Zealous Educationist and Scholarly Official Was Popular Here

It was announced at the Bishop's Palace to-day to The Times that the mode of procedure for the appointment of a new Bishop of Vancouver Island, following the resignation of Bishop MaeDonald, will be from a list of suitable candidates prepared by the archbishops and bishops of certain districts. The matter lies entirely in the hands of the Pope. The Archbishops of Vancouver, Edmonton and Regina and the Bishops of Calgary and Prince Rupert will draw up the list of names. The news of the appointment rinay arrive here almost immediately and, on the other hand, it may not be learned for several months. At one time a year and a half elapsed before the appointment of a bishop, following.

Bishop MacDonald was appointed when Victoria was an Archbishopric but owing to the rapid growth of Vancouver, it was considered more practicable to remove the archiespiscopal see to that city. Nothing is known at present as to the Bishop's plans for the future, but it is considered probable that some higher position awaits him at Rome. He left here in April.

TRADE COMMISSIONER FROM AUSTRALIA TO UNITED STATES HERE

General in two Victorian Governments, Minister of Lands in a third administration, and during the war period "All Australians remembered his almost superhuman efforts as Commonwealth Director of Recruiting."

The Commonwealth Attorney-General, Hon, E. Lyttleton Groom, said that Mr. Mackinnon in the United States would be an advocate of those principles for which the English speaking Union stood. He would carry the message 'that we sprans from a common stock, had common ideals, language, history, customs, and should draw closer together.' Australian-born, knowing the country as well as the city, Mr. Mackinnon was peculiarly fitted for the high position which he would hold. He knew Australia's wants, and he knew her possibilities, and from that knowledge he would be able to render material service, Mr. Mackinnon understood Australian ideals, sentiments, and views, and he would place them before the American people with a loftiness and a high moral purpose which would conferhoner upon his country. The office of Commissioner in the United States, was one that was destined to grow in importance.

Sir David Orme Masson, of Melbourne University, said that in the tributes to Mr. Mackinnon's qualities his qualifications as a sportsman had not been mentioned. It was, he believed, largely because Mr. Mackinnon was a man of deep culture, varied tastes, and wide sympathies that his appointment as the representative of Australia in Americas had been received with such general appreciation.

Police Acted Following Her-ald's Publication of Pieture of Submarine

London, June 23.— Police raided the offices of The Daily Herald, the Labor organ, last night and held the members of the staff while they searched for the original and all copies of the picture of the submarine XI, which The Herald published on Wednesday.

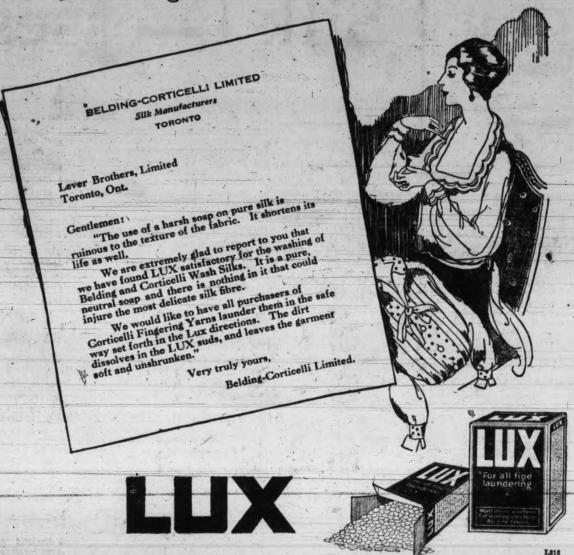

Police officers questioned the staff as to how the picture of the submarine, which was launched at Chatham last Saturday, had been obtained, and confiscated all copies of the paper containing the picture.

The Admiralty had excluded reporters and photographers from the launching of the 'mystery ship," as the submarine had been called, and withheld all details with regard to the craft.

Ottawa, June 23.—The expected debate in the House on the Union Bank statement did not take place last night. It will be the first order business on Monday.

10,000 APPEALS ARE EXPECTED

Soldiers' Pensions Bill Before Funeral of Late Richard Henry Senate Committee

It and Other Measures Result of Commission's Report was stated last night by Major N. F. Parkinson, Deputy Minister of Solilers Civil Re-Establishment, giving evidence before the Senate committee considering the House of Commons bills amending the Soldiers' Insurance, the Pensions and the D.S.C.R. Acts.

Acts.

He estimated that of these, some 5,000 would be referred by the proposed district boards of appeal to the Board of Pension Commissioners. He said his department felt such district boards would cost out of all proportion to their value and recommended instead one central board.

Referring to the Insurance Bill, Major Parkinson said seventy-one policies would be involved, costing some $223,000. The policies had been denied, since in every case the applicants were men seriously ill and without dependents. Thirty-seven of the applicants had already died.

Colonel John Thompson and John Patton, chairman and secretary respectively, of the Board of Pension Commissioners, gave the committee evidence as to the effect of pensions legislation.

evidence as to the effect of pensions legislation.

The most important change, it was said, would be a return to the insurance principle of pensions. It was estimated that the cost of taking care of claims which had been refused under the old "due to service" principle would reach about $450,000. For the first year under the new principle, the extra cost was estimated at $100,000, and this would increase at the rate of some $100,000 a year until the peak was reached in perhaps twenty-five years.

Asked by Senator Griesbach if there was anything wrong with the principle except the matter of cost. Colonel Thompson said he did not think so.

When C. G. Macchell secretary of Colonel Thompson said he did not think so.

When C. G. MacNell, secretary of the Dominion Veterans' Alliance, appeared before the committee, Senators Lougheed and C'der remonstrated with him in regard to the bombardment of telegrams which had descended upon members of the Senate from veterans' associations, Senator Calder said the telegrams seemed to suggest most unwarrantably that the Senate must approve legislation commission and passed by the House of Commons.

Speaking in favor of the insurance principle for pensions, MacNeil claimed that this had been adopted by Great Britain, the United States, Rumania and France.

The committee will meet again on Monday morning, when Mr. Macneill and representatives of the D.S.C.R. will again be in attendance. It is proposed to take up the bills clause by clause with a view to discovering and if possible reconciling divergent-views.

There was a large number of sympathizing friends in the church, and many beautiful floral emblems, some having been sent from Victoria. The pallbearers were: John S. Carmichael, William Caine, Sr., R. Greggor, J. Gibson, H. F. Storry, and T. Stewart. Interment was made in Ocean View Cemetery.

The late Mr. Hampton was well known in Victoria having gone there in 1889 from the Isle of Man. He resided there till last November, when the family moved to Vancouver. He is survived by the widow, who was a daughter of the late H. Thomas Peter, of Fifeshire, Scotland, and three sons, Ernest, Richard, and Wilfrid, and four daughters, Mrs. G. Stewart, of Sait Spring Island, and Bianche, Margaret, and Constance, at home, and five young grandchild-fen. The eldest son, Hugh, was lost overseas during the Great War.

A number of relatives, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Peter, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Christopher, Mrs. J. R. Carmichael, of Victoria, and Mrs. B. Deacon, of Sidney, attended the funeral.

The department, in announcing receipt of the noise explained yesterday that it, had addressed a note to the British Ambassador for transmission to the Canadian authorities, drawing their attention to the difficulties experienced in enforcing the prohibition laws of the United States along the Canadian border.

As the gallant commander of the 16th Canadian Scottish in that battered Ypres salient the late General Leckie won the admiration of British Columbians in particular and Canadians in general. ### MANITOBA DECIDES.

Manitoba's decision on the liquor question leaves no doubt about the change of mind which has taken place with a majority of the people of that Province. Their verdict vesterday was given on a clear issue. They were asked whether they preferred."bone dry haw to continue or whether in favor of the latter will very likely be more the sealed and bolted chamber. Surely than thirty thousand.

Since the change has been ordered by popular vote it is as well that the Government has a definite mandate. The people had the opportunity to study the bill which the Legislature will now enact. They know exactly what they are going to get and their decision must be taken as a desire for better conditions and not in any way an authorization for the Government to go into and popularize the liquor business. It has obviously become apparent to the people of Mani-toba, as it impressed itself upon British Columbians under the Prohibition Act, that a large section of the public will continue to register its objection to dry law by deliberately eaking it in almost every conceivable form. This is a difficult condition for any government to face. And no statute is worth much unless the people show some inclination to respect it.

Manitoba's experience under government control should be considerably happier than British Columbia's. We blazed a difficult trail. Flaws that have developed in the operation of our Act should serve as a signal for caution to the Prairie Province. Such defects in early adminis tration as revealed themselves to the authorities here no doubt have been noted. It will now remain for the people to support the law and see that it controls and is not abused.

HAGEN AND SARAZEN DIFFER.

