FISHING-RIGHTS IN NEWFOUNDLAND BAYS

Point is Taken Up By Sir W. Robson in Argument at The Hague

The Hague, Aug. 1.—Dealing with the question whether in the renunciations clause of the treaty of 1818 the United States abandoned the right to fish in bays, the mouth of which exceeded six nautical miles, Sir William Robson, on behalf of Great Britain, before the fisheries tribunal, first answered the questions put to him by the Dutch arbitrator, throwing doubt on the idea that either the United States or Great Britain had discriminated between coasts and bays in connection with fishing rights before the treaty of 1818. According to Sir William this distinction had always been made. The United States government, in fact, had been advised by Great Britain of the latter's intention to exclude American fishermen from bays. In the treaty with France in the eighteenth century all bays without distinction of size were considered territorial and authorities in international law were of the same opinion. Therefore, in the treaties of 1763 and 1818 the word "bays" was used in the same geographical sense.

MILL DESTROYED.
Ashbury Park, N. J., Aug. 1.—Fire which started in the dynamo room of a lumber company burned out the $100,000 plant and consumed several hundred feet of the big grand stand in course of construction for the aviation meet to begin here August 19th. The total loss is estimated at $125,000.

CIRCUS IS COMING FOR FALL FAIR ATTRACTION

Barnes' Animals Said to Be Fine Aggregation and Very Clever

The management of the Victoria Fall Fair has secured as an extra attraction for this year the famous Barnes' circus. Speaking of this show the Moose-jaw Morning News says:

"What is your ideal of a circus? Have you not dreamed of seeing one at some time where the performers would be normal human beings, capable of looking and acting as though they were desirous of giving you a money's worth of wholesome amusement and wonderment? Not a weasened bunch of hard-faced charlatans, who look at you as they would a well-filled wallet, showing nothing but a money hunger, and no scruple as to the manner of satisfying it.

Too often the latter are in the majority in a modern circus, and it is refreshing for a newspaper man to give a boost to the ideal performance such as Al. G. Barnes' Wild Animal Circus.

Mr. Barnes himself is a wholesome man to meet, and his whole staff, from Ringmaster Morrow down to the tent-peppers, reflect his style. Once such a spirit pervades a show, even the animals seem to get in line, and show the signs of good human treatment.

Never have such splendid specimens of caged animals been shown in Moose-jaw. There are many lions, tigers, leopards, pumas, bears, sea lions, camels, elephants, zebras, ponies, dogs and monkeys, etc., all of them performing in some stunt or other, either laughable or wonderful. It is safe to say that no sea lions were ever before trained to perform such feats performed by "Dick" who rides around the ring on horse-back, balancing a foot-ball on his nose. To properly give credit for all the acts of Barnes' circus would require a page in this issue, but they were all well worth it.

A ROMAN IDEAL CHRISTIANIZED.

Rev. A. Hall preached at the First Presbyterian church last evening, basing his discourse on Rom. 8:37: "We are more than conquerors." Taking up the current Roman conception of conquest in St. Paul's day, the preacher showed how it had been turned to Christian uses. Roman imperial authority had been established and extended by brute force, but it had proved unenduring, as Gibbon had shown in "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Britons had been given an immensely larger domination of this world, and it was often asked would it also disintegrate and perish. It was just to point out that British rule had not been set up by Roman methods, and if justified to subject peoples, Christian ideals in legislation and dependence upon the God of our fathers went along with wise precautions for defence. Britons would hold their own for generations yet.

Three great conceptions were behind all the phenomena of Christian progress. Christ conquers men by love. Christians conquer themselves by submission to the law of their Master; and Christianity is a record of conquering causes among men. The interests of truth, liberty, education and evangelization had been championed by devout men, and they were among the most triumphant records of history. In conclusion the speaker traced the rise of the British and Foreign Sailors' Society with its world-wide work, and invited the interests of all citizens and all churches in a united effort to make the local branch a success in this city.

CO-OPERATION
CHAPMAN'S IDEA

PORTLAND PUBLICITY EXPERT VISITS CITY

Says Coast Cities Should Unite for Coast's Benefit—Fraises Vancouver Island

"I want to see all the cities of the Pacific coast on both sides of the international boundary forget their petty differences and sink all prejudices in united action for the benefit of the west," said C. C. Chapman, the Portland publicity expert who is well known here for his work in forming the Vancouver Island Development League. Mr. and Mrs. Chapman arrived in Victoria on Saturday afternoon and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McGaffey until yesterday, when they left for Portland.

Interviewed by the Times upon landing here Mr. Chapman said that he had visited Spokane, Tacoma, Seattle, New Westminster and Vancouver on his trip and had preached the gospel of co-operation in the three American cities.

"The idea of co-operation," he said, "arose from the formation of a convention bureau in connection with the Portland Commercial Club, the pioneer publicity organization of the coast. Our slogan is 'All the coast for all the coast all the time.' We realize that invidious comparisons between coast cities must be discouraged and that there should be united action in securing all the conveniences possible for some of the Pacific cities. Instead of fighting for the plum the cities should combine in giving it to the place which appears most entitled to it or makes the biggest and best effort to secure it."

"Does that scheme apply to B. C. cities?" asked the Times reporter.

