CERTAIN GODLY

TO BE HAD OF
 THE AUTHOR'S WIDOW AND SUCCESSORS
 IN THE CITY OF LONDON
 AT THE SIGN OF THE THREE KINGS
 IN ST. MARTIN'S LANE

TO THE RIGHT
 WORSHIPFULL SIR
 CHRISTOPHER YELVERTON
 Knight, one of the Iudges of the Kings Bench, and the Ladie his wife: H. Y.

wiltheth to your present prosperities the addition of many daies in the fruitfull feare of the Lord Iesus, &c.

Right Worshipfull, it is inspired to man by grace, to fetch the compasse of this life within the reach of a spanne, and it is suggested to him by nature to spin out his web Psal. 39. 5.
 in many daies, though it bee with manie dangers. Howbeit if the wings of pride did not transport vs
 to the height of worldlinesse, and the weight of opinion did not beguile vs in the taste of happinesse, we might discern in varietie of delights but superfluitie of desires, Eccl. 2. 10. 23.
 in increase of riches but excesse of sorrowes, in length of yeeres but strength of cares, and in the choisest footing that we take, but a changeable fleeting of our estate. For if our affections might alwaies feed on Manna, we would loath it; if our inheritance did stretch to the plaines of Num. 11. 4.
 Jordan, wee would enlarge it; and if our preheminence might

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

Gen. 3. 6. might reach to heauen, yet would we raise vp our heads higher. These were the itching humors of Euah lineally descended to vs, who thought not Paradise spacious enough for her habitation, nor the dainties of Eden sweet enough for her taste, nor that presence of God good enough for her companie. But where the superscription of Holinesse to the Lord is engrauen on the head, and the perswasion of godlinesse to be gaine is engrafted in the heart, there the lust of the world, and the dust of the world shal be shuffled together as paires and pearles of equall account and continuance. For let the glorie of a Christian be neuer so eminent, it is not greater then Salomons; nor yet Salomons so great as the Lillies: let the arme of the wicked be neuer so mightie, it is not stronger then Pharaohs; and yet Pharaohs inferior to the course of waters: let the power of his command be neuer so absolute, it is not larger then Nabuchadnezzars, & yet stifned in pride, he was streightned for 7. years within the walks of wild asses; yea let the apparell he puts on be neuer so royall, the place where he sits neuer so iudiciall, the phrase of his speech neuer so plausible, and the praise of his voice neuer so popular; yet can he not be lifted vp above Herod, nor Herod by these defended from the wormes. Whether then we peruse the steps of the Saints, or the state of vnrepentant sinners, wee see their lines equally bound vp with the cords of corruption, though vnequally matched in the ioy at their separation; the one falling away like a flower transplanted to a better soile: the other rushing vpon the rocke of Gods wrath, either shamefully deiected with the terror of iudgement while they liue, or else fearefully entangled with the sense of torment when they die. It is not therefore amisse, since an entlude is as it were appointed to be plaid on this earth, which

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

which is the stage, by the sonnes of men, who are the actors, in their severall callings, which are the parts, before God and Angels, who are the beholders: and since every mans part must haue his period, yet no man knoweth where to end; it is not amisse we prepare with dexteritie to performe it, that wee may tremble when the Lions ^{1. Cor. 14. 8.} roare, leape when the trumpet soundeth, stoope when we are stricken, runne on when we are bidden, recouer our selues when we fall, pawse when we faint, and skippe like a young kid, when the starre of our saluation shall appeare. The way then to keepe the instrument in tune, which is the heart; and our affections in temper, which are the strings, is sanded out vnto vs, in that Christian answer of Jacobs to the question of his age: In the numbring ^{Gen. 47. 9.} of our daies to be few, and the waighing of our deedes to be euill. Howbeit the flesh is inclosed with so many feates, subiect to so many wants, forced to so many helpes, and so perplexed with it owne frailtie, as the numbring of our daies to be short is not so difficult, being vnable whether wee gaze abroad or looke at home, to promise our selues any long immunitie either from the decayes of nature, or the dissolution of nature. But to reckon our daies to be euill, is that whereto we are so hardly haled: for the flesh is is ensnared with such idle hopes, blinded with such wanton shewes, busied in such deepe designs, and so benumbed with such false delights, as we waste our time and weigh it not, heape vp sinne and feare it not, enflame Gods wrath and feele it not, lie chained in death and wrastle not, slip into the graue and see it not. Wherefore vnlesse we measure our time as we doe our treasure, both by tale and by waight, and haue our perswasion, that the flesh is vaine, coupled with an acknowledgement that it is sinfull, and in the reckoning of our iourney to be short,

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

do not cast it vp likewise to be wearisome, the wicked doe number as well as we, and draw vp their account as true as we. For the Egyptians in a fright can say, we die all, and yet pursue the Israelites to slay them : Esau in his hunger can crie, I am almost dead, and yet in his heart thirst for the bloud of Jacob : the Jewes in their voluptuousnesse can iest at their death to morrow, and yet be drunke the day before. But our Arithmeticke that are Christians, must bee fetched from the praier and practise of Moses, who found the meditation of death a meanes and spurre to wisdome. Wherein if seriously wee could taske our selues, we should perceiue the plots and policies of the flesh laied vpon such vnfruitfull heapes so soonē scattered, and the foundation and ground of our hopes heere on earth to be vnderpropped with such slender helps so quickly weakened, as wee would easily draw in our eies to attend our hearts desire to bee dissolued and to rest with Christ. For whereas our affection to this life, is enflamed either by those flashings of vaine-glorie, that flie through the world like lightning, or by the freedome and strength of yeeres wrapped vp in the power of preheminance aboue others, the Sunne as yet did neuer shine vpon that sonne of Adam, that saw not vexation the fore-runner, and ambition the betrailer of honor, and that felt not secret consuming care the preseruer, and open and irkesome labour, the director of his command. Yea, so long as we saile in this inferior sea, we shall be so boorded by such crosse encounters, and so deluded by such false alarmes both at home and abroad, as if we rise, enuie lieth at the roote to hew vs downe ; if we fall, pride standeth at our feete to presse vs lower ; if we rule, authoritie doth so amaze vs, as we forget compassion ; if wee obey, insolencie doth so besiege vs, as we neglect subiection ; if

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

wee abound, couetousnesse creepeth in so closely, as it grudgeth the comfort of society; if we be scanted, impatiency breaketh out so fiercely, as it despiseth the law of propertie; if we be prouoked, wrath roareth out so bitterlie for reuenge, as it is no manhood to sheath vp iniuries; if we bee pleased, flatterie followeth on so shamefully for reward, as it is no masterie to obtaine victories; if we be weake, we blame the worke of nature, that we were not made of a firmer mettall; if we be strong, we blaze the art of nature as if wee were steele, that could not turne the edge; if we be sicke, we plant our faith in the Physitian to cure vs, yet being found wee shake off remperance that might preserue vs; when our leaues bee greene and our wits fresh, because wee want the reuerence of the aged, we criē that hoary haire might quickly couer vs; and being arriued at age the doore of death, wee with that slipper youth might againe beguile vs: euer peruerting the times and preuenting the meanes that God hath prefixed, and wearying and wasting our selues soonest in possessing that we would enioy longest. For though it be the pleasure of the Almighty, that wee should cherish this lampe of life, yet ought wee not to consume the oyle in prizing our delights at too high a rate, nor in spending on our lusts in too large a measure. And though like warie shipmen wee prouide for this crazie barke, which is the bodie, yet must wee not permit immoderate care like a mercilesse canker to eate through our bones. But the way to ballance our selues euen, and not to stray beyond our tether, is to captiuatē our thoughts thus farre, as to reckon the world but as a cradle, wherein we are rocked, till we aspire to some age and growth in Christ: our desires but as dreames wherewith we are deluded, till we attaine to some taste of Gods loue in Christ: this life but as a race

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

wherein we are wearied and perplexed till wee can recover some sight of Christ ; and this body but as a prison, wherein our soules lie shakled vnder the hope of being blessed in the death of Christ. To which affection and perfection wee shall then ascend , when being taught by his word which is truth, and led by his spirit which is life, we can shake off selfe-will that runneth on so fast to destruction , and sway downe selfe-loue that swelleth vp so high to presumption , and can walke in humilitie as in the sight of God , contenting our selues with the portion assigned vs as his gift , and with the affliction sent vs as his triall , crucifying the flesh as an enemy to the quickning of the soule , and trampling on this earth as an insnarer of our feete in vanitie , weighing sickenesse but as the fore-runner of sleepe , and welcoming death but as the sickle of the Lords haruest ; beholding the graue as the faithfull treasury of our bodies , and looking vp to heauen as the vndoubted Paradise of our soules. Now there being but two impediments to this perswasion and tranquillitie of spirit , either the corruption that resteth within vs , or the sorrowes brought vpon vs while we breath heere : the first cleauing and clasping so close about our loynes (sinne being like a leprosie that hath couered the skinne) as wee seeme to stand but on one foote from slipping into hell : the other striking so deepe into the ioyes of this life , that feeling as it were a quotidian ague of discomforts hanging vpon vs , we can hardly weane our thoughts from listening to the knell of iudgement sounding in our eares ; it is fit we prouide for our inward peace, there being no outward balme able to assuage a raging conscience, nor no externall Physicke of force to relieue a distressed soule. We may not therefore iudge our selues safest , when wee are freest from the buffetings of Satan: for bearing in our bodies a diuided kingdom between the flesh & the spirit, represented vnto vs in the wrestling of Rebecca's twins within her wombe; Gen. 25. 22. if we haue peace with God, we shall haue warre with the dragon; & hauing forsaken Egypt, & in the way to Canaan, we shall haue Pharaoh & his captaines flie like grasshoppers to feed vpon vs: yea the liberty we haue in Christ, the corruption of our hearts will labour to inuert to voluptuousnes: the sweetnes we taste in his word, the vanity of our minds will endeuor to ouercast with drowlines: the faith which we ground on his promises, the subtilty of the serpent will seeke to vndermine by doubtfulnes: the conscience we make to offend, the lusts of our flesh will contend for to couer with hypocrisy: the detestatiō we haue of sin, the concupiscence of our eies wil striue to out-reach with profanenesse: & the interest we haue to heauen, the pride of our liues will perswade vs to exchange for trifles. Gal. 5. 13. With which temptations we may not be dismaied, for where the siege is layd, there is watchfulnesse to withstand; but where no feare of the enemy is, there the weapon rusteth: and feeling a continuance of this contention between the law of the flesh and the spirit of life, wee may bee assured that the seed of grace giuen vs from aboue, which first drew vs into fight with our vncleannesse, is well growen, and that imputing the first thought of our peace to the loue of God, the full accomplishment of it to the death of Christ, and the alone messenger and perswader of it to the holy Ghost; and knitting the whole power of the worke, the mercy in our preservation, & the glory in our victorie to the arme and action of the almighty, we shall haue our corruptions as it were closed in our hands, and the pride of our resistance so abated in our liues, as sinne shall but droupingly be seene in vs, and mortality that cannot be Act. 20. 9. priviledged with perfection, shall yet be beautified with sanctification, in such measure as we shall walke heere but as dispatch from heauen on our Lords message, to giue the sonnes of men a paterne of good life, & to forewarne them of their woes, by bounding our desires within Iacobs compas, the presence of the Lord to guide vs that we doe not stray, his prouidence to feed vs that we do not starue, and his bounty to cloth vs that we do not perish. On the other side; so tender are our thoughts, and so ielous our meditations of the loue of God; as we are stricken with a trembling distrust; to haue lost the starre of our direction and comfort in Christ, when wee see our selues exposed to the shame of the world, and the winds still to beate on our rudders, where the wicked saile away proudly in a set calme; our houses to be inclosed with snares, when theirs are peaceable without feare; and our liues to be bound vp in sorow, when their breasts (as Iob speaketh) are full of milke, and their bones of marrow. And when the apprehension of this feare hath taken such hold of our flesh, as we thinke our selues smitten in displeasure, and the tree of our hope to bee torne downe in wrath, wee then wrastle with sinne as if the steps of our strength were restrained, and looke vpon death as the Iailer, that commits vs to the graue as a dungeon. Howbeit euen in this doth the Lord reach forth a most approued cordiall to remoue the faintnesse of our hearts; for hauing accessse into his sanctuary through the vnion & communion we haue with Christ, the vncleannes of our birth being wiped away in the sanctification of his nature, our transgression remoued in his innocency, our rebellion discharged in his obedience, and the vtmost farthing paid in his sufferings; and hauing the image of God we lost in Adam not renewed onely, but a fairer and deeper stamp thereof engrauen and set vpon vs,

it being not now in our power to listen any more to the counsell of the flesh, Christ bearing our names before him as his brest-plate, and our bodies with him as members whereof he is head; and hauing this written in the tables of our heart by the finger of no forgerer, but of that comforter was sent from heauen, and testified by our selues in the pietie of our religion and purity of conuersation, setting saluation before vs as a binding benefite, euen to the losse of our souls to venture for the Lords glory: we may Rom. 8. 33. in a Christian resolution giue challenge at the gates of hell, that nothing can be charged vpon vs as a debt, and therefore nothing can light vpon vs as a punishment. Wherefore if the Lord doe cast his cloudy countenance vpon vs, it is that we should watch against the weaknesse of the flesh, which is then readiest to sleepe when temptation is nearest: and yet if the streame of temptation cary vs into some sin, & from thence we slip into some shame, in his compassion he cureth vs, and yet in kindnesse doth correct vs. If he mingle our bread with care, and lodge vs in the bed of darknes & discomfort, it is to weane vs from the flesh pots of Egypt, and to aduance vs in the way to Canaan; yet being driuen to any strait or exigent in this wildernes, rather then we shall want it shall raine Manna, Exod. 26. 4. & rather then we shall thirst the rocke shall yeeld vs water: & 27. 6. yea though the wicked be like the bramble, who in confidence of their shadow dare challenge to be kings ouer the trees of the Forrest, and our selues like sheepe, who in simplicity grazing vpon the mountaines, are either fleeced of the shearer when we are growne in wooll, or snatched vp by the butcher when we are growne in flesh: yet when death hath made vs both euen with the earth, the graue shall be to vs a fold till our shepheard come, and to them a shambles till the destroier of their soules shall haue recei-

ued an endles commission to torment them. What cause then haue we to shut our gates against the gasps of death; or like trembling leaues to enterraine the gale or blast of sicknes, which doth but prune our fetters, the more easly to flie toward our abiding citie? For if neither the weight of corruption, though it sorely presse vs, nor the violence of affliction, though it soundly beat vs, can separat vs from the loue of God, nor the league with his creatures; nay if this masse of sin, and storme of sorrow we sustaine, be the most sensible motiues to draw vs vnder Christs couering; and liuing heere as sinning saints though sanctified, and as crucified saints though beloued, we haue yet but our ioies

Most comfortable perswasions & instructions tending to this purpose, shall be found dispersed and sprinkled in this treatise following; into which, who so shall walke for religious recreation, if he cannot furnish himselfe with Josephs store to serue Egypt and other countries, yet can he not faile of the widowes store, that had to feed her selfe & Eliab. the riches which he hath in heauen ; that the loue of the world is an exemption from the life of God, and that the Lords correction is but loue : and on the contrary shall be discerned, that the eloquence of the flesh is like the cry of the Lapwing, that traineth vs furthest from that we seeke ; that the pompe of the earth is like a blazing starre, that dreadeth the minde by presaging ruine ; that the temptations to pleasure are like canded wormewood, that cozen the tast, and kill the stomacke; and that the schedule of our daies being summed vp, is like a large debt set downe in golden letters.

These things to a moderate and mortified minde, seasoned with the feare, and seated in the fauour of God, cannot but bee welcome, though with the couetous and carnall man, that hath his desires like the Mole, scraping in the earth, they shall fare as Christ did among the Gadarens, who was intreated to depart from them, when he was but comming neare them. Howbeit in these desperate diseased times, wherein wee are all so vniuersallie drunke with our owne conceits, as we despise to be reformed by the word of grace (some yoking religion with policy, as if they were grapes of the same vintage: some trampling downe religion with profanenesse, as if she wore a weed that ouergrew the corne ; some disguising religion with hypocrisie, as if she were a garment of diuers colors: some poysoning religion with Popery, as if the immortal seed of God could bee leauened with the traditions of men : and few laying religion to the heart, which simply embraced and sincerely followed, would and ought to be the square and leuell of our liues,) it is good we get as many buttresses as we can to vphold the building, and raise as many bulwarkes as we can to beat backe the shot, that Satan shewing himselfe more sharpe witted, and if it may be more spicefully minded then before, in laying new kinds of allurements to surprize our faith and subuert our hope, that we should not so much as grope after our life which is hid in Christ: we may (if it be possible) with fresh and new supply of skill and cunning vnwind our selues out of his enuenimed snares, and hold fast our profession, which is a schole of chastisement for a time, that in our peace at the last we may be parrakers of the Lords holinesse.

Heb. 12. 10.

I haue therefore presumed, though vnable of my selfe to carie the least sticke to the altar, and vnworthy of all others (since lowest of the forme) to offer either diet or direction to any, that hath touched but the hemme of Christ: yet being taught a receipt, which carefully applied will purifie the head from profane humors, strengthen the heart against vaine terrors, and cleanse the conscience from that accursed guile of spirit, whereby wee haue learned to lessen sinne, I haue presumed no longer to suppress the quintessence of his skill from whence it came, but shadowed with your allowance to send it forth, not so full and hearty a medicine (I confesse) as it might haue beene from the immediate hand of him that made it. The man yeknew, and this iron and irefull age that frowneth most on them that are freest from profanessse, could not but approue him to bee zealous of the truth of God, painfull in his calling, faithfull in his message, powerfull in his speech, carefull of the stocke of Christ, peaceable and blamelesse in his life, and comfortable and constant in his death. So as if there appeare any skarre or blemish in the worke, it came by passing thorough my fingers, that carried my pen too slowly, and attended the voice too slightly. Howbeir, putting on the armour of prooffe and experience of your fauors, toward whom whom chiefly I haue set my byas, that ye will be pleased to be no seuerer examiners, but mild perusers of these papers, and that affection may somewhat mediate with your judgements, to censure not as ye see, but as I meane; I haue aduentured the hazard to be reprov'd of others, vpon assured confidence to bee accepted of you. And though many may happily balke the alley, and not lend their eye to behold the iarres betweene the flesh and the spirit, vpon opinion that my selfe haue leaped beyond my last, in striuing to bring this boat to land, which the owner neuer meant should see the shore: yet when I considered the word of God to be like the raine, and the hearts of men like the earth, that if the tree answer not her fruite, her leaues will not protest her from the fire: that he shall come short in his account of faith, that maketh no conscience of hearing; and that if the voice of the Preacher perith in the ayre or in the eare, it shall quicken againe to question with vs for our negligence; I was not athamed to humble my selfe to others view, that by the mercy scene on me, who haue beene thus farre led into the secrets of God, they may be likewise encouraged to presse within the border of the mount, when the horne of saluation shall be blowen.

For it is a miserie and madnesse to imagine the labour of a Christian to be mued vp within the wales of the ministerie, or that men are so straightned in their vocations, as that they may not looke aside to a sermon: or that because the theefe was saued on the gallowes, therefore heauen may bee wonne with a wet finger: or that since the workers for an hour, had the penny with them that bore the paine and heate of the day: therefore it shall suffice to come as Nicodemus did to Christ by night. Nay, we must know, that as the promise of mercie is equall to all.

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

all, so the prayer and practise for mercie must be the same in all ; that we are no longer within the compasse of the Lords protection , then wee walke in feare within the bounds of his direction ; that if religion be not the commander in our callings , scarcitie or discontent will bee as mothes in our blessings ; and that if presumption misleade vs to pledge only a pang of deuotion for a sacrifice when the pleasure of our daies be past , iudgement shall but re-quite vs, if either death do strangle vs before we speake, or the wrath of God rebound vpon vs when wee haue wept our fill. For it standeth not with the Lords honour to be shaken off so oft when he would lodge with vs , nor with our duties to runne away so fast, when wee should turne to him : but that at length iustice must arise to preserue the maiestie of his mercy , so much abased , and so long abused, which we haue sensibly felt, the stripes being yet seene in our streets, and may feare heereafter to bee more fierce, by how much the sword of the enimie sharpened to destruction , doth exceed the correcting hand of God tempered with compassion.

The Lord graunt this short setting of his face against vs, may haste vs. to haue peace with him, that hath the ends of the world subiect to his power, and the plagues of the world restrainable at his will : so shall wee bee preserued from the venime , and ransomed from the violence of them that seeke our soules , and either still praise him in the land of the living, or eternally dwell with him in the habitation of his Saints : which God grant may bee your portions, and the inheritance of your posterity. Amen.

Yours in all dutie.

TO THE READER.

Thinke not (gentle Reader) that the turning backe from the world is any looking backe from the plough; but by example iudge it safer to bend thine eie toward Zoar a place of rest, then to wrest thy sight toward Sodome the citie of wrath. And since the earth was cursed for thy sinne in Adam, and thy selfe art saued by thy faith in Christ, let the direction of thy thoughts to him be the messenger to thy heart that thou art in heauen: for thou art not placed that thou shouldest be planted here, but being bought from this earth by bloud, cleanse thy selfe in this earth by water; that since some inferior affections must needs be foule, the dust may onely cleaue to thy feet, thy head and thy hands be lift vp to God. For if in the pride of thy flesh thou dost build thy nest neere him, or in the profanenes of thy heart dost strue to be rich without him, the least breath of his mouth shal batter thy seat to be seene no more, & scatter thy wealth as before the wind. Yea the Lord hath choked thy fields with thistles, & wrapped up thy treasure in rust; that seeing the ground whereon thou standest to be out of Paradise, and the staffe whereon thou leaneest to bee but wood of the worst sort, thou mightest pray to haue the sword put up that stops thee from the tree of life, and those boughes cut off that shadow thee from beholding thy sinnes borne in Christs body. Now the humour that hindreth thy sight, is the Crystall shew of brittle honor, that sets thine eies on fire to follow after it; for if Adam may be as God, there is no commandement can hedge him: if Esau may haue

TO

To the Christian Reader.

CHRISTIAN Reader, when thou takest a view of the bookes already abroad, and daily increasing, as also according to thy measure of grace receiued, doest discern of and censure the weaknesse and insufficiency of too many: I speake not now of those idle and vaine, oh that I might not say, tending to Atheisme and prophanenes; which are rather to be bewailed in a Christian common-weale, than censured: but of those, whose subiect is profitable, and workmen desirous to profis: Euen in too many of these thou hast cause iustly to complaine, there is no end of making many books, the reading of such being but wearisomnes to the flesh, and so breedeth a distast of the necessary use of reading. But when thou shalt lift up thine eies, and spie out as in a foggie mist, diuers also whercin is an vpright writing, the words of truth, able to teach and to conuince, thou art now to be encouraged, and not to be wearie to exercise thy selfe, as thy calling and meanes will affoord, in bookes that are necessary, pretious and godly. Among these, if thou wilt take the pains to read, thou wilt easily condescend, that these Sermons deserue, both for their matter and penning, to be preserued for the use of Gods Saints. Which will appeare, if with mee thou wilt a little neerer obserue the frame and comelinesse of this work: namely, the doctrines naturally raised, the reproofe of the aduersary soundly concluded: and that in such a pitthe phrase, and words sauouring of grace, that thou canst not but with me acknowledge diuers excellent graces of God shining clearly in the Author, in the Pen-man. By the Authour the word is truly interpreted, and in a most excellent maner brought home to thy conscience, both for mortification of life, and quickening in heavenly duties, as also for settling thee against that accursed heresie of Popery, which is too much neglected of too many able teachers. In the Pen-man obserue diligence, wisdom, godlinesse; he tooke this paines only for his owne priuate use: for very hardly could hee bee drawn to communicate this to the common good: yet so carefully is it performed, that vndoubtedly not a sentence, yea hardly will it appere, that a word of moment escaped him, as those who were diligent hearers with him may remember and can witness. His godly wisdom appeareth not only in attending on the Lords own ordinance, the publike ministry of the word, on the Lords day and other set times, but also in treasuring the same up by writing: knowing well, that the voice working inwardly for a time, through mans weaknesse and infirmity doth quickly perish: to this end, that with his ordinary sanctifying of the Sabbath, he might (and that liuely) set before his owne eyes this powerfull meanes also of saluation: therby nourishing the same faith and godlinesse in himselfe, which he saw from his infancy, and daily doth see to dwell in that reuerend and truely religious Iudge his father, and in that vertuous Lady, alwaies ready to refresh the bowels of the Saints, his mother: to whom I also owe my selfe, both for encouragement in my entrance to the worke of the ministry first begun in that their well ordered family, as also for many fauours since, principally for that charge where I now dwell, bestowed on me by that worthy & most religious carefull disposer of the Church liuings, the right honourable Sir Thomas Egerton Knight, Baron of Ellesmeere, Lord Chancellor of England. Lastly, Christian Reader, with me consider

of the blessing of God upon the labours of this godly and learned Gentleman in his owne profession, who hath taken these paines now for thy good, evident to all those that know him: which doth clearly conuince, that the keeping of the sabbath is not the losse of one yeere in seauen, as too many of his rank, & I would they only, by their practise do discover they think. Indeed if the fourth commandement were ceremoniall, and consequently abrogated, if there were no heauen, no hell, and that man were only for this life, they might haue some colour. But that the care of thy calling and of holy religion may go together, yea hand in hand, heere thou hast a paterne and example: benefite thy selfe by this his paines, and tread in the same steps of godly wisdom.

GEntle Reader, where as by some ouersight, the 19. 20. 21. and 22. verses of the eight chapter to the Romans follow not in their due place, thou art to be aduertised that they are handled in the end of the chapter, after the 38. and 39. verses; where thou art to looke for them.

MATH. chap. I. Vers. I.

1. The Booke of the Generation of Iesus Christ, the sonne of David, the sonne of Abraham, &c. to the 18. verse.

THE foure Euangelists haue bene resembled by some writers to the foure beasts spoken of Exec. i. 10. and Reu. 4. 7. This Euangelist Mathew being compared to a man, because he begins with the pedegree of our Saviour Christ: S. Marke to a lion, because hee begins with the preaching of John Baptist, who roared like a lion in the wildernesse the doctrine of Repentance: S. Luke to an Oxe or Bullock, because he begins with the story of Zachary the Priest, whose office was vnder the Law to offer sacrifice: and S. Iohn to an Eagle, because hee flieth aloft, and beginneth with the eternall generation of the Sonne of God according to his Diuinitie. It is true indeed their beginnings are as before, but their comparisons are too curious; for as the finger of God directed them, so did they write, and such was the Lords loue to his church, as not to suffer vs to be vnfurnished of any thing that might further vs in the course of our saluation, but from time to time to raise vp instruments and pen-men to set downe his will, that seeing the way wherein to walke, we need not nor cannot pretend ignorance.

The whole chapter diuideth it selfe into two general parts: 1 first is set downe the lineall descent of Christ: secondly, the 2 maner of his natiuitie, from the eighteenth verse to the end.

In the first part note three members: first, a generall comprehension of the matter in the first verse: secondly, the large 1 sarration of it, from the second to the seuenteenth verse: 2

thirdly,

thirdly, the conclusion, in the seuenteenth verse.

In the first of these obserue two parts: first, what matter he will intreat of: secondly, of whose pedigree, nameley of Christs the great King of immortality.

1 In that it is said, the booke of the Generation, it is not to be taken as a title prefixed to the whole booke, but it is meant according to the Hebrew phrase, that it is a Catalogue or recitall of such a stocke as our Sauour Christ came of.

2 For the second, which is the narration, it is distributed into three members, every one by equall proportion hauing foureteene persons: the first, of the Patriarkes: the second, of the Kings of Dauid: the third, of the Captaines and inferior Gouernors which had onely some fragments left of the roiall regiment after the transportation and carying them away into Babylon. Now the cause why the Euangelist diuideth them thus into three foureteenes, is, not onely that the number and the story might the better be borne away, but principally because he is to proue that Christ came lineally from the Iewes, he setteth downe the threefolde, estate of the Iewes, and wherunto they were subiect till Christ came, who should raigne in the hearts of men: shewing how at the first the Tribe of Iuda increased greatly till it was established and settled in the kingdome of Dauid, then the greatest excellency thereof was in Dauids sonne Salomon, and then the abatement and greatest diminution that could be which was in their cariage away into Babylon, and that a Carpenter should be right heire to the Crowne, sheweth the great eclipse whereunto it was fallen: so

1 as in the Patriarkes it was like the Sunne dawning, in Salomon
 2 like the Sunne in his full glory, and afterward like the Sunne
 3 set and gone downe, leauing the right of the kingdome as in a darke place, nameley in Ioseph a poore Carpenter, of a base trade and meane condition, nothing at all respected. Now further in the narration, the Euangelist (as we may see in the old
 1 Testament) reckoneth vp some that liued before the going
 2 downe into Egypt, some that were borne and died in Egypt,
 3 and some that returned out of Egypt, and were led as slaues into Babylon.

In that it is said, Indus begat Phares and Zara of Thamar, observe that our Saviour Christ did not disdain to debase and disparage himselfe so farre as to come of the line of such as were borne of an incestuous generation, that we might be ravished and astonished with his loue, who refused not to come out of the family of grosse sinners that he might saue the sinfull soules of beleeuers. And whereas in the blazing of Christs armes by this Herauld the Euangelist, there are but foure women named, every one of them hath their severall blemish and reproach left behind them in the booke of God. The first, Thamar incestuously abused by her father in law, Gen. 38. 18. 29. The second, Rahab, Iosh. 2. 1. by nation a Cananite, as vile as to be a dogge, by profession an idolater, by city of Iericho a place so cursed, as that no soule should escape thence alieue, in trade a victualler, and in conuersation a whore: yea the place she dwelt in so cursed, that who so should build it vp againe should do it in the bloud of all his family: and yet this woman must be put in the roiall descent of Christ. The third is Ruth, who came of that nation, that was begot in incest, and caused the children of Israel to sinne in fornication. Numb. 25. 1: so as it is said for the Edomites, the Lord esteemed them no more then as an old shooe, and Moab should be but as a chamber-pot; and as appeareth in her owne booke, Ruth 2. 3. she was poore, gleaning after the reapers the eares of corne. For the fourth, which is Vriah wife, she was the worst of all, of her Salomon was borne, 2. Sam. 12. 24. whereby the holy Ghost doth insinuate the adultery committed before his birth, and consider Salomon borne of such an infamous woman, that he should be heire, and yet not the eldest sonne, it was meere of Gods mercy and not of any merit; and by reason of this woman, Dauid not onely committed adultery to haue made a bastard to haue inherited the Crowne, but to this added bloud, the death of her husband and of many others, and such a death, as to die by the sword of the vncircumcised, which was most reprochfull: that now the holy Ghost should direct the pen of the Euangelist to draw Christs lineage by name from these, & not to deriue him from Sara & Rebecca, that were excellently famous, and that David the type of the Messias should be such a bloody man, may be a consolation to al bleeding christians, & may teach vs, that though our sins be neuer so hainous in respect of the qualitie of them, or neuer so many in respect of the multitude of them, yet if at any time we be wearie with a full detestation of them, and a resolute purpose to amend them, Christ will refresh vs, and will scatter them before him, euen as the dust before the winde: and the greater is our condemnation, if hauing so much mercie we repent not.

1. Sam. 15. 28.

Secondly, obserue in that it is said, Iesse begat David, and David Salomon, whereas David onely is named king, being the last of the first fourteene, that the estate of the Patriarkes was now changed into kings; and though Iuda had some preeminence, before that the kingdome fell to them, yet this was the greatest glorie, that it should be such a kingdome whereof the king that should be borne should be God the Son: which may teach vs, that the highest honor that can befall a family, or a cuntry, or a Christian is, to haue the Lord to dwel with them: for all other titles are folded vp in time that perisheth, but the presence of the Lord bringeth comfort that decaieth not. Howbeit we must note, that as this kingdome of Iuda was a type of the Messias, it was begun in David onely, for Saul though he was king before, yet was he no type of the Messias. And for this second order which is all of Kings, we shall see if we peruse the booke of God, that Christ came of some as wicked kings as euer were; for where from Salomon to the captiuitie there were 19. kings, 13. of them were most wicked, and some of them had such speciall blemishes & spots vpon them, as it is doubted whether they be saued or no: Salomon had great enormities, but there is no doubt of his repentance, witnessed by his booke of retractiones called Ecclesiastes. Asa began well, but in his old age he imprisoned the Prophet that told him of his sinne, and in his sicknesse trusted more to the Physitian then to God, 2. Chr. 16. 10. 12. Iehosaphat did the woort act that could be (2. King. 8. 18.) to marrie his sonne Iehoram to Athaliah the daughter of Iezabel, whereby manie prouocations were committed, and yet these were the best.

Iehoram

Iehoram he caused all Iuda to commit idolatry, so as the Lord forsooke him, and (2. Chro. 21. 15.) he died a miserable death, his guts falling out of his belly, not all at once, but day by day, which was more grieuous. Abazia his sonne was slaine (2. Chro. 22. 9.)
 by Ieku in the field, and neuer any reuenged his blood. Ioash his sonne (2. Chron. 23. 3.) was mightily preserued by Iehoiada the Priest from the hands of Athaliab. Yet when the Priest was dead
 (2. Chron. 24. 78.) when the Prophets came to tell him he was a bused and misled by his Princes to idolatry, he caused them to be slaine in the temple, and himselfe (Vers. 25.) was after ward killed by his owne seruants. Amaziah his sonne fell to Idolatrie after a victory obtained of the Edomites, and (2. Chro. 25. 27.)
 was traiterously slaine by his owne subiects. Azariab his sonne, (2. Chro. 26. 21.) because he vsurped vpon the Priests office, was immediatly smitten with the hand of God, that he came to be a Leper, but some of those last Kings are not heere named by
 S. Matthew, because hee meant to make a proportionable and euen number that should consist on foureteenes. For Abaz hee made all the altars like the altars of Damascus, and (2. King. 16.
 3.) made his owne sonne passe through the fire, according to the sacrifice and abomination of the Heathen. Ichoiakim hee contemned the threatnings of the Lord, and caused the roule to be burnt (Ier. 36. 23.) which Baruch had writ from the mouth of Ieremie; he was therefore buried like an Ass, (as was pro-phecied by Ieremie, 22. 19.) euen drawne and cast soorth without the gates of Ierusalem. And for Zedechiab, hee imprisoned the Prophet Ieremie and contemned the Lord, therefore were his eies put out by the king of Babel; (Iere. 39. 7. 8.) and he bound in chaines, and led like a slaue into captiuitie. Out of which obserue, that there is no priuiledge in the Princes chaire to keepe them from sinning, neither yet that the maiestie of their places can protect them from the Lords vengeance: but that if their hearts bee listred vp against God, his hand shall fall vpon them to their destruction: for the grace of the Lord must season their palaces, else doe they stand but in slippery places.
 And though our Sauiour Christ vouchsafed to come out of the loines of such wicked Kings, it was not at all to giue anie coun-

tenance to their offences, or to embolden them in their finnes, but onely to open the fountaine of mercy to vs, that wee may know he is able to sanctifie the vilest sinner.

Now for the third order, which is of them who were caried away into captiuitie: note first the cause of the captiuitie: secondly, the cruelty of it: thirdly, the mercy of the Lord in their deliuerance. For the first, which is the cause that Gods owne children, and them of the blood royall should be caried into slaue-ry, it is set downe (2. Chro. 36. 12.) to be, first, for that the king rebelled against God, and humbled not himselfe before Ieremy the Lords Prophet. Secondly, for that both Priest and people trespassed wonderfully, set downe in two things principally. First, they polluted the house of the Lord with the abominations of the heathen. Secondly, they mocked and misused the messengers of the Lord, and despised his words, vntill the wrath of the Lord rose vp against them; and that there was no remedie, but he was enforced to giue them to the bloud-thirsty Babylonians. Wherein obserue, what a fearefull thing it is to fall into idolatrie; after our eies haue once bene opened; and how nothing prouokes the Lord so much, as the contempt of his embassage. For if hauing once seene the goodnesse and power of God, we decline from him, and lay holde on other helpes, and contemne the face and speech of his Ministers, whom he hath made acquainted with his secrets, and that wee waxe strong in our selues, we doe but as Vzziah did (2. Chron. 26. 16.) lift vp our hearts to destruction, and force the Lord to take his cuppe of indignation in his hand, and to holde it as well to the mouth of the king as to the people: for where all conspire to worke mischief, all shall be ouerwhelmed with the same madnesse, as Ieremy speaketh, chap. 25. 18. For the second, which is the miserie they sustained being captiues, it is to be seene, first, in their vsage before they came to Babylon, set downe, 2. Chr. 36. 17: they tooke both young and old, men and women, and though they fled to the Sanctuarie for succour, yet were they there stabbed with daggers; they burnt the house of God, and tooke the precious vessels of it, to abuse in their superstition when they come to Babel. Now to see the temple on fire, and yong and old.

old blame without mercy, had beene enough to haue rent their hearts in peeces, to see the worship of God thus defaced, and themselues reserued but as an after pray to the enemy. But now secondly comming thither, namely, to Babel, to behold such grosse idolatry, and to heare such high reproches, as no doubt were giuen against the God of Israel, as, Come sing a song to the God of Iuda that hath forsaken you, and, Beholde, heere be the people whom the Lord hath spued out; besides the bondage wherein themselues were kept; how could they but straine fourth teares of bloud, and send fourth deepe sighes from a mounfull spirit? Yea their case was so desperate and miserable, as (Ezech. 37. 11.) their raising vp againe and restitution was made of the Lord as great a matter, and as hard as to put life into a company of dead bones: for there the Lord saith: These drie bones are the house of Israel, neither yet did this their captiuity last but a while, but they were wintred and sommered there full 70. yeeres, as was foretold by the Prophet Jeremy, chap. 25. 11. that they should be an astonishment, and serue the king of Babel so many yeeres. For the third, which is the Lords mercy in their deliuerance, they be the words of his owne mouth. For thy sake (O Israel) I will not doe it, for thou art filthy, but for my owne sake I will, that they may know I am able to doe it, and for Dauid my seruants sake, I will not vterly put out the light of Israel. Psal. 137. 3.

Hence learne generally, that there is no nation so free, but the Lord may captiuate, and if they decline and leaue their first loue, the Lord may and will abandon them. For if any people might haue presumed, it was this, who had the promises, and a more peculiar presence of God then any nation vnder heauen, yet were they vile, and did stincke in his sight, for abusing his kindenesse, and setting at nought his Ministers. Howbeit, neuer were they more scorned then in these daies, wherein either men make themselues deafe that they will not heare, or heare, but there is a noise of vanity higher and louder in their eares. Heere then is the same cause of captiuity, why should wee not feare the same iudgement? We see it is our selues can doe vs the greatest hurt: for when wee once giue our selues ouer to loose-

ness of life; and to distaste the word, the Lord then disarms vs both of policie and strength, that euen a weake enemy may soone surprize vs. Let therefore euery man amend one, albeit these times bee so mischieuous, as it is to be feared lest many of vs be as willing to returne to Babylon for religion, as euer were the Israelites to come forth.

- 2 Secondly, obserue the cursed and hard-hearted disposition of the enemies of God, that they thinke no torment nor cruelty too exquisite nor too sharpe for his people: for Zedechia and Abab did the King of Babel burne in the fire, Ier. 29. 22 and the rest were slaues to him and his sonnes, 2. Chro. 36. 20. With which malice the diuell hath poisoned and filled their hearts, because they cannot be auenged of the Lord himselfe, for euen at him doe the proud Nimrods of the world point their fingers, and against him doe they lay their siege to plucke him out of his seate: for the Babylonians were more fierce to the Israelites then to any other whom they subdued, onely because they were the chosen and beloued of the Lord.
 3 Lastly, obserue in their deliery the compassion of the Almighty, that he will not be angry for euer; and the truth of his promise, that he will at the length visite his people in mercy, when they thinke the clouds so thicke, as they cannot be ouerblowne: for now when Israel was euen rent to ragges, he harboured (Ier. 29. 11.) the thoughts of peace and not of trouble, and gaue them an end of their fainting hope, euen a mighty deliuerance by the hand of Cyrus king of Persia; 2. Chro. 36. 22.

Where it is said, Iechonias begat Salathiel, obserue, that Salathiel was not his naturall sonnie, but onely succeeded him in the kingdome by legall succession as next heire, for Iechonias had no sonnes, but the house of Salomon ended with him, as appeareth Ier. 22. 30. Write this man (that is Iechonias) destitute of children. So also Ezec. 21. 26. 27. the Lord speaking of Salomon, I will ouerturne (saith he, repeating it thrice) the diademe of this king, and neuer shall any out of his loines weare it, vntill he come whose right it is, (that is, the Messias) and I will giue it him. To prouue also that Salomons line must cease, and that Christ must not come of him lineally, appeareth by the prophesie propheſie of Iſaiah : that there ſhould nor one bee left of the houſe of Ichoiakim: which could not be ſo, vnleſſe the line of Salomon were vtterly extinguished : and for Salathiel, he came of Nathan the ſecond brother, as Saint Luke ſetteth it downe, chap. 3. 31. which nothing diſagreeth from this of Saint Matthew, for he was but to ſhew the line of the Kings, and not naturally of whom Chriſt came, but whom hee ſhould ſucceed in the kingdom. Where note the wonderfull prouidence of God, that Salomon who had ſo many wiues and children, hath not now any left to ſit vpon the throne, to teach vs that Salomon was to be puniſhed for his many wiues : ſo as the Lord would not haue Chriſt to come of him naturally, but of his yonger brother. Whereby all nobility may bee ſwallowed vp in the glory of the Lords progeny and generation that drowneth all nobility : that ſince Salomon in all his glory wanteth naturall heires, that they ſtand not vpon theſe outward ſhewes and dignities, but ſeek to continue their poſterity, by living in a cleane and holy courſe of life : for the Lord will waſh away the vnholly ſeede, and ſcrape out their names from vnder heauen, that ſeek to eſtabliſh their houſe in filthineſſe, and to pollute the marriage bed.

Further, in that Chriſt is ſaid to come of Ioseph the poore Carpenter : heerein are the ancient Prophecies fulfilled, (Eſay 53. 2.) that Chriſt ſhould come and no man regard him, and that he ſhould grow vp as a roote out of the drie ground without forme or beauty, and as Eſay 11. 1. that he ſhould come as a rod out of the ſtocke of Iſſai the Yeoman, 1. Sam. 16. 3. whereby we obſerue, that when things are moſt desperate, then the Lord recouereth them : and now when the kingdom was come to a poore Carpenter, then Chriſt was borne, to teach vs, that in the greateſt exigents and extremities, we muſt neuer diſtruſt, nor ſeek to extricate our ſelues out of any ſorrow the Lord hath brought vs to, but ſtill to waite vpon him : for as David ſaith, Pſalm. 32. 7. The Lord is our ſecret place, that is, he hath many priue deliuerances wee know not of : and (as Pſalm. 4. 3.) will ſtrengthen vs vpon the bed of ſorrow, as he did David, who when Saul with his armie was euen at his heeles, and hee no doubt much anguiſhed, yet the Lord had his ſecret deliuerance

for him, and turned Saul on the sudden another way, 1. Sam. 23. 27. Euen so heere, when it had beene night with the Israelites a long time, and that their enemies thought they should never recouer their sight againe, then ariseth Christ like they day-starre, and restoreth the beauty of their kingdome to greater glory then before: let vs therefore waite with Simoon for the saluation that shall come.

Now remaineth to shew the difference in the recital of Christs pedegree by Saint Mathew, and that of Saint Luke chap. 3. 23. and it standeth in three points: first, Mathew doeth descend from the first to the last, from Abraham to Ioseph; Luke ascendeth from the last to the first, from Ioseph to Abraham. Secondly, Mathew was to fetch his pedegree so as he might proue him to be the Messias of the Iewes, and to come directly from the seed of Abraham: Luke deriueth him not onely from Abraham, but from Adam, that he might shew him to be the Sauour, not onely of the Iewes, but also of the Gentiles, and to be that seed of the woman promised Gen. 3. 15. Thirdly, S. Mathew sheweth his royall line, and that he was rightly interested in the kingdome: S. Luke setteth downe the naturall line of him, of whom he came according to the flesh: So that vnderstand, whereas all the light of Salomon was extinguished in Iechonias, all the rest that followed were not the naturall posterity of Salomon, but such as succeeded him legally in the kingdome, so as Saint Mathew in following his purpose could not set downe his naturall descent: S. Luke brings him from Nathan, to proue he came from Adam: and howsoever there be some contrariety whether he came naturally from Salomon or no, yet it is certaine hee came naturally from Dauid, which sufficeth.

MATH. chap. I. vers. 18, 19, 20, 21.

18. Now the birth of Iesus Christ was thus. When as his mother Mary was betrothed to Ioseph, before they came together she was found with child of the holy Ghost.
19. Then Ioseph her husband being a iust man, and not willing to make her a publike example, was minded to put her away priniile.
20. But while he thought these things, behold the Anzell of the Lord appeared vnto him in a dreame, saying, Ioseph the sonne of David, feare not to take Mary thy wife, for that which is conceived in her is of the holy Ghost.
21. And she shall bring forth a sonne, and thou shalt call his name IESVS, for he shall saue his people from their sinnes.

OW followeth the manner of the birth of our Sauour Christ, wherein consider two parts: first, the matter generallie propounded: secondly, the large narration of the particular circumstances to the end of the Chapter, which bee three: First, what occasion was giuen to Ioseph to suspect his wife, and how hee commanded his heart to thinke the best of it, because it might bee shee was with child before marriage, and then it was no adultery, so as hee would not prosecute the matter too farre to her infamy: Secondly, the satisfaction which Ioseph receiueth, and the information giuen him extraordinarily by an Angell of the whole matter how it was wrought: Thirdly is declared his obedience after the satisfaction received, & after his iudgement was reformed in these words, He tooke her againe. In the first, consider first of this point heere named, named, that Mary was betrothed, whereby we may vnderstand that there be two degrees of mariage: the first, betrothing: the second, the perfecting and confirmation of it; and these two we haue, commanded by the law of God, commended to vs by example, and iustified by the law of nature. For the first, we may see Deu. 24. 5. that the man betrothed was priuiledged from war-fare the first yeere, that they might know one anothers conditions; and Deu. 22. 23. 25. he was to be stoned that should force and abuse a betrothed woman. For example we haue this of Christ, which may serue for all, that he was borne of such a woman as was betrothed before mariage: for the law of nature it may suffice, in that all the heathen make mention of betrothing before mariage by way of commendation; for since mariage is such an obligation as bindeth so strongly, not to be dissolved, it is reason and convenient there should bee a time betweene the mentioning and the perfecting of the contract, that if any occasion should happen in the meane time, the bond might not be made. The equitie also concerning Christianitie is great in this respect, to the end there might bee a stay of immoderate lust, which men would brutishlie runne into, if presently vpon the contract made they might company together: therefore that there may bee as it were a bridelayed vpon our lust, it is good wee rush not suddenly into the mariage bed, but by this distance of time betweene betrothing and marrying, that wee learne to tame and take off the edge of our inordinate desires.

Further obserue, that it is not lawfull for any man to vse his wife barely contracted, for Ioseph and Mary came not together when they were onely betrothed: by which example wee haue the chastity of our vessels recommended to vs, that wee intermeddle not before the Lord hath layed open the bed vnto vs, that is, before shee bee giuen vnto vs by Gods instrument the Minister, euen as Eue was giuen by God himselfe to Adam: for the institution of mariage being partlie to beget sonnes and daughters for the Lord, wee must not dare to venture or breake into any vn-sanctified course, because the Lord cannot blesse what his mouth hath cursed. What shall wee say then to the

36. 1.

fleshly and brutish generation of the world, who will be kept within no limits, but like beasts doe range after their owne appetites, and as if there were no distinction of bodies, nor expectation of blessing, nor feare of punishment, doe neither make the Lord acquainted with their match, nor rest themselves in his ordinance, but doe scale as it were the walles, and cut asunder the lists wherein God hath set them, passing by their wives to other women? Surely as such men can hope for nothing els but that their posterity shall inherite the winde, as Job speaketh: so may they looke for nothing surer, but that themselves shall fall in their owne vncleannesse without great repentance.

Further, in that Christ was conceiued after espousals, but not borne till the mariage was consummate; we learne, that as God honored this estate in Paradise with his owne presence, so hath the Lord Iesus sanctified it with his owne birth: for howsoeuer a betrothed wife was not to be accompanied with, Deuter. 22. 23. yet she was a wife. We must therefore correct our selues, not to thinke meanely or basely of the estate of mariage, there being no such fountaine of earthly comfort set open vnto man as this is, whether we respect societie or posteritie, and therefore fitly hath the Apostle to the Hebr. chap. 13. 1. termed it honorable among all, as a blessing equally distributed vnto all.

Againe obserue in that Marie is said to be with childe, that there was iust cause for Ioseph to suspect her, yet marke what counsell he tooke to make the best of the worst: he was loth to put her away because he was iust, & he is said to be iust in two respects; first, because he abhorred to take her to wife whom he suspected to be a whore: where we learne, that Iosephs iustice did not consist in a base reputation of this maner of filthinesse, but in a detestation of it, for it is the basest mind that can be to marrie a woman that hath beene abused; and by this example it appeareth, that he that doth tolerate the vnchastitie of his wife, is himselfe heerein culpable of bawdery. Secondly, his iustice regardeth this, that being doubtfull, before apparent prooffe he construeth a doubtfull action at the best, namely namely that she was gotten with childe before the espousals, and then he would not mary her, as by the law he might have done, and after haue put her to death; Deu. 22. 21. if she could not haue shewed the tokens of her virginity, but he would haue put her away priuily, and resigned his interest to him who (as he suspected) had abused her. Wherein we learne, that iust men are to take all things at the best, and not to seeke occasions of others hurt, or meanes to wreake their malice on them that haue in sort abused them: for loue must couer, and religion must passe by offences. If Nabal be so churlish as to deny refreshing to our seruants, 1. Sam. 25. 10. we may not be so impatient as Dauid to vow their destruction, but with the mildnesse of Abigail we must leaue them to the Lord. A patterne of this also we haue in Ioseph of Egypt, who though he was sold by his brethron in the depth of their malice, yet neuer vpbraided them with their fault, but gently passed by it, & freely forgauē it, accounting it as the hand of God that had sent him thither, Gen. 45. 8. And this indeed ought to be the affectiō of all Gods children, not to blaze, but as S. Paul speaketh, to support one another in their infirmities, and not to shame them when the actiō committed may in some sort be wel construed.

Gal. 6. 1.

66. 5.

Further obserue, that this example of Iosephs in making the best of his wiuēs honesty, is no warrant for husbands to keepe their wiuēs that may publikely be conuincēd of adultery, but they may safely receue themselues by the law of the Magistrate, so as their end in prosecuting the matter be not to defame them but to reforme them: for the sword is a notable meanes, to bring vs to repentance. And though Ioseph complaineth not, it doeth not prooue that others should be silent, for the cause is diuers. First, Ioseph seeing her defloured did abhor to accompany with her: Secondly, knowing her great piety and singular modesty, he wondred how it came: he could not accuse her for an adulteresse, for it might be the act was done before they were betrothed. Now in this perplexity he staicth his thoughts, and recommendeth it to God, and so this was of a matter altogether doubtfull, therefore not like to that where she is publikely conuincēd of such shameles filthines. Againe,

in this of Iosephs the whole case was extraordinary, and the Lord had the full stroke in it, for he suffered Ioseph to be abused by the error of his iudgment, and restrained Mary from speaking one word to her husband how all this matter was wrought; whereas he louing her so entirely, and being fully perswaded of her piety, and thereby halfe induced not to make suspicion of her chastity, he would haue rested contented with her relation, but the Lord stopped her mouth, that as this action proceeded immediatly from God, so Ioseph should be satisfied only by the oracle of God: and therefore this is not to be matched & resembled to that where women shamelesly breake their vow which they made to God and man, as we may see 1. Cor. 6. 15. & Mat. 2. 14. where the Prophet bringeth in the Lord as a witness betwene man and wife, and vrgeth this as a reason why the one should not trespasse against the other, because out of the abundance of his spirit he hath made them one.

Now for the second part, which is the satisfaction Ioseph received, and the meanes whereby his thoughts were appeased while hee was musing of this euent, we must consider three points: first, what messēger God dispatcheth, namely an Angel: secondly, at what time, when he was euen vpon the resolution to haue put her away: thirdly, what message was brought while he was thus reasoning with himselfe, and was anguished with blinde discourses; which containeth seuerall parts: first, that which is set downe in the very first words, as much as to say, as, Thou hast not done amisse to take such a moderate course in this matter, but feare not, she is a virgin: Secondly a confirmation of this; That which is in her is of the holy Ghost: Thirdly, he declareth the blessed condition of the child, fore-propheying of this name: Fourthly, a reason of his name; He shall save his people: Fifthly, because the Angel knew Ioseph prepossessed with prejudice, and therefore yet there might rest some scruple in his mind, he allegeth an ancient record of the Prophet Esa. c. 7. 14. written 800. yeres before, which expressed as much as the Angel now told him, & by this testimonie concurring with his speech he doth absolutely resolue him: for an angel speaking according to scripture is not to be doubted.

For

For the first, the messenger that is dispatched from the heavenly palace, being so excellent as an Angel, let vs learne to be carried into an admiration of the Lords loue, that the Angels elect shall be messengers & ministers for his chosen. Hereupon David (Psa. 8. 4.) being confounded with the Lords goodnes breaketh forth saying, O Lord what is man that thou shouldest be so mindfull of him, and shouldest thus exalt him, for thou hast made him little lower then God; not that the Angels in themselves are baser in nature & condition then we: for as it is Esa. 6. 2. as they haue two wings to hide their face from the glorie of God, so haue they two wings to hide their feet, because we cannot behold them in their excellencie: for the seruice they do, is not to vs for our owne sakes, but they do it as to Christ their head, as is prefigured by Iacobs ladder (Gen. 28. 13.) wheron the Angels ascended and descended: this ladder being Christ, and Christ vouchsafing vs this honour to sit with him at his table, the Angels minister to vs as owing all dutie to him. Now this ministerie of Angels is so deputed as every particular member elect, hath not one but many continually attendant on him, as Psal. 91. 11. Hee hath giuen his Angels charge to beare vs in their armes, lest we should dash our feet to hurt them; not that the Lord is vnable to rescue vs, or insufficient to support vs from any danger, but he doth it onely to prouide a remedie for our infidelitie, who must euer bee held as it were by the hand, or else we crie with Peter in the least temptation, Lord helpe vs we perish. Euen as a man desiring safe conduct out of the realme, should receiue of the Prince not onely his letters, but his royall guard to wait vpon him: which were a matter ex abundanti, that by this meanes he could no way doubt of quiet passage: so lest we should distrust the Lord, or bee too much confounded with his maiestie, hee hasteneth to helpe vs by more familiar meanes, and hath giuen vs as it were his royall nauie to guard vs, that we may be sure, as Sathan hath manie waies, and laieth many snares to entrap and to hurt vs, so hath the Lord pitched his tents about vs, and compassed vs with fenced souldiers to preferue vs safe. Heereupon it is, that the Angels are called fierie into two respects: First, because they burne

Ioh. 1. 51.

Mat. 14. 20.

burne with a zeale of the Lords glory : Secondly, because they ^z are as quicke as fire, to execute speedily the Lords message.

For the second circumstance, of the time when this messenger was sent, it was euen while hee was in the depth of his thoughts, while after many wofull discourfes and perplexed cogitations, hee had resolued to put her away, thereby to satisfie his owne conscience, not to ioyne himselfe with that woman whose honestie might so iustly be suspected, and yet not to expose her to the extreamest infamy, minding to doe it priuily. In this agony and in this astonishment of his spirit, the Lord sendeth a message to preuent the ignorant from sinne, the innocent from shame, and the whole Church of God from slander. Where wee learne, that the wildome of God is wonderfull, which sheweth himselfe to worke best at a dead lift and a desperate cure, causing the Sunne to shine at midnight, and when the Ship is ready to sinke commanding a calme. For when wee are in such Labyrinths, as wee know neither where to seeke nor where to finde, and when Jacob (Gen. 28. 11.) had but a hard pillow, and the Israelites no hope of passage, then he sendeth to the one a sweet vision of the ladder, and to the other a wonderfull diuision of the sea. And in such extremities he worketh graciously, as David saith : He tooke me out of the horrible deepe pit, and when I was cast into such a calamity, as I stucke as it had beene in clay, the waues of water gushing in vpon me ready to drowne me, then the Lord heard me, and set me where I might see footing, and placed me on firme ground. And as this is true in doctrine, so is it also in example. For Eliab (1. King. 19. 4. 5.) fearing Iezabel would haue had his life, as she had others of the Prophets, being euen spent of sorrow and vtterly out of heart, breaketh forth, saying : Lord take my soule from me, I am no better then the rest of my fathers : and in this perturbation of spirit giuing himselfe to sleepe, as mastered and ouercome with heauinesse, lying thus vnder the Iuniper tree, then commeth an Angell to feede him being neere pined for want of food. But the famous example of all is that of Abraham, Gen. 22. 11. who being commanded to kill his onely sonne, in the darke night, when no doubt he had greuous and hideous cogitations, when he had hope to haue no more sonnes, and this being the sonne in whom both himselfe and all the world should be saued, and not to doe this vpon the present resolution, but to goe perplexed three daies iourney, himselfe to be the butcher, and not to giue him a gentle death but to burne him: hauing couched the wood, and blowen the fire, and his soule no doubt bleeding within him when the child spake so wisely, asking, where was the sacrifice, and yet hauing the knife ready in his hands to haue cut his throate, then the Angell bids him stay, and then there comes a countermaund from heauen: to shew and teach vs, that as in former times he was gracious to them that waited and walked in humility, so he is alwaies neere to the contrite heart, and comforteth the abiect: that though mourning be in the night, yet ioy shall come in the morning, euen as after the lowest ebbs rise the highest tides, and as Iob speaketh: Out of six troubles the Lord will deliuer me, but the seuenth shall neuer come neere me, but out of this astonishment also he will raise me. Which helpe of the Lord is for a time deferred, not onely to confirme our hope and quicken our prayers, our flesh being sluggish, that heereby we may learne to depend vpon his prouidence: but that this comfort comming at such straits and exigents, when our ¹ lease seemeth euen to be fallen, we may praise and magnifie the Lord more thankfully. For we may assure our selues, that neither ² the plague that walkes by night, nor the pestilence that flies by day, nor the snare of the hunter shall once endanger vs, the Lord watching ouer vs. But on the contrary, lay not thine hand to wickednesse, for in one of thy two waies (as Iob speaketh) the Lord will surprize thee. And howsoeuer the elect may bee in danger and not despaire, perplexed and not perish, yet the Lord shall raise terror before the face of the wicked, and the shaking of a leafe shall make their owne conscience pursue them to distrust, as we may see in Cain Gen. 4. 14.

the message
³ For the third part, which is the particulars of the message: first, in that he calleth him the sonne of Dauid, the Lord reneweth the remembrance of the ancient promise made to Dauid; that out of his loines should the Messias come. Insinuating to Ioseph, that the Lord is neuer forgetfull of his word passed, which may

may stay vs in all our weakenesse, and cherish vs in all infirmities, to esteeme him as our rocke, and the truth of his word as a most stable tower that cannot totter: hauing this warrant from himselfe in this place to vrge him with his word and promise of deliuerance, who as he faithfully performed it to Dauid, so will he gratiouly remember vs, euen when we are most tossed in tribulation, and in the least hope.

Fear not to take Mary to thy wife.

This is the first part of the message: where the Iesuites obserue, that Mary was Iosephs true wife, yet he knew her not; so as (say they) there may be true mariage, where notwithstanding the parties vow to liue in continency. We answer, it was true in this example: but this particular is not to be giuen in precept, because though it be commanded in this singular person of Ioseph, yet we finde no warrant for it in any generall place or commandement set downe in the Scripture. Wee must therefore know, that the Saints of God are not to bee followed in two things. First, in their infirmities, as wee may not lie with Rahab, nor dissemble with Rebecca. Secondly, in their personall and miraculous works, as Moses in fasting forty daies, Peter in walking on the Sea, Elijah in calling fire from heauen, nor Ioseph heere in a perpetuall separation from his wife: for this example was altogether extraordinary, and what flesh and blood durst touch that vessell the Lord by his spirit had taken vp for himselfe? Otherwise that mariage cannot bee lawfull, where the parties meane to separate themselues continually; for as S. Paul saith, 1. Cor. 7. 5. man and wife may not defraud one another, except it be, first, by consent: secondly, but for a time, otherwise (as 1. Pet. 3. 7.) they must dwell as heires together of the grace of life.

Iosh. 2. 4.
Gen. 26. 7.
&c.
Exod. 34. 28.
Mat. 14. 29.
2. King. 1. 10.

Secondly, the Iesuites note this, that where Christ vouchsafed to be borne in marriage, yet of a Virgin, that in this he honoured both, but principally Virginitie. We answer, that mariage in it owne nature is better then virginitie: for God in the first creation (Gen. 2. 18.) saw, it was not good for man to be alone, but euen in his innocency, that he should haue the woman as a helpe before him. And therefore Saint Paul (1. Cor. 7.

26.) is not to be vnderstood, as enioyning virginity to any, or as commending it before mariage, but onely as perswading and praising it for the necessity of those times that were so troublesome, as the Church of God could scarce finde rest in any place: and therefore such as had no families were more free & readier for the seruice of God: otherwise, continency is not better as a better ordinance of God: but the betternesse of that came in by the disorder sinne hath brought in, because mariage is clogged with so many cares, as distracteth the minde much from religious exercises, and men in their single estate be more emptied of cares, and so more vacant for praier and other holy duties. And where they say, that virginity in mariage is better then society in mariage, it is an accursed speech, this example of Iosephs onely excepted: for it is a plant growing onely in this garden, in respect the wombe of the Virgin was the bed of the Lord Iesus: and yet if their owne speech bee true, that virginity in mariage be better then virginity out of mariage, it were good for their Priests and Nunnes to mary.

o. 6. f. 1. In that it is said, Feare not, obserue, that all our security from feare standeth on the Lords word, for flesh and blood auailed Ioseph nothing at all, neither could his owne iudgement leade him to any stable comfort, till the mouth of God had sent it. Howbeit, we see the blind boldnesse of the diuell, who (Gen. 3. 4. 5.) would needes take vpon him to rid our first parents from all feare in their breach of Gods commandement: but we haue found him a lier and the Lord true from the beginning; let vs therefore qualifie our selues according to his prescript; to tremble when he bids vs feare, and to runne on reioycing when he saith, Feare not: for he hath alwaies the tempering of the cup. o. 6. f. 2. And in that there is a reason added why Ioseph should not feare, we may beholde the tendernesse of the Lords compassion towards his children, who will not onely haue them to stay vpon the maiesty of his commandement, but in reliefe of their infirmities will giue them a reason of it, that comprehending it in their iudgements, they may the more safely lay hold on it. Even as our Sauour Christ (Luk. 12. 32.) comforteth his disciples, and armeth them against the troubles to come, saying: Feare

not. Why? for your Father will giue you a kingdome, the power and yet the comfort of the commandement resting vpon the reason of it, in this sort: Those that haue a kingdome prepared for them, neede not to feare: but such are you, therefore away with feare.

Out of the reason it selfe, namely: That which is conceived of her, is of the holy Ghost, we note, that his humanity was so sanctified, that euen from the moment of Christs conception, there was a setting apart of that nature from all vncleannesse: so as Christ was borne the Sonne of God: for Christ-man was neuer adopted to be the Sonne of God: for adoption presupposeth wrath; but his manhood was personally euen at the first vnited to the Godhead, and was no person of it selfe, as shall appeare afterward.

Now the third thing Ioseph was enformed of by the Angell, was to name him Iesui: with a reason of the name. Wherein consider two points: first, from what he shall saue: from sinnes. Secondly, whom he shall saue: his people; and these be very few, as him selfe saith, Luk. 12.32. Mine is a little flocke. For the first, in sinne consider these three things: first, the disobedience to the law: secondly, the originall corruption: thirdly, the condemnation for this corruption and disobedience. The first of these is double, either in breaking the law, or not fulfilling it: the second is the originall cause of this disobedience, which is the euill inclinations of our heart, and our corrupt affections: and the third is the punishment of this disobedience, namely, hell fire. These be three running sores, satisfied and cured by three running streames in Christ: for our rebellion to the law is satisfied in Christ, who not onely paid for that wee had broken, but actually fulfilled every point of it. For the second, which is our originall corruption, wee haue the holinesse and sanctification of his nature, who was euer seperate from all vncleannesse, so as in Christ wee are better then Adam was in his first estate: for though hee was made good, yet it was changeably good; but wee in Christ are absolutely good; and as the stoutest mountaines that cannot be stirred. For the third, wee haue Christ by his passion to deliuer vs from condemnation;

even as in the sacrifice vnder the law, the bloud of the innocent beast was shed for him that had sinned, to lay before his face the punishment he had deserued, that so worthily his throat might haue beene cut, and more iustly then was the throat of the beast: so we by the shedding of Christs most innocent blood, are purged from the guilt of our sinne. And as by the beholding onely of the Brasen Serpent lifted vp in the wilderness, as many as looked vpon it, were made whole: so we hauing our eies anointed with the eie-salue of the holy Ghost, that wee can behold the Lord Iesus exalted on the crosse, shall be freed from all the fiery stings of Sathan, wherewith hee had stung vs to damnation.

Numb. 21 9.

For the second, whom he shall saue: obserue, not all, but his people. Therefore they deceiue themselues that thinke Christ died for all men: for there are but two parts of his priesthood: the first, to supplicate or to pray: the second, to sacrifice: Now it is certaine he neuer sacrificed for them for whom he neuer supplicated: and Iohn 17.9. he excludes the world out of his praier, therefore for the world hee neuer died; but hee praied onely for belecuers, and that they might be sanctified, that is, set apart wholly for Gods seruice, the word (sanctified) being a metaphor or borrowed speech taken from the Temple, wherein the first fruites, the flesh, the garments, the vessels and all things else were holy; so called because none might vse them to worldly purposes. So as if we will be his people, we must keepe our selues onely for one husband the Lord Iesus, and like a iewell peerelesse, as if we were peculiarly laied vp for him, as S. Pauli speaketh Ti. 2. 14. And he that cannot assure his soule of this, for him Christ neuer died: for if we be Temples, onely to set vp in them the idols of our affections, Christ neuer dwellerth there.

Now every man will assume to himselfe to bee a Christian. If a woman that had two children should sweare shee were a maide, or he that had the plague should say and face vs downe he were found, or one reeling in the chanel that he were sober, would they not be spectacles of shame to all that saw and heard them? And for an vnseemely and filthy liuer to challenge this honour to bee caried in Christs bosome, and to be remembered to his Father in his praiers, and to apportion part of Christs death to himselfe, is as absurd as the other, and this his fained repentance shall leade him but into a fained hope against the latter day which will deceiue him. For such kinde of boasters bee they, spoken of Prouerb. 30. 12. that are pure in their owne eies, and yet they be not washed from their filthinesse, that is, that are as filthy in their soules as is his body that lieth in his owne excrement. Can out of thornes come grapes? or can a sinfull wretch be a sober liuer? It is certaine, there is no saluation without faith, no faith without repentance, no repentance without amendment of life, nor any amendment without forsaking of sinne: the conclusion whereof is, that no euill liuer hath part in Christs passion, but the markes of Gods vengeance are yet vpon thee, and thou venturst thy saluation peremptorily by deferring thy repentance: for what knowest thou whether to morrow shall euer come? Dally not therefore thus with God, till the diuell take thee in the lurch: for as Christ came to saue vs from the damnation of sin, so also to free vs from the dominion of sinne; and as to destroy the diuell, so likewise to destroy the workes of the diuell. And as none shall be saued by the law, without fulfilling the law, so none shall bee saued by the Gospell but such, who as God hath couenanted with them to remit their sinnes, so haue they couenanted with him to amend their liues. It is therefore an intolerable absurdity for them that being slaues to sinne, doe notwithstanding vaunt themselues to be the seruants of God, and who being as prophane as Esau, and haue solde their birth-right, will yet claime their birth-right, when they haue no more interest then the dogges in the bread of Children.

1. Iohn 3. 8.

Gen 27. 33.
Math. 15. 26

MATH. chap. I. Vers. 22, 23, 24, 25.

22. And all this was done that it might be fulfilled, which is spoken of the Lord by his Prophet, saying:
23. Behold a Virgine shall be with child, and shall beare a sonne, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which is by interpretation, God with vs.
24. Then Ioseph being raised from sleepe, did as the Angell of the Lord had enioyned him, and tooke his wife.
25. But he knew her not till she had brought forth her first borne Sonne, and he called his name Iesus.

HIS is the fift thing formerly pointed at, that this testimony of the Prophet is alleaged for the further confirmation of Ioseph, and his better encouragement in this matter; that if hee should not rest in the maiesty of the Angell for the truth of the message, yet that he should not thinke that strange which was recorded so long before. Wherein consider, first what cause the Prophet had to speake this. It may be gathered out of Esay chap. 7. where the king of Iuda being cast into feare of the ouerthrow of his kingdome, by the combination and ioyning together of the two armies of Syria and Israel, thinking it impossible to be rescued from their strength, the Prophet Esay was sent to offer him a signe in that consternation and trouble of his minde, either in the depth beneath or in the height aboue, that thereby he might be accertained the Lord would deliuer Ierusalem from that army: the King measuring all by policy, refuseth to aske any particular signe; whereupon the Prophet seeing this, descended to the generall signe, the covenant made Gen. 3. that the seed of the woman should breake the serpens head, that is, not onely performe a temporary deliuerance, rance, but an everlasting freedom from the siege of Sathan; and this covenant was especially made to Abraham. Now the Prophet speaketh to him by way of exprobration in this sort: How canst thou, O King, mistrust this small matter, and that the power of the Lord is not able to performe this, since he hath promised to doe the other, which is farre greater?

Hence generally learne, how excellent and needfull a thing it is to be acquainted and familiar with the Scripture, which is as the store-house of comfort when wee bee distressed, and a guide to direct our thoughts when they bee distracted. For if Ioseph had well compared the times spoken of by the Prophets, and had called to minde this speech of Esfay heere mentioned, it might much haue staid him in his perplexed discourse with himselfe, the Angell himselfe intimating so much in alleaging the prophecy and yet concealing the Prophets name, as a thing that Ioseph could not be vnmindefull of. And this indeed is the duty, and ought not to be the labour of euery trembling Christian, to lodge as it were with the booke of God in their bosome; and with the Noble-men of Berea (Act. 17. 11.) to receiue the word with readinesse, and to search the Scriptures daily, which is the garden of the Lord, where runneth the riuer of wisdom to resolu all doubts, and where is to be had the oile that softneth all our afflictions.

Now in the testimony it selfe heere alleaged, consider two things: first, the person that should beare, a virgine: secondly, the person that should be brought toorth, Emmannell, consubstantiall with vs in nature: for both these the Prophet beginneth with a word of wonder (Behold) as of a miracle neuer performed but once. If it be asked, how it was possible a virgine should conceiue, we must beleue it was so, and rest in this, nothing to be impossible with God, Mat. 19. 26. For as it was possible at the first to make a woman out of a man without the helpe of a woman, as wee may see in the first creation, Gen. 2. 22. so was it possible for him in this new creation to make a man out of a woman without the helpe of a man. Which was done to this end, because if there should haue beene any corruption of the seed of man in Christ, he could not haue sanctified others. Concerning

o.c.

Handwritten note: videtur non sufficit

cerning the person that should be brought forth, it is Emmanuel, the same that Iesus, and they both imply one thing : for he that is Emmanuel is God with vs, as Iesus is God saving vs. Now he is God with vs many waies : and albeit in the Arke vnder the law, the Lord was alway speaking through the Cherubins, in so much as the very enemies of God, the Philistims (1. Sam. 4. 7.) could say when the Arke came, that the God of Israel came : and therefore cried, woe vnto vs; yet is he farre neerer with vs, namely, in such a spirituall manner as the Prophet speakes heere, a God not onely present and fauourable to vs, but connaturall to vs, and vpon which did depend all the graces of God formerly giuen to his Church. Therefore if Moses did say in admiration of the Lords goodnesse : (Deuter. 4. 7.) Looke if euer the like came to passe, that God from heauen should speake vnto his people, and shew his glory so to appeare on earth : much more may we breake forth into the like astonishment, to whom God is come so neere, as to be of the same nature with vs, and to speake vnto vs, not in the publication of the killing law, but in the manifestation of the quickening Gospell, whereby we may receiue comfort in the deepest dangers, that gathering our selues vnder his wings, and seeking rest and refreshing at his hands, he will

- 1 first giue vs a generall charter of grace for the pardon of our sins.
- 2 And because pardon of our sinne will not saue vs from hell, but our iudgement shall be iust, vnlesse we yeeld full obedience to the law, hee will secondly impute and lay all his obedience and righteousnesse vpon vs, so as in him we shall fulfill it. And yet
- 3 because we are still sinners, as carying about vs the originall vncleanenesse we brought with vs, the thurd rest he will giue vs, is so to sanctifie vs, as we shall be bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh ; not that we are absolutely sanctified in this life, but that that which this our Christ brings vs is al-sufficient to saluation. And being sure of this, we need not to be dismaide, for the waters of trouble are but a bath to cleanse and purge vs from those corruptions we gather by walking in this dirty world.

Ephes. 5. 30.

Further, let vs consider heere, why it was necessary, that he that should be Iesus should also be Emmanuel: first, it was necessary he should be the Emmanuel, that is, the strong God : for when wee were all wrapped in sinne, and shut vp vnder death, then was there neede of remedy. And what shall that be? Mercy? No, God is iust, and we hauing smitten his Maieſty by our sinne, must bee smitten againe by his punishment. Shall it then be iustice? No: for we haue need of mercy. Heere so to be mercifull as not to disanull his iustice, and so to be iust, as not to forget his mercy, and to make a way both to appease his wrath, that his iustice might be satisfied, and yet so to appeale it, as his mercie might be magnified in forgiuing, there must needes come a mediation: and if all the world should be offered to God for satisfaction, it is nothing: for it is his owne, the worke of his owne hands. If Angels should step in before the Lord, it were nothing, for they are engaged to him for their creation; and being but temporally good, they cannot satisfy for an infinite sinne: howbeit, he that must satisfy must bee infinit, to suffer infinite punishment for an infinite sinne, committed against an infinite Maieſty, therefore he must be God; he must be also Emmanuel with vs: for how can there bee satisfaction for our apostasie, but by humility? nor procurement of life, but by death? Now when God comes to obey, hee must needes bee humbled, and when he comes to deserue, hee must needes serue, which God alone cannot doe: and when he comes to die, he must needes be mortall, which God cannot be. Therefore hee was man to be himselfe bond, God to free others; man to become weake, and God to vanquish; man to become mortall, and God to triumph ouer death. The situation also of the Ladder spoken of, Gen. 28. 12. is an euident demonstration of the two natures of this Emmanuel, for the word must bee vnderstood of the second person in the Trinity. By the foot to satisfy his Fathers wrath, as being of our nature, that he might stand close to Iacobs loines and to his Church militant; and by the top to expresse his diuinity, which toucheth the seate, and reacheth to the bosome of God, that he might in time bring thither his Church triumphant. Now euery ladder is a medium or meane, whereby we ascend to some place that otherwise we could not reach vnto, which this Emmanuel is to vs; for wee being euill debtors, and God a seuerer creditor, Colof. 2. 14 Christ is the meane to cancell this debt, and to set it on his owne score; score : and we being ignorant clients, and God a skillfull Iudge not able to vnderstand our tale, Christ must be our aduocate, (1. Ioh. 2. 1.) to pleade our cause for vs. And as betweene God and vs, so betweene the diuell and vs he is a mediator : for he casteth fierie darts against vs, which we onely driue backe by the shield of faith in Christ, Ephes. 6. 11.

28 MATH I. VERS. 22, 23, 24, 25.

1 Further, in the word Emmanuel, obserue three things : first, the 2 truth and verity of the subsistence of both these natures in Christ:
3 secondly, the reall distinction of them : thirdly, the personall vnion of them. And these three points wisely and soberly weighed, doe confute those foure maine heresies risen heeretofore in the Church, concerning this great mystery.

fig. two incl. b. c. d. e. For the first, that there be two natures in Christ, is plainly expressed by Saint Paul, Rom. 9. 5. First, he was according to the flesh of the seed of the Iewes : secondly, he is God ouer all, blessed for euer. And Esa. 9. 6. A child is borne, and his name shall be the mighty God. Heere then first is confuted the heresie of Martian, who said, Christ was God but not man ; but had onely an heavenly body of an imaginary substance, and alleageth Phil. 2. 7. for his ground, where it is said, he was made like vnto men, and was found in shape as a man ; therefore no man indeed. By the same reason he might haue concluded aswell, hee had not beene God : for in the same place (vers. 16.) it is said, he was in forma Dei, in the forme of God. But the Apostle there fully proueth his humanity (vers. 8.) by his obedience to the death of the Crosse : for if he had not taken true flesh, he could not haue died, nor yet haue satisfied for our sinnes. And Gal. 3. 16. it is said, the promises were made to Abraham and to his seed, which seed is Christ : and Gal. 4. 4. When the fulnesse of time was come, God sent his Sonne made of a woman : which proueth, that he was truly man. Secondly, heere is confuted the heresie of Arius, who denieth the diuinity of Christ, and saith, that onely in his humaine nature hee had participated vnto him some diuine thing, and some heavenly vertue. For as wee see heere he must be Iehouah, not an inferiour God, or a God by participation of some diuine excellency, but he must be Deus ex seipso, filius à Patre, a God of himselfe, a Sonne by reference to his Father. And so much is expressed by S. Paul, Rom. 9. 5. for when he saith, hee was borne of the Iewes according to his flesh, he implieth, he had somewhat else he had not of them, set downe in the words following: Who is God, blessed for ever: which word (God) howsoever in the Scripture it be taken essentially and personally: essentially when it signifieth the whole Trinity absolutely: as Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God onely, and Act. 4. 19. It is better to obey God then man: yet in this place it is spoken personally of the Sonne, as it is also 1. Tim. 3. 16: God is manifested in the flesh. Now there be foure arguments, to proue Christ God equall to the Father and to be Iehouah coeternall in the Godhead as the Father: first, by the property of of his person: secondly, by the property of his essence: thirdly, by the power of his diuine workes: and fourthly, by the diuine worship that is due vnto him. For the first, hee is proued to be God by his generation, for he was begotten of God: whereby is vnderstood, that he was of the same substance with God, euen as hee that is begotten of a man is a man: and therefore hee is called the proper Sonne of God, which he is not as he was conceiued of the holy Ghost; for then Mary hath a part as he was borne of her. And this is proued by the Scripture, that when we call him the Sonne of God, wee vnderstand that he is God as his Father is, John 10. 20. I and my Father are all one: and Ioh. 5. 17. I worke the same works and after the same manner that my Father doeth: meaning that he was God as well as he. And so the Iewes vnderstood him speaking in their language, which made them goe about to kil him. For the second, it is proued he is God by the property of his essence, which standeth in these foure things: first, eternity: secondly, infinity to be in all places: thirdly, by his knowledge of all things: fourthly, by his omnipotency. For the first, that he is from all times, is proued Rev. I. 17. I am that first and that last, spoken by Christ himselfe: and lest this should haue beene vnderstood of the father, he saith, ver. 18. and am aliae, but I was dead. For the second, which is his infinity, it is said in Ieremy, that God filleth all places: and Psalme. 139. 7. Whither shall I flie from thy presence? If I goe into heauen, thou art there, if into the deepe, thou art there also. And Christ saith saith of himselfe, John 3. 13. hee being on the earth, No man ascendeth vp to heauen but he that came downe from heauen, that sonne of man which is in heauen : and in an other place he saith, Where two or three be gathered together in my name, I will be in the midst of them. For the third, which is his knowledge of all things, Reu. 2. 18. it is said that the Sonne of God hath eies like a flame of fire: and verse 23. All Churches shall know that I am the searcher of the reins and hearts : and in another place it is said, hee durst not trust the Iewes because hee knew their hearts. For the fourth, which is his omnipotency, it is proued by sundry examples in the Scripture, that hee was able to raise vp the dead by his owne vertue: and John 5. 17. he doeth the same works which his Father doeth: and Phil. 3. 21. Christ shall raise vp our bodies by the same power whereby he subdueth all things. For the third, which is the power of his diuine workes, as himselfe saith, John 5. 17. I doe the same workes my Father doth: all which are of three sorts: the first, concerning the creation: the second, of miracles extraordinary: the third, that tend to the saluation of his church. For the first of these it is said, John 1. 3. by him all things were made and nothing was made without him: and Col. 1. 15. 16. 17. he is the inuisible forme of the father. for whom and by whom all things were created, and in him all things doe consist And likewise for sustaining them being made, we haue Heb. 1. 3. He beareth up all things by his mighty word. For the second, that is for miracles, he raised vp dead men, euen as his Father did, without any inuocation to any other, which the Apostles did not but by calling on his name, whether it were for raising the dead or dispossessing the diuell, as, I command thee in the name of Iesus to come forth, Act. 16. 18. but Christ saith of himselfe. John 11. 25. I am the resurrection and the life: and John 10. 37. I doe the workes of my father: Now for the third, which are the works he did for the saluation of his church, they are principally fise: first, election, Eph. 1. 4. God hath elected vs in Christ; and 1. Cor. 1. 5. In all things we are made rich in Christ: and Iob. 3. 17. through him we are saued: and in another place he saith, I know whom I haue elected. The second is vocation: now to enlighten the heart of man must needs bee the worke of

Math. 16. 17. God, as it is said in Saint Mat. flesh and blood hath not reuealed

led this to thee, but God : and in another place it is said, when his Disciples were going to Emmaus, he opened their hearts. And for the ministry, which is a meanes to call men, 1. Cor. 12. 6. 8. it is said to be the worke of God : and Eph. 4. 11. 12. it is said, Christ gaue some to be Apostles, some Pastors, &c. for the worke of the ministry, and the repairing of the Saints. Thirdly, remission of sinnes and iustification is the worke of God : as it is said, Esa. 40. 29. It is that holy one that giueth strength vnto him that fainteth, that is, it is God that forgiveth sinnes : and Mat. 9. 6. the sonne of man as sonne of man hath this power to forgive sinnes : and Stephen Act. 7. 60. praieth, Lord Iesus lay not this sinne to their charge. Fourthly, sanctification is onely the worke of God. Iohn 1. 13. We are not borne of the will of man but of God : and vers. 12. As many as receiue him he gines prerogative to bee the sonnes of God : and Mat. 3. 11. Christ will baptize you with the holy Ghost : and againe himselfe saith, Without me you can doe nothing ; which is true onely of God : and Ephes. 5. 26. Christ gaue himselfe for his Church, to sanctifie it : and Heb. 10. 10. We are sanctified by the offering of the body of Christ. Fifthly, to giue glory, is the worke of God ; and this doth Christ, as appeareth by the speech of the theese vpon the Crosse, Luke 23. 42. Lord remember me when thou comcest into thy kingdome : and Iohn 10. 28. I doe giue eternall life vnto my sheepe. Now for the fourth, that he is knowen to be God by the diuine worship is to be ginen vnto him, and worship is due onely to Iehouah, Prou. 16. 4. the Lord hath made all things for his owne sake. And for this worship, first it is not lawfull to serue any so much as God : now Christ is to bee serued only : for as himselfe saith, I haue the keyes of life and of death. Secondly, it is not lawfull to beleeu in any but God, and Ioh. c. 5. & c. 6. Christ saith, He that beleueth in me hath eternal life. Thirdly him whom we ought to loue aboute all things is God : & Christ, Mat. 16. saith, Loue me better then thine owne soule. Fourthly, whom we ought to obey in all things is God : and Mat. 17. 5. it is said, This is my beloned Sonne, heare him, speaking of Christ. Fifthly, it is not lawfull to swear by any but by God, and S. Paul Rom. 9. 1. sweareth by Christ, and saith, I say the truth in Christ, I lie not. Sixthly, inuocation or praiet is for none but God, Pfal. 50. 15. as Dauid saith, Call upon me in the day of trouble, and I will heare you: and Stephen, Act. 7. 60. when he was stoned praied to Christ, Lord Iesus receiue my soule, and with praier to Christ end most of S. Pauls Epistles. Seuenthly, Iehouah onely must be blessed for euer: and S. Paul Rom. 9. 5. saith, Christ God, blessed for euer: and Reuel. 19. 7. in the Reuelation it is said, All praise and glorie be to the Lambe: and 2. Pet. 3. 18. Grow in the grace of Christ, to whom be praise for euer. Eightly, God onely is to be bowed vnto; and it is said of Christ, Heb. 1. 6. Let all the Angels in heauen adore him: and by S. Paul, Phil. 2. 10. He hath a name giuen him whereat euery knee must bow. And thus by these many parts of Gods worship, it doth appeare that Christ is God equall with the Father.

 163 Distinction
 of his nature
 For the second point, which is the reall distinction of these two natures, wee say they be not confounded, against the third heresie of Eutiches, who held that the person eternal of the word of God was turned into flesh; for by this it followeth, that either there must bee an abolition of the Godhead; or a permutation of both the natures, both which were blasphemous: but we say according to the scripture, Phil. 2. 6. that Christ became that he was not before, namely man, and retained that he was before, namely God; and he was man, not that it was transfused into his Deity, or any property of the Deity transfused into his humanity, but by assuming the flesh, and so by personall vnion became both; and albeit the humanity of Christ be much magnified by the Diuinitie, yet is the Diuinitie nothing altered by the humanity.

 personall vnion
 of two natures
 For the third point, which is the personall vnion of both these natures: from hence hath arisen that fourth heresie of Nestorius, who sayd, that Filius Marie was not onely Aliud but Alius, that is, that as there were two natures in Christ distinct, so were there also two persons. We say, that the same person that was the sonne of Mary, was the sonne of God: so as the greatest matter heere, is, whether Christ be one person; wherein let vs vnderstand these two things: first, what a personall vnion is: secondly, what is the fruit and effect of this vnion. For the first, what is a person in Christ: Is it a thing compounded of Deity and humanity? God forbid. Nay Christ by his humane nature properly considered, is not a person: but the Diuinity assuming his flesh, his humanitie subsisteth and staiech it selfe in his Diuinity, for his humanity neuer vpheld it selfe till it was vnited to the Diuinity. It was a nature before, but no person; his Diuinitie was both a nature and a person before, so as out of them neither compounded nor confounded doeth arise Christ Iesus our Emanuel. And as in the Trinity there be three persons and but one nature, so in Christ there is but one person and two natures, vnion of nature in the vnity of his Deity. For the second, which is the fruit and effect of this vnion, it is two folde: first, the exaltation of his humane nature by being ioyned to his Deitie: secondly, the communication of his properties. For the first, that the Deity that vnited the flesh did so glorifie the flesh, that by vnsearchable degrees it hath made it farre aboue all Angels, is proued by three priuiledges which it hath: first by the dignity of his personall vnion, as he was the sonne of man he was naturally the sonne of God, and he that was God was borne of the woman: for Christ is one sonne of God in two respects: first, by generation eternall: secondly, according to his humane nature, not as man nor by adoption, for hee was neuer the sonne of wrath, but by personall vnion, for he was the sonne of God. The second priuiledge, is, that all gifts that can be in any of the creatures, are powred without measure vpon the flesh of Christ, namely all that can be giuen to any creature or to any nature, that keepe it a nature still, and doth not desie the creature: for as hee is man hee knoweth not the day of iudgement, nor is not in euery place, for these bee essentiall to the Godhead, but his humane nature was so beautified by the Godhead dwelling in it bodily, as that (Heb. i. 6.) all the Angels must worship him, and yet as man, no essentiall quality of the Deity rested in him. The third priuiledge is this, that his Diuine nature hath giuen the participation of his office to him as man; that as God is Mediator, so is man; as God hath deserued saluation, so hath man, and that hee as man shall iudge the quicke and dead, not that he shall iudge by his manhood, but Christ man shall iudge the world. The second fruit of this vnion, is the communication of properties, not that the properties of the one are communicate to the other, but that one may bee attributed to both : as Christ God died, Christ man is eternall ; and this is either when we give that to the humanity which is proper to the diuinity, or give that to the diuinity which is proper to the humanity; as God by his blood redeemed his Church, yet God had no blood, but Christ God had blood : so this man Christ forgiveth sinnes, not that this power is in his manhood, but hee doeth it meere as God : for these and such like speeches be true in Concreto, not in abstracto, as they be both ioyned together, and not as they be separate one from the other.

Lastly in the word God with vs, obserue that Christ is not only God with vs in nature, but in person ; for the reprobate are of the same nature with him and he with them, yet is he not God with them, but against them : but we (as the Apostle speaketh) are flesh of his flesh, and bone of his bones, euen as man and wife, which are not onely one in nature as all other men and women are, but one person by speciall couenant : and euen so are wee one person with Christ by the couenant of grace, & being one with him, we are also one with the whole Trinity, as himselfe saith, I and my Father will come and sup with him : and according to his last praier, Iohn 17. Father I beseech thee that as I am one with thee and thou with me, so these (speaking of the faithfull, and pointing at them) may be one with vs both : which bringeth great comfort to Gods children, that through Christ we haue the whole Godhead reconciled to vs and dwelling in vs.

And Ioseph did as the Angell had commanded him.

This is the third generall part spoken of before, namely the obedience of Ioseph, according to euey thing that was prescribed: out of which gather generally, that when we are accertained it is Gods pleasure wee should doe such a thing, that wee stand not still, consulting with our owne peruerse natures, nor inclining too much to tender our owne frailties, but that knowing it to be the voice of God we admit of no contradictions, but we are to constraîne our affections to bee pacified and perswaded according as the Lord hath disposed. This was the infirmity of Sara, Genes. 18. 12. who laughed when the Angels promised to come againe, according to the time of life, she respecting rather
the

the order of nature, then beleeuing the promise of God. And this likewise was Lots fault, Gen. 19. 16. who prolonged the time when the Angels bad him arise and be gone, for the which hee might iustly haue bene destroyed in the punishment of the City. But the contrary to this we see in Abraham, Gen. 22. 3. who when he was commanded to sacrifice his sonne, than which what could be more contrary to nature, than for a father to be the butcher to his owne sonne, yet being assured that it was the voice of God speaking by the Angell, he presently commended his affection, and rose vp early to execute that bitter message. Wherein obserue, that all the children of Abraham must be children of obedience, which must be shewed by walking in euery thing, according as it is written. For now seeing onely the voice of the Lord is the voice of the scripture, which is as certaine as if Christ were Luke 16. 29. to speake immediatly from heauen, so farre as is commanded so farre is to bee performed, howsoeuer it may cost vs deare and crosse vs much; yea though it bee with Ioseph to embrace her for a wife whose honesty we might iustly suspect. And if Ioseph did this at the first word of the Angell, what shall bee said to vs, who haue heard the voice of God so often, beating vpon vs, that we should forsake our sinnes, and yet we spread curtaines ouer them? But that as his obedience is heere recorded for his praise, so our stubbornnesse and disobedience be registred in our punishment, that it may be as a hissing and astonishment to other nations.

Further obserue hence, that the obedience of a Christian standeth not in a generall subscribing to the truth of that is taught them, no nor yet in a verball confession of it: but the commendation of a Christian resteth in his works of obedience, as it is said heere, Ioseph (did) as he was enioyned: so that the hand and the mouth must goe together, as our Sauiour Christ teacheth: 1. Ioh. 3. 18. Not euery one that (saith) Lord, Lord, but he that Mat. 7. 21. (doth) the will of the Lord shall be an heire of heauen. Whereby we must learne, that the calling of a Christian is no idle but a painfull calling, wherein we must stroue daily to plucke vp some weedes or other that ouergrow our godlinesse, and to liue as children in the sight of our Father, alwaies doing what hee com-mendeth vnto vs. For if Ioseph after this time had no more suspected his wife, yet if hee had not taken her againe, and dwelt with her as his wife, he had failed in his obedience, and had been like Lots wife, (Gen. 19. 22. 26.) who beginning well in going out of Sodome, and yet forgetting halfe her obedience to the commandement, in looking backe behind her, is left as a monument to this day for vs to take heed by.

And he knew her not, till she had, &c.

Though it be said, he knew her not (till) shee had, &c. yet it doth not follow necessarily he knew her (after;) for the word (till) in the Hebrew tongue signifieth as well, that a thing shall not come to passe in time to come, as that it came not to passe before: as Mat. 28. 20. I am with you (vntill) the end of the world: nor that he will leaue vs then, but that he will by his spirit be with vs then and euer after. Like to this is the phrase vsed, (2. Sam. 6. 23.) Michol had no children (till) the day of her death: and it is certain she had none after. So in the speech following: Christ was her (first) begotten Sonne, it doth not therefore follow, shee had any more sonnes, for the phrases only exclude the time before. And this we are to beleeuue vpon our saluation, that Ioseph knew her not till Christ was borne, and that Christ was the first borne. And it is very probable & agreeable to the best churches, that he knew her not after, nor that she had any more sonnes after: for what flesh durst touch that vessell that was sanctified to entertaine the Lord Jesus?

MATH. chap. 2. vers. 1, 2. &c.

1. When Iesus then was borne at Bethlehem in Iudaea in the daies of Herod the king, behold, there came Wise men from the East to Ierusalem:
2. Saying, where is that King of the Iewes that is borne? for we haue seene his starre in the East, and are come to worship him.
3. When king Herod heard this he was troubled, and all Hierusalem with him:
4. And gathering together all the chiefe Priests and Scribes of the people, he asked of them where Christ should be borne.
5. And they said vnto him, At Bethlehem in Iudaea: for so it is written by the Prophet:
6. And thou Bethlehem in the land of Iuda, art not the least amongst the Princes of Iuda: for out of thee shall come the Governour that shall feed that my people Israel.
7. Then Herod prinily called the Wise-men, and diligently enquired of them the time of the starre that appeared.
8. And sent them to Bethlehem, saying: Goe and search diligently for the babe, and when yee haue found him, bring me word againe, that I may come also and worship him.
9. So when they had heard the king, they departed; and lo, the starre which they had seene in the East, went before them, till it came and stood ouer the place where the babe was.
10. And when they saw the starre, they reioyced with an exceeding great ioy.
11. And went into the house and found the babe with Mary his mother, and fell downe and worshipped him, and opened their treasures, and presented vnto him gifts, euen gold, and frankencense, and mirrhe.

12. And after they were warned of God in a dreame that they should not goe againe to Herod, they returned into their countrey another way.

HE Euangelist in the former Chapter having set downe two things, first, the royall pedegree of our Sauour Christ, secondly, the manner of his conception; now he proceedeth to shew his manifestation to the world, and the manner of it; beginning with a certaine memorable history of certaine men renowned among the heathen, who being most learned, though most superstitious, did vndertake a tedious and dangerous iourney, to doe homage to a poore babe lying in a cratch, as if it had been to a mighty Monarch. In the words there be six circumstances set downe: first, that these Wise-men came 1 from a farre country, by the direction of an extraordinary starre, created of God for that purpose, and enquired where the king of
 2 the Jewes was. Secondly, is remembered what effect this newes and enquiry had and wrought, namely, a wonderful feare in the Court of Herod, and a great perplexity in the inhabitants of Ierusalem. Whereupon the King called a Parliament or a Conuocation of
 3 Diuines, God working withall in his conscience, knowing himselfe to bee an vsurper, to know of them, not where this King of the Jewes should bee at that present, but where hee should bee
 4 borne. Thirdly, is declared the resolution that was given to this question so propounded, satisfying the matter truly; out of an ancient record of the Prophet Micah, chap. 5. 2. set downe in
 5 the 5. and 6. verses. Fourthly, followeth the priuy and sly practise which Herod most maliciously, but most politikely attempted; his conference with the Wise men being onely to be en-
 6 formed when the starre appeared, that he might guesse the birth of the child, to goe about his murther, in the 7. & 8. verses. Fifthly, what befell these Sages or Wise men in the way, hauing received resolution from the Councill, and encouragement from the King: namely, the starre appeared againe, and led them directly to the place where the babe was, and how they reioyced, in the 9. 10. and 11. verses. Sixtly, is set downe an Oracle from God

God given them, commanding them to goe another way, in the 12. verse.

For the first, which is the coming of these men to see our Saviour Christ in his baseness, the Euangelist setteth downe five circumstances. First, the persons that came: they were Magi or Wise men, such as were reputed among the heathen most learned, but yet the practisers of the Art of Balaam, that is, of con-iuring, and the very Chaplaines of the diuell. So as they were not Kings, as some haue taken it, abusing the Psalm. 72. 10. The Kings of Sheba shall come & offer gifts: for this standeth full West, and these men came from the East. But thus hath the Lord infatuated them that would incline to their owne shallow braine, that they should speake things repugnant in themselues. Others set downe the number of them to bee three, because they brought three gifts, which is not so to be taken, but onely that they which came, presented vnto him the chiefeft commodity of their country. The second circumstance noteth the time, set downe doubly: 2 first, that it was after his birth: secondly, that Herod the sonne of Antipater, who had got the Kingdome by force and flattery, then reigned: but for the day when they came, wee know not:
 some take it to be the sixth of Ianuary, which is a great deale too curious; howbeit of the yeere and moneth somewhat may bee gathered, and it is probable it was not long after his birth, and vnder two yeeres. Thirdly, he noteth the circumstance of the 3 place, from whence, and whither they came, from the East to Jerusalem. Fourthly, the question they demand, Where is the 4
 King of the Iewes that is borne: not that should bee borne.
 Fifthly, lest they might seeme to bee besotted with Astrological coniectures, hee sets downe the direction they had to come thi- 5 ther, namely, the starre, and the end wherefore they came: to worship him.

Out of the circumstance of the persons that came, obserue, 6 how it pleased God when the fulnesse of time was come, to manifest the truth of his promise to the Gentiles, and to salute them first with the comfortable newes of Christ his birth, who had beene so long forsaken: for these Wise men were as it were the first fruites of the Gentiles, who before this time liued without God in the world. Heereby teaching vs, first, not to hasten but when the Lord doth call, and to wait his time and pleasure with patience : for though he had suffered the Gentiles by the space of foure thousand yeeres, to follow the greedinesse of their owne lusts, and to be drenched in the whirle pit of their vile affections, yet these at length in his due time, doth hee visit in great mercy, and sheweth them the light, first, that they may come out of darkenesse ; that though the Iewes had many priuiledges, as elder brethren about them, yet at length the Lords mercy should make them equall, as was prophesied, Ose. 2. 23. and is set downe by S. Peter, 1. chap. 2. 10. yea and of the Gentiles, that his Church should especially be gathered, that they which in times past were not vnder mercy, might now be seene to haue obtained mercy.

of. 2. Secondly, from hence note the riches of the Lords mercy, who to shew the power and vertue that was in this Sauour, begins to draw them and to open their hearts, who had run furthest from him, and giuen themselues most ouer to the diuell : for such were these Wise-men, who consulted with Sathan and practised the most detestable art of coniuring and witchcraft, which by the iudiciall law of God was death ; yet at the doores of these men doth his spirit knocke. From whence euery man may draw this particular comfort to himselfe, that whatsoeuer his former conuersation hath beene, though most irreligious towards God, and vnrighteous to men, yet there may a power bee giuen him from aboute to trauell toward that heauenly Ierusalem the Citie of God, where he shall not now see Christ in his basenesse as these Wise-men did, but in his absolute and perfect glory. For if wee haue but faith to beleue Gods promises, and shall so far proceed in the worke of repentance, as being called to the light to walke in the light, and not to thinke much of our paines, though we go farre to worship Christ : but can walke on cheerefully after the example of these Wise-men, we shall be sure with them to haue our ioyes more increased at our iourneys end, than they were at first.

Now where they shew they were directed by a starre : first, vnderstand, that the Nativity of Christ depended not vpon the starre,

starre, but the starre vpon his Natiuity. Secondly, we must not thinke that the Wise-men had this power to diuine by the starre that Christ was borne: for first the starre was not naturall, for it kept not a set course, but as we may see in the text, it did appeare and not appeare, neither could this diuine light speake that such a Messias was borne, though it might portend the birth of some great Monarch: but this light was purposely created by God in heauen: for vers. 2. it is called Christ his starre, and there was a secret impulsion by Gods spirit in the hearts of these men on earth, otherwise they would not haue tolde so dangerous a matter to Herod a king so cruell, and an enemy to the king of Persia whence they came: and though perhaps their Art might tell them somewhat, and that they had the prophesie of Balaam the coniuer, Num. 24. 17. There shall come a starre of Iacob, and a scepter shall rise of Israel. and though they had the prophesie of Daniel, (chap. 9. 24.) of the 70. weekes in which this great king should come; yet by all this they gathered it not, but by Gods owne opening it vnto them. Out of which we learne, that when we haue any thing reuealed to vs from God, or that wee haue a commandement to doe a thing, that we cast off all doubts, and shake off all feare euen of the greatest tyrants: for let Herod be neuer so much perplexed at the name of the true and new-borne King of the Iewes, yet must the Wise-men aske the question, and not depart from his Court till they be resolued. And let Pharaoh be neuer so cruell, and (Exod. 10. 28.) threaten Moses if he doe but see him to kill him, yet must he runne on in his duty, and pronounce the death of the first borne, euen the first born that sitteth on the throne of Pharaoh.

But the more speciall doctrine from hence is, that God in wisdom doth so strangely qualifie the basenesse of Christ his birth, that howsoeuer hee might seeme to the eies of men a vile abiect, as Esay prophesied, chap. 53. 2. void of outward dignity, yet God beautified him alwaies in his greatest vilenesse, with some certaine marke of his Diuinity, that it might be discerned, that he that was in that flesh was more then a man; as euen at this time, that hee hauing but an oxe stall on earth for his cloth of estate, should haue a starre in heauen to set forth his glorie: and

and that when there was no more thinking of Christ than of the man in the Moone among Herods Courtiers, then he provides that some Magicall practisers should humble themselves before him, when the high Priests did despise him. Thus did the Lord (Luk. 2. 8.) reveale him first to shepheards, the basest of ten thousand: but to testifie his maiesty at the same time, an host of Angels and a multitude of heavenly souldiers sang glory to him. So was he (Mat. 4. 1. 11.) led into the wildernesse among wild beasts, but the Angels waited on him as his pensioners, and ministred to him in his wants. So (Mat. 17. 25. 27.) he must pay tribute, a token of subiection, and yet the kings sonne ought to pay none: but as this shewed him to be a man and a subiect, so he told Peter his thought, saying: I will pay it, but go to the sea and take it out of the fishes mouth; so as to shew his diuinity, he commanded the sea to pay it. Againe, he was maintained eleemosinarily, hauing no garment but what was giuen him, and the good women kept him by their contributions: yet to magnifie himselfe againe, he oftentimes fed many thousands with a little. So (Mark. 11. 12. 13.) he comes hungry to the fig-tree, wherein appeareth his baseness; but in the same action springeth forth his maiesty, as when he said, Neuer fruit grow on thee hereafter: and it was presently dried vp. So God had appointed he should die, and before his death to be whipped, Mat. 26. 67. to shew his humility: but see how he exalted himselfe againe, Mark. 11. 15. he whipped out the exchangers out of the temple, and none durst so much as looke or make resistance against him. Againe, he must be hanged betweene two theeues, but (Luk. 23. 42.) he so qualifieth the baseness and shame of his crosse, as he worketh faith in the heart of one of them, to call on him as a Saviour, and him he sauerth. And though at last he died to declare his manhood, yet that hee was more then a man, was expressed by the breaking of the veile of the Temple, and by the strange eclipse of the Moone, which was in plenilunio, when it was full Moone.

2. For the second generall circumstance, which is the effect of their inquiry, what feare it wrought. For the word, Feare, it signifieth such a troubling of the water, as that mud ariseth; shewing, that this kind of feare seized on Herod and his Court: howbeit, howbeit, their feare arose vpon feuerall respects. Herod feared because he was somewhat acquainted with the prophesies which foretold, that one should come to deliuer his people out of seruitude: and he knew that all would worship the Sunne rising rather then the Sunne setting. And that he was strangely affraid is noted by this, that hee called vnto him the Wise-men, and would haue learned of them somewhat; whereas if he had beene prouident, hee would haue sent some of his Courtiers on the journey with them, in colour of doing them courtesie, that so they might haue gone to the very place to haue seene the child, and by them the King might haue beene sure to haue knowen the truth: but it pleased the Lord he should be so besotted with this grosse feare, that his wisdom was turned into foolishnesse, that so the poore child might as yet escape the bloody claws of this cruell tyrant. The people they were affraid and troubled, because they had beene so long acquainted and made familiar with slauish seruitude, that their hearts were euen growen hard, and they were willing to sustaine this bondage, so they might be quiet, chusing rather to abide some tolerable seruitude, then to endanger themselues further, by the commutation of their state, and change of their king.

Out of the feare of the king, obserue the nature and condition of wicked and profane Princes, who if the finger of God doe but come neere them, and shake them in their seates, they murmure and grudge, and are smitten with feare as with the spirit of giddinesse: for Herod feared lest hee should lose his kingdome if Christ should raigne; so as it was the losse of the Crowne did so much affect him. Euen so was the countenance of King Balthazar changed and his thoughts troubled, when he saw the hand writing on the wall, Dan. 5.6. which signified the diuision and losse of his kingdome: for it is not in the power of Princes to stay their conscience from checking and accusing them, nay it is as a butcher that will first flea and rife them when their destruction draweth on. Therefore let the great men of the earth beware how they spurne against the gouernement of Christ, for hee is no lesse a King now then hee was then; nay hee gouernes now with more maiesty then before, and therefore they may not bee as Lions ouer his heritage : but if they will haue their Scepters blessed in their hands, they must suffer Christ to rule, and themselves though Lords ouer others, yet to bee but subiects vnder him.

of. 2.

In that the people were also afraid, obserue the grosnesse and profanesse that was in these Iewes before these Wise-men came thither : for as soone as they heard of the birth of their Messias, they were presently astonished, as if they had neuer heard of any such matter before, and yet they knew that the Kingdome was now translated from the tribe of Iuda, and that it was to bee restored, they were exercised and vexed with great calamities, as were their forefathers vnder Pharao, so as that might haue made them cast vp their eyes to haue looked for a deliuerer. The sacrifices they daily offered portending the death of Christ, might haue put them in minde of his comming, but they were so dead in sinne and licentious liuing, as they dreamed of no such matter; yea they sung out of the Psalmes continually in their Seruice, Blessed is he that commeth in the name of the Lord : yet when he is come it appalleth, and like beasts voide of vnderstanding, they had rather sleepe in a knowen slavery, then enioy an vnknown liberty, their religion being but common deuotion, and a set kinde of seruing God without sincerity, which wrought no more in their consciences, but that now as if they were heathen they tremble to heare of the name of a Saviour. Which ought to teach vs to lay religion at the heart, and to keepe the fire burning, lest if we neglect this acceptable time of grace, and shuffle off the seruice of God as a thing of course, wee grow and become as senselesse and profane in our selues as these Iewes did, to bee troubled with Christes comming to vs in his word preached.

Luk. 12. 32.

Againe, in that it is said, All Ierusalem were afraid, it is to bee vnderstood onely of the greatest part, for some waited and expected his comming in great hope, as Anna, Simeon and Zachary; but these were but as a sparke in comparison of a mighty fire. Where we learne, not to fashion our selues to follow multitudes, the greatest number being alwaies enemies to the Crosse of Christ, as himselfe testifieth, Mine is a little flocke.

But

But such is the power of the Prince of darkenesse, and such strength hath corruption in vs, as they leade vs altogether from the way of holinesse, and the least occasion moueth vs to bee offended at Christ: howbeit let vs retire our selues into the straites of godlinesse, and let pirates roue vpon the maine Sea: it is the narrow path that leadeth, and the smaller company that entreth into Sion. For in Sodome that great citie, Genes. 18. 32. there shall not bee found tenne righteous nor religious, and the house of Noah onely excepted, Genes. 6. 11. the whole earth was corrupt before the Lord. It cannot therefore bee safe for vs to ioyne in amitie with the sonnes of men, least wee bee wrapped in the same destruction, and ouercome of the same feare wee see all Hierusalem troubled with.

Further obserue hence, that if the birth of our Sauour Christ in this basenesse strooke such terrors into the hearts of Kings, how much more shall his second comming cause the very mountaines of the earth to tremble, when hee shall appeare in power, accompanied with hostes of Angels, and when heaven and earth shall flie before him? That therefore his presence may bring vs ioy, and that we may bee as mount Sion not to be shaken, let vs lay aside the leauen of the flesh, and put on this our Christ, by whom wee haue redemption, euen the forgienesse of our sinnes, Ephes. 1. 7. for faith in him shall driue out all trembling distrust whatsoeuer; & where his comming worketh feare, there the conscience threatneth destruction, else would the wicked neuer cry to the mountaines to fall on them, and to the hills to cover them. Psal. 125. 1.
Luke. 23 30

Obserue againe by this great perplexity that arose both in Prince and people, that it was alwaies the destiny of the Gospell to bring commotion to States, and alteration to Kingdomes: for now besides the generall feare that fretted their hearts, the whole company of Diuines are troubled to turne their bookes and to seeke out what shall become of the matter. This was but a beginning of that Christ himselfe spake afterward, Matthew 10. 34. I came not to bring peace, but a sword: not that the Gospell in it selfe causeth warres, but that the wrath and vengeance geance of God might redound vpon the faces of his enemies, for it maketh peace betweene men and men and God and men, that the loue of God boiling from him to vs through his grace in the word, might againe issue from vs to him through our obedience to the word. Yet before the Gospell can enter to take roote and worke vpon vs, it causeth hatred, euen to the effusion of bloud, this proceeding from the malice of Satan, who by the growth of the Gospell loseth his iurisdiction, and from our owne corruption that loue darknesse more then light, because the Gospell discouereth our sinnes as the Sunne doth the mores, that otherwise lie hid. And againe, it is a cause of war which the godly haue with the worldlings, to shew the diuision betweene the seed of the woman and the serpent, and to exercise the patience and prayers of Gods seruants; for these ends the Gospell breedeth commotion.

Now for the effect of this feare, it makes the King to call a Synod of Diuines, and he gathereth the learned, and all the learned, omitting none, to this end, not to satisfie the question of the wise men, Where he was that was borne, but to satiate his owne bloody purpose, That he might know the place where he should be borne. Where we learne how Princes doe vse religion, and to what purpose they call for Diuines, not for conscience but for policy: for it was the matter of the crowne onely troubled Herod, so as he called them not for any reuerence hee bare to them, for he knew them to be miserable claw-backes, but to serue his turne, and that they might releuee him in this his trouble and scruple. Thus did Balak (Numb. 22. 5.) send for Balaam, onely to curse the people: and Ahab (1. Kin. 22. 8.) sent for Micah only that he might concurre in opinion with the foure hundred false Prophets.

 Iohn 11. 50. For the third generall circumstance; namely the resolution giuen by these Diuines, which is right and sincere out of the Scripture: the Iesuites hereupon note, that these priests thought their persons were neuer so wicked, yet God doth force them to speake trueth by vertue of their vnction. So Caiaphas onely as high Priest shall say, and that truly, that one shall die for the sins of the people, though he neither know what he speaketh, nor beleue believe what he speaketh. We answer, that if the priuiledge of oile did this, then could he neuer sentence any thing amisse: but if this vnction worke but by his like Sauls frensie, 1. Sam. 16. 23. then must they seeke out some other cause of the vpright iudgement of these Diuines in this place. Balaams (Num. 24. 17.) prophesied true, not because he was a Priest, but he spake euen as his Ass spake, God putting it into his heart to doe so. And it is strange that the Popes person may be an heretike, and yet the Pope himselfe as Pope be a Catholike; and that though his person be ouerflown with wickednesse, yet that as some grounds will beare no poisoned beasts, so his Consistory will breed no errors. We say the seate of Moses had no such priuiledge, much lesse they: for though Caaphas spake true, that one should die, yet as high Priest hee condemned the Lord Iesus that was innocent. So we must take it heere, that these Diuines resolued Herod of the truth, not by inforcement, but voluntarily euen as they thought, for their lips preferred to much knowledge as to be acquainted with the Prophets, euen in these speciall and secret points of the comming of Christ.

Note further in the prophesie of the Messias heere cited, the great mercy of God, that set downe particularly so many things by so many sundry instruments, and all fall out to be as true as if the Prophets had then seene them. It was first prophesied Gen. 3. he should bee the seed of the woman; then to what nation hee should be giuen, to the Iewes: then to what Tribe; to Iuda: Gen. 49. 10. then to what house of this Tribe, to Dauid: then at what time he should be borne, Dan. 9. 25. & Genes. 49. 10. when the Scepter shall goe from Shilo, then shall the Messias come: then the person that should beare him, a virgine: his name Emmanuel, Esa. 7. 14. his office, a Saviour: the place where hee should be borne, Bethlem, Micah. 5. 2. the maner of his life, to be poore, Za. 99. he shall come riding on an asse: the maner of his death, Esa. 53. 12. he should be condemned with sinners: the price should be giuen to betray him, and what should be done with it, to buy a field, Zach. 11. 12. that he should be pierced, and yet that in his death not a bone should be broken, Exod. 12. 46. that he should thirst, & vineger should be giuen him, Psa. 69. 21. that lots should be be cast vpon his garments, Psal. 22. 18. Let vs therefore, seeing this sweet harmony of the Prophets, and as perswaded of the verity of the whole scripture, labour to learne all things that are written, and so to learne them as to doe them, that we may be contrary minded to these Iewes; reioyce at his comming who will fill vs with all ioy.

Further, wee are to consider by what occasion the Lord wrought that the virgine should be brought to bed at Bethlem: Luke reciteth it chap. 2. 1. that Mary having purposed to be deliuered at Nazareth where shee had conceived, which had bene contrary to the scripture, the Lord changeth this determination, and sendeth a thought into the heart of Augustus the Emperour, to impose a taxe vpon all the world: Mary though great with child and neere her travell, yet is constrained to go to Bethlem. Thus doeth the Lord turne the purposes of wicked men to a blessed end, and makes all wind blow good for his children, and prouokes the Emperour to bee an executioner of the prophesies: not that he any whit regarded them in his heart, or did this vpon any voluntary obedience, for his end was to enrich his fist, and to shew the Maiesty of his Empire, that by this men might testifie their submission vnto him. Thus did the Lord turne (Gen. 45. 7.) the mischieuous malice of Iosephs brethren to an honorable end, that he might be a purveyor and a nurse to his Church, as Ioseph himselfe testifieth Gen. 50. 20. speaking to his brethren, Ye thought euill against me, but the Lord turned it vnto good, that I might preserue the liues of many.

064.

Note further in the resolution of these Diuines, that we are to wonder how they could so sincerely & willingly answer to the question propounded, whereas afterward they peruert all the scripture, rather then they will subiect themselues to this Messias: it is because as yet the Messias had not opened his mouth, to conuince their sinne and shew their shame, nor challenged them for murdering of soules; but when he comes to discover their hypocrisie, and persecution of the truth, then he is no more the King of the Iewes borne at Bethlem, but he is a Nazarean, and no good thing can come out of Galile, Iohn 7. 53. reprouing also Nicodemus, verse 52. that would not haue him condemned before

before he was heard, granting the truth in the generall, but denying it in the particular: which is the nature of all Atheists and Non-residents, which subscribe to the generall places of Scripture, that the word must bee preached in season and out of season, that if the blind leade the blind, both shall fall into the pit of perdition, that where the vision faileth the people perish, and that the price of soules is bloud: but that hee himselfe is in this danger, that taketh the fleece, yet feedeth not the sheepe: or that he doth iopard his owne soule, in suffering the soules of others to famish, he will instantly and shamelessly deny, their consciences condemning them in the particular. So will the Atheist and prophane person confesse in generall, that God is iust, that he hateth sinne, yea and that he will bee auenged for sinne: but that Gods hand shall euer come neere him, or that the euill day shall fall vpon him, though he wallow in his owne filthinesse, his senselesse soule will neuer allow of. Howbeit, let every one of vs beware after the example of these great Scribes, who found that to bee true to their particular condemnation, which they onely held to be true in their owne generall opinion: namely, that the Messias was borne; but that Christ was he, though he wrought with power, and taught with authority, they vterly denied it. For though in the whole booke of God, most of the promises and cursings be set downe in generall, yet they are not effectual to comfort vs, nor powerfull to terrifie vs, if our owne soules do not assume particularly to our selues: as, generally to beleuee, that whosoeuer is weary shall be refreshed, yet shalt thou neuer find rest in thy soule, vnlesse thou likewise beleuee, that Christ shall euen be the water of life to thee.

Lastly, in the resolution of these Diuines, obserue how diuersely men vse the Scripture, which are heere set downe to bee of thre sorts. First, the Scribes they vsed them for speculation onely, thinking it enough if they so studied them, as they could know such a thing should bee, strengthening onely their iudgement, and neuer suffering it to sinke into their affections. Secondly, Herod hee inquireth of the Scripture to compasse mischief, that this babe might likewise haue fallen within his butchery. Thirdly, the graue wise men they enquire after them with a single eye, and an honest heart, that being resolved according to the truth, they may goe to the worship of the Messias. So as euen of those that will bee accounted professors, we see there is but one sort onely that bring forth the simple fruites of righteousness. Answerable almost to these, may we say we haue three sorts of congregations in this time. The first, of them that loue the euill which they haue, contenting and pleasing themselves with a dumbe Minister, committing the cure of their soules to them that know no Physicke. The second, of them that haue not the good they loue, they wanting a good Minister, and heartily desiring him, that he might leade them forth into the pleasant feedings of the Lord. The third, of them that loue not the good they haue, enjoying a good Minister and not regarding him. And all these may well be counted miserable, though the affection of the second sort be most righteous.

4. The fourth generall circumstance, is Herods pretending of piety, and vsing of policy to destroy the babe our Saviour, set downe by three circumstances. First, how after the resolution deliuered, he calleth the Wise-men priuily and in secret, (for this newes came vpon him like the pangs of death) and commands them to enquire of the (babe,) not the (King,) for this was it
 2 that gauled him to the heart. Secondly, to returne what successe
 3 they had. Thirdly, he pretendeth a good end, namely, that he also would goe to worship as they had done.

o6f. 1. In the first of these note two things : first, his extreame sottishnesse : secondly, his extreame fury. His sottishnesse, that hauing a remedy at hand, to haue beene sure to haue caught the child, namely, to haue sent some of his Courtiers, vnder pretence of gratifying these Wise men, and then hee could not doubt but haue grasped him in his claws : howbeit, though this was a matter touched the kingdome and his crowne, yet the Wise-men goe alone, and he sendeth not one with them. Thus the Lord deliuereth his Church out of the pawes of the Lion, by striking their enemies with the spirit of giddinesse and astonishment, that either they cannot see the way to reuenge, or being in their hands, they become foolish. His extreame fury, impiety, and audacious hardnesse appeareth in this, that hee knowing this
 o6f. 2. babe,

babe, spoken of by the Prophets, was to beset vp and aduanced for King, and that heauen and earth could not depose him, whom God would haue lifted vp: and that considering the starre appeared, that these Wise-men came so farre to worship him, whereby he could not but know, that it was the ordinance of the most high, yet hee goeth about to crosse the Lord, and to resist his prouidence: yea hee knew out of the Oracle cired by his owne Scribes, that such an one was to be borne, yet hee labourereth to dispossesse him, when he might as easily lay siege against the seate of God, and seeke to batter heauen, or to stay the course of the Sunne, or to hold the winds in his fist, as to keepe this babe from the kingdome. But thus doe the wicked make God an Idoll, and so lightly regard him, as they dare fight hand to hand with him, saying as it is Iob. 21. 15. Who is the Almighty, that we should serue him? Thus did Pharao beare often plagues Exod. 8. & 9. sent by the immediate hand of God, before he would let the Israelites depart, against the expresse charge and commandement sent vnto him by the mouth of Moses. And thus did Saul follow Dauid at the heeles, to haue had his life, though he knew 1. Sam. 15. 28. he was set vp of the Lord to succeed him. Howbeit, we must incline to the counsell of Gamaliel, (Act. 5. 35.) to say, that if it be of God it will preuaile: for how can the hand of the creature destroy that, which the breath of the Creator will haue preferued? or how can the Lord giue blessing to that course, which his hand hath cursed? Nay, his decrees shall stand vnchangeable (being farre more wise then the law of the Medes and Persians (Dan. 6. 8.) that altereth not) how euer Herod and his brethren haue made a couenant with hell, that come what can come they feare it not: for vengeance is both about from heauen to smite them, and beneath on earth to swallow them, and they can no more auoide it, then the old world could auoide the flood.

Further obserue in this speech of Herod to the Wise-men: that he also would goe to worship the babe: that some man may speake that in hypocrisie to the damnation of his owne soule, which another beleeuing in simplicity may heare with comfort. For no doubt the Wise-men heere were glad when they heard

Herod say, he would also worship, though himselfe meant nothing lesse. Which example, we that are Christians must still follow: for so long as men beare vp their heads in the Church of God, and ioyne with vs in his seruice, we must leaue their hearts to him that made them, and reioyce that by the leaues of their profession, they seeme to be trees of the Lords planting.

5. The first generall point is: what befell these Wise-men both in their iourney from Herods Court, and when they came to their iournies end, set downe by five circumstances: First, that they
 2 went when they were resolu'd: Secondly, that the starre appea-
 3 reth againe, and goeth before them: Thirdly, that it stands vpon
 4 the particular place where the babe lay: Fourthly, their exce-
 5 ding ioy: Fifthly, how comming thither, they find the babe in a base place, yet they are not discourag'd, but reuerence him and giue him gifts.

66f.1. For the first it is shewed, that they went alone, not one with them, though this was the King specially borne for the saluation of the Iewes. Wherein wee may admire their ingratitude, and the impiety of the Scribes, that pointed the way to others, and yet vouchsafed not themselues to goe one foot to enquire after Christ. Thus may Preachers be as Mercuriales stanni, set vp as directors of others, shewing the way to heauen, and yet goe themselues to hell. Perhaps they feared the cruelty of the king; that if they should haue bene caried with an affection of seeing him, it might haue cost them their liues, or at least their honors. Though it were so, yet doth it not excuse their vngodlinesse, to preferre the feare of a King that could but kill the body and touch the goods, before the feare of the great King of the heauens, that can destroy both body and soule. For though the disciples and Apostles (Act. 4. 18.) bee commanded, that they should teach no more in the name of Iesus, yet if the burden of the Lord be vpon them, they may not but speake (vers. 20.) the things which they haue seene and heard. And though Micaiah the Prophet (1. King. 22. 13.) doe know what message will please the King, yet though he be smitten on the cheeke and cast into prison, hee must deliuer the counsell of the Lord. For as Saint Paul saith, Gal. 1. 10. If in these things I should please men,

Mark. 8. 36.

I were not the servant of Christ.

In that none of the people accompanied these Wise-men, observe their dulnesse and Atheisme, that they all stay at home, and yet they kept an outward shew and deuotion in seruing God, and offered sacrifices, which vnesse they knew that they praefigured the death of Christ, what made they of their temple but a butchers shambles? Yet by their idlenesse, that they would not steppe one foot to see him, is perceiued, that of the Messias spiritually they knew nothing. Which is likewise to be feared of vs in these daies, that we onely rest our selues within the reach of the Gospell, for that it hath brought vs peace, which peace hath purchased for vs profit and promotion: but if the state might stand in quiet, though Christ were banished from vs, or if we might gaine more by Diana of Ephesus, (Act. 19. 24.) then by the God of Israel, it is to bee doubted Christ might lodge long enough at Bethlem, before we would goe to visit him.

Further obserue, if these Wise-men had not left Herod to his canuassing of the matter, the Scribes to their speculation, the people to their trades, if they had respected the example of the mighty or of the learned, or considered the danger, that it was a matter of treason, if it had so beene taken, they had not had this glory and honour to haue seene the Messias, but they are glad to goe alone though they would be desirous to haue company. Whereby we learne, that to embrace religion, and to ioyne our selues with the congregation of the Saints, it is good in going: if wee can get company, for the greater blessing falls vpon a multitude: howbeit we must haue this resolution, to go, what danger soeuer may befall, and not to stay vntill others goe: for thou shalt neuer see the Lord Iesus if thou stay till all Hierusalem doe goe with thee to Bethlem. These Wise-men might haue said with themselues: Wherefore should we goe see him, since his owne people will not? as Iudas asked Christ: Why dost thou Ioh. 14. 22. shew thyselfe to vs, and not to the world? but they take no occasion of stay, but are resolute to goe alone. Now if these heathen men were so earnest, as to admit of nothing which might hinder them from beholding Christ in the flesh, how much more ought wee to bee eager to heare Christ in his word, and to see him in the Sacrament? The Queene of Saba shall rise vp in iudgement against vs, that came so farre to heare the wisdome of Salomon, 1. Kings 10. 1. and yet as Christ speaketh, Mat. 12. 42. a greater then Salomon is heere, yet are we negligent in attending the voice of God.

Now for the second circumstance, namely that the starre went before them: consider the wonderfull wisdome of God, that he doeth so qualifie and moderate the trials and afflictions of his seruants, that euen to the greatest temptations (if they mistrust not) he giueth a most blessed issue; for it might haue stricken these men with a strange astonishment, and driuen them into great perplexity, that they being of special reputation in their country, and comming this tedious iourney, and hauing such colde entertainment both in the Kings court and of the meaner people, and hauing lost their direction, the starre being vanished, these things might greatly haue dismaied them not to haue gone any further, yet they proceeding forward in their obedience, the light that was quenched was againe of the Lord reuiued; and with this they were comforted greatly, seeing the resolution of the Priests concurring with the dumbe message of the starre. Wherein also marke, that the starre guided them to the particular place where the babe lay: for if they had come to Bethlem it is likely none there knew it, Christ his birth being a thing not dreamt of, and he being a babe vnregarded; and so much the more because he comes of the house of Dauid. And if they had enquired of wicked men for such a thing, they would but haue scorned them, or else sought to haue intrapped them: if of good men, they had indangered themselues by discrying it. Therefore not to need any helpe, the Lord from heaven pointeth out the place vnto them: wherein for our further instruction learne, that God in euery good purpose doth goe before vs by his grace, to make vs willing, as Saint Paul speaketh, and with the same grace doth follow vs and confirme vs in the first worke, that we shall neuer wash our hands in vaine, but that as we are by his direction come to Ierusalem to seeke after Christ, so wee shall by the same direction go strait to Bethlem, where we shall see him, as Dauid saith, Psalm. 25. 12. They that feare the Lord, shall know how to choose

o65. 5.

choose the right way.

For their reioycing at the sight of the starre appearing againe; it implieth they were strangely discomforted at the losie of it. Where note, that if the Lord doe at any time quench the light of his spirit in vs, or change the pleasure, and eclipse the ioy of his countenance, if sometimes wee cannot apply to our soules the sweet comfort of the scriptures, yet the Lord after he hath sufficiently humbled vs, if we goe on with a simple heart, and perseuere as these Wise-men did in their iourney, in a time vnlooked for he will kindle in vs the former light, and take away that foggy mist that obscured the Sunne of righteousness, and it shall clearly shine vpon vs, and our ioy in the holy Ghost shall bee multiplied, and the Lord will ease that heart that was before troden downe with the burden of sinne.

Now in that it is said, they found the babelying in a cratch: we may consider how strangely and strongly the Lord did exercise the faith and perswasion of these Wise-men, that after the former discouragements passed ouer, they find the babelying in this base place, which had beene enough to haue made them repent their long trauell, in the end to see no other sight then this; but such was the quicke sight of the eye of faith, and the speciall instigation of the holy Ghost, as they were not dismaied with the baseness of this King. Heere they find neither guard to defend him, nor resort of people to see him, neither Crowne on his head, nor Scepter in his hand, but such a child, as for outward beauty they might haue seene many a thousand equall and farre beyond him in their owne country without this great trauell. Where learne, that for the beleeuing of the promise, and to be resolu'd of the truth, the Lord doeth so incline the heart and bend the conscience, that whatsoever doth seeme contrary doth nothing offend them: for these Wise-men doe beleeuethat this base child, laied in this base manner is the King of heauen and earth. Heereupon it is that Sara must beleeuethat being a dead woman, that is, spent by nature and ouergrown with yeeres, that so many children must come from her as there bee starres in the firmament, Gen. 17.19. So Abraham (Gen. 15.18.) must beleue that he and his posterity shall bee inheritours of the land of Canaan, naan ; though they be not to haue actuall possession of it foure hundred yeeres after. So Dauid (1. Sam. 17. 15.) comming from the sheepe, must beleue that he shall be a king, yet he seeth Saul so furious against him, (1. Sam. 19. 1.) as he proclaimes it, saying, Let me see if I haue any that will kill Dauid. Heere is open conspiracy, yea hee is driuen into caues and holes, he is as a stone that euery man refuseth, yet his faith may not faile him, but he must perswade himselfe hee shall be crowned though Saul bee euen at his heeles to dispatch him, and it shall be performed. Ioseph hee had a dreame that the Sunne and Moone and eleuen starres (Gen. 37. 10.) should fall downe and worship him : when he was in the pit ready to be slaine in the malice of some of his brethren, hee beleued this : yea being sold into Egypt, and after by the false accusation of his mistres (Genes. 29. 20) cast into prison, where he could see neither Sunne nor Moone, yet he fainteth not, but perswadeth himselfe of the truth of his dreame, and it fell out accordingly. So Ezechiel being brought into the field of the Lord, Exec. 37. 4. must beleue, that of a company of dead bones there shall rise vp armed men ; for those dead bones were the house of Israel. Yea, faith must be so quicke sighted as to beleue that in prison there is liberty, in persecution comfort, in life death, in the Crosse a Crowne, and in a manger the Lord Iesus.

Heere also learne by the example of these Wise-men, not to be offended at the baseness of the Gospell: for if they had beene offended at the baseness of Christ in the flesh, they had not had the blessing of seeing the Messias. Therefore howsoeuer the diuell in Christs time broached this argument, to withdraw men from the Gospell : see whether any of the Scribes or of the famous learned men follow Christ, onely a few rascall company flocke vnto him ; yet wee must not thinke that the kingdome of Christ standeth in any outward pompe or glory, for so much did Simeon (Luk. 2. 34.) insinuate to his mother Mary, that she should not expect any glorious acception of her sonne, no not in Israel, confirmed by the Prophet Esay, chap. 8. 14. 28. 16. but that he should be as a whire set vp in a but, whereat euery man would shoot some bolt. Such therefore shall bee blessed, who (as him-that as the proceeding of his kingdome is about nature, ſo the perſwading of vs to his kingdome is moſt contrary to nature, and that either in a generall oppoſition of the world, which is caried away with the affection of honour, and an vtter hatred of falling into the extremities of contempt, pouerty, and perfecution, or elſe to euery mans particular heart, which is forcible to diſſwade him from ſuffering in the fleſh, or for caſting the anker of his affections vpon the baſeneſſe of Chriſt and of his Croſſe.

 True it is, if an Orator ſhould vſe an argument contrary to art, he could not preuaile; but if hee ſhould frame his argument of that the people were moſt in hatred of, it were a fruitleſſe labour and a vaine hope to expect his purpoſe: ſo if a Phyſician ſhould apply a medicine contrary to the diſeaſe, he could neuer hope to cure it; but if the medicine were alſo contrary to the complexion of the party, then were it moſt vnlikely to haue ſucceſſe. But ſuch is the miraculous power of the Almighty, that as hee can make ſomething of nothing, ſo he can alſo make of a thing contrary ſuch as hee would haue it: as hee hath vanquiſhed the crownes of Monarks by the Croſſe, whoſe triumphant ſeates are moſt contrary to the Croſſe: he hath overcome the pride of the world by pouerty, and the wiſdome of the fleſh by the fooliſhneſſe of the ſpirit: yea he hath wrought ſubmiſſion in the hearts of theſe heathen men, that though Chriſt lay in a cratch void of all dignity, yet they take no offence at it, which thing is onely proper for the ſpirit of God to performe, who hath both the tongue, the heart, and the knee in his power.

Psal. 7. 14.

For the sixt generall circumstance, namely for the oracle giuen these Wise-men to goe home another way : learne first how the Lord disappoints the purposes of tyrants and wicked men, which bend their bowes, whet their swords, and make their arrowes keene to pierce the sides of the godly, that it fals out they are but conceiued with vanity, and trauell of iniquity, and bring forth a lie. For when Herod meant to haue glutted his bloody minde vpon the report of these Wise-men, then are they of the Lord sent another way. And when (Act. 23. 12.) the Iewes had bound themselues with a curse, that they would neither eate nor drinke till they had killed Paul; then the Lord sent into the heart of the chiefe Captaine, so to intrench him about with souldiers as he was kept safe from their fury. So when Senaherib the King of Ashur had thought to haue swallowed vp Ierusalem, Esfay 36. 33. then the Lord said and performed it, that he should not so much as shoot an arrow, nor cast a mount against it. Thus doeth the Lord alwaies preuent the dangers intended against his children, that neither the plague that flies by day, nor the pestilence that walkes by night, nor the snare of the hunter can once intrap them, but his cares are open euen to the prayers of Ionas, c. 2. 2. to deliuer him out of the Whales belly : and his eies are so bent vpon Daniel, c. 6. 22. as the Lions haue no power to hurt him : but he is as a shadow against the parching heat, and as a shield against the blustering cold, which may incourage vs still to lay hands vpon him as our succour, to behold him as our deliuerer, to flie to him as our comforter, to waite vpon him as

Psal. 91. 5. 6.

our guide, and to commit our soules vnto him as vnto the best keeper.

Secondly, heere learne by the not returning of these Wisemen to Herod according as they were commanded, that an oath or a vow taken and made against the bond of charity, and tending to the hurt of our brother, is not to be performed; but being vnderaken vpon weakenesse, is to be discharged vpon conscience: and therefore rash was the vow of Iphtah, Iudg. 11. 31. to promise to the Lord without limitation a sacrifice of that he should first meet when he came home. For though the Apostle Heb. 11. 32. commendeth him for his worthy enterprife in deliuering the people, yet by this rash vow and wicked performance of the same, his victory was much defaced. For we must make no haile with our mouthes to pronounce any thing, but set a watch before our lippes, that they may hedge in our tongues from speaking euill of our brethren; and yet if we hap to slip in this, wee must keepe in our hands from executing what vnadvisedly we vttered. For first, we are so farre from being bound to detect them when their liues or bodies are sought for, as wee are to counsell them to hide them, as Eliab (1. Kings 17. 3.) was counsellled of the Lord to hide himselfe. So did Jonathan (1. Sam. 20. 42.) make his fathers fury knowen to Dauid that hee might hide himselfe, and therefore cursed be the Ziphims, 1. Sam. 23. 20. that promised Saul to deliuer Dauid into his hands, and cursed be Irrijah, Ier. 37. 13. that staid Jeremy, and brought him to the Princes as a fugitiue when hee was going to the land of Benjamin. Secondly, if they cannot hide themselves, wee must doe it for them. So did Obadiab (1. Kin. 18. 13.) in the court of Ahab hide a hundred Prophets from the cruelty of Iesabel. So did Rahab, Iosh. 2. 1. in great zeale to God and loue to his seruants, hide the spies with the danger of her owne life. So did the Disciples, Act. 9. 21. let downe Paul in a basket, when his life was sought for by the Inquisition. Thirdly, if they be apprehended we must be so farre from accuting them, as we must countenance and defend them to our powers. So did Ebedmelech, Ier. 38. 9. when he came to the King in the gate, and told him Jeremy had wrong to be imprisoned: and so did Jonathan, 1. Sam. 20. 32. defend Da-

and against his owne father, for it is not the commandement of a King that ought to make vs giue vp the sonnes of God into their hands : nay the Lord himselfe in this place teacheth vs otherwise, that would not suffer these Wise-men to obey Herod, whereby the babe might haue bene exposed to his butchery.

66-3.

Lastly, in the departure of these Wise-men, obserue that God both in the beginning and in the end will blesse all courses and actions enterprised and done in his feare and in a holy obedience, as he did blesse and prosper the journey of these Wise-men, giuing them both a direction which way to come to Ierusalem, and which way to goe from Bethlem : which must make vs if we expect any blessed successe of that we vndertake, not to begin but with the warrant of a good conscience, nor to proceed but with a reuerent and resolute obedience as to the commandement of God, and as aiming at the aduancement and promotion of his glory, and the furtherance of his seruice.

MATH. chap. 2. Vers. 13, 14, 15.

13. After their departure, behold the Angell of the Lord appeareth to Ioseph in a dreame, saying, Arise and take the babe and his mother and flie into Egypt, and be there till I bring thee word, for Herod will seeke the babe to kill him.
14. So he arose and tooke the babe and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt :
15. And was there vnto the death of Herod, that that might bee fulfilled which is spoken of the Lord by the Prophet, saying: Out of Egypt haue I called my Sonne.

HE Euangelist as before hee shewed the glorious and blessed beginnings of our Saviours birth, who though borne in batenesse, had testimony giuen him of his maiesty by the starre in heauen, and in earth by the Wise-men of Persia: so now he letteth downe a matter of great discomfort, that this same babe, euen from his cradle, should begin to be crucified in himselfe and his members. Wherein generally there be three points set downe: first, the commandement of the Angell: secondly, the obedience of Ioseph: thirdly, the fulfilling of a prophesie.

In the commandement consider, first the circumstance of the time, that it was after the departure of the Wise-men: how long after is not certainly set downe: but it is probable and likely, that it was not till Mary had recovered the weaknes of her child-birth. Secondly, heerein consider the substance of the message, containing these foure things: first, that Ioseph must take the babe and his mother, hee doth not say his wife, for the Angell had before satisfied him for that matter. Secondly, the place whither he must goe: to Egypt, the worst of all other. Thirdly, the time he should stay there, set downe indefinitely, till hee was called away. Fourthly, a reason of this commandement, expressed to releue the weaknesse of Ioseph, though the commandement it selfe had been sufficient, because Herod sought to destroy the child.

Out of the first circumstance of the time: learne, that God giueth and alloweth no long time of peace and truce to his seruants, whom he will make mirrors of patience, but hee sendeth one trouble in the necke of another, that though the life of man be but as a tale told, yet the estate of a Christian soule hath many fractions and interruptions, before it can passe like the weauers shuttle through the web: so as the breathing time which they haue had, is but to enable them to further strength for that which succedeth. Heere being in this place set downe, how the Lord mingled the sweetnesse of the gifts brought to this babe by the men of Persia, with the bitternesse of an immediate persecution curion by the hand of Herod the King, to teach Ioseph, and in him all of vs, that when we haue had honour, together with the profession of the Gospell, we may not flatter and perswade our selues of the continuance of this, but bee armed to stand to the truth, and to the acknowledgement of the Lord Iesus, both in honour and dishonour. For Mary as she had this comfort to see the babe her sonne honoured and worshipped of these Wisemen, so had she this sorrow and discomfort mixed therewithall, in the night to trusse vp her furniture and to flie. Thus fared it with her sonne at another time, who (Mat. 21. 8.) comming riding on the Sabbath to Hierusalem, had acclamations and cries of the people, Hosanna to the Sonne of David, blessed be he that commeth in the name of the Lord: yea had the greatest glory that euer happened to any earthly Prince, to haue garments strawed in the way for him to tread on, thereby the more royally to entertaine him: yet after all this within fīue daies he is exclaīmed on, and tumultuously they crie, Crucifie him, crucifie him, his blond be upon vs and our children. To teach vs, that neither prosperity puffe vs vp, nor aduersity cast vs downe: knowing that it is the Lords will and pleasure, that there should be an interchangeable course of these things. As Simeon prophesied (Luk. 2. 35.) that a sword should pierce Maries soule, which euen now was fulfilled, being commanded to take her heeles: to teach her, that she should not expect any great state in this life, though she was the mother of the King of glory, but that euen shee should be fashioned after her owne Sonne, to come to a crowne by the crosse. Heere then is condemned the daintinesse of those professors, that will waite no longer at the Lords table, then they may be fed from his trencher, and which doe loue the practise of the Gospell onely for the peace of the Gospell. For Ioseph may not bee discouraged; though he bee driuen to flie with the Lord of life in his armes: but heereby may he be secured of safety, hauing his Sauour with him. And on this may we all rest, that if wee bee driuen to flight for the cause of Christ, our feet shall but leade vs to the wings of Christ, where we shall be cherished, euen in Egypt, a place of darknesse, and disdain to the truth of God.

