PREFACE

THE languages spoken on the North-Western Frontier of India—in Laghman, Kafirstan, the Indus Kohistan, Chitral, Gilgit, and Kashmir—are very little known. In preparing the chapters dealing with them in the Linguistic Survey of India, I was met by a difficulty of classification. I was unable to satisfy myself as to whether they were of Indian or Eranian origin. The present work is an attempt to solve this question. It will be observed that I have come to the conclusion that these languages, which I group together under the name of 'Modern Paśācī,' form a third, independent, branch of the great Aryan family, and that they are neither Eranian nor Indian, but something between both. They seem to have left the parent stem after the Indo-Aryan languages, but before all the typical Eranian characteristics, which we meet in the Avesta, had become developed.

As regards the internal grouping of the languages of this family, it will be seen that my arrangement closely agrees with that of Professor E. Kuhn in his article Die Verwandtschaftsverhältnisse der Hindukush Dialekte, on p. 29 et seq., of the Album Kern. When that article first appeared I was not prepared to agree with it in all respects, but the further researches made by me in the preparation of this volume, have shown me that when I ventured to differ from that distinguished scholar he was right and I was wrong. On the other hand, the additional information contained in these pages will, I think, show Professor Kuhn that the languages of the Dard Group are more nearly connected to the Kāfir languages than he has hitherto admitted. Some of the resemblances between Kāsmīrī and Veron are very striking.

I trust that materials herein contained will assist scholars in the interpretation of the inscriptions found in the localities where these languages are or were once spoken. They have already thrown considerable light on the diction of the Shāhbāzgarhī inscription of Asōka.

THE PIŚĀCA LANGUAGES OF NORTH-WESTERN INDIA

PART I GENERAL ACCOUNT

CHAPTER I INTRODUCTORY

PROFESSOR PISCHEL has described the main peculiarities of Paiśācī Prakrit and of its sub-dialect, Cūlikā-Paiśācikā, on pp. 27 ff. of his Prakrit Grammar. He considers Paiśācī to be an independent dialect of North-Western India, and draws attention to points of agreement between it, Dard, Kāfir, and Romany. Miklosich¹ had already noticed the apparent connexion between Dard and Gipsy in 1874, and Pischel² had so early as 1883 suggested the relationship of these with Paiśācī. He lays stress on the facts that not only are there phonetic coincidences, but that also the lost Paiśācī work, the Bṛhatkathā, was particularly popular in Kāśmīr, and had been paraphrased by Sōmadēva and Kṣēmēndra, both of whom were Kāśmīrīs.³

² Deutsche Rundschau, xxxvi. (Berlin, 1883), p. 368.

³ Mr. Tawney informs me that the publication of Dr. Stein's translation of the Rājataranṅgiṇī has shown him that the Kathāsaritsāgara,

To these coincidences may be added the Kāśmīr tradition preserved in the Nilamata Purāṇa.¹ According to this, Kāśmīr was originally inhabited by Nāgas. Kaśyapa wished to introduce men, but the Nāgas objected. Kaśyapa then cursed them, and ordered them to dwell with Piśācas. Finally relenting, he arranged that the country should be inhabited during the six months of winter by Piśācas 'from an island in the sand-ocean, six yōjanas long,' and that men should then slay the Piśācas, and dwell in the land for the rest of the year. At the commencement of winter the men were again to emigrate, and leave the country to a new set of Piśācas. After four yugas, a Brāhmaṇ, Candra-dēva by name, learned certain rites which delivered the country not only from Piśācas, but also from excessive cold in winter.

If there is any truth at the bottom of this legend, the Piśācas must have been hardy northerners, accustomed to cold. At the present day the country to the north of Kāśmīr, with Gilgit for its centre, is inhabited by Šīns (Dards), and the legend points to a long contest between them and the 'men'—i.e., immigrants from India—for the possession of the Happy Valley. This entirely accords with the linguistic conditions at the present day. The language of the Šīns, or Šīnā, is one of those which Pischel has connected with Paisācī. The Kāśmīrī language itself, though in the main Indian in character, has at its base a considerable Šīnā vocabulary. The commonest words, such as those for 'father,' 'mother,' 'I,' 'thou,' are of Šīnā, not Indian, origin.

In the following pages an attempt is made to compare all these languages with each other, and to test their the well-known Sanskrit version of the Br̥hatkathā, exhibits an intimate knowledge of the geography of Kāśmīr.

¹ Cf. Bühler, Detailed Report of a Tour in Search of Sanskrit MSS. made in Kāśmīr . . . J.R.A.S., Bo., 1877. Also, see Index to Dr. Stein's translation of the Rāja-taraṅgiṇī, s.v. Piśāca. By tradition, Piśācas were eaters of raw flesh, and cannibals. Regarding cannibal legends in the modern Piśāca country, see the present writer's Piśāca = 'Ωμοφάγος, in J.R.A.S., 1905, pp. 285 ff.

alleged relationship with Paiśācī. I think that I am justified in saying that nearly every characteristic of that form of speech, as recorded by the Prakrit grammarians, is present in them. I therefore consider myself justified in classing them together under the name of 'Modern Paiśācī.' I also endeavour to give materials sufficient to enable us to decide as to their position in regard to other Aryan languages.

While we meet frequent instances of phonetic conditions which can only be paralleled in Indian languages, we also meet others which are equally distinctively Eranian. Such are the changes of $d > l$ (only occasional in India); of $dv > d$ (ditto); of $sk > c$; and the preservation of consonantal groups having a sibilant for the first member. At the same time, there are certain typical Eranian modifications which are entirely wanting in Modern Paiśācī. For instance, there is no example of the Avesta change of Aryan sm to hm.

On the other hand, they possess marked phonetic characteristics of their own. Such are the regular retention of unprotected medial consonants and the frequent hardening of sonants; the tendency to aspirate a final surd, and, at the same time, the entire absence of sonant aspirates; the retention of a short vowel before a simplified conjunct consonant; the probable non-existence of any distinction between cerebral and dental consonants; the change of medial $t > r$; the peculiar and characteristic treatment of the letter r; the frequent palatalization of original gutturals, cerebrals, and dentals, and even of l; and the treatment of conjunct consonants, such as $tr, tm > t, ty > t$, and $sm > sp$ or s.

In regard to accident there is the same uncertainty. Some of the grammatical forms are peculiar to Modern Paiśācī, others can best be explained from Eranian, and others from Indian analogies. Attention will be drawn to these in the proper place.

In vocabulary, again, while nearly the whole is Aryan, one half is strikingly Eranian, and the other half equally strikingly Indian. Most of the few non-Aryan words can be traced to the Burušaskī spoken in Hunza-Nagar. Such, for instance, is the group of words meaning 'iron.' We are thus led to the suggestion that the Nāgas, who are said to have preceded the Pīśācas as the aboriginal inhabitants of Kaśmīr, may have been representatives of this tribe.

Although these languages show affinities with both Indian and Eranian, they cannot be called mixed forms of speech. The twofold affinity is part of their essence, and exists alike in phonetics, in grammar, and in vocabulary. It is not a mere instance of word-borrowing.

We are therefore driven to the conclusion that the Modern Pīśācī languages are neither of Indian nor of Eranian origin, but form a third branch of the Aryan stock, which separated from the parent stem after the branching forth of the original of the Indian languages, but before the Eranian languages had developed all their peculiar characteristics. After the separation, the inaccessible home in which their speakers settled, and the inhospitality alike of the country and of its inhabitants kept them apart, and very fairly preserved the languages from contamination by those of allied origin. The country in which the Pīśācas settled was apparently originally inhabited by the ancestors of the present speakers of Burušaskī, whom they expelled or absorbed. Only on this theory can I explain the linguistic phenomena which present themselves.

We may here note that these Pīśācas sent colonies into the Panjāb proper, along the lower course of the Indus. They settled in the Kēkaya country—i.e., the Western Panjāb—and in the Vrācaḍa country, or Sindh. The modern vernaculars of these countries at the present day, Lahndā and Sindhī, have some of the characteristics of Modern Pīśācī. Such are the preservation of a medial unprotected t, the absence of compensatory lengthening, the interchange of cerebrals and dentals, and some of the pronominal forms. These languages are, however, in other respects purely Indian. There are also striking coincidences between Modern Paśācī and the language of the Shāhbāzgarhī inscription of Asōka.¹

The Eranian languages with which Modern Paśācī most closely agrees are those non-Persian East-Eranian speeches known as Ghalcah (properly 'Galcah') spoken in the Pāmirs immediately to the north of the Piśāca country, and Paštō. There are only occasional instances of agreement with Persian as against non-Persian. Such is the change of dv to d.

The Modern Paśācī languages dealt with in the following pages are as follows :

Kāfir, or Western, Group :

Bašgalī.

Wai-alā.

Veron, Presun, or Wasī-veri.

Paśai.²

Gawar-bati.

Kalāšā.

Khō-wār (strictly χō-wār) or Citrālī.

Dard, or Eastern, Group :

Šinā.

Kāśmirī.

Gārwi.

Maiyā.

These fall into the above three well-defined groups. Of the Kāfir languages, Bašgalī, Wai-alā, and Veron are the purest. There is another Kāfir language, named Aškund, about which nothing is yet known except the name. The three remaining have fallen somewhat under the influences of neighbouring forms of speech—Paśai under that of Paštō, ¹ See my Linguistic Relationship of the Shāhbāzgarhī Inscription, J.R.A.S., 1904, pp. 725 ff.

² Dr. Hoernle has suggested to me that the word 'Paśai' may be a modern form of 'Piśāca.' I have no historical reason for connecting these words, but the following pages will show that the derivation is, speaking from the point of view of phonetics, quite possible.

Kalāśā under that of Khō-wār, and Gawar-bati under those of Khō-war and Gār-wī. The only true member of the Dard group is Šīnā. The others are now Indian languages, having succumbed to the Sanskritizing influence of their powerful neighbours in the immediate south. Their basis is, however, Dard, and they frequently offer instances of typical Paiśācī characteristics. Gār-wī and Maiyā are two dialects selected from several which are together grouped elsewhere under the name of Kōhistānī. Khō-wār occupies an intermediate, and somewhat independent, position. It often shows striking points of agreement with the Ghalcah languages. Of the Kāfir languages, Veron is interesting as showing more signs of agreement with Eranian languages (e.g., the regular change of d to l) and with Cūlikā-Paiśācīkā (e.g., the change of b to p) than do the others. It is also noteworthy that in several points (e.g., the aspiration of a final surd) it agrees with Kāsmirī.

The localities in which the various languages are spoken are shown in the map prefixed to this volume.¹

The present work consists of two parts. The first gives a brief general account of the phonetic system, and describes the accident of each language in some detail. This is followed by a comparative vocabulary of selected words. The second part deals with the phonetic side of the question in considerable detail, discussing every phonetic phenomenon which has come under my notice.

Though I have quoted Avesta and Sanskrit words with great freedom in suggesting derivations, I in no way suggest that any word is derived from an old Eranian or Sanskrit original. I only quote them as showing the most nearly related ancient Aryan form, to whichever branch it may happen to belong. I trust that this will be clearly understood. I never derive from either Avesta or Sanskrit.

¹ Minor forms of speech, connected with Paśai and Gār-wī respectively, are Tirāhī once spoken in the Tirāh country, now inhabited by the Afrīdīs, and Dīrī of Dīr. I have not included these in the above list, as I have very little to say about them.

I only compare, although it may sometimes happen that for the sake of brevity of language I employ words which are often used elsewhere to suggest derivation. Derivations can only be made from the old Aryan language from which the speeches of the Avesta and Sanskrit are both sprung, and I have purposely abstained from reconstructing such a language. That every derivation proposed by me will meet with acceptance I do not expect, and I shall be the first to welcome corrections. But I think I may assume that, taken as a whole, my explanations amply prove the existence of the state of affairs which I have suggested in the preceding pages.

CHAPTER II

PAIŚĀCĪ AND CŪLIKĀ-PAIŚĀCIKĀ

BEFORE proceeding to the subject proper, I give an account of Paiśācī and Cūlikā-Paiśācīkā, based on the rules given by Hēma-candra.

In describing Paiśācī Prakrit, Hēma-candra takes Śaurasēnī Prakrit (a North-Western dialect) as his starting-point, and points out the particulars in which it differs from that dialect (IV., 323). In many respects Paiśācī represents an older stage of phonetic development than does Śaurasēnī, just as the latter represents an older stage than does Māhārāṣṭrī. As a convenient example we may quote the treatment of the letter t. Paiśācī retains a medial Sanskrit t unchanged; Śaurasēnī weakens it to d, while Māhārāṣṭrī elides it altogether. Paiśācī, indeed, carries the preference for hard consonants so far that it hardens an original d to t, and this preference is carried to an extreme in Cūlikā-Paiśācīkā, in which all soft consonants are hardened. It is necessary to add that Hēma-candra (iv. 327) states that according to some authorities Cūlika-Paiśācīkā does not harden soft consonants when they are initial or conjunct. Vararuci (x. 3) knows only one Paiśācī, which in its main features agrees with this second variety of Hēma-candra's Cūlikā-Paiśācīkā. It is of importance to bear this fact in mind throughout the analysis of Paiśācī given below; as, to save repetition, I shall not refer to it again, confining my remarks, so far as Cūlikā-Paiśācīkā is concerned, to Hēma-candra's first variety.

The following are, according to Hēma-candra, the points in which Paiśācī (including Cūlikā-Paiśācīkā) differs from Māhārāṣṭrī Prakrit in its treatment of Sanskrit words. I take Māhārāṣṭrī as the standard, as this is better known than Śaurasēnī. As my authority, I quote the sūtras in the grammar of Hēma-candra. Unless otherwise stated, the sūtras quoted are all taken from the fourth book. Forms marked with an asterisk are inferences from his rules, and are not specific quotations.

A. PHONETICS :

The only vowel change noted by Hēma-candra is that of r to i in -tisa for -dṛśa (317). On the other hand, in taṭṭhūna for dṛṣṭvā or, rather, darṣṭvāna(m)*, it has apparently become a (313), but tiṭṭha = dṛṣṭa.

The consonants k, g, c, j, t, d, p, y, and r, when medial, are not elided, as is usual in Mh. (324 ; I., 177). Similarly, medial kh, gh, th, dh, and bh do not become h (324 ; I., 187).

k remains unchanged even when medial, and does not become g, as sometimes in Mh. (324 ; I., 177, 182). ki does not become ci (324 ; I., 183). Thus, makara : marakata*, not maragaya ; kivāta*, not cilāa.

kh remains unchanged even when medial (324 ; I., 187). Thus, sukha*, not suha.

g remains unchanged even when medial (324 ; I., 177). Thus, sagara, not saara. In C.-Paiś., however, g becomes k (325). Thus, nakara for nagara.

gh remains unchanged even when medial (324 ; I., 187). Thus, mēgha*, not mēha. In C.-Paiś., however, gh becomes kh. Thus, mēkha (325).

c remains unchanged even when medial (324 ; I., 177). Thus, vacana, not vaana.

ch (cch) follows the usual Prakrit custom (323 ; 286).

j remains unchanged even when medial (324 ; I., 177). Thus, gaja*, not gaa. In C.-Paiś., however, j becomes c (325). Thus, rājā becomes rācā.

jñ becomes ññ, not ṇṇ or jj (303). Thus, paññā for praññā ; saññā for saiṇñā ; sarvañña for sarvajña ; ñāna for jñāna. The last example shows that at the commencement of a word ññ becomes ñ. In the declension of rājan, a king, jñ optionally becomes ciñ. Thus, gen. raññō or rāciñō (304).

jh follows the usual Prakrit custom, but in C.-Paiś. it becomes ch (323; 286; 325). Thus, C.-Paiś., cacchara, as compared with Mh., Ś., Paiś., jhajjhara, Skr., ghanjhara.

ṭ remains unchanged (324; I., 195). Thus, naṭa*, not naḍa. The syllable ṭu may optionally become tu in kuṭumbā or kutumbā (311).

ḍ remains unchanged (324; I., 202). Thus, garuḍa*, not garula. In C.-Paiś., however, ḍ becomes ṭ (325). Thus, taṭāka for taḍāga.

ḍh follows the usual Prakrit custom, but in C.-Paiś. it becomes ṭh (323; 286; 325). Thus, C.-Paiś., kāṭha, as compared with Skr. gāḍha.

ṇ always becomes n (306). Thus, guṇa-gaṇa-jutta for guṇa-gaṇa-yukta.

ṇy becomes ññ (305), not ṇṇ. Thus, puñña, not puṇṇa, for punya.

t remains unchanged even when medial (307), and does not become d as in Ś. (260), nor is it elided as in Mh. (I., 177). Thus bhaḡaratī; parratī for pārvatī; sataṃ for śataṃ.

th remains unchanged even when medial (324; I., 187). It does not optionally change to dh, as in Ś. (267). Thus, nātha*, not nāha or ṇādhā.

d becomes t even after n (307); it is not elided, when medial, as in Mh. (I., 177). Thus, matana for madana; tāmōtaru for dāmōdara. A good example in C.-Paiś. is kaiṃtappa for kandarpa (325). In numerals d does not become r (324; I., 219); 'eleven' is therefore ēkātasa*, not ēvaha, for ēkādaśu. Cf. Shb. badaya, twelve; tidaśa, thirteen.

dh remains unchanged even when medial (324; I., 187), but in C.-Paiś. it becomes th (325). Thus Paiś. āyudha; C.-Paiś. mathura for madhura; thūḷī for dhūḷī.

n remains unchanged; it does not become ṇ (306). Thus, guṇēna for guyēna; matana for madana; natthāna, having destroyed.

ny becomes ññ (305). Thus, kaññakā for kanyakā; abhimaññū for abhimanyu.

p, even when medial, remains unchanged, and does not become r (324; I., 177, 231). Thus, pāpa, not pāra.

ph, even when medial, remains unchanged, and does not become bh or h (324; I., 236). Saphala thus becomes saphala*, and does not become sabhaḷa or sahaḷa.

b remains unchanged even when medial, and does not become r (324; I., 237). We thus get bāḷaka, a child; and sabaḷa, not savaḷa, for śabala. In C.-Paiś., however, b becomes p (325). Thus, pāḷaka for bāḷaka.

bh remains unchanged even when medial, and does not become h (324; I., 187). Thus we get sōbhana, not sōhana; bhāriyā for bhāryā. In Ś. (269) the bh in bharati is optionally retained, so that we can have either bhōdi or hōdi. According to H.-c., we ought to have only bhōti in Paiś., but one of the examples of 319 is hōti, not bhōti. On the other hand, 318 gives bhoti. In C.-Paiś. bh becomes ph (325). Thus, raphasa for rabhasa; rañphā for rambhā; phakavatī for bhagaratī.

m remains unchanged. It is not changed to ~ as sometimes occurs in Prakrit (324; I., 178). Thus, matana for madana; ramati.

y remains unchanged. It does not become j (324; I., 177, 245). Thus, payacchasē for prayacchasē; yati for yadi. In this connexion it may be mentioned that S. jjēva is represented by yyēva (e.g., 321). The word hṛdaya becomes hitapaka in Paiś. H.-c. (310) explains this by saying that y is changed to p. Concerning the compound ry see below.

r remains unchanged. It is not liable to change to l, as often occurs in Prakrit (324; I., 254). Thus, tēvara for dēvara; rāciñā, by a king. In C.-Paiś., however, r may optionally be changed to l. Thus, gōrī or gōlī (sic) for gaurī; ludda or rudda for rudra (326).

ry is either changed to jj, as in Ś., or is sometimes retained under the form of riy (314, 266). I have not noted any instances of the alleged optional Ś. change to yy, although Ś. has optionally ry corresponding to País. riy (266). Examples are sujja for sūrya; bhāriyā for bhāryā.

rv becomes, as in Mh., rv. Thus, sarvassa for sarvasya (316). I have not met any change corresponding to the Ś. purava for pūrva (270).

l becomes ḷ (308). Thus, sīḷa for śīla, kūḷa, jaḷa, saḷiḷa. This rule does not apply to the l resultant from r in C.-País. (326), or to ll (ucchallaṃti, 326).

r remains unchanged (324; I., 177). Thus, tēvara for dēvara.

ś becomes s (309). Thus, sōbhati, sasī for śasī, sakka for śakra, saiṃkha for śaiṃkha. The ordinary rule is therefore followed.

ṣ also becomes s, as in Mh. (309). Thus, visama, visāna for viṣāṇa. In the word for 'six,' ṣ does not become ch, as in Mh. (324; I., 265). Thus, 'sixth' would be saṭṭha*, not chaṭṭha. So also for the other words mentioned in I., 265.

ṣṭ usually becomes ṭṭh, but is sometimes retained under the form of saṭa (314). Thus, tiṭṭha for dṛṣṭa; kaṣaṭa for kaṣṭa. It becomes ṭṭh or tṭh in gerundives (313). Thus, naṭṭhūna or natthūna for naṣṭvā; taṭṭhūna or tatthūna for dṛṣṭvā.

sn is retained, but a vowel is inserted between the two members of the compound, as is sometimes the case with ry and ṣṭ (314). Thus, sināta for snāta, sunusā for snusā.

B. ACCIDENCE :

The accidence of Paísācī closely follows that of Śaura-sēnī, allowance being made for the phonetic system of the former. H.-c. accordingly gives very little direct information on the subject. What he says is as follows :

The suffix of the ablative of nouns with a-bases is āto or ātu (321). Thus, tāva ca tiē tūrāto yyēva tiṭṭhō—i.e., tāvaca tayā dūrāl ēva dṛṣṭaḥ; tumāto or tumātu, from you; mamāto or mamātu, from me. Compare the S. ablative in ādo, ādu (276).

As shown above, the ablative singular of the first two personal pronouns is mamāto or mamātu, and tumāto or tumātu.

The instrumental singular of the pronouns tad and idam is (masc. and neut.) nēna, (fem.) nāē (322, a different base).

In the conjugation of verbs, the 3rd sg. parasmaipada and ātmanēpada both end in ti (318). Thus, bhōti, nēti, tēti, from roots bhū, nī, and dā respectively. But when the conjugational base ends in a, the termination may be either ti or tē (319). Thus, lapati or lapatē, acchati or acchatē, gacchati or gacchatē, ramati or ramatē. This is a reproduction of the corresponding rules for Ś. (273, 274), with the Pāiś. preservation of t.

In the third person singular of the future of both voices, the termination ēyya (i.e., the optative) is substituted (320). Thus, tān taṭṭhūna cintitaṃ raññā kā ēsā hurēyya—i.e., tān dṛṣṭvā cintitaṃ rāṅñā kaiṣā bhavēt. Here bhavēt is used for bhavīsyati. So H.-c., but the example is not convincing.

The gerundive ends in tūna (312), corresponding to the S. dūna (271). Thus, gaṃtūna for gatvā, raṃtūna for ratvā, hasitūna for hasitrā, paṭhitūna for paṭhitvā, kathitūna for kathitrā. When, however, the gerundive originally ended in ṣṭvā, this becomes ṭṭhūna or tṭhūna (313). Thus, naṭṭhūna or natṭhūna for naṣṭvā, taṭṭhūna or tatṭhūna for dṛṣṭvā.

The suffix of the passive is īyya (315). Thus, gīyyatē for gīyatē, dīyyatē for dīyatē, ramīyyatē for ramyatē, paṭhīyyatē for paṭhyatē. The passive of the √ kar, do, is, however, kīratē (316).

CHAPTER III

PHONETIC SYSTEM

THE alphabet of modern Paisācī is as follows :

a, ā, â (as in 'all'), i, ī, u, ū, e, ē, ai, o, ō, au, oi (as in 'oil').

~ (the nasal sound. May be placed over any vowel.)

k, kh, χ (Prs. ξ), g, γ (Prs. ξ), n (= \dot{n}).

c, ch, j, z, ź (= Prs. \dot{j}), n (= \dot{n}).

č (= ts), čh, ĵ (= dz), n.

ṭ, ṭh, ḍ, ṛ, ṇ (strongly cerebralized. Pronounced ~r as in Pš.).

t, th, θ (= Arabic θ), d, δ (Prs. $\dot{\delta}$), n.

ś, s, h.

Of the above, the existence of ṭ, ṭh, and ḍ is doubtful. See below. The letters are written in the order adopted by me for index purposes. I have placed z and ź with the palatals, instead of among the spirants, on account of their close connexion with j. I have followed Gray in adopting c, ch, and j for the pure palatals, and č, čh, and ĵ for their corresponding affricatæ, thus reversing the ordinary German custom. In Kś. a dot is placed under a vowel epenthetically affected by the vowel of the following syllable. In the same language and elsewhere half-pronounced vowels are written above the line. Thus, māraṇ^u. The Skr. ऋ is transliterated r̄. The cerebral ऌ is transliterated ṛ. An acute accent indicates the stress-syllable.

