N O T E.

This catalogue refers to the Art portion of the Collection bequeathed to the South Kensington Museum by the Reverend Alexander Dyce, the well-known Shakespearian scholar, who died May 15, 1869.

A companion volume contains a catalogue of the remainder of the Bequest, the printed books and manuscripts.

The following is an extract from Mr. Dyce's will :—

“This is the last will of me, the Rev. Alexander Dyce, of Oxford Terrace, Paddington, Middlesex. As to all my books, works of art, and other such effects, I dispose of them as herein-after specially mentioned. And I appoint my friends, John Forster, of Palace Gate House, Kensington, esquire, and William Macpherson, of Lancaster Gate, esquire, executors of this my will. As to my collection of books and works of art, consisting of the whole of my rare and valuable and other books, and of my pictures, paintings, drawings, miniatures, antique rings, and curiosities, and all my printed books and manuscripts, and any other effects which may, in the opinion of my executors, come under the description of works of art or articles of vertu (the same being herein-after described as “my said collection”) I give the same in manner following, in which I have had regard to the gift of the Sheepshanks collection of pictures and works of art, which I desire generally to follow, that is to say, I give and bequeath my said collection unto the Member of Her Majesty's Government for the time being charged with the promotion of art education now undertaken by the Department of Science and Art as the ex-officio trustee thereof, upon the following terms and conditions, viz. :—

“1. That such ex-officio trustee do within six months from the probate of my will sign a memorandum of the acceptance of the trusteeship, and deliver the same to my executors, and to be by them copied on the probate of my said will, with a memorandum to be signed by them of such acceptance.

“2. That a proper and sufficient separate room or gallery in or near to the public buildings built, or to be built, for the Department of Science and Art, now called the South Kensington Museum, or elsewhere, be set apart or provided for the purpose of holding my said collection (to be called “The Dyce Collection”), and that my said collection be deposited and kept in such room or gallery.

“3. The right of property in, and possession of, my said collection shall be solely in the ex-officio trustee for the time being, but subject to the conditions herein-after expressed, and to be and remain always under his control, and he shall be the sole arbiter of any question that may arise touching the management or disposition thereof under this my will.

“4. My said collection shall be used for reference and instruction, and shall be exhibited to the public at such times and under such regulations as the ex-officio trustee shall prescribe, and so soon as arrangements can be properly made by him for that purpose; but no part of my said collection shall ever be sold or exchanged or be dealt with contrary to the true spirit and meaning of the use, disposition, and control thereof herein prescribed; the books to be the subject of special care and preservation, and never to be lent or removed from the collection.

"5. My said collection, or the conditional bequest thereof hereby made, shall not be subject to the provisions of the Act of the 19 & 20 Victoria, cap. 29., intituled 'An Act to extend the Powers of the ' Trustees and Directors of the National Gallery, and to authorize the ' Sale of Works of Art belonging to the Public,' or to any future enactment of the legislature which but for this declaration to the contrary shall or may have the effect of placing my said collection under any other care or ordering than is herein prescribed, or would otherwise alter or interfere with the disposition thereof hereby made. And in case of such interference on the part of the legislature, or if the terms and conditions as herein expressed be not strictly adhered to (subject as after mentioned), or in case the said bequest should not be accepted as aforesaid, then and in either of such cases the gift thereof hereby made shall wholly cease, and my said executors or the ex-officio trustee for the time being, as the case may be, shall thereupon hold my said collection in trust for the University of Cambridge, to be added to and for ever thereafter form part of the Fitz-William Collection of the said university.

"6. The ex-officio trustee (or university aforesaid, as the case may require) shall provide for the payment (by Government or out of any funds available or to become available for the purpose) of the Government legacy duty which may become payable on the said collection, and also for so much and such part of the duty on the probate of this my will as shall be payable in respect of the estimated value of my said collection so hereby given for the purposes aforesaid, this provision being necessary as my general estate is otherwise of small comparative amount or value.

"In testimony whereof I have to this my will, written on six sheets of paper, set my hand, this Ninth day of March, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine."

CATALOGUE.

PAINTINGS, MINIATURES, &c.

Oil Paintings.—The strength of Mr. Dyce's valuable bequest to the Department of Science and Art does not lie in the portion included in this section, which is in its nature of a very miscellaneous character. The collection was made apparently as objects offered themselves, and without any special design. Many of the paintings are probably by artists whose works would not entitle them to posthumous repute, and their names have been lost. To other paintings great names have in some instances been given, which can hardly be accepted; yet it is right to say that the collection includes several good works by painters of eminence, and some which, on special grounds other than their art-merit, are objects of general interest.

Miniatures.—The Miniatures include works of the chief continental schools, with some good examples of the early English miniaturists. Of these works it is still more difficult to speak than of the oil pictures. They are almost exclusively unnamed, and it is only by some traditionary name, either of the artist or the person he represented, that these particulars could in most instances be supplied; and, except in the few instances where names have been given, it would be almost guess-work to attempt identification. The collection is largely composed of small works in oil of the Dutch and Flemish schools; but it no less includes some works of the distinguished English artists Samuel Cooper, Isaac Oliver, and Thomas Flatman, with some others of recent date, whose characteristic manner has warranted the addition of their names.

DRAWINGS.

INTRODUCTION.

IN preparing the following catalogue of the remarkable collection of drawings, part of the munificent gift bequeathed to the nation by the liberality of the late Rev. Alexander Dyce, it has been found on examination, as is usually the case, that the merit of the works of which it is composed varies widely; and that associated with such an example as a beautiful study by Raffaello, the first idea for one of a series in the Loggie of the Vatican, is a drawing which is clearly not from the hands of the master—"A study of the nude figure of a man," &c., from Sir Thomas Lawrence's collection. This may probably have been obtained by Lawrence in a lot at an auction of some importance, and have been valued as being impressed with his mark. In justice to the liberal donor, I think that in the arrangement of the Dyce collection those drawings I have selected, and of which I have supplied a list to the authorities, should always be kept separate, properly mounted and arranged, while such as are of inferior grade or minor importance might be placed in a volume and preserved for reference only.

There are in the collection other drawings besides the one mentioned above, which are either of more than doubtful authenticity, or executed by pupils of the artists under whose names they pass—those attributed to Dürer, for instance, are both to be classed under the former head, and those attributed to Rembrandt under the latter, none of them being by the masters themselves.

One thing which is very much in favour of the quality of the drawings in this collection, if we except the one mentioned above as bearing the initials of Sir Thomas Lawrence, is the fact of so many of them being impressed with the marks of celebrated collectors—such as the Earl of Arundel, Prosper Henri Lanekrinck, Sir Peter Lely, the two Richardsons, Padre Restà, Jan Pieter Zoomer, Pierre Jean Mariette, J. A. Crozat, Earl Spencer, Conte Francesco Algarotti, Dr. Peart, Nathaniel Hone, Count Caylus, Sir Edward Ashley, Richard Cosway, William Esdaile, John Barnard, Thomas Hudson, Arthur Pond, William Young Ottley, George Knapton, Benjamin West, Ralph Willett, Robert Dumesnil, Sir Joshua Reynolds, &c.

Commencing with the Florentine School, we find an interesting drawing by Pollajuolo, without however any particular display of his favourite study of anatomy, followed by studies by Bandinelli, with his fine telling stroke with the reed pen, and bistre: then come a leaf from one of the sketch books of Leonardo da Vinci, which has unfortunately been tampered with, and a good specimen or two of the writer as well as painter, Vasari. But the most interesting drawing is that by Finiguerra, (specimens of whose work are so rare) one of those allegories so common at the time—and for years afterwards, as is fully exemplified by the number of them engraved by Marc Antonio and other workers with the needle and burin—but which no writer on art has been able to explain. The design for an altar-piece by Bartolomeo fills a link in his painstaking studies for his picture in the Uffizi, and the slight sketch for a portion of the Medici Tombs at Florence by Michel Angelo, although unimportant itself, becomes of value when it is understood that many other studies for the same monument are in England. The spirited skirmish by Antonio Tempesta, is worthy of a passing remark, and concludes the notice of such drawings as are worthy of note in this school. In the next, that of Sienna, there is only one, by F. Vanni, which is a fair example and interesting from the fact of its having been engraved.

The Roman School commences with Raffaello's study mentioned before, with its marks of former eminent collectors—a drawing which has escaped the notice of Passavant and other writers on art, but is unquestionably by the master. The portrait of the Duke of Urbino is also fine, though not of the same quality as the Moses. Then comes a very clever sketch with a pen by Raffaello's pupil, Perino del Vaga. The engraver's drawing of the "Massacre of the Innocents," by Martino Rota, is interesting, as giving an instance of the usual painstaking method of preparing an elaborate drawing for the engraver to work from—often so skilfully executed as to be taken for the painter's own work—a mistake which is very excusable, for, in many instances, the masters did themselves prepare these guides for their followers with the burin: even Raffaello himself found time to execute many, so much interest did he take in seeing his designs properly translated by Marc Antonio. Vasari indeed distinctly mentions that Raffaello sometimes corrected the outline on the copper, a statement fully borne out by a careful examination of some of the engravings—such for instance as the Judgment of Paris, where the corrections made with the needle are easily detected by the aid of a lens. A fine drawing by Cortona is next worthy of notice, representing a Roman Sacrifice: it has been engraved by Bartolozzi, whose too careful manner, suitable for the small classical designs of Cipriani, failed to render the ideas of a painter of larger and more important subjects. Two good sketches by Borgognone come next, very clever, but slight in execution. Then a fair Carlo Maratti, of the head of the Virgin in red chalk, and the last to be noticed is by Berrettoni, of Venus and the dead Adonis, in bistre.

Of the Venetian School, we have a fair study by Titian, in black chalk, a study in pen by Battista Franco of the Rape of Deianeira, and a beautiful drawing of "Men Loading Asses" by the chaste designer of landscapes, Domenico Campagnola: also two clever studies by Bassano, one of them, however, rather coarse and grotesque, and a number by Tintoretto, made for his large picture of the "Crucifixion," so finely engraved by Agostino Caracci. There are fifteen of these slight spirited studies in black chalk on grey paper, probably all from the Reynolds collection, and there are others elsewhere; but the number is easily accounted for when one considers the multitude of figures in the picture and its richness of incident. Two sketches by Farinato are bold and clever, as are one by Paolo Caliari (Veronese), two by Jacob Palma of the "Entombment" and "Christ Descending," and another by Sebastiano Ricci, entitled "Panis Angelorum:" these examples may be said to conclude with a view of a tomb and chapel by Canaletto, for the slight sketches by his pupil Guardi, though true enough, are not of much importance.

