- INTRODUCTION -

THE WORK of writing this book was shoved off on us by the lazier element in the class. We have worked over it only in those moments formerly labelled "leisure." Think what an unparalleled success it would have been, if we had devoted our entire attention to it! If anyone is dissatisfied with the Book as a whole, or any part thereof, we would tell him with Wordsworth, "that he ought to like it." The fault may be subjective, and lie with the reader, and not with the unlucky thirteen who compose

COLLEGE LIFE AND LITERATURE.

FREDERICK HENRY SYKES,

Professor of Teachers College and Director of Extension Teaching,
Columbia University.

"Three-score and ten, a wise man
Said were our years to be;
Three-score and six, I give him back,
Four are enough for me;
Four in these corridors,
Four in these walls of ours,
These give me, heavenly powers
'Tis life for me."

HE senior year is past, examinations are over and gone, diplomas appear on the earth, and the voice of the valedictorian is heard in the land. It is surely the time of times to talk of college life, to imagine its possibilities and to judge its realizations—to know what it has given us and is ours, and to dream of what might have been its gift to us, but which somehow we have missed and lost forever. For college life, we all know, has in its keeping a great gift. During three or four years, at the most critical period of nascent powers, ambitions, and passions, young manhood and young womanhood are brought under a perfected environment, directed to the high end of education,—what great gain may not be ours! We have all a growing faith in the formative value of college life. The great universities are consciously seeking to realize its possibilities through buildings, dormitories, common-rooms, chapels, fields, lawns, gardens, as well as by curricula, methods, and instructors. What in particular can college life contribute to one of the highest of aims, the forming of literary genius?

No one, I suppose, believes that a college education and a college life are the necessary highroad to literature. In our days when colleges are rising at every cross-roads, the newspaper office still gives a more direct entry to literature than the university. Dickens, the Brontës, George Eliot, Trollope, the Rossettis, Mrs. Browning, Herbert Spencer, had no college education, and Browning and Tennyson left college without taking a degree. People wonder sometimes that Shakspeare should have known so much without a college education; we should rather wonder what college or what professor could have taught Shakspeare. Literary genius can have few teachers but nature, experience of human life, and the memory and work of great writers. Nevertheless the testimony of biography is singularly unanimous in ascribing to college life a foremost place in the formative influences making our men of letters. It is worth while seeing what they found in college education, if not absolutely essential in their development, in the highest degree contributory.

The old curriculum of the humanities, discredited as it is to-day, certainly contributed largely to the cultivation and prestige of letters. It is the contribution of the classic that distinguishes Thackeray's style from the style of the non-collegian Charles Dickens. It was the gift of the classics to Matthew Arnold—lucidity, self-control, good sense, idea of perfection—by virtue of which he became the apostle to the Philistines. Tennyson loved Virgil—

“Wielder of the stateliest measure ever moulded by the lips of man”— and Virgil's skill in fusing thought and form into those things which once said are said for all time lies behind Tennyson's wonderful aptitude for ‘jewels five words long.’

With the decline of the classics as the medium of a liberal education, we have come, in the United States, to rely more and more on the study of English, and the English curriculum has begun to respond to the demands now put upon it. Already there are signs that college teachers of English are accepting their inevitable destiny. For to them especially belongs the problem of the contribution to college education due from literature and æsthetics. Certain colleges have begun to recognize composition as a creative and as a developing art. Instructors are going about their work in the faith that they give the best instruction when that instruction aims to foster and direct the nascent powers of expression based on the study and observation of life. But as yet such study, anywhere, is hardly beyond its freshman stage; higher instruction remains still to be organized. We have yet to see a college where the creative power in English receives a tithe of the attention and reward bestowed upon the history of English. The writers to be, if we have them among us, are still left to their personal effort and that traditional illusion called inspiration. Some day we may hope to organize undergraduate courses in English to secure vital ends; to study composition as a creative art, and literature, not historically merely, not in isolated authors merely, but as an interpretative art. Then Matthew Arnold's view of poetry as “the criticism of life” and Mr. Meredith's view of fiction as “philosophy's elect hand-maiden,” will not seem so far removed from the method and interests of the class-room. So constituted, the college curriculum will stand in no unworthy relation to literature, as the schools of painting, music, and architecture stand in no unworthy relation to the fine arts whose name they bear.

But it is not the curriculum of college studies that has made men of letters. Indeed there has even been, let us speak frankly, not infrequently a conscious revolt from the prescribed studies and the accredited instructors. Browning studied everything except the college curriculum. Thackeray won no success at college, for he devoted himself to his private reading, his private friends, and his private journal, The Snob. Tennyson criticized Cambridge of Thackeray's and his own day, and its instructors

“—who do profess to teach
And teach us nothing, feeding not the heart ”

Carlyle's memorable description of the University of Weissnichtwo—the square enclosure, small ill-chosen library, the eleven hundred striplings scrambling about, the professors at the gates declaring aloud it was a University and exacting fees, otherwise dwelling at ease, by reputation—that is a picture drawn by the peasant's son as he took the small measure of the University of Edinburgh. And at the same university Stevenson recollected himself as lean, ugly, idle, unpopular, yawning infinitely during lectures and delighting infinitely during “cuts.” It is inevitable that there should be conflict between the spirit of youth and of new ideas and the established order. The interest of a college curriculum has, in the main, been in scholarship, the interest of the developing writer is in life and expression. Genius, too, does not readily endure bonds, not self-imposed. But we can hope, with a revised curriculum, to moderate the conflict, and allow a college career even to literary talent.

But it is college life, rather than the college curriculum, that has made for literature. In the close association of student life—talking, walking, smoking, in sports, pranks, debates—there is that process by which the mind is clarified, the fumes of egotism and sentimentality pass off, a man offers the gift of his personality to his fellows and receives a measure of their humanity. He learns a standard of life in character, intelligence, manners. In the clubs and coteries and fraternities, formed by the cohesive power of temperament, there is a ceaseless action of mind upon mind—attrition, stimulus, vision. Coleridge fills his rooms at Cambridge with students, while he discourses them, in rapt monologue, on the Revolution dawning gloriously upon humanity. Tennyson joins the little society of the Apostles—twelve of them. In their happy cenacles they ‘ held debate, a band

Of youthful friends, on mind and art,
And labor, and the changing mart,
And all the framework of the land.”

They settled all modern problems with the certainty of the undergraduate, no doubt, yet the life was there to make them all famous later in letters, the law, and the Church. When the college world has its chronicle in a college paper, offering the inspiration of the printed page and an intelligent audience, there is a very nursery of literary genius.

Some, too, have been fortunate in their college days to get the gift of beauty—in architecture and in nature. Ruskin found himself in the beauty of the Oxford Colleges. Oxford, to William Morris meant, not “book-learning,” but “a vision of grey towers, a long, winding street, and the sound of many bells;” and amidst “the loveliness of the grey city” he found his abiding faith in the beauty of the Middle Ages. To Matthew Arnold the Oxford landscape meant more even than Oxford architecture. Without Oxford landscape there would be no Scholar Gypsy, no Thyrsis. Arnold knew the swallow-haunted river, the festooned elms, the hedge-row lanes, the cottages with their roses roof-high, the Cumnor hills and Berkshire downs, and went to nature for the suggestions of the ideal—

“Still nursing the unconquerable hope,
Still clutching the inviolable shade.”

College life for all our men of letters has been a period of ferment—a time of uncertain impulses, chaotic ideas, vague ambitions; a time of change, of freeing themselves from convention and prejudice; a time of infidelities, passions, despairs, faiths, aspirations; a time of hardships, self-sacrifice, devotion to ideas. In college life they found, perhaps, the men and books that made them. At college the younger Pitt reads The Wealth of Nations. At college William Morris seizes on Scott, Tennyson, Browning, Ruskin, and the new Pre-Raphaelite paintings,—spouts, declaims, proselytizes. What a student life he led! Tennyson takes him to Malory and Malory to Froissart, and out of his college enthusiasms is born The Defense of Guenevere and the mediæval reaction in art. Thomas Carlyle in Edinburgh lays the foundation of a literary life—“from the chaos of the Library fishing-up more books perhaps than had been known to the very keepers thereof.” At Oxford, belated fragment of mediævalism, Newman meets Whately, Jones, Hawkins and Keble, and the beliefs of the Oxford Movement find their greatest apostle. In turn, “Credo in Newmanum,” said Froude, “was for hundreds the genuine symbol of faith.” Perhaps the best we can find in our college life is a real man and teacher—some Mark Hopkins at the end of a log—without whom all college curricula avail little; where that man is, mind is kindling mind, and teaching is inspiration. Out of that play of mind, out of histories of human endeavor, in the atmosphere and prestige of thought, the youth feels the power and validity of ideas, and around certain great ideas his miscellaneous thoughts and beliefs begin to gather and to order themselves as part of his working faith. Thus Carlyle, the peasant's son of genius, who from the age of thirteen has trudged manfully from Dumfries to Edinburgh, has trudged his way out of peasantry to the miscellaneous languages, sciences, philosophies, soul conflicts, from whose chaotic elements, cosmos emerges as Sartor Resartus. The youth, trying various studies and miscellaneous pursuits and activities, tries himself, and by a process of sympathy and repulsion, finds out what he can and must do, and what he cannot and will not do. Thus the great end of college life is attained; college studies have made him conscious of the powers and aptitudes of his mind, and directed him into the path of his talent. He thus finds what is the first blessing of life—the thing he really can do—to become a full happiness later if the world will only let him do it. He finds his star, and it is to him to follow it.

The genius in letters above all has the chance in college life to find his star. For college life offers an ideal environment that stimulates to literature. The beauty of wide lawns and grey towers and many trees, our first oration, our first poem, the first friends of our manhood, our first love, the men and books and ideas that made us, our unbeliefs and new faiths, our self-denials and enthusiasms, our first draught of the beauty and romance and passion of life, our faith in ideas, in the freedom that comes through truth—that is college life, endeared, as time goes by, and forever returning in memory at the word that expresses it all, the dearest of all college words, Alma Mater!

I.

In the days of the rule of Remsen,
Mackdermott ruling the Gym,
Mrs. Stewart being the Czar of the Lab,
And swaying it with her whim,
The Registrar being Tommy;
Behold, it came to pass,
That a man in haste brought tidings
Of the advent of our class.
He was out of breath from running,
And he said, "Some b'yes," said he,
"Are down there bangin' at the gate;
Nice lookin' b'yes they be;
Oh, hurry down, O Tommy, dear;
Now, up and haste, O, Dean,
For such a likely set of chaps,
I swear, I never seen!"

Then up the Dean rose quickly,
Then up rose Tommy Ball,
They had the youths admitted, and
They met them in the Hall.

And at a glance quite satisfied
That the report was true,
They made them all sign in a book,
(As was the custom to).
They rushed them through formalities,
And made them students all.
"Such merit's rare," remarked the Dean.
"'Tis so," said Tommy Ball.

II.

Then 'gan the youths to labor,
As was correct and meet,
For they went to learned teachers,
And sat down at their feet;
Awed were the crowd that daily
Waited for "Joe" to speak;
Few were the classic scholars
That Spieker taught in Greek.
Brave were the lads who ventured
Among the deadly rows,

Where grimly stands the bottled death
 That rest from care bestows.
 Trustful were those who daily
 Read Ballagh's pile of stuff;
 Yet some took mathematics,
 And that was pretty tough.
 Thus did the young men labor,
 Even as the tyrants bade,
 And wasted o'er dry dusty tomes
 The only brains they had.
 But these things were but partly
 What they had come to do:
 Some of the class were athletes,
 Many, and good ones, too!
 Football, lacrosse, and baseball,
 Basketball, tennis, and track,
 In these and in other pastimes shone
 The wearers of Red and Black.
 Far ran the tale of their prowess,
 Talked of for many a year,
 (Not for long years at Hopkins
 Did such great names appear).
 Some were disciples of Orpheus,
 Sweetly they sang to their lute,
 Charming the grad. and the freshman,
 As Orpheus enchanted the brute.
 Some bowed at the shrine of Leo
 (Leo, the lion-headed man),
 And from the rostrum or forum
 Daily orations began;
 Spent were their days in declaring
 Black, white, and white, black (or dark blue);
 With stentorian circumlocutions
 That disguised what they wanted to do.
 Some were leaders of public opinion,
 By means of an infamous sheet,
 Appearing at uncertain periods,
 The eyes of its readers to greet.
 It had stories and news (?) items;
 A bon-mot of Lessings was true:
 "Of its contents the new was not truthful,
 And the things that were true were not new."

III.

Yet for all these diverse occupations,
 The class was essentially one;
 No cliques and no factions disturbed,
 As up to this time they have done.
 At smokers and feeds, and especially
 At banquets, class spirit was strong,
 And the halls often echoed 'till morning
 With speeches, and class yells, and song.

 And behold, they had many adventures;
 Are they not writ for you
 To read in the "Book of the Seniors"
 Entitled, the "Hullabaloo?"
 These glorious deeds my muse invokes,
 To skip, which to please her, we'll do,
 And try a few verses prophetic,
 When this masterly poem will be through.
 As far as the Gates of the Future
 My muse gets along pretty well,
 But what there is behind those gates
 She cannot clearly tell,
 Even though I beg her. But finally
 She says: "I dimly see
 Great things in store for Naughty-Five,—
 Wealth, and Celebrity."
 So much I learned. (To tell the truth,
 I was not much surprised;
 Such youths as constitute the class
 Were surely not devised
 For humble parts). The muse I begged
 To join me in a glass,
 "Then here's to her in love," I said,
 "The Hopkins' greatest class.
 May Fortune e'er attend her,
 Long may her children thrive;
 In future years, she'll have no peers;
 Here's to the Class of Naughty-Five!"

WHO'S WHO
AT HOPKINS

"The Proper Study for Mankind is Man"

FIRST EDITION

THE SCRIBBLERS COMPANY

1905

FOREWORD TO WHO'S WHO

In presenting this first edition of Who's Who at the Hopkins, the publishers have departed somewhat from the colorless style of the ordinary publication. Instead of the dry statistical records, we have fashioned these sketches on the style of the French Court Memoirs. For after all, it is not the dry bones of history that interests us, but the fact that Charles the Second was more than a King among men, and that Washington swore when he got excited.

Some persons included in this edition are of more than local prominence. Here there passes in review a galaxy of athletes, scientists, musicians, debaters, temperance advocates, poets, and people of note in every line.

The records have been obtained for the most part from the gentlemen themselves. Consequently, greatness has been thrust upon some, through their own instrumentality. But we would respectfully remind the reader that the geese that saved the Capitol, and the ass of Balaam have been handed down to posterity. Similarly, the mere connection of certain members with the class of Nineteen-Five, insures them enduring fame; and hence they are herein included.

The works of the illustrious members will be found catalogued in another part of the volume.

The Publishers.

WALTER ALBERT BAETJER, A. J. Φ.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Vice-President and Class Treasurer, (Sb. F.); Class Secretary, (F.); Baseball Team (J.); Class Football Team, (J.); Class Numerals, (F.); Business-Manager NEWS-LETTER, (J.); Manager Track Team, (S.); Business-Manager HULLABALOO, (Resigned); Chief Usher Inter-class Debate, (J.); Toastmaster, (F.), (J.), (S.).

