposed upon the seats 6, while the adjacent ends of the flanged portions rest upon the inner sides of the troughs 7.

To further support the troughs 7 hangers are employed in the form of sister hooks 15 and 16, which are engaged over the flanges 10 and 11, which are notched at such points of engagement, so that said sister hooks may lie flush with the upper edges of the flanges at the sides of the hooks. The sister hooks are bolted against the inner sides of the troughs 7 by means of the bolts 17, as illustrated.

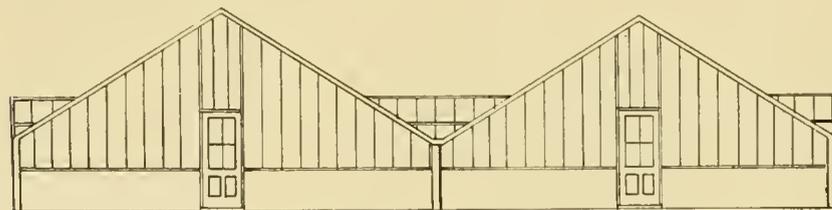

The plates or sheets of glass 18 are disposed upon the putty that is filled in the channels 12 and 13, the edges of the adjacent sheets or plates being overlapped, as illustrated. To hold the plates snugly down against the putty, so as to prevent leakage between the plates and the rails, retaining-clamps are employed. Each of the retaining-clamps consists of a U-shaped plate, which is disposed over the bar, to which it is held by means of a set-screw 19, the lower ends of the spaced members of the U-shaped plate being notched or stepped, as shown at 20, so that they may rest upon both plates of glass where they overlap, and thus hold them securely in place. With this construction it will be seen that the water that falls upon the roof will drain between the bars and over the glass to the gutter 5, and that any drip from the bars and glass will run down and finally be caught in the troughs 7. With this arrangement, moreover, there is employed only metal and glass, while the parts are held with security and rigidity.

It will be understood that drip-troughs may be suspended by means of the hangers wherever desired, it being understood that in practice modifications of the specific construction shown may be made within the scope of the claims, and that any suitable materials and proportions may be used for the various parts without departing from the spirit of the invention.

Coal.

[Delivered by Prof. H. Hasselbring, of the University of Chicago, before the Chicago Florists' Club, April 20, 1901.]

To enable us to understand the differences in the various kinds of coal it will be necessary to discuss briefly the origin of this mineral fuel, and the principal changes which occurred in its formation.

All coal is of vegetable origin. It consists principally of sunken compressed peat bogs. During the carboniferous era the area now occupied by coal fields formed an arm of the sea which once occupied all the territory now known as the Mississippi valley. On the shores of this sea was a vegetation of great luxuriance consisting of plants resembling gigantic rushes, clubmosses and selaginellas. This rich growth crept out over the water, forming enormous areas of matted floating vegetation very much like our present floating peat bogs. These masses were gradually pressed down by the new growth above and occasionally large masses probably sunk bodily.

In addition to this there was a continual deposition of particles sinking from the under side of the mass. All this formed a soft black ooze or mud such as we find underlying our present peat bogs. At the same time rivers carrying down silt or fine clay from the Appalachian and Rocky mountains gradually covered the mass of vegetation and pushed the shore line further and further into the sea, all the time the vegetation of course creeping on ahead of the silt deposit. In this way the whole area was finally filled in so that now the Gulf of Mexico is all that is left of a sea that once covered the entire central part of the American continent.

Now we come to the chemical and physical changes which take place in vegetable matter decaying in the absence of oxygen or under water. We have at the present time a continuous chain showing the formation of coal from the vegetable ooze in our peat swamps to the hardest anthracite. In fact the process of coal formation is going on at present in nearly all parts of the world just as it did in the carboniferous era. When wood or vegetable matter decays in the absence of air it undergoes a gradual change by which the gases are eliminated and the relative carbon content becomes greater and greater. The first stages of this decomposition occur under water in the dead submerged portions of the coal-forming vegetation. The product is known as peat which is the first step in the transition from vegetable matter to anthracite or graphite.

When the mass becomes buried under a deposition of silt it is subjected to enormous pressure. This, together with further decomposition, gives lignite, bituminous coal, anthracite, and if heated during the process the mass is changed into graphite, which is practically pure carbon. These processes have all been observed experimentally. Not infrequently wood supports in old coal mines shut off from the air have been completely transformed into lignite, and peat has been artificially changed into anthracite by applying to it enormous pressure under superheated water.

The following table shows the changes which occur when vegetable matter is transformed to coal. The percentages refer to samples free from water:

	Carbon.	Hydrogen.	Oxygen and nitrogen.	Ash.
Wood.....	50.00	6.00	44.00	not given
Peat.....	54.02	5.21	30.48	10.29
Lignite.....	66.31	5.63	23.43	4.63
Bituminous coal....	78.69	6.00	12.44	2.87
Anthracite.....	90.39	3.28	3.81	2.52

It is clear that the percentage of carbon increases enormously as we pass from peat to hard coal, while the gaseous portions are gradually driven off. They appear mostly as water, marsh gas or fire damp, and carbonic acid gas. The percentage of ash is greatly influenced by foreign admixtures while the coal is being formed.

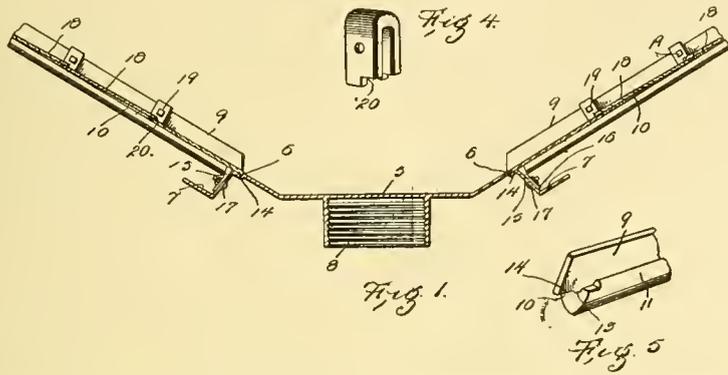

or, in other words, is burned to iron oxide. Both pyrite itself and iron oxide act as powerful fluxes. The presence of iron oxide reduces the point at which the ash melts and runs together into the hard glassy mass adhering firmly to the grate bars. The inconvenience caused by these clinkers and the loss of heat due to shutting off the draft need not be emphasized to any one who has handled the fire himself. Their formation is dependent upon the presence of iron oxide and this again is derived from pyrite, a compound of sulphur and iron. Coal which contains no iron will be practically free from sulphur and will not clinker. Coal with much iron forms red or brown ash. The color of the ash be-the amounts of iron and sulphur contained in coal. This explains also why the clinker is more colored than the rest of the ash.

Let us turn to the factors influencing the heat-giving power of coals. An elementary analysis teaches us little as to the calorific value of coal, but by means of a proximate analysis we can class the different elementary ingredients into groups which are of great commercial importance because the heat values of coals depend on these factors. A proximate analysis consists merely of subjecting a sample of coal to a succession of different temperatures and successive weighings. The portions thus determined are water, volatile matter, fixed carbon and ash. These may best be taken up in this order.

Water.—All coal contains a greater or less amount of water. Since this cannot be further oxidized it must be evaporated. It therefore causes loss in two ways, by adding to the weight of the coal and by taking up heat required to evaporate it. None of this heat is available for the generation of steam. It is clear, therefore, other things being equal, a coal of low moisture content is more efficient than one of high moisture content.

Volatile Matter.—Volatile matter contains all the gaseous and bituminous portions of coal which can be driven off at a high heat without actually burning the coal. All that remains after the volatile matter is driven off is classed as fixed carbon and ash. The volatile matter not only makes up a large percentage of the weight of coal, but also contains the elements which, weight for weight, give by far the greatest amount of heat. Unfortunately with present appliances it is practically impossible to utilize all of this heat. A large part of the volatile portion of coal is driven up through the

During the process of formation several foreign ingredients find their way into the coal. These are admixtures probably derived from spring water and from seawater, to whose influence the coal was subjected. We will deal here only with two of these deleterious ingredients, sulphur and iron. Sulphur is by far the most injurious substance present in coal, and the presence of iron is important because of its direct action and also because it is a practical indicator of the amount of sulphur present in coal, practically all the sulphur being combined with iron as iron sulphide or pyrite.

Sulphur.—Sulphur is the most objectionable deleterious ingredient of coal. Coal having a high percentage of sulphur should always be avoided. As has been stated, sulphur exists almost entirely as iron pyrite and iron sulphide. It can be seen often as glistening, brassy coatings on the natural surface of the coal where it has parted in the mine. Although these coatings are conspicuous the quantity of sulphur thus introduced does not compare with the amount introduced in the thin grayish lines which extend parallel to the layers of coal.

When pyrite is heated the sulphur is driven off as sulphur dioxide. This is objectionable because in the presence of moisture it forms sulphuric acid which rapidly corrodes the flues and boiler plates. The moisture may come from the moisture contained in the coal and air and often from steam escaping from the boiler itself. In greenhouse boilers this is especially apt to occur on account of the intermittent firing, which allows plenty of moisture to collect in the flues. Investigations of boiler explosions have shown that in many cases the cause was directly traceable to flues and plates corroded by sulphuric acid.

Iron.—When the sulphur is driven off from pyrite or iron sulphide the iron is left behind. This combines with oxygen, comes lighter as the amount of iron decreases. White-ash coals contain no iron, therefore no sulphur, and do not clinker under ordinary conditions. We see then that in the color of the ash we have at once an indicator showing relatively chimney as smoke or some, partially burned, is left in the flues as soot. In order to utilize this great amount of wasted fuel several forms of smokeless furnaces have been devised, but these have not been generally successful.

It is a good plan in firing to pile the new charge near the furnace door and allow the gases to distill off before spreading the coal over the fire. By this method, with plenty of draft, a portion of the gases can be burned.

Fixed Carbon.—For steaming purposes, the greatest value of a coal lies in the amount of fixed carbon it contains, for this is burned completely and gives no smoke. The heat developed from a pound of fixed carbon is only about one-third as great as that developed by burning an equal amount of smoke (volatile matter) yet the heat from the fixed carbon is practically all used in generating steam. On this account the proportion of fixed carbon furnishes the best basis for comparing the efficiency of bituminous coals for purposes of generating steam.

Ash.—Ash is what is left after coal is completely burned. It is usually considered merely a diluent, namely, a certain amount of material which furnishes no heat, but which must be paid for with the coal. The presence of iron in the ash and its effect has already been discussed. Some sulphur also appears in the ash and when present, especially in melted clinkers, it seriously damages the grate bars. In general, other things being equal, coal with a low percentage of ash gives greater heating power than one of high ash content. Low ash content is therefore a factor in favor of coal.

In the tables which follow, the proximate analysis of coals from various states are given. These figures, taken into consideration with what has just been said, will enable the reader to form an estimate of the value of coal. Calorific values were accessible in some cases, but a word must be said in explanation of these. The terms calorie and British thermal unit mean but little to the reader and the value of a coal will be judged by the size of the numbers. However, it should be borne in mind that the calorim-eter test gives a heating value far above any obtainable in actual practice. In the first place it is based on a sample of dry coal. In the furnace a portion of heat is lost in evaporating water from the coal. Further, all the heat given off in the combustion of a given quantity of coal is measured. This, of course, includes the heat of the volatile portion which is lost in the furnace, and the heat caused by the burning of sulphur whose heat value is more than counterbalanced by its injurious effects. A test of the actual evaporating powers of coals under the boiler would be far more intelligible, but these have been made only in comparatively few cases.

Composition and fuel value of coal:
(A British thermal unit is the amount of heat required to raise one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. To change one pound of water already at the boiling point [212° F.] into steam at the same temperature requires 965 B. T. U. The calorie is the metric unit; 1 calorie = 1.8 B. T. U.)

In general the sulphur content of Iowa coal is rather high.

Peat is coming to be used as a fuel in this country. In a fresh state it contains a large amount of water, which is gotten rid of by drying and compression. The fuel value of peat will depend on its moisture content and state of compression. It has the advantage that it is free from sulphur and burns to a fine white ash. It is found in the market in the form of briquettes which approach anthracite coal in character. Calorific power of kiln dried peat is about 10,150 of air dried peat 7,650 B. T. U.

In closing, a few other facts about coal might be mentioned. The coal most useful for steam making is bituminous or soft coal. This is divided into three classes, caking or cementing coal, non-caking coal and cannel coal. Caking coal runs together and agglutinates on the grate. This should be frequently broken up to allow full passage of air. The non-caking or open burning coals do not agglutinate and therefore burn more readily. Cannel coal is a very bituminous variety.

Slack is a sort of bi-product of the mine representing an inferior coal mixed with much foreign material. Seams of shale known as "slate" to the miner usually run through the coal seams in the mine. These are from one-half of an inch to several feet in thickness. Much of this material, as well as the roof shale, finds its way into the bank cars and is separated as slack. Shale from slack is found in the ash resembling pieces of slate. Seams of fire clay and iron pyrite variously designated as "bone coal," "black jack," etc., are also found in coal beds, and much of this material finds its way into the slack, both lowering its heating power and adding injurious agents.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Pointers for the Suburban Florist.

Make a memorandum to remind your customers next fall of how pretty the spring crocuses look blooming in bright clusters of orange, white and purple, through the grass in little scattered colonies. Before lawn mowing time they are all through and so they neither interfere with nor disfigure the velvety green characteristic of the ideal lawn.

The little English daisy, Burns' "Wee, modest, crimson-tipped flower," is easily acclimatized in the garden or lawn in all but the most extreme northern portions of the United States. The plants set out in spring settle down comfortably and after a few seasons will have scattered their progeny freely by means of the seed. The single-flowered with their bright yellow centers are the prettiest and are exceedingly attractive in the lawn and as their blooming time is about over by the time clipping is due no objection can be urged against them. Tell about these things to your customers who have gardens and lawns and you will sell a few thousand crocus bulbs and daisy plants and perhaps get the job of planting them.

Twombly Wedding Decorations.

The Twombly wedding in New York city on April 12, was one of the prettiest as to floral decoration seen in many years. The ceremony was at St. Thomas' church and this splendid edifice, also the residence of the bride's parents, were decorated in a superb manner by Thorley. The church was made a bewildering spectacle of gorgeous color by the unstinted use of flowering plants. Across the entire width of the church in front of the chancel, with the exception of the center aisle stretched a great terrace of azaleas, daisies, lilies, genistas, lilacs and rhododendrons. The pulpit was filled with immense plants of genista and festooned with garlands of Bride roses. Against the columns on either side were Crimson Rambler roses and the pew ends were adorned with huge clusters of roses on each side of the main aisle. Palms in abundance were used for background effect. At the house one room was decorated entirely in yellow, the components being genistas and Azalea mollis. Another room was done with bougainvilleas exclusively. Mirrors, doorways and chandeliers were profusely garlanded with asparagus. The bride's bouquet was of white orchids and lily of the valley and the maids carried bunches of long stemmed American Beauty roses.

Cattleya Schroderae.

The accompanying illustration shows a well-grown plant of Cattleya Schroderae cultivated in a mixture of Belgian leaf-mould and American peat. All the root action is confined to the pot, and the result is a vigorous constitution and a five-flowered spike (an unusual number). They are well developed and of excellent shape. This mixture evidently is a great success, and it will be interesting to watch the future progress of the plants; the small addition of peat is a great advantage in this country where water is used indiscriminately at times; the compost is porous, and very little drainage is necessary. At this season this beautiful cattleya is seen in every prominent New York florist's store. It does not produce a combination of colors so striking as in C. Trianae or C.

CATTELEYA SCHRODERÆ.

(A florists' cattleya.)

labiata, but it has excellent form and a pleasing fragrance that is rarely found in cattleyas grown for the market. One of the finest collections of this plant is at Hackensack, N. J., where C. Moore and his very able gardener, E. Knight, are enjoying one of the most superb displays of blossom seen in this country and from whom the photograph produced was obtained. White varieties of this species appear more frequently than in other cattleyas, but one rarely meets with a variety with deep magenta coloring in the labellum. A plant of the latter has recently appeared among an importation received last year. No manure in any form is given to plants in this collection.

A. DIMMOCK.

New York.

Bleak winds and spiteful little snow storms have effectually finished the career of the period of stagnation in the cut flower trade that followed close upon Easter. Thus far there has been little to remind one of spring in the atmosphere blowing through the 28th street section. On Wednesday, April 20, there arrived in the midst of a vicious snow squall, the first consignment of southern lilacs. Carl Jurgens of Newport, who, with Mrs. Jurgens, has just returned from a trip to Virginia and is stopping here for a few days on the homeward journey, tells with enthusiasm of the apple blossoms and buttercups blooming in the south land and we are wondering whether New York is to see anything of the kind ever again. But it is to be recorded that the commission men in this neighborhood are showing no solicitude in that direction and so long as it makes the Bridesmaids solid in body, lively in color and quick to sell, they are satisfied that it should snow every day for the next six months. Business is surely better on all sides and the troubles of last week are no longer troubling. Even Johnnie Weir who fattens on the surplus and grows haggard under the stress of lively market conditions is on the street with two vans, as these lines are being penned, buying material to fittingly adorn four weddings at which he is to officiate in the city of churches and baby carriages. And Mrs. Champion from New Haven, suave, shrewd and business-like, is equally in evidence, snapping up the good things which even the Broadway and Fifth avenue rajahs cannot touch when she puts in an appearance. Ghormley's special cage, dedicated to the protection of Beauty and Liberty against ruthless handling, across the threshold of which neither Jew, Greek nor gentile may pass, was in a state of siege on Tuesday morning and even the violets which for several days had been forsaken and friendless have come to the front again as an object of deep interest. Many of the lilies coming in are a sight for the gods. Such weazened and bedraggled rags have never before been seen even here in this market where every imaginable grade gravitates. They tell the story of unwise haste and wasted fuel in the struggle to force them into bloom for Easter and their consequent ruin and emphasize the great need of their growers for an immediate addition to their scanty store of common sense.

Lilies, carnations and roses have all stiffened in price during the past few days. Lily of the valley is not moving as rapidly as it should, but daffodils, of which the supply is much reduced, are selling better than for some time past. Brunner roses are in special demand and of specially good quality as a rule. Sweet peas are excellent and bring fair rates. Among the newer receipts are the yellow centaureas, of which a limited number are seen, antirrhinums and crested moss roses. Pansies are scarce as compared with other seasons. Trailing arbutus is in fair supply, the fern men being the main handlers of this pretty article.

A disagreement between grower and Greek resulted in a badly bruised face last Monday morning at the Cut Flower Exchange. This market ought to have an officer on duty every morning to see that the people are properly protected and steps are being taken to that effect.

The mayor of Seabright has been seeing the bright side of the New York wholesale district under the expert guidance of Frank McMahon.

Charles Schaeffer, of Woodside, L. I., is marketing a large quantity of Empress narcissi, fancy tulips and other bulbous stock.

George Vocke has sold his greenhouses and land. The greenhouses will be torn down and the land devoted to building lots.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club J. Austin Shaw's paper on the Easter business was thoroughly enjoyed.

Victor Zuber, of Bayside, L. I., is sending in first class Ulrich Brunner roses to the New York market.

The directors of the New York Cut Flower Co. held their regular meeting on April 19.

J. K. Allen has been laid up with a severe cold for a week.

Friday.—Joseph J. Featherstone, dealer at Eighth avenue and Twenty-third street, died last night.

The eastern office of the AMERICAN FLORIST is now at 42 W. Twenty-eighth street.

Chicago.

Toward the end of last week matters began to stiffen up perceptibly on the market and an improvement was noted in both qualities and prices secured for high grade goods. The weather again turned to nearly freezing and this shortened the daily receipts sufficiently to induce high prices in almost all lines. Carnations especially were affected in point of price, and from $1.50 for common stock the quotations are running from $2 to $3. There is no shortage, however, the demand just keeping the receipts well in hand and making auction room prices unnecessary. The rose market continues fairly steady, not much of a change over the period since Easter. Everything, except probably long Beauty, is in good supply. Easter lilies are standing around in a great surfeit and the prices are ruling accordingly low. Much of the bulbous stock which has been holding an impregnable position as a glut for many weeks, is rapidly waning and tulips are now few and far between. Some violets are yet being received but all are shaky and they will soon be entirely out of the market. Ferns and smilax do not show any improvement in point of supply, the former holding the stiff price of $3.50 and $4 per 1,000. Shipping trade is more gratifying than the local retail business which steadfastly refuses to become enthused with life ever since the winter holiday period.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held April 20 with a fair attendance. A committee was appointed to secure, if possible, a repeal of the city ordinance prohibiting the use of flowers at school commencements. Prof. H. Hasselbring, of the Chicago University, presented a paper on "Coal" and made some interesting experiments to emphasize his remarks. The paper will be found elsewhere in this issue. The Chicago Carnation Company exhibited some fine blooms of Fiancee and the Cardinal carnations. Fiancee was remarkably fine and appears to improve with the warmer weather. The excellent display of this variety is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that it has been steadily exhibited in good condition since early fall. Cardinal also was in excellent condition and its rich color and fine size and form impressed those present very favorably. The committee on bowling announced that a meeting will be held at Geroux's alleys, 170 Madison street, next Tuesday evening at 7:45, to consider ways and means in the matter of the national tournament at St. Louis, next August. All interested in the welfare of our bowlers, and every member of the club is certainly interested, should make a strong effort to attend on this occasion. The meeting will be followed by bowling.

University of Chicago students will walk to classes hereafter between rows of fragrant blossoms and beneath the shade of ornamental foliage plants, for the Midway campus is to be turned into a garden of beauty. Arbor day saw the first improvements on the grounds, when part of an $8,000 lot of plants and trees were planted.

Peter Reinberg, as has been his custom every year since he started in the business, will this year rebuild several of his houses. One entire range, running along Robey street, containing fifteen houses, will be rebuilt and equipped with iron gutters.

The employes of the Chicago Carnation Company, of Joliet, Ill., gave a party and dance on the evening of April 13 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Erick Erickson. Music and dancing were features and a lunch was served at a late hour. About sixty guests were present.

John Mangel, of Wabash avenue and Monroe street, has filed a petition for divorce from his wife, Anna R. Mangel, on the grounds of cruelty. Mrs. Mangel is now in Grand Rapids, Mich.

On April 15 Frank Garland and Michael Winandy took possession of their new store room on the second floor of the Atlas block.

The George Wittbold Company has opened a retail store on Dempster street, Evanston. On the same street Fred Fischer has opened a branch of his Ridge avenue place.

Basset & Washburn are cutting fine Kaiserin and President Carnot roses at the present time. They are particularly notable for their long stem and magnificent flower.

John Mangel is extending his store at the corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street. He has leased part of the floor on the ground floor of the building above him.

P. J. Hauswirth was a St. Louis visitor last week. He attended the meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club on Thursday evening.

The News, of Wilmington, Del., gives Peter Reinberg's political methods an extended and highly eulogistic editorial notice.

Bird and Arbor day in Illinois was celebrated on April 22 in a quiet way by the public schools and outdoor art societies.

The Joliet Improvement Association has appointed James Hartshorne as manager of the exhibition to be held next fall.

T. D. Mosconesotes will open a branch flower store May 1 at the corner of State and Division streets.

D. B. and O. S. Honaker, of Lexington, Ky., spent several days this week with the Chicago trade.

A. L. Randall spent part of the week at his place at Benton Harbor.

J. C. Craig, of Wabash avenue, left this week for California.

Mrs. Arnold Ringier is seriously ill with pneumonia.

Philadelphia.

Business the last week has been fairly active, but the volume of trade could be much larger before there would be a scarcity of flowers. Beauty roses are getting more plentiful with prices receding. Bridesmaid are very fine. No such stock was possible five years ago and it shows what can be done with careful cultivation and a thorough understanding of a variety. Liberty roses are also becoming more a factor and are pushing the Beauty hard for first place. They have the short and medium lengths distanced as it seems that no matter how short a stem, the flower is always of good form and color. Carnations piled up badly the last week or two and really fine stock was to be seen on the streets at ridiculous prices. This week receipts have not been so large and are more easily handled. Southern daffodils are a shade scarcer and there is a little hope for the home production of which there are a few still about. Violets are almost over. S. S. Pennock is receiving a few good ones, at least fair flowers for the time of year.

Robert Craig & Son will soon have a large crop of lilacs. These will bridge over the gap between the last of the greenhouse and the first of the garden production. W. A. Leonard, of Lansdowne, is right in it with his grafted Bride and Bridesmaid. The crop this season amounted to 35,000 plants and he has been very busy day and night getting the stock delivered.

The record of violets handled by one commission house in New York, the violet center of the country, for Easter, was given last week as 500,000. S. S. Pennock, of this city, received and sold this many doubles and 60,000 singles in addition, which is certainly a record for this city at least.

At H. A. Dreer's there is tremendous activity, as almost half the stock has to be packed and delivered in the next month. It is astonishing the amount of plants, both from greenhouse and herbaceous grounds, that are moved during the months of April and May.

The weather is most disappointing to the bedding plant man. April 19 there were 6° of frost and even magnolias, which are generally over by this time, are now only showing color.

At a special meeting of the Florists' Club at the club room, Horticultural hall, April 16, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, The members of the Florists' Club have heard with deep regret of the death of their fellow member, George Huster, be it

Resolved, That the club members make a special minute of the high estimation in which they held Mr. Huster for his loyal and faithful services on behalf of its interests from its foundation up to the time of his death. His professional ability and zeal were widely recognized and his singleness of heart, earnestness of purpose and high sense of honor were distinguishing characteristics that earned him the affection and respect of all; and

Resolved, That the secretary forward a copy of this minute to the relatives of Mr. Huster as a testimony to them of the warm regard in which Mr. Huster was held and an expression of their sympathy in a mutual loss which they all deplore. And further

Resolved, That the floral emblem of the club be sent to the funeral.

Boston.

Boston got its share of the wintry weather that was being handed out last week and we were treated to the uncommon spectacle of a snow-mantled country in middle of April. Unwelcome as it was on general principles, it was certainly a boon for the cut flower people, shortening up the crops and making a substantial inroad on the accumulations that were blocking up the refrigerators of growers, wholesalers and retailers. The effect on quality was also good. Roses now coming in have the cold weather substance and depth of color; carnations are excellent and violets, which had begun to make their annual retreat before the warm spring sun have taken fresh courage and are still in the ring. Trailing arbutus, in the familiar little stubby bunches, is seen on all the curbstone and "hole-in-the-wall" stands. Twenty-five cents a bunch is the ruling price but they're not worth it, denuded of foliage and tightly bound with many yards of thread.

N. F. McCarthy & Co. are selling some very fine imported hardy ornamental stock at their auction room every Tuesday and Friday. Bedding plant trade has not begun to move yet although an occasional gorgeous wagon load of geraniums, daisies, spiræas and heliotropes may be seen meandering through the residential districts.

Mayor Collins has sent in the appointment of Wm. Doogue as superintendent of the common and public squares and his confirmation will follow. This disposes of the rumor which has been rife that Mr. Doogue was to be deposed this spring.

Patriots' day, eastern Massachusetts' great local holiday, was observed with customary enthusiasm and brought quite a respectable flurry of business to the florists, shipping trade being very good with the wholesalers on Monday.

F. R. Mathison's automobile has arrived at the new house built especially for its occupancy. It is a first-class Stanley machine, seating four persons.

John H. Cox is rapidly improving at the City hospital.

Visitors in town last week were August Rhotert, New York, and Supt. Perry of Niagara Falls reservation.

Baltimore.

Supplies of cut flowers meet all needs. Fortunately the rush of lilies which missed Easter is about over. Carnations for the last two or three days have all been taken up, and violets are on the wane, although to-day (April 18) there was a little spurt in the demand. Bulbous stock from the south continues to come in heavy shipments. The street vendors complain of poor trade. It is thought that more persons than usual will forsake the city this year for the country, the seashore and the mountains, and that the hegira will begin early. The conditions existing in the devastated portions of the city are far from enjoyable, dust and mud prevailing alternately. The customary social festivities are lacking in number, the weddings which occur are not celebrated with the abundance of floral display generally expected, and on some sides there exists a decidedly pessimistic feeling as to the summer—ill-grounded, let us hope.

Everybody is busy, gardeners pushing ahead their bedding plants which have filled up the benches emptied of Easter stock and a great deal of hardy material is being planted outside. The demand for labor in the burnt district of the city renders ordinary unskilled laborers scarce, and is retarding such work as laying off, grading and tree planting. Isaac H. Moss, who has established a fine nursery at Govanstown, say he finds it necessary to decline to accept orders for material to be planted, and other local nurserymen take the same course. They will sell and deliver the trees but the buyer must provide for the planting. The late season, it is thought, will lessen the volume of the nursery trade this spring.

In the cut-flower trade last week there were one or two fair days with the others dull ones. Towards its end stock was generally cleaned out, but at almost slaughter prices. There were some funerals, a few weddings, and fewer still receptions and entertainments. The weather was cold, raw, windy—far below normal in night temperatures, the mercury going down several times to 20° and 22°, and making a record for low for April in this vicinity.

Henry Bauer, a well-known and capable cultivator, has been appointed gardener at the House of Refuge, a reformatory institution for boys largely supported by the city and state, and is sending to market considerable and creditable quantities of cut flowers.

WORCESTER, MASS.—Hanson & Company have opened a flower store at 125 Eastern avenue.

PITTSFIELD, ILL.—George Hansen, proprietor of the Pittsfield greenhouse, returned to this city Tuesday afternoon after seventeen months' stay at San Antonio, Tex. He is much improved in health.

DES MOINES, IA.—Andrew Loeffler, a prosperous East Des Moines florist, worried by family troubles and under arrest for threatening to commit a public offense, saved himself the disgrace of being locked in the county jail a few days ago by committing suicide. He outwitted the officer who had him in charge and drank two ounces of carbolic acid.

OBITUARY.

James Mott.

James Mott, at one time one of the best known nurserymen in Florida, died at Miami, April 13. Mr. Mott had been ill for several months past.

James A. Wright.

Prof. Jas. A. Wright, formerly professor of horticulture at the State College of Utah, also a member of the state board of horticulture from its organization and secretary of the board, died April 1 at Salt Lake City. He resigned his professorship at the college to become editor of the Inter-Mountain Farmer when the paper was established and edited it with great ability up to the time of his death although almost unable to move and unable to speak save in a whisper. He was only 47 years of age at the time of his death.

George Huster.

The craft of Philadelphia, Pa., lost one of its most illustrious members on Wednesday, April 13, when George Huster died. Death was caused by cancer of the stomach. The deceased was a Bavarian and was born in 1836. He emigrated to this country in 1860 and settled in Philadelphia where he since resided. He first worked as assistant gardener in private places where his ability soon placed him in entire charge. He made a specialty of hothouse grapes and won many prizes before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, where he was an important exhibitor. On October 1, 1872, he took charge of the Girard college grounds, which has really been his life work, as he was still chief gardener when death overtook him in his 68th year. Mr. Huster was a most practical as well as intelligent gardener and kept well to the front, in fact in some things he was a leader and blazed the way that others were glad to follow. One of his achievements was the discovery of the croton as a bedding plant. In adding variety to the extensive decorations on the college grounds he planted beds of crotons and their beauty and the way in which they thrived in the full glare of the summer sun was a great demonstration to the trade of the possibilities of the plant and now thousands are grown for this purpose. He was also among the first with cacti and fancy caladiums as outdoor bedding plants. Mr. Huster always took a great interest in horticultural and kindred societies, being an active member of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society where he served with great success on its committees and always worked hard for its success. He was also an enthusiastic member of the Florists' Club, being a member of the committee on exhibits. He was a very genial gentleman and always welcomed visitors and took pleasure in showing them about the college grounds in which were to be found examples of the finest bedding in the country. He was buried from the residence of a nephew (having always remained a bachelor) on Monday last. The funeral was largely attended by members of the craft who also sent a number of beautiful floral emblems. The photograph reproduced on page 546 was taken at the age of about 45 years. K.

New Decision On Roses.

The Board of United States General Appraisers has sustained a protest filed by the American Express Company for Heller Brothers, French & Sons and John Burton, says the New York Commercial.
Judge Waite, who writes the opinion for the board, says so-called rooted rose cuttings are not dutiable as "rose plants" at 2½ cents each under paragraph 252 of the tariff act of 1897, but should be classified as "cuttings of plants commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock," at twenty-five per cent advalorem under the above named paragraph. The collector's assessment was reversed by the board and a liquidation ordered.

American Rose Society.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—I notice in your issue of March 19 W. N. Rudd's rather severe criticism of the American Rose Society, and assigning reasons for its partial failure. Now, I would like to ask Brother Rudd, seeing he has diagnosed the case so well, if he will not be the "Good Samaritan" to take the youngster by the hand and help steady it until it can stand on its feet. Begin by trying to induce all the rose growers around Chicago, employers and employes, to send their names to Secretary Barrou as prospective members of the American Rose Society and then bring them with him to Boston next March, and I can assure him that they will find there as democratic a lot of florists as it has ever been his good fortune to meet, not even excepting the members of the carnation society. The true rose lover knows no distinction between employer and employee and in no part of the country can there be found more devoted lovers of the queen than around Boston. No doubt here, as elsewhere, they need a little stirring up to bring out their enthusiasm, but if Brother Rudd will use his best efforts to stir up the rose growers around Chicago and see, when the time comes, that they all come to Boston we will endeavor with him to give the rose society such a lift that when she starts westward from the Hub we shall all be so proud of her that we shall want to travel with her train.

ALEX. MONTGOMERY, Pres.

For Example.

It is most disagreeable to have your New York contemporary mutilate one's statements, enclose the mangled remains in quotation marks, accuse one of having given out this clipped and emasculated product of the scissors and blue pencil, and then use it as a text for a serious editorial. Of course it is a natural sequence that Job should take a "whirl" at the same, and pour out some of his watery humor over it, but no one cares particularly about him.

What is hard to understand, however, is how these "holy Willies" who are continually taking one to task for not dotting i's and crossing t's can justify themselves in this sort of thing.

Side Lines to Corn Canning.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—A party contemplating the erection of a plant for canning corn in southern Illinois would like to learn through your columns if it would be practical and profitable to erect in connection with same greenhouses for cucumber forcing or sheds for mushroom growing or both. The plant will be in use only during August and September each year and the idea is to establish in conjunction with it something that will enable him to keep at least a portion of the plant running the entire year, also certain of the help, such as foreman, engineer and office help. Any information bearing on the above will be greatly appreciated.

I HAVE AN INDUCEMENT

For a Man of Limited Capital to Join Me in Erecting a plant of 10,000 to 20,000 feet of glass in a locality where coal can be bought for $1.25 per ton; plenty of water and all the land required. Close to railway station on a direct line between Chicago and New Orleans; near best market in the west. Have the land, cedar posts for ten houses, 2 steam boilers, 5,000 feet of pipe, 6,000 feet of new sawed 2-in. oak for benches. Location is ideal to tap the trade now being carried on between Chicago and the South. Ten acres of land, half of it in blue grass; young orchard.

Want a partner with $1,500 to help complete the plant or I will sell out for same price. Like Paddy's blanket, "It's as broad as it's narrow." It's a rare opportunity either way. Coal, mine run, $1.25 per ton. Exchange references through

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

The Seed Trade.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Chas. McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.
Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-23, 1904.

ONION sets of all colors are worth $2.50 to $3 per bushel at Chicago this week and are scarce.

WISCONSIN farmers are alarmed at the lateness of the season, only three springs in thirty-five years having been so delayed.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Onion set growers are declining to contract this year, preferring to sell on the open market after the sets are harvested.

THE Lucas & Boddington Company has an effective railroad advertisement in the shape of a board sign, bag-shaped and lettered "lawn seed."

NEW YORK.—Robert Fulton, of Henry & Lee, has returned from a nine months' trip to China and Japan. He says he is very well content in this city.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. H. Henry, of Henry & Lee, New York; Chas. Loechner, representing Suzuki & Iida, New York; F. T. Emerson, Fremont, Neb.; John Lewis Childs, returning from the coast.

It was the late Samuel Ainsworth, for many years connected with the firm of James Carter & Company, London, England, says the Horticultural Advertiser, that gave the name Tom Thumb to the dwarf strains of Tropaeolum majus (nasturtium) which are so popular in most gardens.

A DUTCH bulb grower of experience reports an unusual number of complaints this season on the flowering of all bulbous stock. He attributes much of this to the fact that severe winter weather with hard freezing set in early in November before the bulbs were well rooted in the flats. Satisfactory flowering of imperfectly rooted stock he declares is impossible.

SENATOR DEPEW, says the Buffalo News, recently asked certain party leaders for a list of farmers in Westchester county so that he could send them garden seeds. Somebody sent him a list of the members of the Larchmont Yacht club, and now the mail of prominent yachtsmen along the sound is flooded with packages of garden seeds bearing his compliments.

FREESIA ARMSTRONGI, a bright rose-pink form, was exhibited at a recent show of the Royal Horticultural Society of England. "It is a striking flower," says the Horticultural Advertiser, "and one which was much discussed. The plant and blooms shown were miserable weedy specimens, but the color is so remarkable that if the plant improves with cultivation it will be heard of later."

RHODE ISLAND seed trade is very late this year; in fact, there has been very little small retail counter business. Potatoes are about all sold, and went out short, especially rose varieties. Onion sets have not given the dealer any profit, as early, when he had his orders, he could not get his sets owing to the cold, and now, when they have come in quantity, the demand has slackened. Onion seed is plentiful and sweet corn as scarce as ever, also some sorts of cucumber seed.

To Mushroom Spawn Purchasers.

We have information which leads us to believe that some alleged mushroom spawn companies, now advertising extensively by means of circulars, are fraudulent and where any reader of this paper receives such circular matter by mail would advise that it be turned over to the local postal authorities for investigation, unless it comes from dealers of known reliability.

Sweet Corn.

Everyone of us has had a hard time with sweet corn this year, the grower trying to get it dry and cured enough to ship; and the dealer trying to get his contract filled by the grower. It is very discouraging, to say the least, to have your grower write you something like this: "White Cory, Early Crosby, Early Maine, Country Gentleman, Burr's Mammoth and Perry's Hybrid have failed entirely, but we hope to be able to give you a little Potter's Excelsior, Early Minnesota and Stowell's Evergreen; this is not the kind of a report we should like to be able to make you, but it is the best we can do."

Now in a year like this we all know that both sides of this corn question are having a very hard time of it, but the retail trade in many cases truly feels that the grower has not given him what belongs to him on his contract; and the grower often knows that his farmers hold it back from him. And so it goes, an endless chain of fault finding. Some day there may be devised a system of contracting that will prove more satisfactory, both in a season like the past and in a year of over-production.

British Seed Trade Notes.

Owing to the shortage of seed as a result of the very unfavorable season for harvesting, prices generally have remained firm. Many of the growers had their best varieties of peas destroyed by the severe wet and the prices for this season have hardened. For instance the new pea, Rivenhall Wonder, which is to be distributed by Cooper, Taber & Company, was seriously damaged and the supply of seed has been postponed. A large acreage will be sown this year to supply the numerous demands.

Seed potatoes are interesting the trade, particularly the new disease resisting kinds. It is probable that the increased price will have the effect of causing a further reduction in the acreage devoted to potato culture. During the last few weeks there has been an increased demand and before the season is over there is likely to be a shortage. The Scotch growers have had a very busy time of late in sending consignments to all parts of the United Kingdom. The value of the American seed potatoes when transferred to British soil is receiving increasing recognition on this side.

British seedsmen have been keenly interested in the record-making prices of Eldorado, the latest introduction of A. Findlay, a famous Scotch potato raiser. A sensation was caused at the Smithfield show by J. Poad & Sons, seed merchants of York, selling four pounds of Eldorado for £600. As there were twenty-four potatoes this works out at an average of £25 for each tuber. Similar sensational prices have since been made by George Massey, a Spalding seed merchant. The fortunate holders of the limited stock are offering to supply the seed in the fall of this year at £3 a pound. W. J. Malden, who has made a study of propagating potatoes, is offering strong plants of Eldorado at £4 each for April delivery and £3 for May delivery. These high priced tubers are of a shapely form similar to Snowdrop. The early growth is vigorous and the plant of a bushy habit. It ripens earlier than the Northern Star. The last named, which is also one of Mr. Findlay's raising, is in great demand owing to its heavy-cropping and disease-resisting qualities. Poad & Sons alone have booked more than fifty tons to firms in the seed trade.

Garden Seeds Returned.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Representative Greene, of the Fall River District of Massachusetts, received this week a letter which is almost unique in congressional annals. It is from a constituent, a woman, who sends back a package of garden seeds which he had sent her, with the dignified statement that, as she disapproves of the expenditure of public money in this way, she feels that she must return the package, thanking the M. C. for his intended courtesy. Mr. Greene adds that she belongs to "an old Democratic family."—New York Post.

