INTRODUCTION.

THE writer of this Chronicle appears to have been a citizen of London. He duly records under each mayoralty the occurrences of the year, but more especially those events which particularly relate to the City. He notes the progresses of the Royal Family, the arrival of illustrious visitors into London, the paving of Chancery, Fetter, and Shoe Lanes, the ill-doings of the "London prentises," the state of the weather, the general health of the City, and the principal conflagrations. The destruction of monastic relics, and the gradual changes in religious worship, the names of those who were executed and burned, fill up this catalogue of interesting and curious events. When we remember that, in those days hanging, burning, boiling, and quartering were of almost daily occurrence, it will not appear strange that he should tell us the names of those who died in their beds. It is to be regretted, however, that many years are so curtly dismissed with merely a mention of the names of the Mayors. The

MS. closes with the year 1545 ; it is therefore not an improbable supposition that the writer died soon after that period. I cannot omit acknowledging myself indebted to that useful publication, "Notes and Queries," for some of the notes which will be found appended to this little Chronicle.

when he had made an ende of his sermon the pictor was toorn alle to peces. Then was the pictor of saynte Savio<sup>r</sup> that had stand in Barnsey Abbey many yeris in Southwarke takyn down. The xxij day of Maye, Wensday, was there set up in Smythfeld iij skaffoldes; the one was for my lord mayir and aldyrmen, and the deuke of Norfock, the deuke of Suffocke, and my lorde prevesele; and the tothir for the bisshop of Worcetter, wheer on he stode and preche; and the third skaffold was made over a gaynst y<sup>e</sup> bisshop, where on stode doctor Forrest, a graye freer of Grenewitche, whiche had byn many yers afore a grete precher at Polles crosse, and beside hym was there a pictor set up that was brought oute of Walis, that was callid Dervelle gadern,<sup>a</sup> and a litill beside that a payr of galous set up, and

<sup>a</sup> Dervel Gadarn, vulgarly called Darvel Gatheren, was son of Hywell ap Emyr Llydaw. He was the founder of Llanderfel church in Merioneth, and lived early in the 6th century. His festival occurs on the 5th of April. Michael Wodde (1554) thus alludes to him: "If the Welchman would have a purse he prayed to Darvel Gathorn." Lord Herbert of Cherbury, in his Life of King Henry VIII. mentions the destruction of this effigy. "A huge image called Darvel Gathorn being fetched out of Wales, served to burn Friar Forrest, condemned for counselling people in confession not to believe the King's supremacy, and to elude I know not what old blind prophesie."

The prophecy here alluded to was probably one which was current among the Welsh, viz., that this image would set a whole forest on fire, which prophecy was supposed to be fulfilled in the burning this friar. Upon the gallows to which he was attached these verses were inscribed:—

David Darvell Gatheren,
 As saith the Welshmen,
     Fetched outlaws out of hell;
 Now he is come with spere and shilde,
 In harnes to burn in Smithfelde,
     For in Wales he may not dwell.
 And Forest the frier,
 That obstinate lyer,
     That wilfully shall be dead,
 In his contumacie,
 The Gospell doth deny,
     The King to be Supreme Head.

when the Bisshop had made an end of his sermon, then was the freer had to the galous and hanggid a live by the myddylle and the armys w<sup>t</sup> chaynys and there burnd, and the picto<sup>r</sup> cast in to the fyir to. Then was the picto<sup>r</sup> of our lady of Worcetter brought to London. Then was the Roode that stode in Saynt Margit Pattens churche yarde takyn a waye, whiche had stoud there xxxv yere and more, and with yn a litille while after there was burnd on a nyght over a gaynst the same churche a grete mayne of housis. Then was the picto<sup>r</sup> of our lady of Walsynggame, whiche was the grettist pilgrmage in all England, brought to London. Then was the Rood of Northor and Saynt Unckumber,<sup>a</sup> that stode in Polles many yeris, takyn down, and our lady of grace y<sup>t</sup> had stond in Polles many yers.

The parson and parishioners offered a bribe of 40*l.* that this image should not be taken away. (See Ellis's Letters.)

<sup>a</sup> Saint Uncumber is one of those saints whose names are not to be found in any calendar, and whose histories are only to be gleaned from the occasional allusions that we meet with in early writers.

Michael Wodde says, "If a wife were weary of her husband she offered oats at Powles, at London, to St. Uncumber."

If ye cannot slepe but slumber, Geve otes unto Saynt Uncumber,
And beanes in a certen number,
Unto Saynt Blaze and Saint Blythe.

Sir Thomas More, in his Dialogue (Book 2, chap. x.), makes special mention of Saint Uncumber, whose proper name it appears was Saint Wylgeforte. Speaking of the Saints, he says: "Some serve for the eye onely, and some for a sore breast. St. Germain onely for chyldren, and yet will he not ones loke at them, but if the mother bryng with them a whyte lofe and a pot of good ale. And yet is he wyser than St. Wylgeforte, for she good soule is as they saye servyd and content with otys. Whereof I can not perceyve the reason, but yf it be bycause she shold provyde an horse for an evyll housbonde to ryde to the devyll upon, for that is the thynge that she is so sought for as they say. In so moch that the women hath therefore chaunged her name, and in stede of St. Wylgeforte call her St. Uncumber, bycause they reken that for a pecke of otys she wyll not fayle to uncomber them of theyr housebondys."

It would seem also that there was a custom of offering of oats at "Poules," when a wife was weary of her husband, to St. Rhadegund.

Then was Saynt Thomas Schryne of Canterbury take down, whiche had byn many yeris a grete pilgrimage. Then was every man, woman, and child, coñmaundid to lerne ther patar noster, ave and crede, in Englissche. Then hit was coñmaundid that no light should be set in churches a fore no Image, but alle take a waye.

M. FORMAN, Mayir.<sup>a</sup> Then was y<sup>e</sup> monckes of y<sup>e</sup> chartar house and alle y<sup>e</sup> freers in London put oute of ther housis. The ix day of Dissembar, monday, was beheddid at Tour hill the Erlle of Devensheer, othur wyis called Markes of Excetter, whiche was nye kyn unto the Kynge, and my Lorde Muntagewe and Sir Edward Nevelle knyght. The viij<sup>b</sup> day of Maye, Thursday, did alle the citte of London, every house holdar hym selfe and every servant y<sup>t</sup> he had y<sup>t</sup> was parsonabulle, had harnes les or more, and white cotes, and a red crose and a swerd set a pon the cote bothe be hynd and be fore, and all the chefe men had their cotes som of white satten and som of white damaske, and crossis and swerdes a pon them, as alle the tothir had. Then went they alle and my lord mayir and alle the Aldirmen to myle end w<sup>t</sup> owte Algate in the mornyng, and there they weere set forthe be five in a ray w<sup>t</sup> standardes born a fore them, and drounslates<sup>c</sup> playing a fore them alle the way, and they weer devidid in iiij battelles w<sup>t</sup> bowis, gonnys, mores-pikes, and billes, and so came thorow alle the citte and throw alle Westm', and aboute alle the newe parke, and came homward by saynt Jamys, and so over the feldes and thorow Holburn, and so home a gayn, and the Kynge stode at Westmynster over the new gate, and saw them alle from the begynnyng to the endyng. Then was no wache kepte at Midsomer. The ix day of July, wensday, was beheddid at Tour hille Sr Andry Foskew<sup>d</sup> knyght and a knyght of y<sup>e</sup> Roodes.<sup>e</sup> Then did

THE JUDGES OF ASSIZE

RIDING THE
WESTERN AND OXFORD CIRCUITS,
TEMP. ELIZABETH, 1596—1601.

EDITED,
FROM THE MS. ACCOUNT BOOK OF THOMAS WALMYSLEY, ONE OF THE JUSTICES OF THE COMMON PLEAS,
BY WILLIAM DURRANT COOPER, F.S.A.

INTRODUCTION.

THE following pages contain particulars of the Accounts of Thomas Walmysley, one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, from 1589 to 1612,* on his riding the Western Circuit with Edward Fenner, one of the Judges of the Queen's Bench,† at the autumn and spring assizes, in every year, from July 1596 to March 1601; and also the account of Thomas Walmysley on his riding the Oxford Circuit with Peter Warburton, another Justice of the Common Pleas,‡ in the autumn of the year 1601. On Sir Thomas Walmysley's monument at Blackburn it was recorded, that during the twenty-three years of his tenure of office he went "all the circuits of England, except Norfolk and Suffolk." §

The accounts themselves are contained in a pocket volume, bound in vellum, and written by two persons, who had the supervision of the whole expenditure. The original MS. which came from the papers belonging to the family of Lord Petre, descendants of Mr. Justice Walmysley, has been lent to me by Mr. William Harper, of Bury, Lancashire. I have given the accounts of the first Western Circuit, and also of the Oxford Circuit, without abridgement. On the other visits upon the Western Circuit I have given only a statement of the presents made to the Judges, and any thing particularly worthy of note in the purchases.

At the time of these accounts the Act which prohibited a Judge from holding the assizes on any circuit of which he was a native, or inhabited,* was in full force; but it is worthy of remark that the same two Judges should have holden every assize for the same circuit during five consecutive years. The same country gentlemen repeated their presents circuit after circuit, and there can be little doubt that the intimacy between the Judges and the gentry could have been little less than would have occurred had the Judge sat once on a circuit in one town of his native county. On many occasions, however, licence was given to the Judge to go the circuit in which was his native county. During the Commonwealth the Parliament directed Serjeant, afterwards Baron Thorpe, who was born in Yorkshire,† to go the Northern Circuit, in the spring of 1648-9, the commission to be with a non obstante;‡ and in the Council Book of the same period there is an order, extending the exemption to all the Judges. The prohibition has been repealed, and to prevent any mischief from the constant visits of the Judges to the same assize towns, the rule has obtained that a Judge shall not choose the same circuit on two successive assizes.

At the close of Elizabeth's reign the name and the fact of "riding" the circuit were identical. For the Western Circuit the judges and their officers started on horseback from Holborn, and thence proceeded from town to town. Where the distance between any two places was great they rested at some gentleman's house, or at some intermediate town. Thus, on the way to Winchester, the Judges usually slept at Mr. Rudiard's house at Hatley, or sometimes at Mr. Wallopp's at Farley; or at the Bishop of Winchester's; or, on the road to Andover, at Mr. Palmer's at Overton; they slept also at the Marquess of Winchester's, between Winchester and Andover; at Sir Richard Rogers's, or Mr. Morton's, between Salisbury and Dorchester; at Mr. Speke's, between Dorchester and Exeter; at Mr. Elveston's, at Lyme Regis; at Mr. Fulford's, or at Mr. Serjeant Glanville's, between Exeter and Launceston; at Mr. Gale's, at Kirton; at Mr. Monk's, or at Mr. Stuckley's, or at Mr. Jennings', or at Mr. Berry's, on the way between Launceston and Taunton; or at Mr. Drake's, on the road from Chard to Exeter. Whilst on the Oxford Circuit they partook of the hospitality of Mr. Savage at Bridgnorth, of Mr. Pitt on the way between Hereford and Worcester, and of Mr. Owen on the road between Shrewsbury and Stafford.

At the houses of these private gentlemen the only expenses incurred were for vails to the servants, usually amounting to half a crown each to the cook, the butler, and the stablemen, and something less for the chamberlain. In some of the towns, also, the Judges were provided for; at Bridgnorth by the bailiffs; at Burford by the aldermen and townsmen; and at Blandford by a plentiful supply from Mr. Swaine.

In the assize towns the expenses of the Judges were in two parts. 1. The joint charges, including the rewards for presents sent, and the payments for lodgings, and all other expenses of the household; and 2. The private charge against each Judge for the keep of the horses, the lodging of the grooms, and the general costs of the stable. Occasionally, however, the provision for the horses was furnished by the sheriff: several times in Devonshire by the clerk of assize: and once at Hereford by Mr. Walwyn, "the lawyer."

An Order in Council in February, 1574, had relieved the sheriffs from the charge of the Judges' diet, yet the sheriff of each county sent large presents of fish, flesh, and fowl for the use of the Judges; and in Devonshire that officer regularly supplied the suppers, and on many days the dinners: in every county some of the mayors of towns and other public bodies, and the principal country gentlemen, also sent presents of like provisions in quantities so ample, that the tables of the Queen's representatives must have been extremely well furnished. Accordingly, we find that bread, flour, eggs, butter, vegetables, firewood, the grocers' bills, beer, and wine, formed the largest items of expenditure.

The presents to the Judges on circuit have now nearly ceased. The sheriff sometimes sends venison or beer, and some customary gifts are still made in particular towns; as at Oxford, where the Judges are on every circuit presented with a pair of white gloves trimmed with gold; and at Cambridge the stirrup-cup is yet given by the Master of Trinity on the Judges' departure. In most counties at a maiden assize the sheriff provides white gloves for the Judge.

The accounts for Devonshire show also the bills of fare for dinner and supper on most of the days, and demonstrate how the inconvenience of an entire day's fish fasting in Lent was ingeniously avoided, by having the fish supper on the Tuesday and Thursday after a hearty meat dinner, and on the Wednesday and Friday adding a substantial meat supper to the abstinence from flesh at dinner.

The maritime counties enabled the country gentlemen to make presents of nearly every species of sea-fish, as well as fresh-water fish from their own ponds and lakes. Among the sea-fish, whether new or salted and dried, we find several sorts not now used at table, and some of which the names have been nearly lost.

FISH.—Of the sturgeon, pieces were sent at Taunton, Dorchester, and Exeter; an isle at Salisbury and Stafford, and a keg at Monmouth and Shrewsbury. The salmon was usual in February and in July in all the western counties, and at Monmouth and Shrewsbury; an isle came to Chard and Salisbury, and salt salmon in February to Winchester and Launceston. Salmon peale were also general in the West and at Gloucester. The shewings, or sea-trout, appear at Hereford. The dolphin appears once at Dorchester in February; a piece of porpoise (to be roasted or cooked like the sturgeon) once at Launceston; and the dory at Oakhampton and Taunton. The conger was eaten at Taunton, Oakhampton, and Exeter, and an isle of it found its way to Dorchester. The cod was used fresh, and also salted and dried, and a cod's head is not unfrequent; whilst the milwell, a fish allied to the cod, appears in Dorsetshire, Devonshire, and Cornwall, as a whole fish in some instances, and in an isle, and also dried, in Devonshire. Turbot were not very frequent, but are mentioned at Taunton, Dorchester, and Exeter. Braymes were used at Exeter and Gloucester; Basse, or sea-perch, at Exeter, Salisbury, and Dorchester, and also at Reading; Mulletts were not unfrequent; and soles, plaice, haddock, herrings, whiting, the thornback or scate, and sprats, were common.

The other dried fish were the buckthorn, or whiting, split and dried; the haberdine, or salt cod; ling of various sorts, viz. the London, Devonshire, organ, and green salt ling; herrings; and the dried and salted hake once (February 1598) at Winchester, called in the account "a drie fish called Poor John," and most contemptuously treated by Shakespeare.

'Tis well thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John.

What have we here? A man or a fish? Dead or alive? A fish: he smells like a fish, a very ancient and fish-like smell; a kind of not of the newest poor John.

TRINCULO—Tempest, Act II. Scene 2.

The shell-fish included oysters of two sorts—one called at Salisbury and Chard the “long oyster;” lobsters, crabs, shrimps, cockles, mussels, whelks, the razor-fish once, and crawfish plentiful.

