To stand upon the brow of a lofty eminence, at the close of a warm Summer's day, and behold the crimson glory of the setting king of day, as he is fast receding below the western horizon, is a sight lovely to behold, and one which I always appreciate. The massive clouds, far away in the distance, tinged with the golden beauty, seemingly the wrapt up mantles of daylight's king, lend a beauty and enchantment to the scene which is only surpassed as the eye wanders still westward, while the light golden changes to a deeper crimson, until, in a climax of grandeur, the fiery red of his evening couch borders the horizon with a circle of beauty as grand as it is beautiful.

To me the sunset always has its charms. He who arose proudly and majestically in the morning, sending forth his messengers to herald his approach, he who above all moved onward in his glory as the noonday's king, is, at last, slowly, silently and sweetly retiring from his brilliant career.

The birds, Nature's feathered choristers, sang their sweetest songs at his approach; the woods, the fields, and the gardens wept their dewy tears of joy at his rising, and man, roused from the slumbers of night, welcomed and greeted him, as he prepared for the duties of the

His course is run, and as he sinks sweetly to rest, man closes the business of day, Nature again wraps herself in silence, and all by repose prepare to as kindly greet him on the morrow. And so on through life. But here my mind pauses, and of itself asks the question: "Is life always to last?" Observation, experience, feeling, all answer, "No." And if life is not always to last, then what becomes of man after having done with its active duties, its sober realities, its every day experience?

A sweet something within me tells me that after having run the round of life, my poor body shall as sweetly sink to rest as did the daylight in its beautiful sunset; and that, furthermore, after resting and waiting for a brief period, it shall, like him, arise with renewed vigor and accumulated glory, only the more refreshed for its calm and peaceful sleep.

To the Christian, death is sweet. The terror which hung around the lonely sepulcher, when Adam ate of the forbidden fruit, has been withdrawn. The gloom which overshadowed the grave has been dispelled, and the iron bars of death were burst asunder when Christ, the mighty monarch, descended into its gloomy caverns, and arose its conqueror. its destroyer, its victor. To him it is now the gateway of Heaven. Its arches, no longer hung with the gloomy drapery of despair, are bright and effulgent with the reflecting glory of his Savior, and he passes through its portals guided by the footprints and path of his risen Lord.

Beyond its narrow confines a scene of unparalleled beauty rises before him, and in his imagination he hears the sweet voice of angelf, as in concert the songs of praise strike melodiously upon the ear of Jehovah their King. Here he frequently encounters the reproaches of wicked men, there he expects to hear the voice of the Savior speaking to unto him, saying: "Well done, good and faithful servant." Here he frequently has to meet wicked men, there he shall have angels for his company. Here he meets with trials and difficulties, there sorrow shall be done away. He is a pilgrim here, he shall be angel there. Here his way is often rugged and difficult, there he shall range the blessed fields on the banks of the river; and he looks forward with delight to the time when he shall enjoy the long wished for repose amid the amaranthine bowers, and gather with gladness the ambrosial fruits which fall from the tree of life. Earth may at times seem beautiful, Heaven is always glorious. Eden below was lovely, Eden above is transcendantly beautiful. He may have a father here, God is his father there. He has Christ for his elder brother, angels for his company, Heaven for his everlasting home. Such, then, is the end of the Christian's life. His body quietly resting in the grave, shall, on the morning of the resurrection, rise renewed with all the vigor of a glorified existence, incorruptible and eternal as its God.

Time then shall have ceased; the last lingering echo of the angel's trump shall have died away, and man, redeemed, purified and holy, shall, together with the assembled hosts of Heaven, reiterate the words of prophecy: "Oh, grave, where is thy victory? oh, death, where is thy

