POETRY.

The Spirits' Call.

BY MARY PERCIVAL.

From the prairie, from the desert,
From the world of waters wide,
From the forest in its grandeur,
From the rocky mountain's side,
From the cloud, where dark and lowering
The thunder loves to rest,
From the black abodes of darkness;
From the mansions of the blest:
Less than spirit, more than mortal,
Now subdued by earthly thrall,
We, who once were kindred spirits,
Hasten to thee at thy call.

As a child, so proud and wayward,
In thy girlhood prone to strife,
Loving, hating without reason—
Such has been thy woman's life.
Thus the world thee hardly judges;
So judging, men condemn:
Can they read thy inmost feelings?
Thou art not one of them
Trooping 'round thee as we listen
To all they have to say:
We, who once were kindred spirits,
Bid thee haste with us away:

Where the radiance of the diamond
And the cloudy opal rare,
Where eternal roses blossom
In celestial gardens fair,
Where thy spirit-footsteps wandered
In ages long ago,
And thy shining raiment fluttered
Whiter than the silver snow;
Ere the powers of earth had crushed thee,
And its loves thy heart could prize,
Ere it left thee nought of Heaven,
But thy spirit-sparking eyes.

In the silent hour of midnight,
At the dawning of the day,
By the evening's crimson sunset,
We summon thee away.
In the perfume of the flowers,
In the sighing of the breeze,
In the soft and silver moonlight,
In the rustling of the trees,
In the rippling of the waters
As the tide recedes away,
Thou canst hear the well-known voices—
Oh! wherefore wilt thou stay?

Offer of Marriage.

By an almost unconscious audacity on my part, when a very young man. I do believe that I was nearer the possession of a young and rich, and beautiful wife, than I have ever been since, or am ever likely to be again. I certainly was a very young man when I knocked at the door of old Mr. Wigley's house in Harley street, with the intention of formally applying for the hand of Miss Fanny Wigley; and I am very much astonished now, when I consider that old audacity. He was an early man, I had ascertained. He took his breakfast at half-past eight every morning in the back parlor, which he chose to call his study, chiefly, so far as I could discover his reason, because he there kept his stock of boots. These were all of the Wellington pattern, and were ranged in front of the fire place semicircularly, very much as Caspar disposes the skulls in the incantation scene in Der Freischutz. I remember that similitude occurring to me on the morning of my visit—the opera being then in the heyday of its popularity. Mrs. Wigley and the young ladies breakfasted at a much later hour in the front parlor. But as my object then was to see Mr. Wigley, and have with him a certain private discussion, of course it was advisable for me to call upon him at his house in Harley street before he started upon his daily pilgrimage into the city. Having made up my mind to this course on the previous evening, need I say that I was kept awake by the thoughts of it nearly all night, and arose at an absurdly early hour to carry my plan into execution.

Concerning myself, I must disclose that I was at that time an article clerk in the house of Messrs. Blotherstone & Blackland, the eminent solicitors in New Square, Lincoln's Inn Fields—that I had occupied a stool in their office for about two years—that I was entirely dependent for my support on the remittances I received from my relatives in Wiltshire—and that I occupied second-floor lodgings in the house of a bootmaker in Great Russell street, Bloomsbury—pleasant apartments enough, but for the all-pervading smell of leather that reigned in them. I know that one seemed to eat, drink and breathe leather there, and the fits of sneezing with which visitors were seized at their entrance, were really remarkable. I was a young man, as I have said. I shaved a good deal; it was not at all necessary, but I did it; I had lively hopes concerning a sickly looking tuft on my chin. I was prone to pomatum, and partial to side curls, brought round with elaborate care well over my ears and on my temples. I was fond of musk and bergamot, and trousers very tightly strapped under my boots, tightly strapped trousers were then quite de rigueur. I humored fashion to the top of her bent; my straps were so tight that walking was difficult, and sitting down perilous, if not impossible. Fortunately we were then in the old broadcloth and buckskin days, we had not fallen into the present epoch of flimsy tweed and general shoddiness. People dare not trust themselves with tight straps now. The bobtail, skimping and indecorous coats in which young gentlemen appear, were not worn then.— You put on, the first thing in the morning, what would now be regarded as an evening coat—a grand, sound expensive, uncomfortable, garment, high and hard in the collar, tight and long in the sleeves, with several buttons about the wrists, cuffs (that could be turned over if you so listed, and thereby exhibit a lining of velvet,) long and streaming swallowtails, reaching to the calves, and with the mysterious horizontal semicircle of buttons high up in the small of the back. Such was a coat in the times of which I am narrating. Tailors do well to designate modern attire evasively, as wrappers, talmas, paletots, etc., for indeed such things are not coats by the side of the coat in which I went to call on old Wigley. There were other shaped coats even then. You could wear, if you pleased, a superb pelisse, with rich silk lining; or a magnificent saroutou, in which you were at liberty to go any lengths in the way of fur collar and cuffs, or thick silk braiding up the front as worn by the gracious monarch then sitting, rather heavily, upon the throne of Great Britain.

