POETRY.

No Longer Young.

No longer young! how sad it seems,
To mark our morning's waning beams—
To feel our dreams are only dreams;

To hear, in mirth of girls and boys,
The refrain of our earthly joys;
To seem too old for simple toys;

To catch a shadow in the glass—
A fitting shadow as we pass—
A face no longer young, alas!

Love's prophecy young years enfold,
Time steals its glow with fingers cold—
There's something sad in growing old.

It never comes again, in sooth,
With manhood's wisdom, age's truth,
The pleasant fever of our youth.

We find, while memory's sea we sound,
'Midst rarest treasures wrecked around,
How much we've missed, how little found.

Once, from life's miser hand we bought Joy, wilder than our wildest thought,
But ah! she kept the joy we sought.

For no new gifts we still may bow;
She binds upon our faded brow
No opaline crown of promise now.

We bear no more the exultant p. m.
Triumphant toward our zenith's calm,
But groping graveward, sing a psalm.

The self-asserting soul will crave
The song-like joy it sought to save—'Twill shrink back from the drear, dark grave.

Age hath its pleasures, age its pain,
The ripeness of Time's soberer reign—
The sated eye, the burdened brain,

The palsied pulse, the measure 'mien,
The yearning for what once hath been,
The waiting for the dread unseen!

How happy if, with whitening hair,
And face all lined with lines of care,
The soul looks upward, young and fair!

The Little Heroine.

BY MRS. CAR-LINE SOULE.

"Morning again!" and the weary, wasted invalid lifted his head from the pillow and looked pitifully over the dim room. "Oh that the night had been longer! To the wretched, sleep is dear.
My poor, poor wife—my darling babes—must they freeze and starve! Oh God!
it is too much!" And with tears gushing from his eyes, the pale man buried his head in the scanty covering and groaned aloud.

It was no wonder he was out of heart on that cold, dark December day. At best, he had a hard struggle to get food, and for the past six months the struggle had been almost desperate, for his wife had been unable to assist him in the least, being confined to her bed with a slow wasting disease. His little daughter Marie, a pretty child of twelve, kept the one room tidy, and herself and two little brothers like wax. By the aid of her mother's whispered directions she also managed to cook the scanty meals, and to do up the weekly washing and ironing.

"My little sunbeam," the father fondly called her, while the mother would say, in her low sweet tones, "or angel."

One night the young housekeeper waited till it was pitch dark for her father to come home to his frugal supper, and then with fearful foreboding at heart, undressed the little boys and put them to bed, and tied on her hood and cloak to go for him. A crowd met her at the very threshold. With a wild cry she rushed toward the inanimate form they carried upon a board. It was her father brought home to them with a broken leg.

A week had passed since this misfortune. By the sale of their few pieces of furniture, the wolf had been kept from the door. But now nothing remained save the coarse bed on which the distressed ones slept. No coals for the little grate; no tea for the feverish lips;
no crusts for the famished children!
What should be done?

It was a question little Marie asked herself again and again as they lay there watching the pale sunbeams that struggled through the windows. And she asked it oftener after she had risen and dressed herself and brothers, and smoothed the two beds. Bread they must have that day. They were all faint even now, and the boys clamoring for their breakfast.

Suddenly a bright thought came to the little daughter. She remembered having seen in the coffee-houses, young girls, no taller than she, waiting upon the customers. Perhaps they would try her. "If they only would," she murmured softly. "I am handy, quick and patient, and I would try so hard to oblige." I am pretty, too, she might truly have added, had there been a spark of vanity in her heart; for she was a sweet child, with a brow like a sunny snow-drift, and eyes like the Spring violets that nestle in the woodlands. "I will try, at least, and see what I can do," and after watching a few moments the weary sleep of her parents, she whispered to the little boys that she was going out to get some bread for them and hurried away.

She did go to the baker's, but her pitiful story failed to touch his hard heart, and there were tears on her cold cheeks as she turned away. Even if she secured a place, she could hope for no wages till Saturday, and there were four weary days between this and that. Bread would be too late if she waited till then.

What should she do—beg? She asked herself the question with a quivering lip.
Never before had their poverty driven them to such a strait, and it was hard, even now, with the picture of that wretched home fresh in her vision, to plead for charity. But she did it.
Again and again she said to the passers by, "Please sir, please ma'am, give me a penny to buy bread for my sick parents."

But the gentlemen had their overcoats buttoned to their chins, and the ladies were enveloped in furs, and it was too much like trouble to find their pocket books or purses, just to supply a beggar's wants.

"Go to the soup house," said one, at last, more churlish than the rest. "The city provides for such as you."

It was a new idea to her, and as fast as her feet could carry her she went,
and entering in breathless haste, told her story to the attendant matron.

"I will report the case to the committee," said the woman quietly, making a memorandum of the name and number of the street. "Come in to-morrow morning, and I will do what I can for you."

To-morrow! she would be to weak to walk so far by that time, and what would become of the rest?

With a heavy heart she went home, having no courage to present herself as water at any of the coffee-houses she passed on her way.

"Did you get some?" cried the boys, gathering about her, and putting off her cloak, to see if it were hidden in her apron or under her arms.

