

Chesterwood

*Daniel Chester French
Mary French
William Penn Cresson
Margaret French Cresson*

FC

M 2437

(1)

DUP.

Robert S. French

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2010 with funding from

The Institute of Museum and Library Services through an Indiana State Library LSTA Grant

© The Brick Row Print and Book Shop, Inc.

New Haven, Conn.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN
AND
HIS BOOKS

BY

WILLIAM E. BARTON

Author of

"The Soul of Abraham Lincoln,"
"The Paternity of Abraham Lincoln," etc.

=

With Selections from the Writings of Lincoln and a Bibliography of Books in Print
Relating to Abraham Lincoln

=

CHICAGO

Published by the Book Section of

MARSHALL FIELD & COMPANY

1920

Copyright 1920
MARSHALL FIELD & COMPANY

C O N T E N T S

PART I

ABRAHAM LINCOLN AND HIS BOOKS

I. THE BOOKS THAT MADE LINCOLN	7
II. THE BOOKS THAT LINCOLN MADE	20
III. BOOKS ABOUT LINCOLN	27

PART II

SELECTIONS FROM THE WRITINGS OF LINCOLN

NOTES FOR A LAW LECTURE	51
CONCERNING FREE AND SLAVE LABOR	54
THE HOUSE DIVIDED AGAINST ITSELF	56
HIS LAST WORDS AT SPRINGFIELD	57
THE EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION	58
THE GETTYSBURG ADDRESS	61
ADDRESS ON HIS RE-ELECTION	62
THE SECOND INAUGURAL ADDRESS	64
LETTER TO THE PARENTS OF COLONEL ELMER E. ELLSWORTH	67
LETTER TO MRS. BIXBY	69
LETTER TO HIS DYING FATHER	70

PART III

A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BOOKS IN PRINT RELATING TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN

BIOGRAPHIES AND REMINISCENCES	73
LINCOLN'S WORKS	84
LINCOLN'S STORIES AND EPIGRAMS	86
RELIGION OF LINCOLN	88
LECTURES, ADDRESSES AND MISCELLANEOUS	90
FICTION	94
POETRY AND DRAMA	98
JUVENILE	100
TRIBUTES TO LINCOLN	104
LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY EXERCISES, ETC.	104
SCHOOL TEXT BOOKS	106

PART I

ABRAHAM LINCOLN AND
HIS BOOKS

ABRAHAM LINCOLN AND HIS BOOKS

1. THE BOOKS THAT MADE LINCOLN

The boyhood home of Abraham Lincoln had a library of six books,—the Bible, Pilgrim's Progress, Æsop's Fables, Robinson Crusoe, Weems' Life of Washington, and a History of the United States. It was an almost ideal collection of books for a young American. We can trace the influence of these six books upon his subsequent career. He could have found no nobler examples of fine and pure literary style than were available to him in King James' version of the Bible, in John Bunyan's immortal allegory and in De Foe's masterpiece. The fables of Æsop gave color to his inherent love of illustrative argument. Weems' Life of Washington, now commonly referred to in terms of mirth, contained nothing that seemed to him unworthy of his country's father, even the cherry-tree story having its justification in its own generation and those that immediately followed in the reverence which it inculcated for truth. We do not know what author taught to Abraham Lincoln the history of his own country. The book was probably one of no great literary merit, but it related the story of Christopher Columbus, the romance of colonization, the struggles which led to liberty, and the notable events in the life of the nation down to the time, perhaps, of the inauguration of President James Monroe.

In school, he had become familiar with Dillworth's Speller, and then with that of Noah Webster, the latter being more than a spelling-book, and serving many pupils in backwoods schools until the pupil was able to read in the Bible. The schools which he attended, three in Kentucky and two in Indiana, gave to him a total of less than twelve months of schooling. Lincoln cannot be classed with George Bernard Shaw, among those whose education was interrupted by their schooling. The backwoods schools which Lincoln attended were "blab-schools" in which the pupils studied their lessons aloud, the teacher moving among them and encouraging with a switch those who did not give this continuous audible evidence that they were at work.

Of the use of the Bible as a text-book, the writer has personal knowledge; but one of Mr. Lincoln's stories discloses Lincoln's own memory of it. The incident comes to us from former Vice-President Adlai E. Stevenson, to whom it was related by Senator Henderson of Missouri. Senator Henderson called at the White House one day some months before the issue of the Emancipation Proclamation. The President was in one of his moods of deepest depression. He told Senator Henderson that he was greatly troubled by the question of the freedom of the slaves, and was under great pressure from the radical proponents of abolition, especially Charles Sumner, Henry Wilson and Thaddeus Stevens. Henderson, being from a border state, was concerned for the effect of such a proclamation upon the loyal people of those states, some of whom were slave-holders.

"Sumner and Stevens and Wilson simply haunt me," declared Mr. Lincoln. "They haunt me with their importunities for a proclamation of emancipation. Wherever I go, and whatever way I turn, they are on my trail. And still in my heart I have the deep conviction that the hour has not yet come."

Senator Henderson said that as Lincoln said this he walked to the window, and looked out in silence upon Pennsylvania Avenue, his tall figure silhouetted against the window pane, his whole pose, and every line of the profile of his gracious face, expressive of unutterable sadness. Suddenly his lips began to twitch into a smile, and his somber eyes lighted up with mirth.

“The only schooling I ever had, Henderson,” he said, “was in a log schoolhouse when reading books and grammars were unknown. All our reading was done from the Scriptures, and we stood up in a long line and read in turn from the Bible. Our lesson one day was the story of the faithful Israelites who were thrown into the fiery furnace and delivered by the hand of the Lord without so much as the smell of fire upon their garments. It fell to one little fellow to read the verse in which occurred, for the first time, the names of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego.

Little Bud stumbled on Shadrach, floundered on Meshach, and went all to pieces on Abed-nego. Instantly the hand of the master dealt him a cuff on the side of the head and left him, wailing and blubbering, as the next boy in line took up the reading. But before the girl at the end of the line had done reading, he had subsided into sniffles, and finally became quiet. His blunder and disgrace were forgotten by the class until his turn was approaching to read again. Then, like a thunder-clap out of a clear sky, he set up a wail that alarmed the master, who with rather unusual gentleness inquired, "What's the matter now?"

The little boy pointed with shaking finger to the verse which in a few moments he would be expected to read, and to the three proper names which it contained,—

"Look, marster," he cried, "there comes them same three fellers again!"

Lincoln's face lighted up with a smile as he told this story, and he beckoned Senator Henderson to his side, and silently pointed his finger at three men at that moment crossing from Pennsylvania Avenue over the White House lawn to the door of the Executive mansion. They were Charles Sumner, Henry Wilson and Thaddeus Stevens.

This is a good story, and well authenticated. It has its present value for us in the record it contains of the use of the Bible as a book for class instruction in the schools which Lincoln attended.

It seems probable, however, that near the end of his schooling he used Lindley Murray's "English Reader," with its choice collection of prose and verse; for he told Herndon that he considered that volume the best schoolbook ever put into the hands of American youth. That opinion was justified. It was a great book.

At New Salem, Lincoln read law, and had his introduction to natural history, and to scientific subjects. Herndon relates that he read Rollin's Ancient History and Gibbon's Rome, but that he did not greatly enjoy history. I have several volumes once owned by him, and bearing the firm name of Lincoln and Herndon in his writing, one of them being "Ancient and Modern History" by J. E. Worcester.

Biography interested him, but he did not like to have men over-praised. In 1856 Herndon purchased a "Life of Burke." It may have been Sir James Prior's "Life," the fifth edition of which had just been published by Bohn; but Prof. Daniel Kilham Dodge, whose booklet on the evolution of Lincoln's literary style is of great value, opines that it was P. Burke's "Life of Burke," which was published in 1851, and which the Dictionary of National Biography characterizes as "utterly valueless."

Lincoln so regarded it. Herndon tells of it thus:

“In 1856 I purchased in New York a Life of Edmund Burke. I have forgotten who the author was. One morning Lincoln came into the office, and, seeing the book in my hands, enquired what I was reading. Taking it in his hands, he threw himself down on the office sofa, and hastily ran over its pages, reading a little here and there. At last he closed and threw it on the table with the exclamation, ‘No, I’ve read enough of it. It’s like all the others. Biographies as generally written are not only misleading, but false. The author of this Life of Burke makes a wonderful hero of his subject. He magnifies his perfections, if he had any, and suppresses his imperfections. He is so faithful in his zeal and so lavish in praise of his every act that one is almost driven to believe that Burke never made a mistake or a failure in his life. History is not history unless it is the truth.’”

It would appear that Lincoln was not interested in biography which was indiscriminate eulogy; but that he cared to read the lives of eminent men is certain. In his boyhood he appears to have read Weems’ Life of Marion as well as that of Washington, and also to have read Franklin's Autobiography, and later the life of Henry Clay. He did not, however, read in his early years that Who's Who of classic heroes, Plutarch's Lives. We are certain of this, because when John Locke Scripps wrote the first biography of Lincoln, he stated that this was among the books which Lincoln had read. Lincoln told him that this statement was not true when it was written, but that it was true before the book was published; for he procured Plutarch and read his great work in order that Mr. Scripps' book might be true in every detail.

As to the list of books which Lincoln read while still a lad in Indiana, the statement which he made to Leonard Swett is probably no great exaggeration, that he borrowed and read every book he could learn about within a circuit of fifty miles. Among those borrowed volumes was a copy of the Revised Statutes of Indiana, the beginning of his reading of law.

As for fiction, he read almost none of it. A certain Mrs. Lee Hentz had a passing vogue as a writer of fiction when he was a young man, and he liked her stories. He did not care for long stories; he preferred those that could be read easily at a sitting. He once tried to read Ivanhoe, but did not finish it; and he never read either Dickens or Bulwer. He said to Frank B. Carpenter, "It may seem strange to say, but I never read an entire novel in my life." However, he dipped into several of them, and had some general knowledge of some of the chief authors of English fiction.

While he was at New Salem, he read poetry, and liked it. There he learned to admire Shakespeare and Byron and Burns. He could not sing, but he had an ear for rhythm, and more than once essayed to write in verse. In 1844 he returned to Indiana, which he had not revisited since his boyhood, and made several speeches in favor of Henry Clay. More than a year later, on April 18, 1846, he sent to a friend some lines which that visit evoked, beginning:

"My childhood's home I see again,
And sadden with the view;
And still, as memory crowds my brain,
There's pleasure in it, too."

There were ten stanzas, to which he added, a few months later, eleven others, suggested by the same visit, and by the pathetic sight of a boyhood friend who had lost his mind and become violently insane. These twenty-one stanzas are preserved. They have no great literary merit, but show that he had a good sense of rhythm, and some poetic gift of imagery. He had read poetry enough to know what poetry was or should be. His taste in poetry, however, never was exalted. He preferred poems whose meter made it easy to remember them, and he had a remarkably good memory; and sad poems were more to his liking than those that were gay. In his boyhood he wrote backwoods jingles, and sang in mournful cadence "How tedious and tasteless the hours." In early manhood he committed to memory and retained through life as his favorite poem that mournful homily, "Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?"

The dactylic meter belongs to subjects light and gay, though classic poetry used it in the heroic hexameter; but the backwoods found means of compelling it to go sadly, as in the hymn and poem of which we are speaking, as if to constrain the waltz to clothe itself in a shroud. Lincoln liked poems which moved mournfully in triple time. Of contemporary poets he knew something of Longfellow and Whittier, though he is not known to have quoted the latter, and he greatly admired "The Last Leaf" by Oliver Wendell Holmes. There were no lines which he admired more than,—

“The mossy marbles rest
On the lips that he has pressed,
 In their bloom;
And the names he loved to hear
Have been carved for many a year
 On the tomb.”

Lincoln did not continue to be a voracious reader. Herndon said of him that he read less and thought more than any other man in public life in his generation. But he accumulated a fairly good library, partly by purchase and more by natural accretion, and he had access to the exceptionally good library of his partner, Herndon.

About 1844 Lincoln read “Vestiges of the Natural History of Creation,” published anonymously, but now known to have been written by Robert Chambers, of the noted Scotch publishing house. It introduced him to geology, increased his knowledge of astronomy, taught him the rudiments of comparative anatomy and embryology, and gave him the basis of his belief in “miracles under law,” or a system of creation in essential accord with what we now call evolution.

In 1850, he read with profound appreciation a book on the evidences of Christianity, entitled "The Christian's Defense," and it wrought great changes in his theory of the relation of the human to the Divine. As late as 1859 he procured and read Paley's Natural Theology. In another place I have set forth the significance of these books for him. In this same period also he read William Ellery Channing's sermons in part, and some of the writings of Theodore Parker; which, without converting him wholly to the theories of those men, were influential in widening his intellectual and spiritual horizon.*

Among Lincoln's books were several works of humor. He enjoyed Artemus Ward. He read Petroleum V. Nasby with great enjoyment. He owned and diligently perused "Joe Miller's Joke Book," and remembered the stories which it contained. A copy of this volume was found in the drawer of his desk after his death, in close juxtaposition with important state papers.

But it deserves to be remembered that while Lincoln told stories in personal argument and in jury trials, he almost never told a story in one of his formal addresses. His published speeches may be searched from end to end with very meager gleanings in the field of narrative. It is surprising to discover how few stories are to be obtained from Lincoln's authentic writings and how many from reminiscences of conversations with him. He knew well in what forms of discourse his homely illustrations would add weight to his argument, and when, in the interests of good taste or more solid and cogent reasoning it was better to omit them.

*See "The Soul of Abraham Lincoln," by William E. Barton; chapters XIII, XIV, XV.

II. THE BOOKS THAT LINCOLN MADE

So much for the books which helped to make Lincoln; let us consider now the books which Lincoln helped to make.

Lincoln never wrote a book. J. McCann Davis reproduced in fac-simile the one book that might be called Lincoln's, being a series of newspaper clippings from his speeches on slavery, with annotations in his handwriting, arranged in a small blank book as an exposition of his authorized utterances on that subject. He edited from newspaper reports for publication in book form his part in the Lincoln-Douglas debates. I have seen the original sheets which he used, and it is notable that he did not change phraseology that he might possibly have wished to have modified slightly, and that he quite generally cut out the words "Laughter" and "Applause" with which the favorable press reports sprinkled the record of his addresses.

