

THE

HISTORY

OF

EMILY MONTAGUE.

VOL. III.

THE

HISTORY

OF

EMILY MONTAGUE.

By the Author of LADY JULIA MANDEVILLE.

VOL. III.

L O N D O N: Printed for J. DODSLEY, in Pall Mall.

[ I ]

THE # HISTORY

O F

EMILY MONTAGUE.

LETTER CXXIII.

To Colonel RIVERS, at Montreal.

Quebec, April 17.

How unjuft are your fex in all their connexions with ours!

VOL. III.

Do

B872

30 600

Do I not know love? and does this reproach come from the man on whom my heart doats, the man, whom to make happy, I would with transport cease to live? can you one moment doubt your Emily's tenderness? have not her eyes, her air, her look, her indifcretion, a thousand times told you, in spite of herself, the dear secret of her heart, long before search was confcious of the tenderness of yours?

Did I think only of myfelf, I could live with you in a defart; all places, all fituations are equally charming to me, with you: without you, the whole world affords nothing which could give a moment's pleafure to your Emily.

Let me but fee thofe eyes in which the tendereft love is painted, let me but hear that enchanting voice, I am infenfible to all elfe, I know nothing of what paffes around me; all that has no relation to you paffes away like a morning dream, the impreffion of which is effaced in a moment: my tendernefs dernefs for you fills my whole foul, and leaves no room for any other idea. Rank, fortune, my native country, my friends, all are nothing in the balance with my Rivers.

For your own fake, I once more entreat you to return to England: I will follow you; I will fwear never to marry another; I will fee you, I will allow you to continue the tender inclination which unites us.' Fortune may there be more favorable to our wifhes than we now hope; may join us without deftroying the peace of the beft of parents.

But if you perfift, if you will facrifice every confideration to your tendernefs-My Rivers, I have no will but yours.

LET-

LETTER CXXIV.

To Miss FERMOR, at Silleri.

London, Feb. 17.

My dear Bell,

UCY, being deprived of the pleafure of writing to you, as fhe intended, by Lady Anne Melville's dining with her, defires me to make her apologies.

Allow me to fay fomething for myfelf, and to fhare my joy with one who will, I am fure, fo very fincerely fympathize with me in it.

I could not have believed, my dear Bell, it had been fo very eafy a thing to be conftant: I declare, but don't mention this, left I fhould be laughed at, I have never felt EMILY MONTAGUE. 5 felt the least inclination for any other woman, fince I married your lovely friend.

I now fee a circle of Beauties with the fame indifference as a bed of fnowdrops: no charms affect me but hers; the whole creation to me contains no other woman.

I find her every day, every hour, more lovely; there is in my Lucy a mixture of modefty, delicacy, vivacity, innocence, and blufhing fenfibility, which add a thoufand unfpeakable graces to the moft beautiful perfon the hand of nature ever formed.

There is no defcribing her enchanting fmile, the fmile of unaffected, artlefs tendernefs. How fhall I paint to you the fweet involuntary glow of pleafure, the kindling fire of her eyes, when I approach; or those thousand little dear attentions of which love alone knows the value?

B 3

I never,

I never, my dear girl, knew happinefs till now; my tendernefs is abfolutely a fpecies of idolatry; you cannot think what a flave this lovely girl has made me.

As a proof of this, the little tyrant infifts on my omitting a thoufand civil things I had to fay to you, and attending her and Lady Anne immediately to the opera; fhe bids me however tell you, fhe loves you passing the love of woman, at least of handtome women, who are not generally celebrated for their candor and good-will to each other.

Adieu, my deareft Bell!

an all and the later of the

1

as made the state of the second of the

Yours,

and the second process of the second se

J. TEMPLE.

LET-

LETTER CXXV.

To JOHN TEMPLE, Efq; Pall Mall.

Silleri, April 18.

INDEED?

" Is this that haughty, gallant, gay Lo-" thario,

" That dear perfidious-"

Abfolutely, my dear Temple, the fex ought never to forgive Lucy for daring to monopolize fo very charming a fellow. I had fome thoughts of a little badinage with you myfelf, if I fhould return foon to England; but I now give up the very idea.

One thing I will, however, venture to fay, that love Lucy as much as you pleafe, B 4 you you will never love her half fo well as fhe deferves; which, let me tell you, is a great deal for one woman, efpecially, as you well obferve, one handfome woman, to fay of another.

I am, however, not quite clear your idea is juft: cattifm, if I may be allowed the expression, feeming more likely to be the vice of those who are conscious of wanting themselves the dear power of pleasing.

Handfome women ought to be, what I profefs myfelf, who am however only pretty, too vain to be envious; and yet we fee, I am afraid, too often, fome little fparks of this mean paffion between rival Beauties.

Impartially fpeaking, I believe the beft natured women, and the most free from envy, are those who, without being very handsome, have that je ne sçai quoi, those nameless graces, which please even without beauty; beauty; and who therefore, finding more attention paid to them by men than their looking-glass tells them they have a right to expect, are for that reason in constant good humour with themselves, and of course with every body else: whereas Beauties, claiming universal empire, are at war with all who dispute their rights; that is; with half the fex.

I am very good-natured myfelf; but it is, perhaps, becaufe, though a pretty woman, I am more agreeable than handfome, and have an infinity of the je ne. fçai quoi.

A propos, my dear Temple, I am fo pleafed with what Montefquieu fays on this fubject, that I find it is not in my nature to refift translating and inferting it; you cannot then fay I have fent you a letter in which there is nothing worthreading.

B' 5"

Ibeg

9

I beg you will read this to the miffes, for which you cannot fail of their thanks, and for this reafon; there are perhaps a dozen women in the world who do not think themfelves handfome, but I will venture to fay, not one who does not think herfelf agreeable, and that fhe has this namelefs charm, this fo much talked of I know not what, which is fo much better than beauty. But to my Montefquieu:

"There is fometimes, both in perfons and things, an invifible charm, a natural grace, which we cannot define, and which we are therefore obliged to call the je ne fçai quoi.

and its the second of

" It feems to me that this is an effect principally founded on furprize.

"We are touched that a perfon pleafes "us more than fhe feemed at firft to have "a right 66 a right to do; and we are agreeably 66 furprized that fhe fhould have known ¢¢. how to conquer those defects which 66 our eyes shewed us, but which our 66 hearts no longer believe : 'tis for this 66 reason that women, who are not handfome, have often graces or agreeable-66 66 neffes; and that beautiful ones very 66) feldom have.

" For a beautiful perfon does generally 66 the very contrary of what we expected; 66 fhe appears to us by degrees lefs ami-" able, and, after having furprized us 66 pleafingly, fhe furprizes us in a con-66 trary manner; but the agreeable im-66 preffion is old, the difagreeable one 66 new: 'tis alfo feldom that Beauties in-" fpire violent passions, which are almost " 66 always referved for those who have 66 graces, that is to fay, agreeableneffes, 66 which we did not expect, and which we had no reason to expect. 66

B 6

" Magni-

" Magnificent habits have feldom grace, " which the dreffes of fhepherdeffes often " have.

"We admire the majefty of the draperies of Paul Veronefe; but we are touched with the fimplicity of Raphael, and the exactnefs of Corregio.

" Paul Veronese promises much, and pays all he promises; Raphael and Corregio promise little, and pay much, which pleases us more.

" Thefe graces, thefe agreeablenesses, " are found oftener in the mind than " in the countenance: the charms of a " beautiful countenance are feldom hidden, " they appear at first view; but the mind " does not fhew itfelf except by degrees, when it pleafes, and as much as it pleafes; 56 it can conceal itfelf in order to appear, 66 and give that species of surprize to < C | which those graces, of which I speak, C6 owe their existence.

. This

"This grace, this agreeablenefs, is lefs in the countenance than in the manner; the manner changes every inftant, and can therefore every moment give us the pleafure of furprize: in one word, a woman can be handfome but in one way, but fhe may be agreeable in a hundred thoufand."

I like this doctrine of Montesquieu's extremely, because it gives every woman her chance, and because it ranks me above a thousand handsomer women, in the dear power of inspiring passion.

Cruel creature ! why did you give me the idea of flowers ? I now envy you your foggy climate : the earth with you is at this moment covered with a thoufand lovely children of the fpring; with us, it is an univerfal plain of fnow.

Our beaux are terribly at a loss for fimilies: you have lillies of the valley for comparisons; we nothing but what with the 14 THE HISTORY OF the idea of whiteness gives that of coldness too.

13

This is all the quarrel I have with Canada: the fummer is delicious, the winter pleafant with all its feverities; but alas! the fmiling fpring is not here; we pafs from winter to fummer in an inftant, and lofe the fprightly feafon of the Loves.

A letter from the God of my idolatry I must answer it instantly.

Adieu ! Yours, &c.

A. FERMOR.

LET-

LETTER CXXVI.

To Captain FITZGERALD.

YES, I give permiffion; you may come this afternoon: there is fomething amufing enough in your dear nonfenfe; and, as my father will be at Quebec, I fhall want amufement.

It will also furnish a little chat for the misses at Quebec; a tête-à-tête with a tall Irishman is a subject which cannot escape their fagacity.

Adieu ! Yours,

A. F.

LET

LETTER CXXVII.

TO Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, April 20.

Do

A FTER my immense letter to your love; my dear, you must not expect me to say much to your fair ladyship.

I am glad to find you manage Temple fo admirably; the wifeft, the wildeft, the graveft, and the gayeft, are equally our flaves, when we have proper ideas of petticoat politics.

I intend to compose a code of laws for the government of husbands, and get it translated into all the modern languages; which I apprehend will be of infinite benefit to the world.

Do you know I am a greater fool than I imagined? You may remember I was always extremely fond of fweet waters. I left them off lately, upon an idea, though a miftaken one, that Fitzgerald did not like them : I yefterday heard him fay the contrary ; and, without thinking of it, went mechanically to my dreffingroom, and put lavender water on my handkerchief.

This is, I am afraid, rather a ftrong fymptom of my being abfurd; however, I find it pleafant to be fo, and therefore give way to it.

It is divinely warm to-day, though the fnow is ftill on the ground; it is melting faft however, which makes it impoffible for me to get to Quebec. I fhall be confined for at leaft a week, and Emily not with me: I die for amufement. Fitzgerald ventures ftill at the hazard of his own neck and his horfes legs; for the latter of which animals I have fo much compaffion, compafiion, that I have ordered both to ftay at home a few days, which days I fhall devote to ftudy and contemplation, and little pert chit-chats with papa, who is ten times more fretful at being kept within doors than I am: I intend to win a little fortune of him at piquet before the world breaks in upon our folitude. Adieu! I am idle, but always

Your faithful

A. FERMOR.

LETTER CXXVIII.

To the Earl of —

Silleri, April 20.

TIS indeed, my Lord, an advantage for which we cannot be too thankful to the Supreme Being, to be born in a country whose religion and laws are fuch, EMILY MONTAGUE. 19 fuch, as would have been the objects of our wifhes, had we been born in any other.

Our religion, I would be underftood to mean Chriftianity in general, carries internal conviction by the excellency of its moral precepts, and its tendency to make mankind happy; and the peculiar mode of it eftablished in England breathes beyond all others the mild spirit of the Gospel, and that charity which embraces all mankind as brothers.

It is equally free from enthuliafm and fuperfition; its outward form is decent and refpectful; without affected oftentation; and what fhews its excellence above all others is, that every other church allows it to be the beft, except itfelf: and it is an eftablished rule, that he has an undoubted right to the first rank of merit, to whom every man allows the fecond.

As to our government, it would be impertinent to praife it; all mankind allow it to be the mafter-piece of human wifdom.

It has the advantage of every other form, with as little of their inconveniences as the imperfection attendant on all human inventions will admit: it has the monarchic quickness of execution and ftability, the aristocratic diffusive strength and wisdom of counsel, the democratic freedom and equal distribution of property.

When I mention equal diffribution of property, I would not be underftood to mean fuch an equality as never exifted, nor can exift but in idea; but that general, that comparative equality, which leaves to every man the abfolute and fafe pofferfion of the fruits of his labors; which foftens offenfive diffunctions, and curbs pride, by leaving every order of men in fome degree dependent on the other;

other; and admits of those gentle and almost imperceptible gradations, which the poet fo well calls,

" Th' according mulic of a well-mix'd " ftate."

The prince is here a centre of union; an advantage, the want of which makes a democracy, which is fo beautiful in theory, the very worft of all poffible governments, except abfolute monarchy, in practice.

I am called upon, my Lord, to go to the citadel, to fee the going away of the ice; an object fo new to me, that I cannot refift the curiofity I have to fee it, though my going thither is attended with infinite difficulty.

Bell infifts on accompanying me : I am afraid for her, but she will not be refused.

At our return, I will have the honor of writing again to your Lordship, by the gentleman who carries this to New York.

I have the honor to be, my Lord,

Your Lordship's, &c.

WM. FERMOR.

LETTER CXXIX.

To the Earl of —

Silleri, April 20, Evening.

E are returned, my Lord, from having feen an object as beautiful and magnificent in itfelf, as pleafing from the idea it gives of renewing once more our intercourfe with Europe.

Before

23

Before I faw the breaking up of the vaft body of ice, which forms what is here called the bridge, from Quebec to Point Levi, I imagined there could be nothing in it worth attention; that the ice would pafs away, or diffolve gradually, day after day, as the influence of the fun, and warmth of the air and earth increafed; and that we fhould fee the river open, without having observed by what degrees it became fo.

But I found the great river, as the favages with much propriety call it, maintain its dignity in this inftance as in all others, and affert its fuperiority over those petty ftreams which we honor with the names of rivers" in England. Sublimity is the characteriftic of this western world; the loftinefs of the mountains, the grandeur of the lakes and rivers, the majefty of the rocks shaded with a picturesque variety of beautiful trees and fhrubs, and crowned with the nobleft of the offspring of of the foreft, which form the banks of the latter, are as much beyond the power of fancy as that of defcription: a landfcape-painter might here expand his imagination, and find ideas which he will feek in vain in our comparatively little world.

The object of which I am fpeaking has all the American magnificence.

The ice before the town, or, to fpeak in the Canadian ftile, the bridge, being of a thicknefs not lefs than five feet, a league in length, and more than a mile broad, refifts for a long time the rapid tide that attempts to force it from the banks.

We are prepared by many previous circumftances to expect fomething extraordinary in this event, if I may fo call it: every increase of heat in the weather for near a month before the ice leaves the banks, banks; every warm day gives you terror for those you see venturing to pass it in carrioles; yet one frosty night makes it again so strong, that even the ladies, and the timid amongst them, still venture themselves over in parties of pleasure; though greatly alarmed at their return, if a few hours of uncommon warmth intervene.

But, during the laft fortnight, the alarm grows indeed a very ferious one: the eye can diftinguifh, even at a confiderable diftance, that the ice is foftened and detached from the banks; and you dread every ftep being death to those who have ftill the temerity to pass it, which they will continue always to do till one or more pay their rafhness with their lives.

From the time the ice is no longer a bridge on which you fee crowds driving with fuch vivacity on bufinefs or pleafure, every one is looking eagerly for its breaking away, to remove the bar to the conti-Vol. III. C nually nually wished and expected event, of the arrival of ships from that world from whence we have seemed to long in a manner excluded.

The hour is come; I have been with a crowd of both fexes, and all ranks, hailing the propitious moment: our fituation, on the top of Cape Diamond, gave us a profpect fome leagues above and below the town; above Cape Diamond the river was open, it was fo below Point Levi, the rapidity of the current having forced a paffage for the water under the transparent bridge, which for more than a league continued firm.

We flood waiting with all the eagernels of expectation; the tide came rufning with an amazing impetuofity; the bridge feemed to fhake, yet refifted the force of the waters; the tide recoiled, it made a paufe, it flood ftill, it returned with redoubled fury, the immense mass of ice gave way.