The Nursery Trade

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn., Pres.; Frank A. Weber, St. Louis, Mo., Vice-Pres.; George C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June 22-24, 1904.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—Stephen D. Horan has been appointed superintendent of parks.

THE annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June 22-24 inclusive.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The work of scraping the trees on private estates to guard against the elm beetle is quite general this season.

JACKSON DAWSON recommends as a list of the most satisfactory of the single-flowered hardy roses, R. blanda, lucida, lucida alba, nitida, setigera, repens, alpina, cinnamomea, provincialis, spinosissima, rugosa, multiflora, Wichuraiana, sulphurea and Arkansana.

CLEMATIS APIFOLIA, introduced by the Arnold Arboretum, is a good companion for C. Virginiana and C. paniculata, and materially extends the clematis blooming time. Clematis Mongolica, a semi-herbaceous species, three to four feet high is recommended by Mr. Dawson as a good subject for Easter forcing.

Effects of the Severe Winter.

Not for a generation, possibly not for two generations, has a winter been experienced in the northeastern states of equal severity with that just passed through. The results are evident in the brown and shriveled leaves of rhododendrons, boxes and similar broad-leaved evergreens and the browned foliage of conifers heretofore regarded as reliably hardy. As usual in phenomenal seasons, varying and oftentimes mystifying conditions are noted. In the vicinity of New York, for instance, the retinisporas are as a rule intact; R. obtusa and obtusa nana show some injury, but most of the well-known favorite species came through unscathed, whereas such supposedly immune subjects as Abies Nordmanniana and Abies Canadensis in some instances have their foliage as brown as though baked in an oven although the wood appears to be uninjured.

The pines are, almost without exception, in perfect condition. Pinus Bre-

veriana is severely scorched, but it is the exception. The junipers also appear to have withstood the test splendidly, and the thuyas generally are in as good condition as usual. Exceptions are T. occidentalis Lobbi atrovirens and T. o. Hoveyii, both of which have suffered severely. In the abies section we find A. pinsapo dead, A. Morinda in bad shape and A. magnifica glauca very dilapidated. A countata is safe. Picea pungens looks actually happy, without a scratch, and P. excelsa in all its forms is practically safe, although P. e. pumila nigra is more or less damaged. P. nigra is in perfect condition, as is also P. polita and P. Alcockiana. Taxus cuspidata is about half killed and T. baccata is almost annihilated in all its forms. T. tardiva is safe, but T. Hibernica is badly hurt or killed outright. Sciadopitys verticillata is slightly browned in isolated instances. Cedrus Atlantica glauca has lost all its foliage but appears to be alive in the wood. Podocarpus careanus is dead; Pseudotsuga Douglasii is unhurt. Buxus in all varieties has suffered terribly, most of the plants and hedges being as brown as an oak leaf in January. It is many years since these or Taxus haccata have suffered seriously from winter weather. Hedges of the latter nearly a quarter of a century old are killed which never before showed any indication of injury. Azalea amœna, Berberis Aquifolium, Leucothoe Catesbaei, Calluna vulgaris and similar low-growing subjects were fortunately favored by the deep snow, and where well-covered by the drifts have come through the siege in unusually fine shape. Most of the rhododendrons show marks of the havoc, buds and foliage being completely killed not only in varieties of doubtful hardiness, but in many of those hitherto regarded as of unquestioned reliability. The full extent of the injury to these will not be known, however, until after blooming and growth begin. California privet has again demonstrated its manifest unfitness for use as a hedge plant north of Philadelphia. Far better in every way for this purpose is the cheery little Berberis Thunbergii, always reliable, always beautiful with its early verdure in spring, its graceful habit in summer, its glorious autumn foliage and its wealth of coral fruit all through the winter and spring months.

At Chicago.

The weekly games of the Florists' Club bowlers continue at the Geroux alleys with unabated interest. It will soon be time for the managers to sift out from the material at hand the team that will represent Chicago at St. Louis in August. P. J. Hauswirth has issued a call to all members of the club interested in bowling to meet Tuesday evening, April 26, at 8 o'clock at the Geroux alleys, 170 Madison street, for the purpose of discussing ways and means and of making more definite arrangements as to the final selection of the representative team. The following were the scores of the last session:

Newport, R. I.

The weather has turned cold, and all outdoor work and planting is again postponed. The ground has frozen hard every night and ice has formed some nights to the thickness of an inch. Last Thursday it snowed most of the day; again on Saturday snow fell. It has been very raw and the thermometer low for so late in the season; night after night there has been from 3° to 6° of frost, the glass dropping as low as 26° above. And it is getting near the first of May—a discouraging prospect surely. The season is fully six good weeks late in Rhode Island, and even now it does not show any indication of warmer days. What few sweet peas, potatoes and early seeds have been planted would be better out of the ground than in. It was a strange sight in the snow storm to see farmers planting potatoes, when everything was covered thickly with snow. We need some warm days to start things along; as it is now, outdoor work is at a standstill.

Vegetable plants for earliest setting are not over plentiful, especially Early Jersey Wakefield and other summer cabbages. Cauliflower and lettuce plants as yet sell slow, it is so cold. Dealers pay the growers as follows for the early plants: Cabbage $4.50, cauliflower $10 and lettuce $5 per thousand. The plants retail as follows: Cabbage 15 cents per dozen, 75 cents per hundred; cauliflower 25 cents per dozen, $1.75 per hundred and lettuce the same as cabbage.

A visitor this week was G. J. van Tusenbroek, for Messrs. C. Keur & Sons, bulb growers and nurserymen, Hillegom, Holland, who report orders for bulbs being placed quite freely. A. H. Hews & Company, North Cambridge, Mass., were represented by L. D. Bryant. Benjamin Hammond, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y., presented "Slug Shot" to us through Robert C. Whitehill. Many summer people were also here inspecting their estates.

The beautiful estate of E. J. Berwind is still being added to in the matter of shrubbery. Several carloads of hearty rhododendrons, azaleas and box trees will be added this spring to the borders under the able direction of Bruce Butterson, the head gardener.

Carl Jurgens and wife, who usually pass the winter in Bermuda, have not been away this season until now. They have gone south for a three or four weeks' rest and will visit Florida before they return.

George Westland, formerly gardener for Commodore Lewis Cass Ledyard at "Bay View," has gone to Cambridge, Mass., to take charge of the greenhouses and shrubbery for Mount Auburn cemetery.

R. J. Grinnell has begun selling his geraniums of which he has as usual a large quantity. He is wholesaling them at $5 per hundred without, and $6 per hundred with the 3/8-inch pots in which they are.

Miss Ellen F. Mason at her new villa on Rhode Island avenue is having made an Italian garden. There will be a lily pond with a fountain in the center. A lot of herbaceous stock will be used.

Hitchings & Company of New York have recently built a fine greenhouse for R. L. Beekman and are now at work on two more, one for Miss Alice Keteltas and the other for J. A. Godman.

Some large terra cotta vases have arrived for Mrs. W. S. Wells' estate and will be placed on the lawn between the trees. Workmen are now excavating for the foundations for them.

The Jamestown Golf and County club is getting its links and putting greens in order for the coming season's play, fertilizing the whole property and reseeding where necessary.

The private gardeners are getting their hydrangeas into shape for the season.

Many of them are using alum, rusty nails and other ways to make them color well.

The Park department is engaged in sodding worn places in the public squares and also uncovering the beds of bulbs in the hope that warm weather is near.

Mrs. Burke-Roche is having a large tract sown down to timothy and red top grasses at her stock farm. She has some beautiful horses.

William B. Scott & Company's old building is being moved away, and they will at once commence building their new seed store.

Thomas Galvin is advertising this week a choice lot of evergreens and deciduous trees at his Harrison avenue nursery.

Mr. Bond, head gardener for Mrs. H. M. Brooks at "Rockhurst," has some elegant white stocks in bloom. X.

New Bedford, Mass.

Easter trade was fully equal to last year. If it had not been for a hard rain-storm Friday it would have been much better than last year. Plants of all kinds sold well, with the exception of azaleas. Bulb stock was in large supply and quite a lot was left over. There was a good sale of cut flowers, especially carnations and violets, at about last year's prices.

The Horticultural Society met April 12. Four new members were elected. Mr. Alexander, of Bridgewater, gave a talk on dahlias. Henry Dennison, a coal merchant, offers two silver cups as premiums for dahlias at the fall show, one cup to professionals for the best sixty varieties of dahlias and one cup to amateurs for the best sixty varieties. New Bedford is dahlia crazy. A. B. H.

Oceanic, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held here April 15. The following committees were appointed:

Exhibition, Geo. Hale, A. G. Williams, W. W. Kennedy, N. Butterbach, James Dowlen and H. A. Kettel.

Executive, C. H. Walling, G. R. Kuhm, John Yoemas, W. H. Griffiths, N. Butterbach.

Investigating, Horace Longstreet, John Kennedy and H. A. Kettel.

The discussion of the evening was on "Chrysanthemums." George H. Hale showed a vase of very fine amaryllis scoring 100 points and Wm. Turner showed some excellent melons, receiving 100 points. The judges of the evening were N. Butterbach, A. G. Williams and W. W. Kennedy.

ROBERT SCOTT & SON, Sharon Hill, Del. Co., Pa.

Davenport, Ia.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held the evening of April 14 at Odd Fellows' hall, Davenport. A committee appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws made its report and the report was accepted by the society. These new members were taken into the club: Wm. Knees of Moline, and George Farber and Harry Campbell of Davenport. It was decided to hold the next regular meeting at Rock Island and to have a programme of papers on various horticultural subjects. The total membership of the club is now nineteen and it is hoped that all of the Tri-City florists can be secured as members within a short time. After the business of the evening was ended refreshments were served (the kind that made Milwaukee famous) and speeches were made by different members. Wm. Knees for the evening was toast-master, speaker and joker. If any one wants to see Mr. Knees smile just ask him how he likes drinking out of a fish-bowl.

Frank Ewoltdt of Ewoltdt Brothers who had his skull fractured at the World's Fair grounds at St. Louis last December is just able to be about again.

Otto Klingbiel has material on his place for the erection of another greenhouse, which he will build at once.

This is one of the latest springs ever known here. It was 20° above with snow April 15.

Robt. Allison has sold his interest in the Allison, Littig Company to Victor Littig.

THEO. EWOLDT.

London, Ont.

After one of the most severe winters ever experienced here we are now having fine, bright weather; snow banks are yet to be seen in shady places and not many miles to the north there is still good sleighing. Owing to the uncertainty of the train service and, at times, complete blockades, trade throughout the surrounding country has not been up to its usual standard. We had looked forward for considerable increased Easter business, but the continued severity of the winter was still in evidence in many places and it was with extreme caution that buyers from these points placed their orders. Notwithstanding the handicap we are able to report a total business equal to last season. On the whole, prices probably were not quite as high as last year, with the exception, perhaps, of lilies which held fairly firm. All the growers in this section had their lilies in well on time and invariably all were of a superior quality; they sold at from ten to twelve cents per bud, wholesale, and retailed at twenty-five cents. It was noticeable that the demand for plants was far greater than that for cut flowers, but this may have been influenced somewhat on account of the weather, which on Saturday was decidedly unfavorable, raining and snowing alternately. It was noticeable that the demand for cut flowers ran rather to the lower or cheaper grades. Immense quantities of bulbous stock moved at normal prices while good roses and carnations were but sparingly called for.

BLOOMSBURG, PA., Mar. 18, 1904.

DAVIS Bros., Bloomsburg, Pa.—

Gentlemen:—Please book my order for 5,000 of your new red carnation "Crisis." I have watched this carnation for the last three years and I believe it is the best red carnation in cultivation to-day. I sold several thousand blooms of this variety for you last year. It proved to be a good shipper and always gave satisfaction.

Yours very respectfully,

J. L. DILLON.

Cleveland.

Several of the large down-town flower stores are dropping to the level of the Greek and selling roses at 25 to 30 cents a dozen. They have daily announcements in the papers of certain bargain days in roses, carnations and other stock, but the real rush comes on Fridays and Saturdays, when they vie in plastering their windows over with flashy signs announcing phenomenal bargains in cut flowers. The greater part of the roses is rubbish shipped in from other cities at $10 to $15 per 1,000 and then disposed of to the dear, innocent public at 25 to 30 cents per dozen. Carnations and other stock are about on a par. Talk about maintaining prices and elevating the business. Ye gods and little fishes! What a method.

The few days succeeding Easter gave promise of an active spurt in the cut flower trade, but our hopes were doomed to disappointment, for the end of the week brought a slump. Trade dropped back into the old rut and stock began to accumulate in a manner to tax the abilities of the commission men to move it. However, this week isn't so bad. Several large funerals and decorations have kept the stock fairly well cleaned up. Lots of belated Easter stock continues to arrive, principally lilies.

The department stores have become an important factor in the flower business. Nearly every store of note has its cut flower or plant department. Quite a number are handling hardy budded roses at 10 cents each, besides selling seeds and bulbs equally cheap, but in cut flowers they seem to get about the same prices as the regular stores, and they certainly rarely ever have bargain days.

Carlton's new violet, Gov. Herrick, is showing up well now, phenomenally so for so late in the season.

Robert Miller, formerly with W. H. Elliott, of Madbury, N. H., is now with J. M. Gasser.

Miss Lucille Schmitt is rapidly recovering from her recent attack of typhoid fever. ECHO.

American Florist
When you write to an advertiser.

Newport, R. I.

At last it is spring-like and begins to be quite warm and pleasant; the frost is all out of the ground and planting is in full swing. Outdoor bulbs seem to have wintered well, have been uncovered some days, and are now growing fast. Daffodils are in full bloom. So much coal has been consumed in the last winter, bedding stock of all kinds should be higher, but such is not the case. There seems to be a regular price for geraniums, and in fact all bedding stock, both at wholesale and retail, that it is hard to change. Our florists say their coal bills are just as large as in the coal famine of last winter. Coal has been half the price, but they have been obliged to burn twice as much of it.

We have had several visitors here recently including C. F. Beerhorst, of Beerhorst & Son, Ltd., Sassenheim, Holland. Mr. Beerhorst says bulbs will be of good quality this year, and prices if anything a little less than last season. Hyacinths will certainly be better than they were a year ago. The General Bulb Company, Vogelenzang, Holland, was represented by J. C. Hillebrand. Henry C. Anthony, Portsmouth, R. I., was represented by E. R. Pierce. J. A. Davis, of I. S. Johnson & Company, Boston, Mass., and B. H. Trippe, for the Pratt Food Company, Philadelphia, Pa., were also here.

Besides the regular spring seed and florists' business here in Newport we have a summer trade that is the best part of our business year. This summer season begins about the first of June and lasts some three months. Then the population of this city nearly doubles as Newport is filled to overflowing with summer visitors from all the large cities of this country. The money is made in the summer.

That elegant bed of hardy rhododendrons which last season attracted so much attention on the estate of George L. Rives seems to have withstood the winter perfectly, and appears in fine condition. C. Ramlose, the head gardener, has recently uncovered it and takes the greatest care of it. A very heavy top-dressing is applied every fall, and every few years the soil around the plants is renewed.

William B. Scott & Company, who are getting ready to start a seed and agricultural business here, finding the building on their property at 10 Broadway not suited to their use, have sold the old structure, and after it has been moved away they will construct a modern building adapted to the special needs of their business.

A great many large trees have been moved with frozen balls of earth to the estates on Bellevue avenue, where immediate effects are desired. Some trees so large that eight horses have been required to team them have been used. Wadley & Smyth have done a great deal of this work.

Gibson Brothers have some very good stock in their houses; a house of American Beauty roses just coming along looked very well grown. Their geraniums were also in good shape, being stocky and clean.

George W. Goldner, who is with the Stumpp & Walter Company, New York, has originated a very useful device for fastening the cross-wires for supporting the plants in a carnation house. X.

MAUCHCHUNK, PA.—Paul Niehoff has opened a store in the basement of the American hotel.

AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY, 324 Dearborn Street,
....CHICAGO.

Washington, D. C.

In the past week trade was lively, though prices remained unchanged. There have been several weddings and entertainments calling for decorations, also considerable funeral work. Among the growers the bustle of spring work is fairly on. Though the weather has been cool with several heavy frosts, it has been favorable for outdoor work. Nature is putting on her robes of green that here and there are spangled with blossoms. Carnation planting is well under way and the growers of "garden sass and sich," seem to be well advanced in their work.

At the thirteenth annual continental congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which opened at Chase's Opera House, April 18, the stage had a handsome arrangement of flags and flowers, the front of the platform being fringed with Boston ferns. On the desk of the president general was a great bouquet of red and white roses in a tall jar, while lying on the desk were bunches of pink roses, white roses, red roses and yellow roses, the long ends of parti-colored ribbons tying them hanging to the floor like a fringe. In the evening a reception was held in the Corcoran Art gallery, and for the first time, it is said, in the history of that structure, the American flag appeared in the decorations. The main stairway was banked with palms, ferns and flowering plants. The corner stone of the Memorial Centennial hall, which is to be erected by the D. A. R. at Seventeenth and D. streets, N. W., was laid with Masonic ceremonies on Tuesday afternoon, April 19, Lexington day. The floral display was elaborate. The decorations for these three events were by A. Gude & Brother.

While spending my vacation in Philadelphia last summer, I was delighted with the hospitality of its inhabitants, charmed with the beauty of Fairmount park, and my artistic tastes were vastly improved by looking at the pictures of Gov. Pennypacker, published in the Philadelphia papers. I then resolved that if I ever could do Philadelphia a good turn I would make haste to do it. The opportunity seems to be up to me. Mr. Leslie Miller, president of the parkway allied associations of that city, has proposed "A beautiful Schuylkill river within masonry walls." I agree with Mr. Miller, and imbued with a desire to make the Schuylkill the completest river that ever meandered to the sea, I suggest that it have a copper bottom. Just think of that as a World's Fair attraction! By the use of a few simple electrical contrivances the waters of the noble Schuylkill might then be boiled. Vapors and rainbows might be had to order; not to mention the sanitary benefits to the people, and convenience to the breweries about Fairmount park. P. S.—If the Philadelphia bowlers had come to time it was my intention while they were here to put them on the ground floor of this scheme, but as they did not arrive and it is plain that great public utilities should take precedence over sports, I now make it public.

Many beautiful floral tributes were furnished by the local designers for the funeral of Mrs. L. E. McComas, wife of U. S. Senator McComas, of Maryland, which was held at the family residence in this city April 16. A carload of designs from Washington and Baltimore friends was sent to Hagerstown, Maryland, where the interment took place.

Geo. H. Phelps, the Blackinton carnation grower who has been suffering for a long time with an abscess, was operated on at the city hospital. He was very low at the time but the doctors give encouraging reports as to his condition and hopes are entertained for a speedy recovery.

A. J. Schmutz, of Arnold place, and F. H. Pratt, of Ashland street, both had a large crop of lilies on time and everything was cleaned up in fine shape.

All florists here enjoyed a good trade at Easter. There was a good call for flowering plants. Azaleas were in large demand. SUBSCRIBER.

CALLA, O.—Richard and Wilbur Templin have sold their greenhouses to Norman Bashinger, of Columbiana, and Charles W. Hendricks of Leetonia, for a consideration not given, and the latter will take actual charge of the seed farm after May 15. The Calla greenhouses were organized thirty years ago by Lewis Templin and have since passed into the hands of his sons and grandson. All of the land, together with twenty greenhouses and eight dwellings, were sold to Mr. Bashinger, cashier of the First National bank at Columbiana, and Mr. Hendricks, teller of the First National bank at Leetonia.

Attention, Florists!

Here is an opportunity to buy material and supplies at such extremely low prices that you must take advantage of it at once. We are headquarters for Boilers, Heating Apparatus, Pipe, Valves, Fittings, Wire, Glass, Sash, and a thousand and one other items that enter into the construction of your Greenhouses. It will pay you to keep in touch with us and advise us of your wants.

When in Chicago be sure to call and see us. Our mammoth plant is the most extensive in the world. Five long distance 'phones, all Yards 827. The 35th street cars pass our doors.

WE OFFER FOR IMMEDIATE ACCEPTANCE:

- 1 72x16 horizontal tubular boiler, in excellent condition, complete with front and all castings and fittings.....$400.00
- 4 60x16, each..... 295.00
- 8 54x16, each..... 225.00
- 3 48x16, each..... 200.00
- 4 42x14, each..... 170.00

And many other sizes.

- 100,000 feet 4-inch boiler tubes, in good condition, overhauled, rattled, squared ends, which we furnish with sleeve couplings, per foot..... .10
- 100,000 ft. of 3 1-2 in. per ft. .08

A million feet of standard black wrought iron pipe, overhauled, with threads and couplings; sizes from 3-8 to 16-inch.

Good second-hand Globe, Angle, Check, Gate and Pressure Valves at low prices.

- 12 carloads galvanized wire, gauges 10 to 14. It is in short lengths, ranging up to 250 feet. One gauge only to a bale. Price per bale of 100 lbs..... 1.40
- Wire Staples, per keg of 100 lbs..... 2.00
- Wire Nails, mixed, all kinds, per 100 lbs..... 1.60

A JOB LOT OF HOSE.

We purchased at sale 50,000 ft. new, 3/4 inch rubber water hose, 50 ft. lengths, complete with couplings, price per length 2.25

Other grades for sale.

CROP INSURANCE.
Life Insurance is valuable because it guarantees the outcome.

"Gurney" Heaters

"BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouse: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expense at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require less attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Putting Cuttings into Pots.

It is now time for the propagation of chrysanthemum stock for June planting to be well along, and if the cuttings are not already in the sand they should be attended to without delay. Give them a good clean sand with a partial shady bench. They will require considerable water and frequent syringings to keep them from wilting from now on, especially so when the shoots on the old stools have been left long enough to get to a considerable length and then the soft tops taken as the cuttings. While these root readily they naturally wilt very much easier than a short jointed cutting taken as soon as large enough at the old stool. If you have a batch in the sand which are now rooted, pot them up without any delay, because if not taken out as soon as rooted they very soon commence to make rapid, wiry growth. The roots become thin and weak and the stem gets hard, with the result that it will take a long time to recover after being potted up.

Early propagated stock which is being grown for exhibition purposes should be potted into larger pots as it requires. Those plants that were potted from the sand in March will now be ready for a repotting into 3½ or 4-inch pots. This will keep them continually in active growth and carry them along until wanted for setting in the beds the last of May or the first week in June. Exhibition specimen bush plants and standards ought at this time to be ready for 8-inch pots. If they are well rooted in the 6-inch pots give them a shift into the 8-inch size, using a medium rich compost, potting good and firm and paying particular attention to see that they get ample drainage. After the repotting it is necessary that the watering be attended to with caution, to allow the roots to recover from the operation and get a firm hold of the new soil. It may be that some of your plants which you figured on making fine specimens, trouble you with constantly going into bud. This is indication enough that they are not adapted for growing into specimen plants. You might succeed in making a presentable plant out of some of these but while you have easier doers which respond readily to this kind of culture it will not pay to bother with those which run continually into bud.

If the standards have attained the required height see that they are securely staked and commence to lay the foundation for the head by paying particular attention to the stopping back. Also keep the main stem clear of lateral growths as far up as you figure on forming the head. After the plants recover from their late repotting they will begin to make rapid growth; give them all the light possible, with plenty of ventilation and syringings to keep the foliage free of thrips and red spider, being careful not to use force enough to injure the branches.

Considering the fact that there will be a large number of those new Australian and other importations grown this season it is well to hear in mind that while they have everything on their side as to size they lack considerable when it comes to fine color and graceful outlines. We have also to figure that many of these monsters are the loose Japanese type which however valuable they may be to the florist who can sell them direct from his greenhouse or as exhibition varieties have so far been found not to be very popular on the open market owing principally to their bruising so easily. And again, in the cultivation of these importations if you do not give them a good long season of growth so that in most cases they will be of sufficient maturity to enable the crown bud to be taken you will be sadly disappointed with them, as a number of them show an open center when the terminal bud is taken.

A great many of the importations are of the same color or nearly so. There are plenty among them of yellow shaded with crimson, crimsons and odd colors, some good pinks, but not a serviceable white unless it is Alice Byron. This is a very pretty thing but it is a little undersized and it takes considerable time before it gets into active growth. Unless particular attention is given it is likely to be weak. The showing the two pink varieties Wm. Duckham and Dr. Enguehard made last fall would indicate that they will prove acceptable. Mrs. Elmer D. Smith and Percy Plumridge also took our fancy from a commercial standpoint. But if anyone expects to figure in the fall shows he will have to stock up with some of the varieties like W. R. Church, Ben Wells, Lord Hopetown, Thomas Humphreys, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Lord Salisbury, Mildred Ware, Gen. Hutton, F. S. Vallis, Leila Filkins, F. A. Cobbold, Don McLeod, S. T. Wright, Lord Alverstone, Mrs. Barclay, Duchess of Sutherland, Mme. Cahuzac, and several others which have great size, a very telling consideration from an exhibition standpoint.

THE CARNATION.

Spring Work.

According to general rule very little night firing for keeping up the temperature in the carnation houses has been found necessary after the middle of April, and then only during intervals of a few nights at a time when there is a sudden drop in the outside temperature which we experience every spring in this part of the country (Illinois). But up to date this season we have had to keep up steam every night owing to the severely cold nights which we are still getting. The night of April 14 the thermometer registered 10° of frost, and while the weather keeps anywhere near as cold as that it will be necessary to fire continually all night. When it commences to warm up a bit, as it is bound to do shortly, watch the outside night temperature closely, and as soon as the thermometer registers below 40° put on a little steam heat, at the same time opening the ventilators just a crack to prevent the temperature of the house running too high. You will find that the plants will continue to keep up active growth longer, therefore prolonging their productiveness. It is also the right way to prevent the plants from getting infested with rust and most other diseases. It is very easily demonstrated to anyone who will take the trouble to enter any greenhouse on a night when the outside temperature is below 40° why for the well being of your plants it is necessary to steam up a little, particularly if the ventilators are closed down tight. It is somewhat like entering a cold storage only a great deal damper.

From this time on the increased output of the carnation growers and possibly a slackening up in the demand will cause the returns to be considerable less than they have been, and consequently we are likely enough to let up a little in the care of the plants and not pay such a close attention to disbudding and other little things, which will not help matters at all but only make them worse. It is better by far to figure a little on the staying qualities during the hot weather of the varieties which you are growing, hanging on to those which have proved their merit as hot weather bloomers, keeping up your vigilance on them and to throw out those which have done their work for this season, using the room for something else. There are very few places that cannot make good use of an empty bench in a carnation house at this time of the year.

It is a good chance to pot up your chrysanthemum stock or a fine place for the young roses, or to spread out the carnation plants intended for growing indoors all summer. Speaking of indoor grown carnations, if you have them well established in 3-inch pots and figure on planting them on the benches in June you will greatly benefit them and go a long way toward making a complete success of indoor culture by potting them up into 4-inch pots as soon as possible. In fact, if they are well rooted in the soil in the pots they are now in it is absolutely necessary that they be shifted into a larger size to keep them in active growth and to carry them along to the time you are ready to set them into the benches. To pot them up use a live soil, but not too rich, adding some well rotted manure, about one part to five of soil, and placing a little rough material in the bottom of the pots for drainage. Care must be exercised in watering directly after potting to prevent them from being overwatered, it being the nature of the carnation to absorb large quantities of water. At no stage of its growth can it be as plainly seen as at this time, when being in pots for growing inside, the extra width and the more succulent nature of the foliage shows the abundance of water the plants carry. There is a safe limit beyond which the plants very soon show signs of disease.

The young plants which are intended for planting in the field should be gradually hardened off now. They should be kept a little on the dry side and the ventilators kept open as much as is safe both day and night to prevent their being at all soft when the time comes to set them out, while it is a good plan to get them into the ground as soon as possible to enable them to get a good hold on the soil before the hot weather sets in, particularly in places where there are no means of giving them any water while in the field. At the same time it would be foolish to begin to plant outside at a certain date this year because you planted on that date last year, not taking into consideration how backward this season is. I much prefer to wait a week or ten days longer to give the ground a chance to warm up a bit. The young plants will take hold all the better for it.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Senator Francis G. Newlands.

Senator Newlands, of Nevada, whose portrait is given herewith, is the author of a bill, previously mentioned in these columns, which has passed the senate for the preservation of the mall, the largest park in Washington, D. C., from the encroachment of government buildings. The senator believes that government building should be erected on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue.

WILLIMANTIC, CONN.—William Dawson, of Providence, has leased the greenhouse of Thomas W. Southward on Pleasant street and will assume charge immediately. Mr. Southward will return to Boston, where he is interested in the glass business.

PALMS AND FERNS.

Sundry Fern Notes.

In addition to the extensive use of small ferns for filling table ferneries and in table and mantel arrangements in connection with cut flowers, there are also many ferns used in conservatory work, especially in those conservatories in which rockwork finds a place. In those ornamental constructions of tufa and other stones there are many crannies and corners for which ferns are especially adapted, and in which these plants will flourish, and for such a work a greater variety of ferns may be used to advantage than in filling the small table ferneries. If there is a miniature waterfall among the rocks and the house is a rather damp and shady one there may even be the possibility of using some of those particularly beautiful, though tender, filmy ferns, many of them not needing much heat, but insisting upon moisture and shade.

The common Killarney fern, Trichomanes radicans belongs among this group and is by no means difficult to grow, provided that it gets a cool, moist atmosphere and an open fibrous compost, the heat of our summers being rather detrimental than otherwise to this and many other ferns that grow in more temperate climates. The lovely Todea superba, the fronds of which remind one of an ostrich plume of delicate green, is also one of the gems for occasional use, though not one to be recommended for indiscriminate planting in rockwork. Several of the maidenhairsts grow well in a rockwork, and as all are beautiful one cannot make a mistake on that score. The common Adiantum Capillus-Veneris or some of its many varieties may be used freely, but as some of these are nearly deciduous, one needs to be a little careful as to where they are placed. The variety of this fern known as A. fissum is a very pretty dwarf form with finely cut foliage, the latter being thrown up from creeping stems that are produced very freely. This fern only grows a few inches in height and should be placed accordingly. Of the strong growing adiantums one of the most beautiful for conservatory planting is A. cardiochlena, also known as A. polyphyllum, a fern that will grow to a height of four feet under favorable circumstances, and if it may be placed near to a waterfall, where some of the splashing will strike the foliage, this fern seems especially happy. A. cuneatum will of course be remembered in everyone's list, and A. decorum is another excellent species of very similar habit to the foregoing, but a rather stronger grower.

A. colpodes is another species that is well adapted for the rockwork, having long graceful fronds and a very free habit of growth, spreading quite rapidly by means of underground rhizomes or creeping stems. Then there are several of the davallias that grow well under such conditions, D. tenuifolia stricta being the first to come to mind, a sturdy fern of reasonably quick growth and good habit, and one that has enjoyed a very large sale among the trade in years past. The Japanese D. bullata, a variety of which is so largely imported in the form of fern balls and also in the shape of various fabulous birds and beasts, may also be used in the rockery, but it must be remembered that this fern too is naturally deciduous, so it is not well to depend too much upon it for winter decoration.

INTERIOR OF PARK FLORAL COMPANY'S STORE, DENVER, COL.

Davallia pallida and D. solida are both admirable among the strong growing sorts, their fronds often reaching three to four feet in length on well-established plants, and D. Canariensis is another attractive member of the hare's foot ferns, the creeping stems being quite large and reminding one very much of the animal for which they have been named.

One of the most interesting of the dwarf ferns is also found in this genus in the form of D. parvula, the fronds of which are rarely more than two inches high and frequently much less, while D. Tyermanni is a larger species that has rather prominent rhizomes and pretty dark green fronds with a lighter stripe down the middle. Blechnum orientale is a bright little fern, the young fronds of which often come up pink, ultimately turning to glossy dark green, the stems of the fronds being pinkish or red, and adding to the effectiveness of the plant. This fern is not a very large grower, the fronds often being six to ten inches long, and the spores come up quite readily, thus making it an easy fern to increase. Hypolepis distans is a very beautiful fern with long and finely divided fronds, of much substance; and is also one that is well adapted for cool house culture, growing stronger and being less likely to be attacked by insects under such conditions than if grown in too high a temperature.

H. distans may be readily propagated by division or by spores, the division of the roots being best done in the early spring at the time active growth begins. Fadyenia prolifera is one of the curiosities of the fern family, reminding one of the walking leaf of our northern woods in its habit of starting a young plant from the tip of a mature leaf, the fadyenia bearing some resemblance to the latter in its long, simple or spear shaped leaves, but being a smaller plant and less robust in growth. The pteris family will naturally suggest themselves to anyone likely to plant an indoor rockery from the fact that they are so free growing and so plentiful in the market, and of these ferns P. argyræa and P. Cretica albolineata must surely be included on account of their finely variegated foliage and free growth, the first named being rather rampant when planted out in favorable surroundings, while P. Cretica albolineata goes not grow nearly so large, and will flourish under very adverse circumstances. Some of the varieties of P. serrulata will be needed in addition to the type, the variations of this species being quite a catalogue in themselves, and many of them very beautiful. Several of the nephrolepis family may also be used, these sword ferns being remarkably easy to manage and easy to increase, and of the smaller growing species N. pectinata and N. Philippensis are good as is also N. Duffii, the latter being a dwarf crested variety, while the ordinary Boston fern and its various progeny may all be used in beautifying a rockery, in filling a hanging basket, or grown in a pot or pan, and in each case will prove among the most satisfactory ferns for the conservatory.

The Greenhouse Leaf-Tyer.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I would like to make inquiries through your paper what remedy can be used to get rid of a small grayish miller that causes quite a little damage among the plants such as cannas, ageratum, chrysanthemums, etc. The millers lay their eggs under the leaves and when hatched form a small worm that seems to eat or riddle the leaves completely. I have tried almost everything I can think of and nothing seems to kill them. I would like to know if there are any other florists that are troubled with this pest. Specimens are forwarded under a separate cover.

W.

This pest is known as the greenhouse leaf-tyer of which F. H. Chittenden, assistant entomologist of the Department of Agriculture, writes as follows:

One of the most troublesome of all known enemies of violets and other ornamental plants when once it obtains foothold in a conservatory is the greenhouse leaf-tyer, the larva of a small moth, now known as Phlyctænia rubigalis Gn., but formerly as P. ferrugalis Hbn.

Until within recent years only a few instances of injury by this species had come to our knowledge or been brought to public notice. During the past four years, however, its depredations have attracted attention in widely separated localities, and it is evident that this insect has now become established as a pest more than periodically injurious. As such it is entitled to somewhat extended notice. The greenhouse leaf-tyer, as its name would suggest, is more particularly annoying to ornamental plants grown in greenhouses; but its injuries do not cease here, since the larva work also in the field—celery, beets, cabbage and tobacco, among crop plants, being most often affected.

NATURE OF INJURY.

The usual manner of work of the larva is upon the underside of a leaf. Fair specimens of larval injury to violets as shown by photographs on file, show that the leaves of the plants were eaten out in holes on the under surface, leaving the upper epidermis intact and this is the manner of injury to many other plants. Some plants, however, are eaten entirely through and some are skeletonized. Occasionally larvæ, when numerous, feed upon the upper surfaces of the leaves, but this is exceptional. The normal habit of the larva in feeding is to fasten together two contiguous leaves, to curl over the edge of a single leaf upon which it may be feeding, or to spin about itself a thin, filmy web within which to feed.

In close confinement a few larvæ will in a very short time devour and destroy their food plant. In one experiment in rearing this species at this office, larvæ completely destroyed a large pot of violets in ten days.

HABITS OF THE LARVA.

Soon after the hatching, the larva begins feeding, at first cutting little patches of parenchyma from the under surface of the leaves, leaving the upper epidermis intact. A few days later it usually seeks concealment by drawing together by means of its fine silken webbing portions of a leaf or two leaves that happen to be contiguous.

The terminal leaves of such creeping plants as the wandering jew appear most subject to attack, while the lower leaves of taller plants are most injured. As in the case of many other greenhouse insects, the larvæ prefer secluded places, and plants growing in shady locations are most affected.

When full grown the larva prepares for pupation in different ways. Sometimes it will spin up between two leaves, but more often rolls up a pupa case at the edge of a leaf, if the leaf be large, cutting a slit usually on one or both sides before drawing the leaf over itself. The interior it lines with a thin silken membrane, and within the cocoon thus formed changes to pupa.

Individuals that were observed in May would be feeding one day and the next would form their pupa case and the same or the next day would transform.

HABITS OF THE MOTH.

As has already been stated, the moths fly just before sundown. Indoors they rest during the daytime on the lower surface of the leaves of their food plants and other low-growing plants and doubtless remain thus for many hours at a time unless disturbed. When disturbed they fly only a very short distance before they alight and at once seek the underside of a leaf again. They fly low and if along the ground they alight only to again fly up until the underside of a leaf is found. In these habits they resemble many other moths that could be mentioned.

REMEDIES.

Hand-picking.—The greenhouse leaf-tyer can be controlled in greenhouses by hand-picking or trimming away and destroying all infested leaves or other portions of plants as often as they are detected. This has been successfully practiced in a number of cases, one of which has already been mentioned, but it is somewhat laborious. A correspondent wrote in regard to this species that he entirely rid his greenhouse of it in one season by hand picking.

Attracting moths to lights.—Another method of checking the increase of the species is by attracting the moths to lights placed in the greenhouses at night. This method is in practice by at least one of our correspondents, who reports that it affords some relief. Lights to be most successful should be placed over vessels of water on which a thin scum of kerosene is floating. In any case a careful lookout should be kept for this and other insects which injure the plant by eating its leaves.

Arsenical spray.—Paris green or other arsenical would, if applied at the outset of the attack, effect the destruction of the larvæ, but it has not been ascertained by practical experience whether or not such a spray would destroy the more mature larvæ. Owing to their more or less protected manner of working, it would probably not do so effectually. An underspraying is, of course, a necessity. This and hand methods are about the only remedies applicable to celery beds and elsewhere out-of-doors. An objection to the use of Paris green on violets and some other greenhouse plants is that the plants have to be syringed every few days for protection against the so-called "red spider," and this would wash away the arsenite. Another is that a poisonous wash could not be used when the plants are in bloom. It might also injure the foliage of certain tender plants. It is better to use some remedy that will at the same time destroy other insects with which the greenhouse may be affected.

Tobacco as a greenhouse fumigant.—The most widely useful insecticide for greenhouse fumigation is tobacco in its various forms. In many instances it is without doubt the cheapest and safest insecticide to use against certain greenhouse insects, particularly plant-lice. Its effectiveness, however, under the best conditions is not great, as it requires repeated use at short intervals. Moreover, it may cause serious injury to some plants. On the other hand, tobacco may prove injurious to the foliage and flowers of certain plants such as violets, by bringing on epidemics of spot. Tobacco is also useless against scale insects in general and mealy bugs.

Hydrocyanic-acid gas treatment.—At present the most satisfactory manner of dealing with this and similar pests is by means of hydrocyanic-acid gas which has been developed as a medium for the fumigation of insect-infested greenhouse plants by the Division of Vegetable Physiology and Pathology of this department, having been used under the direction of A. F. Woods in 1894, and later by Mr. Woods and by P. H. Dorsett. This remedy has proved particularly effective against the present species on violets and against aphides on similar greenhouse flowers, and has the advantage of being useful against all other insects except the so-called red spider, which it does not entirely destroy, but it can not yet be safely used for the fumigation of certain other plants owing to the danger of bleaching and otherwise injuring them; hence it will be wise, before undertaking fumigation on a large scale on other plants which will be mentioned, to first try this remedy experimentally on a few plants and in a small way.

Central Indiana is now pretty well supplied with interurban railways, and when one wishes to make several towns in one day they furnish an excellent means of traveling, for since they run on hourly schedules (or better) very little time is lost in making connections.

After the rush of Easter I felt that a few days rest would do me no harm, and I could think of nothing better than visiting some of my brother florists. Our first stop was at Tipton to visit J. H. Bornhoeft. We were sorry to find that Mr. Bornhoeft was absent. Roses, carnations, bedding plants and Asparagus Sprengerii were the principal things grown and they looked well considering the houses they were grown in.

An hour later found me in Elwood, where we first visited Mrs. May Bradley's place. She reported a fine Easter trade and she has been well satisfied with business all winter. In close proximity to Mrs. Bradley's houses is the establishment of A. Duebendorfer. Here we found an up-to-date, neatly kept little place and a stock of Boston ferns that were very fine. He is fortunate to be located on the main street where the city and interurban cars pass every few minutes. Mr. Duebendorfer came to Elwood from Iowa last June and seems well satisfied with business in his present location. Mr. and Mrs. Duebendorfer are very pleasant and hospitable people and it is a pleasure to florists to meet with such cordial greeting.

