OPINION AND COMMENT

The year 1914-15 as it passes in quick review exhibits in its crowded procession certain unique events and qualities that set it apart in the calendar of years. The registration overleaped itself and fell well on the other side of 1000. The football team moved up into the circle of victory over Georgia and Vanderbilt. The Mott Meetings in the essential matters of preparation, sustained interest, spiritual sanity, and afterflowing results stand out as among the most remarkable student religious meetings ever held in America. Professor Taft presented the presidency most interestingly in thought and most delightfully in person. The state-wide high school debate representing a contest over the State of 1000 chosen speakers was brought to a splendid climax in Memorial Hall before 1500 people in the victory of Lalla Rook and Ethel—electric with prophecy! The Inauguration challenged the ear of the nation and Carolina stood revealed under a friendly scrutiny in news and editorial columns as making a new and distinctive contribution to the relation of the people to their University.

During Commencement the pleasing fact that classes are being organized along permanent lines, and that alumni solidarity is growing was happily attested. The class of 1910 came back to the Hill to pay honor to its fallen president, who, during his undergraduate stay on the campus and since his leaving, honored the class by his splendid character and manhood. Realizing the looseness of the tie binding it to Alma mater, the unorganized class of 1895 perfected an organization during its commencement visit. In the future 1895 proposes to rally all of its strength to be used by the University as it sees fit. The solidarity, the cheer, the forward look of 1905, inspired confidence everywhere, and in addition to the check for $1000 which it handed over to President Graham, it left scattered here and there copies of its handbook just issued through its permanent secretary, W. T. Shore. In this particular, 1913 is again at the front. Through E. R. Rankin and A. A. McKay, it is out in an interesting record in which all the activities of the class are spiritedly recounted.

CLASS RECORDS

The class is planning for its big reunion in 1918 and is already practicing some of the stunts it is to present on Alumni Day three years hence.

"The students of the University of North Carolina are noted for doing clever stunts, and Tuesday afternoon they did some during the alumni luncheon in Swain Hall which take rank with their finest performances," said Colonel Olds today. "As the first course of the attractive luncheon was finished a student arose and informed the veterans that the boys of today were going to show them some stunts and then he put on an admirably arranged program with black-face dancers, female impersonators who showed the last word in dancing steps, acrobats, musicians, singers and various others while the splendid Richardson Orchestra conducted by an alumnus of the University gave a program which literally sparkled. There was round after round of applause by the hundreds of people in the big and stately dining hall, brilliantly lighted and effectively decorated with pine trees and native flowers, perhaps a fourth of those present being ladies. All agreed that it was the most attractive luncheon and program as well yet furnished at the University and that it will set the pace for those to come."—Raleigh Evening Times.

The outstanding reunion of this Commencement was that of the class of 1905. It was the largest and jolliest bunch of the old grads on the Hill. They really "reumed." At every occasion they were there in a body—all there. It was good to see Nat Townsend again, the greatest end of his day,—the day of 17 to 0, 11 to 12, and 16 to 0. Wright and King, intercollegiate debaters, Higdon of whose four strings of ones our own present day Newsom is reminiscent. Otie Ross, Jake Wilson, Bill Shore, Nichols, and the rest had a good time together.

The class of 1910 had a good reunion. A score of this class were back in lively fellowship. "Charity" Stacy, "Sap" Hyman, "Pat" Hamilton, Hoke Ramsaur, Joe Nixon, "Nick" Plummer, and a dozen others renewed the tie that binds.

Earlier in the year attention was directed to the physical improvement of the campus. Elsewhere in this issue further evidence is furnished through pictures of the new steps to the law building and of the western entrance to the campus.

ADDITIONAL IMPROVE-MENTS

Preceding the Inauguration, the old buildings near Swain Hall were cleared away and attractive walk ways leading to the dining hall were laid out. Striking as these changes have been, they have been surpassed by the transformation recently wrought in the interior of buildings. The decorations of Swain Hall and the Gymnasium during the recent festivities have been exquisite, and the interior coat of ivory and mahogany given the chapel removes it from the impossible to the genuinely attractive.

Observing alumni can find many ways of co-operating with the University in its work. Two ways which are now especially worthy of note are by helping young men, who otherwise must drop out of college, return to the Hill this fall. If there is such a student in your community, look him up. In a few years he will become a producer and will then return the aid given him.

ALUMNI AID

In all probability there are a number of students who are going to college for the first time this fall. Their attention may well be drawn to the University and what it offers.

With this issue THE REVIEW ends its third year having issued during 1914-15 a series of nine regular numbers. In spite of tight money and the consequent difficulty in securing subscribers and advertising, it has been self-sustaining, and through a continuance of strict business methods it hopes to become an even better publication in 1915-16. E. R. Rankin, business manager for the past two years, will represent it during the summer, and the alumni are urged to give it, through him, an increased financial support.

The following classes have reunions at the next commencement: 1891, 1896, 1901, 1906, 1911, 1915. Now is the time to start a successful reunion. Don't wait and don't leave it to somebody else. Get out a bulletin of the class, and lay plans for having every member of the class back.