The fresh-water fish were the Thames trout at Reading, and trout frequently elsewhere; the pike, carp, tench, perch, roach, flounders, barbel; lampreys in February at Winchester, Salisbury, and Taunton; eels generally, and Holland eels at Winchester, and Flanders at Exeter.

MEAT.—The most general present from those gentlemen who had parks was a buck, but the venison was mostly baked, not roasted: sometimes the doe and stag appear. Beef was very seldom used; the working of the oxen on the farms and the milking of the cows gave little beef for the butcher, yet occasionally we meet with a loin, a chine, or a pood; “a veal,” however, is of constant occurrence, and on many occasions calves’ feet. “A MUTTON,” the old and distinguishing term for the dead sheep, is found at every place: lambs in the spring and also in the summer, and a favourite dish was a lamb’s “appurtenances,” or fry. A pig, a collar of brawn, and a roasting-pig, are likewise on the list. Kids are also met with, once at Winchester, given by the sheriff; several times at Launceston, as presents from Mr. Trelawny; and in all the assize towns on the Oxford circuit, from Oxford to Shrewsbury, no less than five having been given at Monmouth.

FOWL was of all kinds. We do not now dress the bustard, one of which was given at Salisbury by Mr. Edward Penruddock in June 1600; or the heron, given at Dorchester and Taunton; or the heronshawes,* which came in at Salisbury, Dorchester, Exeter, and Launceston, and also at Oxford and Stafford (of which the bodies without the legs were stuffed and roasted); or the curlew, which was furnished at Chard, Dorchester, and Exeter; or the gull,* which was relished in the two latter towns as well as in Salisbury and Launceston; or the puffin, which was a rarity met with in Cornwall alone; or the kite cooked at Exeter. Other birds find their way to our table. The peacock † was once dressed at Chard in July: the swan in February graced the table at Winchester, Salisbury, Andover, Taunton, and Dorchester, and two cygnets at Oxford. Turkeys, then a rare bird, were presented on the earliest circuit by the sheriff, Mr. Trelawny, and Mr. Sharock, in Cornwall; subsequently by the sheriff, Sir W. Sanders, Mr. St. John, and Mr. Kingsmill, in Hants; in 1600 at Winchester, Dorchester, and Exeter; and young turkeys in July, 1601, by the Bishop of Coventry and Lichfield. Geese were cooked in February, and green geese at Winchester and Dorchester in July. ‡ Ducks and ducklings, larks, pigeons, capons, chicken, pullets, even hens and sparrows, added to the store.

Nor was game and wild-fowl deficient. The heath-poults, now seldom met with in the West, were sent as presents at Salisbury, Dorchester, and Stafford; and the heath-cock at Launceston. Pheasants, § of which there were not many, and partridges, which were abundant, were killed on both circuits in the months of June and July, and also in February. Quails, now very scarce, formed a portion of the presents in each of the Western assize towns and at Oxford. Plover, golden and green, arrived at Taunton and Exeter; puetts at Winchester, Salisbury, Dorchester, Exeter, and Oxford, Worcester, and Stafford; and a dozen oxen and kyne, "being birds," (ruffs and reeves?) appear once in July at Exeter. These, with widgeon, teal, woodcocks,* and snipes, made the delicacies in this department.

The West of England has long been famous for its pies of every sort—meat, fish, fruit, and vegetable; and these accounts give us a very favourable opinion of proficiency in this line, when we find the true distinction drawn between pasties (the crust baked without a dish) of red deer and venison: tarts of quince, apple, cherry, and custard: and pies proper, composed of a gammon of bacon, calves' feet, neat's tongue, lamb, swan, turkey, pheasant, goose, capon, chicken, pigeon, salmon, trout, carp, lamprey, quince, pippin, apple, and down to the pie, which still holds its own in Devonshire, the potato, given at Exeter in February, 1601, and the only instance in which that new root is mentioned. These varieties have given rise to the popular saying that if the old gentleman himself were caught in Devonshire he would be clapped into a pie.

The VEGETABLES consisted of roots and salads in every town: the names are not stated; but oil, vinegar, and verjuice (the acid of the crab-apple), were provided for the salads. Artichokes were rarities which were sent as presents; peas, beans, onions, and radishes are common; parsnips also occur; carrots are named only at Exeter; and samphire at Chard, Dorchester, and Exeter.

* Served with mustard and sugar.

The FRUIT included oranges in the month of July as well as of February; lemons in July; cherries 4*d.* a pound; apples plain, baked, and stewed; pears, strawberries, gooseberries, at Salisbury and Dorchester; and raspberries once only at Gloucester.

Cheese formed part of the dessert, and accordingly we find it mixed up in the purchases of cherries, strawberries, apples, and other fruit: the sorts are not generally distinguished: we meet, however, with an Holland cheese at Dorchester and with a Lantony cheese at Gloucester.

At Exeter and Launceston alone we discover presents of boxes of marmalade, and at Exeter plates of jelly.

The accounts are not in sufficient detail to enable me to give the prices of many of the articles bought. Butter varied in price; the ordinary cost being 4*d.* a pound in summer and 6*d.* in the spring; and candles cost 5*d.* a pound.

BEER was the great drink and was most plentifully supplied; 89 gallons were consumed in three days at Winchester, 90 gallons in two days at Salisbury, a butt in five days at Chard and Exeter; the sheriffs usually sent a portion, but where that fell short of the demand purchases were made at a cost of 5*s.* or 6*s.* a barrel. In July, 1597, two shillings, representing 12 gallons of beer, were paid between Oakhampton and Launceston "in the extreme heat." Small beer was carefully avoided: its name very seldom appears, and when it does its cost was one-third of the best beer.

WINE* was sometimes sent among the presents; more commonly it was purchased: here, however, the sorts and quantities are seldom distinguished: the cost varied at the different towns, as much as 12s. 6d. being paid at Winchester: 8s. or 9s. was the ordinary cost; in Cornwall it was as low as 3s., 4d.; and 2s. 9d. at Stafford. Wine and sugar are frequently put together in the accounts in one item, and are so distinguished from sack,* of which four pints were bought at Salisbury; and the sheriff of Devonshire presented on one occasion a pint; on another a tierce, or 42 gallons; and on another a rundlet, or 18 gallons; whilst Mr. Denys sent a pottle, or two quarts, at Gloucester. Claret was also bought at Salisbury; the sheriff of Devon sent three gallons on one circuit, a firkin, a tierce, and so much as a hog-head, or 63 gallons, on other occasions, and Dr. Martyn at Oxford a rundlet. The only other wine distinguished by a name is called Rhenish, of which a rundlet was presented once at Exeter, and two bottles at Monmouth. Throughout the several circuits the cost of the wine was not more than one-third the expense for the beer, and in some places it was classed with articles of less importance, appearing in the same item with strawberries at Dorchester, and sinking once at Salisbury so low as to be included with small beer: hence I assume that home-made and sweet wines were usually drank, and that foreign wines were not commonly on the table.

* See "A new booke of the natures and properties of all wines that are commonly used here in England," by William Turner, 1568, dedicated to Sir William Cecill. Sack, malmesey, muscadel, and claret from France and Gascony were the wines most used in England. There was a prejudice against Rhenish.

At Worcester only were the Judges reduced to the extremity of paying for water.

The accounts do not furnish many other items worthy of particular comment; I will only note that Mr. Justice Fenner seems to have been the most jovial of the two, for it was his cook who went the circuit, and it was by his desire that a reward was given for the sport of coursing a buck between Salisbury and Blandford; that the city waits of Hereford had their reward for welcoming the administrators of the law; and that the poor came badly off on the Western and still worse off on the Oxford circuit: on the Western they received 20*d.* at every town in the summer from each Judge, and 3*s.* 4*d.* in the spring circuits from the joint purse, except once at Exeter, when the amount was doubled; but on the Oxford summer circuit they had only 2*s.* in every town as a joint contribution, or a shilling from each Judge.

The assizes for Hants were commonly held at Winchester Castle, but sometimes at Andover: the Somersetshire were most frequently held at Chard, though some were held at Taunton Castle, and on those occasions the assizes for this county were held after those for Cornwall, whilst the Chard sittings preceded the Exeter; where also the circuit upon some occasions ended, the county of Cornwall being altogether left out; and in the spring circuit of 1597 no assizes were held either for Devon or Cornwall.

By the Lansdowne MS. (53, Art. 92) it appears that Sir Roger Manwood and Justice William Periam were the Judges on the Western circuit in the spring of 1587, and had an allowance of 6*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.* a-day for diet, &c. during the twenty-six days which the circuit lasted, making altogether 178*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.* The first commission day on the circuit of Thos. Walnysley, in 1596, was the 5th July, and the last the 26th, so that about the same number of days were taken on the circuit. The first commission day in the summer of 1587 was 11th July, and the last 8th August. The Oxford circuit of 1587 was ridden by William Aylofffe and Francis Windham; it lasted twenty-eight days: their allowance was 6*l.* 2*s.* a-day for diet, &c. and the total sum paid to them was 170*l.* 16*s.* The first commission day in 1601 was 10th July, and the last 3rd August:

the circuit, therefore, lasted nearly a month. The first commission day in the summer circuit in 1857 was 9th July, and the last 5th August.

The Western circuit seems to have caused trouble to the Judges, since, in 1586, a declaration was drawn up "of the course used and nedefull to be used by the Judges in the Western circuite in the delivery of the gaole and triall of nisi prius" (Lansd. MS. 49, Art. 23), wherein it is stated that where there fell a matter of importance or difficulty, were it for life or other cause, the Judges sat together; that few prisoners were indicted the first day, so that the Judges sat at nisi prius; that the number of prisoners in Somerset and Devon was very many, and the gaol delivery most commonly continued very nearly during the whole assize, so that, if the Judges always sat together, few trials at nisi prius could take place; that the gaol delivery was often delayed, because even during the last half-day many were indicted, owing to delay in the evidence, or on the part of the justices of the peace; and that if the Judges always sat together, and the assizes were thereby prolonged, the people would not tarry, for by experience it was found that towards the end of the assizes it was hard to find a jury for the trial of any one cause.

The names of the sheriffs from 1597 are given in the MS., and enable me to correct the lists usually printed for Cornwall, Dorsetshire, Wiltshire, and Somersetshire.

THE SKRYVENERS' PLAY,
THE INCREDULITY OF ST. THOMAS.

FROM A MANUSCRIPT

IN THE POSSESSION OF

JOHN SYKES, ESQ. M.D. OF DONCASTER.

EDITED BY

J. PAYNE COLLIER, ESQ. F.S.A.

PRINTED FOR THE CAMDEN SOCIETY.

M.DCCC.LIX.

INTRODUCTION.

ALTHOUGH the manuscript from which the ensuing Miracle-play is printed is not, perhaps, earlier than the reign of Henry VI., there is ground for believing, from the character of the speeches, and from the extreme simplicity of its construction, that, if not the oldest, it is one of the oldest dramas existing in our language. In this respect it may rival "The Harrowing of Hell," the MS. of which (Harl. 2253) carries us back to the reign of Edward III.

It is not now printed for the first time. It was discovered many years ago "amongst the Archives at Guildhall, York," and was published by Mr. J. Croft, F.S.A. in his "Excerpta Antiqua," which came out in 1797. Ancient records were not then read with so much facility as at present; the manuscript itself is in various places scarcely legible, and the then editor, without being at all to blame, committed serious errors which we have endeavoured to remedy. The valuable original is now the property of John Sykes, Esq. M.D. of Doncaster, who has kindly permitted the Camden Society to make use of it.

Exclusive of the parchment cover, (on which the word

INTRODUCTION.

“Skryveners” was written at a very early date,) it consists of only four leaves, or eight pages, of vellum, not very closely written: the size of the page is  $9\frac{1}{2}$  inches long by  $6\frac{1}{2}$  inches broad; and an infusion of galls has been freely used, in the hope of making the writing more obvious, which has sometimes had the contrary effect.

The subject of the play is the Appearance, or rather the successive appearances, of the Saviour, first to the Apostles Peter, James, and John, and afterwards to the same Apostles with the addition of St. Thomas, as recorded in the Gospel of St. John, xx. 19—29. Under the title of the Incredulity of St. Thomas, this is an incident that has been employed in every known series of Miracle-plays; and there can be no reasonable doubt that that under consideration only formed one of a regular succession of scriptural dramas, or pageants, performed annually by different guilds of the city of York. To the Scriveners’ Company was allotted “The Incredulity of St. Thomas:” and the manuscript in our hands was doubtless the very prompt-book used by the person, denominated Book-holder, whose duty it was to watch and assist the hesitating performers in the delivery of their parts. When the representations were at an end, these prompt-books were collected together, and deposited in some chest, or other receptacle, in the guildhall, until they should again be required. Many similar prompt-books, belonging to other plays, must formerly have existed; and, after the lapse of so many centuries, the wonder is that any one of them should have been preserved. As, however, one has come to light, it is by no means impossible that others may still lurk in some dark and unopened archive.*

The collections of such performances which have come down to our time, and which have formerly belonged to Coventry, Chester, Widkirk, and other places, were, in all probability, transcribed from the separate and subsequently accumulated prompt-books. The Shakespeare Society printed those of Coventry and Chester in 1841 and 1843, while the Widkirk series, usually known as the Towneley Manuscript, had already been published by the Surtees Society in 1836.

It will be seen that nothing of a dramatic character can well exceed the constructive simplicity of the York Play here printed. The number of actors required for its representation would only be five, the characters being the Saviour, St. Peter, St. John, St. James and St. Thomas. It is this circumstance, combined with the nature of the language put into the mouths of these personages, which induces us to believe that the piece, as it has descended to us, existed in that very shape at least as early as the reign of Edward III. If the reader will refer to the Coventry Play upon the same subject (Edit. Shakesp. Soc. p. 364) it will be seen that it is of a much more complicated and elaborate description; while into the Chester Play (edit. Shakesp. Soc. vol. ii. p. 101) speeches of a comparatively modern cast have been introduced,—a remark that will even more strongly apply to the Widkirk Play (edit. Surtees Soc. p. 280) where St. Paul makes a long harangue against the female sex, which could hardly have belonged to the performance as it was first written and represented. The number of persons required to act it was also considerably larger in all three, than in the ensuing drama, which we are decidedly of opinion is of an earlier date, and has reached us in a state of much greater purity.

* Mr. Davies in his "York Records of the Fifteenth Century," 8vo. 1843, p. 233, states that the Plays were 57 in number a few years later than in 1415, and in his list the Scriveners' Play, Apparicio Christi Thome Apostolo et aliis, is the fiftieth. The MS. formerly in Thoresby's collection, afterwards at Strawberry Hill, and at its last remove sold among the late Mr. Heywood Bright's books to Lord Ashburnham, has been believed to be a collection of these separate Plays.

It may be right to add, that in a few places we have restored the measure of the original, where it was disregarded by the old scribe, who ran one line into another for the sake of economising space.

Thomas

Alas, for sythe and sorow sad!
 Mornyng makes me masyd & mad;
 on grownd now may I goo vnglad,
     both eyn and morne:
 y<sup>t</sup> hynd y<sup>t</sup> I my helpe of had his lyff hays lorne.

lorne I haue y<sup>t</sup> luffly lyght
 y<sup>t</sup> was my master moost of myght,
 so dulfully as he was dyght
     was neu<sup>n</sup> no man:
 such wo was wroght of y<sup>t</sup> worthy wyght
     w<sup>t</sup> wondis wan.<sup>17</sup>

wan was his wondis, & wonderus weytt, wth swapis sore<sup>18</sup> was he swong y<sup>t</sup> swett,
 all nakytt nalyd through handes & feytt, Alas, for pyne!
     his lyf shuld tyne.

