INTRODUCTION.

THE Exhibition of Prints, brought together in this Gallery in the year 1881, was designed to illustrate the history and general progress of Mezzotinto Engraving from its earliest until recent times, by means of a series of examples of the works of many artists, who practised it successively in England and elsewhere.

The present collection is confined to the works of one of the most eminent engravers of that series, who was then represented by only two examples.

In the early part of the last century, the art of Mezzotint Engraving in this country, although it numbered amongst its followers such men as John Smith, the Fabers, Andrew Miller, and others, had begun steadily to decline, and to lose its hold on the estimation of the art world at that time, when its restoration was effected by the genius of JAMES MCARDELL.

It was the subtle power of hand, and the wonderful delicacy and brilliancy of the work of this distinguished engraver, that advanced that form of chalcographic art to a state of perfection, which was maintained thenceforth for many years by a line of able and accomplished artists, who survived or succeeded him, but by whom he was rarely equalled, and never surpassed.

JAMES MCARDELL was born in Ireland. The year of his birth was for a long time uncertain. Bryan and Redgrave are both wrong in the date ("about 1710") to which they alike assign it. For, according to Lysons,* there is a certificate of his burial in the year 1765 in the parish register of Hampstead:—"James McArdell, buried June 5th, 1765;" to which the writer adds the following further memorandum:—"He lies buried in the churchyard, where there is a short inscription to his memory, by which we learn that he was a native of Ireland and that he died in his thirty-seventh year." That would make 1728-9 the date of his birth, which, according to a letter in the Gentleman's Magazine for 1786, took place in Cow Lane, afterwards Greek Street, Dublin.

When about eighteen years of age, he came to London with his master, John Brooks, † and a fellow-pupil, Richard Houston; ‡ and in 1747 he scraped a half-length of Bishop Secker (No. 5), and also another, called Teague's Ramble at Charing Cross (No. 201.)

He soon greatly advanced in his art, and distanced both his master and his fellow-pupils by the delicacy, transparency, and brilliancy, which so eminently characterise his productions. In 1749 he scraped the portrait of Lady Boyd (No. 8) and the head of Captain Coram (No. 14-15); and in 1752 he produced the splendid mezzotint of the two Sons of the Duke of Buckingham, from the famous picture by Vandyck then in Kensington

* Environs of London, 2nd edition (1810), Vol. ii. p. 359.

† John Brooks engraved The Battle of the Boyne after Wyck, and divers portraits (see No. 2). He also invented the process of printing employed at Battersea in producing the well-known enamels; but the factory there is said to have been broken up through his mismanagement.—Redgrave's Dict. of the Eng. School. This chain of connection, if carried a link or two further, forms a loop to the line of mezzotint engravers. For among the printers of plaques of the Battersea works was Robert Hancock, who afterwards engraved at Worcester, and there became the master of Valentine Green.—See Jewitt's Ceramic Art, 232.

‡ Richard Houston, b. 1722, d. 1775 (?), excelled in mezzotint, and also engraved in the chalk manner, and painted a few miniatures.—B. F. A. Club Catalogue, 1881: Bryan; Redgrave.

Palace (No. 11). This fine engraving was the means of placing him at once above the heads of all his contemporaries, and it brought him plenty of work. According to Elmes, he first lived in Henrietta Street, Covent Garden,* and afterwards at a house at the corner of Southampton Street, known as The Golden Head, where he also carried on business as a publisher, and from whence many of his works were issued.

Although known as a boon companion at the artists' clubs, and in the Green Rooms, he never entered into dissipation, or frequented loose company; as did some of his contemporaries, his master and the above-named fellow-pupil among the number.

Quin the actor and he were great friends, and MCARDELL painted, as well as engraved, the portrait of that celebrated player in his favourite character of Falstaff (No. 108).

In 1754 he began to scrape plates from the pictures by Sir Joshua Reynolds, his earliest being The Earl and Countess of Kildare (Nos. 33 and 34) and Lady Charlotte Fitzwilliam (No. 42); the latter being published by Reynolds himself.

Reynolds fully appreciated MCARDELL, who became a great favourite with him. He recognised at once his wonderful power of reproducing not only the expression and the grace, but even the characteristic peculiarities of the artist's touch; and, on looking at these facsimiles in black and white, we can well understand the nature of that feeling of admiration which led Sir Joshua to exclaim:—"By this man shall I be immortalised."

MCARDELL engraved no less than thirty-seven of Sir Joshua's works. (Among them Nos. 46, 52, 71, 72, 75, 83, 120, 143, may be referred to as fine examples.)

But he also recorded the merits of some other painters more likely to be forgotten or undervalued by future generations; among them, Reynolds's master, Thomas Hudson. It has been often remarked that Hudson was not much of a painter; but Elmes says, "He drew a head well, and a hand much superior to his compeers, and to most of his successors." And if we can judge by MCARDELL'S engravings of his works, he has been much maligned. An example is before us in The Duchess of Ancaster (Nos. 110-11-12), scraped in 1757. If the original was at all like what is here presented to us by MCARDELL'S hand, it must have been a beautiful picture. The fine work and expression in the face are most admirable, and also the details of the dress: one can almost feel the softness of the satin.