Mr. Blotherstone was an old friend of my father's. Almost as a matter of favor, and in consideration of that friendship, I was received into the office of the firm in Lincoln's Inn Fields at the ridiculously low premium of three hundred guineas. For this amount, I was at liberty to work as an unremunerated copying clerk for five years. I remember that Mr. Blotherstone had promised my mother most faithfully to watch my progress and look after me in London, as though I were his own child. He fulfilled this undertaking by shaking hands with me once, asking me to one dinner party, and to two evening parties at his house, and by losing sight of me altogether afterwards. But the fact was, there were four article pupils in the office, and I don't think he ever knew precisely which I was.

It was at the evening parties that I first had the pleasure, the happiness, the intense and inexpressible delight of meeting Fanny Wigley. My presence at Mr. Blotherstone's seemed to be a sort of passport to other evening parties, at which I also met Fanny Wigley, and danced quadrilles with her. I wore pumps and ribbed silk stockings, after the fashion of the period. No gentlemen would then have dared to enter a drawing room with his boots on. I danced quadrilles with Fanny Wigley, and the dear delicious old triple-timed waltz. How the swallow-tails used to fly out in that beautiful dance! I had met her six times, when I determined to ask her hand in marriage; of course I had been passionately in love with her from the first moment of my seeing her.

She was a beautiful creature, with delicate features and gazelle-like eyes. Her flaxen hair was twined round her high curved tortoise shell comb, and interwoven with blue ribbon and sprigs of forget-me-nots. She was small in stature, and perhaps, at that time, a little too thin for abstract beauty, though it seemed to me that her ethereal and sylph-like figure was absolutely perfect. I could not forget how slender she once was, when I saw her, the other day, pausing and rather overcome with the heat and with her walk, a very stout lady, standing with her tall daughters near the house of the elephant in the Zoological Gardens, and inspecting the grave department of that noble animal. But I am anticipating.— It seemed to me the height of earthly bliss to waltz with Fanny Wigley, and minister to her wants at supper time.— These were simple and beautiful. She ate only of blanc-mange and macarons, though she did not object to her plate being filled and re-filled with those luxurious condiments. I deemed them quite an appropriate food for her, and that they supplied all the nourishment that birds and angels could possibly require.

I made no secret of my passion; you are ever confiding. I blushed, and stammered, and tore my gloves, still I avowed my love. She turned up the lovely gazelle eyes, and said: "Thank you," and then asked gently for a little sherry and water. I pressed my suit upon her.— She said I had better speak to her papa, and added, that she should like "just one more macaroon." Could a lover's prayer be accorded to in a more touching and exquisite manner? I spoke boldly of my love everywhere; I was fond, perhaps, of giving my affection an airing. I was proud of possessing a passion; it seemed a grand and manly sort of thing—very nearly as good as whiskers. I talked of it at the office, rather looking down on the other article pupils, in whose limited experiences there were no affairs of the heart. I took counsel on the subject, even with old Higgins, the common law clerk who had a general reputation for knowing everything. He was not, strictly speaking, a very gentlemanly person, but he was very wise and wary.

"Take my advice," he said solemnly, after a huge pinch of snuff; "make love as much as you like, but don't you trust yourself near a pen and ink. Don't write no letters—none of that; then you can't hardly commit yourself, and they can't get a hold of you with a breach of promise or anything of that kind. Do you see all of these papers? Well, they are all the letters in a breach of promise case. We're for the plaintiff, and shall make a good thing of it. By the by, there's a copy wanted, on brief paper, for counsel; you may as well make it, you don't seem to be doing much." I thought at the time that he took rather low views of human nature, but then you see, he was a common-law clerk.