A vaft

A vaft plain appeared in motion'; it advanced with folemn and majeftic pace: the points of land on the banks of the river for a few moments itopped its progrefs; but the immenfe weight of fo prodigious a body, carried along by a rapid current, bore down all opposition with a force irrefiftible.

There is no defcribing how beautiful the opening river appears, every moment gaining on the fight, till, in a time lefs than can poffibly be imagined, the ice paffing Point Levi, is hid in one moment by the projecting land, and all is once more a clear plain before you; giving at once the pleafing, but unconnected, ideas of that direct intercourfe with Europe from which we have been fo many months excluded, and of the earth's again opening her fertile bofom, to feat our eyes and imagination with her various verdant and flowery productions.

I am afraid I have conveyed a very inadequate idea of the fcene which has just passed before me; it however struck me fo strongly, that it was impossible for me not to attempt it.

If my painting has the leaft refemblance to the original, your Lordship will-agree with me, that the very viciffitudes of feafon here partake of the fublimity which fo strongly characterizes the country.

The changes of feafon in England, being flow and gradual, are but faintly felt; but being here fudden, inftant, violent, afford to the mind, with the lively pleafure arifing from meer change, the very high additional one of its being accompanied with grandeur. I have the honor to be,

My Lord; _____

Your Lordship's, &c. WILLIAM FERMOR.

the first the start of

LET-

L-ETTER CXXX.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

in any it was a provin

April 22.

CERTAINLY, my dear, you are fo far right; a nun may be in many refpects 'a lefs' unhappy being than fome women who continue in the world; her fituation is, I allow, paradife to that of a married woman, of fenfibility and honor, who diflikes her hufband.

The cruelty therefore of fome parents here, who facrifice their children to avarice, in forcing or feducing them into convents, would appear more ftriking, if we did not fee too many in England guilty of the fame inhumanity, though in a different manner, by marrying them against their inclination.

Your

Your letter reminds me of what a French married lady here faid to me on this very fubject: I was exclaiming violently againft convents; and particularly urging, what I thought unanfwerable, the extreme hardfhip of one circumftance; that, however unhappy the ftate was found on trial, there was no retreat; that it was for life.

Madame De ---- turned quick, "And " is not marriage for life?"

" True, Madam; and, what is worle, " without a year of probation. I confeis " the force of your argument."

I have never dared fince to mention convents before Madame De ——.

Between you and I, Lucy, it is a little unreafonable that people will come together entirely upon fordid principles, and then wonder they are not happy: in delicate EMILY MONTAGUE. 31 licate minds, love is feldom the confequence of marriage.

It is not abfolutely certain that a marriage of which love is the foundation will be happy; but it is infallible, I believe, that no other can be fo to fouls capable of tendernefs.

Half the world, you will pleafe to obferve, have no fouls; at leaft none but of the vegetable and animal kinds: to this fpecies of beings, love and fentiment are entirely unneceffary; they were made to travel through life in a flate of mind neither quite awake nor afleep; and it is perfectly equal to them in what company they take the journey.

You and I, my dear, are fomething awakened; therefore it is neceffary we should love where we marry, and for this reafon: our fouls, being of the active kind, can never be totally at reft; therefore, if we were not to love our husbands,  $C_4$  we we fhould be in dreadful danger of loving fomebody elfe.

For my part, whatever tall maiden aunts and coulins may fay of the indecency of a young woman's diftinguishing one man from another, and of love coming after marriage; I think marrying, in that expectation, on fober prudent principles, a man one diflikes, the most deliberate and shameful degree of vice of which the human mind is capable.

6

I cannot help obferving here, that the great aim of modern education feems to be, to eradicate the beft impulfes of the human heart, love, friendfhip, compaffion, benevolence; to deftroy the focial, and encreafe the felfifh principle. Parents wifely attempt to root out thofe affections which fhould only be directed to proper objects, and which Heaven gave us as the means of happinefs; not confidering that the fuccefs of fuch an attempt is doubtful; and that, if they fucceed<sub>x</sub>.

ceed, they take from life all its fweetness, and reduce it to a dull unactive round of tasteless days, fcarcely raised above vegetation.

If my ideas of things are right, the human mind is naturally virtuous; the bufinefs of education is therefore lefs to give us good impreffions, which we have from nature, than to guard us against bad. ones, which are generally acquired.

The subtring the second states and

And fo ends my fermon.

Adieu! my dear !!

Your faithful:

A. FERMOR.

and the set

1 and entry have the timber of the hose is the hose exciting the hose heard from your bronter, and in firch south A antistre to the hose south A antistre to the hose and in the hose south A antistre to the hose antist antistre to the hose antistre to those antistre to the hose a

A letter from your brother; I believe the dear creature is out of his wits: Emily has confented to marry him, and one would imagine by his joy that nobody was ever married before.

He is going to Lake Champlain, to fix on his feat of empire, or rather Emily's; for I fee fhe will be the reigning queen, and he only her majefty's confort.

I am going to Quebec; two or three dry days have made the roads paffable for fummer carriages: Fitzgerald is come to fetch me. Adieu!

Alt. S.A.

The Market Start

1. ....

Eight o'clock.

I am come back, have feen Emily, who is the happieft woman exifting; fhe has heard from your brother, and in fuch terms terms—his letter breathes the very foul of tendernefs. I wifh they were richer. I don't half relifh their fettling in Canada; but, rather than not live together, I believe they would confent to be fet afhore on a defert ifland. Good night.

LETTER CXXXI.

To the Earl of ----.

Silleri, April 25.

THE pleafure the mind finds in travelling, has undoubtedly, my Lord, its fource in that love of novelty, that delight in acquiring new ideas, which is interwoven in its very frame, which fhews itfelf on every occasion from infancy to age, which is the first passion of the human mind, and the last.

C 6

There

There is nothing the mind of man abhors fo much as a flate of reft : the great fecret of happines is to keep the foul in continual action, without those violent exertions, which wear out its powers, and dull its capacity of enjoyment; it should have exercise, not labor.

Vice may justly be called the feverof the foul, inaction its lethargy; paflion; under the guidance of virtue; its health.

- , ľ ,

I have the pleafure to fee my daughter's toquetry giving place to a tender affection for a very worthy man, who feems formed to make her happy : his fortune is eafy; he is a gentleman, and a man of worth and honor, and, what perhaps inclines me to be more partial to him, of my own profession.

I mention the last circumstance in order to introduce a request, that your Lordship would to

would have the goodnefs to employ that intereft for him in the purchafe of a majority, which you have fo generoufly offered to me; I am determined, as there is no profpect of real duty, to quit the army, and retire to that quiet which is fo pleafing at my time of life: I am privately in treaty with a gentleman for my company, and propofe returning to England in the first ship, to give in my refignation: in this point, as well as that of ferving Mr. Fitzgerald, I shall without foruple call upon your Lordship's friendship.

I have fettled every thing with Fitzgerald, but without faying a word to Bell; and he is to feduce her into matrimony as foon as he can, without my appearing at all interested in the affair: he is to ask my confent in form, though we have already fettled every preliminary.

and and

All

All this, as well as my intention of quitting the army, is yet a fecret to my daughter.

But to the queftions your Lordship does me the honor to ask me in regard to the Americans, I mean those of our old colonies: they appear to me, from all I have heard and seen of them, a rough, ignorant, positive, very selfiss, yet hospitable people.

Strongly attached to their own opinions, but still more fo to their interests, in regard to which they have inconceivable fagacity and address; but in all other respects I think naturally inferior to the Europeans; as education does fo much, it is however difficult to ascertain this.

I am rather of opinion they would not have refufed fubmiffion to the ftamp act, or difputed the power of the legiflature at home, home, had not their minds been first embittered by what touched their interests fo nearly, the restraints laid on their trade with the French and Spanish settlements, a trade by which England was an immense gainer; and by which only a few enormously rich West India planters were hurt.

.0.

Every advantage you give the North Americans in trade centers at last in the mother country; they are the bees, who roam abroad for that honey which enriches the paternal hive.

Taxing them immediately after their trade is reftrained, feems like drying up the fource, and expecting the ftream to flow.

Yet too much care cannot be taken to fupport the majesty of government, and affert the dominion of the parent country.

A good

39

A good mother will confult the interest and happiness of her children, but will never fuffer her authority to be disputed.

An equal mixture of mildness and spirit cannot fail of bringing these mistaken people, missed by a few of violent temper and ambitious views, into a just fense of their duty.

I have the honor to be,

tation in the second second

ແລະເຫັນໄດ້ການເຊັ່ງທີ່ຈຳການເປັນສະບັນ ເປັນການ ທີ່ມີການເຊັ່ງການເປັນແຜ່ແຜ່ນີ້. ສຳມັນ ແມ່ນເຫັນ ແຕ່ສະຍະສຳຄັນ jun i.

*

· · · · ·

My Lord, &c.

WILLIAM FERMOR.

anof CI

.7736. 002

LET

LETTER CXXXII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

May 5.

I HAVE got my Emily again, to my great joy; I am nobody without her. As the roads are already very good, we walk and ride perpetually, and amufe ourfelves as well as we can, en attendant your brother, who is gone a fettlement hunting.

The quickness of vegetation in this country is aftonishing; though the hills are still covered with snow, and though it even continues in spots in the vallies, the latter with the trees and shrubs in the woods are already in beautiful verdure; and the earth every where putting forth flowers in a wild and lovely variety and profusion.

'Tis

'Tis amazingly pleafing to fee the ftrawberries and wild panfies peeping their little foolifh heads from beneath the fnow.

Emily and I are prodigioufly fond after having been feparated; it is a divine relief to us both, to have again the delight of talking of our lovers to each other: we have been a month divided; and neither of us have had the confolation of a friend to be foolifh to.

Fitzgerald dines with us: he comes.

Adieu! yours,

A. FERMOR.

LET-

LETTER CXXXIII.

To the Earl of -----

Silleri, May 5.

My Lord,

I HAVE been conversing, if the expression fion is not improper when I have not had an opportunity of speaking a syllable, more than two hours with a French officer, who has declaimed the whole time with the most astonishing volubility, without uttering one word which could either entertain or instruct his hearers; and even without starting any thing that deferved the name of a thought.

People who have no ideas out of the common road are, I believe, generally the greatest talkers, because all their thoughts are low enough for common conversation; whereas whereas those of more elevated underftandings have ideas which they cannot easily communicate except to persons of equal capacity with themselves.

This might be brought as an argument of the inferiority of womens underftanding to ours, as they are generally greater talkers, if we did not confider the limited and trifling educations we give them; men, amongft other advantages, have that of acquiring a greater variety as well as fublimity of ideas.

Women who have converfed much with men are undoubtedly in general the moft pleafing companions; but this only fhews of what they are capable when properly educated, fince they improve fo greatly by that accidental and limited opportunity of acquiring knowledge.

Indeed the two fexes are equal gainers, by conversing with each other: there is a mutual mutual defire of pleafing, in a mixed convertation, reftrained by politenefs, which fets every amiable quality in a ftronger light.

Bred in ignorance from one age to another, women can learn little of their own fex.

bargand of the tar a difference

I have often thought this the reafon why officers daughters are in general more agreeable than other women in an equal rank of life.

I am almost tempted to bring Bell as an instance; but I know the blindness and partiality of nature, and therefore check what paternal tenderness would dictate.

I am fhocked at what your Lordship tells me of Miss H—. I know her imprudent, I believe her virtuous: a great flow of spirits has been ever hurrying her 10 into into indifcretions; but allow me to fay, my Lord, it is particularly hard to fix the character by our conduct, at a time of life when we are not competent judges of our own actions; and when the hurry and vivacity of youth carries us to commit a thoufand follies and indifcretions, for which we blufh when the empire of reafon begins.

Inexperience and opennels of temper betray us in early life into improper connexions; and the very conftancy, and noblenels of nature, which characterize the beft hearts, continue the delufion.

I know Mifs H—— perfectly; and am convinced, if her father will treat her as a friend, and with the indulgent tendernels of affection endeavor to wean her from a choice fo very unworthy of her, he will infallibly fucceed; but if he treats her with harfhnefs, fhe is loft for ever.

Hè

He is too ftern in his behaviour, too rigid in his morals : it is the intereft of virtue to be reprefented as fhe is, lovely, fmiling, and ever walking hand in hand with pleafure : we were formed to be happy, and to contribute to the happinefs of our fellow-creatures; there are no real virtues but the focial ones.

'Tis the enemy of human kind who has thrown around us the gloom of fuperftition, and taught that aufterity and voluntary mifery is virtue.

If moralifts would indeed improve human nature, they fhould endeavor to expand, not to contract the heart; they fhould build their fystem on the passions and affections, the only foundations of the nobler virtues.

From the partial reprefentations of narrow-minded bigots, who paint the Deity from their own gloomy conceptions, the young young are too often frighted from the paths of virtue; defpairing of ideal perfections, they give up all virtue as unattainable, and ftart afide from the road which they falfely fuppofe ftrewed with thorns.

I have ftudied the heart with fome attention; and am convinced every parent, who will take the pains to gain his childrens friendship, will for ever be the guide and arbiter of their conduct : I speak from a happy experience.

Notwithstanding all my daughter fays in gaiety of heart, she would sooner even relinquish the man she loves, than offend a father in whom she has always found the tenderest and most faithful of friends. I am interrupted, and have only time to fay, I have the honor to be,

My Lord, &c.

WM. FERMOR.

LET-

LETTER CXXXIV.

the manufacture of the second states of

OI - DEMINISTING OF THE OF THE

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, May 13.

MADAME Des Roches has juft left us; fhe returns to-day to the Kamarafkas : fhe came to take leave of us, and fhewed a concern at parting from Emily, which really affected me. Sheis a moft amiable woman; yet I think my fweet friend is not forry for her return : fhe loves her, but yet cannot abfolutely forget fhe has been her rival, and is as well fatisfied that fhe leaves Quebec before your brother's arrival.

The weather is lovely; the earth is in all its verdure, the trees in foliage, and no fnow but on the fides of the mountains; we are looking eagerly out for fhips from dear England: I expect by Vol. III. D them them volumes of letters from my Lucy. We expect your brother in a week : in fhort, we are all hope and expectation; our hearts beat at every rap of the door, fuppofing it brings intelligence of a fhip, or of the dear man.

Fitzgerald takes fuch amazing pains to pleafe me, that I begin to think it is pity fo much attention fhould be thrown away; and am half inclined, from meer compaffion, to follow the example you have fo heroically fet me.

Abfolutely, Lucy, it requires amazing refolution to marry.

Adieu! yours,

A. FERMOR.

LET

· _____

LETTER CXXX-V.

To Colonel RIVERS, at Montreal.

Silleri, May 14.

A M returned, my Rivers, to my fweet friend, and have again the dear delight of talking of you without reftraint; fhe bears with, fhe indulges me in, all my weaknefs; if that name ought to be given to a tendernefs of which the object is the most exalted and worthy of his fex.

It was impoffible I fhould not have loved you; the foul that fpoke in those eloquent eyes told me, the first moment we met, our hearts were formed for each other; I faw in that amiable countenance a fensibility fimilar to my own, but which I had till then fought in vain; I faw there those benevolent fmiles, which D 2 are are the marks, and the emanations of virtue; those thousand graces which ever accompany a mind conficious of its own dignity, and fatisfied with itself; in short, that mental beauty which is the express image of the Deity.

What defence had I against you, my Rivers, fince your merit was fuch that my reason approved the weakness of my heart?

We have loft Madame Des Roches; we were both in tears at parting; we embraced, I preffed her to my bofom: I love her, my dear Rivers; I have an affection for her which I fcarce know how to defcribe. I faw her every day, I found infinite pleafure in being with her; fhe talked of you, fhe praifed you, and my heart was foothed; I however found it impoffible to mention your name to her; a referve for which I cannot account; I found pleafure in looking at her from the idea that fhe 5 was was dear to you, that fhe felt for you the tendereft friendship: do you know I think she has some refemblance of you? there is something in her smile, which gives me an idea of you.

