THE FIRE CLUBS OF SALEM.

BY WILLIAM D. DENNIS.

THE march of improvement and invention in the Nineteenth Century has been very pronounced in many ways, but in few respects, if any, has it been more observable, than in the methods and appliances that are now in use for the locating and extinguishing of fires.

Today, in our large cities, fire-fighting is a regular business to which trained men devote their whole time, and even in smaller municipalities like our own, the same conditions obtain, although of course in a lesser degree.

The Fire Department of the present time, with its liberal appropriations from city and town governments; with its ingenious and elaborate system of electric alarm, giving at a moment's notice the exact location of a fire; the cleverly constructed and powerful steam fire-engines, in some cases self-propelling, which, with great force, can throw several streams of water at once, alike great in volume and in power; the very useful and indispensable chemical engine, which by prompt service and action is so effective in extinguishing many a fire in its incipient stages, and often without a general alarm; the extension-ladders, easily manipulated, by which great heights may be readily scaled; the water tower so effective among high buildings and so easily handled and controlled; all these appliances housed in buildings carefully planned and specially constructed for the purpose, with every improvement that can be had for the comfort of their occupants, and with every facility for the quickest response when duty calls, all these unite to make a strong working combination to combat the fire-fiend, handled as it is by capable, energetic and enthusiastic men, and forming a powerful, a systematic, and a thoroughly effective combination. When we consider, then, the appliances and methods in use at the present day, as I have briefly outlined them, it is interesting by way of contrast to go back to the early years of this community, and learn by what gradual stages our people have progressed from the rude and primitive methods of the olden time, to the finished and effective apparatus which is now in use.

It is not my purpose, however, to give in this paper a detailed history of the Salem Fire Department, interesting as such a history must necessarily be, for the reason that my subject does not lie wholly in that direction, although it has its place, and is closely identified with the beginnings of that department.

I am to say something of the Fire Clubs of Salem, giving some account of the reason for their existence, tell as briefly as I may of the kind of men who formed them, and recount some of the services which at least one of them performed, and that one I am inclined to believe is a fair sample of all. I can not well begin the consideration of the subject without some mention of the earlier efforts of our ancestors, in the way of protecting themselves from the ravages of fire.

The earliest recorded movement that I find in this direction, appears in the town records, under date of the xxv of 1st Mo. [March] 1644. "It is ordered that every inhabitant in the towne shall procure a ladder for his house, before the xxiiijth day of the 4th moneth next, upon the paine or penaltie of ffive shillings for defect thereof."

As one means of regulating a very prolific cause of fires it was ordered, in 1663, that chimneys be regularly swept. Aug. 13, 1679, the records again say that, at a meeting of the selectmen, the following vote was passed: "Itt is ordered that there shall bee provided upon the townes Account, soo many hooks & Instruments as may bee nessesary in Case of fire." These included two or three dozen cedar buckets, until leather buckets could be had.

Again we read: "Att a Generall Towne meeting Legally warned, held at Salem, December 18, 1699, voated, That y<sup>e</sup> Selectmen doe Provide at y<sup>e</sup> charge of y<sup>e</sup> Towne, Twenty Watter buckets, good, and two Iron Hooks and Poles, to flasten hold on a house to pull itt downe when afire, & to be kept in y<sup>e</sup> Towne House Garrett and marked T: S:"

The people of Salem at that day had good reason to take action to protect themselves from conflagrations, for the year previous occurred what was afterwards, for a period of seventy-six years, known as "The Great Fire." Several dwellings were burned on the spot, about the head of St. Peter street, now partly covered by the Essex House, the East India Marine Hall and Bowker Block, involving a loss of some £5,000. It was natural then that the townspeople should pass the vote here quoted.

The town evidently increased its stock of fire apparatus from time to time, for we learn that on the 7th of July, 1729, "some ladders and more hooks and buckets were ordered."

We can easily imagine the methods our fathers used when the alarm of fire was sounded. A fire was a very serious affair in a town like Salem, composed as it was of wooden buildings and compactly built, and particularly was this felt to be so after "the Great Fire."

On the occasion of an alarm, all of the townspeople who were able so to do would hasten to the scene of action, many of them taking buckets from their homes, while those owned by the Town would find ready use. The ancient custom of forming two lines of the people, in which doubtless the women and children had a part, was, we may believe, effectual on such occasions. The lines would reach from the nearest well or other source of water-supply to the fire; one set of workers passing the full buckets from one to the other until the contents were thrown upon the flames, while down the other line the emptied vessels were passed from hand to hand until the well was reached again.

There was at such times no regular organization to assume the direct charge of this work. There were no firewards, as such, though from 1679 the selectmen and a few others had been clothed with like powers, and no engineers or foremen to direct the movements of those so zealously and so busily engaged. We may however believe that on such occasions there must have been that natural leadership, which in times of emergency generally manifests itself, and is always effective in the management and direction of voluntary workers. We may also believe that in a community like Salem, and in the other towns as well, every good citizen was naturally interested in the preservation and safety of his neighbor's property when endangered, and all were ready and willing to perform their part when the occasion demanded.

It was natural then that, following in the line of progress, for Salem was a growing town, thriving in its business, and increasing in its population, while it was plain that good work might be done in times of need by unorganized volunteers, the time was approaching when some systematic movement was to be started.

In organization is strength, and some of the active, thinking men of the town began to realize this, and as a practical result of their deliberations we find that, in March, 1744, just a century after the first recorded action of the Town, twenty-eight or thirty of them formed what was afterwards known as the Old Fire Club, and this was the pioneer of the associations of the kind in the town, and the first organized movement that eventually led to the formation of a fire-department. The founders of the club were undoubtedly some of the leading business and professional men of this community. A list of the members, printed some years after its formation, gives, among others, such names as Benjamin Pickman, John Buffington, William Stearns, Edward Augustus Holyoke, Benjamin Goodhue, Joseph Grafton, Jonathan Peele, Francis Bowden Dennis and Edward Pulling. William Gray joined the club in 1790; Robert Leach was clerk for several years.

I am unable to state just how long this organization

continued its active work, but it probably survived well into the nineteenth century.

We gain a fair idea of the objects of the club by a study of its Articles or By Laws. The Preamble reads as follows :

"We, the subscribers, members of the Old Fire Club, so-called, having associated for the more speedy and effectual assistance of each other in securing our property when in danger by fire, have adopted and do agree to the following articles."

Briefly summarized, the articles provided :

1. That the membership of the Club shall be limited to 25.
2. That each member shall have two leather buckets in one of which shall be a bag two yards in length and  $\frac{3}{4}$  of a yard in breadth, all with the owner's name marked thereon.

3. At an alarm of fire each member shall immediately repair, with his buckets and bag, to the dwelling house, ware-house or shop of that member which he apprehends most in danger, and use his best endeavors, by direction of the Owner if present, to receive and secure all his goods, under penalty of what the Society shall determine.

4. A watch word was required, whereby to know one another; every member to whisper it to the clerk, at each quarterly meeting, and to any other member when challenged, under penalty of 1s.

5. The members were to be acceptable to each other, for one negative vote would prevent any person from becoming a member of the Society.

6. Six ladders shall be procured by the Society, of such dimensions as the Society shall determine, painted and marked with the Society's name, and constantly kept in such places as the Society shall direct.

In this connection it is interesting to quote from the autobiography of Benjamin Franklin, who was instrumental in forming a Fire Club in Philadelphia in 1737, some seven years previous to the organization of the Old Fire Club in Salem. He says: "I wrote a paper on the different accidents and carelessnesses by which houses were set on fire, with cautions against them and means proposed of avoiding them. This was spoken of as a useful piece, and gave rise to a project which soon followed it, of forming a company for the more ready extinguishing of fires, and mutual assistance in removing and securing of goods when in danger. Associates to this scheme were presently found, amounting to thirty. Our articles of agreement obliged every member to keep always in good order, and fit for use, a certain number of leathern buckets, with strong bags and baskets (for packing and transporting of goods), which were to be brought to every fire; and we agreed about once a month to spend a social evening together, in discoursing and communicating such ideas as occurred to us upon the subject of fires, as might be useful in our conduct on such occasions."

He further says: "The utility of this institution soon appeared, and many more desiring to be admitted than we thought convenient for one company, they were advised to form another, which was accordingly done; and thus went on one new company after another, till they became so numerous as to include most of the inhabitants who were men of property."

While the Old Fire Club was organized for the mutual benefit of the members, it is safe to assume that their efforts were not exclusively confined within these limits, but were at the service of their fellow citizens.

There is reason to believe that the formation and practical working of this club were an incentive to other good people of the town to improve still further the prevailing conditions as regarded the extinguishing of fires; for, at a town-meeting on the 20th of March, 1749, Richard Derby and others were granted leave "to buy a fire engine, be a company for it, & were excused from town offices," and if any one of them remove or die, his son to succeed him as a member."

In March, 1750, the town accepted the engine provided by these men. This engine was called the "Union," and was a small affair. It had no suction, but had to be filled from buckets. It remained in possession of one of our local hand-engine companies for many years, and in July, 1866, was presented to the William Penn Fire Association of Philadelphia, at that time on a visit to Salem as guests of the William Penn Hose Company of this city; a photograph of it has been obtained through the courtesy of the present owners. While this engine was not the first to be used in this country, it is probably the oldest in existence in our land today, and we must regret that it was ever allowed to leave Salem. It is recorded that in 1654 Joseph Jenks built a fire-engine in Lynn, for the town of Boston. This engine antedates our own "Union" by nearly a century, but the nature of it is not a matter of record.

On the 4th of March, 1751, the Hon. Benjamin Lynde and others purchased another fire-engine and the town accepted it. Salem had now a Fire Club and two Engine Companies, and in order to have some recognized authority in fire matters, the Town appointed, under an act of the Province passed in 1744, several persons to act as Fire Wardens, whose duty it was to take charge of fires, keep the lines of bucket-passers well filled, see that every man did his duty, and exercise that general discretion which a view of the whole field made possible. In after years these officials were provided with stout poles five feet long, tipped with brass spear-heads, as emblems of their authority. Some of these poles are preserved in our collections.

But two engines did not long suffice, and in November, 1767, Benjamin Pickman, one of the members of the Old Fire Club, and a public-spirited citizen, imported an engine from London, at a cost of £73, 4s. 6d., and a third Engine Company was formed.

Sept. 13, 1770, a second Fire Club was organized and was named the Union. Like its predecessor this club was also composed of prominent citizens of the town, for some of its members were Joseph Sprague, Zachariah Burchmore, William West, John Dutch, Benjamin Daland and Nathan Pierce. David Mason and Robert Foster, who were prominent at the North Bridge in February, 1775, were also members, as was Joseph Hiller, the first collector of the Port of Salem, under the Federal Constitution. The first article of its By-Laws reads as follows:

"That if God in his Providence should permit the breaking out of fire in Salem, we will endeavour to be helpful to one another in extinguishing the same, and taking care of each other's goods, according to the best of our judgments ; and we will repair with our buckets and bag to that member and follow his directions if present."

The other articles are on substantially the same lines as those of the Old Fire Club, as regards the supplying of the members with buckets and bag, but penalties were provided in case they should be without these indispensable appliances. A lack of buckets would subject the delinquent to a fine of 8 pence, while it would cost him 4 pence to be without a canvas bag.

One curious provision of the by-laws was to the effect that each member should serve in turn as Clerk. Any member refusing was to pay a fine of 8 shillings, and the next person in order should "serve or pay the fine."

The Clerk's duty was to "moderate at meetings ; to observe the condition of the buckets and bag of each member, at the time when he warns the meetings ; to secure all fines and account for the same to the company ; to pay the reckoning at each meeting before 9 o'clock ; and attend himself all meetings that may be called, on penalty of 2 shillings."

Next in order came the Social Fire Club, formed in 1774, a year memorable in the annals of Salem, as being that of the great conflagration which destroyed Rev. Dr. Whittaker's church, the Custom House, eight dwellings, and fourteen stores and shops about Town House Square. The church stood about on the site of what is now the Perley block on Essex street. This was a time when the three fire-clubs and the three engine-companies had plenty of business on hand. Of the fourth club formed no record seems to have been found.

Other Fire Clubs were organized from time to time, the full list being as follows :

The "Boston Street," the "Alert," and the "Sons of Temperance," were also on the list of Fire Clubs, but I am unable to give the dates of their organization.

With some five exceptions, I have not been able to obtain any particulars of these Clubs. Some of them evidently had a brief existence, while others lived for a long period. It was the custom of at least one Club to hold its business meetings at the houses of its members. I have seen an old notice to this effect, which reads as follows :

"Salem, Sept. 1, 1791.

The Number Five Fire Club will meet at the house of Samuel Robinson at 7 o'clock next Thursday evening when your company is desired.

B. WEBB, Clerk.

To Capt. M. DERBY, JR."

The Relief Fire Club, organized in 1803, had a notable membership. On one of the printed lists of members I find the names of Joseph S. Cabot, Stephen C. Phillips, Asahel Huntington, David Pingree and Nathaniel Silsbee, Jr., all of whom have served our city with honor and fidelity in the Mayor's chair, in days when the position was not the prize of incompetent seekers for public office, but was a trust placed by the people in the hands of high minded and honorable men. The legal profession was well represented in this Club, for such men as Otis P. Lord, Nathaniel J. Lord, George Wheatland and Joseph G. Waters were enrolled therein.

The Washington Fire Club was also associated in 1803, Oct. 10 of that year being the date of its formation. Among the charter members were John Barr, Philip Chase, Ichabod Tucker, John Pickering, Jr., Nathaniel Bowditch and Abijah Northey, Jr. Benjamin Merrill, the eminent lawyer, joined the club in 1817, — as did Daniel A. White, who for many years was Judge of Probate for the County of Essex.

The articles which governed this Club are interesting. "Whereas," they begin, "many important advantages have resulted from the institution of Fire Clubs, by affording relief and security to the persons and property of each other when in danger by fire, and by promoting harmony and good friendship among the members of such association, We the subscribers agree to form ourselves into a company by the name of the Washington Fire Club, and for the good order of the same do assent to and adopt the following articles."

This club was limited to forty members by Article I, and unanimous consent was required to elect a member. "If a candidate is rejected, he cannot be balloted for at the same meeting, nor at any future meeting, unless as many members are present as were at the time he was rejected."

In addition to the regulation buckets and bag to be owned by the individual members, it was provided that four ladders, two of 25 feet in length, and two of 34 feet, should be procured by the club for its exclusive benefit, painted and marked with the club's name, and constantly kept in such places as it should direct. A penalty of two dollars was provided for lending or removing the ladders.

If any member should lose his buckets or bag at a fire, the same would be replaced at the club's expense, having previously been "cried by the Town Crier."

An acquaintance on the part of the members with the premises of their associates was early determined upon, for, at a meeting held Dec. 17, 1804, it was voted: "That the Clerk, at every meeting, is directed to call upon each member to describe the particular situation of some other member's house, and if any member shall be unable to answer, he shall pay a fine of twenty-five cents."

I have had access to the records of three Fire Clubs, and from these records I have learned something of the work which they have done in a practical way in times of danger, and I have also read something of their doings in a social way, when they were accustomed to gather at their yearly feasts. A complete set of the records of the Active Fire Club has been deposited with the Essex Institute, and they contain much that is of interest.

This club was formed Feb. 20, 1806, and at the meeting for organization Seth Low was Moderator and Joseph Hale was Clerk. Seth Low was the father of Abiel Abbot Low, through whose generous benefactions many of our Salem young people have been assisted in obtaining a college education, and grandfather of Seth Low, now mayor of New York City. Mr. Low continued a member of the club until he left Salem to reside in Brooklyn in 1829. The Preamble of the Club's Articles is interesting as it was prepared by Mr. Low. It reads in this wise :

"Convinced of the necessity of vigorous and well directed exertions in cases of fire, and having witnessed the confusion that usually prevails on such occasions, and the frequent, unnecessary loss and destruction of property through rash and precipitious conduct, we, the subscribers, in order to give energy to our conduct, and more effectually aid in extending protection to persons and property endangered by fire, agree to form ourselves into a company, and assume the name of the Active Fire Club, and for the good order of the same submit to the following articles." These are similar in their nature to those of the other Fire Clubs, which I have herein quoted.

The membership of this club, from its beginning in 1806 until its dissolution in 1877, was composed of the same class of men as were enrolled in the ranks of its predecessors, men well known in our city, and men who have had a prominent part in public affairs.

In the long and honorable line of Moderators I note such names as Col. Joseph G. Sprague, Col. Henry Whipple, Dr. Geo. Choate, Judge Elisha Mack, Col. Francis Peabody, Capt. James Upton, Albert G. Browne, Francis Cox and Richard C. Manning, together with some others who have served our city honestly and faithfully in the capacity of Mayor. Among these I may mention Stephen P. Webb, Henry L. Williams, Henry K. Oliver and Joseph B. F. Osgood. Capt. Joseph Cloutman, a long time our City Clerk, was one of the Moderators, and all of them were of more or less note in the affairs of this community. Joseph Hale, grandfather of Col. Henry A. Hale, was the first Clerk; he was followed by Eben Worcester who served for thirteen years; then Jonathan Perley, senior, one of the original members, held the position for forty years, until his decease in 1863. His son Jonathan succeeded him and continued in office as long as the club existed, until 1877.

The Active Fire Club had a watchword, and I find it noted several times in the records of the annual meetings. Some of these words were: "Strong," "O! Yes," "Active," "Ready," and one queer word, the meaning of which I do not comprehend, "Quisy."

Our fathers adopted some rules which to us seem very strict. For example, in the by-laws of the Town of Salem, adopted in 1805, I find this: "Ordered, that no person shall smoke any pipe or segar in any street, highway, lane or public building in said town by day or night, under penalty of forfeiting for every offence the sum of three dollars."

If such a by-law was in effect today, and was to any degree enforced, I am afraid that the payment of fines incurred by smoking in some of our public buildings, would cut very deeply into the salaries of some of our officials; but, on the other hand, it would relieve the burden of taxation.

Our fathers were law-abiding people, and there seems to have been a concerted movement among the Fire Clubs, looking to the enforcement of the town by-laws, and this one in particular, for we read that, at a meeting of the Washington Fire Club, held June 18, 1806, it was voted "that a committee be chosen of this club to confer with a committee or committees that may be chosen by any other Fire Clubs, respecting the adoption of some measures to carry into effect the by-laws of this town against smoaking segars in the streets," and "Ichabod Tucker, John Prince and Joseph Moriarty be a committee for the purpose above named."

The Union Fire Club previously passed a vote to the effect, "that the members of this club will concur in any measure that they can judge proper, to carry into effect the by-laws of this town against smoking segars in the streets," and the Active Fire Club promptly gave its assent to the proposition by appointing John Jenks, Theodore Morgan and Samuel Goodhue as a committee to confer upon the matter. It is evident from this action that the Fire Clubs were composed of men who were in favor of law and order. The records are silent as to the result of their deliberations, and we can not learn just what line of action was taken.

The early records of the Enterprise Fire Club have recently been deposited with the Essex Institute, and from them I learn that the club was associated, Dec. 3, 1810. John Freeland, Joseph McCoub and John Adams, Jr., were appointed a committee to draft articles, and they performed their duty well. The introduction to the articles is a good sample of the result of their labors:

"Whereas, many important advantages have resulted from the laudable institutions of Fire Clubs, as they are not only calculated to afford relief and assistance to the persons and property of each other when in danger by fire, but also to promote harmony and good friendship among the members hereof; we, the subscribers, accordingly agree to form ourselves into a company by the name of the Enterprise Fire Club, and for the good order of the same do assent to and adopt the following articles."

Joseph McCoub was the first Moderator, and Daniel Millett the first Clerk. There were thirty-three members at the organization, but they soon attained the limit of their membership which was originally set at forty. In later years the number was increased to sixty.

Among the charter members were John Howard, John West, Nathaniel Appleton, Nathaniel Trumbull, Daniel Millet, William Harris and Abraham True; and in after years there were enrolled such men as Putnam I. Farnham, Peter E. Webster, Warwick Palfray, Lott Alden, Lemuel B. Hatch, Asa C. Dix, Daniel P. Fitz, Charles A. Ropes, Thomas H. Johnson and Gen. Geo. H. Peirson. Mr. Fitz was Clerk for many years. David P. Waters was the last elected Moderator, with Tristram T. Savory as Clerk.

The records of this club are very concise, and one volume contains the transcript of over sixty years, all recorded in the briefest possible terms. In many instances half a dozen lines suffice for the record of a meeting, and an almost invariable form of closing the account was "after transacting the usual business of the Club it was voted to adjourn." The annual feasts never failed to give great satisfaction, for often it is recorded that "thanks as usual were voted to Mr. Leavitt for the good supper."

This Club, and its younger neighbor, the Naumkeag Fire Club, were, when the nineteenth century closed, the sole survivors of all the organizations of this kind in Salem, and it has met regularly until within two years. Its annual meetings especially have long been noted as seasons of sociability and good cheer. The records of the Naumkeag Fire Club are more complete and give more details of its active and social work than do the records of the other clubs which I have examined, and I am able to transcribe many interesting particulars.

In July, 1832, a number of the young business and professional men of the town met at the office of David Roberts for the purpose of organizing a new Fire Club. There were present David Roberts, then a young lawyer; Henry Hale, for many years after to be favorably known in the hardware trade; Caleb Foote, 29 years of age, even then part owner of the Salem Gazette, of which, in another year he was to be the sole proprietor. There was John Bertram, just retiring from twenty years' service in an active, seafaring life, and even then entering on his long and prosperous mercantile career. There was Benjamin F. Browne, the druggist, William Ives, the publisher of the Salem Observer, together with Jeremiah S. Perkins, then a merchant tailor, David Pulsifer, a well-known painter, Joseph Shatswell and Isaac H. Frothingham, Aaron Perkins and Stephen Osborne, George Southward, the artist, and others, all representative men, all highly esteemed and respected by their fellow citizens. Twenty-six years before, Joseph Hale, the father of Henry Hale, was one of the leaders in the formation of the Active Fire Club. It was therefore quite appropriate for Henry Hale, the son, to be one of the leaders at the beginning of a new Club of this kind.

On motion of Henry Hale it was voted to call this association the Naumkeag Fire Club. Messrs. Jeremiah S. Perkins, David Roberts, William Brown, Jr., Joseph Pulsifer and Benjamin S. Newhall were appointed a committee to draft rules and regulations.

It was voted that each member be provided with a set of fire buckets, a bag and a bed-key, and those who can remember that complicated and perplexing affair, the old-fashioned corded bed, will readily perceive the wisdom of securing the last named article as one of the requisites of the club. Without it no four-post bedstead could be taken in pieces.

William Osborn, Aaron Perkins and John Bertram were appointed a committee to ascertain the cost of the articles before named.

On the 18th of July the several committees reported and the organization of the Club was perfected with a roll of forty-two members.

The Preamble to the Rules and Regulations was plain in language but expressive: "We, the subscribers, in order to render effective aid in protecting each other's property when endangered by fire, hereby agree to associate ourselves together and be known by the name of the Naumkeag Fire Club, which shall be governed by the following rules and regulations;" and these are substantially the same as those of the other Fire Clubs.

Dr. Benjamin F. Browne was chosen the first President, and Henry Hale was elected Clerk, but declined the position, and Joseph Chisholm was chosen in his place, and served faithfully until his decease in 1885, a period of over fifty-three years. Joseph Chisholm was a line and twine manufacturer and for many years his place of business was on Mill Hill, as it was once called, now Washington street, and nearly opposite Harbor street. His ropewalk was the last of the establishments of that kind in our city, and he continued in the business as long as he lived. He was a very genial, honorable, high minded man, a good citizen, "whose fidelity in his walk in life may stand as an example to those who fill wider spheres, and discharge more conspicuous duties."

As indicating the business conditions of Salem in 1832, when the Naumkeag Fire Club was organized, a note of the Secretary's, which I find in the records, is of interest. "At this time," he says, "our good old town enjoyed a commercial prosperity, second to none perhaps in New England. We then had in active business, the Peabodys (Joseph and Augustus), father and son, who owned about forty square-rigged vessels; Pickering Dodge, who occupied the store on Derby Street (now Central, and at present occupied by the Ropes Brothers), and owned several ships; Putnam I. Farnham and Frye, the Fabens brothers, Ben. Creamer, David and Thomas Pingree, Robert Upton, Stephen and Michael Shepard, Gideon Tucker, Robert Brookhouse, John Bertram and Joseph Shatswell, the two last named being members of our club. At this time there were six distilleries in active operation in Salem, turning molasses into rum, and this article, with gunpowder, were the principal commodities which our merchants shipped to Africa, receiving in return Palm Oil, Hides, Ivory and Gold Dust."

Like all the other Fire Clubs the Naumkeag was fortunate in the class of men who constituted its membership. I mention here a few of those who have served as President as fair examples of the other members. Four of them have been mayors of Salem. On this list I find the names of David Roberts, Dr. Edward A. Holyoke, James Chamberlain, Abraham Kimball, James Kimball, Stephen Osborn, Charles W. Upham, William Ives, Caleb Foote, Daniel H. Mansfield, Rufus B. Gifford and Samuel Calley. Among the former Presidents who are still living, I note the names of Henry W. Peabody, Samuel G. Jones, John H. Bell, John M. Raymond, Joseph N. Peterson, Edward Collins, Josiah B. Osborn and Frank A. Newell. The last elected President was Herbert Osborn and the writer of this paper has served as Secretary since the decease of Mr. Chisholm.

At the fiftieth anniversary of the Club in 1882, one of the members, of a poetical turn of mind, read some rhymes in which he pleasantly introduced the names of many prominent members, and from this I quote :

“ Yet we may well be proud
 Of the names upon that list!
 As their memories round us crowd,
 Oh! how their forms are missed!
 The druggist of antiquarian taste,
 Regular as a clock, but never in haste,
 As a ‘Dartmoor Prisoner’ known in town,
 Was our first President,—Doctor Browne.
 Holyoke, Roberts and others did preside,
 Who in the passing years have died.
 But who the living Presidents? you inquire.
 I answer Perkins, Benjamin, Aaron and Jeremiah,
 And Pulsifer, Chamberlain, Loring, Jones and Calley—
 We wish they all were present at this rally!
 If we, to heal the sick, had power,
 We’d send for Aaron Perkins for an hour,—
 His hands to grasp, his honest face to see,—
 The handsomest of all the handsome three!
 May we not look for Jeremiah?
 Whose anecdotes can never tire,—
 Of whom it truly can be said
 He’s gentle to the living, careful of the dead!
 But of all glad words of my tongue or pen,
 Of these three Perkinses, here is Ben!
 Amongst all the names upon that roll
 Of living and dead, there’s not a soul
 Whose deeds compare, before or since,
 With good John Bertram, our Merchant Prince!
 His magnificent gifts to the sick and poor,
 In old Salem will make his fame endure!
 You see our list is honored well
 In names too many for me to tell;
 But this last name of generous friend,
 A noted list will nobly end!”

In the twenty years that have passed since these lines were written, all the men alluded to therein have joined the “great and silent majority” with the exception of Mr. Samuel G. Jones, who is still living and a resident of Salem.

So much for the membership of the Naumkeag Fire Club, a club which has furnished two congressmen, four mayors, several senators and a score or more of representatives to the General Court, to say nothing of that large number who have served our city in the board of aldermen, on the school committee and in the common council. It is well now to say something of the active work of the organization in times when prompt action was demanded.

At a special meeting, Sept. 10, 1835, Mr. David Pulsifer stated in warm terms his appreciation of the club's services and usefulness at his house when recently on fire. He remarked that the person who first gave the alarm to his family was a member of the club.

The fire alluded to occurred the week before and burned the house of Joshua Loring on Marlboro street, now Federal, opposite the First Baptist church. Mr. Pulsifer's house was on Lynde street in the rear of the burned premises on Marlboro street. The house of Mr. David Perkins on Lynde street was also in danger. Mr. Perkins was a member of the Active Fire Club, which was true to its name on this occasion. It is stated that, at this fire, the Active Club removed the effects of Mr. Perkins with great care and returned them to the house without damage. A bowl containing milk was one of the articles removed, and was returned without losing any of its contents.

Feb. 17, 1837, is noted for two reasons. First, it was a very cold day, the thermometer indicating 3° below zero, and a cutting storm of snow and sleet was raging. Second, a serious fire occurred on Bridge street, during which the large ropewalks of William Stickney and Joshua Safford were entirely consumed. The ropewalk of Stephen Whitmore, Jr., was in great danger, and the Naumkeag Fire Club took charge of the building and contents, in connection with the Enterprise Fire Club, of which the senior Mr. Whitmore's partner was a member. The stock and manufactured articles together with some of the tools were removed to a place of safety. In about an hour the building was declared out of danger, and the tools and unfinished manufactures were returned to the place whence they were taken, while the finished products were stored in a barn opposite.

As showing the zeal and faithfulness of the club, it is worthy of note that, at the roll-call after the fire, forty members responded to their names: while five others had been present at the fire but were obliged to leave before the names were called, and of the remainder only six were absent without leave.