I took for granted that every one I encountered on that eventful morning knew all about me and my mission. It seemed to me that my character was stamped all over me in large letters, just as a bad note is marked with the word "Forgery" at the Bank of England. "Lover" was written on my glossy hat, on my shining curls, on my tightly strapped trousers, on my velvet-lined coat-cuffs. The early milk women were conscious of my proceedings, and the postmen, and the bakers with hot-rolls in green baize, and the sweeps and the beggars who proffered me lavender, pressing it upon me as though it were a necessary of life, and bergamot and musk were by no means, per-ume enough for one man. All knew that I was journeying to Harley street to ask of her parent the hand of Fanny Wigley—even to the cook, who was cleaning the door steps of Mr. Wigley's house—a massive woman, with whom it was difficult to arrive at an understanding as to whether she purposed that I should pass on the right or the left of her, until it was almost necessary, at last, to gain an entry to the house by clearing her as in a hurdle race. She knew why I came to Harley street, as did also the tall footman, who appeared to be full-dress as to his legs, encased in white stockings and sulphur-colored plush, and in dishabille as to his body and arms—for he wore a soiled grey jean jacket—and who ushered me, rather unceremoniously, I thought, into the back parlor, where Mr. Wigley was sitting at breakfast.

I made use of the opportunity afforded me for contemplating my presumptive father-in-law. I detected at once a singular likeness between the shape of his shining bald head and the egg he was so busily tapping. A picture, for a moment, appeared before me of a giant form, with a monstrous spoon, standing over old Wigley, tapping his cranium into a number of neat compound fractures, just as he was tapping the egg. He was portly, but pale, with a sandy fringe of hair at the back of his head, and two sandy tufts of whiskers, triangular in plan, on his cheek bone. He had sandy, projecting eyebrows over his pale, blank-looking, blue eyes, and a white frill, fastened by a sandy colored Scotch pebble brooch, guttering out over his large, protruding, sandy waistcoat, could not find a trace of resemblance to my angelic Fanny. Still he was her father, and to be venerated by me accordingly, and loved and tended affectionately. I may as well say, that I think, upon the whole, Mr. Wigley was rather a dull man. He was the head of the eminent firm of Wigley, Bigley & Co., bullion brokers, Ingot Court, Great Winchester street, City. I did not know then, and I do not know now, anything about bullion brokers and their proceedings. I associate the occupation with the idea of immense wealth, though I cannot imagine any talent possessed by old Wigley in any way resulting in money. But then there are certain businesses that are popularly supposed to work themselves merely requiring the presence of an elderly gentleman to sit in a snug office and read the newspaper the while. Perhaps the business of a bullion broker is of this sort; for such an occupation Mr. Wigley was clearly fanned by nature.

The street-door being open, there had been no occasion for my using the knocker. Does he conceive that I came with a ring? I asked myself, for Mr. Wigley did not appear to heed my entrance, and the footman had not announced, nor, indeed, asked of me my name. Mr. Wigley was bent upon tapping his second egg, breaking the shell very neatly all over the top of it. I was disappointed at my reception, I confess. I had flattered myself, and my glass had flattered me, that my appearance was irreproachable, if not positively commanding. I knew that I was red in the face—very red, I may say—and that my cravat felt at that moment a little too tight for me, somehow; but, with those exceptions, I was conscious of nothing disconcerting me to a gracious welcome at the hands of Wigley.

I had met Mr. Wigley on two or three occasions: he was generally to be seen at the evening parties adorned by the presence of Miss Wigley, either losing his crowns at the whist table, or in a torpid state in the corners of rooms waiting for supper, or for his carriage to take him home. I think we had once shaken hands feebly and flabbily, from not knowing exactly what else to do with ourselves, on the occasion of an introduction to each other by Mr. Blotherstone. But he evidently had forgotten all about me now I took a chair. He started at this, and looked hard at me. I bowed with a winning politeness.

"I've come, Mr. Wigley—" I said. "Oh! ah! yes; but, perhaps, you had better see Mrs. Wigley," he interrupted, nervously tattooing on the table with his fat white fingers. "Mrs. Wigley always attends to those sort of things. I never interfere—never."

"But I thought it desirable." "Yes, of course, but it isn't," he said. "You don't seem to me to look very strong," he continued abruptly, staring at me.

I thanked him, informing him that, on the contrary I was very strong indeed, much stronger than I looked, perhaps, and availed myself of the occasion to make inquiries concerning his own health. These, however, he quite disregarded.— He fixed his eyes steadily on the bright silver teapot.

"How long have you been in your present situation?" he asked, rather of the teapot than of me.

"Two years," I answered. "I have three more to serve."

"Oh, three more to serve!" he repeated, wildly, evidently not in the least understanding me.

"I shall then have done with Mr. Blotherstone," I continued.

"Oh, you come from Mr. Blotherstone?" he cried, with an amazed expression on his face.

"Yes," I said, "I am his article pupil, and I've come here, Mr. Wigley"—and I'm sure I spoke with much feeling—to ask your consent to my union with your daughter Fanny. Mr. Wigley, I love her."