The Mantuan School is dependent for its place here on a good drawing by Bartolomeo Manfredi of a Holy Family, in pen and bistre; so that we must pass without delay to the Parmesan, which makes a fair start with three genuine works of Correggio. The first is the recumbent figure of an angel, in red chalk heightened, the next a study of a female playing upon the flute, a pure little piece of poetry with two heads on the same sheet; and the third a very fine study, in red and black chalk, of the academical figure of a man seated. Then come some of the endless studies of Parmigiano, who probably supplied his contemporaries with designs to assist them in their efforts to express motion. I am confirmed in my opinion by the number of his etchings which have evidently been fixed up in painters' studios, as shown by the fact that they bear the holes from the pins or nails used for the purpose, as well as the invariable oil stain. Most notable is a sketch in pen and bistre of a dancing Cupid, then a beautiful design, probably copied from a Greek gem, of a winged female figure holding a lifeless man by the arm, and a second subject on the same sheet of Hercules struggling with Cerberus. A slight sketch in pen follows of a female partly draped, and another, also in pen, of an old man seen in profile. Last among what is worth noticing in this school may be mentioned a fine sketch in black chalk for the Assumption, by Lanfranco.

The School of Bologna commences with a fair drawing by Tibaldi, in black chalk, washed with Indian ink, representing the Birth of the Virgin, followed by another in pen and sepia, washed, of St. Anthony of Padua, by Federigo Barocci. We have after this, three creditable performances by Guercino—the first, in red chalk, a saint about to be decapitated; the next, an allegorical drawing of a young female seated in a car, in pen and bistre; the third, a study of a youth wearing a fur cap. It would be strange, indeed, to find a collection of drawings without a few by Guercino, for the examples are innumerable, and very few of them studies for pictures: most of them have evidently been executed in a rapid manner to multiply the number for sale, for there must have been a large market for them during the painter's life. We have next a very fine landscape, in pen and sepia, by G. F. Bolognese, and another, a view of the Church of St. Lorenzo at Rome, signed by the artist. By Simon da Pesaro, we have a beautiful study of Cupids seated on clouds, in red chalk. This brings the School of Bologna to a close.

The remarks made above on Guercino apply equally to Luca Cambiaso, of the school of Genoa, of whose meretricious performances with pen and bistre we have here 17 examples. The best is a slight sketch for Leda and the Swan, but two others are perhaps worthy of a passing remark, namely, "Angels grouped in the clouds, bearing the implements of the Passion," and "Venus dissuading Adonis from the Chase." The very slight execution of the Leda accounts for its attractiveness, for had it been more highly finished it would have lost its delicacy. To conclude this school we have here two bold studies in distemper colour, by Castiglione, the one representing "A Nymph surprised by Satyrs" being the best of the two. The only drawings of the Neapolitan School of any importance are a sheet of studies by Salvator Rosa in pen and sepia, and a clever design for a fountain in black chalk by Luca Giordano. Of the School of Fontainebleau, which is the last of the Italian, there is a study, in black chalk, of "Two Men embracing," by F. Primaticcio.

The German School commences with a curious and early specimen, wrongly ascribed to Martin Schöngauer though of his time. It is deficient in the beauty and sentiment of that master, though equal to him in the general treatment of the composition and richness of incident. The unusual rendering of the subject is remarkable, the angel presenting a sealed paper instead of the accepted offering, the lily, the emblem of purity. The fact of this having been in many important collections adds not a little to its value—more especially as it bears the mark of Sir Peter Lely. Next, ignoring of course the spurious Dürers, is a design by Hans Baldung Grün, for the subject of the Conversion of Saul, which he afterwards engraved on wood: so Italian in feeling is this design, that some excuse must be allowed for its having been formerly erroneously ascribed to Titian. Two specimens by Hans Holbein follow, both of them being of the finest quality; the first a portrait in crayons on salmon-coloured paper of a gentleman, so noble in appearance that it would be interesting to identify if possible the individual portrayed; the second, the Capture of a City, of which a companion drawing is preserved in the print-room of the British Museum. The subjects have not been made out of either. There is a feeling about the last-mentioned which probably might lead to its being mistaken for the production of Urs Graf, but on careful comparison with the productions of Hans Holbein, it will be found to be identical in many respects with that master's treatment, particularly in the manner of working, and the details. Melchior Lorich's design for one of his woodcuts, displays the firmness and power of outline which are characteristic of an artist who is in the habit of drawing on wood: this is followed by a clever design for a draped figure of an angel, designed by Joachim Von Sandrart, and by one of Hollar's delicately executed river scenes in pen. Two of Sir Godfrey Kneller's portraits succeed, one in crayons, and the other in black chalk, the former a gentleman and the latter a lady, both life size; and a head of an elderly man in crayons, by Sir Peter Lely, signed.

In the Dutch School the drawings attributed to Lukas van Leyden are merely copies from his prints. The first work of any merit is by Octavio Van Veen, a bedroom with numerous figures; next comes one of Heinrich Goltzius's highly finished productions, signed, and dated, which was engraved by Saenredam and another contemporary engraver; an allegorical subject by Abraham Bloemaert; some drawings in pen by Cornelius Poelenburg, merely studies in landscape, only one of them having a figure introduced; and some careful and neatly finished views in Holland, in black chalk, by Jan van Goyen. Other noteworthy landscapes are by Jan Pinas, Roeland Roghman, and J. Stellingwerf; those attributed to Rembrandt are all spurious—one, however, is by his scholar, Jan Lievens. The one ascribed to Adriaan Ostade, of the Pig Killer and his family, possesses some of the merit and feeling of that painter, but is hardly good enough for his hand, and if by him must be an early effort. The specimens by Antoni Waterloo are all genuine, and the large one of a stream crossed by a slight wooden bridge, in black chalk, is extremely fine. A street scene, with trees shading the thoroughfare, a pretty production in body colours by Philip de Koningh, recalls, like many others of this school, Dutch life in all its truthfulness; a highly finished "Interior of a Merchant's Office," with its staff in full activity, is interesting as having been engraved; a landscape with cattle drinking, in red chalk, by Nicolaas Berchem, and a view on the Rhine by Jan Almeloveen in pen, are fair examples of the masters; and one of the specimens by Paul Potter, executed at the age of 17, is of some interest, as showing the early progress of one of the most famous masters of the school, but the better of his drawings is a study of trees in black chalk--both are signed. The two Ruisdaels are both good drawings, and also the classical landscape, by F. de Moucheron, although the two men's works are as different as those of any artists can well be. Pieter de Molyne is well represented by six examples of his careful pretty little studies of landscape, neatly executed, in black chalk, and washed slightly with Indian ink. William Van de Velde, the younger, of course is found here, his sketches being so plentiful that a collector still living used to boast of having as many as would pave Covent Garden: the best is a "Fleet of Men-of-War, unfurling their Sails." Curiously enough a sketch by Paul Sandby in this collection has been attributed to Van de Velde, as if that artist had not done enough himself. A little landscape in pen by Dirk Maas, and signed, is very pretty and true; so also is the view of Amsterdam by Gerard Rademaker. Jan Van Huysum's classical landscape is curious as a specimen of the master's works executed before he took entirely to flower painting. "The avenue of trees on the bank of a canal" a pretty Dutch view in distemper by a painter not much known to fame, although deserving of it, Paul Constantin La Fargue, and a fair specimen by Hendrik Spilman, with two by Hendrik Kobell, conclude what is noteworthy of this school, which ranges from the beginning of the 17th century to the close of the eighteenth.

The Flemish School commences with an anonymous but interesting example of the latter end of the 15th century, in distemper, which has been attributed to Cimabue. The next in chronological order of any note is a landscape with banditti, by Paul Bril, in pen, and signed; another of a large size in pen, tinted by Peeter Breughel, is one of those subjects of festivity so dear to painters of this School, whose efforts to crowd every phase of Flemish life into one composition are incomprehensible, as regards the amount of labour unsparingly bestowed; the two drawings, by Jan Breughel, of simple landscapes are very pretty. Three specimens by the engraver, Jacob de Gheyn, the elder, are good examples: this artist's drawings are often taken for those of his Dutch master, Heinrich Goltzius, but to find one ascribed to Lukas Cranach, a German of about a century earlier, is somewhat astounding to connoisseurs. Another "Kermesse," this time by Roeland Savery, is larger and more important than the one by Breughel just mentioned, and displays the added incident of peasants carrying an effigy of the Pope. Next comes a master of a very different stamp, Peter Paul Rubens: the first of his specimens represents "The Eternal Father," another "Lot and his Daughters." Both are in black chalk, as also is a remarkable study of arms from nature. A fine landscape in pen, by Lucas van Uden follows, and another by David Teniers, the younger, enlivened with figures; also a highly finished "View on the Tiber," by Lievin Cruyl. Sir John Baptist De Medina next figures in our list, a name better known in Edinburgh than elsewhere:

we have by him the set of drawings in pen and bistre, washed with Indian ink, for the first edition of Milton's Paradise Lost published with plates. They are of meretricious design, but they have evidently been highly esteemed by a former possessor, being elaborately mounted with rusticated borders in distemper, by an Italian pennman named Pellegrino, who ostentatiously gives his name in full on the title. This school is concluded by a master whose drawings are more important for their rarity than for their beauty, Peeter Tillemans.

The French school opens with a couple of specimens by that great master of design, Jacques Callot. One of them is a study for his masterpiece, "The Temptation of St. Anthony," which, judging by the number of careful studies that he made for this wonderful production, he intended to be his chef-d'œuvre: its importance was no matter of chance, as was also the case with Raffaello's picture of the "Entombment" in the palazzo Borghese, of which likewise so many studies exist. The grotesque design of Jacques Bellange of the "Virgin and Saint" follows, curious in its way, as showing the painful efforts of a rather clever man painting evidently on commission. Had he been inspired with enthusiasm he would probably have done better. The two drawings of the same subject, "Theseus discovering the sword of his father," by Nicolas Poussin, are both good, the one executed in red chalk being perhaps the better of the two; they are interesting as showing the pains taken by the master in the arrangement of the principal figures. The two Claudes are fine, particularly the grand study, in pen and bistre, from the upper portion of a tree in full foliage. The second is curious as being the same design as one in the "Liber Veritatis" of the Duke of Devonshire, which was engraved by Richard Earlom. Gabriel Perelle, well known, like Callot, to print collectors by his etchings, is here represented by one of his drawings of a "Landscape with Ruins." Next comes one by a painter, Van der Meulen, always claimed by France, but still unmistakeably Flemish, representing a "Fight for Roman Standards" in pen: this is followed by another by the same artist, a specimen of his more careful manner, and probably executed by him before he resided in Paris. Sebastian Le Clerc's designs for book illustrations are careful, as such drawings generally are and ought to be; then we have a good specimen of Jean Jouvenet, a "Kneeling Figure with Arms extended," which has in all probability been engraved; and La Fage's design for a frieze in pen is worthy of a passing remark, as also are the drawings of Bernard Picart, which have been mistaken for those by Le Clerc. The little female head executed in red and black chalk, by Watteau, is beautiful, and a drawing of the seated figure of a man in the same materials by his scholar, Nicolas Lancret, is a fair example of that artist's ability. Two drawings by François Boucher come next—one particularly fine, a study of "Cupids," in black chalk: there is a third attributed to this master which illustrates my idea on the amount of weeding to be desired, for in this instance we have a copy from a print, and not at all a good one. Le Prince's drawings are not so well known as the last painter's works, but they are in many instances deserving of the close companionship they are found in here—the "Study of a young Maiden in semi-oriental Costume" will be found to bear out the remark. A modern drawing by a well-known lithographic draughtsman, Jean Victor Adam, finishes the list of noteworthy French works in this collection.