CLASS REUNIONS

THE ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTIETH COMMENCEMENT

The exercises of the one hundred and twentieth commencement of the University began at 11 o'clock on Sunday, May 30th, at which hour the baccalaureate sermon was delivered in Gerrard Hall by Rev. W. D. Moss, of the Presbyterian Church of Chapel Hill. Taking for his text "Marvel not that I said unto you, ye must be born again. The wind bloweth where it listeth; thou hearest the sound thereof but canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth. So is every one that is born of the spirit," Mr. Moss developed the idea that man is in the nature of things a spiritual being. In doing this he said in part:

"A man is a spiritual being living in a physical body, in a physical world. That is Jesus Christ's doctrine of a man; and in the Christian doctrine a religious man who realizes his physical-spiritual pedigree is a citizen of both the world of senses and of the spirit. Man and God, God and man! There is the combination; and the history of man is the record of how this strange, wondrous union has been realized. The union has never been realized but once. The blessed story of the Incarnation is our sacred heritage forever.

"And the message runs that we are to live and can live as He lived in the world. 'I and the Father are one.' 'He that seeth Me hath seen the Father.' That is His program for Himself and that is His program for His followers. Now when we become conscious of that, when we realize that our life is one part physical and one part spiritual; when we realize that our life is a physical-spiritual thing and begin to take up our citizenship in the spiritual as we have already done in the physical—that is religion and that is the Christian religion. In this sense religion is not something tacked to a man. It is a man's true normal life. It is like the wind. The wind is a normal functioning of nature; and the spiritual is the normal functioning of a man. Sin is the abnormal thing. Sin is suicide. Religion is as normal as the air.

"The spiritual man is a man who circulates freely in the world. He can be an American citizen and yet wish that neighboring states may work out their destinies in keen rivalry with the United States. President Wilson illustrated in his speech before the Pan-American conference this spiritual type of man which we have in our civic life of today.

"The spiritual man can be a religious man and yet a man of the world. He can do business but do so in the practice of the sermon on the mount. He can be a scientist and big enough to associate himself with the organized life of religion. He can be a devout church member and yet not afraid to think. He can be an individual in his community, respected, beloved and at the same time the close, sympathetic friend of the lame and halt and blind of the world of consciousness, always a helper and never a discourager; a booster and not a knocker; a constructive power in his time and place."

Y. M. C. A. Sermon

The sermon before the Young Men's Christian Association was preached at 8 o'clock by Dr. G. T. Rowe, of Memorial Methodist Church of High Point, with Francis Clarkson, of the Association, presiding. In complete harmony with the sermon of the morning, the evening sermon was an exposition of the necessity of making one's way in the world of practical affairs. Using as his text the words "Not slothful in business," Dr. Rowe presented in a masterly way the idea that in the physical world every man should work to the end that he might be self-supporting. Personal efficiency is the prime requisite of modern civilization. But inasmuch as a man is a spiritual being as well as a physical, he must not only adjust himself to his physical environment and sustain himself, but he must meet the test of the highest development by bringing himself into complete adjustment with the laws of the spiritual universe.

Both sermons were delivered by men long in close touch with college life and were heard with the greatest interest.

SENIOR CLASS EXERCISES

Though forced to abandon the gathering around the Davie Poplar on account of the downpour of rain on Class Day, the Seniors, according to the custom of many years, met in chapel at 9:30 with Dr. Battle in a final prayer service and for the election of permanent officers. Dr. Battle held up before the class the fine qualities predominating in the character of David, and urged them to lead lives of patient industry, sobriety, and honesty if they wished to achieve lasting success.

Permanent Officers

Immediately following the prayer service, the class went into the election of permanent officers, O. C. Nance, of High Point, presiding, in the absence of George Eutsler, president of 1915, who was too unwell on Class Day to take part in the exercises. The election resulted in the choosing of the following officers: Robert A. Fitzgerald, of Whitsett, president; Misses Rachel Lynch and Alma Stone, of Chapel Hill, first and second vice-presidents; and B. L. Field, of Greensboro, secretary-treasurer.

Adjourning to Gerrard Hall, the class carried out the interesting part of the day's program preceding the Mangum oratorical contest. W. P. Fuller, of Florida, summarized the history of the class, emphasizing particularly the growth in student self-government on the campus during the stay of the class at the Hill, and the growth of the reach of the University throughout the State. In both of these forward movements he showed that 1915 had taken a helpful part. Following Mr. Fuller, B. L. Field, of Greensboro, presented the plan which the class has determined on in making its gift to the University. This plan, like that of a number of previous classes, contemplates the raising of $25 per member to be given to the University in 1920 at the fifth anniversary. The money then given will be used as a loan fund and placed at the disposal of worthy students.

Mangum Medal Contest

President Graham then introduced the speakers contending for the Mangum Medal. The representatives of the class and their subjects were: C. B. Woltz, of Dobson—"Democracy and Its Relation to Law"; J. V. Whitfield, of Wallace—"The American Tenant"; L. B. Gunter, of Holly Springs—"An Extended Vision"; T. C. Boushall, of Raleigh—"The Mission of Industrial Democracy." The honor, the announcement of which was reserved until Wednesday morning, fell to C. B. Woltz.

Davie Poplar Abandoned

At 5:30, forced to abandon the picturesque meeting around the Davie Poplar, the class met in Gerrard Hall for its concluding exercises as the guardians of the campus. J. S. Bryan, statistician, read the statistical record of the 211 members who entered, 85 of whom were then assembled as the "fit survivors" of the four-year struggle to smoke the pipe of peace. R. G. Fitzgerald foretold the destiny of the graduates; T. C. Boushall, through T. I. Boger and "Doggie" Trenchard as executors, disposed of the worldly goods of 1915; and D. H. Killifer read the class poem. The pipe then went the rounds and nineteen fifteen gave place to nineteen sixteen.

