Dedicated to
Hon. Walter Clark

Judge Walter Clark

HONORABLE WALTER CLARK, author, jurist, statesman, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, was born in Halifax County, August 19, 1846. Through his father, David Clark, a wealthy and progressive planter for his day, he is connected with the Blounts, Grays, Norfleets, McKenzies of North Carolina, and with the Bryans of Virginia; and through his mother, Anna M. (Thorne) Clark, with the families of Hilliard, Davis, Alston and Williams, well-known and prominent names of northeastern Carolina.

Judge Clark received his preparatory school training in part under Professor Ralph H. Graves, in Granville County, and later at the military academy of Colonel Tew near Hillsboro. In 1864 he graduated from the University of North Carolina with the degree of A. B. Among his classmates were Major Wm. A. Guthrie, William R. Kenan, and Judge Augustus Van Wyck. In 1867 his Alma Mater conferred upon him the degree of A. M., and in 1891 she gave him her highest badge of honor, the LL. D.

Before finishing his preparatory school course young Clark had seen service in the Confederate army, but resigned from the army in order to complete his education. Even while a soldier in camp he continued the study of Latin and Greek. The day after he graduated from the University he re-entered the service of the Confederacy as Major of the Sixth Battalion of Junior Reserves. He later attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.

After finishing his law course at the Columbian Law School, Washington, D. C., Judge Clark received license to practice his profession in 1868. Locating first in Scotland Neck, removing shortly thereafter to Halifax, he finally, in 1873, settled in Raleigh, N. C., where he has since resided.

January 28, 1874, Judge Clark married Miss Susan W. Graham, only daughter of Governor William A. Graham.

In 1885 Governor Seales appointed him judge of the Superior Court, a position which he filled with conspicuous ability until 1889, when he was transferred to the Supreme Court bench. Elected in 1902 Chief Justice of the State, a position he still adorns, Judge Clark has long since become a national figure, and is known far and wide for his deep legal wisdom and sound judicial learning.

A tireless student and an indefatigable worker, he has made many valuable contributions to our legal and historical literature. Among the more important contributions he has made to the former class mention may be made of his Annotated Code of Civil Procedure, Laws for Business Men, Appeal and Error, Overruled Cases, Incidents and Informations; he has also annotated 85 volumes of the North Carolina Supreme Court Reports. As editor of the North Carolina Regimental Histories (5 volumes), and, continuing the work of the late Colonel William L. Sammers, as editor of the State Records (13 volumes), Judge Clark has, without one cent of remuneration, and purely as a labor of love, accomplished a monumental task which makes his state and generation his debtors. In polite literature he has made an enviable reputation as a polished and graceful writer and incisive thinker. He has translated from the French Constant's Memoirs of Napoleon (3 volumes), and has contributed numerous articles to the leading magazines of the country.

In the words of the state's distinguished historian, from whose memoir in the Biographical History of North Carolina the facts of this article are mainly drawn, "Indeed, there has been no man of more versatile gifts and unremitting labor than Judge Clark, nor has any other of North Carolina's sons done more to preserve the memorials of her people and to perpetuate a remembrance of the glorious deeds that have emblazoned the annals of the State."

In sending for this number of the YACKETY YACK dedicated to Judge Clark in recognition of his exalted service to his fellowman and his loyal devotion to his Alma Mater, the editors are but offering some small token of their esteem to one whose career has brought renown to himself and honor to his State.

N. W. WALKER, '03.

Foreword

*"Whoever thinks a faultless annual to see,
Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor e'er shall be."*

In the publication of this, our 1909 issue, we present with mingled uneasiness and pleasure the ninth volume of the YACKETY YACK and the nineteenth volume of our University annual. It is hardly possible or probable that the casual reader will understand the vastness of the undertaking which it has been our delectation and duty to perform. Over our work we have spent many long but interesting hours, and we therefore present without apology the results of our labors. We hope that the 1909 YACKETY YACK will fulfill the traditional aim. For this aim to be realized this annual must be a pleasant and lasting memento or souvenir of the year 1909 in Carolina's life—both to undergraduates and graduates. We have striven to make the book a faithful and impartial presentation of University life in all of its phases and activities. To those students and friends without whose timely and great aid the YACKETY YACK could not have been even what it is, we proffer our sincere and hearty thanks. And, now, we invite you to have a look at our book.

THE EDITORS.

The Summer Girl

The "Summer Girl" is coming!
O boys, take care, take care—
She's somewhere, waiting, mind you,
So, boys, beware, beware!

She's full of fun and mischief—
Quite bewitching, "don't you know?"
You'll be caught within her meshes
And mayhap she'll keep you so.

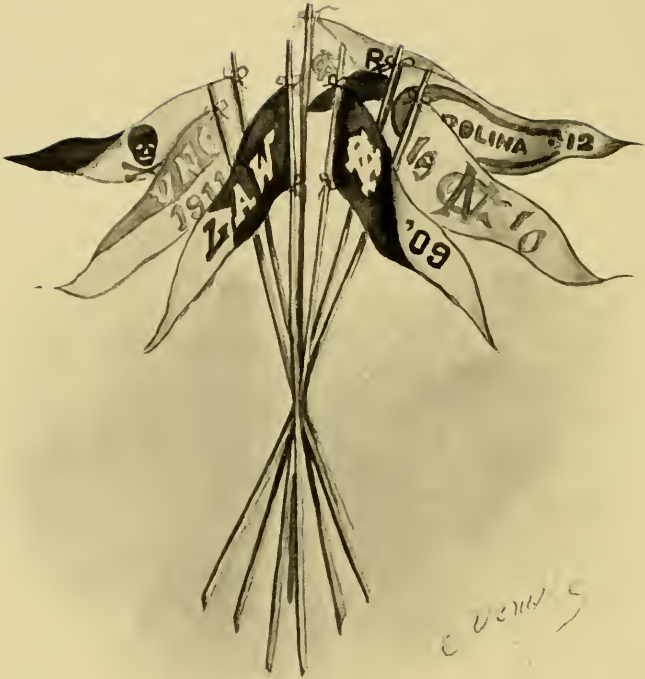

Her eyes are bright and sparkling,
They'll "razzle, dazzle" you,
And you'll dance attendance 'pon her,
Days and evenings not a few.

The days will be angelic,
And the evenings full of bliss,
With a pretty girl beside you,
And—perhaps a stolen kiss.

There's really no harm in her,
When she flirts, 'tis only fun,
Just so, there's many a maiden
Ere she knew it has been won!

There'll be many men to court her,
And they may be men with millions,
But there are none she thinks can equal,
The dear old Chapel Hillians!

1909 Class Poem

Hail, Mother! and farewell: the winds are rising,
They fill our sails and urge us out to sea;
And eyes, from gazing far with vague surmising,
Turn now with tender glances back to thee.

Hail, Brothers! and farewell: the way's dividing—
Each takes his own way as shaped by will or weather;
But love among us shall be still abiding
And we, though far apart, are still together.

JERRY HARRISON ALLEN, Rock Creek, N. C.

Could I love less I should be happier.

Age 28; height 5 feet 11 inches; weight 150.

Di Society; Class Baseball Team (2, 3, 4); Captain of Class Baseball Team (4); Alamance County Club; Class Football Team (3, 4). Teaching.

Bill

His name is Jeremiah, but we call him "Bill" for short—not for political reasons. He's one of the Bills that did not run for office and never will. He is an athlete and a mustache grower—in the former a success, in the latter a failure. He has helped '09 win many a game, but Jerry Day always had the jump on him in the mustache business. However, like the game loser he is, Bill has now shaved, yielded up his claim to whiskers, and will graduate with his natural good-natured countenance undefiled by any attempted nature-faking.

J. Allen,

THOMAS JAMES ARMSTRONG, JR., Rocky Point, N. C.

What sweet delight a quiet life affords!

Age 22; height 5 feet 9 inches; weight 118.

Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Economics Society; Historical Society; Secretary of Oak Ridge Club (3); President of Oak Ridge Club (4); Athletic Association.

T. J.

Even as was our first, our second is from the rocky regions of the mountains, where great silences dwell. And this second, unlike our jovial "well-met" beginner of the Senior gallery, has imbibed, embodied, and wonderfully exemplified those vast silences from whence he came. But he is a philosopher self-admittedly, and his silence may well be attributed to his chosen study—philosophers are of a studious turn and not given to many words.

T. J. Armstrong Jr.

HARVEY CLUDE BARBEE, Morrisville, N. C.

*And wisely tell what hour o' the day
The clock does strike by algebra.*

Age 24; height 6 feet; weight 160. Civil Engineering.

Phi Society; Y. M. C. A.; Buie's Creek Academy Club; Winner of Georgia Inter-Collegiate Scrub Debater's Prize.

Boob

He is one of us who has been led astray from us as a body corporate by two several and separate causes. At first he and Bowen were sufficient unto one another, and then when Bowen's fascination had somewhat lost its fervor, the poetry of Mathematics seized upon Barbee's soul and captivated his affections. And so, though we have ever had him physically with us, his heart and soul and sentiments have not been ours. He and Costner have laid aside all human characteristics and sacrificed themselves upon the cold and unresponsive though highly poetic altar of Mathematics.

KEMP DAVIS BATTLE, Rocky Mount, N. C.

*He could distinguish and divide
A hair 'twixt south and southwest side.*

Age 20; height 5 feet 11 inches; weight 135. Law. Σ A E; Gimghoul; Golden Fleece; Phi Beta Kappa; Di Society; Y. M. C. Kemp

One of the hair-splitting devices employed in the Pin Point Discussion Club, composed of Tillett, Graham, Battle, and Winslow. And he is an excellent machine, too. He has succeeded in reducing life to a minutely calculated succession of actions, and always succeeds in performing his appointed actions on the schedule dot. This is Battle's only fault, and this is a good thing—perhaps. He has a remarkable facility in working, and a great capacity for work. And when the hours of schedule are off Kemp is a good fellow with whom to be.

Urias (?)

With a cigar stuck in the large part of his face,
Urias (whose name is sometimes perverted) lopes through life care-free and content. The departure of Barbour from our midst once left his ship without steering gear, but soon equilibrium came again, and Baucum was the same generous, luckless, careless, and happy Baucum of times gone by and times to come. Nothing worries "Bough-cum" but his name.

ELDEN BAYLEY, Springfield, O.

As is quiet, and wise, and good.*

Age 21; height 6 feet; weight 150. Forestry.

A T O; Scrub Football Team (2); Scrub Baseball

Bill

"Won't you come home, Bill Bayley, won't you come home?" That's where Bill got his name, but the song was not addressed to him, for he is always at home. You can never lure him away except to go on his twenty or more classes a week or to take his eight nondescript dogs to walk. Bill loves dogs, and that is sufficient to pronounce him a good fellow.
We all wish he had been more in the college world than he is.

Chesley

A Bellamy of Bellamys from the city of Wilmington by the sea: it took him three years almost to get settled here, but now he is settled and settled good. If he studies as much as he says he does,—and he very nearly does,—he deserves the Nobel prize for heroism—if such a prize there be. He has had every book in the library out three times and read them as many. Has always been erratic on other subjects, but has now devoted all his erraticism (there is such a word) to study.

Lin. Black

He came to us from A. & M. in our second year, and for a while we necessarily regarded him as tainted money. However, he has relieved himself of the A. & M. stigma now, and to a certain extent become one of us. For he is quiet and frequents his own room largely. Likes stiff shirts and physics.

Boaty

A first year Med student and a Senior to boot—rare combination. But he stands it; rooms by himself, looks as well as ever, and goes to the gym every afternoon at four. Boaty was said to be the only co-ed in our class in our Freshman year, but he has steadily grown more and more unladylike, and the Senior Class has no adorable feminine with whom it may graduate. We almost wish Boaty had not changed.

A physicist, an electrician, a chemist, an automobilist, and a sometime housebuilder you have before you. He loves physics, he talks constantly of electricity, but 'tis in the automobile world that "K" revels. Say automobile, Packard, Pierce, or "one-lung," and you have him going. Ordinarily he talks little and is practical, but he is a visionary dreamer on the automobile subject.