In the following brief sketch of the phonetics I have given no examples. These will be found in Part II. of the work.

With regard to the vowels, there is plenty of evidence as to changes of quantity, but this must be received with caution. The words were not collected by trained observers, and, except in the cases of Kś. and P., the diacritical marks were often omitted. It is, therefore, always possible that a vowel shown as short is really long. So far as materials are available, I have done my best to check all the quantities, but the checking has not been so thorough as I should wish.

Changes of quality are common. Here we are on firmer ground. The vowel a can become i or e, and u or o. The latter change is very frequent, except in P., and generally takes place through the sound ā, which is often heard in East Eranian languages. The change to the palatal series is commonly due to epenthesis.

When a compound consonant is simplified, a preceding short vowel is sometimes lengthened in compensation, but usually remains unchanged. Many examples will be found in the following pages. A good one is the set of words for 'camel' (see Part II., § 20). This avoidance of compensation may be considered as typical of these languages, and also occurs in the extreme North-Western Indo-Aryan languages Lahndā and Sindhī.

Aphæresis and syncope both occur. The latter is most common in B., where it gives rise to some curious combinations of consonants at the beginning of a word.

Prothesis, both of a and i, is not unfrequent, not only to aid the pronunciation of an initial compound consonant, but also before simple consonants where no aid to pronunciation is necessary. In the purest Kāfir languages (B., W., and V.), i or y is often inserted in the middle of a word before u, just as some English people pronounce the word 'Luey,' 'Lyuey.'

Other vowel changes are made in the same group of languages for the sake of euphony. I have detected signs of consonantal sandhi in B., but have not sufficient materials to discover its principles. On this point I may quote the following extract from the preface to Colonel Davidson's Notes on the Bashgālī (Kāfir) Language :¹

'Many letters are interchangeable, thus $z = \check{z}$ or \check{c} , as $z\check{m}$, $\check{z}\check{m}$, $\check{c}\check{m}$, snow ; $j = \check{z}$ or c , as $man\check{j}\check{t}$, $man\check{c}\check{t}$, man ; $j\check{a}r\check{l}m$, $\check{z}\check{a}r\check{l}m$, I will kill. Letters are often transposed, as $bagr\check{a}m$, $barg\check{a}m$; $katrawor$, $kartawor$; $br\check{o}bur$, $bar\check{a}bar$, $b\check{o}rbur$. In words such as $p\check{s}tarak$ the p is often dispensed with. For the sake of euphony and scansion, words undergo a great variety of changes. Thus, "a man" may be $man\check{j}\check{t}$, $man\check{c}\check{t}$, $m\check{o}\check{s}$, $moc\check{t}$, and even $mun\check{s}\check{t}$; "very much" may be $bluk$, $biluk$, $biliuk$, $bilu\check{y}$; "good" or "well" is $l\check{e}$, les , $lest$, $lesta$. Short vowels are sometimes lengthened, and long ones shortened ; sometimes a syllable is dropped, and at other times one is inserted ; thus, "female" may be $str\check{r}$, $\check{s}tr\check{r}$, $\check{s}t\check{a}r\check{r}$, $i\check{s}tr\check{r}$; for "to-day" may be $p\check{s}tarak$, $\check{s}tarak$, $\check{s}tak$, $stak$, $stag$; "for the sake of," $du\check{g}\check{a}$, $g\check{a}$, $th\check{a}$, $k\check{e}$, $d\check{e}$; for "he" or "it is" there are at least ten words, and for "he" or "it becomes," at least six words.

'In very many words I found it impossible to decide whether the vowels should be long or short, whether certain vowels should be nasalized or not, and whether, in certain words, the r and t should be hard [i.e., cerebral] or not. Great varieties of pronunciation were met with.'

The above remarks apply to all the Kāfir languages which I have examined, so that it must be understood that at present it is not possible to obtain more than an approximate idea of their phonetic systems.

In Kaśmīr there is a similar uncertainty in the pronunciation of the vowels. Even paṇḍits, when speaking Sanskrit, pronounce medial and initial i as e or ye , and final i and \bar{i} as a German \ddot{u} . In their mouths the sound of u approaches that of \bar{o} or o , while, on the other hand, e is pronounced like i , \bar{i} or \check{r} , and \bar{o} is with difficulty distinguished from \bar{u} . See Bühler's Detailed Report, already quoted on p. 2, pp. 25, 26.

¹ I have altered the transliteration of this extract to make it agree with that employed in the following pages.

When competent observers have drawn attention to the indefinite character of the vowel-scale in Buṣḡalī and Kāśmīrī, it will be readily understood that the same state of affairs exists in the other Modern Pāisācī languages.

With regard to consonants, surds, whether aspirated or not, generally remain unchanged. There are, however, some special rules for particular languages.

When a word in V. or Kś. ends in an unaspirated surd consonant, the latter is always aspirated. Thus, final $k > kh$, final $c > ch$, final $t > th$, final $ṭ > ṭh$, and final $p > ph$. There are occasional instances of the same law elsewhere.

A palatal vowel or semi-vowel following a consonant often palatalizes it. This is the regular rule in Kś. Thus, in that language, where so situated, $k > c$ (so also in W.).

$kh > ch$ [so also even without a palatal following, V. and W.

($> ś$), Ś. ($> c, z$)].

$g > j$ (or in B., V., and G. $z, ś, ṛ$).

$t > c$.

$ṭh > ch$.

$ḍ > j$.

$t > ṛ$ (also in B. and V., and $ṛh$ in W.).

$th > ṛh$.

$d > z$ (also j in B., W., and Kh., and z in B., Kh., and Ś.).

None of these languages have any sonant aspirates (gh , jh , $q̄h$, dh , or bh), except in one or two borrowed words. They are always disaspirated, and often further weakened. This is typical.

As in Shb., cerebral and dental mutes appear to be interchangeable. So far as I can ascertain, in all the languages except Kś. (which is strongly Sanskritized), P. (which is subject to the influence of its neighbour Pś.), and to a less extent the semi-Indian Gār. and M., there is no real distinction between these two classes of mutes, and there is only one class, as in Eranian—a semi-cerebral. The available materials were all collected by persons educated according to Indian sound-ideas, and in recording these semi-cerebral sounds they came under the influence of the personal equation. To some these sounds appeared to be cerebrals, and were recorded as such; and to others they appeared to be dentals, and were recorded as such. I have in my possession two closely-agreeing versions of the parable of the Prodigal Son, recorded in Gilgit Ś. by two independent observers. Identical words occurring in each are quite frequently recorded with cerebral letters by one and with dental letters by the other. This was not due to carelessness, for in other respects the texts were most carefully written. In the following pages cerebrals and dentals have been written as they were found in the materials supplied, but it should be remembered that in most of the languages it is very doubtful if there is any distinction at all. Cerebrals are entirely ignored both by General Biddulph and by Dr. Leitner in their accounts of these languages.

In V., Ś., and M., when the k-suffix comes between two vowels it is weakened to -g-, and in Kh. it is further weakened to -γ-. In one instance (K. gro < krōḍa) kr > gr.

The letter k is sometimes elided at the beginning of a word.

Kh usually remains unchanged, except in Kāfir, where it is disaspirated. When final, in V., it of course remains unchanged.

The letter c is sometimes changed to the corresponding affricata č, and in Kāfir is liable to be further weakened to š and ž.

In Kh. medial t regularly becomes r, and, as this occurs in the third person singular of verbs, the change is very frequent. A final t is often apocopated in the other languages, but not in Kh.

The letter ɣ follows the Indian custom in the Eastern languages, and becomes b or w. In Kāfir ɣ sometimes becomes k before t or č.

We have seen that in Kś. ʈh is liable to be palatalized to ch. In Gār. and M., on the other hand, c or ch becomes kh in words of Š. origin. When ch is derived from kh, it is sometimes further weakened to š or ž in Kāfir.

As regards sonant letters, they, too, are often retained, but examples are wanting for several medial letters. Initial g usually remains g, but, as in Eranian, in the Kāfir group there is a tendency to change it to ž, š, or č.

Initial j and z are usually unchanged, but d (medial) becomes r or v.

The letter d usually remains unchanged, but in Kh. and Kāfir languages it is liable to become j under the influence of a following i. In such cases, in Kāfir, it is sometimes further changed to z or ž. In V., d, whether initial or medial, regularly becomes l. The same change occasionally occurs elsewhere. This is a regular East Eranian change. Cf. the Kś. change of l to j. I have not found any instance of the Paiś. change to t.

In Š. δ becomes θ or t. Compare the change of dh in C.-Paiś. In G. it becomes θl, and occasionally l elsewhere. The intermediate form θl is instructive.

When bh, according to the general rule, is disaspirated, it sometimes becomes b in the Eastern languages; but this letter is usually vocalized to ō or dropped.

Nasals, as a rule, are well preserved. In V. and Š. (and also once in B.) ṅg becomes g. Usually it remains as ṅg or becomes n. The palatal nasal ṅ alone shows a tendency to disappear. The dental n generally remains unchanged, but in the West there is a strong tendency to cerebralize it, when medial or final, to ṅ, and thence to change it to ṅ̃ or ṅ̄. M is very rarely changed to mb or b. In Kś. and V. it is elided in the word kumāra.

The letter y is sometimes retained, as in non-Persian Eranian, but is more generally vocalized to i or e.

The letter r undergoes many important changes, and here it will be necessary to consider the letter not only when it is standing alone, but also when it is in combination with other consonants. It is often preserved unchanged, though in the Kāfir dialects it frequently changes to r, whether an ŋ or t or d follows it or not.

In quite a number of cases it shows an extraordinary readiness to become a palatal letter. This mainly occurs in Š., but is also found elsewhere. Thus in B r and ž are occasionally interchangeable; in Š. r > ž or j, and jr > ž; tr and θr > c in Š., Gār., and M. (so in Ghalcāh), > ch in V., > š in P., Š., and M., and > ž in Š.; str > tr in Kś., > c or čh in Š., and > š in G., which is sharpened to s in Gār.; dr > ž in B., and Š., and z in V.; br > jr or ž in Š., > ž in M., and > j in Gār. With these we may compare the facts that in many Indian languages (and also in Kś., Gār., and M.) tr often becomes (t)t or (t)th, and that in Modern Pāśācī th and c, ch, are often interchanged. We may also compare the Kś. change of l followed by a palatal vowel or semivowel to j. It is noteworthy that in the Tibetan of Bāltistān, immediately to the east of the Š. area, r sometimes apparently becomes š. This tends to show that the palatalization of r was a peculiarity of the language spoken over the whole of this country before it was occupied by speakers of Pāśācī or Tibetan.

We have said that r, standing alone, often remains unchanged. It also usually remains unchanged in the following: gr, tr, ndr, pr, br (Kāfir and Kh.), štr, str (K.). Kr becomes kṛ in K., and r > l in the following: gr > l (once in M.); tr also > θl, ṭhl, lt or hl (in P. and G.); dr > l (once in M.); br > bl, l (P. and G.); str > šl, hl (P.). There is no example of the letter r, standing by itself, becoming l.

In the Kāfir languages, and also to a less extent elsewhere, r, whether medial or final, is very often elided. This occurs so frequently that it may be taken as typical of the whole family of languages. The only members in which I have not noticed it are Kh. and Kś.

Besides the above-mentioned compounds, the following instances occur of original compounds in which r is a final member. We have seen that tr is usually either preserved or palatalized. In one case, in B., it is changed to ʈr, which is probably due only to the personal equation of the original scribe (see above).¹ In Kś. Gār. and M., the languages most under Indian influence, it is liable to become t or ʈh. The G. and P. changes to θl, ʈhl, hl, and lt, above quoted, are also noteworthy. Av. θr closely follows tr. It becomes r in Kh. and ɾ in W., while in the word for 'brother' it is almost everywhere elided. Pr, when initial, is preserved except in V., where it becomes p. Br occasionally becomes b, w, or m, especially in the East. The only Western example is V. way-ch, a brother. Although generally preserved, ṣtr is rarely changed to χ or k. The Indian compound ṣtr follows Indian analogies, and is represented by (t)ʈh or (t)t.

In compounds of which r is the first member, there is (as in Shb.) a strong tendency to transfer the r to a preceding consonant. Thus, karṇa > K. krō̃, parṇa > Kh. pron, karma > Š. krom, dīrgha > K. drīga, and so on. Most often, however, the r is elided. Thus, rṇ generally becomes ṇ or n in the East, and ṛ, ṛ̃, ṝ, or r, in the West. The compound rt follows the Eranian Pš. in becoming ɾ, and so does rd in P. and G. In K. and Kh. rd remains unchanged, but elsewhere the r is dropped and d remains. Rṣ > ṣ or s, and rṣt > ṣt or t in the East, and ṣt, t, ṣ, or č in the West. As usual, we need not lay any stress on the distinction between t and t.

The letter l usually remains unchanged, but is now and then changed to ɾ or r. In Kś. it becomes j when followed by a palatal vowel or semivowel.

The treatment of v is uncertain. Sometimes it is retained as v or w, and sometimes it becomes b or m. In V. the resultant b is twice hardened to p (cf. C.-Paiś). When medial, v is very frequently changed to a labial vowel.

Except in B., V., P., and Kś., the sibilants Indian ś and ¹ Compare, however, the Sindhī change of tr to ʈr, and the Vṛācaḍa Apabhraṃśa change of initial t to ʈ.

Eranian š are both represented by š. In one dialect of P. it is regularly changed to χ (Cf. Pš. χ), and this change is also observable in Kś., in which š, the suffix of the second person singular, has become kh. In B. and V., while š is sometimes retained, both ś and š equally often appear as c, č, ž, or even s. The change to s also occurs sporadically elsewhere. In Kś. an Indian ś is regularly represented by h.

The Indian ś usually also appears as š, but in Kś., when uncompounded, it appears as h. Indian or Eranian s generally remains unchanged, but in the Kāfir group it becomes š when followed by a palatal vowel. In Kś. and Š. it sometimes becomes h.

The letter h is generally retained, but in Kś. the secondary h, corresponding to ś or š, again reverts to š when followed by a palatal vowel or semivowel.

Turning to compound consonants (except those containing an r, which have been already dealt with), attention may again be drawn to the rareness of compensatory lengthening. The double kk, as a rule, becomes k, but in the only instance noted in Š. it becomes nk. The frequent compound kš is generally represented by c in the West, and by ch in the East. In G. it is further changed to th. In other languages there are also other secondary changes. Av. $\chi^š > š$, except in Kh., where we have ch.

We have seen that in V. v sometimes becomes p. Similarly, in that language cv $>$ ps.

A very typical change is that of tm to t (as in Shb. and sometimes in India). Only in Kś. do we have the usual Indian change to p. As already stated, in Kś. ty $>$ č. Elsewhere it becomes t, t, or th; never c, as in India. This change, together with the frequent preservation of tr, is quite typical of Mod. Pāś., and is foreign to Indian and Eranian.

Eranian θw becomes t, except in V., where, as in similar cases, we have p as the resultant.

The compound dv follows in the West the Indian and non-Persian Eranian in becoming w or b, but in the East, and occasionally elsewhere, it follows Persian Eranian and becomes d. Except in the Kāfir languages, nt generally becomes nd; but in Gār. and M. it is preserved in the present participle, and in Kś. in the same form it becomes n. In Kāfir, nt > tt, or t.¹ The change to n is both Indian and Eranian.

The change of pt to t is the general one. The custom of Persian dialects (as distinguished from standard Prs.) and of most Indian languages is followed. B. and V. change it, in one word, to kt and to kʻ respectively.

As regards compounds with sibilants, sk becomes kh in Kś., and c in Kh. For the latter we may compare Av. sk > Pś. c.

The compound št generally survives, though it sometimes becomes χ or k. So, in the Kāfir group, Indian st is represented by st or št (V. has once st); but in Š. it usually becomes ʃh, š, or š-t (cf. Pāiś. kaśaʃa), and in the other languages, on the Indian frontier, it becomes (t)ʃh, (t)t, in the Indian fashion. In the Kāfir group st becomes again št (with one occurrence, again, of st in V.). In the East we have the Indian change to (t)th, (t)t. In P., G., K., and Kh., the st is preserved. In one instance—in P.—st has become r.

In the Kāfir group the resultant št, in all the above changes, is liable to a further secondary change to (s)s—a development which is also common in Eranian.

The compounds štr, stʻr, and str have been dealt with under the head r. They closely follow the foregoing.

It will be observed that, except in the East, where the languages have come under Indian influence, the tendency is to preserve a sibilant plus dental under the form št or st. This is Eranian, not Indian.

Forms in which p is the second member are Indian sp

and Eranian sp. Both are treated in the same manner, following Eranian, and not Indian, analogies. The latter generally, and the former always, becomes ś, which may further become č or h. In B. and Ś., however, sp is retained, with a slight change, as šp.

The treatment of sm by V. and Kh. is worthy of special notice. It is changed in Kh. to sp., and in V. is either retained or further weakened to s.

The compounds śy and sy are treated as we might expect, the sibilant in each case being palatalized in various ways. Śl > hl, and the r of sra is changed to a vowel.

The compound hv becomes (b)bh on the Indian frontier, and b or p elsewhere. The change to p occurs in W. There is no instance noted of the compound in V., where we should expect a similar result.

Retention of Surds and Hardening of Sonants.—It will be remembered that the retention of surds and sonants is a prominent feature in Hēmacandra's Pāśācī, and that the hardening of sonants is typical of Vararuci's Pāśācī and of Cūlikā-Pāśācīkā. In Hēmacandra's Pāś., moreover, d > t. With one exception, all these are extremely frequent in the Modern Pāśācī languages. We have instances of the retention of k, kh (disaspirated), g (only initial; no examples of non-initial), t, d (as r), t, d, dh, p, and b. We have also instances of the change of g > k, and b > p. I have not come across any instances of d > t, but there are good examples of the change of δ > θ. V., which more often agrees with C.-Pāś. than do the others, hardens dv to t in the word tar-ekh, a house. The various indexes to Part II. give the words of each language separately, and will enable the student to check these statements.

CHAPTER IV

NOMINAL SUFFIXES

k, kh, g, γ, ug, h

THE termination k, which occurs both in Eranian and in Indian, is well known. It appears in the Ghalcah dialects under the forms of k or g and (in Yd.) (o)h, used both with substantives and with adjectives. It also occurs in the Wkh. infinitive, as well as in the Ōrmurī (Eranian) infinitive, in the original form of k, while in the Balōcī infinitive it becomes g. It is frequent as a suffix added to Mod. Paīś. nouns, and appears in several languages (viz., V., P., K., Kh., and Š.) as the suffix of the infinitive. In V., Š., and M. it is also (under the form g between vowels) used as a suffix of the past participle, while in P. the same participle retains the k. In one form of the present participle in B. it becomes g, but in the Kh. present participle it remains unchanged. It is not used as an infinitive suffix at the present day in any Indian language, though traces of it appear in the long ā of the Hindī infinitive and similar forms. As regards the infinitive, we may sum up the state of affairs by saying that the letter k survives in certain Eastern Eranian languages and in certain Modern Paīśācī languages, but not in any Indian one.

It is a phonetic law of Kś. that when a word ends in a surd consonant, that consonant must be aspirated. It therefore follows that in this language the suffix k takes the form of kh. There are sporadic traces of the same law in other languages of the family, and it is applied with some consistency in V.

We have seen that in Eastern Eranian this suffix takes the forms k, g, and (o)h. In Modern Paiśācī I take the following terminations as derived from it—k, kh, g, γ, ng,¹ and h. The following are examples :

k.—This is frequent in K. There are also occasional instances in B., W., and P.

B. as-ke, he.

K. gardō-k, ass. Cf. gardō-γ, below.

P. paš-k-in (double suffix), behind.

K. pachīy-ek, bird. Cf. n-suffix below.

K. phūš-ak, P. pīšō-nd-ik, pīšō-ŋ-ak, cat (double suffix in P.).

K. ga-k, cow. Cf. th suffix below.

B. jū, ju-k, daughter.

K. pūš-ik, flower.

W. coŋo-k, hair.

K. mastr-uk, P. maiy-ik, moon. Cf. kh below.

K. u-k, water. Cf. V. āv-eh, Kh. ū-γ.

P. han-īk, struck, and so all past participles in P.

V. pesumti-n-ik, P. han-īk, K. ty-ek, Kh. d-ik, Š. šid-oiki, to strike, and so all infinitives in these languages.

Kh. gan-ika, taking, and so all present participles in Kh.

kh.—This occurs only in V. and Kś. The pronunciation of V. kh is unknown. It may be the spirant χ . Besides V. and Kś., in one word Kh. has χ , the spirant, as an alternative for γ .

Kh. gurdō-χ or gurdō-γ, ass. Cf. K. gardō-k.

V. pši-kh, cat. Cf. K. phūš-ak, P. pīšō-ŋ-ak.

V. kīru-kh, keru-kh, dog.

V. an-ekh, fire.

V. war-ekh, tar-ekh, house.

V. mas-ekh, moon.

V. īstī-kh, Kś. tīru-kh, star.

V. īsi-kh, sun.

V. luzu-kh, tongue.

In Kś. every final k becomes kh. See p. 31 of my Essays on Kāçmīrī Grammar (also J. A. S. B., lxvi. [1897], Part I., p. 183).

¹ In GIP. I², 308, a termination ung is mentioned, which seems to have a different origin.

g.—Cf. GIP. I², 63. Only sporadic instances except in B., V., Š., and M. In every case the k was originally intervocalic, and in most cases is so at the present day.

M. ḡā, ḡā-g, back.

P. ḡōš^u-g or ḡōšⁱ-ng, house.

V. buḡ-og, share. Cf. ste-suffix, and n-suffix.

V. pesumti-ogo, Š. šid-ēgō, M. kuḡ-ag-īl (double suffix), struck. So for all past participles.

B. vīn-an or vīn-ag-an, striking, and so in all present participles in B.

In all these languages the termination is often dropped.

γ.—This occurs only in Kh.

Kh. gurdō-γ, or gurdō-χ, ass. Cf. K. gardō-k.

Kh. ū-γ, water. Cf. K. u-k, V. āv-ch. Cf. also Mj. yau γū.

Kh. hato-γo, to-γo, his. Cf. Pš. ha-γ^u, he.

ng.—This is most frequent in P. There is also an example in Kh.

P. ḡō-lā-ng, bull. Cf., however, Tibetan glang.

P. šūrī-ng, dog.

Kh. pō-ng, foot.

P. ḡōšⁱ-ng or ḡōš^u-g, house.

h.—This occurs only in B. and V., and is evidently a weakening of kh.

V. āv-ch, water; cf. K. u-k, Kh. ū-γ. V. ps-ch, what?

B. wez-ch, a she-goat.

ste, stai, sta, sth^a, st, sth, sā, s.

This termination is extremely common in a variety of functions. It is used—

To form nouns substantive, including infinitives. Thus, B. baḡ-cste, a share; K., Kh. au-us, a day; Š. on-us, a feast; B. acūn-asth, acūn-asth^a, or acūn-aste, to run; W. riḡ-āsta, Š. kut-iste, or kut-istā, to strike (the Š. form is peculiar to the dialect of Ḍāh Hanū).

To form adjectives, including past participles. In these cases the termination is usually dropped when the adjective or participle is employed attributively. Thus B. ī, my, ī-ste, mine ; lē mōc, a good man ; amū lē-st ai, the house is good ; W. bō-i, bō-sta, good. W. vin-ā, vin-asta, or vin-ista, Kh. pre-sta, struck.

As a sign of case. In B. it appears under the forms stai, ste, st, s, as the sign of the genitive and of the ablative, the two shorter forms being generally, but not exclusively, employed for the former. They are frequently dropped. Thus, mancī-ēst, mancī-s, or mancī, of a man ; ušp-este, of a horse ; pištrak-stai, from to-day ; ništruk-ste, from the first. In P., stā or sā (also frequently dropped) is a sign of the oblique form. Thus, tāt-istā āntē, to the father ; lāy-^asā paškin, after the brother. It is even used with plural nouns, as in dōstān-ista-m miltin, with my friends. So also in Š. the agent case ends in -se. The K. genitive in as, es (šā-as, of a king ; mōc-es, of a man) perhaps belongs to this group.

As a verbal termination of the third person plural, it takes the form stai, sto, st, ssī. This is a distinct group, with a different derivation, though similar in form. It will be considered under the head of verbs.