INTER-SOCIETY BANQUET

The Inter-Society banquet in recent years has fallen on Monday evening and regularly proves one of the most interesting features of commencement week. Loyalty to the Di and Phi is undying, and the former members never miss the opportunity of showing their appreciation of the kindly service rendered them by these splendid makers of men. The banquet of 1915 was presided over by C. E. Blackstock, of Buncombe, as toastmaster. B. L. Field and L. B. Gunter, members of the Di and Phi respectively, spoke as members of the student body. Mr. Field spoke in behalf of the societies, answering the criticism made during the year that the societies were not filling their high mission as they had in former years. He showed that they were in splendid condition, that they were the great conservators of democracy on the campus, and that they were as vital in every phase of their activity as they had ever been. From them he expected to see emanate the same power of self-development by which they had been characterized in the past, and to them he declared the conscientious society member could confidently look today for service of the highest order. Mr. Gunter's theme was the society member in politics. He defined the politician and the statesman and urged the men who had received their training for citizenship in the societies to be actuated in all of their duties as citizens by the ideals of the statesman.

Greetings from former members were brought by C. C. Bernhardt, of the class of 1905, and Archie Dees, of the class of 1911. Mr. Bernhardt, who filled the place assigned V. S. Bryant, spoke appreciately of the influence of the societies and voiced the pleasure of all the alumni on being able to attend this get-together meeting. Mr. Dees spoke of the necessity of every man working if the State and nation were to go forward. His admonition to the men going out into life was to acquire knowledge daily and especially to put such knowledge as they had already acquired to the test of hard, thoroughgoing work. He spoke with remarkable ease and power of conviction and was heard with keen interest.

The principal speaker of the evening was Senator F. M. Simmons, who, by way of preface, declared that while education had always been a cause which lay close to his heart, in the press of affairs he had rarely had the opportunity to manifest his real and abiding interest in it. The opportunity of speaking on this occasion was, consequently, doubly pleasing to him because it gave him the privilege of speaking to the students of the University on this vital theme.

Declaring that neither the physical man nor the physical world had undergone appreciable change during the long centuries, he attributed the great progress of the recent past to the brain and heart of man. Continuing, he said:

"The only thing in this world that has progressed by virtue of its own inherent powers, the only thing in this world that can in the nature of things, so progress is man, and the only thing in man that has so progressed is the immortal spark which quickens alike the mind, heart and soul. These material things and achievements to which we point with such justifiable pride are but the fruits of man's prowess and ocular proof and measure of the height and depth and width of the intellectual and spiritual progress which he has made under the benign influences which have liberated and stimulated into fuller fruition his divinely appointed faculties.

"The vital and practical question therefore is what has brought about this newly awakened mental and physical activity and efficiency which has in a little over fifty years advanced the world more than two thousand years ahead of its former self.

"Neither the occasion nor the time allotted to me tonight will permit elaborate discussion of this interesting query, but I confidently believe when we have gone to the bottom of the matter we will find the answer written in two words, namely, Education and Freedom.

"Universal education, not only the right, but the opportunity of every man, not through one or two, but through a thousand agencies, in the school house, and outside the school house, in the college and outside the college and university, to learn all he wants to learn and is capable of learning of what there is to learn.

"Freedom, not only of the body and its members, but freedom of thought and action; freedom of initiative, construction and execution; freedom in ambition, aspiration and living—that freedom in short which makes every man a self-controlling, self-governing, self-responsible entity."

The banquet was served in Swain Hall, the menu having been prepared by the chef of the hall and served by thirty members of the student body. Covers for three hundred were laid. Music was furnished by the Don Richardson orchestra, and the decorations and lights were arranged by the local committee—R. C. Vaughan, W. R. Hunter, F. H. Cooper, W. R. Taylor, L. B. Gunter, and W. P. Fuller. After the banquet the members adjourned to after-meetings in the Di and Phi halls for further speech making.

CAROLINA JOINS SOUTHERN ATHLETIC CONFERENCE

The faculty of the University recently accepted the general regulations as to athletic eligibility adopted by the Conference of Southern state universities held at Columbia, S. C., January, 1915. These regulations are all embraced in our previous regulations with one exception which provides that beginning September, 1916, no student will be eligible to take part in any intercollegiate contest who has not been in residence for one year at the university he represents.

According to the interpretation of the conference the term one year is interpreted as not less than six months. The University accepted the regulations with the provision that under our present division of two terms of equal length we will define one year as beginning at least within the first week of the second term. The only difference between the new rules and our previous regulations is that the one year rule will now apply to all students whereas it formerly applied only to athletes from other colleges. This new requirement is a great forward step and will require every student to serve a period of probation as a condition to his athletic eligibility.

ALUMNI DAY

The Old Grads in Numbers Find the Day the Most Interesting of Commencement

Alumni Day was opened with the address by Mr. R. D. W. Connor, '99, of Raleigh, Secretary of the North Carolina Historical Commission. Mr. Connor's theme was the relation of the State to the University which he approached from the standpoint of a citizen of the State. He sounded an aggressive fighting note justified by a convincing marshalling and comparison of facts on the appropriations and equipment of Southern state universities.