Just a nice, well-behaved boy, blithe and debonair; that's all. He talks college spirit, which he claims to have imbibed in his Sub-Freshman year, to any victim who will listen, or, at least, stand near him. When nobody listens, he indulges in monologues. Calculates three weeks in advance which fork he is going to use first at the class banquets, and whether he will fold up his napkin or just leave it right on the table, devil-may-care fashion, you know. Acknowledges confidentially, after a very, very long prelude and a longer introduction, etc., that he is "weally" on pins and needles at Hopkins dances. Has a sincere respect and reverence for all women; and often finds himself forced to blush and even retire, from embarrassment, when Wroth indulges in his unrefined, uncouth noises, and "hullabaloo" in public places.

BYRON TREAT BANGHART.

BALTIMORE COUNTY.

GEOLOGICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Class Football Team, (J.); Assistant Business-Manager HULLABALOO, (Resigned); Class Numerals, (F.).

Here's another case of the undistributed middle. Like the good Y. M. C. A. man that he is, "Bang" officiates at the keg at class smokers, and with true Christian spirit, unselfishly supplies nutriment to others. On such occasions modesty keeps him from adding to the general fund of anecdotes with his own contes, yet we are told that in smaller gatherings * * * * * As he walks along with stolid indifference, we would think him dead to externals; but a wealth of philosophy concerning human virtues and shortcomings dwells in that pear-shaped cranium.

In some of his travels incog. (through the Orient), he must have made the acquaintance of royalty, judging from the number of queens that adorn his conversation. Though he works very hard, he has concealed the fact very well, as testifies the popular ballad, "Everybody works but Banghart."

NAZARETH SARKIS BARSUMIAN.

AINTAB, TURKEY.

SPECIAL.

A message from the old world to the new, and, like other cipher messages, is hard to interpret. Heard of the fame of the Class of Nineteen-Five, and came all the way from Turkey to share in its good fellowship, and to win a place in "Who's Who." His object in life seems to be to find the "fountain of perpetual youth," but it is not likely that he will ever need this inasmuch as he seems to be in the full bloom of childhood. A tadpole or Dr. Andrews is equally amusing to him. Has a curious sly gleam in one eye, that leads one to suspect that he is not entirely "innocence abroad." By special request no reference will be made to the many houris who attend this gay Lothario.

JAMES ALVIN BASS.

CATONSVILLE, MD.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

An inoffensive specimen of the genus "homo." Works while others sleep, and also works while others work. Flits in and out of the University like a shadow of the departed. Has a far-away look in his eyes, as if he were thinking of the time he was mistaken for a Freshman and almost hazed. Has a truly French, nasal twang, and always talks in monosyllables—unless he knows a new joke. From his peculiar reticence and facial expression, one is led to suppose that perhaps he knows more about things than he cares to tell. Can produce an erratic kind of giggle when sufficiently urged. At the class banquet, while drinking lemonade (?), "he almost slipped through his straw and fell in." With his customary diffidence he has consistently refused to give any information about himself for this publication, but, since he works in the Baltimore Post-Office, this is excusable.

BENJAMIN ABRAM BERNSTEIN, Φ. B. K.

BALTIMORE.

MATHEMATICAL-PHYSICAL.

Vice-President Chess Club, (J.), (S.); Varsity Chess Club Team Playing University of Pennsylvania, and Washington University, (S.); Inter-Class Debating Team, (J.).

Mr. Bernstein is a long shot on brains, but short odds on form. Is well known as a logical thinker on abstruse subjects. He takes great pleasure in recalling the Dean to the subject, when he is wandering. He plays chess by the application of Morley's "wheel and string" method, combined with the philosophy of the "fanciful arrow." It is understood that Lasker traveled all over Europe to avoid his challenge. Laughs heartily when congeniality demands, and can appear sympathetically sad when listening to a hard-luck story. Spends his leisure time solving Zeno's paradoxes, to the delight of Bass. His works are voluminous and erudite. "Mr. Bernstein's works strike a keynote in the history of modern science. His strong, but rather pessimistic argument on the non-entity of the average pedagogue deserves the attention of every thinking teacher."—The Nation.

ALLEN STRAFFORD BOWIE, A. J. Φ.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Class Football Team, (F.), (J.); Class Numerals, (F.); Executive Committee, (S.); Baseball Team, (J.), (S.).

Enveloped by a "sweet innocent smile," he sits around during lectures with a peculiar half-absorbed, half-intelligent gleam in his eye. Never takes his eyes off his notes except to join in with Hackett to correct an instructor. Makes a careful abstract of the books read in all courses, and in this respect reminds one strongly of Oscar in "Philosophy 4." Often interrupts the class to tell his little joke to Griswold or Curlander. Possesses a very remarkable affinity for the director of a certain Senior laboratory, which he usually emphasizes by a vivid sketching of the gentleman's ancestors for at least three generations back.

WILLIAM GRAHAM BOYCE, A. J. Φ.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

President Class, (S.); Associate Editor-in-Chief HULLABALOO; 'Varsity Football Team, (S.); 'Varsity "H," (S.); Class Football Team, (F.), (J.); 'Varsity Track Team, (F.), (J.), (S.); Class Relay Team, (J.); Chairman Executive Committee, (F.); Delegate Athletic Association, (S.); Governor of Hullabaloo Club, (S.).

The Czar of 1905. Believes that he is privileged to "butt-in" on all occasions merely because he was nearly elected the best-looking man in the class. Though not at all conceited, he likes to talk about his fine small ears. Notwithstanding all this, his modesty is remarkable, and his weary smile when anyone speaks about the most popular man in the class is really artistic. Has a good-humored contempt for the opinion of others, unless, of course, those opinions happen to agree with his own. Indeed, Mr. Kipling must have had him in mind when he penned the famous sentence, "too much ego in his cosmos." His impressive manner has an excellent effect on Freshmen, and—judging from Boyce's remarks—on little girls; while his assurance in telling Dr. Ballagh a date only three hundred and sixty-three years out of the way, almost, but not quite, took that gentleman's wind.

THOMAS RODNEY CHAMBERS, Φ. Γ. Δ.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Editor HULLABALOO; Class Executive Committee, (J.); Class Football Team, (J.); Class Vice-President, (S.); Johns Hopkins Cotillion Club, (S.); 'Varsity Lacrosse Team, (S.)

One of two satellites that revolve around each other, but by no means the lesser light. It is said that he fairly shines in his caustic and humorous conversation with the "lady folk." But like his co-comet, Dill, the Board must whisper for the ladies' benefit that he is best appreciated in small doses. He seems to have the automobile fever at present. He adopted this as a hobby because his goggles give him an opportunity to blush unseen when anything "shady" is said; for you know he colors very easily at anything of that sort. Dill lets him run a lacrosse ball out of bounds, or carry water for the team every now and then, so he is gradually, very gradually, getting slightly proficient at the game. Flits in and out of the University without "butting in," or making much noise; so if he practices walking on his toes instead of on his heels, he may be eligible to the position of Sneaker-at-Arms in the Biological Union.

JOHN FRANCIS CREMEN, Phi. B. K.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Hopkins Scholar, (J.), (S.); Toastmaster, (Resigned), (J.); Class Treasurer, (J.); Alternate Class Debating Team, (J.); Adviser Debating Team, (S.); Editor HULLALOO; Chairman Committee of Arrangements Brown-Hopkins Debate, (S.).

This sober youth of angelic countenance is quite a facetious anomaly. He smokes cigarettes and even swears now and then, just to assert his manhood. He has highly developed aesthetic tastes, and spends much time pondering whether he should part his name in the middle or on one side. He is a dictionary in trousers, and will never use a short Anglo-Saxon word if he can get a good long, mouth-filling, Latinized, circumlocution, which will obscure the sense equally well. Came to Hopkins with a purpose,—to discover human imperfections. Apparently he has found them, if we can thus interpret his remarkable critical faculty. A hearty admirer of Dr. Greene, he hopes to be able, at some future date, to emulate the literary work of that professor.

JAMES CURLANDER.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

The publishers were denied assistance, and consequently can compile from but little data. It is suspected, however, that he spends his off hours posing as a wooden Indian in front of a cigar store on Eutaw Street. He did confide "onct" to an outsider that he thought he had a talent for law, because he knew where he could get law books cheap. He considers it his duty to look intelligent as far as possible, and to applaud Eiseman's antics in the Senate. He is a creature of infinite tact, and laughs heartily at professional bon-mots, on the slightest provocation.

LEWIS ALAN DILL, Phi Gamma Delta.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Mandolin Club, (F.), (J.), (S.); President Class, (J.); Delegate Athletic Association, (J.), (S.); Class Football Team, (F.), (J.); Class Numerals, (F.); Varsity Lacrosse Team, (F.), (J.); Captain, (S.); Varsity "H," (F.); Hullabaloo Board of Governors, (S.); Member Banquet Committee, (F.); Member Inter-Collegiate Debate Committee, (S.); Class Sergeant-at-Arms, (S.).

Suppose Dill were to be made a fellow at the Woman's College, wouldn't the girls have fun with him? He has such a cute little nose, and just think of that figure! But we wonder if they wouldn't get a little tired, if he began his long-winded narratives? Lacrosse (talk) is his strong point. He is said to be laboring under the delusion (more properly hallucination) that the girls are crazy about him. This peculiar phase of mental atrophy was brought about by a fall on his head which he suffered while wandering around Walbrook, North America. But despite these little defects, a manly heart beats beneath that paddock, and his shoes are number nine.

WALTER DAVID EISEMAN.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Class Executive Committee, (F.); Reception Committee Inter-Class Debate, (S.); Assistant Business-Manager HULLABALOO; Track Team, (F.).

A cross between a peacock and a pouter pigeon. Like the frog in the old fable, Eiseman puffs himself up in all directions. Let him read the moral and beware! He is by no means a self-made man,—so much for his justification. According to Dr. Lee, oratorical ability runs in his family. The Doctor was even so unkind as to say that it was handed down from father to son. In his more intense attitudes, his eyes roll as if they were connected with incessantly revolving wheels further back in his head. He makes great pretensions to savoir faire.

LEMAN EDWIN GOLDMAN, $\Phi. B. K.$

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Hopkins Scholar, (J.), (S.); Freshman Speaker, (winning); Chairman and Speaker Class Debating Team, (J.), (S.); Chairman and Speaker Varsity Debating Team, (J.); Member Banquet Committee, (J.); Chairman Varsity Debating Board, (S.); Baseball Team, (F.), (J.), (S.); Executive Committee, (J.); Debating "H," (J.).

A very notable young man; so notable, in fact, that Goodenow takes down all the above mentioned notes in toto. Indeed, so good is he at taking notes, (second only to Zeigler in accuracy of copy and in extensiveness of same), that he would undoubtedly make a good receiving-teller for a loan association. His knowing smile, which always gives him the appearance of being on "the ground floor," and his consequential air in playing baseball, are the secret envy of little boys. When talking officially (i. e. always), he has a peculiar habit of wagging his head up and down like a pump handle. He has thorough confidence in his ability to speak, and will undoubtedly stump the State at some future time in his cherished occupation of politician. Is thinking of offering gas to the City at seventy-nine cents. If an infinite capacity for taking pains is a sign of genius, Mr. Goldman will receive a notice in a future edition of "Who's Who."

RUFUS KING GOODENOW, $A. A. \Phi.$

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Track Team, (F.), (J.), (S.); Varsity "H. A. A.", (F.); Class Numerals, (J.); Chess Club, (J.); Class Relay Team, (J.); Member Hopkins-Virginia Dual Meet Team, (F.), (J.); Class Football Team, (J.);

According to Griswold, he possesses the typical criminal's face. Has a loud raucous voice, with which he "blates" forth on all occasions to the effect that he has a "point." Aforesaid "point" usually consists of an unthinkable heinousness. Fancies that he has the art of foxing an instructor, (also people in general), worked out to the last detail, and lies awake at night thinking up new variations of the game. Result, Goodenow gets a three and one-half, instructor laughs up his sleeve, and people in the class tap their foreheads significantly. Works out a system (?) of chances on everything that comes under his observation, and will bet either way on anything, especially on passing exams. Seems to have a barber's instinct, or perhaps it is merely barbarous, inasmuch as he constantly reminds Hackett of the condition of his beard.

ROBERTSON GRISWOLD, A. J. Φ.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Class Vice-President, (F.); Banjo Club, (J.), (S.); Manager Musical Clubs, (S.); Chief Rooter, (S.); Class Historian, (S.); Chief Usher Annual Indoor Games, (S.); Manager Baseball Team, (S.); Dance Committee, (S.).

When not thinking of a witty reply to Goodenow's latest insult, he is either chuckling over a joke he made the day before, or thinking of one for the next day. He also spends a part of his time trying to manufacture an epithet that can be applied to Goodenow's facial characteristics, and, at the same time, not cast a slur on his own features. This, Goodenow says, is impossible. Has a mysterious air and often takes fellows off into a corner to ask them in a low tone what time it is. Lately he has assumed an intensely worried and hopeless expression. But despite this passing frown, the girls still admit that he has a sweet face; and then he's so nice to tease. He possesses a very seductive voice, and, with a little practice, he might develop into a pretty slippery confidence man.

HUGH ASBURY HACKETT.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Class Football Team, (J.); Adviser Class Debating Team, (J.); Treasurer Chess Club, (J.), (S.); Class Treasurer, (S.); Assistant Art Editor HULLABALOO.

A dabbler in the fields of art, literature, photography, and geological research; one whose talents are so multiplied that they get in each other's way. In the midst of his work in these fields, he finds time to devote one hour or so to the University, mainly because he feels it his duty to correct the erroneous impression about psychology which the class gets from Dr. Stratton's lectures. Fearing that he is not appreciated by the class, he has reluctantly confessed (for he is very modest and retiring), that the Dean has applied to him for private instruction in modern psychology. Although he thought during his Freshman year that he was a demigod, he has now become convinced that he is merely a demagogue.

WILLIAM HARKINSON HUDGINS, B. Θ. II.

This little man is very sensitive about his facial characteristics, so the Board has decided not to say anything about his resemblance to Admiral Togo's powder monkey. He resembles Don Juan in complexion and, perhaps, in achievements. Looks rather well, but somewhat slim, in balloon trousers. He has a failing for lacrosse. It is rumored that he once threw a nickel all the way from Eutaw Street right up against the Gymnasium wall. Professes to have an unmitigated contempt for "polers," but he spends no little "oil" himself in "looking over" work. The information thus gained he growls out at a quiz with the apology that "I just happened to know that."

ANDREW WILMER HULL, A. J. Φ.

Gosh! Mr. Stevenson would have been delighted to have seen him, for he is one who has never "faltered" in his great task of happiness. Shows his "glorious morning face" promptly at nine, and keeps it up all the "while." Will either laugh or agree with anyone as congeniality demands. In fact he has been known to agree with two people at the same time, arguing on different sides of a question. In recognition of his amiability, some have called him "Merry Andrew;" but despite this "good nature and gentleness of disposition," he almost "hit Rufus once."