March 25, 1844, Mayor Stephen P. Webb said, in the course of his inaugural address, "We have much cause for thankfulness in our continued exemption from the frightful ravages of fire, to which our neighbors have been exposed the past year. No building within the limits of the city has been destroyed by fire, and but one alarm which attracted general attention has been given. One building only has been destroyed by fire in this city since Oct. 18, 1839." But this happy period of immunity was soon to come to an end, and on Dec. 18, 1844, occurred the great fire in Front street. It started in the steam saw-mill of James N. Buffum, and destroyed seven buildings on Front street, four on Lafayette street, and nine on Fish street, together with a large quantity of merchandise, the total loss being estimated at $100,000. One of the buildings burned was the three-story dwelling house of Mr. Joseph Shatswell on Front street. Mr. Shatswell was a member of the Naumkeag Fire Club, and at one of the meetings he thus relates his experience. He says: "By the great Front street fire my house was burned. It was insured in Boston. I went to the Insurance Office and stated my loss. The President of the office asked me, 'had you your furniture insured?' 'No, sir,' was my reply. 'How long have you kept house?' 'Sixteen years.' 'You might as well not have had it insured, for we should have charged you extra insurance, wear and tear and breakage in moving.' 'I belong,' I said, 'to the Naumkeag Fire Club of sixty members. On the alarm of fire they repaired to my house, put a guard to my front door,—removed my furniture and all my valuable papers to a place of safety.' 'I wish,' said the President, 'that we had more such organizations in Boston. I would give them a supper myself every year.'" Mr. Shatswell further remarked, that the President instructed the secretary of the Company to make out a check for $2500, the full amount of the insurance upon the house, and to pay the same over to Mr. Shatswell before he left the office.

At this same fire the property of members Chamberlain, Pulsifer and Pond was in danger, and the Club kept a vigilant watch thereon ready to act if their services should be required. At this fire old "Concert Hall" was consumed and the Phoenix Building has replaced it. This was a hall of a good deal of historical interest. It was built in 1793, by a syndicate of leading merchants, in order to provide the Town with an up-to-date Market-House (we had no Town Hall then) and also to furnish the down-in-town section with a convenient assembly-room. The first floor was arranged with stalls, and for a time an excellent market was maintained there, but popular feeling was against it, many buyers preferring to trade in the old way from the cart's tail, at their own doors. Later the lower story was leased to Nathaniel Safford for the hardware business. The second floor had been elaborately finished for balls, concerts, lectures, jugglery, and classes in dancing, singing and fencing, and all sorts of social entertainments. Hamilton Hall was built in 1805, but it was built by Federalists, and so was the Federal Street Assembly House, built in 1782, and the down-town element was Republican, and the two parties did not mix much in social matters. Ex-Mayor and Ex-Congressman Saltonstall is said to have rushed down in dressing-gown and slippers from his study in Chestnut St., in response to the Front street alarm and, when nothing could be done to save the hall, to have stood by and wept at the thought of happy evenings he had passed there. Passing by several fires of more or less importance, we come to the second fire at the Franklin building, Jan. 4, 1859. The first fire at this building occurred Jan. 29, 1845, and resulted in serious loss. On the occasion of the second fire the members of the Naumkeag Fire Club rallied promptly, although it was a cold winter's morning and a driving snowstorm was raging.

The records say: "Our esteemed member, David Roberts, Esq., was an occupant of rooms on the second floor. By the timely aid of members attending and under the direction of Capt. Charles Upton, our President, and Mr. Mark Kimball, Mr. Roberts's books, papers and furniture were for the most part soon deposited in a place of comparative safety. Mr. Roberts sought a new location and before noon, all his effects were safely, though in a disordered condition, placed in his newly acquired rooms on Washington Street." The dwellings and places of business of James Emerton and James Kimball and the place of business of Mr. Isaac P. Noyes were near the Franklin building and in danger, and the vigilant members of the club kept a faithful watch on these premises until the danger was past. At the next meeting Mr. Roberts expressed very earnestly his deep sense of the utility of the Naumkeag Fire Club, and his obligations to the members for the assistance afforded him.

On the 8th of June, 1859, Salem was visited by a most destructive conflagration which has since been known as the Mansion House Fire. Starting in the Mansion House stables in the West Yard, the flames spread with great rapidity and caused great destruction of property, and the loss of one life. The Mansion House, which stood on the site of the main building now occupied by Almy, Bigelow and Washburn, was destroyed, and the fire extended to Church street on the north, and to St. Peter street on the east, barely avoiding the Essex House, and involving the loss of thirteen buildings including stores, dwelling houses, stables, workshops, etc. The West Yard, or Mansion House Yard, was a busy hive then, with something of a history. It opened out both on Church street and on Essex street. The Mansion House was an old gambrel-roofed homestead, built by Colonel Turner on the site of the "King's Arms" Tavern, and later bought by Captain Nathaniel West, who loaned it for the entertainment of President Jackson in 1833. The yard in the rear was surrounded with a line of mechanics' shops, grouped there in order to be able to do every branch of carriage-work for the stage-companies and others. There were wheelwrights and blacksmiths and upholsterers and painters and harness-makers,—first-rate workmen all,—and here began the great carriage-building enterprise of the Brothers Abbott, who removed to Concord, New Hampshire, and have since supplied the travelling world with Concord wagons and stage-coaches. It was a hard night for the firemen and they worked like heroes. Engines were present from all the surrounding towns and did valuable service. The firemen were not dismissed until late the next forenoon, having worked from seven to twelve consecutive hours. There was work too for all of the Fire Clubs, and we may believe that they were busily employed. Mr. James A. Farless, a member of the Naumkeag Fire Club, conducted the hardware business in a store located in what is now the Perkins building next to the West estate. This store had a wooden annex used as a ware-room, and extending into the West Yard. The members of the Club took charge of Mr. Farless's store. Then most of them worked packing up his goods and removing them to the armory of the Salem Light Infantry in the Phoenix building, of which company Mr. Farless was captain. Several of the members were busily employed in throwing water from buckets on the wooden part, and by so doing kept the fire back. But for this it might have burned the entire building, and gone south or east across Essex street or to the Essex House. No water could be spared by the fire department for it was busily employed in other parts of the fire. For two hours the boarding was prevented from blazing, through the effective work of those members of the Club who threw on the water so industriously. It is pleasant to note a remark of Mr. Farless, when complimenting the members of the Club upon their work, in which he says, "The members were so careful in handling my goods, that it was wonderful how free from damage those goods were, and how small a proportion of the stock was ultimately missing."

"The third time never fails,"—so goes the adage—and applied to the Franklin building it proved a true saying, for in the early morning of Oct. 21, 1860, that structure was again a prey to the flames, and this time it was totally destroyed. In the record of this fire, Secretary Chisholm says:

"In the early stages the property of Mr. James Emerton, and of Mr. Noyes of the firm of Brooks and Noyes, members of the Club, was greatly imperilled. Many of the goods of the firm were removed and subsequently restored when the danger had passed. Mr. Emerton's store was occupied by some of the members until the fire was under control." The Secretary further remarks: "In the case of this fire, as in previous instances, extraordinary efforts in the duties belonging to the practiced fireman were made by some of our members. On this occasion the efforts were well timed, judicious and effective. One instance of the cool bravery and energy of a young member, one who finds his Alma Mater in Old Harvard, may be particularized. He was on the roof of the store of Brooks and Noyes, spreading sails and throwing buckets of water on them, and performing this with the same composure that one would water a flower garden."

This "young member" was William P. Upham, a most valued member of the Essex Institute, and his associate at the time was Secretary Chisholm, who modestly omits any reference to his own part in this work until some years later when the records again make an allusion to the incident, and say: "At the last great Franklin building fire, the club had charge of Member Noyes' store; two of our members, William P. Upham and myself, held the sail down on the roof for hours. It was plain that he was a much bolder fireman than I." It was a cold drizzling rain storm at the time.

The Secretary observes: "This shows that our voluntary association for the purpose of protecting and securing movables leads the associated to efforts on a still broader scale, even to the abatement of the cause of danger, to deeds of self sacrifice, attended with peril, equally with those performed by the recognized and practised firemen."

This fire occurred at the time when the Steam Fire Engine was new to our department, the Steamer "William Chase" having been received in Salem the previous May. One of the local papers thus alludes to its performance on this occasion. "The Steam Fire Engine worked for about twenty minutes and then gave out; and, after an hour's delay was again set at work, and again gave out; thus showing that 'steam squirts' cannot always be depended upon."

There was a serious accident in connection with this fire. At about nine o'clock in the morning the attention of the Chief Engineer, Mr. William Chase, was called to some flames near the centre of the building, and while he was in the structure the walls fell in, burying him in the ruins, together with police officer Joseph Peterson and Mr. George W. Estes. Fortunately, they were quickly rescued, and, with the exception of Mr. Chase whose right ankle was broken, their injuries were not of a serious nature.

It was a curious coincidence that Mr. Chase had a leg broken at the burning of the same building sixteen years before; and one of the same men who assisted in extricating him then performed the same service this time, and removed him to the same house.

I will briefly recount the doings of the Club at one other of Salem's great fires, that of the Lynde Block which occurred Monday May 14, 1866. This fire started in a stable which stood on the site of Academy Hall. "The flames grazed the East India Marine Hall, struck the Lander House, soon attacked the Lynde Block, and before three o'clock A. M. that building and two dwelling houses on Liberty street were destroyed." The house of Capt. George Harrington, a member of the Club, on Liberty street, was in great danger, and the members rallied promptly to his assistance. A large portion of his goods and furniture was removed. The crisis having passed, a meeting of the Club was held on the premises at 9.30 Tuesday morning; Thomas Nichols presided in the absence of President Daniel H. Mansfield. Captain Mansfield had been present during the night, having left the bedside of a sick brother to attend the fire. The brother died in the night, and this caused the President's absence from the meeting.

Committees were appointed to recognize the goods of Captain Harrington and report on the same. Reports were made and an adjournment made to half past two o'clock the same day. The members met according to adjournment, and collected and restored to the member's dwelling house most of the articles which had been removed.

It will thus be seen, from these brief accounts of the services of the Club at some of the most important fires in our city, that it faithfully carried out the leading objects for which it was founded. These are but a few instances of its good work in this line, but they are sufficient to show its character.

There was another phase of its work, of which not so much has been said, and that was, the giving of practical, financial aid to deserving recipients on several occasions.

One instance is recorded of a worthy member of the Club who suffered serious loss by fire and was generously remembered by his associates; at another time the sum of $100 was donated to the sufferers by fire at Fall River.

After the club had been in existence for some years, the following vote was passed: "Voted: that the President of this Club be authorized and required at each annual or quarterly meeting to call for five volunteers, whose duty it shall be to learn by actual sight the localities of the Business and Residences of each member of the Club within the City's territory." This committee would accompany the secretary on his rounds when he notified the members of the several meetings.

In commenting on the system of these quarterly visits the secretary says: "The utility of these quarterly circuits by a committee of the Club is undeniable. They educate the members, a few at a time, in a knowledge of localities, and are manifest pulsations which show us to be a living body." He further says, "Each house and place of business has its articles of value and interest, and by a knowledge of such places we are able to give our directors, our acknowledged leaders, an intelligent support."

The Fire Clubs had other duties to perform than to attend fires and to save property. It was one of their cardinal principles to "promote harmony and good friendship among their members," and one great means to this end was the annual feast, and to most of them this was the leading event of the year. The Naumkeag Fire Club continued this custom for some years, then varied it by an occasional summer excursion, then dispensed with their suppers for a time, but finally renewed this pleasant feature, which afterwards proved to be very popular and attractive.

From and after the revival of the annual supper in 1867, the records are full of the sayings and doings of the members at these pleasant gatherings, and are faithfully recorded by the secretary. They were times of great enjoyment to that worthy official who often inserted observations of his own while transcribing the sayings of others. "The family board," said he, "is a daily feast. Instead of assembling at one table, each one might eat his crust by himself. But we come together socially three times each day, as was the custom of our fathers, and at the family table we correct our natural coarseness, and enlarge our social faculties. As a Fire Club we assemble in a greater family circle, for the purpose of observing each other, to see if we are the men that we would entrust with father, mother, wife, daughter, valuables, deeds, conveyances, in the hour of that most terrible of all calamities when fire has encircled our dwellings."

The after dinner proceedings at these annual meetings were interesting and are faithfully recorded. On one occasion President David Roberts gives an interesting account of the Salem Fire Clubs and their doings, and recalls several of the great fires that have occurred in Salem. At another time I find recorded the substance of a "colloquy" between two veteran editors, Messrs. William Ives and Caleb Foote, which was "suggestive, instructive, and amusing." Its theme was the "doings of a long time ago; the times when men differed in opinions on political questions to such a degree as to destroy social intercourse between them, and dignified citizens pummelled each other in the streets to emphasize their differences. The days of the Embargo and the War of 1812 were touched upon; the news of Peace in 1815, 'when all men got boozy' yet not all, for witness saw many a thoughtful brow that day and night." Those days were trying because of the poverty among the people. Even sea-captains and men of fair estate scoured the peat-bogs for fuel.

We find also words of Charles W. Upham, always eloquent and interesting. James Kimball was a frequent speaker and liked to tell his fellow-members of matters historical and of local interest, as did William P. Upham. Daniel Potter, for many years the veteran deputy sheriff, always witty and wise, the best presiding officer at a citizen's caucus that Salem ever knew, contributed his share to the general enjoyment.

On one occasion Messrs. Potter and Kimball gave some interesting remembrances, as the secretary called them, "of fire-extinguishing apparatus, together forming a history, beginning with a sort of pop-squirt hand-engine and coming down to the grand consummation of effusion from the hydrant, and incidentally teaching us, that it was a deduction as certain as any in philosophy, that improvements must run the gauntlet and get the bastinado of opposition."

Mr. Potter wisely concluded, "That it was better to be ready without danger, than to have danger without readiness."

Dr. George B. Loring was one who took great pleasure in the annual feasts of the Naumkeag Fire Club. A fluent and ready speaker, always prepared to say something, he talked to the club on many subjects. He never failed to attend the meetings when he was in the city, and in his absence in Washington, or in Portugal, when he was the United States Minister to that country, he would invariably send a bright and interesting letter which was highly appreciated by his fellow members.

And then matters of public interest were discussed at these meetings. The state of the country, the doings of Congress, the important theme of the national finances, were fully commented upon.

But the club was naturally more inclined to discuss matters of a local interest, particularly those connected with the Fire Department. A favorite topic at one time was the great need of an electric fire alarm. This was thoroughly discussed long before the city authorities took definite action upon the matter.

At another time the reorganization of the fire department was brought up and ably advocated by one of our former chief engineers. "We should," he said, "keep our department up to date."

The subject of a chemical fire-engine was a theme for discussion at one meeting, and the purchase of one was favored by some of the members.

There was one very pleasant custom connected with the annual supper. The secretary would ascertain the names of members who were unable to attend by reason of sickness, and to each of these members a supper would be sent, by way of giving them to understand that though absent they were still remembered by their brethren of the Fire Club.

One very pleasant event in the history of the Naumkeag Fire Club was the reception given to Dr. George B. Loring in May, 1889, on the occasion of his leaving Salem to assume the duties of United States Minister to Portugal. Some eighty-five members and friends of the club assembled to do honor to their distinguished member, and the affair was very enjoyable. A notable feature was the presence of three of the original members of the club, Messrs. Caleb Foote, Henry Hale and James Chamberlain. Interesting remarks were made by Messrs. Foote and Hale, by Dr. Loring, Gen. William Cogswell, Editor N. A. Horton, Prof. D. B. Hagar and others. The event was a "red letter day" in the club's history.

The advent of the suction hose for hand engines, rendered useless for practical work the leathern buckets of our Fire Clubs, and relegated them to the attic, or to ornamental positions in some of our front halls.

The improvement in fire-apparatus—the electric fire alarm when the signal "all out" follows, in many cases, so closely upon the alarm itself that it often confuses us in the count — the doing away with the volunteer system in our fire-department—have rendered unnecessary the active work of the Fire Clubs. New social organizations have taken their place at the festive board, and they are now little more than memories of the past. As we contemplate these organizations of by-gone days and the men who formed them, and were prominent in their work, we like to dwell for an hour upon the old associations and, as our Fire Club rhymester says,

“ Think, then, of the days now past,
When flame and fire
To danger called,
And they stood fast,
No man appalled.
But seeing duty higher
Than any danger,
Did not inquire
If friend or stranger
Stood in need;
But helped to save
By daring deed
From ruthless flame,
The wooden frame,
To some one dear.”

THE OLD NORTH FERRY AND DIXY'S HORSE-BOAT.

An entry dated "26th of xth mo : 1636," in the "Ord<sup>rs</sup> by the Towne," reads : "It is agreed, That John Stones shall keepe a fferry (to beginn this Day) betwixt his house on the neck vpon the North point, and Cape Ann Syde, & shall giue dilligent attendance therevpon, dureing the space of three years, vnless he shall giue iust occasion to the Contrary, and in Considera<sup>co</sup>n therof he is to haue Twoe pence from a stranger, and one peny from an inhabitant ; moreouer the sd. Jn<sup>o</sup>. Stones doth  $\phi$ mis to  $\phi$ vide a Convenient boat for the sd. purpose betwixt this & the first month next coming after the date hearof."

At the end of three years, December, 1639, "The fferrie at the North point w<sup>ch</sup> formerly was John Stones is now graunted to William Dixy for three yeares & hee is to keepe an horse boat. Hee is to haue for strangers passage 2<sup>d</sup> a peece, for Townsemen or Towne dwellers 1<sup>d</sup> a peece, ffor Meres, Horses, & great rother beasts, six pence a peece, ffor goates, calves & swine 2<sup>d</sup> a peece."

This horse-boat has been accepted, without much examination, as being a boat fitted for transporting horses. It has been assumed that the ferryboats previously in use were unequal to this function and hence the name. But horses were not more numerous, nor were they more bulky and difficult to handle than neat cattle,—the "great rother beasts" of the town order,—and occasion for transporting the latter must have been frequent. Vehicles at first were few and no doubt went around by land through Salem Village. That there were horses to be transported appears from the freight-tariff established in 1639. But if it were a fact that horses could not be transported in the boats in use before that date, no more could the neat cattle, described as "great rother beasts." Both kinds of animals were well able to ford or swim the ferry, and both have been so transferred from time immemorial between the main land and the islands, and calling the new-fangled ferryboat a horse-boat would seem to be a not very natural or descriptive designation.

There is reason to think that Dixy, who kept the Tavern just beyond the ferry-landing on the North Side, had a wharf and stable at the landing. He was a conspicuous citizen, a man of rare enterprise and of ideas quite in advance of his times, for he had a farm at Jeffrey's Creek from which he provided the table of his hostelry with kitchen-gardening, dairy-products, meats and poultry. Horses left standing at livery in the Beverly stable by travellers from the East, on visiting Salem, would save their ferry-toll, and other possible expense as well, because stable-provender, like table-supplies, came largely from beyond Bass River, and involved additional cost in passing that arm of the sea when it was consumed in Salem.

Almost as soon as the Planters from further down the Cape had removed to Naumkeag with their cattle and other belongings, and had begun to settle and build where Salem now stands, they also began taking up lands in what is now Beverly, to supply themselves with thatch, hay and other crops, and upon the arrival of Endecott in September, 1628, began a settlement on the Beverly side, which was located not far from the junction of the Gloucester Branch of the Boston and Maine Railroad, and about the head-waters of Bass River. Means of communication, at least for persons, between Salem and the North Shore was one of the first requirements. Little time elapsed before the establishment of a ferry of some sort under town authority.

The provision made under the Orders of the Town above cited seems to have served until April 30, 1653, when "Its ordered that Richard Stackhouse for the reliefe of his flamilie shall haue the benifit of the keeping of the fferrie towards Ipswich he pviding a sufficient boate and men to attend it and to enter on it the last of June."

Stackhouse had it for a generation. In 1686 John Massey, who lived at the Salem landing just west of the present bridge-terminus, took the ferry from Stackhouse. In 1690 Massey still conducted the ferry on the South Side, and Roger Haskens on the North Side, where he resided. During the next century the ferry was farmed out for terms varying from one to twenty years, at different rentals, the income, like that of the Miseries and other islands, devoted by Salem to the support of her grammar-school, and in 1695-8 the approaches to it were made more commodious at the cost of the Town,—again in 1712 and in 1741 and 1754. For long terms the tolls were continued, from time to time, in the same families. Under State legislation the Town appointed ferrymen, but the State did not withhold a paternal oversight. At one time the landings must be provided with floats; again, in 1646, a majority of those already in the boat could say whether the last comer should or should not be admitted; in 1648, to prevent jumping of toll, fares could be collected in advance, and the ferrymen might refuse wompampeag when "not strunged or unmarchantable;" in 1657 no passenger might refuse a penny or 2<sup>d</sup> "in good peag" to make change. In 1718, this was one of four great ferries which must provide, "a pair of planked trucks" for lading "Coaches, Calaches, Horses and Cattle." In 1742 the rates between Salem and Beverly were 3d. for a person, 9d. for a horse, 3 shillings and 3d. for a chair or chaise. Currieles and charits were mentioned.

In 1748, the Selectmen of Salem raised the fares to 8d. a person; 10d. a horse; 3d. a chaise or two-wheeled carriage; and 6d. a four-wheeled chaise or chair. That year complaints were made to the Legislature that the ferry was not well conducted; that the ferrymen neglected their duties when called on to lighten vessels arriving in the River, thus occasioning, for their own profit, vexatious delay to travellers; and that their carelessness had resulted in carriages and goods falling into the water. In 1749, Robert Hale of Beverly leased the ferry for seven years at an annual rental of three pounds sterling, and agreed to put the ways leading to it in good repair and leave them so. In 1756 the fares were 1d. a person; "2 English half-pence for a horse; 4 English half-pence for a man and horse; 5 pence for a chair; 7 pence for a two-wheeled chaise; 9 pence for a four-wheeled chaise." So, at least as early as 1718, provision had been made for transporting vehicles, and, since 1639, for great beasts. This last named year, Wood in his New England's Prospect finds "Cannowes" or pine-tree dug-outs in use to get farm-products across the ferry. But in 1662 a grandson of Roger Conant was drowned, in crossing, and that year and repeatedly thereafter the General Court forbade to ferrymen the use of canoes as dangerous. The days of the old North Ferry were numbered when, in the autumn of 1782, the Marquis de Chastellux passed it with a numerous staff, on their way from Newbury to Boston, crossing in "flat-bottomed boats containing each six horses." That such loads as these were slowly moved by sweeps seems highly improbable, and would have required an embarrassing number of oarsmen.

The phrase "Horse-Boat" might naturally mean a boat moved by horse-power, as a steamboat is moved by steam, and a sailboat by sails. A horse-cart is not a cart designed for transporting horses, nor is a horse-litter designed for the comfort of an injured horse. Horse-power is applied to the moving of flat-boats in many ways: A capstan is planted on the wharf or river-bank at one or both landings, with a horse attached to the capstan-bar; in this case a chain or hawser, winding on the capstan or on some larger drum and attached to the boat, hauls it at will in one direction or the other. Again, horse-power may be applied from one or more treadmills or moving-floors revolving like an endless apron, within the boat, producing rotary power which either turns paddle-wheels,—for paddle-wheels are nothing new,—or winds on a windlass the cable made fast to anchors on either shore. There are other simple applications of horse-power, common enough still in the rougher parts of the country, some of which, it is not unlikely, may have been employed at Bass River in the years before 1788, when Essex Bridge at last supplanted the Beverly Ferry.

In all the legislation for regulating ferries from the beginning of the Colony, and there has been much of it, covering many topics,—most of the Acts providing for the carriage of merchandise, horses and vehicles, and great beasts, as well as men,—the term "horse-boat" seems to have been used but once. On the great Eastern thoroughfare laid out as a State Highway in 1639, besides the important ferry at Salem, there was another crossing the Merrimac between Newbury and Salisbury. In September, 1644, this last was required to be provided with a "suffitient horse boate."

Was not Dixy's horse-boat a boat moved by horse-power?

The total value of his property was £20,565 : 08 : 09.* Aug. 7, 1770, this had increased to £21,926 : 6 : 1-2. In the account rendered by the executors under that date, we find that the sum of 3,569 : 14 : 6 1-4 had been paid to each of the three sons; George, Weld and Henry, and the sum of 3,600 " placed & kept at Interest, untill the Annuities therein directed to be paid shall cease."†

After the death of John Gardner, and Francis Cabot, Thomas Barnard, D.D., of Salem, was appointed administrator, Sept. 5, 1803.‡

May 29, 1769, the real estate was divided as follows :

George was given the homestead, and one-third of each of the pew holdings, as mentioned in the inventory. Weld received as his share, the twenty-one acre lot in Danvers, a third of all of the pew holdings, and £209 : 17 : 9 1-3 paid him by his brother George. Henry had the two and one quarter acre lot in Danvers, the remaining third of the pews, and £405 : 17 : 9 1-3 paid him by George. Weld and Henry also received one share each in the common lands of Salem.§

SELECTMAN.

The first public office to which he was chosen was that of selectman, in 1766, which honor he declined. He accepted this office however, two years later. At the town meeting held Apr. 10, 1778, he acted as moderator.*

OVERSEER OF THE POOR.

In 1768 he was elected an "Overseer of y<sup>e</sup> Poor," after his father had declined to serve longer. He held this office continuously from that time until 1778, when he declined a re-election. The town voted to excuse him from further service, and passed a resolution, "that the thanks of the town be given him for his past services."*

SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

He was a member of the school committee four years, from 1785 to 1788 inclusive. He served again in 1790.

In 1787 he was elected Town Treasurer, but declined to serve. He frequently served upon committees for the town, particularly upon those in regard to land questions and means for preventing fires.*

JURY SERVICE.

He was a member of the Petit Jury in 1765, 1771 and 1784, and of the Grand Jury in 1766 and 1784.*

REPRESENTATIVE.

In 1776 (May 18), he was elected representative to serve "the town at the General Court to be held at Watertown the 29th. instant," and on June 4th, of the same year, he was again elected to that office.*

MASONIC.

He was admitted to Essex Lodge, F. A. M., Apr. 7, 1779, being number 27 on the list of members.†

SALEM MARINE SOCIETY.

The part which he played in the formation of this honorable society, is shown in the following document preserved in the State Archives: "The Petition of Jonathan Gardner Jun<sup>r</sup> and others whose Names are hereto subscribed, & who are or have been Masters of Vessels, humbly sheweth That they . . . have for a few years past united in a voluntary Society" for the relief of members, etc., petition to be made "a Corporate Society."*

This was dated April 12, 1771. Jonathan Gardner Jun's name heads the list of petitioners.

The Essex Gazette of Apr. 21-28, 1772, mentions the passage at the late session of the General Court, of "An act for Incorporating Jonathan Gardner Jun. and others therein named into a Society by the name of the Marine Society at Salem, in the County of Essex," etc.

FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR.

He was commissioned Sept. 6, 1757, by Thomas Pownall, Esq., "Capt. General, and Gov in Chiefe" . . . in the Province of Massachusetts Bay, "& Vice Admiral of the Same," as Captain of the privateer Two Brothers. The original document, a copy of which is at present in the hands of the author, states that "for as much as Capt Jon<sup>a</sup> Gardner, Jun. hath equip'd furnish'd & Victuald a sch Call'd the Two Brothers of the Burthen of 65 tons, . . . that I do . . . Commifsion . . . the s<sup>d</sup> Jon<sup>a</sup> Gardner to sett forth in War like manner . . . to app<sup>d</sup> Seize & Take the Ships Vessells & Goods belonging to the French King" etc.

REVOLUTIONARY SERVICE.

His interest in the welfare of the Colony, and the maintaining of its rights, was manifested very early, for in May, 1774, he was made a member of the "Committee of Correspondence." Mar. 13, 1775, he was appointed on the "Committee on Minute Men." Oct. 6 of the same year he was named as a member of the "Committee of Safety," but was excused. On the 23d of the same month, he was appointed on a committee to procure materials to stop up passages into the harbor.* This was after the authorities learned of the burning of Falmouth.

He was chosen on the "Committee of Correspondence, Inspection and Safety," at the Annual Town Meetings in 1776, 1777 and 1778. May 14, 1776, he was appointed "to serve at the Court of Capture," to be held at Salem.* He was one of a committee appointed by the Massachusetts authorities to go to Portsmouth in 1776,† and on Jan. 18, 1777, he rendered an account to the same authorities for the expenses of said trip.‡ May 13, 1778, he was appointed on a committee to procure voluntary enlistments, and on Sept. 21, 1778, was a member of the "Committee on Forts."*

He was commissioned Captain of the First Company of the first Essex Regiment, June 6, 1776.§ We find his name in the list of the members of the volunteer company from Salem, for the Rhode Island service in August, 1778.||

REAL ESTATE.

Jonathan Gardner, Jun., bought of his father, Jonathan, Feb. 28, 1760, for 600, "all that mansion House & Land in said Salem wherein the same Jonathan now dwells."¶ This lot was the identical one on which the Essex Institute building now stands. It has been described in detail in an earlier article in this series. Jonathan Gardner lived here until his death in 1791.

He bought an acre of land of John Peters of Salem, which John's wife Elizabeth had inherited from her father, Henry Skerry. This was on the northerly side of Ferry

He and his wife sold several pieces of property which she had inherited.¶ He held many mortgages on town lots, and served as commissioner in the settlement of several estates.**

He married Jan. 2, 1753†† (published Dec. 16, 1752‡‡), Sarah Putnam, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Putnam) Putnam.§§ Elizabeth Putnam, after the death of her husband William, married Capt. John Gardner (No. 90). Sarah Putnam was baptized Dec. 22, 1728. Sarah inherited property from her father's estate. Her death occurred Nov. 10, 1791. She was buried beside her husband, in the "Gardner Annex" to the Charter Street Burying Ground.