"I cannot see where it does not," said Mr. Chapman. "British Columbia is part of the great Pacific coast and its cities should have the same chance of securing conveniences as those on the other side. We do not contemplate any actual organization but wish to promote an understanding between cities whereby friction, which has more than once lost big conventions to the coast, will be avoided. There is no pooling of money and no set formula for securing conventions. It is a case of everybody boosting for the coast and helping the lucky city to make good. Already San Francisco, Los Angeles and other cities have fallen into line and I believe it is only a matter of a short time before the whole coast will be enthusiastic over the scheme."

Mr. Chapman quoted from memory figures on some of the conventions which have been held in the larger cities of the United States during the past few years, showing that many thousands of dollars which are brought in by these big gatherings. He pointed out that the Shriners' convention to be held in Chicago in September is conservatively estimated as likely to bring the enormous sum of $3,000,000 at least into the Windy City.

While in New Westminster Mr. Chapman was met by the mayor and the secretary of the board of trade and taken on a trip around the city. In the evening of the same day he was asked to attend an informal conference with these officials and other prominent citizens of the Royal City at which the formation of a Fraser Valley Development League was projected but action was postponed until the matter had been further considered.

Speaking of Victoria and the Vancouver Island Development League, Mr. Chapman said: "I have a message of congratulation for Victorians and the people of Vancouver Island generally on the splendid success which has been obtained by the Development League as shown by the reports at the Albert annual meeting which I followed very closely in the newspapers. The results which have been attained provide proof of the success which attends modern methods of publicity in city building."

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman intend to return at an early date and spend an extended holiday on the island. "You can say for Mrs. Chapman and myself," said the well-known publicity man, "that we like all the coast cities but we simply adore Victoria and, if I could cut the ties which bind me to Portland publicity work, we would come here to reside."

Mr. Chapman's activities are numerous. Besides being secretary of the Oregon Development League he is the manager of the Portland Commercial Club's publicity department and secretary-treasurer of the Pacific Coast Advertising Association.

PANTAGES MUSICAL COMEDY.

With a few more pretty girls added to the chorus this afternoon Lewis and Lake will start their sixth successful week in Victoria by presenting another double-header show with Buffalo Bill, the well-known wild west musical show, and the very funny farce comedy, "Whose Baby Are You." Either of these productions affords sufficient amusement for one entertainment and with each boiled down to the essence and the two placed on one programme the reasonable conclusion is that there will be some show at Pantages this week.

CRIPPEN AND COMPANION ARRESTED ON STEAMER

brandy. As she took it she threw something out of the port-hole and quick as were the officers to jump they did not even see what it was. She held her hands to her head all the time, moaning. When the search began she collapsed and the doctor had to be called. She had recovered by night, however, and ate dinner.

The arrest of Crippen himself was made at nine sharp. Dew was not satisfied with the search of Crippen himself and made another. He found a linen belt concealed next the skin but attached to the shirt with diamond rings, ear-rings and a stick-pin.

The two were registered as John Filo Robinson, merchant, age 31, and John George Robinson, 14, student. They were supposed to be on their way to Detroit.

Dew would not make a statement, but gave it to be understood that he did not think that the girl had been accomplice of the murderer, and the passengers say the same. The man was nervous and evidently had something on his mind, but the girl was gay and happy, except for spells of depression. The couple would never have been noticed if the girl had not been dressed as a boy. She is small but well built, and the boy's dress did not conceal the outlines of the woman. All the officers and many of the passengers knew that she was a woman, and with the papers of the Crippen case Third Officer Mowat connected the two and spoke of it to the captain. He gathered all the papers and the three officers went carefully into the case and decided that they were the two wanted.

Kendall was asked what he would do with the reward. "The what?" he asked. "The reward."

"I did not know that there was one."

The great fear shown by Crippen as they approached Father Point was that his companion would be discovered.

Land From Steamer.

(Times Local Wire.)

Quebec, Aug. 1.—Manacled and closely guarded, Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, accused of the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore Crippen, in their London home, was brought ashore today and taken to the Quebec police station. Miss Ethel Claire Leneve, his stenographer, charged as accessory to the alleged murder, also was taken off the liner Montrose and placed in a cell in the women's prison.

Thousands of spectators taken by the police, the widespread publicity given the details of the murder and the chase after Crippen and his companion, caused thousands of persons to assemble on the water front for a glimpse of the prisoners and the men responsible for their capture.

The vessel docked at 1 a. m., but the suspects did not come ashore until daylight. A great crowd had gathered at an early hour. A total of fifty police surrounded the wharves and kept a portion of the street clear between the entry way of the pier and automobiles that later carried the prisoners and their captors to jail.

The credit for the capture is given Captain Kendall and his chief officers, who are praised for having handled the case so astutely that neither Dr. Crippen nor Miss Leneve believed themselves suspected until the heavy hand of Inspector Dew fell on Crippen's shoulder and Chief McCarthy, of the Quebec police department, placed the frail young stenographer under arrest.

Girl Is Nervous Wreck.

Miss Leneve today became the central figure in the case that Scotland Yard is building against Dr. H. H. Crippen. The young woman is a pitiful nervous wreck. Every effort is being made by the police to persuade her to give evidence that might tend to incriminate the man.

Crippen, calm and talkative during the river journey from Father Point to Quebec with his captors, became sullen and silent after the cell-door shut upon him.

The girl, whose hands were bound, moaned and rolled on the floor when placed in her cell. She had not slept during the night following the arrest aboard the Montrose. She was a pitiable sight as she came ashore, and with difficulty the police persuaded her to land while thousands who had gathered on the water front to see the couple stood waiting.

