LINE LIMITS FOR HOUSES IN NEW ORDINANCE

Aimed at Those Who Build Houses Obstruct View of Street

HITS BUNGALOW COUR
Will Establish Law Prevent Crowding Houses on Lot

Glendale may have an ordinance to prevent building houses or bungalow courts without regard to a building line and forcing such houses or courts erected in the future to be built back of a line that will be either 20 or 25 feet from the street line of the property on which it is built.

It has been the practice of property owners who placed private gain ahead of the beautification of the city to build bungalow courts and in some cases two large houses on one lot without regard to the building line. These houses or courts are built flush with the street line and obstruct the view of residents on either side.

Councilman Davis made a motion Thursday night at a meeting of the city council to have the city attorney draft an ordinance setting a building line limits and forcing all houses or courts to be constructed behind this line.

No Protests
Thursday night was the time set by the council for hearing protests against the vacation of an alley east of Canada boulevard between Camulos and Opechee way and the improvement of Elk avenue from Everett to Adams street and the improvement of Lexington, Doran, Howard, Geneva and Everett streets. As there were no protests to the proposed improvements they were ordered.

Salary Ordinance

After passing several ordinances and resolutions and introducing others, the council adjourned to reconvene as a committee of the whole and discuss several clauses of the salary ordinance and other matters that have been brought to their attention.

ROY GARDNER IS NOT SANE ALIENISTS HAVE AGREED

Famous Mail Car Bandit
Has Own View of Right and Wrong

PHOENIX, Ariz., Dec. 9.—Roy Gardner is not sane. This was the unanimous testimony of expert alienists called by Carl A. Davis, counsel for the mail bandit, on trial here in federal court.

Gardner sustained an injury to his skull at Bisbee, Ariz., in 1908. Dr. Win Wylie, alienist and one of the principal witnesses said today, "This might or might not have to do with the condition of the defendant at the present time. The fact remains, however, that he is laboring under systematized delusions.

"What is right to the average mind is all wrong to Gardner. By the same token, what the normal mind regards intuitively to be wrong, or criminal, is perfectly legitimate in this man's viewpoint." Dr. Wylie asserted that he believed Gardner had been born with the elements of insanity.

"His story, his family history, and his appearance all point to unquestionable insanity," Dr. Wylie concluded.

Dr. Mary Neff, another alienist on the defense witness list, substantiated Dr. Wylie in detail.

THREE MEN ATTEMPT ENTER RIGEL HOME HERE LAST NIGHT

Men Escape When Wrong
Number of House Is Given Police

An attempt was made to enter the home of Mrs. F. A. Rigel, 322 West Elk last night by three men. Capture of the intruders was prevented by misinformation as to the address of the scene of the complaint.

A report of the attempt was telephoned to headquarters and the address given was in the 1300 block. There is no such number in Glendale and the police lost several minutes locating the house.

They finally found that the attempt had been made to enter the home of Mrs. Rigel. She said that three men had opened the screen door at the front of the house and had attempted to push the door key from the lock. Mrs. Rigel screamed and the men fled. She said that the men looked like Mexicans.

Says Popular Song Is the Toy Balloon of World of Music

"The popular song is the toy balloon of the world of music," says James W. Foley in "The Listening Post" tonight.

"Its purpose is to tickle the fancy," he adds, and from it he draws the lesson of life. He further declares it is a bad thing to be too busy to think and he says that a large number of persons who do not know where they are going find the end of their journey the morgue, hospital, poorhouse or jail.

CIGARET SALE TO MINORS COMPLAINT

Several complaints have been made recently to Chief of Police Martin that dealers have sold cigarettes to boys who are under 18, in violation of a state law. Chief Martin said that it is a violation of the law to sell cigarettes or tobacco in any form to minors and that he intends to punish all dealers violating the law. Inasmuch as this law has never been enforced in Glendale Chief Martin says that he will be fair with the dealers and warn them. Chief Martin also announces that he will punish any grown person who buys cigarettes or tobacco and gives it to a minor.

BANDIT MAKES BREAK FROM DEATH CELL

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 9.—Tom Slaughter, notorious bandit of the Southwest, staged one of the most daring and spectacular prison breaks in Southwestern criminal history early today when he escaped from the death cell of the state penitentiary here. Following his escape with six other convicts, Slaughter engaged in a gun battle with officers at Benton and Lonsdale and after eluding capture, is believed en route to his old haunts in Texas or Oklahoma. Slaughter spent five hours wandering around inside the prison walls before making his final dash to liberty.

Symbol of Verdugo Woodlands In Its Century Old Rose Vine

By JOHN H. GERRIE
Prosperity Editor Glendale Daily Press

When Senorita Lojena Verdugo, 106 years ago, planted the tiny jasmine vine at the front door of the Verdugo adobe ranch house she planted a symbol of that valley of loveliness to which the Verdugo family gave their name.

Tenderly the treasured roots had been transported from old Spain, the gift of a courtier of the king and the accompanying message ran something like this: "May this vine grow and prosper in its new soil and throughout her lifetime supply roses as sweet and tender as the little lady to whom it is consigned."

And the symbol that was planted by a gladsome, dark-eyed damsel of eleven years on that June morning of 1815 typified beauty and virility and happiness.

It is the symbol of one of the loveliest of all Southern California valleys, for, whichever way you turn in the exquisite Verdugo Woodlands, in the highlands of Glendale, you behold beauty and virility and the essentials of happiness.

I stood before the old adobe yesterday with Mr. F. P. Newport, Mr. W. L. Twining and others. The bright California sunshine poured through the balmy December air, bathing the white walls of the old Verdugo mansion with the same light and warmth with which, no doubt, it glowed on that almost forgotten day of more than a century ago, when little Lojena bent to her task of planting the Spanish thornless rose.

And there before us, almost completely screening the deep porch and clambering over the low roof of the old adobe, was a wonderful vine rising out of the soil with thews as big around as a man's thigh and tapering gracefully as it reached over the eaves to spread its lace work along the shingled slope above. In all its majesty of age and glory the jasmine symbolized, more than when the small Verdugo girl bent over its planting, beauty and virility and happiness. And there, growing out of it, almost in the middle of December, were a cluster of pale pink roses, softly fragrant, still fulfilling the wish of a far-gone day: "Sweet and tender as the little lady."

And not three miles away, higher up in the valley, that "little lady" lives today at the remarkable age of 117 years. She is Mrs. Lojena Verdugo Ochovoya, sister of that Theodore Verdugo who in 1806 had built the adobe mansion in the jewel spot of the 27,000 acres of scenic grandeur, given him by Santa Maria and Jose de Verdugo out of the 300,000 acres of principality conferred upon the latter by the Spanish king.

Since the planting of the vine empires had risen and fallen, terrific wars had bathed the world in blood and passed into history, epochal inventions, discoveries and achievements had changed the status of man upon the earth, America had progressed from scattered colonial possessions to a dominant power in the affairs of mankind; California, emerging from a vast domain of mystery and vague allurements to a sunlit land of opportunity and health, was opening her arms to all the world!

And still the vine and the girl who planted it lived on! The symbol was true: Beauty and Virility and Happiness!

SENATOR WATSON IS CENTER OF FIRE AT MEETING TODAY

Tells Army Officer He Will
Slap His Face, Officers
Leave

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Fisticuffs were narrowly averted today at a senate investigation of the sensational charges made by Senator Tom Watson that American soldiers were hanged without trial in France, when the fiery Georgian threatened to slap the face of an army officer attending the hearing.

The clash occurred after Watson had protested the committee was "putting him in a straight jacket" by narrowing the scope of the investigation to the single charge soldiers were hanged without trial.

Suddenly he turned from the committee to a table nearby at which sat Colonel W. A. Bethel, Major John P. Censmore and Major George W. Cocheu. Advancing upon the officers and shaking his fist, Watson shouted: "You can't browbeat me. I'll slap your face. You think you are in France, bulldozing privates. For two pennies I'd slap your jaws. I know what my witnesses might expect from such as you." The officers sat and glared back at Watson, but made no attempt to move.

"The sergeant-at-arms will tell Senator Watson that he is not at liberty to insult these army officers," shouted Brandegee, pounding the table for order.

"Having been insulted, I'll retire," said Watson.

"You must be in order, senator," shouted Senator Shields, Tennessee, sitting around the table to where Watson stood.

"Direct your remarks at that bull-jawed man," Watson yelled back. Senator Brandegee promised that the officers would retire.

"Get out of here now," Brandegee ordered, and the officers promptly left the room.

After the officers retired, Senator Brandegee protested that they had not uttered a word against Watson and that he was at liberty to present any evidence that he wished.

In the list of letters offered by Watson were charges that soldiers had been hanged without trial, clubbed and bayoneted to death in France. Stating that he had documentary evidence of two men hanged without trial, F. B. Fitch, 923 Middle street, Lansing, Mich., wrote asking that he be called as a witness.

IRISH PEOPLE ARE WELL SATISFIED

DUBLIN, Dec. 9.—A majority of the Irish people today rallied to the support of the four cabinet members who favor acceptance of the peace treaty with Great Britain. President De Valera and two other cabinet ministers oppose it. The press of Ireland is unanimously in favor of the pact. Unbiased authorities who know the real feeling of the people, declare there are three persons in Ireland who would vote in favor of the treaty to every one against it.

CHRISTMAS WILL BE MERRIER IF YOU WILL HELP

Perhaps you haven't heard of the pair of stockings that this newspaper wants you to give to some poor boy or girl this year. It's all so simple.

Read about it and then act. We want you to buy a pair of stockings, for either a boy or girl, it doesn't matter which, and to fill one of the stockings with goodies. Bring the stockings to the office of this paper as soon as you have completed the joyful task and this paper will see that by Christmas some child who needs the stockings and the Christmas cheer receives them.

It isn't much to ask, is it? Just a pair of stockings and one of them filled—just as Santa Claus would fill them. You can use your own judgment as to what should go into the stocking. Perhaps an orange, a few nuts, a little present of some kind, carefully wrapped so that the child who receives it will have the joy of unwrapping it, a book or trinket of some kind. Oh, there's a lot of things that you can put into the stocking.

And the joy you will have in filling this stocking will repay you a thousand times for your trouble. You will be sending Christmas cheer into homes where only gloom has held sway. You will have the joy of knowing that somewhere in this city there is a kid who has been made happy by your gift on Christmas morning. Won't you please hurry and do this simple but kindly act?

MADALYNNE BRANDS BESENTY STORY AS MALICIOUS LIE

Denies Writing Note and Telling Kennedy Killed Himself

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9.—Pale with anger, Madalynne Obenchain today denied the sensational story of the death of John Belton Kennedy and her connection with it, as related from the witness stand at the murder trial of Arthur C. Burch by Mrs. Elizabeth Besenty.

Madalynne branded as particularly malicious falsehood the statement that she stood in front of Kennedy's machine after he had been killed, writing a note by the glare of the headlight.

Mrs. Besenty, whose cottage in Beverly Glen is next to Kennedy's, said she saw Mrs. Obenchain write a message and drop it in the grass. The prosecution has introduced evidence which is purported to be this same note. It says:

"Be very careful. You are being watched. A Friend."

Madalynne also denied that she had intimated to the Deeringes, residents of the apartment who came up in their automobile a few moments after the tragedy, that Kennedy had killed himself. Instead, she insists, she asked Deering to search the vicinity, saying she saw two rough-looking figures disappear in the dark after the shooting.

RESIDENTS DORAN TO HAVE MEETING

Residents in the neighborhood of the Doran street school are quite concerned about the improvement of streets abutting on the school campus. For the purpose of determining whether this improvement can be secured, a meeting to discuss the matter has been called for Friday evening, December 16, at the Doran school by Mrs. A. H. Brown, president of the Doran street Parent-Teacher Association. Residents of that locality are being strongly urged to present themselves at that time to express their opinions for or against the proposition. Notices will also be sent out through the school.

SALARY SLASH CITY PAY ROLL WAS ORDERED

SHERER TO TURN IN FE
Appoint C. L. Edwards to Office of Utility Inspector

On motion of Councilman Stephenson at the meeting of the city council Thursday night the minutes of two previous meetings of that body sitting as a committee of the whole were adopted. The two committee meetings referred to by Councilman Stephenson were when the salaries of several city officials and employees were reduced to conform with the city's program of economy. Other actions of minor importance were embodied in the minutes.

Refund Fees
At the committee meeting on Monday, December 5, and on motion of Councilman Stephenson, the council voted that J. C. Sherer, present city treasurer, be ordered to turn into the city treasury all fees received by him while acting as city clerk since July 1, 1921. According to the city charter, all fees collected by a city employee while holding office are to be given to the city treasurer.

Set Balances
The pay of Street Inspector L. Nelson was set at $5 for each day actually employed. Overtime pay with the exception of public service department employees was under fire and fell a casualty in the battle of economy. It was decided that all overtime, with the exception of the aforementioned department and workers who are paid by the day, be abolished and such overtime as will be paid in the future will be at the same rate as their daily pay and that no city employee will be paid for more time than he is actually employed.

Care for Trucks
All street sweepers and pick-up men will in the future receive $100 per month. Street department truck drivers shall be paid $110 per month and shall, in addition to their regular duties, take time to care for the trucks. Drivers of garbage trucks are to receive $180 per month, based on a twelve-hour day and for six days' work a week. Their helpers will receive $165, based on the same time schedule.

Utility Inspector
A new position was created. This was the office of utility inspector in the building department to receive a salary of $30 per month and C. L. Edwards was appointed to the position.

Cut Allowance
The $20 monthly allowance made to the building superintendent for use of his automobile was discontinued and it was decided to sell to the highest bidder two horses that have been used in connection with the forestry and tree trimming department.

Reduce Salary
At the committee meeting of November 28, held as a prelude to the reduction of salaries, the monthly salary of the senior bookkeeper in the comptroller's department was reduced from $150 to $110. This reduction is to become effective on or before February 1, 1922.

Transfer Balances
The unexpended balances of several minor funds were transferred to the unappropriated reserve fund to be used as required in the various departments.

THRILL WORLD WHEN ARMS AGREEMENTS ARE MADE KNOWN

Sweeping Success of Conference Is Now Assured
World

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Sweeping success by the arms conference was assured today. Agreements on major problems before the conference that will thrill the world probably will be formally announced at a plenary session to be held Monday or early next week.