Jonathan Gardner died March 2, 1791, aged 63 years. His gravestone is still standing, as above mentioned, and the writer is pleased to state, that he has been of some service to the memory of this noble patriot, by having a marker of the Sons of the American Revolution, placed by his grave.

The Salem Gazette of March 8, 1791, in a notice of his death, refers to him as "a man whose actions were governed by the most virtuous principles, and whom the esteem of his fellow citizens follows to the grave."

Rev. William Bentley, A.M., preached a memorial sermon, March 13, 1791, and referred to the deceased as follows :

“We cannot forget the late worthy Captain Gardner. His character is the most interesting to us, tho we were not honored by his preference with us in our public worship. His residence in our neighborhood, his exemplary virtues, and his usefulness in the town—particularly his station, as a MASTER of one of the most interesting institutions for MARINERS—call upon such an assembly as this, in which the greater number are employed in navigation, to see a refutation of all the charges which can be brought against the man of business and the sea. His integrity was unimpeached; his aversion from profanity, serious; his private virtues, conspicuous; his zeal for his brethren of the sea, unabated, amidst all the neglects which in this town have remarkably attended their common interests. Indeed, he was an example, in his whole character, worthy of the imitation of our mariners, not only in regard to civil and social, but religious, institutions. And to suffer such a man to drop into the grave forgotten, would betray a criminal inattention to the means of virtue . . . His virtues were not ostentatious. He provoked no man's envy, but sought every man's happiness. He pursued no man's praise but ensured every man's affection. The confidence of mankind he valued, so as to endeavor to deserve it; and he has now left the world—and memory and the virtues, are his mourners.”*

At a meeting of the Marine Society, in Salem, held March 31, 1791, the following vote was passed :

“That Captain Jonathan Mason, senior, and General Fisk, be a Committee to wait upon the Rev. Mr. Bentley, with the thanks of the Society for his Sermon on the death of Jonathan Gardner, Esquire and to request a copy for the press.

JONATHAN MASON, Clerk.”*

He left no will. Letters of administration were granted to his son Jonathan, July 14, 1791.†

CHURCH.

He was at one time a deacon of the First Church in Salem, but in his old age mostly attended the Universalist Church.† He purchased of John Small, Sept. 7, 1786, one half of a floor pew in Mr. Holt's meeting house in Danvers,‡ and sold a pew in this (South) meeting house, May 23, 1815.§ He bought a pew on the floor of the "first Universal Meeting house in Salem," Feb. 7, 1810.¶

REAL ESTATE.

John Gardner inherited from his father Jonathan, his mansion house and land, at Gardner's Corner, as it was called (the N. Dec. 21, 1809,** who erected a mansion upon it which he sold to Nathaniel West, April 25, 1811, for $13,333.33.†† The later history of this portion of the lot may be found in an earlier article of this series.

His first purchase of land in this locality was Oct. 29, 1776, when he bought two lots of Simon Kezar of Danvers; one containing over 40 acres, and the other 46 poles with dwelling house and barn.* During the next thirty years he bought many lots adjoining this property, the larger part of the land acquired having been owned previously by Billings Bradish.† Just before the outbreak of the war of 1812, he transferred a part of this farm, containing at that time about 60 or 65 acres, to his sister Elizabeth for $3500.‡ John's son John purchased this of his aunt Elizabeth, Oct. 9, 1817, for $3,306.66.§ Several other lots of land, connected with this farm, were obtained by execution from John Gardner by Ebenezer Beckford, in 1813.|| These lots were bought back by John, Jun., of Nathan Robinson (wife Eunice, daughter of Ebenezer Beckford), Mar. 31, 1819.¶ This farm is at present owned by Mrs. Gardner, widow of Henry Gardner, who was the son of John, Jun., above mentioned. Mr. Nathan Bushby stated, that the first milk route in this vicinity was started by the owner of this farm.

In 1805, John Gardner owned about one and one-sixth acres of land on the eastern side of Winter Street, extending through to Pleasant Street. This lot was bounded on the south by land of his nephew Jonathan Gardner (6th gen). This was divided into lots, and sold in 1805-6 to James Brace, Thomas Lamson, William Goodhue, Isaac Glines, Samuel Robberts, Jonathan C. Kimball and David Robbins.**

John also inherited from his father, Jonathan, his interest in Long Wharf. He held this until one-half of the war of 1812, when the store was taken by his nephew Jonathan (6th gen.) (No. 161) who obtained a proprietor's share from him, upon an execution.*

Other lots owned by him were on the northern side of the common,† at the Neck,‡ and on the present site of the Franklin building.§ He was an executor of the wills of Jonathan Gardner, his father, Jonathan Derby, Richard Derby and Jonathan Andrew.|| In the settlement of these estates he sold large tracts of farm land, and many valuable town lots. He loaned large amounts on mortgages, and owned several rights in the common lands of Salem.

John Gardner married, April 13, 1769, Sarah, daughter of Richard and Sarah (Hodges) Derby. She died September 2, 1774. The Essex Gazette of September 6th of that year refers to her as follows :

“On Friday died, aged 27 years, Mrs. Sarah Gardner, wife of Capt. John Gardner, and youngest Daughter of Capt. Richard Derby, of this Town. In common Life she was of a humane benevolent Disposition and possessed fo grateful a Turn of Mind fo free from Envy, Pride, or Detraction, as at once to secure the Esteem and Love of all of her Acquaintance; and by her prudent and amiable Deportment, approved herself a Pattern worthy of Imitation.”

John Gardner died Jan. 3, 1816, aged 80. The Salem Gazette of the 5th of that month, alluded to him as follows :

“Mr. John Gardner died at Danvers, aged 80, preserving to this protracted age that simplicity and honesty of character and kindness of heart, which had long since secured to him the love and respect of all who knew him. His funeral will be at 3 o'clock this afternoon, from the house of Gen. Derby in Barton Square.”

REAL ESTATE.

He purchased from his brothers and sisters, between 1758 and 1763, their shares of the real estate of his father,† and in 1772 bought of Ebenezer Marsh, three acres adjoining his own land.‡ Nov. 30, 1787, he sold to Daniel Taylor of Danvers eight acres of upland in Danvers for £38, 19 shillings, 5 pence§ and, on May 4th of the same year, he sold to Benjamin Pickman,¶ the two pieces of salt marsh in Salem, which had formerly belonged to his father.

He received a grant of land at Auk-paque, Cumberland County, Nova Scotia, from which the Acadians had been expelled. Mr. Charles L. Andrews, Esq., of Augusta, Me., the author of an excellent pamphlet upon the descendants of Ebenezer,‡ states that: "On the breaking out of the Revolutionary War, he remained loyal to the colonies and was a member of the committee of safety, who went to Boston to urge an energetic campaign to protect the faithful of the Provinces. For this reason shortly after his return he was obliged to flee the country and his wife and family followed, suffering fearful exposure and danger, to Machiasport in 1776. For his patriotic services, he received a grant of one thousand acres of land in 1785, near Bangor, but preferred to remain at Machias, where he built a house below 'the Falls.'"

REVOLUTIONARY SERVICE.

In addition to the above services as a member of a committee of safety, while in Nova Scotia, we know that he rendered valuable aid to the cause of the colonies, after he reached Machias. and Elizabeth (Putnam) Gardner, went to sea in the early part of his life, and was master of a vessel in the West India trade for several years. § In the year 1763, he built a brick mansion on Essex Street, on the site of the present Gardner Block. || He lived here until 1778, when he removed from Salem to Wenham, and lived upon a large farm which he had purchased in that town and Ipswich. §

JURY.

He served in 1762, and was excused twice in 1764, and once in 1767, 1771 and 1772. The excuse given in 1771 was, that he was "at sea," and this was probably the reason in most of the other instances. ‡

CHURCH.

His children were baptized in the Tabernacle Church, and he therefore probably worshipped there until his removal to Wenham. He purchased a pew in the Wenham Meeting House, of Hatfield White of Danvers, Sept. 29, 1785.*

REAL ESTATE.

John Gardner, Jun., received from his father-in-law, Timothy Pickering, Jan. 19, 1760, a house-lot on Main Street (now Essex) as a part of the marriage portion of Elizabeth Pickering his daughter.† This lot was the site now occupied by Gardner Block. He built a house upon it in 1763, as mentioned above. He purchased land bordering upon this lot, of Michael Moore, and John Turner, in 1760 and 1764.‡ He offered this brick house and lot for sale, in 1795, the advertisement stating that it was occupied by Capt. Samuel Robinson.§ John and his wife conveyed this house to Philip Chase and Henry Rust, Oct. 20, 1801.||

In 1777 he purchased of Thomas Brown of Wenham, for £1480, "divers tracts of land in Wenham and Ipswich amounting to 137 1-2 acres."¶ This purchase included the homestead lot of 103 acres. Between this date and 1802, he purchased many other lots in that vicinity, of Nathaniel and Thomas Brown; Daniel, Elizabeth, Jonathan and "Taminy" Kilham; Asa Cole and Oliver Obear.** He sold land in Wenham to Daniel Kilham, in 1779,†† and in Ipswich to George Dodge, Jun. in 1792.‡‡

In 1780 (Aug. 14), with the other proprietors of Long Wharf he sold it to Richard Derby, Jun., and George Crowninshield.§§ He was appointed administrator of his father's estate, and in that capacity sold much property. These sales have all been noted in the article relating to Capt. John Gardner (No. 90).||| A mortgage held by him is on record, which was discharged later.¶¶

He subscribed £21 toward the paving of the main street in 1792.* In 1787 he was executor of the estate of Daniel Kilham of Wenham.†

John Gardner married twice. His first wife was Mary Gale, of Marblehead. They were married in that town, June 25, 1754.‡

His second wife, and the mother of his children, was Elizabeth Pickering, daughter of Col. Timothy and Mary (Wingate) Pickering.§ Colonel Pickering was a member of the cabinets of Presidents Washington and Adams. Her father gave her at the time of her marriage, for her part of his estate, £106, 13 shillings, and for 10 shillings paid to him by John Gardner, sold to him the house lot on the main street, referred to above.|| In 1812, widow Elizabeth Gardner, of Wenham, sold to her brother Timothy Pickering, of Wenham, "7 undivided eighths parts" of the "Apple tree lot or Hardy's lot" in "South fields," also "Pickering's Point Pasture" adjoining the above, and a lot bounded on three sides by Broad, Pickering and Green (now Warren) Streets.¶ May 30, 1812, she bought of the other heirs of John Pickering, six-eighths of the certain lands in the Great Pastures,¶ and transferred the same to Ichabod Nichols, May 8, 1813.** She bought back this property on Dec. 23, 1813, for $1.00.†† She died Oct. 12, 1823, and was buried in the Wenham Burying Ground. Her age as given on the stone was 86.

THE PICKMAN SILVER,

DEPOSITED WITH THE ESSEX INSTITUTE, DECEMBER, 1902.

---

On November 29, 1902, the Institute received the following communication :

[STATE SEAL] *Commonwealth of Massachusetts,
Executive Department,
Boston, Nov. 28, 1902.*

THE PRESIDENT OF THE ESSEX INSTITUTE,
SALEM, MASS.

DEAR SIR:—

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts has recently received from the Administratrix of the estate of H. Derby Pickman, M.D., of Pontiac, Mich., two pieces of silver—the original “Monteith” and the “New England Guard Pitcher”—which were bequeathed to the State of Massachusetts with the request that they shall be kept in a conspicuous place. It has been suggested by one of the heirs that they be deposited in the Essex Institute with other articles that at one time belonged to the Pickman family.

I am requested by the Governor and Council to ascertain if it will be agreeable to your Institute to receive the articles above named.

Very truly yours,

E. F. HAMLIN,

Executive Secretary.

On December 1, 1902, an acknowledgment and reply was made, reciting the above, and adding these words :

"In behalf of the Essex Institute I desire to say that it will be entirely agreeable to us to receive the pieces of silver described by you, and that, if so deposited, we shall endeavor in every way to conform to the expressed wishes of the donor.

"I am, very respectfully yours,
ROBERT S. RANTOUL."

The Executive Council met on Wednesday, December 3rd, and took action as follows :

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS,
COUNCIL CHAMBER,
BOSTON, DEC. 3, 1902.

ORDERED : That the two pieces of silver — the original MONTEITH and the NEW ENGLAND GUARD PITCHER — which have been bequeathed to the State of Massachusetts by the late H. Derby Pickman, M.D., of Pontiac, Michigan, be deposited in the Essex Institute, Salem, Mass., with other articles that at one time belonged to the Pickman family.

ADOPTED IN COUNCIL,
DEC. 3, 1902.
E. F. HAMLIN,
Executive Secretary.

At a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Essex Institute, held December 8, 1902, the two pieces of silver received from the Commonwealth were exhibited, and a communication was submitted by the President recommending the passage of the following vote, which was adopted and duly transmitted :

"Voted : That the Essex Institute assumes with pleasure the custody of two pieces of silver plate bequeathed by the late Dr. Hasket Derby Pickman, of Pontiac, Michigan, to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and believes the Institute Museum of Antiquities to have been well chosen as the depository of these interesting relics, the Pickman family having been, since 1661, conspicuously identified with Salem and Essex County ; the Benjamin Pickman

BENJAMIN TOPPAN PICKMAN (1763-1843), SECOND PRESIDENT OF THE ESSEX HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

From a portrait belonging to the Essex Institute.

who was the fifth signer of the roll of founders of the Essex Historical Society, and its President for the years 1829-35,—a corporation to whose Charter and functions the Essex Institute succeeded,—having been the son of the Benjamin Pickman who was honored with this noble gift from the Province, and the father of the other Benjamin, who received, in 1819, the New England Guard Pitcher.”

These votes contain inaccuracies, but they are not of special importance. Dr. Hersey [not Hasket] Derby Pickman, the testator, never lived at Pontiac, Michigan. The President of the Essex Historical Society was the recipient of the New England Guard Pitcher and the grandson of the first named Benjamin. The piece of silver plate, described as “the original Monteith,” cannot be so described with accuracy, if the authority of the best modern dictionaries is to be accepted. This heirloom has been repeatedly named in the wills and inventories of several generations of the Pickman family as a “monteith” or “montiff.” The New Century Dictionary, in accord with other authorities and with technical works on plate, gives this definition, adding a picture of the “monteith.” “A large punch-bowl of the eighteenth century, usually of silver and with a movable rim, and decorated with flutings and a scalloped edge. It was also used for cooling and carrying wine-glasses. . . .

“New things produce new words, and thus Monteith

“Has by one Vessel sav'd his name from Death.”

In response to its request, the Institute received from the State House, on December 11, copies of letters on file there relating to this gift, which are as follows :

199 Huron Street West,

PONTIAC, MICH., NOV. 14TH, 1902.

HIS EXCELLENCY W. MURRAY CRANE,

GOVERNOR OF MASS.

BOSTON, MASS.

DEAR SIR :—

I send, in your care, two pieces of silver, the original “Monteith” and “The New England Guard Pitcher,” which were bequeathed by the late H. Derby Pickman,

M.D., "to the State of Massachusetts, with the request that they shall be kept in a conspicuous place."

Very truly yours,

PHILOMELE P. HOFFMAN,
Admx.

DIGBY, NOVA SCOTIA,
Nov. 18th, 1902.

TO THE GOVERNOR OF MASSACHUSETTS,
BOSTON.

DEAR SIR,

It is the wish of the sisters of H. D. Pickman, deceased, that you kindly have the two pieces of silver sent you this week by Mrs. C. A. Hoffman of Pontiac, Michigan, placed in the Essex Institute at Salem, Massachusetts, with other articles that at one time belonged to the Pickman family.

If you should wish to communicate with the sisters mentioned above, their addresses are as follows: Mrs. James H. Robertson, 150 East 37th Street, New York; Mrs. Herbert Crosskill, Digby, N. S.; Mrs. George Lynch, Digby, N. S.

Yours respectfully,

I. E. G. LYNCH.

Subsequent correspondence between the Institute and members of the Pickman family, supplemented by further investigation, has developed the following facts:

150 East 37th Street,
MANHATTAN, N. Y.

TO THE HONORABLE R. S. RANTOUL.

DEAR SIR—

It has been brought to my notice that a mistake has been made, as to the residence of my Brother, the late Hersey Derby Pickman, who bequeathed the two pieces of silver to the State of Massachusetts.

Dr. Pickman was never a resident of Pontiac, Michigan; his Wife was a Pontiac woman & resided there at the time of her death. Dr. Pickman only lived in Michigan (at Marquette) a short time after he was graduated from Harvard Medical School. His whole life's work was in Montana, where he was at times a member of the Legislature,—Aide to the Governor of Montana, &, at the time of his death & for some years previous, Surgeon General of Montana. His whole love of country was given to the two States his life had been passed in—Massachusetts first, and Montana next & last—and Salem, the dearest place on Earth to him.

I will not apologize for troubling you, feeling confident you will be glad to know these facts. I am so very pleased that the Silver has found a resting place in your Society!

With all good wishes to the Essex Institute

Very truly yours,

ANSTISS PICKMAN ROBERTSON.

December Thirteenth,

Nineteen hundred and Two.

DIGBY, NOVA SCOTIA,
DECEMBER 15th 1902.

TO THE HON. R. S. RANTOUL.

MY DEAR SIR.

Your esteemed letter of the 11th inst. is before me, and I have much pleasure in replying to it.

I think the best way to tell you what little I know about the Monteith and the New England Guard pitcher will be to give you an abstract from my Grand-father Pickman's will, a copy of which I happen to possess. "I give to my said Son, Clark-Gayton, the piece of plate presented by the Province of Massachusetts Bay to my Grandfather in 1749, to be kept by the said Clark-Gayton during his life, and, at his decease, I order it to be given to such son of my said son, Francis Willoughby, as may reside in the United States, to be named and appointed in writing by the said Clark-Gayton." My Uncle Gayton's will was as follows: "Ninth—The 'Monteith,' so called, which I received from my Father, and which is now in the Boston Bank, I direct my Executor to deliver to such of the sons of my Brother Francis W. Pickman as this said Brother shall direct, provided said son shall be a citizen of the United States, and I give this direction because I cannot otherwise comply with the directions of my Father's will. And if the trustees under my Father's will shall not consider this direction a compliance with said directions, I then desire them to keep possession and care of the same." My eldest brother, Benjamin Pickman, so named and appointed, was to possess the Monteith, and the executors' account shows his receipt for it.

My Brother Benjamin left a will of which I give you an abstract: "I give and bequeath to my brother, Hersey Derby Pickman, the silver Vase presented to our Ancestor, Benjamin Pickman, and known in our family as 'The Monteith' and also 'the silver pitcher presented to my Uncle, Benjamin T. Pickman, by the New England Guards.'" My brother, Hersey Derby Pickman, was at that time living in Dillon, Montana, and was Surgeon General of the Militia and one of the Aides-de-camp of the Governor, with the rank of Brigadier General. He did not live very long after the death of Benjamin, in 1893, and my husband, hearing of his failing health and hoping his native air might benefit him, asked him and his wife to come to us for a visit; they came in August and his death occurred here in the following January; it will be seven years ago in January. While here he made his will, and knowing that a copy of the Monteith had been made for Mr. Walcott, he gave the "original" Monteith and the New England Guards Pitcher to his wife during her life time, and at her death devised them to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. He never lived in Pontiac, Michigan, but his wife's maiden home was there, and there she returned after disposing of her home in Dillon, Montana. She died in Pontiac at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Hoffman. Hence the mistake of publishing that these articles were left by Dr. Pickman "of Pontiac." Will you do me the favor of having that statement corrected in the records of the Institute?

The only time not accounted for, as to the whereabouts of these bits of silver, is the time which elapsed since my sister-in-law's death, more than three years ago—but I can make that clear. Mrs. Hoffman was in Europe when my sister died; her illness was very short, and she left no will; and I do not suppose Mrs. Hoffman knew the ultimate destination of these things, till it was told her by my son, who was Mrs. Pickman's trusted friend and adviser, and who knew her affairs as well as those of my brother. As soon as Mrs. Hoffman became aware of this, she forwarded the bequest to the Governor of Massachusetts. The New England Guards pitcher came to my Father at the death of the widow of my Uncle, Benj. T. Pickman. And it was a gift from him to his eldest son, Benjamin, after his (my Father's) death. . . .

I remain, Yours very Sincerely

MARY PICKMAN LYNCH.

This beautiful memorial has now been traced in the Pickman family since its original presentation by the Province, until now it finds its way back again to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

We are unable to quote the language of the original gift from the Province, because the record of it has not been found. This is no surprise to the antiquarian delver. Papers of great value and importance are missing from our record offices,—town archives, probate and other court files and the like,—and the student who comes upon such a hiatus is by no means driven to resort to the suspicion of criminal carelessness, nor of intentional wrong-doing, in order to explain their absence. They may have passed out of their proper custody in a variety of ways to which nothing blameworthy has contributed. There is always the chance that the missing link may be recovered. To one who recalls the strange story of the Hutchinson Papers,—to anyone acquainted with the loose methods employed before our day in the custody of the Archives of the State, and the sad lack of method and purpose in the treatment of historical material in the newer parts of the country and even in many sections of New England to-day,—the total lack of value attributed in some minds to everything that savors of the past,—the disappearance of these records is by no means surprising. The second possessor of the "Monteith" was a Loyalist, and a refugee, and during the Revolutionary era some patriotic expurgator,—some emulator of Cromwell and his Ironsides,—may have made it a pious duty to expunge from the records all evidence of so compromising an occurrence. When public feeling runs very high, such irregularities are readily condoned. Hutchinson's library fed the fury of a mob. The Pepperrell silver had at this time passed into the hands of a Loyalist successor and grandson, and was only saved to him by a strained construction of the Act of 1778, which conferred on local authorities some discretion in the matter of dealing with the families of the proscribed. The cart-load of plate which had been presented to the captor of Louisburg by the City of London, by Admiral Warren, and by other admirers, was taken to Boston under guard, and shipped to England in the midst of the Revolution.

Presentations of plate in recognition of public service have been so very rare in this community,—so few persons ever lived in New England who have been the recipients of such a compliment as this, or were able to leave such a memorial to their descendants, that it is due to the memory of Benjamin Pickman to put on record what may be learned of this unique occurrence. And it will be convenient to begin with a table of descent traced so far as this inquiry involves it. It is, briefly stated, as follows :

BENJAMIN, third son of Nathaniel, the immigrant from Bristol, England, and his wife, Tabitha, was baptized at Bristol, 1645, and came with his father to Salem, in 1654 or 1661. He married, July 27, 1667, Elizabeth, daughter of Captain Joseph Hardy of Salem, and by her had, January 30, 1671-2,

BENJAMIN, who married, first, . . . Hasket of Salem ; second, October 20, 1704, Abigail, daughter of Timothy Lindall of Salem, and by her had, January 28, 1708,

BENJAMIN, who married, October , 1731, Love Rawlins, daughter of Capt. John Rawlins of Boston, and by her had, November 7, 1740 (besides Clark-Gayton, born July 30, 1746),

BENJAMIN, who married, April 22, 1762, Mary Barton, daughter of Dr. Bezalael Toppan of Salem, and by her had, September 30, 1763,

BENJAMIN TOPPAN, who married, October 20, 1789, Anstiss, daughter of Elias Hasket Derby of Salem, and by her had,

BENJAMIN,

CLARK-GAYTON,

FRANCIS WILLOUGHBY.

The donor of these interesting memorials, Dr. Hersey Derby Pickman, M.D., was a son of Francis Willoughby Pickman. The latter was born at Salem, and returned for a time with his family to his native place from Digby, Nova Scotia, in 1860, at that time occupying a residence in Winter Street. During the Civil War and the agitation incident to the introduction of Wenham Water, he made himself so acceptable as a citizen that he was elected to the Board of Aldermen for the years 1862, 1863 and 1866. Close by, in Pickman Street, lived one of his sons, who was an active member of the Salem School Board in 1862-4, was for some years the Rector of St. Peter's in Salem and was the founder of St. Peter's in Beverly. Another son was Benjamin, who, dying in 1893, bequeathed the silver to his brother Hersey, and this last was the testator through whose thoughtful liberality these relics have found their way back to Massachusetts.

Francis Willoughby Pickman was the son of Benjamin Toppan Pickman and Anstiss, a daughter of Elias Hasket Derby. The father, who was the recipient of the silver pitcher, now deposited with us, was a conspicuous personage in this neighborhood. He was born in Salem in 1763, and died here in 1843. His resignation from the command of the New England Guards in 1819, in order to become an aid to Governor Brooks, was the occasion of this presentation. He was graduated at Harvard in 1784, was of the Governor's Council in 1805, a member of Congress in 1809-11, and President of the Massachusetts Senate from 1833 until his death. At the formation of the Salem Light Infantry in 1805 he presented the corps with its first colors, and he was the third successive Benjamin Pickman who commanded the Essex Regiment. His mother, from whom he derived the name of Toppan, was a daughter of Barzillai or Bezaleal Toppan, a prominent physician and an original proprietor in the North Bridge. Three of the series of seven Benjamins being on the stage at the time of his birth, the father of Benjamin Toppan Pickman had been known as Benjamin Pickman, jr., and the third Benjamin was given a middle name, but he did not always use it. His remains rest in the Broad Street Cemetery, under a simple obelisk of white marble, the graves of General Frederick West Lander and of the Honorable Henry Kemble Oliver one on either hand. Benjamin, jr., the father of the last named, was the author of a valuable and much quoted historical account, printed by the Institute in 1864, and describing the houses which stood on our principal thoroughfares in 1793.

It was the father of Benjamin, jr., upon whom the Province of Massachusetts Bay conferred this very unusual honor. He had been chosen to the Assembly in 1744-5-6, and had become a member of the Committee for pushing forward the Cape Breton Campaign, and it was the service he performed in connection with it which won him the Monteith. In fact he may fairly be styled the father of the undertaking, for he was instant in season and out of season in urging the measure, and rendered it much financial aid, his subscription being second in amount to that of Pepperrell alone, and it only passed the House of Assembly by one vote. Of this his son, writing in 1793, says,—“for services performed in this business, the Province gave him a very handsome montiff.” The same chronicler adds that his father, the recipient of this honor, became a Councillor [this was in 1756-7-8] a Judge of the Superior Court in 1756, and the Chief Colonel of the Essex Regiment in 1762. He died in 1773 at the age of sixty-six. The importance of the Louisburg Expedition and its far reaching results are recognized by every historian of New England. On his return from the captured stronghold, Pepperrell, who was knighted for his success,—the first New England born Baronet of England,—[we have his full-length portrait presented, in 1821, by George Atkinson Ward,]—came by water to Boston in 1746, and made his triumphal progress home to Kittery through the intervening seaports. This was an experience repeated by the Naval Heroes of the War of 1812-15. He was feasted and flattered to the top of his bent, and Salem did her part in a dinner offered him in the little Town House of 1718, on July 4, 1746, at which Colonel Pickman presided, after having acted as chairman of the Committee which conducted at Boston the reception on the part of the Province.

volunteers, having been raised at Salem. Col. Pickman's wealth, like a large share of the wealth of New England at that period, was derived from the fisheries, the great New England industry of the day, the basis of all our trade and commerce,—his fish-flakes lined the whole water-side of the North River back as far as the present Federal Street, from North Bridge to the Town Bridge in Blubber Hollow,—and the fisheries were threatened by French aggression, a fact which made the reduction of Louisburg, "the Dunkirk of America," the first of military necessities. The vigor and boldness of the undertaking were much applauded in the old World, and put American prowess, of which this was the first demonstration on so large a scale, on a substantial footing. Pepperrell, all whose wealth had been derived from the fisheries, was at once made a Baronet.

About the time of the reduction of Louisburg by Pepperrell and the allied fishing interest of New England, Col. Pickman had made conspicuous recognition of the source of his affluence, in building the fine mansion house, yet standing but much disfigured, opposite the head of St. Peter Street. Dating from 1750, a contemporary of the Cabot house, where Lafayette took tea in 1784, later the residence of Judge Endicott; of Colonel Turner's house, which was finally burned down, after years of public service as the "Mansion-House," in the great fire of 1859; and of the "King Hooper" house at Danvers, the residence of Governor Gage in 1774,—these were the first of the Mansard roofs in Salem,—the Pickman house was decorated with a panel on the rising of each stair in the stately hallway, bearing a codfish carved in wood and gilded, and these ornaments have only within a generation disappeared, some of them being built into a modern villa at Newport by a descendant of the founder. An account of Pepperrell's return, given in the Life of Pepperrell by Usher Parsons, well illustrates the spirit of the times:

When he arrived at the Castle in Boston Harbor, early in June, 1746, all the ships of war and town batteries saluted. Upon landing at Long Wharf, his Majesty's Council and the House of Representatives received the party and they were escorted by his Excellency's company of Cadets to the Council Chamber of the old State House, now the Rooms of the Bostonian Society. It being training day for the Boston Regiment, the soldiers were drawn up in two lines in King's (now State) street, by his Excellency's orders, and the officers paid the standing salute to the three, namely, Shirley, Pepperrell, and Warren. As they passed, the street, windows, doors, and balconies were crowded, and the regiment fired three volleys, and gave three hurrahs, in which the whole populace joined.