"Did you get some?" said two faint voices from the bed in the corner, and the coverlet was thrown off and two pairs of thin white hands put forth.

"No, no," she answered plaintively.
"But I will try again. Keep up good heart."

"There will be plenty out of the oven
now. Yes, plenty," she said to herself, as she buttoned her cloak on the threshold, "plenty, and I'll have some, too.
They shall not starve. Men and women forsake me, God doesn't hear me any longer! There is nothing left for me to do but steal."

Her face paled as she spake it, and for a few moments there was a wild wrestle in her heart. Then she went on quickly, pausing an instant before each baker's window, and looking anxiously within.
By and by she found one that seemed empty.

A whole pile of steaming loaves lay upon the counter.

She rushed in and seized one, and hiding it under her cloak, fled madly up the street. But the baker had seen her from the little sitting-room door, and was after her, crying lustily, "Stop thief, stop thief!" A crowd followed her and the poor child was soon run down.

"A clear case," said the police officer who took her in hand, "property found on her. She must go to the court room."

In vain she pleaded with them, and told her story. "They must do their duty; she might have begged; she might have gone to the soup house; there was no excuse for stealing at any rate."

No excuse, and her mother was dying for food!
An important trial was just closing,
and all the avenues to the court house were thronged.

"They'll be through soon," said the officer to the baker; "we'll wait here a few moments. No danger of her getting away while my grip is on her;" and he tightened his hold on her shrinking arm till the flesh quivered with pain.

"Take me home, first," said she,
sadly; "they will worry about me so.
My poor mother will die if she thinks I'm lost."

"They'll soon find out where you are," said he, gruffly. "Bad news is like lightning, it travels so fast."

"Oh dear, oh dear! What will become of them?" and she sobbed aloud.

A little girl about her age was passing by—a rich man's child—you would know it by the embroidered dress and cloak, the rich velvet hood and the costly fur tippet and muff. But there was no false pride hidden under the expensive raiment; a warm heart was beating there, and its sympathies went out largely toward the poor prisoner. For a moment she paused, as if irresolute upon her plan of action; then laying her mittened hand gently on the officer's, she said politely:

"May I speak with her?"

"O, yes; she's not committed yet."

Putting her soft rosy cheek to the purple cold one, she whispered very earnestly. Marie told her touching story; and she begged she would, by the love

she bore her mother, find out her humble home, and comfort the distressed ones.

"I will, I will," the stranger replied earnestly; "and don't you cry any more; my father knows the Judge, and he'll get you away to-morrow. Good bye; keep up a good heart," and off she ran.

She knew her mother to be one of the most charitable of women, and hastened home to tell her the story of Marie; but, unfortunately, she had just gone to ride,
and would not be back till near dinner time.

"What can I do?" she cried, and wrung her hands.

"They want coal, and bread, and tea, and so many things, and I have only ten cents in my pocket."

She sat down on the marble steps and pondered. All at once her eyes brightened, and a beautiful color flushed her face.

"I'll do it," she said resolutely;
"mamma will forgive me when she knows all. Without fire, without food, nearly naked, quite starved. O, she will be so glad I thought so far;" and she bounded down the street and rushed round the corner.

Pushing open the plate glass door of the most fashionable hair-dresser in the city, she went quietly up to the attendant, and asked to see Monsieur B. He ushered her into the inner room, saying he would call him.

Her heart fluttered while she waited, but her resolution did not fail her.

"Ah! it is my little Theresa;" and Monsieur B. took her hand kindly. "Good morning dear. Come to have your ringlets dressed for the ball to-night—no?"

as she shook her head, "why not?—you go certainly, you are one of Monsieur's best pupils. What is it, then, my dear?"

For a moment her lips quivered; then she spoke up quickly:

"You said once, sir, you would give me an eagle for my curls. Will you do it now—to-day—this minute?"

The hair dresser was astonished. What could the child mean? To cut off those curls, long, silken and gold colored, the pale gold of a stray sunbeam; it would be sacrilege almost for a mother to have done it; to sell them was surely a crime.

"Does she, your mother, does she know you come here?"

"No, sir; but she will not blame me when I tell her how it was. O, no, she is too good."

"And how is it, my dear? Make a friend of me, and tell me how it comes you ask me to buy your hair," and he stroked the glossy curls as tenderly as a father might.

She hesitated, and then opened her heart to him. There was a mist on his eyes when she finished her plaintive story. He walked the floor a moment, as if irresolute, then stopping before her, he took out his pocket book and handed her two half eagles. She put them in her purse and quietly took off her hood.

"Not now, my little angel!" he said huskily; "not now, I am too busy; tomorrow will do as well; or stay, I will come this evening. Till then do not mention it to any one. Go now on your mission, my sister of charity," and he led her to the door.

How quick her little feet flew over the pavement. She could hardly speak when she had reached a baker's shop.

"Two loaves, sir—large ones, too," she gasped, and threw down one of the gold pieces.

The man stared at her curiously. The color rose to her brow, but she said nothing, and hurried away with her warm, fragrant bundle.

"Is it you, Marie?" What kept you so long, daughter? Quick, break me a crumb, I am faint."