The Japanese delegates today gave definite assurances to the British representatives that the 60 per cent capital ship ratio allotted her in the Hughes limitation of naval armament program had been accepted by Tokio.

General approval, at least, already has been given by the United States, Great Britain, Japan and France to the quadruple Pacific entente of these powers, which the United Press a week ago exclusively announced had been arranged by the "Big Three."

GLASS ON HIGHWAY CAUSE COMPLAINT

Motorist Encounters Glass on City Streets and Highways of City

Several citizens of Glendale who are motor car drivers have appealed to the chief of police and asked him if it were possible to have the police department, street department or the automobile club take some action in regard to leaving broken glass in the street.

Complainants stated that on many of the main traveled highways and several of the roads approaching the city, bits of broken glass are allowed to lay for several days and menace the tires of every automobile that travels over the highway.

It is manifestly impossible for the police department to relieve this condition, although there are several instances where officers have swept up the glass after an automobile accident. The street department attends to the sweeping up of the streets inside the city and when the employees of that department are not too busy they endeavor to respond to call regarding broken glass in the street, but the work of the street department covers so much ground that in many cases glass is allowed to remain on the street for several hours before it is swept up. On the roads approaching the city, none of the city departments have the authority to do work of any kind. This is the domain of some other organization.

In many cities, Pasadena for instance, the automobile club attends to the removal of glass from streets when motorists telephone to the club and give the necessary information. It has been suggested that the local branch of the automobile club be asked to cooperate in the matter of making the streets and roads safer for the automobilist by assisting in the work of keeping the streets free of fragments of glass.

A section of the state law regarding automobiles and the maintaining of public highways states that in the event of an accident where automobile headlights, or windshields are broken, or where glass of any description is dropped on the street or highway, the parties to the accident are responsible and must remove the glass. The law is all right but it is impossible to enforce, for there is no way of checking up who is responsible for the broken glass along the highways.

CHIEF MARTIN SAYS BEWARE OF AGENTS

Sewing Machine Men All Right Apparently But Read Contract First

Several days ago there were three complaints made to the chief of police that there were several agents for sewing machines here and that their methods of securing contracts were apparently questionable. It is alleged that facts were distorted and misrepresented and that after the contract had been signed, agents refused to make any adjustment.

On Thursday Chief of Police Martin had several of the agents brought to the station, where he questioned them. They assured him they were not misrepresenting the article for which they had the agency and neither were they securing signatures to contracts under false pretenses. They said they had no intention of misleading anyone.

The men may be alright, according to Chief Martin, but he issues a warning to all housewives to beware of agents and to sign no contract without first reading it carefully and then discussing the matter with their husbands. Chief Martin states that the contracts as presented by the sewing machine agents are "ironclad" and when once signed will have to be fulfilled to the letter. There is no way of cutting the activities of these agents, but the warning is issued by the chief to keep housewives on their guard.

Home Builders Needs To Be Exploited In Glendale Press

Floor Plans for Typical Glendale Home to Be Published Next Tuesday in Double-Page Announcement of Contractors, Builders and Material Houses

The inauguration Tuesday by the Glendale Daily Press of a double page devoted entirely to Home Builders needs has created no little amount of interest, and its continuation each Tuesday will be the means of helping to solve many of the perplexing problems which confront those desiring to build.

In next Tuesday's double page Builders' Guide, the George M. Lindsey Co., architects and designers, will furnish the floor plans for a modern five-room bungalow, and will give other information of value to builders. There will also be some "new faces" on the double page—reliable firms who can supply everything needed in the construction of a modern home.

A word about the reliable firms whose advertisements appeared in the Building Page on Tuesday will not be amiss at this time. Newton Electric Co. This old reliable firm is now located in its new quarters in the new chamber of commerce building, 154 South Brand boulevard. The stock will be greatly enlarged, and the wants of the public will be supplied in every way. Fixtures for the new home, and everything in the electrical line will be carried. Wiring and installing fixtures will be given prompt attention, and no one building a home should fail to consult J. A. Newton about the electrical requirements of the house. Newton has the reputation of giving the public a square deal and making good if anything goes wrong.

GEORGE M. LINDSEY CO. This company has a staff of expert architects who have the reputation of handling high-grade work, and giving universal satisfaction. There is no job too large or too small for them to handle. Consult them when you are ready to build.

GLENDALE SHEET METAL WKS. "Everything in Sheet Metal Work" is the slogan that aptly sets forth the scope of usefulness of this reliable and rapidly growing firm. From a very small beginning, Capt. Thos. D. Watson, the owner, has built up a business that ranks second to none of its kind in cities much larger than Glendale. From a two-man shop the business has grown to its present status, which requires around 20 men to handle the work. Don't go out of town for your sheet metal work. Let the Glendale Sheet Metal Works figure on your job.

HARRY MOORE CO. There are few people in this section who do not know Harry Moore, either personally or by reputation. He has one of the largest paint establishments in this section and works an army of painters. He has been here for a long time, and his business is increasing right along, which would indicate he is making good. Mr. Moore is making many improvements in his store, and is installing booths to better display the mammoth stock of wall paper he carries. The biggest shipment of wall paper ever brought to Glendale is en route here from the East for Harry Moore. He handles everything in painting, decorating, paper-hanging and signs.

HILLCREST SUBDIVISION Mr. Campbell is offering some glittered lots for those desiring to build a home that will be a home in the true sense of the word. If you fail to read his advertisement on the building page, you will miss a piece of news that you cannot afford to overlook. Good lots at the right prices are not picked up every day, and Mr. Campbell offers the home builder the opportunity to get a piece of land that will grow rapidly in value.

R. J. EAST, CEMENT CONTRACTOR Bids for all kinds of cement work, and has the reputation of doing good, honest work on every job he has tackled. Mr. East has had a long and varied experience in his line, and offers an opportunity to give estimates on all kinds of work.

LANDSCAPE GARDENERS No home is complete without a lawn, trees or shrubbery. Downing & Cox, landscape gardeners and nurserymen, are prepared not only to furnish anything needed in trees and shrubbery, but to do your landscape work as well. See them when you need such work.

BROADWAY SHADE SHOP This concern is "dead over heels in work," just now, which indicates that home builders have found a place where they can get window shades, curtain rods, etc., on short notice. This company makes any kind of shades wanted at a price that will surprise you. "SERVICE" is their big word, and they are living up to it.

NEW PLUMBER The old reliable plumbing concern of Mr. Ashton on East Broadway has been purchased by Wm. E. Clark, an expert in the plumbing line, and a newcomer to Glendale. Since taking charge of the business a few days ago, Mr. Clark, with his large force of plumbers, has been "too busy to eat," and from present indications they will continue to be busy. Mr. Clark is a live wire, a reliable business man, and will give the public good service. See him the next time you need work.

SAVE MONEY ON FURNITURE The Glendale Furniture Store, 565-608 East Broadway, of which Chas. A. Plagg is the owner, was never better equipped to furnish the home from cellar to garret. With a complete stock of everything, including stoves and ranges, this store can, on short notice, set you up to housekeeping and that, too, at prices which are surprisingly low for reliable goods. Mr. Plagg is a great believer in their square deal, and when you trade with him you can feel assured you will be treated right.

LUMBER AT RIGHT PRICE Many have hesitated to build for the reason that they felt the price of lumber was too high. Some firms may sell at a price that is prohibitive, but this is not true of Glendale firms and the Glendale Lumber Co. in particular, which has just opened up a large lumber yard on the San Fernando road a few blocks west of the terminus of West Broadway. With a large and complete stock of high-grade lumber, bought at prices that enable this firm to sell right, no home builder should hesitate to start the erection of a home if lumber alone is the obstacle. An investigation by a reporter revealed the fact that this new company is prepared to take care of any size order on short notice, and from what he could learn he feels assured that prices and terms are all the builder desires. Try this new firm—give them a chance to save you money.

RENTS WILL BE HIGHER J. F. Stanford, reliable builder of good homes, believes rents will be higher this winter, and in view of this fact, advises the immediate building of homes. He says: "There is satisfaction in being your own landlord," and Stanford knows what he is talking about for he has been in the building game for many years. He has made an enviable reputation as a builder, and has hundreds of good houses in Glendale which stand as monuments to his good judgment. See Stanford first, if you intend to build.

SAVE 20 PER CENT You can buy a good Christmas present with the money you have left if you place your insurance with H. L. Miller, who gives positive assurance that he can save at least 20 per cent on anything in fire insurance. Mr. Miller has many of the best companies in the country, and his reputation for square dealing is one of the big things to be considered when you want fire insurance.

FOUNDATION IS FIRST Any house you build will tumble down unless its foundation is good. You want good insurance for your building and you will make no mistake in letting Gordon T. Harrison, 131 South Brand boulevard, take care of your wants in this line. They can furnish on short notice, rock, sand and gravel, also other building material, and SERVICE is the big word with them. This firm has opened up in Glendale with the sole idea of building up a big business here, and they will give builders the best possible service. Let them know your needs, they can save you money, time and worry in handling the job.

HARDWOOD FLOORS In the modern home, hardwood floors are a necessity, and houses which do not have hardwood floors are not near so saleable as those with them. In fact, a nice home otherwise, but lacking hardwood floors, is often passed up for a much cheaper house having hardwood. There is one company, at least, in this city which can be depended upon to meet every requirement of the most exacting in the matter of flooring, and this is the Glendale Hardwood Flooring Co., at 304 East Broadway. This company carries the very best oak, maple and birch flooring, and when they lay your floor you can feel assured that it is done right. Long experience in this work enables this company to make good in every respect, and you cannot afford to build without having hardwood floors, and you will be doing the best by yourself by letting the Glendale Hardwood Flooring Co. have complete charge of your floor work. Anyway, see them and get their advice—it will cost you nothing.

For Women—Following the regular session of the gymnasium class organized by the Business and Professional Women's Club, the organization will be entertained at an open house given for it by the chamber of commerce Tuesday evening, when Mrs. George U. Moyle will make a brief talk on the coming high school bond issue, and other matters of interest to club members, will be discussed.

Story of Football

By PERRY TOWNSEND, Student A-S Grade, Intermediate School

Football, next to baseball, is the most popular athletic game in the world. It is played principally in the British Empire and in the United States. It is a very ancient game. The Indians of North America and aborigines of many Pacific islands played a game similar to football, and it may have been played when Europe was in barbarism. In the British Isles football was played in the middle ages by whole communities, who kicked the ball through streets or over meadows in such a rough fashion that the game was sometimes forbidden. Only in the nineteenth century did it become an organized game, with fixed numbers on each side and definite methods of counting score. Weight, physical fitness and endurance are very important in players, but quick thinking is very necessary.

It was at the great English school: like Rugby, Harrow and Eton that football was first made practical. The boys' playground at Rugby was large, and there was plenty of room for running and tackling. At other schools as late as 1850 the game was played by kicking and bunting the ball. Thus two distinct types of football have developed. Rugby, which permits running with the ball, and Association or Soccer, which prohibits it. The former includes English, Canadian and American Rugby, three distinct styles of play.

The Virginia colonists brought the older English game to America, and soon after 1830 students at several of the eastern colleges began to play it. Ten years later at Amherst, Brown, Harvard, Trinity and Yale there were interclass games resembling class rushes of today, and so rough did they become that in 1860 the faculties of Harvard and Yale prohibited football. At Princeton a more orderly game was played, adapted from the English Association code, and in 1869 the first intercollegiate contest took place between Princeton and Rutgers. In 1871 football was revived at Harvard, with rules which permitted running with the ball as in Rugby.

Not long after this, McGill college in Montreal challenged Harvard to a match, and on May 15, 1874, these two teams played the first intercollegiate Rugby match in America. McGill's players were accustomed to English Rugby rules and Harvard's to their own version of them, so on the preceding day the two teams coached each other in their tactics. On the 15th a match was played under Harvard rules and Harvard scored three times. The next day under McGill rules neither team scored. The success of these two contests aroused enthusiasm for Rugby, and in 1875 Harvard and Yale played a game under a compromise set of rules which admitted both of running with the ball and batting it with the hand. This compromise was unsatisfactory, and in 1876 Columbia, Princeton and Yale abandoned the other form of football in favor of straight Rugby.

Like all the more popular athletic competitions of the colleges of the United States, football has become a highly specialized activity. The original Rugby rules have been entirely superseded by a gradual development of a code much more complex but permitting a far higher development of team play. Players are trained by professional coaches who, in some cases, receive several thousand dollars for a season's work. Each man is drilled in the elements of the game by long hours of practice in tackling dummies and charging against wooden frames. Team work is taught in scrimmages, the sham battles of football, and strategy is studied by black-board talks. Though the game is played only in the autumn, the more ambitious colleges have practice in spring as well.

As a result of all this care, a football game between two colleges is one of the most interesting and exciting spectacles to be seen anywhere. The famous contests between Harvard and Yale attract the largest crowds, which seem to be limited only by the capacity of the Harvard Stadium and the Yale Bowl.

The Educational Value of School Activities

By KATHLEEN CAMPBELL

Have you ever stopped to realize the educational value of school activities? To what does the participation in school activities lead?

While the values are many, perhaps the three outstanding are the training in citizenship, leadership, and sportsmanship. In judging a man or a woman, do you not admire them, do you not look up to them with respect if they have the reputation of being good citizens in their community, their state, and their nation?

A person entering into school activities with an aim in view, a goal to reach, is the person that will be a true and loyal citizen of the United States. In entering into school activities one must be up to a high standard in one's work; one must obey the school; and last one must boost all plans for the further advancement of one's particular school. Does not a good citizen also carry out these same things? No matter how humble the work, a good citizen performs it well. He carries out the laws of his country and sees that his fellow citizens do not violate them, and lastly, he is behind any plan for the further advancement of his community, state, and nation.

A person cannot learn the essentials of good citizenship too soon, and by entering into school activities in high school he will be training himself to be an outstanding citizen. Is not leadership an asset? To be picked out in a crowd as a leader, as one capable of carrying on big things is certainly something worth while.

When taking over the responsibility of an office or in becoming a member of a team no matter in what activity, the student is assuming responsibilities that will train him to be a leader.

Which will be your choice when out in the world? To be at the bottom of the ladder being directed, or of being at the top—a leader directing?

You will find that there is no better training to be found than in participation in school activities for leadership.

