FOREWORD

243 31 May 1923

This code has been compiled expressly to meet our needs, and, as far as it has been possible, it includes all technical expressions and general trade terms. In preparing it we have had in mind not only the safe-guarding of our telegraphic communications, but particularly economy in expense, and we therefore ask that you thoroughly familiarize yourself with the contents of the code so that you may be able to use it to the best advantage.

Notice of revisions and changes will be given from time to time by the Cable & Telegraph Department, to whom the right of change is confined; and it is of the utmost importance that prompt acknowledgment of the receipt of these revisions be made to that Department. Constructive suggestions as to improvements will at all times be welcomed.

Attention is called to the various phrases under the titles of SHIPMENT and DELIVERY. You will observe that many of the phrases which heretofore appeared under the title of DELIVERY now appear under the title of SHIPMENT. While we recognize the fact that the terms "delivery" and "shipment" are commonly used synonymously in the trade, there is a well-defined distinction in meaning.

As used herein, the term "delivery" denotes an act sufficient to pass title to the customer, such as the simple billing and setting aside of merchandise, particularly where it has been sold "bill and hold." In selling, the term "delivery" is used, as for instance, "delivery F.O.B. mill June, July, August."

"Shipment," on the other hand, indicates that the mill has parted with possession of the merchandise; as in the case of delivery to a transportation company, where the Company's responsibility for delivery ceases.

This book is the property of the Hunter Manufacturing & Commission Company, and when you no longer require it for the Company's business please return it to the Cable & Telegraph Department, where specific record is kept of all codes distributed.