Like an angel, the little stranger looked to them as she glided in, her cheeks like apple blossoms, and her hair falling over her shoulders like ripples of sunshine.

"Marie cannot come yet," she said, in a voice that was as sweet as a robin's in Maytime. "But she will return tomorrow; perhaps this evening. She has sent me with the bread. See the two nice loaves I've brought you," and she tore them in fragments. Tears coursed down her face as she saw how eager they clutched them. She had never dreamed of poverty like this; never known how hungry folks may be and live.

"I must go now," she said, opening the door; "but I will come again soon and make you comfortable," and she hurried to the nearest grocer and brought a basket full of provisions, and engaged him to send in some kindlings and coal.

The little boys helped her build a fire, in the cold stove, and when it blazed merrily, she put over the kettles, and soon had a refreshing cup of tea for each invalid, and a platter of smoking potatoes for the children.

"Where is Marie, do you know, little angel?" asked the sick mother, as she gave back the cup.

"O, yes, I know," she answered, cheerfully. "Didn't I say she would be home early to-morrow? Don't worry.
Better days are coming. I'll bring her in the morning. Good bye."

It was as though a fairy had come and vanished; a kind-hearted fairy, too, for beside the supply of coal and food, a half eagle lay in the sick father's hand.

Murmuring to himself all the tender adjectives in the French language, the good hair-dresser immediately hastened to the court room. The Judge was a friend of his, too, and he hoped to save the child from prison. She had not yet been brought in, the court having adjourning for half an hour. He asked for a private interview with the Judge. As soon as it was granted he told him all Marie's distress, and the generous kindness of little Theresa.

"Poor child! good child!" said his listener, wiping his glasses. "She must go to prison, I suppose, but it shall be a chamber in my own house. Go into court and tell the same story over, it will be better than a lawyer's plea."

He did so, and there was not a dry eye in the audience when he ceased. Even the baker hung his head, and seemed to muse. Before the breathless silence had been broken, he looked up and said to the Judge, "I withdraw my complaint; let her go with me and take all she wants."

The spacious room rung with applause, and while the enthusiasm was at its height, a thoughtful old man went about the crowd with his hat. People's finger found their pocket books, as by intuition, and when he poured the collection into Marie's apron, she screamed with joy. No more cold, no more hunger, no more nakedness, that Winter.
They were rich.

The baker took her home himself, and told her at the door not to worry about bread till Spring, for his wagon would leave them all they needed every morning. How lightly she bounded up the staircase. It was like a bird's footfall—a singing bird's in the time of flowers.

Have you come, Marie? Two voices spoke at once.

"Yes, mother; yes, father; and we are rich, see!" and she emptied her apron on the bed. How merrily the silver and gold coins jingled. It was like the echo of a harvest song, the distant echo brought back by Summer breezes.

"Bless you, my little sunbeam; bless you, my angel!" And two hands were laid upon her head, and tears and smiles strangely mixed together.

"What does it mean, Theresa?" and the mother looked wonderingly at her beautiful little daughter, as she came into the parlor, in obedience to a message brought by a servant. "Monsieur B. says you promised to see him to-night."

"I did, mamma. Did you bring your scissors, sir?" And she carried a foot-stool to the sofa upon which she sat, and quietly nestled at his feet.

"Yes, my dear, see!" and he took from his pocket a shining pair.

"Theresa, what means this?" the mother spoke sternly.

"I have sold my hair to him, mamma, and he has come to cut it off."
"Sold your hair, cut it off! were you crazy, are you in earnest?" and she gathered her to her side, and laid her hand protectively over the precious curls.

"Tell her how it was, sir. She won't be angry, then. Please, sir, tell her."

He did so. Closer and closer to her heart was the child drawn by its tearful mother, as the narrator proceeded with his touching story, and when it was finished she covered her face with kisses, and said in a broken voice: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

A single ringlet was severed from the beautiful head that night; one long, soft, golden curl, when the hair-dresser carried home as reverently as though it had been down from an angel's wings. On the morrow he had it woven into a heart's ease, and the sunny, shining human flower was ever afterward worn next his heart.

FAME is like a river, narrowest where its birth place is, and broadest afar off.

THE Sacramento river, at this point, has risen unusually high for this season of the year. It is now nearly bank full, and the immense amount of drift wood, logs and trees floating down, indicate a severe freshet in the mountains. We presume last week while we had cloudy, but pleasant weather, it must have been raining incessantly in the mountains. The river is the only indication, however, we have thus far of much wet, as our farmers are complaining of a want of rain to wet the land to enable them to plow and put in their crop.

WE are reliably informed that Messrs. Jones & Rockwell have sold their celebrated roadster stallion, Black Eagle, to Charles F. Reed, of this place, for the sum of five thousand dollars. The figures cannot be regarded high when the celebrity and prestige of the horse is taken into account. We further learn that they have also sold all their merino sheep (seven head) to I. W. Brownell, of this town, at liberal prices. It would seem that there exists in our county a commendable spirit of enterprise for the improvement of stock. This is well—for it is evident to the most casual observer, that it is too late in the day to make even one's bread and butter from scrubby stock. It is being fast "played out," and our ranchers and citizens in general may rejoice when its last vestiges are swept from the State.