Miss Leneve refused to enter a waiting automobile, and after some delay she was taken in a cab to the cell.

The ship's officers declare that the girl was astounded when she learned that she and her companion were accused of murder. Entirely forgetting that she was playing the part of a "boy," Miss Leneve fainted when Chief McCarthy, of the Quebec police department, arrested her.

Faints in Cab.

When searched by a stewardess she was wearing a canvas harness to conceal her figure, besides which she wore a cap, shirt, loose fitting trousers and a cap. Her hair had been cut short and parted in the middle. Everyone aboard the Montrose knew that the "boy" was a woman, but the passengers did not suspect the identity either of Dr. Crippen or of Miss Leneve, although they discussed the case frequently.

The mannerisms of the "boy" convinced everyone aboard that "he" was a girl. After the arrest Miss Leneve was given a loose gown by the stewardess. She was led, sobbing and stumbling, down the same plank and when she reached the cab that took her to prison she fainted.

Inspector Dew today expressed the belief that the woman did not participate in the alleged murder at the Crippen home in London. According to British law, the suspects may not be questioned, except perfunctorily, regarding the crime of which they are accused. They are warned that anything they may say will be used against them. This does not prevent Miss Leneve from turning King's evidence, but she must do so of her own free will and only upon slightest persuasion.

Hope Girl Will Aid Police.

That she was amazed that Crippen and herself were charged with murder is one of the things upon which the police rely in their desire to have her turn against Crippen. They believe that the American kept his young companion in ignorance of the charges against them, and the detectives hope that the shock of the revelation will unseat the girl's lips and cause her to reveal circumstances that will help unravel the case.

No revolver was found on Crippen. After Miss Leneve had revived from her swoon in the stateroom of the Montrose, the girl rushed to a port hole and threw something into the river. It is believed that the object was Crippen's revolver.

Urged to Tell Truth.

London, Aug. 1.—The mother of Miss Ethel Claire Leneve today cabled her daughter, who is held at Quebec with Dr. H. H. Crippen, to tell the police all she may know concerning the case.

"I have been fearing that Crippen might injure my daughter," said Miss Leneve's mother today. "I am relieved that he is in custody. We are angry that our child has deceived us, but we do not think she knew of the horrible crime of which Crippen is suspected. We believe that Dr. Crippen told her something was wrong with his business of which she might be suspected of complicity."

Inspector Dew and his prisoners are expected here next Thursday. Arrangements for a speedy trial are under way. It is reported that the Scotland Yard officials have secured now evidence that the body found in the cellar of No. 29 Hilldrop Crescent, is that of Mrs. Crippen.

ENGINEER TO HAVE CONTROL

that he hoped his successor would be given a larger jurisdiction over his employees. At Mr. Topp's suggestion a by-law was prepared by the city solicitor, and it is, this by-law, with some slight amendments, which will be introduced this evening.

Numerous local improvement works will be advanced this evening. The by-law authorizing the paving of Fort street, between Douglas and Cook streets, and that to borrow the necessary money to permit of the settlement of claims of owners from whom will be expropriated the land required to widen that thoroughfare will be introduced. The amount of the compensation to be paid has been estimated at $8,000. The by-law which provides for the raising of the necessary funds to install the cluster light system on the street will also be put through its various stages.

Other local improvement works for which by-laws will be introduced are for the following streets: View street, between Douglas and Blanchard streets; Camosun streets, between Pandora avenue and Grant street; Ferris road, between Fort street and Gladstone avenue; Mackenzie street, between Linden avenue and Moss street.

The city engineer will at an early date—possibly this evening, submit to the council a report on the cost of laying permanent crossings on the principal streets where the crossings now in use are inadequate during the wet weather. At many points there are practically no crossings, and pedestrians have to wade through mud during the winter, while in the past the city has been put to considerable expense in keeping crossings clean, which work was practically wasted.

PRIVILEGES AND DUTIES OF THE BRITISH QUEEN

Dignities Enjoyed by Dowager Queen Alexandra May Be Accorded Queen Mary

Queen Mary of England has just entered her forty-fourth year, and although the shadows of death still linger around the throne, it is neither unbecoming nor unimportant to tender a hearty tribute of respectful goodwill to the lady who has just assumed the supreme place among the subjects who own the sway of her sovereign lord. The position occupied by the wife of any great official is like the British constitution itself—always somewhat undefined, somewhat a matter of accident and incident; and to achieve complete success in it the occupant requires a delicate perception of how far her influence may be patent, how to "give and take," when to advance and when to withdraw. In a word, she must, by the exercise of supreme tact, supply all that might otherwise be lacking in the tenure of her husband's office.

The great difficulties and the greater possibilities inherent in the position of the wife of any representative of the government are, of course, raised to their supreme level when the throne itself is the seat of office and when the great official is no less than the sovereign himself.

Since the accession of the House of Hanover three queens consort in the pre-Victorian era have stamped themselves on the pages of English history, for it is better to draw the veil of oblivion over the sorrows of Sophia Dorothea and the vagaries of the unhappy Princess of Brunswick, Caroline the illustrious (the wife of George II.) not only stemmed the tide of disaster which was flowing steadily and suddenly against what was then regarded as a foreign dynasty, but secured the first marks of court popularity which had been evident since the Revolution.