The origin of the nominal suffix is very obscure. We are tempted to compare the Prs. verbs ending in -istan, which Darmesteter and Horn consider to be the infinitive of the root as, be (GIP. I², 142), but which Salemann (ib. I¹, 308) maintains to be of unknown etymology. We may also compare the Prs. duru-st, which Horn (551) derives from Av. drva-+sti- (cf. Av. arjōsti-), or (especially for the past participle) forms like Skr. matta-, Prs. mast ; Skr. rād̄dha-, Prs. rāst. It is possible that the st of the two last forms has been employed for other past participles by false analogy. The same participial termination is very common, both as st and as ss, in two of the Caspian Persian dialects (GIP. I², 363, 364). Thus Gīlakī, dānista, he knew ; bi-šnarasta, he heard ; ba-nmāsta, he showed ; ba-farmāsta, he ordered ; būsteh, he was ; and Māzandarānī, fašanastīma, we spread out ; ba-šnūssama, I heard, and so on.

It may be suggested that in these modern Paišācī languages this termination is possibly derived from sat, the present participle of the \sqrt{as} , be, with the very common syncope of the medial a. It will have been observed that in almost every case the suffix is joined very loosely to the nominal base, and can be omitted with little change of sense. Moreover, in more than one Indian language the present participle of the verb substantive is employed as a suffix of the ablative. A good example is the Bengali haitē, which means 'from.' Similarly, in Kś. śand^u the same present participle is used as the suffix of the genitive.

śt, śt̄, th, t.

These may be connected with ste, or we may refer them to the Wkh. plural suffix iśt, and the adjectival suffix iśt found in Prs. dialects. See GIP. I², 314, 182, 211. The latter is probably connected with the Skr. -iṣṭu-. Examples are :

Kh. pru-śta, before; V. že-št, a bull.

V. gū-th, cow; Gār. bīra-th, a goat.

G. kham-ta, ear; čumu-ta, hair; šau-ta, head (but B. šei).

The distribution of these three suffixes will be noted. ʔa occurs only in G. It and th may be identical with Skr. -ta-, Pr. -da-, and in that case these two should be grouped with the r, ŋ, r, l suffixes below.

The suffix n has many possible derivations. We may refer it to the Skr. -ana-, or we may compare it with O. Prs. -aina-, Av. -aēna-, Prs. -in. I think it can most easily be connected with the Phl. -(i)śn, which becomes -(i)śn or -(i)śm in Prs. dialects (GIP. I², 182). In Ghalcah śm > m (ib. 306). In Kurd, Av. pāšna > pānī (Gray, 923). This derivation enables us to group n and m together.

n.—P. paš-k-in, behind (double suffix); Gār. pašī-n, bird; G. i'ī-n, eye; Kh. χata-n, a house; W. maṭ-īni, a share; Kh. līgi-ni, tongue; V. īp-in, one (see numerals). The n of K. hāndūn, house, is different. Cf. Prs. andarūn. In the words for 'bird' and 'eye,' the n may be a part of the original base, but this is hardly likely, when we compare the corresponding words in other cognate languages. See Vocabulary.

m.—G. puda-mi, before; Kh. sōr-m, gold; V. let-em, tooth.

r, ṛ, r, l.

This may be compared with the Prakrit suffixes -ḍa-, -illa-. The l-suffix appears in all M. past participles, and is evidently connected with this Prakrit termination, and does not seem to have anything to do with the l of the Paśtō past participle. It is added after a k-suffix, and the whole double suffix may be dropped at pleasure. At the same time, in B. vīn-aḡ-an or vīn-an, striking, the k-suffix has been inserted between the root and the participial termination.

r, r, ṛ.—G. kōṣ-ar, shoe.

Gār. pīṣī-r, P. pīṣō-ṛ-ak or pīṣō ṛḍ-ik (double suffix), a cat. (Ṇ and ṛḍ are interchangeable.)

B. mach-ku-r (double suffix), a man.

B. nazu-r, nasu-r, K. nacū-r, Kh. nas-kā r (double suffix), M. nathū r, Gār. nōzō-r, a nose.

l.—P. gō-lā-ng (double suffix), Ś. gō-lō, a bull. Here the l-suffix seems to indicate the masculine gender. Cf., however, Tibetan glang.

V. es-le, he.

V. wezi-l, a shoe.

M. gē-lā, singing (doubtful).

M. kuṭa or kuṭa-gi-l, struck. So for all past participles.

Note how frequently this suffix is used in association with the k-suffix.

CHAPTER V

DECLENSION OF SUBSTANTIVES

Number.

IN most of the Modern Paīśācī languages plurality is not expressed unless the context requires it. The following terminations have been noted :

B., P., Kh., -ān, K. -an, -en, Gār. -āl.
V. -ō, ā, K. -au.

These can all be referred to the Eranian Genitive Plural -ānām, Prs. -ān, Gīlakī -ān, -ōn, Kāšānī, -ōn.

K. -ai, Š, -ē, M. -a.

Cf. Phl. -ihā, Prs. -hā, Kāšānī -ā. Or the M. -a may be compared with the Pś. -a (Eranian -ah, Av. -ō, Skr. -as).

In Kś. the plural of masculine a-bases is the same as the singular. That of masculine i-bases ends in -i, and that of feminine bases generally in -e. With the last we may compare the Pś. -e (Eranian -yah, Av. yō, Skr. -yas).

Besides the above terminations, nouns of multitude are often added to give the idea of plurality. Such are B. -kile, W. -kele, V. -kil, -kili, G. -gila, and (possibly) P. -lā, with all of which we may compare the Eranian Šg. -gala. Other similar words are: W. eccu- (prefixed), G. -nam, and K. -chik, all of which mean 'many.'

Case.

Cases are formed by the following suffixes and prefixes. There are also many others.

CASE SUFFIXES AND PREFIXES.

NOTE.—Suffixes are indicated by a hyphen preceding the word; thus, -lā̃. Prefixes are indicated by a hyphen following; thus, bā̃-.

	Obl. Form, Sing.	Agent when different from Obl. Form.	To, for.	From.	Of.	In.
B.	-ē	—	-lā̃, -kē	-lā̃, -ste	-ō -ste, -s	bā̃-
W.	-ō	—	-ka, -kelī	-kē, -kane, -bē	-ba	-ē
V.	?	—	tu-, -pa, -pan̄	-pa, -paneā	-ūri, -wak	-mun̄j
P.	-slā̃, -sā̃	—	-āntē	-udai, -t̄	-s	-kucū
G.	-a	-e	-ke	-perena	-na	-e
K.	-as	—	-hātia	-pi	-as	-ona
Kh.	-ō	?	-te	-sar	-ō	-ī, -ū
Ś.	-ē	-sē	-te	-jō, -ō, -rō	-ai, -s	-rō -rā, -zū
Kś.	-as, -ī, -i	-an, -ī, -i	-kṇut ^u , -pūch ^y , -as	-peth ^a -andr ^u	-sṇd ^u , -uk ^u , -un ^u	-manz, -keth, -andar, (on) -peth
Gār.	?	—	-ka	-mā̃	-ā̃	-mē̃
M.	-a	?	-gai	-na	-ā̃	-maz

General Remarks.—The case of the agent is almost always identical with the oblique form. It is the case of the subject of the past tenses of transitive verbs. In Ś., however, the agent case is used for the subject of a transitive verb in any tense (compare the neighbouring Tibetan), even the present. In some dialects of Ś. there are two terminations of the agent case. One, -ī, -ajā, is used when the verb is in a tense formed from the past participle, and the other, -sē or -sā, when the verb is in any other tense.

The ablative suffix is often a secondary form derived from some other case-suffix. Thus, in W. -kē and -ka-ne are locatives of -ka, and -bē is the locative of -ba. In V. -panca is derived from -panē. In Kś. -peṭh^a and -andṛ^a are derived from -peṭh and -andar respectively, and Gār. -mā and -mē are respectively the ablative and locative of the same base. Finally, we may compare G. -perc-na, which is evidently itself a genitive. As in Indian languages, some of the dative suffixes are also plainly locatives of genitive suffixes.

The Modern Paiśācī noun shares with that of Indian languages and with that of the non-Prs. Eranian languages an oblique form. In P. and perhaps K. this is formed by the addition of the st-suffix (see nominal suffixes). The oblique form of Kś. is of purely Indian origin. The -as is derived from the old genitive of a-bases, and the -i of masculine -i-bases and the -i of feminine bases are of similar origin. All the other oblique forms given above are vocalic terminations. We have -a, -ē, or -ō, which may be compared with the Indian oblique terminations, or with the -a, -ī, -e, or -ō of Caspian Prs. Professor Geiger (GIP. I², 358) derives the forms in -a from an old instrumental, those in -ī and -e from an old locative or genitive, and those in -ō from a substantival termination to which the post-position ā has been attached.

The oblique plural forms are not given in the above table, as they contain nothing distinctive. They are B. -ān, -ōn; W. -ā; V. -ō; P. -ān; G. -ā; K. -an, -en; Kh. -ān; Ś. -o; Kś. -n; Gār., and M. -a. All these may be either Eranian or Indian. There are numerous analogies in both branches of the Aryan tongue.

We may class the remaining suffixes as follows :

1. (a) Genitive—B. and Kh. $-ā$, Ś. $-ai$, Gār. and M. $-ā$.
- (b) Locative—W. $-ē$, G. $-e$, K. $-o(-na)$, Kh. $-ē$, $-ā$.
- (a) Agent—Ś. $-sē$.
- (b) Ablative—B. $-ste$.
- (c) Genitive—B. $-ste$, $-s$, P. $-s$, K. $-as$, Ś. $-s$.

These are each the same as some oblique form singular. The B., P., K., and Ś. s-terminations are doubtful. They may be remains of old Aryan genitives in -sia, Av. -hya, Skr. -sya. The Kś. dative suffix -as has certainly this origin.

2. (a) Dative—B. $-kē$, W. $-ka$, $-ke(-tī)$, G. $-ke$, Gār. $-ka$, M. $-gai$.
- (b) Ablative—W. $-kē$, $-ka(-ne)$.
- (c) Genitive—V. $(-wa)-k$.

This is the well-known Indian suffix ($< kṛta-$). I do not know of its occurrence, as a case-sign, in Eranian.

3. (a) Dative—B. $-tā$, W. $(-ke)-tī$, V. $tu-$, P. $(-ān)-tē$, Kh. and Ś. $-te$.
- (b) Ablative—B. $-tā$.

We may compare this with the Pš. -ta, which Trumpp and Geiger (GIP. I², 215) consider to be of Indian origin (cf. Hindī -tē), and which Darmesteter (Chants Populaires des Afghans, lxxiv.) identifies with the Prs. tā. The fact that V. employs the word as a prefix is in favour of the latter derivation for V. at least.

4. (a) Dative—V. $(-pa)-nē$.
- (b) Ablative—W. $(-ka)-ne$, V. $(-pa)-nea$, G. $(-pere)-na$, M. $-na$.
- (c) Genitive—G. $-na$.
- (d) Locative—K. $(-o)-na$.

We may compare this with the Pš. ablative suffix -na, or with the common Indian case-suffix -nā, -nū, etc.

5. (a) Dative—V. $-pa$, $-pa(-nē)$.
- (b) Ablative—W. $-bē$, V. $-pa$, $-pa(-nea)$, G. $-pe(-re-na)$, K. $-pi$.
- (c) Genitive—W. $-ba$.
- (d) Locative—B. $bā$.

We may compare these with the Pš. locative prefix pa-, and with the Caspian dative prefix ba-, both corresponding to the Av. and Skr. upa.

6. (a) Ablative—Gār. mā̃.

(b) Locative—V. -munj, Kś. -manz, Gār. -mā̃, M. -maz.

With the V., Kś., and M. forms compare the Av. maidyaqua-, middle, Pś. miyañj. The Gār. forms are Indian.

7. (a) Ablative—G. (-pe)-re(-nā), Kh. (-s)-ar, Š. -jō̃, -zō̃, -rō̃.

(b) Genitive—V. (-ñ)-ri.

(c) Locative—Š. -zā̃, -rō̃, -rā̃.

The various Š. forms are dialectic variations. In this language, j, jr, ž, and r are dialectically interchangeable. The original form in Š. is plainly -rō̃. Cf. Prs. -rā̃, Old Prs. rādiy. It survives in Ghalcah under the form -r. If we do not wish to connect -žō̃, -jō̃, with -rō̃, as the phonetic change is an unexpected one, we can compare with the two former Av. haca, Prs. az-, Caspian Prs. -jā̃. But in this case we shall have to assume that in the different Š. dialects different post-positions are employed for the same case. As to the phonetic change, compare Gilgit Š. rō̃, Drās Š. žō̃, he, and B. rārā̃ or žarj, noise. Lahndā, of the Western Pañjāb, shows many signs of País. influence. We may therefore also compare the Mūltānī L. dhī, daughter, pl. (quite irregular) dhīrī̃, with Š. dī, obl. sing. dij-.

8. The Kś. dative -kyut^u (for -kit^u) and genitives -sand^u, -uk^u, -un^u, are purely Indian. Andar is, of course, Prs. Of -pučhy, -keth (or -kyath), and -peṭh (or -pyaṭh), the origin is uncertain. So also the P. ablative -udai, and locative -kucā. Kś. peṭh may be < Av. paršti, Skr. prṣṭha- (see Part II., § 188). K. dative -hātia is probably connected with hasta-. The Kś. kyut^u is an adjective, and agrees in gender with the direct object. It and kyath (for kati) must ultimately be referred to some case or cases of kṛta-.

CHAPTER VI

ADJECTIVES

WITH the exception of the numerals, adjectives call for few remarks. Gender is very irregularly observed, the masculine being (except in Kś.) often used for the feminine. Indeed, the only adjectives which I have noted as ever taking feminine forms are those ending in ā or ī, and those ending in one of the liquids l, m, n, r. We have not, however, got sufficient materials for forming general rules. In Kāśmīri, which, in this respect, is thoroughly under the influence of the neighbouring Sanskritic languages, the system of gender is in full swing. See my grammar. The feminine termination of adjectives is almost always ī.

Comparison is carried out in the Indian fashion, the object with which comparison is made being put in the ablative case.

The numerals are shown on p. 37.

General Remarks.—By a phonetic law of these languages which is constantly recurring, tr is interchangeable with c. A good example is Ś. trē or cē, three. A similar change occurs in the Ghalcah languages. Compare W. pōtr, Sq. pōč, a son. Tr in these cases represents an Avesta θr, as in puθra-, a son. The numbers for 'fifty' and 'one hundred' are only given to show that these languages count on a vigesimal system, a system which is also employed by the Ghalcah Yüdyā. In a few instances words such as panjā, sad, and šal, the words are borrowed from other languages, but in most the vigesimal system is self-evident. The employment by Yüdyā is probably not Eranian, as the other Ghalcah languages use a decimal system. Burušaski employs the vigesimal system.

It will be noticed that there is great uncertainty as to the use of dental and cerebral letters. See the remarks under the head of phonetics.

B. and W. change initial c into š. Thus B. što, W. štā, Av. caθwārō, four. V. in the same word hardens θw to p. B. also represents Indian ś by č when not initial. V. represents it by z. Thus, B. dič, V. leze, Skr. daśa-, ten; B. riči, V. (vi)zū, Skr. vimśati-, twenty.

W., like B., changes initial c to š. On the other hand, it retains Indian ś under the form of š.

V., in chī, three, changes tr to ch, not c. This language drops tr when medial, as in B. piṭr, V. piē, a son. It also changes d to l, as in lūe, two, leze, ten. Compare Munjānī (Ghalcah) lū, two, Yüdcγā los, ten. A similar change also occurs in Pš. I have already pointed out how θw is hardened to p in this dialect. An initial p is dropped in uc (? for wuc), five.

P. changes θr to ʃhl, which G. closely follows. When ʃhl is initial, the ʃ is dropped. Examples are Avesta puθra-, P. puʃhlē, G. pult (with metathesis of θl, and loss of aspiration), a son; Av. θrāyō, P. hlē, G. θlē, three. A final Indian ś becomes h, and is then dropped, so that we have dē, ten.

Regarding G. θlē, see above. A c is hardened to č in čūr (Av. caθwārō, the w being preserved under the form of ū), four, and panč, five. Kāśmīrī has nearly the same words for these numbers. An initial v has been dropped in iši, for viši, twenty, compare V. zū for vizū. An Indian ś is retained under the form of š.

K. similarly retains Indian ś.

Kh. changes initial d to j in jū, two, and još, ten. With the former compare the Kāśmīrī z^hh, two, but dah, ten. The change to j is due to palatalization through a following palatal vowel. This is not in the Av. dva, but is in the Av. baē, the Shb. duri, and the B. diu. In bišr, twenty, t has become r. So also in šōr, a hundred. This is a regular phonetic change in Kh. The form šal in M. shows that the course of development has been Skr. śata-, thence śada* (cf. Prs. śal), thence M. šal, Kh. šōr.

Š. dü, like the Kh. jū, two, shows the influence of the original following i. In puš, püš, five, a final e has become š, cf. the similar change of an initial e in B. and W. In poř, the š has been further weakened to h, and then elided. Š. and Kś. are the only languages which apparently follow the modern Indian fashion of aspirating the final t of the word for 'seven.' The aspiration is, however, due to the Kś. rule by which all final surds are aspirated. Compare the Shb. nataro (not nattaro) for naptārah. The Skr. aṣṭa-, eight, has several representatives. Ath recalls the Shb. athu. Ažat on the other hand reminds one of the Paiśācī kaṣṭam for kaṣṭam. With aṣṭ we may compare the Yüdyā ašvō, remembering the liability of tr (i.e., ṭ) to become c. There is also the Shb. aṣṭau. In the two remaining forms, the final ṭ has been dropped, and, in aṣh, š has become čh, through ch. The most interesting point to note among these forms is that both the variants of this word which occur in Shb. are repeated in Š. The forms for 'ten' and 'twenty' show that a medial Indian š is either weakened to h and then liable to be dropped, or may be represented by ž, as we have also seen in the case of the number 'eight.'

Kś. always aspirates a final surd consonant. Hence, akh, one. Š is changed to h in dah, ten; wuh, twenty; hath, a hundred. Šah, six, is only pandits' writing for śah.

Gār. represents Indian tr or the Av. θr by ṭh. As remarked above, the fact that the letter is cerebral is of small importance. Probably th would be the representation of the sound as written by another scribe. At the same time, the cerebralization, if it exists, is evidently due to the influence of the following r. In Kś. ṭy regularly becomes c, so that this ṭy would be the immediate term in the equation try > c, a fact which may be the origin of the more general equation given above, that tr > c. In the same way thy would become ch of the V. chī. We may, therefore, group this chī as a form connected with Gār. thā. I have no explanation as to how the aspiration arose. Gār. represents the Indian ś by š.

M. has the usual change of tr to c. As regards an original initial c, we have seen that B. and W. change it to š. M. goes a step farther, and dentalizes the s, so that the Avesta caθwārō is represented by saūr. The letter j or c is zetacized to z in pāz, five, after a nasal. The Kś. word is very similar. Indian ś is as usual represented by š.

I now proceed to deal with each numeral separately.

One.—The forms ē, ev, ī, and ā must all be compared with Eranian. Compare Avesta aēvō, Ghalcah iv, ī, etc. Yak, ak, akh, ek, may be either Eranian or Indian. I cannot certainly analyze the forms ipin and attege. The ip- of the former is probably the same as the Ghalcah iv. The other word seems to be att-ge. Compare oc eg-zū, five (-times) one-twenty, a hundred.

Two.—All the forms agree with Eranian. Compare Av. dra, baē. The varying forms have been dealt with above.

Three.—These also agree with Eranian. Av. θrāyō. Cf. Wkh. trāi, Mj. šarai, Yd. šurōi.

Four.—Also Eranian. Av. caθwārō. Shb. cature, like B. and W., follows Paiśācī in preserving the medial t. So also, however, all other Asōka inscriptions. Ghalcah has čabūr, čaurur, etc. Hence forms like čōr, etc. With V. cipu, cf. Ossetic čippar.

Five.—Also Eranian. Av. panca, Ghalcah pānz, pinj, etc.

Six.—Also Eranian. Av. χšraš.

Seven.—This follows Indian. The Avesta has hapta. Skr. sapta. Regarding sat and sath, see above.

Eight.—Eranian or Indian; but the dialectic phonetic rules have come in, and the preservation of the conjunct št is distinctly Eranian.

Nine.—Eranian or Indian. Av. and Skr. nava. The forms of Gār. and M. change v to m. The form num looks as if an ordinal was used instead of a cardinal. The final h of B., V., G., K., Kh. points to Persian influence. See GIP. I², 114.

Ten.—Indian. Skr. daśa. There are changes under dialectic phonetic rules.

Twenty.—Again Indian, except P. vōst, and Kh. bišr, which are Eranian, cf. Ghalcah vīst. Kh. bišr is doubtful, owing to the presence of š, which looks Indian. For the change of r < t, cf. Kh. šōr, hundred.

Hundred.—G. pāšī is a contraction of panč iši, five twenties.

CHAPTER VII

PRONOUNS

THE first two personal pronouns are as follows :

	I.	My.	We.	Our.	Thou.	Thy.	You.	Your.
B.	oně or ōě	ĩ	emá	emá	tiu, tu	tu	šá	šá
V.	unzū	un, endeš	asè	as	iyū	ī, īlieš	miū	asēn
P.	ā	mēnā	hamā	hamā	t^a, tō	tēnā	hēmā	hēmā
G.	ā	no	ama	amo	tu	to	mē	mē
K.	ā	mai	ābi	homa	tu	tai	ābi	mīmī
Kś.	boh	nyān^u	asⁱ	sān^u	č^{ah}	cyān^u	tohⁱ, tivq^hⁱ	tu- hand^u
Gār.	ya	mā	mā	mō	tū	chū	thā	thō
M.	m^ñ	me	bē	zū	tū	tē	tus	šū

The following are the demonstrative pronouns (including pronouns of the third person) :

	HE.		THEY.
	Nominative.	Oblique.	Nominative.	Oblique.
B.	aske, inā, anī, izē	aske, anī, akī	amki, amgi, amma	amkī, amgī amgīān
W.	se	tašo, seō	tē, aka	tēs, tēsa, akā
V.	sū, esle	sumiš, miš	mū	mišīn
P.	ūs^a	ūtī, tī, hla	nt^a	nt^a, t^a
G.	se, ten, woi	asa, tasa	eme, teme	asu, tasu
K.	se, āsā, tara, ata	āsā, tā, tāse	šeteh, teh, šeli, cledrūs	šāsi, tāsī
Kh.	haiya, hes, hasa	hamu, horo, hatoγo, toγo	hamit, het, hatet	hamitan, hetan, hatetan
S.	ō, rō, anō	aise, rese, ane	ai, reh, aneh	aine, ainō, rene, renō, ane
Ks.	suh, yih, huh	ta, yi, hu, a	tim, yim, hum	ti, timan, yiman, human
Gār.	ai, atā	ase, tasč	am, tam	ām, asō, tām tasō
M.	sōh	tasī	saī	sajū

FIRST PERSON.

Singular.—B. oně or õě and V. unzū must be referred to Av. azəm, Ghalcah wuz, etc. No other explanation seems possible, but these are the only examples of the insertion of n and of the change of z to č which I have noticed. The n may be a mere nasalization of the vowel after which it is written. With š of V. end-eš, my, compare Wkh. ma-ž, me, Sq. ma-š, Šg. mā-š, our. The nd of end-eš may be another representative of Av. z, but it may also be compared with the termination of Šg. mu-nd, my. In that case, in e-nd-eš, if eš is also a sign of the genitive, we have a double genitive form. The origin of š is unknown. See GIP. I², 318, 319. Possibly it may be connected with the Aryan -sja, Skr. -sya. Regarding the initial e, see below.

If the above suggestions are accepted, the e of e-nd-eš, and, more certainly, B. ī, my, W. yē, K.G.P. ā, Kh. awa, and Gār. ya, are also to be connected with azəm. Cf. Samnānī (Caspian Prs.) ā, u, I. See GIP. I², 82, 352, 359, 360, 421.

Kś. boh, I, probably goes back to an Eranian ahmāχam*, like Sq. Šg. Yd. maš, māš, maχ, we. Cf. K. ābi, M. bē, Š. beh, we. With V. um, W. ima, my, compare Pāzand and Jewish Prs. ēmā, we (GIP. I², 411).

The remaining forms of the singular of the pronoun of the first person call for no remarks. Most of them are easily connected with Ghalcah.

Plural.—The forms B. emā, W. yema, K. homa (our), G. ama, P. hamā, Gār. mā, mō, require no further explanation. See the Pāzand and Jewish Prs. ēmā quoted above.

K. ābi, M. bē, Š. beh, we, and Kś. boh, I, form one group, which may probably be referred to Eranian ahmāχam*, as noted above. Cf. GIP. I², 318.

There is an important group of which the typical letter is s. The following occur :

- V. asě, we; as, our.
 Kh. ispa, we, our.
 M. zã, our.
 Š. asei, our.
 Kś. asⁱ, we; sã^u, our.