Shall I, however, own all my folly? I never found this pleafure in feeing her when you were prefent : on the contrary, your attention to her gave me pain : I was jealous of every look ; I even faw her amiable qualities with a degree of envy, which checked the pleafure I fhould otherwife have found in her converfation.

There is always, I fear, fome injustice mixed with love, at least with love fo ardent and tender as mine.

You, my Rivers, will however pardon that injustice which is a proof of my excess of tenderness.

Madame Des Roches has promifed to write to me : indeed I will love her; I will D<sub>3</sub> conquer conquer this little remain of jealoufy, and do juffice to the most gentle and amiable of women.

Why fhould I diflike her for feeing you with my eyes, for having a foul whofe feelings refemble my own ?

I have observed her voice is fostened, and trembles like mine, when she names you.

My Rivers, you were formed to charm the heart of woman; there is more pleafure in loving you, even without the hope of a return, than in the adoration of all your fex: I pity every woman who is fo infenfible as to fee you without tendernefs. This is the only fault I ever found in Bell Fermor: fhe has the most lively friendfhip for you, but fhe has feen you without love. Of what materials must her heart be composed ?

No

EMILY MONTAGUE. 55 No other man can infpire the fame fentiments with my Rivers; no other man can deferve them : the delight of loving you appears to me fo fuperior to all other pleafures, that, of all human beings, if I was not Emily Montague, I would be Madame Des Roches.

I blufh for what I have written; yet why blufh for having a foul to diftinguifh perfection, or why conceal the real feelings of my heart?

I will never hide a thought from you; you shall be at once the confidant and the dear object of my tenderness.

In what words—my Rivers, you rule every emotion of my heart; difpofe as you pleafe of your Emily: yet, if you allow her to form a wifh in oppofition to yours, indulge her in the transport of returning you to your friends: let her receive you from the hands of a mother, whose happiness you ought to prefer even to hers.

D 4

Why

Why will you talk of the mediocrity of your fortune ? have you not enough for every real want ? much lefs, with you, would make your Emily bleft : what have the trappings of life to do with happinefs ? 'tis only facrificing pride to love and filial tendernefs; the worft of human paffions to the beft.

I have a thoufand things to fay, but am forced to fteal this moment to write to you: we have fome French ladies here, who are eternally coming to my apartment.

They are at the door. Adieu !

-1, 1, c2 ov. 1

11110:

Yours,

EMILY MONTAGUE.

LET-

LETTER CXXXVI.

To the Earl of —

Silleri, May 12.

T were indeed, my Lord, to be wifhed that we had here fchools, at the expence of the public, to teach English to the rising generation : nothing is a stronger tie of brotherhood and affection, a greater cement of union, than speaking one common language.

The want of attention to this circumftance has, I am told, had the worft effects poffible in the province of New York, where the people, efpecially at a diftance from the capital, continuing to fpeak Dutch, retain their affection for their ancient mafters, and ftill look on their  $D_5$  English English fellow subjects as strangers and intruders.

The Canadians are the more eafily to be won to this, or whatever elfe their own, or the general good requires, as their nobleffe have the ftrongeft attachment to a court, and that favor is the great object of their ambition : were Englifh made by degrees the court language, it would foon be univerfallyfpoke.

Of the three great fprings of the human heart, intereft, pleafure, vanity, the laft appears to me much the ftrongeft in the Canadians; and I am convinced the moft forcible tie their nobleffe have to France, is their unwillingnefs to part with their croix de St. Louis : might not thereforefome order of the fame kind be inftituted for Canada, and given to all who have the croix, on their fending back the enfigns they now wear, which are inconfiftent: with their allegiance as Britifh fubjects ? Might

Might not fuch an order be contrived, to be given at the difcretion of the governor, as well to the Canadian gentlemen who merited most of the government, as to the English officers of a certain rank, and fuch other English as purchased estates, and settled in the country? and, to give it additional lustre, the governor, for the time being, be always head of the order?

'Tis poffible fomething of the fame kind all over America might be alfo of fervice; the paffions of mankind are nearly the fame every where: at least I never yet faw the foil or climate, where vanity did not grow; and till all mankind become philofophers, it is by their paffions they must be governed.

The common people, by whom I mean the peafantry, have been great gainers here by the change of mafters;, their property is more fecure, their D 6 indepenindependence greater, their profits much more than doubled : it is not them therefore whom it is neceffary to gain.

The nobleffe, on the contrary, have been in a great degree undone : they have loft their employs, their rank, their confideration, and many of them their fortunes.

It is therefore equally confonant to good policy and to humanity that they fhould be confidered, and in the way most acceptable to them; the rich conciliated by little honorary diffinctions, those who are otherwise by fharing in all lucrative employs; and all of them by bearing a part in the legislature of their country.

The great objects here feem to be to heal those wounds, which past unhappy disputes have left still in some degree open; to unite the French and English, the civil and military, in one firm body; to to raife a revenue, to encourage agriculture, and efpecially the growth of hemp and flax; and find a ftaple, for the improvement of a commerce, which at prefent labors under a thoufand difadvantages.

But I shall fay little on this or any political fubject relating to Canada, for a reafon which, whilft I am in this colony, it would look like flattery to give : let it fuffice to fay; that, humanly speaking, it is impossible that the inhabitants of this, province should be otherwise than happy.

I have the honor to be,

My Lord, &c.

WILLIAM FERMOR,

LET-

LETTER CXXXVII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, May 20.

I CONFESS the fact, my dear; I am, thanks to papa, amazingly learned, and all that, for a young lady of twentytwo: yet you will allow I am not the worfe; no creature breathing would ever find it out: envy itfelf must confess, I talk of lace and blond like another chriftian woman.

I have been thinking, Lucy, as indeed my ideas are generally a little pindaric, how entertaining and improving would be the hiftory of the human heart, if people fpoke all the truth, and painted themfelves as they really are; that is to fay, if all the world were as fincere and honeft honeft as I am; for, upon my word, I have fuch a contempt for hypocrify, that, upon the whole, I have always appeared to have fewer good qualities than I really have.

EMILY MONTAGUE. 63.

I am afraid we fhould find in the beft characters, if we withdrew the veil, a mixture of errors and inconfiftencies, which would greatly leffen our veneration.

Papa has been reading me a wife lecture, this morning, on playing the fool : I reminded him, that I was now arrived at years of indifcretion; that every body must have their day; and that those who did not play the fool young, ran a hazard of doing it when it would not half fo well become them.

A propos to playing the fool, I am ftrongly inclined to believe I shall marry.

Fitzgerald

Fitzgerald is fo aftonifhingly preffing— Befides, fome how or other, I don't feel happy without him : the creature has fomething of a magnetic virtue ; I find myfelf generally, without knowing it, on the fame fide the room with him, and often in the next chair ; and lay a thoufand little fchemes to be of the fame party at cards.

I write pretty fentiments in my pocketbook, and carve his name on trees when nobody fees me : did you think it poffible I could be fuch an idiot ?

I am as abfurd as even the gentle lovefick Emily.

I am thinking, my dear, how happy it. is, fince most human beings differ so extremely one from another, that Heaven has given us the same variety in our tastes.

Your brother is a divine fellow, and yet there is a faucinefs about Fitzgerald which pleafes pleafes me better; as he has told me a thoufand times, he thinks me infinitely more agreeable than Emily.

Adieu 1 I am going to Quebec.

Yours,

A. FERMOR.

LETTER CXXXVIII.

TO Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

May 20, Evening.

IO triumphe! A fhip from England! You can have no idea of the univerfal transport at the fight; the whole town was on the beach, eagerly gazing at the charming stranger, who danced gaily on the waves, as if conscious of the pleasure she inspired.

If our joy is fo great, who preferve a correspondence with Europe, through our other colonies, during the winter, what must that of the French have been, who were absolutely shut up fix months from the rest of the world?

I can fcarce conceive a higher delight than they must have felt at being thus reftored to a communication with mankind.

The letters are not delivered; our fervant flays for them at the post-office; we expect him every moment: if I have not volumes from you, I shall be very angry.

He comes. Adieu ! I have not patience to wait their being brought up flairs.

State of

Yours,

A. FERMOR.

They

They are here; fix letters from you; I fhall give three of them to Emily to read, whilft I read the reft: you are very good, Lucy, and I will never call you lazy again.

LETTER CXXXIX.

To Miss FERMOR, at Silleri.

Pall Mall, April 8.

WHILST I was fealing my letter, I received yours of the 1st of February.

I am exceffively alarmed, my dear, at the account it gives me of Mifs Montague's having broke with her lover, and of my brother's extreme affection for her.

I did

I did not dare to let my mother fee that letter, as I am convinced the very idea of a marriage which must for ever feparate her from a fon fhe loves to idolatry, would be fatal to her; fhe is altered fince his leaving England more than you can imagine; she is grown pale and thin, her vivacity has entirely left her. Even my marriage scarce seemed to give her pleasure; yet fuch is her delicacy, her ardor for his happiness, she will not fuffer me to fay this to him, left it should constrain him, and prevent his making himfelf happy in his own way. I often find her in tears in her apartment; fhe affects a fmile when fhe fees me, but it is a finile which cannot deceive one who knows her whole foul as I do. In fhort, I am convinced fhe will not live long unless my brother returns. She never names him without being foftened to a degree not to be expreffed.

Amiable

Amiable and lovely as you reprefent this charming woman, and great as the facrifice is fhe has made to my brother, it feems almost cruelty to wish to break his attachment to her; yet, fituated as they are, what can be the confequence of their indulging their tenderness at prefent, but ruin to both?

At all events, however, my dear, I intreat, I conjure you, to prefs my brother's immediate return to England; I am convinced, my mother's life depends on feeing him.

I have often been tempted to write to Miss Montague, to use her influence with him even against herself.

If fhe loves him, fhe will have his true happiness at heart; she will confider what a mind like his must hereafter suffer, should his fondness for her be fatal to the best beft of mothers; fhe will urge, fhe will oblige him to return, and make this ftep the condition of preferving her tendernefs.

Read this letter to her; and tell her, it is to her affection for my brother, to her generofity, I truft for the life of a parent who is dearer to me than my existence.

Tell her my heart is hers, that I will receive her as my guardian angel, that we will never part, that we will be friends, that we will be fifters, that I will omit nothing poffible to make her happy with my brother in England, and that I have very rational hopes it may be in time accomplifhed; but that, if fhe marries him in Canada, and fuffers him to purfue his prefent defign, fhe plants a dagger in the bofom of her who gave him life.

I scarce

I fcarce know what I would fay, my dear Bell; but I am wretched; I have no hope but in you. Yet if Emily is all you reprefent her—

I am obliged to break off: my mother is here; fhe must not fee this letter.

Adieu ! your affectionate

LUCY TEMPLE.

LET

LETTER CXL.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

£

Silleri, May 21.

YOUR letter of the 8th of April, my dear, was first read by Emily, being one of the three I gave her for that purpose, as I before mentioned.

She went through it, and melting into tears, left the room without speaking a word: she has been writing this morning, and I fancy to you, for she enquired when the mail set out for England, and seemed pleased to hear it went to-day.

I am exceffively fhocked at your account of Mrs. Rivers: affure her, in my name, of your brother's immediate return; I know both him and Emily too well to believe they they will facrifice her to their own happinefs: there is nothing, on the contrary, they will not fuffer rather than even afflict her.

Do not, however, encourage an idea of ever breaking an attachment like theirs; an attachment founded lefs in paffion than in the tendereft friendship, in a similarity of character, and a sympathy the most perfect the world ever faw.

Let it be your bufinefs, my Lucy, to endeavor to make them happy, and to remove the bars which prevent their union in England; and depend on feeing them there the very moment their coming is pofiible.

From what I know of your brother, I fuppole he will infift on marrying Emily before he leaves Quebec; but, after your letter, which I fhall fend him, you may look on his-return as infallible.

Vol. III.

I send

I fend all yours and Temple's letters for your brother to-day: you may expect to hear from him by the fame mail with this.

I have only to fay, I am,

A. FERMOR.

LETTER CXLI.

To Colonel Rivers, at Quebec.

London, April 8.

MY own happinefs, my dear Rivers, in a marriage of love, makes me extremely unwilling to prevent your giving way to a tendernefs, which promifes you the fame felicity, with fo amiable a woman

EMILY MONTAGUE. 75 woman as both you and Bell Fermor reprefent Mifs Montague to be.

But, my dear Ned, I cannot, without betraying your friendship, and hazarding all the quiet of your future days, dispense with myself from telling you, though I have her express commands to the contrary, that the peace, perhaps the life, of your excellent mother, depends on your giving up all thoughts of a fettlement in America, and returning immediately to England.

I know the prefent ftate of your affairs will not allow you to marry this charming woman here, without defcending from the fituation you have ever held, and which you have a right from your birth to hold, in the world.

Would you allow me to gratify my friendship for you, and shew, at the same time, your perfect esteem for me, by commanding, what our long affection gives E 2 you you a right to, fuch a part of my fortune as I could eafily fpare without the leaft inconvenience to myfelf, we might all be happy, and you might make your Emily fo: but you have already convinced me, by your refufal of a former requeft of this kind, that your efteem for me is much lefs warm than mine for you; and that you do not think I merit the delight of making you happy.

I will therefore fay no more on this fubject till we meet, than that I have no doubt this letter will bring you immediately to us.

If the tenderness you express for Miss Montague is yet conquerable, it will furely be better for both it should be conquered, as fortune has been so much lefs kind to each of you than nature; but if your hearts are immoveably fixed on each other, if your love is of the kind which despises every other confideration, return to the bosom of friendship, and depend 6 on EMILY MONTAGUE. 77 on our finding fome way to make you happy.

If you perfift in refufing to fhare my fortune, you can have no objection to my ufing all my intereft, for a friend and brother fo defervedly dear to me, and in whofe happinefs I fhall ever find my own.

Allow me now to fpeak of myfelf; I mean of my dearer felf, your amiable fifter, for whom my tendernefs, inftead of decreasing, grows every moment ftronger.

Yes, my friend, my fweet Lucy is every hour more an angel : her defire of being beloved, renders her a thoufand times more lovely; a countenance animated by true tendernefs will always charm beyond all the dead uninformed features the hand of nature ever framed; love embellifhes the whole form, gives fpirit and foftnefs to the eyes, the moft vivid bloom to the complexion, dignity to the air,  $E_{3}$  grace grace to every motion, and throws round beauty almost the rays of divinity.

In one word, my Lucy was always more lovely than any other woman; fhe is now more lovely than even her former felf.

You, my Rivers, will forgive the overflowings of my fondness, because you know the merit of its object.

Adieu! We die to embrace you!

Your faithful

J. TEMPLE.

LET-

LETTER CXLII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, May 21.

YOUR letter, Madam, to Mifs Fermor, which, by an accident, was first read by me, has removed the veil which love had placed before mine eyes, and shewed me, in one moment, the folly of all those dear hopes I had indulged.

You do me but juftice in believing me incapable of fuffering your brother to facrifice the peace, much lefs the life, of an amiable mother, to my happinefs : I have no doubt of his returning to England the moment he receives your letters; but, knowing his tendernefs, I will not expofe him to a ftruggle on this occafion : I will E.4. myfelf, myfelf, unknown to him, as he is fortunately abfent, embark in a fhip which has wintered here, and will leave Quebec in ten days.

Your invitation is very obliging; but a moment's reflection will convince you of the extreme impropriety of my accepting it.

Affure Mrs. Rivers, that her fon will not lofe a moment, that he will probably be with her as foon as this letter; affure her alfo, that the woman who has kept him from her, can never forgive herfelf for what fhe fuffers.

I am too much afflicted to fay more than that

I am, Madam,

EMILY MONTAGUE.

LET-

LETTER CXLIII.

To Miss Montague, at Silleri.

Montreal, May 20.

I T is with a pleafure no words can express I tell my fweet Emily, I have fixed on a fituation which promifes every advantage we can wish as to profit, and which has every beauty that nature can give.

