Treatise, for the Artificiall Cure of that Malady called in Latin Struma, and in English, the Evill, cured by Kinges and Queenes of England.

Very necessary for all young Practizers of Chyrurgery.

Written by WILLIAM CLOWES, one of her Maiesties Chyrurgions, in the yeare of our Lord. 1602.

Imprinted at London by Edward Allde. 1602.

The Epistle to the Reader.

hen I considered with my selfe (curteous and friendly Reader) the graue & wise saying of Tully : that Honour maintaineth Artes, wherby men are greatly addicted to study : So, as it is said, if a man looke into the course of this world, and into humaine affayres, yee shall finde that such Artes as serue the peoples necessity, & haue their necessarie use in the common wealth, haue been greatly esteemed, and the Professors thereof highly rewarded. Amongst a number of which lawdable Artes & Sciences, let vs make our consideration of Chirurgery, the maintainer and restorer of our healthes : For it is a most true receiued opinion amongst worthy writers, that Chirurgery is (indeede) an ancient part of Phisicke, as it appeareth by Jaques Guillemeau of Orleans ordinary Chirurgian to the now French King: who auoucheth, that before Phisick was inuented, created, or found out, Chirurgery was practized, and sufficiently knowne in al places: as it appeareth (saith he) by the testimonie of Homer, in the second booke of his Ilyades: who wrote the valiant enterprises, and trauels of Vlisses, as did Titus Liuius, the Worthy actes and monuments of the Ancient Romanes. Moreouer, it is said, that Apollo for his skill, and Æsculapius his sonne, were honoured (as Gods) of al the worthy Grecians; Podalerius and Machaon the two sonnes of Æsculapius, were had in great honour & reputation, at the siedge of Troy, under Agamēnon, Captaine of the Grecians. Moreouer, Hippocrates the paragon of all ages, was highly esteemed by the Athenians: Erasistratus, of Noble Saleucus: Diocles, of Antigonus: Oribasius, of Julian: Dioscorides, of Marcus Antonius, and Cleopatra: who followed the warres ouer Ægypt, Parthia, Armenia, Persia, India and Siria: and all to augment and encrease their knowledge & skill. Last of all the said Worthyes, I heere nominate Gallen, who is called the light of all good learning: and bee also was greatly honoured of Traian the Emperour, and he followed the warres with him ouer all Asia and Europa : I had heere likewise thought good to haue spoken somewhat of Paracelsus, but I must confesse his Doctrine hath a more pregnant sence, then my wit or reach is able to construe: onely this I can say by experiance, that I haue practised certaine of his inuentions Chirurgicall, the which I haue found to be singular good, & worthy of great commendations. How be it, much strife I know there is betwen the Galenistes and the Paracelsians, as was in times past betweene Ajax and Ulysses, for Achilles Armour. notwithstanding, for my part I will heere set vp my rest & contention, how impertinent and unseemely so euer it make shew: That is to say, if I finde (eyther by reason or experiance) any thing that may be to the good of the Patients, and better increase of my knowledge & skil in the Arte of Chirurgery, be it eyther in Galen or Paracelsus; yea, Turke, Iewe, or any other Infidell: I will not refuse it, but be thankefull to God for the same. How be it, I will in no wise meddle with their Infidelity, though I imbrace their knowledge and skill in humane verityes and inuentions, be it eyther in Phisicke or Chirurgery, or any of the other laudable Sciences. Now I will discourse no further, untill a more fit opportunity be offered: But very briefly I meane heere to demonstrate and deliuer unto the friendly Reader, the cure of a certaine unnaturall tumor or abscesse, called in Latin, Struma: of the Arabians, Steophala: but generally, in English, it is called, the Kings or Queenes Euill: A disease repugnant to nature: which grieuous malady is knowne to be miraculously cured & healed, by the sacred hands of the Queenes most Royall Maiesty, even by Diuine inspiration and wonderfull worke and power of God, abouemans skill, Arte and expectation: Through whose Princely Clemency, a mighty number of her Maiestyes most Loyall subiects, and also many strangers borne, are dayly cured and healed, which otherwise would most miserably haue perished. For many of them (their pouerty was such) were not able to pay but a very little or nothing at all for their cure. And so I heere conclude, that as God by his diuine giftes, doth cure this Strumous Malady: so also of his great goodnes, he doth give Artificiall giftes, for the curing of the said infirmity. But whereas Artificiall giftes doe many times fayle thee, doe his deuine giftestake place & renaile: as after more at large shall appeare.

Thomas Folkys of Lincolns Inne Gent. in commendation of William Clowes his booke.

BY long experience and by practise great,
Time hath affoorded to this painfull man A helpfull cure, which heretofore to treate,
The greatest Clarkes haue doubted how & whan.
To cure the same giue Clowes due praise therefore,
That hath performed this and many more.

But yet conceiue, this is not Clowes his cure, Our Soueraigne Lady, and his Mistris Queene: Seemes well content her man may put in vre So much as she affordes; as may be seene By Clowes his scope, the rest she challengeth, As Queene annoynted and by Royall birth.

Then Phisicke yeeld; giue place Chirurgery;
The Rationall and Practicke for this paine Are both a like: her Peerelesse Maiestie Healeth by God alone, Arte is but vaine.
This she performes, to write I must surceste, Her hidden skill no pen can well expresse,

How much then are we to the high God bound,
For sending vs this Princesse heere on earth?
Within whose brest, such helpe are dayly found,
As heales her subiectes at the point of death.
She cures, she cares, she saues vs all by skill: She hurteth none, but helpe with louing will.

Liue, liue for aye: what humour leadeth me?
I gan to write in VVilliam Clowes his praise;
Her onely name hath drawne my quill I see.
And daunted so my sence by sundry waies:
That like as Zenxis shaddowed his intent, With some concept, so I the same way went.

The happy sacred hand, of our dread Soueraigne Queen, The Princely louing zeale, of her most Royall heart, Throughout her highnes land, her subiects al haue seen To cure, to helpe, to heale, our care, our harme, our smart.
To God all glory for her Gratiouse Raigne, To her all blessings, that on earth remaine.

And thankes, and thankes to Clowes, for this his zealous toyle, In searching out the light, of Chyrons hidden skill:
And for the loue he shewes, to Countryes natvie soyle, To practise, finde, and write, for all instructions still,
Let Clowes be loued, his fame and him defend,
Who, what he prooued, the same for vs hath pend.

LET him giue thankes, that hath not else wherewith to gratifie His friend, that giues so great a gift to cure the Strumacye.
Nor that alone he comprehends;
his helpfull remedyes:
Dissolute hard Tumors, colde Inflations, Fluxes and Nodosities:
Approaching age makes wisdome in his tongue,
His heart gain'd Arte, when yet his yeeres were young.

He Chimicke Arte disclaims to know, yet Ladanum he showes:
And many good collections more, (his pen doth heere disclose) The quintessence of his whole life, in gayning skyll consumed: He graunteth franckly to thine vse, with Science sweets perfumed.
Future times shall praise his meditation,
And him repose in Heauens consolation.

Base ignoraunce bids me conceale, mine owne vnworthynes:
True loue to Arte compelles me more, Teschewe vngratefulnes.
Impute my faults r'affections force,

That spends his sprites and restlesse houres, in mans life preseruing.
The long experiance and good Arte of this our Clowes, Deserueth rightly more reward then Lawrell bowes.

A N
INTRODUCTION,
With an Apologie or answere to certain malitious back-byters.

Et is certainly affirmed, and confidently reputed and holden, of divers worthy Phisitians and Chirurgians, both Ancient and such as haue flourished of late yéeres, whiche haue intreated of the Cure of the before named dolorous Maladie: and they all by one vniforme consent and voice, conclude and agrē, that it is a Glandulus Tumour or swelling, hard, knotty, and kynnelly, hausing their beginning and growing, contrarie and besides nature, and is engendred of grosse matter and Phlegme: And (as saith Iacobus Russus) they are most commonly included within their peculiar Cistis, filme or skinne, as is Steatoma, Atheroma, and Meliceris: which also resaid skinne is knowne to be engendred of a colde congealed, tough, gleyish humour or substance of the Kernels, whereof a skinne is made whiche compasseth them about: Howbeit I haue seene (and also it is a most experimeted truth) that some kindes of these Phlegmaticall Abscessions,

The Artificiall Cure

When they haue been besieg'd as it were, or beset with vehement daungerous accidents, as heereafter shall be declared, whch in continuance of time haue bin y cause they haue growne corrupted & unmeable, or fix'd unto the parts adioyning: whereby after there hath bin seperation made, there hath not bin found any bladder or skin at all, notwithstanding the great care & diligence that then was had.

This most miserable infirmitie (saith Paulus Agincuta) doth situate or seate it selfe in the foze part of y necke & vnder the Chin: also on the sides of the cheakes, & sometime spreadeth it selfe vpon the brest, & vnder the Arme-pits, & Groynes, & some be deeply lodged a far off in the flesh, & also do oftentimes possesse the great Vaines and Arteryes called Carotides: And those that are thus vexed & subject to this troublesome infirmitie, are for the most part Phlegmaticke persons, greatly given to ouermuch Idlenes & slouthfolnes of life, & are addicted to excessive and inordinate eating of grosse & flegmaticke meates: whch manifolde ^A alady, I haue also found by experiance, that the Cure thereof stretcheth it selfe beyond the bounds of other ordinary sicknesses & diseases. Cornelius Celsus likewise saith, that Scrophula is a Tumour, in the whch are certayne kyndes engendred of matter and bloud, and doe most chiefly grow in the foze part of the Necke, & in the Arme-pits, the Groyne, & in the sides, and hath bin found in Womens brestes.

Vigo a man (for his learning and experiance in this Cure, & in many other great Infirmities) as it appeareth, was wonderfully graced with the good opinion and fauour of the time wherein hee liued, & since his death greatly honoured by dyuers learned Writers, and many other men famous in Phisick and Chyrurgery: He also sayth, that Scrophula taketh the name of Scropha, whch signifieth a Sow, that is a Gluttonous notis and Phlegmatiske beastes: and it groweth in them by reason of their ouermuch eating. There be other some againe whiche say, that it is called Scrophula, eyther because that Howes whiche glue sucke be subiect to this disease, and that is by reason of their greedy eating: or else because the How that glueth Milke bringes forth many young ones at once.

Now here it is to be further noted, that Vigo doth not promise or warrant alwaies, and to every one a certayne absolute Cure, but doth (as I , and many other also haue done) ascribe the praise and dignitie therof unto Kings and Quenes of England, and of France: In dede I haue oftentimes read, and I haue also been credibly enformed by Master Francis Rasis , and Master Peter Lowe , two of the French Kinges Chyrurgians, that the French King doth also Cure many Scrumous people , onely by laying on of his hand , and saying : God make thee whole, the King toucheth thee; or, The King toucheth thee, the Lord make thee whole.