These point distinctly to a connexion with the Skr. asmākam, through assākam* or aspākam*, but the occurrence in a language like V., which contains so many distinctively Eranian peculiarities, shows that these forms cannot have come from India. Some light is thrown by the purely Eranian Wkh., which has sak, we, žü, žüü (cf. M. zã, our), my, spā, our. The only conclusion to be drawn (which is borne out by many other general considerations) is that these s-forms are Aryan, but not Indian, and, like other Modern Pišācī peculiarities) were the common property of the Aryan tribes of the Hindū Kush and the neighbourhood, representing a stage of the common Aryan language as it was before the Eranian change of sm to hm had taken place. The same forms also survived independently in Skr., and disappeared in the modern Indian vernaculars. On the other hand, one of the Pišācī peculiarities which has survived in North-Western India is this very s-pronoun. In Pañjābī and Sindhī, the word for 'we' is asĩ. In Labndā, it is assã.

Suffixes.—The enclitic pronouns of the first person require but few remarks. There are three main sets, viz., m; ã, ĩ; and s, all of which have been dealt with above. There are also the following:

- B. mĩš, by us.
 W. mĩš, we, by us.
 V. mĩš, we; mšo, by us.

As explained in regard to V. e-nd-eš, my, the origin of the termination š is obscure. We also have it in V. iti-eš, thy, and in the Ghalcah languages. Cf. Pš. mũž.

SECOND PERSON.

Singular.—The nominative singular presents very few difficulties. All forms can be referred to either Eranian or Indian, but the agreement with the Eranian Ghalcah is most direct. In B. tiu, we have the very common insertion of i before u, and this accounts for B. cī (suffix), Gār. chā and Kś. cyān^u, thy. In V. iyā, thou, ī, thy, the t of B. tiu has suffered aphæresis. Most of the forms go back to Av. tī, but one or two, such as P. t^a, Kś. t^h, to tava. In Kś. t becomes ṭ before i, so that ṭ^h presupposes an intermediate form tiah*, which refers us to Av. tē rather than to tava. Cf. Caspian Prs. tī, thy.

The ś of V. i-ti-eś, thy, has been already dealt with. The origin of the ti is doubtful when comparison is made with e-nd-eś. The nā of P. tēnā and the n^u of Kś. cyān^u corresponds to the nd of e-nd-eś, which in Wkh. and Sq. takes the form au (GIP. I², 309, 319). Kh. ta is, of course, derived from tava.

Plural.—This presents greater difficulties. The origin of some forms is very doubtful. Many go back to Av. χšmākəm, your (Prs. šumā). For instance, B. šā, which reappears in the enclitic ś of B.W., in ś, šo of V., s of G., and kh of Kś. So V. asēn, M. sā, your. Cf. Wkh. saw, you, your.

Another group is V. mīn, W. vī, K. ābi (the same in form as the word for 'we.' The same has occurred in the Pś. mñ), G. mē, you, W. vīma, K. mīmī, G. mē, your, all of which may be compared with the Kurdish enclitic ve, and with Yd. mā-f. P. hēmā may be compared with the Prs. šumā and the Tališī šimā. The Kh. pisa, you, your, is obscure. Cf., however, W. vī, and the eś termination of the genitive. The remaining plural forms seem all to be secondary formations from the singular.

Suffixes.—The enclitic forms of the pronoun of the second person singular fall into three groups. These are ś, šo, s, kh; o, ī, ē, u, ā, y; and G. Kś. (by thee) th, t. The first has been already explained. The second is connected with the Kurdish ve. The last requires no explanation.

As in the case of the full pronoun, the enclitic plural forms present many difficulties. They fall into the following groups:

(1) t. This requires no explanation. By origin it is a singular form.

(2) u, yū, yī, o, w^a. Compare Kurdish ve, and the Indo-European iū.

(3) mī. Compare Ps. mū (GIP. I², 217).

(4) r (B.), nc (V.), ē (W.), li (K.) In this set r points to an original n. I am unable to suggest any origin, either Eranian or Indian, for these forms. They are peculiar to the Kāfir languages. Compare, however, the Caspian Prs. terminations inī, in, etc., of the second person plural (GIP. I², 365). V. nc may perhaps be a compound, n or nd + ti or š.

THIRD PERSON (AND DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS).

Singular.—B. as-ke, V. sū, es-le, W. se, G. se, P. (ū-)s^a, Kh. hes, hasa, M. sōh, Kś. suh, he, may be compared with Av. aē-ša, Skr. ē-ša, sa. The ke of as-ke, and the le of es-le are familiar suffixes. The V. su-m-iš, him, seems to be a double formation of this base and the plural forms with m.

The G. woi, P. ū(-s^a), Š. ō, Kś. huh, he that, may be compared with Prs. ō, ōi, that, as Kh. haiya, Gār. ai, Kś. yih, this, with Prs. ē. Cf. Horn, 129, 136, 137. Cf. also the corresponding forms in modern Indian vernaculars.

B. inā, anī, Š. anō. Cf. Prs. in, ān. Horn, 142, 52.

The forms with t, —K. ata, ta(-ra), Gār. atā, require no explanation.

More difficult is the group B. ize, K. (ta-)ra, Š. rō (or dialectic žō). In B. s becomes z between vowels, and in Š. r and ž are dialectically interchangeable, so that it is possible that the origin of these may be the same as that of the s-group. On the other hand compare Yd. hūroh, that.

Few of the singular oblique forms require explanation. Most of them are old genitive. The termination š of

V. sumiš and miš has been discussed under the heads of the first and second personal pronouns. With Kh. hato-γo, to-γo, compare Ps. ha-γ^a. See p. 27.

Plural.—The letter m is typical of several. Thus, B. am-kī, am-gī, am-nā, V. mū, G. eme, teme, Kh. hamit, Gār. am, tam, Kś. tim, yim, hum. The letter is not, however, confined to the plural, for we have V. su-m-iš, m-iš, his, Kh. hamu, his. With it we may compare Av. ima- (cf. Prs. im-rōz), Wkh. yem, Sq. yam, this.

With the set that has a sibilant in the singular we may compare K. še-teh (a compound), še-li, M. saī. Li, as before, is a nominal suffix.

With Prs. ō, we may compare W. a-ka, P. ū-t^a, and with Prs. ē, Š. ai.

An n-form is Š. aneh. T-forms are W. tē, K. (še-)teh, teh, G. teme, P. (ū-)t^a, Gār. tam, Kś. tim. Most of these contain each two pronominal elements.

To the r-ž-group belong Š. rē or (dialectic) žē.

The K. eledrās appears to be some compound word of which the first element is e-le. Cf. V. sing. es-le. The true origin of the drās is unknown to me. More than one will suggest themselves.

In the oblique plural, V. miš-in is a secondary formation from the singular miš, just as from the Prs. -aš, we have a plural -(a)šān. The other oblique forms do not call for special comment.

Suffixes.—These fall into six groups:

- (1) t. W. (they, by them), G. (they).
- (2) s, z. B. W. G. K. Kś. (to him).
- (3) n, ni. P. (by him), Kś. (by him), P. (by them), G. (by them), K. (by them), Kh. (they, by them).
- (4) ā, ē, ī. P. (his, to him), Kh. (by him, his), B. (they, by them).
- (5) š, kh, h. W. V. Kś.
- (6) nc. P. (they).

(1) The t-forms require no explanation. It is, however, worth noting that they only occur in the plural.

(2) The suffix z is peculiar to B. It is simply the form which s in that language often takes when between vowels. In Kś s is reserved for the suffix in the dative case. In the other languages (except W.) s is the only suffix of the third person singular. It is worth noting that it is used not only for the nominative, but also for the oblique cases. This points to a connection with the Prs. suffix aš, with change of š to s, as in some of the Persian Central dialects (GIP. I², 386, 392). If this view is correct this group is identical with the fifth.

(3) Always employed in the sense of the agent, both singular and plural. Kh. also employs it for the nominative plural, but in this language the suffixes of the nominative and of the agent are always identical. We may compare the full pronouns inā, etc., above. Or, remembering the restriction to the case of the agent, we can suggest the Indian tēna, by him.

(4) These vocalic terminations are all explained above under the full pronouns.

(5) Kś. h is the form which the kh takes between vowels. As in the case of the second person singular the kh is identical with the W. V. š. There has, however, been a change of number. The latter is the same as the Prs. aš (singular), which reappears in Bal. iš with a plural signification. In some of the Central Persian dialects š is employed for both numbers (GIP. I², 392).

(6) Here P. nc is as puzzling as the V. nc of the second person. As there, I am inclined to look upon it as a compound, here n + ti.

I cannot hope that all the foregoing derivations will be deemed satisfactory. They are the best which I can suggest, but the subject is most obscure.

Regarding the words for ‘what?’ and ‘self,’ see the vocabulary. Except in the case of Kś., the relative pronoun has disappeared. Either its place is supplied by relative participles, as is the usual idiom in the Kāfir languages, even where other forms are shown, or else the interrogative pronoun is made to do duty as in Prs. That Kś. yih is borrowed from the neighbouring Indian is clearly shown by the fact that it is identical in form with the indigenous Kś. word for ‘this.’ The words for ‘who?’ call for no remarks.

CHAPTER VIII

CONJUGATION

THE table on p. 53 shows the present and past tenses of the verb substantive. Derived from \surd as are B. azem, V. esmo, aso, P. hāim, K. āsam, Kh. asum, I am; B. azim, V. essem, P. hāikim, K. āsis, Kh. āsistam, M. ās, Gār. āšū, Š. asus, Kś. āsus, I was. The forms K. āsan, P. hāin, Kh. asuni, show that the third persons plural, B. ašt, V. asto, are for šati*, sato*; cf. Skr. santi. O. Prs. ha(n)tiy. See also the remarks below under the finite verb. Syncope of a is very common in these languages. In B. s has become š through the influence of the following i. These forms throw light on the Pś. šta, they are. See GIP. I², 220. B. frequently changes intervocalic s to z: cf. naz-ur, nose. Before i, as above, it prefers to change it to š. Hence eši, thou art; cf. šei (širas), a head. Gār. āšū remains unchanged through all persons of both numbers. M. ās becomes āšū in the plural, but is otherwise unchanged. This, as in Indian dialects, points to a participial origin. Yd. astet, he is, is similarly used. The other forms of the past are secondary derivations.

The W. vrem, I am, vařiem, I was, come from \surd vrt, vartatē. Cf. Bengali baṭi, Bihārī bāṭṭi, I am. Connected with the same root are the dialectic Prs. \surd girt, gen, etc. (GIP. I², 399), which = Prs. gardīdan. See Horn, 886.

The Kś. chus, I am, is derived from the \surd acch (< ṛcchati, Pischel, § 480).

From the \surd šu (cf. Prs. šudan) we have K. šiu, Kh. šer, it is, and K. šien, Kh. šeni, they are. These forms are only used when the subject is inanimate.

From the Eranian √ bar, Indian √ bhū, we have Gār. boem, I was.

There remains the group G. θanaïm, M. Gār. thā, Š. hanus, I am; M. thū, I was. It is connected with the Eranian √ stā, Indian √ sthā, past participle sthita. Thū does not change for number or person. Cf. Hindōstānī thā. Eranian st becomes th, and this is further weakened to h in Š. Cf. Gray, 864. The G. and Š. forms appear to be nasal presents. Cf. Gothic standa, stand.

The following are the leading forms of the finite verb :

Participle Present.

The fullest and most ancient forms are those in -ant of Gār. and M., which are evidently due to Indian influence. -Ant survived in Old Hindī, and is still employed in poetry. It is softened to -and- or -ad- in modern Pañjābī and Sindhī. The t with syncope of the n, has been preserved in Ś.

In Av. the termination of the present participle middle was -āna-, which became -ān in Phl. (GIP, I¹, 279). In Prs. it is not confined to the middle voice (e.g., dih-ān, Av. daθ-āna-), giving (ib. I², 146). This accounts for B. vīn-an, Ks. mār-ān. The k-suffix was prefixed to this -ān even in Phl., so that we may assume that the same has been the case in B. vīn-ag-an. In G. θli-mān, K. tī-mān, either the n is euphonic, or the old present participle terminations -āna- and -nt- have been confused with -mant- (Cf. GIP. I¹, 98, 280).

As for Kh. gan-ika, the termination is the k-suffix (vide nominal suffixes). In Phl. (GIP. I¹, 278) the termination -āk was employed to make present participles. It was derived from an older -araka, or -ayaka. The latter form would account for the i in gan-ika.

The origin of the B. vīl (for vīn-l), and of W. vi-la is uncertain. The l may have been developed from n, or the future participle may be employed in the sense of the present, as in the finite tenses of Ghaleah.

Participle Past.

In all, except G. θli-ta, the original t of the termination has disappeared. P. takes the suffix ik. Compare the Av. participle in -tī (GIP. I¹, 110) and the Phl. one in -īt, -tak (ib. 282). The k-suffix also appears in V. pesuntī-ogo, Ś. śid-ēgō, and M. kuṭ-ag-il (with *-illa-*suffix added). There remain the W. vin-asta, Kh. pre-sta. The suffix -sta has been fully dealt with under the head of nominal suffixes.

It is distinct from the similar suffix which denotes the third person plural. See p. 28 ante.

Participle Future.

The origin of the -lā of B. and the -r of W. is doubtful. It may be noted that in the Indian Rājasthānī, Marāṭhī, and Pahārī, -lā is also used to form the future. For this latter I have not seen any derivation that completely satisfies me. See, however, Hoernle, Gauḍian Grammar, pp. 357, 341. Eranian t regularly becomes l in Pš., and often does so in Mod. Paś. It is therefore possible that we have here a survival of the old Eranian future passive participle in -ata- (GIP. I¹, 110).

G. θli-bā (if it is a true form. The word is the only example which I have seen, and its identification is doubtful) can be referred to the Eranian suffix -θuca- (Skr. -tva-, -tarya-), of the future passive participle (ib. 111).

The Ks. mārṇ^u is a purely Indian form, corresponding to the Lahndā, etc., mār^{nā}.

Infinitive.

This is throughout a verbal noun, with the regular nominal suffixes. The st-forms (B. and W.) have already been fully dealt with. See pp. 27 ff. ante. We have the k-suffix in V., P., K., Kh., and Š. As in Pš. the infinitive is the same in form as the past participle in P. The G. θli-awo may have the same origin as the future participle (as is common in Indian languages), or may have as the original of its suffix the Phl. -āk of the present participle (cf. Phl. sāk, Prs. sār). In these languages the present and future are frequently confounded. Kś. mār-un is borrowed from Indian. The -ō of Gār. and M. is the ordinary strong termination of masculine nouns.

Gār. Present Participle (caṇḍ-ānt) used throughout, without change.

M. Present Participle (kuḥ-ānt) used throughout, without change.

In the conjugation of this tense we see a mixture of the old Aryan present and of secondary periphrastic forms. This is plainest in W. Comparison with the corresponding Sanskrit forms gives us—

	Singular.		Plural.
	Skr. (I bear.)	W. (I strike.)	Skr. (We bear.)	W. (We strike.)
1.	bharāmi	vi-am	bharā-mas, -masi	vi-āmiś
3.	bhara-ti	vi-ās	bhara-nti	vi-ast

If we bear in mind that in the modern vernaculars of India the second person plural is often derived from the old dual, we see that each of the first two persons in the above paradigm corresponds in the two languages. The correspondence disappears entirely in the third person. It would be very difficult to derive the ās of vi-ās from the ti of bhara-ti, and it would, so far as my knowledge goes, be impossible to derive -ast from -nti. -Ās is plainly for asti (cf. P. hās, he is), and -ast for santi, cf. B. ašt, V. asto, they are. The change of st to s is not uncommon in these languages, cf. Skr. hasta-, P. hās, a hand. As regards ašt, asto, for santi, see the verb substantive. The termination -st-, it should be remarked, occurs elsewhere as the sign of the third person plural. In B. the third plural pluperfect ends in -istai or -issī. In V. the universal termination of the third person plural is -sto, as in the above table, and as in the past and the future below. It will be observed that the suffix is different in origin from the nominal suffix -ste, -stā, etc., which is employed for forming infinitives and past participles.

In P. the -īk- which runs through this tense, is part of the base of this particular verb. It is not, like the -īk of the past participle, and of the infinitive, a verbal termination, but is probably a causal suffix. Compare pāy-im, I go, beside the infinitive pā-īk, to go.

Taking the forms person by person, the first person singular calls for few remarks. Throughout, its connection with the Aryan (bharā)mi is manifest. In Kś. the final m has been dropped as in Gabrī Prs. The V. and G. forms alone present difficulties. I am inclined to adopt as the most plausible explanation that the whole tense in these languages is periphrastic. The letter m is not confined to the first persons singular and plural, but in other persons, seems to form part of tense-base. It is probably a remnant of the present participle (cf. G. θli-mān, striking, he strikes), to which the present tense of the verb substantive has been subjoined throughout.

In the second person singular, the s of -si has been palatalized to j in B., and to š in W. (and V.). Cf. V. ji, B. šei, for ši(ras), a head, and the indefinite pronunciation of B. described in the preface to Colonel Davidson's Bašgālī Grammar (see above, p. 16). In Kś. this š has become kh. In Š. and P. the s has suffered syncope.

As for the third person singular in W. (and V.), see the remarks above. The t remains in B. The change of t to n in that language is obscure. It is not due to the preceding n of the root, as it occurs in all verbs. Cf. acūna-n (which Colonel Davidson writes acūmann), he runs. It may be a plural form, or it may have developed through l. Cf. K. ti-el. The change of t to l is common (cf. Pš.). In Kh. the t becomes r. This is a phonetic rule of the language. In P. it has been softened to d, while in Š. and Kś. it has suffered syncope. In G., θli-mān is simply the present participle without any suffix. See the remarks on the first person.

In the first person plural, the Aryan -mas or -masi is recognisable in B. vī-miš, W. vī-āmiš, and V. pesumti-mšo. In G. and K. š has become k, through kh. M has suffered syncope in P., K. and Kh., while it has been vocalized to ar in Kś. Regarding Š. -ōn, cf. Balōcī -ōn.

In the second person plural, a comparison with the future shows that the B. suffix is r̄. For it, and for V. ne, compare the remarks on pronominal suffixes of the second person. If the B. termination were simply -r, we might compare the Kh. change of t to r. In discussing the pronominal suffixes I have suggested a connection with the Caspian Prs. -inī, in.

Most of the terminations of the third person plural can easily be referred to -anti, Prs. -and, Gilakī -ada, Yd. -at, Tālišī -ēn, Wkh. -an, etc. As explained above, the W. -st, V. -sto, < santi.

PAST TENSE.

Kś.	mār-u-m	mār-u-th	mār-u-n	mār-u	mār-u.wa	mār-u-kl
Gār.	Past Participle (caṇḍ-ū) without suffixes.
M.	Past Participle (kuḷ-agil) without suffixes.

The past tense is simply the past participle with or without pronominal suffixes of the subject or of the agent. Suffixes indicating the subject are used with intransitive verbs, and those indicating the agent with transitive ones construed passively. In W., transitive verbs take no suffixes, but intransitive ones do.

FUTURE TENSE.

K.	Same as the Present.
Kh.	Same as the Present.
S.	Same as the Present.
Kś.	Same as the Present.
Gār.	mār-miš for all persons and both numbers.
M.	kuṭa-gala-šat or kuṭa-šat for all persons and both numbers.

In most cases, as in Eranian (e.g., Ghalcah), the Future tense is the same as the Present. This is also the case in P., although the fact is obscured by the causal terminations added to the particular root shown in the table. From other roots we have ur-am, I shall arise; par-am, I shall go, and so on. In G. the third person singular appears to be the future participle, while the other persons are derived from the old present, which in this language has altogether lost its primitive meaning. This loss of proper meaning by the present tense is also nearly the case in Kś., in which the present is nearly always employed as a future. It is only employed as a present in old works and in poetry.

In B. and W. the future participle is used throughout, pronominal suffixes being added to give the force of the different numbers and persons. B. takes no suffix in the third person singular or plural. In V. the future seems also to be participial, but the forms are very obscure. Some of them (as in M.) are based on what looks like the past participle.

Gār. and M. are also evidently participial forms. In Gār., the fact that the root is changed from caṇḍ to mār is due to the forms of the future tense having been received from a different source. From the first source I have received caṇḍ-am as meaning 'I shall strike,' but no forms for the other persons. Caṇḍ-am is clearly an old present. For Gār. -miš in mār-miš I can suggest no derivation. M. kuṭa-gala-śat, or kuṭa-śat looks like a past participle to which -śat is appended. -śat may perhaps be connected with the Phl. śāyat, Prs. śāyaδ, it is possible, it can (a verb impersonal). The difficulty in this derivation is the short a.

VOCABULARY

Arise, stand up.—B. $\sqrt{lošt}$, \sqrt{lut} , \sqrt{wut} ; W. $\sqrt{lošt}$; K. $\sqrt{āšl}$; V. and G. $\sqrt{ušl}$; P. \sqrt{ur} ; M. \sqrt{uth} ; Kś. $\sqrt{wōth}$; Cf. O. Prs. ava + $\sqrt{stā}$; Skr. ul + $\sqrt{sthā}$, uttiṣṭhati, he arises, past part. utthita. B., W., V., K., G., P., must be referred to Eranian. The other two are doubtful. Cf. Gipsy $\sqrt{ušl}$. Regarding the reduplication of \check{s} , cf. GIP. I¹, 55.

V. $\sqrt{išt}$; Gār. \sqrt{it} ; Cf. O. Prs. adi* + $\sqrt{stā}$; Prs. ēstādan (Horn, 84).

K. $\sqrt{cišt}$; P. $\sqrt{tōst}$. Cf. Skr. tiṣṭhati; Mg. Pr. ciṣṭhadi (Pischel, § 483).

Kh. \sqrt{rup} , ruph. Cf. Skr. \sqrt{ruh} , causal passive, ropy-atē.

Ask.—B. W. \sqrt{kud} ; G. \sqrt{khud} ; Š. \sqrt{koj} , (dial) khuz. Cf. H. $\sqrt{khōj}$; derivation uncertain, possibly Skr. kṣudhyatē, he is agitated, or kṣudhyati, he is hungry.

K. $\sqrt{aphūc}$; Kś. $\sqrt{pričh}$. Cf. Av. $\sqrt{pərəs}$; Skr. \sqrt{prach} , prechati; Pr. pučhai; Pš. $\sqrt{puč}$.

Ass.—B. kur; V. kōru; P. kār; Kś. khar. Cf. Av. χava-; Wkh. χur; Prs. χar; Skr. khava-. Note the change of $a > u$, $ō$, as in Wkh.

W., G., Gār. gadā; K. gardō-k; Kh. gurdō-γ, gurdō-χ; M. ghadā. Cf. Skr. gardabhā-. Tom. 896 assumes that K. gardō-k is for Skr. gardaka-*. This cannot be right. The bh of gardabha- survives in the $ō$. The k is a regular suffix of K.

Š. žakūn. Cf. Bur. jakun.

Back.—B. plī; W. yǎ-paṭī; G. pišti; Š. (dial.) pātū; Kś. pušt. Cf. the following words for 'behind': B. di-kti; V. kčeh; W. pat; K. pištō; G. pata; P. paš-k-in; M. patō; Gār. patā; Š. phatū; Kś. pat, pačh. Cf. Av. paršti-; Prs. pušt; Wkh. part; Mj. piške; Yd. pišco; Skr. pr̥ṣṭha-.

K. ḍāk; M. ḍā (dial. ḍāg); Š. ḍakī. Cf. Wkh., Šg. dam, but the connection is doubtful. ? Cf. also Kś. trakh; Gār. tāng, see below.

V. gīci. This may be connected with kčeh, above.

Gār. tāng; Kś. trakh. ? Cf. Skr. trika-, the lower part of the spine.

Bad.—B. deger, daggar, digar; V. ḍigar. ? deriv.

W. abar. Numerous derivations (e.g., Skr. a-vara-) will suggest themselves, but none is certain.

K. χāce; G. χač; S. kācō. Cf. H. kaccā, unripe. Deriv. unknown.

Before, in front.—B. pa-myuk; V. ti-mikh; W. myuk-ne; Gār. mūka; Š. mōcō, (dial.) mōžē; M. mūṭhō; Gār. also muthō. Cf. Skr. mukha-, face.

G. puda-mi; P. pōrā; Kh. pru-ṣṭa. Cf. Skr. pravat- (Horn, 825); Sq. prōd; Prs. firōd, firō.

Belly.—B. ktol, ktol.

V. inl, omilu; G. wōr; M. wair; Gār. ḍār; Š. dēr, (dial.) ūar; Kś. yadⁿ (pron. yüḍ). Cf. Wkh. dur; Mj. yiler; Yd. wujud; (?) Skr. udara-, ūdara-. This grouping is very doubtful. If it is correct, d has been dropped in V., G., and M.; and, further, r has become l in V. Possibly it is d which has become l in V.—a regular change in this dialect—and the r is then dropped. In ḍār, dēr, initial u has been lost and the remaining vowel lengthened. Š. ūar recalls the rare Skr. ūdara (here also d has been dropped). Kś yüḍ recalls the Mj. yiler.