Lincoln liked to see his own addresses in print. Some of his biographers, notably Lamon, comment on this fact with apparent desire to criticize him for it. But his editing of his addresses for publication, as it has fallen under the eye of the present writer, is strikingly modest.

Altogether the published addresses, state papers and correspondence of Lincoln make several thick volumes, two in one edition, eight in another and twelve in another. Beside these are one or two supplementary volumes of his otherwise uncollected writings. He was, therefore, an author of considerable fecundity. He was also a writer whose literary style underwent a remarkable and most interesting evolution. The little book of Prof. Dodge has already been referred to; a valuable little volume by Prof. Luther E. Robinson as "Lincoln as a Man of Letters" may also be cited.

Books compiled from the writings of Lincoln began to appear almost as soon as he was dead. The first of these began to be compiled within a few days after the assassination. The American News Company received on April 18, 1865, a letter saying:

"You have it in your power to erect a monument of its own kind to the memory of the President. Collect and publish, in the speediest possible manner, the inaugural and other addresses of Abraham Lincoln, his proclamations, messages and public letters, indeed all that he has written as President, and you will contribute to the mournful celebrations of the American people your share of lasting value, and of far more impressive eloquence than the most fervent orator could utter."

The publishers acted instantly on the suggestion, and prepared a volume of 297 pages, which was entitled "The Martyr's Monument." It was followed a few weeks or months later by a smaller volume of selections, entitled "President Lincoln Self-Portrayed" compiled by John Malcolm Ludlow, the proceeds of which were used for the freedmen, and this by a well selected group of Lincoln's writings entitled "The President's Words." The title page bears no name of compiler, but it is known that this selection was made and edited by Edward Everett Hale.

These were followed by larger and yet larger collections of the writings of Lincoln until Nicolay and Hay published their supposedly exhaustive work, and other diligent compilers added other and valuable sets of the "complete" writings of Lincoln. All "complete" sets, however, have need to be supplemented.

It must not be supposed that at the time of Lincoln's death the nation held any such view of the beauty of Lincoln's writings as now obtains. His wonderfully lucid and pure style had only begun to impress the mind of the reading public. Even the Gettysburg address came somewhat slowly to recognition. At the time many were disappointed in it. At least one New York paper spoke slightingly of it. The "Patriot and Union" of Harrisburg spoke what many felt:—

"The President succeeded on this occasion because he acted without sense and without constraint in a panorama that was gotten up more for the benefit of the party than for the glory of the nation and the honor of the dead. We pass over the silly remarks of the President; for the credit of the nation we are willing that the veil of oblivion shall be dropped over them and that they shall no more be repeated or thought of."

They have been repeated, however, and will be repeated and thought of, as long as the English language endures.

Quotations such as this remind us that in the thought of very many, including some members of the committee of invitation, the President intruded himself upon an occasion where he was unwelcome, and where his appearance was in bad taste, using the occasion with a view to its effect upon the approaching political convention. It was a cruel and unjust judgment, but it colored the impression which not a few editors had when they commented upon Lincoln's immortal address at Gettysburg. To them it was not a masterpiece in language, in oratory and in nobility of sentiment, but a commonplace and vapid performance intended to advertise the fact that Abraham Lincoln was a candidate for reelection.

Perhaps we should count among the books which Lincoln helped to make, the campaign attacks upon him. They were numerous, and are at this day among the most interesting items for collectors.

Perhaps the most dignified and logical of these documents were those issued by "The Society for the Diffusion of Political Knowledge." This was organized at Delmonico's on February 6, 1864, and was composed of the silk-stockinged opponents of Lincoln. The President was Prof. Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph, and among its members were many able and prominent men. "The fanatic is on the throne," said Prof. Morse in his speech of acceptance of the presidency, and he inveighed against the usurpation of the throne, or perhaps we should say the conversion of the presidential chair into a throne; and he was nowhere more emphatic than in denouncing those ministers of the gospel who praised Lincoln from the pulpit, and in his rejoicing that there still were in the pulpit of the North some who had not bowed the knee to Baal.

The McClellan Club of Philadelphia issued some documents, though not as many as Prof. Morse's society, attempting to show that the American people were "being reduced to mere serfs to a despot tyrant."

A New York publishing house issued a well written pamphlet showing that Mr. Lincoln was engaged with the Republican party in "a conspiracy to destroy the American Union" and erect a monarchy.

These booklets lie before me as I write, and also others entitled "Shall America Be Ruled by a Monarch or by the People"? "The United States Converted Into a Military Despotism," "Grounds for the Impeachment of the President," "The Trial of Abraham Lincoln by the Great Statesmen of the Republic," a trial which resulted, in the booklet, in his condemnation for despotism and cruelty and violation of the Constitution, demanding his impeachment, and consigning him to eternal disgrace.

We have no present occasion to dwell upon these documents. America has never had a great man in public life who was not shamefully abused while he was living and almost as shamefully eulogized after he was dead. But our present interest is not political or biographical, but bibliographical; and we mention these matters as things of interest to the book lover. They add very interesting items to the collection of any man who is inclined to seek for them; and they are not without value to those, if there be such among us, who would learn to value our great men while they still are living.

III. BOOKS ABOUT LINCOLN

It is when we come to books about Lincoln that our subject overflows all its banks, and inundates the lands adjacent to our theme. This man who read few books and wrote none inspired more volumes than any other American; more than any other character in modern times. Not even Napoleon has a richer bibliography.

The first books about Abraham Lincoln appeared in 1860, very shortly after his nomination. Lincoln was nominated May 18, 1860; Scripps' Life of Lincoln was published on June 3. For this little book, Lincoln himself furnished the autobiographical sketch. A year before he had prepared for Jesse W. Fell of Bloomington, in the third person, a short biographical outline, written on three pages of note paper. It has been reproduced in fac-simile by the daughters of Mr. Fell, who live at Normal, and it shows Lincoln's first effort to put the events of his life into a form that could be read, and possibly printed in a newspaper sketch.

When in 1860 Mr. Scripps visited him, just after the Chicago convention, Mr. Lincoln deprecated any attempt to write anything so pretentious as a campaign biography, saying that neither Scripps nor any other man could make anything out of Lincoln's life except what was contained in a single line of Gray's Elegy:—

“The short and simple annals of the poor.”

But he prepared a sketch, rather longer than that which he had written for Fell, and out of it, with such added material as he could command, Scripps made a pamphlet of thirty-two double-column octavo pages. The little booklet sold for four cents, or at twenty dollars a thousand, and it sold by the thousand. Perfect copies are now difficult to obtain, and have been sold at a hundred dollars or more. This book, for which Lincoln furnished the basic material, and of which Lincoln read the proofs, must ever be of prime interest among biographies of Lincoln.

But it is doubtful if this was the first published biography of Lincoln. “The Wigwam Edition” was off the press as soon as, if not sooner than, Scripps' “Life.” It had no author's name on its title page, and it did not stop the press for any authentic information. It spelled Abraham “Abram” and it invented the story of Lincoln's boyhood, making him the eldest of a large family and the support and stay of his widowed mother after the death of his father, and contained other and grave errors. It sold for twenty-five cents, and it had a marked influence in making Lincoln a popular hero.

William Dean Howells made his advent into literature about this time, and he wrote a campaign biography of Lincoln; and a Boston firm published "The Wideawake Edition" of Lincoln's life. A Cincinnati firm published a campaign biography by J. H. Barrett, and a New York firm another by D. W. Bartlett. All these were cloth bound volumes, but the biographical data was meager; the books were made up largely of Lincoln's speeches, and had short sketches of Lincoln's running-mate, Hannibal Hamlin of Maine. All in all they serve to impress the modern reader with the paucity of the information available concerning Lincoln at the time when he became a candidate for the presidency.

There was little improvement in the campaign biographies of 1864. There are several of them, and they add little if any biographical information, but extend the subject matter in the 1860 books with material about the Civil War.

Immediately after Lincoln's death, the presses were at work, printing "Complete" lives of Lincoln. The first of these were made from the plates or type of the 1864 biographies, with pages added telling of his assassination, his funeral, the trial of the assassins, the pursuit of Booth, and so on. The first part of these books speaks of him as still living. I have one of these volumes in five editions, showing its evolution from an 1864 campaign biography into a "Complete Life" of Lincoln. The changes show considerable ingenuity, but no great literary merit.

There is one little book of this character which deserves special mention. Of it I have seen only a single copy, which I own. It is entitled "Beadle's Dime Life of Lincoln." It was prepared in 1864 by J. O. Victor, and after the death of Lincoln was issued in a new edition with a brief preface instead of supplement, telling of Lincoln's death. This little book was the one which Lincoln's cousins could afford, and which Dennis Hanks possessed and read and found to contain some things true and other things false. It is the only volume about Lincoln which we know any relative of Lincoln read at the time, with one single exception.

The exception is the first Boy's Life of Lincoln, entitled "The Pioneer Boy," by William M. Thayer. Robert Lincoln read this and wrote a letter of commendation, in which he virtually said that it was in essential accord with what he had heard from his father. Robert was away at school when he wrote this, and it is possible that the publishers sent some one over to Cambridge to get this testimonial from him. There they should have stopped. But they had a copy of the book specially bound and sent it to Mr. Lincoln in 1863. This copy, presented to the President, is in a private collection in Chicago, owned by Mr. Oliver R. Barrett. Across the title-page, under the name of the author, has been written in pencil, apparently by some member of the President's family, this uncomplimentary designation of the author, "The champion liar of history."

I do not think it was Mr. Lincoln who wrote this line; had he lived, he would have found other books about himself more completely worthy of this comment.

How many Lives of himself Mr. Lincoln read is not known. Apparently he regarded the campaign biographies of 1860 and 1864 as instruments, necessary to an important end, and otherwise of no great consequence. He might have modified the affirmation which the spirit of Thaddeus Stevens is alleged to have rapped out to Mr. Dickey, the Member of Congress who had in charge the memorial service, and who was troubled because more senators and representatives wanted to speak than could be crowded into the program. Having inquired their names, and learned that the list included many of his old time opponents as well as his friends and those who had been closely associated with him, the spirit of the doughty old fighter is alleged to have said:—

“Since I don’t have to listen to the speeches, I don’t care a rap who delivers them.”

Lincoln did not have to read all these books.

The literature which followed the death of Lincoln was not wholly biographical. The Sunday following the death of Lincoln was devoted in hundreds of pulpits to discourses upon his character and the lessons of his life and death. In many cities special services were held, then, and on May 20, the day of his burial. The discourses delivered at these services, hastily prepared, were nevertheless earnest and timely, and in many cases were printed. These have become rare items for the collector, who has an endless task before him if he attempts to secure anything like a complete list. Beside the lesser addresses were formal orations by George Bancroft, Charles Sumner, Schuyler Colfax and others, orations which have a permanent place in literature.

Then came collections of his writings, collections of poems about him, one of the latter published by Lippincott as early as 1865, and others following in reasonably swift succession. The number of Lincoln anthologies is not small, and some of the more recent ones have been of the best.

Books of Lincoln stories began in time to issue. Many stories were told while Lincoln was alive which claimed him as their author. I have Judge Arnold's own copy of one of the earlier collections of alleged Lincoln Stories. It bears upon its fly-leaf the penciled comment of that competent biographer and friend of Lincoln to the effect that "About half of these stories are authentic, and most of them badly told." But books of Lincoln jokes continue to escape the press; though it would appear that there could be no large source of unexplored material for works of this character.

Soon after Lincoln's death, biographies began to appear which were not revamped campaign documents, but which undertook in the light of such knowledge as was then available to trace the career of Abraham Lincoln from the cradle to the grave. Mrs. Phoebe A. Hanaford produced such a book, the first biography of Lincoln to be written by a woman. Frank A. Crosby of the Philadelphia bar wrote one. J. H. Barrett and H. J. Raymond rewrote their campaign biographies; and the latter appended to his work the first really valuable collection of Lincoln's state papers. Dr. L. P. Brockett, a physician, wrote another, which contains some evidence of original investigation. But the most notable, and by far the most valuable, of the 1865 biographies, was that by Josiah G. Holland, who also began life as a physician, but whose career was in literature, as historian and novelist, and who was for many years editor of the Springfield Republican and afterward of Scribner's Magazine.

Meantime, there was in preparation a body of material which emerged in two notable books. William H. Herndon of Springfield was for many years and until the death of Lincoln, law-partner of Abraham Lincoln. The sign "Lincoln and Herndon" was not taken down even when

Lincoln went to Washington; and the partnership was not formally dissolved until death ended it. Herndon had taken notes of Lincoln, his personal appearance, his habits, his dress, his moods, his domestic and political affairs, and much beside. After Lincoln's death he visited Lincoln's step-mother and surviving relatives, and procured from them statements about Lincoln. He also visited Kentucky, and collected a large and valuable body of material. But his plan to make a book of this was postponed for reasons which are sufficiently known and need not here be repeated, till Herndon lost heart; and, being in financial distress, sold for $2,000, copies of his Lincoln manuscripts to Col. Ward Hill Lamon. Lamon was a Virginian, who had lived at Danville, Illinois, where he was Lincoln's associate, and was often spoken of as his local partner, in the trial of cases in court. Lincoln appointed him Marshal of the District of Columbia. After Lincoln's death he formed a partnership with Jeremiah S. Black, who had been Attorney General in the Cabinet of Buchanan, and counsel for Andrew Johnson on his trial on impeachment. Black's son, Chauncey F. Black, who in 1885 edited his father's writings and wrote a biographical preface to them, had considerable literary skill, and no love for Lincoln. He assisted Lamon, and, as Herndon later affirmed, wrote "quite every word" of Lamon's Life of Lincoln, which was published in 1872, and brought the narrative down to the time of his first inauguration.

The result was a surprise and shock. Lamon's book evoked the most vehement denunciations against Lamon, Black and Herndon. The publishers lost money; Lamon lost both money and prestige; and there was a three-cornered quarrel over material which Black had insisted on publishing and which Lamon and the publishers rejected, relative to the close of Buchanan's administration and other matters. The book did not sell; and the bulk of the edition disappeared so mysteriously that it is charged that friends and perhaps relatives of Lincoln bought and destroyed such copies as they were able to procure.