For the second circumstance, which is the place whither they must flie: it cannot be thought, but Ioseph was distracted and wearied with sundry cogitations, yea and perplexed with deepe sorrowes, to see that this King of glorie must bee forced to flie from the cruelty of Herod, and to such a place as was alwaies an en. my to the Church of God. Howbeit, heerein wee may obserue, how sometimes the Lord sheweth but a sparkle and portion of his power in the deliuey of his seruants, though at other times hee openly sheweth himselfe for their protection in great glorie and maiesty: as in the case of Fliah (2. King. 1. 9.) 1 when the souldiers came to him and scofed him, saying: Man of God come downe: presently the arme of God was made naked, and fire came downe and consumed them. So did the Lord 2 deale with Elisha, (2. King. 6. 18.) who hauing discovered the secrets spoken in the King of Syria's chamber, the King in indignation sends foorth against one man, having but Gebezi to wait on him, an hoast of armed men to compasse the place where hee was, and when they came, thinking to haue caught him, they were smitten with sudden blindness, and Elisha in a holy zeale of Gods glory, leadeth them to a city, where but for him they had bene all slaine. So Daniel (chap. 6. 7. 22.) he is put into the 3 Lions denne, sealed with the Kings owne signet, as escape out he could not: which since it is so, the mouths of the Lions are shut that they cannot hurt him, heere is maiesty: but now Iesus his owne sonne he must flie, and shall not be rescued by any immediate hand of his Father, heere is a diuerse dispensation. The 4 children in the fire (Dan. 3. 22.) though it consumed them that cast them in, yet doe not their cloaths so much as smell of it: and shall wee thinke that the hand of the Lord was now shortned, or his power abated, that hee could not haue wrought as mightily for the safety of his owne sonne? God forbid. Peter we see 5 is cast into the gaole (Act. 12. 8.) but the Angell of the Lord openeth the doore, and bids him preach with confidence: and when hee was condemned the next day to bee executed, lying bound with two great chaines, the Angell with one blow vnlooseth them both, bringeth him through the souldiers, and an iron gate flieth open to giue him passage. So Paul (Act. 16. 26.) he 6 is deliuered by an earth-quake that shakes the prison, and the gouernours are faine to intreat him to go foorth. Thus can the praier of Gods seruants obtaine the ministry of Angels, to disarm the power of Sathan, and to frustrate the malice of the wicked. Howbeit on the other side, how the Lord suffereth as it were his power to bee blasted vnder a wonderfull kind of infirmity, wee haue equall examples in the Scripture. We see Elish (1. King. 19. 3.) that before could command fire from heauen, must now flie from the face of Iezabel, and is driuen to such an exigent, that hee cries out vnto the Lord euen to take away his life. So the spies that came to see Iericho, (Iosh. 2. 4.) and were sent from Ioshua the Lieutenant of God, to take possession of the land of Canaan, so hardly escape they with their liues, that a harlot is faine to make a lye to saue them, and to couer them with the stalkes of flaxe that they may not bee found. Paul that had before an earth-quake to vnshackle him, hath at another time (Act. 9. 25.) no other way to preferue himselfe, but by being let downe in a basket. So Jeremy to flesh and blood is most baseiy deliuered; for being cast into the dungeon, Ebed-melech (Ier. 38. 11.) obtaineth of the King to bring him out, and then with a company of ragges and old worne clouts bound together, as with a cord he draweth him foorth, and is glad to send him away. So fared it with David, (1. Sam. 19. 12. 13.) for Michol perceiuing he could hardly escape the fury of Saul, first shee lets him downe at a window, and then shee puts an image in the bed, as if some sicke man had bene there. And thus did the Lord prouide for his sonne after the basest manner, that his parents must take their heeles to preferue his life: he could haue sent a kind of madnes on Herod, as he did on Nebuchadnezzar, (Dan. 4. 29.) and haue spoiled him of all his kingly royaltie, and seuered him from the company of men, and made him feed with beasts: he could haue made his Angell haue strucke him, as hee did his nephew, (Act. 12. 23.) or haue raised vp his sonnes to haue slaine him, as he did to Senaberib: or haue cauted him to haue hanged himselfe in a desperation of the kingdome: hee could haue astonished them when they had come to kill him, as hee did (Iosh. 18. 5.) when they came to take him, that they should haue haue killed another, as did the Madianites, Judg. 7. 21. But it was the will and pleasure of the Father, that he should beginne his life in misery, as he should end it in ignominy, and hee worketh not by miracles for the deliury of his Sonne. For first as yet there was no time for the manifestation of miracles, for then he might haue beene thought not to haue beene true man. Secondly, it was to fulfill a prophesie, that out of Egypt his Sonne might be called, intending heerein a proportion betweene the head and the members: that as the Israelites were caried out of Egypt, (Exod. 12. 31.) so also should Christ the head of his Church be. Thirdly, in this was praefigured the casting away of the Iewes, and the calling and cariage of the Gospell among the Gentiles. Fourthly, that another prophesie might be fulfilled, that for his sake should the children of Bethlem bee slaine. Fifthly, that the cruelty of Herod by this meanes might bee the more disappointed. Sixtly, to geue warrant to vs, that in the time of danger and persecution, wee may lawfully flie. Seuenthly, that we may not thinke the crosse too base for vs, since the Lord of glory did thus beare it.

Further, it is wonderfull to seee, that the Lord will haue his Sonne thrust out of Iuda, and from among the Iewes, to whom specially hee was promised, and whom principally hee should saue, and to bee entertained in Egypt, a place of all abominations, and which hated God. But thus did the Lord aduance Joseph in Egypt, (Gen. 41. 40.) when his brethren would haue killed him in Israel, and thus did he prouide for Daniel in Babylon, (Dan. 6. 3.) where diuels were worshipped, and aduanced him to bee the second person in the kingdome. Achis King of the Philistims (1. Sam. 21. 10.) receiued David when Saul persecuted him. Elijah when he could not be fed in Israel, (1. King. 17. 15.) is cherished by a poore widow of Sarepta in Sydon an heathenish country. And Jeremy the Prophet (Ier. 39. 12.) is better entertained by Nebuchadnezzar King of Babel, then by Zedechia the Priest. Thus can the Lord stirre vp the hearts of the heathen, to bee better to his seruants then their owne brethren, and that Saul shall prophesie when he intendeth to persecute, (1. Sam. 19. 24.) to comfort vs, that euen our greatest enemies shall nourish vs, if we be cast out of our country for the profession of the Lord Iesus; yea Egypt shall be a resting place for Ioseph if the babe be with him, though it be grieuous and tedious to Ioseph to want the sacrifices, and to lose the comfort of hearing the law of God expounded. And when Paul can haue no preaching place at Hierusalem the Citie of God, then shall hee preach two yeeres without contradiction in Rome, Act. 28. 30. a place of all pertecution.

3. For the third circumstance, how long Christ should stay in Egypt: consider first, that Ioseph is heereby assured he shall not stay euer, which doth somewhat ease and refresh his anguished soule: for when he considered the journey hee was to take was tedious, the place whither he was to flee barbarous, the tenderesse of the child he must take with him, that hee must be absent from the publike exercises of religion, that his dispatch was so sudden, as he had no time to take his leaue of the godly of Hierusalem, no doubt his heart was much astonished, and his spirits of life much appalled: therefore to comfort him, the Lord bids him stay till he calleth him: implying, that there shall bee a time wherein he shall be deliuered. In which we learne, that affliction shall not alway last, and that the rod shall not euer rest vpon the backe of the godly, but we shall haue beauty for ashes, the oile of gladnesse for the garment of heauinesse, and our captiuiety shall be like the Summer riuers, and they that goe foorth with a little seed shall come home with full sheaues. Heere also note, that by saying: he must not come, but abide there till the Lord doe call him, that it is as much as to haue said: Come not of thy selfe, no not vpon any exigent or streights whatsoever, though thou be neuer so villanously intreated: and by setting downe the time of his abode indefinitely, he doth it to trie his obedience, that he may with patience attend the Lords pleasure. Wherby we learne, that we must not prefix any set time vnto the Lord, how long he shall exercise vs vnder the crosse: Ioseph must stay in Egypt till he be called foorth: and let this be Iosephs hope, in Egypt hee shall not alwaies be, but he shall returne againe to Hierusalem, and the scourge of the vngodly shall not alway claspe about the loines of the righteous.

Now for the fourth circumstance, which is the reason of the commandement. Learne first, how the Lord releueth our weaknesse, and tendreth our infirmitie, that though a bare commandement had bene sufficient for Ioseph to haue addressed himselfe for this journey: yet the Lord taketh pity vpon him, and will not tempt him aboue the measure of his faith, but fully satisfieth him, not onely commanding by authority, but euen perswading by reason, that he may obey with the greater cheerefulness: For Herod (saith hee) goeth about to destroy him. Otherwise did the Lord deale with Abraham, Gen. 22. 2. according to his strong faith, commanding that which flesh and bloud most abhorreth; and giueth no reason of it, namely, to bee the butcher to his owne sonne. But heerein shall our condemnation be the more iust, because the Lord hath giuen so many calles, and yeelded so many reasons why we should flie from sinne, and why we should turne to him; not for feare of any bodily destruction by the hand of Herod, but for feare of that spirituall thraldome, wherein Satan laboureth to keepe our soules, the Lord hauing discovered vnto vs early and late that hee is an old and a subtil enemie, armed not onely with darts, but euen with fiery darts to sting vs vnto damnation. Let vs therefore with Ioseph embrace the sweet kindnesse of the Lord, who mildly exhorteth vs to haste as it were out of Sodom; and let vs with him resolute without any fleshly discourse with our selues to bee gone at the first call; for his word is truth, and the danger he foretelleth will follow.

Secondly, heerein obserue, that the Lord knoweth the secrets of mens hearts: for Herod pretended adoring, but intended the murdering of the Lord Iesus. And his crafty and concealed purpose is heere named by the Angell, that we may feare to deale doubly with our owne soules, and may abhorre all hypocrisie, because the Lord casteth his eie not only vpon our actions, but watcheth euen ouer our very thoughts, and will in time discover them to our great shame. This is it Dauid praieth against, Psalme. 32. 3. that the Lord would free him from guile of spirit, not to deceiue himselfe, nor to dissemble his sinne: for his dealing doubly with God and his soule, in that his sinne with Ber-

Sheba, had so distempered his conscience, that vntill he had fully mastered his hypocrisie, he could finde no rest in his bones. Yet such is the simplicity, or rather the frowardnesse of our hearts, that though wee know all things to bee naked and open before God, we still runne on in hiding and cloaking of our sinnes, which is as ancient as our first fathers fall; who after the eating of the fruite forbidden, had his eyes opened indeed: that is, he then by experience perceiued, and by checke of conscience saw what euill he came into, and what good he had lost; being conuinced of his owne misery, he takes fig-leaves to couer his shame, a small couer to hide it from the eyes of God. Beside, marke his sottishnesse, he couereth but his shame, whereas the principall instruments of his wickednesse were his eyes, his eares, and his taste, and these were more filthy, for the other part actually had not sinned. Now when he heard the voice of God, the winde carrying to his eare such a voice as he had not heard before, then hee flieth among the trees, thinking if fig-leaves would not serue, yet the shadow of trees would sufficiently hide him; alwaies when the Lord summons vs, seeking shelter, that wee may not come to reprehension. And when this voice of the Lord could not bring him to a confession of his sinne, nor pierce his heart enough, the Lord calles him with his owne mouth: Why dost thou hide thy selfe? Marke now his wonderfull hypocrisie crept in so soone after his fall. Adam assigneth two causes of the hiding of himselfe, both false; and omitteth the true cause, that is his sinne: the one, because he heard God speake, which is most false; for he had heard him speake ofren before, and that most comfortably. The second cause, because he was naked: and yet this was no cause, for it is said in the text, they were both naked and were not ashamed. And by the malignity of his nature, in this hee secretly chargeth God to be the cause of his sinne, who in his originall creation had made him naked, whereas hee himselfe was the cause of the shame of his nakednesse. God goeth further with him: Hast thou not eaten of the fruit which I forbid thee? Now the Lord names the sinne: and in his answer marke his hypocrisie and guile of spirit worse then before: The woman (saith he) which thou gauest me, gaue me of the tree, and I did eate.

As if he should say, it was thine owne ordinance, so as he impudently faceth out the matter, and laies it vpon his wife, whereas it was his owne ambition and not her suggestion only that prouoked him to the sinne: and in the whole story yee shall not finde one word of confession. So the woman shee transfers from her selfe to the diuell the cause of her fall; the Serpent indeed blew the coles, but the fire was in her owne heart, and she would not confesse that shee abused her selfe to bee seduced by the Serpent: so as both of them felt the punishment of their sinne, but would not iudge of the cause of it in eating the forbidden fruit. By which examples, as by the naming of Herods sinne conceiued but in heart, and by the traducing forth of Adam for his sinne that brake foorth into his hands, we must learne to hedge in our thoughts, that they harbour not so much as an euill inclination: for sinne is of a forward brood and will soone bee hatcht, and though as it is Psalms. 50. 21. the Lord hold his peace, that is, forbear with patience for a time, whereby wee thinke him like our selues, that is as in the Hebrew, a good fellow like our selues, yet (saith the Lord) I will lay thy sinne before thee, that is, as it signifieth in the Hebrew, either set them in order before thee like dishes on the table, or write them in a role and make thee reade them in despiht.

Thirdly, in that it is saied, Herod will seeke to destroy him; it sheweth what hearts the wicked beare toward the godly, and what purpose they haue, but that it shall bee frustrate: for it is saied, Herod would kill him, not, he shall kill him. Thus though we be as sheepe appointed to the slaughter in the malice of the enemy, yet we are not so in the purpose of God. For the Dragon Reu. 12. 4. like a bloody mid-wife standeth ready to deuoure the child, whereof the Church should bee deliuered, but the Lord prospereth her in her trauell, and assumeth the child into heauen, that he may be free from the cruelty of the beast. Whereby we are taught every day to take vp our crosse: for if wee will liue godly in Christ, there is a necessity of persecution, and we must all suffer, either the sword of Esau, or the frumping of Ismael. And this may be our comfort, Herod may trauell with mischief, but he shall neuer bring it foorth: the Iewes may vow and sweare

^{1. King. 17. 3.} the death of Paul, but they shall be prevented. Iefabel may make hue and crie after Eliab, but the Lord himselfe shall hide him. ^{1. Reg. 19} What? did Herod thinke God to be an idoll, or to haue cast off all care of his Sonne? he knew by the Prophets that God had set him vp to raigne ouer his people, and yet he vainly thinkes that he is able by his power to disappoint the decree of God: which is the nature of all Atheists to challenge absolute dominion vpon the earth, thinking God to be shut vp in heauen: but he that sitteth there laugheth them to scorne: for Herod thought to haue had the life of the babe, but the babe had his when the measure of his sinnes were fulfilled.

^{2.} For the second generall point, which is the obedience of Ioseph, ^{Josephs obedience} learne how willingly he takes vp his crosse: he might haue thought himselfe a miserable man to haue married such a wife as he might not accompanie with, and the babe which was borne to be the cause of these vnseasonable troubles; for these no doubt were the suggestions of flesh and blood: but he laieth aside consulting with the old man, and fixeth his eie vpon God, and casteth his care vpon the highest, that as he had giuen the temptation, so he knew he would likewise giue the issue; like Abraham, Gen. 22. 8. who answered his sonne, saying, God will provide a sacrifice; and like this babe himselfe, who afterward in his conflict of death, Mark. 14. 36. though most tedious and grievous to the flesh, did yet submit himselfe to his fathers will. So as the obedience of Ioseph is here commended by this, that he presently dispatcheth, notwithstanding reasoning with the Angell, nor waiting for the comfort of the day; for cursed is he that doth the worke of the Lord negligently. He knew this babe was the Lord of glory, and that all the world could not murder him as yet, because he had a worke to doe for the King of heauen; yet seeing there is at this time no other doore of escape but flying, hee is neither negligent nor carelesse, but he accounteth all haste too little, and in the night trusseth vp all he had: whereby we may thinke he was exceeding poore, and maketh no delay. ^{o. 6. 2.} Where we learne, that though we be sure the Lord will defend vs, yet if we be in danger, and the Lord hath opened a window for our deliuerance, that we vse all possible dispatch. David was sure

Saul could not surprife him, becaufe the Lord had promifed him the kingdome; yet 1. Sam. 24. 1. he hideth himfelfe in caues, and flieth fro one place to another to auoid his fury, becaufe though he had Gods oth that he fhould be king, yet he would not tempt God by expofing himfelfe to danger. So Joseph though he had the babe of life in his hands, yet flies; which is a matter of no diftruff but of fingular obedience, becaufe he is willed fo to doe.

For the third point, which is the fulfilling of the prophesie. The Prophet Ofea, ch. 11. 1. after he had fet downe the finnes of the Israelites, and had brought in God threatning them with his iudgements, and with this iudgement as the greateft, that he would diftinguifh the light of Israel by taking away his fonne which was their glory, then hee is fent from God to comfort them againe after this fort, that although they had beene rebellious whom the Lord had chofen in his couenant, though they had not profited by his corrections, and though it might agree with the Lords iuftice to deprive them vtterly of his fonne, yet forasmuch as Israel is his childe, though he hath fent his fonne into Egypt, that thereby they might confider their owne vnworthinesie, yet for his meere mercy fake he will bring him forth againe, and reftore him vnto them. Where we learne firft, that though we breake our couenant with God, yet hee is faithfull that hath promifed, and will neuer breake his couenant with vs; for his thoughts be not like our thoughts, but he is the fame for euer: howbeit if the Lord do beare vs in his armes as he did Ephraim, Ofea 11. 3. and leade vs with the bands of loue, if he

Secondly, in this prophesie obserue, that there was neuer any thing fhewed fhould come to Christ which was bafe, but it was foretold before, that when it came it might not feeme strange, nor men might not be offended at it, as heere is foretold his flying into Egypt; and his baseness, that no man would vouchsafe to looke vpon him, was foretold by Esay, chap. 53. 2. So was it foretold, that not many mighty or noble should be called: for as S. Paul saith, 1. Cor. 2. 8. none of the Princes of the world haue knowen the wisdom of God, to the end we may not be offended with the base professors of the Gospell, but may be as S. Paul calleth them 1. Cor. 4. 10. fooles for Christ his sake. So was it foretold, that in the latter daies there should be scarce faith found vpon the earth, as S. Paul speaketh, 1. Tim. 4. 1. that we may not be discouraged with the profanenesse of the world, but that wee may labour to bee of the number of those fooles to whom the riches of the Gospell is reuealed, and in the company of those few whose lampes shall bee found burning, and whose faith shall be found grounded vpon the perswasion of Gods loue in his sonne.

MATH. chap. 2. Vers. 16, 17, 18,

16. Then Herod seeing that he was mocked of the Wise-men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth and slue all the male children that were in Bethlem and in all the coastes thereof, from two yeeres old and vnder, according to the time which he had diligently searched out of the Wise-men.
17. Then was that fulfilled which is spoken by the Prophet Ieremias, saying,
18. In Rhama was a voice heard, mourning and weeping, and great howling, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not bee comforted because they were not.

OW followeth the persecution it selfe ; the persuasion of the Angell being like a flash of lightning before a clap of thunder, wherein the Euangelist deliuereth three generall points : First, by what occasion Herod was so set on fire 1 and exasperate to beethinke himselfe of these murders, namely, because hee thought himselfe abused. Secondly, the execution of this massacre with the circumstances ; first of the place, it was in Bethlem and the townes adioyning to it : secondly of the persons, they were children of two yeeres old and vnder. Thirdly, the Euangelist noteth the fulfilling of 3 a prophesie anciently foretold, that this comming to passe they might know it was no small matter, and withall, that the sonne of God was sent not to raigne as a Monarch, but to be persecuted vnto blood.

For the first, Herod thought himselfe mocked, not that he was so, but onely deemed himselfe so. Where we learne, that Princes thinke them selues abused, and that disparagement is done to the state royall, if men will not be executioners of their bloody complots, and euen sell their soules for the effecting of their designs. Herod is mocked, because the Wise-men will not relate the certainty of Christs birth, that he may murder him : and Saul (1. Sam. 32. 17.) thinketh himselfe contemned, because his footmen would not slay the Priests of the Lord that had their hand with Dauid.

Secondly, in that he tearmeth it mockery : note that the wicked can father that vpon others whereof themselues are most guilty ; for the Wise-men they meant simply, but that they were interdifted of God, to returne to the court : but Herod he mocked with the Lord : for though hee knew that this new-borne King was to be set vp, and that hee must raigne in the hearts of men, yet in despite of God he thought either by policy to circumuent it, or by power to withstand the ordinance of the Lord, scorning at the Oracles of the Prophets, and complaining of cousinage, when himselfe would haue coufined the almighty.

like vnto Fimbria of Rome, who hauing dangerously wounded one, the next day entred an action against the party grieued, because hee had receiued but part of his blade into his bodie, and not all. And is it not strange, when Pharaoh shall call Moses hard hearted, when the Wolfe shall accuse the Lambe, the Serpent saie the Doue is too subtle, and Herod exclaime vpon the Wise men for mockerie, when himselfe nourished so foule a vice against the highest? No doubt he was wroth, but not simplie because the Wise men returned not, but for his owne sottishnesse, that hee had not sent some man with them to haue seene what had become of the babe. But thus when Princes make league and band themselues against the Lord, and contribute toward the affliction of his saints, hee insnareth them in their owne inuentions, and infatuateth their deuises, and destroieth the counsell of Achitophel, 2. Sam. 17. 14. for as the Psalmist saith, With the froward the Lord will deale frowardly.

Pfal. 18. 26.

For the second point, which is the execution of this butchery, we see, to the end that if it were possible he might haue the blood of the babe among the multitude, he spareth none, and the stories report, in this massacre was killed his owne sonne; whereupon Augustus the Emperour said in detestation of his cruelty, that he had rather be Herods hogge then his heire. By which we learne, that the diuell possessing the heart of a tyrant, makes him execute any thing tending to the maintenance of his state, though the nature of man abhorre it, as the effusion of blood, or though they be checked and amated by their owne hearts: for Herod knew if Christ were borne he must raigne, yet against his owne conscience he endeouours by counsell (if he be able) to deceiue, or by crueltie (if he be able) to supplant the decree of God. Thus did Pharaoh, Exod. 8. 4. seeke to crosse the commandement and purpose of the Lord in the deliery of his seruants, though by many immediate testimonies and wonders from heauen hee saw it as it were written on the walles, that the Israelites must depart. And thus did Saul seeke the life of David, though he was told by Samuel, 1. Sam. 15. 28. that the Lord the strength of Israel that could not lie, had rent the kingdome from him and giuen it to his neighbour.

Secondly

Secondly obserue hence, that when one way succeedeth not to these Atheists, then they straitly attempt another. Pharaoh at the first doth but exact further and greater labour of the Israelites, but after he dealeth with the Midwives, Exod. 1. 15. to kill them that should be borne: and after his malice, breaketh forth more fiercely into an edict or proclamation, vers. 22. that the male borne should be cast into the riuer. So Saul 2 confessing that he knew the Lord would establish the kingdome in the throne of Dauid, yet first he sought to insnare him by his daughter, 1. Sam. 18. 17. Onely (saith he) fight thou the battels of the Lord: and thou shalt haue my daughter: but after his hypocrisie is discovered, c. 19. 1. making solempne proclamation, Who haue I among all my souldiers that will do thus much for me to kill Dauid? So as he that could spare Agag would pierce Dauid. So Herod 3 when he saw he was preuented of his first purpose, by the not returning of the Wise men, he still travelleth with the same mischief: and whereas before hee sought but the life of the babe onely, now he is so enraged, as he doubleth his crueltie, and will haue the life of many innocent babes: such a fire is sinne, to double and increase the heate by burning: and the deferring of their cursed attempts, which should be as water to quench them, is as oile to inflame them: this being wrought by the malice of the diuell, who throweth in fresh poison into our hearts, that if wee bee preuented in our resolution of murdering the Lord Iesus, we will be like the Dragon, to send forth whole foulds Reu. 12. 12. of waters out of our mouthes to drowne and destroy his members.

Thirdly obserue, that there is no edict or proclamation so cruell or execrable against Gods Saints, which some wicked men will not execute at their Princes commandement. If Iesabel would haue Naboths vineyard, and cannot obtaine it without his life, 1. King. 21. 11. she shall haue gouernors to serue her turne, that will soone follow her cursed counsell. When no man 2 will tall vpon the Priests at the words of Saul, 1. Sam. 22. 17. then will Doeg take the sword and do it: and Herod heere can no 3 sooner mention a murder, but his seruants will execute it. Where further consider, that if hell be prepared for the commander, so

obf. 3.

so is it likewise for the executioner, though his act bee warranted by authority. Is it in the power of the Prince to bring in a religion against God, or may they doe what they will? God forbid. If the Prince should command mee to burne the Bible, I ought not to doe it; for a thing is not of God because the commands it, but because it is of God therefore ought theee to command it. Cambises king of Persia inflamed with incest, consulteth with his Wite-men whether he may lawfully mary his sister: they answer, they finde no such law to warrant it; but they finde another law, that the King of Persia is without all law. And thus doe Princes counsellors feed them in their humors, nodding at whatsoeuer Augustus will haue done. And euen so miserable are these times, that men doe wait at their Princes mouthes, and performe their decrees, not scanning whether they be grounded vpon the law of God, which ought to bee the rule whereat Princes should leuell their commandements, and by which subiects should square their obedience. For it is not enough to slay Amnon (2. Sam. 13. 29.) at Absoloms commandement: neither shall Rahabeketh excuse himselfe (Esay 36. 16.) for railing on the liuing God, though he had the warrant of the King of Asshur to doe it; but in these and such like sinnes they hazard and aduenture their owne soules: therefore let euery of vs keepe the ground that Balaam at first stood vpon, Numb. 24. 13. not for a house full of gold to passe the commandment of the Lord; yet I doe not say rebell, but obey not. Let Saul himselfe fall vpon the Priests if he will haue them slaine, and let not vs assist him. Let Iesabel her selfe sit in iudgement vpon Naboth, but let not vs condemne him: we are bound to do good to the saints of God, much lesse to persecute them. And it is said in the Gospell, hee that clotheth a poore prisoner, clotheth the Lord Iesus. Now what shall we say then of him that standeth vp like Tertullus against Paul, Act. 24. 5. to plead against him, and to reproch him with the name of a pestilent and seditious fellow? For if they shall bee condemned that haue not ministred to the necessity of the saints, but haue been ashamed of their bands: If Diacs shall hang in hell for not refreshing Lazarus at his gate, what shall become of them that take the bread from Lazarus, and put Paul into

Mat. 35. 36.

Luke 16. 25.

into bands, or else enforce crimes against him to retaine him in bands? Looke Judg. 5. 23. Cursed be Meroz, because they helped not the Lord, nor stood in defence of his truth. A double curse then shall light vpon them that oppose themselves against the truth. Obediah against the expresse edict of Iezabel, (1. King. 18. 4.) hideth the Prophets, and Rahab (Iosh. 2. 3.) venturith her life to preserve the spies. And what better spies can there bee then Preachers, which stand in the gap betweene God and vs, as did Moses: which watch over the foules of the people, and shew vs the way to heaven? Jonathan being often incited by his father to kill David, (1. Sam. 19. 2.) protecteth Dauids innocencie, though Saul perswaded him that Dauids glorie could not bee without Jonathans ruine, and would not be drawne to doe it. And if hee would not compasse such a mischief at the commandement of Saul, which had a threefold force in it: first, as proceeding from his Father: secondly, from his Soueraigne: thirdly, being ioyned with the temptation of a kingdome: much lesse ought we to gratifie the State with the affliction of Gods Saints: for we must rather (Act. 4. 19.) obey God then man; yet disobey not the Prince: for his commandement standeth on these two feet, either to doe the thing, or to sustaine the punishment for not doing it.

Exod. 17. 13.
Psal. 106 23.

Fourthly obserue, that as soone as Christ is borne there is trouble and commotion, ciuill and forren warres, yet is not Christ the cause of it, but the wickednesse and peruersenesse of Herods heart: for righteousnesse must not yeeld to iniquity, and Christ must be borne, and being borne must raigne, though the diuell rage, and the world swell neuer so much. Certaine it is, no Gospell teacheth so much peace as this of Christs: for it teacheth peace betweene God and man, betweene man and man, yea betweene man and his inward soule, and maketh the wolues to become lambes, and the Lyon to lodge with the Beare. But Herod would haue the Gospell abolished, and Christ murdered, which cannot be. Shall Dagon (1. Sam. 5. 3.) yeeld to the Arke, or the Arke to Dagon? Shall the ten Tribes go to Iuda, or Iuda to them? Ishboseth to David, (2. Sam. 2. 16.) or David to him? Herod loues not Christ, therefore hee murders the children,

obf. 4.

den, and David especially being king, must not yeeld to Sauls house, nor Iuda goe to the ten tribes, nor Christ giue place to Herod: but if his Crowne cannot stand with the gouernment of Christ, well may he harbour murder in his thought against him, but iudgement shall fall on his owne head: for God will watch ouer his owne sonne, and fight for his owne truth. So as where religion hath bene granted by Parliament, and suppressed by priuate commandement, there may the subiects stand on the part defensue to ward the blow, being smitten: but if it hath not bene established by publike authority, then may they not take vp armes to set it vp.

065. 5.

Out of the murder it selfe gather, that though there be many flaine, yet Christ escapeth: and that in the greatest persecution, yet *Christ*s religion shall neuer bee abolished. For heere is great bloudshed, yet Christ liueth; great persecution, yet the Gospell flourisheth. When Iezabel thought she had had her hands full of bloud, and that she had rooted out all the Lords Prophets, yea and when visibly there was no face at all to be seene, so as Eliab thought himselfe onely to be left, then the Lord (1. King. 19. 18.) reserued seuenthousand to himselfe, that had not bowed their knees to Baal. And when by scattering the sheepe and smiting the shepheard, the diuell thought himselfe flush, and that by *Christ*s sleepe in the earth, he had vtterly stung him to destruction, then was his resurrection most glorious, and then did the Churches of God increase daily. For such is the nature of the Gospell, that the more it is troden downe, the higher it riseth; the more it is maligned, the broader it spreadeth; and when it seemeth to be dead, then is there most life in it.

For the third point, which is the prophesie, Jeremy (chap. 31. 15.) to declare the greatnesse of *God*s mercy in the deliury of the Iewes, sheweth them, that they were like to the Beniamites or Israelites, that is, vtterly destroyed and caried away, in-somuch, that if Rabel the mother of Beniamin, could haue risen againe to seeke for her children, shee might haue wept for want of them, but she should haue found none remaining. This doth the holy Ghost bring in heere as a butchery foretold, to the end that none might either wonder or be offended at it: for it

it might haue beene said : Is this the consolation of Israel ? nay, he is the discomfort and destruction of Israel, his birth hauing kindled such a fire as neuer was the like before, leauing so many sad hearts for their lost children. And how may we hope he shall be our Saviour, when his beginning is with this blood ? And the more to increase the cruelty of it, the holy Ghost speaketh excessively, bringing in Rachel dead many yeares before, howling and wringing her hands at the rufull spectacle of this bloody tragedy, as if the calamitie of the liuing, might seeme to touch and affect the dead. That therefore this might not seeme strange, the spirit of the Lord recorded it long before, that when it came to passe they might digest it, as a thing foreseene in the wisdom of God necessary to fall out.

MATH. chap. 2. Vers. 19, 20, 21, 22, 23.

19. And when Herod was dead, behold, an Angell of the Lord appeareth in a dreame to Ioseph in Egypt :
20. Saying, Arise, and take the babe and his mother, and goe into the land of Israel : for they are dead which sought the babes life.
21. Then he rose up and tooke the babe and his mother, and came into the land of Israel.
22. But when he heard that Archilaus did raigne in Iuda, in stead of his father Herod, he was afraid to goe thither : yet after he was warned of God in a dreame, he turned aside into the parts of Galiley,
23. And went and dwelt in a citie called Nazareth, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Prophets, which was, that he should be called a Nazarise.

NOW

OW followeth the returne of Iesus out of Egypt, after the cruelty executed by Herod vpon the children, and the iudgement of God manifested on Herod, striking him with death. In which words there bee foure generall points to be considered; first, the commandement of the

- 1 Lord by the message of an Angell vnto Ioseph, as the foster-father of this babe, whereby he is aduertised to returne, hauing securitie giuen him that he need not doubt, namely that Herod and the rest were dead which sought the life of Christ. Secondly,
- 2 the obedience of Ioseph, turning neither to the right hand nor to the left; but as he staid till hee was called, so he staid not when hee was called. Thirdly,
- 3 in what feare Ioseph stood, finding such troubles in Iudæa, and into what perturbation of minde he was cast when he heard that Archilauus raigned, knowing him to be a Cockatrice, hatched out of a Serpenss egge, and how the Lord sent an Angell to releue him in this perplexity. Fourthly,
- 4 how Ioseph minding no such matter by his turning into Galile, there is an ancient Oracle fulfilled, that this babe should bee called a Nazarit.

Out of the first learne the faithfulness of Gods promises, that he is a God of his word: for in this is his first promise accomplished, as appeareth now by the effect, that he would call his sonne out of Egypt, and that the same Angell that brought the heauy tidings vnto Ioseph of his flight from Bethlem into Egypt, the same Angell brings him this glad tidings of his returne from thence into the land of Israel. And thus must wee consider of all the promises of God; as of his couenant with Noah, Genes. 9. 11. that the world shall no more bee drowned; his promise to Israel, that they shall be his chosen: for howsoeuer the Lord withdrawes his fauour from his saints for a time, yet at the last he will release them, and in compassion will looke vpon their afflictions. And well may the mountaines fall, and the course of nature change, but Gods promise shall neuer faile: for as Dauid saith, Psalme 34. though their tribulations bee many, yet the Lord will deliuer them out of all.

And though this pregnant security of returning be not expressly giuen to euery prisoner as it was heere to Ioseph, yet all that feare God haue this to comfort them, that hee hath giuen his word hee will make them blessed (Mat. 5. 4.) and that as hee hath drawne them to the profession of his name, so hee will neuer leaue them till hee haue brought them to the possession of his glory: and that whether they die in Egypt vnder the fornace of affliction, or come forth of Egypt, all shall worke for their saluation. And this his wisdome hath not onely disposed of the generall end which is his glory, but of the meanes also how hee will bring euery one of vs to his kingdome. And though it be thorow the riuers of waters, what skilleth it if wee haue the crowne at last? The same hand that woundeth shall bind vp the wound againe, and the same hand that limiteth shall heale, and the same God that layed vs before in the ashes shall giue vs oile to make our faces cheerfull, & by a warrant from heauen discharge Peter of his chains, when in the eie of his enemies he stands condemned, and make Ioseph returne out of that barbarous nation Egypt wherein God was so much dishonored, to exercise himselfe in the seruice of God in Galile. And though wee haue no certaine promise of this, yet let vs be affected like Dauid, who wandring (2. Sam. 15. 25.) through the mountaines in great distresse, his grieffe being increased becaule hee was banished by his owne sonne, and supplanted by the subtilty of Achistophel his chiefe counsellor, when he saw he could not haue the Arke with him, bids it should be caried againe into Ierusalem, saying, If I haue found fauour in Gods sight he will bring me thither againe, but if hee haue no delight in me, let him doe as seemeth best to him: for either in the time of our trouble we shall be gathered to God in peace, or else he will let vs see his goodnesse in the light of the liuing.

Iob. 5. 18.

Psal. 104. 15.
Act. 12. 8.

Psal. 56. 13.

Now the cause why it is safe for Ioseph to returne, is, because Herod is dead: where we learne to our comfort, that tyrants shal not liue euer, and when they perish and fallaway, then is the Church deliuered and comforted; for this death of his was no doubt as cheerefull to Anna and Simeon at Ierusalem, as to Ioseph and Mary in Egypt; and Rachel that before was brought in weeping over the innocent blood of the poore children, as if the graue had felt such barbarous and beastly cruelty, may now be thought to breake forth into exceeding ioy, that such a rakehell was taken away as Herod was, that sought the life of Christ. How we ought to bee affected at the fall of the wicked, appeareth Psalm. 52. where although Doeg had got great authority with Saul, so as he boasted in his power, & trusted in the strength of his malice, his tongue being as the sharpe razor alwaies cutting, or as the coales of iuniper, alwaies raising contention against the Saints, yet the Lord shall destroy him: and though hee thought to haue built his nest in the heavens, yet shall the Lord cast him downe, and the righteous (saith he) shall see it and reioyce, (the wicked being blind, neuer beholding the iudgements of God) and they shall laugh, not in reuenge, but to see Gods mercy in taking part with the godly. And not onely the righteous shall ioy at this, but as Iob. 20, 26. saith, The tongue of the viper shall slay them, that is, the very wicked shall curse them: for Princes that want religion soone slip into tyranny, and wanting conscience to moderate their desires, and affection to looke vpon their subiects, they will soone resemble Rehoboam, 1. Kings 12. 10. in making the yoake heauy, and correcting them with Scorpions.

Further from hence learne, that God doth often so disappoint the plots and purposes of cruell tyrants, that when they intend to execute others, they die first themselues, and sometime Haman (Ester 7. 10.) is hanged on his owne gallows that he prepared for Mordecai. Herod had thought to haue killed Christ, but he is faine to take the paines to die himselfe. If Moses come any more into Pharaohs sight he shall surely die, Exod. 10. 28. Well, Moses will see his face no more, but hee shall behold his destruction (Exod. 14. 28.) in the red sea. How oft did Saul thinke and how sore did he thirt for the life of Dauid, yet he misseth of his purpose, and slaieth himselfe (1. Sam. 31. 4.) to make way for Dauid to the kingdome. And such shall be the successe of all that conspire against the Lord and his Christ, to fall into the pit which themselues haue digged, and to make the wicked a rancome for the godly.

For the maner of Herods death, though it be silenced by the Evangelist, yet the Ecclesiasticall stories make mention of it, as Iosephus and Eusebius, which though it command not the conscience to beleue, yet the more to magnifie the Lord, it is not vnfit to consider it. He had a great swelling in his legs, wondrous rottennesse in his whole flesh, his breath did so stinke as he could not be accompanied with, he had such a disease in his parts of shame, as wormes did crawl about them, he was greedy of meat, hauing the appetite of a dogge not to be satisfied: his whole race was accursed after him, & hauing eight children, within an hundred yeeres there was not any of their loines left. Archilaus heere spoken of was banished to Vienna, and there died a beggar. Antypas that beheaded Iohn Baptist, and whom Christ called Foxe Luke 13. 32. was banished to Lions in France, and there died a most miserable abiect. Agrippa the son of Aristobulus the sonne of this Herod, an insolent and proud man, was eaten vp with lice most shamefully, Act. 12. 23. The sonne of this Agrippa that would haue put Peter to death, liuing till the destruction of Ierusalem, there had his end. Thus did the wrath of God rest vpon the familie of this cruell persecutor of Gods Church, who was blasted in himselfe and his posteritie. And thus did the Lord (1. Kings 14. 10.) sweepe away the house of Ieroboam as a man sweepeth away dung, till it bee all gone: and (1. King. 21. 21.) did cut off the posteritie of Ahab, for their prouocations wherewith they had prouoked him; to teach vs to feare and tremble before his face: and if we will be blessed in our selues and in the fruit of our bodie, to looke vnto our paths, that we lay not our hands to wickednesse.

Note further, that we are not to feare what Princes can doe vnto vs, for they liue no longer then they haue some seruice to doe for Gods glorie, as it is said Col. 1. 16. All things are in Christ and for Christ. And Saul could not (Acts 9. 1.) breath out threatenings against the Church of God, had not the Lord some speciall purpose in it, either for the exercising of his Saints, or the waiting for his owne repentance. Neither could Pharaoh so long laie his rodde vpon the Israelites, were it not (as S. Paul saith, Rom. 9. 17.) that the Lord stirred him vp to shew his power in him. For now when Herod had executed the children, whereby God is glorified in their innocent death, and his owne malice fully manifested, then he dieth himselfe: which may teach vs patience against the time of trouble, knowing that the wicked are but as the weapons of the Lord, to set an edge on our affections, which otherwise would creepe vpon the earth, and make vs forget our maker; whereas by this meanes we oft times cast our eye on our deliuerer which is in heauen.

Further learne, that though tyrants appoint vs as sheepe to the slaughter, and in the malice of their hearts doe purpose to fleece vs, yet sometime the butcher wanteth his knife, and the sheepe in the shambles do escape; therefore we need not to be afraid of them that haue not so much power as to kill the bodie, vnlesse the Lord giue vs vp into their hands, as Dauid saith, Psal. 7. 12. speaking of the wicked, hee hath bent his bow and spread his net, and hath conceiued mischiefe, but shall bring forth vanitie, and the euill intended shall fall vpon his owne hairy scalpe. For the diuell that is stronger then man, yea that armeth the malice of men, cannot stretch forth his hand vpon the goods of Iob, Iob. 1. 12. much lesse touch his body, without the permission of the Almighty. Herod shall die and Christ shall escape, if not, the worst that flesh and bloud can doe, is but to send vs with the children of Bethlem into heauen: for the Lord is our shield, and we are as neare & deare vnto him as the apple of his eye, yea he is our secret place, and vnder his shadow we can not but be safe.

For the second point, containing the obedience of Ioseph: by his example we learne not to runne before Gods promises, but patiently to waite vpon them: for as hee is alwaies a sure deliuerer of his people, so then especially when his mouth hath spoken it: and vpon this Ioseph relied, not stirring till he was called. Moses was sure to bring the people of Israel out of Egypt, Exod. 3. 10. yet hee must staie for it fortie yeeres; as if the Lord had forgotten to what purpose hee had appointed him. Noah, at the Lords commandement entred into the Arke, and commeth not forth till by the same commandement (Gen. 8. 16.) he was called forth, though by the not returning of the Doue he knew the

the waters were abated from the earth. David was sure to be king after Saul, yet he waited so long, as in his haste he said: All men are liars, thinking that Samuel had abused him, to tell him hee should be King; which we must beware of: for the cause why the Lord staieeth many times, is, because his seruants crie not out vnto him, nor presse him with importunity, as (Luk. 18. 5.) the widow did the Iudge: or for that our curst hearts will not come downe, so as he is faine to vse the wicked as rods to chastise and humble vs.

Heere also learne, that as Christ commeth out of Egypt, so the Lord draweth the Gospell out of the fire, and giueth it some Sun-shine out of the darkest persecution, yea and that as it is said, Act. 12. 24. in the time of the most ambitious and Lordly tyrants, it shall grow and multiply exceedingly: for so it hath pleased God, that the hottest persecutors (as was S. Paul) haue embraced it, and that kings haue submitted their scepters to the foolishnesse of preaching Which noteth vnto vs, that the ignominy that lighteth vpon the crosse, is not nor ought to be any occasion to disswade vs from it: for the proceeding of Christs kingdome is about nature, and the perswading to it is cleane contrary to the custome of the world. For saith Cyrus, if a Lacedæmonian will serue mee, if hee bee a foot-man, I will make him an horse-man; if a horse-man, I will giue him a Chariot; if hee haue a Chariot, I will giue him a Castle; if a Castle, a Citie; and he shall receiue his gold not by tale, but by waite. But now in the groweth and age of a Christian it fareth otherwise: for this is the condition of the Lords followers: to be betrayed of their owne fathers, and to be entangled with sundry afflictions, to bee banished into Egypt, and if thou beest called backe againe, yet neuer to haue but a steppe betweene thee and death, as David saith, 1. Sam. 20. 3. But for all this, we may not be dismayed, for in all these wee shall bee more then conquerours through Christ.

The third point is, in what state Ioseph found all things in Iudæa; not quiet, but still troublesome: where we see how God exerciseth the faith and patience of this his seruant, shewing heerein as in a glasse, the state and condition of the godly, how one trouble succeedeth another, as if they were thornes folded one within the other. Ioseph long expected his deliuerie out of Egypt, and now in his returne he is as much grieued at the raigne of Archilaus, as he was comforted at the death of Herod; which the Lord doth not to presse him downe, but to giue him the greater occasion to praise his name in the experience of his many deliuerances. As Iob saith: Out of six troubles the Lord will free me, and the seuenth shall neuer come neere me. And this is the vse which all Gods children ought to make of the varietie of their dangers, the more to strengthen and confirme their hope, that Gods hands shall euer be stretched forth to send them deliuerance from his tabernacle, as they were to Dauid, Psal. 32. 6. and as they be in this place to Ioseph, who riddeth him likewise out of this second feare.

obf. 2.

Heere also we learne, not to be negligent and secure, when the Lord hath taken awaie one enemy of his Church, (for though the principall Doeg be gone, that through flatterie abused Saul) and that none is like to succeed him that shall haue such grace with the king; yet still to keepe vs awake, after Herods death comes Archilaus, that beareth the same heart and the same affection that Herod did, though he hath not the same power, and though this be some comfort, that hee shall neuer be crowned. And thus did the Lord subiect his people still vnder the hand of some succeeding Pharaoh, that they might cast vp their hearts to him, and bewaile their wants, and powre forth their soules vnto the Almighty. And thus shall the Forrest neuer be without some Bore or other that would destroy the vine: but if we be rooted into Christ; and may beare him about vs as Ioseph did, he will teach vs to watch, or at least if we sleepe he will awake vs, as he did his drowisie disciples (Mat. 26. 40.) when danger was at hand.

For the fourth point: how in this perplexed feare an Angell was sent vnto him: we learne first, wholly to depend on Gods providence; seeing that in the severall extremities of Ioseph, the Lord sent him severall comforts. For first in the suspition and ieaousie of his wife, an Angell was dispatched from the heavenly palace, to resolue him: then the same messenger warned him

of the imminent persecution, and now releueth him in his distresse. And thus will the Lord deale with all his seruants that walk aright, if they be not either too forward through hope, or too backward through feare.

Secondly, as this was one cause of Iosephs turning into Galiley, namely, to be succoured in his feare, so in this the Lord had another end vnknown to Ioseph, which was the fulfilling of a prophesie: that his sonne should be called a Nazarite, that is, one set apart vnto the Lord by speciall sanctification of nature, which was praefigured by Sampson and others vnder the Law. Where we learne, how the Lord executeth his will both by his seruants and his enemies, when as they meane nothing lesse then to doe it. Thus did not Dauids father know when he set his sonne to keepe sheepe, that he should fight with a Lion, 1. Sam. 17. 34. nor Sauls father know or once dreame, that his sonne should bee anointed king, when he sent him to seeke his Asses, 1. Sam. 9. 16. nor Mary when shee went to Bethlem to be tasked, that therein the Prophezie of Michah should bee fulfilled: that out of Bethlem should come the gouernour of Israel: nor Herod in the cruell massacre, little thought of performing Jeremiahs prophesie, A voice of lamentation, Rachel weeping for her children: nor the chiefe Priests, when with the 30. peeces of siluer, which Iudas brought, they bought a potters field, neuer dreamed of the prophesie of Zachariah, (chap. 11. 13.) that for so much should Christ be valued, and therewith should such a field be bought. But such strength hath the Lord, and such power ouer the hearts of men, as he can secretly moue them to be executioners of that himselfe hath appointed shall come to passe.

3. For this is he of whom it is spoken by the Prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of him that crieth in the wildernesse, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his pathes frast.
4. And this Iohn had his garment of Camels haire, and a girdle of a skinne about his loines, his meate also was Locusts and wild hony.

OW the Euangelist goeth forward, and passeth from the infancy of Christ vnto his manifestation to the world, when hee was to be inuited into the office of his Priesthood, before whom as before a mighty Monarch, was to goe a harbinger to take vp lodging for his Lord in the hearts and consciences of men, which was this Iohn Baptist.

- In the words consider, first, the time when this fore-runner did preach, which being by this Euangelist set downe indefinitely, is precisely declared by Saint Luke, chap. 3. 1. Secondly, the place where hee exercised his ministry, in the wildernesse. Thirdly, the summe and effect of his Sermons : Repent and change your minds, and amend your liues, for the great King that shall open the doore of saluation vnto all, is now at hand. Fourthly, by what commission he was warranted and authorized to doe this, namely, by Esay, chap. 40. 3. who had prophesied this long before. Fifthly, is described the wonderfull precisnesse and strictnesse of his life, by his garments and diet, where-
by

by all the people cast their eyes vpon him, admiring his austeritie.

For the first circumstance, which is the time, we must not vnderstand an immediate successiuenesse, that John began to preach as soone as Christ was brought to Nazareth, but that it was while Christ liued there, which was some 25. yeeres after: for this John was stirred vp, that hee as the day-starre might goe before the Sonne of righteousness. Saint Luke letteth it downe to be in the fifteenth yeere of Tiberius, and Christ was borne in the fifteenth yeere of Augustus: so as Christ was about thirtie yeeres of age when he began to preach. Out of which learne generally, that we must be satisfied, and rest in so much as is reuealed: so as wee are not curiously to enquire what Christ did while he liued a private man in Nazareth: for since the holy Ghost hath not disclosed it, we must be wise according to sobriety, as Saint Paul speaketh, and not seeke to learne where the Lord hath not taught, or to open where he hath shut. Onely Saint Luke (chap. 2. 46.) reports, that about twelue yeeres of age, he disputed with the Doctors in the temple and confounded them, and astonied such as heard him. And this is enough to comfort vs, that so much is recorded of him, as hath ransomed vs from the indignation of his Father.

Secondly, in that it is said: John came and preached, note, that the first ministry of the new Testament was a preaching ministry: so as whether we speake of men sent mediately or immediately; from God alone, or from God by men, we shall neuer finde any ministry commanded or practised, nor any messenger sent, that was not qualified with gifts and graces from aboue to diuide the word: and this is impregnable not to be resisted, that no man ordinarily can hope or looke for the power of saluation without preaching: which is euident (Rom. 10. 17.) Faith commeth by hearing, and hearing by the word preached, and this preaching cannot be (as some would haue it) bare reading: as appeareth 2. Tim. 4. 2. Preach the word, be instant, improve, rebuke, exhort: which importeth some further matter then literall reading. Besides, if reading should be preaching, and sufficient to beget faith, then hath not the Lord forsaken the

the Jewes nor the Turkes, but they remaine still the Church of God: for they haue the Bible and doe reade it, howbeit none will say, but these are out of the Church. Againe, when Esay and the rest of the Prophets cried out against blinde guides, did they meane they could not reade? And Paul when he saith: Woto me if I preach not the Gospell: doth he meane, that this wo shall light vpon him if he reade not? No: for there be many weake Christians that must be fed with milke, others with strong meat: but the word read is of the same sound to all, and as bread set before the hungry, but they want strength in their teeth to breake it: for it is fruitlesse to reade if wee vnderstand not; and the Eunuch (Act. 8. 31.) could liberally and religiously confesse hee could not doe it without a guide: whereupon, as the text saith, (vers. 35.) Philip preached vnto him Iesus. So as it is a most determinate truth, that there is no man lawfully and rightly called to the ministry, that is not enabled with the grace of preaching and expounding the Scripture: and euery place must labour to recouer if they haue lost, or to obtaine if they want, such a man as may goe before them in this wilderness both in life and doctrine, and diuide the word aright vnto them, that they may be able to spie out the armour of their aduersary, and to preuent his assaults: not but that the Lord extraordinarily may saue by bare reading, yea and without reading, for hee can knocke when he list, and open when he list; he can make corne to grow without sowing, as he did in Hezechiabs time, 2. King. 19. 29.

2 For the second circumstance, which is the place where hee preached, namely, in the wilderness, we learne, that where the holy Ghost placeth a man, there hee is to abide and to content himselfe, not excepting against the rudenesse of the people, as to be too grosse and base for their excellencies to instruct, or against the place, as to be too priuate or too vnwholesome, and that their Pulpit must onely stand at Hierusalem, and their auditorie must be great men. John Baptist we see how hee was content to exercise his message in a most solitary place, the Wilderness: for this was by the assignation and appointment of the Lord. True it is, Hierusalem had been more fit for state and celebritie, lebricie, and this might haue seemed more plausible to John, as a meanes whereby hee might sooner haue bene more famous: but because the Lord had tied him to this place, hee obediently keepeth it. Much more are they then to bee reprehended, that purchase liuings like farmes, one for Summer another for Winter; and not content with this, put ouer their people to milchlesse nurfes, (which as the Pope saith) is like a harlot that puts forth her childe, that she may the sooner returne to her lust. Howbeit, by the wilderness he must not vnderstand a place not to be inhabited, but onely a place not so well frequented as the fruitfull valleis of Iudæa.

Heere the Iesuites, because (wilderness) in the Greeke is ἄνυμος, note John Baptist to be the father of the Hermites, men whom they saie to bee deuoted to religion, to bee familiar with the Gods, and to haue the contemplation of heavenly things, hauing their soules freed from passions, and their bodies humbled in diuine seruice. To which wee answer: First, if John preached in a wilderness, and in a bare solitarie place, as they imagine, how is it that their hermitages are built neere great cities? Secondly, the calling of John was extraordinarie, being immediate from God, and his office extraordinarie, being to denounce the comming of Christ. Admit he were an Hermite, yet when he had run his race, his office did cease. Thirdly, of all liues, there is none so contrarie to the societie of man, and to the communion of Saints, as this of Hermites: for first God in Adams integritie, saw (Gen. 2. 22.) he could not bee without a companion: much lesse can we now. And to this is answerable that of the Preacher: Who to him that is alone: and amongst the Philosophers, he that abandoned company, was esteemed either a god or a beast. Secondly, if any be qualified and beautified with any speciall good grace and vertue, then ought hee to supply the wants of others; and being such a candle as they would haue him, he ought not to be hid vnder a bushell: and if there be defect in him, then ought his want to be supplied by the fulnesse of others. Thirdly, if neither he need others, nor others want him, which cannot be in this life; yet if there were nothing else then the beholding of the beautie of the house of God, and the comfort.

comfort of the participation of the Sacraments : as David saith, and wished rather to bee a sparrow that built her nest in the temple, then to be banished from the congregation of the Saints, saying, (Pfal. 42. 1.) That as the Hart braied for water, so did he for the contemplation of the Arke wherein the Lord did sit. This were sufficiently forcible to disswade from this vsociable life : besides, that John liued not alwaies heere, but staid till he was called to the Court of Herod, where he lost his head for his boldnesse, Mat. 14. 10.

3.

For the third point, namely, the summe of his Sermon, wee must weigh and consider two parts : first, the exhortation : Repent and change your minds : Secondly, the reason perswading to embrace this exhortation : For the Kingdome of heauen is at hand.

1.

For the first, the word Repent, it signifieth an alteration both of iudgement and of affection, not onely by a displeasance with ones selfe, and a checke of conscience for the euill he committeth, which cannot bee staid, no more then the panting of the heart, or the beating of the pulse, but also an vtter loathing and detestation of all manner of sinne : so as all repentance though it be proper to the minde, and the fountaine of it be in the heart, yet it is both inward and outward : the visible shew of amendment being a declaration of the inuisible thought of sorrow : for a thorne cannot grow vpon a figge-leave : and if any man will iudge of his repentance, let him manifest the fruits of it. What can a cursed mouth shew, but that the heart is virulent and full of poison? or garish attire, but that the minde is not humbled? for where there is no reformation of action, there is no alteration of affection. Secondly, repentance is noted to be either generall for all men, for all sinnes, for all times : or speciall, for some men, for some sinnes, and for some times. For speciall men : that every man repent him according to his disposition and place, as Saint Iohn sheweth, Luke. 3. 11. exhorting the rich men, if they haue two coates to giue one to the poore, the customers to require but their due, the souldiers to bee content with their wages. For as every man hath a seuerall calling, so hath hee speciall sinnes attending and waiting on his calling, which must bee repented of. Now for our infirmities which hourly

hourly breake forth of vs, generall repentance is required: but if we be stained with any peculiar sinne, that must haue a repentance by it selfe. (David Psal. 32. 3.) cannot be healed of his adulterie by a generall confession, but he must peculiarly taske his soule for that sinne: and so much Paul expresseth, 2. Cor. 12. 21. I feare (saith he) lest when I come I shall bewaile many of them which haue sinned, and haue not repented of the uncleannesse, fornication and wantonnesse which they haue committed: for, for such finnes it is not sufficient to finde a remorse of conscience, but for adulterie, profaning of the Sabbaoth, oppression of the poore, and such like, he must haue a speciall humiliation; and may not thinke to obtaine the comfort of Gods countenance by blurring out a short praier, that passeth out of the mouth like gunshot, as, Lord I haue sinned; which though the words be good, auaieth not, because the heart is naught, fraught with hypocrisie.

Such then as will be true repentants, must bee of the number of them Christ speaketh of Mat. 11. 28. that are inwardly wearie of the burden of sinne; which excludeth three sorts of people: first, such as be not wearie of their owne righteousnesse, but desire to applie the plaister of their owne workes to cure their wound: secondly, such as bee not weary of the pleasure of this life, which profane sensuall men will neuer be, such as Paul speaketh of Philip. 3. 19. that make their belly their God, and with Esau, Gen. 25. 30. will for a messe of pottage sell their birthright: thirdly, such as be onely cast downe with some hard exponents in the world, for many be weary of the world that are not wearie of themselues, or of themselues that are not wearie of their finnes, wishing to be deliuered from the burden of their distresse, but not with Paul, Phil. 3. from the body of sinne, for none of these Rom. 7. 24. sorts can thrue in the course of repentance, but such onely as be tamed from their naturall rebellions by the afflictions of this life, that haue their spirits broken to dust, and euen brought to confusion, that will confesse no good thing dwelleth in their flesh, but are cast as it were into a burning feuer of desperation, and doe feele in a maner hell in their soules; such will the Lord comfort, such doth he call and enable to repent. For to whom is the commission giuen (Eſay 61. 1. 2) to preach good tidings, but to the poore; deliuerance, but to the captiues: ſo as he openeth no priſon except thou confeſſe thy ſelfe to bee chained in the irons of Satan; neither canſt thou repent except thou thinke thou haſt beene a runnagate from the Lord Ieſus: and what need he to giue thee the water of life except thou feele a drowth in thy ſoule like the drowth of Summer? True it is, the Lord comforts none but the abiect, ſeekes none but the loſt, makes wiſe none but fooles, iuſtifies none but ſinners; ſo as vnleſſe we finde theſe wants in our ſelues, the Goſpel was neuer preached to our comfort, and this exhortation is vainly deliuered, that we ſhould repent. Howbeit ſince repentance and wearineſſe is of ſuch neceſſitie for Chriſtians, we muſt enter into a three-fold examination of our ſelues: firſt, of the knowledge of our finnes: ſecondly, of the ſorrow for our finnes: thirdly, of the amendment of our ſins.

Firſt, for the knowing of thy ſinne, thou muſt not examine it according to the law of thine owne heart, that will glorie in hanging vp the Lord Ieſus, and in getting letters to Damascus Acts 9. 2. to perſecute the Church of God: for thine heart will make things lawfull by thy abuſe vnlawfull, and things vnlawfull by the flattering of thy ſelfe in too much libertie lawfull: but it muſt be done according to the commandement of God, raiſing vp his tribunall in thy ſoule, and ſetting before thee the curſe that reſteth on thee for thy ſinne. Neither muſt this be a generall acknowledgement, that thou art ſinfull, but thou muſt walke in the ſteps of Dauid, in the bitterneſſe of the ſoule to ſay, O Lord they are ſo many as they run ouer my head, and ſo heavy as they preſſe me downe: and in the 2: Sam. 24. 10. I haue not onely ſinned in numbring the people, but ſinned exceedingly; O Lord take away the treſpaſſe of thy ſeruant, for I haue done very fooliſhly: ſo as for particular ſins thou muſt keepe the circumſtance of time and place, and aggravate the degrees of it to thy ſoule. And becauſe thou art not able to remember the whole catalogue of thy ſins, and perhaps flattereſt thy ſelfe in ſome ſin as Naaman did, 2. King. 5. 18. who proteſted hee would ſerue the Lord, and yet bowed himſelfe in the houſe of Rimmon: thou muſt craue pardon for thy ſecret ſins, and thoſe which thou haſt

passed ouer as no sinnes, and neuer rest thinking of them till they haue forced thee to Christ, which is euer accompanied with a perswasion that the sinne is pardonable, which is no small comfort. Then when thou art come to a sight of thy sinne, the second point is sorrow for thy sinne, such as is expressed Zach. 12. 10. as that when we consider how wee haue pierced God with our sins, and that euen my sinnes were the nailes that fastned Christ to the Crosse, wee must weepe and cry as one mourneth for his onely sonne and first borne, and there must be such a compunction of the spirit; as to crie with the hearers of Peter, Act. 2. 37. What shall we doe! and with Dauid, Psal. 6. 6. to wash our bed with teares; and so to mourne as if we heard the Lord summoning vs to iudgement: for our sinnes are not lighter then Dauids, that our sorrow should be lesse then his. And when we haue attained to this, to be pierced to the soule with sorrow, not for any discomforts in this life, but for that we haue offended God, and haue exercised our selues in this, not as in a pang that shall perplex vs for the time, but that wee haue daily ripped and laied our hearts naked before the Lord: then from hence springeth forth the third fruit, amendment of our sinnes, and repentance for them, which standeth in two parts: first, in the forsaking of the old sinne secondly, in inclining to the contrary vertue; for the repentance of an vsurer is not restitution only, but with Zacchæus Luke 19. 8. to restore, and to be mercifull to the poore, as before he was vnmercifull: for drunkards not onely to leaue the combat of their cups, but to forsake that company, and to obserue all kind of abstinence, whereby he may be more fit for his calling, and in iudgement to condemne it, and in affection to abhor it both in himselfe and others: so as briefly, to repent, is not to be as thou hast bene, but to be in Christian duties that thou hast not beene.

For the second point, which is the reason of the exhortation: by the word Kingdome of heauen, vnderstand the manifestation of the Messias, which as a stately monarch shall rule in the hearts of men, such as shall bee gathered by the Gospell with a wonderfull spirituall maiesty by his word and graces, first leading them by the Gospell to haue their conuersation in heauen while while they liue heere : whereupon gather there is a double kingdome : first of administratory prouidence , which is that whereby the Lord ruleth ouer all, euen the diuels : secondly, of royall preheminance in his church, which is threefold : first, in their beginning by imperfect sanctification, when men translated & drawn from the power of sin are brought to the obedience of the Lord 2 Iesus: the second confirmed by perfect sanctification in the soules of the saints already departed : the third fully to be accomplished 3 when wee shall bee crowned of the Lord both in soule and body with perfect and perpetuall glory , when God shall raigne in his Sonne, his Sonne in his Church, and his Church triumph in them both for euer. Now this spirituall maiesty of Christ, setting and inthronizing himselfe in the hearts of men , is far more magnificent then any earthly throne, prescribing vs lawes, within which we are to bound our selues ; for in a kingdome there are foure things requisite : first, a King to gouerne : secondly, subiects to obey : thirdly, lawes to keepe in awe : fourthly, authority to execute them. Now in this kingdome of light, Christ is the King, the faithfull be the subiects, the word of God the lawes, the power of the spirit the authority to execute them : so that if by our subiection to the word the little flocke of Christ be increased, the workes of the diuell bee destroied, the enemies of God be subuerted, and sinne bee subdued in the strength thereof, then wee being gathered into this first kingdome, which consisteth in the regeneration of the spirit, may assuredly waite for the expectation of the other kingdome, which standeth in the perfection of all glory. And we may the better vnderstand this, by weighing the diuersity of Kingdomes which the diuell hath, these being double : first, on earth : secondly, in hell. On earth the reprobate being his subiects, their corrupt affections their lawes, and their being giuen ouer of God to follow those wicked waies being the power to execute them. So as in all those places, be they neuer so well polished to the eye, which haue not sufficient power of the Gospell to saue them, or which haue it not at all, or which haue it in a counterfet manner and measure, or which hauing it sincerely, doe flie like dogs to rend them in peeces that bring it ; in these is the kingdome of darknesse set vp, and sauing

 for

for the elects sake which shall bee taken out of them by the manifestation of Gods grace, it were but a cage of filthy birds, and the Synagogue of Satan. For the second, which is in hell, it is that wherein vnmercifull Dives now lieth, Luk. 16. 24. and cannot haue so much refreshing as to coole his tongue: and wherein after this life the wicked and impenitent shall bee tormented with endlesse paine. The consideration whereof may, driue vs to the meditation of the Lords bounty, that hath prepared another place for vs if we follow the counsell of Iohn Baptist, to amend our liues and to reforme our waies, euen such a place wherein we shall behold and enjoy the beauty of his glorie for euer.

Further obserue, though Iohn Baptist willeth them to repent and amend, yet it proueth no ability or naturall inclination in a man to doe this, no more then when Christ saith, Mat. 11. 28. 29. Come vnto me, and take up my yoake: it argueth no power of our selues to come: for so much himselfe setteth downe in another place, where hee saith, No man can come vnlesse my Father drawe him. But the end of this is, not that the commandement is giuen to meet with our power to performe it, but (as Rom. 3. 20.) that thereby might come the knowledge of sinne; for when wee see our weakenesse that we cannot doe it, and our wretchednesse that we haue done the contrary: as that where we should haue repented of our sins we haue rather increased them, it leads vs to seeke grace in Christ, pardon for the sinne, and power of his spirit to forsake it. So as in the commandement know, thou oughtest to doe it, in the correction of the Lord know, thou hast not done it, in not doing it know thy condemnation, in praier and faith thou knowest where to haue it, in thy conuersion thou knowest where thou hast receiued it, and in thy perseuerance know by whom thou doest retaine it. And albeit all commandements are of three sorts: first, such as command our first conuersion: secondly, that command our obedience to the Lord after our conuersion: thirdly, that command our perseuerance after we haue begun obedience; yet we shall see the strength of all these commeth from the Lord. For the first, Zach. 1. 3. there is a commandement giuen to turne to the Lord, and Ioel 2. 12. this is more particularly set downe, that it must be a turning with all the heart. But how shall this be wrought? Obserue Ephraims speech to the Lord, Ier. 31. 18. Conuert thou me and I shall be conuerted: So (Deut. 10. 16.) Moses commandeth that the people should circumsise the foreskin of their hearts, that is, that they should change their vile affectiōs; but how this must be done, appeareth, Deut. 30. 6. The Lord thy God will circumsise thy heart: so Deut. 39. 19. there is a commandement to chuse life, That thou and thy seed may liue: the performance whereof is, Ezech. 36. 26. A new heart (saith the Lord) I will giue you, and a new spirit I will put into you, and I will take away the stony heart out of thy body, and I will giue you a heart of flesh: which place doeth fully answer all suppositions of our owne ability; for if there bee any pliability in a stone, then is there so in man. For the second, we are commanded to liue well and to worke, but whence this proceedeth, appeareth, Philip. 2. 13. It is God that worketh in you both the will and the deed: so 2. Cor. 7. 1. there is a commandement giuen by S. Paul, that we should cleanse our selues; and 1. Iohn 3. 5. Euery man that hath hope purgeth himselfe: and 2. Tim. 2. 21. He that is a vessell of honour purgeth himselfe: but how this is done, is set downe Ezech. 36. 25: I (saith the Lord) will powre cleane water vpon you, and yee shall be cleane: and as the Apostle saith, Hebr. 9. 14. The bloud of Christ purgeth the conscience from dead workes. For the third, we are commanded to stand fast, and to hold fast our profession: so Acts 14. 22. Barnabas exhorteth to continue in the faith; but from whence this commeth, Paul teacheth vs Ephes. 4. 30. The Lord make you strong, for it is hee that hath sealed you to the day of redemption: and 2. Thessal. 1. 11. The Lord make you woorthy of this calling, and fulfill all the good pleasure of his goodnesse, and the worke of faith with power: and 1. Thess. 5. 24. Faithfull is he which calleth you, which will also doe it. By which wee may perceiue, that this exhortation to Repent, and other such like inserted in the Scripture, are but to whet vs on, and to set an edge vpon our prayers and desires, that wee may fetch these graces out of the closet and bosome of our Sauour Christ, who is as ready to giue as wee to aske.

Further

Further learne hence, that forasmuch as the most vehement and pithy exhortation to obedience is taken from the manifestation of Christ, that the Gospell euen as it is the Gospell requireth reformation of life, howsoeuer it bee charged either to giue too much occasion to sinne, as that being cleansed in the bath of Christs blood we may abandon our selues to vncleannesse, or to make too much restraint as it were from sinne, as that wee must abstaine from all apparence of euill: for saith the Gospell, ^{2. The. 5. 22.} 1. Iohn 3. 8. He that doeth not labour to purge himselfe in euery thing, is of the diuell. Wherein we must consider, that there is a double couenant: first, of workes by the law, which being obserued giueth life, but being broken but in cogitation onely, doth damne a man: secondly, of grace, that all that beleeuue shall bee saued. Now in euery couenant there is a restipulation or mutuall agreement of both parties: ours in the law was, that we would doe what was commanded; in grace, that wee will beleeuue that we may bee saued: for as no man can be saued by the law but by absolute obedience, so no man shall be saued by the Gospell but by faith and repentance; for this is that God requireth of vs, to beleeuue and amend.

Againe obserue, that when we preach repentance, we preach ^{o. 6. 2.} not the law but the Gospell, for the law admits of no repentance: for though wee could now obserue all that is written in the law, yet should we be damned, vnlesse we could satisfie for that was broken in our first conception, we being borne in the filthinesse of nature. Now there is no way of saluation for circumsised or vncircumsised, for Iew nor Gentile, before the law nor after, either before our conuersion in the time of our infidelity, or after our conuersion in the time of repentance, but onely in the blood of Christ, whom by the power of the holy Ghost by the instrument of the word, as the second cause, we doe by faith apprehend vnto our euermlasting peace. Thus much is set forth by Saint Paul Rom. 8. 1. that there is nothing but condemnation to them that are without Christ, and none are in Christ but they that haue receiued the spirit of Christ, and none hath this spirit but he that hath receiued the gift of faith, which doth ingraft vs into Christ, and none hath faith but hee that hath repentance, and none hath repentance but he whose soule is changed, cleansed in his conscience, reformed in his affections; so that howsoever he slippeth through infirmity, yet his full endeouour is alwaies to please the Lord: and no mans soule is changed whose life is not already amended. For this must declare a purified conscience, and none hath amended his life who doth deliberately persist in any grosse sinne, so that whatsoeuer purpouelic griueth the spirit, and smiteth God by his sinne, hee is not in Christ, but consequently in the state of condemnation, except hee repent: for this that is spoken of, 1. Iohn 5. 3. Hee that is borne of God, keepeth his commandments, and they bee not burdensome to him. For this is the new couenant (saith the Lord, Ier. 31. 31.) I will make with you, I will pardon your sinnes and write my Law in your hearts: that is, whomsoever I will pardon I will reforme their hearts, both inward and outward mortification, that they shall be obedient to my Law. So that whosoever hath not receiued power to amend his life, hee neuer felt the power of God to the pardoning of his sinne, for he neuer giueth faith alone, but it is euer ioyned with an ability from the same spirit to amend the life; so as vnlesse outwardly thou bee amended, that thy light doe shine before men, both in thy conuersation and in thy actions, for any peace the Gospell can preach vnto thee, thou maiest feare thou art in the state of condemnation. And if thou hardenest thy heart against this sweet sound of the Lords voice, hee will at the length scorne thee, and thou maiest crie and not be heard, for Esaie may weepe too late, Gen. 27. 38. for we are therefore to repent because by grace we are sure to bee saued, as Saint Peter saith, 1. Pet. 1. 17. if yee call God Father, that is, if ye will be his children, passe your time in feare, because he hath redeemed you by his blond. So saith the Gospell: Be

Luke 1. 75. ye holy as your heauenly Father is holy, for children must be of like disposition to their father, and he that worketh euill is of the diuel, as Christ speaketh Iohn 8. 44. So Paul Rom. 12. 1. doth beseech them by the merits of Christ (a forcible argument to perswade) that they offer vp their bodies a holy sacrifice vnto God, shewing that the greatest matter to inforce vs to reformation is taken from mercy. And 1. Cor. 6. 15. Your bodies are the temples of the holy Ghost, and yee are bought with a price, therefore doe not prostitute them to uncleannesse, but let the loue of God con-straine vs to loue him againe. Yet may wee not heereupon imagine that we make the law of God of no effect through faith, nay as S. Paul saith, Rom. 3. 31. by this we rather establish the Law, and that two waies: first, in the absolute obedience of Christ inherent in himselfe, and imputed vnto vs: secondly, by the spirit of sanctification abiding in vs: for the same righteousnesse the law commands, the very same doth faith apprehend, for we doe challenge the promise of God to saue vs, by this, that Christ in our person hath absolutely performed it; so as there is no difference in respect of the substance, but only in the maner of con-ueniance, wherby we apply it vnto our soules. So doth the Gospel command the same works that the law exacteth, though there be a threefold difference between them: for first, the law commands works to gaine saluation by them; the Gospell, because saluation is already gained by the blood of Christ; for as S. Paul saith, we ^{1. Cor. 6. 20.} are bought with a price, therefore we are debtors: secondly, the law giueth no power to worke that it commandeth, for Moses that was the giuer of it, could not frame his owne heart to do it, therfore it is called a dead letter, written in stones, which prefigured ^{2. Cor. 3. 6. 7.}

 the harts of men; but the Gospell in the elect neuer comāndeth but first giueth grace and power to performe, as the Lord neuer pardoneth any mans sin, but he first writeth his law in his heart, as S. Iohn saith, 1. Ioh. 3. 8. God sent his son to destroy the works of the diuel in vs: and this is the argument of S. Paul, Rom. 6. 14. Let not (saith he) sin raigne in your mortal bodies, that is, haue dominion ouer you, for yee are not vnder the law but vnder grace, that giueth power to amend. Thirdly, the law commands works absolutely, ³ and admits of no repentance, but the Gospell neuer excludes repentance, the father euer waiting for the returne of his lost son:
 so as it is true, no whoremonger shal be saued continuing such a one; but alwaies vnderstand, repentance comming between staiteth
 the iudgement: for though our sins be of a purple or skarlet die, yet if we turne to God, the blood of Christ hath this vertue, ^{1. Ioh. 5. 6.} that it can make them white as snow, so as the summe of al this is, blood & water, Ioh. 13. 8. must go together, saith in Iesus and the spirit of the Lord Iesus, remission of sins and reformation of life must neuer be disioined. Now for that the Papists say, the expectation of a reward would make vs worke, & that in vaine should the worke be, if there were no merit: Wee answer, that if a man freely shall gratifie his bondman with libertie, and he shall after preferue his masters life: by this hee hath not deserued his freedome, for if he had remained still bond, he had beene bound to haue done it, and all hee can doe after is not to recompence his freedome, but to testifie his thankfulness. So whatsoeuer we can do or deserue, we are bound to it by a double bond: first, of our creation: secondly, and much more by our redemption: and after our saluation promised and purchased, to doe well is nothing but dutie, for we were bound to doe it before we were saued. So as this is the order of exhortation in the Scripture: All that haue hope (2. Cor. 7. 1) must cleanse themselves; not to clense themselves that they may hope, but they haue hope, therefore they must doe it. And not because we releue the poore, therefore wee shall be saued: but because in mercy a kingdome is prepared for vs, therefore as members of one bodie we releue the poore. And Abraham did not therefore offer vp his sonne that he might be iustified, but because he was iustified before, therefore he thought nothing too deare to gratifie the Lord with, though it were with the sonne of the promise. So heere we doe not therefore repent, that the kingdome of heauen may come, but wee must amend our lines, and change our minds, because the Messias is already come that will saue our soules.

Againe obserue, he saith, it is at hand, noting a neere manifestation of him, which was more then any of the Prophets could say: whereupon Christ saith, that there was neuer any Prophet so great as Iohn Baptist, yet the least in the kingdome of heauen is greater then he: not comparing their persons, for there were diuers of the Prophets as excellently qualified as Iohn; nor that a Minister of the Gospell now should be greater then hee, but that the ministry of Iohn was plainer then that of the Prophets, they but foretelling indefinitely that Christ should come, Iohn pointing at him with his finger, that he was now coming: and the ministry now being more excellent then Iohns, because

because he preached but of the Messias at hand, whereas we haue seene the fingers of this hand, Christ to haue come with power, to haue died with triumph, and to haue ascended with glorie: therefore let him that hath an eare heare, and hee that hath hope let him arise, for the kingdome is now come, not at hand, Iohn 14. 12.

Againe, note the excellent Harmonie betweene Iohn the fore-runner, and Christ the after-commer: for Matt. 4. 17. Christ vseth the very same words to perswade to amendement of life, because the kingdome of heauen is at hand. Which sheweth, the agreement ought to be among Ministers, and how wee may discern whether they be of God or no: for then as they all worke vpon one foundation, so shall they all speake by one spirit, and the voice of the herbinge agree with Christ, and Christ with him, pressing no other doctrine then that Iohn preached before.

For the fourth circumstance, which is the warrant whereby Iohn was authorized to preach, wee note, that all callings in the Church of God must bee warranted expressly in the booke of God. For if any were to bee exempted, it was this of Iohn being extraordinarie, but he is enforced to prooue it, as if hee should say: Though I am not Christ, nor Eliu in person, howbeit in power of spirit I am, yet looke in Esay, 40. 3. my authoritie recorded: for the place of a Minister is not like the power of the Magistrate, which though it be Gods ordinance in generall, yet is it not in particular, as that there should be this or that Magistrate, as an Emperour, Duke, Chancellor, and such like: for this is humane, and God hath giuen man this freedome, by the remnant and portion of reason abiding in him, to deuise what may be safest for the state. And these offices as they be by man erected, so may they be by him abolished. But for the officers of the Church and the ministerie, it is not onely ordained of God in generall, but every particular place and every kind of office is set downe, the Church being his owne house, which he meant to beautifie with all necessarie furniture, and none of this can be put downe, neither may others be added, 1. Cor. 12. 28. and Ephes. 4. 11. For the Pastor may bee put downe by the Prince, but not the Pastorship without maiming the bodie of Christ: for then were it an humane constitution as is the other of Magistrates: And therefore most grosse is it, that women should be licenced to baptize, which pertaineth onely to the office of a Minister; and it is an idle answer to saie: Quod fieri non debet, factum valet: that which should not be done, is yet effectuell when it is done: for this is a seale put into a wrong hand. And if Vzziah (2. Sam. 6. 7) being no Levite, was stricken with sudden death for but touching the Arke of God which was readie to fall, though his intent was good: and if Vzziah (2. Chro. 26. 20.) was smitten with leprosie, which he could neuer claw off to his death, for burning incense to the Lord, which onely pertained to the Priests to doe, then may these intruders vpon the Lords possessions, feare some plague to light on them for intermeddling with these holy things: and as well may they administer the Supper, as Baptisme; for they be seales of equall dignitie. Howbeit, if thou wilt be Iohn Baptist, shew me these two things: first, a commission of thy calling: secondly, besides that thou must proue thy calling warranted, shew me that thou comest rightly by it, and that thou canst lawfully conuey it vnto thy selfe, as (Luk. 3. 1.) the spirit of the Lord came vpon Iohn. For to haue this securitie is good in two respects: first, for the safety of thine owne conscience in the day of affliction: for thou knowest the iudgement of Christ, concerning such as creepe in at the window, they haue neither loue nor care of the flocke. Therefore Jeremie (chap. 1. 6.) cried: O Lord, I neuer thrust my selfe into this vnthankfull office, but thou sentest me, and thy word was as a fire shut vp in my bones. Secondly, it is good to retaine the people in obedience, when they shall see the Patent of thy calling, whereas otherwise they will esteeme thee but as offering thy selfe vn-called, and then thou maiest labour among them vnthanked.

Ioh. 10. 1.

06f. 2

For that Esay spake, saying, The voice of a crier: in these words is set downe the execution of his office. Where we learne, that there are no names giuen to Ministers, but they are words of employment and of labour. For Preaching comes of Præco, to be a proclaimer in the market place; so are they called trumpeters, for that they must blow the siluer Trumpet of the Lords word, word, that it may sound and ring in the eares of the people. Criers, so as they must be no toong-tied fellowes, for they are no fitter for this office, then is a blinde man to be a Pilot. They must be shepherds, which in Iuda were faine to watch all night to preferue their flockes from Wolues: Watchmen, who must take heed, lest through their sloth the fort be surprized: Embassadors, hauing a great message to deliuer from the king of heauen: Angels, as Christ is called the Angell of the great couenant: and Reuel. 3. Write vnto the Angell: that is, the Minister of such a Church: Workmen, because they be builders of mens consciences: Stewards, to prouide meat for the Lords inheritance. And as Iohn was to crie in his time, so is there as great necessitie laid vpon vs to crie in this time, according to the proportion of that grace we haue receiued. In Pauls time, it was a curse of damnation not to preach: which cannot be appropriated to Paul himselfe, it being a dutie specially required of all that labour in this vineyard. And (2. Tim. 4. 2.) he adiueth Timothie to preach instantly: so that as Iohn as the fore-runner, and Timothie as an Euangelist, were to preach with vehemencie, so are wee as Pastors, to crie the same crie: for it neuer yet pierced deepe enough, nor entred far enough to make men watchfull ouer their liues. Now some are vnwoorthie the name of criers, being scarce able to speake; others are able, but not willing to be criers, bringing others a sleepe with their sloth, vpon whom without repentance resteth a woe intolerable to beare, and impossible to auoid.

Secondly, obserue heere the agreement betweene the Prophet Esay and Iohn Baptist: Iohn making that plaine was spoken obscurely by the Prophet: Prepare yee the waies: What is that? Repent: Let the high mountaines be brought low. that is, let pride of life be abated. Let the low velleis be filled, that is, let despaire be reiected: Let crooked things be made straigh: that is, let the iudgement be rectified: Let the rough waies be made smooth: that is, let thy swelling affections be changed. Now this Allegoric vsed by the Prophet, is borrowed from entertaining of Princes at their first coronation: at which time all ordures bee clesed, bridges repaired, the streets paued, herbingers goe before to take vp lodging, the trumpets sound, the volley of shot goeth off, and every man is arraied in his best robes: not that the Lord of glorie expecteth such a transitorie triumph: for hee requireth but this, amend thy life, and a cleane heart is his best harbour, a spirituall entertainment being fittest for a spirituall king.

 Lastly, in this crie of Iohns, obserue his faithfulness: he prepareth a way for the Lord, not for himselfe: he might haue liued farre better in respect of the world, then in this base office, and in this base place: for his priestly birth being the sonne of Zachary, (Luk. 1. 13.) would haue afforded him a richer portion; yea he was offered to be Christ, but he would none of it, contenting himselfe with that share the Lord had allotted him, and attending on that dutie the Lord had enioined him. And thus ought all the Ministers of the word to doe, not to preach for reward, nor to crie for ambition, though the herbinger must not lie without doores: but they must looke for a recompence from the highest, for the world is vnthankfull. And it is not enough to preach, but they must preach to the consciences of men, that the Lord Iesus may enter in; and not to gratifie the affections of men with the eloquence of the flesh, and in swelling words, that themselues may enter in. For if they crie to get a name or renowne, or preach in contention, they may crie long enough, they haue all they shall haue, hauing that they sought for, to bee caried in the mouthes, and to bee had in admiration of the people.

5.
 For the fift circumstance, which is, his extraordinarie austeritie: his attire and girdle was such as Eliab did weare, 2. King. 1. 8. the wild honie was such as Ionathan found in the wood, 1. Sam. 14. 25. The meaning whereof is, that his apparell was very base, and his diet such as grew of themselues. Where obserue, that this was no fancie of selfe-conceit in Iohn, to binde and banish himselfe from the comforts of this life, but it was the appointment of the Lord, that he might be conformable to Eliab, whom as hee was to succeed in his spirit, so likewise in his apparell. Againe, he did it by the Lords will formerly reuealed: for it was prophesied, (Luk. 1. 15.) that he should be a Nazarite, & foretold his parents he should drinke no strong drinke:
 wherein

wherein was implied, that his fare should be of the meanest; so as this must not be tied and prescribed to the Ministers of these daies, as if their cup might neuer ouerflow, but that their houses and prouision must be as the heath and barren ground: for (1. Tim. 5. 23.) Timothie may drinke wine for his stomackes sake, as Paul bids him. And if after the example of the Apostles the world will haue men preach for nothing, then must they doe as it was then, call such as neuer studied; and then must they likewise haue both assurance of Gods prouidence to sustaine, and of his graces to enable them, as the Apostles had. Looke how the Leuites were prouided for, (Numb. 18. 21.) the tenth in Israel was giuen them for an inheritance, yea euen Iohn Baptists father had liberally whereon to liue: for they that serue at the altar must liue of the altar; not as of almes, but of duty: as Gal. 6. 5. them that teach you in the word, make them partakers of all your goods: and Rom. 15. 27. if the Gentiles be made partakers of their spirituall things, their dutie is also to minister vnto them in carnall things: and 1. Tim. 5. 17. The Elder that rules well, is worthy of double honour: but now they giue them double reuerence & but single maintenance, which sheweth how lightly men esteeme of the gaine of godlinesse, when the Ephod seemeth so vile and base in their eies. For Balaam shall neuer bee cailed, vnlesse the King (Numb. 22. 6.) haue some speciall worke for him to doe, and if he follow not his humor when he comes, hee may goe home againe without his charges. And few there bee can boast at this day of the beneuolence of their people, as Paul did of the Corinths, 2. Cor. 9. 2. who according to their power abounded in rich liberality towards him, and would euen haue pulled out their eies to haue done him good. Howbeit as Ministers may not go in sacke-cloth like beggerly Friars, so must they not be arraied in silkes and fine linnen, like pompous prelates as many be, which win more credit for their garments, then for their graces: but there must bee a moderation and sobriety obserued, and Baruch must bee humbled more in his persecution, then otherwise, Ier. 45. 3.

Lastly, by this apparell and diet of Iohn learne, that the meaning of the Lord was not, onely to driue and send Iohn to austeri-oly.

ritie and strictnesse by this kinde of life, but his speciall end was to conuince the Iewes of their malice and frowardnesse of their hearts. For Iohn hee is precise and austere, there is no pleasure in his lookes, but hee shakes as it were the rod continually. Christ he commeth after a cleane contrarie maner, he eates and drinks with them; and is glad and willing to come to any, euen as the Physitian to the patient. Whereupon the Iewes are tried, whether by any vsage they might bee reclaimed and drawne to repentance: but they take exceptions against both; Iohn for his austeritie is a diuell, (for the world euer hated precisenesse:) Christ for his familiaritie is a drunkard and too good a fellow: so as though Iohn wept the solemne and dumpish note of repentance, they would not mourne: and though Christ preached and piped the melodie of mercie, they would not daunce. What more then could the Lord do to this vineyard which he did not, laying soile as it were to the roote to keepe the sap warme, and pruning and cropping the branches, that they might haue spred to haue beene as it were the Lords shadow and his delight? But they stopped their eares, and prospered not by their labor, bringing forth bloudie and vnsauorie fruit, killing the Prophets, and at length crucifying the heire of the vineyard the Lord Iesus: for which the Lord did meet them in iudgement, so as to this day they remaine rooted out of his garden. And how can we thinke the like iudgement should leape over and escape vs, that haue continued so long so vntamed, and as if we had neuer seene the yoke, doe start and hang backe from humbling our selues before the king of Israel, who hath come to vs by strong winds, and strange earthquakes, by the fire of many plagues, which haue burnt vp whole families, and by his still and soft voice of the Gospel intreating vs, while we haue time to be at peace, and to agree with him, and yet we will not.

MATH. chap. 3. vers. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

5. Then went out to him Ierusalem and all Iudaa, and all the region round about Iordan.
6. And they were baptised of him in Iordan, confessing their sinnes.
7. Now when he saw many of the Pharises and of the Sadduces come to his baptisme, he said vnto them : O generation of vipers, who hath forewarned you to flie from the anger to come!
8. Bring forth therefore fruit worthy amendement of life :
9. And thinke not to say with your selues : We haue Abraham to our father: for I say vnto you, that God is able euen of these stones to raise vp children vnto Abraham.
10. And now also is the axe put to the root of the trees: therefore euery tree which bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewen downe and cast into the fire.

HERE followeth a sixt circumstance, wherein is set downe the frequent concourse of the auditory and people that came to heare this extraordinarie Priest Iohn Baptist, who was of the tribe of Aaron : and how hee entertained them, first, receiuing so many as would subscribe in iudgement, to beleeuē their saluation in the blood of the Messias. Secondly, for them that came as led with emulation, hearing his fame, and were induced to come by reason of the strange report went of him, and not for zeale and conscience to profit by his ministry, the spirit revealing to Iohn their hypocrisie, swelling with their owne righteousnesse, and bragging that they were of the naturall seed of Abraham, as men not yet fit to bee baptized, baptized, he takes them vp roughly as euill egges of euill birds, comming of them that persecuted the Gospell, that hee might the deeper pierce into their consciences, so as they might see their owne vilenesse: as if he should say, is it possible that you can come to heare the word of God with a right heart, when there lurketh so much poison in your breasts, when all your deuotion standeth in open ostentation? Euen as Peter challenged Simon Magus Acts 8. 23. 24. saying, Thou art in the gall of bitternesse, repent if it be possible, and pray, that the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee. John denouncing also their fearefull estate, as that the axe was now laied to the roote of the tree, that faith in Christ and not the glory of comming of Abrahams race, should saue them from hell fire.

In the words obserue two parts: first, how great the auditory was: Secondly, how he applied himselfe diuersly according to the diuers sorts of hearers which he had, baptizing some confessing their sinnes; and for the other, first he sets downe a bitter reprehension, calling them a brood of Serpents, full of poison against the truth, and frameth his speech as wondring how they durst come: the Sadduces beleeuing no wrath to come, the Pharises thinking by their merits to auoide it. Secondly followeth, a graue exhortation, remouing away many blockes and hindrances wherwith they were blinded that they could not see the truth in Christ. Thirdly, he concludeth with a commination and threatening, that they were to bee cut downe: first, because they were wicked in themselues: secondly, that there should double damnation fall vpon them if they refused Christ, as the Prophet Malachy had foretold.

For the first, obserue three causes of their concurrence and frequent comming to Iohns ministe ry: first, because there had been a long surceasing of Prophecie, Malachy being the last that spake by that extraordinary spirit; and hearing this great newes and fame of John, they thought some great Prophet had bene raised vp, and so were desirous to heare him. Secondly, they were moued to frequent him by the strangenesse of his teaching, not teaching coldely and without power, as the Pharises did, but in vehemency of spirit, and great feruency and earnestnesse to perswade to amendment of life. Thirdly, they resorted the rather vnto him as pricked forward by the extraordinary austeri-³ ty of his life and diet. Where learne, that when God furnisheth a man with a commission, and sealet him a warrant of his calling, and giueth him a booke, as hee did to Ezechiel, which ^{def. 1.} hee must eate: when the word of the Lord is as fire in the heart of Jeremy, and when the purpose of the Lord is that it shall preuaile, it cannot bee crossed by any wit or policy of man. For great exceptions might haue bene taken against John: first, preaching there was a Kingdome at hand, it might haue come neere to treason, sounding in the eares of Herod to the disposing of him: and Princes are easily ielous of their greatnesse, and will not haue any of their priuiledges called into question. Secondly, the Pharises knew they should be controuled and called into question for misleading and abusing the people, so as no doubt they suggested to the King, that it was dangerous for the State and touched the Crowne, that he should whisper into the peoples eares of the comming of a new King, labouring heereby to haue their flocking staied by Proclamation or other sharpe commandement; as that also, if this man were tolerated and winked at, the great Fathers of the Church might bee exposed to great shame and obloquy, as keeping the keyes of ^{Math. 23.13.} heauen, and neither entering themselues nor suffering others to enter. And againe, it might be thought fantastickall, that the people would leaue their trades to goe so farre to heare John. And for the Pharises themselues, they (as Luke 7. 30.) despised the counsell of God, and were not baptized of him: and Mat. 21. 27. Christ telleth them, they would neuer beleue that John came from heauen, but laboured by all meanes to supplant him; yet obserue, that before he had executed and finished his message, neither the power of Herod, nor the craft of the Pharises could suppreesse him. Howbeit as we heare in this place of great flocking, so Ioh. 5. 35. it is said that he was at first as a burning lamp, and the people for a season reioyced in this light, but after they grew secure and carelesse. ^{def. 2.} Where further note, that in deposing idolatry and in the restitution of the Gospell how earnest men haue bene; and the kingdome of God hath euen suffered violence

lence for a time, the people running in great multitudes to welcome it; but after it is once established, they grow to a Laodicean luke-warmth, Reuel. 3. neither hote nor cold, as if it were hony that could cloy the stomacke: therefore we must suspect the pregnancy and eager fits of them that runne so speedily at first to the Gospell, for Iohn soone loseth many of his hearers, some comming onely to behold him, some to intrap him, some to see what was in him that was so much renowned, and some to shake off the yoake of the law, thinking to get greater liberty by the Gospell, and few (as Christ saith) came of a good purpose and with honest hearts.

Further learne, that this baptizing heere spoken of, was of such as were of age, for they were not receiued before they confessed their sinnes. For this Sacrament being a seale of sinnes pardoned, there must first be a confession of sinnes committed, heere being a double couenant: first, God sealing vs a Charter of forgiveness in the blood of Christ through the sanctification of his spirit: secondly, God requiring of vs, first a confession, for who hath hope to haue his debt released before it bee acknowledged, or to be enfranchised before hee thinkes himselfe bond, or to be washed before hee seeth himselfe vnclane? secondly, a beleefe that the blood of Christ is of force and able to purge vs of all our sinnes: and thirdly, a dedication of our selues to serue the Lord in newnesse of life, as testifying our thankfulness for so gracious a pardon.

Heere the Iesuits like Spiders that sucke vp poison, gather vpon this confession of the people, a confession of shrift, that euery one should whisper his sinnes into the eares of the Priest before he can be pardoned, which is most absurd: for first, the word heere vsed beares not any secret confession, being answerable to that, Leu. 16.21: where the Priest was to confesse all the peoples sins, and to put them vpon the scape Goate, which praefigured Christ: secondly, this of Iohns was a publike action, and so no place for priuate whispering: thirdly, the sacrament of Baptisme which he ministred required this confession: for the profession of faith is requisite in them that are of yeares and baptized, for we are not then first ingrafted into Christ when we are baptized, but anterior in confession & baptism

 & whisper

but being already ingrafted we are then confirmed, and therefore Mat. 8. 37. the Eunuch first confessed his faith, and then was baptized by Phylp. And Mat. 16. 16. He that shall beleene and be baptized shall be saved: So as it was Iohns dutie as the minister of God, that such as receiued this seale, should giue testimony of their faith. Fourthly, Iohns giuing of generall plaisters argueth, that they confessed not each one their particular priuate slippes, and infirmities, for then he would haue giuen them speciall remedies: whereas (Luk. 3. 13. 14.) hee laboreth to prevent onely the abuses in their generall calling; as for souldiers to aske no more then their due, and to offer no violence, nor to accuse anie falsely, & such like as followeth in that place. Fifthly, if Iohn should haue troubled himselfe with such a particular confession as they dreame of, seuen yeeres would not haue sufficed him.

Now when he saw the Pharisees, &c.

Heere learne first, that it is in the wisdom of the Minister to discern of the auditory, and there is nothing more vsfauric then alwaies to vse one kinde of teaching: for according to the inordnate walking of some, they may and ought to be charged and reprov'd openly: for Herod though he be a king, (Mat. 14. 4.) must be told openly of his incest: and though Bethel be the kings chapell, Amos must tell Ieroboam that hee shall die by the sword, Amos 7. 11. Yea the Lord hath so cloathed his Ministers with wisdom and with righteousnesse, as they are able to appropriate the iudgements of God to particular sinnes, as to say, that the men of Bershebi (1. Sam. 6. 19. were slaine for looking into the Arke: that the Corinths were some sicke and some dead, (1. Cor. 11. 30.) for abusing the Sacrament: that Vzzab (2. Sam. 6. 7.) was stricken with death, for laying but his hand to the Arke to sustaine it: and in this place, that the Pharisees are but vipers, that would eate vp and deuoure their mother: this being a particular reprehension to them, wherewith the multitude were not blemished, for the hypocrisie of the Pharisees touched not them. Secondly, obserue heere, as Iohns wisdom able to discern betweene the chaffe and the corne, so his godly resolution whereby he durst challenge these great men which were reputed most holy, and the speciall leaders and gouernors of the people : for this he was enioyned to doe of the Lord, as it was said to Jeremy : Spare them not : and to Ezechiel : I will make thy face as brasse, that thou shalt not be afraid. And as it is said in Esay : Speake what euer it cost thee, be not ashamed to tell them, that be shamelesse of their faults. Whereupon Esay 50. 6. saith : I haue giuen my backe to the smiters, and my cheekes to the nippers, and haue not hid my face as being afraid of theirs. And this appeareth by John in this place by his sharpe reproofe, not mildely perswading them, but eagerly and bitterly rebuking them, giuing them their most iust titles, as, brood of vipers, not fathers of the Church, or leaders of the people ; knowing Elihu his speech in Iob to be most true, that man could giue no titles, that is, ought not to call a foole a wise-man, nor a Sadduce other then a Serpent. Thirdly note, he reproveth them, because it was profitable for the people, to vnderstand what grosse abusers they were of Moses chaire, carying a great and goodly shew of externall sanctimony and holinesse among the people : so as it was good and necessarie to discouer their pestilent hypocrisie. Heereupon Christ was enforced to doe the like, (Mat. 23.) calling them painted tombes, faire to sight, but their hearts were full of extortion:so that vnlesse they were disgraced among the people, the people could not turne their hearts and affections from them : therefore that they might not any longer bleare their eies, he is faine to vse these words of disgrace and disparagement of them.

Againe, in that he calleth them generation of vipers, obserue that hee excepteth not onely against these that came to heare him, but against the whole order of them : and of those two orders heere named, though they disagree in iudgement, the Pharisees holding that there is a resurrection ; the Sadduces, that after this life there is an vtter extinguishment of the soule: yet both agree in this, to be viperously minded against the Gospell, euen as the Atheists and Papists in these daies haue the same poison of their hearts common against the true professors, howsoeuer they bee diuersly distracted in factions. And such hath alwaies bene the condition of the Gospell, that euen the Princes of the earth, though otherwise diuided among themselues, will yet ioyne hands against the Lord. Which may not discourage vs, both because the Lord (as he did heere) will by his wisdom discover their poison before they cast it: and likewise as Aſa ſaith, (2. Chron. 14. 11) It is nothing with the Lord to helpe with manie or with no power, if we reſt on him, for his truth ſhall preuaile.

Again, in that John Baptiſt ſo ſharply takes them vp, learne, o6f.5. that there is nothing ſo ſenſleſſe as hypocriſie: for it was hard to perſwade a Phariſee he was not as good a man as liued, for thus they lied to their owne ſoules: They made faire monuments of the Patriarchs, as pretending to reuerence their remembrance: but Chriſt (Matth. 23. 33.) tels them they were onely monuments of their fathers crueltie, in putting them to death. So fearful a thing is it to accuſtome our ſelues to an outward ſhew of religion without ſinceritie, thinking that Gods thoughts be like ours, as to be pleaſed with that poſſeſſeth and dazeleth the bodily eie: whereas he pondereth the ſteps of the heart, that onely maketh the actions pure or vncleane. Therefore Saint John knowing it to bee ſo difficult to ſound the vaſt bottome of their filthie ſoules, they were ſo hardened and ouergrowne in hypocriſie, hee breaketh out into admiration, that their hearts being fraught with ſuch vncleaneſſe, they ſhould thinke it poſſible to flie from the vengeance that would at the laſt purſue them. Let vs therefore keepe the conſcience tender, and apply our hearts to entertaine the ſervice and worſhip of God in puritie and ſimplicite, aſſuring our ſelues it is not our outward pretence of holineſſe, nor cutting of the fleſh with the Priests of Baal, that 1. Kin 18. 28. ſhall goe for currant with the Lord, and proteſt vs from the wrath to come: but it is the plainneſſe of the heart, and the ſingleneſſe of the eie in the true ſervice of that one God, that ſhall Ioh. 4. 24. be accepted.

Further learne hence, what an abhominable thing ſinne is, o6f.6. and among the reſt hypocriſie, that it is able to transforme men into beaſts, as reſembling them in their qualities. And thus Dauid (Pſ. 32.) to make the ſinne of rebellion more odious, he compareth men to horſes and mules: the mule if he be not well watched, will take his rider in his teeth and lay him in the manger: and the horſe if he can caſt his rider, will giue him a kinde farewell with his heele. And if euer there might be iuſt complaint of this it is now, when men bee so full of iadish qualities that hardly can the Minister sit in his saddle. Sometimes men are compared to Lions, as the proud enemies of the Church: sometimes (as Psal. 22. 16.) to dogges, and Psal. 59. 6. So Paul calleth false teachers dogges, snarling against the preaching of the truth: sometime they are called swine, to disgrace the filthinesse of mans nature: sometime for their cruelty to Beares robbed of their whelpes: sometime for their boldnesse to Wolues, as (Mat. 10.) Christ saith: I send you as sheepe among Wolues, which (vers. 16.) he expounds to be among men: sometime to Buls, Psal. 22. The fat Buls of Basan seeke to deuoure me: sometime to wild Boares, as Dauid praieith: O Lord set a hedge before thy vineyard for feare of wild Boares, they are so full of rage: sometime for their subtilty they are termed Foxes, as Christ saith: Go tell that Fox (speaking of Herod) that I will preach to day and to morrow. sometime to horse-leaches, (Prou. 30. 15.) which haue two daughters that crie bring, bring, they are so full of cruelty: so Psal. 22. those that persecute and afflict the Church are called Vnicornes: and heere the Pharisees are named Vipers, that would eate and deuoure the Church, and yet they would come to heare; which made their sinne so much the heauier, that they would come to so holy a place with so vnholly harts. Thus doth sinne strangely change vs, and thus are men when the Lord hath giuen them ouer, that they haue not the property of one beast, but of all beasts: for they are as malicious as Apes, as eniuous as Serpents, and as venomous as Adders, and yet they dare come and stare the Lord in the face in his congregation, hauing neuer communed with their hearts before. This is that the Lord complaineth of, Jer. 7. 9. Will you steale, and commit adultery, and burne incense vnto Baal, and come and stand before me in this house where my name is called vpon? Nay, the Lord abhorreth all such manner of worship and sacrifice, as himselfe protesteth, Esa. 66. The sacrifice of a sheepe in this sort I esteeme as the blond of a man. For though the meanes to auoid the wrath to come, be by coming to Gods ordinance of preaching; yet to come with a pharisaicall heart, doth but increase the vengeance, and hasten thy destruction.

Psal. 58. 6.

Psal. 80. 13.

Luk. 13. 32.

Now

Now for the instruction : Bring forth therefore fruits, &c.
 Marke how plainly and precisely Iohn doth stand vpon an open declaration of repentance by amendement of life : for euery one may say he meaneth well, which if he doe, he will not be ashamed to bring it forth. So as if we will be trees of righteousness engrafted into Christ, we must shew forth the fruits and not the leaues of righteousness by the operation of his spirit : for thou canst not be one flesh with a harlot, and one spirit with the Lord Iesus, 1. Cor. 6. and charitie ought not to make mee beleeue him to be Christs sheepe that heareth not his voice. So as marke that the Lord meatureth the flowre of our hearts by the fruit of our lips ; for Out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh, and men may see our hearts through our hands. Since then the Lord requireth, that wee should approoue our faith to men, and manifest our reconciliation with God in heauen by the works of loue shewed to men on earth, let vs weigh our steppes that they may be straight, watch ouer our words that they may be gracious, passe nothing through our fingers that shall be entangled with the hurt of our neighbour, but measure out our actions by the rule and square of religious loue.

And say not with your selues, &c.

This is the second point before delivered, namely, the godlie and graue exhortation Iohn made vnto these false hearted Pharisees and Sadduces, containing two parts : first, what they should do, Amend their liues : Secondly, what they should not doe ; that they should not presume vpon the externall priuiledge they had, of being circumcised as the children of Abraham. For this was the error of their iudgement, that the whole seed of Abraham by generation of the flesh, were within the couenant of grace to be laued. And this is the obiection implied and answered by S. Paul, Rom. 9. 6. 7. namely, that if the Jewes were cast away, then the word of the Lord was fallen away, because it is said ; I will be thy God, and the God of thy seed for ever, which is confuted there by the Apostle, by a distinction of a double seed : There is an Israel in the couenant, and an Israel out of the couenant. So as there is a double election in the house of Israel, first generall, that all that came of the loines of Abraham should haue this dignity, to be accounted within the couenant, to partake of the word and seale of circumcision: The second is a speciall election out of the former, that out of the seed of Abraham, one seed onely should be sau'd: as it is Malach. 1. 2. Is not Esau Iacobs brother? yet haue I hated Esau and loued Iacob. Whereby appeareth there is a speciall election out of the generall, so as the grace of the couenant was offered to all Israel, and all Israel differed from the vncircumcised nations, yet the promise was effectually onely in the elect. Whereupon gather, that if these Pharisees had not beene blinded and bereaued of the spirit of truth, they would neuer haue stood vpon any externall priuiledge: for the promise being made indefinitely, had beene fulfilled if ten onely had beene sau'd: for the Scripture goeth onely thus farre: I will be the God of thy seed, not of all thy seed. And this the Apostle proueth in the place before, thus: If all the Iewes were within the compasse of the promise, and the couenant of grace by vertue of the outward seale of cutting the foreskin of the flesh, then it was necessary the first borne should bee, and that he might challenge this alsoone as any, to be sau'd. But this was not so: for in Ismael the eldest was not the promise, but in Isaac shall thy seed be called: so as God declared his purpose by distinguishing them at first, when the couenant was but new made, while Abraham himselfe liued, and when he had but two sonnes. And lest this particular example might bee excepted against, by reason of the disparagement in their birth, Ismael being borne of the bond woman: Take (saith the Apostle) Esau borne of the same wombe, begot of the same father, yea borne at the same time almost, and if there were any prerogative it was Esaus, for he was eldest, both of them circumcised; yet did not the promise pertaine to Esau, as is proved by two testimonies of Scripture, Gen. 25. 23. The elder shall serue the yonger: and Mal. 1. 2. I haue loued Iacob and hated Esau, his seruitude in the flesh being joyned with the hatred of God vpon his soule. So as the difference betweene the children of Abraham according to the flesh onely, and according to the flesh and spirit also, standeth in these two things: first, in Gods secret purpose, whom to glorifie and whom to reiect: secondly, in the effects of faith

and

and sanctification, for he is a true childe of Abraham, that walketh in the faith and steppes of Abraham, Roman. 4. 12. and they that doe otherwise, (as Christ saith, Ioh. 8. 44.) are the children of their father. To which the Pharisees in great indignation excepting, What (say they) dost thou account vs bastards? Abraham is our father: No, saith Christ, so as trueth and meeknesse it selfe spake it, yee are the children of the diuell. For vnder this pretence of issuing from Abrahams loines, they would despise that sonne, and abandon that Messias in whom Abraham and the rest of the fathers looked and trusted to be saued. Howbeit, if we come to this, why doth Ismael persecute the profession of Isaac, and Esau sell his birth-right, and Iacob embrace it as a pledge of the inheritance of heauen? This commeth from the election of God, who had purposed to gine this grace to the one, and to denie it to the other, the cause of his infidelitie resting in his owne soule. And it was not an vniuersall promise plight to Abraham, that he would be the God of euery particular singular man that should come from his line, but it was giuen indefinitely without limitation (to thy seed) as of one: which is that Paul prouoeth, Gal. 3. 16. namely, that there could be no reconciliation betweene the Iewes and the Gentiles, but by that one seed which was Christ.

Now the cause Saint Iohn giueth: and the reason hee alleageth why they should not thus flatter and deceiue themselues in the name of Abrahams seed, is, because God is able euen of stones to raise vp children vnto Abraham. And at the first Abraham indeed was dead in respect of that strength of nature to beget a childe, Gen. 18. 12. and it was as easie to make a stone a man, as to make a dead man get a man. Out of which we learne, that God is omnipotent, not onely to do what he will, but alio to do more then euer yet he hath purposed to doe: as heere he is able of stones to raise vp men, but he neuer did it. Answerable to that speech of Christ in the Gospell: if I would I could command (Mat. 26. 53.) twelue legions of Angels to rescue me, yet he did it not. Now three things there be which God cannot doe, and yet sheweth no impotencie, nor derogateth any thing from his omnipotencie: as first, he cannot doe contrarie to the proprietie of

three things, god could doe

Jer. 1. 17.

his person, as God cannot be begotten, nor the Sonne of God cannot beget: secondly, that is contrarie to the essentiall properties of his Godhead, as he cannot repent, nor change, nor lie, nor be finite, for all these are signes of weaknesse and imperfection: thirdly, he cannot doe that which implies a contradiction, as that a stone being a stone should be a man; but of a stone he can make a man, and of a man a stone: as Lots wife was turned (Gen. 19. 26.) into a pillar of salt, but when she ceased to be a woman. So against the Lutherans, that hold, they eate the very flesh of Christ in the Sacrament, wee acknowledge that God is able to turne bread into flesh, but then he must change the substance: for I will neuer beleue, that that which I see and taste, and touch as bread, can being bread be flesh also. So for the humanity of Christ, as it is his bodie it cannot be euery where, for a bodie must haue his dimensities, as height, breadth, and length, and must be limited and circumscribed in a place certaine. And it abridgeth nothing from his all-sufficiencie: for it is contrarie to the nature of a substance to be euery where, remaining a substance. True it is, the Lord can make the sea to stand vp as wals, (Exod. 14. 21.) on both sides, for the passage of the Israelites, but it was a sea still: so he can make the Sunne against the course of nature (Iosh. 10. 12.) to stand still and stay his course, but it was the Sunne still; but he cannot make a body to be euery where, for that doth abolish the nature of it.

Now is the Axe laid to the root, &c.

This is the third point was deliuered, namely, the commination which Iohn vsed, mixing and interlacing his sermon with the iudgements of God, wherein he threatneth them with eternall damnation, except they repent and become new men. The whole speech is allegoricall and a continued borrowed speech, which may be thus resolued: God is compared to a husbandman, for he had planted a vineyard in Iuda, namely, his church: the people are compared to trees, the ministerie of Iohn to an axe, that will cut quickly, either to hasten to damnation or to saluation. As elsewhere it is compared to a Fanne that separates the chaffe from the wheat, and in Jeremie to a hammer, either to bruse a broken heart, or to beat it downe to hell. The roots of the trees are compared to the soules of men, the forme of the speech prefigureth the finall sentence that shall bee given at the latter day, the hewing downe signifieth the separation of the bastardy Iewes from the communion and fellowship of the true Israelites; and casting into the fire setteth foorth their eternall damnation in hell: so as it is thus much in effect: You Pharisees presume not any longe. vpon Gods patience, for yee cannot now pretend ignorance as yee might haue done; and for that time (as Acts 17.30.) God will not call you to any heauie reckoning, he hath bene carefull to dresse his garden, he hath suffered you to abuse the people by your government in the Church, but now locke vnto your selues, for now shall my ministerie cut into your soules, and shall shew whether yee be bastards or no, and now shall it appeare who is the child of Abraham by receiuing Christ that cometh.

In that it is said now, and that the axe is laid not to lop but to cut downe: learne, that when the Gospell is preached, then the Lord comes to make a separation betweene the elect and the reprobate, which could not before be discerned, as it is in the Gospell; there shall be two in one bed, one shall be receiued and the other reiected: for when this raine falleth, then the Lord meaneth to trie who is truly planted and hath taken root in his sonne, and if (as Heb. 6. 7.) it bringeth foorth herbes meet for the dresler, then receiueth it a blessing; but if the heart bring foorth thornes, then is ineeere vnto cursing: so as if any obstinately persist in the earth, drinking in the moisture and yet increaseth not, his damnation shall be the more iust, because there is now no place for excuse left. And to applie this more neerely to our selues, if the Sodomites (Gen. 19. 28.) were waisted with fire for abusing but one Lot: If the Niniuites had bene destroyed (Jonah 4. 11.) for not repenting at the preaching of one Jonah: If they were put to death that despised but one Moses, and the old world (Gen. 6. 13.) swept away for contemning the preaching of one Noah: If they were given vp (Rom. 1. 24.) to serue their owne lusts, that profited not by that one light of nature, whereby they were constrained to acknowledge a superiour power, that made that excellent frame of heauen and earth. If the Phari-

oh. 1.

Luk. 17. 34.

rifées were thus sharply charged and reprooued for not amending their liues at these few sermons of one John Baptist, much more may wee feare lest wee be swallowed vp of present destruction, that haue had so many sounds of the Lords trumpets and yet haue not retired from our owne waies, that after to much dressing, and pruning, and lopping, haue brought forth nothing but briars, that haue deuoured so many full yeares of peace and yeeres of preaching and plentie, and yet continue leane and illfaoured in the course of our liues; for now at the tyme of the Gospel (as we see heere) beginneth iudgement.

 Secondly, learne how faithfully John executed and performed his ministry, which stood in two parts, as was foretold by Malachy. chap. 4. to preach mercie and iudgement, both which he performed in this one sermon. Heere the Iesuits take occasion to say, that we should dehort men from euill for feare of hell, and exhort them to doe well in hope of heauen. We say with Paul, who is our patterne and forerunner, that we haue weapons for all those that shall despaire after the obedience of Gods Saints fulfilled, but we preach not onely to worke well in hope of heauen, for as we are seruants we deserue nothing, but as children wee are receiued to an inheritance bought for vs before we were: so we strue not that men should keepe themselues from sin onely for feare of hell; for the Lord will neuer account of such a soule as will doe nothing but for feare of the whip, for hee loueth a free giuer, and hateth constrained subiection: and it is not the horror of damnation but the commemoration of the Lords mercie shewed toward vs in giuing his owne Sonne to so ignominious a death, to ransom vs from that curse wee had incurred. This is that containes vs within the bounds of obedience: for if the heart blood of the Lord Iesus will not make thy heart to relent, and thy hands to tremble to put them forth to wickednesse, then art thou in a desperate case. Shall the feare of the gibbet, or the ghastly shew of death, make one that was a traitor, and now pardoned and aduanced vnto high place by the meere mercie of his Soueraigne, shall this make him afraid to commit treason againe, and nothing else? nay the grace of his Prince shall rest alwaies before his eies, and shall most forcibly perswade him to perseuere in his loialtie. For this is the most effectuall of all others, to moue vs in the bowels of the mercies of Christ, to keepe our selues cleane and washed, because wee are already purified in his blood, and not for feare of falling into the pit againe.

Thirdly note, that if any man will escape and auoide damnation, he must of necessitie liue wel, for he must be a tree bringing forth good fruit. Where first consider what is good fruit; which is implied in the text; it cannot bee good except the tree be good: as Christ saith, If the casting out of a diuell be a good worke, why am not I a good man? So as first the person must be accepted before the worke be accepted, and no person can please without faith that purifieth the heart, and there is no such heart where religion dependeth not vpon the true worship of the law of God; and by consequent there is no good faith where the heart is not cleansed by the spirit of God. Since then a man must first be good before he can doe good, it is impossible that anie man erroneous in religion should produce a good worke: External righteousnesse and the morall vertues of the Papists is a vizard that bleares manie mens eies, and wee say that they are honest; as well may we say it of them that hanged vp the Lord Iesus, thinking he had spoken blaspheemie, because being but a poore wretch to see to, he challenged himselfe to be the Sonne of God, and in this doing they thought they had done God an excellent peece of seruice. And for Paul before his conuersion who could except against his life? nay as he testifieth of himselfe, hee walked according to all the ordinances the law prescribed; yet after hee was called, he accounted all his morall righteousnesse but as the excrement of a dogge. And if religion do not distinguish betweene men, the heathen shall condemne both vs and them, who by the meere instinct of nature liued in the hatred of grosse sinnes, and walked soberly without exception, and yet are they already damned. For first, we must be good by grace, and being adopted into Christ then we doe good: and of all the trees of the forest (as Ezec. 15. 3.) there is none but is better then the vine if it beate not grapes, for the oake is good for timber, and euerie tree may serue for some good vse, but the

the sarments of the vine if it be not clustered is fit for nothing but for the fire. The Papists are good asokes to build monasteries and to set vp houses and places of religion; but an vnfaithfull and vnfruitfull Protestant and Professor is good for nothing, (being but a rotten bough or branch of a fruitlesse and barren vine) but to be burned. So that to iudge a worke to be good, it must bee good both quo ad fontem & quo ad finem, proceeding from an honest heart, and driuing to a right end, the glory of God, to whom I owe honor. Further, to come to the true knowledge of good fruit, let vs know what bad fruit is, which is double, first, sinnes in substance, such as are contrarie to the expresse commandement of God, as adulterie is absolutely a sinne in Dauid as wel as in any other: secondly, sinnes by circumstance, as giuing of almes, onely when the trumpet sounds, to be seene of men; or to come into the sanctuarie with a purpose to pray, and presently to returne to his vomit againe: for the Lord abhorreth what himselfe commandeth (Esay 66.) if it be not done with that heart he commandeth. The sacrifice of a sheepe is in his sight as the blood of a man, not that he hateth the action, but the hypocrisie in the action which staineth the whole: as Hagg. 2. 13. if an vncleane person touch the holy flesh, the flesh it selfe is vncleane; but holie flesh maketh not other flesh holy which was not so before.

Matt. 23. 5.

obf. 4.

not enough to be not done, but with the same

Further obserue, where it is said, Euery tree that bringeth not foorth good fruit shall be hewne downe: that it is not enough not to doe euill, but it is damnable not to do good; for he doth not say, the tree that brings foorth no fruit, but that brings not forth good fruit. For it is not enough for Zacheus (Luk. 19) after his conuersion to be no poller or robber of the poore, but his conscience cannot be assured of; his pardon before he hath satisfied the poore for that he had got amisse: secondly, hee must bring foorth another fruit of repentance, not onely to restore, but to giue liberally, and to be compassionate toward the afflicted Saints; not by this to satisfie the Lord, but to assure his owne soule that the Lord is satisfied in the death of Christ. And it is not said, Come yee blessed, because yee haue not persecuted the truth, nor scorned the professors thereof; for not the euill

they haue not done, but the good they haue done, as releeuing the poore, visiting the sicke, and such like, shall come to iudgement. And for the damned, it is not said to them, Go and depart, for ye haue put to death, & by all vniuit waies vexed and abused my children; for these are so grosse as their owne soules crie out against them: but the forme of the sentence is, Ye haue despised me, and would not be of my livery, but disdained to be found in the company of professors: for cursed be Meroz, Iudg. 5. 23: that helped not in the day of battell, nor that ever she fought against the Lords cause, or once drew weapon against Christ, but because she came not foorth armed to assist the Lords cause. So this must be the fruit of Peters repentance, not onely not to deny his matter any more, but (Math. 26. 35.) to stand to him to the death: neither is it enough for persecutors of the Gospel to leaue off to persecute, but they must with Paul learne to be persecuted for the Gospell: and so for parents to take heed to their children not to be garish in their youth, lest by this their hearts may be ad-judged to be proud in their age.

Now if that tree be neare vnto burning that brings not foorth good fruit, what shall wee say of those trees that from the root of a filthy and fleshly heart bring forth vsauory and stinking fruit? If Dimes be damned Luk. 16. 22. that gaue not bread and refreshing to Lazarus, what shall become of them that take away bread, and doe grind the faces of the poore? If he were bound hand and foot (Mat. 18. 33.) that prosecuted his right so extremely against his fellow seruant, whither shall they be cast that labour the vniuit vexation of men, pretending title to that coat they neuer bought? If Obadiab shall hardly answer it, 1. Kin. 18. 4. before God that hid the Prophets by fifty in a caue, and fed them with bread and water, because he durst not professe his religious heart openly, being in the time of Iezabel a Queene and a queane; how shall they bee able to excuse themselues which in the time of this gracious and good harted Prince libel against them by false suggestions, and labour the vtter vndoing of them, themselues professing nothing for feare of succession? And if they that did but build, and plant, and mary, and giue in marriage, all which in themselues were lawfull, were swept and caried away (Gen. 7.) with the vniuersall flood, whither shall the tempest of the Lords fury cary them that blaspheme against his name, snarle against his messengers, and like swine doe wallow in their owne filthinesse, all which are simply abhominable in themselues? If the Pharisees that were carefull to heare Iohn with some good minde, were so sharply reprobued as to be termed vipers, what title may be giuen to them that refuse altogether to come? If they that heare not the voice of Christ bee not his sheepe, what be they that turne against him to rend him? Or that come to the Temple to no other end then to intrap him? If of three sorts of seeds and hearers, whereof the one takes the seed, the second receiues it with some good heart, the third cherisheth it so well as it growes to a blade, and yet all of them be damned: where shall they rest that neuer vouchsafed with any religious eares to heare the message of saluation brought them? If many bee shut out that preached the Gospell, and many that strieve to enter in shall not, what place shall bee prepared for them that thinke themselues too fine to binde vp the wounds of the broken hearted, and that haue euery step since their first birth directly sailed toward hell, disauowing all meanes whereby they might bee reduced to the right way? If the fig-tree was accursed because it had no fruit, though (Marke 11. 13.) it was full of leaues, what curse shall light vpon those trees that are full of poisoned and corrupt fruit? Note also Saint Iohn saith euery tree, not excepting any, but what euer he be, Jew or Gentile, from the Prince to the basest of the people, they must be fruitfull: for being all equally corrupted, we ought all equally to be cleansed, and the Princes soule needes as much washing as the subiects.

Againe, obserue a consequence of great comfort, that euery tree that brings foorth good fruit must needs be saued, and this is a wonderfull consolation to all Gods children; for all that are in Christ, Rom. 8. 1. are out of condemnation, and he hath Christ that hath his spirit; he hath his spirit that striveth against his corruptions, he doth this that crucifieth his flesh, and he crucifieth his flesh that ceaseth from sinne, and he doeth this, that amendeth his life and repenteth.

Lastly, learne hence that the tree and the fruit must goe together;

ther ; for though faith alone doth iustifie , yet faith that is alone doth neuer iustifie , but is dead without workes : like that charity James 2. 16. which onely bids a man warme him , but doth not giue him wherewithall to refresh him. The eye alone of all the parts of the body doth see , but the eye that is alone separate from the body doth not see ; so the feet alone doe cary the body , but if they be cut off and seuered from the body they doe not stirre. True it is , no tree shall escape the cutting vnlesse it be good , but none shall therefore escape it because it is good : for none shall be saued without mortification , but none for their mortification shall be saued : therefore let vs beware lest wee disioyne that in our liues which is alwaies conioyned in doctrine , the faith of Paul and the workes of James.

MATH. chap. 3. vers. II.

11. Indeed I baptize you with water to amendment of life , but he that commeth after me is mightier then I , whose shooes I am not worthy to beare , he will baptize you with the holy Ghost and with fire.

OW because among the multitude , as more plainely appeareth Luke 3. 15. they strongly held and esteemed John to bee Christ and the Messias that should come , hee knowing this by reuelation , or otherwise by the speech of some particular person among them , laboureth to resolue them , and to plucke vp this opinion by the roots , making protestation , that there was great disparagement and

and inequality between him and Christ, his baptisme and Christs, his person being but the herbingier, and the person of Christ, whose comming he proclaimed; yea so great, as he was not worthy to do him the basest seruice, so much as to pull off his shooes, this being a prouerbe taken from those countries, where trauellers going in the heat all day, did accustome at their iournies end to haue a seruant attendant, to plucke off their shooes and to wash their feete.

1 In the speech there are two parts to be obserued: first, the abasing of himselfe and his office: secondly, the magnifying of the ministry of the Messias.

oef. 1. Heere first note, that Iohn doth not compare the baptisme hee administred, with that the Apostles should afterward minister, nor his outward signe of water with theirs, as being any difference betweene them; but he compareth his owne person with the person of Christ, and that which he worketh visibly with water, with that which Christ worketh supernaturally cleansing the conscience. They therefore are deceiued, that thinke Iohns baptisme lesse effectuall then this of ours drawne from the Apostles, for in the substance there is no difference, but onely in the manifestation and perspicuity of it, that as Iohn was plainer then the Prophets, so were the Apostles and after Ministers more plaine then hee: which was signified by that speech of Christ, Hee that is least in the kingdome of God is greater then Iohn Baptist: this being meant of their ministeries; for the Sunne is the same both in the morning in his weaknesse, and at noone daie in his strength: and there is the same humane nature in a child as in a man, and no other baptisme in substance now then this of Iohns, being both instituted by the same Lord. But the Iesuites challenge the Calvinists for making Iohns baptisme comparable with the Apostles; for Iohns (say they) did not remit sinnes, but he onely baptized them vnto amendment of life. Wee answer; first, in neither of their baptismes there is any remission of sins, this onely being in the power of Christ the institutor: as in circumcision, the cutting of the flesh in it selfe auailed nothing; but the efficacy was in sealing to the conscience the beliefe in the Messias to come, for many had outwardly that that signe whom the Lord abhorred : and if that did but secure the soule vpon an inward beleefe, much more is baptisme now but a seale of righteousnesse vnto vs. Againe, if their baptisme vnder the cloud was the same with Iohns, so was that of the Apostles : and could any of them giue any more then the external ministerie? But Iohn (say they) baptized onely to amendment of life. We answer, as it is Marke 4. Iohn baptized to repentance and remission of sinnes ; and can there be any repentance without remission? No : for being promised both together, they are receiued of the person both together. Againe, if this baptisme of ours and that of Iohns be not the same in substance, then did not Christ sanctifie our baptisme in his flesh ; which is false : for man can giue but the outward element, and Christ alone doth purge the soule.

Secondly, learne what power there is in the outward ministerie of men, and in the outward seales : for howsoever the Scripture doth magnifie outward means, and the men as instruments; as that Paul is said to saue soules, and to haue begot Onesimus in the faith, Philemon, chap. i. and our ministerie is called the ministerie of the spirit: yet when the scripture will shew what either the men or the meanes separately and apart can do in their owne nature, and that all is the worke of God onely, then either the meanes are not at all mentioned, or else they are woonderfully debased : as, Paul can but plant, Apollo can but water, but it is God that giueth the increase. Heere Paul is nothing, for the blessing is onely from the Lord, the internall being opposed to the external: for whensoever these be either opposed by comparing, or compared by opposing, then all is in God ; for God dealeth otherwise in disposing of things that nourish to eternall life, then of those that helpe to the conseruation of this present life. As there is some power and as it were an inherent vertue in bread to nourish in it owne nature, and there is power of generation in man to beget ; but to awake the conscience and to cleanse the heart, there is no power that remains in the Ministers person, or in the seales of Baptisme and the Lords Supper: the Minister separately hee speaks, and it is but a perishable breath, as the voice of another man, though they be the words of God : for otherwise , why should Lydiaes heart bee opened more then any of the rest of the hearers ? there was the same voice of man sounding into the same eares of men by nature. And in Baptisme for himselfe the Minister can doe nothing but powre on water , and the water is but naturall , which can but wet the body , and there is no power appropriate to it that of it selfe it is able to conuey any security to the conscience. But doe not the words of institution worke something , and bee they not operatorious to worke some change ? As the words bee pronounced with the organ and instrument of the mouth , it cannot make the bread to alter the substance ; but the words haue this power to declare what the Lord will worke , first for our selues that we must breake bread ; for the people that they must eate it : This is my body , shewing what the Lord will doe , that wee must not be amazed in beholding the signes , but lift vp our eyes vnto the Lord that giueth Christs bloud to the heart of euery beleeuer : for there is no flesh in the bread , nor vnder the bread , nor with the bread. These therefore haue no power to conuey any grace to the soule , for if they had , then were all regenerate that receiue them : and sometime regeneration preceeds and goeth before baptisme , as in Cornelius , Acts 10. sometime it followeth baptisme , as in children. And againe if there were any power in water of it selfe , or by the words of institution , then after the sacrament the water should euer remaine sanctified , which we see contrary , for it doth putrisie like common water. And no more doeth the Sacrament depend vpon the intention of the giuer and consecrator , then it doth vpon the intention of the receiuer : for it was as true a sacrament and as effectually offered to Simon Magus and to Indus as to the other of the Disciples : for the same Sunne shineth to all , though some doe shut their eies.

Further , obserue and beware that we doe not make duos totos baptismos , two whole baptismes , one of Iohns another of Christs , but onely of one whole baptism two parts , as of one whole man we make two parts , body and soule : one is as in the law , a circumcision with the hand cutting the flesh , the other cleansing the conscience by faith in Christ. Neither do we make them two that

God separates, for it is the same word of life in it selfe, but not to them that eate it not : to the elect it is effectually conueied ; to the reprobate it is truly offered by God, but separate by their vnbeleefe. Therefore let vs consider the analogy and naturall relation in baptisme : the externall thing is water, such as is common : the thing inward is the very blood of Christ answered by the signe. The application of water to the cleansing of the body, is answered by the applying of the holy Ghost : the effect of water is to purifie from filth, so is it of the blood of Christ to purge from sinne : and this two waies, by killing and renewing, by mortifying and quickning : by the dipping in the water is represented the death of Christ, and his resurrection signified by pulling out of the water, that as we are buried with him in Baptisme, so we shall rise with him by his spirit.

Why, but hath John no power but to put on water? euery man may doe so : and how is it then that (2. Cor. 3. 6.) Paul saith, God hath made vs ministers of the spirit and not of the letter ; for there he compareth the Law to the Gospell, Moses to the Apostles? Moses gaue vnto the people the two tables, which was onely a commandement externall, for he could not change his owne heart, nor apply his owne soule to the performance of the law ; but it was onely as if a man should write to a blind man to bid him reade, or to a deafe man to bid him heare. And can Paul doe any more to conuert the Corinths? No : but this is the difference; the preaching of the Gospell which is the ministry of the spirit, doth not onely require faith, but giueth faith to be saued : for of it selfe it is as easie to keepe the law as to beleene. Why, but Paul saith to Timothy, 1. Tim. 4. 6. Attend on the worke of preaching to saue thy selfe and others : and Paul of himselfe saith, I begat you : and Mal. 4. 6. it was prophesied of this John, that he should conuert the hearts of men. This is most true when the externall and internall doe ioyne and iumpe together and when they are not compared by opposition, but are comprehensiuely taken together, then we can bind and loose sinnes : and as Leuit. 16. 16. then the Priest shall make thy soule cleane. But as it was said that there was in paradise (Genes. 3. 22.) the tree of life, not that it had any life in it, but that they that should eate of it should liue for ever; and so of the tree of knowledge, which was so called by the effect it wrought, making vs to know what good we lost, and what nakednesse we fell into: so it is said, that we forgie sinnes, John 20. 23. because the word of reconciliation is put into our mouthes, not that we doe it by any absolute authority, but necessarily, because our commission extendeth to it by God. And so all morall matters vnder the law were but a meere pageant, sauing that they sealed to them the inward, which was the blood of Christ: and where such efficacy was given to the sacrifices, there the inward thing was attributed to the outward, so as we must still hold that all power and sufficiency is of God, 2. Cor. 3. 5.

Further obserue, that John of necessitie must giue water, or else Christ can giue no blood; and except there be planting and watering nothing can grow. So as we must learne to submit our selues to the ministry, else can wee not ordinarily expect for any grace at Gods hands, for he giues but increase and blessing to his worke-mens labour, and though the voice of the Preacher be but a vanishing voice, wanting power to affect the conscience, and vertue to illuminate the eies, for the voice cannot pierce
the soule, yet we must humble our selues to Johns ministry:
for by this voice doth the Lord giue life, and as hee cannot hope for fruit that neuer sowed, nor expect for wine that neuer planted, no more can hee looke for life that neuer heard, for faith commeth by hearing, Rom. 10. 17: and without faith there is no saluation. So as vnlesse we doe embrace this ordinance of God, to follow them whom hee hath made his armes to reach forth vnto vs the bread of life we can neuer beleue; and except we desire to be sealed with the great seale of heauen committed vnto them, wee shall neuer be saued: for as it is said Gen. 17:
14. every soule contemptuously refusing circumcision shall bee cut off: and he that despiseth the bread, doth betray and crucifie the Lord Iesus as the Iewes did, that bad away with him. John must be regarded because he puts on water, for who is not glad to receiue his pardon by the person of any? and why should their feet bee contemptible that bring vs such newes from the mouth of God? And if wee dare not in paine of damnation but thinke

thinke reuerently of the seales, that is, of water and bread in the Sacraments, how much more must wee reuerence the doctrine, that is of far greater maiesty ? for the Sacraments are but blankes without the word.

Further consider heere in Iohns baptizing to amendment of life : that as all Sacraments are couenants, and in couenants there is alway something agreed on betweene both parties : so in Baptisme God promiseth to receiue, Christ to redeeme, the holy Ghost to sanctifie : and on the other side, we promise to beleue this, and to repent vs of our transgressions. For as Baptisme sealeth vnto vs remission of sinne, so also doth it seale as it were from vs amcndment of life: and to whomsoeuer the Lord sealeth this assurance that he will saue him, to him also he sealeth regeneration and newnesse of life. And as Paul saith, Rom. 2. 26. if vncircumcision beleue well, it shall bee saued rather then circumcision : that is, if the outward signe bee separated from the inward, and not accompanied with cleannessse of heart, and obedience to the commandement, hee that wants the outward seale, and yet is circumcised in heart, is more to bee accounted of then the other. Therefore let vs looke and take heed we performe the vow wee made before God and his Angels in our baptisme, namely, as to beleue the promises, so to repent and reforme our liues : for he that will assure himselfe of the benefite of Baptisme, must see what power he hath to subdue his corruptions.

He will baptize you with the holy Ghost and with fire.

That is, by the holy Ghost Christ will seale the pardon of their sinnes, who hath the same power that fire hath, as first, to burne vp all trash and stubble : secondly, to purifie things that are to be purged : thirdly, to giue light in darkenessse : fourthly, to quicken things that are benumbed and stiffe with cold. So as let vs examine our selues whether wee haue felt these effects of this spirit: for if he filthinesse and frowardnesse of our nature be burnt vp and consumed : if our harts be swept and cleansed from vile and loose affections : if our vnderstandings be illuminated and lightened with the lampe of the Gospell : if we be inflamed and set on fire with the zeale of Gods glory, and well hearted toward his children, then may wee hope to haue beene bapt ized truely: for the holy Ghost worketh these things in beleeuers. But he that is drossie or luke-warme in his profession, that is hard hearted to the Saints, that followeth the sent of his affections, and that is weary of the candle of truth, hath cause to suspect that he is not yet baptized with the holy Ghost. In Ioh. 3. 5. this spirit is compared to water cleansing the soule inwardly, which hath three properties: first, to wash away filthinesse: secondly, to moisten that which is drie, and to quench thirst, and allay the scorching heate: thirdly, to fructifie: as Psalm. 1. willowes are said to bee fruitfull planted by the water side: euen so the holy Ghost doth purifie and wash the soule, refresheth the conscience scorched with the feare of Gods vengeance, and giueth power to make our drie and barren hearts to prosper in euery good worke.

MATH. chap. 3. Vers. 12.

12. Which hath his fan in his hand, and will make cleane his floore, and gather his wheat into his garner, but will burne up the chaffe with unquenchable fire.

Because it falleth out in great auditories and assemblies, that there bee many wilfull and peruerse persons, which doe not esteeme of the Lords rich bounty, but doe scorne and tread vnder foote the mercy offered: John Baptist doth heere denounce peremptory vengeance and intollerable torment against all those that shall not submit themselues to the ministry of the Messias, and that they which will not bee baptized with the fire of the holy Ghost and of Christ,

Christ, that is, with his bloud and with his spirit, shall be baptized with the fire of hell.

The words doe containe an Allegorie or continued borrowed speech, which may be thus resolved. First, by the Fanne vnderstand the ministerie of the Gospell, which should begin at the preaching of Iesus, and should winnow the people to make a separation betweene the bastardy brood of Abraham, and the true Nathaniels, Ioh. 1. chap. 47. Israelites in whom is no guile, betweene them that had onely the marke of circumcision in the flesh, and them whose hearts and vile affections were inwardly circumcised. By that it is said, In his hand, is ment, that it is presently to be manifested. By store, vnderstand all places where a Church may be gathered, or more specially for a visible Church already gathered, Iohn addressing his speech heere to the Iewes, which were at this time the Church of God. By wheate, is ment all that should beleue, either Iewes or Gentiles. By the Garner, is ment the kingdome of heauen. By chaffe, is ment hypocrites and vnbeleuers, mis. liuers, or the children of perdition, that refuse to bee fanned by the Lords voice. By cleansing, is ment that separation the Gospell should make betweene the apostate Iew, and the beleeuing Iew. By unquenchable fire, is ment the torment of hell prouided for vnbeleuers.

Out of this first generally obserue, that where the Gospell comes and is preached with power, and with a good conscience, and not huckstered nor merchandized as men doe their wares: but that they so labour as not to be ashamed of that they doe, preaching their doctrine not to the eare, but to the doore of the conscience, that there it makes a manifest difference betweene true and false children, whereas before all was shuffled together: for though before this time the Pharitees and all others were as one, bearing the same title of Abrahams seed, yet saith Iohn, afterward shall come the venting of the Gospell, which with the powerfull blast thereof, shall scatter the hypocrites, and make knowne the faithfulness of them that with honest hearts embrace and cherish it. After this maner is the word in the Epistle to the Hebrewes, compared to a sword with two edges, that cutteth two waies, either to conuersion if it

o G. 1.

Heb. 4. 12.

be beleued, or to confusion if it be despised. Hereupon it is, that Simcon did prophesie to Mary (Luk. 2. 34.) to preuent any conceit might rise in her minde of her dignitie and glory, being the mother of the eternall Lord, heereby thinking that all the world should applaud her for her Sonne, telling her, that this child should be set vp for the rising and ruine of many; a marke that euery man should shoot at, and by his comming should the hearts of many be discovered: For the sound of his mouth (Heb. 4. 12.) deuides betweene the ioynts and the sinewes, and the marrow and the bones: anatomizing the hearts of men, to see whether they be found or rotten. And they that before seemed to bee all one, shall when the fan comes differ: then the poison that before lurked, shall bee layed forth, and the hidden gall shall be displaied. Heereupon also the word is compared to fire, which hath a double effect, to wast stubble and drosse, and to purifie that is refinable, as siluer and gold. For the Gospell hath this vertue, to inflame some mens hearts with a zealous loue of God and his glory: setting others on fire to persecute it, to quench and to impugne it. This effect had it in Iohns time, some saying, that he was an honest man; some, that he was Christ; others, that he was a Galilean, whence could come no good thing; and others more plainely, that hee was a diuell, all before being as they thought well circumcised and the children of Abraham. So when Christ spake in his owne person, the chaffe flew away, and then was easily knowen who was an hypocrite, hee comming to some place where they had rather haue their hogges (Mark. 5. 17.) then their soules saued; and to others where they brought him to the side of a hill of purpose to haue throwne him downe: and to Iairus house, where some (Mark. 5. 40.) laugh him to scorne for his speech. This fanne by Christ was committed to his Apostles, that they likewise should make a separation where they came. Paul Preaching at Antioch, the Iewes railed against him, when the Gentiles desired him to preach the same sermon the next Sabbath. And by the power of this Fanne (Act. 22. 23.) the Iewes cast vp dust in the aire, and crie, that Paulis vnworthy to liue. And Act. 23. 12. certaine doe bind themselues by oath $\frac{3}{2}$ to eat nor drinke till they had killed him: when as others

Luk. 3. 16.
Mat. 11. 16.

others in Iudæa did submit themselves and became the true disciples of Christ. Yea (Luk. 12. 53.) it appeareth that there is no bond so streight nor so well knit, but religion will violate, and cause the father with the sonne, the mother with the daughter, to impugn the Gospell with hostility: not that it is the property of the Gospell to breed dissention, but it is the malice of Sathan to enrage mens hearts, that they should not receive it, that his barnes might be full. And then must Ahab (1. King. 21. 19.) yeeld to Eliab, and not Eliab to Ahab. There is execrable cruelty committed on the infants of Bethlem: who is the cause of it? not Christ, but Herod; and Christ may not giue place to Herod, though it cost neuer so much blood.

Secondly, obserue where it is said, hee will make his floore cleane, that all that refuse the Gospell, whatsoeuer they pretend, they are but chaffe. For the Pharisees heere which had the chiefest places in the Church, they pretend to haue the Oracles and the temple, to be descended from the Patriarks, and to liue after the law of Moses: yet they are but chaffe which fill the floore, being onely puffed vp with pride, and hauing no sound graine in them: for when Christ is offered they persecute him, and crie: Hang him, as an enemy to the law of Moses, so as their intention was good, yet was that no excuse: for then they that persecuted the Prophets, and crucified the Lord of glory should be blamelesse; for they had a zeale, but not according to knowledge. Now if they that stand onely in defence of that God himselfe ordained, and like not that any of that should be abrogated by the Gospell, are but chaffe, what shall they be that seeke to maintain their owne traditions against both law and Gospell, and stand in defence of many corruptions in the Church of God, and yet perswade the Prince that all is well, what can they bee but chaffe of the worst sort?

o. G. 2.