Sir William soon after took his seat at the Council Board, to which he was re-elected president. The House of Representatives, then in session, being informed that he and Admiral Warren were in the Council Chamber, went thither, when the speaker addressed them in the following manner:—

“The House of Representatives of this Province, have a high sense of the services you have done for his Majesty's subjects in general, and for the people of New England in particular; and it is with the greatest pleasure they embrace this happy opportunity of acknowledging it.

In their name, and by their order, I congratulate you on your safe arrival in the Province, and most heartily bid you welcome.”

On the 4th of July, Sir William, attended by divers officers and gentlemen, set out for his seat in Kittery. He was met at Lynn by a troop of horse and entertained, and was there received by a company of gentlemen and conducted to Salem; on entering which, he was saluted with cannon, and ringing of bells, and conducted to the town hall to partake of a magnificent entertainment. After dinner the royal healths were drunk, Governor Shirley's, Sir William's, Admiral Warren's, Brigadier Waldo's, and all the officers and men at the siege of Cape Breton; at each health the cannon were fired, and a treble discharge made by the troop of horse. On leaving Beverly ferry a cavalcade met him from Ipswich and Newbury, and conducted him to the latter place, where his arrival, at eleven o'clock at night, was announced by a salute from the town cannon and by various fireworks, and the whole party were entertained with an elegant supper by Hon. Major Greenleaf. Next morning at ten, he crossed the Merrimac River, attended by the high sheriff and a cavalcade from the county of York. He was attended from Hampton to Portsmouth by his Majesty's council of New Hampshire, the high sheriff, and numerous officers civil and military, with many other gentlemen, and two companies of horse. On entering Portsmouth a troop of horse led the van, followed by officers of Louisburg with music and colors flying, then Sir William in a barouche, then the council, sheriff, and a long train of gentlemen, and a troop of horse brought up the rear. He was conducted to the governor's house to dine, and was saluted on his departure in the evening, as he had been on his arrival, by artillery, and was conveyed in the castle barge to his own house at Kittery.

His plate descended to his grandson, Sir William, and was allowed under the confiscation act of 1778 (which conferred on town authorities a liberal discretion in the settlement of estates) to be taken away from the dwelling of the deceased at Kittery Point. Colonel Moulton of York, with six soldiers, guarded its conveyance to Boston, whence it was shipped for England.

built by Henry Bartholomew in the earliest years of the town. Mr. Timothy Lindall, who owned the estate on the east of the Pickman homestead, where he had a great warehouse destroyed in the fire of 1698, erected on the site of the warehouse a dwelling which gave place, in 1824, to the East India Marine Hall. He was the maternal grandfather of the recipient of this Louisburg silver, and purchased, in 1680, and owned until his death, the Bartholomew dwelling. Thus, through an aunt Sarah Moreshead, who presented it to him in 1749, it became the property of Benjamin Pickman, and he pulled it down and erected in its place the elegant Mansion House, the noble lines of which may still be traced. Men of the first distinction have been received here. In 1775, Genl. Benedict Arnold, on his way to Quebec, then strong in the confidence of his great Chief which he was not long after to betray, was with his staff entertained here at dinner by Colonel Pickman. And here, too, Governor Pownall, in 1757, the Count Castiglioni, in 1785, and Alexander Hamilton with his suite, in 1800, accepted the same generous hospitality. It was one of the most elegant mansions then erected in Salem, every way worthy of so distinguished a family.

The Essex Gazette, for 1773, thus notices the death of Colonel Pickman :

“SALEM, AUGUST 24.

“Last Friday departed this Life, at his House in this Town, the Hon. BENJAMIN PICKMAN, Esq., in the 67th Year of his Age; A Gentleman who has sustained many of the most important civil and military Offices in the Government, all which he successively resigned in his advancing Age. He was for many Years a Member of his Majesty's Council, a Justice of the Inferior Court, Colonel of the first Regiment of Militia in this County, and one of the most eminent Merchants in the Province.

“His Remains were Yesterday interred with all the Respect, Honour and Solemnity that the Town could afford.—A Detachment from the Regiment (of which he was lately Colonel), having their Arms reversed, and the Militia Officers of the Town, and the present Colonel, dressed in military Mourning, preceded the Corps, marching in funeral Procession, with Drums and Fifes beating and playing. A numerous Train of Mourners, followed by a large Number of the principal Gentlemen and Ladies of the Place, succeeded the Corps; the whole closed by a Number of Coaches and Chariots, and formed one of the greatest funeral Processions ever before seen in the Town, and which drew together several Thousand Spectators,—After the Body was entombed, the Detachment of Militia, which was commanded by Capt. Flagg, fired three Vollies, to very good Acceptance, which concluded the Solemnity of the Interment.”

The Essex Gazette for August 31, 1773, says :

“ The following Character we copied from the Evening Post.

SALEM, 20th AUGUST, 1773.

The Town of Salem observed his Accomplishments and called him to fill most of their important Places of Trust; which he discharged with great Honor to himself, & Advantage to the Public.

In the House of Representatives he appeared the able, firm and uncorrupted Patriot. At the Council Board he maintained the Reputation of a wise, upright Counsellor. As a Justice of the Pleas he was strictly just and impartial; and passed thro' these high Employments of the State with great Abilities and untainted Honor, and left such a lustre upon them as is seldom known.

By the Smiles of Heaven on his Industry and Application to Business, he acquired an ample Fortune, which enabled him to be a most extensive Blessing—He was a Father to the Poor, & the Widow's Heart he often caused to sing for Joy.

As a Merchant, his Reputation was unsullied. He was an affectionate Husband, a tender Father, an indulgent Master, a sincere and steady Friend.”

Here are extracts from the will of Benjamin Pickman, dated Feb. 4, 1773, and proved Sept. 6, 1773.

Following the conventional preamble of the period comes this clause :

“ Principally, and in the first Place, I commend my Soul to God who gave it, hoping for Eternal Life through the Merits of My dear Redeemer, and my Body to the Earth to be interr'd in decent Christian Burial at the discretion of my Executor hereafter mentioned, not doubting at the General Refurrection, I shall receive the same again through the Mighty Power of God. . . .

And I Do hereby Appoint & Constitute my Son Benj<sup>a</sup> Pickman, Ju<sup>r</sup>, Esq<sup>r</sup>, to be sole Executor of this my Last Will & Testament."

The remains of Colonel Pickman rest in the Broad Street Cemetery, once "Burying Hill," under an altar-tomb built of red brick. On its top is a thick sandstone slab bearing inscriptions to the memory of himself and his honored consort. It seems to have borne other memorials, but time has obliterated all trace of them, save at the western end of the slab, where there is a large rectangular depression, now filled with mortar, from which some other decoration must have disappeared. Near by are the graves of Timothy Lindall, of Deacon Timothy Pickering, of Colonel Timothy Pickering, of the Honorable John Pickering and of the Corwin family.

In the Charter Street Ground, once "Burying Point," and older than "Burying Hill," there is another Pickman altar-tomb, placed close against the garden-fence of the "Doctor Grimshawe" house, and surrounded with the graves of Higginsons and Ingersolls and Mathers and Swinnertons and Willoughbys and Gedneys, while the monument placed by the Province over the remains of Governor Bradstreet, in 1697, is not far away. This altar-tomb is built of finely dressed granite blocks, and is capped with a thick sandstone slab, which bears no inscription but which has, inserted at its western end, a white marble tablet bearing, in sunken lettering, the three names "Barton: Toppan: Pickman." Here the remains of Benjamin Pickman, Jr., seem to rest. He was absent from Salem but a few years, during which time his family remained here. On his return to Salem in 1785 he seems to have been promptly and cordially restored to favor. He was the favorite choice for Treasurer of the various bodies with which he was connected. In 1788 he was acting as Treasurer of the Proprietors of the North Bridge. In 1798 he was one of the large subscribers to the fund for building the frigate Essex and was their Treasurer. In 1806 and for other years he was the Treasurer of the Town.

If the authority of the Heraldic Journal is to be accepted, there was somewhere in a churchyard in Salem, in 1865-6, over the grave of Judith, a daughter of Benjamin Pickman, and wife of Dr. Edward Augustus Holyoke, and also marking the graves of others of the Pickman family, a slatestone tablet inserted in a heavy brown sandstone slab, bearing the same "armorial insignia" which appear on the Louisburg silver, except that they have a martlet for a crest while the crest in the Heraldic Journal is a helmet. But it is safe to say that nowhere in Salem, either in a churchyard or in any burial ground, are Pickman arms carved in stone to be traced to-day.

Besides the Pickman Mansion built on the main street, as we have seen, in 1750, and in 1794 sold to Elias Hasket Derby, who at once presented it to his daughter, Mrs. Benjamin T. Pickman, Colonel Pickman also erected, in 1764, at the corner of Lynde Street and School (now Washington) Street a large dwelling, built of brick,—one of the earliest brick houses of that type in Salem,—which is still standing but much changed from its original design, and which, in the illustration given, is well shown as it looked before 1785, at which latter date the brick school-house, with the whipping post at its southern front, as shown in the picture, disappeared to make way for the McIntire Court House of 1785. The Witchcraft Court House of wood, later used as a school-house, had been torn down in 1760. The illustration is from a water-color drawing, now in possession of the Institute, and supposed to have been made by Dr. Joseph Orne, while a student of medicine under Dr. Holyoke from 1765 to 1770, the point of view being the balcony on the northern end of the Old Town House of 1718-1785, which stood in Town House Square.

The cupola with its McIntire eagle, its notch in the blind towards the harbor to admit a spy-glass, its mural painting of the Derby fleet done by Corné, and its other familiar features, has been added by the Derby family since it passed into their hands from the Pickmans. The wooden front with its heavy, fluted Ionic pilasters, known to modern observers, is only a battened face, added at a time when such treatment of brick houses was in fashion. A like front may be seen on the George Cabot house at Beverly.

This house Colonel Pickman left to his son Clark-Gayton whose widow, Sarah, sold it in 1782 to Elias Hasket Derby, and he lived there while building his palatial residence where now is Derby Square on Essex Street. After he left the Pickman house for his new mansion, in 1799, his son John Derby succeeded to it, and from him, in 1835, it passed by deed to Robert Brookhouse. During the Derby occupancy at least two persons of distinction were born under this roof. John Rogers, the sculptor who was so successful in seizing and fixing, in the enduring material of his art, the passing phases of the Civil War, was born in this house, his mother having been a Derby, and the eminent Boston advocate and corporation counsel of the last generation, Elias Hasket Derby, was also born there.

Colonel Pickman had besides these other interests in several sections of the town. The Pickman Farm, a local landmark for a century and a half, will be noticed later. Pickman street, a not very ancient residential by-way, took its name from pasture lands improved by Colonel Pickman near Collins Cove and Ferry Lane. It is a short and in no way an important street of the city, and it is matter of regret that Pasture Lane, once an ungraded way from the Marblehead road through the Great Pastures to Swampscott line, now the great avenue leading from Lafayette street through the Pickman Farm to Swampscott and Lynn, does not bear instead the name of so distinguished a family. The western part of Pickman Street is modern, having been laid out by four abutters as a private way, in 1807, and not accepted by the town, and there was, until 1871, but a single house on it besides those on the two corners which it forms with Winter Street. This was the brick house occupied, during his residence in Salem, by the Rev. William Rawlins Pickman. On the southern corner of Winter Street stood a wooden dwelling now moved back.

On the northern corner of Winter Street stands a brick dwelling, built before 1808 on land sold by John Gardner in 1805, and then facing Pickman street and having its entrance in the middle of that side. This estate, with its fine old-fashioned New England garden, marked off with high box borders into fragrant flower-beds, with here and there a tempting fruit-tree, extended the whole northern side of the western section of Pickman Street. Before the brick house at the corner of Winter Street was built, that site was occupied by a very old Colonial residence of wood, left by will in 1767 by Jonathan Gardner to his son John who built the Joseph White house on Essex Street, and next on the north stood another very old wooden Colonial residence, in which that genial antiquary, the late Dr. Benjamin F. Browne, was born.

These two estates, once the property of Jonathan Gardner, had again come under one ownership in 1832, —the northern wooden house, through several mesne conveyances, then passing from the Gardners to Adjutant General George Humphrey Devereux, and the corner brick house, fronting on the private way, passing in 1812 from Joseph White, who took it by foreclosure, to John Forrester, and in 1831 from John Forrester to General Devereux, who had married his daughter. They changed hands again by one conveyance, in 1841, and in 1849 both estates were sold to Henry Mellus who occupied the brick house not long after, and replaced the old wooden house with a fine mansion of like material, built for the occupancy of his brother-in-law Edward H. Payson. In this new wooden house lived Francis Willoughby Pickman during his last stay in Salem.

But the easterly part of Pickman Street, between Pleasant Street and Collins Cove, was older, and may have been a lane, reached from the bars near the Common at the southern end of Pleasant Street, when the Pickman family owned lands for pasturage and kitchen-gardening in that section of the town. Pleasant Street was carried through to Bridge Street in 1795 and Pickman Street East opened in 1805. The practice of that day, among persons of means, was not only to supply their tables from vegetable-gardens within easy reach of the mansion, but to depasture carriage-horses as well as work-horses and cows on their own grounds.

When Washington rode out of town on the morning of October 30, 1789, to breakfast with his friend George Cabot at Beverly, he left the Main Street at the corner of Pleasant Street and followed that way along the side of the Common as far as it extended, then turning into Brown street. Beyond this point towards the North there was nothing but open pasturage before him. Pleasant Street was not extended from the Common to Bridge Street until 1795 nor accepted by the town until 1797. The Common then contained on that side the Alms House, the location of which is still marked by its old well with an oaken cover. The Common also contained a gun-house, and a school-house. It was a rough, ill-graded training field, without a fence, choked up with brambles and disfigured with duck-ponds. Turning to the left at the bars which opened from the end of Pleasant Street into the pastures, Washington passed through Brown street for a few rods, the tanyard of the grandfather of Governor Andrew on his right, and then turned leaving the town hay-scales on his left, into Winter Street,—a wide and slightly way, but not so fine a street as it became in 1811 when Judge Story built the brick house still standing at its southern entrance and procured the rectifying of its western line. Before 1805 the street was wholly lined with ancient wooden houses.

The Pickman Farm with its fine old farm-house still standing, once a summer resort of generations of the Pickmans, and one of the ancient landmarks of Salem, came into the family, piece by piece, at dates later than 1754. First, Benjamin Pickman bought, in that year, at a cost of £169-12-6, a considerable tract "measuring 11 acres and 10 poles, beginning at y<sup>e</sup> N. W. Corner thereof, being a corner or turn in y<sup>e</sup> old Road leading to Marblehead at or near y<sup>e</sup> place where y<sup>e</sup> Second Gate, so called, on s<sup>d</sup> Road formerly stood" . . . "by y<sup>e</sup> wall by y<sup>e</sup> highway" . . . "including y<sup>e</sup> same wall."

To this he added, in 1762, at a cost of £70, several adjacent parcels of salt-marsh, and the farm area was again extended, six months after his death, by his widow, Love Rawlins Pickman, who purchased another parcel of marsh-land, costing £33-6-8, and upon her death, in 1786, the whole property passed, under the provisions of the will of her husband, to Benjamin Pickman, jr., who in turn, two years later, expended £121-2-6 in the purchase of an adjoining tract of from four to five acres of upland "bounded easterly on the Cove," together with "Beech, thatch & flats" thereto appurtenant. The farm kept growing.

But a very considerable part of this wide tract was acquired by a curious process which could only obtain in an old community like ours. Partly by inheritance, but largely by purchase, the Pickman family, from time to time, became possessed of a large number of shares or rights in the Great Pasture Corporation, and while these rights to depasture horses and cows were probably of little pecuniary value, they represented, in the total, a claim upon the general acreage of the Corporation which, if set off and owned in severalty,—properly fenced and cleared of undergrowth,—might be made available for farming purposes. Accordingly the Courts were appealed to in the case of this and several other large estates similarly interested, and a considerable tract was added to the farm-lands of the Pickman estate as well as of other adjoining proprietors in this way. This pasture-land extends far towards Swampscott on both sides of the Boston and Maine Railroad track and, in the autumn months, appeals to the eye of every traveller by rail, from being overgrown in parts with the famous golden-hued woad-waxen or Genista tinctoria.

house dating from two periods, was probably the largest aggregation of land in continuous acreage in any one estate of this neighborhood. Its four-hundred and twenty-four acres, lying in the midst of a populous region like ours, seems almost a fabulous estimate, though much of it, according to modern views of husbandry, did little more than help make up the startling total. But the figures are correct and are given under oath in an appraisal of the Pickman estate recorded in the Probate Court of the County in 1819. Such was the farm as it was known to the venerable Benjamin P. Ware, who was born there in 1822 and who, with his father whom he succeeded as manager, and a brother, conducted the estate for a quarter of a century. He recalls the famous "Pickman Pippin," the favorite apple of this region, the original tree having lasted, as a decaying trunk, into his boyhood. He recalls the massive, square chimney-stack of the ancient portion of the house, with its great, brick oven on one side, and its three broad fireplaces opening into as many rooms and occupying the remaining faces of the chimney; and the newer house with its generous stud and larger windows and panelled wainscotting and well-carved balusters and mantelpieces, whose spare rooms, silent and stately, were the sacred precinct of his boyish years; and the holiday parties bearing which the family coaches rolled out from town, on the Fourth of July always and often on some other festive day, with their hampers laden with good cheer, their china-ware and silver and table-linen, their children and guests, and all under the watchful care of Abraham True, the good old black butler, whose presence alone was earnest enough of the quality of the feast. To how many of these family merrymakings may the Louisburg Tankard have lent its gladsome inspiration!

The so-called "Montiff" or "Monteith" weighs  $54\frac{3}{4}$  ounces. It measures with its cover 12 inches in height and  $8\frac{1}{2}$  inches without it. Its diameter is  $5\frac{3}{4}$  inches, and across the handles it measures 11 inches. It has a capacity of about one gill in excess of four pints. The name "Swan," presumably that of the silversmith who made it, is stamped in two places on its upper rim, and if the tradition is correct that Swan is the name of a well-known

Boston silversmith of the first half of the eighteenth century, this elaborate and graceful piece of plate would seem to be a creditable product of the local craftsmanship of the period. The name "Monteith,"—or "Montiff," a corruption of Monteith,—which has been uniformly applied to it by the Pickman family, seems to be a strange misnomer. The suggestion that a Monteith might have been presented by the Province and later, in the division of some estate, in order to meet a difficulty in deciding to whom it should descend, the Monteith might have been melted down and converted into a number of tankards, of which the subject of this article is one, finds no countenance either in the traditions of any branch of the Pickman family or in the records of the Probate Court. A Montiff is mentioned, in 1773, in the will of Benjamin Pickman who received it from the Province, and again in the notes on Salem written, twenty years later, by his son Benjamin. But, whatever else this piece of plate may properly be called,—and it is not quite easy to find a single word which designates it with entire accuracy,—it is clear enough that it is not the article called a Monteith which, in 1689 or earlier, took the name of its inventor.

The Monteith is a recognized piece of table furniture, and authorities upon such matters are at no loss to agree upon a definition of it. It is, as we have seen, a punch-bowl, generally made of silver, sometimes having fluted sides with much ornamentation, and for handles often having two rings, attached to the sides through the mouth of a Lion's Head or other like device. Fine ones are to be seen at the Mansion House in London, at Lincoln's Inn, and at Berkeley Castle. One of these silver punch-bowls, presented to the Cloth-Workers' Company by Sir John Bull, in 1718, has Bulls' Heads to support its handles.

The Monteith had an adjustable rim which was removed when punch was to be brewed, and which was deeply incised or notched, allowing a dozen punch-glasses to be ranged about the inside of the bowl for cooling them with water, or for their protection in the handling, when the Monteith was brought to the table, the stem of a glass being dropped into each slot, with the base of the glass outward. When the Monteith was in use, the rim supporting the punch-glasses was taken off and placed upon the table. A ladle and lemon-strainer, both of silver, with other needful appliances, accompanied it. Pictures of it are not unfamiliar, and we insert one. The contrivance came into vogue some years before the eighteenth century began and was the invention of a man of fashion named Monteith, but it is not impossible that his name may have been also associated, in the New England of that day, with other articles of table-ware besides the punch-bowl described.

Words which are derivatives from a proper name have often in this way kept alive the memory of a man. Familiar instances are Boycott, Raglan, Derringer, Daguerreotype, Minnie rifle, Guillotine, Bowie knife, Mansard roof.

On the obverse of this fine piece of plate are engraved, with the addition of a martlet for a crest, the Arms which, since 1723, appear to have been used by various branches of the Pickman family. They are described in the Heraldic Journal for 1865, quoting the Gore Roll of Arms for its authority, as the Arms of Benjamin Pickman, the father of the recipient of this silver, but as having no crest, and as also to be seen on a tablet in the Salem Churchyard. The Arms are said to be: "Gules, two battle-axes in saltire gold, between four martlets, argent." The same publication for 1866 depicts such Arms as are here described, in the account of a tomb in Salem upon which are to be found the names of Judith, the wife of E. A. Holyoke, Esq., who was a daughter of Benjamin Pickman; of Elizabeth, the wife of Samuel Pickman, Esq.; and of William Eppes, Esq., who married a Pickman. In this cut a helmet is added for a crest, but the authority for the addition is not cited, and no location of the tomb is given. The coat of arms depicted in this connection is said to be carved on a slate tablet inserted in freestone, and to be more recent than the date of the original erection of the tomb, from the freestone tablet of which the inscriptions had nearly disappeared. No such arms nor inscriptions are now to be found on any monument in Salem. Both the Clark Gayton Pickmans and the Dudley Leavitt Pickmans use the same arms with a battle-axe for a crest.

The silver pitcher presented to Benjamin Toppan Pickman measures  $10\frac{1}{8}$  inches in height. The name "Ward" is engraved once on the inside rim of the base, and is thought to be the name of the silversmith who engraved the inscription. No maker's name and no evidence of origin appears elsewhere on the pitcher. On its obverse is engraved (in script) "New England Guards to Benj<sup>a</sup>. T. Pickman, Esq<sup>r</sup>." And on its base :

" Elected Ensign, June 18, 1814

" Lieut, May 6, 1817

Resign'd June 26, 1819, being appointed Aid to Gov. Brooks.

Voted June 28th 1819

That the name of Benj<sup>a</sup>. T. Pickman be entered upon the Roll of the New-England Guards as an honorary Member.

" Lorenzo Draper, O. S."

Perhaps enough has been said to make it appear that the fall of Louisburg was so grand an occasion as to warrant some exceptional acknowledgment from the Province of Massachusetts Bay; that the family honored with these testimonials have proved themselves worthy to receive them, by maintaining their prestige in the face of a public sentiment which looks askance at hereditary distinctions and ancestral honors, and in a country where every man is supposed to stand or fall by his own merit; and that, of all possible places for the final deposit of these beautiful memorials, none could have been more fitly chosen than Salem, the ancestral home of the Pickman family, and the Essex Institute, a long-established County society of recognized standing.

SALEM AND BOSTON CUSTOM HOUSE RECORDS OF THE PRE-REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD.

The official records at the Custom House in Salem, and also those at Boston, disappeared during the Revolution. It has been very generally supposed that the Boston records were taken to Halifax in March, 1776, at the time of the evacuation of Boston, and that from Halifax they were probably sent to London, and that the Salem records may have disappeared at about the same time. The correspondence which is here printed, shows that these interesting papers have not been found either at Halifax or London and, in the case of the Salem Custom House, it is fair to assume that the records may have been dispersed at the time of the great fire in October, 1774, which caused the destruction of the Custom House. Several years ago Mr. A. Frank Hitchings, of the Salem Custom House, found in private custody a letter-book containing official copies of correspondence conducted by the Commissioners of Customs at Boston, during the period of 1772-1774. This volume probably was the same letter-book which some years afterwards was found at the "Fernercroft Inn", Danvers, and which is now at the Boston Custom House. Mr. Hitchings, having made copies of such of the letters as related to the Salem Custom House, now furnishes the following correspondence bearing upon the destruction of the Custom House in 1774 :

GENTLEMEN :

We are sorry to inform the Honorable Board of the great calamity which happened in this Town early this morning, a Fire broke out about Two O'clock in a wood House belonging to Col Frye which raged with so much violence that it destroyed ten Dwelling Houses and a Large Meeting House besides several Stores, Shops and Barns. The Custom House was soon pulled down in order to stop the spreading of the Flames which had already reached it and had on that side the desired effect. We have preserved the Chest and we hope most of the Books and Papers altho' from the rapid progress of the fire and the general confusion which reigned it was not possible to save them from being dispersed as to put it out of our power to ascertain at present what is missing. We are collecting them together as fast as possible into the Cashiers late office in the House rented by the Honorable Board where we think it best to remain till we have your Honours Directions to provide another office.

We are, Gentlemen, &c. &c.

Custom House, Salem.

GENTLEMEN :

Your letter of the 6th instant having been laid before us acquainting us that the Custom House was pulled down in order to prevent the spreading of the Fire which took in the neighborhood thereof on the morning of that Day, that you had removed the Kings chest with the Books & Papers belonging to the office that were saved, into the late cashiers office, in the House rented by the Board at Salem, where you should remain till you have our directions to provide another office. We acquaint you in answer thereto that we consent that the Ho. in which we held our Board at Salem, be used as a Custom House till you shall receive our further orders.

In March, 1882, A. Augustus Smith of Salem, wrote to the Department of State, at Washington, suggesting that our Minister to England, James Russell Lowell, be requested to ascertain if the Custom House records of Salem and Marblehead were in British custody at London. The letters of our Minister and of Lord Granville of the British Foreign Office, follow and are here printed for preservation and information.

Legation of the United States.

London, April 4th, 1882.

MY DEAR LORD GRANVILLE,

My Government has been informed that there is a tradition that the records of the Custom Houses of Marblehead and Salem, Massachusetts, up to the year 1776, were in that year carried off to Halifax by British officers and afterwards to England.

As these records would probably contain matter of local interest and historical value, the Secretary of State has requested me to make inquiries in regard to them in the proper quarter, with a view to obtaining their restoration, provided the British Authorities have no objection to relinquishing them. Under the circumstances, I shall be much obliged if you will cause inquiries to be made in order to ascertain whether these records are now in existence.

Faithfully yours,

J. R. LOWELL.

Lord Granville presents his compliments to Mr. Lowell, and in compliance with the request contained in his note of the 4th ultimo has the honor to inform him that he has caused enquiry to be made relative to certain Records of the Custom Houses at Marblehead and Salem, up to the year 1776, which are supposed to have been removed by British Officers to Halifax and subsequently to this country, and for the restoration of which the Government of the United States have signified their wish.

Lord Granville has been informed in reply that diligent search has been made in the Admiralty Papers deposited in the Public Record Office, as well as among the other Records under the care of the Master of the Rolls, but that no trace of any documents of this nature can be found in these Departments.

Foreign Office,
May 4th, 1882.

In January, 1903, the Essex Institute obtained through Hon. William H. Moody, Secretary of the Navy, the following information from our Consul-General at Halifax :

Consulate General of the United States,
Halifax, Nova Scotia, January 20, 1903.

Honorable David J. Hill,
Assistant Secretary of State,
Washington, D. C.

SIR :

In accordance with instructions contained in Department of State despatch No. 69, dated December 31, 1902, I have made careful inquiry concerning the records of the Custom Houses at Salem and Marblehead covering the Colonial period. I regret, however, to say that I have been unable to obtain any trace of these particular records.

The late Dr. Akins, formerly Commissioner of Records (a letter from whom was forwarded to the Department by Consul General Frye in despatch No. 84, dated October 1, 1890), began, in 1857, to arrange and schedule the papers and documents in the Provincial Building here. He spent many years in this work and seems to have had definitely in mind the possibility of finding such records, for the present Provincial Librarian, Mr. F. Blake Crofton, informs me that Dr. Akins told him that he had been unable to find any records of the character mentioned. Mr. Crofton states that he believes it would be "a forlorn hope" to search in Halifax for such records, but says that there is the bare possibility that they might be in either the Parliament Building, the Custom House, or the Court House.

Mr. Harry Piers, the Curator of the Provincial Museum and Librarian of the (Provincial) Scientific Library, informs me that he has practically made search in each of the above mentioned places; while he admits the possibility that they may be in one of these buildings, he is very confident that a further search would be unproductive.

In this connection I beg to call to the attention of the Department the enclosed copies of a correspondence between one G. W. Murray and Colonel Edward Winslow, with reference to the records of the Boston Custom House, about which the Department made inquiry of this Consulate under date of September 15, 1890. These letters became known here only about two years ago. They seem to clearly establish that the records of the Boston Custom House were brought to Halifax, and the evidence is strong that these volumes were returned to Boston with the other records after the termination of the war.

If, however, such records were delivered to a duly authorized committee, as stated by Colonel Winslow, there should be, both in Boston and Halifax, some official record of such transfer and of what volumes were actually delivered.

Mr. Piers has promised to search the records of Nova Scotia for some mention of this transfer. If anything is discovered by him concerning this interesting matter, I shall be most pleased to communicate it to the Department.

In the Boston Sunday Herald of December 17, 1899, there is an account of the finding of what was claimed to be one of the missing volumes of Boston Custom House records, in the old "Ferncroft Inn," at Danvers, Massachusetts.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

JOHN G. FOSTER,
Consul General.

New York, 4th March, 1811.