His name, more correctly his middle name, and other considerations lead us to believe Bowen is a Dutchman. He has the solidity, aloofness, and dignity of a worthy Dutchman. And he is a worthy man, for all through his college course he has guided the young outfit of Buie's Creek Academy with a safe and steady hand through the whirlpool of college life. A good father he has been to the Buie's Creek Academy Club.

Of himself he says, "I am long, lean, lank, laughful, lazy, and loving—fond of music and art;" and we will not contest the matter. However, we would like to add that his imagination is sometimes powerful,
and that he would succeed as either poet or music-
master if he would let his hair grow and add a few deft touches to his dreamy expression. He came to us from '08 this year.

Koopman

With the exception of Osborne and our recent addition, Sparkman, he is our only Floridian. Osborne is of the romantic, lady-loving kind, and Sparkman is a big eater, whereas Clonts is temperamentally highly philosophic—just to keep the Florida Club well balanced, no doubt. He is gone astray after the false gods of philosophy, worships Prof. Williams, and carries the calm, philosophic smile on his face. Is always neat, and appears satisfied. Goes to church on Sunday.

His name is rather gloomy, but he possesses no other sepulchral characteristics. He has expressed a dislike at being termed Coffinesque, so we refrain. He has an idea spontaneous or premeditated on every subject and thing, perhaps, on earth or off, and gives himself vent whenever and wherever inclined. Is opposed to preaching because only one man is allowed to talk. Is quasi-cynical and inclined to the iconoclastic, but not quite so much as he says he is.

And now and then indulge in Math.*

Age 20; height 6 feet; weight 150. Civil Engineering.

Phi Society; Y. M. C. A.; Phi Beta Kappa; Winner of Holt Mathematical Medal.

Jonas, Mac

"O be joyful" Costner can emit more mirth from his mouth than any man alive. He can laugh at less, longer and longer, and with more enthusiasm than John Unstead, and that's a lot. Unofficially he has been an instructor in Math ever since he came here. He can tell you the specific gravity of a pink wart on a bald man's nose, or the radio-activity of a rat unduly present at a ladies' card-party. His laughter is said to be a species of ingrowing noise, and his mind may also now be said to be a result of ingrowing Math.

He sits around the trees near the well when the sun is shining and laughs at random. Is not especially energetic and more or less inclined to rest. Possesses a lot of inertia—that mysterious physical force that has a tendency to keep things in their present state. For example, when he starts to talk his wind is as long as that of a Marathon-race-runner. Barring his length of wind and peculiar risibility, he is not otherwise peculiar. He likes the South Building, stays in it a good deal, and does about as much studying.

Like his immediate predecessor, he is from way down East, somewhere about Duck Pond. I wish Credle's name had begun with an S, for then he could have been next to Spencer—the other half of his Siamese-twin-life. For four years he and Spencer have stood shoulder to shoulder here, and it is a pity to part them now. "What God hath joined together let not man put asunder." We hate to break a religious law, but the names are far apart, and we can't help it.

A mountain product and a consort of Holladay's, the picture man. If it had not been for his untiring energies hardly half of this galaxy of Senior hand-someness would have ever been known and appreciated by the world. We are all indebted to him in more ways than one. Besides being an artist, Edwards has been a writer in his time and at other times a class athlete on gridiron and diamond. He is a hard worker and a staunch supporter of '09.

We have here a ladies' man, a sometime poet, and Everyman's friend, confidant, and playfellow. Couldn't do what he is supposed to do to-morrow if he were to live his whole life in one day. No settled tradition in college can be carried through without him, and no new movement can be successful without him at its head. And, curiously enough, with the burden of a college upon his shoulders, he bears it without losing himself in it all. Out of it all he comes a little worn, but still the same good fellow of his lazy, less-occupied days.

Is a football player, a good student, a speech-maker, and a Y. M. C. A. man—helps along in everything. It "behooves" him to become emotional when on his feet before an audience, but just sit him down and he cools off within a moment. Cut his legs off so he couldn't get on his feet he'd become so level-headed he'd be a judge within a month. He does what he thinks is right—and that's a lot.

He came unto us this year from way back about the third or fourth generation, but not as a divine visitation for antecedent misdeeds. Instead he has been a blessing unto us, for though he is quiet even unto silence, and we are known of him only slightly, his smooth, smiling, serene countenance has been as balm unto our troubled souls. We wish we could have had him with us longer, but we are glad to have had him numbered among us, if only for one year.

He has more common sense than anybody ever had, with the possible exception of Benjamin Franklin. But, all his wisdom to the contrary notwithstanding, he is a joker and a wit. Can laugh aloud over Life or Buster Brown. Is something of an old maid in his habits—always has a thread and needle. Will some day become a capitalist, sew up the game of high finance, "soak" the beans in his pocket, and cause a panic.

Nothing troubles Sam except that the hours in a day are too few to accommodate his schedule. He is a strenuous man—got old Reodore Thoosevelt beat on his own ground. John works, and believes in making it tell. He is somewhat ultra-ordinary in his convictions, but he will back them up in any way. Would argue with a Webster or fight a steam mastodon. Thinks things, and says them on occasions suitable or not.

He is of the quiet, studious kind, and talks as if he had lots of reserve power. Nothing ever troubled him but the color of his hair, or rather the color of his head, the time he had his head shaved. His first name ought to have been Pro, so we could call him profane instead of committing the profanity of calling him "Kirk," which the dictionary says is the Scotch name for church. He has specialized in Zoölogy "to a certain extent," and has incidentally learned that it is unsanitary to wear a hat. Has a good laugh, and he and W. D. Luns chews his tobacco, regards the world with mild approval, and takes life easy. He is a man of

He is a peculiar mixture of brilliance, indifference, cleverness, laziness, originality—and he's straight.

This is the first MacRae, and the second is next. But don't get mixed, they are not brothers, similar as their natural countenances may appear. "Dunc" holds the proud distinction of being the youngest man in our class, and he holds it well. He is the embodiment of conscience, and many an argument has he had with Osborne over the dictates of a good conscience.

He, Jock

Here is a man as "all-round" as Gaddy, Graham, or the full moon. Everywhere he is there "with the goods." Has figured extensively as a leader of dances this spring, but is more at home in a football suit than in a "biled" shirt. Likes to use lots of big words now and then. Looks solid, and he is. He is generous to a fault, and deservedly popular.

Is soft and gentle of speech, and possessed of winning ways. Has been a holder of many offices here, but is himself a politician only in manner. Is quiet, and is usually by himself or with some one of those who used to style themselves the "Sons of Rest." He is the pride of the Old West.

Sid, Mike

They say he is lazy, but he isn't. 'Tis true he sits down a lot, but his brain is always working, and he is saving up physical energy to carry out his meditated schemes. He is just resting up before the race. He will always "wait ten minutes" for anything except dinner and supper and Major's classes. McAden is serene, peaceful, and meditative. Don't disturb him. He will certainly do it ten minutes later—and he will.

Mack, Yank

He's a business man, a cosmopolite, the crown prince of the "House-boat," and a good fellow in the bargain. Came down to us from the North in our second year, and straightway, like any other Irishman, made a hit with us; and still holds it. Is rather epigrammatic in his speech, but has the wise look, and runs a good bluff. Will never be imposed upon by anybody. In his management of the YACKETY YACK he has proven either that the Yankees have been maligned as to their graspingness or that his three years in the South have wrought a marvelous change, for his lack of this characteristic has contributed much to the excellence of this book.

Ole Lady, Plant, Antique Femme

The man from 'way 'cross yender. He had to come a long way, but manfully he lugged his conscience the whole way, and when he got here it was rather heavy—and still is. Conscience, love of tradition, and unfeigned application to work, have struggled hard to break down the "ole lady," but she is still with us. Give him a tradition or a duty and he is the original stand-patter. Senior Class History

"History repeats itself." This statement is certainly true in the case of the first two years of a class. Every class goes through practically the same experiences during the first two years at the University. Every class arrives in Chapel Hill possessed by a great fear of the Sophs; and, in consequence of this fear, a goodly number spend their first night in fasting and prayer in Battle's Park. Every historian records the fact that his class succeeded, either by out-witting, or by out-fighting the Sophs, in holding its election and in having its picture made. Every class has experienced that inflated feeling peculiar to the period of Sophhood. These are likewise stages in the history of the Class of 1909. However, as Freshmen we accomplished one thing which succeeding classes will find hard of repetition—we put out a class baseball team which won the championship without suffering a single defeat.

Such is the common record of the first two years of every class; but it is during the last two years of its career that a class finds itself and accomplishes those things which distinguish it from other classes. The Class of 1909 has accomplished some things which distinguish it from other classes, things which will leave their mark on University life.

It has been the proud boast of many preceding classes that they numbered among their members some "slick" politicians. It is our proud boast that we number among our members no politicians, "slick" or otherwise. As a result of having no politicians we have had no politics, or, at least we have had clean politics. We have not only had clean politics, but we have also had independent politics. When we entered this University, the political actions of every class in college were determined by the strength and the weakness of the two factions. The political actions of the Class of 1909 have never been determined by the strength and weakness of the two factions. As a vindication of our claim to clean politics, we point to our record of four years in college without resorting to a secret caucus. As a vindication of our claim to independent politics we point to the result of our class elections. In the election for president on our Junior year, voting without regard to factional lines, we elected a man of the weaker faction—something which had not occurred for years. And our present president was elected without a dissenting factional vote. Had we so desired we could have trained some “slick” politicians; but we believe that political purity and political independence is a more desirable possession than a bunch of “slick” politicians.

The history of the Class of 1909 has been one continuous “era of good feeling.” In selecting a president for our Sophomore year we were indeed fortunate in selecting one who was broad minded enough to foster the spirit of good fellowship which pervaded our class. In our Junior year we took another step towards strengthening that spirit, not only in our own class, but in the classes that are to follow us. This was when we instituted the custom of having a “Junior Prom.”

But we have accomplished another feat which any succeeding class will find hard of repetition. We have produced a Tar Heel editor whose fame has gone beyond college walls. For the editor of a college paper to write with such power as to attract the editorial comment of a great Southern newspaper and the admiration of the president of a great Southern University is a notable accomplishment. Yet our own Frank Graham has accomplished this well-nigh impossible feat.

When we think of our class history we don't puff up and claim to be the best class that has ever entered the University; but we do claim to measure up fully to the standard of any class that has gone before us. We have furnished as large a quota of writers, debaters, scholars and athletes as any preceding class. The fact that we have never won a championship in football is no reproach when one considers the fact that we have furnished far more than our quota of stars to the Varsity—Thomas, Manning, Ruffin and Rogers.

As the time draws near for us to don our caps and gowns and receive our diplomas, we realize more and more that we can never repay our Alma Mater for what she has given us; but it is a pleasure to know that she asks only that this debt be paid in gratitude, gratitude shown by living noble lives, lives ordered by those high ideals of truth and service which she has ever held up to us.

The University Man

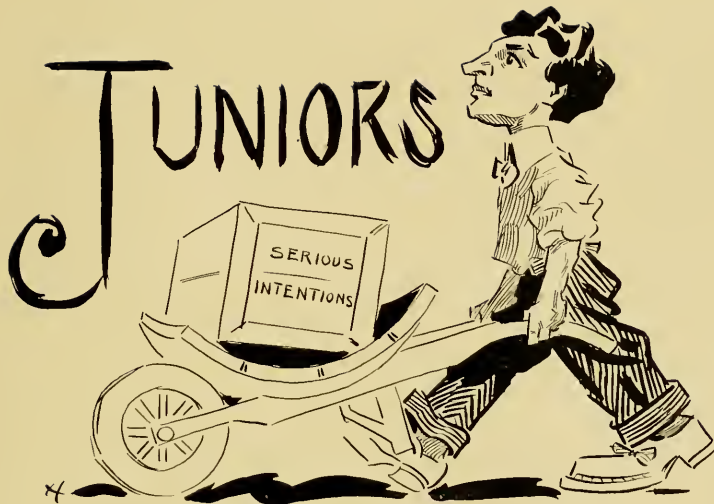

AS CONCEIVED BY THREE SENIORS

THE University Man is technically the man who has received an education at a university, but this test is wholly artificial. Surely the University Man must be educated, but this education must not be a storing of uncorrelated facts in a pigeon-hole brain. The education must be one of clear thinking and strong acting. The intellect must see the truth under any guise, the heart must recognize the good under any cover or in any form, the sensibilities must appreciate the beautiful wherever it occurs. In other words, the University Man must be broad in his views, noble in his feelings, just and honorable in his dealings. It is not enough that he be great as an individual; he must be true and faithful in his relations to others. Firm in his friendships, loyal in his affiliations, high-minded in his citizenship, the true University Man fearlessly and resolutely exemplifies in his daily life those noble and manly virtues which his Alma Mater has inculcated into his very nature.—K. D. B.