JOHN LONG JACKSON, Φ. Γ. Δ.

BALTIMORE.

CLASSICAL.

Second Vice-President Y. M. C. A., (S.); Director, J. H. U. Chapter of The Brotherhood of St. Andrew, (S.).

Pre-destined for the ministry, and dresses accordingly. Leads a model life for the most part, and can truly say that he practices what he intends to preach. Very quiet and inoffensive. The minute a class is over, he is either on his way home, or to the study room, with his books neatly tucked under his arm. So retiring is he, that he is really unknown to Mr. Ball. His chief diversion is playing at "catchers" or "I spy." Any clear afternoon you may see him playing the above-mentioned games with the children of his neighborhood. The only drawback to his complete happiness is that his feet stick out from the steps, when he hides behind them. Although he intends to follow such a noble calling, and lives up to his ideals expressed in his middle name, it is rumored that he is a very "Othello" among the fair sex.

RICHARD NEWTON JACKSON, A. Δ. Φ.

Alias "de Dick." Sober, quiet and industrious, and unobtrusive except when "de lights are going out in another minute." Came to "de Hopkins" one day by mistake when he intended to go down-town. In his Freshman year he ran so fast in the cage that he passed himself on the next lap. This made him "heart-sick," so he now works off his athletic energy playing the "heavy" in his new paddock coat on Charles street. Is a good man to convince the manager of a hotel "dat de rough house is all over." Seems to regard people in general as "crazy cranks," whom he consigns to "de hell." The HULLABALOO Board suggests that he might find a suitable position in the Tuskegee Institute investigating the Evolution of Dialect.

IRVING HENRY KOHN.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Chess Club, (J.), (S.); Secretary Chess Club, (S.); Adviser Class Debating Team, (S.); Usher, Brown-Hopkins Debate, (S.).

Every class has its Apollo; Naughty-Five has in addition a Cupid. It is doubtful how, when, or why, this title was conferred on Mr. Kohn. His heart-piercing exploits with the fair sex, and his countenance (see photo), may in part explain it. Then, too, his marksmanship with the lacrosse ball is as proverbial as the erring shafts of his prototype. It is not recorded that the little Greek deity was a great pest. Certainly, if annoying, he was not terrifying. Ah! it was a sight for the gods to see this three-foot six agonizer, standing on his tip-toes, hector a six-foot three Freshman, (when there was a host of Juniors at his heels). Indeed, the 1906 motto was: "Cupid will get you, if you don't watch out." You cannot mistake him,—a pipe, seldom lit, in his mouth; a dimpling smile betokening shallowness, good nature, or both, and a sluggish gait around the ankles—all tend to differentiate this specimen of the genus culex.

An erratic sort of an anomaly. Loafs while others work, and works while others loaf. At times he wears a sad, care-worn, self-absolved air, as if he had just experienced a severe jilt; while, at other times, he has been known to rival even "Eggy" with his foolish capers. Declaims at class banquets with a zest that puts the Lee department in the back-ground. These peculiar phases of his character, so entirely different, are typical of the dual life he leads in his role of Dr. Griffin and Mr. Hyde. In future life he will probably make most success in a dual activity as a member of the claque, or a professional mourner.

Up to a short time ago, Mr. Miller's acquaintances had regarded him as an innocent, irresponsible, young creature, full of childish pranks and gambols. He could be located at any time of the day, sporting with his little playmates in the basement, or presiding over the grave deliberations of the Senate, with a sweet smile on his face, and his feet on the desk. Lately, however, suspicious rumors have reached our ears; whispers were circulated that Mr. Miller had been seen dressed in a brown suit and an orange bordered handkerchief. Inquiries have been made, and we have discovered that he is leading a double life; indeed, so complicated is it that it may fairly be termed a quadruple life. It has also been found out that, besides his ordinary satanic accomplishments, he can slip his peculiar mat of hair down over his face and back again, completely, at will, while his ears wag ominously up and down; so at any minute one expects to see him kick, wag a tail, or bray.

Morse, the man with the Eccentricities of genius. With his characteristic long strides he has risen from the depths, even to the pinnacle of Hopkins journalism. The rest of the Board, having searched in vain for reasons for his rapid rise, have decided that it is owing to his grafting abilities, and the consistent carrying out of his declared policy, "Get all that's coming to you." An unexpected dogmatism crops out now and then, directed mainly against the vile, inane stuff of the Associate Editor-in-Chief. Though his usual demeanor is dignified, this reserve is at times cast aside; and he gets awful bad in companionship with Walker and Woltereck. In the earlier days of his remarkable career, he always entered Tommy Ball's office through the slit marked "Letters;" in the later days, he has been no longer able to get into the office at all, but is compelled to hold his conversation through the transom.

His countenance, whether tinged with a blush or illuminated with one of his fifty-seven varieties of giggles, is at all times a picture of bashful modesty. He is at a loss to know how he got into the University. The Dean explains that some one was needed to make the 1905 HULLABALOO hideous. At this art Mr. Owings has practised long, as his historical and psychological note-books testify. Forgets everything which he does not lose. While purchasing something at a drug store to strengthen his voice, he lost his logic. This fact may account for the incoherence of his remarks on an occasion too recent to be forgotten.

It is not known whether this title originated in the fact that, "Whoever touches Pitch., verily, he shall be defiled;" or whether, as Shakespeare has it, "A man of ordinary pitch." His keen and acute expression was acquired in his Freshman year by eluding the Juniors. When pleased, which is seldom, he emits a joyous cackle; when not pleased, which is usual, he whines and growls. How he spends his time is unknown, but a certain divinity in the case of his watch, and numerous letters, written on blue paper and read in the Dean's class, may give a clue. Has an air of general prosperity. In taking notes, he leans gracefully on one arm, resting one finger on his cheek, thus exposing a magnificent solitaire, (price $3.50).

Although he has devoured as many languages as possible while in the University, he has mastered only a few monosyllables in the English language, which he will deliver when not too tired to speak. He is undecided whether his sleepy appearance comes from the soothing effects of the Musical Clubs, or from listening to the Dean's lectures. History of Nineteen-Five.

A various host—from kindred realms they come,
Brethren in arms, but rivals in renown.—Scott.

SOMEbody once said that history repeats itself. If history ever repeats itself to the glorious extent of giving to Hopkins such another class as Naughty-Five, it is to be congratulated on its common sense. Dr. Hollander says that modesty is a great virtue. If this be true, it is clearly impossible to record the deeds of Naughty-Five and to remain entirely virtuous.

We do not propose in this so-called history to chronicle all of our victories and achievements since first we entered college. Time and space would not permit. Moreover, would it not be useless to write of things with which everyone is familiar, and with which some, much to their regret, are all too familiar? Instead, we will attempt to show the ignorant why we are a great class, and to recall again some past events, gone, 'tis true, but not forgotten. If any sceptic, however, wishes to see an itemized list of our glories, old "Hullabaloo" will suffice.

From the time we entered college, we were destined to become famous. We were all fired with a pious desire to do something which would make the class respected by everyone. This was accomplished in various ways. Just as an example, take the case of one of our worthy classmen. He commenced to ascend the ladder of fame by having some of his hair removed, on the very first day of college, upon the Dean's debut as an up-to-date barber, and reached the top rung when he became the president of the class in his Senior year. Others among us, perhaps, have reached the pinnacle of greatness more quickly, but surely less painfully.

We have been prominently identified with other branches of college activity besides the aseptic tonsorial department. In athletics, we have developed many hitherto unknown wonders. Clarence Stone played on about every team except the chess aggregation, and, if he had remained in college, he would undoubtedly have made that too. Graham Boyce missed an occasional tackle on the football team last fall, and has also shown some symptoms of being able to run. Under favorable conditions and with the wind at his back, "Harry" Morse has been known to run a mile well under ten minutes. Rufus Goodenow can do the half-mile in about the same time, when in good trim and not in competition. In lacrosse, Captain Dill taught the young offspring how to shoot, and "Tom" Chambers and "Billy" Hudgins could also shake the stick a little. On last year's baseball team, we had "Tom" Campbell, who, when awake, pitched excellent ball. "Doc." Bowie managed to run off a little fat getting around the bases, and Goldman, aside from his ability to ensnare unsuspecting flies, tested his oratorical powers very effectively on the umpires.

In the forum, also, the class has had men who have been able to make themselves heard. Their logic was enough to convince a bad oyster of his mistake. No wonder we had such debaters as Goldman, Zeigler and Stern, for they certainly had plenty of practice in the class Senate while substituting for delinquent orators. By the way, it's a shame about that Senate. It was the bright particular spot in our college curriculum, and gave "Tom" Owings such an excellent opportunity for practising sketching; but it was doomed to die, so let it R. I. P.

Furthermore, in the literary world, we have had some "lights that never failed." As editors of the "News-Letter," Morse, Owings, and Straughn could not be beaten, although many other less deserving editors have suffered this cruel humiliation. All of their efforts were marvels of clearness, force, and ease, and the "News-Letter" flourished under their fertile pens. As business managers of this same worthy sheet, Baetjer and Woltereck have kept themselves in pocket-money, and, at the same time, kept us busy tearing up bills.

And now, let us turn to those august personages who have been our leaders in the years of our quest for knowledge. "Yots" Wroth, our Freshman president, wasted too much nervous energy in striving for the welfare of the class, which, combined with the additional burden of being a hard student, forced him to take the "rest-cure" for a couple of years. Anyone seeking an interview with this prince of men, may find him sitting around almost anywhere at almost any time.

Another important class-officer in our Freshman year was the "Poet." This office has since become defunct through disuse. Now William Shakspeare Straughn came to the University with the reputation of being a poet, and on the strength of this, was elected by an overwhelming majority to hold this honored position in the class. We have since become suspicious of how William acquired his reputation. His poetry, like Thomas Gray's far-famed flower, seems to have been "born to blush unseen," for which we are all of us duly thankful. Managing, and not poetry, was William's long suit.

In our Junior year, Alan Dill was our chosen leader. As a president he made Theodore Roosevelt look like Little Ross Street on a rainy day. His sphinx-like attitude while seated behind Mother Greene's desk, was enough to strike terror into the heart of all would-be orators on questions of class policy, excepting, of course, Hackett. This worthy individual will never fall a victim to "aphasia." Mental deafness on some occasions would not be so worse.

Of our Senior president, we have already spoken. For further data concerning this glorious but unassuming personage, see "Who's Who."

Eccentricity is said to be a sign of genius. This will let some others among us into the "Hall of Fame." Goodenow has shown signs of genius to a marked degree. Maybe he will invent something that will enable Hopkins to move out to Homewood. Or, if his inventive genius should fail him, he might become a campaign orator. His extraordinary manner of walking would be sure to attract a large crowd, and his voice could be heard with great ease by everyone within the radius of a mile. Then will it be said, that "the voice of the turtle is heard in all our land." (Song of Solomon, 2nd Chapter, 12th Verse.)

There is another in our midst whom it would be kindness to call eccentric. If a serious thought has ever entered his cerebellum, it has immediately hustled out again for want of company. He is as playful as a juvenile cat, and spends most of his time frisking around Walter's barber-shop, playing pitch, and teasing antiquated telephones. His name will be withheld.

Our class can also boast of a galaxy of brilliant students. "Chan." Walker ran a "blind tiger" in Maine during the summer, but absorbed a tremendous amount of knowledge (?) during the winter months. Hackett used to frighten the Dean daily by making rapid passes with his hands in front of the doctor's face, talking incoherently at the same time. Zeigler could answer a question before the Dean asked it. In fact, our scholarship has always been a source of great pride to the class.

There have been times, however, when we have cast our intellectual cares away, and have taken interest in other things. Our three banquets have been occasions which we will not be liable to forget. These were indeed times when good-fellowship and good-will, besides many other things, reigned supreme. Then did there develop in the class Jean de Reszkes, who, strangely enough, had never come out for the Glee Club, and previously unknown Chauncey Depews, who staggered everyone by their eloquence. And when our Senior banquet was over, the thought that this was our last banquet together made not a few of us feel badly.

A word here concerning our three-times toast-master would, perhaps, be appropriate. To him the success of our banquets has largely been due. If he would gain success in life, let him make this his specialty.

In the years to come, should anyone ask you wherein lay the real strength of Naughty-Five, tell him in the fact that the class was undivided. When first we entered college, class-politics, the prime weakness of so many other classes, was rampant; from this weakness we have been free. It is this that has held us together; it is this more than anything else that has brightened our days at college. May we, one and all, prove ourselves worthy sons of our "Alma Mater," and may we ever be mindful of the great debt which we owe to dear old Naughty-Five!

The Historian.

"AEGGIE" vs. "PITCH."

JUNIOR CLASS.

History of Nineteen-Six.

HILE in no wise seeking to measure his own abilities or disabilities by those of the learned author of the much studied Miller's Tale, the Historian cannot but confess that, in taking up the task of writing the history of his class, he feels somewhat as Chaucer must have felt when he "cribbed" those good stories of his from Petrarca, Boccaccio, Dago Inferno, and, forsooth, from everybody but himself. What it is to pore over the contents of ancient, mediaeval, and modern Hullabaloo; what it is to endure over and over again the same brilliant witticisms; and what it is to distort those humorous efforts for use in one's own class history, only the Historian, and those who have served in a similar capacity, can accurately imagine. To say that it is the work of a horse would not be putting it strong enough: nay, verily, it is the work of a Blondheim. But although the writer unfortunately is not gifted with the reading facility of Macaulay, who, according to Dr. Greene, once, while shaving, read four books of the Iliad in Greek, nevertheless, he has striven earnestly to make what he has read his own, and to fit it in becomingly with the history of the illustrious class of 1906.

By eleven o'clock on the morning of Monday, October 5th, 1903, the great street battle, participated in alike by the students and the Dean of the Johns Hopkins University, had passed into history; and the straggling, but victorious band of warriors known as the class of 1906, to which the Historian shall, henceforth, refer in the first person plural,—had demonstrated the fact that we have come to stay. In the early part of November, in the inter-class football game and cane-rush, we had the courage to exhibit the magnanimous side of our character; and on Thursday evening, March 17th, 1904, came the opportunity for us to further display our wonderful versatility. Indeed, the varied events of that evening, the evening of the class banquet, would have done credit respectively to Cæsar, Chauncey Depew, and the veriest epicure of the days of Juvenal.

To tell of the deeds of our noble athletes, our skilled musicians, and our learned orators and litterateurs, would be but to rehearse what has been on the lips of all for the past year or more. In fact, the retiring disposition of the Historian prevents him from seeking to laud by his own humble pen that which needs no laudation. For it is in the daily walks of life; in the pleasant noon siestas of Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, when a loving "Mother" soothes the troubled brains of her foster children: here it is that the Historian finds himself more at ease.