It is further said, that this disease happeneth not alwayes vnto young childdren, whiche bee subiect to much crudity, & rawe humours by voracitie: but likewise vnto middle aged persons, of a stronger constitution; and also vnto very olde folkes . Many therefore imitating Vigo and other of our Sages , & graue learned Foreshathers, doe affirme that these Scrophulous Tumours bee the lesse daungerous to be cured by the Arte of Chyurgery, whiche is taken in the beginning of the sicknes, so far forth as it wil please Almighty God to giue a grace and blessing to our labours. But vndoubtedly , if it be of any long continuance , the Cure theress may prove very hard and difficult: yea, if it be in the bodies of yong persons: But in olde folkes I haue obserued very seldome, that they do receiuue any curacio perfectly, by the Arte of Chirurgery. I meane, that it is then above my learning and weake capacity to cure the same, if the disease bee confirmed, having certaine occult and hidden, hard, knotty, kyrnelly swellings, (being deepe ly lodged and placed in the flesh) but especially about Trachea Arteria, or the Wnde Pipe, or near the Nerui Recurrentes, or amongst the great Meynes and Arteries before named: these (indeed) I holde to bee for the most part very daungerous to be attempted, for feare of violatting or touching the said principall Vessells, eyther by incision or Caustick remedies, which often times bring with them many vnfortunat Symptomes or insurtious accidents, as hereafter more at large shall appere.

Also, it is hard to cure a noysome, corrupt and malignant ulcerous Struma, which doth many times degenerate into incurable, Cancerous & rebellious Phisulous Ulcers: Likewise, I hold it for a certayne truth, that the Cure is not to be attempted by the Arte of Chirurgery, if a man haue it by inheritance, and so naturally borne from thair Parents: These kindes of Scrophulus abcessions doe rather presage a Daine and holy curaⁿtion, which is most admirale to the world, that I haue seene and knowne performed and done by the sacred and blessed hands of the Queenes most Royall Maiesty, whose happinesse and felicity the Lord long continue.

But sith the barrenesse of my learning, and wit is such, and that my memorie will not affoord mee, haers orderlie to set downe in fewe words, that which I doe conceiue and understand, touching this my determined purpose, for the Cure of this haynous Maladie: which, in the Pilgrimage of my practise and contemplations, I haue most diligentlie obserued, not onely by mine owne selfe, with such portion of knowledge as the Lord hath

hath endued me withall: But also I haue been a diligent and a painfull obseruer of the labours and practises of others, being men of great knowledge and sound judgement in the Arte: Wherefore to make heere manifest, the cause which hath pricked mee heere forward to leane my other affaires, and so to drawe me from my ordynarie practises and studies, being more beneficiall for my maintenances, is not that I goe about hereby to impaire the credit or reputation of others, being more auncient Professors. It is (the Lord God knoweth) farre from my true meaning, they are those whome I loue, honour and reurence: Neyther doe I heer ambitiously goe about with the sweet impression of sayre promises (greater then my abillite is) to teach and instruct, or curiously to set downe, a better and perfecter way of curing this haynous Malady (then others more learned men before me) I may not well say so. Neuerthelesse, he hardlie may be accompted for a good Soldier, which hath learned no more then his Captaine hath taught him: or a barren sconce, that hath no iuentions in it: But I will confesse heere the onely cause, (why I haue enterprized, or taken vpon me to write of this forenamed Infirmite) is I protest, atoken of my loue and diligence towards all young Practisers of this noble Arte of Chirurgerie, (howsoever otherwisse, a painfull and tedious trauel vnto me.) Notwithstanding, I could in no wisse satisfie the expectation of certaine of my vnfained friends, but that I must make here a true & brefe rehearsal of my owne obseruations and knowledge, touching the cure of the foresaid Euill, which a long time I haue practised. How be it, being sorry to minister offence to any, by reason of publication heereof. Notwithstanding, I haue been crediblie informed, and also it is vnto my selfe well knowne, there bee some proachfull whome I little suspected, and lesse thought vpon, would back-biters.

that I haue studied & practised this worthy Arte of Chirurgery, sithence the 4. yeare of her Maiesties Raigne; Anno Dom. 1563. Where, first I serued in her Higheſſe wars at New-hauen, vnder the command of the Right Honorable Ambrose Earle of Warwicke, Knight of the Noble Order of the Garter, then Lieutenant of the Army & Forces in those parts. After w̄ service being ended & before, I was appointed Chirurgian, to serue in her Maiesties ſauy in her ſhips Royall, & also in other men of war: within a ſmal time after, I was implored in the Hospitalles in London, and there practised the ſaid Arte of Chirurgery for certayne yéeres, vntill I was ſent for vnto the wars in the Low Countries, by þ Noble Earle of Leiceſter: and further, commannded by her Maieſty, with all ſped to repaire vnto the ſaid Earle,

Where I continued for the space of 9. Moneths : & since & before I haue had conference, & also often practised, with the best and skillfulllest Chyurgians, both English and Strangers, within the City of London and else where: and now as it were, partly ouer-worne with yeares and Seruices. Notwithstanding, by her Majesties fauour and good liking. (whome the Almighty long preservie) now I am sworne & admitted one of her Highnes Chirurgians. And therfore in all reasonable he that pitch likely-hood, I am not so barren or grosse witted, and doth touch, unlearned in the Arte, as some haue termed mee to shall defiled bee. And yee shall further understand, it was not long be with such before, it pleased some of them to say, they had graced me with the good opinion they had of me: and moreouer Good in the gap of my defence against other such, which then were also sore troubled with the flire of a fowle mouth, & vsed me at their pleasures for their common Tabletalke, with scoffing, sneering, and deriding aboue manners and modesty. The same being tolde mee, me thought it was a strange alteration: howbeit, I did take their good speaches very kindly, and so would haue done still, if it had pleased them to continue in the same good opinion of me, or to haue bin silent. But it is truly said, Hanibal knew wel how to subdue the Romanes, yet he knew not how to entertaine his Victories. It is not enough for a man to haue begun a good worke, unlesse he stil preseuer & continue in the same: Wherfore I wil here abreviate my speaches, wishing to God, that this my labor were so perfect, that I needed not to regard the curious examination & censure of any aduersary: neyther will I detaine you with many moe circumstances, but here acknowledge my own vnworthynes. And therfore I beseech the friendly Reader, in a word to suffer mee with patience to signifie vnto you, that I doe not here peremptorily goe about to teach or instruct such.

The Artificall Cure

such persons which are already grounded in the principles and knowledge of this Arte: But my onely meaning is to direct my whole course, according (as I haue obserued) the best learned haue heretofore done in all times and ages, that is vnto the Junior or yonger Chyrurgions: who, as it were, haue made but an entrance into the practice of the said facultie, whose skill (peradventure) is as yet not so profound, that they are able to search or obtaine y^e knowledge out of strange tonges, so farre fourth that they cannot possibly in a shor^t tyme come to the highest of that knowledge, whiche they hartely wish for. Indede, it is (I suppose) vnpossible in the whole course of mans life, euē vnto that Period, whiche (of the Learned) is called Mans Age: that hee is able without great care, study and much diligence, to labour commendably, and with a good conscience to worke in the Vineyard of Chyrurgery: yet I know there be many young Students in the Arte, will be alwaies ready, and most willing to discharge their due-ties in such matters as they shall take vpon them to deale in, whether it be in this kind of cure, or otherwise.
And also will be very carefull, not onely for conscience sake, but euē by a naturall desire, to seeke to increase their skill and necessary knowledge, and therefore it is truely said: the good intent of such honest and well meaning persons, requireth a favourable acceptation, which is as well to be esteemed, as the performance of them that be best able. And these will bee ready to manifest the same by yelding some fruite of their painfull labour and diligence: And now I wil leauē off discour-sing, and begin to speake of my determined purpose, and to make the same more plainly knowne, whiche I haue heretofore kept secret vnto my selfe: howbeit, the greatest secret that is, may no longer be called a Secret, when the whole multitude is made acquainted with it.

The

The Cure of the foresaid Euill is manyfolde : to wit, inwardly and outwardly, and is performed by two speciall remedies : the one Medicinall, and the other Instrumentall, without the whiche fewe good workes or Cures in Chyrurgery can be brought to perfection: The reason is, because in this Cure, the uncleanenesse of the body is such, whiche seedes the matter of the disease. Therefore first of all the matter must be purged, for as it is said, the roote of al the Cure is y wel purging of the body, whereby Nature is the better enabled to expell and unburden her selfe of many bad and vnproufitable humours. And now (by the fauour of the learned) I will therefore begin with remedies Medicinall, according to the maner of Methode, published by Calmatheus, one whome amongst many other learned men in Phisicke and Chirurgery, I haue obserued most diligently, as it were a Day-starre or Christallin cleare looking glasse, following him with fervent zeale and earnest desire: by reason (as it seemeth unto me) he was not ignorant in any thing that might make for the truthe of his writing, chiefly for the Cure of the foresaid Euill. Yet (I protest) I am no such devote fauorite of his, or any other mans whatsoeuer, further then justly they haue deserued: which is the onely cause that hath mooued mee to haue a reverent estimation of him and all other learned men, whether they doe remayne beyond the Sea, or otherwise abide with vs at home.

Now followeth the maner of Methode, by Ph. Struma.
Sicall remedies for the Cure of Struma, or the Euill which our Kings or Queenes haue and doe still Cure: the experimentall prooof thereof I haue often times seene effect ed: wherefore I will be short, and presently procede unto the first intention.

The first Intention Phisicall by Inward meanes.

He first Intention (after Calmatheus) in the 12. Chap. of his booke, for the general cure of Vnnaturall Tumours, is that the curing of this disease called Scrum, doth consist in Dyet that dryeth moderately, & heateth and attenuateth the humours: Hunger is profitable, and fulnes is hurtfull: Sleep and Idlenes are euill: exercise before meate very good: the vse of Sulphure or Alume water, is very good and profitable.

The second Intention Phisicall by Inward meanes.

The second Intention is the vse of breaking, attenuating, mundifying & opening Medicaments; as are these Remedies now following. viz.

Recipe. Rad,Ireos. Cort,Sambucj.

Boyled in white waine, then adde vnto this decoction, a quantity of Ginger. For this decoction breaketh, attenuateth, openeth & mundifieth dolorous tumors: so doth it also prouoke vrine, wch in this affect is a special matter.

The often vse of the Pilles of Hieracium simplex is much commended to cast out flegme of the stomacke & guts.

But if so be that thou wilst purge the whole body, thou shalt vse the Pilles of Agarico Coccis: If thou list to dissolve & cast out Phlegme, these Pills following must be taken, viz, Pillulæ de Sagap: de Opopan, de Elleboro, de Euphorbio. The Phisitians intimes past commended the powder of Turbith, Ginger, and Suger, of each equall parts: The Doses whereof was to two Dragmes.

The

The third Intention Phisicall by Inward meanes.

The thir^d Intention is the vse of this powder, which doth consume (as they terme it) the Antecedent matter, whch it doth aswell by his man-fest quality, and (as they say) by a secret property.