Mat. 27. 22.

And will purge his floore, &c.

Here may be demanded, what the cause is, why there is so much chaffe in our Church, and so little good graine: for it is strange to see with what belligods it is stuffed, how disguised men be in pride, and how excellent in vsury: which bee not as S. Peter calleth them spots, but as the biles and vlcers of Egypt: 2. Pet. 2. 13.
yea

yea so much biting gaine raigneth among vs, as hath made no more friendship betweene man and man, then betweene Cain and Abel: such whoredome as the Sunne cannot hide it, nor the earth beare it, but doth crie for vengeance, and their children baptized that are woorse then Sodomites, which (as Saint Iude saith) be now in hell. To this we answer, that the cause is, first,

1 the want of fanning in many places of the land, the people hauing onely a man set ouer them, that can giue no one word to separate, but onely reade bare Service and stinted praier, which can make no manifest separation, but of open recusants: so as the people may well be quiet, because the word neuer blowes among them; and till the winde come, the chaffe and the wheat are mixt together: for can the wild asse bray if he hath grasse? or the ox low if he hath fodder? or an hypocrite shew himselfe till his heart be discovered, and his vizard taken off? All the plagues of Egypt which made Pharaohs heart to relent somewhat, and yet in the end so hardened it as he vtterly contemned the Lords hand, are not like to this fanne of the word, which searcheth euery part of a man, and bloweth him away, vnlesse he be substantially rooted in religion. A second cause of this is,

2 that where there is fanning, yet it hath no power, they huckstering and tempering of it for their owne fame and for Balacks offer of preferment, and not preaching to the conscience the crucified word of the Lord: they preach of contention to adde affliction to others, and not in sinceritie and meeknesse to bring consolation to others: and also when they speake it is but verball, for their liues doe really confute the words of their mouth.

3 A third cause why there is such a mixture in this floore, is, because although it be truely preached, yet men may do what they list, and the maiestie of the word is not hedged in with discipline: for if men liue wickedly; vnlesse the law of man take them by the heele and restraints them, the word of God cannot determine: so as except there be some speciall good inclination in some few, for the multitude preaching doth no good. For he must be a good scholler that will learne without discipling, & he a sound christian that will refraine from sinne by bare preaching. The Word indeed is the speciall fanne for this floore, but then is it

it most powerfull, if it haue discipline to strengthen it, and authority to countenance it. What? doe you meane the floore must be purged in this life, and that there must be nothing but wheat in the Church of God? Why this cannot bee till that great day of separation, when euery thing shall be put in his peculiar place. To this wee answer, that there is a double purging, the one in this life, the other after this life; the one particular, the other, vniuersall. That purging that may and ought to be, is, first the separating of all such as doe not offer themselues. Secondly, of them that offer themselues, but are vnworthy; as if a man can make no conscience to profit by the word, or can render no found account of his faith, when he hath beene long taught, but like an idle and slothfull profeslor, is still to be trained vp in the rudiments of religion, it is no reason to let him be in this floore without feeling some smart for his negligence: neither is it fit to giue the holy things of the Lords Supper vnto him, for hee deserues not the crummes that fall from his table. If a man be obstinate and will not promise reformation, his child ought not to be receiued to Baptisme, vnlesse hee confesse his sinne, or giue witness to the Church by others which must doe it: and then they ought to take the child from his father, and not to returne him to his parents againe, where his education shall bee corrupt. For others that doe professe, if after they breake out into any enormous sinne, such chaffe must bee separate: for no vn-cleane liuer must be in the Church, but either hee must submit himselfe, and then he is none such; or hee must be cut off, if he continue sentlesse in his sinne: for it is the house of God which harboureth none but such as heare his voice. And such as these ought not to be admitted to the Sacrament, though they present and offer themselues neuer so much: for hee that permits them sinneth three waies, first, in respect of Gods, giuing the bread of children vnto dogges, and making the house of God as a common Inne, where he may buy any thing for mony: but he must doe as Iehoiada the Priest did, 2. Chron. 23. 19. not suffer any vn-cleane man to enter, or to set his foot within the Temple. Secondly, as hee must not doe it in respect of God and his owne conscience, so neither in respect of the party himselfe: for seeing himselfe

1. Cor. 5. 2.

2. Theff. 3.

himselfe debarred and disfranchised from the citie of God, he would bee ashamed, and this his abdication would bring him to humility, whereby his soule might be saued: and he would stand abashed, that hee that should bee a Christian should bee separate from Christians, and thrust out of the Church, out of which there is no saluation: whereas now seeing that his sinne doth not separate him from the communion of the Saints, it brings him a sleepe in it, and hardly he comes to repentance. Thirdly, he sinneth against the Church in admitting such a one, for who would suffer a leprous man to lie with a child? and this animateth and emboldeneth others to sinne by the sight of his impunity, and many are infected by the scab of such a one. Did God in the law abhorre lepers, and must no man that touched a dead carcase partake of the Pasceouer a moneth after? and shall not whoredome and such like vncleannesse, bee a cause to barre men from the Supper of the Lord? Paul said plainly, (1. Cor. 5. 7.) Purge out the old leauen, speaking of him that had committed incest, comparing the Paschall lambe to the Gospell; the seauen daies wherein it was eaten, to the whole course of our liues: the house where it was eaten, to the Church; the lumpe, to the multitude; the leauen, to maliciousnesse and filthinesse; the vnleauened, to the children of God: so as they must separate all that are leauened in malice or wickednesse, that not onely euery peculiar man may be blamelesse, but all the Church may be cleane comming to so holy a place. For since we are all partakers of that immaculate Lambe that is slaine Christ Iesus, we must cast both out of our selues, and out of our houses and congregations all impurity. Wherefore let not thy hand bee in sacriledge to permit such a one: it is in thy power to giue, and answer the church at thy perill thou must: (whatsoever the law of the Magistrate is) for no man may command thee to sinne, but according to the rule giuen to Timothy, speaking of vnable men to goe before the people in life and doctrine, 1. Tim. 5. 22. Lay not thou (saith Paul) thy hands on him.

It will be said, this was an easie matter in the Apostles time, when they had the keys of the Church, and the power in their hands, to cut off the incestuous person, and when the Gospell was

was

was but newly entred, and but stept as it were within the threshold: but now men are not so easily corrigible as they were then, being now more grown and sturdy in sinne then before. We answer, that if the censures of the church were so duly executed when there was no Christian magistrate to countenance and protect them, much more might they bee so now when they might have the sword also to assist them. And if they had fewer offences when they had lesse meanes to purge them, for they could but separate from the congregation only, and then if they would they might have returned againe to the infidels, far greater beuty might be looked for now, if the gouernors of the church had not some great mist before them. And if the churches of Iudæa and Galile (as we may see Acts 2. & 3.) did multiply exceedingly, hauing the magistrate not against them, though not with them; much more might they flourish now, hauing the Christian law of the Magistrate binding their bodies whose consciences should be bound by the censures of the Church. But is it no true Church where this exact cleansing is not? And is it not the table of the Lord because some strangers besides children are receiued? and is the whole lumpe infected by a little leauen? God forbid: onely we say the leauen ought to be separate, and the incestuous man ought to be cast out; for they that eate the Passeouer must haue none come to it that hath eaten leauen: and if wee ought not to eate with him, that is, haue no familiarity with him, much lesse ought he to bee admitted by the Minister; but if he be, yet to thy conscience that art a worthy receiuer it is a sacrament. If Saul be in the Tabernacle, I little doubt but Dauid will with all his heart wish to pray with him. And was Zacharie any whit polluted by praying and serificing with the filthy Pharises: or Annaes prayers lesse available, because many swine entred into the Temple? The church (saith Paul) hath no such custome to be contentious, 1. Cor. 11. 16. but if it be, yet it remains a Church stil. And to resoluethis point, to whom spake Iohn in this place but to the Church of God, for as yet there was no separation of the wheate from the chaffe, but alterward they prooued sworne enemies to Christ, and it was Moses chaire though they late in it, and the people were commanded to heare

Mat. 5. 33. heare them. Was not the church of Iuda the floore of the Lord, though the Pharises taught false and corrupt doctrine, that Gods name was not taken in vaine vnlesse men were openly forsworne, and though the high Priests were aduanced by simony? Christ himselfe saith it was, and laboreth onely to remoue these errors, and to reduce euery thing to the purity of his Fathers institution. But now with vs since this long venting of the word of God hath bene with so litle profit, and that the Pharises stand so close about the Princes mouth, as that she can hardly breath in the wholesome aire of the truth, what hope is there of a better separation but the fanne of fiery triall, that if wind will not doe it, persecuti- on may doe it: for the drosse that cannot be scattered by blasts, must be consumed with burning.

Now when the floore is cleane and swept within the Church, then is there another cleansing out of the Church, which is either particular or vniuersall: particular, when good or bad men die, and such as they die such they shall continue, for the tree that is fallen there it lieth. Vniuersall at the last day, when all things shall be complete and perfect; when not onely the chaffe shall bee blowne away, but euen the tares, that is, secret hypocrites shall be cut vp by the Angels; for open offenders should be cut off heere by the word and discipline.

Further, in that it is said, Some shall be gathered into the Lords garner: obserue, that it is a most detestable opinion, to thinke that all shall be saued, and that damnation is preached but for fashion to containe men in some obedience. For let the scripture be burnt if this be true, and let Belzebub bee saued if all shall bee saued, and let Iudas come foorth of hell if none shall goe thither. Nay our owne consciences doe adorne and summon vs to thinke of a generall iudgement, and Iudas owne heart condemning him caused him to hang himselfe, Mat. 27. 5. The Lords house must be fully furnished, and in all such houses (as S. Paul speaketh) 2. Tim. 2. 20. there must be vessels of honour and dishonor, some prepared to glory, some to destruction: for in that hee is willing to shew his wrath, Rom. 9: 23. appeareth that it is his will some should bee damned. Neither is this contrary to that, God willeth not the death of a sinner: for the difference is this, God willeth not the confusion confusion simply of any man, as a thing wherein he delighteth, but he willeth it as it is his iustice; and what greater or better iustice can there be, then to bee glorified in the condemnation of some that haue deserued it? and he must be no more vnwillingly iust then vnwillingly mercifull.

Further learne, that euen in this life the godly are gathered to heauen: and so of the wicked, that though they liue yet they are in hell. So S. Iohn saith, he that belceueth is already passed to life: John 5. 24. and Heb. 12. 22. we are gathered already to the Patriarks and to the soules of iust and perfect men through hope, and wee are as sure to haue that we hope for, as we are of this we haue already, namely the pledge of Gods spirit: and Ephes. 2. vs he hath gathered to the celesticall places vnder hope, speaking as if it were already done, though the reall gathering shalbe at the latter day. On the other side, of the wicked it is said by the same spirit, He that beleneeth not is already damned: the words are fearefull, but it is so set downe to expresse the certainty of it: not but that hee that is not beloued (Ose. 2. 23.) may be beloued: and he that is not vnder mercy (1. Pet. 2. 10.) may obtaine mercy. But looke in what state a man is in the Church, in the same shall hee be after this life: for whatsoeuer is bound on earth, is bound in heauen, and they that bee not bound heere being priuy hypocrites, are notwithstanding bound in heauen, and shall be so in hell also.

For the last, which is vnquenchable fire; thereby is meant the condemnation prepared for the reprobate, not that wee must imaginethere is any naturall fire there: for first this fire can not pierce the soules of men nor the spirits of diuels, and the paine must extend both to soule and body. Secondly, it is no more naturall fire then it is a bodily worme spoken of in the Gospell, which shall gnaw the hearts and consciences of the damned. Mark. 9. 44. Thirdly, in Esfay 30. 33. it is said, there was a great lake prepared for Kings with fire of much wood, and it is absurd to thinke there is any wood there; and a riuer of brimstone burning by the breath of the Lord, which is not to bee intended of materiall brimstone, but it is set out by such termes to expresse the vnspeakable torment of it, not to be comprehended, much

lesse to be endured ; for the torment of fire and brimstone, euen to flesh and blood are strange and terrible, therefore these speches are vsed to conuey to our vnderstanding what we could not before conceiue. So it is said in the Gospell, that they shall bee bound hand and foot, not that there be any bonds or chaines there ; but the meaning only is, that they are the prisoners of the Lord for euer, tiener to be released, but to be restrained from all libertie, wherby they might in any sort be eased. Againe, hell fire is called Gehenna or Topheth, which was a litle place where the Israelites did sacrifice their children in fire to the Diuels ; this being taken for the torment of the reprobate.

Now this torment is expressed two waies : first, in the extremitie of it : secondly, in the permanencie of it. The first two waies. First, by that they shall feele both in soule and body : secondly, by that they shall lose ; both of them expressed 2. Theff. 1. 9. they shall be separated from the power of his presence, and bound in chaines in euerlasting darknesse. The greatnesse of this torment is expressed two waies : first it shall be vniuersall, in all parts ; and it is most fearfull in this life, to be pained in euery part of the body at one time. Secondly, the particular torment that euery one in hell shall feele, as that Princes shall be tormented like Princes, euery one according to the finnes that he wrought in his body, as it is said in the Gospell, It shall bee easier for Sodom then for them, and yet they be in hell already : for the damnation of Belzebub shall be the greatest, and then of them that sinned against the holy Ghost, and none of these shall haue so much as a drop of water to coole their toongues, but they shall continually bee blaspheming of God, for the which they shall continually be tormented. And though this shall be great and grievous, such as they cannot yet they must abide, yet shall it be a farre greater hell vnto them, to thinke they haue lost heauen, seeing Gods children to reioice that their persecutors be now plagued, and that God is so auenged of them for their sakes. For the second, which is the endlesnesse of this torment, it is a fire that shall neuer go out, nor the flames wherof can neuer be abated. If there were but as many yeeres to endure it as there be grasse piles on earth or starres in heauen, the conscience might somewhat

Mat. 22. 13.

somewhat through hope bee eased, because at length it should cease; but the end thereof cannot be imagined, and this word never is fearefull. Let this therefore teach vs rightly to embrace the Gospell, that we may be wheate in this earthly floore of the Lord, to the end we may be gathered into his heavenly garner.

MATH. chap. 3. Vers. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17.

13. Then came Iesus from Galile to Iordan unto Iohn to be baptized of him.
14. But Iohn earnestly put him backe, saying: I haue neede to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?
15. Then Iesus answering, said to him: Let be now, for thus it becommeth vs to fulfill all righteousnesse: so hee suffered him.
16. And Iesus when he was baptized, came strait out of the water, and lo, the heauens were opened vnto him: and Iohn saw the Spirit of God descending like a Dove and lighting on him.
17. And lo, a voice came from heauen, saying, This is my beloved Sonne, in whom I am well pleased.

NOW the Euangelist proceedeth to shew how Iohn exercised part of his Ministry euen toward the Messias himselfe, and setteth downe how after Christ had liued long in Nazareth containing himselfe in Iosephs house, till his heavenly father should consecrate him and call him forth to the great worke of the Ministry and of maiestie, hee being now of thirty yeeres of age commeth to Iohn,
and

and requireth to be baptized, in as much as he appearing in the flesh of man was to ioyn himselfe to them that confessed their sinnes. John by reuelation perceiuing that he was the Lord, for they neuer met before, (this being in wisdom provided of the Lord, lest it might haue seemed a compact betweene them two to cosen the world) refuseth to do it, and put him backe earnestly acknowledging Christs excellency and his owne vnworthinesse. In this, bewraying the error of his iudgement, that hee knew not all that pertained to his calling and ministry, yet addeth a reason why he did this; I can giue but water, but thou canst giue the spirit to purge the conscience. Christ seeing his modesty, bids him leaue off to intreate of his excellency and his owne balenesse; that he was as the Sunne, and John but as the day starre: Let this goe, saith Christ, for thou and I both must labour to doe that God hath appointed, it is thy calling to baptize, and mine to require it, professing himselfe to bee in the number of repentants. John seeing that Christ shewed this actiō to be a part of that righteousnesse should be fulfilled, did receiue him: whereupon after Christ had bene drenched in the water, a miracle was seene, the heauens to open, the holy Ghost to descend, a voice from his Father, that this Sonne was principally beloued, and for his sake all others should be beloued. So as the Sauour of the world was first baptized, and then miraculously consecrated to be that great monarch of heauen and earth.

- 1 In the words there are two generall parts to bee considered: first, that Christ was baptized, from vers. 13. to the latter end of
- 2 vers. 15. secondly, what testimony was giuen from heauen for his consecration to the Mediatorship. In the first there be these
- 1 circumstances set downe: first, that Christ tooke paines himselfe
- 2 to come: secondly, that John at first refused him, giving a reason
- 3 why he did so: thirdly, Christ replying vpon him with a reason added why he required it, and why John may not deny it. For
- 1 the first of these consider two circumstances: first, at what time
- 2 Christ came: secondly, whence he came, (then) the word shewes a continuance of the story, (then) when John had prepared a people by his ministry to receiue Christ, and when the fulnesse of time was come, and the time of his present priuate life expired.

MATH. 3. VERS. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. 145

Heere generally consider, that God determineth the times and seasons of mens priuate and publike callings. Moses was forty yeeres of age before God told him he should bee the deliverer of his people, and after hee had discontinued and walked priuately forty yeeres more, then hee was called of God to that office, Act. 7. 23. Exo. 3. 10. So Iohn was thirty yeeres old before hee began to execute his ministry. So for Christ it might seeme tedious to his parents, that hee should so long containe himselfe in their priuate house; and albeit he was destinated and ordained from the wombe to this great office and worke, yet he must expect his fathers pleasure before hee offer himselfe to goe forth of Galile. It is true of all men which Ieremy speaks of himselfe, ch. 1. 5. God called me (saith he) and sanctified me to be a Prophet from the wombe, yea before I was fashioned. So Paul Gal. 1. 15: saith, he was separate from his mothers wombe to preach the gospel; yet they must both wait and attend for a reall calling. The vse that is hence to be gathered, is, that as Christ contented and satisfied himselfe with a priuate life, when by comming abroad he might haue come to great renoune in the world, so much more are we to satisfie our selues with that place wee haue, and leaue it to Gods wisdom, who in fulnesse of time will call if he haue any imploiment for vs: so as no man may beg or buy a calling, or thinke all his graces buried if he enter not presently into the broad way of worldly fame; for God will in time if he haue set him apart for his husbandry, prouide him a place and meanes for his lawfull entrance, and such an admittance as may secure his conscience.

For the second, whence he came, from Galile: where may be demanded, why Iohn went not to him, he being but the seruant: the reason is, first because Iohns ministry was appointed to be exercised in the wilderness: secondly, it was to set forth the maiesty, and to preserue the dignity and worthinesse of the ministry: for in as much as Christ was to be baptized, hee was to come thither as one that was to partake of some fruit of his office. Which example and president shewes, that no man ought to thinke himselfe too good to come to Iohn, that is, to the Minister of God, in whose mouthes hee hath put the words of reconciliation, and in whose hands are the distribution of his seales. And this condemneth all those that seeke to bring the Temple into their house, or wait that the Arke should come to them. David we see, though a King of high glory and renoune, Psal. 84. 2. 3. complaineth and mourneth that he could not haue access to the church of God, and thought the birds happier then he that sate and sung within the Temple. And if the King of heauen the Lord Iesus did humble himselfe to goe to John, much more ought flesh and bloud to strue to ioyne themselues to the publike place where the ministry is exercised.

John refusing

The second circumstance, is Johns forbidding of Christ to come to his baptisme. Out of which place appeareth, that John acknowledged him to be the Messias, though he was cloathed with sinfull flesh; for he saith, he had need to receiue the holy Ghost of him, which none can giue but Christ. Now how knew he this? for by the wisdom of God it was wrought, that they neuer saw nor met before, therefore hee must needs know it miraculously; euen as miraculously (Luke I. 41.) hee leapt in his mothers wombe when she first heard of Christs conception. And if the signe to know him be the Doue, as some would haue it, how knew he him before? It must be answered, that God gaue him a secret reuelation to himselfe, to discern that this was the person in whom dwelt the God-head bodily; and after for further confirmation, which was a signe à posteriori, there was this exhibition of that token, a Doue descending on him. According as (Exod. 3. 12.) Moses was told he should bee a deliuerer of the people of Israel; and this was his signe, that when he had done it he should sacrifice to God in the mount, that is, it should further confirme him, for he knew it before when he went forth of Egypt with the people. Where we may learne, that if we walke simply as in the sight of God, and make a conscience of our calling, wee shall haue (if need require) an extraordinary presence and help of God to instruct vs, and we shall be taught of him the secrets and wonders of the Lord.

Coloss. 2. 9.

Further learne in this refusall of John to baptise Christ, that although a man may be an excellent Minister, yet hee may erre concerning some chiefe point of his office, and this to bee no disparage-

disparagement to him, euen as John failed in this duty. So as we draw out of this particuler example this generall instruction, against such as except against Ministers being of another iudgement then others be: for if he be faithfull in the greatest duty of his calling, and his end be to serue the people, not for ambition, but of conscience, if he be sound in the principall, and hold the foundation, though perhaps he be in some errour otherwise, yet it is no reason to call his ministry into question. For wee must qualifie and correct our selues, from iudging hardly of them that differ from other Ministers in some points, vsing the moderation of S. Paul to the Philippians, like brethren supporting their infirmities. Not but that Paul may withstand Peter to his face, (Gal. 2. 11.) in that wherein he is iustly to be condemned: as if for a few Iewes sakes hee will separate himselfe from the Gentiles, with whom hee had before conuersed: for this was offensiue to the Church of God; otherwise Paul and Barnabas ought not (Act. 15. 39.) to part asunder and breake company about small matters, but one should appease the other in meekenesse of spirit.

Now for the answer of Christ, it standeth on two parts: first, requiring him to do it: secondly, a reason. Let alone for this time. Where learne, there is a kind of modesty vnseasonable, (though all are to thinke humbly of themselves) which is that that hindereth a man from the execution of his calling: and it is as if Christ should say: Whatsoeuer I be, stand thou vpon thy commission from God. And if John by this his calling was thought worthy to baptize the naturall Sonne of God, much more may wee thinke our selues meet to preach to flesh and blond what euer they be. for though they haue not all uestem communem, yet they haue cutem communem; they differ not in birth, though there bee some difference in apparell. Neither are wee to abase our selues too much in the apprehension of our owne wants: for as Paul saith, who is worthy or sufficient to bee the Lords Ambassadour, to haue the keies of heauen to shut it, that not repenting men are damned; and to haue, that they binde on earth to be sealed in heauen? Who is sufficient to be the Chancelour of that great king the Lord Iehoua, or to saue a soule? Who is worthy thie to be receiued as God himselfe, as Christ saith : He that receiueth you, receiueth me ; and he that heareth you, heareth me ? Of himselfe no man. But when the Lord hath once sanctified our polluted lippes, and that we haue a booke giuen vs to eate , and that our lippes be touched with the coale from the altar, whereby we may not be worthy, but vouchsafed to be worthy ; then though we be subiect to the same infirmities others be, wee must not stand amazed or abashed at them, so as we be hindred in our duties. For if God will haue Moses goe to Egypt, (Exod. 3. 11.) he may not say : Who am I, that I should stand before Pharao ? Neither must Jeremy say : (Ier. 1. 7.) I am a child, when the Lord hath once touched his mouth: for be hee neuer so slow of speech, the Lord (Exod. 4. 12.) will teach him what to say. And Iohn must not be so nice, but he must baptise Christ, since God hath giuen him that honour.

Further heere learn, that if it so fall out, a man in some congregation be more learned, better exercis'd in the Scriptures, then are those lippes which ordinarily doe preferue more knowledge, though he haue profited more in mortification then his teacher, as David had in his time by his continuall study in the Law of God; yet he is not to despise the ministry, wherein ordinarily there is that sufficiency, that it is able to instruct the best learned, and to guide the most circumspect: and what euer he be, he must range himselfe in the common order of professors. For Christ though hee haue in him the riches of all wisdom, and the fulnesse of all grace, must and doth himselfe vrge to receiue baptism at Iohns hands, because it is Gods appointment: for heere runne the siluer streames that can quench our spirituall thirst; why then should others make themselues better then Christ, who had need of Iohns ministry? David had most heauenly meditations, and was wonderfull conuersant in the Scripture; and as himselfe saith, the law of God had made him wiser then his teachers, yet he vouchsafed to submit himselfe to the hearing of them, and thought his life forlorne, when he was exiled from the Temple: Psal. 84. 1. and that the birds that bred there were happier then hee. Much more are they faulty now, that being farre short of that measure of religious knowledge was in David, doe exempt and banish themselves from the publike congregation. And if it be intolerable to despise the sacramentall bread, though thou hast as good at home, much more punishable is it to despise the administration of the doctrine, thinking thou canst profit as much at home: for the greater blessing is knit to the publike ordinance and institution of God, where every man may buy wisdom without money.

For the second, which is Christs reason: it is because we are to fulfill all righteousness. Then must Iohn baptize, that is his righteousness; and Christ be baptized, for that is his righteousness. And thus was Christ baptized, a signe of remission of sinne, yet had he no sinne in him; he was circumcised, (Luk. 2. 21. 22.) yet had he no unclean flesh, his mother was purified, yet was she not polluted by his birth: but the reason is, I have (saith Christ) taken vpon me the forme of a seruant, and they (speaking of the elect) must be made righteous in me.

In the generall learne this, that what God hath commanded must be done, and it is convenient to accomplish all righteousness. So as no exception must bee taken to any thing God prescribeth: if Christ were bound to it in the office of a Mediator, much more are wee to strue to come to this marke, to performe every taske that God setteth downe. If thou sayest, it sufficeth to embrace those things that are necessary for saluation, I aske then what that is? If thou dost account it that without which none can be saued, then put away the Word and Sacraments, for many are saued without these. Indeed some things are more necessary then others, as the Word begets and begins faith, the Sacraments doe but confirme it, and these are more necessary then the censures of the Church. Some points destroy the foundation, as to deny Christ to bee the Sonne of God, others are not fundamentall, about which there may be great errors in iudgement: but yet let vs consider as neare as we can, that wee fulfill whatsoever is commanded, and the least being commanded with singular wisdom of the Lord must bee obeyed. So Timothie is commanded by Paul (1. Tim. 5. 21.) to keepe all things, not preferring one before another. We must not make a conscience of the least and neglect the greatest, or stand amazed with the excellency of the highest, so as we looke not downe to things inferiour commanded by the same God. It is the commission (Mat. 28. 19.) to preach and baptise, as that the word in the ordinance of God should goe before the seale; and in this respect it is necessary: yet is it a Sacrament, though there be no preaching, and the want of the word doth not abolish the nature of the action. So we must labour, that all things that saour of corruption, may be remoued; yet not to seuer our selues from the Church by reason of some abuses. And heere those are confuted, that will submit themselues to some commandements, and not to others. We thinke no man can be saued without Baptisme if hee contemne it, and why doeth thou not as well labour to haue thy child nurrured vp in faith and religion? No man will come to the Sacrament without examination; for if he do we account it damnable: or who is he that taking the bread in the Supper, would be found asleepe? yet we thrust our selues into the temple to heare the Lord speake vnto vs, not communing with our hearts before we come, and suffering our selues to be caught with sleepe when we are come. And whence proceedeth this; but that we doe not esteeme it as righteous an ordinance of God to come to the doctrine with preparation, as to the Sacrament? Certaine it is; many may be saued without Baptisme: but being baptized and despising preaching if hee may haue it, he is sure to be damned; for what is the seale vnlesse there be a graunt precedent? But we are almost like vnto the Pharisees, that thought it no sinne to sweare by the altar, but to sweare by the oblation on the altar was an hainous matter: so to sweare by the Temple it was nothing; but otherwise to sweare by the gold in the Temple: which is most strange, since the gold is nothing vnlesse it bee sanctified by the Temple. So the Word doth separate and sanctifie the water and the bread, and not they the Word; for it hath life without them, and who taught them to distinguish thus? For if we will all go to Iohn to be baptized of him; so must wee also to heare him preach. Let vs beware therefore how wee leape at a Gnat and swallow a Camell. Peter would as faine be cleansed as the rest of the Apostles, then must he not be so nice as to deny this mercy to himselfe, to haue Christ wash his his feet. But as we must measure euery thing by the commandement, so must we likewise esteeme them according to the dignity and order that God hath commanded, for this shall bee the best fulfilling of righteousness.

And Iesus when he was baptised, &c.

Heere the Euangelist setteth downe what followed immediately after Christs baptising, namely, the ordaining of him by an heavenly Oracle, to be the great Doctor of the Church. There were many glorious sights and apparitions, whereby was testified to John and the people, that this was an extraordinary man. By opening the heauens must bee vnderstood, that they were as it were cut asunder: that thereby they might know, that this man was not to be considered as in the infirmitie of man, but as one come from heauen. Further, John and the people saw with their bodily eyes the bodily shape of a doue, by which was represented Sacramentally an extraordinary presence of the holy Ghost; which though it be euery where, and so cannot be limited any where, yet was it neuer so much present any where as in this place: whereby was signified the perfusing and pourcing of all gifts and graces vpon the humane nature of the Lord Iesus. And after their sight had beene thus confirmed, yet was there a more excellent signe; a voice from the liuing God, that this man and this person that stood before them, aggregating and gathering himselfe among the company of sinners, this poore man appearing but in the basenesse of this flesh, was the very naturall Sonne of God, begot by an incomprehensible generation, in whom his soule delighted. So as the summe is this: There are testimonies giuen from heauen to John and the people, by sight and by hearing, that this man that was but newly baptized was the onely and alone peace-maker of the Church. The testimonies be three: first, the opening of the heauens: secondly, the descending of the doue: thirdly, the voice from heauen, and the matter of the voice.

For the first vnderstand, that albeit Christ had the heauens opened, in part for the confirmation of his owne soule, that hee was appointed to bee the great ruler of the Church, who in his humanity had need of such a confirmation, and that in part they were

06f. were opened to giue him security to vndergoe this great office: yet it was done especially for the confirming of Iohn and the people, as Ioh. 12. A voice came from heauen saying, I haue glorified him, which came (saith Christ vers. 30.) not for me, but for your sakes. So as heereby generally obserue, in that the heauens are opened to authorize him to be the great Teacher, that our duty is to heare him, and the greater shall our condemnation be, if we doe it not. For though others speake by commission from God, as Iohn and the Prophets, yet this is true spoken of in the Hebrewes: that if they went not unpunished that despised them that spake from the earth, that is, being but men, much lesse shall they escape that despise him who speaketh from heauen. And since the Prophets, (Luk. 16. 29.) are to be heard, and Iohn speaking in the authority of God, much more are we to take heede, that we neglect not the words of this great Teacher, that speakes from heauen, being God in flesh.

2. For the second testimony: first, may be demanded whether Iesus was destitute of this spirit before? And if not, why it is said (now) to light on him? It is certaine, (as the Apostle teacheth) that the God-head dwelt bodily in his flesh, and neuer any creature had so much as hee, from the first moment of his conception. And in that it seemes now to descend vpon him, vnderstand, that before hee led a priuate life, and the time of his manifestation was not come, at this time hee abstained from shewing any worke of his mediatorship, and in this priuat course of life he had such a portion of the spirit as was meete: but now when he was to exercise his office, he hath his soule endued with a more excellent measure of grace. Hereupon it is said, Esa. 61.
1. The spirit of the Lord came vpon me to preach good tidings, &c. comming then in a speciall manner vpon him: where we learne, that as Christ in the lineaments and proportion of his bodie grew and increased, so did he also in the graces of his soule and inward vertues, as (Luk. 2. 52.) hee increased in wisdom, and in stature, and in fauour both with God and men. And howsoeuer hee had by right appertaining to him all grace, yet it was powdered downe by degrees: and the greatest measure of all, was at the time of his ascension. The grace hee hath received is farre

about that of Angels, euen that which hee had in his humane soule, yet were they created and finite : and it is no vitious or blame-worthy ignorance, not to know that as a man, which cometh not within the compasse of his humanity, as the certainty of the latter day is not reuealed (as himselfe saith) to the sonne of man. Mark. 13. 34

Further, in that the spirit doth now annoint him, learne, that whosoever shall challenge any calling from God, must shew himselfe to be qualified in some sort more then he was in his priuate life : for that which is true in Christ as the head, is also in the inferiour members. And as it is intolerable in a man to vsurpe any place in the Church without authority from men, so is it high presumption to take it vpon him, except with the outward calling he can shew the inward seale of the holy Ghost : for without this, the approbation of men is but as a seale set vpon water ; and if he pretend the allowance of the holy Ghost, let him shew some competent sufficiency to discharge it. Secondly, is to be considered, why he descended in the shape of a doue. Where note first, that wee vnderstand not the shape spoken of as if the doue appeared but as in a shape : for it had a reall and a bodily being and substance, and the word (shape) is to be referred to the holy Ghost, which is in all places as God, and so not visible in himselfe ; but truly represented in the doue, all signes being (as they must bee) proportionable to the representing of that is to be signified. In Acts 2. 2. the spirit appeareth like the rushing winde, to shew the power and feruency of the Gospell : secondly, like a clouen tongue, which should speake, and be as it were diuided to all : thirdly, like a fiery tongue, to purge vs, and to waite mens filthinesse. And heere like a doue, to testifie Christs kingdome to be in all lowlinesse and harmlesnesse, to be a preacher of peace, of such a doue like simplicity, that as is spoken by the Prophet, he should not lift vp his voice in the streets, Esa. 42. 2.
Mat. 12. 20. and of so compassionate a heart, as not to breake the bruised reede.

Heere further consider the difference between the manifestation of the Law and of the Gospell : in the deliuey of the Law blowes the sound of a trumpeter, appears fearefull lightning and dreadfull dreadfull thundring, Exod. 19. 16. so as the people could not abide to heare it, and Moses himsefe being astonished, and said: I feare and quake, Heb. 12. 21. But when the Gospell is giuen, there is nothing commeth foorth that is fearefull, to testifie that Christ would not terrifie with thundring threatens, but by a mild, and a still, and a familiar voice would call men, how long soeuer they haue continued in their sinnes, and how many soeuer they be: yea if they be distressed in their hearts, and anguished in their soules, as a milde doue he allureth them, and promisseth to saue them. Whereupon if any man doe bleed, that he hath wounded the Lord by his offences, and do grone with sighes vnspeakeable, and be confounded with his owne sin, and ashamed of himsefe, let him not feare to goe to Christ, who is yet cuen to this day a doue. The least grone of a repentant heart the Lord will not refuse: for it is his nature to be mercifull, and his glory and ioy to saue, and if there be but a litle worke begun in vs, the Lord Iesus will quicken and cherish it; which may comfort vs to powre foorth our soules before him: for hee lieth in waite for our returne with the lost Sonne, Luk. 15. 20. and hath not deposed nor laid aside his compassion. Now if neither the voice of Moses can terrifie, nor the voice of Christ allure vs, if piping will not make vs dance, nor weeping will make vs repent, then this is our condemnation, that this meeke doue is not embraced, and that wee beleue not the Gospell, whereby we may haue accesse to Christ, and so be saued.

Luk. 1. 32.

Thirdly, heere is to be considered, how Iohn could call the doue the holy Ghost, since the essence of this spirit is not discernable, nor the power infused into Christ to be seene. Againe, he that is euery where, and in no place circumscribed, cannot be discerned: how is it said then, that Iohn saw him? Wee must vnderstand they are both figuratiue and borrowed speeches, hee saw not the Essence of the holy Ghost, nor the power infused into Christ is not to be discerned: for this was to be seene onely with the eye of the soule: but the sight of the doue perswaded him the spirit was there after a speciall manner, singular and extraordinary. Againe, hee saw not the spirit descend, but the doue, which did really signifie, that as verily and truly the spirit rit was light vpon him. But is the holy Ghost that Doue, as Ioh. 1. 32. I beheld that spirit come downe from heauen like a Doue, and it abode on him. This is to be vnderstood, not that the holy Ghost was inclosed in the Doue, or personally vnited to the Doue, but it is a sacramentall speech, whereby that which is proper to the signe is giuen and attributed to the thing signified; as we say, the bread is the body of Christ: but if substantially the holy Ghost be present in the Doue, then so is the body of Christ in the Supper. Not like: for the holy Ghost is euery where, because he is a spirit, but the body of Christ is circumscribed and bounded in a place certaine, and so they be not of the same nature. Againe, we do not say the Doue was a type of the substantiall presence of the holy Ghost, for it was then euery where; and it was not there present as in essence, but it was a type to signifie that he was so there as in no place so much: and it must be intended of a sacramentall and of no essentiall presence, as if he were no where else, but of the presence of his essence in a speciall maner.

Againe, it is absurd to aske how there can be a true giuing of the thing vnlesse the thing be there; as that Christ cannot be giuen by the bread, vnlesse he be in, or with, or vnder the bread: for it is not the locall presence or absence that makes the truth of giuing it, but if the verity of the thing be there, it is enough: for God can giue man leaue to eat his flesh being in heauen. The fathers did eate it, otherwise they could not haue beene saued, Ioh. 6. 31. and then Christ was not onely not present, but not at all as touching his humanity: so as Christ began not onely to be flesh when he was manifested, but they did eate Manna, and in that by faith they did eate Christ. So in the water the conscience is washed, and yet is there no bloud transfused with the water, but it is as truly there, as this Doue did testifie Christ to be filled with all graces: and so truly is it sealed vnto our soules that wee eate Christ, though not corporally. By the word we eate the flesh of Christ continually by faith, and in the Sacrament it is only more plaine that we eate it, because two senses are satisfied by it; the eare hearing the word, and the eie seeing the bread.

For the third testimony, There comes a voice from heauen:
by

by the former miracles the Lord onely provided for the witness of the eye, but now hee provides for the eare also. Where wee learne, the wonderfull wisdom and loue of God to exercise all our senses, that thereby we might be brought to a certaine perswasion of these mysteries. Among the Philosophers is a great question, whether the sense of sight or of hearing bee better in it selfe. True it is, that sight in nature is more excellent, as for celerity and quickenesse, so for perspicuity and sharpnesse: but if the doubt bee made of the profit of these two, then hearing excelleth; for we can see nothing but that is visible, but many more things are to be heard of, which thereby may be conuieced to the heart to iudge of: so the largenesse of hearing is greater in the profit. Besides, no man profiteth by sight, vnlesse he vnderstand it by hearing; for which cause it pleased God to apply both in the mystery of saluation, that thereby we might be sure of it, we neuer doubting of that we both see and heare. Faith cometh by hearing, Rom. 10. 17. and the holy Ghost bores the eare, Psal. 40. and leades the eye to satisfie it, setting before it in Baptisme water, and in the Supper bread and wine, so as it is provided that the hearing might haue the word, and the eye the sacraments.

Now in the voice consider what it doth expresse, namely that that flesh which stood there before them was the naturall sonne of God; and this he is two waies: first, as he is the sonne of God by nature, of the eternall substance of his Father; howbeit let no man thinke fleshly of the matter, for hee departed with no substance, nor had any manner of change: secondly, as he was the sonne of Mary, not by nature or adoption, for then there had bene a time when he was not the Sonne of God, but by personall vnion, the man Christ being neuer a person by it selfe vntill it was personally vnited to the Godhead; so as he was borne the sonne of God not by nature, for he was of the nature of his mother: & so Mary is said to bee the mother of God, not that she brought forth God, but brought forth that man that was God, and this in respect onely of the personall vnion.

In that it is said, my welbeloued Sonne; vnderstand that all loue comes from him that comes to vs, and wee are beloued only for Christis

MATH. 3. VERS. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. 157

Christs sake : as Christ himselfe praieith, John 17. I beseech thee good Father, that as thou hast loued me, so thou wilt loue them, and giue them the same glory thou giuest me. This is God required to doe by his owne Sonne, who can aske nothing shall be denied him : With the same loue loue thou them : as I am in them, so are they in me. And this ministreth singular consolation, that when we consider Christ to be beloued, we may withall remember, that with the same loue the Lord loueth his natural son, with the same doth he loue vs that are adopted: so as when he beholds the beauty of his sonne, in whose fore-head as in a golden plate are written all our names, hee turneth from our filthinesse, and embraceth vs as his owne sonne, and the Father and sonne are all one in desire: The Lord grant we may be able to comprehend it, and be willing to entertaine it, that this loue may constraîne vs to loue him againe, otherwise it brings foorth no effectuall fruit in vs.

Againe, since the Father tooke all delight in this Sonne Christ Iesus, and that the whole Trinity was heere at his baptizing, and that the father saith in another place, Sonne I will glorifie thee still: John 12. 28. let vs learne to magnifie the Lord Iesus, let him bee our ioy, for who is there in heauen or earth in whom wee can set our delight, better then on him which thus pleateth the father? Let vs loue him that God loueth, he is the only Priest to sacrifice for vs, the only Aduocate to plead for vs, the onely Prophet to instruct vs, the only King to gouerne vs, the onely shield to defend vs : we shall be made rich through his grace only, righteous through his obedience onely, safe through his protection onely, and saued through his mediation only. He that glorifies the Sonne glorifies God, and he that resteth vnder the wings of the Sonne, shrouded himselfe vnder the shadow of the most high : then accursed be that man, or that religion, that holds Christ but as the chiefe Sauior, and would haue other helpes ioyned to him : for we must onely haue Christ, and wholly Christ, and assure our selues to be saued onely in him, our praiers to bee heard onely through him, and our wounds to be healed onely by the sight of him ; and to what end should we ioyne others with him, since all are beloued onely for him?

That

That there is a Trinity, appeareth further in this place ; as namely the fathers voice, the holy Ghosts presence in the Doue, and Christ manifested and magnified in the flesh : and these bee feuerall, yet but one Iehouah, and all and every of them is Iehouah. It is a mystery only to be adored, yet in some measure is it to be knowen, that they should be three persons yet but one God : as for example, take three men, Paul, James and Iohn, heere be three persons and three men, but it is not so in God : for in things that bee created, wee must consider they are onely limited, therefore the same nature in Iohn is not the same nature singular and in specie that is in Paul, because they bee not onely two persons, but diuided in quantity ; and that particular nature in particular that is in Iohn cannot be in Paul. So for Angels, take Raphael, Gabriel, and Michael, supposing him to bee a created Angell, the same particular angelicall nature that is in one is not in another ; for they be not onely two persons of Angels, but two natures, not distinct but separate. Now in God we make a common essence, which is Iehouah, wherein doth consist three Elohims, yet are they not three Iehouahs, because his nature is simple, and the selfe same is in them all, and the same being is in God the Father that is in the Sonne, and is tota totaliter in every one and the same in Vnity. And if wee will haue three Gods, then must we make a substance diuided, which cannot be, but there is onely a distinction. Angels are separate one from another, and are one without another, but in the Trinity it is otherwise. The Sonne is in the Father, the holy Ghost in them both, and they are all one. The Sunne begets beames, from the Sunne and the beames proceeds light : the beames cannot bee without the Sunne, nor the light without them both. So from the spring riseth the well head, yet is not the spring without the well head, and the streame proceeds from them both. These be steps and traces as it were to conceiue somewhat of this mystery of mysteries.

Laitly obserue, as the whole Trinity was present at Christs baptisme, the Father to iustifie his Sonne, the Spirit to sanctifie him, and Christ to be sanctified : so are they also present at our baptisme, God the Father to receiue vs, Christ to purchase hea-

nen for vs, & the holy Ghost to purge our consciences, yea and the heauens are open, that is, we are as sure to come thither as we are sure Christ is there. Therefore is the whole congregation bound to stay the setting on of this seale, and to see the child receiued into the church; since there is such a glorious presence at it, and it ought to be meditated vpon, when it is applied to others.

MATH. chap. 4. Vers. 1, 2, 3, 4. &c.

1. Then was Iesus led aside of the spirit into the wildernesse to be tempted of the diuell.
2. And when he had fasted forty daies and forty nights, he was afterward hungry.
3. Then came to him the Tempter and said: If thou be the Sonne of God command that these stones be made bread.
4. But he answering, said: It is written, man shal not liue by bread onely, but by euery word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.
5. Then the diuell tooke him up into the holy City, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple,
6. And said vnto him: If thou be the Sonne of God, cast thy selfe downe: for it is written, that he will giue his Angels charge ouer thee, and with their hands they shall lift thee vp, lest at any time thou shouldest dash thy foot against a stone.
7. Iesus said vnto him, It is written againe: Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.
8. Againe, the diuell tooke him up into an exceeding high mountaine, and shewed him all the kingdomes of the world, and the glory of them,
9. And said vnto him: All these will I giue thee, if thou wilt fall downe and worship me.
10. Then Iesus said vnto him, auoid Satan: for it is written: Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, & him only shalt thou serue.

M

11. Then

11. Then the Diuell left him, and behold the Angels came and ministred vnto him.

OW the Euangelist further sheweth, that because the time was neare when our Saviour Christ was to enter into his office, to which hee was before consecrated, that it was ordained by God and the holy Ghost immediatly before, that he should submit himselfe to bee exercised in a hot conflict, challenging Sathan hand to hand: that euermore in this first and great combate, hee himselfe might bee confirmed, and others might know, that he came to destroy the works of the diuell. And to the end that Sathan might haue the greater power and fuller blow at him, hee was led into a solitary and desert place, where the diuell might be in his ruffe; and to such a place wherein men possessed were specially tormented, and there Christ liued among wild beasts, as Marke saith chap. 1. 13. that Sathan might doe his vttermost. And forasmuch as Moses in the deliury of the Law, (Exod. 34. 28.) was taken vp into a mount to God, and was taken from men, where hee abstained from meate forty daies and forty nights, that the excellency of his doctrine might receiue the greater grace, and might further be authorised: and forasmuch as Eliab (1. King. 19. 8.) in the restoring of the Law defaced in the idolatrous raigne of Ahab, did goe in the strength of one cake and a pot of water forty daies and fourtie nights: So heere before the doctrine of the Gospell was to bee published, it was meet that Christ should doe no lesse, lest there might be thought some disparagement done, and lesse glory to haue beene in the Gospell, that the law being written but in stone, and to endure but a time, should bee adorned and beautified with a greater miracle then the Gospell, which should bee written in the liuing stones of mens hearts. Howbeit in this, Christ giueth vs no example of abstinence: for hee fasted because hee had no manner of stomacke all that while; which was to confirme vs, that hee was a man meereley supernaturall, being able to forbear without any appetite forty daies. During which time, the Diuell set vpon him him, and he was not free from this encounter any while, but after beginning to be hungry, then the diuel more furiously assauleth him, hoping to worke and preuaile somewhat vpon this occasion of his infirmitie: whereupon follow three severall temptations, which in their place shall be spoken of.

In the words are set downe three points: first, Saint Mathew 1 diligently deliuereth all such circumstances as went before his temptation: secondly, what these temptations were, both in num- 2 ber and in kinde after he grew hungrie, from the third to the end of the tenth verse: thirdly, the euent and issue of this assault, that 3 when he had repulsed the rage, and driuen backe the darts of his enemy, the Angels came to doe him homage, as to a great and mighty conquerour.

For the circumstances before the combat, they be five: first, is noted the time (then:) that is, immediatly after he had received 1 testimony from heauen, that hec was the great Doctor of the 2 church: secondly, the place where this was, in the wildernesse, a place most for the aduantage of Sathan: thirdly, by what motion 3
he was caried thither; by the direction of that spirit which before descended on him: fourthly, to what end he went, namely, to be 4 tempted: fifthly, the occasion Sathan tooke more specially to as- 5 sault him, which was his fasting and hunger.

For the first: when he was solemnely pronounced to bee the Sonne of God, and that he was full of the holy Ghott, then the diuell setteth vpon him. While he liued a priuate life, and kept himselſe close and within his compasse, hec assaied not to assault him: but when he is to execute a matter and worke of his office concerning the saluation of mankind, and that this is now to bee accomplished by the preaching of the Gospell and by miracles, and that the power of the diuell is to be extinguished, and that he is to be cast out of mens consciences, now he begins to challenge him. Where learne, that the same which befell to the head, the members be not exempted from, especially such as be ordained to bee instruments for the setting vp of the Gospell.
When Moses liued priuate and shewed not himselſe to the world
there was no cause of quarrell: but when he saw one of his brethren suffer wrong, and defended him, and auenged his quarrell

that had the harme done to him, and smote the Egyptian : Act. 7. 25. then they began to disgrace him, and he was faine to flie to preferue his life, Exod. 2. 15. So Paul when he was a Pharisee, no man in greater credit nor more commended for being zealous in their religion: but when he began to preach Christ crucified, then was there none more buffeted by Sathan, nor more exposed to contumelies, nor in greater perill of his life then he; so as once he was faine to bee priuily conueied away, by being let downe in a basket, Act. 9. 25. and a second time to be rescued from the Iewes malice by a Centurion, Act. 23. 23. And this policy and stratagem of the Diuell is confirmed to vs by our owne experience: for when a Minister beginneth to make a conscience, and to stand soundly in the doctrine of Christ, and the holy life of his Apostles, then Sathan stirreth vp instruments to bring his name in question, and kindleth such coales, as in the end he is either removed, or by the multitude of disgraces made weary of well doing. The cause of this in Sathan is two fold: first, his malice against the Maiesty of God: secondly, his enuie against the saluation of man. For being adiudged to torment, he laboureth to be auenged on God his iustice, and sinneth against the holy Ghost of purpose to despise God, and seekes to disglorifie him by seeking to destroy the seed of the woman. Hereupon it is noted, that Angels sinning were neuer restored, because they sinned without temptation meereley of malice, being created excellent and pure spirits. But yet howsoeuer Sathan bestirreth him to heape vp the displeasure of the world vpon vs, and is euer at our heeles with some floud of waters or other, let vs not be discouraged, but proceed on in that sanctified course we haue begun: for the Lord will either stirre vp the earth to drinke vp our affliction, or else our faces shall shine notwithstanding his temptations. For Christ till he began to exercise his office was quiet, and though he was thus troubled, yet ceased he not to performe his worke.

2. vs place
 For the second, which is the place: he went into the wilderness, partly to imitate that Eliab had done, (1. King. 19. 8.) being in the mount of Horeb in the wilderness, and fasting there forty daies: but especially to prouoke Sathan the more, and to giue him all aduantage that might be, that in the end he might shew

He w himselfe the stouter champion. And for this cause they that were possessed with diuels were cast into solitary places, that the spirits might haue the greater power ouer them. Now, heerein Christ sheweth his greater courage, giuing Sathan as it were leaue to appoint the field, and to set downe his weapon: like them that being determind and resolute to fight, and to trie their manhoods, go apart by themselues, where they may haue no companie to part them. Euen so Christ, as a victorious Captaine, dealeth where sathan himselfe will chuse, that he ouercomming as it were at vneuen weapons, it might be an encouragement and confirmation to vs, that this was hee who was sent of God to breake the Serpents head, and that hath the power to disarme him. Where not withstanding obserue, that though Christ who was indeed the stronger, did lay himselfe thus open to his enemy, yet that this is no example for vs to imagine that we can follow, who are lighter then vanity, but that we must auoid solitarinesse as much as can be, except we will prouoke the diuell: for this is the humor that lieth fittest for his temptation, when we are destitute of the comfort of company, to worke the more violently vpon our afflictions. Heereupon the Philosophers are wont to say, and that truely, that he which liued alone, was either a God or a diuell.

For the third, the guide by which hee was directed thither, was the holy Ghost: where we learne this comfort, that seeing the diuell could not haue tempted Christ, but that God by the wisdom of his spirit had appointed both the time, the place, and the occasion, wee may heereby haue good security giuen vnto vs; that since Sathans power is limited, and he deales but by commission, and all temptations outward and inward are foient from God, that he intermedleth but as an instrument for the hardening of the reprobate, and for the triall of the elect; and since he hath no absolute power to exercise his tyranny, but runneth like a dogge that is chained by the arme of the Lord, wee may returne this ioy to our soules, that though we be compassed with clouds of calamities, yet wee shall neuer be tempted aboue our measure, for hee cannot do it but by permission. And since God is the maister of the prize, to iudge who fighteth most valiantly, if wee feare and tremble before him, and

3. G. y. motion
cutt. on 161. 162.

walke according to the direction of his spirit (provided alwaies that we tempt him not to trie his goodnesse) wee may assure our selues, that as hee hath begunne a good worke in vs, so hee will end it to the praise of his glory : and as Esay 49. 24. the iust captiuitie shall be deliuered, and the pray shall be taken from the tyrant : for the Lord is stronger then he, and therefore is able, and hath better title then he, both in creating vs when we were not, and in redeeming vs being lost ; and therefore we shall be victors in this strong man Christ.

4. to 3^d end.

For the fourth, the end why hee was tempted : which was to sustaine the vttermost assaults Sathan could make by suggestion to seduce him. Heere it may seeme strange at first, that our Sauiour Christ should bee so farre abased, to bee subiect to the temptations of the diuell, and to bee directed to it by the spirit of God. True it is, there was no matter in Christ to worke vpon, his nature being fully sanctified from his conception, free from all corruption, yet hee was apt and capable to be tempted : that is, it might glauce as a thought thorough him, but it was presently repulsed. For such was the state of Adam at first, that though he had no inward concupiscence, yet hee was such a one as might be tempted to heare and to see, if he would : but this is the difference, it clasped about Adams vnderstanding, but it could not possibly lodge with Christ : and it is no more disparagement to him thus to be tempted, then it was for him to take and assume our flesh. Heereupon consider, that there be three kinds of motions in the minde of man. The first, which glaunceth and passeth thorough the minde without any troubling of it at all. The second more permanent, when somewhat assaults the minde, and yet without any consent of the minde. The third, is that kinde of motion to which the heart consenteth. The first of these is against no commandement, the second is against the tenth commandement, the third against the other nine commandements. And this is singular comfort and consolation to vs, that Christ was tempted ; for now we may bee bold to assure our selues, that we may powre foorth our soules vnto him, and may approach to him in all our agonies, not doubting but hee will compassionatly respect vs, because hee in this flesh of ours, knew and felt the hard encounter ; according to that is said often in the old Law to the Israelites : Remember thou wert once a servant in Egypt : experience of afflictions making men more mercifull : and as it is said, Heb. 5. 2. he is meet to haue compassion on vs that are out of the way , because that he also was com-passed with infirmity : and Heb. 12. 3. the Apostle draweth his argument thus : that the consideration of the sufferings of Christ should perswade vs not to bee wearied nor to faint in our minds, both because hee by his sufferings learned obedience , and also because hee in our sufferings will bee a bearer of the weight left it ouerpresse vs , that we also might be consecrated through afflictions. And this also is a second comfort to vs , that as Christ ou-uercome by flesh , so shall wee also victoriously conquer through him , if with patience we perseuere : for heerein hath Christ reco-uered what Adam lost , who receiued concupiscence by Sathans temptations ; but Christ hath overcome the diuell in as great temptations as euer Adam was overcome.

Further, in that Christ is led by the sprit, and the diuell tempteth him : consider what the purpose of them both are , since being opposite one to the other, they both ioyne in this one action. We must learne, that temptations are diuersly spoken of in the Scripture : first , the diuell tempteth ; therefore when we are moued to anger, giue not place (saith the Apostle) to the diuell ; ¹ Ephes. 4. 27.
 for he bloweth the coales to kindle thy wrath , which is murder two waies : first , either in the vnjust matter of it : secondly , or in the immoderate measure of it , and in all things hee as an ex-ternall instrument worketh vpon the corruption of our hearts.
 Secondly, one wicked man tempteth another, as it is said in the Prouerbes : Come, lay thy lot with vs , and we will take a purse, ² Prou. 1. 14.
 alluring others by their example to the participation of the same sinne : and these are two causes of temptations without our hearts. But Saint Iames (chap. 1. 14.) goeth to a third cause : ³ Every one (saith he) is tempted of his owne concupiscence, as speaking of the inward cause that another prouoketh vs by and Sa-than worketh vpon , namely, our owne pronenesse and pregnancy to sinne , and the fire that burneth in our breasts , so as e-uer we must charge and challenge our selues for our sinnes, and

4 every temptation is either from an outward prouocation, or inward instigation, or both. Fourthly, God tempteth not onely to trie what strength we haue to vse prosperity with sobriety, and aduersity with patience : for this is not enough, though by this he doth manifest what is hidden in the inward minde : but these other inward solicitations come not without God, yet doth hee not tempt (James 1. 13.) as it is euill, but vseth the ministerie of Sathan two waies : first, toward the elect : then toward the reprobate : toward these, to giue them vp into an euill minde, that sinnes past may bee the punishments of sinnes to come, and the deserts of punishments that are to come ; which the Lord doth, as a iust reuenger, and not as any euill author : for to punish sinne by sinne, is but iustice with God. As God willeth, that Abolon shall plague his father by committing incest, to bring Dauid to repentance for his adultery ; nor that he willeth it as adultery, but as a iust plague to him that did it, and to conuert his seruant Dauid. Now for the elect, the Lord letteth the raines loose, that thereby he may manifest their strength, and his owne power in their weakenesse. And by this was made known what excellent graces Iob had receiued, when by his extremities and anguishes hee was not consumed, but refined, which otherwise had beene hid ; euen as the Pilot cannot shew his cunning but in a storme, nor a man his valour but in a combat. So Dauid was by affliction brought low, that the Lord might shew the richer mercie in his recouery : that all his children might bee assured to finde the same mercy, though they fall into the same sinne, if they follow his steppes of repentance. So as temptations are sent of the Lord to discover his graces in them, or their owne wants if they relent, partly to heale their pride, partly to teach them to repent of some sinnes which before were not thought of : and that the Church of God might bee comforted, knowing that in the extremity of a bleeding heart the Lord sendeth compassion. Sathan tempteth Adam to proue God a lyer, and to bring him to dishonour, and to bee the instrument of mans damnation. Adam tempted himselfe to tast of that which as hee thought should make him God : God tries him by this meanes to make a way for his iustice in there-probate, and for his mercy on the elect : for if there had beene no fall, God had beene neither iust in condemning some, nor merciful in sining others. So heere Christ is caried to be tempted. The purpose of God in this is to confirme it vnto Christ, that he should be of power to destroy and extinguish the power of the diuell, but Sathan fully intended to haue destroyed the head, by this meanes to haue hindered the saluation of the members.

For the fift circumstance, which is the aduantage sathan tooke by Christs fasting : vnderstand first, that it was not the purpose of God nor of Christ himselfe to commend vnto vs his abstinence : for it is no commendation to forbear when he hath no appetite to eate, but it was to commend his miraculous power, for he was qualified with such diuine vertue, as hee was for the time like an Angell, not subiect to humane desires.

The Papiits from hence doe draw the institution of Lent, saying, that all things are written for our instruction : therefore as Christ fasted fortie daies, so must we. It is true, that all things are written for our instruction, but not for our imitation : for he was borne of a Virgin, concieued of the holy Ghost, transfigured in the mount, hee had a confirmation of his doctrine by diuers miracles, came into the house the doores being shut, commanded the winds, walked on the waters ; and must we be like him in these things ? No : for all these taste of his Diuinity. But his obedience, his patience, his loue to giue his life for his enemies, his meeknesse, not to breake a bruised reede, his willingnesse to suffer all kind of affliction : these things let vs imitate, for these be fruits of the spirit only. but to fast forty daies and forty nights is no more imitable for vs then it is to be borne of a Virgin. Yea but, say they, it is good by this to take occasion to exhort to abstinence. We answer, it is no reason that because Christ fasted hauing no stomacke, therefore we should abstaine hauing stomake. Againe, in all this time Christ takerh nothing, but they pamper themselues with wines and iunkets, which be as irritable to lust as flesh ; therefore theirs is but a mock-fast : for Christ fasted not sparingly only, but abstained altogether. Againe, if they will imitate Christ, they must doe it in the wildernes : and if it be a commandement because Christ did it, why did they it not in Eliah † and and Mofestime? If neuer any Iew proposed to himfelfe this imitation of him that faſted not but by the power of God, much leſſe ſhould we in this follow Chriſt that faſted by his owne power. Againe, Chriſt faſted that Satan might take him in his infirmity; but muſt we doe ſo, to expoſe our ſelues the more to the opportunity of his temptation? God forbid. Yet if we will know what faſting is, we ſay it is a neceſſary exerciſe which our owne calamities doe require, and the deſolations of other churches doe exact: and hee that taketh in more then will well fit him to the duties of his calling, hath ſurſeited.

popiſh faſting
2. of 168

Now in the faſting of the Papiſts we note foure faults: firſt, they deſtroy the worke of faſting in the bodily exerciſe; which 1 they doe two waies: firſt, by fulneſſe: ſecondly, by delicacy. Secondly, there is a meere deceit and coſinge in their faſting; for
2 with faſting ſhould bee ioyned praier extraordinary, both for feruency and continuance: which by humbling our ſelues in this ſort doth ſet an edge vpon them, which otherwiſe would crawl vpon the ground, and were not able to pierce the heauens: for if faſting had not this uſe, but that the action would be complete by outward abſtinenc onely, then were it a brutiſh faſt; for the beaſts of Niniueh (Ionah. 2.) faſted in this ſort. But they doe not ioyne praier extraordinary, that the body may be crucified and the minde humbled, that thus it might bee as a grindſtone to ſet an edge on their ſupplications; therefore theirs
3 is no faſt. Thirdly, all faſting is for the obtaining of ſome grace, or preventing of ſome danger: but they haue ioyned and appointed ſet daies to faſt on: as if the Phyſition ſhould ſay, ſuch a day he would let bloud, not regarding the preſent ſtate of the patient, wherein hee ſhould rather ſhew himſelfe a Prophet then a Phyſition: euen ſo doe the Papiſts deale in their faſts, either
4 verie ignorantly or prophetically. Fourthly, where faſting is appointed to humble vs, and to confeſſe our vileneſſe by feeling our wants, and to powre forth our ſoules vnto God: they thinke that hauing pleaſed him by the bare action of abſtinence, they may doe what they liſt, or elſe puffed vp with a Phariſaical pride of merit, thinking they haue deſerued at Gods hand, they will match their almes with the very bloud of Chriſt, which is moſt ſacrilegious.

facilegious. Of these the Apostle speaketh, 1. Tim. 4. 3. that In the latter times there shall come men which shall forbid marriage and meates, speaking in hypocrisie, &c. Yea (say they) this is meant of grosse heretikes, which should condemne mariage and meates altogether, as the Marcionists, that said, men and women were coupled for generation of the diuell. This is absurd, for these men speake it not in hypocrisie but in open blasphemy. Yea (say they) but we doe not hold that meates are vnclene in themselves. And yet they forbid it to all men at some times, and to some men at all times. Againe, a Doctor of theirs in approbation of their Lent, saith, that flesh was accursed in the flood of Noah, but so was not fish. Yea but God forbade the tree in Paradise and certaine meates vnder the Law, yet were they not vnclene. We answer, that which God hath made lawfull what man can interdict? And as it is Antichristian to command what God forbids, so is it to forbid what God commands. The meates in the Law were forbidden for significations, and they cease: so for meates offered to Idols, for they are abolished: and a man may now eate meate offered to the diuell, for hee cannot pollute it; for euery creature of God is good, and nothing ought to be refused if it be receiued with thanksgiuing, (1. Tim. 4. 4.) Againe, if they speake of the quantitie and qualitie it were somewhat, but they doe not so, but all fish and no flesh is lawfull.

Then came to him the tempter, &c. This is the first speciall temptation wherewith Christ was assaulted: as if Satan should haue said, there hath been a voice heard from the aire, that thou art the son of God, and there hath been a visible cutting asunder of the heauens by a miracle, and by this thou perswadest thy selfe that thou art so; and thou hast fasted heere forty daies which makes thee highly conceited of thy self, yet is it not possible thou shouldst be Gods Sonne, for thou wantest not onely the hoast of heauen to wait vpon thee, which were worthy the glory of the Sonne of God, but thou art so distressed as thou wantest a peece of bread for the strength of thy body, therefore it is vnlike thou shouldst be Gods child, for then hee would more respect thee then now he doth, to leaue thee thus destitute of comfort. Well I know thine infirmity to bee such as bread thou must haue, and being heere where is none but wild beasts, and where no present supply can be made, bestirre thy selfe and be thine owne purueior; and because without bread thou canst not liue bee thou Gods Sonne or no, looke how thou canst furnish thy selfe, whether by miracle or without miracle. Now heere in this desert there is nothing but stones, which if thou beest such a one as thou wouldest be thought to be, thou canst change their naturall hardnesse and make them fit for nourishment. Therefore to satisfie me, and for thine owne good, let me see at thy commandement their nature to bee altered and transubstantiate. Our Sauiour Christ being well furnished and appointed, not onely with the graces of the spirit but with the word of God, doth not answer whether he be Gods Sonne or no, or whether he can turne those stones into bread or no, but hee overthroweth the ground of his reason, that it is not impossible man should liue without bread: as if he should say, Thou giuest the power of sustenance to a peece of bread, but my Father is able by his power and prouidence to sustaine me though I haue no bread: and not onely my selfe am thus perswaded being Gods sonne, but euen flesh and bloud may be able to liue without food if so be it be Gods pleasure; therefore there is no cause why I should worke a miracle, since not onely I but many other may bee relieved without these ordinary meanes. And that thou maiest know I haue truth on my side, I speake nothing but scripture, for Deut. 8. 3. it is said, Therefore hee humbled thee and made thee hungry, that hee might teach thee that man liueth not by bread onely, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doeth a man liue. And as for thee, thou goest about to tempt me to haue me vse my liberty in this place; but I discern thy subtilty, and to doe this thou requirest should be no glory to my Father, nor any confirmation of doctrine heereafter, therefore I will not cast pearles before Sathan.

1. The words containe two parts; first, the suggestion or temptation: secondly, the beating backe of the temptation. In the first consider, first the occasion sathan rooke to tempt him, namely his hunger: secondly, the matter wherewith he was tempted:

For

For the first, he tempts him in a matter of food, being hungry. Where learne, that Sathan espieth all aduantages where and when he may finde vs best; and he vseth our present infirmities or conditions of life as the fittest coales to set vs on fire withall. For the rich man is neuer assaulted with the temptation to steale, because he hath enough; nor beggers to purchase, because they want; nor priuate men to peruert iustice, because they sit not in place: but there bee some temptations on the right hand and some on the left, some are tempted by sicknesse to impatience, by health to forget God, by youth to embrace liberty, and by age to loue riches, by fulnesse to lift vp their heele against God; some by penury to distrust him, as if hee had cast off all care of them: some are moued to reuenge by being disgraced, and some to worke mischief by being flattered; therefore we must correct such imperfections whereunto by nature wee are most inclined, and not to giue the least aduantage vnto Sathan, lest vpon our vnwatchfulnesse we be surprized, for euery one shall finde, that in something hee is not left vntempted; and since temptations come on both sides, wee must arme our selues with weapons on each side.

For the second, which is the matter of the temptation: we obserue a double dritt in Sathan: first, to driue Christ to doubt that he is not Gods child because of his present exigent and want: secondly, vpon this to driue him to vse a preposterous miracle against Gods glory, and whereby hee should haue graunted the diuell that he could not haue liued without bread, and by this meanes to haue lost the glory of the triumph.

For the first of theie, leaving the particular of Christ the head, let vs see whether the members bee not afflicted with the same temptations. The greatest man the Prophet David was mightily shaken with this, when he saw Gods children liue so miserable, and the wicked so prosperously. The Prophet Jeremy (ch. 12. 1.) desireth to reason with the Lord about this matter, and bursteth forth with wonder; Why doeth the way of the wicked so prosper, why are all they in wealth that rebelliously transgresse? They are planted and they grow, whereas the godly leade a life fraught and full of sorrow. And this was the argument of all Iobs friends, friends, that being so strangely afflicted he must needs be Gods enemy, Iob. 8. 20. Indeed if the Lords loue should be measured by outward blessings, the vngodly had farre greater cause to boast, for they weare pride about their neckes as a chaine, and are covered with extortion as with a garment: their faces shine (saith Jeremy) and their plants are safely rooted; yea not onely their persons, but their children are like flockes of sheepe in the pleasant field, and like oliue branches at a furnished table: they see their houses established before their faces, and are comforted with the sight of their childrens children: Nay all things fareth well with them, their Cow calueth and casteth not, their heards come in and out with daily plenty, so as with them euery thing prospereth by a proportionable kinde of happinesse. And as they are happie in their liues, so they haue a great priuiledge in the time of death, for they die like lambes, and passe away farre more comfortably to the eye then Gods children; for they die not languishingly, or as the prisoners of death, but they goe to the graue sodainly: yet their wickednesse is such, and their hearts so full of poison, as Iob describing their cogitations, saith, they regard not (chap. 21. 15.) the Almighty, but say, what is the Lord that they should serue him? And David (Psal. 7. 5.) sheweth that their mouthes speake blasphemie against the heavens, and their tongues walke freely through the earth, not fearing men.

1. Pet. 4. 17.

Whereas on the other side, the iudgement of God beginneth at his owne house, and they drinke the dregs of the cup of sorrow, they are but wormes scarce worthy to creepe in respect of the magnificence of the wicked: they eat the bread of care, and quench their thirst with the water of affliction: they are for their bodies poore, for their credit despised, and for their consciences they haue many combats: the terrors of death doe oft so fight against them, as they are shaken in the foundation of their faith, so as they doubt besides these miseries they sustaine heere, they shall be adiudged to death in the life to come: yea they are hated of those by their name, that neuer saw them by their face: And besides this, amid these waues of their miseries they are tempted yet by Sathan, as that they are but grasshoppers, abiectioned of the world, ouerwhelmed with sinne, which wounderh their

their soule to death, and yet they take themselves to bee heires of heauen, and fellow-heires with Christ. These seas of miseries should neuer overflow thee which sting thy conscience, nor these disgraces outward should neuer overthrow thee which touch thy body, if thou wert Gods child, for then should his eye watch over thee to ease thee. Such is the portion allotted to Gods Saints, so as David was caried so farre in perturbation of spirit, that had hee not entred into the sanctuarie of the Lord, he had vtterly condemned the generation of the godly. Howbeit when we are assaulted on this sort, let vs not bee dismayed, but let vs know, that herein is wrought our conformity with the Lord Iesus, let vs & learne the same defence that he vsed, not to seeke to wind out our selues by our owne power or policy, but to rely wholly vpon the Lord, for he hath many secret waies to rescue vs if it please him to shew the power of his prouidence: and by this trouble and depth of sorrowes we are plunged into, we may the rather assure our selues that there shall be a generall restauration of all things, because they are now so out of frame; whereas if the wicked should heere bee punished and the godly prosper, we might more call in doubt the comming of the Lord to glory. But now seeing things in such a lamentable confusion, even this may perswade vs with Saint Paul, that there shall come a daie of vengeance for them that liue wickedly; and for them that are now distressed a day of comfort: for if euery thing should be caried with an euen hand, we might well doubt of an immortalitye.

For the second drift of Satan, which was to vrge Christ vpon this his distresse to worke a miracle, it shall more conueniently be spoken of in Christs reply.

Now for the second generall point, which is the beating backe of the temptation, we must consider two parts: first, that he repulseth him by alleaging Scripture: secondly, the place alleaged, in what sence it is to be applied.

For the first, vnderstand that our Sauour Christ might many waies haue overcome him, yea by the power of his Godhead he could haue confounded him without an answer, but it pleased him to fight with the weapons of flesh and blood, that

by his example might learne out of the word as out of a schoole of defence to beate backe Sathan. Where obserue, that Christ alleaging Scripture as an instrument to repulse the diuell, that there is no sword of the spirit to driue away temptations so sure as the Word of God, being most necessary for this purpose. Where two sorts of men are iustly reprov'd: first, they that wring this weapon out of the peoples hands. secondly, they that cast it from them, that are content themselues to abide the blowes, but another must weare the sword.

For the first, they are the prelates of Rome, who in the time that heauen was made a haire-cloth, and Antichrist set foot on the Lords throne, shut vp the booke of God into the rusty scabbard of Bishops houses, where it was kept vnder the bondage of the Clergy vpon paine of excommunication, charging the lay people not to meddle with it: as if it had bene the readiest weapon to haue cut their throats. But since the Sonne of righteousness appeared, the Gospell shining in mens hearts, they being ashamed of this, and being perswaded in common equitie that men were not to bee kept from it, they haue published one part of the word the new Testament, not (say they) vpon any absolute necessitie, but to auoid corruptions that may grow by reading other translations, they knowing the people now would not bee made such fooles and babes as they were when there was a generall mist ouer the whole world. But wee doe stand vpon the absolute necessity of hauing the word common, because the danger is common that thereby is to bee auoided: and this for two causes: first, it is necessary that every one should trie the spirits; so as he must vnderstand more then hee is taught by the mouth of that spirit which should bee tried: therefore they must haue the booke of God, according as the men of Berea had, Act. 17. 11. giuing no further credite to Pauls Sermons then they were consonant to the written word.

Secondly, every Christian is a souldier, and in his baptisme hath taken prelle money of Christ, to serue him in this field of the world, against the Diuell our sworne enemy, who worketh outwardly by the glittering shewes of the earth, inwardly by the

the desires of flesh and bloud, adding his owne suggestion to both these. Now the weapons to encounter him are the word as the sword, and faith as the shield. And every one being tempted in his owne person, the more to offend the enemy and the better to defend himselfe (and since our owne sinnes shall be required at our owne hands) we must every one take his sword out of the Lords armory, that we may resist in person as we are stricken in person. And it was a fearefull thing for them to put out the kandle, while the people were smitten; and a shamefull thing to put out their right eye, that they might not discern their euill wares they vttered them for their good money. Oh (say they) it is good they should haue them, to keepe them from the infection of other impressions: as if the reading of the Scriptures by the people, were Physicke when men are sicke and not meate when they bee whole; Treacle to driue out poison, and not preseruatiues to keepe from it; as if it had strength to put the enemy to flight, and none to hinder his approach: the contrarie whereof is rather true. For if it bee meete to giue light to the simple, when the heauens are ouercast with the mist and cloudes of heresie, it is much more forcible to shew the way when they are not so clouded. Oh but there be many hard matters in the Scripture, past the common reach. So there bee many easie within their reach: for the Lord hath so tempered them, as some be easie to prouide against penurious stomackes, and some difficult to preuent fastidious lothsomnesse. Yea, as in the most champion and plaine ground of the booke of the Scripture there be some mysteries, as hillockes higher then the rest, so in the greatest and steepest hill thereof there is footing whereby with labour and trauell we may come to that height of it, where wee may see and discover so much of the land of Canaan and the kingdome of heauen, as our places doe require. Therefore it is well said, that the Scriptures are like a floud, wherein the lambe may wade and the Elephant swim: for the plainer places are to be digested with comfort, and the hidden treasure to be digged out by praier. Therefore saith Christ: Let him that readeth con- sider, &c. Oh but this taketh away the glorie of the Church, when every one may controule his master, and breedeth heresies, sies, when euery one may maintaine by this his owne opinion. Yea but it is good that euery one shold know the truth, that they may follow the steppes of their teachers but in the way of truth : and if because some haue bene seduced, all should be deprived of this blessing, then away with preaching, for it is the saueur of death to many ; and with the Sacraments, for many feede of Christs flesh, but to choke them to damnation : and then away also with Christ himselfe, for to many (Luk. 2. 34.) he is a rocke of offence, to rush their bones to perdition. And if Heretikes haue abused the Scripture, this is a reason to restore it, that they may be againe conuincd by Scripture. And if it be sufficient to say, the diuell alleaged Scripture, therefore hide it from the people : we say to this, Christ vsed nothing but Scripture, therefore let them haue it : for it is no reason to take away the thing for the abuse of the thing, no more then that a lambe should cast off his fleece, because the Lion sometime weareth it : or that because one abuseth his sword, therefore none should weare any weapon. For howloeuver some mad-men or quarrellers in the campe may abuse them to their owne and others destruction, yet the Law of not bearing sword in the field will neuer bee iust. And to meet with such an euill by taking away the good, is like vnto those vnskilfull Physitians, that rid their Patients of no disease, vnlesse they take their liues from them. Yea, but it is dangerous meddling. Why then put out the candle, lest it burne the house. Oh, but put not kniues into childrens hands. But there is no such comparison in the Scripture : it is indeed compared with a sword in the hand of a souldier : and this is that wee vrge, that euery man may beare his owne sword, since euery one is to fight: and in the iustice of the Law of Armes it should bee so, since wee know not how soone we shall be assaulted : and except they will discharge vs of the Lords seruice, and say that we are no Souldiers to combat against the corruptions of the flesh, and suggestions of the diuell, it is a wrong not to bee suffered, thus to haue the weapon wrested out of our hands. Yet I cannot but commend the wit of the Clergy, for they had not sold their wares, vnlesse they had folded the peoples eies ; wherein they haue done like theeuers that put out the candle, that they may rifle more safely in the darke : so they wisely haue sought their vantage, that their vile filthy merchandize of Masses and such like might bee vented abroad, which would lie rotting at home vpon their hand, if men might be suffered to bring any light with them into their pack-houses. Oh but, they say, they haue kept it but from hogges and dogges. Yea, and from sheepe and lambes too; besides that many are vncleane in their liues, which yet are not hogges. But in this they bewray a cleane contrary spirit to that wherewith our Sauour Christ was conducted: for hee oft preached in the hearing of knowen hogges and dogges, the Scribes and Pharisees, lest for their sakes the children should bee defrauded of their bread: whereas on the contrary, they depriue the children of their appointed portion, lest the dogges should happily snatch at it: which is no reason that it should bee kept from the iust owners, because there be some vsurpers by. Yea but (saith Stapleton) by searching the Scripture diligently, they haue erred shamefully. This is as if one that were to traine vp a child to be an archer, should giue him this precept: that by ayiming at the marke most surely, hee should misse most foully. Whereas men haue erred onely because they sought it not diligently enough: and though many haue missed, yet heerein haue they beene brought to a conscience to craue the Lords helpe in guiding their hands, that they may come as neare to the price of Christs glory as may be. Well forsooth, to gratifie the people, they haue now giuen them (as they terme it) the Rhemish Testament: but as the cursings of the people haue hitherto pierced their soules, and runne them thorough, for ingrossing into their hands the graine of life: so now they will be as sore and sharpe against them, for selling them such mustie, mildewd, and blasted graine: neither is their impiety lesse now in poisoning them, then it was before in staruing them.

The second sort of men that wring this sword from the people, are they that dare not but allow some instruments for tillage, yet they content themselues with bare reading; as if they would haue a souldier but halfe armed, like vnto the subtrill practise of the Philistims, who to keepe (1. Sam. 13. 19.) the Lords people alway in slavery, permitted no vse of weapon vnto them

(a few excepted,) whereby they would shew grace vnto them. Heereupon men are to be exhorted not to except against them that come to feed at a Sermon, hauing none at home. For wee ought to learn in this schoole of defence how to handle our weapon: and Seruice is commanded by the law, not to exclude Preaching, but to goe with it: so, as if they come for conscience to heare, and not for contempt to their owne Pastor at home, they are to be permitted without complaint. Here also are they to be charged, that hauing gifts, and being Christs Lieutenants, yet neglect to traine vp those souldiers that are to serue vnder their band. And by this meanes many of them are strongly assaulted in their absence, taking the fleece and not looking to the sheepe, and sitting to guide the sterne, and yet suffering the vessell to bee blowne about with euery tempest. For it comes to passe oft times, that some of the flocke are taken with the trembling of the heart, and dismaied by the terror of conscience Sathan hath driuen them vnto, wanting a teacher to bridle his rage and to answer his sophistry, and to salve the wound of the distressed: so that their faith is so dangerously assailed, as sometimes they are strangled with despaire: whereas for any thing such a teacher knoweth, his disease might haue beene cured by praier, and for any thing he knoweth, also hee may pay the price of his blood. Againe, though the iudgement doth not pursue them thus far, yet sometimes through these hot conflicts they grow senselesse leading a long life in feare, and leauing an ill example of a miserable end: whereas if their want of knowledge and experience had beene supplied by the lippes of their guides, there had been great hope they might haue preuailed.

- 2 Now for them that depriue themselues of this iewell, and sling this weapon from them, saying, that they beleeu as the Church beleeueth, and so hang their faith vpon the hookes of anothers beleefe, and being miserably abused refuse to reade the word, saying, God keepe them from the new and old Testament: for if there bee such bookes they are bookes of controuerfie: but thinke if they come to a Masse, it is enough though they beleeu they know not what. It is to bee lamented to see, that they haue thus put forth their eies, to abuse them after as they

they list. And thus haue they all the secrets of the people brought vnto them by their auricular confessions, keeping their owne iugling and playing fast and loose from the peoples sight, because they hide away the glasse of the word, wherein they might view their owne deformities, and the scabs of their instructors. Which is all one, as if a man being ready to goe a dangerous iourney, wherein he were sure to meet with riflers, and being well appointed for the purpose, should bee perswaded to goe, but in no case to carry his weapon with him. Wherefore let vs not hang our swords vpon other mens backs, for we shall be iudged according to our owne workes: but let vs still holde the sword in one hand and the shield in the other: for wee are beset on euery side, our sleepe is a thing to tempt vs, single life and mariage are things to tempt vs, yea there is no minute wherein we are not assaulted. Let vs therefore since the Lord hath furnished vs with all things fit for the warre-fare, and since Christ hath sanctified by example this weapon of the word vnto vs in the like conflict, let vs apply our hearts to reade it, and strue to haue this light both in our liues and in our mouths: for it is necessary for the king to reade and lay vp, that hee may command not through the pride of his heart things that are vnlawfull: and for the people, lest in too great basenesse of minde, they should obey man rather then God, Act. 4. 20. Now for them that thinke Sathan such a babe as he will bee out-faced with a word of defiance, scorning at reproofe, saying: They will shield themselves from Sathan as well as they that admonish them, the foule feend shall haue no power of them, and yet continue in the obstinacie of their harts, labouring to extinguish the feeling of conscience that they may liue more licentiously, they shall proue that Sathan can beare a few words so he be sure of the soule, for they be but feathers: and it is a lamentable way to defie a Lion, and yet to come within his clutches: thy soule hee will account gaine enough.

But he answering, said: It is written, &c.

Heere followeth the resistance Christ made by the sword of the spirit, to the temptation of the diuell. Wherein are to bee obserued two parts: first, that he vseth the word to beate backe his fiery dart : secondly, what text he chose and the sense thereof, in which there are two parts set downe : the first, negative : Man liueth not by bread onely : the second, affirmatiue : but by the word and promise of God, if the meanes faile.

For the first of these consider, hee doth not gratifie Sathan so much, as to tell him whether he bee Gods Sonne or no, neither doth hee worke any miracle as hee could haue done, as well as pay the tribute out of the fishes mouth, Mat. 17. vers. 27. but he tels him plainly his speech is vntrue; for a meere naturall man may liue without bread, much more I, that haue a priuiledge aboue men by my heauenly generation. Where we learne to haue this resolution, that vsing lawfull meanes how euer things succeed or prosper, that wee stand vpon the promise of God, that wee shall neuer want; a thing which shall continue firme, when the mines of the Indies shall faile : and a promise that no earthly Prince can make, because hee cannot assure himselfe of his owne estate. For he that did raine downe Angels food (Exod. 16. 15.) not which they made, but which they did minister; he that could make the shooes of the Israelites not to weare, cause water (Num. 20. 8) to issue out of a hard rocke, command the winds to bring quales in such a multitude, sustaine Eliab (1. King. 17. 4.) by the ministry of Rauens, that hath at sometime (Mat. 15. 36.) fed so many thousands with a few fishes, the same God hath giuen vs his word, that his providence shall bee as watchfull ouer vs; not that we should looke to be fed by miracles, or not to vse the meanes to feed our selues, but thinke that corne should grow without sowing, as it did (2. King. 19. 29.) in Hezechiabs time : but that we may bee assured his hand is not now shortned; for we doe not looke to be rapt vp to heauen as Enoch was (Gen. 5. 24.) before the Law, or as Eliab was (2. King. 2. 12.) after the law, yet doe we expect that our soules shall go thither as did Lazarus, Luk. 16. 22. So though wee are not to expect to bee enabled forty daies to fast, yet hee that did it this once, did it to confirme vs, that the same power of his Father doth still continue. And among all Christs sermons, hee euer tooke most perswasible reasons to make an impression of this in his disciples minds, and to roote out that humour of worldlie pensiuensse, penſiueneſſe, and carking carefulneſſe, that they might come to a meditation of the Lords providence. As Luk. 12. 22. Be not immoderately carefull to heape vp vnto your ſelues riches, for no mans life ſtandeth in his goods : which albeit in iudgement we diſcerne of, yet in affection we are ouertaken. And to perſwade this, he bringeth the Parable of the rich man, (verſ. 17.) who when he had ſpent his care to fill his barnes, and had thought to haue bleſt his ſoule in his ſubſtance, the ſame night was deprived of his life. Chriſt in that place ſhewing all care to be double : firſt, for the backe what we ſhall put on : ſecondly, for the belly what wee ſhall eat, and perſwadeth vs not to diſtruſt the Lord in either : the life is more then meate, therefore he that gaue thee the one being greater, will alſo giue thee the other being leſſe. Conſider the rauen, the Lord feedes them, and can he haue leſſe regard of his children ? Inſinuating vnto vs, that wee ſhould not feare the perſecution which is accompanied with ſcarcity, not ſtirring vp men to deſperate courſes to entangle themſelues in needles troubles: but hauing the croſſe laid vpon them by others, not brought vpon them by themſelues, then in a holy reſolution of the cauſe not to feare : for ſiue ſparrowes ſhall be bought for two farthings, and yet not a feather of theſe, much leſſe ſhall a haire of thy head, fall without Gods providence. Secondly, he perſwades vs by this, that our care can doe vs no good without Gods bleſſing. For apparell, wee ſee the Lillies garniſhed with ſuch beauty, as exceedeth Salomon in his glorie : and if hee thus cloatheth the graſſe of the field, much more will he provide for vs. O that our hearts could conceiue the comfortable ſecurity, that Chriſt giueth vs in reſting vnder the wings of his Father : for he is the ſame God now, no leſſe careful then he was then, if the fault were not in our infidelity that wee diſtruſt him. But ſecke (ſaith Chriſt) the meanes whereby ye may come to ſaluation, and all outward things ſhall be caſt vpon you : feare not little flocke, for he that will giue vs a heavenly kingdome, wherein we may contemplate the glory of God for euer, and hee that hath giuen vs his Sonne out of his owne boſome, when wee were his enemies, and had no grace to aſke pardon, how can he now deny vs any thing hee knoweth to be conuenient for vs ?

Yet for our comfort let vs know, that none haue this promise, but the godly : for the Lions, that is, the tyrants of the Church, they shall want and be hungerbit, but the righteous shall neuer be forsaken. Many had more oyle then the widow of Sarepta, (1. King. 17. 16.) yet hers by reason of the promise of God waited not, but lasted longer then theirs: so as not so much for the quantity as for the qualitie of hauing it in some competent certainer, the children of the most high shall neuer want. Where further we learne to forbear the vsing of vnlawfull meanes : for wee must make that reckening Abraham did, (Gen. 22. 8.) when Isaac told him, there was wood, but where was the sacrifice : God (saith he) will provide the Sacrifice : so wee must say, God will provide to releue our necessities. Let vs therefore owe nothing but loue, not borrow where we cannot pay ; and if the lawfull sweat of our browes will not affoord it, let vs vse no shifts to disgrace our profession : for what God hath cursed with his mouth, hee cannot blesse in the vse ; therefore it is better to want with his fauour, then to abound without it ; and better it is to be the Almighties begger, then the Diuels belly. Whereas wee so looke to the meanes on earth, as if there came no blessing from heauen : when as wee should in duty first lift vp our eyes to the Highest, that hee would adde his fauour to our labour : for hee can make vs as well want in abundance as abound in scarcity ; the dearest things a man can haue either for possession, as lands ; or for affection, as wife in the midst of persecution, if the crosse be sanctified vnto vs by the hand of God, in the want of both these we shall haue an hundred fold more, that is, more peace of conscienc, more contentation of minde, and more sweet tast of the Lords loue, then wee should haue had auoiding this persecution, in an hundred wiuces, or an hundred times more liuing. We being now assured of Gods fauour, and being but pilgrims on earth, wee shall see Christ in the heavens with his armes displaid to imbrace vs, a ioy surpassing all that worldly men can conceiue in all their superfluities; this but tickling the sense, and nothing contenting the mind, the other wrapping vp the soule in assurance of full and perfect blessednesse.

For the second point, which is the affirmatiue, that is, for the blessing blessing of God, and the way he hath deemed to bee most fit to maintaine our selues, that is his word : we are to learne a double vse : the first, speciall : the second, generall. Speciall in the matter heere expressed for sustenance, that it is the Lord who doth maintaine vs, so as his blessing must be vpon the bread, else it can afford no nourishment. Whereby are to be reprobued those inordinate men, that go vnto their meates like horses to prouinder, and like hogges gathering the mast and neuer looking vp to the tree whence it falleth. They should consider first, that the bread vnlesse it be sanctified (1. Tim. 4. 4. 5.) by God, is none of theirs, for we lost all the benefite of Gods creatures in the fall of Adam and can no way challenge them but by restitution in Christ, and this must be by prayer. Secondly, if wee would thinke that God could take away the strength from bread, wee would feed more religiously : let vs know that he may rot the graine in the clods, or blast it in the eare, he may restraine the latter raine that it may not yeeld, in the barne vermine may consume it, if it passe the flaile, the mill, the ouen, yet in thy mouth it may be rats-bane and turne to poison, or in thy stomacke it may become the gall of Alpes : for why shouldst thou feede on Gods creatures not acknowledging them whence they come ? Set before thee the example registred in the Scripture, Numb. 11. 33. quails came lothsomely out of their nostrils, and they died with meate in their mouthes, hauing fat bodies and leane soules. Therefore let vs pray, that the food wee take may doe vs good, otherwise wee haue no more right to vse them then the Israelites had to the quails. And as God can turne stones into bread, so can hee also turne bread into stones, for it is not the nature of the thing it selfe simply to nourish without a blessing : but wine which doth comfort the weake, the Lord can make it to the wicked a cup onely to insatuate them, that their account may be the greater for vsurping the Lords creatures. And this is the reason why wee are taught in the Lords prayer, to pray that our daily bread may be giuen vs, thereby acknowledging first God to bee the giuer : secondly, that we haue trust that through our prayers onely it shall be giuen vs : thirdly, that not onely the creatures themselues but the blessing vpon them comes from God ;

God ; for though our garments were as costly as the Ephod of Aron, yet without his blessing they were nothing. For so miserable is our condition, that we are not able to liue one moment without the speciall prouidence of God. For the second vse, which is generall : as it is true in bread so is it in all other things, that without the blessing of God they can auaille vs nothing : when wee are sicke wee seeke like Afa (2. Chron. 16. 12.) to the Physitian, fixing our eies and fastening our hope only vpon this outward meanes : whereas if the Lord hath called for a plague vpon vs, what man can cure it vnlesse the Lord doe reuoke it? So is it for warres, men may prouide money, munition and horses for the day of battell, but victory commeth of the Lord : for it is he that amazeth the rider, and asswageth the fury of the enemy, and blindeth the wisdom of the Princes of the world, that they shall faile in policy. And how commeth it to passe (saith the Prophet Hagge 1. 6.) that ye sowe much and reape little, weare much apparell and it doth not warme you, drinke and your thirst is not quenched, but onely that the Lord hath blowne vpon it, hath blasted and not blessed it? Therefore let vs learne to remooue this fault, that by the secret infidelity of our hearts wee doe not attribute too much to the meanes ; for the Lord can feed without bread, but bread cannot nourish without his blessing. The vse then of this doctrine is double : first, for our iudgements : secondly, for our affections. For the first, first we are heereby warranted to pray for things necessary for this life ; as Math. 7. it is said, Aske and it shall be giuen you: secondly, that the expectation of these things from God, and not to haue them without him, is an outward profession that he is onely the distributor of them, and therefore will giue to euery one his appointed portion. Wee may not therefore simply pray for these outward and earthly things but with limitation : first, that they be subiect to the pleasure of God: secondly, that they be desired not for themselues, but to glorifie God and to profit our neighbour. Thirdly, heere is confuted the error of the heathen, that worshipped Ceres as the God of corn, and Bacchus as the God of wine ; which howsoeuer they were the first inuenters of grinding the one and pressing the other, yet both the Corne and the Grape come from God. For the second, second, which concerneth our affections : heere is first reprov'd covetousnesse in getting, the venome of all vertue, and is contrary to the keeping of a good conscience before God, and desiring of a good name before men, making vs deafe to the noise of infamy. For if the hand of God containeth all, and the blessing of God continueth all, to what end shall we tempt him, or bury our selves as it were in the graves of lust? Secondly is reprehended our vnthankfulness in vsing Gods blessings, passing by them with our eies shut, and glorifying the meanes about the matter. Thirdly, our dffidence, lest we should lose or want them, for the fountaine of all riches streaming from the Lord, hee can conuey vnto vs whole rivers of them, and measure them vnto vs without stint if we depend vpon his providence.

Then the Diuell tooke him up into the holy Citie, &c. This is the second temptation, wherewith our Sauour Christ during the infirmitie of his body for want of food was assaulted, where it pleased God to giue Sathan leaue to carry him in the aire after a strange manner, and to set him on a pinnacle of the Temple, where he reasoneth thus with him; Thou saist man liueth not by bread only, but by the blessing of thy Father, who can maintaine thee without bread, and heerein thou doest well; now because thou art assured, and doest promise thy selfe that God will neuer destitute the nor forsake thee, shew me thy power in casting thy selfe downe and not hurting thee: the power of thy father is able to do this, thou art heere at Ierusalem the famous city, shew them what thou art able to do, that they may all giue thee the applause and it will be a notable meanes to make them swarme after thee. And because thou maist know, I goe about nothing prejudiciall to Gods glory, or dangerous to thine owne person, it is written that especially thou shalt be protected by Angels, and they shall wait vpon thee to keepe thee from hurt, therefore thou needst not despaire. Now Christ tels him not, that he was not able to doe this, for he would not gratifie him so much, but lets him know that hee wronged the words, and wrested the sense of the place alleaged: for it is not said generally, the Angels shall support him in all things, but they shall defend him in all his waies, that is, such as my Father hath appointed me to walke in: so that if I or any temptation

any other Christian will lay claime to this promise, I must keepe me in my waies, and so must they: that is, from this pinnacle I must come downe by the staires, and not throw my selfe headlong, for my father hath appointed me no such way, but this should be an vnlawfull meanes: and to that thou hast brought corrupted, I oppose another plaine place, that I must not tempt God, but keepe my selfe within my compasse, and then I am sure to haue sauegard.

¹ Hence we may gather two parts: first, the temptation: secondly, the repulse. The temptation hath two parts: first, whereof ² Christ is tempted: secondly, a reason perswading him to yeeld to the temptation.

1. 2. temptation
of v. 1. tempt
of 1.
 For the first, generally obserue, that Sathan dealeth by contraries, both with the head and with the members; for when he saw he could not ouercome Christ in the case of famine, to make him despaire of Gods prouidence, now hee labourerth to ouerreach him in a matter of presumption, that hee should trie his prouidence, that since he could not doubt but to be fed without bread, hee might make him presume to bee vp-held without meanes. Euen so dealeth he with vs, either to make vs distrustfull through penury, or proud through plenty; in the time of ignorance seeking to make vs proud through works, and to be in loue with them without faith, and now to stand vpon faith without works; before labouring in zeale without knowledge, and now hunting after knowledge without zeale.

of 1.
 For the second, which is the reason, hee alleageth scripture, namely Psal. 91. 11. wherein obserue two things: first, that though scripture heere be opposed to scripture, yet not to withdraw the determination of matters from the booke of God, and to post them off to Rabbins and Councils, for none can better trie the truth then the spirit of truth. Secondly, that it detracteth nothing from the glory of the Scripture, to come forth of Sathans mouth, nay nothing graceth it so much as this: the reason whereof is, that Sathan knew what baite Christ and all the faithfull would best and soonest bite at, and in his subtilty if any stratageme could haue preuailed more then other he wold haue vsed it, but hee knew Christ relied vpon nothing so much as the voice of his Father, and therefore he useth the greatest weapon against the greatest enemy, that hee might shew in pretence to haue as much truth on his side as Christ.

If thou be the Sonne of God, &c. This is the temptation it selfe, wherein consider three points: first, that the diuell transformeth himselfe so farre into an Angell of light, as hee brings scripture: secondly, to examine how rightly and truly hee doth apply it: thirdly, how fallily he doth abuse it.

For the first, It is written, saith the diuell, dealing with the sharp, and blading it out with the Scripture: sometimes hee dealeth plainly, and sheweth his hornes as it were by apertly opposing himselfe with violence against the truth: sometimes more priuile, and shroudeth himselfe vnder pretence of truth, and this two waies: first, by hereticall doctrine and grosse superstition: secondly, by perswading men that he is a louer of the truth, as in this place that hee would perswade Christ to nothing but that he had scripture for. Thus dealt he Act. 16. 17. where a woman possessed with a diuell hauing the power of spirituall diuination, hauing seene Paul after he had there preached, the spirit in that maide giueth an honorable testimony by a subtill stratageme of Sathan, of Paul and Silas, saying, These bee the seruants of the most high God, which shew vnto you the way of saluation: a strange testimony to bee giuen from the diuell, and farre degenerating from his nature, to giue witness of the truth, himselfe being the father of lies; and knowing Paul to be a sworne enemy, should yet yeeld voluntarily, and proclaime audience, and ring the bell as it were to gather the people about him, is worth the wonder. But what was his drift and subtilty in this, sauing that by the maides often repeating it and clamorous noising of it, it might perswade the poore disciples and weake followers of the Gospell, that Paul and the diuell had both combined and compacted together, as if thereby the Gospell might be brought into suspicion to bee but the illusion of Sathan, and light to bee mingled with darknesse: therefore it is said vers. 18. that Paul was grieued till he had cast him out: euen so heere to bring the people to suspicion that the scripture serueth him as well as Christ, thereby to make vs forsake our hold, and suggesting this, that nothing

nothing hath brought more disparagement to the Scripture then this, that all men of all opinions doe alleage it. Heereupon some take occasion to dispense with their conscience for any profession : so many places one against another, the Diuell alleageth it, Christ alleageth it, what shall we doe ? if we goe in either way we may goe a misse, and if we turne on the right hand, for any thing wee know it leadeth to hell. This is most prophane : for whereas they pretend to be abused by this incertainty, they are so ciuill to displease no part, as they are content to take any kinde of tergiuersation or flinching to extricate and shift themselves of the enquiry of the truth : whereas they might feare as well to eate lest they should be choked, and open the gates and leaue watching because the enemy hath so many subtilities as it will be hard to keepe him out. Whereas God doth this to exercise his seruants in praier, and to make them more diligent in searching, and not that we should turne it to a matter of security and idlenesse : these men not being so deuout as they that worship the Sunne and Moone, for they haue some conscience. We must know that Sathan is able to pull starres from heauen, as it is in the Reuelation, and hee doth not alwaies speake with the mouth of a Dragon : therefore in these perplexities wee must approach to God, whose promise we haue, Seeke and ye shall finde, knocke and it shall be opened : and Iohn 7. 17. if any man haue an honest heart and good inclination to liue well, I will shew him, saith Christ, from whence my doctrine is. And the Lord hath promised to be a Schoole-master to the humble, they being not prepossessed with preiudice, and he will giue plentifully and neuer vpbraid. O most bountifull inuitation of our gracious God !

Reu. 12. 4.

Luke 11. 12.

whereby wee may be assured that asking the truth hee will not giue error, and desiring to be conducted in the right way, he will not leade vs into by-paths, no more then asking bread hee will giue vs a Scorpion, but he will vphold vs in the most dangerous temptations, whereas others hauing no desire at least in a single affection, for their malice and preiudice may be iustly damned.

1. Thess. 2. 16.

But what shall we doe ? shall we make them like waxe, flexible to euery impression ? or like bells tuneable to the eares of the hearer ?

rer? What resolution is there for the conscience, the text cannot speake : It is written, saith Christ, It is written, saith the diuell : if they be written they are both true, and must needs be contrary being cited by enemies. We answer it is true, the letter printed cannot speake, and they that writ it are in heauen. The Church therefore hath prouided certaine meanes whereby a man not preiudicate may know the truth, which bee fixe : first, praier with David, that the Lord would open our vnderstandings, and shew vs the light of his statutes, and the way that wee may choose whereby our steps may be assured. Secondly, wee must vnderstand the words of the place in the originall tongue, of the old Testament in the Hebrew, of the new in the Greeke, for this was the instrument sanctified to that purpose. Thirdly, we must consider the words, what they be by themselues, and what they bee together ioyned with others, whether they bee to bee taken properly or figuratiuely, which shall bee knowne if either they be not proportionable to the analogie and rule of faith, or not agreeing with the circumstance of the place. Fourthly, to examine the drift of the place, what went before and what followeth : as Christ to one asking him how hee should get eternall life, answered, by keeping the commandements ; not meaning thereby that wee must come to it by our workes, as the Papiests gather, but he speaking to one that iustified himselfe by keeping the Law, spake after that sort to shew him his wound, namely that that was not the way vnlesse he fulfilled all. Fifthly, by comparing and conferring of places one with another, the true sense of the Scripture against the Scripture abused, as Christ in this place doth ; and as else where, Loue conereth the multitude of sinnes, 1. Pet. 4. 8. conferre with this, Prou. 10. 12. Hatred stirreth vp contention, but loue conereth all trespasses : loue being taken for the loue of men, whereby things are qualified, and the best made of the worst, and not for couering of sinnes before God, as the Papiests would haue it, but hiding it before men. So Abraham was iustified by faith, saith Paul Rom. 4. 3. by works saith James, chapt. 2. 21. Saint James dealing with them that denied works altogether, S. Paul with them that stood too much vpon them ; the one speaking how a man might approue himselfe before

Psal. 119. 12.

Luk. 18. 10.

26. 29.

fore men to be iustified, the other how men are iustified before God. Sixthly, approue of no interpretation, nor accept of any scripture which is not proportionable to the analogy and agreeable to the rule of faith, which is threefold: first, the tenne commandements: secondly, the Lords praier: thirdly, the Creed of the Apostles. As when it is said, This bread is my body, I must not take it for the very substantiall body of Christ as it was on earth, because it is against my Creed, which teacheth me to beleeue he is in heaven. Againe, if we eat him in the bread flesh and bone, it crosseth a commandement, Thou shalt not kill, for it is cruelly so to rend his flesh betweene our teeth. Oh but how shall vnlearned men doe this? Let vs know that God is the teacher of the vnlearned, and he wil not giue a stone if we aske food, but he will instruct the humble, and in compassion will bring them foorth of darknesse, if they will confer with the learned, as the Eunuch did with Philip, Act. 8. 31. and if they will frequent the word preached with the same hearts that the men of Bercea did heare Pauls sermons, Act. 17. 10. comparing them with the verity of the word written.

For the second, how truly Sathan applied the Scripture he brought: the place is taken out of Psal. 91. 11. and though his purpose was to abuse Christ hauing no promise of protection going out of his waies, yet in this he saith truly, that hee applied the promise especially to Christ the naturall Sonne of God, though it extend to all the faithfull: for Christ is that ladder of Jacob, Gen. 28. 12. whereupon the Angels ascended and descended: and so much did he himselfe tell Nathaniel of (1. Iohn 51.) that he should see the Angels ascend and descend vpon the sonne of man, for they are seruiceable properly to him as the sonne of God, and of him it is principally true, that the Angels do attend: for though they serue vs it is but for his sake, not that they are inferior to vs in themselues, but God hauing for his sonnes sake made vs heires of glory, and Christ vouchsafing vs to be companions with him in his kingdome, they minister vnto vs, and by that ladder doe descend vnto vs, hauing of our selues nothing.

Further note, that the diuell doth know that Christ and all Gods children must haue sufficient security from God, that walking walking in their calling, and in the waies prescribed them, they shall be guided by the providence of the most high : which is our comfort, that neither the pestilence that walketh by night, nor the arrowes that flie by day ; neither the dragon, nor the aspe, the open furious, nor the secret malicious tyrant shall once hurt vs : for Sathan knowes and doth heere testifye, that we dwell in the secret of the Highest, and vnder his shadow that shall shelter vs from stormy blaits and boiling heate : and no more shall wee need to feare, then did the heauens when the Tower of Babel should haue bene erected to them : and as easie it is to pull God out of his throne, as to disgrace vs further then he permits : for our saluation is as sure as his owne seate, and as stedfast as if our selues had bene in heauen and seene it written with Gods owne finger. Yea we shall stand like mount Sion, and not a feather of a bird, much more not the haire of our head, nor the hem of our garment shall bee touched or fall without his appointment. Wherefore Sathan sinneth against the holy Ghost in labouring to seduce the faithfull, whom he knoweth he cannot stirre, and when he knoweth wee cannot fall finally, since the Angels haue charge ouer vs, and cannot but be faithful keepers of that is committed to them. And heerein may we embrace the riches of the Lords mercy, who when his owne prouidence might be sufficient to secure vs of our safety, yet to releue our infirmity, and to support our weaknesse, hath giuen vs the gard of heauen to wait vpon vs : as if one that were to passe the seas, should not onely haue the letters of the Prince for his safe conduct, but should be guarded with his royall Nauy, to assure vs, that doing that we doe by the warrant of his word, we shall neither be persecuted nor molested, but so far as he may haue glory by it, and we reape comfort.

For the third, wherein he doth falsifie the text alleaged : and this he doth two waies : first, by wronging the words : secondly, by wretting the sense : for the Psalm. 91. 11. is : He hath giuen his Angels charge to keepe thee in thy waies, so as the promise is made with a limitation : that hee keepe him in his waies. Now from the pinnacle of the temple to fall downe is not the way, but hee leaueth out the demonstration of the truth, (thy waies) that is, those waies that bee prescribed, as from the Temple to come downe by the staires: by this meanes dealing fraudulently, leaning out the principall. Secondly, consider the wresting of the sence: for where this was spoken, that Christ should depend vpon his Fathers prouidence walking in his waies, hee laboureth to secure him generally of the same prouidence, though he were out of the way, heereby to ouerthrow him.

Now as hee dealt with the head, so hee doth with the members: for pretending Gods protection, hee laboureth to bring men to destruction. For predestination, hee will tell a man Esau was hated and Iacob beloued before they had done either good or euill; that it is not in the willer nor in the runner, neither in the affection, nor in the action: which hee doth onely to make vs rest in the prouidence of Gods predestination, without hauing regard to our conuersation; whereas heereby we ought the more to bee induced to get as many testimonies as wee can to prooue, that this election pertaineth to vs, and not to waite till grace should distill by diuine influence, or to make the decree of God a meanes of our security to liue as we list; as that being elected we cannot perish, and being appointed to be damned, we cannot auoid it. So for Iustification hee will suggest: Wee are saued by the blood of Christ onely, and when wee haue done all, we are vnprofitable seruants; the more we sinne the more grace aboundeth, and God hath most glory in pardoning most offences: Whereas being elected we worke well, not to recompence the goodnesse of God, but to shew our thankfulnesse. And there is no promise where the commandement is not kept: for this is to be performed on our part, else God is discharged on his part: for being out of our waies the diuell may take vs as vagabonds, the protection of the Lord not extending to vs in this course. And thus doth Sathan almost labour to peruert all the Scripture, that he may finde vs straying out of our Fathers house: as to suggest, that the Sabbath is made for man, therefore hee will labour to make vs worke on this day. But let vs not giue care to him, for this leadeth out of the way. So when it is said: He that laboureth not for his house, is worse then an infidell, if hee abuse any of vs by this, to couet after riches, away with it: for it is said in another another place : Couetoufneffe is the root of all euill, and the desire of riches is simply vnlawfull, (1. Tim. 6. 9.) for by this he falleth into many snares.

It is written againe, Thou shalt not tempt, &c.

This is the second generall part : namely, the repulse of the temptation : wherein consider two parts : first, that Christ answereth againe by Scripture : secondly, in what sense the place is alleaged.

For the first, we may obserue and see, it is no disgrace nor disparagement to the Scripture to proceed from Sathan, nor any occasion to make vs leaue our hold : for Christ answereth againe, and striketh with the same weapon wherewith he was stricken ; shewing vs, that it is lawfull to vse a text well against them that doe abuse a text : and if Christs example be our president, then wee may alleage Scripture against depraued Scripture. For the Bee may gather hony on the same stalke that the spider doth poison. And though a swashbuckler kill a man with his weapon, yet a souldier may lawfully knit a sword to his side : and though there be many piracies committed on the sea, yet may the merchants trafficke ; or though some surfet by gluttony, yet may others vse their temperate diet. And if the diuell change himselfe into an Angell of light, shall therefore the Angels lose their light ? Or shall Paul therefore deny himselfe to be a preacher of saluation, because the Pythonite (Act. 16. 17.) spake it ? Or because Caiphas by the spirit of the diuell (Ioh. 11. 50.) said, one should die for the sinnes of the people, must we not therefore beleue it ? And though (Numb. 22.) an inchanter wished that his soule might die the death of the righteous, yet is it a praier fit to be vsed of all Christians, though hee sold his soule for gold : For (saith hee Numb. 24. 17.) a starre shall come out of Iuda, a true speech of a false spirit. And heere the diuels owne mouth protesteth, that Gods prouidence reacheth ouer his children, which we may beleue with comfort, though it proceed from his lying lippes.

For the second, which is the sense of the words : heerein Christ doth plainely shew, that hee abused the place before alleaged, because he inforced the promise contrary to the commandement, making it absolute, where it was but conditionall : that the Lord would protect him if he kept him in his waies ; and for him to expect the promise if he went astray , were meerely to tempt God : so as the diuell by concealing that part, did poison and adulterate the Scripture.

Now wee must obserue, that God is tempted by man two waies : first, when we doubt of his power, vsing lawfull meanes, and yet we doe not thinke God can relieue vs : as Exod. 17. and Numb. 20. both the Israelites and Moses himselve doubted there would come no water out of the rocke though it were stricken, whereupon the place was called Massah and Meribab, Strife and Temptation : for the Lord had told them by that meanes they should gaine water. Secondly, he is tempted, when we neglect the meanes, and yet presume vpon his power, which is most proper to this place. For if Christ heere would haue come downe from the pinnacle headlong and not by degrees, hee had neglected the meanes , and so had beene out of the compasse of the promise. And thus doe we trie whether God can keepe vs when we are gone out of the way ; which is as if wee would cut off a mans leg , and send him then on our errand ; and clip the wings of a bird to trie whether it can flie : for our presumption can tie vp Gods armes that he cannot helpe vs, and make him brasse, that he cannot raine mercy vpon vs. We know there is a peremptory decree of election and reprobation : what of this ? yet we must strieve to obtaine the price set before vs , and worke our saluation forth with feare and trembling : for there are none predestinate to life, but they are predestinate to the meanes, faith and repentance, and he shall beleeuue and repent that shall be saued, and he that doth not, was neuer elect ; and yet we trie whether God can saue vs contrary to the meanes hee hath appointed , by walking in profanenesse, and in the works of darknesse. But let vs know, that the promise is vpon condition that we beleeuue, and that the meanes standeth with the decree, and cannot be separate. Oh, but it is said, At what time soeuer a sinner doth repent he shall liue. True: but it is said againe : Abuse not the bountifullnesse of the Lord vnto thine owne damnation: For the doore is not alway open, but thou maist knocke too late, and weepe when thou canst get no blessing:

ing : for if the sunne once set vpon our sinnes, or the inheritance be once giuen, then we come too short to expect any share.

Heere wee are to consider two extremities wee are fallen into: first, that wee distrust most where wee ought not to doubt : secondly, that wherein we should be most fearefull, wee are too bold : Care not (saith Christ) for food and apparell, (Mat. 6. 25.) they shall be cast vpon you : and yet in these things we dare not trust the Lord without a pawne, for vnlesse we haue bread, we thinke straightway we shall starue : but concerning heauenly things we are more carelesse, as for the preaching of the word, which is as necessary to keepe life in the soule, as is food to maintaine life in the body. Without bread a man will confidently say he cannot liue, and yet despising the bread of life, and neuer tasting of it, he will not doubt but hee hath a sound soule, and can retire to the song of mercie ; as that he trusteth God will spare him : when as in truth wee haue no promise of mercie, but through obedience to the Gospell, embracing it by faith, and expressing it in our conuersation. And this is our miserie, that wee are grown so sluggish, that wee dare trust God with our soules without meanes, which is the more precious part, but not with our bodies vnlesse wee see the meanes present, these being of no value saue in respect of the soule which maketh the whole immortal. Christ heere refused to fall downe, because there was another way : so let vs cease to tempt the Lord by our wicked lues, vpon hope of his patience, or presuming that in compassion he will not fall out with vs, nor take vengeance on our offences : for wee cannot trust or rely vpon mercie without obedience to his commandement. Example heereof wee haue, Act. 27. 24. where Paul had a promise of the Lord, that not a haire of their head should perish that went with him in the ship : yet when vpon violence of the tempest they would haue committed themselves to the sea, Paul telleth them they could not be safe vnlesse they staid in the shippe : for God hauing set downe the meanes of their safetie, meant to haue their hearts inclined to it ; euen so he that doth not amend his life, can no more bee secure from the ship-wracke of his soule, then these from the daunger of their bodies if they had forsaken the ship : or Christ to haue had his hee often saw Naboths Vine-yard; whereby hee was brought so greedily to desire it: yea in most of the finnes registred in the scripture, this speech (They saw it) commeth euer betweene the heart and the sinne; for thus Sathan powreth in poison into the heart by the outward sense, and our looks are as windowes whereat lust is let in, and concupiscence inflamed. Heereupon it is that the Saints of God have made their praiers, that the Lord would turne away their eies from beholding vanity: and Iob made Iob 31. 1. a protestation that he would not wantonly looke vpon a maide. And if these that were so full of the holy Ghost, so painful in crucifying their members, so feruent in praier, and so awfull of God did this, much more ought we that are farre behind them in religious exercises, and farre before them in fleshly desires, haue a stedy hand ouer our selues and our senses, that they bee not caught and insnared. Therefore let vs yeeld nothing to the course of waters, nor seeke to quench the fire with oile, or abate our lust by dalliance. Some haue the eies of the Cockatrice of Egypt, that sendeth forth poison to infect others, and rebounding backe againe poisoneth it selfe. For him that can scarce stand of himselfe, it is not safe sliding on the ice: nor for a weake braine to come neere an Iuie bush: for in this hee betraieih his owne soule.

For the second, which is the promise hee made him, All these z. (saith he) I will giue thee: and lest he might seeme to promise that was none of his owne, it appeareth by S. Luk. 4. 6. that he doth not challenge this as his of himselfe, but as giuen him: as if hee should say, They are all giuen me, and I wil giue them all to thee; wherein partly hee saith true, and in part lieth most shamefully. His truth is in this, that he acknowledgeth it to bee bestowed by a higher Lord; but heereby he would insinuate, that they are so giuen, as the Lord hath vtterly renounced and abdicated his care of the world, and hath left the earth to bee disposed by Satan, or the wheele of fortune, contenting himselfe with the gouernment in the heauens. Where learne, that though Sathan doth rule against Gods will, and that he neuer allowed his power, yet hee ruleth not without his will. Heereupon we must vnderstand a double power; the first giuen, the second onely per-

198 MATH. 4. VERS. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.

John 19. 11. mitted : All power thou hast (saith Christ to Pilate) is given thee of my Father. But the Diuels power is so permitted as it was neuer ordained of God : therefore it is not so lawfull as that of Magistrates, be they neuer so wicked ; for this is so giuen, as though it bee abused yet the authority in it owne nature commeth from God. Reuel. 13. The beast, that was the Emperour of Rome, came tumultuously, and advanced by warres had his authoritie giuen him from the Dragon. Where wee must distinguish two things: first, the ordinance of God commanding such magistracy so farre as it is preheminance : secondly, their Apostasie, their tyrannie, persecution of the Saints, and their vniust comming to that seate, was from the diuell. But the diuels power he executeth is no way lawfull as from God, for he neuer commanded it ; so as he is a meere vsurper : and according to this is the lieutenancy of Sathan, which God doth suffer but not ordiane, namely that princely imperious popish Priest of Rome, neither Magistrate nor Minister, and hath no power but from sathan, and is absolutely as vnlawfull as the Diuels. Where further consider, that there is nothing so euill but it is by Gods decree, though not allowed, and it is good there should be euill. And though the diuell as hee is the Diuell ruleth not well, yet it is to Gods glorie, for the exercising of his children by the buffetings of Sathan to humble them, lest they should waxe proud, and for the condemnation of the reprobate by the suggestions of Sathan to nangle them, that they might not escape the iustice of God.

The second thing Sathan assumeth to himselfe is most false, namely, that they were his to dispose ; for since they were neuer giuen him, he cannot assigne them ouer, for hee hath gained no interest by vsurpation. And this is true that Nabuchadnezzar Dan. 4. learned by liuing among beasts : Non (saith he vers. 31.) I see by experience which I could not before iudge of, that the Lord of Lords disposeth of kingdomes. But it may bee thought a strange impudency in the diuell, to goe about to perswade the Sonne of God that he could giue these things, for scarce any of vs would thinke his soueraignty so great. It is true, Christ could not by this proffer bee seduced ; but a great part of the world doth thinke, that that hee can dispose of the comforts of this life, which is proued by the meanes they vse to come to these blessings, vsing leud practices and vnlawfull meanes, not for a kingdome but for a trifle; which they would neuer doe, if they were not perswaded the disposition of these inferiour things were turned ouer to the Diuell, for God giueth nothing as a blessing, but by a lawfull course: so as vsing Sathans meanes how can wee thinke it commeth from God? And that such is our iudgement also, appeareth by the prouerbe, Hee that liueth an honest man shall die a begger; and what is this but to giue ouer the gouernement to the Diuell of these earthly things? And though they aske their dailie bread of God, yet they testifie that this their God is Sathan. For note the meanes they vse. For kingdomes, can a man perswade himselfe that God setteth vp Princes, and that promotion commeth neither from the East nor from the West, and shall he aspire to it by treason? For authority; can a man thinke that to come to a place is in the disposition of the highest, when he is aduanced by bribery and corruption? He that thinks to win somewhat from a Prince by flattery, perswadeth not himselfe that God can dispose of Princes hearts. And he that comes to a liuing by simony, thinks not that the holy Ghost hath appointed him there; nor he that increaseth his wealth by vsury, holds not that riches come from the Lord; for all these meanes hath his mouth cursed.

Further, for the promise, hee will giue him all if hee will giue him but a knee, a small matter; and if he would acknowledge him a benefactor, he would gratifie him as a person worthy, with all he shewed him. Now how euer Christ was not ouercome with this, yet it mightily preuailes with the sonnes of men. Looke into all particular places, and we shall finde he hath many to crouch to him for a great deale lesse then this was: Indas will betray his master for thirty peeces of siluer, Mat. 26. 15. Doeg will flatter Saul 1. Sa. 22. 10. and speake all euill of Dauid, in hope of preferment: Absolon will seeke his fathers life, to step into his throne, 2. Sa. 15. 2. Toab will kill Amasa (2. Sam. 10.) to get but the chiefe captainship of the guard. And Abimelech will slay threescore and ten men (Iudges 9. 2.) to make himselfe way to the Crowne. This made Balaam (Numbers 24.) that hee would faine haue cursed, that that he might haue been aduanced : and Diotrophes (3. John 1. 9.) to hinder preaching that he might be chiefe : and the Disciples to fall out (Luke 9. 46.) among themselues who shall be chiefe, one desiring to sit on the right hand, the other on the left, that they might be iolly fellows. But neuer any tooke the Diuell so much at his word as the Hierarchie of Rome, who from God had nothing giuen them but the Word and Sacraments, but from Sathan hath had his staires and degrees to ascend into the mountaine ; first God hauing provided men should bee Pastors ouer the people, it was appointed by man that there should bee superintendents ouer the superintendents, that is, Bishops, ouer Pastors, which was thought good to appease the dissention of the church, and to aduance men for the excellencie of their gifts. After was deuised that some should bee ouer the Bishops, as Archbishops, deuised at first by singular policy, that as Bishops in their Dioces were ouer the Pastors, so these should bee ouer them, to deale with them as they did with the Pastors. After was inuented that some should bee ouer them, and then was the Church giuen to foure Patriarkes which were to haue as ample authority ouer them as they had ouer the Bishops, and these were placed in euery corner of the Church, namely at Alexandria, Antioch, Constantinople and Rome. Heereupon by reason of the multitude of matters brought to these foure, Sathan withdrew them from their studies, being so instantly importuned as they were. From hence they being in such eminent places, and bearing the name of great professors, the Emperours growing to bee Christians indowed them with great substance, called them to be of their Councell, and gaue them much worldly wealth, as to great men of the earth ; and when they began thus to negotiate in the world they despised preaching. After when they were enriched and brought thus farre ad gloriam mundi, to behold the glory of the earth, then Sathan wanted no more then to see which of these would fall downe first and haue all : at the end the strife grew betweene Constantinople and Rome, as Patriarkes of the East and West Churches, and after some buckling Rome preuailed, partly by the absence of the Emperour, partly by the diuision of the Empire in the East, partly in that it sought it more ambitiously than the other, and partly for the fulfilling of the Prophecie, that the seat of the Beast should be built vpon the seven hills. And how was this done but by Phocas that killed his Maister Mauritius? whereupon afterward partly by worldly power, disposing of Emperours, and the yoke of conscience thinking them Peters successors, he was stupor mundi, the wonder of the world, hauing power in the peoples vnderstanding, both in hell, heauen, earth, and purgatory; and when he came to rule in all these, then was this fulfilled heere spoken of, Fall down and worship me. And this hath also infected the Churches of the Protestants, as one Bishop Bennet hath written, namely the Diuell hath shewed them the fat Bishopricks, Deaneries, and Parsonages of the land, and hauing once gotten them at this list, hath brought them to disclaime and renounce the simplicity of the truth; and leauing their calling to betake themselves to the glittering shew of the world, and to be fed and fattened with ambition.

For the third, which is the condition hee requireth for his liberality: he will not giue it for nothing. Where note, that the Diuels promises are faire, but there is some cursed condition tied and annexed to them. He will giue Absolon a kingdome, but he must rauish his fathers concubines: he will get Doeg a place in the Court, but he must persecute the Church: Caiphus shall be chiefe Priest, so he will betray Christ: Pilate shall be a Iudge, if he will be Cesars friend: Balaams shall be highly promoted, if he will but curse the people: and Christ shall haue the whole world if he will but bend his knee to him. He will promise, a merchant shall be made an Alderman, if he will but continue his vsury: a Lawyer shall be made a Iudge, if he will not sticke at a little bribery: a scholar shall haue great preferment, if he but follow his counsell: at first to preach pleasingly, not to do it often, for then he shall be state, to come vpon only in famous places, especially at Bethel the Kings Chappell: so as the country must not content him, he must preach like a Clerke in his Greeke, Hebrew, and Latine, that the people may rather admire him, than vnderstand him: thinke hee hath knowledge, rather than get any for themselves: for Sathan cannot abide to haue them learned, hee must defend all things not onely to bee well established but well executed; to beware lest he gall men in authority; and howsoever in the pulpit he may generally glaunce at abuses, yet after to shew himselfe plausible, and to make himselfe deafe when he heareth an oath. Thus doth the diuell indent with men, and thus is wine

 Amos 2. 12. giuen to the Nazarites, as Amos speaketh, and vnlesse thou wilt suffer God to be dishonored, and thy soule hazarded, he will giue thee nothing.

But it may bee said, It is a shamefull thing to demand this of Christ, so may it seeme of vs; for no man will professe to worship the diuell. But this cannot be denied in action, howeuer it be in words: for if a man worship him whom hee serueth, and serueth him whom he obeyeth, as S. Paul saith Rom. 6. 14. And if wee may measure the worship by the fruits of worship, he that by prayer expecteth not a blessing, by loosnesse of life giueth himselfe to vncleannesse, and from the poison of his heart profaneth the Sabbath, doth worship the diuell greatly, though hee crie neuer so much against it: for none will sooner defend her honestie then a strumper, nor giue bigger words then a coward. Yea some are so fully possessed with him as they doe not know it; and those diseases are most dangerous that are not felt. Now the diuell is worshipped two waies: either by idolatrie in iudgement, as in grosse superstition: or by idolatrie in affection, as they that make their belly their God: for the couetous man is an Idolater, Ephes. 5. and so is the voluptuous man; Phil. 3. yea if we plant our hearts any where but in heauen, we commit Idolatrie.

2. 49-299/92
 Now for the resistance of the temptation, it hath two parts: the first, generall: the second particular. First, answering by the detestation of the person, Avoid Satan: for because he had dealt more shamefully in this temptation then in the others, he giueth him a more sharpe answer then before. Secondly, he descendeth
 2 for the instruction of the godly, into a more particular answer: I must worship God.

065. 1.
 Out of the first, learne the wisdom of our Sauour Christ, who dealing with a most malicious enemy, would not multiplicate words or argument with him, but answereth him with one onelic word of detestation, Avoid Satan: For the blasphemous may not bee reasoned with, if they should, it would make them but burst forth into greater outrage against the peareles and matchlesse wisdom of God, giuing vs likewise by this answer secretly to vnderstand, that whosoever goeth about to withdraw vs from God, is of the diuell: so likewise are they that seeke by reason to dissuade vs from the shame of the crosse: Therefore (Mat. 16: 23.) when Christ indeuoured to prevent the ignominy should come vpon the crosse, and to make his disciples and the rest vnvanquishable when it should come, it is said there, Peter tooke him aside, and vsed reasons to dissuade him from such vncomfortable speeches; whereupon Christ not mildly but sharply, being displeas'd with this carnall exception of his, bids him auoid Satan: that is, as a great enemy to him and others. And so whensoever flesh and bloud shal take exception against the mystery of godlinesse, it is thus sharply to bee reprov'd. Heereupon (Rom. 3. 31.) exceptions being taken, that the law serued to no vse, because Christs obedience had absolutely purchased our pardon, the Apostle in like wisdom of the spirit of God, answereth not onely by a simple deniall, but by a deniall with a detestation: God forbid: as that it is blasphemy to be of such opinion. And sometime to this phrase the Apostle addeth more, as Rom. 3. 8. not replying one word, but onely saith, their damnation is iust, rather setting before them their cursed end, then conuincing them by reason: for as Salomon saith, A foole may not bee answered in his folly.

Out of the second answer which Christ maketh, for our instruction and satisfaction, obserue, that God must haue both all outward and inward worship, so as it is impious to thinke a man can keepe his soule for God, when hee humbleth his bodie to strange gods: and in this hee doth withdraw his reuerence from his owne religion, either through feare or profanenesse reaching forth part of the worship to another: But wee must know God will haue both, and in creating both hee challengeth both, besides that of them both hee hath made but one man which cannot be diuided, but goeth together. For we are not baptis'd in our bodies onely, but in our soules: our soules only were not redeemed, neither shall they onely bee saued, but the whole

whole man. If the bodie then be the Lords both by creation and by redemption, let vs giue testimony of his worship in both, otherwise it is as if a woman should protest she loued her husband at the heart and in her soule, and yet should prostitute her bodie to vncleannesse: but wee are espoused and married to the Lord, therefore let vs keepe both for him vnspotted.

Lastly, out of the diuels argument, let vs learne to feare and serue the Lord: for if gifts may draw on worship, as he pretendeth by his proffer to Christ, then hath the Lord offered farre more largely for vs: I will giue thee (saith he) eternall life, and it is no aduantage to winne the world and to take the diuels offer, and after to lose our soules. But let vs set God on our right hand, in him we liue, in him wee haue our being, it is hee that feedeth vs with naturall and supernaturall things and blessings, godlinesse hauing the promises of this life and of the life to come: hee will make vs heires of the earth, the world standing for our sakes, we shall be heires of heauen, Christ hauing prepared places for vs in his fathers house, yea fellow heires with his owne Sonne, tasting of no other loue, nor feeling any other glory then his Sonne hath; and therefore in the iudgement of the diuell hee shall worthily bee damned that refuseth so large an offer at Gods hand, who giueth and neuer vpbraideth, pardoneth and neuer repenteth.

Then the diuell left him, &c.

This is the third part, namely, the issue and euent of the temptations had and sustained by Christ, set downe in two things: first, that when the diuell could not ouercome him, he left him: secondly, that the Angels attended and ministred.

For the first, by this vnderstand that as Christ was tempted for vs, and in our flesh ouercame for vs in his person, so wee haue good and comfortable security, that vsing the same meanes hee did, according as we shall be enabled, and through the grace of the same spirit, wee also shall ouercome the Prince of darknesse: for wee must not thinke our selues freed from these assaults, the life of a Christian being a warfare, the world the campe, the first registring and inrolling of vs being in baptisme, where we tooke a vow to be true to the Lord Iesus: Christ is our victorious Captaine,

taine : our enemies are, the world without vs, the flesh within vs as accessaries, and the diuell as principall, besides temptations on both hands. Now the power we haue to repell these, is the sword of the spirit, the word of God : the schoole where we learne this defence, is the Church of God, where we finde weapons both offensive and defensive, a shield of faith to defend our selues, and a sword of the word to offend the enemy. And this may bee our comfort, his rage will haue an end, and his malice shall not preuaile : but as Saint James saith : If we resist him, he will James 4. 7. flie from vs : that is, he will hasten as fast away, as he came fiercely toward vs, for heere is promised victory to all that strue in feare.

For the second generally we note, how it pleased God by wisdom and dispensation to dispose of the exinanition, (as I may so tearme it) or the impairing and abasing of Christ, while he was in the flesh : that in the midst of the greatest ignominy and reproch, yet he bore some marke and badge of his notable and diuine power, whereby by the eyes of faith hee might bee discerned to be the Sonne of God. His basenesse appeareth in this : that he liued in the wilderness, he was assaulted of the diuell, he had no company but beasts, hee was hungry and had no food-but stones, Sathan was busie with him to make him tempt his Father; and in all this there was nothing but ignominy and extreame basenesse. But after all this there breaketh foorth like the Sunne through the clouds, a matter which maketh him knowen and discerned to be more then a man, that the Angels come to doe him seruice. And thus did it ener fall out, that hee was neuer brought so low nor so neare the ground, but there did at last shine forth an impregnable worke of his diuinity : hee was borne in a stable, his Cradle was a Manger, there was lodging in the Mat. 22. Inne, but none for Mary, yet was there then a starre in the heauens, to signifie to the Wise-men the birth of this noble personage : hee was baptised by John his seruant, but a voice was heard from heauen, and the holy Ghost was there by his solemn Mat 3. 15. 16. presence. He had no possessions of his owne, but was maintained by the almes of deuout women, but out of them had hee cast Diuels. Hee must paie tribute, but hee will fetch it out of the Mat. 17. 27. fishes fishes mouth : in the end hee was taken with a band of men , but when he spake (Iob. 18. 6.) they reeled backward and none durst lay hold on him : he was whipped and ill intreated, but twice before had hee whipped the money changers out of the Temple, and none durst open their mouth against him : he was condemned to die , but the Iudges wife dreamed and was troubled, being perswaded of his innocency , and Pilat himselve acquitted him. When he was going to the crosse he was so worne as he was not able to beare it, but he was able to beare the wrath of his Father. He was hanged betweene two theeues, but he saue one of them. And howsoeuer sometimes he was called Belzebub , yet Belzebub confesseth him often to bee the Sonne of God : thus was euer his humility qualified with some testimony of his diuinitie.

Mat. 27. 32.
Luk. 23. 43.

In that it is said, The Angels came and ministred vnto him : note, that howsoeuer they bee ministring spirits , to giue vs security of the Lords protection , though his promise were sufficient, yet by speciall prerogatiue they are attending on Christ , to whom alone they owe and doe their homage. And besides learne heere the time when we are to expect this ministry of Angels, not vntill we haue fought the battels of the Lord , then to succour our faint spirits , and to releue our distressed hearts they are sent as comforters vnto vs. And thus when Abraham held in his body an anguished soule, and in his hand a bloody knife to haue fetched the life of Isaac from him , then was the window of comfort opened, and then had God provided another sacrifice. When Iacob was wearied and benighted, (Gen. 28.) hauing for his bed the earth, and for his pillow an heape of stones, then standeth the Lord about him and blesseth him : and when Eliab is forced to flie to preserue his life, and yet ready to die for want of food, then doth the Lord awake him by his Angell , and bid him eate, 1. King. 19. 5. And when Christ had finished the combat and wonne the field , then the Angels come to waite vpon him : so as wee may not thinke to beare away the victory without blowes , nor to be comforted without sorrowes, nor to be refreshed without want.

Gen. 22. 11.

MATH. 4. vers. 12, 13. 14. 15. 16.

12. And when Iesus heard that Iohn was committed to prison, he turned into Galile :
13. And leauing Nazareth, went and dwelt in Capernaum, which is neere the sea in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim.
14. That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Prophet Esaias, saying,
15. The land of Zabulon and the land of Nephthalim by the way of the sea, beyond Iordan, Galile of the Gentiles :
16. The people which sate in darknesse saw great light, and to them which sate in the region and shadow of death, light is risen up.

Eere followeth the real execution of Christs office, and what hee did after Iohn was in prison : For now was the time that the day-star going away, the Sonne of righteousness might appeare. In the words there are three things to be considered : first, the cause why Christ returned into Galile, the very place where that Herod dwelt that committed Iohn for reprouing him of his adultery. Secondly, that hee leaueth Nazareth his owne place : the reason whereof is giuen by Saint Luke, chap. 4. 29. because they sought to breake his necke. Thirdly, the cause of his going to Capernaum, to fulfill Esay his Prophesie, that those quarters should first bee made famous through Christs doctrine and miracles, being the first that were carried away into captiuiety.

Now first it shall not be amisse, since wee see Iohn in prison, to seeke out the cause of his commitment, which though it bee not heere expressed, yet it is in the 14. chapter of this Euangelist set downe vpon another occasion, that Herod thought the soule of John Baptist to be gone into Christ: howbeit S. Luk. chap. 3. 19.

 vpon this very occasion, sheweth the cause to bee for reprobuing Herod for taking his brother Philips wife. Where note, & behold as in a mirror, the wonderfull resolution of a Christian seruant of God, that durst tell a king to his face of so enormous a crime.
 And if John liued now, howeuer many might haue commended his zeale, yet most would haue condemned his discretion, that durst aduenture himselfe so far: for he was growen into high fauor with the king, as appeareth Mark, 6. 20. Herod would heare him often, acknowledged him to bee godly, reformed many things, and granted many things at his request: so that heerein men now adaiies would call in question his discretion, that hauing such interest in the king, he would not spare him in this one vice, but must needs lance this sore; whereas if he had but stopped his mouth in this one, hee might haue continued still and done much good. But John Baptist durst not conceale any part of his ambassage. The imitation of which president will be thought to be preiudiciall to the serpentine wisdom of these times: for now it is thought good aduice, not to wake a sleeping Lion, nor to put our hands into the hiue, lest we be stung: but to beware of us vobis lest wee come coram vobis; not at all to reprove, lest wee bee striken. Which is contrary to the wisdom of John: for though there were none left but Christ, yet hee spareth not his message, nor is ashamed to tell Herod of that sin he ought to be ashamed to commit: and away with this idoll discretion, which marreth all, euen as the image in Daniel, chap. 3. 1. which was set vp in Dura. Nathan (2. Sam. 12. 1.) must tell Dauid of his adultery to his face: and Paul aduiseeth (1. Tim. 5. 20.) those that sin to rebuke openly, that the rest may feare: which being sealed by the canon of the Apostle prooueth, that men must not onely rebuke in generall, but in particular. And if Paul had need of the prayer of the Ephesians, chap. 6. 19. that he might speake boldly, much more haue wee that stand in such feare to be bound for our speech: for by this courage and boldnesse shall wee establish our doctrine in mens consciences.

Secondly,

Secondly, in this example of John, note, as his constancy to speake boldly, so his persecution to suffer extremly: and this is the portion allotted to all Gods Ministers. If Eliah speake the truth in reprovng Abab 1. King. 19. 8. he must flie to the mount Horeb to saue himselfe. If Amos preach at Bethel the destruction of Ieroboams house, Amos 7. 12. he must go to his tar-box again. And if Michaiah (1. Kings 22. 17.) tell the king truly he may not go to battell, he shall be sure to eat the bread of affliction. If Hannani tell Asah (2. Chronic. 16. 9.) thou hast done foolishly not to rest vpon the Lord; to prison with him. If Zachariah (2. Chron. 24. 20.) tell Ioash he shall not prosper if he forsake the Lord, and that he doth ill to put downe religion, he shall be slaine euen in the court of the Lords house. Jeremy must to the dungeon, Esay to the saw, John Baptist to the axe, if they bee so quicke sighted and so hot spirited as they cannot winke at sinne. And Renel. 11. 3. of two Preachers, out of whose mouthes shall proceed fire, though in the eies of the Lord they be as Oliues dropping down most comfortable iuice, yet at last the Beast shall get them and ouercome them, they being stronger in the spirit, but he in the flesh, and he shall kill them, and they shall not be buried, and the people shall send gifts one to another, saying the Prophets are gone, now making merry, as that they might sinne without controlement, and giuing applause to that beauly tyranny was shewed on them.

Let vs further consider the indignity offered to this man, borne a Prophet, whose father was stricken dumbe by a miracle, the Bridegroomes friend, yet was hee not condemned by publicke sentence, nor at the desire of the people, but by the request of a harlots daughter, executed in a priuate place. Could the Sun shine vpon such a King as could breake soorth into this impiety? And how could the Lord spare his wrath and not powre it forth, that such a famous seruant of his should bee taken away by such an infamous death? But howfoever wee may after a sort confesse that our bodies are in the Princes power, yet this may comfort vs, that not the life, no nor the haire of a Minister shall perish without the pleasure and permission of God. To day, to morow and the third day Christ shall preach, let the Fox do his worst; & Luk. 13. 32.

when his time is come their malice shall put him to death also. Thirdly, note Gods providence, that both Iohn and Christ may not be clapped vp together, but God euer will haue some left to carry his message. When the three children (Dan. 5.) were in the fire, Daniel was at liberty in the Court: and when Daniel was in the Lions denne, the three children were in credit in the Court. When Iohn is fallen, Christ riseth. When Herod (Act. 12.) had imbrued his hands in blood, putting Iames to death, hee thought to haue done the like to Peter, but the Lord sent his Angell to vnshackle him, for they must not both goe to the pot together. And when the Temple of God by the inuasion of Antichrist is become a slaughter-house of the Saints, yet the Lord (Rev. 11. 3.) had a number left, namely two witnesses at the least, one to comfort another, for the propagation and publishing of the truth: so as we may be assured, though the Lions of the field roare and rauin neuer so much, it is not possible all the true preachers of the Gospel shall be abolished: but as their blood is precious in his eies, so out of their ashes will he raise vp others that shall hold the cup of his indignation euen to the mouthes of Princes.

Psal. 116. 15.

Further obserue, how the Lord esteemeth the tyranny and cruelty of men in this kind toward his Miniiters: for Luk. 3. 20. it is said that of the euils which Herod had done, hee added this about all, to imprison Iohn: so hainous a thing is the persecution of the Gospell in the sight of God, and much more of them that are his Embassadors; and therefore this is noted 2. Chron. 16. 12. to be the captaine sinne of Asah, that hee put Hanani in prison; so beautifull be they in the opinion of the Almighty, for hee prieth the death of these Saints at a high rate: as may bee seene first in their often redemption from death, as Paul escaped Act. 23. when the people had sworne to slay him: and Peter was loosed from his chaines when the gouernours had conspired against him. Secondly, it may bee discerned in the precious reward of it, Blessed be they that die in the Lord. and Stephen Act. 7. 60. is said but to sleep when he had been stoned of the Iewes, his spirit being receiued of the Lord Iesus. And thirdly it is manifested in the seuerre reuenge of their death, the Lord first hauing giuen

giuen an expresse commandement, not to doe his Prophets any harme: secondly, shewing it by practise, he reprov'd, nay he thue many mighty Kings for their sakes, euen Herod the King for S. James his sake. Psal. 107. 5.

Lattly obserue, that Christ was not dismaied by this example of Iohns imprisonment, but staid in the same mans gouernement, according as S. Paul saith, Phil. 1. 13. My bands in Christ haue not made others fearefull, but they are famous in the Court of the Emperour. Yea therefore is Iohn imprisoned, to embolden Christ the more; so as we are not to be discouraged by persecution, but rather confirmed that the same God that hath bene strong in them to make them beare it with chearefulnesse, will also bee so in vs; for these things turne to the furthering of the Gospell.