We early became acquainted with the smiling preceptor of English and his toiling assistant, through whose combined efforts we learned imprimis the art of simulating a hearty laugh, and also how to use metaphors and similes. And then there were the Germanese twins, guaranteed never to get sick, under whose tutelage we acquired the knowledge that it is impossible either to write a perfect German exercise, or to translate the word "doch." Those of us who entered upon the Latin course were surprised to find presiding over it a very genial young man who took great pains to tell us what were the best "cribs" to be had. Indeed, with many other tales and details of our Freshman year could the Historian while away the passing hours; but "tempus fugit," also "facilis descensus Averno;" and Friday, June 17th, 1904, found us possessed of the once-hated title of "Junior," going about that iniquitous business called "hazing," as if we were old hands at it.

However, it was not until after the summer had passed that our work began in earnest. By Monday, October, 3rd, most of the incoming Freshmen had received slight tokens of our regard for them; but on that day the dignified Dean, so much pleased with the class fight of the previous year, ordered the cage to be opened up, that he might the more comfortably witness the contest from the gallery. As the Historian learned afterwards, the reverend gentleman at the last moment found it impossible to be present; but at any rate, the programme was carried out in every detail according to the ancient tradition existing at Hopkins; and Junior and Freshman were well satisfied.

The excellence of our men in the different fields of college activity, now became even more apparent than before. Hammond was chosen associate editor-in-chief of the News-Letter, Ruth leader of the Glee Club, and Hill captain of the Track Team. Subsequent events have demonstrated the wisdom of those who appointed them.

On December 2nd occurred the annual inter-class football game and cane-rush. In this double-header performance there was an even break, which should have engendered none but the best of feeling. On the contrary, several of the Freshmen, having placed a wrong interpretation upon our benevolent intentions toward them, exhibited a tendency to grow more and more obstreperous, until a culmination was reached in their attempting to obstruct the passage of a Junior along the public highway. Impudentes, impudentissimi! Suffice it to say, that the said Freshmen now see the error of their ways.

The Junior banquet was of course a "howling" success, due in no small degree to the lusty "Hurrays" of Webster. With that remarkable self-restraint and preservation of equilibrium for which the members of 1906 have become famous, no one fell out of the window, nor yet under the table; greatly to the wonder and admiration of the Seniors who were present.

And now, dear reader, the Historian, feeling that he must close, though all too soon, begs to announce to any who may be sufficiently interested, that the revised and completed text of this little sketch will be found in the next edition of the Hullabaloo. To those who find fault with the contents of the present edition, he can only say that, while it may not be "history," it is at all events "his (s)tory."

FRESHMAN CLASS.

History of Nineteen-Seven.

From the lowest depth there is a path to the loftiest height—Carlyle.

 SINCE truth is the highest excellence of history, I must not give to the world a record that would endure as a source of endless mirth for succeeding generations, by depicting the Class of Nineteen Hundred and Seven as we seem to be, nor may I even tell what we long to be; but the very nature of the subject forces me to disclose what we wish least to be discovered—what we are, for the deeds of our class mark the apotheosis of Freshman achievement.

As long as our deeds remain the secrets of our own hearts, we cherish them; when it becomes necessary to proclaim them to intelligent human beings, we consider them far short of what they ought to be.

After hearing our first lecture, which, by the way, was a lecture on morals and immorals, we proceeded in a body to the cage where we demonstrated our firm belief in the strenuous life, by the zeal with which we engaged in the class rush. We marched from the cage with the victor's steady tread, tho' with rent clothing and bleeding wounds. We organized early in the year, and chose for our president, Sir Walter Raleigh, who has displayed, not only fortitude and pluck upon the athletic field, but also, the most wonderful resourcefulness in the classic realms over which Doctor Barrett presides.

Our football team gloriously defeated the Junior eleven in the annual football game (score, seventeen to five), and three of our men, Iglehart, Eichelberger and George Stewart, distinguished alike for their skill and grit, were elected to the 'Varsity team. The annual cane-rush was robbed of much of the spectacular, though not of interest, by restriction to fifteen men on either side. Though our men made an heroic struggle, the cane was lost to us; but "our reward is in the race we run, not in the prize." Our achievements on the athletic field are an interesting part of our history, but not by any means the most interesting.

The conduct of the members of our class, so far as I have been able to learn from observation and research has always been gentlemanly and respectful to our professors and superiors (Juniors), and our bearing toward each other has been characterized by such kindness that a warm fellowship is to-day our boast. Class spirit is deeply rooted in every member, and as a result of its steady growth and the development of a strong sentiment for the University, the boys of Nineteen Hundred and Seven may be relied upon to endeavor always to advance the honor of Johns Hopkins. This may seem a preposterous assertion from Freshmen, but remember, gentle reader, we shall not always be Freshmen, and with the glowing purpose early fixed in our hearts, our class bids fair to earn its due share of respect and honor, and this in turn will be reflected upon the institution that nurtured us.

With many excellent athletes, a due proportion of orators, and an unusually large number hungering and thirsting—after knowledge (?), it would seem that our class has all the elements so well mixed that we shall consider it an insult if more is not expected from us in athletics, in scholarship, and in college spirit, than from any class which has preceded us. From the Seniors we have heard the call to honor and obeyed it; though the honor system exists not by official decree, but by the spirit and will of the students, we gladly accept the responsibility of upholding it and shall in our turn hand it down unimpaired to those who may succeed us.

Though we have been in college but nine short months, we have not only ceased to lose ourselves but really begin to feel at home. It is to be regretted that space does not permit the enumeration of all our noble achievements, nor even does it allow me to trace our rapid progress from our introduction into college to the present time, but it is necessary to say that we have conducted ourselves moderately in victory and heroically in defeat.

We are proud that our class is the largest that has ever entered Johns Hopkins, but it is not for our numbers that we wish to be remembered, nor for our deeds, hereby made immortal, but that, for which we desire most not to be forgotten is after all our only claim to greatness—we aspire.

It remains for me to touch upon an event which cast a shadow over the beginning of our pathway—the death of Marshall Chew,

The economy of heaven is dark,
And wisest clerks have missed the mark,
Why human buds like this should fall.—Charles Lamb.

The Young Men's Christian Association at Hopkins is one of seventeen hundred Christian student societies included in the national and international Christian student movements of America, Europe, Asia, Australasia and Africa. The total membership of all these bodies numbers about one-hundred thousand students and professors. Each separate organization has the aim common to all—that of promoting the religious life of the institution in which it is, and of leading the students of the present generation into active work in the Christian Church.

The Association at Hopkins has endeavored, during the present year, to carry out these aims as modified by the local needs, and in a manner befitting a member of an organization so extensive and powerful for good. Its achievements cannot best be related by any of its officers; nor by the actively interested member; nor yet by the critic who has no time to take part in the work. Its worth should rather be estimated according to the amount of proper service it is rendering to the student body, by means secular and religious.

There have been few innovations this year. The publication of a new handbook, the fall conference of workers, the opening reception, the Bible and mission study classes, the inter-state Bible Study Institute, the annual Spring reunion of members (this year celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the Association's organization), the morning prayer services, and the Tuesday afternoon meetings—these with incidental conferences and occasional addresses, have marked the activity of the present season.

As in previous years, the opportunity to share in the work has not been recognized by all the members. Those who do take an active part throughout the year secure a training that is most beneficial. For twenty years, the Association at Hopkins has been training men for Christian leadership. During most of that time (since 1890), Levering Hall has stood as the silent witness of an organized influence for good. In these two decades, the Association has done much toward conserving the religious life of the University. There is still room for more aggressive work, and many places for additional workers.

TAKING A GRADUATE COURSE AT THE SUMMER SCHOOL.

Musical Clubs.

THE year 1904-05 has turned out to be one of the best the clubs have ever had. It is customary every year to make a statement such as this, but the consensus of opinion is that every one has had a very enjoyable time.

Some great changes took place in the status of the three clubs. The Glee Club forged ahead remarkably under its new instructor, and improved so that it ended by singing a selection from Mendelssohn. The Mandolin Club came a close second and won great applause for some of its catchy two-steps which kept the feet moving in a lively manner. The Banjo Club, which, at the beginning of the year, was the butt of many jokes, came out later with flying colors.

If the object of the Clubs were asked, the answer this year would be, "to have a good time." The Christmas trip is an excellent illustration. The masked ball at Charlestown furnished intense amusement to the inmates of the select boarding-school as well as to men who participated. The food here was excellent and was enjoyed greatly, especially the jam, a portion of which was unfortunately spilled on the floor of Miss Touchard's room. The "pig's feet" at Winchester will never be forgotten. At Frederick a certain gentleman (?) of suggestive name furnished considerable amusement.

At National Park Seminary, after being almost eaten up by the girls, ten of whom were detailed to each man, a brief concert was given; then everyone repaired to the sorority houses. After a short half hour of love-making (?), a run was made to the station to catch the train, which arrived there an hour and twenty-nine minutes later.

With the concert at Lehmann's Hall ended a season which was full of fun and good-fellowship, and which will be long remembered by every one.

ALIA TEMPORA.

When Eve displayed the tempting fruit,
And Adam looked and found it nice,
Nor tried her logic to refute,
And lost his pass to Paradise;
Thus in the days when time began,
'Twas food that caused the fall of man.

Now, when from upper regions, we
Into post-prandial darkness pass,
It is not as it was when the
First feast was spread on Eden's grass;
In our day 'tis not food at all,
But drinks, that make us prone to fall.

The Year With the Debating Team.

AT the opening of the present college year, a committee for inter-collegiate debates was organized. This committee was composed of three Seniors and two Juniors, appointed by the presidents of the respective classes. This committee perfected the arrangements for the debate with Brown, and upon it the undergraduate body conferred full powers to grant the debating "H." This "H" will be worn as a pin, and not, as has been facetiously suggested, painted upon a full-dress shirt.

The preparation for the inter-collegiate debate was made in the usual way, by means of the inter-class debate. The effectiveness of this method can scarcely be disputed. Individual aims are left behind in the realization that victory goes, not to the best prepared individual, but to the best equipped team. Thus the subject is thoroughly studied, and the inter-class debate demonstrates the weakness of presentation, and suggests the strongest possible outline.

The truth of this is evident from the experience of this year, when, for the second time, Hopkins demonstrated its superiority in debate, by its victory over Brown. Such an achievement is indeed very creditable, when due consideration is given to the fact that Hopkins, with its one hundred and fifty undergraduates, has taken part in but four inter-collegiate debates, whereas its Northern rival is regarded as one of the strongest debating teams in New England; and Brown selects its team from a body of over eight hundred strong.

The interest in debating, awakened by our victory last year, is increasing, as indeed it should; there should be just as much of a united effort on our part to win in debate as to win on the lacrosse field; for a victory in debate reflects as much credit upon our undergraduate body as does an athletic victory.

The team that won from Brown on April 8th, was composed of the following men: Debaters—L. Edwin Goldman, '05, Chairman; Joseph T. Singewald, Jr., '06; Thomas DeC. Ruth, '06; Ormond W. Hammond, Jr., '06, Secretary.

Question: "The economic and political interests of the United States demand the permanent retention of the Philippine Islands."

Affirmative, Brown University. Negative, Johns Hopkins University.

The Hullabaloo Club of the Johns Hopkins University was founded by the Class of Nineteen Hundred and Three, in order to promote good fellowship among its members. In the three years of its existence, the Club has well fulfilled the purposes of its founders, by bringing together the members of the Senior Class more intimately, and by inspiring them with a feeling of unity and good-fellowship. This year the Club held several smokers, the first of them at the rooms of the Johns Hopkins Club. These gatherings were decidedly successful and showed that "class spirit" and "college spirit" are really very much alive among us, and only seek such occasions as these to manifest themselves.

La Dernier Classe.

This morning I was late to the Senate. At first, fearing that I might be called upon, I had thought seriously of cutting.

I entered the room as quietly as possible, in order not to break the almost unbroken silence—the chief characteristic, by the way, of the assembly. Apparently I was expected, for a smile of relief flitted across Mr. French's face as he pleadingly asked me to "please start the debate. You are the only speaker present."

Here a malicious-looking individual, sitting with his feet propped up on the desk at the far end of the room, jumped to his feet, and, before I could think up an excuse, announced the subject for debate.

Suddenly, a sound like the rolling down stairs of a cart-load of cobblestones relieved me from an embarrassing situation. The door was burst open with a crash, and a dignified Senator bounded half way across the room, finally settling into the first chair he hit.

Scarcely had the dust settled, when there was heard another load of cobblestones, accompanied by laughter, descending the stairs.

"Aha!" says Mr. French, when the second cloud of dust had settled, "here we have Mr. Hull and Mr. Bowie, who are slated for the negative side. Mr. ——— may begin; and just remember that the Senate will count on your averages this year."

Overjoyed at this last remark, I scratched my head, and started the ball rolling by a few preliminary remarks on the Negro Question, the Panama Canal, and on anything that came into my head.

Suddenly, Senator Hackett, Mr. Goldman, and Mr. Bernstein, jumped up, shouting that I was "begging the question." Amidst their contentions as to who had the floor, I hid behind the desk. Meanwhile, the Dean was busy taking notes.

Judging by the noise, as it came to me, safely screened behind the desk, there was considerable excitement. Mr. Miller, brushing the hair off his nose, berated Mr. Hackett for not addressing the Chair. Mr. Eiseman was in the middle of the room, rolling his eyes around like a negro minstrel. Mr. Goodenow jumped up at this instant, to put his first, last, and only motion: "That Senator Hackett be allowed the price of a haircut out of the class treasury." Recognizing that the motion dealt with a long-needed improvement, it was passed with cheers by the public-spirited Senators.

In the midst of this uproar, I heard a well-known voice speaking. It was the Dean, who had come to the last class. With his usual fire and vigor he plunged straight into his subject. "I will not reprimand you, gentlemen, I realize as well as you do that this class is something of a delusion, but every year, when I try to put a stop to it, 'Tommy' Ball tells me that it is in the catalogue, and must be continued. But this year things have gone too far. Of course you know this course was started to keep Lee from talking the faculty to death, but since he has sunk into oblivion, I really see no use in keeping it up. I really think I have seen several members of this body in the library and other questionable places, when they should more properly have been with Mr. French. This is too much; there ought to be some way of remedying this, and I am going to let the decision rest with you, whether you are going to let the faculty make fools of you here twice a month, or whether you will come to my lectures on historic fossils instead."

At this suggestion there were wild shouts of approval, and the Dean received several hearty slaps on the back, and congratulations on his fiery eloquence. Here the noon bell rings, and somebody starts a requiem which somehow seems to end in "Five, Five, Naughty-Five." Finding himself too full for utterance, Mr. French goes to a blackboard and writes in as large letters as he is able, "Laus Deo," then, overcome with joy, he simply kicks his heels in sign of dismissal.

The General Athletic Association.

 THIS year the General Athletic Association has made a wide departure from its policy in previous years. All the more important athletic teams have been recognized, and the spirit, which previously seemed to exist only in the undergraduate department, has spread itself into every department of the University. The graduate men, who, everywhere, are usually stigmatized as "grinds," have not only furnished some good men for the various teams, but what is almost of equal importance, have been regular attendants at the games. The distance from the University to the Medical School, which has been considered impassible, has been bridged by this new spirit, so that Hopkins now seems to be entering upon the most glorious period of her athletic career—a period indeed appropriate, for in a short time we expect to have the Homewood athletic field.