What is a good sport? Is it not one that takes a victory modestly and does not become a braggart; and one that takes a defeat with a smile? Is there anything more admirable in a person than good sportsmanship? No matter what activity you enter into in your school life you will meet with victory. Victory and you will also come up against defeat. Is there anything more pitiful than one in an athletic game or one in a debating game that receives defeat with a groan; one who finds something to crab about? The lesson of good sportsmanship may be learned now, in high school, by entering into school activities.

To be admired as a man or a woman one must be a good citizen. A very important phrase of good citizenship are leadership and sportsmanship. So the educational value derived from school activities is immense for it teaches three essential lessons! Citizenship, leadership, and sportsmanship.

The Barton Bedtime Stories

NO MORE NIGHT FLYING FOR CHEWEE

By JOHN BARTON
(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

Of course it was easy for Chewee the Chickadee to find his way home to Dr. Muskrat's Pond the morning he woke up at Chips Beaver's. He knew every branch of every tree. And of course Dr. Muskrat was fast asleep. Chewee had been so tired from his night flying that the nosey old sun couldn't poke him out of the duck's hole until way after daybreak. But that's the good doctor's bedtime. So, of course, Chewee had to wake the old furry-foot up to hear the tale of his wanderings. He just couldn't wait to tell it.

"Ah!" smiled the old doctor to himself.

He told it wrong side first, as he mostly does things, beginning with Chips Beaver and his new beaver bride.

"Ah," smiled the old doctor to himself. "Now we'll find the secret Chips never would tell. It always comes out. Where did they come from?" "From the Tricky Little Stream," answered Chewee, positively. "I know they did. That's where Chips asked the way to go and that's where I saw her waiting for him." He did not get it quite straight, but that's as straight as his flying, so what more could you expect of him?

The wise muskrat just knew he was wrong. "She was out in the dangerous Deep Woods? All alone? Without any house to hide in? For all these weeks? It's a wonder Chips ever found her."

He was thinking about the foxes. But Chewee wasn't. "Not at all," he explained. "She was perfectly easy to find. He couldn't have missed her. It's all on account of the moon. The moon—she'll keep bringing you together even if you deliberately go in opposite directions. Why Chips followed her and I followed my shadow, tail to tail, and still we couldn't keep apart."

He went on till the old doctor shook so hard with laughing inside of his skin that he had to hold his hairs all fluffed out stiff to keep from hurting Chewee's feelings. You'd better believe he knows all there is to know about the moon's little tricks. She can't fool him when she turns around at midnight.

"You can see how terribly dangerous that would be," shivered the wee bird. "I didn't mind meeting Chips. But what if I kept on meeting an owl like that, time after time? Eh? Oh, I'm done with night flying!" "Very sensible indeed," replied the doctor, pulling down his long upper lip to hide a smile. He had to hide one more than once while Chewee chattered on about his experiences.

A goodly number of fathers and mothers came out to attend "Fathers' Night" of the Acacia Mothers' Club, which took place Thursday evening in the K. of P. hall, corner Park avenue and Brand, and all who enjoyed the excellent program voted it a great success.

Mrs. Alexander presided over the meeting, which opened with a business session at which the executive committee submitted its report and a communication from the chamber of commerce asking for a subscription to the float fund, was read. Harry Levey suggested that instead of appropriating money from the club treasury that a subscription be taken. The suggestion was adopted and very quickly $31 was raised, the givers deciding to present $21 to the club for the fund to accumulate for school equipment and $10 to the float fund.

The program included an address by Mrs. Kemper Campbell on "The Duty Fathers Owe Their Children." Harry Girard sang, there were songs by pupils of the third grade, a little group tableau and song, "Hiawatha," a story by Dorothy Brown, piano number by Dorothy Levey, recitations by Dorothy Alexander, song trio by three boys of the Parham family, and a dialogue by Beverly and Lydia Windas.

A banner bearing the word "Mother" was presented to the third grade room, taught by Mrs. Wesley Bullis, for having the largest number of fathers and mothers present.

Mrs. E. S. Dodds read an article from the December issue of the Ladies Home Journal entitled "We Feed the World and Starve Our Child." Mrs. Charles P. Nesselrode made an interesting talk on nutritious foods, classifying them according to food value and dwelling on the necessity of replacing the waste of the body with proper food. She also gave a well-balanced week's menu for a child and answered the questions asked by mothers present.

Miss Perkins' room of the fifth grade won the picture for the month of December by reason of having the most mothers present.

Mrs. John Robert White, president of the P. T. A. federation, was present and asked the members not to forget to cast their ballots at the bond election on December 29.

Tea and cake were served during a social half-hour which followed the program.

CHATS WITH MARTHA ALICIA

A REAL SURPRISE! Tomorrow, Saturday morning, the last day of that phenomenal Anniversary Sale at NEALE & GREGG'S HARDWARE STORE, is to be really special! Yes, indeed, for the first 12 ladies to purchase one dollar's worth of merchandise after 7:30 in the morning will be given the opportunity to buy one of their high-grade brooms for 1 cent! Think of it! Better than that, early for there will only be twelve: They are also selling, for Saturday only, a dandy carpet sweeper for $1.89! Then, for 19 cents you may buy one of their wonderful cold-handled frying-pans, while the heavy glass kitchen measures, or pouring glasses, complete with the lid, are to be offered at 10 cents! The past ten days have seen unprecedented success with Neale & Gregg's Anniversary Sale—and many are the housewives who have availed themselves of an unusual opportunity to secure practical and useful Christmas gifts at prices that were often below cost. Tomorrow is the last day of the sale—and bids fair to surpass any so far, for their list of "bargains" for the day is of such extraordinary value, and at such low prices, that surely they'll not pass unnoticed!

While you're at Neale & Gregg's, I would advise that you look over their wonderful stock of Christmas toys and novelties. They have everything imaginable in the way of ornaments for the tree—all sorts and kinds of lovely toys for the kiddies, as well as gifts of infinite usefulness for grown-ups. Mr. Neale also has a well selected stock of seals, tags, greeting cards and booklets, boxes, fancy ribbons and the like, to make the out-of-town packages more "Christmassy"!

"FOURTEEN MORE SHOPPING DAYS TILL XMAS!" My calendar greeted me bright and early this morning! So, during the day as I went about through Glendale's Shops and Stores, I endeavored to gather suggestions that will be of help to the busy Xmas Shopper! And, tonight, I'm bringing you tales of wonderful presents I found for Her whom you cherish above all others—Mother; for Him who has walked side by side with her—ever ready with a helping hand when most you need it—Father; for the best little girl in all the world—in fact—"The only girl for you"; and for the brothers and sisters and dear friends that compose your world. Somewhere, in these columns, or in the shops they represent, you'll find just the charming gift to best convey to them your love and good wishes. They are all loyal Glendaleans—and as such they'll appreciate beyond words gifts selected in Glendale's own exclusive shops. Buy it in Glendale—and buy it now!

Flesh stockings are being shown for evening wear and wide open work stripes are permissible. It seems, for street year, in taupe and other subdued shades.

IT'S SUCH A NOVEL IDEA—and yet so delightfully practical! AT NUSSBAUM'S GROCERY and MEAT MARKET—244 North Brand boulevard, I saw the loveliest Christmas boxes filled with assorted Iris products! They're just the thing for mother, for there's a can of apricots, one of peaches, others of pineapple, pears, cherries and a sixth of coffee! The whole is but $2.25! Then there are the Jevne's glazed stuffed prunes in pound boxes—the most delightful confections you've ever tasted—for $1.25. Jevne's glazed candy, in pound Christmas boxes is also $1.25.

In Nussbaum's Meat Department for Saturday Mr. Kriske is selling pork chops, the small ones, for 28c per pound, and pork roast for the loin for 27c, while the leg roast is but 22c the pound.

A small envelope purse is of black and white beaded strips worked in diagonal style. The fastening is of bright green enamel.

THE GLENDALE PHARMACY, 638 East Broadway, has a fine line of Christmas cards—on sale, now! They are also giving away with each purchase a week-end sample of Colgate Dental Cream; and, oh, yes, which he guarantees your husband will enjoy smoking—cigars that will not afford grounds for any jukes from him, either! They are put up in boxes of 25! Then, for the friend who travels, you'll find just the daintiest imitation black leather writing case, with tablet, pockets for stamps, addresses, and pencils—all complete for only 75c. A most inexpensive but appreciable gift.

The double shoulder strap of the French evening gown has been used by American dress-makers occasionally.

THE SUCCESS OF ONE'S DINNER party depends largely on the coffee! If the coffee is poor, the effect of the whole dinner may be spoiled—but a good cup of coffee will "make" a dinner! Now, if you have been purchasing your coffee at 318 East Broadway, from BOOTH'S, you know as well as I do, that his coffee is unsurpassed, and by serving Booth's Special Blend, you will always be "on the safe side." For, the Coffee King, as he is fondly known by hundreds of coffee drinkers, certainly knows how to roast and blend coffee to get that delicious flavor that one seldom finds in even the most expensive brands. And Booth's coffee is not at all expensive—but it is excellent—always pure and fresh!

Wraps charmingly embrace, fold or drape a figure this season in almost any fashion one chooses.

SATISFACTION IS GUARANTEED AT THE BRAND'S CLEANERS, 217 South Brand boulevard. They make a specialty of ladies' work—taking great pains with dainty lace evening gowns, georgette blouses and fine kid gloves. Their prices are most reasonable, too!

Many high neck lines are introduced for daytime wear, with a disposition to accent the high effect at back.

IT'S A VERITABLE JOY to do one's Christmas shopping at SHERROD'S SPECIALTY SHOP, 207 East Broadway! Today I saw the daintiest and loveliest of handkerchiefs—most attractively boxed for the holidays! There are lawn and linen handkerchiefs, some trimmed with exquisite handmade lace, and others beautifully hand embroidered! Then, too, they have those good-looking sport handkerchiefs, that are so popular among the high school set!

Bathing capes and sweaters are fashioned of rubberized silk fabric which drapes with the flexible grace of panne velvet.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY to secure a most handsome gift for mother's Christmas! WASHNER WILSON, of 140 South Brand boulevard, is giving away, absolutely free, with the purchase of a vacuum cleaner, a 26-piece set of Rogers silverware! Really, they are beautiful—a most distinctive design and pleasing pattern—a welcome addition to any silver chest! There are six different machines from which you may make your selection—all excellent makes and put out by reputable companies! The prices on them range from $45 to $65, and Mr. Wilson will arrange terms to suit you!

And do you know, I believe a vacuum cleaner is one of the essentials of a successful home-life—for when mother has been relieved of the heavy sweeping and dusting and moving of furniture, that is now the greater part of her duties, she'll have more time to devote to the happiness of her family! I know she'll be pleased if you stop in at Washner Wilson's and order a vacuum delivered to her on Christmas eve. Mr. Wilson will gladly demonstrate them all to you, that you may intelligently select that which you consider the best!

For motoring there are wide, long scarfs of richly colored and sometimes figured fabric, that are worn knotted over the head.

THE BROOKS' SHOPPE, 123 N. Brand boulevard, is indeed an inspiration for the Christmas shopper! Here you'll find as many interesting suggestions of inexpensive, yet acceptable gifts, for you to make yourself! Dainty silk underwear, high lace-cases, and a myriad more of charming presents can be quickly and delightfully made by having them hemstitched or picoted edged at the Brooks' Shoppe! Then, too, Mrs. Brooks has a very limited stock of pretty bouffant caps in net and ribbon combinations, as well as lovely little fancy silk bags for sale! The prices on them are very low!

Cotton frocks have trimming of tinted lace, ruchings of looped ribbon, ruffles bound with satin and tiny puffs.

I COULD SPEND HOURS at ARTHUR H. DIBBERN'S, 121 North Brand boulevard—simply reveling in the wonderful gift suggestions which characterize his shop! For "the city girl" there are most wondrous diamond rings, pendants, brooches and bracelets, some set in platinum, others in gold and white gold! Then, there are adorable little wrist watches in distinctive and original shapes, while the handsome gold and silver mesh bags, as they are called, will simply fascinate you. Then, in his silver case, Mr. Dibbern has a distinctive offering of three and five piece service sets, and also beautiful creamers, sugar bowls, cake plates and the like that may be bought separately or as a set!

The new season's fashions offer some charming novelties in taffeta frocks.

"THE LAUGHING WATER"—some one has called the famous White Rose Spring Water at the INDEPENDENT ICE CO., 106 North California avenue. And, truly, it is, for it brings health and happiness into the homes where it is served. Call Glendale 217 and order a bottle today!

Millinery grapes in green and purple are a modish finish to new lace evening frocks.

SHE'S TRULY AN ARTIST IN HER line, is the only way I can account for the wonderful work which Miss Bedell of the BEDELL FUR SHOP, 1125 North Louise street, does! Why, will you believe me, that I saw her making the most stunning cape from an old, worn, seal coat? Yes, indeed—and she works perfect wonders with old scarfs and muffs—making a beautiful cape, a wonderful scarf, or even a modish choker—depending, of course, on the amount of material she has to work with! Miss Bedell specializes on designing suits to suit one's own personality. You'll find her most reasonable, too! The phone is Glendale 429-J.

A GIFT THAT ALWAYS PLEASES—is candy! And she'll be delighted when she knows it came from PUSS 'N' BOOTS—211 1/2 South Brand boulevard, for they make their own candies of the purest materials! Take her some of their chocolate coated nuts, brazils, walnuts, filberts or almonds! They're wonderful!

IF MUSIC IS MADE a part of the hospitality offered one's guests, any of the simpler entertainments like an afternoon tea, are made successful. Your musical friends will delight in that marvelous reproducing instrument—the Ampico! They will enjoy hearing again the great master whose playing on the concert stage they have remembered with pleasure, or another, whose wonderful interpretations are the talk of the music world, but who cannot be heard in person for his concerts are given in some distant city, or at a time when it is impossible to attend. And then, there is the subdued music to be heard during dinner—coming from a distance, softly, quietly, enchanting, and adding an indefinable charm to any gathering—never intruding itself but existing only as an exquisite melody heard from afar—for the Ampico can be made to play as softly as one likes—and what could be more beautiful or touching than music heard at twilight or in a room lighted only by the glow of the fire? The home of the Ampico in Glendale is at 211 North Brand boulevard—the BARNES-SHUCK MUSIC CO. There you may hear the world's most famous artists perform with all of their brilliancy of technique, on either the Haines Bros. Franklin or Knabe pianos! Stop in at their attractive store and ask to hear your favorite selection played by one with whose artistry you are acquainted and you'll agree with me, I am sure, that there is but one word with which to express the Ampico and that is—Magical!