For the second point, namely Christs leauing of Nazareth: learne generally, that plaine dealing breeds danger, for when Christ began to reprove them for their ingratitude in despising his miracles, and to tell them that if he preached among the heathen he should be better entertained, alleaging the examples of Elias and Elizeus that could doe more good out of Israel than in Israel, then they sought to breake his necke by casting him downe a hill. After this maner when Paul (Act. 22. 21.) told the Iewes that he was warned by God to get him quickly out of Ierusalem because they would not receiue his witness, and to depart to the Gentiles; in detestation of this doctrine and in hatred of his person, and in a stubburne kind of pride, that would neither themselves receiue the truth, nor suffer others to doe it, they threw dust into the aire, and bound him with thongs to haue whipped him: which must nothing discourage the Ministers of these daies, to be the lesse plain harted or true tongued; for as the curse falleth if they preach not, so doth it likewise if they doe it negligently: and what greater negligence can there be, than to deale doubly betweene God and the people, crying peace when the sword is at their elbow?

For the third, namely why he went to Capernaum: it was for the fulfilling of a prophesie, Esay 9. 1. 2. that as the enemy began to waste there first, so they first should be in their posterity blessed,

sed, that the Sunne beames should rise in their horizon, qualifying the grievousnesse of their affliction with the greatnes of their consolation, that Christ should beautifie them with most miracles. The words containe two parts: first, an exact description of the place wherein this light should appeare; where onely note, that the place first smitten is first comforted, such a remembrance hath the Lord of our sorrowes, as to lighten that heart with the first ioye that was cast downe with the first griefe. Which may teach vs to stop our mouth, and not to grudge at the Lords hand, for he weigheth our miseries as in a ballance, and keepeth our teares as in a bottle, and will in his time measure out light vnto vs that were first compassed with darkenesse. Secondly, the words containe the declaration and maner of the comfort brought to this place, amplified by the gainesaying of the contrary: the misery they were in both for body and soule till the Gospell appeared, which is set downe by two metaphors or borrowed speeces most vncomfortable to the nature of man, the one from darkenes, the other from death, which in the Ebrew is called the darknesse of darkenesse; then their deliuerance is compared to light which is most chearefull.

Now first for their estate wherein they were before Christ came, it is said in darknesse, and this is two fold: the first outward, palpable, materiall, bodily, earthly darknesse, when the heauens are ouerwhelmed with clouds, the Sunne gone downe, the Stars hidden, the Moone not risen, and neither fire nor candle to be gotten. The second is inward, inuisible, insensible, spirituall, hellish darknesse; and this is more dangerous than that darknesse of Egypt where for three daies none could see another, Exo. 10. 22. Yea it is like that Iob speaketh of chap. 10. 22. I shall goe into the land of darknesse where is no life, nor order, but light is their darknesse; and of this spirituall darkenesse it is to be vnderstood heere, wherento is proportionable the light heere mentioned which should guide them to the way of peace, which should scatter the mist of their ignorance as the Sun doth the foggie mists of the day. And this misery of their soules is expressed by outward things, which wee vnderstand and know to driue vs to a more deepe consideration of their estate.

Now

Darknesse, inward outward

Now all outward darknesse is two fold : either intrinsicall or within, when there is an indisposition in the instrument, either naturall or accidentall : or else when there is a want of a medium or a meane, that they may carry and transmitt the object to the sense, as the light of the aire, or of the candle or such like; for be the eie of it selfe neuer so good, in a dark place it can see nothing. To the first of these that haue the fault in their eye, and which being set in the Sunne can see nothing, the night is as the day, and the day as the night. Now as the light of the body is the eie, so the light of the soule is the iudgement : and as to the blinde the Sunne is as darknesse, so to them that bee not enlightned in iudgement, the light of the Gospell is but as a cracke of thunder to the deafe. Of these the Prophet Esay speaketh, They haue eyes and see not, great mercy is offered, but they haue no grace to beleue it. For the other cause of darknesse, when there wants a perspicuity of the medium, though the eies be neuer so cleere, yet in darke places they cannot see : euen so many haue eyes, that is, a desire to see, but they want light, namely the meanes, which is the preaching of the Gospell. Now some there are that bee in double darknesse, that haue neither eies to see, nor light in the aire, and this kinde is especially meant in this place. Further, as in darknesse all things are of one colour, so in the inward man when ignorance possesseth the minde, praying and cursing is all one : and as in darknesse a man is in fearefull hor- rour many times and amazed, so is it not possible that any should haue peace of conscience that wanteth meanes to be brought to this light. Heereupon follow such enormities as are committed, because men in the darke know not what they doe; and this is the cause that the land is charged with such monstrous impieties as challenge God of his iustice to be auenged. And as hee that is blinde swalloweth many a flie, so hee that is blinde in soule swalloweth many a Cammell : Faith, Blood, Wounds, &c. are nothing; but they thinke to wash it away with the common holy water of England, God forgiue me, or, I cry God mercy.

The second metaphor or borrowed speech is, that they were in death. Now there is a double death, naturall and spirituall;

214. MATH. 4. VERS. 12, 13, 14, 15, 16.

² and this latter is double, either in the corruption of sinne, or in the damnation of sinne: the first in this life, as that he that walketh Ephes. 2. 1. Colos. 2. 13. on his legs may be starke dead in his soule : as it is said, We were dead in our trespasse before Christ quickned vs : and this kinde of death is meant heere. Whereby we see, that they that be vn-profitable in their profession of godlinesse, are dead : and also ² that there is a first resurrection in this life of the soule by the sound of the Gospell as the instrument, and the power of the holy Ghost, as the efficient. For the metaphor opposed to this, which is light, as without this our life is without comfort or safety. so without the light of the Gospell (which is the candle to goe to God) our soules are void of comfort and security. And to such things as are most necessary for the maintenance of our life is the Gospell often compared, that we might esteeme it at least equall ¹ with the other which we cannot want. In Amos chap. 8. 11. it is compared to bread, the staffe of mans strength : Iohn 4. 10. to ² water, that cleanseth corruptions : in Deu. 32. 2. to raine, that ³ maketh the earth fruitfull : Marke 9. 49. to fire, that quickneth
⁴ the benumbed : Luk. 14. 34. to salt, which seasoneth our cor-
⁵ rruptions, and drieth vp the rottenesse of our hearts : Marke. 4.
⁶ 14. to seed, for none are borne againe without the immortall feede of the word preached : and as no corne can grow where there was none sowed, so no grace can spring in that heart where the Gospell is not planted. Therefore as we all expect a ioyfull resurrection of the body by the power of Christs death from pu-trafaction, so let vs labour that our soules may heere be raised vp by the power of his word from vncleannesse : and as we all hope to taste of the Lords glory in his kingdome, so let vs all strieve to partake first of his grace in his Church. And our Christian affe-¹ ction in this may be knowen by these two qualities : first, if wee ² mourne for the darknesse of others : secondly, if we reioyce for the light our selues haue.

MATH.

MATH. chap. 4. Vers. 17, 18. &c.

17. From that time Iesus began to preach, and to say, Amend your lives, for the kingdome of heauen is at hand.
18. And Iesus walking by the sea of Galile saw two brethren, Simon which was called Peter and Andrew his brother casting a net into the sea, for they were fishers.
19. And he said vnto them, follow me, and I will make you fishers of men.
20. And they straightway leauing the nets followed him.
21. And when he was gone forth from thence he saw other two brethren, Iames the sonne of Zebedeus and Iohn his brother in a ship with Zebedeus their father mending their nets, and he called them.
22. And they without tarying leauing the ship and their father followed him.
23. So Iesus went about all Galile, teaching in their Synagogues, and preaching the Gospell of the kingdome, and healing euery sicknesse and euery disease among the people.
24. And his fame spread abroade thorow all Syria, and they brought vnto him all sicke people that were taken with diuers diseases and torments, and them that were possessed with diuels, and those which were lunaticke, and those that had the palse, and he healed them.
25. And there followed him great multitudes out of Galile, and Decapolis, & Ierusalem & Iudaea, and from beyond Iordan.

VR Sauour being entred into his office, and hauing laid the foundation of his Church by gathering of a people, and preaching vnto them the doctrine of repentance, knowing that he was not to stay long after the execution of his office, which was three yeares and more, euen in his entrance trance and beginning he calleth out and gathereth some whom he would traine vp in the ministry, that after his departure his sheepe might not bee without guides, but that they might proclaime the same message of saluation which he before had done; and he taketh them of base and mechanicall trades, that their message might not bee suspected, and that the power of God might the more appeare in these weake instruments. In the

- 1 words there be three parts set downe: first, the summe of Christs
 2 Sermon: secondly, a destinating and appointing of certaine men to the office of Apostleship, that they might bee made fit through his instruction, from vers. 18. to the end of vers. 22.
 3 Thirdly, the effect that followed of his teaching and miracles, namely a frequent concourse, and great multitudes of people sought after him.

1. For the first, because it hath bene handled before at large in the sermon of John Baptist, onely obserue that the Gospell teacheth the same lesson, and giueth the same instruction to all kinde of men: for whether it bee preached to them that bee poisoned

o G. no gospel lesson to all men

- 1 with hypocrisie, as were the Sadduces, or puffed vp with pride, as 2 were the Pharisees, or to them that be starke dead in their soules,
 3 and know no more of Christ than of the man in the Moone, such as were these people of Capernaum, it applieth the same medicine of repentance and amendment of life, beginning first at the heart, whence springeth sorrow, and where lurketh lust, and then taking hold of the life, as that it be fruitfull in good works.

2. For the second, it is set forth and described by foure circumstances: first, the place where this was done, by the sea: secondly, the names, and conditions, and qualities of them that he called, they were paires of brethren and fishermen: thirdly, to what hee destinateth and appointeth them, to the fishing of soules: fourthly, their ready obedience to follow his heaucnly voice without any consultation with flesh and blood.

1. To passe ouer the first, because it is of no great consequence for profit: for the second, who they were that were called (brethren). Where the holy Ghost doth in some proportion figure out and set forth the brotherhood and fraternity should be among the Ministers, that they should be as dearly beloued one of another as brethren, as louing as Jonathan and Dauid, 1. Sam. 20. 17. their soules cleaving as it were together, yet so as Paul may admonish, yea and withstand Peter (Gal. 2. 11.) if hee walke not with a right foote, and this without any breach of charity.

Their condition was to bee fishermen, which may seeme a great disparagement to the Sonne of God, to chuse such base instruments, and to haue beene more proportionable to his maiesty to haue called fourth the Priests, and the Pharises, the great men of the Church. But wee must vnderstand, that that is highest with God which men most disesteem; and by fishermen hee will confound Philosophers, and worke more by them than euer he did by Angell, for they conuerted the whole world. We admire the conquests of Alexander, that with forty thousand men subdued all Asia, if hee had come with more wee had not so much magnified his victory, but if hee had ouercome with fewer, wee had much exaggerated and doubled his honour; but if hee had done it with twelue men, we would haue deified him. Yet Christ by these twelue Disciples, not armed with any might or maiesty to shew, subdueth all the power, not of the world alone, but of the diuell, and this within forty yeares. One of these fishermen catcheth in his net all Asia, another Italy, another Egypt, another the Scythians and Indies, and vanquished onely by the word without sword, and this at such a time when Rome was in her greatest pride, all arts most flourished, Magicke and coniuring most practised, and all the Emperours of the earth sworne enemies against it, they yet entred through the legions of souldiers, through the prohibition of lawes, into the courts of Emperours, and made them submit their Scepters to the Crosse of Christ. Now in victories souldiers haue a part of the praise, but heere the Lord of heauen hath all the glory, for it was meereley miraculous: and thus doth hee purchase himselfe rich praise by weake instruments. He encountered Pharaoh not with men but with lice, Exod. 8. 17. for the baser the instrument the greater the glory: and so was it more glory to God Exod. 14. 21. in striking the sea but with a rod to bee a pauement for his owne people, and a deuouring depth for his enemies, than to haue caused the Israelites to haue turned backe, and to haue ouerthrowne

the Egyptians by violence.

Further obserue, that though Christ chose fishermen to be his his followers and disciples, which were altogether ignorant, yet that simply in it selfe learning is better than ignorance, as we may see, Act. 22. 3. by Paul brought vp at the feet of Gamaliel, and by his precept to Timothy, (1. Tim. 4. 16.) that he should take heed to continue in learning.

3. For the third point, that they were appointed to fish for soules: let vs consider the Metaphor and proportion of these things, how neere they resemble one another: the world is the sea, the ship the Church, the net the Gospell, the fish the soules of men, the fishermen the Ministers, the bait the preaching of the word. And as they take, sometime fish sometime frogges, so doe men preach to good and to bad; and as when the net is drawne out, the good fish is kept, and the drosse cast in againe: euen so shall the Angels do at the last day, when there shall be a generall visitation, euery true professor shall bee reserved to glory, and hypocrites as frogges shall be cast into eternall iudgement. And as while they be in the sea none can discern, whether they be good or bad: so till the net be drawne vp, many may be taken to bee good Christians which be accursed reprobates. And as Peter (Lu. 5. 5.) fished all night and caught nothing, yet at Christs request cast in his net againe, so when men haue spent all their spirits and reformed nothing, yet at Christs commandement wee must fish still, and shall catch most when wee looke not for it. And as fishermen are euer mending their nets, so the Minister is euer to attend on exhortation, meditation and such like, for the taking of such the Lord hath appointed. And as if the net be broken the fish goe out, so when men are negligent the people stray.

Further in the word, fishers of soules, two things are insinuated: first, what the purpose of Ministers must be, not to fish for benefices and preferment, but to labour in a desire of their heart to winne soules. Secondly, the care of the people, that they suffer themselues to be caught; the hooke is sharpe, but the baite is sweet; and as no fish is taken without the net, so ordinarily none are saued without the word; and as vnlesse the fish bite, they

they stay in the sea still : so if we do but nibble at the Gospell, we shall continue in the sea of the world still , and so shall neuer bee blessed.

Secondly, obserue in the speech of Christ, he doth not say ; I doe make you , but I will make you fishers of men : that is , I will traine you vp to bee competently fit for that worke I call you for. Where they are conuincd that place men in the Church before they bee sufficient ; for hee must haue no hand laid on him till he be qualified , saith Paul, 1. Tim. 5. 22. and hee must be able to bring foorth of his store new and old, saith the Gospell, and hee must not bee placed in hope hee will proue sufficient ; for while the grasse groweth the horse starueth , and while hee is furnishing himselfe the people perish. Saul (1. Sam. 9. 16.) being but a shepherd, was suddenly by Gods spirit qualified for the ciuill government. For the Lord neuer commanded any, but he enabled him first; neither hath he lesse prouided for them that should haue the administration and custody of soules. Moses (Exod. 4. 11.) had a tongue made him before he went ; Esaie had a coale from the altar before he spake ; Christ had his grace increased (Luk. 2. 52.) when he began to preach ; for it is said, he grew in wisdom , and was corroborated in spirit ; and when he elected his Apostles, he praied to his Father a whole night, that he would direct his choice ; and (Iohn 20. 22.) when he had breathed on them the holy Ghost, yet hee charged them to stay at Ierusalem till they had receiued more grace , and then (Act. 2. 3.) the holy Ghost came down vpon them in clouen tongues to speake to all nations ; and fiery , that they might be zealous, and then they were fit. In the old Testament the Priests were first anointed, that God might testifie by that oile their inuisible grace; and in the new Testament hands were laid on them to signifie, that that hand which had called them to this great office, would alwaies bee ready to protect them. Who would chuse a Captaine that neuer saw the enemy in the face ? or send him of an embassage, that knew not how to deliuer his message ? And yet is the Lords embassage committed to them that haue no language ; whereas the shepherds of Gods sheepe must bee watchfull to defend their charge from wolues, carefull to bring them them home that stray, and skilfull to heale them that are wounded. Make no yong plant (1. Tim. 3. 6.) a Minister, saith Paul: and though Paul himselve (Act. 22. 13.) was suddenly called to preach, and Amos from his sheepooke, (Amos 7. 15.) to prophesie, let vs know that the Lord that called them, had power to giue them gifts in a moment: for he hath the fulnesse of the holy Ghost to dispose at his pleasure: but men that want this power must trie the gifts first, and the Church must allow of none, vnlesse they be perswaded he be such a one, that if Christ were on the earth, he would giue his consent.

Thirdly, learne by the word Fishermen, that the ministry is no easie, nor idle, but a laborious office: wherein they must alwaies be either casting their nets, or mending their nets, or sorting the fish, traouelling fore both night and day. As Peter could answer Christ (Luk. 5. 5.) We haue travelled fore all night, and caught nothing: so as they that thinke much to take this paines, are not fit for this calling.

4. For the fourth, which is their obedience: it sheweth that it was more than the voice of a man, that thus wrought vpon their conscience: for he secretly and inuifibly spake vnto their hearts by his spirit, and he might as easily haue drawn Caiaphas as Cephas, if it had beene his pleasure: for he mollifieth the soule on the sudden, and can open the doores of death with the least breath of his mouth.

Secondly learne, that no affection or delight ought to make vs to forsake, or driue vs from following Christ in our calling. These men we see left their father whom they loued, and their nets by which they liued: and (1. King 19. 19.) Elizens left his oxen and made haste after Eliab had cast his mantle on him. And (Mat. 8. 21.) one whom Christ called, would but haue done his duty to haue buried his father, and was not permitted. Howbeit here men must beware of two extremities: first, that they frame not excuses, but willingly leaue their nets when they are called. Secondly, that they leaue them not till they be called, and leape into the Ministry of themselues, being as fit for it as a blind man to be a painter.

For the last point which is the effect that came of Christs teaching teaching: it is said, The multitude followed him, where learne, that when the Gospell is fresh and greene, and first flourisheth, men are very greedy to taste of it: but if it continue long among them, euen Manna proueth horsebread, and men are soone weary of it. For so it fell out with this people, against whom Mat. 11. 23. Christ denounceth a fearefull iudgement for their vnbeliefe, making them worse than Tyrus and Sydon, which were before condemned. Whereby we may see, how dangerous it is to grow cold in our first loue of the truth, and to suspect them that in a preposterous zeale will seeme to run after Christ, bragging with the yoong man in the Gospell, that they haue kept the commandements, and yet know not the least point of charity, how to distribute to the poore.

LVKE I I. Vers. 24, 25, 26. mat. 12. 45.

24. When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, hee walketh through dry places seeking rest: and when he findeth none, he saith, I will returne to my house whence I came out:
25. And when he commeth, he findeth it swept and garnished:
26. Then goeth he and taketh seuen other spirits worse than himselfe, and they enter in and dwell there, so the last state of that man is worse than the first.

In this text there bee five points to be obserued: first, what is meant by the going out of the spirit: secondly, his behaviour after his departure, namely, that there is a restlesse desire in Sathan to reenter into his former habitation: thirdly, the fit opportunities hee obserueth for the regaining of his possession: there be two set downe in this place, hee stayeth staieſt till he finds it ſwept and garniſhed, and a third is expreſſed Mat. 12. 44. he findeth it empty: that is, deuoid of all cares, quiet, and ſwept of the grace of God, and yet notably garniſhed with hypocriſie: fourthly, the vehement inuaſion he maketh at his entry, that hee will ſo gariſon and lay ſuch munition about the houſe, as he will neuer be diſpoſſeſſed againe, for he bringeth ſeuen ſpirits worſe than himſelſe, the Lord doth ſo darken the hart of that man, that was for a while enlightned: fifthly, the lamentable and damnable eſtate of ſuch a man: his end is worſe than his beginning.

For the firſt, how Sathan is ſaid to be caſt out, wee muſt vnderſtand: ſo caſt out, as he ſtill continueth in: for if he were once vtterly diſpoſſeſſed, then could he neuer returne againe. And this kind of caſting out heere meant, is marched with diuers other places of the Scripture; as Heb. 6. 5. It is impoſſible, that they which haue taſted of the good word of God, if they fall away ſhould be reneued againe. And Heb. 10. 35. If wee ſinne willingly after we haue receiued the knowledge of truth, there remains no more ſatisfaction or ſacrifice for ſinne; and 2. Pet. 2. 21. It had benee better neuer to haue knowen the way of truth, than after they haue knowen it to turne from it. If a man then may know the truth and yet forſake it; bee enlightned, and yet fall away; be ſanctified, and yet crucifie Chriſt againe: by the ſame reaſon may Sathan be caſt out of a man, and yet continue in that man. For when theſe tearmes be thus vſed, either of caſting out Sathan, or of letting in the truth: and yet by the ſequel of the words vſed by the ſpirit, we ſee the ruine of ſuch men ſet downe, wee muſt neuer take it for any effectuall working of the ſpirit of God, but onely of the greatneſſe of the Lords mercy offered them in the outward meanes of their ſaluation, namely, in the word and Sacraments to caſt out Sathan: according as it is ſaid, Luk. 10. 11. The kingdome of God was come neere them, but not at them: or as (Luk. 17. 21.) Chriſt ſpeaking to the Pharifſies, ſaith: The kingdome of God is within you, as if he ſhould haue ſaid, Ye looke about for a Meſſias, as if hee were abſent, but he is euen among you, and in the middeſt of you, though not by ſpirituall operation: So that obſerue hence, that as often as we partake of any of the Lords graces, it is to cast out Sathan, and to root out his kingdome in vs, though we receiue it not with that effect it should haue : and therefore though that for a time Sathan seemeth to haue lost his dominion in vs, yet by the vnright receiuing of Gods blessings, and the vnreuerent vsing of them, he doth still continue in vs.

Againe, so far Sathan may be said to be cast out of a man, and yet he a reprobate, as the spirit may be said to bee quenched in a man, and yet he a Christian: and that the comfort of a Christian may be much abated and sore eclipsed, if we will not belecue it. David may wel perswade vs, who found such leanness and emptinesse of grace in him, as if he had beene but newly entred into the schoole of Christ: when after his long profession of God, & yet after a tedious hypocrisie had ouergrowne his soule, he cried out, (Psal. 51.) Lord create a new spirit in me, as if he had not had it before: euen so may the vncleane and euill spirit bee like the snow hidden in the thicke clouds, and as fire raked vp in the ashes that the heat when it breaketh foorth may be the greater: for euen in the powers of thy body and soule, there may be an interruption of the soueraignty of sinne for a season, leauing notwithstanding some grosse sinnes of a wicked conuersation behind him, that when he wandreth abroad, he may make thee know he hath a home in thy heart, and that this abatement of his power in thee for a time, may make thy sinne at length more vgly and enormous than before.

Againe, Sathan may be cast out in the iudgement of the man himselfe, the Lord giuing him the spirit of slumber, that he perswadeth himselfe so: or in the iudgement of the Church Sathan may seeme to be cast out, when in all outward exercises of religion he conformeth himselfe like a Christian: for who would haue thought otherwise of Iudas, being a disciple and one of Christ his scholars, till the Lord discouered his hypocrisie? Yea Sathan may seeme both to the man himselfe, and to the Church to bee cast out, and yet not to be so indeed: as appeareth Luk. 8. 18. where it is said: Euen that shall be taken away which hee seemeth to haue:

Lastly, as the vncleane spirit may bee said to come into a man when

when he was in him before, because in comming in, there cometh in a more forcible and stronger illusion of Sathan than there was before: as (Luk. 22. 3.) it is said, that Sathan entred into Iudas before the Passeouer, and we cannot thinke that the spirit of God was in him before: for he was a thiefe, and carried the bagge, and paid himselfe for the carriage: and yet (Iohn 13. 27.) it is said precisely, that Sathan entred into Iudas after the soppe, meaning, by entring in a greater power than there was before. Euen so he may be said to go out, and to be cast out, when hee is not let in for a time, that after he may be giuen vp into a reprobate sence: for it was but a weake kind of Sun-shine that euer appeared in his life.

Hence obserue, that so much is Sathan cast out of vs, as sin is cast out of vs: for Sathan fighteth against vs with two weapons: first, with that he found within vs, which is flesh and bloud: secondly, by that he brought vpon vs, which is death. Why then the speciall weapon wherewith he striketh vs being our corruptions, they must be cut off and cast away, or else Sathan himselfe is not vanquished. If thou therefore wilt saie hee be cast out of thee, shew what alteration there is in thy life, and what change in thy affections; if the greatest part be not pietie in religion, and puritie in conuersation, be sure Sathan hath more weapons in thee than God: for as Christ saith, Ioh. 8. 44. Yee are of the diuell, for yee do his workes. And therefore euery one must make this examination with himselfe, that if of a despiser and vnreuerent speaker of the word of God, he doe not now shew his words to be such as may giue grace to the hearers. Sathans weapon still remaineth in him: for this is the argument Saint Paul vseth, Rom. 6. 19. As when we were seruants to vncleanness we did commit iniquitie; so now being seruants vnto righteousness, we must haue our fruit in holiness of life, that our end may be saluation:

2 Secondly, obserue since Sathan may be cast out of thee in thine owne iudgement, and in the opinion of those with whom thou liest, and yet be besieging thy soule with hypocrisie; that thou must labour to get good euidence of the spirit of God, that thou art Christs: which especially thou shalt performe by winning ning the spirit of humilitie to dwel within thee. For if thou doest publikely vaunt and bragge how fruitfull thou art in thy profession, and how farre thou hast runne in a short time in Christianitie, when thou art not called thereunto by God, but thrust forward in the pride and vanitie of thine owne heart, then maist thou with the Pharisee (Luk. 18:14.) depart home puffed vp in thy selfe, and seeming to others like a painted sepulcher, when as within thou art nothing but rottenesse, and farre from being iustified before God. This did Salomon in his wisdom find in his time, which made him leaue it as an example for vs to learne by, Proverb. 30. 12. that there was a generation pure in their owne eies, and yet they were not washed from their filthinesse;

 such as would carrie a glorious shew that they had tasted of the tree of life, and such as in presumption of their owne strength, will knocke at heauen gates as due to them by desert, when (alas) the Lord neuer knew them. Howsoeuer therefore every Christian is in dutie to sit in iudgement vpon himselfe, yet let him know, that he must solemnly keepe this Court in his owne conscience, and there let him suruey and examine his maners and his members, his wit and his senses, how he hath vsed them:
 and in this triall let him make the law of God his Iudge, for that shall cut him to the quicke: and by this shall he truely see, whether Sathan be truely cast out of him or no. For Sathan will teach thee to hide thy sinne, but the law will discouer it to thy face: if thy sinne be seene, he will double it with this temptation, that thou shalt dissemble it: but the law will set thy sinnes in order and in a ranke before thee. If he cannot teach thee thus to beguile thy selfe and God, yet will hee mooue thee to excuse and lessen it: but the law shall shew it thee in such a glasse, as shall truly set foorth the vgly shape of it: And if when thou hast made this perfect law of God to be thy Iudge, thou canst likewise make Christ the answerer of this Iudge, and canst walke cloathed with his garments of innocencie, humilitie, and obedience, as with the garments of our elder brother, and out of a cleane and pure heart and affection, canst send foorth the fruits & actions of thy life, then maist thou assure thy selfe Sathan is so cast out, as he shall neuer haue power to returne to thee againe.

Mar. 6. 20.

Thirdly obserue, since Sathan may seeme to be cast out for a time by an interruption of the power and strength of sinne in a man, which at length breaketh in vpon him like whole fouds of waters: that therefore if wee will haue Sathan effectually cast out of vs, we must learne not to discontinue some finnes, and to retaine others; not to rake vp some in the imbers, while wee suffer others to racke our soules; for one sinne nourished and maintained is sufficient to keepe possession for Sathan. But we must loath and detest all manner of sinne with an absolute and perfect hatred, or else his weapon is not taken away: for what praise is it for a rich man not to fall to theft, a sin whereto he is not tempted; or for a begger not to slip into briberie, a sinne that is kept farre from him; or what is it to keepe thy body cleane from filthinesse, if thou defile thy tongue with euill speeches? It was nothing for Herod to heare Iohn Baptist gladly, since he kept his bed polluted with incest, for the sweetnesse of this sinne did so possesse him, Matth. 14. 3. that for Herodias the strumpets sake Iohn was bound and beheaded. A liuely example wee haue of this (2. King. 5. 18.) in Naaman the Syrian, who vowed vnto the Prophet to worship none but the Lord: heere was Sathan cast out of him in good measure: Yet when I go (saith he) with my master into the house of Rimmon, and hee leaneth on my hand, and I likewise bow there, the Lord bee mercifull vnto mee in this point. So he will continue still an example of idolatry in the seruice of a superstitious master, which is a sufficient hold for Sathan to get into his soule againe, and euen in this did hee carry a weapon to kill himselfe, for Christ died not that wee should die to some finnes, but to all finnes, and if wee make exception of any one, we are guilty of all: as S. Iames saith chap. 2. 10. if we faile in any one point we are guilty of all: and therefore (Ezech. 18. 21.) the wicked are admonished to returne from all their finnes, and to walke in all the waies of the Lord: In omnibus sine exceptione, quamuis non in omnibus cum impleione, in all without exception, though in all we cannot with perfection; for repentance must not be to some dead workes but to all, with a full purpose of our heart to renounce all finnes. I speake not of infirmities, but of presumptuous and crying finnes, that we do not blesse our soules in in any such sinne, for if we doe, it is Sathans ladder to clime vp againe, though for a time he be cast downe, that is, neither so forcibly felt, nor so visibly seene in thee.

Fourthly obserue, that Sathan in policy will bee content not to shew himselfe alwaies in thee as he is, but sometime euen to transforme himselfe into an Angell of light, and hee will not grudge at thee though thou remit somewhat of thine enormities and grosse sinnes, so he may retaine somewhat to himselfe: hee cares not to be cast out of thee in idolatry, as that thou shalt not bow thy knee to Baal, so hee may bee kept in thee by Atheisme, to say with the wicked in thy heart, There is no God. He was well pleased that Judas should become a Disciple of Christ, learne of Christ, follow Christ, so couetousnesse might so possesse him as to sell his master for money. Hee cared not though Abimelech Mar. 26. 15. entertained Abraham the seruant of God (Gen. 20. 14.) with the best of his land, when he had once drawne him to consent to adultery with Sara his wife. A most liuely example of this we haue in the bodily Pharaoh of Egypt, Exo. 8. Moses had a commission from God that hee should goe three daies journey with the children of Israel, to celebrate a feast vnto the Lord. Go (saith Pharaoh) vers. 25. but first doe sacrifice vnto the Lord in this land: vers. 26. No, saith Moses, that were abomination to sacrifice beasts to them that worship beasts. vers. 28. Go, saith Pharaoh, but not farre: vers. 27. No, saith Moses, I must goe three daies journey. Chap. 10. 11. Go (saith Pharaoh) ye and the men, but leave the children: No, saith Moses vers. 8. yong and old must goe. vers. 24. Goe all, but leave your cattell and your sheepe behind you: somewhat hee will crosse the commandement of the Lord: vers. 25. No, we must haue all, for we know not what neede we shall haue of sacrifice. Thus we see how Sathan deales in sinne by conditions and limitations; for hee will suffer himselfe to be dislodged of ignorance by a generall knowledge of the truth, and if hee cannot send forth error to corrupt our knowledge, if he can but worke by worldlinesse to prophaine it, he will not greatly care, for this shall bee as a cable rope to pull him in againe. We must therefore learne to incounter this spirituall Pharaoh if wee haue a desire to goe out of Egypt, that is, to be deliuered from eternall darknesse, with Moses his courage: and if we gaine by our courage as Moses did, let vs follow on stoutly to keepe the ground and commandement which is set before vs. Sathan will if hee can retaine some sinne, and make thee relish some iniquitie; but if thou preferue any works of the flesh for him, thou cariest a most fearefull weapon to destroy thy selfe.

Againe, since so much of the vncleane spirit may be said to be gone out of a man as admitteth any participation of the spirit of God, and since euen the reprobate may partake of all the graces of God, Heb. 6. 5. saying one grace, to bee made new creatures, lest this doctrine not rightly vnderstood, might shake the foundation of some weake Christians, wee will set downe certaine markes to distinguish betweene Sathans going out of Christians and out of the reprobate, since the holy Ghost may bee and is communicated euen to them. The difference then standeth in two points, for the graces of God in these be different: first, in the measure of grace, being greater in the elect than in the reprobate: secondly, in the obedience and working, whereby the elect shew themselues conformable to the grace, and so doe not the reprobate. Now there be two kind of graces, wherein the measure is greater in the children of God than in the reprobate; and yet the first of these is really communicated to the wicked, that is, the enlightning of the minde; for the reprobate are indeed enlightned in the knowledge of God, & (as Heb. 6. 5.) do taste of the good word of God, but not effectually as the elect do. And though the Lord doth not regard the quantity but the substance of this enlightning, so as sometimes there may be more light in a reprobate than in the childe of God, yet for the most part the elect haue receiued a greater measure of this grace. For the reprobate (as Mark. 8. 24.) be like the blinde man, who at the first putting on of Christ his hands, saw men like trees, that is, a shape advanced vpright: but the elect, as vers. 25. are like vnto him when the Lord had laid his hands the second time vpon him, for then he saw cleerly a farre off. So as the hypocrite may goe thus farre, hauing not a vaine but a vanishing light, Non enim gratia vana est sed euanescent: to walke for a time in the light: as John 12.35. Yet a little while the light is with you: and as John 5.35 for a season to reioice in this light: but that is onely spoken of the elect, which is (Malac.4.2.) that vnto them that feare the name of God shall the Sunne of righteoutnesse arise, and health shall be vnder his wings. And as it is in the Prophet Esay, The Sunne shall neuer go downe, nor the Moone be darkened, that is, their light shall neuer be put out. Esay 66.23 Againe, the reprobate may conceiue and retaine a knowledge of reconciliation, but it is a confused knowledge; but the elect hath a more particular knowledge, that he can receiue it to apply it to the reforming of his life, whereas the other haue it onely to make them vnexcusable, or to make them burst forth into some confession of their sinne without repentance. Examples hereof we haue: Esau (Gen.27.38.) losing the blessing wept: and Peter (Luke 22.62.) losing Christ by his denials, wept bitterly. Heere are teares alike, but not in trueth alike. So (Math.27.3.) Indas betraying Christ, saith, I haue sinned: and (2.Sam.24.10.) Dauid numbring the people against Gods commandement, said, I haue sinned: here is repentance in both, the worke alike, but the faith vnlike. So as the reprobate haue a common beginning with the children of God, vnder the veile and covering of hypocrisy; but they can neuer come to that height wherin the elect do stand, as (2.Cor.3.17.) to behold the Lord with open face, or to be transformed to his image: or as Ren. 1.7. to haue receiued that true eie-salue, as to see Christ comming in the clouds with comfort: or as it is said in the Prophet Jeremie, that true anointing of the Lords grace, which neither wasteth with time, nor decayeth in vertue.

The second grace which is diuers in substance, is adoption, which no hypocrite can perswade himselfe to haue in such measure as the elect may: for indeed this spirit of adoption is alwaies denied them. And this may bee knowne by two parts that are to bee performed: first, by praier to GOD: secondly, by affections towards GOD. For the first, it is impossible for an hypocrite to praie aright; hee may babble, or vse the externall gesture in prayer, as the Pharisee did in the open streetes, yea Sathan may suffer him to utter some words without feeling, sometime so farre as Mat. 27. 4-5. to condemne his owne sinne, as Judas did his selling of Christ, but yet his conscience neuer disalloweth it : for this is an inseparable marke set vpon the praier of the elect : Rom. 8. 26.

 Neither haue any this sanctified spirit to pray as they ought, but they which are of God. And as Galath. 4. 6. For that assurance in praier whereby wee crye Abba Father, the reprobate cannot possibly haue, nor feele that force in praier : for as the Apostle there saith, it is proper onely for the sonnes of God. The reason 2 is, because the reprobate want the second grace, which accompanieth and waiteth vpon the spirit of adoption, that is, good affections toward God : for hee doth but dissemble his loue of God, that hee might still continue as a bay tree euer flourishing ;
 James. 2. 19. the reuerence that he yeelds him is but in hypocrisie ; and the obedience that he giueth him, is but constrained as is the diuels.
 Howbeit with the elect it fareth farre otherwise, for their praier are available, because they are taught of God, and their affections are good, because they are changed by his spirit : and they can come to God as children to a father, only loking to speed in the name of father : for this sheweth reconcilement after our first enmity, and setteth foorth more sound loue than nature can afford. And this his loue draweth our feare to offend, and our care to please : and we doe lift vp our voice with an assurance
 1. Ioh. 5. 14-15 we shall be heard, because we humble our selues in a detestation of our sinnes, and with a resolution to be obedient to his com-mandements, which the reprobates cannot doe : for though the Lord doe often euen shew mercy to them in their praier and other Christian exercises, so as they may thinke they haue their sinnes forgiven, as hee did to Ahab, (1. King. 21. 27. 29.) who hauing solde himselfe to worke wickednesse in the sight of God ;
 vpon the iudgement pronounced against him, sitting but within the shadow of praier and fasting, was spared that the euill should not fall in his daies ; yet can they not possibly loue the Lord of heauen but in a confused sort, nor come before him but with a slavish feare.

- But it may be said : If the Lord sheweth mercie to hypocrites and yet their praier not auailable, it may be thought the Lord is deceitfull. No: for the hypocrite is taken with the sweetnesse of the Lords mercy, but he not apprehending it as hee should in obedience, it proueth to him but a decaying sweetnesse. Neither yet doth this any whit proue the will of God to be changeable, though after his mercy disclosed he doth withdraw it from them: for they relie onely and stay themselues vpon the present mercy not seeking further: euen as Esaï, who so he might presently haue to fill his belly, cared not for his birth-right: whereas the elect ground themselues vpon Gods mercy in all maner of tempelts, and doe gather together as many remembrances of it as they can, in any of their afflictions: after the example of Dauid, who (1. Sam. 17. 37.) armeth himselfe against Goliath, vpon the remembrance of the Lords mercy formerly shewed him, in deliuering him out of the paw of the Lion, and of the Beare. Neither yet doth the spirit of God at all deceiue the reprobate: for the Lord did not so extend his mercy as to take them to bee his, and keepe them as his; but did cast that seed into them to make them without excuse, and to double their damnation, in that they loued darknell more than light, so as for their ingratitude it was taken away.

Gen. 25 34.

Mark. 4.5.6.

Now for the second difference, which is betweene the elect and the reprobate, which is discerned by the working of this spirit: it is to be obserued, that it worketh more effectually in the elect than in the reprobate: for the grace offered them doth but puffe them vp with a dexterie of wit, and volubility of speech, that they can conceiue and speake something of the Lord, as the Pharisees could in Christ his time: but this grace worketh farre otherwise in the elect, and by no comparison: for the Lord doth not onely enlighten the iudgement of his chosen to make them know his Gospell, but changeth also their affections, to make them worke foorth their saluation with feare and trembling. And as it is Ezechiel 18. 31. they shall haue a new heart giuen them, to walke in the commandements of the Lord: and as Dauid speaketh, Psal. 40. 6. 7. 8. they haue a new song put into their mouths, and the Lord hath so prepared their eares as they can say: Here I am O Lord, I desire to doe thy will, for thy law is written in my heart: And they bee such of whom

Esaï

Esay 50. 5. saith, the Lord hath opened their eares, therefore they are not rebellious. But otherwise it is with the hypocrites : for though their eares be opened, yet they are rebellious ; and though the word of God be in their stomackes, yet like dogges they cast it vp againe, and doe not shew themselues pliable to the grace of God.

2

He walketh thorow drie places. This is the second part spoken of at first, namely, that when Satan is gone out of a man he hath a restlesse kind of desire, & every place is to him as a wilderneffe, vnlesse he may returne whence he came, for he walketh through drie places, that is, his operation and power being interrupted in that man, all other places are as irkesome and vnpleasant:

66. 1.

Out of this generally obserue, that whether Sathan be really cast out, or onely so dispossessed as the power of his subtrill illusion is made lesse, that is, whether the iudgement be onely enlightened, or with the light of iudgement the affections be also changed, which is the effectuall casting out, it doth so prouoke Satan, & distemper him, as he will assault that man more fiercely than he did before in his time of ignorance. And if he be cast out by a true enlightning, then he is more busie than with hypocrits: for being Sathan, that is an enemy, he is an enemy to God, because he dethronized and threw him out of heauen, and he doth therefore most oppose himselfe against Gods children, because he cannot assault the person of God : and yet we see how hee assailed it to God in the flesh, Luk. 4. 2. Again, as hee is an enemy to God, so he is said to be the Prince of the world, and therefore would draw all to be vnder his scepter : and he can finde no rest in a Papist nor in an Atheist, for he knoweth there is a canker already growen vpon their consciences, which onely must be seared by the hot iron of the Lords wrath, for they are already so hardned in prophanesse, and so rooted in the obstinacie of their error, that he is sure enough of them. But his labour and rage is to assault professors, such as haue a true knowledge of the true God, and especially such as beare true affections toward God, and whom hee seeth to yeeld obedience to the Gospell of Christ. A liuely example and figure of this we haue in Pharaoh, who while the children of Israel (Exod. 5. 7.) continued in Egypt,

Ioh. 16. 11.

1. Tim. 4. 2.

Egypt,

Egypt, onely oppressed them with heavy burdens, but then most fiercely and deadly pursued them when they were gone out of Egypt. Euen so let euery of vs assure our selues, that the further wee be from the regiment and dominion of Sathan, and the more excellent seruants of God we be, the more will Satan buffet vs and vex vs. This is that Christ forewarned Peter of, saying, that Sathan desired to winnow him like Wheate. And why him alone the rest of the Disciples? First, because he was one whom Iesus loued: secondly, on the confession of whose faith hee said hee would build his Church. And this is the condition of all true Christians, that when Sathan is effectually to be cast out and dilodged, it cannot be but by violence, for he will not onely winnow vs that we shall feele the fanne to grate vs, but euen the flaine to bruise vs. Example whereof we haue in the dumbe man in the Gospell, who before Sathan would leaue his fort and habitation, was so tormented, that hee fomed, raged, and was euen rent in peeces: so as hee is not to bee encountered with a false alarme, or with one hand; but in this combat betweene vs and him we must prepare our selues to great temptations, and carie Iob before vs as our patterne, in the subuersion of whose faith and constancie in the loue of God the diuel tooke more delight, than in compassing the whole earth; yet was hee faithfull to the end, whereby he obtained the crowne of life.

Further, obserue hence the wisdom and policie of Sathan, that his purpose is alwaies to be some where, yea and hee foreseeeth his future place before he will leaue his former habitation: as Math. 8. 32. he would not go out of the men whom hee possessed before hee had libertie to goe into the swine, and would bee in them rather than no where. For Sathan being by nature a destroyer, seeketh oftentimes by the losse of goods and substance to draw mens faith and feare from God, as hee assaid in Iob, chapter. 1. vers. 15. 16. 17. by his oxen taken by the Shabeans, by his sheepe deuoured with fire, and by his Camels led away by the Caldeans, to driue him to impatiencie against God. But yet because the shaking of a mans estate in substance pierceth not the soule so deepely, nor withdraweth not the heart so swiftly from God, as the sinne and corruption seated in himselſe, therefore his trauell is to keepe the cup foule within, and to haue ſtill ſome foule blood lurking in our veines which in time may breake forth to ſome diſtemper: not but that thou muſt expect when thou art called to feele thy ſinnes, and haſt withall this grace to ſee ſome comfort of Gods mercy, to bee ſo haled and pulled betweene theſe two, as thou ſhalt haue many perplexed feares, many troubleſome garboiles, and infinit great temptations when ſinne is to be caſt out of thee: and ſeeing ſo many difficulties thou ſhalt ſtand appalled to be reſtrained from the looſe cuſtome of thy former ſinnes. But as the ſiege is great which is againſt thee, ſo muſt thy encounter and reſiſtance be fierce againſt him, and not done perſunctorily or ſlowlie as the ſluggard riſeth in the morning, Proverb. 6. 10. with a little raiſing of his head, and folding of his handſto ſleepe againe; thinking that if thou beſt not ſo euill in thy life, nor ſo malicious in thy heart againſt God as others, that then thou art good enough, and haſt ſufficiently profited in the ſchoole of Chriſt: for thy luke-warmth in religion is lothſome to the Lord, Rev. 3. 14. and a ſtrong ſtirrop for Sathan to get vp to thy ſoule againe. And therefore conſider, and thou ſhalt find whether he bee truely or hypocritically caſt out of thee, conſider whether thou feele not foule and groſſe temptations to beſet thee: for if Sathan labor not mightily in this, thou art not called: for if thou be a deſpiſer of the word, or nourieſt any ſuch enormous fault as ſeemeth ſweet to thy taſte, Sathan hath thee at commandement; what needeth he tempt thee when thou tempteſt thy ſelſe? Not that he that falleth into temptations and fulfilleth them is the beſt Chriſtian, but hee that hath no rubbes ſet in his way to ſtumble at, and findeth euery thing plaine and eaſie, may know

Math. 7. 13. he liueth in the broad way that leaſeth not to heauen: for hee that is moſt vexed, and hath felt moſt ſuggeſtions, and yet hath reſiſted them, may aſſure himſelſe that Sathan is caſt out: for fleſh and blood cannot bee cured but by temptations, as Paul witneſſeth of the Churches of Macedon, 2. Corinthians 8. 2. whoſe ioy abounded in their great triall of affliction. And as the ſame Apoſtle teſtifieth of himſelſe, 2. Corinthians 12. 7.

lest he should be exalted above measure, the messenger of Satan was sent to buffet him: which though Satan doth it of malice, yet the Lord doth it to humble vs: for if he should at once cast Satan out of vs, then the wild beasts of pride and of not feeling the infirmities of our brethren, would deuoure vs: euen as Deut. 7. 22. the Canaanites were rooted out but by little and little from among the Israelites, lest the beasts of the field should haue increased vpon them.

I will returne, &c. and when he commeth he findeth, &c. This is the third point, set downe in this parable that setteth foorth the enlightning of hypocrites to their most iust condemnation, namely the meanes and the fit occasion Sathan espieth to surprise againe that man out of whom he was cast. There be two set downe here, the first swept, the second garnished, and the third is supplied, Mat. 12. 44. He findeth him empty, that is, void of the graces of God, and fitter to receiue Sathan after his enlightning then he was before. It is a metaphor or translated speech taken from traouellers or guests, that desire to be entertained with cleanlinesse. For so it is with Satan, that when thou art filled with all bitterness, gall of heart and hypocrisie, then art thou a clean habitation for him, and the fuller of sinnes the fairer and fitter; not that Sathan doth delight in cleanlinesse, but that thou art to him most neate and handsome when there is in thee the superfluitie of all wickednesse, and when thou art become a most excellent and perfect hypocrite, as that thou canst pray at Church & coulin at home, pretend kindness to thy brother, and yet eat him thorow with vsury, the sweeter dwelling is there for Sathan in thee.

Hence let vs obserue for our comfort, that this cannot be meant of the true children of God: for it is impossible that Sathan can find the soule of a Christian empty, that is, deprived and void of the whole grace of God. For an abatement of the spirit of God must not be taken for an emptinesse, as Ephes. 4. 30. it is said the spirit may be grieved: and 1. Theff. 5. 19. it is said, it may be quenched, and many of the graces of God in his children may be empty, that is, there may be no feeling of them for a time: but the chosen of God cannot cleane fall away, nor the image of God be cleane defaced in them, for then could they not be brought home againe, vnlesse Christ should suffer againe, which cannot be, Heb. 10. 10. Againe, in the greatest sins when men haue deserued the greatest punishments, yet we presume they haue some of the good spirit in them, as Paul did of the incestuous person, 1. Cor. 5. 5. whom he willed to be separated for a time that his flesh might be tamed; which sheweth the Apostle had some hope, he had the spirit: for if all in him had beene flesh, then should he not haue beene excommunicate by the censures of the Church, but wholly cut off from the Church, and accursed. Dauid, Psal. 51. praieth to haue a cleane heart created in him, vers. 10. 11. not to haue it taken away, which shewes he felt it, therefore hee praieth not there for the holy Ghost simply, but for some graces of the holy Ghost, as for a stable spirit that he fall not againe, for that grace he had not before; and after he praieth, Lord giue me peace, so as hee had not the peace of conscience before: and when he saith, Take not thy spirit from me, that is, though his sinne had deserued it: euen as wee praie, Lord be not farre from vs, not that the Lord is at any time absent from his Saints, but that wee feele it not at that time so comfortable as wee desire: so Dauid praieth, Lord giue me a free spirit, that is, that hee might praie more feruently then he did before; for except he had had indeed the heat of the spirit, it is impossible hee should haue yielded obedience to the chastisement of God: or for Peter to haue wept in his heart at the rebuke of Christ, except hee had some seedes of the spirit of God in him. Howbeit we may not be drawne by this to presumption, to thinke it maketh no matter how wee liue; for as the children of God haue the inuisible marke of the earnest of the spirit, so must they also beare the visible marke of zealous profession and honest conuersation. For if wee doe not cherish the spirit of God by good employment and spirituall gaine, that wee grow from faith to faith, it is a signe that the spirit of trueth is not in vs: so that we must not flatter our selues because there cannot be indeed an emptinesse, but with Saint Peter (2. Peter 1. 5.) we must ioinc vertue with faith, and with vertue knowledge, and with

with knowledge temperance, &c. For if we stay at the first staire we shall neuer be able to ascend to the Saints of God; and if growth and increase be not in vs, we are but idle and vnfruitfull in the acknowledging of Christ. The reason is, because being elect when wee receiue grace of God, wee receiue withall grace to employ and vse it, that it may abound (alwaies excepted the storme and tempest of an afflicted conscience) for that time, for the Lord if he see vs prosper with one grace, hee will giue vs more: and if we thriue not with a graine of faith, he will take all from vs; so as though thou canst praie, yet vnlesse thou canst praie better, with more feruent zeale, and powre out thy soule more fully before the Lord than before, it is nothing: for the first grace to pray onely was but giuen thee as an hypocrite to make thee vnexcusable.

Mat. 25 16.

Further obserue hence, that Sathans fittest garniture and best entertainment is hypocrisie, to make thee pretend holinesse when thou intendest nothing but wickednesse; and this hypocrisie standeth in two things: first, in not doing that which God hath commanded: secondly, in doing it otherwise than God hath commanded. If thou fallest into the first, thou shewest thy selfe rebellious: if thou slip into the second, thou discoverest thy selfe to be presumptuous; for what art thou that darest oppose thy selfe against the law of the Eternal? If he tell thee thou shalt not eate of the forbidden tree, thou oughtest not so much as to looke on it, lest the lust of thine eie betray thy heart, and the desire of thy heart doe beguile thy taste. If he prescribe thee a rule and a course wherein thou shalt walke, thou must not (as Numb. 22. 18.) for a house full of gold go beyond the word of the Lord, to do more or lesse. And therefore if wee will not be hypocrites we must arraie our selues with a contrarie garnishment, casting downe (as 2. Cor. 10. 5.) every thing that is exalted against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captiuitie every thought to the obedience of Christ. For as Satan delighteth to have his house garnished, and the fuller of sinnes thou art the fitter for him: as that if the cup be full of extortion, if it be faire without
Mat. 23. 25. he makes thee thinke thy selfe a great Scribe. So also there is a furniture the Lord delights in, namely sanctification:

o6f-2

and (as 2. Cor. 7. 1.) to keep our soules clean: for since Sathan will needs be doing, and willingly contenteth not himselfe to get the borders, but hee will assay to take the arch city, wee that are the children of God must keepe him occupied in some out-houſe or outward member at the most, and aboue all strue to shut him out of the bed-chamber, and from ruling in the heart, bearing a religious care to follow the waies of God, and to be garnished in humility to receiue the riches of the Lords graces, not excepting againſt any thing the Lord willeth, but shewing our selues reformable to all.

He taketh seuen other spirits worse, &c.

4 As Sathan at his returne findeth the field well growen, and the heart of that man fuller of sinnes than before, so the fourth thing followeth, namely, what meanes he vseth not to be turned out againe, hee bringeth seuen spirits worse than himselfe: by this meanes so to rampire this his fortresse, as to make it his continuall mansion; not to make him twofold worse as Profelites, but seuen times worse like Diuels. Wherein obserue, that God in iustice is prouoked to reuenge himselfe vpon ingratitude for his graces, according to the proportion of the grace that was offered; so as Sathan vpon the contempt of the grace giuen, shall preuaile more than before: which the Lord doth as a iust reuenger of sinne: for Sathan is chained, that without his permission he can do nothing; and the Lord is alway present vel per gratiam vel per vindictam, either by grace to prevent thy sinne, or by reuenge to punish it: and therefore thou that hast spurned at the riches of the Lords mercy, that hast thought Manna to be lothsome, and sincerity in religion to be burdensome, the Lord shall so punish thee, that the sinnes past shall bee the punishments of sinnes to come, and the deserts of punishments that are to come. For if wee thinke not the hearing of the word and receiuing of the Sacraments to be speciall meanes to bring in Sathan, looke Luk. 13. 26. and it will make vs take heed, whether we come to them of conscience or of custome: for Christ may teach in our streets, and wee may eat and drinke in his presence, and yet not know vs to bee his: for it is said. To him that hath profited shall more grace bee giuen; but if thou hast onely heard, that grace which which thou hast shalt thou be spoiled of. And it fareth with the word as with the raine, that neuer fallēs vpon the ground, but it maketh the earth more barren or more fruitfull: to the word of God neuer returneth in vaine, but euery man is made thereby either to saour damnation or saluation, as Saint Paul speaketh. Heb. 6. 7. 2. Cor. 2. 26. Euen so it is also of the Sacrament: for though Christ was kinde in giuing the soppe to a traitor, yet wee see (Iohn 13. 2.) that after the soppe giuen, Sathan entred into Iudas. For the more familiar and the better acquainted wee are with the best of Gods graces, the more shall our paine and torment bee for our prophane vse of them.

Secondly, in that it is said, Seuen spirits woorse, wee must vnderstand a verie forcible seducing and great power of Sathan: for heere is put a certaine number for an incertaine, seuen spirits, that is, an infinite number of enormous sins, expressed in diuers places of the Scripture, as Act. 5. 3. it is said, Sathan had filled Ananias heart, that he should lie vnto the holy Ghost: and Act. 8. 23. of Simon Magus, that he was in the gall of bitternesse, and in the bond of iniquitie: and Act. 13. 8. of Elymas the sorcerer, such an enemy of righteousness, as the least occasion will moue him to sinne: and hauing (as Eph. 4. 19.) their hearts past feeling, haue giuen themselues to all wantonnesse: and such as (Reuel. 22. 11.) being filthie, will be more filthie. Now if any should expostulate and question, why the Lord will suffer this, where hee once bestowed his graces: wee answer, if the Lord ldo gather where he sowed not; if he take away the talent for not vsing it to gaine, by a spirituall trafficke, then what shall his case bee, that casteth the pearles of his graces to swine? Againe, as Rom. 1. 20. the Lord did iustly condemne them, that onely had the law written in their hearts, and had no other spectacle than the booke of heauen and earth, and thereby did see his power and iustice in administering these inferior things which hee had created: if I say, (as vers. 24.) he gaue them vp into a reprobate sense, what shall become of those that haue the booke of the Gospel, and haue acknowledged the Lord, and yet haue troden him vnder foot, but that they be giuen vp into a triple reprobate sense, since the Gentiles were cast away onely for despising him in his creatures, and yet we despise him in his Christ?

065-3. Further, in that it is said, Seven spirits worse: obserue, that there is a difference of sinnes, sinners, and punishments: for it is said, they be worse, yet the first was said to be vnclene: which we note, not that wee should learne to extenuate any sinne: for thought idle words be but an vnclene spirit in respect of whoordome which is worse, yet shalt thou be iudged for them aswell as for this. In Mat. 5. 22. there is a difference of sinnes and punishments set downe, whosoever is angry with his brother vnadvisedly shall be culpable of iudgement: but he that saith Raca, shall be woorthy to bce punished by a Councell: but who so shall say, Foole, shall be worthy to be punished with hell fire: So as we see, though some sinnes be more sharply punished than others, yet the least is culpable of iudgement. So Dauid, (Psal. 1. 1.) pronounceth blessednesse to him, that, first, hath not walked: secondly, that stands not: thirdly, that sits not in the seat of the scornfull, that is, hath a resolute purpose to despise the spirit of grace, harder shall it be for him than for the other: and as the Apostle Saint Iude v. 7. harder for them than for Sodome, and yet they be in hell. For as all haue not the same spirit of grace in like measure: so is it of the vnclene spirit which raigneth more in some than in others. Withall obserue the speech of S. Paul, Eph. 4. 30. who after warning giuen not to grieue the spirit, setteth downe how one sinne increaseth another: as first, let there be no bitternesse: secondly, a degree further, a heating of the blood by anger: thirdly, wrath, more then anger, that is, into a further distemper: fourthly, loud speaking, that is, crabbednesse or brawling: fifthly, blasphemy, slandering, backbiting, and open reuiling: sixthly, malice, when a man will keepe it in his heart. And all these by degrees do grieue the spirit, let vs not therefore yeeld a litle to the course of the waters, lest some streame carrie vs away.

065-4. Lastly, since we see what is in an hypocrite, that is, seven spirits worse, an infinit number of enormous and notorious sinnes: examine thy heart whether thou hast contrary affections to an hypocrite, or els assure thy selfe thou art one too. For the Lord setteth downe their sins for vs to take heed by: and their punishments for

for our example. As they then haue seuen woorse spirits, so must thou labor to haue ieuē better spirits: for if thou do not increase in zeale, in thankfulnessse, and in humility, nor hast greater grace now, than thou hadst when thou first began to beleeuē, thou art not the Lords: for if thou wert, hee would haue multiplied his mercie vpon thee, as hee doth his iustice in sending seuen woorse spirits to them that despised him. And this is proued, Matth. 25. 28. the talent that was taken away, was not giuen to him that had fīue, but to him that had ten talents; so as to him that hath shall more be giuen, and the more we haue, the more delight will the Lord take to load vs: as vers. 29. To him that hath shall be giuen, and he shall haue abundance. Wherefore commend me to thy conscience by this token, if the grace of God be not increased, in the end it will be taken away: which is proued Reuel. 22. 11. He that is righteous must be more righteous: the reason is rendred by Saint Ioh. 1. 4. 4. Because he that is in vs, is stronger than hee that is in the world. Why then as they grow dailie more wicked, so must wee grow more godly, the rather because hee that hath the seuen candlestickes, that is, Christ, that hath the fulnessse, and is the distributor of all the graces of God, will giue liberally to vs, whom he hath vouchsafed the name of brethren.

So the last state of that man, &c.

This is the fīst point spoken of at the first: how Satan whom hee first trained on in hypocrisie, neuer leaueth till hee hath brought him to confusion. Answerable to that, 2. Peter 2. 20. If they be tangled againe, and ouercome of the filthinesse from which they were at first escaped, the latter end is woorse with them than the beginning. And this is true, whether we respect this life or the life to come: for first, while they carried a face and countenance of religion, they were wrapped vp in the generall prayers of the Church: but when the maske of hypocrisie is taken from them, and their leprosie appeareth, they are singled out as the enemies of God, and his iudgements hathned vpon them at the intreatie of his seruants. Secondly, while they liued in their hypocrisie, they were quiet within themselues, and they had good hope the night wold neuer haue come: but when they depart in the open contempt and hardnesse of heart, then they find their consciences open to condemne them, and hell gates open to let them in. Thirdly, their end shall be worst at the last iudgement, when the least part of the Lords wrath shall be bigger than all the torments they felt before, when his iron rod shall bruise them, and they shall be beaten with woorse than Scorpions. But now with the godly shall it fare otherwise, whose end shall be better than their beginning, whether wee measure the blessings they haue heere, or which shall be reuealed to them hereafter, as Iob 42. 10. 12. when the Lord had turned away the captiuitie of Iob, hee blessed his last daies more than the first, and gaue him (as the text speaketh) twise so much as he had in outward things, and when he died full of yeeeres, he gaue him ioies without comparison, without measure, and without end.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 1.

- I. Now then there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Iesus, which walke not after the flesh but after the spirit.

He Apostle beginneth this chapter with a conclusion full of all comfort, depending vpon his former treatise and disputation : for before he shewed what our estate was in the marriage with our first husband, which was the (flesh,) namely that while we liue at the becke and commandement of our corruption, and can no sooner haue a motion to sinne, beating as it were in our pulse, but wee bend our desires and consent to encourage it to the fruit of actuall sinne ; that all this while so long as we giue wine, as it were, to strengthen sinne in the conception, wee are no better then in the state of damnation. But when being diuorced from the flesh, wee are by the power of the spirit vnited vnto Christ ; which not onely keepeth vs from that bondage of sinning whereto wee were at first enthralled, and vnder which wee were so forceably held as we were constrained to sinne by violence, but also so killeth that enuenedomed flesh of ours, that there is as it were a new creation in vs, the strength of Christ dispossessing and disarming the strength of sinnefull flesh, and wee are so changed both in the outward and inward man as all is become fresh and new, our thoughts, our wils, our affections, our endeouours seruing and performig their duties to God in the newnesse of the spirit, not in the oldnesse of the letter : then when Christ hath thus sanctified vs, and wee liue sanctifiedly in him ; when his spirit hath rifled the corrupted corners of our hearts, and planted the flowers of grace where before grew the weedes of concupiscence ; then neither is there any hell to swallow vs, nor any feare of condemnation to torment vs, nor any sinne so to presse vs downe, but with the wound we receiue the cure, nay before wee are smitten wee haue our Sauour Christ our most approued Physitian and salue, who when we are left more then halfe dead by the sting of sinne, like the mercifull Samaritan doth lay vs in his owne breast & bosome, powreth the oile of his owne blood into our wounds, and deliuereth vs ouer to be cherished, preferred and guided by his owne spirit.

Luk. 10. 34.

This verse standeth on three parts: first a description of the persons that are and shalbe preferred from damnation, set downe indefinitely, yet restrained to a particular: all those, and those only and alone that are in Christ, and no other. Secondly, by what meanes this preservation from hell is wrought; namely by our being in Christ, not by our being neere Christ. Thirdly, to take away the strife which commonly is in the world, because (forsooth) all will be Christs, he setteth downe a visible badge whereby to discern whether we be truly married to Christ or no. For if we rather desire the flesh pots of Egypt, then the Manna in the wilderness, and being drawn a little from the custome of sinne by the impulsion of the spirit, wee make more haiste to returne backe to our vomit, then to follow hard toward the marke, for the price of the high calling of God in Christ, then is not Christ in vs nor wee in him, and being out of him there is nothing but condemnation, and we are already in the iawes of the Lion.

Phil. 3. 14.

Out of the first, obserue, that saluation is not appointed for all men; for all pertaine not vnto Christ, as himselfe saith, Luk. 12. 32. mine is a little flocke, and Iohn 10. 26. those that beleeue not, are not of Christs sheepe, but those that be his, heare his voice; putting a difference betweene beleeuers and those that are in truth no better than Infidels; which is more liuely expressed by the reward, verse 28. I giue them (that is, my sheepe) eternall life, and they perish not. What becommeth then of the other? They are, as Iude 6. reserved vnder darknesse vnto the iudgement of the great day, and the cup of vengeance and condemnation cannot passe by them, because the wrath of God was neuer satisfied for them: so much also is signified by Christ,

Mat.

Mat. 7. 13. 14. There be two waies in the world fitting with the twofold condition of men, the one strait and narrow, the other wide and broad, those that in this life loue not to be pinched and crouded, but to haue their walkes easie and their roomes large, their feete leadeth them to destruction; and of this kinde (saith hee) there be many. Let vs not therefore vainely nuzzle our selues in this opinion, that heauen shal hold vs all, for Christ, as Iohn 10. 9. is that strait dore by which wee must enter; and though goates may heere feede with sheepe, and rares may grow vp with corne, yet when we come to the fold and to the haruest, our shepheard knoweth who are his, and giues them onely entrance, and our Lord who is the husbandman gathereth only the graine, and scattereth the chaffe as before the wind; for condemnation is the inheritance of all such as haue not Christ for their head, and he is head to none that haue not their life from him, and none liue in him but they that are ruled by him, and hee ruleth none but by the scepter of his word, within the reach whereof few desire to be drawen, but all almost doe seeke how to slip the collar, as if the patient should onely dislike that medicine which would rid him of his disease; yet such are most in the world that hate to see Christ in the glasse of his word wherin he is most perfectly to be beholden, and therefore no maruell though condemnation as a cloud doe couer so many.

Secondly, let vs obserue, and as it were with teares of thankfulness acknowledge and reuerence the speciall and spirituall loue of God, that hath so magnified himselfe vpon the borders of vs Mal. 1. 5. Christians, that when wrath had ouerspread the earth, and the curse of God for disobedience had runne through the end of the world, and that we were besmeared and misshapen with sinne as vgly as the Ethiopian, and condemnation as due to vs as to them that alreadie hang in hell, yet hath the Lord preferued vs, not from a bodily death, as Exod. 1. 17. the midwiues did the yong Israelites, but from the spirituall fire of hell which should haue tormented our soules, and this meerey through Christ that loueth vs; for though the first and originall cause of our saluation bee the loue of God, yet this is conueied to vs through his Sonne, the Lord being as tender to vs as a father is to his childe, onely through the obedience of that child and Sonne of his, the Lord Iesus : and therefore most fitly hath the Apostle deliuered heere this bridge of condemnation to bee broken downe, that wee haue now no passage to hell, through the forme and vertue of our liuing and being in Christ : for there being but two impediments to our saluation, first, the destroying of Satans power in vs through sinne, secondly, the appeasing of Gods anger towards vs for sinne, Christ hath remoued both these : First, in breaking the Serpents head, Gen. 3. 15. and himselfe possessing the hold which Satan kept, namely the Temples of our bodies : And secondly, in treading the wine-presse of the wrath of God, Reue. 14. 19. that what possibly could in iustice be exacted of vs, that himselfe paied in his owne body and person, suffering for the time the paines and pangs of hell : therefore there can no condemnation remaine for vs, our debt being already paied to the vtmost farthing ; which ought to stirre vp our hearts to the praise and thankfulness of so good a God, that passing by thousands that lay polluted in their blood no worse then wee, hath thus gratiouly visited and receiued vs to mercy.

For the second, which is the meanes whereby we are fenced and freed from this condemnation, namely through Christ, we are to note two things : First, how we are said to be in Christ, and Christ in vs : Secondly, what profit we receaue by this coniunction. For the first, it is such a mystery as mans imperfect wisdom and shallow reach cannot sound the botome nor come to the depth of it, but shall heereafter better be knowen by our fruition of it, then now it can be by the description of it : howbeit so far as this secret of God is opened vnto vs in the booke of God, so farre may we seeke, and no further. Now this vnion betweene Christ and vs is expressed in the Scripture two waies : first, plainly : secondly, by way of comparison : the first is set foorth by Christ himselfe the master of all truth : First as a thing to be felt and discerned euen in this life, as Ioh. 14. 20. At that day (saith he) shall ye know that I am in my father, and you in me, and I in you ; that is, though yee shall lose the comfort of my presence bodily, yet I will leaue you such a spirituall pledge of our coniunction, namely my spirit, as you shall know and perceiue I am onely onely absent from you in the flesh, but am still with you to aide and succour you: secondly, it is plainely set foorth as a thing to bee perfectly inoyed in the life to come, as Iob. 17. 23. where Christ maketh it part of his praier for all belecuers, That as thou, O father, art in me and I in thee, so they may be also one in vs, I in them and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; which places proue the vndoubted truth of this point, that Christ and we are ioyned together, for otherwise it had not stood with Gods iustice to haue punished Christ in our flesh, nor to haue accepted our obedience in Christs person, if wee had not beene in him and he in vs; for it was not possible for the flesh of man so wilfully sinnig against the expresse commandement of his maker, to haue approched vnto God, without the suffering and crucifying of the flesh of man in Christ Iesus; neither had this punishment sufficed, had not Christ in our flesh by his obedience recompensed our breach of this law of God. And yet because this is the anchor of our hope, the ground of our faith, and the security of our happinesse heereafter, the spirit doth more neerely bend it selfe to our capacitie, teaching vs this heavenly mystery by seuen earthly comparisons: First, Rom. 13. 14. It is Saint Pauls precept to put on the Lord Iesus Christ; wherein he compareth Christ to a garment; which hath two properties, first to couer our nakednesse, secondly to keepe vs warme; thus as we put on our apparell to couer the shame and to hide the nakednesse of our bodies, so wee should put on the robes of Christs righteousnesse to couer the deformity of our sinfull soules: and as by our garments our heat is kept within the body, whereby our life is preserved; so by our putting on of Christ we that otherwise should be frozen in our dregges receive a spirituall warmth, wherby the life of our soules is kept in and maintained: and as while our garments are on vs wee are said to bee in our clothes, but being cast from vs wee are euen ashamed of our selues and vnquiet till we haue got some other covering or place to hide vs in; so while we are couered with Christ we are said to be in Christ; but if we lay him aside, then are we laid open to the shame of the world, to the rage of Satan, to the tyranny of sinne, and to the wrath of God. Hence arise many fruitfull meditations for our particular instruction. First, that we thinke it a matter of more necessitie to be clothed with Christ then with our earthly garments, and that we are neuer fully apparelled till wee haue put him on. For by how much the soule is of more value then the body, so much ought our care to be increased rather for the furnishing of the one then of the other, in this respect also that the soule is the defence of the bodie, that if we be sound and sincere within and haue spiritual heat at the heart, there are no outward discomforts of pouerty, reproch or persecution that can at all dismay vs. This Dauid hath taught vs out of his owne experience, 1. Sam. 17. 38. 45. who went against Goliath, not in the kings raiment, though that was offered him, but clothed himselfe with armour of better prooffe, the name of the Lord of Hosts, who closed his enemy in his hand of farre greater strength than himselfe. Naie to perswade and prouoke vs vnto this, wee haue example euen in the time of Christ, Matt. 14. 36. that as manie as touched but the hem of his garment were made whole of bodily diseases; and if there were such vertue in his apparell, how much more strength and power is there in himselfe to cure all spirituall diseases of the soule, and to keepe the body from sicknesse also, vnlesse by sicknesse and infirmitie we shall thriue and prosper toward God? Secondly, when thou puttest on Christ be sure thou wearest him as thine vppermost garment both on thy body and on thy minde; for that that is aboue the rest, is best seene, and let the world thinke of thee as it will, it shall be thy true glorie to haue Christ seene in thy attire, that thou goest comely and not vainely and garishly; to haue him seene in thy speech, that it be not wanton and blasphemous, but such as may giue grace to the hearers and tend to edifying; to haue him seene in thy behaviour and in all the actions of thy life, that others by thy light may bee drawn out of darknesse, & that glory may bee giuen to thy father which is in heauen; for if thou shalt think to weare Christ, as we say next the skinne, and shalt put any garments over him, thou deceiuest thine owne soule, and couerest thy selfe but with the lusts of the flesh and the pride of life which will lead thee to destruction, for as Paul saith Col. 3. 9. 10. wee must put off the old man with his works, and put on the new which is renewed in knowledge after the the image of him that created him. Thirdly, when thou puttest on Christ thou must take heed thou puttest him not vpon thy head, or vpon thy hands, or vpon any one part of thy body, but he must be so put on as hee couer thy whole body from the head to the foote, for if the diuell finde any part vncovered hee will possesse that, therefore S. Paul Ephes. 6. 11. bids vs put on the whole armour of God, that wee may be complet souldiers, for if we be vnarmed in any part we may receiue a wound in that part, which may be dangerous to the whole body; so as if wee weare Christ onely in our mouthes that wee can talke religiously, and haue him not in our feete to keepe vs from running altraie to wickednesse, or haue him onely in our thoughts and not in our actions, or in some of our actions and not in all, then are wee not couered with Christ at all, for saith the Apostle Ephes. 4. 15. wee must in all things (not in some) grow vp into him: which is the head, that is Christ. Fourthly, when thou hast once put on Christ thou must neuer lay him aside nor put him off againe, for he is a garment that neuer weareth, he is yester day, to day, and the same for euer, and his yeares shall not faile, Hebr. 1. 12. thou hast the same need of him and vse of him in the night as in the day, in thy rest as in thy labour, in thy health to prosper thee, as in thy sicknesse to comfort thee, in temptations to strengthen thee, as in peace of conscience to secure thee, for there being no time free wherein we are not subiect to fall, we can at no time want his grace which must be our stay and sufficiencie: Peter may well teach vs the vse of this lesson by the danger himselfe was in, Matt. 26. 70. by shaking off this garment in the high priests hall, for he would needs before them all denie, & double it by an oth, that he knew not Christ: so as if Christ in mercy had not stucke close to him, and kept himselfe on, Luk. 22. 61. by turning backe and looking on him, wee see how euen in a chase and when there was no eminent persecution ouer him, Peter had cast him aside as if hee had neuer receiued any former good by him; which must make vs feare and tremble to giue such a guest no better entertainment, and such a garment no safer keeping, since onely in the robes of Christ wee receiue our blessing, and for his sake alone are beloved.

1. Cor. 12. 9.

The

The second comparison is, 2. Cor. 13. 5. Know yee not that Christ is in you, or dwelleth in you, except yee be reprobates? Where Christ is compared to our dwelling houses, that as we dwell and abide in them, so doth Christ by his spirit dwell and abide in vs. And 1. Cor. 6. 19. Your body is the Temple of the holy Ghost which is in you, which ye haue of God. And 1. Cor. 3. 16. ye are the Temple of God, and the spirit of God dwelleth in you. And 2. Cor. 6. 16. Ye are the Temple of the liuing God, as God hath said, I will dwell among you and walke there. And Iohn 14. 23. If any man loue me, he will keepe my word; and my father will loue him, and we will come vnto him and dwell with him. By which places appeareth, how these earthen vessels of our bodies are honoured by being the habitation of God and of Christ: that as by the former comparison wee are said to bee in Christ by putting him on vs, so by this Christ is said to bee in vs by his dwelling and abiding with vs. Out of which wee must learne, first, to keepe our selues vnspotted of the world, because we are to entertaine so great a Prince as the Lord Iesus: for if we thinke all our labour too little to cleanse & beautifie that roome wherein the Kings of the earth shall sit, who are taken out of the same lump we are; how much more must wee strue to haue all our members kept chaste and sanctified, which are as it were so many seuerall roomes for him who by his heauenly generation is the Sonne of God, the fathers Counsellor, and the Prince of peace? Secondly, by this dwelling of Christ with vs we are assured that wee are his, for no man will willingly dwell in a house whereof he is not owner, especially the heire of the whole world whom the heauen of heauens is not able to contain, would not set vp his throne and seat in our soules if he did not delight in vs, neither could hee take any pleasure to lodge with vs if wee were not his; which may be our vndoubted comfort, that Christ possessing the fort and castle of our bodies, it is not possible for Satan either by deceitfull policy to surprize vs, or by his fiery darts to sting vs, or by his subtile illusions to eninare vs, or by his bitter and cruell inuasions to vanquish vs; for, as Ioh. 10. 28. we are the sheepe of his pasture, and none can plucke vs out of his hands.

Ephes. 2. 22.

1. Cor. 6. 10.

Esay 9 6.

The third comparison is in 1. Peter 2. 4. where Christ and his members are resembled to a building, for as a building cannot be firme and sure except it be built vpon a strong foundation, no more can we stand one minute, if we be not built vpon Christ: and as the foundation and the rest of the worke make but one building, so is it betwixt Christ and vs, he being the chiefe corner stone elect and pretious, & we being liuely stones whereby wee are made a spirituall house vnto God by Christ. Hence learne first: That all our strength and sufficiency is from God; for if we will be a building of our selues, and lay our foundation in our owne righteousness, a little sprinkling of persecution will wash vs away, as it did, Mat. 7. 26. wash away the house that was so foolishly built vpon the sands: but in Christ alone we liue, moue, and haue our being; it is he that can command the Sea to be as a pauement for Peter to walke on, Matt. 14. 29. who at the sight of a winde arising, through weakenesse in himselfe is forced to crie, Master saue me; yea when as his disciples stricken with the feare and force of a storme, challenged him as if he cared not though they perished, he then being through their prayers awaked, rebuked the windes, and commanded the sea to be still, and it was so. Now if Peter that had such strength of faith as that the Church should be built vpon his confession, and the rest of the Disciples that were so continually taught of Christ, felt no power in themselves to resist the feares of the flesh without the hand of God, much lesse are we able to set one foote forward toward the way of heauen, or to draw one foote backward from the way to sin vnlesse wee lay the foundation on our rocke Christ Iesus, who hath measured the heauens with a span, holdeth the windes in his fist, and hath founded the deepes of the earth, that whatsoever falleth on him shall be broken, and whatsoever resisteth him shall be dasht into peeces. Secondly, obserue that we are no further the house of God then we doe build vpon Christ, and that since the foundation and the building make but one worke, our prayers and all our other seruice of God must be offered vp vpon the golden altar, which is Christ: that as Pauls reioicing, Galat. 6. 14. was onely in Christ crucified, so may ours be, resting our selues wholly vpon him, and placing our whole contentment contentment in him, for as he is the strength of the building, so is hee also the honour of the building, wee being without him a sinfull nation and a people laden with iniquitie, but through him, 1. Pet. 2. 9. a chosengeneration, an holy nation, and a people set at libertie, to shew foorth the vertues of him that called vs. Let vs therefore beware we dawbe not our selues with vntempered mortar bringing in the stubble of mans merit or inuention to make vp this frame, no not so much as to haue any corner in this house, that is, not the least member of our body nor the least power of the soule, to leane vpon the arme of flesh, or to be supported by the wisdome of vaine man, for this were to settle part of the building vpon a rocke, and the rest vpon the sands, which will ouerthrow all, for the whole man must be built vpon Christ, and he must be the corner stone, to ioine both the bodie and soule, the flesh and the spirit vnto God. For as the gold is neuer said to be purified till all the drosse be seuered from it, so is it not sufficient to haue as it were some of our affections refined and the rest to remaine drossie and polluted, but if we will be wedges of gold for the Lords vse, and vessels of honour for his house, Christ must be in euery part of vs to ioine vs to himselfe that we may be holy euen as he is holy.

The fourth comparison is, Ephes. 1. 22. 23. where God is said to haue giuen Christ to bee the head to the Church which is his body. In which place Christ is compared to a body, that as the members are knit and vnited to the body, so are all wee as members ingrafted and incorporate into the body of Christ; and as the members being thus vnited are said to be part of the body, so we being ioined vnto Christ are said to be Christs; and as the heat and life which is in the body, is dispersed and diffused into euery member, euen so the life & the graces which are in Christ are through this coniunction made proper and communicated euen to vs; & as the life in the body cannot be maintained without food, no more can the life in the soule bee held and kept in wthout her feeding on Christ; and as the body hath naturall instruments, as the hands and the mouth to receiue her sustenance, euen so the soule hath her members and instruments, as praier, faith and hearing the word, whereby she receiueth her spirituall nourishment nourishment to eternall life. Hence let vs raise this vse : First, ^{v/ps} that since our bodies are the members of Christ let vs not make them the members of an harlot, 1. Cor. 6. 15. but as in the time of our ignorance we vsed them to vncleanness and to profaneness, so now being free from sinne through Christ let vs make them seruants vnto righteousnesse in holinesse, Rom. 6. 19. For, as it were an vnnaturall part in the hand to striue to pull out the heart, or in the teeth by tearing the flesh to make the rest of the body deformed; euen so much more vnciuill and beaftly is it in vs, to flie vpon the Lord Iesus, and to rend his name in sunder by our othes and blasphemy, and to lend as it were our forces to his enemies that doe inuade his Church, our selues being not onely faint-hearted, but false-hearted, to fight for him who fought so many cumbats for vs with Sathan, and wraстled so strongly with the wrath of his father: which otherwise had fallen vpon vs, whereas now in recompence of his grace and fauour towards vs, we should sifit as it were our armory to finde out the best weapons of perfection for the defence of him, and of his truth, and should keepe such a continuall harmony in our life, as if our eies were only giuen vs to behold him wounded for our sinnes, and now aduanced for our sakes, our tongues onely lent vs to set forth his praise, our eares to heare of his godnesse, what he hath wrought for the sonnes of men, our feet to carry vs into his sanctuary, where we may more neerely approch to him in his word. Finally, all the parts of our thoughts, of our affections, of our actions, to be imploied and taken vp wholly to his aduantage. Secondly, let vs learne hence that as the life is conueied into the inferiour members from the head, euen so our life is hid in Christ, and wee hold it onely from him : for as the Apostle saith, Ephes. 1. 12. without Christ, we are aliants from the common-wealth of Israell, strangers from the couenants of promise, and without God in the world : which must teach vs, not to a-uid, but rather to embrace those meanes wherein the life of Christ is made manifest in vs, which principally is by our inward worship of God, which is performed foure waies : First, by our obedience to his lawes : Secondly, by our patience in afflictions : Thirdly, by our humility in our giftes : Fourthly, by our

affiance in the Lords assistance. All which were performed by our head Christ: for he submitted himselfe to his fathers will, euen to the death of the crosse, he was reuiled, yet answered not againe, as a sheepe before the shearer, so opened hee not his mouth, he taught humility to others, and often humbled himselfe before his father; he could by praier haue obtained twelue leagions of Angels to rescue him, such confidence he had both in his fathers loue and power; but he knew there was a greater worke to be done, his testament to be sealed with blood for our redemption; for we were before but rotten and corrupted members of sinnefull Adam, till by being made one with him we were brought into his maruellous light: therefore as the head hath the gouernement of the members, so let Christ haue the rule and dominion ouer vs, that we may runne when he calleth, stoope when he smiteth, stoppe our mouthes when he afflicteth, debase our selues till he exalteth, and not at all to distrust in his deliuerance.

of marriage
Fifthly, this vnion of Christ with vs, is set forth vnder the estate of marriage, Ephe. 5. 30. For we are members of his bodie, of his flesh, and of his bones. That as there is an inseparable bond in marriage betweene a man and his wife, so is there betweene Christ and the Church his spouse; and as the woman was taken out of the side of man while he was a sleepe, so was the Church taken, as it were, out of the side of Christ while he fell a sleepe vpon the Crosse; and as the woman is not married to the goods of the man, nor to his lands, nor to her dowry, but to the man himselfe, and so hath power and interest in his body; so are not we married and ioyned to the gifts and benefits of Christ, but to Christ himselfe; for it is improper to say we are in the graces of Christ, but by our being in Christ we are partakers, and are interested in all the benefits of Christ; euen as the woman by her marriage is in her husbands goods. Hence obserue, first, that all that are elect are onely flesh of Christs flesh, and none other; for though Adam was in the flesh foure thousand yeeres before him, yet was Christ the lambe, slaine from the beginning; so as by their faith in the vertue of the promised seed, which is Christ, were the Patriarkes and the rest saued, that were before him, as

Iohn 8. 56. it is said by Christ, Abraham rejoiced to see my day, and he saw it. And though Christ was made of our flesh, as Phil. 2. 7. He was found in shape as a man, and not we of his, yet this must be vnderstood spiritually and mystically, and not grossely and carnally; for then will the reprobates steppe in and say, that they are of Christs flesh and so challenge saluation: but note, though all men and women are of one flesh, yet betweene man and wife there is a neerer bond, not that the woman is of her husbands flesh only, as she is of all other mens, but that she is also in her husbands flesh by reason of the sanctified ordinance of God, and so is she not in the flesh of other men: so fareth it betweene Christ and man; all men are of Christs flesh, because he took vpon him the true substance & nature of man, but yet none are in the flesh of Christ, but those that by his spirit are ingrafted into him. This then being a speciall prerogative to vs that are elect, let vs labour in our lues to shew foorth the fruits of Christs flesh, that we may shew we are bought from men, by following the lambe whithersoever he goeth, by having no guile found in our mouthes, nor pollution in our bodies, but keeping our selues pure virgines, and vnsported, as being the first frutes vnto God: Reuel. 14. 4. Secondly, obserue that if we will be flesh of Christs flesh, and will be ingrafted into his body that we may die vnto sinne, then must we first consider where Christ is: secondly where our affections are; if they be heere vpon earth, then doe we seeke Christ on earth, when we know hee is gone into heauen. But from whence hath he deliuered vs? From hell. Then must we take heed we doe not the workes of hell and of darknesse. And then whither hath he brought vs? Where he is, that is in heauen: Ioh. 14. 2. Then if we will say we are married to him, and that he was crucified for our sinnes, and hath crucified sinne in vs, and freed vs from sinne, Sathan, and condemnation, let our conuersation be where his body is, for where the dead corse is, thither will the Eagles resort, and where the husband is, thither will the wife haste to see him, and to liue with him; so that as Christ died in body, so must we die in spirit, that his spirit may haue his full worke in vs to raise vs vp to heavenly meditations. Thirdly, we must learne, that betwixt the corporall and spirituall marriage

there is great difference, for the woman for certain causes may be diuorced from her husband, and he being dead she may as lawfully keepe herselfe a widow as marry againe; but in this our spirituall marriage there is neither diuorce nor widowhood, for as soone as we are diuorced from the flesh and the lusts thereof, we must not stay and remaine a widow, but we must presently marry with the spirit of God and the frutes thereof, and he shall remaine our husband for euer. Howbeit we must know we haue no liberty to marry with our second husband the Lord Iesus, vntill we be deliuerd from the whole body of sinne and the powers thereof, as lust, sensuality, and such like; and the meanes of this our freedome and deliuerance is in the body of Christ; so as vnlesse the body of Christ hath destroyed sinne in our naturall bodies we are not conioined vnto him. We must then consider what there is in this bodie of ours, which is a body of sinne, Rom. 6. 6. And in this body of ours there are three things: First, condemnation for sin: Secondly, disobedience by sinning: Thirdly, the corruption of nature which causeth this disobedience. In the second place we must consider, how we are deliuered from these three, and how they be taken from vs. The first, which is our condemnation, is taken away by the satisfaction of Christ for our sinne: the second, which is our disobedience, is taken away by the righteousnesse of Christ, free from sinne; and these things are without vs: but the third, which is, the corruption of our nature, is taken away by the powerfull working of Gods spirit within vs; so that except we haue this third thing, the spirit to abolish sinne in vs, we are not yet flesh of his flesh, and so none of his spouse: For, as for Christs satisfaction for condemnation, and his obedience for our rebellion, the very Turkes may hope for their saluation as well as we; therefore it must be the slaying of sinne by the spirit that must assure vs of our coniunction and marriage with Christ: for if corruption remaineth whence springeth disobedience, then there remaineth for this disobedience condemnation, for euery sinne committed by them that are regenerate is as it were the bringing foorth of a bastard vnto God, which we know how much he abhorreth.

Sixty, this our coniunction with Christ is set foorth Iob. 15. 5. vnder

vnder the parable of the vine to which Christ is compared, and we to the branches; for as the branch cannot beare fruit of it selfe vnlesse it grow vp with the stocke, no more can we except we grow vp in Christ; and as the branches receiue sap from the root whereby they fructifie, so we being ingrafted into Christ receiue life from him whereby we are fruitfull in good workes; and as the branches seuered from the body of the tree doe fall away and perish, so if we once wither away and the graces of God decay and wax cold in vs, drinking in the raine and yet not bringing foorth herbes meet for the dresser, then are we neere vnto cursing and our end is to be burned. Out of which learne, that if thou cariest in thy life onely leaues as it were of thy profession, as the figge tree did, that seemed greene a farre off and goodly, and art not fruitfull in thy conuersation to walke as one redeemed out of darknesse, thou art but as a branch broken off, and as a blade that withereth before the time of haruest, for, as Rom. II. 16. If the roote be holy, so are the branches, and if the ground of thy heart be seasoned with the graces of God, it will spring foorth into all thy members.

The Seuenth comparison, is Iob. 6. 56. He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me and I in him: Where Christ is compared to flesh and blood, which we must not vnderstand of materiall but of spirituall eating, which is comprehended by faith, wrought in vs by the spirit, reuealed to vs by the Sonne of God, deliuered to vs by the word of God, and sealed vnto vs by the Sacraments: Since then our feeding on Christ doth draw such fruit after it, & bring such efficacy with it, let vs labour to meet him in those meanes himselfe hath ordained, namely, in his word and sacraments, the one being the storehouse of his promises, the other as it were a patent of confirming them to vs vnder the seales left vs by the King of heaven, that as these infirme bodies of ours cannot be supported without the staves of bread and drinke, the one to kill the hunger, the other to stanch the thirst, wherewith our natures are assaulted; so we may perswade our selues that our soules for their cherishing and refreshing, doe require the like necessity to be fed with the flesh and blood of Christ, that we may grow vp perfect men in him, and be freed from the scorching heat of desperation, wherinto we may easily fall through that streame and current of sin wherewith we are carried in the whole course of our lines, and from which wee cannot be saued but through the sprinkling of that blood which was shed for vs vpon the Crosse.

Now for the second point, which is, the profit and benefit we receiue by this Coniunction, it is twofold: first, that Christ hath taken our sinnes, and the punishment of our sinnes vpon him; for he being without sinne, was made sinfull for vs, was wounded for our transgressions, and, as 1. Pet. 2. 24. bare our sinnes in his body on the tree, that by his stripes we might be healed: secondly, that by his death we are made partakers of his obedience, and the reward of his obedience, which is, eternall life, and of his graces, and the glory for his graces, which is eternall glory. Touching the first profit, it is double: First, he tooke our sinnes vpon him: Secondly, the satisfaction of our sinnes, which is death, the first by imputation, the second really and sensibly, for being clothed with our flesh, and appearing in our persons, he became the child of wrath, subiect to the euerlasting curse of God, for so are we all by nature, in which nature of ours he representing vs, became vile before his father in respect of vs. But now for the punishment of sinne vpon him, that was not imaginarie, but true and sensible both in soule and body, so extreme as in anguish of spirit he was driven to crie, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me, yea: the death he endured was in it owne kind accursed, as it is written, Dent. 21. 23. Cursed is every one that hangeth on the tree, yea: looke what miseries, what wants, what dangers he did vndergoe and taste of, from his birth to his ascension into heaven, the same he suffered and slept in onely for vs, which cleareth the iustice of God that a righteous man should smart for vs sinners, because we are in him and he in vs: which I vrge the more, that we may see the great price the sonne of God paid for our redemption, to stirre vs vp to a better and deeper consideration of it, he being the only shepheard that ever gaue his life for his sheepe, the only lambe which being vnspotted in himselfe did euer take vpon him the scabbes and vlcers of the whole flocke, the onely man full of sorrowes and experience of infirmities, whom the world iudged as plagued & smitten of God and humbled, yet was it onely for our iniquities that the chastisement of our peace might be vpon him. Therefore as Esa 53. 11. let him see the travell of his soule, that is, the fruit of his labour, and the efficacy of his death, in the saluation of vs his people. For the other profit it is also double: as first we are made partakers of his graces: secondly, of the glorie for his graces. And this standeth also with the iustice of God, that he being in vs and we in him, God must needs with him giue vs all things also. Now the graces we taste of by this coniunction are twofold, first by imputation, which is his satisfaction for our finnes, we being starke bankrupts able to pay nothing; and the benefit of his obedience, we being rebellious bastards able to fulfill nothing: secondly, in our selues, but drawn and deriued from Christ the fountaine, as the change of our affections, reforming of our iudgements, renuing of our minds, mortification & a sanctified life; and these graces did farre more abound in Christ then euer they did in Adam in his integrity, for he was flesh made but after the image of God, whereas this flesh Christ had the God head dwelling in him bodily, & as Col. 1. 18. had in all things the preheminance that we might tast of the fulnes of his graces as far as is fit. And for the second much is the glory for his graces, namely eternall life, of this hee hath also made vs partakers, ye as if he had no other errand to heauen, he saith, Io. 14. 32. I go to prepare a place for you in my fathers house. Therefore let vs not say in our hearts, that is, let vs not doubt but assure our selues that as Christ is ascended, so shall we, and it is no presumption to beleue that the Lord for his Sonnes sake will saue thee: for he hath first giuen thee his word and promise, He that beleueth and repenteth shall be saued, so as if thou canst apply repentance to thy selfe thou maiest challenge him on his word; and secondly, thou hast his oath hee sware to Abraham, that his seed through his faith should be blessed, and this hath Christ sworne againe; Amen, Amen, he that beleueth, is already translated from death to life; shewing the certainty of it by the maner of speech, as if it were already done: and if thou wilt relie vpon neither of the former, he hath thirdly left thee a pawne, that is, his spirit to guide and conduct thee in the right way, that though thy selfe cannot be in heauen as yet, yet thy affections may be in the bosome of Christ, and that thy faith in his resurrection may assure thee of thy incorruption, and thy comfort in his sitting at the right hand of God, may rebound backe vpon thy owne soule in being an vndoubted testimony of thy exaltation and aduancement heereafter, for where Christ is, there, by reason of this coniunction betweene thee and him, thou must needs be also.

Hence ariseth a most comfortable instruction for an afflicted conscience, for Sathan will lay a whole scrowle of particular sins before thee, charge thee that there be many omitted wherein thou hast offended, that corruption is so worne into thy bones, and lieth so low at the heart, as it cannot be taken forth but must needs rankle to damnation, and that thy sinnes are in their number so many, and in their weight so heavy, as there can be no ease nor satisfaction for them. Thou must confesse thou art indeed in thy selfe a worme vnworthy to creepe vpon the earth, but in Christ, as bold and strong as a lion, yea if thou canst appropriate the sufferings of Christ to thy selfe in particular, as the Gospel propounds them generally, thou maiest answer that by the purity of his birth, the obedience of his life, and the bitterness of his death, he hath clensed thee from thy sinne wherein thou wert conceiued, made vp the breach of thy rebellion, and ransomed thee from the cruelty of that second death, whereinto thou wert plunged by thine actuall pollution; & this thou knowest because thou art one with him, and he with thee. True indeed, sathan will confesse that Christ took our flesh vpon him, as himselfe said in the Gospell, that he was come before his time to torment him; but yet he will suggest that Christ being but one, his satisfaction can be but for one, and he will tell thee, in this truely, that the sinnes of all men are infinite, and the wrath of God for them is infinite, for which the satisfaction of Christ must bee as infinite, which (saith he) cannot be. To which answer, that as by the first Adam all men are made sinners, so by the second Adam, which is Christ, all that beleue are made righteous; and as Adam can damne all that shall be damned, for all in him did eate of the forbidden fruit, so Christ can saue all that shall be saued, for all in him are brought brought againe into the Paradise of God. In Rom. 5. 14. and 1. Cor. 15. 22. Adam is said to be a figure of Christ, wherein they agree in this: that as Adam gaue as much as he had to his posterity, so doth Christ proportionably giue that he hath to those that be his; Adam gaue sinne and death, Christ giueth life and grace. And they disagree in three respects: first, we receaue sin from Adam by nature, but we receaue not the graces of Christ and life eternall by nature, but by imputation and by grace only, and not by imitation, for we cannot imitate Christ in euery thing: secondly, by Adam came only original sinne, not actuall; but Christ hath satisfied for both these, for all that were before him, and shall come after him, being true beleeuers: thirdly, the graces of Christ doe farre exceed the sinne of Adam, else would Sathan perswade thee thou art halfe saued, and halfe damned, for if the vertue thou hast by Christ were but equall with the corruption thou hast by Adam, it could not produce so incomprehensible a worke as thy saluation is, and therefore Rom. 5. 17. it is said: If by the offence of one death raigned through one, much more shall they which receiue that superfluity or superabundance of grace raigne in life through one, that is, Christ: thereby shewing that the righteousnesse of Christ, made ours by grace, is of greater power to bring life then was the sin of Adam, to bring death to his posterity. Therefore seeing through faith God reuealeth to thee these riches laid vp for thee in Christ, bend thine eie toward him, and he will so supply thee with spirituall wisdome, as thou shalt answer with ease and comfort the sophistry and deceits of Sathan who willingly would plunge thee into terror and trouble of conscience.

Which walke not after the flesh, but after the spirit. Vnto such as thus walke there is no condemnation: and this is the third thing spoken of at first: namely, that a sanctified life must be the sure euidence of our ingrafting into Christ, for howsoeuer the spirit which is within vs testifieth thus much, that we are Christs and Christ is ours, as 1. Cor. 2. 10. The things which God hath prepared for them that loue him, he hath reuealed to vs by his spirit; and vers. 12. We haue not receaued the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; yet because through selfe loue no man will will say but he hath the spirit, therefore steppes in the other testimony of holinesse of life, and this is visible, reall, vndeceivable and true, as 1. Iob. 3. 6. 8. Whosocuer abideth in him sinneth not, and he that committeth sinne is of the diuell, which place we must not vnderstand simply of sinners, for all of vs are so, but of such as fauour themselues in their finnes, blesse their soules in them, make a trade of sinning, and persist in it; so as we that are made mystical members of Christ, must labour to extinguish the life of any grosse sinne, and not to make them the members of an harlot, of an vsurer, of an Idolater, of a flatterer and such like, for being ingrafted into Christ, it is as odious in Gods sight for vs to commit these finnes as if Christ should commit them, and by them without repentance we doe rend our selues from Christ, for the Sonnes of God are led by his spirit, Rom. 8. 14. And they are led by it that liue in it, Gal. 3. 25. And this life is knowen by the effects, that is, by walking in the spirit, And they walke in it that fulfill not the lusts of the flesh, Gal. 5. 16. And they fulfill them not that haue crucified the flesh; vers. 14. And they onely haue done this that cease from sinne, 1. Pet. 4. 2. with a full purpose of heart to liue better; for as the dead body hath no breath, so must sinne haue no strength in vs: and he that doeth not this is a reprobate. I speake not of a finall reprobate, but of a reprobate for the time, for such stand in the state of condemnation. But if we labour to liue godly as neere as we can after the example of Christ, and make holinesse of life as the load-star, whereby we may be seen to direct our iourney toward heauen, then this doth knit vs in the persawson of our vnion with Christ, prouided alwaies that there be speciall repentance for speciall finnes, extraordinary repentance for extraordinary finnes, great repentance for grosse finnes, and daily repentance for daily finnes. Therefore let euery of vs examine our selues what finnes remaine in vs vnrepented, and what vnsubdued, what be blushing and shamefast, and what be crying and insolent finnes; and let vs take the same course with them all, cast them from vs and purge our selues cleane of the leauen of Sathan, for a sinne suppressed and not destroyed, will at lenth breake forth to the hinderance of our walke in the spirit, and if we be stopt in this course, then so long

long do we stagger in the assurance of our being one with Christ; which is the only helmet of our salvation.

Secondly, obserue hence the order the scripture setteth down, namely that first we must be in Christ, which is the cause, and then we shall walke after the spirit, which is the effect, euen as iustification goeth before sanctification, our ingrafting into Christ being our iustification, and being so, it causeth holinesse of life, so as both must goe together, making no difference betweene faith and a godly life in the person, but onely in the properties and maner: and therefore if it be asked; who shall be saued? Such as leade a sanctified life. But if how we shall be saued, the answer is, by the merits of Christ apprehended by faith; so as by faith wee are saued, for the fruit maketh not the root good, but the root the fruit, the streames are not the cause of the fountaine, but the fountaine of them, and the streames are but the effects, euen as brearhing is the effect of life; so we are not saued because of our workes and walking in the spirit, but because of our faith, for workes are the fruits of faith, yet we shall receiue according to our workes, 2. Cor. 5. 10. and shalbe recompensed for them, not for the dignity of the worke, but in the benignity of the Lord, who hath accepted our persons in Christ: and therefore Tit. 2. 11. 12. the Apostle doth not say, Because we deny vngodlinesse therefore the grace of God hath brought salvation, but saluation being offered in the Gospell, we must thereby learne to be profitable schollers in holinesse of life. So Mat. 11. 28. Christ doth not call vs to ease vs of our sinnes because we liue godly after his example, but faith being wrought in vs by the power of his calling vs, we then liue godly; euen as the thiefe vpon the crosse, Luke. 23. 46. was no looner called but he brought foorth fruit, his confession being a token of his faith. So we must first be within the couenant of God, and then we shall walke in the couenant, as Gen. 17. 1. God said to Abraham, I am sufficient, therefore walke before me, so that he made not his couenant with him to be his God because he walked before him, but first he made his couenant with him, that being assured of his protection he might more chearefully walk before him; euen so fareth it with vs, we are first made members of Christ, and then being vnited to his body we must shew forth the life of Christ in our cōuersation. And here we must further learne to answer two obiections: First, the carnall man will say: Christ hath satisfied for his breach of the law and supplied the imperfection of his obedience, therefore now he may take his swinge in sin, as Pro. 7. 18. the harlot enticed the yong man to take his fill of loue. But we must know, Christ hath not satisfied for vs to liue as we list, nor redeemed vs from darknesse to light that we should runne to darknesse againe: for a pardon is not giuen to a traitour that he should offend againe, neither doth that pardon serue for offences to be committed after, but so oft as he offendeth so oft shall he be punished, or else he must haue so many pardons; so Christ hath satisfied once, and that hath taken away the guilt of al that went before; but if we presume vpon this to sinne againe, either we must looke for more satisfactions, which cannot be, for there is but one sealed with blood, or else we must suffer so many punishments as we commit sinnes. Secondly, it will be said: since there can be no more satisfaction for sinne, therefore we haue now liberty giuen vs to sinne. It is true indeed, that the wráth of God could not be appeased for sinne nor satisfied without the blood of the Sonne of God, and this was by him performed, that being reconciled to his father we might no more fall at enmity (for sin alone makes the separation betweene God and vs,) but that we might liue according to his will in newnesse of life; howbeit there is a satisfaction God requireth at our hands, but that is onely obedience in our affections, holinesse in our actions, humility in our hearts, and thankfulness in our persons, that we may bee as pretious stones in the brestplate of Christ to be represented to his father. And therefore let vs abhorre such presumptuous and rechlesse impiety, as either to liue as we list, or to thinke wee haue time enough to repent before we die, for who can tell when the cocke will crow, or when death as a thiefe will steale vpon vs? nay let vs remember it is said, Reuel. 22. 11. He that is filthy let him be filthy still, and in our age wee shall possesse the iniquities of our youth, and therefore our life being but a span long, the day is short enough by repentance to make our accompts with God euen and easie.

Thirdly, obserue hence, that we cannot serue God and riches, Christ and Beliall, the flesh and the spirit, for their walkes and courses are opposite and contrary one to the other, as may appeare by the Apostles putting of it negatiuely, that we must not walke at all after the flesh; for if God be a father he will have all the honour, if a master all the feare, neither will he suffer himselfe to be diuided, or his worship to bee performed by halfes, for this is, as Eliab calleth it 1. King. 18. 21. the halting between two opinions: but as before our conuersion the affections of sins doe force vs to bring forth fruit vnto death; so being called, the strength of grace must thrust vs forward to bring forth fruits to God, and not to our selues: and therefore it is said, Gal. 6. 8. He that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reape corruption, but he that soweth to the spirit, shall of the spirit reape life euerlasting: so as though thou doest that which is lawfull, yet if thou doest it more vnto men then vnto God, thou sowest to the flesh, and shalt receiue damnation; but if thou seekest in thy whole life to please God, more then men, yea, to please him though thou displeasest men, then shalt thou of the spirit reape saluation: for the end why God hath created and saued vs, is to glorifie him in this life, and were it not he respected and receiued glory by thy life, what need he suffer thee to stay heere on earth, but haue taken thee presently from the wombe to heauen: but he suffereth thee to liue, partly that by thy fruitfulnessse to God, the corruption that is hid within thee may in part be abolished, & partly to distinguish between thee and the reprobate at the last daie, when thou shalt be blessed and that worthily, euen in the iudgement and acknowledgment of the damned, for the fruites thou hast brought forth to God. So as it standeth vs vpon to haue the eies of our thoughts, & the bent of actions, wholly vpon God, to hazard, yea to prefer his glory before the glory and comfort of our owne saluation: for if we be not rich in God and good works, then are we still dead in sinne, then is not Sathan at all cast out of vs, then are we so far from needing but to wash our feet, as we are wholly polluted hands, hea. t, and all. Howbeit because euerie one will say: he brings forth fruit to God, and walketh in the spirit, being inwardly greiued for his sinnes, and resorting vnto

publike praier and preaching, which are indeed good steppes to trace a Christian by, yet we must know this is not sufficient, for the inward sorrow is inuisible, and the comming to praier and to the word, is deceivable and communicable euen to hypocrites, therefore we must bring forth visible fruit to be seene of men, in performing towards them, the duties of the second table by loue, patience compassion, and such like; else is it as a light hid vnder a bushell, if it be not sensibly felt of men for their comfort, and seene of men for their example, that they which are without may be wonne, and the rest which are of the same fold with vs, may be stirred vpto glorifie God in heauen for the fruitfulness of his Saints on earth To which duties we may be the better encouraged because the whole fruit both in the practise of them, and in the reward of them, shall redound to our selues, producing ioy and peace of conscience in this life, and the crowne of glory in the life to come, Rom. 6. 22.

Fourthly, for thine owne comfort learne to make a difference betweene walking after the flesh, and walking through the flesh, the one being a following and pursuing of thy sinfull desires, with greedinesse and with delight through that rage of corruption which rests within thee; the other being a performing of thy duties to God, and a walking with him though with weaknesse and infirmity, by reason of that remnant of flesh which will be in thee til death; so as though the good thou dost, be not done so cheerfully, so exactly, so perfectly as it ought, but is mingled with many imperfections, that euen in thy own iudgement thou thinkest thine actions euill, be not discouraged; for albeit thou hast in truth cause to pray to haue not only thy euill actions, but euen thy best actions to be forgiven, because they are a litle tempered with the flesh; yet know that this is the case of all the children of God which are effectually sanctified, to haue naturally concupisence in them, which causeth these thre things: first either it maketh vs alwaies think euill thoughts; secondly, or else it hindereth vs from good thoughts: thirdly, or else it maketh vs to mingle with our good thoughts, euill thoughts. And heerein wee must first know what we are by nature, and before our conuersion, namely, wee are bound both hand and foote as it were with the chaines and irons of sinne, that wee cannot mooue to any good, and so long we are the slaues of Sathan, who whips vs with our owne corruption, and so hardeneth our hearts through vlc and custome of sinne, that we are led into the wrath of God before we see it; but when the Lord doth strike vs on the sides as he did Peter, and open our hearts as he did the heart of Lydia, that we doe see the riches of his mercy, and doe feele our irons somewhat vnloosed, that is, our corruption abated, whereby we get some liberty to doe that is good, though it be not done with that perfection that is required, yet let vs assure our selues that our purpose and desire to walke with God and to doe good is accepted of him, for he regardeth the heart, and dispenteth with the imperfection of the outward man. To which purpose Saint Paul saith: Phil. 3. 13. 14. I forget that which is behind and endeavour to that is before, and follow hard toward the marke for the price of the high calling of God in Christ. In which obserue three things: First, we must know our marke at which we must shute, that is, Christ, and vnto the comming of this marke we must be absolutely resolved: Secondly, we must not looke behind vs (not forbidding vs to look backe vnto our former estate) but nothing must hinder vs from going to this worke, as whoredome, vsury, flattery, deceir, idolatry, and such like grosse sinnes: Thirdly, we must so strue, as in the end we may attain this marke, which is Christ; and so we come thither, it skilleth not whether we creepe or goe by steppes and degrees; answerable to that 1. Cor. 9. 24. So runne that yee obtaine, that though wee haue many stops in the flesh, yet if our eies bee still vpon God it sufficeth.

Lastly, that we may be abashed at the shaking of sinne, and may grow into perfect hatred and detestation of it, we see heere the miserable estate of them that are subiect to the prince of the world, and are at league with hell, that howsoeuer their life is varnished ouer with a little temporall prosperity, yet they feede themselves but for their slaughter, for being out of Christ, and disclaiming holinesse of life, their glory shall be their shame, and their end is but damnation, it being impossible as Salomon saith Prover. 12. 3. for a man to be established by wickednesse.

If therefore thou seest his barnes full let not thy soule enuy it, for in the reuenues of the wicked there is trouble, because they tend to sinne, and the Lord casteth away his substance. If thou seest him tall and proud, as the Cedar, blesse thou thy selfe in thy humility, for the curse of the Lord being in his house, though his excellency mount vp to heauen, and his head reach vp to the clouds, yet shall he perish for euer like his dung, his rootes shall be dried vp beneath, and aboue his branch shall be cut downe. If thou seest him seated and waxing old in his outward happines, let it nothing trouble thee, for his bones are full of the sinnes of his youth, and it shall lie downe with him in the dust, at length his eies shall faile, and then shall his candle be put out, his refuge shall perish, and then fearefulnesse shall driue him to his feet. If thou seest him eate and drinke and rise vp to play, desire not thou to taste of his ioy, for his reioicing is short and but a moment, and though wickednesse be sweet in his mouth, yet God shall draw it out of his belly, yea affliction followeth sinners, and feare shall be for the workers of iniquity, such a one consumeth like a rotten thing, God shall run vpon him and his arme shall be broken, he shall destroy him, as the vine her sower grape, and cast him off as the oliue doth her flower, for he that is nor planted in Christ his branch cannot be greene; but brimstone shall be scattered in his habitation, and his hope shalbe indignation and sorrow of mind.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 2.

2. For the law of the spirit of life which is in Christ Iesus, hath freed me from the law of sinne and of death.

N this verse the Apostle insifteth to proue, that there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ, which he doth by two arguments: First, because we are freed from the law and dominion of sinne sinne : Secondly because we are freed from the law and domination of death. Against these two the conscience opposeth two things. First, how are we freed from the law and power of sinne, since we haue so many vncleane thoughts, so many raging affections, and so many vile and naughty actions that passe from vs in the course of our liues? secondly, how are we freed from the law and sting of death, since we die daily and suffer so many afflictions and miseries in this life which are the merits and deserts of sinne? These two obiections that might skare and trouble the tender conscience and inward peace of a Christian, he answereth to the end of this chapter. In this verse to the end of the ninth, he sheweth how far we are deliuered from the law of sinne, and from the 29. verse to the 17. how far we are freed from the law of death, which was the first punishment for sinne, as appeareth, Gen. 2. 17. In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt die the death: and from the 17. verse to the end of the Chapter, he sheweth how far we are freed from the miseries and calamities of this life.

Now in this verse as it deuideth it selfe we are to consider two things : First, how and by what meanes wee obtaine this freedom, namely by the spirit of life which is in Christ : Secondly, the things from which we are freed, which be two, first from the poison of sin, secondly, from the power of death.

For the first, we must learne to make a difference betweene the spirit of life which is in Christ Iesus; and the spirit of life of Christ which is in vs; the one being absolute and inherent in Christ, the vertue wherof imputed vnto vs brings perfect absolution from the tyranny of sinne, and bitternesse of death, the other being but poured into vs through the grace of Christs spirit abiding in vs, doth but qualifie and temper the heat of sinne and the violence of death, which otherwise would rage ouers. And therefore if we speake of the spirit of life which is in vs we may well crie out with Saint Paul Rom. 7. 24. O wretched men that we be, who shall deliuer vs from the body of this death. But if we speake of the spirit of life which is in Christ, then may wee boldly say wee are already deliuered from it. That this may bee made more plaine, Paul Rom. 7. 18. said; hee knew no good thing

thing dwelling in his flesh; and heere he saith: he is freed from the law of sinne and of death, so as it may be thought these two places and speeches doe not agree. The answer is, Paul was carnall, sold vnder sinne, and thereby made a slave to Sathan, euen as a slave that is sold in the market is to his master; but this was onely in respect of the spirit of life which was in himselfe; but now he speaketh of the spirit of life which is in Christ, and applied vnto him by the vniõn betwene Christ and him, and so may boldly say, hee is now no flesh but all spirit, and doth the good he would. To make it plainer, 1. Iob. 5. 6. it is laid, that Christ came by blood and water, signifying thereby that as his blood washeth away the guiltinesse of our finnes, so his water washeth away the filthinesse of our sinnes; and that as his blood doth iustifie vs in heaven, so his water doth sanctifie vs heere on earth; with which water of his, because it answereth to the spirit of life which is in vs, we had neede daily to be washed; for as the skinne cleaueth fast to the flesh, and the flesh to the bones, so doth sin to our corrupt nature, that we haue need continually to be cleansed by the holy Ghost, which is the spirit of life of Christ in vs. And this is that water spoken of, Iob. 3. 5. Except a man be borne of water and of the spirit he cannot be saued; meaning thereby our regeneration: and so Iob. 13. 10. where Christ alluding to them, that comming out of Bathes had neede wash their lower parts because the filthinesse descendeth to the feet, perswadeth vs thereby to a daily increafe in a sanctified course, because some corruption will hang at least at our fingers end, according to that, Iob 9. 30. 31. If I wash my selfe with snow water and make my hands most cleane, yet my owne clothes shall make me filthy; so as though wee haue the spirit of God in vs, yet our best actions are sinfull; for as it is laid Esa. 64. 6. our righteousness is as fil by clouts, the originall signifieth, such clouts as come from children newly borne, or such as Surgians vse to make cleane vlcers, or such as beggers finde vpon dung-hils to patch their ragged cloakes withall, or such as are not once to be named, as the Ancient writers of the Iewes doe make mention; to whom this was chiefly spoken, the Prophet in that place alluding to the manner of purifying in the ceremoniall law. For we reade Leuit.

15. 19. that vncleane things were separated both from the seruice of God, and from the vſe of man, which being then but ceremoniall, is really and morally in vs. for we are vile and polluted both in bodie and ſoule; and thereby vnfit for Gods ſeruice, and not worthy the ſociety one of another, for feare of infecting each other, and yet theſe are our beſt actions, as Eſay ſpeaketh, meaning thereby both the greatnelle of the number of them, and the greatnelle of the excellency of them, for they are all accuſed before God, I meane in reſpect of the ſpirit of Chriſt, which is in vs, not that the ſpirit cauſeth this vncleaneneſſe, but through the luſt, ſenſuality, and corruption of our natures, euen as faire water from a cleere fountain is made filthy by running thorow vnclean channels, the cauſe wherof is that concupiſcence which through the ſerpents temptation entred into our firſt parents when they tranſgreſſed, this being the firſt ſinne that liueth, and the laſt ſinne that dieth, euen as the heart is in the body of a man, and this luſt cauſeth and forceth vs to commit the euil we would not, and to omit the good we would; and if it cannot preuaile this way with vs, then it will entice vs partly to commit the euil, and partly to omit the good by the conſent of the heart onely; and if it faile in this, it will cauſe ſuch a croſſing and corrupt thought to come in the way to poiſon the good we do, that though we do it, yet it deſerueth death, becauſe wee are commanded to loue God with all our thoughts, which if any one be ranging we doe not. This is vrged the more that we may ſee and acknowledge how far our beſt actions which are in higheſt price and eſtimation with vs, and which runne from the cleereſt part of the wel-head, are from deſeruing any thing; which we may yet ſee as in a glaſſe more plainely, Gen. 6. 5. where it is ſaid concerning the naturall man; that the mould of the deſires of the thoughts of a mans heart are euill, only euill, and euill euery day, and for euer, which may bee ſpoken of the beſt childe of God, leauing out but this word (onely). For the ſpirit of Chriſt which is in vs begetteth ſome good thoughts, and bringeth forth ſome good fruits that they are not (onely) euill, though in reſpect of our corruption and that they taſte of the vnſauory ſaltneſſe of our nature they may be ſaid to be nothing but euill, for in the choiſeſt

child of God there is the seed of the sin against the holy Ghost, & of apostasie & of all sins, but that by the working of the spirit they are so choked and weakened, as they are not able to breake forth, hobeit by the remainder of sin abiding in vs, all our actions are so infected & poisoned as they are lothsome in the sight of God ; which must teach vs to humble our selues before him, & to craue pardon euen for our prayers which are polluted with many by-thoughts, & then wil he, as Mal. 3. 17. spare vs as a man spareth his sonne that serueth him, for the Lord regardeth rather the good affection, than the good action, the holy fountaine from whence it procedeth, rather then the effects of the fountain that it runneth thorow, some corrupt veine of this earth and flesh of ours, and this is in respect the spirit of life of Christ is in vs. But now if we speake of the spirit of life, which is in Christ himselfe, then we may boldly say we are all spirit and not flesh, that Christ by his satisfaction hath taken away the accusation can come against vs for any sinne, and the imperfection can be laide against vs for any action, for all we doe is accepted of God in him, and we can be charged with nothing, for Christ maketh intercession for vs, and as Eph. 2. 1. God in Christ hath quickned vs that were dead in sinnes, and as Heb. 2. 9. Christ hath tasted death for all men. So as if we speak of the spirit of life which is in Christs person we may well conclude wee are freed from the law of sin and of death.

Secondly, obserue hence that they that will take comfort by the life of Christ, must be able to apply the power of his death to the crucifying not onely in generall, but euen of euery particular sinne in them, as the Apostle saith heere, he was freed from the law of sinne : for Christs body was not onely crucified for our sinnes (our sinnes being the very cause of his crucifying) but hee was also crucified to sinne, that is, to crucifie and kill sinne in vs which are his members, so that except we finde the spirit of God daily working and striking at the roote of sinne to weaken it, and at the branch of sinne to cut it off at the first blossome, we cannot conclude he was crucified for sinne, because he is not crucified to sinne in vs, so as we must measure the life of Christ in himselfe no further to pertaine to vs then we finde the power of sinne abated abated in vs. And therefore if we walke after the Prince that ruleth in the aire, and that worketh in the children of disobedience, and haue our conuerſation in the luſts of the fleſh, then hath not the life of Chriſt freed vs from the law of ſinne, and then are we in the ſtate of condemnation, if God be not rich in mercy to vs heereafter. For howſoeuer the Lord is contented ſo farre to diſpence with the rigour of his iuſtice, as to ſuffer the Sunne to ſhine both vpon the iuſt and vniuſt, yet doth the Sonne of righteousneſſe neuer ariſe vpon any that is holden with the cords of his owne ſinne, making as Salomon ſaith, Proverbs 6. 12. 13. a ſigne with his eies, ſignifying with his feet, and inſtructing with his fingers, to haue thoſe leude things which lurke in his heart, countenanced and performed both by himſelfe and others by his enticement. Let vs therefore labour to haue our ſpirits raiſed vp from the dead in the body of Chriſt, or through the life of Chriſt, till when we are not freed from the law of death; for ſo long as we remaine naturall men, we are dead both in the puniſhment of ſinne, and alſo in the pollution of ſinne; of the latter we taſte in this life, as 2. Cor. 5. 15. If one be dead for all, then were we all dead. The other is reſerued for the life to come, and is called, Reue. 20. 14. the ſecond death, when carnall and fleſhly minded men ſhall be caſt into the lake of fire. We muſt know then, that vntill the ſpirit hath raiſed vs from the dead, we are but dead men though we ſeeme to liue; and ſo long as we are thus dead, we are ſeparated from the grace of God, that is, the grace of God is dead in vs, and we are liuing vnto all ſinne, and ſo not freed neither from the law of ſin, nor of death. Our ſpirits then are ſaid to be raiſed from the dead two waies: X Firſt, when it reuiueth and renueth that which is dead in vs: And ſecondly, when it ſlateth and mortifieth that which is quicke in vs; that which is dead in vs is the grace and fauour of God; that which is quicke in vs is ſinne, as concupiſcence, luſt, ſenſuality, and ſuch like: ſo that till this ſpring-time come that the grace of God be ſeene to flower and bud forth in vs, our eſtate is no better then that of the damned ſoules; for as they at the laſt day ſhall be ſeparated for euer from the preſence of God, ſo as long as we remaine carnall and vnſanctified men, we are at this day ſeparated from the

fauour of God, and as the damned in their separation doe liue in torments for euer, being dead in the punishment of sinne so are we carnall men inwardly tormented in conscience for being dead in the pollution of sinne, that is, we commit those sinnes, for which the damned are tormented; and in some respects the damned are better then carnall men, for they can sinne no more, though they gnash their teeth and fret at the iustice of God; whereas the wicked and vniust doe still commit sin, adding sin to sinne, whereby heaping the more dishonour vpon God, they drawe the heauier condemnation vpon themselues.

Further where the Apottle saith, He was freed from the law of sinne, we must not vnderstand it, as if there was any law or commandement to sinne; but, as Rom. 7. 11. that sinne tooke an occasion by the commandement to deceiue vs, and to slay vs, there being a compulsary, and an vnchangeable necessity in vs to sinne, as long as we are holden of the flesh, that will we will we, we cannot but sinne, we being by sin deceiued fīue waies: First, by concupiscence and lust, as was Euab: Secondly, through infidelity: Thirdly, by blindnesse of iudgment: Fourthly, by particular ignorance: And lastly, by the malice of the heart, and if the hart come once to be little worth, as Salomon speaketh, Pro. 10. 20. and as it is in all carnall men, then is the substanti-all law of God, which otherwise in it selfe is holy, iust, and righteous, to such men, but a law of sinne, that is, sinning the more because the law forbiddeth it, and a killing letter, as 2. Cor. 3. 6. First, in respect naturall men are but flesh sold vnder sinne: Secondly, in respect hee reading it readeth his owne damnation; and a seducing letter inticing them therefore to sin because they are restrained from sinne; yea to them, as Rom. 3. 20. it is the power of sinne; and as Rom. 4. 15. it is the law of wrath; and as 2. Cor. 3. 15. it is as a vaile laid ouer their hearts to blinde them; and as 1. Tim. 1. 9. it is said not to be giuen to the righteous, but to the disobedient; and as Peter calleth it, Act. 15. 10. a yoake which neither they nor their forefathers were able to beare: meaning thereby what it is to the carnall man, and what it was then made by the Scribes and Pharisees, who preferred the law before Christ, which being but a schoole-master to bring vs to him, was

by them made a master aboue him & to teach him. So as it is no maruell though to such as would liue by the law without the life which is in Christ, that it proue to them a law of sinne and of death, for by the law shall neuer any bee iustificed, but through faith in the life of Christ must we attaine saluation.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 3.

3. For (that that was impossible to the law in as much as it was weake because of the flesh) God sending his owne sonne, in the similitude of sinfull flesh, and for sinne, condemned sinne in the flesh.

Here the Apostle proceedeth to make the matter formerly deliuered more plaine and easie, wherein obserue two materiall points: First, that he taketh away all the power of the law to saue: Secondly that this power is giuen onely to Christ, who rooke vpon him not the similitude of flesh, but of sinfull flesh, to condemne sinne in the flesh, by whose grace we are only saued, without the workes of the law. For the first obserue two things: first, that it is impossible for any to be saued by fulfilling the Law, because none can exactly and perfectly doe it: secondly, from whence this disabilitie proceedeth, not from any defects in the law, but from our corrupt nature.

For the first of these, the Papists say it is meant that none can be saued by the workes of the ceremoniall Law, & that it is not to be vnderstood of the morall law. Which is most false, as is proued Rom. 3. 20. By the workes of the law shall no flesh be iustificed, for by the law commeth the knowledge of sin. He doth not say by the knowledge of the ceremoniall law: and 2. Cor. 3. 7.

where he calleth the law the ministration of death written with letters and ingrauen in stones, we all knowing there was no law written with the finger of God, and ingrauen in stones but the law of the tenne commandements; and Gal. 3. 21. 22. the Apostle maketh an opposition between the law and the promise; that if life should bee giuen by the law, and by that meanes should iustifie, then should it abolish that iustification promised to Abraham and to his seed by faith, which cannot bee vnderstood but of the morall law, and Rom. 7. 7. He had not knowen sinne but by the law, for he had not knowen lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not lust; and this is the law of the ten commandements.

is the most reason, that cannot be said to lawes;

2. of 1.

Howbeit the question between the Papists and vs, is not whether we performing the precise rule of the law, may challenge eternall life as merit; for there is no question but wee may, the commandement being, as Rom. 7. 10. ordained vnto life, as appeareth, Deut. 5. 33. If you walke in all the commandements of God ye shall liue; and Mark. 10. 17. 18. vpon the question asked how he should possesse eternall life, answer was made by Christ, by keeping the commandements: but the question is, whether any child of God, euen in the highest degree of regeneration, can doe it in that maner and measure as he ought. And this can he not doe, and that for two reasons: First, because of the singular purity of the law: Secondly, because of the extreme impurity of our nature. For the first, consider that the law is proportionable to the law-giuer, which bindeth not onely the hands from petie larce, the tongue from ribauldry, and the life from incontineney, but commandeth the eie, and speaketh to the heart: And in the nine first commandements, whersoever there is an affirmatiue expressed, there is the negatiue implied, and where the negatiue is expressed, there is the affirmatiue implied, that is, where any duty is commanded, there the contrary vice is forbidden, and where the sinne is inhibited, there the contrary duty is required; for if we must not kill our brother, then must we by all meanes seeke to preserue his life; and if his life must be pretious to vs, then must we not hate him, for this is a sinne that will beget murther. But the tenth commandement is the key that is able to discover the cabinet of the heart, this entreth betwene the marrow and the bones, and howsoever we may refraine in action, and may bee staid in affection, yet this striketh dead extending but to the motion, though the heart impugne it; and this is the sharpest corasive to eate forth our proud flesh, when we shall see our selues arraigned but for a thought, which we would haue withstood: and if any man will looke him-
the

 selfe in this glasse, he shall see as foule & filthy an Adam as can be.
 And this was that awakened Paul out of that dead sleepe wher-into he was cast by nature, namely, the knowledge of concupiscence to be sinne, for he knew the action and the resolution of the heart to vncleanness to be sinne aswell by the law of nature as by the law written; but that the thoughts should be hedged in and inclosed so precisely, he did not conceaue before the excellency of the tenth commandement had revealed it to him:
 howbeit, though not to extenuate and lessen any sinne, whereby the maiesty of God is violated & so offended, we must not imagine the thoughts conceaued by a suddaine motion or sight, and quickly suppressed againe to be so sinfull, for the thoughts meant here are those of the heart, which haue an inclination and pronenesse to sinne proceeding from corruption of nature, suffering them to rest with vs for a time, though they bee after pressed downe by the speciall worke of God; and if we could but register the thoughts of this kinde doe passe from vs in one day, we should finde them abominable in Gods sight and onely pardonable in Christ. For though they be hid from men, yet do they appeare before God the searcher of the heart, and shall receaue their reward, which is death, if they be not passed ouer in Christ.
 And though some haue thought that thoughts without the consent of the heart, are not sinfull, yet it is certaine they be so; for Salomon, Pro. 24. 9. saith; The wicked thought of a foole is sinne:
 and so may it likewise bee proued by three speciall arguments;
 First whatsoeuer hindreth the absolute and perfect conformity of the power of the soule to the liuely image of God wherein we were at first created, is sin: but thoughts without consent of the heart doe hinder this our conformity to the image of God, because the thoughts being admitted in, there must needs be excluded

cluded, therefore they are sinfull: Secondly, Adam in his innocency could neuer haue any such by-thoughts being created to the absolute image of God. Since then we haue lost this perfect image by his fall, and haue such thoughts arise in vs, they must needs hinder vs from comming to that perfection againe, wherein he stood at first, while he walked with God in paradise; and therefore they are sinfull. Thirdly, God hath redeemed all the parts both of our body and soule, and therefore we ought to honour him with all parts, and the thoughts are some parts which he hath redeemed; therefore wee must honour him with them: but if any one thought be wandering and ranging out of the way, there wants the honour of that thought to God; therefore they are sinfull: for where it is said in the law, we must honor God with all our heart, with all our minde, with all our soule, Christ Luk. 10. 27. expounds it, we must also loue him with all our thoughts; then so many thoughts as tend not to loue God, must needs be sinfull. Now as concerning (thoughts) there are foure degrees, one more sinfull then another, but the least damnable in the reprobate, pardonable in the elect. The first are,

1. when a man thinketh on some childish toie, or on a thing that is not, which oft commeth into a mans minde by some occasion or other offered to the sense, and represented to the fancie, but soone vanisheth away; although the thing offered to the imagination be not sinfull, yet the very thought of it is sinfull, because it possesseth vs for the time, and being idle and vnprofitable, for that time, be it neuer so short, so much of Gods image was thrust out of vs, & the whole man was not také vp for him as it ought; and therefore, Genes. 6. 5. it is said, all the thoughts of a mans heart are sinfull, and not sinfull, but onely sinfull, and not onely and altogether sinfull, but sinfull every day, and continually: in which place Moses speaketh of the naturall man, therefore the former being the thoughts of nature are in themselues sinfull, &
2. damnable. The second degree are those when a man by a certain pronenesse and readinesse to sinne hath some corrupt thought in his heart, but it is presently suppressed: and this is more sinfull
3. then the other. The third degree is when the heart hath hatched some sinnefull thought and suffereth it to rest with him for a time, time, pausing vpon it, and pleading with himselfe on both sides whether he should cal his heart to consent; and yet at length by the speciall worke of God it perisheth: and these are more sinfull then the other. But the fourth degree are woorst of all, when a man not onely casteth forth a wicked thought, but dandleth it in his brest, and not solliciteth the heart alone, but vpon aduice presseth & importuneth the soule to ioine hand in hand, that they may with greater strength breake foorth into the members: and this is the high way to bring vs to actual sinne.

Now notwithstanding all this, some of the Schoole-men hold these thoughts to be no sinne except the heart step in to consent; defining sinne to be a voluntary thing, done with consent of the heart, and with a resolute purpose to bring it into action against the law and commandement of God; alledging for prooffe of their opinion, Iames 1. 15. where it is said: But euery man is tempted when he is drawen away by his owne concupiscence, and is entised, then when lust hath conceaued, it bringeth foorth sin, and sinne when it is finished bringeth foorth death. But that these thoughts are sinne of themselves without the addition of the heart, is proued by the definition of sinne in the scripture, for it is said, 1. Iohn 3. 4. that the transgression of the law is sinne, then the law commanding continuall purity, and thou hauing a thought whereby God is not honoured, dost therein transgresse the law, and therefore in that thou sinnest. And for the place cited out of Saint Iames, the Apostle there speaketh not of the sinne in the heart betweene God and man, but of the actual sinne betweene man and man, because one man knoweth not the heart of another, as God doth, who searcheth the reines. Howbeit to answer them with their owne place, the Apostle verse 14. speaketh of the original sinne, from whence this actual sinne, which is the monster, doth proceed, he speaking there first of the concupiscence of the heart, for from hence, which is factus peccati, the first birth of sinne, proceedeth somes peccati, the nourishing of all sinne, and out of which lust doth conceiue, and when it is conceiued it must needs bring forth sin, and then sinne when it is finished draweth on death: not meaning heereby that no sinne deserueth death but actual sinne, for all sinnes besides deserue serue the same, as Rom. 6. 23. The wages of sinne is death. So then to cleere the former place, let vs goe by degrees backward: What bringeth forth death? Sinne when it is finished. What is the cause of sinne which is finished? The lust that conceaueth. And what is the cause that lust conceiuet? The concupiscence of the heart. So as all proceedeth from originall sinne, and the rest that branch from this roote are sinnes of sinne; for as a woman entertaining a thought of her desire to strange flesh, sinneth so long as it receaueth entertainment; euen so is it with the thoughts of men, swarue they neuer so little from the seruice of God. Since then the law ouerwhelmeth vs with the full rigour of Gods wrath, by the excellency and purity of it, which bindeth vs his creatures to be like our maker, exacting heerein of vs no more then to be answerable for that we first receiued, not seeking aduantage heerein by increase, but yeelding him onely the same talent of holinesse, honor and obedience wherewithall we were trusted in our creation, and we haue exceeded the impiety of that vnfaithfull seruant condemned in the Gospell, not only not hiding it where we might haue it again, as he did, but corrupting and wasting it, that the Lord cannot now know vs to be his come we haue so defaced his stampe and superscription which he set vpon vs, sending forth in few houres so many legions of vnclean cogitations and polluted actions; what harbour thinke we can we finde vnder this couert of the Lords law to rescue vs from damnation? Nay if we appeale to it for succour in this strictnesse, precisenesse and puritie of it, it will be the first to arrest and draw vs before the seat of iustice, and so much the sooner and the sharper by reason of the second points which hinder vs from this perfection in obedience, which is the extreame impurity of our nature: for such is the frailty of flesh and blood, and we are so farre from being able to performe the law as it is rather a pro- uocation vnto vs to greater sinne, doing it the more eagerly because the law forbiddeth it, euen as the prescript of the Physitian is to the impatient patient who more greedily desireth that would breed him most danger; which appeareth 1. Cor. 15. 56. The law is the strength of sinne; and Rom. 7. 8. Sin did turne the law to an occasion to sinne. To perswade this by naturall reason of contraries, active and passive; we see the fire environed by the cold aire in the winter, so that the operation of the fire cannot passe out by the resistance of the cold, hereupon there is made a reflexion of the heat which is beaten backe by the cold that it will not suffer it to come forth, whereby the heat is doubled by the opposition of the contrary, as experience teacheth vs, the fire scalding more in winter then in sommer; even so is it betweene the law and the heart of man, which is a fire of lust, and the law of God beating it backe into the breast which would faine come forth in action, it goeth into the heart againe and is there more forcibly inflamed then before, whereupon there growes such an enmity as what Gods loves, man hates, and what is highest in estimation with him, is basest in opinion with vs, and our nature taketh occasion to bee more sinfull by the restraint of the Commaundement: and as in diseases men seeke what most hurteth them, as in a plurisie, wine, in a phrensie, to watch, in a lethargie to sleepe, so falleth it out with vs, that what is most wholsome to cure our corruption we refuse, and the oyle that will soonest set it on fire we embrace, which experience can teach vs better than the voyce of an Angell, euery mans conscience being priuy to their seuerall and speciall infirmities. And to illustrate this by the example of the diamond and best Saints of God, Iob. 39. 37. maketh protestation, O Lord I am vile, once, yea twice, haue I spoken, but I will speake no more, for I cannot answer one for a thousand; and Chap. 9. 15. 20. If I were righteous, yet would I not plead with thee, but make supplication to my Iudge, for if I would be perfect he shall iudge me wicked; and David often confelleth his vnworthinesse by entring into the meditation of the law of God, and Esaie 64. 6. saith our best actions are but as a menstrous cloth, the Hebrew word signifieth a filthy clout vsed by the Surgians to take vp the rottenesse of the flesh; and Paul Rom. 7. 23. by his owne confession was a captiue to sinne, which sheweth it impossible to challenge eternall life by the obseruation of the law, and to this end is the song of the Angels in the Renel. 19. 1. which giueth all glory to God and none to men, for our best workes sway nothing in the ballance of desert, nay the grace of Christ maketh not the worke perfect.

perfect, because it is defectiue by concupiscence, and is accepted onely in mercy; for iustice can accept of nothing as meritorious which is not as perfect as Christ himselfe.

Heere then may be demanded why God gaue the law, since there is no maner of proportion betwixt our abilities to performe, and the straitnesse of the law to command, and hee that laieth a condition of impossibility commandeth vnprofitably.

1. This we answer foure waies: First, by our creation we had power to haue done it, and weare onely by our owne disobedience disabled, for Adam in his integrity might haue fulfilled it, and therefore it is no iniustice with God to giue vs this law which we had strength to beare, and haue now made burdensome to our selues being weakened through corruption: for when he that can see perfectly pulleth out his owne eies, who is to be charged with his blindnesse but himselfe? or if he that is rich waiteth his goods with the prodigall sonne, none can be blamed for his poerty but himselfe. Or if he that knoweth by climbing he must fall, will yet clime so high till he fall and hurt himselfe, he can cry out of none for his hurt but himselfe; or if hee that is comelie become mishapen by lewd companie and diet, is anie to bee found fault with for this deformity but himselfe? So who can charge this law to bee become impossible, but our selues? and how came it thus to be, but through our sinne in Adam? and if we had beene in his stead we had done as he did, so as we are the cause of our owne blindnesse, nakednesse, weakenesse & deformity in climbing to the fruit of the forbidden tree, whereby we lost the power and comeliness of Gods image after which we were made: And shall a Prince therefore lose his iust right and power to command, because a company of wicked rebels will not be drawne to obey? God forbid. Secondly, this law thus deliuered, is not simply impossible, because all the elect haue fulfilled it in the person of Christ. Thirdly, it shall not be alwaies impossible in our persons, partly by our obedience to it in this life, and when sinne shall be abolished and our sanctification finished by our absolute performance of it in the life to come. Fourthly, if God had proposed no other end in giuing it, but the obseruing of it in our corruption, then had it indeed

beene impossible, but it was giuen of the Lord for foure ends: first, to be conuincd of our shame and filthinesse by looking into the law as into a mirrour which sheweth vs our infirmity and deformity: secondly, that when heerby we were all shut vp vnder damnation and the conscience conuincd of our Apostasie we might then be stirred vp to seeke remedy in Christ: thirdly, that being brought to Christ we might in deepe meditation behold the excellency of the Lords righteousnesse, that this might be a great prouocation to make vs strue to come as neere the perfection required as may be, the first being before our conuersion, the last after our conuersion to keepe downe the rebellion of our flesh, & to shake off the sluggishnesse of our nature which is most vnapt to enterprise any thing might please God: fourthly, it was giuen for the reprobate that they should absolutely fulfill it or else be damned, for it laieth open their sinnes and the torments of hel ready to seaze vpon them, with a despaire of all grace, the Lord iustly leauijg them in their blood, so as the fire that burneth by the breath of the Lord, beginneth in them in this life, and though they seeme to men to haue quiet consciences, because they sleepe as it were in the top of the mast, yet they haue the flames of Gods wrath, scorching them within; whereas to vs that be elect it laieth before vs our hurt, our debt, our leprosie, our pouerty and our nakednesse that we may runne to Christ to haue our wounds healed, our debt releas'd, our leprosie cleans'd, our nakednes couered with his fine linnen, Rom. 3. 18. and our pouerty enriched with his refined gold and graces: so as we see it was not giuen in vaine, though it be vaine for vs to seeke life in it.

Now for the second point, namely from whence this disability in the law to saue vs doth proceed, and that appeareth in the text to be, through the weakenesse that is in our flesh, and not through any imperfection in the law. Oh, say the Papists, but there is no man so weake but hath some strength, neither is there such weakenesse in the law, but it hath some strength to saue. We answer by Scripture, 1. Cor. 15. 42. The body is sowne in weaknesse; where the Apostle speaketh of a dead man in whom is no strength, no more is there in the law: besides the word signifieth such a weak-

nesse as is vtterly deprived of all strength, so as the reason why the law is thus disabled, is through the deadnesse that is in the flesh of man, whether we speake of a meere naturall man, or of a regenerate man, as long as there is flesh in him. And in this respect the world is said to be dead three manner of waies though they know the law: for first, some doe know their sinnes by the knowledge of the law, and yet are they dead because they know onely the law and not the true vse of it: secondly, some by the law, do know only their sinnes, which bringeth them to despaire and they be miserable dead men: Thirdly, some by the knowledge of the law doe know their sinnes and also grace for them in Christ, and yet said to be dead, as Paul Rom. 7. 13. confesseth himselfe to bee in respect of the greatnesse of his sinne which wrought death in him by that which was good, meaning the law. Make it plainer by similitudes: when the sunne shineth the blind cannot behold it, the fault is not in the sunne, but for want of sight in the party; so when it thundereth, the man that is deafe cannot heare it, which is no defect in the thunder, but through his defect of hearing; so if the raine fall on the rocke it moistneth it nothing at all, neither softneth it, and this is onely through the hardnesse of the rocke: euen so fareth it betwixt the law and vs, for that the law is deprived of the power to saue, is not for any defect in it selfe, for it is holy, perfect, righteous, iust, heavenly, spirituall, eternall, but the fault is in our flesh, for we are all weake, blind, deafe, stony-hearted, not able to receaue any impression of obedience at all. Againe the scripture speaketh of the law two maner of waies: First, either as giuen by the hand of God, wrot with his finger in tables of stone which is the ten commandements. Secondly, or else it speaketh of that is proper to the law, that is of the effects of the law. The first, which is the ten commandements, it is double: For it commandeth the good and forbiddeth the euill; for the second the effects are also double, for it rewardeth for the good, and condemneth for the euill. So as the law hath these foure things, it commandeth, and forbiddeth, it rewardeth, and condemneth: he then that is not able to fulfill the law is a dead man: I speake in respect of the law onlie, and not of Christ, for Christ himselfe said; speaking to one that that sought life by his workes; If thou wilt have life euellisting keepe the commandements, which is not possible for man to doe, no more is it possible for the law to saue; yea it is not onely vnable to doe this, but by reason of the law we are made more sinfull; for as Rom. 3. 20. By the law commeth the knowledge of sinne; and chap. 4. 15. The law causeth wrath: and 1st Cor. 15. 56. The strength of sinne is the law. So as first it conuinceth vs of the good we do, our hearts being of themselves rotten, and the root being vnfound, so must the tree be; the body being corrupt, so must the members be; and the fountaine being vnclean, so must the streames be. Secondly, it conuinceth vs for not doing good; & in one thing is straiter then all the lawes of nations, condemning our straying thoughts, and chargeth vs not simply of sin and transgression, but of voluntary treason and rebellion against our God: And thirdly, it dischargeth vpon vs not onely all the curses of this life from our conception to our death, but also of damnation in the life to come, so as in respect of the law onely we haue already the sentence of death pronounced against vs, and doe eate, talke, buy, sell and such like but as prisoners repriued and staid a while from execution. And this is the quality and condition of the tenne commandements, in se. & per se. in it selfe, and by it selfe, separate from all other things; for I speake not of the whole doctrine of the law, as it was taught by Moses, for that as Dauid saith, Psal. 119. is perfect and conuerteth the soule and giueth wisdom to the simple, and teacheth vs saith to lay hold on Christ, when wee are ready to sinke in our selues, and draweth vs to repentance by commanding the good and forbidding the euill, by rewarding the good, and threatening the euill. But the law as it is a bare letter bidding vs doe such a thing, and giuing vs no strength to performe it, losing it strength by the strength of our corruption, sheweth in what a desperate case they stand that depend vpon the Law for their saluation, for weighing our selues in this ballance we shall be lighter then the shickles of the sanctuary; if we looke in this glasse we shall be wretched and deformed; and trying our selues by this touch-stone, we shall be no gold burdresse.