Among the old sports taken up this year by new teams are football, basketball and baseball. The football team was scored on only once during the entire season, and probably holds the championship of the State. The basketball five did excellent work considering the drawbacks. The baseball team has illustrated the fact that Hopkins is about to regain her former high position in collegiate baseball. The lacrosse team lost the championship last year, and for this reason has played all the harder this year. The track team is equally as promising. So the "Renaissance in Athletics" at old Hopkins seems to have come to stay.

LACROSSE SEASON OF 1904.

WITH a loss of five men, four of them from the defense, we began to prepare for the season of 1904. Practice began in the Cage early, and the task of developing the "green goods" on hand was undertaken by the coaches and our new Director of the Gymnasium, Dr. C. R. MacInnes. From the attack we had nothing to fear; competent judges declared it the fastest and most evenly balanced we have ever had. This enabled the defense to get unusually good experience, and put it in shape to keep down our opponents' score. Our schedule was so arranged that the championship games came at the end of the season when we were in first-class condition.

On April 2d, Columbia came down for her first game. The cold weather and Maryland Oval were responsible for a small crowd, but we were encouraged by those present to win, seven to one. The next Saturday we went out to play the Mount Washington Club on their own grounds. Their team, composed of former Hopkins and Swarthmore men and others, with and without previous experience, put up a good up-hill fight. The ground was wet and slippery, but we won by eleven to one. Harvard was the attraction we offered for April 18th. They came smilingly confident but took their defeat more gracefully than they did two years ago. After a good deal of uncertainty, Cornell appeared on April 23d. The team was crippled from a trip South, and from inability to practice on account of unseasonable snow. The score of nine to three was, under the circumstances, encouraging for them.

We were then ready for our championship season which began at Hoboken on April 30th. Never shall we forget the pouring rain that dampened our bodies, though not our spirits. The field was choice, more of a lake with a few islands in unavailable places. Though Stevens made repeated shots at goal, they were unable to score and we administered the first shut-out of the season.

The next week we went to South Bethlehem to meet Lehigh. This was the best game we had had up to that time, and the score, thirteen to three, by no means conveys a correct idea of the character of the playing. Our "new" defense was doing the work "a la Hopkins," and no mistake.

Swarthmore came down the next Saturday. Everyone knew how evenly matched we were, and expected a close, exciting contest. The largest crowd of the season gathered at Maryland Oval. At the same time black clouds gathered between us and heaven.

The playing was fast from the start, Swarthmore scoring first. It was not long before the ball, worked into Swarthmore territory, was made to score one for the Black and Blue. Back and forth it then went, both teams showing pretty work, which would have been even more spectacular had not a downpour of rain interfered. We scored again, then they took two more. A few minutes before the close of the first half, our third and last goal was made. Lively scrapping and rough work characterized the game in which we took the defensive part.

The intermission worked wonders with our men; they started off with a rush. Then our captain was disqualified by the referee upon a questionable foul. When two teams are as evenly matched as we were, and one side is given such an advantage as Swarthmore was, only one result can follow. The defense—one man short—put up a great game. In fact the second half was the prettiest example of an up-hill fight we ever saw. Swarthmore, with twelve men, was only able to score four times on the Hopkins eleven. We lost the championship, but the thousands of spectators who stood in a drenching rain through the entire game will never forget the game we played.

Two games during the season were played with the University of Virginia; one in Baltimore, and one in Charlottesville. It was their first season, and they showed up better than one could have expected.

As a fitting climax to our season, a game was arranged with Toronto. In playing graduate men, our team adopted a policy the Canadians have pursued; this naturally made a much more interesting game. We seemed destined to play in the wet, for never did rain fall so hard and so incessantly; notwithstanding, we pulled out a victory by a score of nine to six. It was a great game, and one of which we are proud. And thus ended the season, successful in every way, with the only regret that our Trophy Room is one banner shy.

TRACK

1903-1904.

The season of 1903-04 was most successful, though no one would have prophesied so at its beginning. Nearly every man on the team was "green," as all of the prominent men had either graduated or left the University.

The team was entered in six sets of games during the season and came out of all of them with flying colors. The first blood was drawn at the Fifth Regiment games on December 5th, when Hopkins secured six firsts, a second, and two thirds, nearly double the number of points secured by any other organization. Of these points, more than half were secured by Freshmen.

The next games entered were at Georgetown, on February 22d. We finished second in the relay, and got all four places in the mile, besides first in the shot and third in the quarter.

Our own Indoor Games, which had been postponed on account of the fire, were held on March 13th. These games were scratch, and were entered by the best men in Maryland and the surrounding territory. Nevertheless, Johns Hopkins secured more points than any two of the other organizations. Five firsts, and nearly all the seconds and thirds were secured. The most important feature of the meet, however, was the success of the relay team in defeating Georgetown Law, who had won from us at Georgetown. Our men won easily from the identical team that later beat nearly all the strong college teams of the Middle West.

After such a series of victories, our sole defeat of the year was felt all the more strongly. This was in the Relay Races at Pennsylvania, when Bucknell won from us. Our team managed to finish second, but the disappointment of losing first place was keenly felt nevertheless. Emig, at these games, managed to vault six inches better than the former State record held by himself. His jump was 10 feet 9 inches. At the Dual-Meet with Virginia, which came on May 21st, he did even better, and the week later, cleared an extra foot and placed the record at 11 feet $\frac{1}{4}$ inch. At Charlottesville, we defeated Virginia by sixty points to thirty-six, thereby adding another banner to the Trophy-Room.

There were several sensational features to the year's work. The more important of these was the work of Hill at Virginia. He won five first places, and broke two State records. His jump of 23 feet $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches in the Broad was only surpassed twice during the year, and if he could have repeated it the following week at the Intercollegiate, he would have gained second place. Unfortunately, he was not in condition. The other remarkable performance was that of Griffith, who went through the year with an unbroken series of first places in the mile, although matched several times against the best men in the country. He has the honor of having won first place in the mile for six successive times; and the series was only broken at last because of unfair handicapping.

The work of every man on the team was excellent, and the year was most successful.

FOOTBALL TEAM.

Football Season of 1904.

WHEN the first of October, 1904, rolled around, and once more the University opened, the prospects for a "Varsity" football team were very dull, and for a long time it seemed as if, for the second time, Hopkins would not be represented on the gridiron.

Inasmuch as the University was not represented on the field in the Fall of 1903, there was absolutely no nucleus to fall back on, and it seemed as if the interest of both the student body and of the faculty had completely died out. It was late in October when Mr. Stuart Janney, Captain of the 'Varsity Team in 1895, spoke before a mass meeting of the undergraduates, and by his forcible manner instilled into all who heard him that spirit of unceasing plodding which produced such a team as will always be of the greatest credit to the name of Johns Hopkins. At this meeting Captain Pearre and Manager Straughn were elected.

As yet the team was placed under the most adverse circumstances. In the belief that it was impossible to form a team of the proper caliber, the Athletic Association failed to recognize the movement of the undergraduates. Thus without material, recognition, money, grounds, a schedule, or a coach, the team was at first projected, which, however, soon afterwards took upon itself a substantial character.

A careful survey of the Medical School and the Graduate Departments brought forth such results as were beyond our greatest expectations. And it was largely due to the ability, the enthusiasm, and loyalty of these men that the University was able to put on the gridiron one of the best teams, if not the best, in its history. Being assured of the hearty co-operation of these men, the recognition of the Athletic Association was soon forthcoming, and with it came the many other important factors of which the team was in need. Chief among these was Coach Iseman, formerly half-back on Lafayette, whose constant work and resourcefulness did wonders in putting the team into shape. The "scrub" team, which was composed mostly of undergraduates, could always be relied upon, and much of the credit the 'Varsity gained is due to this body of loyal students.

With only one day of practice, the season opened with a game with St. Johns College at Annapolis, who, by this time, had their team well in hand. Nevertheless, throughout the first half and the better part of the second, the game was decidedly in our favor, and it was only in the last few minutes of play that St. Johns crossed our line for a touchdown. Then the goal was kicked, thus making the score six to five.

The next game with Mt. Saint Mary's College resulted in a complete walk-over, as a score of 35-0 was easily rolled up against them in the first and only half. The following two games, the one with Western Maryland College, and the other with George Washington University (Columbian University), did much to beat the team into shape for the larger and much more important games which followed.

On November 12th Johns Hopkins was pitted against the strong Mount Washington Club, in one of the most exciting and hotly contested games of the season, and defeated them by the score of 6-0. From the very start Hopkins set such a terrific pace that Mt. Washington did not succeed in holding them for downs until within the thirty-yard line. This fast pace was kept up by Hopkins throughout the game, and it was largely due to this and to the excellent condition of the team that they won. Both on the offensive and the defensive, Hopkins developed unexpected strength, and only twice did Mt. Washington make the allotted five yards on the first down. Twice in the first half, Hopkins, by repeated plunges through the Club's line for five and eight yards, carried the ball down the field to Mt. Washington's fifteen-yard line, and then lost it on a fumble. In the middle of the second half Hopkins carried the ball over the line for the only touchdown of the game, later kicking the goal. A few minutes afterwards the game was stopped on account of darkness, with Hopkins on Mt. Washington's fifteen-yard line and three minutes to play.

On the following Saturday we played University of Maryland, who in 1902 had beaten us by 6-0. This game, although played with the utmost pluck by the Maryland men, was easier than Hopkins had dared to hope, and resulted in a victory of the score 23-0.

With five of the 'Varsity men absent, the last game of the season, on Thanksgiving Day, was played against Randolph-Macon College. Before a large and enthusiastic crowd, Hopkins won the game by the score 5-0, and ended the season with the record of having had its goal line crossed but once, a record of which any team could well be proud.

BASEBALL

Baseball Team 1904.

AFTER years of trials and tribulations the national sport has again been adopted into the family of athletics at the University. For several seasons there have been more or less spasmodic efforts on the part of some of the students to organize a nine, but it was not until last season that a team worthy of the name of Hopkins was put in the field by these individual promoters. With unabated energy, Mr. T. Poole Maynard, the Manager, hustled about and gathered up material, which, aided by the coaching of Mr. Adkins, of the Medical School, developed into a fairly good team. All of the games, through necessity, were played away from home, and a majority of the contests were won.

However, the great importance of this embryo squad—which, by the way, numbered some of the best amateur ball players in the country—was that it created an enthusiasm among the students such as, unfortunately, rarely pervades the sacred precincts of the cage. So, when the time came this season for a team, Manager Griswold experienced no difficulty in getting out twenty-five men, principally "Meds," whom Coach Adkins considers as good players as are found at most of the more prominent institutions. An ambitious and attractive schedule has been arranged, but it is confidently believed that the 'Varsity is fully capable to take care of itself, and will do credit to the trust placed in it by the Athletic Association.

BASKETBALL TEAM.

THIS year marked our entry into a new field of sport—basketball—and the results have been a surprise to the student-body. Captain Holmes introduced the game, while Straughn managed the financial features of the undertaking.

The Athletic Association did not recognize the team, so the fact that it made its way practically without debt is an indication of the interest shown by the public.

About twenty-five men came out for the team, many of them veteran players, who had learned the game on leading college and university teams. The squad represented every department of the University—medical, undergraduates, and graduates. Beginning in December, regular practice was held on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. When the scrub had developed swift play, the 'Varsity five were forced to their best efforts. Prominent in the list of candidates for the team were Houghton, a former captain of Ohio State; Helmholtz, a captain of Wisconsin; McClure, last year's captain at Ohio State; Strobhar, a star from Williston Seminary; Holmes, captain of the Dixons of New Orleans; Blanck, formerly of West Branch Y. M. C. A.; Straus, of the West Branch; Taylor, of Swarthmore; Boyd of Savannah; Orchard, captain of Fargo, South Dakota; Cole, Branham, and other fast players.

At the beginning of the season, the 'Varsity five included Helmholtz, centre; Holmes and McClure, forwards; and Strobhar and Houghton, guards. Later the line-up was Holmes, centre; Boyd and McClure, forwards; and Blanck and Strobhar, guards.

A series of three games was played with University of Maryland, of which we won the first in an exciting contest, 20-8. Maryland finally took the series. The game with Dickinson was the best of the season. We won 26-23, in a fierce fight that kept the gallery in a wave of applause. The University of Pennsylvania came down for our scalps and took them, as was to be expected from her record. But Hopkins, showing against such a first-class team was very creditable.

An encouraging feature of the season was the large number of people that attended the games. Considering the fact that this was the first year of basket-ball at the University, the team can congratulate themselves on making a first-class record which, it is to be hoped, will be continued next year.

The second year of the re-organization of the Hopkins Chess Club has been marked with gratifying success. The plans decided upon last year have been carried out, and several new features introduced this season. While the membership has not been as large as might be expected, nevertheless, the interest manifested by the active members has made possible the present success of the Club, and gives promise of even greater development in the future.

Early in the season, the Directors began arrangements for a series of matches with other colleges. A game with Washington University, St. Louis, was soon started, and, at present, Hopkins has the advantage in position, and hopes for a victory. Shortly afterward, two games were begun with the University of Pennsylvania. In this match, just ended, Hopkins has won one game and drawn the other. In both matches, the arrangements provided for an active chess team, any member of the Club being privileged to advise. The Hopkins team for both matches was composed of Messrs. Landry, Bernstein and Dargan. Dr. MacInnes has given valuable assistance.

In addition to the correspondence games, the annual tournament was begun in January, with ten entrants. The latest standing of the first five members is as follows:

Landry959
MacInnes917
Bernstein875
Bransky750
Addison500
Hammond500

Among the interesting features of the year have been several "chess evenings." On these occasions, simultaneous games or "knockout tournaments" were played.

The prospects of the Chess Club are brighter than for many years; but its success is dependent on the support of those interested in the game. Every student who plays the game should be a member of the Club. No one should hesitate to join, because he does not yet know the game, as the older members will always be glad to give instruction to those wishing to learn. The Directors make an earnest appeal for increased co-operation and support. "Come out and play."

THE EXODUS,
OR MOVING DAY TO HOMEWOOD.

Being a truthful account of what took place on that eventful day.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

- IRAREM, Chief of the Tribe of Johnny Hops.
BALLY TOM, His Steward, a man whose vocabulary is limited to monosyllables.
"MOTHER" GREENE, A Right "Good Fellow," but badly veneered with Harvard polish, somewhat rubbed in places.
GRIFDEAN, Medicine Man, who talks in a monotone, and can't be bluffed.
"JOE", A man with a mouthful of mud.
EX. AMOEBA, Professor of bugs and things.
SWARZROCKS, Somewhat rocky, but strenuously opposed to beer.
SIC. M. WOOD, Dutch and irascible.
B. J. V., Another man with a grunt.
BELLOW, A man with a snicker and borrowed thoughts.
VINCENNES, A man who talks in his sleep, and sleeps in his talks.
RUNNOFF, Professor of stinks and stains.
BILL STEWART, Major Domo, and man afraid of his wife.

MRS. BILL, STUDENTS, ETC.

ACT I.