Child and Servant of State

At the outset in his address, Mr. Connor took the position that the University was both the child and servant of the State, and as such should not, as has frequently been the case, be forced to make brick without straw or denied the sustenance essential to its growth and vitality. He showed that among the State institutions the University was the only one which had not been built outright, from the ground up, by the State. The University, as a matter of fact, had rounded out a full century before a single one of its buildings was erected by the State, and of the twenty-four buildings now on its campus, only six were paid for in whole or in part by the State. Similarly, of the $1,137,700 invested in the University plant, only $341,500 had been contributed by the State.

More Equipment Needed

In speaking of the equipment of the University, Mr. Connor gave it as his opinion that the difference between the equipment needed for the work expected of it and what it actually possessed, had never been so great as today. This was demonstrated in that some of the rooms in the dormitories were too poorly heated for occupancy, despite the fact that the University could furnish rooms for only 478 of its 1019 students. Further proof of this was to be found in that many class rooms were pressed into service continuously without admitting of proper ventilation between recitations; that departments having enrollments of 300, 500, and even 800, were compelled to shift from building to building in search of lecture rooms; and that even unsuitable, unequipped quarters such as the chapel and the basement of the Alumni Building had to be pressed into service for the holding of classes. The most striking lack in this particular, however, was furnished in the light, heat, and water plant, which, throughout the year, according to the findings of the State Board of Internal Improvements, was threatened with a complete breakdown and consequent shut down in all the activities of the University.

At the very time, however, when the need for equipment was greatest; when new burdens had been imposed by the increase in enrollment from 887 in 1913-14 to 1019 in 1914-15; when increase in the physical plant of the University was demanded in order that it might properly respond to the complex needs of a rapidly growing State and answer the call to make its campus in reality Statewide, Mr. Connor said the State, through its General Assembly, decided that it should not have one cent to be used for this purpose. The amount appropriated in 1915 was specifically set apart for the payment of land notes and not for further improvement.

Maintenance Fund Inadequate

In the matter of providing maintenance for the University, Mr. Connor maintained that the State had been even more remiss. He referred to an investigation conducted by the United States Bureau of Education for the year ending June 30, 1913, which showed the "total working incomes" of twelve state-supported southern universities as follows: Texas, $625,509; Virginia, $283,237; Louisiana, $275,743; Georgia, $246,770; Tennessee, $229,288; Florida, $227,745; Oklahoma, $225,088; North Carolina, $206,194; Arkansas, $169,274; Alabama, $160,796; South Carolina, $139,382; Mississippi, $129,750. In this list North Carolina was out-ranked by all her sisters except Arkansas, Alabama, South Carolina and Mississippi. In another and even more important respect she fell below even these laggards. Deducting specific appropriations made for building purposes, the University of North Carolina received annually $9 less per student for maintenance and instruction than any of the other eleven southern state universities, and $98 less per student than the average. On this basis the southern state universities ranked as follows: Florida, $550; Georgia, $353; Louisiana, $336; Virginia, $335; Texas, $268; Oklahoma, $245; Mississippi, $245; Tennessee, $239; Alabama, $238; South Carolina, $222; Arkansas, $201; North Carolina, $192.

Fine Record Established

Mr. Connor expressed his pride in the fine record which the University had made in spite of the "austere economy" which it had been forced to practice. But in the fact that it had stood in the forefront of American universities along with Texas and Virginia, while receiving $76 and $143 less per student for maintenance than they, he saw a grave danger. He realized that the University, while it had been able to achieve this under special stimulation, could not maintain the position of rivalry it had held, and that by having to give to Virginia and Vanderbilt and Texas such members of its faculty as Smith and Mims and Royster, without ability to draw from those institutions in return, it would have to fall back to a second place. As an institution it must either progress or retrogress. It could not survive if it must play an all give and no take game.

Duty of the Alumni

In concluding, Mr. Connor appealed to the alumni to exert themselves in bringing about a better understanding of the University by the State and in aiding it in its enlarging work:

"Our duty as alumni of the University and as citizens of North Carolina seems to me to be clear and unmistakable. It is for us, first of all, as alumni, to satisfy the craving of our alma mater for sympathetic understanding, and afterwards, by becoming in our own persons the representatives and exponents of her ideals, to seek to bring others to a like comprehension. It is for us, to realize the splendid visions animating this University and the unlimited possibilities which they promise for the education and culture and social welfare of North Carolina, and afterwards to seek to bring others to a like realization. It is for us, to convince ourselves of the wisdom of the State's changing her financial policy toward this institution from one which considers chiefly how little the University can live on, to one which considers chiefly how much it needs, and afterwards to seek to bring others to a like conviction. We must present these needs to the people of North Carolina with all the earnestness and enthusiasm that our cause justifies and the high unselfish aspirations of our alma mater merit. In prosecuting that cause, we must consult our hopes more and our fears less: in the service of the University we must cease to be passive and become aggressive agents. We must be forward-looking, we must study the University in terms of the needs of the State it is designed to serve, we must formulate large and comprehensive plans for its future development, and we must lay these plans, these hopes, these ambitions before the people of North Carolina with confidence in their prompt and whole-hearted co-operation. I believe the people of North Carolina will welcome just such service, just such intelligent leadership as the University, and the University alone, can give. But they must be made to realize that the University can neither serve effectively nor lead intelligently, hampered by a policy that limits her to an equipment barely sufficient for her immediate tasks, and supplies her with sustenance scarcely enough to sustain life. It is for us, therefore, fellow alumni and fellow citizens, to secure her release from these bonds, to strike off these shackles, that she may step forth into that wider field of service, free and unhampered, for the greater work that awaits her coming."