Since green is no longer considered unlikely for bridesmaids, it is to be much the vogue at society weddings this season.

COULD THERE BE A MORE WONDERFUL gift for your wife, than a real home—for Christmas? Indeed not, and that is why I am telling you of this wonderful bargain which VANDENHOFF, of 205 North Brand boulevard has! It is just the sort of 7-room home she'd like—it has four bedrooms and a beautiful screen porch—and there are hardwood floors all the way through! The lot is 55 by 160, to an alley, and besides a double garage there's a small little house in the rear! There is a beautiful lawn and flowers—just everything to make it homey—all for but $10,500. The valuation is $15,000, but for quick sale it has been marked down!

Strings of fascinating colored beads, pagoda shape, and made of wood are among the new things which are being worn with the popular coat suits.

IN ORDER TO MAKE ROOM for late arriving Christmas goods, the MISHION STORE, 107 West Broadway, is having a sale today and tomorrow of high grade boxed stationery. Their prices were originally unusually low—but now they are offering ten per cent off on all of this fine line of goods! It is a wonderful opportunity to select an acceptable present! A beautiful line of sterling silver and enamel brooches, showing maple leaf designs, are indeed something both new and dainty. Just the thing for one's friends from the northern states and Canada—and at such low prices, too—35c to $1.35!

Scalloped hems, battlemented effects and skirt lines, broken by points, or panels falling beneath are gaining in favor.

THE FASHION SHOPPE—of 406 S. Brand Blvd. is just that its name imply—for Madame Geraldine keeps constantly in touch with the very latest Paris and New York modes! They have a wonderful line of delightful dresses for all occasions—and moderately priced, too! Or, when you're unable to find just the gown you wish—she'll soon design one to fit your own personality. In Madame Geraldine's skilful fingers the plainest of dresses soon becomes a delightful creation of infinite charm! You may also have the smartest of suits and coats as well as dresses made to order at the Fashion Shoppe. And oh! you must stop in and see the wonderful line of dainty gift neckwear that has been specially priced for Xmas!

Eponge is the dominant material now in juvenile modes and button trimmed voile is another favorite.

SHE'LL APPRECIATE SOMETHING for her home, more than anything else at Christmas time! Why not have a beautiful new rug—either velvet, Axminster or tapestry, sent to Mother for Christmas? THE GLENDALE FURNITURE STORE, 606-608 East Broadway have a wonderful stock of lovely new rugs in most all of the usual sizes represented—and at prices that are real savings, too!

BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED CAKE AT TUESDAY CLUB'S BAZAAR

Decorations were the work of Mrs. Bert Woodard of this city

What might be termed the centerpiece of the Tuesday Afternoon Club bazaar held Wednesday at the Masonic Temple, was a work of art in confectionery donated by Mrs. Bert Woodard, and the product of her own skill. Mrs. Woodard has achieved fame in the past by her wonderful floral decorations in the frosting of cakes, but this one, it was agreed, excelled her best previous record. The foundation and excuse for this lovely creation was a large, round cake, about 18 inches across. Around the upper edge as a border were overlapping feathery scrolls, different from anything any of the beholders had seen before in cake ornamentation. On the top of the cake and clustering at its base on one side were fluted, upstanding yellow daisies, wonderful in their coloring and similitude to life. On the opposite side, as if flung upon the cake, were violets and sprays of lilies of the valley. Mrs. Woodard received instruction in this beautiful work from Mrs. Wilson, of Nashville, Tenn., who told her that she had great natural aptitude, but she has never followed it professionally, though occasionally she yields to the entreaties of persons who have seen her work and executes a commission. In a medium of this kind, such a creation is a nerve wrecking strain, of which Mrs. Woodard showed the affects at the fair. In the decoration of this cake she spent two and a half days. To admiring visitors Mrs. Woodard's recipe for the white frosting which stands up in fluffy masses, was sold for 25 cents, with an opportunity to become the possessor of the cake. Mrs. John W. Garver was the fortunate lady who carried it home, and the club realized from Mrs. Woodard's donation to the fair about $40. Mrs. Woodard stated that her teacher, Mrs. Wilson, has international fame and occasionally executes commissions from abroad. She makes the fancy cakes for the White House.

Some Stammer

A clubman whose stammering tongue is the only slow thing about him accepted the week-end invitation of Warr Bullione, who has acquired an ancient mansion famous for its carved staircase.

On arrival he was conducted to his room. He shuddered as he mounted the stairs at the new gilding which disfigured the lovely old woodwork.

His room was sumptuous, but more wonderful was the bathroom, with its marble walls and tinted marble bath, let into the floor in Roman fashion.

"What are you doing?" asked a puzzled friend as he watched him pass his fingers around the bath.

Came the reply: "I w-w-want to be quite sure there are no d-d-diamonds incrustated in the d-d-darned bath; I must scratch my b-b-back on them!"

Athletic Activities and Their Place In the General Scheme of Education

By FLORENCE KNIGHT

Athletic activities deal largely with the big muscle groups and spring from the social instinct of rivalry. The spirit of competition is marked in individual athletics and single child is being guided all unconsciously. Here the boy or girl learns to subordinate his or her private interests to those of the group. Here the very essence of democracy is disor dual games as well as in athletic games where team work plays an important part. From the standpoint of training for life, athletics are said to be the very best preparation. They develop organic vigor, psycho-motor reactions, and use and guide the instincts and emotions of the child. By proper guidance the natural instincts make the best and most enduring qualities of a strong character. So instead of stifling these emotions they gut-played, and the boy or girl comes to understand through the school of experience what the real ideals of fair play are. The word sportsmanship soon becomes a living word to the participants of team games. This phase of the girl's education has been neglected in the past so the present need is all the more imperative. The girls of today must be prepared to make useful and intelligent citizens. They need supervised team play to develop self control and ed and directed to form the frame work of the future citizen. Individual athletics, though not as highly developed in team work as the team games, have their place in education. They have an intense spirit of rivalry and variety. They require much drill before acquiring skill, but because of the interest displayed, the feeling of fatigue seldom enters. This is also true of dual games such as tennis, hand ball and golf. The child is active, kept in good health, and at the same time is not subjected to fatigue. The girl or boy should not participate in such sports to such an extent that they should feel really fatigued. Team games, such as volley ball, basketball, baseball and hockey have these values and many more. They have the group spirit carried into definite action and the social life of the resourcefulness, that they may be efficient in any future work. Girls as much as boys need to learn generous treatment of rivals, co-operation and loyalty to the group. The importance of physical education cannot be over stressed when our own state of California and several other states have passed laws making some form of physical education compulsory. This is not only for the physical but also the moral and mental well being of the pupils in our care. This does not mean that all students take the more strenuous forms of activity, for some require light work or relaxation as the best and surest way to health. Education is striving in this aim to be as generous to the girl as to the boy in equipping her with a sound body and mind with which to meet the problems of life.

The Value of History and Civics in the Schools

By CLARA MIDCALF, Vice Principal Intermediate School

Our fathers made a nation with the expressed purpose of securing a more perfect union, establishing justice, insuring domestic tranquillity, providing a common defence, promoting the general welfare, and securing the blessings of liberty.

They foresaw the need of keeping these aims alive through the succeeding generations. They recorded their convictions that it must be done by maintaining schools as a part of the system of government. They told what public schools are for. Franklin said they are "to supply men to serve the public." Washington, "to enlighten public opinion." Adams, "to give the knowledge useful in practice of the moral duties of a man and citizen." Monroe, "to qualify society to discharge with credit the great duties of citizens." Madison, "to prepare a people who mean to be their own governors." Jefferson, "to enable the people to understand what is going on in the world and to keep their part of it going right."

The teaching of History and Civics in the schools of Glendale endeavor to carry out these purposes, and prepare the child for citizenship through an understanding of the ideals, institutions, achievements, and problems of his own country.

Attention is given in all grammar grades to "Holidays and National Heroes." Children are taught to enter into the spirit of the day celebrated, and to observe with respect the historical background that has made that day possible. The following list of days are some observed by History classes:

- January 17—Thrift Day — Franklin's Birthday.
- January 24—Discovery of Gold in California.
- January 29—McKinley's Birthday.
- February 11—Electricity Day—Edison's Birthday.
- February 12—Lincoln's Birthday.
- February 22—Washington's Birthday.
- March 7—Bird and Arbor Day—Burbank's Birthday.
- April 6—U. S. declared war against Germany.
- April 12—First Shot of the Civil War.
- April 19—Battle of Lexington and Concord.
- May 28—Fire Prevention Day.
- May 30—Memorial Day.
- June 14—Flag Day.

- June 17—Bunker Hill Day.
- July 4—Independence Day.
- September 6—Lafayette Day.
- September 9—Admission Day.
- September 18—"Star Spangled Banner" written.
- September 17—Constitution Adopted.
- September 17—Pacific Ocean Discovered.
- October 12—Columbus Day.
- October 27—Americanization Day (Roosevelt's Birthday).
- November 11—Armistice Day.
- November 19—Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.
- November—Thanksgiving Day.
- December 25—Landing of Pilgrims.
- December 25—Christmas Day.

History is taught in the primary grades by stories and conversations, thus bringing out through the child's own experience that which will enable him to grasp ideas of our people even though they are far away in time and place.

Impressions of primitive life are given by studying the Indian home, Indian children, Indian customs and Indian warriors. Then follows stories from the pioneer history of our country, and as a supplementary work to the study of United States History, attention is given to European History, for the root of American civilization is in Europe. The Crusades—all give wonderful lessons in chivalry, courage and loyalty.

The older boys and girls of the Grammar grades study the "History of the American People" from the discovery of America to the present time.

Special emphasis is placed on the development of the nation, causes of great events, inventions, and the industrial life of the people, while less attention is given to dates and details of wars and battles.

Civics emphasize the necessity for law and order, and aims to inspire pupils with the responsibilities of citizenship. Discussions of political and social questions in the Civics class give the children a better understanding of their duties as citizens, and will enable them, in the coming years, to take an active interest in the government of their own community and in the problem of social service.

The great purpose of the teaching of History is character development in the child, and the underlying value of Civics is to instill within him individual responsibility to the nation.

The Aims of Physical Education

By NORMAL C. HAYHURST

The theoretical and practical aims of physical education are to develop a first class thinking machine within a healthy and vigorous body. Some emphasize man as a thinking machine; others as possessing only a body. But we must attain a harmonious co-ordination of mental and physical activities to be able to be successful in the competitive work of life.

The first consideration is that the body must have a strong and vigorous constitution, as this is essential to a healthy and vigorous mind. The body must have a strong heart, a vigorous circulation of pure blood, a good digestive system, sound lungs, and all the requisites, of a healthy constitution.

In its work the body must be able to capably carry out the orders of the mind. The muscles must be hardened to fatigue and the bones made firm. All the organs and muscles of the body must be trained to work in harmony. This training will develop the ability of the muscles of the body to perform skilled actions. Thus we see that if the body is to be a successful servant of the mind, its necessary attribute must be health, strength, and skill.

The mind controls our actions in the practical affairs of life. In order to attain success in life certain qualities of intellect and character are required. Whenever it is possible the judgment should be calm and deliberate, but in the practical life of today conditions are such that we often find no time for calm and deliberate action. Rather the opposite is demanded that the mind be ever alert and able to give judgment quickly and coolly. We must also be able to act promptly on this judgment. In order to win our competitive struggle for existence we must be self-reliant and independent, and fight without giving in to defeat until the last whistle blows. The more strenuous the conditions, the greater must be the courage and self-reliance needed. Life's battles are much like

The owner of an estate on which there was a lake was annoyed to see a stranger fishing on his grounds. He approached the trespasser and began to abuse him.

"This lake," he said, "is privately owned, and is stocked it myself. You must go away at once."
"Just a minute, sir," said the fisherman calmly. "What did you stock the lake with?"
"Trout," was the answer. "And I won't have—"
"That's all right, sir," said the trespasser unconcernedly. "I'm fishing for pike."

WAR AND THE HICKORY STICK

By JOSEPH GUIDINGER

Editor of the Glendale Press: This being Education Week, may I have sufficient space in your enterprising journal to suggest to your readers for study that most vital of all topics of education today, Child Discipline; for as the child is trained so does the man behave. Inasmuch as the foundation of obedience is laid in the home, it should be clear to all of us that parents are responsible and therefore should seek to know how to develop true obedience in their children; for war is merely the ultimate result of wrong methods of child discipline.

Now then, as to the relevancy of the "hickory stick," the emblem of war in the home. While the Bible is found in the home of every church member, they do not seem to appreciate what the Master teaches regarding the rearing of children, else parental punishment would be experienced by their children. These conscientious people do not understand the psychology of the "hickory stick," else they would clearly perceive that the child which obeys because of fear of parental punishment in fact does not obey the parent but the force wielded by the parent. Do we not all know that when the child has become strong enough to safely defy the parent the authority of the parent is nil? Do we not all know that the State was organized primarily for the purpose of obtaining a force superior to the individual force so that obedience of collective parents (the State) may be compelled,—that the first business of the State is to maintain social order? And do we not all know that is seldom or never obeyed?

Our problem of child discipline is not a question of changing human nature, as we are so glibly informed by theorists who wish to maintain the status quo of our civilization; but we are simply to take human nature as God gave it to us in the babe and be careful not to lead it astray by following false doctrines, whether dogmas of the church or precepts of the State; for, according to the Master, little children are naturally willing to live the truth and it is comparatively easy to lead them onward in the way of love and righteousness,—the way of God-obeying people.

The spirit of war lives in the heart of the parent who is obeyed by virtue of the "hickory stick," though he probably does not realize it, and foolishly imagines that he would not be brutal with his child under any circumstances, not knowing that his punishing is measured by the docility of his child which must be made to obey at any cost, even the humiliation of calling on the State for help. He plants the spirit of war in the heart of his child, and the State finishes the work which he began. That is the genealogy of the nations of the world; hence we must have wars, small and great, until a peaceable civilization, a God-obeying civilization is evolved; for it is very obvious to all of us who can think sanely on the subject that the world was merely the attempt of the German empire to wrest world dominion from the English Empire. And are we not clearly informed by authorities of America and England that the purpose of the Washington Conference was not complete disarmament—that being a futile proposition—but to permanently safeguard the world dominion of English-speaking peoples at minimum cost of armaments? Now really, is it not foolhardy to imagine that the other peoples of the world will peaceably remain under that dominion?

