WHAT WE MAY GAIN.

The Black Republican National Committee have issued a circular to the adherents of LINCOLN, claiming that the Presidential election has been virtually decided by the result in Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio, and congratulating their friends upon the prospects of a triumph. They seem to consider the election of their candidate absolutely certain. Although they must necessarily be aware that without the vote of New York they cannot succeed, we are to presume from their language that they look upon a triumph in the Empire State as placed beyond a doubt by late events. Of course we cannot undertake to say whether the Black Republican National Committee are counting their chickens before they are hatched, or not. They will undoubtedly have to fight hard to carry New York, and there is at least a possibility that the cordial combinations of all the conservative parties in that State may prove too much for mad misrule, and may disappoint and overthrow in well founded expectations. All we can affirm is that the leaders of the Union movement are not discouraged, that their advices from every part of the State are cheering, and that they profess a confident and abiding faith in the political integrity of the Empire State.

Let New York, however, go for or against LINCOLN, it is of the utmost consequence that the Congressional elections should exhibit gains to the opponents of Black Republicanism. We have already demonstrated the fact that the abolitionists will be in a minority in both branches of the next Congress. Then for the conservative gains in Pennsylvania and Ohio, though not considerable, are conclusive as to the result. But it is not sufficient that the Black Republicans should be barely thrown into a minority, which will be the case if no further gains are achieved. They can be deprived of all effective strength and reduced to a powerless condition by a concentration of Union sentiment in every Congressional District on one conservative candidate in opposition to the Black Republican aspirant. We perceive with unfeigned gratification that this wise, safe and eminently judicious policy has already been adopted in several districts in Massachusetts, and will probably be carried into effect in all the debatable ones. There will then be no doubt of the redemption of a portion of the delegation, as that the old Bay State will no longer be humiliated and disgraced by a monstrous representation of fanaticism and treason in the next Congress.

The Black Republican National Committee, in the address alluded to above, evidently fear the loss of a number of their Congressional Representatives, for they lay great stress on the importance of these elections, and appeal to the party to leave no exertions untried for the purpose of maintaining, and even increasing their present strength. Fortunately for the country, their aim is almost unattainable. In New York it is shown by the Journal of Commerce that the anti-Lincoln men possess the power to elect fifteen Representatives to Congress instead of five, as at present. The five Districts now represented by Democrats all gave anti-Republican majorities at the last election; while ten other Districts are mentioned in detail by the Journal, every one of which gives the Union candidate a majority last November. There can be but one obstacle to complete success in the New York Congressional elections, and that consists in the divisions which are likely to exist among the conservative voters leading to a multiplicity of candidates. A spirit of compromise and conciliation—that same noble and generous spirit which ultimately organized the Union ticket in New York—will doubtless in most cases enable all parties to reconcile these differences so as to keep but a single candidate in the field opposed to Black Republicanism. By such an arrangement there can be no question whatever of a heavy Congressional gain to the anti-Republicans.

On this momentous topic the Herald presents some sensible reflections. It remarks:

The Republican party consists mainly of two classes—fanatics, and office-seekers and speculators. If the Republicans could only secure a majority in the Monroe doctrine Congress, the expenses of the Government would amount to $100,000,000 a year, instead of $60,000,000, as they are now. If they have a hungry, corrupt crew as a pack of hounds in pursuit of an unfortunate deer, and if they only succeed in gaining the prize, they will tear it to pieces and worry each other to death. If they fail, and if they are successful, will prove the ultimate destruction of their organization. But the catastrophe would be more disastrous if the spoils are reduced to the lowest possible amount by the election of a conservative Congress. For such a revenue-reducing and economical public plunder would be like the five barley loaves and two fishes to the crowd that followed our Saviour, till they were multiplied by a miracle. But the Republican leaders can look to no miracles of that kind, unless they get possession of the House of Representatives as well as of the Presidency. Should they succeed, the first Napoleon's chief Republican motto would be good their liberal promises to their followers; the latter will feel disgusted with a party out of which they can make no more by plunder, mismanagement and a breaking up will inevitably ensue.

The Republican leaders, therefore, deem a majority in the House of Representatives as essential to the success of their schemes of plunder for their hungry followers, and the preservation of their party under the next four years, as well as the securing out of their revolutionary programme. The conservative leaders, on the contrary, deem a majority against Black Republicanism in both branches of the Legislature of the utmost importance to the maintenance of the integrity of the Union, and the crippling and ultimate dissolution of the Republican party. Lastly, they will act on the South would be most salutary, for it would take away their strongest argument from the Fire-eaters and Secessionists, who are looking for a good excuse to break up the Union and form a Southern confederacy.

As the prospect is altogether unfavorable to the Black Republicans in the Congressional elections, we may feel tolerably satisfied that, should they carry the Presidential election, their victory will be destitute of substantial results, and their chief will be impotent for evil, as he will be subjected to the constant supervision and control of a conservative Congress.

THE LIFE OF JACKSON.—Our thanks are due to Messrs Brothers, publishers, for volume 1st of the "Life of Andrew Jackson," in three volumes. By James Parton. This is a very elaborate, prize-taking, and, we think, accurate biography of Old Hickory. It is the product, as we are informed, of intense labor and research, and so far as we are enabled to judge from a glance at it, the author has striven with earnestness to treat the finely grained subject of his biography with marked impartiality. We shall look with interest for the remaining volumes.

The third No. of the valuable work by Mr. Sir Stranahan, who will visit our citizens for the purpose of obtaining subscriptions. The three volumes complete will be ready for delivery in the course of a month.

EXPOSURE OF LIGHT.—It will be seen by our advertising columns that Mr. H. O. Gibert, successor to Antoine Hill, has received, at No. 6 Chartres street, an extensive and elegant assortment of fountain lamps of all the value and beauty of which, the illuminating agents, he has been completely established by repeated experience. Special inducements are offered to the trade.

SENATOR OTTENDORF ON HIS NORTH.—We observe that Senator Ottendorf, who campaigns North to warn the people of that section against the very dangerous experiment they are making upon Southern forbearance, in running both candidates for the two highest offices from the North, upon the express ground of a conflict with the South. He will probably extend his visit to Massachusetts. We are glad to see it. The times need the services of such men as Crittenden, for he is one of the very few Southerners who can do any thing towards averting the terrible catastrophe that hangs over the country.

A GOOD FAMILY PAPER.—We have received from the publisher, Orange Judd, 41 Park Row, New York, a copy of the "American Agriculturist," adapted to the farm, garden and household. This excellent paper is published monthly, and each number contains of thirty quarto pages, filled with interesting and valuable matter. The price of subscription is but one dollar per annum. We take great pleasure in recommending the "American Agriculturist" to all persons engaged in agricultural pursuits.

Clamp and Hoe, the Siamese twins, are on a visit to New York, each having a tan with him.
