"India is learning the secret of our own self-reliance, and the day is approaching when she will insist upon stepping ut alone. This will only India should be permitted to do for herself everything of wunch she is capable. We should encourage her growth, not check it.' -"Daily News," Oct. 20, 1905. THE ROYAL VISIT TO INDIA.

The departure yesterday of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales on their Indian tour attracted great attention, and there was a large assembly of in terested spectators in and near Victoria Station to give them a good send-off. The King and the Queen were on the platform as we as many members of the Royal Family; the households, too, of His Majesty and of the the Secretary of State for India, with Mrs. Brodrick, and the important officials of the India Office. It was noticeable that up to train the King-Emperor was engaged in ear nest conversation with the Prince. One could wish that His Majesty had been able such valuable work since his accession v the throne for the cause of progress and for the promotion of a good understanding bet ween peoples and communities who were constantly on the edge of a quarrel that he would certainly have done his utmost to establish good relations in India and smooth over sore places. But in his son he has a good representative, and the Prince will, no doubt, be the bearer of a sympathetic message from the Sovereign. Their Royal Highnesses have been entertained to luncheon at the India Office, and special luncheon and dinner parties have been given at Buckingham Palace in their honour. The Speech of the new Lieutenant-Governor of Eastern Bengal and Assam and the demonstrations of Monday last which took place in Calcutta and throughout the Province afford to onlookers a remarkable contrast, and October 16, 1905, will lecome memorable in the history of the British connec tion with India.