Queen Charlotte (consort of George III.), whose moral worth was at once her great merit and her chief limitation, introduced into the English court that standard of purity and excellence which Queen Victoria raised to its supreme eminence, while the gentle womanliness and rare unselfishness of Queen Adelaide invested the short years of the reign of William IV. with a dignity which had been a more able but less amiable person might have been sadly wanting.

To Queen Alexandra was granted in the case of any previous Queen consort. A royal standard floating over Buckingham Palace and a full guard mounted at Whitehall, denoted her presence in the capital even when the sovereign was absent; the Garter honours accorded to her were of a unique character; the method of addressing her was identical with that employed towards the sovereign regnant—in a word, her whole exterior position approached very nearly to that of joint monarch. How grateful these honors were to a people who idolized her and how entirely the august lady justified them is a matter of history. It may be said of her that, with all her vast opportunities for good and ill, while no scheme for the happiness of the English people escaped her close attention, on no occasion, great or small, did she ever attempt to influence in the faintest degree, the trend of public affairs or the current of political life.

If it shall please King George to invest Queen Mary with the same special dignities that the Queen Mother has so richly and wisely enjoyed, the nation will indeed be well pleased, and well satisfied, moreover, that no situation is too exalted, no honor too special to be worthily filled and rightly enjoyed by a Princess whose life for forty-three years has been known and appreciated by the British public.

It cannot escape the notice of the most superficial observer how, during the last days of anxiety and sorrow, Queen Mary has willingly relegated to the august widow the place of honor, and has subordinated her own supreme position to that which she considers to be the duty of supreme mourning. It is a mere truism that they know best to rule who have duly learned to serve, and Queen Mary's participation in the glories of King George's throne will be the more glorious and the more successful because she has passed through four successive grades of subordinate princely rank, in her advance to the steps of the throne.

Within the last fortnight enough to fill many volumes has been written to record Queen Mary's birth and training, to illustrate her personality, to define her likes and dislikes, and prognosticate her future. No Queen consort has ever taken up her duties better equipped by circumstances and character. Her life, now approaching its meridian, has not been favored by any constant fair-weather breeze. Trouble and sorrow, no less than joy and prosperity, have affected her, and her evident and constant sympathy with those whose lot is trouble and sorrow is the more real. Duty is the simple motto which has been evidently burned into her soul, and to her the supreme duty of woman is to contribute in the largest possible measure to the sum of human happiness.

If each man in his measure would do a brother's part To bring a ray of sunshine Into a brother's heart.

This was the verse taught to Queen Mary in her early childhood. Her efforts in the direction it indicates have been neither few nor formal. The increased happiness of children—and of grown men and women (in whatever phase of life) or whatever corner of Empire—has been the object she has set up for herself, and of which she has never for a moment lost sight. Through her girlhood and early womanhood she has worked steadily, unostentatiously, but generously and ungrudgingly to better the lives and stimulate the happiness of the poor, the sad, the suffering, and the helpless. She has been actuated less by sentiment than by personal knowledge of human needs and human suffering. Countless thousands can testify to her gracious presence and ever helping hand, and the labor of love which she has so gladly undertaken will be witnessed anew, we may hope, by successive generations in years to come.—London Express.

Itching Scalp Ceases After One Application

D. E. Campbell is Willing to Guarantee Parisian Sage Because He Knows It Gives Satisfaction to All Who Use it.

Most druggists know that there is no hair preparation that gives so much satisfaction as Parisian Sage which is now on sale all over Canada.

The reasons are many.
A large, generous bottle for 50 cents.
The only hair tonic that is sure to kill the dandruff germs.
A rigid guarantee to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.
Keeps the scalp cool in summer and free from unpleasant odors.
Will make any woman's hair be wondrously charming in one week.
Grows hair and makes it soft, brilliant and luxuriant.
And here's more proof:
"Some fourteen years ago I had typhoid fever. It caused my hair to nearly all fall out. I have since used and tried several hair tonics and renewers, but nothing ever made my hair grow in until I tried a bottle of Parisian Sage. The use of Parisian Sage cooled and cleansed the scalp, removed all the dandruff, and left my hair silky and glossy in appearance, besides making the new hair grow in. To-day I have an abundance of hair, hardly any gray hairs, and no dandruff.
Is it any wonder that I praise Parisian Sage?"—Mrs. Ann E. Moody, 1908 Bainbridge St., Manchester, Va., April 2, '09.
Leading druggists everywhere sell Parisian Sage. D. E. Campbell sells it in Victoria for 30 cents, on the money-back plan. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package. Mail orders filled by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., sole Canadian makers.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

"Yes, but look out that you don't get complacent." That came to me the other day when I was claiming praise for a bit of successful work.

Of course I hurt quite terribly for a moment—but only as the caustic hurts that smarters cruelly for a few moments but cleanses the poison and starts the healing process.

So I pass it along to 'any' who may need it.

Be as jubilant and thankful as you please for every bit of success that comes your way, but "look out that you don't get complacent."

Don't dwell on your successes. Thank God for the opportunity and the brains and the ability to have used the opportunity rightly and then start looking for more opportunities and cultivating more brains and ability.

Don't get complacent. You have passed a rod or two beyond some of your competitors, but look, what are those tiny dots way, way down the road to success and attainment? Why, those are men who have passed so far beyond you that if your life were to last a thousand years you could hardly hope to overtake them.

Don't get complacent. If you think you are in danger of it, try to meet or read of or hear about some of the really great people. That's the best antidote for the disease of complacency.

