LONDON CONFERENCE UNABLE TO REPORT AGREEMENT

Illness Terminated In Death To-day of Lord Northcliffe

Most Prominent of British Publicists Did Not Long Survive World Tour; Opinions On His Character and Influence.

London, Aug. 14.—Viscount Northcliffe, noted British publicist, died to-day. It was stated that the cause of Lord Northcliffe's death was due to suppurated, or the production of pus within the heart, which was followed by acute blood poisoning.

The death of no other unofficial person could have made a deeper impression in England than that of Lord Northcliffe. The news was not a surprise, as the bulletins issued by the doctors for the past week plainly indicated that the patient was dying.

Lord Northcliffe was by far the most noted figure in British journalism, and the first question on everyone's lips was as to what effect his death will have on the policy of The Times and his other newspapers, which since the end of the war have strongly opposed the Lloyd George administration and its principles, with the notable exception of its dealings with Ireland, which the Northcliffe press supported throughout.

Medical Bulletin. News of Lord Northcliffe's death was given out by the doctors who had been attending him in this bulletin: "Viscount Northcliffe died at 10.12 o'clock. The end was perfectly peaceful."

The medical terms used in giving the cause of Lord Northcliffe's death were ulcerative endocarditis, streptococcal septicaemia and terminal syncope.

This popular parlance means an inflammation of the lining membrane of the heart, with consequent infection of the blood, and sudden failure of the heart due to fainting.

Lord Northcliffe's body will be buried in the cemetery of St. Mary-Le-Bow church, Finchley. The funeral service will be held in Westminster Abbey.

PICTURESQUE CAREER OF JOURNALISTIC NAPOLEON. The Harnsworth family are nearly all identified with journalism in the British Empire.

Lord Northcliffe was the youngest son of the late Alfred Harnsworth, a barrister-at-law, and his wife, Geraldine Mary, daughter of William Harnsworth, of Pembroke Place, County Dublin.

The late Lord Northcliffe was the eldest son, and other brothers who are identified with journalism are Lord Rothermere (Harold Harnsworth), Sir Cecil Harnsworth, M.P., and the late Lord Northcliffe, M.P., and is now Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs; Robert Harnsworth, also a Liberal M.P., and his son, the late Lord Northcliffe, M.P., and is now Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

Interpretations Differ. The railway situation is complicated by a clash in the interpretation of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act with regard to the right of the employers to put reductions into effect pending the bringing down of a report by the conciliation board which is now at work in the shopmen's case.

The Department of Justice supports the statement put forth by the employers that the railways, under the act, must continue the old rates of wages and working conditions in effect until the award of the board is brought down. The railways, both Canadian and American, have agreed to accept their respective presidents' proposals that they have the right to put the reductions proposed into effect without waiting for the board's decision.

SIR A. CURRIE MENTIONED AS RAILWAY CHIEF. Winnipeg, Aug. 14.—Sir Arthur Currie, Principal of McGill University, was mentioned as a possibility, favored in some quarters, for the presidency of the Canadian National Railways, by E. W. Jacobs, K. C., M. P., for the George Etienne Cartier division of Montreal, here yesterday on his way to the British Columbia coast to attend the annual convention of the Canadian Bar Association in Vancouver and Victoria.

Mr. Jacobs said the same quarters favored Howard G. Kelley for general manager. Regarding Sir Arthur, he said it was thought the National system needed some man who had the talent for leadership and who was worthy of the confidence of the public.

Medical reports to-day were more reassuring, but his doctors declined to express a definite opinion on his chances for recovery.

CRANBROOK FIGHT GETS OFF TRACK

Government's Record Not Now the Issue in By-election. Voting To-morrow on Sympathy for Discharged Wallinger.

Politicians are waging a sensational fight at Cranbrook to win the by-election there to-morrow, according to the Hon. J. D. MacLean and the Hon. J. D. Barrow, who returned to Victoria to-day after taking a leading part in the campaign during the last week.

"It is a pretty good and an interesting scrap," Dr. MacLean said. Dr. MacLean then issued this statement on the Cranbrook situation: "The great difficulty is that the contest is not being fought on the record of the Government, but rather on the question as to whether the Government had sufficient grounds for dismissing Wallinger, the Conservative candidate, from the post of Government agent for allegedly loose conduct in office."

"Wallinger is now a man without a job and is working up a great deal of sympathy in the constituency in spite of the exposure of his past actions made by the Premier last week."

Premier Oliver, the Hon. John Hart, the Hon. W. H. Sutherland and the Hon. A. M. Manson are staying in the fight until the end. W. J. Bowser, K. C., Conservative leader, is being assisted in his campaign by Col. Lister, M. P. P.; W. K. Esling, M. P. P., and J. W. Jones, M. P. P.

Size of Constituency. There are 2,600 voters in the Cranbrook constituency, with 1,600 of them in Cranbrook city. One or two meetings a night are being held by each party in various parts of the constituency. Outside of Cranbrook the vote is located chiefly in Yak, Wycliffe, Kimberley, Warrenton and Lumbarton.

Premier Oliver has issued Mr. Bowser a challenge for a joint meeting in Cranbrook to-night. "I'm not at all anxious about the result; it looks all right to me," Mr. Bowser said in his summary of the Cranbrook situation.

Refused Use of Hall. Old-time political stuff developed in the fight last week when the Liberals were refused permission to hold a meeting at Staples mill, Wycliffe. Party emissaries, Mr. Staples, however, but he would not give his consent, which was necessary, as he controlled the hall and nearly every thing around it.

Cranbrook and ran into the Liberal Ministers campaigning, but they could not persuade him to change. An hour or so later Mr. Staples' wrath and came to the meeting by the back way, with the result that the Liberals had a good meeting.

Allied Confereres Separate With No Common Plan

Conference of Premiers in British Capital Comes to End Without Announcement of Understanding Regarding German Reparations.

London, Aug. 14.—The conference of Allied Premiers, which opened in London a week ago, came to an end this afternoon without any announcement of progress toward an agreement concerning the German reparations question having been made.

An earlier dispatch than the one above from London said: "Although this morning's session of the conference of Allied Premiers was adjourned without their having reached an agreement on the German reparations question or having arranged for another meeting, it was said shortly before 4 o'clock this afternoon that a plenary session would be held at five o'clock."

The correspondent of the Central News said he understood the five o'clock meeting had been called to discuss the question of Austria. It is understood that a promise had been given Austria that the conference would not break up before her financial position had been discussed.

ELKS TO MEET IN WINNIPEG. Winnipeg, Aug. 14.—Fifty-avenue lodges, from Newfoundland to Victoria, will be represented at the annual Dominion convention of the Elks, which will open in Winnipeg to-morrow and continue until Thursday. Pendray, Calgary, Grand Exalted Ruler, and Joseph F. Morris, of Vancouver, Past Grand Exalted Ruler, chairman of the board of directors.

UNABLE TO FIND COMMON GROUND. London, Aug. 14.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Premier Poincare of France and Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain were as far apart as ever in their views on the situation when the heads of the various delegations met to-day. They separated after a discussion of two and a half hours without finding common ground.

French officials at the time said they thought an agreement was possible and that the conference would dissolve without having reached an understanding. The French and British Premiers parted with the intention of thinking over the situation until to-morrow. Each appeared reluctant to break up the conference but neither was inclined to yield.

At the conclusion of the conference all the delegates went to the Italian Embassy for lunch. Net Sure. When asked whether the conference had broken up, Sir Edward Grigg, Mr. Lloyd George's private secretary, replied: "I am not sure."

Sir Grigg declined to say what had happened at to-day's meeting, but promised to meet newspaper correspondents at six o'clock this evening.

The British Cabinet planned to meet to see if some means could not be found to save the conference and reach a common ground on which to renew the discussions.

Regarding the criticism of Mr. Lloyd George expressed in some French circles, he said that he himself from London over the week-end, at a critical stage in the negotiations, it was pointed out in British official circles to-day that the conference had reached a deadlock, that an appointment had been made for to-day's meeting, pending which nothing could be done, and when the Premier did go for a few hours' rest in the country he went where he was available by telephone and could easily have returned to Downing Street on one hour's notice if he had been required.

Soon after the afternoon session convened it became apparent that the question of reparations would not be discussed further at this meeting. The French delegates expected to leave for Paris to-morrow in their special cars, which they have ordered attached to the train leaving at 11 o'clock in the morning. They emphasized this afternoon that there had been no rupture in the Anglo-French Entente.

COMMISSION HAS POSTPONED BERLIN AUG. 15 PAYMENT. Paris, Aug. 14.—The Reparations Commission this morning decided to postpone the August 15 payment of 50,000,000 gold marks by Germany until a decision has been reached by the Allied Premiers, who are now meeting in London.

This action was taken by the Commission in view of the fact that Germany was promised a decision regarding a moratorium to-day, which was apparently impossible unless it should be reached by the Allied Premiers at a late hour.