MCARDELL engraved twenty-five of Hudson's portraits, and also many after Cotes, Gainsborough, Hamilton, Hoare, Liotard,* Ramsay, and others of his day.

MCARDELL also scraped many fine plates after the famous masters of a former period. For example:—The beautiful and brilliant engraving of The Countess of Southampton, after Vandyck (No. 163); the equally fine one of The young Stuarts, sons of the Duke of Lennox, after the same master (No. 76-7-8); that of Rubens, and his wife and daughters (No. 164). About the last, Northcote gives the following anecdote:—

"JAMES MCARDELL, the mezzotint engraver, having taken a very good print from the portrait of Rubens, came with it one morning to Sir Joshua Reynolds, to inquire if he could inform him particularly of the many titles to which Rubens had had a right, in order to inscribe them properly under his print; saying, he believed that Rubens had been knighted by the Kings of France, Spain, and England; was Secretary of State in Flanders, and of the Privy Council in Spain; and had been employed in a Ministerial capacity from the Court of Madrid to the Court of London to negotiate a treaty of peace between the two crowns, and that he was also a Magistrate of Antwerp, &c.

"Dr. Johnson happened to be in the room with Sir Joshua at the * Liotard, who painted the portrait of Garrick (No. 63), was an extremely eccentric person. He was accustomed to walk the streets of London "with a yard of beard and dressed as a turbaned Turk."—Elmes, l. c.

time, and, understanding MCARDELL'S inquiry, interfered rather abruptly, saying, 'Pooh! pooh! put his name alone under the print; Peter Paul Rubens. That is full sufficient, and more than all the rest.' This advice of the Doctor was accordingly followed."*

Again, a comparison of the Dutch Interior, after Rembrandt (No. 196) with the original drawing by the master (No. 197), both lent by Mr. Seymour Haden, shows with what remarkable accuracy and fidelity the engraver scraped his plate.

La Belle Hamilton, after Lely (No. 170), is another fine example of his work.

In the midst of a grand career, he was suddenly struck down, and died in his thirty-seventh year, leaving a few plates unfinished. Some of these (Nos. 182 and 183) were completed by Houston, for Sayer.

There cannot be a doubt that MCARDELL'S genius and example gave a great stimulus to those who practised the art during his time and after his death; and to him we probably owe that glorious band of mezzotint engravers whose works delight us by their extreme beauty, and astonish us by their wonderful exactness to the original paintings.

The collection in the gallery is, with a few unimportant omissions, a complete series of MCARDELL'S known engravings. In some cases, impressions are also exhibited in the different states of progress of the plate. Among these various impressions, it often happens that the earliest state, though it may be the most rare, is by no means the best. The first impressions were generally those struck off to ascertain what finishing touches (if any) were required. After these touches had been added, the plate was carefully cleaned and very carefully printed. So much depended on the printer, that impressions of the second, and even of the finished state, were often more brilliant, delicate, and beautiful, than the so-called "first state," which was, in fact, no more than an engraver's trial proof.

* Northcote's Life of Reynolds.

But, besides these, there were often later and, necessarily, inferior states. A popular plate, from which many impressions had been taken for the original publisher, and which had thus been much abused by the printer's hands, would come into the possession of some print-seller or other publisher, and be then retouched, and, perhaps, renamed, and even altered by another head being put in, (see No. 40, which is the third state of Sir Philip Honywood, turned into the Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick).

The best thanks of the Club are due to Mr. J. Chaloner Smith * for the courteous generosity with which he has placed the whole of his fine collection of MCARDELL'S works at the disposal of the Committee; and to Mr. H. P. Horne, Mr. McKay, Mr. Walter Tiffin, Mr. Stephen Tucker (Somerset Herald), and Mr. Yorke; as well as to the several members of the Club who have contributed to the wealth and completeness of the present exhibition.

Smith, is in the Dublin University Review for April, 1886, and we are indebted thereto, as well as to the same writer's elaborate Descriptive Catalogue of Mezzotint Portraits, and Hamilton's Catalogue of the Engraved Works of Sir Joshua Reynolds, for information embodied in the present catalogue.

T. Q. L., sitting in his episcopal robes, holding a large book, which rests on his knees.

Size,  $14\frac{1}{4} \times 10$ .

J. C. Smith says this plate was altered by J. McCardell from Brooks's plate of Bishop Howard (No. 2), and is one of McCardell's earliest works.

Lent by Mr. J. C. Smith.

NO. 2.

BROOKS'S PLATE OF BISHOP HOWARD, above referred to.

Lent by Mr. J. C. Smith.

---

NO. 3.                   BIRCH, THOMAS. (After WILLS.)

Born in Clerkenwell, 23rd Nov., 1705, of Quaker parents; he entered the Church; one of the Secretaries of the Royal Society; he was killed by a fall from his horse in Hampstead Road, 1766.

Smith says this is the reverse of the print by Faber, jun., and is one of the earliest prints by McCardell, probably copied for improvement.