From Elwood I made my way to Anderson to visit the greenhouses of Stuart & Haugh. Mr. Stuart was as busy as one man could be, but he took time enough to show me through his plant, which was in good order. This is the home of Avondale, a sport from old Armazindy, which is still grown in large quantities. Their carnations, with few exceptions, looked well. I noticed an exceptionally fine lot of geraniums in 4-inch pots for the retail trade. I did not have time to visit any of the other Anderson florists as I had an engagement at Indianapolis for early in the evening.

At Indianapolis I saw the Moonlight and Indianapolis carnations growing in their own homes for the third time this winter. The more I see of Moonlight the more I am convinced of its commercial value. It is a pure white of the largest size, fine calax, extra long, stiff, wiry mas blooms? We want to do this, but are told by some parties that in forcing freshly imported pips immediately on arrival so small a percentage will flower at Christmas and so many of the pips will spoil in the forcing that handling in this way is not profitable. We would like to hear from some of your well posted readers in answer to this. S. & G.

Lily of the valley can be forced profitably for Christmas flowering if it is the right kind, Berlin pips, and then they must have at least three to four days' frost to give the desired result. But to run no chances, and only with a little addition in the price nowadays, why not use cold storage pips, and have flowers and also plenty of foliage, which is just as important as the flowers? The latter will need less heat.

Paying Taxes on Plants.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We are seeking information whether florists are subject to being taxed on greenhouse stock, or the growing plants. We have paid taxes on the stock for seven years and it is as much on the stock as on the real estate. A. G.

Laelio-Cattleya Dr. Schiffmann.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society of England Sander & Sons exhibited a number of hybrid orchids, among them the subject of this note, named in compliment to Dr. Schiffmann, of St. Paul, Minn. One of the English journals describes the plant as follows: "Laelio-Cattleya × Dr. R. Schiffmann (L.-C. × callistoglossa × C. Mendeli), the plant of which, though scarcely developed, showed flowers approaching the beautiful L.-C. × callistoglossa, but with thicker texture, the front of the labellum being of a rich purplish claret, the sepals and petals white, tinged with purple."

stem and a good healthy grower. Its only fault seems to be that a small per cent of the flowers come single in the dark days of winter. I consider this variety worthy a trial. At Baur & Smith's, Indianapolis, was seen, as usual, a good supply of flowers. Most of the plants, however, were trimmed hard for cuttings and at this time did not show up quite as well as in February. But I think enough of this variety to have ordered as much of it as of any new variety this season. It can be brought in crop early and is a continuous bloomer throughout the season. The store men inform me it is a good keeper. I think it will prove a money maker.

On my way back I stopped to see E. A. Nelson, the president of the State Florists' Association. This is where the Mrs. E. A. Nelson carnation originated and it is surely at home here for such a sight of buds and blooms could hardly be excelled. If we could all grow this variety as it is done here we would hardly want anything else in this color. Mr. Nelson had the misfortune some time ago to have his houses flooded so that fires could not be kept up. This was hard on his rose stock and is the cause of a bad case of mildew. But the new growth is now coming clean and he hopes to have them in shape again soon. Mr. Nelson has about 30,000 feet of glass and he has worked up a retail trade to take all he can produce. At the time of my visit I saw a wagon-load of flowers sent out to one funeral.

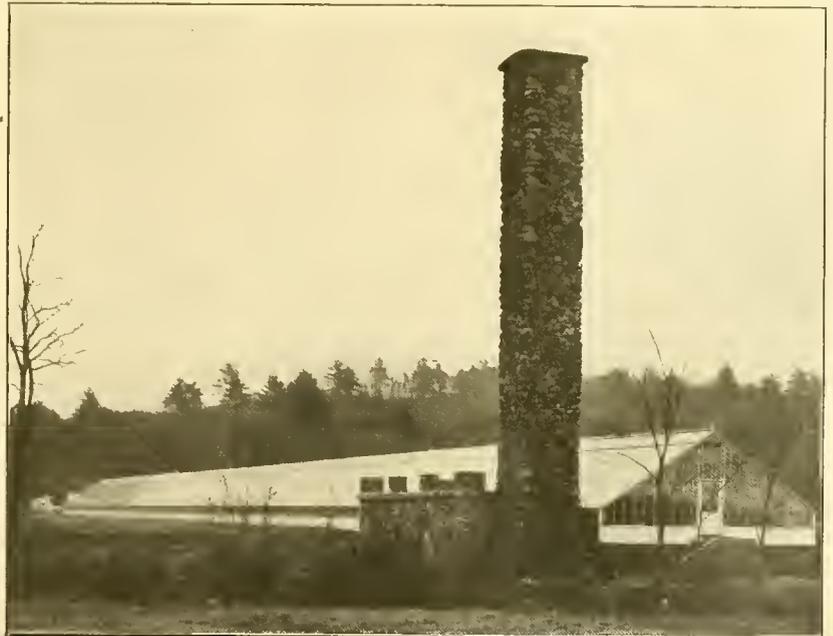

It was my intention to visit other florists in Indianapolis, but I was called home on important business. I shall have to make another visit to Indianapolis to see what the rest of the boys are doing. W. W. COLES.

them to the full sun, have some ashes under the pots and see that the drainage is good. Top-dress the plants with a good layer of stable manure, not too fresh. Water freely daily and they should grow luxuriantly. Shift them into a size larger pot in September and they should make fine stock for next Easter's forcing. WM. K. HARRIS.

CATTLEYA CITRINA is now in season. A few plants with their pendulous flowers of waxy yellow will always attract attention in the window and will last in good condition for a long period.

A WELL-MANAGED show window is a prime investment and unexcelled as a business getting advertisement. A large and costly display is not essential; indeed over crowding should be avoided at all times. Something odd or unusual will attract attention where a profuse display of familiar objects will not. It matters little what it is only that it be out of the ordinary line or noticeably unseasonable and that it be given the "center of the stage" to itself. A fine orchid in bloom, a few anthurium flowers or Barberton daisies are suggestions and these all have good lasting qualities.

A LARGE circular space in the floor of Galvin's Tremont street flower store in Boston, is arranged for convenience in washing plants. Sloping slightly to the center it is connected with the sewer pipe and the hose can be turned on with impunity. For syringing and freshening up decorative palms and such material it is especially useful and convenient. A new tessellated floor is being laid in the store. The pieces are of rubber instead of the tile commonly used and it is said will last a hundred years. It can be taken up without injury and relaid in case of removal to another store. The bill will be about $2,000.

Hoagland-Godfrey Wedding Decoration.

The Hoagland-Godfrey wedding decoration on April 21, was the most elaborate of the season in New York or, in fact, in the United States. The work was done by Thorley and, as there was no stint in regard to expenditure, every effort was made and with success, to produce a unique and beautiful floral scene. St. Bartholomew's church never looked prettier. On each side of the centre aisle throughout its entire length were placed "torchers," each seven to ten feet high and crowned at the top with a cluster of 500 long-stemmed Bride roses with a kentia on the centre. On the pew ends, underneath these immense standards, were tied large bunches of white stock with wide white ribbon.

The capitals of the great onyx pillars were adorned with masses of hydrangeas and lilies, arranged in wire frames shaped like window boxes, from which hung long pendants of English ivy, producing a very rich effect. A wide hedge of white extended across the entire front of the chancel. The front row was of white azaleas, back of which were white hydrangeas interspersed with daisies, the whole backed with tall specimen kentias. The kneeling bench was elaborated into a rich bed of yellow pansies, the favorite flower of the bride, sufficient space being covered with white satin as a protection for the bride's dress. The altar was adorned with massive vases of longiflorum lilies.

White sweet peas and gardenias were the components of the bridal bouquet, which was made in eight separate sections which were distributed after the ceremony among the bridesmaids. In one of the sections was concealed a ring which was supposed to insure its lucky possessor as the next in line for matrimonial joys.

The decorations of the house were on a similar scale of magnificence. Large vases each holding fifty American Beauty roses, bedded in Adiantum Farleyense were on the mantels. The base of the staircase on the first floor was bowered in a mass of Crimson Rambler roses. The first landing above was similarly adorned with Ulrich Brunner, the next with bougainvilleas and the highest with jonquils and daffodils. The rooms leading from each landing were decorated in the same colors.

Mirrors and doorways were garlanded with Crimson Rambler and other roses. The bride received in an arbor of palms gracefully surmounted by a semi-arch of Spiraea prunifolia and apple blossoms. One of the reception rooms was done exclusively in Liberty roses so arranged as to represent standards in bloom, each bearing 500 blossoms.

IRONDEQUOIT, N. Y.—The blizzard of April 20 caught many of the gardeners of Irondequoit unprepared to battle with such cold weather, some of them having but little coal on hand. In some instances the snow is so heavy it breaks the glass in the hot beds.

Chicago.

The market has been in an unsettled condition for a week, some days bringing spurts in business, both shipping and local, and others remarkably quiet. It is the beginning of the annual spring quiet and the trade is resigned, everyone being apparently satisfied. There is plenty of good stock in the market, too much, in fact, for the small demands. Rose prices are unstable and carnations have eased up considerably. Green goods continue scarce, ferns and smilax really being the only marked scarcity in the market. Another advance in fern prices is noted, some dealers asking as high as $5 per 1,000.

There was an enthusiastic attendance at the special meeting of the Florists' Club bowlers at the Geroux alleys Tuesday evening, April 26. Everyone took part in the discussion of the plans for selecting the team that is to battle for Chicago at the S. A. F. tourney at St. Louis at convention time. The committee, P. J. Hauswirth, George Asmus and George Stollery, who have the final arrangements in hand, will submit a report at the next meeting, Tuesday evening, May 3. A preliminary tournament will be played in the near future for the purpose of sifting out the available timber.

Poehlmann Brothers Company will soon commence operations on the building and rebuilding of many of the greenhouses at Morton Grove. Fifteen houses will be rebuilt and equipped with iron gutters. Seven new houses will be constructed. Two of these will be devoted to asparagus growing which the company will try this year for the first time. The other houses will be used for carnations and smilax. In all about 150,000 feet of glass will be added.

The spring meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association will be held this (Saturday) afternoon in the south parlor of the Auditorium hotel at 2:30. Clinton Rodgers Woodruff, of Philadelphia, president of the association, will be the guest of honor. A social hour will follow the meeting.

The daily papers chronicle the suit in trover for $2,000 which was filed against Oscar J. Friedman in the superior court last week. John G. Crawford is the complainant. The plaintiff's attorney states that the suit is for the recovery of money said to have been found by the defendant.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Union on Monday ordered the ultimatum sent to Governor Yates that unless their demands were acceded to before May 4 a strike of the gardeners and florists of the West Park systems would take place that day.

John T. Muir will soon move his retail flower store to his new building at Grand boulevard and Forty-seventh street. His old place at 3530 Michigan avenue will be sold. Mr. Muir has the management of the estate of S. Muir.

Nearly 100 boys and girls of Buena Park have organized themselves into a movement to beautify the suburb. The name of the organization is the Young People's Auxiliary of the Buena Park Citizens' Association.

Axel Hallstrom, formerly head gardener for J. J. Hill, St. Paul, Minn., was a visitor this week. He spent part of the winter at Fort Pierce, Fla., and will return there next week to engage in fruit growing.

Miss Nellie C. Moore, of Batavia, will shortly move to Morton Grove, where she will go into the wholesale growing business. She will start with 10,000 feet of glass.

Phil Hauswirth will go to Quincy to-night (Saturday), where he will attend the state convention of Red Men.

J. A. Budlong handled a quantity of New Orleans peonies this week. His American Beauty stock is specially fine.

Hocking Valley coal is now $3 a ton within the shipping limits, but the price is liable to change at any time.

Mrs. J. B. Deamud and little son have gone to Cairo, Mich., where they will spend the summer on the farm.

C. Cropp has been elected trustee of Western Springs and J. S. Wilson president of the school board.

The Florists' Club meetings hereafter will be held on the second and fourth Thursdays of the month.

A carload of palms was shipped from Vaughan's Greenhouses to St. Louis early in the week.

Alex. Newett, of J. B. Deamud's, is ill with lumbago at the home of his mother-in-law at Joliet.

The Fleischman Floral Company has moved from State street to 3 Jackson boulevard.

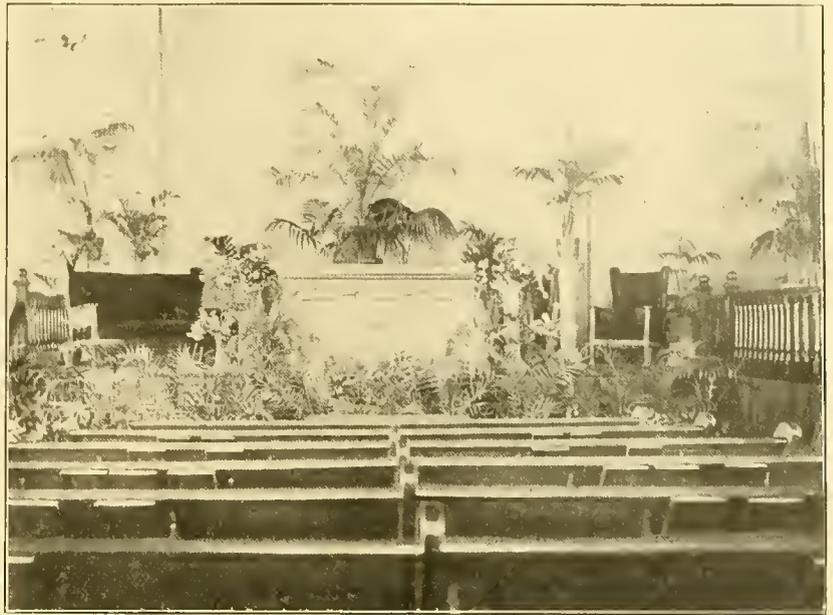

R. Schmidt, of Riverside, who has been ill with pneumonia is now improving.

Visitors this week were John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; L. A. Jennings, New Castle, Ind., and Robert L. Graham, Baltimore, Md.

New York.

The present week sees a most decisive fall-down for the cut flower market. Warmer skies have pushed along the tardy buds, and many houses, of roses especially, are now in full crop. Under the favoring conditions the proportion of first-class blooms produced in comparison with the cheaper grades is much larger than is the case at any other season. The result is a surplus of the higher grades and a weakening of their value. It is not unusual for high-class American Beauty to be bought now and one-third or one-half of the big stem to be cut off and thrown away. Beauty is still suffering to some extent from the presence of the Brunner in the market. The choicest thing in roses just at present is the crested moss, of which many beautiful bunches are seen. Carnations are hardly up to the quality of the early April product. Many "sleepy" specimens are in evidence and phenomenally large or otherwise fine flowers are not plentiful. Bulbous stock is rapidly waning. Narcissi in the choicest trumpet varieties are splendid and are favored, as they deserve, by the large retail establishments, where they are used for window adornment with fine effect, and find ready sale for use in vases and bowls, loosely arranged. Violets are nearing their end. Many shippers have discontinued sending. The flowers seen are generally of poor quality, feeble and emaciated looking. For good ones a good price is now assured. Trailing arbutus of particularly bright color is very abundant this week.

Hitchings & Company are busy in the building line. At the present time they have contracts on hand for F. A. Day, Newton Mass., range of houses; J. B. Case, Weston, Mass., three houses; Mr. Bigelow, Cohasset, Mass., range of houses; F. Peabody, Jr., Hyde Park, Mass., range of houses; Mr. Erwin and C. E. McIntosh, Holyoke, Mass., one house each; E. W. H. Siebrecht has purchased the fine estate of the late J. E. Lockwood, opposite his place at Astoria, and will utilize it in the extension of his present business facilities. It is one of the finest pieces of property in Astoria.

The Wm. Stuart Allen Company has been incorporated and will carry on a wholesale cut flower business as successors to W. S. Allen at 53 W. Twenty-eighth street. W. S. Allen is president of the company.

At the next meeting of the Florists' Club, Monday evening, May 9, there will be a special exhibition of bedding plants and all having novelties in this line are invited to show them.

Wm. Ghormley has been confined to his house since Tuesday with a painful affection of the eyes. Mr. Ghormley celebrated his birthday last Friday.

John N. May has returned from the south greatly improved in health.

NOTES.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Cut Flower Exchange will be held May 7. All stockholders are requested to be present or to send proxies, so a quorum will be assured. At this meeting five directors will be voted for in place of John Johnson (deceased), Chas. Smith, Philip Miller, Wm. C. Duncan and John Taylor.

F. Neipp, of Aqueduct, has leased the greenhouse establishment of John Hopkins. Mr. Neipp intends growing carnations exclusively as the ground there is very suitable for them. Mr. Hopkins' ill-health unfits him to attend to business and he will seek a rest for some time to come.

Charles Lustgarten, of Astoria, will shortly move into his new house at Elmhurst. Mr. Lustgarten is building several greenhouses embodying the very latest ideas in construction. He grows an enormous quantity of bulbous flowers.

Miss Louise Muller, daughter of J. H. Muller, of 55 Stuyvesant avenue, Brooklyn, who has a store on Gates avenue, was married to John Stokes, of Brooklyn, last Wednesday evening.

Wm. H. Brower's Sons have leased a new store between Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth streets and Fifth avenue and will vacate their Broadway store.

Gustave C. C. Schrader had a midnight prowler in his greenhouses last Sunday night and finds himself minus $15 worth of smilax.

E. Bonnot, of the firm of Bonnot Brothers, intends making extensive alterations at his greenhouses in Flemington, N. J.

Frank Wiseman, of Dutch Kills, forged the name of Wm. H. Siebrecht to a check last week, and as a consequence is in the lock-up.

Philadelphia.

A burst of warm weather last Monday livened things up with the bedding plant men and started their stock moving with a rush. It is astonishing to see the amount of bedding and rose plants that are now crowding houses that the last week of March were crammed to the doors with Easter stock. James Cole, of Walnut and Fifty-fifth streets, is especially strong on geraniums, his stock running into the thousands, and mostly grown in 4 inch pots. There is also a fine variety of other bedding plants. George Carpenter also has a large and well-grown assortment. All the popular varieties of bedding stock in the houses and frames full outside are only waiting a few days of continued sunshine to set them free. Jacob Becker is very busy with his pot roses. He makes a specialty of this, growing his stock from cuttings and doing but little with imported stock. He has the largest and most varied stock in the city. This year he is also growing quantities of bedding stock.

Business in the stores has been quiet the last week and stock is plentiful. There has been a great fall in the price of Beauty roses, the best being now offered at $2 per dozen. Liberty specials bring as much, although some choice stock is seen at $15. Carnations are beginning to pile up; the specials, particularly the Lawson, are feeling the effects of the strong sun which, coming after a couple of cloudy days, scorches and bleaches the edges of the flowers. There are some home-grown daffodils about, and although most of the Southern stock is out of the way it is hard to get a price, as the public is now used to extremely low prices and rebels against any advance. Snapdragon is now very fine and is seen in all the windows. $1 to $1.50 per dozen sprays is the price. This week will about wind up the violets. The stock now coming in has fragrance, being very sweet, but double quantity has to be put into a bunch to make up the size.

Edwin Lonsdale, who last week made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, has been appointed superintendent of the grounds at Girard college, to succeed the late George Huster. This is an important position, as the lawns and flower beds about the institution have been noted for their high state of perfection. That this state of affairs will continue under the new management goes without saying, as Mr. Lonsdale is an admirer of just such work and always took great pride in keeping his own grounds thoroughly up-to-date. A special meeting of the Florists' Club was called to endorse him for the position, but after the resolutions were passed it was announced that he had already been tendered and accepted the position.

"S. S. Pennock, 'the' wholesale florist of Philadelphia," is the wording on a lead pencil being distributed to the trade by this enterprising gentleman. Nothing like using the proper word in the proper place.

President and Mrs. Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, Mich., were in town on April 27 attending the wedding of the latter's brother, which took place that evening.

W. C. Murray, of Atco, N. J., is still sending in fine mignonette. He also does the Queen Louise carnation fine and says it is one of his most profitable whites.

Felix Myers, late of Robert Craig & Son, has opened a retail establishment at Haverford avenue and Fifty-second street.

John G. Lamb, 210 South Fourth street, has been appointed assignee of Edwin Lonsdale's estate. K.

After a week of very gratifying activity the cut flower trade shows evidences of depression. Spring-like weather is pushing the crops along, and stock on hand is accumulating with the wholesalers while prices are beginning to take a downward course. As a rule the quality is good as received, but the street fakirs seem to get a line on some pretty poor material, which shows that it has been kept in storage somewhere and withheld from the street men as long as it was in respectable condition. And this is a pretty good policy.

W. E. Doyle arranged the decorations for the Clark-Andrew wedding, which has been generally commented on as one of the richest floral displays of the season. The church decorations were very lavish, including large groups of palms and azaleas and heavy bunches of longiflorum lilies on the pew ends along the center aisle. The pulpit was almost buried in lilies and asparagus. At the residence the reception canopy was made of asparagus and Bride roses. The various rooms were adorned in separate colors, according to the fashion now prevailing, one in pink roses, one in daffodils, one in lilies. The breakfast table had American Beauty and lily of the valley, and the dining room white lilacs.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on Wednesday evening, April 20, was very well-attended, there being about fifty gentlemen present to listen to Peter Fisher's paper on "The Carnation," and a very interesting discussion followed. The next step in the onward course of this organization is for all these gentlemen who find it an interesting and helpful institution to enroll their names as members and assist as best they can the good work of rehabilitation now so auspiciously under way.

Mrs. Carroll, mother-in-law of Ed. Welch, of Welch Bros., died on Saturday, April 23, from the effects of a stroke of paralysis.

The weather theme is one of which all get heartily tired, but its intimate connection with the cultivator's hopes, results, successes or failures, makes it foremost in thought and speech. Yesterday we thought summer had come and to stay, and the general belief founded on experience is that it is likely now to come at once and stay long, and probably torrid and dry. The thermometer went above 80° in the shade and people began to seek the shady side of the street and contemplate adjournment to the ice boxes. But to-day (April 26) we are back in March, low temperatures and chilling winds with raw edges being on abundant tap. The month has been the coldest April on record, and all garden work is backward. Within the week there has been ice several mornings, and such crops as are in the ground have suffered more or less.

Business is restricted largely to funeral work, though there have been several weddings with good floral decorations. The hospital trade is a feature with the Baltimore florists. This city is the seat of medical and surgical institutions renowned, with their physicians and surgeons the world around, and patients come hither from every direction for treatment. Naturally this involves the use of many flowers sent or ordered by friends, largely by 'phone or telegraph, as messages of cheer, hopefulness or congratulation, and this factor adds considerably to the cut flower business.

Trade is rather languishing. For a few days last week there was some animation, but it hardly held and towards Saturday evening it was hard to close out the stock in hand except by accepting prices abnormally depressed. Cut flowers increase in supply. Roses are overabundant; carnations are hardly in excess of calls, except for one or two days in the week. Violets are practically over. Greens continue scarce.

The war department has authorized the decoration of the grounds at Fort McHenry near this city by the planting of flower beds, and the proper officer will make requisition on the United States department of agriculture for flower seeds, etc. This is a new combination—Mars and Flora!

The Pennsylvania Railroad Co., on its Baltimore division, has practically abandoned the use of flower beds at the stations along its line, substituting groups and borders of hardy flowering shrubs. The work seems to be in suitable hands, as the effects are very satisfactory.

One or two of the Charles street flower stores have been unusually bright this week, their windows massed with fine specimens of azaleas, hydrangeas, lilies, etc.

Robert L. Graham, Old York road, has been called to Chicago to the bedside of a brother critically ill with Bright's disease.

Mrs. Wm. McRoberts is seeking to lease her greenhouse plant at Govans-town.

The parks and city squares are gay with multicolored hyacinth and tulip beds.

Thos. H. Patterson, Old York road, is offering his property for sale. S. B.

Washington, D. C.

Business has been good during the last week and prices are holding up well. There has been considerable official entertaining, a number of weddings, club dinners and lesser social events. There is an abundance of good stock on the market. From quite cool weather the thermometer on April 25 jumped up to 86° in the shade at noon followed by rain in the evening. This was welcome to those growers who have been planting out, as the ground was very dry. The following prices prevail: American Beauty roses, $3 to $9 per dozen; Bride, Bridesmaid and other roses, $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen; carnations, 50 cents to $1 per dozen; violets 50 cents per bunch of fifty; Harrisii lilies, cut, $1.50 per dozen; callas $1.50 per dozen; tulips, 50 cents and 75 cents per dozen; daffodils, 50 cents per dozen; valley, $1 per dozen; sweet peas, 50 cents per bunch.

Representative Daniels, of California, has introduced in the house, by request, a bill providing for the purchase for government purposes of all the land south of Pennsylvania avenue extending west from the capitol to the white house grounds, and south as far as the mall. The bill also provides for a new plan of botanical gardens and for the construction of model exhibit buildings therein. It is improbable that any action will be taken on the bill during the few remaining days of the session. A merry row is on over the location of the new agricultural building and it looks as though the final selection of a site will be with President Roosevelt.

Representative Wadsworth, chairman of the house committee on agriculture, is quoted as saying in reference to the vista for which the Newlands bill provides: "All this new fangled business may sound fine enough, but I don't know anything that would look prettier or more inviting than a beautiful parkling with winding paths and roads. I see the senate has passed a bill extending the mall to 860 feet wide, but this bill will never get through the house. There is no use for such a wide affair, and it will never get through the house."

The Florists' Club, which has been in a dormant state for about nine months, will meet on Wednesday evening, May 4, at Schmidt's hall, 516 Ninth street, N. W. There will be an election of officers, and quite a number of new members will be admitted, so I am informed. The license tax of $15 for each place of business is an annoyance to those who grow, and also have stores and market stalls. The greenhouse license, at any rate, seems to be unfair. It is probable that this matter will be taken up by the club.

Geo. C. Shaffer had a dinner-decoration on April 25 at the Japanese legation for which American Beauty roses and Japanese spring blossoms were used. To preserve neutrality, I may say that the Countess Cassini held a fair on the afternoon and evening of April 26 for the benefit of the Russian Red Cross Society, at which the flower booth was an attractive feature.

Flowering peach, plum and cherry are now in the market in large quantities and sell well, the price being large for an occasional fine specimen or novelty. Geo. H. Cooke has sent out several handsome affairs in this line.

Z. D. Blackstone has had several good decorations for weddings and one for the dedication of a church.

Buffalo, N. Y.

I made a visit last week to Charles Sandiford who has charge of the Albright grounds and greenhouses. One feels after a visit there that flowers grown for pleasure are very different from those commercially grown. In his small but neat place I saw Crimson Rambler roses that were grand, one plant having four clusters of 447 flowers. Then there was the Farquhar rose that was perfect, also Baroness Rothschild, Paul Neron, Mrs. John Laing and Capt. Hayward. Where there were only a few plants of each, the flowers were grand. His azaleas were fine and Primula obconica as it should be grown was a sight to behold. Another pretty thing was the Japanese Snow Ball which Mr. Sandiford says is the best shrub he ever grew. In his sash beds we saw daffodils that would put two Prosperity in the shade for size, and fine Princess violets. A few carnations are grown, such as Lawson, Boston Market, Gov. Wolcott, Roosevelt and Harlowarden. The orchids were not in bloom to any extent. When it is taken into consideration that he has only about 18x100 feet to grow all this stock in, Mr. Sandiford is to be commended.

Weather conditions were very unfavorable for trade last week. Eleven inches of snow Saturday gave the greenhouse men a respite from the usual cry: "Why do you not trim your trees, rose bushes, etc.?" While the snow was coming and while it lasted we were not bothered. Bulbous stock was very scarce last week, everything seeming to be off crop at the same time. The most important event this week will be the Albright wedding, which will be the most brilliant of this spring. We call it spring, but snow storms are all the rage. On this day, April 19, we have had snow all day.

William Scott called last week looking well after a week in Corfu. His hair is not yet long as it should be to be characteristic of a rural writer. It could get long on the sides, but not on top.

W. F. Kasting will be in his new quarters this week. While they will be farther from the business center they will be much larger and better adapted for his business.

Prof. Cowell has returned from his southern trip loaded down with rare plants and increased knowledge.

W. C. Buechi of Genesee street is out for all the local trade and can now be reached by telephone.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Anderson have returned from their southern trip.

Two store openings in the near future will give good orders.

W. F. Kasting is in Albany at the democratic convention.

J. B. Wiese has gone to Philadelphia for a short trip.

Pittsburg.

The weather here continues unseasonably cold. Practically no outdoor planting can be done. Fruit has been experiencing very trying conditions and has undoubtedly suffered greatly on account of the frosts and freezing temperature. Business, too, is undoubtedly affected by these causes, as it continues draggy. American Beauty is getting first-class again, as are Liberty and Bridesmaid. Cheaper grades of roses are good values and plentiful. Carnations of all kinds are plentiful, reasonable and moving nicely. Lily of the valley, marguerites, gardenias and sweet peas are fine. Greens are plentiful and very little good bulbous stock is to be had.

The Pittsburg Florists' Exchange has leased the first and second floors at 228 Diamond street. The remodeling of the interior will begin at once. A large stationary refrigerator will also be installed. The new quarters will be ready for occupancy early in May.

On Tuesday morning one of John Bader's wagons was badly damaged by an electric car accident in Federal street, Allegheny. The driver, John Moore, and the horse were badly bruised. Mr. Bader has three men on the sick list this week.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Company is cutting fine American Beauty again and also especially fine Bridesmaid and Kaiserin.

Charles Erhardt, a former Cleveland florist, has been appointed as a traveling representative of the Seger Coal and Coke Company.

G. L. Tyler, of Du Bois, Pa., spent a few days in Pittsburg last week visiting local plants. Mr. Tyler expects to expand his plant.

Patrick Maier has been successfully unloading his fine crop of Harrisii.

Visitors: William Schmidt, of Schrader & Schmidt, Johnstown, Pa., Mr. Fancourt, of S. S. Pennock's, Philadelphia, Pa. E. L. M.

Albany, N. Y.

The firm of Whittle Brothers has received the order for the decorations for the commencement exercises at Williams college in June for the eighth consecutive year. The same firm also decorated the headquarters of Tammany Hall and of W. R. Hearst at the Ten Eyck hotel during the sessions of the Democratic state convention on Monday.

The board of contract and supply will soon advertise for 450 cubic yards of ¾-inch trap rock, 450 cubic yards of gravel and 160 cubic yards of stone screenings for use this spring by the bureau of parks.

The city has accepted the gift of a fountain to cost about $1,000 from the National Humane Alliance. The common council at its last meeting appropriated $100 for the construction of a foundation in Townsend park at the intersection of Central and Washington avenues, where the fountain will be located.

Albany was filled with a large number of delegates and visitors at the state-convention on Monday. Among the number were William F. Kasting of Buffalo, Alexander McClelland of Dobb's Ferry.

The local florists are already booking many orders for decorations for June weddings.

August Rolker of New York was in the city on business early in the week.

Alvin, Tex.

The jasmine season has opened up very auspiciously and C. W. Benson, the veteran shipper of these flowers, expects a good season. This is Mr. Benson's eleventh year in the business and he says that it is increasing year by year. The shipping of these flowers makes one of the leading industries here and quite a number of small growers and dealers are engaged in it. Mr. Benson, however, controls about seventy-five per cent of the acreage under the jasmine and he devotes considerable attention to the cultivation of the plant. Mr. Benson is of the opinion that the grandiflora cape jasmine is not grown to a great extent at any other point in the United States, although there are several fields of Gardenia florida in the southeast. The flowers of gardenias grown by eastern florists are, in his opinion, from thirty to fifty per cent smaller than in grandiflora.

OBITUARY.

John Morton.

John Morton, an old-time florist of Richmond, Va., died April 23. Mrs. Morton and Mrs. Peter Henderson were sisters.

Robert Thyne.

Robert Thyne, a member of the well known firm of James & Robert Thyne, of Glasgow, Scotland, died April 1, aged 83 years.

Robert M. Merritt.

Robert M. Merritt, formerly well known in the Chicago seed trade, having a store at 65 Lake street, died April 26, aged 67 years. The funeral was held at his late residence, 851 W. Monroe street, Thursday, April 28.

Mr. Merritt came to Chicago from the northern part of the state in 1869, before the great fire, and first engaged with P. S. Meserole, the seedsman on Lake street, near Clark. After the fire in 1871 he continued with F. S. Kellogg, who had been one of the partners and was successor to P. S. Meserole and was with him at 65 West Lake street. Later he was manager for Bradley & Banks.

In 1877 Mr. Merritt started in business for himself under the name J. E. Merritt, at 65 E. Lake street, and continued there in business for seven years, until 1884. He suffered quite a loss by fire about 1883. Mr. Merritt's wife and married daughters survive him.

THE St. Louis World's Fair opens to-day.

It is believed that glass will advance in price as the weather improves.

In H. Louis Menand's galax advertisement, page 580 of last issue, the price should have been $1 per 1,000.

DR. R. SCHIFFMANN, the well known orchid enthusiast, of St. Paul, Minn., has just returned from the far east with as fine a lot of phalaenopsis as ever reached these shores.

LONGIFLORUM lilies that have bloomed in the greenhouse without undue forcing may be made to yield a little further profit by a bit of attention and planting out about May 1. They will bloom in September under ordinary conditions.

THE Scott fern seems to win with everyone who sees it. All indications are to the effect that for every day sales as a pot plant it will practically supplant the original Boston fern. From the standpoint of the grower it has all the points of a money-maker.

Sow Asparagus plumosus seeds now.
This most useful of decorative greens should be more widely grown than it is.
Skyscraper houses are not needed for it. It is the iron-like growths, not the long strings, that find the most useful places and best sale in the market. These can be grown anywhere that a fern can be grown in.

LEFT-OVER azaleas are worth caring for and if intelligently handled can be made into nice stock for next fall. Their growing season is now on and on the growths now made will depend the crop of flowers they will set for next season.
A cool house, the removal of all dead leaves and seed pods, and frequent syringing, will just suit them.

GOVERNOR BATES in his annual proclamation concerning the observance of arbor day makes the very sensible and pertinent suggestion that the occasion be observed by a united, systematic effort to rid the state of the insect pests which during the past few years have in rapidly increasing numbers threatened the sylvan beauty of Massachusetts.
The state has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in the work of destroying the gipsy and brown-tail moths but if a general popular interest in the task of extermination can be aroused a much more practical solution of the great problem will have been reached. Inspired with a common purpose at this very appropriate time, the people can accomplish much for the public welfare.

Poor Putty Cause of Suit.

Chas. H. Rayner, of Anchorage, Ky., has brought suit for $3,500 against E.
H. Marcus, a paint dealer, for supplying putty of inferior quality when the best quality was asked for and paid for. Mr.
Rayner recently built a range of houses and owing to this poor putty will have to take the glass out and put it in again.

Lewis and Clark Centennial.

After the St. Louis World's Fair comes the Lewis and Clark Centennial, to be held at Portland, Ore., from June 1 to October 15, 1905. E. R. Lake, of the Oregon Agricultural College, will have charge of the botanical and horticultural sections, George Coote, of the same institution, having control of landscape gardening and floriculture.

Congress of Rosarians.

A conference of French rose growers will be held at Nancy towards the end of August next. The following are the subjects for discussion: 1, Classification of Roses; 2, Synonymous Roses; 3, Hybridization; 4, The Best Varieties for the East of France; 5, Retarded Roses for Winter Flowering; 6, The Influence of Grafting; 7, The Best Remedies for Insect Pests; 8, The Best Means of Protecting
New Varieties for a Definite Period; 9, Bengal Roses; 10, The Best Varieties of Bourbon Roses; 11, The Best Polyantha Roses; 12, The Best Roses Distributed in 1898 and Two Following Years; 13,
The Best Tea-scented Varieties for Cut Blooms.—Gardeners' Magazine.

Scotland's International Exhibition.

A great international horticultural exhibition will be held at Edinburgh, Scotland, September 13-15, 1905, inclusive, under the auspices of the Royal Caledonian Horticultural Society and the patronage of the king. It is fourteen years since the last international horticultural exhibition in Scotland and the society feels that the time has now arrived when another should be held to show the marked advances in horticulture. The show will be held in the Waverly market, famous as the scene of many great exhibitions. For copies of the preliminary prize list apply to the secretary, P. Murray Thompson, 5 York place, Edinburgh, Scotland.

Park and Outdoor Art Association.

The eighth annual convention of the Park and Outdoor Art Association will be held in the Minneapolis and St. Paul building, World's Fair, St. Louis, Mo., June 9-11 inclusive, in conjunction with the American League for Civic Improvement. An effort will be made to place both societies under one governing body with the title of American Park and Improvement Association. The programme includes the following papers:
"School Gardens," by Dick J. Crosby, Washington, D. C.; "Municipal Art," by Dr. Milo R. Maltbie, New York; "Park Census," by G. A. Parker, Hartford, Conn.; "Village Improvement," by Warren H. Manning, Boston; "Public Advertising," by Frederick Law Olmsted, Brookline, Mass.; "Railroad Improvement," by Mrs. A. E. McCrea,

Chicago; "Local Improvement," by Mrs.
Louis Marion McCall, St. Louis; "Libraries and Museums," by John Thomson, Philadelphia; "Forest Reservations," by E. J. Parker, Quincy, Ill.; "Arts and Crafts," by Mrs. M. F. Johnston, Richmond, Ind.

Wood Lice or Sow Bugs.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please give remedy for wood lice in greenhouses. J. H.

To a quart of cornmeal add enough brown sugar to sweeten, mix well together and add two tablespoonfuls of Paris green. Moisten with a little water, so that it will hold together. Place the mixture about in small quantities, on or under the benches, or wherever the bugs
may be.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

The Seed Trade.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Chas. McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.
Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-23, 1904.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, Grand Rapids, Mich.

STOWELL'S EVERGREEN sweet corn of high test and true type is in demand at fair prices.

THE death of R. M. Merritt, formerly a Chicago seedsman, is recorded in our obituary column.

DUTCH bulb fields were looking exceptionally well April 10, the growth being unusually strong.

THE pickling concerns of the country will hold their June meeting on the 15th of that month in St. Louis.

SEEDING for onion sets at Chicago, which has been delayed by cold and rain, will start actively with a few bright days.

TUBEROSE bulbs have sold in the London auction rooms this season as low as $1 per barrel, which hardly pays the freight.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, of Floral Park, N. Y., recently bought out the stock of gladioli held by C. Betscher, of Canal Dover, O.

ONION sets are scarce at Chicago and selling at $3.50 to $4 for reds and yellows and $4.50 for whites. For the first time in several years summer top sets are in over supply.

NEWPORT, R. I.—William B. Scott & Company have cleared away their old buildings, and workmen are busy putting in the foundations for their new seed store at 8-10 Broadway.

SANTA CLARA, CAL., April 19.—C. C. Morse & Company write that crops with them are coming along very well so far. They have had a very late season but crops are apt to be all the better for being late, and the country never looked better at this date.

THE Brown Bag-Filling Machine Company has recently been awarded patents for a system of assembling and closing the mailing packages of the congressional seed distribution without the use of paste. This has made a great improvement in the character of the work, and prevents the mutilation of the addresses so that all go through to destination without fail. Under the old system thousands of packages were returned with addresses lost, but since the introduction of the new system not one package in a million has been returned for this reason.

Onion Seed Surplus.

The best explanation of this over-stock seems to lie in the fact that contract growers of onion seed, as in some other lines, have in recent years diligently sought out all the larger buyers (formerly customers of the seedsmen) and sold such customers directly by contract. This has left the seedsmen with a lot of the contract supply on hand.

European Seed Report.

In a former report I have already stated that our winter has not been severe. In consequence all the biennial plants and roots look nice and vigorous and are at disposal in sufficient quantities. We are therefore justified in looking forward to a good crop of cabbage, carrots, beets and leek. The kohlrabi plants alone have a weak appearance and show the effects of frost.

As to biennial and perennial flowers, they also look splendid and will certainly develop satisfactorily. The bulk of the summer flowers is now sown, for instance nemophila, nigella, godetia, iberis, helianthus, tropæolum, etc., whilst portulaca, asters, stocks, and most of the others are still in the greenhouse, hotbed or in pots, and will be planted later on when frosts are no longer to be feared.

Business in general was not satisfactory this year. The small dealers especially did not sell out and will carry over lots of seeds to the coming season, a fact that will surely prevent prices from mounting, if the growing crops turn out well.