Spencer, of the Chamber of Commerce, today reported on the recent successful Island Boards of Trade at Cumberland to the directors of the Chamber at noon to-day. He said he had found among the various boards represented at the gathering a hearty desire to co-operate with Victoria for the better development of the island as a whole. Mr. Spencer's remarks on Island co-operation were supported by C. P. W. Schwengers' account of the recent tour by the wholesalers of Victoria, who found a very gratifying feeling of friendliness to the city in all the island communities they had visited.

Farmers' Institute, asking for the cooperation of the Chamber in inducing the City Council to pass a by-law prohibiting the sale of Oriental produce in the Public Market was referred to the Industrial Committee. James Hearty observed that at a recent meeting of that committee it had been disclosed that a considerable number of stall-holders at the market sold Oriental goods instead of goods of their own production. Mr. Hearty reported the visit to the drydock and the Outer Docks undertaken by the president himself and others, including James Murdoch and R. M. Johnson, member for Moose Jaw in the Dominion House Saturday.

JOINT CONTROL OUTER DOCKS. Schwengers Proposes Public and Private Wharves Be Under One Direction. At the meeting of the Directors of the Chamber of Commerce to-day C. P. W. Schwengers raised the question of the public and private docks of Victoria and pointed out that the nearly forty years ago the initiative and public spirit of the late R. P. Rithet had prompted him to construct the Outer Docks, without which the port would have lost its standing as a shipping centre. These docks had been operated generally at a loss. The construction and development of the government docks had introduced an element of competition which would make the position of the private docks difficult and Mr. Schwengers thought that in the hands of the owners of both the public and private wharves there should be a common control provided under Government auspices. He ably urged a committee be formed to investigate the situation and make such recommendations as were found advisable, following the investigation. The resolution was seconded by B. C. Nicholas, and carried.

SEEK TO COPE WITH VICE HERE. But Conference Reaches No Definite Conclusions. Segregated Area Idea is Rejected. Methods of coping with vice in Victoria were considered at length at a conference held last night at the Police Commissioner W. E. Stano's office. Rev. H. T. Archbold, secretary of the Council for Social Hygiene, and Dr. Howard Miller, in the presence of the Mayor, were present. After the conference the Mayor gave out a brief statement in which he said that the conference had considered the advisability of laying before the Union of British Columbia Municipalities for its endorsement proposed legislation limiting the production of vice. "However," the Mayor added, "we were unable to reach any definite conclusions. We considered a number of proposals for the prevention of vice, among them the proposal that a segregated area be created. We were all vigorously opposed to this proposal." The Mayor said that to-day's conference on vice questions was an "aftermath" of the recent Savoy Hotel case in which the police had been investigating, he intimated, had persuaded him and his colleagues that something should be done to cope with immorality here.

Michael Collins, interviewed to-day at the field headquarters of the National Army, termed Arthur Griffith's death a calamity for Ireland and said it was not too late for Eamonn de Valera and his followers to honor the passing of the Free State patriot by accepting the Free State Government of Ireland. The commander-in-chief added that he would continue his military work until the trouble was ended. Mourned. Commenting on the death of Griffith the Irish Times says: "The all-Southern loyalists will mourn Griffith's untimely death. They do not doubt for a moment that Griffith's colleagues who were parties to his pledges will honor them when the time comes, yet the Ireland of the new future will be poorer for lack of his calm vision and Catholic patriotism and every Southern loyalist not only will share the loss, but feel that he shares it in a peculiar degree." His Act. Says The Freeman's Journal: "His opponents argue that the treaty was signed because Griffith lacked courage. What all the facts make plain, his act, which has been solidly endorsed by the nation, will be universally recognized as one of the finest acts in Irish history." "Ireland must emerge from her trials the Ireland of his dreams—an Ireland valuing freedom so highly that she will permit no tyrant, foreign or domestic, to infringe on the rights of her people, and that she will be the least of her children. Could the dead lips of Griffith speak they would ask no better memorial."

EN KILLED IN MINNESOTA RAILWAY SMASH. Truck on Track Caused the Disaster. Annandale, Minn., Aug. 14.—Ten persons killed and more than two score injured were the toll of a wreck on the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie railway here Saturday night when westbound passenger train No. 107 crashed into a light truck loaded with oil and then ploughed into a freight train standing on a side track. Nine of the bodies removed were identified. They were residents of Minnesota and Wisconsin. The body of one man has not yet been identified. The wreck occurred when Fred Lamar, driver of the truck, failed to heed warnings of members of the freight crew and drove on the track in front of the passenger train bound from the Twin Cities to the Pacific Coast. No. 107 struck the truck squarely and hurled it against the freight engine on the side track. A switch stand was knocked down and three coaches of the passenger swung over to the side track into the freight train. The baggage car crashed over the overturned freight engine. Several other passenger cars were derailed. Topped Over. Most of those killed and injured were in the smoker, which reared up into the air and toppled over. Part of the wreckage caught fire, but the blaze was soon extinguished. To this fact many persons owed their lives, for it was several hours before the injured all had been removed. Homes in the neighborhood were opened and the most seriously injured were taken there. Women were called from all parts of the town to act as volunteer nurses and calls to nearby towns brought every available physician. All except two of the injured were taken to Minneapolis hospitals on special trains. Many were able to continue their journey after receiving medical attention. Lamar and a man who had asked him for a ride were instantly killed. The body of that man was identified as Arne Thompson, of Annandale. Chris Wallace, of Minneapolis, engineer of the freight train, was scalded so severely that he died several hours later. His brother, T. W. Johnson, of Minneapolis, was killed under an avalanche of coal but he managed to extricate himself and was only slightly bruised and cut. Emil Mylikangas, 14, of Annandale, was caught under the wreckage of the smoking car. Both legs were crushed and it was several hours before he was released. He directed the work of his rescuers. He died yesterday. Work of clearing away the wreckage was delayed somewhat late Saturday night and early Sunday when the wrecking engine toppled over at the scene. It was righted and the main line cleared for traffic yesterday.

IRISH GROUPS OF INSURGENTS SEIZE DUNDALK. (Continued from page 1.) Belfast, Aug. 14.—Commandant McKenna, leader of the Irish insurgents in County Louth, and five other republicans were killed during the fighting which resulted in the capture of Dundalk by irregulars, says a report from that town late this afternoon. McKenna was captured by the Free State Government. The Free State Government has issued a statement expressing its firm determination to carry on the life work of Mr. Griffith to the achievement which he so nearly reached.

The sensational success of The Daily Mail, which first made Lord Northcliffe one of the dominant personalities in English journalism, was due, not to individual writers, but to a consistent policy of catering for a modern public and serving them with well chosen news articles and constant change of interest. Its large circulation and resulting advertising revenue, gave it an influence which in politics was used on the Unionist side.

Founders Pictorial Paper.
The Daily Mail proved such a phenomenal success that it was not long before Lord Northcliffe was able to extend his activities into other fields and his first step was a check in the lack of support for the Sunday Daily Mail in 1899, at the same time that The Sunday Daily Telegraph also failed, he initiated a very interesting experiment in 1904 when he founded The Daily Mirror. That was the year that he received his Baronetcy.

The Mirror was begun as a women's penny weekly, and failed in that form. It was changed into a general halfpenny daily, where it soon won its place for popular pictures. Its success was also largely due to the fact that it was already been identified with The Evening News, and the business management of The Daily Mail.

The opportunity to take a financial interest in The London Times came in the early part of 1908, when considerable changes took place in the organization of the company. At that time the financial control passed to Lord Northcliffe, who in 1905 had been created a Baron.

Numerous other papers have been added, edited from Carmelitte House, London, and from newspaper offices in the provinces, and on the European continent.

Lord Northcliffe will be remembered as a great publisher, and not a great writer. However, in 1914, there came from his pen a book known as "At the War," which detailed in a very personal way the Allied leaders, and points and incidents in and around the Western battle front.

To supply the tremendous demand of the Northcliffe papers for newsprint the organization many years ago secured extensive pulp limits in Newfoundland, and in addition to his residences in London and the South-eastern Counties Lord Northcliffe retained a residence in Newfoundland at Grand Falls.

During the war a paper famine developed in Europe. Northcliffe was the only newspaper proprietor with an abundant supply of newsprint. The tragic humor of the situation. Like everything else, paper passed under a "control." Life in these days was one control after another. The British paper controller decreed that Northcliffe's supply should be apportioned among all his competitors.