Then come five drawings of the Spanish School. One of the most interesting, though more for its local and historical than for its artistic merits, displays the incidents at a bull fight in the "Piazza di Madrid," about the middle of the 17th century, illustrating the manner in which such exhibitions were arranged, and showing the spectators crowded even on the housetops to witness their favourite sport.

Mr. Dyce did not fall into the error into which so many men of high training were betrayed at the time when he commenced collecting—the assumption, namely, that his own countrymen were inferior to their neighbours as painters, and that their works were not worthy of foreign companionship. For taken altogether, the English portion of his collection is the best. We commence with a fine study in black chalk, by William Dobson; then we have Isaac Fuller's spirited sketch for his own portrait, which is now at Oxford, and is engraved in the 4th edition of Walpole's Anecdotes of Paintings; then comes one of John Greenhill's portraits, that of George Digby, Earl of Bristol, in crayons, and a full supply of Sir James Thornhill's pen and sepia sketches—two of them for the same subject, showing much painstaking with poor results. The elder Richardson next attracts our attention by two heads, one in pen, and the other in red and black chalk; the first, of a man in a tie-wig and three-cornered hat is much the finer: both are dated by the painter. Hogarth may be said to be a blank, for there appears only a copy of one of his prints. This is followed by a highly finished study in red chalk, by the etcher, Thomas Worlidge, and a sketch for a portrait, by Francis Cotes. Alexander Cozens comes next (the father of the better known John), whose volume of drawings now in the print room of the British Museum, Leslie relates, was lost by him in Italy, and accidentally discovered by his son. Excepting in this volume his drawings are very uncommon. One is drawn with a camel hair pencil, a favourite manner of working with him. Next comes a very fine sketch by Johan Zoffany, in black and red chalk. John Hamilton Mortimer's versatile book-illustrations follow, mostly executed with the pen, some tinted: two of them are studies from Shakespeare which he successfully etched himself. I may also notice two landscapes by the clever but meretricious painter Zuccherelli, who was so well patronized in this country, and obtained the honours of the Royal Academy.

By Richard Wilson the great painter of classical landscape who was so disgracefully neglected in his painful efforts to obtain bread, there are no less than twenty-eight sketches; most of them, it is true, very slight, but still possessing the same refinement of thought as his pictures. The most remarkable for poetic feeling in the series is certainly "The Lake of Nemi, 1753:" it is a gem of the brightest water for a student whose art education is advanced enough to comprehend it. The "Landscape with effect of Storm" is likewise very fine, and it is of interest as the figure of Amelia was introduced into one of his well-known pictures without alteration. "Castel Gandolfo" and "Baiae" are also extremely beautiful. Sir Joshua Reynolds's study in black and red chalk for "Puck on a Toadstool" is of interest to all lovers of the master's work, as being the first idea for one of his favourite subjects: we have also the first sketch for the celebrated portrait of the "Marchioness of Tavistock" at Woburn, slightly rendered in black chalk heightened with white, and two other sketches for portraits. Two of Giovanni Battista Cipriani's well-known and beautiful designs are here, the best being the man conversing with two females, in pen and sepia, washed. The second has a curious note, with the date of 1768, on the opening of the Royal Academy. One of Reynolds's most important rivals in portraiture, if we omit Romney, and the contemporary of Wilson in landscape painting, Thomas Gainsborough next approaches. We have 26 of his studies, many of them of the finest quality: see "Landscape with Figures," "Landscape with Market-cart," "Woody Landscape with Figures," "Effect of Storm," "Suffolk Scenery," and "View in Suffolk," all truthful studies from nature and full of the exquisite poetical feeling that so distinguished this painter from all his contemporaries except poor Wilson. Then of his figure subjects and portraits we have noteworthy examples in "First design for a Picture," "A Shepherd Boy standing," and the life size study of a head introduced in the composition from which Richard Earlom engraved a plate.

Gainsborough is succeeded by John Cozens, called the father of English landscape painters in watercolours. Be this as it may, his Italian education had given him, as was the case with Wilson, that classical taste in the treatment of his subjects which adds refinement to his more simple compositions. The two most beautiful are the "Lake Scene, with Mountainous Distance," and the "Coast Scene with Storm Effect," but the most beautiful of all, although slight, is "View in Switzerland:" this is charming indeed, but there are others which are good, such as the "Lake Scene," the "Valley with Winding Streams," and the "View of Geneva." William Hamilton's drawings are pleasing, as his meretricious compositions usually are: the two noticed here owe their chief interest to the fact that they are portraits of the celebrated tragic actress, Mrs. Siddons. Next comes Thomas Girtin, a man whose individual influence on the school of English watercolour painting marked an epoch in that branch of art of which his short life did not enable him to see the result, but which was seen by his companion in colouring prints, and afterwards in making drawings for Walker's "Itinerant"—J.

M. W. Turner. We have here four examples, two of them, "Landscape with a River Winding" and "Landscape view from a Hill," exceedingly fine—one in fact as fine as anything he ever touched. The "Banqueting House," one of his very early and boyish attempts, is curious as showing how rapid his progress was a few years afterwards. Four specimens by George Morland follow, all good—the first "Landscape with Figures," a truthful little bit of that English rustic life and scenery, which he loved so well to depict. "The Portrait of Mrs. Ward," the painter's sister, is interesting. The studies in chiaroscuro executed by the Rev. William Gilpin, for his printed work on the Fine Arts, are all so similar that we wonder why he repeated the subject: one teaches quite as much as a hundred, perhaps more, for we are apt to get confused by repetitions, and wrongly to accuse ourselves of inability to appreciate each particular distinction. Angelica Maria Kauffman is represented by four fair specimens of her pastoral efforts, the best being that of Angelica and Medoro, in colours. Seven drawings by Paul Sandby follow, one a fine composition, "Ruins on a Rock." Two of the others were engraved in aqua-tint by himself.

Next comes the amateur caricaturist, Henry William Bunbury, who presents us with one of those popular subjects which pleased our ancestors at the latter end of the last century—for the subject, a college scene, was engraved in 1780. We have also six studies from his designs, which were etched by Thomas Rowlandson for the "Picturesque Beauties of Boswell." One of them, which, however, is not to be found in that series, may be intended for a meeting at Mrs. Piozzi's, for there is evidently an allusion to "blue stockings," the legs of the whole party being tinted grey, including the wooden one of the soldier who is a member of the party.

P. J. de Louthembourg is here introduced, in three drawings. "Landscape with Cattle" is rather good; but the next is remarkable as refuting the proverb that shepherds are weather-wise, for though a heavy storm is evidently approaching, the herdsman is making no effort to place his cattle under shelter or to seek refuge himself, his attention probably being engaged by the tones of his bagpipe. One of Bartolozzi's mythological subjects highly finished in colours is included in the collection. Of four drawings by another of Turner's early contemporaries, Thomas Hearne, a good specimen is "Ludlow Castle, 1788," as also is the "Priory Church at Haddington;" but they partake of the peculiar hardness in the distance which generally distinguishes this master's works from those of his more celebrated contemporaries. A fine drawing follows by another man of the same period whose works are rather uncommon, Julius Cæsar Ibbetson, "The Sale of the Pet Lamb." Next we have a fair specimen of each of the academicians, James Northcote and Benjamin West, and six by the vigorous, but somewhat eccentric Henry Fuseli—the spirit of a beautiful maiden hovering over her parents in their declining life was executed by the latter in one of his more sober moments. Next comes a humorous designer of almost the same vigour as the last, but ten times more prolific, Thomas Rowlandson, who so successfully portrayed every style of rough English life with that broad, though not over decent, humour, for which he was unrivalled; now and then introducing a sweet bit of landscape, and not being below a little pathos where he thought it desirable. There are 34 of his designs here, some in his best style. See, for instance, in "A Roadside Inn, 1784," how well are the dispositions of the soldiers taking refreshments rendered by their different actions! See also "Hampton Court Palace" and "Portsmouth Harbour—Lord Howe's Victory," for incidents of vigorous life. For more refinement, see the charming drawing of "St. Austell, Cornwall," and the view of "Kew Palace;" remark also how true is the ruffianism of the maddened crew at the "Betting Post." These are followed by the "Tour of Dr. Syntax," for which Mr. Combe wrote the verses. Here we have the poet indebted to the painter. Only three of the drawings from this collection however were etched and published in the work, the remainder being quite new to the present generation of the admirers of the poem. The eminent caricaturist James Gillray next supplies a series of six designs for one of his popular etchings, the painstaking and numerous alterations being quite unaccountable in a genius so versatile, so rapid in execution. Gillray was evidently in no happy mood while engaged on these sketches. While mixing with the notes and suggestions for the title such observations, as "Poor Corregio died wretched, and Morland," was his madness making itself felt, or was he more probably suffering from despondency resulting from the effects of his besotted vice? How different a being was John Flaxman—whose two drawings follow, one of them of a man in grief, displaying his power of design linked with a pure feeling for a pathetic subject. Two of the youthful Lawrence's careful studies from the antique precede some of Samuel de Wilde's highly finished portraits of actors and actresses.

The large number of 86 sketches by Thomas Stothard have to be noticed. Although most of them are very slight, being hurriedly executed with pen or pencil on the first scrap of paper that came to hand, still, in most instances, they are of importance, being the first ideas for some of his most beautiful compositions. Many of them have been identified while others still remain to be made out: all are interesting as showing the method pursued in sketching on until the design pleased the painter's eye, which generally had beauty of form and an elegant flow of graceful lines in view. One of them, a "Prow of a Ship in Flames," is of some interest, as showing that Smirke as well as Chantrey was indebted to Stothard for some of his designs. There are only two of his important drawings—a very fine design for a candelabrum and a youth supporting the lifeless form of a maiden. Thirteen of Richard Westall's illustrations to Milton, Cowper, &c. follow, the most important being the coloured drawings for Beckford's “Vathek”—all that can be said of them however, is, that they are very pretty. Sir David Wilkie’s 20 sketches are important as being, in some instances, painstaking studies for some of his pictures, such as “Holyrood Palace,” “The School,” “The First Earring” and the “News from the Battle of Waterloo.” Some fine examples by the well known John Varley follow, “The Lake Scene” and “Coast Scene” being both good; but the finest is a “Welsh View with Cottage,” which is really beautiful in treatment, and charming in colour. The river scene, however, by John Sell Cotman is enough to prove the latter to be by far the greater man of the two, there being always a subtle grandeur in the treatment of his slightest works. The Turners are all, I fear, spurious. Two studies by John Martin, are important, one as being a sketch for his large picture at Kingham, Durham: his drawings, moreover, are by no means common. A mention of five views by Frederick Christian Lewis—of “Oxford” and “Berry Pomeroy Castle,” all in colours—and of a “River Scene” by William Havell, will bring to a close this brief summary of Mr. Dyce’s important bequest of drawings to the nation.