Parents who boast of what they have accomplished by means of "prayer and hickory" condemn themselves out of their own mouths as being ignorant of the Prince of Peace. The real disciple of Christ knows that the "hickory stick" was and is the genesis of all instruments of war and obviously all that is necessary to eventually accomplish absolute disarmament is for parents to learn how to rear obedient children without recourse to it; an exceedingly simple proposition if we have faith in the adequacy and efficacy of the law of love by which God would maintain order in the world if permitted a free hand to do so,—if man would only do the will of God. Would that all those who habitually pray and have high hopes of going to heaven did understand the Master's admonition, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven," for then they would in fact seek to do the will of God at any cost, instead of being obedient to the will of man and thereby losing heaven.

GETS ALL DOLLED UP FOR CHRISTMAS

Buster Brown Shoe Shop Is Decorated for Holiday Period

The Buster Brown Shoe Store, at 122 North Brand Boulevard, is getting all "dolled-up" for their Christmas trade. Carl Elmquist has artistically decorated both the display windows and the interior of the store, using Christmas wreaths, holly, poinsettias, and green and red trimmings. ## Physical Education

By ALBERT T. BLANFORD, Supervisor of Physical Training
Glendale City Schools

Five years ago the State Legislature passed a law making the daily teaching of Physical Training compulsory in the grammar schools of the state. The Glendale schools had anticipated this action of the legislature, for Physical Training had been introduced in our schools several years previous to the passing of this law. This progressive stand has been maintained by introducing the program of Physical Training advocated by the State Board of Education. This program is a play program, seeking to accomplish the threefold aim of physical training by means of games and athletic sports. The three aims sought in the teaching of this subject are: 1. The called the "industrial period." At his time all of the games and finer points of the athletic sports are taught. In addition to the required work, playground teachers are assigned to promote the play at recess, noon, and after school periods. Regular schedules are played in each sport as its season comes around. Honors in the Athletic League are vigorously contended for by the boys and girls. The soccer and volley ball seasons are just coming to a close, and the attention of pupils and teachers is about to concentrate on track and field events. In all the work outlined above the aim of Physical Education, the development of a well-rounded individual is constantly emphasized.

development of the heart and lungs and other important organs, and the building up of vitality and nervous capacity to stand the wear and tear of strenuous modern living. 2. The development of muscular strength and skill and quick mental response. 3. The development and control of the instincts and emotions that lie at the foundation of character.

In the past we have attempted to accomplish these aims by the use of formal exercises which are unnatural movements. Not being natural they have failed to appeal to the child, with the result that, where such exercises have been given the response has been poor. Now we are trying to make use of the more natural, playful tendencies of the child. All of the known games have been gathered together and classified for the use of the physical training teacher. In the first two grades games based on the imitation of adult life are played. Such an incident as a policeman directing the traffic at a busy corner forms the basis for this type of game. One child acts as the policeman, some represent trucks, some automobiles, and then the fun begins. Such old favorites as Drop the Handkerchief, Cat and Rat, Farmer is Coming, are used to round out the program. No exercises at all are given to these grades.

In the third and fourth grades the same activities mentioned are again used, but in a more complex form. Simple exercises, designed to correct defects in posture and classified for the use of the physical training teacher. In the first two grades games based on the imitation of adult life are played. Such an incident as a policeman directing the traffic at a busy corner forms the basis for this type of game. One child acts as the policeman, some represent trucks, some automobiles, and then the fun begins. Such old favorites as Drop the Handkerchief, Cat and Rat, Farmer is Coming, are used to round out the program. No exercises at all are given to these grades.

The games already learned, with the more complicated types, form the basis of the seventh and eighth grade activities. Soccer, touch ball, court ball, basketball, cage ball, hockey, track and field, baseball for the boys, and volley ball, captain ball, nine court basketball, track and field, and baseball for the girls, are the chief games played. The required time spent on Physical Training is twenty minutes per day. Of this time six minutes is spent in so-called "relief periods"

THE LOST THANKS-GIVING DINNER

By MARGARET DAMPF, A-4 Broadway School

It was Thanksgiving Day. Mother Goose lived in a barn. She had seven children. One day Mother Goose was taking them down to the river for a swim. All at once they all began talking. "My goodness me! Please don't all talk at once. I cannot hear myself think when you young ones talk so much. Stay right where I am. Don't any of you run away."

Miss Saucy Pert Gosling said to herself. "I am going to run away. I want to see the world. I don't want to go swimming today!" So off she went. After a while she came to a pile of rocks. "I think I will play follow the leader all by myself, and I will go around these rocks." As she was just starting to, Reddy Fox came out and frightened the duckling so much that she could not run.

Sandy, the big collie, came just in time to save her. He said, "What on earth brought you here? Where is your mother and your brothers and sisters?" I ran away, but I didn't mean to. Oh! please take me home. I won't do it again," said the duckling. Reddy Fox ran away and lost his Thanksgiving dinner. Sandy was a good dog, so he took the duckling home. Her mother said, "You will have to go to bed without any supper for being so naughty. Thank you, Sandy, for bringing her home. I think she will be good after this."

EFFORTS CONVICT MEXICAN KILLERS

MEXICO CITY, Mex., Dec. 9.—Efforts to bring to punishment those who assassinated President Francisco I. Madero and Vice President Jose Maria Pino Suarez, in 1913, and President Venustiano Carranza, in 1920, are being continued in a rather desultory way. It is not believed that any of the men accused will suffer execution even though convicted. The prevailing opinion is that prosecution will stop when clamor for vengeance ends.

At present there is a resolute group which is determined to press the proceedings against the accused men. Some suspected men have fled from Mexico. Some have committed suicide, or have been shot when trying to escape after having been arrested.

Handshaking friends are naturally of a grasping nature.

or more when the modern governments and institutions of Europe were being formed, and France and England, Germany and Russia were being moulded into the nations which today we admire or condemn. In our American History we trace man in his westward expansion movement as it landed him on the Atlantic coast of the newly discovered continents and gradually pushed him further and further west until finally the Philippines the West has touched the East and mingled with it. The struggle of our forefathers are studied as they laid the bases of democratic government, free religion, and public education.

In Civics, Economics, and Sociology the place of the individual as a part of our local and national life with the responsibility of understanding this life—of strengthening its strong points and reforming its weak ones—is made a part of the great story of life in which we as Americans have made for ourselves so great a place and whose influence will continue to grow stronger, if we have the broad vision which realizes that the foundations of a lasting nation must be honor and justice and righteousness, and a breadth of sympathy, which will extend beyond its own bounds to share with weaker nations the blessings which we have inherited from the past.

EVENING

By NAIDA TAYLOR, 6th Grade Columbus School

In evening when the sun is set And all the sky is dark and jet, And the birds go back to their homes in the trees, Then over them sweeps a gentle breeze. The stars come out to look at the moon, And baby cuddles down in her crib so soon. She looks at them with her dark blue eyes That nearly match the summer skies.

learn the use of fire, of pottery, and of weapons; where, gradually giving up his wandering life as he learned to domesticate grains and animals, he settled in communities and began to lay the simplest foundations for the complex political life to which we are accustomed today.

Ancient History opens with man in his primitive surroundings and slowly unfolds the story of his development in art and commerce and political life until we see in the civilization of Greece and Rome some of those democratic and artistic tendencies which we claim as our heritage today.

In Medieval History we continue to trace the story of life as it passed into the shadow of the Dark Ages, but emerged again to force its way up to the light of scientific discovery of artistic expression in poetry and marble and of freedom for the minds of men from superstition.

THE FIRST THANKS-GIVING

The English King would not let his people pray the way they wanted to.

He wanted them to pray as he did. The English did not like this so they decided to go to Holland.

In a few years, when their children grew up, they talked Dutch. So they decided to go to America.

So they got two ships, called the Mayflower and the Speedwell. Then they started off. When they got a little way into the sea the Speedwell got a leak, so they went back. The Mayflower went back, too, and some of the people got on the Mayflower and sailed off. On the way a baby was born, called Oceanus.

They sailed on until they came upon land. It was Plymouth Rock. Then they built their houses, and then men said, "Let us have a Thanksgiving dinner."

Then the men went out hunting and got enough things to last a week or so. Then they invited the Indians to come to their Thanksgiving dinner. This was the first Thanksgiving. Ever since that time we have had a Thanksgiving Day.

After they went home they quacked. That night after supper they went to bed. In the morning they went to the same place and took another swim.

OBSERVATIONS ON EDUCATION

By CLARA MIDCALF

A man is truly educated who can choose between good and evil, vulgar and refined, ugly and beautiful.

Education is that thing which enables a man to maintain himself in that station of life in which he has established himself.

Education is not to enable one to escape work, but to find one's work and to do it in the best possible way.

Upon the teacher is the responsibility of instilling into the child a wholesome respect for work.

The ideal teacher is never "bored" by children—she may become provoked, discouraged, even angered, but never "bored."

No teacher should be in a public school who has a hate for any race, creed or God.

Current Events in the History Courses

By FREDERICK F. BORNCAMP, Glendale Union High School

Strong among the reasons for teaching history in the school is that of developing in the rising generation an interest and an active part in co-operating with our present government. As a contributing cause to many of the present difficulties which are recognized as existing in the state of affairs of today, a lack of intelligent public interest stands prominently. Persons with whom a careful attention to the affairs of business is second nature have considered public problems lightly or only in so far as their pocket books are touched. Others approach these questions without realizing that similar ones have been settled in the past. The way in which they were settled and the effect of the mode of settlement has a strong bearing on present problems. If the school system is to fulfill its purpose it must develop effective citizens. Effective citizenship is developed through history courses when lessons of the past are concretely applied with a reference to present situations. For this reason the study of Current Events is receiving increasing attention and time in our history classes.

The Literary Digest has been found to be an effective medium for presenting to the classes a review of current events. Using this as a text one period a week, Friday is spent in reviewing the happenings of the week. Discussion by the class brings out the essential facts underlying the questions and makes clear how the past is related to the problems of today and of the general welfare of the country. In this connection past history past. Its importance is seen to be gauged by its reference to what is contemporaneous. Present day af-airs are seen in a new light and valid grounds are presented by which fair judgments of present day happenings are made possible. Past experience has shown us that to allow this practical application of the teachings of history to be delayed until after school days are over means that this practical connection between past and present conditions is never made and that history fails to assure its full effectiveness as a vital factor in the every day life of all of us.

NATURE

By NAIDA TAYLOR, 6th Grade Columbus School

Nature is the most wonderful thing. From all the world around Nature gives us skies and hills and the beautiful grassy ground, The valleys and meadows and pretty streams,

All mingle with the brilliant sunbeams.

And then when it begins to grow dark

And you hear the song of the meadow lark,

And the stars look out of their hiding places,

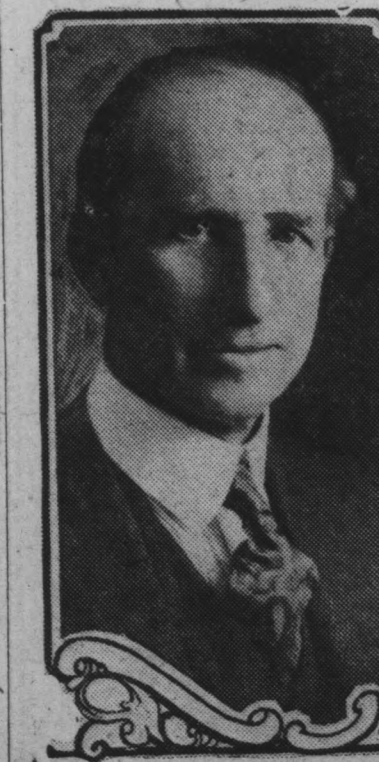

And the birds look up at their pretty faces,

And the flowers all droop down their heads

Then go to sleep in their cozy beds,

And the stars and the moon look down upon them.

They watch them with peace until the dawn of morning.

THE FIRST CHANCE COUNTS

By CLARENCE AVEL, A-4 Central Avenue School

I am going to tell you how we can be safe.

If you see boys hanging to trucks, tell them not to do it for some day they will get hurt. If you men want to be safe, please look where you are going. And please learn the traffic signals.

Don't speed on busy traffic streets. If you do, you will likely have an accident. Don't drink whisky when driving a car. Men, don't be foolish when you see a poor old man holding a sign "stop," because he is trying to save your life. There is a train coming and don't go across, because the train may be coming fast and may hit you.

Children, please watch out for danger when on your wheels at vegetable stands. Don't throw rotten bananas on the road. Boys, don't play on the streets.

Memphis.—The traffic and transportation division of the Memphis chamber of commerce is very much opposed to the transfer of the Federal barge line operated on the Mississippi and Warrior rivers, to private interests, and the chamber on the recommendation of this division has protested against such transfer. The Federal barge is handling a large volume of traffic from the upper reaches of the Mississippi to the Gulf and from the navigable end of the Warrior river to Mobile. The service is furnished at a reduction of 20 per cent under rail transportation cost and the business is developing at a very satisfactory rate. Shippers throughout the valley therefore are very much opposed to any interference whatever with Federal barge lines.

The government is not only furnishing transportation service, but it is also assisting in the development of inadequate terminal facilities at Memphis, Cairo and other river points, to the end that service may be broadened and rendered more beneficial to shippers and patrons.

"Off the Hook"

When your telephone is accidentally left "off the hook," the operator first answers as she would if you were placing a call. After repeated efforts, receiving no response, she reports your line as "out of order." It is then disconnected from the regular switchboard and placed on a special board where it awaits the attention of the repairing forces.

All this takes time. It involves tests, reports and generally a trip to the location of the trouble.

In the meantime, what happens?

Others have been unable to reach you by telephone.

Even if the mistake has been discovered and your telephone placed on the hook, service may not be restored until the "troubleman's" final O. K.

On a party line all other telephones on the line are deprived of both incoming and outgoing service for the same period of investigation and repair.

"Off the hook" is a most common cause of interruption to telephone service. By the exercise of care in this connection you will protect your service and avoid inconvenience to yourself and others.