CAPT. J. W. SNOWBALL has purchased a very promising Rattler stallion colt, coming three years old next Spring. He is out of a French mare, and stands fifteen and a half hands high—bears a strong resemblance to the old horse, and has action and movement of a fast horse. We are glad to see our stock raisers improving their own and the county's reputation, by breeding to good stock.

ON account of the high water, Mr. Delaney, the mail carrier from Sacramento to Tehama, was not able to go higher up the river than Princeton. The water in the tule is now higher than at any time during last year.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday last, at Strington, near Yolo city, Hiram Spencer was kicked by one of his horses, and died in about two hours and a half. He was about 34 years of age, and leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss.

NEW BOOKS.—Messrs. H. H. Bancroft & Co., Montgomery street, San Francisco, has just received the following new and interesting books: Hand-Book Almanac, 1862, an official register and year-book of facts for the Pacific States; Major General Halleck's Laws of War; The Southern Rebellion, part 2; National Hymns, by Richard Grant White; Rebellion Record, volume one and part seven; Army Regulations, revised 1861; Men-of-War Regulations; Lady Maud, by Pierce Egan; Anderson's Okavango River; East Lynne, or the Earl's Daughter; Cecil Dreeme, by Theodore Whitrop; Ida Pleiffer's Last Travels; Eugenie Grandet, by Balzac; Essays, by George Brinley; The Cloister and the Hearth, by Charles Reade; Diaries, 1862; Gift Books, a great variety. Any of the above can be had by applying to this office.

TWO MEN DROWNED.—On Tuesday last, two men by the name of George R. Hill and Jack Fox, residents of Scott river, Siskiyou county, were drowned while crossing Pitt river, on the Sacramento river road, as they were on their way from Yreka to Red Bluff. The stage could not cross the river on account of the high water, and they took a canoe and started across the river above the ferry. The current was so strong they were carried down under the ropes which were stretched across, which they caught. The canoe upsetting, the rope was cut by men on the bank, thinking they would hold on and be carried around out of the current, but they lost their hold. One of them had about three thousand dollars on his person. Bodies not recovered yet.

THE STATE TREASURY.—The receipts into the State Treasury from all sources, during the month of November, amounted to $459,127 48. The amount of warrants paid was $54,910 07. The October balance on hand was $82,204 34. This makes the total amount at present in the vaults, $486,421 75.

The Incoming Legislature.

On the incoming Legislature, which meets on the first of next month, depend in a great measure the peace and tranquillity of our State and the general prosperity of her citizens. The times are pregnant with stirring events. Never before have the American people been called upon to go through an ordeal such as is now trying the nation. Therefore, it ever prudence and wisdom were needed in our legislative halls, it is at the present time. We hope every member will leave his partisan prejudices behind, and enter the Capitol with a firm resolve to be unbiassed by passion or unprejudiced by party ties.

The political questions of the day should in no way be brought to bear to prevent useful or advance special legislation. The members elect, or a majority of them, are strongly Union. Let no rash act or vindictive measure be brought forward to war the peace or prosperity of our now happy people. We are far from the scenes of active hostilities. Let us be firm, but moderate—be wise, but just; avoid everything in legislation that can alienate our parties or people to a greater extent than they are at present. The large majority of the State vote was cast for sustaining the Union and its present Executive officers. Let those who represent these voters remember that their success in the last campaign was mainly caused by the belief that by sustaining the Government peace would reign supreme in this our golden land. And should any foolish Act be passed, as urged by some of the ultra Republican press, to confiscate property of Secessionists, or exasperate a minority numerically too weak to either outvote or successfully resist the execution of any law, however burdensome, it would be held by all good citizens as an act of cowardice, and unworthy the great and noble cause they are called upon to maintain and defend. We admit, for ourselves, we have not now, nor never had, the least fear of such a course being pursued. We have greater faith in the manly sense of honor and the deep-seated desire for justice, in the members elected on both Union tickets. But when strong party journals advocate extreme measures, we desire to enter our protest, believing no good can result from such a course; but on the contrary, incalculable evils and discords may arise, and the lives of our peaceable citizens jeopardized, and revengeful murder and arson stalk through our thinly populated districts, causing a train of evils too repulsive to contemplate.

THE deep interest which we hold in the welfare of our State, impels us to say something of the duties of our incoming Legislature. To this body of men are intrusted the character of our people, the policy of our State Government, its development and resources. The growth and prosperity of our State is beyond a parallel; but it is not enough to stop here. Its symmetry and beauty, its future vitality and life are yet untold. Our people are composed of the most industrious and energetic class of young men. We have a country embracing larger and better mining, better agricultural, and better commercial facilities than any part of the globe. Commercially, we stand as the half-way house to China, Japan and the Sandwich and South Sea Islands. Agriculturally, we embrace all the productions of the temperate zones, and much of the tropics. Mineralogically, we are the richest country in the world. With a wise and far-seeing legislature, we may expect the protection and advancement of all these interests. The revision of our State laws, the adoption or rejection of the amendments to the Constitution, our swamp lands, our educational and railroad interests, are all important subjects of State legislation. The improved navigation of our rivers and harbors—the whale shipping interest—the steam navigation of the Pacific Ocean—the all important construction of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad, are questions of national legislation; but upon these depend much the character we stand in, in regard to our National Government. With a determined zeal—with a love of Union—with united action on the part of our Legislature, we can bring about the most beneficial results.