Class Reunions

At the conclusion of Mr. Connor's address the hall was given over to the reunion classes of 1865, 1890, 1895, 1900, 1905, 1910 and 1914 which mounted the platform in turn and sent forward chosen spokesmen to address the general body of alumni and friends. Brief and interesting talks were made by Major H. A. London of the class of 1865; Mr. G. V. Tilley, Mr. F. B. McKinnie, and Mr. C. D. Bradham, 1890; Mr. Leslie Weil and Dr. Holland Thompson, 1895; Mr. A. J. Barwick, 1900; Mr. N. A. Townsend and I. C. Wright, 1905; Mr. D. B. Teague, W. H. Ramsaur, and H. E. Stacy, 1910; and Mr. J. A. Holmes, J. S. Cansler, J. G. Lee, and F. L. Webster, 1914.

1905 Establishes Improvement Fund

Mr. I. C. Wright, spokesman for the class of 1905, presented to the University a gift of one thousand dollars, important of itself and significant as the hopeful nest egg of a general alumni improvement fund. It is thought that other classes will fall in line with 1905 and make this fund take on the nature of alumni endowment by classes. The class also went on record to make further contributions and elected W. T. Shore to carry out the undertaking as class treasurer.

W. R. Edmonds Held in Memory

Mr. Horace Stacy made one of the notable talks of the alumni exercises. In speaking for the class of 1910, he paid eloquent tribute to his classmate, William Rufus Edmonds, who succumbed in the fall of 1914 to tuberculosis at Albuquerque, New Mexico. Edmonds was sorely missed by the class in which he was a leader and moving spirit. In college he stood high in scholarship and debate. He had much of the rugged nature of the mountains among which he grew to manhood. The people of High Point where he practiced law had marked him out as a strong man whose future had the promise of high things.

1914 Back in Numbers

The class of 1914 had nearly twenty men back—some of them were already here in the professional and graduate schools. In this class were the three Holmes brothers of Alamance, James, Albert, and Ralph. They were here, the same solid boys, a little more solid perhaps for the year's work in the public school room. In college James was president of the Young Men's Christian Association, Albert was an intercollegiate debater, and Ralph made the Phi Beta Kappa.

The Dollar-the-Plate Luncheon a Great Success

The most unique occasion of the entire commencement was the Alumni Luncheon in Swain Hall featured by the Richardson Orchestra and Student Cabaret. The dining space of the handsome Swain Hall was enclosed by two walls of pine trees and boughs broken in their stretch of green by wooden pillars of white and blue. In and out among the tables of over three hundred people the student waiters in white uniforms moved with noiseless precision and army-like handling of trays and dishes conforming to the plans of their chef-master, Tischler, and responsive to every move of the arms of floor-lieutenants, J. Tucker Day, '15, and Francis Bradshaw, '16.

Music and Stunts Please

During the courses and between, the Richardson Orchestra, fresh from the restaurants of New York, enlivened the luncheon with sweet and stirring music. The students with their music, dancing, and stunts, entertained the crowd with delight. Fred McCall and Wesley McIver, corked blacker than Bill Jones ("Long" or "Short"), clogged over the central platform with coon-like dexterity. "Meb Long's Band" of miscellaneous instruments gathered about an accordion, raised by Long's versatile personality into a popular campus institution, won the alumni as it had already won the students about the fraternity halls, around the South Building steps, and under the campus trees. Robert Page's guitar was the only accompaniment that stayed over for commencement but "Meb Long's Band" was none the less merry for its two piece music. Clyde Fore and Francis Clarkson gave a splendid mat exhibition of gymnastic strength and dexterity.

An attractive girl was seated at one of the tables unnoticed save for her beauty. Three young men came and stood before her and with rapt gaze sang her a song of invitation to dance. While the three promenaded with song in and out the tables the beautiful lady overcame her coy reluctance and went to join one of them, Mr. Sidney Blackmer, in an exhibition dance after the fancy of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle. It was a dance of such bewildering grace that even the ladies present learned with surprise that the beautiful girl was none other than Mr. Bruce Webb of the freshman class, dramatic star and track athlete.

Contract for Stadium Let

A call for speeches followed an overture by the orchestra. Short talks were made by Mr. W. D. Pruden of Edenton, Mr. R. A. Doughton of Sparta, Col. Robert Bingham of Asheville, Mr. J. D. McCall of the Charlotte bar, and Dr. S. B. Weeks of Washington. Prof. M. C. S. Noble read amid applause a telegram from Mr. Isaac E. Emerson of Baltimore that the contract for the stadium had been signed with the provision that it be finished September 15th.

Mr. Francis D. Winston, toastmaster nonpareil, broke into the speechmaking by introducing the leader of the orchestra, "Signor Don Amatti Richardson, alumnus, of Sampson County, North Carolina," who rendered on the violin with exquisite sweetness Gounod's "Ave Maria."