While we pursue our way on the journey of life, it would be well for us to pause and see what others have done in order to gather strength and resolution to battle against impending perils. To the inspiring mind this is truly beneficial. We are encouraged and depressed in 1812, and General Bloomfield, who to a great degree by the smiles and jeers of others, and therefore when we undertake anything we naturally look for the approbation of our friends, than hatred of our enemies; this, when any great object is to be achieved. Thus, Byron having published his first attempt at poetry, was severely criticised by the wits of the day, but instead of giving up in despair when the sages of Grub street and Paternosier row predicted that he would never be heard from again, he was aroused and replied in a way that at once established his reputation and secured him in the future from the malicious attacks of his enemies. In studying the history of our race we are impressed with or might have been beaten, had his adthe greatness of the difficulties with those who achieved eminence had to times the General, in casting a glance those who achieved eminence had to overcome. The poor boy has arisen to over his shoulder, had noticed the inpower and wealth only after years of struggle and toil, and yet men say when they hear of the success of such a one, he is lucky-it is all an accident, little thinking of the labor it had cost him to acquire it. Samuel Johnson struggled for years in the poverty and obscurity of a London garret, before he became the favorite of the public. One of the best of his works, "Rasselas," was written to pay the expenses of his mother's funeral. The many reverses he met soured his temper and put him out of humor with his fellow men; he never yielded to opposition, and rode down everything that came in his way. Lord Chief Justice Campbell was poor and unknown when he entered an office as printer's devil. But where there is a will there is a way, and he worked slowly up, until at last he sat upon the woolsack, and became worth a million of dollars

The example of such men shows that what has been done, can be done again: The hights by great men reached and kept,

Were not attained by sndden flight;

But they, while their companious slept, Were toiling upward in the night." The reply of Euclid to the King, 'there is no ropal road to Geometry, is just as true now as two thousand years ago, and just as applicable to any other art or science. Little did Sallust, the Roman historian, think that one single sentence from his pen-" Governments are easily preserved by those arts by which they were obtained in the beginning "---would afterwards be quoted and adopted as a political maxim by the na tions of the world. Neither did the arglass, know the benefit he was about to confer on mankind, by creating a substance which should gather the rays of the sun, protect against the wind, and act as a subsidinary to old age, and thus prolong the enjoyment of light, enlarge the field of sciences, and confer the most lasting pleasure.

Thus we see that every man, from the highest to the lowest station, may be useful to the world, and send down his example to cheer and encourage others. One may sow and another reap, and all contribute to the general stock of human happiness. Then let us not hesitate or waver, but looking to the example of those who have gone before, keep steadily on and success shall crown our ef-

Forever.-How long will you live? You will live forever. And your life there will depend on your life here. Every day, as you complete it, will reappear in the years to come. Every hour, every moment, as it hurries on its way, leaves a page to be read before the throne. Every word, every act, and every thought and feeling of your heart, records itself imperishably in the memory of One who never forgets. You are writing your life for eternity.

"PLEASE give this lady your seat, sir?" asked one gentleman of another in a crowded railroad car. "Permit me to inquire," replied he, "whether she is an advocate of woman's rights?" "She is, sir," answered the first. "Then let her put her doctrine into practice and stand up," was the answer, as the gentleman quietly settled himself back in his seat and prepared to take a comfortable nap.

An editor announces the death of a lady of his acquaintance, and thus touchingly adds: "In her decease, the sick lost an invaluable friend. Long will she seem to stand at their bedside, as she was wont, with the balm of consolation in one hand, and a cup of rhubard in the

Jones was fond of playing at draughts, and was very expert at that game. Some years after the marquis' school was broken up we happened to be on board of the Paragon on a passage up the river. It was just after the declaration of war had been appointed to the command of the northern army, with his suite, was on board.

The General was deeply engaged in a game of draughts with one of the passengers, after having beaten all the members of his staff in succession. This time he was matched with an adversary more formidable, and it required his best efforts to gain the victory. It was at length achieved, and a second game, after a long contest, terminated in his

Jones, who stood behind the General's chair, watching the play, thought that at many points in the game the conquertentness with which his play had been observed, and upon his last conquest he turned toward Jones.

"You seem to be fond of checkers, young gentleman. Do you play?" he asked.

"A little, sir," but not very well," was the reply.

"Sit down, sir," said the General,

"and let us try a game."

Jones took his seat accordingly, and in half the time which it had taken the General to beat his less skillful competitor he was himself beaten.

"Why, sir," he exclaimed in amazement, "you are a great player!"
"O no, sir," said Jones. "My success was accidental; you lost by a false

"You are right, sir! perfectly right," replied the General. "It is strange that I should commit so great a blunder. Come, sir, let us try it again." The men were set anew, and the General moved his with great circumspection. When he had reached the point where his false move had been designated, he corrected it.