The true University Man does not necessarily have to measure up to all the requirements of an ideal man. The ideal man must satisfy the requirements of perfection in all things; the ideal University Man is necessarily perfect only in those parts of himself which are affected by the university life. A moral and an intellectual man he must, of course, be; but the one trait that he must have to faultless perfection before he can with truth be termed a University Man is absolute fair-mindedness. He must be fair-minded not only in toleration of his opponent's views, but in intoleration of his colleague's views if they be not just to the other side. He must condemn as quickly a misstatement in favor of his own position as he would a perversion of truth for the advancement of his enemy. He must ever, in a conflict of duties, seek to distinguish the highest call and obey it whether it means the sneer of a friend or the scorn of an enemy. His university experience discovers to him many types of human nature, his university training makes him consider them all with equal prejudice. Fair-mindedness must be the key-note of his character.—C. W. T.

The ideal University Man is not the student who, because of his love for book-learning, provides himself with a barrel of midnight oil at the beginning of each session and lives in as close seclusion as a hibernated bear. He is not the saintly youth who holds himself aloof from all who are not members in good standing of both the Y. M. C. A. and some Christian church. He is not the football star who on Thanksgiving becomes the idol of the student body, and reaches the zenith of his own glory. Nor is he the opposite of the burner of midnight oil, the man of leisure, who takes the campus and soda-fountain course, who is very much in evidence except in the classroom and on examinations, and who, if he uses midnight oil at all, uses it for some purpose other than the acquirement of knowledge. Neither the book-worm nor the saint, the gridiron star nor the man of leisure can be called an ideal University Man.

The ideal University Man is the good student who, though he stands high in his class, is yet not a book-worm. Realizing that he cannot acquire all learning from books he takes advantage of the training offered by the literary society, develops into a Varsity debater, and also produces all the literary work he can for the University publications. Instead of being a saint he is a practical Christian. He takes an active part in the Y. M. C. A., works for the moral uplift of the student body, and by his daily life is an example for others to follow. He keeps out of cliques and "deals," is free from prejudice and fear, so that in every question that arises he throws his influence on the side of right and justice. It is not necessary that he be a gridiron star, but he should strive to become proficient in at least one branch of athletics. Though he should not spend his time in idleness, yet he must mix with his fellow-students, know them personally, be congenial with them, and help them in every way possible. The ideal University Man, then, is the well-rounded man who stands high in every phase of university life. In a word, he is a student, a Christian gentleman, an athlete, and a congenial fellow; he is a man mentally, morally, physically. He is the ideal citizen of the college community.—W. M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Junior History

THE Class of 1910 entered the University with one hundred and eighty-five Freshmen. The number fell to one hundred and thirty-five in our Sophomore year, and finally ninety-three of the class answered the roll call in September, 1908, the largest Junior class in the history of the University.

Having passed through our two years of preparation and entered actively into University life, we are able to look back on our past with a clear vision. One of the things that looms up out of the past, is the fact that we came to Chapel Hill in the period of the Dark Ages—the “darkest” that had existed here for the past fifteen years, as many of us can testify. The Charybdean influence manifested itself all through the year, and sometimes the darkness attained the stupendous height of: “Forty Freshmen blacked last night!” Another mile post in our Freshman year was that memorable joint meeting of the classes of '09 and '10 around the old elm tree at the southeast corner of the Old West Building, at which time Ben Taylor, Koimer, and our forthcoming president, Teague, distinguished themselves for personal valor. Aside from these two facts, ours is the usual history of a Freshman class.

At the breaking of the Dark Ages came the Renaissance. In spite of the fact that we had been the worst hazed class that had been here in years, strangely enough, when we returned as lords of the campus, we changed the order of events and gave to the institution a year exceedingly free from hazing. We remember also that Chapel meeting of '11 that didn't meet—a battle royal in which our whole army did praiseworthy service. Leaving out these marks of our Sophomoredom we were the usual obstreperous Sophomores.

Taking a present view, we find reason for optimism. Aside from the ordinary duties of college life, we have contributed a full share of athletes, literary men, and scholars, and bid fair to furnish a goodly number of this year's inter-collegiate debaters. Also, if it remains seasonable, we are expecting a good crop of Phi Beta Kappas. But these are the ordinary class contributions. There are, however, three things that are the distinct property of '10.

The first is our contribution to the solution of the hazing problem. Almost every year there had arisen among the upper classmen a movement to abolish hazing, which movement usually failed because of a lack of support from the Sophomore class. It remained for the Class of 1910 to place University interests above class pride and give the first effective aid to this movement and make possible its present success. A good number of our class, even at the risk of class ostracism, supported the movement, and the result is the present hazing situation, in which for the most part no hazing occurs except when there is an outspoken case of "freshness."

The second is the fact that the Juniors this year awoke to what they could do, and won the championship in class football without a single defeat, with a goal line uncrossed. Likewise the championship in tennis was ours last year, again without a defeat.

The third is our record in Varsity athletics. We gave Hyman to Varsity tennis this year. Hamilton has been our first baseman ever since he came here and is now captain of the baseball team. Last year we furnished three Varsity football players—more than any other class—and better still this year, we placed four on Varsity, with Garrett as captain for next year.

As to the future, we expect to muster at least eighty veterans for the final charge. Beyond that—?

History

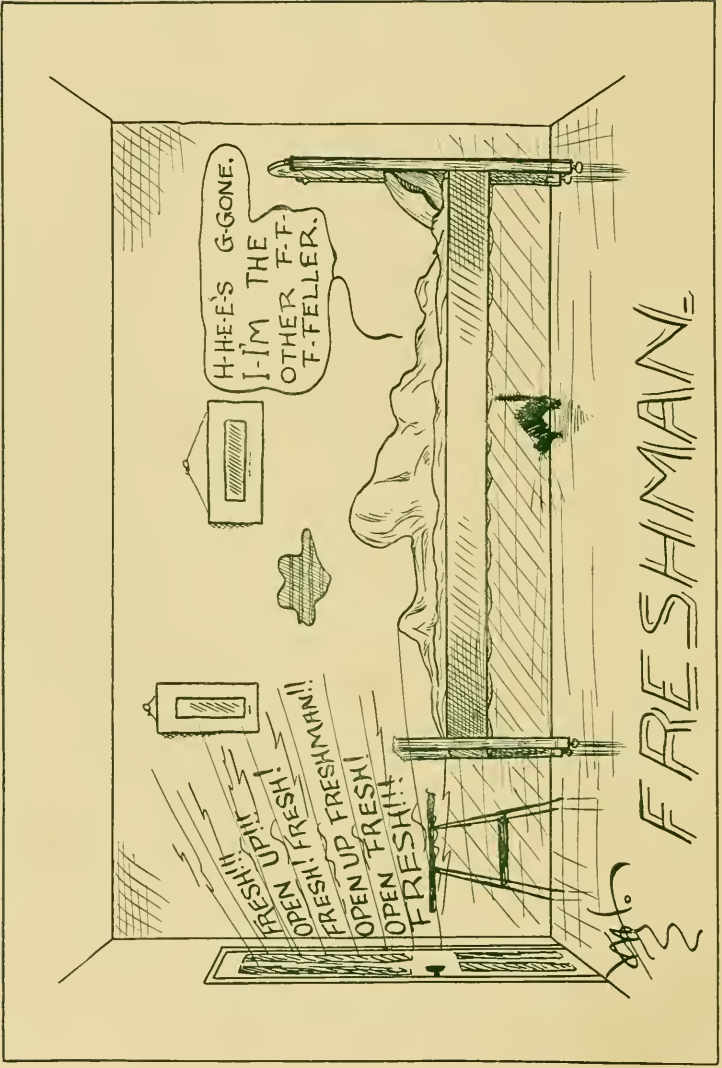

NEVER, since the time when Hinton James, the first student of the University, alighted from a stage-coach in 1795 and asked for admittance to the University, up to the present day, has the Class of 1911 been equalled in one respect at least—that of numbers. In our Freshman year we entered with an enrollment of two hundred and ten. This is the largest class that ever came to the University. This year we number over a hundred and fifty. We are also the largest Sophomore class on record.

The Class of 1911 is not only a very large one but it is also unique. We were the first class to elect its Freshman officers in Gerrard Hall. We were also the first Freshmen ever given the privilege of having a dance at commencement.

Though our class is young we are taking an active part in almost every phase of University life. In athletics our teams have always been good. Last year we won the championship in class football. We have always been well represented on the various Varsity and scrub teams. We have many standard bearers in the Y. M. C. A. We are developing good speakers and debaters in the literary societies. It is very probable that we shall have an unusually large number in the Phi Beta Kappa.

Though all these activities have, of course, afforded us much pleasure and happiness, this year has not passed us without its touch of sadness. Death visited our ranks last fall and took from among us one of our most faithful classmates.

FRESHMAN CLASS

The Senior's Prayer

My God, I ask Thee not for fame,
Nor a knowledge of poor blind Homer;
As Hamlet says, "What's in a name?"
All I want is my diploma.

Feminine Logic

I askt my girl to go for a ride,
I lookt for her applause—
She said she wouldn't and she lied,
Said she went because,

I askt my girl for her fotograf,
I thought of Santa Claus—
She said she wouldn't and she didn't,
She said it was because,

I askt my girl for to marry me,
And stay on at her Pa's—
She said she couldn't and she wouldn't,
She said the same; because,

On every hand I got this spiel,
And now at length I pause—
But you may kiek me swift and hard
If ever I should because,

A Pipe Dream

The wind outside is howling, rough and wild,
There's nothing in the grate but coals of fire,
The room is empty of all save just us two,
Me and my old chum, a pipe of clay,
What care we for wind or storm or weather,
When we are safe beside the fire, together!

Purplish gray clouds I blow into the air;
And as they rise, I seem in them to see
A pair of deep, blue eyes that well I know,
And a dimpled face that's smiling down on me,
Old Pipe, you are the only friend I hold
Dear enough, of all this to be told.

Another puff, and now around her face
Appears a waxy, soft, brown head of hair;
She seems to nod and smile and beckon me
To come a little closer to her there,
Old Pipe, if this could only once be true,
And she be here, so close to me and you!

The wind howls on, in mournful, dreary sound,
But for the bleak, cold night—Ah! what care we?
Inside it's warm, and there are with me here,
My dearest loves—my briar-wood Pipe and—She,
Old Pipe, if we could always thus remain,
No greater bliss desired could I name.

I tell her all the things she means to me,
And ask her could she ever learn to care,
It seems as though her lips an answer frame,
I strain my ears in hopes a sound to hear,
When—a knock is heard, outside 'tis cold as sin,
Oh, darn these visitors—always butting in.

Parable of the Nervous System

IN the balmy days of September there appeared amongst the Second Year Medical Students one Charles Staples Mangum by name, and a physician by profession. And unto each and every man he delivered many slides, saying: "Take these and study them diligently, for in them is to be found much concerning the nervous mechanism of man. After certain days I will return unto you and enquire as to the zeal with which you have studied the same."

And saying these words the Master departed from our midst; and straightway every student (microscopes having first been obtained from David Hough Dolley, of Histological fame and Pathological renown) beset himself to the task to which he had been assigned. Some, prompted by their love of science, worked with a zeal that lasted during the entire term, while others (when the description of the Limbic Lobe of Broca was reached) soon became disconsolate and fell by the wayside.

And lo, when the melancholy days of December—the saddest of the year—had come and the Master had reappeared in our midst for the purpose of gathering in the above mentioned slides and holding practicals on the same, he found some ready and waiting; while by others his approach was awaited in fear and trembling. And now, having repaired to his office, he called his students unto him one by one to reckon with them as to the knowledge gained of the nervous system.