Alas! for sorow my selfe I schened,<sup>19</sup>
 when I thynke hertely of that hend:
 I fand hym ay a faythfull frend trewly to tell.
 vnto my bredre now wyll I wynd,
     wher some y<sup>ai</sup> dwell.

So wofull wyghtis was neu<sup>n</sup> none;
 owr Joye, owr comforth is all goon:
 of mornyng may we make o<sup>r</sup> mone
     In ylk a land.
 God blise you, bredre, blod and bone,
     same ther ye stand.

NOTES.

---

<sup>1</sup> Skryveners.] This word is written in a handwriting of the time upon the ancient parchment cover to the MS., indicating that the Play was acted by the Guild of Scriveners, we may presume, of the City of York.

<sup>2</sup> our lord to sloo] i. e. our Lord to slay. Here and elsewhere we observe the capital or other letters as we find them in the original, in order to give a more exact notion of it, and of the practice of the age.

<sup>4</sup> Y<sup>D</sup>for I red] Therefore I advise. In the next line "here y<sup>t</sup> wee leynd" means here that we lie or remain: James advises the disciples not to remove, until Christ send them some succour. After these words we are to suppose that the Saviour either entered, or made himself visible, to the disciples with the words "Peace and rest be unto you."

<sup>6</sup> y<sup>t</sup> doos vs teyne] To teen or tene is a verb, but not so commonly used as the substantive, which has various senses: here "teyne" means annoy, grieve, or vex—"that does us annoy." It occurs afterwards in the form of "tyne."

<sup>8</sup> what thynke ye, made men] i. e. mad men. Croft read mey for "men;" and in the next line harth for "hartes."

<sup>9</sup> and grathly grapis my wondes weytt] i. e. and readily gripe, or feel, my wet wounds. Grath is an adjective of ordinary occurrence, but the adverb is more uncommon, and Richardson in his Dictionary has no example of its use.

<sup>10</sup> for yow yeꝝ gattes yus haue I goon] "For you these ways thus have I gone." The Saviour again requires them to use the evidence of their own senses, and to ascertain that he was composed of flesh and bone, which spirits have not.

<sup>11</sup> to gayr yow kene] i. e. "to make you know." The word "gayr" seems to have been originally miswritten graz, and it is corrected in the MS. by interlineation.

not so in this MS., is despair. Christ eats in order to render the confidence of the disciples firm and great, and for the purpose of banishing their despondency.

<sup>14</sup> yett in me ette] i. e. yet in me hereafter. The Saviour then bestows the remnant, or what is left, on the disciples present.

resave you here] "Goost" (probably formerly written gayst) seems intended to rhyme with "rayst" and "wayst" in previous lines; but the MS. is far from clear in this part of the play, and perhaps was not understood by the scribe. The general import is evident enough.

<sup>17</sup> w<sup>t</sup> wondis wan] We must take "wan" here in the sense of faint, or languid, the epithet being applied to the wound, instead of the sufferer.

<sup>18</sup> wth swapis sore] With sore blows or strokes. There is, perhaps, some corruption in the two following lines. A "swape" is still a whip in the North of England.

<sup>19</sup> my selfe I schened] To "shend," among other things, means to destroy. Thomas says that he mars, undoes, or destroys himself with grief on account of the loss of the Saviour, whom he had always found a faithful friend.

<sup>20</sup> I trow ye mang] Perhaps "mang" is to be considered the provincial pronunciation of meng, and then the meaning would be "I trow ye are confused." To meng is to mingle, and it is so used in the Towneley Miracle-Plays, as printed by the Surtees Society, 8vo. 1836, p. 35.

<sup>21</sup> he ys one lyff] He is alive. Croft printed, "Thomas lely is our lyff," which is nonsense. In the next line he converted "Ryfe" into ryse, by mistaking the f for an s; and in the corresponding line he converted "thryfe" into thrye. "Tholyd," in the next line, means suffered.

<sup>22</sup> why sa ye say] Either this is an observation "why, so ye say," or the words have been inverted for the sake of the rhyme, and we ought to read it as a question "why say ye so?"

<sup>23</sup> ye wend was hee] i. e. "I lay my life it was some spirit that you supposed was he." Jacobus has already used the word sprit.

<sup>25</sup> are shall I trow no talis be twene] "Ere I shall be sure there are no tales between us." The word "fare," in the first line of this stanza, is used in the same way by Chaucer, as quoted by Richardson: "Now, fellows, let be your fare," is, "Now, fellows, put an end to this ado."

<sup>26</sup> and tyll wyth trawntes] The meaning seems to be, "Do you think it no sin to grieve me thus, and to put upon me such inventions?" There is, possibly, some clerical error in "tyll."

<sup>27</sup> for mans prow] i. e. for man's benefit or advantage. Chaucer uses "prow" in this sense : see Tyrwhitt's Glossary ; also the Towneley Miracle-Plays, as published by the Surtees Society, p. 11.

<sup>28</sup> ar all bled hand] So written in the MS., but properly it ought to be bleedand, for bleeding : see note 12 on the word "lovand." Croft read "my wondis are all bledsand."

INTRODUCTION.

---

THIS interesting little legend, preserved in a volume in the Harleian Collection of MSS. in the British Museum, calendared as "Poems by Chaucer, Dan Lydgate, and others," can hardly be said to have escaped the notice of our antiquaries, since Ritson, in his Bibliographia Poetica, p. 71, mentions it, and gives its authorship to Lydgate.

Beyond this notice I know of no other evidence to establish either the date of the poem or its writer, although its simplicity and beauty would not have been unworthy of the author of the Canterbury Tales, or that voluminous poetaster Dan* John.

The story itself would not appear to be an original idea of the poet, for he says, "I found it written in olde hand."

The scene is laid in Bristol, or rather about seven miles from that city, where dwelt a squire of vast possessions and unbounded wealth, acquired by mal-practices, and wrested from the poor.

A usurer, and an ungodly man, he cared not whom he wronged so that he might aggrandise his only son, the "childe of Bristow," desirous that none should surpass him in worldly riches. When his son arrived at the age of twelve, the father took pains to have him well versed in clerkly lore, and desired to give him a year's instruction in the law; but this measure is opposed by the youth, who, in the words of an old saw, thus answers, "They fare full well who learn no law," and announces his determination to follow no other profession than that of "marchantye," and to become bound to a Bristol merchant for seven years. To Bristol accordingly "the childe" goes, and by his courtesy and amiability soon wins the hearts of all who know him. In the meantime, a sudden illness throws the squire on his death-bed, and now the country is sought, far and near, for some one to become his executor. No one will undertake the responsibility of becoming the personal representative of a man whose wealth had been acquired by means so questionable. In the end, in despair, he sends for his son to undertake the office; compelled by the solemn adjuration of his father, the son accepts the charge, but unwillingly, and upon condition that, in a fortnight after that day on which his father's spirit passed away, he would reappear in that same chamber, that his son might be certified whether his soul were in weal or woe.

After priestly shrift and ghostly consolation the squire expires, and the pious "childe" sells all his chattels and distributes the produce in alms, or expends it in masses for the welfare of his father's soul.

The end of the appointed fortnight arrives, and we see the son kneeling in prayer in the dead chamber for half a day, when suddenly, in lightning and thunder, his father's spirit burning like a living coal, with a fiery chain about his neck, stands before him, led by the Evil One. Being conjured to speak, the wretched man explains that his goods were gotten wrongfully, and that he must expiate his ill doings by one hundred years of torment. The son makes him promise to return in another fortnight, and he will endeavour to bring his soul "in better way."

Overwhelmed with sorrow, next day the son departs for Bristol, and sells his inheritance to his master for three hundred pounds.

Thereupon, he gives notice in church and market that if any person whom his father had wronged would come to him, restitution should be made; and by the fortnight's end all his gold is gone.

While at prayer, as before, the spirit again makes his appearance, but this time without the encircling chain, and black, not burning, but full of care. His state being inquired into, he blesses his son, and relates how his bitter chain had fallen off, and his burning agony had ceased, but he must still dwell in pain until his foredoomed time had been fulfilled. On inquiring what was most against him, he explained that he had omitted the payment of tithes and offerings, and, until they were restored with increase, all prayer would be un-availing.

“The childe” desires another interview at the end of a further fortnight. Forthwith he seeks his master, requesting more gold. The merchant upbraids him with having been given to bad company and gambling, reminds him that all his property is gone, and that he has nought now to sell.

The apprentice hears his reproaches in silence, but offers to become his bond-slave, himself and all his to the world’s end, if he will but advance him forty marks. The kindly merchant lends him forty pounds, and “the childe” craves another fortnight’s leave of absence.

During this time he makes restitution to all the churches near which his father had dwelt. Going “by the street” he is met by a poor man, who tells him that his father was indebted to him for a seam of corn. The youth sorrowfully exclaims, that his silver and gold are gone, but, stripping off his garments, and putting them upon the poor man, he beseeches him to pray for his father’s soul.

Bereft of his gay apparel down “to shirte and breche,” he directs his steps into the dead man’s chamber to pray as before. Suddenly he hears the sound of music, and perceives a brilliant light. A vision of his father’s glorified spirit, in the form of a naked child in angel-hand, appears and blesses him, praying.

that God will requite his filial endeavours, and assuring him that he is going to eternal happiness.

“The childe” returns thanks to God, and wends his way to Bristol attired as he was. The worthy merchant, astonished at his plight, wishes to know the reason, when he unfolds to him the whole story. Pleased with such exemplary affection, the master makes him his partner, endows him with all his lands, and marries him to the daughter of a worthy man. At the merchant’s death he inherits all his possessions.

The moral of this pretty little composition points at the sin of covetousness, and the blessings attendant upon the observation of the fifth commandment. Like Job in the Holy Scriptures, “the childe of Bristowe”

‘First was riche and sitthen bare,
And sitthen richer than ever he was.’

An harmonious repetition of the first lines of the poem concludes this simple and unaffected tale.

THE CHILDE OF BRISTOW.

---

- 1 He that made bothe heuene and hell,<sup>a</sup>
man and woman, in dayes vij,
and alle shal fede and fille ;
he graunte us alle his blessing,
more and lasse, bothe olde and yong,
that herkeneth and hold hem stille.

- 2 The beste songe that ever was made
ys not worth a lekys blade,
but men wol tende y<sup>r</sup> till ;
ther for y pray you in y<sup>s</sup> place
of your talking y<sup>t</sup> ye be pes, yf it be your wille.

- 3 I found it writen in olde hand,
that som tyme dwellid in England
a squyer mykel of myght ;
he had castels, tounes, and toures,
feyr forestis and feldes w<sup>t</sup> floures,
beestis wilde and wight.

<sup>a</sup> Here evidently must be an error in the transcript. To complete the rhythm it should read, "He that made bothe hell and heuene."—Vide last stanza.

- 4 To lawe he went a gret while,
pore men he lerned to begile
all agayns the right;
mykel good he gadred togedir,
all w<sup>t</sup> treson and dedis lether;
he drad not god almyght.
- 5 The good he gadred togeder than
he had it of many a pore man,
the most partye w<sup>t</sup> wrong:
he had a sone shuld be his heyre,
of shap he was semely and feyre,
of lymes large and long.
- 6 So moche his mynde was on y<sup>t</sup> chylde
he rought not whom begiled,
worldly good to fong;
and al to make his sone so riche
that non other myght hym be liche,
so ment he ever among.
- 7 When the child was xij yere and more
his fader put hym unto lore
to lerne to be a clerke;
so long he lernyd in clergie,
til he was wise and wittye,
and drad all dedis derke.
- 8 The fader seid to his sone dere,
“to lawe thou shalt go a yere,
and coste me xx marke;
for ever the better thou shalt be,
ther shall no man be gile the neyther in worde ne werke.”

- 9 The child answerd w<sup>t</sup> a soft sawe;
“ they fars ful well y<sup>t</sup> lerne no lawe,
and so y hope to do;
that lyue wil y never lede,
to put my soule in so gret drede,
to make god my foo.
- 10 To sle my soule it wer routhe;
any science that is trouthe
y shall amyttē me ther to;
for to forsake my soule helthe
for any wynnyng of worldes welthe,
that will y never do.
- 11 Hit hath ever be myn avise
to lede my lyf by marchandise,
to lerne to bye and selle;
that good getyn by marchantye,
it is trouthe, as thenketh me,
ther w<sup>t</sup> will I melle.
- 12 Here at Bristow dwelleth on
is held right a juste trew man,
as y here now telle;
his prentys will y be vij yer,
his science truly for to lere
and w<sup>t</sup> hym will y dwelle.”
- 13 The squyer unto Bristow rade,
and w<sup>t</sup> the marchand cownant made,
vij yere to have his sone;
he gaf hym gold gret plenté,
the child his prentys shuld be,
his science for to conne.

- 14 The child toke ful wel to lore,
his love was in god evermore;
as it was his wone,
he wax so curteise and bolde,
all merchantz loued hym, yong and olde,
that in that contré gan wone.
- 15 Leue we now that child thore,
and of his fader speke we more,
that was so stoute and bolde ;
he was avaunced so hye,
there was no man in y<sup>t</sup> contré
durst don but as he wolde.
- 16 And ever he usid usery,
he wold not lene but he wyst why
avauntage dobell tolde ;
tethynges he liste never to pay,
yf parsons and vicares wold oght say
he uewid hem cares colde.
- 17 All thyng wol end atte last ;
god on hym soche sekenes cast,
he myght no leng abide ;
but on his ded bed he lay,
and drow toward his endyng day ;
for al his power and pride.
- 18 Then he sent for knyghtes and squyers,
which were his comperys
in that contré be syde :
he seid emonges hem everych on, “sires, my lyf is ner gone ;
hit may not be denyede.”

- 19 Ther was no man in y<sup>t</sup> contré
that his executo<sup>r</sup> wold be,
nor for no good ne ill:
they seid his good was geten so they wold not have y<sup>r</sup> w<sup>t</sup> to do,
for drede of god in heuen.
- 20 He prayed hem, and they seid nay;
allas! he seid, and welaway!
w<sup>t</sup> a ruffull stevyn:
after hissone son he sent,
evyn to Bristow vereament,
was thens but myles vij.
- 21 The child to chamber toke his way;
ther his fader on ded bed lay,
and asked hym of his chere:
“sone, (he sed,) wel come to me;
y ly here now, as y<sup>u</sup> may se;
my endyng day negheth nere.
- 22 But, sone, thou must be myn heyre
of al my londes good and faire,
and my lordships fer and ner;
ther for, sone, now y pray the,
myn atto<sup>r</sup>ney that thou be,
when y am broght to bere.”
- 23 The child answerd w<sup>t</sup> wordes mylde; “ye se, fader, y am but a childe;
discrecion haue y none,
to take soche a charge on me,
by my faith! that shal not be;
y can no skyle ther on.

- 24 Here ben knyghtes and squyers,
 which were yo<sup>r</sup> compers,
 and many a worthy man;
 yf y shuld soche on me take,
 that alle these worthi men forsake,
 a fole then wer y one."
- 25 He seid, " y haue no sone but the,
 and myn heire y<sup>u</sup> most nedis be;
 ther may no man sey nay;
 moche good haue y gadred to geder
 w<sup>t</sup> extorcion and dedis lither, alas and welaway!
- 26 All this, sone, y gadred for the,
 and thu so sone failest me
 at my nedeful day;
 frendship, sone, is yll to triste,
 eche man be ware of had y wiste,
 god wote, so may I sey."
- 27 " Sone, (he seid,) thu scapest not so;
 that shalt y<sup>u</sup> weten, or thu go;
 he then charge y the
 to fore god·thu mothe answer,
 and as thu wilt my blessing ber,
 myn atto<sup>r</sup>ney that thu be."
- 28 " A fader, ye bynde me w<sup>t</sup> a charge, and y shal bynde yow w<sup>t</sup> as large as ye bynde now me:
 the same day fortenyght y<sup>t</sup> ye passe,
 y charge yow appere in this place,
 yo<sup>r</sup> spiret lat me se.