The old experience that an article which is looked for in autumn can be found easily in the spring at the end of the season has proved true again this year for beans, some cabbage varieties and certain peas, which were very scarce in November and could not be bought at high prices while now every dealer has them for sale. It is always the same game, the cultivators keep back the articles in strong demand and in consequence the prices mount, in some cases even out of proportion to the real value of a product. Customers will not buy at these prices and restrict their purchases as much as possible. The seeds, therefore, remain in the stores and in the houses of the cultivators and are often given away in spring at very low prices, neither growers nor dealers possessing the capital to keep them over.

The weather in the center of Germany is cold and damp, a little too cold for sowing, but in general not unfavorable for field work.

CONDITIONS IN FRANCE.

The chief seed growing districts in France have suffered through large inundations covering a big part of the Loire valley with water, but the rains having ceased just when danger was very threatening the water fell without causing great damage, but plantations will nevertheless be retarded. At the present time the weather is fresh and cool in northern France, even a little too cold for getting on with the sowings.

The trade has not been as brisk as usual, as in Germany, so that many lots, especially beets, chicory, onions, peas, lie unsold and will keep down prices in the autumn. The plants, although a little rotten in some districts, are good in general and much land being at disposal the plantations will probably be extensive.

Speaking generally, the orders on contract are less numerous and important than usual. Legumes and flower seeds will be grown freely in consequence, so that according to present appearances the next season will open with a big stock.

The plantations in the south of France seem in good condition. The flowers especially look splendid and promise an excellent crop. There are also plenty of orders on contract.

NEPHROLEPIS SCOTTII.

To See It is To Buy It.

AWARDED S. A. F. O. H. Silver Medal at the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's Spring Exhibition in Philadelphia, March 24, 1904. Awarded a Diploma by the American Institute, and also received the New York Florists' Club's Highest Award, "A Certificate of Merit."

Nephrolepis Scottii is without a doubt the finest Nephrolepis ever introduced, and is as far ahead of the Boston Fern as the Boston is ahead of all other introductions. It is a rapid grower and to see it in all stages of growth, from a runner in the bench to a 14-inch pot specimen, will convince you that it will positively take the place of its parent, the old Boston Fern.

Unquestionable Testimonials As to Its Worth.

NEW YORK, March 18, 1904.
MR. JOHN SCOTT, KEAP STREET GREENHOUSES, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—I like Nephrolepis Scottii very much and wish you would grow 100 specimen plants for me for next Fall delivery; you know about the quality of plants I handle.
Yours truly, (Signed) J. H. TROY.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 11, 1904.

MR. JOHN SCOTT,
Dear Sir:—You have my order for your new Nephrolepis Scottii. I wish to say here, that I am very favorably impressed by your novelty. I admire its habit and style of growth and consider it the best Nephrolepis variety we have got so far. Yours very truly, (Signed) J. M. KELLER.

WOODSIDE, N. Y., April 5, 1904.

MR. JOHN SCOTT,
Dear Sir:—Please accept my order for 1000 Nephrolepis Scottii at $200.00 per 1000. I consider your fern as far ahead of the Boston fern as the Boston is ahead of all the recent introductions of Nephrolepis. It has a splendid habit and is a rapid grower and will, I am certain, prove itself a money maker for anyone that buys it.
Yours truly, (Signed) HERMAN DREYER.

Dear Sir:—Please reserve for us 150 Nephrolepis Scottii in the sizes as follows, viz., 25, 6-inch pots; 25, 8-inch pots; 50, 10-inch pots, and 50 large specimens.
We think that "Scottii" is far better than the "Boston" in all sizes, and think it will certainly take its place. We have tried all the other introductions, but failed to find them satisfactory for our class of trade. Kindly acknowledge receipt, and oblige.

Yours truly,

MR. JOHN SCOTT,
Dear Sir:—We have tried all the new introductions of Nephrolepis and have had to come back to the old Boston again, but in the Nephrolepis Scottii we are certain we have at last found the ideal Nephrolepis. It has a grand habit and judging from our observation of it in the past two years, we predict it will prove a seller and a money maker.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn., Pres.; Frank A. Weber, St. Louis, Mo., Vice-Pres.; George C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June 22-24, 1904.

REVERE, MASS., is prominent as a pear growing section.

WEIGELAS are not adapted for planting on low, moist ground. They are apt to get winter-killed in such locations.

ASHLAND, KY.—Robert Bingham, Russell, Ky., is contemplating moving his greenhouse and nursery to Ashland.

TROY, O.—The Peters Nursery Company shipped a load of decorative shrubs to St. Louis last week to be used on the exposition grounds.

LONG BRANCH, N. J.—W. G. Eisele has purchased the Isaac G. Ring farm, which contains eighteen acres admirably adapted for nursery purposes.

VALLEJO, CAL.—The directors of the Cain Fruit and Nursery Company have ordered an assessment of $5 a share on its capital stock to be paid by April 28.

ALBERT LEA, MINN.—O. M. Peterson and H. P. Olstad have established the Albert Lea nursery one mile east of the city and have put out nine acres this year. They have forty acres more that can be used as soon as necessary.

NURSERY business about Boston is rushing, particularly in the line of ornamental stock. Planting is being pushed with the utmost vigor in anticipation of sudden outburst of growth that is sure to follow one or two warm days when such arrive.

WM. H. MOON, of Morrisville, Pa., refused to take an order from Howard Gould, the millionaire, on Sunday and stated with regard to his action: "It pays to stand by principles, even in business. We have never lost business by refusing to do it on Sundays."

THE severity of the winter throughout the New England and New York district has done great damage to the peach trees, the fruit buds having been killed in the majority of cases. It is advised that the trees be given from three to five pounds each of nitrate of soda or other quick-acting nitrogenous fertilizer.

DUNDEE, ILL.—D. Hill, proprietor of the Dundee nursery, has secured the contract to plant the U. S. government's forestry and nursery exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase exhibition. Mr. Hill will also have an evergreen exhibit of his own. He expects to leave for St. Louis in a few days to take personal charge of the preparatory work.

THE COMMITTEE on agriculture of the Massachusetts legislature has reported a bill establishing the office of state forester, with a salary of $2,000 a year, the forester to be elected annually by the state board of agriculture. A bill has also been reported appropriating $5,000 for the establishment of a nursery for forest tree seedlings at Amherst agricultural college.

N. F. MCCARTHY & Co., horticultural auctioneers of Boston, report an unexpectedly brisk demand at their Tuesday and Friday sales for imported ornamental conifers. This would indicate that despite the reverses of the disastrous winter of 1903-4 these evergreens still hold their popularity for planting in home grounds, and are likely to be planted more extensively than ever.

PLATTSMOUTH, NEB.—L. W. Holmes, nurseryman of Council Bluffs, was here recently trying to find some trace of a man named McCarthy, a rascally agent whom he employed last January to solicit orders in this vicinity for nursery stock, and who, he alleges, beat him out of a large sum by means of forged orders. As fast as the orders arrived Mr. Holmes sent McCarthy his commission and it was only by chance through writing to one of the mythical customers that he discovered he was being swindled.

THE killing, a second time in succession, of California privet is likely to result in a willingness on the part of the public to turn to something more reliable as a hedge plant. The all around good qualities of Berberis Thunbergia for this use cannot be overstated. By following up and cutting out the coarse growths for a few years a well balanced hedge is secured, beautiful every month in the year and never more so than in mid-winter when its crowded racemes of bright coral fruit are seen against the snow.

NEWPORT, N. I.—Everything points now to one of the best seasons in the nursery business that eastern nurseries have had for many years. The lengthened cold springs will give more time than usual for the filling of orders. There has been an especially heavy demand for evergreens for seashore places. Spruces are well liked and experience seems to place the White Maine spruce as the best to plant near salt water. It is more bushy than the Norway, and much harder, and more desirable in every way. The demand is large for big stock, consequently this class of material is fast becoming very scarce.

Shreveport, La.

The stock of the Shreveport Nursery and Orchards Company has been purchased by Downs & Company, a firm formed by former residents of Missouri who came to Shreveport last year and incorporated with $25,000 capital, which will soon be increased to $50,000. The company has 5,000 acres of land devoted to the nursery and orchard business. Business is reported to be dull this season. The greatest demand is for up-to-date rose stock.

Fine Park System.

Colorado Springs, Col., has the finest system of public parks in the west. They include Acacia square, Dorchester park, Almo place and Antlers park and eight smaller parks, all in the central part of the city; Stratton park and North Cheyenne canyon, at the base of Cheyenne mountain; Palmer park, a picturesque tract of rugged bluffs north of the city, and Monument park, on the west of the city, now being improved at a cost of half a million through the generosity of Gen. William J. Palmer, founder of the city.

Of White Flowers with Dark Glossy Green Foliage.

THE BUD AND BLOOM OF OUR

Grandiflora Cape Jessamine

Is guaranteed to be much better in point of size than Gardenia Florida. In form, color and perfume it is identical. The blooming period for 1904 is nearly two weeks earlier than last year, opening about May 5th and continuing until about June 10th. This will give us 100 per cent more blooms than we were able to supply for May 30, 1903, so we are sure of our ability to fill all accepted orders for that date. Orders may be booked at any time, and will be acknowledged by return mail. Our system for the prompt execution of time orders is as nearly perfect as long experience and a thoroughly competent office force can make it. Prices: 75c per 100; $6.50 per 1000. 500 at 1000 rate.

Our Pastimes.

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and sporting readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 42 W. 28th St., New York; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia; or to the American Florist Co., Chicago.

At New York.

It looks as though the New York Florists' Bowling Club would be obliged to find new quarters, the location where they have been meeting being strenuously objected to by most of the members. At the game last Monday there were but four members of the club in evidence, Messrs. Traendly and Craw, Guttman and Shaw, these four, no more, but glory be, Mr. Craw put up the biggest game of his life, 161. After accomplishing this he rested on his laurels, and modestly hugged the 100 mark. The best score of the evening was 164, on which Traendly and Gibbs were tied. And St. Louis but ten weeks distant!

At Madison, N. J.

The Madison aggregation had a good time on the alleys last Tuesday evening. There were Messrs. Herrington, Duckham, Stein, Totty, Shannon, Redstone, McNulty and the honorable treasurer of the New York Bowling Club, J. B. Nugent, present. The scene of the play was laid at the alleys of the Madison Athletic club. A friendly bout between Messrs. Shannon and Stein was decided in favor of the veteran Mr. Shannon by one pin, but this decision is not official although the reputed winner did make some phenomenal strikes. The representative from New York would have done better had he been advised in advance that the alleys crowned in the centre. It was an unfair advantage to take of a visitor and the best evidence is that Messrs. Harrington and Duckham averaged about 180 all through the game, just because they were well acquainted with the vagaries of those alleys. Some day they will meet their match and then the bells of Madison will ring backward.

At Chicago.

There was a good attendance Tuesday evening at the special meeting of bowlers called by the committee having in charge the matter of selecting the team that will represent the Chicago Club at St. Louis. The committee received suggestions of those present as to the modus operandi of picking out the strongest men and a report will be submitted at the next meeting which is scheduled for next Tuesday evening at the Geroux alleys. There will be five men on the team and these will be selected on the strength of the showing made in a preliminary tournament to be inaugurated within a few weeks. After considerable discussion on the subject the clans got down to business with the balls and pins. The following scores tell the story:

Player	1st	2d	3d	T'1

CRISIS

The BEST commercial scarlet Carnation on the market for 1905. Early and continuous bloomer. Color, the richest scarlet; blooms, three inches and over, and never bursts; stems, 24 to 30 inches long and very stiff. We court investigation.

PRICES: $2.00 DOZEN; $12.00 PER HUNDRED; $100.00 PER THOUSAND; $95.00 PER THOUSAND IN FIVE THOUSAND LOTS.

Davis Bros., Bloomsburg, Pa.—

Gentlemen:—Please book my order for 5,000 of your new red carnation "Crisis." I have watched this carnation for the last three years and I believe it is the best red carnation in cultivation to-day. I sold several thousand blooms of this variety for you last year. It proved to be a good shipper and always gave satisfaction.

Yours very respectfully,

J. L. DILLON.

THE Gardeners' Chronicle.

A Weekly Illustrated Journal.

ESTABLISHED 1841.

The GARDENERS' CHRONICLE has been for OVER SIXTY YEARS THE LEADING JOURNAL of its class. It has achieved this position because, while specially devoting itself to supplying the daily requirements of gardeners of all classes, the information furnished is of such general and permanent value that the GARDENERS' CHRONICLE is looked up to as the STANDARD AUTHORITY on the subjects of which it treats.

Subscription to the United States, $4.20 per year. Remittances to be made payable to H. G. COVE.

Providence, R. I.

Roses seem to be somewhat to the scarce side the last week, especially white ones. Carnations are plentiful enough for all purposes, and still maintain an average of $1 to $2 per hundred for good flowers. A few Prosperity and Enchantress are being marketed at 4 and 5 cents wholesale. Bedding plants have started in at $6 to $8 per hundred for geraniums in 4-inch pots. Almy E. Williams will have a good start on this line of goods. Asparagus and smilax are short, as are all kinds of hardy greens, and it is difficult to see what the trend will be. Weather has been very cold, and thus checked a surplus cut on flowers in general. M.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Lyman C. Smith has broken ground for a conservatory which he will erect at the rear of his residence. It is to be a large and costly building of concrete and glass. A Turkish room, an aquarium and a choice collection of rare plants will make it attractive.

IRON GREENHOUSES.

The Duplex Gutter and The Duplex Eaves have solved the question of how to build up-to-date greenhouses as durable as the iron frame greenhouses at high prices, and nearly as cheap as wooden houses. See the cut that represents the new Duplex Eaves, the most durable, strongest and simplest to erect. Any common laborer can set them as perfect as an expert mechanic. It is perfection in construction. No ice or snow to darken your houses when light means money. Positively no shade from the Duplex Eaves, costs only about $2.00 per foot, including Duplex Gutters and Eaves, Iron Posts for Gutters, Iron Parlories with Posts, Tees and Floor Plates, Center Posts with Plates and Bases. Standard Ventilating Machines, complete with double strong Pipe, Cypress Sash Bars and Ventilating Sash. Investigate the proposition and convince yourself of the fact. Also note the simplest steam return Trap made; just what a Florist needs, and a coal dealer condemns. Catalogues and circulars free.

CROP INSURANCE.
 Life insurance is valuable because it guarantees the outcome.

"Gurney" Heaters

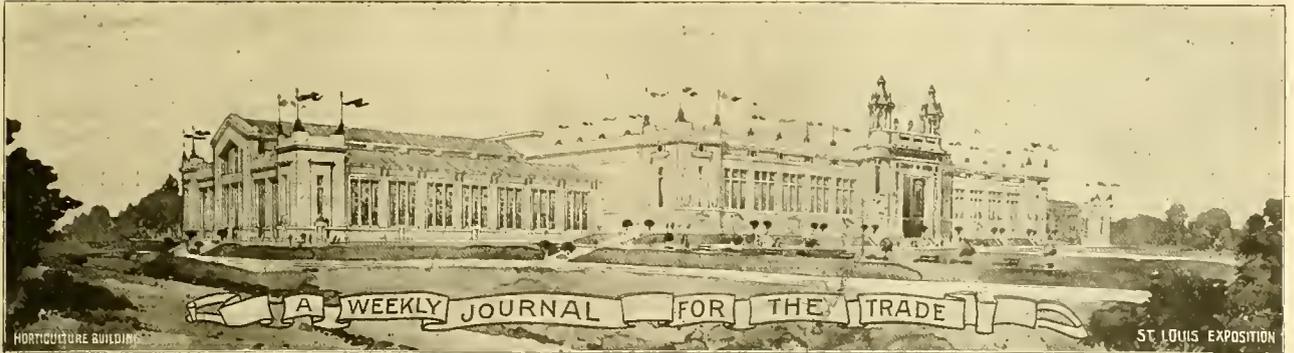

"BR'CHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouse: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expense at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

THE ROSE.

The bloom upon her housemaid's cheek,
My lady envies. Well-a-day!
No soil suits roses (they declare Who ought to know) like common clay.
—From Puck.

Diseased Roots.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I send you under separate cover a rose plant with the roots badly diseased. The plants flowered well until January and then seemed played out. Kindly state trouble and oblige.

C. A. B.

The plant received from C. A. B. had all the appearance of having been killed from overfeeding, or else from overwater-ing. I could find no trace of any of the ordinary diseases which roses are subject to, but the roots were all decaying.
Without any information to guide me in the matter I should think they had either been overwatered at a critical time or else overfed with some strong fertilizer.
If C. A. B. will give more details as to treatment previous to their showing the trouble it would be much easier to arrive at the true cause of failure, as it is simply guess work to assign a cause now.

J. N. MAY.

Growing American Beauty.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Will you kindly tell through your paper the best way to grow American Beauty roses, including soil, temperature, both day and night, watering, etc.

J. H. H.

To grow American Beauty successfully requires somewhat different treatment from that given the ordinary tea varieties. First, it should have a steady night temperature of 60° with a liberal amount of air during bright sunny weather. The temperature should be allowed to run up to 75° in the middle of the day. Commencing to ventilate in the morning as soon as the thermometer begins to rise, gradually increase with sun heat but always avoid sudden changes either by day or night. Watering should be done with care and good judgement. When the soil shows indication of getting a little on the dry side give enough to moisten thoroughly every part of it. This should be done as early in the day as possible and only on warm days. Then let them get into the same condition before watering again. Spraying should be done on all bright, sunny days to keep down insects. Soil for Beauty should be fairly rich as it is a strong feeder. For ordinary soils add one part of good, well decomposed manure to four of soil.

Thoroughly mix and break up fine before putting into the house. When planting press the soil firmly about the roots and as soon as the plants have started to grow beat the whole surface solid. Give a thin mulching, half to three-quarters of an inch, after they are well established, and repeat this every six or eight weeks through the entire season. The best kind of soil for Beauty is a fairly good stiff loam, from an old pasture preferred.

J. N. MAY.

Mildew on Roses.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What is the cause of mildew on roses? The plants grow very well but for mildew. We keep the temperature at about 50° to 60° at night. We spray in all bright weather in the morning, then gradually open the ventilators. We try to keep the temperature between 60° and 70° in day time.
Does the mildew come at night or is it caused by the cold air coming in through the ventilators in cold, bright days? We try to get the houses well dried before night.

A SUBSCRIBER.

Mildew on roses can be traced to several different causes. The one which generally produces it most abundantly is an uneven temperature, particularly during the night. This in conjunction with a badly drained bottom will always produce an abundant crop of it, and the subscriber's description of carrying the temperature at about 50° to 60° at night points to the cause in this case. This is far too wide a range to keep a rose house free of mildew. A night temperature of 54° to 56° should be kept for the general class of tea roses, and as soon as the thermometer registers 4° or 5° higher in the morning commence putting on air by degrees, increasing the same as the temperature rises, allowing for cold, cutting winds. Plants are like animals.
They thrive best and keep more healthy with an abundance of fresh, pure air.
Regarding the time mildew comes, there is no set time for it to start any more than there is for a man to get a cold and sore throat. The same conditions that will produce one will also bring the other.
Let a man get a shower bath in a warm room and then expose himself to a cold current of air and the chances are he will have something more than a mere cold to fight. The same law applies to plants in a measure. There are many ways to produce mildew on roses besides the above, but that is the most prolific cause of the trouble. To prevent its appearance a steady, uniform temperature at night, combined with a moderately dry, healthy atmosphere is needed. Commence opening the ventilators early in the morning as soon as the temperature begins to raise. Syringe and water as required early in the day but do not keep the ventilators closed till it is done. A damp, undrained bottom to the house will always keep mildew there ready to start into life at any opportunity.

J. N. MAY.

Montrose Greenhouses.

The establishment, illustrations of which appeared in the AMERICAN FLORIST April 30, 1904, has now passed through its second season with results highly gratifying to the advocates of large rose houses. It is situated in Lynnfield, near Boston. The property is owned by N. F. McCarthy, the wholesale florist and auctioneer, and is conducted by Eber Holmes. The soil of the old farming district in which it is located is deep and rich and must have had some relation to the grade and quantity of the flowers produced, but Mr. McCarthy is convinced that the satisfactory outcome of his venture is largely due to the size of the house, which is 32x500 feet. This is in accord with the testimony of all who have thus far given large houses a trial. The next to be erected will be even larger, either 50 or 60 feet by 900 feet, on the principle, as expressed by Mr. McCarthy, that the nearer we get to the conditions of the open field the better results we shall attain. As shown in the picture, the chimney and boiler-room are rather striking objects architecturally, being built of the boulders that abound in the neighborhood, laid in red mortar, and they are equipped with heating capacity of sufficient extent to accommodate any number of houses that are likely to be built. The varieties under cultivation are Bride, Bridesmaid and Ivory, all grafted stock, second year, transplanted and tied down after having had a six weeks' rest last summer.

French Florists Have Hard Times.

The condition of the cut flower trade has been most disastrous all through the winter and spring, with the exception of the Easter days. The florists, who rightly are bitter in their complaints, attribute the lack of business to various causes. First of all to the dissolution by the French government of the great number of religious bodies which, on their frequent festivals, bought immense quantities of flowers to adorn their homes, chapels or churches. Secondly, to the anxiety felt in consequence of the Russia-Japanese war, which prevented many wealthy people in Russia as well as in other European countries from traveling on the Riviera or from buying flowers as lavishly as usual. To these causes may be added the fact that many plants which are often winter-killed, passed the winter unharmed and had not to be replaced in the gardens of our northern region. Lack of buyers and the consequent glut of flowers and plants brought about a considerable decline in the prices. To get rid of their stock, florists had to sell it in many instances at one-fifth its usual value which resulted in a heavy loss to them. They claim not to have witnessed such an unfortunate season for many years.

SPECTATOR.

World's Fair Notes.

The first exhibits of cut flowers were made by the Chicago Carnation Company, Joliet, Ill., and J. Steidle, Central, Mo., both exhibiting carnations, the former firm staging Fiancee, Cardinal, Harlowarden, Alba, Prosperity, Marshall Field and a collection of seedlings.

Landscape Gardener Vacherot has made the grounds of the French building very attractive with ornamental trees, shrubs, fine specimen evergreens and rhododendrons, ponds and grottoes. Roses have been extensively planted, also the espalier and other fruit trees for which France is noted.

Trade visitors during the opening week included Geo. A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill.; Geo. M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo.; John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; James Hartsborne, Joliet, Ill.; J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, and Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.

The gardeners of private estates will find it difficult to locate their department, except as provided by foreign countries, such as France and England, around their buildings.

The Late John Young.
(See obituary, page 629).

From the city take the Market street electric cars for the entrance nearest to the Horticulture building. The Union railroad station is located on Market and Eighteenth streets.

A. E. Leavitt, of Houston, Mo., is up to date with a ginseng plantation in a lath pavilion near the southeast corner of the Horticulture building. The plants are doing well.

Chief Taylor has an excellent room for the S. A. F. meetings in August. It is located in the Agriculture building, and is 50x100 feet, with seating capacity for 1,000.

Arthur Cowee will have an acre of gladioli within the grounds and four acres will be grown at Belleville, Ill., for cut flowers to be exhibited during the season.

Superintendent Hadkinson has made good progress with the work on the grounds and plantations in the vicinity of the Horticulture and Agriculture buildings.

David Brodie has charge of the five-acre tract showing the United States topographically in miniature, with the principal crops of the various states.

An unfinished notch in the Ferris wheel, about one-ninth of its circumference, indicates the present status of the work on the grounds and in the buildings.

T. W. Brown, with assistants Harry Rieman and Fred Walz, have made an excellent feature of the old English flower garden around the British building.

The exposition management has proved unaccountably penurious in its provisions for the horticultural adornment of the grounds in general.

The plants in the wild flower garden near the Agriculture building are making good growth and should attract much attention throughout the season.

Get off at station 10 on the intermural railroad for the Horticulture building. Other reasonably convenient stations are 7, 8 and 9.

The Michell Plant and Bulb Company has a fine display of tulips, hyacinths, etc., from bulbs grown by C. Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland.

The S. A. F. visitors will miss the Midway only in name. A turn "Down the Pike" affords all the old allurements and many new ones.

Prof. L. R. Taft, who has charge of the judging in the horticultural classes, is now at his office in the Horticulture building.

Landscape Artist Kessler had made good use of his time and facilities. He should have had earlier opportunity and wider scope.

Chief Taylor is perfecting arrangements for handling and staging expeditiously such perishable exhibits as cut flowers.

E. J. Vawter, of Los Angeles, Cal., makes daily shipments of carnations for display in the California state exhibit.

Chief F. W. Taylor's office is at the south end of the Agriculture building, the end nearest the Horticulture building.

The Huntsville Wholesale Nurseries, of Huntsville, Ala., have extensive exhibits of promising nursery stock.

Many of the exhibits of trees, shrubs and plants about the grounds do not yet bear the names of the exhibitors.

The Schisler-Cornell Seed Company's grass plot on the south front of the Agriculture building looks well.

The exhibits of most southern states are elaborate and the work of displaying them is well advanced.

There is in the city a restaurant called the Physical Culture Dining Room. The name is suggestive.

California has the banner fruit exhibit, with the veteran Frank Wiggins commissioner in charge.

"These bones shall rise again" is the way it is put by one concern manufacturing bone fertilizers.

Horticulture and agriculture are located "away back" in the rear yard of the exposition grounds.

The spring weather on the opening day was ideal, with clear skies and starting buds.

Dreer's perennials are looking well and this firm has extensive reservations for aquatics.

The Peterson Nurseries, Chicago, are on hand with a great variety of excellent material.

The Chicago Peony Farms, of Joliet, Ill., make a feature of Festiva Maxima peonies.

The Boloxi Nurseries Company, of Boloxi, Miss., makes a feature of moss roses.

"Sight of work to do here 'fore this is ready," said one of the Jefferson guards.

The work on the horticultural displays of Illinois and Missouri is far behind.

FRONT AND BACK VIEWS OF CARNATION JOHN E. HAINES.

Ellwanger & Barry have extensive displays of well selected nursery stock.

A preliminary schedule of floricultural exhibitions will be issued soon.

H. J. Weber & Sons, St. Louis, make extensive displays of nursery stock.

Superintendent Hadkinson's office is in the Horticulture building.

Peter Brown, of Lancaster, Pa., has his pansy exhibit in good shape.

Vaughan's cannas and phlox will make conspicuous attractions.

Charles Vick is on hand with the New York state exhibit.

Some St. Louis hotels have doubled regular rates.

THE CARNATION.

J. H. TROY, of New York, says that the Fragrance carnation, a very fragrant light pink, sells remarkably well with him.

FROM the Chicago Carnation Company, Joliet, Ill., we received some unusually fine blooms of the Cardinal carnation this week. The flowers were three and one-half inches in diameter and all that could be desired in form and color.

We understand that the E. G. Hill Company, of Richmond, Ind., has acquired a one-fourth interest in Cardinal, Witterstaetter's fine new scarlet carnation, the greater part of the stock of which is controlled by the Chicago Carnation Company, of Joliet, Ill.

Haines' New Carnations.

We present in this issue some illustrations of new carnations raised by John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa. Star of Bethlehem is a pure yellow, three inches in diameter, and J. E. Haines a scarlet, from three and one-half to three and three-fourths inches in diameter. One of our correspondents, who saw the plants growing last winter, together with four other seedlings, says they are all very fine, especially J. E. Haines.

Queen Louise in Connecticut.

Queen Louise is one of the limited number of varieties which have given satisfaction and made friends in widely separated localities, varying soils and other divergent conditions east and west. There is no better testimony to its value under Connecticut influences than the photograph reproduced on page 626. The house shown, one of the big range of A. N. Pierson, at Cromwell, Conn., contains 7,880 plants, field-grown, benched about August 1. The photograph was taken on March 29, 1904. The cut on March 31 was 7,760 first quality blooms. The aggregate cut from the house up to April 10, 1904, was 89,246. Wallace R. Pierson, whose special care the carnation department is, has high commendation for Queen Louise on tap at all times. Results as shown would indicate that his views are well founded.

Planting Out Young Stock.

Planting the young stock in the field should be attended to wherever it is possible properly to work the land. The first thing under consideration is to get the planting ground into condition to receive the plants. First of all, clean up any old refuse that is scattered around over the ground and burn it up. This is a safer plan than to plough it under. The ashes can be scattered over the soil as a good fertilizer for the plants. Carnations, as with outdoor crops, should receive proper consideration as to the nature of the planting ground. The very short season during which, under the present up-to-date method of culture, they are allowed to remain in the field makes it necessary that we give them every encouragement within our power to produce as fine and uniform a plant as is possible in that time. Therefore do not be carried away with the idea that all there is to do is to set the plants outside and let nature do the rest. Do not plant them on any low land where there is a chance of the water standing after heavy rains, and if it is anyway possible to avoid a piece of very stiff, cold, clayey soil or soil where there is an abundance of stones, it will be good policy to do so even at the expense of renting a suitable planting ground for the season.

Planting out is a job that, once started, the sooner it is got through with the better, therefore press every available hand into service. Plough up enough land to give the plants a good margin for their work. See that the ploughing is done as evenly as possible to prevent there being any broken furrows for the water to stand in. After the ploughing is done we go over the ground with a horse drag made of several heavy timbers spiked together, the edge of each one overlapping the other a little, which breaks up all the clods or lumps and leaves the land as even and as fine as if it were to be seeded to onions or some other fine seed. It is then in good condition for rapid planting. The style of laying out your planting ground must be governed to a certain extent by the amount of land at your disposal. The small grower with only a limited space in which to grow a few thousand plants, who has to save every foot of land he can for other purposes, cannot do better than plant his carnations in beds, setting the plants about ten inches apart each way, making each bed about five feet wide, leaving about a foot between each bed to attend properly to the hoeing of the soil and topping of the plants.

Our method of field culture is to plant in blocks, each block running about 100 feet wide and its length being several hundred feet, according to the lay of the land. When ready to plant we stretch a line across the width of the block, planting ten inches apart in the rows and eighteen inches between the rows, continuing this until our planting is complete. If one block of land is not enough we follow on to the next. This makes the rows contain about 120 plants. We much prefer having the rows of each variety run about this length rather than to stretch them out several hundred feet, one reason being when we go to dig a certain variety we have it all there together.

When ready for planting the young plants are knocked out of the pots and set close together in trays while in the house or at the frames, as the case may be, enough of them being hauled into the field to keep the planters busy. When planting we start from each end of the line and work toward the center. At starting we commence at the right hand of our block of land and plant toward the left, and when the last plant of each variety is set out the label is put in so that when complete every variety reads from left to right, the same as they do in the greenhouse. Every man on the place understanding this, you can send any of them to the field for plants. The nature of the land here is such that we use a trowel in planting and after the first few rows are planted the planter plants astride the row to avoid tramping down the unplanted space. Also those who drop the plants do all their walking between the rows that are already planted. By following this out it is easy planting clear to the end. Then, after enough space is finished, a man goes over the ground with a hand cultivator.

If any of your plants have been growing in flats or in soil on the benches great care should be taken in getting them out so as to preserve the roots and leave as much of the soil around them as you can. Take a table knife, cutting the soil of each plant out in squares, then give it a squeeze so that it will stick together and form a ball. Be sure that not any of the plants are set out if they are at all dry. Also, clean any weeds out of the soil of the young plants before planting them, otherwise you will have heaps of trouble later on.

British Trade Topics.

With the arrival of genial spring-like weather, trade generally has shown a decided improvement in all branches. A popular spring exhibition arranged by the National Auricula and Primula Society attracted a large gathering to the headquarters of the Royal Horticultural Society on Tuesday. The varied display was an object lesson of the high standard which has been reached amongst the trade in the culture of these attractive spring flowers. The comprehensive assortment of primroses received considerable attention from the visitors. The selection of the day was appropriate for it was the twenty-third anniversary of the death of Lord Beaconsfield, in whose memory primroses are worn by a large section of the public on April 19. Around the deceased statesman's statue near the former scene of his political achievements wreaths and bouquets, chiefly composed of primroses, were placed, these having been sent from various parts of the country. This observance of Primrose day is not a custom of any great advantage to the regular traders. The market salesmen derive a slight benefit, but the bulk of the trade is done by the itinerant hawkers who make raids on the hedgerows and woodlands, to the annoyance of all true lovers of the rural delights of the picturesque country a few miles from the metropolis. In recent years the practice of wearing roses on St. George's day, which is observed on April 23, has come more generally into vogue, following the example of the Irish who honor their patron saint earlier in the year by wearing shamrocks. This pleasing custom has made it better for the rose growers, who have this week marketed large supplies in anticipation of the increased demand. One restaurant in the city supplies each of its customers with a rose button-hole in celebration of the historic day.

Londoners have now a fine display of spring blooms in the public parks and open squares. In Hyde park the brilliant array of hyacinths has been one of the sights of the season, while in Regent's park, which has a more rural aspect, the early blooms form a charming picture. These two parks furnish a splendid advertisement for Jas. Carter & Company, of High Holborn, London, who have supplied the seeds and bulbs.

The increased demand for expensive floral decorations is one of the features of high life in London. Harry Green, the manager of Robert Green, Ltd., high-class florists, stated some time ago that $1,000 is quite an ordinary price for West End aristocrats to spend on the floral embellishment of their rooms on the night of a ball. This is a distinct advance from the modest adornment which was at one time thought sufficient. Table decoration has reached a fine art. Many baskets and stands are arranged in the shape of swans and butterflies and made beautiful by the skillful arrangement of choice flowers. Fifty pounds is frequently spent on a table decoration by rich leaders of fashion. Just now the court is in mourning owing to the death of the Duke of Cambridge, and this has made a difference in the number of social functions being held. The wedding of the Duke of Norfolk, our premier duke and one of the leading Roman Catholic laymen, was a great help to the trade. Some good orders were placed amongst the West End florists. The bride's bouquet was composed entirely of rare white orchids, Odontoglossum crispum, celo-

One of the most successful raisers of lilies of the valley in this country is Wm. Iceton, of Granard Nursery, Putney, near London. By his up-to-date methods, Mr. Iceton is able to dispose of lily of the valley cut blooms all the year round. Six large houses are entirely devoted to them. The crowns are imported in large quantities from Germany in October, November and December, and three parts of the consignment are put in a refrigerator and the remainder are "laid in" in the open ground until required. The retarded crowns are used largely after May. There is always a big demand for lily of the valley at Easter, Christmas and for the chief festivals in connection with the church. The retarding of these popular flowers is also a special feature of the well known establishment of T. Rochford & Sons, Turnford Hall, Hertfordshire. Eight large houses are devoted to lilies of the valley, about six million being flowered annually. During the winter months the crowns are brought in from outside, placed in a hothed in plunging material and kept dark by means of wooden shutters. As soon as the spikes are sufficiently developed and the leaves formed, the shutters are at first tilted gradually until taken off altogether, so as to develop the flowers in full daylight.

Chicago.

Nothing of an encouraging nature may be said of the condition of the local market this week. The most activity is found in the shipping, and all wholesalers report an average spring business in this department. The orders are coming in rather spasmodically, but enough each day to keep the stock fairly well cleaned up. The retail trade remains on the ragged edge; some days active, followed again by a period of depression. The Decoration day season and June wedding time promise to instill the much wanted vigor into the business. Carnations experienced another slight fall in prices this week, and good flowers are to be seen selling at a cent and a half. While the receipts are large the country demands manage to hold them down. Rose stock is of splendid quality, but the cheaper grades must be pushed and slashed to move them. Sweet peas had an unusual run of favor this week, there being one day when every sweet pea within call was cleaned off the counters. Ferns continue a scarce article, and are selling all the way from $3 to $5 per 1,000.

The building season is now well under way, and contractors and builders have all they can do to keep up with orders. A. Dietsch & Company have a number of important contracts for new greenhouses and additions. These include the material for the additions and new houses being erected by Peter Reinberg; Matson & Kron, of West Foster avenue, large house, 30x265 feet; Miller Brothers, Toledo, O., eight short-roof houses, each 260 feet long; Cannon Floral & Seed Company, Lafayette, Col., five short-roof houses, each 105 feet long; Nic Zweifel, Milwaukee, Wis., two houses, 16x78, equipped with iron gutters; C. Moelius, Toledo, O., one house, 36x150 feet; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., a 44-foot addition to a short-roof house, 165 feet long; South Bend Floral Company, South Bend, Ind., house, 200 feet long; George Reinberg, Chicago, new range of eleven houses, each 264 feet long; J. A. Budlong, Chicago, four houses, each 300 feet long; Williams & Sons Company, Batavia, Ill., four houses, 152 feet long. Many of the houses will be equipped with Dietsch's patent U-shaped gutter. The company has also a large number of contracts for material, etc., from the eastern states for additions to short-roof houses.

A number of changes are noted on the floor of the Flower Growers' market. Michael Winandy has removed his stand across the street to the second floor of the Atlas block, and the floor space vacated by him has been taken by Miss N. C. Moore, of Batavia.

Heller Brothers, of New Castle, have let the contract for two additional houses, 50x265 feet each. When this addition is completed they will have more than six acres under glass, devoted almost exclusively to the culture of roses.

Southern outdoor flowers are appearing in the local market in large quantities. E. F. Winterson Company is getting many high-class jonquils and they are fast sellers.

A number of the florists in the Atlas block are renovating and improving their places of business. A large, new ice-box was this week installed in J. A. Budlong's place.

Members of the Florists' Club should remember that the next meeting will be held Thursday evening, May 12, not Wednesday evening, as heretofore.

Alexander Newett has so far recovered from his recent attack of lumbago as to be able to resume his duties at Deamud's.

E. C. Amling handled a good specialty in sweet peas this week, and they required no "drumming" to sell.

Peter Reinberg reports a fine rose plant trade, the demands for bushes from benches being very heavy.

J. B. Deamud is receiving large quantities of fancy ferns, which he is selling at $3 per 1,000.

Sunday was May day, but the event did not cause much of a stir on the market.

A visitor this week was E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind.

New York.

The quality of flowers at the present time is superb. Roses of all kinds can be had at your own price. Bulb stock is very fruitful. White tulips are more abundant now than at any time this season. Golden Spine and Emperor are selling for less than what the bulbs cost. Lilacs from the south have arrived and bring a fair price. Sweet peas are of very good quality and sell readily. Fancy ferns are scarce at the present time, as also is green galax. Pansies are very salable articles, the street peddler bunching them flat with galax around them.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Cut Flower Exchange, which is being held to-day, is an event looked forward to by everybody connected with the Exchange. Five new directors are to be voted for, and a president will be elected by the new board of directors. Wm. Amos, the president, has made a record for himself the last year, and it is to be hoped that the incoming board will re-elect him.

John N. May, who returned to Summit last week after a sojourn in the south, is greatly improved in health, and excepting considerable trouble in walking appears better than he has for several years. During the five months of his absence he has been unable to attend to anything connected with his business, and his anticipated resumption of the responsibilities of his large place will be hailed with sincere pleasure by his many business associates and friends.

The estate of the late George Kruse, Ocean avenue, Jersey City, has been awarded damages against the local gas company for injury to plants from escaping gas.

Roberts & Grunewald of Columbus avenue had a fire on April 30, caused by a defective electric wire. Mr. Roberts put it out with little difficulty.

George Golsner and Wm. Amos are bringing to the market fine crested moss roses.

The sympathy of the craft is with Abe Meckelburg in the recent loss of his father.

Wm. H. Siebrecht of Astoria has some very fine double white lilacs.

Spring seems to have arrived at last and while the pleasant weather has improved things in one direction, it has injured trade in another, as people are fast getting out of town to their country places and shutters are going up all over the fashionable residence districts. With the exception of weddings and trade or society decorations there is not much doing. Roses are a trifle lower, good Beauties going from $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Other roses are also a shade lower. Liberty is now at its very best, the spring growth coming exceptionally fine. Much of the stock is equal to the Brunner in size and color, if anything a richer shade. Carnations are still in good shape with prices half to a cent lower than prices of two weeks ago. Sweet peas are plentiful and good stock meets with ready sale. Lilac from the south is now in and sells rapidly. It is being sent to the produce commission merchants on the wharf and is quickly grabbed up by the street men. Bedding plants are moving lively; there is a good demand for pot roses but it is hard to get them in flower as they are picked out as soon as they show color and do not get a chance to open.