This powder doth consume Phlegme, by little & little.

ning to the rest that followeth: Now it remaineth that I make heere also report of the singular and rare efficacy of our manuel operation therunto annexed and belonging, with the right use of the topcall or outward remedies, which is to be externally applied. The reason is, because it is referred unto the skilfull Chirurgians manuell or handy working, for the Cure of this great Infirmity, which doth outwardly affect the superficall parts of the body.

For (as saith Jacobus Russus) that to the perfection and accomplishing of the foresaid Cure (called, The Euill by the King, or Queene Cured) he doth reduce it into sixe Intentions Chirurgicall, as followeth. The experimentall versyng of his excellent skill in this disease, as also in many others, is by divers worthy men often times commended: whch Malady doth vere and trouble most pitifullly the common sort of people.

The first Intention is,
In Attritione, et Compressione.

The second Intention is,
In Discussione, et Resolutione.

The third Intention is,
In Supputatione et Maturatione.

The fourth Intention is,
In Incisione et Extractione.

The fift Intention is,
In Corrofione et Mundificatione.

The sixth Intention is,
In Obligatione et Evultione,

Also (after Fuchsius and other learned men) it is accordingly to be understood as followeth: who also hath written of these Phlegmaticall or Glandulous abcessions called Struma.

If (say they) these abscessions that bee seated in the stronge parts of the body, and because they are not yet olde and inurterate, having a thin Cystis that couereth them: these are to be appeased and consumed, and after dryed vp.

The first Intention Chyrurgicall by outward meanes.

Now I will set downe Examples and Instances for the Cure of the said Malady, the which I haue obserued and gathered (as heereaster ensueth) for the perfection and accomplishing of the before named first Intention, if the strength and ability of the Patient will serue and admit the same. Then one chiefe thing (as you are before tolde) is, that the Patient doe keepe a thin & sparing dyet, which is the efficient cause belonging unto Phisick.
The reason is, as I haue noted, that those which are thus affected, haue alwaies a great inclinacion to a grosse disorderred liberty of fædung: Wherefore the Patient must be sustained with such meates, as are agreeable to Nature, and to eschew such meates which make grosse Juyce: and not(as it is said) to lay gorge vpon gorge. And further yee shall note, though it bee said before, that abstinence is greatly to be commended: yet you must consider it is not meant, that Nature should thereby bee enfeebled, or ouerthowne, and that especially in weake bodyes, great care must be had: But onely to keepe all possible abstinence, that is to eate and drinke sparingly and measurably, onely to preserue the strength, and to satisfie Nature: I meane, that it bee such as is agreeable to the strength of the Patient, and greatnes greatnes of the Infirmity.

Likewise it is said, the often vse of purgung and blēding on both the Armes, is profitable. Also, it is auailable to vse Frictions, Rubbings, Worsings, and Blisterings is much praised after purgungs, for it stoppeth the flowing matter (being applied vpon the head) by rebulsion or drawing back, & causeth evacuatio. Moreo-uer, it is said, þ to discusse these kinds of Tumours whch are found in moveable parts, & superficially lodged neer vnto the outward parts, A plate of Leade is most familiar therfore, especially in young persons, by reason of the raritye and softnes of the skinne: It is thought vnifit (by divers learned men) to blister Chldrens heads wth Cantharides, it hath been seen to cause much paine and pissing of bloud: but to doe it by aduslement, either with Mustard or with Pettles, is good.

Also, many learned men, of a certaine knowledge and sound vnderstanding, haue in their bookeſ greatly commended a playſter made thus: Recipe. Olde dryed Goates dung, Honey and Vineger, being decocted at an easie fire, to the conſiſtence of a playſter. Also, Dous dung mingled wth Honey, hath the ſame effect. So is it

In like maner, is generally commended Emplastrū de

The Artificall Cure

Ranis cum Mercurio, to be appropiate and respectiue in this Cure, to consume superfluous humidity, engendring this disease.

Such is the impudency of bolde blindnes.

Howbeit, vpon a tyme a certayne reppynsing enuisous man, being full go:rged with a malicious rayling spirit, being prouely giuen (in the gall of much bitternes) with many scandalous words, and bragging comparsons (ill beseeming his person) reported that the aforesaid plaister De Ranis was dangerous unto the patient; and said, who so did holde the contrary opinion, it was erroneous, foolish and deceiptfull: by reason (quoth hee) of the coldnes of the Quicke-siluer: and boldly did seeme to maintaine the same, with a number of very spruse termes, and picked phrases, like as young Children vse to doe, when (in mockery) they counterfeite a strange kinde of language, & forsooth placed them as it were in Geometrical proportions, as though he had bin the onely Son of Archimedes that great Geometrician. In deed it is a most true saying: That fish which is bred in the durt will alwaies taste of the Mud: And I told him that I neuer yet found any more coldnes in this Playster, then there is heate in a paynted fire. But this I doe speake vpon mine owne knowledge, that there is as much difference in Arte and Judgement, betwene this odde fellow (whch would seeme to bee a second Aesculapius) and a man replenished with true knowledge indeed, as is betwene a Master Cooke and a Scullian of a Kitchin. Howbeit, hee said also, that his skill was such, that if a man were wounded at Yorke, bring him the weapon that hurt the Patient, and he would cure him (forsooth) by onely dressing of the weapon, and though he never see the Patient, As certayne as the Sea burnes. And now haere I will surcease to speake any further of these matters, for I regarded not such sayings, sith it is truely said; Every man must yeld an accompt, both of his his ease, and of his labour. Themistocles, a Captainne of Scientia non the Grecians (as Historians make mention) supposed st habet inimi-better to be envied of the malicious, then to live in ^{cum nisi ig-} dlenes and basenes of minde, without doing some good for the benefit of his Country and Common wealth, wherein he was borne and bred. Now to the second Intention, and so in order with the rest as they doe lyce, and offer themselves unto vs.

The second Intention Chyrurgicall by outward meanes.

The second Intention Chyrurgicall, is the right use of those remedies which doe mollifye, discusse and consume great abscessions, which are not yet hard and inuerterate.

And that the same is true, may easily be gathered as followeth. And for that I wold haue this second Intention made plaine (as much as in me lyeth) and also familiarly knowne vnto the studious Reader: I doe therfore say, It is meete and conuenient, that those Me-dicamente which are to bee vsed, be of the nature and property to mollifie and discusse, and so to open the powers of the skinne by euporating, breathing and scattering abroad, and make thinne the grosse matter and Phlegme. Then for the better performance thereof, without further discoursing, I will haere presently set downe (as it were) a Stoze-house of bluers and sundry aprooved Chyrurgicall remedyes, necessary for the curing and safe healing of the forenamed Strumacie and Phlegmaticall sicknesse: ^{Montanus} The which from time to time I haue by experiance (the Mistris of all Artes and Sciences) carefully obserued, and faithfully also collected out of the famous writings of sundry worthy Au-tho:z, as also out of the frutefull labours, of divers men famous in experiance: whose painful trauailes and studyes, haue (at this day) most excellently refined this Worthy Arte of Chyurgerie from Barbarisme: otherwise it is greatly to be feared, a number at this day had not been so skilfull and riche in knowledge, and otherwise, as they are said to be. Therefore we ought not to thynke any study, paines, or trauaile too great, wherin we hope of much benefit to our patients, and also profit and commodity to our selues: And heire I must needs say, (according to my poore ability) I haue my self been very industrious for the common benefit, and good of others, truly to set downe divers approued remedies of myn eowne collection: wherin (to my knowledge) I haue not in al thys whole discourse, published any superfluous and vnapproued remedies, or otherwise kept backe a ny worthy secret I had: but as did the Euangelicall and heauenly woman mentioned in þ Scriptures, who presented into the Lords Treasury al þ wealth & substance she had. Notwithstanding, I haue read þ men in times past did with great care & diligence consecrate & keepe secret (as a precious treasure vnto themselues) al such chosen & peculiar remedies, wþ they had experienced & approoved for the curing & healing of any dangerous malady: and (as it is said) bound themselues by oath one to another, not to bewray their Secrets by their booke: or writings. Howbeit, I more regarding the publike utilitie & good of posterite, did wþ great care & diligence consider with my self, what profit can there be to any man to bury his labors in the lake of oblityon, or otherwise to hide it in the denne of darkenesse. And although I know the matter heer spoken of, may seeme a paradox to some, & so of smal worth: neverthelesse, although I am none of the greatest Clarkes, yet I know it wil be more auailable, then some happily doe make account of. For whiche cause I haue laboured wþ as much perspicuity & plainnes plaintes, as possible I could, to deliuer the truth of my honest & faithful good meaning, so far forth as God hath enabled me in knowledge, skil & memory. Wherefore I meane heere presently to make publicke & open testimony of the same, though now and then I make a little digression, and swarue from my matter, by reason of certayne Crosbyters, who haue heretofoore (behinde my backe, and to my face also) not a little abused me: Howbeit, I wil heere conclude this discourse concerning this Second Intention Chirurgicall, & doe confesse and considerately affirme, that there is but few mens labours at the first made so perfect, but that in processe of time & further consideration, they may be bettered, corrected and amended. Yet I cannot but much maruaile, that wise men now a daies are growne to this passe, that they do so seriously follow exorcismes and the Illusions of certaine Charmes of Clowtes and Rags, whch is very inhumane and barbarous; neuer practised, neither wri-ten of, nor allowed by any learned Phisition or Chirur-gian that ever I yet heard or read of. Howbeit, the world is (as it were) led in a stringe & carried away to believe these vanities, whch make a shadow or shew of verity, for the safe curing of diuers maladies, & seldom (they say) misse not: But I know the contrary is true, for I haue cured both old & young persons, when these Charmers of clowtes & rags, with their incredible operations haue failed them, & proued flat scolery & absurd-ties. But to leau this new Leach craft, with their doting iuencions, I wil here speake of diuers remedies very respectuue & appropriate, for the cure of the before named infirmity, as a president and example for young practizers of Chirurgery to follow. Now unto the said Second Intention, whch is first to set downe those special remedies, whose properties are to open the posers of the skin, & to soften the hard parts, by insensible transpiration.