- 29 For ye haue bound me so sare,
 now y most nedis, how ever y fare,
 do your cõmaundement ;
 ther for y charge yow y<sup>t</sup> ye appere,
 that y may se yō soule here,
 whethir it be saued or shent !
- 30 And that ye do no scathe to me,
 ne none, that shal come w<sup>t</sup> the.”
 “ sone, (he seid,) y assent,
 but, allas, that y was born ;
 that man is soule shuld be lorn
 for my golde or rent.”
- 31 Al thyng most ende atte last,
 god soche sekenys on hym cast,
 that he most nedys go :
 the parish prest up was soght ;
 the g̃tiose sãcment w<sup>t</sup> hym he broght,
 that dyed for mannys woo.
- 32 Ther he shrove hym w<sup>t</sup> hert sore,
 and cryed god mercy ever more !
 as it was tyme to do ;
 when god wold, he went his way ;
 his sones song was “ welaway !”
 for hym his hert was wo.
- 33 His sone sought fro toun to toun
 for prestis and men of religioun
 the Dirige for to say :
 an C prestis he had and mo ;
 gret yeftys he gaf them tho,
 chargyng hem for his fader to pray.

- 34 Yong children had gret hole,
 and pore wyñen had gret dole,
 that holpe hym not a day ;
 and sitthe broght hym in his pytt,
 as al men must, thei may not flyt,
 whether thei wel or nay.
- 35 When thei had broght hym in his graue,
 his sone y<sup>t</sup> thoght his soule to saue,
 yf god wold gef hym leue ;
 al the catel his fader hade,
 he sold it up and money made,
 and labored morow and eve.
- 36 He sought aboute in that contré tho,
 wher any almes myght be do,
 and largely he dyd hem yeue wayes and brugges for to make,
 and pore men for goddes sake
 he yeaf hem gret releve.
- 37 Who so axed aght, he made her pay,
 and xxx<sup>ti</sup> trental of masses he let say
 for his fadres sake ;
 he let never til he had bewared
 all the tresor his fader spared
 a seth to god for to make.
- 38 By y<sup>t</sup> day fortenyghtes ende was come ;
 his gold was gon all and some ;
 (many one of hym spake)
 and al thynges that wer meuable,
 he gaf aboute, w<sup>t</sup> outen fable,
 to pore men that wold take.

- 39 By than the fourtenyght was broght to ende,
 the child to the chamber gan wende,
 wher his fader dyed;
 a doun he knelid half a day;
 al the good prayers y<sup>t</sup> he couthe say,
 his fader for to abide.
- 40 Be twene mydday and under
 y<sup>r</sup> came a blast of lightnyng and dunder
 thurgh the walles wide;
 as al the place on fire had be;
 the child seid, "Benedicite!"
 and fast on god he cryde.
- 41 And as he sate on his prayere,
 sone be fore hym gan appere,
 foule tydynges be twene,
 his faders soule brennyng as glede,
 the deuel by y<sup>e</sup> nekke gan hym lede
 in a brennyng cheyne.
- 42 This child seid, " I cōiure the,
 what so ever y<sup>u</sup> be, speke to me;"
 that other answerd a geyne:
 " y am thi fader that y<sup>e</sup> be gate;
 now thu may se of myn a state;
 lo! how y dwelle in peyne."
- 43 The child seid, " ful woo is me,
 in this plite that yow se;
 it persheth myn hert sore;"
 " sone, (he seid,) thus am y led,
 for be cause of my falshed
 that y used ever more.

- 44 Mi good was getyn wrongfully ;
but it myght restord be,
and a seth be made ther fore ;
an C yer thus shal y do,
gef me my trouthe I wer ago,
for till than my soule is lore."
- 45 " Nay, fader, that shal not be ;
in better plite y wol yow se,
yf god wol gef me grace ;
but ye shal me yo<sup>r</sup> trouthe plighte
this same day fourtenyght
ye shal appere in this place.
- 46 And y shal labo<sup>re</sup>, yf y may,
to bryng yo<sup>r</sup> soule in better way,
yf y haue lyf and space."
he graunted hym in gret hast ;
wt that ther cam a donder blast,
and bothe ther way gan passe.
- 47 The child had neuer so gret sorwe ;
he rose up upon the morwe,
to Bristow gan he wende ;
to his mayster he gan say,
" y haue serued yow many a day ;
for goddes loue be my frend.
- 48 My fader out of this world is past ;
y am come to yow in hast ;
y haue euer founde yow kynde ;
me nedith a litel so<sup>m</sup>e of gold ;
myn heritage shal be sold,
croppe, rote, and rynde."

- 49 His maister sed, " what nede wer the
to selle thy thrift so hastely ?
it wer not for thy prow ;
yf thu any bargeyn haue boght,
for gold ne siluer care y<sup>u</sup> noght ;
y shal lene the right y now.
- 50 An C mark yf thu wilt haue,
this vij. yer y wil neuer craue ;
wher for avise the now ;
for yf thu selle thyn heritage that shuld y<sup>e</sup> holpe in thi yong age,
an unwise man art thow."
- 51 " Gramercy ! (he seid,) maister hende,
this was a proffer of a frende ;
but truly it shal be sold ;
better chepe ye shal it have then any man, so god me saue,
for nedys y must haue gold."
- 52 He seid, " what is it worth by yer ?"
" ane C marke of money cler ;
the stuard this me tolde."
" then shal y gef the iij.C pound,
every penny hole and round ;"
the yong [man] seid, " y holde.
- 53 Dere mayster, y yow pray,
haue her dedis,—foch me my pay ;
for y must houe agayn ;
y haue to do in soundre place,
y pray yow, of fourtenyght space
y shal yow quytte certayn."

- 54 His mayster loued hym so wele,
he fette hym gold euery dele;
than was y<sup>e</sup> child ful fayn:
he toke his good, and gan to go;
and for his fader his hert was woo,
that bode in so mykel payn.
- 55 His sone lete crie al aboute
in churches and markettes, w<sup>t</sup> oute doute,
wher his fader dud wone;
wher his fader dud destriccion
to man or woman in any toun,
they shuld come to his sone.
- 56 And he shal make a seth ther forè,
and his good ayen restore,
eche man his porcion;
ever as they come, he made her pay,
and charged hem for his fader pray,
in blisse that he might wone.
- 57 By that the fourtenyght was come,
his gold was gon al and some;
then had he ne more:
in to the chamber he went y<sup>t</sup> tide,
the same that his fader in dyde,
and knelid as he dud ore.
- 58 And, as he sate in his prayer,
the spiret be fore hym gan apper,
right as he dud be fore;
saue y<sup>e</sup> cheyn away was caught;
blak he was, but he brent noght,
but yet he was in care.

- 59 " Wel come, fader, (seid the childe ;)
 y pray yow w<sup>t</sup> wordes mylde, tel me of your astate."
 " sone, (he seid,) the better for the,
 y blessid mote the tyme be,
 that euer I the be gate.
- 60 Thou hast releuyd me of moche wo :
 my bitter chayne is fal me fro,
 and the fire so hote ;
 but yet dwel y-stille in peyn,
 and euer must, in certeyn,
 tyl I haue fulfilled my day."
- 61 " Fader, (he seid,) I charge yow tel me
 .what is moste ayens the,
 and doth yow most disese?"
 " tethynges and offrynges, sone, (he sayd,)
 for y them neuer truly payd, wherfor my peynes may not cesse :
- 62 But it be restored agayn
 to as many churches in certayn,
 and also mykel encesse,
 all that for me thu dos pray,
 helpeth me not, to the uttermost day,
 the valure of a pese.
- 63 Ther for, sone, y pray the gef me my trouthe y left w<sup>t</sup> the,
 and let me wynde my way."
 " nay, fader, (he seid,) ye gete it noght,
 another craft ther shal be soght,
 yet efte y will assay ;

- 64 But yo<sup>r</sup> trouthe ye shal me plight,
 this same day a fourtenyght
 ye shal come ageyn to yo<sup>r</sup> day;
 ye shall appere her in this place,
 and y shal loke, w<sup>t</sup> goddes grace,
 to amend yow, yf y may."
- 65 The spiret went forth in his way;
 the childe rose up that other day;
 for no thyng wold he lette:
 even to Bristowe gan he wynde;
 ther he mette w<sup>t</sup> his maister kynde;
 wel goodly he hym grette.
- 66 "When y haue nede y come to yow,
 mayster, but ye helpe me now;
 in sorwe my herte is sette;
 me nedeth a litel su<sup>m</sup>e of gold;
 another bargeyn make y wold;"
 and w<sup>t</sup> that word he wepte.
- 67 His maister seid, "y<sup>u</sup> art a fole;
 thu has ben at som bad scole;
 by my fecth y hold the mad;
 for thu has played atte dice,
 or at som other games nyce,
 and lost vp sone y<sup>t</sup> thu had.
- 68 Thu hast right nocht y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>u</sup> may selle;
 all is gon, as y here telle;
 thi gouernaunce, sone, is bad."
 then he seid until his maister fre,
 "myn owne bodye y wil selle to the,
 for euer to be thy lad.

- 69 Bonde to the y will me bynde,
 me and alle myne, to y<sup>e</sup> worldes ende,
 to helpe me in this nede.”
 he seid, “how mykel woldest y<sup>a</sup> haue?” “xl mark, and ye wold foche saue,
 for that shuld do my dede.
- 70 I hope that shal my cares kele.”
 the burger louyd y<sup>e</sup> child so wele,
 that to his chamber he yede;
 xl pound he gan hym brynge:
 “sone, her is more than thyn askyng;—
 almyghti god the spede!”
- 71 “Gramercy! sire, (gan he say,) god yow quytte that best may!
 and trewe ye shal me fynde;
 y have to do a thyng or two,
 a fourtenyght gef me lef to go,
 y have euer founde yow kynde.”
- 72 He gaf hym leue; he went his way;
 but on his fader he thoght ay,
 he goth not out of mynde;
 he sought alle y<sup>e</sup> churches in y<sup>t</sup> contré,
 wher his fader had dwellid by,
 he left not one be hynde.
- 73 He made a seth w<sup>t</sup> hem echon;
 by y<sup>t</sup> tyme his gold was gon,
 they couthe aske hym no mare;
 saue as he went by y<sup>e</sup> strete,
 w<sup>t</sup> a pore man gan he mete,
 al most naked and bare.

- 74 “ Your fader oweth me for a zeme of corn.”
down he knelid him be forn.
“ for yo<sup>r</sup> faders soules sake ;
and y hym drad ful sare,
som amendes to me ye make,
for hym that Marie bare.”
- 75 “ Welaway ! (seid y<sup>e</sup> yong man,)
for my gold and siluer is gan ;
y haue not for to pay :”—
of his clothes he gan take,
and put hem on y<sup>e</sup> pore manis bake,
chargyng for his fader to pray.
- 76 Hosen and shon he gaue hym tho ;
in sherte and breche he gan go ;
he had no clothes gay,
in to the chamber he went y<sup>t</sup> tide,
the same y<sup>t</sup> his fader on dyde,
and knelid half a day.
- 77 When he had knelid and prayed long,
hym thocht he herd y<sup>e</sup> myriest song
after the song, he saw a light,
as thow a thousand torches bright,
it shone so faire and clere.
- 78 In that light, so faire lemand,
a naked child in angel hand
be fore hym dud appere ;
and seid, “ sone, blessid thu be,
and all y<sup>t</sup> euer shall come of the,
that euer thu goten were.”

- 79 “ Fader, (he seïd,) ful wel is me,
 in that plite that y yow se;
 y hone that ye be saue.” “ sone, (he seïd,) y go to blisse;
 god almyghti quyte thè this !
 thi good ageyn to haue ;
- 80 Thu has made the ful bare
 to aqueynche me of mykel care,
 my trouthe, good sone, y craue.” “ haue yo<sup>r</sup> trouthe (he seïd) fre, and of thi blessyng I pray the,
 yf that ye wold foche saue.”
- 81 “ In that blessyng mote y<sup>u</sup> wone,
 that our lady gaf here sone,
 and myn on the y lay.”
 now that soule is gon to blisse
 w<sup>t</sup> moche ioye and angelis,
 more then y can say.
- 82 This child thanked god almyght
 and his moder Marye bryght,
 when he sey that aray;
 euen to Bristow gan he gon
 in his sherte and breche allon;
 hed he no clothes gay.
- 83 When y<sup>s</sup> burges y<sup>e</sup> child gan se,
 he seïd then, “ Benedicite!
 sone, what araye is this ? ” “ truly, maister, (seïd y<sup>e</sup> childe,) y am come me to yelde
 as your bonde man.”

- 84 The burges seid anon right, “me mervayleth mykel of y<sup>e</sup> sight;
tel me now how it ys.” “whatsom euer ye put me to,
after my power it shall be do,
while my lyf wil laste.”
- 85 “For y<sup>e</sup> loue be twene vs hath be,
tell me, sone, how it stant w<sup>t</sup> the;
why thu gos in this way:”
“Sir, al my good y haue sold, y wys,
to gete my fader to heuene blys;
for sothe as y yow say.
- 86 For ther was no man but y,
that wold be his atto<sup>r</sup>ny
at his endyng day.”
tho he told hym further,
how ofte he dud his fader appere,
and eke in what aray.
- 87 “And now his soule into blisse
y sey hym led w<sup>t</sup> angelis;
almighti god the yelde!
for thurf your good he is saue,
and his dere blessing y haue,
and al my cares be kelde.”
- 88 “Sone, (he seid,) blessed mote y<sup>u</sup> be,
that so pore woldest make the,
thy faders soule to saue;
to speke y<sup>e</sup> honor may al mankynde;
thu art a trusty siker frende;
soche fynde y but silden;

- 89 But fewe sones ben of tho,
 that wol serue her fader so,
 when he is hens gon;
 certes fynd y many on,
 but none soche as y<sup>u</sup> art on;
 by my fecth y leve not on."
- 90 Hys maister seid, " y shal y<sup>e</sup> tell,
 thu canst both bye and sell;
 here now make y the
 myn owne felow in al wise
 of worldly good and merchandise,
 for thy trouthe so fre.
- 91 Al so, sone, y haue no childe
 myn heritage for to wilde,
 gotten of my body;
 here y make the now myn heyr
 of alle my landes good and faire,
 and myn attorney that y<sup>u</sup> be."
- 92 His maister dud hym weddid be to a worthy manis doghter of y<sup>t</sup> contré
 with ioye and grete solace;
 and when his mayster was ded,
 in to all his good he entred,
 landes, catell, and place.
- 93 . Thus hath y<sup>s</sup> yong man keuered care;
 first was riche and sitthen bare,
 and sitthen richer then euer he was:—
 now he y<sup>t</sup> made both helle and heuene,
 and all the worlde in dayes seuene,
 graunte vs alle his grace.

Amen.

SIR EDWARD LAKE'S ACCOUNT OF HIS INTERVIEWS WITH CHARLES I.
ON BEING CREATED A BARONET, AND RECEIVING AN AUGMENTATION TO HIS ARMS.

