2. It is considered that the Japanese export prospects and yen economy are such that special local outlets for export goods are no longer necessary, and also that Japanese and foreign facilities presently operating in Japan are sufficiently adequate for the needs of Occupation Force personnel and the foreign colony.

3. The Export Bazaars were established primarily as additional outlets for Japanese export goods in a market that was not adequately accommodated by facilities existing at that time. When the Export Bazaars were established, sales of textiles for export were slow but the situation today is entirely the opposite. It is proving increasingly difficult to obtain raw materials for existing export demands.

4. At the time of their inception the Export Bazaars were a positive source of foreign exchange revenue for Japanese goods sold in Japan. However, the extent to which Japanese yen has been stabilized makes this no longer necessary as evidenced by the fact that the Export Bazaars went on a straight yen basis on 9 May 1950.

5. Since Japan is now on a yen economy, even if it were necessary to dispose of surplus export stocks, it would not be considered desirable to revert to a procedure for giving special allocations to any one particular group of vendors when all are selling for yen.

6. Those Civil Affairs Regions which have been petitioned to assist in reopening Export Bazaars will advise the Japanese of the existing Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers policy as stated above.