Someone has well said that prosperity spoils many more men than failure.

In other words, total to success and

The Evening Chit-Chat

FOR A TRIP ABROAD

Few garments, chosen with discrimination, will serve a woman during a European tour lasting throughout the summer.

Among the garments selected must be a cloth skirt and coat, with separate waists for wear aboard ship, and when sightseeing. A waist of India silk the same color as the suit is more economical than wash houses, and may be replaced in any large city when it wears out. A "tailor" hat will look smart and give excellent wear.

For use on board the steamer another suit is required, and it should be an old one. Nothing more quickly makes a suit look old than the hard wear it has on a vessel.

The same suit will do for use in courts on shore later, and it should be a drussy frock, should be taken for evening dinner, or if one goes to any sale festival. There is no need of appearing unlike others even though travelling on a limited sum of money.

These frocks are enough for an ordinary continental tour, although naturally the list may be elaborated endlessly.

CANADIAN ROCKIES.

We have in Canada one of the grandest mountain ranges on the face of the earth; one of which we may feel tremendously proud when we hear it spoken of; one replete with the most varied and attractive gems of alpine scenery. In these mystic regions wide snow-fields of dazzling whiteness undulate through miles of space; black cloud shadows chase one another across the shining surface; and ribs of rock stand out sharp like the frame of a mighty skeleton. Here ice-veins drain lakes of snow up in the clouds and tumbled in a wild confusion of seracs over rocky beds walled in by mountain sides; waterfalls leap down rock precipices; cascades thunder from the heights; rock falls out wide gashes in the virgin forest; shining, jewel-like lakes of exquisite shades of blue and green reflect their surroundings so perfectly that it is difficult to know where land ends and water begins. In the primeval forests of mighty conifers there are spreading boughs, festooned with beads of moss, and the foliage is so dense that it creates a dim religious shade illuminated only by the slants of sunlight that find a way through the openings. These forests are filled with wonderful things; prickly shrubs, six feet high, that wound the flesh with sharp spines; rare flowering plants that delight the eye with beautiful blossoms; and bushes loaded with luscious huckleberries and full ripe raspberries. In sequestered nooks there are beds of rare orchids and other handsome flowers. Half-hidden by the foliage, great blocks of rock, as big as houses, have fallen from the surrounding heights; their sides are scored with age and covered with lichens, and on their crevices are colonies of baby spruce trees that have settled there and thrive on the moss-grown surface.—Arthur O. Wheeler, President of the Canadian Alpine Club, in the Canadian Magazine for August.