---

FROM a love of his sovereign, and a full conviction of the justness of his cause, Dr. Edward Lake, laying aside the gown, took up the sword, and followed his royal master to the battle of Edge-hill. In this engagement he received sixteen wounds ; and having lost the use of his left hand by a shot, he placed his horse's bridle between his teeth, and held out the combat, fighting with his sword in his right hand, till the armies parted by the coming of night.

For this service he was created a Baronet, and received an augmentation to his arms.

The friendly and affectionate part taken by the amiable and unfortunate monarch in the concerns of this loyal subject, is set forth in an original MS. in Sir Edward Lake's own handwriting. Of this MS. his descendant Colonel Noel Thomas Lake, C.B. of the Royal Artillery, kindly lent me a copy some time since, a transcript of which I now submit for publication by the Camden Society.

By the lapse of time and the absence of party feeling, as well as by the more correct and circumstantial information (particularly of an epistolary nature,) which we possess at the present day, respecting the actions, and secret springs of action, of the principal personages of that troubled epoch of our history, we are compelled (however loth) to admit that the cause of the rebellious party was just, whilst we deplore the extravagancies which they were led to commit. Yet we cannot but admire the spirit of heroism which induced the subject of this notice to quit the peaceful pursuits to which he had been trained, and valiantly to draw his sword in defence of that sovereign and those rights which he conscientiously believed were unjustly assailed. Well might his majesty exclaim (page 14) “For a lawyer, a professed lawyer, to throw off his gown and fight so heartily for me, I must needs think very well of it !”

According to Anthony à Wood, Sir Edward was “educated till he was Bachelor of Arts in St. Catherine’s Hall, Cambridge, whence he retired to Oxon, and entering himself a commoner of St. Alban’s Hall, was incorporated in the same degree on the 15th of Dec. 1627; and on the 24th of January following was admitted Bachelor of the Civil Law. After the restoration of King Charles II. I find him to be Chancellor of the Bishop of Lincoln, and a Baronet, as also author of ‘Memoranda touching the oath ex officio, pretended self-accusation and Canonical Purgation : Together with some notes about the making of some new and alteration and explanation of some old Laws. Lond. 1662. qu'. Dedicated to William Earl of Strafford, and humbly submitted to the consideration of the Parliament then sitting."

In a MS. pedigree in the possession of the family, Sir Edward is described as of "the close of Lincoln, Bart., æt. 66, an. 1666."

He was the eldest son of Richard Lake, of Erby, co. Lincoln, Esq. by Anne, youngest daughter and co-heir of Edward Wardell, of Kealby, in the same county, Esq. He married Anne, eldest daughter and co-heir of Simon Bibye, Esq. of Buckden, Huntingdonshire, by whom he had one son Edward, who died an infant prior to 1666. He died in 1674; and lies buried in the cathedral of Lincoln, where a monument was erected to his memory with this inscription :

Much curious information is contained in Sir Edward's will, dated April 8th, 1665, with codicils October 6th, 1670, January 17th, 1671, and June 8th, 1674. He desires his "body may be buried in Lincoln Minster, in some convenient place to be appointed by the Deane and Chapter of that Cathedrall, with some decent monumentall Remembrance" to be erected by his executor. He gives "to the church or chappell of Normanton, near Pontefract, in Yorkshire (if there be a church or chappell there, which I know not,) where my paternall ancestors have lived for many years," a clock, and a sum "for the maintaining and keeping of it for ever."* He mentions

* In Normanton Church is this inscription :—

There is a difference of three years in Sir Edward's age as here recorded, and as stated in the pedigree before quoted, "Æt. 66 an. 1666."

his "loveing kinsman Henry Bigland, of Morninghurst, Sussex, Esq.," and his brother "Mr. Edward Bigland, of Graies Inn, Barrister;" also his "servant and kinsman Christopher Lake;" he orders the sale of all his "estate real and personall in Ireland;" he charges his "executor" [Thomas Lake, of Boston, in New England] "upon the fraternall and true love that is betwixt us," that the "heirs male for ever may for their Christian name have the name Biby, the paternal name of my deare wife; or Seaman, in remembrance of my deare wife's mother's surname; or of Caley, in remembrance of Sir Hugh Caley, knight, whose co-heir my ancestor in the time of king Edward the Third married; or Wardall, in remembrance of my mother, daughter and co-heir of Edward Wardall." He names his "cosin Francis Lake, of Hatchliffe;" his "brother John Lake;" "the eldest son of my brother Luke Lake;" and appoints his "most dear and loving brother Thomas Lake, executor;" leaving all his goods and lands, after his wife's death, to the said Thomas Lake and his heirs. 'The witnesses were "Sam. Lawson, Jo. Procter, Geo. Noel, Chr. Lake."

In the codicil of October 6th, 1670, made at Caistor, he mentions his wife's death, and makes "Stephen Lake of Grayes Inn, gent. eldest son of my said brother Thomas Lake, sole executor;" he names his "kinsman

Francis Lake of Hatcliffe;" and "Christopher Lake of Harpswell, and to such of my name and kindred as live at Tetwey;" "Mr. Richard Whyngates agent for my lord the earle of Strafford in Ireland;" and mentions the "rent of Carnow and Cranyh in Ireland due to me before I did give up my lease thereof to my lord of Strafford." By a codicil made at his "house within the close of the cathedrall church of Lincoln," January 17th, 1671, "Stephen being since dead, I doe in his stead and place make Thomas Lake his brother my executor," &c. By a codicil dated June 7th, 1674, Sir Edward "of Bishop's Norton, in the county of Lincoln," wills, among other things, "to be buried in Lincolne Minster, as neere as may be to my dear wife, if the deane and chapter will give leave, if not, at Norton: my funerall to be very private; some escucheons."

A fine oil portrait of Sir Edward, representing him in armour, is preserved in the family. It is at present in the possession of Lady Lake (relict of Sir James Samuel Lake the late baronet, and now the wife of Dr. Mitchelson). An engraving of this portrait, with Sir Edward's autograph and seal, may be seen in Thane's "British Autography," vol. iii.

Sir Edward's father married secondly, Anne daughter of Morelly of Claxby, co. Lincoln, Esq. by whom he had Thomas Lake, mentioned in his brother

Sir Edward's will. This Thomas Lake emigrated to Boston in New England about the year 1648. He married Mary daughter of Stephen Goodyear of London, goldsmith, who was deputy-governor of New Haven colony from 1641 to 1650, but returned to and died in London in 1658, probably early in the year, for "an inventory of the estate of the right worshipful Stephen Goodyear, Esq. the late deputy-governor of this colony," was taken October 15th, 1658. The Boston records furnish the dates of birth of all the children of Thomas and Mary Lake, of whom Thomas was born February 9th, 1656, barrister, heir of Sir Edward; and a daughter, Ann Lake, who was born October 12th, 1663, and married 1st. the Rev. John Cotton, of Hampton, New Haven, and 2ndly. the Rev. Increase Mather, D.D. of Boston. To her descendant, J. Wingate Thornton, Esq. of Boston, U. S., I am indebted for the above information.

Thomas Lake, brother of Sir Edward, died 16th August, 1676, aged 61 years, and was succeeded by his son Thomas Lake, of Bishop's Norton, co. Lincoln, and of the Middle Temple, barrister-at-law. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Story, Esq. of Kniveton, Derbyshire, and died the 22d of May, 1711, leaving a son, Bibye, and a daughter, Mary. He was buried in the Temple Church, where is a monument, surmounted by his armorial bearings, and containing the following inscription : *

M. S.

Neer this Place lye interred
 The Remains of Tho. Lake, Esq.
 Utter Barrister of the Hon. Society of the Middle Temple; Nephew and Heir of Sir Edw. Lake,
 Late of Bishop's Norton, in the County of Lincoln, who for His Loyalty and Valour, signalized
 At Edgehill Fight, was created Baronet,
 By K. Charles I.
 He died May 22, in the 54th
 Year of his Age,
 An. Dom. MDCCXI.

Notwithstanding the baronetcy was granted to Sir Edward, "and the heirs male of his body begotten or to be begotten for ever; and for want of such heirs male, then to the heirs male of Sir Edward for ever," neither his brother nor nephew took out the patent; but his

* It may be worth remarking that the arms of Sir Edward Lake (Sable, a bend between six cross-crosslets fitchée, argent. Crest, a sea-horse's head, argent, finned or, charged on the neck with three bars gules) were the same as those borne by Edward Lake, D.D. whose Diary was published in the first volume of the Camden Miscellany, 1846, though his degree of relationship to the baronet is not known. Dr. Lake's eldest daughter and coheir was married, in 1695, to the Rev. William Taswell, D.D. whose "Autobiography" was published by the Camden Society in 1852.

grandnephew, Bibye Lake, sub-governor of the African Company, “ in 1711, laid the said grant before the Earl of Oxford in order for a patent ; but the said Earl (thro’ the then hurry of affairs) lost the said grant, though her Majesty [Queen Anne] being well satisfied with the services of Edward Lake, did grant a new one, tho’ with precedency only from the date thereof.”

The descendants of Sir Edward have not been unmindful of the bravery of their ancestor : at the ever memorable siege of Kars, Sir Fenwick Williams was ably assisted by Colonel Henry Atwell Lake (brother of the late baronet) ; and the present baronet, Sir Atwell King Lake, is now serving with his regiment in India.

On the Restoration, Sir Edward obtained a patent from Sir William Dugdale, confirming the armorial augmentations granted by the late King : of this a copy has been appended to his MS.

SIR EDWARD LAKE'S ACCOUNT

OF HIS

AFTER I had made my escape from my imprisonment at Mr. Bent's at Crosby, where I was kept seven weeks after the battle of Edge-Hill, I went to Bangor, in Caernarvonshire, in Christmas, 1642; there I writ to Dr. Steward,* the clerk of the closet at Oxford, certifying in what condition I was, and of the hurts I received at Edge-Hill; and he sent me back an answer, desiring me to send up the certificate thereof, under the surgeon's hand, which afterwards I did, under the hands of Mr. John Angell, the physician, * Dr. Richard Steward was of Magdalen Hall, Oxon. in 1608, and Fellow of All Souls' Coll. in 1613. He had several preferments, and was made Clerk of the Closet about 1634 in the room of Dr. Matthew Wren. While at the university "he was accounted a good poet and orator, and after he had left it a noted divine, eloquent preacher, and a person of a smart fluent style. In the beginning of the Rebellion he suffered much for the King's cause, lost all, and at length retiring to France became a great champion for the Protestant cause at Paris. When he lay upon his death-bed at Paris, in November 1651, King Charles II. gave him two visits, being then newly-arrived there from his escape from Worcester fight, and his concealment in England." For fuller particulars, see Wood's Athenæ Oxon. and Hist. of Northamptonshire by Bridges, vol. i. p. 269.

Clarendon (Life, p. 124, edit. fol.), describes him as "a very honest and learned gentleman, and most conversant in that learning which vindicated the dignity and authority of the Church, upon which his heart was most entirely set."

and Mr. Edward Loffinan, the surgeon, both of Leicester, who were employed upon my cure. The next year, about a fortnight after Michaelmas, I went out of Wales towards Oxford, where I came about the 20th of October, 1643. Dr. Steward wished me not to come into the King's presence till the 23d day of that month, the anniversary day of "Edge-Hill," which he the said King intended to keep solemnly, with public thanksgiving for the victory * on that day—and upon that day, a little before dinner, in the presence chamber at Christ Church, I kissed his Majesty's hand, Dr. Steward being with me, who said to his Majesty, as I was going to kiss his hand, "Sir, this day twelvemonths the doctor was in another case" (Dr. Steward having formerly, as he told me, shewed his Majesty that certificate of my hurts received at the battle of Edge-Hill). His Majesty, looking upon me, said, "It is true you lost a great deal of blood for me that day, and I shall not forget it, but you shall be remembered for it both by way of Armory and otherwise." Then looking upon Dr. Steward, and others standing by, said, "For a lawyer, a professed lawyer, to throw off his gown and fight so heartily for me, I must needs think very well of it." I humbly thanked his Majesty for his gracious acceptance of my poor endeavours to serve him, and praised God for preserving me for further service to his Majesty, to the best of my power and according to my bounden duties. "And Doctor (said the King, bending his head a little towards me) I have reason to believe it," and so went into the privy chamber.

About two months after, his Majesty sent me to Worcester, then garrisoned by Sir Gilbert Gerard, † the King's governor there, to whom his Majesty writ, which letter signified to him the loss of my

* Both sides claimed the victory.

† Sir Gilbert Gerard was the son of Hatcliffe Gerard, Esq. of Hatsall, co. Lancaster, (by Elizabeth daughter and heiress of Sir Charles Somerset, K.B. and grand-daughter of Edward Earl of Worcester), and uncle to Charles Gerard, who for his distinguished services to Charles I. was created Baron Gerard on the 8th of Nov. 1645, and after the restoration Earl of Macclesfield.

estate in England and Ireland by the Rebellion, and sixteen wounds which I received at the battle of Edge-Hill. With this letter, about the beginning of Christmas, I went down to Worcester, and taking my leave of Dr. Steward, he (whether his Majesty had when he signed that letter, or at any other time, spoken to him thereof, I know not, but most probably he had,) asked me whether I had drawn up that note, touching an addition in Armory, which the King said he would give me when I kissed hands on the anniversary day of Edge-Hill. I told him I had done nothing therein. He bade me advise with some Herald thereupon, and draw up a note to that purpose for the King to sign, and to leave it with him. I did thereupon advise with Sir William Le Neve, but did not acquaint him with the King's word touching Armorie, and, after I had talked with him, I drew up such a note for his Majesty's signature, mentioning only that Coat of Augmentation (without any mention of one of the Lions of England) and the Crest. This note I left with Dr. Steward; and the next summer, his Majesty coming to Worcester, and Dr. Steward with him, the Doctor gave me this Docquet, signed by his Majesty, and attested by the Doctor, touching the baronetship and arms.

Signed, "CHARLES REX."

"Whereas our trusty and well-beloved Edward Lake, Dr. of Laws and Advocate General for our Kingdome of Ireland, in all causes Ecclesiastical, Civil, and Maritime, hath done us faithful and good service, both in Ireland, whence he was expelled by the rebels there, with the loss of his estate and employment, and also in England, more especially at the battle of Edge-Hill, receiving sixteen wounds, to the extreme danger of his life, ever since being deprived of his estate here, we cannot but look upon him as a subject well deserving of us. We intend to repair in his estate and otherwise to reward him, and in the mean time we do hereby create him Baronet, and do give him the making of a baronet, not doubting that he will recommend any person for that dignity but such a one who for his condition and quality shall be fit for the same, and for his further encouragement, and as a mark of our especial favour towards him; Whereas in that battle of Edge-Hill "he received sixteen wounds, and his left arm being by a shot wounded he was disabled, he held his bridle in his teeth, fighting with his right hand:" Therefore we do hereby give him for a Coat of Augmentation. to be borne before his own: In a field gules, a right arm arm'd, carrying upon a sword a banner argent, charged with a cross betwixt sixteen shields, four in each quarter of the first, and in the umbelique point one of our own lions of England. And for a Crest to the same Coat of Augmentation: A chevalier in a fighting posture, his left arm hanging down useless, and holding a bridle in his teeth, his scarf red, his sword, face, armes, and horse, cruentated. To have and to hold the said dignity of a Baronet to the said Edward Lake, and the heirs male of his body begotten, or to be begotten, for ever, and for want of such heirs male then to the heirs male of the same Edward for ever, and to have and to hold the same Coat of Augmentation, with the Crest aforesaid, to him the said Edward and his heirs, and all descending from him and them for ever. All this to be put in form into his Patent.