EFFORTS DURING THE GREAT WAR
Henry Wilson, assistant editor of The London Daily Mail, Lord Northcliffe's most successful publication, has contributed a biographical sketch of his chief to the new volumes of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, of which the following extract covers his war activities:

In the World War he took the lead in advocating almost every measure of reform that was adopted through Great Britain, usually before it was introduced. He was indeed described by L. J. Maxse as "the great driving force in our country's control after another." (National Review, July 1917). He aimed at the most vigorous possible conduct of the struggle, and was from the first of the opinion that the war would be a long and desperate contest. The chief newspaper campaigns which he carried out, always with the aims of victory and close union between the Allies, were: 1. For the removal of Lord Northcliffe from the post of Director of Munitions in August, 1914. 2. For the organization of the munition supply, and the provision of high explosive shells in April and May, 1915, when he did not hesitate to lay the responsibility for the shortage on Lord Kitchener in leading articles written by himself in The Daily Mail of May 19 and 21, the second of which was heatedly burned on the London and other stock exchanges. 3. This campaign was one of the causes of the formation of the Coalition Ministry by Mr. Asquith, in December, 1915, and early 1916, in the teeth of storms of abuse, he urged the necessity of compulsory service as the sole means of winning the war. 4. He protested vigorously against the excessive optimism of Mr. Asquith's Government and of its press supporters, and against the whole system of official secretiveness by which grave failure was concealed. He called for the strict enforcement of the blockade and the stoppage of supplies which were reaching Germany through neutral countries. 5. He pointed out the impossibility of successful war with a debating society of twenty-three or twenty-four persons, such as formed the cabinet. 6. So far as the censorship would allow, he insisted on "side-shows" such as the Dardanelles and Salonica campaigns, which absorbed so large a part of the national forces. 7. He continued his pre-war demand for the construction of aircraft, and the "right kind of aircraft," on the largest possible scale, and he called for effective measures against seppelins and for warnings in the case of imminent air attacks. 8. He urged the necessity of creating a strong naval war staff and taking offensive measures against the enemy submarines. 9. He insisted on the need for a compulsory system of food rationing.

Change of Government.
In December, 1916, he gave his support to Mr. Lloyd George in the political crisis which led to the fall of Mr. Asquith's Government, and dealt the final thrust which brought that Government down, though after the Armistice, by reason of his ob-

International Labor Organization Not Dealing With Farm Workers

London, Aug. 14.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The Hague International Court of Justice, by a majority, has decided affirmatively the question submitted by France arising out of the long controversy at the international labor conference at Geneva last October, as to whether or not the International Labor Organization of the League of Nations was competent to regulate internationally the hours and other conditions affecting agricultural workers. The French and Roumanian judges dissented. The International Court decided that the Labor Organization was not competent to scrutinize the means of production.

STRIKERS ORDERED TO ACCEPT AWARD AFTER ARBITRATION

London, Aug. 14.—That the striking printers and compositors, members of the Typographical Association, were bound to adopt the award of the Industrial Court was the decision of a magistrate at Newcastle, where The Newcastle Chronicle brought a test case against ninety-seven employees for breach of contract. The case arose out of the recent strike, and the award of the Industrial Court, which the Newcastle journeymen printers declined to accept.

The court awarded the employing newspapers two shillings damage in respect of each defendant employee.

Brooklyn Pastor Approves Premier King's Canada-U.S. Proposal

Norway Point, Lake of Bays, Ont., Aug. 14.—Leaving to diplomats the shaping of details, citizens of both countries and of every political and religious creed should utter a "grand amen" to the Canadian Premier's proposal for a long period treaty between Canada and the United States, asserted Dr. S. Edward Young, pastor of the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, at a community service here yesterday.

Citing reasons, Dr. Young said: "Such a treaty can be kept, for we have already faithfully observed similar treaties, having lived in neighborly goodwill 167 years. "We ought to face as one whatever tasks or perils confront North America. The last place for a warship or a fort or a cannon is our international boundary line."

Toronto Officials Investigated Complaint ex-Soldiers Suffering

Toronto, Aug. 14.—When "General" Frank Riley, chief of the "hikers' army," publicly charged that there were a great many men in need of relief who could not secure it, the city authorities demanded that he produce their names. Riley later turned in a list of 200 names. Each of these cases has been carefully investigated by the Public Welfare Department under Dr. C. J. Hastings with remarkable results.

Dr. Hastings reports that out of the 200 only four were in need of assistance. In numerous cases the addresses on the list were found to be non-existent.

In several other cases the persons whose names were on the list were very indignant when the welfare workers called and asked if they were in need of help.

LORD NORTHLIFFE.

The career of Lord Northcliffe, which came to an end to-day furnishes one of the most striking romances of the modern age. The son of an Irish barrister, he went to London when he was a youth and there, in the ancient capital of a proverbially conservative country, and with no resources of wealth, influential friends or imposing lineage, within a few decades he became one of the most powerful personages in Christendom, a peer of the realm, a maker and wrecker of Governments, a dictator of policies, a force whose influence, through the ramifications of his vast publishing interests, permeated, whether with good, bad or indifferent portent, every stratum of the life of the nation. He was, in truth, the Napoleon of his own particular field of activity, and it is no secret that the analogy appealed to his romantic, adventurous spirit, and that he carried it as far as he could within the limits of the calling to which he devoted his energies. It would be a mistake, of course, to assume that the tremendous organization which Lord Northcliffe now leaves forever was the product of his activities alone. His very able brothers, notably Lord Rothermere, a remarkable man of business, and the co-operation of men like Mr. Kennedy Jones, were factors in the Northcliffe fortunes without which we would have heard much less of the luminous progress of Alfred Harmsworth towards renown. But Northcliffe was the dominant figure of the combination, the boldest, the most aggressive, the most resourceful, and his many-sided personality is reflected in every one of the hundred or more Harmsworth publications, from the majestic Times down to the screaming harum-scarum penny dreadful which finds its way into the squalid tenement. In that respect he was true to his Corsican prototype; he chose good marshals and, although he could not make kings of those whose services pleased him, he did the next best thing to his mind and made them peers, baronets and knights. And, like Napoleon, he it said also, he dismissed without compunction those who did not please him, regardless of whether they deserved dismissal or not.

It will be interesting to peruse the comments of Northcliffe's contemporaries on his career. All will agree on his capacity for achievement, his tremendous energy, his swift insight and unerring foresight, his extraordinary newsmag's sense, his invincible courage, resolution and unquestioned devotion to his country. But they will disagree on the nature of the influence he has wielded and his place in the pantheon of his nation's history. He certainly gave a new character to British journalism. His friends would say he made it more human; he brought it into intimate contact with the mind of the public at large; he made it modern. His critics will claim he commercialized it to a vitiating degree; he destroyed its best traditions and he deprived it of the public confidence it formerly enjoyed. There will be considerable truth in both views. His methods were sensational because that which was novel and sensational strongly appealed to him and he could not detach his likes and dislikes from any enterprise with which he associated himself. Both sets of qualities were apparent during the war. He did a lot of good by his constructive criticism; and considerable harm by sensationalism and scandal-mongering. His attacks on incompetent men in office unfortunately were largely balanced on the other side of the scale by unjust onslaughts upon competent and devoted servants of the state.

Men of his type are capable of great good at any time, but it is true that their capacity for doing good is also the measure of their capacity for doing harm. An inconstant indisposition, even though it be allied with exceptional natural positive gifts, is always a source of danger in one who possesses the great power which lay in Northcliffe's hands. Mr. Lloyd George, whose career in many respects resembles that of the eminent publisher in that he rose from obscurity to the primacy of his calling in all the world, can testify out of his own recent experience to the negative consequences of Northcliffe's eccentricities. There will be general agreement among the commentators, however, on Northcliffe's many admirable personal qualities, his generosity to the colleagues of his early days, his boundless hospitality, his public spirit, his detestation of social snobbery and ostentation and his democratic ways. In his death a striking actor disappears from the world's stage; the chapter of a complex character comes to an end.

NO AGREEMENT REACHED.

After appropriate reflection upon the details of the British plan to give Germany a breather in respect of future reparations payments France seems to have decided that she cannot back down to a point at which the two views might be reconciled. So definite does this appear to be that the Conference adjourned this afternoon without an agreement or decision as to whether it would be possible to resume the discussion at a future date. Although this development does not necessarily signify that the remaining proposals which were valiantly endeavoring to support the Entente have been removed altogether, it can be fairly correctly described as the starting point of a new relationship between Great Britain and the Republic in connection with Germany's future.

It is always interesting to observe the manner in which a section of the press in this country and on the other side of the Atlantic depreciates any comment directed at the flaws which must sooner or later develop and destroy the Entente unless they can be repaired by an acknowledgment of conditions on the part of both countries—conditions which are much bigger than the men who study them. In this connection The Manchester Guardian goes to the heart of Anglo-French differences when it deals with that phase of them which has attempted to shift the blame for strained relations on to the shoulders of Mr. Lloyd George. It observes in part as follows:

If Mr. Lloyd George and his government were to disappear tomorrow his successors would have exactly the same difficulties to face and problems to solve. Mr. Poincaré in his speech on Saturday announced that France had had so far, three years after the signature of peace, received nothing towards the payment of the indemnity due to her. That is true, but it is not quite the whole truth. Germany has paid a good deal, but the money has all gone towards meeting the cost of France's needlessly large and enormously expensive army of occupation. Is it not time for a little frank speaking between ourselves and our neighbors? If France has received nothing in the shape of an indemnity is it not largely by her own fault? She complains that her devastated provinces remain devastated, but, did she refuse the offer of the Germans, made almost immediately after the conclusion of peace, to set to work to repair the damage? It was a perfectly genuine and practical proposal. Picked German workmen were ready to rebuild the destroyed houses and to repair, as far as possible, the rest of the war damage. Why was it not done?