TRADE OPENINGS EXIST IN CHINA

COMMISSIONER'S REPORT NOW MADE PUBLIC

Flour Exporters of the Dominion Will Find a Rapidly-Expanding Market

A recent report from John B. Jackson, Canadian trade commissioner in China, deals with opportunities for Canadian business firms in that great country. He says: The imports of flour into Hongkong from United States for March 1910, was 24,285 barrels, and for the nine months ending March 31st, 1910, 629,435 barrels. Southern China, for which Hongkong is the distributing point, consumes a large amount of foreign flour. There are greater possibilities for Canadian flour exporters there than at Shanghai, or in northern or middle China. The reason for this is obvious, because the Chinese flour mills are all situated either in Shanghai or north of this port. In addition to this the wheat growing districts in China are situated, to a large extent, north of the Yangtze. In the southern provinces, having Canton as a centre, very little wheat, if any, is grown, and flour must be either imported from Shanghai, Hankow, etc., or from foreign countries. The same facts obtain in French Indo-China and Siam which are also supplied from Hongkong. Owing to the very high price for rice at the present time, and to the added fact that new rice will not be on the market till October, there should be an opportunity for Canadian exporters, especially as the present wheat crop is far below the average. The price of rice in Shanghai in 1908, was $1.40 mex. per picul (133 1-3 lbs.) whilst at the present time the average price is $1.50. In the interior provinces the price in 1908 was $2.50 mex. per picul, and at the present time from $1.10 to $1.20 mex. or from $7.20 to $7.50 gold for 200 pounds. Harvesting in China is now in full progress, and a few days more if the good weather holds will suffice for the ingathering of China's wheat harvest. Rice is the crop of greatest importance here, then cotton, though wheat is a crop of great importance. At the present juncture every bushel means an additional preventive against distress and disturbance. The spring weather was unpropitious, being cold and wet, and as an unusual summer heat (29 degrees in the shade) has developed quite suddenly, it is feared that the ripening process has been rather rapid. Hence it is not considered that the present crop will be at all an average one. The yield per acre is never large, not more than one-half an average crop in Canada. The shortness of the ear is very marked, possibly caused by the shortness of the real period of growth, and the intense heat during the latter part. There is no selection of the seed, and no farming or manufacturing of the fields as in Canada, otherwise the fertile plains of Kiangsu should give a better return. The Chinese farmer might also obtain greater results if he used up-to-date agricultural implements. His ancient plough only tickles the surface and no fresh soil is brought up. The modern plough would cost a great deal more, and more power would be necessary and these are insurmountable difficulties at present. The farmers are apathetic, but the inauguration of agricultural shows and competitions, which are about to be introduced, would make the Chinese farmers better and more intelligent agriculturists. A plentiful food supply just now will save China much trouble. The Chinese farmer has the advantage of the Canadian farmer in that each season he has at least two crops and a possible third, instead of one. Wheat is sown in February and reaped in the end of May. The stubble is then scratched up and cotton is planted which matures in October. The ground is then planted with a green crop, so that in this way he gets two important crops, wheat and cotton, each year from the same ground. In 1907 China, flour imported from foreign countries amounted to 4,414,383 piculs at 12,984,546 lbs. tael, and 1908, 1,886,177 piculs at 7,455,082 lbs. tael. A picul is 132 1-3 pounds, and a Halkwan Tael in 1907 was 79 cents, gold, and in 1908, 65 cents gold. The following imperial decree was issued in Peking on May 24th, inst.: During last year the board of finance memorized on the effect that for the welfare of the nation a sound currency system was essential, and that it was important that measures should be taken in order to secure such a system for our empire, and we therefore ordered the government council to examine the measures proposed and report upon them, and to this end was established a special bureau for the study of the necessary measures. Full reports on this subject have now been submitted to us by the board concerned, dealing with the two questions of the establishment of a new currency and the gradual extinction of the old currency, and having perused the proposed measures with all care, we hereby declare our assent as follows: viz: that the standard of China's coinage henceforth shall be called the "yuan," a coin of silver of the weight of kuping mace seven candarins two; that there shall be minted subsidiary coins in eight denominations, namely, fifty cents, twenty-five cents, ten cents, five cents, two cents, one cent, five cash, one cash; of these eight denominations of subsidiary coin the fifty cents, the twenty-five cents, and the ten cents shall be of silver, the five cents of nickel, and the two cents, one cent, five cash and one cash of copper. The yuan (dollar), ten cents, one cent and one cash shall bear decimal relations to each other and their values shall remain fixed in regard to each other, and no attempt to change their relative values shall be permitted. We hereby command the board of finance to authorize the mint to proceed at once with the minting of the new coins, in their different denominaconsists of three separate parts — a steam turbine, a dynamo for generating electricity, and electric motors for the actual driving. The boiler is fixed at one end of the engine, which is a very long one; the generator is situated in the centre, and consists of a Zoelly steam turbine working at 3,000 revolutions per minute directly coupled to the dynamo, which supplies the electric current to four motors; these motors give a direct drive to four sets of heavy driving wheels. The nominal power of the locomotive is one thousand horse, and considerable economy in fuel is anticipated. All the advantages of an electric engine are obtained without recourse to external wires, and it can therefore travel over any lines. The exhaust steam is also condensed, so that a very long run could be made. The current of air which passes through the cooler for the condensed steam is driven by a fan to the furnace of the boiler, which is thus under forced draught. Extraordinary ingenuity has, in fact, been displayed in every possible feature to increase the efficiency of the engine. The new locomotive is now having the finishing touches applied preparatory to being exhaustively tested at pulling heavy express trains. THE KING'S COINER. Man Who Is to Design New Coinage Is an Australian. Bertram Mackennal, who has been selected by King George as the designer of the new coinage, is an Australian by birth and the son of a sculptor, says M. A. P. From his earliest years Mr. Mackennal determined to devote himself to art which his father followed, but his path to success lay by way of a severe and arduous study of the art of sculpture. In Paris he had a terrible struggle for actual existence, and endured such trials and privations as would have quenched the spirit and perhaps killed the art, in a weaker man. But Mr. Mackennal happily possesses an indomitable courage and a spirit upon which the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune took but little effect. Circumstances, which, in the hands of his greatest work, was exhibited in the Paris Salon and it practically made his name. He came to London some years later, and has gone steadily forward ever since. Last year he was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy. Mr. Mackennal lives in a quiet old world house at Marlborough Hill, a remarkable feature of which is a courtyard that divides the house into two parts; there are three studios attached to the house, one of which Mr. Mackennal is certain to use in the future. He is a man of great energy and industry, and has a remarkable feature of a marked degree, her father's artistic abilities. A NEW LOCOMOTIVE. FORTY YEARS ENDS TIMBER

WHAT WILL HAPPEN IF CARE IS NOT TAKEN

Canada is Last Resort of Timber-Consuming Countries Now Bare

For years the savants of all nations have been foretelling the approaching extinction of the world's forest reserves, but with one or two exceptions little apparent effect has been produced on the policy of governments respecting afforestation, says a correspondent in the London Times.

At the first glance the areas under timber appear so enormous that, as in the case of the predicted coal famine, a certain amount of scepticism has been bred as to the grounds for those doleful prophecies; while the heavy initial expense of afforestation reform also stood in the way of energetic action. The immensity of the subject makes it exceedingly difficult to obtain anything like exact statistics, but such rough figures as are available make it abundantly clear that those unappreciated predictions rest, at any rate, on some basis of fact.

The most important commercial timbers of the world are obtained from the temperate forests which are to be found mostly in the north of Europe and in North America. The great bulk of the imports of all large timber-consuming countries consists of those woods, with the result that the available sources of supply are being steadily narrowed.

There may now be said to be only six countries in a position to supply unlimited quantities of merchantable timber—viz., Russia (including Finland), Austria-Hungary, Norway and Sweden in Europe, and Canada and the United States in America.

Canada, World's Great Reserve.

Of these the reserves in the United States, Russia proper, and Austria-Hungary are now seriously threatened by the rapid growth of their own populations consequent on the natural increase of the population, while in Norway the reaping of the timber crop has been so wasteful as to bring exhaustion within measurable distance. The resources of Finland are still large, as are also those of Sweden; while Canada now represents the world's great reserve.