Two international golfing celebrities returned to their native United States yesterday. They were Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen. The former complained of the unsportsmanlike behavior of British golfing officials and the galleries that dence before a committee of the House of Lords. followed the open championship rounds. He went so far as to say that he would not take part in another British tournament unless he were as sured of better treatment. The latter declared that he had had a wonderful time and that he was going back again "if he had to swim." He supplemented this expression of satisfaction with the remark that "everyone treated me royally." Hagen was defending his title and lost it by just one stroke. Sarazen was trying his luck in the British open for the first time and failed to qualify for the final test. Is Hagen's charge a fair one? What point could Sarazen here to make one? What point could Sarazen hope to make by giving a false impression of his experience? We shall not swallow Hagen's charge of unortsmanlike behavior on the part of British galleries. People at all familiar with sport on the other side of the Atlantic know full well that the "visitors" in any contest usually get a larger share of the applause as long as they are "play-ing the game." This is particularly the case with golf and none of the reports in the British news-papers—which carried excellent accounts of the amateur and open tournaments—conveyed anything but admiration for the American entrants. We shall wish, therefore, that Walter Hagen—one of the world's greatest golfers—had left unsaid some of the things for which he is given credit in several dispatches from New York.

respect of punched clubs is another matter altogether and his observations in this connection may stimulate new action on the part of the Royal and Ancient authorities. He complains that the Americans were notified on the Saturday night that punched clubs could not be used when the open event commenced on the following Monday. He also says that the British golfing authorities tried to put every kind of technical obstacle in the way of the Americans at Troon. In other Hagen's objection to the last minute ruling in respect of punched clubs is another matter al-ogether and his observations in this connection words, although the ruling applied to all players alike and was not a new subject of doubt, he considers that neither he nor his fellow countrymen had an opportunity to get sufficient practice with the smoother faced irons. In his impatience with the action of the officials in this and other instances he will be supported by a number of well known British golfers. For it must not be forgotten that the punched club is an invention of Ben Sayers, of North Berwick, and not a novelty from the United States.

And it is only fair to point out, since a contro-

And it is only fair to point out, since a controversy is likely to arise, that after Travers won the British title the Schenectady putter was barred; after Hutchison triumphed the slotted club went into the discard; Hagen's victory last year put the lid on the punched club. But it remains an open question as to just what is meant by a punched club. For this reason Hagen's observa-tions about the prohibition which he contends placed him at a disadvantage may bring about some sort of standardization in respect of club faces that will remove these annual discussions as to what may and what may not be used. We shall still wish, however, that Hagen had dealt with the whole question in a more dignified manner than appears to have been the case. And how is it that Gene had nothing to say about the punched club? After all golf is golf—to the

THE BALTIC'S LIQUID.

Everything was in readiness in New York this morning to remove the liquor from the Baltie and the Berengaria. But just as the prohibition enforcement officers were on the point of taking the Baltic's supply into safe keeping ashore word was received that the whole business was to be halted. At the time this is writ-ten there is no available explanation of the changed plans, if changed they are. Most people will regret that any British or American newspaper should seek to make this question a major issue between the two countries. The British Government does not intend to challenge the right of the United States to enforce the ruling of the Supreme Court and there is no reason why The Daily Express should get excited about it and charge our neighbors with an attempt to "dictate to other nations." Much more reasonable and sensible is the com-ment of The Daily Chronicle when it says that the shipping companies have taken a course that might have consequences "which it would be better not to have provoked."

The average individual will fail to understand why sealed liquor should very seriously interfere with the provisions of the Eighteenth Amendment. He will ask himself why American the Moderation League's proposal for govern-Amendment. He will ask himself why American ment control should take its place. The majority and British guards could not do sentry duty over might well be arranged without a great deal of difficulty. In any case the controversy should

NOT VERY TERRIBLE.

Canadians in London are writing to the newspapers to explain that recent reports of fires and floods in no way give a true picture of conditions in this country as a whole. They take the view that these occurrences are given an altogether too prominent position in Canadian news published in the Old Country. They see in what they describe as a one-sided presentation a very grave danger—poor advertising. It is naturally annoying to the Canadian mind that comprehends our smiling fields and ripening corn. But we are afraid the alarm is unwarranted. Except those from the areas affected we venture to suggest that the thousands of private letters that go from this country to Britain every week contain no reference to these things at all. And Canada is not so unfamiliar to the people on the other side of the Atlantic as it used to be.

Sabotas trate Jay in the city police court to-day.

Victoria's new club by-law "to provide a new license fee for clubs here; will be modeled on Vancouver's new beer club measure, if plans adopted by the City Council yesterday are carried out.

City Solicitor H. S. Pringle was instructed by the Council to find out exactly how the Vancouver by-law is working and what its provisions are with the aldermen yesterday. No one seemed to know, it was suggested that the city tax only incorporated clubs, but Mr. Pringle said this would be discrimination. All clubs should be taxed, he said, if any tax at all were levied. The incorporated clubs, he pointed out, included such service organizations as Rotary and Kiwanis.

The Council virtually decided yesterday to suspend operation of a by-law governing overhead signs. John Day led a delegation before the Council to protest against what he called the unfair enforcement of this by-law.

Miss Mara Among B. C. Representatives of Oversea Settlement Society

coming continually to the fore. Canadian women will have more than a passing interest in the Society for the Overseas Settlement of British Women, which lost its valued president in the death recently of H. R. H. Princess Christian. The work of the society is directed by a council, executive and standing committees in Great Britain, while each of the self-governing Dominions co-operate through the medium of various voluntary organizations, individual representatives and immigration officers. The representatives for British Columbia include Miss Mara, of Victoria: Mrs. Clara Fitz Gibbon, of Vancouver; Mrs. Moss, O.B.E., of Cowichan; and Miss Murray.

Concerned with all schemes promoted under the Empire Settlement Act of 1922 as they affect the welfare of women and children, the Society is primarily designed to give accurate information to British women desiring to settle overseas, and to ensure their welfare while desiring to emigrate from the Old Country.

The information bureau run by the headquarters in Great Britain, has proved especially valuable in giving out accurate information as giving out accurate information as to wages, openings, cost and conditions of living and other facts essential to the ultimate happiness and prosperity of settlers. Miss Gladys Pott, O.B.E., is the chairman of the executive committee, and was in Victoria a few years ago in the course of one of her tours of the Dominion in search of first hand information as to the women.

That the Society is performing a valuable work in looking after the welfare of immigrating women is more than proved by the steady flow of grateful letters which pour into the headquarters in Englandfrom women who have settled in Canada. Miss Mara, while in England recently, attended several of the meetings and otherwise kept closely in touch with the Society's work and was much impressed by its efficacy in dealing with the many problems arising in connection with the emigration of women and

A little comedy gem, all too brief, but a hurricane of fun while it lasts, it is the English play, "A Sister to Assist and English play, "A Sister to Assist and English play, "A Sister to Assist and English and E cian's Ball held at the Armories last night to provide funds for the confucting of the band-a-day programme was a great success. Large throngs attended this community to dance, and judging from the enthusiastic apirit which was evident every one enjoyed himself. There there is the community that the dance numbers required. The large orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Zala and Mr. Findler would render one dance number, and immediately this was completed the large 50-plece band, comprising—the 5th Regiment and 16th Scottish players under Band Conductors Rumsby and Miller, would commence the melody to another waltz, or some other popular dance.

In this manner the dance continued until 2 o'clock this morning, and even then many were reluctant to break up the enjoyable evening. Mr. Mutch, of the Chamber of Commerce Restaurant catered, and those attending appreciated this phase of the programme. All proceeds will go in aid of the fund to support the "band a day" programme to be given in the city this Summer.

CAPITOL

"Diana of the Crossways," featuring Fay Compton, one of England's greatest actresses, is the superattraction at the Capitol Theatre this week. This picture is of Diana, woman of wit and beauty—the most powerful of her sex. "The Crossways" is an oil English house, her only possession—a name that symbolized her stormy life.

Again and again, and yet again, driven by passion or impulse or circumstance, Diana stands at the crossways. The battle of a billiant and waynerd at the storm of the deadly storm of the control of this powerful story.

Most of the deadly timptations—and some of the deadly sins—flit through its scenes. It is the pageant and drama of life, limred by a master hand. Diana's beauty brings lovers, lawful and unlawful, to her feet, and sets scandalous tongues wagging. Foolish impulse forges an unsuitable marriage, and time and again Diana is brought to the crossways—and saved by the timely interposition of a true friend and lover. It is to that lover's firm arm that she clings in the end. The brilliant and wayward woman finds the support which can alone keep her serene and upright. Diana comes to harbor in the deep, gentle love of the man who had cherished her through years of fret and turmoil. The author on this wonderful picture is George Meredith.