G. W. REID.

FLORENTINE SCHOOL.

MASO FINIGUERRA.

Goldsmith, worker in niello, inventor of the process of taking off impressions on paper from engraved plates.

Born 1410, flourished in the middle of the 15th century.

There appears to be but one collection in Europe containing drawings ascribed to this master, that in the Ducal palace at Florence, which originally formed a portion of the collection of Cardinal Leopold of Tuscany. Baldinucci speaks very highly of this series of fifty-six works, and describes them as principally studies of single figures, designed with a pen on white paper, and slightly shaded with bistre or Indian ink, and as possessing, in an eminent degree, that correctness of outline and simplicity of manner which especially characterise the works of Masaccio. Baldinucci uses this language to favour his theory that Finiguerra was the last-named painter's scholar.

VENUS, standing, partially draped, holding a bow in her right hand, and a vase in her left, from which water is flowing to Cupid, who is reclining on the ground; on the other side, at the back of the Goddess, is a boy, with a caduceus; above is inscribed, in a semicircle, VENERI VLCAVI VXORI DICATVM. Pen and bistre, highly finished. 148

Height, $10\frac{9}{12}$ inches. Width, $8\frac{5}{12}$ inches. With the corners cut off.

The initials of the artist, I. F. T., are on a tablet beneath, transposed for engraving, and may be read thus, "Tommaso Finiguerra incidit." From the Collection of Richard Cosway, R.A., and probably the drawing described in the sale catalogue of his collection, No. 362, as by Andrea Mantegna.

ANTONIO DEL POLLAJUOLO.

Goldsmith, Painter, and Engraver.

Born at Florence in 1426, died at Rome in 1498.

FEMALE, standing, wearing only a piece of drapery over her arms; she holds a vase in her left hand and presses one of her breasts with the other: Cupid stands behind with his torch. An altar is on the right with burning incense. Pen and bistre, highly finished. 149

Height, $9\frac{7}{12}$ inches. Width, $6\frac{9}{12}$ inches.

Collection unknown.—A floral ornament.

BACCIO DELLA PORTA, called FRÀ BARTOLOMEO.

Born at Savignano, near Florence, in 1469, died in 1517.

DESIGN for an ALTAR-PIECE. The Virgin and Child, with Saints.* Two of them are embracing in the foreground; the Virgin above, four other saints on each side, standing. A study for the picture in the Gallery of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, in which no saints are introduced in the foreground, but two angels are seated on the steps side by side, and the figure of St. Anne is represented standing behind the Virgin. The composition has been engraved by Giovanni Antonio Lorenzini. Black chalk on brown paper. 150

Height, 8 inches. Width, 6 $\frac{5}{12}$ inches.

FEMALE, holding a book with both hands, and turning her head towards the left. Study for a Sibyl, very slight; not in the painter's usual manner of working. Black chalk on brown paper. 151

Height, 11 $\frac{7}{12}$ inches. Width, 8 $\frac{7}{12}$ inches.

LEONARDO DA VINCI.

Born at Vinci near Florence in 1452, died in France in 1519.

STUDIES of four human heads and the skull of an animal. The head, in profile, of a young woman by the side of that of an old one; the face of an old man above, and a grotesque face turned to the left. The profile of the young woman is much injured by being touched upon. A leaf of a sketch book. Pen and bistre. 152

Height, 6 $\frac{1}{12}$ inches. Width, 4 $\frac{4}{12}$ inches.

ANDREA VANNUCCHI, called DEL SARTO.

Born at Florence in 1488, died at Florence in 1530.

The SALUTATION. A man appears on the left, ascending the steps, with a bundle on his shoulder; Mary and Elizabeth are embracing, and St. Joseph with a burden stands in the foreground on the right. Study in black chalk for the picture in the Scalza at Florence. There is an engraving of this composition with the address of Antonie Lefreri. 153

Width, 6 $\frac{1}{12}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{3}{12}$ inches.

Collections—Jonathan Richardson, Sir Joshua Reynolds, and Lord Spencer.

STUDY of the back of a female torso. Black chalk and delicately finished in Indian ink. 154

Height, 9 $\frac{6}{12}$ inches. Width, 4 $\frac{3}{12}$ inches.

Collections—Jonathan Richardson, senior, and Sir Joshua Reynolds.

* Another and more important study for this composition of the Virgin enthroned and surrounded by saints, is in the Craherode Collection in the British Museum, and a third is in the Uffizi Gallery at Florence, which has only one saint on each side of the Virgin, and instead of the monks embracing in the foreground, a boy is seated, who is playing on the violin.

GIANNANTONIO SOGLIANI.

Born at Florence in 1478, died in 1530.

ST. JOHN reclining on the ground, sleeping: a study of the right fore-arm and hand beneath. Highly finished in red chalk. From a design by Lorenzo Sciarpelloni di Credi. 155

Width, 13 $\frac{5}{12}$ inches. Height, 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

IL ROSSO, called LE MAÎTRE ROUX.

Born at Florence in 1496, died in 1541.

ST. ANTHONY, standing, with his right foot raised on a stone, a bell in his right hand and a staff in the other hand. Pen, washed with bistre. 156

Height, 8 $\frac{4}{12}$ inches. Width, 3 $\frac{8}{12}$ inches.

Collections—Jan Pieter Zoomer and Jonathan Richardson, junior.

BACCIO BANDINELLI.

Born at Florence in 1487, died in 1559.

PORTRAIT of BENEDETTO VARCHI, Florentine writer (1502-65.) The head in profile, turned to the right. Inscribed, BENE-DICTVS VARCHIVS. Boldly drawn in pen and bistre. 157

Height, 11 $\frac{5}{12}$ inches. Width, 8 inches.

BACCHUS, with a LEOPARD. The god holds a bunch of grapes in his right hand. Pen and bistre, slightly washed with Indian ink. 158

Height, 16 $\frac{8}{12}$ inches. Width, 10 $\frac{3}{12}$ inches.

Collections—Padre Restà and Pierre Jean Mariette.

STUDIES of nude figures; the principal one of a man, seated, with his right leg raised, much larger than the others. Pen and bistre. 159

Height, 16 $\frac{3}{12}$ inches. Width, 10 $\frac{2}{12}$ inches.

STUDY of a MALE FIGURE; naked, excepting a slight piece of drapery thrown across the shoulders; seen to the knees only and stooping. Pen and sepia. 160

Height, 12 $\frac{5}{12}$ inches. Width, 9 $\frac{4}{12}$ inches.

Collections—Jan Pieter Zoomer and Count Barez.

CAVE with the SKELETON of a gigantic animal secured by bands of leather to the branches of trees, and Human Figures. An Allegory. Pen and bistre. 161

Width, 15 $\frac{5}{12}$ inches. Height, 9 $\frac{1}{12}$ inches.

MICHEL ANGELO BUONARROTI.

Sculptor and Painter.

Born at Arezzo in Tuscany in 1474, died at Rome in 1563.

TWO STUDIES for the death of the children of Niobe. Sketched with the pen and slightly washed. 162

Width, 5 $\frac{4}{12}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{2}{12}$ inches. Left corner at bottom cut off.

Collection—Ralph Udney.

STUDY, from the Cartoon of Pisa, of the man assisting his companions by the arm, and the naked soldier seated by his side. Pen, washed. 163

Height, 13 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Width, 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

Slight STUDY of a naked man reclining on his shield, and the figure of a horse above. Sketched with the pen and slightly washed. On the reverse, a slight sketch of one of the designs for the Medici tombs in the chapel attached to the church of San Lorenzo* at Florence. Pen and bistre. 164

Height, 5 inches. Width, 4 $\frac{7}{8}$ inches. Of an irregular form.

FRANCESCO ROSSI, called IL SALVIATI.

Born at Florence in 1510, died at Rome in 1563.

THE ESCAPE OF LOT. Destroying angels are seen above the doomed city, while others on the right are conducting the family to a place of safety, all but the patriarch's wife, who has already met her fate. Pen and ink, on salmon-coloured paper, heightened with white. 165

Width, 7 $\frac{8}{12}$ inches. Height, 3 $\frac{9}{12}$ inches.

Collections—Jonathan Richardson, senior, and Ralph Udney.

DANIELE RICCIARELLI, called DI VOLTERRA.

Born at Volterra in 1509, died at Rome in 1566.

CHRIST BEARING THE CROSS. A composition of many figures. The Maries are in a row on the left by the side of the cross, which two soldiers are lifting on the exhausted Saviour's shoulders; several horsemen are conducting the procession. Pen, on paper prepared with warm distemper colour, and heightened with white. 166

Width, 18 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Height, 12 $\frac{5}{12}$ inches.

Collection unknown—A floral ornament.

GIORGIO ARETINO VASARI.

Born at Arezzo, 1512, died at Florence, 1574.

THE WORSHIP OF THE VIRGIN. She is crowned on earth by angels, Death and Time sacrifice to her; she appears again in heaven, surrounded by the righteous, and the Saviour in a halo of glory by her side. Pen and bistre. 167

Height, 15 $\frac{8}{12}$ inches. Width, 9 $\frac{8}{12}$ inches.

VIGNETTE. JUPITER and EUROPA, in a frame, surrounded by arabesques, enclosed in a lunette with an arched top. Pen and bistre, washed. 168

Width, 8 $\frac{6}{12}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{7}{12}$ inches.

* There are many sketches preserved which Michel Angelo made for these tombs; some of them are to be found in the British Museum and others at Oxford.

FRANCESCO BARTOLOZZI, R.A.

Designer and Engraver.

Born at Florence in 1728, worked there and in London, died at Lisbon in 1815.

VENUS reclining on a bank which is strewn with elegant drapery. Cupid has flown to her arms. His mother has stolen his bow. He is again introduced in the distance driving two swans, which he guides with reins. In an oval. Highly finished in colours. 764

Width, 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

JAMES GILLRAY.

Eminent Caricaturist, Etcher and Engraver.