The land is rich, and the wood will more than pay the expence of clearing it; there is a fettlement within a few leagues, on which there is an extreme. agreeable family: a number of Acadians have applied to me to be received as fettlers: in fhort, my dear angel, all feems to fmile on our defign.

E 5

I have

I have fpent fome days at the house of a German officer, lately in our fervice, who is engaged in the fame defign, but a little advanced in it. I have feen him increasing every hour his little domain, by clearing the lands ; he has built a pretty house in a beautiful ruftic style: I have feen his pleafing labors with inconceivable delight. I already fancy my own fettlement advancing in beauty : I paint to myfelf my Emily adorning those lovely shades; I see her, like the mother of mankind, admiring a new creation. which finiles around her : we appear, to my idea, like the first pair in paradife.

I hope to be with you the ift of June: will you allow me to fet down the 2d as the day which is to affure to me a life of happines?

My

EMILY MONTAGUE. 83.

My Acadians, your new fubjects, are waiting in the next room to fpeak with me.

All good angels guard my Emily!

Adieu! Your

ED. RIVERS.

LETTER CXLIV.

TO Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, May 24.

E MILY has wrote to you, and appears more composed; fhe does not however tell me what fhe has refolved; fhe has only mentioned a defign of fpending a week at Quebec. I fuppose fhe will take no resolution till E 6 your your brother comes down : he cannot be here in lefs than ten days.

She has heard from him, and he has fixed on a fettlement : depend however on his return to England, even if it is not to ftay. I wifh he could prevail on Mrs. Rivers to accompany him back. The advantages of his defign are too great to lofe : the voyage is nothing ; the climate healthy beyond all conception.

I fancy he will marry as foon as he comes down from Montreal, fet off in the firft fhip for England, leave Emily with me, and return to us next year: at leaft, this is the plan my heart has formed.

I wifh Mrs. Rivers had borne his ablence better; her impatience to fee him has broken in on all our fchemes; Emily and I had in fancy formed a little Eden on Lake Champlain: Fitzgerald gerald had promifed me to apply for lands near them; we fhould have been fo happy in our little new world of friendship.

There is nothing certain in this vile ftate of existence: I could philosophize extremely well this morning.

All our little plans of amufement too for this fummer are now at an end; your brother was the foul of all our parties. This is a trifle, but my mind to-day feeks for every fubject of chagrin.

Let but my Emily be happy, and I will not complain, even if I lofe her : I have a thousand fears, a thousand uneasy reflections : if you knew her merit, you would not wish to break the attachment.

My fweet Emily is going this morning to Quebec; I have promifed to accompany her, and the now waits for me.

I can-

I cannot write : I have a heavinefs about my heart, which has never left me fince I read your letter. 'Tis the only difagreeable one I ever received from my dear Lucy : I am not fure I love you fo well as before I faw this letter. There is fomething unfeeling in the ftyle of it, which I did not expect from you.

Adieu! Your faithful

A. FERMOR.

LETTER CXLV.

TO Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, May 25.

I AM unhappy beyond all words; my fweet Emily is gone to England; the fhip failed this morning: I am just returned. EMILY MONTAGUE. 87 turned from the beach, after conducting her on board.

I used every art, every persuasion, in the power of friendship, to prevent her going till your brother came down; but all I faid was in vain. She told me, " fhe knew too well her own weaknefs. to hazard feeing him; that fhe alfo knew his tendernefs, and was refolved to fpare him the struggle between his affection and his duty; that she was determined never to marry him but withthe confent of his mother; that their meeting at Quebec, fituated as they were, could only be the fource of. unhappinefs to both; that her heart doated on him, but that she would never be the cause of his acting in a manner unworthy his character : that fhe would fee his family the moment. she got to London, and then retire to the house of a relation in Berkfhire, where fhe would wait for his arrival.

That

That she had given you her promise, which nothing should make her break, to embark in the first ship for England."

She expressed no fears for herself as to the voyage, but trembled at the idea of her Rivers's danger.

She fat down feveral times yesterday to write to him, but her tears prevented her: fhe at last affumed courage enough to tell him her defign; but it was in fuch terms as convinced me she could not have purfued it, had he been here.

She went to the fhip with an appearance of calmness that aftonished me; but the moment she entered, all her resolution forfook her: she retired with me to her room, where she gave way to all the agony of her soul.

The

The word was given to fail; I was fummoned away; fhe rofe haftily, fhe preffed me to her bofom, "Tell him," faid fhe, " his Emily"—fhe could fay no more.

Never in my life did I feel any forrow equal to this feparation. Love her, my Lucy; you can never have half the tendernefs for her fhe merits.

She ftood on the deck till the fhip turned Point Levi, her eyes fixed paffionately on our boat.

Twelve o'clock.

I have this moment a letter from your brother to Emily, which fhe directed me to open, and fend to her; I inclose it to you, as the fafeft way of conveyance: there is one in it from Temple to him, on the fame fubject with yours to me.

Adieu !

Adieu ! I will write again when my mind is more composed.

Yours,

A. FERMOR.

LETTER CXLVI.

To Miss MONTAGUE, at Silleri.

Montreal, May 28.

I T was my wifh, my hope, my nobleft ambition, my dear Emily, to fee you in a fituation worthy of you; my fanguine temper flattered me with the idea of feeing this wifh accomplifhed in Canada, though fortune denied it me in England.

The

The letter which I inclose has put an end to those fond delusive hopes: I must return immediately to England; did not my own heart dictate this step, I know too well the goodness of yours, to expect the continuance of your esteem, were I capable of purchasing happiness, even the happiness of calling you mine, at the expence of my mother's life, or even of her quiet.

I must now submit to see my Emily in an humbler situation; to see her want those pleasures, those advantages, those honors, which fortune gives, and which she has so nobly facrificed to true delicacy of mind, and, if I do not flatter myself, to her generous and disinterested affection for me.

Be affured, my dearest angel, the inconveniencies attendant on a narrow fortune, the only one I have to offer, shall be be foftened by all which the most lively efteem, the most perfect friendship, the tenderest love, can inspire; by that attention, that unwearied folicitude to please, of which the heart alone knows the value.

Fortune has no power over minds like ours; we poffefs a treafure to which all fhe has to give is nothing, the dear exquifite delight of loving, and of being beloved.

Awake to all the finer feelings of tenr efteem and elegant defire, we have very real good in each other.

I shall hurry down, the moment I have fettled my affairs here; and hope soon to have the transport of presenting the most charming of friends, of mistress allow me to add, of wives, to a mother whom I love and revere beyond words, and to whom she will soon be dearer than myself.

My

My going to England will detain me at Montreal a few days longer than I intended; a delay I can very ill fupport.

Adieu! my Emily! no language can exprefs my tendernefs or my impatience.

Your faithful

ED. RIVERS.

LETTER CXLVII.

To JOHN TEMPLE, Efq; Pall Mall.

Montreal, May 28.

I CANNOT enough, my dear Temple, thank you for your laft, though it deftroys my air-built fcheme of happinefs. Could Could I have fuppofed my mother would thus feverely have felt my absence, I had never left England; to make her easier, was my only motive for that step.

I with pleafure facrifice my defign of fettling here to her peace of mind; no confideration, however, fhall ever make me give up that of marrying the beft and most charming of women.

I could have wifhed to have had a fortune worthy of her; this was my wifh, not that of my Emily; fhe will with equal pleafure fhare with me poverty or riches: I hope her confent to marry me before I leave Canada. I know the advantages of affluence, my dear Temple, and am too reafonable to defpife them; I would only avoid rating them above their worth.

Riches undoubtedly purchafe a variety of pleafures which are not otherwife to be obtained; they give power, they give honors, they give confequence; but if, to 5 enjoy EMILY MONTAGUE. 95 enjoy these subordinate goods, we must give up those which are more effential, more real, more suited to our natures, I can never hesitate one moment to determine between them.

I know nothing fortune has to beftow, which can equal the transport of being dear to the most amiable, most lovely of womankind.

The stream of life, my dear Temple, stagnates without the gentle gale of love; till I knew my Emily, till the dear moment which assured me of her tenderness, I could scarce be faid to live.

Adieu!

Your affectionate

ED. RIVERS,

LET-

LETTER CXLVIII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, June 1.

I CAN write, I can talk, of nothing but Emily; I never knew how much I loved her till fhe was gone: I run eagerly to every place where we have been together; every fpot reminds me of her; I remember a thoufand converfations, endeared by confidence and affection: a tender tear ftarts in fpite of me: our walks, our airings, our pleafing little parties, all rufh at once on my memory: I fee the fame lovely fcenes around me, but they have loft half their power of pleafing.

I vifit every grove, every thicket, that fhe loved; I have a redoubled fondnefs for every object in which fhe took pleafure.

Fitzgerald

Fitzgerald indulges me in this enthufiafin of friendfhip; he leads me to every place which can recall my Emily's idea; he fpeaks of her with a warmth which fhews the fenfibility and goodnefs of his own heart; he endeayors to foothe me by the most endearing attention.

What infinite pleafure, my dear Lucy, there is in being truly beloved ! Fond as I have ever been of general admiration,' that of all mankind is nothing to the leaft mark of Fitzgerald's tendernefs.

and the set of the set

no no i star

Adieu ! it will be fome days before I can fend this letter.

June 4.

The governor gives a ball in honor of the day; I am dreffing to go, but without Vot. III. F my my fweet companion : every hour I feel more fenfibly her abfence.

5th.

We had last night, during the ball, the most dreadful storm I ever heard; it feemed to shake the whole habitable globe.

Heaven preferve my Emily from its fury ! I have a thoufand fears on her account.

Twelve o'clock.

Your brother is arrived; he has been here about an hour: he flew to Silleri, without going at all to Quebec; he enquired for Emily; he would not believe fhe was gone.

There

There is no expreffing how much he was fhocked when convinced fhe had taken this voyage without him; he would have followed her in an open boat, in hopes of overtaking her at Coudre, if my father had not detained him almost by force, and at last convinced him of the impossibility of overtaking her, as the winds, having been constantly fair, must before this have carried them out of the river.

He has fent his fervant to Quebec, with orders to take paffage for him in the first ship that fails; his impatience is not to be defcribed.

He came down in the hope of marrying her here, and conducting her himfelf to England; he forms to himfelf a thoufand dangers to her, which he fondly fancies his prefence could have averted : in fhort, he has all the unreafonablenefs of a man in love.

F 2

I pro-

I propose fending this, and a large packet more, by your brother, unless fome unexpected opportunity offers before.

Adieu! my dear!

Yours,

A. FERMOR.

LETTER CXLIX. To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

6th.

YOUR brother has taken his paffage in a very fine fhip, which will fail the toth; you may expect him every hour after you receive this; which I fend, with what I wrote yesterday, by a fmall vessel which fails a week fooner than was intended.

Rivers

Rivers perfuades Fitzgerald to apply for the lands which he had fixed upon on Lake Champlain, as he has no thoughts of ever returning hither.

I will prevent this, however, if I have any influence: I cannot think with patience of continuing in America, when my two amiable friends have left it; I had no motive? for wifhing a fettlement here, but to form a little fociety of friends, of which they made the principal part.

Befides, the fpirit of emulation would have kept up my courage, and given fire and brilliancy to my fancy.

Emily and I fhould have been trying who had the most lively genius at creation; who could have produced the fairest flowers; who have formed the woods and rocks into the most beautiful arbors, vistoes, grottoes; have taught  $F_3$  the the ftreams to flow in the most pleasing meanders; have brought into view the greatest number and variety of those lovely little falls of water with which this fairy land abounds; and shewed nature in the fairest form.

In fhort, we fhould have been continually endeavoring, following the luxuriancy of female imagination, to render more charming the fweet abodes of love and friendfhip; whilft our heroes, changing their fwords into plough-fhares, and engaged in more fubftantial, more profitable labors, were clearing land, raifing cattle and corn, and doing every thing becoming good farmers; or, to express it more poetically,

" Taming the genius of the stubborn " plain,

"Almoft as quickly as they conquer'd "Spain :"

By

By which I would be underftood to mean the Havannah, where, vanity apart, I am told both of them did their duty, and a little more, if a man can in fuch a cafe be faid to do more.

In one word, they would have been fludying the ufeful, to fupport us; we the agreeable, to pleafe and amufe them; which I take to be affigning to the two fexes the employments for which nature intended them, notwithftanding the vile example of the favages to the contrary.

There are now no farmereffes in Canada worth my contending with ; therefore the whole pleafure of the thing would be at an end, even on the fuppofition that friendfhip had not been the foul of our defign.

Say every thing for me to Temple and Mrs. Rivers; and to my deareft Emily, if arrived.

Adieu ! your faithful

A. Fermor. L E T-

F 4

LETTER CL.

To the Earl of —.

Silleri, June 6, 1767.

T is very true, my Lord, that the Jefuit miffionaries ftill continue in the Indian villages in Canada; and I am afraid it is no lefs true, that they ufe every art to inftill into those people an averfion to the English; at least I have been told this by the Indians themselves, who feem equally surprised and piqued that we do not fend missionaries amongst them.

Their ideas of Christianity are extremely circumfcribed, and they give no preference to one mode of our faith above. another; they regard a missionary of any nation as a kind father, who comes to instruct inftruct them in the beft way of worfhipping the Deity, whom they fuppofe more propitious to the Europeans than to themfelves; and as an ambaffador from the prince whofe fubject he is: they therefore think it a mark of honor, and a proof of efteem, to receive miffionaries; and to our remiffnefs, and the French wife attention on this head, is owing the extreme attachment the greater part of the favage nations have ever had to the latter.

The French miffionaries, by fludying their language, their manners, their tempers, their difpolitions; by conforming to their way of life, and uling every art to gain their efteem, have acquired an influence over them which is fcarce to be conceived; nor would it be difficult for ours to do the fame, were they judicioufly chofe, and properly encouraged.

F 5

- -

and the second to be the

. I believe

I believe I have faid, that there is a ftriking refemblance between the manners of the Canadians and the favages; I fhould have explained it, by adding, that this refemblance has been brought about, not by the French having won the favages to receive European manners, but by the very contrary; the peafants. having acquired the favage indolence in peace, their activity and ferocity in war; their fondness for field sports, their hatred of labor; their love of a wandering life, and of liberty; in the latter of which they have been in fome degree indulged, the laws here being much milder, and more favorable to the people, than in France.

Many of the officers alfo, and those of rank in the colony troops, have been adopted into the favage tribes; and there is stronger evidence than, for the honor of humanity, I would wish there was, that some of them have led the death dance at the execution of English captives, tives, have even partook the horrid repast, and imitated them in all their cruelties; cruelties, which, to the eternal difgrace, not only of our holy religion, but even of our nature, these poor people, whofe ignorance is their excufe, have been infligated to, both by the French and English colonies, who, with a fury truly diabolical, have offered rewards to those who brought in the scalps of their enemies. Rouffeau has taken great pains to prove that the most uncultivated nations are the most virtuous : I have all due respect for this philosopher, of whose writings I am an enthufiaftic admirer; but I have a still greater respect for truth. which I believe is not in this inftance on his fide.

There is little reafon to boaft of the virtues of a people, who are fuch brutal flaves to their appetites as to be unable to avoid drinking brandy to an excefs fcarce to be conceived, whenever it falls in their way, though eternally lamenting F 6 the the murders and other atrocious crimes of which they are fo perpetually guilty when under its influence.

It is unjust to fay we have corrupted them, that we have taught them a vice to which we are ourfelves not addicted; both French and English are in general fober: we have indeed given them the means of intoxication, which they had not before their intercourse with us; but he must be indeed fond of praising them, who makes a virtue of their having been fober, when water was the only liquor with which they were acquainted.

From all that I have obferved, and heard of these people, it appears to me an undoubted fact, that the most civilized Indian nations are the most virtuous; a fact which makes directly against Rousseau's ideal fystem.'

Indeed all fystems make against, instead of leading to, the discovery of truth.

Père

Père Lafitau has, for this reafon, in his very learned comparifon of the manners of the favages with those of the first ages, given a very imperfect account of Indian manners; he is even so candid as to own, he tells you nothing but what makes for the fystem he is endeavoring to establish.

