HENRY MILLER

will begin an extended Boston engagement at the Tremont Theatre on Monday night, November 4th, in his beautiful play, "The Rainbow," a very human and very appealing comedy from the pen of A. E. Thomas. Mr. Miller produced "The Rainbow" in New York last winter, and its engagement lasted until July. Throughout the long run capacity audiences were attracted to the Liberty Theatre, New York, by the exquisitely written and superbly acted play. Mr. Miller is bringing to Boston the really remarkable company that supported him in New York all last season. This brilliant cast includes Ruth Chatterton, Edith Barker, Charles Hammond, Ethel Martin, Robert Stowe Gill, Vera McCord, Daniel Pennell, Ann Crewe, Conway Wingfield, Geo. C. Pierce and other noted players.

"The Rainbow" was one of the really big hits in New York last year. Its wonderfully appealing story won the hearts of New York theatregoers and made the comedy the biggest popular success associated with Henry Miller's name since he became a star.

The story of the play is direct and unstudied in its appeal. Neil Sumner, who has been separated from his wife for twelve years, has lived a somewhat lonesome existence in spite of the group of gay associates who have assisted him to spend his income. He has reached a period of life when the future seems gray and the past serene. Suddenly the horizon is illumined by a rainbow—a rainbow of promise, promise of new and wholesome joys in the freshness and youth of his seventeen year old daughter, Cynthia, who re-

"Art Is Long"

BECAUSE it is real and true. The trivial, superficial and cheap must inevitably disappoint in photography as in everything.

LOOK at some of your old photographs. Rare indeed is the home that has not some terrible examples of inartistic posing which are charitably put among the things to laugh at. They never were good art, so never can be right. Sane, true, normal art never pales. Sensible posing is half of the secret of Purdy photographs and their popularity. Our new and commodious Studios.

turns from France where she has lived with her mother since the separation. It is this daughter who stirs the heart of Sumner, and causes the once gray ashes to glow with warmth. She is for him a re-birth into a fair and joyous world. His old companions are distasteful to the father now because he wishes to shield Cynthia from their atmosphere of moral and social unhealthiness. But Cynthia's mother, fears for her daughter's future, if allowed to remain in her father's home. She takes the girl away. The separation, where the girl says good-bye thinking she is going away for a day, while the father knows that she is going out of his life forever, is a situation of tremendous power. The final chapter in the romance brings the play to a happy and beautiful ending. The story gives Mr. Miller a wonderfully effective role, and he plays it with compelling tenderness and sympathy.

My lad's birthday is today,
 And my gift is a stock of blocks.
 My boss's son has a birthday, too,
 He is getting a block of stocks.
 But I really think, between me and
 you,
 My boy is the happier of the two.

Friend—Why do you wear your beard

Husband—Because my wife buys my

Famous Paintings

In the re-decoration of the Tremont Theatre two famous paintings by Signor Cav. Enrico Risi have been placed on the walls of the foyer. That under the balcony at the rear of the foyer is entitled

NERO AT THE CIRCUS

It represents Nero, the Roman emperor, descending from his seat in the circus to admire more closely the splendid form of Lygia, the beautiful victim of his court's advisers. Lygia was a beautiful princess of the Ligurians, a people recently conquered, and Venetius wanted to marry her, contrary to the laws of that time. Nero was induced to condemn Lygia to death, by exposing her in the circus, tied to the horns of a raging bull, and Ursus, her slave, was compelled to fight the bull in the arena.

Ursus succeeding in killing the animal before much harm was done to his beautiful sovereign. Nero then granted their liberty, and, later, Venetius married Lygia.

ISABELLA ORSINA

The picture on the wall alongside the staircase leading to the first balcony, on the left of the foyer, represents Giordano Orsini, Duke of Bracciano, in his palace in Florence, calling his cousin Troilo to account for treacherous behavior during his absence. In the year 1600 the Duke upon returning victorious from the battle of Lepanto, against the Turks, learned that Isabella, his wife, had become the victim of Troilo's passion. After a brief period of well simulated happiness the Duke strangled Isabella with a silken rope, then quietly dressed himself and called Troilo, from whom he obtained a full confession. After this the Duke, drawing the curtain, showed Troilo the corpse of Isabella, saying: "She is already punished; now it is your turn!" But Troilo fled, and took refuge in Spain, where he shortly afterwards came to a miserable end.