*T*he thrid Intentiōn is, to ripen, open and clese such Phlegmaticall Corruptions and Ulcerous Apostumes, which do pertaine to Suppuration:
This needeth no long discourse, sith it plainly appear-eth,

eth, that these troublesome, hard kernelly swellings, be found so rebellious, that they doe resist all emollientes and Diaphoreticals remedies before named: by meanes wherof it can not be dissolved & consumed as we happily would, or do desire. For which causes we are further constrained to alter our course, with due consideration, that is to wit: Not to leau the Patient helpleſs, but to vſe stronger Medicamentes, I meane Suppuratives, as is before ſaid, ſuch as whose property is to bring ſuperfluous humours to maturity and ripenes, by these and ſuch like Emplasticke remedies, whiche (as it is ſaid) doe by the closing of the poors of the ſkin, augment the naturall heate, whereby the matter ſo encloſed cauſeth the generation of matter or Pus. But I muſt confeſſe, I haue not often times ſene these hard phlegmaticall abceſſions eaſily brought to ſuppuration. The matter being once colde, dull, Clammy, hard and knotty, and deeply ſeated, and of a long continuance in a body, whose ſkin is groſſe and thicke, & the matter hardly compact: These kindes (I haue found) do ſeldom come to maturity and ripenes, unleſſe (as Cornelius Celsus ſaith) the ſaid Tumours bee mixt and made of matter and blood. And Trincavel reporteth, that ſome of theſe Tumours that haue heate in them, doe ripen and come to matter & ſuppuration: But there be others that be more hard, and doe reſiſt ſuppuration, and then they come nearere unto the nature of a Scirrus. Now it followeth that I ſet downe thofe approoued remedies, being in vulgar vſe, ſeruing for ſuppuration, whiche are long agoe ratifyed and well allowed of, by a uniforme conſent, both of olde & late writers, whiche were men of an induſtrious capacity, & of a moſt rare & exquifeite knowledge in the arte. And firſt I wil begin with Iohannes de Vigo, one of the chiefe Fathers, & true Patrones of al good learning & knowledge in the Arte of Chirurgery:

 Fourth Intencion, whch is performed by Section or Inci-sion, when wee finde the matter before rehearsed, unsit

The fourth Intencion Chyrurgicall by outward meanes.

The fourth Intencion of these Strumous Tumors, whch are not cured by former remedies (& yet are gentle, obedient and tractable) is to cut them off, and then to pull them out.

In the use of these outward Incisions, this scope ought chiefly to be regarded, that is to be very circum-spect in your handy operations, attempted & done concerning the cure of this great Malady: That is, the aper-tion or opening by lancing or Incision of those glandulous Tumors. For as it is said, bloud is the treasure of life, and habitation of the soule: Moreouer, it is surely very hard and difficult, especially when there is in the affected place, eyther Nerve, great Vaines, or Artery, &c.

There

Therefore such persons as are to endure this painfull action, ought to haue much patience, and to be of a good courage : Then it may bee the better attempted and done by a cunning and skilfull Chyurgian : which there is no doubt, but he will be so prouident, that nothing shall offend. Now be it, it is not necessary or susserable ouer curiously to search and attempt the cutting them out by Incision : For that many of them are subiect to violent and inordinate bloody flares, and other euill accidents, which doubtlesse will much amaze you and hinder your handy operation: I meane, when these Tumors bee deeply planted, and secretly lodged amongst the great vaines and Arteries called Carotides, or otherwise neare the Nerui recurrentes, which is often times the cause that some bee come spechlesse thereby. And it cannot be iustly denied, but that these Incisions haue often times been attempted with a launce by our Ancestors & fore-fathers. But amongst a number of those worthy men, Wickar being a man of good knowledge & skill in the Cure of the foresaid Euill, his counsaille is, that before we doe attempt the said action by Incision, the Patient be first layde vpon his Bed, and so bothe his feet must be strongly tyed unto the bed poasts, his head & bothe his hands must also be fast held by men of strenght, and skilfull in holding: In such sort as we doe in cutting those which haue the crooked or wrye neckes. And he that is chosen to be the Operator of the said action, must prudently and wisely (saith Vigo, and other learned men) consider the greatness & smalnes of the said Tumor, which must be incised & cut frō one length of the Tumor to an other. Then by little & little, seperate, diuide & undermine the whole Cistis round about, to the very bottome & roots therof, not rashly, nor by violence, but orderly by degrēes, seperate w your fingers, & other seruiceable instrumēts, as you vse to diuide y sozenamed Wernes called Steatoma, Atheroma and Meliceris: And confessed it is for a certayne, that if any portion or part of the said Cistis or bagge, chaunce to remaine behinde, and not clere taken away by the rootes, it will (doubtlesse) bide and increase againe: But to prevent such greeuances, me thinkes I cannot speake too sufficiell therof: wherfore, if any part remain behinde, then lay vpon it the powder of Mercury precipitate, or (if that bee too weake) adde to it of Alumen Combust, or Vitriolum Album combust, of each equall portions: notwithstanding I beleue, & confidently hold, that the worke of your hands is the best instruments you haue to trust to, and to releue you in this distresse.

Mercurialis.

Moreover, Mercurialis he further sayth these words, for the curing and effecting of this matter: First (saith he) choose some light place, & let the Patient lye on his bed, for in sitting he will soone sound: therfore binde his legges together, and after binde them to the Bedside, and let one holde his head fast, and then the Chirurgeon taking the swelling in his left hand, let him make an Incision, eyther right or straight, or somewhat crooked, on the necke vnder the Jaw-bones, vntill he come to the matter inclosed in the Bladder, which is sometimes one and single, as in the lesser swellinges, and sometimes double, like the Mirtle leafe in the greater swellinges: So that conueniently (eyther by the fingers or other Instrumentes) the Bladder may bee by little and little separated, and drawne from the nept partes, together with the matter inclosed in it. But take good heed that the Bladder be not cut, because it is hardly drawne away, and much hindreth the Cure, and the enill will come againe: But if any such thing chaunce, it were good to consume it with eating Medicines. Great care must also be had, that neyther the Arteries, vaines, nor notable Perues be hurt, but by little.

and little gently put it aside. Yet if in the cutting some vessell be diuided, and the issue of bloud trouble and hinder the worke: then apply some meete thing to stay the bloud, and so come againe to your worke: For if the lippes of the Incision be inflamed, and the swelling of Struma bee not safely dissolved alway: then lay on a Stupa beaten with the Whise of an Egge, and such things as be good for stopping of bloud. After, apply Medicines that will a little concoct, and then vse abstersives, and next such as causeth fleshe to growe and heale vp the scarre.

The fifth Intention Chyrurgicall by outward meanes.

The fifth Infention is, those whiche are unmoveable, and deeply rooted within, Corrode them about and cleane them throughly. I graunt it tollerable and very conuenient, to vse in this Cure the due applicacion of Potential Cauteris, soch as whose propertye and seruice is to corrode the flesh & the skin, and may with very good circumspectiōn very safelē be attempted, being admisſed vpon a body that is of a reasonable constitution, & in such sort that his Strength is able to holde and endure the same. And here I will make further demonstration thereof, that is to say: that your Cautery be not applied vpon any Sinneby part, neither vpon the great Vaines nor Arteries, for that these bee accompted indeede principall and chiefe vessels: Also you must consider the quallity and quantity of the Causticke you doe minister, for that soms are more violent and stronger then other, and some wil run and spread more then another.

Jacques Guillemeau Chyurgical unto the now French

King whiche now is: saith, truely it is not necessary, nor allowable to apply the Cauſtik vpon the endes or beginnings of Muscles, for if your Patient that is to be Cauterized, haue an unsound and sickly body, you must firſt of all bee ſure before you admiſiſter the ſayd Cautery, to Phlebotomize & purge him: The reaſon is, leaſt in the Cauterized parts, there chaunce to come concurſion, or gathering together of humours. Also, it is further ſayd, that a ſmall part of your potentiall Cauteryes, doth and will worke as forcibly on a ſoft and tender bodye, as a great quantity thereof will doe upon a ſtronge and groſſe obdurate person. Duer and besides, the greater abceſſions are to bee Cauterized one way, and the leſſer an other way, and that with good conſideration. And heere to put you in memory, that you muſt bee very carefull and circumſpect in deſending the partes round about the ſayd Tumors, for feare(as I haue ſaid) that your Cautery doe run and Thus hausing sufficiently intreated of the fift Infection: now it remaineth for a full conclusion, to present sent in order last of all, the sixt Intention; as followeth.

The sixth Intention Chyrurgicall by outward meanes.

The sixt Intention Chyrurgicall is, that in those Strumas that are fastened but to a thinne and slender roote, you shall binde them about and plucke them out. This last action (as it appeareth) is verie easily performed by a skilfull Operator or cunning Chyrurgian: neyther doth it require any great curiositie, but a decent and artificall strong binding, mēte for the plucking of them out (as it is said) by the rootes. In whiche action you neede not feare any great perrill of flaxe of bloud, but that it may easily bee restrained with my restringent powder, published in my last booke of Observations, whiche hath (of a number of good Artiftes) a friendlye acceptation: If it chaunce through the ill disposition of the body, any dolorous accidentes doe happen to follow, then mitigate the same (sayth Wicker) with stupes wet in the white of an Egge, and oyle of Roses: and afterwards if there growe filthyness, let it be cleansed with those remedyes before rehearsed: then no fault being committed through negligence or want of skill, you shall no doubt with good successe, finish this last Intention. But amongst a number of excellent remedyes for the curing of this euill (after the partes bee throughly cleansed from all annoyances) this Playster following hath all the properties, that is prescribed in these kindes of remedyes before named: Whiche noble Playster I obtained of one Isack a Cran- M. his Arte, was called beyond the Seas, The golden Ma-

(who are as it were so nose-wise) that forsooth they can not abide to read any medicine, that is of a long composition, be it never so precious. Contrariwise, there be others againe, that will not endure to read a short composition, bee it never so well approued: for they plainly say, there can bee no great matter of worth in them: And thus they are as variable in their opinions (for want of true Arte and judgement) as the Camels-ons be in their colours. Quot capita tot sensus: so many heades so many opinions. Now here I will forbear:

beare any further to discourse of this Sixt Intention Chirurgicall, but I will set downe certaine Observations for the Cure of this greuous Malady by me persee-ted, as followeth: least other wise happily it may bee said, He that telleth a long processe or boasting tedious tale without some prooffe, must needs require credit, either for his long boasting tedious tale, or else for some speciall Authority that is in his person. But as for boasting amongst wise men, it can winne little credit.

An obseruation.

Few monthes past there was sent vnto me by a Gentleman of Essex, a certaine husband man, being about the Age of thirtie yéeres, who was molested (for the space of sixe monthes) with certaine outward swellings, or vnaturall Strumous Abscessions: some of them were great with notable hardnesses, some meane, and some smaller, being for the most part packed and heaped together; but yet mooued too and fro, byther and thyther: For the whiche he was first purged (with great moderation and aduiseement) with the pilles of Euphorbium and Trochisce ex Viperis: or the Pilles of Vipers, and he did take many times Theriaca Andromachj, & kept a very leender dyet withall: after hee was well purged from grosse and rawe humours, then I applyed vpon his necke and both his shoulders 3 great cupping glasses, and so did draw bloud and humours in good quantity.
After the application of this kinde of Boxing or Ven-toxes, then presently I applyed vpon his swelling this Vnguent, and these Plasters following.