SIR :

I have been informed that at the time Boston was evacuated the books of Probate were sent to Halifax by order of Gen. Howe ; that you were at that period Register of Deeds, and Foster Hutchinson, Esq., was Judge of Probate ; that the books were put into trunks and sealed up by him and that you embarked in the vessel which conveyed them to Halifax ; I am also informed that the Office of Probate and Register of Deeds, although under different officers, were at that time kept in the same apartment and that the books of Register of Deeds were not all shipped to Halifax, but that two or more volumes were taken away either by design or accident.

It appears that, shortly after the organization of the new Government, the late Judge Cushing made application by order of the Governor and Council for the records that had been taken away. This demand was not complied with until after the peace, when the books of Probate were returned, but not all the missing books of Register of Deeds. On a late application to the office at Halifax on this subject I am told that some years after the Probate books were returned to Boston, a gentleman of the name of Fitch found in a trunk belonging to him and containing old family plate two books marked on the back "Suffolk." This gentleman it seems left the colony shortly after and gave the books in charge of some person to be returned to Boston. We cannot ascertain whether the books so found were books of Probate or Register of Deeds and it is for the sake of obtaining distinct information on this important point that I now take the liberty of addressing you, as I understand you were in office at the time the books were found, and from that circumstance will recollect not only the remarkable fact of their being found by Mr. Fitch but also whether they were Register of Deeds and to whom that gentleman delivered them as there are two volumes of the Register of Deeds still wanting to complete the set in Boston. The object of this inquiry is to trace by whom they were delivered there in the hope of fixing this fact both as to the nature of the books and their delivery, that we may bring forth to public view and thereby restore a property to an ancient highly respectable loyalist family that is now unjustly withheld. Any light you can give as to the removal of these books and particularly the Register of Deeds or volumes found by Mr. Fitch ; also who this Mr. Fitch was, where he now is or where his descendants are; will confer a high and important obligation upon the unfortunate heirs who are now contending for their rights.

The subject will, I hope, be my apology for thus troubling you and I am, Sir,

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
G. W. MURRAY.

COLONEL EDWARD WINSLOW,
St. John, New Brunswick.

[The original of which the foregoing purports to be a copy is understood to be in the possession of Rev. W. O. Raymond, St. John, N. B.]

Kingsland, New Brunswick, 7th April 1811.

Dear Sir :

Your letter of the 4th March from New York has been handed to me by General Coffin, and I regret that it is not in my power to give you full satisfaction upon a subject which cannot fail to excite considerable interest and concern. The following facts, however, adverted to in your letter are within my recollection.

When Boston was evacuated, F. Hutchinson, Esq., was Judge and I was Register of Probate for the County of Suffolk, and I was at the same time acting collector of the Customs for the port of Boston.

On the morning of the evacuation the public buildings were in the possession of a licentious rabble, the doors of the offices were forced and the records and papers were exposed to instant destruction. Having a party at my command and impressed with a due sense of the importance of preserving them, I found means to pack up and place on board a transport not only the records of the Probate Office, but also those of the Registry of Deeds and Custom House. The latter office had been peculiarly exposed having been occupied as a Military Guard Room the preceding night. That at that time Sam Fitch, Esq., who was Judge of the Court of Vice Admiralty, had been several days embarked on board ship with his family, one of whom (a very interesting daughter) was dangerously ill. That on our arrival at Halifax I made application to the Governor of the Province to take the books and papers into the protection of his Government. Accordingly a place was assigned them in the Surrogate's office in Nova Scotia under the care of the Surrogate Gen., Mr. Morris, reserving a right of access to them upon any emergent occasion by Judge Hutchinson who was to remain there.

The packages were at that time apparently in perfect good order, but whether every book (particularly of the Registry of Deeds Office) was included in the packages (formed amidst scenes of such confusion) it is impossible for me to say.

The anecdote respecting Mr. Fitch I have never heard mentioned, although I was upon terms of great intimacy with him and his family, nor do I conceive it probable that he should have encumbered himself with two large folio vols. of public records in which he had neither interest nor connection, and that at a time when he was sinking under pressure of domestic anxieties and afflictions: If such volumes were by any accident found in his possession, I should conjecture that they belonged to the Court of Vice Admiralty which was ex-officio in his charge.

I left Halifax with the King's Army and remained with it till the end of the war. Several applications were made for the restoration of the records which were rejected, but after the publication of the treaty they were delivered by Judge Hutchinson, under proper authority, to a committee appointed by Governor Hancock to receive them, safe and entire as I afterwards learned from the Judge. I believe a Mr. Kent who was at one time State Attorney was one of the Committee.

[The copy of letter in the Halifax Legislative Library, of which the foregoing is a copy, is unsigned; it purports, however, to be a copy of letter from Colonel Edward Winslow to G. W. Murray. A footnote states that the original is in the possession of Rev. W. O. Raymond, St. John, New Brunswick.]

EDITORIAL NOTE.

General Gage reached Boston in May, 1774, with instructions to enforce the odious Port Bill, and for that end to remove the Offices of His Majesty's Customs from Boston to Salem, so that the chief emporium of New England should become "an inland town",—this was Lord North's phrase,—"seventeen miles removed from any sea-port." Gage entered Salem with much pomp, June 2, 1774, and established headquarters at the Hooper House in Danvers, as the Salem Gazette of the day fully records, but it was not then the practice of the journals to devote much space to the minor details which give zest and value to the chronicles of our time. So it is not easy to learn just where the Customs Offices established or domiciled themselves. But the letter here printed for the first time indicates that some of them had secured lodgings near the scene of the great fire of October, 1774, and in the absence of further knowledge, it would be doing no violence to the probabilities to suppose that they occupied, for their place of business as a Custom House, the structure which was previously in use for that purpose by the Province. This was a rented structure, and seems to have been located on the north side of King's Street, later known as Old Paved Street and now as Essex Street, and this was the building torn down to stay the progress of the flames in their westerly direction. Streeter, in his "Salem before the Revolution" (see Hist. Coll. Essex Inst., Vol. xxxii, p. 62) places this building "nearly opposite our Barton Square Church" and adds: "His Majesty's Deputy Collector for the port was Richard Routh, a Tory, who fled to Halifax after the evacuation of Boston by the British Army in 1776. He was subsequently rewarded for his loyalty by being made Chief Justice of Newfoundland."

Salem was a very ancient port of entry, established at least as early as 1658, but never having a Government Building for its Custom House until 1819. Until then the Officers of the Customs accommodated themselves in rented quarters, as our officers of the Postal Service have always done (see Hist. Coll. Essex Inst., Vol. x, p. 61). In 1663, Hilliard Veren was Collector of the Port. In 1683, Marblehead, Beverly, Gloucester, Ipswich, Rowley, Newbury, and Salisbury were annexed, by order of the Court of Assistants, as members of the Port of Salem, and it was decreed that this Port and Boston were to be the lawful ports of entry in this colony, where "all ships and other vessels shall lade or unlade any of the Plantation's enumerated goods, or other goods from foreign ports, and no where else, on penalty of the confiscation of such ship or vessel, with her goods and tackle, as shall lade or unlade elsewhere."

THOMAS GARDNER, PLANTER, AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS.

BY FRANK A. GARDNER, M.D.

In her will dated Oct. 21, 1816, she gave to John Lowell Gardner and George Gardner, children of her son Samuel Pickering Gardner all of her "real estate in the town of Salem consisting of about one hundred and eleven acres of pasture situated in the westerly part of said town of Salem, and on the northerly side of the Salem turnpike, being the same pasture which formerly belonged to my late brother, John Pickering, deceased, to be equally divided between the said children in fee simple, and if either of them shall die before he arrives at the age of twenty-one years, such deceased child's share shall go to the survivor in fee simple," etc. To her grandson Henry Blanchard, she gave four hundred dollars. Eliza Cabot Blanchard, daughter of her late grandson Francis Blanchard, was given a feather bed. The remainder of the estate was given to her son, Samuel Pickering Gardner, who was also appointed executor.*

John Gardner died Oct. 27, 1805, aged 74.† His will, dated Jan. 21, 1794, contained the following bequests: to his wife Elizabeth, he left all of his "real Estates wheresoever they may be for and during the term of her Natural life, also all" of his "furniture, stock & farming utensils, upon the Premises." He directed his executor to put all the moneys which he was to receive from his personal estate out at interest, and to pay his wife the interest during her life, and to pay to said wife also, the interest received from debts due him. He gave to the children of his daughter Elizabeth Blanchard, the reversion " after the expiration of the Estate given to my wife" of all of his real estate in Wenham, Hamilton and Ipswich, together with his brick house in Salem, likewise the farming utensils and live stock. He gave to his son Samuel Gardner, all the rest of his estate, and appointed him executor.*

Henry Blanchard mortgaged his right to his grandfather's property, to his brother Francis, April 21, 1812, for $2000,† and May 10, 1813, sold his right to his brother for $1800.‡

The first office held by him was that of hogreeve, to which he was chosen March 9, 1761. He was one of the surveyors of highways in 1764, 1767 and 1786; and selectman and assessor in 1769 and 1787. In 1772 and 1773 he was chosen constable, and collector of taxes in 1785 and 1793. He served on the school committee in 1787 and 1793.

Various sums of money were paid to him from time to time for the use of his teams in repairing the highways.

May 28, 1770, he was appointed on a committee of twelve to carry a protest against the tax on tea to every householder, "and in Case any Person refuse to Sign as abovesaid he Shall be Looked upon as an Enemy to the Liberties of the People, and Shall have their Name Registered in the Town Book." He was a member of a committee of twelve chosen Feb. 2, 1778, to consider the "Articles of Confederation."*

REAL ESTATE.

Samuel Gardner inherited from his father, one half of the farm,‡ and purchased from the other heirs their interest in the share left to his brother John, after said John's decease.§ He sold forty-eight acres of this to Ezra Upton, July 9, 1768.¶ In 1808 (April 14) he sold to his sons Asa and George the remainder of his real estate, at that time amounting to 150 acres, for $4,200, retaining a mortgage of like amount upon the same. This mortgage was discharged Oct. 23, 1819, by John Gardner, Jun., administrator of the estate of Samuel Gardner deceased.¶¶

He sold to Benjamin Pickman, Dec. 12, 1803, two acres of salt marsh at Castle Hill, Salem. This was evidently the two acre lot owned by his father.** In 1768 he bought land of his uncle Samuel in the same locality,†† and transferred ten acres of salt marsh "near Castle Hill" to his sons when they purchased the farm in 1808.*

In June, 1792, he bought of Daniel Taylor, a lot of land "on the highway which leads from Salem to the North parish in Reading," containing about eight acres. This lot had previously belonged to Thomas Gardner (No. 121).†

Samuel Gardner married, first, Patty Williams, of Lynn, the certificate for which marriage was granted Dec. 20, 1762.‡ She died Feb. 28, 1765.‡ He married second, June 9, 1774, at South Danvers, Sarah Upton, daughter of William and Sarah (Herrick) Upton. She was born in North Reading, Nov. 20, 1755, and died in Danvers, Jan. 24, 1830.§ In her will dated the 13th of that month, she gave to her grandson Samuel Gardner, son of her deceased son John, the sum of $1000, to be given to him when he reached his majority. To her daughter-in-law Ruth Coan, the mother of said Samuel, she left one dollar. She remembered her Walcott grandchildren as follows: to Elizabeth G. and Augustus C. she left $100 apiece, to be given to them at the ages of 18 and 21 respectively; to Sally A., Samuel G. and Henrietta B. she gave $100 to be divided between them, the son to receive his share at the age of 21, and his sisters at 18. All of the remainder of the property she gave to her children Asa Gardner and Sally Walcott, wife of Rev. Calvin Walcott.||

Samuel Gardner died Sept. 1, 1818, and was buried in the Pope burying ground in Pope's lane in West Peabody. He left no will. His son John Gardner, Jun. "Mariner," was appointed administrator, Dec. 1, 1818.¶ In the inventory dated Aug. 17, 1819, the estate (wholly personal) was valued at $8,643.48. $732.10 was due the estate, and $671.51 was owed, leaving $8,704.07 to be distributed. The widow was given $2,901.35, and the remaining two-thirds was divided into four parts and given to John, Jun., Asa and George Gardner, and Sally Walcott, Oct. 5, 1819.**

Gardner society have sustained a great loss. Amiable in his disposition, exemplary in all the relations of life, and of irreproachable morals, he had secured the esteem and respect of all who knew him. In his character were united unaffected modesty, with a sound judgement and great firmness and decision. As a military officer he was highly respectable, and had an opportunity of displaying that spirit and energy which show that he was qualified to command. Few men have been called to endure greater suffering, and no one could exhibit greater fortitude. Through an uncommon and most painful sickness, he was a model of patience and resignation; he was sustained by Christian faith, and at length departed in that peace of mind, which the world can neither give nor take away. The memory of Col. Gardner will long be cherished with affection by his friends who now deeply lament his death."† He had no children.

Weld Gardner received from his father's estate when it was divided, May 29, 1769, a lot in Danvers measuring 21 acres, 94 7-10 poles, one share in the common lands, and one-third of his father's pew holdings in Dr. Whittaker's meetinghouse.* This land was in the South Parish in Danvers (now Peabody) and was sold by Weld Gardner to Thomas Lee, of Salem, March 4, 1799, for $970.† He loaned large amounts on mortgages.‡

Weld Gardner died November 2, 1801, and was buried on the afternoon of the third of that month, from his house on Essex Street.§ In his will dated Sept. 11, 1801, he made the following bequests: To George Gardner Lee, and Colman Lee, sons of his "kinsman Mr. Thomas Lee," he left $5000 apiece, and to Louisa and Deborah Lee, daughters of the same man, two thousand five hundred dollars apiece; to his brother Henry Gardner, $2000; to his sisters Lois Barnard, and Elizabeth Stevens, $1500 each; to the four children of his deceased sister Esther Mackay, $1500 to be equally divided among them; to Lydia Gerry Lee, daughter of George G. Lee, he left the remainder of his estate. Thomas Lee was named as executor.||

1789-1900.

---

COMMUNICATED BY A. FRANK HITCHINGS, WITH ADDITIONAL

IN presenting this work the intention has been to arrange, in alphabetical order, a fairly correct list of all those vessels that have been registered and engaged in the foreign trade at this port, commencing with the first register record that appears in the Salem Custom House, which is dated October 6, 1789, and continuing to the present time.

The district of Salem and Beverly comprises the ports of Salem, Beverly, and Danvers, and, prior to the Act of March, 1799, included also the port of Ipswich.

The list also includes all those vessels belonging to this district that have been documented at other ports for the foreign trade, but have never sailed into Salem harbor. Possibly there were vessels the names of which do not appear in this list, but an effort has been made to include them all. In some instances the name of the same vessel may appear more than once, as a great many vessels during the latter part of the 18th and early part of the 19th centuries, have been traced with much difficulty. During that period there were 45 vessels named Betsey, 33 named Sally, 26 named Polly, and many others which appear many times although not so frequently as those mentioned. If the present system of giving to each vessel an official number to identify her had been in vogue at that time, this difficulty of tracing a vessel which had changed her rig and tonnage, would have been avoided. Under these circumstances, no claim can be made that the list presented is absolutely correct or that the names of all the vessels engaged in such trade have been obtained.

It is, however, believed to be substantially correct and may be consulted for general information and the consideration of matters pertaining to foreign bound vessels belonging to this district.

Messrs. Hitchings and Phillips desire to make due acknowledgment of their indebtedness to Mr. George H. Allen, to Captain Nathan H. Millet, to Collector John Daland, to Mr. William J. Sullivan, and others, for assistance given them in compiling the following notes.

Such information as was not found in the Custom House Registers is enclosed within brackets. The hailing port of each vessel and the residence of the owner are not given if belonging to Salem.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE AUTHENTICITY OF THE FIRST MEETING HOUSE IN SALEM.

TO THE DIRECTORS OF THE ESSEX INSTITUTE :

Shortly before the civil war the attention of the Essex Institute was called to a small dilapidated out-building, put to very homely uses, on the premises of David Nichols, a short distance off Boston Street, in Salem.

The frame of that building was, in 1865, presented to the Essex Institute and, with certain restorations, was set up and covered in by a new roof and new walls, furnished with a door and windows, and given the outward appearance it has ever since presented of a plain but tasteful structure. Its dimensions have been called twenty feet by seventeen feet.

The actual exterior dimensions of the structure, as restored, are twenty feet eight inches by sixteen feet eight inches. The interior dimensions are nineteen feet six inches by fifteen feet six inches.

The frame was accepted as the identical frame of the first meeting-house erected in Salem and the Institute has since substantially vouched for its genuineness.

There has from the first been some dissent from this position, mostly of a quiet nature. Comparatively recently the authenticity of the claim made for the frame has been publicly challenged and publicly defended by antiquarians of acknowledged repute. Growing out of this discussion, the official position or attitude of the Essex Institute to be taken on the disputed question was for the first time called sharply in issue at a meeting of the Directors, March 5, 1900, and thereupon a committee was appointed "to consider the general question as to the authenticity of the so-called First Meeting House now preserved by the Essex Institute in the rear of Plummer Hall, with instructions to report as speedily as possible."

Certain changes from the original membership of the committee have occurred, all of which, together with its organization and proceedings are detailed in the report of its secretary, Mr. Ezra D. Hines, herewith filed.

A preliminary report to the Directors, dated January 7, 1901, represented that the committee desired to secure and consider, in addition to evidence already known, all such other evidence as might be found "as the result of impartial expert examination of all church, town and county records, and other original and historical sources of information available;" and upon the recommendation of the committee authority was given to employ some person of known skill and integrity to make such examination. The committee, acting under this authority, employed Sidney Perley, Esquire, of Salem, to make such professional research. He attended to that duty faithfully and well, and the results of his work, bound in a manuscript volume of two hundred and ten pages, are filed herewith for preservation. In his preface, Mr. Perley says that his purpose has been simply to gather the evidence, not to present any argument nor proffer conclusions, and he has throughout his work conscientiously adhered to this declaration.

The committee as finally constituted, to wit, the subscribers, respectfully submit to the Directors this their final report. Though it has not been made "as speedily as possible," the delay was not due to divided opinions, or inability to come long ago to the conclusion here presented.

The questions stated and considered by the committee of 1859 are these: "Is this the frame of the first Church, erected in 1634?" Is there, in records and reliable tradition, evidence to warrant a belief that it is?"

We are forced to the belief that the frame here preserved is not the frame of the meeting-house which was built in Salem before 1639, and that there is not, in records and reliable tradition, evidence to warrant a belief that it is.

The view that the frame, here preserved, is the identical frame of the first Puritan meeting-house, starts with and is founded upon mere tradition. There can be no question as to the insecurity of such a foundation, unsupported by corroboratory evidence, for the serious assertion of a most interesting and startling historic fact.

It has been claimed that there is corroboratory evidence, first, in identity of dimensions; second, in interior construction. Thus upon tradition and alleged corroboratory evidence, the case for authenticity rests.

What of the tradition? What of the evidence?

I. THE TRADITION.

A simple statement of the known facts concerning it is a good illustration of the insecurity of traditions in general, and a sufficient demonstration of the insecurity of this tradition in particular.

In an open letter by the late Mr. Gilbert L. Streeter, published in 1900, as collateral to the controverted question we are considering, he declared that a short time previous to July, 1859, he had published in a Salem newspaper an account of a ramble along the course of an ancient highway skirting the base of Gallows Hill, and therein referred to an old building (the one in controversy) as having once been a part of an ancient tavern known as Tompkin's Inn, and that in this article he used these words:—"The reader may have seen this old tavern, back of Blubber Hollow, and may have mused upon its antiquity. Some who prefer what is interesting to what is strictly matter of fact, like to consider it as the original first church,—or meeting-house, as the godly and extra anti-papal fathers of the early days styled their houses of worship."

Mr. Streeter adds: "I thus happened to be the first person who called public attention to this ancient and interesting building, as it then was, and one of the few who saw it in its dirty and dilapidated condition."

In the Salem Observer of July 2, 1859, there is a communication of two thirds of a column, headed "First Meeting House in Salem," signed "P." It is as follows:—

"MESSRS. EDITORS:—If I were to assert that Gov. Endicott or the Rev. Francis Higginson, in all the circumstances of reality, arrayed in official costume or sacerdotal habiliments, would on a given day appear again in the flesh among their descendants, you would not be much more surprised perhaps, than when I state, that the identical first meeting house of the puritans in Salem, still exists in our midst. Not the house or any portion of it that was demolished this present generation to give place to the brick church in Washington street, north at built in 1670, which was 60 x 50 feet and 20 feet high; nor the meeting house built in 1638, which was but 25 feet long, though larger than the first, then taken down—but the identical, primitive, seven-by-nine church of the puritans and pilgrims of 1628, and probably used by them for the first ten years of the settlement. Verily, as we believe, the same oaken timbers that echoed the voices of those Reverend Divines,—the Rev. Francis Higginson, Samuel Skelton, Roger Williams, Hugh Peters and John Fiske, through or nearly through all of their public ministries, and for aught we know, it may have been built and used for two years earlier, viz. : 1626, by Conant and his few followers, under the Episcopal ministrations of Rev. John Lyford—for it is well known that Conant was of that communion.

In the rear of Boston street, and vicinity of Witch Hill, owned by, and upon the land of David Nichols, Esq., but a rod or two from his dwelling house, stands an old oaken framed building, of late used as a tool house and for storage of hay and other farm produce. This building was formerly and for many years used as a dwelling house, and long known as "Tomkins' Inn," and being situated as it was directly upon the old road to Boston [hence the name of Boston street near by,] was more anciently occupied as a tavern, for wayfarers' use, and was thus used in 1692, at the time of the witch executions near the same spot. Evidences of the ancient tavern rest upon record as well as tradition, and that at a very early period.

Now as to the meeting house — there has long been a tradition in a collateral family of the present owner, that this building, 'Tomkin's Inn,' was constructed of the materials of the first church, which proving too small was sold, shaken and re-erected upon the present spot for a tavern.

A gentleman now living, at an advanced age, as well as other persons, received this tradition from his grandfather, the venerable Enos Pope, remembered by some, perhaps many of our citizens, as a very aged man in a wonderful state of physical preservation, who lived to the great age of upwards of 90 years, and who died some forty or fifty years since.

This tradition was often repeated by the old gentleman with great distinctness, and with entire confidence on his part, and which he obtained from his ancestors who were long-lived persons, requiring but very few lips and ears to bear it to the present time.

From the limited attention we have been able to give to the subject, but judging from the records and the directness and short passage of the tradition, we are inclined to give it a large share of our confidence and adopt it as authority.

The building in question, the main building, exclusive of the lean-to addition, of a later day, is 21 feet long by 16 wide, certainly very small as we should suppose for a meeting house, but when we read that the larger one built to supply its place was but 25 feet long, and of the width of the old one, the small size of the one under consideration does not disturb the tradition. Neither would our knowledge of the rude beginnings of California or other new settlements of our country do other than strengthen and fortify our position.

This building bears unmistakable marks of its great antiquity in its present form. It is plastered with a preparation of clay and straw without one particle of lime in its composition: — its roof is much more upright than a 'third pitch.' The oak timber has the marks of other mortices, indicating its prior use.

We have given time enough to the subject to regard it worthy of the study and immediate attention of those persons whose zeal would stay the hand of time and arrest the contemplated annihilation of so splendid a monument as this may be made of our puritan ancestry. * * *

'Woodman spare that tree' from its poetical touch finds a response in almost every breast,—how much rather may we now say, Descendants of the puritans, spare this remarkable relict of the distant past, which the care and attention of its several owners—the gentleness of the ever active elements and the too frequent accident of fire, has for generations spared until now.

The immediate demolition of this ancient building and sacred link with the past, is in contemplation. Would it be expecting too much to heed the suggestion that has been made,—that drawings of the building be taken,—the oaken timbers now in a state of partial decay be all preserved, and with the help of pine imitation, be re-erected upon some suitable spot, which we hope may be appropriated for it at Harmony Grove, where it might be furnished with exposed rafters inside and gothic windows surrounded by evergreen trees, and where it should ever remain a cherished and sacred spot, worthy of our historical pride in claiming the foundation of the first church in New England, and worthy of the pilgrimages of all descendants throughout the country who delight to trace their lineage from its primitive puritan root in the 'Mattachusetts'.

We next hear of the tradition at a field meeting of the Essex Institute. In these days the field meeting is well nigh abandoned. Fifty years ago it was the very life of the society. Excursions were taken here and there all over and sometimes outside the county, at frequent intervals, for study and observation. A typical meeting of this sort was held at Saugus, July 7, 1859, and at the expense of brevity it seems worth while to cull its story from the records in order to get the setting of the tradition.

The members had spent the morning rambling in two parties, observing matters of scientific and historic interest, had returned to the hall of a local temperance society, and, after refreshments, came to order at three o'clock, P. M., in the Town Hall for business and discussion. Records were read, also lists of donations to the library, and to the cabinets, letters were announced from six correspondents, and then, the meeting being open, a gentleman who had conducted one of the parties, enumerated the principal plants collected during the excursion, accompanying each with some interesting remarks. Other gentlemen discussed the habits of the tailor bee, the geology of the region, the origin of bog iron ore, the rounded hills of the neighborhood, trees and tree planting and the preservation of old books and manuscripts. Following these discussions and next before adjournment, a member, having previously spoken on the subject of trees, stated that "a tradition is current that the frame of an old building standing on the land of David Nichols, rear of Boston Street, Salem, is that of the first meeting-house in Salem and which was removed there about 1639 when the second meeting-house was built; that it was used many years since as an inn, under the name of Tompkin's Inn, and also that Mr. Nichols had tendered the building to the Institute for their disposal. He moved that a committee be appointed to ascertain the facts in the case and to report at an early meeting as to the authenticity of the tradition and what action it would be advisable for the Institute to take in relation thereto. This motion was adopted and a committee appointed. The report of this same field meeting published in Volume 2, page 394, of the Proceedings of the Essex Institute, is as follows:

"It was stated as an historical item of curious interest, that tradition has long held that the first meeting-house in Salem was not pulled down after its ceasing to be used in that capacity, but was removed, about 1639, to some spot near the road to South Danvers and employed for other purposes for some time afterward. Recently it has been asserted that the old building, or its frame, yet exists, that it stands on the land of Mr. David Nichols, at the foot of Gallows Hill, and is the same structure that did service for some years under the name of Tompkin's Inn."

There is thus firmly established this fact, namely, that as first communicated to and recorded by the Essex Institute, the tradition set forth the allegation that after 1639 the first meeting-house no longer remained on its original site but was then removed intact to the region of Gallows Hill; also, that the Nichols building is the same structure which formerly was Tompkins Inn.

The tradition is next and finally heard from in the reports of the committee appointed at Saugus wherein this appears, and nothing more, that in certain families, mentioned, dwelling consecutively upon the premises when the building was situate, "it was always known as having been made from the first meeting-house."

The point has been well taken and well stated that tradition is not history, nor does it command confidence unless it has been widely disseminated in the community in the past, in some definite form, and runs well back to the events to which it relates.

This tradition is utterly devoid of definite form. The two versions are by no means the same thing. The one version is authority for the proposition that the Nichols building, Tompkins Inn and the First Meeting House were but three phases of one and the same building, that each was necessarily identical in dimensions with the others, and that the frame here preserved, having endured through changes of location and use, is the very frame which our Puritan fathers hewed and set up more than two hundred and sixty-five years ago. The other version presumes to no authority as to the original dimensions of the meeting-house and, if accepted as authentic, proves nothing more than that more or less of the wood of the meeting-house was worked over, as second-hand timber, into this present frame.

So far from having been widely disseminated, it does not appear that the tradition in any form was ever spoken of generally or was ever referred to, before Mr. Streeter's newspaper article, by historian, orator, antiquarian, annalist, diarist or traveller.

Eminent men, throughout many generations, full of the spirit of reverence for the fathers, have been eager to seek out and perpetuate matters of local interest, and it is inconceivable that, having heard and placed the slightest credence in a tradition that the timbers of the first meeting-house were somehow, anyhow, preserved in their original form, such men had not long ago perpetuated what they learned.

No other conclusion is possible than that at no time previous to its promulgation by the Institute, was there any general currency, credence or knowledge of such a tradition throughout a community of people who would have willingly and fondly cherished and made the most of it.

Reverting to the version of the tradition first recorded by the Institute, it is now clear that it is wholly untrustworthy and mistaken in two respects, namely, as to the removal of the meeting-house about 1639, and as to the identity of the meeting-house with Tompkins Inn.

The inference from the town records, hereinafter referred to, is conclusive that the first meeting-house was not removed in 1639 but added to, and the enlarged building remained for thirty-three years longer, when the whole was taken down, and that the timbers were afterwards used, according as they would bear, in the construction of another public building.

By research in the Registry of Deeds, details of which are referred to, Mr. Perley has demonstrated that Tompkins Inn, "a small house" was situated on what is now the "square" in Peabody. The cellar for a house was dug there not long before February 2, 1718-19, at which time and for more than forty years thereafter, the school house, into which the meeting-house timber went in 1674, remained in use some two miles distant. And the "small house" remained on its original site until at least 1812, a date far too recent to harmonize with the traditional identity of Tompkins Inn and Nichols Barn.

In view of these considerations we believe that tradition, uncorroborated, is utterly insufficient to support the authenticity of the claim that the Nichols frame is the very frame of the first meeting-house.