My wifh, on the contrary, is not to make truth fubfervient to any favorite fentiment or idea, any child of my fancy; but to difcover it, whether agreeable or not to my own opinion.

My accounts may therefore be falle or imperfect from miltake or milinformation, but will never be defignedly warped from truth.

That the favages have virtues, candor must own; but only a love of paradox can make any man affert they have more than polished nations.

Your

Your Lordship asks me what is the general moral character of the Canadians; they are simple and hospitable, yet extremely attentive to interest, where it does not interfere with that laziness which is their governing passion.

They are rather devout than virtuous; have religion without morality, and a fenfe of honor without very ftrict honefty.

Indeed I believe wherever fuperfition reigns, the moral fenfe is greatly weakened; the ftrongeft inducement to the practice of morality is removed, when people are brought to believe that a few outward ceremonies will compenfate for the want of virtue.

I myfelf heard a man, who had raifed a large fortune by very indirect means, confefs his life had been contrary to every precept of the Gofpel; but that he hoped the pardon of Heaven for all his fins, as he

3

EMILY MONTAGUE. III he intended to devote one of his daughters to a conventual life as an expiation.

This way of being virtuous by proxy, is certainly very eafy and convenient to fuch finners as have children to facrifice.

By Colonel Rivers, who leaves us in a few days, I intend myfelf the honor of addreffing your Lordship again.

I have the honor to be

Your Lordship's, &c.

WM. FERMOR.

LET-

LETTER CLI.

To the Earl of ----.

Silleri, June 9.

Y OUR Lordfhip will receive this from the hands of one of the moft worthy and amiable men I ever knew, Colonel Rivers, whom I am particularly happy in having the honor to introduce to your Lordfhip, as I know your delicacy in the choice of friends, and that there are fo few who have your perfect efteem and confidence, that the acquaintance of one who merits both, at his time of life, will be regarded, even by your Lordfhip, as an acquifition.

'Tis to him I fhall fay the advantage I procure him, by making him known known to a nobleman, who, with the wifdom and experience of age, has all the warmth of heart, the generofity, the noble confidence, the enthufiafm, the fire, and vivacity of youth.

Your Lordship's idea, in regard to Protestant convents here, on the footing of that we visited together at Hamburgh, is extremely well worth the confideration of those whom it may concern; especially if the Romish ones are abolished, as will most probably be the case.

The nobleffe have numerous families, and, if there are no convents, will be at a lofs where to educate their daughters, as well as where to difpofe of thofe who do not marry in a reafonable time: the convenience they find in both refpects from thefe houfes, is one ftrong motive to them to continue in their ancient religion.

As I would however prevent the more uleful, by which I mean the lower, part of the fex from entering into this flate, I would wifh only the daughters of the feigneurs to have the privilege of becoming nuns : they fhould be obliged, on taking the vow, to prove their nobleffe for at leaft three generations ; which would fecure them refpect, and, at the fame time, prevent their becoming too numerous.

They fhould take the vow of obedience, but not of celibacy : and referve the power, as at Hamburgh, of going out to marry, though on no other confideration.

Your Lordship may remember, every nun at Hamburgh has a right of marrying, except the Abbess; and that, on your Lordship's telling the lady who then presided, and who was young and very handfome, you thought this a hardship, she anfwered with great spirit, "O, my Lord, you "know it is in my power to resign."

I refer your Lordship to Colonel Rivers for that farther information in regard to this colony, which he is much more able to give you than I am, having visited every part of Canada in the design of settling in it.

I have the honor to be,

My Lord, &c.

WM. FERMOR.

Your Lordship's mention of nuns has brought to my memory a little anecdote on this subject, which I will tell you.

I was, a few mornings ago, vifiting a French lady, whofe very handfome daughter, of almost fixteen, told me, fhe was going into a convent. I enquired which fhe had made choice of: fhe faid, " The " General Hofpital."

" I am

"I am glad, Mademoifelle, you have not chofe the Urfulines; the rules are fo very fevere, you would have found them hard to conform to."

" As to the rules, Sir, I have no objection to their feverity; but the habit of the General Hofpital-"

I fmiled.

* p | 12

" Is fo very light-"

" And fo becoming, Mademoifelle."

She fmiled in her turn, and I left her fully convinced of the fincerity of her vocation, and the great propriety and humanity of fuffering young creatures to choofe a kind of life fo repugnant to human nature, at an age when they are fuch excellent judges of what will make them happy.

LET-

the splitting strate to control of the second

LETTER CLII.

Uperior to State the unit proposition

1.15

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, June 9.

about to all to all.

SEND this by your brother, who fails to-morrow.

Time, I hope, will reconcile me to his and Emily's abfence; but at prefent I cannot think of lofing them without a dejection of mind which takes from me the very idea of pleafure.

I conjure you, my dear Lucy, to do every thing poffible to facilitate their union; and remember, that to your requeft, and to Mrs. Rivers's tranquillity, they they have facrificed every profpect they had of happinefs.

I would fay more; but my fpirits are fo affected, I am incapable of writing.

Love my fweet Emily, and let her not repent the generofity of her conduct.

Adieu!

Your affectionate

A. FERMOR.

LET-

LETTER CLIII.

ALL THE FILL DAY

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, June 10, Evening.

MY poor Rivers! I think I felt more from his going than even from Emily's: whilft he was here, I feemed not quite to have loft her: I now feel doubly the lofs of both.

He begged me to fhew attention to Madame Des Roches, who he affured me merited my tendereft friendship; he wrote to her, and has left the letter open in my care: it is to thank her, in the most affectionate terms, for her politeness and friendship, as well to himself as to his Emily; and to offer her his best fervices in England in regard to her estate, part of

of which fome people here have very ungeneroufly applied for a grant of, on pretence of its not being all fettled according to the original conditions.

He owned to me, he felt fome regret at leaving this amiable woman in Canada, and at the idea of never feeing her more.

I love him for this fenfibility; and for his delicate attention to one whofe difinterefted affection for him most certainly deferves it.

Fitzgerald is below, he does all poffible to confole me for the lofs of my friends; but indeed, Lucy, I feel their abfence most feverely.

I have an opportunity of fending your brother's letter to Madame Des Roches, which I must not lose, as they are not very 2 frequent:

frequent: 'tis by a French gentleman who is now with my father.

Adieu! Your faithful

A. FERMOR.

Twelve at night:

We have been talking of your brother; I have been faying, there is nothing I fo much admire in him as that tendernefs of foul, and almost female fensibility, which is fo uncommon in a fex, whose whole education tends to harden their hearts.

Fitzgerald admires his fpirit, his underftanding, his generofity, his courage, the warmth of his friendship.

My father his knowledge of the world; not that indifcriminate fufpicion of mankind which is falfely fo called; but that clearnefs of mental fight, and difcerning faculty, which can diftinguish virtue as well as vice, wherever it refides.

Vol. III. G "I alfo

" I also love in him," faid my father, that noble fincerity, that integrity of character, which is the foundation of all the virtues."

"And yet, my dear papa, you would "have had Emily prefer to him, that white "curd of affes milk, Sir George Clayton, "whofe higheft claim to virtue is the confitutional abfence of vice, and who never knew what it was to feel for the "forrows of another."

"You miftake, Bell: fuch a preference was impoffible; but fhe was engaged to 65 66 Sir George; and he had alfo a fine fortune. Now, in these degenerate days. " my dear, people must eat; we have lost 56 66 all tafte for the airy food of romances. 26 when ladies rode behind their enamored " knights, dined luxurioufly on a banquet " of haws, and quenched their thirst at " the first stream."

" But, my dear papa-"

" But,

EMILY MONTAGUE. 123<sup>c</sup> "But, my dear Bell—"

I faw the fweet old man look angry, fo chofe to drop the fubject; but I do aver, now he is out of fight, that haws and a pillion, with fuch a noble fellow as your brother, are preferable to ortolans and a coach and fix, with fuch a piece of ftill life and infipidity as Sir George.

Good night! my dear Lucy.

curres fragment contraction contracti contraction contraction contraction contraction

G 2

LET-

. . . . I of A. Las i . . .

Eut, an it of the -- '

LETTER CLIV.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

101 10 10 11 50 23 101.

Silleri, June 17.

Have this moment received a packet of letters from my dear Lucy; I shall only fay, in answer to what makes the greatest part of them, that in a fortnight I hope you will have the pleasure of seeing your brother, who did not hesitate one moment in giving up to Mrs. Rivers's peace of mind, all his pleasing prospects here, and the happiness of being united to the woman he loved.

You will not, I hope, my dear, forget his having made fuch a facrifice : but I think too highly of you to fay more on this fubject. You will receive Emily as a friend, as a fifter, who merits all your efteem EMILY MONTAGUE. 125 efteem and tendernefs, and who has loft all the advantages of fortune, and incurred the cenfure of the world, by her difinterested attachment to your brother.

I am extremely forry, but not furprized, at what you tell me of poor Lady H——. I knew her intimately; fhe was facrificed at eighteen, by the avarice and ambition of her parents, to age, difeafe, ill-nature, and a coronet; and her death is the natural confequence of her regret: fhe had a foul formed for friendship; fhe found it not at home; her elegance of mind, and native probity, prevented her feeking it abroad; fhe died a melancholy victim to the tyranny of her friends, the tenderness of her heart, and her delicate fense of honor.

If her father has any of the feelings of humanity left, what must he not fuffer on this occasion?

G 3

It is a painful confideration, my dear, that the happiness or milery of our lives are generally determined before we are proper judges of either.

Reftrained by cuftom, and the ridiculous prejudices of the world, we go with the crowd, and it is late in life before we dare to think.

How happy are you and I, Lucy, in having parents, who, far from forcing our inclinations, have not even endeavored to betray us into choofing from fordid motives! They have not labored to fill our young hearts with vanity or avarice; they have left us those virtues, those amiable qualities, we received from nature. They have painted to us the charms of friendship, and not taught us to value riches above their real price.

My

My father, indeed, checks a certain excefs of romance which there is in my temper; but, at the fame time, he never encouraged my receiving the addreffes of any man who had only the gifts of fortune to recommend him; he even advifed me, when very young, against marrying an officer in his regiment, of a large fortune, but an unworthy character.

If I have any knowledge of the human heart, it will be my own fault if I am not happy with Fitzgerald.

I am only afraid, that when we are married, and begin to fettle into a calm, my volatile difpofition will carry me back to coquetry: my paffion for admiration is naturally ftrong, and has been increafed by indulgence; for without vanity I have been extremely the tafte of the men.

G 4

I have

I have a kind of an idea it won't be long before I try the ftrength of my refolution, for I heard papa and Fitzgerald in high confultation this morning.

Do you know, that, having nobody to love but Fitzgerald, I am ten times more enamored of the dear creature than ever? My love is now like the rays of the fun collected.

He is fo much here, I wonder I don't grow tired of him; but fomehow he has the art of varying himfelf beyond any man I ever knew: it was that agreeable variety of character that first struck me; I confidered that with him. I should have all the fex in one; he fays the fame of me; and indeed, it must be owned we have both an infinity of agreeable caprice, which in love affairs is worth all the merit in the world.

- 1

Have

Have you never observed, Lucy, that the fame perfon is feldom greatly the object of both love and friendfhip?

Those virtues which command esteem do not often inspire passion.

Friendship seeks the more real, more folid virtues; integrity, constancy, and a steady uniformity of character: love, on the contrary, admires it knows not what; creates itself the idol it worships; finds charms even in defects; is pleased with follies, with inconsistency, with caprice: to fay all in one line,

"Love is a child, and like a child he "plays."

The moment Emily arrives, I entreat that one of you will write to me: no words can fpeak my impatience: I am equally anxious to hear of my dear G 5 Rivers.

130 THE HISTORY OF Rivers. Heaven fend them prosperous gales!

Adieu!

Your faithful 7 500 a Dia Strate Charles and i transformer a starter a start and the second second second 11-1-15.

A. FERMOR.

LETTER CLV.

1

TO Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, June 30.

Y OU are extremely miftaken, my dear, in your idea of the fociety here; I had rather live at Quebec, take it for all in all, than in any town in England, except London; the manner of living living here is uncommonly agreeable; the fcenes about us are lovely, and the mode of amufements makes us tafte those fcenes in full perfection.

Whilft your brother and Emily were here, I had not a wifh to leave Canada; but their going has left a void in my heart, which will not eafily be filled up: I have loved Emily almost from childhood, and there is a peculiar tenderness in those friendships, which "Grow with our growth, and ftrengthen "with our ftrength."

There was alfo fomething romantic and agreeable in finding her here, and unexpectedly, after we had been feparated by Colonel Montague's having left the regiment in which my father ferved.

In fhort, every thing concurred to make us dear to each other, and there-G 6 fore fore to give a greater poignancy to the pain of parting a fecond time.

As to your brother, I love him fomuch, that a man who had lefs candor and generofity than Fitzgerald, would be almost angry at my very lively friendship.

1 2 77 71

I have this moment a letter from Madame Des Roches; she laments the loss of our two amiable friends; begs me to affure them both of her eternal remembrance : fays, " fhe congratulates Emily " on poffeffing the heart of the man " on earth most worthy of being be-" loved; that she cannot form an idea " of any human felicity equal to that 46 of the woman, the business of whose " life it is to make Colonel Rivers happy. " That, Heaven having denied her that 66 happinefs, she will never marry, nor 66 enter into an engagement, which " would make it criminal in her to re-" member him with tendernefs : that it is, " however, EMILY MONTAGUE. 133 "however, fhe believes, beft for her he "has left the country, for that it is im-"poffible fhe fhould ever have feen him "with indifference."

It is perhaps as prudent not to mention these circumstances either to your brother or Emily; I thought of sending her letter to them, but there is a certain fire in her style, mixed with tenderness, when she speaks of Rivers, which would only have given them both regret, by making them see the excess of her affection for him; her expressions are much stronger than those in which I have given you the sense of them.

I intend to be very intimate with her, becaufe fhe loves my dear Rivers; fhe loves Emily too, at leaft fhe fancies fhe does, but I am a little doubtful as to the friendfhips between rivals: at this diffance, however, I dare fay, they will always continue on the beft terms poffible, and I would have Emily write to her.

2

Do

Do you know the has defired me to contrive to get her a picture of your brother, without his knowing it ? I am not determined whether I thall indulge her in this fancy or not; if I do, I muft employ you as my agent. It is madnefs in her to defire it; but, as there is a pleafure in being mad, I am not fure my morality will let me refuse her, fince pleafures are not very; thick fown in this world.

Adieu !

Your affectionate

- Loha The of the same

All in the survey

A STATE OF A

in the second second

State I and the second

A. FERMOR.

LET-

La E T'T E R I CLVI.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, July 10.

B<sup>Y</sup> this time, my dear Lucy, I hope you are happy with your brother and my fweet Emily: I am all impatience to know this from yourfelves; but it will be five or fix weeks, perhaps much more, before I can have that fatisfaction.

As to me-to be plain, my dear, I can hold no longer; I have been married this fortnight. My father wanted to keep it a fecret, for fome very foolifh reafons; but it is not in my nature; I hate fecrets, they are only fit for politicians, and people whofe thoughts and actions will not bear the light.

For

For my part, I am convinced the general loquacity of human kind, and our inability to keep fecrets without a natural kind of uneafinefs, were meant by Providence to guard againft our laying deep fchemes of treachery againft each other.

I remember a very fenfible man, who perfectly knew the world, ufed to fay, there was no fuch thing in nature as a fecret; a maxim as true, at leaft I believe fo, as it is falutary, and which I would advife all good mammas, aunts, and governeffes, to imprefs ftrongly on the minds of young ladies.

So, as I was faying, voilà Madame Fitzgerald!

This is, however, yet a fecret here; but, according to my prefent doctrine, and following the nature of things, it cannot long continue fo.