THANKS to J. I. Underhill, for late papers.

The Weather—Its Effects, Etc.

During the past two weeks we have been favored with unusual warm weather, for this season of the year. The result is, that, stimulated by the late rains, vegetation has started growing, and the fields and plains present a cheerful Spring appearance. In fact, another week of this mild, damp weather, and stock can make a good living outside. The wild oats and volunteer crops are now up some two inches high, and everything looks encouraging to our stock growers for an abundance of early range. Last year, owing to the cold weather, grasses could not start growing until sometime in March—which resulted in a great number of stock dying of starvation. We supposed this would have been a lesson to the owners to make provision for feeding and wintering in the future. But not so is the result. Meat of all kinds is ranging so low that stock cannot be profitably raised at present figures, and people preferred to lose a portion of their stock rather than feed hay or fodder to the whole—estimating that the total loss could not exceed in value the price of fodder necessary to safely winter the whole. This we believe to be a poor way of reasoning, but such has been, and now is, the way stock men make their calculations. This whole system has got to undergo a thorough change. Stock men must eventually have lands fenced and so arranged that they can tell precisely what number they can yearly feed and fatten, and the outside small lots of cattle get into the hands of men who will make suitable provision for their pasturage. Then, and not until then, will meat come to be sold at prices remunerative to the raiser, and cattle will cease to be a drug in the market.

Execution of a Murderer at Sacramento—His Dying Speech.

Louis Kahl, the murderer of the woman, Catharine Gerken, at Sacramento, was hung in that city on the 29th ult. All efforts to get a respite failed. The attendance was limited to two or three dozen, the execution having taken place in the jail yard.

On ascending the scaffold, he addressed those about him as follows:

"Gentlemen—The hour of my execution has arrived. Before I go before my Maker I wish to say I am not guilty. I have said before that the watch was given to me by the man Jimmy-from-Town. He confessed on the steamer, to two men, that he had committed the deed for which I suffer the penalty of the law. I know nothing about it. It was stated by Mr. Hardy (of the Police) that I had a watch belonging to the woman, and that he had me arrested on account of an emuity existing between us before I came to this city, and which was of some two years standing. In order to gratify his revenge, he accused me of committing the murder, and for the sake of seeing me suffer the penalty of the law. Some party made an affidavit that he left the house an hour after the murder. He says that man looked like me. Those who had seen him and myself during the night could see no difference. An affidavit was made that the woman was seen after eight o'clock alive, and I had been in the Father Rhine House at ten minutes before eight o'clock. Other affidavits state that the murder was committed after eight o'clock, at which time I was in another place.

I am now standing in the presence of my Maker, and in a few moments I shall meet Him. And here I acknowledge my innocence. I have not asked for mercy, but justice, which has been denied me. I wish my hands clean, and let those who have condemned me take the responsibility. I can say no more."

After a pause, he resumed: "I have made no confession, either written or verbal. If, therefore, after my death, anything should be published in the shape of a confession, I hereby contradict all and everything, and deny it. I thank the keeper, Mr. Harris, Mr. Rice and Mr. Moore for their kind attentions toward me, as I do all and every one who have taken an interest in my trial, and tried to prolong my life by getting me a respite. I thank Mr. Coffroth and Mr. Curtis, and am satisfied that they have done all they could to get me a respite. I forgive all who have injured me with a free heart, as I hope to be forgiven."

The priest then handed him a cross, which he knelt at and kissed. He bade farewell, with some emotion, to all the officers and friends in attendance. His hands and feet were then tied, and noose adjusted. The cap was drawn over his eyes. The prisoner asked to speak a word, when the cap was partially removed. He then said he did not wish his body sent to the hospital. He wanted it buried. The request was acceded to, and immediately thereafter he was swung into eternity. The neck was instantly broken, as not a muscle of the body seemed to move after the drop fell. About ten minutes after, he was pronounced dead. The body was then placed in a coffin and removed for burial. Throughout the prisoner evinced the most perfect stoicism, but not approximating to hardihood.—Alta.

WE take the following dispatch from the Union of December 6th:

QUINCY, (Ill.) Dec. 5th.—The New York Times' special dispatch, dated Washington, December 4th, says information was received this evening that the rebels are in possession of Anandale, Fairfax county, and have a large force of cavalry.

There are twelve forts around Centerville defended by field pieces. Four regiments of the enemy lately left Centerville for Leesburg. There are 12,000 men there now.

A deserter from the rebels, a servant of Beauregard, dressed like a New York soldier, came into camp last night, and says a whole regiment was supplied with such uniforms a week since. They were received in the South from Boston. He states there are an abundance of good shoes for those who can pay for them. He paid six dollars for his [In Confederate bonds, of course.]