Told of Many Troubles to Be Encountered Here, Mayor Learns

Vicious reports, calculated to keep merican tourists away from Vanouver Island, are being spread by therests anxious to divert Victoria's cereasing tourist traffic to other oints. This is the conclusion sached by Mayor Reginald Hayward there a visit to the tourist auto camp the Grege and a long talk with sitting tourists there last night. The mayor was told by visitors that at the Gorge and a long talk with visiting tourists there hast night.

The mayor was told by visitors that they had heard all sorts of wild reports about difficulties to be encounseled the sound of the sound of the sound have to pay $175 to bring his car across the international boundary with small chance of ever setting the money back. The Canadian authorities, he had been informed, made such a fuss about returning the money that American motorists finally gave up in disgust.

Another visitor stated that he had inderstood that it was necessary to pay $50 for the privilege of fishing on vancouver Island. This man said he was under the impression that this fishing license did not apply to the Mainland of British Columbia, where one could fish without paying any fee.

Mainland of British Columbia, where one could fish without paying any fee. The mayor talked last night with one man and his wife who had traveled by motor all the way from Louislana. They came in a truck in which they carried all their baggage, "Everyone at the auto camp is delighted with Victoria," the mayor said to-day. "They cannot praise the city highly enough. Large numbers of tourists are on their way here, they say, but the big movement will not get well under way until after the Summer vacation for school children commences."

COMPLIED WITH U.S. RULING AT HONOLULU

Makura Went "Dry" Through Misinterpretation of Law Before Reaching Honolulu

Canadian-Australasian Ship Did Not Have to Comply With American Liquor Ruling at Honolulu As She Left Sydney, Her Port of Departure, Prior to June 10; Landed Liquor at Suva.

While not dry in the fullest sense of the term, the Canadian-Australasian liner Mukura, which docked here this morning from Sydney and Honolulu, was sufficiently arid to put the passengers in a mood to get ashore. Outside of the Honolulu incident, the chief topic of conversation was the overwhelming majority recorded in Manitoba.

The Makura was a little premature in "going dry," but that phase of the situation was not disclosed until the ship reached Honolulu, when Capt. Robert Crawford was informed that the American liquor ruling affecting foreign ships did not apply to the Makura as she had sailed from Sydney prior to June 10.

Unwelcome News.

The ship could have remained "wet" all the way from Sydney to Victoria and could have entered Honolulu harbor with liquor on board provided it was under seal.

Capt. Crawford was not aware of this and following out his instructions all the ship's liquor stores, apart from the required amount formedicinal purposes, was put ashore at Suva.

On nearing Honolulu, Capt. Craw On nearing Honolulu, Capt. Crawford wirelessed ahead to find outjust where he stood on the liquor question, and much to his surprise
he was informed that the ruling didnot affect his ship on the present

Twenty-seven ships of the C. G. M. M. Limited fleet are up for sale. They are all vessels of the 3,000-tons type, similar to the steamers Canadian Farmer, Observer and Rover now operated on this coast. In fact these three ships are included in the list. If the three ships on this coast are sold they will be replaced by vessels of the type of the Canadian Volunteer, deadweight tonnage 4,500 tons. Included in the fleet offered is the steamer Canadian Aviator, which was bullt at the Wallace yards. The following ships are affected: Canadian Miner, Sealer, Trader, Adventurer, Sailor. Capt. John S. Bollong, pilot for the Todd Drydock & Construction Corporation, who commanded the new speed queen on her trial runs, delivered her to the naval station. Officers on parsing merchant ships marveled at the ease with which the cruiser was handled in manoeuvring. Captain Bollong was highly complimented on his arrival at the naval station.

The Milwaukee, it is reported, will leave the naval station July 5 on a 105-day vovage, going first to Alaska, thence to Honolulu and thence to Australia. She is a sistership of the scout cruiser Omaha, also built by the Todd yard in Tacoma which recently made a sensational voyage from Honolulu to San-Francisco, smashing all world records for endurance runs. The Cincinnati, a duplicate of the two vessels, is now being completed by the Tacoma yard and is expected to be ready for her trial trip in October.

Two Days Were Made Up By Liner Makura On Her Voyage From Australasia

Ship Was Delayed at Sydney and Auckland By Stringent Quarantine Regulations: Averaged Over Seventeen Knots After Leaving Home Port and Made Good Time Under Excellent Weather Conditions.

On her voyage completed to-day the Canadian-Australasian liner Makura made one of the fastest passages that has been credited to her since she first started bucking the Pacific swells. Capt. Robert Crawford, the commander, and all the ship's officers, not forgetting Chief Engineer John Howarth, were highly pleased with the ship's performance. The ship was two days late in getting clear of Sydney and Auckland owing to rigid enforcement of quarantine regulations, but in spite of this handicap she made this port right on schedule.

Half a dozen scouts of the Fairfield troop spent the last week-end in camp at Galiano Island. The party left Victoria on Friday evening on bieyeles and proceeded to Sidney, where the bicycles were left and where they boarded a launch which landed them at the Island about midnight. Owing to the lateness of the hour the party camped that night at Scoutmaster Donald New's farm near Georgeson's Landing.
On Saturday the boys helped the Galiano Scouts prepare for their concert, which took place that evening, and moved camp to a site in the vieinity of Whaler's Pay, overlooking the Guilf of Georgia. That evening the Scouts attended the concert staged by the Galiano troop, and contributed a tumbling display to the

THE BEST OF FRIENDS

Under the auspices of the Victoria Automobile Club motion pictures of the Banff-Windermere Highway will be shown to-night at the Empress Hotel ball room. Admission will be free, and a large attendance is anticipated. The pictures show to advantage the rapid development of that section, in addition to many of the beautiful scenes of mountain splender. Messrs. Campbell and Forster, of the National Parks branch of the Department of the Interior, will show the pictures.

Officials Rush Preparation of New Scale to Go Into Effect July 1

City officials under City Selicitor
H. S. Pringle, concentrated to-day upon the drafting of Victoria's new business license by-law in order to rush it through before the beginning of July, when it will go into effect.
Under the license scale drawn up by Mr. Pringle and his assistants today the business tax is broadened out so as to include a number of businesses which formerly escaped direct taxation. Private schools, it was announced, are to be taxed for the first time in the history of the city. Vocal and musical studios also will have to pay a license fee.
Mr. Pringle is investigating the possibility of taxing railroad and steamboat offices.
It is planned to increase the tax on gasoline service stations.

It is planned to increase the tax on gasoline service stations.

Banks' licenses will be increased heavily. Head offices of banks employing six persons or less will pay $600 a year, while those employing six or less persons will be charged $200 a year, while those employing ix or less persons will be charged $200 a year, while those employing more than six persons will pay $300.

In spite of the protest of automobile dealers who appeared before the city council yesterday afternoon, the new and increased taxation on their business will stand, it was made known to-day.

Sunday's Entertainment Will Be Attractive Affair; George Green, Cornet Soloist

The programme for the Sunday band concert to-morrow, is very complete, and will prove most attractive. George Green will again take the cornet solo part, and as he is one of the finest artists on this instrument in the Northwest, his number is certain to be charming. The surroundings at Beacon Hill, the scene of the entertainment, are an added attraction to the public during the Sunday performance.

The programme will include "The Wallabys." "The French Comedy," "Pcossaise." "Bercuse," this is a cornet solo; dances from "Henry VIII.," "Maritana," "Le Valse, Que Nous Aimons," "Caprice Scherze, introduction and chorus from Act is of "Lohengrin," Wagner's masterpiece, followed by "The King," which concludes the programme. The programme for the Sunday

David Leeming and Alderman W. J. Sargent are busy now drafting the duties of the Comptroller for the consideration of the Council, but they have not completed their work.

Before a large assembly of par-ents and friends of the pupils of the North Ward School, His Honor, Lieut-Governor W. C. Nichol, pre-sented the Lieutenant-Governor's sented the Lieutenant-Governor's shield for the best cadet platoon in the City of Victoria, last evening. The ceremony, which was an impressive one, was held in the spacious grounds of the North [Ward School. The winning platoon, comprising fourteen cadets, were on parade, while several Army Veterans were on the platform. Chairman George Jay, of the Victoria School Board, presided over the ceremonles.

Has Good Record.

The North Ward School made a spiendid record for itself this year, for the pupils not only won the Victoria City shield, but the British Campaigners' shield, which is emblematic of the best cadets throughout Greater Victoria. Medals were presented to every boy in the winning platoon by the Maytime Frolic committee, while the presentation of the Junior and Senior Girls' Basketball Championship Cup, emblematic of the School championship, was also included in the ceremonies.

of the School championship, was also included in the ceremonies.

The Presentations.