To make this plainet, and that our blood may bee vpon our own:

owne hands and the law remaine vnblameable, we must vnderstand there are two sorts of lawes. The one is the substantiall and naturall law, the other is an accidentall or occasionall law, mentioned by this Apostle, Rom. 7. 8. 9. where we must obserue, that sinne receaued no occasion from the law, for then occasion had beene giuen, but tooke an occasion not of the law, but by the law, that is, because the law forbiddeth, therefore we will doe it. Now betweene a cause and occasion there is great difference: The substantiall law of God, which is the morall law of the tenne commandements, hath two parts, it forbiddeth impiety and vncleanesse, and commandeth sanctification and holinesse; but the law occasionall, proceedeth out of the first, which is substantiall; for if the law had not said, Thou shalt not lust, thou wouldst not do it; but being by the law restrained, thou art in thine owne corruption prouoked vnto that sinne: so that heere are two flat contrarieties met together, the law and our nature, the one commanding, the other rebelling, the one forbidding, the other for that cause embracing; so as but for the law our sinne would not so much appeare: for example, wee are able to eate more in winter then in sommer, by reason in winter there meeteth two contraries, the outward cold, and inward heat, which being driuen into the body encreaseth the appetite; which is not so in sommer, for then rather heat meeteth with heat, which abateth the stomacke: euen so the Lord hath set his law as a bull-worke to keepe in sin that it breake not forth of the breast: Now, when sinne findeth such resistance as it cannot rush through this law, then it reboundeth backe againe into our bosome, and there kindleth a greater fire of concupiscence then it did before; yet is the law holy, pure, righteous, heavenly and spirituall, the rule of obedience and of a sanctified life; but our nature is impure, vnrighteous, corrupt, and from the earth earthlie, the law proceeding from God, and our nature from the diuell, who powreth this poison into our hearts; for euen the law of nature, which was the booke for all men, and whereby the eternall power of the God-head was discerned that hee might be glorified, we see how, Rom. 1. 20. he was thereby dishonored, they turning the glory of the incorruptible God, to the similitude.

tude of a corruptible man, which proceeded onely from their vaine thoughts and foolish hearts full of darknesse; but their end was reprobation : so for the law written; where it pareth off the dead flesh, that we may see how sorely we are smitten by sinne, that by this meanes we might run to Christ, who is a ready Physician skilfull and pitifull in healing all wounds, we still keepe at home and run backe into our selues, as if thereby we could be cured, where in truth our disease by this negligence is the more increased, nothing being able to heale but the bloud of the son of God: so for the Gospell, whose end is to make peace between God and man, and betweene man and man, shewing there is but one God, one spirit & one faith, therby we but one mans childre, euen Gods, which should be the power of saluation to vs, and the bond of loue among vs, through the malice of sathan and the profanenesse of our mindes we make a fauour of death, and as it were a trumpet of debate and sedition to consume each other; yea Ioh. 6. 66. we see how diuers of Christs disciples went backe from him when hee preached a long sermon touching the sacrament of the supper which is a badge of our friendship with God & with our brethren, which proceeded not from the sacrament, but from their rebellion, that their sinne might bee made more sinfull; yea such contagion is there in our nature, as wee make Christ himselfe the authour and finisher of our hope, to bee our condemnation, a stone to stumble at, and a rocke of offence, 1. Pe. 2. 8. the cause not being in him who is the light of the world, but in our selues, making him an occasion of our darkenesse, Iohn 3. 19. which by this light shall be made in the end farre more sinfull and damnable. Since then the power of our corruption is so forcible, as it is able to peruert all the meanes ordained for our saluation, as to make the commandement of God in his law, the promises of God in the Gospell, the seals of God in his sacraments, and the loue of God in his sonne, to be vaine and of no value, this must teach vs to humble our selues in the lowest degree, in a hatred and detestation of our flesh and sinfull faculties of our soule, which are as the poisoned soile, that either casts vs, or corrupts all the seeds of fruitfulness or wholsomenes, that are thrown into it; whereas our sin being disclosed both by the law and Gospell, it is the more to be hated and abhorred, because it turneth the edge and benefit of both these to our destruction. For what could the Lord doe more to preserve our first parents in their innocency than to set as it were a double fence about his commandement, forbidding not onely the eating of the fruit, but the touching of it, binding the hands that they should not convey it to the mouth? and yet more hath he done for vs, taking vs out of the fire by casting as it were his Sonne in the fire; though as if we had neuer bene scorched, or else being past tence we carrie still the coles in our bosome, and will not have them quenched with the water of the spirit, to newnesse of life: But let vs not be so wilfull & perterse, so strongheaded and stiffnecked as not to be turned into the way by the rod of the law; but having spent the portion of the flesh, and wasted the lusts thereof, let vs grow in loue with our fathers house; for what fruit can we haue in those things whereof we shall be ashamed, or which at length shall bring shame on vs? Let ys therefore shake off the sinnes we haue delighted in, and then haue we suffered in the flesh, and then hath Christ suffered in the flesh for vs; which if he haue, then is our flesh destroyed in vs; which if it be, then shall we cease from sinne; which if we doe, then shall we liue after the will of God; though not in perfection, yet reformable to the perfection of his will; and then to vs that are sanctified shall not the law be grieuous nor burdensome as Saint John saith, 1. John. 5. 3. but it shall reioice the heart, giuing light to the eyes, and sweetnesse to the taste, as David saith, Psal 119. 7. 8. 9. 10. God sending his Sonne, &c. This is the second generall part spoken of at first, namely, that what was impossible to the law is made possible in Christ; wherein obserue foure things: First, the person which sendeth: Secondly, the person which is sent: Thirdly, the manner how he is sent: Fourthly, the end of his sending: For the first, which is God, consider the cause mooued him to this mercy, not any thing in vs, but his owne loue and compassion towards vs, as it is expressed, Iob. 31. 16. God so loued the world that he sent his sonne; and Exek. 16. 3. 4. It is said concerning the Church of God, that at the beginning she was borne

and begotten of the heathen, her father an Amorite, her mother an Hittite, at the day of her birth shee had no mid-wife, neither was shee washed but remained filthy, shee had not so much as a swaddling clout to couer her, neither did any that passed by pitie her, but shee was cast out in the open field, lay polluted in her blood & ready euery houre to perish. In which words the meaning of the holy Ghost is to set forth our vnworthinesse, our shame, and our nakednesse. If now an honorable person shall passe by, and open his compassion on her, and bring her home, and spread his owne skirts ouer her, feed her at his owne table, make her beautifull, and aduance her to great honour, whereby she that was despised comes to be beloued of all nations, and yet she should againe fall to her pollution and become a common strumpet; if notwithstanding this vnthankfulnesse and apostasie, he should draw her home againe, and renue his former fauours towards her, no reason could be giuen of this but the free mercy of him that did it: euen so hath God like an honorable person full of all power and riches, strength and maiesty, mercy & compassion seene vs polluted in our blood before our birth, borne of corrupt parents, brought forth into a more corrupted place, which is this world; yet hath he said, we shall liue, he hath caused vs to bud as the flower of the field, yea our time hath bene as the time of loue, hee hath spread the skirts of his protection ouer vs, entred a couenant with vs, and we are become his: now for vs to enquire the cause of this, we can finde none, but his willing loue to haue it so; but let vs striue by the fruits of our liues to honor him, and with the calues of our lippes to praise him that hath thus aduanced his mercy on vs, and let vs not doe the worke of a presumptuous whore either in giuing rewards to the flesh, or taking rewards of the flesh, to fulfill the luits thereof, lest the Lord diminish our ordinary, as Ezek. 16. 27. and feed vs with the blood of wrath and ialousie.

Againe heere note, that the Lord neuer worketh but when it is impossible and the cure desperate in the eies of men; for when the Law could not saue vs, then rather than hee would want a people and lose the glory of his mercy hee sent his sonne to saue vs. The woman, Mar. 5. 25. that had her issue of blood twelue yeeres, and had spent all her substance among Physicians and auailed not : when man could not heale her then Christ did it ; when he that had beene diseased 38. yeeres and had line long at the poole of Bethesda , Ioh. 5. 6. and could get none to helpe him in when the water was troubled, then did Christ bid him take vp his bed and walke : when, Ioh. 11. 39. 42. Lazarus had been in the graue foure daies , that it was impossible for man to restore life, yea scarce possible to abide his smell , then Christ by the speaking of a word could doe it : when, Luk. 15. 20. the prodigall sonne had wasted all and was reiected of all, then the father receaueth him home againe : when Jonas was , Jonah 2. 2. in the whales belly, and, as the text saith, in the belly of hell, that hee thought himselfe cast out of Gods sight , then did the Lord bring vp his life from the pit and deliuered him : when Daniel was put into the Lions den , Dan. 6. 22. to be made a pray for beatts , then the Lord shewed his power by stopping of the Lions mouthes that they hurt him not : when the three children, Dan. 3. 23. were cast into the fornace seuen times hotter then it was wont to bee, because they would not consent to idolatry, then did the Lord restrain the nature of the flames, that it rather cooled then scorched them : when Dauid, 1. Sam. 23. 26. was compassed on euery side by Saul and his company that he had no way to escape , then God sent a messenger to the King to tell him of a power comming against himselfe, whereby they left persuing him : when the Iisralites had the red Sea before them, the mountaines on each side them, and the Egyptians behind them , Exod. 14. 21. then did the Lord by a meanes, to man impossible, prouide for their safety. The vse whereof is to our exceeding comfort, that if we be closely imprisoned the Angell can vnloose vs, when all doe forsake vs then will the Lord gather vs vp, Psal. 27. 10. If we bee ready with Peter to sinke into the sea, if we cry but Lord saue vs, we shall be safe : if we be as dead as the dry bones , Ezek. 37. 4. the Lord can and will put life into vs : the slavery that the Pharaohs of the world can put vs to, nor the bondage they can hold vs in , is nothing to the Lord, with whom nothing is impossible ; which if we could but once beleeue we would be lifted vp in what misery soeuer ; for the Lord is able to bring vs from hell it selfe : so as we are the cause of our owne miseries , and of our discomforts in our miseries , because we are so incredulous ; therefore let vs pray to the Lord to increase our faith that wee may neuer distrust in his power : for that hee worketh not till it bee impossible , hee is moued thereto by our pride , lest if he should doe it by meanes , wee might attribute it to the second causes , and not to his prouidence , and so rob him of his glory : and on the other side , if wee haue no meanes , then we distrust his prouidence , and so despaire as men without God in the world , whereas our affiance in him should driue out all trembling distrust whatsoever , for hee that hath thus provided for our soules when they were mouldring away in our sinnes , how can we feare , but our bodies , which with the soule make the whole man , shall bee as deare and pretious to him also ?

For the second , which is the person sent , it is the sonne of God , wherein our vnworthinesse appeareth the more , that vnlesse Christ had bene sent , wee had not bene saued ; and this wil the more appeare by considering what we are without Christ , euen heires of condemnation , subiect to euerlasting curse : and if we would haue a description of our selues without Christ ; before we were borne we deserued that the mid-wiues should teare vs and rend vs out of our mothers wombe , and cast vs not into water , as Pharaohs mid-wiues should haue done to the Israelites , Exod. 1. 17. but into the fire which might in some sort prefigure the heat in hell ; and that the first swathing-band should haue bene the chaines of darkenesse to bind vs fast to the diuell ; and that the first fire to warme vs at should haue bene that that burneth by the breath of the Lord ; and that the first milke to cherish vs should haue bene poison to choke vs ; and that the first garment to cloath vs with , should haue bene the wrath and vengeance of God ; for we are so deformed in our conception as the Lord cannot discern that euer any part of our image came from heauen , so polluted in our liues , as if the Diuell were let loose among vs , yea for our sakes all the creatures both in heauen and earth are accursed (except the Angels elect ; and the diuell who was accursed from the beginning) and that ceremoniall leprosie in the law, Leuit. 15. prefigureth, and representeth the morall vncleanness and leprosie of our soules; for in the law the chaire he sat on, the bed he lay on, the basen he washt in was vnclean, the meat he eat, yea the company he kept was so also: now in regard hereof God sent his sonne to make that possible, which was in vs impossible, to make his worth answer our vnworthinesse, that since his eie could not indure the sight of our vncleanness, it might delight in the beholding of his holinesse; and that the hand that could not bee staid from being auenged on vs, might through the obedience of his sonne be tied and fast bound from striking vs; and that the viols of vengeance which were opened to bee powred forth on vs, might through the pleasure he tooke in his sonne be stopt and diuerted from vs. Secondly, it was necessary Christ should be sent, for our sinnes being against the maiety of an infinit God, deserue iustice of the same nature, which iustice must haue either infinite satisfaction, or infinit punishment; therefore God being both infinitely iust, and infinitely mercifull, there must be presented to him one of the same nature, who by being infinite, may reconcile both these; if we should present our selues, besides that we are but finit, we must needes taste of iustice, for what haue we but figge-leaves to couer our shame? If we could offer the Angels for our attonemet, it were too low a price, for they are in themselues finite, being at the first created, and for this their creation they stand indebted to the Lord; and the satisfaction they can giue is but their obedience, which is their duty; therefore the price of reconciliation must bee the Sonne of God, who is infinite aswell as God himselfe, equall with him in maiety, in power, and in purity, and he hath infinitely satisfied his infinite iustice, and ioyned him in infinite mercy to vs, that as David saith, Psal. 32. 10. we are now compassed about with mercy, and we know whatsoever compasseth a man, there is nothing can come vnto him, but it must first come through that doth to compass him; so as wee being through Christ compassed about with the Lords mercy there can no sorrowes come neere vs, but either mercy will keepe them out, or if they come in, they must come through mercy, and proceed from mercy, and not from iustice nor displeasure.

For the third, in what manner he was sent : In the similitude of sinnefull flesh. Our of which learne, that God could not be satisfied for sinnefull flesh but by flesh; not by the similitude of flesh, but of sinnefull flesh; wherein we are to beleue, that Christ is the naturall sonne of God, and the sonne of Dauid, but not naturall, for he was not begotten of man, his seed being vncleane, but he was conceived of the holy ghost, and so became man like vnto vs, sinne excepted; therefore it is heere said, in the similitude of sinnefull flesh, not in sinnefull flesh; and in this similitude he was both in the sight of men, and of God : in the sight of men, for all the while he was on earth, he was seene to be subiect to the miseries of sinnefull flesh, both in his life and death; to hunger, for he was oft so; to pouerty, for he had not whereon to lay his head; to persecution, for he fled and withdrew himselfe from much violence intended against him; to grieffe, for he wept and sighed for the death of Lazarus, and the destruction of Hiernusalem; to slanders, for they vpbraided him that he wrought by the power of the diuel; to temptations, for he was carried by the Spirit into the desert for that purpose; to accusation by false witnesses to colour the sentence of death against him; to scourgings, to scoffings, to reuilings, to the crosse, to death it selfe; all which was seene to men, by some that griued at it, by most that iested and reioyced at it. He was alio seene in this similitude by God himselfe, for though he was deliuered and tossed as it were from pillar to post, from Annis to Caiaphas, from Caiaphas to Pilate, from Pilate to the Souldiers, from the Souldiers to the Citie, from the city to the Iudgement seat, from thence to the inferiour officers to be beaten with reeds, & from thence to the gibbet; & though all cried by the perswasion of the high priests, Crucifie him, doubling it in the aire with a most damnable echo; yet was all this done as Peter saith, Act. 2. 23. by the determinate counsell of God, the heavens hauing decreed that the earth should open as it were to swallow him, because he represented our persons more liuelie then Iacob did the person of Esau, Gen. 27. 21. so as for the time he was heauily crushed with the weight of Gods indignation, which appeared by the conflict he had with the wrath of God, sweating droppes of blood, & by the basenesse & dejection

he felt in himselfe, crying out that hee was forsaken; all which doth proue he was in the similitude of sinnefull flesh in the sight of his father, and that it was necessary it should be so, being man to satisfie for man, and God to get the conquest of death, hell and condemnation.

For the fourth, which is the purpose he was sent for: It was to abolish sinne, and to condemne sinne in the flesh, speaking metaphorically or in a borrowed speech; meaning heereby that there was great pleading in heauen before the seat of God betweene Christ and the diuell, the seed of the woman and the serpent, the diuell challenging of vs to be his: first because in our first parents we gaue more faith & credit to him then to God; for when God had wrapt vp condemnation in the forbidden fruit, we thought it to be the hidden treasure of diuine knowledge; when he had sweetned his inhibition of this one tree, with the free vse and liberty of all the rest, as if we should stauie for meat, our appetite must be enflamed to this aboue the rest; and when he had enioyned a law vpon our fingers, as not to touch it, then doe we through the strength of suggestion prefix our eies on no other marke then to gaze on it, thereby to insnare our hands to snatch at it: Secondly, whereas Adam had his birth and creation in innocency, which was but a particular allegation for him, yet we that are his posterity haue our beginning from corruption, as if in our generation we vowed a course of vncleanesse, and doe performe this vow by plunging the whole man into the lake as it were of impiety, and therefore in our liues resembling his likenesse by walking in the workes of darkenesse he impudently would haue faced out the matter as if heauen had beene but the hall of iustice, fit for the maiesty of God to sit there, and not for vs to abide there longer then while sentence is in giuing: But when Christ against this had truly alleaged the eternity of his generation in respect of his God-head, the cleanness of his conception in respect of his man-hood, how in this person of ours he was euer sanctified, in this flesh of ours had vanquished the fierce temptations of the diuell; and how we in our owne persons by the water of the holy ghost are daily washed; when by this hard pleading of Christ on our side, we were by the sentence of

God vnshakled, as prisoners vniustly detained, and had our absolution written in our foreheads that the damned might see it to their discomfort; then the sonne of God hauing by this his trauell opened the insearchable riches of his fathers mercy toward vs, he condemned sinne in this flesh, and purged as it were euery veine of the hidden filthinesse lay in it, and made vs members of his body. So as from hence learne to measure the benefit thou hast by Christ, that he is no further sent to thee then he hath destroied sinne in thee; for if thou settest vp a seat for profane-nesse in thy heart, sowing thy fruit to the flesh and liuing to thy selfe, then, as 2. Cor. 5. 15. Christ died not for thee, and he was sent to die that by his death thou mightest liue to him; beware therefore thou doest not examine thy selfe too slightly in this matter, for it was easier for the Lord to create a new heaven and a new earth, then to raise thee from the dead, and to abolish sinne in thee, which kept thee vnder the dominion of death, hee hauing no resistance in the one, and in the other hauing the rebellion of thy nature to hinder him; so as thou must not measure the death of sinne in thee by the auoiding of grosse sinnes, which the sunne hates to shine vpon, but euen by thy practise and delight in smaller sinnes, for if these doe keepe their course in running priuatly through thy life, as the bloud doth in runnig secretly through thy veins, it keepes out the spirit which should raise thee from the old Adam to the new, from rebellion to obedience, from darknesse to light, from hell to heauen. Striue therefore as in thy ignorance to please the flesh, so by thy knowledge to content the spirit, that as pride pleased the flesh, so humble-nesse of heart may please the spirit, and that for the assurance of Christ to be thine, thou maist doe euery thing contrary to that thou didest before, after the example of Domitian
 the Emperour, who was answered if hee would gouerne vprightly, he must doe contrary to that the gouernours had done before who ruled with crueltie and tyrannie.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 4.

4. That that righteousnesse of the law might be fulfilled in vs, which walke not after the flesh but after the spirit.

His verse hath reference to that which went before, amplifying the reason why God sent his sonne in the similitude of sinnefull flesh; that the righteousnesse of the law might be fulfilled in vs; and standeth on two parts: First, by whom: Secondly, for whom this righteousnesse was fulfilled.

From hence obserue that there be two kinds of righteousness: first, a righteousness whereby God doth iustifie: secondly, a righteousness whereby man would iustifie himselfe: The first is so called in two respects: First, because it proceedeth from God: Secondly, because it is in God, and not in vs; and this appeareth by opposition of the contrary, 2. Cor. 5. 21. Christ was made sinne for vs, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him; where that sinne, and this righteousness are opposed, that as there dwelt no uncleannesse in his flesh, but our corruption was imputed vnto him because he appeared in our likeness, so is there no righteousness in vs, but that of Christ is imputed vnto vs, we being made one flesh and one spirit with him. Therefore erroneous is that of the Papists, that say, this iustifying righteousness is not absolutely of God, but partly of nature and the faculty of free will, and partly of grace concurring with free will. Again, the second, they deny that it is onely in God, for Gods righteousness, say they, is that wherewith he indueth them that shall be saued at the moment of their regeneration, but after is abiding in them, called (his) because at first he doth iustifie the wicked, but after it is mans, put and infused into him as a quality

by God, which is meere contrary to this place that we must seeke to be righteous in Christ onely, because he onely hath fulfilled the righteousness of the law; and this was the end why Christ was sent, namely to supply our wants, and was performed by him onely by the spirit of life which was in himselfe: for by the spirit of life of Christ which is in vs, it cannot be: For first, vnlesse wee bee able to doe it as exactly as Adam in his integrity before concupiscence entred into his heart, wee cannot doe it as wee should; and this none can doe but Christ; therefore in our owne persons we are damned: Secondly if we could attaine to the perfection of Adam, yet is our case in our selues desperate, because it sufficeth not that we now fulfill it, but wee must make vp that breach, and cure vp that wound was made at first by the sinne of Adam, else is the law in the strictnesse of it vn-satisfied; and this no flesh can doe, but the flesh of the sonne of God; howbeit hee by the spirit of sanctification hath made vs a holy people set at liberty in him, and as highly in Gods fauour as euer Adam was: For first he hath absolutely performed it: Secondly, he hath infinitely satisfied for our breach of it: And thirdly he hath mercifully washed away the filth of our sins by the water come forth of his side, which is his spirit.

We must therefore beware our iudgements be not corrupted with this error of the Papists, to thinke we are iustified partly by workes, and partly by grace; for we are saved by grace onely, and without workes, for who can tell when he hath wrought well that he deserueth saluation? nay looke Mark. 10. 17. and we shall see one through the hypocrisie of his heart bragge he had from his youth obserued the whole law, and yet asked what he should doe more to obtaine eternall life; so as no man can tell when he hath done enough: besides that, when all is done to the vttermost, euen then are wee but vnprofitable seruants; for the most righteous in his workes doth either sinne in the matter, or in the measure and manner, or in the end; or in all three, and therefore he that laboureth to build a tower with his workes to clime to heauen, buildeth Babel to his owne confusion. And if thy saluation should be thus diuided betweene the workes of thy hands, and the workes of Christs flesh, then makest thou Christ but in part part mercifull, and in part a Saviour, who is altogether mercifull, and a perfect saviour, there being no name vnder heauen but his by which we can be saued, as the scripture speaketh, he being the scape goate mentioned Leuit 16. that carried our sinnes into the wilderness, for which otherwise we had bene slaine, if the wrath of God by that meanes had not bene staid; for there is not so much as a weake disposition in vs to doe good which may be made sufficient by grace as the Papiſts would perswade vs, but our naturall will is not onely weake to doe good, but willing to commit all kind of sinne, needing not onely furtherance but alteration and change, not in substance, but in qualities and corruption; for as Jeremy saith cap. 10. 23. The way of man is not in himselfe, neither is it in man to walke and to direct his steps; and Ezek. 36. 26. A new heart (saith the Lord) will I giue you &c: the old heart in a man being no more able to receiue goodnesse then a stone is to receaue softnes. Nay we say first that God offereth not grace generally to all men, but to such onely as shall be saued: and whereas they leaue this grace in a suspension, in saying it lieth in our willes to receaue it or not; we say, naturally we haue no such free-will to chuse good or euill. True it is our will hath this freedome, of two sinnes to chuse the lesse, as some chuse to be couetous, some to be idolaters, some to be vsurers, some to be flatterers, some to be Atheists: but to haue the choice of good or euill is not in our wils, for that liberty was onely in mans integrity, and taken from vs when Euah tooke of the fruit of the forbidden tree: so that al the power of all the creatures of heauen & earth is not able to cause the wil to like of that which is good, nor keepe it from that sin wherto it resolutely inclineth. But now if we regard the will as it is changed, and partly renewed to the will of Christ, yet for all that it hath not any such freedome as to chuse betwixt good & euill; for this belongs not to the nature of the will, otherwise the Angels in heauen should hang in the same suspension with vs, whereas we know they doe absolutely the will of God in heauen, as we pray we may on earth; & so with as much of our wils as is renewed wee do the will of God willinglie without any such free election; & this is wholly wrought by God, as Pbil. 2. 13. It is he that worketh both the will & the deed, and Ioh.

6.37. All that the father giueth me shall come vnto me: he doth not say, shall come if they will:& Ezek. 36.26.the Lord doth not say,this will I do if yee wil,but speaketh absolutely & powerfully, A new hart will I giue you,& I will take away the stony hart: For howsoeuer it is meet Adam should haue this free election being made a perfect resemblance of the image of God, yet is it not meet for vs in this second creation, lest heereby we should make the death of Christ of no effect, neither his grace nor spirit; for if we had it,then should we fall from Christ, because of that flesh & infirmity that is in vs; & therefore as the Lord doth begin with vs by his spirit to conuert vs, without any thing in vs to further it, but altogether to withstand it, so doth he proceed with vs by his spirit,and end with vs by his spirit, that he may be all in all in our welding and in the worke of our saluation. And yet notwithstanding this,we haue neede of exhortations,threatnings,praier, and such like, to strengthen and stirre vp our dull and senselesse wils; for the inward working of the spirit,which frameth our wils to will good, doth not abolish the instrumentall causes, but we haue need of these meanes: first, because they are sanctified of the Lord and ordained to make vs lay hold on the spirit: secondly, because without these the spirit and graces of God would soone perish; which counsell is giuen, Heb. 3. 13. to exhort one another daily lest we be hardened through the deceit of sinne: for though God could doe this onely by his spirit, yet hee will haue these meanes vsed, that we be neither high minded nor idle, for since we cannot doe good, why should we be proud, and since we so hardly keepe good we must not be idle, but, as Phil. 2. 12. 13. end and worke forth our saluation with trembling; for as one holdeth a great masse of lead or other vnremouable weight, not to remoue it, for hee knowes hee cannot, but onely to trie his strength, so though we cannot, nor need not performe the law, (because Christ hath done it) yet must we make it the rule of our obedience and of a sanctified life, that heerein we may resemble Christ who alone hath sanctified vs.

We are then to consider how Christ hath fulfilled the righteousness of this Law; and that he hath done two waies, partly by abrogating it, and partly by establishing it; he hath abrogated

the law in two things. First, in the power of separation between man and man, which was the law of ceremonies, so as what was enmity between Jew and Gentile, that hath Christ abolished, and therefore as it is said, Ephes. 2. 14. Christ is our peace which made of both one, and hath broken the stop of the partition wall through his flesh in abrogating the hatred, that is, the law of commandements, which standeth in ordinances, for to make of two one newe man in himselfe: Secondly, in the power of malediction betweene God and man, whereupon it is said, Gal. 3. 23. There is no law against vs, that is, the curse of the law for sinne is not due to vs, because Christ hath taken it away; and therefore it is said, 1. Tim. 1. 9. The law is not giuen vnto a righteous man, that is, against a righteous man there is no law, the curse of the law belonging onely to the reprobate, and not to the elect; howbeit we must not thinke we are so deliuered from the condemnation of it as that wee are freed from the obedience of it; Christ therefore hath likewise established the law, and this two waies: First, in the doctrine: Secondly, in the obedience to the doctrine. For the first, that not any thing of the doctrine is abrogated but perfectly taught by Christ, as appeareth, Mat. 5. 22. 28. That the least euill thought is damnation, That anger in heart is flat murder, That he that lusteth but in hart after a woman committeth adultery: and Saint Paul saith Rom. 7. 7. hee knew not what lust was; till he knew the righteousness of Christ. Again, as was touched before, Christ came but for these two ends: first, to make peace betweene man and man; secondly, between God and man; now the moral law made no enmity betweene Jew and Gentile, but the ceremoniall law, for that was the wall parted vs and them; and that onely is broken downe by the coming of Christ; and for the other, the curse of the law made all the warre betweene God and vs, & the rigor of it Christ hath satisfied; but the doctrine of the law made none; for we yet in the precise keeping of it challenge life, Christ having fulfilled it in vs and for vs, so as Christ giueth vs no new righteousness but that wee our selues could not perform, & yet we claime it as done in our person by the righteousness of the law, that Christ in our flesh performed: for the second, he doth also establish it in the obedience to the law, and this two waies : First, by the person of Christ, for by his inherent holinesse was fulfilled all the law, which is imputed to vs : Secondly, as by righteousnesse inherent in him, so by his spirit of sanctification dwelling in vs, having the whole man in part changed, that we are able to doe what God will, and in iudgement to allow, in affection to embrace, and in adion to execute what he commandeth; so as if we consider our filthinesse we haue the blood of Christ to bathe in; if our nakednesse, we haue the robes of his righteousnesse; if our beggery, we haue his riches filled with all graces; yet must we alwaies ioyne blond and water, faith and works, in the person iustified, for they are notes of our religion, signes of our conuersion, leales of our election, fruits of our iustification, testimonies of a good conscience, in their end they are referred to the Lords glory, they are causes to stirre vp others to the seruing of the same God, & they are of the Lord accepted and recompensed in the mercy of the rewarder, and not at the merit of the worker, for he can accept of none by desert but that which is according to the precise couenant of the law; but water is to be stood vpon as a signe that blond hath gon before, and the writing of his law in our hearts by sanctification of life is a prooffe that our sinnes are purged in the blod of Christ, and pardoned through the mercy of God: And in respect of these seuerall operations and workes of Christ in abolishing the law in the curse, and establishing the law in the obedience of it, we that are elect are said to be dead to the law, Rom: 7. 4. and also liuing to the law; wee are dead to the law in three respects: First to the condemnation of it, because being iustified by Christ we cannot be condemned by the law, for the wrath of God is taken away through the imputation of his righteousnesse: Secondly, to the constraint of the law, for it doth not constrain vs which are Gods elect, as it doth the reprobate, because Christ by the worke of his spirit doth berid our wils to the obedience of the law in some measure, and stirre vp our affections to a delight in it: Thirdly, we are dead to the power of prouocation: which was in the law to vrge vs to sin, because our sins being taken away in the passion of Christ, the law bringing vs as it were vpon the scaffold and shewing vs hell gates, and heauen a farre off, not able of our selues to make passage to it, teacheth vs to auoid all sinnefull occasions whereby our feete might be found slipping, and to lay the better hold vpon the bridge the Lord Iesus, by whom the conscience is so pacified, as wee are euer directed in the right way; so as we are dead to it in the curse of it, and aliuie to it, as it is the rule of our direction; we are dead to it in the bondage of it, and aliuie to it in the obedience of it, Gods spirit directing our hearts to doe that willingly which the law requireth. Since then there is this necessity laid vpon vs, to be dead vnto sinne, for which sinne the curse of the law is due, and to be liuing to newnesse of life, though wee see this rich benefit of hauing the righteousness of the law fulfilled, to bee performed by Christ onely, and that for vs, we must beware we fall not either into profane security, or else into presumptuous hypocrisie; the one thinking the fauour of God not greatly requisite, the other that it is easily obtained; the one running on still to sinne, the other couering their nakednesse with fig-leaues, which are not broad enough to couer all; nor thicke enough to hide them from his eies, that pierceth into the deepest darknesse; for these may haue a knowledge of the law and subscribe vnto it, a glimmering sight of Christ in the Gospell and reioice at it; and yet not haue sinne condemned in their flesh, but their flesh damned for their sinne, whereas if we straitly trie our selues by the law, and see our sinnes as fores running full of corruption, and damnation to bee awaiting vpon the least sinne, then is the commandement come vnto vs, and then sinne being reiuued we know to what Physitian to goe; and what eie salue to craue, for we cannot looke into the bottome of our hearts, vnlesse we looke into the bottome of the law; and if we faile in this wee shall know no sinnes, and so consequently no Saviour for sinnes: for God being a fearefull Iudge, and a consuming fire, we cannot stand before him without peace of conscience; nor haue this peace without grace from Christ; nor partake of this grace without acknowledgment of misery; nor come to this acknowledgment without a through sight of our sinnes; nor attaine to this sight without a sight of damnation due for them; nor see this damnation without a triall of our selues by the commandement; so as Christ hath not by his

vertue abated, but advanced the power and excellency of the law in the right vse of it, for which it was ordained, namely, to set our hearts on God, and our waies in the trade of his commandments; and therefore let vs by all meanes shun two extremities: First, a restlesse desire to performe the law so precisely as to seeke life in it, which is harder for vs to doe then to remoue mountaines, or to clime vp to heauen to see the seat of God; Secondly, rechlesse impiery to liue profanely because we cannot liue so precisely as we ought, for the law is the goale wee must aime at, and the perfection we must striue to, and though in our best workes we are vnprofitable, yet must we worke, lest wee be abominable.

Now for the second part, namely for whom Christ tooke this paines to establish and fulfill the righteousnesse of the law; it was for such as walke not after the flesh, but after the spirit, which teacheth vs to know a child of God from a reprobate, the life of the one being like the darkenesse of Egypt, grosse and palpable, the other like the Sunne-shine, cleere and comfortable. And this life in the elect may be discerned by two markes: First, by a spirituall, inuisible, internall testimony: secondly, by a reall, externall, and visible. The first is discovered two waies; first by the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry in confidence to the Lord as to a father; secondly, by the spirit of sanctification, whereby we liue in obedience and subiection as to a Lord. The outward euidence of a Christian is likewise knowen two waies: first, by an outward profession: secondly, by walking in that profession. Now lest we be deceaued in the inward signes; first, through pride in our selues, and the policy of sathan, to make vs thinke we haue them when we want them, as Matth. 7. 23. Many by doing great things in the name of Christ, will entitle themselues to heauen which is a purchase for the elect only, but he will professe he neuer knew them: secondly, through the secrecie of them, they being knowen onely to God, as 1. Cor. 2. 10. The spirit searcheth all things, and no man knowes the heart but he that made it; therefore an inuisible faith must be discerned by visible fruits, and who can tell that the powers of his soule be reformed; if it breake not forth into his life, for which cause the badge of a renewed Christian is ; first, a proclamation as it were, whose he is and vnder whom he serues : secondly, a blamelesse course in conuersation: the first of these is communicable to hypocrites, who will seeme to carry a weapon for the Lord, but with weake hands, and false hearts, making a flourish as if hee would desie the diuell, yet secretly and couertly feeding on him, and defending him in his desires; and therefore he that is truly elect must be measured by his life, and we must not looke into the spirit which is in him, but into the fruites of the spirit which hang about him; not to his invisible faith, but to his visible workes of faith; not to his outward profession, but to his walking according to his profession, as Gal. 5. 25. If we live in the spirit, wee must also walke in the spirit: so as men are not to bee iudged by their tongues, but by their steps; and since we must iudge them this way, if we see one liue inordinately, sweare outrageously, blaspheme mightily, oppresse cruelly, haunt wicked company, and such like, we may well say he is wicked: and if he reply, iudge not, thou maiest answer; thou maiest safely iudge the roote by the tree, and the tree by the fruit, a fountaine by the streames, and the streames by their cleerenesse, a sicke man by his weakenesse, and the danger of his weakenesse by the nature of the disease, and what is in the heart by that commeth out of the heart, Mat. 15. 19. for how could such a sea of sinnes swell ouer their bankes if thou wert stable minded? those haughty lookes could neuer so transforme thy countenance, if pride did not possesse thee; nor thy vsury and oppression, so rage and some out in thy purchasing and possession if couetousnesse did not delight thee; nor profanenesse and cursed speaking to please thine eares, if ignorance and contempt of God did not so seale vpon thy conscience as thou canst not see thine owne deformity. He be it in this thy iudgement of others, obserue 3. rules: First, iudge thy self first lest while thou reprove others, thy self may be condemned: Secondly, give thou no final iudgement, for that pertains to God alone, before whose eyes all things are open: Thirdly, iudge not according to the inuer man, but by the outward, that euery man may see as much as thy selfe, though they want that heauenly wisdom to milke, for what saw did euer finde fault with other for wallowing

wallowing in the mire : secondly , consider the phrase or metaphor vsed by the Apostle, borrowed from traouellers or those that vnder take dangerous iournies ; for as one is subiect to fall if he walke in slippery places , or to be hindred in his walke if blocks doe lie in his way ; so fareth it with the child of God, he walketh through slippery places, and gets many falls , but riseth immediately because he meets with Christ in the way, he traouileth ouer mountains as it were in the wilderness, and is much wearied, but refreshed by Christ, who is vnto him the water of life; yea he hath many stones laid on purpose to stumble at , but through the strength of Christ he creepes ouer them and comes at length to his iournies end, which is his rest in heaven. Thirdly, marke the difference betweene the way of the elect , and of the reprobate, the first, as Mat. 7. 14. is strait and narrow, the other broad and wide ; now though the labour be greater to croud into the narrow way, yet heerein is the benefit greater also, that being narrow when thou art once in thou canst not lose it; and being strait, thou maiest goe on as by a line and cannot misse it, yea if thou fall, as needes thou must through frailty, being in the way that God prescribes thee, thou hast, Psal. 91. 11. the Angels to protect thee, so farre as thy fall shall not hurt thee ; whereas now the wicked that take such elbow roome in their walks, they may and do easily wander, and being once out of the way, the further they goe, the further they are off the end they desire , nay they haue such windings and turnings in the lusts of the flesh where-in they liue , as it carieth them at length among the wolues of their soules, that will deuour them ; and though as Iob speaketh, cap. 15. 20. The wicked man is continually as one that traouelleth of childe, being euer conceaued with some mischiefe, as Esa. 59. 4. yet God so disappoointeth them as it were of their midwiues as they bring forth but a lie, as David saith Psal. 7. 14. And therefore it fareth with the children of God, and the wicked , as with two setting forth together, the one going strait toward the place appointed , the other turning backward from it , the first will come to his iournies end at the time appointed, the other neuer; euen so will God in his due time bring vs whom hee findeth watchfull and vigilant, to that place that Christ hath prepared for

vs in his house, and shut the dores vpon them that wandred all their life as in the darke, that since with darkenesse they were delighted, in darkenesse they shall be tormented. Fourthly, obserue the maner of the hypocrites walke. For as the Hare when she is started by the hounds, by reason of that naturall instinct & sagacity God hath giuen her, runneth toward the market way, not for any desire she hath to the way it selfe, but that the hounds might lose her tract by the continuall passage of the people; euen so doe the hypocrites walke in the tract of Gods children, as, come to sermons, ioyne in praier, reprocue swearing, lisse out something for reformation, and such like; but why do they this? onely because wee should not trace them like foxes into their form whither their carriage for the flesh is gone before, so as they are but clokes to couer their filth withall, that looking into their profession they will deceiue vs; but if wee cast our eie but vpon their feete, we shall finde their steps tend to death. And whereas policy hath diuided the state into three branches, the King, the Clergy, and the Laity, the scripture affordeth vs examples of hypocrisie in euery one of these: Herod for a King, Mark. 6. 20. will grace the doctrine of Iohn Baptist so farre as he will heare him gladly, and fauour his person so much, as he will yeeld to many things at his request; but yet he had a swing in the flesh he could not bee turned from, for you might haue traced him home to his brother Philips house and haue sene a most filthy nest he had there made for his walk in the flesh. Looke vpon Indas a Disciple, a follower and preacher of Christ, he pretends a worke of mercy and a religious care of the poore, Ioh. 12. 5. there is too much ointment wasted on Christ, that might better haue bene spent and bestowed in mony vpon the poore; heere are good words and faire shewes, but the Lord vncauseth his hypocrisie and discouereth his priuy way to be but for the filling of the purse which he caried, that he might spend it on his lusts, for saith the text, vers. 6. He was a theete. Lastly steps in Ananias and Sapphira, the foundation of a family, being man and wife, they, Act. 5. 1. 2. will be such hot followers of the Apostles as none shall goe beyond them for the reliefe of persecuted Christians, they will sel a possession & pretend to bring the whole price of it and lay it at the Apostles feet; but marke, they have a secret chest they thought no man should see, one corner of covetousnesse in their heart must be filled, by keeping part of the mony to themselves: which dissembling of theirs was suddenly and severely auenged, that we may beware by their destruction. After this sort doth the Lord in all ages discover the skirts of hypocrites, that if they be but watch ouer in a holy wisdom they haue euer some backedore which we shall at length espie, whereat the lusts of the flesh doe enter, which heapeth but heauier desolation at the last, because they thought to haue mocked God, who in truth will not be mocked. Now some will say, if they walke in the right way at any time it sufficeth, alledging for their example the thiefe vpon the Crosse, Luk. 23. 40. 41. who made but a short confession, for that long happinesse he hath in heaven, and therefore thinke thy need not take so long a iourney as Abraham and the rest of the saints of God haue done. But how can he that setteth forth in the euening finish the same iourney he doth that went out in the morning? It is true, God calleth at all houres, yet must we not looke for such miracles at the moment of death as the conversion of the thiefe was, for if we deferre the time we may faile of his promotion, there being but one particular flower of that kind in the whole garden of God; besides he had no such meanes of faith offered him till he was vpon the gallowes, whereas we haue had and doe still enjoy great store, both for our present vse and for to lay vp against a deatch heereafter: & againe, by this our deferring and shuffling off the time of saluation we sinne three waies: against God, against the saints of God, and against our owne soules; against God, because we dally with him and abuse his patience, putting that day far off which may come at the least to thee in an instant, if the Lord withdrawe thy breath but a while from thee: against the Saints of God, because thou depriveest them of that company, comfort, and profit thou mightest haue each of other, for heerein standeth the communion of Saints in a fellow-feeling one of anothers miseries, comforting them in their griefes, strengthening them in their infirmities, supplying them in their wantes, and encouraging them in the faith and power of grace which they haue receiued: lastly, against themselves in thus hazarding their soules; for it is not enough to say, Lord haue mercy on thee when thou art on thy death bed, when rather sense of thy paine then feeling of thy sinne doth driue thee to that extremity, but thou must seeke for mercy before thou art thrust into those straites, else may thy conscience then flie in thy face, and the remembrance of thy former negligence stop thy mouth as a iust reuenge for thy sinne of delay, which was before committed. Againe, heere all litheresse and Jazineesse is removed from them that are ready to finde excuse for not walking so cheerefully, boldly, and constantly, in the right way as they should; for assure thy selfe there is no crosse can fall vpon thee of that force as to crosse the working of Gods spirit in thee, if thou thy selfe be not a meanes to quench it, for if thou wilt hide thy talent, it is true it can turne thee to no aduantage, and if thou doest not stirre vp the graces in thee and varnish them as it were with a continuall vse of them, no maruell though they decay and thou too, for the kingdome of heauen is taken onely by the violent that strieve and sweat, and labour euen as he that is famished doth for meat, so that if thou entertaine the spirit with diligence in praier, in hearing, in meditation and such like holy duties it will awake thee from thy sleep, and remoue all impediments that may either turne backe thine eies from beholding thine anointed Christ Iesus, or withdraw thy heart from buying that hidden treasure that is sealed vp for thee in the booke of the promises of God.

Lattly obserue the maner of the Apostles speech: beginning with the negatiue: We must not walke after the flesh, as a matter of greatest weight, before hee commeth to the affirmatiue, to walke after the spirit; for where there is the absence of good, there must needs be euil; but where there is the absence of euil, it followeth not that there is good: therefore we must not onely not doe euil, but we must doe good, as Dauid saith; Cease from euil, and doe good; so as the flesh must first be shaken off, before we can shape our actions or affections after the spirit: and to this purpose Esay saith, cap. 1. 16. 17. Cease to doe euil; learne to doe well: and Paul Rom. 13. 12. Cast away the workes of darke-nesse, and put on the armour of light: and Ephē. 4. 22, 23. Cast off the old man which is corrupt, and be renewed in the spirit of your minde : and, as Tit. 2. 12. we must not onely deny vngodlinesse, but we must liue religiously : and 1. Pet. 4. 1. There must be in vs a signe not onely of Christs suffering, but also of his resurrection, to liue not after the lusts of men, but after the will of God : and as Rom. 7. 4. Wee must not onely bee diuorced from our first husband the flesh, but we must be married to our second husband, which is the spirit : so as for the sound cure of our corruption, the rotten flesh must first be pared away that the right plaister may bee applied, and when thou art healed thou must sinne no more, lest a worse thing come vnto thee ; but as hauing the sore running on thee, the Lord dispensed with thy vntowardnesse for that time ; so now hauing the wound stoppt, and thine eies opened, by a second laying of Christs hands vpon thee, thou must performe such actions of life onely as are deriued from the spirit of God working in thee. The vsurer therefore must not onely leaue his vsury, but he must lend freely ; the oppressor must not onely cease from grinding the faces of the poore, but hee must releue them liberally ; the proud man must not onely forget to wrinkle his face by looking austerely, but with meekenesse and humility he must embrace his brethren ; the profane man must not onely forsake his iesting and scoffing at religion, but hee must set himselfe in the same ranke to be railed at for the name of Christ, knowing that by this meanes, as 1. Pet. 4. 14. The spirit on his part is glorified. And this may serue to stop their mouthes, that thinke him an honest man that doth no harme, whereas the not doing hurt is but as a tingling and pricking in the flesh after a great behummednesse, but it must be the action of good that must shew the life of Christ to bee in thee ; else maiest thou as well thinke it a causelesse curse vpon the figge-tree, that hauing but leaues wherewith shee did no harme, was yet dried vp because shee bare no fruit.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 5. 6.

5. For they that are after the flesh, savour the things of the flesh, but they that are after the spirit, the things of the spirit.
6. For the wisdom of the flesh is death, but the wisdom of the spirit is life and peace.

 Since the Apostle proceedeth to prouie who those bee who are ingrafted into Christ, and who are not but continue in the wrath of God, and this hee doth by following the opposition first made between the flesh and the spirit, shewing in these verses what the seuerall natures and dispositions of them both are: And secondly what are their seuerall ends; they that are after the flesh thinke nothing saoury but what comes from the flesh, but their fruit and end is death, that is, damnation: but they that are guided by the spirit taste nothing but what is spirituall, and the fruit and end of them tendeth to a double comfort for their soules, first, bringing peace of conscience, which is a continual feast in this life; secondly, eternal felicity in the life to come; so as in summe his meaning is to shew, that as many as are not in Christ shall be damned, and as many as build vpon Christ shall be saued.

 Then we must first know, what is meant by flesh, and what is meant by spirit: for the first, what is meant by flesh Christ tels vs; Iohn 3. 5. in his answer to Nicodemus, laying, That except a man be borne againe of water and of the spirit, he cannot see heauen; meaning thereby, that before a man be regenerate he is nothing but flesh, soule and body and all, for that is borne of flesh is flesh, and a cleane thing cannot be drawn out of corruption: so Paul 1. Cor. 15. 50. saith, that flesh and blood cannot inherit heauen, not meaning thereby that flesh wherein we are inclosed, for the very

very substance of it shall see God, but the old man the corruption of nature which is our mother wit and wil; howbeit what this flesh is, is more amply set downe, Gen. 6. 5. where it is said in the original, that all the very mould of the deuising thoughts of a mans heart are, not inclined to euill, but simply euill; and not euill, but onely euill; and not onely euill, but euill in all things; and not onely euill in all things, but euill in all things euery day: and Saint Paul, Rom. 3. 10. maketh a full description of a fleshly man, shewing what euery one is by nature: There is none righteous, no not one; the reason is, because there is none that seeketh God; and for not seeking him they are all become apostats; and by this their apostasie are become vnprofitable; and being thus of no value their throate is an open sepulchre; and being thus enlarged like hell, they vse them either to deceit in that poison is vnder their lips, or else their mouth is full of cursing and bitterness, which are two contrarie sinnes; their feete are swift to shed bloud, and destruction and calamitie are in all their waies, and the way of peace they haue not knowne: and last of all, they haue not the feare of God before their eies, which is the true cause of that cursed brood and chaine of sinnes that hang together. Now for the second, what is meant by Spirit, and that is a diuine, heavenly, inuisible, and supernaturall working of the holy Ghost in the hearts of Gods children, in begetting them anew into the glorious image of Christ, by changing into another quality and condition all the powers of their soules and affections of the heart, which is done by faith in the outward man, and by peace of conscience in the inner man, by reason whereof the elect are saied euen in this prison of theirs to bee spirituall.

From hence obserue first, that the world is divided but into two kinds of people, fleshly and spirituall, for there is no meane betweene them, & howsoeuer the enemies of God are distracted into severall and sundry factions; some denying the power of godlinesse through porfanenesse, some diuiding the power of it through opinion of merit, some thinking there is no God at all, and some imagining he sits idle in heauen without hauing any sterne to guide and direct the frame of the earth; yet doe they all erre alike in their hearts, and being all out of the way they shall finde the same reward of their worldly wilsdome and their end to bee damnation : now these two sorts and conditions of men are easily discerned, for by their fruits you shall know them, the one sanoring the flesh pots of Ægypt, the other the sweetnesse of the land of Canaan; the one being taken vp and possessed by the pleasures of the flesh, the other struiuing and laboring in the workes of the spirit; the one hauing sinne as it were alwaies vnder his nose sauoring nothing else, the other hauing the spirit euer in his eie to diuert his feet from the snares and pleasures of concupiscence; for by this word (after) which is in the text, is signified in the original tonguc, to be guided and conducted and led by the flesh, which sheweth our great infidelity in not beleeuing what the holy Ghost sets downe, giuing it heere in precise commandement that we should not be directed by the flesh, and binding this commandement in the breach of it with a peremptory curse of damnation for being guided by it; and yet as if God could not make his word good, or that we could wrastle our selues from his wrath, our taste, our smell and all our senses are busied onely in the workes of the flesh as if we would cast away our selues willingly, whereas euen in naturall reason wee

X should abhor it; for who would be conducted by such a one as cuts the throats of al he guideth? or who is he that traouelling toward the desert will picke out such a guide as should lead him to be deuoured of wild beasts? or who that hath his iourney by sea will make choice of such a Pilot as hath cast away as many as he conducted? or who would entertaine a knowen theefe and a wafter to be the steward of his house? or who would take such a husband to be the guid of her youth as spends and waits himselfe in licentiousnesse? or what Prince will admit him to be his cheefe counsellor that is a knowen traitor to his person? or such a one to be captaine ouer souldiers as is a knowen and proclaimed rebell? There is none so simple nor so profane but will dislike and detest the choice of any such guides and leaders; and yet he that taketh his flesh to be his captaine, his arme & his guide (a knowen and vnreconciliable enemy to the soule) shall by the conduct of his owne corruption not onely lose his body but his

soule also; for if the blind lead the blind both shall fall into the pit of perdition. Therefore let the world loue her owne, and the flesh pamper it selfe: let Cain build him a cite, Gen. 4. 17. to hide him from the presence of the Lord: let Esau follow his hunting, Gen. 26. 30. to satisfie his pleasure in the death of venison: let Nimrod, Gen. 11. 4. build him a tower to get him a name vpon the earth: let the rich man, Luk. 12. 17. heape vp his fruits till his barnes will hold no more: let Diues, Luk. 16. 19. 20. be cottly in his apparrell, and delicate in his fare euery day; yet obserue thou but their ends and thou wilt not toyne hands with them, for Cain was branded of the Lord as a castaway, Nimrod confounded for his pride, Esau reiected for his profanenes, the rich man snatched suddainly from his substance, and Diues throwne downe to hell where he lies panting and crying for a drop of water and cannot haue it.

Againe in that it is said, they saour the things of the flesh, obserue, that all that is in a naturall and carnall man and cometh from him, is but flesh, that is, sinne, yea and the most excellent parts that are in him, that is, his wisdome, deserueth death, and is but as a worme in the shell to consume him, for he wanting the spirit, which is the life of the soule, as the soule is the life of the body, his soule, his body, his minde, his will, and his vnderstanding are but members, as Paul calleth them, Rom. 7. 5. that is, but flesh and bloud, and therefore the perturbations of sinnes doe worke inwardly in the members of a naturall man: wherein we must make a difference betweene perturbations and affections, wee hauing affections in vs by nature, for when wee were in our integrity, we had the vnderstanding and knowledge of God and of his will, yea and wee had affections to performe his wili; but after the fall, these affections were peruerted, for where before they were fixed on God, now they are settled on sinne: but for perturbations, they arise and proceede from the corrupted root of nature, it being a sinne deriued from originall sinne, to that if a man die in the wombe the Lord hath enough to condemne him; but if he liueth after his birth, then vpon this originall sinne there worketh the perturbations of sinnes which heapeth greater condemnation vpon his head. And this is the condition of naturall man is not

sinne.*

condition of the vnregenerate, that all they doe is sinne, it being but the some and fruit of the sinne that lieth within : for if a naturall man will bring forth fruit, he must either doe that which is commanded or forbidden, or else that is neither commanded nor forbidden, as things indifferent, to marry, to eat, to wash the hands, and such like ; and euen in these hee sinneth, for as to the cleane all things are cleane, so to him that is polluted, all that comes from him is defiled ; yea that which of it selfe is no sinne but a duty commanded, as praier, almes, hearing the word, and such like, proceeding from him is sin, because they rise not from a good root, the heart being defiled, nor tend not to a good end, the glory of God not being respected: so as we may truely say of them, they doe the good they would not willingly doe, and they doe not the euill they would doe, for what was all Pauls morall righteousnesse, Phil. 3. 6. wherein he was vnblameable, but as the excrement of a dogge, because it came meereley from a naturall man, for they are not done for any loue to God or of his glory, nor for any care of their brethren, but onely for ostentation to reape praise and commendation of men, that if a brother hap to receiue comfort by it, it is beyond the intention of the doer, and therefore all is fleshly and sinnefull. Nay though the reprobate haue their repugnancy & consist in them both before the sinne committed and repentance for it after, yet doth this nothing lessen nor extenuate the malice of their hearts, nor make their sin lesse sinnefull, for though their be a contradiction betweene the sinnes they commit, and the light of nature, and the iudgement of reason which they enjoy, yet is this but betweene the heart and the conscience, the conscience checking, controlling, and pricking the heart for the sinne, wherein they do not one whit exceede or goe beyond Medea the heathen, that could say ; she saw better things, but shee could not follow them : for as one sicke of a lothsome disease, doth languish and pine away, which maketh all his frinds weary of him, by meanes whereof hee bewaileth his owne case, not for his sinne, but for his disease, and not for the cause of his misery, but for the misery it selfe ; so the reprobate are said after they haue sinned, not for their sinne, but because their conscience accuseth them of their sinne, not for hatred to

the sinne, but for feare of punishment for the sin, which appeareth by this, that hauing liberty and opportunity anew, they fall a fresh to sinning and wallowing in the mire. Therefore bee not thou high minded if thou beest a great Rabbin learned in the schoole-points of Diuinity, if thou canst decide controuersies, resoluë doubts, discourse of difficult matters, for all this maist thou doe and yet fauour of the flesh and of death, if thou konwest onely the letter of the Law and Gospell, and doe not know the true vse both of Law and Gospell; neither be thou puffed vp, what euer thou art; because thou resorts to sermons, readeest ouer the bible, art able to cite many places in the scripture, for these may be the fruits of a dead man to know the Gospell, and to be ignorant of the vse of the Gospell, that is, how the Gospell teacheth thee to humble thy selfe in an astonishment of thy misery, to mortifie thy selfe in haured of thy sinnefull flesh, to deny thy selfe in an acknowledgement of thy corruption, and to lay fast hold vpon Christ, who is the light of thy saluation; for looke in Ier. 8. 8. the carnall and vnbeleeuing Iewes could say, they were wise, and the law of the Lord was with them; but the Prophet answereth, that the law vnto them was in vaine, and the pen of the scribes was in vaine; and Esa. 29. 11. 12. it is said, that the vision was become ynto them as the words of a booke that is sealed vp, which none can read because it is sealed; which place teacheth vs, that they which know the Law, and which know it not; it is as a booke thur vp to them, though their iniquities bee sealed vp in it, because they truely vnderstand not the vse of it, their smell is so stopt with the fauour of the flesh that they peruert the vse of euery thing which God hath ordained for their conuersion.

Now if wee would take but a little view and looke into the world, we shall see many thousands fauour the things of the flesh both in things vnlawfull, and in things lawfull vnlawfully vsed: The couetous man, Iob. 20. 13. 14. hideth wickednesse vnder his tongue, and keepeth it close in his mouth; the adulterers neigh after their neighbours wiues, like horses; the vsurer is alwaies deuising how to deceiue; the hypocrite commeth to the house of God to make it a cloake for his free passage to the house.

house of an harlot ; many will seeme to liue after the rule of the second table , but not of the first , bragging if they haue done any good to their neighbour , but neuer considering how many others they haue iniured , nor how they haue prouoked God by the breach of the first table , as profaning his Sabbaths , blaspheming his name , and raising vp other gods to themselues in their hearts , preferring the second table before the first , not weighing that the first is the ground and foundation of the second , and the second to be but the fruits of the first , and yet if they outwardly obserue the second , it is but to a false end to satisfie their priuate and fleshly humour , or to get open and publike praise of fleshly men like themselues , so as it by chance they profit men , yet are they abominable to God , because they aime at a wrong marke , making all the veines and current of their actions to end and runne into the maine Sea of the flesh , they being such as of whom Christ speaketh , Luk. 16. 15. Yee iustifie your selues before men , but God knoweth your hearts . And if diuers be drowned in the filth of the flesh that heare the word of God , Ioh. 5. 25. then how many are there among vs worse then they that neuer heare it , but thinke that which is in truth the onely food to preserue them , the onely poison to destroy them ? And if thee be dead that sauoureth so much of the flesh , as to liue in pleasure , 1. Tim. 5. 6. then how many are there in the world as euill as thee , that would neuer haue the Sunne to set vpon their delights , but would haue their life without limitation , that they might follow their sports ? And if he be dead that fals asleepe in his sins , Eph. 5. 14. then how many of this kinde are with vs , that neuer tooke but one nap since their birth , making the end of one sinne the beginning of another ? And if they be dead that walke according to the course of the world , Eph. 2. 1. 2. then (alas !) how few are liuing among vs , many great starres falling from heauen to the earth daily , that is , many great professors being either ashamed or wearied of their precisenesse in religion , falling away daiely , renouncing that their faith wherwith they were once comforted , & embracing the world like Demas , who shooke off Paul as if he had beene as pestilent as the viper that Paul himselfe shooke off , Act. 28. 5. And if he be dead that followeth not his calling faithfully fully, Mat. 8. 22. then how many such are there among vs that either through idlenesse neglect, or through fraud and deceit peruert those means that God hath appointed for their increase? And if he be dead which streng:heneth not himself in the things which remaine in him, Reuel. 3. 1. 2. then how doe we abound with such as want this zeale of supporting their faith, suffering it daily to decrease, and smothering and pressing it downe with the sent & sauer of fleshy ease and preferment? And if they be dead that haue not part in the first resurrection, Reue. 20. 5. then how many of this brood haue we that haue not yet receiued Christin true faith at all, nor are awaked to any better life then they brought from their mothers wombe, thinking too wel of themselves, and for want of knowing themselves, being not able to know Christ aright, & wanting this knowledge of him, they are ignorant what benefit they may receiue by Christ, and being ignorant of this it is impossible for them to partake of any benefits Christ bringeth, they finding no better taste nor sweetness in them then there is saueur in the whit of an egge, as Iob saith, cap. 6. 6. Therefore let wickednesse come from the wicked, and let it be a bird onely of their hatching, let them fill themselves with the bitter morsels of the flesh, which turne to gall in their stomackes, for God at length shall draw it out of their bellies, Iob. 20. 15. and shall cause his wrath to raine vpon them: but let vs that call vpon the name of the Lord depart from iniquity, and being borne of the spirit let vs distast enery thing that is not spirituall; for in this opposition of contraries, of the flesh and of the spirit, we must cleaue as close to the blood of Christ and the water of a holy life, as the fleshy men doe to the diuell, and to the course of their corruption.

This rule then which the Apostle heere giueth, to be guided and conducted by the spirit, condemneth and convinceth all them that haue such froth in their words, and some out of their mouthes, that men are too full of the spirit, and too vehement in the spirit, taking vpon them like Schoole-masters to teach the holy Ghost how to speake: but since the spirit taketh it vp as a phrase fit for him, let not vs be ashamed to vse it as a garment fit for vs; for the world hath bene full of scoffing from the beginning; and though it ingendred in the flesh of Abraham, yet came it from the bastard brood of Hagar, Ismael being the first, Gen. 21. 9. that mocked Isaac. And what was Elisha the worse, 2. Kin. 2. 23. for being mocked of the children; or the Prophets the worse for being mocked of the people; or Christ the worse for being railed on in the open Synagogue, and mocked at in the iudgement hall, and vpon the Croller Mat. 26. 41. Or Paul the worse for being called by Tertullus that flattering oratour, Act. 24. 5. a pestilent fellow and a mouer of sedition? Hath not this beene the lot of the righteous since the beginning, and the true badge of a Christian since Christs ascension? For Isaack had the blessing both vpon his soule and vpon his seed, notwithstanding the curse of his brother; the Prophets went on in their calling, & giuing, as Esfay speaketh, their backe to the smiters, and their face to the nippers, they were not dismaied: and Paul continued worshipping the God of his fathers after the way which was called Herese, Act. 24. 14. notwithstanding the rage & malice of the vnbeleuing Iewes. And therefore shrinke not thou in thy head a whit, nor let not thy zeale be cooled for the quips and rants of peruerse persons; for either thou must be a sheepe or a goate; and better be laughed at of men for thy sheepish simplicitie, then destroyed by God for thy goat-like qualities; & since there are but two orders & rankes of men in the world, the one fleshly, the other spiritual, we know he that was borne after the flesh euer persecuted him that was borne after the spirit, & even so is it now, which can nothing hurt thee, because the spirit doth defend thee, nay it toucheth not thee at all; for they scoffe at God which dwelleth in thee, and he at length will laugh at their destruction. Besides, it is but the reuiling of Sathan which possesseth their flesh, and who will esteeme of the diuels frumps, since he doth it onely in enuy at thy saluation, and in malice against the God of heauen?

Heere againe are conuincd all such who of their owne drowfinesse frame and pretend excuses, for not doing as they say they should, but this is but one of the deceits of sin to wind thee further into her snares, for the spirit cannot be idle, but is like the miller alwaies grinding, and mouing thee forward to some good duty,

duy, for when the stronger entreth he driueth him out that was there before: therefore examine thy selfe whether thou be as earnest in praier as at thy pleasure; whether as diligent in counting thy sinnes, as casting thy accounts at home; as desirous to heare the word as a stage-play; as earnest in repenting, as in comitting of offences; as hungry after the foode of thy soule, as after the nourishment of thy body; for if thou be not, thou art so far from fauouring spiritual things, as the spirit hath set no footing in thee at all; for we read of David in the whole volume of his Psalmes, how greatly he delighted in the law of God, how he longed after it, as the Hart after the riuier brookes; how he valued it better then thousands of gold or siluer; how in his estimation, one day was better in the courts of God, then a thousand in the kings palace: and if this spirit was in him in the time of the law, then ought there to bee a double spirit in vs that liue in this golden time of the Gospell. But I would it might not be said of vs, that the children of this world are wiser in their generation then the children of light; for they lie stretching themselues vpon their beds, straining their wits how to please the flesh with choice and variety of delightfull sinnes; whereas wee through the smoke of that corruption that flieth vp to our eies are so blinded as wee thinke our selues incumbred with the comincle of the spirit, straitning the times wherein the graces of God should be blowen vp and cherished in vs, and giuing too large an allowance to the portion we share out for the flesh; therefore if we will be spirituall men indeed, we must lay vp the word of God in our hearts, binding it as a signe vpon our hands, wearing it as a frontlet before our eies, and writing it vpon the posts of our houses, that it may be as a matter to instruct vs, and as a line to direct vs, that as neere as we can our thoughts may be hedged in that they range not after the concupiscence of the flesh, our affections restrained that they rise not against the worke of the spirit, & our actions squared as they may be fit timber for the building of such Temples wherein the Lord shall dwell by his spirit.

Lastly obserue the fruits the wisdom of the spirit bringeth, which be two, peace and life: euen the two speciall benefits that the carnall man seeketh for, yet misleth of; for the flesh neuer giueth peace but is continually perplexed, eareing and being neuer satisfied, flying and chacing themselues when none pursueth them; neither can it bring foorth life, the wicked being cuer groping as in the darke: so as we see what worldly men most seeke for, that they are most destitute of; for we all agree in the end of our desire, that we would be blessed, but in the substance wherein true blessednesse consisteth, there is great difference. The Philosophers speaking of happines, were distracted into two hundred eighty eight opinions, euery one intending some thing, and yet resoluing nothing, some pointing to the right hand, some to the left, some to the vally, some to the plaine, and yet all of them out of the way; yea and the inlightened Christian that hath a true contemplation of right happinesse doth notwithstanding by the halting of his conscience confure that in practise which hee in heart alloweth, confessing it to be ascribed to the spirit, and yet seeketh it in the flesh, placing it in heauen, and yet looking for it in hell, whereas it is better goe to heauen a begger, then to hell an Emperour; and, as Mat. 8. better goe to heauen lame then to hell sound; and yet such is our spirituall blindness that we had rather put it on the hazard of our soules then to lose any present comfort in the body: But how canst thou thinke to finde hony in a waspes nest, or to make a good garment of a spiders webbe, or to receaue holefome food of a cockatrice egge, or to perswade thy selfe of peace and life in following the flesh, which the Lord hath curied? The onely happinesse of a Christian resteth in his wisdom in the spirit, for by this he hath peace about him, and peace aboue him; though iudgement limiteth on euery side, yet it spareth him, for his conscience being vpright, hee hath euer his pardon in his hand to plead; though he be compassed with all the crosses in the world, yet hauing the first peace in the forgiveness of his sinnes, he is assured of his last peace also, that is, his lasting peace in life eternall. That king was miserable that vnder his cloath of estate had a sword hanging ouer his head by a little threed, and in this suspended felicity he was so perplexed, that he wished to be out of his rich misery; much more may they wish it that haue the sword of the Lords vengeance shaking ouer them for studying onely the wisdom of the flesh, which is so far from peace.

peace as it would hide it selfe vnder the hills, and so farre short of life as it is the vndoubted messenger of a most desperate death. But these be onely fruits of such a tree as the feare of God hath made wisely old betimes, being planted by the spirit, and growing vp in the spirit, shewing by their conuersation vpon what stocke they are grafted, and by what tap they are nourished, tasting nothing but the true seruice of God, wherby they are able to stand before him with a cleere conscience which is walled about in euery corner with the peace and fauour of God, and reserued in his due time for the perfection of glory in the life to come.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 7.

7. Because the wisdom of the flesh is enimity against God, for it is not subiect to the law of God, neither indeed can be.

The drift of the Apostle in this verse as in the former, is to shew that our sanctification is the onely security we haue of our saluation, for to them that are in Christ there is life and peace, and this our vnion with him is discerned by our walking in his spirit; and this shall wee know when the things wee doe fauour of the spirit; and this fauour is seene by performing the fruits of the spirit in the course of a godly life. And that this is so, he hath proued by opposing two contraries, as namely by the godly life of a spirituall man, and the godles life of a carnall man: Now heere he sheweth a reason why the wisdom of the flesh is damnation, because it is enimity against God. So this verse standeth on two parts: First, he sheweth what the wisdom of the flesh is, at plaine hatred with God: Secondly, condly, a reason why it is so, because it is not, nor cannot be subject to his law.

x From hence obserue first how pithily the Apostle expresseth this repugnancy of the flesh against the working of the spirit, by this word enimty, for it is a greater matter to be at enimity with God, then to be an enemy to God, as it is more to be vice, then to be a vicious man; to be enuy, then to be an enuious man; to be a beast, then to be a beastly man; to be wickednesse, then to be a wicked man, the one being spoken as it is a quality in it selfe seuered and diuided from any substance, and so is vchangeable; the other but as it is an affection annexed to the person, and a quality seated in the heart which may be rooted out by grace, euen as a spot may be wiped out of the garment: but now the flesh being enimity to God admits of no reconcilment except it be in our persons that are reconciled in Christ, for as long as flesh remaineth flesh, there can be no friendship betweene God and vs: And heerein doth the Apostle notably set foorth our forwardnesse, peruersenesse, rebellion, stubbornnesse, apostasie, reuolting, and ouerthwarting of God in euery thing: for what the wisdome of God delighteth in, that the flesh detesteth; what God speaketh, that the flesh beleueth not; what the one commandeth the other omitteth, and committeth the contrary; what the one setteth in the first place, that the other placeth in the second; what God maketh principall, that the flesh maketh accessary; what one maketh light, the other maketh darkenesse; what the one maketh good, the other peruerteth and turneth into euill: All which wherein the flesh is thus opposite to the wisdome of God may be reduced to these three heads, ouerthwarting him principally: first, in profit: secondly, in pleasure: thirdly, in countenance in the world. God saith, 1. Tim. 6. 6. godlinesse is the greatest riches, giuing it in precept as a matter of most profit, first to seeke the kingdome of heauen; which should be as a perswasion to vs so to vse the world as if wee vsed it not, not to esteeme of wealth, nor any thing else we enioy, in respect of buying the hidden treasure in the field: but now the flesh thinketh vsury the greatest profit, the ioyning of house to house till the whole land be theirs, to be the best purchase, perswading vs not to bee liberall lest wee bee impouerished , and still to heape vp though we know not where to bestow it; and where the wisdom of God saith deale faithfully in thy stewardship , the flesh saith, vnfaithfully, and deceitfully, else thou shalt neuer thrive; and in this regard riches are called wicked Mammon : first, either because they are wickedly gotten : secondly, or wickedly kept : thirdly, or wickedly spent ; whereas God hath made these but as the bounty of his left hand , and additions and hangbies to the gaine of godlinesse , bee they neuer so well come by . For the second, which is pleasure, the wisdom of the flesh makerh much of it selfe, cheereing the heart with wine and strong drinke, Eccle. 9. 7. and following the counsell of the rich man, Luk. 12. 19. to eat, drinke and take it pastime ; and the example of the voluptuous Iewes, who gorged themselues so full till Quailes came loth- somly out of their nostrils, the flesh neuer thinking it hath pleasure enough till it be stifled with it; whereas the wisdom of God saith , drinke wine but for thy health , vse recreation but as a helpe to religious exercises, let thy delight be in the law of God, let it be thy meat and drinke to do the will of thy heavenly father , fast, pray , watch, mourne, and such like, which may put thee in minde thou art but a wayfaring man, and a traueiler, or a warfaring man and a souldier , and hast not so much leasure as to lay by thy weapons , lest thou be surprisid of the enemies which thou bearest about thee in the flesh. For the third, which is countenance, what the wisdom of God counteth shame, the flesh counteth credit, as Iob. 5. 44. How can ye beleue which receiue honour one of a nother, and seeke not the honour commeth of God alone; and Iob. 12. 43. The wisdom of the flesh loueth the praise of men more then the praise of God ; and therefore, Luk. 16. 15. it is said, That which is highly esteemed with men is abominable in the sight of God. It is no credit with the flesh to put vp iniuries, where the wisdom of God saith; vengeance is mine and I will repay, none else shall intrude vpon my possession : and if thou be smitten on the one checke turne the other : which we must not vnderstand literally, for Christ himselfe did not so, but asked why they smot him ; but the meaning is, we must be so far from reuenge as we must rather suffer double wrong, & pray for patience that coles of fire may be heaped vpon their heads, and whether these three meete together in any one man, or any of them alone possesse him the wisdom of the flesh euer rebelleth against the wisdom of God; and this I speake not of the folly of man, but of the very best actions that flesh and blood can doe, for the very best wisdom of the flesh, was that of Peters toward Christ, Matter pittie thy selfe, Mat. 16. 22. 23. and yet for this he was called Sathan: so that to consult with flesh and blood is but to take aduice how to damne our selues, for if we be at enmity with God, it must needs follow wee are at friendship with the diuell.

1. Now for the second part, which is the reason of this enimitie betweene God and the flesh: obserue, that if we will know how to please God, it is taught vs in his law, for if we would yeeld our selues subiect to it, it being giuen and pronounced at first by the mouth of God, written with his finger, and sent by his Angell, deliuered to Moses to be read to the people, and to be left for vs their posterity, it would teach vs how to be the friends of God as Abraham was, for therein is both life and death set before vs, Deut. 5. 33. it is as a line and plummet to square our liues by, and to measure our steppes to heauen; in it is the reuealed will of God for vs, and the secret for himselfe, Deut. 29. 29: in it are contained promises for obedience, and a whole volume of cursings for breaking it: so that if wee will be saued wee must please God, and how wee shall doe this is set forth vnto vs in his law: and if we separate our selues from the vse of this law, then shall it become a killing letter to vs, that is, as oft as we read it we shall read our owne damnation, as appeareth, 2. Kin. 22. 11. But if we study it to make it the rule of our obedience, and as a light to direct vs through the darkehesse of this life, then doth it conuert the soule, condemning sinne in the flesh, and freeing the flesh from sinne, that if we fall, we fall but in the armes of Christ, for hee is the way wee are directed to walke in by the law. So as in a word learne, that the Apostle wil measure thy loue of God, by thy loue of the law of God, euen as an earthly Prince will discern thy affection of him, by thy subiection to his scepter.

42 Secondly, obserue hence, that of all the creatures of God the rebellion rebellion of man is greatest, nay he only swarveth from the course of his first creation, for heere we see how farre he is degenerate; that being made after the image of God to glorifie him in his subiection to his law, now he turneth the heele against him, and hath framed a law to himselfe which he doth follow, namely the lusts of the flesh, denying any obedience to the law of his maker, and not onely disarming himselfe of all possibility of subiection, but putting on the armor of Gods enemy, flatly opposing himselfe, and standing in contradiction with the law of God. But now the rest of the creatures of God, they keepe the end of their creation, the Sunne giuing her light for which she was made, the Sea keeping her bounds wherin she was set, the water yielding her power to cleanse for which she was ordained, the earth bringing forth her fruit, as she was commanded, every beast of the field liuing in the ignorance of his strength, and in his acknowledgement of man to be his head as he was at first enjoyned; whereas if they should alter their naturall course, as the sunne to bring darknesse, the water to defile, the earth to miscarry, and cast all her fruit out of her wombe before it were ripe, and the rest to peruert their ends for which they were giuen vs, wee would count it as monstrous as for a man to goe vpon his head with his feet vppward; and yet is the case of man more monstrous, for where God made him a liuing soule hee hath made himselfe a dead carcase and a damned creature; and where he had his reason sanctified to all good, and knew no euill, he hath now all the powers of his vnderstanding polluted, that nothing but weeds and sinnes doe grow vp in him; and where he had a law giuen him to bridle and keepe him in from ranging, he hath taken the bridle in the teeth, and wrung himselfe by his concupiscence out of the hands and protection of God, nothing being able to curbe or keepe him in till he had cast himselfe out of the saddle, namely the paradise of God; and not resting thus foiled with his fall, he stands now in armes against the Lord as if he threw him downe; whereas (alas) the Lord tooke pleasure in the worke of his hands, seeing it was very good; and hee ouerthrew himselfe in pride and infidelity which stil encreaseth as his age encreaseth, and maketh him so rebellious as he is; The consideration whereof (this being the condition condition of the best of vs, as we lie in the wombe) ought exceedingly to humble vs and wound vs at the heart, that what wee would condemn in the insensible creatures, that we senselessly run into, and yet the obedience wee see performed by them cannot draw vs to the subiection whereto we are tied, which shewes vs to be farre more brutish then they; and therefore what recompence of reward can we expect (if we continue thus vntamed) but as Salomon saith, Prov. 1. 31. to be filled with our owne deuises, and cap. 5. 22. to be holden with the cords of our owne sinne, till destruction come like a whirle wind, and carry vs away without recovery?

3 Againe, learne hence who they be that loue, and who they be that hate God, such as keepe, or keepe not his commandements, according to the saying of Christ, If ye loue me, keepe my commandements; and as is comprised in the end of the second commandement, that mercy shall bee shewed to them that loue him and keepe his commandements; but those that hate him, and wil not haue Christ raigne ouer them, but cast his yooke far from them, he will pursue them with his wrath to the fourth generation. And heere we are to iudge of two sorts of men, the one that sinne of too much presumption, the other that sinne of good intention: the first are blasphemers, profaners of the sabbath, drunkards, adulterers, vsurers & such like, that thinke all time lost which is not spent vpon their lusts, & dare braue the heavens, as if there were no vengeance referued for them; these men chacing and hunting vp and downe to get new occasions of sinning, not masking or dissembling, but openly proclaiming the poison in their hearts by the scabs and vlcers in their liues, doe shew from what head they spring, for making no conscience of sinne they are the brood of the serpent, Iob. 8. 44. & Iob. 3. 8. For he that is borne of God sinneth not, that is, he that laboreth to mortifie his flesh daily, and to purge himselfe by repentance; but he that will set fire to his affections that are already enraged, and study
2 how to inuent mischief, he is of the diuel. For the other sort they are such as will serue God after their fancies, but this will not suffice, for though they meane no hurt, or that their conscience be perswaded that they doe is right, yet heere wee see wee must not frame

frame the law of God according to our conscience, but bend our conscience according to the law of God, to worship him as hee hath prescribed in his word; for if good purposes or good intentions would haue serued, then had the Iewes as great cause to be accepted of God as any, for though they went about to establish their owne righteoufnesse through workes, yet heerein they did no more then they were taught by the Scribes & Pharisees which were their leaders; yea and they liued strictly as was commanded by the law of Moses, and had a zeale, but not according to knowledge, and therefore missed of their saluation. They that persecuted the Prophets, and rose vp against Paul, Act. 22. had a good intention; and Paul himselve in the state of a Pharisee thought he had done God good seruice, when Act. 9. 2. he had got a commission to persecute the church: and what could bee better then for Peter in meere loue to his master Christ, to dissuade him from going vp to Ierusalem, where he knew he should be hardly intreated? yet was hee called sathan for his labour; or what could be better in zeale of conscience, then for Vzzah to relieue and support the Arke from falling, yet because it was contrary to the commandement he was stricken with sudden death. So as our meaning is not that which can excuse vs; for wee must square out our crabbed and knotty timber by the line and plummet, measuring crooked things by that which is straight, that both may be straight; and we must goe to the plaine rule, the law & word of God, & not to that leaden rule wherby we are abused in the error of our iudgement, for we must in euery thing submit our wils to Gods will, that they may be pure and holy as his law is; therefore let this his law be our glasse to see whether we be deformed or beautifull; our touch-stone to trie whether our deuotion be gold or drosse; our ballance that it may appeare whether we be weight or refuse; & our diet to feede on that we surfet not with the sinnefull pleasures of this lfe; and let vs walke with straight feete in an euen path, that wee neither decline to the right hand to sinne of presumption, nor to the left to sinne of good intention, but without looking backe (except it be to correct that which is amisse) let vs ever bee going forward in that way the Lord hath set vs in, and then to vs that walke according.

ding to this rule peace shall light and rest vpon vs, Gal. 6. 16. and mercy shall compasse vs on euery side.

Further, in that the Apostle saith, that the wisdome of man neither is nor can be subiect to the law of God, we gather against the opinion of the Papists, that it is no way in our power or free-will to take or to refuse the grace of God, whereby at first wee should be conuerted; for as there is no power in a bow to bend it selfe further then it is drawn by the strength of man, no more is there any liberty in vs to incline our wils to goodnesse, further then it is pressed and forced by grace; for first we say the infusion of grace is from aboue, and the power to retaine it and apply it is from aboue also, it being a speciall prerogatiue giuen to Gods elect onely, as Christ himself saith, None can come to me except my father draw him; the word signifieth a violent forcing and vrging of a man when with all his strength he withstands it; and the heart of a man is as a stone that cannot be softened, except it be by the blod of Christ, no more then the diamond can except it be by the blood of a Goate, but when it hath once beene washed with the blood of the Sonne of God, then our wils worke like waxe in the fingers of the Lord, Phil. 2. 3. Besides, if it should bee arbitrary with vs to refuse or receaue the grace of our conuersion, then should we still continue in our blood, for as we haue no light in our selues at all, so being inlightned wee can no longer keepe it then the hands of Christ are laide vpon vs; and therefore the Lord saith, Exo. 33. 19. I will haue mercy on whom I will, and whom I will I harden; it being wholly and meerey in him for the magnifying of his mercy on some, and the manifestation of his iustice on others, to saue and to condemne: and this is set foorth ynto vs, Luk. 15. 5. in the parable of the lost sheepe, for such are wee all by nature, straying from God in the breach of his commandement, in the fruit of the forbidden tree. Now they will al grant it is mercy at first in the Lord to seeke vs, and when he hath spied vs out in the desert of our sinnes, doe we of our selues set any one foote forward to hasten or helpe our returne home? No, but our shepheard is faine to take vs on his shoulders and carry vs all the way home to his fathers house, for if we were not haled, and pulled, and borne, and drawne to God by

by violence, we would be like the starting bow, that would recoile back againe. Neither doth this take away the freedome we had in our creation, for in Adam there was a double or twofold free will, answerable to the twofold estate wherein he stood, the first while he was in his innocencie, & that was like the wil of the Angels in heauen, in that of his own nature he was wholly & freely inclined to do that which was good; The second, after his fall, & that was like the will of the diuell, who was a liar from the beginning, and hath no libertie but in doing euill, for hee can not but sinne, and euen such is ours, that come out of the corrupted loines of Adam, for we haue election onely to commit this sin, or that sinne, as may serue our turnes best, and as naturall reason doth lead vs to: so as in that wee are said to be free, it is to make vs inexcusable; and in that wee are bound, it is to make vs miserable; for so long as wee are holden of the flesh, there is a kind of seruile and slavish necessitie to sinne naturally, there being nothing but sinne and filth in our conception, and all the tortures and contradictions that are, cannot change our willes to good, when they are inclined to sinne; howbeit this necessitie shall not excuse the will, nor the will excuse the necessitie; neither yet by holding this necessitie of sinning in the vnregenerate man doe we charge God with any iniustice at all, as the papists charge vs with; because this necessitie proceedeth not from God but from Adam in whom we stood, and in whom we fell, in whom we were blessed, and in whom we were cursed. And yet haue we great need to be stirred vp by exhortations, and terrised by threats: for the reprobate in three respects; First, to keepe them from outrageous sinnes, for God hath giuen that grace and power to the voice of a man, that it strikes the heart as a thunderbolt, and by this awe they are kept in by denouncing of iudgement: it doth appeare that God hath some church among them, which they like wilde Boares of the Forrest would otherwise willingly roote out: Secondly, that by this meanes their consciences being a little opened, might sometime accuse them to their greater confusion; for hearing of the wrath of God and the nature of it, of the mercy of God and the comfort in it, they doe oftentimes taste of hell euen in this life: Thirdly,

3 Thirdly, to make them the more inexcusable at the last day, when they cannot say but the light was shewed them, and they shut their eyes; and that grace was offered, but they spurned against it in their hearts. This preaching and exhorting and re-proouing is also necessary for the elect, as an instrument to conuocie vnto vs that grace whereby we are conuerted, as Lydia by hearing, Act. 16. 14. had her heart opened; for though wee might liue by Gods prouidence without our appointed foode of bread, Deut. 8. 3. yet if we should reiect bread, thinking to liue by bare prouidence, wee should tempt God: euen so, though the grace of Christ doth onely saue vs, yet is his word as the golden vessell wherein it is reached foorth vnto vs.

 Out of this then that hath beene spoken generally obserue: that the best, choicest, and chiefest actions of a naturall man, are enimitie against God, that is, doe directly fight and offend the maiestie of God: the reason is, because we are in this estate, so farre from yeelding subiection to his law, that therefore we sinne the more, because the law forbids vs; for as there is great contrarietie betwixt cold and heat, so is there greater betwixt the spirituall law of God, and the corrupt law of our flesh; and as the fire compassed about with the force of the winde, hath the heat that struggleth to come foorth, beaten backe by the power of the winde, whereby it increaseth the rage of the fire, as experience teacheth vs, in scalding more in winter than in summer; euen so is it with vs, for sinne that would come foorth, and is driuen backe by the power of the commandement, proueth the more fierce and enraged sinne. Since then it is our nature to sinne the more because we are forbidden to sinne, and that the successe and fruite of sinne is so dangerous, as to keepe vs at enimitie with God, with whom if we make no peace, but continue at warre, we shall haue the woorse, being to him but as the drie stubble bfore the fire: let vs beware how in this lethargie of sinne we fall alleepe, since watchfulnesse is the cure prescribed by our Physician Christ; but let vs tremble at the first motion of sinne, shake off the least occasion that may prouoke vs to it; checke it when it begins first to start out, and cut it off while it is yet tender, lest growing strong headed, it makes vs grow stiffe necked,

and stubburne hearted; for it is not the way to amend, barely to wish thou could leaue it, and yet to excuse thy sinne, because it is thy nature, for aswell maiest thou acquit the theefe that robbeth thee, for he will pray thee to beare with him, and tell thee it is so old and sweet a sinne to steale, as he cannot chuse but follow it: But thou must submit thy selfe to be reprooued for thy sinne, range thy selfe equally to the obedience of euerie Commandement, not excluding couetousnesse as thy enemy, and yet suffering thy selfe to be surprisid by flatterie, as a friend to thy promotion; reiecting hatred, and yet harboring deceit; gaine-saying pride, and yet abounding in oppression; defying poperie, and yet embracing blasphemie; for they end all alike in destruction of body and sorrow of minde: let vs not therefore go neere the stewes, if our eies bee bent to lust; nor affect preeminence if our hearts be bent to pride; nor handle treasure if our affection encline to couetousnesse; nor haunt the tauerne lest our appetites bee enflamed with wine; for this were to quench the fire with oile, which is as suell to maintaine it: But let vs so moderate our selues in these inferior blessings, as we auoid prouocations to sin, because of our pronenesse to sinne, and suffer not our weake nature to be too sharply assaulted by these decciueable delights, which are in themselues but as sugred sinnes, the more easily to ensnare vs in the nets of the diuell.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 8. 9.

8. So then they that are in the flesh can not please God.
 9. Now yee are not in the flesh but in the spirit, because the spirit of God dwelleth in you; but if any man hath not the spirit of Christ, the same is not his.

IN these verses the Apostle concludeth his former argument of the opposition betweene the flesh and the spirit, both waies proceeding proceeding as it were by steppes and degrees in this sort: They that walke after the course of the world, saour the things of the flesh, and relishing nothing else they saour of damnation, their consciences being alreadie scorched with the fire of hell: and this is all the excellencie of mans wisdom, because it is not at slight variance, but at vtter defiance with God, and it continueth in this enimitie, because it is not in subiection to his law, and it is not, because it can not; and since it cannot but rebell, it is impossible it should please God. On the other side; they that make a conscience of their waies, saour the things of the spirit, and by this their taite and delight in heavenly things, they purchase to themselues life and peace, for such is the wisdom of the spirit; and not being in the flesh, they cannot but please God: which is partly expressed, & partly implied vpon direct consequent of the former words in the end of vers. 8. For since they that are giuen ouer as reprobates to the flesh cannot please God, they that haue but flesh and infirmities onely in them, hauing the greatest part of their soule and body seasoned with the graces of God, they cannot but please God; and such are yee, vers. 9. the Apostle speaking of the elect; which containeth three parts in it: First a proposition assumed, S. Paul taking it as granted, and as a matter without controuersie, that they were not in the flesh, but were in part sanctified: Secondly, the reason that moued him so to take it, because the spirit wrought in them holinesse of life; for God and an vnclane liuer cannot lodge vnder one rooffe. Thirdly, a reason of that, or a confirmation of the reason by the contrarie, they that want Christs spirit are none of Christs: but yee are elect and chosen, and ingrafted into Christ; and therefore yee haue his spirit, and hauing his spirit, he hath so crucified your corruptions as you are no longer in the flesh; and then being dead vnto sinne yee are alieue vnto God.

Hence obserue first the great force and efficacy of those words, They that are in the flesh, for it is a greater matter to be in the flesh then for fleih to be in vs, for this maketh vs more fleshly; the first being true onely of the reprobate and castawaies, the other onely of the elect; euen as it is a greater disgrace to say that a man is in his wine, whereby is meant drunkennesse, then that wine is in a man, for the best may take it to comfort their hearts ; so to say that a man is cholericke, is more then to say choler is in a man, the one being spoken as it is an offensue passion, the other but as it is an element or quality or part of a mans constitution; so to say a man is in his heat, is more then to say heat is in a man ; so to say that a man is couetous, is a sharper speech, then to say couetousnesse is in him, the one shewing him to be ouercome of the sinne of couetousnesse, the other but that the seed onely of the sinne is in him, which is true of vs all, we remaining in some part vnregenerate. And this is answerable to the speech of Dauid, Psa. 51. 5. I was borne in iniquity, and in sinne did my mother conceaue me, it being more to be conceaued in sinne, then for sinne to be conceiued in vs ; as it was more for Simon Magus, Act. 8. 23. to be in the gall of bitternesse, then for the gall of bitternesse to be in him, the holy Ghost shewing by the phrase there vsed how he was ouerwhelmed and drowned in malice of hart against God. And this kind of aggravating of sinnes in a man by this kind and maner of speech was well vnderstood, and vsed by the Pharisees, Ioh. 9. 34. where they said to him that had receaued his sight of Christ that hee was altogether borne in sinnes; But now flesh and sinne may be in a man, and yet he may haue an inclination to goodnesse: which serueth greatly for the curing of an afflicted conscience, that if wee can assure our selues without guile of spirit, that we strue to the vtermost to mortifie the rebellious lusts of the flesh, and that we delight more in doing of good then of euill, then are we not in the flesh, and then can we not but please God because we are vnited to his sonne in whom his soule delighteth; for flesh, that is weaknesse & imperfection, is in the best that euer came from the loines of man; but none are in the flesh but they that giue themselves ouer, and lay themselves naked to the lusts of it; euen as pride is in all men, but they are onely in pride that thinke they haue learned enough when they haue learned nothing of Christ truly, not caring how leane and beggerly their soules bee, and yet thinke they haue neuer enough to pamper vp their bodies to their best shew : so there is some couetous desire in all men, but they onely are in couetousnesse that make riches their God and are not rich in God.

¶ Z

Secondly,

Secondly, we must vnderstand that the Scripture speaketh of (flesh) in two sorts: first, as it is part of that flesh which is in man:
 secondly, as it is the whole flesh of man. Of the first the scripture speaketh of it as it is subiect to weakenesse, frailty, and mortality, as Psa. 78. 39. He remembered that they were flesh, yea a wind that passeth and commeth not againe: and Esa. 40. 6. All flesh is grasse, and all the grace thereof as the flower of the field. Sometime the word (flesh) is taken for the ceremonies of the law, as Gal. 3. 3. Are ye so foolish, that after yee haue begun in the spirit yee would be made perfect by the flesh? Sometime for the basenesse of man, as 2. Cor. 10. 3. Though we walke in the flesh, yet we doe not warre after the flesh. Sometime for the estimation and credit of a man: and sometime for the common course of nature, as Gal. 4. 29. He that was borne after the flesh, persecuted him was borne after the spirit. Of the second, that is, of the whole flesh of man, the scripture speaketh as it is subiect to the wrath of God, and this is that Paul meaneth heere, and which is mentioned, Iob. 3. 6. That that is borne of flesh is flesh, that is, vncleane: which may be thus described; It is that naturall corruption which is in vs being absolutely deprivied of al heavenly grace, and positively full of all sinne, of all manner of sinnes, of all the vilest sinnes, by sinne meaning originall sinne, which is called, primus foetus peccati, the first birth of sinne; or else sinne proceeding from it, and out of it, called perpetuus fomes peccati, the continuall nourishment and feeding of sinne: for example, water may be made hot when it is cold, or cold when it is hot, or may be congealed into ice, & yet it remaineth water; but snow cannot properly bee termed snow when it is melted and turned into water, for then it can be no more snow; so is it with the flesh, for it may be altered and changed and transformed into the image of Christ, so that good things may dwell in it; but then it is no more flesh: But so long as flesh remaineth flesh, that is, vnwashed in the powers of the soule, & polluted by the actions of the body, so long it is impossible that any goodnesse should spring from it, and so impossible to please God. From whence learne, that so much flesh as we haue is deprivied of all grace, and full of all sinne: and withall to confesse, that every one of vs hath so much flesh in him as deserueth

ferueth wrath: which ought to humble vs in praier before the mercy seat of God, that this remnāt of corruption may be changed, abated, and diminished, that the greatest part in vs may be regenerate: and not to possit ouer our sinnes; as for the vsurer to say, it is not he that sinneth but his vsury; or for the carnal man to say, it is not he that offendeth but his flesh; and so to go through all sins, and yet thinke he is corrupted by no sin, for this were but to take Adams figleaues which were too light to couer our hypocrisie: so as for him that is fleshly, to recreate himselfe with vn-sanctified solaces, is but to make him more fleshly; and for thee to sinne the more because thou art flesh, is to carry fire in thy bosome, Pro. 6. 27. and to put it to the drie stubble; whereas thou oughtest to be taught the contrary lesſon by thy infirmity, that since thou art weake thou wilt labour to strengthen thy selfe in the grace of Christ; and since thou art so apt to sinne, thou wilt lay faster hold vpon the word of promise, which shall keepe thee from it; for sinne must not be dead in thee in this sense, as that thou art past feeling it, but as by the perfect obedience of Christ it was absolutely flaine for thee, so likewise by thy regeneration must it daily die in thee, till by thy naturall death it do wholly die with thee. On the other side let vs beware, for if wee sowe to the flesh, that is, if we be transported with a more eager desire for the duties to man, then for the seruice of God, or performe loue to them for the flesh, that is, for wordly respects and not for conscience, then doe we remaine still in the flesh, that is, in the state of damnation. For if we haue not the spirit of God to season our hearts, though wee abound in knowledge both of matters concerning this life for direction, and of the commandements of God for instruction, yea & do taste in som measure of the sweetness of grace for our inlightning; yet if we suffer our soule to be the fountaine of all vncleanenelle, and doe make the members of our body as so many pipes or conduites, to conuey that vncleanenelle into our liues, the most part of our thoughts, of our words and deeds, of our affections and desires, tending more to the dishonoring of God, & the satisfiing of our delights in the flesh, then to the furthering of our saluation, making riches our hope, the wedge of gold our confidence, and truiting in the strength of our malice, as David saith, Psal. 52. 7. Then are wee in the damnable state of flesh, these being iniquities to bee condemned, and as Iob saith, chap. 31. 28. A plaine denying of God, which must of necessitie displease him in the highest degree.

Further obserue hence, that none but sanctified men can please God, and that all the worke of carnall men and reprobates, with what face soeuer they be done are hatefull to him; the reason is because none of them consent to the law of God in any other sort, then to make them inexcusable; for the vnderstanding whereof wee must know that there is a twofold writing of the law in the hearts of men, the one by the finger of God, the other by the spirit of God, and that which is written by the spirit, is onely in Gods children, the other is in all men and in all nations being the law of nature, which is the light of reason, and by this they doe know and see their finnes, and so farre they consent to the law: but not in this, to loath their sin or to be grieved at it, hauing a striving with the sinne, but not against the sinne, against the sense and feeling of it, that they may more eagerly follow it; for hauing this law written in his conscience which accuseth him for sinne, he laboreth to race it out that he may sinne without controuement, for pride, selfe-loue, cruelty, hatred and such like are passions alwaies working inwardly vpon their members, that is, vpon their wils, vnderstandings & affections, which sometimelie hid like a toade vnder a stone; this proceeding from the goodnesse of God, for the loue he beareth to his Church; for if the Lions of the field should euer roare, what should become of the poore lambes? And if they should harch all the finnes they haue conceaued, they would liue worse then wild beasts, & wee should haue no peace nor face of a Church among vs: and therefore what the Lord cureth in his elect, he restraineth onely in the wicked by an inferior working of his grace, that they burst not forth into outragious finnes; he being likewise hindred from the height of his impiety, partly for feare of punishment, and partly for feare of shame and discredit, the world euer liking it well, that men should liue ciuilly, lest a ruine of the whole might ensue. And yet herein we may see the exceeding bountie of God, that that euen for liuing morally and aiming but at earthly praise and commendation, without any respect of the loue of God, these being fruits not of the woorst sort, he rewardeth them in this life with his outward blessings, for their ciuil obedience and outward cariage, & in the life to come, though not with heauen, yet with mitigation of their punishment in hell. Iehu we know was but a carnall man, for he departed not from the sins of Iero-boam, that made Israel to sin, 2. Kin. 10. 30. 31. yet because he did diligently execute that was right in Gods eies, he rewarded him in this life with the promise of posteritie to the fourth generation, to sit vpon the throne: notwithstanding all that the wicked do, tend to death; because they performe onely the letter, & not the sense of the commandement in their best works. Now in that the wicked are recompenced in this life, it is in two respects: first, to encourage vs to performe the like duties outwardly which they doe: secondly, to comfort vs in this; that if the Lord carrieth his eie of bountie toward them that are without and strangers from his fold; much more will he reward vs which are his elect and sheepe of his owne pasture. And yet in that their best fruites bring death vpon their soules, and cannot please God, it is to meet with the bold presumption of them that think they shall be saved, what profession soeuer they be of, and that they be greatly in Gods fauour if their actions be a little varnished ouer with hypocrisie; which is as much as if they should thinke to goe to heauen backward, which will deceaue them; for if a theefe going to the gallowes should thinke himselfe in as good case as a true man, would we not iudge it madnesse, since the one escapeth, and the other is hanged; yet fareth it thus with worldlings and profane men, who sleeping in the midst of the sea, thinke to escape drowning; and liuing in the lusts of the flesh, imagine to escape damning, which cannot be, no more then they that sleepe in the toppe malte without any hold, can thinke to escape falling.

Now in that the Apostle saith, Ye are not in the flesh: we must vnderstand he speaketh generally to all the Iewes, who at this time were the house and garden of God; for then none were admitted into the church, but onely such as were outwardly reformed and seemed to be regenerate by their submitting themselves to the publicke ordinance of God in the word and prayer; and as for outrageous and shamelesse sinners, as adulterers, blasphemers, prophaners of the Sabbath, and such like, they were not to be received without repentance, that as they signified their disobedience by their sinne, so should they testify their sorrow by their confession, and then they ceased to be such: for as it is treason in the Chancellor to passe any thing from the Prince, without the Prince his seale; so they accounted it in those times treason against God, to set the seale of Baptisme on that childe that had neither of the parents a beleever: where we may learne that we must esteeme hypocrites as regenerate, and to be in the spirit of Christ, because they are outwardly reformed in their liues, and in profession doe resemble the children of God; but if they be open and notorious offenders in any grosse sinne, committed with a high hand, then ought they to be excluded for a time, till shame and separation from their brethren may worke their humilitie to amendement: but if they continue obstinate, not to be reclaimed, then are they to be cut off as putrified and rotten members, that may infect others; otherwise dissembling hypocrites must be wrapped vp in the prayers of the Church, and the tares must be suffered to grow vp with the wheate, and the goate may giue as much milke as the sheepe, and for the goodnesse of it it must be left to the secrets of God, till he thrust his sickle into the haruest. Howbeit this order of proceeding against knowne and infamous sinners, as to thrust snarling dogs out of the Church; & to cast the acornes among swine, is not to be done by every priuate man, but by the church and congregation; and if they admit any such, the fault lieth in them, & not in those that ioyne with them; for the children may take their appointed foode, though some snarling and snatching cures and bastards stand by: And where it is said in another place by this Apostle; Eat not with him: it is not meant of the Communion at the Lords table, but that wee must haue no familiaritie with him, nor take delight in his companie.

Further out of the reason giuen, why they were not in the flesh; namely, because the spirit of God was in them, we gather, that the school may be applied of salvation

that a man may be sure of his saluation: and this is the whole drift of S. Paul in this Chapter, to secure the elect of the everlasting loue of God in his Sonne, sensible felt in themselves; for hee beginneth with this generall ground of their comfort, That there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ; then must they needs be saved. But now all the question is, who they be that are ingrafted into Christ; & for prooffe hereof, he descendeth to examine the particular course of their life, which is visibly seene to all, but particularly and best knowne to ones selfe, & this is, if they walke in the spirit by a religious kinde of conuersation; and their way in this is discerned by their life in the spirit, that is, by their ioy and comfort in godlinesse; and this spirituall life is seene by not gratifying the flesh in the lustes and desires thereof; and this crossing and correcting of the flesh in the pride of her lusts, is seene by crucifying and killing of it with the affections thereof, that is, not onely beating and pressing it downe, but stifling and braining of it altogether; and this violence to the flesh is performed by them that haue suffered with Christ in the flesh, that is, that haue not listened or given eare to the pleasures of sinne, but haue, Heb. 12. 1. cast away that presseth downe, and the corruption that hangeth so fast on: and this is done by them, 1. Pet. 4. 1. that cease from sinne, that is, that slip into it vnawares, as a bird into a snare; and such be they as bestow the rest of their time after the will of God; and his will being our worke, we cannot but please him, & pleasing him, it is his pleasure, Lu. 12. 32. to giue vs a kingdome. Besides, we may know whether we haue the spirit of God in vs or no, as appeareth, 1. Cor. 2. 11. 12. No man knoweth the things of man, saue the spirit of a man; euen so the things of God knoweth no man but the spirit of God, which we haue receaued, that we might know the things are giuen to vs of God: which proueth that as we know our owne thoughts or words; so the spirit of God in vs maketh knowen the wil of God to vs, as far as is needful to be reuealed: if we then know the will of God, we may assure our selues we know his spirit to be in vs, for his wil is not known without his spirit, this spirit teaching truth; but the spirit of the world broching error. And 1. Io. 4. 13. hereby know we that we dwel in Christ, and he in vs, because he hath giuen vs of his spirit: which proo-ueth that though we know not what maner of thing the spirit is, because it is inuisible and secer, yet we may know we haue it by the fruits of a sanctified life: after this maner speaketh Paul,

 2. Corint. 13.5. Know yee not that Christ is in you except you be reprobates? And yet the Papiſts would haue all reprobates, counting it presumption to say we haue the spirit. It is true, if any presume he hath it, when his life is not answerable to it, he is deceaued, and abused by presumption; but if wee walke and trade in the spirit by a holy conuersation, we may be sure we haue it, for that is the argument of the Apostle, that our sanctification is an vndoubted testimonie and an assured certaintie that Christ dwelleth in vs; for there being but two spirits that rule in the hearts of all men, the one the spirit of the world, the other the spirit of God, why should not our course be as prophane as others, and our carriage runne after the flesh as well as theirs, if the mightier and stronger, that is, the spirit of Christ did not possesse our soules? Yet say they; No man can secure himselfe he shall be sau'd. But as we may be sure of the spirit, so may we likewise be of the riches that it bringeth, which is saluation, for it cannot hide so great a treasure from vs, it being as an earnest pennie giuen vs, that perfecteth the purchase of our inheritance in heauen; for as we may trace a Hare in the snow by her footing, and come to the forme where shee sits; euen so by those holy steppes that wee tread, and by those spirituall bounds wherein we keepe our thoughts and our affections, we may well and certainly perceau'e that the spirit leades vs. to the seate of God. Besides, this spirit of God within vs keepeth not his fruit and comfort secret to himselfe, but discovereth it to vs, and beareth witness to our spirits, that we are the chosen of God; and the spirit of man knowes what is in man, whether his heart be filled with hypocrisie or with sinceritie; with humilitie or with pride;
 with true zeale or with counterfait; that howsoeuer wee may bleare the sight of men by our dissembling, yet we carrie our owne eyes downe to our heart, that see by what false waights we measure our fruits to God, that is, our religion and our righte-ousnesse to men, that is, our conuersation: so as we haue a double euidence

evidence of our saluation, the one backing and strengthening the other, which is set foorth, 1. Iob. 5. 8. There be three which beare record in earth, the spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one, and where water is, there hath blood gone before, for these two goe together, as they came foorth of Christs side together, Iob. 19. 34. repentance being the leader, and remission of sinnes following after; blood washing away our guiltinesse, and water the vncleannesse of our liues, and the spirit of Christ sealing vp these things in our hearts, that as by the sealing of the conueiance the purchase in law is made perfect: so by the setting of our consciences in an vp-right course roward God, our saluation in Christ is made perfect and sure, euen to vs. Yet say they, wee cannot assure our selues wee shall thus continue; for we haue examples of many that haue begun in the spirit, and haue ended in the flesh, that haue seemed fruitfull for a while, and haue beene barren euer after, that haue giuen Iohn Baptyst good countenance, and yet haue chopt off his head, for reproofing iustly. It is true, there is none standeth but he may fall if he leane to his owne wisedome, nay he must wither if he grow vp among stones, because he was neuer well rooted; and whensoever the Lord pulleth away the vizard from any that masked vnder the cloake of religion, he doth it to make them that stand strengthen themselves in Christ, Philip. 4. 13. and to make them that be hollow hearted tremble; for they that thus fall, their heart telleth them before hand of it, their comming to Christ being but in the Sunne-shine when there are no clouds of persecution hanging ouer; and their following after him, being like a theefe after his pray, that will let it goe vlesse hee may gaine by it, their hearts euer misgiuing them in their owne profession, and they hauing a secret corner in the flesh which they alway feede, what shew soeuer they make to the contrarie. But now the straight and vp-right minded Christian hath his heart as adamant, and his face as brasse, that armes him with resolution for the Lords cause, he hath no confidence in the flesh, Phil. 3. 3. but his whole reioycing is in Christ; he seeleth such sap of the spirit at the roote, that he thinketh it (with Christ) to be his meate to do the will of God, yea he can truly and boldly say with this

Apostle,

Apostle, that neither anguish of minde, nor torment of body, vers. 39. can seuer him, or make him so much as lose the sight of his master Christ, but he will euer be iust behind him, for by his life he hath comfort in him, by his afflictions he hath fellowship with him, and by his death he shall enioy the presence of him for euermore: all this heart and assurance they haue, hauing their foundation from the words of Christ, Iohn 10. 28. None shall plucke my sheepe out of my hands. And whether thou beest a sheepe or no thou canst tell by thy feeding, for howsoeuer thou mayst come to graze in the outward assemblie with the congregation; yet if thine eare be only feeding at Church, and thy thoughts and thy affections at home in the flesh, thy selfe canst tell thou art but a wolfe in sheeps clothing: so that as the perswasion of our saluation is certaine and vndoubted, so is it also constant and perpetuall. Howbeit, the power and pride of prosperitie wherewith the wicked are puffed vp, and the strength and sting of aduersitie wherewith the godly are humbled and abased, the one trampling vpon the earth as if it were too base to beare them, the other creeping like wormes and grasshoppers vpon the ground, hath made many to stagger in the opinion of their profession, and in the perswasion of their saluation, because he seemed thus to passe by them as in a whirlwind, and by the wicked with a mild and still voyce, meeting them as it were in the successe of euery thing: and this was that made Dauid, Psal. 73. 13. thinke his labour in mortification to be but lost, because he tasted of correction euery morning; whereas they that set their mouths against heauen were lusty & strong, and had the waters of a full cup of prosperity wrung out to them: but when he had bene in the Sanctuary of God asking counsell of him, by whom he vnderstood their end to be but as a dream when one awaked, they increasing their sins by their fulnesse, wherby they make the sword sharper for their slaughter; then he found his owne footing to be safe, and theirs to be slipperie, the one to begin his iourney with sorrow, and to end it with peace, the other to set foorth in iollitie, but to come home as we say by weeping crosse: for as Iob saith, Chap. 20. 22. Terrors shall take the wicked as waters, and the east wind shall hurle him out of his place, and God shall cast vpon him him and not spare him, though hee would faine flee out of his hand. Euen so let vs not make this comfort of our assured blessednes vncomfortable to vs by our doubting, for if we wauer in this, whether God loue vs and we him, the chastisement of a father will prooue the scourge of a reuenger, and we shall thinke he smites vs because he hates vs, and lifts vs vp to cast vs downe; or else wee shall imagine our store to come from our owne hands, and measure our liues after the crooked line of mens example, which runne on heapes to hell, for their owne soules conuinceth them of their forgetfulnesse of God, and then cannot he remember them in Paradise; whereas we setting God alwaies at our right hand, may be sure hereafter he will set vs at his, and that he guiding vs by his counsell, Psal. 73. 24. can not but in his time receiue vs to glory. Therefore let vs lift vp our heads and keepe the way euen within, that there may be as little rubbish in the heart as can be: and since through infirmitie we fall oft, let our care be it be in the right way, where we are sure to meete with Christ, who is the way and the life to vs; and let vs make the like vse traouellers do, goe the faster for our fall, for our faith must goe further then to beleuee there is God the father, Sonne, and holy Ghost, and a communion of Saints, &c. this being but in general; whereas we must beleuee it with application to our own particular, as that he is a God to me, in his loue to make me, and by his prouidence to keepe me; a Sonne to me, to redeeme me when I was lost, and to feede me when I am come home; a holy Ghost to me, to comfort me in my distresse, and to worke in me a holy life; a communion of Saints to me, to help me with their prayers, and to strengthen me by their good example. And if this treasure be in thy heart, thou hast the assurance of thy saluation laid vp there for thee also.

Againe, where it is said, the spirit dwelleth in you, learne, that we must not serue God by fits, but it must be continually, for the spirit remaineth not in vs for a time, but taketh vp his mansion and abiding with vs, and while he is with vs he is euer working, as the Sunne is euer mouing, and works of his owne nature, stirring vp good thoughts and affections in vs at all times, and is neuer idle nor in vaine in vs; not but that in many things we offend
all,

all, but we send forth such a peale as it were of prayers and repentance after the sinne committed, as it ouertakes it and turnes it back before it can flee to the iustice of God; and this is that maketh S. Iohn, 1. Iohn 3. 9. to set it downe as a position and rule in scripture, that he that is borne of God sinneth not at all, because it flies forth as shot to which the hand did neuer set fire, we being ouertaken sometime in weakenes that we slip, which we no sooner feele, but being warned by this spirit, we gather our feete the more close together to stand fast. Since then this spirit of God hath set vp his rest in our soules, let vs as lively stones in this spirituall building cleanse & polish our selues from all corruptions, that it may take delight to continue with vs; for if he come to suruey thy heart, to see what roome thou hast for him, and he finde every chamber there full of some sinne, and seeth that as fast as he emptieth it with one hand thou fillest it vp with another, resisting the power of him as if he came to torment thee, he will take his flight from thee, and thy sinnes shall breake out as the plague-sore vpon thee to thy vtter confusion: but if thou submit thy selfe to his worke, suffering him to mine and vndermine every veine in thy body, and to cleanse every corner in thy soule, and being emptied of thy corruption, wilt labour in sanctification to keepe thy selfe cleane, so beating downe thy fleshly thoughts and carnall desires, as they shall not so much as sleepe with thee, and if they chance to creepe into thy bed thou wilt spurne them out as a chaste louer wil a harlot; then shal the spirit take vp thy body as his house, and thou entertaining him, he will keepe out all thine enemies that may disturbe thy peace with Christ.

Lastly, where he saith, But he that hath not the spirit of Christ is not his, obserue, that by an argument drawne from a naturall man he prooueth, that as many as haue the spirit of Christ are sure of their saluation; for as a naturall man who hath not the spirit is not Christs so long as hee remaineth a naturall man; so consequentlie it followeth, that they that haue the spirit are Christs, and being his, it were an absurd thing if they should not be saued; for the conscience being pacified that God will accept vs in Christ, we are not now perplexiuely to doubt of our saluation, or how to auoid damnation; for if we should doubt of our saluation, saluation, it were as Paul saith Rom. 10. 6. to call in question the ascension of Christ into heauen: and if we should feare to goe to hell, it were to thinke that Christ in his soule neuer suffered the torments of hell, which are two such inconsequences and absurdities grounded vpon the person of Christ, as wee must beware we fall not into them. Howbeit, hence learne, that as the cleect are sure of their saluation, so may a wicked man bee sure hee is in the state of reprobation; for hee that hath not the spirit of Christ is none of his; and that is the ground of the Apostle in these last words: now he hath not this spirit that liueth not in it; and he liueth not in it that walketh not in it; and he walketh not in it that fulfilleth the lusts of the flesh; and hee doth this that crucifieth not the flesh; and hee doth not crucifie it that ceaseth not from sinne; and he ceaseth not from sinne that walketh after the lusts of men, for the course of the world and the course of the diuell are all one, S. Paul ioyning them both together, Ephe. 2. 2. and hee ruleth in the hearts of none but of the disobedient: and so long as he continueth thus, he hath not the spirit of Christ, for that will make him humble and pliable to the hand of God; so as all this while he belongeth not to Christ, and so is in the state of condemnation; for as the soule of a brute beast hath no knowledge, no more hath the soule of a naturall man any knowledge of the will of God, because he wanteth the spirit of Christ to teach it him. And that this might more sensibly be seen of vs, the Lord sometime to our greater shame maketh the beasts of better vnderstanding than our selues, as Balaams asse, Numb. 22. 22. was better sighted than himselfe and his two seruants, the asse turning out of the way to auoid the wrath of the Angell, when her matter would needs rush vpon it; so the Lord complaineth Esay 1. 3. that the oxen knoweth his owner to submit himselfe to his yoke, but Israel knew not him to performe their duties to him as the brute beasts did to their masters. And this is the estate of all that be vnregenerate & reprobate, they haue the sword of the Lords wrath alreadie sticking in their soules which will make them bleed to death at length, and they can haue but a languishing ioy in this earthly house, because in the end their name shall rot, Prouerb. 10. 7, and their honor shall flie vp into the aire like smoke; and thus their owne heart choketh them with trembling within themselues, as the thought of death, and stealeth but a litle pleasure while they forget their last iudgement, like the theefe that is merrie in hope the Assises will neuer come, which when it approcheth, turneth his mirth into wormewood. I vrge not this to discourage any, but to make vs more carefull to seeke for Christes spirit, if we haue it not, fearefull to dissemble it when we want it, and cheerefull to entertaine it when we once inioy it; for what are the pleasures of youth, the power of soueraigntie, the possession of wealth, the libertie of age, the benefit of fleshly wisdom? when as Iob saith, chap. 3. 18. the prisoner and the oppressor rest both together in the graue? nay when the one by death is loosed from the tyrannie of the wicked, and the other by death begins but to taste the torment of the damned. Let vs therefore take heed how we greue or go from this spirit of Christ, for true it is God can make darknesse light, sower sweet, and thy luke-warme fire to be hot; but then must thou labour daily in the washing of thy feete, Iohn 13. 10. that the superfluities that hang vpon the flesh may be shaken off, for mercy is not alway to be met with, and his execution is most iust that either refuseth or abuseth his pardon.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 10.

Vers. 10. And if Christ be in you the bodie is dead because of sinne, but the spirit is life for righteousnesse sake.

IN this verse the Apostle maketh the prevention of a doubt which might haue risen out of the former doctrine : for hee hauing before prooued that the spirit of God , the spirit of Christ, and Christ himselfe are in vs that are elect, wee might make question of the trueth of this , seeing we haue a large remnant of sinne and of the corruption of nature abiding in vs : To this the Apostle answereth in this verse, and those that follow ; First granting that so long as wee carrie about vs this bodie, so long shall we carrie about vs sinne in our bodie, part whereof is alreadie mortified in this life, the rest can not be but by mortalitie : But then in the second place that wee might not be too much deiected with this clogge of sinne we draw after vs , he would haue vs with this occasion we haue to humble vs, to ioyne withall the consideration of the spirit of Christ which is in vs, to raise vs vp againe : assuring vs that if our faith by her visible frutes can appeare in our liues , that though we haue a portion of sinne which can not die but by death , yet we haue the spirit of God, the spirit of Christ, and Christ himselfe dwelling in vs , the fruite whereof is euerlasting life in glorie, obtained by the righteousnesse of Christ for vs ; applying himselfe in the latter part of the verse to comfort the weakenesse , and to cheere vp the faint hearts of the faithfull , labouring to relieue them with some spirituall

A a consolation,

Exod. 17. 12.

consolation, that notwithstanding they cannot shake off the sluggishness of the flesh, but are taken as it were with a palsey halfe dead on the one side, being compassed about with many infirmities in this life, and hauing many grudgings and resistances of this earthly lumpe, which is the bodie, against the worke of our sanctification: yet for all this the faithfull and elect may know and be assured, that they are not trained forth to fight and haue the foile, nor that they are called to any doubtfull combate, but to such a field where our hands shall be held vp if wee faint, as were the hands of Moses, and where wee shall preuaile, not onely against the Amalekites as did Ioshua, which are enemies without vs, but even against the hidden enemies of our heart, the rebellion of the flesh, and the corruption of nature, which is contained in these words; But the spirit is life: so as the verse standeth on two parts; First hee granteth part of the obiection, namely, that sinne cannot fully be shaken off: Secondly, to the full satisfaction of our consciences he answereth the other part of the obiection: namely, that notwithstanding this remainder of sinne in vs we need not be perplexed or doubt of our saluation.

 Heere first wee are to consider of the three speciall kinds and phrases of speech the Apostle vseth in the former verses, and in this; concerning the spirit of God which is in vs, the spirit of Christ which is in vs, and Christ himselfe which is in vs. Whereby we are taught to beleue that the whole Godhead and Trinitie dwelleth in euery Christian. Howbeit concerning the spirit of God, wee must know we cannot attaine vnto it, but by the spirit of Christ: for as the waters that boile in the earth cannot be conueied vnto vs but by wels and pipes by which we receiue of the fountaine it selfe; so the spirit of God is the fountaine of life, but a Well too deepe, and the place too high for vs to reach to, hee dwelling in a place vnaccessible and not to be approached vnto; and for this cause the spirit of Christ is the well-spring and pipe which passeth this life to vs, and by this we are made partakers of that life in glory, so that in this respect the spirit of God is said to bee in vs, and also the spirit of Christ, which spirit could not be conueied vn-

to vs but by the flesh of Christ God and man to reconcile vs to his Father; and yet all this is but one God and one spirit, as 1. Iob. 5. 7. which proueth these two things: first that Christ is God: secondly, that the holie Ghost proceedeth both from God and Christ, because they both are but one, and the selfsame spirit is but one. And in that Christ is also said to be in vs, it is but the same in effect that the spirit of Christ is in vs; yet are wee verily to beleeue, that verie Christ is really in vs indeed, yet inuisible, and this must bee vnderstood supernaturall: and therefore they that hold they are onely partakers of the graces and benefits of Christ, but not of Christ himselfe, cannot beleeue that Christ shall saue them; for Christs benefits are so inseparably vnited to his person; as if we haue his inuisible spirit, wee haue himselfe, and may equally assure our selues of both, and that wee are flesh of his flesh, expressed in the Scripture, as hath bene before declared, by naturall proportions and supernaturall, as, first by the coniunction of the head and the members of a mans bodie: secondly, by the vine and the branches: thirdly, by the husband and wife: fourthly, by meates and drinckes, that as they being eaten really doe nourish the bodie; so wee eating the flesh and drinking the bloud of Christ spirituallly, he nourisheth and feedeth our soules to life eternall. This vnion is also set downe vnto vs supernaturallly, Iohn 14. 20. Yee shall know I am in the Father, and you in mee, and I in you; howbeit wee are not in the same measure in Christ, and hee in vs as he is in the Father, but according to that proportion of faith which is in vs, and in that abundance that shall make vs blessed for euer.

Againe, learne hence, that wee are not to looke for any perfection in this life, but so long as wee beare about vs this masse and lumpe of flesh which is the bodie, there will remaine certaine reliques of corruption which can not be extinguished but by death, nor wholly remooued but by mortallitie, and this is the case of Gods best children: Paul speaking of himselfe as in the part vnregenerate, and as but in part spirituall, Romans 7. 14. said he was sold vnder sinne and carnall, meaning thereby, that so much as he had of the spirit

in

so much was the image of God restored in him, and so much he delighted in the law of God; but so much as was wanting of the spirit, so much was wanting of Gods image, and so much he rebelled against the law of God, and serued the law of sinne. And Peter that chosen vessell of God, Iohn 13. 10. by the wisdom and instruction of Christ himselfe hath neede of water to wash his feete: and 1. Iohn 5. 8. Christ came not onely by blood, but also by water, that by daily regeneration we may purge and cleanse our selues. And to this may be referred that speech of Christ, Iohn 13. 33. Whither I goe yee cannot yet come; which proueth wee haue still some corruption, that maketh vs yet vnfit for the kingdome of heauen, vntill wee haue washed our feete cleaner, and mortified our selues better, for wee know yet but in part. But then it may be said: since wee haue these imperfections how shall we be knowen from the reprobate? Verie well: for there is great difference betweene our imperfections and their sinnes, our scarres and their vlcers, our limping and their halting downe right, for as 1. Iohn 3. 9. Hee that is borne of God sinneth not, that is, as the world sinneth, the one sinning of ignorance, the other of knowledge; one of infirmitie, the other of presumption; the one with grieffe, the other with greedinesse; one through weakenesse, the other through obstinacie and malice; the one striking and checking his heart for the euill thought it produced, the other feeding and encouraging his heart not to staie at the thought till it breake forth into the hands; yea God doth bring vs vp that are his children thus imperfectly for two ends: for first hee will not suffer vs to haue our perfection heere, for feare wee lose it as Adam did: secondly, hee doth exercise vs with these imperfections to humble vs lest wee should waxe proud and so care not for him; and this is his great mercie that hee doth trie vs with infirmities, but not destroy vs; vex vs, but not vanquish vs, giuing vs power in the end through the sufficiencie of his grace to ouercome them.

Now for the second part, which is his satisfaction ginen to the faithfull, that they must not so sinke vnder the burden of their infirmitie as to mistrust their saluation; obserue when it is said, the spirit is life, we must vnderstand no naturall life, but such a life as Paul speaketh of, Ephes. 4. 18. where hee saith, the Gentiles that walked in the vanitie of their mindes were strangers from the life of God, that life whereby God dwelleth in vs; and to be strangers from this life, is to be strangers from holinesse of life: for God and an vncleane conuersation cannot companie together. And this life of the spirit is that, whereby (as Peter saith, 2. Peter 1. 4.) wee are made partakers of the diuine nature, not really, but by renouation, hauing obtained this mercie to bee borne a new of immortall seed by the word of God. For as the soule infused into the bodie, quickeneth a massie peece of flesh which had no motion before: so the soule to make it a lively and good soule, must haue a soule powred into it, that is, the spirit of God; and if this spirit be absent we are as dead from holy motions, as the bodie naturall is from outward actions by the priuation of the soule. So as wee learne hence, that a man may liue a life in the flesh, and yet be dead in respect of the life of God, which ought to moue vs to worke out our sanctification in feare, knowing that if wee be all flesh, wee shall neuer see the face of God.

Now as to liue a naturall life, there must bee a generation according to the flesh, so if wee will attaine to this life in the spirit, we must be brought to a second birth; not to be turned into our mothers wombes againe, as Nicodemus thought, Iohn 3. 4. but as Christ saith, wee must be borne of the will of his Father, that is, of the seed of the holy Ghost. Heere it followeth, as a man naturally borne hath his life maintained by being nourished with meat and drinke: so when we be borne againe of the seed of the spirit, we must be maintained and fed by the flesh and bloud of Christ spiritually: and as we are borne of the holie Ghost by the word, so wee must be nourished by the holie Ghost in the word, or elsé we shall neuer be saued. In the desire therefore of our saluation, we ought to thirst and pant after the riuers of life, which doe plentifully flow in the booke of God.

Againe, as men in this naturall life haue their degrees to proceed in, which doe neuer change, as that first they bee children, then after grow to a more vnderstanding age: which was euen true of Christ in this flesh, who (Luk. 2. 52.) is said to haue increased in wisdome and in stature: euen so we must know, that our spirituall birth is not perfect at the first day; but it hath as it were a childhood, and wee are babes to be fed with milke, as S. Peter saith, 1. Pet. 3. 2. and then afterward we grow from faith to faith, and from one degree of grace to another: yet heerein they differ; that in our spirituall life in this world, we cannot come to any perfection, sinne hangeth so fast about our heeles: but in our naturall life we attaine to a fulnesse and ripenesse of strength. And in this also they differ, that the naturall powers of this life decrease by age and by infirmities: but so it must not bee in our spirituall life, for in this we must neuer neither stand still, nor goe backward, nor grow downward, but still be stedfast in faith, and walking on in loue, like men alwaies running a race, till wee haue attained the prize, which prize is glorie.

Againe, consider for this spirituall life, that as the body while it hath the soule, is but a naturall bodie, spending like oile in the lampe, and cannot but in the end die, yet after this life shall be called a spirituall bodie, not in substance, but because in the resurrection it shall be quickned by the spirituall power of the holy Ghost; so a man that hath but a soule, if hee haue not the soule of the soule, that is, the spirit of God to quicken it, he is but a naturall man, and must needs be damned. Agains, as a bodie raised vp, and quickned by another power can neuer die, so the soule being a spirituall soule, and hauing once received the earnest of the spirit, and the power of sanctification from the holy Ghost, can neuer die. And in this respect we are exalted to a greater priuiledge than Adam had in his creation; and it fareth better with vs than it did with him: for it was arbitrarie with him, and rested in his will to die or not to die: whereas we hauing once drunke of the water of life, and once tasted of this spirituall life, we may neuer thirst: and as S. Iohn saith, 1. Iohn 3. 6. we cannot sinne: that is, not to sinne, but that we purge our selues vpon reproofe, and recouer our selues when we fall.

Ioh. 6. 54.

Further

Further obserue hence, that there is a double death and a double life : first, there is a death in the present corruption of sinne, whereby in this life we deserue damnation. Now that there is a death in this life, is prooued, 1. Tim. 5. 6. the widow that liueth in pleasure is dead while she liueth: and Ephes. 5. 14. Awake thou that sleepest, and stand up from the dead: and Reuel. 3. 1. it is said of the Church of Sardis, Thou hast a name that thou liuest, but thou art dead. Secondly, there is a death in the perpetuall condemnation for sinne, which is first inflicted vpon the soule at the separation from the body, and at the last day shal be laid both vpon the soule and body in a fearefull and full measure. Answerable to this is life, the first kind whereof, is the grace of God vouchsafed vs in this our pilgrimage : the second is the glory of God, giuen vs in the life to come. Now the life of the spirit hath three degrees : first, at the regeneration when we are renewed in our affections, and do feele a change of mind within vs : secondly, at the separation of the soule from the body, when being as it were released out of the fetters of this life, she takes her flight to heauen, for then doth the soule liue more excellently than it did before, being freed from the buffetings of Sathan and the allurements of the flesh. Thirdly, at the generall resurrection, when the world with the lustes therereof shall passe away like a cloud, and be wrapped vp like a clout, for then both soule and body shall enjoy the presence, yea more than that, shall liue the life of God for euer. Euen so death in the reprobate hath three degrees : first, in the contagion of sinne : secondly, in the separation at the doore of death as it were, when the soule alone goeth to the diuell : thirdly, at the resurrection when the body is reunited to the soule, to receiue the fulnesse of their endlesse torment.

Againe, the reprobate in this life and in the life to come haue a double misery coupled to their double death : for first in this life they want the grace and fauour of God, and bee euen like Cain, Genes. 4. 14. afraid lest euery man should kill them. Secondly, they haue resident in them the diuell, who being the God of this world, hath and doth carrie them away daily in the power of darknesse. Then in the life to come, they haue first a privation or loſſe of the preſence of God: ſecondly, a ſuffering and enduring of all torments, where there cries ſhall neuer bee pitied, nor their paines ever bee eaſed. Proportionable to theſe haue the children of God double comforts, which may bee gathered from the contrarie of the former. For firſt they haue the countenance of the Lord alwaies ſmiling on them, and the ſtrength of the Lord alwaies ſupporting them in this life. Secondly, which is more, they haue the true ſpirit of comfort dwelling in them, and the Father, the Sonne and the holie Ghoſt doth continually feaſt with them while they liue heere. And when we fall a ſleepe (for nothing elſe is death to the Saints, as we may ſee in Stephen, Act. 7. 60.) then doe we firſt ſtand alwaies in the ſight of God, and behold him face to face; neither doth his glory then any whit amaze vs as it did when the veile was before our eies, but it doth reioice vs, and we glory in it. Secondly we are filled with ioies vnſpeakable, and haue the full acceſſe and fruition of all that the heart can deſire or ſeek for.

Now the way to know that this life of God is in vs, muſt be by the amendment of our liues and by the leauing of our finnes: for regeneration beginneth at repentance, and repentance at leauing of ſinne, in which point euerie man muſt examine himſelfe wiſely: for if thou haſt not bridleed thy tongue from bitter and blaſphemous ſpeech, if thou haſt not taught thy hands to worke truly without deceit, and haſt not brought thy heart to pray feruently without hypocriſie, then haſt thou no part in this regeneration, and by conſequent no fellowſhip in the life of God:

For righteousneſſe ſake: That is as much as if the Apoſtle had ſaid, reformation of life and religion is the badge and euidence of the ſpirituall life we leade heere. The cauſe of this is the righteousneſſe of Chriſt, which reſteth in theſe two things: firſt, in ſatisfying the iuſtice of his Father for our finnes, as the Prophet Eſay ſpeaketh, Hee was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, and by his ſtripes are we healed: ſecondly, in fulfilling the law, which he performed foure waies: firſt, by teaching it preciſely: ſecondly, by obeying it exactly: thirdly, by ſuffering for our breach thereof meritoriouſly: fourthly, by ſanctifying vs to doe it effectually.

But

But this kinde of righteousnesse is onely resident and inherent in the person of Christ, howbeit the righteousnesse heere spoken of by the Apostle, is a signe onely and a token that we are sanctified by the flesh of Christ, and that Christ hath purchased saluation for vs, and that we sithing vnder the burden of sinne, walking in a reformed life, and waiting for the glorie that shall be seene, we shall be as the Saints of God, beloued of the Lord, hauing our long robes in signe of statelinesse as Senators, & palmes in our hands in signe of victorie as conquerours, for we in Christ haue ouercome Satan. Rom. 7. 25.
Reu. 7. 9.

Further wee must obserue and know, though this spirit of life dwell in vs, yet so long as wee are inclosed in this earthly tabernacle, and haue the corruption of nature clasping about the soule as Ivi to the Oke, we cannot be free from infirmities and sinnes, nor washed so cleane but that some filth will cleaue to our hands or our feet. Yet there is great difference betweene the slips and sins of him that hath, and of him that hath not the spirit of God, as great difference as there is betweene him that is drenched and plunged ouer head and eares in a puddle, and him that hath onely fouled his foote: according to the speech of Christ to Peter, Ioh. 13. 10. He that is washed needed not saue onely to wash his feete: as if he should haue said, Peter thy head and thy hands are cleane, onely thy feet need washing: that is, alwaies in this life some inferior affection is vncleane, and there will be a little boiling against the working of the spirit; but the principall purpose of our hearts shall be to please God and to loath the world. For the children of God are as poisoned vessels washed by the holie Ghost, wherein notwithstanding there rests some taste and tang of their former filthinesse: but the wicked are as vessels full of the poison of the diuell, wherein the spirit of God neuer set footing. Again, sinne in the regenerate hath a wound, and is like the Sun faintly appearing through some thicke cloud, but in the wicked it hath it full stroke. Again, the wicked are so chained that they cannot stirre one foote to heaven; and being cast from God, they so little care for it, as they wil with Cain (Gen. 4. 17.) fall a building of cities, and hauing lost the harmonie of a good conscience they will get some Inbal or other. Ioh. 13. 8.
2. Cor. 10. 5.
(Genes.

(Genes. 4. 21.) to plaie on the organs to make them merry : but the godly though they be loosed from the chaines of the diuel, yet while they sojourne heere they must draw some irons after them. Againe, the wicked from their birth haue turned their backs to God, and their face to the diuell : but the godly though they be hindred in their course, and staied in their profession of godlinesse and of sanctification by some infirmities inseparable from the flesh, yet doe they striue in their running to reco-uer their fall, and wrastle for a prize that shall neuer fade. And yet no doubt there is a contradiction in the wicked euen in sinning, as it is said, Gen. 4. 7. sinne lieth at the dore of Caine, that is, the blood of his brother Abel should torment his conscience. Howbeit this combat and contradiction is but betweene his conscience that condemneth his sinne, and his heart that loueth it, but in them there is neuer any strife betweene affections and affections : whereas the godly haue this fight betweene affections and affections, as the flesh desireth to doe such a thing, but the spirit that dwelleth in the flesh doth alwaies abhorre it, and striueth against it. So as if God hath sealed thee vp to saluation, and hath giuen thee the stone of absolution and pardon for thy sinnes, though thou art now discouraged at that remnant of sinne that rests in thee, and fearest lest God should frowne at thee and turne his face from thee for thy weake seruice of him, yet lift vp thy head, thou shalt bee sure heereafter through the power of this spirit to cast downe that great Goliath, and thou shalt haue the full fruition of that hope thou yet doest apprehend and see as in a glasse : and if thou hast receiued but the earnest penny of the spirit in this life, thou shalt be sure to receiue thy full wages and hire in the life to come.

Neither need we be dismaied that we limpe like Iacob, Genes. 32. and be imperfect in this life : for if we had not infirmities, we would bee as proud as the diuell, whereas now they make vs to expresse our thankfulness to God, that hee so mercifully restraineth them, and so fatherly passeth by them, they serue to multiply our grones in the spirit to God, that we might be deliuered from this body of death and bondage of sinne : yea they stirre vs vp to the loue of others, to sorrow for the afflictions of Ioseph and of our brethren : whereas if wee our selues were not infirme and weake, we would neuer be touched with compassion.

Vers. II. But if the spirit of him that raised up Iesus from the dead dwell in you, hee that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortall bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you.

Howsoever wee haue aduantage and comfort by the former doctrine, that by the extinguishment of this light which wee haue heere beneath, and by the separation of our bodies from our soules, sin must die, and cannot otherwise be mortified than by mortalitie : yet in this verse the Apostle stirreth vs vp to greater ioy and to the top of all Christian comfort, shewing that the time shall come, when our vile bodies shall bee made like to the glorious bodie of Christ Iesus. The verse standeth on two parts : first, of the raising vp of Iesus Christ : secondly, of the raising vp of our bodies to bee made conformable to Christ our head.

First obserue the maner of the Apostle his speech, If the spirit &c. consider wisely this speech propounded by Paul as it were conditionally, which doth not argue any suspended doubtfulness of the matter, or make it any whit subiect to exception, but carrieth with it a peremptorie necessitie that it is so, the Apostle taking that for granted which cannot be denied without falling into grosse absurdities. For if he should haue doubted whether Christ had bene risen againe, then in vaine had he gone about to prooue that we should rise againe : and therefore by this maner of phrase the Apostle calls not the matter in question as a doubt, but doth boldly assume it to all Christians, that Christ is risen. And this is the common course of the Scripture, and of the Ministers of God in all times vsually to say, If there be a day of iudgement, and if it be so that this booke of Gods word shall be written in our hearts, then is there a fearefull reckoning to bee expected for : which they do not as doubting of these things, but taking them as granted of all men, they be so certaine without contradiction.

contradiction. So the Apostle before in this chapter, vers. 9. If the spirit be in you (speaking to the elect) for all that is spoken in this chapter belongeth onely to them that bee called sanctified; but (saith he) the spirit is in you, for if they should deny that, they runne into this, that they must needs be reprobates and wrapped vp in condemnation.

Secondly, obserue in the raising vp of Christ two parts: first, that he was raised vp: secondly, by what power he was raised vp, namely by the spirit of his Father. That Christ was raised vp, the Apostle doth not demonstrate it, but assumeth it: for if Christ were not risen, then all Pauls reasons (1. Cor. 15.) to proue our resurrection may easily be eluded, for that is the first argument hee there vseth to proue a resurrection, because Christ is risen, and all his arguments there following are linked to that, and depend on that: reasoning from absurdities: if Christ be not risen our preaching is in vaine, and your faith is in vaine, for Christ crucified and his resurrection is the summe of the Gospell and the end of our faith. But the matter is, by what power Christ was raised vp. As he was flesh it profited nothing to raise vp it selfe, for 1. Pet. 3. 18. it is said, he was put to death according to the flesh, that is, according to his humane nature, and was quickned in the spirit, which the Apostle there sheweth to be by that spirit wherein he preached in Noahs time. And Rom. 1. 3. the Apostle speaking of Christ, saith he was of the seed of Dauid according to the flesh, but declared to be the sonne of God by the resurrection from the dead: which sheweth that it was the power of God that raised him vp.

He that raised vp Christ, &c. Heere consider three parts: first, what shall be raised vp, our bodies: secondly, by what power they shall rise, by the same power by which Christ was raised vp: thirdly, after what maner; the same spirit that quickned Christ is now communicated to vs, and by Christs righteousness we are made righteous, and so are become fit temples for his spirit to inhabite in vs.

The Scripture proposeth two arguments to proue the resurrection: first, the conformitie of the bodie with the head, that as Christ our head is risen, so wee his bodie shall rise againe. The second

secondly is the consideration of Gods omnipotency, and our faith in his power : that is, to beleue that he can doe all things, and therefore can raise vp our putrified bodies. The first reason holdeth both waies : if Christ be raised vp, then shall we be raised vp : Christ is not risen, therefore we shall not rise. We are raised vp, therefore Christ is raised vp ; we are not raised vp, therefore Christ is not risen. And this doth minister vnto vs great comfort, and may euen astonish our hearts with ioye : for it is impossible, that we who are the body can be drowned, as long as Christ our head is aboue the water. So then since our head Christ is lifted vp aboue all gulfes, hath tasted of all sorrowes, and hath ouercome all dangers, we need not to feare that we shall be stifled or swallowed vp of the waues of torments and afflictions, though we seeme neuer so much cast downe in the outward man; for let the wild beasts of the forrest roare neuer so fiercely, or let the raine fall, and the waues beat, and the windes blow neuer so strongly, yet shall their mouthes bee shut that they shall not hurt vs, and our house is built vpon a rocke that cannot moue : for our Redeemer liueth, and our head is safe, and we at the last when he hath sufficiently exercised his graces in vs by the triall of our faith, and the experience of our loue of him, shall through him ouercome all troubles and sorrowes.

Mat. 7. 27.

Ioh. 19. 25.

For the second reason to proue the resurrection : which is the consideration of Gods omnipotency, the Apostle (Philipp. 3. 21.) ioyneth the raising vp of our bodies to the consideration of that power whereby God is able to subdue all things. This also is euident Ezech. 37. 5. where the Lord by his power giueth life to a companie of dead bones. And Christ (Ioh. 5. 25.) saith his Gospell was able to raise vp dead soules : that is, such as be dead in profanenesse, but by the power of his word shall be reuined and quickned in the spirit, which is the first resurrection : and vers. 28. The day shall come (saith he) when yee shall find that to bee true in the second resurrection to your damnation, which yee will not now beleue in the first resurrection to your saluation, when by the very voice of God the dead shall be raised vp. Among many places to proue the resurrection of the bodie that is most excellent, (Mat. 22. 32.) vpon the demand of the Sadduces, whose wife shee that had had seven husbands should be in the resurrection : I am (saith he) the God of Abraham, &c. I am not the God of the dead but of the liuing. No place at the first sight may seeme to carry lesse prooffe of the matter Christ then had in hand, but being duly weighed, it is most substantiall to prooue it. It may be said : True it is, thou art the God of Abraham, that is, of so much of Abrahams as now liueth; so as thou art the God of Abrahams soule : but it is conuincd out of the place it selfe, that thou art not the God of the dead, and therefore thou art not the God of Abrahams body, for his body is dead. But note, he doth not say, hee is the God of part of Abraham, but hee is the God of Abrahams person; which person of his standeth vpon soule and body. Secondly, some say this place prooueth the immortality of the soule onely. Nay it is certaine, if the body be not immortall, the soule cannot be immortall : for if Abraham liueth in any part now, hee must at the last liue in all; and if immortality were onely giuen to one part, then all the reasons of Paul (1. Cor. 15.) to prooue the resurrection of the body might be easily euaded. For the Apostle there (vers. 18.) to prooue the resurrection of the bodie, saith : Vnlesse Christ be risen and we rise, we that are a sleepe in Christ are perished. But it may be objected : Nay, there may bee an immortality if the blessed soules doe liue, and therefore they cannot bee said to be perished. And vers. 19. If our hope (saith Paul) bee in this life onely, we are of all the most miserable. Nay it may be said, we are happy in the life to come in the soule: so vers. 29. hee prooueth the resurrection of the body from our baptisme. Yea, but it may bee said : That is not so Paul, for though our bodies rise not, yet baptisme may profit vs in the spirit; and though thy bodie (Paul) doe not rise, yet thou hast not fought with beasts at Ephesus in vaine : for thou shalt bee crowned with glorie in thy soule, for that thou hast sustained these combats. And thus if we stand onely vpon the immortality of the soule, all Pauls arguments in that place may be soone reiected.

