

New York, 24 April, 1863.

Dear Garrison,

I lose no time in sending you the enclosed letter for the action of the Ex. Committee.

I know nothing of the writer personally, but have no reason to doubt his responsibility.

I also send to you a copy of The Christian Luminary, that you may know what sort of periodical it is.

Mr. Hatfield declines speaking for us, and Mr.

Sloane has not yet replied to my note. I trust, however, that the latter will speak. Do you expect Theodore Weld will speak?

Yours truly,

D. Johnson.

Handwritten marks and scribbles, possibly bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.