"My daughter Fanny!" and he started up. "Bless my soul! To think of this!" and he fell to rubbing his bald head to a brilliant polish with his handkerchief.— "Mr. Blotherstone's article pupil! My daughter Fanny! Marriage. Dear me! Have you any means?" he asked.

"None whatever," I replied. "But I love her, Mr. Wigley, to that extent"—

There came the flutter and rustle of a muslin morning gown, and a lady of large mould entered the room. She was a brilliant looking woman, even then, though she was Fanny's mother, with a tendency to dark red in her brunette complexion.

"O, Charlotte," cried Mr. Wigley to this superb lady, and an air of intense relief came to him at a moment when, in his embarrassment, I felt sure he was about to say, "take her, then, you dog. Bless you, Fanny, my darling; bless you both; may you be happy."

"Won't do at all," Mrs. Wigley said firmly, after a glance at me—"won't do at all; will never catch Joseph."

"My dear," cried old Wigley, in an agony, "it's not the new f—" (my impression is that he said footman, but, as he lowered his voice, I cannot be quite sure.) "It's Mr. Blotherstone's article pupil come to propose for Fanny!"

Mrs. Wigley looked at me inquiringly. I felt my cheeks burning, and wondered they did not set fire to my shirt collars, they were so hot. She gave a hearty laugh.

"Stuff and nonsense!" she said.— "Pooh! pooh! What a foolish boy you must be! I remember you now. We met you at Mr. Blotherstone's and somewhere else. Fanny goes back to school next Monday. You mustn't think of such things. Have you breakfasted? Let me give you a cup of tea. There's cold fowl there. Or will you have some broiled ham?"

She blew away my offer of marriage with one breath.

I don't know how I got away from Harley street; I only know that, on leaving, the footman in the sulphur plush whiskered, grinning, "You must be a jolly fat to think you could come after me."

To this day I have had a difficulty in understanding that singular observation. I have hinted that I have seen Fanny Wigley since. Perhaps I kept my offer for nine years, or longer, and then did not publish it. Don't suppose that my passion was too suddenly suppressed. A single frosty night will sometimes destroy a whole season's fruit, and, if you take it in time, a fire that else would burn down your whole house, may be put out with a pail of water. Mrs. Wigley was my frosty night—my pail of water.

WHEN a Hindoo priest is about to baptize an infant, he utters the following beautiful sentiment: "Little babe, thou enterest the world weeping, while all around thee smile; contrive so to live, that thou mayest depart in smiles, while all around thee weep."

BEFORE you marry, be sure of a house wherein to tarry.

SEVERE LOSS.—On Saturday last, unexpected, we received the following communication, written on the margin of the (NEWS) paper, from the undersigned of this place:

"MR. RAVELEY:—The time has now expired for which I have paid you for your paper, and I have no further use for it as it has turned out a neutral paper. If it had continued to publish 'Sesech' doctrine I would have taken it another year so that I could have had both sides of the question to have judged from. I think the union will do me." Your best friend, JOHN KOON.

REV. J. A. ANDERSON, in a public card, implies that Dr. W. A. Scott is guilty of a sin which caps the climax of human guilt.

McCORMICK'S REAPER.—The Commissioners of Patents have decided not to extend McCormick's application for an extension of his reaper patent of 1847.

CHILDREN IN SACRAMENTO.—It appears by the report of School Marshal, that the number of children in Sacramento under 18 years and over 4 years is 2,351; under 4 years, 1,178. Of these 1,774 were born in California. Colored children number 102; Indian children, 25; Chinese children, 69.

TWELVE thousand five hundred sacks of damaged wheat discharged from the ship Winged Racer was sold at auction, in San Francisco, on Friday last, at 53 cents per sack.

LARGE YIELD OF OATS.—Wm. Axton, of Eel River township, exhibited a sample of oats at the County Fair which equaled any crop we remember to have seen recorded. The field of six and a quarter acres yielded seven hundred bushels. A bushel of the oats, by measure, weighed forty-four pounds.—Humboldt Times.

THE Washington correspondent of the New York Times, of October 15th, says: By an order made to day, the Secretary of the Treasury has much facilitated the matter of ascertaining the interests of loyal persons who are joint owners with rebels of vessels that have been seized by the Government officers. Heretofore the evidence of loyalty and of ownership has been taken under orders of Court, which necessarily subjected the owners to great delay and enormous costs. By the Secretary's order, the evidence will hereafter be made to the Collectors of the several ports, and a synopsis sent by them directly to the Secretary. Upon this evidence, thus taken and submitted, the Secretary will determine upon the justice and policy of releasing the seizure.