"To all the officers and ministers whomsoever whom under these presents shall any ways concern."

Of the addition of one of the lions of England in the coat of augmentation (in which the eight points, four in each quarter, are memorial of the sixteen wounds he received, the lion of England being placed in the centre of the standard in the additional crest), and besides to have the nomination of a baronet and to be a baronet myself, being altogether beyond my expectation, I asked the doctor the reason thereof. He told me that presently on my going to Worcester from Oxford he shewed his Majesty that note for the coat of augmentation which I left with him. His Majesty read it and said, "I deserved more and should have more. I should have one of his own lions too, and I should have the making of a baronet, and that I should be a baronet myself." And his Majesty himself, with his own hand, interlined some words touching the bearing of that lion, and for the nomination of a baronet, and the creation of me to be a baronet, and bad the doctor bring it to him written more at large; whereupon the doctor, within a day or two after, brought it written as it is here to his Majesty, which he signed, and said to him, "Doctor, you shall be secretary for this business; set your hand to it and witness my signature, and tell Dr. Lake that he may keep this awhile by him, and not take out the patent till I shall better provide for him." And the same day at Worcester as before when Dr. Steward had told me this, which was at the lord bishop's palace at Worcester, I went with him into the presence, and there kissed his Majesty's hand, who said to me thus, "The doctor there (looking at Dr. Steward), I suppose, has told you my mind." I said, "Yes, sir;" and most humbly I thanked his Majesty for his exceeding favours to me. Then his Majesty, being, as it seemed, in haste upon business, went out of the presence, and, as he was going, looked back towards me and beckoned to me, and I made my address to him, who said thus to me, "Doctor, if you will you may keep that awhile by you (meaning the aforesaid docquet), and not take out the patent till I shall better provide for you, which I hope I shall doe ere long;" and so he went away, and I kept this by me as thou seest.

THE LETTERS
POPE TO ATTERBURY
WHEN IN THE TOWER OF LONDON.

---

EDITED BY
JOHN GOUGH NICHOLS, F.S.A.

PRINTED FOR THE CAMDEN SOCIETY.
M.DCCC.LIX.

THE first and second Letters of Pope, which are here printed (pp. 7 and 14) are copied on a sheet of paper in the collection of George Wentworth, esq. of Woolley Park, Yorkshire, by whom they were kindly communicated, at the suggestion of Dr. Sykes of Doncaster. That transcript is evidently contemporary. Correspondent copies of the same letters have since been found in Cole's MSS. at the British Museum, MS. Addit. 5822, fol. 105. They were derived by Mr. Cole from the papers of the Rev. Dr. Williams of St. John's college, Cambridge: and Cole has appended the following note: "It may be those Letters might have been communicated by the Bishop of Rochester to Dean Moss, with whom he was in a particular degree of friendship and correspondence at this time, as is evident from some letters in vol. 30 [of Cole's MSS.] p. 150; who might communicate them to Dr. Grey or Dr. Williams."

ATTERBURY IN THE TOWER OF LONDON.

How pleasing Atterbury's softer hour !
How shin'd the soul, unconquered in the Tower !—POPE.

---

FRANCIS ATTERBURY, Bishop of Rochester, was a man whose brilliant talents, and ready application of them, stood him in the stead of profound learning and of political integrity, for both of which he acquired an unmerited reputation. This, as was natural, was especially the case with those who were his intimate and partial friends, and whose own sentiments and sympathies had a similar bias in matters of politics and religion. Even towards such associates he behaved with so much art and duplicity,<sup>a</sup> that they had no suspicion of the traitorous correspondence in which he had engaged, and appear to have really deemed him guiltless upon the charges which led to his exile.

Among the most ardent and devoted of Atterbury's admirers was the poet Pope, who, in a letter<sup>b</sup> to Gay, dated on the 11th Sept. 1722, writes:

“ Pray tell Dr. Arbuthnot that even pigeon-pyes and hog's-

<sup>a</sup> If any reader should still think this term too harsh, let him say how otherwise the following passage can be characterised: “ To be quiet, and live to myself, with the few, the very few, friends I like, is the point, the single point, I now aim at; though I know the generality of the world, who are unacquainted with my intentions and views, think the very reverse of this character belongs to me.” Letter to Pope, April 6, 1722, written by Atterbury just one week before his letter or message to the Earl of Mar, in which we intimated the resumption of correspondence with “ Mr. Hacket ” (i. e. the Earl of Oxford,) as a step of no small consequence to the Pretender's service. See The Stuart Papers, 1847, i. 65.

<sup>b</sup> There are two letters of Pope to Gay which bear the date of the 11th Sept. 1722. That which is printed in the edition of 1737, as Letter CLIII. at p. 248, commencing, puddings are thought dangerous by our governours; for those that have been sent to the Bishop of Rochester are open'd and prophanely pry'd into at the Tower. 'Tis the first time that dead pigeons have been suspected of carrying intelligence. To be serious,—you, and Mr. Congreve, (nay, and the Doctor if he has not dined,) will be sensible of my concern and surprize at the commitment of that Gentleman, whose welfare is as much my concern as any friend's I have. I think my self a most unfortunate wretch. I no sooner love, and, upon knowledge, fix my esteem to any man, but he either dies like Mr. Craggs,<sup>a</sup> or is sent to imprisonment like the Bishop. God send him as well as I wish him, manifest him to be as innocent as I believe him, and make all his enemies know him as well as I do, that they may love him and think of him as well! If you apprehend this period to be of any danger in being address'd to you, tell Mr. Congreve or the Doctor it is writ to them."

And in another letter, written to Swift, on the 12th Jan. 1723-4:

"It is sure my ill fate that all those I most loved, and with whom I most lived, must be banished. After both of you [that is, Swift and Bolingbroke] left England, my constant Host was the Bishop of Rochester."

In one of Pope's Letters to a Lady, dated the 2d of June 1723, he writes, "I am at present in the afflicting circumstance of taking my last leave of one of the truest friends I ever had, and one of the greatest men in all polite learning, as well as the most

"I think it obliging," had been originally published in the 8vo. of 1735, (vol. i. p. 201,) without a date. The other, which is that here quoted, commencing, "I thank you," is the one really written on the 11th Sept. 1722, which date it bears in the 8vo. It has there some passages relative to the Duchess "of M.," and "ladies in and about Richmond," the Mrs. Blounts, Mrs. Pulteney, and Dr. Arbuthnot, which are not preserved in the edition of 1737, and have never been restored since. Among the other alterations, in the passages above quoted the expression "the Doctor if he has not dined," and the words "they may love him and think of him as well," are suppressed.

agreeable companion, this nation ever had. . . . So that indeed I want comfort."

Again, in one of his letters to Edward Blount, esquire, dated on the 27th June, 1723, Pope wrote as follows:

"Life's vain Amusements, amidst which we dwell,
Not weigh'd or understood by the grim God of Hell !

said a heathen poet, as he is translated by a Christian Bishop, who has, first by his exhortations, and since by his example, taught me to think as becomes a reasonable creature.<sup>a</sup> But he is gone! He carry'd away more learning than is left in this nation behind him: but he left us more in the noble example of bearing calamity well. 'Tis true we want literature very much; but pray God we don't want patience more if these precedents are to prevail."<sup>b</sup>

Atterbury was arrested on the 24th of August, 1722, at his deanery of Westminster; examined before the privy council, and committed to the Tower. On the 11th of March following, a Resolution passed the House of Commons,

"That Francis, Lord Bishop of Rochester, was principally concerned in forming, directing, and carrying on a wicked and detestable conspiracy for invading these kingdoms with a foreign force, and for raising insurrections and a rebellion at home, in order to subvert the present happy establishment in Church and State, by placing a popish Pretender upon the Throne."

This Resolution was followed by a Bill of Pains and Penalties, which, on the 9th of April, 1723, was sent to the House of Lords for their concurrence. On the following day the Bishop addressed the following letter <sup>a</sup> to his friend Pope:

<sup>a</sup> "Atterbury," says Dr. Johnson, "had honestly recommended to him the study of the Popish controversy, in hope of his conversion; to which Pope answered in a manner that cannot much recommend his principles, or his judgment. [See his Letter to Atterbury, dated Nov. 20, 1717.] In questions and projects of learning they agreed much better. . . . . At their last interview at the Tower, Atterbury presented him with a Bible." (See hereafter, p. 16.)

<sup>b</sup> The four last lines were not printed with the letter when Pope first gave it to the world, in 1737.

“ DEAR SIR,

The Tower, April 10, 1723.

“ I thank you for all the instances of your friendship, both before and since my misfortunes. A little time will compleat them, and separate you and me for ever. But in what part of the world soever I am, I will live mindful of your sincere kindness to me, and will please myself with the thought that I still live in your esteem and affection as much as ever I did, and that no accidents of life, no distance of time or place, will alter you in that respect. It never can me; who have lov'd and valu'd you ever since I knew you, and shall not fail to do it when I am not allow'd to tell you so,—as the case will soon be. Give my faithful services to Dr. Arbuthnot, and thanks for what he sent me; which was much to the purpose, if anything can be said to be to the purpose in a case that is already determin'd. Let him know my Defence will be such, that neither my friends need blush for me, nor will my enemies have great occasion for Triumph, tho' sure of the Victory. I shall want his advice before I go abroad, in many things. But I question whether I shall be permitted to see him, or any body, but such as are absolutely necessary towards the dispatch of my private affairs.<sup>b</sup> If so, God bless you both! and may no part of the ill fortune that attends me ever pursue either of you! I know not but I may call upon you at my hearing, to say something about my way of spending my time at the Deanery, which did not seem calculated towards managing Plots and conspiracies. But of that I shall consider.—You and I have spent many hours together upon much pleasanter subjects; and, that I may preserve the old custom, I shall not part with you now till I have clos'd this letter with three lines of Milton, which you will (I know) readily and not without some degree of concern apply to,—Your ever affectionate, &c.

<sup>b</sup> The Bishop's confinement was extremely rigorous. “Even his son-in-law Mr. Morice was not permitted to speak to him in any nearer mode than standing in an area, whilst the Bishop looked out of a two pair of stairs window.” Advertisement to Atterbury's Correspondence, 1783.

*“Some natural tears he dropt, but wip'd them soon :
The world was all before him, where to choose
His place of rest, and PROVIDENCE HIS GUIDE.”*

It was in answer to this letter that Pope composed the following very studied Epistle, which is now printed from the transcripts already mentioned in the introductory Advertisement. When published by its writer (some fourteen years after), its elaborate diction was still further polished, as if it had been a favourite poem.<sup>a</sup>

“ MY LORD,—It is not possible to express w<sup>t</sup> I think and w<sup>t</sup> I feel, only this, that I have thought and felt for nothing but YOU for some time past, and shall think of nothing so long for the time to come. The greatest comfort I had, was an intention (w<sup>ch</sup> I wou'd have made practicable) to have attended You in Your JOURNEY, to w<sup>ch</sup> I had brought the person <sup>b</sup> to consent, who only cou'd have hindred me, by a tye, which, tho' it may be more tender, I do not think can be more strong than that of FRIENDSHIP: but now I find “ April 20, 1723.

“ It is not possible to express what I think, and what I feel ; only this, that I have thought and felt for nothing but you, for some time past: and shall think of nothing so long for the time to come. The greatest comfort I had was an intention (which I would have made practicable) to have attended you in your journey, to which I had brought that person to consent, who only could have hindered me, by a tye which, tho' it may be more tender, I do not think more strong, than that of friendship. But I fear there will be no way left me to tell that malice, w<sup>ch</sup> cou'd no more be foreseen than one cou'd think it cou'd be contriv'd by any human Creature, has render'd every friendly way, every grateful thought towards you impracticable: I fear there will be no way left me to tell You this great truth, that I remember You, that I love You, that I entirely esteem and value You, but one, w<sup>ch</sup> I will find, even tho' it were death to correspond with you; a way w<sup>ch</sup> no bills can preclude, a way w<sup>ch</sup> may reach to any part of the world where you may be, when the very whisper or even wish of a Friend must not be heard, or even suspected: By this I dare tell my Esteem and Affection for you to the enemies in the Gates, and their sons shall hear it.

“ You prove yourself, My Lord, to know me for the zealous Friend I am, in judging that your manner of Defence, and Glory in it, is a point of the highest Concern to me, & assuring y<sup>t</sup> it will be, it shall be such, that none of Your friends shall blush for you. Let me farther prompt You, to do Your self the best, the lasting JUSTICE; the establishing your fame to POSTERITY will be in your own hands: May it not be that Providence has appointed You to some great and usefull work, and calls You to it this severe way? you this great truth, that I remember you, that I love you, that I am grateful to you, that I entirely esteem and value you: no way but that one, which needs no open warrant to authorize it, or secret conveyance to secure it; which no bills can preclude, and no Kings prevent; a way that can reach to any part of the world where you may be, where the very whisper, or even the wish of a friend must not be heard or even suspected. By this way I dare tell my esteem and affection of you to your enemies in the gates; and you, and they, and their sons may hear of it.

“ I am, my Lord, &c.”

The House of Commons went into a grand committee upon the Bill “For inflicting certain pains and penalties upon Francis lord bishop of Rochester,” upon the 6th of April, 1723; and when it came to the filling up the blank for pains and penalties it was moved by its promoters that the bishop should be deprived of his office and benefice, be banished the Kingdom, be guilty of Felony if he returned, and that it should not be in the King’s power to pardon him without consent of Parliament. After some debate, the question was carried without a division; and three days after the Bill was passed, and sent up to the House of Lords.

The Bishop, who had declined to enter upon his defence before the Commons, was on the 6th of May brought before his peers, attended by his counsel, Sir Constantine Phipps and Mr. Sergeant Wynne; and he was again brought to the bar on the five following days. It was on the 10th of May that his friend Pope appeared as one of the witnesses in his favour, with the object mentioned in the preceding letters. The report of the trial does not detail the poet’s evidence. His appearance is briefly noticed as follows: “The Bishop mentioned certain avocations which took up his time, and offered to bring proof thereof, if the House should think proper. But the same not being thought material, his Lordship called Mr. Pope, to give an account how he employed his time, and where he used constantly to find his Lordship when he visited him; and, in regard of the great intimacy there was between them, Whether he suspected the Bishop was engaged in such matters as were laid to his charge? And he was examined upon oath." At this tantalising point with respect to Pope's testimony, the reporter says no more;<sup>a</sup> but the poet's own account of the incident is thus related by his friend Spence:

"I never could speak in public, and I do'nt believe that, if it was a set thing, I could give an account of any story to twelve friends together, though I could tell it to any three of them with a great deal of pleasure. When I was to appear for the Bishop of Rochester, in his trial, though I had but ten words to say, and that on a plain point,—how that Bishop spent his time whilst I was with him at Bromley, I made two or three blunders in it, and that notwithstanding the first row of Lords, which was all I could see, were mostly of my acquaintance."<sup>b</sup>

The substance, however, of what Pope actually said is given by the Bishop's counsel, serjeant Wynne, in the following terms: "We have likewise shewn your lordships by Mr. Pope, who has been for these two or three last years the most constant companion of his Lordship's hours,—two or three days, he says, almost in every week, and an hour or two almost in every of those days,—that his Lordship generally sat in one room, which I think was his bedchamber; that he was admitted to him at all hours, and into all companies, and never found the discourse change at his coming in; that his Lordship never in the least discovered any thoughts or intentions like those now charged upon him; but [that he] had heard occasionally many things drop from the Bishop of a tendency directly contrary."<sup>c</sup>

Upon this statement Mr. Reeve, one of the counsel for the Bill, made the following remarks in reply:

"My Lords, another evidence is Mr. Pope, a gentleman of learning, with whom my Lord Bishop of Rochester used to converse; and he gives you an account that he knew nothing of this conspiracy, that the Bishop never opened his mouth to him about it, nor acquainted him with it, that he was frequently with him, and their discourse was only about matters of literature. No doubt my Lord Bishop hath conversed with persons on different subjects, to whom he would communicate nothing of an affair of this nature."