This comment is not advanced by The Guardian in any spirit of hostility to France. It is a recognition that her necessity is very great indeed; but it does emphasize the fact, borne out by later events, that she has made the payment of even a moderate indemnity difficult, or impossible, by demanding with violence the payment of an inordinate one. These conditions are aggravated by the knowledge that France is maintaining a vast army, an army enormously greater than any present dangers can justify, on a war footing. The Guardian likewise notes the huge sums wasted in subsidies to Poland and in supporting one adventure after another—Denkin, Kolchak, and the rest—in vain and ruinous attacks on Russia. That particular folly has now ceased, but the others remain.

LAND SALES HELD UP BY SUCCESSION DUTY UNCERTAINTY

City land sales are being held up now because of the recent ruling which prevents purchasers from securing title to any land against which succession duties are due. This was made known at the City Hall today when City Solicitor H. S. Pringle returned to his office after a brief vacation.

"I will not put through any sales of city land so long as there is a chance that some old forgotten succession duty is due on the property," Mr. Pringle said at noon. "For that reason I am holding up several land deals. This situation arises from the recent action of the Provincial Government in holding up the title of some land which the city was selling and upon which, it was discovered, some old succession duties were owing. This ruling, as it was pointed out in the City Council some time ago, threatens titles of many properties all over the city because old succession duties, unknown to their owners, are being owing upon them."

Mayor Marchant recently conferred with Government officials on this matter and urged them to remove the difficulties surrounding land titles. So far no action has been taken on the matter, however, and as Mr. Pringle explained to-day, land deals are being held up by the uncertainty arising out of Government claims for succession duties.

To discover whether old succession duties are due on land which it wishes to sell the city must go through a lengthy and somewhat expensive process, Mr. Pringle said. It is necessary now, before selling a piece of land, to conduct searches in court records to make sure that no such duties are unpaid.

REAL BUSINESS.

Do the people of Vancouver Island recognize that the motorist who comes to this part of the Province to spend his holiday on wheels very often comes back and settles down? Is it generally known that there have been several instances within a moderate radius of this city where small plots of land have been sold in order that the erstwhile visitor might obtain a more tangible interest in the locality which appeals to him? In any case these are facts that should be borne in mind by those who are inclined to look upon tourist travel of any kind as only temporarily profitable to the community with natural attractions to offer.

Twenty-five years ago a super-optimist would not have prophesied the existence of the Los Angeles we know to-day. Not even a reasonable scenic appeal existed; an almost limitless expanse of arid country stretched away from the blue waters of the Pacific. But a number of Eastern men of money had been excited to this particular spot because of its climatic advantages which were considered a deadly foe to the tubercular germ. Two decades of history do not require repeating. It is only necessary to suggest that Vancouver Island is a veritable paradise in comparison with the Los Angeles of the nineties. Moral: Develop the business!

NOTE AND COMMENT

If the Cranbrook election has demonstrated nothing else so far it has shown how much publicity a former civil servant may obtain at a comparatively small charge if he will publish correspondence of an official nature.

Deutschland ueber Alles has been revived in Berlin as the national song of Germany. As long as it does the German good to hear it nobody else will complain. The outside world will be content with its own version—Deutschland unter Allies.

When Mr. Michael Collins was interviewed at the field headquarters of the National Army to-day he proved himself to be a big man. He described the death of Mr. Griffith as a calamity for Ireland; but he declared that it was not too late for de Valera and his followers to honor the passing of a great patriot by accepting the terms which the Free State Government has offered to achieve the unity of Ireland. Will the self-styled "president" of a non-existent republic rise to the occasion?

LAND SALES HELD UP BY SUCCESSION DUTY UNCERTAINTY

City Will Not Put Through Deals Until Old Claims Are Investigated

City land sales are being held up now because of the recent ruling which prevents purchasers from securing title to any land against which succession duties are due. This was made known at the City Hall today when City Solicitor H. S. Pringle returned to his office after a brief vacation.

"I will not put through any sales of city land so long as there is a chance that some old forgotten succession duty is due on the property," Mr. Pringle said at noon. "For that reason I am holding up several land deals. This situation arises from the recent action of the Provincial Government in holding up the title of some land which the city was selling and upon which, it was discovered, some old succession duties were owing. This ruling, as it was pointed out in the City Council some time ago, threatens titles of many properties all over the city because old succession duties, unknown to their owners, are being owing upon them."

Mayor Marchant recently conferred with Government officials on this matter and urged them to remove the difficulties surrounding land titles. So far no action has been taken on the matter, however, and as Mr. Pringle explained to-day, land deals are being held up by the uncertainty arising out of Government claims for succession duties.

To discover whether old succession duties are due on land which it wishes to sell the city must go through a lengthy and somewhat expensive process, Mr. Pringle said. ISLAND HURT BY FREIGHT TOLLS

Wholesalers Learn Situation at Port Alberni During Recent Tour

Greatly pleased with the results of their tour of Vancouver Island on a mission calculated to build up better business relations between Victoria and up-island traders, the party of local wholesalers who left the city last Monday returned to Victoria late Saturday night. The party included wholesale grocers, hardware men and fruit dealers.

The party received a very hearty welcome in every city they visited. They were struck with the bright appearance of the stores and the freshness of the stocks displayed on the shelves, denoting quick turnover in trade.

Good Roads.

Optimism prevailed everywhere; the party reports. Features noted by the party were the good roads, which the Government is employing men to keep in the best of condition, the splendid hotels and the excellence of the service given at a moderate cost. The party felt satisfied that all these factors would prove of value in attracting tourists to Vancouver Island, and in promoting the best interests of trade.

Although Vancouver Island has suffered from some disastrous forest fires this summer there was very little apparent damage from the high winds and the trip over the island roads was most enjoyable. Following the tour, the wholesalers will hold a meeting to confer on the means of promoting better trade relations with up-island points.

While the party was at Port Alberni the Board of Trade at Alberni held its regular monthly meeting, to which the visitors were invited. All the members attended and some friendly discussion took place.

The anomalies of the express rates based on the zone system were brought out in a forcible manner and an instance was cited where a shipper from Port Alberni of a shipment addressed to Vancouver, on finding that he could get a better market for the shipment in Victoria, via which the shipment was consigned, ordered the shipment stopped here and thereupon asked to pay a rate of 40 cents per hundred pounds over and above the rate which he had been billed for to Vancouver. Another instance was cited where the case was reversed and the same thing applied, the shipment from Vancouver to the West Coast city via Victoria being charged 40 cents per hundred more than if the goods were sent via Nanaimo and over the rail route from there.

URGENT SAANICH TO LEAVE PUPILS IN CITY HIGH SCHOOL

Trustees to Meet Saanich School Board; Plenty of Room in School

Victoria School Trustees will wait upon the Saanich School Board tonight and try to persuade it to leave Saanich pupils in the Victoria High School instead of establishing first year high school classes in Saanich.

There is plenty of room at the Victoria High School for all the present Saanich pupils and for all the pupils whom Victoria and Saanich will produce for some ten years to come, it was declared at the City School Board meeting to-day. There are now about 600 students at the Victoria High School and there is at present accommodation for over 1,000. When 1,000 students are attending the school it will be possible to increase providing more classrooms in what is now the attic. In other words, there is no basis for the suggestion that the High School is getting too crowded for Saanich pupils, Victoria trustees held.

These facts will be explained to the Saanich trustees to-night.

It was not made known to-day whether the Victoria trustees would consider a request from Saanich for a reduction of fees chargeable for Saanich pupils attending the High School. It was pointed out, however, that the Victoria Board has full control over the fees and if the first year Saanich pupils are withdrawn from the school, can raise the fees of the second and third year pupils to make up for some of the loss in revenue.

GRANDMOTHER AGED SEVENTY-ONE YEARS ENTERS COLLEGE

Ex-Student of Vassar Mother of Six, says Mental Alertness Secret of Youth New York, Aug. 14.—At seventy-one years of age, Mrs. A. P. Crawford, of Greensboro, N. C., has entered the Summer session of Columbia University as a student.

There is no need to grow old, mentally at least, said Mrs. Crawford, who is living at 420 West 119th Street during her stay here. "Stagnation and intolerance are the greatest foes of old age. These changing times demand new viewpoints, and the woman of to-day must keep herself well informed, as part of her duty as a citizen."

Grandson Just Graduated. A grandson, E. B. Crawford, was graduated from the University of North Carolina this June. Her son, L. W. Crawford, is assistant director of the Summer session at Columbia.

Doesn't Condemn Flappers. Asked her opinion of the modern "flapper," she replied that the term was used so indiscriminately that she did not condemn the young girls of to-day for reaching out toward freer, broader lives.

Secret of Youth. This country is gradually making progress toward the fulfillment of its democratic ideals, Mrs. Crawford believes. Social and economic ideas undreamed of by the rank and file of men and women in her day are becoming commonplace now, she said.

