ARMY AIR FORCES PILOT SCHOOL (BASIC)

SHERMAN, TEXAS

HISTORY OF PERRIN FIELD

Perrin Field, located midway between Sherman and Denison in Grayson County, Texas, was the first Army Air Forces basic flying school to be opened after declaration of war. Just one week after the attack on Pearl Harbor, on December 16, the first class of cadets arrived at Perrin Field. After that time the field contributed an important part in building the crushing air strength of United States forces.

Named in honor of the late Lieutenant Colonel Elmer D. Perrin of Boerne, Texas, the field was dedicated with fitting ceremonies on February 23, 1942.

Actual work on the field had begun with clearing and grading on January 5, 1941. The field is laid out on 1,000 acres of ground. The flying field itself takes three-fourths of the space, but there is enough ground left for a comfortably spaced group of well-built buildings.

As the work of Perrin Field progressed, the station became increasingly more important in the whole plan of Central Flying Training Command and the Army Air Forces Training Command. By the middle of 1943 the field had reached an importance far beyond the expectations of its builders. It had become the home of headquarters of the 32nd Flying Training Wing under Brigadier General Aubrey Hornsby. It had been a test station of the Exact Manning Table, and the results of much of its work had been used as a model for other stations.

Exploits of pilots trained at Perrin Field had made history, and many of the men who had come and gone as officers or enlisted men were serving overseas. Cadres of men from Perrin Field had activated several other stations; so the work at Perrin Field had spread throughout the nation, and some of Perrin's former officers and men were fighting in all the war theaters of the world.

Selection of the name for Perrin Field honored a man whose contribution to the Air Forces was his life itself. Lieutenant Colonel Elmer D. Perrin, after whom the field was named, was killed June 21, 1941, in the crash of a bomber he was testing for the Air Forces.

Born in Boerne, Texas, in 1896, Colonel Perrin enlisted in the army as a private during World War I and served in the 165th Depot Brigade, later transferring to the aviation section of the Signal Corps.

Commissioned in 1918 as a Second Lieutenant, he began a colorful career as a flying officer. He devoted his entire life to development of the Air Forces.

He saw duty at Scott Field, Illinois; Brooks Field, Texas; Fairfield, Ohio; Garden City, Long Island, New York; March Field, California; Kelly Field, Texas; Carlstrom Field, Florida; Camp Nichols, Philippine Islands; Duncan Field, Texas; Maxwell Field, Alabama; and Mitchell Field, New York.

Rated as a command pilot and combat observer, Colonel Perrin was sent to Baltimore, Maryland, in October, 1939, for duty as assistant district supervisor for the Eastern Air Corps Procurement District, as well as Air Corps representative at the Glenn L. Martin Company. He died in a crash during the acceptance test of a bomber there.

COMMANDING OFFICERS

Perrin Field has been fortunate in its Commanding Officers. The men pictured on this page guided the work of the post between the dates shown under their names. All outstanding men in the Army Air Forces, Perrin's commanders successively developed the station into one of the best basic pilot training fields in the nation.

HEADQUARTERS
ARMY AIR FORCES PILOT SCHOOL (BASIC)
SHERMAN, TEXAS

11 September, 1943.

To the Personnel at Perrin Field, Texas:

1. In relinquishing command of Perrin Field I desire to express my appreciation for the loyal and cheerful cooperation each member of the command has given me during my brief tour of duty as Commanding Officer.

2. Whatever success I have had as Commanding Officer at Perrin Field can be attributed to your confidence and support. Without these, no commander may hope to succeed.

3. My successor is an officer with a long and distinguished career and with your support, which I know you will give, Perrin Field will continue to contribute its important part in winning this war.

CHAS. G. PEARCY,
Colonel, Air Corps,
Commanding.

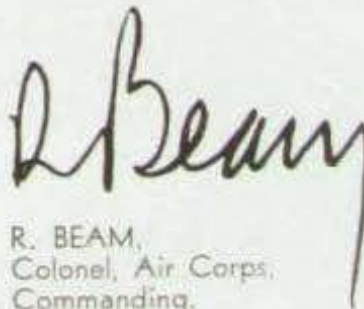

23 September, 1943.

Headquarters, Perrin Field, Sherman, Texas

To the Personnel at Perrin Field, Sherman, Texas:

1. In assuming command of Perrin Field I realize that I am becoming the head of as fine a group of officers and men as anyone could hope for. I feel most fortunate and hope that I can command and administer you in as high a degree of efficiency as my predecessors.

2. I trust I will so carry out my obligation that I can depend upon your sincere loyalty and support.

R. BEAM,
Colonel, Air Corps,
Commanding.

ROSENHAM BEAM

COLONEL, AIR CORPS

Commanding

Perrin Field's Commanding Officer, Colonel Rosenham Beam, directs the activities of the pilot school with the benefit of thirty years of service in the Air Forces and valuable experience gained in helping to plan the invasion of North Africa. Later he was on hand with the American invasion forces, commanding General George S. Patton's air support. He also commanded the important Fifth Army Airborne Training Center; supervised the training of the 82nd Airborne Division; and received the praise of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill for the efficient manner in which he conducted the air defense of the historic Roosevelt-Churchill conference at Casablanca.

As testimony to his accomplishments in aviation, Colonel Beam holds medals from the Cuban government and from the Sultan of Morocco. He was a personal friend of General Billy Mitchell, whom he aided in the 1921 bombing tests which proved the airplane master of the battleship. The Colonel is rated as a command pilot and as a combat observer. He has more than 4,000 flying hours to his credit.

A native of Bardstown, Ky., Colonel Beam has held important positions in the Army's air arm in Washington, D. C.; at various Air Force headquarters in the States; in the Philippines and in Panama. He has served as the Inspector General of the First Air Force, commanded the 88th Squadron in 1920 and was chief of staff of the Ninth Air Force at New Orleans in 1942.

While Colonel Beam was a Major he attended the Command and General Staff School for two years. He is a veteran of World War I, being assigned to a pursuit squadron during that first war. He also was in the U. S. Army Expedition which chased Pancho Villa out of New Mexico and across the border.