As already indicated, the European countries with a large surplus available for export are Austria-Hungary (with which may be coupled Bosnia and Herzegovina), Russia (including Finland), Sweden and Norway. From all of these countries, with the exception of Austria-Hungary, Britain imports largely of timber for constructional purposes, and our interests in the depletion of their forest reserves is no more academic one.

By far and away the largest forest reserve in Europe is now existing in Russia and Finland, which have between them over 500,000,000 acres under timber. Austria-Hungary comes next, but a long way behind, with 50,000,000 acres, Sweden following with 48,000,000 acres, Germany with 34,000,000 acres, France with 22,000,000 acres, Norway with 17,000,000 acres, and Italy and Bulgaria each with 10,000,000 acres. Those represent widely varying percentages of area under forest, ranging from 44 per cent. in the case of Sweden and 40 per cent. in the case of Russia to 14 per cent. in Italy. But even the least of those figures is large when compared with Britain's very modest 4 per cent.

State Ownership of Forests.

The proportions of area under state ownership also afford an interesting comparison, being as high as 84 per cent. in the case of Spain, and as low as 7 per cent. in Austria; the figures for the other principal countries being as follows: Russia, 51 per cent.; Bosnia and Herzegovina, 70 per cent.; Germany, 33 per cent.; Sweden, 27 per cent.; Hungary, 18 per cent.; and Norway and France each 12 per cent. With the four exceptions named, all the European countries are larger or smaller importers, particularly of light pines and firs, of which over 90 per cent. of Great Britain's imports consist.

At one time Germany was a large exporter, but during the last 30 years or so its position has been reversed, and it now imports 25 per cent. of its supplies, notwithstanding a huge increase in the domestic production; Austria-Hungary and Norway and Sweden have borne the brunt of the European demand for the last 40 years and continue to do so; but with the exception of the first named countries it is difficult to see how they can do so for many more years.

In Russia, particularly, Siberia and Finland, there are still, however, large virgin forests, but at present they may be regarded as without the pale of practical politics in view of their inaccessibility, and it is estimated that the value of timber will have advanced by at least 200 per cent. before it will pay to cut them down.

Value of British Imports.

Our own point of view is, of course, the most important for us, and looking at the problem in that way derives it of some of its seriousness. Last year the total value of the timber imported was $23,231,000 ($11,255,000). About a quarter of this was represented by hewn wood, viz., $5,733,000 of which $2,928,000 was in respect of pit props and wood, leaving $2,805,000 as the value of the hewn fir, oak, and teak. Wood, sawn or split, planed or dressed, accounted for $15,469,000, furniture woods, hardwoods, and veneers for $1,792,000, and staves for $284,000. Leaving out of account the pit props, furniture wood and staves, it is found that the total value of the shipments from Russia was $7,228,000, from Sweden $2,578,000, and from Norway $1,286,000, while Canada was drawn upon to the extent of $4,304,000, and the United States for $2,602,000 worth. When against those figures is placed the $5,000,000 or $5,000,000 at which the British domestic production of timber is valued, the extent of our dependence upon foreign supplies will be realized. Those who hold that the bulk of our requirements, notwithstanding the alleged superiority in quality of foreign timbers, could be grown at home state that those needs could be fully met from a part only of the 20 odd million acres of land now lying waste and suitable for planting.

Supplies in the United States.

The eyes of the world are now directed to North America in their search for future timber supplies. The area of land under forest in the United States is prodigious. The total amounts roughly to 700,000,000 acres, of which nearly 150,000,000 acres are under state ownership or control. Estimates naturally vary widely as to the actual reserves of merchantable timber; the government census of 1900 putting the stand at 1,290,000,000 feet. This latter figure was substantially corroborated by the American Lumberman in 1905; but a conservative estimate by a well-informed correspondent, which appeared in the Times at the close of 1908, put it at 1,500,000,000 feet.

Though it is almost impossible for the lay mind to realize what these figures mean, attempts have been made to place a value on the timber, the figure which is generally accepted by competent authorities being roughly $4,000,000,000 (twenty billions of dollars).

It might at first glance be concluded that such figures represent a practically inexhaustible reserve, but the statistics of consumption, which are naturally more precise, are quite as impressive, and speedily dissipate anything akin to complacency as to the future.

Tremendous Increase in Demand.

The present lumber cut amounts to 55,000,000 feet, and is increasing at a truly remarkable pace. The rapid growth of the population would, of course, prepare one for an increase in the timber consumption year by year, but the actual rate of increase has been very much in excess of what might reasonably be looked for on that basis. Between 1880 and 1909 the growth of the population amounted to 25 per cent., but in the same period the output of domestic timber increased by 94 per cent. The output in the first-mentioned year was 15,000,000,000 board feet, and since that rate the quantity put through the mills of her contiguous to convenient waterways, such as the St. Lawrence and its tributaries, is being rapidly cleared, and obviously the cost of transport will increase very appreciably as it becomes necessary to go further inland and northward for the supplies.

It must not be assumed that the timber used by man represents the whole of the consumption. The destruction through forest fires and wind storms is incalculable. Little can be done to mitigate the effects of the latter, but the former can be combated with more prospect of success. The steps taken in this direction so far are totally inadequate, but there is ground for hoping that in the next few years more satisfactory progress will be made both as regards the preservation of the remaining forests and the replanting of the depleted areas.