CATTLE DYING.—From a resident of the adjoining county of Sutter, we learn that great numbers of cattle are dying in that portion of the county lying in the vicinity of the Buttes. Feed is scarce, and will be for some time yet, and in the meantime, as an insufficiency of provender has been laid in by farmers, their poor cattle suffer from starvation in consequence.—Marysville Appeal.

DISEASE IN SHEEP.—The London Mark Lane Express, in an article upon the "liver fluke" in sheep, says that "many butchers appeared taken by surprise when told that the livers hanging in their shops were full of fluke, and that the mutton of sheep comparatively healthy in appearance, was unfit for human food." The horse, the ox, goat, hog, etc., are subject to the ravages of this very common worm; but sheep appear to be peculiarly liable to its visitations, although we may state that our palate has not unfrequently passed a favorable opinion upon the mutton of sheep whose liver our eyes have beheld "flukey." It must not be inferred, however, that we prefer the mutton of such animals, nor on the other hand, that we shall indorse the above extract in toto. A troublesome cough is to consumption what the fluke on a sheep's liver is to the rot—simply its probable precursor. So that we could, with about as much literal consistency, say that a man with a cough is an unhealthy and confirmed consumptive, as that flukes on the liver of a sheep evinces its unfitness for the table. If such were the case, there would be very little of catable mutton in the market. The views of Professor Simonds upon this subject are worthy of consideration by large breeders, he having farmed an extensive grazing tract outside the embankments of arable land reclaimed from the tide, with entire success; and to the herbage of this sea marsh he ascribes the healthy condition of his flocks. But as it is well known that the sheep is an animal which requires those aromatic properties, whose action is anthelmintic, such as agrimony, tormentil, etc., we think these plants (which were present in abundance on the marsh) must come in for a share of the credit which Professor Simonds extends to saline herbage; for it is but reasonable to suppose the God-given instinct which points out to the animal its fittest food, is far in advance of the most plausible theories of man.

AUNT BETSY has said many good things, and among them, that a newspaper is like a wife, because every man should have one of his own.

BY OVERLAND TELEGRAPH.

We take the following eastern intelligence from the Union of December 4th: The New York Times' dispatch, dated at Washington, Nov. 28th, says that letters from prisoners belonging to the California Regiment now at Richmond, show that most of those supposed to have been killed at Ball's Bluff, are prisoners. The officers are confident that fifty includes the whole number of the dead.

The Richmond Enquirer's Fort Monroe letter states that the rebels report that Pensacola is evacuated and that the Navy Yard was entirely destroyed. General Bragg was out for reinforcements. Five vessels (United States) assisting Colonel Brown were riddled with shot (?).

A special to the Tribune, dated Nov. 29th, at Washington, states that Adjutant General Thomas has sent instructions to General Sherman at Beaufort to take possession of all the crops on the island, and ship the cotton. Other crops, that were not wanted for the army, were to be sent to New York and sold for Government use. The slaves were to secure the crops.

The Tribune's dispatch also states that the rebels were falling back from the Potomac before the slow but certain advance of the Union forces, and hardly offered any resistance to our vessels on the Potomac for the last few days.

Letters from Port Royal state that the expedition to St. Helena Inlet, north of Port Royal, without striking a blow, took the enemy's works. The rebel guns had been carried inland.

It was reported that 14,000 rebels were at Hardeville, South Carolina (which is on the Savannah and Charleston Railroad, and ten miles from Hilton Head, below Port Royal), under General Drayton.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29th—Dispatches to-day to the Navy Department, from officer Dupont, dated at Port Royal, November 25th, give the gratifying intelligence that the flag of the United States is flying over the territory of the State of Georgia. Tybee Island, which is in mortar distance of Fort Pulaski, was taken possession of, and the approaches to Savannah completely stopped.

General Price has issued a proclamation at Neosho, calling for fifty thousand men from Missouri to sustain the Southern cause. He says only five thousand men have as yet come from Missouri to aid him. Unless his call is responded to he thinks that all will be lost, and the Lincoln Hessians will have control of the State. The advance guard of Price's forces are working their way up toward Sedalia, committing depredations as they go.

It is reported that Lexington has again fallen into the hands of the rebels. McCulloch's forces are said to be on the way to Arkansas. The troops under the rebel General Rains occupy Springfield.

It is said Price's intention is, if he cannot raise more troops, to divide his army up into guerrilla bands and harass Union men.

The great gunboat expedition, under General Halleck, is expected to start down the Mississippi in about two weeks. As the loyal people in the several counties in Eastern Virginia declare themselves loyal, their ports will be open for trade.

Northampton county is occupied by Federal troops under General Lockwood.

A Paris letter in the New York World says a number of vessels went from Havre two months since with supplies for the rebels, but returned without disposing of their cargoes.

It is rumored that ten thousand volunteers will be called for to defend the frontier.

Captain Goodwin, of the slaver Erie, has been sentenced to be hung in February next.

Major Sutherland, of the U. S. A., died in New York, Saturday, Nov. 30th.

The New York Evening Post has information that a Canadian steamer, with a large cargo of arms and stores for rebels, had been captured off the coast of Maine.

General Jim Lane delivered a great anti-slavery speech in Boston, on Saturday, Nov. 30th, to an immense crowd of people.