Born about 1757, died in London in 1815.

Six SKETCHES made for the Caricature "Connoisseurs examining a collection of George Morland's," where portraits of Angerstein, Mitchell, Caleb Whitefoord, G. Baker, and Mortimer, are introduced. — (Wright and Evans's Catalogue, No. 551.) With numerous notes, and among them about a dozen suggestions for the title: "An Admirer of Rembrandt;" "Struck with a grand effect," &c.

(1.) First idea for the principal figure, said to be John Julius Angerstein. Slight, sketched in black chalk. 765

Height, 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Width, 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

(2.) The same figure. In black chalk and pen. Squared for transferring to the copper. 766

Height, 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Width, 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

(3.) The same, the background with pictures introduced. Black chalk and red ink, squared for copying; notes in reference to the title. 767

Height, 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Width, 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

- (4.) The same. Mr. Angerstein is drawing a curtain from over the picture he is looking at. The notes for title, &c. are still more numerous. Black chalk, squared for copying; corrected with red ink. 768
Height, $8\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Width, $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.
- (5.) The entire composition. The pictures on the wall merely sketched in. Drawn with the pen in black and red ink, with numerous notes. 769
Height, 19 inches. Width, $11\frac{6}{12}$ inches.
- (6.) The entire composition. The copy ready for transferring to the copper. The pictures against the wall more distinctly made out. Drawn with the pen and washed with Indian ink. Many interesting notes, "Poor Corregio died wretched, and Morland," &c. Squared for copying. 770
Height, 19 inches. Width, $12\frac{9}{12}$ inches.

The great pains which have been taken in the studies for this caricature are noteworthy, and, in parts, appear quite unnecessary. The repetition of the principal figure is an instance. Probably this was due to the caprice of a patron.

THOMAS HEARNE.

Born at Brinkworth, near Malmesbury in Wiltshire in 1744, died in London, 1817.

"The comely pair by whom he sat,
A lady cheerful in her chat."—Vol. iii. p. 163.

The remainder of the series appear to have been designed for the work, but not etched nor used as suggestions to Mr. Combe, excepting those noted. It may not be generally known at the present time that the tours were written to elucidate the designs, which the following introduction fully explains. "This second tour is, like the former one, a work of suggestions from the plates by Mr. Rowlandson, though not with such entire reserve as the first. Some few of the subjects may have been influenced by hints from me; and I am willing to suppose that such are the least amusing of them."—Introduction to the second volume, 1820.

Width, $8\frac{3}{12}$ inches. Height, $4\frac{1}{12}$ inches.

DR. SYNTAX unable to pull up at the Land's End—is fearful of being carried to the World's End. View on the coast during a storm, with the vivid flashes of lightning frightening the people, and the heavy waves dashing on the shore. 805

Width, $10\frac{2}{12}$ inches. Height, $7\frac{8}{12}$ inches.

DR. SYNTAX taking wine with a lady in a drawing room, while the daughter of his hostess and her lover exchange caresses on a rustic seat under the verandah. 806

Width, $8\frac{5}{12}$ inches. Height, $10\frac{4}{12}$ inches.

ROWLANDSON—(continued).

DR. SYNTAX thrown off his horse while hunting. 807

“Your sport, my lord, I cannot take,
For I must go and hunt a lake.”—Vol. i. p. 108.

Mr. Combe no doubt thought it as well, although availing himself of the hint that hunting was not suited to the Doctor's taste, to mention the fact of the Doctor being asked to join the sport, and his declining the invitation as he was about to make some drawings on the lake.

Width, 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Height, 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

DR. SYNTAX leading a lady to the entrance of a grand mansion : most probably giving the idea of the Doctor escorting Lady Bounty from the garden to her mansion on their first interview. 808

“For while he sojourns he will be
The object of all courtesy.”—Vol. ii. p. 217.

Width, 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

DR. SYNTAX gazing at some ruins ; a man and boy in attendance. One plate was probably thought sufficient to illustrate “Sketching the Ruins, and tumbling in the Water,” through his seat giving way, the latter one being used. 809

“But now, alas ! no more remains
Than will reward the painters' pains.”—Vol. i. p. 71.

Width, 8 inches. Height, 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

DR. SYNTAX in the Jail ; a young fellow and three dogs on the left. 810

Width, 7 $\frac{5}{8}$ inches. Height, 4 $\frac{8}{12}$ inches.

BOARDING A MAN-OF-WAR. A boat load of people awaiting their turn to ascend a rope ladder, on which a gentleman of the party is fixed in rather an uncomfortable position. 811

Width, 8 $\frac{5}{8}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

DR. SYNTAX frightened by the appearance of a large fish having a form resembling that of a whale ; his companion and some fishwives are also greatly alarmed, and a few of them lie sprawling on the ground. 812

Width, 8 $\frac{2}{8}$ inches. Height, 4 $\frac{8}{12}$ inches.

DR. SYNTAX drawing the waterfall at Ambleside, while his man Patrick is eating voraciously. 813

“Bold sketches from the very scene,
Where, with his neighbours, he had been.”—Vol. ii. p. 64.

Width, 8 $\frac{2}{8}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

A LADY repulsing with the poker her guests, consisting of eight gentlemen, among whom is the doctor ; her dog by her side appears to be equally pugnacious. 814

Width, 8 $\frac{2}{8}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

DR. SYNTAX riding and chatting with a lady, under an avenue of trees ; a footman behind them. 815

Width, 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{5}{8}$ inches.

DR. SYNTAX playing at cards with a young lady ; an old wooden-legged officer seated near, apparently not in the best of tempers ; three other young ladies seated on the sofa take much interest in the game. 816

Width, 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

DR. SYNTAX gently opens the door of a garret, and is horrified to find a woman of the pavé reclining back in her chair dead ; a dog is seen on the left playing with her wig. 817

Width, 8 $\frac{2}{2}$ inches. Height, 4 $\frac{3}{2}$ inches.

DR. SYNTAX skating and saluting three ladies who stand on the bank of the frozen river. 818

Width, 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{3}{2}$ inches.

Height, 13 $\frac{9}{12}$ inches. Width, 8 inches.

PORTRAIT of John Bannister. He is seated on a bank, and smoking a very long pipe; his legs are crossed in an easy attitude, and his left hand rests on his thigh. Signed "D. W., October 26, 1794." In black and red chalk. 824

Height, 13 $\frac{3}{12}$ inches. Width, 9 $\frac{3}{12}$ inches.

THOMAS STOTHARD, R.A.

Painter and Etcher.

Born in London in 1755, and died there in 1834.

STUDY for the figure of Adam, naked, seated, and holding an apple in his left hand. Designed for the frontispiece to Clarke's Josephus, engraved by Cook in 1826. Pencil, outlined partially with a pen. 825

Height, 2 $\frac{6}{12}$ inches. Width, 1 $\frac{9}{12}$ inches.

STUDY of HEADS, one probably for a Magdalen, who rests her chin on her right hand; on the left, an old man with long hair hanging over his forehead. Pen and pencil. 826

Width, 5 $\frac{4}{12}$ inches. Height, 3 $\frac{5}{12}$ inches.

A tall thin MAN standing and praying with his face raised to heaven; he is very slightly draped, and only from the breast. Pencil, and slightly outlined with a pen. 827

Height, 3 $\frac{9}{12}$ inches. Width, 2 inches.

HECTOR and ANDROMACHE. She rests her right arm on his shoulder, while with outstretched arms he is about to take Astyanax from his nurse. Pen and ink sketch. 828

Width, 5 $\frac{2}{12}$ inches. Height, 4 $\frac{1}{12}$ inches.

SHEET of STUDIES for a subject of which the last is a more finished sketch. Hector and Andromache, as he is about to take Astyanax from his nurse, &c. On the back of a summons to a meeting of the Royal Academy, signed by John Richards, R.A., Secretary, and dated "12 Dec. 1804." In pencil, some of the figures outlined with the pen. 829

Width, 10 $\frac{6}{12}$ inches. Height, 5 $\frac{9}{12}$ inches.

ACHILLES dragging the body of HECTOR round the walls of Troy. The victorious hero bestrides that portion of the body of the vanquished hero which remains in the chariot, and is looking defiantly at the walls of Troy, where mourners are assembled. Engraved by Isaac Taylor in 1805 for F. J. Du Roveray. Pen, slightly tinted with grey, and warm neutral tint. 830

Height, $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Width, $5\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

STUDY of a nude warrior dragging another by the hair of his head, without regarding four persons who kneel and supplicate for mercy; other figures are in the distance. Pencil, partially outlined with pen, and washed with Indian ink. On the reverse, other studies for the same subject, &c. 831

Width, $7\frac{7}{8}$ inches. Height, $5\frac{9}{16}$ inches.

STUDY for "A Mythological Battle," a picture in the Vernon Gallery, which was engraved by G. C. Finden. Sketch for the Knight on the Black Horse. Very little more of the animal is shown than his head, the warrior raises himself on the horse, and poises a spear. Very slightly executed in pen. 832

Width, $2\frac{2}{12}$ inches. Height, $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

DESIGN for the frontispiece to the fifth volume of Hervey's Naval History. One of the groups of a sea nymph embraced by a Triton, who holds a piece of drapery over their heads as a sail to assist their progress. Pen. 833

Width, $3\frac{6}{8}$ inches. Height, $2\frac{5}{12}$ inches.

STUDY for "The ENCHANTED STREAM." Maidens bathing. The two principal figures are on each side of the bank; the one on the right with her feet in the water, and the other on the opposite bank with drapery over her knees. The subject was engraved by Charles Heath in 1827. Designed for Roscomon's Ode upon Solitude—

"Hail, sacred Solitude! from the calm sea
I view," &c.

First idea differing from the print, and the subject reversed. A study for Europa at the bottom. Slightly executed in pencil. 834

Height, $8\frac{7}{8}$ inches. Width, $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

JUVENILE BACCHANALS, probably a design for plate, with groups representing the drunkenness of Silenus, who is borne between two companions, and, on the reverse, two groups of revellers. Pencil, outlined with the pen. 835

Width, $11\frac{4}{12}$ inches. Height, $5\frac{5}{12}$ inches.

NAKED WARRIOR standing with his sword raised and a small piece of drapery floating behind his head, his face turned to the right and shown in profile. Sketch with the pen, washed with Indian ink, and neutral tint. 836

Height, $4\frac{9}{12}$ inches. Width, $1\frac{8}{12}$ inches.

STOTHARD—(continued).

Slight SKETCHES of horses and horsemen, the latter raising their sword arms. Pencil on warm toned paper, nearly imperceptible. 837

Height, 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Width, 5 $\frac{2}{2}$ inches.

SKETCH of ARMED FIGURES. Two warriors advance cautiously, apparently waiting an attack, the nearer inclines his head to his companion. Pen and washed with Indian ink. 838

Height, 6 $\frac{2}{2}$ inches. Width, 4 $\frac{0}{2}$ inches.