Recip. Colewort leaues, grēne Lēkes and blades: The vnguent of water Betonye, Motherwort, the lesse Plantain, Dayse leaues and Flowers, Mallows, Mallowian, and Pelitory of the wall, of each a handfull: Weate and shred these hearbes very fine: then adde to these foresaide hearbes of Wine Vneger lib.ii. of Hogs grease and sweet Butter, of each lib.ii. of oyle of Almonds lib.j. a yong Fox, of earth worms, & shel snasses, of each lib.i. Let all these lye infused & buryed in horse dung the space of a month, then boyle all together till the watrynes be consumed: then strayne it strongly, & haue therewith morning and euening anoynt his necke verie warme, for halfe an houre together: Then applyed A Emplastrum de ranis cum Mercurio: and at other times, Emplastrum Dyachilon maius, et de Musciliaginibus, of each equal portions: and by this way and order of curing, he was by me cured and safely healed with, in the space of 40. dayes.

Another obseruation.

Another obseruation of a Master of a Ship.

Pon a tyme there was brought unto me a certaine Master of a Shyp, by a Servant of mine, called Robert Coulter, a man who (for his knowledge and skill in the Arte of Chirurgery) was greatly esteemed of divers Nobles, and worthy Persons. This Master of the Shyp was mightily infected with many Ulcerous Strumaes in his necke, throate and brest, with much out-growing flesh, loathsome and unpleasant to beholde: his hard swelling exceeded in number, magnitude and greatness: he had a crastie and unsound body: his minde much troubled with pensiuenesse and melancholy fancies. Therfore being loath to admit any thing needfull, or comynge any thing ching hertfull, I did take the aduise and counselle of a graue and learned Physician: who prepared and purged his body from much crade and rawe indigested excrementall humours, with the Pilles of Sagapenum de Agarico Coctiæ. An 3. g. Misce. In like manner he did set him downe a good regiment of dyet, whch was thinne and sparing and light of digestion. He also forbad him eating and drincking at vnaccustomed houres: also he did refraine those meates that were grosse and tough: as Beefe, Pilke, fryed Egges, hard cheeze, all pulse and nattes, and other meates which cause thicke Juyce: Also he did appoint him after his first purgings every morning and euening for a space, to receiuue this drinke following, whch procured him to auoyde much Phlegmatische rawe humours, especially by Urine.

An

An Observuation of a Maide, whose friends supposed she had the Euill before I rehearsed, when I was but a young Professor in this faculty and Arte of Chy-rurgerie.

Bout thirky yéeres past (as it were in the minority of this my practise) I did obserue there was brought vnto me (by a Preacher, then being Vicar of Yalding, a towne in Kent) a Maide dweling at Yalding in Kent about the age of 22. yeares, hausing a strenge and able body, and of a reasonable good constitution, who was supposed to haue that Euill, called Scrumma. Yee shall understand, this Vicar was a man that did practise both Phisicke and Chirurgery: this Mayden was a long time troubled with an Ulcer in one of her legges, and a great swelling in one side of her necke: whiche Maladyses, the foresaid Vicar did take vpon him to cure and heale: how be it, in continuance of time he grew weary of his worke, and tolde a neigbour of his, called Master Eden (a Gentleman dwelling also in Yalding) that the Maide his Patient (as hee supposed) had the Queens Euill (whiche Gentlemanes Daughter not long before I had cured of the same:) The sayd Gentleman perswaded the Vicar not to spend time too long, but to cause her to bee sent vp to London to mee, whose counsaille presently he followed, & the Vicar and by the aduise the Maide and her father consulted together, and came of one M. Archēboule and Beeden Chirurgians to mee to London, and shewed me her grise, and the continuance of the same. So after diligent view taken by me, I found it was not the Euill (as he supposed) but of London, a sort of crnde and rauwe humours, sticking together in her neck, with a putrifayed corrupt Ulcer vpon her right leg, & so I told him he was deceived in her grise. Then they went thys way and asked further counsell, whch all were of my opinion. Then they came vnto me the next day, and I did undertake the cure with the counselle of one Doctor Spering a graue and learned Phisition, who prescribed her an order of dyet, with convenient purging. It is to be noted, bee gaue vnto her in thre seuerall boxes, thre sundry purgations to be taken at thre seuerall times, set downe in wansting very plasmly, as might be densed. In like maner I deliuered vnto them all such locall remedies as was fit for both her grises: amongst the rest I noted in wansting, that the first thing shee shold vse vnto the Ulcer on her legge, was Vnguentum Aegiptiacum, whch I made very strong, and of a highe and thicke body, for that I would haue her spred it vpō pledges somewhat thicke, and after to procede with other meete remedies. I

But note what ill hap followed by the Maydes carelesnes, and too much negligence: In the morning after shee came home to Yalding by 7. of the clocke, and tooke one of ths 3. Purgations whch the Doctor gaue vnto her to take, shee set it vpon a stoolle by the fire, where shee meant first to dress her legge: in conclusion (by great oversight) she laide the Purgation to her legge, and did eate vp the whole boxe of Aegiptiacum, whch was nere 2.oun. and (as she said afterwards) it was very vntowthsome and loathsome in tasting. All this whyle for two hours space shee felt litte working of it, but did begin in the end greatly to burne, & did complain in her stomacke, throatte & mouth, and casted extreamely, & also shortly after purged downe very greatly, & thus continued for the space of one day, & one night before she sought for helpe. In the end, the Vicar was yet

Not to be found, but stayed at London; then they sent unto Maidstone to an Italian Physician called Santa-Cilia, and he being gauen to vnderstand by them, that by meanes of a purgation, shre was in a great burning heate in her body, & purged & vomited too aboundingly, and so wanted sleepe greatly, for the which bee gaue them a prescript unto the Apothecary: but first that they themselues should apply her with butter-milke, and new milke, and some good fat Mutton brothes: and to helpe to stay her purging, he counsailel them to giue her to drinke oftentimes, Red-wine and Conserue of

He gaue also vnto her the first night, a Pill of Ladanum, onely to procure sleepe and quiet rest, and caused her to be couered with many cloathes, and so procured sweate: Thus within an houre and a quarter shee fell a sleepe, and rested quietly vntill nine of the clocke the next morning, and never casted nor went to the stoole: and (being awaked) confessed shee was greatly refreshed, and felt no paines at all till towards night, and then shee casted a litle, and went now and then to the stgole:

for so; which cause she tooke her foze said Electuary. She earnestly required to haue another Pill, but the Doctor gaue his direction to the contrary, and would first see how Nature did dispose her selfe: so the night following she rested but little, how be it a great deale better then before. Then the third night hee gaue her the second Pill, and after that she never vomitted or purged disorderly againe: the excellency of these remedyes is aboue beliefe and vncredible, that I haue done and seen done by these last worthy remedyes, both by Sea and by land The seauenth day after she had received her unfortunate Purgation of Aegiptiacū, then speches was made by me to see the Ulcer of her legge, but they regarded it not; in the ende she opened it, and found it almost cleane cured, then shee commended mee, and so did her friends for this my excellent remedy: but shee said would never take the like Purgation againe, for a thousand pound: thus she was cured by Fortune and not by Arte. Then I required of her, where the Bores were, that the Purgations and the Vnguentum Aegip-tiacum were in: She said she threwe them both into the fire: For (said shee) the Purgation had a filthy tasste, and was so clammy, and so sticked to her mouth and teeth, that I had never so much a doe (said she) to get it downe my throate. Then I perceived shee had taken the wrong thing, & it was the more apparent by reason of the blacknes of her teeth, & the staines of her cloathes wherwith she had often wisped her mouth: and also by staining of the Basons and the dishes, wherin she had so often times vomitted. After this I stayed with her ten daies, til her legge and mouth was perfectly cured, and then wee were royally payde, and thus went to London to the Doctor, and tolde him what had hapned, that she had eaten the boxe of Aegiptiacum, and layde the Purgation to her legge, whereat he was greatly grie-ued:

ued : and much controuersie in speches was after betweene the Doctor and the Maides father, but in the ende they were made frends.

Now I will set downe the composition of the said Pill of Ladanum , which I obtained of a very deere friend, being a pretious Jewell, as it is vsed: otherwile, (as I haue said in other of my writings) the best Medicine that is, is no Medicine vntille it be in the hands of a skilfull man.

The true maner and making of Ladanum.

Take of Opium, first sliced thinn and then dryed in an Earthen platter, one Dun. & a halfe. of the gum of the roote of Henbane 3. Dan. Make the Gumthus. Gather the rootes of whiste Henbane in March (the Moone being full) and drye them in the shadow: after slice them and boyle them in good white Wine: (the rootes being boyled vntill they be very soft) poure off the wine, being full of the tincture therof, and presse strongly the rootes, the licour (being by filtration cleansed from all dreggs) in an earthen broad pan vpon warme ashes: Vapour away the moysture vntill the tincture of the Henbane rootes come to the consistence of Hony, whitch is very sweet and pleasant. After this, take all these (being beaten to powder) of the sades of white Poppy one Dunce, of Hammia one scruple, of Cloues and Cinnamon, of each 2. Dunces, of Louage roots, Calamus, Aromaticus, Galingale and Ginger, of each one Dunce, of Castorium, blacke Pepper, Cubebes and Saffron, of each halfe an Dunce, of Ladanum and Beniamin, of each 2. 3. Put all these together in a glasse hausing a narrow mouth, whitch will holde a pottle, and poure in so much good and strong Aqua Vitæ as wil be aboue them four inches,

inches, then with a Corke and a peece of Leather stop it, and let it stand vntill the Aqua Vitæ be of a darke red colour, shaking it thre times a day in y glasse: the Aqua Vitæ being full of tincture, let it bee pouted off & strained, and so much againe be pouted on, do this til the Aqua Vitæ can draw no colour. Then take all the tinctured Aqua Vitæ, and in Balnea Mariæ in a great glasse bedy, distill it vntill the tinctures doe come to the consistence of a Syrope: Afterwardes poure them in a broad earthen glased pan, and on warme Ashes by evaporation bring them to the consistence and body of a Pill, which Malar with 2. drams of the oyle of Cloues, let the masse be kept in a cleane glasse.

The Dose is from thre graines to five, to procure sleepe, to aswage the paines of those that are troubled with the Collische, with the Plurisie, with the Stone, and with the Goute: to stay the Cough, the Flare of the Belly, spitting of bloud, and Distorsions of humours, &c. It is said, it were as good for a Chirurgian that followeth the warres, eyther by Sea or Land, to bee without his right hand, as to bee without these remedyes last rehearsed. My selfe haue knowne cured diuerscured of Dysenteria, or the bloody flix, and other Fluxes of the belly in a Shipppe (being vpon the coaste of Indyes) of Dysenteria, or the forty Marriners and Soldiers at one time, and not one bloody Flix of them all perished, by the discreet administration of and other the said remedyes by seruantes of mine. Within the Fluxes of the belly.
City of London also there be alise at this present day, whitch were cured of the flaxe of the belly, by the fozenamed remedyes, when they were supposed of many to be past all recovery, by reason also of the long continuance and their extreme weakenes withall: And here I wish the like good successe unto others (whitch I my selfe haue had hereby) that is the onely cause I haue herere made so large mention thereof.