It is true, that the soules are now blessed, as it is in the Reuel. 7.9. where the Saints are said to haue their white robes in token ken of innocency ; long, in signe of statelinese ; and palmes in their hands, in signe of victory : but it is as true, that the soule is not happy, sauing in the constant expectation of the last day, when it shall bee ioined to the body : and it hath not now that fulnesse of happinesse it then shall haue. For it standeth with the law of retribution in God, that as he receiued most glorie from them both when they were vnited, so should he returne them most ioye and fulnesse of glory, when by his power they are brought together againe. And euen so fareth it now with the reprobate that are departed, who feele onely torment in their soules at this time ; but when their bodies shall beeraked out of the dust, then shall their paines be increased. So as this is the doctrine we must hold, that the soules of the Saints are blessed ante resurrectionem, before the resurrection ; but sine resurrectione, without the resurrection they are not blessed. Rom. 14. 9. God is said to be the Lord of the dead, and Mat. 22. 32. Christ saith, he is not the God of the dead. In which places there is no contrariety : for Christ meaneth, that he is not the God of the dead according to the supposition of the Sadduces : for no man is a King without subiects, nor a Captaine without souldiers, nor God the God of Abraham, vnlesse Abraham be : but hee is the God of the dead, because they by him shall be raised vp.

Now followeth the first part : what shall be raised vp, namely, this verie body which we now carrie about vs shall bee raised vp. Which is prooued, first from the proportion and resemblance with the head : for the same body of Christ that was buried, was raised vp : which is signified vnto vs by himselfe, (Luk. 24. 39.) who to remooue all doubts of the truth of his resurrection out of his disciples mindes, said : Behold my hands and my feet : and Iohn 20. 25. it is said, that Thomas put his finger into Iesus side after his resurrection. And so much did Christ foretell afore his death (Ioh. 2. 19.) Destroy this temple, (meaning his body) and I will build the same (not another) vp againe : Secondly, it is prooued from the proportion of Gods iustice toward the elect and the reprobate also : for it standeth with his iustice, that those lippes which in this life offred vp the calues of thanksgiuing vnto him, that that body that hath beene baptized into Christs death, that mouth that hath seed vpon Christ by faith, that that bodie which hath beene exercised vnder the crosse, and sanctified through afflictions, which hath testified to the blood the profession of his trueth, it standeth, I say, with the iustice of God, that that bodie and no other should bee raised vp to glory. And Paul noteth foorth so much in himselfe a member, (1. Cor. 15. 53.) when he saith, This mortall shall put on immortalitie: as if (saith a learned Father) he had taken it vp in his hands to haue expressed his meaning. Againe, the proportion of Gods iustice toward the reprobate is, that that knee that hath bowed to the Masse, shall also bow to the diuell in hell torment, and that that body which hath embrewed it selfe with the blood of Gods saints, that hath rent as it were the Lord in peeces by their blasphemy, and that haue shut vp their compassion from the poore, that that body should bee punished eternally in hell fire; and euen denied so much as a drop of cold water to coole their tongues. For what iustice were it in God to frame them new bodies, and so to punish them in that flesh wherein they neuer sinned? Nay, it were meere iniustice to punish them in any other parts than those wherein they haue offended. Now this bodie of the faithfull that shall be raised vp, shall haue three speciall graces giuen vnto it which it had not before to shew the riches of Gods mercy toward them: as first, it shall be immortal, and shall neuer putrifie: secondly, it shall be maintained by no naturall power: and thirdly, it shall haue glory. Answerable to these, in another kinde shall the bodies of the reprobate be: for first, they shall wish they might rot, but cannot: secondly, they were happie if they might pine away, but the worme shall be continually gnawing, yet neuer satisfied, nor they weakned: thirdly, they shall haue horror and shame, and howling and gnashing of teeth continually.

Luk. 16. 24.

2-

For the second point, which is, by what power our bodies are raised vp, namely, by the same spirit that Christ was raised vp. Now then it may be asked, how the reprobate shall rise, for they partake not of this spirit, nor haue any part in this resurrection. It is true, that the power of Christ as a Sauiour, and the fruite and benefite of his death are inseparable from the elect, and belong onely to them. The reprobate therefore shall bee

raised vp by the same power by which they were at first created: and as at the first they were made by the power of God in his Sonne, the Father consulting with his wisdom, which is Christ: euen so shall they be raised vp againe by the power of God in his Sonne, not as a redeemer, but by the absolute power of Iesus Christ their Iudge. And as when Adam fell he was not onely deprived of the tree of life, but of all the other fruites of the garden, and in the losse of that lost all the rest, and was driven out by violence, and kept out by the sword from any more sight of God in Paradise: euen so the reprobate deserue not onely to be secluded from the possession of heauenly glory, where growes that life that euer flourisheth, but euen vterly to be extinguished and abolished, for they are but vsurpers vpon the Lords heritage, and euen the aire which they breath in shall be their damnation, for they deserue not so much as their being. Yet such is the great bounty of God, that he raiſteth as well vpon the vniust as vpon the iust, yea and oftentimes obscureth his goodnesse toward his Saints, and hideth as it were his face from them, when the wicked flourish as the Palme-tree, and abound in all earthly prosperity: but yet this is our comfort, that they passe away as a shaft in the aire, and as a ship on the sea, so is their place no more seene, and indeede they shall finde it were better for them they were not: whereas the godly know, that in this earth they haue no abiding citie, but that their treasure is in heauen, where their hearts alwaies be, and their bodies heereafter shall be.

Because that his spirit dwelleth in you. This is the third part was noted out vnto vs, namely, how this power of the spirit is in this life communicated vnto vs. Wherein obserue, that whosoever is regenerate is made partaker of the life of God, and such a man hath his soule and body taken vp and dressed, and dedicated to entertaine the holy Ghost, and the holy Ghost abideth in him: and Iohn 14. 23. Christ saith, If any man loue me he will keepe my word, and my Father will loue him, and we will come vnto him and dwell with him: so as the whole blessed Trinity abideth in such a man; which is a most princely prerogative and royall dignity which the faithfull haue, that the King of heauen will will stoope so low as to abide in the soule of a poore Christian.

X Further obserue, in that the spirit dwels in vs, that as Christ before he tooke vpon him and assumed our flesh, sent his herben-ger before him to seele that house, and sanctifie that wombe wherein himselfe would lie, that the virgine by that meanes was full of the holy Ghost: euen so he still sendeth forth his spirit to take vp his lodging for him in the heart of euery Christian, and to sanctifie them in some measure, though not in that fulnesse he did the virgine. And as God in no place on the earth was said to be more then he was in the Arke, so is he in no creature so much as in the elect, yea all the creatures by this meanes are made ser-viceable to the elect.

Mat. I. 18.

2. Cor. 13.

4. 5.

1. Sam. 4. 7.

Psal. 8. 1. 5.

6. 7.

Now when the spirit commeth vnto vs, it findeth our hearts very ruinous like an old house, yet such an habitation as by some ancient monuments shewes what stately building it was at first by creation; then it falles a tempering and building it vp againe by the loue of God ingrafted in our hearts, and it doth silt vs and cleanse vs: and whereas it findeth nothing but bare walles, that is, a departure of all the graces of God, and a deprivation of them, it filleth vs and insuleth vnto vs all heavenly vertues. And as the Lord was in the Temple, and yet not shut in and included there; but in that he was there, it was necessary it should be kept cleane, as appeareth 2. Chron. 23. 19. that for this purpose porters were set at the gates of the house of the Lord, that none that was vncleane in any thing should enter in: so we that are Christians being a type of that Temple that should be built of liuing stones, whereof Christ must be the chiefe and corner stone, and wherein we must beleue that God dwelleth farre more spiritually and effectually then he did in the other; we (I say) must be kept far more cleanelly then the other Temple was. In this respect also, that this Temple wherein the Lord now dwelleth is our soules and bodies, the Priest our selues to offer vp our selues, the sacrifice our selues to be sacrificed in our soules and bodies vpon the altar, which is our hearts; but yet so, as we are still acceptable onely in the sacrifice of Christ and in his priesthood. Now this spirit that thus dwelleth in vs, is called the

the spirit of sanctification, in respect of the foure properties wherein it resembleth the materiall Temple. For first, as the Temple might not serue for a dwelling house, but was onely consecrated to abide and continue there while they serued God: so the temples of our bodies must not be taken vp of the lusts of the world to dwell there, but bee dedicated onely to entertaine the spirit of Christ: and secondly, as the holy garments were onely worne in the Temple, so ought wee to looke that wee attire our selues onely as becommeth Christians that stand alwaies in the presence of God: thirdly, as the holy meate was onely eaten in the Temple: and fourthly, the vessels onely there to be drunke in: so this shewes that our bodies and all the powers, affections and actions both of soule and bodie, as well in the heart within,
 as in all the vse of Gods blessings without, must be separated from all earthly things to be by them estranged from the worship of God, and be reserued only to holy vses, that God and his glory may be the chiefest end of our life, for so the Hebrew word to sanctifie, signifieth to be set apart, and not prostitute to any profane vse.

Hereupon it is, that if in the Temples of Christians we see idols erected, we are grieved and offended, and that iustly, because we see a great part of Gods seruice shall bee spent in bodily adoration, which ought not to be: for though it be true that God requireth to be worshipped of euery bone in the body, yet principally in this sacrifice of praier and other religious exercises hee looketh at the heart, and sets his eye on our affections to be worshipped in spirit and in truth.

Now if it be vnlawfull to erect and set vp an idoll in any Christian Temple, for so much doth the Scripture in expresse words reitise in many places, as, Pull downe their altars, breake their images and burne them in the fire, with many such like places and speeches: how fearefull a thing then is it, that wee that are Christians should set vp idols in our soules, the most beautified place that God hath on earth, as the idols of couetousnesse, hy-pocrisie, filthinesse, pride, and such like, which be inuisible, and therefore worse then the other, and which do secretly like a theefe steale away our hearts from the loue of God, and as a moth

doe euen feed vpon vs and consume vs, till we suddenly fall into the wrath and displeasure of God.

Gen. 18. 1.

Heere let vs further consider but how we vse our owne houses, wherein we dwell in the tabernacle of this life, and which ought to be but as tents to be carried at our backes, to put vs in minde of our pilgrimage: for if the matter of the Church cannot affect vs nor touch vs at the quicke, yet shall it set foorth our wickednesse and enlarge our condemnation, that we esteeme more of our owne dwelling places, wherein we sleepe to night, and to morrow are cast into the graue, then of that place wherein the Prince of heauen and earth taketh vp his abode: how curious we are in scouring of our pots, in sweeping of our parlors, in plaiting of our garments, and tricking vp our selues nicely and garishly! yea no seruants can please vs, but such as weare out their knees in rubbing our houses; and how fearefull and shamefull a thing it is, that we make no account nor reckening of that place where the whole Trinitie should abide; that our houses shall be cleane where onely our dirty feet doe treade, and our selues the vncleanest part of it; and that through our wretchednesse and negligence in purging of our selues, and cleansing of our soules, we are rather dens fit for the damned spirits, then temples meet for the holy Ghost to abide in: for if our hearts be once ouergrowne with the weeds of profanenesse, idlenesse, couetousnesse, and such like, we may assuredly know, that God can haue no roome to dwell in such a soule.

Further, from the Metaphor or borrowed speech (dwelleth,) note that there is a residence of the holy Ghost in all those that be his: so as it must not be a sojourning of the Lord with vs, to come like a stranger for a night or for a meale, and away againe, but he must be a household guest, to go in and out with vs: so that we must know it is not euery pang of conscience, or fit of prayer, or hanging downe our heads for a day, whereby we are sometime perplexed and wringed with sorrow, that is the dwelling of the spirit in vs, no more then was that fit of Balaam, (Numb. 23. 10.) when he praied that his soule might die the death of the righteous, and that his last end might be like his. Neither is this spirit knowen to bee in thee by doing many good things: for

Herod

Herod (Mark. 6.20.) did many things at the perswasion of Iohn Baptist, yet was he a most cruell incestuous bloody tyrant : nor yet by leauing many euill things vndone, for the very Heathen had many morall vertues which made them decline from many vices. But by this shalt thou know that thou hast this spirit, if any thing crosseth and repugneth thy affectiōs, if thy affectiōs rise not against it, but that in the meditation and purpose of sin thou please thy selfe, and take part with thy affectiōs against God to fulfill it, as Balaam did, when by the proffer of riches (Num. 24. 13.) he would faine haue cursed where the Lord had blessed ; it is certaine this spirit of God abideth not there, but the diuell.

Lastly obserue, since there is no hope of the resurrection, but so farre as wee are sealed in this life to that glory wee shall haue heereafter, by the earnest of Gods spirit giuen vnto vs: we may truly say of the wicked, whom the Son neuer kissed, that when they die they go to the damned : for he that hath not his part of this spirit in this life, vnlesse the Apostle be a liar, which were blasphemy to thinke, that man shall neuer haue the glorie of the life to come. And therefore such as do scorne and scoffe at the seruants of God, as Ishmael did at Isaac, calling them Men of the spirit, they do commit most sacrilegious scurrilitie, and in this state wherein they stand, they are as surely the diuels as the diuell is not Gods; yea, in this they do with their owne mouths pronounce and subscribe to their owne damnation : for the Apostle saith, we must haue this spirit, else it is impossible to be saued.

Heere it may be said : Since there is only ioy and peace in the spirit, how is it that the wicked runne on in the course of their life prosperously, and in the end of their daies go away quietly : whereas the godly walke through many snares, and are in their life scratched as it were with many thornes, and in their death oft times are much troubled, and depart in great agonies. True it is, the wicked may perhaps die quietly, and to the sight of man comfortably, hauing (as Iob speaketh) no bands in their death : but looke thou iudge him no more by his death than by his birth : for many women haue had more easie traueli of a reprohate, than an elected child of God : especially the cause of their quiet being, because hypocrisie hath put their consciences to silence heere, that they may soone after roare out in hell : and there is such a crust growen vpon their hearts, that they rot and fester within and feele it not : whereas in the elect the wound is kept alwaies open, and wee cannot feele the least breath of the Lords displeasure but we are anguished, neither can wee thinke that we euer feare enough : which tender heart of a Christian is like the Adamant, to draw the oile of comfort into his soule, and to hasten and quicken the life of the spirit in him. Let vs all therefore earnestly pray for this spirit ; having obtained it, let vs cherish and welcome it, so as it may take delight in vs : for wee all know it must one day come to this, In manus tuas Domine commendo spiritum meum, Into thy hands, O Lord, I commend my spirit : and it is now at this, In manus tuas (homo) commendo spiritum meum, Into thy hands (O man) I commit my spirit. And therefore as we will haue the Lord gracious to our spirits at the latter day, so let vs well vse and entertaine his spirit in this acceptable time, which vouchsafeth to dwell with vs.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 12.

12. Therefore we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh.

Pon that which went before, the Apostle inferreth a most vehement exhortation to this effect : that seeing Christ hath saued them, and freed them, not onely from the condemnation of sinne, but also from the power of sinne, therefore the Lord doth indent with them, and in them with vs all, not to merit saluation : but because saluation is already already merited for vs, to be engaged and obliged to the Lord ; and that since he hath taken the hand writing away from Sathan, Coloss. 2. 14. and hath cancelled it in Christ, that therefore we should be debtors not to the flesh, but to the spirit.

Heereupon obserue, that the greatest argument to perswade or rather to inforce vs to good workes, is taken from the price of our redemption : as appeareth by Saint Paul, who useth that argument (Rom. 12. 1.) I beseech you by the mercies of God, that you giue vp your bodies a liuing Sacrifice vnto the Lord : that since the Lord hath beene so mercifull vnto you, as not to looke vpon your nakednesse, but as you are cloathed in Christ, you would therefore returne vnto him conformitie of obedience, in sacrificing your selues vnto him. After the same manner doth Saint Peter perswade (1. Pet. 2. 11.) I beseech you as strangers and pilgrimes, abstaine from fleshly lusts. As if hee should say : Since you are now a chosen generation, and a people set at liberty by the death of Christ, and by this meanes made Citizens of heauen, walke according to the lawes of that heauenlie citie.

Heere are they condemned, that say : If by doing good workes we can deserue nothing, what heart can we haue to doe them ? And since we are bought already, why should the Lord be twise satisfied ? Whereto we answer, that though we can deserue nothing, yet by this meanes we shew our thankfulness, in doing as much as we can ; and though in all things we are vnprofitable seruants, yet must wee bee thankfull for that which Christ hath done for vs. And since Christ hath fully satisfied for vs, it is not further required that wee keepe the law to satisfie it, but to testifie our obedience and thanks, that wee are made partakers of such grace, and haue received so great a pardon. And so by this our working we declare our gratfull mindes to God the Sonne by whom we are redeemed, and to God the Father, to whom we are redeemed : for none of vs can satisfie for that he hath broken : onely Christ hath made vp the breach, and broken downe the wall that parted God and vs : and therefore when wee shall heereafter keepe all the lawes of God in heauen, it shall not bee to satisfie for that we kept not in this life : for by doing but that we ought then to do, we cannot free our selues from that paine we deserued for that we did not before.

Here ariseth the difference betweene the law and the Gospell. The Law commandes workes to merit saluation : the Gospell because saluation is already merited, that therefore by doing good workes we should testifie that wee are bound and indebted to the Lord.

Hereupon note, that there is in the Gospel a double couenant: the first, of mercy: the second, of mortification. The couenant of mercy going first, which is, I will saue thee, I will write my law in thine heart, My soule shall delight in thee, Thou shalt be beloved, and such like gracious words and promises. Then followeth the couenant of mortification; Thou art saued, therefore liue well, Thou art pardoned, therefore offend no more: so as first we must be forgiuen, and then wee become debtors. Wee are not then saued because we doe good workes, but we are saued, therefore this mercy of saluation maketh vs fruitfull in good workes: as Iohn 5. 14. the sicke man was not healed because he should sinne no more: but thou art healed, therefore remember this mercy of the Lord, that thou do sinne no more. So Luke 14. 23. who be they that come to the wedding? Call (saith the King) the halt, the lame and the blind. So as such as are emptied of al opinion of all worthinesse in themselues, and be starke beggars, must come; yet when they are come they must haue the wedding garment: so as wee are bid to come, not because wee haue the wedding garment, but because wee are bid to come in the mercy of Christ, being beggars, wee must striue to get that garment, that is, a good conuersation. So Luk. 19. 4. Zaccheus was not saued because hee gaue halfe of his goods to the poore: but Christ first spake inuisibly to his soule, to make him clime vp to the tree, & being conuerted then he giueth, as testifying a fruit of mercy to others for the mercy himselfe received. So Lu. 7. 41. in the speech of Christ of the two debtors, they were both forgiuen, but who loued most? Peter could say, he that had most forgiuen; and what made the debt forgiuen, but the meere mercy and good will of the creditor? So as in that place of Luke, not because the woman loued much, therefore was much forgiuen her; her; but much was forgiven her, therefore she loved much: for where the mercy is great, there must our labour in mortification be great also. According to this it is said, Mat. 11:28. Come unto me all ye that are weary and laden, and I will ease you. But marke the restitution and indenting of Christ with them againe, ver. 29. take up my yoke, and learne of me to be meeke and lowly: that is, after this great mercy obtained, of disburdening you of that yoke which pressed your soules with discomfort euen downe to hell, returne this fruit of thankfulness to God againe: deny your selues and your affections, and be you yoked to the obedience of the Gospell.

Ier. 31. 31.

Luke 7. 47.

Verse 13. For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye mortifie the deeds of the bodie by the spirit, ye shall live.

Before the Apostle perswaded vs by the benefit of our redemption which is wrought in Christ, to bee humbled, and to acknowledge our selues indepted vnto Christ, that as by him we are saued from Sathans tyranny, and freed from his slauish seruice: in acceptation of this liberty, we should shew our selues to serue God in righteousness and holiness of life. Now because this would not sufficiently subdue the rebellious disposition of hypocrites, and to stirre vp the dulnesse of Gods weake children, he doth in this verse adde a reason to make the former perswasion more forcible: first by a denunciation and peremptory speech to the hypocrites, that besides the plague of God inflicted vpon them in this life, at the separation of the soule from the body, their soules shall bee caried to the damned ghosts there to bee reserued to the iudgement of the great day: see Iude 1. 6. secondly, by a prouocation to the faithfull, wherein he proposeth to them the hope of immortalitie.

Vnderstand generally, as all Scripture is earnest in perswading these two things, first, remission of our sinnes: secondly, repentance from our sinnes, according to the speech of S. Iohn of 1. Iohn 5. 6. blood and water, that is, the grace that pardoneth, and the grace that reneweth: so S. Paul is more precise in these two than any other, in vrging grace and meere mercy, and nothing but faith in the point of our iustification before God, and doth also vrgē precise mortification in our selues, to shew by our sanctified liues that wee are sealed vp to the day of redemption; that as

 1. Cor. 5. 7. Christ our Passeouer was sacrificed for vs, so wee should keepe a continuall feast vnto the Lord in the vnleavened bread of a sincere and sanctified life.

Now with these two hath the wisdome of the world beene greatly offended, and hath deuised against them two errours: first, against meere mercy, Sathan in his subtilty and enmitie to man, hath stirred vp the heresie of Pharisaiicall righteoufnesse, ioining merit with mercy: and secondly, against the strictnesse of mortification, he raised vp the heresie of Libertines, that is, of them that maintaine worldly prophanesse and licencious loose-nes: so as one cries out, if there be nothing but mercy, then there neede no repentance: and the other crieth out, since it is done by mercy, what neede such strictnesse and precisenesse in life?
 Mat. 11. 19. But howfoeuer these be laid as blockes to stumble at, wisdome will be iustified of her children, and the latter raine shall not fall in the vaine vpon the hearts of Gods chosen. Yet whether the Gospell preach either of these, or both of them together, the hypocrites and prophane worldlings will take occasion of offence: as Iohn Baptist is too precise preaching repentance so earnestly. And if Christ bee affable, gracious, and to bee conuersed with, then is he a friend of vnrigh-
 Mat. 11. 18. 19. teous persons. At Iohn Baptist the Libertines, at Christ the Pharises be offended: so as whether Iohn weepe sorrow for sinne, or Christ pipe deliuerance from sinne, neither of these can please the itching humours of wauering minded persons.

In the words are comprehended first a commination or threatening to the wicked: secondly, a prouocation or encouragement to the godly, by proposing a reward; and both being set downe conditionall in the word if, they compare contrarie courses of life to contrary ends whereto they tend: the contrarie courses are a bad or a good life: the contrarie ends, a bad or a blessed end, expressed in these two words, they shall liue, they shall die.

What

What it is to walke after the flesh, appeareth Ephes. 2. 3. to be, to follow the course of the world in fulfilling the lusts of the flesh, as to be as scoffing as Ishmael, as prophane as Esau, as hard hearted as Pharaoh, and as covetous as Demas, that shooke off Paul to embrace the world. And what it is to mortifie the deeds of the flesh, is set downe Galath. 5. 24. to crucifie the affections and lusts thereof, not vterly to abolish the very life of sin, and to strike it dead at the roote, for that is the patterne of perfection we follow after, the goale we run at, and the victorie we strue for; but he that ceaseth from performing and gratifying his flesh in the desires thereof, though there remaines some tang of corruption, that man may truely be said to mortifie his flesh. And therefore vnderstand a difference betweene sinne in the reprobate and in the elect, by a naturall proportion: as there is great difference between him that hath a strong body impotent in no part, but liuely to performe all the actions of this life, and him that liueth, but hath receiued his deaths wound, or is sicke of a pining consumption: so in the wicked sinne liueth a full life, and hath his full swing to seeke after all maner of euill, and increaseth daily without any declination at all, rising early and resting late, to fulfill the pleasures of the flesh: but in the godly sinne liueth droupingly and languishingly, alwaies holding downe the head; for howsoeuer the elect doe fall by infirmity, yet the principall purpose of their heart is to follow Christ, euen in his afflictions, and so it is in them onely a benumbed sinne.

For the contrary ends, which are set downe in two words, they shall die, they shall liue; it is not to be vnderstood of any naturall separation which is common to all in death, but of an vtter separation after death from Gods presence to be tormented in hell: and so of life, for to liue in this place is meant to be saued, and to enter into the rest of God. Whereupon obserue, that speaking properly the wicked neuer liue, nor the godly neuer die, that is, die the death of deaths, as Christ speaketh, Iohn 8. 51. They shall neuer see death; for when, our breath shall leaue our bodies, and wee fall asleepe, we shall behold the Lords armes stretched forth to embrace vs

and the heauens open to receiue vs , so as this kind of death is but an enlargement after a long imprisonment, and a landing at our owne country after our tedious trauell and troublesome pilgrimage in the sea of this world ; which life in the godly is begun heere by our enjoying of Christ , enlarged in death , when our soules shall liue a more blessed life , and perfected at the last day, when wee shall haue absolute ioy without diminution in eternity. Euen so is the death of the wicked, begun heere in their impenitency in sinne, increased when they are in part tormented after this life, and then made a liuing death, when at the last they are thrown from God for euer.

If ye liue after the flesh, &c. In these words the Apostle is precise for workes : and why ? because it cannot be otherwise, but that we walking as ordinary men , and after the custome of the world, must needs be damned. First, take for a ground, that (which is vers. 8. of this chapter) They that are in the flesh cannot please God ; which he proueth by matching of contraries : for they that are in the flesh saueur the things of the flesh, as they that be in the spirit saueur the things of the spirit : and that saueur of the flesh is death. He yeeldeth a reason : why ? because the wisdom of the flesh is enmity to God ; not an enemy to God, for then there might be a reconciliation : but the Apostle speaketh in the abstract quality (enmity) as a vitious man may become vertuous, and wee of enemies are made friends with God , but vice can neuer become vertue, nor enmity amity. The like speech is vsed of God himselfe in his curse of the Serpent, Genes. 3. 15. I will set enmity betweene thee and the woman, that is, such hatred and debate as shall neuer be appeased. Now why this flesh is enmity with God, he giueth a reason , because it is not subiect to the law of God as the spirit is , neither can be, as the spirit cannot but be: for wee must walke in all the commandements of the Lord without exception, though nor with perfection : euen as it is said, 1. Iohn 3. 6. They that are of God cannot sinne : that is, deliberately continue in any sinne. Now who they be that are in the flesh , we must learne by the contrarie , that is, they that are not in the spirit : as vers. 9. of this chapter : Ye are not in the flesh but in the spirit: and who is not in the spirit? he that is not led by the spirit of Christ. And who is he? He that walketh not according to that spirit: that is, if he liue in the spirit a life inuisible, hee must shew it by the effect of visible motions; and he that walketh according to the conuersation of the flesh doth it not. And this appeareth, Gal. 5. 24. All that are Christs haue crucified the affections of the flesh: and who are said to doe this? 1. Pet. 4. 1. 2. they that suffer in the flesh; and who so suffereth in the flesh ceaseth from sinne: so as to come backe againe the same way we went; if thou hast not ceased from sinne, thou hast not suffered in the flesh; if thou hast not suffered in the flesh, thou hast not crucified the flesh; if thou hast not crucified the flesh, thou hast walked in the flesh; if thou hast walked in the flesh, thou hast not beene led by the spirit; if thou hast not been led by the spirit, thou hast not the spirit; if thou hast not the spirit, thou art in the flesh, that is, drenched and drowned in the flesh: for it is one thing to haue flesh in thee, and another thing for thee to be in the flesh; for all haue flesh in them, that is, infirmitie; but to be in the flesh, is to be in Simon Magus case, in the gaule of bitterness, Act. 8. 23. and in the bond of iniquitie: and in Eylmas case, Act. 13. 10. full of subtilty and mischief, the child of the diuell, and an enemy of all righteousness; and if thou art in the flesh, thou art already in condemnation. Now I little doubt, but euery wicked man desireth to be saued: but they indeuour it not, no otherwise then Balaam did, (Nu. 23. 10.) who could wish to die the death of the righteous, but neuer indeuoured to liue their life.
is

Further to proue the precise necessitie of mortification, looke 1. Iohn 3. 7. Let no man deceiue you: he beginneth with a preoccupation to possesse their minds before hand: He that doth righteousness (saith he) is righteous, not he that can discourse and talke of righteousness: and therefore one saith truly, Tace lingua, loquere vita, talke not of a good life; but let thy life speake. This the Apottle there proueth by the contrary: for he that committeth sin is of the diuell: that is, he that committeth sin as the world doth, and doth not purge himselfe: for the Apostle opposeth sinning to purging; and he that is of the diuell cannot please God. For therefore was Christ sent to destroy the workes of

of the diuell : so as if these workes be not destroyed in thee, and his building pulled downe, Christ was neuer sent vnto thee. A-gaine he proueth it by the contrary : He that is borne of God doth not sinne, for he hath the seed of the spirit : therefore it is as if he should say : when such wicked men shall bee saued, the diuell shall be saued. This is further proued by the words which Christ himselfe spake in the flesh, Iob. 8. 34. He that so sinneth as to make a trade of it, he is the seruant of the diuell, vers. 44. and if no chastisements nor benefites can reclaime you, ye are the diuels : for the lusts of your father ye will doe. Lastly, adde to this, that of the new couenant made with Israel, and so with vs : Ier. 31. 31. I will write my law in their hearts, vers. 33. And I will be their God, and they shall bee my people. So as if God pardoneth any, hee doth promise him grace to amend his life ; and if that grace be denied him, he neuer couenanted to saue him. The co-uenant then implieth thus much : If thou hast not grace to ab-staine from grosse sinnes thou shalt be damned ; and if thou hast the grace of sanctification giuen thee, thou shalt be saued.

But if ye mortifie the deeds of the flesh by the spirit, &c.

This is the second proposition which the Apostle layeth downe, namely, that a good course of life leadeth to a good end. Wherein first is questionable, whether it standeth in the power of the heart of man to subdue the corrupt desires and affections of his nature, as well as it doth to fulfill the lusts of the flesh : for 2. Tim. 2. 20. 21. Paul shewing, how that in a great house there be vessels some for honour and some for dishonour, some for base and some for higher seruices, which house he meaneth to be the Church of God, saith, that if any man purge himselfe, hee shall be a fit vessell for Gods house : and 1. Iob. 5. 18. He that is begotten of God, keepeth himselfe from that wicked one, (which is the diuell) that he touch him not. Which places may seeme to attribute the purifying and cleansing of our selues to our selues, by our owne inclinations and wils : but it must be vnder-stood, that the Scripture in these and such like places, setteth not downe the cause of this cleansing, but the execution of it. For the cause of this our mortification appeareth Ezech. 36. 26. I (saith the Lord) will giue you a new heart and a new spirit : so as there

there it must be had, euen of God ; but it must be in vs, otherwise we pertaine not to the Lords election. Hereupon the Scripture vouchsafeth vs that honour to say we do it, because notwithstanding the reforming of our iudgements, and the changing of our affections is wrought by the supernaturall power of the holy Ghost working in vs, yet this holy Ghost doth worke in vs as the subiects, and by vs as the instruments : as when it is said, I will write my law in your hearts, the spirit writes, but the heart is the place ; and whatsoever is written in our hearts is ours. To make this more plaine by a naturall proportion : As a man that rectifieth and guideth the hand of a child to write, the writing is said to be the worke of the child, and not of him that directed him, though without such direction the child could not haue done it: euen so the Lord doth guide vs in all things we doe well ; and what doth hee guide but our wils ? so as the worke proceeding from our wils is ours, yet without the guide of the spirit we could not doe it. And in this working there is not a double effect, one of the holy Ghost, and another of our selues, but we doe; iteuen as before there were not two writers, though the child was directed, but the child onely writ it.

Secondly, where it is said, If ye mortifie, &c. ye shall liue, it may be demanded, whether by the same reason we deserue saluation by this mortifying of our flesh, as by walking in the flesh we deserue damnation. It is certaine, vnlesse we doe well we can not be saued; yet the holy Ghost sheweth, that there is not the same perfection to doe well in our natures, as there is in vs agilitie and dexterity to follow wickednesse. For by our fall we are thoroughly corrupted, as the Prophet Esay speaketh, chap. 1. 6. From the sole of the foot to the top of the head, there is nothing but wounds and swelling : but by our regeneration in this life, we can neuer perfectly be renewed. It sufficeth we haue obtained the blessing of Iacob, Gen. 32. 28. 29. to haue such power from God as to be lame in sinne all our life long. So Paul (Rom. 6. 23.) saith : The wages of sinne is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Christ : whereby appeareth that the contraries themselues are not perfect : for sinne of it selfe deserueth death, but being good of it selfe deserueth not life, for it is the gift of God,

words cannot be soe giuen, yet
 vnlesse

God, and so the consequents of these two cannot be perfect and agree together.

Againe, it is one question to aske, who shall be saued; and another to aske, how we shall be saued: for true it is, that none shall be saued but they that mortifie themselues if they liue: and for children, they are changed in a moment by a supernaturall power of the Lord. As it is said Esa. 33. 14. Who shall dwell with the deuouring fire? He that walketh in iustice and speaketh righteous things, refusing the gaine of oppression, shaking his hands from taking of gifts, stopping his eares from hearing of blood, and shutting his eyes from seeing of euill. And Dauid (Psal. 15. 1.) asketh the question, and bringeth in the Lord to answer it: Who shall dwell in thy tabernacle? He that walketh uprightly, he that taketh no reward against the innocent; and such like as it followeth there: as if the Lord should say: Such and none else (for the words haue an exclusiue nature.) So if it be asked, who they be that shall be set at the right hand of God in heauen? it must be answered: They that visite the members of Christ in affliction, and leade their liues answerable to their religious profession. And if, Who they be that shall be set on the left hand? the answer is: They that refuse to releue the Saints of God, and put religion on their faces as a maske to hide the foule deformitie & hypocrisie of their hearts. Therefore vpon the question demanded, Whether more in number shall be saued or damned, Christ resolueth it Luk. 13. 25. shewing that some shall haue belted such paines, and walked so farre in the course of Christianity, as euen to knocke at heauen gates, and to challenge the Lord to let them in, and yet he shall not know them: that whatsoever profession they haue made in the face of the world, as to come before the Lord as a people, yet because they haue not liued as a people, he will not acknowledge them. So as true it is, that none shall enioy the presence of the Almighty, but they that haue their lampes burning at the houre of their death: none but they that haue their foundation settled vpon the rockes, as not to be shaken with the blast of any persecution: none but they who like faithfull seruants by spirituall trafficke haue employed their talents to their Lords advantage: none but they that are able to testifie by the fruites of the spirit, that they haue the spirit. But vpon demand how we shall be saued, our answer is : Onely by the blood of Christ, as the cause and effectuall meanes thereof : for heauen is giuen operantibus, non operibus, to workers, not to works : as 2. Cor. 5. 10. The Lord shall giue to euery man according as he hath wrought; not for that he hath wrought : & Heb. 13. 21. none shall see God without a pure conuersation, but not because of his pure conuersation ; for though we must be perfect in workes, yet this working must bee wrought in vs by God, as the Apostle there speaketh. So likewise none but the obedient child shall be heire, not because he is obedient, but because he is heire, and yet only the obedient child shall receiue the inheritance. And euen as we adore and worship Iesus Christ man, but not his humanity, Hominem non humanitatem : so holinesse of life, speaking in the abstract quality, doth not saue, but holy men shall be saued : so faith and workes in the person iustified must concurre ; but in the matter of iustification, faith onely and alone hath the place. If therefore it be demanded whether workes be necessary to iustification : we answer, yea, as absolutely necessary in their place as faith : for wee can not assure our selues of faith, but by the visible fruite of workes ; so as they be not Concausa, causes concurring and iumping together, but they are Conseclaria, consecrations and consequents of faith.

that

Vers. 14. For as many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sonnes of God.

This is a confirmation of the reason before going, on both parts : for, as many as mortifie the flesh by the spirit, are the sonnes of God, and they that doe not so are the sonnes of the diuell. So the force of the argument is, they that are Gods sonnes are led to mortifie the flesh, and being his sons, they are inheritors of heauen : and this the Apostle assumeth and taketh as granted, that the sons of God must needs haue eternall life. Whereupon the contrary proposition is true; he that liues after the flesh, is not the son of God, for if he were he would liue after the spirit : but hee that doth not mortifie the flesh hath not the spirit, therefore he is not the son of God. Hereupon followeth, if they be sons and not Gods, they are as Christ speaketh Iohn 8.44. the children of the diuell. Wherein we learne, that if we be asked by what title and interest we can challenge or lay claime to heauen, it is by none but by this, that we are the sonnes of God, and we are his sons onely by adoption, and wee are adopted to it onely in the naturall heire and son of God Christ Iesus, by whose blood we are justified, and sanctified by his spirit. Being then adopted to this inheritance as heires, we are not borne to it, for adoptiō excludeth birth, being not borne to it, it is purchased for vs in the obedience of Christ: wee must learne then to resemble Christ in being obedient to the will of God as he was, and shew foorth and expresse our obedience by keeping his commandements, and keepe them by leauing off grosse sins, and walking according to his will, with a full purpose of our hearts to performe it, alwaies excepting our infirmities and inborne weaknesse, which cleaue so fast to vs as we cannot shake them off, nor be deliuered of them till we ouercome all in death. Hauing then no title to heauen but by inheritance, nor no title to this inheritance but by Christ, there is excluded all merits to deserue it: and only because we are to be saued we must do well; for it is giuen vs as the inheritance of children, and not as any stipendary wages of a mercenary man. Herupon we must wisely vnderstand, that when Christ saith, Mat. 25.35. Come ye blessed, &c. for ye haue releued the poore, &c. that this releeuing of the poore, and such other workes of faith and loue there mentioned, are not set downe as causes of blessednesse, for these speeches (for) and (because) do not alwaies inferre and bring in a cause, but they are such words and particles as sometime ioine the cause with the effect, and sometime the effect with the cause: as when wee say, it is spring time, for it blossoms; not that the blossoms are the cause of the spring, but an effect and euidence that the spring is come. So when we say, he hath a soule because he breatheth, and yet the soule is the cause of breath, and breathing but an effect of the soule: euen so when Christ saith, come and receiue a kingdom, for ye haue done such and such particular workes of loue, it is onely a knitting of the effect with the cause: for God ha-

uing preselected or chosen vs before all worlds to this saluation, giueth vs this his spirit, by whose power and vertue wee worke these good things. And in this kinde and phrased of speech the cause is ioyned with the effect, as if it should be said, Come you that haue releued the poore, that haue comforted the distressed, that haue sorowed with the afflicted, receiue the kingdome, for it is your inheritance. So as the speech of Christ hath this meaning in it, You haue done good workes to testifie my kingdome to be yours, come take the inheritance prepared for you in the preselection of God, for you are the inheritors of heauen, because of these fruites and effects which you haue shewed in comforting the afflicted members of Christ. We may not take it then that heauen which is the inheritance of the saints, is giuen for any desert; for when we haue attained to the highest degree of mortification, and haue done all that we can, we are as Christ saith, but vnprofitable seruants. True (say the Papists) vnprofitable to God, but not to our selues. A miserable euasion of a fortifish distinction: for the scope of Christ is in that place to proue from the lesse to the greater negatively, that if such seruants whose life and death were in their masters hands, (as bond-men were in those times) doing their duties and seruice neuer so well, cannot deserue so much as thanks at their masters hands, much lesse that they should emancipate and set themselues free, and much lesse to be their masters heires: then much lesse (since there is no comparison betweene God in heauen and man on earth) can we deserue at the hands of God, lying in the vncleanness of our first birth, and ouergrowne with sinnes as we haue growne in yeeres, to be sanctified by his spirit in this life, and glorified by himselfe in the life to come, for there is no bond-man so intrahled to his matter as we are to God, euen in respect of our first creation, when we carried the glory of his image in our face, and had as it were the crowne of innocency set vpon our heads, and yet we wilfully ran from him to our shame, till he returned vs againe in his loue: so as now all that we doe is duty and not desert: and why should he receiue thanks that doth but what we ought? Yea (say the Papists) but yet we deserue something, because we are not vnprofitable to our selues. Absurd: for what master will

Luk. 17. 10.

thinke himselfe beholden to that seruant, who by his seruice only inricheth himselfe and bringeth no commodity to his master? And yet by the meaning of the Papists, because we get something vnder God and by his seruice, God must be indebted to vs. But heereupon we say, that true it is, we are not vnprofitable to our selues: for in Christ, not onely the person but the worke also is accepted, and the person onely in respect he is adopted, and this adoption is onely in Christ; but yet so, as we neuer haue God beholden to vs. Therefore when he saith, Come good seruant and faithfull, enter into thy masters ioy: it is true, that the Lord doth recompence the vsing of our talents well; but this is so farre as we are iustified and are his sons: so as first he loueth the person, and then the worke; and if he did not accept the iustification of the person, he would disauow the worke: but being his children, though we are farre from doing that we ought, yet as a kind and louing father he accepteth it pleasingly.

Mat. 25. 21.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 15.

15. For ye haue not receiued the spirit of bondage to feare againe, but ye haue receiued the spirit of adoption, whereby we crye Abba, Father.

IN this verse, and that which followeth, the Apostle doth confirme that hee set downe before, namely, that wee are intitled to eternall life by inheritance; and to confirme and ratifie that vnto vs, wee haue this priuiledge to bee Gods sonnes, and so heires of heauen. The arguments he vseth be two: first, ye haue receiued that spirit whereby whereby God doth witnesseth that he doth accept you as his children in his naturall Sonne Christ Iesus. And to prone we haue this spirit of a doption, he doth it by the contrary : for, saith he, like bond-slaues ye do not now feare the ghastly looks of the tormenter, nor yee haue not now that hellish horrour and fearefull apprehension of Gods iudgements, wherby Sathan vseth to whip mens consciences, nor ye haue not that loud alarme of the killing law sounding in your eares, and seizing vpon your soules to affright you. Secondly, in the verse following, he proueth it by a double testimony : first, of Gods spirit which witnesseth this vnto vs, and which were blasphemy to thinke it could suggest false things : and secondly, by our owne spirit, which may assure our selues of it, by our godly and holy conuersation.

By the spirit of bondage, in this place is meant the holy Ghost, who by the instrument of the killing letter, that is, the law, doth propose and set downe such a condition of obedience, to which we are obliged and bound by our creation, and yet are now vterly disabled by our corruption to performe it : so as it is impossible to be kept, and yet ought to be kept, and laieth such a burthen vpon vs, as neither wee nor our first parents were euer able to beare, since they declined from the estate wherein they were at first created. Whereupon this spirit of God by this meanes setting the law before vs as a glasse, wherein wee may behold our selues, conuinceth the conscience, of the good not done, and of the euill that is done : thereby shewing, that no flesh can by this be iustified before God ; and sheweth, and setteth before our eies not only the sinne, but the vengeance which the sinne draws after it : so as our conscience can not bee but grievously wounded with that hellish horrour wee haue voluntarily made our selues subiect vnto. Now on the contrary, the spirit of adoption is that worke of the holy Ghost, whereby the incomprehensible loue of God in his Sonne is powred into our hearts, that hee doth auow and know vs for his children, so farre as we are not now bond-men to feare the performance of that impossible condition proposed by the law : but we are heereby assured, that what the law commandeth, this spirit will either enable vs to performe, or dispence and beare with our imperfections in not doing it with that perfection it requir-eth, and so by consequent we ascertain our selues that wee are the sonnes of God.
 CC 田 3 out

The parts heerein to be obserued are two : there being set downe an opposing of a double spirit of contrarie natures, working contrarie effects according to their natures. The effect of the first being a dreadfull and fearefull expectation of endlesse and hellish torments : the effect of the other being a comfortable securitie, and breeding a heauenly hope, that wee shall bee blessed of the Lord ; out of which as out of a root springeth and ariseth chearefull obedience to God our Father, the other inforcing vs only through feare to loue God as bondslaves.

Herein is questionable, whether by this spirit of bondage here spoken of, is meant the spirit of Sathan, or the holy Ghost, that should thus terrify and affright vs. But note, it must be vnder-stood of Gods spirit, which is the author of working holy des-paire, and by consequent of terror, and is an occasion of des-paire in the wicked: and this is as proper for the spirit of God, as to offer the sweet comfort of Christs bitter passion vnto vs. For by this meanes and maner of terrifying, it bringeth both the elect and the reprobate to despaire, but to a diuers end. For the elect in this sort : that shewing it impossible and past our power to performe the law, euen as impossible as to build a tower to the heauens, or to remooue a promontorie with our finger, it bringeth vs to a holy despaire in our selus in respect of our own deserts : thereby driuing vs to seeke to couer our nakednes with the robes of our elder brother Christ Iesus, and to remedie and cure our vnrighteousnesse in the righteousnesse of the blood of Christ. So as with the hearers of Peter, (Act. 2. 37.) the law vr-ging and pricking our consciences, wee shall crie out in a holy distrust of our selues : What shall we do ? And this kind of des-paire prepareth vs to saluation: for the spirit sheweth vs our po-uerty, and where to buy gold that shall cost vs nothing : it sheweth vs our wretchednesse, that haue nothing but rags to put on,
and withall the wardrobe of Christs righteousnesse, where wee shall haue garments fit for the Saints of God : it sheweth our A-postasie, how we haue fallen, and by our fall haue euen broken
and

and cut as it were our owne throats, and sendeth vs to the Physician Christ, who is onely good at such a desperate disease: it sheweth our blindness, and withall the eie-salue of the holy Ghost to cleare vs: it sheweth vs our debt and the sergeant the diuell ready to arrest vs, and then sends vs to the God of heauen, in whose hands is all treasure to discharge what we owe: it sheweth vs how we stand vpon the scaffold ready for the hatcher, and then out of this attonishment sendeth vs an absolute pardon from heauen sealed with the blood of Christ, and subscribed with Gods owne hand. So as it teacheth vs onely to mistrust and despaire in our selues, and to seeke to be releued and refreshed with that water of life, whereof hauing once drunke, wee shall neuer thirst againe. 1. Ioh. 2. 20.

Howbeit on the contrary, this same spirit bringeth the wicked into a sense and feeling of this same horror, and leaueth them in the astonishment of their conscience, so as Sathan continually hath their sinnes to scourge them with, and their corruptions wherewithall to vpbraide them. And the cause why they bee left in this hellish plight, and suffered to be thus perplexed and tormented of themselues, is their owne infidelity, that they haue stopped their eares against that comfortable sound of the Lords mercy, and so poisoned their hearts with sinne, that the power of the word could not worke vpon them: and so the Lord most iustly hath hardened them in their irkesome and tedious hypocrisie, that the sinnes they commit should be the punishments of sinnes past, and the deserts of punishments that are to come. And as to that, that the holy Ghost working this same feare and terror in the hearts and consciences both of the elect and of the wicked, and should leaue the reprobate euen when they are brought to the depth of despaire, it were blasphemy to say or thinke, that he doth it for and to the same end that Sathan doth: for Sathan doth it to prooue God a liar, as that being in that case it were not possible for God to saue them; whereas the mercy of the Lord is aboue all his workes. But the spirit of God doth this, that God may be justified in the iust hardening of that mans heart whom hee found sinfull, and whom hee was not bound to saue: and so his end is to take vengeance of his hypo-crisie,

crisfe: for the Lord is as jealous of his iustice, as he is of his mercie. Sathan promiseth saluation to whom God pronounceth damnation, and lulleth them in security whom he findeth carelesse to watch ouer their steps, neuer greatly troubling or mouing any of his owne, till they come to such a deepe exigent, and to such a narrow pinch euen to hels mouth, that they cannot goe from him, & then they taste euen of hell fire in this life, and feele a fearefull beginning of that shall neuer haue end. Now God threatneth damnation to all; to his elect, that they may seeke and hasten to be shrouded vnder the shadow of Christs wings, and to feele the vertue of the hemme of his garment; to the reprobate, that they may bee the more hardened, beacuse it is in the corruption of their owne hearts, that they heaue refused the acceptable time of grace, and reiected the pearle which they might haue bought.

Mat. 14. 36.

It will be said: But why should the holy Ghost leaue them in this despaire? He is not properly the author of despaire, but if the reprobate being brought to this be not recouered, it cometh of his owne wickednesse. As for example, a man sheweth vnto a traitor his indignity, and hauing done this, with great and vehement passions hee sheweth him the detestation and vgliness of his offence, and leaueth him with some doubt and scruple of conscience as amazed at his owne wickednesse: if the traitor vpon this make himselfe away by violence as Judas did, hee that thus laid the quality and nature of his offence open before him, is not the cause of this his desperate end: hee was the cause and meanes of making him to bee affraid and angry with himselfe onely, and that was lawfull: so the holy Ghost by laying open the riches of Gods mercy at the first, thine owne wilfull rebellion to forsake him, his giuing of thee a law to bridle thee, and the heat and seruencie of thy corruption to breake through all lawes, worketh this terror in thy heart that art a reprobate; and sheweth as it were before thee the smart and execution of thy sinne. If now thou despairest and retest there, the cause is in thy selfe, for thou sawest light and louedst it not, and heardest the sound of retrait, and yet wentest on to thine owne destruction. Further, this spirit of God is not the author of despaire as it is despaire

Mat. 27. 5.

Rom. 7. 12.

despaire, for a man should neuer despaire of Gods mercy: as God was not the cause of the lie in the false Prophets as it was a lie, but he shewed his iudgement on them by giuing them thus ouer to this sinne. So despaire in the reprobate, wrought by the wickednesse of their hearts, is after this sort reuenged by the spirit, in giuing them ouer to the extremity of this sin; so as it commeth from the spirit not as an euil author, but as a iust reuenger of their former sinnes.

Now the instruments the spirit of God vseth to bring and perswade the conscience to feare damnation, are two: first, the law naturall, for in the nature of euery man somethings is ingrafted and written of euery sinne, that howsoeuer it bee acted and performed with pleasure, yet euen in nature it endeth and is left with remorse, which doeth shew that there is a God to punish it. This was that which made the heathen to haue an apprehension and vnderstanding of infernall furies, as that for some sinnes they should bee so exagitated and tormented with them as they could haue no rest. For this cause they tearmed them by speciall names, as the fury of Nemesis, that should plague the proud man: Eumenides, because shee was implacable and would not bee intreated: Alecto, because it was a torment that neuer ceased: Alasto, that should pursue the vengeance as neuer to be forgotten: Trisiphone, that tooke vengeance vpon murderers: yea almost for euery sinne committed they had a seuerall fury, which was thought to punish it. Yea by this very light of nature they likewise imagined some of these furies to burne the offenders with torches, some to sting with Adders. And what bee these furies, saith the Philosopher? Nothing else but Suo quemque exagitant furia, that is, Every man is tormented with his owne furie, which is his conscience: the property whereof, is to present thy sinne before thy face, that out of thine owne mouth thou mayest bee iudged: yea the heathen had such a deepe impression of these tortures, as committing some foule and hainous fact, without some expiation or sacrifice they thought they should neuer bee in quiet.

But

But the greatest instrument, which is the second that the spirit useth to strike feare into the soule and conscience, is the law written, which is a dead letter, and such a sentence that for desert pronounceth damnation as oft as we read it: which we must needs conceiue to bee so, if wee consider that the least bad thought is damnation, though it bee not coupled with consent to bring forth an actuall fruit of sinne. What then? Is the preaching of the law the worker of this terror? And are some by the booke of nature so exagitate and troubled with furies, as they cannot rest when they haue slipt into some sinne: and yet shall there be some in these daies that are so frozen in Atheisme, and so ouergrownè in the weeds of Popery, and so possessèd with the power of the diuell, that they are not once touched or pricked in their hearts for their horrible sins; but that liuing as diuels, they hope to be saued as Saints? Indeed it is not to be doubted, but that now there is greater Atheisme in some, and lesse sorrow and remorse for sinne in others, then was in the heathen, and yet it was the iust iudgement of God then (as Paul saith) to giue vp the heathen into a reprobate sense, that they might receiue in themselues such recompence of their error as was meete; and therefore much more in vengeance doth the Lord deliuer vp these men to be beguiled of their owne fancies, and to become senselesse in their owne sins since they profit not by this booke of the written law, pronounced by the Lords owne mouth, and deliuered by the Lords owne hand, the truth whereof ought not to be called in question, though these men really confute it by their liues, thinking there is no Christ to saue, nor God to punish, nor conscience to accuse, nor diuell to torment, but with scurrility do scorne at the wholsome disease of tenderesse and terror of conscience, which they themselues at their separation shall finde so great, as neither themselues can still, neither in truth can it be stilled. And howsoeuer many peraduenture haue commanded their conscience to be silent, and put away the euill day far from them, and think themselues safe inough if they may be let alone till the last day, yet we haue seene some of the eldest sons of Sathan, after a long and tedious hypocrisie wherein they were fallen asleepe, to haue bene so fearefully astonished in the end, and plunged and cast downe

down into so deepe despaire, as they euen seemed to heare the very echo of the damited spirits, which is a most hideous and terrible sound in the eares of the most carnall man that is, and could by no meanes bee comforted or any whit eased, but haue either hanged themselues as Iudas did, or otherwise died in a sense of hellish torment in this life. For as in a seared peece of flesh there is alwaies left in the toppe some crust, but vnder that there is euer some pregnant sense: so if the Lord once pare away from the soule that is cauterized and crusted, then is the feare and terror of those men greater, for they feele the flame of the Lords indignation, which the elect neuer doe, hauing by a sanctified wisdome prevented this extremity, by seeking remedy in Christ, who giueth and neuer vpbraideth:

Now to prooue that the Law is such a dead letter, as being rightly vnderstood it is impossible to keepe thy selfe from despaire, in respect of any thing which in thine owne person thou canst deserue: obserue, that this law of God teacheth, that lust in thy heart is absolute adulterie, and that anger in heart is flat murder; wherein it goeth beyond and surpasseth all the laws of any earthly Prince, which free the heart and extend onely to the act: whereas this law bindeth both the outward man from working, and the inward man from compassing mischief. Now if thou come to weigh and examine thy selfe in this ballance, and take this law for a touchstone, to trie whether thou beest gold or drosse, thou shalt find thy selfe too light & but refuse: for who can say, I haue not offended? who can say, I am not crazed? nay whatever thou art, thou canst not clear thy heart of these & such like passions of heat betokening wrath, and of corrupt thoughts bewraying thy vncleane heart. But if thou enter into this consideration, that though thou thinke of such things, and thy heart reprooues thee, yet that in the strict construction of this law, if thou hast but a wandring or wanton thought, in the precisenesse thereof thou shalt be damned, for all and euery particular power both of body and soule ought to bee taken vp for Christ, and wholly vsed to his glory, so as if thou callest in doubt the truth of the Scripture, though thy heart abhorreth it, it is damnation. If thou examine thy selfe according to this rule,

Mat. 5. 22. 28.

and yet escapeth from the sight of despaire; it is hard, nay it is impossible, for this is the sharpest edge of the law, and the most fretting corasiue that eates out the dead flesh of our sinful hearts, that sounds the bottome of mans vault soule, and toucheth the sinnes that lie betweene the skinne and the bones. Since for our very thoughts alone by the tenth commandement without consent we are culpable of iudgement, which S. Paul (Rom. 7. 7.) expresseth by speaking in his own person, I had not known lust; that is, the fountaine and seate whence lust doth spring, except the Law had said, Thou shalt not lust.

- x Here then we must needs confesse, since this ought to bee euery mans examination, that if we doe not examine our selues after this sort formerly set downe, it is a signe we haue not this spirit of adoption, because we haue not had the spirit of bondage. Now this is no examination of our selues to liue morally, as to receiue the testimony of men that we are honest, in giuing perhaps a groate to the poore, and pardoning the forfeiture of an obligation, and such like, and yet not sticke to prophane Gods sabbath, to contemne his messengers, to poure out othes, by Faith, which includeth the whole blessed Trinity, and say it is nothing: by the Masse, that most execrable idoll; and say it is sworne out of the country. Can a man thinke himselfe rich that is indebted to all the world, and hath nothing wherewithall to pay them? And can such men that bee very beasts and without sense before God, esteeme themselves vertuous and religious because they are onely highly praised of men? They see not their owne estate, because they haue not examined themselves according to the former rule. When a man hath swept his chamber he thinkes all is cleane, but when the Sunne commeth it sheweth many a mote hee could not before spie out: so if the spirit would once shine into these mens consciences, they should see not onely motes, but most deformed and enormous sinnes in their hearts. And how friuolous is it to stand vpon mans witness without religion, which pierceth and looketh into the soule? For otherwise, he that thinketh himselfe in best health carieth his deaths wound in his bosome. The basest gold is better then the purest led; and the greatest imperfections of Gods children, children, better then the highest vertues of the wicked, and neuer shall they bee exalted that haue not before beene humbled. The law is a hammer not onely to bruisse the conscience, but to breake it into powder; which if it be not done, wee shall neuer haue the spirit of adoption to seize vpon vs. The law commands, but giueth no power to obey; and is as if we should say to a beggar: Buy such a mannor, when he hath neuer a penny to helpe himselfe, nor yet we giue him any money to do it: euen so, purchase heauen with thy works, saith the law, and yet knowes we are spoiled of all abilitie, and doth not enable vs to doe such workes: all one, as if we should say to one, hold vp the heavens with thy finger, and yet giue him no strength to do it: or as if we should say to the blind, see, it is comfortable; and to the deafe, heare, it is profitable; and yet giue them no meanes whereby they should doe these. So the law is but a dead letter, and hath but a dolefull and dreadfull sound, vntill the spirit come and arme vs with power and abilitie to performe what the law requireth.

Lastly, where it is said, Ye haue not receiued the spirit of bondage againe, obserue, that all that are conuerted, and with the lost sonne are come home againe, haue beene once brought to a terror and fright of conscience: which hath beene after a diuers measure: for the Lord keepes some longer in the schoole of the law then he doth others, according as hee findeth their hearts and dispositions inclinable to stoope and to be humbled, or else for example sake, as seemeth best to the Lord. But yet euery one of Gods chidren must come to this: that is, (Act. 2. 37.) being moued and pricked in conscience, to say and crie out, What shall I doe to be saued? I see my debt, where shall I get surety? I perceiue my nakednesse, where shall I be couered? I am fallen, how shall I be recouered? And being touched in their hearts, if they fall not into that exclamation, then as it is said of Ely his sonnes, (1. Sam. 2. 25.) they obeyed not because the Lord would slay them: so for these men to be baked in their sinnes, and to see their destruction and not to shunne it, and by this meanes to despaire finally, is the iust iudgement of God, that he may be auenged of their great hypocrisie, for mercy offered and refused

or set light by, doubleth the punishment. Euen as in this nation by the blessed preaching of the Gospell, Sathan is cast out in the generall profession of the Land: if now he labour to creepe in againe by hypocrisie, and make vs thinke religion to rest in shewes, and consist in ceremonies, growing more leane and ilfavoured after we haue deuoured so many yeeres of store and plenty in preaching the word, we doe erre in our hearts, and do arme our enemye against vs, who at his reentrance will bring seuen spirits worse then he did before, and will so fortifie his habitation with hypocrisie, and other great and monstrous sinnes, as there shall be more profaness in this nation then euer there was before.

Luk. 11. 25.

But ye haue receiued the spirit of adoption. In this the Apostle proueth that we are the Sonnes of God, because we are so adopted in the euerlasting grace of his blessed Sonne. And to proue we haue this spirit, he doth it by the contrary, thus: we are deliuered from the spirit of feare, and redeemed into such a Christian liberty, as we now loue God not for feare, but feare him for his loue. In this there are two parts to be considered: first, what this spirit of adoption is: secondly, the inseparable effect that followeth it, namely, an assured confidence to come boldly before the Lord, euen as children before their parents, to craue pardon for our sinnes.

1. For the first: this spirit is the holy Ghost, assuring vs by the word of grace, that is, the Gospell, that the Lord hath auowed vs for his children in that one and best beloued Sonne of his Christ Iesus; so that no extremities of this life, nor sorrowes of death, nor sinne it selfe shall be able to ouerwhelme vs. Therefore it is said in the Scriptures, that the holy Ghost setteth a seale vpon the heart of his elect, and writeth a deed in their consciences, which is but a draught of that originall deed, which is in heauen in the booke of the Lords government. And this is sealed vnto vs by the finger of the spirit, to free it from the forgery of Sathan, and by this euidence we make our title to the kingdom of heauen. Also it is called an earnest penie, because as in contracts by giuing a penie in earnest the partie is obliged and bound to pay the rest: so this being as it were the first fruites of Ephes. 1. 13.

2. Cor. 5. 5.

the spirit, the Lord doth assure vs, that as verily as we haue receiued thus much in hand in this vale of misery, so this shall bee a pawne and pledge vnto vs, that he will giue vs the rest in the fulnesse of his glory, vnder which assurance we rest and lie down in hope with ioy vnspeakeable. And as the first fruits in the law made the whole crop holy, so this sparke of the Lords grace, being kindled and set on fire in vs, doth embolden vs to an expectation of the full enioying of our whole Lord Christ Iesus.

This testimony oft times is very weake, especially when Sathan doth sift and winnow vs as he did Peter, so as we had need to pray with the disciples, Lord increase our faith. Yet as a prisoner in a darke dungeon seeing but the Sunne at a little grate, doth know and beleue that the Sunne shineth vpon the whole earth: so though we be shackled and imprisoned in this flesh as in a dungeon, that we are not able to behold the Sun-shine of the Lord in full measure, which is the Sunne of light and of life, yet we haue such a glimpse as wee cannot bee perswaded but it shineth vpon our soules. And as the child in the mothers womb stirring neuer so weakly, yet euen by that feeble motion she is assured that it hath life; so the least light of the Sunne of righteousness is most sweet & comfortable vnto vs. Which doctrine as it ministreth and bringeth consolation to a weake soule, so must it be as a sharpe spur vnto vs, that this righteousness may be increased, and that this spirit of God may delight to dwell in vs, that we being grounded, and growing daily in a persuasion of Gods loue towards vs, it may enforce vs to loue him more and more: and the strength and perfection of this loue, may and ought to make vs resist and shunne all contrary means, whereby our increase and growth in faith may bee hindered. And because this spirit of the Lords adoption is inward and can not be perceiued; & that many be deluded by Sathans subtilty, and forgerie, foisting and thrusting in another deed than euer God gaue vs, especially working vpon the weake heart of man, which being fraught and full of selfe-loue, is easily perswaded of any good to it selfe: therefore we must learne how to discern whether it be the true euidence of Gods spirit or no which we haue within vs. And for that the Apostle here setteth down one effect

effect and fruit of this spirit for all : that is , that there is a confidence of any good conscience to come boldly before the Lord, as a child before his father , to preferre our suites vnto him, and to offer vp our praiers vpon the golden altar, that is, the mediation of Christ, by whose meanes and through whose obedience and suffering they shall fauour before the Lord as a sweet incense, and the Lord shall put into them daily a new incense by the spirit, assuring vs more and more of his louing fauor : and we shall not hide our selues and run away when we are called, as Adam did, but being disburdened of that which doth presse vs downe from the presence of God, we shall come cheerefully before him, and ioy our selues , in that the Lord will looke so pleasingly vpon vs. Other effects of this spirit , and yet arising from the former , are these: If the spirit worke in vs the same affection towards God, that nature doth produce in children toward their parents: as first to loue God : secondly, to feare him : thirdly, to reuerence him : fourthly, to be obedient to him : fifthly, to be thankfull to him; all which vertues be in good children, who do alwaies acknowledge all they haue to proceed from their father , as the speciall instrument from God: and if we haue & beare these affections to God our father, as to loue him for his mercies, to feare him for his loue, to reuerence him for his goodnesse, to obey him for his greatnes, and to be thankfull to him for his kindnesse , then may we assure our selues, that we haue the spirit of adoption, sealed vp in vs for our saluation.

✕ In that we crie Abba Father, learne, that no obstinate or resolute sinner persisting deliberately in his sinne, and his heart deliting in it, can once open his mouth to pray, nor neuer did pray. The like whereof may be said of the hypocrite: for though they may falsely perswade themselues, that offering vp a few words in forme of a praier, it is sufficient to purge the vncleannesse of their liues, and that impudently and in presumption they may call God, Father, when their harts be impure and vncleane: yet (Iohn 8. 44.) Christ calleth them the children of their father the diuell. And though Sathan may perswade an obstinate and wilfull sinner as he did Henab, that doing such an euill and wicked thing, they shall not hang in hell (alwaies threating

Gen. 3. 4. 5.

ning where God promiseth, and promising where God threat-neth, vntill he take them in the lurch at the time of their death, and then he ouerreckneth them) yet it is certaine he cannot pray vnlesse he haue this spirit, and this spirit none hath if they delight and saouour of sin: so as though they cry, Peace, peace, to their owne conscience, and seruing the diuell will neuertheless vaunt themselues to bee the sonnes of God, it is the Lords iustice that permitteth Sathan so to blinde them that they cannot see their sicknesse to the death: for 1. Iohn 3. 8. it is said, He that committeth sinne is of the diuell. Can the poison of Aspes and the sacrifice of praier proceed both from the same tongue? No.
Grapes cannot grow of thornes, nor figs of thistles: and Esay 66:
3. 5. the Lord saith, that he that offereth sacrifice without trembling, that is, without reformation of life, it is as if he killed a man, which is most vnfauiory to the Lord. So as lawfull things and things commanded be an abomination to the Lord, when the soule and conscience is not answerable to the action and to the outward profession. Howbeit things simply forbidden are sinnes both in the regenerate and vnregenerate, and the prayers of these men that thus can lie on their beds and imagine mis-chiefe, and yet can open their lippes by way of conference and speech with God, are no better then those of the rebels in the North, who when they had published all their mischiefe, which tended to the ouerthrow of our dread Soueraigne, yet ended and concluded their proclamation with, Godsane Queene Elizabeth.

Now concerning hypocrites, that they cannot pray but by imitation of Christians, as Parots, looke vpon the rule of Dauid, Psal. 66. 18. If I regard (saith he) wickednesse in my heart, the Lord will not heare me: that is, if I delight in sin, my praiers shall not come neare him: so as make what shew thou wilt, if thy heart be not vpight, it auaieth not. For as it is said, Iohn 9. 31. God heareth no sinners, that is, no malicious and deliberate sinners, which intend and compasse mischiefe in their inward parts, how-focuer in hypocrisie they dissemble it. And it is certaine, it is as impossible to pray without this spirit, as to vnderstand without a soule.

Further

x Further obserue how this spirit begets in vs such peace of conscience, that makes vs confident in crauing our wants at Gods hand : as from the spirit of adoption cometh faith, so from faith issueth and streameth inuocation and calling vpon God by praier. This faith grounded vpon the loue of God in Christ, doth assure vs that whatsoeuer is good in heauen or in earth, God will bestow it vpon vs: then steppeth in praier, and according as the soule is burnd either with a desire to be deliuered from danger, or with an affection to haue some wants supplied, or to declare and expresse our thankfulness, it doth take the present occasion, and forsloweth no time to enter into the sanctuarie of Gods presence, and there to lift vp our weak hands, and to send forth our cold petitions; and that which was generally beleued by faith before, is now particularly chalenged of God by praier, that wee may finde and seele the former promise to be true by this particular instance of reaching foorth our requests to God by praier. And the more to hearten and encourage vs in this exercise and Christian taske, God giueth and graunteth our requests, differing in three respects from the gifts and benefits of worldly men. For first he can giue all things, in his power : secondly, in his wisdom he giueth and neuer repenteth: thirdly, in his goodnes he giueth and neuer vpbraideth. This is the perswasion of faith, and therefore now if wee spare to speake, wee may well spare to speed : whereupon the Prophet Dauid saith, I beleued, therefore I spake : hauing his faith foremost to prepare his lips to praier. And surely the cause why wee call not vpon God so often, or so boldly as we ought, is, either because our faith failes vs that wee thinke not to speede, or else because wee haue but weake and faint hope to speede. For as the Philosopher saith, Qui timide rogat, docet negare, He that craueth fearfully, draweth on a deniall : for that faith that openeth the eies to see such treasures, openeth the mouth to supplicate and to pray for them : so as by this learne in one word, that the Apostle will measure thy faith by thy praiers.

x Whereby we crye. In this word crie, is implied three things : first, a confident boldnesse: secondly, a great earnestnesse: thirdly, an importunacy with perseuerance. Boldnesse, in that wee

speake not softly as in feare, but loud as in assurance: euen as a favorite of an earthly Prince, that hath a promise to haue and obtaine what he can spee out; hauing speciall security to speed, commeth boldly to his Prince, and craueth the performance of that was pledged vnto him by promise before. Earnestnesse, not to take a nay or deniall at the first at our fathers hands, but to goe on with I pray you Father, Good Father, I beseech you Father, and such like speeches of vehemency and feruency, which is heere expressed by the geminating and doubling of the word Father, Father. Then with these must there be an importunacy in praier, which Paul expresseth Rom. 15. 30. by trying or wrestling in praier, shewing thereby the feruency of the minde and of the voice, euen as Iacob did, that would not let the Angell goe before hee had blessed him: and according to the example set downe Luk. 18. 5. of the widow, who by her importunacy (which in the Greeke word signifieth impudency) so troubled and wearied with her cries as it were with blowes the vnrightheous Iudge, as she wrested her sute from him. Christ in that parable teaching vs that wee ought to vse a holy kind of impudency in our petitions vnto God, and neuer to giue him rest till hee hath yeilded to our requests, which wee make in faith, and present in hope. Heereupon it is that the soule is very earnest with God, as either being laden with some sinne which it desireth to be eased of, or priuy to some wants which it faine would haue supplied, or in some apprehension of Gods iudgement for sinne which it seeketh to elcape, or the loue of God contraining it to be thankfull for the rich mercies formerly receiued, or else being a Taulted with some danger and temptation, craueth to bee deliuered: so as alwaies the soule hath occasion to bee quicke and earnest in praier; for causes to moue vs euen in our owne particular persons vnto this duty (besides the generall cause of the Church) doe daily occurre and fall out.

In that it is said, We crie, Father: heere is questionable whether onely God the first person in the Trinity be to be praied vnto, and not the Sonne nor the holy Ghost. To this we answer that the word (Father) and (God) is taken essentially for the whole essence of the God-head which includeth them all, as it is in the Lords praier, or else it is taken personally: for that the Sonne must be praied vnto, the place is plaine, Act. 7. 59. And they stoned Stephen who called on God, and said, Lord Iesus receive my spirit. And that the holy Ghost must be praied vnto, appeareth by Saint Paul, who endeth his Epistle (2. Corinthians 13. 13.) with this praier, The communion of the holie Ghost be with you. So as the word Father in this place is not meant of any one distinct person subsisting in the name of Father, but it is to bee vnderstood of them all, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost; for as they be all offended with vs for our sinnes, so must they all bee reconciled to vs by our praiers. And heereupon is it that Saint Augustine saith, that the whole Trinity is Father in respect of the creature; and hee is onely named heere, because the Father is the fountaine of the God-head, and the first in order, but not in time: howbeit being vnderstood in respect of their diuers subsistences, they are seuerall. Whereupon it is true that the word Father or God is sometime taken personally, as Iohn 3. 16. where it is said, God so loued the world, that hee gaue his onely begotten Sonne, that whosoener beleueneth in him should not perish. And 1. Corinthians 8. 6. Vnto vs there is but one God, which is the Father, of whom are all things: in which places the word God is taken personally, as it is also in the Creede, when wee say, I beleue in God the Father. But the whole Trinitie is called Father in two respects, first, because hee is the fountaine of the God-head, and the fountaine of all loue, election and saluation, the will of the Father going before the will of the Sonne in order not in time. Secondly, because howeuer wee pray to Christ and to the holy Ghost as we doe to God, and howeuer all the workes of the Trinity be vndiuided, that they doe all saue, and not the Father only, yet they doe it by degrees: Christ saueth vs in submitting his will to his Fathers will: the holy Ghost saueth vs in periwading and leading vs to goe to Christ, and from Christ to the Father; so as our praiers are made vnto God in the name of Christ his Sonne, by the direction of the holie Ghost.

Againe,

Againe, in that we name him Father : learne, that all our security and assurance that our praier shall be effectuell, and that we shall speede in our suites and requests, lieth in this : that we are his children, and so all that wee doe and performe pleaseth him no further then the person pleaseth him. And therefore Dauid, Psal. 7. & 17. & 26. making a commemoration of his vertues, as that there was no wickednesse in his hands, that he had purposed his mouth should not offend, that he had not hated nor sorted himselfe with dissemblers, doth it not the rather to moue God to heare him, and to incline his eare to his petition ; but by these testimonies of a good conuersation and a holy life, which in those places he bringeth in, he proueth himselfe to be adopted. So as to assure vs we are Gods children, we are to get as many testimonies of the spirit of regeneration as wee can, whereby to comfort and secure our soules, that we shal be heard, because we are beloued.

Abba. Some thinke this was vnderstood, that God would be serued onely of the Iewes who spake this language : but the Apostle by geminating and doubling the word both in Hebrew and in Greeke wherein he spake, doth teach vs, that as God was once onely serued in the Hebrew nation of the Iewes, who had this speciall priuiledge about other people : so the time should come, and now is, that all the world should bee as Canaan to serue him in their seuerall and special language, and that all tongues should bee pleasing and acceptable to God.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 16.

16. The same spirit beareth witness to our spirit, that we are the children of God.

Hereby is meant, that we are so sure of our saluation, that except the holy Ghost can lie, we cannot be damned. Where obserue : first, that a man may be certaine of his saluation : for this witness and testimony given by the spirit to our spirits, is that which euery elect child of God doth and must feele euen in this life. Secondly, they are heere confuted, that perswade themselues by a vaine and false hope, that they shall be sau'd as well as others. For the first : carie about thee the speech of Saint Paul 2. Cor. 13. 5. Know yee not your owne selues, how Iesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates ? And 1. Cor. 2. 12. We haue receiued the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are giuen to vs of God; not hope for them, but know them : and 1. Iohn 4. 13. Heereby know we, that we dwell in him, because he hath giuen vs of his spirit : and chap. 5. 19. We know we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickednesse. Now he that hath the true knowledge that hee hath this spirit, hee may know he is the sonne of God, and so in Christ, and so out of condemnation : as the Apostle saith, in the first verse of this chapter : There is no condemnation to them that are in Christ. So as then he that is the sonne of God is sure of life, that is, saluation : but all the doubt is, how we may be sure we haue this spirit, which will and may easily be discerned by walking in the spirit, and by sauouring the things of the spirit. For if we sit in the seat of the scorner, and walke in the waies of the wicked, suffering our thoughts to range after that the flesh desireth, and not relishing the foolishnesse of the Gospell, to bring our affections in captiuitie to the obedience of Christ, we may well dreame of the spirit, but the spirit as yet hath not lodged within vs : for where the spirit is, there it worketh, and workes of a contrary nature then those, which the wisdom of the world produceth.

 Where those men are confuted, that stand vpon their owne spirits, to assure them that they are Gods children, their spirits being no sufficient witness, the heart of man being alwaies euill, and oft-times deceitfull, as was the heart of the Pharisee, who might haue a good worke in hand, but tooke no fit time to per-forme it, nor propounded no good end to fulfill it, praying in the market-place, and giuing his almes to be seene of men. But it is the testimony of the spirit of God which must secure vs, and by which we stand : and this must thou shew me by the visible fruits of the spirit in the reformation of thy life : for thine owne conscience will no more serue thee, then it did the Iewes, who thought they did God good seruice when they crucified Christ :
 nor no more then it did Paul, who being a Pharisee, and before he was stricken to the ground in his iourney to Damascus, Act.
 9. 21. made hauocke of the Church of God, and tooke a pride in persecuting of the Gospell of Christ : whereby wee may see, that euery mans heart is enough to condemne him, but not to iustifie him.

Luk. 18. 11.

12.

Ioh. 19. 7.

Act. Phil. 3. 6.

1. Ioh. 3. 19.

But yet must we needes haue the testimony and witness of our consciences, to fasten vs and ground vs in this persuasion, that we are Gods children : for as it is said, 1. Ioh. 3. 20. 21. 29.
If our owne hearts condemne vs, what boldnesse can we haue with God? And Paul speaking of his ministerie, saith : I am guilty of my selfe in nothing, yet am I not thereby iustified. So as the best conscience of it selfe is not able to warrant vs of Gods fauour to eter-nall life, but it is soone able to assure vs of his displeasure to damnation. For if the conscience be wounded, the heart cannot be cheared : and a grieved spirit who can beare? Now as our conscience must generally signifie vnto vs our election, so particularly it must auow euery action that we performe. The conscience by excusing cannot iustifie, because there may be error of iudgement, and therefore must haue a seale and warrant to it :

1. Cor. 4. 4.

That is, it must bee ratified and confirmed by the word: and though it cannot excuse, yet can it and doth it easily and often accuse: for whatsoever is done against the conscience is sinne, be it neuer so lawfull of it selfe, or neuer so much commanded: yea, though it be the sacrifice of prayer, wherein we are most familiar with God, yet if it receiue not an edge and sharpnesse from thy owne spirit, but that thy conscience doth checke thee, and pull in as it were thy words againe, it maketh that thy prayer can neuer ascend to God; nay, it so smothereth it in thy heart, as it not onely returneth empty, but bringeth a plague with it, which otherwise had bene of force to haue driuen away any present vengeance; wherein the conscience doth amisse, and doth rather wound vs than cure vs. So as obserue, that to the performance and accomplishment of euery good action, there must these two concur: the spirit of God, and the conscience of the party. But yet let vs bee well aduised where the conscience doth accuse vs of such things as may iustly be reprobued, as of adultery, bribery, vsury and such like: for if wee doe directly resist this forewarning of our soules, or do what our selues on, when our consciences do call vs backe, then haue we this our conscience to testifie against vs, which doth counteruaile a thousand witnesses, hauing alwaies these two properties: first, not to conceale any truth: secondly, not to open any more than truth; for what the conscience speaketh, our selues shall subscribe to. And therefore if wee shall feare this checke of conscience, and yet not feare to performe the sinne, it will come to passe that either wee shall preuaile for a time to bring our consciences to a dead sleepe and

1. Tim. 4. 2. Lethargie, to reprobue vs no more, which is the next steppe to damnation, or else our conscience will pursue and follow vs with Hue and Crie, as not to leaue vs till wee bee taken: for resistance and withstanding of our conscience is a cloud not easily ouerblowen, a fire not easily to be quenched, and an inditement hardly to be trauersted: but our sinnes shall stare vs on the face, and crie for vengeance. Now if our conscience bee brought a sleepe by our custome in sinne, either we shall die in this benumbednesse and dulnesse of heart, a most fearefull signe of reprobation, and after death it shall weepe it fill in hell, or else if the

Lord

Lord do shew vs mercy after the sense and feeling of sinne so long discontinued, he doth it as it were by the burning feuer of desperation, for that is the cure of a Lethargy, and doth so presse vs downe vnder the weight and burden of sinne, as that horror shall be without, and terror within, yea wee shall seeme to be cast into the deepe of deepes, and euery small sinne shall seeme accompanied with the huge hammer of the Lords wrath to bruise vs in peeces.

- Further obserue, as the Lords spirit alone cannot bring vs that heauenly security and blessed assurance of our eternall peace we hope for, nor our owne spirits alone cannot do it, so it must be the testimonie of both these concurring and meeting together. For some are merely morall without religion, thinking by a ciuill cariage of themselues to winne the fight of God: others haue either a true zeale of a false religion, as Paul had before his conuersion, Rom. 7. 9. 10. or else they may be religious in shew, hauing a counterfeit zeale of a true religion, as the Laodiceans had, Reuel. 3. 15. and yet both these thinke in their conscience they shall be saued, when in truth they are as farre from the thing it selfe, as they are neere to the conceit of it. Another sort there is that deceiue themselues most grossely, spoken of Proverb. 30. 11. There is a generation pure in their owne eies, and yet they are not washed from their filthinesse, that is, from their open and enormous sins. So as besides the opinion we must haue of our selues that we stand in Gods fauour, wee must shew the seale of the Lord, that is, his spirit, or else there is no sound ioy 1. Iohn 5. 10. or any comfortable security that we shall be saued. And for our actions, euery of which must haue the allowance of our conscience; wee must marke, that a good intent will not make a good action: for they that condemned Christ, did it because he made himselfe equall with God, which was exprelly against Iohn 19. 7.
Iohn 5. 18. the law written, and therefore thought they had in this done God high and honorable seruice: but Christ crieth, Luk. 23. 34. Father forgive them, they know not what they doe. So Peter, when Christ foretellet of his death, had an earnest desire to aduise his master to spare himselfe; and therefore, Mat. 16. 22. he tooke Christ aside & rebuked him: but Christ (vers. 23.) looking backe

with an angry countenance, bids him get him behind Sathan, as being onely worldly wise, and not vnderstanding the things that are of God. So as we must know, to the performance of a good worke, the allowance of the heart and the warrant of the word of God must go together.

Verse 17. If we be children, we are also heires, even the heires of God, and heires annexed with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him, that we may also be glorified with him.

This is inferred by direct consequent to that that went before : as vers. 13. where the Apostle exhorting to reformation of life, doth it by a double contrary, so as they insue and follow one another thus ; They that mortifie the deeds of the flesh are led by the spirit ; by being thus directed by the spirit, they are assured that they are the sons of God ; by being his sons, that they shall haue an inheritance : therefore they that liue a holy life must needs be saued. And because it might be questionable how this title of being Gods children is giuen vnto vs, he hath resolved it before (vers. 15.) by a double argument, because the Lord in the Gospell doth offer vs such grace as we may come freely and boldly to him as to a father, and we stand not now in that terror that was in the deliury of the Law, but we are freed from that bondage.

The second argument, was vers. 16. because the spirit doth seale this euidence vnto vs, that as our heart doth know what is in vs, so doth the spirit also : and this spirit doth witnesse that we are children, and being children then we be heires, which is the scope the Apostle driueth at in this 17. verse.

When the Apostle saith, We are heires of God, he setteth down what manner of inheritance it is that we shall haue heereafter, not an earthly, but a kingdome and a possession of eternity, as that the Lord will neuer leaue vs till he hath lifted vs vp to that celestiall place where Christ himselfe sitteth. It had been great fauor if we might haue been as Dauid speaketh, but doore-keepers in the kingdome of heauen ; nay it might well haue satisfied vs

if only our finnes had bene pardoned, or if we had been but the Lords friends or of his acquaintance, so as any way hee would haue respected vs considering our rebellion: but besides all this, to be restored to our former honour, nay to haue greater priuiledge then euer Adams had in his first integrity, and to be advanced to the Lords owne throne; if all the hearts of men were one heart, the full measure of this ioy and the depth of this the Lords loue could not once enter in nor be conceiued.

And fellow-heires with Christ. This is to set forth the certaintie of the place of our inheritance. God hath life, for he is the fountaine of it, but he dwelleth in fire, and in a place not to be attained vnto: therefore the Apostle setteth downe heere how we come to it, namely in Christ: as it is 1. Iohn 5. 11. God hath giuen vs eternall life, and that life is in the Sonne, and by his mediation is conueied to vs. Secondly, in that we are fellow-heires with Christ, note the excellency of the Lords fauour, not only to giue vs life and to place vs with Angels, but euen with his owne Sonne. Whereby we see that his eare was open to the praier of Christ which he made a little before his agony: Iohn 17. 20. I pray (saith he) for all that thou hast giuen me, that thou wouldest (Father) loue them with the same loue thou lovest me, and crowne them with the same glory thou crownest me.

Esay 33. 14.

Out of this ariseth two comfortable priuiledges, which the elect haue: first, if wee be heires with Christ in heauen, much more are we heires of the transitory blessings of this life; and being heires with him, wee haue recouered the vse of all the creatures wee lost in Adams fall, so as wee haue interest in them all, how euer the Lord in wisdome hath seuered and distinguished them in a property: yea we haue such interest in them, as the world should not stand, nor the Sunne shine but for the elects sake. And all the wicked in the last day shall answer for euery crumme of bread that they haue eaten, for they doe but vsurpe vpon the Lords creatures, in as much as being excluded from the tree of life, they are thereby excluded from all things that should maintaine life: and though now the Lord permit them to abound in these earthly treasures, yet they shall haue double torment for their single ioy; for they are neuer in their owne house house but when they are in hell : as it was said of Iudas, Mat. 27. 5. Act. 1. 25. when he hanged himselfe, that he went to his owne place.

The second priuiledge wee haue is this, that being heires with Christ, there is nothing but shall be made by God to further our saluation : euen as Saint Paul being rauished as it were with the constant hope of this inheritance in the conclusion of this chapter, giuing the challenge in this spirituall conflict, to see if there be any thing can bee able to separate him from the loue of God : for we are Lords of all the creatures, sauing of Angels, and our fellow heire Christ Iesus is head of Angels, and they are but ministers for our good. As for the wicked, they shall be as well able to saue themselues without God, as to hurt vs hauing God, and the worst they can do, is but to send vs to God. And as for Sathan his darts hee casteth at vs, they are turned aside in the armour of Christ ; and the floods he casteth foorth to deuoure vs shall neuer come neare vs, and his buffetings are preferuaties against presumption, as Paul witnesseth of himselfe.

Reu. 12. 13.

2. Cor. 12. 8.

If wee suffer with him. This is a transition or passing ouer of the Apostle to perswade vs to affliction, for wee would haue the head crowned with thornes, and the members clad with veluet, but it may not be so, for there must bee a conformity and resemblance with the head and the members. Now this is the second reason the Apostle vseth, to make vs sure of this heauenly inheritance, namely, that wee must first be afflicted. The cause why this is brought in, is this, Paul (vers. 1.) had giuen the greatest comfort to a Christian that could be, when he said, There is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Iesus. Now there are two things that make the very elect to demurre and stay vpon this, whether there be any condemnation to them or no : first, the apprehension of their many sinfull infirmities, as if they should say, Is it possible the life of God should be in mee, that I should be shaper after Gods image, that Christ should bee my sanctification, and yet that I should be subiect to so many grievous infirmities? To this the Apostle answereth; True it is, there bee in them many things graciously qualified by the presence of the Lords spirit, yet during this our seafare and pilgrimage in this life, there must bee a combat and a strife betweene the deceit of sinne and the strength of grace: howbeit by patience and perseuerance we shall ouercome, not some part of the world but euen the whole world, and our owne concupiscence, which is stronger then death; not but that there shall be left some fragments and reliques of corruption in vs: for Paul heere doth not say: There is no matter of condemnation left within vs, but that vncleanness is so washed away in Christ, and we are so sanctified by his spirit, as there remaineth for vs no condemnation, God being satisfied in his Sonne, Sathan being vanquished, and the powers of our sinful flesh being tamed and subdued. The second thing that maketh vs to doubt whether condemnation bee not due to vs, is the apprehension of our many afflictions, where-with we are tossed and encumbred in this life: as when wee shall consider that we are made blessed by Christs curse, and healed by his stripes, then we breake forth into this: And is it possible, that I am one of these, and yet am so miserably intreated in this life? Hath Christ runne through the sorrowes and agonies of this life? Hath he broke in sunder the bands of death, and all to make me way to that glorie wherein he now sitteth, and shall I yet be so burdened and so sore oppressed with anguish of spirit and grieffe of bodie? This cogitation and thought worketh and ingendreth a feare in the weake soule lest God should be angry and much displeased with them, because he feedeth them with the water of sorrow and bread of affliction, and maketh them (as the spirit speaketh) passe through fire and water, that is, through many miseries, diuers in kind and extreme in measure. But thus the holy Ghost to proue the first verse of this chapter true, sheweth this to be the high and beaten way to heaven, and that there is no way but that which Christ hath gone before vs: for somewhat for godlinesse we must be persecuted, and being chastised of the Lord, it is certaine we are no bastards. So as the bearing of this crosse must and ought to be another seale to assure vs of the inheritance which we shall haue, and not to be dismaied though it goe hard with vs in this life: for we must thinke it no disgrace nor disparagement to be of the honour of the same order our elder brother Christ was of; that is, appointed and set forth daily for the slaughter, & laid open to the viperous tongues of many glorious and proud Pharisees: but as Christ had his crosse as it were his ladder to lift him and carry him vp above the heavens, as the Greeke translation is: so must we looke by the same rounds to ascend to the same place. Out of this therefore ariseth to all the godly double comfort: first, that we shall be no otherwise vsed of the Lord then Christ his naturall sonne was, vpon whom the very sea of his fierce wrath did fall: secondly, that as we haue Christ a fellow and companion in our sufferings, so Christ hath vs companions and partakers of his glorie.

If we suffer with him.

Heere are two things to be considered: first, the precise necessity, and as it were a fatall kind of destiny, whereunto God hath made all those subiect that shall be saued: namely, that they must taste of the cup of affliction, and drink of the dregs thereof: expressly set downe in these words: We are heires if we suffer. The second is the double fruite and benefit we reape by this affliction: first, that Christ hath tasted more deeply of tribulation then we shall: secondly, that in recompence of our sufferings we shall heereafter bee partners with him in the estate of blessednesse.

For the first vnderstand, that in the words, If so be and &c. there is not contained a cause of our being heires of God, but a condition, set downe by S. Paul. 2. Tim. 3. 12. All that will liue godly in Christ Iesus must suffer persecution: for we are not to be saued because we are afflicted; but we are afflicted, therefore we shall be saued. Neither are wee heires of God because we are chastised; but we are chastised and corrected, because we are not bastards. And this is the way sanded out vnto vs, whereby we must come to heauen, and march like souldiers toward that glorious city, namely, vnder the standard of affliction, and bearing the colours of our victorious captaine Christ. This was the lesson that Christ first taught, that whosoener would bee his scholar, should be well whipped, hee must goe and walke, but vnder a crosse; wherein marke, that that which of it selfe is simply to men a diswasion, is with God the principall motiue of the conscience science of man.

Further obserue, that euery heire must suffer ; not that euery one of Gods children must be called to martyrdome, or that all must suffer in the same measure : but this is it, that whosoever soundly and substantially professeth the Gospel, must make this reckoning with himselfe, and so cast his account, that if it bee needfull, and God may haue glorie by it, hee must not feare to lay downe his life, and to spend his blood for the truthes sake. We see by experience daily, that many there be that fight many battels, and runne through many skirmishes, and yet haue neither scarre nor maim; neither yet is he the lesse valiant, or in any thing to be esteemed a faint-hearted souldier, because his courage and resolution was to aduenture his life : and this he taketh as aduantage, that he hath tried his manhood and yet receiued no wound : howbeit though he haue escaped thus, yet was there neuer any souldier but tasted some of the streites and exigents of war, if he haue serued there any time, as either watching by night, marching by day, hunger, cold, or such like. Euen so fareth it with vs in this continuall spirituall warre-fare and combat : for if the world cannot persecute vs as Esau meant to haue done to Jacob after his fathers death, that is, take away our liues, yet at the least will it doe as Ismael did to Isaac, mocke vs and speake virulently and slaunderously of vs for the Gospels sake ; which kind of affliction neuer any yet of Gods children, no not Christ himselfe could escape. And therefore Christ when he marketh them with the coale of vnworthinesse, that will not forsake father and all to follow him, meaneth, that for his sake we must not onely cast away vnlawfull things, but euen lay aside things lawfull, that neither temptations on the right hand, that is, prosperitie; nor temptations on the left hand, that is, aduersity, must make vs shrink, as ashamed to beare the crosse of Christ, or to maintaine his truth: but we must alway keepe the corne so cleare from thistles, as we must loue the Gospel for it selfe, and not regard our selues in respect of it.

Further vnderstand, that we must be so farre from calling the Lords loue in doubt, for nurturing vs in chastisement, and for weaning vs from the world by the rod, as that by this his v'sage
 of

of vs wee are to haue an infallible certaintie grounded in our hearts, and an heauenly security that wee are heires : for it was truly foretold, that the world would loue none but his owne, and if a man find himselfe free from the hatred of the world, he may iustly feare hee hath no interest in heauen. When Christ was borne (Mat. 2. 3.) it was foretold the shepherds, that they should find the babe in a stable laid in a cratch : now if they had found him in a royall palace, and the child in a sumptuous cradle, they might well haue suspected the Angell had deceiued them, and that that child had not beene Christ. So if a man were directed by him that knew it, that the way hee was to goe were craggy, and he should find it smooth, hee might well feare hee were out of the way. If therefore thinking we are in the way to heauen, we finde it easie and delightful, wee may doubt it is not that way the Lord hath chalked out vnto vs : for the right way is the straightway, through which wee must passe, full of thorns that we cannot escape scratching : and the way to Canaan is cumberfome, ouer hills and mountaines, and lieth through the wilderness, where we shall find many wants; yet may we not be discouraged, but the rather assured, that we are going to the promised land. To proue the verity and truth of the Gospell, there is no other way (as Christ teacheth) then by offences, because it is hated, reuiled and maligned : for if it were beloued, and embraced, and entertained of Princes, if the world did loue it, it could not be the Gospell, the Lords owne mouth hath spoken it. Since then wee may secure our selues in the truth of the Gospell by the hatred of the world ; so we being hated and accounted the of-scourings of the world for the Gospels sake, may assure our selues we are Gods children. Now as there is a precise necessity of suffering, so this is our comfort, and our rest whereon to stay, that we are entangled with no other conditions, neither is there any other burthen laid vpon vs, then was before borne by our head Christ. So that as wee desire to be baptized with the same baptisme that he was, so must we willingly drinke of his cuppe, and partake of his shame, if wee will haue part in his glory. Of this order of Christ, which is, imprisonment, buffetings, and such like, was Paul, when in a christian courage hee

vaunted that he caried about him the markes of the Lord Iesus : & this livery did all the Apostles and Disciples of Christ weare, AA. 5. 11. who presently after his ascension, for their open profession of his truth, were cast some into prison, and some put to one death, and some to another. Act. 12. 20 And shall wee thinke there bee other steppes for vs to tread in, and that wee may take our ease in the flesh, and yet be quickened in the spirit ? No : for as it is all our desires to goe to heauen, so must it bee our affections to goe the same way that Christ went, otherwise it were a great disparagement to him, if wee be perswaded that the Lord loued his Sonne, and so loued him, as he would aduance him by the nearer and most proper way ; nay, if God should testifie his loue any other way to vs then he did to Christ, as it were a strange loue, so should it make vs strangers from Christ ; for to this place of royalty we must ascend by the same rounds that he did.

If we suffer with him. Not if we suffer with the world: whereby vnderstand and learne, that all that are afflicted shall not be saued : but on the contrary, none shall bee saued vnlesse they be afflicted : for a man may suffer all the plagues to be deuised on the earth, and yet after goe to hell to suffer more. Some suffer with the world, such as Peter speaketh of, 1. Pet. 2. 20. that are buffeted for their demerits and misdeeds, on whom the Lord doth satisfie part of his iustice in this life. These are poore in the flesh, but proud in the spirit : for the misery they sustaine can nothing humble them, vnlesse perhaps sometime they will weep for curst heart, as Esau did when he lost the blessing: but they are so hardned in obstinacy, as they are past fearing the heauinesse and weight of the Lords displeasure : so as there is a worldly affliction that leadeth to death, as well as a godly suffering that prepareth the way to life. Gen. 27. 38.

Now againe, some suffer with Christ, and such be they as suffer either to profit by the Lords afflictions, as that they bee sent as chastisements to reclaime them from some sinne past, and so they amend or, else as preferuatiues against some sinne to come, and so they are made more watchfull: or els if we suffer for the Gospell, because we will not communicate with the world.

Now though all afflictions ought to be esteemed iust in respect of our infirmities, yet sometimes the Lord regardeth not this alone, but maketh it more honorable: as when we are troubled for the Gospell, that we being but vile wormes, and but dust and ashes, should either with losse of goods, which are but lent vs, or with our liues which are the Lords, doe the Lord of heauen some honour to maintaine his truth against such as doe maligne it, that the wicked may see wee sturue for a more precious reward then is set before the eies of mortall men.

Wee shall bee glorified with him. Wee would thinke it a small honour for flesh and blood to suffer with Christ for company, and to stay there: therefore obserue hence by the Apostles speech, that wee are not to looke and to fixe our eyes on the beginnings of affliction, but to regard the end, that patience may haue her full perfection. Looke not vpon Lazarus begging at Dines doore, but lying in Abrahams bosome. Looke not to the beginning of Ioseph, who was so fare from his dreame, Genes. 37. 9. that the Sunne and Moone should reuerence him, that for two yeeres he was cast where hee could see neither Sunne nor Moone; but behold him at the last, made ruler ouer all Egypt. Looke not vpon Dauid as there was but a step betweene him and death; his life was so thirsted after, nor as he was abused by Sauls flatterers; but behold him seated in his royall throne, and dying in his bed of honour with his sonne Salomon about him. Looke not vpon Christ borne basely, after persecuted from Ierusalem, when he came to teach encountred and resisted by the proud Pharisees, a litle before his death in such an agony as an Angell from heauen was faine to comfort him, his doctrine esteemed false, his life notoriously sinnefull, betrayed by his owne Disciple, led as a sheepe to the slaughter; a man without blemish, and yet as the Prophet Esay speaketh, a branch arising from a dead stocke; carrying a Crosse, vnder which he was so distressed as another was faine to ease him; going vp to the crosse, nailed hand and foote, scuffed and reiled as hee was vpon it, crying as if the sea of the Lords wrath had burst forth vpon him: beholding him in this estate,

Looke to the end of affliction, not to beginnings.

estate, and there was neuer any creature so miserable : at last carried as a dead man, laied in a graue, not only dead, but three daies vnder the dominion of death, so as his Apostles fled, and the diuell thought all had beene quiet. But afterward behold him raised vp againe, ascending to the heauens, then hee became Mark. 16. 19. head of Angels, then a dead man by a few fisher-men conquered Luk. 24. 51. all the world ; so as Emperors submitted their crownes, and sought their saluation in the Crosse of Christ. So we must looke vpon the Martyrs, who died in their holinesse, and were put to death for their holinesse, not as hauing reeds in their hands in signe of basenesse, and bolts on their feete, and stripes on their backes, as euill doers, but as Ruclat. 7. 9. standing before the throne and before the Lambe, with palmes in their hands in token of victory, arraied in white robes in signe of innocency, and in long robes in signe of statelinesse ; for these are they (saith the spirit of God) that came out of tribulation, and therefore he that sitteth on the throne will dwell among them. We must therefore alwaies bend our thoughts, and set our eyes not vpon the present affliction, which is tedious to the flesh, but vpon the end and successe, which shall bring spirituall consolation ; not vpon the crosse which is wearisome, but vpon the crowne which is delightfome ; not vpon the race which is long and crooked, but vpon the prize which is weighty and precious ; not vpon the combat, which may beto the blood, but vpon the conquest which shall bee certaine and glorious. And if we can subdue our affections truly to this meditation, all our troubles in the greatest extremity shall seeme light, and we shall goe from the whip as the Apostles did with more reioycing then we had before, because we may be sure our end shall be blessed ; for if we suffer with him, we shall be glorified with him. Act. 5. 41.

Now for the glory heere spoken of, it is not comparable with the sorrow wee sustaine heere ; for this glory is eternall, whereas afflictions are but temporall ; not possible to bee conceiued in heart, nor vttered by speech ; it is in shew beautifull, in sense wonderfull, in weight excessiue, in measure without bounds, in dignity without comparision, and in continuance without end ; yea it is such and so great , that as one torment in hell shall make a reprobate forget his wordly pleasure , so the least taste, ye one drop of this glory, shall make the heires of God forget all their miseries ; and for their single and temporary afflictions here , they shall haue double, and infinite ioyes in heauen.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 18.

18. For I count that the afflictions of this present time are not worthy of the glorie which shall be shewed vnto vs.

N this verse the Apostle proceedeth to proue that he set downe before , namely , that being companions in Christ his sufferings , we shall also be copartners with him in the blessed light. Hee proueth it can bee no small glory wee shall partake of , since it is the very same that Christ himselfe enioyeth (alwaies keeping the correspondencie and proportion betweene the head and the members :) for wee shall bee carried vp into the highest heauens , and wee shall stand before the throne , viewing the glorious face of God , and hauing the fruition of his blessed presence. The greatnesse of this glorie , howbeit it needeth rather meditation then explication , yet something shall bee spoken of it , that the vaile may bee taken from our eies , that wee may sound and faddome in some sort the bottom of Christ his ioie in his glorie , which of our selues we cannot

cannot doe, no more then the Iewes could into the ministry of Moses.

This place fitteth with that 2. Cor. 4. 17. Our light affliction which is but for a moment, bringeth vnto vs an euerlasting excellent weight of glory. Where consider two things: first, that betweene these afflictions and that glory, there is no comparifon in the greatnesse: it shall be a weight, excellently excellent, as the word signifieth, whereas afflictions are but for a an houre. Secondly, the glory shall be more durable in respect of eternity, whereas the other are but in this life onely.

For the first, consider it in two degrees: first, the particular ioy euery child and man of God shall haue in his death and dissolution: secondly, the exceeding glory he shall be filled with, when all things shall be perfect, and God shall be all in all. The first of these hath two parts: first, it containeth an absolute immunity and freedome from all infirmities of body and soule, according as it is said: All teares shall be wiped away: for the body shall be free from labour, care and such like; and the soule shall be free from the suggestions of Sathan, by couetousnesse and other corruptions, wherewith the best and choifest of Gods seruants in this life are wonderfully assaulted. Secondly, the bodie sleeping in the earth, the soule shall be absolutely sanctified from sinne, and liue in the fauour of God; so as there shall be added vnto vs a present entrance into the Lords ioy, which none can comprehend but they that feele it. This in the Scripture is Luk. 23. 43. called the entrance into the Paradise of the Lord: and Paul (2. Cor. 5. 8.) desireth to remoue out of the body, that in his soule he might be with the Lord Iesus, who resteth in such a place, as hath in it whatsoeuer may moue either admiration, or may giue contentation; and is described (Reuel. 21. 4.) to be destitute of sorrow, crying and paine, and to haue the foundation of the wals thereof garnished with all manner of precious stones, and to be lightned onely with the glory of God, needing neither Sunne nor Moone. It is also called Abrahams bosome, the presence with the Lambe, the gathering of vs into the companie of innumerable Angels, and the mansion house of our Father.

Luk. 16. 22.
Ioh. 14. 2.
Reuel. 19. 9.

The second degree of this glory, is at the restitution of all things, which the Apostle here speaking of, vers. 21. calleth the glorious liberty of the sonnes of God. This standeth in two parts: first, in the resurrection of our bodies, when they shall be made incorruptible and glorions, and shall neede no naturall prouision nor maintenance: for they shall shine as the Sunne, and the Sunne shall then be seauentimes brighter then it is. The second is, that God shall be all in all, that is, the whole God-head shall immediatly raigne, and the humanity of Christ shall more manifestly be subiected, which is to the greater glory of it, that his god-head shall be so great: for then there shall be no more office of Christ Iesus to procure any more good to his children, but the benefit of the former shall continue for euer: for then his enemies shall be all put downe, and then the Sonne shall resigne vp his kingdome to his Father: that is, all enemies being vanquished, and that one enemy Death being abolished, he shall raigne no more: not that God raigneth not now, for he raigneth in the person of his Sonne as Mediator, but then his office shall end, and he shall raigne onely as God. For these are but the daies that the Lord Iesus doth woo vs, and maketh loue to vs: but then shall the marriage be solemnized: and for the better setting forth of this with all magnificence and greatestt state, all creatures shall be restored, that they may serue and attend at the celebrating of this feast.

Reu. 19. 7.

Now for the second part, that is, the comparison of the glorie and afflictions in respect of continuance; we see that no affliction lasteth but for the present, but this glory is eternall; Gods loue toward vs eternall before the world to predestinate vs, eternall after the world to glorifie vs, that as the first had no beginning, so the last shall haue no end. So as wee may consider of two eternities, though to speake properly there is but one: the first before the creation: the second after the worlds dissolution. Now betweene these two, there is a certaine time for the world, and a thousand yeeres in respect of eternity is but as one day: nay, as Moses saith, (Psal. 90. 4.) A thousand yeeres are but as yesterday that is past. So as counting the world five thousand yeeres, it is but as the length of five daies past; and of these five thousand

2. Pet. 3. 8.

thousand yeeres what are fourescore, which is a great age for any man to liue to, and a farre greater time then euer any man was afflicted in? It is not much more then a moment, no way an hower: and therefore these afflictions are no way comparable to the eternity of that glory wee shall haue heereafter, not so much as a drop of water to the whole Sea, or one graine to all the sand. And yet we speake now as if a man should neuer but be afflicted euen from his cradle to his death, liuing the full age of a man, which neuer befell any. In Esays 4. 8. is shewed, what seuenty yeeres be, and by the accompt of the spirit of God himselfe, they be but as the least minute, for the Lord there saith: For a moment in mine anger I hid my face from thee, but with everlasting mercy haue I had compassion on thee: and this moment was seuenty yeeres, for so long were the Jewes in captiuity. So as Ier. 25. 11 affliction by this reckoning during the whole yeeres and life of man is but a moment, and a great part of this moment is past before we can be said to suffer affliction: for it is but a confused kind of paine that children sustaine: and againe there was neuer any affliction so great, but there was some either intermission or remission, either the tormenter was wearied, or the whip was wasted, or they that were tormented died.

Now if the glory after our induring of these afflictions should last but so many millions of yeeres, as there be starres in the heauens, there might yet be some more, and easier, and equall comparison betweene them, because at the last this glory should haue an end; but it farre exceedeth all number, and it is not possible for our thoughts to reach or to conceiue any end of it. For this glory is like God the giuer of it, that must be embraced for the excellency of it, and thirsted after for the eternity of it.

Now as the Apostle heere perswadeth the necessity, and yeeldeth the reason for patience in our afflictions, by the eternity of the glory which waiteth vpon vs as the iust recompence of our reward: so must we learne to disswade from the pleasures of sin, by the greatnesse and continuance of the sense of torment that waiteth on them. And this standeth in two points: the first is called sensus poena: the feeling and smart of punishment which is aggrauated and made heauier in three respects : first, in the vniuersalitie of it, that no part shall be free from torment : but euery ioynt in thy body, and euery power of thy soule shall be pained and vexed, which is not so in this life, saue onely in a fellow-feeling of one member with another, for neuer any man was tormented in all the singular parts of his body at one instant. Secondly, in the extremity of it, that as they shall be tormented in all parts at one time, and that continually : so one damned spirit shall be vexed more then another, for as there be here degrees of sinnes, so shall there be heereafter degrees of smart and punishments : as Christ speaking of Hierusalem, said : It shall be easier for Sodme then for this citie, and yet Sodme was in hell.

Mat. 11. 23.

Thirdly, in the necessity of it, the greatnesse of this their torment being much increased, in that they shall haue no meanes to ease and lift vp or releue themselues, for they shall be bound hand and foote that they cannot stirre, as we may see by the vsage of him that came to the Lords feast without his wedding garment.

Mat. 22. 13.

And for the eternity of their torment, if they should suffer no more yeeres then there bee creatures on earth, it were some comfort, because they might espie some light of deliuerance; but when there shall be no more heauens, and when God shall leaue to be God, and to lose his glory, then the damned ghosts shall be eased. The second aggrauation of their punishment is in this : damno loci, in the losse of heauen : for it shall not so much vex them that they be tormented, as that they haue lost those ioyes they see the Saints of God enioy. This shall make them murmure and gnash their teeth : and vpon their apprehension and conceauing of that they haue lost, shall follow the remorse and sting of conscience, that in their life time they despised to labour in mortification and newnesse of life : for there are none damned, but their owne hearts shall tell them they are justly damned.

Reuel. 20. 12.

16. 19. 20. 21. 22. 120. p. 495. 496. 497. &c.

Vers. 23. And not onely the creature, but we also which haue the first fruits of the spirit, euen we doe sigh in our selues, waiting for the adoption, euen the redemption of our body, &c. to the 26. verse.

The

The Apostle still enlargeth the weight of glory spoken of before, prouing it to be so great, that the very frame of heauen and earth and all other creatures doe waite for the restitution and deliuerance of mankinde, at which time they shall receiue their originall excellency. Now Paul vseth an argument from the lesse to the greater, that if the beasts and other insensible things which be accursed and subiect to this corruption, by reason of the bondage whereinto man by his fall was inthrall'd and cast into, do labour as it were in trauell till men be glorified, and themselues for our sakes restored : then how much more should wee wait for the reuelation of this glory, wee that are sealed with the first frutes of the spirit, and which in the Gospell may behold as it were in a glasse a great glimpse and shew of this glory ? sigh after and wait for this great and glorious day ; not that wee should wish simply to be vnclod'd, but as the Apostle speaketh, 2. Cor. 5. 2. 3. to be clothed vpon with our house from heauen, and not so much that our selues might die, as that sinne might be extinguished and our sanctification perfected.

Howbeit in this affection of ours there must be two things : the first, sighing and groning : the second, a patient waiting for that we hope for. Where consider what that is we wait for and sigh for : the Apostle heere calleth it adoption, that is, the accomplishment of that glory whereto wee are in Christ adopted : or as himselfe expounds it, the redemption of mankind : euen as Dauid was King when he was anointed, but he staid long for the reall possession of it : and as Abraham had the land of Canaan giuen him, which was performed 400. yeeres after.

In waiting and expecting for this redemption, obserue and hold it as a principle and ground, that howsoeuer the Philosophers haue dreamed of a simple immortality of the soule alone, yet that we know and learne, that except the body which we beare about vs be restored also, the immortality of the soule is abolished, otherwise it were a lame and imperfect restitution, and otherwise in vaine had Iob said, chap. 19. 26. Though after my skinne wormes destroy this body, yet shall I see God in my flesh, that is, body and soule at the last day : which is also plainly expressed.

expressed heere by the Apostle in these words, Redemption of the body.

Further, obserue hence the dulnesse & blockishnesse of man, that is to take example and to be taught his duty euen of the insensible creatures, who in their kind by the very instinct of nature can grone for the day of mans redemption, and yet man himselfe though spurred on and prouoked can hardly be drawn to that duty: which may teach euery one of vs to bee more watchfull in our Christian exercises, that wee may learne to know, and desire to approch neere the day of our redemption, lest the creatures that want the vse of reason rise vp against vs to condemne vs, for they faile nothing so much in their duties as man doth; nay Salomon sendeth the sluggard to the Ant and Pismire, who by his sommer-labour prouideth for a hard and stormy winter. Christ will haue vs learne innocency of the Doue, and wisdom and prouidence of the Serpent: and the Apostle heere will not haue a Christian man short of the creatures, who trauell in paine to bee deliuered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sonnes of God; and therefore much more must we sigh for this redemption of our body, wherein wee our selues haue the greatest interest.

Pro. 30. 25.

Further, in that the Apostle saith, We doe sigh in our selues: we learne, that it is the dutie of euery Christian to be touched at the hart, and to be prickt in his conscience, as generally for the wickednesse of the whole world, so particularly and more narrowly for his owne sinnes: for these be they whereby God is dishonored: and therefore thou must not slightly wish or earnestly pray for (though this be well done) a change of this corruption, and a restitution both of the creatures and of man their head into the state of blessednesse and incorruption; but thou must euen in a corner by thy selfe breake foorth as it were into a passion of affection, with sighes and grones, euen such as may fill the heuens, to wait after and to thirst for that day wherein God shall triumph in the fulnesse and perfection of all glory, and wherein man shall stand and continue in an incomprehensible degree of happinesse. But alas we are so intangled with the baites and nets of this vaine world, that our affections sway vs to a cleane contrary course, thinking our feete are neuer sure enough, nor haue hold enough on the earth; so pleasant doe wee esteeme our habitation here, that we would thinke our selues most happie (though heauen were neuer our inheritance) if we might alway liue heere compassed about and enuironed with these false delights. Which doth too much bewray our want and defect in meditation on heauen and heauenly things, and sheweth what a scantling we keepe in Christianity, outwardly onely to profess it, and neuer to enter into the chamber of our hearts, to see whether it be furnished with such holy, Christian, and religious sighs and groanes, as set forth & commend the affection of such a Christian, as vpon the comparison of these short troubles with that eternall weight of glory which shall come, hath already planted his heart in heauen.

Lastly obserue hence, that it is not possible for the reprobate, but it is proper and peculiar to the elect onely, to lift vp their heads in hope and expectation of this redemption: which is signified by the Apostle in two phrases and speeches heere vsed, namely, that such sigh as first haue receiued the first frutes of the spirit; secondly such as wait for adoption; neither of which doe euer befall the reprobate, for they may spring vp and flourish for a time, but they haue no roote, nor take no sap from the spirit: and happily they may be weary of the world, as Cain was of his punishment, by they haue no anchor of any other hope, vnlesse they ioy to goe to hell: which ought to moue vs with all heedfulnesse to looke to our waies, and to labour our ingrafting into Christ, for the world passeth, and both it and wee are folded vp as a garment, and to dust we must, and yet out of dust we must arise. And if while we be in the body, wee can be burdened and sigh, that mortality might bee swallowed vp of life, then are we most happy, and happy in that alone: but if thou findest thy selfe empty of such affections, that thou canst not sigh for thy redemption, which sheweth thou dost not hope for thy saluation, then art thou of all men the most miserable, and the estate of the beasts is better then thine, for they sigh for the liberty of Gods sons, and they shall haue part in this blessednes, and

Heb. 11. 1.
Eph. 3. 9.
Pro. 13. 12.

For wee are saued by hope. In this the Apostle proceedeth to proue that as it is necessary for a Christian to grone, so is it also to wait for the day of redemption; which hee doeth after this sort: We are saued by hope, that is, all our saluation standeth and consisteth in hope, for hope apprehendeth and laieth hold on things absent and inuisible, according to that speech, Our life is hid in Christ, that is, so hid as it will be found, though as yet it be not seene: now hope that is deferred, must needs (as Salomon saith) bee the fainting of the heart: and therefore for feare of this fainting, the Apostle releueth our hope with patience.

Where we learne, that it is the duty of euery Minister to salue vp all breaches, and to resoluue all doubts that any way may perplex the heart and soule of a weake Christian: after the example of the Apostle heere, who to relecue the infirmities of the faithfull against the storme of affliction, setteth before them the crowne of glory which they haue wonne in the field by their fighting. And because this glory was not present, but followeth the battell; and when the combat is ended then commeth in victory; he sheweth, though this glory and reward bee not subiect to the fight, yet Christians haue an affection in them, which is hope, that nourisheth and staieth their expectation for a time, the heart in the meane time leaping, and being established through hope that it will come: and yet that they may not bee discouraged in their hope, though this glory come not so soone as it is looked for, hee giueth them the plaister of patience, which shall sustaine and support their hope, for he is certaine that hath promised, but not to bee prescribed a time by vs, but hee must take his owne time, and our patience must preuent all distrust. Euen so must the feeders of the flocke deale with their people in all cases of doubt and wauering in matters of faith and religion, so to compasse and beset the soule with reasons and arguments, as it may rest secure, and haue the food of comfort ministred vnto them against all doubts and perils that may arise. For such ought Ministers to be, as are able to bring forth Mat. 13 52. of their treasure both new and old, cures and remedies, both against the auncient wilinessse, and the fresh and new subtilties and temptations of that old serpent.

Further obserue, we must not vnderstand this speech, We are saued by hope, as we doe this, We are saued by faith. For nothing doth concurre in the matter of iustification with God aboue but faith: so as the meaning and sense heere is: that our saluation consists in those things that we hope for; and it were better translated, We are saued in hope, than, we are saued by hope: for faith Heb. 11. 1. is the ground and foundation of hope: for what can we hope for, vnlesse we beleue it? As the ground of faith is the word and promise: for why should we beleue but in respect of God his promise? Faith telleth vs, we beate not the aire: hope biddeth vs, hold on our race, finish the course, fight the combat, and then expect the crowne of glory. Yea faith is sustained by hope, that it doe not wauer, and contained by hope, that it doe not hasten, but waite the time, and it is confirmed by hope, that we may hold on the faith. Example of this we see and haue in the Canaanitish woman, who suffered three denials at Christ his hands, each of them doubled with seuerall reproches, and yet fainted not, neither was her importunity fruitelesse, but she reaped the benefit of it, namely the health of her daughter, which grew by her faith; which faith of hers was releeued by her hope. The like may be said of Iacob, who wrestled with God by faith, and Mat. 15. 22. in a Christian hope told him flatly to his face, he would not let him go till he had blessed him. Gen. 32. 26

Hope that is seene, &c.

That is, we hope not for that we haue already, but for that we expect to haue heereafter: and yet we may not thinke but by the eye of faith we haue seene him that is inuisible, as the Apostle speaketh, 2. Cor. 3. 18. We doe behold as in a mirror the glorie of the Lord with open face: whereby is meant, that though we haue seene a great part in respect of the beginnings; and although we know we are called and elect of God, yet this is but in part as in a glasse : for we haue but the witnessse and testimony of the spirit, and doe not heere see him face to face perfectly and clearly.

Further vnderstand, that there is a difference betweene sight and faith, as it is said 2. Cor. 5. 7. We walke by faith and not by sight : that is, though we haue not God presently in the view, yet by faith we hope to see him. Whereby we gather, that faith and hope shall after this life be abolished, as the Apostle speaketh, 1. Cor. 13. 13. Now (as speaking of the present time) abideth faith, hope, and loue; but the chiefeft of these is loue : as if he should say : Among these three Christian vertues, Loue in respect of the continuance is chiefeft, because it ceaseth not in the life to come, as faith and hope do cease : for since these tend to such things as are promised and are to come, when they are come, to what purpose should we haue faith and hope ? for the presence of that we hoped for excludeth hope ; but yet shall we alwaies perfectly loue God, and loue one another.

Learne moreouer, to beware and take heed Sathan steale not away our hearts, and robbe vs of this hope of glory, to thinke we may be happy enough in these visible things, as in the enioying of possessions, and heaping vp of goods, and climbing vp to earthly honor. If we did consider the things hoped for to be farre more excellent, and more permanent then these vanishing delights, we would haue other thoughts and better affections toward our heavenly Citie. But wee are so befotted in the present sweetnesse of the pleasures of this life, that if the Lord would still settle and establish our mansion here; that the gourd might still grow ouer our heads, as it did ouer Jonas head to keepe vs from heat, and that wee might still flourish as the Bay tree : we would resigne and giue vp all our interest, and cease to claime any title to heauen, or to make any haste to the throne of God: which commeth to passe, because we only walke in the admiration of these outward things : as the Cardinall of Bourbon said : He would not giue his part in Paris for his part in Paradise. Whereas if we would weigh it truly, they euer deceiued him soonest that most trusted in them : as the rich man, that promised to his life ease for many yeeres, because he had multitude of riches,

Jonah. 4. 6.

Luk. 12. 20.

riches, was the same night by sudden death deprived of all. And if we would enter into true comparison betweene the ioyes of heauen, and these prison-joyes we haue on earth, we should find farre greater difference, then there was betweene the Manna in the wilderness, and the flesh pots of Egypt; and the bread the lost sonne eat in his fathers house, and the huskes he eat abroad with swine.

Further learne, that hope is not onely of that it seeth not, but it hopes cleane contrary to that it seeth. As Abraham hoped for fruit of Sarres body, when he knew her wombe was as a drie stocke, and that it fared not with her as with other women. Euen so fell it out in Dauid: Samuel comes and anointeth him king: heere he hopes for that he hath not, nay, cleane contrary to that he saw before his eyes: for snares were laid for him, the builders refuse him as a fit stone, both Prince and people hated him: nay, the fat Bulls of Bafan did rage vpon him: amongst the basest he was in derision, and a table talke as himselfe saith, Psal. 35. 15. 16. Doeg and other of his familiars that went into the house of God with him, lift vp their heele against him: yea, God himselfe was against him, as he crieth, Psal. 22. 1. My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? The very pangs of hell did compass him so, as he said in his haste; All men are liars, Samuel hath abused me: and yet he hoped against hope, and against these feares, that the Lord would aduance him; and so in the time appointed it came to passe. Euen so must the godly doe, they must ground and build vpon God, and though they can espie out of the waterish and dimme humor of their hearts no light of deliuerance, yet must they stil cleaue to him in hope; and though we be neuer free, but either Ismael persecuteth vs with his tongue, or Efsau hateth vs in his heart, yet we must not be dismayed, nor any whit repine at the prosperity of the wicked: but euen this must cause vs to raise vp our hopes, that because things be brought to this confusion, and religion is so lightly set by, therefore there must needs be a restitution, and an inuersion and change of this order.

We doe with patience abide for it.

Where obserue, though we must wait with patience, yet we must must sigh and grone : for this agreeth well enough with the other that went before, in respect these things we see are nothing comparable with that we shall haue. And in respect of this steadfast hope of the expectation of this blessed day, Moses refused to enioy the pleasures of sinne for a season, and Daniel refused to bow downe to that beast that was set vp to dishonour God. Yea by reason of this patient hope we may see how the martyrs from time to time haue submitted themselues to many torments not onely in patience, but euen in triumph : as one of the faithfull seruants of God, who for his profession was cast to a Lion, said : I am the graine of Christ Iesus, heere I am ready to bee ground with the teeth of this beast, that I may be a fit loafe for the Lords table. And whence came this Christian courage and resolution, but onely because he saw God which was inuisible. So may we say of all the rest of Gods children, who haue refused the honour of the world, as to be the sonnes of Pharaohs daughter, and to sit with Princes, and haue chosen rather to suffer persecution with Gods saints; that they haue done it in this respect, as hauing regard to the recompence of reward set before them, in a hope that cannot faile. Let vs therefore not scrape so greedilie in the earth as the blind moles doe, nor wallow our selues in the mire of this world like swine, nor root our affections in the things of this life : but let vs sigh with desire, and wait with patience the generall redemption of the sonnes of God, and restitution of the creatures to their first perfection: at least let vs look to our owne particular departure out of this life, for there is no priuiledge nor protection can come from the court of heauen, but depart we must, and how soone we know not : the Diuell would faine take vs in the lurch, and the world will intice vs to deferre the buying of oyle for the keeping of our lampes burning, till the Lord do knocke: but let vs euer be furnished for the way, let our faith hold vs, and our hope containe vs within the compasse and assurance of our saluation. These be the daies of our pangs and pilgrimage; happy shall that day be, when we shall be deliuered, and when our iourney shall be ended. Heere we haue to walke a most tedious and craggy course; happy shall that day be, when we shall come to our heauenly country.

Heere

Heere wee fight a troublefome, though no doubtfull combar, happy shall that day be when wee shall be crowned as conquerors: heere we ſow with ſorrow, happy shall that day bee when we ſhall reape a plentifull and perpetuall harueſt with much ioy: heere wee are full of wounds, and our eies ſtand full of teares, happy shall that day be when our wounds ſhall be healed, and our teares wiped away.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 26 27.

- 26 Likewiſe alſo the ſpirit helpeth our infirmities, for wee know not what to pray as we ought: but the ſpirit it ſelfe maketh requeſt for vs with ſighes which cannot be expreſſed.
- 27 But he that ſearcheth the hearts, knoweth what is the meaning of the ſpirit: for he maketh requeſt for the Saints, according to the will of God.

THE Apoſtle proceedeth to miniſter conſolation in all thoſe afflictions we muſt paſſe thorow, and ſheweth that there is no cauſe wee ſhould ſhrinke or faint, ſince we are mainrained and ſupported by a heavenly power, againſt which the gates of hell cannot preuaile; for the Lord doth aſſiſt vs by the holie Ghoſt, which doth excite and ſtirre vp in vs groanings, that is, heavenly prayers, which doe reach and pierce the very throne of God, & which being made according to his will, we muſt needs obtaine whatſoever we ſhall requeſt.

In

In the words obserue three things: first, generally that the holy Ghost doth relieue vs in our infirmities and weaknesse: secondly, by what meanes he doth it, namely, when we are low brought, by stirring vp in vs such vehement and seruent praiers as cannot proceed from any naturall man, nor the power of man, but from a power farre aboue man: thirdly, the powerfull working of these praiers, namely, that being made according to Gods meaning, the Lord must needs shew himselfe exorable and to be intreated, and it is not possible they can returne emptie from the throne of grace.

For the first, consider that it were impossible for vs to stand one minute, if no other power did sustaine vs but flesh and bloud; for even in the choicest of Gods children faith is verie weake, and our hope verie wearie, and flesh and bloud through selfe loue desireth ease, and doth mone it selfe, and is fearefull to see or to suffer the crosse: yea Sathan doth buffet vs by our inward infirmities, for sinne lieth heauie within vs, and this maketh vs to grone, outward afflictions make the flesh to smart, the world tempteth vs on both hands, one way with the peace of the wicked, another way with the troubles of the godly, alluring vs to the vaine glittering shewes of the one, and terrifying vs from the ghastfull and hideous sight of the other. So as hauing sinne within vs, Sathan without vs, and the world about vs, all enemies to the peace and rest of our soules, euerie houre should we perish, were we not supported by the mightie hand of this inuisible spirit: and therefore flesh and bloud hath no cause to be proud, but ought in trueth to glory in it owne weaknesse, because it hath such an helper, and so strong an helper, and so certaine a helper as is this spirit, which is nothing else then the very power of God himselfe, as it was said to Paul, My grace is sufficient for thee.

Further, in that it is said, He helpeth our infirmities: obserue that hee doth not free vs fully from them, or remooue them fully from vs, but hee doeth onely helpe and releue vs in them. And this is that Christ praied for in his bitter agonie, Iohn 17. 15. I praie vnto thee Father, saith hee, not that thou wouldest giue them an exemption and freedome from trials,

trials, but that they may bee so kept from euill, as euer they may finde some comfortable deliuerance. So in another place Christ saith vnto his Apostles, that when the Bridegroom was with them they could not mourne, hee sparing them for that time: but afterward he saith, Hitherto haue yee liued in peace, haue ye a sword, if not, buy one, for tribulation shall come: and then he said, A little while I will be from you, that is, during the time of my death, but I will send a better comforter: and then followeth, The world shall reioyce, but ye shall mourne; mourne though ye haue a comforter, but not mourne vntill ye haue a comforter: which setteth forth the riches of the Lords mercie, that prouideth a remedie before we receiue the wound, and layeth himselfe as it were in our bosome before he sendeth vs cause of sorrow. To this purpose is that Paul speaketh, 2. Corinth. 4 8, 9. we are afflicted on euery side, yet not in distresse; in doubt, but we despaire not; persecuted but not forsaken; cast downe but perish not, because by the same spirit that was in Christ the inward man is renewed daily. And this was the answer which Paul himselfe receiued from God being sore buffeted by Sathan, Content thy selfe (saith the Lord) my grace is with thee, therefore struet thou and I will helpe thee. This also is prefigured in the combat betweene the Angell and Jacob, Gen. 32. 25. who had his bone in his thigh shrunke, but yet would not forsake his hold till he had a blessing. So as by this combat we are sure to receiue such a blow as we shall halt all our liues after, to this end, that we may seeke for Jacobs staffe, the blessing of the Lord to strengthen vs. And this was Moses comfort when his hands were faint and wearie in holding of them vp in prayer, so that they feil downe, then did the spirit of the Lord support them, and prompt him with excellent and effectuall words of prayer. Yea this must be the comfort of vs all; that though wee fight to the bloud for the Lords cause, not one droppe of it shall perish; but as the Lord doeth keepe our teares, so much more will hee keepe our bloud in a bottell, that wee may bee made precious white in the bloud of the Lambe.

Now for the second point, which is the meanes how the spi-

It helpeth our infirmities, that is, by stirring vp prayers and groanes. Obserue first, that no man can pray of himselfe vnlesse he be taught of God : secondly, that the holy Ghost doth minister vnto vs that power in prayer which no man is able to bring and performe of himselfe ; howbeit we may not construe the words as if the holy Ghost himselfe did pray, but onely that he suggesteth vnto vs fit words and matter, and prompteth vs to pray.

For the first, vnderstand that it is not possible for any man of himselfe to pray, vnlesse he be helped and renewed in his spirit, for prayer must be made in the mediation of Christ, which flesh and blood neuer thinketh of, nay, which flesh and blood doeth but mocke at. And this disability in prayer, and vnaptnesse to performe it, is euen true of them that be enlightned and called to the faith, vnlesse also they be impulsed and driuen on by the spirit. Howbeit, by this so excellent an instrument as the spirit, the Lord doth poure into our hearts such a constant and steadfast assurance of his loue, as we come and humble our selues before him boldly, and beate our breast, and pray from the booke of our conscience, confidentlie vnfoldng the whole heapes of our miseries before the Lord : yea, we come vnto him hauing euen a sight and contemplation of his maiestie, and we stand not vpon words, but a broken and contrite spirit maketh vs speake plainly, the interpreter of our meaning being the holy Ghost : so as wee in this exercise conferre with God, and speake as it were with thē mouth of Christ, who maketh our supplications as sweet as incense in our and his Fathers nostrils. So as it is no such slight matter, nor so easie a worke to pray aright, for of thy selfe thou art speechlesse, and canst not vtter one word, vnlesse the spirit vntie the strings of thy tongue ; and though happely thou speake, yet is thy vnderstanding senselesse, that thou knowest not what to aske vnlesse the spirit teach thee : nay were thou neuer so well taught, if the spirit make thee not acquainted with Christ, that he may present thy praiers to God, all else is in vaine and fruitlesse.

Reuel. 8. 3.

a sett forme of prayer not a new one to vs

Further, in that the holy Ghost is said to make request for vs : wee are admonished (vnlesse it bee for weake Christians and babes in Christ, that are not growne in the word of grace, vnto vnto whom a booke of prayer is allowed as a Catechisme) that they that bee old schollers in the schoole of Christ, ought to strue and indeuor to grow from praier to praier, as well as from faith to faith, that as their iudgements are increased in knowledge, so their hearts may increase in seruencie and affection toward God, and that they may bring forth their hidden treasure of the Lords spirit, in enabling them to conceave a praier, and to pray as their present necessities shall require. For this is that the Lord looketh for, that as he said by the Prophet Zacharie, 12.10. that he would in the last times powre out the spirit of deprecation and of prayer vpon the sons of men: so men should endeuour to bee familiar in this dutie without booke, and not content themselues to praie either a stinted prayer, or a stinted time: but as it is said, Hebr. 6.1. wee must leave the beginnings, and be led forward and strue to perfection. For if notwithstanding such plentie of foode these many yecres, there be still such leanness in thy soule, that thou art not able to feed thy selfe, nor to expresse and vter thy necessities in a corner before the Lord, how canst thou looke for any blessing, that hast bene so sluggish, and hast so carelesly entertained the spirit of God in this acceptable time? If any sudder calamitie hang ouer thy head, or any secret sinne presse thy conscience, how canst thou thinke to be releued? nay thou canst not but iudge thy selfe vnworthie to be helped, if thou art vnable without a booke before thee to vter thy griefe and to pray for helpe. Thou must know thy temptations are particular, and thy sinnes are particular, and a generall confession is not a proper salue for any particular sore: but as in this and this sinne thou hast offended God, so particularly for this & this sin thou must call for mercy. And what if that speciall grace thou prayest for be not in thy booke, then thou goest away emptie, for thou art not likely to obtaine that thou dost not aske for. For howsoeuer the Lord doth oftentimes preuent vs with his mercies, and giueth before wee aske, yet when he shall perceiue such negligence in vs, that we desire but as it were a common and generall head-peece to shield vs from all assaults, and doe not arme our selues in euery part, especially knowing our old enimie the diuell lieth at all aduantage, this

maketh the Lord weary and vnwilling to helpe vs, who otherwise easily inclineth his care to the praiers of the faithfull.

When it is said: With groanings that are unspeakeable: we are by this to comfort a distressed conscience: that if afflictions doe come so fast vpon vs, as the waues, one in the necke of another, and our spirits be so ouerwhelmed and cast downe, that we are not able to conceiue a praier for the anguish of our soules; in this case if our hearts doe but bleed and grone, though no word be vttered, yet is it a praier precious and acceptable in the Lords sight. We read of Ezechiah, (Esa. 38. 14.) that he was not able to speake one word, but did chatter like a Crane, and mourne like a Doue in his sicknesse, hee was so opprest with sorrow in the bitternesse of his soule; yet was this a praier, and a praier heard of God, and himselve deliuered, and fiftene yeeres added to his life. So oftentimes our praiers are so peppereed with salt and fire, that is, our soule is so anguished, and our spirits so appalled, that either we speake abruptly, or only knocke our selues on the breast, as did the Publican; yet this foundeth in the Lords eares, and commeth pleasantly before him: for words in praier are but to make vs vnderstand what we aske, the Lord vnderstandeth our meaning without words, yea knoweth our wants better then our selues. And as the mother pitieth her child when it is fallen sicke, and is able to tell where the painelieth, and to aske such things as it wanteth; but when the disease is growne so fore, that for extremitie it cannot vtter the paine by speech, but lieth complaining by grones and cries, with the eies fixed vpon the mother, this doubleth the compassion, & maketh her verie bowels to yearne with pitie: Euen so the Lord, more kind then a mother, lendeth his louing and tender care to our bitter complaints; but being astonished with griefe, that we cannot but onely crie out in hope and expectation of some help, and we lie pained not able to expresse it, this doth more enlarge the bowels of his compassion, and then he gathereth our teares into a bottle, and wipeth our eies, and putteth his hand into our side to heale vs, and regardeth as preciously such maner of speechlesse vtterance, as any praier vttered in feruencie and vehemencie of words. Which is a most singular comfort for

Gods

Luk. 18. 13.

Gods chosen, that the clouds of affliction can neuer be so thick, but a heartie sigh will scatter them : yea, come what will, no time can be so euill, nor tyrant so bitter or cruell, that can stay vs from groning, though through weight of torment they may stop vs from speaking: as Dauid saith, Psal. 38. 9. I powre (O Lord) my whole desire before thee, and my sighing is not hidden from thee: for none can refraine the heart from sobbing. Yet must wee not abuse this comfortable doctrine to our fleshlie libertie, to make vs sluggish in praying to the Lord, and thinke onely a mentall prayer, or a desire conceiued though not vttered, to be enough : for this speechlesse prayer is onely permitted in the bitterness of the heart, and when the venime of affliction hath seized vpon the outward man, in such a case, and in such a time, if we cannot speake with Anna, (1. Sam. 1. 13.) we may with her wag our lips bee wee neuer so old. Otherwise wee must say with Dauid: Arise Psal. 57. 8. my tong, and then arise vp my glorie : for there is no instrument so fit to set foorth our wants, and it is no excuse for thee to say : the Lord knowes thy heart, for so doth he know thy wants also before thou aske, and by that reason, neither the panting of the heart, nor the paines of the lips should be requisit:

For the third point, that is, for the effect and efficacie of our prayers, that they comming from the spirit must needs speed & haue good succelle, obserue when it is said : The Lord knowes the meaning : that there is a speciall propertie of this word to be vnderstood : for (knowing) is taken here for (approouing :) as Rom. 7. 15. What I do I know not, that is, allow not, nor approue that I do : so Mat. 7. 23. Depart from me, I know you not, that is, approue you not, for he knew them well inough. So Psal. 1. 6. The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous : that is, approueth it : and in the same sense is it taken in the Prouerb. 12. 10. The righteous man knoweth the soule of his beast, that is, approueth it. Why then this is the lesson : that if our prayers haue an allowance and approbation with God, we may be sure we shall reape the fruit of our lips, and that our requests shall not returne emptie vnto vs, but shall be as the doue, that brought an Oliue in her mouth, signifying that the floods are ceased, and that we may walke on the drie land.

1.Ioh.5.14.

The reason why our prayers must needs speed, is, because the same spirit that maketh vs pray, doth make vs onely to pray for those things that stand with the Lords glorie, & therfore must of necessitie be granted, for God cannot denie himselfe, & he and his glorie are inseparable. And this is witnessed by S. Iohn: This is our assurance, that if wee aske anything according to his will, hee heareth vs: and we know that we haue the petitions we desired of him. So that it is not the worthinesse of our prayers that draweth Gods bountie to vs, but the bounds and compasse wherein our prayers are limited and circumscribed, that is, ayming at nothing else, and referring all to the will and pleasure of God, which wee may be sure shall come to passe. Euen as Iacob said, Gen. 32. 11. 12. Thou wilt deliuer me, O Lord, from my brother Esau, for thou hast said, thou wilt do me good: and (2. Sam. 7. 21.) Dauid saith: O Lord, I know thou wilt blesse my house, because of thy word, for thou hast spoken it. Many there bee will say: I haue prayed often, and cried incessantlie for the increase of faith, and yet I finde it as weake, and my flesh as sinfull as it was before. And thus Sathan perswadeth thee thou prayest not according to Gods will: for if thou hadst bene his, and hadst belonged to him, he would haue giuen thee faith at thy first request. But thou must beate backe this temptation, which is but to lull thee in securitie, by this answer: that thou must thinke thy lot and thy portion to be no better then Dauids, who (Psal. 69. 3. 4.) brake forth, saying: O Lord, I am wearie with crying, and mine eyes faile while I haue waited for my God: for the Lord will haue thee to continue in prayer; not to wearie thee, but to trie thy patience how long thou canst wait: so as if thou speakest and the Lord seemeth not to heare thee, double thy prayers vpon him, for he maketh himselfe deafe to make thee more quicke and feruent. If he listen to thee, and yet thou obtainest not, perseuere and continue, for at last the Lord will incline to thy petition, and from his throne will he send thee a chearefull message. In Saint Luke we haue an example of one that asked but three loaves; and by his importunitie got as many as he would. So may the poore widow bee our paterne, who by her multiplying of her sute with many words, obtained right of the vniust Iudge: and therefore

Luk. 11. 8.

Luk. 18. 5.

therefore much more shall we by our instancie with the Lord obtaine what in faith we shal desire: for out of the very words of the Apottle here we may learne, first that it is certaine we shall haue it, though it be vncertaine when it shall be cast vpon vs; for Christians must endeouour to strue to this, to haue Iacobs spirit and resolution, that though the Lord fight with vs, and would faine shake vs off, yet not to let him goe till we haue forced a blessing from him, and haue our petitions granted. And we must haue the strength of the womans faith in the Gospell, as not to feare three denials of Christ hand to hand, for her constancie and perseverance were rewarded double, first with the commendation of her faith: secondly, with the health of her daughter, which was the thing she craued. And euen so at length shall our prayers bee requited with the perfect cure of all our infirmities. Mat. 15. 22.

Secondly, marke and assure thy selfe; that if thy prayers made now be not presently heard, thou shalt be rewarded in a time thou least lookest for, and when thou art vtterly out of hope of that thou didst craue: as we may see Luk. 1. 13. Zachary and Elizabeth no doubt prayed in their youth for the fruite of their bodie, but they were not then heard, for the Lords time was not yet: but when Zachary as priest was exercising the publike ministerie of the Church, and both he and his wife stricken in age, then the Angell comes and tels him, the Lord had heard his prayers, and that his wife should haue a child. Which may be a great encouragement to vs to grow perfect in this exercise, and that the worke of praier may bee easie to vs, because there is not a word falls to the ground, but either it rebounds presently vpon vs againe with a blessing, or that blessing is reserued for a better time when it trebles the ioy in receiuing an vnexpected benefit. No doubt Iacob had fetched many a sigh for the losse of his sonne Ioseph; but if Ioseph had presently returned to his father before he obtained the honour in Egypt, it had nothing so much cheared Iacobs heart, as it did when he saw the chariots sent to fetch him, that he might see him in his state and dignitie. So for the Lord to cary in his remembrance and to keepe as it were a booke of our prayers alwayes open before his eyes,

Gen. 37. 34.

Gen. 45. 27.

eyes, and either to heale vs when we are past cure, as he did Dauid, when he heard him out of the deepe of deeps: or in his good time to put vs in mind of our owne prayers by the fruit doubled in our bosome when we thought our haruelt past, can not but exceedinglie stirre vs vp to magnifie his goodnes, and to employ all the powers of our soule to please him.