For those who had been faithful it was an easy task and they came forth with smiles upon their faces: but for others, who had spent their time idly and indifferent to study, it was a grievous day, as might easily be judged from the serious look which they bore upon their countenances. But, behold, when one M. A. Bowers, of Lake, cometh forth from the place of judgment his countenance was downcast, his hair disheveled, and lo, on his eyes were great scales, and the man was blinded! And while still in this state he was heard to utter: "Woe is me! I need more light. The Red Peduncle has been my downfall!"

But the good Master, taking into account the diligence with which the class, as a whole, had worked, was moved with compassion, and the whole class, each and every man, was given a pass.

SECOND YEAR MEDICAL STUDENTS

History of the Second Year Medical Class

THE academic student here finds much in college life besides what he may get from his books and the classrooms. He is actively interested in baseball, football and other athletic sports. The politics of the school life also engage his attention. To him the passing of an examination means a certain number of hours to his credit, possibly something more—a degree in the end—perhaps. For the earnest student of medicine his college life means much more. In the work he undertakes he must equip himself for a life which may mean much for those among whom his lot is cast in the years to come. When he has experienced the keen sense of pleasure occasioned by the fact that his name is posted with those who have passed an examination, there should at the same time be a feeling that he has a knowledge of that particular branch covered by the examination with which he can work—much the same feeling as the skilled workman when he holds in his hands a tool, the uses of which he knows.

And so, if we have denied ourselves the pleasures which seem to be such a large and necessary part of the average University student's life, we have some reason to hope that the time spent in our work may make us of more service to our fellow beings in the years which are yet before us.

As to our work and its immediate results, we feel that we can point with pardonable pride to the fact that our class as a whole passed, in our first year, the examination on Histology; and again, near the beginning of the second year, repeated this performance with Toxicology. To the outsider this may mean little, but to the "Med" anywhere it carries considerable meaning, especially when it is known that so far as we know this record has never before been equalled.

With our class, the Medical Society, launched last year by the class which has set for us such a worthy example, has shown wonderful possibilities as to the stimulus for independent and logical thought it may in time become. The object which the Society has in its existence is being accomplished not only by its members, but as well by those who are not members—we are all working toward a common end.

In our work here for the past two years we have been fortunate indeed in having a faculty the like of which we hardly expect to see wherever we may spend the next two years. They have been patient and long suffering; kind in pointing out to us the error of our way; thoughtful in advising us of things which, while not necessarily a part of the course in medicine, will be of inestimable value in our rub with the world. For them we shall always entertain feelings of the deepest respect and love. They have done the things which should make our professional careers a success—if we fail the fault is ours; if we are successful the praise is largely due to them.

Now that the time draws near when we shall say good-bye to this dear old place we feel with more force than ever before that the influences and associations of the time spent here shall do much toward making a man of each one of us.

Good-bye

Good-bye! I will not say farewell,—
Who knows, we two again may meet
Long hence on some deserted road,
Or on some city's crowded street.

We've loved awhile in Life's green fields,
We've dreamed of trials met side by side;
Now comes to us this one sad word,
'Tis here, at last, our paths divide.

Give me your lips again, dear heart,
My voice is choked with bitter tears;
God grant our lives again may touch
Somewhere out in these coming years.

We must not say farewell; ah, no!
How'er our trembling lips may try;
The tears are wet upon your face,
My own sweetheart—one kiss—good-bye!

*Ye gods, annihilate but space and time,
And make two lovers happy.*

Age 22; height 6 feet; weight 150.

Secretary and Treasurer Pharmacy Class, '07-'08; President Class, '08-'09; Pharmaceutical Journal Club; Assistant in Pharmacy, '08-'09; Class Baseball Team, '08; German Club; K Σ.

"Whiskers," as we call him, is continually singing some little love song, and usually has a dreamy, far-away look in his eyes. We cannot blame him for this, for if rumor is true, Cupid caught him unawares this past summer and proceeded to "sting" him with one of his famous little arrows.

Among his special delights are, playing rag-time on his typewriter, and coaching the first year Pharmacy class.

"Whiskers" is a hard worker and a good student, and if in the race of life he keeps up the pace he has set here, we predict that he will win "hands down."

MYRTLE HALL COX, Wadesboro, N. C.

*He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.*

Age 24; height 5 feet 11½ inches; weight 140.

Member Pharmaceutical Journal Club; Secretary Class, '08-'09.

"Myrtle" is not the name of a feminine member of our class, but it belongs to a very masculine member. He is the hardest worker we have, and never fails to do what Dr. Howell tells him to do. We sometimes think he is endowed with the gift of foresight, for he occasionally does things before he is told to do them, which is a very unusual thing with this class. He is a great enthusiast on the subject of native drugs, and we predict that some day he will be running a drug store that sells home-grown remedies. "Myrtle" does not seem to worry his head very much about the fair sex, but if our predictions come true, he will be the first one to become a benedict.

HUGH ALEXANDER GRIFFIN, Rocky Mount, N. C.

*Deeper than ever did plummet sound,
I'll draw my book.*

Age 19; height 6 feet; weight 155.

Y. M. C. A.; Warrenton High School Club; Pharmaceutical Journal Club; Edgecombe County Club; Class Treasurer; German Club; $\Phi \Delta \Theta$.

"Griff" sounds rather harsh for one with such an angelic countenance, but when you see him get his legs in motion you forget about his face. His gait would make a crane blush with envy, while at the same time he would look on in wondering admiration. He is a warmed-over product of year before last, as he was not in school last year; but he is one of us nevertheless, and is an all-round good fellow.

Among his favorite amusements are, telling a joke, and laughing at Mullin's remarks.

Our predictions for him are, that he will make rapid if not graceful strides toward the goal of success.

LESTER BOYD MULLIN, Huntersville, N. C.

"Mull" is the champion sleeper of the "Hill," and has issued a standing challenge to out-sleep any man who thinks he is somewhat of a sleeper. When it comes to dreaming, he can out-dream Morpheus. He has been forced to adopt a diet of two meals a day, as he never gets up in time for breakfast. His most characteristic trait is his indifference to any and all things, and if he were told that the world would end to-morrow, he would say, "Let 'er slide."

The best-natured fellow in the class, and although the least in years, is not the least in knowledge, for he has passed all his work so far. We predict for him a life full of success and sleep.

WILLIAM LOUIS WETZELL Gastonia, N. C.

*With never a care for the days to come,
He "jogs" along.*

"Wet," "Dutchy." Talks much, says nothing. He can when he wants to, but seldom wants to. His principal hobbies are, volatile oils and cheap tragedy. He's a "bull" on both. Thinks he can sing; that's because he has a very vivid imagination and a peculiar taste. Can quiz for two weeks and pass any old State Board in America. He is the vice-president of the Gaston County Club, but doesn't know it. That is the only thing he doesn't know about Gaston County. With all his whims, hobbies, and dramatic instincts, he is a jolly hail-fellow-well-met, and is one of the most popular members in his class. If brains and hard work will count for anything, his success is assured in the profession he has adopted.

The Davie Poplar

The Davie Poplar as it spreads
In benediction o'er our heads,
It seems to murmur soft and low:
"Where are the boys of long ago?
Where are the men of giant fame
Who gathered round me just the same
As you are gathered here today?"
The whispering zephyrs seem to say:
"They battled in the cause of Right,
And some are dead, but still their light
Eternal shines on Honor's page
And kindles now a noble rage."
Our fathers stood beneath this tree
And swore to Truth their fealty,
And we who stand within their place
Now vow to follow them apace,
O, Davie Poplar, as you spread
In benediction overhead,

M. F. D., Law, '10.

Vale

Fare thee well, fair Carolina,
Alma Mater of our youth;
Four glad years we've laughed together
In our search for light and truth.

Thou hast lead us out from childhood
Into manhood's broader view,
Wilt thy spirit lead us farther,
Teach us what in life is true?

Friend of our departing boyhood
We are sad from thee to go,
But our hearts will still attend thee
In our gladness and our woe.

DIALLECTIC LITERARY SOCIETY

Dialectic Society

ALMOST since the opening of the University has the Dialectic Society been in existence. In the year 1795 a Debating Club was organized. Its membership rapidly grew until in 1798 it had become too large to be wieldy. The Debating Club then broke up into two parts, one part retaining the old name and the other assuming the name of Concord Society. But not a great while had elapsed before these ancestors became weary of such harsh-sounding, commonplace names, and they took to themselves appellations nearer to the mother Greek. The Concord became the Philanthropic and the Debating Club became the Dialectic.

Related thus as the Dialectic Society is to the very beginning of the University, it has from its organization been a powerful force in the every-day life of the students, and the fortunes of the two have been the same. Looking back through the vista of years, we see that the shadows that have fallen upon the University have caused darkness in the halls of the Di, and the rays of sunlight that have shone upon the University have reflected a glow of cheerfulness upon this venerable debating society.

We who compose its membership to-day are proud to be the heirs of these traditions which come down from a former time, and we are proud, too, to be the successors of predecessors the list of which contains men of brilliancy and power, who, with the precepts of the old Di firmly fixed in their hearts, have stepped from its forum into the arena of life, there to deal death blows to all that was not noble and high-minded. Nor are we of to-day content to live in our glorious past solely. Spurred on by the record of the distinguished men who were Di's yesterday, we are striving to cultivate and keep alive the same spirit which shall make the Di's of to-day the distinguished men of to-morrow.

Within the walls of this society we are all Di's and nothing but Di's. Whether of high or low estate, whether of individualistic or communistic ideas, we are still Di's. And by thus-wise laying off all arbitrary distinctions we are working hand in hand with our Alma Mater toward that attitude and view of life which is the one great goal that we are seeking—a university education.

The Philanthropic Society

THE Philanthropic Society was organized in 1795, the same year the doors of the University were opened. Its object, as we see from its motto, was to kindle and foster in its members a love of "Liberty, Virtue, and Knowledge," and to train the youth of eastern North Carolina in debate and in the rules of parliamentary practice, so that they might go forth to become leaders in their communities, state, and nation.

Has the society been true to its ideal? Have the sons of the Phi answered the nation's call for men when men were needed, whether in civil or military life? Let us glance back over the past and see.

Before the war many of its members won fame in both state and nation. We have neither the time nor the space to give a list of them all, but among the more illustrious may be mentioned William Rufus King, who was elected Vice-President of the United States; James C. Dobbin, Minister to Spain, and Secretary of War under President Pierce; and Thomas H. Benton, who, after his removal to Missouri, was a power in the United States Senate for many years.

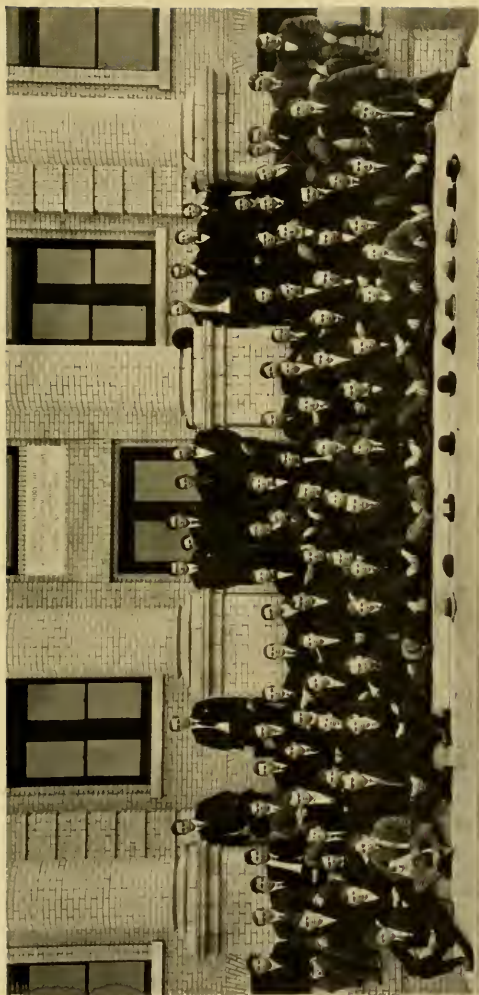

When the war came on most of the University students went to the front to battle for their beloved Southland. Among those who lost their lives in that memorable struggle we point with pride to one of the Phi Society's most loyal members—General James Johnston Pettigrew, whose brigade penetrated farther into the Federal lines at the battle of Gettysburg than any other body of Southern troops. Another of our members who distinguished himself in this conflict was that matchless warrior, General Bryan Grimes.