Unfrightened by the reception of Lamon's book, Herndon himself essayed the task of writing a biography of Lincoln. Assisted by Jesse W. Weik, of Greencastle, Indiana, he published in three volumes his Life of Lincoln, which appeared in 1889. The storm that had beat upon the head of Lamon was a mere summer shower compared with the tempest which descended upon Herndon. His publishers failed, and his book became difficult to obtain. The reasons for the criticism heaped upon it and its author need not here be discussed. It is a book which every collector desires, and that in the first edition. If he is able to procure it for less than fifty dollars for the three volumes, he does well; it is practically certain that it will sell before many years for at least a hundred.

Another edition of this work, in two volumes, and with some omissions and modifications, and a new Introduction by Horace White, was issued by Appletons, and is still on sale. For all purposes except those of the collector and the author this edition is as good as the expensive one.

Two of Lincoln's secretaries, John G. Nicolay and John Hay, prepared and issued a work in ten volumes, entitled, "Abraham Lincoln: A History." It first ran in the Century Magazine, and appeared in book form in 1890. It is a mine of information, invaluable to all who would follow the career of Lincoln into its details, but it is a history rather than a biography.

In the same year appeared "The Life of Abraham Lincoln" by Ida M. Tarbell, which had been running as a serial in McClure's Magazine. It is a picturesque, well illustrated work, and generally reliable. It is easily the first among works which may be held to portray the magazine Lincoln.

The American Statesman Series is a valuable series throughout. Its general editor, John T. Morse, Jr., reserved to himself the writing of the two volumes on Lincoln. It is a good piece of biographical work, though somewhat cold and academic.

The Centenary of Abraham Lincoln, in 1909, saw the publication of innumerable works relating to the great President. They need not be named here, for this is no attempt to give a complete list of books about Lincoln, and most of those that appeared in that and subsequent years are still in print or easily obtainable. All that this sketch undertakes is to indicate the stages of growth of the Lincoln literature.

There have been and are innumerable anthologies, collections, and monographs on various aspects of the career of Lincoln, some of them of very considerable value, and all of them of interest. Every anniversary of Lincoln's birth sees the publication of addresses, some of which take their place among Lincoln works of value.

This sketch does not attempt to name all, even of the important books about Lincoln. It endeavors rather to indicate the main lines along which the evolution of Lincoln literature has developed, and something of the relation of the successive developments to each other.

It is most gratifying to all true Americans to discover how within recent years the name of Abraham Lincoln has come into honor in England. He cannot be said to have been held in adequate reverence there during his lifetime. The London Punch held him up to constant ridicule, and atoned for having so done in a poem which was one of the notable tributes to Lincoln after his death. In 1907 Henry Bryan Binns wrote what is considered the first English Life of Lincoln. It is a scrappy and unbalanced book, but written in a good spirit, and not without its value. It was not, however, the first Life of Lincoln published in Great Britain. That honor belongs to G. W. Bacon, who, in 1865, published in London a little volume based on Victor's dime biography in the Beadle series, with some material gathered from Barrett and Raymond.

A small and appreciative but not highly valuable Life of Lincoln has recently been published with Hon. Ralph Shirley as its author. An American edition has been issued and is on the market.

But far the most notable and valuable of English works on Lincoln is that of Lord Charnwood. While he makes many mistakes, he has given us a work of genuine value. In some things he has been able to see American life with sufficient detachment and clarity to justify him in a discriminating and critical, and at the same time thoroughly appreciative, judgment. One can make no mistake in buying and reading Charnwood, even though he must make allowances for certain limitations in the work of an author who does not know American life thoroughly.

To Charnwood we are indebted for the suggestion of John Drinkwater's play, "Abraham Lincoln," just now enjoying a rather astonishing vogue. Drinkwater acknowledges his debt to Charnwood, and it is apparent. What shall we say of this simple drama which started obscurely in Birmingham, captured London, and now, having achieved a great success in New York and Washington, is certain to be seen and profoundly enjoyed in every American city?

The play is wrong in almost every possible detail, and right in its essential message. The author does not understand America, and his Lincoln is so thoroughly English that he almost drops his h's. It is an Englishman's interpretation of another Englishman's interpretation of Lincoln. An English author does not easily understand that Lincoln, after delivering his notable speech on the "house divided against itself," which he addressed to the Republican convention in Springfield in 1858, was still not an abolitionist. He opposed the further extension of slavery into the territories, but had no present plan or desire to interfere with it where it existed in the States. His emancipation policy was an intellectual and political and spiritual evolution. Nothing can be further from the truth than that Lincoln, when nominated, stood so committed to a policy akin to that of John Brown as is assumed in the opening lines of Drinkwater's play—a policy which would then deliberately plunge the nation into civil war for the sake of the freedom of the slave. Such an interpretation wholly denies what we know of the growth of the purpose to free the slaves as it existed in the mind of Lincoln.

If Drinkwater misunderstands Lincoln, much more does he misunderstand the men associated with him. Seward was an ambitious man, who believed himself a greater man than the President; but he was not a fawning sneak. The characterization of General Grant as a man who could not move a yard away from his whiskey bottle is a close approach to a libel. As for the old darkey whose impossible dialect appears in the book and which had to be re-written for the American stage, he is absurd enough when the character is named "Custis." But in the English version that ridiculous character bears the name of Frederick Douglas. That is a sufficient measure of Mr. Drinkwater's ability to estimate correctly the men who were Lincoln's contemporaries.

Nevertheless, I have read the play, and have seen it on the stage, and while compelled at every step to recognize the historical absurdities in it—only a few of which are here noted—I have been compelled to say that Drinkwater, writing under the stress of Britain's sacrifice in a great war, has found in Abraham Lincoln an ennobling ideal and exponent of that for which Britain was striving; and that which is universal in men who give themselves in sublime devotion to a great cause; he has seen in Lincoln's patience and nobility of soul and capacity for sympathy, and in the tragedy with which his life closed, something which rises above all historical limitations, and which the playwright has discovered for himself and shown to others. One cannot read or see the play without feeling its deep moral earnestness, its power of spiritual interpretation, its subtle comprehension of the soul of a great man working through heroic sacrifice toward the attainment of a great ideal.

It is interesting to remind ourselves that Drinkwater's is not quite the first attempt to portray Lincoln on the British stage. A good many years ago there appeared in Glasgow a play entitled "The Tragedy of Abraham Lincoln: In Five Acts. By an American Artist." How successful it was, the present writer does not know. It was printed, and virtually the entire edition was destroyed by fire, only twenty-nine copies being saved, and most of those badly smoked and with charred edges.

The author was Hiram D. Torrie. His name does not appear in the book. He obtained much of his information from old John Hanks, and some of it is really interesting. John Hanks is a second hero in the book. He not only does all the things that John Hanks did in his own proper person, but, as the author explains in the preface, it was necessary for dramatic reasons to continue his activity through the play; so he combines the functions of Allan Pinkerton, Boston Corbett and others, protecting Lincoln while he lived and avenging him when he died. One almost comes to think that John Hanks may have said to Torrie about what Dennis Hanks wrote to Herndon, "I will say this to you: if you don't have my name very frequently in your book, it won't go at all."

The book is very rare, and has a special interest as a contrast to the work of John Drinkwater, which, with all its limitations, has won an assured place for itself in Lincoln literature.

It is interesting to know that Mr. Drinkwater is following his play with a book, announced for publication in the autumn of 1920, entitled, "Lincoln, the World Emancipator." Whatever its limitations, and they are not likely to be few, the title indicates a point of view which must give interest to the book; for Mr. Drinkwater thinks of Lincoln not simply as the emancipator of American black slaves, but as "The World Emancipator". Lincoln has become not simply America's most representative American, but in many respects the foremost world-citizen.

Abraham Lincoln is a young folks' hero. There are several good Lives of Lincoln for boys and girls; nor is it easy to think of a modern character the study of whose life could be more valuable for young people.

Beside formal biographies there are many books of genuine value which deal with special aspects of Lincoln's life. The volume of Reminiscences edited by Allan Thorndike Rice, while out of print, is still easily obtainable and is a book of permanent worth. Among books that deal with aspects of his character or career, one thinks at once of Rothschild's "Honest Abe" and "Lincoln, Master of Men," of Judge Richards' "Lincoln, the Lawyer-Statesman," of Colonel Carr's "Lincoln at Gettysburg," and other well known and justly esteemed monographs.

The religion of Lincoln has called forth an extensive literature, I will not mention this, for I have sought to cover that and adjacent fields in my "The Soul of Abraham Lincoln."

The ancestry of Lincoln has evoked a small, but important literature, to which I have given a critical analysis in my "The Paternity of Abraham Lincoln", and need not mention here in detail.

Some of the biographies of Abraham Lincoln were promptly translated into other languages, and soon other and original works concerning him appeared in other lands. His Life is now to be found not only in French and Spanish and German and Italian and Dutch, but in Japanese and Chinese and in various other languages and dialects. A very interesting shelf can be made of Lives of Lincoln in languages other than the English; and such a collection is valuable as showing how far the name and character of this great man are known and honored the whole world around.

The books about Lincoln which are still in print and obtainable without the payment of a premium upon the prices of the publishers, are less in number than those that are out of print. But it is to be remembered that those which are most permanently valuable have not been allowed to die. Important as it is for collectors and for authors to consult the books which no longer stand upon the shelves of the vendors of current books, the books that give the best and most mature views of Lincoln are all still obtainable and at reasonable rates. The bibliography at the close of this volume shows how many they are and how varied is the list.

He who would realize how voluminous is the Lincoln literature should visit some really large collection, and see for himself something of its extent and variety. But if this be not practicable, he may at least consult the Bibliography issued by the Library of Congress in 1906, under the diligent labor of George T. Ritchie, and sold at the nominal price which the Government places upon its publications. But the list has lengthened measurably since Mr. Ritchie did his work; and a more nearly complete bibliography is that of Honorable Daniel Fish of Minneapolis, of which, I believe, a new and enlarged edition is in preparation.

He who looks through this volume, or sees the books, is sure to ask, "How is it possible that there should be so much to say and write about one man? Are we not at the end? Can future authors do any more than thrash over the old straw?"

I think I can answer the latter question with confident affirmation. There still is unpublished material of value concerning Abraham Lincoln. Patient research is certain to uncover new sources of information. One who has been for many years a gleaner in this field learns that there are yet considerable areas of information awaiting the careful investigation of the industrious and discriminating author. Lincoln books will continue to appear.

Many of the new books will be good books. They will contain new information, and what is more, they will reveal the growing greatness of Lincoln which even now we are only beginning to realize, and which we could not know till receding decades gave to us adequate perspective for the estimate of so great a man. Old books about Lincoln increase in price, because the fame of Lincoln grows greater every year.

Furthermore, Lincoln books are of permanent value. Scarce items are becoming more scarce and more valuable; and there appears at present no reason to expect that interest in Abraham Lincoln will diminish. His fame grows with the generations. He was once the hero of a nation; he is now a world hero.

PART II

SELECTIONS FROM THE WRITINGS OF LINCOLN

SELECTIONS FROM THE WRITINGS OF LINCOLN

NOTES FOR A LAW LECTURE

July 1, 1850

[These notes give to us the most comprehensive view in Lincoln's own words of the dignity of his chosen profession, and the avenue to success in it. They also indicate something of his idea of professional ethics, and are a good example of his power of clear and forceful statement.]

I AM not an accomplished lawyer. I find quite as much material for a lecture in those points wherein I have failed as in those wherein I have been moderately successful. The leading rule for the lawyer, as for the man of every other calling, is diligence. Leave nothing for tomorrow which can be done today. Never let your correspondence fall behind. Whatever piece of business you have in hand, before stopping, do all the labor pertaining to it which can then be done. When you bring a common-law suit, if you have the facts for doing so, write the declaration at once. If a law point be involved, examine the books, and note the authority you rely on upon the declaration itself, where you are sure to find it when wanted. The same of defenses and pleas. In business not likely to be litigated,—ordinary collection cases, foreclosures, partitions, and the like,—make all examinations of titles, and note them, and even draft orders and decrees in advance. This course has a triple advantage; it avoids omissions and neglect, saves your labor when once done, performs the labor out of court when you have leisure, rather than in court when you have not. Extemporaneous speaking should be practised and cultivated. It is the lawyer's avenue to the public. However able and faithful he may be in other respects, people are slow to bring him business if he cannot make a speech. And yet there is not a more fatal error to young lawyers than relying too much on speech-making. If any one, upon his rare powers of speaking, shall claim an exemption from the drudgery of the law, his case is a failure in advance.

Discourage litigation. Persuade your neighbors to compromise whenever you can. Point out to them how the nominal winner is often a real loser—in fees, expenses, and waste of time. As a peacemaker the lawyer has a superior opportunity of being a good man. There will still be business enough.

Never stir up litigation. A worse man can scarcely be found than one who does this. Who can be more nearly a fiend than he who habitually overhauls the register of deeds in search of defects in titles, whereon to stir up strife, and put money in his pocket? A moral tone ought to be infused into the profession which should drive such men out of it.

The matter of fees is important, far beyond the mere question of bread and butter involved. Properly attended to, fuller justice is done to both lawyer and client. An exorbitant fee should never be claimed. As a general rule never take your whole fee in advance, nor any more than a small retainer. When fully paid beforehand, you are more than a common mortal if you can feel the same interest in the case, as if something was still in prospect for you, as well as for your client. And when you lack interest in the case the job will very likely lack skill and diligence in the performance. Settle the amount of fee and take a note in advance. Then you will feel that you are working for something, and you are sure to do your work faithfully and well. Never sell a fee note—at least not before the consideration service is performed. It leads to negligence and dishonesty—negligence by losing interest in the case, and dishonesty in refusing to refund when you have allowed the consideration to fail.

There is a vague popular belief that lawyers are necessarily dishonest. I say vague, because when we consider to what extent confidence and honors are reposed in and conferred upon lawyers by the people, it appears improbable that their impression of dishonesty is very distinct and vivid. Yet the impression is common, almost universal. Let no young man choosing the law for a calling for a moment yield to the popular belief—resolve to be honest at all events; and if in your own judgment you cannot be an honest lawyer, resolve to be honest without being a lawyer. Choose some other occupation, rather than one in the choosing of which you do, in advance, consent to be a knave.