G.A.U.V. PICNIC IS GREAT SUCCESS

Hundreds Attend Enjoyable Picnic at Goldstream Keenly delighted with the day's outing, hundreds of members of the Grand Army of the United Veterans and their friends returned from Goldstream last evening tired but happy and agreed that the G. A. U. V. annual picnic was something that had come to stay and could hardly be outlasted by any other attraction.

The officers and members of the association worked so hard that it would be difficult to define in detail where most of the credit for the success of the affair belonged, but it is certain that everyone had a wonderful time. The grounds put in splendid shape for the picnic and did everything possible to make the visitors at home at the beautiful Goldstream grounds.

At St. John's Church on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, the Rev. A. Garlick solemnized the marriage of Miss May House of Newfoundland and Samuel Mitchell of Victoria. The bride wore a pretty travelling suit of navy blue tricot with hat of the same color and was attended by her sister, Mrs. E. Phillips. The young couple will reside in Victoria.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sellers, of Chehalis Street, celebrated the silver anniversary of their wedding on Saturday afternoon at the residence of Mr. A. G. Stroyan, Cadboro Bay. Mr. and Mrs. Sellers were the guests of many friends from the city, who included Mr. A. G. Stroyan, Miss Nora Stroyan, Miss L. Hart, of Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. John Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Craig, Mr. Hugh Stroyan, Mr. Redpath, Mr. Ramsay, Miss Ramsay, Mrs. Horn, Mrs. W. J. Terry, Miss Thomas, of Comox, Mrs. Marjorie Stroyan, of Vancouver; Miss Caldwell, Miss Peggy Caldwell, Master Allen Craig, Miss Allison Craig, Master George Craig, Mr. Donald Horn and Master Will Sellers.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Gregory-Alten who chaperoned a party of young people on a motor trip up the island as far as Campbell River, returned to the city on Friday evening. ## IF WINTER COMES

by A. S. M. HUTCHINSON
INSTALMENT NO. 32

Copyrighted—Published by arrangement with British & Colonial Press, Ltd.

He was going to say, "To happiness," but he looked at her and then looked away. "Well, to everything; to success. You can't possibly be successful if you haven't got convictions—what I call 'hard-headed' convictions. That's what success is, Nona, the success of politicians and big men whose names are always in the papers. It's that seeing a thing from only one point of view and going all out for it from that point of view. Convictions. Not muckling about all round a thing and seeing it from about twenty different sides like I do. You know, you can't possibly pull out this big, booming sort of stuff they call success if you're going to see anybody's point of view but your own. You must have convictions. Yes, and narrower than that, not convictions but conviction. Only one conviction—that you're right and that every one who thinks differently from you is wrong to 'blaze.' He laughed. "And I'm dashed if I ever think I'm right, let alone conviction of it. I can always see the bits of right on the other side of the argument. That's me. I dash me!"

She said, "Oh on, Marko. I like it." "Well, that's all there is to it, Nona. These conviction chaps, these booming politicians and honora-ri-ah chaps, these Bagshaw chaps—you know Bagshaw?—they go off like a cannon ball. They go like hell and smash through and stick when they get there. My sort's like the footballs you see down at the school-ent-about. Wherever there's a punt I feel it and respond to it. My sort's out to be kicked." He laughed again. "But I couldn't be any other sort."

She said, "I'm glad you couldn't be."

Marko.—You're just the same as you used to be. I'm glad you're the same.

He did not reply.

She sat briskly forward in the big armchair in which she faced him, raising of the motion a movement as though throwing a question. "Well, go on, Marko. Go on talking. I'm not going to let you stop talking yet. I love that about how people get success nowadays. It's jolly true, I never thought of it before. Yes, you're still a terribly think person, Marko. Go on. Think some more. Out loud."

"Caressing—drawing him on—just as of old."

He said thoughtfully, "I tell you a thing I often think a lot about, Nona. You being here like this puts it in my mind. Conventions. Ah, poor Marko. I knew you'd simply hate it, my coming in like this. Does it seem terribly unconventional, improper, to you, shut up with me in your office?"

She smiled teasingly. "It seems very nice. That's all it seems. But it does bring into my mind that doesn't think tuppence about what's usually done or what's not usually done; and that reminded me of things I've thought about conventions. Look here, Nona, this really is rather interesting."

"Yes," she said. "Yes."

Just so he used to bring ideas to her; just so, with "Yes-yes," she used to receive them.

But he went on. "Why, convention, you know, it's the most mysterious extraordinary thing. It's a code society has built up to protect itself and to govern itself, and when you go into it it's the most marvellous code that ever was invented. All sorts of things that the law doesn't give, and couldn't give, our conventions shove in on us in the most amazing way. And all probably originated by a lot of Mother Grundy-ish old women, that's what's so extraordinary. You know, if all the greatest legal minds of all the ages had laid themselves out to make a social code they could never have got anywhere near the rules that the people have built up for themselves. And that's what I like, Nona—that's what I think so interesting and the best thing in life; the things that people do for themselves without any State interference. That's what I'd encourage all I knew how if I were a politician."

He broke off. "I say, aren't I the limit, gassing away like this? I hardly ever get off nowadays and when I do—Why don't you stop me?"

She made a little gesture deprecatory of his suggestion. "Because I funny old face when you're on one of your ideas. It gets red underneath, Marko, and the red slowly comes up. Funny old face. Go on. I want to hear this because I'm going to disagree with you, I think. I think conventions, most of them, are odious, hateful, Marko. I hate them."

He had been strangely affected by the words of her interruptions: a contraction in the throat—a twitching about the eyes. But he was able, and glad that he was able, to catch eagerly at her opinion. "Yes, yes, I know, odious, hateful, and much more than that, cruel—conventions can be as cruel, as cruel as hell. I was just coming to that. But they're all absolutely right, based, Nona. That's the baffling and the maddening part of them. That's what interests me in them. In their application they're often unutterably wrong, cruel, hideously cruel and unjust, but when you examine them, even at their cruelest, you can't help seeing that fundamentally they're absolutely right and reasonable and necessary. Look, take quite a silly example. There's a convention against going to church in any but your best clothes. It's easy to conceive wrongness in the application of it. It's easy to conceive a person wanting to go to church and likely to benefit by going to church, but staying away because of feeling too shabby. But you can't help seeing the rightness at the bottom of it—the idea of presenting yourself decently at worship, as before princes. That makes you laugh."

"It doesn't, Marko. I can see much worse things just on the same principle."

He said pleasedly. "Of course you can, can't you? Look at all this stuff that's been in the papers lately about what they call the problem of the unmarried mother. Now there's a little brute of a case for you: a girl gets into trouble and while she sticks to her baby she's made an outcast; every door is shut to her; her own people will have nothing to do with her; no one will take her in—so long as she's got the baby with her. That's the convention and you can imagine cases where it's cruel beyond words. But it's no good cursing society about it. You can't help seeing that the convention is fundamentally right and essential. Where on earth would you be if girls with babies could find homes as easily as girls without babies?" He smiled. "You'd have babies pouring out all over the place. See it?"

She nodded. "I do think that's interesting, Marko. I think that's most awfully interesting. Yes, cruel and hateful and preposterous, many of them, but all fundamentally right. I think that's absorbing. I shall look out for conventions now, and when they annoy me most I'll think out what they're based on. I will."

"Well, it's not a bad idea," he said. "It helps in all sorts of ways to think things out as they happen to you. You don't realize what a mysterious business life is till you begin to do that; and once you begin to feel the mysteriousness of it there's not much can upset you. You get the feeling that you're part of an enormous, mysterious game, and you just wonder what the last move means. Eh?"

She did not answer.

Presently she said, "Yes, you do still think things, Marko. You haven't changed a bit, you know. You're just the same."

He smiled. "Oh, well, it's only two years, you know—less than two years since you went away. I wasn't thinking of two years. I was thinking of many years were you thinking of?"

"Ten."

"They just sat there. (To be continued)

MR. FOX SETS A TRAP—Part I.

Mr. Fox had seen one day in Mr. Man's garden a box arranged with a string and a small piece of stick, so that when poor, unsuspecting little Bunny Rabbit went under the box to nibble a tempting carrot, down came the box and Bunny was a prisoner.

"That is a very clever way of making a catch," thought Mr. Fox, "very clever, indeed; only I do not care to be the one under the box. Now I must think that over and maybe I can use Mr. Man's scheme to catch my dinner without running so much risk."

Mr. Fox went home to smoke his pipe, for somehow he could always think better ideas when he smoked.

He sat down in his doorway.

or at least, he thought this was so. Anyway, he sat down in the doorway and put on his thinking cap. "I knew it," he exclaimed after a while. "I knew I could use that box trick to help me out. I will fix it at once."

Then Mr. Fox went to work in his yard and arranged the box and the string with the little stick to hold the box up and under it he strewed some corn.

It was a pretty big box, for Mr. Fox thought he might catch several foolish hens if he had a big one. When it was all finished Mr. Fox stood looking at it as he pushed back his cap and scratched his head. "Somehow that does not seem quite safe, after all," he said. "Those hens might begin to flap about under the box and tip it over."