Position in Canada.

Turning to Canada as apparently the last resource of timber importing countries, it must be confessed that even here the generally accepted figures are not too reassuring. Canada's stand of merchantable timber is put at a considerably lower figure than that of the United States, being in fact, rather less than half. It is not unlikely, however, that all hitherto accepted estimates will prove to be under rather than above the mark. The forests in British Columbia are very extensive, the stand being estimated at between 150,000,000,000 and 200,000,000,000 feet. Canada's total forest area has been placed at 1,250,000 square miles, or 25 per cent. of the total area.

There will be ample reserves in Canada to draw on for many years to come, as there is not the same enormous domestic consumption in that country as in the United States, but this may not operate very effectively in the direction of checking the upward tendency of values, as already the dim-

ORCHARD BETTER THAN WHEAT FARM

More Money From Five Acres Here Than From Quarter Section on Prairies

Some time ago a number of hard-headed, straight-business and -no-sentiment North Dakota farmers were gathered together in a special car making the trip through the Yakima country in Washington, and by the way of diversion they began to compare fruit growing with wheat farming. They had just returned from a trip through some large orchards, but still many of them were not satisfied that a living for a family could be made on five acres of land. In fact, they were somewhat prejudiced against the fruit proposition.

Taking out their pencils they began to figure for themselves, and the editor of the Washington Fruit Grower agreed to act as referee. They platted five acres of fruit land against a quarter section of wheat land. After considerable figuring they agreed that it would mean an investment of $6,350 to start in wheat farming against $5,375 to start an orchard. The cost of the wheat land was placed at $31.25 an acre, against $1,000 an acre for the fruit land. They also agreed that it would cost an additional $1,550 to buy the necessary implements for wheat growing, against an additional $375 for such implements as are needed on a fruit ranch.

The wheat production was estimated at 20 bushels per acre, selling for $1 a bushel, making a gross income of $2,000. They admitted the apple orchard, which was an old one, would produce 1,400 boxes of fruit per acre, or twenty boxes to each tree, and counting seventy trees to the acre. They put the price of the apples at eighty cents per box, a total of $5,600 from the five acres. According to their own figures, estimating conservatively in all cases, there was a net balance in favor of the apple orchard amounting to $2,400.

A number of old Washington fruit growers are coming up to British Columbia, and they claim that the same success is possible in the northern territory as farther south. To the outsider who is not acquainted with far western conditions, these results appear incredible, but in a recent article, Prof. Van Deman, of Washington, D. C., throws a good deal of light on the situation. The whole article is much too long to quote, but in part he says: "One of the most important features in commercial apple growing is to produce fruit that is attractive in appearance. The average customer buys largely with his eyes and does not give the attention to quality that is deserved. There should be an honest and persistent attempt upon the part of the grower to give both good quality and good looks. Fortunately there are varieties that combine these two prime factors. And this brings us to one of the most vigorously contested points in our apple culture—the comparison between eastern and western communities and the character of the fruit.

"The conditions of climate are so different that there is no wonder that comparisons are drawn and that there is room for it. Taking the Rocky Mountains as the dividing line, there are two great regions that are as diverse in their conditions as they are separated geographically. Apple growing is very recent on the Pacific side, compared with that of the eastern states. Orchards have grown to old age and died before the apple industry was known on the Pacific slope. The whole business depends on the fickleness of the seasons in all the territory from the mountains eastward, except in a few rare cases, but to the westward the irrigation almost eliminates the question of climatic conditions. In a few sections of the far west there is rainfall sufficient for producing apples, but about all that are grown there are the direct result of irrigation. And they have made a mark in the apple world not soon to be forgotten. Western apples have really set the standard, and the question with the eastern growers is—how are they to meet it in the markets of the world. The beauty of the apples of the west is famous. This is accounted for by the clear and dry air, and the long days of sunshine that are common there. It is not generally understood that the summer days of Oregon, Washington and British Columbia are longer by several hours than those of Virginia and New York, and that the development of the plant growth, which depends on the sunshine, is correspondingly greater in a given time. Those who have never seen these apples can have but a faint idea of their vigorous and often dainty coloring."

TWO NEGROES LYNCHED.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 1.—A special from Boniface, Florida, says: "After having confessed to the murder of Besie Morrison, a 12-year-old daughter of Mrs. Mary Morrison, near Daddy, in the northwestern part of Holmes county, two negroes were taken from the officers and lynched by a mob."

THE ORIGIN OF BOXING.

In the Old Country boxing, as we now know it, was only introduced in the earlier part of the eighteenth century—its first practitioner being John Broughton, who kept a booth for the exhibition of the art in Tottenham Court road, and rules were drawn up August 10, 1743. The vogue was due to the decline of sword combat exhibitions in the reign of George I. Broughton himself was the first who stood in the position of champion—a distinction which he held for eighteen years, but eventually he was knocked out by a butcher named Slack.

Broughton was a great pet of another "butcher"—the Duke of Cumberland to wit, who took the pugilist with him to Berlin, when he declared himself ready to take on the entire regiment of Grenadier Guards there "if he were only allowed a breakfast between each two battles."—London Daily Chronicle.

—The most of the Oak Bay taxes were paid on Saturday, but the ratepayers of the municipality have to-day in which to make good in order to secure the one-sixth rebate. It is probable that when 5 o'clock comes there will be hardly any taxes unpaid.