The May meeting of the Florists' Club was all right both in point of attendance and interest. Jos. Heacock's paper "Is the American Beauty a Back Number?" was well handled. He showed his faith in this grand variety, which he declared still had a great future, although the last winter, the low prices prevailing, which he could not account for, had left the grower little if any margin of profit. Leo Niessen did not appear to tell about the grading of cut flowers, which will therefore have to go on as before. The question of sending a bowling team to represent the club at St. Louis was, Chairman Westcott said, the knotty problem and Robert Kift tried to straighten the matter out. It developed in the discussion, which was general, that there was much opposition to the course pursued the last two years of offering railroad tickets as a prize to those who made the team. It was finally decided that as strong a team as possible would be selected in a manner much similar to other seasons, but with the prize clause stricken out. There was a good representation of the younger members present the "triple leader" being apparently a drawing card. Deacon Harris, in his anxiety to get the bowling matter straight, became all tangled up with his eyes and noses but was finally landed on his feet by John Burton.

Robert Craig & Son have a fine lot of Ramblers just coming into flower. They are exceptionally choice stock. This firm has also a house of longiflorums which are now at their best and much in demand for wedding decorations.

At the Growers' market Manager Meehan says things are moving satisfactorily. He would like to see prices better but as so many hold the same view he does not worry but just keeps the stock moving.

Ed. Reid says he has all he wants to do between daybreak and sundown and thinks the flower business is great for a willing man, as the other kind could not stand the pace.

Charlie Cox is sending in some nice Centaurea imperialis to S. S. Pennock. He has three houses just coming in and will soon have it in quantity.

The H. A. Dreer Company has a great stock of Ampelopsis Veitchi which is still in good demand.

Leo Niessen is very strong on Beauty roses at present. His Liberty roses are also top notchers.

Eugene Bernheimer is getting in some choice sweet peas in great variety of color. K.

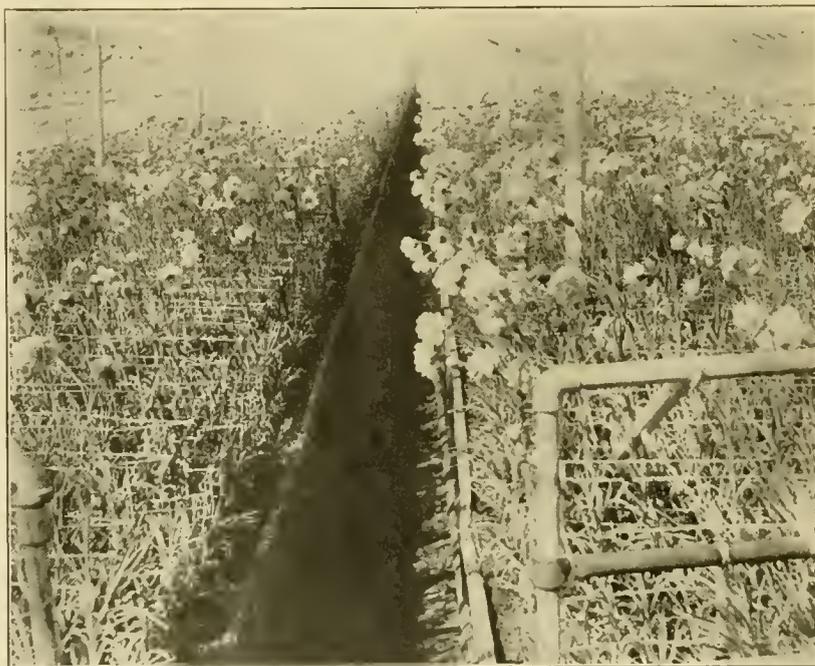

Boston.

The cut flower trade is characterized by extreme lassitude at the present time. The weather is favorable to overproduction and the stock coming into market every morning is far ahead of the facilities for its consumption. All lines are overstocked but roses and carnations have sustained the most serious set-back in values. A novelty in several of the retail windows is fruited strawberries in pots. They are well done and handsome and if it were only a month earlier they would create a sensation.

Emil Johansen, gardener to J. E. Rothwell, showed two handsome plants of Odontoglossum Pescatorei at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting, Wednesday evening, April 20. A vase of Carnation Cardinal was also staged by the Chicago Carnation Company.

Welch Brothers are receiving from Carl Jurgens, of Newport, American Beauty roses of unusual perfection of bud and foliage, being the first crop from the houses that have been kept cold all winter for the purpose of cutting.

The will of the late John Chaffin, of Newton, gives the sum of $1,000, the income of which is to be devoted to special prizes for hardy roses.

Business in cut flower lines opened up this week with a brighter aspect, but now things are quiet with plenty of stock of all kinds at the wholesale houses and no buyers. This is largely due to the effects of the warm weather, resulting with the grower in an increase in output and with the retailer in a desire not to put in more stock than need be, but rather wait for a slump in prices, which is bound to follow if not there now. The only lines that seem to have the call are white roses and Lawson carnations. This may be said to be a carnation city. We think that the uncertain supply of roses in this market, due mainly to the fact that we have no large rose growers near here, is the principal cause of the popularity of the divine flower. A frequent cause of comment among the trade is the dying out of the call for the double violet. The last season has been no exception in this regard. For some years past the California Giant has reigned supreme, and we can safely say that our output in this flower is away up both in quality and quantity. Greens continue to be scarce. This appears to be general just now, judging from letters received from many of our specialists along these lines. Prices can hardly be said to be firm and they have a wider range than we have noticed for some time.

The carnation exhibition last Monday, May 2, from the standpoint of numbers would hardly be called a success. Our local carnation specialist, John Steidle, staged five vases of creditable cut blooms, fifty each of Estelle, Wolcott, Prosperity, Enchantress and Harlowarden. The Chicago Carnation Company was the only other exhibitor showing an extensive collection of novelties and seedlings. We fear the exhibition was not sufficiently advertised. The next exhibition is to be of tender roses, May 21-25 inclusive. Entries must be received not later than May 18. The classes provided for are as follows:

- Class 1—Vase twenty-five blooms, Bride.
 " 2— " " " Bridesmaid.

At last there has come to St. Louis settled weather. We have had one of the worst and latest springs on record and all lines have suffered in consequence.

The unsettled conditions have interfered with much spring planting, particularly with trees and shrubs, and from reports much anticipated planting has been abandoned, for it is now too late. Our florists are all expecting to clean up pretty well this spring for there will be an unusual demand for bedding plants to beautify our World's Fair city homes.

The Missouri Botanical Garden has just received in fine condition from Sander, England, a large consignment of orchids, said to be valued at $1,000 and consisting of 180 different species. This, together with the 100 different kinds of orchids and bromeliads sent recently by Dr. Trelase from Mexico, makes the collection the second largest in the United States. It now includes over 1,000 different species of orchids. The garden has an agave in bloom.

Weather conditions have interfered somewhat with work at the World's Fair and the planting has been much delayed. However, the weather is ideal just now for all outside work, and it is being pushed to the limit. Too much cannot be said in praise of the gentlemen who have charge of the grounds and exhibits. What they have already accomplished is immense, and what they still have to do would frighten most ordinary men.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club is May 12. The club is growing both in interest and membership. All the world is looking at St. Louis just now and we want a club that we can feel proud of. We are looking forward to a large attendance and another one of our usual interesting meetings. There will be a discussion led by F. J. Ammann on "Replanting Roses." Also one on "Violet Growing" led by F. W. Ude, Jr.

The death of our fellow craftsman, John Young, president of one of the oldest firms in the city, has caused general mourning. Mr. Young died very suddenly, almost without warning, April 29. His picture and obituary appear on another page.

Would-be thieves broke into J. J. Beneke's store last Tuesday morning, but were frightened away before anything was taken. The plate glass door was entirely demolished. The damage is covered by insurance.

Among the carnation men planting in the field is well under way, and so far as can be seen the few thousand that were planted just before our last cold snap and unexpected snow are not much the worse for their experience. D.

Trade last week brightened up markedly. There was the usual succession of weddings anticipating the coming of the reported ill-luck of May, which month, however, is said latterly to be losing its horrors. The beginning of the commencement season is here, and there were many calls for bunches of flowers more or less expensive for the new-fledged dentists and doctors given their degrees and diplomas by the numerous schools for which this city has been celebrated. To-day (May 2) was the date for the newly appointed magistrate, boards of police commissioners, liquor license commissioners, election supervisors, and other public officials to take their seats, and the occasion of their installation was availed of by their friends to express their congratulations by gifts of flowers, abundant in quantity and in some cases handsome in quality, some of the board and court rooms being transformed, according to the daily papers, into "bowers of flowers." There was simultaneously a considerable demand for flowers for funerals, so that for one day at least the calls were in excess of the supply and their was active skirmishing to secure all the material needed. Good roses were scarce and white carnations especially so. The distribution of this business was general and everybody, practically, had his share. Other commencements will follow along with their customary requirements, and then the June weddings will figure on the programme until the advent of mid-summer dullness.

Jas. H. Brummel has at last recovered enough from his injuries to return to his long accustomed stand in the Lexington market, where he serves as an encyclopedia for reference by all classes and conditions of men and women who want to know about the treatment in health, and cure in disease, of their garden and house plants; solves problems as to botanical nomenclature, and acts as general adviser to the public at large, and all with a courtesy and patience, as well as with a knowledge and experience which is seldom encountered. The Electric Railway company, by whose car he was so badly crippled, has declined to make any adequate compensation for the damages inflicted, and Mr. Brummel has entered suit against it.

We have fine spring weather at last—the air fresh and inspiring, the temperature warm, and the sky of the brightest blue, though the nights continue cool. On Sunday there was a wind storm accompanied by hail, which, however, did no great damage. Out-door work is proceeding rapidly; carnations are being planted and gardens shaped up, but the season is still behindhand, and the sellers of plants in the markets complain that the gardening fever has not reached its point of warmest intensity, and buyers are not as enthusiastic as might be wished.

There died this week Mrs. Sarah Feast, widow (second wife) of Samuel Feast, an old-time gardener, one of the pioneers and long in business in Baltimore and its vicinity, and remembered as the originator of a group of hardy roses, Queen of the Prairies, Baltimore Belle, etc., of some exceptionally good camellias and of a cactus said to be one of the largest flowered in cultivation—Cereus Feastii.

John Cook was attacked by vertigo several days ago and has since been confined to his bed, though on the way to recovery. S. B.

Washington, D. C.

In the course of human events nearly everybody is inclined at some time to knock on existing conditions. When Washingtonians have nothing better to do they knock on the congressmen because they are not doing more for the District of Columbia. All this happens while congress is in session, but when the statesmen "fold their tents and silently steal away," then it happens that a lonesome feeling settles down on the city, even to the florists' stores, and the sound of the knocking is low, and there are mourners who mourn for the days—that are dead—of American Beauty roses at $15 to $18 a dozen. A number of the senators and representatives are lavish entertainers and are liberal patrons of the decorator, and then there are a number of young and handsome men in congress, who, directly or indirectly are supposed to influence the market for expensive and "letching" bouquets. This is a prelude to the statement that prices have about gone to pieces. American Beauties can be had for most any old price. One retailer says he is getting $10 per dozen, but it must be from a customer who never buys at any other store, for plenty of good ones are selling at $5 per dozen. Other roses and carnations share in the general break up, and yet a great amount of stock is being sold and it is probable that some dealers are making as much money now as they were in the days of high prices, but they have to hustle to do it. There is a lot of people who will not buy roses or carnations while they can get a quarter section of a plum, cherry or some other kind of flowering tree for a little money.

I am satisfied that a host of the readers of the AMERICAN FLORIST will agree with me when I say that I am delighted with the news that there is a silver lining to the cloud that has overshadowed the genial Edwin Lonsdale. Let us speak of his good deeds now while it may give him some satisfaction. His writings have been, to me, interesting and instructive, and I think him worthy of a high place among the florists of the nation. He deserves all the honors Philadelphia may bestow upon him.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Louis Loose will start about June 1 on an extended European tour. While abroad Mr. Loose will visit the most noted growers and may be expected to return with some new ideas, if there are any to be found over there. He tells me that he intends to visit near Lyons, France, the home of the new red rose, Etoile de France, and investigate its merits. This rose, a cross between Chatenay and Fisher Holmes, is being highly praised.

Otto Bauer has established a reputation for unique displays of jardinières, baskets and fern dishes. His latest is a lot of jardinières of Indian pottery in different sizes. There can be no doubt about its genuineness for the idol that came with the lot is as ugly as any Indian idol one ever saw.

William Arnold, for several years foreman at Loose's Alexandria, Va., range, has resigned the position. Fred Hill, for the past year in charge of the palm section, is his successor.

Alex. B. Garden is erecting a nice dwelling house on his place for the use of his foreman. S. E.

The different stores along Fourth street are taking advantage of the cheap prices of cut flowers, and to decorate their windows some beautiful effects are made with carnations, sweet peas, daffodils, Harrisii lilies, etc. Hardesty & Company had a fine showing of Crimson Rambler roses and hydrangeas in pots, which attracted considerable attention. The Rosebank Company showed an elegant line of sweet peas. Julius Baer had Harrisii lilies and daffodils, and the R. A. Kelly Company violets, forget-me-nots in the center, with Adiantum cuneatum and lycopodiums in pots, which made a very rich looking display.

Trade holds up pretty well, and there is a nice lot of flowers for all orders. Ferns and other green goods are more plentiful, and if you don't see what you want in the wholesale houses, all you have to do is ask for it, and if it is in season the wholesale man will get it for you. Bedding out has started, and all those who handle this line of plants have their hands full of orders and more coming in. The regular monthly meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held May 14 at the club rooms in the Jabez Elliott Flower Market. The nomination of officers for the ensuing year and other important business is to be transacted.

The Avenue Floral Company, of New Orleans, La., is sending exceptionally fine blooms of Liliun longiflorum to this market. Considering the distance, they came through in good shape and sell readily on arrival.

R. A. Betz has finished a wire design of an elk about ten feet high, which will be planted with small plants and placed in one of the parks during the Elks' convention the coming summer. A. O.

Business continues to remain in a drabby condition. The weather conditions are greatly improved and outdoor planting has begun in earnest. Flower market condition are about the same as last week. Roses of all kinds are plentiful and of good values. Carnations keep moving, as do lilies; lots of callas are to be had but they move slowly. Sweet peas, lily of the valley, gardenias, irises, pansies, snapdragon and mignonette seem to be at their best. Greens are plentiful.

On Wednesday, May 4, Randolph & McClements elaborately decorated the banquet room and tables for a dinner given to Bishop Phelan, who is celebrating his golden jubilee. They also decorated the Carnegie music hall for the reception tendered to the bishop on the same evening.

The death of Councilman Reed occasioned the sending of a great number of funeral designs. Among the number was a large basket of American Beauty roses made by Ulam & Company and sent by the city.

The regular monthly meeting of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held May 3. Bedding plants were discussed and some specimens were exhibited.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hall have the sympathy of the craft in the loss of their little four-year-old son, who died of scarlet fever last Thursday.

During the week the stork visited the homes of Fred Burki and Frank Faulk and in both cases left a girl baby.

Blind Brothers report their bedding stock to be in finer condition than ever before.

While there is lots of improving and repairing planned for this summer, seemingly very little new glass will be added to our establishments. Philip Conway probably will lead with a rose house requiring 10,000 feet of glass. He will also add a new boiler to his heating apparatus. The boiler will be on top of the ground and an automatic pump will return the condensation.

It appears that the Indianapolis Flower and Plant Company has expended comparatively less for coal than any other place in this city. The trick was done with a very large boiler, plenty of draft, a good grade of Virginia coal and hot water system.

No more internal furnace boiler for Smith & Young Company, the one they put up a few years ago having gone beyond repair. They are convinced that this type of boiler compares very unfavorably in all respects with the old style of tubulars.

The State Florists' Association held its May meeting with a fair number of members present. Several interesting articles from the trade papers were read and discussed. Herman D. Schilling was elected a member.

Martin Nelson is doing nicely in his new place in Mapleton. Encouraged by his success he is planning an addition to his glass, installation of a new water works and other improvements.

Martin Brandlein will henceforth have to forego the pleasure of personally inspecting his boiler internally, as he has outgrown the dimensions of the manhole.

Recent visitors were H. M. Altick, of Dayton, O., and T. F. Keller, Providence, R. I.

A fine baby girl has made its appearance in Irwin Bertermann's home. H. J.

The bright days of the last week have hastened on all stock, and the receipts in consequence are very heavy. Demand is also very good, so that the market is in fair shape. Roses are good, some particularly fine Liberties being noted. The only scarce articles on the market at present are smilax and common ferns, but within a week there will be plenty of both. Violets are still with us, and in fair shape considering the date. Harrisii and calla lilies can be had in large quantities at very reasonable prices.

There were many flowers at the opening of the common council. Some very fine baskets were noted and any number of long-stemmed American Beauty. One alderman received a large eagle made of carnations and galax. It is estimated that $1,500 worth of flowers were sent. Edlesfen, Chacona and Kapsalis, Lambros & Company had the bulk of the orders.

At Mitchell park flowers of every hue are in bloom. It is expected that in a week or two, weather permitting, the work of completing the lily ponds in the newly acquired section on South Pierce street will be begun.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting last Tuesday, prices of spring bedding stock being the main subject of discussion.

Herman Hunkel is doing some extra hustling on account of a new addition to his family—a boy.

A. Billings, of Cudahy, will tear down and rebuild his greenhouses during the coming summer.

Alex. Klokner, of Wauwatosa, is adding a ten-acre nursery to his greenhouses.

Herman Staeps, Elm Grove, will erect two rose houses at once.

Visitors: T. Hinchliffe and J. Bourgaize, Racine; C. B. Tremain, Hartford, Wis. II.

Detroit.

The continuation of very cold and unseasonable weather has had the effect of seriously hindering outside work and very little planting has yet been done, whereas a year ago every carnation grower of this vicinity had his entire stock planted out. Trade conditions since Easter have been devoid of any unusual features and the absence of animation noted in retail circles is considered due to the unfavorable weather prevailing, yet no surplus of cut flowers has accumulated and at times there has been a scarcity of carnations. Violets are yet fine and many are sold. Some helated lots of Easter lilies are now in and are used chiefly for funeral work.

The Florists' Club meeting of Wednesday evening, April 20, did not bring out the usual good attendance, but the "regulars" were there and the time was devoted to the reading of extracts of importance from horticultural papers and the discussion of the same. Herman Thiemann, of Owosso, Mich., was present and gave an interesting address on dahlias, of which he is a large grower.

J. F. McHugh has opened a floral department in the Strand grocery store, 315 Woodward avenue. He still retains his store at 118 Michigan avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Breitmeyer are visiting in Philadelphia this week.

Newport, R. I.

At last it is warm. We have jumped right into growing weather. The week started with a very severe rain storm which did considerable damage to shrubbery and newly sown lawns. Everybody is now very busy and the seed stores are rushed day and night, but it will be a very short season this year as certainly four good weeks have been lost through the lateness of the spring. It seems strange that purchasers of seeds always wait until the day, and almost the hour, they wish to use them, but such is the case and the seedsmen are driven hard. Bedding plants are just beginning to sell, and as in former years geraniums are most in demand. It seems as if coleus were less and less used here; in other bedding plants the call runs about the same from one season to another.

Fadden decorated Trinity church on Thursday for the Grant-White wedding. Palms and other specimen plants were grouped in the chancel. On the communion table were vases of white roses and the altar rails were entwined with Asparagus plumosus and Bride roses. The color scheme in the church was white and green, which harmonized beautifully with the pure white interior of old Trinity. The bride carried a bouquet of Bride roses tied with white satin ribbon. The maid of honor had a shower bouquet of Daybreak carnations with pale pink ribbons. For the reception Fadden had everything yellow and white. Mr. and Mrs. White stood in an alcove banked with palms, hyacinths, carnations and roses. In all the rooms throughout the house were vases of yellow daffodils, white hyacinths and white roses. Large baskets of yellow narcissus and Bride roses were also on the breakfast table. Outdoors a great number of palms and bays were grouped with good effect.

Mrs. Herman Oelrichs is having a beautiful marble fountain with bronze figures erected at Rose Cliff, her summer place on Bellevue avenue. J. M. Hodgson, who is doing the grading and planting will make four beds around the fountain, two formal oblong ones of box and the others round ones of hardy rhododendrons and hydrangeas intermingled with lilies.

In the severe wind and rain storm we had this week many newly planted evergreens were blown down and uprooted. Some cedars a year planted did not escape. It is always safe to wire trees securely for at least two years, as it takes time for such stock to become firmly rooted.

Men are engaged in the construction of a mile and a half of sewer and drain from Oakland Farm to the ocean for Alred G. Vanderbilt. Some of the work is being rushed along under difficulties to secure its completion in time to permit the planting of crops on some of the land drained.

The progress committee which has been organized to boom Newport as summer resort will advertise in the better class of magazines a pamphlet describing this city and its many attractions. These books will also be distributed to interested persons at the St. Louis Fair.

Charles Beasley has been engaged by William Butler, the manager for Reginald C. Vanderbilt, to take charge of the flower and vegetable gardens at Sandy Point Farm. At present there is no glass at Mr. Vanderbilt's, but this fall greenhouses will be erected.

The George A. Weaver Company has just received from P. J. Looymans & Sons, Oudenbosch, Holland, some rare shrubs and trees. This shipment includes aralias, catalpas, evergreen oaks and many other good things.

William B. Scott & Company are having built two delivery wagons, which they will use just as soon as their new seed store is completed, about the middle of June.

H. L. DeBlois reports the seed business as quiet for the season. He is offering this week a nice line of hardy roses. Vegetable plants are moving slowly he says.

The Rhode Island Nurseries report an especially good trade, in fact more some days than they can well attend to; everybody wants large stock for immediate effect.

The park commission held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday. Chairman Shepley presided. Plans were made for the spring work.

William Jurgens is cutting some very fine narcissi of several varieties, his Emperor and Empress being especially good.

H. D. Auchincloss is having erected at Hammersmith Farm two greenhouses by Hitchings & Company, of New York.

Visitors: James McHutchison, representing McHutchison & Company, New York; S. D. Clapp, representing Leggett & Brother, New York; G. Kronwel, for C. J. Speelman & Sons, Sassenheim, Holland; A. L. Barnett, for Reed & Keller, New York, and George H. Milton for the Homogansett Floral Company, Wickford, R. I. X.

Columbus, O.

Stock in general is scarce in this locality, which is largely owing to the fact that considerable out-of-doors hulbous stock has been ruined by excessive cold, wind and rain. A limited amount of good stock grown under glass is still to be found with a few of our growers. Cut flower work marked the last week as a busy one, and from now on all those growing bedding stock will have all they can do. The Columbus public is very much interested in the Florists' Club just organized, and predict that the organizing of such a body of honest toilers will benefit our city in many ways.

The Columbus Florists' Club was organized April 28 at a meeting at the residence of E. C. Underwood, Twenty-first street and Fair avenue. It is composed of florists and their assistants, and is designed to bring them closer together. The club started with a membership of sixty-two. The officers selected are:

President, Sherman Stevens; vice president, R. A. Currie; treasurer, Gustav Drobisch; secretary, E. C. Underwood; sergeant-at-arms, John Dreher.

CARL.

Joliet, Ill.

The Chicago Carnation Company is offering, through the Joliet papers, $100 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the man who broke into its greenhouse of Fiancee carnations at 2 a. m. Saturday, April 23. We are informed that the night man saw the burglar coming out of the opening which he had made in the glass with a glass cutter, with an armful of plants, most of which he dropped in his haste to escape. He had evidently seen the night man approaching, but got away. It will go hard with him if caught, as it is not the first time this firm has had new carnations stolen.

BATAVIA, N. Y.—John Pickert has taken the contract for the erection of a house and greenhouse on land at the corner of South Main and River streets, recently purchased by Louis Stroh, of Attica.

OBITUARY.

William U. Kimberle.

William U. Kimberle, of Broad street, Newark, N. J., died Sunday, April 24, after a brief illness of Bright's disease. The business of Mr. Kimberle is the oldest in Newark of its kind, having been established by his father, the late John U. Kimberle, over forty years ago. Since the death of J. U. Kimberle, five years ago, his son had managed the business. His age was 39 years. He is survived by his mother and one sister.

John Young.

John Young, president of the firm of C. Young & Sons, of St. Louis, Mo., died suddenly, April 29, of heart failure. Mr. Young was born in London, England, in 1849. He was the eldest son of C. Young, who founded the floral concern which still bears his name about forty years ago. The deceased came to America in 1874, settling in St. Louis, where he became associated in business with his father and four brothers. Five years later the elder member of the firm retired from active business, since which time the deceased had acted in the capacity of president of the concern. In 1881 he was married to Miss Minnie Schollmeyer, of St. Louis, who, with four children—Mrs. David Millar, of Chicago, Misses Edna and Helen Young and Elmer Young, of St. Louis—survive him. Besides the members of his immediate family, Mr. Young is survived by four brothers—James, Harry, William and Charles J. Young, all of St. Louis. Mr. Young's death was entirely unexpected, and was due primarily to heart disease. On Friday evening he attended the Olympic theater, and shortly before the curtain fell on the last act was taken suddenly ill. Medical attention was hastily summoned and Mr. Young was conveyed to his home, where death occurred. Funeral services were held May 1, followed by interment at Bellefontaine cemetery. Many handsome floral designs were contributed by the numerous friends of the deceased, trade and otherwise. See portrait page 622.

RUSH planting now. All vegetation retarded by the cold spring and frozen ground is ready to burst into life under the influence of a few warm days.

As we go to press Smith's Chrysanthemum Manual comes to hand, full of practical information for the chrysanthemum grower. An extended notice of this publication will appear later.

MYRSIPHYLLUM ASPARAGOIDES MYRTI-FOLIUM. Meyer Brothers, of Hanover, are sending out a new seedling smilax under the above name. The leaves are said to be much smaller than those of the type—much like the myrtle, in fact.
It has a lighter appearance and is as graceful as the older form, tending to branch more. The cut strings are said to be much more lasting than the common variety, keeping in water ten to twelve days.

Compost Flower Pot Machine.

B. Remmers & Sons, of Philadelphia, Pa., have invented a machine for making flower pots of common garden soil and cow manure. Seedlings and cuttings are started in these pots, which, with the plants, are put directly into the ground at planting time. In this way the soil around the plants is not disturbed.

Society of American Florists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Thomas Devoy & Son, Poughkeepsie,
N. Y., submit for registration a zonal geranium, Telegraph. A seedling of 1900; parentage, E. G. Hill x The Wonder.
Flowers single, 2½ to 3 inches in diameter, deep orange-cerise, large and borne in immense compact clusters, 5 to 6½ inches across. Foliage dark green, with heavy zone. Habit very robust, height two feet. A profuse-blooming bedder.
WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

Oncidium Varicosum.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Referring to the illustration of our house of oncidiums in your issue of April 9, page 477, we wish to call your attention to the batch of our type of Oncidium varicosum in bloom.
The color being yellow does not readily catch the eye, showing black in the picture. However, upon close examination you will observe the great quantity of bloom and you can easily imagine what a magnificent spectacle the house presented at the time the photograph was taken, November 30. We may mention that previous to photographing the house we had cut about 1,000 dozen blooms, some of the spikes bearing upward of 200 flowers each. This species should prove useful commercially, as it is a great success and extremely easy to grow.

STANLEY, ASHTON & COMPANY.

The Edelweiss.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—In answer to A.
Lange, concerning edelweiss, I have grown it for a number of years in our rock garden. The plant appears to be a biennial, at least it is so with me. It grows one year, flowers the next, and then dies. I raise a few plants from seed each year, sowing the seed in 4-inch pots, in a light sandy soil, in February, placing the pots in a warm greenhouse in a temperature of at least 60°. The seedlings are transplanted as soon as large enough to handle, and by the middle of May, after properly hardening off, are ready to be planted out in the rock garden where we give them a northern exposure. They usually flower finely the second year and are well worth growing, their star-like flowers being very attractive. EDWARD J. CANNING.

Shading and Putty.

The following method of shading is cheap, easily applied and effective: Bolted whiting mixed with a very little boiled oil and reduced with kerosene. Too much oil will make it hard to remove, while if too little is used it will wash off with the rains.

Whiting costs much less than white lead and a pound will make more shading as it is bulkier. If properly mixed it is as effective as white lead and it does not have the bad effect of lime wash on paint and putty. It can be applied with a syringe or brush as desired.

This same bolted whiting should be used for greenhouse putty. If whitelead and oil are first mixed to the consistency of common paint, then the whiting added and worked in until the mass can be handled, a putty will be made which is perfect for greenhouse work. It will be strong, hard and durable, but can be removed from the bars when patching without mutilating the wood. Common commercial putty is made largely of fish oil, cotton oil or other adulterants, and marble dust, and is worthless for greenhouse purposes.

In Reply to "Job."

So the erudite and long suffering "Job," in a recent issue of your New York contemporary, has been finding fault with the way we use the English language.
Perhaps his ancestral ties arouse his fervor. He ought really to show more leniency towards the young and inexperienced. He belies his name, why not have a little patience with an innocent beginner?

The editorial "we" is sometimes ambiguous we must confess, but it sometimes covers the case in fact, and might also more truly fit that of "Job" than the insignificant "I." Poor "Job" with his many trials and anxieties is certainly adding largely to his labor of love, if he is going to endeavor to straighten out the grammar of such a cosmopolitan lot as we poor uneducated sons of Adam.

We are not all fitted by instinct, nationality and education to shine as perfect English scholars; nor is it the good fortune of many of us to "sit at the feet of Gamaliel," and pick holes in the syntax of all who would try to give the plain unpolished facts to their fellow craftsmen. Go on, dear "Job," with your noble work. The next time our path leads us to the New York end of the Brooklyn bridge we will "sally down the alley" to Rose and Duane streets, and shake your hand. Be prepared for "we."
We were glad you enjoyed the jokes.
They were "rather beyond the pale of a matter of fact journal," but we hope metaphysically you were benefited by them. TRAVELER.

Detailed description on application. Owner has two business enterprises and must dispose of one. This place is well fitted for a general local trade. The good will costs nothing, and is worth much.

Pointer No. 25.

Indiana—11,000 feet of glass nearly new; hot water. Good dwelling house and small barn, all in good condition; 1½ acres land. Population 4,000; two railroads. Will rent with privilege of buying. This place will bear inspection. Don't hesitate to ask questions.

Pointer No. 26.

20 Acres of Land—100 miles from Chicago, population 5,500. A good market. Will put in land as silent partner, and some cash in addition, if a reliable and experienced party can be secured. This opportunity is a good one. In all probability the increase in value of land will be considerable. Your careful investigation is solicited.

Wants a Job.

While it has not been our intention to conduct a labor bureau, we are making the acquaintance of some good men who are out of employment. We have the names of two now we should like to accommodate. If you know where a good man is needed, please write us.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admission on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

The Seed Trade.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Chas. McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.
Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-23, 1904.

ONION sets are reported well sold out in Philadelphia and New York.

NEW YORK.—Charles F. Meyer has removed from 19 Barclay street to 99 Warren street.

CHARLES VICK has charge of the New York state exhibit in the World's Fair Horticulture building.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Joseph Steckler, of the Steckler Seed Company, lost his young son last week.

VISITED CHICAGO: Jesse E. Northrup, Minneapolis, Minn.; S. Y. Haines, Tompkins, Mich.; H. Field, Shenandoah, Ia.

C. C. MORSE & COMPANY, Santa Clara, Cal., have an extensive display of seeds in the California state exhibit in the World's Fair Agriculture building.

TORONTO, ONT.—Steele, Briggs Seed Company is getting its full share of orders, which are more plentiful than in former years, and the staff is working nights trying to catch up.

F. W. MAAS, recently with the St. Louis Seed Company, has taken a position with the Goulds Manufacturing Company, of Seneca Falls, N. Y., and will have charge of that firm's World's Fair display of spraying apparatus.

PAUL GENSOLLEN, secretary of the Syndicate for the Defense of Horticultural Interests at Toulon, writes regarding the work of the syndicate for the coming season: "This is the fifth battle, this will be the fifth victory."

THE American Mushroom Company is offering a new spawn called Tissue Culture Pure Spawn, which is said to have been grown after improved methods. Growers will watch the behavior of this new spawn with much interest.

BOSTON, MASS.—The seedsmen are working from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m. every day in the week. Everything is in such a rush that clerks nearly lose their heads trying to keep up with the work. Notwithstanding the recent cold weather with freezing and snow the pressure has continued unabated, the counter trade being particularly brisk. Corn, especially canner's sorts, is in short supply. Crosby corn cannot be bought.

Waterloo, Neb.

Operations in this locality have been very much delayed by the unusually late spring. The favorable weather of the past week has stimulated work very much, and it is being pushed rapidly to make up for lost time. The area planted for onion sets has been materially reduced from that of previous years. The seed has been sown about two weeks later than usual, but it is coming up satisfactorily and promises a good stand.

The prevailing high prices paid for typical corn that could be used for seed has opened the eyes of the more progressive farmers to the importance of growing thoroughbred corn, with the result that there will be a marked increase in the acreage devoted to pure corn.

It is rather early to estimate very clearly what will be done in the line of vine seeds. Matters in that direction are very quiet. B.

Seedsmen at the World's Fair.

In the Agriculture building the Albert Dickinson Seed Company, D. I. Bushnell & Co. and L. L. Olds have so far the only exhibits. The first named firm has had five men on the ground most of the past week preparing its exhibit.

Wood & Stubbs, Louisville, are making a display in connection with the Kentucky exhibit. Mr. Stubbs has spent most of the past week at St. Louis.

Frank Barnard, of Ventura, Cal., prepared the handsome collection of garden beans which is seen in the California display.

D. I. Bushnell is chief of the anthropology department of the World's Fair, and has troubles of his own in that line.

San Francisco.

April 23.—Ten days of unusually high temperature throughout the state, south of San Francisco, succeeding the copious downpours of March, baked the surface almost to the verge of paralyzing growing crops. This has now been changed by intermittent showers, which have softened the surface, and all seed crops are now booming like a border town. In the southern districts (Ventura, etc.,) everything is bustle, taking advantage of the favorable conditions to prepare the ground for bean planting. At no time within the last dozen years have conditions been so favorable as they are now for bountiful crops, not only of seeds but of everything else. SEEDSMAN.

French Seed Crops.

PARIS, April 22.—The planting of the roots which had been stored or protected during the winter being at an end, and the sowing of most of the annuals finished, we may now review the prospects for next fall's seed crop. We have had a very mild, wet winter, with only a couple of spells of frost worth speaking of, during which the thermometer, however, never sunk any lower than 14° above zero. Most of the roots and plants passed the winter quite well, and had it not been for the floods, which damaged to some extent certain fields of cabbages, parsley, etc. in the growing districts of western France, the conditions for the seed crop could not be better than they are at present. The only thing we now require is a change from rainy to warm, bright days. The soil around Paris and in the northern part of France is saturated with water, and sunny weather would induce growth to make rapid progress. We are, however, at a time of the year when the weather is most erratic, and when a pretty sharp frost may do a lot of harm. Beets and mangels are already planted in their permanent quarters. The acreage is pretty large in the different growing districts, and, nothing interfering until harvest, a good crop may be expected. The same is true of the carrots and turnips, of which large breadths have been planted, with good prospects for a fine crop. Cabbages, cauliflower, rutabagas, kohlrabis, parsley and spinach are in the best of condition, and give hope for a large crop. Of winter radishes and parsnips the acreage planted is not so large as last season, but both articles promise to yield a good crop. As regards the annuals, the crop of spring radishes having been pretty large for two years, good stocks seem to have been left over, and contracts made with the growers around Paris and in western France are much smaller than usual. The sowings, however, were made under favorable conditions, and prospects for a fair crop are hopeful. The seedlings of the peppers, egg plants and tomatoes in southern France are looking well at this writing, but it is much too early to forecast the result of the crop.

Jobbers in the seed trade say that business has not been so good this season as during the last few years. Competition has been very keen, as is usually the case when stocks are large, and the ensuing low-price level left a very small margin of profit. The seed business proves most remunerative in seasons when crops are not so large and prices are not cut. Regarding the retail trade, lack of snow and the mild winter induced that trade to send in the orders in a regular way from the time the catalogues were received, instead of waiting for the first fine spring days and then rushing for the seeds. Fears are expressed, however, that the total amount of the retail business may not come up to the average.

SPECTATOR.

French Bulb Situation.

The acreage planted of Roman hyacinths seems to be somewhat larger than last season. Up to the end of March the plantations looked very fine, but for several weeks the southern growers, in opposition to their northern brethren, experienced a drought which, if it is to last much longer, may check the growing bulbs and prevent many of those which are planted on non-irrigable land from attaining a marketable size. No price has yet been fixed by the Syndicate de Defense. At its last meeting, held April 16, the syndicate, in order to ascertain the result of the crop, decided to mail to each grower a blank, asking him to fill in the quantity of bulbs he had sold last season and the quantity he expects to have for sale this year. The price is to be fixed by the syndicate on receipt of the answers.

Some of the jobbers offered to buy fine lots at 80 francs per thousand, but the offer was refused, the growers expecting a better price. The jobbers, in order to secure the bulbs, then promised to pay those growers a little higher price than the one to be fixed by the syndicate later on. It is possible that in the beginning of the campaign quotations will rule pretty high, say between 80 and 85 francs per 1,000, and perhaps even 90 francs may be asked if the crop should prove to be inferior to that of last season, but the question is whether there will not be a decline afterwards. It is natural to ask whether the French bulb growers are not going a little too far in raising their prices every year, even when crops are larger. If in years when crops are good the growers are not satisfied with 80 francs per 1,000, which is a very remunerative price, what will they ask in seasons when the bulbs prove scarce? It is to be regretted for all concerned in the bulb business that last year one of the dealers, losing patience in August, started buying and thus compelled all the jobbers to do so. Had the latter waited a week longer most of the growers, for fear of losing the sale of their bulbs, would have accepted a fair price and continued to do so for years to come, while at present florists who want to grow the bulbs will have to pay whatever is asked. SPECTATOR.

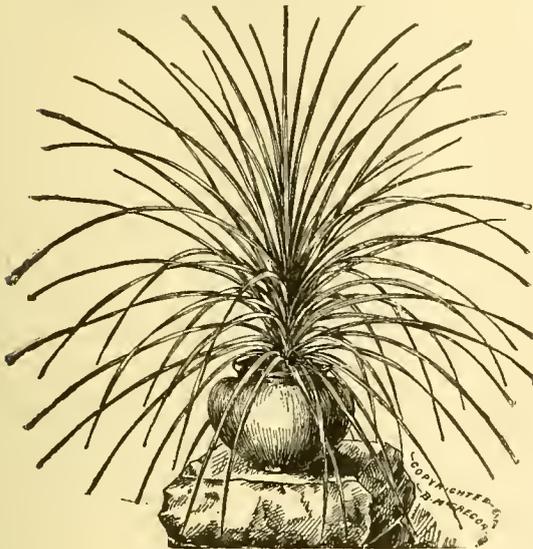

[As may easily be seen, the above reflects the views of a wholesale buyer. No doubt the growers can give reasons for a somewhat opposite position.—Ed.]

The Nursery Trade

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn., Pres.; Frank A. Weber, St. Louis, Mo., Vice-Pres.; George C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June 22-24, 1904.

VISITED ST. LOUIS.—P. M. Koster, of Boskoop, Holland, April 30.

WAUWATOSA, Wis.—Alex. Klokner is adding a ten-acre nursery to his greenhouses.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—S. J. Weber & Son, of Nursery, Mo., have done a good trade at the Fair grounds.

THE Stark Nursery Company has given up its branch at Huntsville and has located at Fayetteville, Ark.

HANKINSON, S. D.—A nursery under the ownership and membership of W. W. Lilley and C. A. Chinberg, under the firm name of the Lilley-Chinberg Company, is to be established here.

MONTCLAIR, N. J.—Robert Chesney is defendant in a suit brought by a Belgium nursery firm for payment for a shipment of plants from Ghent in 1902. Mr. Chesney contends that the plants were not as specified in his order.

NEWPORT, R. I.—V. A. Vanicek, of the Rhode Island Nurseries, and Mrs. Mae Faulkner Browne, of Albany, N. Y., were married last week in New York city. F. L. Ziegler, the seedsman, acted as best man. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the Everett house. Mr. and Mrs. Vanicek will live on Vernon avenue.

AMID the very general havoc resulting from the severe winter about Boston it is good see the forsythias well covered with flowers and much finer than for at least two years. Daphne Mezereum is now over after having flowered better than for several years, the deep snow having evidently been favorable to it, as it also certainly was to the Berberis Aquifolium, which has come through the winter without a discolored leaf excepting where the stems projected above the snow, in which case they were killed outright. Rhododendron flowers will be few, those that were given extraordinary covering alone excepted. Indications are that wistarias are very generally blighted not only in the flower buds but leaf buds as well.

Toronto.