During the days of Reconstruction the University was closed, but when its doors were reopened in 1875 the Society again entered upon its career of usefulness. Three of our members who were students here immediately after the University reopened are to-day men of national prominence—Charles B. Aycock, ex-Governor of North Carolina, and now a prominent lawyer; Judge Walter Clark, the learned jurist, and Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, President of the University of Virginia.

But the Society does not glory in the past alone. In recent years its work in debating has been little short of remarkable, and some of the young orators of the Phi are already giving promise of future greatness. Since 1897 the Di and Phi Societies together have won seventeen out of twenty-three inter-collegiate debates with the leading universities between Pennsylvania and Georgia.

In the future, as in the past, the object of the Society shall be to instill into its members a love of "Liberty, Virtue, and Knowledge," and to train them for leadership.

DEBATE

Inter-Collegiate Debating

INTER-COLLEGIATE debating has established itself as a permanent institution in the life of the University. Beginning with a single annual debate twelve years ago, it has more than kept pace with the growth of the University, until at present four annual debates are held with universities from Louisiana to Pennsylvania. The inter-collegiate debater is recognized as being truly representative of the University and is awarded with a badge of honor commensurate with the distinction heretofore given only to athletes. Inter-collegiate debating has developed, as athletics has developed, because it is supported by a fundamental desire in men. The debater loves the forum just as the athlete loves the gridiron or diamond. He loves it for the exhilaration of the contest and for the fascination of anticipated victory.

This fact is of fundamental importance in supporting a vigorous and successful system of debating. Without this there would be little incentive to the students, already overburdened with work, to assume the additional burden of an inter-collegiate debate. This does not mean that the value which should attach to the debate is in anywise lessened. It means, rather, that this value is enhanced. Happily, as is often true in life, the value of the debate comes to the debater as a reward not directly sought, but attained through the satisfying of some fundamental desire in his nature.

The value of the inter-collegiate debate as a discipline is well-nigh incalculable. Debate means discipline. Discipline is the measure of what the mind can do. What the mind can do is measured by what it can acquire and express. Debate acquisition and expression. The debater must be master of his subject and master of the means of expressing what he knows about his subject. In the arena of debate "philosophy is a shield and logic a sharp sword." The masters of debate have ever been masters of logic and of clear, strong, and accurate expression. They have ever sought the clearest thought and the strongest language that they might convince others. They have ever been men who learned "to speak while thinking and to think while speaking." The masters of debate have ever been men who helped rule the race. In inter-collegiate debate the purpose is so definite, the desire to win so great, the interest so intense, and the appreciation of popular applause so fascinating, that the very floodgates are opened and the mind pours out in torrents truth that it has laid hold upon with more than accustomed eagerness. The value of the discipline of such a contest cannot easily be overestimated.

The success of the University in inter-collegiate debating has been gratifying even to the most sanguine. During the last twelve years she has met the University of Georgia, Vanderbilt, Johns Hopkins, Washington and Lee, George Washington, the University of Pennsylvania, and the University of Virginia; and of the total of twenty-three debates with these universities and colleges she has won seventeen and lost but six. These figures show perhaps the highest percentage of victories of any college or university in the South.

This success seems to be due to one thing: training. The competitive method of selection, of course, secures the best available man for any particular place, and the "scrub" debater gives him all the possible advantages to the argument of his opponent; but these facts do not fully explain why he should be successful over a similarly chosen representative of some other institution. The fundamental explanation lies in the character of his university training. He is in a real sense the exponent of the University's thought. It is not he that speaketh but the University that speaketh through him. It is for this reason that so much interest and significance attaches to the inter-collegiate debate.

To the friends of debate and to the friends of the University, therefore, Carolina's inter-collegiate debating record affords much cause for gratification. Into a field fraught with reward to the individual it is gratifying that many young men of the state have entered and wrought. Into a contest in which institutions measure strength with each other it is gratifying that the University has entered and won a place abreast the foremost.

The Dromgoole Legend and Piney Prospect

EVERY college, I suppose, has its legends, its mystery. The following poem tells very prettily the romantic legend of the University of North Carolina, but throws no phrase of light on the mystery, "de t'er man" whom "we ain't hearn tell uv sence dat day." It is to make clearer his note in the drama that this note is written.

Peter Dromgoole, then, is not a mystical personage, but in fact was a student of the University in 1831, rooming in No. —, South Building. He came of a fine old family in Virginia and was a handsome, talented, high-spirited boy, yet withal a fiery temperament. This lack of self-control led to the challenge to "Lonis," his best friend, though his rival for the affections of "Miss Fanny," Lonis's cousin. The duel was fought, as told in the poem, over the round rock with the dark stains upon it, which lies in the centre of the clearing on the brow of Piney Prospect. Then Dromgoole disappears and no search on the part of University authorities or his family has ever traced him.

One stormy night in 18 — the student who occupied room No. —, South Building, answered a rap on his door, and impelled by some irresistible fascination followed a beckoning guide to Piney Prospect, and there beheld a weird duel over the rock with the dark stains upon it. It was an "Ancient Mariner" that laid a bony hand upon him, and there, seated on the round rock, told him the story of ungoverned passion, remorse, repentance, and atonement. How that for long years he, Peter Dromgoole, had fought the battle of life, the struggle of spirit over flesh, the final victory; how that he was driven to impart that story to a roommate in No. —, South Building, for the weel of others.

There are those who say that if you know the night and the hour, you may see again that weird duel, and report says that there are those who have gazed upon the chastened features of the white-haired Peter Dromgoole and hearkened from his own lips the lesson of his life.

*On Piney Prospect, Near Chapel Hill, N. C.

(Near a cabin, just before reaching the hill, the visitor meets a very old darkey, who proves communicative.)

'U'd lif' de weight f'um off'n her bre's'.
Dunno how dat is,—but I love her so,
I seem ter feel de grief w'ut grow
En' bre'k her down in her sweet young days,
Des lak it 'us mine, in ever' ways.

Yasser, da's de rock; en' dis is de place
Mars Louis en' de t'er man, face ter face,
Stood up in de moonlight en' shoot at one'n'er—
Fer de sake er Miss Fannie, sah—da's w'ut fer.

I was puttin' de hosses en' ca'aige away—
Fer dat was de College Commencement Day,
En' our folks had been ter de ball dat night—
"Twus des lak day, de moon 'us so bright,—
En' w'iles I wus foolin' aroun' in de lot,
I heered a voice, putty low, but hot,
Say'n', "D—n him! he strack me, en' call me a houn',
En' bofe sha'n't live on de top er de groun'!"
Dey wahn't on de big road, en' so I know
Dat sump'h' was up; en' I thought I'd go
Th'oo' de bush en' see w'ut mischief ergwine—
Mars Louis did'n' cross my po' ol' min'.
Dey stop right yere, en' wait, en' den
Yere come ertalkin' two yuther men;
One say, "Ef I git shot ter-night"—
"Good God!" I say, "Mars Louis ter fight!"
I run ter de house—in front, over dar,
Er my cabin—burnt down endurin' de war—
En' tole Miss Fannie, dat ef she keer
Fer Mars Louis' life, fer ter hurry up yere!

De blessed gal wus ready fer bed;
But she flung a big white shawl on her head,
En' jes' in her hall-room slippers en' gown,
She follered me—ska'cely techin' de groun'.
But des' es we come ter de tu'n er de hill,
De pistols fire. Miss Fannie stopt still.
I look behime, en' 'fo' God, I 'clar'
I never see nuthin' lak she wus dar!

Her shawl hed dropt off, en' her long black ha'r
Wus loose—wid runnin'. I reckon, en' dar
She stan'—one han' on her heart, en' de t'er
One erholdin' her temple—des' lak dis yere:
En' her eyes wus shot, en' her putty head
Wus drap' on her bre's', en' er streak er red
Wus tricklin' down on her snow-white gown,
Right f'um twixt her lips, clean down ter de groun'.
Hit seem ter me lak she gwine ter fall,
But I couldn' move; I des' sorter call,
"Miss Fannie!"—she raise up her head, en' her eyes
Look hawd up de road, lak a pusson's w'ut dies;
Den she sway a little f'um side ter side,
En' hol' out her han', des' lak she tried
Ter go but couldn'. Den I put her shawl
Aroun' her, en' start ter go back,—but she call
Out, easy-like and sad ter hear,
"Ter Louis! take me ter him!" en' yere
I foteh her in my arms—de red
Blood tricklin' all de time.

"He's dead!"

De gent'mens said es we got yere;
En I felt Miss Fannie trim'l mighty queer
Es she slid f'um my arms, en' stood up stiff—
Lak a blood-stain ghos' w'nt make yer hair lif'.
De gent'mens move back f'um de dre'f'l place,
En' dar wus Mars Louis—de moon in his face,
Young Miss never move, en' she ain't say a word,
Des a big long sigh wus all I heerd.
She look at de body a w'ile, en' den
She lif' her eyes ter de three young men:
She ain't say a word, but one on 'em come
En' kneel at her feet; 'n'lak dey hofe wus sum',
He look in her face, en' she look in his;
He hol' up his han's, up tow'ds her—lak dis;
Den Young Miss p'int wid her white little han'
Ter de face er Mars Louis; de man an'erstan',
En' hang his head like he wan'ter confess
En' ax fer mussy. Young Mists des,
Wid her yuther han'—all red wid blood—
P'int back, she did, down de village road,

En' de young man riz en' walked away.—
En' we ain't hearn tell ny sence dat day.
My Tildy come up f'um de house jes' den,
En' we ca'ried Young Mistis back ag'in.
Oh, no, sah, de bullet ain' tech' her—but all
De same, w'en po' Mars Louis fall,
I reckon her heart mus' sho'ly broke,
Fer de blood ooze up twell she mighty nigh choke.

Arter dat, hit seem like she drif away—
Not dy'n', jes' drifin', day atter day,
Ter whar her lover hed gone befo';
En' she git so silent, no' en' mo',
She'd go ter de spring dar back er de hill,
En' look in de water, a smilin' still,
Des' lak w'en she hear Mars Louis say
He love her, befo' dat ter'b'l day,
Den she sigh, en' come ter de rock down yan'
Whar he nster set erholdin' her han';
En' she blush, er settin' dar all alone,
Des' lak he kiss her—'n' he dead'n gone.
Den she wander dar ter de mornin' brow
Er de hill, whar de clearin' is, en' 'low,
He's comin', he's comin', he'll soon be here!—
Er watchin' de road whar he nster 'pear,
But he ain't never come—he wus yere in de groun',
Wid de hole in his bre's', en' de blood tricklin' down;
En' she don't seem ter know, jes' only she'd wait
Fer de lover w'ut ain't never useter come late,
En' my ol' eyes, wiles I watchin' her yere,
'U'd fill en' blin' wid many a tear.

By 'n' by, she got too weak ter go
Ter de places Mars Louis en' her love so;
En' she set at de winder w'ut look dis way,
En' wait fer de dead boy ter come all day.
At las' she say, wid a sof' low tone,
"I'll go ter him—he's sad alone."
En' da's de way Miss Fannie went,
One evenin' w'en de day wus spent,
She's bu'ied yere 'long de man she love,
En' I prays ter God dey're together above!

Oh, thankee, Mars'r!—Sah?—well, Ise black,
En' ol' en' po'—but, no, sah!—take back
Yer money!—de son er de man w'ut kill
My Mistis sha'n't never my pockets fill!

To a Lady

Lilies and violets at your breast,
White roses in your hair;
Yet all the flowers that earth may send
Can make you not more fair.

Gowned in softly falling laces,
Shod in daintiest white;
With all that art can add to nature
You stand before me to-night.