The Lieut.-Governor passed down the lines and was very much satisfied by the way in which the cadets conducted themselves while on.paraze, and also their smart appearance. Much credit is due H. W. Creelman, who devoted much of his time and study to the organizing and drilling of the cadets. Capt. Underwood, Assistant D.F.O., made the presentation of the medals to the forty boys in the cadet platoon. on behalf of the Maytime Froilc. Capt. Underwood, also expressed his delight in witnessing the parade of such a scrart body of well-trained youths.

Veteran of the British Army, George W. Smith, eighty years of age, who has seen many a campaign go into history, made the presentation of the Campaigners' Shield to the cadets.

Trustes Siverix presented the Junior Girls' School Championship.

Community Singing.

A programme of community singing terminated one of the most pleasant ceremonies that the North Ward School has had occasion to witness on their grounds for many years. Moved by a spirit of patriotism, the girls of the school had composed a paredy on the "Parade of the Wooden Soldier," and sang it with great gusto to the delight of everyone present.

ven Foot Two Inches of Pugilistic Ambition Blinks Nervously at Dempsey, Lays a Light Left On His Body and Wakes Up at the Cleaners

Great Falls, Mont, June 22.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavy-weight champion, to-day wound up "Big Ben" Wray in less than faxty seconds after the Sayre, Okla., giant, with his seven feet miles to satisfy his craving to try himself against the heavyweight champion.

Wray, a former cowboy and oil rigger down in Oklahoma, was stretched on the resined floor of the ring completely knocked out and with a possibly fractured jaw in less than a minute after he came out from his corner to box Dempsey, even against the best wishes of his manager, Tex McCarthy, an old-time heavy-

The Oklahoma giant, weighing 250 pounds, proved to be an absolute novice, with nothing but courage and a desire to trade punches with the heavyweight champion. He came out to face Dempsey with his left hand extended, but with his right pressed tightly close to his chest, boxing limidly like a novice.

Dempsey missed a left hook for the law and Wray's face assumed a serious stare as he heard the swish of the glove past his ear. The title holder feinted for the body and then reached for another left to the jaw, missing for the second time, with Wray blinking nervously. The glant Oklahoman laid a light left on Dempsey's body, and with a leap the champion swung a left that landed flush on the chin, Wray stiffened flush on the chin, which is long arms lew over his head and he fell backward, as stiff as a plank.

Big fat trout that live in the depths of Cowichan Lake are hungry now—hungry for spoons and worms. Anglers who don't believe it should take a look at the accompanying photographs taken at the lake recently. They don't seem to indicate that the world-famous fishing resort is fished out or anything like it.

But, the best fishermen will tell you, Cowichan Lake fish are getting wiser every year. You have to understand them. So many fishermen don't understand them, though, that many disappointments are reported from time to time. Unsophisticated but enthusiastic people from Victoria go up to Cowichan Lake, fish with the wrong spoons, troll in the wrong places, use the wrong sinkers and then wonder why other boats come in loaded down with fish while they have to visit a fish store on the way home if they want to maintain any kind of a reputation.

Stay Down to Ball Is Sarazen's Advice

Describes the Perfect Iron Follow Through In Lesson Correcting Golf Faults

Don't make the mistake of trying to lift the club with your arms. The club head will do that, and the more loft in the face of the club (such as a mashie-niblick) the higher the ball will rise, provided you hit it properly.

What you want to keep in mind is must always keep the left arm straight.

As the club head is about to come in contact with the ball the right knee and hip are thrown in toward the ball so that you can get power into the shot.

You will notice in the accompanying photo that although I have finished the stroke the right side of the body is still down to the shot, and most of the weight of the body has been transferred to the left leg, which is braced to receive the shock of the blow.

New York, June 22. — Walter Hagen, star American golfer, arriveng from England to-day on the steamship Berengaria, accused British golfers of poor sportsmanship, and declared he never again would compete in a British tournament. The British golfing authorities, he declared, tried to put every kind of chenical obstacle in the way of Americans at Troon.

The most annoying case cited by him in proof of this was the last minute prohibition of "punch clubs." The American team had no opportunity to practice with other clubs sefore the tournament opened, he said. Punch clubs have been used all over the world, he said. ### DUCHESS GETTING BUSY

Lendon, June 23.—The Duke and Duchess of York are not seen much in London iately, owing to the whooling cough illness of the latter, but she will soon be able to attend society affairs.

The royal couple have moved from Frogmore, which was lent them by the King while their own place was being redecorated, to White Lodge, at Richmond, which is now ready for them.

Although the duchess will do a certain amount of entertaining, she will be unable to give large affairs, as White Lodge is not big enough to accommodate apy great number of guests and does not possess a ball, room. She is expected, however, to give several garden parties in the grounds, which are spacious and beautiful.

Englishman Would Rather Be Burned Than Be Caught Sentimental, Beith Says

London, June 23.—The latest con-tributions to the job of aiding Anglo-American relations came when a debate was held for the benefit of London hospitals by Major Ian Hay Beith, British and Sinclafr Lewis, American, comparing "Main Street" and "High Street."

Street" and "High Street."

Major Beith said the balance was even. Mr. Lewis complained of English "superciliousness."

Main Street and High Street are fairly described in the literatures of the two countries, said Major Beith, Main Street signifying the realism of American writing, while High Street, which is found in nearly every English community just as almost every American town has its Main Street, signifies the old romantic glamour of English novels.

Boosters vs. Knockers

But it was no use. Lewis was in dead earnest. He was interested in Anglo-American amity, he isaid, and there could be no Anglo-American amity until English people understood us better.

The "conjurer, too, tried to leave several times, but each time Lewis nailed him with a "Just a minute now."

At last he and the trembling conjurer were left alone and face to face. Lewis's breath gave out. He turned and stalked from the room. And watchers from the doorway saw the conjurer draw from the small of his back a little dog that had fallen asleep and a moribund rabbit from each trouser leg. But an unfortunate canary had been suffocated in the pit of each of the conjurer's arms. "And the egg" most people asis. "The egg had hatched." LABOR MEMBERS SHUN LIQUORS

London, June 23.—In proportion to their numbers, the members of the Labor Party drink far less than those of any other political party represented in Parliament. It was asserted by Dr. Salter, Labor M.P., in an address before the Industrial Christian Fellowship. So many of his party are tectotalers, he said, that they will soon be called upon to pay more for their means.

"But the committee now complains," he added, "that the restaurant is being run at a heavy loss. The sole reason for that is that the great accession in strength to the Labor Party—which now number 144 members—has caused a great falling of in the consumption of alcoholic drinks in the House. Many members who had liberally patronized the bar

No man in Canada has received with greater satisfaction the news of the definite and final action of the General Assembly of the Prestaterian Church in pronouncing in favor of church union, and in enduring the draft bill drawn up by the union committee of the three denominations concerned, than Rev. On the upion basis of a friendship of twenty-five years, I asked him to grant me, a Presbyterian, who had voted for union at the recent meeting of the Assembly, an interview on some of the aspects of this big question. I reminded him of the fact that the recent decision at Port Arthur would stimulate the interest of a large section of the general public that had stot as yet given much thought to a story of finally preparing it for submission to Parliament."

He Helde Out the Graft bill to which is not careful of the Method of the Clive Branch.

Much Hard Work Ahead.

After expressing his gratification at the final decision of the Presbyterian church in approving the basis of union and in "astructing its newly appointed committee on church union to join the representatives of the sister churchs in presenting the draft bills to the Dominion Parliament and the Provincial Legislatures next Winter, Dr. Chown pointed out that these will be private bills which will not divide the legislative bodies along party lines. He thought that it was possible that this legislation could be secured throughout Canada by April, 1924. "But even after the United Church of Canada becomes a legal entity," Dr. Chown explained. The Methodist Church is perfectly sympathetic with the desire of the Presbyterian Church—and this is a point that has not been urged by opponents of church union—that the state should not in any way limit the theological church union—that the state should not in any way limit the theological liberties of the united church. In purely spiritual matters the law of the state should not control the freedom of the church. We believe, therefore, that the church at any time should have the right to change or alter its theological standards as new light may break forth from the word of God. And to that end we would desire that an explicit declaration should be inserted in the act of incorporation to the effect that the United Church of Canada has under Christ, the great head of the church,

The Tax Case.

Perhaps the most outstanding of his many activities in Victoria was his determined fight for the exemption of church sites from taxation. For a number of years he kept his views on this subject before the public, and finally, in 1918, he tested them in the Appeal Court of British Columbia, and when the City of Victoria went to the Privy Council in London, the Bishop gained an overwhelming legal victory.

During the war his great love of country lead him to offer his own services, as a chaplain to the Canadian forces. As the acceptance of this offer was out of the question, he glady sent three of his own priests to take up this work, although they could ill be spared. These were, Fathers J. I. Bradley, McDonnel, M. C., and A. B. Wood. He was always ready to take the platform when he felt that his assistance would be good for the cause of the country.