Business Meeting Held

At the call of Dr. James Y. Joyner, the alumni went into business session. Dr. Joyner then made a clear and dignified statement of the indebtedness of the alumni association amounting to one thousand dollars used in the organization of the general alumni association and the establishment of THE ALUMNI REVIEW. The Alumni Council, consisting of Dr. Joyner, Mr. Walter Murphy, Mr. J. K. Wilson, General Julian S. Carr, Mr. T. D. Warren and others, went on the notes for this fund. It was the sense of the meeting that the general association should meet these notes now due. Five hundred dollars was raised on the spot for this purpose. A committee was appointed by Chairman Winston consisting of Dr. Joyner, Mr. Murphy and Mr. Wilson to procure the remainder of the fund necessary. After the re-election of all the present officers of the association and the Council, the meeting then adjourned until commencement 1916.

President and Faculty Give Reception

After the debate and in spite of the continuous rain an attractive reception was given in the Bynum Gymnasium by the president and faculty. The gym was beautifully decorated. The music, the refreshments, and the general social good will made the occasion altogether delightful.

COMMENCEMENT DAYJudge A. Mitchell Palmer Delivers Masterful Address, and One Hundred and Thirty-Three Degrees Are Conferred

For the first time since 1875, the formal exercises of graduation day began in Memorial Hall at 11 o'clock without the march across the campus. Rain in torrents forced this feature out of the program, as it also kept the visitors from the surrounding country side from taking their annual outing on the University grounds.

Following the opening prayer offered by Rev. A. C. Killifer, of Franklin, Tenn., President Graham introduced as the speaker, Honorable A. Mitchell Palmer, Chief Justice of the District Court of the District of Columbia. The address, the subject of which was "Some Political Ideals," was an eloquent plea for young men of knowledge and culture to carry their high ideals into the field of politics. Declaring that the "the spotlight now reveals the idealist in politics," he proceeded to review the past when the scholar was content to allow the man who had a mind for business to employ it in the business of the government. The happiness of the masses was of little concern to the scholar; his own happiness was in the wealth of science, art and literature.

The results of the non-participation of the scholar were inevitable. The common welfare suffered in the granting of special privileges. Men devoted to the accumulation of wealth found in the unwatchfulness of the scholar the opportunity to exploit the people in a thousand ways. The speaker then cited notable instances of the greed and graft that resulted in his own State of Pennsylvania. He told of the contractor who furnished a great public building with chairs and tables measured and paid for by the cubic foot, and the railroad builder who secured in exchange for political service the franchise to use the public streets within the hour that a complacent governor signed the law authorizing the grab.

Turning from the practices of the grafter and rebater of the former generation, Judge Palmer disclosed that the then-prevailing conception of public duty and responsibility had completely changed, and that it was daily being demonstrated that the idealist could participate in government to the infinite good of those governed. As a result of such participation, better working conditions for labor, shorter hours for women in shops, greater restrictions of child labor, firmer control of the liquor traffic, have been demanded, and with such success as to demonstrate that these finer ideals in politics are workable. Judge Palmer further declared that that which has been accomplished proves that more may be. The practical and interested young man, now entering upon his life work, will want to know what essential virtues he must possess to bring his ideals to the full realization. He must have the courage to maintain the battle against the odds which idealists must always oppose; he must have the clear vision to see the goal in the distance despite the discouragements of temporary defeat; he must have the strength of purpose to withstand the slanders of the hireling critic who would make the people doubt his sincerity. And he must be willing to fight with the very weapons which he takes from the enemy after every struggle, but he must use them with the single purpose of truly working out his well defined ideals. He must go into practical politics. He must accept public place. Nay, he must seek it. The man who is modest, sensitive and diffident had better overcome the handicaps of his nature before he undertakes to right the wrongs of the world. He may be a reformer, but he will never reform anything until he has become self-confident, unmoved by slander, aggressive.

In concluding, Judge Palmer left ringing in the ears of the graduating class the appeal to devote their entire strength to the elevation of government:

"If I could raise my voice to tones that might be heard throughout the nation, my message would be an appeal to the young men of good education and careful training, with their faces to the front and their eyes upon the future, to maintain constant vigilance in the cause of real freedom by practical and persistent activity in the political affairs of the country, whether in or out of either of the great parties. If that activity shall follow the line indicated by the compass which the Creator has put within every man—if it shall be marked by firmness to do right as God gives us to see the right—the ideals of the nation will be the practice of the Republic. Then will the true purpose of the fathers be guaranteed to us and to those who come after us."

Board of Aldermen of Chapel Hill. Mr. W. S. Roberson was re-elected mayor and Mr. S. F. Long was re-appointed chief of police for two years.

BASEBALL TEAM HAD SUCCESSFUL YEAR

The baseball season was one of the most successful of recent years. Besides achieving a team average of .270, Carolina 15 out of 19 college games and scored 120 runs against a total of 45. Leon Shields, pitcher and captain-elect, won seven of his eight games. Coach Doak's emphasis on stick work brought results.

In the last four games of the season the scores were as follows: Carolina 6—South Carolina 0; Carolina 10—Wake Forest 4; Carolina 7—Guilford 2; Carolina 14—Elon 2.

Batting Averages

According to the figures of the athletic editor of the Tar Heel the varsity made the high team average of .270. Capt. Woodall outdistanced his mates by a good margin, hitting after the manner of the slashing Cobb at an even .400. Six men hit above .300. The averages follow:

	AB	H	AVERAGE
Woodall	83	33	.400

THE DI WINS COMMENCEMENT DEBATE

The annual commencement debate between the Dialectic and Philanthropic literary societies was held in Gerrard Hall Tuesday night. Col. Robert Bingham presided and Mr. Bruce Gunter acted as secretary. The query was: Resolved, That the tariff should be revised by a board of non-partisan experts.

