DISCUSSION UPON THE BILL TO INCREASE THE REVENUES OF THE STATE.

The ordinary business having been gone through with, the heli'to amend the Revenue Laws of the State was taken into consideration:

The object of this bill was incidentally to extend the of suffrage, and proposed in substance that a tax of 85 should be imposed upon professional gentlemen, and a tax should be faid of 25 cents, upon the first cow or horse owned by any individual, and I cent for every additional cow and horse that might be the property of the same pro-

"This day at two o'clock his Majesty held a Privy Council, at which Sir Robert Peel, we understand, received office as first Lord of the Treasury and Chanceller of the Exchequer. The Council was attended by the Duke of Wellington, who is said to have consented to serve under the new Premier, as Socretary for the Forreign Department, and by Lord Lyndhurst, all of whom kissed hands on their appointments. The Council was Sutton, the Right Hon. Measrs Goulburn and Herries.— The Marquis of Camden, Earl Amberst, and Sir Philip Sidney, had audiences of the King. We have not heard whether the appointments will appear in an Extraordi-nary Gazette of this evening, but suppose it likely. No-thing has as yet been decided with respect to a dissolu-tion.—Globe

No other appointments have yet been made or will be made until after the arrival of Lord Stanley's or will be made unto after the arrival of Lord Stanley, answer, which is expected to-night. It is believed that Lord Stanley, though giving his cordial support to the administration, will, for the present at least, decline of fice; but the accession of Sir J. Graham, acting under Lord Stanley's advice, is confidently hoped for. It would be improper to notice the various surmises affout as to the onstruction of the cabinet, further than to say that none of them can be authentic, or even supported by any just grounds of probability. The Dake of Wellington entertains a political party this evening at Apsley-House.—