You Xou

You never faw fo polite a hufband, but I fuppole they are all fo the first fortnight, efpecially when married in fo interesting and romantic a manner; I am very fond of the fancy of being thus married as it were; but I have a notion I shall blunder it out very foon: we were married on a party to Three Rivers, nobody with us but papa and Madame Villiers, who have not yet published the mystery. I hear fome miss at Quebec are fcandalous about Fitzgerald's being fo much here; I will leave them in doubt a little, I think, merely to gratify their love of fcandal; every body should be amufed in their way.

Adieu! Yours,

A. FITZGERALD.

Pray

Pray let Emily be married ; every body marries but poor little Emily.

LETTER CLVII.

To the Earl of -----

Silleri, July 10.

I HAVE the pleafure to tell your Lordfhip I have married my daughter to a gentleman with whom I have reafon to hope fhe will be happy.

He is the fecond fon of an Irifh baronet of good fortune, and has himfelf about five hundred pounds a year, independent of his commission; he is a man of an excellent fense, and of honor, and has a very lively tenderness for my daughter.

It

It will, I am afraid, be fome time before I can leave this country, as I choofe to take my daughter and Mr. Fitzgerald with me, in order to the latter's foliciting a majority, in which purfuit I shall without scruple tax your Lordship's friendship to the utmost.

I am extremely happy at this event, as Bell's volatile temper made me fometimes afraid of her choofing inconfiderately: their marriage is not yet declared, for fome family reafons, not worth particularizing to your Lordfhip.

As foon as leave of absence comes from New York, for me and Mr. Fitzgerald, we shall settle things for taking leave of Canada, which I however affure your Lordship I shall do with some reluctance.

The

The climate is all the year agreeable and healthy, in fummer divine; a man at my time of life cannot leave this chearing, enlivening fun without reluctance; the heat is very like that of Italy or the South of France, without that oppreffive clofenels which generally attends our hot weather in England.

The manner of life here is chearful; we make the most of our fine fummers, by the pleasantest country parties you can imagine. Here are some very estimable persons, and the spirit of urbanity begins to diffuse itself from the centre : in short, I shall leave Canada at the very time when one would wish to come to it.

It is aftonishing, in a small community like this, how much depends on the perfonal character of him who governs.

041

- I am

EMILY, MONTAGUE. 141.

I am obliged to break off abruptly, the perfon who takes this to England being going immediately on board.

. I have the honor to be, 1) and it

My Lord,

Your Lordship's, &c.

WM: FERMOR.

LETTER CLVIII.

charter a betingut - an red and all

310 110 10 1 1.1 1 1 1 1 1

1 for a second and a

Contraction distant

TO JOHN TEMPLE, Efq; Pall Mall.

Silleri, July 13.

I AGREE with you, my dear Temple, that nothing can be more pleafing than an awakened English woman; of which you and my caro fposo have, I flatter myself, the happy happy experience; and with with you that the character was more common: but I muft own, and I am forry to own it, that my fair countrywomen and fellow-citizens (I fpeak of the nation in general, and not of the capital) have an unbecoming kind of referve, which prevents their being the agreeable companions, and amiable wives, which nature meant them.

From a fear, and I think a prudifh one, of being thought too attentive to pleafe your fex, they have acquired a certain diftant manner to men, which borders on ill-breeding : they take great pains to veil, under an affected appearance of difdain, that winning fenfibility of heart, that delicate tendernefs, which renders them doubly lovely.

They are even afraid to own their friendships, if not according to the square and rule; are doubtful whether a modest woman may own she loves even her huf-6 band; band; and feem to think affections were given them for no purpose but to hide.

Upon the whole, with at least as good a native right to charm as any women on the face of the globe, the English have found the happy fecret of pleasing less.

Is my Emily arrived ? I can fay nothing elfe.

Twelve o'clock.

I am the happiest woman in the creation: papa has just told me, we are to go home in fix or feven weeks.

Not but this is a divine country, and our farm a terrestrial paradise; but we have lived in it almost a year, and one grows tired of every thing in time, you know, Temple.

I_fhall

I shall see my Emily, and flirt with Rivers; to fay nothing of you and my little Lucy.

Adieu! I am grown very lazy fince I married; for the future, I shall make Fitzgerald write all my letters, except billet-doux, in which I think I excel him.

Yours,

A. FITZGERALD.

LETTER CLIX.

To Miss FERMOR, at Silleri.

Dover, July 8.

I AM this moment arrived, my dear Bell, after a very agreeable paffage, and am fetting out immediately for London, from whence I fhall write to you the moment I have have feen Mrs. Rivers; I will own to you I tremble at the idea of this interview, yet am refolved to fee her, and open all my foul to her in regard to her fon; after which, I fhall leave her the miftrefs of my deftiny; for, ardently as I love him, I will never marry him but with her approbation.

I have a thousand anxious fears for my Rivers's fafety : may Heaven protect him from the dangers his Emily has escaped!

and But it is an

I have but a moment to write, a fhip being under way which is bound to Quebec; a gentleman, who is just going off in a boat to the ship, takes the care of this.

May every happiness attend my dear girl! Say every thing affectionate for me to Captain Fermor and Mr. Fitzgerald.

Adieu! Yours,

H

EMILY MONTAGUE.

LET-

. . . . .

VOL. III.

LETTER CLX.

To Miss FERMOR, at Silleri.

London, July 19.

I GOT to town laft night, my dear, and am at a friend's, from whence I have this morning fent to Mrs. Rivers; I every moment expect her anfwer; my anxiety of mind is not to be expressed; my heart finks; I almost dread the return of my messed.

If the affections, my dear friend, give us the higheft happinefs of which we are capable, they are also the fource of our keeneft mifery; what I feel at this inftant, is not to be defcribed: I have been near refolving to go into the country without feeing or fending to Mrs. Rivers. If the fhould fhould receive me with coldnefs—why fhould I have exposed myself to the chance of fuch a reception? It would have been better to have waited for Rivers's arrival; I have been too precipitate; my warmth of temper has misled me: what had I to do to feek his family? I would give the world to retract my message, though it was only to let her know I was arrived; that her fon was well, and that she might every hour expect him in England.

There is a rap at the door: I tremble I know not why; the fervant comes up, he announces Mr. and Mrs. Temple: my heart beats, they are at the door.

THE LONG THE TO GALL &

One o'clock.

They are gone, and return for me in an hour; they infift on my dining with them, and tell me Mrs. Rivers is impatient to fee me. Nothing was ever fo polite, fo delicate, fo affectionate, as the behaviour of both; they faw my confusion, and did H 2 every.

every thing to remove it : they enquired after Rivers, but without the least hint of the dear interest I take in him: they fpoke of the happiness of knowing me: they afked my friendship, in a manner the most flattering that can be imagined. How strongly does Mrs. Temple, my dear, refemble her amiable brother ! her eyes have the fame fenfibility, the fame pleafing expression; I think I fcarce ever faw fo charming a woman; I love her already; I feel a tendernefs for her, which is inconceivable; I caught myfelf two or three times looking at her, with an attention for which I blufhed.

How dear to me is every friend of my Rivers!

- - -

14.1

I believe, there was fomething very foolifh in my behaviour; but they had the good-breeding and humanity not to feem to obferve it.

I had

I had almost forgot to tell you, they faid every thing obliging and affectionate of you and Captain Fermor.

and the party of the party has

My mind is in a state not to be defcribed; I feel joy, I feel anxiety, I feel doubt, I feel a timidity I cannot conquer at the thought of feeing Mrs. Rivers.

I have to drefs; therefore must finish this when I return.

Le La China

Twelve at night.

I am come back, my deareft Bell; I have gone through the fcene I fo much dreaded, and am aftonifhed I fhould ever think of it but with pleafure. How much did I injure this moft amiable of women! Her reception of me was that of a tender parent, who had found a long-loft child; H 3 fbe the kiffed me, the prefied me to her bofom; her tears flowed in abundance; the called me her daughter, her other Lucy: the afked me a thoufand queftions of her fon; the would know all that concerned him, however minute: how he looked, whether he talked much of her, what were his amufements; whether he was as handfome as when he left England.

I answered her with fome hesitation, but with a pleasure that animated my whole foul; I believe, I never appeared to such advantage as this day.

. . . . . . . .

You will not afcribe it to an unmeaning vanity, when I tell you, I never took fuch pains to pleafe; I even gave a particular attention to my drefs, that I might, as much as possible, justify my Rivers's tenderness: I never was vain for myself; but I am fo for him: I am indifferent to admiration as Emily Montague; but as the object of his love, I would would be admired by all the world; I wifh to be the first of my fex in all that is amiable and lovely, that I might make a facrifice worthy of my Rivers, in shewing to all his friends, that he only can inspire me with tenderness, that I live for him alone.

Mrs. Rivers prefied me extremely to pais a month with her : my heart yielded too eafily to her requeft; but I had courage to refift my own wifhes, as well as her folicitations; and fhall fet out in three days for Berkshire : I have, however, promifed to go with them to-morrow, on a party to Richmond, which Mr. Temple was fo obliging as to propose on my account.

Late as the feafon is, there is one more fhip going to Quebec, which fails tomorrow.

H 4

1. 11112

, id

You

You shall hear from me again in a few days by the packet.

Adieu! my dearest friend!

Your faithful

EMILY MONTAGUE

Surely it will not be long before Rivers arrives; you, my dear Bell, will judge what must be my anxiety till that moment.

LETTER CLXI.

To Captain FERMOR, at Silleri.

Dover, July 24, eleven o'clock.

I AM arrived, my dear friend, after a paffage agreeable in itfelf; but which my fears for Emily made infinitely anxious and painful; every wind that blew, EMILY MONTAGUE. 153 blew, I trembled for her; I formed to myself ideal dangers on her account, which reafon had not power to diffipate.

We had a very tumultuous head-fea a great part of the voyage, though the wind was fair; a certain fign there had been ftormy weather, with a contrary wind. I fancied my Emily exposed to those ftorms; there is no expressing what I fuffered from this circumstance.

On entering the Channel of England, we faw an empty boat, and fome pieces of a wreck floating; I fancied it part of the thip which conveyed my lovely Emily; a. fudden chillnefs feized my whole frame, my heart died within me at the fight : I had fcarce courage, when I landed, to enquire whether fhe was arrived.

I asked the question with a trembling voice, and had the transport to find the ship had passed by, and to hear the perfon of my Emily defcribed amongst the H 5 passengers passengers who landed ; it was not easy to mistake her.

I hope to fee her this evening : what do I not feel from that dear hope !

Chance gives me an opportunity of forwarding this by New York; I write whilf my chaife is getting ready.

Adieu! Yours,

for the state

ED. RIVERS.

I shall write to my dear little Bell as soon as I get to town. There is no deforibing what I felt at first feeing the coast of England : I saw the white cliffs with a transport mixed with veneration; a transport, which, however, was checked by my fears for the dearer part of myself.

EMILY MONTAGUE. 155 My chaife is at the door.

Adieu!

Your faithful, &c. Ed. Rivers.

LETTER CLXII.

and have made in the 1 1.

To Miss FERMOR, at Silleri.

Rochefter, July 24.

A M obliged to wait ten minutes for a Canadian gentleman who is with me, and has fome letters to deliver here : how painful is this delay ! But I cannot leave a ftranger alone on the road, though I lofe fo many minutes with my charming Emily.

To foften this moment as much as poffible, I will begin a letter to my dear Bell: our fweet Emily is fafe; I wrote to Captain Fermor this morning:

My heart is gay beyond words: my fellow-traveller is aftonifhed at the beauty and riches of England, from what he has feen of Kent: for my part, I point out every fine profpect, and am fo proud of my country, that my whole foul feems to be dilated; for which perhaps there are other reafons. The day is fine, the numerous herds and flocks on the fide of the hills, the neatnefs of the houfes, of the people, the appearance of plenty; all exhibit a fcene which muft ftrike one who has been ufed only to the wild graces of nature.

Canada has beauties; but they are of another kind.

This unreasonable man; he has no mistress to see in London; he is not expected EMILY MONTAGUE. 157 pected by the most amiable of mothers, by a family he loves as I do mine.

I will order another chaife, and leave my fervant to attend him.

He comes. Adieu! my dear little Bell! at this moment a gentleman is come into the inn, who is going to embark at Dover for New York; I will fend this: by him. Once more adieu!

and the Relation on the base of the anisona i a la filo a called and imited, at the

- The of an income ping a local dow of all a france the state of the of the basis in the basis of the Lorent

· · · · · · · · · · · ·

LET-

peder by the took and that all malers, but

LETTER CLXIII.

To Miss FERMOR, at Silleri.

trolle pour recent intel of

Clarges-Street, July 25-11

And Britis & Thising I

I AM the only perfor here, my dear Bell, enough composed to tell you Rivers is arrived in town. He stopped in his post-chaise, at the end of the street, and sent for me, that I might prepare my mother to see him, and prevent a surprize which might have hurried her spirits too much.

I came back, and told her I had feen a gentleman who had left him at Dover, and that he would foon be here; he followed me in a few minutes.

I am not painter enough to defcribe their meeting; tho' prepared, it was with difficulty difficulty we kept my mother from fainting; fhe preffed him in her arms, fhe attempted to fpeak, her voice faltered, tears stole foftly down her cheeks: nor was Rivers lefs affected, though in a different manner; I never faw him look fo handfome; the manly tendernefs, the filial refpect, the lively joy, that were expressed in his countenance, gave him a look to which it is impoffible to do justice: he hinted going down to Berkshire to-night; but my mother feemed fo hurt at the propofal, that he wrote to Emily, and told her his reason for deferring it till to-morrow, when we are all to go in my coach, and hope to bring her back with us to town.

You judge rightly, my dear Bell, that they were formed for each other; never were two minds fo fimilar; we must contrive fome method of making them happy: nothing but a too great delicacy in Rivers prevents their being fo to-morrow; row; were our fituations changed, I fhould not hefitate a moment to let him make me fo.

Lucy has fent for me. Adieu !

Believe me,

Your faithful and devoted,

J. TEMPLE.

LETTER CLXIV.

To Mifs FERMOR, at Silleri.

Pall Mall, July 29:

A M the happieft of human beings: my Rivers is arrived, he is well, he loves me; I am dear to his family; I fee him him without reftraint; I am every hour more convinced of the excess of his affection: his attention to me is inconceivable; his eyes every moment tell me, I am dearer to him than life.

and in other a ment

I am to be for fome time on a vifit to his fifter; he is at Mrs. Rivers's, but we are always together: we go down next week to Mr. Temple's, in Rutland; they only ftayed in town, expecting Rivers's arrival. His feat is within fix miles of Rivers's little paternal eftate, which he fettled on his mother when he left England, the preffes him to refume it, but he peremptorily refufes; he infifts on her continuing her houfe in town, and being perfectly independent, and miftrefs of herfelf.

I love him a thousand times more for this tenderness to her; though it disappoints my dear hope of being his.

his. Did I think it poffible, my dear Bell, he could have rifen higher in my efteem? I all that the ways of all all a

If we are never united, if we always live as at prefent, his tendernefs will ftill make the delight of my life; to fee him, to hear that voice, to be his friend, the confidance of all his purposes, of all his defigns, to hear the fentiments of that generous, that exalted foul—I would not give up this delight, to be emprefs of the world.

My ideas of affection are perhaps un common ; but they are not the lefs juft, nor the lefs in nature.

A blind man may as well judge of colors as the mafs of mankind of the fentiments of a truly-enamored heart.

The fenfual and the cold will equally condemn my affection as romantic; few minds, minds, my dear Bell, are capable of love; they feel paffion, they feel efteem; they even feel that mixture of both which is the beft counterfeit of love; but of that vivifying fire, that lively tendernefs which hurries us out of ourfelves, they know nothing; that tendernefs which makes us forget ourfelves, when the intereft, the happinefs, the honor, of him we love is concerned; that tendernefs which renders the beloved object all that we fee in the creation.

Yes, my Rivers, I live, I breathe, I exift, for you alone : be happy, and your Emily is fo.

My dear friend, you know love, and will therefore bear with all the impertinence of a tender heart.