The scenes are laid in the country of Ballymore, in which the Johnny Hops are an alien tribe, pursuing the shade of truth. Finding that the space now occupied by the tribe is inadequate for their purposes, the citizens of Ballymore have provided a new dwelling place for them at "Homewood." The Johnny Hops are making plans for their exodus to the promised land.

SCENE 1.

(Office of Irarem.)

IRAREM, (soliloquizing):

The money's got, the buildings built,—all's well;
And everything is ready for our start.
We shall to Homewood with the noonday bell;
And now, at last, shall we from here depart.

Soon will McCoy Hall from our sight be gone,
And all these theatres which tempt our youth.
No longer by the "Diamond" they'll be torn
From deep research in the pure well of truth.

The boasts of gallantry, the eyes that lower,
And all the beauties of the High School maids,
No more shall cause our boys in the labs. to glower
There in that country of the cool green shades.

(He rings.)

The applause of future Houses or the Senate,
The howling of Freshmen taught to declaim,
No longer shall I hear their vain debate,
I'll have my office separate from the——

(Bally Tom enters.)

IRAREM: The buildings at "Homewood" are completed; is everything ready?

BALLY TOM: Yes. (Hurriedly): No.

IRAREM: Make haste to notify the tribe that, before another sun has set, they must be on the way to "Homewood." Tell them to meet me here, immediately.

BALLY TOM: Hu. (Exit.)

SCENE 2.

(Bally Tom has notified the tribe, many of whom have already assembled in Irarem's office. Enter Grifdean.)

GRIFDEAN: By the shades of Ladd, Spencer, Spinach, and Haeckel, truth is a wonderful thing! In pursuit of it we came here, and still in pursuit we go hence. Gentlemen, Veritas in Vino—no, no, Veritas Vos Liberabit. How oft have I seen a lad in search of truth! Eagerness and doubt characterize the seeker——

EX. AMOEBA, (sotto voce): Now I know why those fellows are so eager at half-past four.

GRIFDEAN: . . . You see them, their faces flushed, their whole appearance betokening—what shall I say?

RUNNOFF: Intoxication.

GRIFDEAN: That's it. Intoxicated with the new learning! Their brains are on fire—— (Enter Mother Greene with a jaunty air, trousers at high water mark, and necktie under one ear.)

MOTHER GREENE: It is me. My toys, my cute little toys, my Shakespearean toys, with which I play so cutely, as I tell bughouse stories to tired Juniors between the unearthly hours of five and six P. M. Hast thou seen them?" (Opens a large handkerchief and dumps out a varied assortment of busts of Wonderful Will, and proceeds to tell Grifdean all about them. Grifdean shows signs of going to sleep.) (Enter "Joe.")

"JOE": Do we mee-ee-ee-t-t-t he-ere?

GRIFDEAN: According to Aristotle, and syllogistically speaking, we do.

"JOE": No-non-sen-sen-ce, I ca-ca-can't cat-catch th-th-e drif-fitz--(chug-gr-rr)-drif-t-t of suc-suc-ch sil-l-ly speak-kin-ing.

GRIFDEAN, (looking sidewise at him): What ails the man? He talks as if he had been to the Senior banquet.

"JOE": I did-did-n't get-t-t all th-th-the ap-ap-a-ratus. As I came in one do-o-or th-th-the fellows all ran o-o-out at th-the others.

GRIFDEAN: Talks like a force-pump, and reasons like a skyology more recent than twenty years; for you know I never could understand the modern views upon Psychology. (Folds his hands, applauds with his feet and chuckles.) (Enter Bellow and Vincennes.)

BELLOW: He—He—I think—I believe—yes, (casts a side glance at the notes which he has in his hand). It was in 1868, at about one hour and ten minutes after supper time, that the Japanese bloodless revolution began. I—

A VOICE: Indigestion?

BELLOW: I—ah—ah—yes, (gets another look at his notes), the Samurai arose as one man. The war was divided into fifty-one stages. First, the Mikado lit his cigar; second, the Shogun blew it out—the other forty stages are unimpor—

VINCENNES: The commands—ah—ah—reached me as I—ah was giving an—ah—illustrated lecture upon—ah—church architecture. Not that—ah—I know anything about the—ah—subject, but it fills in the—ah—time, you know. Now would you believe it, when the—ah—curtains were raised—ah—the class was asleep.

GRIFDEAN: Quiet conceivable, quite. Why, I have had the same thing occur in my lecture room, and without cutting off the light. (Refers to a book). Remarkable phenomena; now Ladd says that sleep can only be induced by— (Enter Swarzrocks.)

SWARZROCKS, (Unctuously): Excuse me gentlemen, behold my exquisitely wonderfully, magnificently, beautiful specimens. From Freiberg, gentlemen, from Freiberg. Exquisite, remarkable, grand, lovely, perfect, beautiful crystals from Ducktown—I meant Freiberg, gentlemen. (Exhibits a few pieces of colored glass. Bellow becomes interested in a bottle, containing a red liquid, which Swarzrocks carries. Swarzrocks notices the questioning glance, and replies): Mineral water, gentlemen, a rare specimen, and most beautifully colored. Mineral water, gentlemen is the proper drink for men, especially if colored. Some people drink beer, but if I had my way there wouldn't be any beer. (Audible gasps.) Beer is the limit.

BELLOW: He must be chronically broke.

VINCENNES: How lucky for this tired old world, that Swarzrocks isn't a combination of political boss and state's attorney, for there'd be so many water-wagons that the streets would look like Baltimore after a thaw.

RUNNOFF: I quite agree with Swarzrocks.

CHORUS, (after a horse laugh): Good joke.

EX. AMOEBA: Back off Swarzrocks, and get a fresh start. Just take a look at this specimen of Archaeopteryx Loligo Raja Rhinoceros, (exhibits some animals in a bottle), and get your first (?) acquaintance with a jim jam. (Continues while the rest recover from the verbal shock): I have another fine specimen of the genus Idear and What-not— (Enter B. J. V.)

RUNNOFF: Hello, B. J. V.!

B. J. V.: Hi!

CHORUS: Hello, B. J. V.

B. J. V.: Hi! Hi!

(Enter Irarem.)

IRAREM: We are all here? Then we will begin the exodus, but I fear the populace has become so excited that we may need protection.

RUNNOFF: I have it. Put Bill Stewart in front with a big chlorine generator. Between that and his face we need have no fear.

IRAREM: It shall be done.

(The procession starts to the tune of "God Save William and Mary," played by Mrs. Bill on a broken test tube. Bill Stewart leads with a big yellow chlorine generator; the others follow in a line. Mother Greene with a handkerchief full of busts and pictures of the Canterbury pilgrims, under her arms; Swarzrocks with his bottle and minerals; Vincennes half asleep; Bellow tugging away at a big book labeled, "Lectures I Give But Never Write"; Grijdean, dignified, but gesticulating with his feet, stopping at times to rub one leg against the other; Irarem looking most serenely undisturbed; "Joe" maltreating the atmosphere, and Ex. Amoeba loaded with bottles, riding an alligator, and shedding crocodile tears. As they pass off to the right, workmen make a break for the buildings, and the curtain drops to the sound of falling bricks.)

ACT II.

(The procession is seen on Charles Street Avenue. Students are standing about. A big woman with a bigger club is seen behind a tree.)

FIRST STUDENT: What is the pow-wow?

SECOND STUDENT: The Johnny Hops are moving to Homewood.

FIRST STUDENT: Who is the woman behind the tree? What is she waiting for?

SECOND STUDENT: That is Mrs. Bill, and she is waiting for William the Conqueror.

FIRST STUDENT: Will she hit anyone with that stick?

SECOND STUDENT: She will; just watch.

(Procession comes nearer.)

MOTHER GREENE: How much this resembles the Canterbury pilgrims! Do let's tell fairy tales. I'll be first. I'll tell a very funny story, very humorous, indeed.

VOICES: Cut it out. (The "Mother" is squelched under the force of public opinion and the articles which come her way.)

GRIFDEAN, (slips up and begins): Why, gentlemen, I knew a man eighty years old— (More advice and more articles.)

MRS. BILL, (steps out into the road): Didn't I tell you to get up that acid to-day. (Swats Bill on the solar-plexus with the "big stick." Bill collapses, and the generator is broken. Those in front are nearly overcome by the fumes; Swarzrocks and Runnoff run up.)

SWARZROCKS: Is it beer? Is it beer? gentlemen, is it beer?

RUNNOFF: What the devil is all this stink? Some of you fellows ought to be careful with these things, they're dangerous. (Proceeds to extricate Bill and restore order.)

SCENE 2.

(The entrance to the grounds at "Homewood" is shown. The students are celebrating the occasion in the approved style. A keg labelled "Pierian (Extra Dry)" stands on blocks. Its saffron contents are running out into wide-open mugs.)

FIRST STUDENT: Here's to the Hullabaloo Club!" (All drink.)

SECOND STUDENT: Here's to the Johnny Hops!" (All drink.)

FIRST STUDENT: Here they come, boys, let's give them a royal welcome. (Points to where the procession is entering the grounds.)

STUDENTS: Three cheers for the Johnny Hops, and Anheuser-Busch! (At the sight of the saffron liquid disappearing down the wide-open mugs, the procession becomes unwieldy, and a general charge is made in that direction.)

(Bill Stewart is groggy and has to be served; B. J. V. has already made connections with the keg, and is lost to the world; Runnoff is with difficulty prevented from appropriating it.)

SWARZROCKS, (keeping away with difficulty): Gentlemen, is it beer? Is it beer?

RUNNOFF: No, Swartzzy, it is a very fine specimen of colored mineral water; don't be backward.

SWARTZROCKS, (bucks centre for the keg): Gentlemen, my share.

(As it is Wood's usual way to ignore anything and everybody he passes, he does not stop at the refreshments, but moves on in a reluctant manner.)

WOOD: As I was saying, the proper way to pronounce ziehen is—

A VOICE: Sic him!

WOOD: Who said sic him? If I could catch the individual who said sic him to me, Heinrich der Grosse Wood, I'd—fill him with beer, and make him join the Y. M. C. A. (Makes a rush for the group of students, but doesn't get past the keg.)

(The remainder of the Johnny Hops are gamboling about the lawns and the Busch, or have gone to pick out recuperating spots in the various buildings.)

(The act closes with the students carrying the aphasic Johnny Hops into the Y. M. C. A.)

EXTRACT FROM MINUTES OF MEETING OF FEBRUARY TWENTY-NINTH.

The meeting was called to order by its temporary chairman, Tommy Ball, and proceeded at once to the election of officers. Dr. Ballagh immediately announced his candidacy for President, and was nominated by himself. The nomination was seconded, after a rather painful pause, by Dr. Ballagh, who immediately moved that the nominations be closed. Dr. Barnett, rising with difficulty to a point of order, requested the Sergeant-at-Arms, Brooks, to forcibly eject Dr. Ballagh on the grounds of introducing "ve'y, ve'y scan'less pol'tics." The further election of officers was postponed. The meeting then proceeded to the election of new members. Dr. Joseph S. Ames was nominated, but rejected on account of his red necktie. He was heard po-po-pro-t-testing through the door. Dr. Haupt's name was also rejected as it was found by actual measurement by Dr Whitehead that his mustache ends rose .02134 cm. higher than the German Emperor's. The following undergraduate members were present:

AN ECHO OF THE DOC. BLISS ROBBERY.

Doc. Bliss Disappears From The Johns Hopkins—Student Loses A Large Sum Of Money.

BALTIMORE, May 25.—J. Stewart Hill, a member of the junior class at Hopkins, lost a large sum of money yesterday at the University postoffice. Mr. Hill had just been collecting class-dues, and had gone to the postoffice to buy some stamps. He laid the bag in which he was carrying the money on the floor. When he had finished buying the stamps, and turned to pick up the bag he found it was gone. Mr. Hill ran to the door just in time to see Doc. Bliss disappearing around the corner. He gave chase but was unable to catch the daring robber. The police have been put on the case.

A SAD BUT QUEER ACCIDENT.

A Hopkins Senior Loses His Life At A Hotel.

FRYBURG, ME., July 25.—One of the saddest accidents of the year happened at the Hotel Oxford yesterday. Mr. I. C. Walker, the proprietor of the hotel, and a well-known Hopkins graduate, was entertaining his classmate, Mr. G. H. Woltereck, in the Rathskellar of the hotel. The two men were leaning over a barrel of spirits discussing "Prohibition in Maine." While in college Mr. Woltereck was one of the leading men in the Y. M. C. A.; consequently, when Mr. Walker proposed that they have a drink, his classmate started as if shot, and, losing his balance, tumbled into the barrel head first. Mr. Walker being an expert swimmer, dived in. Instead of helping his unfortunate friend, Mr. Walker seems to have lost his presence of mind (or perhaps he regained it), for it was soon noticed that the level of the spirits in the barrel was rapidly sinking. When the last drop had vanished, Mr. Walker, the human reservoir, stepped forth, and lifted his less fortunate comrade from his sad resting place. Despite his horrible fate, Mr. Woltereck wore a contented smile even in death.

A QUESTION OF SCIENCE.

The Value Of "Young's Modulus" Definitely Determined.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 21.—Should scientific observations be carried on within city limits to such an extent as to endanger human life? This is a question that has become pregnant with meaning since a recent occurrence at the Johns Hopkins University.

It seems that one of the students, actuated by that spirit of original research, which, according to Dr. Lyman Abbot, extends even to the irresponsible undergraduate, determined to continue a physical experiment, begun in the laboratory, on a more realistic scale, than could be done in Dr. Ames' neighborhood. It occurred to him that a heavy chair swung from the window of Dr. Greene's room by a light curtain cord would be a great improvement on lecture room facilities for studying the pendulum. This was comparatively harmless. But at this moment, a fellow-student in physics, more deeply interested in the determination of "Young's Modulus" for a stretched cord, thought that this would be an excellent opportunity to get a valuable cross section. Accordingly, he severed the cord. The chair naturally fell by its own weight and several lives were endangered. A certain Mr. Crist-hilf, who happened to be walking under the window at the time, suffered a severe shock, inasmuch as his dignity was completely upset.

MORNING, MARCH

THE MODEKN ARK.

A Deluge And Its Consequences At The Johns Hopkins University.

BALTIMORE, Mar. 12.—The Historical Department of the Johns Hopkins University received a rude shock a few days ago. Two "graceless under graduates," evidently thinking that the lecture room could stand a little moisture previous to Dr. Vincent's discourse, deluged the room with the contents of several watering-pots. With cries of terror the other occupants of the room rushed for the bookcase, and seeing the "Kojiki," launched it on the fast deepening waters. As by a miracle, all were saved. Drs. Vincent, Ballagh and Barnett, rushed to the door of the room, and the rescued students were horrified and astounded at the effect of the water upon them. Dr. Vincent straightway began to sizzle, and rushed from the door in a cloud of steam. Drs. Ballagh and Barnett, however, seemed to take more naturally to the element, for in place of the gentlemen just mentioned, the students found themselves attacked on one side by a grampus and on the other by a whale. It was only after repeated blows upon their snouts that the horrible animals were finally driven off.