W. kiuč; K. P. kuc; P. also kūc. Cf. Šg. kīc; Sq. kec. Cf. Av. kuši-; Skr. kukṣi- (Tom., p. 787).

P. parhanikāle. Cf. Av. parant-; Prs. parand; Av. parəna-, feather; Skr. parṇa-, feather.

Kh. bōik, būik. ? Der.

M. ming; Š. bing, bring. ? Cf. Skr. bhṛṅga-.

Gār. carōr. ? Der.

Bring.—B. √giač; V. √giz; Gār. √gi; P. (?) √ae; Kh. √angi; ? der. B. (gi-ač) looks like a compound verb. In B. √ač = 'come.' In that case, so is V. giz. P. ae represents the second member of the compound. Kh. an-gi, is also a compound (see below). √gi = 'come' in Kh.

W. √arī; Š. √val. Aryan √radh (GIP. I², p. 417, § 209); Pš. rā-val-; Mj. √a-var; Yd. √a-wer. In W. the a is evidently a prefix > Av. ā.

K. √ōn; G. √an; Kh. an-gi (see above); Kś. √an. Cf. Skr. √nī, ā-nayati; H. √ān.

Brother.—B. brōh, brā; V. way-eh; W. brā; K. bāya; G. bliāia; P. lāī; Kh. brār; Kś. bāy^u; M. žā; Gār. jā; Š. jrā, žā. Cf. Av. brātar-; Prs. birādar; Mj. werāt; Yd. wrāt; Pš. wrōr; Skr. bhrūtar-.

This word developed after Aryan bh had become Eranian b. Li is liable to change to j, cf. Kś. māl^u, for mālu, father, māj^u, for mājī, mother. The M., Gār., and Š. forms have therefore come through forms like bliāia, lāī.

Bull.—B. aže, ašu; V. žc-št; G. ečī (cow). G.M. gō; P. gō-lāng; Š. (dial.) gōlō. Cf. Av. gāv-; Pš. γvā; Bal. gō-χ; Wkh. γü; Šg. žāv; Sq. žao (GIP. I², 300); Skr. gav-, gō-, an ox, cow. Here B., V., and G. follow Šg., Sq. P. gō-lāng is possibly a corruption of Tibetan glang, ox.

W. trā? Can the tr represent a c?

K. dōn; Š. dōnō; Kś. dād. Cf. Skr. daṇḍa-, a staff, power, (lexicons) a horse; Guj. ḍāḍ, lusty, sturdy; L. dād, ḍād, a bull; S. ḍḍād^u, a bull.

Kh. rešū, (a cow) lešū. Cf. Skr. ṛṣabha-.

See Cow.

Camel.—B. štyur; V. ištiur; W. ūk; G., M. ūχ. Cf. Av. uštra-; Wkh. üštür (with ü, cf. the yu and iu of B. and V.); Sq. χtiur; Yd. išcuro, cf. the common change of tr to c; Pš. ūχ.

K., Kh., Š. ut; Gār. ūth; Kś. wūth. Cf. Skr. uṣtra-.

Cat.—B. pišaš, pšīāš; V. pši-kh; W. pišā; K. phūša-k; G. psāsi; P. pšō-nd-ik, pšō-ŋ-ak; Kh. puši; Gār. pšī-r. Cf. Wkh. piš; Mj. piške; Pš. pišō; Prs. pušak.

Kś. brā^ā (pron. brör). Cf. Skr. bidāla-.

Š. būšī. Cf. Bur. buš. Possibly this is connected with the first series, but I have met no instance of initial p > b. Bur. buš may be the original of the whole series.

Child.—B. parmŋ; G. pola. ? Cf. Av. apərənāyu-, a boy; Prs. burnā. The elision of initial a is regular in Eranian before a single consonant. G. pola can hardly be from putrā, which becomes pult in that language, see 'Son.'

V. kiur, a child; Kś. kūr^ū, a girl, a daughter; ? Skr. kumāra-; H. kūar.

Š. šudar, šō. This can hardly be from suta-, considering the regular preservation of a medial t in these languages. Can it be connected with Skr. ksudra-?

Other words for 'child' are W. tana-muneh (apparently 'small man'); K. čhatak; P. ki^ālā; Kh. ažēli; M. māsūm (? dim. of māš, man); Gār. lakūṭōr; Kś. nyaciv^u (pron. necyur).

Clothe, put on clothes.—B. V. Janj; G. Janě; Kh. Janj. ? Cf. Av. paitiš-muxta-; Phl. pat-mōχtan; Wkh. Janmēts; Prs. mōza, a shoe (Horn, 994, 160).

Come.—B. Jač, Jačreč; V. Joč; W. Jačh. Cf. Šg. Sq. Jyet; Mj. Jaš; Yd. Jcs. The derivation of this is unknown, see GIP. 1², 323. Preč presupposes the prefix pra. It also means 'go.' See 'go.' I prefer to connect with pragacchati. Cf. B. Jgi-ač, V. Jgi-z; P. Jac, bring.

K. Jr(h); P. Jyē; Š. ē; M. Jai; Kś. Jyi. Cf. Av.

√i, ay, go; Skr. √ī, go; Av. ā + √ay; Prs. ā-yam, I come.

G. √jā; Gār. √ya; Š. √wā. Cf. Skr. √yā, go; Av. ā + √ay, as above.

Kh. √gi. ? Cf. Av., Skr. √gam, go; H. gayā, gone. But cf. also B. √gi-ač; V. √gi-z; Gār. √gi; Kh. √an-gi, all meaning 'bring,' q.v.

The following examples for 'came' are instructive:

B. ōze, ozz, ess, a'ā, afziū; V. ač-ukso; W. āt-ō.

K. au; G. aya; P. ā-k; Kh. hai, yao; M. ī-gā; Gār. yā, yā-g; B. aiyo; W. ā; Ks. āv.

Š. wā-tō.

The irregularities are great, but the roots can all be traced. Š. wātō may be compared with the Skr. āyāta-. So, also, possibly many of the second set. The forms are so abraded that it is impossible to be certain. Or we may compare Skr. ā-gata-.

Country.—B. gol; V. gul; W. gōl; Š. gui. The word is probably the same as that which is found in 'Bašgal,' and other Kāfiristān proper names. It is there explained to mean 'valley.' Cf. the term galī, applied to the valleys in the N.-W. Panjāb.

Cow.—B. gōh, gāo; V. gū-th; W. P., and M. gā; K. ga-k; G. čī; Gār. gāē; Š. gō; Ks. gāo. See 'Bull.'

Kh. lešū. See 'Bull.'

Dance.—B. nāt; P. √nāt; B. also √nōt; V., W., K., and G. √nač; M. and Gār. √nēt; Š. √nath, nat; Ks. √nač. Cf. Skr. √nṛt, nṛtyati.

Kh. √phon, √pon. ? Derivation.

Daughter.—V. luštu; Kh. jūr, žūr; B. jū, ju-k; W. jū; G. zū; K. chu; M. dhī; Š. δī; Gār. dūī; Š. also dī (plur. dījār-ē). Cf. Av. duγdar-; Mj. leqda; Pš. lūr. Cf. Skr. duhitar-; Pr. dhīdā, dhīā (for duhītā*, with transferred aspiration, see Pischel, Pr. Gram., § 148). The Av. γδ is elided in Pš. See GIP. I², 209. Elision of final r is common in these dialects. We may take the basis of most of these forms as dūr* or diur*, i being commonly inserted before u. The j in Š. dījār- may represent $\gamma\delta$, through a d. For the V. change of $\gamma\delta > \text{št}$, cf. Armenian dustr. In L., dhī, a daughter, makes its plural dhīrī. Remembering the frequent interchange between r and j, this may be compared with Š dījār-.

P. wēya. ? Cf. V. way-eh, a brother. Wēya may be a secondary feminine.

Kś. kūr^ñ. Cf. Skr. kumārī; V. kiur, a child. The Kś. base is kōrī*.

Day.—B. gujr. ? Cf. Prs. √gudar, pass by; H. √guzar.

V. ves; W. wās; K. and Kh. bas; G. bā; P. davās, dwās; M. dis; Gār. dōs; Š. dēs; Kś. dwah (pron. doh). Cf. Skr. divasa-.

K. and Kh. anus. ? Cf. Av. azan-; Skr. ahan-, with elision of h, or ? Skr. dina-, with elision of d.

Die.—B. √mṛ (imperat. mṛ-ev), die; V. mō (dead); W. √mṛ (imperat. mṛī); G. √mi (also = dead); Kh. √bri; M. Gār., and Kś. √mar; Gār. mūrš (dead); Š. √mir, die; mū (dead). In B. and W. r is the cerebral consonant, not the vowel γ . Aryan √mar. Cf. Sq. mīr-d, he dies; Prs. mīr-ad; Av. mairyāt; Šg. mūd-, dead; Prs. murd-an, to die. Skr. marati, mriyatē. M., Gār. and Kś. agree more closely with Skr. The rest are distinctly Eranian. The presence of r indicates an original rt (GIP. I², 208).

K. √naš. Cf. Skr. √naś, naśyati.

P. √lē (infin. l-īk), lē-im or lē-gā-kum, I am dying. ? Derivation.

Do, make.—B. √kor, (I do) kūnam, kotam, kaṛōnam, kšām; W. chēṛ-am, I shall do, cāst, he does; K. kār-em, I do; G. √ker; P. kar-am, ka-m, I do; Kh. √kor (we shall do, kō-si); M., Gār., and Kś. √kar. Av. √kar, kərənaoiti; Prs. √kar (I do, kun-am); Ghalcah √kar, √car (Tom., 879); Pś. kaw^al, kr^al (infinitive); Skr. √kar, karōti; Pr. √kar, karai or kuṛai.

V. √le; Š. ṭa-m, ta-m, I do. Av. √dā, dadāiti, make; Skr. √dhā, dadhāti (Horn, 521).

The following instances of the past tense and past participle are instructive :

B. kaṛa, pp.; W. kūr, kṛa, he made; K. āro, he made; G. ker-us, he did; P. ka-kin, he made; Kh. ar-er, he made; M. kara-g-il, he made; Gār. kēr, he made.

V. lē-go, he made; Š. θē-gō, tē-gō, he made.

Dog.—B. kuṛi, krūt; V. kiru-kh, keru-kh; M. kūsar; Gār. kūcur. Cf. Sq. kūd; Kurd. kūcik; Skr. kukkura-; H. kuttā. The derivation of this widely-spread word is unknown. See Tom. 761, GIP. I², 8. ? Cf. Bur. huk.

W. čū; K. šṛ; G. šunā; P. šūṛi-ng; Š. šū; Kś. hūn^u. Cf. Mede (Herodotus), σπάκα; Av. span-; Skr. śun-; Pš. spai; Arm. šun.

Kh. rēni. ? Derivation.

Duck.—I quote the following. The other languages employ loan-words.

B. aṛ; W., K., and Kh. āṛi; G. aṛi; Gār. ār. ? Cf. Vedic Skr. āṛi- or āti-.

V. želai. Cf. Mj. yelke; Yd. yeško.

Ear.—B. kōr; W. and Kh. kār; P. kāṛ; K. kuṛō, krō; G. kham-ṭa; M. kāṛ; Gār. kyan; Š. kūn, kōn; Kś. kan. Cf. Av. karəna- (Horn, 845); Skr. karṇa-.

V. imu.

Eat.—B. √yū (past 3, iyā); V. √oyu; W. √yū; K. √zu; G. √zo; P. √e, √a; Kh. √zu (past oyo-stam, I ate). Cf. Prs. jāv-īdan, to chew (origin uncertain, Horn, 415); Wkh. √yav (yīt, he eats); Pš. žōw-^{al}, to chew; Bal. jāy-ag, ditto. The prefix o probably represents ara=Prs. ō. Tom. (852) connects Wkh. yav with Skr. √av. The above examples show that this is wrong.

M. √kha; Gār. √khō; Š. √ka; Kś. √khi. Cf. Skr. √khād, khādati; H. √khā; Prs. χāyīdan. With Kś. khi, cf. Hindī khi-l-ānā, to cause to eat.

Eye.—B. and W. acē; V. iži; K. and Kh. ec; G. īri-n; (?) P. anc. Cf. Av. aši-.

Kh. γec; M. ainch; Gār. iḥ; Š. achī, āḥē; Kś. achī. Cf. Skr. akṣi-.

The Kh. γec is doubtful. The derivation offered suggests the forms akṣi > akīṣi > akec > kec > γec, or the γ may be prosthetic.

Famine, dearness (of food, etc.).—K. dragāž; Kh. drāγānj; Kś. drāg. Derivation unknown. Tom. (899), compares the Kś. word drag^u, dear, with Slavonic drag. One is reminded of the last syllable of the Skr. mahārgḥa-.

Far, distant.—B. dyuṛ, dyoṛ; W. ? sudu; K. dē-ša; G. durae; P., M., Š., and Kś. dūr; Kh. do-dēri (locative?); Gār. dēōr. Cf. Av. Skr. dūra-; Av. loc. dūir-e (ELA. 99); Wkh. δῖr; Pš. livē.

V. tikkē. ? Derivation.

Father.—B. tōt, tōtt; W. tata, tā; P. tātī; Kh. tat. Cf. Skr. tata-, tāta-; Greek τέτρα; Latin tata; Wkh., Mj. tāt.

K. dāda. Cf. Šg. dād.

M. mhāla; Š. mālō; Kś. māl^u. Cf. Š. mālī, mother. The word for 'father' is a corresponding masculine. It can hardly be here a nursery word.

V. yā. Numerous derivations are possible for this, but none are certain.

Finger.—B. angyur; V. igi; W. āgūr; K. angurya-k; Gār. angir; Š. agui; Kś. anguj^u (for angulī). Cf. Skr. aṅgulī-, aṅguri-; Prs. (Kāśānī) angulī.

Kh. camuṭ. ? Derivation.

Finger-ring.—B. angušti; V. wōgix; W. āguštō; K. angušt-ar; P. angōc-^ak; Kh. pulungušt; Gār. angusir. Cf. Av. aṅgušta-, toe; Prs. angušt-ar, a ring; Sq. ingaxt, a finger; Wkh. pulangušt, a ring.

Š. barōnō. Cf. Bur. burundo.

Fire.—B. agō, angā; V. an-ekh; K., G., P., and Kh. angār; Gār. āgār; M., Š. aḡār; M. (also), Kś, nār; Š. (also), haḡār. Cf. Skr. aṅgāra-, agni-; Prs. aṅišt.

W. ēr. Cf. Av. aθr-; Mj. yūr; Yd. yūr; Pš. ōr.

In the word for son θr > tr in W., see 'son.' The Šg. for 'fire' is yāč, like puč, son (cf. GIP. I², 303). In these dialects rt, tr, can become r, r. Cf. Pš. muṛ for murta* dead. See 'die.'

Š. (dial.) phu. Cf. Bur. phū.

Foot.—B. kyur, kūr; K., G., Gār., and M. khur; Kś. khōr; Š. (dial.) kūti. Cf. Skr. khura-.

W. pā-pō; P. pā, pai; Š. pā; Kh. po-ug. Cf. Av. pāda-: Prs. pā.

V. thiṭē, iṭē. ? cf. Skr. sthita-.

Fowl.—B. kakak; V. kakokā; K. kakawak. Cf. Skr. *kṛkavāku-

The survival of this Vedic word almost letter for letter in K. is remarkable.

W. kiukiū; G. *kukuṣ; P. *kukūr; Kh. kukū; M. *kukō; Gār. *kūkuṣ, *kuḡū; Š. *kankōrō-cō; Kś. kwakur (pr. *kokur). Cf. Skr. *kukkūṣa-

Although classed under 'fowl,' those marked with an asterisk mean 'cock.'

Give.—B. $\sqrt{prē}$ (past part. ptā); V. $\sqrt{apḥle}$ (pp. apḥlē-go, polo-go); W. prē (pratā); K. prau, he gave; Kh. prai, he gave. ? Cf. Av. $\sqrt{dā}$, daḍāiti, he gives, with prefix fra (pra); Wkh. $\sqrt{ru-dā}$ (pp. ratt-, ḍett-); Mj. lia, he gave. The prefix in V. may be ā + pra.

G. $\sqrt{ḥla}$ (pp. ḥlit-). Cf. Av. $\sqrt{dā}$, daḍāiti, he puts; Šg. $\sqrt{ḍed}$ (pp. dād-); Skr. $\sqrt{dhā}$, dadhāti.

K. \sqrt{de} ; P. and Š. $\sqrt{dē}$; Kh. $\sqrt{dī}$; M. \sqrt{dai} (pp. dit); Gār. $\sqrt{dā}$; Kś. $\sqrt{dī}$ (pp. dit^u). Note the change of ā to i, e, as in Prs. dih-am; Pāli, dēti; H. dē-nā. Av. Skr. $\sqrt{dā}$.

W. \sqrt{ao} . ? Cf. Bur. $\sqrt{yū}$, or possibly ā + $\sqrt{dā}$ .

Go.—B. $\sqrt{preč}$; V. \sqrt{pez} . See 'come.' Derivation doubtful. Several suggest themselves—e.g., pra + \sqrt{yat} (see 'come'), or Skr. prēṣita-; Prs. firišta. I am inclined to suggest Av. fra-jasaiti; Skr. pra-gacchati.

B. $\sqrt{vī}$; W. $\sqrt{ī}$; K., and P. $\sqrt{pār-i}$. See 'come.'

W. jeū; Gār. cō. Cf. Wkh. cau-am, I go. O. Prs. $\sqrt{šiyar-}$, Av. $\sqrt{šav}$.

P. $\sqrt{pā}$ (pres. pāk-am, I go; paṛ-a, he goes) Kś. \sqrt{pak} ; K. pai, having gone. Derivation doubtful. ? Cf. Skr. pra-kramatē.

Kh. bī (both 'become' and 'go'); M. \sqrt{ba} ; S. \sqrt{bo} . Cf. Av. \sqrt{bav} , become; Skr. $\sqrt{bhū}$, become. Compare Prs.

šudan, 'to go,' hence 'to become.' So in the Pamir dialects. Here the order of change of ideas is reversed. It is noteworthy that Kh. has boya- for its imperfect base. Cf. Š. bojam, I go.

G. dī. ? Derivation.

The past participle of this verb is as follows :

B. go ; W. goā ; G. gā ; P. gī-k ; Gār. gā ; Š. gaō ; Kś. gaur. The others are regular ; V. pez-ekso ; K. pār-au ; Kh. bayai ; M. baī-gā. Go, etc., are of course to be referred to Skr. gata-.

Goat (male).—B. gaš (pl. šere) ; V. geš (pl. šē) ; W. groš. (?)

K. bīra ; Gār. bīr, bīrā-ṭh ; V. beir (a she-goat). (?)

Gold.—B. sūn, sōn ; V. šiu ; W. and G. son ; K. sūṛa ; P. sōnā ; Kh. sōr-m ; Š. sōn ; Kś. svan (pron. son). Cf. Skr. svarṇa-.

Graze, lead to pasture.—W.; K., and Gār. \sqrt{car} ; Kh. \sqrt{roch} ; M. $\sqrt{sār}$; Š. \sqrt{cer} . Not noted elsewhere. Kh. has metathesis. Cf. Av. Skr. \sqrt{car} ; Mj. \sqrt{car} .

Great, large.—B. āl ; Kh. lott. (?) derivation. Cf. Pś. lōē ; Wkh. lup ; Turkī ulup (Tom. 816). But this is explaining obscurity by obscurity.

V. wištar. Cf. Pś. star. Cf. Av. staurra-, firm, compact ; Skr. sthūra-, sthūla- (Geiger, E.L.A. 204).

K. ɣona; P. gaṇ; M. ɣō; Gār. giāu. Cf. Skr. ghana-; Prs. āgīn, full (Horn, 41).

The Gār. word is doubtful. The suggested derivation supposes a change of ḍ to th, and elision of st as in B. and M. But this does not account for the r. Cf. however Gār. thōs, head.

Head.—B. šei, pšai; V. ji; W. šei; G. šau-ṭa; Kh. sor; P. šir; Ks. hūr. Cf. Av. sarah-; Mj. pūser; Yd. pūs; Skr. śiras-.

K., M., and Š. šiš, šiš; (?) Gār. thōs. Cf. Skr. śiṛṣa-.

The B. pšai, compared with Mj. and Yd., suggest an Eranian and not an Indian connection for the first five words. As for Gār. thōs, cf. Gār. thair, hand.

Hear.—He heard,—B. san-gāya; V. uusi-ogo; K. san-gyes; M. šun-gil. Gāya in B. san-gāya, gyes in K. san-gyes, probably mean 'went.' Cf. H. sun-jānū, to hear. V. has metathesis. Cf. Av. $\sqrt{\text{srar}}$; Skr. $\sqrt{\text{śru}}$; Prs. šunūdan.

W. gur; G. goṛa; M. ghō; Gār. gōr; P. gōṛā; Kś. gur^m. Cf. Skr. ghōṭa-ka-.

House.—B. ama, amu; W. ama; G. āma. (?)

V. war-ekh, tar-ekh (spelt tareq); K. and Kh. dūr; Kś. lūr. Cf. Av. dvar-; Prs. dar; Kurd. bar; Pš. var; Wkh. bār; Mj. labra; Skr. dvār-, a door.

K. hāndūn. Cf. Av. antarə; Phl., Prs. andarūn. It is unnecessary to connect this directly with Skr. anta-, as suggested by Tom. 896.

Kh. χata-n. (?) cf. Av. kata-; Phl. kata-k; Mj. kei.

P. gōsa-g, gōši-ng; M.Š. gōt; Š (dial.), gōš, gōž. (?) cf. Skr. gōṣṭha- or gōtra-.

M. bhā. (?) cf. Skr. bharana-.

Gār. šif, šiv. (?)

Hunger.—B. ot, āt; V. ūt; W. avot; G. hawat (hunger, famine); P. hawata giyārī, wata-tiyārī. Cf. Ar. qaḥṭ. There is little doubt about this derivation. The usual word for 'famine' is a compound such as 'hunger-year'; cf. H., Prs. qaḥṭ-sāl.

K. nōra; Š. ūnai; Š. dial., uniāl or nirōnu, hungry. Tom. 897, derives this from Skr. anāhāra-. It is not impossible.

Kh. chuī; M. būcha; Gār. būthō (hungry); Kś. bōchī. Cf. Skr. bubhukṣā.

Inside, within.—B. atē, atēr; W. attar; K. uḍrī-man; G. atra-n; Kh. andr-ēnī; Kś. andar. Cf. Av. antarə; Skr. antar; Prs. andar.

V. tibzi. (?) deriv. (probably ti-bzi, to-within, a dative of motion).

Iron.—B. cimr, cimeh; V. žema; W. cima; K. cīmbar; G. čimar; P., Gār., Š. cimar; P. cumar; Kh. cumr, cumūr; M. šēwar; Š (dial.) cingār. Cf. Bur. chomar.

Kś. šistar. Cf. Skr. śastra-, a weapon, iron, steel.

Kid.—B. cō; V. iša; W. cū. Cf. Wkh. cōγ, which Tom. 765 connects with Av. garəwa-, Skr. garbha-.

Live, be alive.—B. šūwǎ, alive; šū, life; V. šō-ōkzo, he is alive; W. šūda, alive; K., Kh. junu, alive; G. zien, alive; Kh. also žanū, alive; Gār. jāndō, living; Š. jīno, alive. Others borrow from Prs. Cf. Av. Skr. √jīw; Av. jvaiti (for jīvaiti), he lives; j(ī)rant-, living; Skr. jīvati, he lives.

Lose.—B. psē-stai, he was lost; V. psū-ogo, he lost; W. pus, he was lost; pius (ppp.), lost; G. phus-a-us, he was lost, phuz-dī, lost. (?) Deriv.

Make (see 'do').

Man.—B. mañje; S. manujrō, manužō. Cf. Skr. manuja-.

W. manaš; B. mančī, mach-kur; K. mōc; V. muš; Š. mūš; Kh. mōš; M. māš; Gār. mēš; Kś. mahan-icu. Cf. Skr. mānuša-, mānušya-. In Kś. there has been metathesis of h (for š) and n.

V. warjemi.

G. lauri.

Moon, month.—B. mōs; V. mas-ekh; W., Kh. mās; G. māsoi. Cf. Skr. māsa-; Av., O. Prs. māh-.