I hope you have by this time made Fitzgerald happy; he deferves you, amiable as you are, and you cannot too foon foon convince him of your affection: you fometimes play cruelly with his tendernefs: I have been aftonished to fee you torment a heart which adores you:

I am interrupted.

1

· · ·

Adieu ! my dear Bell.

Your affectionate

- EMILY MONTAGUE.

LETTER CLXV.

2 .

To Captain FERMOR, at Silleri.

Clarges-Street, Aug. 1.

LORD — not being in town, I went to his villa at Richmond, to deliver your letter.

I cannot

I cannot enough, my dear Sir, thank you for this introduction; I passed part of the day at Richmond, and never was more pleasingly entertained.

His politeness, his learning, his knowledge of the world, however amiable, are in character at his feason of life; but his vivacity is aftonishing.

What fire, what fpirit, there is in his conversation ! I hardly thought myself a young man near him. What must he have been at five-and-twenty?

He defired me to tell you, all his interest should be employed for Fitzgerald, and that he wished you to come to England as soon as possible.

. .....

We

We are just fetting off for Temple's house in Rutland.

is the day of the bar is the set in

Adieu !

Your-affectionate

- L'unde a rismi

ED. Rivers.

LETTER CLXVI.

and to all the program on and built

To Captain FERMOR, at Silleri.

as at in family

Temple-house, Aug. 4.

I ENJOY, my dear friend, in one of the pleafantest houses, and most agreeable situations imaginable, the society of the four perfons in the world most dear to me; I am in all respects as much much at home as if mafter of the family, without the cares attending that flation; my wifnes, my defires, are prevented by Temple's attention and friendfhip, and my mother and fifter's amiable anxiety to oblige me; I find an unfpeakable foftnefs in feeing my lovely Emily every moment, in feeing her adored by my family, in feeing her adored by my family, in feeing her without reftraint, in being in the fame houfe, in living in that eafy converfe which is born from friendfhip alone : yet I am not happy.

It is that we lose the present happiness in the pursuit of greater : I look forward with impatience to that moment which will make Emily mine; and the difficulties, which I fee on every fide arising, embitter hours which would otherwise be exquisitely happy.

The narrownels of my fortune, which I fee in a much ftronger light in this land of luxury, and the apparent impoffibility 5 of 1 11 -

- - - · · · ·

of placing the most charming of women in the station my heart wishes, give me anxieties which my reason cannot conquer.

I cannot live without her, I flatter myfelf our union is in fome degree neceffary to her happines; yet I dread bringing her into diftreffes, which I am doubly obliged to protect her from, because she would with transport meet them all, from tenderness to me.

I have nothing which I can call my own, but my half-pay, and four thoufand pounds: I have lived amongft the firft company in England; all my connexions have been rather fuited to my birth than fortune. My mother preffes me to refume my eftate, and let her live with us alternately; but againft this I am firmly determined; fhe fhall have her own houfe, and never change her manner of living.

б

Temple

Temple would fhare his effate with me, if I would allow him; but I am too fond of independence to accept favors of this kind even from him.

I have formed a thoufand fchemes, and as often found them abortive; I go to-morrow to fee our little effate, with my mother; it is a private party of our own, and nobody is in the fecret; I will there talk over every thing with her.

My mind is at prefent in a ftate of confusion not to be expressed; I must determine on something; it is improper Emily should continue long with my fister in her present situation; yet I cannot live without seeing her.

I have never afked about Emily's fortune; but I know it is a fmall one; perhaps two thousand pounds; I am pretty certain, not more.

Vol. III.

We

We can live on little, but we muft live in fome degree on a genteel footing : I cannot let Emily, who refufed a coach and fix for me, pay vifits on foot; I will be content with a post-chaife, but cannot with lefs; I have a little, a very little pride, for my Emily.

I wifh it were poffible to prevail on my mother to return with us to Canada : I could then reconcile my duty and happinefs, which at prefent feem almost incompatible.

Emily appears perfectly happy, and to look no further than to the fituation in which we now are ; fhe feems content with being my friend only, without thinking of a nearer connexion ; I am rather piqued at a composure which has the air of indifference: why fhould not her impatience equal mine ?

The coach is at the door, and my mother waits for me.

Every

Every happiness attend my friend, and all connected with him! in which number I hope I may, by this time, include Fitzgerald.

Adieu! d'al s'a mining . C'

-int sector do la list de la bun el , el ?

vera contractor and antivera contractor anticontractor interactor to total anti-and show any other than the state of the

Your affectionate

ED. RIVERS,

ali is anista a

I.F.T.

LETTER CLXVII.

a la ve la si la ve revel

To Captain FERMOR, at Silleri.

54 - 3 's, - 3Y

Aug. 6.

I HAVE been taking an exact furvey of the houfe and eftate with my mother, in order to determine on fome future plan of life.

'Tis inconceivable what I felt on returning to a place fo dear to me, and which I had not feen for many years; I ran hastily from one room to another; I traversed the garden with inexpressible eagerness: -my eye devoured every object; there was not a tree, not a bush, which did not revive fome pleafing, fome foft idea.

I felt,

I felt, to borrow a very pathetic expreffion of Thomson's,

A thousand little tendernesses throb," on revifiting those dear scenes of infant happiness; which were increased by having with me that estimable, that affectionate mother, to whose indulgence all my happiness had been owing.

But to return to the purpofe of our vifit : the houfe is what most people would think too large for the estate, even had I a right to call it all my own; this is, however, a fault, if it is one, which I can easily forgive.

There is furniture enough in it for my family, including my mother; it is unfafhionable, but fome of it very good: and I think Emily has tendernefs enough for me to live with me in I 3 a houfe, a house, the furniture of which is not perfectly in tafte.)

In fhort, I know her much above having the flightest wish of vanity, where it comes in competition with love.

. English

We can, as to the houfe, live here commodioufly enough; and our only prefent confideration is, on what we are to live: a confideration, however, which as lovers, I believe in ftrictnefs we ought to be much above!

My mother again folicits me to refume this effate; and has proposed my making over to her my half-pay instead of it, though of much less value, which, with her own two hundred pounds a year, will, she fays, enable her to continue her house in town, a point I am determined never to fuffer her to give up; because the loves London; and because I insist on her having her own house to go to, if the should ever chance to be displeased with ours.

I am

I am inclined to like this propofal: Temple and I will make a calculation; and, if we find it will anfwer every neceffary purpofe to my mother, I owe it to Emily to accept of it.

I endeavor to perfuade myfelf, that I am obliging my mother, by giving her an opportunity of flewing her generofity, and of making me happy: I have been in fpirits ever fince fle mentioned it.

I have already projected a million of improvements; have taught new ftreams to flow, planted ideal groves, and walked, fancy-led, in fhades of my own raifing.

The fituation of the house is enchanting; and with all my passion for the favage luxuriance of America, I begin to find my taste return for the more mild and regular charms of my native country.

I4

We

We have no Chaudieres, no Montmorencis, none of those magnificent scenes on which the Canadians have a right to pride themselves; but we excel them in the lovely, the smilling; in enameled meadows, in waving corn-fields, in gardens the boast of Europe; in every elegant art which adorns and softens human life; in all the riches and beauty which cultivation can give.

I begin to think I may be bleft in the poffeffion of my Emily, without betraying her into a ftate of want; we may, I begin to flatter myfelf, live with decency, in retirement; and, in my opinion, there are a thoufand charms in retirement with those we love.

Upon the whole, I believe we shall be able to live, taking the word live in the fense of lovers, not of the beau monde, who will never allow a little country squire of four hundred pounds a year to live.

Time

Time may do more for us; at leaft, I am of an age and temper to encourage hope.

All here are perfectly yours.'

Adieu! my dear friend.'

Your affectionate

.

ED. RIVERS

LET-

And the second s

L E T T E R CLXVIII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, Aug. 6.

HE leave of absence for my father and Fitzgerald being come fome weeks sooner than we expected, we propose leaving Canada in five or fix days.

I am delighted with the idea of revifiting dear England, and feeing friends whom I fo tenderly love: yet I feel a regret, which I had no idea I fhould have felt, at leaving the fcenes of a thoufand paft pleafures; the murmuring rivulets to which Emily and I have fat liftening, the fweet woods where I have walked with my little circle of friends: I have even a ftrong attachment to the fcenes themfelves, which are infinitely lovely, and fpeak the inimitable hand of nature which formed tnem: I want to transport this fairy ground to England.

of

I figh when I pass any particularly charming spot; I feel a tenderness beyond what inanimate objects seem to merit.

I must pay one more visit to the naiads of Montmorenci.

Eleven at night.

I am just come from the general's affembly; where, I should have told you, I was this day fortnight announced Madame Fitzgerald, to the great mortification of two or three cats, who had very fagaciously determined, that Fitzgerald had too much understanding ever to I 6 think 180 THE HISTORY OF think of fuch a flirting, coquetifh creature as a wife.

I was grave at the affembly to-night, in fpite of all the pains I took to be otherwife: I was hurt at the idea it would probably be the laft at which I fhould be; I felt a kind of concern at parting, not only with the few I loved, but with thofe who had till to-night been indifferent to me.

There is fomething affecting in the idea of the last time of feeing even those perfons or places, for which we have no particular affection.

I go to-morrow to take leave of the nuns, at the Urfuline convent; I fuppofe I shall carry this melancholy idea with me there, and be hurt at feeing them too for the last time.

I pay visits every day amongst the peafants, who are very fond of me. I talk to them of their farms, give money to their children, children, and teach their wives to be good hufwives: I am the idol of the country people five miles round, who declare me the moft amiable, moft generous woman in the world, and think it a thoufand pities I fhould be damned.

Adieu! Say every thing for me to my fweet friends, if arrived.

7th, Eleven o'clock.

I have this moment a large packet of letters for Emily from Mrs. Melmoth, which I intend to take the care of myfelf, as I hope to be in England almost as foon as this.

Good morrow!

Yours ever, &c.

A. FITZGERALD,

f am

Three o'clock.

I am just come from visiting the nuns; they expressed great concern at my leaving Canada, and promised me their prayers on my voyage; for which proof of affection, though a good protestant, I thanked them very funcerely.

I wished exceedingly to have brought fome of them away with me; my nun, as they call the amiable girl I faw take the veil, paid me the flattering tribute of a tear at parting; her fine eyes had a concern in them, which affected me extremely.

I was not lefs pleafed with the affection the late fuperior, my good old countrywoman, expressed for me, and her regret at seeing me for the last time.

Surely there is no pleafure on earth equal to that of being beloved ! I did not think think I had been fuch a favorite in Canada : it is almost a pity to leave it ; perhaps nobody may love me in England.

Yes, I believe Fitzgerald will; and I have a pretty party enough of friends in your family.

Adieu! I shall write a line the day we embark, by another ship, which may posfibly arrive before us.

LETTER CLXIX.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, Aug. 11.

WE embark to-morrow, and hope to fee you in lefs than a month, if this fine wind continues.

I am

I am just come from Montmorenci, where I have been paying my devotions to the tutelary deities of the place for the last time.

I had only Fitzgerald with me; we vifited every grotto on the lovely banks, where we dined; kiffed every flower, raifed a votive altar on the little ifland, poured a libation of wine to the river goddefs; and, in fhort, did every thing which it became good heathens to do.

We ftayed till day-light began to decline, which, with the idea of the last time, threw round us a certain melancholy folemnity; a folemnity which

- " Deepen'd the murmur of the falling "floods,
- " And breath'd a browner horror on the woods."

I have twenty things to do, and but a moment to do them in. Adieu !

I am

I am called down; it is to Madame Des Roches: fhe is very obliging to come thus far to fee me.

12th.

We go on board at one; Madame Des Roches goes down with us as far as her eftate, where her boat is to fetch her on fhore. She has made me a prefent of a pair of extreme pretty bracelets; has fent your brother an elegant fword-knot, and Emily a very beautiful crofs of diamonds.

I don't believe fhe would be forry if we were to run away with her to England: I proteft I am half inclined; it is pity fuch a woman fhould be hid all her life in the woods of Canada: befides, one might convert her you know; and, on a religious principle, a little deviation from rules is allowable.

Your brother is an admirable miffionary amongst unbelieving ladies : I really think. I shall carry her off; if it is only for the good of her soul.

I have but one objection; if Fitzgerald fhould take a fancy to prefer the tender to the lively, I fhould be in fome danger: there is fomething very feducing in her eyes, I affure you.

LET-

and a phan and

- A contract - they

LETTER CLXX.

Contage post

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Kamaraskas, Aug. 14.

BY Madame Des Roches, who is going on fhore, I write two or three lines, to tell you we have got thus far, and have a fair wind; fhe will fend it immediately to Quebec, to be put on board any fhip going, that you may have the greater variety of chances to hear of me.

There is a French lady on board, whofe fuperfition bids fair to amufe us; fhe has thrown half her little ornaments overboard for a wind, and has promifed I know not how many votive offerings of the fame kind to St. Jofeph, the patron of Canada, if we get fafe to land; on which fhallI

I fhall only obferve, that there is nothing fo like ancient abfurdity as modern: fhe has claffical authority for this manner of playing the fool; Horace, when afraid on a voyage, having, if my memory quotes fair, vowed

" His dank and dropping weeds

" To the ftern god of fea."

The boat is ready, and Madame Des Roches going; I am very unwilling to part with her; and her prefent concern at leaving me would be very flattering, if I did not think the remembrance of your brother had the greateft fhare in it.

She has wrote four or five letters to him, fince fhe came on board, very tender ones I fancy, and deftroyed them; fhe has at laft wrote a meer complimentary kind of card, only thanking him for his offers of fervice; yet I fee it gives her pleafure to write even this, however cold and formal; becaufe becaufe addreffed to him: fhe afked me, if I thought there was any impropriety in her writing to him, and whether it would not be better to addrefs herfelf to Emily. I finiled at her fimplicity, and fhe finished her letter; fhe blushed and looked down when she gave it me.

She is lefs like a fprightly French widow, than a foolifh Englifh girl, who loves for the first time.

But I fuppofe, when the heart is really touched, the feelings of all nations have a pretty near refemblance: it is only that the French ladies are generally more coquets, and lefs inclined to the romantic ftyle of love, than the Englifh; and we are, therefore, furprized when we find in them this trembling fenfibility.

There are exceptions, however, to all rules; and your little Bell feems, in point of

The day family of the state

190 THE HISTORY OF of love, to have changed countries with Madame Des Roches.

The gale encreases, it flutters in the fails; my fair friend is fummoned; the captain chides our delay.

Adieu ! ma chere Madame Des Roches. I embrace her; I feel the force of its being for the last time. I am afraid she feels it yet more strongly, than I do: in parting with the last of his friends, she seems to part with her Rivers for ever.

One look more at the wild graces of nature I leave behind.

Adieu ! Canada ! adieu ! fweet abode of the wood-nymphs ! never fhall I ceafe to remember with delight the place where I have paffed fo many happy hours.

- mark and a second second second

Heaven

·i=00 -- 1

Heaven preferve my dear Lucy, and give profperous gales to her friends !

Your faithful

A. FITZGERALD.

LETTER CLXXI.

To Miss Montague.

Me of Bic, Aug. 16.

YOU are little obliged to me, my dear, for writing to you on fhipboard; one of the greatest miseries here, being the want of employment: I therefore write for my own amusement, not yours.

We have fome French ladies on board, but they do not refemble Madame Des 6 Roches.

Roches. I am weary of them already, though we have been fo few days together.

The wind is contrary, and we are at anchor under this ifland; Fitzgerald has propofed going to dine on fhore : it looks exceffively pretty from the fhip.

Seven in the Evening.

We are returned from Bic, after paffing a very agreeable day.

We dined on the grafs, at a little diftance from the fhore, under the fhelter of a very fine wood, whofe form, the trees rifing above each other in the fame regular confusion, brought the dear fhades of Silleri to our remembrance.