A most

A most miraculous Cure, healed onely by the Queenes most excellent Ma-iesty, when neither Phisicke nor Chirurgery could take place or preuaile.

Mongst an infinitte nu-ber (which I haue knowne dayly cured by her Highnes, of the foresaid euill) this cure following is worthy of great admiratio: there came into my handes
not many yeares past, a certayne Stranger, borne (as he said) in the Land of Gulicke neare vnto Cleaueland. This Stranger had been in Cure a long time before he came vnto me, with diuers skilfull Chirurgians, both English and Strangers, besyng then greatly molested and soze troubled with diuers perni-tious Cancerous Fistulous Ulcers in certaine places of his body: likewise he had many knotty swellings or abscissions, gathered together vpon heapes in the fore part of his necke, neare vnto the Windre-pipe, and some in the hinder part of the necke: and also amongst the principall and notable vessels, viz. the great Sinues, Vaines and Arteryes, and therefore could not without great perill and danger be safely taken away, ether by Launce or Causticke remedies, by reason of their neare knytting together, & were also very vnfitt to be brought to suppuration. The cause was, they were for the most part ingendred of dall and slowe or tongh same matter, for the which I craved how and then the aduise and counsaile of diverse learned and expert Physitians and Chirurgians, onely to prevent and auoide those pernicious daungeres that oftentimes doe follow: Howbeit, (in conclusion) notwithstanding all our farmoising, much care, industry and diligence, with the application of most excellent medicines (very reme-dable and appropiat for that cure) yet was his griefe rather the worse then better. For looke what way soever we tooke with approued medicines, some milde, some vehement, and some stronger (whiche by naturall reason and common sense, were very good and commendable) yea, and whiche brought oftentimes all his Ulcers to bee very neare whole: Yet vpon a sodaine (without any iust cause to vs knowne) his sores did putrifeye and breake foorth agayne, with much loathsome filthinesse, so that I feared his Ulcers would gangrenize, by reason of the concursion and vigour of the vns expected accidents, so that his disease weartered vs all. In the end, after hee had been twelue or thirtene monethes in my cure, percesing we all mist of our expected hope and purpose for the curing of this Infirmitie: And likewise himself being ouertyred with extreame paines and griefe, so that oftentimes hee bewailed his owne great misery and wretchednes: for whiche cause hee went his waies, and came no more unto mee for any cure: but by the counsaile of some of his owne countri-men and friends, made meanes (vnknowne to me) vnto other of my fellowes the Queenes Matessies Chirurgians, which are in place of preferment before mee.

Who pityng his miserable estate, vpon a time (amongst many others) he was then presented vnto our most Sacred and renowned Prince the Queenes most excellent Matessy, for the cure of the said Euill: which through the gift and power of Almighty God, by her

Graces onely meanes laying of her blessed and happy handes upon him, shee cured him safely within the space of syre monthes. Heereby it appeareth it is a more diuine then humane worke, so afterwards vpon a time I did mette with him by chancce in London, but I did not wel know hym, his Colour & complexion was so greatly altered & amended: And being in very comely maner attired, otherwise then before I had seene hym, and he tolde me who he was: Then I asked hym how he did wⁱth his griesse: he answered me, I thank God and the Queene of England, I am by her Maiestie perfectly cured and healed: and after her Grace had touched me, I never applyed any Medicin at all, but kept it cleane, with sweet and fresh cleane cloathes, and nowe and then washed the soze with white Wine: and thus all my grieses did consume and waste cleane away. And that I should credit hym the more, he shewed me the Angell of golde which her Maiestie did put about his neck, truely a cure (as I haue said) requyreteth diuine honour and reuerence: And heare I doe confidently affirme and stedfastly belewe, that (for the certaine cure of this most miserable Malady) when all Artes and Sciences doe faile, her Highnesse is the onely Daystarre, perelesse and without comparisson: for whose long life, much happiness, peace and tranquillity, let vs all (according to our bounden dutyes) continually pray vnto the Almighty God, that he will blesse, keepe and defend her Sacred person, from the malice of all her knowne and unknowne enimies, so that shre may for euer raigne ouer vs, (if it please the Lord God) euen vnto the ende of the world, still to cure and heale many thousands moe, then euer sh^e hath yet done. Amen,

An History and obseruation of a Gentleman which sent for me, to cure him of the foresaid Euill, but it prooued otherwise.

Pon a tyme I was sent for to a Gentleman, lyng in a Marchantes house at Broken-wharfe in London: after I was brought into his presence, he did forthwith giue me to understand, þt he was greatly polluted & molested with much impurity of corrupt & rotten matter, with great exulceration in his thoate, being of a filthy and carrious saour; also the Almond of his thoate was græuous and painful vnto him, & meruaillously swolne: for the whiche cause (he said) he entertained (a little before) one D. Simonds, a very learned and Judiciale Physitian, who(as he reported) did administer a dyet to him for certaine daies, but it apppeared he was smally relievetherto. And further he laide open vnto mee, that of late there was commended vnto him a New-come Stranger, who(vpon report) was supposed to be þt onely Phœnix of the world, for his rare and exquisite knowledge in Physike and Chsurgery: I answered the Gentleman, that those speches were so absurd as nothing could be more, for (said I) it is impossible for one man to haue all knowledge in himself, but it is truely said: One man may know, that which another knoweth not. Well quoth he, I perceue I haue take a wrong pig by þt eare, and so haue brought my hogs to a faire market, & therfore I know not what to say: & I doubt me I shal find a wofull experiance, of that he hath practised on me: And therfore said, he I pray you let me haue your good help incuring of me, for preventing farther danger. Indeed he is more to be esteemed that preventeth a danger before it doth come, then hee that doth cure it after it is come; Wel said he, the first time he had giuen me a little Phis-sicke, hee did very boldly corrosive mice in two severall places of my throate, and yet neverthelesse I received no profit thereby, but hee hath tormented me greatly: So in the end he prayed me to vbinde his greef, where the corrosive was applyed, which was directly vpon the outward part of the Amigdales or Kernels of the roate of the tongue, but as good hap was, he being a fat man, the Causeick wrought not too deepe: also he shewed mee divers nodositie, knobs and knottes vpon his chin bones. Then I tolde the Gentleman it was not the Kings Ensl: when he heard me speake these words, he was in a wonderfull rage, and did sweare like a mad man. By the way yee shall understand, that this gentlemans vices excēded his vertues, hee was a man knowne to be as unconstant & uncertayne as the Weather-cock: won with a feather & lost with a straw, to day a friend, to morrow none: at one time he would mag-nifye his Phisitian and Chirurgian (as it were) aboue the heauens, and for the wagging of a rush, hee would discredit them & dispraise them againe, downe to the pit of hell. But to returne unto my matter, from whence I haue a little digressed, sozsooth in all poste hast this good Gentleman would needes haue me ride into the Country to his house (being fifty miles from London) to cure him there: But I tolde him, it was not possible, for that I was dayly to attend vpon the Lord Thomas Earle of Hulles, then being Lord Chamberlaine unto her Majestie. In the meane space there came in his Phisitian and Chirurgian whome he reported be-soz to be matchlesse, and without comparison in Phis-sicke

sickē and Chirurgery: but the case is altered, for now he did againe, most bitterly revile him, for mistaking of his grefe: I must needs say, his Phisitian was a man of a curteous inclination, and partly after speeches had, he did confess his error and ouer-sight: yet he said hee had been a professor of this faculty forty yeres, and indeed he had the testimonies of many great townes and Cittyes beyond the Seas, of diuers whome hee had cured of the Kings Enail: To iudge and sudge aright, (as I tolde the Gentleman) hee did nothing of set purpose to abuse him, for truly he was learned, though a bad Phisitian and a worse Chirurgian. Now be it, the worst I liked in him, was so that he boasted, and said he was a Chirurgian naturalized, and so borne a Chirurgian: truly I tolde him it was a reason as naked as my naile: For be it graunted that his Father might bee a good Chirurgian (as him selfe reported to vs) what is that to the purpose, if his Sonne be found a counterfeitt? It is a true saying, the best Apple will growe to be a Crab, unlesse some good fruite be grafted on the stocke: But indeede I doe know there bee some whose Fathers were good Chirurgians, and so be their Sonnes likewise, but how commeth it to passe they bee so? Truly the reason is, they were like unto their Fathers, men carefull and painfull in Study, and of long experiance. But otherwisse, for any one to suppose or dreame, y the Arte commeth to a man by succession, because happily his Father was a good Chirurgian, it is a Paradoxcall opinion, very foolish, absurde and fantasticall: Other the like speeches hee had to this ends and purpose, and thus we ended, and so I took my leauue, and left them altogether. After I was gone, they fell out with great and vnseemely wordes: whereupon the Gentleman caused his men to set his Phisitian downe in a Chaire, and then with a pappie of Taylors sheres, one of his men played Barbaton foris, and so did Cutte off his faire beard, and shoure off the haire of his head very vnseemly, besyng a man of his reres, and so put hym out of dauges, without any consideration for his paines and Medicines hee had bestowed vpon him: but what became of him afterward I have not heard. Then he sent to D. Simonds againe, & tolde hym how his new come Phisitian & Chirur: had abused hym & desired hym of all friendship to help hym presently to some cunning Chyrurgian, to cure hym forthwith if it were possible, & that with sped: After some talke, the Doctor remembred hym selfe, and tolde hym he would send hym a neigbhour of his, one Ma. Story, a Chyrurgian of S. Bartholomeus Hospital, & a man (said he) wel experiented in his Arte. After he was come home to his house, he did conuerse with his neigbhour M. Story, & tolde him what maner of hasty man the Gent. was: therfore he wissled hym, saying, before you meddle with him make your bargaine wisely now he is in paine, for hee is but a bad pay-master, and therefore follow this rule. Accipe dum dolet, cum sanus soluere nolet.

As cunning as Master Storye thought to haue been, hee could not get one penny out of his purse, not in sixe daies after hee undertooke to cure hym, vntill Master Story was going away, and said, sir I cannot gge to the market with wordes, but the Gentleman would not heare on that side. Then the Doctor went with Master Story, and tolde the Gentleman: Sir if you ride your horse all day, and giue him no meate at night, and so againe all the next day, you may bee sure you are like to goe a foote the third day. Indeede I remember a pretty saying of one, whose wordes in effect were these: When a Phisitian or a Chyrurgian commeth to a man that lyeth sicke, and is in daunger of death, yet by his judgement and skill, promiseth with

Gods

Gods helpe, to cure him of his grieves and Maladyes: then the sicke Patient greatly reioyceth, & presently compareth him to a God: But after, being somewhat reconuered and perceiueth good amendment, then he doth say, hee is but an Angell, & not a God: Againe, after hee doth walke abroad and falleth to his meate, truely he is then accompted no better then a man: in the end when he happily comineth for his money for the curing of his grieuous sicknes, he now reporteth him to be a devill, & so shut the doore; Non est inuentus; come when I send for you. To conclude, & now I come againe to speake of M^r. Story, after hee had been comming and going, twice a day for eyght daies space, hee gaue him certayne money, w^t a world of false promises, so farforth as he would perfect his Cure at his house in the countrie: But according to the old saying in Latin, Mel in ore verbalactis fel in corda fraus in factis, as by the sequell shall appeare.