II. THE CORROBORATORY EVIDENCE.

In corroboration of tradition, it has been claimed that the Nichols building is identical in dimensions with the first Puritan meeting-house. That claim seems to have been based on this reasoning:—

- a* The town records show a contract by which John Pickering in 1639 agreed to build what is acknowledged to have been an addition, twenty-five feet long, to the then existing meeting-house.
- b* A central aisle must have been provided.
- c* This aisle must have been five feet wide, because a middle aisle of this width was "a style of church building which continued from that time until a very late period."
- d* The space for the aisle was taken from the new part, namely the first five feet next to the old part.
- e* This left twenty feet for new seating space.
- f* It was the plan of the addition "to make the building twice its former size."
- g* The length of the old part, before the addition, was therefore twenty feet.
- h* The longest dimension of the Nichols building is twenty feet.

We are compelled to find that there is no authority for any of these steps between the first and the last.

No reasoning is even attempted to identify the shorter dimension of the Nichols building with "the breadth of the old building." We can find no foundation for the assumption that the first-meeting-house was seventeen feet wide.

The size of the first meeting house,—its length, its width, its height,—is now and must, it seems, ever remain a matter of conjecture. So far from its being probable that the addition of 1639 was five feet longer, that is, one-fifth part larger, than the original structure, the probabilities are decidedly the other way.

Although there is no town record extant concerning the size of the first meeting-house or the date of its erection, the authority of Dr. Bentley has been commonly accepted as fixing the date in 1634, and the price "not exceeding one hundred pounds." This price did not include "daubing and glazing." It is to be noted that the price of the Pickering addition in 1639 was less than two thirds as much, namely, sixty-three pounds.

The floor space of a building twenty feet by seventeen feet with gallery has been computed as sufficient for a congregation of at most some eighty persons, making niggardly allowance for pulpit, fire-place and gallery stairs. The population of Salem in 1630 is estimated at several hundred. In 1634, says Dr. Bentley, "Salem began to flourish." In 1637 there were one hundred and seventy-nine members of the church. The number of members by no means measured the size of the congregation. Mr. Perley estimates the attendance as four times the number of members.

The people attended worship, for the most part willingly, but, if not, by compulsion. A building of this diminutive size would not begin to accommodate within its walls the Salem congregation of 1634.

The meeting-house of our forefathers, as well the first as its successors, was their sacred house of God and also the civil Capitol. From the first it was the centre of the very life of the community, religious, and politic. No other theory is tenable than that they built an edifice adequate to hold their congregations. We cannot believe that they so scrimped in this respect, as deliberately to plan that the minister should preach through open windows to a contingent unable to get inside. The rigors of New England winters would have forbidden the contemplation of such a plan, even to Puritan hardihood. It was no later than 1639 that by vote of the town two men were appointed each week "to walk forth during God's worship and take notice of those who lye about the meeting-house" and elsewhere with the purpose of citing them to worship.

Upon the authority of Dr. Bentley, the first meeting-house was "a proper house." The hundred pounds appropriated for its erection represents in modern equivalent of purchasing power, according to conservative estimate, some two thousand dollars. As hints of comparison, the "shopp and house" of Thomas Rix "neare the meeting-house" was disposed of in 1654, apparently to the town, for eleven pounds. In 1657, Mr. Corwin, of the selectmen, bought a house for the minister "the now dwelling of John Millard" for fifty pounds. In 1659, John Norman for forty-five pounds, built a dwelling-house for the minister on Cape Ann side, thirty-eight feet long, seventeen feet wide and eleven feet stud, having three chimneys, two below and one above, a porch eight feet square, and eight windows, four below and four above. It seems that one hundred pounds was, in 1634, fully adequate for a meeting-house of ample size.

But more conclusive than dogmatic deductions from the assumed necessities of the situation is what happened when, thirty-three years after the Pickering contract, the entire structure was taken down.

Looking at this building here preserved, it seems evident that half a dozen or at most a dozen men could take it down and pile up the lumber in orderly fashion in a single day, and that if it were twice its length, and five feet more, a little more than two days would suffice for the job. Making allowance of time for unclenching, drawing and saving the precious wrought nails of the time, and for care to preserve building materials fit for further use, it is incredible that the razing and storing of a simple building 17 feet by 45 feet should have necessitated the vote of 1672, "that every family in the towne and which belong to the towne shall send one man of a family to help to take it down and carry it into some convenient place where it may be reserved for the towne use, and that for time when to begin to doe it and the number of men each day it is left to the selectmen to appoint." "It is ordered that the meeting-house be begun to be taken down this month, and the constables are appointed to name thirty men a day to appeare to help to take it down, and they are to begin at Strong Water brook, and soe downwards to the lower end of the towne."

The corroboratory evidence from the internal construction of the Nichols building is this. The Pickering contract for the addition of 1639 called for a gallery "answerable to the former." The fair inference is that there was a gallery in the original meeting-house. On examination of the Nichols building a heavy beam was found extending across the building, supported by mortises at the tops of opposite uprights or wall posts. Other mortises, theretofore concealed by plaster, etc., were discovered lower down on each of these posts, into which tenons of the cross beam fitted. There was also an oak tie beam in which, it was claimed, the joist of the gallery rested at the time the front timber was lodged in the lower mortises, "thus giving to the gallery an inclination by which a view of the preacher below was obtained." By actual experiment it was found that the cross beam could be lowered and its tenons fitted into the lower mortises and in fact it was so lowered and upon stringers resting upon this cross beam a gallery has actually been constructed.

It is not difficult to appreciate the intense interest of these discoveries and experiments to any who were then already inclined to give great weight to the tradition. On the assumptions, first, that at least one dimension of the Nichols building was coincident with a dimension of the first meeting-house, and second, that the first meeting-house was moved to Gallows Hill intact, or that it was taken down and there put together again in its original shape, the discovery of the supposed gallery construction would be in the strongest degree corroborative of a tradition that the Nichols building was the first Puritan meeting-house. But without basis for these assumptions, and there is none, the discovery proves nothing as to the main question.

The Pickering contract called for "one catted chimney of 12 feet long and four feet in height above the top of the building." If we understand correctly the argument on page 14 of the "Story of the Meeting House" it is this:— By assuming that twelve feet long means twelve feet high, and that twelve feet high means not twelve feet from the ground, but twelve feet outside above the eaves and thatch, through which the brick or cobble work is supposed to have projected, the deduction is made that the ridge-pole of the meeting-house was eight feet higher than the top of the side walls. The fact that the ridge-pole of the Nichols building is about eight feet above the top of the side walls has been cited as another point of corroboratory evidence. There was no chimney in the Nichols building when it was examined in 1859 but "a certain disturbed condition of the timbers" has been noticed as perhaps indicating the previous location of a chimney.

As to the actual size of the fireplace in the meeting-house a certain town record seems conclusive. In 1662, at a meeting of the selectmen, it was ordered "that a beere be provided at the charge of the towne for carryinge of Corpses to buryinge and the chimney in the meeting house is the place appoynted for it to stande in." We are convinced that "twelve feet long" in the Pickering contract meant twelve feet wide; that nothing is known or can be known concerning its height, and that no coincidence can be established in respect to the roof, between the Nichols building and the first meeting-house.

This is all the evidence which has heretofore been adduced in corroboration of the tradition, and in all the material bearing upon the situation we have been unable to find any additional evidence in support thereof. We cannot attach probative weight to the evidence referred to, and are forced to the conclusion that the assertion of the identity of the Nichols frame and the frame of the first Puritan meeting house depends on tradition, substantially uncorroborated; and that tradition in this respect is unfounded.

Our consideration of the tradition would be incomplete without reference to another point of view.

The point has been well taken that the tradition traced to the Pope family that "it was made from the meeting-house" may have referred to the first Quaker or Friends' Meeting-House.

Research in the Registry of Deeds and in the records of the Friends' Monthly Meeting, detailed in Mr. Perley's report, pp. 119-143, determine the following facts. Upon a lot of land just east of the present site of Grace Church, on Essex Street in Salem, one Thomas Maule, a Quaker, built a meeting-house for "ye people called Quakers" in the year 1688. This meeting-house was used by the Quakers until 1718. In that year they built a larger meeting-house on the other side of the street, to wit, on the land which is now the "Quaker Burying Ground." The larger meeting-house was forty by thirty feet.

From a study of dimensions in the chain of title and from certain deeds given in 1788 by one James Blythe, administrator of Mary Ford, it appears: first, that the old meeting-house was added to and became part of a dwelling-house, and so continued on its original site until after 1750; second, that the old meeting-house did not exceed twenty-four feet ten inches in length, and was probably somewhat less than this in length; third, that a division of the lot on which the meeting-house was built was made in 1788 by running a boundary line directly over and across the site of the building, without any mention of its existence, the fair inference from which is that before 1788 the first Quaker meeting-house had been taken down or removed.

It is cited that, at this time, Enos Pope and Enos Pope, 2nd, to whom the tradition is traced, were living; and that the tradition has not been traced to an earlier time. The Popes were Quakers. The tradition, such as it is, comes from a distinctly Quaker environment. From the Pope-Nichols premises to the site of the first Quaker meeting-house it is less than half the distance to the site of the first Puritan meeting-house.

The committee refrain from speculating as to probabilities suggested by these facts. It is enough here to say that they lead otherwise than to corroboration of the claim that the frame of the Nichols building is the frame of the first Puritan meeting-house.

III. WHAT IS KNOWN CONCERNING THE MEETING-HOUSE.

There was a meeting-house in 1635. The records are silent as to its dimensions, or any other facts concerning the same. In 1639 an addition was made to the meeting-house of 1635, — "to be 25 foot long, and of the breadth of the old building, with a gallerie answerable to the former, one catted chimney 12 foot long, and 4 foot in height above the top of the building. Six windows, two on each side, and two at the end, and also a pair of stairs to ascend the gallerie suitable to the former." From 1639 to 1670, various votes are recorded, concerning repairs upon the meeting-house. In 1670, a new meeting-house was built "about 60 foote long 50 foote wide and about 20 foote high in the stude, and to be sett vp at the west end of the old meeting house towards the prison." The old meeting-house of 1635 and 1639, stood, after the new meeting-house was built, until 1672. In August of that year a warrant was issued for a town meeting "to Consider whether the old meeting house shall be taken downe or Sould as it now stands;" etc. August 17, 1672, it was voted that the "old meeting house be reseru'd for The Towne use, to build a skoole house & watch house." At the same meeting it was voted that it<sup>h</sup> be taken down and carried "into Some conuenient place wher it may be reseru'd for the Townes use." Constables were appointed to warn 30 men a day to appear, to help to take it down, and August 19, 1672, was the day when the work of tearing down should begin. Thus it is clearly indicated by the records that the old meeting-house was taken down, and the timbers laid away — piled up in some convenient place — subject to use by the town later, if seen fit. Then the building of 1635, and the addition of 1639, ceased to exist, as the old meeting-house. April 15, 1673, a town meeting was called for April 21, 1673, "to Consider what Instructions shall be given to the select men; Concerning building a schoole house & watch house of the timber of the old meeting house, or otherways to dispose of it," and on April 21, 1673, a committee was appointed "to Agree with a Carpenter or Carpenters to build a house for the towne, which may serve for a schoole house & watch-house and town house of the timber of the old meeting house according as the timber will bear." November 10, 1674, it was "agreed that the towne house shall be sett up by the prisson." In 1677, the town house was removed up the street (our present Washington Street) and opposite, or nearly so, to where now stands the house, formerly of Brookhouse. Various repairs on the same were made necessary by the removal. May 19, 1679, the chamber in the town house was ordered to be fitted up for Court to meet there. In 1719, a new Town and Court House was built near the meeting-house. A new watch-house was built in 1712, — that also not far from the meeting-house. From 1719 to 1760 the Town House of 1674 was used mostly for school purposes, and during all these years various repairs were made. In 1759 the subject of building a new school house was agitated, and on May 19, 1760, it was "voted that the School House to be built in said town shall be erected in "y<sup>e</sup> School House Lane where the committee for building s<sup>d</sup> House proposed, being to northward." Here the town records abruptly end.

Now what of the town house and school-house of 1674? We are not without knowledge upon this subject, for Colonel Benjamin Pickman, in a manuscript left by him, says, concerning this old building, "Opposite to Mr. Derby's house stood in the centre of the street an old wooden school house, which was formerly the Court House, and where the witches were tried. This last house was pulled down in 1760. My curiosity often led me to view the place where those unfortunate persons were tried in those deluded times."

Thus from the records it is shown that the First Meeting House in 1635, with the addition of 1639, was, in 1672, torn down, and its timbers piled away in some convenient place,—that in 1674, those timbers, worth using, were used in building a house for the town, for a school-house and watch-house and town house,—that this last building stood until 1760, and by the written testimony of Colonel Benjamin Pickman this building (then an old building) was torn down.

Although the records do not disclose the dimensions of the new building constructed in 1674 from the timber of the meeting-house "according as it would bear," we do know certain facts concerning it. As already shown from the records, there was a "chamber" in it. In 1678, Samuel Stone contracted to build two chimneys in the town house, "one below, and a Chamber Chimney large, good substantial worke." This chamber was large enough to accommodate sessions of the Court. In 1679, Captain John Price was chosen and "desired with speed may bee to fitt the Towne House Chamber soe as may bee conveyent for the Court to meete there." The building was fitted with a bell turret in 1692. In the same year it cost forty-four pounds five shillings to shingle all the eastern side with choice cedar shingles. In 1696, on the petition of the selectmen of Salem for "proportioning ye charge of ye Court alias Towne House," the Court of General Sessions ordered that "one half of ye charge for the reparation of said House be Discharged from time to time by ye County and ye other half by ye Town of Salem."

Not only did the new building of 1672 have a chamber, it also had a garret. In 1699 it was voted to provide "twenty water buckets, and Two Iron hooks or Poles to fasten hold on a house to Pull it downe when a fire and to be keep in ye towne house Garrett and marked T: S:" In 1702 it was ordered that the closet in the chamber be fitted up "to keep ye Towne arms in."

It seems therefore necessary to assume that a building put to the uses thus indicated must have been considerably larger than that which we are preserving. If ever the first Puritan meeting-house was timbered on a 20 by 17 plan, the theory that its timbers went into a lumber pile, then into the construction of another building of the size and character indicated by these records, then were once more disjointed, and finally, after a century and a quarter of separation, came together, posts, plates, rafter and ridge pole, each tenon seeking its old mortise, seems to impute nothing short of a miraculous restoration.

The committee are unanimous in the conclusion that the frame of the building now preserved in the rear of Plummer Hall is not the frame of the first Puritan meeting-house erected in Salem. The foregoing report, as a whole, is subscribed with certain qualifications on the part of individual members of the committee.

Mr. Hines bases his conclusions upon the record evidence alone, and deems it unnecessary to consider traditions or to allude to any former investigations.

Mr. Buckham suggests that no one knows or is likely ever to know, what has become of the timbers of the meeting-house built before 1639. It cannot be proved, either that they have been destroyed or preserved. There is at least a possibility that they may still be in existence; if so the tradition that the building in the rear of the Institute was "made from the First Meeting House" is not wholly without value. Too much weight should not be attached to so limited a tradition; but neither should it be, in his judgment, wholly ignored. He suggests that the building now known as the First Meeting House be preserved as it is, but no longer with the title "The First Meeting House," and that in order to prevent misconception a tablet be placed upon it containing some such statement as this: An old tradition affirms that this building was made from the First Meeting House.

Mr. Gove desires to add that the tradition being only that the building was "made from the first meeting-house," does not affirm the identity of the frame, and that he finds no good reason for believing that the alleged first meeting-house now preserved contains any of the material of the original first meeting-house of the Puritans in Salem. He believes there is only a remote possibility of this being true, and that it is extremely improbable. The tradition not being found outside of the Pope family, who were Quakers, he believes it more probable that it refers to the "first meeting-house" of the Friends or Quakers.

Having reached the general conclusion herein indicated, your committee desires to express deep regret that the conclusion does not coincide with that of the honored and able gentlemen appointed to investigate this subject in 1859. Their honesty and earnestness of purpose, their reverence for the past, their disinterested desire to serve the Institute, the community and posterity, by rescuing from destruction what they deemed to be a sacred relic, seems to us worthy of the highest commendation and gratitude. If it were but emulated, this spirit of devotion to the past and of regard for the future, would save many a valuable memorial, better authenticated than this, now unhappily left to neglect and decay. With their purpose we heartily sympathize and for their ability we cherish the highest respect, but from their results, we, at this more critical period, with greater perspective, find ourselves compelled to dissent. To them the discovery of this old building and the accompanying tradition came as a captivating novelty: to us it has become a question of historical criticism.

The old building which they caused to have removed to its present location, believing it to be the first meeting house, is neither a fraud nor an imposture, but simply, in our judgment, registers the honest mistake of a zeal that outran the facts. We, on our part, do not lay claim to infallibility, but with the aid of such facts as we have been able to secure, we have approached the question without prejudice and have endeavored to discharge to the best of our ability the trust committed to us.

REPORT.

To Alden P. White, Esq., Ezra D. Hines, Esq., William H. Gove, Esq., Rev. John W. Buckham and Rev. T. Frank Waters, Committee of the Essex Institute to whom was referred the question of the authenticity of the First Church, so called, in Salem :

GENTLEMEN :—

Having been engaged by you to secure all evidence bearing upon the identity of the timbers now contained in the little building standing in the rear of Plummer Hall with the first meeting-house in Salem, I report to you herewith.

I have examined all the records and also gathered the traditions that are thought to have a bearing upon the question involved.

I have also made a careful study of the frame of the building as it now exists, and made drawings of the same drawn to scale that a better understanding than that gained by a written description might be had of them. The only fault in the way of conveying information in this way is, perhaps, in this, that the drawings show the timbers as being more even and regular in size, shape and finish than they really are in their crude condition.

My purpose has been simply to gather the evidence, and not to present any argument or proffer personal conclusions as to what the evidence tends to prove or disprove. I have taken no side in the controversy, and have conscientiously sought and secured all the information I could. If there is anything in this report that seems to have no bearing upon the subject the committee can treat it as though it had not been rendered.

The matter of the court sittings prior to 1679 seemed to have a bearing upon the necessary size of the court room. Tompkins Inn is given because it is so prominent in one, at least, of the traditions. This is also true of the Quaker meeting-house. A map of all sites is given to show relative distances that the building or its timbers may have been moved.

The number of members of the church and population of the town, inasmuch as all who could do so were compelled to attend church in those days, have a most important bearing upon the number of persons that the meeting-house must seat. Salem then included Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Beverly, Wenham and Manchester, and all of those territories had a scattered population.

The character of the settlers of Salem certainly is evidence of the kind of meeting-house that they would be likely to build, and the fact that they were Puritans and not Pilgrims should not be overlooked.

I may be allowed to call attention to the traditions. Whatever they may be worth, in connection with positive facts, as evidence, it is but proper and just for me to add, that they are all of Quaker origin.

Respectfully submitted,

SIDNEY PERLEY.

On the next page is a map, drawn on a scale of seventy-five feet to an inch, showing the location of the first meeting-house in 1635. Some of the present sites of buildings are shown by dotted lines. part, the present church, as will be noticed, occupying nearly the whole of the present lot.

The peculiar house of William Lord was at the southeastern corner of the meeting-house lot.

After the removal of the first meeting-house, in 1674, its site was used as a market place.

The Higginson house is that which was the residence of Rev. Francis Higginson, and later of Roger Williams, it is believed.

Hugh Peter's garden was sold to Benjamin Felton in 1659, and to it the prison was subsequently moved from its site on the easterly side of the garden to secure space for the town house.

pasture on Norman's Rocks, with a small old house and barn on the same, one acre and one hundred and four rods, was assigned to Robert Proctor, son of the deceased, in the division of the real estate in 1779.— Probate Records and Files.

The part assigned to the widow of Thorndike Proctor, as her dower, was conveyed by the administrator of the estate to Thorndike Proctor, for three pounds, Oct. 22, 1789.— Registry of Deeds, book 151, leaf 244.

The Thorndike Proctor who bought the dower part as above lived in Salem, and was a mariner. He was son of Robert, and grandson of Thorndike Proctor. He died in 1792, being called "captain". He devised this dower lot to his brother Robert Proctor, jr.

The dwelling-house and barn and one and one-half acres of land assigned to him in the division of the real estate of his father, Thorndike Proctor, was conveyed by Robert Proctor, who was a blacksmith and lived here, for forty pounds, to Benjamin Goodhue of Salem, esquire, and Jeremiah Hacker of Brunswick, Cumberland county, July 12, 1785.— Registry of Deeds, book 143, leaf 208.

Mr. Hacker conveyed his half interest in the land and buildings to Thorndike Proctor June 27, 1787.— Registry of Deeds, book 148, leaf 42.

Thorndike Proctor died in 1792, as stated above, having devised all his real estate to his brother Robert Proctor, jr., who lived here.

Robert Proctor jr., died Dec. 4, 1841, intestate, leaving only one child, Martha Ann, wife of David Nichols.

Mrs. Nichols died Feb. 2, 1892, without children, and the premises passed into the hands of the present owner, Mrs.

Gannon, by deed. It was while the estate was owned by Mrs. Nichols that the building in question was conveyed to the Essex Institute.

THE BUILDING IN QUESTION.

The plans and drawings on the following pages represent the frame work of the building in question as it now stands in the rear of Plummer Hall so far as can be seen. The drawings are made from actual and exact measurements, the scale being marked on each drawing.

The new part of each piece of frame work is shown by a lighter-colored paint than the old portion.<sup>1</sup> Mortises are in black.

All the posts are of soft wood except that in the northwestern corner, which is numbered 4. That post is oak. The plates and beams are all soft wood. So are the rafters. The pieces between the rafters are of oak.

When the building was removed from the "David Nichols Farm," where it had stood, as marked on the preceding map, since before 1833, being used as a cow shed, it had a small window on the back side, about a foot square, having small diamond panes of glass set in lead.<sup>2</sup> The frontispiece shows the location of the door and windows and the general outside appearance as it was when first brought to the notice of the Essex Institute in 1860. This is a copy of a pencil sketch made by James H. Emerton at that time. It was removed to the Institute in 1864.

The location of the beam, measuring  $8 \times 8\frac{3}{4}$  inches on an average, which now supports the front portion of the gallery, is shown in the drawing of posts numbered 2 and 7.

The drawings of the timbers show them as they are seen from the centre of the floor of the building, as shown on the ground plan, page 286.

All the timbers are hewn, and are more or less rough, with partly rounded corners. Sections are decayed to a slight extent.

THE TRADITIONS.

George W. Bruce, of Salem, states that his mother, whose maiden-name was Sarah Proctor, was born in this building March 12, 1787. Also, her brother Benjamin Proctor was born in it Oct. 24, 1775. These Proctors were children of Robert Proctor, who owned the Nichols farm from 1779 till 1785, and had probably lived there from the time of his marriage, about 1756, until his death, Feb. 1, 1802. Mr. Bruce says that the building had not been changed in appearance since 1833, when he first remembers having seen it. He never knew it to be used for any other purpose than a cow shed. He used to hear it called "The first meeting-house" when he was young (having been born about 1825). He is not sure that he ever heard that it was called "The old tavern house," or a part of "Tompkins inn". The Proctors were Friends or Quakers. Robert Proctor, jr., son of abovenamed Robert Proctor, lived in the southern end of the Nichols house, the other end, which is toward Boston street, having been built on later.

Caleb Pierce of Salem stated, before 1860, that Benjamin Proctor and his sister, both excellent people, who were told the same by the Pope family, stated "that they well remembered that the old tavern was always known as having been made from the first meeting house." Mr. Proctor said he had heard his father say so more than a hundred times. Said Benjamin Proctor and his sister were both born in the old tavern. "Joseph Pope," said Mr. Pierce, "the first of the name who came to New England, was in Salem in 1636; his name appears on the Salem records about that time. Joseph Pope, 2d, was baptized in 1650, married, in 1669; Bethusa Folger, aunt to Doctor Franklin. Enos Pope, son of Joseph, 2d, was born in 1690: and lived near the Fowler house in Boston street. In 1718, he built the house now occupied by Mr. Wilkins, at the foot of Gallows hill, which was within a few rods of this old building, in which Enos, 2d, was born in 1721, and who died at the age of ninety-two. Enos, 3d, was born in 1769. My recollections of my grandfather, Enos, 2d, are very clear and distinct. Until a few months of his death he was very active, clear-minded and communicative. He was frequently inquired of by people with regard to previous events, and he was so exact in his account of dates and particulars that it was supposed he had kept a journal for many years, which was not the case. I remember his pointing out the course of the old road, which passed the tavern house and joined the present street directly opposite his house. With Enos Pope, 3d, I lived nearly forty years. He was full of information and anecdotes, and yet very cautious and careful in his statements. It was from him and his sisters, who lived in the family long after their father's death, that I got the account. It was never doubted by them. It should be remembered that the persons I have named were separated only by death, although very long-lived; father, son and grandson having lived together in the same house, and the connection that bound the past to the present was never broken for a day." The Popes were, also, Friends, or Quakers, having been of that persuasion since the persecution of the Friends in the seventeenth century.

Gilbert L. Streeter writes: "This old building was said to have been, and doubtless was, a part of an ancient tavern, known as Tompkins' Inn, and it was situated at the point nearest to Boston street, where the end of Proctor street now is. I published an account of this<sup>1</sup> pleasant ramble at the time in a Salem newspaper; and in it I said: 'The reader may have seen this old tavern, back of Blubber Hollow, and may have mused upon its antiquity. Some, who prefer what is interesting to what is strictly matter of fact, like to consider it as the original first church,— or meeting house, as the godly and extra anti-papal fathers of the early days styled their houses of worship.' I thus happened to be the first person who called public attention to this ancient and interesting building, as it then was, and one of the few who saw it in its dirty and dilapidated condition. It had, for many years, been used as a barn, or cow-house, and you will notice that at that time I disclaimed belief in the legend that it had been 'the first meeting house.' Not long after, in 1859, the Essex Institute took the matter up."

SIZE OF MEETING-HOUSES.

In Dedham, in 1637, two years after the town was settled, when the population was much less than that of Salem, a meeting-house thirty-six feet long, twenty feet wide, and twelve feet stud, was built.

In New Haven, in 1637, when the town was much smaller than Salem, the meeting-house was fifty feet square.

Haverhill erected a meeting-house, in 1648, when the town was very small, having been settled in 1640, twenty-six by twenty feet.

In Lynn, in 1632, upon the very first settlement of the town, a meeting-house, said to have been twenty feet square, was built.

COST OF BUILDINGS.

In 1659, John Norman built a dwelling-house for the minister on Cape Ann Side for forty-five pounds. It was thirty-eight feet long, seventeen feet wide, and eleven feet stud. It had three chimneys,—two below and one above; a porch eight feet square; and eight windows,—four below and four above. — Salem Quarterly Court Files, volume 5, leaf 51.

Doctor Bentley, in his history of Salem, states that "an unfinished building of one story was used occasionally for public worship in Salem from 1629 to 1634. A proper house was then erected by Mr. Norton, who was to have one hundred pounds sterling for it."

POPULATION OF SALEM.

Rev. Joseph B. Felt, the Annalist of Salem, states that in 1629 there were "eleven houses in Salem, besides cottages." He, also, says that two hundred and twenty-six houses were built before 1638; and four hundred and fifty-nine, "mostly huts and cottages," before 1660.

The population of Salem at any period of those early times is not known; but it must have been several hundred in 1630, and subsequently more.

The church records show that, in 1637, there were one hundred and seventy-nine members.

Every person, as a rule, was compelled to attend the church service in the early days; and probably the church attendance was four times the number of members.

Reference to the address of President Rantoul to the Board of Directors of the Institute, dated Oct. 2, 1899, is made for further particulars as to the population of Salem in the early days.

THE SALEM PEOPLE.

As to size, style of architecture, finish, and cost, what would the settlers of Salem be presumed to do? They were men of means, character, religion, taste, and culture. More so, perhaps, than of any other settlement is the statement true.

This has always been the shire town of the county, and the meeting-house, which was substantially the only public building in the town until after 1675, was located on the most prominent of the public squares from 1634 to 1672.

In 1634, Doctor Bentley says, Salem began to flourish; and, it may be added, has flourished ever since.

GENEALOGICAL NOTE ON ISRAEL PORTER OF WENHAM.

BY MISS CARRIE C. EDGETT.

---

THE second part of the Porter Genealogy (1878), "Descendants of John Porter," gives the following:—

Israel, bapt. Aug. 20, 1710; prob. d. Beverly, 1744 (pp. 242-3).

Israel<sup>4</sup> Porter, of Wenham, probably son of William<sup>3</sup> Porter, baptized Aug. 20, 1710. Married, in Wenham, Abigail Batchelder of Beverly; published Sept. 26, 1741.

Children, from Wenham records:

1. Israel, b. Feb. 16, 1743.
  2. Abigail, b. June 10, 1745; prob. m. Charles Dodge, July 18, 1763 (p. 243).

In endeavoring to verify a line which contains the word "probably," so many times, I have found more errors than truths, and present herewith several corrections and additions.

First, Marriage. Israel Porter, of Wenham, married Abigail Balch of Beverly. Their intention was published in Wenham, Sept. 26; in Beverly, Sept. 27, and they were married in Beverly, Oct. 16, 1741, by Rev. Joseph Champney, of the First Church. She was daughter of Freeborn<sup>4</sup> (Freeborn,<sup>3</sup> Benjamin,<sup>2</sup> John<sup>1</sup>) and Susanna Williston) Balch and was born in Boston, March 9, 1717/18. This marriage is given in the Balch Genealogy (p. 51), and proved by the settlement of the estate of Freeborn Balch (Essex Probate Docket, No. 1541, and Deeds 133 : 90). She was married, 2nd, May 10, 1748, to Francis Symonds of Topsfield, by Rev. John Chipman, of the Second Church, Beverly, and lived later in Danvers, where she probably died about 1758 or earlier. Francis Symonds married again June 21, 1759.