Of this great globe that God created,
Of all that man can do,
The fairest thing on this fair earth
Is you, dear heart, just you!

Phi Beta Kappa

On March 23, 1894, Deeter Tolman, Professor of Sanskrit and Acting Professor of Greek in this University, founded a society. This society was called the Alpha Theta Phi. Admission to membership was based upon high attainments in scholarship. This society was founded in response to a distinct need—the need of some material, tangible incentive to thoroughness in study. The Alpha Theta Phi, throughout its life, fulfilled the hopes of its founder, and its value to the University more than justified its existence. But there was yet a fault in this organization. It was isolated. Its meaning and purpose were unknown except to alumni and students of this institution. To remedy this lack of cosmopolitanism, it merged itself into a society secure of its fame in the history of American scholarship—the great National Phi Beta Kappa Society.

On September 7, 1904, the National Council of Phi Beta Kappa Society granted a charter to the University of North Carolina. On the 7th of November following, Alpha Chapter of North Carolina was organized here, the members of Alpha Theta Phi becoming charter members.

Phi Beta Kappa is the oldest of American college societies. It was the parent of the Greek letter fraternities. As its original letters show, it was founded as a secret fraternity at William and Mary College on December 5, 1776, at the beginning of the American Revolution. Its object was the furtherance of literature, science, philosophy, and "friendly intercourse among scholars." As a secret order the society existed for fifty-five years. Early in its life the William and Mary chapter had granted a charter to petitioners at Harvard University. This Harvard Chapter became guilty in 1831 of a pernicious activity. Its members, among them John Quincy Adams and Edward Everett, influenced by William Morgan and his Anti-Masonic party, thought it their duty to divulge the secrets of Phi Beta Kappa. And what these men thought their duty they failed not to perform. Thus Phi Beta Kappa ceased its existence as a secret organization.

Since 1831 the society has been lacking in mystery and inspiration, and has had a purely formal life. Some new spirit was infused into it in 1881, when a national organization was perfected. In 1882 a new constitution, of the "United Chapters of the Phi Beta Kappa Society," was adopted. It provided for a Senate and National Council, thus coordinating the separate chapters. This is the order under which Phi Beta Kappa is living to-day.

The letters Φ Β Κ represent the motto, "Φιλοσοφία Βίον Κυβερνῶντις"—"Philosophy, the guide of life." The badge of the society is a watch charm—a gold plate, engraved, in the shape of a watch key.

The object of the society, as laid down in the constitution, is "the promotion of scholarship and friendship among students and graduates of American colleges." Phi Beta Kappa has been called "The American aristocracy of scholarship and character." Its real purpose is "To encourage the love of letters and sound learning, and to keep active the pure flame of truth." But in attempting to attain to the standards of the society, a man is not required to center all his energy on the one sphere of college life, scholarship. It is true that scholarship and character are the considerations upon which a man is elected. The candidate for election must have made an average of ninety-two and one-half per cent. on all work taken in the University during the first three years of the course leading to the A. B. Degree; in addition to this, he must never have failed to pass a course. But the history of the society at this point has proven that Phi Beta Kappa men can also be true University men.

Love Lyrics of a Bonehead

Sweeter than a maiden's low-voiced yes,
Sweeter than the bell sounding "Work done!"
Aye, sweeter than my girl's, I must confess,
Is the voice of a man saying, "Have one!"

I took my girl for a buggy ride,
We rode—she druv—I squoze—
That was all right on me inside,
But my hands they like ter froze.

My gal's shoes have heels, when new,
Ez high ez a six-inch rule;
And she hez corns, oh yes she do!
Lord, ain't she one big fool!

If I love you, what matter why?
I'm sure that there's no question
That mine is love that will not die—
Or is it indigestion?

The Non-Fraternityman

TO those who are familiar with conditions here, this—the non-frat article—is unnecessary. It is not history as are most of the accompanying articles, and of but small interest to those who know and are known by the University. The fact that our annual finds its way into places where conditions here are not known, is the only justification or need for its existence.

Some, from the previous pages of this book, have received the false impression that the fraternityman is the center of the circle of our university life; that around him revolves our college world; that in the spirit of fraternityism our university spirit lives, moves and has its being. To shed a ray of light upon the real condition and to raise the veil of this allusion is the sole purpose of this article.

In classifying the fraternityman and the non-fraternityman I should apply more than the superficial test. Whatsoever a man weareth upon his shirt is not the line of demarcation, but "whatsoever he thinketh in his heart." And he who thinketh in his heart as a fraternityman, whether he be not among their number for lack of opportunity, for financial or political reasons, such a man is not of us. We who claim to represent the essence of non-fraternityism revolt against such a classification.

The real difference between the fraternityman and the non-fraternityman, though manifest in a theory, manifests itself more in a mode of life. That of the fraternityman represents largely the idea of absolutism, of loyalty to party, of submergence of the individual and of the supremacy of the organization. The non-fraternityman stands for individuality. The ground sill of his platform is a square deal; the basic principle of his life—equality of rights; and "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's", his slogan.

The principle of brotherhood he glories in. He does not, however, believe that this principle needs an organization in which to operate. An organization limits. Brotherhood refuses to be bound. His is the brotherhood of the fraternityman without the stopping place. He believes that his relations to his fellow-students is more unstrained, more natural, and withal more truly fraternal than that which exists within the organization.

Such an organization is to him a limiting, binding, narrowing influence. He believes that to make the broadest, strongest, and best man one should not seclude himself in a frat-hall in a corner of the campus surrounded by a limited number of friends whose allegiance, instead of being free and natural, is sworn.

Friendship stripped of its spontaneity becomes allegiance. When the fact of organization is brought in friendship loses itself. The handshake may still be as firm, but it is not as warm; the greeting still as strong, but not as sincere; the heart still as loyal, but not as full. For the unnatural and artificial have tried to supply that which can only originate in the natural. Through the channel of organization the fraternityman would conduct friendship, which, from its nature, cannot be walled in; but, even as the wind, must blow where it listeth. It is the high churchman's view, the Catholic church concept of organization. And its major premise is obedience to a higher power, subjection to a higher will. And the higher power and the higher will is the organization. And the organization is put first and the individual is put last. And the organization is held up and the individual is submerged.

The non-fraternityman is what he is by virtue of his own powers and not of any organization to which he belongs. He is subject to no higher will. He bows to no higher authority. His first duty he feels is to be a man. And to be a man is to be independent. And to be independent is to be free. And to be free is to be unattached.

He is accordingly self-supporting, self-reliant. He wants his rights, but wants them interpreted only in terms of his worth. He relies upon himself for achievement and upon the fruits of his toil for his reward. As he as a man demands recognition, so he gives it to every fellow-man. To him the fraternityman, not as a fraternityman but as a man, has rights, and he, recognizing these rights as the rights of a man, does not discriminate against him.

His is the eternal struggle of the individual against the organization. He is what he is, and to him all others are what they are, not by virtue of their affiliations, but of their powers. To him there is no aristocracy except that established by nature. To the man of ten talents he pays his homage, "keeping ever foremost in his mind that cardinal principle of pure democracy 'a man's a man for a' that.'"

At Chapel Hill the ways of fate
Throw men of low and high estate
Upon ambition's lofty plane
To struggle for ideal or gain
And meet the things that make men great.

Hate throws its envious fit amain
And Love incites the wearied brain
And Death extends its wide domain
To Chapel Hill.

All evils there do lie in wait
And all things that can elevate,
But those who can stand the crucial pain
To lofty summits do attain
And bless the matrix of our State
At Chapel Hill.

Y. M. C. A.

THE Young Men's Christian Association of the University with its commodious home, as a center of college activities; with its work for new students; with its social receptions; with its lyceum course; with its handbook, directory, and calendar; with its neighborhood work; with its weekly religious meetings; with its membership of 260; with Bible study enrollment of 350; with its mission study enrollment of 125—the Y. M. C. A., through these varied channels, is an organized agency for usefulness and an aggressive force for morality in University life.

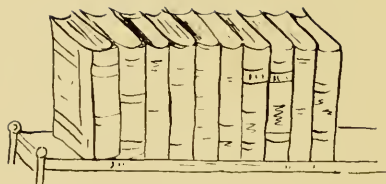

"The University Y. M. C. A.," writes a member of the faculty, "may not be viewed merely as an institution for the conduct of mission work, Bible study and religious meetings. Besides these excellent works which it shares with the churches, it is unique as a democratic student organization wholly given up to solving problems of right living. Its energy, sanity, and devotion have made it the most prominent and efficient organization in the college and the most beneficent influence in the life of the college community."

University Day

What shall we wish her? Riches, fair renown,
Perennial youth? Yes, wish her all of these,
For she deserves them all. But if you would
Even more our gracious Alma Mater please,
Wish that her sons shall keep their hearts as pure
As did that knight who found the Holy Grail,
And that will be a boon far dearer to her
Than gold or fame or youth that could not fail.
Wish that the flowers they bring to deck her brow
Be those that blossom from a blameless life,
Wish that the trophies that they win for her
Be fairly won, in no ignoble strife;
Wish that her birthday each slow-turning year
But bind her to our loyal hearts more dear,
That in her children honored she may be,
Dear Mother, all these joys we wish for thee.

Here's the money,
For the cream and Huyler's too.

Very willing:
My last shilling
Would go for you, that's true.

Good-bye, girlie,
Don't act surly;
You've got my lastest cent.

Now I am broke:
Needn't have spoke
To me like I owed you rent.

The Reason Why

What is the reason such a thing of grace
As that shy dimple on my Lady's face
Should dance an instant only, disappearing
Ere we have time to rightly mark the place?

What is the reason such a charming ringing
As my sweet Lady's laugh should not go winging
Through the glad air its tuneful way forever
Until the birds, for envy, hushed their singing?

I'll tell thee why the dimple disappears,
And the laugh ceases. Kind old Nature fears,
Spending their days in looking and in listening,
Mankind would grow to be but eyes and ears.

ATHLETICS

THE CAROLINA ATHLETIC CLUB

THE CAROLINA ATHLETIC CLUB

Athletics

THE purpose of athletics," said a professor in the University, "is to secure community participation in vigorous outdoor exercise." For the past college generation an effort has been made to realize that purpose in the University. To-day it is so far realized that at this moment there can be seen from a vantage point on the campus a score of tennis courts in use, the basketball squad at play, the track men on a cross country run, fifty men exercising in the gymnasium, a half dozen class teams at work, and seventy-five candidates for the Varsity baseball team getting the preliminary lubrication for the spring practice. Athletics, it is seen, has become so general and varied that it now bears the right and healthy relation to the student body; it is an indispensable part of the student life.

Out of this general community participation are developed the Varsity teams. These teams must be representative of the college community. To secure such a team Carolina adopted a set of eligibility rules. These are merely the rules set up by the inter-collegiate athletic sense of America and have for their purpose the securing of a team "that is not brought in and imposed upon the student body, but one that is evolved out of the student body." Of such a nature is the University team of to-day—representative and amateur. This right relation of the Varsity to the students explains the intense loyalty of the students to it even in disastrous defeat.

The fact that the team is a part and parcel of the student body does not, however, necessitate a disastrous defeat. Carolina believes that a team can be amateur and representative and yet be a winning team. To bring about such a result is the pressing problem that presents itself to the students, faculty, and alumni. Immediately after the defeat Thanksgiving Day plans were made for the next year. The best available Yale coach was secured, the movement to get an athletic trainer was inaugurated, a more efficient system of class athletics was instituted. The football season, then, humiliating as it was, has had its salutary effects. It brought home the fact that Carolina was not making the most of her amateur and representative team. The trouble was not that the team was representative, but that it was not realizing all of its possibilities. In attempting to realize all of these possibilities Carolina is undergoing an athletic readjustment which will work out her athletic salvation. A splendid community participation, intelligently and efficiently directed, will produce a resultant Varsity that will be at once representative and triumphant.

To Red Stewart

Oh! I am the baseball man,
You may watch me if you can,
But where will you find such strength,
And where such a form and such length?
My methods are free from guile,
And my curves are the latest style,
I might be a little bit fatter,
But that is a very small matter!
For I flatter myself there's a charm
In each movement of my arm,
And I carry my bat, they say,
In just the most exquisite way;
And when I make a home run
It is really great fun
To see all the ladies smile,
But alas! it is not worth while,
For my heart they cannot beguile,
I've a mission that's mine alone,
My freedom I still must own;
I remain, let them strive as they can,
The champion baseball man.