Mr. Hubert M. Blalock and Mr. Thomas Ruffin of the Phi Society advocated the affirmative proposition and Mr. Floyd Crouse and Mr. S. C. Pike of the Di Society pressed the negative. It was a clear and logical debate, all the speakers reflecting credit upon their societies. The judges, Dean Stacy, Prof. McIntosh, and Dr. MacNider, by a 2 to 1 vote, decided in favor of the negative. The Bingham Medal was awarded to Mr. S. C. Pike. This medal is given annually to the best debater in the commencement debate by Mr. Ralph W. Bingham, of Louisville, son of Col. Robert Bingham.

FACULTY CHANGES

The following faculty changes have been authorized for 1915-16:

E. W. Turlington, A. B., of the class of 1911, and Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, succeeds W. H. Royster, resigned, as instructor in Latin.

W. W. Rankin, of the class of 1912, returns from Harvard where he has held a fellowship in mathematics, to succeed J. W. Lasley, who goes to Johns Hopkins as a fellow in mathematics.

W. W. Pierson, Jr., A. B. 1910, and A. M. 1911, of the University of Alabama, and instructor in history in Columbia University 1914-15, succeeds F. P. Graham, '09, as instructor in history. Mr. Graham goes to Columbia where he holds a scholarship in history.

T. C. Boushall, A. B. 1915, succeeds F. P. Graham as Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association.

SYLVAN WINS BASEBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

In an interesting game played in Chapel Hill on May 15th the baseball team representing the Sylvan high school won the State championship among the high schools by defeating the team representing the Raleigh high school. The score was 7 to 6. Sylvan was also the winner of the championship in 1914.

The championship contest in baseball is a part of the regular scheme of athletics carried on by the Greater Council and General Alumni Athletic Association of the University, these activities including State-wide high school contests in baseball, football, basketball, and track.

CAROLINA WINS STATE TRACK EVENT

By scoring a total of 64 points Carolina easily won the State track meet held in Durham on May 3rd. Trinity scored 40 points, A. & M. 35, and Wake Forest 14. The main point getters for Carolina were Woolcott and Homewood. Owing to the newness, and consequent slowness of the track, no records were broken.

PLANS FOR THE DEBATING UNION

The High School Debating Union of North Carolina, as conducted by the Dialectic and Philanthropic Literary Societies and the Bureau of Extension of the University, will be continued next year.

Letters have been sent by the Secretary to the school superintendents and principals of the State, and suggestions for next year's query have been received.

During the three years of its existence the Union has met with great success. In 1913, 90 schools were enrolled; in 1914, 150 schools; in 1915, 250 schools. The indications are that the contest for 1916 will be the largest and most successful of all.

VAUDEVILLE MAKES A HIT

The University Dramatic Club, Ltd., as a post-season stunt, entered vaudeville and provided a most enjoyable night of music, exhibition dancing, elog, and negro monologue. Meb Long's accordion band, Dr. Hanford's stringed orchestra, Prof. McKie's farce comedy, and Leon Applewhite as a minstrel negro, were features. Sidney Blackmer and Bruce Webb exhibited dancing as a fine art and McIver and McCall out clogged the shineboys.

CHAPEL HILL VOTES SCHOOL BONDS

On May 18 Chapel Hill, in one of the most interesting elections ever held in the community, voted $35,000 in bonds to provide for a site and the erection of a complete, modern school building. The issue carried by a vote of 87 to 42 and the site chosen for the new building is that formerly occupied by Miss Harriette Cole, on Main Street.

NEW CORRESPONDENCE COURSE FOR TEACHERS OFFERED

Arrangements have been perfected by the Extension Bureau whereby correspondence courses will be given in 1915-16 to teachers in the State who elect to take them instead of the work outlined in the present "Reading Circle" work conducted by the State Department of Education. The work thus done will be credited by the State Department.

SUMMER SCHOOL OPENS

As THE REVIEW goes to press the University Summer School is opening. From the number of students already present and the correspondence relating to rooms, it is to be inferred that the attendance will be greater this year than ever before. The offering of credit courses is making a wide appeal to the serious minded teachers throughout the State.

THE ORANGE COUNTY SURVEYS

Summer before last a little group of men were in earnest consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, Dr. David F. Houston, in his office in Washington City.

We are called upon, said he, to legislate about everything everywhere, when we do not know accurately and definitely about anything anywhere. Cannot we have a thorough economic and social survey of some one county in the United States?

One man in that group made up his mind that there could be such a survey, and that the county chosen should be a county in the South. Ten months later Orange County, North Carolina, was definitely selected for the exhaustive studies contemplated by Dr. Houston.

The Scope of the Surveys

The surveys now in progress cover (1) the 2000 farm homes of the county, (2) farm organization and co-operation, (3) schools and school conditions, (4) churches and Sunday schools, (5) health and sanitation, (6) soils and soil adaptations, and (7) home and health surveys of Chapel Hill and Hillsboro.

The school and the church and Sunday school surveys have been completed. The village surveys are partially finished. The sanitation survey is now in progress; and the other work will be pushed to a conclusion by November 1st.

Who is Doing the Work

The work was planned in detail by the Orange County Club of the University. The teachers and school authorities of the county, the ministers, the physicians, the county health authorities, the Board of County Commissioners, and the women of the town community clubs have all been actively interested in helping.

