The County Chairman

George Ade's Quaint Comedy

One of the brightest and most successful of modern writers for the American stage is George Ade, whose pen may be said to have created golden laughter.

And he has done nothing better in his many triumphs of stage literature than that merry offering, "The County Chairman". It is a genuine comedy, legitimate in all its features.

In plot it deals with the uncertainty of politics in the Middle West. Its romance involves two candidates for office. The opponents are a young lover and the father of his sweetheart, and the complications that follow are both amusing and exciting. Mr. Ade is a born humorist with a great sense of dramatic fitness—and his characters are quaintly amusing.

During the action of the play the political lines, many of them at the present time being quite apropos, are of particular interest.

The record of this exceptional play is a phenomenal one, running for two hundred and fifty-nine performances at Wallack's Theatre last season.

Mr. Savage has presented it with the admirable advantage of a company of acknowledged ability, including MacLyn Arbuckle, whose art is distinctly impressive and wins his audience at once and is proving an important addition to the stellar character actors of this country.

Among others prominent in this company are Willis P. Sweatman, Earle Brown, Charles Fisher, Fred Bock, Robert Pittiken, George Ricketts, Edwin Chapman, W. J. Gross, J. Stanley Macy, E. R. Phillips, Frances Ring, Christine Blessing, Rose Beaudet, Grace Fisher, Ann Buckley, Oscar F. Sidney, Howard Cuyler, Guy Tully, Nina Ainscoe and others.

The production will be identical in all particulars to that given so long at the Metropolis.

Tremont Theatre

Famous Paintings

In the re-decoration of the Tremont Theatre, two famous paintings by Signor Cav. Enrico Risi have been placed on the walls of the foyer. That under the balcony at the rear of the foyer is entitled

Nero at the Circus

It represents Nero, the Roman emperor, descending from his seat in the circus to admire more closely the splendid form of Lygia, the beautiful victim of his court's advisers. Lygia was a beautiful princess of the Ligurians, a people recently conquered, and Venetius wanted to marry her, contrary to the laws of that time. Nero was induced to condemn Lygia to death, by exposing her in the circus, tied to the horns of a raging bull, and Ursus, her slave, was compelled to fight the bull in the arena.

Ursus succeeded in killing the animal before much harm was done to his beautiful sovereign. Nero then granted their liberty, and, later, Venetius married Lygia.

Isabella Orsini

The picture on the wall alongside the staircase leading to the first balcony, on the left of the foyer, represents Giordano Orsini, Duke of Bracciano, in his palace in Florence, calling his cousin Troilo to account for treacherous behavior during his absence. In the year 1600 the Duke, upon returning victorious from the battle of Lepanto, against the Turks, learned that Isabella, his wife, had become the victim of Troilo's passion. After a brief period of well simulated happiness the Duke strangled Isabella with a silken rope, then quietly dressed himself and called Troilo, from whom he obtained a full confession. After this the Duke, drawing the curtain, showed Troilo the corpse of Isabella, saying: "She is already punished; now it is your turn!" But Troilo fled, and took refuge in Spain, where he shortly afterwards came to a miserable end.

Wishing to Increase our Teachers' Trade

We invite correspondence in regard to terms and arrangements for sending Music to Teachers and Schools on selection. We keep all the standard and classical editions in stock. Our own publications are being used by the best musicians. Orders are always filled and sent by mail or express the same day as received. We give our personal attention to selections, and, with a few hints as to grades, etc., desired, we can be very helpful to teachers at a distance. Respectfully,