Thirdly, we pray for many things which we cannot obtaine, and yet we must pray for them, for if we cannot haue our desire here, it shall be fulfilled in the life to come: as when wee pray that Gods kingdome may come, that we may be deliuered from temptation, and that wee may not sinne, which onely shall be performed in the life to come: for God according to his owne disposition of times hath ordained that we his creatures should apply our selues vnto, and therefore hath taught vs by his spirit as well to pray for the end as for the meanes. Faith in this life being the foundation of our hope, and our hope being perfited in the life to come through the loue of Christ: so that as here we pray to haue our faith strengthened, our infirmities cured, our sins pardoned, and Gods graces renewed in vs daily, which be apples of such a tree as we taste of in this life: so here we pray also that sinne may be abolished, the number of Gods elect gathered, and the worke of our sanctification perfited, which is the end and perfection of the former, and which is reserued for a better life, when both our owne prayers and the intercession of Christ for vs also shall cease.

Fourthly obserue, that God so heareth thy prayers, that though he do not graunt formam the forme, yet he graunteth finem the end of thy prayers. Euen as Christ when he prayed in the garden, Father if it be possible let this cup passe from me: now shall wee say that Christ euer prayed and was not heard? God forbid: and yet the cuppe did not passe from him, yet was hee heard, as the Apostle to the Hebrewes saith, in that he feared; for though hee was not deliuered from death, yet was hee freed from the horrour of death, for an Angell was sent to comfort him. So Paul when he prayed to be deliuered from the buffetings of Satan, he had his desire thus farre, the Lord graunteth the end of his prayer, that is, strength to abide it:
exempted

god alwayes graunteth vs prayer of god

Heb. 5. 7.

2. Cor. 12. 8.

exempted he could not be, but this was it, the power of the Lord should be in him so much the greater as his temptations and afflictions were increased: so that none must be discouraged nor grow cold though their first or second voice in prayer be not heard: for by this we learne first to continue in prayer, and in this doth the Lord secretly hear vs that wee breake not off. Secondlie, the Lord doth for a time withdraw his cares from the words of our mouth, that we may know the deliuerance praied for coming from God, we are not to appoint him the houre. Thirdly, we stay a time before our hands be filled with our requests to exercise our patience, that our desire be not like the longing and fainting of a woman. Fourthlie, that by this small absence of the Lord in not hearing our prayers at the first, we may learne to depend vpon his prouidence. Fiftlie, that we may vse them the better when we haue them, and receiue them with the greater thankfulness, because things wished for, as they are gratefully receiued, so are they carefully preserved.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 28.

28. Also we know that all things worke together for the best unto them that loue God, euen to them that are called of his purpose.

Eere the Apostle proceedeth to open another fountaine of exceeding comfort to the faithfull, which is, all things worke for the best to those that loue God: but euery faithfull man is assured he loues the Lord: therefore to him all things worke for the best: and if all things, then afflictions. He proues it by this reason; to those that be predestinate

all things turne to the best : but they that loue the Lord are predestinate; therefore to them all things turne to the best. And to proue this he setteth downe a reason, ver. 29. Those that be called in the eternall purpose of God, them hath he predestinate to be like the image of his Sonne, that as he passed by the crosse, and from the crosse to glory, so shall wee, being children of the same Father, and who are borne and bound to resemble Christ our elder brother in this point chiefly.

Heb 2.9.

Two sorts of afflictions

To declare how afflictions worke for the best in Gods children : we must vnderstand that afflictions be of two sorts, either remedies to correct our corruptions and heale our infirmities, or els exercises of Gods graces in his children, that he may try them how much they will suffer for his sake. For the first kind of afflictions, we cannot doubt but they do worke for the best, whether we consider them as chastisements for sins past, or as preventions of sins to come. For sins that are committed, the rod is necessary (for he is a bastard that is not corrected) that wee may see and loath the cause of our affliction, that is, our corruption : as it is said 1. Cor. 11. 32. We are chastised of the Lord, because we should not be condemned with the world: And to David the Lord saith, Thy finnes I will correct for their finnes, but my louing kinnesse shall neuer depart from thee: for the punishments of these our finnes are pardoned in the sacrifice of Christ, but so is not the chastisement; for this proceedeth from the loue of God, and Christ onely satisfied the wrath of God. That it commeth from the loue of God, appeareth by the example of David, to whom when the Lord had sent Nathan the Prophet to tell him his sinne was pardoned; yet withall, part of his message was, that the sword should neuer depart from his house, which fell out in his daughter Thamar that was rauished, and in his sonne Absolon that was desperatly hanged, and in the child begotten in adultery that presently died. And this was only to awake him out of that securitie Sathan had cast him into; for it is certaine, where the Lord smites not, there the Lord loues not : and therefore 1. Sam. 2. 25. it is said, that because the Lord had a purpose to slay the sonnes of Eli, therefore they obeyed not the mild voice of admonition vsed by their father.

2.Sam.7.15.

Now

Now for those afflictions that be sent as preventions of sinne, as pouertie, ignominie, restraint of libertie, shutting vp the wombe and such like, they also turne to the best in Gods children: for many do let themselues bloud before they be sicke for feare of sicknesse, and the superfluous spreads of a vine are cut off, that it may bring soorth better fruite. And thus doth the Lord mint and diet his children, lest by riches they should grow proud, by fame become insolent, by libertie wax wanton, and kicke against the Lord when they be full; and lest by hauing children they should make idols of them, to cocker them vp to damnation, the Lord scanteth them in these blessings. Looke vpon David, who confesseth he had gained much by affliction. See what difference there was euen in Nabuchadnezzar, before hee was pulled out of his seate, and after he had fed with beasts: before in his prosperitie, the strength of his hand, and the power of his maiestie had built Babel, Dan. 3. and 4. but after he had bene cooled in the wild Forrest, then he lifted vp his eyes to heauen, and praysed and honoured him that liueth for euer. Such is the stomacke of flesh and bloud, that it will breake out into many insolencies against God, against his church and children, vnlesse he cut as it were our teather short, that we haue but litle roome to feed in: and therefore in great mercie he suffereth vs oft times to want, lest we should wax proud with abundance, and changeth our oyle of gladnesse into a countenance of heauinesse, because we could not before tell how to vse our mirth.

Secondly, consider how those afflictions turne to our good, which are sent for the exercises of Gods graces in vs: namely, heerein to trie how farre wee loue God, whether wee loue him when hee dealeth with vs roughly, aswell as when hee dealeth mildly and liberally with vs: and this is called the ferie triall, wherein we shall not be consumed like drosse, but refined like gold. And this affection appeared in Iob when he cried, O Lord Iob. 13. 15. though thou kill me, yet will I loue thee: for many times the Lord sendeth his arrowes against vs, and the venime of his wrath lieth for a time in our bones, and hee setteth vs vp as markes to shoote at; vnto whom if we willingly submit our selues, the power and danger of his shafts shall be appeased, before they hit vs,

Gen. 22.2. vs, and the poison of his indignation shall be cleansed away before it rangle in vs. Thus fared it with Abraham, whom the Lord did not simply afflict for his sinne, but for the triall of his faith and seruencie of his zeale toward God, to see whether hee loued Isaac the sonne of the promise, better then God the Father of the promise. And behold, to the comfort of the children of Abraham, in a resolution of three dayes iourney, he fainted not to execute the Lords commaundement, trusting the Lord with his owne saluation: for hee knew if his sonne Isaac should not have been sacrificed, himselfe should haue been damned: whole obedience when it was thus thoroughly tried, the Lord saith, Since thou hast done this, I will make thee the father of the faithfull, which was a confirmation of the promise was made before.

Psal. 116.15 But there is another speciall kind of affliction that searcheth more narrowly the corners of our hearts, and trieth more fully our obedience and loue toward God: namely, when the Lord vouchsafeth vs that honor to suffer for the crosse of Christ. In this hee exerciseth our cold prayers, and varnisheth our rustie hope, and stirreth vp our dull meditations, to thinke how precious in the sight of God is the blood of his Saints, when they die not onely in their holinesse, but are put to death euen for their holinesse. And therefore Christ giueth this counsell, Luk. 6. 22. 23. When ye are hated of men and persecuted for righteousnes, then reioyce and be glad; or as the Greeke word signifieth, skippe at that day like fat calves, because our reward is great in heauen. So as these afflictions that leade to death, further and hasten vs toward the liue to come: and euen for this life they turne to our good, as Mat. 10. 29. He that forsaketh father or wife, or riches for my names sake, I will giue him an hundred fold more in this life, that is, in that bale estate and condition of persecution, wherein he standeth for the profession of my name, I will giue him an hundred times more comfort, more contentation, and more peace of conscience, then he should haue had in an hundred wiues of such as were neuer so deare vnto him, in an hundred fathers of such as were never so kind vnto him; and more perfect ioy, then he should haue had in all the treasures of

of the world, be they neuer so pleasing and precious vnto him. So as obserue, though the Lord promiseth not a requitall of thy losse in quantitie and in number, yet he doth it in the good will and blessing of God, which is the speciall qualitie, that maketh such things wee enjoy permanent and comfortable vnto vs. This Dauid had found in his owne experience, Psal. 127. 1. and therefore teacheth vs to know, that except the Lord doe builde the house, in vaine doe the workmen bettow their labour, and vnlesse hee keepe the citie, as good set open the gates; for the watch without him do nothing. Witnesse the prison doores that flew open, and the chaines wherewith Peter was fettered, that flew off, when the Taylor had done the best he could, Act. 12. 10. And this is that Amos laboureth to perswade the people in his Prophesie, that let the spring be neuer so forward, nor the bread which is our food neuer so sauarie, if the Lorde doe but blow vpon it, it cannot nourish vs. So Paul saith: that godinesse hath euer the promises of this life, that is, religious prosperity, & the hand of blessing from aboue: and it hath the promises of the life to come, that is, to bee translated from this dimme light of Gods fauour which we finde here, into the full fruition of Gods glorie which we shall possesse heereafter. Looke vpon the poore widow of Sarepta, though she had but a little oile, yet had shee more then the rest when Ellah came to her: for theirs consumed, and hers through the secret blessing of God, serued her turne & wasted not. So Daniel in prison fared better with bread and water, by reason of Gods chearfull presence with him, then did the king with al his sumptuous and princely diet. And in our naturall iudgements we can say, that hee hath more, that hath but a bottle of wine that runneth by dropes, then he that hath a whole cesterne full, that is broken: for the prouidence of God neuer leaue those that be his, and his eie is vpon their wants to supplie them. And as Paul saith, Colos. 1. 16. 17. By Christ all things were created, he is before all things, and in him all things consist, that is, haue their being for his glorie: for no man can contriue anie secret snares for our life, no man can breath out any threatnings against Gods Church as did Saul, nor execute any crueltie vpon the forerunner of Christ, as did

Herod:

Herod, but Christ hath his full glory in it. Let vs therefore know our persecutors can doe vs no harme: for as our being is for Christ so must our bodies be yeilded vp to Christ, wee stand in him, and his power in these afflictions is seene in vs, so as when they hate vs and reuile vs, & torment vs, they are but as Apothecaries to make drugges to heale our infirmities: they are but as Masons to hammer and polish vs in the quarry of this world, that we may be fit stones for the heauenly building: yea they are but as fire to refine vs, being of our selues droffie; as furbushers to varnish vs, being through fleshly ease rustie; as scullions in the Lords kitchin, to scour the vessell of his household: lastly, they are those, that haue receaued a commission from God, contrarie to their owne intention, to doe vs good, for when they are come to the perfection of their tyranny, they can but kill the bodie, whereby they hatten our blessednesse in the toule.

Heere may be demanded: if all things worke for our good, whether the infirmities that be in vs do vs any good or no. The answer is: Yes, many waies, but principally three waies. First, they remaine in vs to subdue the pride and presumption of our hearts, that would aduance it selfe against God, if it were not humbled by the sight of it owne corruption: as Paul must haue a buffeter, lest he grow insolent, 2. Cor. 12. 8. For the Lord will trust vs no more with perfection, since Adam lost it in Paradise, and therefore he exerciseth vs with infirmities, lest wee should steppe into our mother concepit, to thinke our selues Gods. This is proportionable to that spoken of Deut. 7. 22. That the Lord would roote out the Canaanites from among his people by little and little, not all at once, lest the wild beasts should grow in vpon them. These Canaanites bee our infirmities, the wild bealts are self-loue, pride of life, and such like, which would waxe strong within vs, if we were throughly purged from our weaknesse. And thus we see the Lord cureth poison by poison, keepeth out grosse sinnes, by keeping in naturall infirmities, euen as the best treacle is made of poison, and the skinne of a viper, is the best cure against the sting of a viper.

Secondly, these our infirmities serue to cure our ingratitude; for if the Lord should bestow vpon vs all his benefites at once,

one infirmities

sin, becom to our good.

we would soone forget him. We see how the Lord dried vp the red sea to make passage for the Israelites, Exo. 14. 22. which one would haue thought should haue beene as the signet on their finger alwaies in their sight; and yet Psal. 106. 7. it is said in the Hebrew phrase, they made haste to forget it, though it was so miraculous a worke. For this cause Dauid praieith, Psal. 59. 11. O Lord do not destroy the enemies of thy Church, that is, slay them not together, lest the people forget thee, but do it by little and little, that the people may often come vnto thee: yea Dauid himselfe in many places confelleth, that the prolonging of the Lords mercies giue as it were an edge and sharpnesse to this spirit of thankfulness. And such is the nature of man, to wait no longer in humility then he hath hope of benefit. The lost sonne had no sooner singred his portion, but his fathers house was vsauoury to him, and he must needs ruffle it in another countrie. Luk. 15. 13. For as willingly we would wait no longer on the Lord then he is giuing: so when hee hath giuen vs somewhat, wee would bee out of his sight while we spend it. And this maketh him more scant in his blessings then otherwise he would be, because he will reach vs to depend vpon him, both till we haue them, and while we vse them, and that employing them in a spirituall kinde of trafficke to gaine credit to the Lord, he may furnish vs afterward with better store.

Thirdly, our infirmities serue to restraints our spirituall sluggishnesse, and securitie of the flesh; for where no feare of the enemy is, there the weapon rusteth: so as we are sifted and tempered by Sathan that we may finde our infirmities to be relieued by the Lords power, and that wee may pray for his gracious strength to withstand him, & in Christ to ouercome him; and that by our experience in fighting with Sathan we may become wise and watchfull, for we doe not praie to bee deliuered from temptations, but not to bee left in them. Our infirmities indeede are the fuell that Sathan laieith, and they are as it were the coals hee bloweth to consume vs. Now euery Christian when hee seeleth such a fire of enmitie within him against God and his law, bestirreth himselfe, and striueth by a cleane contrary blast of the spirit to quench these coales, and entreth such a combat as onely ceaseth in death, which wee would not doe if there were not some skirts of sinne and some remnant of corruption left within vs, but wee would fall asleepe like idle seruants, and hide our talents, that is, the strength of Gods-graces in vs. Iob, though he were neuer so painefull a Christian, yet neuer more commended the power of God in him then by his fight hand to hand with the diuell, in resisting and keeping off such blowes of blasphemie and despaire as Satan would haue had him cast at God, and would haue had to sticke in himselfe. Paul when he fought with bulles at Ephesus, neuer obtained such a victorie as when he left Satan in the lurch, and left himselfe persecuting of the Gospell: nay after his conuersion there was left a sting in his flesh, lest either he might wax sluggish or become proud. And therefore it pleaeth God to honour our infirmities with the courage of fighting, and by them to keepe vs waking, that we may discern the storme when it commeth, and cast our ankor on Christ where it shall neuer be vnloosed.

Iob 13. 15.

Here the craft and wilinessse of flesh and bloud will soone take occasion of licenciousuasse: as to say, if our infirmities serue to do vs good, and turne to Gods glory, because by this meanes we see our weaknesse, then it is good to make much of them: euen as Porphyrius commendeth the treason of Indas against Christ, because by Christ his death saluation is brought to many. But miserable and blasphemous is this opinion: for this were to turne the grace of God into wantonnes, for though our infirmities doe further vs many waies to saluation, yet in it owne nature siene is alway sinfull. God can make Satan a Physitian to cure Paul; yet is he ever Satan, that is, an enemy. God can make the tyrannie of Pharaoh as a trumpet, to stir vp the Israelites to crie to him for helpe; yet doth this nothing diminish from his malice to Gods people. God can make Indas by a kisse the executioner of his decree; yet doth he continue the child of perdition. So as we must striue against our infirmities, because they be in themselues simplie euill, though qualified and tempered with the Lords hand they turne to our good. Adulterie, it was a horrible sinne in Dauia, though it was made profitable for his soule

Iohn 17. 12.

soule, in bringing him to such a low degree of humiliation as is set downe Psal. 3 2. 6. For the heauens to be brasle is not good in it owne nature, but it is a vengeance if we want the first and latter raine, whereby to ripen the fruits of the earth; yet at the praier of Eliab, 1. King. 17. and Iames 5. 16. it rained not on the earth for three yeeres and six monthes, that the Lords mercie and power might the more be seene: yea the Lord can create light out of darknesse, yet darknesse is alwaie darknesse. Adams fall it was good in that end God had ordained it, namely, to prepare the waie to raise vs vp a Sauour of the seed of the woman, but it was a most damnable sinne as Satan and Adam meant it, for they did it in rebellion against God. Gen. 3. 14.

Further, we must consider how the persons be qualified to whom all things turne to the best; it is to them that loue God;
 which is the most excellent and Christian commendation that can be, this our loue issuing and streaming from that fountaine of the loue of God. Euen as all waters come from the sea as from the well-head, and returne thither againe, boiling out of the veines of the earth: so God sending forth the streames of his loue into our hearts, it must euen from the very bottome of our hearts returne to him againe, for wee haue nothing but what wee haue receiued. Now there was neuer any Senacherib nor Iesabel, but said they loued God; therefore this true Christian loue of God, that it may bee seene not to be counterfeit, is accompanied with six properties: first, with a care to keepe his commandements, for such is the rule of Christ, If yee loue mee keepe my commandements; which wee must doe, so much the rather because the Lord hath giuen and forgiuen vs much, hauing made vs of enemies friends, as Abrahams was tearmed to bee the friend of God, hauing brought vs home when we wandred in the wildernesse of sinne, as he did the lost sonne: hauing fed vs when wee wanted and had no meanes to succour vs, as hee did Eliab: hauing clearelie set off the debt which we did owe, and cancelled the handwriting which was against vs. If wee should not performe obedience to such a God, and weare his commandements as a frontlet before our eies, our condemnation could ner-

*sic propositio
 of our love to god*

Luk. 15. 24.

1. King. 17. 6.

uer be too heauy, nor our stripes too many. Howbeit euerie blasphemer lieth against his owne soule, that dare say euen in the height of his wickednesse he loueth God: for can a woman prostitute her bodie to a varlet, and mingle her flesh with his strange flesh, and yet trulie say she loues her husband? it is not possible: no more can anie man trulie call himselfe the child of Abraham, if hee doe and performe the workes of the Diuell. Secondlie, this loue of God must breed in vs a base estimation and account, nay rather a contempt of these earthlie things, in respect of Gods loue. To such a passe had Paul brought his iudgement and his affections to, Philipp. 3. 8. when he esteemed all things but as dung in comparison of the treasure of the life to come, and that he might win Christ. So Moses refused the pleasures of sinne in Egypt, in respect of the assurance of Gods loue manifested in his afflicted seruants: and Peter and other of the Disciples were so rauished with ioie at the call of Christ, that they left their nets, and forsooke the world to follow him. And this is that indeede which wee shall all finde at the last to be the truest comfort, for riches are transitorie and will beguile vs, honour is slipperie and will deceiue vs, the world is moth-eaten and weares a waie, at least wee our selues are but claie and soone perish; but the loue of God in Christ endureth for euer. Thirdlie,

3. this our loue of God is accompanied with a feruent zeale of his glorie, and more delight wee take heerein then in the enioying the wiues of our youth. This was the commendation of the Church of Thyatira, Reuelat. 2. 18. and by this was their loue of God discerned, by their increase in the workes of charitie, faith and patience, and by their zeale of Gods glorie, that they profited and went forward in religion more at last then at first. This kinde of loue is described Cantic. 8. 5. 6. to be stronger then death, the coales thereof to be fierie, to expresse the zeale and vehemencie of it; whole floods of affliction cannot drowne it, neither can anie treasure buie it. Such was the loue of Paul and of Moses, that wished themselues accursed to saue their brethren, because they thought it more glorie for God to saue many, then to saue one.

Fourthly,

John 8. 44.

Exod. 2. 11.

Math. 4. 20.

Rom. 9. 3.

Exod. 32. 32.

Fourthly, this our loue of God must make vs presently hate all things whereby God is openly dishonored. This was it that so fiercely inflamed the wrath of Moses, Exod. 32. 19. that when he saw idolatrie set vp by the peoples dauncing before the calfe, he broke the Tables of the Law, and burned the calfe, and strewed the powder of it on the waters, and in detestation of their superstition, made the children of Israel to drinke thereof. Hereof commeth that, Ezech. 9. 4. that they that haue the marke in their foreheads, that is, such as are sealed vp to saluation, doe mourne and crie for the iniquitie of the times. And such was the affection of Dauid, when hee said: Mine eyes gush out teares, because men dishonor thee O Lord: and in another place he protesteth, that he doth hate them with a perfect hatred that loue not the Lord: and againe, that no notorious and incorrigible sinner should dwell with him: Now fifthly, as wee must hate Gods enemies, so must we loue his friends: as 1. Ioh. 3. 14. it is said, We are translated from death to life, because we loue the brethren: and Christ setteth downe a plentiful reward for a cup of cold water giuen to a distressed brother. Now who these brethren bee, Christ setteth downe to be such as do the will of his father: so as it is not the affinitie in the flesh, but the bond of the spirit that must vnite vs. And on the other side, we must hate none in respect of his creation, but in respect he peruerteth the vse of his creation: for they beare the image of God which is louely, but they deface and scratch it out to their owne damnation. So as wee must hate not virum, sed vitium, the wickednesse of the man, and not the wicked as he is a man. Sixthly, our loue of God must draw vs into the field for defence of his Maiestie: for by this shall the master know his seruant loueth him, if hee cannot digest to heare him euill spoken of: yea by this shall it be knowne, whether our way be to Canaan or no, if we aske where it lieth in the wilderness, and if our bloud rise to heare Ierusalem euill spoken of, and to heare the Lord (who is the keeper of that citie) reuiled and blasphemed. Such were the spirits of Eliakim, Shebnah, and Ioab, 2. King. 18. 37. that they rent their clothes, when they heard Rabshakeh raile vpon the liuing God: and Ezechiah when he heard it, was grieved at it, and spread himselfe before the Lord, to call for a holy reuenge of that furie. And so must every true hardened Christian esteeme the name and credit of God farre more tender then his owne, and learne of Moses to be milde in overlooking an iniurie done to our selues, but to be iealous and zealous in recompencing seuen fold to them that teare in peeces the glorious name of the Lord Iesus.

Now we of that hath gone before must inferre the contrarie : that is, as all things worke for saluation to them that loue God, so all things worke for damnation to them that hate him. All which may be drawne and reduced into these two things : first, those that concerne this life : secondly, those that concerne the life to come : and these may bee reduced into these foure. First, the graces of Gods spirit, so much as they receiue of it is onely to make them vnexcusable : for they shall surely perish, though they be in the blade neere to ripenesse : the reason is, because when the holy Ghost hath giuen them as it were a purge, to worke vpon them, setting before them good and euill, they not as weake stomached, but as curst hearted, doe cast it vp againe like beastly dogges. Secondly, the doctrine of saluation, which hath this singular vertue to bruiſe and mollifie the stintie heart, onely hardeneth theirs, and maketh them rage like the dragon : for Christ Iesus is but a rocke of offence vnto them ; preaching is but foolishnesse, and the word a sauour of death vnto them ; and in the Sacraments they doe but crucifie Christ againe. Thirdly, the benefites of this life doe make them drunke, that they can not see their miserie : for in their fulnesse they doe neigh like horses, and in their hearts they say, there is no God ; they cate and drinke, and rise vp to play, making their life but as a May-game. Fourthly, the miseries of this life, though therewith they bee sometime mollified, as Eſau was when he lost the blessing, yet this is but like the iron put into the fire, and so sofred for a time, but being taken out, is made by that more hard then before.

Now for the reason, why afflictions turne to the best to such as loue God, it is, because by his eternall purpose they are called to be saued : so as the cause why God ordained some to the inheritance of his glorie, was onely his purpose and pleasure that that it should be so: for Christ as Mediator is not the first cause of saluation. For the Scripture saith: So God loued the world, that he gaue his Sonne, whereby is euident and apparent, that hee first loued it before he gaue his Sonne: for first, Gods purpose was to saue some; this in time he executeth by creating man and woman in such estate as they might fall by their owne will, hee nothing inforcing it, nor compelling them thereunto. Now when they were fallen, then was there need of a reconciliation, and now God bethinkes him of a Mediator: so as in the order of causes, the attonement which is in Christ, must be after the fall: for the foresight of the good or euill in a man, is no cause for God either to saue or to damne any, so as no man can determine the cause why God loued Iacob and hated Esau, to be because of the goodnesse of the one and the wickednesse of the other; and yet it is true that Esau was damned because hee was euill: but why he was appointed to damnation rather than Iacob; no cause can bee giuen, but the Lords eternall and inuiolable purpose. For otherwise Paul would neuer haue cried out (Rom. 9. 20.) against the reason of man, that he should not pleade with God, who hath the power to forme the vessell after what fashon he pleaseth: for if the foresight of good or euill had been the cause, it had beene easily sounded, and the Apostle would soone haue set it downe. Hereupon we must gather an argument, that saluation is meere of mercie: for whatsoever is the cause of the cause, is the cause of the thing caused: as the Sunne is the cause of the fruitfulnessse of the earth, and God is the cause of the Sunne, therefore God is the cause of the fruitfulnessse of the earth: so through the righteousnesse of Christ we are all saued; but Christ is made righteous meere of the Lord: therefore of the Lord we are all saued. But this is to be vnderstood, of God as of the first cause, not as of the neerest cause. So that to conclude this point: euery man may giue a reason of his saluation, namely, because he is beloued in Christ, but why hee was appointed to be beloued in Christ, no man is able to assigne or set downe a reason, but wee must all bow in humilitie, and resort onely to the purpose of God heere spoken of by the Apostle.

ROM. chap. 8. Vers. 29.

29. For those which he knew before, he also predestinate to bee made like to the image of his Sonne, that he might be the first borne among many brethren.

He Apostle heere proceedeth to proue, that all things, euen afflictions, worke for the best to those that are ordained in the eternall purpose of God to be saued, after this sort: those that are sure to be conformable to the glorious image of the Sonne of God, to them all things doe worke for the best: but they that are called in the Lords eternall purpose are ordained to bee conformable and made like to the glorious image of his Sonne: therefore to these all things worke for the best.

Quos prænouit, whom he knew before: that is, Quos ut suos cognouit, whom hee knew and approued to bee his owne, such should resemble his Sonne in glory, that is, should partake and taste of the same glory, though not in the same measure: according to the speech of S. Iohn in his Epistle: We shall be like him: he doth not say, equall to him: for Christ must haue the preheminance of an elder brother.

Hence obserue the indifferency of the loue of God, that he vseth but one and the selfe same course of discipline in his house for all his children: for as he trained vp his first, and eldest, and best beloued sonne, so will he traine and bring vs vp. And how Christ was vsed here on earth the Scripture is plentifully; and his owne mouth testifieth, that he was worse then the beasts of the earth, for he had not wherein to hide his head. And therefore vnlesse

vnlesse wee doe despise the sufferings of Christ, or thinke that God loueth vs better then he did Christ, and hath prouided an easier way for vs to walke in: let vs know that it is our portion to abide the indignities of the world, and to bee hated of men; nay, if whole seas of troubles fall vpon vs wee need not bee dismayed, for reuilings are made vnto vs as precious balme, the whip is become but as soft silke, the pangs of death but as messengers of a sweet sleepe, and through Christ the graue is vnto vs as a perfumed bed.

Secondly, obserue hence the power and vertue of Gods loue towards vs, who will still haue vs beare about vs some notable marke of excellencie and of immortalitie: for as at the first wee were created like to the image of God himselfe, so in our second birth and restitution wee are made to resemble the image of the Sonne of God: and our resemblance of Christ standeth in two things, which formerly haue bene touched: first in walking through the fierie afflictions of this life, which we may the better doe, remembring that being the sonnes of Iacob, there is a ladder that reacheth from heauen to earth, whereon the Angels Gen. 28. 12. are alwaies ascending and descending, readie to minister to the necessities of the Saints. Secondly, in climbing vp to the seate of glorie, after the Dragon hath spent his malice in sending forth of his mouth whole floods of waters to drowne vs, which did Reu. 12. 25. nothing else but onely wash away our filthinesse, lest otherwise wee had bene like to that old Serpent alwaies groueling vpon the ground. For certaine it is, we must either resemble the Sonne in obedience, or the Serpent in malice: and if we thinke the inheritance of a sonne inferior and of lesse value and consequent then the curse of the Serpent, then let vs runne on with Pharaoh in the heardnesse of our hearts, that the Lord may shew his power in vs, and after hee hath forborne vs a while in patience, Rom. 9. 17. cast vs to the destruction prepared for vs.

Vers. 30. Moreover whom hee predestinate, them also hee called: and whom hee called, them also hee iustified: and whom hee iustified, them also hee glorified.

Here the Apostle proueth his former speech and assertion, by setting downe and declaring those subordinate and second meanes or degrees whereby the Lord doth accomplish this his purpose and decree. The degrees be foure : whom he foreknew, first, them he predestinated : secondly, after he called : thirdly, then justified : fourthly and lastly, them he glorified. After this sort speaketh S. Iohn, He that beleeueth, is already translated from death to life : so as the whole force of the Apostles argument is this, They that shall certainly be glorified, to them all things worke for the best, otherwise the Lords purpose should be frustrate, which cannot be, by reason of the degrees of executing this his purpose, which neuer faile.

Here consider generally two parts : first, his fore-ordaining vs to glorie : secondly, the inferiour degrees whereby he doeth execute this his purpose to glorifie vs. In the first consider three things : first, what this foreknowledge of the Lord is : secondly, what is meant by this, to be like the image of his Sonne : thirdly, what is meant by the first borne among brethren.

For this which is the first, namely the foreknowledge of God, it is the very same which the Apostle called before (his purpose) whereby the Lord meant to know vs for his owne in his everlasting loue, which is the very highest cause of our saluation. For that there is no other first cause, may be vnderstood in this, that we are not to seeke the first cause in Christ, nor the first ordaining vs to life in the mediation of Christ ; for the Lord had a purpose to saue some before ever Christ had a purpose to be a Mediator, though not in time yet in order : and that nothing but his foreknowledge made the Lord to know vs in loue, and to account vs for his owne, wee may see it in our paterne Christ. What could induce God that mans nature should be vnited to the very nature eternal? Was it possible that the humane nature of Christ could deserue it? No ; but it onely was the Lords purpose that it should be so ; which being true in constituting and ordaining the head, is also to be considered in the members, that euen so and in the like maner the simple and onely purpose of God should shew it selfe in fore-ordaining vs. Now the worthinesse of man was no cause of this: for Paul saith, Rom. 9. 11.

the Lord loued Iacob and hated Eſau, before they had done either good or euil; and ſaith, it is therefore a myſtery to be adored rather then to be ſcanned by reaſon. If wee will ſearch after the generall cauſe of mans ſaluation or damnation, it is the manifeſtation of the Lords iuſtice on ſome, and the declaration of his mercy on others; for if all ſhould haue bin ſaued, then had there bin no iuſtice with the Lord: and againe, if all had bin condemned, then had there beene no mercy. Howbeit, if we deſcend to particulars, as, why the Lord ordained ſuch a one to be ſaued or to be damned; no reaſon can be giuen heereof, but his eternall purpoſe, which is onely hidden in his owne breaſt. For we muſt not expoſtulate with the Potter, why he made this veſſell to honor and that to diſhonor; much leſſe muſt we contend and plead with the Lord about it. This learne thou, the Lord hardneth the reprobate, either by the ſubſtraction and drawing away of his mercy, or by giuing it ſo and in ſuch a maner as they do not profit by it, but onely maketh them the more without excuſe, becauſe they haue ſeen the light, and yet haue loued darknes more then light. And if it be asked, why this mercy of the Lord hardneth them and not mollifieth them, and why the Lord doth not pull them out of the fire, it is becauſe he found them corrupt in Adam. But if it be asked why they are appointed to damnation, here we ſtop our mouths, and haue refuge to no other cauſe, but to the Lords eternall purpoſe. After the ſame ſort doe we ſaie of ſaluation, for to ſuch as ſhall be ſaued he giueth mercy, and maketh this mercy to worke vpon their hearts, and finding them ſalne in Adam he raiſeth them vp in Chriſt: but why he doth this is not knowne to any but to himſelfe. Howbeit in this his purpoſe to ſaue vs, he hath ordained we ſhould find mercy in Chriſt by the degrees heere ſet downe; by calling, by iuſtifying, by glorifying vs; and yet to ſpeake properly, this foreknowledge of God is not the cauſe of any thing, for Adam did not fall becauſe God foreſaw it; but Adam fell, therefore God foreſaw it.

For the ſecond point; what is meant by this; Like to the image of his ſon: ſome expound it that we ſhall be made like and conformable to his crolle; which is very comfortable, though not ſo apt and fit for the place it ſelfe. For if the Prince of the Gentiles

was consecrated through afflictions, if by this meanes the Sonne himselve learned obedience, as it is Hob. 5. 8. much more must we; not that we shall be afflicted in the same measure, or for the same cause that Christ was, for he suffered for our soules, and felt the smart for our sins, yea and sustained the very wrath of God to his extreme anguish and horror: but thus far we must resemble him, that if we wil liue godly we must suffer persecution. Howbeit this likenesse & conformitie to Christ his image here spoken of, must bee vnderstood of his glorie, because of the words that follow, mentioning the steps and degrees that lead to this glorie; he calleth, he iustificieth, he glorifieth, euen as he did his Son, for wee are ordained to the same glory, Iob. 17. 22. signified by the praier of Christ for his Apostles and al that should beleue, that his father would loue them with the same loue, and crowne them with the same glorie he crowned him; which is the most ioyfull message that can come to the eare of a Christian hart, to be assured we shal hereafter be lifted vp and aduanced far aboute the third heauen.

Reu. 19. 15.
2. Tim. 3. 12.

*Christ is a beo-
t of his brethren
him of his or
of his brethren
good.*

For the third point, namely that he is the first begotten among brethren, consider three things: first, how he is our brother: secondly, what priuiledge he hath being eldest: thirdly, what priuiledge we haue aboute all other creatures by this brotherhood. For the first, he became our brother by this, that the eternal word of God did assume & take vpon himself our flesh, Iob. 1. 1. 2. that we might be his brethren. For as to be a Mediator to God for vs he must haue a diuine humanitie, and an humane diuinitie: so to make vs brethren that we might haue his spirit, could not be but by taking our flesh. Betweene God and man euer since our first fall there hath bin enimity, such and so great as none can see him and liue: for Exod. 24. 17. it is said, that the sight of the glorie of the Lord, euen in the mountaine of Sinai, was like a consuming fire: and as the Prophet Esay speaketh, Who shall dwell with euerlasting fire? This fire therefore must bee quenched, and an entrance must be made for vs to the mount of God, which is onely in Christ our elder brother: howbeit we are become his brethren, not by incarnation, nor by his humane nature, for then the reprobate should bee his brethren as well as wee, for hee partaketh of their flesh as well as of ours.

Esa. 33. 14.

But as this brother-hood commeth by the flesh in some respect, so principallie by being mystically engrafted naturally into his bodie, so as we are one flesh with him, euen like man and wife, Ephes. 5. 30. who are so teamed and called in respect of a speciall and sanctified vnion and fellowship that is betweene them, otherwise all men and all women are one flesh. So then our brother-hood with Christ commeth not by anie grosse coalition or mixture of our natures, but by spirituall regeneration: as the Apostle to the Hebrewes saith: He that sanctifieth, and they that are sanctified, are Heb. 2. 11. all one: so that we are his brethren, not by his flesh simply, but because wee are sanctified by his flesh. Whereby we learne to reuerence and adore the infinite and euerlasting loue of God toward vs, that he would thrust as it were his Sonne out of heauen, that he might descend to draw vs thither, & that he must come downe in such basenesse to be clothed with our nakednesse, and to put on our infirmities.

For the second point, which is the priuiledge he hath being eldest: obserue, that the first begotten vnder the law had two priuiledges: first, he was the worthiest person: secondly, he had a double portion. As Ruben (Gen. 49. 3.) the eldest of Iacobs sonnes should haue had, but that the dignitie of his person was translated to Iuda, and the priuiledge of his portion to Ephraim and Manasses. This likewise appeareth Deut. 21. 17. where it is commanded, that the first borne of a mans strength shall haue a double portion, for it is his right. This then we must allow to Christ, who hath two titles giuen him: first, he is called the first begotten of all creatures, Col. 1. 15. because he was before anie creature, being from eternitie according to his diuinitie. Secondlie, he is called the first begotten among the brethren, because he was the first in mans nature that God loued, after the fall of Adam. Heere know, that Christ as he is the Sonne-man, is the naturall Sonne of God, not according to his humanitie, but as he is Christ-man: for though his humane nature was not taken from God, yet as one person being man, licet non ratione humanitatis, he is the Sonne of God, euen as Mary is said in the Scripture to be the mother of God, in respect of the vnion of his person. Another priuiledge further Christ hath, that hee as

sonne of man hath receiued all power from God to iudge the world, Iob. 5. 22. The father hath committed all iudgement vnto the Sonne, not that his manhood alone shall iudge, but Christ God and man shall giue the iudgement: euen so wee praie and lift vp our hands to the man Christ Iesus, not to his man-hood, non humanitati sed homini: for the humanitie separated from the diuine person of Christ is but a creature. Againe, Christ as our eldier brother is the head of Angels, not as God only, but as man. Heereupon also it is, that he hath a name at which all knees shall bow, and this name is giuen him, so as he hath it not as God; for being God nothing could be giuen him, but hee hath it as man and God, for his bare humanity could not deserue this, neither yet to be gouernour of all the world.

Phil. 2. 13.

Now for the third, which is, the priuiledge we haue by being his brethren, they are chieflie three. First, we are by this heires and fellow heires with him of all things in this life and in the life to come, as appeareth vers. 16. 17. of this chapter. Secondlie, by this followeth, and from this commeth the soueraigntie we haue ouer all creatures: as 1. Cor. 3. 22. Whether it be the world, or life, or death, all things are ours, for we are Christs, and Christ is Gods; and being vnder Gods wings, no man neither dareth, and though his stomacke bee neuer so good, yet hee hath not the strength to hurt vs, for the Lord will keepe vs as the apple of his eie. Thirdlie, by this, though the Angels be farre about vs in nature, yet we haue one of our nature better then they, that is, Christ; and through him they doe all become our ministers, Heb. 1. 4. 7. Christ is made more excellent then the Angels, and he maketh them but his messengers.

Now for the degrees wherby the Lord doth execute this his eternal purpose: for the first of them, which is calling, it is wrought by the holie Ghost as the principall cause, and by a double instrument the holy Ghost vseth: first, the preaching of the law, whereby we are brought to a holie despaire of our selues by the sight of our owne corruption, that we may seeke for remedie in the profound sea of the Lords vnsearchable mercie. The second the preaching of the Gospell, whereby hee anointeth our eyes with the eye-salue of the holie Ghost, that being dead in sinne,

Col. 2. 13.

and

and not so much as dreaming of saluation, the sound of the Gospel doth awake vs that we may heare, that hearing we may liue. Hereupon it is said, that the Lord doth draw men and pull them vnto him, as Christ saith, No man can come vnto me vnlesse the father draw him, that is, doth separate them from the curled generation of the world, and sets his inward seale vpon them, that is, his spirit, and brandeth them in the forehead with a visible marke of holinesse of life, that euery man may know them to be the Lords. Hereupon also it is said, that the Lord doth open the hart with the key of the Gospel, as Act. 16. 14. he is said to open the heart of Lydia: and as Psal. 40. 6. he boareth the care, and softeneth the heart, and moisteneth it with his grace, that aboute all things a man shall esteeme of the pearle of the Gospell, and be brought chearefully to sell all he hath to buy such a iewell as shall bring him righteousnesse to saue his soule: so as this calling of the Lord is to this end, to manifest and to secure a man in his soule, that the Lord hath giuē him to Christ out of all the world.

Here may be obiected: are not all vniuersally called by grace? We answer; No: for first, all men are not called effectually: secondly, some are not called at all. Some are called externallie by the Preachers mouth, and saluation is offered them by the ministerie of the word and sacraments, and the kingdom of God is come to their dores, and peace is shewed them, and the glory of Ierusalem is set before them: but yet we see of them that were Math. 22. 3. bidden to the mariage, there were three sorts not effectually called: first, they that being called carelesly refused to come, being possessed with the cares of this world, and with voluptuous liuing: secondly, they that cruelly persecuted the inuiters & messengers of the Bridegroom, not onely refusing to come, being called, but disdainig to come, as scorning such cheare, and faring euery day better themselues at home: thirdly, they that came hand ouer head, neuer looking to their feet before they entred into the Lords house, nor neuer changed their attire, but came without the wedding garment of a holy life. So wee reade that of the foure sorts of ground that receiue the word and the Mark. 4. 4. seed thereof, one sort onely shall be saued; not that we must vnderstand it as if of foure hearers there should be but one saued; for

for the Lord may haue mercy vpon a whole congregation to sauethem : but three sorts of them filled with feuerall affections that vouchsafed to come and to stand before the Lord as hearers, were reprobate, that is, such as did not beautifie the profession of the Gospell with a holy life. And truly of them that come and feed vpon the word and yet be reprobates, it is wonderfull to see how farre they goe euen in the right course ; for first they may be enlightned generally in the knowledge of the truth, and may taste of the heauenly gift, yea and be partakers of the holy Ghost, Heb. 6. 4. 6. and yet may fall away, neuer to be renewed by repentance. Secondly, they may haue faith (Luk. 8. 13.) for a time not counterfeit, yet not truly sincere, for in the daie of trial they fall away like fruit from the tree with a blast of wind ; yea they may take ioy in the word as Herod did, who was glad to heare Iohn Baptift: and with Herod they may for a time do many things at the request of Gods Ministers, Mark. 16. 20. And for outward reformation, swine we know may be washed : so may they leaue off and discontinue some grosse sins for a time, when Sathan being for a season cast out of them, doth not worke so forcible in them : as Math. 12. 24. the Pharises and Sadduces may for nouelties sake come to Iohns baptisme, and for a time speake good things when they are euill, and yet be but a generation of vipers ; yea they may wish with Balaam to die the death of the righteous, iustifying in their owne conscience the course of holinesse ; and which is more, they may partake of all the graces of God sauing that one grace of sanctification, and yet they may seeme to bee sanctified, as Hebrews 10. 29. they tread vnder foot the Sonne of God, and count the blood of the new Testament an vnholly thing werewith they were so sanctified.

Mark. 6. 20.

Num. 23. 10.

Now others there be that are not called at all, and these be of two sorts : either those to whom the Lord hath denied the verie contemplation of the booke of nature, as children that die as soone as they be borne, who if they be elect, it is by a supernaturall power of the holy Ghost ; if they be reprobate, it is iust in respect of their naturall filth and corruption that did cleaue so fast vnto their bones, for in that they die it proues they had sinned, ned, and sinne proues there is a law, which law being broken bringeth death, for the wages of sinne is death. The second sort Rom. 6. 23. is of them, who though they be called by the booke of heaven and earth, as the Gentiles were, Rom. 1. 20. who do see the eternall power of God in the creation of the world and other his works, and liuing to a more vnderstanding age, are euen by the light of nature without all excuse; yet are they not inuited by the voice of the Gospell to rise from the dead, but die in their sinnes as the Canibales, Barbarians, and the Iewes since their Apostasie, to whom there pertaineth nothing but a fearefull expectation of iudgement.

Heereof followeth and is to be obserued, that it is contrary to the scripture to thinke that it was the will of God from eternity that all should be saued, for then it was his will likewise that all should come to the knowledge of their saluation; for whom he hath ordained to the end, them hath hee also ordained to the meanes: whereas to the reprobate, the sound of the word if they doe heare it, is but as the noise of bells confusedly jarring in their eares, and yet many there be that neuer heard it. Why, but it is said, 1. Tim. 2. 4. that it is the will of God all should be saued. True, all men, not euery singular particular man, but of euery singular condition of men some, not all of all kinds, but of all kinds some: according to that speech of the Euangelist, Christ Mat. 4. 23. healed euery disease in Iury, that is, euery kind of disease, not euerie particular disease. Now if all men come not to the knowledge of the truth of God, either it is done by the wil of God, or against his will: to say that it is against his will were impious and blasphemous, for this were to hold that something could offer violence to the will of God, and as if he might not otherwise haue purposed, which must be far from a Christian heart to imagine. If then this be done with his will, then it followeth that his will is changeable if hee once meant to saue them, for wee see some euen like dogges readie to rend them in peeces that offer them Mat. 7. 6. the pearle of the word, whom if the Lord had purposed to saue, they should not continue persecutors of the truth, as Paul saith of himselfe, 1. Timoth. 1. 12. 13. It pleased Christ Iesus to put me in his seruice, being before a blasphemer, a persecuter, an

an oppressor, and I was receiued to mercy. And where it is said, 1 Iohn 2. 2. that Christ is the reconciliation for the sinnes of the whole world, it is to be vnderstood for the sinnes of all sorts and degrees of men gathered out of all the parts of the world : and thus Christ himselfe interpreteth Ioh. 17. 9. when he said, Father I pray not for the world: and vndoubtedly he will neuer saue them he neuer praied for; for whom he excluded from his praier, them he neuer meant should haue benefit by his death : nay hee had bene bound in duty to haue praied for all, if all had been elected to saluation. Now if it be asked why men are damned, the answer is easie; It is for their sinne : howbeit it was purposed in the Lords vncontrolable decree, that they should be damned before they euer sinned ; and being corrupt in themselues, the Lord hardneth them, either by withdrawing the meanes, or the power of the meanes : the first by ignorance : the second, by denying them vnderstanding hearts. So as if it be demanded why the Lord hardned any; it is because he found him corrupt in Adam: if why hee damneth any, it is because he found him a sinner in himselfe.

Whom he calleth he iustificieth : that is, doth absolutely pardon him all his sinne, and absolutely impute vnto him all his Sommes righteousnesse, that as Christ for vs was made sinne, so wee in Christ might bee made righteous : so as iustification is the translation and remouing of our sinne to Christ, and the translation and remouing of his righteousnesse to vs. To our sinne hee opposeth his obedience, to the punishment of our sinne hee opposeth his satisfaction; otherwise he had not fully acquitted vs by fulfilling the law, vnlesse he had satisfied his Fathers wrath for our breach of the law in our corrupt birth. For if a man could now fulfill all the law of God, yet should hee not bee saued, because he was borne corrupt, and could not possibly satisfie for that was past; and in performing the law afterward, he should doe nothing but his duty. But this is our comfort, that the Lord seeing our weaknesse hath in his loue passed by it, and seeing our thoughts to bee alwaies euill, taketh no account nor reckoning of vs; but we resembling the image of his Sonne, the Lord reckoneth with him, and striketh off our debts in setting ting them on his score, who hath paid the Lord his full due, cuen to the vtmost farthing, being in his birth cleane, in his life holy, and in his death obedient.

Whom he iustificth he glorifi:th.

In this life the Lord doth onely call vs and iustifie vs, so as no man need say, as Rom. 10. 7. Who shall ascend into heauen?
for that were to bring Christ from aboue; or, Who shall descend into the deepe? for that were to raise Christ from the dead: for so much vertue and power of Christ as is needfull for vs, wee taste of heere: but our glorifying is reserued and followeth in the life to come, hauing it heere onely in spe and not in re, in hope but not in hand. This glorifying heere spoken of is meant, not that wee shall haue at the last day of our separation, when the world shutteth her doores vpon vs, but of that glory wee shall receiue at the day of iudgement; which is plaine and euident by that went before, vers. 21. namely that wee waite for the restoring of the liberty of the sonnes of God, and for the free-dome from the bondage of corruption. Howbeit in the glorie of our separation, two things are to be obserued: first, that we shall be freed from all feares and teares, and shall haue sinne abolished: secondly, we shall enter into our Lords rest: but the glory of the last day is farre greater, and resteth in three things: first, in the resurrection and awaking of the body, when it shall be made conformable to the body of Christ, when it shall not liue by the soule only, nor be maintained by outward and externall instruments of bread & such like, but it shall liue as the body of Christ liueth, and be glorious like the Sunne, which shall then exceed it selfe in glory. Secondly, there shall be a new heauen and a new earth, and in this new heauen shall dwell the soules of the Saints of God, and all things else shall bee restored to their first ma-iesty. Thirdly, which is the greatest of all, we shall then haue the beholding of the very face of God, and there shall bee no markes set to keepe vs from the mount where the Lord dwelleth, as there was Exod. 19. 12. but as Paul speaketh 1. Corinth.
13. 12. we shall then see him face to face, and know him as wee are knowen of him, and see him as God all in all; that is, wee shall behold the glory of God not standing vpon the veile of the flesh of Christ, for then all mediation and intercession shall cease : and this is part of that Christ praied for a litle before his death, Iohn 17. 24. that we might see that glory he had before the world was made , for then we shall see Christ-God and the whole Godhead immediately raigning, yet in Christ the Sonne of man and in vs, but so , as we shall no more leane and relie vp- on the praiers of Christ , for then he shall raigne no more as the Sonne of man in the midst of his enemies , for this gouernement shall cease, death which is the last enemy being then abolished, and he then shall raigne ouer them vanquished as God. Howbeit the fruit and benefit of this his mediation shall indure for euer , and the subiection of his humane nature shall then more appeare, because of the glory of his Godhead which shall then be seene fully, euen such and the same as he had before eternitie : yet shall this saluation more increafe the glory of his humanity, when we shall vnderstand and see it to bee personally vnited to the sonne of God, who with God the Father and the holy Ghost shall be all in all.

Now the fruition and possession of this glory shal worke three effects in vs : first, it shall breed in vs an infinite loue toward God : secondly, an infinite ioy in God : thirdly, an infinite praise to God. Infinitely shall we loue him that hath aduanced vs to such honour as is endles, and to such fellowship as is matchlesse ; our hearts shall be filled with ioy, & yet not able to comprehend or expresse it, therefore it is said, Enter thou into thy masters ioy, for this ioy is too great to enter into thee : and besides the ioy we shall haue in our owne saluation , we shall conceiue as great ioye for the saluation of others, which is called ioy celestiall : and we shall haue yet more ioy then before , to see the Godhead so glorious, the Lambe aduanced in our flesh , and to be one person with God. And this is aboue all ioies, because we shal loue Christ far aboue our selues, for the zeale of Gods glory shall euen eat vs vp, and it shall be so great in vs, as it cannot be so great for our owne saluation : and then out of this loue and ioy, as out of two fountaines ioyned in one , shall spring and arise such continuall praise to God for this glory, that we shal vncessantly sing to God in the Temple, which is God himselfe, so as we shall praise God in God, and this shall be as the Prophet Esay saith, from new Moone to new Moone, and from Sabbath to Sabbath, that is, for ever: for this loue of God is from eternitie in respect of our predestination, and to eternitie in respect of our glorification: and this is that we sigh and grone for, and for which while wee are in the flesh absent from God, wee continually pray for.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 31.32.

- 31 What shall we say then to these things? If God be on our side who can be against vs?
 32 Who spared not his owne sonne, but gaue him for vs all to death, how shall he not with him giue vs all things also?

He Apottle before set downe, that God the Father by his eternall purpose hath foreacknowledged vs, and foreloued vs with an euerlasting loue in his Sonne, and not vs onely, but all those that to the end of the world shall loue him; and manifest and shew foorth this their loue by a sincere worship and religious care to keepe his commandements: and how that the Lord as he hath ordained vs and them to the same glory, so at the fulnesse of time by the dispensation of his wisdom, by his spirit he doth call them by the intrument of his word, by the same loue doth iustifie vs in his Sonne, and will glorifie vs with himselfe. Now he being ouercome with the thought and meditation of these things, breaketh foorth into a woonder and admiration: that seeing it is thus, that the Lord hath taken it vpon him neuer to leaue vs, till he hath aduanced vs to heavenly places, euen the seat of the Lord Iesus, what shall we say? The answer is giuen with the question : this we must say, that since he is our God, as appeareth by that which went before, then is it impossible, (wee being thus backed, and hauing the Lord our bulwarke) that any creature can bee of that force, or be so against vs, no not the diuell in hell with all his power can hinder vs from the fruition of this glorie. In the other words ; who spared not his Sonne, &c. there is a further consolation set downe vnto vs, to make the heape of comfort greater : that since the Lord gaue as it were iudgement against his owne Son, and set him forth to a shamefull death for vs, and this when we were his enemies, and strangers from the life of God, how can it bee he should now denie vs any thing to further our saluation, being made friends with him, and reconciled to him thorow his Sonne ?

This doctrine needeth rather deepe meditation, then large explication : for who doth not assume to himselfe sufficiently to vnderstand it, being but thus much in effect : that since God in his euerlasting purpose hath thus manifested his glorie and mercie, and hath ordained the end, which is his glorie in our saluation : and to bring it that it may come to this end, hath subordinated and set downe certaine causes, as calling and iustifying, it is impossible any thing should hinder our saluation ?

If God be on our side. Heereupon wee must not thinke, that if God be on our side we shall haue no enemies : for because God loueth vs therefore we haue the more enemies, and therefore we are persecuted and subiect to the hatred of the world : as Christ himselfe expresth, Ioh. 17. 14. The world hateth them, because (saith he) they are like me. So as in this place the Apostle doth not meane, that we should expect any immunitie and exemption from the enmitie and malice of men, but that wee hauing this heavenly securitie and assured certaintie of the Lords protection, neither Angell, nor man, nor diuell, nor torment shall be able to ouercome vs. For this is that Paul speaketh of : All things are by Christ, through Christ, and for Christ, that is, all things are created by him, all things are preferued through him, & maintained for his glorie : so that our saluation being alwaies ioyned with his glorie, neither shall men breath, nor the diuell rage, but

Col. 1. 16.

but ſo glorifie Chriſt; which glorie of his is greateſt in our ſaluation. We therefore in a ſpirituall confidence of the Lords loue, do challenge all men, and all things that euer were created, that what violence ſoeuer they offer vs, or what puniſhment ſoeuer they inflict vpon vs, it is ſo farre from preſſing vs downe, as it maketh vs ſpread higher, and furthereth our ſaluation: for God is with vs, and while the bridegroome is with vs, wee cannot mourne. The euill they can doe, is but with the dragon to fight with vs; and as the enemies of God to perſecute vs, and though they be led to do this by the malice of their harts, yet they ſerue but as the Lords rods to chaſtiſe vs, and as Apothecaries to make drugs to cure our infirmities; but ſo, as they cannot put in one dramme more then the Lord knoweth of, for he hath the tempering of the cup, as it is ſaid of Salomon, The Lord weigheth the enterpriſes of men, and their actions are in his hands; and the worſt they can doe vs, is but this, to ſhorten our daies, by that meanes to haſten our ioyes. Hereupon we are to gather, and to lay vp this comfort, that if the courſe of nature ſhould be altered, yet euen in this confuſion of nature, if we call vpon the Lord, his eare is readie to heare, and his hand to helpe vs; nay, if there be any ſpeciall iudgement and vengeance determined againſt a citie or a people, the preſence of the Lords children doth euen binde his hands, that he can doe nothing while they be there: as Genes. 19. 16. till Lot was ſnatched out of Sodom the fire could not fall from heauen to deſtroy it. So that if heauen and earth conſpire againſt vs, if ſea and ſand ſhould imagine vs miſchiefe, if the Princes of the world ſhould ſet their armies againſt vs, and like graſhoppers in multitude ſhould lie waiting for our liues, if the ſorrowes of death, and the pangs of hell ſhould compaſſe vs, yet this is our ſhade and comfort, that we liue vnder the wings of the Almighty; and that wee are to the Lord as precious as the tenderest part of his eie: and he that commeth ſo neare him, the breath of his mouth ſhall conſume him: and in the middeſt of all theſe calamities, wee ſhall ſtand like mount Sion, and ſhall feare no more then the heauens were affraid, (Gen. 11. 4.) when Nimrod and his companie would haue built vp a tower vnto them. For the Lord hath giuen his

360 ROM. 8. VERS. 31.32.

Angels charge ouer vs, and not a haire of our head shall fall without his prouidence; but as the wicked haue many waies to hurt vs, so hath the Lord farre more meanes to helpe vs.

Who spared not his owne Sonne.

This is another consolation ministred vnto vs, to stay vs from fainting in afflictions; that if God hath giuen vs his Sonne when wee were his enemies, then much more now being reconciled vnto him, will he giue vs with his Sonne all things else.

In this consider two parts: first, what it is that is said heere: God deliuered vp his Sonne to death: secondly, that if hee giue him, hee will giue all things else. In the first consider two parts: first, the person of him that was giuen vp: it was his owne Son: secondly, who the persons be for whom hee is giuen vp: namely, for all the faithfull.

Gen. 22. 8.

In the first, which is the person of him was giuen vp to death, doth appeare the wonderfull loue of God, that would vouchsafe to bestow vpon vs rebels and runnagates, no woorse thing then his owne Sonne. Great was the loue of Abraham toward God, that so commaunded his naturall affections, as to offer vp his sonne Isaac at the Lords commaundement vnto death, hauing but one sonne, and he giuen him by a speciall fauor to comfort his age, and him whom he loued, being vertuous and religious, when he had no hope to haue any more sonnes, and this being the sonne of the promise, in whom both himselfe and the whole world should be saued; that this child should not bee banished from him, but put to death and killed, not before his face, but with his owne hand, this was a great loue for flesh and bloud to fall into. But yet farre greater is the loue of God toward vs, who louing Christ a thousand times more then Abraham could loue Isaac, because betweene heavenly and earthlie things there is no comparison, that God should deliuer him vp, not to the whip, but to the gibbet; not by commaundement as Abraham did, but of his meere and voluntarie loue and motion; not into the hands of them that sorrowed to see him afflicted, but into the hands of butchers, that cared not how cruelly they dealt with him; and this not for his friends as Abraham did, for he was called the friend of God; but for traitors that would

Ioh. 3. 15.

would haue pulled the Lord fourth of his owne seate; and not to death onely, as Abraham did his sonne, who by the losse of his life should presently haue gained heauen, but to a most cursed death and detestable; and this to bee performed not in a mountaine or secret place, where there should be few beholders, as Abrahams was to haue beene done, but euen before the face of all the Iewes, to hang as a most odious and notorious sinner, to suffer his accusation to bee no lesse then for blasphemie, to haue him so debased as to haue Barrabus, who for an insurrection and murder was cast into prison, in the choice of the people preferred before him, who not onely was condemned by Pilate, prosecuted by the malice of the Iewes, conuincd by false testimonies, scorned at by them that bad him helpe himselfe when he was in such extremitie as hee could scarce speake, but that euen God his Father should arraigne him in heauen, hauing all the sins of the world cast vpon him, that pressed him at one time to the highest and lowest part of hell. Whereupon consider, that for the sinnes in our person all the horrors of hell did compass him, and all the torments of the damned did seize vpon him, and God for the time accounted him hisemie, and brought him to that exigent and extremitie, as he was forced to crie, Father, why hast thou forsaken me? for if he had not bin the Sonne of God, it had bin impossible to haue sustained or endured it; and yet being the Son of God, he was driuen to low, as an Angel was faine to be dispatched from heauen to comfort him; and all this to befall him, who in himselfe was not in any one particular sinfull, being cleane by birth, and holy by conuersation. True it is, the high Priest was angrie with him because he tooke him as an offender in his owne person, but God was angrie with him, as esteeming him a sinner in our person, that he which had not deserued being smitten, wee that had deserued might escape. And this doth set fourth the loue of God, the fulnesse of it and the depth of it being not to be comprehended of all the hearts of men ioyned in one, though every one of them were wiser then Salmon, but is onely to be reuerenced and adored of all.

LII. 23. 18. 19.
Mat. 27. 22.

Rcu. 19. 15.

Further, in this deliuering vp of the Sonne of God to death, we may obserue a reconciliation of two extremes; infinit iustice, and

by christe death
we reconciled & infinite iustice & mercy of God;

and infinite mercy, both which the Lord performed in this action. Infinite iustice, in that the Lord will be paid all his debt; for rather then he will be vn-satisfied, the blood of Christ shall paie all: for what dishonour had it beene for the King of heauen to haue suffered the Serpent to haue so insulted vpon his Maiestie, and wretched man to haue so rebelliously defaced his image, and so presumptuously charged him with malice and enuie, & yet to haue set him scotfree? If the Lord had borne these indignities at our hands, it had too much blemished the power of his iustice; and therefore he could take no lesse satisfaction then a sacrifice of blood: and that this blood must issue & streame out of the veines of the hart of Christ, hath shewed him to haue set an infinite price & valuation vpon his iustice; yet hath the Lord withal heerein set foorth his most perfect, infinite, and endlesse mercy, that though he would not forgie the debt, yet he paid himselfe, for God did suffer: and this is such a thing, as no mortall man in the same action is able to shew forth. We reade of one Zaledicus king of the Locrenses, that went about such a matter; who making a law, that who so deflowered a woman should lose both his eyes, it fell out his owne sonne was the first that brake it: whereupon the king would haue had the law executed vpon him, preferring the loue of iustice before the loue of nature; but what by the obtestation and intreatie of his nobles instant vpon him, and what through feare of tumult and insurrection threatned if he would not dispence with the law in this yoong Prince, who was of great expectation for his towardlinesse, and in great fauour with the people for his vertue: at last the king resolued to satisfie the law, and yet to shew mercy to his sonne; and therefore whereas the law was, that such an offendour should lose both his eyes, he caused one of his sons to be put out and one of his owne, shewing mercy in putting out one of his owne, and iustice in putting out one of his sonnes; but this was not perfect, for then in mercy hee should haue put out both his owne eyes, or in iustice both his sonnes. And no maruell, for how can flesh and blood imagine to reach the wisdome of God, when our vnderstandings are but as the stubble carried to and fro with the winde, and we our selues but as dust & ashes, that cannot reach

the depth and dignitie of so glorious a Prince?

Now for the second point, for whom this Sonne of God was given vp: it is said, for all, that is, for all belecuers, for so Christ expounds himself, Ioh. 17. 20. And therefore execrable is the opinion of Andreas a Lutheran, who holds that God deliuered vp his Son for an vniuersall saluation, meaning thereby to saue all, if all will be saued; for they that will not beleue (saith he) condemne themselues. But we say, the purpose of God was not that Christ should die effectually for all: for first, he neuer died for those he neuer prayed for: and Iohn 17. 9. he prayed not for the world. Secondly, if Gods purpose had bin to haue given him to death for all without exception, then how is it that some are already damned, & others haue no faith and shal be damned hereafter? either his purpose being to saue them is frustrate and void, or else God cannot do it, and so something should resist the power of God, which is blasphemie to thinke. If God had such a purpose, and after seeing the incredulitie of man, he should change his minde, then the execution of his will should depend vpon the incertaintie and instabilitie of the euent, which doth derogate much from the al sufficiencie of God; and therefore we say that hee was crucified for none but for such as haue their garments dipped in the bloud of the Lambe, but for such as haue their faith burning like a lampe, but for such whose workes proceed from an vndefiled heart, and whose praiers through Christ his helpe ascend to the euerliuing God.

Further, consider in these words, He deliuered him vp to death: that this very phraze and maner of speech is attributed to Iudas, who is called Traditor, a deliuerer vp, or a traitor. How shall we then determine of this? Shall we challenge God to be euill because he deliuered him vp? or excuse Iudas because he executeth that which God had purposed? God forbid; for neither is God to be accused that Iudas wrought with him in the same action, nor Iudas to be excused for deliuering him vp according to Gods purpose. Your wicked hands (saith Peter, Act. 2. 23.) haue crucified him whom God in his determinate counsell had deliuered vp. Why then shall Iudas be blamed being but the instrument? Because as Iudas did it, it was most wicked, he doing it by the inst.

Mat. 26. 15,

instigation of the diuell, his heart being possessed with couetousnesse and blinded with infidelitie, yet was it good in respect of the end whereto God had ordained it, though as it proceeded from his poisoned heart, it was most execrable: for alwaies the action of the instrument beareth the name, or is denominated from the affection of the instrument: and therefore Iudas betraying his Matter for thirtie peeces of siluer, it was a most damnable sinne in him, and the turning of it to the saluation of the faithfull was onely the worke of God. It may be said, God did appoint Iudas to doe it, for nothing is done but by his appointment, how then can Iudas be blamed? We answer this by a double comparison or similitude; the soule giueth power to a lame limme or member of the bodie, to mooue and to stirre, yet may not the power of the soule be blamed for the lameness of the limme; for the lameness thereof doth not enter into the soule, neither proceedeth from the soule, but from the bodie, though the soule be the cause of the motion. Euen so the Lord moued Iudas to the action, but the imperfection and sinne in the action proceeded not from the Lord, but from the diuell that had corrupted his heart. And no more then the brightness and heate of the Sunne can be said to be the cause of the stench of the carcas, or the corruption thereof can reach to defile the Sunne: no more can the holiness of God excute in any action the wickednesse of man, or the wickednesse of man defile his holiness. The incestuous wickednesse of Abolon, the mischieuous purpose of Achitophel, the hatred of Iosephs brethren, and the malice of the Iewes in the apprehension and death of Christ, were wicked and euill in themselves, though God turned their ends contrarie to that they were intended.

For the last point, If he giue him, he will with him giue all things: obserue that no man can partake of the benefites of Christ, but first hee must partake of Christ himselfe; and therefore they that holde wee doe in the Sacrament of the Supper onely partake of the benefites of Christ his death, and not of Christ himselfe, doe grossely offend: for wee doe eate spirituallly the verie bodie, and doe drinke the very bloud of Christ, and by this wee are made partakers of his soule, and by consequent

1. Sa. 16. 21.

Gen. 37. 27.

of his humanity, and by this of his diuinity, for they are neuer separated, and by this of Christ God and man, and by consequent of all his benefites: for these benefites be like an &c. in the end of a sentence, that implieth a necessary addition of many things not expressed, and yet must needs be vnderstood as depending vpon the former. So that if we haue Christ, he cometh not naked nor alone, but he bringeth all he hath with him, his puritie, his obedience, his sacrifice, his power and whatsoeuer else may make a Christian man perfect.

Secondly, obserue hence, that no man can partake of Christ, but with him he must likewise partake of all his benefites: answerable to that speech of the Euangelist: When we haue the kingdom of God, other things shall be added: for saluation neuer cometh alone. And therefore damnable is that opinion: that a man may eat Christ really and indeed, and yet not partake of his benefites, because he doth not eat him effectually: for this should argue there is no life in the flesh of Christ: contrary to that Ioh. 6. 54. He that eateth of the flesh of the sonne of man, must needs haue life. Mat. 6. 33.

Thirdly, obserue hence, that all is gift and no merit, and a gift purposed of God to be bestowed before euer we deserued anything: for though we in dutie must labour in the course of mortification, yet in vaine doe we wash our selues, thinking to be accepted for our cleanlinesse: for it is God that giueth the beginnings in his loue, and the increase in his spirit, and the end and perfection in his Sonne. And therefore he that leaneth to himselfe shall surely fall: for if flesh be thy arme, and thine owne works the ladder whereby thou thinkest to clime to heauen, when thou art passed the ground, then shall the rounds breake, and thy fall shall be to thy confusion: for in the gift of Christ alone we are beloued.

Ierf. 33. Who shall laie any thing to the charge of Gods chosen? It is God that iustifieth.

34. Who shall condemne? It is Christ which is dead, yea or rather which is risen againe, who is also at the right hand of God, and maketh request also for vs.

The Apostle hath before proued, that if any thing should make vs tremble and stand in feare of damnation, it should bee one of these two: first, either the sinfull imperfection of our nature: or secondly, the ineuitable necessity of affliction. Now that we being in Christ, the remainder and relikes of that corruption which we shall onely shake off in death, cannot make vs subiect to the curse of God, he hath proued from the first to the seuenteenth verse going before. Secondly, that the rod of affliction resting on our backs, is no argument of the wrathful face of God, but onely the chastisement of a Father, he proued from the 17. to the end of the 32. vers. Hauing proued these two points, he now maketh a most comfortable conclusion, demanding a question by way of a challenge, and doth most confidently himselfe answer it. Who can lay any thing to our charge? If Sathan shall accuse the brethren, whom the Lord notwithstanding will re-proue, yet who dare condemne and giue sentence against vs, since Christ for our sakes is dead? secondly, is risen: thirdly, sitteth at the right hand of the Father: fourthly, and maketh intercession for vs.

Zach. 3. 2.

First, for his death, how this saueth vs from damnation: it is two waies: first, in respect of the grieuousnesse of his death: secondly, in respect of the worthinesse of his person, that did sustaine and indure it. The grieuousnesse of it resteth in these two: first, that visibly he was nailed to the crosse, and there was a separation of soule and body: secondly, that inuisibly the markes of the wrath of God were vpon his soule, he suffering for a time so many torments of hell, as euer all the damned shall doe. The worthinesse of his person appeareth in this, that he was the Son of God by eternall generation, who for his obedience and humbling of himselfe in the shape of a seruant to so cursed a death, might worthily haue merited the saluation of a thousand worlds. So that as death came in by sinne, which stingeth a man to damnation, and whereby the diuell raigned ouer all: so by the death of the sonne of God was death overcome, sinne abolished and the diuell vanquished; and as by sinne came in death, so by death went out sinne. Hereupon we beholding Christ crucified by a liuely faith, wee shall be freed from the impoysoned bitings

1. Cor. 15. 21.

birings of the old serpent, euen as the Israelites were healed of their wounds and stings, by looking on the brazen serpent in the wilderness. Ioh. 3. 14.
Num. 21. 9.

For the second, which is Christ his resurrection: we haue this comfort, that no sinne is vn-satisfied or vnexpiated, since he is deliuered from the power of darknesse and of death vnder which he was kept, and still should haue beene kept vntill all our debts had beene paid to the vtmost farthing. Heerenpon we beleene, that Christ caried all our sinnes with him into the graue: but what became of them afterward, we know not, nor need not to inquire, for he rose without them. And this was represented in the scape-goat, (Leuit. 16. 21.) who hauing all the sinnes of the people laid vpon him, was sent into an vninhabitable place, where he was neuer heard of againe, set downe to be in the wilderness, by the hand of a man appointed.

For the third consider two things: first, what is meant by his sitting at the right hand of his Father: secondly, what benefites we reape by his sitting there. For the first, vnderstand it is a translated or borrowed speech: for can we thinke that God hath a hand, whose power is diffused through all creatures? and being an infinite spirit hath no definite place. And as heere Christ is said to be sitting, so else where he is said to be standing: as Act. 7. 56. Stephen saw the Sonne of man standing at the right hand of God. In which there is also a borrowed speech: for we must not thinke he either sitteth or standeth at a certaine place: but the phrase is fetched from the custome of great Princes, who vse to set them on their right hand, whom they meane to make their equals, as Gen. 41. 40. Joseph was set at the right hand of Pharaoh being made ruler ouer all Egypt: and 1. King. 2. 19. Salomon set Bathsheba his mother on the right hand: so is it said by David in the Psalmes, the Queene sitteth on the right hand of the King. Psal. 45. 9. So as the meaning is, that Christ Iesus hath receiued from God the copartnership of soueraigne authority ouer all creatures whatsoeuer, and as he is man, being also the Sonne of God and our elder brother, is advanced ouer all, and hath receiued a name aboue all: so as now the Father ruleth nothing but in the person of his Sonne. Secondly vnderstand, that this sitting ting at Gods right hand, though it was due to his humane nature and flesh from the moment of his conception and uniting the flesh to his diuine nature, yet it is properly assigned to him after his resurrection, or rather after his ascension. For hauing in the forme of a seruant performed all obedience, then did the Father crowne his obedience with this excellent glory, and then was this soueraignty bestowed on him. Which must teach vs much more patiently to wait vpon the Lord, and not to expect our reward before we set forth, or while we be running: but when our race is finished, and that wee haue borne the heat of the day, and haue fought a good fight in the Lord. Thirdly, for this his sitting, that is, the receiuing of his absolute authority, though Christ as God neuer receiued it being equall to God, much lesse after his ascension, yet after his ascension he was in some sort advanced in his diuine nature: for as the Scripture saith: The Sonne of God descended: meaning thereby, abased himselfe, and his glorie did not so fully appeare, being hidden in the cloud of his infirme flesh; yet as the Apostle saith, by his rising and ascending was he mightily declared to be the sonne of God; and by that was more manifested to be so, then he was vpon the earth. This also he sheweth himselfe, Ioh. 17. 24. when he praied to be glorified with the same glory he had with his Father from the beginnig; not that it should then be bestowed vpon him, but then miraculously declared to haue had it from eternitie. Howbeit this his sitting heere spoken of, is properly meant to be exalted in his flesh, because this authority is giuen him as Mediator. And in this respect Christ may bee said to be greater then himselfe, and lesse then himselfe; because his flesh is beneath his diuinity, and his Godhead farre aboue his humanity. And by this power giuen him he is glorified in the Godhead, in the manifestation of it in the flesh, by abolishing all his infirmities, and replenishing his flesh with all maner of graces, as it is said, In him dwelt the fulnesse of the Godhead.

Rom. 10. 7.

Rom. 1. 4.

Colof. 2. 8.

Concerning the second point: namely, what fruits come to vs by this his sitting at Gods right hand, they are principally three: first, we learne by this, that he doth enrich his Church generally, and euery member particularly, with so many graces of the

the holy Ghost as shall be necessary to the glory of the head, the edification of the whole body, and the saluation of euery particular member, according as it is set downe Eph. 5. 26. 27. that this Church might be without spot or wrinkle, and without blame. Secondly, by this his presence with God he doth defend and protect his Church from all enemies whatsoeuer, so as the gates of hell shall not preuaile against it. And this is our comfort, that since all power is giuen him, he that hath felt our infirmities hath the tempering of the cup of our afflictions, which we may boldly drinke of, and not refuse it no more then he did the bitter cup his Father gaue to him; and assure our selues that no tyrants hand can touch vs further then he permits him, which shall neuer be aboute our strength, for Christ hath power enough to performe it, and God hath will enough to doe it. And since while he was in his humanity on earth the diuell could not enter into a heard of swine without his licence and permission, Math. 8. 32. and that as it is said in the Reu. 5. 3. he doth so seale the doore as none can enter in vnles he open it: what shall we thinke he will doe now, being in his glory and at his Fathers elbow? And while he was in the flesh, being able by the word of his mouth to stay the raging of the sea, Mat. 8. 26. much more now can he and will he repress the rage and fury of our persecutors when it please him. Thirdly, he shall sit at the right hand of the father vntill all his children be fully glorified and his enemies destroyed, which are of two sorts: first, such as are to be abolished, as death: secondly, or such as perfectly are to be vanquished, and yet perpetually to be tormented, as the diuel and the damned spirits, for to them shall it be a day of horror and of howling.

Now for the fourth, which is his intercession or his making request for vs, consider two things: first, what is meant in that he is said to make petition for vs: secondly, what benefits redound and arise to vs by these his requests for vs. For the first, that he is said to pray for vs, it is the exaltation and aduancement of Christ Iesus in the office of his eternall priesthood, whereof there were two parts: the one to expiate or offer sacrifice for sinne: the other to pray for the people. Now Christ was such a Priest, as the power of his sacrifice continueth for euer, and no more sacrifice

is

is to be offered vp, as it is said Heb. 10. 12. this man (meaning Christ) after he had once offered one sacrifice for sinne, sitteth for euer at the right hand of God. Howbeit the second duty of his Priest-hood, which is to pray for vs, remaineth still, but after an other maner; not as he did vpon the earth, when he prostrated himselfe to the ground, and lifted vp his eies to heauen with trembling of heart and anguish of minde, offering vp prayers, as Heb. 5. 7. with strong cries and teares vnto God, being himselfe then but as a seruant to his Father: but he exerciseth this office now not by any submission of gesture, but by representing and setting before the eyes of his Father his sacrifice fresh and bleeding, which turneth his Fathers countenance from our indignities and misdeeds to looke vpon himselfe, as Heb. 9. 24. He is entered into heauen to appeare now in the sight of God for vs, standing there to be beholden.

For the second, namely what benefits we haue by this his intercession; and they are three: first, by this he fulfilleth all the types and figures of the law, that heereby he might fully declare vnto vs that he is the euerlasting Priest, prefigured by them that were vnder the law, as Heb. 10. 19. hee is said to enter into the sanctuary of heauenly places: that as (Exod. 39. 7.) Aron had precious stones, in which the names of the children of Israel were written, six in euery stone, and twelue in his breast, in euery one of them a tribe, that hee might remember them to God in his prayers; so Christ bearing in his breast our selues as precious stones, is thereby put in minde to remember vs to his Father; & though our fathers having the veile before them, were forbidden to enter into the holiest; yet wee through the veile of the flesh of Christ (Heb. 10. 20.) are permitted to come boldly to the face of the most high and holy God. The second benefit is, that all our prayers be sanctified, and doe ascend to the seat of God through his petitions, that is, through his appearing before his Father they shal be heard of his Father. Here vpon Paul saith, Rom. 5. 2. By him we haue accesse to the throne of grace to offer vp the sweet sacrifices of our selues by Christ, who hath made the way for vs; let vs therefore approach vnto him with confidence: and this is that spoken of in the Rev. 8. 3. the Saints poure forth forth their incense, that is, their praier, which is giuen to Christ hauing a golden censor, that he should put a new incense vpon them vpon the golden altar, which is himselfe, that they might haue a gracions sauor, and a sweet smell in the nostrils of his Father. The third benefit of this his intercession, is that which we shall neuer fully feele nor perceiue till his last praier be granted he made Ioh. 17. 21. that we might be one in God and himselfe, that is, when we shall haue a full contemplation of the maiestie of God.

Lastly obserue, that Christ shall make this intercession for the Saints till all his enemies be ouercome, and all his children arraigned in stately and royall garments, and then shall his praier cease: for why should he pray any longer when his praier is granted? but by this we may see, that saluation of soules is no such easie matter as the world imagineth, since it requireth this continuall exercise of the Sonne of God to make request for vs: and if Christ in loue and compassion doe it for vs, much more ought we to doe it for our selues.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 35, 36, 37.

35. Who shall separate us from the loue of Christ? Shall tribulation, or anguish, or persecucion, or famine, or nakednesse, or perill, or sword?
36. As it is written, for thy sake are we killed all the day long, we are counted as sheepe for the slaughter.
37. Neuerthelesse in all these things we are more then conquerers through him that loued us.

HE Apostle vpon the heavenly and Christian security set downe in the premises, inferreth and brings in a most constant and comfortable resolution vpon a stout magnanimity and spirituall courage by him conceiued, that is, that it is impossible any thing should make vs fall from the fauour of God which is in Christ. The reason is this; in those things wherein wee are more then conquerers, wee cannot be remoued from Gods fauour; but in these seuen things heere reckned vp, tribulation, &c. all which are as needles in the flesh, and wherein hee comprehendeth all other, these being the worst, wee are more then conquerers: therefore neither anguish, famine, &c. can separate vs from the loue of God. As if he should say, howeuer it be that men call not in question Gods loue while they liue in peace and enjoy the pleasures of this life, yet let vs see how far aduersitie may throw and deiect a man from this comfortable security; that since Christ sits at the right hand of his father, and there shall sit till all his children be fully glorified, let vs take the greatest extremities that can light vpon the flesh: Tribulations, that is, any kind of outward trouble: or anguish, that is, such inward perplexity or distresse in soule that we are at our wits end, like Lot; Gen. 19. 8. that must either giue forth his daughters or the Angels to the filthy Sodomites: or persecution by famine, that is able to breake a brazen wall, it breeds such rage in the bones: or nakednesse, that is, that wee bee so imponerished or beggered for the truths sake, as we haue nothing to couer, nor wherein to hide vs: or the sword, which is most ghaitly for the quicke dispatch it will make: all which ioyned together, may be reckoned vp for the continuall portion of the church of God, both before Christ and after: for we need not suppose or imagine that this may come, since it is so written Psal. 44. 22. that men doe nothing but offer vp the godly euery day; and the wicked make no more account of them but euen as sheepe to the slaughter. And since the coming of Christ the triall must be the greater, as Saint Peter speaketh, because the spirit is greater: so as now iudgement must begin at the house of God. But what is the issue and end of al this? we are in these extreame calamities more then conquerers, so far are we from fainting or falling: and the Lord in the midst of these shall either send vs miraculous deliuerance, as hee did to Daniel. Da. 6. 22. when he stopped the mouth of the lion, that he could not hurt him: or else hee will so qualifie the miseries that shall beate vpon vs, with such extraordinary comfort,

372 ROM. 8. VERS. 35, 36, 37.

1. Pct. 4. 17.

that we would not exchange our aduersitie to ensnare our consciences with conditions in seruing of God, and if the worst cometh that we be giuen vp to death, the heauens shall bee open to receiue vs, and the Angels shall be readie to carrie vs into the bosome of God, and our enemies shall stand astonished to see the courage of our christian soules so willingly embracing death in which is life, and out of our blood shall rise an hundred professors more: for the blood of Martyrs is the seed of the church, when we our selues shall triumphantly ascend to the seate of the Almightye.

Luk. 16. 21

For the parts of the text, they be these: first, the Apostle setteth downe a demaund by way of challenge, and therefore implieth a person in these words: Who shall, &c. as if he should saie, I giue the challenge to the stoutest champion what euer he be, whether he be the duell that liueth in hell, or his eldest sonne, or all his sons that be on earth: otherwise if the person that should accept this challenge were not vnderstood, he should more properly haue said: What shall separate vs, &c. Secondly, he interposeth and bringeth in a testimonie out of the 44. Psalme, to shew that he doth not put it by supposition, that these troubles may come, or may not come: but that of all other the church of God is not likely, but sure to sustaine them in the ineuitable necessity of Gods decree, as if we that be heires of the covenant were created for nothing else. Thirdly, hauing described the necessitie of these miseries that shall befall the elect, the demand or question is most triumphantly answered, when he saith; In all these we are more then conquerors.

For the first, which is the demaund it selfe, it cannot be made plainer: onely in the words, To be separate from the loue of Christ, we must not vnderstand it actiuelly but passiuelly, not of the loue wherewith we loue Christ, but of that loue wherewith wee are beloued of God in Christ. For though our loue to Christ is so substantially rooted in our hearts, as that it is (Cant. 3, 6.) strong as death which ouercometh all things, hard as the graue that swalloweth vp all things, like the flame of God, that whole floods of water cannot quench; yea such as we will not depart with for any money, and such and so great, as it is true, that no-

Luk. 22. 60.

2. Tim. 2. 13.

thing can separate vs from the loue of Christ : yet this is to be taken and vnderstood of the loue of Christ to vs, as appeareth by the end of the 37. and 39. verses. So as if it were possible we should forget Christ, or renounce him as Peter did, or forsake him as Demas did, yet he cannot forget vs : for he is faithfull that hath promised.

2. For the second, which is the testimonie out of Psal. 44. 22. that we that are Christians do as verily looke for these miseries; as we do for the rising of the Sunne, the Prophet setting it down as an absolute purpose of God not to bee preuented nor auoided, and not onely permitting it as a thing which may and may not come. In which words consider two points: first, what is the cause in Gods sight; why the world afflicteth the Church: secondly, in what grieuous sort it is afflicted.

2. Kin. 19. 18.

For the first, the cause is set downe in these words: for thy names sake: that is, because thou opposelt thy selfe against Antichrist, and dost not fall downe nor bow to Baal, nor dost not fashion thy selfe after the world, in swallowing vp their iolities and delights. Wherein obserue, that true Christians are not onely subiect to common miseries, as those that beare the face of fleshly Adam, but to some peculiar calamities that neuer disquiet the wicked: and this onely as they beare the image of that heauenly Adam Christ Iesus, from which the world is exempted; euen as the chaffe and the wheate, they both feele the flaile, but the chaffe is free from the millstone, from the fanne, and from the ouen: for of these onely doth the wheate taste: and happy is he that is ground fit for the Lords table; for though the chaffe feele not the bitternesse of the mill, nor the heate of the ouen: yet marke what becommeth of it, it is like vnfavorie salt, good for nothing but to be cast foorth, and is either troden vnder feete, or caried away with the winde, and so vanisheth in the aire. Such is the case and estate of the wicked, for when they are separated as tares from the corne, either the Lord treads vpon them in his wrath, or burneth them in his displeasure, or bloweth them from his presence like the stubble.

Mark. 9. 50.

2. Secondly obserue, where it is said, We are killed for thy names sake: that though God doth neuer chastise any man vniustly, because because hee may haue occasion enough to afflict him for his owne corruption, whereby he may be humbled: yet heerein appeareth his infinite wisdom, that hee maketh the cause of our sufferings to be more honorable, bearing this title and superscription, for the name of God, the puritie of religion, and because we will not communicate with the world in their superstitious deuotions. So as the Lord changeth the nature of the chastisement, and imputeth it as borne for none of our wickednesse, but for the glorious profession of the Gospell, the wicked not punishing in vs our sinnes, but Gods graces: for if we would partake with them in their lusts we might goe free: For if Balaam would curse the people, hee might soone rise to promotion, Numb. 22. 37. and if Michaiab would please the king in his Prophecie hee need not be fed with the bread of affliction, 1. King. 22. 27. and if the three children would worship Nabuchadnezzars Image, they might easily escape the furnace: Dan. 3. 12. but we must keepe our standing, and not shrinke a foote from the foolishnesse of the Gospell, what stormes soeuer may arise: for it is no more then as if Christ should borrow our liues for a time to do him credit withall, which shall bee mightily rewarded.

Thirdly, in that it is said, killed for thy names sake, there ariseth this consolation: that forasmuch as our sufferings are ioyned with Gods glorie, and are brought vpon vs for Gods glorie, we may be sure they shall haue a good issue, and shall end well: for as he tendreth his owne glorie, so will hee also tender vs. We thinke it strange, that the wicked haue such a swinge in their delights, and that wee hang downe our heads. Yea Dauid complaineth, that seeing the prosperitie of the wicked he had almost in his haste accused God of partialitie: but Paul (2. Thes. Psal. 73. 13. 1. 5. 6.) proueth, that it is impossible (since we that are thus tossed and vexed as it were in the whirlepoole of sorrowes, are better then the world, and in higher account with God) but that there shall come a day, when rest shall be giuen to our soules, and vengeance powred into the bosomes of persecutors. For there cannot be a truth more certainly to be beleueed then this: that since we doe suffer at their hands who are woorse then our selues, it is a sure token that there shall come a reuelation of Gods iudgement, wherein the iron rod of the Lords wrath shall bruiſe them ſoule and bodie, when wee ſhall be caried vp, with S. Paul into the third heauen, and with Lazarus into Abrahams boſome, and when the vengeance of the Lord ſhall purſue our enemies, driting them from his preſence and from the glorie of his power, 2. Theſ. 1. 9.

Fourthly, in that it is ſaid: for thy names ſake: obſerue, that it is not the ſuffering of euery phanaticall or phantaſticall ſpirit, that ſhall be taken for the Lords truth: for there may be ſuch forcible illuſions, as men may giue their bodies to the fire, or neckes to the halter for the ſuppoſed truth of Poperie, & then their ſuffering is as a ſeale ſet to a wrong instrument: but it muſt bee in a true zeale of a true cauſe; for the death doth not iuſtifie the cauſe to be good, but the cauſe iuſtifieth the death to be holie and religious. For Paul (1. Tim. 1. 13.) was a zealous perſecutor when he was a blaſphemer, and yet thought he did God good ſeruiſe: but when God receiued him to mercie, then hee forſooke and diſclaimed the righteousneſſe of workes. So that if our ſufferings be for God, we muſt lay our foundation onely in Chriſt crucified, harbouring and maintaining a pure conſcience in an vn-defiled heart, not ſtained with hypocriſie, nor growing ſo hard as to be burned with a hot iron, 1. Tim. 4. 2.

2.

For the ſecond point, which is the grieuouſneſſe of the affliction befalls Gods Saints, it is to be conſidered two waies: firſt, their crueltye, that nothing will ſtaie their hunger, nor ſtainch their malice, but blood: for either we are killed, or daily haue death before our eies, the ſight whereof oft times is more bitter then death it ſelfe. Secondly, the indignitie they offer vs, and the diſgrace, not onely to ſlay vs, but to ſlay vs like beaſts, to ſet forth and expreſſe their exceeding rancor and malice toward vs.

Moſ. ii. 36. 37.

Concerning the crueltye and indignitie hath bene vſed toward Gods Saints for the old Teſtament, let the Apoſtle to the Hebr. 11. 36. ſpeake, who reckoneth vp twelue ſeueral kindeſ and ſorts of perſecutions, wherewith the faithfull haue bene purſued, and yet were neuer daunted nor diſmaied, knowing they ſhould should receive a better resurrection. And how they have bene vsed since Christ his ascension, the stories of the ten persecutions in the Primitiue church do tel vs, that Christians were so odious as they were out of the protection of law, for not onely were lawes made against them, that publikely they should be torment- ed, but euery priuat man might be a butcher to a Christian, and neuer come in danger nor question of law for shedding of blood: yea there was such exquisite torments deuised for them by Sa- than as could not be greater, as that some should be couered with the skin of a beast, and then cast to a wolfe to be rent like a beast: some smothered with a little smoake proceeding from a continual soft fire: some scorched in the flame and powdred with salt and vinegar: some cast downe headlong from the toppe of mountaines: some hauing their flesh scrypt with shels, and many such like torments; so as though it may seeme Homo homini Deus, man to be to man a God, that is, a helper and defender where there is loue, yet in the difference of religion it prouoeth Homo homini lupus, that man becommeth a destroier of man. Hereupon doth Christ (foreseeing the affections of tyrants, Mat. 10. 16.) tell the Apostles in plaine termes, that he sent them as sheepe among wolues; and presently expounds himselfe, ver. 17. Beware of men, whose mouths be as open sepulchers to deuour vs, and who are in nothing so wily and watchfull, as in setting snares to intrap vs.

We are killed all the day. Wherein obserue, that it is a porti- on ordained to euery Christian, not to bee exempt from any calamitie common with the wicked, but to bee subiect to all these and to farre greater, because iudgement must begin at the house of God; and this iudgement is to last not for a time or an- houre, but euen to continue all the day, giuing no truce nor intermission: but as one waue beateth vpon another, and one day followeth another, so must we learne Patiendo pati, by suffer- ing how to suffer; and the end of the former trouble must be esteemed to be the beginner of another, as Christ himselfe saith, Take vp my crosse daily. Neither yet must we thinke that we are called to any hard condition; or that the calling of a Christian is any vncomely calling, for wee haue Christ as a glasse before vs, who who walked as it were continually vpon the ice, and was not one moment free from some subiection and basenesse in the outward man.

Secondly, by sheepe appointed to the slaughter, learne that a Christian must neuer thinke hee hath suffered enough, till hee hath suffered death: for it is not said, appointed to the whip, or to the racke, or to the prison, but euen to death, which is the thing our flesh most abhorreth. For this must be the Christian mans account, not to bee cast and caskered out of this warfare till death hath perfected our sanctification: as Hebr. 10. 33. the Apostle reckoning vp the afflictions of the godly, as partly while they were made a gazing stocke by reproches, partly while they suffered with other in compassion, mourning to see them distressed, partly while they did beare the losse of goods cheerefully, yet as if this were but a small matter, and as if yet they were farre short in their reckoning, chap. 12. 4. hee telleth them they haue not yet resisted vnto blood, nor suffered death; as if the number of death madeth their account perfect, and that they must still be casting till they come to death, for hauing fought so many battels as went before in their sufferance of so many inferior blowes, and as it were weake afflictions, they must not cast away their confidence till they haue fought the last skirmish, and haue ouercome death by dying.

Thirdly learne, that by the Lords decree we are not all appointed to be offered vp in sacrifice, but by the malice of the enimie we are all destinated and set forth for such a bloody end, though the Lord in prouidence do oftentimes rescue vs euen out of the iawes of the Lion: howbeit God appoineth all to some, I doe not say affliction, but persecution, for in the scripture we reade of a double martyrdome, Cruentum and Incruentum, a bloody martyrdome, and a martyrdome without blood, as when we suffer any shame, imprisonment, losse of goods, &c. And this appeareth in two of the first enimies of Gods Church, Ismael and Esau; the first scoffed at his brother Isaac, the other out of the hidden malice of his heart could say, If my Father die, I will haue Iacobs life: So as though wee escape blood, yet wee must witness the truth of Christ by bearing at least

Gen. 27. 9.

Gen. 27. 41.

the sting of the tongue, from which neuer any of vs was exempted. And though Ismael said not so much as Esau, yet assure thy selfe they haue both the same minde, for sometime the butcher wanteth his knife; and therefore settle thy heart, and carry death as a seale vpon thy finger. Heauen is compared to a treasure hidden, Mat. 13.44. and woorth more then all thy substance; meaning thereby, that a man should not refuse to bestow any thing vpon the field of Grace, that is, the Gospell, that thereby hee may enter into the kingdome of glorie. And though the Lord calleth not all foorth to this sharpest combat, to be illaine in the field, yet must euery man carrie this Christian resolution, that if he be called, not to prize or esteeme any thing; but to leaue all, and with patience and cheerefulnesse to kisse and to embrace the sword of death.

We are more then conquerors, &c. Heere followeth the comfortable issue, and as it were the gate of ioy set open vnto vs in our extremest miseries, namely, that in all things we ouercome: wherein obserue two points: first, the victorie it selfe: secondly, the meanes whereby we obtaine it, that it is not by the naturall strength of flesh and bloud, but through the power of Christ that loued vs.

For the first, we are more then conquerors two waies: first, in respect of our selues: secondly, in respect of others. We are conquerors in respect of our selues three waies: first, in the afflictions that goe before death: secondly, in the very suffering of death: thirdly, that sometimes there comes a speciall deliuerance, and the wicked are made a ransome for the godly. The first of these appeareth, in that wee chuse to suffer rather then to admit any ill condition in seruing God: as, rather then the three children would stoupe to the worship of the beast, they embraced the fire, Daniel, 3.22.23. And though through the sharpnesse of the trouble osteptimes the outward man trembleth and decaieih, yet are wee strengthened and renewed in our soules and consciences, that wee are not carefull to answer the greatest tyrant vpon the earth, that that God whom wee serue is able and will deliuen vs from the sting and poison of any torment; torment; yea though sometimes the Lord strangely handleth them that suffer for the Gospel, so, as their soule is troubled and cannot apprehend any comfort, but euen feele the iustice of God vpon them for their sinnes, and in the instant of their dissolution they seeme to be void of inward heauenly power to strengthen them, and do find a heauy vnaptnesse and vnapt heauinesse to sustaine the triall; and that though they haue poured soorth their soule with teares vnto the Lord, yet they cannot finde that resolution in any comfort to take the cup, but as it is held to their mouths; yet at the last being for the cause of Christ, they may be sure he will send his spirit to quicken them, and dispatch such a comforter from heauen, as they shall find euen in the flames such alacritie and delight, as if they had rather receiued a pardon from death then any power to bee thrust on to death: for the Lord will comfort the abiect, bring light out of darknesse, and as 2. Cor. 4. 11. make the life of Iesus manifest in our flesh, by our being deliuered vp to death for his sake.

2.

For the second, that we are more then conquerers in death, we haue many examples in the booke of Martyrs and elsewhere, how some haue protested they haue sate in the flame as easilie as in a downe bed: some haue lifted vp their hands when they were halfe consumed, verifying this speech in Esay 43. 2. Neither shall the waters drowne thee, nor the fire burne thee, nor the flame kindle vpon thee: meaning thereby, that the Lord shall make the most bitter drinke pleasant to them whom he hath called by his name:

3.

Thirdly, wee are more then conquerers in our owne person, by the Lords sending of some strange deliuerance, and by seeing our enemies consumed in our stead; and this is two-fold, either extraordinarily immediate, or extraordinarily mediate. The first appeareth Act. 5. 19. Peter cast into prison had the dore opened by the Lords messenger, & was brought forth in despite of his enemies: the same Peter was whipt, and being (Act. 12. 6.) a sheepe appointed to the slaughter, lying fast bound between two souldiers, & the prison doores being watched, the Angel of God smote him on the side, and his chaines fell off, & he was brought through through the first and second watch, and the praier of the church did disappoint the purpose of the tyrant, whose hands were not yet washed from the blood of Iames, whom he had killed with the sword. So vehement also were the praier of Paul and Silas, (Act. 16. 25.) that an earthquake shook the foundation of the prison, and loosed the bands of all the prisoners, and the Lord put it into the hearts of authority, to send Paul soorth in peace; and when hee would not, standing vpon the law of the Romanes, (Act. 22. 25.) that no man should be scourged before he was condemned, his enemies were glad to intreate him to goe. Of which examples wee must make this vse, that if the Lord saw it good for his glory, he could doe as much now: for nither is his power abated, nor his loue diminished. For in that he fed the Israelites with Manna, he shewed that he can make a man live without bread: in that he blessed the small quantity of meale which the widow of Sarepta had, he sheweth that our life standeth not in abundance: and he that made the three children dance in the fierie fornace, when they that put them in were killed with the heat of the ouens mouth, he can and will cheare vs, and make glad our hearts in the vale of death. For it is he that strengtheneth Dauid to ouerthrow Goliath, and his power shall support vs to ouercome death. Now for the deliuerance which is extraordinary mediate, wee haue example in Saul, (Act. 9. 25.) who by the Disciples was put thorow the wall, and let downe by a rope in a basket, when the Iewes watched the gates to kill him. Wee haue likewise our owne Prince Queene Elizabeth, on whom many waters did beat, and ouer whose head many flouds haue runne; and when euen in her sisters time she was as a lambe to be led soorth to the shambles, it pleased the Lord to snatch her out of the mouthes of the mighty, and to set her seate farre aboue their reach, and then were they sorry, they had cut downe the branches and suffered the stocke to stand.

Secondly, we are more then conquerors in these afflictions in respect of other: and that two waies, either in the conuersion of others, in seeing the Lords power in the midst of our perplexities: or else in the confirmation of others, they being emboldened

dened by the Lords hand on vs, to assure themselues he will not leaue them destitute in the like extremitie. Examples of the first wee haue, Act. 4. 32. and 5. 14. how in the heat of the disciples afflictions, and when it was counted little better then insurrection to flocke to sermons, the people sold their possessions to buy a good conscience, and to know the fruit of Christ his death: and how the number of them that beleeued grew more and more; and how out of the blood of that constant Martyr Stephen there sprung vp daily fresh and new Christians. Examples of the latter wee may see in the testimony of Paul, who said his bonds were famous in the Court of the Emperour, and by that others were taught to preach more boldly: and 2. Tim. 2. 10. I suffer as an euill doer, euen vnto bonds, but the word of God is not bound, therefore I suffer for the elects sake: meaning thereby, that his example of captiuity and patience did sundry waies confirm the Church in the hope of a better life. For this is the property of the Gospell, to grow highest where it is troden downe, and to spring fastest where it is killed. For when Ahab and Iezabel thought they had not left a Prophet of the Lord, but had destroyed all but Eliab, and him had they sought for as with a candle: then had Obadiab hid an hundred of the Lords Prophets in a caue, (1. King. 18. 4.) that neuer bowed their knees to Baal. For the Lord doth but laugh at the policies of the wicked, and he in his time will discouer their shame to their faces, and lift vp the heads of his seruants aboue all the tyrants of the world.

Phillip. 1. 13.

Iob. 5. 22.

2. Now for the meanes whereby wee obtaine this victory, obserue, that it is by a spirituall power of the holy Ghost enabling vs to so great a worke: for such is our ambition to be great men, as if Demas find no preferment by the Gospell, (2. Tim. 4. 10.) he will nothing esteeme of Pauls company. Such is our desire to be rich, as if we gaine by our seruants that worke with the Diuell, we had rather they should be possessed still, then we would lose our gaine: which we may see, Act. 16. 19. where Paul and Silas were haled before the Magistrates, onely for casting out the spirit of diuination in the maide that got her masters great aduantage by diuining. Yea such and so vehement are our natu-

rall and earthly affections, and so great our greedinesse to enioy the pleasures of our life, that the mariage of a wife, or the triall of a yoke of oxen shall keepe vs from Christ, Mat. 22. 5. Luk. 14. 19. 20. So that it must be a greater power then the faculty or abilitie of a man: for if naturally we are not able to abide the snuffe of a candle, much lesse to burne in the fire. Why then so many examples as we see patiently induring death for the testimony of the truth of God, so many testimonies haue wee of the Lords power to enable weake vessels to hold such scalding liquor. For many through presumption of their owne strength haue apostated; and Peter was well neare it, notwithstanding his bragge, that he would not leaue his master to the death, if Christ his eie had not pierced his soule to repentance for his former denials, Luk. 22. 61. Dauid (1. Sam. 17. 45. 46.) confesseth, that it was not in his strength to contend with Goliath, neither did he come to him with sword or with speare, but in the name of the God of Israell, who would close him into his hands. And this in truth must be our paterne, and our praise in these temptations and afflictions, to flie out of our selues, and to run to the wings of the Lord Iesus, whose grace onely is sufficient for vs, and whose power is made perfect in our weakenesse: for where the flesh carieth a confidence in it selfe, there is no roome for the spirit; for the spirit helpeth onely those that be infirme, and Christ is onely a Physition for a sicke sinner. Now as wee are conquerors through him that loueth vs, so let vs labour that Christ may thinke his loue well bestowed, his bloud well spent, and his victory for vs well gained, by our loue of him againe, that it may be as hot as the flame, that whole floods of waters may not quench

it; and so strong, as neither terrors in persecution, nor pleasures in life, nor the anguish of death may make vs forsake our ankor Christ Iesus, but that wee may hold our confidence in a hope sure

ROM.

R O M. chap. 8. vers. 38, 39.

38. For I am perswaded, that neither death, nor life, nor Angels, nor Principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come,
39. Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate vs from the loue of God, which is in Christ Iesus our Lord.

Eere the Apottle setteth downe a conclusion full of all consolation, proceeding from a diuine and heauenly resolution, and christian magnanimity, extended and offered by the Apottle in the person of all the faithfull : wherein he doth courageously challenge, and exultantly triumph ouer all creatures, being assured that nothing that euer was created could finally separate him from that loue wherewith the Lord had loued him in Christ. This conclusion standeth on two parts : first, in the enumeration or reckoning vp of some particulars , which if any thing could seuer vs from the Lord , it were likely to bee some of these he named. Secondly, because the Apottle could not insist in the induction or bringing in of particulars, he vseth a generall comprehension of all things, that nothing might bee excepted ; in these words, (nor any other creature :) the things reckoned vp are nine, which be either one contrary to another, or else diuers from other.

For death, that cannot separate vs from God : for though it be most terrible to the flesh to see his prefixed end, yet this is so farre vnable to seuer vs, as nothing hath greater power to ioyne vs to God, through the death of him that ouercame death :
which

which appeareth likewise by this, that euen the wicked though they loue not to liue the life of the righteous, because it is tedious through afflictions, yet they can wish with Balaam, Num. 23. vers. 10. that their last end may be like theirs, who alwaies resigne vp their soules in rest vnto the Lord. And though some wicked may make a peaceable end, whereby Satan hardeneth others to thinke they are beloued of the Lord, because they depart like the light of a candle, and some of the elect die troublesomely, whereby Satan maketh his instruments to condemne the generation of the godly: yet in their inward man, they doe not onely patiently expect, but deeply sigh for the day of their dissolution, that being vnclouthed of this corruption, they may be crowned with the Lords glorie: for they that haue receiued the earnest of the spirit, the pledge of their inheritance, and the first fruits of the Lords loue, and vnto whom he hath sealed and assured pardon of their sinne, they do know they haue cause to expect the reuelation and shew of their happinesse, being heere tossed with sundrie waues of perplexed miseries, and being sure there to arriue from a tempestuous voyage to a most blessed hauen. And it is ioyfull to a Christian to bee deliuered from this careful life, wherein euery day is the messenger of fresh sorrowes, and wherein hee findeth his corruption so burdensome: so as though Paul was taken vp into the third heauen, yet hee cried, Who shall deliuer me from this body of sinne? For heere wee know our selues to be scarce worth the ground we go on, we are so worne with care, and so ground with affliction: but then we shall enter into the presence of God, and dwell with him perpetually. To be short, many haue beene so rauished with this ioy, which wee see but as in a mist, as they haue not onely giuen vp themselues to naturall death, but euen suffered violent death, embracing it as chearefully as the souldier that comes (after his valour shewed) to be made a knight, or as the King that goeth to his Coronation: for then shall we haue not Reedes but Palmes in our hands to shew our triumph, and bee crowned not with Thornes, but with Glory, euen the glory that Christ had from the beginning.

2. Cor. 12. 4.

Now for life, that cannot doe it; for there is no temptation

Phil. 1. 20.

in this life, neither excessive pleasure, nor abundant profit, nor magnificent state that a righteous soule will not forgoe, rather then forsake the righteousnesse of Christ, or their owne peace of conscience; yea even with Moses, rather then to lose the least light of the Lords countenance, we will refuse to be made glorious by our birth, and chuse to suffer affliction with the children of God: Heb. 11. 24. and with Paul (Phil. 3. 8.) to esteeme all things but as the excrement of a dog in comparison of the security and confidence we haue of the Lords loue towards vs, so as we are Christs in our life also. And though we doe desire to see the face and glory of the Lord, yet as Saint Paul speaketh, whether we be in our body at home absent, or abroad in our separation, our soules still wait vpon the Lord: for, for this cause, as Rom. 14. 8. 9. Christ died, that whether we liue or die we might be the Lords.

Now for Angels, Powers, or Principalities: by the names themselves may be vnderstood as well the good Angels as the bad: wherof Paul speaketh 1. Cor. 6. 3. Know ye not that we shall iudge the Angels? that is, the reprobate spirits, for these be executioners of the Lords will, though not by willing and loyall obedience, as well as the other: and though both these being seuerall, haue in the scripture the same titles giuen them: as the good are called (Eph. 1. 21.) Powers and Principalities, and so are the bad called by the same name, Colos. 2. 15. where Christ is said to spoile and to traduce Principalities & Powers to open shame: and Eph. 6. 12. We must fight against Principalities and Powers: yet in this place by Angels are to bee taken the good; and by Powers and Principalities the diuels. The reason is, because heere the Apottle maketh an opposition betweene contraries; and also because in other places of the scripture where these same words are vsed to expresse the good Angels, there is alwaies more added to their stile, as Eph. 1. 20. Thrones and Dominations are mentioned besides the other. But it may be said, will the Angels that are the messengers of God attempt any such thing as to part God and vs? No, it is impossible, how focuer the Apottle speaketh excesssiuely from the exultation & ioy of his spirit; for he reasons ad impossibilia, as if he should say, if Angels, which bec.

be the most excellent and most powerfull creatures, could attempt to separate vs from the loue of God, yet they could not; for Christ which is the head of Angels hath ioyned vs to his Father; and therefore much lesse any inferiour thing can doe it. After this maner this Apostle speaketh Galat. 1. 8. If an Angel from heauen should preach any other doctrine (which is impossible) let him be accursed. So Rom. 9. 3. Paul wisheth himselfe accursed to redeeme the Iewes: and Moses praied to be rased out of the booke of life rather than the Israelites should perish: which was not possible that the decree of God should bee frustrate. But such was the vehemencie of their affection if the Lord would be intreated at their praiers. And it was necessary for the Apostle heere to name Angels, because they be the mightiest creatures: and if they cannot part the Lord and vs, much lesse can diuels; for the worst they can doe is but to buffet vs, whereby our infirmities shall be healed: and as Christ said to Peter, Satan desireth to winnow thee like wheat, but I haue praied that thy faith may not faile. This also appeareth by that in the Reuelation 12. 4. that the red Dragon cannot doe it, though with his taile hee can draw starres from heauen, that is, discover the hypocrisy of some great professors: for first, he waited vpon the woman as she was with child: secondly, in her deliuerie: thirdly, when the child was brought forth; to see first if he could haue destroyed the Church of the Iewes; and if not, the Church of the Gentiles; and if not, the head of the Church the Lord Iesus; or if not, the whole bodie of the faithfull; or if not, some one of the faithfull: but he was cast downe (saith the text) that is, he was abased in his pride, and sought to aduance and lift vp himselfe againe to heauen by destroying the woman and her seede, that is, by withstanding the saluation of the elect. This Dragon hath especially two instruments: first, the great Beast, that is, the Romane Empire, where was a name of blasphemie written in his fore-head, which though it could with Eliab call fire from heauen, yet could it neuer consume the faith of Gods chosen, nor ever draw one soule from Christ. The second is the Romane Hierarchie, raised out of the ruines of the former, which though it could make the heauens brasse that it should not raine, or the earth iron that it should yeeld no fruit, yet could it neuer touch any that was written in the booke of the Lambe: for where hee sealeth none can open, and where he openeth none can shut: and as it is said in the former place, They which are bought from the earth sing in great troupes a new song with the Lord Iesus.

2. Cor. 12. 5.

Ionah. 2. 1.

Iob. 13. 15.

For the other, Neither things present, that may be knowne, nor things to come, which may seeme to be doubtfull, can make any separation of God from vs; for the elect are sure the Lords grace shall assist them to the end: neither height of heauen, as Paul that was carried vp on high did not yet presume; nor the depth of hell, as Ionas being in the belly of the Whale did not yet dispaire, but had his praiers passing to heauen thorow the fishes mouth: & Iob in the patiēce & resolution of his spirit could say, O Lord though thou kill me yet will I loue thee: for hope, which is the sure anchor of the soule, maketh vs to enter with confidēce within the lists of the Lords presence, and there staiech vs, for the Lord doth know vs for his owne in his beloued Sonne.

Hence learne, that a man may be assured he shall be saued; for this place is without exception. Yet some say, this was a speciall reuelation Paul had of his owne saluation; which is most iniurious to the whole text: for though he saith, I am perswaded, as speaking of himselfe, yet in the matter of the perswasion he ioyneth all the faithfull, as that nothing can separate vs, speaking generally of all, which is proued also by many things and speeches before, as verse 23. Wee grone for the redemption of our body. Did Paul onely grone? And verse 35. Who shall separate vs from the loue of God? Was Paul only beloued? And verse 36. Wee are killed all the day, and we are more than conquerers; including all the faithfull.

Now that a man may know hee shall bee saued, it is proued thus: A man may know certainly whether hee bee a Christian, and truly ingrafted into Christ, proued by the first of Iohn 4. 13. By this we may know we are in Christ, because we haue his spirit. And to prouue this (2. Cor. 13. 5.) Paul speaketh plainly: Doe yee not know unlesse ye haue the spirit of Christ, ye be reprobates? Againe, a man may know whether he be led by this spirit

by the fruits of this life; and being led by the spirit he is sure he is the sonne of God; and being his son, vndoubtedly an heire of his kingdome. Some will say, he may know it for the present, but no man can tell what hee shall be, for let him that standeth take heed he fal not. But know this, it is no perswasion vnlesse it reach & extend to that that is to come: as Paul saith heere, he was perswaded, neither things present, nor things to come could remouie him from his hold he had in Christ; and we may assure our selues, that he that hath begun this worke in vs, if we walke before him in feare and trembling, will finish it to his glory and our comfort.

Secondly, obserue, that all haue not the same measure of this resolution: for there is a diuers measure of this, according to the diuers degrees of faith and age of a Christian: for some are such of whom the Church doth as yet trauell of and are not deliuered: some are new borne to be fed with milke, others are growne more in faith, and come vnto a riper age of Christ: as the holy Ghost saith; The righteousnesse of the Gospel is revealed from faith to faith; alluding to the Sunne, that riseth not in his excellencie, but sendeth forth a dawning before it appeareth; and then a meane light before it commeth to the height of his brightness: euen so there is a measure in the feeling of this perswasion; but yet so, as being but a graine, a sparkle, or a droppe of true faith, it doth lay hold vpon the Lord Iesus, and assure vs that we shall haue eternall life through Christ: euen as none were healed, but they that beheld the Serpent, though some saw it more clearly then others. And it is not our faith properly that saucth vs, no more then it is the hand that nourisheth: but as by the hand though it be weake we receiue nourishment, so by faith, as by an instrument not alwaies of like strength, wee feed vpon Christ and all his benefits. Why, but this resolution heere spoken of, not onely the weake, but they that be strong feele not: for we see by experience, that none haue such securitie, but they sometimes despaire through their owne feeling and priuitie of their sinnes, which present themselves, so many and so deformed; and therefore it is so terrible, as they sometimes doubt of Gods loue and kindnesse: and so vehement is the perturbation of their spirits rising from their owne vnworthinesse, as they seeme forfaken of the Lord, and much difquieted in themfelues: therefore though Paul had this perfuafion, yet euery man cannot haue it. To this answer; It is not faid, there muft be any fuch fecuritie, as that there muft be no doubting; or fuch tranquillity, as there muft bee no trouble: for Dauid feemed to doubt whether there was a God or no, becaufe he faw the wicked flourish fo proudly. And it is no commendation of faith to be free from doubting of Gods mercy in fome meafure; for fometimes there are throwne againft vs fuch fierie darts to the difmaying of our poore confciences, as hardly can our buckler of faith drine them backe, yea the foule of a man may euen be aftonifhed vnder the Lords heauie hand, and yet there may be true faith: for though it be shaken, it cannot be ouerthrowne; though it be oppreffed, it cannot be left in diftrefle: and though our faith may be ftrongly affaulted, and foiled, and wounded with the terrors of the Lord, fo as his arrowes fhall euen pierce our fouls, and the venime thereof drinke vp our bloud, and that wee fhall thinke the Lord hath shut his compaffion from vs, yet fhall wee at the laft be raifed vp to behold the Sun-beames of the Lords loue: for the praife of faith is to ouercome by fighting, that the power of the Lord may be made ftrong by our infirmity and weakneffe.

ROM. chap. 8. vers. 19. 20. 21. 22.

- 19 For the feruent desire of the creature waiteth when the fons of God fhall be reuealed.
- 20 Because the creature is fubieft to vanitie, not of it owne will, but by reafon of him which hath subdued it vnder hope:
- 21 Because the creature alfo fhall bee deliuered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious libertie of the fomes of God.
- 22 For we know that euery creature groweth with vs alfo, and trauelleth in paine together vnto this prefent.

The

He Apostle having formerly taught vs what way the Lord had allotted for vs to walke to heauen, to wit, by the same line that Christ his naturall Sonne ascended, that is, through a crowne of thornes, and a sea of afflictions, from the ladder to the crosse, and from the fold to the shambles, and that heere with we ought not to be dismayed, but rather inwardly comforted: First, because heere by Christ and we draw together in one yoke: Secondly, because by this subiection in infirmitie there is wrought in vs a conformitie with him in glory: Thirdly, because this glory is of that kinde that the least taste of it doth farre surmount the extremitie of all our miseries in this life. Yet as if he would strike the naile deeper, and fill the cup of comfort fuller, he sheweth in these verses; First, that a change and confusion shall come when the face and beautie of these inferior things shall be scraped off. Secondly, that we that are the selected of God, shall be freed & exempted from the feare and sense of this horrible deformation of the world. Thirdly, that it is certaine this spoile and consumption of the earth with the works therein shall come, for we are taught so much by the insensible creatures that wait for it themselves, nature informing them that their subiection to vanitie shall have an end: for as they were at first created good, and became accursed for the sinne of man, so shall they at length be restored with vs that are elect through the remoouing of that curse for sinne, in the seede of the woman, which is Christ.

First, in that it is said, there is a seruent desire in the dumbe and senselesse creatures; we are not to vnderstand that there is heere in a wil and an affection, or a desire, or a hope, or any sence or vnderstanding in the brute beasts, or other insensible creature, as the Heauen, Earth, Sunne, Moone, &c. for that which they haue is onely through the instruction and instinct of nature; but this is onely spoken in way of comparison, by a figuratiue or borrowed speech, speaking that of the dumbe creature, which is onely to be applied to vs of vnderstanding: for if there be such a seruent desire, a longing, a sighing, and a mourning in these senselesse creatures.

the dumb creature has, such a seruent desire, etc.

creatures for our deliuerance from this bondage of corruption, vnder which wee are now held : how much greater then should our desires, willes, and affections, our sighings and mournings be, who are sensibly and feelingly to be made partakers of this heavenly glorie? and to this end is their seruencie brought in, to stirre vs vp to the like or greater, as a thing more neerely concerning vs. The like phrase of Scripture attributing life, sense, desire and affections to dumbe creatures is vsed in many places ; as Psal. 114.3.4. When Israel went out of Egypt, the sea saw it and fled, Jordan was driuen backe, the mountains leaped like rams, and the hilles like lambes : and vers.7. The earth trembled at the presence of the Lord : the Prophet bringing in the creatures magnifying and reioicing at the maiestie of God in the destruction of his enemies, and at his mercy in the deliuerie of his Saints : that since these senselesse creatures in their obedience in their kinde seemed to see this glorie and triumph at it, much more should the people themselues that visibly saw it, and sensibly felt it, be rauished as it were with ioy at the so powerful presence of the Lord, in making the sea as the drie land for their escape and rescue from the sword of their enemies. After the like manner doth David, Psa. 148.2.5. bring in the creatures in course, as they were created, praising the Lord in their kinde, not in any forme or phrase of speech, but the beautie of the Lord appearing in them by their obedience in obseruing that course wherein they are set, heereby inuiring and stirring vs vp that haue sense, feeling, reason and vnderstanding to be more mindfull in our praise and thankesgiuing to God, who are filled with greater plenty, and haue a more spirituall and diuine beautie shining in vs than they haue. So Esay the Prophet, chap. 14.7.8.9. in derision of the tyrannie of the king of Babel, bringeth in the whole world, singing for ioy, the firre trees and the Cedars of Lebanon reioicing, and hell it selfe moued at the death of so gold-thirsty an oppressor as he was, as if it feared lest hee would trouble the dead as he did the liuing ; teaching vs by this, that if the insensible creatures doe seeme to spread their boughes, and bud forth their flower at the destruction of tyrants, as bringing rest and quiet to them ; how much more should we be affected at it, that taste the smart of their crueltie, and are kept but as a spoile and pray to satiate their bloudie and butcherly desires. So Ionah 3. 7. sackcloth must be put vpon the beasts, and they must be kept from feeding, as if they sorrowed for the affliction hung ouer their land; not that they had sinned or could haue any affection of griefe in them, but by this that the people might the more acknowledge their vnworthinesse, as deseruing iustly not onely to be plagued of God in their persons, but euen to be deprived of the vse and benefit of the creatures whereby their present life was maintained. And thus are the creatures brought in heere by the Apostle, as inwardly smitten with sorrow for the sin of man, and for his pollutions on the earth, and longing after the advancement of the sonnes of God to glory, to set the sharper edge on vs, who are to taste as it were the full cup of the Lords bountie and glorie in the highest heauen, who will thus exalt the horne of his Saints.

Further vnderstand, that by Creature in this place is meant all the creatures in the world, as appeareth, vers. 22. where it is said; that euery creature, comprehending all, doth grone with vs; howbeit there are two sorts of creatures heere exempted. namely Angels and men, both elect and reprobate: for the Angels elect, they wait not, as groning vnder vanity, (otherwise they desire it) for the reuelation or triumph of Gods Saints in heauen, because they alwaies stand before the Lord & behold his glory, Mat. 18. 10. It is true indeed as Lu. 15. 10. That the Angels of God reioice at the conuersion of a sinner, because more glory is brought to God by his saluation; but they need not this affection of groning or sighing heere spoken of, because they are in paradise & before the throne of God already. Neither can it be meant of the reprobate Angels the brood of the diuell; for first they wait not for vs, vnlesse it be, as Reu. 12. 4. the dragon waited for the deliuerie of the woman to destroy vs; neither doe they waite vpon vs, vnlesse it be, as Matth. 4. 1. the tempter waited vpon Christ in the wildernesse. Secondly, they waite not for themselves, for they feare nothing so much as the perfecting of Gods elect in number, because that is the time of the perfection of their torment, at which they tremble, Iames 2. 19. the diuell euer thinking that Christ hasteneth too fast and commeth before his time to torture him. Now for men, it is not ment, in this verse, of the elect, as appeareth by the words themselues, for the waiting is not by them but by the creatures for them, till they shall be restored to their libertie in glorie; and so much is plainly set forth vers. 23. And not onely the creature, but wee also that haue the first fruits of the spirit do sigh, &c. bringing the elect, & their waiting, in by themselues, & not folding them vp in the general word creature. Concerning the reprobate, it is not meant of them, for they are but of two sorts, the one such as Peter speaketh of, 2. Pet. 3. 3. 4. There shall come mockers which shall walke after their lusts, and say, where is the promise of his comming? thinking because the Lord hath beene patient so long; therefore the day of iudgement is but a tale to keepe men in awe: So as these men cannot waite for Christs comming since they denie it, and deride it: the other are such as know there shall be a day of reckoning, but feare it and put it farre off, as loth to see it as their father the diuell, because then they shall receaue according to that they haue wrought in the flesh, which at that time shall turne to their sighing and groaning, because they denied to themselues sorrow and grieve in the flesh. So as (all) creatures (but men and Angels) are meant heere; where we see the concordance and agreement as it were of the whole frame of heauen and earth, not iarring but ioining in one, that they might be at the end of their labour and vanitie by their dissolution and change of their subiection into immortalitie.

Where it is said, When the sonnes of God shall be reuealed: we may vnderstand it fve waies: First, that it is spoken in this sence; that all the sonnes of God are not yet reuealed; for part are in heauen, part in earth, and part of them not yet borne. Secondly, touching the sonnes of God on earth, they are not all yet reuealed, in regard that the Lord calleth daily, and maketh as it were a fresh addition to his church by the power of his word, as he did in the Apostles time; Peter by one sermon Act. 2. 41. conuerting three thousand soules to Christ. Thirdly, they are not all yet reuealed on earth, because the wicked cannot discern them, for as Christ was visible heere with vs, yet was not knowne.

known to the Scribes and Pharisees, their eies through ignorance and malice being so shut, as they could not see him; euen so, though the members of Christ are visible in themselves, yet to the malicious and vngodly they are invisible, because they haue not the eies of faith to spie them out. Fourthly, the sonnes of God here on earth, are not yet reuealed to the children of God; for Eliu 1. King. 19. 14. 18. thought there had bene none left but himselfe to serue God, when the Lord vnknown to him had referued seuen thousand that had not bowed their knees to Baal. Fifthly, there are many hypocrites among vs, in which respect the sonnes of God on earth are not yet reuealed, but at the latter day, when the Angell shall come to make a separation, then shall the fish be known from the frogges; the sheepe from the goats; and the sincere professor from the dissembler; for then there shall be two in one bedde, the one receaued, the other refused, who before were so linked in fellowship, as it was vndiscernable that in their deaths they should haue such severall ends. Howbeit the better sense for these words, When the sonnes of God shall be reuealed; is this: When the sonnes of God shall be receaued vp to glory; for then shall they know as they be known, and then shall the restitution come when the sea and the graue shall yeeld vp all their dead, and all the creatures receaue as it were their first robes of puritie and goodnesse wherein they were created.

Now vers. 20. the Apostle setteth downe the reason why these insensible creatures doe thus waite for mans glorious libertie: because they themselves are subiect to vanitie; wherein wee are to consider two things: First, to what they are subiect: Secondly, by whom they are made subiect. That the creature is subiect, it is not to be stood vpon, because it is granted of all men; but this is no willing nor voluntarie subiection, but by force and constraint: for the horse must haue his rough rider, or else the snaffle will not hold him in; and the ox must haue his yoke on his necke, and his goad in his side, or else he will not draw well; and the mule as Dauid saith, Psal. 32. 9. must haue his mouth bound with the bitte and bridle lest hee come neere thee with his heele. Now that which the creature is subiect to, is heere saide to be, to vanitie, and vers. 21. to the bondage of corruption, that is, to a vanishing and fleeting estate, and they are said to be so in three respects: First, in respect they haue lost their first comelnesse and order, their first beautie and their first perfection in which they were created; for as there is great difference betweene that gold that hath bene tried seuen times in the fire, and that which is taken out of the veines of the earth mixt with other mettals; betweene that sword that is newly varnished, and that which hath line so long byas it is eaten through with rust; betweene the shining of the sunne in his brightnesse, & when it is eclipsed, or shineth in a gloomy day: so is there as great or greater difference betwixt the heauen and earth, & all the host therein which then were made for the furnishing of Gods house toward the entertainment of Adam his sonne in paradise, and the heauen and the earth which now are left vnto vs poisoned by the curse of God for Adams sinne with thornes and thistles, barrennesse, and vnholosome smels, that the very corruption in the aire killeth both

2 them & vs. Secondly, they are subiect to vanity in regard the wicked do enioy them, and the godly oftentimes abuse them; for the rust of the money which the vsurer hoordeth vp crieth in the cares of God because it is detained by the vniust owner; the gay apparell of the proud and ambitious do fret as it were themselves that they should hide the shame of them that are so shamelesse to snatch at the maiestie of God, & to shake his seate by their sinne; the wine which is swilled in by the drunkards doth boile as it were in wrath that it was pressed out of the grape to heate their stomacks that deserue only to be inflamed by the fire of hell; yea and euery morsell that falleth into the mouths of gluttons and wicked persons, the Sunne that shineth on the vniust, and the raine that lightheth vpon the fields of the oppressors, and all creatures else that come within their fingring are grieued, and doe wait with feruencie for the end of all flesh that they may no longer be forced to serue and sustaine the enemies of their maker; for the finnes of the wicked are so heauie and burdensome, and their abuse of the creatures so intollerable, that the earth groneth that it cannot swallow them vp as it did Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, Numb. 16. 32. or otherwise bee disburdened of them, though to her owne desolation, as it was in the vniuersall floud,

Gen. 7. 21. And againe if we that are sanctified vse them otherwise than they are ordained of God, as that the Sunne should giue vs light to wander out of the way of holinesse, that we should otherwise be clothed then as becommeth Christians, or any further refreshed by recreation then to make vs the fitter for the ranging of our selues within the compasse of our callings, heerein do we also make them subiect to vanitie, because wee should vse the world as if we vsed it not, with such moderation and comeliness, as not to snatch at any of them, or to profane them; for it is against the law of truce when we are at league with any either to surprisethem, or abuse them; and wee through Christ are at league and peace with all the creatures, as Iob saith Chap 5. 23. Thirdly, they are subiect to vanitie in regard those shal die which haue life in them, and the rest shall be cleane melted and dissolved; for this heauen and earth we now see shall heereafter be abolished as it is said, Esay 65. 17. I will create new heauens and a new earth, and the former shall not be remembred, nor come into mind: and Psal. 102. 25. 26. The foundation of the earth and the heauens are the works of thy hands (saith Dauid to the Lord) they shall perish, but thou shalt endure, they shall waxe old as doth a garment: and Reuel. 21. 1. I saw (saith Iohn) a new heauen and a new earth, for the first heauen and the first earth were passed away; which agreeth with that 2. Pet. 3. 10. The heauens shall passe away with a noise, and the elements shall melt with heate, and the earth with the works therein shall be burnt vp: and howsoeuer to our dimme and vnttable sight the heauen with the furniture thereof seemeth very glorious and beautifull, yet euery day they decay and diminish by little and little, and are already as an old worne and rotten garment ready to be cast off, and folded vp by the Lord.

Having thus seene the threefold subiection of the creatures, first, vnto diminution of their first estate, secondly, vnto profanation and pollution, thirdly, vnto dissolution, it now followeth to speake of the second thing pointed at before, namely, by whom the creatures are made thus subiect, and this is set downe in the end of Verf. 20. Not of their owne will, but by reason of him (that is God) which hath subdued it vnder hope, that they might heerein obey the Creators commaundement, who was pleased to signifie by their wauering and transitorie estate what the weight of his displeasure was for the sinne of man; yet was his mercie such as he would not subdue the world euerlastinglie vnder his curse, but gaue it hope that it should be restored. Where learne the great seueritie of Gods iustice and vengeance for the rebellion of our first parents, which bounded not it selfe within the body of man who was the sole offender, but extended it selfe as a cloud ouer all the inferior works of God which were made for man as his seruants. And this sheweth the offence to be very high that it drew so heinous a plague after it: for we must not in our vaine and peruerse thoughts against the wisdome of God lessen the sinne of Adam, as being but the eating of an apple, which was a small matter, since he eat so temperately as but to taste of it, and did neither spoile nor digge vp any of the trees of the garden, making God as a hard and niggardlie master, that will take so exact an account and strict reckning of his Steward for euery particular fruit committed to his charge; and heereupon will dare challenge God, as if his hand had beene too heauie vpon him. Obeware of these damnable and hellish conceits.

1 For first know thou, it is the marke of a reprobate to thinke with Cain, Gen. 4.13. thy punishment greater then thy offence; for herein though it be but in secret, doeth he secretly charge God with crueltie, who as Abraham saith, Gen. 18.25. being Iudge of all the world, can not but doe right. Againe, the libertie that

2 Adam had to fill himselfe of all the other trees, this one excepted, sheweth the admirable bountie of the Lord, that of all sorts of fruit he kept but one for himselfe, as of all the daies of the weeke he hath reserued but one in a speciall sort for his own vse, being herein more sparing to himselfe then to Adams or to vs, yet do we profane that most because it is none of ours, as Adam did thirst after that tree most, because by speciall commaundement it was forbidden by God, wherein his rebellion was much increased, that could not be thankfull for the store he had, but as if he should starue if he wanted this that was forbidden, must set the edge of his appetite vpon this, which was so forbidden; therefore hath God measured foorth an euen plague plague of perfection equall with his sinne of presumption, being punished not only in himselfe, but in his whole posteritie, with sorrow not only vpon his body, but with anguish and horror vpon his soule also, and not only with trouble and vexation in the beginning and entrance into this life, being naked, and not able to clothe himselfe; hungrie, and wanting strength to feede himselfe; weake, and not of power to arme himselfe, but also being followed and pursued of this vexation both in the continuance and in the end of his life, feeding sowerly vpon his labour, and dying lothsomely (if the curse were not remoued in Christ) and languishinglie vpon his bed, his paines heere being but the forerunners and remembrancers of weightier that are to come in the life to come. Nay, the Lord hath made his iustice like a hooke to runne thorough the nostrils of all his creatures, they being all accursed for our sakes; for as Iob saith, Chap. 5. 6. Misery commeth not forth of the dust, neither doth affliction spring out of the earth; meaning originally of it selfe, but by reason of the sinne of man: this being prefigured out vnto vs Leuit. 15. vnder the law: for when one had the Leprosy, the bed he lay on, the stoole he sat on, the basen he washt in was vncleane, the companie he kept, yea, he that laid his fingers on that the leper had touched was vncleane also: which setteth forth the spirituall leprosy of our soules through sinne, and that all the creatures whereon man laid his hand, or where on he slept, yea, or whereon hee lookt, were polluted and defiled through his vncleanness; so as whether wee looke about vs or about vs, to heauen or to earth, on the right hand or on the left, before vs, or behind vs, or round about vs, we can not but behold Gods great but yet his iust seueritie and vengeance for our transgression in Adam, who would not exempt the poore creatures from his stroke, which as we may say were in themselves harmelesse and innocent: and this well weighed, should make vs sigh and grone and mourne, and cry for our sinnes, that caused then so heauie a curse as hath euer since caused the world to weare as it were her mourning apparell, the earth euen for the sinnes committed in our flesh, hauing oft times her fruit ready ripened in her wombe, and yet wanteth strength to be deliuered, being either blasted in the blade, or not full eared for lacke of the latter raine: so that if our meditations were sanctified as they ought, as oft as we see a sheepe led to the slaughter, so oft should we thinke and acknowledge that we haue deserved death better then the silly beast, we being only in the sinne, and the creature subiect to this vanitie

 2 but through our corruption. And this must make vs take heed how we giue the raines to our affections, which will soone overrunne and corrupt our religion; for if God was so deeply displeased with sinne when it came alone into the world, how doe wee vrge and prouoke him to wrath in these dayes, that bring forth so many new inuented sinnes, that the dragon draweth not now with his taile the third part as he did Reuel. 12.4. but euen all the starres of heauen after him, there scarce being any found professor to be found that either poisoneth not his religion with an opinion of indifferencie, or minglerh it not with so much feare of man, as he is farre short of that zeale that the Lord requireth of them that be worshippers of him in spirit and in truth.

x Now if any be so audacious and bold, to aske why God was so sharp in smiting his creatures for the sinne of man? Answere first 1 with S. Paul Rom. 9. 20. O man, who art thou darrest plead with God, and call him to an account for his doings? his secrets are too high for thee, and his wayes past finding out! Secondly, if
 2 the creatures had not been punished with man, and that he by his particular sin had not procured a generall curse, then could not man in his weaknesse haue made any vse of the creatures in their innocencie, vnlesse they had fallen with him, for they had not been subiect to vanitie to haue been slaine and deuoured of 3 men if in themselues they had not been accursed. Thirdly, God did not punish them in respect of themselues, but in respect of vs, for we know the children are punished for the treason of their parents, not for any fault committed in their persons, but for that the parents haue so highly transgressed the Princes lawes; for by this he hath forfeited to the King what should haue descended to his children, and this we thinke no hard part in an earthly Prince vnlesse it be in the case of Abab, who tooke the eschete of Naboths vineyard by a false plotted accusation of a supposed blasphemie phemie against God and the King, 1. Kings 21. 13. then must we needs thinke that the King of heauen who cannot but give righteous iudgement, hath not dealt hardly in punishing and subduing the creatures to this subiection, Adam having in his creation the rule given vnto him ouer them as a father hath ouer his child; howbeit the Lord in this gaue no principall or set blow to them, but only stroke them as it were through the sides of man, that after that fall we might be punished euen oft times in the vse of them. If any aske againe why God should thus proceed in making our wound the wider by punishing vs in his creatures, since before the curse pronounced on them Gen. 3. 15. the Lord had pardoned the guiltinesse of the sinne by the promised seed of the woman? Answere. This was the wisdom of the Lord in two respects, first, in respect of his elect, secondly, in respect of the reprobate: for in regard of the elect they are not punishments for sinne, the blood of the womans seed hauing by vertue of Gods promise washed away the guilt of it; but because there is yet a remnant of corruption there being much filth, Iohn 13. 10. hanging on our sect, therefore they are as chastisements to increase the measure of our sanctification, and the labour in purging and keeping our selues cleane by repentance and a holy life; but now to the reprobate they are tokens and forerunners of Gods iustice, and of the sword of vengeance which they shall feele heereafter among the damned: so that when wee see the heauens made brasse aboue vs, and the earth yron beneath vs, the one withholding the raine, the other not yeelding her fruite but suffering it to die in her wombe, this is to vs but a chastisement for some passions vnsubdued, or for some sinnes vnrepented of; but it is a scourge and reuenge vpon the reprobate, mingling his reioycing with repining, and his store with grudging, that the want of that he seekes may be as a fretting canker in his soule to fill vp the greater measure of his sinne, verifying those speeches of Iob, Chap. 8. 14. His trust shall be as the house of the spider; and Chap. 11. 20. his hope shall be sorrow of mind. For as for them that loue the Lord he vseth foure speciall remedies to make them fit for heauen; first, his spirit to guide them; secondly, his word to instruct them; thirdly, his chastisements to reclaime them, them, fourthly, death it selfe to end them, and therefore when he correcteth vs in his creatures, it is to see whether he can recouer vs as it were by the sight of another beaten before vs, making them vnfruitfull that we might remember the want of our owne works, multering oft times the clouds together as if raine should fall, yet staying it in the brest of the aire, to put vs in mind of the hardnesse of our hearts, and of the drinesse of our eyes, that doe not weepe sufficientlie for our owne sinnes, nor abundantly for the sinnes and abominations of the land, it being as wee read, Ezech. 9. 4. an vndoubted marke of election, set by the finger of God in the foreheads of his Saints to mourne and crie for the corruption and crueltie that is in a citie.

x Againe, we hauing formerly nored the seueritie of Gods iustice against sinne that we might auoid it: so on the contrary, we are to obserue his exceeding rich mercy both to the elect and to the reprobate, that heereby we may be prouoked to follow him into what straites soeuer he shall cast vs: his mercy to his chosen appeareth in this, that though he hath laid such a curse vpon his creatures, whereas they may lay the curse on vs as the cause, and if they knew their owne strength would deuour vs, the Lord in loue to vs, and in power to them, hiding it from them, yet doth he force them to serue vs; the vse of them all being sanctified and restored to vs in Christ, and we being through him made owners and possessors of them; for as Adam after his fall being secluded from the tree of life, was thereby excluded from all the meanes that might maintaine life, so Christ hauing by our vnion with him brought vs againe into the paradise of God where that tree groweth, we are thereby endowed and enriched with all the creatures both in heauen and earth, these being for his sake waiters and attendants on vs, yea the very little ones that be elect as Christ saith, Matth. 18. 10. haue their Angels in heauen to defend them: and as David saith, Psal. 34. 8. The Angell of the Lord pitcheth round about them that feare him. Now his mercy to the reprobate is manifested in this, that hee by his especiall hand and Commandement, doth binde and restraine the creatures from rebelling against them; for the heauens would fall vpon the whoremonger if God by his power did did not chaine them vp: the Sunne that shineth would scorch and burne the Vsurer, if his force were not bridled by the finger of God; the waters from aboue would fall like a sea vpon the blasphemers, if they were not shut in by the patience of God; yea all lewd, profane, and wicked persons should be melted by the heat, stifled by the aire, swallowed by the earth, deuoured by the beasts, choaked by their bread, and euery creature would be auenged on them for the subiection brought vpon them; if God by his providence did not restraine them, for if they might haue their own wil, they would surely do it. Who is it saith God, Iob. 38.8. that hath shut vp the sea with doores, that her proud waues cannot passe ouer, but I? It is the Lord Iob. 39.12. that bindeth the Vnicorne with his band to labour in the furrow, else would he not serue vs nor tarrie by the cribbe: The strong horse whose neyng is fearefull, and swalloweth the ground for fiercenesse, would quickly turne his heele vpon the reprobate, if the Lord held him not by the hoofe: for wee see how euen the smallest creatures are armed to annoy them when God letteth the raines loose but a little; Pharaoh that entrenched himselfe and waged battaile against God, brauing it as if he had the host of heaven to command, was, Exod. 8.17. and 24. by lice and fleas, the most weake and contemptible creatures, so confounded, the earth being corrupt by their swarmes, that he calles for sacrifice to that God whom before he despised. Korah and his company, Num. 16. 32. for their rebellion against Moses the lieutenant of God, we see went downe quicke into the pit, the earth taking vpon her the reuenge of the Lords cause, and cleauing a sunder, did swallow them vp. The waters seeing the earth filled with crueltie, and all flesh to haue corrupted his way, ceased not til her waves, Genes. 7.18. waxed so strong, as it bore downe all but the family of Noah into the vniuersall flood. The fire seeing the sinne of Sodom to be exceeding grieuous, and the inhabitants thereof to be puffed vp with fulnesse of bread and idlenesse, could not stay it selfe, but fell from the clouds like raine, till it had ouerthrowne and burnt vp both the men and all that grew vpon the earth, Genes. 19.25. Lot, his wife & two daughters, vers. 15. 17. onely excepted. The lions Dan. 6. 22. 24. that were so reconciled to all vs creatures

we ready to puny
yo worldly.

Daniel through his faith in God, that he had no hurt found vpon him, being left to themselves, and not having their mouths shut by the Angell, were so enraged against his accusers, that they brake all their bones in peeces before they came to the ground of the denne. The Beares 2. King. 2. 24. when they heard but children (that might excute themselves by ignorance, or otherwise, by speaking as they were taught) mocking Elisha, the Lords Prophet, could hold no longer within the wood, but rushing foorth of the Forrest, tore in peeces two and fortie of them; heereby to teach euen babes to vse their toongs better. The wormes that otherwise are the weakeft and basest, and most scorned of men; yet clustered themselues together, and flew vpon the face of a vaine glorious king, and eat vp Herodin all his brauerie, Acts 12. 23. as disdainig to heare a wretch take that glorie to him, which was proper onely to God; after this sort would all the creatures rise vp against the vngodly, and spit their poison on them, for bringing such a curse vpon them, if the Lord did not bridle and restraints their willes, wherein he magnifieth his mercie greatly, that he will suffer the Sunne to shine vpon the vnjust, and maketh his patience famous through the earth, that he will suffer them so long that prouoke him so much, all which is done to bring them if it were possible to repentance.