The New York Tribune's Washington special, of December 1st, says no fear need be entertained as to the position the President will take concerning the seizure of Mason and Slidell. He will hold that Captain Wilkes did right, but that he should have seized the steamer also.

Upon the renewed application of G. D. Prentice, Secretary Seward on Saturday ordered a release of Calhoun Benham and ex Senator Gwin from confinement at Fort Lafayette.

The Secretary of the Navy, in his report, after mentioning the capture of Mason and Slidell, says that the prompt and decisive action of Captain Wilkes merits, and has received, the emphatic approval of the Navy Department, and if a too general forbearance was exhibited by him in not capturing the vessel which had the rebel Commissioners on board, it may, in view of special circumstances and patriotic motives, be excused; but it must by no means be permitted to constitute a precedent hereafter for the treatment of any similar case.

Jesse D. Bright of Indiana is at Washington, and intends to take his seat. Senator Powell of Kentucky also arrived on Saturday, and it is said will take his seat. A committee will be appointed to examine into the conduct of such men, and if the proof against them is plain, they will be expelled.

Another rich prize was brought to Brooklyn (N. Y.) Navy Yard, Saturday, which was captured by the steamer Penguin, October 25th.

The St. Louis Democrat has news that the rebels, 15,000 strong, are moving under Price, Rains and McBride. Price says he shall make Kansas his future field of operations. McCulloch has had a quarrel with Price, and gone off to Arkansas.

The Washington dispatch of the New York World says Colonel Kerrigan of the Twelfth Regiment, has been tried for treason by a Court Martial and ordered to be shot. The order is signed by the President. Kerrigan is a member of Congress.

Congressional.

QUINCY, Dec. 2d.—Congress met today at noon.

In the Senate, the Vice President called that body to order at noon; forty members were present.

Twelve o'clock was the hour fixed upon for the commencement of the daily sessions.

Trumbull, Hale and Latham were appointed a committee to wait on the President.

Trumbull gave notice that he would introduce a bill to-morrow to confiscate the property of rebels, and give freedom to persons in the slave States.

Wilkinson gave notice of a bill to abolish the distinction between the regular and volunteer forces.

An informal recess was taken. In the House, 114 members answered the roll call.

Sargent and Phelps, of California, Hooper, of Massachusetts, Wilson, of Iowa, Bernheisel, of Utah, and Cradlebaugh, of Nevada, were sworn in.

Maynard, of Tennessee, after some discussion, was sworn in.

A committee was appointed to inform the President that both Houses had a quorum and were ready to proceed to business.

Hickman presented a certificate from the Provisional Government of North Carolina, dated at Hatteras. He asked that Foster's claims might be considered.

Foster's claim as member from North Carolina, was referred to a committee.

Watts, a delegate from New Mexico, was sworn in.

Blair of Virginia, successor to Senator Carlile, was sworn in.

Segur, of Accomac county, Virginia, claimed his seat.

Richardson, of Illinois, moved that he be sworn in, as the people in Eastern Virginia, where Segur was elected, had returned to their allegiance.

After some discussion, Segur's case was referred to the Committee on Elections.

QUINCY, Dec. 3d.—Nothing was done in the Senate yesterday, except that a committee was appointed to wait on the President.

The committee reported that the message would be sent in at noon to-morrow, December 8d.

In the House, yesterday afternoon, Mr. Calvert presented a memorial of Beach of Virginia, asking to be admitted.

Several new members were sworn in, including Bennett, a delegate from Colorado, and Walters of Washington Territory.

A memorial was presented that Low of California be admitted as an additional member.

Lovejoy offered a resolution that the thanks of Congress be presented to Captain Wilkes.

Ederton moved, as a substitute, that a gold medal be presented. Accepted. Lovejoy's resolution was passed.

Blair of Missouri offered a resolution to expel J. W. Reid from the Fifth District in Missouri, as he had joined the rebels. Passed.

Colfax offered a resolution, that whereas, Colonel Corcoran had been confined in a felon cell at Richmond, Mason of Virginia be confined in a similar cell at Fort Warren. Passed unanimously.

Elliott offered a resolution to the effect that as the United States was engaged in a war to put down rebellion, and that as it was a military necessity, the President has the right, as Commander-in-Chief, to issue an order for the emancipation of all slaves of rebel masters.

The question was postponed one week. Campbell gave notice that he would call up the following resolution next Tuesday:

"That in legislating to meet the exigencies of the rebellion, Congress should confiscate all property of rebels, slave or otherwise."

Other resolutions, all aiming at emancipation and confiscation, were offered and laid over.

Conkling offered a resolution inquiring into the Ball's Bluff disaster.

Odell moved that as Colonel Alfred M. Wood, of the New York Fourteenth Regiment, had been confined in a felon's cell at Richmond, John Slidell be treated similarly. Passed.

Bernheisel of Utah, presented a Constitution, framed by a convention at Salt Lake, and asks that Utah be admitted as a State into the Union.

If falsehood paralyzed the tongue, what a death-like silence would pervade society.