To Virginia

In the past, old scores remind us
Of the hard-fought games behind us,
With sometimes you victorious, sometimes we;
And though yours number more,
The times when we did score,
Showed what an N. C. victory could be.

Just at present we have lost
By a very heavy cost.
You have this time outclassed us, that is true;
And though it hurts, we have to say,
That the colors of V-A
Are thirty-one ahead of White and Blue.

But the days to come will show
What the staunch Tar Heels all know,
A score where things will be turned around.
Then we hope it will be known
We have learned your lesson shown,
Of how to treat a foe that's on the ground.

TENNIS

The University Tennis Association

DURING the past several years the Tennis Association at the University has been rapidly advancing in its improvement. For years the association was an organization so loosely hung together and so insignificant in its influence that one hardly knew that we had one. Although tennis has always been outside the pale of protection and aid of the general Athletic Association and has had little encouragement in its advancement, beyond that of its own merit and fascination, we have to-day an association completely organized and actively engaged in the advancement of one of the most popular branches of athletics in the University.

The tennis teams of the University more than any other of its athletic teams are "evolved out of" the student body. Seldom does a man make the team here without having risen from the ranks. This is made possible by the Tennis Association. By furnishing courts and holding prize tournaments each year, to excite interest in the game, it makes it possible for a man to begin developing himself as soon as he comes to the University. Accordingly the Varsity tennis teams show an improvement in recent years equalled by no other branch of athletics. In the opinion of a critic amply able to judge, both from his knowledge of the game and his acquaintance with our teams of the past, we have in college to-day three distinct teams, each of which could beat our Varsity team of any year before last year.

Probably the most beneficial advance made by the association this year was the completion of eight of the best courts in the South. These courts furnish room for sixty-four students to play two hours each afternoon. Although this is a great help for the advancement of tennis, we are beginning to realize that we will need still more courts. The Tennis Association will end this year with a full realization of the advance it must make next year.

BASKET-BALL SQUAD

"SONG OF THE A. B."

When I'm an old alumnus, with children on my knee,
 I'll teach them that the alphabet begins with U. N. C.,
 I'll show their little fingers how to find with ready skill
 The fondest spot on earth to me, this dear old Chapel Hill.

Chorus.

When I am an old man, my babies on my knee,
 I'll teach them that the alphabet begins with U. N. C.

I'll teach them how the Sophomores would ring the college bell,
 And how they took the clapper out and hid it in the well;
 And how they blacked the Freshmen, and greased the chapel seats,
 And cows put in the belfry tower with aerobicic feats.

Chorus.

I'll tell them of my boarding house, and how the tough beef steak
 Was tanned and sold again as hide, the finest boots to make;
 I'll tell them how the bill of fare was varied every day,
 So that we read it forward once, and then the reverse way.

Chorus.

I'll tell them how, as Junior, I broke so many hearts
 That Cupid, doubtless, had to buy a new supply of darts.
 A Senior, too, I strolled around with dignity and pride,
 And for my verdant Freshman days I wished again and sighed.

Chorus.

But I'm going to be an M. D., or else an LL. B.,
 I'm thinking of an A. M., perhaps a Ph. D.;
 And I'm thankful as I stand here to-day, a full A. B.,
 That the faculty have not conferred the prond degree, "N. G."

Chorus.

"UNIVERSITY HYMN"
(TUNE: "America")

Dear University!
Thy sons right loyally
Thy praises sing,
For thee, our mother dear,
May every coming year
Fresh crowned with joy appear,
Fresh honors bring,

Heaven bless the genial ray
Of that October day
When at thy shrine,
Under the poplar shade,
Their vows our fathers paid,
Thy corner stone they laid
With rites divine.

That blessing hath remained,
Dishonor ne'er hath stained
Thy record fair,
Still Carolina's pride,
Still with her best allied,
Her sons from far and wide
Still boast thy care.

Fair may thy hours roll on,
As numbering one by one
Thy tuneful bell
Now rings for duties done,
Now calls to honors won,
Or, for a comrade gone
Tolls out a knell.

O! Thou whose promise nerved
Our fathers when they served
For liberty,
Still be their children's God,
Show us the path they trod,
The path to Thee.

"HAIL TO U. N. C."

Hark! the sound of loyal voices
Ringing clear and true,
Singing Carolina's praises,
Shouting N. C. U.

Chorus.

Hail to the brightest star of all,
Clear in thy radiance shine,
Carolina, priceless gem,
Receive all praises thine.

'Neath the oaks thy sons, true hearted,
Homage pay to thee,
Time-worn walls bring back the echo;
Hail to U. N. C.!

Chorus,

Tho' the storms of life assail us,
Still our hearts beat true;
Naught can break the friendships formed at
Dear old N. C. U.

Chorus,

"SONG OF THE OLD ALUMNUS"

(TUNE: "Auld Lang Syne")

Fair Hill! thy woodlands, lawns, and streams,
Deep graven in memory's truth,
Full oft have mingled with our dreams,
And called them back to youth.

Advance anew the white and blue,
Full high their fields entwine;
Oblivion's cloud shall ne'er enshroud
The days o' "Auld Lang Syne."

Chorus:

Our Mother! radiant, fair, and free,
Of age she bears no trace;
To such as she, a century
But adds to fresher grace.

Chorus:

Born in the storm and cradled low,
Who could thy course foretell?
Foresee thy star in ranks of war,
Shine where thy heroes fell!

Chorus:

'Tis "Welcome" now—and then—"Farewell"—
Let not thy men be few;
Thy sons shall yet to their sons tell
How dear the White and Blue.

Chorus:

We're Tar Heels born and we're Tar Heels bred,
And when we die we're Tar Heels dead.

Rah! Rah! Carolina—lina,
Rah! Rah! Carolina—lina,
Rah! Rah! Carolina,
Rah! Rah! Rah!

"THE OLD NORTH STATE"

Carolina! Carolina! Heaven's blessings attend her!
While we live we will cherish and love and defend her;

Though the scorner may sneer at and witling defame her,
Our hearts swell with gladness whenever we name her.

Hurrah! Hurrah! the old North State forever!

Hurrah! Hurrah! the good old North State!

Though she envies not others their merited glory!
Say, whose name stands foremost in liberty's story?
Though too true to herself e'er to crouch to oppression,
Who can yield to just rule a more loyal submission?

Hurrah! Hurrah! the old North State forever!

Hurrah! Hurrah! the good old North State!

"HAIL, CAROLINA!"

All Hail! Carolina! There ne'er was a finer,

More noble college history than thine.

We'll sing to her story,

And die for her glory,

And garlands of sweet music for thee entwine.

Shout, sing, let it ring,

Shout Carolina o'er and o'er;

The welkin above her,

For saint, sage or lover,

We'll sing the swelling chorus evermore.

"DRINK A HIGHBALL"

Drink a highball at nightfall,

Be good fellows while we may;

For to-morrow may bring sorrow,

So to-night let us be gay.

Tell the story of glory,

Of North Carolina.

Drink a highball at nightfall,

Here's health to one and all.

TO S— J— B—

'Tis early morn; the sun bursts warm and bright
Above the dew-drenched fields, the clinging drops,
Flashing like precious gems among the shrubs;
On high a filmy cloud floats lazily
Across the languid blue; an hundred birds
Up in the tall oak trees trill joyous songs
To celebrate the birth of this new day.
Let me but reach across the void, dear heart,
And take your hand, and let us then go out
Together in the world and make in our Own lives a day in which shall ever shine
The sun, a day in which shall ever trill
The birds in bursts of pure and joyous song;
Let us e'er count the years as others count
The hours, and in the thankful fullness of
Our hearts but harbor peace, and love, and trust.

Result of the Holidays

(The following is a careful copy, with no alterations except names, of a letter to a Freshman. Affidavits of its genuineness may be secured from the editors.)

MY DEAR MR. HENRY—

I will answer your sweet letter which I received Saturday. Oh I woush this pen could explain my feelings when I red that letter. Mr. Henry can you say of a truth that you like me? I hope you can? I have not got to think that I like you I know I do. God knows my heart I know that I think more of you than anyone else on earth. can you say that. I'll bet you can't, can you Dear D——. I gess you know the rest. [In a previous letter she said she hoped to be able to call him "darling."—Editors.] You ar the one hom I have placed my efections on? You said that you woush that you may believe what I said the other night well you may believe it for I mean every word I say. Mr. Henry I know that I am going allmost die when you leave but I hope you will not forget me when you leave I know I will never forget you? oh by the way Mr. Henry them holy gost preachers ar going to start the union meeting friday so I heard after you left home. there came 4 fellers home after you left and they said that the meeting was going to start friday if it does start friday you come saturday. Well I gess I com to a close for this time for I am having such bad luck the old cat came in and knocked over the bottle of ink and mama and Budy is trying to read this letter but I said never will you read this. well I gess you are tired of reading this letter before now but I would never get tired of reading one from you. please excuse bad writing and take all mistakes for sweet kisses. Answer real soon to a true girl

MISS LIZZIE M. SHARP.

Mr. Henry do you ever notice the stamp do you know what it means to turn a stamp botom up if you don't know I will tell you it means I love you.

Darling do you know ho loves you do you know ho's heart is true.

ho is lonely now without you would always love yu true. By, By.

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society was organized at the University of North Carolina in 1883. The aims of the society are to arouse increased interest in scientific work, to build up a spirit of research, to encourage those already at work and to advance our knowledge of the State and its resources. These aims have been diligently followed, and the society has been one of great usefulness.

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society Journal is now a quarterly publication representing the scientific work of the University.

ECONOMICS CLUB

OFFICERS

CHARLES LEE RAPER, Ph. D. PRESIDENT
 HENRY PLANT OSBORNE SECRETARY

The Economics Society was founded in order to furnish to the students of the University an opportunity of discussing together current economic problems of the South. It holds monthly meetings; and at each meeting some subject is presented formally, both affirmatively and negatively, and then discussed informally by the entire society. Its aim is to foster economic thought—to get the students of the University to look in a sensible and unbiased way at the problems which, as citizens, they will be called upon to face.

Inaugural Address of Jones, President of '12

"Fellow Members of the First Year Academic Class:

"In selecting me as your leader you argue yourselves accurate judges of human nature. You prove that your abilities to choose properly are not only few but also many. You have gone straight to the top of the tree and landed a big fish, even if I do say it myself. To convince all observers that you have made no mistake, I shall make a speech. I scarcely know what to address you about. I could gain your applause by saying that the process of registering is iron bound with red tape; but it is a thorny subject which, having long been a bone of contention, has run dry. However, sirs, I smell a rat and it must be nipped in the bud. Those persons whom the leaders of college so fittingly designate as last year's Freshmen are sowing a harvest that will soon come home to roost. Just give them rope enough and they will fill the cup of their iniquity. The chariots of war between us have begun to roll on, gnashing their teeth as they roll. But if you will remember always, my followers, that claret is the liquor for boys and port for old men, but that he who aspires to be a hero must drink brandy, you will soon be out of all barbed wire entanglements and get into smooth water.

"I will now retire to the rear and receive the congratulations of my many admiring friends."