Another STUDY for a battle piece, with a naked warrior above, who takes a very long stride while attempting to strike an enemy. 839

Height, 8 $\frac{6}{2}$ inches. Width, 6 $\frac{5}{2}$ inches.

STUDIES for " BOTHWELL meeting MARY, QUEEN of SCOTS, seizes and conducts her a prisoner to Dunbar," engraved by R. H. Cromek, 1798; and another study. In pencil, and partly outlined with the pen. 840

Width, 7 inches. Height, 3 $\frac{0}{2}$ inches.

COMBAT. A royal personage leaning back the better to strike an adversary who holds his horse by the head; other figures are near. In pencil, slightly outlined with the pen, on warmly toned paper, and washed with Indian ink. 841

Height, 9 inches. Width, 8 $\frac{8}{2}$ inches.

SKETCH—" British Peerage, 1794." Two studies for a figure carrying a crown and sceptre; in the first, the figures are merely indicated by the forms of their heads; in the second, the figures are portrayed by a few lines. Slightly executed in pen. 842

Height, 5 $\frac{7}{2}$ inches. Width, 4 $\frac{3}{2}$ inches.

STUDY for part of a procession. First idea for the principal figures in " The Triumphal entry of Richard I. into London;" the subject was engraved by Hall in 1791. Two figures of horsemen, who ride towards the left, and converse. Very slightly executed in pencil. 843

Height, 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Width, 3 $\frac{4}{2}$ inches.

SKETCH of a HORSEMAN, who walks his steed towards the right, and raises his left arm in the air; an attending gentleman walks, hat in hand, by his side. Very slightly executed in pen and ink, washed with bistre. 844

Height, 3 $\frac{9}{2}$ inches. Width, 4 $\frac{4}{2}$ inches.

Three STUDIES. The first, the triumphal entry of a lady into a city—warriors on foot surround her horse; the other two represent her figure alone seated on her horse. Slightly executed in pen. 845

Width, 7 $\frac{7}{2}$ inches. Height, 4 $\frac{7}{2}$ inches.

Small Sheet of STUDIES; above, two nobles on horseback meeting, accompanied by a suite of warriors, and, below, a youth greeting a maiden, around whose waist he places an arm, her companions stand about them. Slightly executed in pen.

Height, $6\frac{6}{12}$ inches. Width, $4\frac{2}{12}$ inches.

First idea for the "DEATH of CAPTAIN FAULKNER," who is leading a boarding party; one man above raises his arm as if about to strike a blow with a sword. Engraved by Bromley in 1801. In pencil, on paper very slightly tinted with grey.

Height, $8\frac{3}{8}$ inches. Width, $7\frac{1}{4}$ inches.

DESIGN for MONUMENT, inscribed "BAYONNE." A simple urn on a pedestal supported by two English soldiers, one of whom is kneeling and apparently reading the inscription; the other holds one hand to his face in grief. Squared for enlarging or engraving. Drawn with pen and bistre, washed with Indian ink.

Height, $6\frac{6}{12}$ inches. Width, $4\frac{4}{12}$ inches.

DESIGN for MONUMENT, inscribed "WATERLOO." A very plain pillar ornamented with two wreaths entwined about, beneath which is the word Waterloo; Britannia seated on the left points to the inscription while encouraging a youth who stands on the right dressed in Roman costume and drawing his sword. Squared for enlarging or engraving. Outlined with pen and bistre, and washed with Indian ink.

Height, $6\frac{6}{12}$ inches. Width, $4\frac{3}{12}$ inches.

DESIGN for a WATERLOO MEDAL. Wellington and Blucher embracing on the field, a French standard bearer at their feet; Victory holds a crown above their heads, and soldiers support flags behind. Drawn with the pen and washed with bistre.

A circle, 6 inches in diameter.

Another DESIGN for the same, with some variations, Victory being represented with wings and the heads of the commanders being raised with more dignity. Drawn with the pen and washed with bistre.

851

A circle, 6 inches in diameter.

"TO GREAT MEN," &c. Two designs for a medal. The first shows a bust on a pedestal, supported by two seated figures; the second a standing figure, with a spear and shield, also with seated supporters. Beneath, studies for a sleeping child. Pen and ink.

852

Width, $8\frac{1}{12}$ inches. Height, $7\frac{1}{12}$ inches.

STUDIES on the back of a Note, dated "Ludgate Hill, 25 Sep. '09," from Rundell, Bridge, and Rundell giving Mr. Stothard the dimensions of "The Transparency, 16 feet wide, $10\frac{1}{2}$ feet

STOTHARD—(continued).

“high,” evidently for “The Jubilee.” One of the sketches is for a subject where three alarmed females approach a fourth, who appears to be fainting; the other consists of a row of women’s heads who appear excited by some object of curiosity. 853

Height, $7\frac{3}{4}$ inches. Width, $6\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

SKETCH. Prow of a Ship, in flames, and with thick smoke hiding everything on deck; on the reverse, a very small sketch of an estate with houses and land, &c. Very slightly executed in Indian ink.* 854

Width, $6\frac{3}{4}$ inches. Height, $3\frac{5}{8}$ inches.

FIRST SKETCH for the “Procession of the Fitch of Bacon.” Studies for part of the composition,—the principal figures of the leading group, the musicians, the horseman carrying the fitch, and the happy pair riding together—without all the figures behind. The whole only roughly indicated. Pen and pencil, washed in parts with bistre and Indian ink. 855

Width, $16\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Height, $7\frac{1}{2}$, $6\frac{3}{4}$ inches. Of an irregular form.

AN ILLUSTRATION to the DECAMERON, canto i. Philomena crowning Pampinea Queen for the day in the court of the palace and in the midst of their companions. Slightly drawn with the pen and tinted; reversed in the engraving, which is by Augustus Fox, 1825. 856

PRINTS AND ETCHINGS.

INTRODUCTION.

A glance at the miscellaneous collection of prints and etchings here catalogued will enable any one to discern the main object of its collector. Though fully appreciating the merits of his own countryman, William Hogarth, and yielding to some extent to a predilection for theatrical portraits, he has yet, in forming this collection, evidently chosen three great foreign masters, to be represented by the prints and etchings which from time to time have been reproduced from their works. Had it been thought advisable, indeed, to arrange the prints after masters, instead of on the more generally accepted plan of chronological arrangement according to engravers' works, there is in this collection material enough to enable one to form a fair idea of the compositions of Michel Angelo Buonarroti, Raffaello Sanzio di Urbino, and Peter Paul Rubens. The idea of making a single master's works complete was successfully carried out, as regards the greatest of these three painters, by the late Prince Consort, of whose collection an able catalogue was prepared by Director Ruland, the Prince's private secretary and librarian. That catalogue, the value of which cannot be overrated by any one connected with the fine arts, Herr Ruland was intending in 1872, with the consent of Her Majesty, to revise for the printer: it is to be hoped that this design has not been abandoned, for although it might take him from his duties at Weimar for a few months, the gain would be great, not to this nation alone but to all lovers of art, especially in so far as relates to the history of the greatest painter of the known world. Moreover, it is not just to so eminent a man as Herr Ruland that another hand should be called upon to finish his work. While alluding to the value of a perfect series of prints and other reproductions of the works of one master, it may not appear out of place to mention that the idea of forming as perfect a collection as possible of prints after masters of every school has for years been the aim of the print room authorities of the British Museum, the sole difficulty in so doing having been caused by want of space. For this purpose, series of prints arranged according to galleries must be broken up and incorporated into general collections with those published separately. These will then be arranged into schools, and, as regards masters, chronologically. The Dutch School has already been arranged, and when the new gallery round the print room is completed some of the spare space will be appropriated to the proceeds of similar labours. The plan may be said to be to a certain extent a new one, nothing of the kind having ever been attempted on the same scale.

As has been stated before the system adopted in the arrangement of the prints and etchings in this catalogue is in accordance with the progress of the arts of engraving and etching, each school being arranged as regards its masters in the chronological order of their works. Following this plan we meet first, in the Italian school, with a well-known and distinguished name, that of Andrea Mantegna, both painter and engraver, who is represented by nearly the whole of his more important works, the "Flagellation" of Christ being the first of the series. He is followed by Ugo da Carpi, who brought chiaro-scuro prints into notice in Italy. Leaving Carpi's single specimen we next reach the greatest of the early Italian engravers, Marc Antonio Raimondi. He worked for a long time under the supervision of Raffaello, who took so much interest in what he did as to prepare with his own hand working drawings for Raimondi to engrave from, and, as Vasari distinctly states, sometimes corrected the outlines on the copper. I take this opportunity of pointing out a fact which has not been noticed before—that in one of the prints which is fortunately here—the Judgment of Paris—in the forms of some of the figures, the outline has been corrected with the needle by Raffaello, precisely as Vasari states. I have also discerned this in other prints by Raimondi, of whom there are several fine specimens here besides the above, namely, the two Sons of Noah, David and Goliath, the Massacre of the Innocents (with the chicot), "La Vierge au bras nu," St. Paul preaching at Athens "La Vierge lisant," the Madonna suckling the Infant Jesus, the Martyrdom of St. Lawrence, Hercules strangling Antæus, Galatea, and "La Peste." It may be remarked that those named here are among the best of his efforts with the burin.

Next come the scholars and followers of Marc Antonio—the most eminent of them, Agostino de Musis (Veneziano), being represented by a series of some dozen or more, the best of which are the Sacrifice of Abraham, Lycaon, the Infant Hercules, and les Grimpeurs. As regards the last it might puzzle many people to say why Mr. Dyce should possess five impressions of this work, but the question is easily answered. The print was evidently a favourite one, and he went on buying it, improving on his purchases as he bought, until at last he succeeded in acquiring probably the finest in the world. Marco Dente da Ravenna, the next in eminence, presents us with Dares and Entellus as an example of his skill.

Caraglio's Æneas and Anchises and Alexander and Roxana, are fair examples of the master; but the works of le Maître au dé, who comes next, are more difficult to obtain than any other of the school—that is, if fine examples are sought for—and here Mr. Dyce's collection is particularly rich; for, besides the two well-known series, the history of Apollo and Daphne and Cupid and Psyche (of the latter of which Veneziano executed three plates), we have very fine impressions of his most important works, such as the Assumption of the Virgin and her Coronation. Giulio Bonasone follows with fine specimens of his productions, such as Noah and his Family, the Adoration of the Shepherds, the Holy Family, and the Virgin and Infant Jesus in the Clouds.