"There, sir," he said, "I shall not be defeated by that move this time."

The game continued, and, after a short space, Jones was again successful. "Sir !" exclaimed the General, "you are a very great player!"

"O no, General," replied Jones.
"You made a mistake equally fatal.

There," he said, replacing the men, "if tificer who discovered the art of making | you had occupied that square, instead of this one, you must have won the game." The General paused and surveyed the same, and the General threw himself back in his chair. "You are a very great player, indeed, sir," he said. "Not at all, sir," replied Jones. "If you had moved—"

Here the General broke in.

"Say no more, sir," he said. "I have never before been so beaten. You are a great player; a capital player; a most extraordinary player—the best I have ever met with." Then, rising and making a low bow, "and by far the most civil," he added, closing the tables.

WHAT HE WOULD LIKE .- As Deacon Adams, on an extremely cold morning in the old times, was riding by the house of neighbor Potter, the latter was chopping wood. The usual salutations were exchanged, the severity of the weather briefly discussed, and the horseman made demonstrations of passing on, when his neighbor detained him, saying:

"Don't be in a hurry, Deacon. Wouldn't you like a glass of Jamaica this morning?"

"Thank you kindly," said the old gentleman, at the same time beginning to dismount with all the deliberation becoming a deacon, "I don't care if I do." "Ah, don't trouble yourself to get off, Deacon," said the neighbor, "I merely asked for information. We haven't got a drop in the house."

The Deacon sighed, mounted his horse, and rode away with feelings "more of sorrow than of anger."

WHAT a glorious world this would be, if all its inhabitants could say, with the Shepherd of Shakspeare: "Sir, I am a true laborer; I earn what I wear; owe no man hate; envy no man's happiness; glad of other men's good; content with my farm."

others, generally come out the worst spotted themselves.

Eight Reasons for Planting an Orchard.

1. Dr. Dwight used to remark to his pupils at Yale, that the raising of fruit was the cheapest and pleasantest way of entertaining one's friends. We are creatures of society, and it is very important object to make the social board attractive to all who honor us with their friendship. A dish of well grown apples is always wholesome and acceptable.

2. An orchard is always an ornament to the farm, with its beautiful blossoms, its Summer drapery of green, and its Autumn burden of yellow and ruddy fruit. No farm is complete without its acres of orchard.

3. The cultivation of fruit is a very pleasant occupation, and has an important influence upon the mind and heart of the cultivator. It requires higher intelligence than the growing of the annual crops. It fosters forecast and hopefulness, and tends to a cheerful temper.

4. It makes home attractive; children are universally fond of fruit, and the homes where this luxury is always enjoyed will be more loved on that account. It will be in pleasant contrast with many homes around them.

5. It will tend to guard children against vice and crime. So strong is the desire for fruit, that they may steal it if it be not provided for them at home.
And the boy that grows up plundering his neighbor's yard and orchard is very likely to steal more valuable things when he becomes a man.

6. It is a very sure investment. An apple tree, if well planted, is about as hardy as an oak, and sure to bear fruit according to the labor bestowed upon it. When houses burn up, and banks fail, and rathroad stocks depreciate, the orchard will yield dividends.

7. It is not only a sure investment for yourself, but also for your children. No real estate in their inheritance is likely to be so permanently valuable. An or-chard in good soil will bear fruit for a hundred years.

8. It is a perpetual excitement to thanksgiving to the bountiful Creator. It yields its burden of precious fruit yearly, giving large returns for the la-bors of the husbandman, and calling him to behold the wisdom and goodness of Providence. Do not fail to plant that long deferred orchard, and while you are about it, select good marketable fruit. The best is the cheapest.

HUMAN NATURE .- When the wild beasts of a forest have hunted down their prey there comes a difficulty of tearing it into equal, or rather satisfying shares, which mostly ends in renewed bloodshed. Nor is the stage of proceeding less perilous to associates amongst the higher animals; and men. standing all their writings and agreements, rules, forms aud orders, are hardly restrained from flying at each other's throats when they come to the distribution of profits, honors, or rewards.