On the 11th of May, the Bishop himself, his counsel having been previously heard, delivered a long and able speech <sup>a</sup> in his own defence; after which he was remanded to the Tower. The Bill, depriving him of his ecclesiastical dignities, and sentencing him to perpetual banishment, passed the Lords on the 16th of May, by a majority of 83 to 43, and received the royal assent on the 27th of <sup>a</sup> Pope remarked to Spence, "The Bishop of Rochester's speech, as it is printed, could not be as he spoke it. I was there all the while. Both the Bishop and myself minded the time, when he began, and when he left off. He was two hours in speaking it, and as it is printed you can't well be above an hour reading it.—' Was there not an Act of Parliament read in the midst of it?'—No, I don't remember that there was: but he was indulged to sit down for two or three minutes to rest himself a little between the speaking." The speech was printed from a short-hand copy made for the use of Mr. Wearg, one of the King's counsel, soon after made solicitor-general for his exertions on this occasion. (Note in Spence's Anecdotes, p. 157.) With that edition the speech as printed in the State Trials corresponds: but among the Bishop's papers were found two MS. copies so far different, that Mr. Nichols printed both of them in his Atterbury Correspondence, one in vol. iv. p. 383 (edit. 1783), and the other in vol. v. p. 365, the latter being in the Bishop's own handwriting, and supposed to contain his latest corrections.

The following advertisement, dated June 22, 1723, is from The True Briton of that time, and was inserted by Jonah Bowyer, who was the publisher of Atterbury's Sermons: "Whereas there is this Day published, A Pamphlet, Intituled, The Speech (&c.). Printed for A. Moore, near S. Paul's, This is to give Notice, that the same is surreptitiously printed, without the Knowledge or Consent of the Bishop, or any of his Friends; and besides that it is spurious, it is very imperfect: several intire Paragraphs heing omitted, and many others vilely mangled; as any Person that heard his Lordship speak, will readily observe. But the Puhlick may, in due Time, expect an Authentick and Correct Copy of his Lordship's Speech, and of the Proceedings against him." Notwithstanding the estimation in which this Defence has been generally held for eloquence and pathos, it disappointed Mr. Hallam, who remarked, "Atterbury's own speech is certainly helow his fame, especially his peroration." (Constitutional History of England, iii. 337.)

the same month. On the 18th of June he was carried in a chair from his apartment in the Tower to the barge which conveyed him to the ship appointed to transport him to the continent.

Pope was an auditor of the Bishop's Defence, and the second Letter, which will now be placed before the reader, was evidently written immediately after. It is entitled in the MS. Mr. Pope's Letter after the Bill pass'd; which was on the 16th of May. It was suppressed by its writer when he published the first and third Letters of this series in the quarto volume which first made his letters public with his own avowed sanction, in the year 1737. It has not been ascertained that any of these letters had been published before that time; but the second—that now placed before the reader—appeared in the second volume of Atterbury's Correspondence, collected by Mr. Nichols in the year 1783, (p. 271,) but from what source derived is not there stated:<sup>a</sup>

It would seem that, when this letter was written, Pope did not expect to see his friend again; but, immediately before the Bishop's departure,<sup>b</sup> he was permitted to take a personal farewell. Of this

<sup>b</sup> Pope's inscription in the Bible, presently inserted, gives the date of the 17th of June: on the 18th the Bishop departed. It appears from Bishop Newton that Atterbury's friends had free access to take leave of him. He says that “After the Westminster election in 1723 was over, some of the King's scholars [of whom Newton was then Captain] thought it a proper piece of respect to wait on their late Dean in the Tower, as every body had then free admittance to see and take leave of him: and, among other things interview some particulars—the perfect accuracy of which has been justly doubted.—have been preserved from the relation of Lord Chesterfield. “I went (said his Lordship) to Mr. Pope one morning at Twickenham, and found a large folio Bible, with gilt clasps, lying before him upon his table; and, as I knew his way of thinking upon that book, I asked him, jocosely, if he was going to write an Answer to it? ‘It is a present, (said he,) or rather a legacy, from my old friend the Bishop of Rochester. I went to take my leave of him yesterday in the Tower, where I saw this Bible upon his table. After the first compliments, the Bishop said to me, ‘My friend Pope, considering your infirmities, and my age and exile, it is not likely that we should ever meet again; and therefore I give you this legacy<sup>a</sup> to remember me by it.’”—(Maty’s Memoirs of the Earl of Chesterfield, prefixed to the Miscellaneous Works of that nobleman, 4to. 1777, vol. i. p. 279. The continuation of the passage need not be extracted, the subject of Chesterfield’s insinuation of infidelity against Atterbury having been sufficiently discussed.<sup>b</sup>) which he said to them, he applied to himself those lines of Milton, as he did likewise [see before, p. 7,] in a letter to Mr. Pope—

The world is all before me where to choose
My place of rest, and Providence my guide.”

(Life and Anecdotes of Thomas Newton, D.D. Bishop of Bristol, written by himself, and prefixed to his Works, 4to. 1782, vol. i. p. 14.)

<sup>a</sup> “At parting, he presented Pope with a Bible, and said, with a disingenuousness of which no man who had studied the Bible to much purpose would have been guilty, ‘If ever you hear that I have any dealings with the Pretender, I give you leave to say that my punishment is just.’ Pope at this time really believed the Bishop to be an injured man. Arbuthnot seems to have been of the same opinion.”—(Memoirs of Atterbury, written by Lord Macaulay, in the Encyclopedia Britannica.) The statement here made rests on the authority of Bishop Newton, whose words are: “When he took his last leave of Mr. Pope, he told him he would allow him to say his sentence was just if he ever found he had any concerns with the Pretender’s family in his exile. But, notwithstanding this, as Bishop Warburton informs us (see Pope’s Letters,) Mr. Pope was convinced before the Bishop’s death that during his banishment he was in the intrigues of the Pretender.” (Newton’s Life and Anecdotes, p. 14.)

<sup>b</sup> Particularly in a long letter from the Rev. Samuel Badcock to Mr. Nichols, printed in Atterbury’s Correspondence, vol. i. p. 79; second edition, vol. ii. p. 271; and

The Bible, which formed this memorable present, is now in the possession of Lord Viscount Hawarden,<sup>a</sup> at Dundrum Castle, near Cashel, in Ireland. It is one of the edition printed at the University of Cambridge in 1674. It has, on a fly-leaf, the following inscription in the handwriting of Pope, of which Lord Hawarden has favoured me with an accurate copy.

Franeiseus Episeopus Roffensis,

The above lines were the whole of the original inscription. After Atterbury's death was added,

And seven years later the volume was presented by Pope to his friend Ralph Allen, of Prior Park, with this insertion:—

A third Letter is extant, written by Pope to Atterbury at this in the Works of Pope, edit. Warton, viii. 129, edit. Bowles, viii. 154, edit. Roscoe, vol. ix. p. 238. See also the last Life of Pope, by Mr. Robert Carruthers, (second edit. 1857, p. 213,) where it is remarked, "An anecdote has been related, on the alleged authority of Pope, tending to prove that Atterbury himself was nearly all his life a sceptic. This is incredible. He was aspiring, turbulent, and faithless as a politician, and not without dissimulation and hypocrisy in private life; but his whole career, his published writings, and correspondence, are opposed to the idea that he disbelieved the faith he preached and professed."

period. This is not in the Woolley manuscript, but was published by its writer in 1737, at which time he gave it the date of the 2d of May. His editors<sup>a</sup> have dated it on the 17th of that month; and Mr. Roscoe has ascribed the letter last inserted to June.<sup>b</sup> It now seems more probable that the second letter<sup>b</sup> was written in May, when Pope was freshly impressed with Atterbury's Defence, during the delivery of which he had been present;<sup>c</sup> and that this letter, beginning "Once more," was written very shortly before the Bishop's departure, in the month of June. Like the first, it may be suspected of having received sundry touches and heightenings of expression, when, fourteen years after, and subsequently to Atterbury's death, its writer sent it to the press.

"May 2, [or June ?] 1723.

If you retain any memory of the past, let it only image to you what has pleas'd you best; sometimes present a dream of an absent friend, or bring you back an agreeable conversation. But, upon the whole, I hope you will think less of the time past than of the future; as the former has been less kind to you than the latter infallibly will be. can have no complaint, I mean of all Posterity: and perhaps at your time of life, nothing else is worth your care. What is every year of a wise man's life but a censure or critique on the past? Those whose date is the shortest, live long enough to laugh at one half of it: the boy despises the infant, the man the boy, the philosopher both, and the Christian all. You may now begin to think your Manhood was too much a puerility; and you'll never suffer your Age to be but a second infancy. The toys and baubles of your childhood are hardly now more below you, than those toys of our riper and of our declining years, the drums and rattles of Ambition, and the dirt and bubbles of Avarice.

“At this time, when you are cut off from a little society, and made a citizen of the world at large, you should bend your talents not to serve a Party, or a few, but all Mankind. Your Genius should mount above that mist in which its participation and neighbourhood with earth long involved it. To shine abroad and to heaven, ought to be the business and the glory of your present situation. Remember it was at such a time that the greatest Lights of antiquity dazed and blazed the most, in their retreat, in their exile, or in their death. But why do I talk of dazling or blazing? it was then that they did good, that they gave light, and that they became Guides to mankind.

“Those aims alone are worthy of spirits truly great, and such I therefore hope will be yours. Resentment indeed may remain, perhaps cannot be quite extinguished in the noblest minds; but revenge never will harbour there. Higher principles than those of the first, and better principles than those of the latter, will infallibly influence men, whose thoughts and whose hearts are enlarged, and cause them to prefer the Whole to any part of mankind, especially to so small a part as one's single self.

“Believe me, my Lord, I look upon you as a Spirit enter'd into genius and learning, of which he was very capable. He wrote only two or three little pieces, his Essay on the Character of Iapis in Virgil; his Vindication of Dr. Aldrich, Dr. Smalridge, and himself from the charge of interpolating Lord Clarendon's History; and little or nothing besides, but a few criticisms on some French authors.”

another life, as one just upon the edge of Immortality; where the Passions and Affections must be much more exalted, and where you ought to despise all little Views, and all mean Retrospects. Nothing is worth your looking back; and therefore look forward, and make (as you can) the World look after you. But take care that it be not with Pity, but with Esteem and Admiration.

The continuance of Atterbury's affectionate regard towards Pope is strongly testified by a letter which he wrote from Montpelier, on the 20th Nov. 1729, soon after the death of his daughter, Mrs. Morice: “Yes, dear Sir, I have had all you designed for me; and have read all (as I read whatever you write) with esteem and pleasure. But your last letter,<sup>a</sup> full of friendship and goodness, gave me such impressions of concern and tenderness as neither I can express, nor you, perhaps, with all the force of your imagination, fully conceive.

“I am not master,” &c. (See Atterbury's Epistolary Correspondence, i. 145.)

Pope was remembered by Atterbury in the last memoranda for his will,<sup>b</sup> written in the same year, in the following terms: “I give to Mr. Pope any book he shall think fit to choose out of my small collection, to be preserved by him in memory of me.”

<sup>b</sup> Nichols's Atterbury Correspondence, vol. i. p. xii. Pope had formerly presented to the Bishop an edition of Homer, printed at Paris in 1554; and the Bishop's inscription in it is printed ibid. iii. 518.

NOTE.

The collection of Epistolary Correspondence and other miscellanies by Bishop Atterbury, edited by my grandfather Mr. John Nichols, was published at various periods, as the materials came to hand,—Volumes i. and ii. in 1783, Vol. iii. in 1784, Vol. iv. in 1787, and Vol. v. in 1798. The last volume (though often found in company with the preceding,) contains an Index which applies to the Second Edition, of which Vols. i. and ii. are dated 1789, and Vols. iii. and iv. 1790. These volumes were reprinted in the years they bear, but were not actually published until June 13, 1799, which is the date of the Advertisement prefixed to the first volume of this Second Edition. The fifth volume contains a Memoir of the Bishop, in which the scattered contents of the whole collection are reviewed in their chronological arrangement.

The originals of Atterbury's Letters edited by Mr. Nichols are now for the most part deposited in the British Museum. Those which were the origin and foundation of his work, namely the series relating to the last illness and death of the Bishop's daughter Mrs. Morice, had been purchased by Mr. Nichols at the sale of the library of Topham Beauclerk, Esq. in the year 1781. Mr. Nichols presented them to the national collection in the year 1786, and they are preserved, together with fourteen letters presented by Nathaniel Chauncy, Esq., in the Additional MSS. 5143, 5144. Atterbury's Letters to Bishop Trelawney, 140 in number, are in the MS. Addit. 5951: they came from the writer's grandson Francis Atterbury, D.D. Precentor of Cloyne and Rector of Clonmell, to Mr. Nichols, who presented them to the British Museum in 1806. Seven more letters of Atterbury (with one of Bishop Potter) were presented by the Rev. William Morice in 1815: they were at first placed in the MS. Addit. 6408, but were removed in 1849 to the volume 5144. The whole of these had been published by Mr. Nichols in the Atterbury Correspondence.

Another collection of thirty-nine Letters of Bishop Atterbury to his daughter Mrs. Morice and her husband, together with many others of the bishop's manuscripts, which were preserved by his grandson the Rev. Henry Morice, M.A. Vicar of Ashwell, Herts, are now for sale in the hands of Messrs. Sotheran and Willis.

Among Colc's transcripts of the Correspondence of the Rev. John Strype the Ecclesiastical Historian, there are seven notes of Atterbury that have not been printed. (MS. Addit. 5853.)

It is, however, the Royal Library at Windsor Castle that contains those letters of Atterbury, the appearance of which at length placed beyond further dispute the actual course of his political intrigues. In the year 1847 the publication of "The Stuart Papers," preserved by the exiled royal family, and now in the possession of Her Majesty, was commenced with a volume of Letters of Bishop Atterbury, edited by John Hulbert Glover, Esq. F.S.A., Her Majesty's Librarian, who has two further volumes of Atterbury's Correspondence nearly ready for the press.

SUPPLEMENTARY NOTE
TO
THE DISCOVERY OF THE
JESUITS' COLLEGE AT CLERKENWELL
IN MARCH 1627-8:

PRINTED IN THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE

---

BY
JOHN GOUGH NICHOLS, F.S.A.

PRINTED FOR THE CAMDEN SOCIETY.
M.DCCC.LIX.

MY friend Mr. Bruce, who is engaged in examining and calendaring the documents of the Reign of Charles the First preserved in Her Majesty's State Paper Office, has had the kindness to point out to me some particulars with regard to the Papers seized in the Jesuits' College at Clerkenwell, which appear to be sufficiently important to be communicated to the Camden Society in the form of a Supplement to my former publication on that subject.

It has been ascertained, by comparison with other papers written by Sir John Coke,<sup>a</sup> then secretary of state, that the Narrative was drawn up by him, and not by Sir Robert Heath, the attorney-general. The original of the Narrative preserved in the State Paper Office is in Sir John Coke's own handwriting. The papers seized at the Jesuits' College are also indorsed by him, and by his hand they were marked with the letters of the alphabet, A to Z, by which he refers to them in his Narrative.