A FRAGMENT CONCERNING FREE AND SLAVE LABOR

July 1, 1854

[This is one of the most frequently misquoted of Lincoln's utterances. The statement "Twenty-five years ago I was a hired laborer" has been used as the basis of a lengthy statement containing much which Lincoln did not say. It is an early and very significant declaration of Lincoln's opinions on the practical value of free labor, and worthy of a high place in the literature of this subject.]

EQUALITY in society alike beats inequality, whether the latter be of the British aristocratic sort or of the domestic slavery sort. We know Southern men declare that their slaves are better off than hired laborers amongst us. How little they know whereof they speak! There is no permanent class of hired laborers amongst us. Twenty-five years ago I was a hired laborer. The hired laborer of yesterday labors on his own account today, and will hire others to labor for him tomorrow. Advancement—improvement in condition—is the order of things in a society of equals. As labor is the common burden of our race, so the effort of some to shift their share of the burden onto the shoulders of others is the great durable curse of the race. Originally a curse for transgression upon the whole race, when, as by slavery, it is concentrated on a part only, it becomes the double-refined curse of God upon his creatures.

Free labor has the inspiration of hope; pure slavery has no hope. The power of hope upon human exertion and happiness is wonderful. The slave-master himself has a conception of it, and hence the system of tasks among slaves. The slave whom you cannot drive with the lash to break seventy-five pounds of hemp in a day, if you will task him to break a hundred, and promise him pay for all he does over, he will break you a hundred and fifty.

You have substituted hope for the rod. And yet perhaps it does not occur to you that to the extent of your gain in the case, you have given up the slave system and adopted the free system of labor.

THE HOUSE DIVIDED AGAINST ITSELF

June 16, 1858

[This is the opening paragraph of the speech which is believed to have defeated Lincoln in his candidacy for the Senate, and by that process made him the more certainly a candidate for the Presidency. This paragraph was prepared with as great care as Lincoln ever gave to a public utterance. He knew that by it he was to stand or fall. The speech was delivered in Springfield, at the close of the convention that nominated Mr. Lincoln as Senator in opposition to Stephen A. Douglas.]

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention: If we could first know where we are, and whither we are tending, we could better judge what to do, and how to do it. We are now far into the fifth year since a policy was initiated with the avowed object and confident promise of putting an end to slavery agitation. Under the operation of that policy, that agitation has not only not ceased, but has constantly augmented. In my opinion, it will not cease until a crisis shall have been reached and passed. "A house divided against itself cannot stand." I believe this government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free. I do not expect the Union to be dissolved—I do not expect the house to fall—but I do expect it will cease to be divided. It will become all one thing, or all the other. Either the opponents of slavery will arrest the further spread of it, and place it where the public mind shall rest in the belief that it is in the course of ultimate extinction; or its advocates will push it forward till it shall become alike lawful in all the States, old as well as new, North as well as South.

HIS LAST WORDS AT SPRINGFIELD

February 11, 1860

[On the morning before his fifty-second birthday, Mr. Lincoln stood on the rear platform of the train that was to bear him away from Springfield to Washington. A solemn premonition was upon him that he might be addressing for the last time his old neighbors and friends. Almost choking with emotion, and with tears at the end blurring his vision, he spoke the words of this brief farewell.]

My Friends: No one, not in my situation, can appreciate my feeling of sadness at this parting. To this place, and the kindness of these people, I owe everything. Here I have lived a quarter of a century, and have passed from a young to an old man. Here my children have been born, and one is buried. I now leave, not knowing when or whether ever I may return, with a task before me greater than that which rested upon Washington. Without the assistance of that Divine Being who ever attended him, I cannot succeed. With that assistance, I cannot fail. Trusting in Him who can go with me, and remain with you, and be everywhere for good, let us confidently hope that all will yet be well. To His care commending you, as I hope in your prayers you will commend me, I bid you an affectionate farewell.

THE EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION

January 1, 1863

[By this document, Lincoln freed a race.]

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA :

A Proclamation

Whereas, on the twenty-second day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, a proclamation was issued by the President of the United States, containing, among other things, the following, to wit:

“That on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, all persons held as slaves within any State, or designated part of a State, the people whereof shall then be in rebellion against the United States, shall be then, thenceforward, and forever free; and the Executive Government of the United States, including the military and naval authority thereof, will recognize and maintain the freedom of such persons, and will do no act or acts to repress such persons, or any of them, in any efforts they may make for their actual freedom.

“That the Executive will, on the first day of January aforesaid, by proclamation, designate the States and parts of States, if any, in which the people thereof respectively shall then be in rebellion against the United States; and the fact that any State, or the people thereof, shall on that day be in good faith represented in the Congress of the United States by members chosen thereto at elections wherein a majority of the qualified voters of such State shall have participated, shall in the absence of strong countervailing testimony be deemed conclusive evidence that such State and the people thereof are not then in rebellion against the United States.”

Now, therefore, I, Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, by virtue of the power in me vested as commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States, in time of actual armed rebellion against the authority and government of the United States, and as a fit and necessary war measure for suppressing said rebellion, do, on this first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, and in accordance with my purpose so to do, publicly proclaimed for the full period of 100 days from the day first above mentioned, order and designate as the States and parts of States wherein the people thereof, respectively, are this day in rebellion against the United States, the following, to wit:

Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana (except the parishes of St. Bernard, Plaquemines, Jefferson, St. John, St. Charles, St. James, Ascension, Assumption, Terre Bonne, Lafourche, St. Mary, St. Martin, and Orleans, including the city of New Orleans), Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Virginia (except the forty-eight counties designated as West Virginia, and also the counties of Berkeley, Accomac, Northampton, Elizabeth City, York, Princess Ann, and Norfolk, including the cities of Norfolk and Portsmouth), and which excepted parts are for the present left precisely as if this proclamation were not issued.

And by virtue of the power and for the purpose aforesaid, I do order and declare that all persons held as slaves within said designated States and parts of States are, and henceforward shall be, free; and that the Executive Government of the United States, including the military and naval authorities thereof, will recognize and maintain the freedom of said persons.

And I hereby enjoin upon the people so declared to be free to abstain from all violence, unless in necessary self-defence; and I recommend to them that, in all cases when allowed, they labor faithfully for reasonable wages.

And I further declare and make known that such persons of suitable condition will be received into the armed service of the United States to garrison forts, positions, stations, and other places, and to man vessels of all sorts in said service.

And upon this act, sincerely believed to be an act of justice, warranted by the Constitution upon military necessity, I invoke the considerate judgment of mankind and the gracious favor of Almighty God.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this first day of

L. S.

 January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, and of the independence of the United States of America the eighty-seventh.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

By the President: WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

THE GETTYSBURG ADDRESS

November 19, 1863

[This little speech, which followed a truly great oration, two hours in length, by Edward Everett, one of the most noted orators of his generation, grows every year in popularity; and is one of the surest pieces of oratory in the English language to endure through coming centuries.]

FOURSCORE and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting-place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

ADDRESS ON HIS RE-ELECTION

November 10, 1864

[During the summer of 1864, Lincoln reached the definite conclusion that he was to be defeated in November. The tide of popular opinion turned, however, and Lincoln was triumphantly re-elected. To a company that came to serenade him at the White House just after the news of the election was confirmed, Mr. Lincoln delivered a short and impressive address.]

It has long been a grave question whether any government, not too strong for the liberties of its people, can be strong enough to maintain its existence in great emergencies. On this point the present rebellion brought our republic to a severe test, and a presidential election occurring in regular course during the rebellion, added not a little to the strain.

If the loyal people united were put to the utmost of their strength by the rebellion, must they not fail when divided and partially paralyzed by a political war among themselves? But the election was a necessity. We cannot have free government without elections; and if the rebellion could force us to forego or postpone a national election, it might fairly claim to have already conquered and ruined us. The strife of the election is but human nature practically applied to the facts of the case. What has occurred in this case must ever recur in similar cases. Human nature will not change. In any future great national trial, compared with the men of this, we shall have as weak and as strong, as silly and as wise, as bad and as good. Let us, therefore, study the incidents of this as philosophy to learn wisdom from, and none of them as wrongs to be revenged. But the election, along with its incidental and undesirable strife, has done good too. It has demonstrated that a people's government can sustain a national election in the midst of a great civil war. Until now, it has not been known to the world that this was a possibility. It shows, also, how sound and how strong we still are. It shows that, even among candidates of the same party, he who is most devoted to the Union and most opposed to treason can receive most of the people's votes. It shows, also, to the extent yet known, that we have more men now than we had when the war began. Gold is good in its place, but living, brave, patriotic men are better than gold.

But the rebellion continues, and now that the election is over, may not all having a common interest reunite in a common effort to save our common country? For my own part, I have striven and shall strive to avoid placing any obstacle in the way. So long as I have been here I have not willingly planted a thorn in any man's bosom. While I am deeply sensible to the high compliment of a re-election, and duly grateful, as I trust, to Almighty God for having directed my countrymen to a right conclusion, as I think, for their own good, it adds nothing to my satisfaction that any other man may be disappointed or pained by the result.

May I ask those who have not differed with me to join with me in this same spirit toward those who have? And now let me close by asking three hearty cheers for our brave soldiers and seamen and their gallant and skilful commanders.

THE SECOND INAUGURAL ADDRESS

March 4, 1865

[It is no disparagement of the Gettysburg address to say that this is Lincoln's masterpiece. It was his crowning achievement in the sphere of oratory. Of it he wrote a few days later to Thurlow Weed that while he did not think the views he expressed were popular, he believed that this speech would "wear as well as—perhaps better than—anything I have produced." It measures Lincoln's nobility of soul and power of expression at high tide. It is the greatest word he ever spoke.]

Fellow-countrymen: At this second appearing to take the oath of the presidential office, there is less occasion for an extended address than there was at the first. Then a statement, somewhat in detail, of a course to be pursued, seemed fitting and proper. Now, at the expiration of four years, during which public declarations have been constantly called forth on every point and phase of the great contest which still absorbs the attention and engrosses the energies of the nation, little that is new could be presented. The progress of our arms, upon which all else chiefly depends, is as well known to the public as to myself; and it is, I trust, reasonably satisfactory and encouraging to all. With high hope for the future, no prediction in regard to it is ventured.

On the occasion corresponding to this four years ago, all thoughts were anxiously directed to an impending civil war. All dreaded it—all sought to avert it. While the inaugural address was being delivered from this place, devoted altogether to saving the Union without war, insurgent agents were in the city seeking to destroy it without war—seeking to dissolve the Union, and divide effects, by negotiation. Both parties deprecated war; but one of them would make war rather than let the nation survive; and the other would accept war rather than let it perish. And the war came.

One-eighth of the whole population were colored slaves, not distributed generally over the Union, but localized in the Southern part of it. These slaves constituted a peculiar and powerful interest. All knew that this interest was, somehow, the cause of the war. To strengthen, perpetuate, and extend this interest was the object for which the insurgents would rend the Union, even by war; while the government claimed no right to do more than to restrict the territorial enlargement of it.

Neither party expected for the war the magnitude or the duration which it has already attained. Neither anticipated that the cause of the conflict might cease with, or even before, the conflict itself should cease. Each looked for an easier triumph, and a result less fundamental and astounding. Both read the same Bible, and pray to the same God; and each invokes his aid against the other. It may seem strange that any men should dare to ask a just God's assistance in wringing their bread from the sweat of other men's faces; but let us judge not, that we be not judged. The prayers of both could not be answered—that of neither has been answered fully.

The Almighty has his own purposes. "Woe unto the world because of offenses! for it must needs be that offenses come; but woe to that man by whom the offense cometh." If we shall suppose that American slavery is one of those offenses which, in the providence of God, must needs come, but which, having continued through his appointed time, he now wills to remove, and that he gives to both North and South this terrible war, as the woe due to those by whom the offense came, shall we discern therein any departure from those divine attributes which the believers in a living God always ascribe to him? Fondly do we hope—fervently do we pray—that this mighty scourge of war may speedily pass away.

Yet, if God wills that it continue until all the wealth piled by the bondman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword, as was said three thousand years ago, so still it must be said, "The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether."

With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow, and his orphan—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations.

LETTER TO THE PARENTS OF COLONEL
ELMER E. ELLSWORTH

May 25, 1861

[The very beginning of bloodshed brought heart-break to the home of President Lincoln, in the tragic death of Colonel Elmer E. Ellsworth, who had been almost a son to Mr. Lincoln. This letter which he sent to the parents of the gallant young officer shows the depth of his sympathies and the strength of his personal affection.]

Washington, D. C., May 25, 1861.

To the Father and Mother of Colonel Elmer E. Ellsworth:

MY DEAR SIR AND MADAM: In the untimely loss of you noble son, our affliction here is scarcely less than your own. So much of promised usefulness to one's country, and of bright hopes for one's self and friends, have rarely been so suddenly dashed as in his fall. In size, in years, and in youthful appearance a boy only, his power to command men was surpassingly great. This power, combined with a fine intellect, an indomitable energy, and a taste altogether military, constituted in him, as it seemed to me, the best natural talent in that department I ever knew.

And yet he was singularly modest and deferential in social intercourse. My acquaintance with him began less than two years ago; yet through the latter half of the intervening period it was as intimate as the disparity of our ages and my engrossing occupations would permit. To me he appeared to have no indulgences and no pastimes; and I never heard him utter a profane or an intemperate word. What was conclusive of his good heart, he never forgot his parents. The honors he labored for so laudably, and for which in the sad end he gallantly gave his life, he meant for them no less than for himself.

In the hope that it may be no intrusion upon the sacredness of your sorrow, I have ventured to address you this tribute in memory of my young friend and your brave and early fallen child.

May God give you consolation which is beyond all earthly power.

Sincerely your friend in a common affliction,

A. LINCOLN.

LETTER TO MRS. BIXBY

November 21, 1864

[Burdened with his public duties though he was, Mr. Lincoln found time to write to a grief-stricken mother this letter.]

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, November 21, 1864.
MRS. BIXBY, Boston, Massachusetts:

DEAR MADAM: I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the Adjutant-General of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously on the field of battle. I feel how weak and fruitless must be any words of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering to you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the Republic they died to save. I pray that our heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.