A NOTORIOUS loafer was brought before a court which was about to send him to jail as a vagrant. Suddenly a bright thought seemed to strike him; he pulled half a salt fish and a piece of bread from the pocket of his tattered coat. "Here," said he, "don't you call these visible means of subsistence? you won't commit a feller as long as he can make his living by honest industry, will you?" His wit saved him that time.

A CHURCH deacen laid his hand upon she shoulder of a little urchin of twelve years of age, who was playing in the church porch, and thus addressed him: "My son, I believe the devil has hold of you." "I believe he has, too!" was the significant reply of the urchin.

MACHINERY, says a late paper, has reached a great state of perfection. We saw some burnt peas put into a hopper of a coffee mill the other day, and in less than two minutes the stuff was occupy-ing a place in a grocery window, labeled "Old Government Java."

"Why do you set your cup of coffee on the chair, Mr. Jones?" asked a landlady of a fashionable boarding house. "It is so very weak, madam," was the reply, "that I thought I would let it

"You quarrel with your wife, my friend; and why? Do you not think alike?" "Heaven knows we do," was the reply; "we both want our own way."

FAVORS .- We are under many obligatirns to the Hon. J. W. Thompson, member of the Assembly from Tehama and Colusa counties, for interesting public documents during the session.

Ir is confidently asserted here by parties who pretend to have seen the documents, that private letters have been received in this county from Missouri, stating that Price has captured General Curtis, with his entire army, in Arkansas, near the scene of the last reported battle, in the neighborhood of Cross Hollows. We give the news for what it is worth, not having seen the letters ourselves.

COUNTY SEAT ELECTION. - On Monday next the election will take place at the several precincts, to settle the question of the location of our county seat. It is a question that interests every voter of the county, and all should, consequently, see they do not miss this opportunity of expressing their opinion on this important event.

BRIDGE ACROSS CACHE CREEK .-We notice a bill passed the Senate on the 15th instant, authorizing the building of a bridge across Cache Creek. It grants the right to build a toll bridge at or near Cacheville. We hope, now the thing is started, we shall soon have a bridge in that much needed locality.

BALL.—The ball which was given at Mr. Hodgkiss', last evening, at Woodland, was very largely attended. The music was good, and every one seemed to enjoy themselves until daylight, when the ball broke up. We hope they will soon have another.

DISAGREEABLE .- The weather the past three days has been very disagreeable, the wind blowing fiercely from the north, and cold enough for the month of January. It has a blighting effect on vegetation, and seriously retards the growth of young grain.

GENERAL, A. SYDNEY JOHNSTON. The Sacramento Union says the way the intelligence came to San Francisco announcing the safety of this distinguished rebel, was as follows: H. P. Hepburn, of that city, received a dispatch dated at Louisville, Kentucky, April 12th, from his wife, saying: "Tell Eliza her husband is all right." The "husband" is A. Sydney Johnston, and "Eliza" is his wife, now at Los Angeles. Mrs. Hepburn is a sister of Mrs. Johnston. The Government having probably no knowledge of the personality of the husband or "Eliza," allowed the dispatch to be forwarded, as it might have done even had it been possessed of the information.

Chinese Sugar Cane.

The cultivation of sorghum is attracting the attention of cultivators on the low lands adjacent to the Sacramento river, in this county, to a considerable extent. Last Fall we alluded to the production of about six acres by Charles St. Louis, on his farm one and a half miles below town, from the cane there raised. Mr. St. Louis manufactured a large quantity of very fine syrup. He was, however, laboring under a great disadvantage in its manufacture. All of the machinery used was of his own construction; and, as a matter of course, very imperfect. The mili for pressing the cane was on a small scale, and did not extract all the juice from the stalks, thereby suffering a loss in the quantity produced. His evaporators were made of sheet iron, and although he produced a good article of syrup, yet the process was attended with great loss of time. We are pleased to learn, however, these difficulties will, in a great measure, be obviated the coming season. Improved evaporators and mills are being now manufactured in our own State; and as soon as these get distributed among our farmers, we may look for a great improvement, both in the quantity and quality of the syrup produced-and, no doubt, some will succeed in making sugar. The demand this Spring, for sorghum seed has been so great that Mr. St. Louis disposed of all his, and had difficulty in keeping enough for his own planting. The premiums offered by the State, should the bill become a law, will stimulate the growth of this necessary article to a great extent, and no doubt make it one of the lasting productions of Meavy Yield.