K. mastr-uk. Cf. Pš. myāšt; Šg. mēst.

P. mai(y)-ik. Cf. Av., O. Prs. māh-; Pš. -maī; Dig. Oss. māyü; Tag. müi; Wkh. müi.

M. yū; Gār. yasūn; Š. yūn, gyūn; Kś. zūn. (?) Cf. Skr. jyōtsnā; Pr. jōṇhā, moonlight. Cf. also, Wkh. jūmāk; Mj. yumega, yomṛa; Yd. imorṇo.

Mother.—B. nū, nōn; V., Kh. nan. Cf. Skr. nanā; Wkh. nān; Mj. nēnā; Sq. anā; Prs. nana; Albanian, nane (see Horn, 1,044).

W. oie; K. āya; G. jai; P. āi; Gār. yaī; Š. (dial.) āžē. ? Cf. Skr. jāyatē, he is born.

M. mhāi; Š. mālī; Kś. māj^ū (pron. mōj). Cf. Prs. mādar; Sq. mād; Pš. mōr.

Mouth.—B. aši; B., K. aši; V. iš; W. āš; G. hāsi; M., Gār. āi; Š. āī, (dial.) āzī; Kś. āśⁱ (pron. ōśⁱ). Cf. Skr. ās-, āśya-.

Kh. apak. Cf. Yd. pkor.

Nose.—B. nazu-r, *nasu-r*¹; V. *nes*¹; W. *nasū*¹; K. *nāteu-r*³; G. *nasi*¹; P. *nāst*³; Kh. *nas-kā-r*²; M. *nathū-r*³; Gār. *nōzō-r*¹; Š. nātō, *nutō*³; Kś. *nast*³. Cf. Av. nāōnhā-; Old Prs. nāh-; Šg. *nej*¹; Sq. nāz; Skr. *nāsā*¹, *nāsikā*², *nasta*³. Cf. Brugmann, Grundriss, i., 416. The original form is nās-, to which various suffixes (? diminutives) have been added.

Out, outside.—B. baṛ, beṛē; V. be; W. ber; K. bī-en; G. berū-ta; P. dōrē; Kh. bēri; Š. darū; Kś. nyabar (pr. nebar). Cf. Av. drar-, a door; Skr. drār; Prs. bēr-ūn, dar, outside. The affiliation of Kś. is doubtful (see Horn, 252, 545, 546). The change of dv > b is East Eranian. GIP.I², 76, 414. The ē is due to epenthesis of i (see GIP.I², 34). Cf. 'House.'

Ring (see 'finger-ring').

See.—B. √war; W. √vēṛ. Cf. Av. vaēn-āmi, I see; Prs. bīn, seeing; Wkh. wīn-am, I see.

K. √āweš; Kś. √wuch. Deriv. to me doubtful. Several suggest themselves. Cf. (e.g.) Ghalcah √vis (Tom. 857), or Skr. vīkṣ.

P. √laš; Gār. √liḥ. Cf. Skr. √dṛś, ppp. dṛṣta-.

Kh. √poš; M. √paš; Š. √pac, (dial.) √pāš. Cf. Skr. √paś, paśyati.

V. uskō-zi, having seen (? deriv.).

K. jaḡ-a, he saw (? deriv.).

G. tā-us, he saw (? deriv.).

Self.—V. šō; W. šū. Cf. Av. χ^va-tō; Skr. sva-; Prs. χu-d; Šg. χu.

W., G. tanu (own); P. tāni-k; Kh. tan; M. tā; Gār. tauī (own); Š. tomō; Kś. pāna. Cf. Skr. ātman-; Shb. ata-; Pr. appa-.

G. phu-ka (?).

Send.—V. √es; G. √ša; Kh. √weš. Cf. Skr. √iṣ, ēṣati.

W. prešya, he was sent. Cf. Skr. prēṣita-.

Share, division.—B. baṛ-este; V. buṭ-og; W. maṭ-iui;

K. baš; P. wante; G. √bent, divide; M. baṭ-ha. Cf. Skr. √vat, vaṭati; √vaṇṭ, vaṇṭati.

Shoe.—B. wača; V. wezil; W. wačai (? deriv.).

G. kōš-ar; Kh. kauš; M., Gār. kōš; Kś. kñš. Cf. Prs. kafš.

Silver.—B. aru, ariu; V. iuri; W. ūrei; K. rūwā; G. rup; Š. rūp; Ks. rrap (pron. rop). Cf. Skr. rūpa- Kh. druḡm. Cf. Greek δραχμή (Tom. p. 895).

Singing, a song.—B. lālu; V. lol. (?) Cf. Skr. āhlāda-, rejoicing, or √lal, sport.

K. gūro; P. gē; M. gēla. Cf. Skr. gāna-.

Kh. baše-ik. Cf. Skr. vādyā-.

Sister.—B. sus; V. siusu; W. sōs; G. sase; P. sāi; Kh. ispuṣār; Tirhai, spaz; Gār. išpō, (dial.) šū; Š. sah. Cf. Skr. svasār-; Av. χ^aañhar-; Wkh. χūi. This word, therefore, branched from the Aryan stock before the development of the Eranian χ. The preservation of the long ā in Kh. ispuṣār is remarkable.

M. bhē; Kś. byaṇa (pron. benye). Cf. Skr. bhaginī; H. bahin or bhain.

Sit.—B. √niž; W. G. Kh. √niš; K. √nis; P. √nī. Cf. Av. nišhidaiti, he sits; Prs. nišī-n, seated; Skr. ni-√sad, nišīdati.

V. √bišl, √ašl. Cf. Skr. upa- (or ava-) sīdati. The final l, however, points rather to an Av. δ.

M. √bhai; Gār. √bai; Š. √bē; Kś. √byah (pron. bch). Cf. Skr. upa-viśati; H. √bais.

Slave.—B. loṇē; W. larèr; G. lawand; P. lawant. Cf. Prs. larand, a volunteer. Probably confused with H. lauṇḍā.

Son.—B. piṭr, puṭr; V. piē; W. piutr; K. pātr; G. pult; P. puṭhlē; M. pūṭh; Gar. puṭ, (dial.) pūc; Š. puč, (dial.) puš. Cf. Av. puθra-; Wkh. pōtr; Šg. puč; Sq. pöč (GIP, I², 303; Gray, 567); Prs. pus, pusar (GIP, I², 86); Skr. putra-; S. puṭu.

Kh. žau, au. Cf. Prs. zeh, a child; Av. √zan; Skr. √jan. Not likely to be derived from Skr. jāta, as t is rarely elided.

Kś. gwabur (pron. gobur). Cf. Bengali, gābhur, a youth.
Star.—B. rašta; V. ištī-kh; Kh. istāri; P. sitāra (loan-word). Cf. Av. star-; Wkh. stār; Yd. stāre; Prs. sitāra.

W. tarā; K. tāri; G. tāre; P. tārā; M. tāra; Š. tārū; Kś. tāru-kh. Cf. Skr. tārā.

In B. there has been metathesis of r. In V. there has been elision of r.

Sun.—B. sū; V. isi-kh; W. sōi; K. sūri; G. suri; P. sur; M. suṭr; Gār. sīr; Š. sūrī; Kś. sivī. Cf. Skr. sūrya-.

Kh. yōr. Cf. Av. ayarə-; Wkh. yīr.

Tongue.—B. dič; V. luzu-kh; Kh. liḡi-ni.

W. jip; K., Š., P. jib; P. also jub; Gār. jībh. Cf. Skr. jihvā.

G. zib; M. zēb; Kś. zēo. Cf. Av. hizū-; Šg. zēv; Sq. zīv.

The Kś. zēo can hardly come direct from jihvā, as that language preserves j unchanged before i or e in Indian derived words.

Tooth.—B. dutt; V. let-em; W. dūt; K. dand-ōria-k; G. dāt; P. dānd, dānt; Kh. don; M. dān; Gār., Kś. dand; Š. dōn. Cf. Av. dantan-; Prs. dandān; Yd. lad; Mj. lādi; Skr. danta-.

Water.—B. ōr, āo; V. āv-eh; W. ao; K. u-k; G. aū; Kh. ū-γ; M. wī; Gār. ū; Š. wei, wōi, wē; Kś. āb. Cf. Av. āp-; Wkh. vī-k; Mj. yau-γā; Pś. ōba; Kurd (Kurmanji), āwe; Skr. ap-.

P. war-k. Cf. Av. vāra-, rain; Prs. bārān; Wkh. wūr; Skr. vār-, water.

What?—B. kē, kai; W. kas; G. ki; K. kā; P. kō; Kh. kya; Gār. kai; M. gī; Š. keh (why?); Kś. kyāh. Cf. Av. Skr. ka-.

V. psch. (?) Cf. Av. evant-, with metathesis of ev, vc > ps. Cf. V. pēhe, why?, which is apparently another form of the same word.

Š. jek, (dial.) žok (? deriv.). Can it be connected with Av. ca-, or possibly M. gī (see above) > Š. je-?

Woman, wife.—B. W. ištrī; V. westi; K. istri; G. ši-gālī; P. šlī-kā, hlī-kā; Gār. is; Š. cei, (dial.) čhrī-ga, čhaī; Kś. trēi, traī. Cf. Wkh. strēi; Sq. stir; Skr. strī. The preservation of tr is typical.

B. jugūr.

W. mēši; G. maši; P. māši. These are feminines of the corresponding word for 'man.'

Kh. kimēri. (?) Cf. Skr. kumārī, a virgin.

Š. dāi, ten. See numerals.

8. $\bar{a} > \bar{a}, \bar{u}, o$.—The change of a to o, and of \bar{a} to \bar{a} is common in East Erastian. (Cf. GIP. I², p. 295.) In Afrīdī Pś. the change of \bar{a} to \bar{a} is universal. The further change of \bar{a} or o to \bar{o} , and thence to \bar{u} is easy. In Wazīrī Pś. every a becomes \bar{o} . In Shb. there are several instances of $a > u$.

Skr. $\sqrt{strī}$, Wkh. $\sqrt{strēi}$, Sq. \sqrt{stir} ; B., W., $\sqrt{ištrī}$, P. $\sqrt{šlī-kā}$, V. \sqrt{westi} , K. \sqrt{istri} , Gār. \sqrt{is} , Š. $\sqrt{čhri-ga}$, but Š. also \sqrt{cei} , $\sqrt{čaī}$, Kś. $\sqrt{trēi}$, \sqrt{trai} , a woman.

14. i > 1.—Skr. $\sqrt{śiras-}$; P. $\sqrt{šir}$, Kś. $\sqrt{hīr}$, head.

P. $\sqrt{nī}$, sit. See No. 13.

Gār. $\sqrt{jībh}$, tongue. See No. 13.

15. ĩ > ē, ai, ēī.—In Š. \sqrt{ai} and $\sqrt{ēī}$ are convertible.

P. $\sqrt{yē}$, M. \sqrt{ai} , come. Doubtful. These probably represent the Skr. \bar{a} + $\sqrt{ēti}$.

Š. \sqrt{cei} , $\sqrt{čaī}$, Kś. $\sqrt{trēi}$, \sqrt{trai} , a woman. See No. 13.

16. i > u.—V. $\sqrt{luzu-kh}$, as compared with B. $\sqrt{dič}$, Kh. $\sqrt{liṅi-ni}$, a tongue.

P. \sqrt{jub} , a tongue. See No. 13.

17. Insertion of i, y, or e.—Cf. the English dialectic pronunciation of u as yu, as in 'Lyuey' for 'Lucy.' Cf. also the pronunciation of such words as 'duty.'

This is common before ü or õ.

V. iul, belly. See Vocab.

24. u > \bar{u} .—So in Sq. (GIP. I², 294).

Š. kūti, foot. See No. 20.

Š. dū or dū. See numerals.

In both cases due to a following i.

25. \check{u} > a.—Š. kankōrō-cō, a fowl. See No. 20.

Av. būza-; W. wasei, but B. wez-eh, a she-goat.

This change also occurs in Shb. In Pš. \bar{u} > a before nasals and r, GIP. I², 208.

26. \check{u} > \check{i} , \check{e} .—In Wazirī Pš., \bar{u} is regularly changed to \bar{i} .

V. $\sqrt{išt}$, Gār. \sqrt{it} , arise. Doubtful. See Vocab.

V. ti-mikh, in front. See No. 20.

Kh. do-dēri, K. dē-sa, far. See No. 20. These are doubtful.

V. igi, Gār. angir, finger. See No. 20.

M. swīr, Gār. sīr, Kś. sivī, sun. See No. 20.

Due to the influence of the following y of sūrya-.

27. Aphæresis of u.—Skr. upa-vīsati, he sits down; M. \sqrt{bai} , Gār. \sqrt{bai} , Š. bē, Kś. byah, beh, sit.

28. Metathesis of ŭ.—B. štyur, V. ištiur, camel. See No. 20.

V. iuri, W. ūrei, silver. See No. 20.

29. Prothesis of u.—V. ušū, six. See numerals.

30. Syncope of ŭ.—This is most common in B.

K. kurō or krō, ear. See No. 47.

Mj. pūser, Yd. pūsṛ; B. pšai or šei, a head.

B. $\sqrt{psē}$, V. $\sqrt{psā}$, as compared with W. \sqrt{pus} , lose.

B. kuṛi or krūṛ, a dog.

31.— $\underset{\circ}{r} > \check{a}$.—Common in India. Rare in Eranian. Skr. $\sqrt{nṛt}$, nṛtyati; B. $\sqrt{nāt}$, P. $\sqrt{nāt}$, V., W., K., G. $\sqrt{naṭ}$, Š. \sqrt{nath} or nat, Kś. $\sqrt{nač}$, but B. also $\sqrt{nōt}$, M., Gār. $\sqrt{nēṭ}$, dance.

Skr. kṛkavāku-, a cock; B. kakak, V. kakokū, K. kakawak, a fowl.

Skr. $\sqrt{dṛś}$, ppp. dṛśta-; P. $\sqrt{laś}$, but Gār. $\sqrt{liṭh}$, see.

32. $\underset{\circ}{r} > i$.—Gār. $\sqrt{liṭh}$, see. See No. 31.

In País. $\underset{\circ}{r}$ becomes i; dṛśta- $>$ tiṭṭha-.

33. $\underset{\circ}{r} > \bar{e}$.—M., Gār. $\sqrt{nēṭ}$, dance. See No. 31.

34. $r \circ > \bar{o}$.—B. $\sqrt{n\bar{o}t}$, dance. See No. 21.

35. $r \circ > or$.—Skr. $r̥kṣa-$; Kh. $orč$, a bear. See Tom. p. 894.

36. $r \circ > re, le$.—Skr. $r̥sabha-$; Kh. $rešū$, a bull, but $lešū$, a cow. The distinction is interesting. In C. País. r may optionally be changed to l .

37. $\bar{e} = \check{e} > ya, \check{a}$.—Skr. $kēśa-$; G. $khēs$, hair.

Skr. $\bar{e}ṣati$, he sends; V. $\check{e}s$, Kh. $\check{u}eš$, but G. $\check{e}ša$, send.

Skr. $prēṣita-$; W. $prešya$, sent.

Skr. $\bar{e}-ka-$, Phl. $\bar{e}v-ak$, Prs. yak ; W., K., Š. ek , G. yak , Kś. akh , Gār., M. ak , one. See numerals.

Av. $aēva-$; B. \bar{e} , ev , Gār. \bar{a} , one. See numerals.

38. $\bar{e} > \bar{i}$.—Possibly K. $u\bar{d}r\bar{i}$ - for Av. $antar\bar{e}$ is an example. See No. 1.

Av. $aēva-$; W., P., Kh. \bar{i} , V. $ip-in$, one. See numerals.

39. Aphæresis of \bar{e} .—G. $\check{e}ša$, send. See No. 37.

40. Metathesis of e .—Av. $antar\bar{e}$; B. $at\bar{e}r$, inside. See No. 1.

41. Prothesis of \bar{e} .—Av. $gāiv-$, Sq. $žao$ (GIP. I², 300); G. $e\check{e}\bar{i}$, but B. $ažē$, V. $žē-št$, a bull.

42. $ai > ei$.—So in Sq. (GIP. I², 296).

In Š ai and ei are convertible. Thus: Š. cei , $čha\bar{i}$ or $čhr\bar{i}-ga$, Kś. $tr\bar{e}\bar{i}$, $trai$, a woman. Cf. Wkh. $str\bar{e}\bar{i}$. See No. 13.

43. $ai > oi$.—(?) Skr. $jāyat\bar{e}$, he is born, $jāyā$, a wife; W. oie , but G. jai , Š. $āž\bar{e}$, K. $āya$, P. $\bar{a}\bar{i}$, a mother.

44. $\bar{o} = \ddot{o}, \hat{a}$.—Skr. krōḍa-; K. gro, breast.

Av. gāiv-, Śg. žāv, Sq. žao (GIP. I², 300), Bal. gō-, Skr. gav-, gō-; G. gā, M. gō, P. gō-lāng, Ś. gō-lō, but B. aže, ašu, V. že-št, a bull; B. gōh, gāo, Ś. gō, but V. gū-ṭh, W., P., M. gā, K. ga-k, Gār. gāē, Kś. gāo, G. eī, a cow.

Skr. ghōṭa-ka-; G. goṛa, M. ghō, Gār. gōr, P. gōṛā, but W. gur, Kś. gur^u, a horse.

P. gōš^u-g, gōšī-ng, M., Ś. gōt, Ś. gōš, gōž, a house. See Vocab.

45. $\bar{o} > \check{i}, e$.—In Wazīri Pš. \bar{o} is regularly changed to \bar{e} . Cf. also Av. gaoša-, Wkh. γiš, ear.

B. aže, V. že-št, a bull, G. eī, a cow. See No. 44.

46. $\bar{o} > \ddot{u}$.—Cf. Av. gaoša-, Yagnōbī, guš, Yd. γū, ear. W. gur, Kś. gur^u, a horse. See No. 44.

47. k = k.—As in Paiš. k is preserved whether initial or medial, but examples of the latter are not decisive. Thus:

Av. Skr. $\sqrt{\text{kar}}$, do; B., Kh. $\sqrt{\text{kor}}$, K. $\sqrt{\text{kār}}$, G. $\sqrt{\text{ker}}$, P., M., Gār., Kś. $\sqrt{\text{kar}}$, but W. $\sqrt{\text{cher}}$, do.

B. kuṛi, krūi, V. kiru-kh, keru-kh, M. kūsar, Gār. kūcur, dog. See Vocab.

Skr. karṇa-; B. kōr, W., Kh., kār, P. kāṛ, K. kuṛō, krō, M. kāṇ, Ś. kūn, kōn, Kś. kan, but G. kham-ṭa, Gār. kyan, ear.

Skr. kṛkavāku-, a cock; B. kakak, V. kakokū, K. kakawak, fowl.

Av. Skr. ka-; B. kē, kai, W. kas, G. ki, K. kīa, P. kō, Kh. kya, Ś. keh, Kś. kyāh, Gār. kai, but M. gī, what?

Skr. ē-ka-, Phl. ēv-ak; W., K., Ś. ek, G. yak, Gār., M. ak, but Kś. akh, one. See numerals.

48. k > kh, χ > γ .—This occurs frequently in V. where the termination k is commonly represented by kh, as in V. war-ekh, a house, mas-ekh, moon, ištī-kh, star. See

No. 3. In Kś. every final k must become kh, as in tāru-kh, a star. See No. 3.

Initial k regularly becomes kh in some East Eranian languages, and the change also occurs in the following:

Skr. kēśa-; G. khēs, hair.

Av. kata-; Kh. χata-n, a house.

G. kham-ta, an ear. See No. 47. This is doubtful. Cf. No. 51.

In Kh. gurdō-χ or gurdō-γ, an ass, a k has first become χ, and then become γ. So Kh. ū-γ, water, hato-γo, his. Cf. Pś. ha-γ^a, he. See nominal suffixes.

49. k > g.—This has only been noticed initially in M. gī, what? See No. 47. Compare Tūr Kurd, gō. It will be observed that the k is initial. As in Paś. medial k is apparently preserved. See, however, Nos. 53 and 54. Another example is in V. att-ege, one. See numerals. In the V. k-suffix regularly becomes g when final, or between two vowels, and there are also one or two other examples of this in other languages. See nominal suffixes. So also in the k-suffix in Š. and M., and in B. present participles.

50. k > ky > c, ch.—Gār. kyan, ear.

Av. \sqrt{kar} , Pāmir dialects \sqrt{kar} , \sqrt{car} , do; W. cheṛ-am, I will do; cā-st, he does.

This is common in Eranian. See GIP. I², 419. It does not occur in Paś. In Kś. grammar k > c when followed by \bar{u} (< \bar{i}) or y. Thus \sqrt{thak} , be weary; past part. fem. thacū, Aorist thacyōr.

51. k > h, aphæresis of k.—The Arabic word qaḥṭ appears as follows: G. hawat, P. hawata-, wata, B. ot, ât, V. ūt, W. avot, hunger.

Av. Skr. \sqrt{kar} , do make; K. āro, Kh. ar-er, he made. But W. cā-st, see above. Others retain the k. See No. 47.

52. kk > k.—Skr. kukkuṭa-; W. kūkiu, G. kukur, Gār. kūkur, P. kūkūr, Kh. kūkū, M. kūkō, Kś. kwakur, kokur. But Š. kankōrō-cō, Gār. also kugū, a cock. Only in the semi-Indian Gār. is the preceding vowel lengthened in compensation.

53. kk > g, kk > nk.—See No. 52.

54. kr > kr, gr.—Two examples have been noted:

Skr. kraya-, K. kre, purchase.

Skr. krōḍa-, K. gro, breast.

The r is preserved. Compare He. iv, 398, and Shb. parakramati, etc.

55. kṣ > (k)kh.—Only in Skr. pakṣin-, Kś. pākhī, for pakhhī, with compensatory lengthening and nasalization. A purely Indian form. Other forms are K. pachīy-ek, G. pici-n, Gār. pašī-n. In none of these is there any compensatory lengthening.

56. kṣ > c, ch, č.—Skr. akṣi-, Av. ašī-; B. W. acē, K., Kh. ec, G. iči-n, P. ane, Kh. γec, M. ainch, Š. achī, ačhē, Kś. achi, but V. iži, Gār. iṭh, an eye.

G. pici-n, K. pachīy-ek, a bird. See No. 55.

Kh. chui, M. būcha, Kś. bōchī, Gār. būṭhō, hunger. See No. 20.

Skr. ṛkṣa-, Kh. orč, a bear (Tom. 894).

57. kṣ > ch > ṭh.—Cf. No. 66. See Gār. iṭh, eye, and būṭhō, hunger, above. The change from ch > ṭh is common in Š. Cf. also No. 118.

58. kṣ > nch.—M. ainch, an eye (from aich < acchi). See above.

59. kṣ > š.—This is the usual change in Eranian (Gray, 488).

Gār. pašī-u, a bird. See No. 55.

60. ks > ś > ž.—Cf. No. 67.

V. ižī, an eye. See No. 56. Cf. No. 270.

61. kh = kh.—(a) Initial. Skr. khara-; Kś. khār. But Av. χara-, Wkh. χur; B. kur, V. kōru, P. kār, an ass.

Skr. khura-; K.G.M. khur, Kś. khōr, but B. kyur, kūr, Š. kūti, a foot.

Skr. √khād; M. √kha, Gār. √khō, Kś. √khi, but Š. √ka, eat.

(b) Medial. Only one doubtful example. Skr. mukha-, face; V. ti-mikh, before, but B. pa-myuk, W. myuk-ne, Gār. mūka, muthō, Š. mōcō, mōžē, M. mūthō.

The V. termination kh (for k) may also be mentioned here. It is very common, as in mas-ekh, moon, and many others. See No. 48.

The retention of medial kha is typical of Paiś.

The kh in V. ti-mikh is probably secondary. kh > k, and then final k > kh, according to the V. general rule.

62. kh > k.—This change is not uncommon in Eranian (see Gray, 132). It is very rare in Indian, but occurs in the Shb. ku for khū. Examples are:

B. kur, V. kōru, P. kār, ass. See No. 61.

B. pa-myuk, W. myuk-ne, Gār. mūka, before. See No. 61.

B. kyur, kūr, Š. kūti, foot. See ditto.

Š. √ka, eat. See ditto.

63. kh > k > c.

64. kh > ch > th, th.

65. kh > ch > ś > ž.

Cf. No. 96.

Š. mōcō, before. See No. 61.

M. mūthō, Gār. muthō, before. See ditto.

Av. $\chi^v a-tō$, Skr. sra-; V. $\check{s}ō$, W. $\check{s}ū$, self.

Š. $mōžē$, before. See No. 61.

In Kś. kh always becomes ch before \tilde{u} ($< \tilde{i}$) or y. Thus hwakh^u, dry; fem. hwach^ū, fem. plur. hwache (for hwakhy^u).

66. $\chi^s > ch$.—Cf. Nos. 56, 57.