PROCLAMATION.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, SAC., Nov. 11, '61. Whereas, it has been made my duty by two several Acts of the Legislature of this State (portions of which are herein annexed for the direction of persons herein charged with special trusts and obligations) to give public notice, by proclamation, of the completion of the buildings of the State Reform School so far as to be ready for occupancy; and whereas, the Board of Trustees of said State Reform School have conveyed to this Department the requisite official information of the foregoing fact:

Now, therefore, I, JOHN G. DOWNEY, Governor of the State of California, do hereby give notice to all concerned, that the State Reform School at Marysville will be opened and ready for the reception of all youths for whom the same has been provided, as specified in the Acts herein referred to, on the first Monday, being the 2d day of December, A. D. 1861.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the Great Seal of this State to be affixed, the day and year first above written.

[S.] JOHN G. DOWNEY, Governor of California. Attest: JOHNSON PRICE, Sec'y of State.

AN ACT for the erection of a Building for a State Reform School, and for the Regulation of the same, passed April 18, 1860.

Sec. 18. After the proclamation shall have been made, as provided in section seventeen of this Act, when any boy or youth, between the age of eight and sixteen years, shall be convicted of any offense known to the laws of this State, and punishable by imprisonment, other than such as may be punishable by imprisonment for life, the Court (or Justice, as the case may be), before whom such conviction shall be had, may at their discretion sentence such boy or youth to the State Reform School, or to such punishment as is now provided by law for the same offense. And if the sentence shall be to the reform School, then it shall be in the alternative to the State Reform School, or to such punishment as would have been awarded in this Act had not passed.

Sec. 19. Any boy or youth so convicted and sent to said School, shall there be kept, disciplined, instructed, employed and governed, under the direction of said Board of Trustees, until the term of his sentence shall have expired or until he shall be either reformed or discharged, or shall be bound out by said Trustees, according to their by-laws, or shall be remanded to prison, under the sentence of the Court, as incorrigible, upon information of the Trustees, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 20. If any boy or youth shall, upon any conviction, be sentenced to the said School, and the Trustees shall deem it expedient to receive him, or if he shall be found incorrigible, or his continuance in the School shall be deemed injurious to the management and discipline thereof, they shall certify the same upon the mittimus by virtue of which he is held, which mittimus, together with the convict, shall be delivered to the Sheriff of any county, or his Deputy, or to the Constable of any town, who shall forthwith commit said boy or youth to the jail or State Prison, as the case may be, in pursuance of the alternative sentence provided for in the preceding section of this Act.

Sec. 21. All commitments of boys or youths to this Institution, of whatever age when committed, shall be for a term not longer than their minority, nor less than one year, unless sooner discharged by order of the Trustees, as hereinbefore provided. The mittimus shall state the age, the offense committed, the sentence, and the alternative sentence. Whenever any boy or youth shall be discharged, by the expiration of his term of commitment, or as reformed, or as having arrived at the age of twenty-one years, such discharge shall be a full and complete release from all penalties and disabilities which may have been created by such sentences.

AN ACT defining further powers and duties of the Trustees or Managers of the State Reform School, and the Managers of the Industrial School Department of San Francisco, passed May 20, 1861.

Sec. 3. Upon request of any parent or guardian, or friend, of any boy or youth who has no parent or guardian, who may be shown to the Trustees, or Managers, and superintendent of the State Reform School, such boy or youth shall be received therein and shall be subject to the care, instruction, support and discipline thereof, notwithstanding such boy or youth may be guilty of no especial crime or crimes.

THE Knight's Landing News.

THE LOVE OF HOME.—It is only shallow-minded pretenders who either make distinguished origin a matter of personal merit...

It did not happen to me to be born in a log cabin, but my elder brother and sisters were born in a log cabin...

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS.—It was a judicious resolution of a father, as well as a most pleasing compliment to his wife...

A COLORED firm in Newark, New Jersey, having suffered some pecuniary embarrassments, recently closed business...

"My dear husband," said a devoted wife, "Why will you not leave off smoking? It is such an odious practice..."

THE two most precious things on this side of the grave, are our reputation and our life. But it is to be lamented that the most contemptible whisper may deprive us of the one...

WHEN a Hindoo priest is about to baptize an infant, he says: "Little babe, thou enteredst the world weeping while all around thee smiled; contrive so to live, that thou mayest depart in smiles while all around thee weep."

AN old maid, on the wintry side of fifty, hearing of the marriage of a pretty young girl, her friend, observed with a deep and sentimental sigh: "Well, I suppose it's what we must all come too."

A MAN'S own conscience is his tribunal, and he should care no more for that phantom, "opinion," than he should fear of meeting a ghost if he crossed the churchyard at dark.

AFTER asking your name in the State of Arkansas, the natives are in the habit of saying, in a confidential tone, "Well, now, what were yer name afore yer moved to these parts?"

"What is the reason that you and your wife always disagree?" asked one Irishman of another. "Bekase we're both of one mind. She wants to be mas-ther, and so do I."

"SAY, Pomp, you nigger, waar you get dat new hat?" "Why, at de shop, ob course?" "What is de price ob such an article as dat?" "I don't know, nigger—I don't know; de shopkeeper wasn't dar."

THE ocean speaks eloquently and forever, and it's no use to tell it to "dry up."