Mr. I. W. Brownell sheared his imported merino sheep last week, and the five yielded one hundred and six pounds of wool. The largest-a French Merino ram-produced thirty-five pounds for an eighteen month fleece. The other fourthree ewes and a ram of the Spanish Merino breed-produced seventy-one pounds, or an average of seventeen pounds and three quarters each. They were only two year old sheep and the fleeces one years' growth. All of the wool is of the finest texture and long staple. Estimating the wool at forty cents per pound, a low figure for this quality, and we have from the Spanish sheep, $7 10 as the yearly product for each. This is more than the price of four sheep, wooi, carcass and all, of the common breeds; and the difference in the feed consumed, between a fine and coarse sheep, is actually nothing. If any difference, it is in favor of the finer

NEW BOOKS .- We received from the publishers, Ching Ho Cum Foo Sa Me Looo, an elaborate production in Chinese. It contains the usual unintelligible hieroglypics, with an occasional fierce Chinaman, and fiercer looking quadruped resembling a cross between an elephant and coyote. No doubt it is a valuable work, full of logic and reason; if it vin't, we don't know what it is, and are just foolish enough not to want to know. Melly good, John; Melican man no sabe.

WOOD MEASURER.—A bill providing for a Measurer of Wood in San Francisco has passed to an engrossment in the Assembly. The people of this city have long suffered from imposition practiced in giving short measure, and the bill alluded to is calculated to do away with the nuisance in future. The Measure is to receive 15 cents a cord for large quantities, and 20 cents for small quantities. Journal.

MURDER IN SACRAMENTO. - At one o'clock last Saturday morning, at the corner of K and Second streets, James Kennedy was shot and instantly killed by E. F. Hunter, a lawyer of Sonora, Tuolumne county. Kennedy, with three other young men, were standing on the corner, and Hunter came up and stared him in the face. Kennedy asked: "What do you want?" BY OVERLAND TELEGRAPH.

The following is from the Alta of the 12th instant:

FORT HENRY, Tenn., April 9th .- One of the greatest battles of modern days was fought at Pittsburg Landing, on the Tennessee river, resulting in the complete rout of the rebels, who attacked us about daybreak on Sunday, the 6th. The battle lasted without intermission during the entire day, and was again resumed on Monday, and continued until wards Corinth, pursued by a large force

The slaughter on both sides is immense. We have lost in killed, wounded and missing, report says, from eighteen to twenty thousand men. That of the enemy is estimated at from thirty-five to forty thousand men.

It is impossible at present, in the confused state of affairs, to ascertain any

The rebels at times exhibited great generalship. Even our heaviest and most destructive fire did not seem to discourage their soldiery.

The fire of Tyler's Chicago battery raked them by scores, but the smoke no sooner was dispersed than the breach was found to be filled.

At about five o'clock on Sunday morning the rebels had succeeded in forcing our left wing so as to occupy two-thirds of the field, and were fighting their way forward with a desperate desire of confidence in their efforts to drive our forces into the river; at the same time they heavily engaged our right.

At this time, and previous to the arrival of Buell's division, our forces did not exceed thirty-eight thousand, contending against a force of sixty thousand rebels. Large numbers of our men were panie struck, and others completely

The rebel Commander-in-Chief, Gen. A. S. Johnson was killed, and Beau:egard had an arm shot off.

The Federal Generals, Sherman and Wallace of Illinois, were killed, and General Prentiss taken prisoner by the General George Wright, commanding this division, received the following dispatch this evening:

St. Louis, April 8th.—To General George Wright, U. S. A.: A decisive battle on the Tennessee has been fought. Our loss is fifteen thousand men. The enemy were repulsed with a loss of thirty-five thousand men.

R. W. ALLEN, Major U. S. A.

FROM THE NORTH .- Advices from Portland to April 5th give the following intelligence: Glowing accounts are given of the

Salmon river mines, but they are mostly speculations, and not founded on actual The Indian agent in charge of the

Sitletz Reservation has been suspended, on the charge of having misappropriated public funds in his hands

All the laborers employed on the Des acceded to by the company, and the hands have resumed work.