In recognition of the help extended to them by the "Kojiki," the rescued students are having a fac-simile of the closed book cut from marble and placed in the Historical Library. The book is to bear the following inscription:

"If there should be another flood, Hither for refuge fly. Were all the world to be sub-merged, This book would still be dry."

Kicks at the Board.

“Verily some toes are stumped.”—Cremen.

THE HULLABALOO Board is in receipt of certain letters from members of the Faculty, complaining of their treatment in past HULLABALOOS. Some feel slighted that they have not received notice commensurate with their dignity and importance, and they respectfully urge that this HULLABALOO shall bear fitting testimony to their popularity. Others, with becoming modesty, are embarrassed by the wealth of dignity, or perhaps indignity, thrust upon them. Owing to lack of space, the Editors have published only a few of the more interesting letters. They reproduce these letters with or without comment.

THE IDES OF MARCH.

MY DEAR YOUNG GENTLEMEN:

You must be very, very busy at work on the HULLABALOO. I remember in my college days, how the young men worked on the Year-Book. I hope you will do justice to the training you received from me in your Freshman year; remember my rules for punctuation. For disputed points I recommend Hill, (R. 200 ff.). I shall doubtless be able to recognize the writers of the items in the book, inasmuch as young men who have advanced as far as you have in college, should possess very vigorous and individual styles. With these few words of preface, I shall pass to more important matters.

In the first place, I wish to object very seriously to the application of the maternal epithet to my name. Now “Mother” is a most glorious term, but when applied to my name, the connotation is, I fear, not always complimentary. That is to say, I fear that it is often applied with wicked intent. Now if you ask any of the members of my Elective course, they will tell you that I have quite occasionally read to them unexpurgated poems. Indeed, I think a little reflection will convince even the most sceptical that I, in no way, do injustice to the trousers which I wear in token of manhood.

Another point to which I wish to refer, is concerning the indecorous way in which the various instructors shove, (excuse me, I use such words only in my elective), ‘jostle’ my elective course around in the schedule. This is a very, very important matter indeed. Consider that I was a member of the committee that arranged our very notable schedule, and that now I am thrust aside to make room for such upstarts as Dr. Barnett.

[Editor’s note.—Impossible. As if he could make room for Dr. B.]

It is very difficult indeed to arouse my manhood, so I take this indirect method to secure my rights. Remember that I teach the most important undergraduate course. Pardon me for my intrusion on your time. You have my best wishes for a creditable and successful book.

Cordially yours,

HERBERT EVELETH GREENE.

EDITORS OF THE HULLABALOO:

DEAR SIRS:—I cannot understand why the Boards of the last few years have neglected me. I used to be the principal feature of the book. Will you please devote two pages to Will and myself in this year's HULLABALOO.

Sincerely yours,

MRS. STEWART.

P. S.—If you are at a loss for material come to the stock-room, and I will tell you lots of interesting things, if you sign for them.

[Editor's note.—The Board went around in a body, all prepared with note-books and pencils, but as the last of the Stewarts refused to lower the breakage bills of several members, it was unanimously decided to omit her as the feature of the HULLABALOO. Otherwise, the book would have cost one seventy-five.]

MAY 15, 1905.

GENTLEMEN:

Will you allow me, both personally, and as Dean of this University, to express my strong disapproval at the annoying criticism of myself. I regret that such a communication is necessary. Your class has always co-operated so diligently with the Faculty in maintaining the dignity of the University, that I was greatly shocked when shown an advance copy of the picture entitled, "An Hour in the Dean's Class."

Certain remarks in past HULLABALOOS seem open to doubtful interpretation, and might possibly be misunderstood by those unacquainted with the real condition of affairs. In a recent publication, the picture of myself at the fountain of youth (chloroform him) placed me in an equivocal situation. People might not understand that my duties as psychological dispenser demand particular research into the physiological-psychological phenomena of the self-consciousness of inebriation. This picture was posed for especially to illustrate the original work done in our University in practical experimenting. I felt greatly mortified at its untimely publication.

Coming back to the subject which called forth this letter, gentlemen, you cannot understand with what mingled feelings of interest, surprise and indignation I examined the picture of myself in the class-room. I cannot imagine when and how it was taken. While this picture is, no doubt, interesting from the student's point of view, and perhaps contains some elements of truth in so far as it relates to the general state of voluntary attention given to my lectures, I must say, at the same time, that it shakes my sublime faith in your eagerness to learn the fundamental psychological truths.

This lack of interest in my class-room demands a word more. In past HULLABALOOS it has been suggested that there has been an undue attention paid to the psychology of sleep and dreams. I do not understand this at all, inasmuch as I have always endeavored to develop the subject harmoniously, and to give due emphasis and attention to the various phases of the subject. As I have been giving the same lectures for the past twenty years, I may state that I think each succeeding class should find my treatment of the subject more interesting.

Thanking you for prompt attendance at my lectures, I remain,

Yours very truly,

ED. H. GRIFFIN.

P. S.—I might add, herewith, that I would not resent appropriate notice.

MARCH 15, 1905.

TO THE EDITORS OF THE HULLABALOO:

Look here, gentlemen, I want to say a few words to you about this year's HULLABALOO. You fellows are Seniors now, and you probably know by this time the Freshmen have to be kept in line by a certain amount of pretext or "bluff," as it were, on my part. If you let the cat out of the bag, why you will just spoil the whole game. Of course, you know, and I know, that my "black marks" are a sort of a joke; but the Freshmen don't know it, and this is a pretty satisfactory way to keep them on the move. I know that you are "on" as regards those reports and my system of marking, but a man as busy as I am, couldn't be expected to read all that trash.

Somebody got on to it, somehow or other, that I hadn't read the examination papers last Christmas. I was exceptionally busy at the time, and, I admit, that I only skimmed through them. But I can size a man up with my third eye. Examinations don't count for much with me. If I see that a man is doing his work right straight along, I know what mark to give him. Those fellows in Major History last year weren't doing any work, and thought that I didn't know it. But a student can't bluff me. Confidentially, boys, it takes a thief to catch a thief. My bluff is really for the best. I hope you fellows will recognize my position, and help me to keep up the game; you'll really get a good deal of fun out of it. With many wishes for the successful publication of your book,

I remain, cordially,

JAS. C. BALLAGH.

P. S.—By the way, boys, don't mention the fact that I go to Gordon's now and then, and by all means omit the red stocking incident.

Oh! Why Didn't We Run Faster?

Composed after this year's in-door games.—Not by the Big Four.

BOYCE:

By the will of the great Jehovah,
Part of Mac's great plan
Was to enter me in the "eight-eighty";
Me, the famous track man,
To gather up a gold medal,
No longer an "also ran."

GOODENOW:

I thought surely 'twas easy,
To win this race in good style;
I didn't even think about training,
As Morse does for the mile;
I certainly saw that gold medal
Already swelling my pile.

MORELAND:

I knew they were all mistaken
As to who was to get this race;
I was to be the dark horse
To set the hell of a pace;
At the tape there hung the gold medal,
For which I had brought a case.

MORSE:

For me, the "half" had no charms,
In the mile I was to be "it;"
I knew the race was dead-easy,
Planned not to hustle a bit.
A place I had for that gold medal,
In this place it made a neat fit.

ALL:

Oh! Why didn't we run faster?
We surely cannot tell;
Some say we ran like lobsters,
But we know we ran like hell.
All we hear,
Everywhere,
No one lets it drop:
"Oh! Why didn't you run faster?"

BOYCE:

Six laps had I gone already,
I thought the race was mine;
The fellows in front seemed groggy,
But I felt perfectly fine;
I don't know just how it happened,
But I was third to cross the line.

GOODENOW:

But I was running quite easy,
Just waiting the time to spurt;
I was leading all but Lorando,
Of course, he didn't hurt;
I don't know just how it happened,
But my spikes stuck in the dirt.

MORELAND:

I couldn't refrain from laughing,
When the fifth lap had been run;
I could see myself at the finish
Just winning for the fun;
I don't know just how it happened,
But I certainly got "done."

MORSE:

There was not much in the mile,
I knew I had it dead,
I was just as fresh as a daisy,
In the last lap, where I led;
I don't know just how it happened,
But I got second instead.

ALL, (mournfully):

Oh! Why didn't we run faster?
We surely cannot tell;
Some say we ran like lobsters,
But we know we ran like hell.
All we hear,
Everywhere,
No one lets it drop:
"Oh! Why didn't you run faster?"

“MY FAUST”

With apologies to one, Keats, whose four hundred and sixteenth sonnet is something like this, but not nearly so good.

We all have fears that you may cease to be
Before your book, begun in by-gone days,
Your “Faust, Complete with Notes and Glossory”
Shall dawn upon our long-expectant gaze.

When we, with minds now growing dull with age,
To gather Goethe's hidden meaning try,
And find a stumbling-block on every page,
'Tis then for your own Faustus that we cry.

But when we frequent book-shops day by day,
In search of “Faust with notes by Doctor Wood,”
The answer is: “Not out yet, sad to say,
But here's one from the West that's just as good.”

Make haste, Professor, lest your glim be doused,
Before you really let us see that Faust, and then
Who would there be to advertise the darned old thing?*

*DEAR MR. EDITOR,—This last line seems to be somewhat out of plumb, but it really isn't; it is merely an example of poetic license.—THE AUTHOR.

Here's a word to Freshmen,
Juniors may listen, too;
Here's wisdom from a Senior,
His photo's in "Who's Who."

In "Chem." write all experiments
From other polers' books;
But keep your eye on Gilpin,
Boil water—just for looks.

In Physics learn the theory,
And make all results agree;
Just have an easy conscience,
You're sure to get a "three".

With Greene just say, ha! ha!
When he scintillates with wit;
For old men must be humored,
And that will help a bit.

The teacher in Biology
Has dry and caustic ways;
Just call him to your microscope,
The bootlick lasts for days.

Wood is very funny,
And laughs, and smiles, and grins,
Until you whisper, "sic 'em,"
Then don't you fool with him.

The Dean is kind, but tiresome,
So learn the "Psych." of dreams,
And sleep through all his nonsense,
He knows how slow it seems.

Crest: A hand with fingers extended proper.

Motto: "Semper Viridis."

UNDISTRIBUTED MIDDLE.

The Dean has always taught us
With some emphasis and heat,
That undistributed middle
Is a fallacy complete.

But here is proof that such is not
The fact; for here we see
In real life a case of this
Reputed fallacy.

The long and short of it is this
(It gave us quite a shock),
For, fat or lean, no middle's seen
In either Bob. or Doc.

"UNDER THE ANHEUSER-BUSCH."

On the "Bridge" at Midnight.

After Macaulay; by many years.

"Chan" Walker of Maine,
By all the Profs. he swore
That Traymore's and Blaney's
Should see him no more.
By all the Profs. he swore it;
But o'er him the foot-lights had such sway,
That he sent for Skilling and Woltereck
To summon them away.
The two came in a twinkling,
Inquiring what was up;
So great had been their haste, said they,
They'd had no time to sup.
And to them thus spoke Walker,
Whose words were of great weight:
"To every boy upon this earth
Manhood comes soon or late.
Now why should we thus hesitate,
Why not make one bold dash
Across the Falls, and to the 'Bridge';
It's on me, I have the cash."
Then out spake tiny Woltereck,
Long curly locks had he:
"Lo! I'll take hold of thy right hand,
And go to the 'Bridge' with thee."
Then out spake sulky Skilling,
A countryman bold was he:
"I will seize on thy left hand,
And go to the 'Bridge' with thee."
"Brave hearts," quoth doughty Walker,
"As you say, so let it be."
Then straightway along the well-known street,
Hastened the dauntless three.
* * * * *
The three stood calm and silent,
And gazed upon the crowd.
Shout on shout of laughter they heard,
Of laughter long and loud.
But to the office went they,
With their money well in hand;

"Three box seats!" shouted Walker;
Behind him stood his band.
The man behind the grating,
He gazed upon the three;
"Does your maternal parent know you're out?"
He questioned thoughtfully.
At this impertinent query,
Walker felt his bold heart sink;
But those behind cried, "Hurry up!"
He had no time to think.
Yet one man for one moment,
Strode out from midst the crowd;
Well known was he to all the three,
And they gave him greeting loud.
"Thrice hail and welcome, Jimmy Barnes,
And to our rescue come."
But Barnes spake not a word,
He reddened, and was dumb.
Round turned he, as not deigning
Those naughty boys to see;
Then suddenly he saw the door,
And to it pointed he:
"Now, get ye gone, ye kids,
Stop not to reason why;
But to your homes, and ne'er again
Resolve the 'Bridge' to try."
They turned and from that place they ran.
"Curses on him," said our Chan,
And Skilling muttered a wicked word,
While little Gus. said "D——n."
And now on the "Bridge" at midnight,
Huddled the gloomy three,
In such a sad and sorrowful plight
As causes grief to see.
Yet they resolved they would be men,
And at some future day
Would try the "Bridge" another time.
Even if at matinee.

OUTLINES IN LOCAL COLOR

SKETCHED IN THE J. H. U., A SUPPLEMENT TO THE UNIVERSITY CATALOGUE.

BIOLOGY.—10 A. M.

 THE hour bell had rung three minutes ago; the upper classmen are seriously discussing the propriety of calling off the lecture, and the Freshmen, (unused to the practical application of the five-minute rule of the unwritten code of university ethics), are becoming rather apprehensive. A short, round, solemn, "owly"-looking man on the back row is unconcernedly taking notes in a little book, apparently about nothing in particular.

Four minutes after the hour E. Amoeba glides in with a scowl and a rush. The baffled Seniors reseal themselves under protest, and with a discomfort which is rather accentuated than appeased by the oily words of the lecturer: "You gentlemen deserve a cut, if you want to take it." Here a sardonic smile flits across his visage, and the lecture begins without further ceremony: "As I was saying at the last lecture, certain organs are only found in such vertebrates as the Amphibians, Newts, Salamanders, Efts, and Whatnot."

SENIOR: "Doctor, what is an 'Efts?'"

Doctor enters into an extended explanation, interrupted by shifty glances at the clock.

SECOND SENIOR: "Doctor, what is a 'Newt?'"

The Doctor explains this as he again looks nervously at the clock.

FRESHMAN, (with some hesitation): "D-Doct-or-rr, what is a 'Whatnot?'"

The Doctor assumes a pitying, sinister expression, and, after the confusion subsides, goes on in his eternal monotone: "I will go over the last lecture briefly, and then pass on to the frog." Here Dr. Andrews makes a brief review of his last lecture, which ends just as the bell rings.

He now begins in earnest on the life of the frog. "If you cut a section across a frog or a full grown cat, (Dr. Andrews here indicates a section through his own anatomy), you will find well-differentiated organs. We shall study the development of these parts, and I would mention books that I want you to get in connection with our study of embryology. Here's one book that you can get for a dollar. Those who just want to pass this course can get this book. Here's a better book for two dollars and a quarter. I recommend it to those who wish to do a little better than pass the course." And the Doctor smiles almost amiably. He now goes on again with his lecture.