Overland Telegraph. The Telegraph across the continent from appearances, is working well, and may now be considered a fixed fact, as all its operations thus far, have been, considering the length of the line, a success, it must necessarily however, be several months before all the offices, especially those most distant from the great center of commerce, can be put in as perfect working order as we may expect to find them after the enterprise has been fully established and all the practical necessities attained. This is verily the great enterprise of the times, and its importance is not fully realized, even yet, by the people of California. Let some accident happen the line by which we will be deprived of our daily budget of news from the East, and then, and not till then, will we fully appreciate the benefits which we now enjoy by this Daily Overland Telegraph.

THE indications are, from what we can gather by telegraph from the East, that there will be no great battle fought on or near the Potomac, this winter. The cold weather is now setting in, and with it all the accompanying evils of frost, ice, and rain, which will render a winter campaign, even in Virginia, a disagreeable and improbable thing. General McClelland has so organized the Union army there, that it may now be considered one of the best armies ever got together on the American continent, but he is at the same time cautious and will not risk a battle with the enemy on any uncertainties, his baggage trains and artillery are of gigantic size and necessarily cumbersome in transportation, consequently good roads and the prospect of moderately fair weather is something much to be desired by an advancing army. The prospects for these this winter are not flattering, and as the Confederate army is evidently acting entirely on the defensive, we would not be surprised to hear soon that our army had gone into winter quarters on the Potomac.

THE Port and Advertiser estimates the present wheat crop of Oregon as being fifty per cent. less than last year. The falling off, the Advertiser thinks, is not owing to any unfavorable circumstances attending the growth of the crop, but simply to the fact that the previous low rates of the article caused much less seed to be sown than usual. A considerable amount of the old crop still remains on hand.

THE London Times says that France will be compelled to spend forty million sterling, or in round numbers, two hundred million of dollars, to make up the deficiencies in her domestic bread crops of this year, and that both "Canada and the United States will be importing largely into France." So they will; and in this necessity for bread we hold France and England, too, under bonds to keep the peace with us, in order to keep the peace among their own people. Let Mason and Slidell, if they should get to their destination, preach up the glories of King Cotton. France, and England, too, must have bread, and they must get it from the United States. Let Wall street be consoled with this reflection.—New York Herald.

A Dispatch to the Bee, of Nov. 6th, says: Judge Hoffman rejected the survey in the case of Anastacio Chabolla, claimant of a rancho of eight square leagues in Sacramento county. The diseno and grant are very indefinite in their description of the land which the Governor intended to convey. Judge Hoffman discussed the matter at considerable length and says the claimant must get his quantity between the Mokelumne and Cosumnes rivers.

THE New York Evening Post, of Oct. 15th, publishes the following in relation to the confinement of Austin E. Smith, late Naval Agent on this coast: The Marshal received an order for the release of A. E. Smith, of California, but Mr. Smith declined to take the oath of allegiance, and remains at Fort Lafayette.

COUNTERFEIT HALF EAGLES.—A well executed counterfeit half eagle has been shown to us. It is made of a pewter-like compound, and is galvanized. The date is 1859; the stamp is intended to represent that of the Philadelphia Mint. The coin struck at the San Francisco Mint has an "S" on the reverse side; on those coins having an eagle upon them, the "S" is under the eagle. The coin struck at New Orleans has an "O" in the same place. "C" is the sign of the Charlotte Mint, and "D" of the Mint at Dahlonega. Only the coin struck at Philadelphia has no such mark upon it. This counterfeit has no mark, and is therefore an imitation of the Philadelphia coin. The die is so well made that on comparison, the execution of the bogus piece appeared equal to that of a genuine half eagle. A little chip with a knife into the edges exposes the pewter. It does not follow from this that everybody should clip all the half eagles in their possession.—Alta.

NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

The following Telegraphic news is from the Alta of the 5th: WASHINGTON, Nov. 4th.—At one o'clock this morning, a fire broke out in the lower story of the General Hospital, in Judiciary Square. It is supposed to have originated from a furnace. The combustible parts of the main building, together with the roof were destroyed. When the flames were first discovered, hurried preparations were made for the removal of the sick and wounded soldiers, who numbered, in all, about fifty. Notwithstanding the confusion that prevailed this was effected in good order and with safety to the patients, who are now comfortably cared for. It was a very fortunate thing that thirty of the patients had on Thursday been removed to Annapolis. The President has recognized Camillo Martin as Vice-Consul of Spain at San Francisco; and Godfrey Synodcker as Consul of the principality of Schaumburg-lyppe, for the United States, to reside at Chicago.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4th.—Capt. Marshall, of the barque Rapid, from Vera Cruz, arrived at this port this morning. He recommends all ship masters bound down the Gulf of Mexico to go well armed, as he made the passage out and back without once seeing a United States vessel in any direction. He also reports passing the schooner Typhoon for Boston, and that the same day by the Typhoon and Rapid were chased by a pilot boat rigged schooner. The weather setting in squally, both escaped.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4th.—The Treasury Department are engaged in a search for historical precedents on the question of the right of the Government to reopen particular ports during the period of the blockade of the Southern coast.—This circumstance is regarded here as an indication of the probable intention of the Government in reference to the South.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4th.—The great naval and military expedition was spoken on Wednesday morning in Lat. 35 30, Long. 75, by schooner Houston. Weather fine.