H. L., wig, band, and black gown; both hands on a book.

FIRST STATE. Unfinished.

Lent by Mr. J. C. Smith.

---

NO. 4.                   THE SAME.

Plate in process of transmutation.

Lent by Mr. J. C. Smith.

---

No. 7. THE SAME.

SECOND STATE. As Archbishop of Canterbury.

According to Smith, Bromley appears to consider these (Nos. 5 and 7) to be different plates, but, to place the matter beyond any doubt, an impression from the plate in the process of transmutation has been met with, and is exhibited (No. 6), the alterations probably by McArdeil himself.

Lent by Mr. J. C. Smith.

No. 8. BOYD, LADY. (After RAMSAY.)

J. C. Smith says that she was most probably Rebecca, daughter of Alexander Lockhart, of Craighouse, afterwards Lord Covington; married 15th September, 1749, to James Lord Boyd, eldest son of William, fourth Earl of Kilmarnock, who was beheaded in 1745 and his title attained. Lord Boyd was then in the 21st Regiment and on the side of George II., and he consequently obtained his father's estate. He succeeded in 1758 as fourteenth Earl of Errol. Lady Boyd, then Countess of Errol, died at Clifton, 1761.

T. Q. L., looking to the front in the character of Diana; crescent and pearls in hair; spear in right hand, left hand pointing; dog before her; landscape in background.

Size,  $13\frac{7}{8} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ .

Lent by Mr. J. C. Smith.

---

No. 9. BANCKS, CHARLES. (IPSE.)

A native of Sweden; came to this country when young in 1746; practised here as a miniature-painter; was an occasional exhibitor at the Royal Academy, 1775-1752.

H. L. At the bottom of the print:—"Le Chevalier Du Halley Descazeux, dedit struxit et inscripsit 1748." See Descazeaux, No. 200.

Size,  $8\frac{3}{4} \times 4\frac{7}{8}$ .

Lent by Mr. J. C. Smith.

No. 10. BRIDGES, MRS. DOROTHY. (After SMITH.)

Bromley states that this lady was the wife of an artist at Plymouth, and Redgrave mentions Charles Bridges as a portrait-painter in the first half of the eighteenth century.

W. L., standing and looking to the front ; cap, lace collar, and sleeves ; black satin dress ; right hand on table ; left hand pointing to a doorway through which are seen a statue and a large ship.

Size,  $19\frac{7}{8} \times 13\frac{7}{8}$ .

No. 100B. CANNING, ELIZABETH. (After SMITH.)

This woman accused Mary Squires, a gipsy, of having abducted and treated her cruelly in January, 1753. Squires was tried and condemned to death; however, she was pardoned. Canning was then accused and convicted of perjury, was transported, and died in America. The affair caused great excitement, and all London was divided in opinion as well as the magistrates and judges. The friends of Canning, led by Field, were dubbed "Canaanites," those of Squire, led by Hill and Sir Crisp Gascoyne, "Egyptians." The populace were mostly against the latter.

Size,  $18\frac{1}{2} \times 18$ .

"In 1766 Walker engraved in line for Boydell the entire family picture." (See screen, No. 193.)

"This print is stated to be after a picture by Vandyke, the opinion being shared by Smith." (Cat. Raisonné, Part II., p. 240 ; Part III., p. 71.) "At both these pages the picture is said to have been engraved by McArdell, but this is not so, for he only engraved the above, a picture specified in Part II., p. 314, as having been called the Duke of Buckingham's mistress, and erroneously stated to have been engraved by Walker, who only did the full picture. At this last page Smith admits that the picture partakes of the style of both masters, and is probably their united work, the girl in slashed sleeves is certainly in Rubens' manner. A comparison between McArdell's and Walker's prints will at once exhibit the superiority of the mezzotinto method for portraits." (See J. C. Smith, Cat. of B. Portraits, p. 366.)

No. 200. DESCAZEAX. (Etching.)

McArdell etched two curious portraits of the Chevalier Michael du Halley Descazeaux. The Chevalier was born in Paris August 10, 1710, fled to England after a duel, and appears to have come to grief. He died in 1775.

No. 201. TEAGUE'S RAMBLE.

Mr. J. C. Smith says, "This doubtless represents a real adventure, most probably one of the engraver's fellow pupils." It is, however, very likely to be a representation of the character of the Irishman Teague in Sir R. Howard's Comedy of "The Committee."

W. L., standing ; a man tipsy between two women, one of whom carries his hat ; the other is picking his pocket ; before them a boy with link illuminating the scene ; behind in the distance a statue of Charles I. Verses.

"So rambling Teague, with Vacant Visage Joggs,
Far from his Barren wilds and Native boggs ;
A Link Boy points the thoughtless Oaff his Way,
So Will o' th' Wisp oft leads the Kern Astray.
A Nymph and Bawd his wandring footsteps wait,
And leave his pockets empty as his pate ;
The raving rakehell finds too late his Loss,
Then curses night intrigues and Charing Cross."

Size, 14 x 10