CUT FAT FROM LIVE PORKER IN BERLIN

Get Veterans to Get "Rasher" for Breakfast Late Fad

BERLIN, Dec. 8.—The old pantomime jest about keeping a pig and having fresh home-grown rashers of bacon every morning is coming true by stages.

Slicing up a living pig for breakfast every morning is a domestic revolution that can only be arrived at by surgical operations.

Prussians have reached the first stage successfully, namely, that of obtaining fresh lard from a live pig.

The second stage—that of sending the cook out into the back garden with a carving knife and a dose of anesthetic and an instruction to bring back half a dozen nice lean rashers—will depend on whether the pig will stand it.

This new solution of a food problem comes from a Prussian farmer at Schielchegreben, who has huddled clean over the ancient formula: "First kill your pig." He is the first genius to carve lumps of fat off without sacrificing the animals. It is all done by incisions—not by kindness.

This is how he does it: A veterinary surgeon is called in, and he arrives with the knives and bandages ready for the operation. The four-footed patient has previously been well fattened up. A plan, so to speak, of the pig's body is drawn up and a local anesthetic—an injection of novocain—is applied to the parts about to be sliced up. This injection is said to make the flesh of the beast insensitive to the knife. An incision is made on the back and on the abdomen, a layer of fat is cut out and the skin then sewn up. Each pig can be operated upon about three times a year.

The Prussian farmer does not tell us the number of times the poor pig survives the operating knife, nor has he estimated the number of tons of fat it is capable of yielding before it has to be "stuck." It seems the shortage of well-fed pig during the war gave him the idea of starting a "fat farm." Now he takes his fat to market and leaves his isspigs behind.

Augusta.—The state board of charities and corrections, in its capacity of children's guardian has had in its custody or under its supervision and being supported at the expense of the state during the past year, 1,390 dependent, orphaned and neglected children. During the last year 96 children were discharged from custody by the following disposition: Returned to relatives or friends, 42; suitable home found, one; adopted, 21; committed to institutions, 11; of age, 11; deceased, 10.

Portland.—Traveling with tremendous speed directly toward the earth at 5:45 o'clock a meteor burst seemingly only some 200 feet from the ground and for some time illuminated the entire earth with its light. Lieut. Courtney D. Young, officer of the day at Fort Williams was one of those who witnessed the falling of the body and he gives a clear record of it. He states that the object as nearly as he could estimate it, seemed at a distance he saw it to be at least a foot in diameter. As it traveled through space it cast a very brilliant light and seemed to fall just off the "Two Lights." It had a tail similar to that usually following a comet.

Little Rock.—According to information received here, Robert Hicks, a negro about 25, was lynched beside the public highway four miles southeast of Lake Village because of a note he wrote to a young white woman. According to reports of the affair the negro went to the young girl's home Wednesday and asked her if she had received the note. A band of men waiting, seized the negro, took him about four miles from town and riddled his body with bullets.

My Most Exciting Experience

By SYBIL TOWNSON, B-3 Grade, Carritos School
The actual experiences of a little English girl

My most exciting and terrible experience occurred at Scarborough, a fishing town on the north eastern coast of England.

Principal, Acacia School

The year was 1916, the third year of the war. My sister and I were at school in a convent.

It was seven o'clock in the morning. The first rising song had just sounded, and as the second, one should have rung instead, we were greeted by the boom of a gun. We were not surprised in any way. Scarborough having been a garrison town since the outbreak of the war, gun practice was carried on daily. We were, however, surprised when the nuns came into the dormitory and told us to dress quickly in our warmest clothing and then go downstairs.

When at last we were ready, we found most of the other children lined up with the nuns. We hurried down an old stone staircase, used in cases of emergency, which led to a subterranean passage, at the end of which was a large cave. Many people were already gathered there and we all crowded in.

Some of the people were too late to be able to get into the cave and we could tell by the look on their faces that they must be witnessing awful scenes.

After two agonizing hours the police came and told us the "all clear" had sounded, which was the signal that the immediate danger was over.

We therefore made our way outside when a dreadful sight met our eyes. Hardly a house remained standing along the promenade. Shops and houses alike had all been destroyed by the Germans.

The enemy had attacked and shelled the town without warning from their submarines, which had probably lain hidden in the bay for the past few days.

An ancient castle, which stood on the foremost point of the cliff, made a good target and was persistently shelled at until only the flagstaff remained. This, too, was at last shattered, but the chief constable instantly climbed the broken staff and replaced the flag on its highest point, amidst a fresh volley from the Germans, and cheers from our own onlookers. Fortunately neither the man nor the flag was touched.

Altogether the bombardment cost us over four hundred lives, many of whom were civilians, chiefly women and children. The railways were wrecked and all lines of communication cut off.

The convent had escaped injury with the exception of the windows, which were all broken.

Why a Teacher Should Be Thankful

By MICHIGAN TEACHERS' FEDERATION

She should be thankful that she must know more, do more, be more, and endure more than any other bread winner. She should know everything in the heaven above, the earth beneath, and the waters under the earth. She receives no special credit for knowing these things, but woe be unto her if she knows them not.

She should be thankful that she is allowed to teach the three R's as in ye olden time, but mark the additions.

Physiology must be taught with all the skill of a physician, but without his opportunities for hiding his mistakes. Civics must be taught with all the learning of a lawyer, but without his library; virtue and godliness with all the zeal of a minister, but without his Bible or sectarian bias. She must teach music, drawing, penmanship and physical culture with all the ability of a specialist.

She must be familiar with the theories of Rousseau, Froebel, Pestalozzi and Montessori. She should be thankful that she is allowed to govern wild and incorrigible children, even when the parents fail.

She must be wise as Solomon, patient as Job, strong and enduring as Caesar. She must have humility, confidence, infinite tact, perfect health, common sense in abundance, a modicum of wit, and a world of wisdom.

Within the last few years there has been a concerted effort on the part of practical teachers of history to bring people to a realization of the fact that it is desirable for the student to see the various steps in the development of the human race. Is it not as important that the student know or the development of the human race as of the development of plant life?

The aim in history teaching is to give the student a sympathetic knowledge of his environment; to acquaint him with his political environment; to give him an appreciation of the nature of society in which he is living, a sense of his duties and responsibilities as a citizen, the ability to deal with the political and governmental questions of his world, and to give him a broad and tolerant spirit which is gained by the study of past times and conditions. It is not our aim to make history an accumulation of facts for facts alone, but these are to be used to gain the habit of correct thinking. The student who is historically trained to consider political questions in school has some comprehension of the political and social problems confronting him in daily life.

In order to understand the institutions surrounding him, the student must study the development of ancient institutions. He must see the works of men, the rise and fall of nations with the course of their downfall, that society is moving and in order to have it move in the right direction he must profit by the mistakes of individuals and nations. By studying the relation between cause and effect a sense of judgment is developed. The student soon realizes that one event grows out of another.

He is taught to handle books, to gather information, to arrange and systematize facts, and to be able to use this material for his own pleasure and the pleasure of others.

With these aims the student of history learns facts, not for facts alone, but concerning his relation to man and his institutions. He learns to take his place in the social and political life of his family, his school, his state, his nation, and his world. Is it not worth while?

A lot of valuable time is wasted by trying to make people over into what you think they should be, instead of taking them just as they are.

Verdugo Woodlands Ready For Home of Your Dreams

By JOHN H. GERRIE

ON the first page of this newspaper today I have endeavored to convey an impression of the historical allurements of beautiful Verdugo Woodlands. So entrancing is the charm of the old adobe ranch house erected in 1806 with its enclustering rose vine planted in 1815, that one almost overlooks the fact that right in the front yard of the Verdugo place is the magnificent old oak tree, estimated to be more than 500 years in age, beneath which General Fremont signed the memorable treaty of peace with the Mexicans.

And as rich as is the Selvas de Verdugo in historical associations, it is even richer in rugged beauty, in soil, in climate and in residential potentialities. Not long ago a home-seeker of discrimination from an eastern city who had made a thorough survey of choice California residential parks, standing upon one of the many knolls that distinguish Verdugo Woodlands, made this remark:

"This is the place I have pictured in my dreams for the location of the home I have built in my dreams." He thereupon bought the site for the home of his dreams which he plans to build upon his return from the east in the spring.

Who has not built dream homes in dream parks? And right here in the highlands of Glendale, these dreams may come true. Yet I venture to assert that scores of residents of Glendale have never penetrated Selvas de Verdugo, have never stood before the adobe ranch house nor smelled of the roses that grow on the vine that little Miss Verdugo planted with her own hands 106 years ago. And, if they haven't done that, of course they haven't sat beneath the historical Fremont oak.

Let us see, how many hundreds of miles is Verdugo Woodlands from the corner of Brand boulevard and Broadway? Roughly I would say less than three miles—no, not three hundred, only three—with a smooth boulevard all the way. Ten minutes' drive will take you easily from Glendale city hall to the adobe ranch house.

The trouble with Glendale is that their own city is so much of a beauty spot they are not driving around looking for something finer. Nor is there anything finer, of its kind, but Selvas de Verdugo is of a different kind and, quite important, it is a part of the city of Glendale.

It reproduces in miniature but with more ruggedness and closer association with the surrounding mountains, what Glendale is on a broader scale. It is tumbled in between the Verdugo hills and San Rafael mountains with the Sierra Madre looming up as a majestic background. Glendale is the center of a tremendous cyclorama of mountains. Verdugo Woodlands is in the midst of a smaller amphitheater of mountains.

The peculiar formation of that amphitheater renders the Woodlands cooler in summer and milder in winter than either Glendale or Los Angeles. The canyon to the south lets in just enough of the day breezes from the sea, and the canyon to the north just enough of the cool night air from the Sierra Madre, while east winds are warded off by the San Rafael.

Added to its advantages of scenic beauty, climatic conditions and accessibility, Verdugo Woodlands possesses an abundant supply of pure mountain water and there is now being installed an excellent sewer system. The F. P. Newport company, owners and developers of the tract, have expended to date approximately $560,000 in improvements, including grading, road-building, sidewalks, sewers, water plant, electricity and telephones.

The Woodlands district is notably rich in trees and shrubbery. It abounds in live oaks, alders, willows and sycamores and there are also in evidence the beautiful yellow acacia, avocado, Chinese evergreen, crepe myrtle and citrus and deciduous fruits.

The irregular topography of the land lends itself to individual styles in architecture and it is the aim of the projectors that no two houses in the Woodlands shall be alike.

Also because of the great variety in location there is a happy blending of moderate priced bungalows with costly mansions. Building restrictions range from $3000 to $6000 but there are several homes upon which upwards of $25,000 have been expended and one larger estate has cost its owner approximately $125,000. Lots range in size from 40 by 125 to 100 by 185, while prices on the subdivision now offering run from $900 to $3750. Home sites aggregating $800,000 in value have been sold to date.

It is a fact worth recording that a very large proportion of Verdugo homesites already disposed of have been taken by visitors from the east, many of whom have gone back to close up their affairs in their old home towns preparatory to building in the Woodlands. Among states represented by recent purchasers are New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Maryland, Georgia, Virginia, Kentucky, Illinois, Michigan, Missouri, Minnesota, Texas, Kansas, Colorado, Iowa and Washington. Among foreign countries represented are England, Australia, Cape Colony and Canada.

Also it is worthy of note that quite a number of recent purchasers are present or former residents of Hollywood and other well known residential districts in the neighborhood of Los Angeles. These have recognized that the most beautiful foothill properties are offered in Selvas de Verdugo at a fraction now asked for similar properties in older developed but less attractive districts elsewhere.

Simple Simon

By JOHN BRECK.

If you should happen to encounter a man waving a substantial-looking pole in the middle of a dry and stony flat you'd know at once he was Simple Simon, wouldn't you? Even if it were only "dry eels" he was fishing for. I admiringly watched him make a capture, slip this game into a bag where another was already wriggling, and tactfully questioned him until he came across with the true story of the whale. Here, minus some embroidery, you have it.

"Yes, I got a snake concession over to the circus. How come? Well, it just happened. I was out of a job. A feller I knows tells me he'd bought him a bargain, a genuine boa constrictor, thirty feet long. He's got a loan of what used to be a light-housekeeping apartment over a dog-and-bird store, and he wants to know will I help him give the thing a bath in it. He says the bird-store man will help and it's used to handling. 'Course thirty feet is some snake, but you know how them folks will talk—I figures out fifteen would come closer to the facts, so I says I'll accommodate him.

"Up I comes. There, in front of the odds and ends of furniture piled up in the middle of the floor, is the trunk with the snake in. One of the boys starts the water running while we undoes the lock.

"Blam! Back goes the cover and out she comes. Maybe she's a tame snake but that baggage-smasher must have riled her up some. We don't waste no time calming her down, neither. It's the hall for us with the door slammed between us and her, thanking our stars it opens her way so she can't smash the lock and come along after us. We listens to her slam-bangin' round. Every time the furniture gives a crash her owner lets out a yowl. There's the last of my seventy-five dollars! But she keeps a-goin'.

"Then we hears another noise. Water's still running and that tub is over-flowed—dripping down on the parots two floors below. Before we finds the cut-off in the basement everything is afloat and the ceiling's startin' to come down. Then there's an extra splash and he whoops. 'It's all right, boys! She's in there! She's a-bathin'!

"Did that calm her nerves?" "Naw. Makes her wilder n' ever. So I gets the notion if we lets in a few rabbits it may help some. Say but didn't she just have a good time hunting them! There was one got under a dresser and she never did get him. But we keeps on lettin' in more and more. 'Look about next noon when the rabbit census has gone down quite some and things is real quiet we takes a peek. There she's lyin', peaceful as a baby that's got its bottle tucked in under its band. I'll say she was easy to handle, 'ceptin' she weighed about a ton."

I wanted to know how long she really was. "See for yourself," he said dryly. "Only costs a dime for admission." Is Simon so very simple, after all?

Truths in Epigram

The God who gave us life gave us liberty at the same time.—Thomas Jefferson (1743-1826).

The sublime and the ridiculous are often so nearly related that it is difficult to class them separately. One step above the sublime makes the ridiculous, and one step above the ridiculous makes the sublime again.—Thomas Paine (1737-1809).

LEADER OF THE WORLD

"In the light of events of the last few weeks, I can no longer couple Great Britain and the United States as equals. I must confess the United States has taken the leadership of the world."