EUROPE.—The Shipping Gazette continues to denounce the conduct of the Blockade, and the wrongs done British subjects, and says some action on the part of the British Government is indispensable. The Times thinks it not unlikely that the moment the drain of specie commences the financial community of America will have it Bull Run.

Count De Sager, lineal descendant of Count Rochambeau, of American revolutionary fame, has tendered his military services to the President, and has been assured that he will be accepted. The same answer has been given to the Baron de Schonen, descendant of Gen. Lafayette. It is expected they will soon reach the United States.

THE CARIBOO MINES.—The British Colonist gives the particulars concerning the rich diggings at Cariboo, as follows, in an extra dated October 25th: If anybody here had entertained doubt as to the truth of the stories told concerning the enormous yield of the mines of our sister Colony during the season just past, such doubts would have been entirely dissipated had he stood on the Hudson Bay Company's wharf last evening and seen the Otter come in with seventy passengers from Cariboo, and heard them narrate their glowing tales of the mineral wealth of the far North, or seen the packs of precious metal which several of their number lugged up to the Express office. The total amount of dust brought down last evening will reach $250,000! The Abbott Company, of whom so much has been published in the Colonist, came by this arrival. They are three in number, and have, it is said $80,000.

A nugget of gold weighing seven lbs., ($1,400,) has lately been picked up near Fort Kamloops, and sold at the Hudson Bay Company's Fort. J. R. Adams & Co., on Williams' Creek, were making $300 a day to the hand. Other claims are paying equally well.

FROM WASHOE.—The Territorial Enterprise, published at Virginia City, Nov. 1st, says: According to a statement from J. B. Fulton, assistant Postmaster of Virginia City, the number of letters received at this Postoffice during the month of October is 3,138, of which 1,273 were from the Eastern States and Europe, and 1,865 from California and the adjoining Territories. The number of letters sent from the office during the same time is 2,843; of these 1,240 went to the Eastern States and Europe, and 1,603 to California and Nevada, Utah and Washington Territories.

Quite a number of the hard working men of our mining districts left here about six weeks ago for the Nez Perces mines. Out of the number at least two thirds have returned. They all agree in reporting the mines a great haul. It is reported that some parties have struck an extensive coal field in the Flowery District. Quite an excitement has been raised, and parties are busy prospecting for a continuation of the field.

GENIUS lights its own fire, but is constantly collecting materials to keep alive the flame.

PROCLAMATION of Thanksgiving. State of California, Executive Department, Sacramento, November 4, 1861. There is a moral grandeur in the public acknowledgment of Divine goodness. Political institutions, however excellent, do not constitute the only source of happiness to the people; for underlying these are the finer moral elements essential in the creation of national greatness and individual well-being. This was well understood by the immortal men who bequeathed us this glorious inheritance of ours. It was thought to be eminently proper by those great and good men, whose fame has rendered our country illustrious, that the State should, by its public acts, pay becoming respect to these observances, and thus encourage individual respect for public and private virtues, and veneration for the Supreme Being. Infused with these sentiments, the Executive of this Commonwealth takes peculiar interest in again providing for a public recognition of the divine source of our all blessings, and a public manifestation of the gratitude of the people for the same. To be grateful is to enjoy the gifts of heaven; while the simple expression of our thankfulness is all the return we can make for the possession of these many blessings. California, in all the ardor of her youth, this day rejoices in the fullness of her prosperity. The earth has yielded forth its fruits for herin overwhelming abundance, her treasures of gold have not been exhausted, while she has enlarged her contributions to the wealth of her sister States and other hands.—The increase of her flocks and herds, luxuriating on her abundant pastures under her benign skies, animates her hills and valleys with visions of gladness. Her homes are full of peace and plenty. War, famine, and pestilence have not invaded her happy abodes; nor from any such unnatural cause is there heard the wail of sorrow, or the lamentations of the widow, or the cry of the orphan within her borders. Multitudes have been added to her thriving population during the year, to enjoy with us the rich munificence of Heaven, and to aid us in extending the conquest of a superior civilization. No other land has been so highly favored in all the elements of material progress as this beautiful heritage of ours. And while the homes of our people are filled with contentment and peace, may they be distinguished as the habitations of wisdom, justice, charity, and love. Now, therefore, I, John G. Downey, Governor of the State of California, do hereby appoint and set apart THURSDAY, the 28th of November, instant, as a day of Public Thanksgiving to Almighty God, for the distinguished mercies and blessings bestowed upon us during the past year. And I call upon all the people to lay aside their daily avocations, and meet in their accustomed religious assemblies, and in all suitable ways, and in all due solemnity, to pour forth their gratitude in prayer and praise to our Heavenly Father for all his goodness; remembering, at the same time, to supplicate fervently for the speedy removal of our national calamities, and for the perpetuity, in all its power and glory, of this Union and equality of states, to which, under Providence, we most cheerfully attribute the unparalleled prosperity of our people; and to the existence of which, in its former purity and justice, we look, as the main hope, the sheet-anchor of civil and religious liberty to ourselves and our posterity. In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the great Seal of the State to be affixed, the day and year above written. J. G. DOWNEY, Governor of California. Hints to Breeders of Horses.