Business the last week has been all that could be desired. There have been a number of good weddings, and the demise of several prominent citizens helped to keep the retailer busy. The horse show also helped to use up stock, but is no longer the help to florists which was noticeable four years ago. Rose stock is elegant, and still holds up to $10 per 100, though a drop in prices is soon to be expected. Carnations are plentiful and good, $4 per 100 still being realized on No. 1 stock. Lilies are over plentiful and can be had at your own price. Bulbous stock is about done for, and violets deteriorate in quality each day.

Park Commissioner John Chambers is very ill. A few weeks ago his favorite collie dog bit him on the fleshy part of the hand, which caused him considerable annoyance, and since then it has developed into pneumonia, and at present his condition is critical.

The recent large fire came very near cleaning out several of our florists, and for a while it looked "all up" with Chas. Tidy & Son and D. J. Sinclair. The former escaped, but the latter was damaged to the extent of about $100.

Manton Brothers are quite busy with herbaceous stock. The lateness of spring and the present very mild weather will make it difficult for some growers, for plants and herbaceous stock will have to be handled at the same time.

Everything is well under way for a mammoth chrysanthemum show in November, and a grant is expected from the government which will greatly facilitate the arrangement of the prize list.

P. J. Fogarty is the first in the market with pansies. The past winter has been very severe on these, many having been winter-killed, but Mr. Fogarty always seems to have enough left for all.

Grobba & Wandrey are at present marketing some good plants of Boston and Piersoni ferns; these are pot-grown plants, and much more preferable than those grown in the benches.

The lateness of outside stock in Eastern, Middle and Western States, gives us an unusual opportunity to show that we can be of some service to you all through the month of May.

SEASON OPENS NOW AND EXTENDS TO JUNE 10th.

If you have never seen these flowers and have any doubt as to their usefulness, send a small order, so that you may know in future how convenient it is to have them for an emergency.

May 29th is Sunday, so we suggest arrivals for Memorial Day be allowed one day earlier than usual except where Sunday deliveries and sales may be effected. Please do not mail Decoration Day orders much later than May 15th, except from near-by states.

Our Pastimes.

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and sporting readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.
Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 42 W. 28th St., New York; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia; or to the American Florist Co., Chicago.

At New York.

The gathering at the alleys on Tenth avenue last Monday evening was as motley in its composition as was the score card on which their prowess was recorded. The aggregation under the leadership of the honorable president of the New York Florists' Club gave promise of accomplishing something when they started out, but once more we are reminded of the truth that "pride goeth before a fall." And now for the scores:

Player.	1st.	2nd.
Traendly.....	174	98
Siebrecht.....	123	161
Koplitz.....	109	125
Craw.....	98	127
Total.....	504	511
Player.	1st.	2nd.
James.....	180	179
Frank.....	144	162
Shaw.....	133	136
Stewart.....	73	148
Total.....	530	625

At Chicago.

The bowling committee of the Florists' Club did not submit the expected report Tuesday evening, on the matter of the preliminary tournament to decide the St. Louis team, as several members of the committee were absent from the city. The matter was deferred for a week. The following scores were made by those present at the Geroux alleys:

Player	1st	2d	3d
Asmus.....	201	189	197
Scott.....	203	174	196
Winterson.....	212	188	172
Stevens.....	213	199	201
Balluff.....	180	210	167
Kill.....	148	156	173
LADIES.
Player	1st	2nd	3d
Mrs. Reinberg.....	143	80
Mrs. Kill.....	107	73
Mrs. Winterson.....	92	112	139
Mrs. Scott.....	77	46	40
Mrs. Hauswirth.....	85	94	64

At Philadelphia.

There is considerable interest taken in the game of "bowls," as ex-President Smith is wont to call it, and many a friendly tussle takes place on the home alleys.

W. K. Harris had his name on the slate for last month with 237. The deacon is a great lover of the game, and when he and Commodore Westcott get together there is always something doing in the scoring line. A team is to go to Washington Friday of this week, and with a lead of 28 pins in the two previous contests between Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia, hopes to bring the cup to this city. The St. Louis contest is looked forward to with much pleasure; it is expected that all records will be broken, as the teams will consist of only five men and should therefore be stronger.

Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo, Cleveland, New York, Washington, Denver, Baltimore, St. Louis and Philadelphia can each place five good men in the field, and as there will be but little dead wood to carry, the scores should show something great in the way of averages.

The following are the averages for the month of April:

American Beauties

Yes we have the plants you want. We don't run a "Beauty Factory" but we have about 40,000 feet of glass devoted to them and we have men who understand propagating and growing them. We haven't a lot of cull stock we wish to dump. But we have a clean healthy lot of plants which we are offering at very low prices. We intend to establish a reputation on our goods and want your order. The goods are right—but if you don't think so, return them and you can have your money back. LUDWIG MOLLER ERFURT, Germany

New Orleans.

When it was decided two months ago not to have a spring show a committee was appointed to arrange ways and means of making the meetings of the New Orleans Horticultural Society more entertaining by giving small prizes to the members who would bring some plants and flowers for inspection and discussion. Last week was the first of these meetings. Vice-president R. Eichling, acting as chairman in the absence of J. Steckler, who lost one of his children the same day, had a few plants of coleus which were appreciated by the society. The leaves were deeply colored. Mr. Eichling stated that he had some very promising seedlings. A committee of three, M. M. Lapouyade, E. Valdejo and Mr. Hallwell, was appointed to arrange the next outing, which takes place in June. A vote of thanks was tendered to A. Alost for the elegant manner he received the society at a picnic on his place on Gentilly road a few miles from the city. Mr. Alost, who devotes most of his time to the growing of vegetables, is also a rose grower. His large field of roses was inspected with a great deal of interest by the members.

The City park association and the general public of New Orleans will regret to hear of the death of Victor Anseman. He devoted the largest part of his years to the improvement of the park, which promised soon to be one of the finest in the south. He raised quantities of dahlias and chrysanthemums and was the pioneer of that culture around here. He was an upright, honest man and esteemed by every one.

Business is slacking, a long spell of dry weather preventing much garden work.

L. W. LEACH, Vice-President and Manager.

THE FOLLOWING ARE SAMPLES OF THE MANY TESTI- MONIALS WE HAVE RECEIVED:

Office of State Vice-President Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturalists.
Baltimore, Md., December 4, 1903.

To THE LEACH INSECTICIDE Co.

GENTLEMEN:—We have thoroughly tested your Insecticide on both outdoor and greenhouse stock and found it better and safer than any we have tried so far. Scales of all kinds, even the San Jose and hard shell scales on palms and other greenhouse plants have been eliminated after the second application of your mixture. It affords me pleasure to forward to you this testimonial and inclose an additional order from the Park Department of Baltimore.

Very respectfully, CHAS. L. SEYBOLD, Patterson Park.

Mr. Seybold is Superintendent of Patterson Park, one of the largest parks in the city of Baltimore. He is a member of the Maryland Horticultural Society and a member of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association.

The following is from James Smith, another well-known florist of Baltimore:

DEAR SIR:—I think that your solution is all you claim for it; has killed all of the grub worms and other insects in a very short time without harming the most tender ferns. It has never failed in a single instance. I remain, respectfully yours,

CROP INSURANCE. Life insurance is valuable because it guarantees the outcome. "Gurney" Heaters. "BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouse: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expense at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them. GURNEY HEATER MFG. CO. 74 Franklin Street, BOSTON, MASS. 111 Fifth Avenue, NEW YORK CITY.

PALMS AND FERNS.

The Treatment of Cycads.

The cycads are so frequently compiled with the palms in various plant lists that it may not be quite out of place to make some reference to them in these notes, even though these singular plants constitute a group of themselves. Apart from their decorative value the cycads have much interest from the fact that they seem to be a connecting link between the floras of the present and long past ages, there having been many different species of cycas, zamia and other genera of this family that have been identified and classified from specimens discovered in many parts of the world among fossil remains. Fossil cycads have been found plentifully not only in parts of Europe, but also in the western hemisphere from Greenland to Peru, which seems to carry out the contention of the geologists that there have been wonderful climatic changes in the former ages of our own country. But while the florists of the present age are not vitally interested in fossil cycads there are many of them who are more or less interested in the cycads of this time, the importations of dormant cycas stems usually being offered in large quantities at about this season of the year.

Many tons of the stems of Cycas revoluta are imported from Japan during the spring and early summer, the majority of these stems being in sizes from one to ten pounds weight in order to meet the demand for plants of moderate proportions and cost, while a much less number of the larger sizes are required to supply the trade in large specimens. In fact the importations seem to have exceeded the demand to some extent during the past two seasons, with the result that lower prices have prevailed for cycas plants. There have also been plants sold at times that were not in fit condition to be offered, a stem with a crown of soft young leaves that were just unfolded and little or no root system with which to support them. Naturally such a plant will not bear exposure or hardship without suffering, and many such that were distributed about the country soon lost their leaves and in many instances died outright, with the result that Cycas revoluta was frequently condemned as being useless when the fault really lay with the hasty grower or dealer.

As received from abroad the cycas stems have both leaves and roots cut off short, and the first object of the grower should be to get root action, feeling assured that having obtained a good foundation in that respect he will soon have a reliable growth of leaves to follow, and by keeping the plants long enough for the foliage to get that firm feeling and dark glossy green that indicates a mature cycas leaf, he will have a trustworthy decorative plant and one that may be safely recommended to a customer. The stems should be potted into as small pots as they may be conveniently placed in, the soil rammed firmly, and consisting of a good stiff loam with a sprinkling of bone dust, and the plants put into a warm palm house or similar conditions, then syringed lightly two or three times a day and watered moderately. Plunging the pots in bottom heat is practiced by some growers, using either warm manure or hops as a medium for this purpose, this method forcing the growth more rapidly, but at the same time producing those very soft plants to which we have been objecting, and the practice of the writer has been not to use additional heating material, but rather to start the plants somewhat slower, thus allowing the root growth to keep up with the leaves and to produce a better balanced plant.

Shading is necessary as the young leaves unfold, they being very tender, and just at that time syringing should not be too vigorous or the foliage may be crippled, but after the leaves are fully grown and hardened there will be no danger from forcible syringing. Cycas revoluta is the only species from this genus that has been imported in large quantities, though there are several others that are highly ornamental and worthy of more extended use, among them being C. circinalis with longer leaves and more graceful habit, though possibly more tender. This species is possibly the largest in the genus, the leaves sometimes reaching a length of twelve feet, though as seen in cultivation is more often six to eight feet in length of frond, and forms a very decorative plant for conservatory or exhibition purposes. C. media is of rather similar general appearance to the foregoing, but is smaller in leaf and more rare in cultivation. C. Siamensis is occasionally seen in collections, there being seeds of this species offered at times by the large importing houses, and this too bears some resemblance to C. circinalis, but having leaves more often three to four feet in length. The foliage of the last named plant is said to stand more exposure than that of C. circinalis, but seedling cycads are slow stock in reaching a marketable size, in consequence of which we are not likely to find much glass occupied by seedling C. Siamensis or any other species.

Some tree fern stems or trunks are imported each season, the largest among these being usually those of Dicksonia antarctica, some of these stems being ten or more feet in height and nearly one foot in diameter. These fern trunks are treated in much the same way as the cycads in being shipped here from Australia and New Zealand with foliage and roots both chopped off, but from the fact that these tree ferns emit roots up along the stem, there are usually more growing points by which to gain nourishment, and with reasonable care will soon take hold of the soil and make a new start. Moisture and moderate heat are the conditions most favorable for starting these fern stems, but one needs to be careful in watering until the roots have re-established themselves for neither tree fern nor any other dormant trunk should be surrounded by sodden and soured soil. This dicksonia is one of the hardiest of the plants of its class, and is found at such altitudes that it is not unusual to see the beautiful fronds of this fern weighted down with snow without serious injury to the plants. A few other fern trunks of less size are sent here each season, among them being some alsophilas, cyatheas and hemitelias, but these are much less frequent in appearance than are those of the dicksonia.

It is advisable to pot up the tree fern stems as soon as received, preferably using a lighter and more open compost than that suggested for cycads, the ferns being put in a shaded house with moderate heat, and kept syringed at short intervals during warm, dry weather. After the ferns have started they may be taken into a cooler and more airy greenhouse, for when kept too warm they are likely to suffer from the attacks of insects, thrips in particular, and more fresh air is also needed to aid the development of the foliage.

W. H. TAPLIN.

Phoenix Canariensis.

The Canary island date palm is perhaps the most largely used member of its family as a decorative plant for florists' use, but is also very extensively planted in the outdoor gardens of the more tropical portions of our country. Our illustration shows a most beautiful specimen of this palm growing in one of the famous gardens of Los Angeles, Cal., and is from a photograph for which the writer is indebted to Ernest Braunton, formerly of that city. The specimen in question shows a magnificent head of leaves proceeding from a short stem or trunk fully three feet in diameter, and when we take into consideration the fact that these feathery looking leaves are frequently ten to twelve feet in length we are impressed more fully with the idea that this is really a palm tree.

P. Canariensis has also been planted quite largely as a street tree in the cities and towns of southern California, and there are also many fine examples of this palm in and about New Orleans, while the people of Chicago may well be proud of a remarkably fine plant of this species that adorns the large palm house in Lincoln park. As a florists' palm P. Canariensis has been and still is cultivated in very large numbers both in Europe and in this country, the greater number of those grown in the former being planted outdoors in the south of France, in which genial climate the young plants grow very rapidly.

These field grown plants are lifted when they have reached a marketable size, the soil shaken from the roots and the plants tied up into bundles, the roots being protected by a covering of damp moss. They are shipped to the Parisian and Belgian growers, who quickly re-establish them in pots by placing the newly potted phoenixes in a warm, moist and shaded greenhouse, giving them strong bottom heat until the roots have taken hold of the soil, and then distributing them among their customers. Many such plants as these have been exported to the United States in the last ten years or so, and some of them stand the journey very well, while others that have probably not been hardened off sufficiently before being shipped have suffered the loss of much of their foliage, and have been far from profitable to their American purchasers.

In Louisiana and also in California this phoenix often endures several degrees of frost without injury and it has proved one of the most satisfactory palms to place in a draughty hall or some public place where dust and a comparatively low temperature were among the drawbacks. Like most of the phoenixes the lower leaflets develop into, or rather degenerate into spines, the latter being the most objectionable feature about the plant, and sometimes causing a very sore wound.

Anthony Cook.

A picturesque figure in Baltimore, Md., is the dean of the gardening fraternity in active work, Anthony Cook (properly Koch) who in his eighty-seventh year may be found daily at the accustomed tasks he has followed for over seventy years. Born in Derkeim, in Rhinish Bavaria in 1818, he emigrated to this country in 1842, landing in Philadelphia and coming a year later to Baltimore. The son of a nurseryman and landscape gardener, he had learned the business and found employment in it for several years, working with some of the older florists, jobbing, etc., until by thrift and energy he secured a place of his own on what is now Carrollton avenue. From this he removed in 1858 to his present location, buying an acre of ground at the corner of Arlington avenue and Mulberry street. What was then almost the western limit of the city has become surrounded by dwellings and public institutions, but the old gentleman has kept up his steady routine of production and has sold no part of his property.

From the outset he made a specialty of outdoor roses, growing them in great quantities, importing every year new sorts from the growers of France and Germany, propagating them and distributing to the trade and at retail. Another feature was made of dwarf apples and pears, which were worked on the paradise and quince stocks, and brought into bearing at the age of three years. This was a novelty at this period and for a time took well. To the rose his soil and location must have been peculiarly well adapted, as many of the original rose plants first planted on his acquiring the place still survive in thrifty condition, including Sidonia Weaver, which he says was the first hybrid perpetual introduced into America, originating with M. Weaver, a rosarian of Chatenay, near Paris.

Mr. Cook began early to raise seedling roses—this not by any system of hybridizing but by indiscriminate sowing of seeds from the bushes in his grounds. Of course no record was or could be kept of the parentage of such seedlings, except to know from what plant the seed was gathered, the pollination being affected by the natural agency of the wind, the bees and other insects, but a great many were tested in his gardens and found to possess merit. Thus from a seedball of Devoniensis there were two accidental seedlings, one of which, De Saundry, of great promise, was soon lost, but the other, named after his daughter, Cornelia Cook, possessed many good qualities, passed into commerce, and before the advent of the Bride was the most useful white rose for forcing. It made a fine, large, pure white bud, with long stiff stems, and—remarkable in a tea rose—was almost thornless. At one time during its popularity buds of this rose are known to Mr. Cook to have sold in New York at $2 each. Another of his fortuitous seedlings is the climbing rose Charles Getz, a most vigorous grower, making shoots at times of sixteen feet in a season, and producing an abundance of silvery pink flowers much resembling La France. It is a local favorite and known here as the Climbing La France.

Mr. Cook does not assent to the current belief that the American Beauty is identical with Mme. Ferdinand Jamin. His claim is that the Beauty originated in his garden. Here is his statement:

In one year he had planted about 900 seedling roses, produced in the indiscriminate inate manner alluded to. Some of these showed value and were propagated, and one which proved to be a variety of fine form, color and substance, he named for his sister, Madame d' Appolinia. One of these roses, with others, was purchased by Mrs. Bancroft, a daughter of George Bancroft, the historian and rose-lover of the city of Washington. It was in the garden of that gentleman that Mr. Field, the well-known florist of the same city, saw the rose, and, believing it would force, took cuttings of it, and found his anticipations so fully realized that its introduction to commerce was early and profitable.

If Mr. Cook rendered this great, even if unpremeditated, service to the rose growers of the country it is but his due that the fact should be known. Whether the rose originated from the seed sown by his own fingers or was a stray Mme. F. Jamin, which found its way with other importations to his premises, the statement seems worthy of belief that the original plant which attracted the keen and intelligent notice of Mr. Field came from his garden.

This old gentleman not only works at the bench and in the garden daily, but reads and writes without the aid of glasses and is comparatively vigorous and well preserved in mind and body, interested in the trade and in the world around him and in the success of his descendants, who are florists to the third generation. WASHINGTON, IA.—Elmer Keck has leased a greenhouse in Cedar Rapids,

Two Eastern Gardens.

Percival Roberts, Jr., Narberth, Pa., is greatly improving his country seat there. Wm. Tricker, the noted expert upon the cultivation of the water lily, and good all round gardener, is in charge of the place. They have a very fine range of greenhouses, which they are filling up with the newest and best of everything. An extensive Italian garden is being made and lots of outdoor planting is being done. This part of the work is under the charge of Thos. Meehan & Sons, Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts are horticultural enthusiasts and are sparing no expense in the creation of their new home. Under the management of Mr. Tricker we expect to see this one of the finest places in Pennsylvania.

The finest range of greenhouses that it has yet been our privilege to see has just been completed by the Pierson-Setton Company, Jersey City, for Dr. Ward, at Madison, N. J. They are not so extensive as many of the ranges that we daily come in contact with, but in their appointments and make-up they are the most up-to-date thing in greenhouse construction that we have yet seen. The new patent U-bar article has been used throughout. There is no gutter at the eaves. The glass used is 2x2 feet, and of the best quality. There is scarcely any shade by this means of construction, and when inside you hardly feel that you are under a roof at all. The benches are supported by iron purlins; the sides of the benches are made of polished slate, and the bottoms of the benches of tile. There isn't a particle of wood used inside except the doors; nothing that can possibly decay, and with the exception of the sills nothing is exposed outside but wood and glass, so that heat and cold cannot react or coneract, as many imagine with this style of construction. The inside partitions are also made of brick or polished slate. The main heating pipes run under the center walks and the conduits are four feet wide and four feet high. The conduits can be entered from the boiler room so it is not necessary to tear up the floors when anything goes wrong with the heating system. In the propagating house two rows of pipes run close up against the tile bottom, and they can be regulated according as more or less bottom heat is needed. There are at present eight houses which are to be used for palms, ferns and flowering plants, but when the plan is completed there will also be fruit and vegetable houses.

Gardeners and proprietors alike have been attracted from far and near to view these "model greenhouses." It certainly is a costly erection, but with many of our eastern millionaire enthusiasts money is no object, and we may witness more of its kind soon. Dr. Ward is also greatly improving the grounds that surround his mansion and planting lots of shrubbery. Michael Doyle, lately gardener to Miss Maud Adams, has been placed in charge. We understand that he is an expert grower. The opportunity of his life is certainly given him here and we will no doubt hear more of Dr. Ward's place in the future.

THE TRAVELER.

Proposed New York Market.

For many years the plant and flower market men of the districts about New York city have been agitating and pressing their claims for an appropriate building in which to conduct their business. The demolition of the tumble-down buildings known as Clinton market left the plant dealers without any protection and since that time a big tent has been erected every spring as a temporary shelter. Our illustration shows the building which it is proposed to erect on plans drawn by sell well if they have a flower on them for planting out, for there are many, especially around London, who like to see what they are planting, even though they have to pay rather a higher price for the plants. The varieties most suitable for early flowering are those usually described as belonging to the patens type, though some given under the lanuginosa and florida types may flower early and equally as well as those of patens. The fact that they are hybrids and difficult to separate or divide consistently may account for this, and those nearest to the Lord Wolsley). Fair Rosamond, silvery grey with pink bar; Edith Jackman, white with a bluish shade; Duke of Edinburgh, deep purple, and Mrs. George Jackman are among the best of the older sorts for early work; and to these may be added the newer varieties, Marcel Moser and Nellie Moser. I think the last-named is the better of the two, the red band down the petals (or rather sepals) being more distinct. Miss Crawshaw, semi-double, bluish mauve and many others might be added. The double white, Lucie Lemoine, ought not to be omitted.

For later flowering, the Jackmani type flower well if strong plants are cut down and started early. The early sorts, which flower from the old wood, may make useful plants in one year, but two-year-old plants with as much wood in them as possible are better. They require very little warmth to start them, and if brought on gradually they are more satisfactory and last better than when given too much heat, and they come on almost as last under cool treatment.

World's Fair Notes.

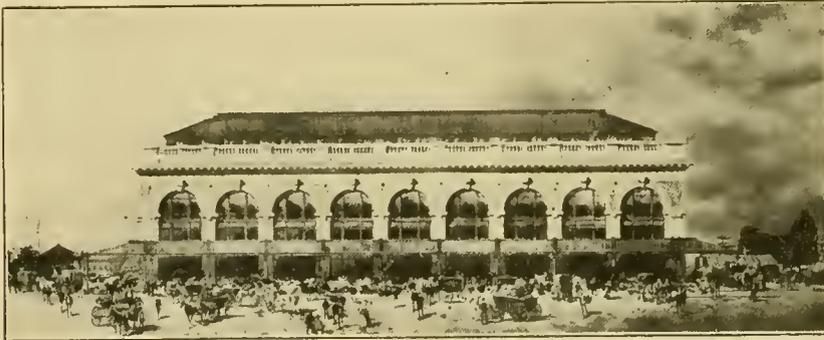

J. Steidel, Central, Mo., shipped for exhibition five vases of carnations. They were placed upon the tables May 2 and after eight days were as fresh as when opened. The varieties were Lawson, Estelle, Gov. Wolcott, Prosperity, Eucharistress and Harlowarden.

A. Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., has secured the center of the west wing of the Horticulture building for exhibiting his gladioli. It is being fitted up with a rustic pagoda in the middle, with an annular pyramid of shelves, fifty feet in diameter, for exhibition purposes.

The paid attendance the first week averaged but 10,000, but the admission on passes amounted to 12,000. The weather has been perfect and as the exhibits will soon be installed a large increase in the attendance is expected.

The Chicago Carnation Company, of eJolit, Ill., has made several large shipments of carnations. Some of the flowers came through in excellent condition. Marshall Field, Prosperity, Cardinal and Harlowarden were exceptionally fine.

Crisis, a seedling carnation from Davis Brothers Bloomsburg, Pa., and Pennsylvania, from the Carlisle Nursery Company, Carlisle, Pa., were placed on the tables April 30. They were delayed and damaged in transit.

THE PROPOSED NEW BUILDING OF THE NEW YORK FLOWER MARKET.

the city engineer. This spring a special effort has been made to enlist the earnest cooperation of a large number of florists with a view to convince the city authorities that there is sufficient support assured to pay an adequate rental for the proposed new quarters and should the result of the experiment prove satisfactory it is expected that work on the building will be begun at an early date, as the mayor, comptroller and property owners all favor it. The market florists have organized an association and will incorporate. They have made an offer for the first floor of the new building, and it is expected that the kindred trades will be enterprising enough to secure the second floor.

A Range at the Capital.

The accompanying illustrations show the range of Alex. B. Garden, Washington, D. C. In the illustration showing the outside view of greenhouses and residence, the east branch of the Potomac may be seen in the distance. The more common local name is the Anacostia river. There are about 40,000 feet of glass in this range, and roses, carnations and a general stock of pot and bedding plants are grown. Within the last two years three new houses have been erected and others rebuilt. American Beauty roses will be planted this year. Mr. Garden imports his azaleas and Dutch bulbs. His tulips were second to none in this market during the season just closed.

Clematises for Market.

As a pot plant in flower the clematis may not be quite the plant to grow in large quantities for ordinary market work yet, when well flowered, there are few plants that are more appreciated or make a better price compared with the cost of production, says a Horticultural Advertiser (English) correspondent. And from now (April 13) onwards until June there is a good market for them at a profitable price. And even those that fail to flower sufficiently well for decorative work will true types may show decided characteristics. Taking the varieties, the two best whites are undoubtedly Mrs. Quilter and Miss Bateman. The last named has larger flowers, but they are so nearly alike that I believe one gets substituted for the other; at any rate, I have seen plants labeled Miss Bateman which I should have had no hesitation in naming Mrs. Quilter.

It is interesting to note that it is about twenty-five years ago that Miss Bateman gained a first-class certificate, and it still remains one of the most desirable we have. Albert Victor, which also gained a certificate at the same time, was one of the best seen in Mr. May's collection at the Drill Hall March 22; it is of a soft mauve or lavender, coming a little deeper in color when grown out of doors. Lord Londesborough, blue mauve; Sir Garnet Wolsley, deep purple with a plum red bar down petals (though the above is the proper name, it is sometimes labeled

The water garden east of the Agriculture building and the basin in the conservatory will be stocked with plants by Henry A. Dreer. He has already started the nymphæas in pots.

The planting of the beds is progressing rapidly. Five million bedding plants will be used. Pansies and English daisies have been used with good effect along the colonnade of states.

Great Britain has received a large shipment of fantastically trained yews. They came through in good condition and prove very attractive to the general public.

The heating plant for the conservatory is being installed. The mains are under the floor near the outer walls and ordinary loop radiators will be used.

The machinery and bell for the floral clock are in place and work has commenced on the preparation of the beds for the plants.

The California commission has furnished a car load of palms, oranges and bananas for decorative purposes.

Mexico is unpacking several cases of cacti and orchids and promises a car load in a few days.

Vaughan has sent from Chicago a number of large palms and rubber plants for the conservatory.

Michel, St. Louis, is showing a large number of very fine standard and pyramid bay trees.

Siebrecht, New York, has filled the east end of the conservatory with palms.

British Trade Topics.

Wells & Company, of the Earlswood Nurseries, Redhill, whose chrysanthemums have been exhibited in New York, are sending out several new varieties. Amongst the most notable are Dora Stevens, rosy cerise; J. H. Doyle, an Australian importation, of a terra cotta tint; Mersthan Red; Mersthan Yellow, similar to Mrs. T. W. Pockett; Mrs. H. A. Allen, rosy pink; Mrs. J. A. Miller, reddish terra cotta; Mrs. W. Duckham, deep golden yellow; Mrs. Barnard Hankey, mahogany bronze, similar in size and form to C. H. Curtis.

The leading firms of nurserymen are to the fore with a wide range of novelties.

Kelway & Sons, of Langport, who have the best strain of delphiniums in this country, have several attractive additions to their list. These are very popular for arranging in bold groups, the mass of brilliant tints having a striking effect. Amongst the varieties being sent out this season is Sir George Newnes, a semi-double of a cobalt blue color.

The high prices recently made at orchid sales on this side indicate that there is no decrease in the interest taken in this aristocratic member of the floral world. This week at Manchester a large collection was sold belonging to J. C. Glover, of Blundellsands. Twenty-nine guineas was paid for a Cypripedium Lawrenceanum, 20 guineas for a Coelogyne pandurata. The same price was paid for an Odontoglossum crispum.

R. Wallace & Company, Kilnfield Gardens, Colchester, have lately introduced Lilium speciosum magnificum. It is a dark colored variety of the rubrum type, the large blossoms being of a rich ruby carmine color, distinctly edged with white, and from ten to twelve are produced on a spike. It bears some resemblance to the variety Melpomene, but it flowers earlier, and is of a superior form.

Blackmore & Langdon, of Bath, are noted as successful exhibitors of begonias at the leading shows. Their latest selections of this subject include Countess of Warwick, with shapely blooms of a rich orange color; Avalanche, a splendid double white; Mrs. J. Chamberlain, with finely formed blush-colored blossoms; John Milburn, dark rich crimson.

Sutton & Sons, of Reading, have several novelties, including a double hollyhock, White Queen, which is a companion to their Rose Queen. Cinerarias are a special feature at this establishment, and the large collection has been supplemented by Sutton's Pink and Sutton's Light Blue, which have been exhibited at the Royal Horticultural society's shows.

Webb & Sons, of Stourbridge, have a new stock, Admiration, which is likely to be in good demand. It has proved second to none in their seed trials. The blooms are of a delicate flesh color; the main spike grows about a foot in length, and with its numerous side shoots forms fine and effective trusses.

CAMDEN, N. J.—Max Baum will build a greenhouse 32x50 feet at 1633 Webster street.

LEADVILLE, COL.—Miss Nellie Smith has reopened the Stockdorf conservatory at 128 West Seventh street and will conduct a retail trade.

CARTHAGE, MO.—Steven Hyde has received the glass for two new greenhouses each 25x150 feet. This will give him 7,500 square feet more room under glass.

ERIE, PA.—S. Alfred Baur and Mabel A. Baur announce that they have disposed of their old greenhouses and old stock and that they are in a position to supply all lines of material at their new place, W. Twenty-sixth street and Brown avenue.

AZALEAS AND NARCISSI AT ALEX. B. GARDEN'S, WASHINGTON, D. C.

New York Horticulturists.

At the combined meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York and the Horticultural Section of the American Institute at the Botanical Garden on Wednesday afternoon, May 11, J. Horace McFarland of Harrisburg, Pa., gave a most interesting talk on "Some Common Trees and Their Uncommon Flowers," illustrated with stereopticon views. Mr. McFarland talked as only one who is deeply in love with his subject could talk, and had his audience in full sympathy with him, as was evinced by the frequent applause accorded him. The flowering time of the trees was the time selected for most of the tree views, and these were interspersed with enlarged illustrations of the buds and flowers in various stages of development. He disclaimed any critical knowledge from a scientific standpoint, and said that he only sought to excite interest and call more general attention to the common trees which we brush up against almost every day of our lives. He urged the need of awakening a sentiment for greater protection for the trees of the city, which are especially defenseless and which when lost are impossible of replacement in many years. Among the trees shown in their full stature and by their flowers and young foliage were the white swamp, Negundo, Norway, sugar and striped maples, which the lecturer averred would heat out for beauty all the little Japanese things that yards are adorned with. The American and slippery elms were shown in beautiful form and attention called to the vandalism and disease (the former the more dangerous) which threaten the existence of these, the most beautiful of all trees. Several birches and beeches were shown with their bloom. Cornus florida, the "flowering dogwood," and the Red Bud made striking pictures. Mr. McFarland told of the extreme beauty of these trees with their showy white or pink flowers in association with the heavy green of the junipers as seen in the Allegheny mountains in early spring, and entered a protest against the name of Judas tree as applied to the Red Bud or Cercis Canadensis. He contented himself with one species of crataegus, remarking upon the staggering array of crataegus that Prof. Sargent is engaged in identifying.

The oaks and their adaptability for general planting, the hickories, the willows and their graceful beauty, the white poplar and its extraordinary color effect, also its prestige as the only tree he ever saw that can get ahead of the tree butcher, the Carolina poplar, the horsechestnut and its gorgeous flowers, the sumachs, unappreciated but more worthy than some things brought from afar to border our tree plantations, the ailanthus, the pyruses, lindens, chestnuts, sycamores, ash and tulip trees were all successively shown, and the tulip tree was characterized as of the aristocracy of American trees and one which should be planted instead of so many poplars and maples for street shade as had been done at Washington. The witch hazel was shown as the one which "closes the year of tree delight." The lecturer received most enthusiastic applause when he arraigned the bill-board nuisance in spirited terms and predicted that the time was coming when the people would regard the placing of advertising boards within sight of parks and parkways as an arrogance that should be resented with a refusal to buy the goods thus advertised.

The usual display of plants was made in the exhibition hall. The greatest interest centered around the $50 prize for the "best horticultural novelty" and the incongruous entries competing therefor. The entries included a phyllocactus, two roses, a richardia and two ferns, and the surprise is that three men could be found with sufficient confidence in their own abilities to judge between objects with so little character in common. The award went to the triprimate variety of the Pierson fern which was shown in good form. Most of the other first prizes were awarded to Siebrecht & Son for crotons, palms, orchids, roses and collections in various classes. F. Weinberg won first with a fine collection of succulents and Siebrecht & Son received certificates for a set of very handsome seedling Rex begonias and for Killarney rose.

At the regular meeting Dr. Britton presided and the annual reports of the officers of the Horticultural Society of New York were presented by Secretary Barton, showing that the number of members is now 201 and that the balance in the treasury is $925.86 and in the invested fund $1,434.86. All the old officers were re-elected for another year excepting a few changes in the council. It was announced that there will be a series of visits during the summer to places of special horticultural interest, and that on June 8 and 9 there will be a rose and strawberry exhibition, in connection with which will be held the first annual exhibition of the American Peony Society.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y.—Fire in the greenhouse of A. E. Fancher last Wednesday did damage amounting to about $200.

BELLOWS FALLS, VT.—John P. Butler, of Keene, N. H., has bought of Henry W. Sabin a tract of land on the Saxtons river road, this side of Gageville, and will at once erect greenhouses and conduct a general florist's business.

THE RETAIL TRADE

RETAIL florists who handle seeds report an increased demand.

A Striking Vase Arrangement.

The accompanying illustration is taken from Die Bindekunst, Erfurt, and shows a pretty vase arrangement, the work of Paul Schwarzbach of Dresden, which was exhibited at the German Florists' and Gardeners' Society at Dresden. The vase is filled with Odontoglossum Alexandræ and Marechal Niel roses with Asparagus plumosus nanus and A. Sprengeri effectively used as trimming. Mr. Schwarzbach's decorative work belongs to a class of high order.

Memorial Day.

Memorial day in recent years has been taking on a broader significance. Not on the warrior's tomb alone, but on the last silent resting place of old and young alike, from all conditions of life, are the fragrant tributes of affection and sorrow strewn, and the observance of the day as an occasion of tender remembrance of departed kin and friends is rapidly growing general throughout the land.

Memorial day seems destined to become the great floral holiday and the florists' special opportunity. It is an occasion which the florist has wholly to himself. On all other days where the custom of giving has sway, souvenirs and trinkets of various kinds compete with the product of the florist for popular favor, but Memorial day is essentially his own. It should be his aim, therefore, to maintain and increase his prestige at this time and encourage by all available means the general use of cultivated flowers by providing them in abundance and acceptable quality and at prices within the reach of all, to the end that no demand shall go unsupplied.

The seasons are so variable that very few varieties of outdoor flowers can be reliably counted upon in any one year. That which is too late in blooming one year may be too early the next and it is indeed a rare season that does not bring serious disappointment on some garden bloom. Under glass control is easier, the grower gets his crop in at the minimum cost for heat, he can accept orders in advance with the certainty of filling them, and the experience of those who have given it an intelligent trial is that buyers are now more disposed to depend upon the greenhouse product for their main supply. In localities where the Memorial day idea has advanced most rapidly there are many ready to assert that this holiday already outstrips both Easter and Christmas, not alone in profit but in actual volume of business done.

Chicago.

The feature of this week's market which needs special emphasis is the hopeless glut in practically all lines of stock. Quantities upon quantities of flowers, all of fairly good quality, are anchored and apparently immovable at anything but ridiculous prices. The street men are taking ready advantage of the conditions and roses and carnations are practically given away. The spring-like weather has done its share toward bringing about the conditions, and it will require a few days of lower temperature to restore the quantity, quality and demand to anything like normal. The general quality of roses and carnations cannot be said to be as high as an average, owing, doubtless, to the inroads of the warm weather. Much outdoor stock from the south has made its appearance. Gladioli, peonies and pansies are now to be counted as items. Ferns and smilax continue comparatively scarce and lilies are still coming in in good supply. Business has been quiet both in shipping and local retail circles, the conditions appearing more quiet because of the large heaps of stock upon which the demands seem to make no impression. The best red roses are the ones in demand and the higher grade carnations are not difficult to move, but outside of these it is take what you want and pay what you want.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held Thursday evening, May 12, in the new quarters, which are a great improvement over the old. Routine business was transacted. President Rudd announced the following as committee on co-operation with the Horticultural Society of Chicago in holding exhibitions, etc.: J. C. Vaughan, C. L. Washburn, Nick Wietor, Leonard Kill and John Poehlmann. Mr. Rudd further announced that very satisfactory arrangements had been made for a place to hold the forthcoming fall exhibition, which will be held in the large dining rooms of the Auditorium hotel and the adjoining lecture halls of the Fine Arts Building on Michigan avenue. The preliminary prize list will be issued in a few days, and it is now believed that the exhibition will be held at the usual date, which is about the middle of November. Secretary Wienhoeber exhibited the club's new certificates, which were received with general favor.

Kroeschell Brothers Company is busy filling orders for boilers which have been booked through the season from growers and greenhouse men. Among many others the following will install the Kroeschell boiler this season: G. M. Thost, De Soto, Mo.; J. D. Robinson, Bloomington, Ill.; G. W. Pool, Gloversville, N. Y.; Wm. Geenen, Kimberly, Wis.; H. W. Brown, Danville, Va.; W. J. McCune, Dixon, Ill.; Schluraff Floral Company, Erie, Pa.; Wm. Slotthenke, Milwaukee, Wis.; Henry Baer, Peoria, Ill.; John Morgan, Hamilton, Ont.; Geo. W. Vreeland, Athenia, N. J.; Theo. E. Edwards, Bridgeton, N. J.; Warner Bros., Newtonville, N. Y.; Mrs. T. Allen, Bangor, Me.

Wietor Brothers have their planting out operations under good headway. Four hundred thousand carnation plants and twelve houses of American Beauty roses have been planted out so far. Among the improvements they will make this year is the addition of a 100 horsepower boiler and additional steam pipe. They report a good cutting trade.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Company finished planting May 6, having put out 75,000 plants. One house, 30x300 feet, has been planted with Robert Craig, Gibson Beauty and Flamingo. This firm has so much belief in the superiority of Nelson Fisher that it has dropped Mrs. Lawson to make way for the former.

John Sinner has resigned the secretaryship and the office of manager of the Flower Growers' Market and Percy Jones has been elected as his successor. Mr. Sinner was given a vote of thanks by the directors of the company for his faithful services during the year and a half of his office.

Peter Reinberg last week commenced work on rebuilding a range of seventeen houses. He says that by putting in the iron gutters he will save enough space to accommodate nearly two additional houses on the same ground.

The George Wittbold Company has been unusually busy with spring work and orders. They say it is a record breaking season in many respects.

The Clinton Falls Nursery Company, of Owatonna, Minn., has placed an order for the material for a greenhouse 30x200 feet, with A. Dietsch & Company.

George Muno and Miss Lizzie Hermes were married Tuesday. The groom is a son of John Muno and is well known in local florists' circles.

E. F. Winterson Company handled a limited number of Caladium esculentum bulbs last week. They were not difficult to market.

Breitmeyers' new rose was shown extensively in the wholesale houses this week and had a good reception everywhere.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting good stock in roses. They are also getting ready for a summer crop of Liberty.

E. C. Amling spent several days this week on the banks of sunny Lake Marie, with rod and reel.

A limited quantity of cape jasmine and arbutus was noted at C. W. McKellar's this week.

Henry Eischen, of Eischen Brothers, Duluth, Minn., was a visitor this week, with his bride, enroute to St. Louis.

A. L. Randall Company is showing nice outdoor lilac.

Among the visitors this week were C. Dallwig, Milwaukee, Wis.; T. E. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn.; Jas. Chacona, Milwaukee, Wis.; F. A. Conway, Indianapolis, Ind.; John Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind.; H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg, Pa.

New York.

All kinds of flowers, regardless of grade, are a drug on the market; roses can be had at prices that would insult any grower to receive as returns. It can be said that there is no price because there are so many flowers to be had and so little demand, and large quantities are left over unsold.