Three minutes after the hour the lecture continues, and feet begin to rustle around. Four minutes after the hour, hats begin to appear. Five minutes after, there is a general rough-house, and the Doctor, with one more hasty glance at the clock and the parting shot, "There will be a quizz on Monday," flits out, followed by an ominous smile and epithets about keeping people over time.

MAJOR HISTORY.—Time, 11.10 A. M.

[Apparently tired of waiting, the class stands by the door at the back of the room in undecided reluctance.]

Dr. Ballagh: (enters, breathless, through the door on the right, ten minutes after the hour), "Baetjer, Banghart, Bass, Bowie," (looks up frowning.) "Gentlemen, I have been unavoidably detained this morning, but I am glad to see that the class has waited for me. If you hadn't it would have been a serious matter. Gentlemen, you may laugh, but this is a serious matter. I mean what I say. I've told you over and over again, that you are to wait for me at least forty minutes. If you," (goes on with the roll), "Boyce, Griswold," (Griswold corrupts the usual form of "Here Sir" to a muffled —.) "Goodenow—Mr. Goodenow, what have you read to-day?" (Goodenow smiles winningly.) "Well, Doctor, er-er, I-er haven't—" "That'll do," interrupts Dr. Ballagh.

"That will do. Gentlemen," (here adds Dr. Ballagh, shaking his finger), "there's got to be more outside reading in this course." (The roll here degenerates into an unintelligible series of grunts until Dr. Ballagh reads Wroth's name). "Mr. Wroth, what have you read to-day?" (Mr. Wroth merely laughs; somebody on the right yells "joke," and there is a general roar. Dr. Ballagh desperately seizes his book and furiously makes black marks for several minutes. After a pause). "This is a very important subject, gentlemen, and, as I have spent all but two days of this term on it, I shall expect you to know it on examination."

"Mr. Goodenow, who founded the first Presbyterian mission in China? You don't know, sir! Gentlemen, I want facts. Speaking of China, gentlemen, reminds me that we will begin to-morrow our study of Korea. A new book has just been published in Boston, which can be procured only in that city. I advise you to send for it to-night. Absolutely no excuse will be accepted for not having it in the class-room to-morrow morning."

(Voice from the rear): "But, Doctor, the curriculum says we are to study India, not Korea."

Ballagh (hurriedly): "I know it does, but Indian history is very stupid, and uninteresting. One of the stupidest things I ever studied. Now this history is very interesting. It also tells a lot about missions. Well, we will put it to vote. Everyone in favor of studying India will please raise their hands." (Everyone raises their hands). "Very well, then we will study Korea and take the first thousand pages, as I said."

"Mr. Owings, on which side of the Yalu is Port Arthur?" (After much hesitation and some foolish giggles, Mr. Owings sagely remarks): "It must be on the other side." (No words for a minute from Dr. Ballagh, but a marked contraction of the eyebrows, and a noticeable swelling of certain veins on his forehead—more black marks). "Very well, gentlemen, when the examination comes, I'll know what's what."

(Dr. Ballagh here begins to talk about the Kojiki. The insurance agents smile knowingly, and rub their hands at the fortunate turn of affairs—only three called on, ten others insured. In a few minutes Dr. Ballagh corners himself, and, in order to cover up his ignorance, he asks advice from each member of the class. Insurance company collapses. Knowing grins and "stung again" passes from mouth to mouth. Dr. Ballagh begins again): "Gentlemen, I have posted a list of reading here—sixteen or eighteen books that I want read for to-morrow. I will put them in the library at five o'clock, and they must not be removed from my table." (Griswold here interrupts with a pleasant chuckle at Bowie's latest observation, and Dr. Ballagh swings around). "Mr. Griswold, who is the leader of the Mikado's imperial guard?" "God (guard) knows," whispers Mr. Griswold hopelessly. Here Dr Ballagh begins his usual tirade, but the bell, cutting him short, gives an opportunity for the exodus to the time of Tokyo Nagasaki.

MINOR CHEMISTRY. Time, 9. 10 A. M.

Enter Renouf and Cobb, dragging a large iron cylinder between them. After some struggles, they manage to stand it upright. Renouf now steps forward.

"Gentlemen, we have here a cylinder of CO₂. We will proceed to open the valve, and the gas will rush out with great force, and will freeze in this cloth which I will wrap around the outlet. This you observe is the cloth, this the cylinder. We will now perform the experiment, which is an extremely simple one."

Mr. Cobb gets a wrench and, after frantic struggles, opens the valve, while Renouf hopefully holds the cloth, and pats it suspiciously from time to time. After several minutes, when about ten men on the first row have been suffocated by the gas, Renouf tries it another way.

He holds a small paper over the pipe while Cobb shakes the cylinder violently. No results. Renouf now rolls the cylinder about the room, and holds a pocket handkerchief in front of the hole. No results. Whispered conversation. Cobb retires hastily by the back window and Renouf converses with great rapidity after the manner of conjurers, when trying to distract the attention of the audience. Cobb reappears carrying a small bag marked "Ould—Fine Confectionery." Renouf places this over the hole, and proceeds to fan the cylinder violently with poor Cobb's new hat, while Cobb shakes it strenuously from side to side.

Renouf: "I was afraid (shake) that the phenomenon would not manifest itself to-day, but Mr. Cobb's fertile brain (Cobb bows deprecatingly) has shown how to treat stubborn cases like this. We will now (smiling confidently) remove the bag, which you will then observe to be filled, as I predicted, with a frozen mass of liquid." (Undoes the bag and opens it. It is filled with a fine quality of strawberry ice cream).

Tableau: Renouf, hissing in the ear of terrified Cobb: "You donkey, I told you to get vanilla; you have ruined our experiment."

CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY. Time, 12 M. Sharp.

(Enter Dr. Steiner, slightly late.)

"At our last (laying down his hat, and removing his coat) meeting, (taking his seat), I spoke (fumbling in his pocket for the roll) of the reasons for the French hatred of the United States about 1799 (marking the roll). At that (folding and unfolding a mass of vari-colored paper of various sizes, which turns out to be his notes) hour, I said—do you remember what I said, Bowie, (still fumbling among his notes), Eiseman, Crane, Cremen, Goldman, Baetjer, Straughn, anybody?" (Silence).

"Do you mean about——" said someone, wishing to maintain the reputation of the class.

"No." (Another silence.)

"Look here, fellows, what's the use of me telling you these things if you don't remember them? They ought to be in your notes if you took them down."

"Now then, Eiseman, suppose I should come up to you, and knock you down, (Eiseman looks vicious), and take all your money from you, (Eiseman puts his hand on his pocket), why would I not be a thief?"

(Eiseman, dumfounded), "You would be a thief."

"Nup." (At this point the erudite doctor, with a self-satisfied smile, puts the class wise as to the distinction between robbing, thieving and stealing. Doctor still talking. Class taking notes, or dropping off to an easy doze, awaiting another sensation.)

"Doctor, what makes us go to sleep when you are talking?" someone ventures to ask.

(Doctor is stumped. Supreme Court decisions on the point did not occur to him; the annals of English history furnished numerous instances of somnolence in Commons, but no reason was assigned. The Doctor's easy-going bile begins to 'bile.') "I," he thinks, "a man who combines so much varied and diversified knowledge; I, a Diderot, an encyclopedia, a walking history of Maryland; I, who have visited every place, and know the location of the gravestone of every hero of the Revolution; I, a librarian, lawyer, teacher, an expounder of the Constitution; do they sleep when I speak?"

"Gentlemen, suppose——" (the bell rings). "I'll be finished in a moment. Now fellows, pay more attention to the McDonald; read up to the end of Jefferson's administration. Read the Stanwood in connection. Don't forget I expect your essays on March first, or a good excuse. Don't forget the private reading for this term. If any of you have time, prepare a comparison of the length of the hair of a Pequot Indian with that of an Iroquois. That'll be sufficient."

MAJOR GREEK.

Scene, Room 10, Greek Class Room, McCoy Hall. Time, 12 M. Dramatis Personæ—Doctor Spieker, Members of Major Greek Class.

(Doctor Spieker enters two seconds after the bell has finished ringing, greatly excited and perturbed, as well as red in the face. Speaks):

"Gentlemen, I must apologize for being late; I was detained in the corridor. Before taking my seat, I desire to point out the text-book in Greek prose which we will use in this class during the coming year. In previous years I have always used the edition of Mr. Sedgwick. But during the past summer there has appeared an edition by an American author, a pupil of the greatest Greek scholar extant; an edition, which not only is eminently superior to that of Mr. Sedgwick's, but also so completely eclipses all other editions that I have decided to use it in this class. I shall now indicate on the blackboard the edition which the members of the class will provide themselves."

Dr. Spieker writes: "Greek Prose Composition for Schools and Colleges, edited by E. H. Spieker, Johns Hopkins University."

Mr. Cremen, the facetious member of the class, now breaks out: "Dr. Spieker, what will we read as private reading during the first term?"

Dr. Spieker: "The Frogs of Aritophanes."

Cremen: "What edition will we use? The edition of Mr. Goodwin?"

Dr. Spieker: "Oh, no; we will use the edition of a standard authority. Mr. Goodwin is not so considered by Professor Gildersleeve. I thought I had brought the 'frogs' with me this morning, but I must have left them in the biological laboratory."

But at this point, the proceedings are seriously interrupted by the laughter of the class, and the sound of the bell in the hall.

"ALL'S QUIET."

11:30 IN THE DEAN'S CLASS.

The clock is lazily ticking away,
Between eleven and twelve doth the hour hand pause;
The Dean recites a melancholy lay
About psychology,—its laws and cause.

The class nods,
The Dean still plods;
Only Hackett's alive,
Who, from time to time,
Tries the class to revive.
Even Zeigler's tense look
Has dropped to his book.
Not a word, but now and then,
A lazy hum or a scratching pen
Is heard. All's quiet.

DICTIONARY OF HOPKINS TERMS.

[Compiled by one poor idiot who had taken Physiological Psychology for one-half a term. Revised by another, who had taken it a quarter of a term; and published by a partly sane person, who wisely slept through the course. He publishes this as a warning to others.]

- AMOEBA—A creature that can play a skin game with any part of its body.
ABSTINENCE—Unknown at Hopkins. (See Addison.)
ALLEY—A crooked street. (See Nickels.)
ANGLES—See Kurrelmeyer's face.
BALL—Several kinds; baseball, swell dance, Tommy Ball.
BILL—Different kinds; tuition, laboratory, and Mrs. Stewart's "Willy."
BILL OF FARE—Unknown in Hopkins lunch-room.
BOARD—Hullabaloo; put thirteen blockheads together and it is done.
BOWIE—A sea-mark to warn off schooners. (See Dock.)
BUNT—Usual accompaniment of a few highballs.
CAFE—Place where W-lter-k, Sk-ll-ing, and W-lk-r, appear to be men.
COTILLION—Just an ordinary dance that costs two-and-a-half for four hours work.
DEVIL—See Hudgins.
DIGNITY—Freshman admiration, Junior imitation, Senior affectation, Faculty ostentation.
DOCK—A place where schooners may safely unload. (See Bowie.)
DREAM—Hopkins is at Homewood.
ECONOMY—Something Dr. Barnett does not practice in space-relations.
EPITAPH—The only thing lacking in Vin-c-t.
EXCURSION—Long poem by one Wordsworth, made endless by Dr. Greene's reading.
EXERCISE—Something always found in the register; seldom seen in the gym.

FACTS—"I want 'em," says Dr. Ballagh. Sometimes pronounced "faix."
 FISHING—Catching tadpoles; therefore toadying.
 FLATTERY—Toadying, especially to Andrews, in watching tadpoles grow.
 FUSSER—Polite name for a Frenzied Fiancee.
 GOAT—Animal where the front end is the butt end. (See Bal—h.)
 GYMNASIUM—A place Freshman pay five dollars to go to; Seniors and Juniors, five dollars to stay away from.

 VIRTUE—Lat. vir, man; Fr. tue, dead—dead man—Zeigler et al.
 WICKEDNESS—Horrible crimes of college boys, told in past Hullabaloos.
 'XAMS'—Zeigler's delight; Curlander's secret relish.
 YARN—What Straughn spins to instructors when he doesn't know the subject, (mostly always).
 YEAR—Have to serve three terms, and pay $150.

MY OWN.

She's just the same throughout the year,
With winsome glance and grace so free,
With lips and eyes that do appear,
The essence of divinity.

Perhaps not black her lovely hair,
Perhaps her eyes may not be blue,
And yet I'm sure those colors fair
Are treasured in her heart so true.

THE SENIOR GIRL.

O, Clarissa, haughty maid,
With your proud patrician air,
Once my suit in vain I made,
Sought thy prized favors rare,
Scornfully you answered me—
But a Freshman, then, you see!

Three years later, what a change!
You are warmth, and joy and smiles!
Like the seasons' yearly range
Are your tactics and your wiles,
You who scorned the Freshman's plea,
Hear the Senior graciously!

THE GAME IS LOST.

The whistle's blown,
The game is lost;
I am so mad,
And she – looks sad.

She came with me
To see us win.
At first so glad;
But now, so sad!

The first half showed
Our team was weak,
Stickwork was bad;
It made her sad.

The game is over,
Our "twelve" has lost,
I'm mad; but Gad,
Don't she look sad!

REJECTED.

Although she's very pretty,
 With lovely golden hair,
Although she's very graceful,
 With charming face so fair,
Although I love her manners,
 Admire her every pose,
There's something spoils her for me,
 And that's her horrid Noes.

Although she's very winning,
 With 'witching eyes of blue,
Although she's very dainty,
 With rosy mouth so true,
There's something that repels me,
 No matter where she goes,
Oh, if she'd only, only change
 Her most repulsive Noes.

OUR FELLOW GRADUATE.

Pretty maid with eyes of blue,
Clad in sombre cap and gown,
From the height of honors new
Looking so serenely down.
Hail, our sister graduate!
Fortune ever on thee wait.

I am trying to surmise,
(I confess it's hard to do,)
Whether your be-ribboned prize
Is of greater worth to you
Than the roses that I sent.
Ah—your eyes have answer lent!

Dear Willie:

Here's my picture. Don't I look grand in long dresses? Why, someone asked Mamma yesterday if I wasn't almost through the grammar school!

I'm just awfully glad you got into the Freshman class. Are there nice boys in your class? I hope those horrid Juniors won't get you. I think they are just too mean to live.

Some day, when I get older, I'm going to college too. Mamma says I'm too young to think about it now.

Your affectionate,

FRESHMAN GIRLIE.

PATAPSCO FLOURING MILLS

ESTABLISHED 1774

DAILY CAPACITY, 2500 BARRELS

GOOD BREAD CAN ONLY BE PRODUCED FROM A GOOD FLOUR

A Good Flour must contain all the nutriment, and none of the inert silicious coverings of the berry

PATAPSCO SUPERLATIVE PATENT IS THE BEST

BECAUSE

It is manufactured from the choicest wheat
It is rich in pure gluten and phosphates
It is the best tissue and bone-making food
It is always uniform in quality, color and strength
It makes beautifully white, sweet and most nutritious bread
It is unexcelled for biscuit and pastry
It needs but one trial to insure continued use.