"That would be a pity after all the trouble I have taken, so I guess I had better think a little more and make it a sure thing."

Then Mr. Fox had to think again. He got his pipe and sat down on the doorstep, his eyes fixed upon the box. "That will fix them," he suddenly said, jumping up. "I will make the little stick a stronger stick and put a piece of rock in some wire netting, then I will tack the netting on the top of the box and there you are, no hen or hens could push that over."

It was not long before he had it all fixed and then to test it Mr. Fox gave the stick that held up the box a gentle tap and down it came. It could not be tipped over easily, that was certain.

"Now I do not have to think about getting my supplies," said Mr. Fox. "I can take things easy. So I guess I will trot over to Mr. Coon and tell him how smart I am. He always likes to hear about my new ideas."

Mr. Possum had been out on a moonlight party the night before, and he was sound asleep, for he had been the winner in the race that had taken place, and he was all tired out.

Mr. Coon nodded out his head when he heard the knocking on his door. "What's wanted?" he inquired when he had satisfied himself that it was not Mr. Man or Mr. Dog prowling around.

"It is Mr. Fox, Mr. Coon," was the reply. "I just came around to make a friendly visit and tell you a scheme of mine for catching hens or chickens. I am sure you will appreciate it."

Mr. Coon came sagging backwards down to the ground, and Mr. Fox told him how he had arranged to get all of his food without doing any work. "That is, not much, for you see setting that box in the right position is really not work, it is a pleasure, Mr. Coon."

The first named being chairman of their committees, while the full general committee is under the chairmanship of Mr. Frank Cooke with Mr. D. H. Pickard as secretary.

No small measure of the success of the picnic will be attributable to the Women's Institute who is assisting in warming the tea pots and making refreshing cups of tea for the picnickers, which adds so much to the enjoyment of these outings.

A band under the conductorship of Mr. Galger will be in attendance to discourse sweet music, and add charm to the proceedings.

ADRIATIC DOCKED RIGHT ON TIME

Brings Tale of Heroic Act by Second Engineer Following Explosion

New York, Aug. 13.—On time and almost entirely shipshape despite the explosion that sent five men to their deaths, and injured three others, one fatally, early Friday morning at sea, 1,000 miles from this port, the White Star Liner Adriatic docked with her 525 passengers to-night.

Officers and the few of the crew who knew of the explosion when it occurred, brought back a tale of unflinching heroism performed by a big brawny Irishman, Jim Carrigan, of Liverpool, the senior second engineer, who crawled from a bulkhead into the hold, dark with a thick asphyxiating gas, to rescue "one of my men," and put out the fire that menaced the liner and its human cargo.

Quickly and quietly was the explosion checked and the vessel returned to its course so that not more than 50 per cent. of the passengers were aware of the disaster until the following morning.

The farm implements will be sold immediately after the cattle, and include "Perfection" Milk Machine, double unit, with complete equipment, like new; Milk Cooler, Milk Cart, Massey-Harris Pulper, Massey-Harris Binder (6 ft.), Deering Mower (4 1/2 ft.), Set Spike Harrows, Wheeled Spring Tooth Harrows, Pole Saw, Potato Planter, Bain Wagon (4-in. tires), Democrat, Wood Cutting Attachment for Ford, Etc. Performed Finely On Initial Round Voyage To The Orient

The time has long past when advertising was merely a sign. One pointed it on the door of one's store, or business. More progressive business men had cards printed that were about in the mail, a few advertised. The greatest amount of business came to those who advertised. It came easily, naturally, and quickly.

Those merchants expanded their leaps. Merchants who advertise expand in leaps. Those who depend upon signs, sort of stop-go or out of business.

Eddie Hubbard Sustains Delay in Mail Carriage Contract

Constituting the first mishap in this vicinity in over two years of mail carriage, Eddie Hubbard, the Seattle-Victoria airmail postman, to-day was stalled by the fracture of a connecting rod in the machine he was flying. Hubbard left Seattle at 2 a.m. and was just over the outskirts of the city at about 1,000 feet elevation, flying in the mist, when the connecting rod parted on the last cylinder.
 Hubbard plained down to the surface of the water and made a good landing a short distance out from Clover point at ten o'clock. His descent was seen by a letter carrier in the Fairfield district, who reported to the Post Office, word thus reaching Hubbard's local representative, J. Weiler. Weiler secured a launch and the machine towed back to Seattle. The airmail postman was on his way to pick up the express mail from two steamers, the Empress of Canada, which lay alongside the Outer Wharf at the time, and the President Jefferson, which was then at William Head quarantine station. He was within half a mile of his harbor landing when the breakdown took place. Effecting a good landing, the airman sustained neither injury to himself nor extensive damage to the machine.
 With the exception of a three-minute stop in mid-Straits for engine trouble which he repaired on the spot some months ago, this is the first delay that Hubbard has met on mail runs between the two cities.

BILLY MUIR HAS TURN FOR THE BETTER AND LOOKS BRIGHTER
 Billy Muir was looking brighter this morning.
 The young diver who is now making a fight for his life at St. Joseph's Hospital took a turn last evening and was more cheerful this morning.
 Following the operation which was performed last week Billy looked very bad, but to-day he is better than he has been since his terrible affliction overtook him.
 Billy's case has aroused tremendous interest, and not only have volumes of sympathy been lavished upon him, but the kind-hearted citizens have opened up their pocket-books so that Billy may get the best of care and attention in his great fight for life.

The party, headed by the Canadian Legion band under Bandmaster Miller, boarded the B. C. S. steamer Princess Royal, for one of the most successful nocturnal outings of the year. Under T. Watson a concert party added much to the enjoyment of the party. Dancing took place on the deck to music furnished by the Legion band. Great credit is due to the ladies of the Auxiliary to the Legion, who saw to refreshments and the efficient management of the affair. Led by D. Ogilvie the party enjoyed a well selected programme of community singing. Those assisting in the entertainment included Messrs. T. Watson, David Ogilvie, W. G. Watson, W. Gray, D. Dumbleton and J.  The teachers in the Penmanship classes at the Summer School were addressed on Friday by Frank H. Arnold, Supervisor of Penmanship for the city of Spokane. Mr. Arnold has just completed a course of lectures and demonstrations at the University of California at Berkeley. He addressed the teachers here on "The Use of the Story in Writing Lessons" and demonstrated very clearly the value of this method of teaching rhythm, movement, pen-holding, and letter formation.
 Mr. Arnold spoke very highly of the writing system which has been recently introduced into the schools of this Province, stating that he had examined it very thoroughly and knew of no better system in use to-day.
 Mrs. Potts, directress of the famous Montessori School of Calgary, who has so successfully conducted the demonstration class at the Summer School this year, in expressing appreciation of Mr. Arnold's address said that she had become convinced that the MacLean method was sound in every respect and that she intended to introduce it next term in her school at Calgary.

LAST PICTURE BY FAMOUS DIRECTOR

Late W. D. Taylor Made "Top of New York," Now at Dominion

The last picture made by the late William D. Taylor, the Paramount director who recently was the victim of a mysterious assassination in Hollywood, Calif., was "The Top of New York," a Paramount picture starring May McAvoy. It is said that Mr. Taylor's directorial art never was more conspicuously displayed in a picture production than in this delightful story of tenement and department store life in a great city. Miss McAvoy has the role of a New York tenement girl who clerks in the toy section of a huge department store and during the Christmas rush is featured as an animated doll at the toy counter, to attract customers and amuse the children. The tragic home life of the girl, in decided contrast to her gay trappings and light-hearted manners as the doll, make a story full of colorful scenes and gripping intensity. "The Top of New York" which will be shown at the Dominion Theatre all this week, was written by Sonya Levien. Walter McGrail is leading man and heads an unusually clever supporting cast of players.

IS GENTLE SATIRE ON MARRIAGE

Realart Comedy at Capitol Will Amuse

Is it possible for a husband to become bored with a wife who permits his doing just as he pleases? Yes—if she insists upon doing it with him! That is the interesting situation depicted in the Realart comedy, "Too Much Wife," which has Wanda Hawley as the star and will be seen at the Capitol Theatre all week. Of course, being surfeited with liberty is not the plight of the majority of Benedicts, even in the newly-wed stage—when they're least anxious for it. Most of them complain more or less bitterly of being held down, of having to argue craftily just to get an occasional evening with the boys. How would these abused lords of

NOTABLE SETTINGS IN "THE SHEIK"

Royal Presents Barbaric East in Photoplay

One of the most impressive features of "The Sheik," George Melford's latest production for Paramount, which comes to the Royal Victoria Theatre all this week, are the many magnificent and spectacular settings in which the various scenes are enacted. These include: A remarkable conception of a public execution of the ancient City of Carthage under Roman rule; a bird's-eye shot of the City of Biskra, the Monte Carlo of the Algerian Sahara, taken from a minaret with an Arab praying in the foreground; fifteen actual shots about the city of Biskra, especially made for the picture by a representative from Paramount's London studio; a picturesque African oasis, especially constructed on a desert site near Hollywood; a complete Arabian village—the stronghold of the bandit chieftain, Omar; and beautiful, exotic interiors, such as the interior of the Sheik's tent, and the desert palace of Omar. In the Carthage episode, which is a vision in the picture, a very unusual effect is presented. Agnes Ayres, playing the principal feminine role, is shown as the haughty queen who rules the city under Roman domination. When the scene first opens, it shows the proud English girl, later to be captured by the Sheik, encamped at night among the ruins of Roman splendor in the ancient city. There are broken pillars and crumbling ruins. Then the girl becomes a Carthaginian queen, the architecture is restored and scenes of splendor, peopled with the royal court, flower girls, harp girls, slaves, centurions and Roman soldiers follow. This vision is fortunate—indeed her mother too busy with social duties to listen to her daughter's questions, and when the lonely girl turns to companions of her own age for knowledge, she gets a first-hand from a handsome "rounder," young in years but old in wisdom of the ways of the world. Leading physicians, clergymen, Y.M.C.A. workers and educators everywhere have lavishly praised this picture in every city where it has been shown, and heartily endorse it. "Authorities recommend it as a picture that every parent, every young man and young woman, should see—except if it is the only motion picture they are able to see this year," as one Y.M.C.A. worker puts it. No person under 16 years of age will be admitted.

