Introduction

(I) "Squalube" is a clear lublicant oil made from "Squalan" (C 30 H 62).

(2) "Squalan" is produced from "Squlen" (c 3o H 50), adding H to the latter. .

(3) "Squlen" is produced from the liver of a kind of the sharks ..... Dulati ascus and Centrophorous ascus that live under the deep see about 200 meters below the surface, near Aight lwate prefecture.

(4) Dr. Tujimoto who discovered the "Squlin" says that the oil is one of the best materials for Anti-freeze Lublicant oil. The production of the oil was planed during the last war, and has been attracting a big attention in Japan.

(5) "Squalube" is the name of the sticky oils made from "Squlen" and "Squalan" and it has been completed to be produced on a big scale and sold in the market lately.
The engineers of the industrial production of the oil are Dr. B Yamaguchi Prefessor of Tokyo Unir. and Dr. H Azuma, engineer of the Fixheries Bureau of the Department of Agriculture and Forestry.

(6) "Squalube A" is Squlen itself for industrial use. "Squa;ube B.C.D....." are the names of the oil according to their sticky quality that are made with some treat-ment to "Squalen".

"The patents of Squalube Manufacture."

(I) "The manufacturing method of the sustance that improves the sticky-quality coeffient of the Lubricant Oil."
The patentee of this is Dr. Bunnosuke Yamaguchi. (In Japan).

(2) "The manufacturing method of Anti-freezing oil."
The patentee of this is Dr. Hideo Azuma. (In Japan)

The Excellency of "Squalube."

(I) The Pour Poibt of the Squlube is much less than that of petroleum and its group on candition of the same stickiness. ..... (cf. List I).

(2) The charge of the stickiness of Squalube due to the charge of temperature is very little. (cf... List).

(3) As "the Squlen" is a pure Hydrocarbon, C30 H50, it does not cantain any objectionable element of High power moleaete so it does not cause rusting and poisoning.

(4) As its cjemica; stability is large, it does not change in the air of high temperature. (cf ... List 3).

(5) Its volatity is very little. (cf ... List 1).

By this list, it will be understood that Squalube has the chemical Stability in Oxidation and high and low temperature.
This list was made in the following experiment, thus.
12 grams of Squalube B was put in a big glass bottle, and was heated by electric heater always at 100 c for 60 hours; and while in the bottle, it was embroiled with the air inside.
The det in the list lll was made in measuring the viscosity before and after the experiment.

The use and application of Squalube.

(1) The lubricant for the gauges in altitude flight.

(2) The lubricant for instruments of precision, in cold countries, etc.

(3) For various weapons in cold zone.

(4) As the standard oil for viscosity measurement.
cf. NO 223 and NO 1943 Report of the Avoation Laboratory in Tokyo university.

(5) As the material of Antifreezing grease.
Squalube grease has been produced now; one of its characteristics is shown in List Lll.

(6) Anti-rusting substance for surgical instruments, lubricant for medical instruments.

(7) Insulating oil for electrisity.
Invented by Seizo Matsushima, who is the patentee for it.

(8) Squalen (C 30 H 50) is used for treatment of lung-disease directry; this methed was discovered by Dr. Keijiro Kogami during war, has brought succeesful results; now this method is still under earnest study.

About the question of raw materials "Squalen."

Raw materials of "Squalen" is manifactured of vacuum steam arrangement in high power after resolve shark oil (about the dater and explanation, be so kind as to see another paper), so it is the key of manifacturing to get shark oil, and more then about fifty kinds shard is rich in variety.
Sharks which much contain "Sualen" are Ai sharks (off the coast of Formosa) and Kuroko shark. The catch of Kuroko Shark in Sanrilu coast is most condition in Japan, and a center of gathering part is Shiogama port are Kuroko shark and various sharks (Fon shark, Usagi shark) and the rate is seven to three.
The landing state is just as the rist in the on nexed paper.
Exploited oil of shark is the following.

1946	from Junuary	to December	447ton	oil of Kuroko shark	313ton
1947	"	"	1566ton	"	1105ton
1948	"	to April	1064ton	"	744ton

Shark oil are got t. 5.441 ton altogeather, in Sanriku Coast andd contain of "Squalen" is 20% according to the Scholar.