These are the words of Arthur J. Balfour. There is not a living Englishman from whose lips they might have come with greater significance. Balfour is typical of English pride. He has all the patriotism of his class. He is marked by hauteur that is a habit of that class, implying a belief in individual and national superiority. Such a tribute never could have been won from him as a courtesy. It embodied his beliefs. It was definite recognition of human circumstances as this generation has seen them wrought into new proportions and new relationships.

To be accorded first place among the nations of the earth is a proud distinction. It is a pride hedged about with responsibilities of incalculable moment. Leadership, wisely exercised, may show the way to peace throughout the world, and with the reign of peace, prosperity would follow as a matter of course. With the world no longer engaged in war, nor harrassed by thought of war, nor burdened by the cost of preparation for war, its energies could be so turned to production and to culture and education, that the moral and mental complexion of the universe would be changed.

When one President sought to establish a League of Nations, it was a tacit recognition of the duty of leadership. When a later President called a conference to deal with the subject of disarmament, it repeated the recognition. The United States had not proclaimed itself leader, but there was an awareness that such was the position it had attained. The announcement had to come from other lands; now it has come.

Leadership is more than the mere fact of being rich, strong and resourceful. A nation might have these attributes, and still lack the quality of leadership; might seek to stand aloof, and have none to lead; a mere selfish aggregation of humanity.

The signs are that the United States will not waste the opportunity that, under providence, has honored its career. It is strong enough to lead, and it has the will to lead. It can afford to be just, to be generous.

Just now it considers an association of powers for purposes all benign. There are discordant voices raised to declare that it should drop all such effort, and look out for itself, letting the others drift; remain prepared to subdue them by force. Compliance with this demand would not be leadership, but shirking; the loss of opportunity, and in the end, failure.

INDUSTRIAL COURTS

Industrial courts, tribunals dealing with questions arising between employer and employee, are recommended in the presidential message. Such courts have operated within a limited area, with at least reasonable success. Kansas has one, the authority of which was defied by a local strike leader. He is in jail for contempt. The men belonging to the organization of which he was executive head threaten to refrain from work until he has been released. So the ultimate working of the court is not demonstrated fully yet.

The justice of the public's demand that it shall not be the victim when capital and labor clash, is apparent. In a strike like that of the miners in West Virginia, for example, the public is left wholly out of consideration. It may freeze for all the strikers care, or for all the operators care. It is needless for either side to seek to place all the blame on the other. Miners do make unreasonable demands, possibly, but operators do provide unwholesome working conditions and inadequate pay.

Opposition to industrial courts doubtless will come from labor more openly than from capital. It is not strange that this should be so. In theory the rich and poor stand before the courts on an equal plane. In practice this is not assured. The advantage is often upon the side of the rich. This fact is so palpable that denial of it would be useless.

However, a court instituted to protect the public primarily against strikes, but also from the evils incidental to strikes, and to guard it against privation and violence, easily might come to the task without fear and without prejudice. At least the plan is worthy of trial.

PLAYING BOTH ENDS

At this writing there is a strike of meat workers in Chicago, and at other points at which packing is conducted on a large scale. The strike is due to a reduction in wages. The business is being carried on, however, the packers asserting that they are not being much troubled. The men at work, of course, receive the scale which the men not at work reject.

Along with news concerning the strike comes the information that the price of meats has advanced sharply. Why? Prices had been high on the excuse that labor costs were high. Down come the labor costs and up goes the price of meats. An explanation would be read with interest.

There is habitually a scant relationship between the prices paid by packers to stockgrowers, and the prices charged for the meat produced. Sometimes when the consumer has deemed his butcher bill no less than extortionate, the market did not justify the stockgrower in moving his fat cattle. If he shipped, he lost money.

At intervals there have been announcements of a decided lowering in the prices charged to retail butchers. If any citizen noticed any reflection of this change in his household bills, the circumstance is not of record.

It hardly is probable that an advance in the price of meats in Chicago will result in an advance in steaks, chops and roasts. These advanced long ago to the point that seemed the possible limit, and they never have receded enough to afford opportunity for advancing again.

FORD'S ASTONISHING PLAN

The proposition of Henry Ford that the government issue currency based on the potential earning power of the Tennessee river, probably is the most astounding idea launched by that capable maker of vehicles.

When he sent a boatload of enthusiasts to Europe to end the great war, the act, eccentric enough to be sure, yet had behind it some explanation in fact. As a proponent of peace, he had permitted his enthusiasm to run wild. In his anxiety to accomplish the impossible, he chose a ridiculous method to convince himself of the impossibility.

Starting the printing presses in order to supply the country with money is not a new plan. It has been suggested even in this country. One of the old greenback party, supplied with plenty of paper and a printing press, would have been glad to turn out money by the bale. It would have been worthless as money of course. Hence the fading away of the greenback party.

The scheme is now in vogue in Russia and Germany. In those lands there is no lack of currency, but rather a super-abundance of it. It has no value worth mentioning. Anybody may get it by the armful, but having been obtained, it is worthless.

If money is to be based on the placid flow of the Tennessee, there are thousands of other streams at least equally entitled to the honor. Some of the brawling and turbulent flows that are being harnessed in California, ought in this respect, to be able to efface the Tennessee from the monetary map. Every industry founded on the soil, on oil, on mineral; every railway, every firmly established factory, would seem to possess equal rights. Why should not currency be issued upon the sure foundation of the fat pig that the butcher intends to turn into sausage and lard to the vast enhancement of its value?

Mr. Ford is a great man. His useful activities have beaten a deep path; and he should stick to the path.

Two policemen in Los Angeles were killed this week by bandits. The city council over there is unwilling to supply the city with enough police. It is to be hoped it does not carry this policy to a point that will prevent replacements as the untrammelled bandits reduce the number of police now available.

TRAVEL AND PATRIOTISM

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Travel is as essential to Patriotism as sugar is to coffee.

For Travel means civilization. In fact, civilization is nothing much more than transportation. What civilizes people is getting a wider point of view and seeing themselves as others see them.

Any population that never leaves home and is hostile to visitors from the outside slumps into barbarism.

That is to say, it develops a monumental egotism and becomes cruel and monstrous cranky.

Every human being should get away once in a while out into the world and knock about a bit.

A rolling stone gathers no moss, but at least it knocks off its sharp corners and gets smoothed up.

So the real civilizers of the world, materially speaking, are the railroads, the steamships, the newspapers, the telegraph, the cable, and the airplane.

Nations that are intelligent should do all they can to promote travel.

But, as a matter of fact, all nations are doing all they can to discourage it.

There is the passport nuisance. When I went to the French authorities to get my passport vised I asked the official why in the world France wanted any passports at all and why they did not want everybody to come into their country, because the visitors brought money with them and spent it rather freely and thus constituted a crop that ought to be cultivated.

"But," he replied, "there are the boches. We have to guard against them."

I suggested that the best thing that could happen both to the boches and the Frenchmen would be that they freely travel throughout each other's country and get acquainted a little and stop the devilish business of hating each other and begin to try to understand each other a little bit. But he did not see the point.

In the matter of passports, tariffs, and other artificial obstacles to the free movement of men and commodities between the nations, America is the chief of sinners.

It costs an American more to travel in the other countries than it costs any other nation, simply because of the outrageous price which America puts upon its passports.

The whole passport business, now that the war is over, is simply an unmitigated, unrelieved, and untempered nuisance. It ought to be entirely abolished and people should be encouraged to travel instead of being discouraged from travelling.

If we could take 50,000 farmers, storekeepers and mechanics from the Mississippi valley and send them for a trip to Europe or Asia every year, it would do more toward making the mind of America sound and sane than any other program.

Somebody suggested that America might take all her idle ships which she does not know what to do with, charter them and send abroad such of her citizens as want to go at cost price. What the world needs is to get acquainted. (Copyrighted by Dr. Frank Crane)

THE LISTENING POST

There is a popular song that says little enough to be sure, as popular songs usually do. A popular song is the toy balloon of the world of music. Its purpose is to tickle the fancy.

It serves its purpose as a fancy tickler. Just as the toy balloon does. The small boy watches it. It is something thin stretched about nothing at all.

Which is largely what a popular song is—

And after a temporary service as a fancy tickler the wind begins to ooze out. The balloon begins to collapse.

And after while there is a squeak and a squawk and a crack. And the balloon bursts.

Which is what any temporary and fickle favor is.

A balloon such as little folks hug to the fancy. To flatten and collapse almost as quickly as it was blown up.

But the toy balloon serves its purpose. As the popular song does. For the fancy of people needs tickling. It would not do for us to be altogether serious all the time.

For the world would be drab and cold.

But the popular song of which we speak says: "I don't know where I'm going but I'm on my way."

And that is a good subject for this Listening Post. For there are many people in the same situation. They are moving along without any special sense of direction.

Like a chip on the water. It is tossed here and there and cast up on the shore and washed down again.

And its destiny is altogether a matter of chance. For it has no capacity for direction.

It does not know where it is going but it is on its way. And who wants to be a chip on the current? Or a rudderless ship at sea?

Or a leaf on the wind? For the destinies of them all are matters wholly of chance.

Columbus got somewhere because he was going somewhere. And he was on his way. It was a trackless ocean as far as tried pathways were concerned.

But he knew his direction. And he kept it.

The pathfinders of all countries have gotten somewhere. But they did not travel aimlessly. Without direction.

They held a main direction and they kept on their way.

And you are moving. Life is in motion. Only the inanimate things are immobile.

And since you cannot escape motion if you wish, it is well to know what direction you are taking. And why.

It is important that you take account of direction. And to indulge in a little think-time every day. In order to take your observations and calculate your place on the sea.

So many persons are too busy to think. They will tell you so. And it is a bad thing to be too busy to think.

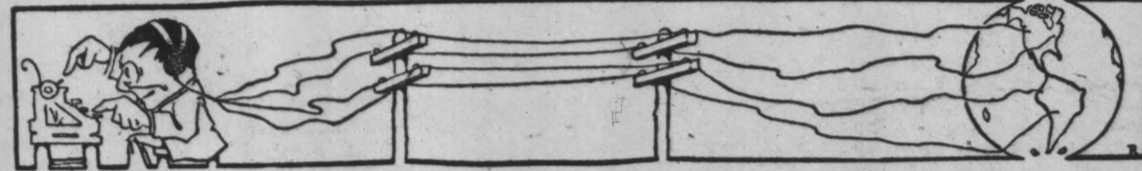

Because some day there may be a smash and you will have a long time to do a lot of unpleasant thinking.

So you are going somewhere. But where? What is your general direction? And you holding to it?

Do you stop once in a while to take observations?

A lot of persons who don't know where they are going but are on the way, find the end of their journey in the morgue. In the hospital. In the poorhouse. Or in jail.

SONGS OF THE POETS

"Tears, Idle Tears"—By Alfred Tennyson (1809-1892)

Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean, Tears from the depth of some divine despair Rise in the heart and gather to the eyes, In looking on the happy Autumn-fields, And thinking of the days that are no more.

Fresh as the first beam glittering on a sail, That brings our friends up from the underworld, Sad as the last which reddens over one That sinks with all we love below the verge; So sad, so fresh, the days that are no more.

Ah, sad and strange as in dark summer dawns The earliest pipe of half-awakened birds To dying ears, when unto dying eyes The casement slowly grows a glimmering square; So sad, so strange, the days that are no more.

Dear as remembered kisses after death, And sweet as those by hopeless fancy feigned On lips that are for others; deep as love, Deep as first love, and wild with all regret; O Death in Life, the days that are no more!

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELLA M. STEWART

Sieves prove their use value—in the kitchen. They separate the good from the bad, and retain the latter. But there are too many sieve-like brains today.

A brain should be an independent possession. It was never intended to be a medium through which any one could toss propaganda and prejudice, its meshes catching and retaining the heaviest particles. A brain should be an independent thinking organ. Decision without discernment and honest personal judgment is both dangerous and futile. Can't we see that it is?

There must always be leaders of thought—pioneers that blaze the trail. But to blindly accept what they bring is more than foolish. Knowledge is not limited to one, or two. Some measure of its store is for every one of us. Why allow others to sway us so completely? Why have such blind confidence that they are always right?

Quiet deliberation may bring about trouble. But it very seldom does. Quick acquiescence and action very often bring bitter regret. A wrong idea, a mistaken opinion, and a whole plant organization or country may be lashed into ferment—if the sieve-like brain is prevalent.

Worse than the sieve-like brain is the unused one that never thinks for itself. Going on without a thought beyond daily existence loses one so much of life's beauty and opportunity.

What kind of a brain is ours? A sieve? Or of more substantial makeup?

eloquently and at length—it would be a serious oversight not to select for special notice and to print in full a little speech by the delegate of a little nation putting the fundamental fact into a few words. When his turn came, the lone delegate from Portugal arose and said:

"I can say no more than to express the deep sympathy that the nation I represent has in the laudable objects that have brought this conference together. There is but one foe to the full achievement of these objects—national egotism. Should national egotism tend to lead us astray, let us remember that great as is the power of the governments of the world that we represent, far greater still is that of the submerged millions whose every feeling was outraged by the intolerable anguish suffered during the great war, and who will call us strictly to account, should we fail, through our deliberations, to lead them at least one step nearer to a state of enduring peace."

That was all he said, but it was a peculiarly brilliant gem amidst the display of jewels.

Comment on the News

By HENRY JAMES

P. K. C. T'yu, secretary-general of the Chinese arms delegation, has resigned. His explanation was that he was tired of the negative results of the conference in relation to his country.

It is to be hoped that the gentleman has misjudged the spirit and the ultimate effect of the gathering. At the same time there is not the slightest trouble in getting his point of view, and thus understanding the reason for his peevishness.

Some of the claims of Japan to rights in China are nothing less than preposterous. Japan has no moral right to Shantung peninsula than it has Los Angeles county, California. The original claim was to the province of Shantung, much less in area than the peninsula, but it has been extended to embrace the total.

Other powers hold parts of China through the tolerance of the Chinese, and their own initial effort. That is to say, what they wanted, they took, and the Pacific Chinese failed to make a fuss about it. As they emerge from their poppy dreams, and grow away from the foggy theories of Confucius, they are getting fussier.