POINTS PERIL OF SEX IGNORANCE

"Open Your Eyes," the flaming photoplay prepared under the supervision of the United States Public Health Service as part of a campaign for a clean nation and a country made safe for posterity, comes to the Columbia Theatre to-day. This picture has attracted wide attention, and created a veritable sensation among educators and public officials in every city where it has been shown. In addition to telling a thrilling, living story of love betrayed, "Open Your Eyes" is a picture with a purpose. Vibrant with dramatic power, it gets in under the skin of the spectators and while it entertains and thrills, it leaves a sobering thought behind. Briefly, "Open Your Eyes" is the story of two girls, both young, beautiful and innocent, just budding into young womanhood. One finds her mother all that a mother should be. Her questions are frankly and sensibly answered, and consequently she is able to avoid the pitfalls that lie in the pathway of youth. The other is unfortunate—indeed her mother too busy with social duties to listen to her daughter's questions, and when the lonely girl turns to companions of her own age for knowledge, she gets a first-hand from a handsome "rounder," young in years but old in wisdom of the ways of the world. Leading physicians, clergymen, Y.M.C.A. workers and educators everywhere have lavishly praised this picture in every city where it has been shown, and heartily endorse it. "Authorities recommend it as a picture that every parent, every young man and young woman, should see—except if it is the only motion picture they are able to see this year," as one Y.M.C.A. worker puts it. No person under 16 years of age will be admitted.

PLAYHOUSE WILL RESUME WEDNESDAY

The first week of the Playhouse has proved such a distinct success that the management has decided to continue the same programme for another four days this week, with another matinee on Saturday. If this arrangement is found satisfactory it will be adopted as a permanent policy of the theatre, thereby giving each show a run of eight nights and two matinees. Miss Eva Hart has again sung her way into the hearts of the Victoria public. Particularly effective has been her rendition of "Keep Off the Grass." Mr. Ernie Petch as a comedian is a great acquisition to the company, his comic songs and funny sayings keeping his audience in fits of laughter from the start to the finish of the programme. Already 2,700 people have attended

ILLNESS TERMINATED IN DEATH TO-DAY OF LORD NORTHCLEIFE

(Continued from page 5) Visited an intimate knowledge of Australia's national problems. During his tour of the Pacific he made a close study of the situation in the Far East, and in Hongkong expressed the opinion that the Anglo-Japanese Alliance was a bar to its solution.

Visited Victoria. Lord Northcliffe visited British Columbia during his world tour, being in Victoria August 8, 1921. He returned to London from his tour in May, 1922. In June he was reported to have made a tour of Germany incognito.

Shortly after the completion of his world tour, differences grew in the Newspaper Proprietors' Association over wage scales. Lord Northcliffe criticized certain methods of the newer members of the Association. He later resigned.

In May, 1922, discussion broke out between Northcliffe and other members of the Associated Newspapers, Ltd., owners of the Northcliffe press. In June, 1922, libel suits were brought against Lord Northcliffe by Sir Andrew Caird, vice-chairman, and Walter G. Fish, a director of Associated Newspapers.

Early in July his differences with Lloyd George were said to have been ended and the libel actions brought by Fish and Caird were said to have been dropped. His health, however, continued to grow worse, his ailment being diagnosed as due to "unknown poisoning."

Viscount Northcliffe stands out among the contemporaries of his generation as one of the colossal forces, driving, coercing, castigating, and commanding them, himself as often censured as he has been lauded, the figure is a mosaic of contradictions.

Harold Moore, in The Manitoba Free Press, says: Viscount Northcliffe stands out among the contemporaries of his generation as one of the colossal forces, driving, coercing, castigating, and commanding them, himself as often censured as he has been lauded, the figure is a mosaic of contradictions.

Once omit to postulate with that in any analysis formed of the man and his career, and the viewpoint must bespeak a misapprehension of the directing motive. Complex in the highest degree as must be his character for many, he may yet appear clear as defined logic to any average news editor. His power is that of printer's ink smeared on the rolls of the mighty presses for the 200 publications the master mind brought into being.

Once education became popular and no longer was electric, and once political power was invested in the hands of those who could read, even if they did not think wisely or much, the agent which first produced the mental fodder for the masses obtained to itself a power of which it is not likely to be dispossessed, so long as skill, brains and versatility are available to retain it.

A Complex Personality. And others again by their millions fell out of their day's and week's contentment of mind until they digested these offering pabulum. So, misinterpreting the compulsion of the man's mind, which is the dedication to the one objective of serving the world with the news he can gather for it, tinged with all its variable and uncertain currents, a people devised to vilify him when performing the deeds which have turned out to be noble services rendered to the Empire; and the masses, again and again, slavish to their rejuvenated acclamation, have lauded enterprises which were little more than glorified journalistic stunts. He is a complex personality, a tremendous force, an epitome of the spirit of his day. Likened to "Mammon" to "Caliban," to all the gods of unrighteousness; condemned by those who sought only the insecure continuance of the ordered way of things of the dolce far niente fatal to the nation's life, he yet will remain in the estimation of the newspaper of the old and the new worlds as the undaunted, sometimes swaggering, sometimes damaging, but always militant figure of the times, marching down "The Street of Adventure."

To know Viscount Northcliffe you must first have gained the acquaintance of Alfred Harmsworth, both trying persons to "live with," as have been almost all the dominant minds of the ages.

The Daily Mail Appears. It is now almost a quarter of a century since the business managers of the great London dailies which were arrogantly ignoring the invention which had been given by Bennett and Pulitzer to the press of the United States, the technique of the best of which is not to be excelled anywhere—it was then that the London business managers just remembered before hurrying off to their punches at their clubs to call upon their editors to ask the meaning of this new thing which had appeared in that morning. It remains the greatest monument to the professional genius of Alfred Harmsworth, even excepting at face value the share which such colleagues as Kennedy Jones, M.P., had in the devising. The genius is profound which will give birth to a newspaper, as to natural life, as perfectly formed in its first hour of animation as it is to-day after attaining to its glory.

Alfred Harmsworth was a very young man at the time. Born only fifty-seven years ago, those who misjudge him most shrewdly affirm he has still wide and unsurveyed land to travel, a long road to greater fame to tread. He is the son of an Irishman who, like so many of compatriots, so unlike their reputation, connate logical argument with fluent eloquence, had become a barrister of one of the temples in London. Young Alfred deliberately eschewed what was the custom of his class and the habit of the day, and did not "go up" to any of the universities; but after a curtailed imitation of the "Grand Tour of Europe," such as was taken by Oliver Goldsmith, clove to an instant which must have been as foreign to his ancestral antecedents as would be alien blood to his kinship. Not knowing why, but with the same intuition that seems in the ages of printed sheets to have kept on producing eminent editors and publishers from cut of the most unlikely stock, young

Harmsworth set out on the perilous task of writing for a living. Interested in Photography. Amateur photography was a craze when he was 19 years of age. A. G. Gardner, of The Daily News of London fame, and himself a brilliant master of the journalistic craft, but avowing a profound distaste of Harmsworth, wrote before the war: "I was talking one day in the garden to a friend of mine on the subject of Stevenson when he brought forth of 'Young Folks' for 1881. Turning the yellow pages he casually pointed to an article, one of a series on 'Amateur Photography.' There, said he, 'are the modest beginning of greatness. To-day the writer of the humble article is master of The Times. A member of the House of Lords; a owner of half the papers you see in the hands of the people, the Napoleon of the press; whether you like it or not, the most influential man of this country.' For the name under the article was that of 'Alfred C. Harmsworth.'"