The Horse in all ages and countries, has born off the palm of favoritism, and justly received a larger share of esteem and affection, than any other domestic animal. His eye of fire, his powers of locomotion, his grace and noble bearing, his beauty, added to his intelligence, rightfully entitle him to hold a high rank and place among the domestic animals.

The Arabians, from whom we have received much of our best strains of equine blood, regard the horse as a boon-companion in all the journey of life! They give him a place in their tent, and not only count it an honor to be the owner of a fine horse, but permit him to share the hospitalities of their bed and board.

There are few, very few men anywhere to be found, so strangely organized, as not to admire and desire to own, a fine horse. Especially is this true in California.

"Roadsters," as they are termed—horses of fair size, elegantly made, showy and active, equally suited to the farm, and the wants of the professions, for omnibus, stage, and express lines, to the wants and requirements of State and County officers, and as private carriage and saddle horses, in short, horses pretty generally adapted to fill most places, where a horse is needed, are fast coming into popular favor, and must necessarily, very soon, command quicker sales and higher figures than any other class of horses.

California and Oregon use more horses in proportion to population than the Eastern States. The vast net work of railroads stretching in every direction from the sea board to the Mississippi, and from the lakes to the gulf, lessen the demand for horses, especially that class suited to heavy draft. The mountainous character of much of the Pacific States, is such as to bar a general system of railroads, and always give increased use and demand for horses suited to stages, express lines, saddles and carriages, as well as those adapted to heavy draft. At the present time, it is estimated that over 1,000 teams are constantly engaged in the carrying trade to Washoe, with a prospect of a large increase.

The single line of stages running from Sacramento, California, to Portland, Oregon, a distance of 750 miles, has in constant use 448 horses, besides from 30 to 40 spanes—or horses kept to meet emergencies.

The present war if it continues any length of time, will use up, or render useless, from 60 to 80,000 horses and mules; and it will be noted and remembered, that it will require five years to grow up from colts to adult horse-hood, the quota sufficient to replace this vast number—Horses since the war commenced have risen in value.

California has fewer good horses in proportion to her number than any other State in the Union; The great mass of her horses have descended from mustangs, (Spanish horses) and although there is a commendable zeal on the part of breeders to improve, yet it is a work, but just commenced—is not yet done, but remains to be done.

But will it pay to improve? Is it sound policy to pay $50 00, $75 00, or $100 for the service of a first class horse rather than pay $10, $20 or $30 for an indifferent one? This is a question of sterling importance. On the correct decision of which, depends doubtless, all the profits arising from this branch of industrial pursuit. To commit a blunder here in the outset, is to court disaster and defeat all along, to the very end. On the other hand to decide the question rightly and wisely, is to insure (so far as human foresight is competent to the task) good returns, satisfactory remuneration, and complete success. Please consider

1. It costs not a farthing more to rear, train, and fit for market, a large, fine, elegant colt, than it does a scrub of comparative little value.

2. He commands a much more ready sale, much better figures, and is far less likely to remain unsold on your hands, when you need to realize returns.

3. He is far more likely to command cash down. First class horses are usually sold for cash in hand and sent to the cities, while cheap ordinary ones remain to be bartered to teamsters, or sold on time.

4. Elegant carriage and saddle horses will bring each from $200 to $500 more than the second or third rate class of horses.

5. All the difference, absolutely all the difference, in the cost of the two, is simply the difference paid for the service of sires—the trifling difference of $30 or $50 perhaps.