It must be humiliating for a cultivated Chinese to observe powers, all of them friendly, calmly discussing the partition of China's resources exactly as though the Chinese were the last persons in the world expected to display any interest in the matter.

The powers would be wise to wake up. China is setting the example. When it shall have awakened fully, it would be comforting to observe it presenting to the world an aspect of mildness.

The navy has a new dirigible that is inflated with a non-inflammable, non-explosive gas. This gas is a product of a substance found only in the United States.

Perhaps this country has been a little slow as to providing air defenses, but it seems to have certain advantages over rivals notwithstanding.

A dirigible obstinately declining either to burst or to burn, would be a stubborn thing in a contest.

When a Los Angeles man invaded a home in which his presence was considered undesirable, the woman of the house met him with a revolver in each hand. Later the coroner counted eleven wounds.

The woman asserts that the man she shot already, according to her belief, had murdered her husband, and held towards herself designs fully as unfriendly.

The whole affair savors of the Black Hand business. If the actual victim was as represented, there is not the slightest doubt that he deserved to be killed. In that case the hope that the woman may not be long detained or otherwise annoyed, will be general.

Berlin is to have three years' delay in making good on reparation payments.

This will at least afford a breathing spell, at the end of which Germany probably will be ready to announce its readiness to accept another period of grace.

The people of this country hoped to have the pleasure of greeting Lloyd George, but it is possible that the plan has been upset.

Apparently the Irish situation needs the full time of the premier.

When Marshal Foch reached Phoenix he was welcomed by a man, who had been a sergeant in the A. E. F. The man was acting governor of Arizona.

This simple fact illustrates that the United States really is a democracy.

Discipline has a distinct value. Often it is good for the individual, and assuredly it is vital to the integrity of any organization.

It is essential that any army have a directing head. It is equally imperative that men combined for any purpose, shall recognize authority.

If Babe Ruth and his co-players, each muleted a fat sum for disobedience of orders, were to think upon this truth, perhaps they would cease to feel sore, and begin to realize that something good for their souls had happened to them.

While the course of true love is known to be over the bumps, it seldom finds a rougher road than that which leads to the courtroom where are read the saccharine effusions that bloomed in the soul before the bumps had been encountered.

Listeners to such stuff are devoid of sympathy. Many of them have been guilty of equal indiscretion, but luck has shielded them from publicity.

Scribble Legend on Walls of Man's Home in Peking, China

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—While Washington is still astir with conference activities there are moments when tired minds find relief in gossip over interesting things in lighter vein.

A story was told recently by one of the Chinese students coming to observe the conference concerning Tsao Yu-lin, the modern Benedict Arnold of China.

Living in the heart of Peking since his retirement from official life, after he had been thrown out of office by force of public opinion at the height of the Paris peace conference, Tsao Yu-lin was not left alone by the schoolboys in Peking. It is said that for some considerable time he awoke each morning to find this legend scribbled on the wall in front of his mansion:

"Tsao, the great traitor of China!" And every other morning Tsao had to tell the soldiers guarding his gate to wipe off this ghastly reminder of his ignoble career. Nothing daunted, the school youngsters kept scribbling on the wall overnight, while the soldiers were stealing a few winks, the same Chinese characters, "Tsao, the great traitor of China!"

Thinking that he had hit upon an excellent scheme to put a stop to the boyish mischief, Tsao ordered the wall in front of the gateway to be painted black instead of white. Then the youngsters, instead of using the Chinese brush and ink to prick the conscience of Tsao, used chalk until this well-known, disgraced Chinese official shook his head in despair and let the patriotic youngsters alone in their pranks.

The Chinese people have a longer memory for their traitors than any other race. One way of perpetuating this memory among the Chinese is to fix the traitorous name on an edible. A certain Chinese doughnut today still bears the name of a notorious Chinese traitor who lived several hundred years ago.

YOUNGEST FRENCH HEROINE HONORED

PARIS, Dec. 9.—One of the youngest heroines of the war has just been honored by France. She is Helene Jacquemin, of Montherme, up near the Belgian border. When the Germans swarmed over the frontier, Helene, who was then ten years old, and her brother acted as liaison officers between her father, to whom the French commander had confided an important mission, and the French army.

The Germans swept through, driving the French on toward the Marne. Helene's father was killed in action. Her brother was arrested and held before a summary German court martial charged with aiding the French forces, although he was not a combatant. Helene was threatened with death by the Germans unless she revealed the modus operandi of her father. The little girl of the Ardennes refused. Here is what the official citation "a l'ordre de l'armee," which has just been published says:

"She refused to utter a word in reply to the questions of the German officers. In spite of the threats of the prosecuting officials she did not furnish a single piece of information which might have put our enemies on the track of her father's collaborators."

CHEAPEN FLATS TO ENLARGE FAMILIES

PARIS, Dec. 9.—The chamber of deputies is considering a bill designed to relieve the severe housing shortage, with the unique provision of "the bigger the family the cheaper the rent."

The bill provides for the construction of 500,000 cheap flats by the government to be completed within ten years. The funds of seven billion francs necessary for the construction would be raised by a loan.

In leasing the flats, preference would be given to working men with large families and the rent would be reduced in proportion to the number of children. According to the tentative plan, a family with three children would pay about half the rent exacted from a family with only one child.

The scheme is intended to encourage large families to offset the constantly decreasing birth-rate in France and the losses during the war.

NEW HOSPITAL FOR EX-SERVICE MEN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon today approved the expenditure of $1,400,000 for construction of a hospital at Palo Alto, Calif. The building is to be erected on a 72-acre plot owned by the government. There is a temporary hospital on the site now, having 55 beds. The new building will have 500 beds and will be so designed that the annexes will care for 500 additional beds. Service buildings, roadways and other improvements are to be made from the authorized expenditure. The hospital will treat mental and nervous cases in the twelfth district.

Instruction is sometimes synonymous with destruction.

POTTERY PRODUCTS ON DISPLAY AT LOCAL CHAMBER

Industry Promises to Become One of Great Activity Here

One of the most recent additions to the display of products now on exhibit at the Glendale chamber of commerce is a display of pottery made at the Claycraft Pottery Company plant, 3101 South San Fernando road. The company plant is located on San Fernando road just over the line in Los Angeles but members of the firm and a greater percentage of the employees make their home in Glendale. Sutherland DeWitt and Frank N. Payne are at the head of the concern and are Glendale boosters. Mr. Payne is a member of the Glendale chamber of commerce and says that the members of the firm live here in Glendale and the funds of the firm are banked in Glendale and Glendale merchants are patronized whenever it is possible.

The product of the pottery company takes the form, as indicated by the exhibit at the chamber of commerce, of decorative flower holders, fern dishes, bowls and hair receivers. The clay used in the manufacture of these articles is a natural product of Death Valley and is brought to the pottery in the form of rocks or "biscuits" that resemble sand stone or chalk. This clay is put through a process of softening in order to make it pliable enough for the moulders to form the dishes and bowls. After the articles have been molded they are put through a process of firing to give them hardness and glaze. Before they are fired the last time they are painted or tinted and any trimming or decoration that is to be used is put on, then they are fired and the color merges with the clay and is practically indestructible.

FINE ROAD SHOW IS TO BE HERE MONDAY

"Chasing Sally" Will Be Presented at T.D.&L. Monday

By the local and surrounding country billing, there is evidence that the advance agents of W. B. Patton have been here and gone after completing their work, and by this time every theater-patron knows "Chasing Sally" will be here for one performance at the T. D. & L. theater on Monday night, December 12. Mr. Patton and his excellent company need no introduction, as he has been coming here annually for many years in various productions and has many friends and admirers. "The Good Samaritan," "The Slow Poke," "The Blockhead," "The Last Rose of Summer," "Lazy Bill," "His Friend, the Widow," are still fresh in the minds of those who appreciate plays of human interest.

His new attraction "Chasing Sally," is constructed entirely of comedy, a raging laughstorm, and in the leading character of Felix Fox, Mr. Patton plays a different type from anything in which he has heretofore appeared, and gives him a first class opportunity to display his ability as a laugh-maker. In this mile-a-minute comedy he is all over the stage at nearly all times, fitting snugly into situations that keep the audience on a constant wave of laughter.

The production is elaborately staged, carrying loads of costly scenic equipment, and the attraction is already definitely fixed in favor. It assuredly is a big hit and deserves to be. The advance sale of seats is now open at the T. D. & L. theater box office. Mail orders and phone reservations will be given careful attention.

URGE SEX EDUCATION.

BELLAIRE, Ohio, Dec. 9.—The Ministerial Union here passed resolutions calling for abolition of extreme styles in girls' dresses, enforcement of the curfew and sex education of children by parents. Plans are being made for religious education in the schools.

Foley's Friendly Fancies

A WORD TO THE BOYS

Be nice to dear Uncle, be thoughtful and kind, And run for the glasses he's trying to find. Go get him the paper and give him your chair, And find him his slippers if they're not right there.

Be kind to dear Uncle, and do him no wrong, He's old and he may not be with us for long, So give him a pleasant surprise now and then—Remember that Christmas is coming again.

Be thoughtful of Auntie, go bring her a book, And find her a seat in her favorite nook, Recover the yarn-ball that slipped from her lap, And don't make a noise when she's having a nap. Pull out her big chair when she sits down at tea, Just see what a dutiful boy you can be, You'll be glad you were, I am sure, some fine day, And remember that Christmas is not far away.

Be kind to the neighbors, be kind and polite, And do them an errand by day or by night, And when your own chores for the day are quite through, Ask them if there isn't some thing you can do. Go to them a kindness, I'm sure they'll be glad, To live near so friendly and useful a lad, And tip your cap promptly and greet them with cheer, Remember that Christmas is coming quite near.

Be thoughtful of Papa and Mamma and all The folks about home and come quick when they call; And say "please" and "thank you" and never be rude, And fill them with gladness and much gratitude, And a little surprise, too, and let them all see How splendid and useful a boy you can be; For blessings come to us, who knows how or when? And Christmas, glad Christmas, is coming again.

BRYAN SEES LIGHT AHEAD IN PARLEY

Believes Quadruple Agreement Will Forestall Any Warfare

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN (Copyright, 1921, by the United Press) If unofficial reports of the work of the committee are true another long step has been taken towards peace. It is stated on American authority, thought to be reliable, that the United States, Great Britain, Japan and France have reached an agreement by the terms of which they will consult each other before going to war in regard to any islands in the Pacific. It is not an alliance and does not bind any nation to aid another, but it is in line with the thirty treaties negotiated by the United States and in line also with one provision of the covenant of the league of nations. Like the plan of the thirty treaties, its chief virtue lies in the securing of time for deliberations.

Wars are usually the result of passion. Some act of another nation is resented and war breaks out while the blood is hot, and when it is difficult to separate questions of honor from questions of fact.

The thirty treaties allow one year for investigation and report, during which neither side will resort to force. In the league of nations the time was reduced to six months for investigation and three months for consideration of the report.

If the four nations interested in the Pacific agree to consult each other over any dispute which may arise about the islands in that ocean, war on these subjects will become a remote possibility. Another victory for the peace conference.

Scarcely less important is the agreement reached by the Far Eastern committee to respect the neutrality of China in any war in which China is not a party.

THE BANDIT HEADS BILL T.D.L. THEATRE

Lovers of Romance Will See Several Good Acts Tonight

One of the most dramatic sketches on any vaudeville stage today is coming to the T. D. & L. theater today and tomorrow as a headliner of the Meiklejohn & Dunn vaudeville road show. "The Bandit," which is presented by Ed Brouder and his company, has just completed a tour of the entire Pantages circuit of theaters and has been a success in every theater in which it has appeared. "The Bandit" is a Mexican playlet and the scene of the sketch is laid in the hills of Sonora. A special carload of scenery is carried by this act.

Lovers of romance and laces and blue blood, in short, of aristocracy, will be interested in the news of the presence in Glendale of the once reigning house of France, as well as of famous Americans. She is Mile. Jean de Conde, whose clever, original songs are to be the bright spot in the show. To the feminine contingent especially, it will be interesting to know that the laces she displays on one of her gowns, which she says has been exhibited in every great exhibition in America, were given to her great-great-aunt, Louise Adelaide, heroine of a one-time best-seller novel, "The Rose of Old St. Louis," who was one of the founders of the city on the Mississippi, which is the home of the vaudeville star.

From quite a different part of the country comes Si Jenks, the small town wise cracker, who has a carpet bag full of surprises for the theatergoers of Glendale. Mr. Jenks has been known on the Orpheum circuit for years because of his perfect delineation of the "hick" comedian. Mr. Jenks is interested in the production of photoplays here in California and for this reason is able to play a few theaters in this state before continuing his tour of the East.

There will be another act selected to please, to complete the vaudeville bill and on the screen, Lionel Barrymore in his latest picture, will hold forth. "The Great Adventure" is a comedy drama and is quite different from any picture which Mr. Barrymore has made in the past.

PAPER MONEY NOW REPLACED BY GOLD

TELLURIDE, Colo., Dec. 9.—No more paper money. That's the slogan adopted by the Bank of Telluride. For the first time in years, the teller's cage recently contained nothing but gold and silver money. All checks were cashed and all large change given in gold and silver coins. Silver dollars, five, ten and 20 dollar gold pieces were given out instead of paper money.

Bank officials said metal money proved more satisfactory in handling.

Even when a man pays cash for an electric battery, he wants it charged.

GARDNER'S FATHER SAYS ROY IS SANE

Aged Parent Says He Disowned Son Fifteen Years Ago

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 9.—Roy Gardner, notorious bandit, is sane, G. W. Gardner, his aged father, declares in an interview with the United Press. It was reported that Gardner's counsel had written state authorities here to learn if his mother had died of insanity. "Yes, Roy Gardner is my son," the elder Gardner sobbed. "He left us fifteen years ago and has never been home since. We've disowned him and don't want to hear about him." Asked if Roy had shown symptoms of being "queer," the father replied: "When he left home he appeared mentally sound to us, and I believe he was normal." County records here showed Mrs. Gardner, the bandit's mother, died four years ago of natural causes.

Aarons had had a beautiful fire, a perfect fire. Curtains hung ostensibly to keep dust from the shelves, had served to carry the flames right around the warehouse. Into the blackened shop stepped Umptstein, full of condolences. "A bad job, Aarons, mein friend," he said, "a bad job." "Bad job!" ejaculated Aarons. "See here; how would you improve on it?"