Nicolas Beatrizet, claimed as a Frenchman by his countrymen, but in artistic education and in feeling thoroughly Italian, is represented by Joseph explaining his Dream, and the Ascension of Christ, which are the best specimens here among a fair selection from his works. Enea Vico's translation of a lost picture of Leda by Michel Angelo is of sufficient importance to be noted, besides fine impressions of his Judith, the Conversion of Saul, and the Battle of the Lapithæ.

The family of the Ghisi of Mantua are all here, Giovanni Battista, Adamo, Diana, and Giorgio. Of the first there is a fine David and Goliath; of Adamo there is the Flagellation, very fine; and of Diana, Christ delivering the keys to St. Peter, and Horatius Cocles. By Giorgio Ghisi there is a fine set of the Prophets and Sibyls after Michel Angelo, and two or three other works equally good. Others follow, some by anonymous masters, until we come to the school of Caracci and their etchings, of which there are some fair examples in aquafortis. Another worker in chiaroscuro is Andrea Andreani, whose Triumph of Julius Cæsar, when arranged properly, forms an admirable frieze: it is not, perhaps, generally known that Goethe has described this wonderful work, but from Mantegna's own prints. Then appear engravers of a later school, fairly represented by Villamena, Vanni, Bartoli, Mogalli,—the last being one of the artists engaged to engrave the plates from the gallery of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, now very rare works, many of the impressions from which are here. Artists of the eighteenth century follow, such as Lorenzini, Zucchi, Frey, Capellan, Lasinio, Cunego, Volpato, and a few of those of the present century—Piranesi, Porporati, Bettelini, Longhi, and Vendramini. One who flourished in Rome, has, strange to say, been omitted in all dictionaries of engravers,—this is Antonio Banzo.

Of the earlier men of the German School we have very little—comparatively nothing, if we omit a single specimen of each of the masters Grün, Binck, and Lorch. Jegher, of the next century, entirely Flemish in feeling, is represented by his wonderful rendering of one of Rubens's bold designs. There are a few of Hollar's productions; but as they are nearly all specimens of portraiture, an art he did not well understand, their chief interest consists in their being delineations of eminent men. Of the more modern men of this school there are a few specimens by Müller, Steinla, and Felsing, forming, however, but a poor assemblage.

Of the Dutch School, we have merely a copy of one of Lukas Van Leyden's prints to begin with, and some dozen prints by Cornelius Cort to carry us to the 17th century, when we commence with two or three good specimens of the highly finished works of the Brothers Wierix: then come Heinrich Goltzius and his compeers Jan Saenredam, Jacob Matham, and Jonas Suyderhoef, followed by half a dozen good examples of the great Cornelius Visscher and one by Abraham Blooteling.

Now appears a name rather interesting to Englishmen, that of Michael Burghers, who was engaged to engrave the plates of the first illustrated edition of Paradise Lost, from designs by Sir John Baptist De Medina, which will be found intact with the book, the original drawings being also in this collection: these, with the exception of some few prints by Leeuw, Gunst, and Jacob Houbraken, bring the Dutch School to a close.

Far more important is the next school, the Flemish, were it only from the fact that good translations of Rubens's compositions were zealously sought for by Mr. Dyce. After some prints by other hands, we come at once to Lucas Vorsterman, one of the well-known engravers after the great colourist, who evidently educated his own men—for it is wonderful how they enter into the feelings of their master in his two principal features, the proper diffusion of light and the grandeur of colour. No painter, perhaps, with the exception of Reynolds and Turner, has been so much indebted to engravers as Rubens, whose works it was once so much the fashion to collect. (We may as well avail ourselves of this opportunity of remarking, with reference to the fashion or periodical mania for collecting certain works, that a public collection has, or ought to have, the advantage of not being affected by such follies, and a custodian would show a weakness worthy of contempt, if he were to be continually influenced by the fancy of the day.) Of Vorsterman, we here have eleven specimens of his finer works; of Peter de Jode the Elder, two; of Paul Pontius, half a dozen. Then occur examples by Cornelius Galle, Jan Louis, Jan Witdoeck Pieter Baillu, Alexander Voet, Nicolaus Lauwers, Jakob Neeffs, Adrian Melar, Willem de Leeuw, Peeter Clouet, Boetius à Bolswert and his more famous brother Scheltius: of the two latter upwards of fifty specimens are here, the most beautiful, probably, being the Ascension of the Virgin and the Trinity, both very fine; and also some of the landscapes and hunting pieces, particularly the Lion, Boar, and Stag Hunts, the Landscapes with Jupiter and Mercury, and with the Rainbow and the Milkmaid, the Tempest of Æneas, and the Waggon in a Rut. How James Ward studied these works, or some of the pictures from which they are taken, may be seen in his large picture of the Fighting Bulls, now in the gallery at South Kensington, the background being entirely Rubens in feeling. The works of an artist next appear who was better known in London than elsewhere, Michael Vander Gucht, an engraver of book plates, chiefly portraits. We have here the heads of half a dozen eminent Englishmen by him, and the illustrations to Shakespeare's works published in 1709, inclusive of those which accompanied the spurious plays: these are from his own designs, and very meritorious they are. This series concludes the prints belonging to the Flemish School, excepting a few by Van Orley, Coelemans, Pilsen, Lonsing, &c.

Of the French School the only specimen here of an early date is of the School of Fontainebleau, and the series properly commences with the works of some of the best engravers of the 17th century, beginning with two by Philip Thomassin, followed by others by Tournier, Gaultier, Vouillemont, Biard, Massé, Corneille, Morin, Roulet, Vignon, Moncornet, Boulogne, Chauveau, Lombart, Stella, Lommelín, Ragot, and Chasteau. Of each of these there is just a single specimen, in some instances two: of Gilles Rousselet there are seven, two of which, the Virgin and Child and the Rape of Deianeira, are fine. Then come some fair Poillys, other specimens by Pitau, Claudine Stella, and Pesne, and several by Gerard and Benoit Audran; then others by Simon Valée, Edelinck, Mariette, Farjat, Simonneau, Chereau, Horthefels, and Simon Gribelin—the last of whom worked principally in London: his series of prints from the royal galleries is here, but they are engraved on too small a scale to be of any importance; his best work, the Apotheosis of James I., is also in the collection, as well as a fair portrait of George Granville, Lord Lansdowne. Then come pièces by Louis Desplaces and Gerard Scotin, followed by specimens of the art of another Frenchman, who worked in London and was knighted by George II., Sir Nicholas Dorigny. He is represented by the Transfiguration after Raffaello and the three series of Cupid and Psyche, the Planets, and the Cartoons formerly at Hampton Court. We have then just a specimen or so of several eminent engravers up to the present time, such as Tardieu, Beauvais, Cochin, Jean Audran, Larmessin the younger, Duchange, Duflos, Flipart, Goupy, Baron, and Gravelot, the last two being artists who both worked in London; Ravenet and Vivares, also working in London part of their lives; Le Bas, Couché, Cochin, Lempereur, a proof of whose "Jardin d'Amour" is here; Beauvarlet, Condé, the Massards, Audouin, Le Fèvre, Desnoyers, Forster, and Richomme.

Of the Spanish school there are only five prints in all; the single one of note being Selma's Christ bearing the Cross, after Raffaello's picture at Madrid.

The English School commences with one of the portraits of William Marshall, and another by Thomas Cross, both men well known book illustrators, of the 17th century. There is only one example of the greatest man of the epoch, William Faithorne, and that merely a copy from a print by S. à Bolswert. Half a dozen portraits of eminent English men and women follow, all by Robert White, besides portraits by Gerard Vander Gucht, and an etching by Jonathan Richardson, and then twenty prints by George Vertue, the antiquary, engraver, and friend of Horace Walpole. Two fine specimens by Hamlet Winstanley succeed, and then three prints after William Hogarth by Luke Sullivan, one of the most eminent men of his time in Europe. Of William Hogarth, an excellent collection is here, comprising all his important works in fine state and condition, justifying the remark that Mr. Dyce made him one of his four favourites. The next name, James MeArdell, reminds us of that school of eminent engravers in mezzotint whose prints after Reynolds, Romney, Zoffany, &c., have never been properly appreciated until within the last ten years—excepting perhaps those after Reynolds. These prints are at the present time fetching large prices and are being bought up by collectors. The three here are all theatrical, being all portraits of Garrick. There is only a single specimen of the celebrated etcher Thomas Worlidge, who imitated the style of Rembrandt. Then come two prints by Robert Thew, from the large edition of Shakespeare by Boydell, the well-known publisher, who did more for the progress of art in England than any man in this country, whether before or after him. Others by Major, Spooner, and Mosley follow, and the series after Masaccio and Giotto, by Thomas Patch. Then comes Dixon, one of the famous workers in mezzotint, followed by a couple of John Browne's celebrated landscapes: the latter is the man who etched the foreground to several of Woollett's best plates, the vigour and masterly treatment of which may have suggested to Turner the same kind of work introduced into some of the subjects of the Liber Studiorum. Then follow a specimen or two of Mason, Hall, Ryland, and Caldwell, and a series of twenty large subjects from pictures at Venice, in chiaroscuro, by John Baptist Jackson, executed by him in that city.

William Woollett, by far the first landscape engraver of the century, is poorly represented, merely by ordinary impressions of his Niobe and Phaeton, both after Richard Wilson. The Solitude commenced by Woollett and completed by Ellis, is also here, finished in this instance with a smoothness which takes all the light out of it. Then we have the beautiful print of the Fortune Teller, after Reynolds, by Sherwin, two specimens of William Ward's fine mezzotints, eight of the finer works of Sir Robert Strange (private secretary to the young Pretender), Francis Howard's well known print of Mrs. Siddons as the Tragic Muse, after Reynolds, and two others by him. Next we have eight fine works by Richard Earlom, six of them proofs, including the death of Hippolytus from the picture by Rubens in the Duke of Bedford's collection. There is a rich impression of the celebrated portrait by Reynolds of Dr. Johnson, engraved by William Doughty, as well as the Sleeping Child, after the same master, and the death of Dido by Joseph Grozer; but only one specimen by Moses Haughton, from a picture by Fuseli. Next come Thomas Banks's etching from his statue of the Falling Giant deposited in the Royal Academy—four specimens of that charming engraver, Caroline Watson, and others in mezzotint by John Jones, the father of the recently deceased George Jones, R.A., two of them after Reynolds—other fine prints in mezzotint by John Raphael Smith and Valentine Green—a good selection of fifteen of Bartolozzi's engravings in stipple, mostly however his larger works, in which he did not succeed so well as in his miniature and highly finished translations from Cipriani—three specimens by James Basire, one of them executed for the Oxford Almanack of 1806, from a design by Turner—and a dozen examples by one of our greatest men in bold vigorous line, William Sharp, one of which is the print he left unfinished—the Women at the Sepulchre, the Castle Howard picture by Annibale Caracci. An imperfect set is here of Rowlandson's etchings after Bunbury's Picturesque Beauties of Boswell, of which some of the original drawings are to be found in the collection. Of another great man, James Heath, there are none of the works to which he owes his well-merited fame, but merely four small portraits, very beautiful however, two of them being after Stothard. Then there are Cupid and Psyche, and Love by William Say, the Death of Dido and the portrait of Caleb Whitefoord by Samuel William Reynolds, and the Infant Hercules by Charles Howard Hodges, all after Reynolds; nor must we omit to mention two or three specimens by Abraham Raimbach, and some productions of living artists, namely George Cruikshank, George T. Doo, R.A., Samuel Cousins, R.A., and Lumb Stocks, R.A., but it is much to be regretted that in no single instance is a fine specimen of any of their works to be met with in this collection.