Yours very sincerely and respectfully,

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

LETTER TO HIS DYING FATHER

January 12, 1851

[This letter, addressed to Lincoln's step-brother, John D. Johnston, was sent on receipt of the news that Thomas Lincoln, Abraham's father, was very ill, and probably could not recover. Lincoln had been generous in his gifts to his father during his declining years, and cared tenderly for his step-mother after his father's death. Prevented by illness in his own home from going to his father's bedside, he wrote directing that no care or comfort for either his father or step-mother should be omitted. The closing part of the letter is given herewith.]

Springfield, Illinois, January 12, 1851.

DEAR BROTHER:

* * * *

I sincerely hope father may recover his health; but at all events, tell him to call upon and confide in our great and good and merciful Maker, who will not turn away from him in any extremity. He notes the fall of a sparrow, and numbers the hairs of our heads, and He will not forget the dying man who puts his trust in Him. Say to him that if we could meet now it is doubtful whether it would not be more painful than pleasant, but that if it be his lot to go now, he will soon have a joyous meeting with many loved ones gone before, and where the rest of us, through the help of God, hope ere long to join him.

Write to me again when you receive this.

Affectionately,

A. LINCOLN.

PART III

A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BOOKS IN PRINT
RELATING TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN

A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BOOKS IN PRINT RELATING TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN

BIOGRAPHIES AND REMINISCENCES

Arnold, Isaac N.

“THE LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

A. C. McClurg & Company.....$2.00

The life of the inimitable martyred President is here portrayed with great faithfulness to detail. The style of writing is fluent, and graphic. Few men knew Lincoln better than did Judge Arnold. The permanent value of his book rests upon the author's first-hand knowledge, his accurate judgment, and his power of analysis.

Barrett, J. H.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN AND HIS PRESIDENCY”—

Stewart & Kidd Company. 2 volumes.....$6.00

This book is the product of an interesting evolution. Its germ was a campaign biography, written by Dr. Barrett in 1860, after a personal visit to Mr. Lincoln, who thought himself unworthy of the attempt but directed the author to where the meagre material might be found. In 1865 the book was extended. In 1903, near the end of a long and useful life, the author added his gathered material, much of it of large value, and re-wrote it in two volumes.

Barton, William E.

“THE PATERNITY OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN, WAS HE
THE SON OF THOMAS LINCOLN?”—An essay on the Chastity of Nancy Hanks.

George H. Doran Company.....$4.00

In this new volume, the author traces every rumor and report relating to the question of Lincoln's birth, assembles all the evidence, and subjects it to the most exacting critical analysis. As a result he has arrived at the truth and renders a judgment from which he believes there can be no successful appeal.

Barton, William E.

“THE SOUL OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

George H. Doran Company.....$4.00

This study of the development of the intellectual and spiritual life of Lincoln is primarily a record of his religious history, and is listed under that department in this Bibliography. It deserves mention also in this biographical section as containing a considerable amount of biographical data not elsewhere available.

Bates, David Homer

“LINCOLN IN THE TELEGRAPH OFFICE”—

The Century Company.....$3.50

Intensely interesting, rich in anecdote, these intimate memories of the martyr President's daily visits to the War Department Telegraph Office, form a fresh and valuable contribution to enduring Lincoln literature.

Brooks, Noah

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN, AND THE DOWNFALL OF AMERICAN SLAVERY”—

G. P. Putnam's Sons.....$2.50

“The work you have prepared presents the events which it narrates, while with sufficient fullness, with a compactness and interest which could not be surpassed.” Robert L. Lincoln.

“Mr. Brooks in earlier years was intimate with Abraham Lincoln, and has painted his portrait as he knew him. While his materials have been drawn largely from common sources, he has used them skillfully to set forth Lincoln's character, and he has made a book that will be read with thrilling interest again and again.”—Boston Herald.

Browne, Francis F.

“THE EVERYDAY LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

G. P. Putnam's Sons.....$2.50

The original edition of this book was published about twenty years after Lincoln's death, and has continued to attract attention among the growing circle of Lincoln's admirers. This newer and enlarged edition is of permanent value.

This book brings Lincoln the man, not Lincoln the tradition, very near to us. It embodies the reminiscences of over five hundred contemporaries and friends of Lincoln—reminiscences which were gathered largely at first hand.

Carr, Clarke E.

“THE ILLINI: A STORY OF THE PRAIRIES”—

A. C. McClurg & Company.....$3.50

This book presents in narrative-form a reminiscent and historical account of the life of the author (Hon. Clarke E. Carr, a former United States Minister to Denmark) in Illinois from 1850 up to the time of the Civil War. Among the famous men he had come into contact with was Abraham Lincoln, of whom he gives the reader an intimate, colorful picture. The great man is here presented as very frank, sincere, serious, modest and simple-minded, and as having impressed the good people of Illinois with his coming greatness.

Chapman, Ervin

“LATEST LIGHT ON ABRAHAM LINCOLN AND WAR-TIME MEMORIES”—

Fleming H. Revell Company. 2 volumes.....$5.00

For over fifty years the author has been gathering and weaving into a connected record, everything of value regarding the Martyr-President, from Confederate documents, war-time publications, official records, etc., including material never before published.

Charnwood, G. R. B. Lord

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

Henry Holt & Company.....$3.00

This is perhaps one of the most important biographies of Lincoln. Its great merit is the manner in which the author has skillfully and correctly drawn Lincoln's achievements against a world background. John Drinkwater says of this book, “It gives a masterly analysis of Lincoln's career and character and is, it seems to me, a model of what the historian's work should be.”

It is by far the best biography of Lincoln written in England; and is the acknowledged basis of Drinkwater's play.

Chittenden, Lucius E.

“RECOLLECTIONS OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN AND HIS ADMINISTRATION”—

Harper & Brothers.....$3.00

This book belongs to the valuable class of authentic memorials of a great historic time. Lincoln admitted the author to his friendship, and occasionally would take refuge in his office as a retreat. The book is a picture full of human interest and sympathy, that of the weary man, sore burdened with the cares of state, finding thus in the inner room of one of the chief accountants of the Treasury the solitude he yearned for.

Cowen, Benjamin R.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN: AN APPRECIATION BY ONE WHO KNEW HIM”—

Stewart & Kidd Company.....$1.00

The personal element in this Appreciation gives it special value.

Crook, William H.

“THROUGH FIVE ADMINISTRATIONS”—

Harper & Brothers.....$2.50

Colonel Crook was Lincoln's body-guard before and at the time of his assassination. He continued for some time in the capacity of a private policeman for President Johnson, and during most of Johnson's administration was a clerk in the Executive Office. It is a very human picture that he presents of every-day life in the Executive Mansion. It is certainly a unique gallery that contains five of these portraits, including such subjects as Lincoln and Grant.

Curtis, William Elroy

“THE TRUE ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

J. B. Lippincott Company.....$2.50

A wealth of incident has been drawn upon by Mr. Curtis in sketching the career of the great American. He first treats of Lincoln the man and his kindred, and then of him in succession as leader of the Springfield bar, orator, politician, President, commander-in-chief, emancipator, diplomat, philosopher, and of his moral and religious beliefs. There are many special incidents and bits of intimate knowledge gathered from various sources and hitherto unpublished.

Doster, W. E.

“LINCOLN AND EPISODES OF THE CIVIL WAR”—

G. P. Putnam's Sons.....$1.50

Drinkwater, John

“LINCOLN, THE WORLD EMANCIPATOR”—

Houghton Mifflin Company. Boards.....$1.50

The great success here and abroad of John Drinkwater's play, “Abraham Lincoln,” both on the stage and in book form, shows his understanding of Lincoln's career and his skill as an interpreter of Lincoln's real character. In this uncommonly readable and suggestive book, he studies him from a new angle, illuminating qualities which make him not only the typical great American, but perhaps also the prime example of the best characteristics and ideals of the Anglo-Saxon race.

French, Prof. C. W.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN, THE EMANCIPATOR”—
(American Reformer Series).

Funk & Wagnalls Company.....$1.75

Short popular life of Lincoln, gives the main facts in his career and a general idea of the struggle he had to carry out his purposes. Does not profess to be a complete life in any respect.

Gilder, Richard Watson

“LINCOLN THE LEADER; AND LINCOLN’S GENIUS FOR EXPRESSION”—

Houghton Mifflin Company.....$1.50

“No student of Lincoln has more deftly proved this enigma of Lincoln’s part and place in American history, or more clearly suggested its solution.”

Hapgood, Norman

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN: A MAN OF THE PEOPLE”—

The MacMillan Company.....$2.50

Herndon, William H. and Weik, Jesse W.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

D. Appleton & Company. 2 volumes.....$5.00

Probably the most intimate life of Lincoln that there is. The authors are his law-partner, William H. Herndon, and Herndon’s friend, Jesse W. Weik. The man is portrayed as he was, and this complete frankness makes it an illuminating study of Lincoln’s character and personality.

Hill, Frederick Trevor

“LINCOLN THE LAWYER”—

The Century Company.....$3.00

Mr. Hill’s affection and reverence for Lincoln add to the charm of his record, which is based upon great research and study. Rich in anecdote and incident and in reproduction of portraits and documents.

Hobson, J. T.

“FOOTPRINTS OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

The Otterbein Press.....$0.50

The author does not claim that the book is a biography of Lincoln, for many important facts in his life have been omitted. The object of the author was to publish some facts, reminiscences, and illustrations which have never been published before.

Ketcham, Henry

"THE LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN"—(Home Library).

A. L. Burt Company.....$1.25

This book deals with the life of Lincoln beginning with his earliest recorded ancestry—dealing with his boyhood days, through young manhood and his whole political life down to the assassination. It also contains a few testimonies as to the man by Henry Ward Beecher, Noah Brooks, R. W. Emerson, James Russell Lowell, Henry Waterson and others.

Levy, T. A.

"LINCOLN, THE POLITICIAN"—

R. G. Badger Company.....$2.00

This work covers the early, neglected period of Lincoln's political life to show where he got his training and the consecration of his powers to the welfare of the people. It is a study of the great statesman that is timely and accomplished with clear discernment and discrimination, sympathy and judgment.

Morse, John T.

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN"—(American Statesmen Series)—

Houghton Mifflin Company. 2 volumes.....$4.00

"As a Life of Lincoln it has no competitors; as a political history of the Union side during the Civil War, it is the most comprehensive."—Harvard Graduates' Magazine.

Nadal, E. S.

"A VIRGINIAN VILLAGE"—

The MacMillan Company.....$2.00

This book devotes a chapter to "Impressions of Lincoln," going intimately into phases of Lincoln's character which are indicated in his appearance or by his career. The writer dwells on his peculiar Americanism, illustrated in his humor, his penetration, and his mercifulness. He also discusses Lincoln's greatness as a thinker, speaker and man of action, and writes very interestingly of the human qualities of the peculiar genius but very familiar figure, which have made him better understood than any great character in American history.

Nicolay, Helen

“PERSONAL TRAITS OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

Eight illustrations from papers in Lincoln's Own Handwriting—

The Century Company.....$3.00

When John G. Nicolay began collecting material to be used in his joint work with John Hay, “Abraham Lincoln: A History,” he began also putting many memoranda into a series of envelopes marked “Personal Traits” meaning at the time to make use of this material in the work which has come to be recognized as the authoritative life of Lincoln. This material in the end was not used in the large life; and it has remained for John Nicolay's daughter to work the rich accumulation of years into a volume in which the every-day life at the White House, Lincoln's attitude toward money, his moral fibre, his relations to his wife and children, and many other phases of Lincoln's private life are delightfully and illuminatingly set forth in a record whose interest will endure.

Nicolay, John G.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—A Short Life condensed from Nicolay and Hay's Standard Work.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN: A HISTORY”—

The Century Company.....$4.00

This is the most important and valuable single-volume life of Lincoln in print—a remarkable condensation of the ten-volume work. For the everyday use of the busy man and the student it is unsurpassed.

Nicolay, John G. and Hay, John

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN: A HISTORY”—The authorized life of Lincoln, by his private secretaries.

The Century Company. 10 volumes.....$35.00

This monumental work is the only full and authoritative record of the private life and public career of Abraham Lincoln. It is not only an intimate personal history of the great War President, but it also includes an account of the causes of the Rebellion, and is a record at first hand of the inside history of the Civil War.

Oberholtzer, E. P.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—(American Crisis Biographies)—

George W. Jacobs & Company.....$1.75

Hero worship has not influenced the author in the least degree in drawing his picture. The truth is given dispassionately, and with exceptional detachment. The book is rightly accounted as frank a treatment of the subject as has yet appeared. The failings as well as the strength in Lincoln's character are excellently portrayed and a balance is struck which shows the man as he really was.

Phillips, Isaac N. (Editor)

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—By the Men Who Knew Him—

Pantagraph Company.....$1.50

A book of recollections by the following men: Judge Owen T. Reeves, Hon. James S. Ewing, Col. Richard P. Morgan, Judge Franklin Blades, Hon. John W. Bunn, Isaac N. Phillips.

This is an intimate and valuable collection, available in a small edition only.

Putnam, George Haven

“THE PEOPLE'S LEADER IN THE STRUGGLE FOR NATIONAL EXISTENCE”—

G. P. Putnam's Sons.....$1.50

With the above is included the speech delivered by Lincoln in New York, February 27th, 1860; with an introduction by Charles C. Nott, late Chief Justice of the Court of Claims, and annotations by Judge Nott and by Cephas Brainerd, of the New York Bar.

Rankin, Henry B.

“PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—Introduction by Joseph Fort Newton—

G. P. Putnam's Sons.....$2.50

Illustrated with portraits in photogravure. The total impression given by this book is such a sense of the living Lincoln, of his growth and ripening of character, of his commanding personality, and genius, as is to be found hardly anywhere else.

Rice, Allen Thorndike (Editor)

“REMINISCENCES OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

Harper & Brothers.....$2.00

These papers are by the distinguished men of Lincoln's time. Among them are Grant, Benjamin F. Butler, Henry Ward Beecher, Walt Whitman, Dana, Ingersoll, and Frederick Douglass. Here are recollections of lawyers who rode the Illinois circuit with Lincoln, pictures of Lincoln as the Executive, Lincoln in the Cabinet, Lincoln in the midst of the war, Lincoln at Gettysburg, Lincoln a man among men.