He studied at the Urban College of the Propaganda, where he received the degree of D. D. He also attendated S. Francis Navier Liversetty, Paracies, Navier Liversetty, Interestics of S. Francis Navier Liversetty and added $30 for that purpose.

Little Human Touches Win Friends for Mr. Hay

Little Acts of Kindness of Political Opponent Never Forgotten by Dr. Forbes Godfrey.

Few men in the public life of Ontario have re personal friends among all parties, opponents as well as friends, than has Wellington Hay, the Liberal leader of Ontario. His qualities of heart, as well as head, so rare in a political leader, stood him in good stead during the acrimonious his mind with F. Wellington Hau of the busy man of affairs, and can diffe als opponents on political matters with force and vigor, he has a quality of comradeship that few leaders possess. Examples of this are many. No two men are further apart politically than Mr. Hay and Dr. Godfrey, the vehement West York Tory. Yet when the doctor's health falled during last session and he had to leave for hospital treatment in New York and go on to Bermuda to recuperate, one of those at the to Hermida to recuperate, one of those at the station that chilly night he left was a chief among his opponents, Mr. Hay. This little unostentations touch of human kindness is a memory the Mimico doctor likes to recall.

Never Saw a Really Pretty Woman, Famous Artist Courageously Says

Forfeiting $50,000 to Paint a Picture the Way He Pleases Is Only the Eccentricity of Sir William Orpen-Even the Government Did Not Get What It Wanted From Him.

IF it is the unquestioned right of genius to be startingly original, even in the most trivial actions of life, Major Sir William Orpen, R.A., takes full advantage of his position as one of the very greatest portrait painters of the day. He is also a remarkably brave man.

The best proof of the latter quality is the courageous statement which he recently made hat in all his twenty-five years of work as an artist he has never met with a perfect model or a really pretty woman. It is true that he has made some amends for his lack of gallantry by painting a charming portrait of Lady Orpen showing her to have a good claim to both distinctions; but the remark remains on record as an example of his bravery or his eccentricityaccording to the point of view."

While averse to publicity, "Old Bill," as his intimates are said to call him, is not in the least a recluse. He is a very popular member of great many clubs. It is safe to say, however, that none of these is more to his taste than that which was held at his bedroom-studio at Amiens during the war. "The Bar" had only two rules. First-it did not open until 6.30 p.m. Secondthe last man out opened the window.

"It smelt," says the founder, "of mud, paint, drink, smoke, and the fumes of the famous 'Flame Blue' oil stove,"

Regularly at ten-thirty the lost arose, threw away his cigarette, and, calmly undressing, got to bed and to sleep. How long the other members kept it up he rarely knew.

According to the artist himself, his best portrait is that magnificent character study of his friend, Sir Wm. McCormick. The strong personality of the face and form gave him, apparently little trouble: but he confesses to a difficulty with one of the boots. In fact, so much time was spent over this detail that McCormick fin-existence of any such sliding scale.

Talking of boots recalls his celebrated disput with Lord Leverhulme, of Sunlight Soap fame. According to this potentate, a price was quoted of 2,900 guineas for a full length, 1,500 for three-quarters. Orpen, of course, denies the existence of any such sliding scale.

However, sittings were arranged. As the details of his lordship's facade did not lend themselves to high art when standing, he was depicted seated. Having received the completed canvas, he had it measured, discovered that it was only seventy-five inches in length, and that his boots did not appear, and at once sent off a cheque for the alteged price of the three-quarter length. How the matter was settled is not known, but, when last heard from "Old Bill" was still protesting vigorously against the docking of 500 guineas for a pair of hoots. ing of 500 guineas for a pair of boots.

His best known—as distinguished from his finest—work is undoubtedly "The Unknown Soldier in France."

He was commissioned by the British Govern ment to paint three pictures of the great peace conference. Two of these were cone according to contract. The third was to have been the al urbane portrayal of about forty notables onference in the hall of peace of Versailles. t is what the Government ordered—this is

Over the broken flesh, with its starting bones, plays a ghastly light, almost phosphorescent, of which the artist says, gruesomely:
"My critics have never seen what happens to a body when it is exposed for a few days."

As Orpen worked upon the snugly eminent men his thoughts dweit, he says, upon the soldiers who remain in France foreyer. The formal subject seemed "so unimportant"; and so he rubbed out nine months' work and forfeited $50,000 to paint this drastic memorial of all the unknown soldiers in France.

Sad Boy Exile, Who Reigns in San Sebastian, Spain, as King of Hungary.

EUROPE has a new L'Aigion, little Otto II., heir to the shadowy throne of Hungary. At th ekingly age of 11 this last scion of the Hapsburg line holds court in San Sebastian, Spain, and the ftct that he is king of Hnugary has been regularly entered in the town register.

That is almost the only outward sign of his royalty, but within the high walls of his retreat Otto reigns as nearly as possible as though he were back in Vienna and the war had not been fought and the dual monarchy still was the great empire of old.

For subjects he has Zita, his mother, consort of the pathetic Karl, dead more than a year ago in Madeira. His six brothers and sisters make obeisance when he passes—at least, those big enough to understand what it is to be a

An old court chamberlain is in attendance to whom "his majesty" means every bit as much in San Sebastian as if he walked in the gardens of Schonbrunn. If we add a few ladies who cling to the skirts of their former empress have the whole royal establishment.

Austria is lost to him, irrevocably, it would seem. But Hungary remains. There walts a crown, if he can only gain it. At the moment it is held in fee by Admiral Horthy, who is regent in form, dictator in effect. The exact status of the country would be somewhat hard to define. It has been a monarchy, a soviet, a republic and a regency in rapid order. There is a strong royalist group, perhaps the strongest in Europe, and this group looks hopefully to ward San Sebastian and the iron gates which shut in Otto II., just as Otto looks toward Occasionally a deputation arrives and there are formal ceremonies, The boy has been described as a child of great beauty and serious mien, one with understanding beyond his years.

Young Otto was born into a troublous world. His awakening might be traced to a certain night when some worried looking men of the court took him out of his bed and packed him into a motor car. "Your highness must not cry," they told him, and instinctively he held his breath while the car passed out a back way and slipped off into the darkness. The next morning Otto worke up in the Godollo hunting castle in Hungary. Then another night came when a different sort of soldiers appeared at the castle gate. They were not so trim as those others who had paced the court and much more noisy. There was excitement, agitation, within. Somebody took Otto and hurried him into a motor car again. The car started, was hailed, paused, and Otto's heart kept time with the engine. "That's Otto Hapsburg," said one of the noisy soldiers, forerunners of the revolution.

"Oh, let him go," answered another, "he is not responsible for his ancestors."

At last the powers stepped in. They could not have Otto's father so near his former realm, forever waiting a chance to reclaim moved Karl and Zita, Otto and all his brothers and sisters to Madeira, an island too remote to serve as a base of coup d'etat.

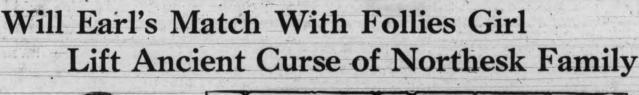

Otto and his parents lived in the Villa Quinta de Monte. But Otto was not destined to know many joys there. Money became a thing of the utmost necessity to Karl and Zita. Finally his father had no funds to pay the rent and he was much too proud to accept a landlord's benevolence. Then he fell ill. One day the court chamberlain entered Otto's room and said, "Good morning, majesty." The king was dead; L'Aiglon was king.

Even a world with sympathles almost exhausted by the war felt the appeal of this exiled emperor's death and the plight of his heir. Alfonso of Spain responded handsomely. Fliting honors were paid the dead monarch and Zita was invited to Spain.

Many Hungarian notables have paid homage to this boy king's court in recent months. Count Albert Apponyl, leader of the monarchists, who journey there from Budapest not long ago, said of Otto: "He is a very clever, interesting child, of a meditative turn of mine, who is preparing himself to take up his duties as king of Hungary when the time comes.

Zita is of French blood and had two brothers in the allied armies. Throughout the war shows and another the property of the said that the property of the suspected sympathies with the Franch cause.

Divorce Decree Holds Up Wedding Between Follies Girl and Young Scottish Earl

This is how the young Earl of Northesk looked a few hours after he arrived in New York to claim his bride, Miss Jessica Brown, formerly of the Zeigfield Follies, whom he met in London, where she danced at a cafe. In the centre is Miss Brown as she appeared when she met "David" as he stepped on the dock. In the other photo Miss Brown is shown in one of her acts.

In January Miss Jessica Brown, a forme lies girk, was dancing at the caparet of th Grafton Galleries in London. The Grafton Galleries had been a popular restaurant, but when blonde, hair, the Grafton Galleries easily became the "most popular" of London restaurants.