Second, Death. The death of Israel Porter is not given on town records of Wenham, Beverly, or Salem. On the records of the Second Church, Beverly, in a list of names of persons who died in the year 1743, is that of Israel Porter. This is without doubt the son of William and Edith (Herrick) Porter, who was baptized in 1710, as that family attended the North Beverly church. The Israel Porter who lived in Wenham and was father of two children born in 1743 and 1745 must have been another person of the same name. On the Wenham Church records is this item:— "Aug. 10, 1745, Israel Porter dyed at Cape Breton." An Israel Porter was Ensign in Capt. James Grant's (4th) Co., Col. Jeremiah Moulton's (3rd Mass.) Regt., in the "Expedition against the french Settlements on Cape Breton" commanded by Hon. William Pepperrell; his commission was dated Feb. 1, 1744/5. (Mass. Hist. Coll., Sixth Series, Vol. x, p. 502.)

Third, Parentage. As Israel Porter of Wenham was not the son of William of Salem Village, to which family did he belong?

April 10, 1758, Israel Porter, a minor above fourteen years, son of Israel Porter late of Wenham deceased, made choice of his uncle, Mr. Samuel Porter, jr., to be his guardian. (Probate Docket, No. 22463.)

These two items indicate that Israel Porter was a brother of Samuel Porter, jr., and of Anna (Porter) Brown, and therefore son of Samuel<sup>4</sup> (John,<sup>3</sup> Samuel,<sup>2</sup> John<sup>1</sup>) and Sarah (Bradstreet) Porter of Wenham. This family is given in the Porter Genealogy (p. 245), with only four children:—

1. Samuel, b. Nov. 14, 1711.
2. Ebenezer, b. 1716.
3. John, b. July 9, 1717.
4. Anna, b. Aug. 13, 1719; m. Nathaniel Brown.

The births of only three of these are found on town records, and no others; but again church records supply the desired information: — June 17, 1722, Israel, son of Samuel and Sarah Porter (baptized).

Samuel Porter of Wenham and Sarah Bradstreet of Topsfield were married May 20, 1707, by Rev. Joseph Capen. (Topsfield Church records.)

Sarah, wife of Samuel Porter, died July 7, 1762. (Wenham Church records.)*

Fourth, Children. The births of the two children are in accordance with Wenham records except that there are two entries of the birth of Israel, one giving the date as Feb. 16, 1743 and the other as Feb. 13, 1742-3.

The son, Israel<sup>6</sup> (Israel<sup>5</sup>, Samuel<sup>4</sup>, etc.), was a housewright or carpenter, and removed to Marblehead where he was married Nov. 13, 1764, by Rev. Simon Bradstreet, to Mary Pedrick. She was daughter of Aaror and Elizabeth (Edgcome) Tucker, baptized, Second Church, Marblehead, June 6, 1742; married, 1st, Jan. 16, 1759, Nathaniel Pedrick, 2nd, Israel Porter as above, 3rd, Dec. 30, 1770, Philip Hye or Hoy,† and was living in Marblehead, a widow, Sept. 10, 1795. (Deeds 160: 83.)

Israel Porter, adult, was baptized and admitted to full communion in Second Church, Marblehead, Sept. 7, 1769, and died between that date and April 2, 1770, when his widow, Mary Porter, was appointed administratrix of his estate. (Probate Docket, No. 22464.)

April 24, 1788, Mary Hoy, widow, of Marblehead, Nancy Porter, singlewoman, of Wenham, and Sarah Porter, singlewoman, of Marblehead, sold a piece of land in Marblehead, which Israel Porter had purchased in 1767. (Deeds, 117: 230 and 151: 109.)

Children, baptized in Second Church, Marblehead:

1. Samuel, bapt. July 23, 1765; prob. d. young.
2. Anna,‡ bapt. Oct. 5, 1766; m. in Wenham, April 27, 1790, Capt. Edmund Kimball of Newburyport; d. Newburyport, Aug. 31, 1795, in 29th year. Ch., Anna or Anne, Edmund, and Mary.

* The Porter Genealogy says that Samuel<sup>4</sup> prob. m. 2nd, Experience Batchelder, March 25, 1733, and on the same page quotes deed of Feb. 14, 1754, in which he and wife Sarah deed the homestead to their sons Samuel and Ebenezer. The above date is that of an intention, marriage not recorded, and is surely another Samuel Porter, perhaps his son.

† This name is variously spelled,—on Marblehead town records, Hye and High; church records, Hey and Huy; deeds, Hoy; and probate records, Mohyes.

‡ This Anna Porter is given in Porter Genealogy, p. 332, without parentage; also in Kimball Genealogy, p. 226, where dates do not correspond.

3. Sarah, bapt. Nov. 20, 1768; m. in Marblehead, Feb. 20, 1791, James Campbell of Marblehead. Ch., James, Sarah, James, Israel Porter, Ananias, and Thomas.

The daughter, Abigail, was married in Wenham to Charles Dodge, by Rev. Joseph Swain, on the date given, and their children are found in the Dodge Genealogy, p. 91, and in Part Second, p. 479. She died in Beverly, Nov. 7, 1802, æt. 57, of putrid fever. (Second Church records.)

REVOLUTIONARY LETTERS WRITTEN BY
COL. TIMOTHY PICKERING.

TARRY TOWN JAN 31, 1777.

Dear Brother,

This night fortnight we left Tarry Town & marched to the lands near Kingsbridge viz. Lovel's, Thatcher's, Frost's & my regiments, commanded by General Lincoln & Brigadier Moulton. Some New York & Connecticut troops at the same [time] advanced to West Chester & the manor of Fordham in a direction about S. E. from us, who were in Phillips's manor. Generals Worcester, Parsons & Scot, commanded this body. Gen<sup>l</sup> Heath was with them & commanded the whole. It seems that the design of the expedition was to take fort Independence (situated about 1/2 mile from, & intended to command Kingsbridge — destroy Kingsbridge, alarm the enemy, and draw their forces from the Jerseys, or prevent their reinforcing them, and carry off forage. We have only carried off a little forage. And yet Gen<sup>l</sup> Lincoln's division has been greatly fatigued. About a week we lived in huts of rails & straw & leaves, in the woods, until a storm of snow followed by heavy rains obliged us to retire hither. Last Sunday we went down again, at night retired to the nearest houses & on Wednesday night marched up in a snowstorm. It has been a very idle not to say disgraceful expedition. It was not intended to take the fort by storm, for the whole army was militia; and the work was fraised, ditched & furrounded by an abbatis (branches of trees fixed and pointed):— nor by regular approaches, for we had not a single entrenching tool: nor by a cannonade, for we had only three six pounders:— and yet on the first morning we arrived in the neighbourhood, Gen<sup>l</sup> Heath sent a fummons demanding a surrender of the fort. The garrison paid no regard to it. I have not time to mention many other particulars. To-morrow I am to march my regiment beyond White Plains. Thatchers & Lovells (or Frosts) follow me. We are now going upon a plan that promises some advantage. The Committee of New York say there are three thousand tons of hay & grain near White Plains, Rye & Marineck. These are to be removed, & the Massachusetts & Connecticut militia are to cover the foragers. Most of the Yorkers had run home, & the rest are discharged.

I wrote a short letter yesterday to my wife, and sent it in a packet containing a number of letters, directed, I think, to Col. Crafts.

I send you by the bearer a bundle of cuttings of the black Burgundy grape, of which kind is made the celebrated Burgundy wine. They were given me by Col. Phillips who says they should be kept from drying till Spring, when, as early as possible, they should be set in the ground, floping, with a couple of buds above ground. (Tis the very manner in which I set y<sup>e</sup> cutting, now in the front yard, which bore grapes so plentifully the year before last.) Col. Phillips says the grape is excellent for eating, & that the vine is extremely hardy, bearing our winters without any extraordinary care. This is highly probable from the far northern & cold situation of Burgundy.

I am very well, saving a flight cold. Many others have colds. But not a man has died in our whole brigade, consisting of y<sup>e</sup> regiments above mentioned.

Yours affectionately

PHILADELPHIA, JUNE 14. 1780

Dear Brother,

When I wrote you yesterday, I had not seen the proposals and articles of capitulation for Charlestown which were printed in New York. They are reprinted here this day, and ar[e] doubtless authentic. I inclose you one of the papers. We do not know the motives leading to this unhappy surrender. It seems that the town should early have been evacuated, or defended much longer. We cannot learn that they wanted provisions. This is a heavy stroke, and requires the more effectual exertions of the remaining states. No dispatches have yet arrived from Gen<sup>l</sup>. Lincoln. If any further intelligence of importance shall arrive & I have opportunities of communicating it early I will do it. We have prisoners enough in our hands (including Burgoyne's army) to redeem the Continental t[ro]ops taken at Charlestown: But our officers now & heretofore made prisoners are so numerous, that should the enemy agree to the exchange of Burgoyne's army, some of those officers must still remain prisoners.

I remain your affectionate

SEVEN LETTERS

WRITTEN BY MANASSEH CUTLER, LL.D.,

WHILE REPRESENTING THE ESSEX DISTRICT IN CONGRESS,

TO HIS FRIEND

DEACON FRANCIS LOW OF HAMILTON;

PARTS OF THEM READ BY A SON, DEACON ALBERT E. LOW,

AT THE ANNUAL GATHERING OF THE "ELDER

BRETHREN," AT MANCHESTER,

JULY 17, 1901.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

We print, as befitting this centennial year of the Louisiana Purchase, to which they refer, a number of letters written in 1803-5 by Dr. Manasseh Cutler, the member of Congress from this District between 1801 and 1805, and addressed by him to his close personal friend and parishioner, Deacon Francis Low of the Ipswich Hamlet, which had become, in 1793, the town of Hamilton. The letters are conceived in all the freedom of personal confidence and are permeated with the political spirit of the times, besides dealing largely with the local news of the day. Dr. Cutler was nothing if not a Federalist. He was holding a seat in Congress in the first years of Mr. Jefferson's administration, when probably many ardent partisans like himself had not abandoned the hope that their party might yet recover its old-time ascendancy. The letters are written without reserve, and came into the possession of the Essex Institute through the thoughtful liberality of a son of the recipient, the venerable Deacon Albert E. Low of Manchester.

Dr. Cutler had been conspicuously identified with the organization and settlement of the Northwest Territory, as he had been with the passage through Congress of its MAGNA CHARTA, the ordinance of 1787, — no public men save Thomas Jefferson and Nathan Dane more so than he. The two volumes of his "Life, Journals and Correspondence" (Cincinnati, 1888) give all that is left to be desired in the historical literature of the country that should elucidate the active part he took in the formative period of our national life.

The coincidence is perhaps worthy of note that two Preachers, possessed of such marked qualities of mind and character as Dr. Cutler and Dr. Bentley exhibited, should have been contemporaries, and near neighbors as well during the active portion of their lives. If Dr. Bentley were the more accomplished linguist and general scholar, Dr. Cutler was probably the better grounded of the two in natural science. If Dr. Cutler had a more signal career, in being fortunate enough to push important measures of politics and administration to a successful issue, Dr. Bentley was the more outspoken of the two, in season and out of season, in the radical Jeffersonian Republicanism which, as a lad, he imbibed at the famous old North End Caucuses inspired and conducted by Samuel Adams amongst his stalwart Boston adherents, in the immediate neighborhood of Bentley's birthplace, whilst the studious Latin School pupil, later to be an usher, was growing into a strenuous patriot and orator. Dr. Cutler, on the other hand, worked out his career no less resolutely and effectively in silence.

Dr. Cutler drove, in his own private sulky, from the Parsonage at Hamilton to the City of New York, in order to attend the session of the Congress of the old Confederacy which passed, under his urgent instigation, the Ordinance of 1787. And in the same primitive conveyance he made the entire journey to Ohio, in 1788, on a visit to the Marietta Settlement, that he might see with his own eyes how great a work his sagacity and enterprise and courage had accomplished.

The Historical Collections of the Essex Institute, Volumes VIII, p. 226; XXV, p. 165; and XXXVI, pp. 105, 233, 264, as well as the New England Magazine for July, 1901, Vol. XXIV, p. 494, add interesting side-lights. And the great wave of well-written literature sweeping over the country, in recognition of this centenary year of the Louisiana Purchase, makes it quite needless to descant upon the political conditions of Dr. Cutler's day. Representative Federalists, among them some of the best men of this section, — Timothy Pickering and Josiah Quincy among them, were so blinded to the true interests and assured future of the country that they regarded the opportune acquirement by Mr. Jefferson of the mouth of the Mississippi River as justifying the withdrawal of New England from the Federal Union. While it is not easy to understand how the great Northwest could be expected to grow as they expected it to grow, and could still be expected to content itself to see its great water-way remain tributary to a foreign power, it is easy enough to pardon their seeming disloyalty to the Federal Union when we reflect that the Compact had not then been "cemented in blood," and was not much more, to the apprehension of its framers, than a written instrument of limited co-partnership which they had joined in forming for a definite purpose and which, now that it was failing of the purpose some of them intended, they felt they had every right to cancel. The Union had for them no more sacredness than the old Confederation which they had abandoned for a better system when it had ceased to answer the purpose they had intended.

Dr. Cutler was born in Killingly, Conn., May 13, 1742. A graduate of Yale, he first engaged in the whaling business and afterwards in shopkeeping, at Edgartown in Martha's Vineyard. He was admitted to the Bar in 1767: then studied theology at Dedham, where he married, and was licensed as a preacher in 1770. He became pastor of the Hamlet Parish of Ipswich in the next year, and remained such until his death in 1823. He marched with the Ipswich minute-men for Lexington, and saw the retreat of the British into Boston. He became chaplain of the 11th Massachusetts Regiment in 1776, and was complimented for his gallantry by its commander with the present of a horse. He added to his parochial charge later in the War,—a common practice in New England,—the duties of a family physician while the local practitioner was serving as an army surgeon, and treated at different times no less than two score small-pox patients. He made himself the earliest authority upon the flora of New England, and called attention to the appearance of the Magnolia in Essex and Gloucester woods as early as 1793, deriving his first intimation of the presence of this southern exotic from Chief Justice Theophilus Parsons, according to the journal kept by Dr. Bentley. He was of the first party to ascend the White Mountains and to make, in 1784, an estimate of their height. He made astronomical observations and taught a school of navigation. In the parsonage at Hamilton he received a class of boys fitting for college. His part in the development of the northern Mississippi basin is well known. Yale conferred on him the degree of LL.D. in 1791, and in 1795 he declined a commission as Judge of the Supreme Court of the then new Northwest Territory. He drafted the Charter of Marietta College, in Ohio. He served two terms in Congress, declining re-election in 1804. He was a member of the leading scientific societies of the Country, to which he contributed papers on astronomy and on natural science. He remained pastor of the Hamilton Parish until his death, and was far in advance of the pulpits of his denomination generally and of the public opinion of New England in the breadth and liberality of his theological views. Both in his teachings and by his example he did what he could to encourage amongst his flock harmless enjoyments and recreations, and a liberal interest in everything which can contribute to the substantial advancement of mankind.

No. I.

WASHINGTON 26th Oct<sup>r</sup> 1803.

MY DEAR SIR,

The member from Vermont, Mr Eliot, I find to be y<sup>e</sup> man you mentioned to me. On his first arrival he pushed himself forward, & very soon rendered himself obnoxious to his own party. Yesterday we had before us a resolution to carry into effect y<sup>e</sup> Louisiana Treaty. Very early in y<sup>e</sup> day this man rose, with great pomposity, & with a display of vanity, weakness — & extreme arrogance, spoke two hours. The utmost dislike was evident from every part of y<sup>e</sup> House. At length, he became so tedious, that his own party called him to order — as he offered nothing in point to y<sup>e</sup> question, for, in fact, he was wandering over y<sup>e</sup> whole globe & it was requested he would confine himself to y<sup>e</sup> question. This appeared to have little effect upon his feelings. In defiance to all y<sup>e</sup> dislike & resentment shewn by his own party, he continued a considerable time longer. In this ridiculous speach, I believe, he has completely blown himself out, & will be viewed with y<sup>e</sup> contempt so much vanity has merited.

On this question we had many excellent speaches on both sides — & y<sup>e</sup> setting continued untill eight at night. On y<sup>e</sup> question by ayes & noes — 90 for y<sup>e</sup> motion — 25 against it. I am among y<sup>e</sup> number opposed — for I am clearly of opinion that y<sup>e</sup> Treaty is unconstitutional—that y<sup>e</sup> sum given is too much — & that in its operation, it will be injurious to y<sup>e</sup> interests, & particularly the commerce of y<sup>e</sup> Eastern States. There is no evidence that Spain has concented to this treaty, but strong suspicion that y<sup>e</sup> Spanish Government is opposed to y<sup>e</sup> purchase. It may eventually involve us in a war with Spain. But I cannot now state to you all y<sup>e</sup> objections I have against it. It will be carried into effect, & we have only to wait y<sup>e</sup> consequences.

I am, with much respect,

Dear Sir, your humble Serv<sup>t</sup>

M CUTLER.

No. II.

WASHINGTON 30th NOV<sup>r</sup> 1803.

MY DEAR SIR,

I thank you for your very obliging letter of y<sup>e</sup> 14th instant. M<sup>r</sup> Eliot has met with severe mortifications from his own party, who shew y<sup>e</sup> most marked dislike when ever he rises to speak. But he has said very little for some time past — and when he rises, he generally begins with a promise to be very short. He is certainly a man of some ability, & is not to be y<sup>e</sup> less respected because he has risen from a low station in life. I think he deserves much credit for his own exertions in acquiring so much information as he has done. He still appears quite a superficial man, who has a tallent in running over y<sup>e</sup> surface of things, but not much penetration or Judgment. But he has been so vain & imprudent in his first setting out, as he will not easily get over, for a long time — perhaps not while he is a member of Congress.

The high salaries, which the democrats have so often promised to reduce, they have now fixed at their high rates, by a permanent Law, for y<sup>e</sup> purpose of preventing their ever being lowered. The bankrupt act is repealed by a bill which has passed y<sup>e</sup> house. It was found so radically defective as not to admit of amendment. A committee is appointed on y<sup>e</sup> State of y<sup>e</sup> fisheries, & I hope some thing will be done to give them further encouragement. But it is doubtful. The House has been principally employed lately on local business. The amendment of y<sup>e</sup> Constitution is yet before y<sup>e</sup> Senate. We need not trouble ourselves much about amendments. The Constitution is become a mere man of Straw. It is just what the Majority are disposed to make it.

I am very sorry to hear of y<sup>e</sup> death of old M<sup>rs</sup> Potter— & the daughter of M<sup>r</sup> Appleton. I have felt great comfort in hearing, by letters before, that general health prevailed. It is my earnest prayer that you may all be favoured with this great blessing. I will thank you, when you can find liesure, to inform me how y<sup>e</sup> people do —

& what is passing among you. Every thing that concerns y<sup>e</sup> people is deeply interesting to me.

In my journey here I suffered as little as I had a right to expect — but afterwards very threatening symptoms came on — & reduced me extremely low. But through the Great goodness of that gracious & merciful Being from whom all our blessings flow — in whose hand is our life — & every enjoyment, I now find myself much better. The pain in my side remains, but it comes by times, & does not give me much inconvenience — & my strength is daily recruiting. Please to give my best respects to your Lady — & regards to all enquiring friends.

I am,

with great esteem & friendship,
your humble Serv<sup>t</sup>

M CUTLER.

MY DEAR SIR

With much pleasure I received your favour of 27th ult. I thank you for the interest you take in my health, & your kind wishes for my safe return. Through divine Goodness, I have enjoyed better health for some time past, than for several years.

It gives me great pleasure to receive your letters, for you are so good as to inform me of those circumstances in the town, which I feel very anxious to know. I am very glad to hear that M<sup>r</sup> Forbes has been with you, & that M<sup>r</sup> Cochran gives so good satisfaction. D<sup>r</sup> Dana has been so good as to inform me, himself, of his marriage, & by his letters I should suppose him to be very happy. I am very sorry to hear of y<sup>e</sup> misfortune of M<sup>r</sup> Quarles — The death of M<sup>r</sup> Robertts is a very melancholly event. The affliction must be heavy to his bereaved wife & friends, with whom, I most sincerely sympathize. And it is, too, a public loss. The death of a young, prudent, steady & industrious man is a real loss to y<sup>e</sup> society & neighbourhood. I shall miss him very much, for I have always found him a valuable neighbour.

The information I have had of y<sup>e</sup> prevalence of y<sup>e</sup> scarlet fever in the town, has given me great concern. I was, for a time, almost afraid to open y<sup>e</sup> letters I received from Hamilton, lest I should be told of some distressing instance of mortality. But y<sup>e</sup> goodness of God has interposed, & I greatly rejoice to hear that y<sup>e</sup> sickness is abated, & more general health prevails. May that kind & merciful Being, in whose hand is our life, & on whom we are dependent for all our blessing, be graciously pleased to restore & preserve health among all y<sup>e</sup> people of the town.

I have nothing very material to write you from this city. Business goes on slowly — & yet we have very long settings. We rarely get down to dinner until after Sun-set. The most material subjects lately before us have been the proceedings on y<sup>e</sup> Impeachment of the two Judges Chase & Peters. It is a party business — & much to be regretted that two Judges — so independent — so impartial — & so eminently learned in y<sup>e</sup> Law, should be hurled from their seats. But their crime is, they are Federalists — & they must go. We spent the most of this week on what is called y<sup>e</sup> State ballances. On y<sup>e</sup> settlement of y<sup>e</sup> accounts of y<sup>e</sup> revolutionary war — some states had done more than their part, & others not so much. The acc<sup>ts</sup> were settled and y<sup>e</sup> ballance struck. A large number of states were deficient. They owed, in y<sup>e</sup> whole, about three million of dollars. The object is, now, to relinquish to those states, y<sup>e</sup> sums they owe, without any compensation — & to acquit them of any demands. Massachusetts is a credit state, to a larger amount than any other — we had done more — & a debt was found due, of one million & about two hundred thousand dollars. For this sum our state has received interest annually — which is to a large amount. It is evidently intended to wipe off, with one stroke this debt due to us. But, tho', I think, they will acquit the debtor states, I do hope they are not yet bold enough to take from us this large sum. On this question all y<sup>e</sup> members from Massachusetts are united. All possible opposition has been made. But it appears that with respect to y<sup>e</sup> first question the Committee of y<sup>e</sup> whole has come to a trial, on which y<sup>e</sup> majority won against us — Yeas 67 — Nays 65. It is not decided.

Mr Eliot has been with us in opposing the impeachment of y<sup>e</sup> judges — & y<sup>e</sup> State ballances — &, indeed, on all national questions. His speeches have been short but much to y<sup>e</sup> point — he now says little — & unless they buy him, I do believe he will leave his party — & come over to y<sup>e</sup> federal side.

There is a Jubilee proclaimed here by y<sup>e</sup> Democrats — it is to be celebrated next friday. There is to be such a feast, it is said, as was never known in America, on account of taking possession of Louisiana. There is to be dinners — suppers — balls — assemblies, dances, & I know not what — It is said every pig — & goose — & duck — in all y<sup>e</sup> country round, is put in requisition. But we, poor Federalist, — keep our distance. The Jubilee is to begin here — but they expect it will run — like wild-fire, to every dark & benighted corner of America. You may look out for y<sup>e</sup> flame to come on your way — & you may get ready to light up your dark-lantern.

Let me beg you, my dear sir, to continue your letters. There is no body in Hamilton, who will condescend to write to me, but you, except my own family. As you sit by your fire side, on a winters evening — do be so good as to take your pen. It may be an amusement. I want much to hear from all y<sup>e</sup> neighbours — & all y<sup>e</sup> people. I long to see you — & to return once more to Hamilton. But there is no hope, now, that we shall rise before the first week in March — & many think — not till May. So we go on spending the people's money — such is democratic œconomy.

We have had it cold, for this city, for a week or ten days past — wind often high from north west, two or three small sprinklings of snow, which lasted only a few hours. But, now we have had a little more than a white frost on y<sup>e</sup> ground for three or four days. The ground is considerably frozen — the Potomac river frozen up — as far down as we can see. We believe you have fine sledding. I hope the ponds are frozen over — & the people will have a good time to get a supply of wood. Do write me how y<sup>e</sup> weather is with you. Please to present my complements to your good lady — & be assured that I am,

With great friendship
your humble Serv<sup>t</sup>
M CUTLER.

We have just had y<sup>e</sup> news of a Post Officer in Maryland, who was appointed in place of a very faithful Post-Officer, who was turned out — run off, last monday, with a large sum of public money in his hands — carried off y<sup>e</sup> books & papers of y<sup>e</sup> Office — many letters supposed to contain money to a large amount — & has not yet been taken.

Do just give a caution to Cap<sup>t</sup> Brown, not to run away with public property. — But a short time since a public Officer, in New York, a M<sup>r</sup> Livingston, who had fifty thousand dollars of public money has failed — & y<sup>e</sup> money lost. A M<sup>r</sup> Harrison, a very worthy honest man, was turned out, to provide a place for this excellent Democrat Livingston. Many other like failures have happened. Will y<sup>e</sup> eyes of the people ever be opened?

WASHINGTON, 13th MARCH 1804.

MY DEAR SIR,

I feel myself under great obligations to you for your repeated favours — & particularly for your last of y<sup>e</sup> 21st of Febr<sup>y</sup>. I am much gratified in being so particularly informed of what is passing with you, & I now rejoice in prospect of soon leaving this city on my return home. Both Houses have just agreed to a resolution to adjourn on y<sup>e</sup> 26th — & I think there is no business which will detain us longer than that day.

It is not in my power to be very particular in giving you information of what is doing here at this time. I must leave a detail of matters untill I have y<sup>e</sup> pleasure of seeing you. But will just inform you that y<sup>e</sup> trial of Judge Pickering was closed yesterday — & sentence of condemnation passed. The evidence of the Judge having been insane — & that derangement was y<sup>e</sup> occasion of his intemperance was very full & clear.

Immediately after, the House agreed to the impeachment of Judge Chase. The federalists agreed not to enter into any debate, as reasoning would be in vain. The vote stood ays 73 — nays 32. We have the evidence before us, but it was all taken expertly — & altho' his enemies have given a pretty high colouring in a few instances, taking it all together, it appears more in his favour, than against him. The object is to break down y<sup>e</sup> Judiciary — to persecute every real friend to his country — & depose every federal character. We appear nearly prepared to erect y<sup>e</sup> Guillotine & I can not doubt there are those who wish to see it in operation.

We have had steady cold for a considerable time past, untill within three or four days, altho' we have had no snow on y<sup>e</sup> ground, for a long time. But we have now warmer weather & this day a mild mist from y<sup>e</sup> southard.

I enclose you a paper printed at Fredericktown, which, think, is one of y<sup>e</sup> best printed on the Continent. It is not in my power to add more at this time, than that, I am with great esteem & respect, your sincere friend & humble Serv<sup>t</sup>

WASHINGTON 10th DEC<sup>r</sup> 1804.

MY DEAR SIR,

You was so obliging as to favour me with your correspondence during the last session, I am induced to renew my request, that you will again favour me with an account of what is passing with you.

I wish much to hear whether Esquire Giddings is any better, & what is his present state. I am anxious to hear whether health prevails; if any are sick — who they are — & of what disease. I should be glad to know whether Mr True is approved by y<sup>e</sup> people. He was a perfect stranger to me —, I was obliged wholly to depend on information. Are they likely to settle Mr Jewett, or any body else, at Wenham? What is y<sup>e</sup> present situation of Rev<sup>d</sup> D<sup>r</sup> Forbes? I have not heard a word from him since I left home. Who have you employed for School Masters in the town? Pray inform me of every occurrence which is of any consequence, that has taken place since I left home.

There has nothing yet of much importance been before Congress. The principle thing we have done is to have completed, in our house, the articles of impeachment against Judge Chase. The impeachment is now gone up to the Senate. When y<sup>e</sup> trial will come on is uncertain, probably in January. It is expected that y<sup>e</sup> trial will be long & very interesting. We expect some very interesting subjects before the session closes. The Virginian Party carry all before them. They govern y<sup>e</sup> Country — & whether you be sensible of it, or not, New England is subjugated to the Virginia interest. We have an unequal portion of y<sup>e</sup> public burthen — & it is probable it will be increased instead of being deminished, in y<sup>e</sup> course of y<sup>e</sup> present session.

Please to present my sincere regards to M<sup>rs</sup> Low — & to all enquiring friends — and be assured that

I am, with great esteem, your very humble Servant
M CUTLER.

WASHINGTON 4th JAN<sup>y</sup> 1805.

MY DEAR SIR,

I have only time, just to beg you to accept of my grateful acknowledgements for your two kind letters, & beg leave to solicit your further favour.

The Death of D<sup>r</sup> Forbes was an event to be expected, yet when it comes, we find our minds impressed & affected in a manner we could not anticipate. But our loss is his gain. may y<sup>e</sup> great Shephard look upon y<sup>e</sup> flock he has left — & provide them a faithful pastor. And may it be improved as a solemn lesson to me & to all who are in y<sup>e</sup> ministry, to be ready to give our acc<sup>t</sup> to our great Lord & Master.