At much intreatie hee consented, and went downe to his house in the Country: when hee came vnto the Gentleman's house with him, hee tolde Master Storie saying: I haue a store-house of diseases and impedimentes in my body, and so I haue not ledde a Saintes life: as hee confessed very strange and far from all good, to this ende (he sayd hee spake it) wherby hee might bee the better instructed to make his cure the more certayne: Then hee tolde the Gentleman hee would be loath to begin a thynge when the ende is doubifull and daungerous, and vnto him before altogether unknowne: And therfore desired him to send for some skilfull Phisitian or Chirurgian, for further counsele to his good. Then he did sweare & stare, that he did not bring hym downe to expostulate and make Lectures vnto him, but he said he did vnderstand by M^r. D^r. Simondes, that he was able to performe greater cures then his was, without the counsel of any other,

other, and tolde Master Story he shold not depart alia out of his house, if he did not perfectly cure him. I trust (sayd Master Story) you wll not (what soever you say) commit so foule a fault in your owne house, wher-by may follow vnto you such dishonour: Howbeit, Master Story was greatly troubled in minde, and seeing no remedy, he endeavoured himselfe with great care and industry, to attempt the said Cure, according to the Gentlemans owne request, which was with the Unction: but first he prepared and afterwards purged his body, and opened a vaine, and after very discreetly beed admist the Unction at severall times, vntill hee did see and perceiue it had wrought sufficiently, and to Master Stories owne good liking, and so meant to haue ceased. But this monster in humanity (contrary to all Arte and reason) compelled Master Storie to administer the Unction once againe, saying his body was strong enough to endure it. Howbeit, within thre dayes after, he did begin to sing a new song, for strange and unexpected accidents immediatly did follow: A great and an inordinate flurke of vicious and corrupt humours passed out of his mouth, with much acrimony, burning heat and sharpnes, by reason of the putrifaction of his gummes, with an horrible stinking sauour and a Fever accompanying the same: Then he and all his people about him, were in great doubt of his recovery, saying to Master Story, my grisele (I feare me) will prooue insanable and deadly. Master Story said he haped not so, for you may thanke your self of this extreme-tie: Then secretly (doubting he shold dye) he sent an olde trustie servant of his to London in all poste hast for me, with a Letter subscribed by a wrong name, and by his man 20. Angels. After I had perused his letter, and understood in what a bad case he was, I prepared all things necessary, and so with all expedition rode poast paast away with his gude. But when I came into his house where he lay, I did not knowe him, his disease had so altered the naturall shape of his face: at last he revealed him selfe vnto me, and said, Master Clowes, I haue sent for you, hoping you wil save my life, I haue bee[n]e abused by counterfeit bungling botchers, for one told me I had the R. Euill, and an other, I haue the Fr. P. but what soever it is, I pray you bend your ende-nour and diligence, that with al conuient spēd I may be brought to my former health, whch I know (sayd he) resteth in the skill of a good Chirurgian. After I vnderstood what hee was, I repented mee of my comminge, & wylt my selfe at London againe, & his 20. Angels in his belly. So procede, I tolde him hee was not without danger, & therfore I could not make any warrant of his cure, but the best I could do he shold be sur-of: then this cankred chasse looked on me like one that had lately come out of the devills slaughter-house, & said: if he dyed vnder my care, there were in his house, that shold take accempt of me before I went. Then I tolde him, if he or any of his durst touch or abuse one haire of my head, it would bee deereley answered. But before I procede any further, you shal vnderstand, I was informed by one of the Gentlemens men, that M. Story was kept in obscurity (& as it were in a close prison.) So vp a sodaine, about 10. a clock at night, this Gentle. sent a swash buckler of his owne training vp, who was vnto him (as it were) the very light of his eyes, & one that served him in a nūber of bad masters: He came to M. Story & caused him to rise out of his bed, and bad him prepare to ride towardes London, for hee said he had ordained horses for himself, & you M. Story, &c. I wll soone be ready to attend vpon you, said hee, but first (he said) hee woulde faine haue taken his leaue of the Gent: but this Royster tolde him it was in vaine, his Master had no pleasure in the sight of his person: So they took horse, & towards London they did ride, untill they came into a very great wood farre from any house or towne, and in the midst of the wood hee forced Master Storie to alight, with many scoffes and scornes, and being very darke, left him to shifte for himselfe, where hee wandred up and downe all the night, with great feare, sorrow and care, till it was day, & then in the end he came into London by way, and so being ouer-wearied, rested himselfe for a space, and in the end went to his house in London. After, when this grislie ghost(his man)came home, in the morning hee informed his good Master, how he had dealt with Master Story, whereat (though he being soze and sicklie) yet hee smiled, and greatly rejoyced at this bad action: which I did heare, & full wel understood though I said little; whatsoever I thought, but marke hereafter the end of the Master and the man: and now I come againe to my owne proceedings, that is. The morning after Ma. Story was gone, I admistred unto this Gentleman a Glister, made of newtynke, Sugger and Dyle of Almonds, whiche could in no wise haue been lawfully prohibited, by reason of the great restraction and tormentes of his belly, for hee had not a stoole in five dayes before. Now I suppose some vpon a spleane, will object against me, and say, that I goe (here and in other places of this booke) beyond my latchet, in the publishing & administering of phisical remedies, vnto my Patients: But I must craue pardon to answere with fauour this object so, for be it without offence spokē: I say, where the learned Phisitian is not to be had, be it either by sea or land, far or neer, I wil the vse al honest & lawfull meanes, both in Phisick & Chirurgery, to the vttermost of my knowledge and skill, before I will any way permit and suffer my Patient to perish for want of all helpe. Notwithstanding, what soever sooner is said and spoken to the contrarie by any malitious aduersary, I assure my selfe, the graine, wise and learned will not take offence at these my sayings, but passe it ouer with modesty & silence. Secondly, though he were weake, by reason of his extreme sweates, paines, and burning heate of his mouth, thoate and whole body, for which cause I did let him bloud on the Cephalica vasne, on the right arme, that was, 4. Dunc. of bloud in the morning, and 3. Dunces of bloud more at sonre of the clocke in the after noone the same day. And thus by intermission of time, I took away 7. Dun. of very corrupt and impure bloud: this done, I vsed frications, and I set strong cupping glasses vpon his Shoulders and hippes, and at sundry tyme I did administer vnto him certaine comfortable cordials: And then with excellent Gargarismes and Lotions, I brought away many soule and filthye Askers from his mouth and thoate: thus within the space of sixe daies, hee did confesse some little ease and amendment, by these inward and outward medicaments. And at the full end of 18. daies after following, I made him perfectly whole, in the meane tyme hee did cogitate (as it were) and bethought with himselfe, how cunningly he had dealt with his two former Chyurgians, and did greatly resoyce in this sending them away unsatisfied. Then I tolde him, it was to Master Storyes great detriment, & hurt vnto his body, and hindrance to his living being a poore man: but hee would not heare on that side. Notwithstanding, it is a true saying: It is an ill winde that bloweth no man good; I meane, happy is hee that commeth in the declination and ending of a Curse: and so I let him alone with his humours, sith my reasons was not of force to perswade him: howbeit, in conclusion he vsed me very kindly, & willed me to goe abroade with him, to see his Riuers, wherein were many goodly Crowles and other fine fishes, and after shewed me his mighty high woods, and a number of Heronshew-nestes: But truly, I tooke as much pleasure at the sight thereof, as Jacke an Apes doth when he hath a whip at his tayle. After all these sightes, he returned to his house, and by the way he said, Master Clowes, I will holde you no longer with me, but I will send you with my men to London, for I must confesse I haue stayed you longer time then I meant to haue done: and in conclusion, he gaue me 20. pound, and promised mee to rest my assured good friend during his life. But to conclude, I note his vnfortunate end, whereby it presaged he was borne vnder some unluckie Planet oʒ Crosse day. For within fewe yéeres after, he took occasion to ride abroad, as at many other times he vsed to doe, but in returning home to his owne house, it was said, he entring into a Lane, and attempting to open a great gate, sodainly his horse started aside, and fled a-way, whereby the Gentleman fell from his horse vnto the ground, and there sodainly brake his owne necke: So his horse ran home, and he being left behinde, the servants went and sought for him, and found him stark dead, and his necke brake: Thus far of the end of the Master, now to the end of his man, whch he appointed to be Master Storyes guide, the onely Phœnix, whom he dearely loued, but not for his good condicions. Within a yéere after his Ma. came to his vnsimely death, (whose end was onely to God so;eknown & prefixed) this swaggering fellow did sodainly grow into great misery, & so vpon a time hee came to London, and there I saw him: presently hee craved of mee some releefe, for bee said, for want of seruice bee was brought into great poerty: Indede I must confesse I had small deuotion vnto him, but yet I gaue him some what to be rid of his company: thus he went his waies, saying, he did hope it would be better or worse with him shortly. Indeed it was reported that not long after, he did consort with a crew of his old companions, & they together immediately robbed certain Cloathiers of the west country, & being al takē, were at y^e Assises hanged on y^e gallows at Ailesbury or there abouts, for the said fact. Thus (friendly for such a Readers) you have heard (as it were) the tragical histo^ry of the foresaid Gentleman and his man. The cause which hath moued mee to publish the same is, to forewarne al young practisers of this faculty of Chirurgery, being indeed truely called filius Artis, to beware and take heed how they goe, and where and with whome they goe, especially into strange and unknowne places, and unto me of such extraordinary & strange qualites, whiche make but a test & pastime at the abusing of any man, be he of never so much worth, honesty & skil in his profession.

An obseruation for the Cure of Struma, performed by me vpon a woman dwelling in the County of Essex. 1602.

Mongst others that I have cured this present yéere Anno 1602. there repayred unto me, a woman being about the age of thirtye yéeres, dwelling in the County of Essex, three miles from my now dwelling house at Plasto, in the parish of Westham, within the said County: which woman was a long time molested and troubled with certaine Carnosities and hard Scrumous swellinges vnder her Chinne, some moveable and some unmoveable: the which woman I did take in cure, for the said infirmity, and after speches had, I perswaded her that shee wold permist mee to take her Strumous swellings away by Incision, but it fell out shee shewed her selfe saint-hearted, and so vnwilling to suffer that action by Incision. Notwithstanding, she having an ardent desire and affection to bee cured by mee, was very willing to endure and abyde the force and painfull working of the Causticke, whch was performed as followeth.