It was about this time that David Ludevic George Hopetown Carnegie, Earl of Northesk, entered the Grafton Galleries one evening. He admitted afterwards that he became hopele in love with Miss Brown at first sight. There were so many reasons why Dave Carnegie did not try to draw up a list for consideration, but "popped the question" at once. Then he resigned from the Coldstream Guards, whose regiments! traditions forbids officers wedding women, who are, or have been, on the stage

The next scene was on the dock in New York the other day when the young each only twenty-tree Trans of again to be exact arrived from Engage and to claim his bride. In spite of the batteries of movie cameras. Miss Brown threw her arms around his neck; and, afterwards, he said that he hoped to be married soon and to be taking his bride to the family seat, Ethie Castle, Arbroath, Forfarshire.

Jessica Brown, who is easily one of the world's most beautiful women, was born in Buffalo, N.Y., where she studied aesthetic and classical dancing as a child. After dancing in a few provincial cabarets she broke into the vaudeville world in New York, in 1916. She was a Schubert show girl for some Ume, and was, subsequently, at the Winter Garden Theatre. Miss Brown was formerly Mrs. Cyril be Witt, Reinhard, wife of the naval contractor and engineer, whom she married in 1918 and divorced in Chicago last October. She is just the same age as the young earl.

There is an interesting question also of how

There is an intercetting question also of how Miss Brown will be received in English society. The Countess of Northesk, with the roots of her family tree reaching almost down to China, is waiting to receive his bride with open arms, the young earl declares. Just what Queen Mary will do, however, is uncertain. Though large-minded in many things, the Queen has reso-

VANCOUVER ISLAND

A Brief Sketch of Its History and Possibilities By W. MILLER HIGGS, F. S. G., London

The Inlet know as Sooke Harbor, though one of the most beautiful sections of Southern Vancouver Island its, generally speaking, little know for the simple reason that it has been little advertised in comparison with other portions of the Island.

This, the most Southerly harbor in the Province of British Columbia, is located at the extreme Southwestern end of Vancouver Island, is located at the extreme Southwestern end of Vancouver Island, is located at the extreme Southwestern witcoria. Some six miles in length, with a waterfrontage of fifteen miles, it is divided into two basins by what is known as Billing's Spit at the mouth of the lovely Sooke River. On the northern shore of the outer basin rests the old settlement known as Sooke Village with its saimon fishing industry and historic associations, while on the northern shore associations, while on the northern slopes of the inner basin (the area of which is four square miles with an average depth of seven fathoms) is now the rapidly developing Summer resort called Saseenos. It was near the village of Ploegsteert, the "Plug Street" of Tommy fame, that Major-General Leckie in February, 1916, received wounds which necessitated his evacuation from France. Then followed a period of convalescence in which he returned to Canada, and on June 4, 1911, took over the command of Military District 11, from Col. Duff Stuart.

well worthy of acquiring. Like every other good quality it must be practised conscien-tiously until it has become second nature. Then only does it become habit, but one of the most prepossessing habits in this world to-day. Write down the names of the friends who seem most real to you. In nine cases out of ten you will have written the names of those with whom you come in contact and find capable of denying themselves to

Supposing you pause with your pencil opposite each name on such a list and ask yourself this question, "Do they think as much of me?" What would be the answer? Unselfish ness may be shown in a great many different ways but in them all it springs from a desire to help others first and self last. It may seem strange, but to help others first is one of the surest ways of helping yourself in the long run. Unselfish people are loved wherever they go, and no matter what realm of life they occupy

Take, for instance, the example set by the Boy Scout code. A Boy Scout promises to do a "good turn" every day. To live up to this the scout has to search for a means of helping someone by some act of personal self-sacrifice in each and every day. After a scout has been a short time at this he becomes accustomed to thinking of others first and himself last. The more he keeps to the word of his promise, the better scout he is—also the better citizen he is.

Not long ago a heavy truck lumbered up the street to the home of an old lady and dropped street to the nome of an old hady and dropped two reputed cords of wood in front of her gar-den gate. Then the truck drove off. The driv-ers of the truck did not carry in the wood be-cause they were not told to do so, and the old lady had no one at home to put the fuel in the basement of her house.

Shortly along came a roving mendicant. He offered to put in the wood for $1. His offer was refused because the old lady did not have many dollars to spare, and the price of wood had been high enough of itself. Then two Boy Scouts passed. That is, they were about to pass, when they saw the old lady standing on the steps looking very worried. Saluting courtequily one looking very worried. Saluting courteously, one boy asked what was the matter. The house-holder explained.

Without a word both boys carried in the wood. It was a long and tedious operation for two lads who, though eager to help, were of tender years. The wood was very heavy. Af-

There is the key to the whole question of unselfishness-it is a duty-a duty which devolves upon all in this world—the duty of helping others less fortunate than ourselves. As we would have pleasures of our own, we should try to bring happiness to the lives of others. Look around your circle of friends. Are there not plenty of ways in which you could practice unselfishness? Try it once, and ever after you will realize what it means to serve. The joy of doing a kind act for another is the greatest of doing a kind act for another is the given pleasure possible to attain.

It would not be difficult to find many examples of true unselfishness among children, where they live in homes where unselfishness is the rule and not the exception. Take, on the other hand, what happens in other realms of Nature. Have you ever watched a group of pack rats at work, or ants? When pack rats run back and forth storing away grain for their Winter feeding they work singly. If they find Winter feeding they work singly. If they find something as large and heavy as a hen's egg, two and sometimes three of them will help to two and sometimes three of them will help to cart it away. That egg, as far as we can find out, is for the use of one family of rats alone— and yet two other rats helped to bring it to the home of their neighbor.

With ants this quality of service is even more with ants this quality of service is even more noticeable. You could not watch an ant colony at work for long without seeing myriads of the little creatures tugging and straining to get provender many times larger than themselves into their home. Thousands are scurrying in all directions and each returning with its contribution to the computity stock. When on any directions and each returning with its contri-bution to the community stock. When an ant discovers something that is too heavy for it to move it will call on the others, and several of the little insects will gather around to aid in towing the load to the storehouse. This is done usually by actually sawing up the object. In this manner you might see many a dead wasp cut in half and towed home in sections by ants of the same colony.

Mankind sometimes works in groups to do things that he could not do alone, but very often he is to receive payment for his share in the work. That is not the same thing as working voluntarily to benefit another. The latter is the quality of unselfishness which distin-guishes Nature's gentleman,

The Sandman Story For To-night

MR. FOX TRIES TO HELP MR. DOG

Mr. Fox was feeling very forlorn and sad. He was thinking about the Winter and how hard it would be to get a good meal with the snow on the ground, and the ever watchful Mr. Dog at the farm on the hill.

"Now why in the world does he not sleep all Winter like Mr. Bear?" thought Mr. Fox, and then he jumped, slapped his sides and began to laugh. "He might," he said. "He might! Mr. Dog is always ready enough to listen if you approach him in the right way."

Mr. Fox sat down again and was lost in thought for some time. Then he ran out of the house straight toward the farm on the hill, and when he came to a rock which was on the other side of the fence from Mr. Dog's house he jumped on it and sat down.

Pretty soon along came Mr. Dog, jumping about and playing in the snow. Mr. Fox jumped down and by the time Mr. Dog came up to him he was rolling over and playing just as Mr. Dog was doing.

"Growl," went Mr. Dog, starting toward Mr. Fox but Mr. Fox was not to be scared. He just jumped at Mr. Dog as if to tag him and then ran toward the woods and Mr. Dog after

When they reached the woods Mr. Fox turned around and began to dance about again and Mr. Dog forgot his duty to his master and began to glay just as Mr. Fox intended he should.

By and by Mr. Fox ast down. "It is going to be a long Winter, I think, and I believe I shall try Mr. Bear's plan," he said, "and go to sleep and not wake up till springtime."

"Why dow's way do the same, Mr. Dog?" he

"Why don't yed do the same, Mr. Dog?" he asked. "It must be pretty dull for you around the farm. And then I should think you would want to get away from Mr. Man for a while. I fancy he is not so considerate of you in the Winter time as he might be.

Winter time as he might be.

"It is a shame to make you alect out in that house, where it must be very cold, when he could just as well let you sleep in the kitchen behind the stove, where it is nice and warm."

This was a very unpleasant subject to Mr. Dog, for he had often thought the some thing about the kitchen stove and tried many times to hide and get a chance to sleep there. But every time his master had found him and made him go out in his house to spend the night.

"Where could I find a nice place to sleep all Winter?" he inquired. "I guess master will wish he bad let me sleep in the kitchen when he finds I am gone."

Mr. Fox began to smile. He was thinking

Winter with Mr. Dog stored away somewhere sleep until Spring.