Richards, John Thomas

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN, THE LAWYER, STATESMAN”—

Houghton Mifflin Company.....$4.00

“Of the many books devoted to the life and works of Abraham Lincoln, none makes a larger claim upon the world’s attention than this.”

—Boston Transcript.

Rothschild, Alonzo

“LINCOLN, MASTER OF MEN: A STUDY IN CHARACTER”—

Houghton Mifflin Company.....$3.75

This notable biography—called by Robert Lincoln the best life of his father he had ever read—is concerned particularly with Lincoln’s later life and with his mastery over different types of men as well as over himself.

Rothschild, Alonzo

“HONEST ABE: A STUDY IN INTEGRITY”—

Houghton Mifflin Company.....$3.00

A specially fine study for parents, and for young men who are just entering upon world life, as it shows how integrity and honesty tend to the development of strong, dependable men.

Schurz, Carl

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN: AN ESSAY”—New Edition.

Preface by Calvin Coolidge—

Houghton Mifflin Company.....$1.50

Of this famous study of Abraham Lincoln, Governor Coolidge says: “This essay of Mr. Schurz is written by one who knew his subject at first hand. It represents the thought of one who had seen the great conflict through the perspective of more than a quarter of a century of deliberation. Its great value is in the fact that in addition to being short, complete and accurate, it represents the practical side of the man. It portrays the real man.”

Selby, Paul

“LINCOLN’S LIFE STORIES AND SPEECHES”—

Stanton & Van Vliet Company.....$1.00

Including stories of Lincoln’s early life, stories of Lincoln as lawyer, presidential incidents, stories of the war, etc. The Hon. Paul Selby, personal friend of Lincoln, has written the biography contained in this book.

Sheppard, R. D.

“THE LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

Laird & Lee.....$0.75

Contains the Famous Gettysburg and Springfield Addresses. Pathetic Letter to the Mother of Five Sons Slain in Battle, and many well known sayings, characteristics, and chronology of the life of one of America's most famous sons.

Shirley, R.

“SHORT LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

Funk & Wagnalls Company.....$1.25

Short popular life of Lincoln. Gives main facts in his career and a general idea of the struggle he had to carry out his purposes. The volume contains a few quotations from letters and state documents.

The author is a Member of Parliament; and his book is one of the recent expressions of England's growing honor for Lincoln.

Snider, Dr. Denton J.

“THE AMERICAN TEN YEARS' WAR 1855-1865”—

The William Harvey Miner Company, Inc.....$2.00

This book gives the complete historic setting of Lincoln's national career, which was the Civil War in its entirety, lasting not four but ten years from the first Kansas fight till Appomattox. This outline is the History of the Nation in its supreme struggle, showing Lincoln's political environment and opportunity.

Snider, Dr. Denton J.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN: A BIOGRAPHY”—

The William Harvey Miner Company, Inc.....$2.00

The present book is a new biographic construction of Lincoln's life, following closely the documents but at the same time keeping before the reader's mind the internal or psychical thread which runs through all the external happenings of Lincoln's varied career.

Stevens, C. M.

“THE WONDERFUL STORY OF LINCOLN”—

Cupples & Leon Company.....$1.25

Tarbell, Ida M.

“LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—New revised edition—

The MacMillan Company. 2 volumes.....$6.00

This is a very complete life of Lincoln, remarkable for its presentation of contemporary impression and comment. A vast amount of intimate personal material was used in the preparation of this work, which aims to depict Lincoln the man, as seen by his fellows and revealed by his own acts and words.

Thompson, David D.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN, THE FIRST AMERICAN”—

Abingdon Press.....$1.00

Anecdotes and incidents presenting various phases of Lincoln's life.

Whipple, Wayne

“THE STORY OF YOUNG ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

Henry Altemus Company.....$1.25

Whipple, Wayne

“THE STORY-LIFE OF LINCOLN”—

The John C. Winston Company.....$2.50

From every authoritative source has been selected the best-told story of every event in Lincoln's life, arranged in proper order and forming his complete and connected biography from his birth to his martyrdom. The book contains over 500 true stories told by Lincoln or by his friends about him.

Whipple, Wayne

“THE HEART OF LINCOLN”—

George W. Jacobs & Company.....$0.75

An intimate study of the life and character of Abraham Lincoln, portrayed in a series of anecdotes and reminiscence sympathetically told.

Whitlock, Brand

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

Small Mayard & Company.....$1.00

Same in (Beacon Biographies)..... .75

Through simplicity and directness of style, and emphasis on the human side of Lincoln, the appeal is so direct that younger readers cannot fail to find this a “good book.”

LINCOLN'S WORKS

Carmichael, O. H.

"LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS" illustrated.

Abingdon Press.....$1.00

A vivid and historically accurate account of the writing and delivery of that classic of all times. The whole occasion is made to pass in review before us—a thing of life and movement. And those who love and understand are made deeply conscious that in this world-known address Abraham Lincoln revealed the central motive and ideal of his life, and that through it he voiced the message of America to the world.

Lincoln, Abraham

"WRITINGS OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN"—

G. P. Putnam's Sons. 8 volumes.....$25.00

Writings. Including the full text of the Lincoln-Douglas Debates together with the Essay on Lincoln, by Carl Schurz, the Address on Lincoln, by Joseph H. Choate, and the Life of Lincoln, by Noah Brooks. Edited by Arthur Brooks Lapsley.

With an Introduction by Theodore Roosevelt.

Although the works of Lincoln are recognized as deserving a high place in American literature, no previous attempt has been made to present them in a handsome library edition.

The Writings of Lincoln cover his public addresses, letters, and other documents, together with a large number of more personal letters and speeches.

Lincoln, Abraham

"LINCOLN'S SPEECHES AND WRITINGS"—Selections from the public speeches and writings of Abraham Lincoln. Edited by L. E. Chittenden.

Dodd Mead & Company.....$1.50

No more valuable contribution to an accurate knowledge of the martyred President could be made than a proper selection from his speeches and writings in a single volume of convenient, readable form. After a thorough study of Mr. Lincoln's intellectual life, from its commencement to its close, Mr. Chittenden has prepared such a volume.

Lincoln, Abraham

"HIS AUTOBIOGRAPHY IN FACSIMILE"—

The Misses Fell.....$2.50

Lincoln's brief autobiography was written in 1859, at the request of Jesse W. Fell. His daughters publish this limited edition in facsimile made direct from the original.

Lincoln, Abraham

"COMPLETE WORKS"—Comprising his speeches, letters, state papers and miscellaneous writings. Edited by his private secretaries, John G. Nicolay and John Hay—

The Century Company. 2 volumes.....$12.00

This is the story of the martyred President's life written by himself, as found in his speeches, letters, state papers and miscellaneous writings, including his private correspondence; speeches on the stump, in Congress and elsewhere; the great Lincoln-Douglas debates in full; all his messages and proclamations; his letters to generals; all his state papers, memoranda, etc., prepared from original sources—the whole being a complete record of Lincoln's career.

Lincoln, Abraham

"GETTYSBURG ORATION AND FIRST AND SECOND INAUGURAL ADDRESSES"—

Duffield & Company. Rubric Series.....$0.75

Lincoln, Abraham

"SPEECHES"—Including Inaugurals and Proclamations. Edited by G. M. Adam—

A. L. Burt Company. (Burt Home Library).....$1.25

This book includes, besides the speeches, inaugurals, addresses, various proclamations and the annual messages to Congress.

Lincoln, Abraham

"IDEALS OF THE REPUBLIC" Series. Inaugural and Gettysburg Addresses—

G. P. Putnam's Sons.....$1.25

Lincoln, Abraham

"SPEECHES AND LETTERS OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN" from 1832-1865. Edited by Merwin Roe, with an introduction by James Bryce. Everyman's Library—

E. P. Dutton & Co. Cloth.....$1.00

Flexible Leather..... 2.00

The object of this volume is to make Lincoln known by his works as he is known to students of history by his deeds. The period covered is from 1832 to 1865.

Lincoln and Douglas

"LINCOLN-DOUGLAS DEBATES"—

G. P. Putnam's Sons.....$2.50

The Political Debates between Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas in the Senatorial Campaign of 1858 in Illinois. Introduction by George Haven Putnam.

A definitive and accurate edition of these famous debates which paved the way of Lincoln to the Presidency.

Tracy, G. A."UNCOLLECTED LETTERS OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN
NOW FIRST BROUGHT TOGETHER, WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY IDA M. TARBELL"—

Houghton Mifflin Company.....$3.50

Same, large paper..... 5.00

A collection of nearly three hundred letters, many of them of decided historical value. "The whole collection is rich in material which will delight the student of Lincoln."
—N. Y. Tribune.

Wanamaker, R. M.

"THE VOICE OF LINCOLN"—

Charles Scribner's Sons.....$2.50

This book is not so much an exposition of Lincoln's character and genius by another as a revelation of his character and genius by himself. Judge Wanamaker has selected with skill and insight those utterances of Lincoln's, his letters, conversations, and speeches, which are keys to the different sides of his great nature and uncover the springs of his conduct and his greatness of mind and spirit. These utterances are accompanied by a narrative text which supplies a full understanding of their biographical and historical significance.

 LINCOLN'S STORIES AND EPIGRAMS
Gross, Anthony

"LINCOLN'S OWN STORIES"—

Harper & Brothers.....$1.75

For many years the author, an enthusiastic student of Lincoln's life, collected and verified the best of the stories told by Lincoln and about Lincoln. These stories have been carefully arranged, and the remarkable collection which is the result is presented in a book of engrossing interest in its humor and pathos, and its illumination of historic characters and events.

Hobson, J. T.

“THE LINCOLN YEAR BOOK”—

The Otterbein Press.....$1.25

This book provides readings for each day in the year. For each day there is a verse of Scripture, an extract from some speech or writing of Lincoln, and a poetical selection. The book also contains a complete index to the selected topics, index to the poetical verses and selections and to the Scripture quotations.

McClure, Alexander K., LL.D.

“LINCOLN’S OWN YARNS AND STORIES”—

The John C. Winston Company.....$1.50

In this book are gathered all the authentic yarns, stories, anecdotes, witty sayings and jokes told by Abraham Lincoln. These stories are full of homely wit and humor that appeal to every reader.

Oldroyd, Osborn H. (Compiler)

“WORDS OF LINCOLN” with an introduction by Melville W. Fuller, Chief Justice of the United States—

Osborn H. Oldroyd.....$1.00

“Words of Lincoln” is replete with extracts from his eloquent speeches, making the book a valuable aid for recitations in schools on anniversaries of Lincoln’s birthday. Alexander H. Rice, former Governor of Massachusetts, says: “They will be, to those who read and remember them, of more value than so many ingots of gold.”

Pratt, Silas G.

“LINCOLN IN STORY”—

D. Appleton & Company.....$1.50

The Life of Lincoln told in authenticated anecdotes, chronologically arranged. A unique and striking picture of the man stands out in these narratives. A happy thought, to show him almost, as it were, at first hand.

Scott, Temple (Editor)

“THE WISDOM OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

Brentano’s.....$1.50

“The Wisdom of Abraham Lincoln” contains excerpts from Lincoln’s speeches and views. A book of Lincoln quotations to show his wisdom.

Whipple, Wayne (Editor)

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN’S DON’TS”—Selected and arranged—

Henry Altemus Company.....$0.60

Williams, Henry Llewellyn (Collector and Editor)

“LINCOLNICS”—Stories and Sayings—

G. P. Putnam’s Sons.....$1.25

They form a sensible “constant-companion,” a perpetual fount of mirth and wisdom. Many of these anecdotes have won a permanent place in American oratory and humor.

RELIGION OF LINCOLN

Barton, William E.

“THE SOUL OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

George H. Doran Company.....$4.00

After a lifetime of devoted study, Dr. Barton has written what may justly be called a definitive account of the ethical convictions and the spiritual life of the great president. He has succeeded in reconstructing an historical setting for the growth of Lincoln’s religious ideas, which not only passes the strictest test of known fact, but adds as well several important items to our knowledge of a personality of abiding interest.

Beardslee, C. S.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN’S CARDINAL TRAITS”—

R. G. Badger Company.....$2.00

Everything regarding Abraham Lincoln is of interest. This study of the religious and moral side of his character takes a line that has not before been followed. It is, therefore, of special interest.

Grierson, Francis

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN: THE PRACTICAL MYSTIC”—

John Lane Company.....$1.00

The careful study given by Mr. Grierson to the life of Lincoln, which resulted in the writing of “The Valley of Shadows,” will be equally apparent in this present volume, which depicts faithfully the spiritual atmosphere in which Lincoln lived and moved, thought and worked.

Hobson, J. T.

“THE MASTER AND HIS SERVANT”—

The Otterbein Press.....$0.50

This book contains comparative outline sketches of “The Redeemer of Mankind—Christ, and The Emancipator of a Race—Abraham Lincoln.” The aim of the author is to show how the Christ-life is reflected in the life of Lincoln.

Jackson, S. Trevena

“LINCOLN’S USE OF THE BIBLE”—

Abingdon Press. Paper.....$0.35

A collection of interesting facts, showing the value of the Bible in Lincoln’s life.

Johnson, William J.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN THE CHRISTIAN”—Illustrated.

Abingdon Press.....$1.50

This is a careful and painstaking study of the development of Mr. Lincoln’s religious life. The study is carried through on chronological lines and is thoroughly well done. The citations are from accredited books and original documents.

Scovill, Jr., Samuel

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN, HIS STORY”—

American Sunday-School Union.....$0.60

The volume was written with the idea of bringing out the trust in God exhibited by the life and work of this American leader.

Tarbell, Ida M.

“IN LINCOLN’S CHAIR”—

The MacMillan Company.....$1.00

“In Lincoln’s Chair” deals particularly with Lincoln’s religious views, his attitude toward God, and his consequent sense of responsibility and duty.

LECTURES, ADDRESSES AND MISCELLANEOUS

Bancroft, George

“OUR MARTYR PRESIDENT, ABRAHAM LINCOLN”— Oration. (With Bishop Matthew Simpson and R. S. Storrs, Jr.)—

Abingdon Press.....$1.50

Every lover of Lincoln will welcome this reissue of the more important addresses delivered in the shadow of the nation's great bereavement.

Burrage, Henry S.