Another thing wee note heere is, how long these creatures shall be in this subiection; and that is, vntill the sonnes of God shall be reuealed or taken vp to heauen, which vers. 21. is called a glorious libertie. Out of which obserue, that all these inferior creatures shall be restored to their first perfection wherein they were made, at the end and consummation of all things, when God shall be all in all; for as we, 1. Job. 3. 3: when Christ shall be made manifest, shall be like him, and see him as he is, which now we behold but as in a glasse, 1. Corinth. 13. 12. so is it certaine there shall be a new heauen, and a new earth after vs, and a restitution of the creatures to their auncient estate, as is said, Reuel. 21. 5. I make all things new; and 2. Pet. 3. 10. The earth with the works that are therein shall be burnt vp: out of which some gather, that this is not ment of materiall fire, but spoken figuratively, and in a borrowed phrase, of a consumption by fire, that is,

is not blowen as Iob calleth it, that is by the immediate breath and power of God. But I take it, it is meant of materiall fire, because the Apostle spake before of the drowning of the oid world, which was by materiall water. However it be, this is the meaning of the holy Ghost in that place, that as the gold is cast into the fire not to be consumed and burnt, but to be purified and refined, so as the substance remains, and nothing lost but the dross: even so shall it be with the heaven, the earth, and the creatures, they shall not vterly bee consumed and wasted with fire, but made the finer, because all corruption which was wrapped about them by the curse, shall be burnt out; for as the substance of our bodies shall remaine, and the change shall be onely to fire out the sin that hangeeth on vs, these base bodies being then to be made glorious; so the substance of al the creatures shall continue, onely this they shall be changed and turned into incorruption and libertie: and after they are thus refined, there is no question, but they shall endure; for as their presence is requisite for the more glorious triumph at the marriage of the lambe, Reuel. 21. 9. so shall it be likewise, for the continuall praise and thankgiuing that is to be made and had for the advancement of the bride, through the loue of that Lambe Christ Iesus. But now if any will aske in the pride of his conceit, why all these creatures shall then remaine, and how long, and to what vse; we say, these are endlesse questions, which breed strife and contentions rather then, as S. Paul saith, 1. Timot. 1. 4. godly edifying, which is by faith; such as that wherewith the Epicure troubled himselfe; to know what God did before he made the earth: which one well answereth; That he made hell for them that are so inquisitiue and curious: for, as Peter saith, 2. Pet. 3. 16. these are places of Scripture, which they that are vnstable and vlearned, peruert to their owne destruction. Let it suffice the Lord hath opened the fountaine so wide to vs, that we know, Ioh. 6. 51. we feeding on Christ, shall liue for ever. Therefore leauing these speculations and schoole points, let vs resort to the vse and profit S. Peter maketh of this generall dissolution; that since these things must perish, what maner persons ought we to be in holy conuersation and godlinesse; for what other treasure sooner we take to, it shall be

be consumed with our selues, holinesse and the feare of God hauing only the wings to flie thorow all fires, and to carrie vs to that heauen where dwelleth righteousnes; which Reuel. 21. is described to be of that beautie and statelinesse, and of that worth and comelinesse, as if the prince of the aire, Ephes. 2. 2. had not too much blinded the eyes of worldlings that they esteeme of faith but as of a fable, it were not possible but they should be rauished with expectation after it, there being at euery gate an Angell standing to let in Gods children, and to keepe out the fearefull and vnbeleeuers, adulterers, and vngodly persons.

Against heere learne, that the creatures waiting with vs, and hauing as it were the same affection we haue to be vnchained of corruption, and at the libertie of the sonnes of God, they belong only to vs that are his children, and are sanctified for our vse through prayer and thanksgiuing; for as through vs they fell, so through vs they shall be restored, and therefore wait both with vs and on vs in the meane time; and the wicked are but vsur-pers ouer them, snatching them against their willes, and abusing of them to their lusts, as the voluptuous Iewes did, who feeding vpon that was none of theirs, while the meate, Psal. 78. 31. was yet in their mouths, the wrath of the Lord, Numb. 11. 33. was kindled and consumed them: and euen so at length shall the wicked be chased out of the world, Iob. 18. 18. and for his theft in rauening vpon that is none of his, as God himselve saith, Iob 39.
13: he shall be shaken out of the corners of the earth; for that they enioy is none of theirs, but belongeth as truly to vs as a man accounteth that his owne which he getteth by his honest labour:
 and in that they abound more with them heere then Gods children to whom of right they appertaine, it is certaine the glory of Gods elect shall be the greater in heauen for the want of the creatures heere on earth, and the more the wicked enioy heere
 the greater shall their torments be in hell; for that, is Luk. 16. 25.
 the obiection of Abraham to stop the course of Dines his petition who was in torment; Remember, saith he, thou hadst thy pleasure in thy life, and therefore for thy pleasure thou art tormented in thy death: for God sendeth not all his plagues at once vpon the wicked, but suffereth him to haue his seeking, that he may

may be satiate with his owne way, and that desiring, Proverb. 12. 12. the net of euils, he may be heereafter tied and ensnared with the cords of his owne sinne.

Againe, obserue hence for the conclusion of this point, that all the creatures in heauen and earth do serue for the furthering of our saluation, and are readie and willing to do vs good, except the diuell, and those that shall be damned: for we know the red sea ranne backe and became dry land for the passage of the Israelites, Exod. 14. 21. The bitter waters Exod. 15. 25. were made sweet by the casting in of a tree, to stanch their thirst. The riuer Jordan returned backward, Psal. 114. 3. till the people of God were passed ouer. Water came forth of the stonie rocke Exod. 17. 6. that the Israelites might drinke according as they desired. The Sunne stood still in the midst of heauen, and hasted not to goe downe for a whole day, Iosh. 10. 13. at the prayer of Ioshua. At the prayer of Hezekiah, Esay 38. 8: the Sunne went 10. degrees backward contrary to the course of nature. The small quantity of meale & oyle which the widow of Zarephath had, through the word spoken by Eliab 1. Kings 17. 16. wasted not till the Lord sent raine vpon the earth. The waters being twice smitten with the cloke of Eliab 2. Kings 2. 8. 14. diuided themselues twice this way and that way for the passage ouer both of Eliab and Elisba. The waters of Iericho 2. Kings 2. 21. by the sprinckling of a little salt at the spring head were healed of the Lord for the good of his seruants that death come no more thereof. The furnace Dan. 3. 23. though it was heat seuentimes more then it was wont to be, had no power so much as to scorch the garments of the three children that would not obey the kings commaundement in a matter of Idolatry: neither had the Lions, Dan. 6. 12. though rauenous in themselues, any mouthes to open against Daniel, that made his prayers to God, notwithstanding it was against the decree of Darius the king, and so much sollicitated by his malicious and idolatrous nobles. Since then the creatures of God are thus readie to hide and smother their strength where they may hurt vs, to open and enlarge their power when they may defend vs; and since the Angels of God Psal. 91. 11. watch ouer vs in our ways, let nothing make vs so foolish since we runne well, but to hold all vs & our soules & bodies are

hold on, for the tyrants rage can not last, but the wrath of God is a soft consuming fire: and let vs venter our bodies which are but dult for the saluation of our soules, which are the Lords.

I. THESS. chap. 5. vers. 19. 20.

19. Quench not the spirit: 20. Despise not prophesying.

He words themselues yeeld two points to be considered: first, a commandement or an exhortation equall to a commaundement: secondly, the meanes how this commandement may be best obeyed, and the exhortation most fruitfully receiued. The commaundement is,

Quench not the spirit: the meanes to performe this, is: Despise not prophesying: that is, the wise and sound interpretation of the Scriptures, by them whose lippes preferue knowledge, and whose feet are shod with the Gospell of peace: for so prophesying is to be taken for an application of the word, and a teaching to edification.

In the first, obserue: forasmuch as nothing can be quenched but fire, why this Metaphor or borrowed speech is vied of the Apostle, to expresse the Spirit by fire. The like phrase and speech is vsed, Mat. 3. 11. when the seruant baptizing his master, lest it should seeme a disparagement and debasing of him, doth protest in great humilitie, that he did it but with water; but there came one after him, that should baptize them with the holy Ghost and with fire: that is, with the supernaturall power of the holy Ghost, as it were fire. And in Iohn 7. 38. the spirit is resembled to water, meaning thereby, that who so is not cleansed of the holy Ghost as with water, cannot be saued.

Now the spirit is compared to fire in respect of the foure properties perties that bee in fire : first, the nature of fire is to consume any matter that is combustible or may be burned : euen so the holy Ghost is sent into vs to wast and consume all the lusts of our flesh, as selfe-loue, pride of life, and whatsoeuer else exalteth it selfe about the purity and simplicity of the Gospell. Secondly, fire doth refine euery thing that can be purified : euen so the holy Ghost doth change and refine our affections, and purgeth vs from that drosse and filth of the earth, that cleaueth so neare to vs, and hangeth so fast vpon vs, and keepeth vs still in the fornace of affliction, till we come to that perfection of eternall bles-sednesse, that the flesh dying, the spirit may liue in the day of the Lord. Thirdly, fire doth relieue by warmth all those subiects that be capable of life, and those that be benumbed it comforteth, and reuiuet them that be halfe dead through cold : euen so the holy Ghost not onely warmeth him that is benumbed in his soule, but quickeneth him that is starke dead in pleasures and other corruptions of the world, and doth kindle in him a holy zeale to the Lords truth, and raiseth him vp to the hope of eter-nall life, being before (though hee seemed to liue through the dulnesse and obstupescation of his flesh) drouping or rather dead in sinne. Fourthly, fire giueth light to them that before sat in darknesse, and sheweth them the way how to walke : so the holy Gost doth enlighten our iudgments and vnderstandings, that we may be able to discern and desire to thirst after that acceptable will of the Lord vnto saluation.

Secondly, consider since the holy Ghost cannot be quenched but where he is, how the Apostle writing to the whole Church of Thessalonica, assumeth and taketh it as granted, that they all had this spirit : and this ought to be the generall iudge-ment of all men, so long as a people conforme themselves to the outward obedience and sound of the Gospell, to presume and hope the best of all. For no doubt many in this Church were accounted Saints, which were detestable hypocrites, yet in respect of this mingling of the seede and tares together, the Apostle medleth not with them, leauing that to the last iudgement : but signeth them all with this excellent badge of hauing the spirit :
 for so ought it to be, vnlesse their sinnes be enormous and notorious, and that they sinne and offend with so high a hand, as that they refuse the censure of the Church, and to be thereby reformed; for then they are vtterly to bee cut off and separate from the rest of the Saints. And this intermingling of hypocrites and the elect together in the visible church, maketh that oftentimes the Apostle in a generall stile disswadeth and dehorteth all from that which can be verified in the wicked onely; as when he saith, Heb. 3. 12. Take heed none of you be so unfaithfull as to fall from the grace of the liuing God; which is true onely in the hypocrite: and so doth hee sometimes generally exhort to that which is true onely in the elect: as when he saith to the Philippians, Worke fourth your saluation with feare and trembling: for all the Ministers of God must know that there will alwaies be one Judas among the Disciples, whom Christ onely could discouer: but for them that cannot see the heart, they must offer the cup of grace to all; for the tares cannot be seuered from the wheat till that great day of separation come, when then the Lord by his Angels shall cut vs all downe, and shall binde the tares in bundles by themselves, to be cast from the Lords floore into perpetuall tormenting flaming fire.

Againe learne, since the spirit must not be quenched, that it followeth of necessity euery one of Gods children must haue it, and think it so far from shame, as they must esteeme it to be their onely victory and crowne that they do enioy it. For first, by this spirit: there is made a distinction and difference betweene vs and the reprobate: and it is like the bloud (Exod. 12. 22.) that was stricken vpon the doore tops, which shall make the Lord to passe ouer vs, and not to suffer the destroier to come neare vs, when he goeth to smite the Egyptians: and as Paul saith, 2. Cor. 13. 5. The spirit of God is in vs all except we be reprobates. Secondly, from this spirit we receiue direction, whereby to guide the steps and actions of our life, that we snarle not at the Ministers like dogs, nor runne after the world like Demas. Thirdly, in this spirit we reape such comfort as all the lightsome pleasures of this life are but as shadowes, and all the burdensome profit of this life of no value in respect of that ioy wee take to be transformed into the image of the sonne of God, wherby the slanderous speeches, and impious and sacrilegious scurrility of some is notably condemned, who in scorne and derision doe call such as are fearefull to offend, and doe tremble and quake at the name of sinne, (men of the spirit, Puritanes, precise, and such like) they themselves shrinking vp sinne in a narrow scantling, as if none offended but they that lie in the goale. But what is he, that hauing a waspe about him will stay till he be stung, and not auoide it at the first buzzing? What is he when he hath roome inough, that will ride vpon the edge of a pit, and venture his falling? Nay, it must be the wisdom of the Saints of God to flie as far from sinne as can be, and (as the Apostle saith) to shun all apparence of euill: and we must not be fraighted from the rule of conscience, nor from walking in a strait course of religion by any such prophane and vngodly mouthes, which carry the poison of Aspes vpon their tongues, and the gall of bitternesse within their hearts: and let them know, that in this state wherein they stand, they are as surelie the diuels as the diuell is not Gods; for in whomsoever this spirit of God dwelleth not and worketh not, that man shall assuredly be damned.

1. Theſ. 5. 22.

Now this exhortation, not to quench the spirit, is very weighty: for by this the Apostle teacheth & insinuateth of the feareful declinations of some that haue begun in the spirit and haue ended in the flesh; that haue saluted Christ in the market place, and yet neuer entertained him in their houses. For that the spirit may be quenched, is proved by the five virgines that had their lamps Mat. 25. 3. but wanted oile; and by the parable of the foure sorts of graine, Mark. 4. 4. whereof only one shall be saued: fortherby is manifest, that the Gospell may be receiued with ioy, yea it may take root to grow vp to a stalke, and from a stalke to a blade, yea from a blade to an eare, and yet shall neuer ripen: but when it is gone so farre, shall either be burned vp by the heat of persecution, or choked by the thornes of this life, and shall neuer come to perfection.

Againe that parable which carieth with it a reall truth, of the spirit which being cast out of a man walketh in dry places: for so much is Sathan cast out as wee are enlightned in our iudgements; but when he returnes he finds it more garnished then before: that is, after he hath once refused and troden vnder foote that light of knowledge which he had, hee is possessed with such darknesse, as hee is wholly left a prey for Sathan. It is also proved, that the spirit may be quenched by plaine places of Scripture, as that of Ezechiel 18. 24. the man that liueth in righteousnesse a long time, after falling away, shall bee iudged in his vnrighteousnesse: and 2. Peter 2. 22. the dogge is returned to his vomite, and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire. Some will say, True it is, the spirit may bee quenched in an hypocrite, but neuer in the elect: as 1. Iohn 3. 9. Hee that is borne of God, sinneth not. And whom God loued once hee loueth alwaies. This is true; but then looke that thou stand vpon good and sound euidence when Sathan troubles thee: for thou knowest how the burning lampes went out, how the seed in the blade came to nothing; and it is certaine that a man illuminate may sinne against the holy Ghost; and therefore see that thou hast good title, and groundest vpon good interest when thou shalt bee vexed with temptations: For Rom. 8. 13. if wee liue after the flesh wee shall die; and as many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sonnes of God: and who hath this spirit, looke 1. Iohn 3. 14. We are translated from death to life because we loue the brethren: for hee that hath a soule must needs breathe, and he that hath the spirit must needs fulfill the fruits of the spirit.

Secondly, albeit the elect haue receiued an enerlasting spirit, whereof the Lord can neuer repent, and which can neuer vterly be quenched; yet let vs feare and tremble; for in the elect it may so bee obscured and overwhelmed, that some of the graces of Gods spirit, nay most of the graces, yea the chiefest of the most, nay all almost of Gods graces, may in them be quenched, as Dauid praieth Psal. 51. Lord create in me a new spirit; and yet he had it in him: for in the same place he saith, Lord take not thy spirit from me. So as this exhortation, not to quench the spirit, hath a double fruit; in the hypocrite, to make him vnexcusable; in the elect, to make them more circumspect and carefull in their conuersation: for we must not be secure, in as much as albeit the spirit of God in those that be his, cannot bee absolutely quenched and wholly put out, yet there may bee a great abatement of the spirit, spirit, as not to be recouered without great touch and terror of conscience.

For first, while a man feels the presence of this spirit, there is giuen him such ioy, and with that a singular peace in the inward man, and such securitie of his saluation, that he feels the loue of God spirituallly to do him as much good as his meat; and vpon this assurance he doth as it were behold the heavens open for the Lord to embrace him liuing or dying, and he knoweth himselfe to be sealed vp in the blood of Christ vnto eternall life. Now if this spirit be gone, & absenteth it selfe in spirituall operation, together with this is our former ioy abated, and the foundation of our hope begins to be shaken, and being weake of our selues, we are surpris'd with many feares; and suspecting our selues to bee cast from the feare of God, and our sinnes arising and flying vp like smoake in our eies, we almost are brought to the case of Cain, Gen. 4. 12. to thinke that whosoever meeteth vs will slay vs.

Secondly, as vpon the enioying & presence of the Lords spirit, there springs an vnspeakable ioy and comfort in our hearts, and we find that the Lords loue breedeth in vs an heauenly assurance of eternall peace, and filleth our hearts with a mutuall and reciprocal loue of God, our loue streaming and flowing from the well head of the Lords loue: then it followeth, that the lesse we feele the Lords loue toward vs, the lesse we loue him againe; and then we droope and languish in our selues, our praiers be faint, our meditations cold; and when we should watch, we with the Disciples fall asleepe: and we feeling not the life of the spirit, we are greatly abated in our loue of holy and Christian exercises; and we then only keepe a generall course in our profession, and performe euery good thing as it were tedious vnto vs, like Eutychnus, Act. 20. 9. 10. who came to heare Pauls sermon, but was overcome with sleepe.

Thirdly, when the spirit is abated by the diminishing of the Lords loue towards vs, and the withdrawing of our loue from him, then because we haue grieued the spirit, the Lord suffereth vs to fall into fearefull and presumptuous sinne: as hee did suffer Dauid to fall into the sinne of whoredome with Bathsbeba, aggravated with the murder of Vriah, wherein hee lay frozen by Satans subtilty nine monthes at the least before he confessed it to God : for it appeareth 2. Sam. 11. 27. that the child was borne before Nathan the Prophet came to him : and howsoever no doubt he could no more escape the pricke of conscience, then he could stay the panting of his heart ; yet before that time not a word to God of any serious humiliation for his adultery. So as neuer any of Gods children sinned more grievously then he, except Peter, who was not so much kindled at the fire of the high Priest, as he was cold in his soule : for first, he lied, in that he said, hee knew not Christ : secondly, burst forth into swearing : and thirdly, gaue himselfe to the diuell if it were he that was with Christ : which the Lord most iustly suffered to befall him as a great chastisement since he neglected the louing forewarning of his master : and though hee was neuer so much elect, yet would the spirit neuer comfort him, till he had withdrawne himselfe to bewaile his sinne bitterly. All which is lively expressed Cant. 3. 1. In my bed by night (saith the church) I sought him that my soule loued, I sought him but I found him not, I went and rose, and walked about the citie, and by the streets, and by open places I sought him but found him not : thereby to declare, that when the Lord once withdraweth his face from vs, how hardly we shall win his fauour againe.

Gen. 9. 23.

2. Sam. 15.

14.

Fourthly, when the Lord hath suffered vs to fall thus farre, as we shall euen seeme to be swallowed vp of hell already ; though in the end he will restore thee, yet first he will suffer thee to beare the shame of thy sinne in this life : as Noah for his drunkenesse to be a scorne to his owne children : and Dauid for his adultery, to bee thrust out of his kingdome by his owne sonne, which was such a grieffe to him, as all the ioy of his sonnes life did not so much comfort him, as the sorrow of his death did wound him, he mourning for Abshen, (2. Sam. 19. 33.) as if he had doubted of his saluation. But happy is hee, that hath the thornes in his sides in this life, and that is afflicted heere : for though the Lord will neuer take his louing kindnes from thee, yet he will scourge thee, not for any satisfaction of his iustice, for Christ hath paid all, but onely for a chastisement.

Lastly, besides all this, when the spirit is gone and abated, it shall shall be such a terror to thy conscience, such smart and vexation to thy whole minde, as thou wert better bee almost in hell, then feele this great want, and sustaine this great torment of recouering it againe. For first, when thou considerest the losse of thy former paines, which thou spentest in the mortifying of thy flesh: that secondly, when the spirit is abated, the power of Satan is increased, and that he cannot be dispossessed without great violence, and euen rending thee in peeces, as appeareth by the dumbe man in the Gospell. Thirdly, that if thou die at this time, (as Ezech. 18. 24.) all thy former righteousnesse shall not be remembered, but thou shalt die in thy present sinne: and fourthly, that as a man dangerously sicke and somewhat recovered, and after by misgouernment falling into a relapse, it doth exasperate and increase the disease: and as a wound halfe healed to come to a new incision, cannot be without greater paine then before: and for a man halfe in his iourney, to returne backe againe, when hee must needs goe thorow, cannot bee but a great discontentment: So when thou remembrest the great conflicts thou hadist at first, when thou didst enter thy name into the schoole of Christ, and considerest that now thou must abide greater, it shall be halfe a hell to thee, to be brought seriously without guile of spirit, from the detestation of thy sinne: as we may see Psal. 32. 4. before Dauid could be brought to confesse his sinne of filthinesse and of murther, hee saith, that very care had eaten his bones, not but that in his priuate chamber hee had confessed it to the Lord: but before he could come to taske his conscience, and to set it as it were vpon the racke to bee rent in peeces by his confession of it before men, and to abide patiently the shame of the world for it, hee seemed to bee plunged into the deepe of deepes, as himselfe saith: Out of the deepes, O Lord, haue I cried vnto thee. Euen so when the spirit of the Lord is abated in thee, thou shalt finde it will not bee regained by some sleight worke, and stubbring vp a short praier: as, Lord haue mercy vpon me: but thou must come to the case of Dauid, euen to pine and wast away, and to haue the moisture dried vp within thee: yea, consider his tedious trauell before he could repent suddenly. And if he was beaten thus farre of the Lord with Scorpions, of whom the Lord had protested, that he was a man after his owne heart, shalt thou thinke by a pang of deuotion and superficiall praier, to recouer that sweet comfort thou hast lost in the Lords spirit? Nay know, that if thou temptest the Lord so farre as to withdraw his spirit from thee, it shall cost the deere before thou canst inioy it againe: and if thou breake forth into sighes and grones which fill the heauens, euen in this doth the Lords mercy greatly appeere: for hee might giue thee vp into hardnesse of heart, and neuer trouble himselfe to restore his spirit againe vnto thee. But thy sorrow must be so great, thy praiers so feruent, and thy sighes so many, as to crie out with Dauid, Psal. 51. 8. Heale the bones, O Lord, which thou hast broken. Let vs beware then how we distemper our selues spiritually, for feare the arrow-head of the Lords wrath should rankle in our sides; and let vs take heed with the Apostle, how we greue this spirit: for if Adam might haue had the whole spirit taken from him in respect of his Apostasie, who was perfect in his creation, how much more may wee, that haue receiued but the earnest of the spirit, and the first fruits thereof in Christ Iesus? Howbeit as the euill spirit in an hypocrite may be cast out, and yet hee may returne to his vomite againe, (2. Pet. 2. 22.) and his casting out was but in regard of his enlightening for the time, and he was not gone out indeed: so in the elect the spirit, and the working of the spirit, may be interrupted for a season, but it cannot cleane be taken away.

Againe consider, where it is said, Quench not the spirit: that all Scripture commandeth alwaies the contrary to that it forbiddeth: as 2. Tim. 1. 6. the contrary vertue to this heere spoken of, is commanded: I charge thee (saith Paul to Timothy) that thou stirre vp the graces of God which bee in thee: the word in Greeke signifieth, To keepe the fire burning: giuing vs to vnderstand, that this spirit is a flame kindled by the holy Ghost, which Satan, the flesh, and the world labour to blow out: so much the more carefull therefore must wee bee, to foster it and maintaine it, that it neuer go out. Heere then must be considered the sleights of Satan to blow it out, and alwaies by the cleane contrary wee must labour to keepe it in: for as the flesh lusteth against against the spirit, so must the spirit likewise against the flesh.

The first motion therefore Satan stirreth vp in vs to quench the spirit, is to lust after euill, not to lust after nothing: which temptation he threw into the eies of Dauid, as hee walked vpon the roofof the Kings palace, (2. Sam. 11. 2. 3.) to lust after Bathsheba, Vriahs wife. As earnestly then as the flesh lusterh after euill, so earnestly and more must the spirit lust after good things, as to say with the Prophet Dauid: I am ready vpon euery occasion to do thy will, O God: neither yet must we not deceiue our selues, for euery lusting after good things is not of the spirit: for it is easie to doe many good things, wherein thy affections are not strained, and to abtaine from many euill things, to which thou art not tempted: but thou shalt know whether the spirit do fight against the lusts of the flesh by this: if any thing do directly oppugne the affections of the flesh, if thou take part with the spirit, and crosse thy affections in this, thou maintainest and dost cherish the spirit. As Dauid (1. Sam. 25. 13.) vpon a churlish answer giuen by Nabal, in a passion of anger was resolved to kill him, but vpon the intreatie of Abigail Nabals wife, hee was pacified, and entred into consideration of the greatnesse of the sinne of murther, and blessed the God of Israel, and the counsell of Abigail, that had kept him from shedding of blood.

Secondly, if Satan cannot get vs lust for euill, he will strue to get vs either doe nothing, or else to spend our time in trifles and in pastimes, to driue away dumps with vaine delights: which may sometimes bee vsed for recreations to make vs more fit to walke in our callings: but if we play to play, that is, suffer our hearts to be stollen away, and snared in the pleasures of this life, then the Lord will iudge vs as vnthrifty seruants, that haue not gained by our talents. Our labour therefore must be on the contrary, since euery man hath his taske set him, and God is our ouerfeer, though presently not our reuenger, that wee fall not asleepe with new wine: but according to the Apostles rule, that we redeeme the time from vanitie, and walke worthy of that calling wherein God hath set vs.

Thirdly, if Satan cannot blow out the fire of the Lords spirit in vs by this, but that wee resolute in our hearts to doe some good;

by it means that we should be more
of
in us,

good ; if we will needes doe it , he perswades no to doe it by and by , but to pawse vpon the matter , and to procrastinate and defer it by this reason ; We may as well do it another time as now . But wee must labour the contrary , vnlesse wee will suppress the power and soundnesse of the spirit ; for if we be not apt to day , we shall be lesse apt to morrow : and it is good to take the time while it is offered , for we know not whether our life shall passe this present occasion . Christ commeth not to thee at all times , and therefore if he knocke now and we let him not in , though hereafter we pine away with the desire of hauing him , wee shall not get him ; according to that speech of the Prophet Esay 55. 6. Seeke the Lord while he may be found , and call vpon him while he is nigh : for though he suffereth long , yet will he not be mocked . Therefore in doing good , we must resemble and be like those that hauing earnest businesse , as soone as they wake in the morning , start out of their beds to auoide and shake off their sluggishnesse , and say not as the slothfull doe , Prou. 6. 10. Yet a little sleepe , yet a little slumber , &c. for when we are mooued and resolued to performe any good thing , we may not grieue the spirit by deferring it , but we must do it presently , like Abraham , Genes. 18. 6. who made haste , and ran in to prepare meat and entertainment for the Angels : for we must not looke vpon the clouds if we will sow , nor gather the winds , if we will reape , nor defer good motions and actions if we will receiue comfort by them .

Fourthly , the spirit is quenched by this , If Satan cannot make thee lust against good , nor spend thy time in trifles and to no good purpose , nor to deferre the good thou hast resolued to doe , by some by-thought that hee shall suggest ; if thou wilt needes do it , then he striueth to make thee doe it languishingly , droopingly and coldly , and thereupon perhaps thou makest a few praiers : but when thou findest the comfort not so great as thou wouldest , or as thou hast felt at other times , then thou breakest off , and euery good exercise though it bee short seemeth tedious vnto thee . But the spirit must labour the cleane contrary , as to do good things , so to doe them seriously , for the worke of the Lord must not bee done negligently . Though therefore thou findest thy selfe vndisposed to holy exercises ,

yet strive by continuance in them if it be possible to make the spirit easie ; and though at first thou feelest great difficultie in praying, yet resolve to continue in it some long time in ripping vp thy sinnes by praier : and if at the last by often strife thou canst come to pray with ease, and to feele the sweetnesse of the Lords mercy comforting thee in thy perplexed thoughts, and in thy weake petitions, it is a notable signe of thine election.

Lastly, Sathan would quench the spirit by this ; if we will not bee worse, he would make vs not to be better, nor to goe forward in religion. We will all graunt, that we must professe the Gospell : now since Sathan cannot weane vs from this opinion, hee laboureth to keepe vs at a scantling in this possession : but it is certaine, hee that goeth not forward in the possession of the truth, goeth backward. Halt thou not more zeale now then thou haddest when the Gospell was first brought thee ? then feare lest the spirit bee much quenched. Wouldest thou haue a man stand at a stay till he come to his full stature ? or one halfe cured to send away the Physition ? or eat and not be nourished ? or spend of thy stocke, and not increase it ? And why shouldest thou not bee as wise in the spirit as in these things ? Wouldest thou haue the Israelites make league with the Canaanites ? No : they must not cease till they haue cast them all out of the land. And so if thou bee at league with any sinne, it hindereth thy growth in religion : and if thou comenot to a full and perfect age in Christ, thou canst not bee saued. Thou must know though thou hast thy lampe burning. yet the oile wasteth with flaming : and if thou haue not oile to supply thy want, thy light will goe out, and thy selfe shalt sit in darknesse. Yet so farre hath this policy of Sathan preuailed, that many who in King Edward and Queene Maries daies were zealous for the Lord, are now frozen in their dregges ; and they that before heard the ioyfull message of saluation with singular comfort, and could not haue their thirst staid but by the waters of wisdom, are now by this long peace growne secure, and waxen neither hot nor cold. Of these men to say no worse, they are right Laodiceans, against whom the wise-

wisdom of the holy Ghost long since pronounced a fearefull doome, that the Lord would spue them out of his mouth: for shall Christ, who is his Fathers counsellor, while he was in the flesh increase in wisdom, Luk. 2. 52. and shall we who are as blind as Beetles, thinke it enough for vs to retaine the rudiments and first principles of religion, and not to wax strong and able in the truth of God? Nay, certaine it is, if we continue children in vnderstanding, and do not grow from loue to patience, from patience to temperance, from one grace of God to another; if wee increase not, I do not meane in peeuisish and preposterous zeale, but in sound substantiall zeale; and from being fed with milke, to desire strong meat, it shall be as lothsome for the Lord to take vs that be thus decayed in our soules, and which from good substantiall Christians are false to bee most miserable beggerly banke-rupts, as for a man to receiue againe into his stomacke that he hath once gorged vp. As Satan therefore laboureth to quench this spirit by our coldnesse in religion, and by standing at a stay in Christianity: so let the spirit of God in vs striue for the contrary, that he that is righteous may bee more righteous, and that wee may increase in faith, and bee daily set on fire with the zeale of Gods truth; for we may not bee worse than the ground, which by the raine is made more fruitfull; nor then the herbes, which by the Sunne are made more flourishing.

1. Cor. 14.

2. Pet. 1. 5 6.

Reu. 22. 11.

Heere some will say, he that is once faithfull, and whom the Lord hath once sealed, that man cannot haue the spirit taken from him: therefore though the operation and working of the spirit be for a time hindered and interrupted, yet it shall bee restored againe, because the Lord hath promised, that whom hee loueth he will alwaies loue. It is true, that if any fall with Dauid he may and shall rise againe with Dauid, if hee pertaine to God, but then hee must earnestly and soundly repent as Dauid did: and to come to a true and serious confession of thy sinne indeed, it shall be the hardest worke, and cost thee dearer then ever any thing did. Againe, who would be so foolish to make of a particular and rare example a generall ground, as to fall with Dauid for company, to rise with him for company: and because thou

thou seest one fore wounded with a dagger to be cured, to desire to be stricken with the same dagger to be healed with that man for company. Nay if any hath falne from that grace he hath once receiued, let him pray that he may rise againe; but let him know, that being falne, if he had all the hearts in the world, and could shed fountaines of teares, he should finde them all too little and insufficient to lament soundly, so as the Lord would come againe to comfort him.

Lastly, heere may bee doubted, since the spirit must not be quenched, and that as hath bene taught before, it must be maintained, or else it will decay: whether it be in vs to nourish this spirit as well as to quench it. To this wee answer with Paul, Philipp. 2. 12. 13. Make an end of your saluation with feare and trembling: for it is God that worketh in you both the will and the deed, euen of his good pleasure: so as we must feare, but we must also worke. And this spirit cannot be idle in vs, so as wee must not stand gaping, looking that the Lord should fill vs with his graces; but wee must worke, because the Lord worketh vpon vs. So then the Lord doth all meereley of his grace. But heere is humilitie and diligence commended to vs; and therefore doeth the Lord by his Ministers exhort vs to good workes, to make vs more circumspect and chearefull in doing them: for the holy Ghost worketh not absolutely and simply in vs, but vouchsafeth meanes, it selfe being the chiefe efficient to prepare the mind to receiue that grace to which wee are exhorted; euen as wee all liue by Gods prouidence, yet not without bread. And as the safetie of a childs riding standeth in the fast holding of the father: yet the words of the father; to bid him hold fast, maketh the childe more warie: euen so exhortation maketh vs more warie in auoiding sinne, for we are not dead stones, but liuing instruments: and therefore as we performe liuely actions of the bodie, so must we haue spirituall operations of the minde; the fruite and benefit whereof, is discerned by the power and strength of the holy Ghost, who worketh both in vs and by vs.

Now for the second point, which is the meanes how the commandement of not quenching the spirit may be best obeyed?

It is by making much of the Word and the Preachers thereof: for by prophecie, is meant such as haue the word of exhortation in their mouthes, and of whom it is said, Esa. 59. 21. The spirit that I put into their mouthes, shall neuer depart from thee nor thy seede. Whereby wee learne, that as the spirit is giuen by the word preached, so is it also maintained by the word preached; and as there is no light without the Sunne, no fructifying of the earth without the windowes of heauen be open, nor no lampe burning without oile: so is there no faith begun and continued without we be established in the word of grace. Now if we finde sometimes no heart in the word, but that it is irksome to the eare and vnpleasant to the sound, let vs not therefore refuse the meanes, and exclude our selues from hearing: for oftentimes a stomacke is gotten by eating, and though the spirit be quenched in vs in this grace, yet let vs come where this grace is offered: and though we heare not sometimes with such a relish as we would and ought to doe, yet let vs pray that our hearing may doe vs some good; and that by hearing our stomacke may come againe. And if we heare often and forget it, yet let vs do that in this kinde of sicknesse, which we doe in the distemper of our naturall bodies, eat the oftner, if wee eat much and cannot retaine it to digest it: so if we cannot remember what we heare, let vs heare the oftner, because our memories are so weake: so as if there be any preaching, (not neglecting our callings) let vs partake of that foode, and the Lord may in mercie so much blesse our diligence, as we may by one Sermon learne so much, as may comfort vs in the houre of death.

Lastly, as in generall diseates of the bodie, (as in an ague) all parts are weake, but principally the stomacke, yet it receiueth a medicine, and the disease it selfe prouoketh vs to that: so if Satan haue weakened thy stomacke so much, as thou hast no list to heare the word, let this dulnesse be so farre from discouraging thee, as that it make thee lust and desire the more after it. For as Paul said to the Centurion, Act. 27. 31. Except these abide in the ship yee cannot be safe, when they of themselues would needs haue gone forth: and yet Paul had the absolute promise before, that himselfe and his whole companie should be safe: but this was conditionall, if they obeyed the meanes, that is, if they abode in the ship. Euen so, they that despise the meanes of hearing, refuse the mercie of reforming their liues, and of mollifying their hearts; whether they refuse of rashnesse; as heare or heare not it is all one: or of distrust; as, though I heare it will do me no good: for assuredly except we heare as often as wee can, we cannot maintaine this spirit: and going out of this ship, that is, departing from the word preached, it is not possible to be saued.

TITVS chap. 2. Vers. 11, 12.

11. For that grace of God which bringeth saluation vnto all men, hath appeared:
12. And teacheth vs, that wee should denie vngodlinesse and worldly lusts, and that we should liue soberly, and righteously, and godly in this present world.

HE Apostle in the 9. and 10. verses going before did exhort seruants that were professors, to shew themselues obedient to their masters, according to the flesh in all things without offence to God, and chargeth them, that though they be in a base & low degree, yet they should labour to adorne the doctrine of Christ. Now in the 11. verse he addeth a forcible reason to his former exhortation: because that grace, that is, the doctrine of the Gospell, which, &c. hath appeared to all men, that is, to all conditions of men, that it might instruct them to lay aside prophannesse, concupiscence of the eies, & all things that saueur of the world, and to liue iustly toward men, and religiously ligiously toward God, waiting for the glorie to be reuealed.

The words diuide themselues into two parts: the first commendeth the excellencie of the teacher, which doth instruct vs: namely the grace of God: the second is the matter of instruction: and this is to be considered two waies: first, by shewing what things we are to forbear, which is twofold: first vngodlinesse in respect of religion: secondly, worldly lusts as furtherers to prophannesse. Secondly, by shewing what things we must incline vnto, which be three: first, sobrietie of life: secondly, to liue righteously toward men, for the duties of the second table: thirdly, to liue religeously in respect of the worship of God. Last in verse 13. there is propounded an effectuall meanes whereby we may be the better affected, and more earnestly prouoked to follow this counsell, which is, an expectation or hoping for of a more excellent glorie, which shall be giuen at the appearing of the Lord Iesus: for hardly can a man thoroughly mortifie himselfe, vnlesse he propound to himselfe a more excellent reward in the life to come.

For the first, that is, the grace of God, which is the teacher: this that is so called heere, may be iudged and resolued to be the Gospell, or the doctrine of the Gospell, by the end of the tenth verse, that yee may (saith the Apostle) adorne the doctrine of the Gospell, which is called grace, by the effect it worketh in the hearts of men, namely, because it bringeth vs to the grace of Christ through the remission of our sinnes in his precious bloud. And therefore Paul (Rom. 1. 16.) calleth the Gospell, the power of God vnto saluation to euery one that beleueneth, whatsoever he be Iew or Grecian: and Eph. 1. 13. sheweth how that by trusting and beleeuing in the word of truth the Gospel of our saluation, we are sealed with the holie spirit of promise. And 2. Thes. 2. 10. the reason is giuen, why men are reiected and cast from Christ, because they receiue not the loue of the truth, that they might be saued. For as S. Peter saith, (1. Pet. 4. 17. 18.) Where shall the vngodly and the sinner appeare? and what shall be the end of them that obey not the Gospell?

Secondly, this grace of God doth perswade vs thus to liue as is heere prescribed, by this token, that it bringeth saluation:

so as obserue, he doth not say simply : The grace of God hath appeared and teacheth vs, &c. but that grace which bringeth saluation, doth beseech and teach vs to reforme our liues, because saluation is already purchased. Even so Christ and his forerunner Iohn Baptist, (Matt. 3. 2.) preached amendement of life for remission of sinnes, because the kingdome of God was at hand : that is, the Gospell, so called, because none shall enter into that kingdome, that hath not first entered into the kingdome of grace. So Paul when he had folded and enwrapped all vnder sinne, and had taught the points of our predestination, (Rom. 9. 10.) in the 12. chapter, and 1. verse, he beseecheth them by the bowels of the Lord Iesus, to be renewed in their mindes, and reformed in their liues. And Rom. 6. 12. he exhorteth them, that sinne may not raigne nor haue dominion ouer them, because they are called to the grace of the Gospell to bee iustified in the blood of Christ. So Peter (1. Pet. 1. 17.) from our redemption draweth an exhortation to new life. If (saith he) yee call God father, passe your time in feare : and Paul (1. Cor. 6. 20.) exhorteth to glorifie God in our members, because we are his, and not our owne, being bought with a great price. So as this is the most effectuall persawson that can bee, because we are alreadie washed, to keepe our selues cleane.

Further obserue, that the Gospell being brought in heere not simply, perswading vs to purity & cleanness of life, but as bringing saluation with it : that as all benefites may perswade, so there bee three sorts of benefites especially that may perswade most, of which saluation is the greatest. The first kind of benefite to perswade by, is deliuerance from some great extremity : the second, is an aduancement from a base estate to some high dignity : the third is a benefite that ioyneth both these together, and this is most forcible. How fare the first of these may preuaile, Dauid sheweth 1. King. 1. 29. who when hee would assure Barsheba his wife, that Salomon should succeed him in his kingdome, to giue the best security he could, he protested : As the Lord liueth, that hath deliuered my soule from aduersity, thy sonne Salomon shall raigne after me : as if he should say, as hee was to bee thankfull and obedient to the Lord for these his deliuerances : so he would pledge and gage this to her , vpon the certaintie of Salomons succession. For the second sort, when from a base condition a man is aduanced to some speciall preferment ; and how this preuaileth appeareth in Ioseph, Gen. 39. 8. 9. who by the force of this argument beateth backe the assaults of his Ladie and Mistresse : for he bearing in minde the speciall benefites of his master towards him, reasoneth thus ; I Ioseph by my masters fauour am now the greatest in all his house , being at first a bond-man , there is nothing but he hath committed to my charge , onely thee hath he referued to him selfe : how is it possible then I should commit such a villany to so kinde and bountifull a master ? making his owne aduancement as a bulwarke to driue backe the siege of his mistresse incontinency , thereby euen to stoppe her mouth by appealing to her owne conscience , that weighing how his master had dealt with him, there could bee no excuse for him if hee should commit such a villany. For the third , wherein both these concurre : what heart can bee so vngratefull as not to bee perswaded to yeeld obedience to him that hath performed both these ? If a man committing some criminall offence , and when the stroke was euen ready to be giuen , in that very instant of his anguished minde , as for death it selfe , so for so shamefull a death , the King should send him a pardon , and after aduance him to some honorable office , therby to grace him for his former indignitie , and to cleare him of his former blemish : if this man should haue any suite recommended to him from his King , which suite should carry with it some remembrance of his deliuerance ; were it possible for that man but to execute this commandement , and to further this suite with great loyaltie ? Surely hee could not but doe it. Let vs see then how farre the Gospell may preuaile with vs since it hath brought saluation ; which implieth and presupposeth that there was damnation before : for wee were the heires of Sathan , without Christ , without light , wrapped in the chaines of darknesse , ordained not to the execution of the gibbet , but to bee iudged after the passing of a few daies in trouble and vanity , to be tormented eternally with the damned:

from

from this hath the Gospell brought vs : therefore when we are tempted to sinne , we should say vnto our selues , As the Lord liueth that hath deliuered my soule from death, I will not doe it : and haue this suite commended vnto thee , not to wallow in the mire , by this token , that the Gospell hath saued thee from hell. For the second benefit , it was singular fauour to be freed from the former misery ; but the Lord together with that hath aduanced and raised vs to speciall dignity , that of the bondslaves of the diuell, we are made heires, not of this world onely, but of the world to come , fellow heires with the Lord Iesus, to be beloued with the same loue , and to tast of the same glorie : so as wee may say with Ioseph, Thus and thus bountifull hath the Lord beene vnto mee, how can I then commit such wickednesse against the maiesty, and in the presence of so good a God?

Iohn 17. 22.

Hence learne, since the Gospell exhorteth vs by this sauing argument to reformation of life , whensoever we are assaulted inwardly by our owne lusts, by the instrument which is the diuels, to vse the benefit of this saluation to stay vs from that sinne we are tempted to, let it be it were to wantonnesse, then let euery of vs argue thus with himselfe : And what ? shall I vse the members of Christ, bought with such a price as the blood of the Sonne of God, and shall I make them the members of an harlot ? shall I thus requit the Lords kindnesse , and so lightly esteeme the riches of his mercy ? Why now hee doth not command to performe the law, and so be saued ; but because I am already saued he doth beseech me to amend my life ; and shall I set no more by all his benefites bestowed, both vpon my soule for instruction, and vpon my body for health and comelineffe ? shall I not remember the manifold temptations he hath freed me from, and the multitude of his compassions extended towards me ? shall I make no more reckning of his fauour that hath bestowed on me so many graces , and pardoned so many sinnes ? Far bee it from me, that aduisedly and deliberately I should so despise the Lord as to grieue his spirit, and dishonor that God that hath giuen me Christ out of his owne bosome, and with Christ all things else, and through him saluation.

I. Cor. 6. 15.

Now for the instruction, and first for the things we are to forbear: the first is vngodlinesse, that is, not onely the superstition of the heathen and palpable Atheisme, but all carelesse seruing of God, when men regard nothing lesse then the purity of a good conscience in the seruice of God, and when they little respect the true worship of God, but onely make a shew and a semblance to serue him: so as the word (vngodlinesse) doth signifie all despising of him openly, or seruing of him negligently. Now all vngodlinesse, prophannesse and irreligioulnesse doth touch first the exercises God hath appointed to testifie our sincerity: secondly, it toucheth God himselfe. For the first, when wee come to heare the word or to pray, if we doe not perswade our selues that hee that despiseth the teacher despiseth God, as wee may see Luk. 16. 29. by the answer of Abraham to the rich man, They haue Moses and the Prophets, let them heare them. And further, if we doe not beleue that what so is preached out of the Bible, shall as fully be executed as if it were now performed, as we may see Reuel. 22. 19. this is open vngodlinesse: and for this diminution of the truth of Gods word, his part shall be taken out of the booke of life; for a man must iudge of vngodlinesse by the effects of vngodlinesse, as to say, a mans good meaning is good beleefe: for then was Vzziah vniustly punished and smitten with the Leprosie for burning incense vnto the Lord, 2. Chron. 26. 19. for his intention was good, but his action was accursed, because it was not for the King to deale in the Priests office. So when we heare men say, It were no matter if there were no more going to Sermons, since there is no more following of them: these and the like are speeches of open vngodlinesse; for did euer any man grow colder for sitting by the fire, or leaner for eating of bread?

- The second thing to be eschued, is worldly lusts, which be twofold: first, to lust after vnlawfull things, which be either the fleshly desires of a carnall man in himselfe, or which may hurt our neighbour, either in name, goods, or body. Secondly, when we
- 2 lust after worldly lawfull things vnlawfully and immoderately; both which are set downe in three generall points by Saint Iohn,
 - 1 1. Iob. 2. 16. first the lust of the flesh, that is, that the flesh would
- liue

liue at ease : as we may see by the reasoning of the rich man with himselfe, Luk. 12. 19. after great store gotten, Now soule (saith he) liue at ease, eat, drinke and take thy pastime. Secondly, the lust of the eye, to liue wantonly, and to haue an adulterous eye as Enah had, that could not see the fruit, but shee must eat it, Genes. 3. 6. and as Achan had, Ioshua 7. 21. that could not see the Babylonish garment, but hee must haue it : and as Shechem had, that could not see Dinah, but hee must rauish her. Thirdly, the pride of life, that is, the desire of honour, and thirsting for preferments in this life ; for it is impossible for that soule that is surfeited with these things, to carrie any true loue toward God, or any burning zeale toward his truth. And these bee they that wrought so forcibly with our first mother, in yeelding to the first temptation that euer was in our flesh : for first the apple seemed faire to the eye : secondlie, it was good for meate : thirdlie, it was good for knowledge, which implied pride of life, shee thinking thereby to bee as wise as God. These three the Gospell denieth vs of, when we saour so of them, as our greatest care is to enioy them, and wee affect them more then the righteousnesse of Gods kingdome. And as the Gospell teacheth vs to forbear these things, so also doth our Baptisme : for who so is dipped in the water, which representeth the blood of Christ, hee is thereby instructed to denie himselfe, and to hate the workes of the diuell : this being a Sacrament, which not onely sealeth to vs remission of sinnes in the blood of Christ, but also sanctification by the spirit of Christ ; which consisteth in mortifying the old man, and quickening the new. The first standing on these two : first, death : secondly, buriall : that as wee beleue Christ to bee dead to obtaine pardon for all our sinnes ; so we beleue that hee by his obedience obtained the spirit of God to mortifie all our corruptions : and when hee went into the graue, our old man was buried with him, that we might bee raiued vp with him to newnesse of life : and this is set downe 1. Peter 1. 2. where he saith, We must suffer in the flesh, that is, die in corruption and in sinne daily, even as Christ did in his bodie. And he that doth not crucifie his affections, performeth not his vow in Baptisme, nor cannot challenge any part in Christ his death : for he is said to die once to sinne : Non ut peccatum desineret, sed ut peccatum destrueret : not to shake off sinne, for he had none, but to destroy sinne which was in vs ; so as hee is sure to haue part in the condemnation of the world, that hath not begunne to rest in the corruption of his flesh.

Now for the things which are to be embraced, they are three : first, sobriety : out of which words learne generally in setting these things that are to be followed last ; That the least corruption is the best perfection in a man : and therefore first we are heere instructed in the negative, not to liue vngodly and wantonly, before hee commeth to the affirmatiue, to follow sobriety : and for this end hath the Lord giuen eight of his commandements negatively, that is, thou shalt not doe this, nor thou shalt not doe that ; and but two affirmatiuely, thereby shewing that our nature euer inclineth to the worst. And that these negatives, Thou shalt not liue irreligiously, Thou shalt not liue filthily, must first bee giuen in precept before there can be planted any holinesse in vs : and our perfection and victory standeth in this, to master as many infirmities as we can, and to runne as neare as we can to the prize of Christ his glorie. The word sobriety is especially taken in humane learning and common phrase for the vertue of temperance and continencie in our diet ; that wee surfeit not ; but though it haue this strict signification, yet more generally in the Scripture it is taken for that vertue whereby wee so containe our selues in the outward blessings of this life, and in the applying of the inward graces of the minde, that wee neither surfeit too much in pleasure ; nor presume not too much on knowledge, to be drunken with holinesse. For sobriety in outward blessings Christ giueth a caveat, Luke 21. 34. Take heede your hearts bee not oppressed with drunkennesse and surfeiting : and presentlie expoundeth this to be with the cares of this life, taking his proportion, that a man may bee as drunke with worldly cares, as with beastly quaffing. For the other, that is,

2 for containing our selues within some iust compasse in vsing
Gods

Gods graces, PAUL (Rom. 12. 3.) saith : Let no man presume to know about that is giuen him to vnderstand, lest by taking too much vpon him, and not knowing his owne proportion, he become drunke. And this could Festus see, that too much learning might make a man proud, though (Act. 26. 24.) he applied it wrongfully to Paul. Now that wee must bee temperate in the blessings of this life, is shewed by the parable of them that were inuited to the Kings supper, and excused their absence, some by Luk. 14. 18. marriage, some by buying of farmes and oxen : all which were in themselues lawfull, but yet made vnlawfull by permitting their hearts to bee stolen away with the riches of iniquity, as Christ rearmeth them. And to this end also is the parable of foure sorts of seedes cast into the ground, whereof one onely Mark. 4. 8. prospereth : meaning thereby, that many being earnest professors, and receiuing the seede of the word, so as it rooted, and wanted nothing but ripening, wherby they themselues knocked as it were at heauen gate, and yet went crosse to hell, because the seed euen when it was in the blade, was blasted and choaked with the thornie cares of this life. This Paul had learned by experience, which caused him (1. Tim. 6. 6.) to charge men to be moderately minded, because many haue fallen from the faith by riches ; as if he should say : he that earieth this resolution to be rich come of it what will, will neuer content himselfe with the pouerty of the Gospell, nor the portion of Gods children, the bread of affliction : for the Apostle set not downe there extortioners, or chafferers, or such like, but onely speakes of men filled with the desire of riches, as of the abuse of lawful things. And if this will not make vs wary enough, let vs learne of Christ, (Luk. 21. 34.) to take heed lest at the day of iudgement the Lord finde vs heauy with the cares and fetches of this life. This iudgement is generall, at the consummation of all things ; or particular, at thy owne departure: for as the tree falleth so it resteth. And if this will not serue, then let vs feare the examples Christ propoundeth, Luk. 17. 26. 28. in the daies of Noah and of Lot; hee doth not say, they were vnmercifull, or idolatrous, taxing them with any such grosse sinne, but reciteth the generall corruption, they eat, they dranke, they married : and what was the end ? the floud came and swallowed them vp, and fire from heauen came and consumed them. And in these examples he setteth downe

 1 three sorts of men: the first followed their pleasures onely: they 2 eat and dranke. The second followed their profit onely, they 3 bought and sold. The third, that followed both their pleasure and their profite, the worst of all; they build for their pleasure, and plant for their profit. So that if the caveat or warning will not moue vs in the doctrine, let the example feare vs in the sequele. Heereof is it, that they be called vncertaine riches, and deceitfull riches, because they so ensnare and entangle our hearts, that we neglect the meanes of our eternall peace. And certaine it is, that more goe to hell for abusing lawfull things, then for vsing things simply vnlawfull: for these are so deformed in their face, as men are ashamed to vse them, the other are so disguised with the outward apparence of some delightfull shew, that we embrace them as our friends, that strike the first stroke to wound vs at the heart.

Luk. 16.9.

Now to come more nearely to the bounds of sobriety, we must learne, that sobriety in pleasures standeth in three things: first,
 in a moderation in meates and dringes: secondly, in recreation:
 1 thirdly, in apparell. For the first, hee that doth so intoxicate himselfe with feasting, and so stufte his belly, as he is made vnapt for his calling, such a man doth surfet as well as he that hath so enflamed himselfe with wine, as he breaketh forth into some open distemper; or so filled his paunch, as he is constrained to regorge it vp againe. Yet I doe not say, but the cup may sometime ouerflow, and we may at one time be more cheerefull and liberall then at another: for Timothy may drinke wine for his stomackes sake, (1. Tim. 5. 23.) for it cheareth the heart, Indg.
 9. 13. And we see Christ at a mariage approued more liberall diet then at other times: for (Iohn 2. 9.) when wine failed, hee himselfe turned water into wine. But yet we must walke so soberly in all things, that by fulnesse of bread which was the sinne of Sodome, we neither benumme our senses, nor disable the members of our body from their speciall duties, alwaies obseruing this rule: that wine is to be giuen to the heauy heart, and not to 2 the merry. For the second, which is recreation: euen in this haue

haue the best forgotten, but we must looke that they bee first of honest report, which giueth small warrant for cards or dice; and if they were lawfull, yet ought not the children of God so much to vse them: because in that they imbolden others that doe abuse them. For that is the Apostles rule, Phil. 4. 8. Whatsoeuer are honest and of good report, thinke on such things. Secondly,² wee must looke we vse them as recreations, not so long as they may make vs unfit to discharge our vocations: for the end of our play must bee labour, and not to be brought alleepe with it: for then doth it neither comfort the strength of the bodie, nor re-leeu the powers of the mind, for which recreation was ordained. For the third, that is, apparell, the holy Ghost giueth vs a glasse to see when we are seemely arraid: wherein we must ob-serue two rules: first, that it be not costly: secondly, that it bee not garish: costly for the price, nor garish for the fashion. Paul (1. Tim. 2. 9.) comprehendeth both these by name, forbidding costly apparell, which is that that is either about a mans abilitie, or about those, whom in degree, profession, sexe and age the Lord hath matched with vs. For wee must alwaies in attire strue to match our selues with the grauest Christians of our profession. Garish is opposite to comeliness, and is that which fol-loweth the cut, which by the outward vanitie of the bodie, sheweth the instabilitie of the minde: for the visible attire hath these inconueniences with it: first, it descrieth the invisible pride of the minde: and saie and pretend what thou wilt, that thou hast no such end: when the leafe is greene on the toppe of the tree, how can I beleue, that the sappe is gone downe to the roote? and when I see these streames of pride about thee, how can I thinke but they flow from the well head, which boileth in the heart? Secondly, as it expresseth pride, so it exciteth and stir-reth vp lust, and very oft the occasion maketh the sinne. Neither is it good for a light braine to drinke much, nor to put flaxe to the fire, nor oile to the flame, nor to lay open a costly garment before a glancing eye. Thirdly, it doth abridge vs in the performance of many christian exercises, as contribution to the poore, hospitalitie in the house, and such like: for as the French man saith, Where there is a veluet coate, there is a belly of rust, and when

when wee are growne so high in pride, as wee cannot looke downe vpon the low estate of our brethren, but behold them as Grasshoppers vpon the earth: we may well curse that garment that withdrawes that blessing pronounced by Christ to them that visit the needy and relieue the naked. True it is the Gospel prescribeth no set fashion: but looke what the most godly doe of our profession, by the grace of this Gospel we ought to follow that, and wee shall finde peace for our soules; for the Lord dwelleth but in two places, either in the high heauens, or in an humble heart. And as a Philosopher said of concupiscence, some was naturall and necessary, some naturall but not necessarie, some neither naturall nor necessary: so may we say of apparell, some is comely and necessary, some comely but not necessarie, and some neither comely nor necessarie.

The second thing that is to be followed, is righteousnesse in life, and iust dealing betweene man and man; and this is either generall and vniuersall, or particular and peculiar. The first is the ground of nature, That all men deale as they would bee dealt with: the second is this, that euery man in his seuerall calling should deale with a good conscience, & giue euery man his due. Iohn Baptist hauing preached a sermon of repentance, Luke 3. 8. first generally exhorts them to newnesse of life, and then descendeth to speciall duties to be recommended to speciall men; as particularly for the Publicans, vers. 13. you must receiue tribute according as it is taxed, and not inhaunce it for your owne gaine. For souldiers, vers. 14. Doe no man any violence, neither robbe yee vnder this pretence, but be content with your wages. For rich men, vers. 11. that as the Lord had dealt bountifully with them, so they should extend their compassion to others. Wherein obserue, that as euery calling hath his speciall sinnes waiting on it, so the Baptist setteth downe speciall and particular remedies that eueric man must labour to furnish himselfe withall. So heere to speake of one kinde of righteous liuing, as that which is most abused, though the thing it selfe be most common, namely of bargaining: first obserue that Paul setteth downe a rule (1. Thessalon. 4. 6.) that no professor in his trade should goe beyond a man, that is, that euery seller should should set such a price as there may bee a iust proportion betweene the value and the thing bought. Now this value must be rated according to the generall rule of nature, Doe as thou wouldst be done vnto: and it is not enough to say Caveat emptor, Let the buyer looke to it; but thou oughtest to haue care that he may haue equall aduantage of the thing he buieth, with the benefite thou receiuest. Prouerbs 20. 14. is set downe the generall corruption of both these: It is naught saith the buyer, abasing it, that hee may haue it the cheaper: which implieth, It is good, saith the seller, praising it too much, that hee may price it the higher. Howbeit we must consider, that the same God that commaundeth thee not to assault his person, but to preferue it from violence, the same God enioyneth thee to haue care ouer his goods, that if his money doe passe thow thy hands, thou doe vse it with the same affection thou doest thine owne, alway remembering (Prouerbs 20. 23.) that diuers weightes are abomination to the Lord, and that (1. Corin. 6. 9.) no vnrighteous or vniust dealer shall euer see God. Manie will come and make such a shew of holinesse, that their endeouour is to deale iustly toward all, as they will needs bee resolued what are falsse weightes, what is vsurie, and what is circumuention or cosenage, that they may auoide it; and when it shall bee tolde them truly out of Gods worde what they are, and it falleth out to bee such as they expected nor, then they returne either with heauie or with angrie hearts, and will resolue themselues what was spoken was falsse. Euen as (Jeremie 42. 5.) Iohanan commeth to Jeremie to know whether hee and the rest might goe downe into Egypt to dwell there, where they should see no warre, and promisseth whether his message from the Lord was good or bad he would obey it: Jeremie went and asked counsell of the Lord, who answered, they should not in any case goe downe to Egypt. When Iohanan heard this, he burst forth into outrage, saying, It is not the Lord hath told thee this, (Jer. 43. 2. 3.) It is Baruch that maketh thee thus precise against vs: so hee was resolued before what to doe, onely hee would haue beene glad if his purpose might haue beene confirmed by the Lords mouth. And as it fareth with the sicke patient, who affecting some meate hurtfull, asketh the Physitian whether he may eate it or no; who hauing the regiment of their bodies, and knowing their disease, telleth them, no, in no wise: yet so strong is their appetite that they wil take it, and onely would haue bene glad if the Physitian would haue approoued it. So men will come to know the nature of sinne, which being described to be vgly in it selfe, yet seeming beautifull and gainefull in their affection, they will stl embrace it; shewing themselues to haue descended of that young man spoken of Math. 19. 16. who would needs bee questioning with Christ how he might goe to heauen, and when he touched him in his wealth which he made his god, as that he must sell all, it is said hee went away sorrowfull, for hee had great possessions.

Secondly, obserue heere the order the spirit vseth, placing iust dealing after sober liuing, as if it were impossible to looke for true dealing where sobrietie went not before; and therefore we hauing gone beyond the proportion of our old fathers, and exceeding that sobrietie which was the auncient renowned vertue of this age and nation, iustice and iust dealing cannot haue her due course, but the cloth must needs be stretched to maintaine our superfluities, so as that of Ioel 1. 4. fitteth for this, What the Canker-worme hath left the Grasshopper hath deuoured, what the Grasshopper hath left the Catterpillar hath deuoured, &c. So wee by the same proportion may saie in these daies, That which purchasing (which enlargeth it selfe like hel) hath left, that sumptuous building hath deuoured; what this hath left, magnificent furniture hath deuoured; what this hath left, pride of life hath deuoured; and what this hath left, ambition hath wasted: for great men must be bribed, and then poore men must needs be racked. And therefore it is certaine, if reformation begiane not at our selues, that wee can pull downe whatsoeuer exalteth it selfe aboue the compasse of modestie, comelinesse, and sobrietie, wee shall expect little trueth and iustice to others.

Thirdly obserue what this is commandeth vs to deale iustly; it is not the law in terrour of death, but the Gospell, euen because cause the Lord doth purpose to saue vs by this grace : so as it is a suite commended vnto vs by such a speciall token of the price of saluation, as wee cannot chuse but performe it with great care, vnlesse we will shew our selues greatly vnthankfull, and prooue our hearts to be more then flintie. Jeremie conuinceth (Jerem. 35. 14.) the obstinacie of the Iewes by the example of the Rechabites, who refused to drinke wine offered and set before them, because their father Ionadab had so commanded them, Heere upon (saith the Lord) Iuda I haue warned thee often, but thou wouldst not incline thine eare nor obey me. Of which example we must make this vse; Rechab spake to his children but once, the Lord hath spoken to vs often to liue religiously; he was but the father of the flesh, God is the father of our spirits; his commandement was hard, and his yoke heauy, to forbear the vse of lawfull things and necessarie, as not onely to forbear wine, but they must neither sow nor plant, and yet they kept it: the Lords commaundement is, that wee surfeit not with the cares of this life, and that wee deale honestly with our brethren: Rechab promised them but to liue long on earth; our Father for our obedience hath promised vs eternall life: so as both hee that commaundeth is higher, and the reward that is giuen is greater.

Now followeth the third thing that is to be embraced, and that is a godly life; for it were absurd to be precise toward men, and to deale wickedly with God: and all is abominable if our religion toward God exceed not our righteousness toward men. To know what godlinesse is, shall bee best discerned by the contrarie: and vngodlinesse is three-fold; first the worship of a false God: secondly, the worship of a true God falsely, as the Iewes that executed the Lord Iesus, and Paul that persecuted the Church of Iesus, they did thinke they did God great good seruice: thirdly, such as worship the true God in a true seruice outwardly, but with an vnzealous heart, like Iudas that followed Christ and yet betrayed him: and like Demas that forsooke Paul and embraced the world, yet did hee not returne to his idols againe: and in truth there is no difference betweene these two last: for it is all one to serue him fantastically, as did the Pharisees; as to serue him coldly, as did the Laodiceans: but now godlinesse is opposite to all these, and is a true seruice of a true God, in a true religion, with a true heart. And this is soone discerned by our affections: for if we can tremble at the word preached, and be possessed with the spirit of feare at the least offence and sinne which we can commit, because we know that the maiestie of God is displeased, and the spirit of God grieved; and if from this feare doth spring sorow, and from this sorow, care of recouering our fall againe, and when wee are cured can resolute and strengthen our selues in patience to goe vnder the yoke of afflictions, and vnder the wheele of death for the truths sake, we may assure our selues our paths are straight, and that in our iourney toward God our feet be shod with the preparation of the Gospell of peace, not any way to be distracted with cares, nor distrustfull with the troubles of this life.

Hence obserue, that none are to be commended for their sobrietie and honestie, vnlesse also they be religious; which is proued thus: None are honest, but they that be cleane in heart; no mans heart is cleane, that is not purified in conscience; and none are purified in conscience without faith; and none haue faith, that are not zealous and religious toward God; for faith striueth by praier with God. Thou wilt say, loue is the fulfilling of the law: but this loue toward our brethren implieth, and of necessitie presupposeth a loue of God, which constraineth vs to loue man: for no more then a man can loue God and hate his brother, no more can he hate God and loue his brother; and if he loue God, in this is euer included a loue and zeale toward his glorie. Againe, if we take the loue of our brethren, to be that Paul speaketh of, (1. Tim. 1. 5.) it is then agreed: for then it is loue from a pure heart, a good conscience, and a faith vnfained, which being grounded on Christ is the foundation, roote, and well head of all honestie and iust dealing.

Lastly obserue hence, that the godlinesse here spoken of must haue two properties: for first, it must not be hidden in the heart, but fruitfull and visible to the eie, that the world may see it: secondly, we may not deferre our godlinesse, but it must be present euen as the time of our life is: for Gods children must be like

like the rod of the Almond tree spoken of Ieremi. i. 11. which in those countries where it groweth, is the first that blossometh: yea we must not onely giue the first fruits as vnder the law, but euen all the fruits of our liues to the Lord: for God oftentimes punisheth the want of his feare in our youth, with the want of wisdom in our age: & if our godlines be not present he oftentimes cutteth vs off before we can see the time to come. Neither yet must we thinke it sufficient to cherish godlinesse in our hearts, no nor in our chambers, but it must be as a light set vpon a hill, that not onely Gods children may see it for their direction, but that euen the world may see it for their condemnation: as Christ saith to his disciples, I haue sent you to walke in the midst of a froward and crooked generation, yet must they walke still: for by this open profession of godlinesse, we shew whose liuerie we weare, and that we are not ashamed of the crosse, nor abashed at it. Howbeit, this course of godlinesse which we must liue in, is no more nor no lesse then an absolute resignation and giuing vp of all things in respect of God, which standeth in three things: first, in giuing vp our reason: secondly, in denying our affections: thirdly, in framing our mind to a moderation in what estate the Lord shall set vs in. For the first, we must resigne vp ^{1.} our reason to religion in two respects: first, for that it is an incomprehensible mysterie which is vnsearchable: secondly, for that the ignominie thereof is vn sufferable in our reason, as to thinke that he is blessed that is hungrie, they vn happy that bee rich, and that the Lords correction is loue. For the second, ^{2.} which is the giuing vp of our affections, it will teach vs so to walke, and so to deale as in the presence of God; it will make vs plough vp those furrowes of pride and vaine-glorie, which lie so deepe in our hearts: and when by the instigation of our affections we are moued to riot or voluptuousnesse, it will make vs abstaine, because we haue giuen our selues to God. For the ^{3.} third, to haue a willingnesse to suffer what the Lord sendeth, will make vs resigne vp those inordinate cares of getting, where-with we are oftentimes perplexed; and to content our selues with that portion the Lord hath shared out vnto vs: so as by religion and a godly life, we shall learne to say with Dauid: O Lord

Lord thou hast done it, therefore I hold my peace: and not only to beare an outward contentment in worldly things, but euen in all calamities, to rest vpon the mercifull hand of God.

IAMES chap. 2. Vers. 20. 21.

20. But wilt thou understand, O thou vaine man, that the faith which is without works is dead?
21. Was not Abraham our father iustified through workes, when he offered Isaac his sonne vpon the altar?

THe word of God hath two parts in it: first, it is a word of wisdom: secondly, it is a word of knowledge, by knowledge to reforme the iudgement, and to conuince the conscience; by wisdom to perswade the affections to the obedience of that we haue truly learned. Saint Iames here indeuoreth to perswade that none could be saued without works, and he proueth it by a double example of Abraham and of Rahab: Wilt thou understand, &c. as if he should say: If that set downe before cannot sufficiently take root to affect thee and to perswade thee, that without the workes of a holy life thy faith is no better then a diuels faith, take this example of Abraham for all; thou wilt grant that Abraham was an excellent person, and had true faith, and that the couenant was so made with him, that none should be saued, vnlesse they were of his seed, either according to the flesh and spirit, or at least according to the spirit. And since the couenant was made with him, and he was saued by faith, so must all we be saued by his faith, that is, by a faith of the same kind that his was; for there is but one faith, though there be diuers measures of it. Now Abraham

braham had an approved faith, as it is proved by this one act and worke of his for all, because it was the principallest of all, in that he staid not, nor demurred vpon the Lords commandement in offering vp his sonne, the greatest worke that euer flesh and blood did, except his that was more then flesh and blood, namely Christ.

And because the Iesuits, as hardened enemies against the truth, haue strangely peruerted this place, we must vnderstand a difference betweene these speeches: Faith without workes is dead, and, Faith that is without workes is dead: for by the first speech may bee thought, that workes giue life to faith; which is most false: but the second speech is true, workes being a necessarie consequent of faith, and an infallible signe, that faith hath gone before: euen as in these speeches, to say: The body is dead without breathing; and the body that is without breathing is dead: for if wee affirme and attribute the cause of life to breathing, it is false; for the soule is the cause of life in the body: but the other speech is true, for the body that hath no breath in it is dead; and where breath is, it is a signe there is life. So to say: the tree that is without fruit is dead, is true; but not to say, the tree without fruit is dead, for the tree that standeth in the ground & is not fruitfull, we may well say is dead at the root; but when the sap lieth at the root, we may well say there is life in the tree, though there be no fruit on the branches.

Now the aduersaries argue thus: No dead faith can iustifie: faith without workes is dead; therefore no faith can iustifie without workes: as if they should say; Christ Iesus neuer raised vp himselfe without his humanity, therefore his humanity helped in raising vp his flesh; which is most blasphemous. Howbeit, Christ separated from his humanity was neuer raised vp, this is must true. So they in their former argument referre iustification to workes, which is most false: but if they had concluded, therefore faith that is without workes cannot iustifie, they had done well; for thereby had been proved, that workes had been inseparable from faith, but not that they concurre: for faith is alone euer in iustifying, but neuer alone in the person iustified: euen as the eye alone of all the parts of the bodie doth see, but the eye that is alone, separate from the other parts of the body, doth not seee at all, but is a dead eye.

Was not Abraham, &c. Heere consider two points : first, in what sense this is true : secondly, why this worke about the rest is commended and registred for a prooffe of Abrahams faith.

The words heere set downe are directly contrary to the words Rom. 4. 2. Abraham was not iustified by workes ; and therefore they must be so reconciled as both places may bee true, lest contrariety and variance appeare in the spirit of God, which cannot be. This is like those speeches vttered by Christ, My Father is greater then I : and in another place, I and my Father are all one : and I count it no robbery to be equall with my Father ; which is spoken in a different respect : the first, in the person of a mediator : the second, in the person of the Godhead. So Saint Paul taking the word iustifying for iustification before God, said true : and Saint Iames taking the word iustifying for iustification, or approuing of his faith before men, saith true also : but the word being taken in one and the same sense, it were impossible for an Angell from heauen or for Christ himselfe to reconcile them. And the reconciliation which the Papists make of these two places, fighteth directly with Paul : for they say, faith and workes doe iustifie : Paul saith, faith onely iustifieth. So as when Paul speaketh of iustifying by faith, hee meaneth that whereby wee are acquitted by Christ, and doe appeare perfect before God in him : and Saint Iames taketh it for being iustified in the sight of men, that is, declared and approued to bee iustified when our holy life answereth to our holy profession. And that the word Iustified is thus vsed, and taken in this sense, as Saint Iames doth, appeareth Psalme 51. 4. That thou maiest be iustified when thou art iudged, that is, declared to bee iust. So Luke 7. 29. the Publicans iustified God, that is, declared him to bee iust : and in the same place it is said, Wisdomes is iustified of her children. And Luk. 10. 29. it is said, the Lawyer was willing to iustifie himselfe, that is, to shew that hee was iust : and it is likewise prooued out of the text it selfe ; Shew mee (saith Saint Iames) thy faith, shew it to mee, not to God.

Againe, Saint Iames had falsified and abused the Scripture, if he had taken the word (iustifying) in the sense to be made iust; for the sentence that Abraham was iustified, had passed the Lords mouth many yeeres before the sacrificing of his sonne: for this, that hee was iust, was pronounced long before Ismael was conceiued, as appeareth Genes. 15. 6. and therefore taking the word (iustified) to bee made iust, hee could in no sort bee iustified by offering vp his sonne, because he was iustified before: but the meaning of Saint Iames is, that it was approoued by this act and worke of Abraham, that God had not saied before in vaine that hee was iustified: and Rom. 4. 10. it appeareth Abraham was iustified in his vncircumcision; and this worke Iames speaketh of was done long after his circumcision.

To this the Papists reply thus, Though Abraham was iustified before hee did this worke before God, yet there is a degree to bee more iustified, and so this place of Saint Iames may bee taken to bee a further iustification and an increase of faith before God as well as not. To this wee answer, that one pardon from God sufficeth for all sinnes, and one droppe of blood serueth for all offences: but because our faith is weake, that we are not able to apply this bloud all at once, therefore it is saied, that we must grow from faith to faith; and he that is washed in the bloud of Christ is all cleane: but our sanctification in this life leaueth some grudge and tang of corruption, and maketh our feete impure, as Christ speaketh, Iohn 13. 10. so as with God wee are iustified all at once; and there is no proceeding by degrees in respect of him, for blood pardons all, but water, that is, our renewing groweth by degrees.

Now for the speeches of Saint Paul, Rom. 4. 4. 5. and Rom. 8. 30. that none are iustified by workes: the Papists say, It is to be taken of the workes of the law ceremoniall, but not of the law morall. But we must note, that Paul speaketh there of the law written in the tables of stone, of that law that manifesteth sinne to bee sinne, Thou shalt not lust, &c. which is the law morall, and so their distinction false and friuolous. Besides they were both the lawes of God, and therefore a man may bee iustified as soone by the one as by the other : for as Paul saith, 2. Corinth. 3. 5. All our sufficiency is of God, and of our selues we can doe nothing, and but that the vaile is taken away in Christ, the same couering remaineth which was in the old Testament vnder Moses.

And where Saint Paul saith, Abraham was iustified without workes, and no man shall bee iustified by the workes of the law : True, say the Papists, by none of the workes of the law that he doth in the time of his infidelity, but by them that hee doth after his conversion he may be iustified. And they say, that forasmuch as the Apostle saith, The workes of Abraham were done in beliefe ; therefore by this hee excludeth onely those workes done before faith to helpe his iustification. So as by this wee see the aduersaries maketwo iustifications : the first, when of an infidella man is made a professor, which they say is by congruity, when there is a certaine inclination in the heart of man to performe some good workes, and yet for want of grace cannot, the Lord seeing his heart thus prepared to be iustified, doth call him, and mecrely of his grace doth iustifie him. The second, when a man is freely iustified by the grace of God, then by this grace of God and his owne free-will (say they) hee may increasē his iustification before God.

For the first, we answer that none can be iustified by workes before faith ; for this is as if a tree should bring foorth fruite without a roote, or a body should liue without a soule : so in vaine is it to make a question of that cannot be ; for before wee haue faith it is impossible to worke, or to thinke of a good work. Secondly, where they say, that speech concerning Abraham is taken and to be vnderstood of his workes done before faith, and that he was iustified by his good workes in faith : this doth wholly enervate and take away the strength of the Apostle his reason : for Paul saith, If hee were iustified by workes then had he whereof to glory with God, Rom. 4. 6. which speech extendeth as well to workes after faith, as before faith ; for hee that deserueth any way may glory. Secondly, the Apostle saith, Not to him that worketh, but to him that beleueth is righte-

ousnesse due, for if hee worketh hee hath his wages by desert: that is (say they) he that standeth vpon his owne workes before faith, without the assistance of Gods grace, this man challengeth it by desert, because hee did them without faith and grace: which euasion and shift is most vaine; for a man is not therefore made euill because he doth euill, but he doth euill because he is borne euill: so a man is not iustified, because hee worketh not, but therefore hee worketh not because hee is not iustified. And it is most blasphemous to say, iustification is wrought partly by grace and partly by free-will, and to thanke God that thy free-will with his grace can iustifie, for heereby shalt thou neuer be iustified: for if any thing of thine either preuent the grace of God, or assist it in thy iustification, then is it not as Paul saith, Ex gratia sed ex debito, not of grace but of dutie. And where they speake of two iustifications, we neuer heard but of one, mentioned by Paul Rom. 4. 3. that is, iustification by faith. And for the second iustification, that is, that being iustified men may deserue something by their workes, this is but a fruite and effect of the first, that is, a daily proceeding to wash our feete, Iohn 13. 10. and an earnest endeouour by good workes to make our election sure, and to haue our faith approued, according to that in the Reuelation, 22. 11. that hee that is righteous may be more righteous, that is, may still bring foorth better fruit: for the workes of the iustified please God, not of themselues, but because they are iustified, for the person must first bee accepted before his worke can bee accepted. And though none shall goe to heauen but they that bee washed where blood hath gone before, yet none because hee is washed shall bee saved.

Now in this example of Abraham which is set downe heere, obserue foure parts: first, a brieue narration of it: secondly, the speciall worke of Abraham, which is aboue all other his workes registred and exemplified: thirdly, the amplification of the worke in the 22. and 23. verses: fourthly, the determinate conclusion that a man cannot be saved nor iustified by faith onely.

Of the example it selfe was spoken before; now followeth to intreate of the second part, that is, of the exemplifying

and enlarging of this worke of Abraham in sacrificing his sonne: Heere may be demanded, why the Apostle alleageth this worke of his more then any of the rest; as if there were some disparagement betweene this and other his workes and excellent vertues: hee was peaceable to all, harborous to the poore, resolute in afflictions, wise in the government of his house, not affraid in the sight of Kings to set vp and erect an altar, as a testimony that he serued the true God, euen in the midst of their idolatry: yet is this worke preferred aboue all, that is heere set downe, because though hee was declared to bee iust in all his other workes, yet chiefly and aboue all in this of sacrificing his sonne.

The circumstances to exaggerate and make this worke seeme great, are these: If Abraham had bene commanded to haue disherited this sonne, or to haue banished him, or to haue seene him no more, it might much haue tried his patience; if he had had more sonnes then this, yet because he loned this sonne specially well, in the affection of a parent it had bene much to haue endured: but this, that Isaac was borne of the free woman, and though borne of flesh, yet meereley supernaturall, in as much as there was no more life in Sarrah's wombe in respect of her age then in a dead stocke; that he was his onely sonne, his beloued sonne, the sonne of the promise, when Abraham knew that if Isaac were taken away, both himselfe and all the world should bee damned, because in this sonne alone was the promise: if he had had more children, though the couenant onely was tied to this sonne, or if there had bene any more hope of children, if hee might onely haue heard of the sacrificing of his sonne, and not haue seene it; or seene it, and not haue done it with his owne hands; or done it sodainely, and not haue gone three daies in strife betweene the law of nature, and the law of obedience: or if Isaac had offended any thing, or if this commandement had come from the tyranny of any Prince and not from God, or if it might haue bene closely done, and not in a mountaine, where the Sunne might abhorre to see such cruelty of a father toward an innocent child, it had bene much lesse euen in the affection of a naturall father, and yet a most grieuous triall and assault. But thaz

Heb. 11. 12.

that this commandement must come from God, who first had bid him hope for this sonne, and now bids him kill him, as if he had before but mocked him: that an Angell must be the ambassadour and carier of this message, whom the weake eyes of man cannot behold for glory: that this newes must come in the night when his eyes by other objects could not draw his minde from bethinking of this bitter message: and that this must seize vpon him in his sweet sleepe to awake him; though in respect of the former he might bee much anguished, yet by this so much the greater was his trouble: and yet far lesse had it been, if he might not haue gone so long perplexed in his thoughts. But now not to demurre nor stay vpon it, but to rise vp early in the morning, and in three daies iourney, wherein no doubt he had many and diuers agitations and combats of spirit, not to vter a repining word or grudging speech, this was a further and greater triall. For many are wont to be good at a brunt, who are altered by after cogitations. Then the words of the sweet child; Father heere is wood, but where is the sacrifice? had bene enough to haue rent his heart, to see he should be butcher to that sonne could aske so wise a question. All which must argue and shew such a strong and mighty faith in Abraham, that he could neuer so silently and chearefully haue performed this, had hee not beleueed, that if his sonne should haue gone to hell, the Lord could haue taken him out againe: for faith admits of no contradiction when it hath a promise. And so we see Abraham forgets not onely to be a father, but the matter is so qualified by faith, that he forbeareth not only the affection of a parent, but in faith beleueeth, that out of his ashes the Lord would raise him vp, not another, but the very same Isaac.

From hence learne, that though the Lord examine not vs so strictly as hee did Abraham, yet hee trieth euery one of vs according to his measure: for the practise of religion and mortification concerneth all from the Prince to the tankerd-bearer; and though wee cannot all be swallowed vp so deeply with the zeale of Gods glorie, as were Moses and Paul, who to win soules to God, wished themselves not to see God, yet must wee learne, when we haue a commandement, to exclude and lay aside all discourse of flesh and blood, and to follow Christ, euen to the hazard of our owne lines, not a farre off as Peter did follow him to his suffering, but iust behind him, as neere as can be, according to the rule prescribed, and with that alacrity and resolution that we ought, euen as Abraham did heere to the sacrificing of his sonne.

Exod. 32. 32.
Rom. 9. 3.

Mat. 26. 58.

Secondly, in this example obserue : that if Abraham could forbear to command his naturall loue of a father to a child at the Lords commandement, how much more shall wee bee vnexcusable, that cannot command our selues from vncleanness of the flesh, and such like sinnes, but will keepe our sinnes as tenderly and as long as wee keepe our liues, and yet will bee counted the children of Abraham ? But wee must answer our selues as Christ did the Pharisees, Ioh. 8. 44. and as Saint Iohn did answer those to whom he wrot, 1. Iohn 3. 7. that we doe but flatter our selues with the name, when wee are in truth the children of the diuell : for hee that doth righteousnesse is righteous ; and if Abraham resigned vp the lawfulness of the tender affection of a father at the Lords commandement, much more must wee resigne vp our affections and discourses in vnlawfull matters.

Mat. 4. 20.

Mark. 9. 47.

Further obserue, that it is not enough for vs to deny our vnlawfull pleasures and appetites, but wee must euen forbear things lawfull if the Lord command it. If hee call vs soorth to triall for the Gospels sake, we must with Peter and Andrew leaue our nets, that is, our calling ; and forsake our wiues ; that is, our comforts, and our selues, euen to pull out our right eyes, if they be any impediments to vs in the progression of faith and a good conscience ; and if there be any repugnancy that we cannot enioy our wiues and glorifie God, we must not regard them in respect of God : for if we doe, the Lords mouth hath spoken it, we shall neuer be saued. Let vs therefore take heed how wee build, for if our foundation be of stubble, the day of affliction will soone consume it, and wee shall be as blowne bladders emptied with the least picke of any triall, and as brasie that yeeldeth an hideous sound vnder the hammer : but if we ground vpon that golden foundation of faith, then in our afflictions shall we be as gold which is more agreeable in the found, and more pliable in the stroke; and we lying betwene the anuill of death and the hammer of the Lords hand, shall shew our selues in patience to possesse our soules, euen like Abraham, who without grudging did execute the Lords ambassage, though most repugnant to nature, and to the promise made.

Againe obserue, as this matter of triall in Abraham turned in the end to a comfortable issue: euen so shall it fare with vs in our afflictions and temptations; and if we wil sacrifice vp our honor, our affections, our Isaac, that is, our laughter, the ramme only shall die for it, that is, our cares, our troubles, our afflictions, and our vexations shall be wiped away. This is agreeable to that Mat. 10. Yee shall for my names sake forsake what you honour most, and loue best: and then followeth; If any man doe this, I will giue him in this life an hundred fold more, that is, more ioy, more resolution and peace of conscience, and more comfort in this base and low estate, then he should haue had in an hundred fathers, or an hundred wines, not regarding the quantitie, but the blessing of God in the comfortable enjoying of them. This offereth singular consolation to those that suffer for the crosse of Christ, that the thornes of this life shall onely be sacrificed, and our soules and consciences shall rest secure, filled with greater ioy in the end and issue of our troubles then euer wee were before. And as the world saith; that he is rich that is contented; euen so we say, that he is safe that resteth in the Lords hands: And if we stretch forth all our powers to embrace Christ, then is he gone as a harbinger to provide a place for vs in heaven, Ioh. 14. 3. and he that saueth our soules, wee may well trust him with our bodies.

Further obserue, that he offered vp his sonne, and yet he did it not: wherein we learne, that the purpose of a mans heart being fully resolved to do a thing, it is in the Lords eies as if he did it, though he doe it not: for therefore is Isaac said to be offered vp, because he was so in the purpose of Abrahams heart, which the Lord accepted as an execution of the thing it selfe. And this holdeth both in vertues and in vices: for if a man be called before the iudgement seate as an heretike in any time whatsoever, and

doe what he thinketh is in Gods sight
ye action is false*

and being called thus to triall, offereth to seale his opinion with his blood, and matters going further doth not relent: what is this man in the sight of God (if his religion bee true) but a Martyr, though his life be after pardoned? Not that euery resolution is taken of God as if it were performed; for Peter was caried with a vehement precipitation and presumptuous conceit of his owne strength, when he said, Master though all men forsake thee, yet will not I, (Iohn 13. 37.) but I will lay downe my life for thy sake: and yet afterward vpon a small occasion he denied him. But if a man stand in the day of his examination and triall, and shrinke not, but is ready to sacrifice his life for the defence of God his truth, as Abraham was ready to haue sacrificed his sonne; then because in the triall he did not relent, but euen in this time did purpose it, it shall be taken of God euen as this worke of Abraham, done though not done, and his life lost though he escaped with his life. In like manner falleth it out in sinnes, for if thy heart be full of adultery, and yet because shee that should bee thy harlot dallied too long with thee, or else occasion did not fit thee; whereby thou art kept from the act it selfe, yet art thou a whoremonger in the sight of God. The like may be said of other sinnes, for though Saul threw not a stone at Stephen, but onely kept the clothes of them that did it, yet is he (Act. 8. 1.) inrolled in the booke of God as one that consented to his death.

Mat. 5. 28.

- Vers.* 22. Seest thou not, that the faith wrought with his works, and through the works was the faith made perfect?
23. And the Scripture was fulfilled, which saith, Abraham beleexed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousnesse, and hee was called the friend of God.
24. Ye see then how that of workes a man is iustified, and not of faith onely.

3. This is the third part, namely the amplifying of this example in the 22. and 23. verses, together with the conclusion in the 24. verse.

Hereupon

Heereupon the Papists take occasion to say, that not faith alone, but faith together with workes worketh our iustification. Whereunto we answer, that there be some things wherein faith worketh alone, and some things wherein it worketh together with workes. Faith worketh alone with God, it hath wings and flies to heaven, it dealeth onely betweene God and Christ, and prostrateth it selfe before God in Christ, vpon confession that the soule is Satans due, and deserueth to bee bound hand and foote and to bee cast into prison as vnable to pay the debt; it intreateth that this obligation may bee taken from Satan, it wrastleth with death and damnation, and terror of conscience, and craueth a pardon, bringing nothing but the very heart blood of Christ. And euen as the very looking vpon the Serpent healed them in the wilderness: and nothing else could appease the tempest, (Jonah 1. 15.) but the very calling of Jonah into the sea: and the finnes of the people (Leuit. 16. 22.) were laid onely vpon the Goate: so faith in this petition of forgiveness, brings nothing, but commeth emptie, and laieeth all vpon the shoulders of Christ. But now betweene men and men on earth, faith worketh by loue; so as if we bring nothing to men but faith, it is certaine wee neuer brought faith from God: for since thy heart is not discernable, and the spirit and piety of the heart is vnsearchable in respect of men, and good to God wee cannot doe, our faith vpon earth must be as busie before men in workes, as it is before God in the blood of Christ. And as Martha and Mary (Luk. 10. 39.) dwelled in one house, one onely to heare Christ, the other working and labouring to entertaine Christ; euen so our faith with Mary must onely kneele at Gods feet, to heare that comfortable voice of the pardon and absolution of our finnes in the blood of Christ: but our faith on earth must labour with Martha, by loue and good works to entertaine and helpe our brethren.

Coloss. 2. 14.

Num. 21. 9.

Besides, wee must consider that things may worke together, but not together in the same worke. Euen as Christ in the worke of mediation must haue two natures, a diuine humanity, and an humane diuinity: and we say not, that Christ as God onely, nor as man onely is Mediator; but by these two concurring concurring together: and as wee saie, that Christ is not Mediator without flesh: and as truely we saie, that hee raised not vp his flesh by his humanitie, but suffered in the flesh, and was raised vp by the power of his diuinitie onely; and that his diuinitie died not, but his flesh onely: and in this they worked seuerally; in the flesh to be ouercome of death, and in the spirit onely to ouercome death; yet these two in the worke of our saluation doe worke together. Euen so faith worketh with loue, in bringing foorth sanctification and a holy life: but in the verie apprehending of Christ his blood, this power to iustifie is of faith onely. Like as the roote of it selfe gives life, but the roote with the branches bring foorth fruite. And as the fire maketh warme by heate and light, and yet the heate of the fire warmeth alone, but light is inseparable from it: so no faith can worke well without workes; but yet there are none iustified by the power of workes, but by faith onely.

Now where it is said, Faith wrought with his workes, and through the workes the faith made perfect: obserue that this is meant onely of a declaration to men; for we are perfectly iustified in the sight of God by the blood of Christ. And though the hand be leproous, yet it can receiue sound meate: so though our faith be imperfect, yet our iustification is perfect. For there is but one pardon in heauen, through that one death and passion of Christ; and before a man be perfectly iustified, he cannot do a good worke: for we must first be in Christ before wee haue faith, and must haue faith before wee can worke, for these are fruits of faith. And as a Toade is not therefore a Toade because it poisons, but therefore poisons because it is a Toade: nor a Serpent is not therefore a Serpent because it stings, but stings because it is a Serpent: so we are not ingrafted into Christ because we are good, but being ingrafted into Christ wee are made good.

Lastly obserue in the wordes, that wee are not iustified because wee worke, but because wee shall be sawed therefore wee worke. Zacchew (Luke 19. 8.) had not saluation because hee restored foure-fold, and gaue halfe his goods to the poore; but because the Lord was come into his house, and had taken possession of his heart, therefore hee wrought these works of faith. Neither was the poore man in the Gospell healed because he should sinne no more: but Christ saith, Thou art healed; therefore in signe of thankfulness for thy health looke to thy life that thou sinne no more: for heaven shall not be giuen to workes, but to workers; and promise of eternall life is made to the workes of the iust, as they are iustified, and they are iustified onely in Christ, for in euery worke there is imperfection; not but that the spirit could worke perfectly, but that euery thing is receiued according to the measure of that that doth receiue it: and wee in this life are able onely to receiue the first fruites, and not the fulnesse of the spirit: for the spirit is like the Sea that is able to fill any vessell, but no vessell is able to containe it.

Iohn 5. 14.

Gal. 3. 11. 12.

Now in the 23. verse, two parts are to be considered: first, the purpose of the Apostle in alledging this Scripture: secondly, the sense of the matter deliuered.

For the first, if Saint Iam. cited this place to proue that Abraham was imputed righteous in the sight of God by this work of sacrificing his sonne, hee must needs haue wrested this Scripture, which were blasphemy to say, being written by the finger of God: for Abraham had this imputation of righteousness through his beleefe giuen him and pronounced by God himselfe, Genes. 15. 6. before either Ismael or Isaak were borne: so as then the meaning of the Apostle in alledging this scripture, is onely to shew that that testimony which God gaue Abraham of the excellency of his faith, was declared and approued to be true by the performance and execution of this speciall worke.

Now for the second point, concerning the sense of the place cited, namely that Abraham beleued God, and it was imputed to him for righteousness: here we see that it is agreeable to the scripture, that the obedience of the sonne which stood in two parts, first in fulfilling the law, secondly in satisfying for our sins, is onely inherent in the sonne, and was in him euen from the moment of his conception to the moment of his ascension: and

and that wee haue onely his obedience allowed vnto vs, and through the imputation thereof we are made iust, not that it abideth in our selues, for we are no better then Abraham: but we haue it by imputation as Abraham had. And this is a doctrine of great comfort and necessitie to be beleueed, that wee haue it by imputation and not of our selues: for now wee are sure it shall neuer faile vs, nor wee shall neuer lose it, as Adam at first lost his innocencie wherein he was created: and therefore now since the Lord recouered vs being lost, he hath more care of vs then to trust vs with the cariage of our owne righteousnesse, and therefore hath committed it to him whose loue faileth vs not, and of whose abundance euery of vs are filled.

Now this the Iesuites doe greatly scorne, and call it a new no righteousnesse, if we be not iust in our owne persons; and they say, that God cannot be iust, if he make a man iust through the righteousnesse of another, and not in himselfe: Take heed (say they) of the glosse of the Calvinists, who hold, that our righteousnesse is a thing onely inherent in Christ, which is a fantastical, imputatiue, new, no righteousnesse, whereby we conceiue that to be in vs which cannot bee found in vs: and they (say the Iesuites) count it more to Gods honor to take him to be iust, that is not so, then for God to make him iust through his grace that was wicked. Further the Iesuites say, that God at first iustificth meere by grace; but after so qualificth a man, as after his conuersion he hath righteousnesse inherent in him, and so not imputed, and this is mans righteousnesse, because it is in man, but Gods righteousnesse because it commeth from God.

To this we answer: and agree that God iustificth the wicked, but it is blasphemie to say, that hee iustificth the wicked continuing wicked; and we hold that wee are made iust through the obedience of Christ communicated to vs; and as Christ for vs was made sinne, who of himselfe had no sin, so we in Christ are made righteous being of our selues vniust. And wheras they say, that God after a mans conuersion doth qualifie him with some habituall matter whereby he is in himselfe iust before God, we say, that he iustificth no man but after his calling, when he giueth him the spirit of regeneration, whereby he is chaunged in his affections, and reformed in his life, which is as water where blood hath gone before; by blood to cleare him from the guiltinesse, and by water to cleanse him from the filthinesse of his sinne: so as we say he is not wicked after his calling, but God then maketh him partaker of the first fruites of the Spirit, (witnesseth his conuersation) and by this effect he is declared to be iustified in the blood of Christ. 1. Ioh. 5. 6.

Yea but (say the Iesuites) your opinion cannot be sound, since righteousnesse giueth a denomination that such a man is righteous before God, and it is such a qualitie as a man cannot be said to be iust in the iustice of another, no more then to liue by another mans health. Now this is true of formall qualities, but not of iudiciall imputation: for as a payment made by another, dischargeth the obligation, and maketh the principall partie no debter, so the iustice of God being satisfied in the death of Christ, we are freed from that penaltie we had incurred, and acquitted of that debt we did owe, which we should haue paid had not Christ done it. Hereupon the righteousnesse of Christ is called a garment, which we haue not by birth, but as a thing that commeth from without: so as the righteousnesse of Christ consisting in the couering of our nakednesse as a garment, proueth that that whereby we are imputed righteous, is not a thing abiding in vs, but a thing laied vpon vs in the loue of Christ. Yea but (say the Iesuites) what iustice is this in God to account a man righteous in anothers righteousnesse, or to account him a sinner that had no sinne? True it is, it is another mans righteousnes if we speake of the inherencie, but yet our righteousnesse and not his onely, as he is our person, our Christ, and our Sauiour; Ioh. 17. 23. and it is ours, since wee haue him whose it is: and this maintaineth Gods iustice to punish Christ in our person, and to iustifie vs in his, in respect that he is in vs and we in him: and so doth he neither punish the innocent, nor iustifie the wicked. And for this cause it is said, that we are flesh of his flesh, and bone of his Ephes. 5. 30. bone, which must not be vnderstood of any incarnation & grosse naturall coalition and mixture of his flesh and ours, for then the reprobate should haue this righteousnesse aswell as the elect. But as it is said in mariage, man and wife are but one flesh, not meaning meaning thereby any coniunction of natures, but still they remaine feuerall, but onely because by couenant and promise they are to separate their bodies one for another: so is it to be vnderstood, not that we with Christ are conioyned in substance, but yet more nearly conioyned then any naturall or artificiall vnion, and more truely (but yet spirituallly) then the husband is to the wife, the members to the body, the branch to the tree, or the meat to the body that it nourisheth, which must alwaies bee taken mystically. And in this respect when wee know that Christ is truely ours, that God giueth life, and this life is in the Sonne, and this Sonne is in vs, it followeth, that wee are not saued by his righteousnesse but by our owne, his person being made one person with vs, not really in substance, but spiritually; and yet not subiect to fantasie onely, for wee are indeed in Christ, and not partakers of his spirit onely, but of his flesh also; according to that of Christ, Iohn 6. 50. Vnlesse ye eat my flesh and drinke my blond, yee haue no life in you: not that wee eat the verie flesh of Christ with our mouth, but leauing the grossenesse of substance, we do truly feed on him by faith spirituallly, and we are made not onely partakers of his benefites, but of Christ himselfe: as it is said: He that hath the Sonne hath life, not the benefites of his life, but life it selfe: so as we are ingrafted not into Christ his death, but into Christ himselfe, and Christ dwelleth in vs, as himselfe speaketh, Iohn 6. 56. And wee are made not one soule with Christ in desire, nor called spirituall because we are ioyned to him in spirit: for wee are ioyned to him in bodie also: yet is it called spirituall, because it is wrought by the power of the holy Ghost by faith in this life, and in the life to come by the very aspect and beholding of God, and the irradiation of the blessed Trinity. And although we are not able to conceiue and vnderstand this, it is no maruell: for it is a great mystery, a mystery of all mysteries, surpassing the excellency of an Angels concept, only adore it and beleue it, and labour not to compasse it by the weaknesse of thine vnderstanding, which shall neuer be truly vnderstood, till we see God face to face.

Heere may be demanded, how Abraham could bee one flesh with Christ, seeing that he died long before Christ was borne.

Notwith-

Notwithstanding this be so, yet Abraham and all the rest of the Fathers through their faith were spiritually conioined to Christ who is the Lambe slaine from the beginning of the world, and they were not saued by their regeneration and workes of faith: for these were but effects of their first vnitng to Christ spiritually; which speech of our coniunction with Christ, is like that of the true Catholike Church, who are said to bee members of another, though they be seuerall persons, in respect of the mystical reference which they haue to Christ their head.

Further they obiect, Rom. 5. 19. As by one mans disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one many are made righteous. Whereupon they inferre, that it must be proportionable euery way: and that as corruption is naturally deriued from Adam to vs, and his very corruption really abideth in vs, so Christ must really deriue his righteousness from himselfe to vs, or else (say they) the example holdeth not. To this we say, as in Adam we are truely sinners by his sinne, and that not by imitation, but by imputation; for that one sinne of Adam which condemned all the world, was onely committed in the person of Adam: so the iustice of Christ is no more in vs, then was that sinne onely of Adam which made vs all to be damned, and the punishment of that sinne brought originall sinne, and the generall corruption. And (say they) though all are saued through the obedience of Christ, yet as after the sinne of Adam, originall sinne was deriued to vs, so must Christ his righteousness needes be in vs. We answer, true it is they agree in this: Adam giueth vs that he hath by the participation of his flesh, Christ giueth vs that he hath onely by the communication of the holy Ghost. Againe we say, as euery man dieth of his owne disease, and yet it may be he had that contagion from another, so for Adams sin, as it was imputed vnto vs we die, and yet not for Adams sinne alone, but for our owne, for in vs there is the very matter of corruption: but Christs righteousness is not in the flesh but in the spirit: for though we may haue perfect sinne, yet we cannot haue perfect righteousness: Againe, there be three degrees in Adams sinne: first, by imputation: secondly, by propagation and drawing the filthinesse of Adams sinne really into the soule and flesh of man. Thirdly, we are condemned iustly by the imitation of Adams sinne, in as much as when we come to discretion we sinne as Adam did : but rigteousnesse is spirituall, and hath but one degree, onely by imputation and not by imitation, for who would goe to hell to suffer as Christ did ? And yet there is somewhat in Christ, not imputed to vs, but deriued to vs, yet no matter to iustifie vs ; that is, the sanctification of his nature, which is the renewing of ours : and this holinesse we must haue actually in vs, but all this is after our conuersion wrought meerely in the obedience of Christ his blood.

JAMES chap. 2. Vers. 25. 26.

25. Likewise also was not Rahab the harlot iustified through works, when she had receiued the messengers and sent them out another way ?
26. For as the body without the spirit is dead, euen so faith without workes is dead.

NTo the example of Abraham, the Apostle matcheth this of Rahab, to shew how by this excellent worke she did proue her selfe a conuert Israelite from a cursed Cananite : wherein first is questionable, why the holy Ghost should vouchsafe to fort Abraham that most reuerend father of the faithfull and of the Patriarkes, with a woman who was for her condition base, because a victualler ; for her country cursed, because a Cananite ; for her conuersation infamous, because a strumpet, and leaue other excellent examples of worthy men, which might seeme to haue beene a lesse disparagement to Abraham : whereto is answered, that there is a speciall cause why saint

Saint James setteth this example downe aboute the rest, because to the example of Abraham it might haue beene replied, that he was a singular and rare man, so as few might be compared with him, none did euer exceed him, and many were inferiour to him and yet haue bene saued: and therefore that the Apostle should not too much insift vpon the example of Abraham, for this cause he hath chosē such a one, as there is so many degrees betweene Abraham and her, as if it bee aboute our reach to match Abraham, yet wee may bee ashamed not to ouermatch a whoore. And if wee can neither imitate the highest, nor bee equall with the lowest, let vs boast neuer so long of good workes and faith, it is certaine wee are monstrous hypocrites, and cannot bee saued.

Secondly, in this example wee must wisely consider what worthy things there are in this worke of Rahab taken out of Iosh. 2. 1. that it should receiue this honour to bee matched with the noble acts of the Patriarkes, both by this Apostle and in Hebr. 11. 31. Wherein wee must examine the lawfulnessse of her act, not onely to conceale them that came as spies, but to abet, comfort and conuey them away, since they came to espy the land, which tended to the desolation of the whole countrey, and subuersion of the state. Which maketh nothing for them that send Emislaries and Iesuites into this our land, to steale away the hearts of the people from their lawfull Soueraigne. For in that Rahab did thus aide, comfort, and abet them, shee did it not because they came to vsurpe and assault the countrey, (for if they had had no right, but onely had come to haue made a larger extent of their Princes territories, it had bene in them a fellonious purpose, and as rouing vpon the sea and robbing by the high-way; and if shee had suspected they had come to this end without hauing any better right, vpon paine of her soule shee should haue discried it, otherwise shee had bene disloyall to her Prince and State:) but in that shee did conceale it, shee knew shee had her security from heauen, that cursed should all those bee that resisted the seed and race of Abraham; shee knew that by the mandate of the almighty the land was giuen vnto them, and that they that dwelt therein were but vsurpers, and therefore were bound to yeeld it vp as from God. And if vpon this knowledge she had not protected them as Lot did the Angels, Genes. 19. 8. she had beene guiltie of their blood: she might haue beene vsed like Tarpeia among the Romanes, who when shee had ingaged them to deliuer vp their bracelets vpon recompence of yeelding vp the Citie and Tower, the souldiers ouerwhelmed her in stead of giuing her the bracelets: but all conditions made by Rahab were performed by the spies, to shew that the whole worke proceeded from the Lord. Now for the letting them out by night, though it bee not lawfull by the lawes of such defended cities and places, to scale the walles in the night time, yet vpon the equitie of the cause, and in the case of necessitie it may bee excused; for shee let them out at a window, a thing done without mutinie or any fraudulent purpose to escape, and therefore iustificable, euen as the letting downe of Paul in a basket was, Acts 9. 25. And in this whole worke shee sinned nothing but in making of a lie, which though some excuse and extenuate because it was Mendacium officiosum, an officious and dutifull lie, yet it is no way excusable, for no lie to saue a soule is lawfull. Wherein wee obserue, that euen the Saints of God in their best purposes haue in some things followed their mother wit, and their owne corruption. Withall note the louing kindnesse of the Lord, that this particular blemish in the worke doth nothing derogate from the excellencie of her obedience, no more then Rebecca, Genes. 27. 8. who notwithstanding she subscribed to the oracle of God that Jacob should overcome Esau; yet shee by indirect meanes sought to prevent this worke of God, which the Lord in mercie did winke at in respect of her generall resolution to be obedient. The like may bee saied of Abraham, who because hee thought the feare of God was not in the house of Abimelek, and that they would haue slaine him for his wifes sake, Genes. 20. 2. dissembled Sarah to bee his wife, and carried her vnder the name of his sifter; which infirmitie the Lord passed by, because in other his actions hee was faithfull.

Heere some to debase this worke of Rahab may say : Why, was this such a matter to harbour a few messengers of the Lord ? and why should this commend her faith, since she neuer came to triall to auouch this worke ? We answer, that the resolution she admitted was very great, since it might haue cost her the greatest torment that could bee ; and shee might so haue stunke in the sight of the people by thus betraying them and their countrey, as either the people in a mutiny, or the King in iustice might seuerely and cruelly haue executed her : so as by this it argueth that she was perswaded that the God of Israel was onely to bee worshipped, and the seede of Abraham onely in the world to bee esteemed : and heereupon shee did practise the rule of our Sauuor Christ, euen to hate her owne nation, and tooke her life as it were into her hands to saue theirs that were the seruants of God. So as though in the former example the Ramme onely was sacrificed and not Isaak : and in this example Rahab safely deliuered, and her parentage rescued ; yet the resolution of them both was nothing lesse : and so the speech of Christ true, that they that for his sake forsake all, shall haue more comfort in that little that is left, hauing peace of conscience, then of all the former store : nay, that they that suffer for his sake shall bee free when their persecutors shall bee fettered, as appeareth Jeremie 39. 11. 15. Jeremie that was in desolation and in prison was safe, when the King himselfe had his eyes put out : and Ebedmelech the Kings counsellour was promised not to perish, when the rest should fall by the sword, because hee had made the Lord his arme.

Mar. 11. 20.

Mar. 10. 37.

Further, this example of Rahab to stand so resolutely for the deliuerance of the Lords messengers, conuinceth all those that howsoeuer religion twang vpon their tongue that they can prate of it, yet proue that they haue nothing in them but the Laodicean luke-warmth, Renel. 3. in that they so professe it as they shrinke in the day of triall, and dare not aduenture to harbour the Lords Embassadors, and to succor them as Rahab did. Yea and this example condemneth others, who are so farre from forsaking lawfull things, as wife, possessions, life, &c.

Mat. 24. 17.

for the Gospels sake, as they will not forbear vnlawfull things, no not to leaue off the least shew of pride, or the least profit in biting gaine. Whereas by this example wee are taught to take vp our crosse, and not to looke backe like Lots wife, Genes. 19. 26. for there is no tarying in Idolatrie or other profanenesse, to fetch any thing from the house toppe, or to runne backe into the fields to take our garments, though they bee necessarie for this life, as our Sauour speaketh in the Gospell. But more iustly the example conuinceth them that row with the tide, and professe with the parliament: for he that doth therefore professe religion because he hath his protection from the Prince and State, would with the State serue the diuell. Nay, in matters of religion wee must not ground vpon examples, but vpon the trueth of the religion: for as we must not follow a multitude to do euill, so neither must we follow a multitude to do good onely because they do it, Exod. 23. 2. For it is not the religion of God which we enioy because the parliament enioineth it: but therefore it is by parliament commanded, because it is the religion of God: and fearefull it is to thinke, that a Prince can prescribe a law to the eternall God, which is farre more disparagement, then for a subiect to make a law how he will obey his Prince, which notwithstanding is not sufferable. But as Rahab was perswaded that the God of Israel, that sent those men, was the onely God, and that the loines of Abraham for whom this land was to be gained, were the true owners by the speciall promise of God: and in this respect she regarded not her Prince, nor her countrey, nor her owne fathers house, but that by speciall mercy they were exempted; but she did most faithfully and in great obedience, and in a most Christian resolution willingly resigne vp the countrey to them, to whom the Lord had giuen the title: Euen so must wee in matters of the Lords seruice alwaies preferre and stand for the will of God to be obserued, rather then either to haue our countrey preserued, or our Prince obeyed. For as Peter saith, Act. 4. 19. It is better to obey God then man; yet still so, as we submit our selues to the power and authoritie of the higher powers, vnder whose sword are our bodies, though our soules be vnder the shadow of the Almighty.

Againe,

Againe, where it is said : She receiued the messengers : obserue the cause why she did it, because she was perswaded the God of Israel sent them, so that it was not to gratifie the men respecting the men, sauing that religion did constraime her, and her loue to them arose in respect of her loue to God that had conuerted her. Whereupon we note, that the world determineth wrongfully of good workes ; as that a man may be an honest man, and liue well, and doe good to his neighbor, though he be not greatly religious : for all actions wherein the glorie of God, the loue of God in Christ, the comfort of our consciences, and the desire of the saluation of our brethren do not concurre, those are not good : so as a good action without religion can no more be good then a house without a foundation, a tree without a roote, water without a well-head, or to bee good without God : for where there is no zeale, there is no faith ; where no faith, no conscience ; where no conscience, no loue ; and shewing our loue not for conscience, we may for our charitie go to the diuel : for a man must first be good before he can doe good ; and good he cannot be without God. The workes such a man doth may bee perhaps like the Emeraulds of the Philistims, varnished ouer with gold, that is, make a faire shew in the sight of men : but if they proceed no further, that is, to haue the testimonie of the spirit, that they bee wrought by his hand, they are most abominable before the face of God. Wilt thou set a face as if thou wroughtest well, because thou wilt not take the penaltie of an obligation, and yet thou wilt prosecute a matter against a preacher, for a superstitious, ceremonious, beggerly element? What good worke is this, to speake well of all men, and yet at euerie word to wound, to bloud, to heart the holy one of Israel? What is it, not to hurt thy neighbour, to be a friend to thy friend, and yet to be an enemy to the friend of God? What great worke is it, not to beare false witness, and yet priuily to suggest against him thou darest not reprove to his face? So as vnlesse our doing of good arise from religion, wee may easily straine at a gnat and swallow a Camel ; heare Iohn Baptist gladly for a time, and chop off his head afterward as Herod did, Matth. 14. 10. Now as for moralists, and such as transforme themselues according to the times, they are as Iude 13. tearmeth them, the raging waues of the sea, foaming out their owne shame as the wind serueth, and like the wandring starres of the firmament, vnconstant and vnsteddy, void of faith (for sides must be firma, non ambulatoria, we must haue a standing not a walking faith) and as without faith they cannot please God, so except they please God they shall not be saued.

She tooke them and sent them away.

Where learne, it is not enough for vs not to hurt a man that professeth religion, but wee must doe him good: euen as this harlot wrought not enough in receiuing the spies, and then to haue left them to their owne hazard, but as in obedien^ce she did receiue them, so in faith she must safely send them away. Yea we are bound by praier, by purse, by person, by credit, by countenance to releeu^e them, not onely to thinke well of them and to like them, so farre must we be from vexing them. For if Obadiah (1. King. 18. 4.) had onely hid the Prophets of God, and had not fed them, it had beene but halfe a good worke. Heereupon is it, that in the last day, in the sentence of the reprobate shall neuer be mentioned what euill they haue done, as that they haue bitten by this vsury, or polluted their bodies by that whore-dome: but there shall be recited onely the good they did not, as, for not clothing the naked, for not visiting the sicke, for not releeu^eing the poore brethren: for Rahab must not onely conceale and hide the spies, but shee must send them away safe. And if the sentence of iudgement drawne in this forme cannot affect vs, let vs further know, that though euill is the absence of good, yet good is not the absence of euill: for Rahabs worke is but lame if she doe but harbour them, and if she doe not finish it by letting them forth; it shall neuer bee registred as a worke of faith. For looke Iudg. 5. 23. Cursed be Meroz, that came not to helpe the Lord against the mighty, not because he did persecute the Lord, or did him any hurt, but because he helped him not. And wee see Rahab vpon this least knowledge of God ventred her life to saue them. Besides, we shall read in the Gospell, that the greatest torment of the glutton is, that he gaue Lazarus no water, not that hee was an extortioner, or that hee spurned the poore

poore man from his doore. By all which examples we are taught, that where religion is oppressed, by all meanes and in all things we can, to releue the Gospell: for the good we haue omitted, and the euill we haue committed, shall come to iudgement.

Lastly, marke the words: Rahab the harlot, which reprochfull speech must not bee referred to the present state of her conuersion, but to her former conuersation: as if hee should say: Rahab that once had bene a whore: for none truly conuerted can remaine in their former sinne, but if hee doe after his conuersion fall into some grosse sinne, as Dauid did in killing Vriah, the Lord will scourge him as hee did Dauid. And to bee raised vp of the Lord after such a relapse, must not bee by slubbering vp our repentance, but we must so be humbled, as to feele drinesse in our bones with griefe as Dauid did, Psal. 32. 4. And we shall neuer receiue comfort vntill wee haue soundly and seriously repented. Whereupon we gather, that the Lord regardeth not what sinnes we haue committed before our regeneration, so that after our conuersion we walke worthy of our calling; for many that were whores and wicked were conuerted. As Luk. 7. 37. she that washed Iesus feete with the teares of her eyes and heart, and wiped them with the haire of her head, had bene a whore: but wee read not that after that she was any more so. So Zacchens (Luk. 19. 5.) was an extortioner before Christ called him from the tree, but we reade not that he ever tooke peny vsury after. And Mat. 20. 10. such bee inuited to the supper as bee patched and lame, to expresse our spirituall beggery: but after we are come thither, wee must haue the wedding garment of a good conscience. For Saul was a persecutor of the Church before hee was called, but wee neuer reade that he was so after his conuersion. For if we continue in a sinne, looke what followeth euen in this life, 1. Cor. 5. 11. If any that is a professor be a whore-monger eate not with him, that is, forbear thy priuate familiarity with him: so then being conuerted, wee must shew our repentance from those sinnes wherein before we were fallen: as the repentance from vsury is liberality; the repentance from pride is humility; from whoredome chastity: for repentance is the leauing of thy sinne, and the cleauing to the contrary vertue, and it is no repentance to leaue thy sinne when it must or hath left thee: as vpon thy death bed to repent thee of thy vsurie, when thou canst take no more; or in thy age to repent thee of thy lecherie, when thou canst satisfie it no more; but to repent from thy sinne is, as I. Peter 4. 1. to suffer in the flesh; to suffer in the flesh is to cease from sinne; and to cease from sinne, is not onely to leaue thy sinne, but to spend the rest of thytime in a holy conuersation.

Heere will be obiected, since workes are so precisely vrged, what say wee to the faith of the theefe vpon the crosse, what workes did he? and by this example many betray their soules in presuming of the like grace. Wee answer, that this was a particular priuiledge giuen to that theefe, euen as a pardon may bee giuen to a man vpon the gallowes: and if any embolden himselfe heereupon, perhaps the rope will be his hire: and it is not good to put it vpon the Psalme of Miserere and the necke-verse, for sometime he proueth no Clarke. And for this theefe, the Lord neuer did it but to one, that none might presume; and yet hee did it to one, and did saue one in the exigent of his life, that none might despaire. Secondly, this was a worke reserved for the manifestation of the power of the Sonne of God, that he should beleeeue in his fellow sufferer, and desire him to saue him; that when the Pharisees denied him to be the Sonne of God, yet a poore wretch and a theefe should confesse it. Thirdly, we must not regard the shortnesse of his confession, but consider the time and circumstance when and before whom this confession was made; euen then when no man durst defend the innocencie of the Sonne of God, when the Pharisees left him, when all his Disciples were scattered, and when Marie his mother that stood a farre off and knew him to be the Sonne of God, and yet spake nothing in his defence, whereby she sinned against the first table. She was his mother, and saw him put to death vniustly, and yet would not testifie of his innocencie, whereby she bore false witness against him, & so sinned against the ninth commaundement: being her sonne, she did not comfort him vpon the crosse, and so sinned against the fift commaundement: yet when all these either doubted of his diuinity, or despaired, the poore theefe did confesse him to be that Christ the Sonne of God, who had Paradise to dispoſe. Laſtly know, that he was ſuch a wretch, that he neuer knew God before, and therefore was it no maruell though he committed felonie: but as ſoone as the Lord knockt at his heart, firſt he confeſſeth Christ to be God and to die an innocent, Luk. 23. 41. We ſuffer righteouſly, but this man hath done nothing amiſſe: wherein he wrought a worke of the firſt table: ſecondly, he reprooued his fellow who railed on Christ, wherein he wrought a worke of the ſecond table. So as this example of the theefe is no warrant to deſerre or triſle off our repentance till the laſt houre, for hee wrought as ſoone as hee was called. If therefore the Lord hath offered vnto vs the riches of his mercie, let vs in the acceptable time embrace it, and not abuſe his long ſuffering by growing more leane and ill-fanoured by theſe many yeeres wee haue had of religious peace and plentie, but let vs returne vnto him while he is in the way, before darkneſſe too faſt ouer-grow our ſoules, and before death ſnatch vs away into the graue.

For the ſimilitude, which is verſ. 26. obſerue onely that it agreeth not in all points, for the ſoule is the cauſe of the life of the body, but ſo are not good works the cauſe of faith, but only an effect and fruit of it; for faith giueth life to good works, and faith worketh by loue in the perſon iuſtified: for we muſt (as hath bene ſaid) firſt be good before we can do good, and we are made good ſpiritually by our regeneration in Christ, and we being ingrafted into him then we do good: ſo as the meaning only of the Apoſtle, is, by this ſimilitude to ſhew, that when a dead man being dead can ſpeake, which is impoſſible, then faith which hath no workes, and ſo is but a dead faith, ſhall iuſtifie and ſaue vs.

1. IOHN chap. 3. vers. 9. 10.

9. Whoſoener is borne of God, ſinneth not ; for his ſeed remaineth in him : neither can he ſinne, becauſe he is borne of God.
10. In this are the children of God known, and the children of the diuell : who ſo doth not righteousneſſe, is not of God, neither he that loueth not his brother.

HE Apoſtle in the beginning of this chapter firſt ſetteth downe that God the Father by his euerlaſting loue in his Sonne hath beſtowed vpon the faithfull this priuiledge, to be called the ſonnes of God in the ſonne of God Chriſt Ieſus. Secondly, that this dignity to bee the ſonne of God, and ſo to be called, is not to be diſcerned by the men of the world, becauſe they haue not knowen the Sonne, hauing not his ſpirit; for ſpirituall things cannot be diſcerned by them that haue nothing but fleſhly policy. Thirdly, as this cannot be diſcerned of the world, ſo it is impoſſible our ſelues ſhould ſufficiently conceiue of it while we remaine in the tabernacle of this life, becauſe there is another glory we expect, verſ. 2. Fourthly, he ſetteth downe an effect inſeparable from this adoption, As many as are the ſonnes of God, and haue this hope of future glory, they ſtriuie to reformation of life, not to be equally pure, but to bee like pure to the Lord Ieſus. This hee prooueth, firſt from the inſtitution of the law; God neuer ordained the law neither after our creation nor after our redemption but to bee kept, and the reaſon is thus; The breach of the law is a diſparagement ragement to him that gaue it; therefore wee that be his children must keepe it. Secondly, from the materiall cause of our saluation; this Christ Iesus by whom wee are saued is most pure, and came to destroy sinne by the power of the holie Ghost, and the spirit of sanctification; so that whosoener sinneth deliberately hath neuer beene ingrafted into Christ, nor sanctified by Christ. In verse 7. hee meeteth with those calumnious speeches commonly vsed, that the Gospell being preached which bringeth remission of sinnes, it is no matter how we liue. But (saith hee) be not deceiued, vaunt as long as yee will of your profession, I tell you the plaine trueth, onely hee that liueth godly is godly. This hee prooueth verse 8. by the contrarie, The diuell is the author of sinne: so hee that giueth himselfe ouer to sinne, must needs bee of the diuell. Why? for he sinneth from the beginning: and if hee be the sonne of the diuell, hee cannot be the sonne of God, for the Sonne of God came to destroy the workes of the diuell. So the reason is this; In whom Christ neuer destroyed sinne, for him Christ neuer died; but they that giue themselues ouer to sinne, in them Christ hath not destroyed sinne; therefore for them Christ neuer died, and by consequent they can neuer be saued. Now in this ninth verse he laboureth to prooue, that none can be saued but they that labour to perfection in holinesse of life, thus, He that is borne of God cannot sinne; his reason is, because the seede of God is in him. In the tenth verse he sets downe two infallible markes to discern by our holinesse of life, or by our sinfull life, whether we bee of God or of the diuell, namely, the exercise of righteousnesse, and the loue of the brethren, that is generally all men, because they beare the image of God in their creation; but specially is meant by brethren, the sincerest professors of the Gospell. So as the summe of all this is to prooue, that hee that hath any hope to be like Christ in glory, must labour in this life to be like him in puritie.

Out of the words, first consider what is meant by this, Whosoener is borne of God: secondly, what is meant by this, Hee that is borne of God sinneth not: thirdly, how a man may secure himselfe that he is the sonne of God.

For

For the first vnderstand, that when the Scripture calleth regeneration that power of the holie Ghost whereby wee are made new creatures, there is a proportion to be kept, and a resemblance to be made betweene the generation wee haue in the flesh and the regeneration we haue in the spirit: and this consisteth in fve things. First, as euery one for his naturall life is to be borne once of two parents, so in the heavenly and spirituall regeneration there must bee a father and a mother; the father is the holie Ghost, which must beget vs by the seed of the word preached in the heavenly Hierusalem the church of God, which is our mother. Secondly, as who so is borne of earthly parents, is made partaker of the flesh, so hee that is borne of the holie Ghost, is made partaker of the diuine substance after a mysticall maner, and is ingrafted through faith into the bodie of the Lord Iesus; not that Gods substance is really infused into him, but onely the qualities of the spirit of God powred into him. Thirdly, as none doth naturally beget himselfe, or bringeth any thing with him to the framing of himselfe, but in the act of generation is altogether passiu: much more in the renouation of our nature, which is wrought not by destroying the former substance of soule and bodie, but onely making them holy which were before vncleane, we bring nothing with vs: for if any thing should concutre with the holy Ghost in our second birth, which is the renewing of the faculties of the soule, and that God onely should make vs men, but wee should helpe to make our selues good men, then should this power bee lesse seene in our second creation then in our first, which were iniurious to the spirit of God. And yet the aduersaries abuse men by saying they haue free will, and some good thing in them, which maketh the Lord to iustifie them. Fourthly, as it sufficeth to be begotten once to a naturall life, so when the holy Ghost hath once regenerate vs, the effect and efficacie of this is continuall, and such a man can neuer fall away. And therefore friuolous is that distinction of veniall and mortall sinnes with the Papists: for if any should be mortal, then must there needs be a second renewing, which cannot be, for the Lord worketh this but once. And therefore Dauid. (Psal. 51.) though he praieth for the spirit, lying

lying languishing vnder the heate of the Lords wrath for his sin of adulterie, yet in the same place he saith: Lord take not thy spirit from me, which prooueth he then had it, though he felt it not with such comfort as hee had done before. Lastly, as hee that is borne of flesh, is not at first a man, but groweth by degrees: so our spirituall regeneration as it is not to be reiterated, so is it not to be perfected all at once; as that we should straight be spirituall men: but wee are daily more and more renewed to the image of God in Christ, and doe increase in heavenly graces till we come to be of an absolute growth, and to be perfect men in Christ Iesus.

Againe, consider what that is the Scripture calleth To be borne againe: which may bee vnderstood out of Christs sermon to Nicodemus, (Iohn 3.5.) when he did catechise him, being a master in Israel, in this mysterie of regeneration, and that is, wholly to be borne againe in a mans soule, for whatsoeuer naturally is in him is accursed. This Christ proueth by two contraries: whatsoeuer is in man is either flesh or spirit; wee haue nothing by carnall generation but flesh, therefore what we haue of the spirit is by regeneration, whereby our affections are reformed which by nature are peruerse; our hearts mollified, by nature as hard as stones; our consciences purified, by nature vncleane; our vnderstandings enlightened, which of themselues are darke.

For the second, Whosoever is borne of God sinneth not: this may seeme strange: for chap. 1. 8. this same Apostle saith; that he that saith he hath no sinne lieth: therefore by the words sinneth not, is not meant, that he that is borne of God hath no sin; but sinne in this place is opposite to the purging of a mans selfe, set downe in the third verse: that is, though in such an one as is borne of God, there remaineth many corruptions, yet he laboureth to expresse the puritie of the spirit of Christ in his outward actions: and he sinneth not, that is, he cannot possible but indeuour with a full purpose of his heart after holinesse of life. So as hence learne, that this is a true position: that all men doe not commit sinne; for he is said not to commit it, that laboureth to reforme his life, and God giueth successe to his indeuour. Now the difference the Scripture maketh betweene Gods children and their finnes, in respect of the wicked and their finnes, is great and foure-fold. First, Gods children are said not to sinne, because they be washed and cleansed, which the wicked be not. Therefore Paul saith, (1. Cor. 6. 9.) Be not deceiued, no fornicator shall see God, and such were some of you, but yee are washed. Whereby wee are to vnderstand a proportion betweene materiall and spirituall washing, which we may perceiue by the Sermon of Christ, Iohn 13. 5. for Christ there offering to wash his disciples feet, to shew his humilitie, and Peter refusing it, hee tooke an occasion to enter into a signification of a further mysterie: for Peter in a foolish humilitie denying it, because he thought it vnseemely for the master to wash the seruants feete, Christ draweth a proportion from materiall washing: Vnlesse (saith hee) thou be washed thou shalt haue no part with me. Peter being astonished at this, answereth, Not my feet onely, ô Lord, but my hands and my head. Heere Christ sheweth, he did as much mistake him in this as before: for by washing the feet onely hee tooke a resemblance from washing in bathes: that when the vpper parts be cleane, the scowring and superfluities goe downe toward the feet, or else going out of the bath, on the grauell they must needs foule their feet. Euen so (saith Christ) he that is beloued in me hath the principall part of his heart holy, and thou Peter maiest acknowledge this, but there is on thy feet some earthly affection that must bee taken away: and so fareth it with all the children of God. But now the wicked (as Prou. 30. 12.) are pure in their owne conceit, and yet they are not washed from their owne filthinesse, but are as beastly as swine. The second difference is in this: sinne is mortified in the elect, but not in the wicked: euen as a man is said to be dead, hauing receiued a deadly wound, though he languish for a time, or as a man in such a consumption, as his humidum radicale, his naturall moisture is spent and cannot be repaired: euen so the power of the spirit of the Lord destroyeth the workes of the diuell in vs, and sinne hath receiued such a wound, as it can neuer recover his former strength, but by degrees doth pine and consume away, till it bee vterly abolished by death, when our sanctification shall bee perfected: but in the wicked the diuell hath his full swing,

swinge, and sinne it perfect strength. Thirdly, the godly are said not to sinne, because he laboureth to walke in all the commandements of the Lord. Now he that walketh in the right way may sometime fall : but if hee doe, hee struieth to regaine it by greater carefulnesse and speedier passage : but the wicked goe cleane out of the way, as if heauen stood at hell gate. Lastly, because in the godly there is a combat ; for there is two men in them ; in the inward man they would faine please God, and by the outward, (as Saint Paul saith) they are made captiue to sinne : but in a meere naturall man there is nothing but flesh, and so no combat : for where all is one there is no diuision ; and if there be any strife in him, it is betweene his conscience and himselfe, in iudgement conuincing him that it is sinne, and not betweene his conscience and his affection, milking it as it is sinne : for this is easily seene by his often relapse into the same sinne. Rom. 7. 23.

Now for the reason : hee doth not sinne, because the holy Ghost which is the seed of our second birth remaineth in him, neither can he sin : and this is proued by two places of scripture : first, Rom. 8. 1. where the Apostle proueth these two graces inseparable : iustification from sinne, and sanctification from sinne, thus : There is no condemnation to him that liueth a spirituall man : this is proued (vers. 5.) by contraries, They that liue after the flesh, saour the things of the flesh, but he that is borne of God cannot doe so ; for then he must saour of death, which cannot be ; proued by this : The wisdom of the flesh is enemic to God ; but he that is borne of God cannot be Gods enemy : on the other side, hee that walketh in the wisdom of the flesh, obiecth not the law of God, and by consequent (saith the Apostle) cannot but sinne. Whereupon it followeth, that they that liue after the inclination of the heart of man, cannot please God, and so cannot bee saued : now he that is in Christ cannot but please God, because he cannot but performe his will. Another reason, that being a true Christian, a man cannot but amend his life, is taken out of Rom. 6. 5. Whosoever is made partaker of Christ, is made partaker of the death of Christ, then is he dead to sinne, proued thus : Christ by his death deserued not onely remission of our sinnes, but also to haue the holy Ghost in those that bee his

to mortifie their sinne : and this spirit cannot bee idle, but worketh, and his worke is to destroy our enemy, that is, sinne. Lastly, it is proved thus, Whosoever is in Christ, hath the spirit of Christ; he that hath this spirit, liueth in the spirit : for the life of the spirituall man is the Lord Iesus, euen as the life of the bodie is the soule, and hee that hath a soule must needs breath : and walking (Galat. 5. 24.) in the spirit, hee cannot fulfill the lustes of the flesh, for the flesh and the spirit bee contrary. And vers. 24. it is said, They that are Christs haue crucified the flesh with the affections thereof; and who these bee, appeareth 1. Peter 4. 2. such as suffer in the flesh, and these be they that cease from sinne. Now then for thee to say thou art flesh and blood, is not a shelter pleadable when thou art reprehended for sinne; for he that is a good Christian cannot but forbear it : and if thou art all flesh and blood, then hast thou not the spirit of God, which is proved 1. Corinth. 6. 16. Do you not know how he that completh himselfe with a harlot is one flesh with her, and hee that is one flesh with a harlot cannot bee one spirit with Christ Iesus? Euen so for wrath toward thy brother; thou saiest thou canst not loue him. Consider that if the Lord should iudge thee out of thine owne mouth, thou couldest not bee saued. Thou wilt say, the iniury is so great as no man can put it vp : but hee that is more then a man can doe it : and if thou beest all man, Christ Iesus will neuer put vp thy name among the Saints. Looke 1. Ioh. 5. 3. Hee that is borne againe counteth all the commandements of God light : so as if thou be of God, it is an easie matter to forgive thy brother. If he repent not of the wrong done vnto thee, Rom. 12. 20. leaue the vengeance to God, and heape thou coles of fire on his head : and if he do repent and seeke reconcilment, it is the easier to forget it, and flesh and blood doth pity the case of the suppliant.

For the third point, which is the way how to assure our selues to be the sons of God : wee must learne, that there is no so certaine a marke to discern a man to be of God, as holinesse of life; not but that Gods children may fall most grievously, and blemish their profession most foully, but that if Sathan happet to blindfold them that they goe astray, yet with the lost sonne they

they will returne with double sorrow, and vnfold to their shame their owne sinne. Example whereof wee haue in Dauid, who though he was ingaged to the Lord by his many benefites, that rooke him from the sheepe-hooke and gaue him a Scepter ; that by his protection had made him escape the snares of his enemies, and by his mercy had freed him from many tribulations, yet did he fall into great vncleannesse, euen the sinne of adulterie, which by the law of God deserued deprivation of this humane life. When he had done this, hee glauered and flattered with the womans husband, and bad him goe home to refresh himselfe with his wife, seeking thereby to father the bastard on him. When this succeeded not, he thought to make him drunke that he might thereby bee more irritable to lust, and so to haue gone to his wife. And though Vriah answered hee could not doe it, because the Arke of the Lord was in the field : which had not Dauid beene desperatly sicke in his soule, how could he haue beene so forgetfull of the Lord, as to haue dealt so with him that was no Iew, but a conuert to religion, heereby to make the name of the Lord euill spoken of ? Yet when this preuailed not, hee went further, and vnto adultery hee added murder, that hee might make his sinne knowen, and his vnholly life to appeare both to God and man, and carry as the greefe of it in his heart, so the shame of it in his fore-head. And in this hee wrought worse then Iesabel, for hee made Vriah the instrument and messenger of the letters for his owne execution ; yea hee sent them to Ioab who had himselfe beene a murderer ; which might harden his heart in that sinne, seeing Dauid that was the King, not onely a faouurer but the cause of such bloody actions. And after what manner should this be done ? namely, that hee should fall by the sword of the vncircumcised, a most ignomiuious, and shameful, and grieuous death for so Christian a Gentleman ; and that hee should so murder him, as to colour the grieuousnesse of his fault, not hee alone but many other should die innocent ; and that hee should continue senselesse in this sinnefull course by the space of a yeere ; yet when it pleased God to cure his disease of hypocrisie, and to cleare his eyes that hee saw not his sinne.

Gal. 1. 15.
Mat. 26. 75.

but his chaine of finnes before him, then he calleth himselfe not a man of blood but of bloods, and then his conscience is open to grieue for it, and then with his teares he washeth away his vncleanness, and walketh as a man cleansed and purged from his filthinesse. So as if any bee a whoore, let her remember the teares of Mary Magdalene: if a persecuter of the Saints, let him repent with Paul: if a murtherer, let him soundly confesse his sinne with David: and if he be Apostasied, weepe with Peter; for these be the workes of righteousness whereby they are known to be of God. And seeing others deliuered from the pit, wee must learne (as David saith Psal. 56. 3.) to feare and to trust; so as wee must alwaies feare to fall into the sinne, before being fallen we can trust to bee deliuered, for this is one part of the righteousness of Gods children, to tremble at the sight of sinne, and then shall wee neuer swallow it without remorse.

Secondly, from hence learne, that a man may know in what state another man is. If I see thee a despiser of religion, a profaner of the Sabbath, a butcher to the poore, and an vncleane liuer, what shall I beleue thee to be, but the child of the diuell? for this may I know by thy fruites. Why, but loue biddeth you hope the best, and beleue the best. True it is, loue biddeth me beleue all things; but not a sow to bee cleane wallowing in the mire, or a dogge not to bee filthy that is regorging vp his stomacke, or that grapes can grow vpon brambles, or that mercy can bee found in the heart of an vsurer, or that thornes may bee touched and will not pricke. For as loue bids mee not to determine too soone, so not to bee abused too late: and God bids me looke vpon the tree to iudge of the fruit. I may say, thou art in the state of damnation: for by thy snarling I know thee to bee a dogge, and I see thy heart through thy hands; but whether thou shalt be finally damned, I leaue thee there: for the Lord may haue mercy on thee vpon thy repentance. I may come to the tree and say, heere is no fruit, or here is small fruit, or heere is bad fruit; but I cannot say, Neuer fruit grow on thee heereafter, as Christ did Mark. 11. 13. And it is not the commers to Sermons, but the doers of Sermons that that shall be saved: for frequenting of holy exercises with an vnrepentant heart, doth but seale vnto a man his farther damnation, as it is Esay 66. I abhorre that yee doe (though it be commanded) euen as the sacrifices of the heathen: and the blond of a Bullocke is as if yee should offer up the blond of a man: so as to make it a worke of righteousness, the action and the affection must goe together.

Lastly, another speciall marke of Gods childe, is loue of the brethren. Where we must obserue the vnitie God requireth among the members, not to blaze abroad, but to support one another in their infirmitie; for loue must couer offences, and that from foure sorts of eies; first, from the eies of the Almighty, in praying for our brother, as S. James saith. ch. 5. 16. that he may be healed of his sinne; hauing heerein for your examples Christ, Iohn 17. who praied vpon the crosse for his enemies, Father forgive them, they know not what they doe; and Stephen, Acts 7. 59. Lord lay not this sinne to their charge. Secondly, from the eies of the sinner, as either when we see him not capable of a reproofe to profite him, as Abigacl (1. Sam. 25. 16.) while her husband was possessed with wine, reprooued him not, but did it after in his sobrietie: or else when we see him plunged into too much sorrow for his sinne, as Paul saith of the incestuous person, 2. Corinth. 2. 7. Yee ought to haue comforted him when yee saw him so confounded with grieffe. So Peter (Acts 2. 38.) when hee had vncovered to the Iewes their sinne in crucifying the Lord Iesus, when hee saw them anguished and pricked in their soules, crying; What shall wee doe? hee presently softeneh the offence, saying, Yee did it of ignorance. And so (Genes. 39.) did Ioseph deale with his brethren when hee saw their teares, saying, that it was the hand of God had sent him thither. Thirdly, from the eies of the partie that is offended, as Sem (Genes. 9. 23.) turned backward and would not see his fathers nakednesse that did offend him: and againe, if we cannot chuse but see it, then to hide it, by carying this resolution, to forgive it. Fourthly, from the eies of the world, and that two waies: first, by setting a watch before our mouthes, that we enter not into the disgrace of our brother: secondly, if wee heare him vpbraided with any vice, though not to defend it, yet to oppose against that some former good thing done by him, and by comparing his sinne with ours. If then it be the duty of e-very Christian to keepe our selues within these bounds of loue toward our brother, then far must it be from vs to be angry with our brother: for this is murther two waies, either in the vniust matter of it, or in the immoderate measure of it. In the first of these we offend three waies: first, when wee are angrie for good, and this may be called the wrath of a reprobate. Thus was Cain (Gen. 4. and 1. Iob. 3. 12.) angrie with Abel and slue him, because his owne workes were euill and his brothers good: and thus was Saul wroth with Dauid for his vertue, 1. Sam. 18. 8. Secondly, when we are more angrie to haue our selues displeased, then to see the Lord offended: and this is the common fault of these times, to offer a man the stab for giuing vs but the lie, and not to be moued in a holy anger, when we see and heare men labor to pull the Lord out of his throne by their execrable blasphemie. This was the great infirmitie of the Prophet Ionah, (chap. 4. 9.) that was angrie euen to the death, that hee lost his gourd, which shielded him from the heate, more then he was moued to see the Lord determined to destroy so many thousands of his brethren the Niniuites. And a contrarie example to this we haue in Moses, (Num. 12. 1. 2.) who when his sister Miriam contemned him, that shee was no Prophetesse, or not so great in authoritie as hee, he departed in all meeknesse, not any thing incensed, because himselfe was onely interested: but when (Exod. 32. 27.) hee came from the mount, and saw the people fallen to Idolatrie, then in a Christian like courage, and religious anger he brake the calfe in peeces, made the people to drink of the ashes in derestation of the image, and caused many to be flaine for their wickednesse. Thirdly, our anger is vniust, when we hate not so much the vices as the persons: for the same sins wee see in them we harbour in our selues, but onely we breake forth into indignation with the person. Contrarie to this was Dauid affected, when he praied: O Lord destroy, not the soule, but the wisdom of Achitophel: and vnlesse hee knew them to be reprobates, hee neuer wished their destruction; but that the Lord would

would remooue their sinnes from them. Euen so must we do, for the person of euery man is excellent in respect of his creation, and therefore we must loue him, and our owne corruption must bee the foundation of the reformation of others. Secondly our anger is murther, in the immoderate measure of it, that though the cause be good whercon it ariseth, yet being intemperate in the passion, we are murtherers. Thus did the sons of Iacob (Gen. 34. 25.) offend, who seeing their suster Dinah rauished, tooke it so indignantly, as they slue a whole citie, and this vnder pre- tence of religion of hauing them circumcised. In this also was Dauid faultie, 1. Sam. 25. 13. who sending to Nabal to helpe him with some prouision from his feast of sheepe-shearing, he re- turning a churlish answer, as, What is the sonne of Ishai? Dauid in the heate of his distempered heart, vowed not to leaue one of his house aliu: but after he thanketh the Lord, that kept his hands from bloud. Into this offence likewise did the disciples fall, who when they went into the village to buie bread but for their money, and the inhabitans discourteously denied them, they straightway in the feruencie of that passion, would haue called for fire from heauen to haue deuoured them: but they were reprehended of Christ, asking them: Know yee of what spi- rit ye are? Insinuating thereby, that it must be the propertie of them who bee led by the spirit of God, to be meeke, and of a milde and gentle disposition; which we shall the sooner attaine vnto, by stopping the passage of our passions; which being quieted, wee shall the easier entertaine loue of the brethren, which is of that nature, (1. Cor. 13. 13.) that it lasteth for euer, and when all-workes shall cease, this shall bee remembred, how wee haue loued one another. Come, (saith Christ) for being naked yee clothed me, and comforted me in my sicknesse: for hee that loueth Mat. 23. 6. the members, loueth the head; and he that loueth not the head, shall not haue the glorie of the head and members: For this is (1. Iob. 3. 14.) a token we are translated from death to life, because we loue the brethren.