"You come with me, Mr. Dog," he said. "I will show you a place where you will be com-fortable, for I do think your master is most unfair to you and I should like to help you." Mr. Fox had noticed a place among some rocks that very morning where he was certain there must be a cave-like place, and here he led Mr. Dog.

led Mr. Dog.

"There," he said, when they reached it, "you crawl in there. You will find dried leaves and other sort of things and when the next snow comes it will cover these rocks and no one will ever find you, and when you go home in the Spring I guess Mr. Man will be pretty glad to see you." Then off ran Mr. Fox for his home. But what he did not know was that he had taken Mr. Dog to the very place Mr. Porcupine had chosen for his Winter bedroom and when Mr. Dog crawled into the cave he came up against Mr. Porcupine's quills. For he always sleeps with his back to the opening of his cave.

Mr. Dog ran ki-yi-ing for home, and that night when Mr. Fox ran carelessly into the barnyard he found a very angry and savage Mr. Dog waiting for him. Mr. Fox's ear was nipped but he managed to get away. "Now, how could be treat me in such a manner?" mused Mr. Fox when he reached home. "Even if he did not care to aleep all Winter he ought to remember that 1 acted in a very friendly way toward him.

But Mr. Dog of course thought Mr. Fox had taken him to the cave knowing just what was to happen to him and he slept with one eye open and both ears listening all Winter, and Mr. Fox did have a very hard Winter, very hard

What a Chickadee Saw In Forest Glen

Dawn broke fair in the woodlands. Over the tops of the pine trees scurrying clouds chased one another away until all gave way. Then seemed a fitting roof for such stately settings. One by one the birds awakened to hop down to the ground for their morning meal. Squirrels darted briskly across the clearing in search of a fresh pine cone that a kindly wind had shaken from its tree overnight.

Grasshoppers jumped merrily along, though where they went was hard to see because their course was so erratic. Leaving the level of the lake for the protection of the bills deer yadded softly across the clearing. It was a peaceful scene — such a scene as may be observed almost anywhere in the forests of this fair Island.

Into the clearing, as the sun broke out into its warming rays, tramped two boys. On their backs were bundles and in their hands fishing rods. They stopped in the centre of the opening and dropped their packages. Then one connected up his fishing rod to drop a fly into the nearby stream. The other set about gathering twigs to light a fire. Presently a merry blaze was going in the centre of the clearing.

From the fire a column of sparks rose in spirals as the heated air drew them up from the hot coals. The sparks traveled a short distance and then went out, or at least lost their redness. Busy with their outing plans, the hoys took little stock of their surroundings. Soon the fire-lighter left the blaze to join the other at fishing.

All unknown to the lads, something akin to other at fishing.

All unknown to the lads, something akin to dismay had settled on the little inhabitants, of that clearing. Nature's creatures are affeld of the mysterious—shift fire is an unwelcome sight to them. The Sive jays were the first to complain. A large blue jay that had hopped from branch to branch until it was almost over the heads of the intruders, lowered his head and sent forth a screech of protest. "Noisy beggar," said one boy, and stooped to pick up a stone to throw at the bird.

Less noisily, but with no less alarm, a pair of wrens were holding a council or war. You

VICTORIA GIRL LEADS ALL CANADA IN ESSAY CONTEST

Bjornsfelt, eleven-year-old pu-pil of Division VI., South Park Maxwell essay competition's premier award from thousands of competitors in every part of Canada. The competition was arranged under the auspices of the National Chapter of the I.O.D.E., and was open to children of twelve years of age and under throughout Canada from coast to coast.

Bjornsfelt led not only her local competitors but all in Canada, gaining first prize. The subject of the essay was "Heroism," and our readers will agree that the Victoria standardbearer earned the handsome set of six volumes of Sir Walter Scott donated as the prize. The essay follows:

A Brave Deed

"In a tiny cottage by the railroad lived a poor family. Times had not always been so hard for them. Once they had owned a little farm and had been fairly prosperous, but one crop failure followed another until the little home had to be given up, and the husband had taken the only position open for him, which was that of looking after a section of the railroad.

"It was lonely work, and he did not look forward with any thought of comfort or pleas-ure to his return home, because his wife was sickly and his son in almost constant pain from hin disease.

"The only neighbor was another trackman "The only neighbor was another trackman, but he was a surly-ill-tempered man who was pleasant to no one, least of all to his fellow workman. This man seemed to have a grudge against everybody and everything. He was always planning revenge on someone, and for some time he had been saying he would 'get' the president of the railroad yet. When he did not get a certain job which he coveted he not get a certain job which he coveted, he ed the president and said one day he

"The other trackman paid little attention to "The other trackman paid little attention to these threats, but one day when he was inspecting the track he saw a rail had been taken up in one place. Glancing about quickly, he saw the fast-disappearing figure of the grumbler. He remembered their talk the day before of the special express which would pass over their road carrying the president. A hasty look at his watch and a faint rumble in the distance told him he had no time to fix the track, nor could he think of any way to stop the train. A red flag was necessary, and from where in this short space of time could he secure a red flag?

see, in gathering sticks for the fire one boy had see, in gathering sticks for the are one boy had knocked the bark off a dead tree in a broken limb of which the wrens had their nest. Now in that nest were three little baby wrens, too young to fiq and too old to be moved by their parents. It was indeed a calamity for the wrens. Once let a hawk catch sight of that nest, thought the wrens, and all would be lost.

nest, thought the wrens, and all would be lost.
On the other side of the clearing two squirrels chattered angrily. The smoke from the fire had driven both out of their trees, and one indeed had felt the hot sting of a spark that lit on his fur to singe it before dying out. On the ground the situation was no less disturbed. Grasshoppers and crickets, to make use of their own expression, were "hopping mad."
Beetles scurried across the ground as fast as their short legs would let them. Even earth worms that had been summoned to the surface of the ground by the tread of the intruders crawled away disgustedly.
Indeed, the disgust of the woodland crea-ers crawled away disgustedly.

Indeed, the disgust of the woodland creatures was complete. Even the merry chickadees stopped their hide-and-seek to watch the fires. A spark, larger than usual, fiew past where an elderly chickades swung upside down on the underside of a fir branch. The bird pecked at it angrily and, luckily for itself, missed seizing the hot coal.

All this time the boys had gone on fishing. Though they made cast after cast with artificial flies on the stream, they caught no fish. At last one boy suggested that it might be the smoke of the fire that stopped the trout from The thought of people being maimed or killed made him desperate.

"For a moment he thought of what would happen to his suffering wife and boy if they were without his support, but the nearer rumble of the train made him understand that he must decide quickly. His life, or the lives of all those on the train! Only a red flag-the danger signal-could stop the train. Pulling his knife and handkerchief from his pocket, he cut a deep gash in his arm. He soaked the handkerchief in his blood and, waving it over his head, he began to run towards the train. He stumbled on, but everything seemed to go black before him, and he fell.

black before him, and he fell.

"When he became conscious again he was lying on the bank beside the track and a group of people stood around him. He tried to get up, but was so weak that he fell back. He found that his arm was bandaged. Then he remembered and said: 'Did I stop it? Was I in time?' Then it seemed to him as if a lot of people started raiking at the same time, and he heard them saying, 'Yes, you were in time,' and 'Let's take up a collection.' He glanced curiously at them and wondered what was happening, for he still felt dazed. Then the man who was called 'Doctor' by the others asked him if he could tell thein everything from the beif he could tell them everything from the be-

"He told them he was the trackman, and how he had come along that morning and discovered the rail out of place, and how he could think of no other way to stop the train which he heard coming than to cut his arm and wave the blood-soaked handkerchief, which would then be a danger signal. He did not mention that he knew it was the grumbler that tried to wreck the train. wreck the train.

"The men helped him down to his house and told his wife what a brave man her husband was; and they gave her the money they had collected among themselves. The wife was very frightened when she saw her husband very frightened when she saw her husband looking so very weak and white, but she knew he would soon be well and strong again and was in no danger. She was very proud of him and much pleased about the money. They would now be shie to take their boy to a good doctor and also buy themselves many necessities and even a few of the extra comforts of "The president was much pleased with this bravery, and not long after sent a letter offering him a position where a man who could think and act quickly was needed. The president was sure he would be able to fill the vacancy. You may be sure our friend accepted this offer, and soon he and his family were living in much rising. Accordingly they kicked the fire apart. The hot cinders glowed redly for a moment, as if angry at being disturbed, and then went black. The fishing was then resumed, but without any better success. Disappointed with their luck, the lads gathered up their bundles and left the clearing.