“GETTYSBURG AND LINCOLN”—

G. P. Putnam's Sons.....$1.50

The records of the Battle, the Park, the Cemetery, and the Lincoln Address.

Carr, Clarke E.

“LINCOLN AT GETTYSBURG”—

A. C. McClurg & Company.....$1.25

This book, of a little more than a hundred pages, gives a vivid, accurate, and interesting account of the circumstances and events centering about the dedication of “The Soldiers' National Cemetery” at Gettysburg in 1863. It gives the interested reader, as well as the student, an authentic version of the preparation, delivery and reception of the famous Gettysburg Address.

Carr, Clarke E.

“STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS”—

A. C. McClurg & Company.....$2.50

This book, although devoted to a discussion of the noble life and splendid work of Stephen A. Douglas, “The Little Giant,” whose name is so prominently linked with that of Abraham Lincoln—contains a fine appreciation of the modest, manly qualities and forensic ability of the martyred President. The last fourteen chapters reveal some very interesting, first-hand pen-pictures of Lincoln and the stirring times beginning with his utterance of the statement “This government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free—it must become all one thing or all the other,” and going through the famous Lincoln-Douglas debates to the time when it was solid North against solid South.

Choate, Joseph H.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

T. Y. Crowell & Company.....$0.50

This is the authorized version of the inaugural address delivered by the American Ambassador at the Court of St. James before the Edinburgh Philosophical Institution on November 13th, 1900.

Dittenhoefer, A. J.

“HOW WE ELECTED LINCOLN”—

Harper & Brothers.....$0.90

Herndon, William H.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN, MISS ANN RUTLEDGE, NEW SALEM, PIONEERING, AND THE POEM”—

H. E. Barker.....$5.00

The lecture that forms the kernel of all the love-stories about Lincoln and Ann Rutledge. A tall, octavo volume, in edition limited to 150 signed copies.

Larned, J. N.

“A STUDY OF GREATNESS IN MEN”—

Houghton Mifflin Company.....$1.75

Mr. Larned has made a most enlightening study of the elements of greatness in Napoleon, Cromwell, Washington and Lincoln, and of the degree in which they merit the respect of posterity. His conclusions are unusual and highly interesting.

Learned, Marion Dexter

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN, AN AMERICAN MIGRATION: FAMILY ENGLISH NOT GERMAN”—

William J. Campbell.....$2.50

McLaughlin, Robert W.

“WASHINGTON AND LINCOLN”—

G. P. Putnam's Sons.....$1.35

Washington and Lincoln, leaders of the nation in the constitutional eras of American history.

The aim of the writer is to show the similarity of the work they did in the field of governmental action.

Newton, Joseph Fort

“LINCOLN AND HERNDON”—

The Torch Press.....$3.00

A book that deals with the personal and political fellowship of Abraham Lincoln and his law partner, William H. Herndon. It shows the influence of one upon the other as they worked out together, in the Springfield law office, the solution of the problem that was to rend the nation.

Oldroyd, Osborn H.

“THE ASSASSINATION OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN” with an introduction by Bvt. Maj. Gen. T. M.
Harris—

Osborn H. Oldroyd.....$1.25

This book is accepted as the true history of the assassination, also of the flight, pursuit, capture, trial and punishment of the conspirators. Contains 82 half-tone illustrations.

Pillsbury, Albert E.

“LINCOLN AND SLAVERY”—

Houghton Mifflin Company.....$1.25

“With wonderful wit Mr. Pillsbury has portrayed the real Lincoln. . . . One cannot easily escape the impression left by the intense concentration and literary splendor of this remarkable interpretation.”

Roberts, Octavia

“LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS”—Profusely illustrated by Lester G. Hornby—

Houghton Mifflin Company. Special limited edition...$6.00

The author of this notable book, a native of Springfield, Illinois, has recently obtained a manuscript diary kept by a neighbor of Lincoln during his Springfield life, which contains many vivid pen pictures of the President. From this material and from her own memories and investigations, she has constructed a most interesting, readable, and illuminating book.

Robinson, L. E.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN AS A MAN OF LETTERS”—

Reilly & Lee Company.....$1.50

Professor Robinson's scholarly work is the first book to study Lincoln's wonderful growth in power of literary expression. The Bible, Shakespeare and Blackstone are shown to have been Lincoln's three great sources of inspiration. The book is rich in references of value to the student. The generous appendix embraces all of the Great Emancipator's most famous addresses, letters and state papers.

Stryker, M. W.

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN"—

M. W. Stryker.....$3.00

Three addresses given variously.

Welles, Gideon

"THE DIARY OF"—With an introduction by John
T. Morse, Jr.—

Houghton Mifflin Company. 3 volumes.....$15.00

This diary takes us behind the scenes of the crucial decade of our National history.

Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy in Lincoln's Cabinet, was a keen, clear-sighted, shrewd statesman, with wide experience in public life. Through the intimate pages of his journal, written day by day in war-time and years after, we get the daily history of the conduct of the war from the point of view of the administration.

Wilson, Henry

"RISE AND FALL OF THE SLAVE POWER IN AMERICA"—

Houghton Mifflin Company. 3 volumes.....$10.00

"This historical work is of the highest class of that literature to which it belongs, the class, that is to say, which is made up of histories produced by great actors in great events, and it is so in a very special sense."

Wing, Henry E.

"WHEN LINCOLN KISSED ME"—

Abingdon Press. Paper.....$0.35

This is a short story of the author's adventures as a war correspondent. He was selected to get through the enemies' line and carry a message from General Grant to President Lincoln. He succeeded, after a number of thrilling adventures and narrow escapes.

FICTION

Altsheler, J. A.

"IN CIRCLING CAMPS"—

D. Appleton & Company.....$1.75

"From the election of Lincoln to the surrender of Lee: Gettysburg is a big battle piece."
—Baker.

Andrews, Mary Raymond Shipman

"THE PERFECT TRIBUTE"—

Charles Scribner's Sons. Boards.....$0.75

"A wonderful story of Lincoln and his Gettysburg speech, one of the greatest stories of recent years."
—N. Y. Times.

Andrews, Mary Raymond Shipman

"THE COUNSEL ASSIGNED"—

Charles Scribner's Sons. Boards.....$0.75

As Mrs. Andrews presented Abraham Lincoln, the President, in her famous "The Perfect Tribute," so now she presents Lincoln, the young Lawyer. She shows him turning his back on a great personal opportunity in answer to a request for help from those who had helped him; shows him in court, shrewd, rugged, eloquent, his own ambition submerged in the defense of a boy on trial for murder, whose parents had once given him a home.

Babcock, Bernie

"THE SOUL OF ANN RUTLEDGE"—

J. B. Lippincott Company.....$1.75

The story of Abraham Lincoln's romantic attachment for Ann Rutledge and its moulding power on his after-life is now for the first time adequately told in this remarkable novel.

Bachelor, Irving A.

"A MAN FOR THE AGES"—

The Bobbs-Merrill Company.....$2.00

Same DeLuxe edition. Boards..... 5.00

Same DeLuxe edition. Half-Leather..... 7.50

"A Man for the Ages is an inspiring sort of book to read, in addition to being interesting: and it does make Abraham Lincoln an approachable, near-at-hand person."

Bachelor, Irving A.

“EBEN HOLDEN: A TALE OF THE NORTH COUNTRY”. Popular copyright edition—

Grosset and Dunlap.....$1.00

A novel of life in the Adirondacks fifty years ago, introducing Horace Greeley and Abraham Lincoln. Interest centers in the faithful old servant, Eben Holden, who is lovingly drawn. Life in the woods and fields is depicted with no little charm. —Baker.

Bullard, F. L.

“TAD AND HIS FATHER”—

Little Brown & Company.....$1.00

A study of the Home Life of Abraham Lincoln.

Chittenden, Lucius E.

“LINCOLN AND THE SLEEPING SENTINEL”—

Harper & Brothers.....$0.75

This is the original story. The main incident of it has been told with varying details in many versions. This is the telling of the deed by one who shared in the doing.

Churchill, Winston

“THE CRISIS”—

The MacMillan Company.....$2.00

The Same—Popular Copyright Series—

Grosset & Dunlap..... 1.00

“A painstaking study of the Civil War and its causes (1860-1865) scene chiefly St. Louis. The fierce political movements of the time personified in a representative set of characters. Lincoln, Grant and Sherman appear; while the lovers are a Yankee and a Southern Lady. —Baker.

Daviess, Maria Thompson

“THE MATRIX”—

The Century Company.....$1.75

A charming, colorful romance of the meeting, the courtship, and the marriage of Abraham Lincoln's father and that almost fabulous figure, Nancy Hanks.

Dixon, Thomas

“THE SOUTHERNER: A ROMANCE OF THE REAL
LINCOLN”—

D. Appleton & Company.....$2.00

The Same—Popular Copyright Series—

Grosset & Dunlap..... 1.00

A novel that contains as accurate and intimate pictures as have been drawn of the heartrending struggle of Abraham Lincoln to save the nation. In it the humble, lion-hearted man is carried from a bare-foot boy to the White House. Richly dramatic; and the full tragedy of the scene is vividly presented.

Eggleston, Edward

“THE GRAYSONS: A STORY OF ILLINOIS”—

The Century Company.....$1.90

A detailed picture of the turbulent life of the pioneers, scene, Illinois (about 1850). Abraham Lincoln is introduced as counsel in a murder trial. He convicts the leading witness of perjury, and brings the guilt home to him.—Baker.

Gerry, Mrs. Margarita Spalding

“THE TOY-SHOP”—

Harper & Brothers.....$0.60

A story of Lincoln. The great man's burdened heart finds comfort in visits to an old toy-maker, and inspiration from a regiment of toys and their modest, firm-standing captain. A wonderful study of Lincoln the man—wise, human, and reverently tender.

Greene, Homer

“A LINCOLN CONSCRIPT”—

Houghton Mifflin Company.....$1.75

A stirring story of a Pennsylvania boy during the Civil War and of the result of the meeting between his father and President Lincoln.

Grierson, Francis

“THE VALLEY OF SHADOWS”—

John Lane Company.....$1.50

“The Valley of Shadows” deals with those wonderful days in Illinois before the Civil War when the people were preparing to elect Lincoln to the Presidency and a new era was dawning in America. It forms a most remarkable series of memories, full of delicately wrought impressions selected and blended with rare literary skill, and has all the movement of a fascinating and realistic romance.

Maule, Mary K.

“A PRAIRIE-SCHOONER PRINCESS”—

Lothrop, Lee & Shepard.....$1.75

Singmaster, Elsie

“GETTYSBURG”—

Houghton Mifflin Company.....$1.25

Miss Singmaster has lived all her life in Gettysburg, and she has combined her intimate knowledge with her gift for powerful narrative to tell not only of soul-stirring events of the actual fight but also many incidents that grew from it in the fifty years aftermath.

Steiner, Edward A.

“UNCLE JOE'S LINCOLN”—

Fleming H. Revell Company.....$1.25

Few books from Prof. Steiner's facile pen have gripped the American heart more than will this true story of his boyhood.

A true story of delightful episodes that move every patriotic American to greater zeal and greater service.

Tarbell, Ida M.

“HE KNEW LINCOLN”—

The MacMillan Company.....$1.00

“He Knew Lincoln” portrays the human traits of Lincoln's character. It shows his humor, illustrated in the famous story of the Socks, his great friendliness, and the sorrow and loneliness which encompassed him in the midst of his enormous activity, because of the terrible responsibility of his position.

Tarbell, Ida M.

“FATHER ABRAHAM”—

The MacMillan Company.....$1.00

“Father Abraham” depicts Lincoln as the Father of the Union Army, the man who was so interested in the boys in blue that he spent much of his time in associating with them, and knew more of the army than any general. Lincoln's conception of the war and his idea of duty in connection with it are splendidly brought out.

Willsie, Honore

"BENEFITS FORGOT"—

Frederick A. Stokes Company.....$1.00

"Benefits Forgot." A story of Lincoln and Mother Love. A true story of a young army surgeon, for whose education his mother had made great sacrifices. How President Lincoln learns of the young man's neglect of his mother, and brings him to realize his ingratitude, makes a deeply touching story.

POETRY AND DRAMA

Dixon, Thomas

"A MAN OF THE PEOPLE"—A drama of Abraham Lincoln—

D. Appleton & Company.....$1.75

A forceful picture of harassed, big-hearted and kindly Abraham Lincoln.

Drinkwater, John

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN: A PLAY"—with an introduction by Arnold Bennett—

Houghton Mifflin Company. Boards.....$1.25

"We are shown Lincoln just as we should like to imagine him, and as we believe he was—rugged, indifferent to appearance, tender-hearted, humorous, sensitive to the feelings of others, and sympathetic with every noble passion; but firm in resolve, and immovable from the line which once he has decided upon as just or magnanimous."—Manchester Guardian.

Snider, Dr. Denton J.

"THE LINCOLNIAD"—A National Epos in Four Parts.

The William Harvey Miner Company, Inc.

Here the attempt is made to construe the whole Lincoln as the American hero of the new national Epos in four different, yet inter-related books each of which turns upon a pivotal crisis of his life, wherein is specially emphasized his inner evolution amid the clash of outer events.

1. LINCOLN IN THE BLACKHAWK WAR

The first important round of incidents (in 1832) to which Lincoln himself looked back as formative of his career was the Black Hawk War. Elected Captain, sworn into service by Jefferson Davis, mustered out by Robert Anderson, he fought the Indian: but the deeper conflict then already brewing was the Civil War, whose forecast was the nullification of South Carolina that same year (1832). Here is seen Lincoln's ideal preparation for his future task. The outer landscape is fully depicted—the Mississippi river and the Illinois prairie—as well as the frontier people in deed and dialect.

Written in free meter and rhyme.....$2.00

2. LINCOLN AND ANN RUTLEDGE

An idyllic poem (in hexametral verse) of Lincoln's one real love—the second great crisis of his life, and his deepest emotional experience, whose sorrow transfigured his soul and whose memory never left him even during the Presidency. Village life of the frontiersman is portrayed, and the great migration to the Northwest.....$2.00

3. LINCOLN IN THE WHITE HOUSE

This epical theme takes up Lincoln in the Civil War till Gettysburg, revealing his inner development through all the war's casualties, until he becomes the supreme national leader of his time. Also a new poetic mythology rises into view to express his peculiar relation to the Upper powers, or the so-called prime movers of history. Also is shown Lincoln's mighty and long-continued wrestle with his fate, here called the Fatal Line, which is drawn between the two contending armies, and which lies also in the Nation.