I am extremely grieved to hear of M<sup>rs</sup> Low's ill state of health — may she be favoured with every divine support, & her health restored. As she has so long been an invalide, I hope this will prove only a sudden turn. I am sorry to find your spirits are depressed. Let me beg you to place your confidence in that all powerful & merciful being, who can remove all our sicknesses, heal all our diseases, or prepare us for y<sup>e</sup> events his wise superintending providence.

You inform me that Esquire Giddings is not worse. It is my earnest prayer that his health may be restored, if it be consistant with y<sup>e</sup> divine will.

I shall feel very anxious untill I hear further from M<sup>rs</sup> Low — & desire to commend her case & yours to that God who is infinite in goodness, but who can never do us wrong, & can cause all things to operate for our good. Pray write me as often as you can.

As y<sup>e</sup> trial of Judge Chase was to have begun this week, all my correspondents are anxious to hear & I have many letters to write. He has appeared & requested y<sup>e</sup> trial might be postponed untill y<sup>e</sup> next session of Congress, & offered very good reasons — but his request has been rejected. His trial will commence on y<sup>e</sup> 4th day of Feb<sup>r</sup>. It is curious that y<sup>e</sup> Senate should reject this request from y<sup>e</sup> Judge, when one of y<sup>e</sup> articles of y<sup>e</sup> impeachment against him is, that he did not give Calender all the time he wanted to prepare for trial.

Do inform me of what is passing with you. I rejoice that health so generally prevails I beg you to present my particular regards to M<sup>rs</sup> Low — & my respects to Esquire Giddings— & be assured that

I am,

. with great affection &

friendship

your humble Serv<sup>t</sup>

M CUTLER.

No. VII.

WASHINGTON 6th Feb<sup>r</sup> 1805.

MY DEAR SIR

I have pleasure of receiving your very friendly &

obliging letter of y<sup>e</sup> 21st ult. Please to accept my sincere thanks for this repeated instance of your goodness.

It affords me great satisfaction to hear that your Lady is so much better, than when you wrote me last — & to be informed that so remarkable health has, & does still continue, in y<sup>e</sup> town, since I left home. This appears to me an unusual term for so general health to prevail. It is my earnest prayer that this distinguished blessing of Heaven may be continued. As Esquire Giddings remains so long in much the same state, I can not help entertaining y<sup>e</sup> hope that he may recover. I am very glad to hear that M<sup>r</sup> True is better esteemed as a preacher, & has given so great satisfaction as a school master.

On monday y<sup>e</sup> trial of Judge Chase commenced. A vast concourse of people attended. The House attended in a body, who had seats provided on y<sup>e</sup> floor of y<sup>e</sup> Senate Chamber, in a circular form, fronting y<sup>e</sup> Court of Impeachment. Proper seats were prepared in front of y<sup>e</sup> Representatives, on the right for the Managers of y<sup>e</sup> Impeachment, & on the left of the President's Chair for y<sup>e</sup> Judge & his counsel. There were particular seats, like pews, provided for Foreign Ministers, the Judges of y<sup>e</sup> Supreme Court & other Gentlemen of distinction. There was also a temporary gallery for y<sup>e</sup> accommodation of Ladies. There were a large number from Philadelphia & Baltimore, who attended.

The Court was opened between 12 & 1 o'clock, with great solemnity — & the most profound silence, & perfect order prevailed through the time the Court was in setting.

Judge Chase rose & made a short address to the Court — & requested leave to offer his answer to y<sup>e</sup> Impeachment in writing, which he & his Counsel would read. His Counsel are Mess<sup>rs</sup> Harper, Hopkinson & Martin. Leave being given, the Judge read the introductory part, & gave it to M<sup>r</sup> Harper, to read the remainder which he did excepting that M<sup>r</sup> Hopkinson, relieved him once, by reading a little while. The reading commenced at one — & lasted untill almost five o'clock. The Judge then rose & made a most solemn & impressive address to the Court, which seemed to penetrate y<sup>e</sup> heart of every one present. The Managers requested time to consider the answer, & to consult the House. After they are ready they will attempt to support the Impeachment — & then the Judge's Counsel will close the trial.

The answer seemed to fill every one who heard it with astonishment & has far exceeded y<sup>e</sup> expectations of his warmest friends. He took up each article in their order, & made clear & very circumstantial statements. His reasoning was able, candid, & carried full conviction with it. Our Managers have a hard task — & many of the Democrats now say the Judge must be acquitted, & regret that they voted for the Impeachment. But others, are as violent as ever, for his Condemnation. As it is altogether a spiteful, party, business, I see no probability that he will be acquitted, unless the acquittal of the Judges of the Supreme Court in Pennsylvania who have lately been tried should have any effect — & also a division & violent contest which has taken place in our house, should operate in favour of the Judge, which some think will be y<sup>e</sup> case. But whatever may be his fate, posterity will justify & applaud him. And this answer must do him immortal honour. What a shocking state are we arrived at? — What a painful sight to see — a Man under the legal imputation of willful murder, should preside over the highest Court in the nation, on the trial of an able & upright Judge on the Bench of y<sup>e</sup> national Supreme Court.

We have had some very curious scenes passing in our house in y<sup>e</sup> course of the last week & the present. I can not now be particular — only just observe — that there is a violent brackage among the Democrats. Johnny Randolph has been very much deserted by his party. In two most outrageous, abusive speach, he has violently attacked those of his party who had left him. It has produced much warmth — & much talk about Duels. Last week was spent in altercations between these two parties. The federalist were perfectly silent — & gave them y<sup>e</sup> whole field of battle. Mr Dana only was obliged to say something, as Chairman of y<sup>e</sup> Committee of Claims, to vindicate that Committee, who were shamefully abused. There is undoubtedly a third party established here between y<sup>e</sup> moderate & y<sup>e</sup> violent democrats. But I am not able to add any more at present only that—

I am, with great affection,
& friendship,
your humble Serv<sup>t</sup>

M CUTLER

Excuse this letter. I have been obliged to write it in y<sup>e</sup> midst of interesting business in y<sup>e</sup> house.

A CHARACTERISTIC LETTER FROM

PHILADELPHIA AUGT. 29. 1780.

DEAR BROTHER,

By my letter of the 18th inst to Brother Williams you will learn that Congress have appointed me quarter master general, which office not my inclination but a kind of political necessity has induced me to accept. That I may conduct the business with more ease to myself and advantage to the public, 'tis my wish and endeavour to appoint deputy quarter masters to the several states of the most unexceptionable characters—men of capacity, activity, prudence and integrity. Such a man for the three easternmost states does not occur to my memory; nor do the delegates of our state think of a suitable person. As Massachusetts is most important, & will furnish many more supplies than New Hampshire & Rhode Island together, I mean to select a deputy from Massachusetts. I am averse from asking the Council to nominate a man; because I think a few principal members of the Council & the House whom you will chuse to consult, are much more likely to recommend a very good man than either or both those bodies. I beg therefore you will take the trouble to consult such members as soon as possible, & send me the name of the person you & they shall judge equal to and fittest for the business, & who will probably accept the office of deputy quarter master for Massachusetts, New Hampshire & Rhode Island. I will write you more fully by an express who will leave this place in a day or two, by whom also I will send a copy of the plan for conducting the business of the department. In the mean time you may have opportunity of making some inquiries.

I am yours affectionately

JOHN PICKERING Esq<sup>r</sup>.

THOMAS GARDNER, PLANTER, AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS.

BY FRANK A. GARDNER, M.D.

In 1771 (March 11), he was chosen constable, but he secured David Smith as a substitute, and was excused. He served on the school committee in 1771 and 1772.* His signature was appended to an open letter in regard to a hospital, under date of August 23, 1773.† He was chosen selectman March 8, 1773, but was excused later. He served on a committee to receive and sort votes at the town meeting held March 1772, and on a committee to procure a second fire engine in October, 1774. An account was allowed him Jan. 5, 1784, amounting to £82, 12 shill. and 2 pence. He was a member of the grand jury in 1792 (Sept. 3) and 1798 (Oct. 8.)* In 1803 he was a member of a committee to distribute federal votes in ward 3.‡

CHURCH.

Henry Gardner with many others conveyed to Thomas Barnard Dec. 4, 1772, a lot of land on the southeastern corner of what is now North and Lynde Streets, in Salem, for the erection of the North Church. This lot measured 128 1-2 feet on the highway "to the North River Bridge," and 88 feet on the other highway.§

Dr. Whittaker's church having been burned in the great fire of Oct. 6, 1774, Henry Gardner and the other proprietors sold the lot of land on which it stood, Feb. 1, 1775, for £615, 18 shill. 4 pence.|| He was one of the contributors to the North Church, and one of the forty-two proprietors who purchased the lot on North street, above described, and which they later conveyed to the minister, Thomas Barnard.*

REVOLUTIONARY.

The address which was sent to Governor Gage, in 1774, bore his name as well as that of his brother Weld. † In 1775, Henry Gardner removed with his family to Newfoundland and remained there until 1781. The following document shows how his absence was regarded by the patriots of Salem: "We the Committee of Correspondence &c for the Town of Salem in the County of Essex, certify that Mr Henry Gardner late an Inhabitant of said Town has absented himself from it upwards of three months leaving Estate real and personal behind him to the Value of Twenty pounds and more without this State and that we verily believe from the best Intelligence, we can obtain, that s<sup>d</sup> Henry Gardner voluntarily went to our Enemies, and is still absent from his Habitation and usual place of abode and is without this State.

We learn from depositions preserved in the records in the office of the Registry of Deeds, that before he went he ordered Mr. David Felt to distribute "his Corn and Rye and other grain" to the poor of Salem. Mr. Felt also deposed that sundry persons, who had been prisoners in Newfoundland, had given to Mr. Felt on their return to Salem, various sums of money which said Gardner had advanced to them while in captivity. His taxes were paid by Mr. Felt during his absence. The document further stated that said Henry Gardner was friendly to the American prisoners, and that he did not return to Salem "till late in the spring of the year one thousand seven hundred and eighty one." Col. John Hathorne testified that Henry Gardner was friendly to American Prisoners while he was absent.*

Peter Murray testified that he sailed from Salem, on a vessel owned by Henry Gardner, in March, 1775, to the West Indies, and that they went from there to Newfoundland where they found Capt. Henry Gardner, who received the vessel and cargo in July or August of that year. That the said Gardner had his wife and family there etc.*

He lived in Malden during the latter part of his life.

REAL ESTATE.

Henry received as his share of the estate of his father Samuel, a lot of land on the south side of what is now Central Street in Peabody, measuring two and a quarter acres.† This he sold June 5, 1790, to John Bushby for £38.‡ He also received one-third of his father's pew holdings, and one common right in the "Great Pastures."† He sold the latter Apr. 30, 1800, to Mary Pickman, jr., for $60.§

He loaned various amounts on mortgages, and in one of such transactions had Baker's Island, containing 60 acres more or less, deeded to him as security.|| He was one of the owners of Union Wharf, and with the other owners, appointed Edward West their attorney to recover for land taken near them, April 14, 1809.¶

Henry Gardner married October 19, 1769,** Sarah Turner, daughter of John and Mary (Osborne) Turner.†† She died in Boston, in May, 1809, aged 61.‡‡

He died, in Malden, November 8, 1817, aged 71.* Appraisers were appointed Feb. 11, 1818. He left no will. The heirs petitioned to have the Rev. Aaron Green appointed administrator. When the estate was divided, the following were each given one-third: — Elizabeth Gardner, Mary T. Gardner, and Eliphaz Jones, "in right of his wife deceased."† A small part of the estate amounting to $20, was not included in the amount administered by Rev. #### REVOLUTIONARY SERVICE.

The following record is given in the "Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors in the War of the Revolution," v. VI, p. 271:— "GARDNER, JONATHAN (also given 3d), Salem. Petition dated Boston, Oct. 10, 1780, signed by Sam. Ward, in behalf of himself and others, of Salem, asking that said Gardner be commissioned as commander of the brigantine "Union" (privateer); ordered in Council Oct. 10, 1780, that a commission be issued; also, Captain, brig "Union;" descriptive list of officers and crew sworn to Nov. 3, 1780; age, 25 yrs.; stature, 5 ft. 5 in.; complexion, brown; residence, Salem." It is also probable that he is the Jonathan Gardner referred to in the same records, as 2nd Lieutenant and later Commander of the sloop Tyrannicide, between June 3, 1776; and Feb. 20, 1777; and as 1st Lieutenant of the ship Bunker Hill, Nov. 4, 1778.

He gave $30 in 1802 toward levelling and laying out Salem Common.§

May 25, 1792, he bought of the heirs of Francis Skerry (including James Gardner (No. 167), and his wife Margaret) a lot of land on the western side of "Ferry Lane" (Bridge Street) measuring 3 1/4 acres.|| This was sold by his son William Fairfield Gardner, to Samuel Roberts, Aug. 30, 1823.¶

He purchased of Samuel Cheever, tanner, for £200, April 3, 1792, an acre of land on the eastern side of what is now Winter Street, with the "buildings,<sup>5</sup> Vats, tools, and implements."*** Jonathan Gardner had previously owned this land having purchased it of his uncle John Gardner (No. 110) Dec. 12, 1788. It joined other land of Jonathan's on the south. He offered this tan-yard for sale or rental, March 1, 1796.††

In 1798 (Mar. 29) he bought of William Cabot, a lot of land in South Salem, on the western side of "the highroad" from Salem to Marblehead,‡‡ and on the 6th of the following month, he purchased of John Lowell of Roxbury, "guardian to two of the Grand children of Francis Cabot," 3 acres and 104 poles in the same¶ section of the town.‡‡ He sold land in South Salem to Hannah Poynton and Josiah Woodbury in 1802, and to William Chisholm in 1805.§§ He bought several lots of land at "Stage Point," of Elizabeth Dewing, and Samuel Ward, between 1789 and 1793.||| Peabody Street was laid out over his land in August 1820.¶¶

He was one of the proprietors of Union Wharf,† the Union Market,|| and the Assembly House.¶ His name occurs in connection with many other real estate transfers, either personally or as treasurer of the Marine Society. He owned many rights in the Great Pastures,** and loaned large amounts on mortgages.

Jonathan Gardner married, first, Sarah Fairfield, daughter of Dr. Fairfield of Wenham. They were married in Salem, November 26, 1791. She died December 23, 1795, aged thirty years.†† The Salem Gazette of December 29, 1795, alluded to her as follows :

“She was a woman of native worth, and of the most useful accomplishments. She possessed a cheerful temper, but her manners were always without offence. Her readiness of thought from her tenderness of mind, was incapable of exciting disgust, or doing an injury. From her natural disposition, her charity was equal, and constant. Her affability was directed by an uninterrupted flow of affection, towards all who approached her. Her conversation was chaste, her friendships sincere, and a uniform ease and satisfaction attended her in all her domestic employments. . . . She has left the husband she loved, and one child, and can never be left from the memory of her friends, who love the virtues she possessed. Her aged mother demands our most sincere condolence.”

230. WILLIAM FAIRFIELD, b. 1794; d. June 12, 1851; m. Jan. 11, 1827, Elizabeth G. Barker, daughter of George and Abigail B. (Devereaux) Barker. He graduated from Harvard College, in 1815. While still a student at Harvard, his grandfather, Israel Dodge, gave him a lot of land on the western side of what is now Lafayette Street, measuring ten acres.† He inherited a large amount of land from his father, and in 1836, was awarded $9042 on French claims.‡ He sold his share (2 1-2 sixteenths) of the "City Mills," which had been in the possession of his ancestors so many years, for $2250 to Thomas H. Prince, in 1846.§ He lived in a house which stood on the present location of Fairfield Street. The house was situated well in from the street, and the large and beautiful garden in front of it, is well remembered by the writer. The Salem Register of June 16, 1851, contained the following notice of his death. — "On Thursday, very suddenly, William Fairfield Gardner, Esq. 57, one of our most esteemed and respected citizens. The excellence of Mr. Gardner's character was based on strict integrity, and an unostentatious, pervading sense of religious feeling. Modest and unassuming in his deportment, he neither borrowed nor needed aid from false pretence. Relying on conscious rectitude and good intent, in the most quiet and unpretending way, he thought and acted with entire independence. Mr. Gardner was a graduate of Harvard College, of the class of 1815, many of whom in this immediate neighborhood are still proud to claim him as an early and long continued friend. Retiring in his habits, and averse to public display — inheriting an ample competence, he indulged his taste for natural pursuits, and the cultivation of the beautiful in nature and art. His eye sought the fines pencillings of nature in her most attractive forms — he breathed more freely amid the fragrance of her flowers, and surrounded by the products of her richest bounty. In his disposition he was kind, affectionate, and indulgent

He had a heart to feel and devise liberal things, and his hand was ever ready to contribute to the wants of the needy and the claims of all useful objects. His sudden and unexpected removal has thrown a deeper gloom over a home already saddened by repeated visitations, and has made desolation more visible and tangible." The Salem Observer alluded to him as follows: — "Of him it may be said as of one in olden time 'behold an Israelite indeed in whom is no guile.' Born and reared in the midst of wealth and its temptations, our friend has presented to the world a bright example of a meek and humble spirit, worthy the discipleship of him, who 'went about doing good.' . . . Upright, conscientious, benevolent and tenderly affectionate, he will long be remembered and deeply lamented by all who enjoyed the privilege of his acquaintance. For the poor and distressed, he had a heart to feel, and a hand open to relieve; — as a member of society, he entertained an active sympathy and ready concurrence in all enterprizes for advancing the best interests of his fellowmen."*

In his will, dated June 13, 1833, he left his entire estate to his wife, Elizabeth G. Gardner.† She was appointed executrix.‡

162 John Gardner, the elder son of John and Sarah (Derby) Gardner, was a merchant and master mariner. He was in the retail business until 1798, but in that year he sold out his stock of "Cut Goods," including brown linens, bedticks, Britannias, etc., and offered his store for rental.§ Later he conducted a large wholesale import business at his warehouse on Union Wharf, where he sold sugar, coffee, cocoa, dyewood, mahogany, broadcloth, Peruvian bark, indigo, spices, etc., etc.||

The brig Hazard was the most noted of the vessels owned by him before the war of 1812. She made many famous voyages, including the following: from Permambuco to New York in nineteen days; to Rio de Janeiro in thirty days; and from Calcutta to Boston in sixty-five days. His business was ruined by the war of 1812, but he started again about 1818 in company with his son John. The best known ships owned by him during this period were the Commerce, Osgood and Ceres. They were commanded by his sons John and Thomas West Gardner, and many voyages were made in them between the dates above mentioned.

In politics he was a Federalist, and an active worker in the interests of that party in Ward 2, frequently serving on committees.* He was a selectman in 1800 and 1801, and a member of the school committee in the latter year. In 1806 he served on the fire department committee.†

He was drawn on the petit jury in 1797 and 1810, and served his town as representative to the General Court in 1802. John and his brother Richard, co-partners in business, gave $175 toward the laying out of Salem Common in 1802.‡

He attended the preliminary meeting Dec. 30, 1796, at Sun Tavern, in regard to the Salem and Danvers aqueduct.§

REAL ESTATE.

The most important holding of John Gardner was the Gardner Farm on the road between Salem and Danversport, which had been owned and improved by his father, until Dec. 3, 1811, when he conveyed the eastern half containing 64 acres to Elizabeth Gardner, sister of John Gardner (5th Gen.).|| John (6th Gen.) bought it back from his aunt Elizabeth, Oct. 9, 1817, for $3306.66.¶ At this time the entire farm contained 193 acres. acres) which had been granted upon an execution to Ebenezer Beckford, father of Eunice. This was settled by John (6th Gen.) March 31, 1819, for $7418.* Other mortgages upon this property were held in 1817 by John Derby; in 1819 by Joseph Peabody and John Derby; in 1820, by Joseph Peabody; and later by Pickering Dodge, Joseph Osborn and Nathaniel West.† Henry Gardner, son of John, assumed these mortgages and paid off the Joseph Peabody mortgage in 1843, and that held by Nathaniel West, Nov. 6, 1848. * Later he bought contiguous lots of various parties until the present farm contains 210 acres. It is now owned by the heirs of Henry. It is one of the few large farms in the neighborhood of Salem, to remain undivided for the past one hundred years.

He bought of his father, December 21, 1809,‡ the lot of land on Essex Street next east of the Essex Institute, and erected upon it the large brick mansion still standing and now owned and occupied by Mr. David Pingree. John Gardner sold the house and lot to Nathaniel West, April 25, 1811, for $13,333.33.§ He continued to live in this house until the fall of 1814, when he moved to another house in town (unknown) where he resided until 1820 when he moved to the farm. The later history of this house has already been given in this series of articles. ||

In 1818 (May 17) he bought of the heirs of Ebenezer Beckford, a lot of land on the western side of Newbury Street (now Washington Square West) which had been taken from his father by execution and sold it on the same day to John Andrew.†

Among other real estate holdings of his were the house and land on the south west corner of Essex and Liberty Streets,‡ his shares in the "New Assembly Hall" (now Hamilton Hall), on the corner of Cambridge and Chestnut Streets,§ and the Union Wharf property which he bought back from John Barton.||

He married November 9, 1793, Sarah West,¶ daughter of William and Sarah (Beckford) West. She was born February 19, 1772, and died December 27, 1846.¶¶

John Gardner died August 25, 1847, aged 76. The Salem Gazette, of the 27th of that month, referred to him as follows :

"On Wednesday, of Typhus fever, John Gardner, Esq. aged 77,—a highly respectable citizen, and formerly an enterprising merchant. Whilst Mr. Gardner was engaged in commerce, he was celebrated for the beauty and model of his ships. Having been unfortunate he made a large adventure shortly before the declaration of war, in 1812, in the Marquis de Someruelos, and went himself on her voyage. His success was fully commensurate to his anticipations and he would have again been restored to affluence, but almost in sight of his port he was captured and carried into Halifax, and all his sanguine calculations blasted, he not having been insured against a war, a risk which he had not anticipated. Mr. Gardner built, and until his misfortunes, resided in the spacious mansion on Essex street, now occupied by David Pingree, Esq., in which the late Joseph White was murdered. He died at the well known Gardner Farm in North Salem, which has been his place of residence for many years."

ENGLISH NOTES ABOUT EARLY SETTLERS IN NEW ENGLAND.

THE following selections concerning some of our early New England families are intended as a supplement to the great work accomplished in this direction by Mr. Waters and are from his unpublished notes as well as from my own accumulations. Mr. Waters, in his twenty years of search, pretty well covered the direct references in the immense field of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury and a few minor courts, so that I have paid most attention to other minor courts and to other records for which he was unable to find time.

The above will of John Crumwell should interest a good many Salem and Boston families; for I suspect that here we have the father of Mr. Philip Cromwell of Salem and of his younger brother, Thomas, who also came to Salem, though some years later. If I am correct in my surmise, then this will disposes of the (so called) tradition cherished by some of the American descendants of Thomas Cromwell (above named) of a descent from the immediate family of the great Lord Protector. Many years ago I found among the archives at the Royal College of Arms (Heralds' College) in London a pedigree drawn up by or for one of the Clarke family (born in Salem) in which an attempt was made to show that connection, but without offering the slightest evidence to establish it. Such investigation as I myself made in England was enough to show the wildness of that assumption. Moreover, the compiler of the pedigree even confounded his ancestor Thomas Cromwell of Salem with that rather interesting character Captain Thomas Cromwell of Boston.

Mr. Philip Cromwell, whose occupation, as given on the records at Salem, was (at first) that of butcher or slaughterer, lived on the south side of Essex Street, between Derby Square and Central Street. His lot was next east of Richard Stileman's lot and the records show that his dwelling house stood there. In the Registry of Deeds (for Salem), book 1, leaf 57, is recorded a conveyance made 22: 1: 1659 by William Allen of Manchester and Elizabeth, his wife, of a parcel of land near the Meeting House containing eight poles, bounded north by the street, east by the dwelling of Philip Cromwell, south and west by land of Richard Stileman, being three poles wide on the street and running inward of the same breadth. Mr. Richard Stileman had made over his estate in Salem, 9 August 1647, to Elder Samuel Sharp and Elias Stileman senior as trustees for his son Samuel, describing it as a messuage between the dwelling house of Philip Cromwell and the shop of Benjamin Felton, with the old house by the water side, and one acre of land whereon the two houses stood (B. 1 L. 3). In book 2 leaf 14 is recorded another deed of conveyance, made 12 April 1660, by Richard Stileman of Portsmouth in the county of Northfolke to Elias Stileman of the same of a dwelling house and one acre between the house and land of Philip Cromwell on the east and on the west the dwelling house of Edward Wharton, the warehouse of George Curwin and the dwelling house and barn of William Lord, bounded north by the street and on the south butting on the river, near unto the Meeting House, with an old house at the lower end of the said land. Elias Stileman Senior of Salem released to the same Samuel Stileman's interest in this property, which he had held as feoffee from Richard the father of Samuel. Philip Cromwell, butcher, conveyed to Major William Hathorne and Mr. Walter Price, feoffees in trust for his wife Dorothy Cromwell, widow of Allen Kenneston (or Kynaston) his house and "slater housen" etc., with the close containing about one acre whereon they stood, between the land of Elias Stileman west and a house of the said Philip Cromwell's wherein William Lakes (or Lake) then lived, butting on the South River on the south and the street passing to the Meeting House on the north; also two acres adjoining the dwelling house of Jeffrey Massey on the east and an acre and a half that had been possessed by Allen Kynaston. The date was 9 April 1664 (B. 2 L. 77). The two acre lot must have been down near Beverly Ferry and the acre and a half was probably where the residence of Mrs. Eminerton now stands, formerly known as a Pickman house, afterwards Doctor Loring's. The old house referred to as on the lower end of the Stileman lot had belonged to Samuel Skelton and was sold by Nathaniel Felton to William Browne Senior, the land being described as lying against the land in the occupation of Philip Cromwell.

Among the presentments made by the grand jury to the court at Salem was the following:

3: 12<sup>mo</sup>: 1643 Phillip Crumwell, Peter Sims, Walter Knight and John Leech Senior for Liueing absent from their wyues. Also Thomas Tuck ibidem. And Willm Wake. Item Capt. Trask for scales and waights being not hanged up according to order in ye mill.

Salem Court Records 9: 5: '47 Ph. Crumwell for Liueing from his wife seauen or eight years and in all that time not sending her any reliefe for herself or child he left wth her. Henry Swan testis. He bee enjoyned to goe ouer to England to his wife wth liberty to returne if he see cause etc. before December.

The wife whom he left in England must have died before April, 1664, as shown by the deed above, when we find him with a wife Dorothy who had been the widow of Allen or Allan Kynaston. Mrs. Dorothy Cromwell is said to have died either the 27th or 28th of September 1673 aged 67 years (Savage), and he married Mary, the widow of Robert Lemon, 19 November, 1674. Lemon must have lived near the foot of English or Webb street. This wife died 14 November, 1683, aged 72 years, and he next married Margaret, the widow of John Beckett. Hence one of the two Becket houses became known for a time as the Cromwell house and Beckett's Lane (now Becket street) was long called Cromwell's Lane. This last wife outlived her husband, who died 30 March, 1693, aged 83 years, we are told. His estate fell to his only son and heir, John, who married Hannah, daughter of the first Jacob Barney, and followed his father's occupation. I think he lived between Union and Herbert streets and died, without issue, about 1699-1700. His heirs were his consins Ann, wife of David Phippen, and Jane, wife of Jonathan Pickering, and their children.

Thomas Cromwell came over later than his elder brother Philip, and in company, if I remember aright, of his nephew John, whose estate his daughters inherited. Ann became the wife, first, of Benjamin Ager and next (26 June 1672) of David Phippen. Jane, the other daughter, was married to Jonathan Pickering, 19 March, 1665/6. Their father, Thomas Cromwell, was called a tailor in deeds, had a wife named Anne, and evidently lived near his brother, at the corner of Essex and Central streets. I do not know when he died. David Phippen was a shipwright of Salem and Boston and, dying, left a widow Ann and children Thomas (of Salem, mariner), Abigail, wife of William Furneux of Salem, ropemaker, Ann (or Anne), wife of Benjamin Ropes of Salem, cordwainer, and Elizabeth, wife of John Webb of Salem, mariner. Thomas Phippen had a wife Mary in 1714. The name Furneux (or Furneaux) I have seen as Furno, Furnex, Furnix, Furness and Forniss. The two latter forms now prevail. Jonathan and Jane (Cromwell) Pickering had numerous children (see the printed pedigrees of the Pickering family compiled by Mr. Ellery) of whom Elizabeth became the wife of Nathaniel Silsbee, joiner, and Mercy of Benjamin Smith. Another daughter, Sarah (unmarried), I found joining with her married sisters in 1714-1715 in the conveyance of real estate that had come to them from their cousin John Cromwell, whose will may be found on record in the Salem Court House, while that of his father, Philip Cromwell, will be found, I think, in the files of the Clerk of the Courts (under date of 1699).

Let me here refer to a mixing up of these Salem Cromwells with other families of the name. I never, in all my reading of the records and files of the counties of Essex and old Norfolk, found the slightest evidence of a connection between them and the Newbury and Dover Cromwells. A study of the deeds in the present Registry of Deeds in Salem will show clearly that Philip the son of Giles Cromwell or Cromlon could not have been our Philip of Salem, as has been asserted.