The papers marked N. P. and Q. have been recovered since I examined the series in the year 1852. Those which were marked B. C. L. and O. are still missing.

The papers N. and P. are now printed.

Those marked Q. are two copies of a long letter, in English, addressed to a person in a state of uncertainty respecting the oath of allegiance, arguing at length the impropriety of its being taken by Roman Catholics. This letter has neither signature, date, nor address.

<sup>a</sup> I before printed this name Cooke: in which way it was commonly written, and no doubt usually pronounced, by the Secretary's contemporaries. But it appears by his own signature that, like the great Chief Justice, (to whom he was not nearly if at all related,) he wrote his name Coke.

It should also be noticed that the copy in the State Paper Office of "A Letter founde amongst some Jesuits" (pp. 33—40) is the very same which came from the study of archbishop Laud (p. 12.), and from which Prynne printed. It bears the following indorsement:

3 / x

 insuinge Parliament } writing.

Arminianisme.—In Prynne's handwriting.

This word probably refers to the passage of the Jesuit's Letter which will be found in The Discovery, &c. p. 38, commencing, "Butt to returne to the maine fabrique of our foundation, which is Arminianisme."

It thus appears that the omissions made by Prynne when he printed this document—or libel, as it may more correctly be designated—were wilful omissions, and that the words "Leave out this where the lines are drawn." (note, p. 34) came from his hand.

On the authorship of the "Jesuit's Letter" some important evidence will be found hereafter, in p. 10.

P. Henricus Belfildus
P. Thomas Abercrombæus

The Suffolk mission mentioned at the close of this list is the more remarkable, as Suffolk is not one of the counties into which the operations of the Jesuits are stated to have extended, in the account of their colleges, extracted in The Discovery, &c. p. 47, from the Rev. Dr. Oliver's "Collections towards illustrating the Biography of the Scotch, English, and Irish members of the Society of Jesus."

This Poulton, alias Underhil, is sonne to Poulton that abridged the Statutes.<sup>b</sup> This is released out of the new prison, by warrant from the boord, upon bond of 500<sup>li</sup>, with suerties to be forthcoming.<sup>c</sup>

Edmond Weeden, alias Ploiden, a preist, as may appeare by proofs. Crosse.<sup>d</sup>

Frances Plowden writeth to Tho. Acton, and calleth him brother; so Acton seemeth to bee Weeden alias Plowden.

All the parts of the above which are in Italic are in the handwriting of Sir John Coke. It is indorsed also by Sir John Coke, The names of the persons taken at Clerkenwell.

<sup>b</sup> "Fardinando Pulton of Lincolnes Inn, Esquire," as he is styled in the title-pages of his books. He was a learned barrister, and appears to have been encouraged and assisted by Sir William Cordell, Master of the Rolls. His first work, An Abstract of all the Penal Statutes, was published as early as 1560; and he continued his labours in the same path, to an advanced period of life. For greater facilities in their accomplishment he took a lodging near the Record Office in the Tower, and applied to the Council for an order that the Keeper of the Records might be allowed to deliver to him the Parliament Rolls, one by one, to be used by him at his lodging. He was then (perhaps about 1611) "almost fourscore." See Introduction to the Authentic Edition of the Statutes, vol. i. pp. xxiii. xxvii. liii.; and see a list of the titles and various editions of the works of this laborious man in Watt's Bibliotheca Britannica, voce Pulton.

The following is the commencement of a letter in the State Paper Office, undated, but written in 1628, addressed by Sir John Maynard, K.B., who was then M.P. for Calne,<sup>a</sup>

“ To the D. of Buckingham his Grace.

“ My Lord, I was astonished and amased when my brother told mee your Grace was not only ielius (jealous) of mee, but that yow did beeeve I had bin malitius and trecherous agaynst yow. I know the Jesuites letter was the ground of your ielousy; but, had your Grace leysure to perruse it, if yow doe but consider the circumstance of time (when secritary Cooke spake of letters that he had intercepted of the Jesuites, and what wispering and caballing there was among Parliment men that sunthing contayned in those letters concerned the Duke, otherwise they had been published too humor the house,) certainly could yow have sene (how, like a whirlwind) they chopped aboute and shifted there opinions, yow would have smiled and not frowned at it.”

Sir John Maynard afterwards proceeds to speak of other matters, which might have given the Duke offence, as “ what I spoke of Dolbier,”<sup>b</sup> &c., and asks him, “ Did you not in my Lord Craven's and the City busines promis yow would never be jelius of mee: did yow not likewise, beefore the Parliment, give me commission too converse with your enimies and wright what I pleased? I confes I published A discourse too show yow were noe Arminian, too the which I annexed certayne resons why the Parliment should not medle with yow.”

From these passages it appears not improbable that the author of the Jesuit's Letter was Sir John Maynard.

<sup>a</sup> Sir John Maynard, second son of Sir Henry Maynard sometime secretary to Lord Burghley, and brother to William first Lord Maynard. He was seated at Walthamstow in Essex, was made a Knight of the Bath at the coronation of Charles the First, and married a daughter of Sir Thomas Middleton an alderman of London.

<sup>b</sup> Colonel John Dalbier, a native of the Low Countries employed in the service of England, particularly at the Isle of Rhé. He was at this time engaged in enlisting foreigners to be employed in England, a matter which excited the jealousy of parliament. He was subsequently remarkable as the military instructor of Oliver Cromwell: and finally met his death with Lord Francis Villiers at Kingston.

REPORT OF THE COUNCIL
OF
THE CAMDEN SOCIETY.

ELECTED 3rd MAY, 1858.

---

THE Council of the Camden Society, elected on the 3rd of May, 1858, are happy to Report the continued well-being of the Society.

The Council have to regret the deaths during the past year of—

W. WINGFIELD BAKER, Esq.
The Ven. ARCHDEACON FROUDE.
JERE HILL, Esq.
PHILIP KERNAN, Esq.
MISS MACLEOD.
LORD MURRAY.
GEORGE STEWART NICHOLSON, Esq.
The Rev. CHARLES WELLBELOVED.

To this list the Council much regret to add the names of three Gentlemen who have special claims on the consideration of the Society. They are,

I. Their late respected colleague PETER LEVESQUE, Esq., for many years a constant attendant at the meetings of the Council, where his habits of business were always available for the purposes of the Society;

II. That distinguished ornament of our literature, and of this as of every other Society which had the good fortune to enrol his name on its List of Members, the learned historian of our Constitutional History and of the Literature of Europe, HENRY HALLAM, Esq.; and

III. The Rev. THOMAS TAYLOR LEWIS, M.A. the accomplished and painstaking Editor of the Letters of Lady Brilliana Harley, published by the Society in 1853.

The Works issued during the past year have been:—

1. Liber Famelicus of Sir James Whitelocke. Edited by JOHN BRUCE, Esq. V.P.S.A.

II. Letters to and from Henry Savile, Esq. Envoy at Paris, and Vice-Chamberlain to Charles II. and James II. including Letters from his brother George Marquess of Halifax. From a MS. in the possession of His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, and from originals in H. M. State Paper Office. Edited by W. DURRANT COOPER, Esq. F.S.A.

III. The Romance of Blonde of Oxford and Jehan of Dammartin, by PHILIPPE DE REIMES, a Trouvère of the Thirteenth Century. Edited, from the unique MS. in the Imperial Library at Paris, by M. LE ROUX DE LINCY.

These will be followed almost immediately by

IV. The Camden Miscellany, Volume the Fourth, containing: 1. A London Chronicle in the reigns of Henry VII. and Henry VIII.; 2. The Childe of Bristow, a Poem by John Lydgate; 3. Expenses of the Judges of Assize riding the Western and Oxford Circuits, temp. Elizabeth; 4. The Incredulity of St. Thomas, one of the Corpus Christi Plays at York; 5. Sir Edward Lake's Interview with Charles the First; 6. Letters of Pope to Atterbury when in the Tower of London; 7. Supplementary Note on the Jesuits' College at Clerkenwell;—

a Volume which it is hoped will be received with the same satisfaction as its predecessors, to which it will certainly be found fully equal in variety and interest.

The following Works have been added to the List of Suggested Publications during the past year:—

I. Sir Sackville Crow's Account of the Privy Purse Expenses of the Duke of Buckingham. To be Edited by JOHN FORSTER, Esq.

II. A Register of the Priory of St. Mary, Worcester, containing an account of the Lands and Possessions of that Church in the early part of the Thirteenth Century. To be Edited by the Ven. ARCHDEACON HALE.

Paradoxical as it may seem, the Camden Society has not at present so large a List of Members as it had some years ago, on account of the very success which has attended the Society itself. Its institution, and the number of Works of Historical and Antiquarian interest which it has published, have contributed to foster that taste for studies of this nature which is now so widely disseminated. Hence have arisen numerous Societies having objects more or less similar to that of the Camden Society, and many Gentlemen, deeming it undesirable to join all these bodies, confine their subscriptions to those whose objects are most directly in harmony with their own special branches of inquiry.

The Camden Society has been the means of placing in the hands of Historical Students nearly ninety Publications, all of considerable importance, although, but for the existence of the Society, they would probably never have been committed to the press. A mere glance at the titles of these Works will establish the high claims of the Camden Society to the constant support of all lovers of Historical learning.

Taking as of the first importance the Works which the Camden Society has published on the subject of our CIVIL AND POLITICAL HISTORY, we shall find—

RESTORATION OF EDWARD IV.
 WARKWORTH'S CHRONICLE.
 HAYWARD'S ANNALS OF ELIZABETH.
 NARRATIVES OF CONTESTS IN IRELAND.
 CHRONICLE OF WILLIAM DE RISHANGER.
 THE LEYCESTER PAPERS.
 TRANSLATION OF POLYDORE VERGIL'S ENGLISH HISTORY.
 TRAVELS OF NICANDER NUCIUS.
 NOTES OF PROCEEDINGS IN THE LONG PARLIAMENT.
 THE EGERTON PAPERS.
 THE RUTLAND PAPERS.
 ITALIAN RELATION OF ENGLAND.
 TWYSDEN ON THE GOVERNMENT OF ENGLAND.
 CHRONICLE OF REBELLION IN LINCOLNSHIRE IN 1470.

JOURNAL OF SIEGE OF ROUEN IN 1591.
 GEORGE FLEETWOOD'S DESCRIPTION OF THE BATTLE OF LUTZEN.
 BULL ON THE MARRIAGE OF HENRY VII.
 PROCEEDINGS IN KENT IN 1642.
 THE ABUSES AGAINST THE COMMONWEALTH.
 THE JESUITS' COLLEGE AT CLERKENWELL.
 LETTERS OF ELIZABETH AND JAMES THE SIXTH.
 CHRONICON PETROBURGENSE.
 CHRONICLE OF QUEEN JANE AND QUEEN MARY.
 SECRET SERVICE PAYMENTS OF CHARLES II. AND JAMES II.
 GRANTS OF EDWARD THE FIFTH.
 CHARLES THE FIRST IN 1646.
 ENGLISH CHRONICLE, 1377-1461.

Nor will the results be less satisfactory if we consult the List of Books issued by the Society on the subject of our ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.

ECCLESIASTICAL DOCUMENTS.
 CHRONICLE OF JOSCELINE DE BRAKELOND.
 APOLOGY FOR THE LOLLARDS.
 LETTERS RELATING TO THE SUPPRESSION OF THE MONASTERIES.

DOCUMENTS RELATING TO THE COLLEGIATE CHURCH OF MIDDLEHAM.
 CHRONICLE OF ABERCONWAY.
 THE ANCREN RIWLE.
 THE ROLL OF BISHOP SWINFIELD.

The next division, that of LITERARY HISTORY, including POETRY and the DRAMA, is equally rich.

KYNG JOHAN.
 KEMP'S NINE DAIES WONDER.
 POEM ON DEPOSITION OF RICHARD II.
 POLITICAL SONGS OF ENGLAND.
 LATIN POETRY OF WALTER MAPES.
 THREE EARLY METRICAL ROMANCES.
 THE ROMANCES OF SIR PERCEVAL, &c.

ORIGINAL LETTERS AND PAPERS OF LITERARY MEN OF ENGLAND.
 WALTER MAPES DE NUGIS CURIALIUM.
 ROMANCE OF BLONDE OF OXFORD.
 HISTORICAL POEMS OF THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

Nor are the contributions which the Society has made to LOCAL HISTORY either slight or unimportant; witness—

NORDEN'S DESCRIPTION OF ESSEX.
 FRENCH CHRONICLE OF LONDON.
 LIBER DE ANTIQUIS LEGIBUS.
 CHRONICLE OF CALAIS.
 CAMDEN'S VISITATION OF HUNTINGDONSHIRE.

BURY WILLS AND INVENTORIES.
 CHRONICLE OF GREY FRIARS OF LONDON.
 THE KNIGHTS HOSPITALERS IN ENGLAND.
 THE DOMESDAY OF ST. PAUL'S.

That the Society has done much also to illustrate the department of BIOGRAPHY and FAMILY HISTORY, the following List will show :—

DIARY OF DR. DEE.	DIARY OF JOHN ROUS.
PRIVATE DIARY OF BISHOP CARTWRIGHT.	EXPENSES OF JOHN OF BRABANT.
AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF SIR JOHN BRAMSTON.	HOUSEHOLD EXPENSES OF PRINCESS ELIZABETH.
CORRESPONDENCE OF THE EARL OF PERTH.	WARDROBE ACCOUNTS OF DUKE OF RICHMOND AND OF KATHARINE OF ARRAGON.
SERVICES OF LORD GREY OF WILTON.	THE VERNEY PAPERS.
DIARY OF WALTER YONGE.	THE TREVELYAN PAPERS.
DIARY OF HENRY MACHYN.	JOURNAL OF DEAN DAVIES.
SMYTH'S OBITUARY.	THE LIBER FAMELICUS OF SIR JAMES WHITELOCKE.
DIARY OF DR. EDWARD LAKE.	THE SAVILE CORRESPONDENCE.
THE TRELAWNY PAPERS.
AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF DR. TASWELL.
PILGRIMAGE OF SIR R. GUYLFORD.
LETTERS OF LADY BRILLIANA HARLEY.

All these works contain matter more or less illustrative of MANNERS, CUSTOMS, &c.; but the following books specially apply to that branch of Archæological pursuit :—

PLUMPTON CORRESPONDENCE.
 ANECDOTES AND TRADITIONS.
 PROCEEDINGS AGAINST DAME ALICE KYTELER, ACCUSED OF SORCERY.
 THE REQUEST OF A TRUE-HEARTED ENGLISHMAN.

While all the publications of the Society contribute in a greater or less degree to our knowledge of PHILOLOGY, we may point to

THE PROMPTORIUM, AN ENGLISH AND LATIN DICTIONARY, VOLS. I. AND II.

as a work to which any Society might refer with confidence. The Council are not without hope that they may shortly be enabled to announce the completion of this valuable contribution to the history of our language.

After this brief sketch of what the Camden Society has already accomplished for Historical Literature, the Council feel that the Society may appeal with confidence for continued, and even for increased, support. The Council trust that this classification of the Society's Publications will be satisfactory, not only to the Members of the Society, to whom they render this account of their stewardship, but to all who appreciate the great objects for which the Society was established, and which successive Councils have kept steadily in view—the cause of sound historical knowledge—the promotion of Historical Truth.

By order of the Council,

JOHN BRUCE, Director.

WILLIAM J. THOMS, Secretary.