Mainly blank verse with prose scenes.....$2.00

4. LINCOLN AT RICHMOND

The triumph of Lincoln over his Fate. His fourth grand Epoch is his visit to the Army of the Potomac in its last Campaign, when he crosses the Fatal Line for the first time and enters Richmond, at whose Capitol takes place his last great experience, his so-called Transfiguration, which is the final act of his life, his death occurring a few days later. Written in a variety of verse-forms.....$2.00

Waller, Mary E.

“OUR BENNY”—

Little Brown & Company.....$1.25

A narrative poem, founded on historical fact, The time is March to April, 1865, the place a village in Vermont. The divisions of the work are as follows: 1. The Coming of the Letters. 2. Salus Patriae. 3. Hannah and Agatha. 4. Lincoln. 5. Peace.

Whitman, Walt

“MEMORIES OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN AND OTHER
LYRICS OF THE WAR”—

Thomas B. Mosher $1.00

Small octavo format (4 $\frac{1}{4}$ x7) printed on Van Gelder hand-made paper in Caslon 10-point old-style type with Chiswick ornaments, bound in grey boards with white paper labels. Pp. 1-XII: 1-46 colophon included.

Whitman, Walt

“MEMORIES OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN”—

Thomas B. Mosher $5.00

This edition includes the full text of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, a foreword by Horace Traubel, to which are added selections from Frederick W. Lehmann's address, and a short and beautiful appreciation of Lincoln by the editor of the St. Louis Louis Mirror, William Marion Reedy. A selection is also given from John Burroughs as well as the great passage in full from Lowell's Commemoration Ode.

The text of the poem is printed in 14-point old-style Roman, initial letters in green ink, with head-bands and tail-pieces of becoming dignity. The frontispiece from an original photograph of Lincoln cannot be excelled and is the exact size of the original negative.

Three hundred copies, medium octavo, Italian hand-made paper, old-style olive green Fabriano boards, stamped in color to match, slide case.

JUVENILE

Abbott, J. S. C.

“LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

Stanton & Van Vliet Company $0.50

A biography of President Lincoln taken from “Abbott's Lives of the Presidents.”

Brooks, Elbridge S.

“THE TRUE STORY OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN” told for Boys and Girls—

Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company $2.00

The book does not talk of war or politics, but tells for young Americans the real, true, sympathetic, wonderful story of one of the greatest men that ever lived—Abraham Lincoln the American.

Butterworth, Hezekiah

“IN THE BOYHOOD OF LINCOLN”—

D. Appleton & Company.....$2.00

The upstanding nature of the boy, and his surroundings amid the pioneer scenes of his youth form absorbing, reading for the boys and girls of today.

Coffin, C. C.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

Harper & Brothers.....$2.50

The author's brilliant power of revivifying the past, his skill in interweaving anecdote with narrative, his ability to present characters without dull description, are placed at their best use in sketching the life and times of the nation's hero.

Ellias, Edith L.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—Illustrated—

Frederick A. Stokes Company:.....$1.50

A readable account of the life of Lincoln, told vividly and accurately in a way to interest young readers.

Gordy, W. F.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—Illustrated—

Charles Scribner's Sons.....$1.00

The Same—School edition—

Charles Scribner's Sons.....$0.92

A delightful biography of the “First Great American” for girls and boys by a man who has for years been writing successfully for young people. Mr. Gordy has for many years been collecting the materials for this book and has put his heart into the writing of it.

Hamilton, Mary A.

“THE STORY OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—“Children's Heroes” series—

E. P. Dutton & Company.....$1.00

This dainty book is designed for children from eight to ten, who are just making friends with great characters of history. Will prove an incentive to further reading.

Mace, W. H.

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN: THE MAN OF THE PEOPLE"—

Rand McNally & Company.....$0.60

In "Abraham Lincoln, the Man of the People," the latest volume in the series of "Little Lives of Great Men," Professor Mace has written a sympathetic biography that will go straight to the hearts of children. Like the other books of the series, it was written with the child in view, and presents those sides of the great man's life which find their counterpart in the life of every boy.

Mason, Alfred Bishop

"TOM STRONG, LINCOLN'S SCOUT"—

Henry Holt & Company.....$1.50

This is the story of the fourth Tom Strong, who finds himself at the White House as an older chum of Lincoln's son. The President soon finds use for Tom in his country's service, and he becomes an actor in the most stirring events of the Civil War. It is a gripping story for boys, developed against an historically accurate background.

Moores, C. W.

"THE LIFE OF LINCOLN FOR BOYS AND GIRLS"—

Houghton Mifflin Company.....$1.35

Morgan, James

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN, THE BOY AND THE MAN"—

The MacMillan Company.....$2.00

The Same—Popular Copyright Edition—

Grosset & Dunlap.....$1.00

This book is intended for younger readers. It is an authoritative account of the life of Lincoln, but lays special stress on the personal interest, being especially rich in anecdotes.

Nicolay, Helen

"THE BOY'S LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN"—

The Century Company.....$1.75

Based on the great Nicolay and Hay history. A vivid and inspiring narrative for all young Americans. In choice of incident and event, in accuracy, in sympathy, in vivid interest, it stands as an ideal life of Lincoln for young people.

Putnam, Harriet

“LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN FOR YOUNG PEOPLE”—

Written in one-syllable words.

McLaughlin Brothers.....$1.00

Putnam, M. Louise

“THE CHILDREN’S LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

A. C. McClurg & Company.....$1.50

This book, in the opinion of the publishers, provides, at the present time, the best available account of the life of the beloved President for children from ten to fifteen years of age. It is written in a very instructive and inspirational style, and is replete with pictures that delight children.

Sparhawk, Frances S.

“LIFE OF LINCOLN FOR BOYS”—

T. Y. Crowell Company.....$1.50

Out of a mass of recently discovered material the present author, a well-known writer, has woven a story replete with life and interest.

Stoddard, William O.

“LONG BRIDGE BOYS”—

Lothrop, Lee & Shepard.....$1.50

A story of '61 introducing Abraham Lincoln.

Stoddard, William O.

“THE BOY LINCOLN”—

D. Appleton & Company.....$1.75

This is an absorbing, forceful account of the early days of Abraham Lincoln, when he was a boy living on the frontiers.

Wheeler, Daniel E.

“TRUE STORIES OF GREAT AMERICANS: ABRAHAM
LINCOLN”—

The MacMillan Company.....$1.00

This is a complete and accurate life of Lincoln, prepared especially for younger readers. It presents all the important historical facts of Lincoln’s career, as well as much personal matter, but is brief and admirably suited to either home or school reading for children.

TRIBUTES TO LINCOLN

Davis, Mary Wright

“THE BOOK OF LINCOLN”—

George H. Doran Company.....$3.00

A collection of the tributes of the world to Lincoln. In many respects the best book of its kind. Suitable for a gift.

Oldroyd, Osborn H.

“LINCOLN MEMORIAL ALBUM”—

Osborn H. Oldroyd.....$2.50

Contains the reminiscences and recollections of 200 of the contemporaries of Lincoln. Men who knew him through life.

Mr. Oldroyd is custodian of the “Lincoln House” in Washington, where the great President died; and has been for many years a careful collector of Lincoln material.

Oldroyd, Osborn H. (Compiler)

“THE POETS’ LINCOLN”—With an introduction by Marion Mills Miller—

Osborn H. Oldroyd.....$1.00

A collection of tributes by the poets of the world to Abraham Lincoln.

Williams, Dallas A.

“THE PRAISE OF LINCOLN”—

The Bobbs-Merrill Company.....$2.00

An anthology of verse written to and about Abraham Lincoln, containing 102 poems. With an introduction by Thomas R. Marshall, Vice-President of the United States.

LINCOLN’S BIRTHDAY EXERCISES, ETC.

Barnard, George Grey

“BARNARD’S LINCOLN”—

Stewart & Kidd Company.....$0.75

The Creation and Dedication of George Grey Barnard’s Statue of Abraham Lincoln, which stands in Lytle Park, Cincinnati. The Dedication delivered by the Hon. Wm. Howard Taft. Etching of the statue by E. T. Hurley. Seven full-page illustrations. 80 pages. Printed on cameo paper.

Faxon, Grace B. (Compiler)

“PIECES AND PLAYS FOR LINCOLN’S BIRTHDAY”—

Hall & McCreary Company. Paper.....$0.35
Cloth......75

Contains 125 selections, including recitations, acrostics, Lincoln verses for familiar tunes, quotations from Lincoln, anecdotes of Lincoln. Lincoln epigrams, programs and a collection of dialogues and plays, etc.

Fowler, H. A. (Editor)

“LINCOLNIANA BOOK PLATES AND COLLECTIONS”—

Four Seas Company. Boards.....$2.50

Langdon, W. C.

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN TODAY”—

The University of Illinois Press.....$0.50

Being the complete program and text of the Lincoln day convocation at the University of Illinois, 1918, with addresses by President Edmund J. James and Captain Fernand Baldensperger, of the French Army. Illustrated by two rare photographs of Lincoln, the Travers portrait and the Lambert ambrotype and by photographs of the speakers and the convocation groups.

“LINCOLN’S BIRTHDAY EXERCISES FOR THE SCHOOL-ROOM”—Teacher’s Helps Series—

Educational Publishing Company. Pamphlet.....$0.24

Mawson, Agnes

“WINNOWINGS FOR LINCOLN’S BIRTHDAY”—

D. Appleton & Company.....$0.30

Selections from Lincoln’s speeches, his favorite poems, beautiful thoughts about him, etc. The material is collected with a view to its suitability for use in commemoration of Lincoln’s birthday, and to cultivate a fuller appreciation of the strength and beauty of his character. Divided into two parts, for grammar and high schools, and anecdotes for little folk.

Oldroyd, Osborn H.

“PROGRAM OF EXERCISES FOR THE ANNIVERSARY OF LINCOLN’S BIRTHDAY”—

Osborn H. Oldroyd Pamphlet.....$0.10

Contains: “The Boyhood of Lincoln;” “Brief Sketch of the Life of Abraham Lincoln;” “What Made Lincoln Great;” “Lincoln as a Humorist;” “Recitations;” “Gettysburg Address;” twenty numbers in all.

Sindelar, J. C.

"LINCOLN DAY ENTERTAINMENTS"—

A. Flanagan Company. Paper.....$0.40

The best and most complete book of entertainments for this occasion. The readings and recitations are both original and selected; the plays and dialogues, drills, pantomimes, and tableaux are all new. For all grades.

 SCHOOL TEXT BOOKS
Baldwin, James

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN"—(For Sixth Year).

American Book Company.....$0.72

This thrilling story of the most American of all our Presidents is much more than an ordinary biography. It traces briefly the progress of our government from the time of its organization to the end of the great Civil War, and it makes plain the causes and motives which brought about the tremendous crisis. Considerable space is given to Lincoln's boyhood and youth, but the book is free from wearisome details, as well as from political bias or sectional prejudice.

Baldwin, James

"FOUR GREAT AMERICANS: WASHINGTON, FRANKLIN, WEBSTER, LINCOLN"—(For Fourth Year)—

American Book Company.....$0.64

The story of Abraham Lincoln is simply and interestingly told in the last 56 pages of this book. Some of the chapter headings are: The Kentucky Home; School and Books; Life in the Backwoods; The First Years in Illinois; etc., etc.

Bergold, Lilian C. (Editor)

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN"—

Educational Publishing Company.....$0.50

A collection of authentic stories, with poems, songs and programs for boys, girls, and teachers of elementary schools.

Draper, Andrew S. (Editor)

“LINCOLN SELECTIONS”—(Gateway Series).

American Book Company.....$0.52

This volume gives in the introduction so much of Lincoln's life as seems necessary to recall to the reader's mind the setting of his addresses and state papers. It contains in addition to the graver and more stately public addresses which are best known, several more informal addresses, with which the people are much less familiar, and a considerable number of letters, of which by far the greater number of people know nothing at all.

Gaston, Charles R. (Editor)

“LINCOLN'S ADDRESS AT COOPER INSTITUTE AND MACAULAY'S SPEECHES ON COPYRIGHT”— Edited with Introduction and Notes. (Standard English Classics)—

Ginn & Company.....$0.44

Contains complete address as delivered on February 27, 1860.

Lincoln, Abraham

“EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION”—(Riverside Literature Series)—

Houghton Mifflin Company. Paper.....$0.28

Moore, Chas. W. (Editor)

“LINCOLN—ADDRESSES AND LETTERS”—(Eclectic English Classics)—

American Book Company.....$0.40

In the preparation of this collection of the writings of Abraham Lincoln the editor has had in mind the chief value which it should possess for the reader. That value is to be found in the revelation which his writings give of the personality of one of the greatest public characters in all history. So those speeches and letters have been chosen which reveal the most of the man, Lincoln. With this in view, the notes are meant to explain the man and the occasion, and with the letters give such information as will enable the reader to understand better why the letters were written and who Lincoln's correspondents were.

Tarbell, Ida M. (Editor)

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—Selections from the Letters, Speeches and State Papers of Abraham Lincoln. Edited with Introduction and Notes. (Standard English Classics)—

Ginn & Company.....$0.48

Contains 40 selections which date from 1832 when Lincoln made his first public address (Views on Money-Loaning, Education, and Lawmaking) to 1865 when he made his last speech (The Reconstruction of the Southern States). Offers his views on education, politics, slavery, labor and capital, proclamation, letters, messages, etc.

Thomas, Isaac (Editor)

“THE WORDS OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—

American Book Company.....$0.76

The main purpose of this book is to put within the reach of our youth a collection of Lincoln's words which, in themselves, will be a source of inspiration to all that read them and will serve as models of good English to the schools, and to make known his words as they ought to be known by all good Americans.

Wade, Mary Hazelton

“ABRAHAM LINCOLN”—(Little Folk's Play of American Heroes)—

R. G. Badger Company.....$0.75

In simple form, and presenting the heroes in successive periods of development, it enables the child to read and act out their lives at one and the same time, entering into the great man's thoughts and feelings as they conquer every obstacle and become at last “great.”