G. W. REID.

ITALIAN SCHOOL.

ANDREA MANTEGNA.

Painter and Engraver.

Born at a village near Padua in 1431, died at Mantua in 1506.

THE FLAGELLATION OF JESUS CHRIST, who is bound to a pillar by cords, and scourged by three executioners. The upper part of the engraving, on the left hand, appears never to have been completed. B. 1.* 988

ENTOMBMENT OF JESUS CHRIST. B. 2. 989

This is called by Bartsch a copy by Giovanni Antonio da Brescia, but he probably never had an opportunity of comparing the prints, for this is undoubtedly the finer work, and by Mantegna.

Collection—Sir M. M. Sykes.

DESCENT INTO HELL. Jesus Christ descending into Hell, three demons flying above, two of them blowing horns; the penitent thief standing holding the cross; the gates broken and thrown down in the foreground. B. 5. 990

CHRIST RISEN from the tomb, and standing between St. Andrew and St. Longinus, the patron Saints of Mantua; with his left hand he holds a banner, and with the other he gives the benediction. B. 6. 991

HERCULES killing ANTEUS, whom he has lifted in the air, and presses round the loins with his left arm, whilst with his right he pulls him by the hair. B. 16. 992

COMBAT between two TRITONS. Companion to the next print and intended to constitute a long frieze. B. 17. 993

ENVY exciting the Marine Gods to fight. In the background, between the two combatants, is a figure of Neptune, standing on a pedestal. B. 18. 994

BACCHANALIANS. The composition represents a group of fauns, satyrs, and children assembled around a wine press. B. 19. 995

SILENUS supported by a SATYR and two FAUNS in the midst of a group of Bacchanals. B. 20. 996

* The letter B., and the numbers accompanying it, refer to Bartsch's "Peintre-Graveur."

The TRIUMPH of JULIUS CÆSAR. After Andrea Mantegna. M. D. XCVIII. In 10 woodcuts printed in chiaroscuro with the title. B. 101-11.

- (1.) Frontispiece, in the centre of which, at the top, is a bust of Vincentio Gonzaga, Duke of Mantua, and beneath it the title "Ser^{mo} Principi Vincētio Gōzagae D. G. Mantuae ac Montis Ferrati optimo duci. Tabulae Triumphi Caesaris, &c. Bernar. Malpitius Pict. Mant. F. Mantuac. MDXCVIII." 1356
- (2.) Musicians in advance, followed closely by soldiers bearing standards garnished with streamers, and surmounted by a bust of Romulus, the peacock of Juno, baskets of flowers, a goddess supporting a cornucopia of fruit, &c. Other warriors marching two by two, holding long poles attached to banners on which are depicted pictures of fortified towns, surrounded by armies, being stormed, captured, burnt, and destroyed. 1357
Duplicate of the last-mentioned. 1358
- (3.) Life-size statues of the gods Jupiter and Juno, carried away from the temple in a two horse chariot, accompanied by a colossal bust of Cybele in another chariot drawn by a single horse, and a page carrying a small idol: the background represents the model of a temple, battering rams, and other machines for besieging purposes, followed by trophies of arms. 1359
Duplicate of the last-mentioned. 1360
- (4.) More trophies of arms of every description, and youths bearing treasures, urns, vases filled with money, which are continued in the next picture. 1361
Duplicate of the last-mentioned. 1362
- (5.) More treasures, and above martial trumpets from which ribbons are flying, inscribed with complimentary dedications to the triumphant demi-god, Julius Cæsar: then follow animals adorned for sacrifice, and a sacrificer carrying his pole-axe. 1363
Duplicate of the last-mentioned. 1364
- (6.) Four elephants, nearly the whole draped contour of one seen in front, the others seen only in perspective, their heads being adorned with wreaths of flowers and fruit, and lighted candelabra resting on their backs, while handsome boys attend and feed the flames; other youths are leading the elephants. 1365
Duplicate of the last-mentioned. 1366

- (7) Following the monster animals are the bearers of more treasure, probably gold, only in small vessels, and valuable booty consisting of the armour of the conquered kings and heroes. 1367

Duplicate of the last-mentioned. 1368

- (8.) Prisoners marching in front with a girl of about ten years of age gaily dressed, walking beside her mother, behind whom are matrons with their grown-up daughters: strong men follow, dressed in long garments, among whom is a tall well-built man who looks back with a face filled with rage; then a group of attractive women, and in their midst a young bride, and a mother with her child on her right arm, while her left is occupied by a boy who wishes to be carried, but whom his grandmother is trying to appease. 1369

Duplicate of the last-mentioned. 1370

- (9.) A group of musicians, and a youth in long flowing garments singing to the lyre, at the same time dancing and gesticulating, while buffoons are pointing and deriding; a man playing the bagpipes follows, and boys with clappers contribute to the din; soldiers with their heads turned indicate that the hero is approaching. 1371

Duplicate of the last-mentioned. 1372

- (10.) Julius Cæsar seated in a chariot which is richly ornamented, while a youth holds a banner before him on which is inscribed, "veni vidi vici." The composition is crowded, and naked children are seen with branches between the wheels of the car and the horses. 1373

Duplicate of the last-mentioned. 1374

RINGS AND MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTS.

This branch of Mr. Dyce's bequest cannot be considered in the light of a seriously undertaken and skilfully chosen collection, being nothing more than such an assemblage of objects in this particular class as will usually be found in the possession of all lovers of art.

The engraved stones and pastes of antiquity (commonly known by the technical term "gems") are so numerous, so portable, and so highly interesting, that there are few amateurs who do not treasure some favourite jacinth or sardonyx, or some few of the numerous "pastes" with which the soil of classic lands seems to have been sown broadcast. A well-known writer on gems has proclaimed his belief that of unset pastes scarce one in a hundred is genuinely antique. This doctrine, however, will not find favour with those who have frequently purchased both hard stones and glass pastes from the pouches of shepherds in remote spots where the very small probability of a purchaser must render the trade in mock antiques very unremunerative. The spectator therefore may, in the judgment of the present writer, safely indulge the belief that the rings in this collection, the settings of which are principally modern, are really specimens of the all-pervading love of seal engraving which distinguished the peoples of antiquity, and to which we owe the record of many buildings and statues of old renown, but now perished. Most of the gems once formed part of the well-known Hertz Collection. Among the miscellaneous objects will be found a set of 200 casts from very fine gems, the originals of which are in various celebrated European Collections.

Of the few remaining unclassified objects, attention may be given to a well-carved marble bust of Mrs. Siddons, and a graceful terra-cotta figure representing the sleeping Psyche surrounded by a serpent, seemingly typical of the immortality of the soul. Also, properly lodged among the valuables of so genuine a lover of Shakespeare, is a small block from the world-famed mulberry tree of Stratford.

MEDALLION, in high relief; marble. Alexander Pope, poet (1688–1744). English, early 18th century. Sight measure, h. 13¼ in.; w. 11½ in. 3328

BUST; plaster. Sarah Siddons, actress (1755–1831). English, early 18th century. h. 25 in.; w. 10½ in. 3329

WOOD, from Shakespeare's mulberry tree; with inscription by Mr. Dyce. l. 3¼ in.; w. 3 in. 3330

It is satisfactory to such as allow any interest to traditional associations to know that the evidence connecting the name of Shakespeare with the mulberry tree of New Place, Stratford, is of a very stable character. Not only has the fact that the tree was planted by the poet been always believed in Stratford, but the date assigned, 1609, has been corroborated by the subsequently discovered fact that in that year many thousand stocks were imported by order of King James I., with a view to their distribution throughout the kingdom. Of the destruction of the tree when in full vigour in the year 1756, unfortunately, no doubt exists, and the name of the barbarous owner may be well left in obscurity.

CHOP STICKS; ivory in tortoise-shell case. Chinese. l. 10¾ in. 3331

WRITING RULER; wood, lacquered; yellow, red, and black. Chinese. l. 12¾ in. 3332

SNUFF BOX; tortoise-shell, with silver and mother-of-pearl in scallop pattern. English, 18th century. l. 3¼ in.; w. 2¼ in. 3334

SEAL; gold. Carnelian intaglio bust of Voltaire (1694–1778). French, 18th century. Height of carnelian 1¼ in.; w. 1 in. 3335

DESK SEAL; bloodstone handle, gold mount; carnelian seal with Persian inscription. Indian. h. 2½ in. 3336

ROPE; palm-tree fibre part of the wrapping of a crocodile mummy. Ancient Egyptian. l. 18 in. 3337

STATUETTE; terra-cotta. A mummy, turquoise glaze; given to guests at funerals. Ancient Egyptian. h. $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. 3338

STATUETTE; terra-cotta. A mummy, turquoise glaze; given to guests at funerals. Ancient Egyptian. h. $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. 3339

POCKET KNIFE. Handle engraved brass. French (?), 17th century. Length, when open, 5 in. 3340

MEDAL; silver. Obv., the British lion triumphing over the elephant of Burmah; rev., British troops attacking a Burmese city. English. (Given in commemoration of the Burmese war.) Date, 1826. Diam., $1\frac{1}{2}$ in. 3341

COIN; gold; diminutive. Burmese. 3342

COIN; gold; diminutive. Burmese. 3343

COIN; silver; diminutive. Burmese. 3344

SNUFF BOX; oakwood. From the East Kirk, Aberdeen; built in 1477. l. $3\frac{5}{8}$ in.; w. $2\frac{1}{4}$ in. 3345

The present object would naturally be interesting to an Aberdonian, as was Mr. Dyce, being a part of the original woodwork of the old cathedral of St. Nicholas, Aberdeen. After the method adopted in the analogous instance of St. Giles's Cathedral, Edinburgh, St. Nicholas's Kirk was divided into two sections, the nave being thenceforth designated the West Church, the choir the East. It is not unlikely that this relic of the old building, which dates from 1477, may have been part of a choir seat. It was removed on the occasion of the rebuilding the church in 1837.

SHELLS. A collection (176) in six trays, with case; mostly Indian. 3346

CASTS from ANTIQUE GEMS. A collection (200) in four cases. Italian, present century. 3347