All this time a wind had been rising, and by now it blew freshly from the north. The black embers of the fire that the boys had kicked apart began to awake under the faming of the breeze until they turned red again. In a few breeze until they turned red again. In a few moments one log sprang into flames. In a very short time the fire was well alight again. There was this difference, though—where be-fore the fire had been built in the centre of the clearing, now it straggled all over the place. By this time the woodland creatures were thor-oughly alarmed, and many of them were leavoughly alarmed, and many of them were leaving the clearing for other parts of the forest.

Just as sparks from the burning log lit in the middle of a bundle of dry bracken and set it alight, a man tramping through the bushes emerged in the clearing. In a very few seconds he had the bracken extinguished and had thrown cold water on the hot embers all around. The boys who lit the fire neither knew nor cared what trouble they left behind them. But the creatures of the woodlands knew. Thep appreciated the act of the man. He, their friend, was a forest ranger. He would spend that day, the next and many, many more in putting out fires that careless hands lit.

A Real Bear Hug

Jack, the dog, and Pudge, the bear cub, love each other. And they can't help showing their devotion in this embrace at the Los Angeles zoo. It's a bear of a hug, all right.

All at once it seemed as if she was out un-der the open air, standing on a country lane she had not known before. Roses bloomed on either side of the road in sweetly scented hedges. Birds sang from the branches of cherry trees, which intermingled their foliage over the centre of the way. The road itself was strewn with a thick carpet of cherry blossoms. It was a beautiful sight. Doris blinked her eyes twice a beautiful sight. Doris blinked her eyes twice or three times before she could believe she was really standing there.

did exist if she knew where to find

Curious to see more, Doris tripped along merrily. Somehow she felt very happy—every-thing seemed so full of joy around her. The thing seemed so full of joy around her. The birds sang as if they had not a care in the word. Their trilling made the little girl break into song herself. It was in this glad frame of mind that Doris came to a crossroads at the end of the lane. The way ahead appeared to be less pleasant than the road upon which she had arrived. To the right and left were roads of great beauty, running as far as the eye could see through masses of fruit trees peopled by singing birds.

A signpost at the corner gave her some guid-ance. The foad straight "ahead was called Back to Reality," that on which she had come "Imagination," and the roads to the right and left "Pairyland" and "Dreamland" respectively.

Doris hesitated no longer but tripped down the way called "Fairyland." She had not gone far before the liftle girl noticed that she was no longer alone. This road was much travelled and by such a happy gathering.

What would have seemed to her before as "toy" automobiles were shooting along at a great rate with Golliwogs, Buster Browns and Teddy Bears at their wheels. Proceeding more slowly but with quite as much merriment Doris saw Rag Dolls on roller skates, Stuffed Doggles riding skidmobiles, and a vast army of other toys in every direction. Presently Doris arrived at another turning in the road. And here stood a traffic officer. Not a blue-coated constable, but a real fairy with little silver wings on each side of quite the most cheerful face in the world.

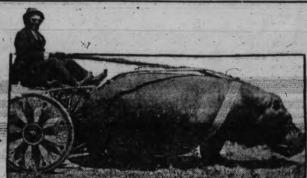

'Please, sir, how can I get to Fairyland?" Doris asked. Speaking with a very Irish brogue the traffic fairy waved his hand. All traffic stood still. Then he came over to Doris and piloted her across the road. "Go down this road." he said. "When you come to a crossroad turn to the right."

Doris thanked the fairy and set off. Now her way was peopled by fairles she recognized. Fairy godmothers were on every hand. These were surrounded by many little children like-Doris herself. One was telling a story to her little charges, others were binding up a cut hand or tuking a tuck in a torn dress—in short, behaving like all really good fairles do behave.

Fairy Princess in beautiful robes, with the most beautiful faces imaginable, were tripping along stopping now and then to buy flowers from the hands of tiny flower gatherers. Doris made out also the people of many a nursery story. Old Mother Hubbard, Jack and Jill, Litstory. Old Mother Hubbard, Jack and Jill, Lat-tie Jack Horner and many more—they were all there, laughing and playing as if they had stepped out of their books for a rest. In fact, so interested did the little girl become in all she saw that at the crossroads she turned to the left instead of the right.

In a second Doris found herself back in her chair at home. The rose-colored glasses had fallen off her nose. Fairyland was gone! Ever after that Doris would chide any little girl she found disbetteving in fairies. "All you need it 'magination," she would say, and then her ex-

Problem for Companies
All the indications are that the British Government is anxious to keep entirely clear of the dispute, putting the whole onus on the shipping companies. This attitude is condemned by one section of the press, The Daily Express, for instance, reparding the action of the United States authorities as "in a sense an attempt to dictate to other countries."

The Daily Mail believes the shipping companies are entirely right.

The Dally Mail believes the shipping companies are entirely right.

Territorial Waters

On the other hand, The Morning Chronicle regrets the procedure taken by the companies, fearing it may have a consequence "which it would be better not to have provoked." The newspaper fears the incident may raise the whole question of limits of territorial waters and says "Great Britain would have everything to lose and nothing to gain in such a discussion."

AUSTRALIAN NETMEN UNABLE TO PLAY HERE

Met by officials of the Victoria Lawn Tennis Club on their arrival from Honolulu on the Makura, the Australian Davis cup tennis quartette sincerely regretted that they were unable to accept the cordial invitation to play on the Willows court. The team consists of J. O. Anderson, J. B. Hawkes, I. D. McInnes and R. E. Schlesinger, Anderson being captain of the team and Schlesinger the manager. The players are on complete aloofness from the controversy maintained by the British Government, and all information drawn from official sources confirms the assertion made in well-informed quarters yesterday that the Government does not challenge the liquor ruling, recognizing Great Britain's jurisdiction ceases at the three-mile limit.

This sort of dinner takes so much time to prepare that there will be no enjoyment in it for the one who has done the preparing. Summer meals should be planned with an eye to the difficulty entailed in preparing them.

Proposal Opposed in Commons By Dr. Tolmie

Ottawa, June 23. - "Renovated

saie of ocemargarine, joined in warmly.

Mr. Motherwell defended renovated butter as a solution of the problem of "a cheap spread on bread," and defined it as about half-way between creamery butter and oleomargarine.

Dr. Toime said the Minister had explained to the committee the constituents of renovated butter, but had failed to state that it was made up largely of rancid butter and bad smell. It was now proposed to permit the use of dirty butter which had come from unclean cream separators, and possibly cows, in the form of renovated butter.

Declared Great Mistake.

The Story of Our Rocks

Early in July, 1915, I made my first acquaintance with the fossiliferous sandstones of the Sooke formation. With three young companions I left Goldstream station and followed the road which, passing the Humpback Reservoir, traverses the valley between Mount Macdonald and Lone Tree Hill, and then unites with the Sooke road. It was my first experience of this picturesque district, and in spite of the heat, intensified by the radiation from the great rock scarps that the mechanical revolution was every day making more imperative. They were accepted because people in general had neither the sweeping views that a study of world history can give, nor had they any longer the comprehensive charity of a world religion. Their danger to all the routines of ordinary life was not realized until it was too late.

Would Have Thought Impossible.

The Big Surprise.

Father and mother, fully dressed, came to their door. Tillie opened her door cautiously and put out her head; a striped kimona falling away from her long neck gave her the appearance of a curious giraffe. Junior, hearing the noise, came stumbling out of his room.

"Listeni It's from him." She read-aloud:

"Dear Miss Mason: I tried to see you yesterday afternoon but your landlady said you had gone home for over Sunday. I hope you are not taking my talk to heart. Most probably you are not, as your disposition seems to be of a marvelously cheerful and elastic type. And, anyway, what's a dandelion or two between friends?

"Hawe just come from the board meeting and have the pleasure of reporting your election. I have placed you in the Lafayette school for next year, the grounds of that building being somewhat overrun with certain yellow weeds. You will do doubt take pleasure in assisting the janitor.

Father and mother, fully dressed, came a good profile."

Tillie was saying, "My good land, you doen the Dutch."

Junior, at the close of a prodiglous yawn, asked unintelligibly, "Wh'd 'o mean, dandelions," had nothing. She was looking at the lovely flushed face of her starry-eyed girl and making a little incoherent prayer, "Dear Lord-keep her happy—like that."

The excitement over, they all went back to their rooms, "I can't help but be glad she got it." Father was pulling off his sock and tenderly regarding his favorite with the was anyng. For Cathedral.

At the Church Hall, Deep Cove, on Thursday afternoon there was a combined meeting of the two parishes, Holy Trinity, Patricia Bay, and St. Andrew's Sidney, to discuss the Village Fair to be held in Victoria to augment the found for the new cathedral. Mrs. Pemberton, of Victoria, was present and explained all the details of the Fair. There was a good representation from both churches. Tea was served. The Rev. T. M. Hughes, Rector of North Saanich, then passed a very hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Pemberton for coming out here.