6. This trifle is repaid a hundred times over during the growth of the colt—in the laudable pride and satisfaction the owner feels in rearing and possessing a meritorious animal, and in the assurance that he is not behind his neighbors in a spirit of enterprise and improvement—and that in any show of horse stock he is not compelled to slink away out of sight, but can enter the lists, and compete successfully, for a share of the honors of the occasion. Moreover when he sells, this trifle in the outset is doubly and thrice refunded! There can be no doubt about the policy which points to rearing the best of the domestic animals.

He who decides in favor of the scrub races, is chargeable with a folly, akin to that of him, who carries his grist in one end of the bag, and a stone to ballance it in the other. He who looks for incoming wealth and steady and large returns from rearing and propagating the ordinary scrub races of the domestic animals, reminds us of the doubtful soldier who drew his sword on a plague, and charged a malaria with his bayonet.

The means used are entirely inadequate to the end or object sought. A word to the wise is sufficient.

POETRY.

The Old Mother.

Poor old mother, set her aside— [done Her children are grown, and her work is True, in their service her locks turned gray, But shove her away, unsought, alone. Give her a home, for decency's sake, In some back room, far out of the way, Where her tremulous voice cannot be heard— It might check your mirth when you would be gay. Strive to forget how she toiled for you, And cradled you oft on her loving breast; Told you stories and joined your play, Many an hour when she needed rest. No matter for that—huddle her off, Your friend might wince at her witty jest; She is too "old fashioned," and speaks "so plain"— Get her out of the way of the coming guest. Once you valued her cheerful voice, Her hearty laugh and her merry song; But to "ears polite" they are quite too loud— Her jokes too sharp, her tales too long. So, poor old lady, huddle her off— In her cheerless room let her sit alone; She must not meet with your guests to-night, For her children are grown and her work is done.

To UNMARRIED LADIES.—The following items of advice to ladies remaining in a state of single blessedness are extracted from the manuscript of an old dowager:

If you have blue eyes, languish. If black eyes, affect spirit. If you have pretty feet, wear short petticoats. If you are the least doubtful as to that point, were them long. If you have good teeth, don't forget to laugh now and then. If you have bad ones you must only sip.

While you are young sit with your face to the light. When you are a little advanced, sit with your back to the window. If you have a bad voice, only speak in a low tone.

If it is acknowledged that you have a fine voice, never speak in a high tone. If you dance well, dance seldom. If you dance ill, never dance at all. If you sing well, make no puerile excuses.

If you sing indifferently, hesitate not a moment when you are asked, for few persons are competent judges of singing, but every one is sensible of the desire to please.

In conversation you think a person wrong, rather hint a difference of opinion than offer a contradiction. It is always in your power to make a friend by smiles; what folly to make enemies by frowns.

When you have an opportunity to praise, do it with all your heart. When you are forced to blame, do it with reluctance.

If you are envious of another woman, never show it but by allowing her every good quality and perfection except those which she really possesses.

If you wish to let the world know you are in love with a particular man, treat him with formality, and every one else with ease and freedom.

If you are disposed to be pettish or insolent, it is better to exercise your ill humor on your dog or your cat, or your servant, than on your friend.

LAMPAS IN HORSES.—The London Field relates the manner in which a cure of the disease was effected by homeopathic treatment, in the case of a valuable carriage horse: The animal had been suffering from the disease for some time before the servant mentioned that it was ailing. An allopathic veterinary surgeon who was consulted, declared that it was impossible to remove the diseased part except by cutting and burning.— This we refused to permit, and began to treat it with homeopathic remedies, but owing to our want of skill, without any success; the horse became daily worse; the palate and gums were so swollen as to prevent the power of mastication, and were like a white sponge. In this emergency we took the liberty of consulting a clever homeopathic M.D., who advised us to try Rhus toxicodendron a, five drops in half a pint of water, twice a day. Sixteen hours from the first dose, there was an improvement in the color of the gums and palate. The following day the swelling began to subside and in seven days the creature was quite well, and has never since that time (a period of two years and a half) had any recurrence of the ailment.

THE word Debt is composed of the initial "Dun Every Body Twice." Credit is composed of the initial letters of "Call Regularly Every Day—I'll Trust."

A man boasting in a company of ladies that he had a very luxurious head of hair, a lady present remarked that it was altogether owing to the mellowness of the soil.

RELIGION presents few difficulties to the humble, many to the proud, insuperable ones to the vain.

How to become a real estate agent— marry a rich wife.

THOUGH men boast of holding the reins, the women generally tell them which way they must drive.

If a man feels very much like getting married, yet imagines that he ought not to, the best remedy is to help one of his neighbors move a houseful of furniture— borrow nine of his children for a few days and hear them cry.