Kh. choi, six. See No. 67.

67. $\chi^s > \check{s}$.—Cf. Nos. 59, 60.

Av. $\chi^s vaś$, Wkh. śāδ; B. šo, V. uśū, W. šū, P. ś^u, χ^e , G., M. šoh, K. šoh, Gār. šō, Š. šah, but Kh. choi, six. See numerals. Kś. has śah, which is only a pandits' way of writing šah.

68. $g = g$.—In Paiś. medial g is retained. In C. Paiś. it $> k$. So also in Shb. maka-.

(a) Initial. Skr. gardabha-; W., G., Gār. gadā, K. gardō-k, Kh. gurdō-γ, gurdō-χ, M. (with transfer of aspiration) ghadā, an ass.

Av. mərəγa-, Skr. mṛga-; B. maran-gač, W. nī-gečē, a bird, but V. nīze.

B. $\sqrt{gi-ač}$, V. \sqrt{giz} , Gār. \sqrt{gi} , Kh. $\sqrt{an-gi}$, bring. See Vocab.

Av. gāiv-, Šg. žar, Sq. žao, Skr. gar-, gō-; G. gā, M. gō, P. gō-, Š. gō-lō, but B. aže, ašu, V. že-št, a bull; B. gōh, gāo, V. gū-ṭh, W., P., M. gā, K. ga-k, Gār. gāē, Š. gō, Kś. gāo, but G. ečī, cow.

P. gōś^u-g, gōši-ng, M., Š. gōt, Š. gōš, gōž. See Vocab.

Skr. gāna-; K. gūro, P. gē, M. gēta, singing.

(b) Medial. No good examples occur. We may quote the termination g ($< k$, ka, cf. GIP. I², p. 63) in M. qā, qā-g, back, and V. but-og, share.

In one instance (see syncope of g) the half-Indian Kś. drops a medial g in the Indian fashion. In the V. nīze (cf. W. nī-gečē), the initial g of the second member of a compound has also been dropped.

69. $g > k$.—Cf. Shb. maka-. This is the rule in C. Paiś. So Prs. laḡām; Kś. lākam, a bridle.

70. $g > gh$.—This, which is common in East Eranian, only occurs in M. ghadā, an ass, where it is simply due to transfer of aspiration. See No. 68.

71. $g > j$.—In Kś. $g > j$ before \tilde{u} ($< \tilde{i}$) or y . Thus srwag^u, cheap; fem. srwaj^ū, fem. plur. srwaje (for srwagy^a).

72. $g > \check{z} > \check{s}$.

73. $g > \check{z} > \check{c}$.—B. aže, ašu, V. že-št, a bull; G. ečī, a cow. See No. 68. Regarding this palatalization compare Nos. 50, 63, 65, and 80. (GIP, I², pp. 300, 419.)

This change only occurs in Eranian.

74. Syncope of g .—Skr. chagalah; Kś. čawul^a, a he-goat, V. nīze, a bird. See No. 68.

This is the regular Indian rule.

75. $gr = gr$.—Skr. grāma-; B. grom, K. grōm, a village.

The retention of r is sanctioned by Hc. for Apabhramśa Pr. (iv. 398). Cf. Shb. agrabhuti-.

76. $gr > gl > l$.—According to Tom. 899 this change has taken place in M. lām ($< grāma-$), a fortified place. In the compounds dr and br there is a similar change. See Nos. 158, 153, and 206. In C. Paś. $r > l$ optionally.

Cf. Eranian $\gamma r > (r)r$, as in Av. tīγri-; Prs. tīr, arrow.

77. $gh, \gamma = gh, \gamma$.—All soft aspirated consonants are disaspirated in modern Paśācī. The rare exceptions to this rule are borrowings from India. There are, therefore, only sporadic examples to quote. These are:

M. ghō, a horse. See No. 78.

K. γona, M. γō, great. See ditto.

The latter has been changed to the corresponding spirant.

In two instances the termination g ($< k < ka$) has been changed to γ . Both are in Kh., and the change is due to the influence of the neighbouring Munjānī-Yūdγā. They are gurdō-γ, an ass (see No. 68), and ū-γ, water. Cf. Mj, yau-γā. It is probable that in M. ghō the gh is also a spirant, but no information is available.

In Paś. gh = gh, and in C. Paś., gh > kh. The disaspiration must, therefore be a product of modern times. It is carrying on the Paś. system of retaining the soft guttural sound, instead of weakening it to h as in India.

78. gh > g.—This is the regular change. It is rare both in Indian and Eranian (Gray, 151).

Skr. ghōṭaka-; W. guṛ, G. goṛa, Gār. gōr, P. gōṛā, Kś. guṛ^u, but M. ghō, a horse.

Skr. ghana-; P. gaṇ, Gār. giān, but K. γona, M. γō, great.

Skr. dīrgha-; K. drīga, M. līga (through drīga*), Š. žīgō long.

79. Prothesis of γ.—Kh. γec, eye. See Nos. 5 and 56. Compare prothesis of χ in Eranian (GIP. I², 67).

80. γδ > χt > št.—Av. duγdar-, Armenian dustr, Mj. leṛda; V. luštu, daughter. This must be for luštū. Compare change of No. 72. See No. 81.

81. Syncope of γδ (< χt).—This is the rule also in Pś. (ELA., §16).

Av. duγdar-, Prs. duχtar, Pś. lūr; Gār. dū, Kh. jūr, žūr, B. jū, ju-k, W. jū, G. zū, K. chu; but Skr. duhitar-, Pr. dhīdā, dhīā; M. dhī, Š. ḍī, a daughter.

The forms derived from duγdar- must have passed through an intermediate form dūr*. The change of d > j, etc., can be explained by the insertion of i before ū—thus dīūr*.¹ This is common. See No. 17. Apocope of r is frequent. If Pr. dhīdā is really derived from duhitar- (see Vocab.), then the M. and Š. words are Indian, but it is quite easy to suppose an Eranian origin for this word. In the Pāmir dialects initial d regularly becomes δ (GIP. I², 300). As for the i instead of u, cf. Kurd dux̄t or ditt, a daughter. In Modern Paśācī the change of $\ddot{u} > \ddot{i}$ is common. See No. 26.

82. $\acute{n}g = ng, \acute{g}$.—Skr. aṅguli-, aṅguri-; B. angyur, W. āgūr, K. angurya-k, Gār. angir, Kś. anguj^ū, but V. igi, Š. agui, a finger.

Av. angušta-, toe, Prs. angušt-ar, ring; B. angušti, W. āguštō, K. angušt-ar, P. angōc^{-ak}, Kh. pulungušt, Gār. angusir, but V. wōg-iχ, a finger-ring.

Skr. aṅgāra-, agūi-; B. angā, K. G. P. Kh. angār, Gār. āgār, but B. also agō, V. an-ekh, M., Š. agār, Š. haḡār, M., Kś. nār, fire.

83. $\acute{n}g > g$.—V. igi, Š. agui, a finger. See No. 82.

V. wōg-iχ, a finger-ring. See ditto.

B. agō, M., Š. agār, Š. haḡār, fire. See ditto.

84. $\acute{n}g > n$.—V. an-ekh, M., Kś. nār, fire. See No. 82.

85. $c = c$.—This is the usual rule, as in Paśā. Only V. offers real exceptions; c, however, occasionally changes to č or s in the others. The preservation of intervocalic c in Eranian is typical of non-Prs. dialects. (GIP. I², 415.)

Šg. kīc, Sq. kec; K., P. kuc, P. kūc; but W. kiuč, belly.

V. cipū, P., Š. cār, Kh., Gār. cōr, Š. corr, K. cau, four.

Av. Skr. \sqrt{car} , Mj. \sqrt{car} ; W., K., Gār. \sqrt{car} ; Š. \sqrt{cer} , but M. $\sqrt{sār}$, and (?) Kh. \sqrt{roch} , to graze.

Skr. cūḍikā; W. coṇo-k, K. cūri, hair.

Wkh. cōγ; B. cō, W. cū, but V. iša, a kid.

Compare Buruśaski, comar, or chomar; B. cinr, cimeh, W. cīma, K. cīmbar, P., Gār., Š. cimar, P. cumar, Kh. cumr, cunūr, Š. cingār, but, V. žema, G. čimar, M. sčwar, iron.

86. $c > c$.—In Eranian this change is typical of Pś. and the Ghalcah dialects. (GIP.I², 417, 419.)

W. kiuč, belly. See No. 85.

G. čimar, iron. See ditto.

G. čūr, Kś. čōr, four; G. panč, Kś. pānč, five. See numerals.

87. $c > j > z$.—This change occurs regularly in Prs. between vowels and after r. (GIP.I², 91.)

Av. panca-, Ghalcah, pinj, pānz; P., Gār. panj, K., Kh. pōnj, M. pāz, five. See numerals.

88. $c > š > ž$.—See No. 141. This change also occurs in Prs. dialects. (GIP.I², 90.) Cf. No. 269.

V. iša, kid. See No. 85.

B. što, W. štā, four. See numerals.

Š. puš, pūš, five. See numerals.

V. žema, iron. See No. 85.

89. $c > s$.—Only when initial in M.

M. \surd sār, graze. See No. 85.

M. sēwar, iron. See ditto.

M. saūr, four. See numerals.

90. $cv > ps$.—Av. cvant-; V. pseh, what? Cf. No. 249.

91. $č > g$.—Only one very doubtful example. Kh. ligi-ni, B. dič, V. luzu-kh, tongue.

92. $č > c$.—Only one doubtful example P. \surd ac, bring. See Vocab. under 'bring' and 'come.'

93. $č > z$.—B. maran-gač, V. nīze, a bird. See Vocab.

B. \surd gi-ač, V. \surd giz, bring.

V. luzu-kh, tongue. See No. 91.

94. $ch = ch$.—This letter is confined to words of Indian origin, and is rare, except in the semi-Indian M., Gār., and Kś. The only examples of its occurrence in other languages are K. chu, a daughter, Kh. chuī, hunger, choi, six, V. chī, three, W. \sqrt{cher} , do. Elsewhere it is generally weakened to c. See No. 56.

Skr. chēla-; Gār. chēl; but M. sāil, a she-goat.

95. ch > č.—Skr. chagala-; Kś. čawul^u.

96. ch > ṭh (th).—Cf. Nos. 64, 118. This change is common in the semi-Indian Gār. and M. when using words of Š. or Kś. origin. Cf. Gray, 175.

Skr. mukha-, face; Š. mōcō, Gār. muthō, M. mūṭhō, before.

Skr. akṣi-; Š. achī, Gār. iṭh, eye.

Skr. bubhukṣā; Kś. bōchī, Gār. būṭhō, hunger. See No. 20.

97. ch > s.—M. sāil, a she-goat. See No. 94.

98. j=j.—This is also the rule in Paś. In the modern dialects all the examples are initials.

Av. Skr. \sqrt{jiv} , live; K., Kh. junu, Gār. jāudō, Š. jīnō, alive, but B. šāwā, alive, šā, life, V. $\sqrt{šō}$, live, W. šūda, Kh. (also), žanū, G. zien, alive.

Skr. (?) jāyatē, he is born; G. jai, but Š. āžē, W. oie, K. āya, P. āī, Gār. yaī, a mother.

Skr. jihvā; W. jip, K., Š., P. jib, P. jub, Gār. jībh, tongue.

The Thalī Lahndā \sqrt{maric} for marīj, be struck, is an example of the influence of C.-Paś.

99. j > z.—Frequent in Eranian. (Gray, 185.) Only in G. zien, alive. See No. 98.

100. j > ž.—Frequent in Eranian. (Gray, 186.) Only in Kh. žanū, alive; Š. āžē, mother. See No. 98.

101. j > y.—This change is occasionally found in Prs. dialects. (GIP.I², 385.) Only in Gār. yaī, mother (very doubtful). See No. 98. Cf. j > y in Shb.

102. $j > \check{s}$.—Only in B. šūwā, alive, šū, life, V. $\sqrt{\check{s}o}$, live, W. šūda, alive. See No. 98.

103. Aphæresis of j .—Only in W. oie, K. āya, P. āi, mother. See No. 98.

104. $jr > \check{z}$, or $\check{z} > jr$, or $jr = \check{z}$.—This is the regular rule in Ś, in which jr and ẓ seem to be convertible. In fact, the two transcriptions represent the same sound, which seems to be that of a rough ẓ, with a half-heard r-sound after it.

Ś. jrā, žā, Gār. jā, M. žā, a brother. See Vocab.

Ś. manjro or manužō, a man. Cf. Nos. 141, 152, 157, 204, 228.

105. $z = z$.—In Eranian this is typical of non-Prs. dialects. (GIP.I², 414.)

Av. būza-, Mj. wuz; B. wēz-eh, but W. wasei, a she-goat.

Av. zərəd-; B. zare, W. zō, heart.

Av. hizū-; G. zib, M. zēb, Kś. zēo, tongue. See Vocab.

Av. azəm; V. uzu; but B. onč, I. See pronouns.

106. $z > č$.—B. onč, oč, I. See No. 105.

107. $z > s$.—W. wasei, a she-goat. See No. 105.

108. Syncope of z .—Av. azəm, Samnānī ā, u, I; B. ī, V. e-nd-eš, my; W. yē, K., G., P. ā, Kh. awa, Gār. ya, I. See pronouns.

109. $\check{z} = \text{or} > jr$.—See No. 104.

110. \check{n} inserted.—Av. aši-, Skr. akṣi-; P. anc, M. ainch, eye. See No. 56. Cf. Hindī ākḥ. See No. 328.

111. Syncope of \check{n} .—B. puc, V. uc, W. pūc, Ś. puš, poi (also pūš), five. See numerals.

112. Syncope of $\dot{n}c$.—Av. pañca-; Š. poĩ, five. See numerals.

113. $\dot{t} = \dot{t}$.—This follows País.

Skr. $\sqrt{ra\dot{t}}$, raṅṭ, divide; V. buṭ-og, W. maṭ-ini, M. baṭ-ha, P. wanṭ-e, a share; G. $\sqrt{be\dot{t}}$, divide; but B. baṛ-este, K. baš, a share.

114. $\dot{t} > c$.—In Kś \dot{t} always becomes c when followed by i or y. Thus paṭ, a tablet, Ag. sing. paci, nom. plur. pace (for paṭya^a). Cf. No. 141.

115. $\dot{t} > \dot{r} > r$.—Skr. kukkuṭa-, a cock; G. kukur, P. kukūr, Gār. kūkur, Š. kankōrō-cō, Kś. kwakur, kokur, but W. kiukiu, Kh. kūkū, M. kūkō, Gār. kugū, a fowl.

Skr. ghōṭa-ka-; W. gur, G. gora, Gār. gōr, P. gōrā, Kś. gur^a, but M. ghō, a horse.

B. baṛ-este, a share. See No. 113.

It will be observed that in all these cases the \dot{t} is a final syllable. Compare such as G. kham-ṭa, ear, G. ṛumu-ṭa, hair, G. ṣau-ṭa, head, with B. mach-ku-r, man, G. kōš-ar, shoe, Gār. pīšī-r, cat, B. naz-ur, K. nāte-ur, Kh. naskā-r, M. nath-ūr, Gār. nōz-ōr, nose. Similarly in Indian languages all but one of the examples of $\dot{t} > r$, l, or \dot{t} given by Gray (§§ 196, 197, 198) are final syllables of a base.

116. $\dot{t} > \dot{s}$.—Only one doubtful case, viz., K. baš, a share. See No. 113. If the change has really occurred it is probably through c.

117. Apocope of \dot{t} .—This apparently occurs in W. kiukiu, Kh. kūkū, M. kūkō, Gār. kugū, a fowl. See No. 115.

M. ghō, a horse. See ditto.

I doubt if there has been any real apocope. The \dot{t} in each case is a termination, which need not necessarily have been used in these dialects.

At the same time t may have become r, which was then dropped. Apocope of r is common. See No. 229.

118. th > ch.—In Kś. every th > ch when followed by i or y. Thus kāth, a stalk, agent sing. kāchi, nom. plur. kāche (for kāthy^a).

119. ḍ > j.—Similarly, in Kś. under the same circumstances ḍ > j. Thus baḍī (fem.), great, agent sing. bajī, nom. plur. baje (for bady^a).

120. ḍ > ṛ > r.—Skr. biḍāla-; Kś. brār^a, a cat.
Skr. cūḍī-kā; W. coṛo-k, K. cūṛi, hair.
Note that ḍ does not become l. So Paiś.

121. Apocope of ḍ.—Skr. krōḍa-; K. gro, breast.
Here ḍ > r. There was then apocope of r. Cf. No. 229.

122. ṇṭ = ṇṭ.—P. want-e, share, G. √bent, divide.
See No. 113.

123. ṇḍ > ~ ḍ.—With compensatory lengthening of preceding vowel, as in India. Only in Kś. dāḍ, a bull. See No. 8. Compare Shb. ṇḍy > ṇḍ.

124. ṇḍ > n.—K. dōn, Š. dōnō, a bull. See No. 8.

125. t = t.—Here Paiś. is again followed. In Eranian the preservation of intervocalic t is typical of non-Prs. dialects. GIP. I², 416.

Skr. tata-, tāta-; B. tōt, tōtt, W. tata, tā, P. tātī, Kh. tat, a father.

Skr. tārā; W. tarā, K. tāri, G. tāre, P. tārā, M. tāra, Š. tārā, Kś. tāru-kh, a star.

Av. kata-, a grave; Phl. kat-ak, a house; Kh. χata-n, a house.

Ar. qaḥt; B. ot, āt, V. ūt, W. avot, G. hawat, P. hawata-wata-, hunger.

126. $t > \check{c}$, $\check{c}h$.—This change is the rule in Kś. when t is followed by y or \bar{u} ($< \bar{i}$). Thus tat^v, hot, tačar for tatyar*, heat; rāt-, night, oblique rāč^v. Cf. Šg., Sq. √jet; B. √ač, V. √joč, W. √ačh, come.

B. di-ktī, V. kčeh, Kś. pat, pačh, behind. In Kś. all final surds are aspirated. See p. 17.

127. $t > d$.—This only occurs in one instance, and the change also occurs in Eranian.

Skr. pravat-, Sq. prōd, Prs. firōd; G. puda-mi, before.

128. $t > d > l > r$.—The change to r is characteristic of Kh.

Kh. bišr, twenty; M. Š. šal, Kh. šōr, a hundred. See numerals. So Kh. pošir (pašyati), he sees; asur (asti), he is. In. Pš. t regularly $> l$.

129. Aphæresis of t.—Very rare. Only in B. tiu, V iyū, thou. See pronouns.

130. Apocope of t.—W. tā, a father. See No. 125.

Skr. pravat-; P. pōrā, Kh. pru-šta, before. See No. 127.

B. vičī, V. zū, W. višī, G. išī, K. bišī, Gār. M. bīš. Š. bēh, Kś. wuh, etc., twenty. See numerals.

131. $tm > t$.—So in Shb.

Skr. ātmau-; W. tauu, P. tāni-k, Kh. tan, M. tā, Gār. tanī, but Š, tomō, Kś. pāu^a, self.

132. $tm > p$.—Only in the semi-Indian Kś. pāu^a, self. See above.

133. $ty > \check{c}$.

134. $ty > \check{t}$.

135. $ty > t$.—This change does not occur in Indian. The examples quoted by Gray (565) are not to the point.

The Bihārī *nit*ⁱ < nitya- is a semi-tatsama, being contracted from niti. Sindhī nit^u is due to the influence of the local Paiś.

Skr. ṅṛtya-ti; B. P. √nāt, Ś. √nat, dance. In V., W., K., G., we have √naṭ, and in Gār. √nēt, the cerebralization (if real) being due to the preceding ṛ. Ś. has also √nath. Kś. has alone √nač, according to the rule that t followed by y > č. See No. 126.

136. ty > th.—Ś. √nath, dance. See No. 135.

137. (a) tr, θr = tr.

138. (b) tr, θr > ṭr > ṭ(h).

139. (c) tr, θr > th > lt.

140. (d) tr, θr > θl > ṭhl > hl.

(a) Skr. putra-, Av. puθra-; W. piutr, K. pūtr, a son.

B. K. Kś. treh, W. trē, Ś. trē, trā, Kh. troi; but V. chī, P. hlē, G. θlē, Gār. ṭhā, M. cā, Ś. cē, three. See numerals.

(b) B. puṭr, piṭr, Gār. puṭ, a son.

Gār. ṭhā, three.

Skr. gōtra-; M. Ś. gōt or gōṭ, a house.

(c) M. pūṭh, G. pult, a son.

(d) P. puṭhlē, a son.

G. θlē, P. hlē, three.

With reference to the above it should be remembered that it is probable that, in Mod. Paiś., both dentals and cerebrals are really semi-cerebrals. Regarding the treatment of θr in Ghalcah see GIP. I², 419. The Indian change of tr > (t)t has not been anywhere noted. In Shb. tr = tr.

NOTE.—The preservation of tr is typical of these languages. The change of tr to ṭr also occurs in Sindhī, which language is in other respects also affected by Paiś. Cf. No. 135.

141.—tr, θr > c(h) > š > ž.—Cf. Nos. 88, 228. This change is typical of Š. Cf. Av. uštra-, Wkh. ištūr, Yd. išcuro, a camel. Cf. also Š. change of jr > ž (104) and dr > ž (157), and Kś. change of t > c (114) and th > ch (118).

150. $d = d$.—This is the usual rule for initial d, which is different from that of H.-c's Paiś, in which $d > t$ (see below). In Vararuci's Paiś, and in the second variety of H.-c's C. Paiś, an initial d is retained. Vide ante, p. 8. The only exception to the general Mod. Paiś. rule is V., in which d regularly $> l$. Under the influence of a neighbouring c, initial d becomes j in Kh.

Gār. jā, Š. jrā, M. Š. žā, a brother. See above.

205. $br > b > w > m$.—K. bāya, Kś. bāy^u, V. way-eh, a brother. See No. 203.

Š. bring or biug, M. ming, a bird. See Vocab.

206. $br > bl > l$.—G. bliaia, P. lāī, brother. See No. 203.

207. $bh = bh$.—Skr. bhaginī; M. bhē, a sister, but Kś. byañ^a, benye.

M. is a semi-Indian language. Other modern País. languages do not tolerate sonant aspirates.

208. $bh > b$.—This is the usual rule. See above.

Kś. byañ^a, benye, sister. See above.

Skr. bubhukṣā; M. būcha, Gār. būḥhō (hungry), Kś. bōchī, but Kh. chuī, hunger. In all these the initial bu has been elided.

209. $bh > o, ū$.—Always non-initial.

Skr. gardabha-; K. gardō-k, Kh. gurāō-γ, gurdō-χ, but W. G. Gār. gadā, M. ghadā, ass.

Skr. ṛṣabha-; Kh. rešū, a bull.

210. Apocope and Aphæresis of bh.—W. G. Gār. gadā, M. (with transfer of aspiration) ghadā, ass. See preceding.

Š. cingār, iron. See No. 211.

213. m > ~b > mb.

214. m > ~b > b.

215. m > ~w.—Kh. \sqrt{bri} , die. See No. 211.

K. cīmbar, M. šēwar, iron. See No. 211.

216. $m > mh$.—Prs. mādar; M. mhāi, but Š. māi, Kś. mājī, mother.

217. Aphæresis of mar.—V. nīze, W. nigeče, a bird. See No. 211.

218. Insertion of m.—Av. apərənāyu-, a boy; B. parmū, but G. pola, a child.

219. Syncope of mā.—Skr. kumāra-; V. kiur, a child, Kś. kūrā (for kōrī*), a girl.

220. $y, i = y$.—So also in Paś. In Eranian it is typical of non-Prs. dialects (GIP. I², 415).

Av. \sqrt{i} , Skr. $\sqrt{yā}$, go; Gār. \sqrt{ya} , but K. $\sqrt{i(h)}$, M. \sqrt{ai} , G. $\sqrt{jā}$, Š. $\sqrt{wā}$, come. In P. $\sqrt{yē}$, Kś. \sqrt{yi} the y is a late prefix.

Wkh. \sqrt{yav} , eat; B. W. $\sqrt{yū}$, V. \sqrt{oyu} , but K. Kh. $\sqrt{žu}$, G. $\sqrt{žo}$, P. \sqrt{e} , \sqrt{a} , eat.

221. $y > i, e, (a)i, (o)i$.—Skr. sūrya-; V. isi-kh, W. sōi, K. sūrī, G. suri, Š. sūrī, Kś. sīrī, M. swīr, Gār. sīr (metathesis of i in the last three), but B. sū, P. sur, sun.