1. Squallen prospects for demand.
Concerning the prospects for demand, unless the Squallen is produced and delivered its actual production for negotiation, the conclusion will be impossible.
But doubt that it is the excellent products in the view of chemical power.
The followings are the items which are negotiating with sample.

a) Mach oil (1 year demand)
(hattori, Toyo, Rikoshe, Co Ltd) 5 ton, under negotistion and it is honful to use Squallen as watch oil.
b) Freezer oil (1 year demand) 50ton
c) For export
After the installation of equipment intend to forward the sample as high-altitude aviation grease.
d) Market price
average market price
1 cc 7.5 yen 1 kg 2.500 yen

Watch oil
IC cc (packed in bottle) 100 yen

Freezer oil 1 kg 500 yen
For export
The price will be decided by Board of Trade (Boeki-Cho).
But, in America, Similar procuction valued 5.3 yen (1 cc) now, then this company will be able to export some cheaper.
It's lowest sellable price will be 1 yen per 1 cc.

2. Harden oil
To sell by official price.

What's Happened to Case Of Missing School Books?

By TAMOTSU MURAYAMA

In 1947, 18 million school children in this country were made the innocent victims of a group of swindlers who pocketed vast sums by collecting and disposing of mountains of old textbooks.

Among those arrested and charged with being involved in the scandal was ex-Chief of Police Heiichi Matsuoka. Mr. Matsuoka was released on December 30, 1947, following a preliminary investigation by the Metropolitan Police Board and the Public Procurators' Office.

Mr. Matsuoka has been out of jail for 7 months and nobody else has been indicted in the case of the missing textbooks. Most people have probably forgotten about the whole matter. But this writer has not forgotten and does not mean to forget until those responsible are brought to justice.

A number of questions require answers. Why has nothing been done from December 30, 1947 until now to bring Mr. Matsuoka to trial? Why has he been shielded by Education Minister Tatsuo Morito

A number of questions require answers. Why has nothing been done from December 30, 1947 until now to bring Mr. Matsuoka to trial? Why has he been shielded by Education Minister Tatsuo Morito and by officials of the Procurators' office?

After his release on December 30, 1947, why was not a close check made of the textbooks which were still in his hands? Why was it possible for Mr. Matsuoka to dispose between March and April—after his release—1,573 reams of paper on the blackmarket and to receive new paper from the Mitsubishi Pulp Mill in exchange for his old textbooks?

Why did the police confiscate the remaining 439 reams of paper and 116,000 notebooks still in Mr. Matsuoka's possession, and yet permit him to go scot free?

Why, despite the knowledge of these shady deals, is the Ministry of Education taking no action to have Mr. Matsuoka's hearing expedited?

These questions require answers.

And for the [redacted] of the 1st grade of deaf-mute schools, [redacted] Introduction to Philology I. II" and its teacher's manuals will be published.

5. In every school care ought to be taken on the following items.

(1) The ~~names of~~ textbooks cannot be changed from those that they put in the list of textbook demand already submitted to respective prefectures after they selected them at the textbook exhibition held August 1948.

(2) The number of textbooks they need should be the same with the number of students and teachers of respective grades, (and not more than) even though the percentage of allocation is 100 % in the above charts. Especially as to textbooks for elective subjects, they are asked to pay carefull attention to the spirit of elective course program lest some students should try to take all the elective subjects. Sufficient guidance ought to be given to students in order to let them choose the most suitable subjects for them within the limit of their total hours, and not surpass the limit.

(3) Those who use textbooks published or licenced by Monbusho in 1948 are asked to pay attention to the following matters:

A. Those who want to use the same textbooks they are using now in 1949 also, ought to prepare a necessaty number of them to meet the shortage in this year, since some items cannot be shipped out 100 % as shown (2) in clause I, and clause III.

We understand there were some schools where inconvenience was caused owing to the lack of prior preparation last year.

B. Those textbooks reprinted in 1949 have undergone revisions in several parts. So teachers ought to let the students who use old textbook correct the different parts from those of new books, pointing out these parts while they are teaching in classes.

DECLASSIFIED E. O. 12065 SECTION 3-402 / NNDG NO. 775013

(4) "Makoto-san and Hanako-san" written by Monbusho as the introduction to Japanese for the 1st grade can be used, if they want to, even after the selection of other licenced books.

(5) The percentage of supply of textbooks for the middle, and latter parts of 1949 will be notified each time prior to supplying. Those schools which use already published books are wanted to prepare a necessary amount of second-hand books beforehand according to the percentage of supply.