"The most conspicuous thing in his character," states the unknown author of "Mirrors of Downing Street," in alluding to Lord Northcliffe, "is his transience. One is aware in him of anacoluthic quality, as if his mind suddenly stopped jumping in one direction to begin jumping in a quite contrary direction. It cannot be said that his mind works in any direction. It is not a trained mind. It does not

It cannot be said that his mind works in any direction. It is not a trained mind. It does not know how to think and cannot support the burden of trying to think. It springs at ideas and goes off with them in a most uncontrolled fashion. He drops these ideas when he sees an excuse for another leap. Sequence to Lord Northcliffe is a synonym for monkey. He has no esprit de suite, but he has taste of real genius. An admirable title for his biography would be "The Fits and Starts of a Discontinuous Soul." There is something of St. Vitus in his psychology. You might call him the Spring Heeled Jack of Journalism."

No Social Alliances. In his book entitled "Adventures in Interviewing" under a section entitled "Northcliffe, the King-Maker," Isaac F. Marcosson states about Lord Northcliffe that "He has made it a rule for years to only meet public men at their offices or in his office."

Thus they can never call him a social ingrate. Friendship has spoiled more business deals than anything else in his career. Northcliffe has determined that sentiment or the purely personal relation shall never interfere with a project of his. It explains his attacks on Kitchener, Lloyd George and Winston Spencer Churchill. In the popular mind he was supposed to be the intimate friend of these men. He praised them highly in his publications. Not knowing the man, they were perhaps lulled into security by the assumption that they were immune. At the moment Northcliffe believed that public service demanded that they should retire or change their methods he opened his broadsides on them as if they had been the most absolute strangers. It explains the whole Northcliffe war procedure. "In the light of the Northcliffe erred the reasons for the failure of William Randolph Hearst as a national force are clear. Mr. Hearst, who was never a politician, was a very best motives, has been handicapped and impeded at every turn by his personal and political alliances and obligations. They have died, funds and established the agencies that he might have employed in a big way."

PREMIER BRACKEN CANDIDATE IN PAS

Winnipeg, Aug. 11.—Premier John Bracken, who will run for election to the Manitoba Legislature in The Pas, has accepted an invitation from the Northern Association to address a public meeting in the constituency in the near future.

It is now apparent that Premier Bracken's only opponent will be the Labor candidate, who has been in the field for some time. Hon. Edward Brown, former Provincial Treasurer, who represented The Pas in the last two Legislatures, and who prior to the general election was expected to enter the field as a Liberal candidate, is not seeking re-election. Instead, according to news received from the northern city, he is urging the electors to support Premier Bracken as the wisest thing to do in the interests of the northern country. The date of the election has not yet been set.

SASTRI TO ASK GOVERNMENT FOR VOTE FOR HINDUS

To See Oliver, But Will Not Re-open Immigration Question

Plans to Tell United States Real Facts About India

Mr. Hon. Srinivasa Sastri, leader of the forces in India opposed to the non-co-operation of Gandhi and advocating greater freedom for India within the British Empire, will remain in Victoria for about a week, or at least until he can urge upon Premier Oliver and his ministers the desirability of giving Indians living in British Columbia the vote. During his stay here, Victorians will have an opportunity of hearing the noted Indian at the Canadian Club Wednesday at noon, when he will speak on "Indian and transition."

"My mission to Canada is to secure for the resident Indians the full rights of Canadian citizenship and, as I understand that the Indian population is practically confined to the Indian at the Canadian Club Wednesday at noon, when he will speak on "Indian and transition."

While conditions have become settled in India and the causes of unrest are still in existence, and there is no use hiding that fact, Mr. Sastri warned.

Mr. Sastri announced that while on his tour he would make no attempt to re-open the East Indian immigration question. "By an agreement of 1908," he pointed out, "no Indians are allowed to come to Canada for settlement. Now the Indian authorities cannot even seem to be attempting to break the word of that agreement."

BROTHERHOOD HELD SUCCESSFUL FETE

Victoria West Organization Cleared $115 for Community Fund Saturday

What was to have been a garden party but for the uncertain weather developed into a most successful indoor fete on Saturday afternoon when the Victoria West Brotherhood staged a fete and miniature home products fair in Semple's Hall.

Dr. Melbourne Raynor, the first president and one of the founders of the organization, declared the fete open and in an interesting address reviewed with pride the splendid service for the community accomplished by the Brotherhood with a view to holding an annual home products fair in the district.

Particular interest among the many well-decorated stalls were the four tables of home products, a feature which will be developed by the Brotherhood with a view to holding an annual home products fair in the district.

Stalls were in charge of the following: Afternoon tea, Mrs. Lotts, Mrs. Minor, Mrs. Rombough and Mrs. Cooper; home cooking, Mrs. Banfield, Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Dodd; candies and ice cream, Miss Harper, Miss Armstrong and Miss Gawley; home products, Mr. Henry Walker, Mr. S. Smith and Mr. Vesey; generous gifts, Mrs. George Cassford and Mrs. Owen Silk; amusements, Mr. George Lotts; locking broncho, Owen Silk; guessing contests, Mr. Ross; fortune telling, Mrs. Bland and Mrs. May.

An orchestra of twelve pipes under the direction of Mr. Darbyshire, mostly composed of musicians of the district, voluntarily gave their services, and played during the afternoon and again for dancing in the evening, following an excellent musical programme.

Langford Lake Gala Comes to Sad Conclusion

Participating in the water gala staged by the Langford Lake Country Club on Saturday afternoon last, Edwin Gilliam, fourteen-year-old son of Captain Gilliam, master of the E. C. Coast Service steamer Princess

Young Gilliam entered the swimming races and while taking part in a race was seen to turn suddenly and make for the shore. Before he had proceeded far he went under, and though his body was recovered from the shallow water almost immediately, it was found that life was extinct.

Immediately upon noting the mishap the gala was terminated and medical assistance called. Dr. Vye, assisted by Provincial Constable Irvine, Fire Lieut. Taylor and Fireman Barten of the local brigade, worked at artificial respiration with the use of the department's pump-motor, but without avail. The body was removed to the B. C. Undertaking Parlors, Coroner E. C. Hart being notified.

To The Times this morning Coroner E. C. Hart stated that he would dispose of the case without the aid of a jury, and an inquest would not be necessary.

The late Edwin Gilliam is survived by his parents, Captain and Mrs. Gilliam, and three sisters. The funeral will take place at 2 p. m. on Wednesday from the B. C. Undertaking Parlors, when the Rev. Robert Connel will officiate.

The business of the clubmen was the installation service of the newly created Nanaimo Gyro Club.

SEES WORLD FROM C.G.M.N. STEAMER

Interesting Traveler Here from Geelong, Australia

It is an old maxim that if you wish to see the world well you must choose a freight steamer for travel. This is the reason why J. Blackiston, of Geelong, the well-known Victorian port, travels that way. He came to Victoria Saturday on the Canadian Pacific steamer and, during a brief visit to this port, will make his headquarters at the Dominion Hotel.

Mr. Blackiston, who is a shipping broker at the Corio Bay port, makes another claim to distinction and that is that, though he is in his seventy-second year, he is just as interested in life as a man half his years. Perhaps there is his reason for that optimism and a cause for the desire to acquire knowledge. At any rate, he began in humble circumstances, although a large employer of labor now. Like many other prosperous men, he was interested first in the distributing end rather than the literary end of a newspaper. So it came about that at the early age of thirteen he was helping in the mail room of the Geelong Advertiser when the mails had a something to do with bushrangers and railways were few and far between in the state of Victoria.

Of these early days of the stables Mr. Blackiston has something to tell to the Times on Saturday, and how in after years he became a contributor to the press. It is a pleasure to him to show visitors to Geelong today the modern equipment of the Advertiser, one of the oldest papers in Australia.

Mr. Blackiston's life, however, is not altogether retrospective. He has been a pioneer of electrical development, and his house overlooking Corio Bay was one of the first in Australia to use electricity throughout. He has taken an active interest in public affairs of his district, and as delegate from the Geelong Commercial Chamber to the London convention of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire in 1906 had an opportunity of realizing the early ambitions to travel in Europe and see the sights of the ancient capitals. Still he declares himself a real Australian, believing in the country first and foremost.

He is very much interested in timber, and his primary object in coming to Vancouver Island is to see the fine timber here.

Further reports and business. 1 p.m.—Luncheon. Addresses—Hon. Lord Shaw of Dunfermline and Hon. Sir Francis Lemieux, Chief Justice of the Superior Court, Quebec. 2.30 o'clock—Afternoon session. Unfinished business reported by the Chairman—The president.

BRACKEN STARTS ON BURNED AREA

Work of Re-construction at Merville Commencing

Victorians returning from the drive to Campbell River took report that the fire area is still an expanse of barren land. The motoring public has an opportunity of seeing the strange tricks played by the conflagration in one place a haystack remaining untouched while all around it is desolation. Bracken is already springing up in the smouldering land.

The relief camp at Courtenay has now shut down, and nearly all families are back on their properties. They have been furnished with tents and blankets, and requisitions have been made on the Merville store. Three of the farms have been abandoned, and the owners will be given other land or will leave the settlement. Seeding has commenced under the direction of S. H. Hopkins district agricultural officer. It is expected that re-building will commence in the immediate future.