We walked after dinner, and picked rafberries, in the wood; and in our ramble came unexpectedly to the middle of a vifto, visto, which, whilst some ships of war lay here, the failors had cut through the island.

From this fituation, being a rifing ground, we could fee directly through the avenue to both fhores : the view of each was wildly majeftic; the river comes finely in, whichever way you turn your fight; but to the fouth, which is more fheltered, the water juft trembling to the breeze, our fhip which had put all her ftreamers out, and to which the tide gave a gentle motion, with a few fcattered houfes, faintly feen amongft the trees at a diftance, terminated the profpect, in a manner which was inchanting.

I die to build a houfe on this island; it is pity fuch a fweet fpot should be uninhabited: I should like excessively to be Queen of Bic.

Fitzgerald has carved my name on a maple, near the fhore; a pretty piece of Vol. III. K gallantry gallantry in a hufband, you will allow: perhaps he means it as taking pofferfion for me of the ifland.

We are going to cards. Adieu ! for the prefent.

Aug. 18.

'Tis one of the lovelieft days I ever faw: we are fifting under the Magdalen iflands; the weather is perfectly calm, the fea juft dimpled, the fun-beams dance on the waves, the fifth are playing on the furface of the water: the ifland is at a proper diftance to form an agreeable point of view; and upon the whole the fcene is divine.

There is one houfe on the ifland, which, at a diftance, feems fo beautifully fituated, that I have loft all defire of fixing at Bic : I want to land, and go to the houfe for milk, milk, but there is no good landing-place on this fide; the island feems here to be fenced in by a regular wall of rock.

A breeze fprings up; our filhing is at an end for the prefent: I am afraid we fhall not pafs many days fo agreeably as we have done this. I feel horror at the idea of fo foon lofing fight of land, and launching on the vaft Atlantic.

Adieu! Yours,

A. FITZGERALD.

LET-

LETTER CLXXII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Aug. 26, at Sea.

W E have just fallen in with a ship from New York to London, and, as it is a calm, the master of it is come on board; whilst he is drinking a bottle of very fine Madeira, which Fitzgerald has tempted him with on purpose to give me this opportunity, as it is possible he may arrive first, I will write a line, to tell my dear Lucy we are all well, and hope foon to have the happiness of telling her fo in person; I also fend what I scribbled before we lost fight of land; for I-have had no spirits to write or do any thing fince.

There is inexpreffible pleafure in meeting a fhip at fea, and renewing our commerce EMILY MONTAGUE. 197 merce with the human kind, after having been fo abfolutely feparated from them. I feel ftrongly at this moment the inconftancy of the fpecies: we naturally grow tired of the company on board our own fhip, and fancy the people in every one we meet more agreeable.

For my part, this fpirit is fo powerful in me, that I would gladly, if I could have prevailed on my father and Fitzgerald, have gone on board with this man, and purfued our voyage in the New York fhip. I have felt the fame, thing on land in a coach, on feeing another pafs.

We have had a very unpleafant paffage hitherto, and weather to fright a better failor than your friend : it is to me aftonifhing, that there are men found, and those men of fortune too, who can fix on a fea life as a profession.

K 3

How

How ftrong must be the love of gain, to tempt us to embrace a life of danger, pain, and mifery; to give up all the beauties of nature and of art, all the charms of fociety, and feparate ourfelves from mankind, to amass wealth, which the very profession takes away all possibility of enjoying !

Even glory is a poor reward for a life passed at fea.

I had rather be a peafant on a funny bank, with peace, fafety, obfcurity, bread, and a little garden of rofes, than lord high admiral of the British fleet.

Setting afide the variety of dangers at fea, the time paffed there is a total fufpenfion of one's existence: I speak of the best part of our time there, for at least a third of every voyage is positive misery.

I abhor

I abhor the fea, and am peevifh with every creature about me.

If there were no other evil attending this vile life, only think of being cooped up weeks together in fuch a fpace, and with the fame eternal fet of people.

If cards had not a little relieved me, I fhould have died of meer vexation before I had finished half the voyage.

What would I not give to fee the dear white cliffs of Albion !

Adieu! I have not time to fay more.

Your affectionate

A. FITZGERALD.

K 4

LET-

L E T T E R CLXXIII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Dover, Sept. 8.

W E are this inftant landed, my dear, and shall be in town tomorrow.

My father ftops one day on the road, to introduce Mr. Fitzgerald to a relation of ours, who lives a few miles from Canterbury.

I am wild with joy at fetting foot once more on dry land.

I am not lefs happy to have traced your brother and Emily, by my enquiries here, for we left Quebec too foon to have advice there of their arrival.

Adieu !

Adieu ! If in town, you shall see us the moment we get there; if in the country, write immediately, to the care of the agent.

Let me know where to find Emily, whom I die to fee: is fhe ftill Emily Montague?

- Adieu !

Your affectionate

A. FITZGERALD,

K. 5.

LET

LETTER CLXXIV.

To Mrs. FITZGERALD.

Temple-house, Sept. 11.

Y OUR letter, my dear Bell, was fent by this post to the country.

It is unneceffary to tell you the pleafure it gives us all to hear of your fafe arrival.

All our argofies have now landed their treafures : you will believe us to have been more anxious about friends fo dear to us, than the merchant for his gold and fpices ; we have fuffered the greater anxiety, by the circumftance of your having returned at different times.

I flatter

EMILY MONTAGUE. 203 I flatter myfelf, the future will pay us for the paft.

You may now, my dear Bell, revive your coterie, with the addition of fome friends who love you very fincerely.

Emily (still Emily Montague) is with a relation in Berkshire, settling some affairs previous to her marriage with my brother, to which we flatter ourfelves there will be no further objections.

I affure you, I begin to be a little jealous of this Emily of yours; fhe rivals me extremely with my mother, and indeed. with every body elfe.

We all come to town next week, when you will make us very unhappy if you do not become one of our family in Pall K 6 Mall, Mall, and return with us for a few months to the country.

My brother is at his little eftate, fixmiles from hence, where he is making fome alterations, for the reception of Emily; he is fitting up her apartment in a ftyle equally fimple and elegant, which, however, you muft not tell her, becaufe fhe is to be furprized : her dreffing room, and a little adjoining clofet of books, will be enchanting : yet the expence of all he has done is a mere trifle.

I am the only perfon in the fecret; and have been with him this morning to fee it: there is a gay, finiling air in the whole apartment, which pleafes me infinitely; you will fuppofe he does not forget jars of flowers, becaufe you know how much they are Emily's tafte : he has forgot no ornament which he knew was agreeable to her.

Happily

Happily for his fortune, her pleafures are not of the expensive kind; he would ruin himfelf if they were.

He has befpoke a very handfome poft chaife, which is alfo a fecret to Emily, who infifts on not having one.

Their income will be about five hundred pounds a year: it is not much; yet, with their difpofitions, I think it will make them happy.

My brother will write to Mr. Fitzgerald next post: fay every thing affectionate for us all to him and Captain Fermor.

Adieu! Yours,

LUCY TEMPLE.

LET-

L E T T E R. CLXXV.

To Captain FITZGERALD.

Bellfield, Sept. 13.

I CONGRATULATE you, my dear friend, on your fafe arrival, and on your marriage.

You have got the ftart of me in happinefs; I love you, however, too fincerely to envy you.

Emily has promifed me her hand, as foon as fome little family affairs are fettled, which I flatter myfelf will not take above another week.

When fhe gave me this promife, fhebegged me to allow her to return to Berkfhire fhire till our marriage took place; I felt the propriety of this ftep, and therefore would not oppofe it: fhe pleaded having fome bufinefs alfo to fettle with her relation there.

My mother has given back the deed of fettlement of my eftate, and accepted of an affignment on my half-pay : fhe is greatly a lofer; but fhe infifted on making me happy, with fuch an air of tendernefs, that I could not deny, her that fatisfaction.

I fhall keep fome land in my own hands, and farm; which will enable me to have a post-chaife for Emily, and my mother, who will be a good deal with us; and a constant decent table for a friend.

Emily is to fuperintend the dairy and garden; fhe has a paffion for flowers, with which I am extremely pleafed, as 208 THE HISTORY OF as it will be to her a continual fource of pleafure.

I feel fuch delight in the idea of making her happy, that I think nothing a trifle which can be in the leaft degree pleafing to her.

I could even with to invent new pleafures for her gratification.

I hope to be happy; and to make the lovelieft of womankind fo, becaufe my notions of the ftate, into which I am entering, are I hope juft, and free from that romantic turn fo deftructive to happinefs.

I have, once in my life, had an attachment nearly refembling marriage, to a widow of rank, with whom I was acquainted abroad; and with whom I almost feeluded myself from the world near a twelvemonth, when she died of a fever, EMILY MONTAGUE. 209 a fever, a stroke I was long before I recovered.

I loved her with tendernefs; but that love, compared to what I feel for Emily, was as a grain of fand to the globe of earth, or the weight of a feather to the univerfe.

A marriage where not only efteem, but paffion is kept awake, is, I am convinced, the most perfect state of sublunary happines: but it requires great care to keep this tender plant alive; especially, I blush to fay it, on our fide.

Women are naturally more conftant, education improves this happy difpofition : the hufband who has the politenefs, the attention, and delicacy of a lover, will always be beloved.

The fame is generally, but not always, true on the other fide: I have fometimes feen feen the most amiable, the most delicate of the fex, fail in keeping the affection of their husbands.

I am well aware, my friend, that we are not to expect here a life of continual rapture: in the happieft marriage there is danger of fome languid moments: to avoid thefe, fhall be my ftudy; and I am certain they are to be avoided.

The inebriation, the tumult of paffion, will undoubtedly grow lefs after marriage, that is, after peaceable poffeffion; hopes and fears alone keep it in its firft violent ftate: but, though it fubfides, it gives place to a tendernefs ftill more pleafing, to a foft, and, if you will allow the expression, a voluptuous tranquillity: the pleafure does not ceafe, does not even leffen; it only 'changes its nature.

My fifter tells me, she flatters herself; you:

EMILY MONTAGUE. 211 you will give a few months to hers and Mr. Temple's friendship; I will not give up the claim I have to the fame favor.

My little farm will induce only friends to vifit us; and it is not lefs pleafing to me for that circumftance: one of the misfortunes of a very exalted flation, is the flavery it fubjects us to in regard to the ceremonial world.

Upon the whole, I believe, the moft agreeable, as well as moft free of all fituations, to be that of a little country gentleman, who lives upon his income, and knows enough of the world not to envy his richer neighbours.

Let me hear from you, my dear Fitzgerald, and tell me, if, little as I am, I can be any way of the least use to you.

You

You will fee Emily before I do; fhe is more lovely, more enchanting, than ever.

Mrs. Fitzgerald will make me happy if fhe can invent any commands for me.

Adieu ! Believe me

Your faithful, &c.

ED. RIVERS.

LET-

LETTER CLXXVI.

To Colonel RIVERS, at Bellfield, Rutland.

London, Sept. 15.

EVERY mark of your friendship, my dear Rivers, must be particularly pleasing to one who knows your worth as I do: I have, therefore, to thank you as well for your letter, as for those obliging offers of fervice, which I shall make no foruple of accepting, if I have occasion for them.

I rejoice in the profpect of your being as happy as myfelf : nothing can be more just than your ideas of marriage; I mean, of a marriage founded on inclination : all that you defcribe, I am fo happy as to experience.

I never

I never loved my fweet girl fo tenderly as fince fhe has been mine; my heart acknowledges the obligation of her having trufted the future happiness or misery of her life in my hands. She is every hour more dear to me; I value as I ought those thousand little attentions, by which a new softness is every moment given to our affection.

I do not indeed feel the fame tumultuous emotion at feeing her; but I feel a fenfation equally delightful: a joy more tranquil, but not lefs lively.

I will own to you, that I had ftrong prejudices against marriage, which nothing but love could have conquered; the idea of an indiffoluble union deterred me from thinking of a ferious engagement : I attached myself to the most feducing, most attractive of women, without thinking the pleasure I found in feeing her of any confequence: I thought her lovely, but never fuspected EMILY MONTAGUE. 215 fufpected I loved; I thought the delight I tafted in hearing her, merely the effects of those charms which all the world found in her conversation; my vanity was gratified by the flattering preference she gave me to the rest of my fex; I fancied this all, and imagined I could cease feeing the little fyren whenever I pleased.

I was, however, miftaken; love ftole upon me imperceptibly, and en badinant; I was enflaved, when I only thought myfelf amufed.

We have not yet feen Mifs Montague; we go down on Friday to Berkshire, Bell having fome letters for her, which she was defired to deliver herfelf.

I will write to you again the moment I have feen her.

The invitation Mr. and Mrs. Temple have been fo obliging as to give us, is too pleafing pleafing to ourfelves not to be accepted; we also expect with impatience the time of viliting you at your farm.

Adieu !

Your affectionate

J. FITZGERALD.

LET

LETTER CLXXVII.

To Captain FITZGERALD.

Stamford, Sept. 16, Evening.

BEING here on fome business, my dear friend, I receive your letter in time to answer it to-night.

We hope to be in town this day fevennight; and I flatter myfelf, my deareft. Emily will not delay my happinefs many days longer: I grudge you the pleafure of feeing her on Friday.

I triumph greatly in your having been feduced into matrimony, becaufe I never knew a man more of a turn to make an agreeable hufband; it was the idea that Vol. III. L occurred 218 THE HISTORY OF occurred to me the first moment I faw you.

Do you know, my dear Fitzgerald, that, if your little fyren had not anticipated my purpofe, I had defigns upon you for my fifter?

Through that carelefs, inattentive look of yours, I faw fo much right fenfe, and fo affectionate a heart, that I wifhed nothing fo much as that fhe might have attached you; and had laid a fcheme to bring you acquainted, hoping the reftfrom the merit fo confpicuous in you both.

Both are, however, fo happily difposed of elfewhere, that I have no reason to regret my scheme did not succeed.

There is fomething in your perfon, as well as manner, which I am convinced must be particularly pleasing to to women; with an extremely agreeable form, you have a certain manly, fpirited air, which promifes them a protector; a look of underftanding, which is the indication of a pleafing companion; a fenfibility of countenance, which fpeaks a friend and a lover; to which I ought to add, an affectionate, conftant attention to women, and a polite indifference to men, which above all things flatters the vanity of the fex.

Of all men breathing, I fhould have been most afraid of you as a rival; Mrs. Fitzgerald has told me, you have faid the fame thing of me.

Happily, however, our taftes were different; the two amiable objects of our tendernefs were perhaps equally lovely; but it is not the meer form, it is the character that ftrikes: the fire, the fpirit, the vivacity, the awakened manner, of Mifs Fermor L 2 won won you; whilft my heart was captivated by that bewitching languor, that feducing foftnefs, that melting fenfibility, in the air of my fweet Emily, which is, at leaft to me, more touching than all the fprightlinefs in the world.

There is in true fenfibility of foul, fuch a refiftlefs charm, that we are even affected by that of which we are not ourfelves the object: we feel a degree of emotion at being witnefs to the affection which another infpires.

'Tis late, and my horfes are at the door.

Adieu!

Your faithful

ED. RIVERS.

LET-

LETTER CLXXVIII.

To Mifs MONTAGUE, Rofe-hill, Berkshire.

Temple-house, Sept. 16.

I HAVE but a moment, my deareft Emily, to tell you Heaven favors your tendernefs: it removes every anxiety from two of the worthieft and most gentle of human hearts.

You and my brother have both lamented to me the painful neceffity you were under, of reducing my mother to a lefs income than that to which fhe had been accuftomed.

An unexpected event has reftored to her more than what her tenderness for my brother had deprived her of.

A relation

222 THE HISTORY, &c.

A relation abroad, who owed everything to her father's friendship, has sent her, as an acknowledgment of that friendship, a deed of gift, settling on her four hundred pounds a year for life.

My brother is at Stamford, and is yet unacquainted with this agreeable event.

You will hear from him next poft.

Adieu! my dear Emily!

Your affectionate.

L. TEMPLE.

END OF VOL. III.