Bedding plant night at the New York Florists' Club was eminently successful in the number and quality of the exhibits. To John Birnie much of the credit is due for unselfish, ardent work among his colleagues of the plant market in securing the display. The list of exhibitors included H. C. Steinhoff, John Birnie, B. Passler, Leach Brothers, Chas. Hunt, J. Tschupp & Co., Lehnig & Winnfeld, Hartmann & Wagenfuhr, Geo. Darsley, A. G. Schroeter, J. Pearson, John Lappe, H. Mende, Daly Brothers and George Frick, and the exhibits comprised pelargoniums, fuchsias, primulas, daisies, heliotropes, verbenas and similar material commonly classed as bedding stock. Steinhoff's Crimson Rambler and Magna Charta roses were commented on as exceedingly fine. Wm. J. Elliott, the plant auctioneer, gave a talk on the "Idiosyncracies of the Auction Business," characteristically witty and punctuated with outspoken personal comments such as auctioneers are prone to indulge in and are alone permitted to make with impunity. He met his match, however, in the first word of the title of his speech and tried to fall back for help on P. O'Mara, who never has any trouble with big words. A brief discussion followed in which many complimentary things were said of the material on exhibition and the essayist was presented with a vote of thanks which brought a beaming smile to the benign countenance of the auctioneer. A vote of thanks was also given to Mr. Birnie in recognition of his services in the exhibition department. Progressive reports were presented by various committees. Announcement was made by the transportation committee that the rate of fare to the St. Louis convention would be $23.25 for a fifteen day excursion ticket exclusive of sleeping car charges. John Birnie made an interesting speech in which he predicted that within a few years the plant trade of the metropolis would be carried on by commission men as is done in the cut flower trade, but he intimated facetiously that they must be of a different brand. A vote was passed asking the trade press to support the efforts now being made to secure the establishment of a permanent plant market for New York.

Frank Traendly, Jr., youngest child of President Frank Traendly of the New York Florists' Club, died on May 11, aged fifteen months. The event caused widespread sorrow in professional and trade circles, and the attendance of business friends and associates of Mr. Traendly at the funeral on Friday was very large. A large number of floral tributes of extraordinary beauty were sent by sympathizing friends.

Henri VanDerBom, of the firm of H. W. VanDerBom & Company, nurserymen, Oudenbosch, Holland, arrived this week on the Rotterdam. He will make an extensive trip in the United States and his address will be in care of McHutchison & Company, 218 Fulton street, New York.

NOTES.

The following new directors of the Cut Flower Exchange were elected at the meeting May 7: Charles Smith, Wm. C. Duncan, Frank Millang, Herman Maenner, John Schneider. Wm. Amos was re-elected president by the new board of directors.

John Dutcher, of Dutcher & Son, was married last Monday to one of Nyack's fair maidens. He is one of the popular men who do business on the floor of the Cut Flower Company.

John H. Taylor proposes to turn his Bayside property, 350 acres in extent, into a residence park and a number of fine buildings are already planned.

Kostonas, a new man in the fern business, has a branch store at 55 West Twenty-eighth street, under E. C. Horan's store.

Leading New York wholesalers will close at 6 p. m. beginning next Monday.

The eastern office of the AMERICAN FLORIST is now at 42 W. Twenty-eighth street.

Philadelphia.

The lot of the flower hustler is not an enviable one these days, as, while the supply is ample, the demand is light, very light, and it is extremely difficult to sell out. This week lilac seems to have the call, and as it is now in full bloom outside it is seen in quantity everywhere and carnations and other table flowers have to suffer. American Beauty roses are now very plentiful; $1.50 to $2 per dozen is the outside price for the specials, and much of the stock is extra fine. Other roses are to be seen in large excess over the demand and the general average price must be very low. Sweet peas are now down to 50 cents per 100 with the exception of light lavender, which bring $1.50. There were several small spurts to relieve the monotony, caused by the demands of some amateur light opera companies and school commencements, which latter are just starting. Those who carry a line of bedding plants are busy with this class of work. Window boxes are quite in demand, there being a movement by the City Park association to encourage their use, and in some parts of the city they are much in evidence both on balconies and window ledges. The seed stores which also carry a general assortment of plants are just now in the midst of their spring rush and are working night and day to get their orders out. The H. F. Michell Company says it is the busiest year of its experience; every department is taxed to the utmost.

The H. A. Dreer Company, although working a largely augmented force, is six days behind, being fairly swamped with the great rush of business that is coming. The hope is that the stock will hold out so that the orders may all be filled even if a little late.

William C. Smith is building a row of dwelling houses. It is a business venture. West Philadelphia florists are being surrounded by dwellings very rapidly. They are going up in blocks of hundreds and whole squares are being covered at a time. There is now scarcely any ground left for planting out purposes and fields of carnations within the city limits will soon be a thing of the past.

Robert Craig & Son have just been awarded $17,000 damages by the city in consequence of the widening of Fiftieth street, half the width of which was taken from their property.

Some of the retailers say pencils are all right, but they want something else, and suggest trading stamps as a drawing card. Who will be the first to take it up?

Eugene Bernheimer has the lavender sweet pea situation well in hand, and in consequence the price is, like the peas, very exclusive.

Ed. Reid is carrying some great Beauties with stems four to five feet long. K.

The May exhibition at Horticultural Hall last Saturday was not particularly extensive but exceedingly good. The central feature was the calceolarias, of which there were two sets of six plants each, enormous specimens in 12-inch pots. The exhibitors were George F. Fabyan, George Stuart gardener, and E. A. Clark, W. A. Riggs gardener, who won first and second prizes respectively. Mr. Stuart was further in evidence with a superb set of fancy pelargoniums which occupied the front of the stage and won a first class certificate. The varieties represented were Mabel, Lady Duff, H. M. Stanley, Admiration, Mrs. Ashley and May Queen. Nothing finer in its class has been seen here in many years than the display of spring garden flowers from the Harvard botanic garden, Robert Cameron gardener. It was very comprehensive and each variety was fully labeled. A rare sight was the group of three fine specimens of Aucuba japonica foemelia loaded with scarlet fruit from Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield gardener. A cultural certificate was awarded to Mr. Hatfield. L. E. Small again showed his white carnation seedling No. 3, and in such good form as to win a first class certificate. In stem and calyx development this carnation is pretty near perfection. Two striking and distinct specimens of Lælia Latona, bearing large spikes of flowers were exhibited by J. E. Rothwell, Emil Johanssohn gardener. This is a cross between L. cinnabarina and L. purpurata. The individual flowers are almost as large as those of purpurata, while the orange vermilion color of cinnabarina is perpetuated in a somewhat subdued tint. The lip is dark crimson. This exhibit received a first class certificate. There were some pansies from Mrs. Gill and J. B. Shurtleff and promiscuous displays of tulips, wild flowers, etc., from various contributors.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, on Tuesday evening, May 17, Carl Blomberg will read a paper on the subject of Alpine plants. Mr. Blomberg is a very enthusiastic botanist and cultivator of hardy plants and will, no doubt, prove a very interesting talker on this occasion.

E. N. Peirce is just recovering from a two months' siege of rheumatism which has confined him to the house most of the time since the Detroit carnation meeting. He has been informed by the "oracle" that it was all a punishment for that "skunkskin" outbreak at the Detroit banquet.

Boston Market carnation has enjoyed a remarkable sale this spring for which the cutting growers were unprepared. This is a good evidence of the popularity of the "bread and butter" varieties as soon as they have demonstrated their standing in this class.

The confirmation of Wm. Doogue as superintendent of public grounds has been held up in the board of aldermen, and a vigorous campaign is being made for the position by John B. Reardon, who was an unsuccessful candidate several years ago.

E. J. Fancourt has been in town looking after the interests of S. S. Pennock. W. J. Eldering, of Overeen, Holland, is to arrive this week. Another distinguished foreign visitor was H. J. Elweis, who came from England on the Ivernia last week.

Baltimore.

Last week's business was fair as to volume, with the seasonable and inevitable downward tendency of prices, and the stocks on hand at its end were closed out by liberal concessions on figures, but the present seems to have reached the acme of dullness. At this writing, May 10, the Florists' Exchange is loaded up with all sorts and conditions of flowers, with few buyers: the street men are wary of purchasing in heavy lots in the face of the large receipts of outside flowers, lilacs, narcissi and valley, coming in in great quantities from every quarter of the compass. Our Philadelphia friends are aiding in maintaining the plethora by shipments of very good blooms, which, peddled around, are sold at what must seem to the grower, when he gets his returns, ridiculously low prices. The quality of the offerings keeps above the average at this season, and so far not much mildew is in evidence. Pretty steady firing is still a necessity.

The weather is variable, some days giving choice of several seasons. There have been good showers, although their distribution was uneven, but outdoor work goes along at about its accustomed pace. Notwithstanding fears to the contrary, there has been a great deal of planting done and some of our nurseries have turned down orders. Wm. J. Corse, whose firm is one of the oldest in this section, says he never had a better season. Everything is backward, however, but a few days of hot sun will bring vegetation up to the average.

Bedding stock is not as active as dealers would like and the market men profess not to be pleased with the conditions of business.

The Gardeners' Club at its meeting Monday night put itself on record as favoring the following selection of twelve roses as the best for the garden:

Kaiserin,	La France.
Hermosa,	Etoile de Lyon,
Jacqueminot,	Dinsmore,
American Beauty,	Paul Neron,
Glothilde Soupert,	Meteor.
Maman Cochet, white and pink.

For climbing or pillar roses the following were recommended:

Crimson Rambler,	Reine Marie Henriette,
Hiawatha,	Baltimore Belle,
Climbing Meteor,	Climbing Malmaison,
White Microphylla.

And the following were favored as the best six geraniums for general garden culture:

S. A. Nutt,	Centaur,
Alphonse Ricard,	Jean Viaud,
Mrs. E. G. Hill,	La Favorite.

Solomon Uhfelder, a young Hebrew street flower vender, who for a dozen years, since early boyhood, has frequented the banks and office buildings in the financial district, has at last reached the dignity of a store, locating himself at 428 Robert street, opposite the Madison avenue synagogue. Those who know his industry and energy are willing to wager on his success.

Cook Brothers, Edmundson avenue, make a specialty of hydrangeas, which they do in fine style, finding customers for their heavy specimens amongst the hotels, notably the Hotel Joyce, which, following more than others the fashion of advanced cities, uses this showy plant in quantity to decorate its handsome and admirably kept apartments.

Rose Papa Gontier, usually considered a back number in this latitude, will have a revival here this season at the hands of Stevenson Brothers, a firm of young, energetic and progressive gardeners, who are making a success of their place near Govans, and who will plant the variety in some quantity to meet the demand for red flowers in winter.

The Leach Insecticide Company, which was a heavy loser in the recent big fire, having its entire plant with large stock of merchandise entirely wiped out, is again in active operation with a plant complete in every respect. S. B.

St. Louis.

Business has been dull in cut flower lines the last week but plantsmen report an increased demand for plants and a tendency toward more diversity than is common. Persons who never had flowers in their gardens before are buying this year. The natural result is a general stiffening of prices. The geranium takes the lead in popularity. In fact more geraniums are sold in this city than all the other bedding plants put together. They retail at $1 per dozen for 3-inch pot plants. Planting out of the hardier bedding plants is now in full swing but it is still early for tender plants as we never feel safe from frost until May 15. There has been a general slump in cut flower prices. The carnations coming to this market now are fine in point of stem but are beginning to show the effects of the warm weather both in substance and color, the pink ones especially being the first to show the sun bleaching. This is accounted for by the fact that some growers have not shaded yet and with others the frequent rains wash some of the shading off and the temptation is to leave it off a day or two until we get time. This hardly pays.

The souvenir programme for the S. A.

F. convention is well under way. It is to be a handsome publication. Advertising matter is coming in daily. The book will be in the hands of the printer by June 15 and will be sent out not later than July 15. There are to be one hundred pages and among other good things it will contain a map of St. Louis showing how to reach the convention hall from any part of the city and a comprehensive map of the World's Fair.

Miss Laura Lanto, for the last eight years with the Riessen Floral Company, left last Saturday and is now working for the Planters Hotel.

There will be two applicants for membership to our club at the next meeting—Paul Roper and G. M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo.

A visit to the Michel Plant and Bulb Company found everything in apple-pie order and all hands too busy to talk.

The old Court House square is being resodded and trimmed with a hedge of California privet.

C. E. DeWever, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, is in town calling on the trade.

W. A. Chalfant, of Springfield, Ill., was in town this week on his way to Cincinnati.

J. F. Ammann has gone on a trip to Springfield, Ill. J. W. D.

Washington, D. C.

With a week of sunshine and showers that would bring bloom on anything in the order of blooming plants, it is not worth while to write about prices. If the great amount of good stock in the stores is not a bonanza to the proprietors, it is, at least, a delight to the eye. There are extra fine displays of American Beauty and other roses, carnations, purple lilacs and all the other flowers that are due at this season. There was a well attended meeting of the Florists' Club on the evening of May 4, and an election of officers, the following named being chosen: President, Wm. F. Gude; vice-president, Fred H. Kramer; secretary, Peter Bisset; treasurer, W. H. Ernest. A large number of new members were admitted and considerable enthusiasm was displayed in addresses by both new and old members. There is now no doubt about the club having come to stay.

On May 5, President Roosevelt personally inspected the site of the proposed new building of the Agricultural department and decided that the location of the structure should conform to the vista or parkway scheme for the improvement of the mall as outlined in the Newlands bill. The dispute is now settled. The new building will be erected on the side of the vista, thus leaving a clear space of 890 feet the center line being from the center of the capital to the centre of the monument. S. E.

Pittsburg.

Business improved somewhat this week, and we look for a continued improvement during the month. The weather, too, has greatly improved, and the result is that the early blossoms and outdoor flowers that have been retarded have come in seemingly greater quantities and with additional beauty. Bedding stock is moving out in nice order and outdoor planting is at its height. Rare stock is in fairly good shape, quantities of Beauties are to be had and carnations are plentiful and as fine as they have been for some time past.

The Pittsburg Florists' Exchange is now open for business at its new place in Diamond street, which is attractive and roomy.

W. C. Beckert's is about the busiest place in the two cities. The demand for seeds and other staples is very satisfactory.

E. J. Perry, of Greensburg, Pa., reports business good. He had had a big demand for carnations during the week.

George Shower, of Connellsville, Pa., had an order on May 4 which called for 5,000 assorted roses.

Phil Langhans is getting his fishing instruments in shape to worry the fish in Lake Chautauqua.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Company is now cutting special Kaisers.

Harry Graves has returned to work after a bad attack of rheumatism.

Mrs. B. A. Williams is cutting some fine Harrisii lilies.

Otto Reisch, of Beloit, O., was a recent visitor. E. L. M.

Cleveland.

Business for the last week has been at low ebb. Everything in the flower line has been a glut. The stores are having bargain sales every day, one of the leading retail stores selling roses as low as ten cents per dozen retail. Carnations, which were somewhat scarce a couple of weeks ago, can now be had in quantity at the buyers' own figure. The weather has warmed up considerably and outside planting is being rushed. More carnations than ever are being planted this season. Quite a good deal of outside stock has suffered from the severe winter just passed. Roses and shrubs seem to have been affected the most.

The florists of West park are much elated over the fact that city water is about to be introduced into the village, the supply to be derived from Cleveland. The location could not be much better for florists and a building boom is expected. The city has promised a pressure of forty pounds.

The plant men are having troubles of their own. Owing to the weather the sales so far have been poor. Stock in the houses is becoming overcrowded. Carnation planting is almost a month late. If very warm, dry weather should set in now the result will be a serious set back for early housing.

The free seed distribution among the school children this year has been larger than usual. What a farce this free seed business is anyway!

The effects of the defunct Grant Wilson Company, on Prospect street, are being sold by the receiver, the local florists getting first choice.

The Wilhelmy Company has commenced operations on its new plant and the building will be pushed along as fast as possible.

Another new store has started on Euclid avenue. This time it is McGinnis & Company. We wish them the best of success.

The beds in the public parks are a grand sight just now with tulips and hyacinths, those in the public square particularly so.

ECHO.

Newport, R. I.

For a week it has been warm and pleasant, and at last it does seem that we are to have some growing weather; planting has become general. Shrubs and trees are budding, lawns becoming green and things look like spring indeed.

Now that it is time for hardy stock to be starting, the damage of last winter is very apparent. Roses seem to have suffered more than anything else; one bed of twenty-five hybrid perpetuals has only six plants left alive in it, and so it goes.

The California privet hedges as a rule have wintered fairly well; some few are in bad shape. But as a whole much less damage has been done to shrubbery generally than was at first supposed. The seed stores are at their busiest, and it will not be long now before things outdoors look about as usual. The summer colony seems to be coming earlier than ever, already many of the places on the avenue have been opened for the season.

John T. Allen, head gardener to J. R. Drexel, has been awarded by the Newport Horticultural Society a silver medal for a seedling begonia. It is of the Begonia Vernon type, but unlike the Vernon in that the flowers are double and of a most beautiful cerise pink. Being very dwarf it has every appearance of being a most desirable acquisition, not only for bedding but also for summer flower dishes for table decoration, as it is in its best bloom during the warm weather.

John Scott, of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been here and is enthusiastic over his new fern. Our best gardeners who have seen it are very much pleased with it and predict for it a brilliant future. Mr. Scott has promised to exhibit some of his best specimens at our coming shows, so we may have an opportunity to examine it closely.

A silver medal has been awarded to Charles H. Stark by the Newport Horticultural Society for a beautiful specimen of Cattleya intermedia superba. The plant had forty spikes of bloom, and showed clearly the skill of the grower. Mr. Stark is the head gardener for Mrs. George W. Collord.

The distribution of government flower seeds in the schools has taken place; but apparently there was not enough in the 1200 packages to go around among those who would promise to plant the seed and report the results of their attempt at gardening.

The first cuttings of rhubarb were made May 2 and asparagus May 3. This year rhubarb sold for 5 cents wholesale and 8 cents per pound retail on its appearance. Asparagus started at 23 cents per pound to dealers and 35 cents to consumers.

A visit to Thomas Galvin's shows a house of large and well grown rubber plants which he is selling to the trade at $18 per dozen. He is also well stocked with geraniums of all the standard sorts, some very choice vincas and other bedding plants.

Last Saturday evening from 7:30 to 10 o'clock the George A. Weaver Company gave a gramophone concert at its big store on Broadway. It proved a drawing card as the store was crowded.

John H. Cox, formerly seedsman for the George A. Weaver Company, who has been ill for some time, is now quite recovered and will sail for his home in England this week.

The Scotch gardeners and their friends had a dance on Tuesday last at Southwick's hall. Refreshments were served and bag-pipe music was enjoyed.

There is a splendid bed of pansies in full bloom at Winthrop Chanler's estate, grown by William Postings, the head gardener.

The Shady Hill Nursery Company, of Boston, Mass., has been doing considerable ornamental planting here this spring.

Growing Freesias.

Allow the pots (4-inch) to dry off under the bench undisturbed. Let them remain until the end of August and then repot without manure of any kind. Give them one thorough watering and leave them in an open cool house near dull glass for three weeks without further watering, then water as needed. Stake the growing plants so that they have no chance to lop over but put all their effort into upright growth. The result will be stems two feet long with plenty of flowers.

Again the Rose Society.

It is somewhat painful to me to see my criticism of the rose society taken as a criticism personally, of its members. It is not necessary for Mr. Montgomery to give any evidence as to the democracy and good fellowship of the Boston florists. I have carried in mind for many years a most grateful remembrance of the kind hospitality experienced at my one visit to that city. Neither is it necessary for Mr. Hill to defend the gentlemen who have given their time and pecuniary support to the rose society. They are individually respected and honored among all in the trade, and rightly so.

Why do not Mr. Montgomery and Mr.
Hill answer the criticisms which were actually made? I suppose it to be because they are true and cannot be answered.
Are either of the gentlemen prepared to deny that an impression that the rose society is not democratic, exists among many of the rank and file of the trade?
Whether this impression is true or unfounded has nothing to do with the case. The vital fact is, that it does exist and that it is harmful to the society.

Can they deny that the "easternizing" of the society and its governing body has alienated a large part of the trade?

Will either one of the gentlemen say that John Smith of Kalamazoo or Wm.
Jones of Oshkosh would have been repaid for his expenditure of time and money in attending the last meeting? If so, then the trade press has misrepresented the facts.

The commercial florist of to-day is not a "true lover" of the rose but a true lover of the dollars he makes out of it.
He does not give a "hoot" for hardy roses, with the exception of a very few varieties, and cannot understand why the rose meeting is set for a date when it is difficult or impossible for him to leave his business in order that this class of roses in which he is not commercially interested may be exhibited.

The rose society must change its methods and live down the mistakes of the past or else it will pass into the category of the things which have been but are not.

I will send the membership fee to the secretary of the rose society as requested and feel sure that if earnest, faithful work will bring about a better state of things Mr. Montgomery is the man of men for his present position.

and carnations. Wages $10.00 per week to start with excellent chance for advancement. Liberal treatment. Give references and particulars in first letter. Address Greenhouse Dept., CLINTON FALLS NURSERY CO., Owatonna, Minn.

Help Wanted—Working foreman to take charge of about 35,000 square feet of glass where roses and carnations are grown for cut flowers; must be up-to-date grower. My place is ten miles out of Pittsburg, Pa. Please state wages expected, with board and washing; also state age and how soon you can come. Also want an assistant florist.
JOHN L. WYLAND, DeHaven, Pa.

Help Wanted—At once; a reliable florist to take full charge of 15,000 feet of glass and capable of growing a general stock of first-class cut flowers and plants for retail store trade. Must be sober, honest and a good worker. Send reference and state wages with room and board with first letter. Also wanted, a young man with some knowledge of greenhouse work. State wages. Send references.
FRED J. KING, Ottawa, Ill.

For Sale—Bargain. Glass, bars, pipe and heater from house; little used. Address
E. H. ALDERMAN, Middlefield, Mass.

For Sale—One 20 H. P. tubular boiler in prime condition. Address
C. L. VAN METER, Monticello, Iowa.

For Sale—Greenhouses. Good location for local and shipping business. Well stocked; winter coal laid in. Will sell cheap if sold at once. Selling on account of failing health.
JAS. RICHARDSON, London, O.

For Sale or Rent—Florists' establishment of 10,000 feet of glass. Heated by steam, everything complete and well stocked. With 2 acres or more of ground. Frame house, 6 miles from center of Philadelphia.
DAVID BEARN, Bala, Pa.

For Sale—An elegant greenhouse plant of 20 lots, 40,000 square feet of glass. Modern in every way, all new. A ready market; cannot supply the demand. In a thriving city in Colorado. Will sell reasonably if sold at once. Address
W W, care American Florist.

For Sale—Having decided to change to steam, we offer one No. 1 Kroeschell, 7 years old, new flues and head one year ago, one No. 3 Kroeschell boiler almost new, one Phelps Ideal hot water heater—a good, cheap heater to put in for safety; six 4-inch gate and angle valves, six 2½-inch gate valves, a large number of 4-inch and 3½-inch screw fittings—all good as new and at half price. Also three closed expansion steel tanks with safety and air valves. Address
JOSEPH BANCROFT & SON, Cedar Falls, Iowa.

For Sale or Rent—Commercial place, 9 greenhouses, 20,000 feet of glass, shed 20 feet wide connecting houses, heated with steam by return tubular boiler; storage capacity for season's supply of coal. Three miles from city hall. Address SAMUEL J. BUNTING, Elmwood Ave.
and 58th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

For Sale—An elegant greenhouse plant, 40,000 feet of glass, 20 lots, fine dwelling, wagons, etc; modern, up-to-date, all new; ready market; cannot supply the demand. Fine retail trade in a thriving city in Colorado; have other business. Will sell reasonably if sold at once. Address
W W, care American Florist.

For Sale—Twelve greenhouses with about 25,000 square feet of glass on 1¼ acres of land, six of which were built last year. Heated with steam. Situated about 14 miles from Pittsburg, five minutes' walk from railroad station. Will sell cheap if sold at once. Address
FLORIST,
Box 84, Station A, Pittsburg, Pa.

For Sale—Well established florist business, centrally located in a hustling city of 11,000 population. No other similar concern of importance within a radius of 50 miles. A good investment for party with sufficient capital to push the business. For particulars address
FRANK M. PAINE, Traverse City, Mich.

For Sale—A flower, seed and nursery business, in a city of 100,000 inhabitants; good location. Purchaser will have his money returned in short time out of a good trade of a 20 years' established business. Reason for selling, owner has another business and cannot attend to two. Address
J. SEULBERGER, 414 14th St., Oakland, Cal.

For Sale or Rent—A good paying place in the heart of a thriving Iowa city of 10,000 inhabitants. Must sell on account of poor health. 5000 feet of glass, 3 acres good land, 2 blocks from main street; fine well and city water; windmill and 100 bbl. tank; 40 h. p. boiler; coal house, potting room. Only one other greenhouse in town and output far below the demand. Two dwelling houses connected; Iowa Central switch track passes garden and coal house; long distance phone and other conveniences. A tilted opportunity. $3,000.00 cash or $4,000.00 in reasonable payments. Address
K M Y, care American Florist.

Some of these will rent to a prospective purchaser. Affording ample opportunity for inspection and calculation. We charge nothing for information. Keep us busy answering inquiries and we will have your grateful support. We are sure of it and you will be the most benefited.

BOILERS. We are fairly well supplied with them. If you are in need of one or more, write us for a list and prices. We are short of PIPE but can save you money on Boilers.

We Are Surprised

at the number of requests which come in for the two good men we mentioned last week. Sorry we haven't enough to go around. Would like to learn of at least a dozen really good growers that we may accommodate some friends who are in need of such.

The Right Kind of a Man is what we are looking for. There are now about one hundred required to take hold of the various offerings we have listed. If you know of one, please send us his address. Our customers are in need of him.

PASSENGER STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

The tables herewith give the scheduled time of departure of ocean steamships carrying first-class passengers from the principal American and foreign ports, covering the space of two weeks from date of this issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. Much disappointment often results from attempts to forward flowers for steamer delivery by express, to the care of the ship's steward or otherwise. The carriers of these packages are not infrequently refused admision on board and even those delivered on board are not always certain to reach the parties for whom they were intended. Hence florists in interior cities having orders for the delivery of flowers to passengers on out-going steamers are advised to intrust the filling of such orders to some reliable florist in the port of departure, who understands the necessary details and formalities and has the facilities for attending to it properly. For the addresses of such firms we refer our readers to the advertisements on this page:

The Seed Trade.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

S. F. Willard, Pres.; J. Chas. McCullough, First Vice-Pres.; C. E. Keudel, Cleveland, O., Sec'y and Treas.
Twenty-second annual convention, St. Louis, Mo., June 21-23, 1904.

Congressional Seedsmen.

PUBLIC PAYS SALARIES AND SUPPLIES SEEDS.

If the current custom of indiscriminate distribution shall indefinitely continue, if this congressional comedy shall drift into a continuous performance, we shall ultimately be driven to the mournful admission that we are not statesmen, but seedsmen; and it will be in order for some distinguished seedsmen, some sainted hero of a score of memorable distributions, some legislative knight upon whose shield is blazoned a radish in its glory or a turnip in repose, to arise in his place with becoming gravity and move, Mr. Chairman, that the American eagle be taken from the mace and supplanted by a package of vegetable seed as the supreme emblem of the genius, the character, and the principal occupation of American statesmanship.—Morris Sheppard, of Texas, in House of Representatives.

THE few onion sets left are selling at from $5 to $6 per bushel.

MICHIGAN bean growers are reported as organizing to adjust prices.

THE retail counter seed trade east and west has been very good for the past two weeks.

ONION set fields on high ground about Chicago are showing generally a good stand.

VISITED ST. LOUIS: J. J. Van Waveren, of L. Van Waveren & Co., Hillegom, Holland, visited the fair last week.

NEW YORK seedsmen report counter trade as keeping up remarkably well, much better than anticipated.

SECRETARY C. E. KENDEL, American Seed Trade Association, is actively at work on the society's programme for the June meeting.

THE Johnson & Musser Seed Company of Los Angeles has a suit pending which will be made the test case of seedsmen's disclaimer in California.

NEWPORT, R. I.—Sanford corn from which the famous Rhode Island meal is made is quite scarce this year. The farmers are holding their stock on hand for $1.25 per bushel.

VISITED CHICAGO: J. J. Van Waveren, representing L. Van Waveren & Company, Hillegom, Holland; Charles H. Vick, superintendent of New York horticulture and floriculture at World's Fair.

AN exposition will be held in Kief, Russia, during August and September next, under the auspices of the Agricultural Society of Kief. Seeds and everything pertaining to agriculture will be admitted free of duty.

Law Harasses Importers.

Never since the passage of the tariff law has there been more protest among importers at the manner of its enforcement than there is now. The importers in New York are talking of holding meetings to discuss the most obnoxious provisions of the law and to appeal to congress for a modification of them.

What is complained of are some of the clauses in the law which, while designed to prevent frauds, have little deterrent effect on the dishonest importers and harass and worry the honest ones. Chief among these is the "market value" provision and its attendant clause providing a penalty for undervaluation. No feature of the customs law has given more trouble than this. As a matter of practice the price in the home market at the place and time of exportation is taken as the basis for fixing the market value abroad. A serious phase of the question is that presented by importers who buy their goods long before the selling season starts, for shipment several months later. Prices on their commodities may change materially in the meantime, and while the goods are honestly invoiced at what was paid for them they are advanced in value, and the importer has to pay not only duty on the advanced value, but double duty as a penalty.—New York Times, April 3, 1904.

Tariff Manipulation.

The recent decision of the United States Court of Appeals making canary seed dutiable, attracts attention to the peculiar change made in the free list of seeds from the law as it stood in 1890 to the new act of 1897. The latter law took canary seed out of the free list but did not locate it in any other paragraph, and inserted in the free list the word cauliflower, singling out in it one of a long list of vegetable seeds, of which none had ever been placed on the free list before.

The question which interests the trade is who succeeded in manipulating this paragraph of the new tariff to the extent of singling out cauliflower from all garden seeds and making it free and at the same time throwing canary seed, which was similar to hemp and rape, all in the free list, into a dutiable section. There are but few in the trade who do not already realize the need of honest tariff reform, but this is another evidence of how tariff matters have been misbauded.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Weather last week was all that could be desired. Trade was good with all the florists. At an elaborate drug store opening palms, smilax and American Beauty roses in profusion with flats and pots of daffodils, were used effectively by S. A. Anderson. The same day the University of Buffalo had its graduating exercises and all had large orders. Thursday the Sweeney Company opened a new store and all had work for it. Weddings were scarce. On Monday the William Hengerer Company moved into its new store on the property formerly occupied by the Tift House. The decorations were palms and an unusually large amount of roses arranged and cared for by Palmer & Son, the whole being as elaborate as ever seen here. Stock is of the best and in good supply. Bridesmaid, Bride and Meteor are fine and carnations good and plentiful. Many American Beauties were handled last week, the quality being the best.

The Buffalo Florists' Club had its annual meeting and election of officers last night. All officers were re-elected for another year. The club is in good financial condition, and only needs a little more support from the florists in attending the meetings. The club's usefulness was very apparent when the late agitation about the watering and care of vases at Forest Lawn cemetery was up. The club as a body took the matter up and had the order barring outside florists rescinded. After the meeting, which was held in Kasting's Opera House, we all adjourned to the banquet room, where a fine lunch was served by W. J. Kasting as the formal opening of his new and commodious wholesale house. President Scott acted as toastmaster. The speakers were D. B. Long, who gave reminiscences; Charles H. Keitsch, on club flower shows, and W. F. Kasting, on his success in trade politics. Jacob Boeler favored us with some fine songs, as did Ludwig Neubeck and J. Pickleman. James Buxton had a new lease of life and did some clever dancing for a man who remembered Gladstone in his younger days. It was truly wonderful, and when "Bedelia" was played he was in a seventh heaven. The younger element was very prominent.

From now until July 1 greenhouse men will not be receiving calls from their friends. Their time will be fully occupied in intimations to their customers as to when their work will be done.

Prof. Cowell was busy yesterday (May 10) at an important meeting of the park board, when business of vital importance to South park was transacted.

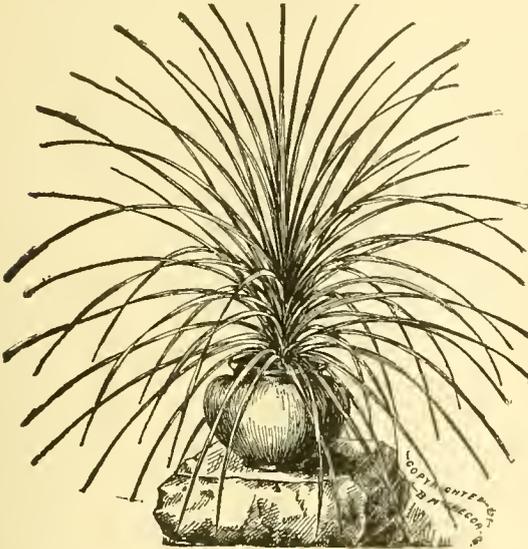

Paul Lovas, formerly wire-worker for W. F. Kasting, has started in business for himself in Washington, D. C.

The opening of the Lafayette hotel June 16 promises another big order for cut flowers.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn., Pres.; Frank A. Weber, St. Louis, Mo., Vice-Pres.; George C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Twenty-ninth annual convention, Atlanta, Ga., June 22-24, 1904.

DES MOINES, IA.—Articles of incorporation were filed May 4 by the Watrous Nursery Company, of Des Moines, capital $20,000, C. L. Watrous and Charles A. Watrous, incorporators.

OWATONNA, MINN.—Thos. E. Cashman, president of the Clinton Falls Nursery Company, has been appointed delegate to the good roads convention at St. Louis by Governor Van Sant.

PORTLAND, ME.—Fort Allen park is to be extended to the eastward this summer and the entire slope to the waters' edge with its unrivalled harbor view will be devoted to the public use, the Grand Trunk railroad having transferred a large tract of land here to the city.

NEWPORT, R. I.—It would be very interesting to hear from all sections of the country regarding the hardiness of California privet this last winter. In Rhode Island it has stood the severe weather very well; but in Massachusetts much complaint is heard. How is it in other states?

Portland Invitation for Nurserymen.

The Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association, through M. McDonald, of the Oregon Nursery Company, Salem, Ore., has issued an invitation to the American Association of Nurserymen to hold next year's annual convention at Portland, Ore., in connection with the Lewis and Clark exposition.

Park News.

CHelsea, MASS.—The board of aldermen of this city has voted to abolish the park commission and transfer its duties and powers to the superintendent of streets, who is an appointee of the mayor. Doubt of the legality of this action has been expressed.

MIDDLEBURY, VT.—Joseph Battell has bought Ellen mountain, containing 4,000 acres covered mostly with original forest and will convert it into a park for the benefit of the citizens of the Green Mountain state.

MALDEN, MASS.—Daniel Connell has been appointed superintendent of the parks here. The city has appropriated $18,000 for park improvement this year.

MAPLEWOOD, MASS.—Jas. F. Eaton has given a tract of land containing about 146,000 square feet for a public playground.

Picea Pungens.

Among the small number of conifers that have withstood the fierce rigors of the past winter the Colorado blue spruce, Picea pungens stands out absolutely unscathed. This is a case where reliability and beauty go together, for there is no evergreen so generally admired as this when seen in its most distinct silvery forms. The principal drawback to its planting hitherto has been its price. Nurserymen are increasing their stock rapidly now but it will probably be many years before conditions will be such that a surplus can be found anywhere. The form introduced by a European firm as the Kosteri is one of the most striking in color and growth. A plantation of Kosteri at the nursery of J. H. Troy, New Rochelle, N. Y., is shown in the accompanying illustration. The proprietor himself stands among them admiring his favorites in comfortable complacency.

Thinning Tree and Shrubbery Plantations.

In growing plantations of trees and shrubbery one of the most important operations the thinning out of overcrowding individuals. It is well to plant thickly for each tree and shrub helps to protect the other. Nurse trees are often introduced into plantations to serve as temporary protection until the permanent trees gain in strength. Too often, however, the trees intended to nurse the others are permitted to remain in the plantations until they have injured their nurslings by overcrowding them.

A safe rule for the planter to follow in a young plantation is: Never allow the growth of one tree to injure the growth of another. By nonobservance of this rule costly mistakes have been made, and this is nowhere more apparent than in our public parks and pleasure grounds. But go where you will, whether in the streets, the public parks or the private home grounds, to a great extent, crowded and therefore damaging conditions prevail among trees and shrubbery.

The opposition which the practical arboriculturist or the landscape gardener often has to contend with is the sentimental aversion expressed by well-meaning against the cutting down of trees. This feeling is born of ignorance of the requirements of good tree culture, and, so far as public parks are concerned, is responsible for much of the destruction or the bad condition of their trees.

While the thinning out of young plantations is a simple matter, that of thinning a piece of old woodland is much more difficult. The young plantation is made to conform or to give effect to a landscape, while the old woodland may be the dominating feature, or it may require carving to bring it into harmony with the landscape. Should the trees, although standing thickly together, be fairly vigorous and well formed, a judicious thinning will improve their condition by letting in air and light, thus inducing a growth of side branches. Should, however, the trees be of spindling growth from overcrowding, better results may be obtained by cutting out freely enough to allow of new planting.

While in park plantation and woodlands trees should have more room for symmetrical development that obtains in forestry operations, yet it is not necessary that each tree in a mass intended for sylvan effect should be a perfect specimen of its kind. Specimen growths should be reserved for prominent points or open spaces. The selection of material to be thinned out should be made in the summer season and marked. At this time the condition of the trees and their relation to each other can be the more easily determined and pleasing combinations can be arranged or retained—J. A. Pettigrew, in Bulletin of New England Park Superintendents.

Our Pastimes.

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and sporting readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 42 W. 28th St., New York; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia; or to the American Florist Co., Chicago.

At Washington.

The event of the past week was the bowling contest on Friday, May 6. The score was: Philadelphia, 2,546; Washington, 2,453; Baltimore, 2,144. The tellow with a grip full of hoary chestnuts on "slow" Philadelphia had better keep out of the florist circles of Washington for some time to come. The banquet to the visiting teams and their friends by the Washington Florists' Club immediately after the contest was ended was an enjoyable event. A large company was seated at the tables of the Hotel Fritz Reuter, which were handsomely decorated with American Beauty roses, the decoration being the gift of A. Gude & Brother. After justice had been done the viands Toastmaster W. F. Gude introduced Fred. H. Kramer, the donor of the tri-city cup, who in a few well chosen remarks formally presented the cup to the Philadelphia team. Appropriate responses were made by Messrs. Starkey and Dunlop. After this there was quite a flow of oratory from members of the Baltimore delegation and several of the locals. Among the speakers were Capt. Seybold and Mr. Krebs, of Baltimore, Capt. Ernest, Adolphus Gude, William Clark and John Robertson, of Washington.

The Kramer Tri-City Cup.

Mr. Kramer has offered to present another cup, to be designated Cup No. 2, for the greatest total number of pins in three games. The possibilities are that the New York club will be invited to participate in the next contest, which will not take place until after the meeting of the S. A. F. at St. Louis. The Philadelphians and Orioles are good fellows and we hope to meet them often, even if we have to lose a cup to do it. Among those I was glad to meet were Wm. Graham, of Philadelphia, and John Wiedey of the Lord & Burnham agency of Baltimore. The trophy won by Philadelphia is shown in the illustration herewith.

St. Paul.

This has been the most backward spring in many years with very little rain and continuous cold weather, but it is all changed and we are in the midst of summer as far as the weather goes. Every one is wanting spring planting done. From all reports business in the month of April was the best on record, there being a continuous string of good funeral work. Stock was quite plentiful all the time, but now we have a big surplus. Lots of fine bulbous stock is still seen. Carnations, which had been rather scarce, are arriving in wagon loads. There is no green stock at all, and even ferns are hard to procure.

The boys have had a little time for bowling lately and have been getting together frequently of late. There has been some talk of a team going to St. Louis, but this is doubtful.

E. P. Holm was on the sick list for ten days. He was treated for an attack of appendicitis, but is now feeling as good as ever.

C. W. Creighton and Arnold Ringier were recent callers on the trade. O.

Reading, Pa.

E. H. Beears has sold his retail establishment on Mulberry street and purchased a plot of ground on the outskirts of the city in the new suburb of Rosedale, where he is building a cottage and in a few weeks will erect six new greenhouses, 20x100 feet each. He will grow smilax and carnations for the wholesale trade.