The incredible operation of this simple Causticke now following is aboute herselfe, being indeed made but onely of the powder of new quick burnt Lime-stones, as they come out of the Kyll, and of Soppe well mixed together, An.q.s. Heere some peradventure wil say, it is a great vanitie in mee, to commend a remedie whch is well knowne already, (it will doe that it is prescribed for) but I will leue to answeare such obseuctions, and will procede with matter of more importance, that is to wit : After I had well defended the partes about, then I applyed vpon these swellings, the aforesaid Causticke, whch she reasonable well endured, for the space of thre hours : and then I remooued it, and in place thereof I applyed other medicaments, onely to mollifye and loose the Askers, which was made by the said Causticke, and also I gaue with her (of the same remedy) home to her house, to dresse her selfe with all where shee remained for the space of five daies, in the end yee shall note, she returned againe to me, being very faint, pale and ill coloured, thereat I much maruailed, to see so sodaine an alteration: then I demanded the reason of her, shee answered and said it was by reason of the bad sent and ill sauours of the Askers, and of the filthy corrupt matter, which did run from the aforesaid Cauterized Strumous swellings, that greatly offended her stomacke, and by reason of the sensibilitie of the grieved partes, whch were sharpe, mordant and bytting, bytning, and that was after the Askers were remooued: and farther, she confessed in the end, that she was quick with childe, which troubled her greatly; all which causes being considered, I very much feared an untimely birth, but I tolde her she was much too blame, that she did not acquaint me therewith, before I tooke her in cure. Howbeit, God did so open my knowledge and understanding, that all thinges fell happily out, better then we looked for. So after, I appointed her to bee drest twise a day with conuenient remedies, and then by the vse of some metalline instruments, onely to apprehend and to pull out part of the foresaid Scrumous swellings. So, according as I haue said before, those which are Masters and Professo^rs, chosen to perorme the like operation, ought indeede to haue a Lyons heart, a Ladies hand, and a Hawkes eye, for that it is a worke of no smal importance. Then by the application of these two noble compositions, being irreproouable and most judicially penned, and of great truth and probability in this cure, that is Vnguentū Apostolorū mesuæ, & Vnguentum Egypciacum, with other worthy Agglutinatives and drying medicaments, often times before named, and thus she was perfectly cured within the space of 10. weeeks. Friendly Reader, y^e cause chiefly whiche hath moued mee to publissh this obseruation amongst the rest, is partly (as I haue besore said) to render some frutes of my labours, studies and time spent, whiche as it may haere appeare, is no afternoone mans worke, as some rake-shames & belly Gods haue falsly and flaunderously so reported: but the trouth is I haue carefully laboured haere, also to admonish every young practiser of Chirurgery, whiche is rightly called filius Artis, that hee in no wise attempt the like cure, vpon any woman with childe, without some sage aduise: for great was the troubles and daunger^s

that was like to haue folowed, but happily were they preuented throught the helpe of Almighty God, &c. Now here I will forbear any further to discourse herein, but I will set downe certayne Prescriptions worthy of obseruing, which I haue gathered out of Plinie, (a most worthy writer) for the cure of the sore named Euill, the which I wil heere set downe word for word, as fol-loweth.

The cure of the King or Queenes Euill, after Plinius Secundus description.

He bloud of a Welszell is good for the Wennes called the King or Queenes Euill, whenthey be exulcerate and doe run: so is the Weyzell it selfe sod in Wine, and applyed. Provided alwates, that they run not by the occasion of any launcing or Incision, made by the Chirurgians hand: and it is commonly said, that to eat the flesh of a Wel-zell is as effectuall for the cure: so are the Ashes of a Welszell calcined vpon the fire made of Winetwigs, if they be incorporated with Hogs grease. Item, take a greene Lyzard and binde it to the sore, but (after thirtie daies) you must doe so with another, and this wil heale them. Some make no moare a doe, but in a little boxe of siluer, keepe the heart of a Welszell, and weare it about them. If a Woman or a Maide bee troubled with the Kings or Queenes Euill, it were good to make a Plaister or Linament of old shell Snalles, and let

let them be stamped shelles and all (especially such as be sticking to the rootes of shrubbes or bushes. The Ashes of a Serpent Aspis calcyned are likewise very good for this disease, if they be incorporated with Wuls Eallow, and so applyed. Some use Snakes grease and Oyle together: also a Linament made of the ashes of Snakes burnt, tempered with Oyle and Ware. Moreover, it is thought that the middle part of a Snake (after the head and tayle bee both cut away) is very wholesome meate for those that haue the Kings Eusill: or to drinke the Ashes, being in the same manner prepared, burnt in a new Earthen pot never occupied. Marry, if the said Snakes chaunce to be killed betwene two Cart trackes where the wheele went, the Medicine will worke much more effectuall. Some give counsell to apply vnto the affected place Crickets digged out of the earth, with the moulde and all that cometh vp: also to apply Pigeons dung, onely without any thing else, or at the most tempered with Barly meale, or Ote-meale in Vineger: likewise, to make a Linament of Mouldwarpes ashes, incorporate with Honey. Some there be that take the Liver of a Moule crushed and bruised betwene their hands, working it to a Linament, and lay the same to the soze, and there let it dry vpon the place, and wash it not in thre dayes. And they affirme that the foote of a Moulde is a singular good remedy for this disease: others catch some of them, and cut off their heads, stamp them with the moulde that they haue wrought and cast vp aboue ground, and reduce them into certayne trochesces, whiche keepe in a boxe or posse of Linne, and vsē them by way of applicacion, to all Tumours and Impostumes, whiche the Greekes call Aposthemata, and especiallie those that ryse in the Pecke: but then they forbide the Patient to eate Porke, or any Swine, during the Cure. Moreouer, there is a kinde of earth-Beetles, called Tauri or bulles, which name they took of the little Hornets that they carry, for otherwise in colour they resemble Lickes, some terme them Pedicu-los terrarum or earth Lice: these worke also vnder the ground like Wantes, and cast vp moulde whiche serueþ in a Linament for the Kings Euill, and such like swellings: also for the Goute in the feete, but it must not be washed off in thre dayes space. Howbeit, this is to be noted, that the medicine must be renewed every yeare, for the same moulde will continue no longer in virtue then one yeare: In some, there be attributed vnto Beetles, all those medicinall properties whiche I have assigned vnto Crickets called Grillj. Moreouer, some there be, who vse (in maner and cases aforesaid) the moulde whiche Antes doe cast vp. Others (for the Kings Euill) take vp as many Maddes or Earth-wormes in number, as there be Wennes gathered and knotted together, and binde the same fast vnto them, letting them dry vpon the place, and they are perswa-ded that the same Wennes will dry and consume away together with them. There be againe, who doe get a Viper, about the rising of the Dog-starre, cutting off the head and tayle, (as I said before of the Snakes) and the middle part betweene they burne: the Ashes that come thereof, they glie afterwards to drinke for thre weekes together, every day as much as may be comprehended and taken vp at thre fingers endes, and thus they cure the Kings Euill. Moreouer, there bee some which hang a Viper by a Linnen thred, fast tyed somewhat vnder the head, so long till shee be strangled and dead, and with that thred binde the Wennes or Kings Euill aforesaid, promising vnto the Patient assured remedye thereby. They vse also the Sowes called Multipedæ, & incorporate the same with a fourth part

part in proportion of them, of true Carpentines: and they be of that opinion, that this Dyttement or Salve is sufficient to cure any Impostumes whatsoeuer. Etius also sayth, if a man should eate a Viper, it is a most notable thing: whose authority others also haue followed in administering vnto Strumous persons Trochiscos Viperinos, or the Pilles of Vipers, with good & happy successe. Also it was said, it was the experiance in times past of countrymen, that if any had eaten a Snake, hee should bee deliuereo from Scruma. Thus much touching Pliny his manner and order which hee hath published, for the Curing the Kings or Queenes Caill.

The conclusion.

¶d thus (frendly Reader) it were a great argument of folly & shameles impudency in me, worthy to be laughed at, once to think that I could haer any way instruct the learned Phisitian or Chirurgian, in the Cure of the Kings or Queenes Caill, before named. I am not so full of childeish toyes: but if I were, I doe full well know they might by their prouident wisedomes and learning easily circumuent mee, though I doe confesse, I am not altogether insufficient to perorme this enterprize I haue heere set downe and taken in hand. The onely cause why I haue done it, is (as I haue before said) for the benefit of all young Students of Chirurgery, who haue a long tyme expected the comming forth and the publishing of this Booke: whose honest zeale and affection towards me, hath induced mee the rather to set forth the same. But before I would attempt it without good advise, I did first intreate divers Physitians and Chirurgians (men of a singuler percessuerance, in perusing and examining the same) of whom I haue had a favourable acceptation: And this I did of purpose, least some misght (otherwise) lay Gambling blocks in my way, onely to impeach these my painfull labors & trauels. And so I do make a final end, acknowledging as I did in y beginning, That the gift of healing, is the gift of God: howbeit, I doe not heere presume, or once take vpon me to enter into the high cure of the said Euill vsually called Schrophula, in such wise as God hath giuen diuine & peculiar giftes vnto Princes: but my full intent hath alwaies been onely to direct the true path-way of Artificiall gifts (w God of his great goodness giueth to men of Arte) knowledge & skil in Physick & Chirurgery, w is performed & done by the applicatio of interfall & exterrall medicamente, appropriate & approved profitable therfore. For it is a true saying: God hath created medicines of the earth, for the relsefe & comfort of man; and it is said: He that is wise wil not refuse it. And thus last of all, I thought it not impertinent, heere to diuert & disgresse ffrom the matter, & wholy attribute all diuine honor & reuerence, for the great cure of the foynamed Euill, (by Gods gratioues good gift s) vnto our most prouident, wise & vertuous Princesse, the Queene most Royall Maestey: For whom let vs all pray, that the Lord God Almighty & eternal Sauour will send her Highnes still long and long to raigne ouer vs, to our great joy, happiness & comfort, so that she may live long, and many happy yeeres & daies, to hold vp the Scepter of this Kingdome, in Christ Jesus. Amen.

The Lord of Hoastes, preserue these coastes,

Our gratioues Queene defend:

And graunt her peace may still increase,

Vntill this world shall end.

FINIS.

Friendly Reader, I hope you shal not think your time & trauel mispent, if you will be pleased to vouchsafe, with diligent regard, the carefull reading of this small Treatise: wherein it may so fall out, that some blemishes or ouer-slips hath passed, notwithstanding, all the watch-full eyes and great paines and care hath been taken to the contrarie. For the which, if any such faultes happen to bee, then I desire thee (curteous and friendly Reader) to censure it with fauour, & eyther with your pen amend what is amisse; or otherwise, returne me a friendly admonition, which at the next impression shall willingly be amended, sith at this time the number is not many, which I haue caused to be Printed. Then as for the enuious, idle & ignorant Momus, (of whome I know I shall be priuily pinched) of such bad persons I refuse and disdaine to be censured, and iudged by: And thus I leaue thee (friendly Reader) in the Lord Iesus.