"'12" Reports

When I left home Ma kissed me and made me show her the money Pa had given me to see if I had it all right and told me to be a good boy and not to study too hard and to write very week, and not to forget it. So I got on the train and went to sit down, but an old man said it was his seat, and when I got another a nigger came in and sat down right across the aisle and I got mighty mad and also told the conductor, but he said that it was the nigger car and I had better hunt another place because he couldn't put that nigger out just to suit me. When I got to the University Station I was still mad, and just as I got off the train another nigger came along and asked me if I had a trunk. I said that it was none of his business if I did, and he said it was, for he was the man what carried baggage. So I gave him my check and told him to carry my trunk to college and he laughed and said he would, and he did, 'cause three days after I found it under a tree with some others close to an old well. Then a great big fellow what somebody called "Milo" gave me a card what said that there was good board and rooms at the Inn, only then I didn't know what the Inn was. When the train started I was mighty scronged and pushed and a crowd of boys come along and told me to sing, and I done so 'cause I thought they wanted me in that Glee Club that I had heard of, and they commenced yelling. I thought maybe it was just this way and they said that I would sure be first tenor in the Chapel, what made me feel mighty good. Then when the train stopped, a carriage took me to that Inn what the card had said about and a man met me at the door and said, "Freshie, gimme a match," and I said I didn't have one and he said why didn't I. Then that man what was named Milo rented me a room and said that I had better get registered. Which I did, when I done everything what a man what said he was the Y. M. C. A. bureau told me to do, and waited a long time at some doors till somebody said I was done and then I went to my room and cried 'cause nobody was looking. Then when I had said my prayers and went to bed and eaten my supper some fellow came into my room mighty quiet and took me out on the ground and told me to spell my name backward and whistle three times between each letter. And 'cause I couldn't, I reckon, they told me to run, which I did, and got lost, and they found me again and told me to make a speech. But I didn't 'cause a fellow what seemed boss said that there shouldn't be any hazing on this campus, and took me and asked me where I roomed and showed me how to get there. Then I woke up in the morning and went to college and went on two Math classes and saw my program that there were two coming at the same time next hour, and 'cause I couldn't go on both at the same time I asked the teacher to excuse me. Then he near about busted laughing, and dropped his specs and said I didn't have to go on but one, which made me feel mighty good. And then I got some dinner and was all right.

KNOCKS

Dr. Hughes on English—"Mr. Oliver, what is the moral in The Murders in the Rue Morgue?"

Oliver—"Don't let a monkey shave you!"

Purchaser—"Doe, I wish you would show me some hose."

Doe—"Garden or limb?"

Purchaser—"Limb."

Doe (slowly elevating his trousers)—"Anything else?"

A Sophomore (on being remonstrated with for studying on Sunday)—
"Doesn't the Bible say it is all right to pull the ox out of the ditch on Sunday?"

Y. M. C. A. Man—"Yes, but it doesn't mention a jackass!"

Joe Parker—"Professor, may I retire? I have stuck a splinter under my nail and can't get it out?"

Professor—"How did it happen? Been scratching your head?"

“They eat my bread and drink my tea,
And go around college talking about me.”—Mrs. Commons.

They never walk when they can stand,
They never stand when they can sit,
They never sit when they can lie.—Long and McAden.

A Freshman once to Hades went,
Some things he wished to learn:
But the devil sent him back again,
He was too green to burn!—Tucker.

Father—“Son, do you like Keats?”
Son—“What are they?”

He sent his boy to college,
And now he cries, “Alack!”
He spent ten thousand dollars,
And got a quarter-back.—Tillett.

Mother—“How do you like your teacher, dear?”
Little Mary—“All right, but she doesn't know much, 'cause she keeps asking questions all the time.”

(Respectfully dedicated to Economics department.)

Prof.—“What is a buttress?”
“Please, Sir,” cried Clark, snapping his fingers, “it is a nanny goat.”

You may find a balm for the lover lost,
Or the candidate who's defeated,
But the only balm for a ball game lost,
Is to swear the umpire cheated ————— College.

Exam. question—Give the principal parts of skate.
Student—Skate, slipperi, falli, bumotum.
Prof. (returning paper)—Failere, flunxi, suspendum.

Check!!
Flushing white and softened red
Mingling with the bashful rose!—Harris.

Inscription in Logic book:
If there should be another flood,
For refuge hither fly:
If all the world should be submerged,
This book would still be dry.

In the spring a fuller crimson comes upon the robin's breast,
In the spring young Milo Jones gets himself a fancy vest.

Carrington—"Twenty pounds more wouldn't look bad on me."
Freshman—"It would if it looked like the rest of you."

Oh, he's little but he's wise,
He's a terror for his size.—Cy Thompson.

Boatwright—"Where is the Phi Beta Kappa Hall, Lovely?"
Winslow—"We haven't got one. Why?"

Boatwright—"I heard George Thomas asking where his Phi Beta Kappa key was."

Lonnie Snipes—"Say, boss, don't you want to join a pressing club?"
Freshman Jarrett—"Sure; how often does it meet?"

An echo from the Laboratory—
Little drops of acid, little grain of zine,
Make a lot of bubble and a heap of stink.

An Absurdity in One Act

Time—9:30 A. M.

Scene—Houseboat.

Umstead discovered with a grouch on and a black eye, sitting on the bed (Frank's bed), sobbing gently, and wiping his eyes on the foot of the sheet (Frank's sheet).

Enter Mac—"Add up your talk, what's up?"

Umstead—"That dad-limb Plant's been fightin' me."

Mac (soothingly)—"Oh, keep on your shirt. What's it about?"

Umstead—"Well, he and me agreed to take every other night and last night was my night to undress Frank and put on his little night shirt and hear his little prayers and put him to bed. And just as I got his little pants off and put on his little 'nightie' [sobbing louder], Plant came in and knocked me down and heard his little prayers and kissed him goodnight and tucked him in bed [wailing] and slept with him." (He breaks down in a paroxysm of grief.)

Mac—"Aw, hell!"

WE NEED FIVE GOOD MEN

THE man who has as his possession an unwavering devotion to success in business founded upon character, has the best asset on earth upon which to begin business. A young man starting with such an asset is more certain of success than he who starts with a bank account or much property. ¶ We have associated with us, and in our employ, a number of young men of this stamp. They have started with us upon a business career of permanent and substantial success. Their future is established; they can make it what they will. Such men are hard to find. WE WANT FIVE MORE OF THEM NOW.

*Words of Praise for the Artistic Stieff Piano
Come from the Hearts of Great Artists*

SIGNOR CAMPINARI, the incomparable baritone:

"A beautiful piano in every respect."

MISS CLARKSON, Signor Campinari's magnificent pianist:

"I have played on hundreds of instruments, but never on a finer one than this."

MADAME STARK STANLEY:

"I am perfectly delighted with the Stieff piano, with which I have hitherto been unacquainted. It is a first-class instrument in every respect, possessing a fine, even scale all through, a splendid volume, a wonderful singing tone, and a perfect action."

Mlle. EMMA CALVE, Soprano

JOSE MARIA AGUGNA, Pianist

HERR FRANZ MEISEL, Violinist

"We are delighted with the piano; it meets every demand of an artist."

JOS. H. CRAIGHILL:

"I have used the Stieff piano for many years in both concert work and teaching, and have always derived satisfaction from its use. It is, in my judgment, one of the best pianos on the market."

The girl's pretty—her golden hair!
Across the street,
I'll marry her if she don't take care,
For she's so sweet.

I went to her, since she was fair;
I hugged her some, and some to spare;
Across the street.

Oh, I was blithe, aye, debonair—
She, such a treat.

Law Books for Students, Par Excellence

The attention of law students is directed to the following works, especially intended for their use. They are among the most practical and useful extant:

Burdick on Torts

A concise treatise on the Civic Liability at Common Law and under Modern Statutes for actionable wrongs to person and property. By Prof. F. M. Burdick, Dwight Professor of Law in Columbia University. Author of "Cases on Torts", a companion volume. These works have been written for the special use of students, and have been adopted in many of the leading universities of the country as the official text-books.

Price of Burdick on Torts, law canvas, $ 3.00
Price of Cases on Torts, 4.00

Chase's Blackstone

By Prof. George Chase, of the University of the City of New York. So abridged as to retain all portions of the original work which are of historical and practical value. Accompanied by Notes of American and English cases, Glossary of words and phrases used in the text and translations of passages from foreign languages. An ideal work for students.

Price, $ 6.00

American Cases on Contract

By Profs. Huffcut and Woodruff, of Cornell University. Intended to accompany any standard elementary work on contracts.

Price, buckram, $ 4.00

Gould's Pleadings

Sixth edition. By A. P. Will, LL. M., of the New York City Bar. A work more frequently cited as direct authority than any other on Pleadings in this country. The new edition, just published, has thoroughly modernized this great work, and brings a Legal Classic abreast of the times. Seventeen new chapters, entire work rewritten. All important late cases cited.

THE HIPPODROME (INTERIOR) GREENSBORO, N. C.

THE Chamber of Commerce of Greensboro, N. C., offers annual prizes to the Track Teams and Athletic Associations (winning contestants) in Athletic Events held in the big Hippodrome. This building is the largest of the kind south of New York City, being 167x300 feet in size, and has a centre space 80x300 feet in size for Athletics, in addition to comfortable seating capacity for ten thousand spectators. The first occasion will be a track team meet in this building in which many of the leading colleges of the State will participate. The Event will take place Monday night, April 16th. The Virginia-Carolina game will be played in Greensboro on the afternoon of the same day, at which thousands of spectators and visitors will be present.

I'm tired of being linked together with Cupid;
I wish all the girls were so infernally stupid
That they'd neither repel nor attract;
But a bonehead I am, and I know as a rule
That the very next girl will make a darn fool
Of your servant, but he's tired, that's a fact.

THE SAFEST INVESTMENT ON EARTH

It is a well-known fact that the average person does not find it easy to save money. The thrifty man finds it easier to save by adopting some systematic method which practically compels accumulation. Life Insurance is the easiest, safest and most satisfactory system the world has yet seen for accumulating something against the "rainy day" that comes to the majority of people sooner or later in life. To be sure, there are investments that pay higher rates of interest, but when the protection afforded and the absolute security are taken into consideration, there is no form of investment superior to Life Insurance. ¶ As Life Insurance is superior to other forms of investment, so are the INCOME INDEMNITY and GUARANTEED ACCUMULATION policies superior to the contracts of other companies. These policies, in the event of the permanent disability or incapacity of the insured, become fully paid-up for life, the insured either taking a paid-up policy or collecting the full amount of his insurance, while living, in ten equal instalments. They have the highest loan and cash values and guarantee the highest dividends. Built on the "square deal" principle. There are imitations, but the genuine is sold only by the

Yet, after all, it matters not much
If I am a bonehead—there are many other such,
And I learn a little more each turn
I take at trying to beat love's game;
As to recovering, I still look the same,
That's better than it might be—so I don't give darn.

OUR New "3 Bolt-3 Piece" 1909 Model gun has the simplest and fastest lock ever put in a gun. Some makers claim a three-piece lock but do not show or count the main spring—now we both show and count the main spring—see cut above. Please note we have cut out all cocking bars, levers and push rods and hook right on to the toe of the hammer. This not only makes a lock with large strong parts but a lock that works as smooth as oil. We use an unbreakable coil top lever spring, also a coil main spring which acts directly on the hammer, and a horizontal sear, which makes a very fast lock with a quick, clean sharp and snappy pull. The hammer has only a half inch to travel as compared with over an inch travel in other guns, which makes the lock 50 per cent. faster. If you are a trap shooter you will readily see the advantages of this lock—we figure it will increase your score 5 per cent. We make dainty little 20 gauge guns in all grades hammerless. Send for Art Catalog fully describing our 1909 Model gun. Request special prices on our entire line, 18 grades, $17.75 net to $300.00 list.

CURTIS STEAM TURBINES

INTERIOR OF BUILDING IN WHICH CURTIS TURBINES ARE BUILT AND TESTED

CURTIS TURBINES are manufactured and tested in the largest machine shop, under one roof, in the world. Some idea of the size of this modern machine shop may be gained from the fact that the building covers nearly six acres of ground and has a total floor space of 460,000 square feet. More than 1,000,000 kilowatts in Curtis Steam Turbine Generators have been sold in all parts of the world.

Thou'rt in thy fit and proper place, thou bright
And shining 't of filthy lucre: I rejoice
To see thee who, erstwhile with blatant voice
Bade all the world bow down before thy might—
Claimed sway e'en o'er the souls of men— Now bite
The very dust beneath their feet, as they Go up in search of Truth. Thy powers decay;
Men hold thee in disdain. They seek the light:
Yet, thou meritest to languish there
Imprisoned in the cold, relentless stone.
Wert thou not stuck so fast, methinks I'd bend
And pluck thee forth, forsooth, that thou mightst bear
Good aid in making a cigar mine own
Or purchasing a soft drink for my friend.