The weather has at last reached a summer standpoint and planting out has fairly begun. Almost every market basket you see is topped by a geranium or some other blooming plant. Carnation planting is well under way, and most florists will finish planting within a few days. More carnations are being set out this spring than ever before and every florist is giving one or more of the newer varieties a trial. Trade has been good the past week, owing to a large amount of funeral work and stock has been kept well cleaned up. Florists of the tri-cities are looking forward to a large bedding plant trade; prices are about the same as former years.

Rob't Allison, late of the Allison-Littig Company, will sail for Norfolk, England, on or about May 15 on the steamer Oceanic to visit with his brother, a florist at the Royal Gardens, whom he has not seen for about twenty-one years. Mr. Allison will be gone about three months. It is his intention to also visit Cork, Ireland, and Inverness, Scotland, the latter city being the birthplace of his father. What business he will engage in after his return he is at present not able to state.

Nichols & Lorton, nurserymen claim their sales in hardy roses, shrubbery, trees, etc., have been greater by far than ever before. They shipped out over thirty carloads, mostly to the south and west. Their nursery is one of the largest in the west, comprising some 400 to 500 acres of ground and employing in their busy season 100 to 200 men and boys.

Max Rathmann, florist at the Soldiers' Orphans' home, had a curiosity in the way of a branching Harrisii lily. It had fourteen branches and on each one was a flower. It stood about three and one-half feet high and was perfectly tree shaped.

Superintendent Arp, of Central park, and his assistants are busy with beds, and the park has a very fine holiday appearance. Thousands of visitors can be found there any warm day, for Central park is without doubt one of the finest in the state.

Girls! this is leap year and here's your chance. Ten of the boss florists of the tri-cities are single men. Information and address furnished free of charge by Theo. Ewoldt, of Davenport, Ia.

Miss Lottie Bills, who underwent an operation several weeks ago, is slowly improving. Miss Bills is a sister of Harry Bills, of the Bills Floral Company.

Ewoldt Brothers have lost faith in windmills and in the last week have installed a two horse-power gasoline engine.

A recent trade visitor was Mrs. Werbach, of Cambridge, Ill. T. E.

Norfolk, Va.

Harry Bunyard has been confined to the St. Vincent's hospital here the past two weeks and has undergone two operations for his left knee, which was injured undoubtedly by his being thrown from a sleigh in Wisconsin last winter. He is improving rapidly and hopes soon to be himself again, however. Harry says he will never die in a hospital.

American Beauties

Yes we have the plants you want. We don't run a "Beauty Factory" but we have about 40,000 feet of glass devoted to them and we have men who understand propagating and growing them. We haven't a lot of cull stock we wish to dump. But we have a clean healthy lot of plants which we are offering at very low prices. We intend to establish a reputation on our goods and want your order. The goods are right—but if you don't think so, return them and you can have your money back. Send a dollar for samples if you are dubious. 2-inch, $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000. 3-inch, $6.00 per 100; $55.00 per 1000. 4-inch, $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

A PROSPEROUS FLORIST

Is never idle. A glimpse into my houses will prove this. Even enemies must admit that an unusual amount of work has been done to fill an establishment of so many houses which were emptied at Easter, with such an enormous stock of 150,000 choice bedding plants, an increase of 50,000 from last year. Ready now immediate shipment. Secure bargains for now and Decoration Day.

DAVIS BROS., Morriston and Geneva, Ill.

Butte, Mont.

The cut flower business was never better in Butte and the state of Montana than at present. The business has made a wonderful growth in the last three years. Considerable glass has gone up in that time, but there are not nearly enough cut flowers grown in the state to supply the demand. From reports that are quietly whispered about there will be a large plant erected in the near future, somewhere in this state, which will do a wholesale business exclusively. Such a plant would be welcomed here, as there is now no such place in the state and we are far from a market. There are a great many carnations used here. Law Brothers have shipped in as many as 10,000 at one time. There is not much bedding done, although there are quite a number of plants grown and sold. The most of them go the cemeteries, and as they are not cared for as in some of the eastern cities they soon perish from want of care and are replaced by new ones. But like everything else in a mining camp they are being better cared for every year.

Victor Seigel, who has charge of the beautiful grounds of the Columbia gardens, is a very busy man at present getting things in shape for the summer. Mr. Seigel deserves much credit for the fine quality of his flowers and the arrangement of them last season. His pansy beds were especially fine. Ten years ago it was thought impossible to grow flowers in a park near Butte, but since Mr. Seigel has taken hold of the place he has demonstrated that they can be grown in Butte as well as anywhere. Begonias and coleus he had to abandon as the nights are too cold.

Ed. Willoughby, manager of the Mount Maria cemetery, has made wonderful improvement in the last three years in the way of trees, grass and flowers. He takes a great interest in beautifying the grounds and is meeting with much success.

C. W. Scott, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, called on the trade here a short time ago.

Orange, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting and floral display of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held May 6. A practical and concise paper on "The Commercial Rose from Planting to Cutting" was read by Harry D. May, of Summit. It was his maiden effort, and was well received provoking considerable discussion from a large number of members. The many many questions put to Mr. May, showing the keen interest in rose cultivation at the present time, were answered in a spirit which left the pleasantest of feeling toward the essayist. A display of cut flowers was made by Peter Duff, George Smith and William Bennett and plants in pots were shown by D. Kindsgrab, Malcolm MacRorie and Chas. Ashmead. The orchids Cattleya Mossia, Mendelii and Skinneri and Brassavola fragrans from the houses of William Barr, of Llewellyn Park, who devotes an entire range of glass to these exotics, grown by Arthur Bodwell, were of particular interest. Two new members, Paul Minder, of Newark, and William Reed, who has taken George Smith's place at Colgate's, were admitted and a discussion on new certificates filled out the evening. George Smith has taken possession of the stand of F. W. Massman, East Orange, which he recently purchased.

Arthur Cowee, the gladioli specialist of Berlin, Rensselaer county, is at St. Louis making preparations for an extensive gladioli exhibit at the exposition. During the growing season Mr. Cowee will secure a large number of blooms from a plot of four acres which he has arranged to plant with bulbs on the farm of Louis F. Dintelmann, of Belleville, Ill. The blooms will be sold at the exposition grounds.

L. H. Menand and Mrs. Gloeckner, of Cemetery avenue, have just installed a new and adequate water supply. A 4-inch main has been laid to a pond in the Albany Rural cemetery. With an elevation of seventy-five feet at the source of supply the pressure is all that could be desired. Mrs. Gloeckner has let the contract for a new house to replace an old one to the Pierson-Sefton Company.

The Municipal Improvements commission of Troy has selected Harry P. Fielding landscape architect for Prospect park to succeed Garnet D. Baltimore, whose time has expired.

Lord & Burnham Company has a number of men busily engaged in rebuilding the greenhouses of F. A. Danker on Central avenue, which were badly damaged by fire last winter.

Whittle Brothers have begun to tear down two houses to be replaced by others of modern construction. The houses are 20x150 feet and are devoted to carnations.

John H. Jackson, a well-to-do tile manufacturer, will erect a conservatory to be attached to his house, Brookside avenue, Menands, this summer.

AMERICAN FLORIST ADS ALWAYS DO BUSINESS

Week days and every day, Sundays and holidays,

ALL OVER THE COUNTRY AT HOME AND ABROAD.

Lowell, Mass.

Business the last week has taken on a new aspect. Everybody has been on the jump, with plenty of funeral work and an occasional wedding decoration to look after. For June several good weddings are on the calendar. The supply of cut flowers at present is superb, with the exception of Bride and Bridesmaid roses and they are just beginning to wear a worried look owing to the unusually hot weather we have had to contend with the last ten days. Brunners of excellent quality are to be seen on every side. At no time this year have the Beauties been so good. The way carnations are coming in would indicate that some one is liable to be minus on Memorial day. Great activity is seen around the greenhouses that grow bedding plants. Owing to the extreme hot weather orders for plants for planting out purposes have been heavy. Very good stock is being offered for sale. For geraniums $1.50 per dozen seems to be the prevailing figure. So far there has been an unusual demand for dahlias and gladioli bulbs for owing to the severe winter a great many bulbs were frozen.

The old Sheppard place on Fairmount street is a sorry looking spectacle just now. It has been abandoned for a couple of years and everything has gone to ruin. It is only about ten years ago that Sheppard's Garden, as it was called, was the finest commercial place in all New England, but for lack of good management, owing to the infirmities of the now deceased proprietor, things went from bad to worse.

The greenhouses that were built on Roger road several years ago are to be occupied at last. We do not know who the owner is, but things are being put into shape for growing plants. When the houses were erected it was for the purpose of growing violets, but there were so many fingers in the pie that no agreement could be reached.

We note by a recent issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST that our old friend Robert Miller is now at Cleveland, O. We congratulate J. M. Gasser on securing the services of so able a rose grower.

Tingley, of Tewksbury, Mass., is cutting some excellent long-stemmed pansies which, hunched up prettily, are taking the place of violets in a good many cases.

Whittet & Company are making a good showing of longiflorum lilies, some plants, one bulb to a pot, carrying twenty-five to thirty of the most exquisite blooms.

A. C. Tingley, of Tewksbury, has returned home from a duck shooting trip. A. M.

The seventeenth annual meeting of the Florida State Horticultural Society was held here from April 26 to 28 inclusive with three sessions each day. Many papers on subjects of interest to the horticulturists in the state were read by prominent members of the society and important reports from the standing committees heard. The only change in the officers was the election of E. O. Painter as secretary to fill the place of Stephen Powers, deceased. The officers for the ensuing year are:

President—George L. Taber, Glen St. Mary.
 Vice-presidents—Dr. George Kerr, Pierson; Geo. W. Wilson, Jacksonville; F. D. Waite, Palmetto.
 Secretary—E. O. Painter, Jacksonville.
 Treasurer—W. S. Hart, Hawks Point.
 Executive Committee—Rev. Lyman Phelps, Sanford; E. S. Hubbard, Federal Point; C. T. McCarty, Eldred.

AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY, 324 Dearborn St., CHICAGO.

Cincinnati.

At the present time we are having a tremendous glut of flowers, for a few warm days has brought roses and carnations on with a rush and prizes have dropped accordingly. A buyer can obtain flowers at his own figure, and street fakirs are in their glory. One of them informed the writer this week that he bought $3 worth of carnations in one of the wholesale houses and realized nearly $20 out of them. So the growers can not expect very big returns this week, but they all say the sun has brought out nearly all the buds in sight, which will make flowers a little scarce for Decoration day. Locally there is very little doing in business, but a little shipping trade relieves the market of considerable stock. Smilax is still scarce. Bulbous stock is about over, but there are plenty of longiflorums and callas.

The daily press for the past year has been printing some glowing articles about expending a million dollars for park purposes, but up to the present time it is all talk and no action. We hope our city fathers will get busy in the near future and spend some of the taxpayers' money for this purpose.

Tarrytown, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held Tuesday evening, April 26, in the Vanderbilt building. A beautiful display of calceolarias was seen at this meeting for which D. MacFarlane, gardener for Mrs. H. Walter Webb, Scarborough, was awarded President Ballantyne's prize of a tountain pen. It was decided to hold the annual June exhibition in the Lyceum, Tarrytown, Thursday, June 9, to be open from 3 p. m. to 10 p. m. Frances Pammer was elected manager. The society offers a second prize for the best twelve blooms of Dr. Enguehard chrysanthemums for which the F. R. Pierson Company has already offered a silver cup for first prize at the November exhibition.

The last Tuesday in May being ladies' night, the society hopes for a large attendance of members and expects to have a very pleasant evening's entertainment at which ice cream, sandwiches and coffee will be served.

An essay on calceolarias was read by Wm. Scott which was very freely discussed by D. MacFarlane, Jas. Mooney, Wm. Brewer, Jas. Scott and others.

T. A. LEE.

GRAND MARAIS, MICH.—The May meeting of the Grand River Valley Horticultural Society was held May 10 at Henry Smith's greenhouses on West Bridge street. The general subject for discussion was "Cultivation," and the subject treated of weeds, and moisture, and implements and methods, and how to reduce labor to the minimum, and secure the maximum results.

UTICA, N. Y.—Frank J. Baker has purchased a tract of land on Sunset avenue, part of the shooting grounds of the Oneida County Sportsmen's Association, on which he will erect greenhouses containing 25,000 square feet of glass. There will be six houses, each 18x150. They will be joined at one end and will be heated by two seventy-five horse-power tubular boilers, steam being used. These houses will be used entirely for growing roses.

The Duplex Cutter and The Duplex Eaves have solved the question of how to build up-to-date greenhouses as durable as the iron frame greenhouses at high prices, and nearly as cheap as wooden houses. See the cut that represents the new Duplex Eaves, the most durable, strongest and simplest to erect. Any common laborer can set them as perfect as an expert mechanic. It is perfection in construction. No ice or snow to darken your hours when light means money. Positively no shade from the Duplex Eaves, costs only about $2.00 per foot, including Duplex Gutters and Eaves, Iron Posts for Gutters, Iron Purlines with Posts, Tees and Floor Plates, Center Posts with Plates and Bases, Standard Ventilating Machines, complete with double strong Pipe, Cypress Sash Bars and Ventilating Sash. BOOKS FOR FLORISTS.

The time is coming along when these are needed and opportunity at hand for reading them. Every one of the following should be in your library.

Send prices quoted and we send the books.

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION (Taft).—It tells the whole story about how to build, and heat a greenhouse, be it large or small, and that too in a plain, easily understood, practical way. It has 118 illustrations. $1.50.

HEATING AND VENTILATING BUILDINGS (Carpenter).—This book covers the entire subject most fully. In the preparation of heating and ventilating plans, it will be found a most valuable guide. $4.00.

STEAM HEATING FOR BUILDINGS (Baldwin).—Contains valuable data and hints for steam fitters and those who employ this method of heating. The 350 pages are fully illustrated. $2.50.

THE HORTICULTURISTS' RULE-BOOK (L. H. Bailey).—Contains information valuable to all those engaged in any branch of horticulture. Illustrated. 312 pages. 75 cents.

PRACTICAL FLORICULTURE (Peter Henderson).—A guide to the successful propagation and cultivation of florists' plants. Illustrated. 325 pages. $1.50.

THE ROSE—Its cultivation, varieties, etc. (H. B. Ellwanger).—A complete guide of the cultivation of the rose, together with the classification of all the leading varieties. $1.25.

"Gurney" Heaters

"BRIGHT IDEA," "DORIC" and "400 SERIES" do the same thing for your hothouse: THEY GUARANTEE THE CROP. First of all they save 20 per cent on the coal bill and so keep expense at a minimum. Next, they produce an even heat and so do not imperil the life of the plant. Next, they are simple to operate and so require least attention. Lastly, they wear longer than others and thus perceptibly reduce the capital invested. Don't buy or exchange until you've investigated them.

Some Forcing Bulb Records

FOR SEASON OF 1903-1904 IN NEW YORK.

The Profits and Losses of Growers.

The assiduity with which traveling agents of foreign bulb growers now canvas all sections of this country and the ease with which the small grower may produce his own bulb flower crops at will have been among the influences working of late years to the disadvantage of the city wholesalers and shippers and the large growers who force in quantity for the wholesale demand. Owing in part to the development of carnation, rose and violet culture and largely to the mysterious changes in the caprice of the buying public, bulbous flowers have been gradually losing the prestige they once enjoyed in the metropolitan flower markets. Whether the wheel of fortune shall whirl them into prominence again in the near future is something nobody can foresee, but until it does the financial results to the growers for the past few years would indicate that careful management and a close watch on the weak spots is the only safeguard against an actual loss in the aggregate business of the season. Some varieties at favoring times bring prices showing a good profit but it is to the full results from all for the entire season and not to these isolated instances that the grower must look for comfort or the reverse.

Taking up the various popular bulbs in their succession as to flowering time, the Paper White narcissi are the first on the list. These cost last season from $8 to $8.25 per 1,000 delivered here. Quality was generally good and the flowers brought $2 per hundred at the outset, later dropping to $1. The latter price does not pay, for, even at the best, at least ten per cent of the bulbs will run blind and frequently the proportion is much greater. Single-nosed Paper Whites are the safer as the double-nosed are very liable to give a crop of leaves and nothing else.

Next in earliness are the French Trumpet Major narcissi which cost as a rule, about the same as Paper Whites. The percentage of flowerless bulbs in this variety which the grower should take into his calculations is very large for, although in occasional years, like the last one, there is a chance to get ninety five per cent of flowering bulbs, he may be well satisfied if he gets thirty-three per cent to flower, and if he gets fifty per cent he is in luck. Appearances count for nothing in estimating on flowering capacity and there is no possible advantage in offering or paying a higher price for specially selected stock. This French variety is not as good as the Dutch but is the only yellow stock available so early in the season, so cannot well be dispensed with. Some inexperienced growers, misled by the high flowering percentage of last fall, started the selling price for blooms in the market at $2, a very foolish price as, on the average for several years, there is no profit in French Trumpets at less than $5 per hundred. The Campernelles, which can be brought in at about the same time, are very floriferous and their sweet perfume sells them if marketed before New Year, after which the market is well supplied with higher grade varieties. They cost $4 per 1,000, all will bloom, and the product brings from $1.50 to $2 per 100. All the above named varieties can be brought in for Thanksgiving and their season extends over Christmas.

Prices on Roman hyacinth bulbs were high last season, the regular grade of "thirteen ctm. and over" costing about $23 per 1,000 on this side. The flowering average was very poor. The grade above quoted should have produced at least two good spikes to the bulb but usually the result was one medium and one small spike. As from Thanksgiving clear through to March 15 the best flowers had to be sold at $2, and the lower grades at $1 per 100 with the sole exception of a couple of days at Christmas when prices were a trifle better, it will be seen without much brain effort that there was no money in Roman hyacinths last season. Growers generally complain that the sizes are too closely shaved in the present method of sorting. Buy a case of "12-15 ctm.," so called, and out of the 2,000 bulbs there will be about 1250 of twelve ctm. and fifty of the larger sizes, generally on the top for effect. Twelve ctm. bulbs will produce on an average one good and one poor spike. Thirteen centimeters should give two fair and one or two small. Fifteen ctm. will produce two or three large and three or four small. Eleven ctm., the smallest size quoted, is good for but one fair spike. These facts sufficiently indicate the advantage in being able to order and receive uniform grades with not so wide a latitude as is given in "twelve to fifteen ctm." Twelve to thirteen, thirteen to fourteen and fourteen to fifteen ctm. would afford the desired uniformity and close assortment, would be a big benefit to the trade in general and particular buyers would not object to paying more under such conditions.

The French Double Von Sion which can be brought in easily for December sales would fill a good place if growers were able to discover the secret of getting all the flowers yellow. As it is, fully fifty per cent of the flowers produced come green and no one is thus far able to explain why. The cost of bulbs last season was about $12 per 1,000 and as the flowers, when good, sold with fair regularity until middle or latter part of January when the Dutch stock came in to supplant them, it appears that with the color problem solved the cultivation of the French Von Sion would yield a fair profit.

The Dutch Trumpet Major begins to come in soon after January 1. The price of the bulbs varies but little from $9 a thousand from year to year. They bloom freely and surely, many producing two or three flowers, so that from a hundred bulbs 150 to 200 flowers are a reasonable certainty. These brought $2 per hundred all through the season until April 1, after which they were not desirable because of the many fancy varieties then available. Double Von Sion raised on sandy soil can be had in flower by January 20. The cost of bulbs last year was $8 per 1,000 for flowering size, $10 for first size and $18 for extra selected per hundred. Of the cheap grade ninety-five per cent will give one flower, first size is sure for 100 per cent one flower each and the selected will give two or more flowers each. The first size is best to handle as it gives the most perfect flowers. The price of flowers for the first two weeks was $3 per hundred. It then dropped to $2 and at intervals during Lent the product had to be unloaded as low as 50 cents a hundred to clean up the surplus. They cannot be considered as having been profitable this season. Golden Spur did a little better but is next year liable to be overdone in consequence. These cost $15 for first size and $18 for extra, but although the extra size bulbs can be relied on up to a limit of 150 flowers to each 100 bulbs the flowers suffer in size when more than one is produced from a bulb, hence number one is the best bulb to buy. The flowers sold at $4 at the start, then dropped to $3 and $2, and many went as low as $1.25 per hundred. Judging by the order books which the Dutch travelers took home with them next year is likely to see a slaughter. Better than Golden Spur, if the true stock is obtained, is Henry Irving. Identical in color, the trumpet is more frilled, and it is possible to bring it in a little earlier than Golden Spur. It cost $15 and the flowers sold just a trifle better at times than the Golden Spur did.

Poeticus ornatus, free flowering, a bloom of artistic form, sweet scented and well liked, can be had as early as February 1. It brought $2 down to $1.50 throughout the season. The bulbs cost $4 to $5 per 1,000. Bicolor Horsfieldii, the cleanest cut and most striking of the commercial narcissus family, can be had as early as Golden Spur and can now be bought as low as $15 per 1,000. In England this flower is appreciated; here the taste of the people lags in development but there is a gratifying and constant advance. A few years ago the Double Von Sion was the only one the

New York market would take. Horsfieldii will produce from two to three flowers to the bulb if of good grade. The last season the flowers sold for $3 and $2, a fair profit being possible at these figures. Bicolor Empress is another fine one later than Horsfieldii, costing about the same and serving to lengthen the season. Princeps is a good old standby, blooming easily and freely from the middle of February and costing but $6 per thousand. Last season the flowers brought from $2 down to 50 cents a hundred. Bicolor Victoria is the latest narcissus and the cream of the bicolors. The past year is the first one in which its price was low enough for the commercial man to touch. It must stay for a while in the fancy trade as the bulbs are worth $25, but the stem is stiff and the flower grander in all respects than any of the preceding. Emperor, the boldest type of the narcissus family, unfortunately cannot be had before the middle of March or first of April. For a bulb costing $16 to $18 the price of the flowers, $4 down to $1.50, is not encouraging but it comes at a time when the market is glutted.

Of the tulips, Duc Van Tholl, the earliest bloomer, finds but a slim sale. The flowers don't hold their shape in this climate but flop open before the petals have fully developed. The white Duc was fairly profitable last Christmas. Proserpine, the next in earliness, has been so much in demand for the past few years that the price has advanced from $8 to $20 per thousand. Three dollars was the top limit for the flowers last season and so it was not profitable. Salvator Rose, double pink, is another that has advanced in price, the bulbs costing $24 last year. The flowers brought from $6 down to $4 per 100. La Reine at $6, Yellow Prince at $9 and Vermilion Brilliant at $18 per 1,000 are the popular mid-season varieties. The flowers brought fair prices during February and March, after which they sold too cheap. Tournesol at $11, Murillo at $16, Coronne d'Or at $25, Keiserskroon at $9 and Montresor at $14 a thousand are a little later than the foregoing. Averaged up they probably paid their way but no more than that. The higher priced ones are too high for this market and the cheaper ones have to make up the difference. For latest forcing Rose Grisdelin at $12, Coleur Cardinal at $20, Belle Alliance at $14 and Rose Luisante are the leaders. The same story as to prices applies to these also and the market is unwilling to pay remunerative rates for the bloom. Red tulips were scarce and generally dear last year but the market takes no cognizance of this fact and expects the flowers from high priced bulbs at the same figure as those from the low priced bulbs. The varieties just enumerated also have to come in contact with the high-water crop of fine carnations and roses, as the season goes here, and at from $4 down to $2.50 per hundred which was the prevailing selling price this year they do not bring what they merit in cost or quality.

A word in closing as to the lily of the valley market. Experience this year seems to indicate that its culture is unquestionably overdone. So much inferior stock is placed on the market that the standard of the flower as a choice article is injuriously affected and prices have been dragged down until there is no longer any profit assured to the forcer. The European growers and exporters are making a costly mistake in apparently thinking, from the rapidly increased demand of recent years, that anything is good enough for the American trade. So bold have they now become that cases sold as first-class are found to contain often three or four grades. Add to this avoidable drawback the fact that on account of exposure to the rigors of the unprecedented cold weather in transit and on docks last fall much of the stock was so injured that development was imperfect and inferior flowers were the result. Prices for the bloom ran lower than ever before and there was no margin for the grower even without taking into consideration incidental failures and miscalculations which are always possibilities in any establishment. Importers should see to it that avoidable defects should be remedied and insist on the absolute integrity of grade as represented by the exporters clear through from top to bottom of case and from circumference to center of bunch. At present there must be lots of second-class pips lying around in cold storage which will probably show a shrinkage of thirty-three per cent that could have been avoided by rigid examination and resolute action at the proper time. For much of the information as to prices and other matters contained in the above we are indebted to W. H. Siebrecht, of Astoria, N. Y.

A Fine Cattleya Mossiae.

The plant shown in the illustration is one of a recent importation from Caracas which was received by Julius Roehrs in April and bloomed as shown in May, bearing 142 perfect flowers. Cattleya Mossiae is the species which must be depended on for spring bloom, following the winter-blooming Trianae. The flowers are large and the lip usually deeply crimped and fringed. No other orchid excels it in beauty or in free-flowering characteristics.

Galega Hartlandi.

The illustration herewith, reproduced from a photograph, shows the new Galega Hartlandi as grown by Wm. Baylor Hartland, of Cork, Ireland. It is a hardy herbaceous perennial, which grows to a height of about four feet, with handsomely variegated (green and white) pinnate foliage, and flowers like those of Wistaria Chinensis in color, produced in much profusion from June to September. It is said to be excellent for cutting.

Notes on Aquatics.

The unusual lateness of spring and the ever recurring cold waves have delayed operations in all branches of horticulture. Signs of life, however, are again apparent in plants, shrubs and some trees, showing in some cases disastrous results from the severe winter. In many cases it will not be possible to note results on the condition of water lilies as they will not be visible on account of deep water and cannot be examined as other plants can, but there is little danger of any hardy Nymphaea suffering from frost providing there has been water of greater depth than the unusually thick ice that has prevailed the last winter. It is quite possible that some of the European and Asiatic varieties may have been frozen with no ill effects being apparent. They will bear freezing to some slight extent. But no American variety will and as many of our choicest Nymphaeas are hybrids of American and European parentage, it is too risky to run any chances in wintering over. So when planting or constructing ponds see to it that there is a greater depth of water than any unusual thickness of ice that may form in the locality.

In some cases natural ponds or others with sloping banks have suffered through the heaving of the soil by continued freezing and the crumbling away by thawing out on the surface followed by heavy rains before the sub-soil was thawed. All necessary repairs should be pushed to completion, and preparations be made for planting or renewing of old plantations. As soon as stock is found to be growing it will be safe to transplant or thin out where necessary. Plants of such strong growing varieties as Nymphaea chromatella and others of the Marliacea group, also N. Gladstoniana and tuberosa in variety after two or three seasons, require thinning out, otherwise the leaves become much crowded and will push out above the water surface, hiding the flowers from sight. The flowers, too, will be much below normal size and deficient in color. The foliage is also liable to attacks of red spider in hot, dry weather. To obtain large, attractive flowers the plants must not be crowded and where they are grown in tubs or large boxes is will be found necessary to dig up the plants, renew the soil and replant. When doing this work select the strongest crowns, planting three or four in a box four feet square and one foot or fifteen inches deep. Use good, turfy loam and thoroughly rotted cow or barnyard manure, one of the latter to two of the former, and if the soil has been composted several months so much the better.

In planting new ponds for a permanency the bed should be moderately rich but not composed of soil as rich as recommended for tubs or boxes. The depth of water can vary from two to four feet. There is nothing gained by having a depth of four or more feet, but where natural ponds exist of such a depth and it is desirable to plant lilies in them without altering the depth, do not try to plant the lilies there at once. Select the variety for the purpose and plant in large seed or bulb pans in good soil and place these in a convenient spot where the water ranges from one to two feet deep, and when the plants are established they may be turned out of the pans, soil and roots compact and put in deep water. No great skill is needed in planting.

When the plants are ready they may be conveyed to the spot, using a raft, punt or boat, and simply placed in the water. Their own weight will keep them in the desired position and in a very short time the leaves will reach the surface and new roots will anchor the plants firmly in an incredibly short time. The disadvantage of planting in deep water is that the water remains colder much longer than shallow water and the plants are liable to get a check and not start to grow at once, but by starting the plants in the shallow water in pans this is averted and there is no danger of the plants being disturbed as they are held in position by their own weight which is far better than tying bricks or any other weight to the roots to keep them down. I see no earthly use in placing the roots in wire baskets as advocated by our brethren across the ocean fifty years ago and still adhered to. Where it is possible plant the rhizomes firmly in water about two feet deep. In deeper water have established plants in pans as above recommended.

As to varieties, plant as taste or fancy may dictate but in so doing the inexperienced may err in selection of varieties and may be led more by the prices of certain varieties, endeavoring to get the largest number for a limited amount of cash. In natural ponds, where there is ample space, plant in groups of from five to twenty-five strong crowns; these should be three feet apart and the clumps should be some distance apart, depending on the size of the pond. In large ponds groups of the native varieties may be included with European and hybrids, but in smaller ponds avoid any representatives of the tuberosa section as they are too rank in growth and would in a few seasons choke the less rampant growers. If such varieties as Nymphaea tuberosa Richardsonii, N. Gladstoniana, N. tuberosa rosea and N. tuberosa rubra are desired, plant only the one variety in a small pond. These and all such types may be included in a large pond or lake.

In smaller ponds where plants are planted in tubs or boxes omit all of the tuberosa type, selecting European types and hybrids, planting one or three crowns according to the size of the box or tub. The native variety Nymphaea odorata is a universal favorite and a tub or box of it may be included in the collection, also the Cape Cod pink pond lily. But the stronger growing varieties are best planted in the natural pond. I have met persons who disliked any colored water lily, especially a yellow one, but the Florida water lily is yellow and although it does not take kindly to the northern states it is very beautiful where it can be grown and it thrives well in the vicinity of New York City. It should be planted in a pond by itself. In some sections of the country it takes possession of the pond and by its own peculiar mode of growth and reproduction it becomes a pest, though in Florida it is now becoming very scarce and is being smothered out of existence by the obnoxious water hyacinths.

As in other classes of plants there have been changes and improvements in types, forms and colors and the progressive florist must keep abreast of the times or he may soon be considered a back number. Novelties come high sometimes, but when a novelty has received the stamp of approval from horticultural and national societies its popularity is assured and its cost is usually a secondary consideration. I would advise intending planters in making a selection to include the latest novelties. They are a great advance over other varieties and will be standard varieties in the near future. Ten to twenty dollars was a large sum to pay for a water lily root four years ago, but with judicial handling one plant would have increased an hundred fold by this time and there would have been four years' enjoyment besides the large increase in value as such stock still commands a good price. Do not be discouraged from planting because we have not had tropical seasons of late and the large flowering tropical water lilies have not been a success. It has been most suitable for hardy Nymphaeas and they vie with the tropicals for richness of color and they are perpetual, and although the night bloomers have not fared well, the day flowering tender varieties including all blue varieties may be relied on to fill their places when desired. They may not be planted out, however, before the latter end of May or the beginning of June. WM. TRICKER.

PALMS AND FERNS.

Jubaea Spectabilis.

The coquito palm, as this handsome plant is known in its native country, has the distinction of being probably the most southerly of American palms, and is found in a wild state in great abundance in central Chili, where it proves of much value to the native population. Jubaea is a strong growing palm and in Chili often forms a trunk from forty to sixty feet in height, this being surmounted by a fine head of large primate leaves, the foliage bearing some resemblance to that of some of the strong growing Phoenixes. The sap of this palm contains a great deal of sugar, and is therefore collected by the Chilians, boiled down to a thick syrup in much the same manner as our maple syrup, forming a much esteemed article of food known as "miel de palma" or palm honey.

The method of gathering the sap of the coquito is a much more wasteful one than that practiced by our maple sugar gatherers, from the fact that the Chilian first cuts down the palm, then chops off the crown of leaves and the sap begins to flow, continuing for some weeks or months until the trunk is exhausted, provided that a thin slice is cut off the end of the trunk each day in order that the sap may flow more readily. The quantity of sap in one of these trees is very large, it being stated that one may produce ninety gallons before being thoroughly drained out.

The nuts or seeds of the Jubaea are also edible, and after the soft pith has been removed from the trunk the latter is frequently put to use as a water pipe. Our illustration shows a remarkably fine specimen of this palm as it appears before it is old enough to develop a trunk, and is from a photograph of what is perhaps the finest outdoor specimen of Jubaea in this country, the plant in question growing in a garden in Los Angeles, Cal. Such landscape effects as are shown in our picture are only possible under such favorable climatic conditions as prevail in southern California, but are quite sufficient to make us of less favored localities just a trifle envious at times. Jubaea spectabilis is not very largely grown for florists' use, though a decidedly handsome species when large enough to show its character, and the foliage is quite tough and hardy. This palm may be grown under the same conditions as the Kentias, requiring a stiff soil, plenty of moisture and not too high a temperature. During the winter 60° is ample for established plants, and a few degrees lower will do no injury. W. H. TAPLIN.

JUBAEA SPECTABILIS.

Magnolia Manicata.

The illustration herewith shows a Magnolia manicata in bloom. This tree is on the grounds of the executive mansion, near the south entrance from Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, D. C., where, with another of its kind growing near, it was planted about thirty years ago by Alexander Mc Kerichar, at that time the white house gardener, but now superintendent of Glen Wood cemetery, Washington. Magnolia manicata blooms in April, and, though the blossoms soon fall, it is a beautiful sight while in full bloom. The World's Fair.SCHEDULE FOR FLORAL EXHIBITS.

The following tentative schedule for floral exhibits has been issued by the Department of Horticulture of the St. Louis World's Fair, and Chief Taylor hopes to be able to make an authoritative announcement covering all of these days and three or four days in addition:

May 2-7	Carotians.
" 9-14	Pansies.
" 16-21	Tender Roses.
" 23-28	Peonies.
" 30-June 4
June 6-11	Hardy Roses.
" 13-18	Sweet Peas.
" 20-25	Sweet Peas.
" 27-July 2	Cannas { Am. & Euro- pean Varieties
July 1-9	Cut Flowers (Florists')
" 11-16	Cut Flowers (Amatrs')
" 18-23
" 25-30
Aug. 1-6	Gladioli.
" 8-13	Asters.
" 15-20 (S. A. F. week)	General Decorations.
" 22-27	Gladioli.
" 29-Sept. 3	Gladioli.
Sept. 5-10	Tuberoses.
" 12-17	Dahlias.
" 19-24	Dahlias.
" 26-Oct. 1	Aquatics.
Oct. 3-8—Flower show by St. Louis Florists' club
Oct. 10-15
" 17-22	Wild Flower Show.
" 24-29—Natural Decorations by Children.
31-Nov 5.
Nov. 7-12	Pot Chrysanthemums.
" 14-19	Cut "
" 21-23

All exhibits in these shows will be eligible to examination for awards of diplomas and medals. There is no entry charge, and flowers sent with all charges prepaid, addressed to Frederic W. Taylor, Chief, Department of Horticulture, St. Louis World's Fair, will be received and staged by the department without any additional cost to exhibitors. Vases and other facilities will be provided by the department.

The space assigned to the flower exhibits most beautifully located, being on a floor nine feet lower than that on which are all the pomological exhibits. The point of view from all four sides is perfect, and every effort is being made by the management to have these flower shows such great features of the exposition as so entitle them to be considered as leading attractions. This means that newspaper accounts of the exposition will give much space to them and thus secure to exhibitors the very best possible kind of advertising. Full announcements will soon be made by special circulars from the department. The chief of the department invites correspondence and suggestions, particularly with reference as to whether any of the days set should, with due consideration for all the different sections of the country, be changed to advantage. Suggestions are also invited with regard to what may be used for filling in the open dates.

NOTES.

The rhododendrons in front of the German building have been in perfection during the last week. There are twelve specimen plants at least five feet in diameter which were grown by J. R. Seidel, of Laubegast, near Dresden. He is considered one of the most successful growers of this class of plants in Germany, and his exhibit was given the grand prize at the Paris exposition. The plants are well grown and the foliage, despite the long journey, is nearly perfect. When in full bloom they were a mass of white. Among the other decorative plants at the German building are some seventy bay trees from the Imperial gardens of Charlottenburg castle. About one-half are standard trees with heads four to five feet in diameter. The pyramids are from six to twelve feet high and all are in nearly perfect condition.

Work is progressing rapidly on the floral clock which is to be on the steep hillside north of the Palace of Agriculture, at the end of the long avenue which passes in front of the Administration building. The dial is 112 feet in diameter and the minute hand measures seventy-two feet. The ends of the hands are supported by circular tracks. The machinery for the clock is located in a small pavilion at the top of the hill. On one side of this is the bell upon which the hours will be struck; this weighs 5,400 pounds. Upon the other side of the pavilion there is a large hour-glass. The end of the minute hand of the clock will travel six feet per minute. The hands will be moved by means of compressed air carried through a pipe from the pavilion in which the machinery is located.

Thousands of visitors have asked the name of two plants near the Mexican pavilion. They have a slender stalk, perhaps twenty feet high, from the top of which a branch extends at right angles for a distance of about ten feet. Upon this there are thousands of yellowish-white flowers. They are nothing more than century plants which are developing flower stalks, but as these have been bent in the cars they present a very odd appearance. A large number of bananas and cacti are also being planted near the Mexican building.

Professor L. Wittmack, of the Agricultural High School of Berlin, who has been at the exposition for the last two months, left on May 18 for a trip through the Ozark region in Missouri, after which he will go to Phoenix and Tucson, Ariz., and will then make an extended trip through Mexico. Professor Wittmack is the secretary of the Horticultural Society of Prussia, and will be remembered in connection with the Columbian exposition.

The planting of bedding plants has progressed rapidly during the last week. The sunken garden between the palaces of liberal arts and manufactures are nearly planted and a large amount of planting has been done in the Cascade gardens. In the latter thousands of scarlet geraniums and Salvia splendens have been used and cannot fail to be very effective.

The weather has been very favorable for the sodding and seeding of the lawns and excellent results will almost certainly be secured. After exhausting the available supply of sod in the vicinity of St. Louis it was found necessary to go to Indiana and even southern Michigan to complete the work.

William F. Dreer, of Philadelphia, spent several days at the exposition last week on his way home from California, where he spent the winter. He expressed himself as greatly pleased with the exposition, especially from a horticultural standpoint, and while here arranged for a large exhibit.

The tree peonies in the Japanese garden have been greatly admired. There are fifty varieties in colors ranging from white to dark maroon or wine color. The Japanese also have a large collection of herbaceous peonies which will soon be in flower.

An interesting feature of the New York forestry exhibit is a model nursery for evergreens northeast of the Forestry building. It illustrates the method of growing forest seedlings and contains thousands of evergreens from one to four years old.

SHELBYVILLE, KY.—In a large fire here May 11 E. P. Hall's greenhouse plant was damaged $200.

CADILLAC, MICH.—David Kleinhaus and R. A. Mason, of Ithaca, soon will begin building their greenhouses on Cherry and Cobb streets. Four thousand feet of glass, now on its way to Cadillac, will be required.

ALVIN, TEX.—Fine rains have fallen here, two inches in all, which will fill the jasmine stems with moisture. We always get these rains just in time and it helps very much to promote the development of the buds in transit.

THE RETAIL TRADE

A PRETTY arrangement of trumpet daffodils in one of the antique Russian boxes which sold so well at Easter, seen in the Twenty-eighth street window of Thos. Young, Jr., New York, indicates how very becoming this rough wood setting is for daffodil work. The effect is strikingly rich and pleasing.

THE frequent instances of sore and poisoned hands among clerks handling roses continually suggests the more general use of protecting gloves while engaged in this work. Whether the cause of the increase of this trouble be the size and strength of the thorns produced on the big-stemmed modern rose or poison from some substance used as an insecticide or stimulant is not clear, but it is safest to take no chances. Washing the hands in water to which a little carbolic acid or sulpho-naphthol has been added is recommended as a wise precaution after a session with the thorns.

Window Boxes in London.

THE West End florists are now busy filling window boxes. There is always a desire to get this work done as early as possible, and in a backward season it is a little difficult to get the flowering plants forward enough, for all this work has to be done with stock that will make an immediate effect, says a correspondent of the Horticultural Trade Journal. Genistas, I find, are now extensively used. Marguerites of course continue favorites, but the very thick bushy plants are not so much favored as the thinner, fresher, spring potted plants. Mignonette is much in demand. Most of that now being used is from autumn sown which has been stopped, but as soon as the spring sown comes in it is sought after, as it is found to succeed better. Intermediate stocks, especially the crimson, are used extensively, and those who get these in early can clear them out in large quantities.

Some zonal pelargoniums are already being used, scarlet and salmon are the colors most favored. Whites are very little used, as the marguerites provide a better white. Ivy-leaved pelargonium,
