Benjamin Franklin's Writing Desk.

- 162 Antique Mahogany Chippendale Revolving Top Writing Desk, inlaid with white holly. With sliding writing compartment, with eight drawers in the top and secret compartments. Five drawers in the base with brass handles.

SEE PLATE.

This desk, aside of being a beautiful specimen of antique furniture, is of unusual historical interest, from the fact that it belonged to Abinell Stevenson, a prominent English gentleman, residing in London, at whose house Benjamin Franklin resided the greater portion of the time when he was in London as Agent for the Colonies. Through the courtesy of Mr. Stevenson this desk was put at the disposal of Dr. Franklin on account of the very great correspondence he had to carry on with the Colonies during the Stamp Act troubles just preceding the Revolution. It would be impossible for me to enumerate the many important documents and letters which emanated from this desk under the hand of Franklin. Franklin's intimacy with the Stevenson family was so pleasant and cordial that at the death of Mr. Stevenson the daughter, Mary, looked upon him as a father, and both her and her mother carried on a voluminous correspondence with Dr. Franklin during his mission from the United Colonies to Paris and Passy, and up to the last day of his life. I venture to say that no more interesting relic of Benjamin Franklin has ever been offered for sale. The desk was presented by Mr. Stevenson to a member of the family of the present owner. Affidavit of genuineness will be given the purchaser.

Ink-Stand presented by Benjamin Franklin to Mary Stevenson.

- 163 Solid Silver Ink-Stand. Open-work Chippendale design, with pen and wafer-tray, with glass ink-stand, and sand-box, with silver tops, and with sliding silver writing tablet, upon which Franklin caused to be engraved the following, "The Gift of Benjamin Franklin L.L.D., F.R.S. To Mary Stevenson."

This very handsome piece of antique silverware is a relic of unusual interest of the great Philosopher. The recipient always took great interest in Dr. Franklin's philosophical researches, and carried on a voluminous correspondence on those subjects. In the letters of Benjamin Franklin, published by the late Prof. Smyth, will be found many quoted letters from him to her on those subjects. He knew her from early childhood up till the time of his death, and she formed such an attachment for him that after her father's death she invariably appealed to him for advice in all the important affairs of her life. The ink-stand was presented by Mrs. Stevenson to a member of the family of the present owner. An affidavit of genuineness will be given the purchaser.

SEE PLATE.

- 164 Pair of Magnificent Cut-glass Astral Double Lamps of the Empire Period. Buhl-work mountings with cut-glass centre with heavy prismatic hangings and heavy cut-glass globes. SEE PLATE.

This is the handsomest pair of table lamps that have come under my observation during my fifty years in the business. Unfortunately one globe is missing and one lamp damaged.