The Dalles Portage has ceased to exist. All the property of the concern has passed into the hands of the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, who in future will take charge of freight passing over the Portage.

The Dalles Mountaineer of April 2d, says: A number of persons have left the Dalles within the last week, bound for the John Day mines. Parties going in that direction should go well armed, and prepared to repel an Indian attack.

IRON IN WASHOE .- Valuable and extensive iron mines have been discovered about two miles north of Dayton, within three hundred yards of Carson river. The ledge is about one hundred and fifty feet in width, and the ore has been tested and found to be of the best quality. Some specimens which we have been shown are as fine as we have ever seen, and we should judge contained pany called the "Pacific Railroad Iron Company" is being organized to work it. From J. R. Sproul, who is directing his energies to this object, we learn it is the design to erect smelting works and foundries as soon as possible, and ultimately to annex machine shops, rolling mills, etc. The presence of unlimited water power, and the ease with which coal can be obtained from neighboring beds, give great advantages to this enterprise, and render it quite feasible.

FEEDING AN ARMY .- According to the latest and most reliable estimates, the Union army now number not far from six hundred thousand troops. Some idea of the enormous amount of food required to supply this vast multitude may be derived from the following figures, which are for one month: 14,625,000 pounds of pork, or 24,375 pounds of fresh beef; 136,994 barrels of flour, 48,750 bushels of beans, or 1,050,000 bushels of rice, 1,900,000 pounds of coffee, 2,892,000 pounds of sugar, 12,249 It is said that Mexican quartz claim, bushels of salt, 8,580,000 pounds of potatoes. The supply of candles is 292,500

CARIBOO AND SALMON .- Doctor Mark Walker writes from the Northern mines to a friend in Jacksonville, Oregon, as follows:

"They have struck nothing new at Salmon. I talk with men from there almost every day. They all agree in saying, as far as they know, that the mines are confined to two or three miles square; that it has been prospected for twenty miles around, but nothing found that will pay. They are getting up an excitement there about the Cariboo

"I sent Tom Ord a letter some days since, in which you can find my opinion of this northern country. Don't come up here with the calculation of mining, for God's sake! If you have got three or four hundred dollars that you want to see the country, why come up here; but don't come up with any calculation of making money at the mines. You would have twice as good a show at a monte bank. Now, I suppose you will see in the papers about new diggings having been struck all around Salmon river. Don't believe a word of it. They have not been struck yet. As I said before, they may strike some next Summer; but where there is one that will get a claim that will pay, there will be fifty will not get a thing.

"Claims that will pay eight dollars a day are not worth a cent, for the reason that the working seasons are so short, and every article is so dear, that it would not grub a fellow. Now, I don't want you to understand that eight dollar claims can be taken up any place around here; they are very scarce, and if a man has got one, he will ask you $1,200 or $1,500 for it. Now, I suppose you will think I am 'down in the mouth.' So I an; but those who come here this Spring will find to their cost that I have told the truth."

CORINTH, MISSISSIPPI.—It will be after the battle at Pittsburg Landing, went to Corinth, Mississippi. The editor of the Silver Age, at Carson City, ap pears to be acquainted with the locality, and says of it: " Corinth is situated on the line of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, about one hundred and fifty miles from Memphis, and about two hundred and twenty miles west from Stevenson, the junction of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad with the Nashville and Charleston Railroad. Corinth EURERA CARRIAGE FACis a town of from three to five hundred inhabitants, in fact nothing more than a dining station on the rail oad. Its natural strength and strategic importance may be thus enumerated: It is the center of a flat country that affords no commanding high grounds; is located on the head of a swamp shaped like a horse shoe, that forms an impenetrable barrier on three sides-north, south and west. Six miles west from Corinth, the railroad is built on piles through a lake or pond, the water varying from a few inches to several feet in depth. For thirty miles outside of this pond the ground is low and swampy, and heavily timbered, impracticable except on the line of railroad, which will be torn up the moment Memphis falls into the hands of the Federals. To the east of Corinth the country is level, the soil rich, and is the finest cotton district in the State. To-day Corinth is in connection by railroad with New Orleans, Mobile, Charleston, Nashville, and a vast number of intermediate towns, and a large scope of productive country.