(6) In case when the number of required textbooks be changed owing to the shake-up of students, it should be reported to respective textbook distribution agencies as quickly as possible, for proper readjustment should be made accordingly.

(7) The prices of textbooks will be given on the colophons, covers or the backs of the covers of them, and at the same time publicized on the Official Gazette, and notified to respective prefecture Boards of Education. Care should taken to know accurate prices to avoid unnecessary mistakes.

First Batch Includes 1,500 Volumes and Are Placed by Tokyo Booksellers

The first order from Japan for British books since the war was transmitted to London December 31 by the United Kingdom Liaison Mission. This order, which included some 1,500 volumes, came from Maruzen, Kyo Bun Kwan and six other leading Tokyo booksellers. The books ordered covered a wide range of subjects but scientific and theological titles were the most numerous. The largest order for a single item was for 356 copies of the Concise Oxford Dictionary.

These books are being imported under a SCAP license in accordance with which Japanese booksellers pay for their purchases in yen. These yen remain on deposit in this country and the British Government buys the books from the British publishers for sterling.

The United Kingdom Treasury has made a special appropriation for this purpose as a contribution to the Allied program for Japanese re-education which is being carried out by General Headquarters, Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers. In these circumstances, the books will not be available for sale to persons having access to Allied currency and who are thus able to purchase books through normal trade channels.

From now on, one bulk order will go forward on the first of every month. The next will be sent on February 1. Booksellers who wish to participate in it are requested to place their orders with the United Kingdom Liaison Mission before January 10. Between January 10 and the end of the month, the Mission will clear the titles with Civil Information and Education Section, SCAP, and make any other adjustments which may be necessary to ensure that the order does not exceed the amount allocated by the British Government for each month's business.

INTERIM TEXTBOOKS

The Bureau of Textbooks, Ministry of Education, reports that the first parts of the stop-gap textbooks in the appended list have been printed and fully distributed.

These are the proper texts to be used in school courses at the Elementary, Secondary and Lower Normal levels. They are replacing textbooks previously in use, and the latter, even with deletions, should not be used.

According to the Bureau of Textbooks, teachers are supposed to have been informed of the above through two channels. (1) Texts are sent out from the printers, and the agent-distributors in the various localities are supposed to notify teachers and principals that new texts are available. (2) The Ministry of Education, through normal educational channels, such as the prefectural government, informs personnel concerned.

If cases are found of teachers using improper textbooks, it should be borne in mind that the textbook information may not have been fully disseminated through the above channels. Such cases should be reported to the Education Division, CIE, SCAP, for investigation.

TEACHERS CHOOSE OWN TEXTBOOKS

Many Are Having A Voice In Selection for First Time in Their Careers

Textbook exhibitions held throughout Japan in the week ending August 31 aided many of the nation's 600,000 public school teachers in selecting books from which htey will teach during the 1948 school year, officials in SCAP's Civil Information and Education Section declared.

Included among displays in the exhibit halls were sample copies from private publishers of 24 secondary and 29 elementary texts as authorized for use in the next school year.

Teachers will submit orders for textbooks to prefectural educational offices where they will be consolidated and sent to the Education Ministry by September 10.

In addition to the texts exhibited, teachers can select books from the official catalog distributed to schools which includes textbooks compiled by the Education Ministry and those sanctioned prior this year.

Mark T. Orr, Chief of the CIE Education Division, explained that as a result of the newly adopted system of textbook authorization recommended by the textbook committee established by the Cabinet order last December 19, many teachers are having a voice in selection of their texts for the first time in their professional careers. "This naturally widens the democratization of public education," he said. "I know teachers are exercising sound judgment and discrimination to insure that books they select are suited to the educational needs of their communities."

Approval of these texts is now with the Textbook Authorization Commission, named by the Education Minister from recommendations made by the Textbook Committee. Of a total of 584 manuscripts received from private publishers and authors, 90 have been approved to date by the authorization committee.

Mr. Orr said authors and publishers should not be discouraged by the large number of rejections, since the compilation of scientifically sound textbooks requires years of research and experience. He added that in many instances minor revisions might make rejected textbooks acceptable. Some titles, too, are still under consideration. One of the main causes for rejections has been that the texts were inappropriate for sound educational use in the grades for which they were submitted.