The School and Health boards of the State, the Experiment Station authorities, the U. S. Public Health Service, and various offices of the Federal Agricultural Department at Washington have been counseling with us, and guiding us in the details of the work; particularly and directly, the office of Markets and Rural Organization under Drs. C. J. Brand and C. W. Thompson.

The Purposes of It

The purposes are threefold: (1) Investigational, because the exact status of a typical rural county is to be ascertained in definite sort; (2) Educational and stimulative, because acute common consciousness of conditions, causes, consequences, and remedies is necessary in democratic communities before they are likely to gird up their loins for intelligent, remedial effort; and (3) Constructive, because social steam goes to waste unless packed behind piston rods.

The investigational campaign has been underway since February. The community rallies have begun. Ten have already been held: at Chapel Hill, Carrboro, Hillsboro, Sunnyside, Rankins' Chapel, White Cross, Cedar Grove, Damascus Church and Williams' School, the wheat growers, millers and bankers at Chapel Hill.

During the laying-by season in late July and early August there will be ten or twelve more such rallies at strategic points in the country regions of Orange. We are trying to find out not merely what is ideally desirable, but what is actually possible for the people of Orange County to undertake: a whole-time health officer, a school supervisor, a county agent or two in charge of boys' and girls' club work, school betterment, marketing organizations, libraries, reading and recreation clubs, and so on and on.

Out of this campaign will come some of these movements forward—the ones that are possible for Orange County to undertake successfully. The illustrated bulletin, "Orange County, Economic and Social," will be ready for distribution in early January.—E. C. B.

NEW PHARMACY JOURNAL

Under the title "Carolina Journal of Pharmacy," the William Simpson Pharmaceutical Society of the University has begun the issue of a quarterly journal of Pharmacy for North Carolina.

The first number of the quarterly appeared in May, being edited by a board of which J. G. Bearl is editor-in-chief and R. A. McDuffie is business manager. The subscription price is fifty cents a year.

The first number is attractively printed by the Seeman Printery, of Durham, wears an artistic cover of blue, and contains half-tone engravings of William Simpson, in honor of whom the Pharmaceutical Society is named, and of Person Hall, the present home of the department.

The forty pages which constitute the issue are devoted to editorials, special articles, alumni notes, and personals. They are extremely interesting, and the impression which the number makes is altogether good.

INAUGURAL PROCEEDINGS

The proceedings of the inauguration of President Graham on April 21st have been published by the University in a hundred page booklet and, as previously announced, may be secured free by addressing a request to the Bureau of Extension at Chapel Hill. Additional copies other than the first may be secured at the rate of twenty-five cents each.

Entitled "The Function of the State University," the booklet presents throughout the ideal of the modern State University and particularly the ideal which the University of North Carolina attempts to realize in its work. Printed in unusually attractive form the publication is in every sense an adequate and worthy presentation of the splendid occasion which it records.

NEWS LETTER RUNS THROUGH SUMMER

The University of North Carolina News Letter is now being sent to 5,000 people each week. It will be continued without a break through the summer months. Anyone desiring to receive this publication should address a postal to the Bureau of Extension. There is no charge for it.

WEIL LECTURESHIP IN AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP

Announcement has been made by President Graham of a liberal gift received by the University at the recent meeting of the trustees for the establishment of a series of lectures in American Citizenship. The gift is made by the heirs of Solomon and Henry Weil, and the lectureship will be known as the Weil Lectureship in American Citizenship. Lectures upon this foundation will be given in series of three every year. Through this gift the idea which President Graham has of making permanent such lectures as those given this year by former President Taft is realized.

MCNAIR LECTURE PUBLICATIONS

"Christian Life in the Modern World," by Francis Greenwood Peabody, published by the MacMillan Company, price $1.25, and "German Philosophy and Politics," by John Dewey, published by Henry Holt and Company, price $1.25, have recently been issued in attractive book form, being the seventh and eighth series, respectively, of the John Calvin McNair lectures. The University has a limited number of the Dewey series, copies of which may be secured by alumni upon requests directed to the Bureau of Extension.

SCHOLARSHIP HOLDERS IN 1915-16

The following University men have been appointed to scholarships and fellowships in Northern universities for 1915-16: W. C. Doub Kerr goes to the University of Chicago as a scholar in romance languages; J. W. Lasley, to Johns Hopkins, as a fellow in mathematics; F. P. Graham, to Columbia, as a scholar in history, and W. R. Taylor, to Harvard, as a scholar in English.

INAUGURATION NUMBER OF THE MAGAZINE

The June number of the University Magazine is devoted in large measure to an appreciation of President Graham upon his installation in office. Articles entering into the symposium are contributed by Kenneth Holloway, Dr. Archibald Henderson, Walter P. Fuller, C. A. Boseman, R. B. House, and Moses Rountree.

NEW GOLDEN FLEECE MEMBERS

The following men have been received as members of the order of the Golden Fleece: G. M. Long, R. B. House, T. C. Linn, Jr., R. M. Homewood, F. F. Bradshaw, R. A. McDuffie, F. O. Clarkson, J. M. Parker.

Dr. Joseph Hyde Pratt has recently delivered lectures as follows: "Conservation," before the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs at Goldsboro, on May 5th; "Treatment of Prisoners in Jails and Camps," before the Southern Sociological Congress at Houston, Texas, on May 10th; "Drainage of North Carolina Swamp Lands," at Albany, Ga., May 13th.