K. $\sqrt{i(h)}$, M. \sqrt{ai} , come. See No. 220.

P. \sqrt{e} , \sqrt{a} , eat. See No. 220.

Av. θrāyō; B., K., Kś. treh, W. trē, Š. trē, cē, trā, V. chī, P. hlē, hl^a, G. θlē, Kh. troi, Gār. thā, M. cā, three. See numerals.

222. $y > j > ž$.—Only initial. In Eranian $y > j$ is typical of Prs. rather than of non-Prs. dial. GIP. I², p. 415.

Šg., Sq. \sqrt{yet} ; V. \sqrt{joc} , but W. $\sqrt{ačh}$, B. pr + $\sqrt{eč}$, come.

G. $\sqrt{jā}$, come. See No. 220.

K., Kh. $\sqrt{žu}$, G. $\sqrt{žo}$, eat. See No. 220.

223. Aphæresis of y.—B. pr + $\sqrt{eč}$, W. $\sqrt{ačh}$, come. See No. 222.

Š. $\sqrt{wā}$, come (see No. 220). Here w has been prefixed instead.

P. \sqrt{e} , \sqrt{a} , eat. See No. 220.

224. Insertion of y.—This is frequent between vowels. Thus:

V. wa(y)-eh, K. bā(y)a, G. bliaia (for bla(y)a*), brother. See No. 203.

P. mai(y)-ik, moon.

225. Prothesis of y.—P. $\sqrt{yē}$, Kś. \sqrt{yi} , come. See No. 220.

These languages invariably prefix y to a word beginning with i or e.

Cf. GIP. I², p. 298.

226. r=r.—This is almost the universal rule except in the Kāfir group, in which r is often elided.

Av. χara-, Skr. khara-; B. kur, V. kōru, P. kār, ass.

Av. apərənāyu-, a boy; B. parm̄, a child.

Av. duγdar-, Skr. duhitar-; Kh. jūr, žūr, daughter, but V. luštu, B. jū, jū-k, W. jū, G. zū, K. chu, M. dhū, Š. δū, dē (obl. base dīj-), Gār. dūī, a daughter.

Av., Skr. \sqrt{mar} ; M., Gār., Kś. \sqrt{mar} , Š. $\sqrt{mīr}$, die.

Most of the other forms given in the Vocabulary are derived from mṛta- or marta-*.

Av., Skr. \sqrt{kar} ; B. \sqrt{kor} , K. $\sqrt{kār}$, G. \sqrt{ker} , P., M., Gār., Kś. \sqrt{kar} , Kh. \sqrt{kor} , do. W. chēγ-am, I do, is derived from kṛta- or karta-*.

Av., Skr. dūra-; G. duvae, P., M., Š., Kś. dūr, Kh. du-dēr-i, Gār. dēōr, but B. dyuγ, dyoγ, W. (?) sudu, K. dē-ša, far.

Skr. khura-; B. kyur, kūr, G., M. khur, Kś. khōr, but Š. (dial.) kūti, foot.

Av., Skr. \sqrt{car} ; K., Gār. \sqrt{car} , Kh. (?) \sqrt{roch} , M. $\sqrt{sār}$, Š. \sqrt{cer} , graze.

Av. stavra-; V. wištār, great.

Av. sarah-, Skr. śiras-; Kh. soṛ, P. šiv, Kś. hiv, but B. šei, pšai, V. ji, W. šei, G. šau-ta, head.

Av. staora-; Kh. istōr, a horse.

Av. dvar-, Skr. dvār; V. war-ekh, tar-ekh, K., Kh. dūr, Kś. lūr, house.

Av. antarə, Skr. antar; B. atēr, W. attar, K. uḍrī-man, G. atra-n, Kh. andr-ēnī, Kś. andar, but B. also atē, within.

Av. dvar-, Skr. dvār-; W. ber, G. berā-ta, P. dōrē, Kh. bēri, Š. darū, Kś. nya-bar, but B. baṛ, beṛ-ñ, V. be, K. bī-en, out, outside.

Skr. sūrya-; K. sūri, G. suri, P. sur, M. swīr, Gār. sīr, Š. sūrī, Kś. sirī, but B. sū, V. isi-kh, W. sōi, the sun.

227. $r > \dot{r}$.—B. marau-gač or mṛenze, a bird. Here the \dot{r} of mṛenze is due to analogy with B. $\sqrt{m\dot{r}}$, die, which is derived from mṛta-. See No. 211.

W. $\sqrt{che\dot{r}}$, do. Here the \dot{r} is really derived from rt (kṛta-, karta-*). See No. 226.

B. dyṛ, dyoṛ, far. See No. 226.

B. baṛ, beṛ-ñ, out, outside. See No. 226.

With regard to the last two, attention must be paid to the remarks on p. 16 regarding the difficulty of distinguishing between r and \dot{r} .

228. $r > \dot{z}$, j . Cf. Nos. 104, 141, 152, 157.

This curious change of $r > \dot{z}$, like $jr > \dot{z}$, and $tr > c > \dot{z}$, is not uncommon in Š., where we find it in dialectic variations. An r in the Š. of Gilgit is frequently represented by \dot{z} in the Š. of Dras and Dāh-Hanū. For instance:

Gilgit.	Drās.	Dāh-Hanū.
	rē , to.	rā , zā , to.
rō , in.	zā , in.	rā , zā , in.

Throughout Š. there is an intimate connexion between the dative, the ablative, and the locative. In Ḍāh-Hanū, r and ṣ are quite interchangeable.

So Š. rō, Drās, ṣō, he. See pronouns.

Compare L. (dial.) dhīr-ī, plural of dhī, with Š. obl. base dīj- of dī, a daughter.

In B. we have rāṛā or ṣaṛṛ, noise. Cf. L. √raṛṛ, cry out.

Compare Standard Tibetan mgrom, Purik Tibetan grun, Balti (spoken in the immediate vicinity of Š.) ṣun, a feast.

229. Apocope and syncope of r.—While this is rare in both Indian and Eranian, it is very common in modern Paś., especially in the languages belonging to the Kāfir group. It is also common in the Tālišī dialect of Prs. GIP. I², p. 355. Thus:

V. nīze, W. nūgeče, as compared with B. maran-gač, a bird. See Vocab.

Av. duγdar-, Skr. duhitar-; V. luštu, B. jū, ju-k, W. jū, G. zū, K. chu, M. dhī, Š. ḍī, dī, Gār. dūi, a daughter. See No. 226.

G. √mi, as compared with Š. √mir, die. See No. 226.

P. kar-am or ka-m, I do. Gār. kēr, kē-th, he made. See Vocab.

B. agō, angū, V. an-ekh (Skr. aṅgāra-). See No. 226.

B. šei, pšai, V. ji, W. šei, G. šau-ṭa, a head. See No. 226.

Av. zōrəd-; W. zō, but B. zare, heart.

Av. antarō, Prs. andarūn; K. hāndū-n, house.

B. atē or atēr, inside. See No. 226.

V. be, K. bē-en, out. See No. 226.

Skr. scasār-, Av. χ^aaūhar-, Wkh. χjii; B. sus, V. siusu, W. sōs; G. sase, P. sāi, Tirāhī spaz, Gār. išpō, šū, Š. sah, but Kh. išpusār, sister.

B. sū, V. išī-kh, W. sōi, sun. See No. 226.

Skr. dāru-; B. dāo, wood.

K. cau, four. See numerals.

230. rṇ > ṇ > n.—The compound rṇ occurs, naturally, only in words of Indian origin. The change to ṛ, n, is most frequent in the eastern Modern Pañsāci languages.

Skr. karṇa-; M. kāṇ, Gār. kyan, Š. kān, kōn, Kś. kan, but B. kōr, W., Kh. kār, P. kāṛ, K. kuṛō, krō, G. kham-ta, ear.

Skr. svarṇa-; B. sūn, sōn, W., G. son, P. sōnā, Š. sōn, Kś. svan, son, but V. šū, K. šūṇa, Kh. sōr-m, gold.

231. $rṇ > ṇ > \tilde{r}, \tilde{r} > \tilde{}$.

232. $rṇ > ṇ > \tilde{r}, \tilde{r} > r$.

This is confined to the Western languages.

K. šūṇa, V. šū, Kh. sōr-m, gold. See No. 230.

K. kuṛō, krō, B. kōr, W., Kh. kār, P. kāṛ, ear. See No. 230.

233. $rṇ > m$.—This only appears in one very doubtful case, G. kham-ta, ear. The m may be a termination as in Kh. sōr-m, gold.

234. $rt > ṛ$.—This is the regular Paštō change. Cf. GIP. I², p. 208. In Shb. $rt > t$.

Av. mərta-, Skr. myta-, marta-*, dead; B. W. $\sqrt{mṛ}$, die.

Av. kərta-, Skr. kṛta-, karta-*, done; B. kaṛā, he made.

235. $rd = rd$.—The compound is preserved in K. and Kh. Skr. gardabha-; K. gardō-k, Kh. gurdō-γ, but W., G., Gār. gadā, M. ghadā, an ass.

Skr. hṛdaya-, hardaya-*, Av. zərəd-, Sq. zārd; Kh. herdi, but G. heṛa, P. haṛā, heart.

236. $rd > d$.—W., G., Gār. gadā, M. ghadā, an ass. See No. 235.

237. $rd > ṛ$.—G. heṛa, P. haṛā, heart. See No. 235. Cf. Pś. zṛ^a.

238. $ry > rī > ir > i$ (with syncope of r) $>$ syncope of i.

239. $ry > rī > r$.—In Shb. $ry > riy$. In País. $ry > jī$ or riy .

Skr. sūrya-; K. sūri, G. surī, Š. sūrī, Kś. sirī, M. swīr, Gār. sīr, V. isi-kh, W. sōi, B. sū, P. sur, sun.

240. $rṣ > ṣ > s$.—Cf. Shb. vaṣa- for varṣa-. Cf. also Av. bareša-, Prs. buš, mane.

Skr. śiṛṣa-; K., M., Š. šīṣ, śīṣ; Gār. thōs, head.

241. $rṣt > ṣt \dot{s}t > t, \dot{t}$.—A regular Eranian change.

Av. parṣti-, Prs. pušt, Bal. phut; G. piṣti, Kś. pušt, K. pištō; B. pṭī, ktī, W. yā-paṭī, Š. pūtū, G. pata, M. patō, Gār. patā, Kś. pat, back (or behind).

242. $rṣt > ṣ > č, \check{c}h$.—Av. parṣti-, Yd. pišco; P. paš-k-in, V. kčeh (cf. B. ktī, above), Kś. pačh, behind. See No. 241.

243. $l=1$.—This is the usual rule.

Skr. chagala-; Kś. čawul^u, a he-goat.

Skr. chēla-; M. sāil, Gār. chēl, a she-goat.

Skr. vāla-; M. bāla, Gār. bāl, Š. bālī, Kś. wāl, hair.

Prs. lavand; B. loṇē, W. lavēṛ, G. lavand, P. lavant, a slave.

244. $l > j$.—In Kś. this is the rule when \tilde{u} ($< \tilde{v}$) or y follows l .

Skr. aṅguli-; Kś. aṅguj^u, a finger. A good example is the Prs. mādar. From the same original we have the Š. mālī, mother. From this a masculine, mālō, has been formed, with the meaning of 'father.' Kś. has the latter under the form māl^u, father, of which the feminine in Kś. is māj^ū, mother. Again, Kś. kumul^u, delicate, kumuḷjāṛ, delicateness.

245. $l (\text{or } \dot{l}) > r$.

246. $l > r$.

The change of $l > \dot{l}$ is the rule in País. As regards $l > r$, cf. Shb. arabhati and rocetu.

Skr. aṅguli-; W. āgūr, K. aṅgurya-k, B. aṅgyur, Gār. aṅgīr, but V. īgi, Kś. aṅgij^ū, a finger.

V. \sqrt{es} , send. See No. 285.

287. $\acute{s} > h$.—Kś. mahan-irv, a man. See No. 285. After the change there has been metathesis of h.

288. $\acute{s}k > kh$.—Skr. śuśka-; Kś. hwākh^u, dry. The Kś. feminine is hwāch^v. Cf. No. 289. In Shb. $\acute{s}k > k$.

289. $\acute{s}k > c$.—Cf. Eranian $\acute{s}k > c$.

Av. huśka-, Pš. wuc, Skr. śuśka-; Kh. cuco, dry (Tom, 895).

290. $\acute{s}ṭ$ or $\acute{s}t > \acute{s}t$, $\acute{s}t > st > \acute{c}h$, or $> \acute{s} > \acute{z}$ —t.—Here, again, $\acute{s}ṭ$ is treated as if it were Eranian $\acute{s}t$.

B., W. ośt, Kh. ošt, K., G., Š. ašt, P. ašt, V. aste, Š. ačh, aś, ažat; but Gār. aṭh, Ś. ath, M. āṭh, Kś. aṭh, eight. See numerals.

291. $\text{ṣṭ} > (\text{ṭ})\text{ṭh}$, $(\text{ṭ})\text{ṭh}$.—Here ṣṭ is approximately treated in the Indian fashion, but there are also Eranian analogies.

Skr. dṛṣṭa- ; Gār. $\sqrt{\text{ḷiṭh}}$, see (no compensatory lengthening).

Gār. āth , Ś. ath , Kś. aiṭh , M. āṭh (compensatory lengthening), eight. See No. 290 and numerals. Cf. Wkh. hāḷ , hāt , Pś. ata , Shb. aṭha- .

292. $\text{ṣṭr} > (\text{ṭ})\text{ṭh} > \text{ṭ}$.—See No. 279. Here the Indian fashion is followed. Skr. uṣṭra- ; Gār. ūṭh , Kś. uṭṭh , K., Kh., Š. uṭ , a camel.

293. $\text{ṣp} > \text{ṣ}$.—This is not an Indian change.

Skr. puṣpa- ; K. pūṣ-ik , Kś. pōṣ , a flower; B. has puṭ-ik .

294. $\text{s} = \text{s}$.—The preservation of s in Eranian is typical of the non-Persian dialects. GIP. I², 414.

Skr. divasa- ; V. res , W. wās , K., Kh. bas , P. dawās , dwās , M. dis , Gār. dōs , Ś. dēs , but Kś. dwah , doh , G. bā , a day.

O. Prs. adi* + $\sqrt{stā}$; Gār. \sqrt{it} , but V. $\sqrt{išt}$, arise. Cf. Horn, 84.

K. nātc-ur, nose. See No. 299.

301. $st > \theta > h$.—O. Prs. $\sqrt{stā}$, stand; G. θanaīm, Š. hanus, I am.

302. $st > r$.—With this may be compared the old legend that Kālidāsa, when a boy, sometimes pronounced uṣṭra-, ‘ur,’ and sometimes ‘ukh.’

O. Prs. ava* + $\sqrt{stā}$; P. \sqrt{ur} , arise. See No. 303. Cf. Horn, 84.

303. $st > št > šṭ$.—This change is confined to words of Eranian derivation, and only occurs in these dialects.

O. Prs. ava* + $\sqrt{stā}$; B. $\sqrt{ošt}$, \sqrt{ut} , V. $\sqrt{ošt}$, G. $\sqrt{ušt}$, but P. \sqrt{ur} , M. \sqrt{uth} , Kś. \sqrt{woth} , arise.

314. sy > ž > z.—B. aži, Š. āzī, mouth. See No. 313.

315. sr > s.—In Shb. sr > s.

Av. \sqrt{srav} , Prs. $\check{s}un\ddot{u}dan$: K. \sqrt{san} , V. \sqrt{nus} (metathesis), M. \sqrt{sun} , hear.

316. sva > sŏ, sŭ.—Cf. No. 255. In Shb. sv usually > s.

Skr. svarṇa- ; B., Š. sōn, W., G. son, P. sōnā, Kh. sōr-m, Kś. son, B. sūn, but V. šū, gold.

Skr. svasār- ; W. sōs, B. sus, but V. siusu, G. sase, P. sāī, Š. sah, Kh. ispusār, Tirāhī spaz, Gār. išpō, šū, sister.

317. sva > siu, šiu > šū.—The only examples of this are in V., but in all the dialects i is commonly inserted before u.

V. siusu, Gār. šū, sister, šū, gold. See No. 316.

318. sva > să.—G. sase, P. sāī, Š. sah, sister. See No. 316.

319. sva > špo, spu, spa.—Compare Skr. śun-, Av. spau-, dog, and Skr. aśva-, Av. aspa-, horse. See Nos. 310, 311. The change of sp to šp is peculiar to these dialects. Cf. Shb. spasunaiñ.

Gār. išpō, Kh. ispusār, Tirāhī, spaz, sister. See No. 316.

320. h = h.—Skr. hṛdaya- ; G. heṛa, P. haṛā, Kh. herdi, heart. Cf. Sq. zārd.

321. h > i.—Eranian.

Av. māh- ; P. mai(y)-ik, moon. Cf. Pś. -maī, etc., as given in Vocab. See Gray, 451.

Cf. Kh. choi, for chok, six ; Š. dāī, deii, for dah, ten. See numerals.

322. h > s.—This is the rule in Kś. when h is followed by \acute{u} (< \bar{i}) or y. Thus hih^u, like ; fem. sg. hiš^u, fem. pl. hišē (for hiš^ya). In every case the h has been derived from ś. The real rule is therefore not ś > h, but ś^u, śy > š^u, šy, respectively.

323. hv > (b)bh > b > p.—Skr. jīhvā ; Gār. (semi-Indian) jībh, K., Ś., P. jīb, W. jip, tongue.

324. Prothesis of h.—Cf. Shb. hia, hida, hediśa-.
 Ś- hagār or agār, fire, from Skr. aṅgāra-. See Vocab.

Av. antarə ; K. hāndū-n, house.
 Skr. āśya- ; G. hāsi, mouth. See Vocab.

Kh. haiya, etc., he. See pronouns.

325. Metathesis of consonants.—This is not unfrequent. Especially frequent is the transfer of r when it forms part of a conjunct consonant. Thus :

Skr. karṇa-, K. krō, ear.

Skr. parṇa- ; K. pron, a leaf.

Skr. karman-, Ś. krom, work.

Skr. dīrgha- ; K. drīga, M. līga (for drīga*), Ś. žīgō (through drīgō*), long.

Compare also a still more perfect metathesis in, Av. star-, B. rašta, star.

It is hardly necessary to draw attention to the similar transfers of r in the Shb. inscriptions.

Examples of metathesis of other consonants are :

n and h—

Kś. mahanīru for manahīru, man.

n and s—

V. √nus for sun, hear.

c and r—

Av. crant- ; V. pseh (through sp* for cr), what ?

c and r, with additional aspiration of c to ch—

Av. Skr. √car ; Kh. √roch, graze.

ś and p—

Ś. aśpō or (dial.) apś, horse.

Cf. in connexion with this the transfer of aspiration in M. dhī, daughter (see Vocab.), and in M. √bhai for baih, sit.

326. Harmonic sequence of vowels.—This is the rule in the neighbouring Burušaskī, and there are many traces of it in the Kāfir dialects, though the rules to which it is subject are not yet ascertained.

We may quote V. tu-gul, to a country, but ti-bzi, going, approaching, entering (a house) (√pez). Again Skr. mukha-, a face, but V. ti-mikh, before.

B. baṛ-este, but V. buṭ-og, a share. Here the a of baṭ seems to have been changed to u to harmonise with the o of og.

K. gūro for gāro (gāna-), singing.

327. Epenthesis of vowels.—Epenthesis of i and u is very common in Kś. The whole grammatical system of that language is mixed up with changes produced by epenthesis. The student is referred to works dealing with the language for further information.

In the Kāfir languages epenthesis of i is frequent. Thus—

Av. aši- ; V. ižī, G. ičīn, K., Kh. ee, eye.

B. dušt, hand, plur. dušt for dušti, hands.

Skr. āśya- (i.e., āśia) ; V. iš, Kś. āśī, pronounced ōśī, mouth.

Skr. sūrya- (i.e., sūria) ; V. isi-kh, M. swīr, Gār. sīr, Kś. sirī, sun.

328. Nasalisation of vowels.—Vowels are often nasalised. Thus—

Av. āθr- ; W. ēṛ, fire.

Skr. khura- ; B. kyur or kūr, a foot.

Cf., possibly, B. onč or oč, V. unzu, I ; V. ende-š, my. See Pronouns. Cf. also No. 110.

329. Voicing of initial surd consonants after a preceding soft letter occurs in the Kāfir language, but the rules have not yet been ascertained with sufficient accuracy. As a certain example, we may quote V. √pez, go, be-bzi, going outside ; ti-bzi, going to, approaching. Similarly we have B. as-ke, he, but am-gī, they, and many others.

ALPHABETICAL ORDER.—˘, ā, a, ā, ā, ī, i, ī, ñ, u, ū, ü, ṛ, č, e, ē, ō, o, ō, āī, ai, čī, ei, au, oi; k, kh, χ, g, gh, γ, n, c, ch, č, čh, j, jh, z, ž, n, r, ṛ, t, t, th, th, θ, d, ḍ, dh, ḍh, ḍ, n, p, ph, f, b, bh, m, y, r, l, l, v, w, ś, ś, ś, s, h. When ˘ precedes a consonant, the order of the consonant and not of ˘, is followed. Thus. ˘ṛ will be found immediately after ṛ. The mute cerebrals are classed with the mute dentals, as there does not seem to be any difference between them in Modern Paīśācī.

A. MODERN PAIŚĀCĪ.

[Order of letters : Words commencing with vowels are put first. Then those commencing with consonants. In other respects, vowels are altogether neglected in arranging words in alphabetical order. Consonants are alone considered. The following is the order of consonants :—k, kh, χ, g, (gh), γ, n, c, ch, j, z, ž, n, č, čh, ĵ, n, t, th, d, r, ṛ, t, th, θ, d, (dh), ḍ, n, p, ph, f, b, (bh), m, y, v, l, v, w, ś, s, h.]

ADDENDA ET CORRIGENDA

DURING the eighteen months that this little book has been passing through the press some articles have appeared which incidentally throw light on the Piśāca question. Monsieur Senart's paper on 'Vajrapāṇi dans les Sculptures du Gandhāra,' in vol. i. of the Actes du XIV^e Congrès International des Orientalistes, contains many suggestive passages. Vajrapāṇi was the chief of the Yakṣas, who, in Buddhist legends, correspond to the Piśācas of our stories (see my article in the J.R.A.S. referred to in the footnote to p. 2). According to Yuan Chwang (Watters, i., 229) Vajrapāṇi conquered Apalāla, the Nāga of the source of the Śwāt river. This is a favourite subject of sculpture in the Gandhāra country. It is unnecessary to point out that the Nāga inhabited the country of what I call the Modern Piśācas. The Kaśmīr legend of the conflict between the Piśācas and Nāgas is given above on p. 2.

On p. 461 of the J.R.A.S. for 1906, Mr. Thomas, in dealing with the town of Kāpiśā at the southern foot of the Hindū Kush, draws attention to the fact that Kapiśā is the name of the mother of the Piśācas, who are called Kapiśūputra and Kāpiśēya.

Monsieur Sylvain Lévi, on p. 4 of the fifth series of 'Notes Chinoises sur l'Inde,' reprinted from the Bulletin de l'École Française d'Extrême Orient, gives an account of a Māhātmya of Khotan (the Sūrya-garbha sūtra of the Mahā-saṃnipāta). Here the Yakṣas (i.e., Piśācas) are again brought into prominence as superseding the Nāgas. The latter refuse to accept charge of the twenty holy places of Buddhism. The Yakṣas then accept charge of nineteen, the twentieth, Gōśrīga, in Khotan, being left to the Nāgas.

In the text I have forgotten to draw attention to the fact that the Śīnā superstitions are full of a belief in demons, whom they call Yach. There is also a belief in fairies, who often take the form of Nāgas and Nāginīs (see Biddulph and Leitner passim). I may mention that this belief in Nāginīs extends into Western Tibet, where, according to Mr. Francké, they are called Klu-mo.

Finally, although I have not anywhere referred to the later Sanskrit traditions locating the Piśācas only in Central India, I do not pretend to be ignorant of the fact of their existence, especially in the Kathā-sarit-sāgara. So far as I am aware, this tradition is not supported by any facts hitherto brought forward, linguistic or otherwise. Mārkaṇḍeya mentions no less than eleven kinds of Paiśācī Prakrit spoken in widely separated parts of India (see Pischel, p. 27). Amongst them he mentions two—the Kaikēya and the Vrācaḍa of North-Western India—and they are sufficient for my purposes. I do not deny that in later times there may have been people called Piśācas, or even Piśāca colonists, in other parts of the country, but that opens out too wide a question to be discussed here. I may, however, mention that the Kōṅkaṇī dialect of Marāṭhī has certain phonetic peculiarities which are characteristic of Modern Paiśācī (see vol. vii. of the 'Linguistic Survey of India,' pp. 168, 169). Kōṅkaṇī is probably the only modern survival of the old Saurāṣṭrī Prakrit.
